

Economists See First Signs Of N.C. Slowdown

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State economists said today that the first signs of an economic slowdown may be showing up in North Carolina's economy, and that latest state revenue collections show "the bottom fell out in March."

Legislative staff economist David Crofts gave joint appropriations committees today what he called a "disturbing" prediction based on raw March tax collection. "It could well be the first indication" of a looming recession, Crofts said.

Crofts' projection was backed up by Senate Economy Committee Chairman Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, who warned the panel his committee was convinced North Carolina would feel a recession, perhaps later this year.

And the news could have an effect on plans for a state income tax cut. Senate Finance Chairman Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he now believes a final tax cut will amount to no more than $60 million to $80 million, down from the $80 million to $100 million range he had expected earlier.

The Hunt administration has recommended a tax cut of around $40 million.

Crofts said the result of the reduced tax collections was to wipe out a $30 million surplus that had been built during the previous months of the current fiscal year.

"Even if the results were a temporary aberration, the one month aberration was very costly," Crofts said. "It completely erased the over-collectings of the first eight months."

Crofts' figures are projections based on adjustments in March revenue figures, which represent spending and taxes during February.

When finally computed, he said the figures could show a 1.4 percent drop in general fund collections during that period, compared with monthly growth of around 15 percent in previous months. The figures are comparisons with the same months of the previous fiscal year.

"The real shocker in the March collections is the sales tax," Crofts said in a prepared report. "After a 21.6 percent rise in February, the March increase was around 5.5 percent. This occurred even though inflation rose at a 15 percent annual rate in February."

Another factor, he said, was a 25 percent drop in personal income tax collections, and lesser drops in corporate income, sales and insurance taxes.

Wholesale Prices Climb Full Percentage Point

CHEWING ON INFLATION — Alfred Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation fighter, bites his fingernail during testimony before a joint meeting of two House committees in Washington Wednesday. The panels heard testimony on efforts to deal with food price inflation. (AP Laserphoto)

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices increased another 1 percent in March, the same as in February, as inflation continued to rage at the highest level in more than four years, the government said today.

The Labor Department said wholesale prices, which eventually are reflected in the prices that consumers pay, rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 14.1 percent during the first three months of 1979. It was the largest quarterly advance since the fourth quarter of 1974.

But a hint of some future relief from rising food prices was contained in the March price report. Consumer food prices were up 1.2 percent, the smallest increase this year, and prices of crude foodstuffs rose just 0.2 percent, down sharply from the 3.8 percent increase the month before.

The Labor Department said wholesale prices were higher in March for beef and veal, which were up sharply for the fourth consecutive month, and for eggs, home heating oil, gasoline and shoes.

Overall prices of non-food goods rose 0.9 percent, the same as in February.

The price report showed inflation continuing at well above 10 percent, a rate that has the Carter administration searching for ways to strengthen its battered wage and price guideline program.

The administration is expected soon to announce plans for a consumer watch on price increases at the local level to supplement government efforts to restrain inflation.

The Labor Department's wholesale price report is now officially called the Producer Price Index, which measures prices of goods at three levels before they are sold to consumers and industrial users.

Prices in March were up 1 percent for all three levels: crude goods, meaning before processing; intermediate goods, meaning after some processing; and finished goods, which are ready for sale to the consumer.

Overall wholesale prices had risen by 1.3 percent in January before dipping slightly to one percent in February and March.

Carter's chief anti-inflation strategist, Alfred E. Kahn, had been scheduled to announce the consumer watch on prices today, but a news briefing on the program was called off Wednesday with no new date set.

A spokesman for Kahn didn't give any reason for the change in plans, but it appeared Kahn didn't want his announcements to compete for attention with President Carter's energy speech tonight.

Meanwhile, officials of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, the agency headed by Kahn, said they have found that some companies thought to be violating the administration's price guidelines may be in compliance after all.

Kahn has recently denounced companies he said were violating the guidelines, warning that the names of four companies would be made public if they couldn't justify their prices.

However, council spokesman Joe Carter said Wednesday at least one of the companies has justified its prices, it appears a second may be able to justify them, and the other two are still providing information to the government.

He said "more than eight" additional companies have been informed they are in probable non-compliance with the guidelines.

Added Units?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A committee of the state Board of Education is studying a proposal to increase the minimum number of units students must have to graduate from high school.

North Carolina is one of only 12 states that require only 16 units of credit for graduation, although some school systems in the state have a minimum of more than that.

A plan presented the Board of Education's Policy Committee Wednesday would raise the state minimum to 18 units by the 1982-83 school year by adding a second unit of math along with other new credits.

Under the plan, the requirements for graduation would be two units of math, four of English, two of social studies, two of science, one of physical education, five in elective courses and two that could be earned through the addition of new credits.

A recent survey shows that some school principals favor no new courses for credit in family living, consumer economics, psychology, human relations and cultural art. The principals favored, by a margin of 91-11, raising the number of minimum units to 18.

Studying Photos

MOSCOW (AP) — A Russian diving bell has taken eight underwater photographs west of Gibraltar and they may show the ruins of the fabled lost continent of Atlantis, Soviet scientist Andrei Aksenov says.

Aksenov said Soviet researchers found a group of mountains with flat tops 100 to 200 yards below the surface of the water and "consider it fully likely that the hills represent a rather big archipelago that sank as the result of tectonic activities."

He said experts on deciphering underwater photographs looked at the pictures and saw "the rather clear forms of a bridge or stone walls and fragments of a stronghold with wide stairways. All of these were covered by underwater plants, were ruined and flattened."

PENNED PETS?

There is a situation where neighbors' pets are penned adjoining our property and it is almost impossible to enjoy the outdoors because of the odor. What is the city ordinance concerning penned pets inside Greenville?

City Inspections Department head Alton Warren cited Section 5-12.1 of the Greenville City Code — Maintenance of stables, pens, etc.: "All owners and persons in possession or control of stables, corrals, pens, coops, warrens and other places where animals or fowl are kept shall maintain such places in a clean, sanitary, and unoffensive condition at all times, and in such manner as meets with approval of the County Health Department; and shall remove all manure therefrom and spray such places with suitable disinfectant at least once each week."

He added that no household can, by law, keep more than three dogs beyond the puppy stage.

Fire Damages House

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE — A 12:26 a.m. fire today, discovered by a patrolling Greenville police officer, caused extensive damage to this 301 Elizabeth St. house, which was unoccupied and being renovated. According to Fire Chief Jenness Allen, the two-story dwelling was completely engulfed in flames when firemen arrived at the scene. Allen, who said the house was owned by Vernon Dawson, reported that city fire marshal Capt. Jerry McLawhorn is investigating the cause of the damaging blaze. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Human Errors In Reactor's Mishap

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)

— With a stable but still highly radioactive reactor ready for a cold shutdown, attention shifted to the cause of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident.

Engineers said three separate human errors contributed significantly to crippling the power plant eight days ago, at least one in violation of federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission regulations.

NRC engineer Darrell Eisenhut, who briefed the five NRC commissioners Wednesday, said mechanical as well as design problems also were "major contributors" to the accident. But he emphasized that eight similar plants around the country could continue to operate "without undue risk to the health and safety for the public."

Physicists working round the clock at the contaminated Susquehanna River site examined a number of reactor shutdown options, including one proposed by the plant's designer, Babcock & Wilcox, that could do the job in 10 days.

"There's been a steady improvement in the status of the plant," said NRC official Harold Denton, who is personally supervising the work on orders from President Carter. "We've made a lot of progress in planning for eventual recovery of the core (which) remains stable."

Denton said the Babcock & Wilcox plan proposed for the cold shutdown — bringing the reactor to the point where it could no longer pose any risk of escaping control — was getting highest priority. It minimizes both the need for equipment inside the containment building to operate for a long time and the release of contaminated water outside.

"The plan is basically one that involves natural circulation within the reactor vessel and ...water in the steam generator to remove heat," Denton said.

Robert Bernero, another NRC official, estimated it might cost upwards of $150 million to replace the damaged core and clean up the reactor.

Eisenhut said an analysis of the near-catastrophe found these errors:

—Valves on an emergency pumping system were closed when they should have been open.

—The main emergency core cooling system was turned off at the wrong time.

—Four auxiliary water pumps were disengaged, in violation of NRC regulations, when they should have been ready for use.

Terror Bomb

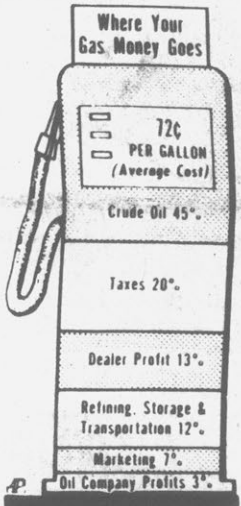

JERUSALEM (AP) — A terrorist bomb exploded today near a bus stop in Arab East Jerusalem, wounding four Arabs and two Jews, none seriously, authorities reported.

The blast occurred on Sallahadin Street, a main thoroughfare near the Herod's Gate entrance to Jerusalem's Old City.

Associated Press photographer Rina Castelnuovo, who was at the scene a few minutes after the 4 p.m. explosion, said the sidewalk was stained with blood and shop windows were broken.

A large force of police moved in quickly to block off the street and search for other explosives.

A spokesman at Hadassah Hospital said the victims' wounds were classified as moderate or light.

WHO GETS IT? — On the average, 45 percent of the American motorist's gasoline dollar goes to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The second largest component is taxes. The smallest share goes to oil company profits. (AP Laserphoto Chart)

Dr. Paschal Resigns As ECU Dept. Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Herbert Paschal, chairman of the Department of History at East Carolina University resigned from the post Monday and will return to the classroom.

Paschal, who has headed the university's History Department since the department was organized in 1963, said today, "I'm going to do the best job I can as professor of history, which is my vocation."

A Washington, N.C. native, Paschal received his undergraduate degree from Wake Forest University and his MA and PhD degrees from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He joined the ECU faculty in 1955.

A search committee to recommend a replacement for Paschal is scheduled to meet late Friday afternoon to begin its hunt for a new department head.

University spokesmen said Paschal's resignation was requested after a vote by History Department faculty members during an evaluation last week.

In another development, the History Department faculty has voted to replace Henry Ferrell, as the History representative to the ECU Faculty Senate. Dr. Ferrell is presently chairman of the Faculty Senate.

As the current Senate chairman, Ferrell will remain an ex-officio member of the Senate for one year.

Dr. Boro Nischan was elected to replace Ferrell and will assume the duties in May.

ECU Plans Initiate Five Doctoral Programs

ECU News Bureau

The Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina has authorized East Carolina University to initiate five doctoral programs in the basic medical sciences. These will be the first PhD degrees to be offered at ECU.

Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer said the UNC board has given approval to ECU doctoral programs in anatomy, biochemistry, microbiology, pharmacology and physiology. Students will be admitted in the fall of 1979.

Brewer said approval of the doctoral programs represents a special milestone in the progress of East Carolina University, placing it among the six private and public institutions in North Carolina to offer PhD level graduate studies.

The authorization for doctoral programs resulted from several years of planning by the ECU administration, the Graduate School and the School of Medicine, which will offer the programs through its departments, Brewer said.

Dr. Wilhelm Frisell, assistant dean for graduate studies in the School of Medicine and chairman of the Department of Biochemistry, said doctoral programs will greatly enhance and strengthen medical student education, postgraduate clinical training and continuing education within the School of Medicine.

Dr. Joseph G. Boyette, dean of the Graduate School, said that offering doctoral degrees represents "a significant step for East Carolina University." Availability of PhD programs stimulates research, faculty development, seminars and intellectual interaction which set a good tone for undergraduate work, Boyette said.

In approving doctoral programs for ECU, the UNC Board of Governors completed action on a phase of its 1976 five-year plan outlining program development for the 16 institutions in the university system.

Cassini Captures American Look

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Oleg Cassini, the Pied Piper of men's fashion designers, doesn't need recognition.

But the man who outfitted Jacqueline Kennedy during her White House years wants to set the record straight about his contribution to the world of fashion.

And with his signature line of Western-style menswear for Phoenix Clothes, Cassini feels he has captured, defined and perfected the ultimate "American look."

"The American cowboy is every man's envy," Cassini said in a recent interview at his sumptuous Manhattan townhouse. "The stereotype is tall, thin, well built, completely masculine. Who wouldn't like to look like that?"

The son of a Russian countess and a diplomatic attaché, Cassini was born in Paris, educated in Florence and had hopes of becoming a diplomat.

But times were difficult even for ex-countesses and their sons (the Russian revolution ended all trappings of royalty) and in 1936 Oleg came to America with his brother, Igor, who became known as gossip columnist Cholly Knickerbocker.

Cassini's women's clothes attracted increased attention, and during the Kennedy "Camelot" years he was chosen the personal designer for the first lady.

Today, at 66, Cassini exudes the good life he has led and is built much like the cowboys he idolizes.

"I think I've retained the physique of a young man and, consequently, the clothes I make look good on young men. I think all designers are influenced by the physical condition they find themselves in."

He is unsympathetic with those who do not meet his standards. "Cassini West" clothes do not hide bulging stomachs, sloping shoulders or concave chests.

Nor are they cheap. Suits average between $250 and $300.

"I'm not trying to please everyone," the white-haired designer said. "I want to clothe people who have some body discipline, who want to look their best and are willing to work for it. If they do their share, I'll do mine."

His share consists of creating a look much like the Western clothes that have become popular — again — this season, including leather ribbing, patchless slant pockets and a definable yoke.

He also has introduced to the American market Amara, a Japanese fabric that bears an uncanny resemblance to Ultrasuede.

But unlike the Western "fad" clothes, Cassini says his line will become timeless, the equal of the blue blazer and the pinstripe suit.

"There's nothing more classically American than western clothes. And I don't feel I'm a plagiarist, just because the Western fad is gaining popularity now. I could have produced that in 1966."

That's when Cassini first switched from designing for women to creating for men, thus revolutionizing the American menswear industry.

"I was the Pied Piper. I led the way. No one thought it would work and as a result no large companies would accept me. But now, young people have been taught to look for the name on the label."

"In a way, I've been passed by other designers. I don't mind other people having a piece of the action, but I want the world to know who started all this. I did."

Bridesmaids Luncheon Held

Miss Melody Kaye Phelps, bride-elect, was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon Sunday at Lloyd's Restaurant, Tarboro.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of silk white daisies. The luncheon table was centered with an arrangement of assorted spring flowers.

Do Nothing About Son's Romance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've often read your column aloud to my husband and we'd both have a good laugh at some of those outlandish letters. We even suspected you made some of them up, but we're not laughing (or suspecting) anymore.

Our handsome, 28-year-old lawyer son (I'll call him Ray) has fallen in love with a 62-year-old widow. Can you believe it? Well, neither could we. At first we thought Ray was being kind to an older lady until he told us that he was in love with her. She's a nice-looking woman (for her age), stylish and refined, but with so many young, beautiful girls after Ray, we can't understand what he wants with this old lady. (She's not rich either.)

My husband thinks Ray should see a psychiatrist. What can we do to bring him to his senses? And what on earth could a 62-year-old woman have that our son finds so fascinating?

UPSET IN BALTIMORE

DEAR UPSET: You can (and should) do nothing. Your son has the right to make his own choices. What the woman has that Ray finds so fascinating doesn't matter. He's apparently found it.

DEAR ABBY: Easter is coming up soon, and I hope you don't do what you did last Christmas when you asked your readers to remember those "poor souls" who live alone, and invite them to a family dinner!

Please spare me from those holiday get-togethers. The kids are fighting and screaming and the adults are worse. Most of them are boozers with a six-pack. The TV is blaring at top volume with nobody watching it. Everybody is talking and nobody is saying anything.

I for one would much rather stay home and prepare my own food and eat it alone — in peace.

I am neither hungry nor lonely, and I know I speak for many.

ALONE AND LOVING IT

DEAR ALONE: Although you may speak for many, you don't speak for all. I would still hope that friends would remember to invite singles — especially on holidays. Those who prefer to be alone will at least have a choice.

DEAR ABBY: I am 45 and Ralph is 56. We have been married for four years. This is the second marriage for both of us. I have three children by my first husband.

Ralph is an executive and a big stockholder with a very important company. He works 12 hours a day, six days a week, and some weeks he works seven. He is obsessed with his work. You would think the business would fall apart if he didn't do everything himself.

Although we have a lovely home, we have practically no social life. I have tried every way I know to get Ralph to relax, but he doesn't know how and doesn't want to learn.

My question: What kind of life is this for me? And what will our relationship be like when the children are grown and gone?

RITA IN AMSTERDAM, N.Y.

DEAR RITA: From your letter, I would say that by the time your children are grown and gone, your husband won't be around either. Men who are obsessed with their work and don't know how to relax, usually leave rich widows.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

One of the most common reactions I get from people when we first meet is, "I thought you were taller."

I really feel rotten about it because I sense their disappointment. First, I apologize to them for writing tall and then reassure them that I am still growing.

It's always been this way. Being short is akin to the common cold. They'll never find a cure for it. It's just something we have to live with.

Being a girl, I can sometimes get away with being short, but it's the men and boys I feel sorry for. For some unexplained reason, being short must be accompanied by some redeeming virtue. For years I have heard mothers play the game.

"My son is short, but he has a wonderful personality." (Compared, I suppose, to having a rotten personality... but he IS tall.)

"He's short, but he's fast." (Hopefully this refers to sports.)

"He's short, but he has long legs." (?)

"He's short, but he's kind to his mother."

One of the first sentences I learned at my mother's knee when I was being prepared for the dating game was "How tall is he?" It didn't matter if my prospective date had a 30-pound nose, dirt under his fingernails, and burnt barns to release tension — if he was tall, he was acceptable.

I picked up the habit. When our first son was born, I instinctively picked up his foot, measured it and said, "He has big feet. That means he's going to be tall." Soon after that, I made notches in the doorway every six months to reassure myself.

There is an unwritten law that men must tower over women as a show of strength and superiority. I remember once on a television show in a major city, the host sat on cushions to appear taller than his female co-host.

I know a lot of short men. Some of them are my best friends. I took one to lunch last week. One of them even slouched. Hopefully, we are getting away from the stigma of being short.

As I said to an audience last week, "Gosh, I thought you'd all be taller."

One came up afterward and said, "I've been sick."

We Were Voting On Big Bucks

It is clear that we were talking about big bucks in the Greenville Utilities bond referendum of Tuesday, but local voters understood the need and voted for the bonds.

Approved was the issuing of $14 million in bonds for water system improvements, $5 million in sewer system bonds and $5 million in electric bonds.

The water system funds are expected to bring in an additional $2 million in a state grant for construction of a new water treatment plant.

The $5 million in sewer funds is expected to bring about an additional $8.4 million in state and federal grants for construction of a new waste treatment plant.

A Distressingly Light Voter Turnout

The turn-out of voters for Tuesday's Utilities bond referendum was distressingly light.

It can be argued that voters who didn't go to the polls were in favor of issuing the bonds, or at least not so opposed as to take the trouble to vote against them.

Regardless, it does not speak well for citizen-

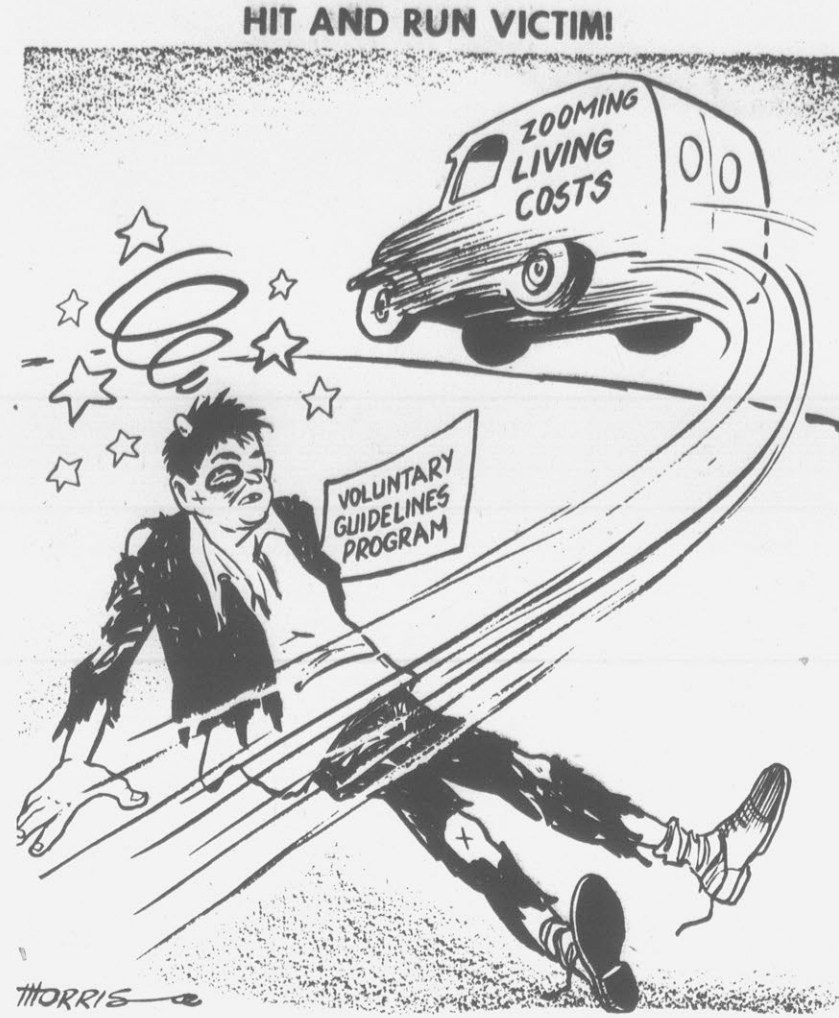

It is clear that the new water and sewer facilities, as well as the electric distribution system improvements, are absolutely necessary if Greenville is to meet its needs. The general obligation bonds will be paid off from revenues, with some increases in water and sewer rates anticipated.

Local voters who went to the polls have shown that they were aware of the necessity for these funds, large as the bond amount was. They have also indicated they are aware that the general obligation bonds are the least costly way of financing the major improvements.

Despite the large amount of funds involved, there is no doubt that Greenville voters made a good business decision on Tuesday.

ship when only 1,500 voters out of 12,000 registered take time to vote on Greenville's largest bond issue.

We have no idea what a heavy turn-out would have meant in the referendum's outcome. Nevertheless, in our opinion those who didn't vote don't take the duties of citizenship very seriously.

Minor Death Impact

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even if John Louis Evans III is executed as scheduled Friday in Alabama's electric chair, his death is expected to have little bearing on the overall status of the capital punishment issue in the United States.

The reason is that Evans, as did Gary Gilmore, who died before a Utah firing squad Jan. 17, 1977, has stopped trying to stay alive through court appeals. Evans has said he prefers to die rather than spend the rest of his life in jail.

"It's an aberrant case," said Jack Boger of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal Defense Fund in New York, an organization that lobbies against the death penalty.

Evans has "given up several years of constitutional challenges," Boger said. "He's committing suicide, in effect."

Meanwhile, the Legal Defense Fund has been focusing much of its attention on the impending execution of John Spenkelink, who is convicted of killing a traveling companion, Joseph Szymakiewicz, in Tallahassee, Fla.

For all practical purposes, Spenkelink has exhausted his court appeals.

The Supreme Court refused March 26 to hear an appeal from Spenkelink, putting him in the position of becoming possibly the first U.S. prisoner to be executed against his will since 1967.

Boger said that if Spenkelink is executed in Florida's electric chair, it could be a turning point for capital punishment in this country by establishing a new legal precedent of wide application.

The Supreme Court has previously upheld the constitutionality of Florida's death penalty statute.

But Spenkelink's lawyers had hoped for a new Supreme Court

Balk At Ending Agencies

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It seems that was not the sun setting on bureaucratic bloat and governmental regulation of increasing parts of daily living after all.

It was just a flash in the pan.

That is the conclusion of a number of people closely involved in the noble experiment launched in North Carolina a couple of years ago with creation by the General Assembly of the Governmental Evaluation Commission.

Popularly known as "Sunset Law" because it would, in effect, cause the termination of governmental activities which could not justify their continued existence; or which were found to be costly or of no benefit to the general public.

The commission has started feeding into the General Assembly its reports and recommendations.

There is an obvious lack of enthusiasm from the lawmakers.

Many Boards
Prior to this time, the Attorney General's office had taken a look at any number of state regulatory and licensing boards and commissions. There are some 83 of them, from architects, barbers and beauticians to watchmakers and well diggers.

The Legislature agreed to halt the proliferation of such activities temporarily, and to call for an end to those which are not formally reaffirmed as beneficial.

But it turns out that contrary to popular opinion that free enterprise is the most effective and desirable system, many of the regulated trades and professions are the very ones who want to continue the restrictive licensing and regulating procedures.

Beneath all the various arguments, there is one simple reason for this: restricting numbers of people who can engage in a particular skill so that competition can be kept to a minimum; thus, prices can be kept higher.

Indeed, as the Sunset Commission held its public hearings during recent months, there was no public clamor for an end to governmental interference, licensing, and regulation. There was an overwhelming response from the regulated seeking to continue the various agencies doing the regulating.

BILL NOBLITT

The commission called for an end to the N.C. State Board of Examiners in Watchmaking and Repairing among early recommendations.

The General Assembly balked as watchmakers turned the political heat on the members to retain their privileges and benefits secured under the licensing board.

All of which only reconfirms that which is already well known: 1 - Special interests get more attention from legislators than do citizens; and, 2 - Everyone favors governmental reform until it directly affects him.

Elsewhere
Similar results are happening in other states than this one. Politicians express a willingness to go through the sunset process and publicly embrace the concept of cutting back. Until the hard facts of political reality face them.

Imagine what it means to the future of the sunset approach to ending major governmental programs if the General Assembly can't even come to grips with the watchmakers.

All of which prompts Sunset Commission Chairman Paul Vick of Durham to observe: "In a day when citizens of this country cry loudly about too much government regulation in their lives and vote for politicians who espouse getting government out of the citizen citizens' lives, it is a strange experience to have citizens voice their need for continuation of regulation, at least in their profession or business, and to hear legislators jump quickly to the defense of continued regulation on the flimsy excuse that it does no harm and doesn't cost us anything.

"Regulation does harm, and it does cost," Vick argues.

Claim A Victory & Run

WASHINGTON — During the worst days of the war in Vietnam, when extrication seemed impossible, George Aiken had a great idea. "We'll just announce that we've won," said the venerable senator from Vermont, "and bring the boys home."

It is time to commend that admirable tactic to Erwin Knoll and Howard Morland, the editor and author who have involved The Progressive magazine in a no-win war with the government. By any rational judgment, Messrs. Knoll and Morland have won. They have exposed the highest officials of defense, justice, and atomic security as a bunch of chumps. Their victory is complete. But if they persist in fighting the issues in court, they will lose — and all of us in the press will lose with them.

To bring you up to date on the matter of real concern to the working press: The Progressive is a venerable monthly of pristine liberalism, published in Madison, Wisc.; it has a circulation of 40,000. Many months ago editor Knoll assigned free-lancer Morland to pull together a major article on the hydrogen bomb. The general idea was to dispel the mystique of secrecy that shrouds atomic weapons.

In some fuzzy fashion — apostles of pristine liberalism sometimes think in fuzzy fashion — it was supposed that an article explaining how to make atomic weapons would contribute to the non-proliferation of atomic weapons. In any event, Morland went to work. He succeeded beyond his pearliest dreams. He wound up with an article so accurate, so definitive, so brilliantly revealing that government censors, given a preliminary chance to review it, hit the panic button. The government sued to prevent publication, and Federal District Judge Robert Warren in Wisconsin now has granted the requested injunction. Knoll is appealing. I wish to heaven he weren't.

For this injunction, if it ever gets affirmed by the Supreme Court, would amount to a disastrous precedent for censorship of the press. This is prior restraint in its rawest form — a court order saying, Thou shalt not publish under pain of imprisonment for contempt. We have encountered such orders before in sensational criminal trials; there the purpose is to protect the impaneling of an impartial jury, a rather different matter. Judge Warren's order breaks new ground. It opens the way for a kind of judicial censorship we have never known in this country.

In the course of the hearings before Judge Warren, it transpired that Morland, an Emory graduate who majored in economics and had little more than a smattering of physics, had done a superlative piece of research. He started with graduate textbooks in nuclear physics. He dug through the Congressional Record. He read encyclopedias and scientific articles. He visited atomic plants where helpful

Marketing problems, especially those pertaining to the orderly sale of tobacco, were the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade yesterday.

President R.M. Garrett called the meeting so that the board might have a general discussion of matters the local warehousemen have taken up in their monthly meetings for the past two months, and before adjournment, this governing body of the Greenville market approved unanimously every feature brought before it that might tend to improve conditions.

Also before adjourning, K.W. Cobb, supervisor of sale for the past 15 years who retired at the end of the 1918 season was honored. A.E. Hobgood, manager of the Greenville branch of the Export Leaf Tobacco Company, made a short talk paying tribute to Cobb's 15 years of loyal service to the market and the great part he had played in building it. At Hobgood's suggestion, Cobb was elected an honorary member of the organization which he served so long and so efficiently.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Non-Help From Jerry

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although backers of the balanced-budget movement hope the transcontinental trip to New Hampshire by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. will help their cause in New England, they ruefully complain that the charismatic Californian has done more harm than good so far.

Strategists for the constitutional amendment to require a balanced federal budget believe they might have won the support of the required three-fourths of all state legislatures by now if it had not been for Brown's unrequited endorsement. They are sure the amendment would have carried in California had it not been for that state's governor.

The reason: Thanks to Brown's endorsement, the amendment lost the support of his enemies and President Carter's friends. First on the list was California Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, who was moving toward support of the amendment but abruptly opposed it when it became exposed to the Brown-Carter crossfire.

Nevertheless, the balanced-budget movement eagerly pressed Brown to visit New Hampshire and hopes he will address other state legislatures. Their reasoning, as explained by one strategist: "Since Jerry already has done us all the damage possible, we might as well get some benefit out of his campaigning ability."

A footnote: The balanced-budget movement is getting torpedoed by another famous Californian, tax-cut crusader Howard Jarvis. The father of Proposition 13 makes no bones about his contempt for the constitutional amendment. On a recent visit to Washington, Jarvis lobbied against it with such notables as Sen. Russell Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Mexican Envoy
The question of who shall replace Patrick Lucey as Ambassador to Mexico has triggered a replay of last year's noisily bitter Senate race in Texas between Republican Sen. John Tower and Democrat Bob Krueger.

Former Rep. Krueger, who speaks fluent Spanish, very much wants the Mexico City post. He has strong support from his influential fellow Texan, Ambassador Robert Strauss, as well as Democratic Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas.

But Tower, who barely edged out Krueger last year, is not about to be magnanimous in victory and is aggressively trying to veto Krueger. Tower's reason: An American of Latin ancestry ought to be ambassador to Mexico. Tower's authority: No less than a statement to that effect made by Krueger during his Senate campaign.

A footnote: For far different reasons, Kureger is not the choice of State Department professionals. They have made Lucey, who quit as governor of Wisconsin to become ambassador to Mexico in his first diplomatic

Strength For Today

BOTH OR NOTHING
Recent public opinion polls reveal a strange fact — that large numbers of people believe in heaven, but much fewer believe in hell. There is a strange lack of logic in this position which betrays a good deal of wishful thinking.

If God is love, He must also be just; and this justice must operate throughout the whole of creation. If God rewarded good and evil people alike by giving them entrance into heaven, then He would be showing no distinction between good and evil. This would not only be unjust, but — paradoxical as it might seem — God would be immoral.

A just God, therefore, who rewards righteousness must by the same token punish unrighteousness. We cannot have it both ways. If we want rewards, we must accept punishment. This elemental logic should not be a discouragement, however. It should be a challenge.

Big Role For Small Business

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Everyone seems to love small business, and well they should when they look at its record for new products and new jobs. But nobody seems to do very much for it.

Rarely is its voice heard above the shouts of Big Business, Big Unions, and Big Government. Sometimes it squeals in frustration, but it runs out of breath and patience, and sometimes it fights with itself.

Squeezed by the big three, it shrinks in size. Between 1950 and 1976, big firms increased their percentage of manufacturing assets to 45.5 percent from 39.7 percent, according to Congressional hearings.

Onerous government regulatory and tax policy helped move the trend along. Government reporting requirements, for example, are said to cost some small businesses 38 times more than the very largest corporations.

Labor unions haven't always been sympathetic, often applying to small enterprises the same wage standards as for giant industries, even though small business doesn't enjoy the same economies of volume.

All three tend to overlook small business contributions to the economy.

As put by the House Committee on Small Business last year, it is the cutting edge of competition, the innovator-inventor, the source of leadership, the entrepreneurial outlet, the job creator.

"It is surprising to some that between 1969 and 1976, small businesses accounted for what can be considered virtually all the new private sector employment in this country," said the committee. It found that while total employment rose by 9,583,000, the 1,000 largest companies accounted for only 74,897, while state and federal governments accounted for 3 million. Smaller firms employed the rest.

Will lack of appreciation give way to support? Arthur Levitt, Jr. thinks so. Levitt is head of the American Stock Exchange, which has its share of smaller companies, but he has additional input too.

As chairman of the White House Commission on Small Business, Levitt is charged with the job of picking the brains of small business people, 25,000 of them in 50 states and Puerto Rico.

By August, 2,000 delegates will have been selected, and in September Levitt and his commissioners will report to the President. In January the President convenes the White House Conference on Small Business.

Out of it, Levitt vows, will come remedial legislation: reform of taxes, government regulations, paperwork and international trade.

But why, he was asked, has small business — smaller business would be the correct term, because as generally used it excludes only the 1,000 largest concerns — been unable or unwilling to state its case?

Based on his attendance at many of the state hearings, and on "hundreds of conversations with small-business people," the chairman reduces the various explanations to two vital ones:

1. "Fear of government retribution." They fear, he said, that the government will "get even" if they shout too loudly.

2. "It doesn't make any difference."

The City Council, meeting Tuesday night in a special call session, took action on several items of business.

Following a public hearing, Council members approved a permit on a one-year renewal basis for James Russell Whichard to place a mobile home at 101 S. Summit Street.

Whichard indicated in his permit request that the mobile home would be used as a residence for Mrs. James Whichard's mother.

The Council gave its approval to a request by Kenneth Whichard for rezoning, from R-9 to R-6, of property located south of Greenville Boulevard adjoining Belvedere Subdivision.

Other business conducted by the Council during the call meeting included:

post, the scapegoat for deteriorated U.S.-Mexican relations. Blaming Lucey's inexperience, they do not want another politician in Mexico City.

Minority Leader Baker

Grumbling is mounting in the Senate Republican cloakroom against Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker's apparent decision not to step down as minority leader, as he previously indicated he would, once his campaign for the presidential nomination gets going.

The principal grumbling is coming from Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, national chairman of the Reagan campaign, and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, a presidential hopeful in his own right. But many other senators not directly connected with other campaigns believe Baker should step aside.

The change in plans is attributed to astute first-term Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, who has signed on as Baker's national campaign chairman.

No-Show Reagan

Front-runner Ronald Reagan will again be among the missing at the next big "cattle show" of Republican presidential prospects in New Hampshire April 7 — indicating a set strategy from which he will not deviate.

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah will substitute for Reagan, who pleaded a three-month-old commitment for a party dinner in Bloomington, Ill., that night. But his absence confirms the forecast made to us by a Reagan insider: "The governor (Reagan) will not appear on the same platform with any other Republican presidential candidate."

Ford's Agent

Veteran Republican operative Stuart Spencer has turned down numerous presidential campaign offers to serve as non-candidate Gerald R. Ford's agent in 1980.

Ford is not going to run in the primaries and knows the odds are very long against a brokered convention that would nominate him. Nevertheless, he wants to maintain what he calls "leverage," to take advantage of any changes in conditions. Spencer, principal architect of his 1976 nomination, will help Ford do that.

Nuclear Safety Review Planned

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A conference has been scheduled for April 17 by the North Carolina Utilities Commission to examine the safety of nuclear power plants operating in the state.

The commission has asked for reports from electric utilities operating in the state, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, state radiation protection and civil preparedness officials and its public staff on matters relating to the Three Mile Island nuclear accident.

The commission will be looking for the details of the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Pennsylvania, the steps the utilities and the NRC have taken to ensure that the nuclear units operated by North Carolina utility companies are safe and emergency plans that have been developed in case of a nuclear-related accident.

The commission also announced that it will examine the reliability and safety of proposed power plants in the state.

The study will be part of a three-week public hearing set for July.

Public participation was invited for the commission's study on estimating future growth of electrical use in North Carolina.

The Public Staff of the Commission is also developing an electrical demand forecast to present to utilities by May 1 to inform them of the prospective demands.

The commission has ordered the state's electric utilities to present evidence on the following subjects at the hearing:

—Future forecast of demand for electric power in North Carolina.

—Contributions estimated from solar and other alternate energy sources, conservation and load management.

—Reliability, safety, public convenience and necessity issues regarding the use of nuclear, coal and other alternative energy forms.

—Development of construction schedules to meet forecasted demand.

public information officers took him on guided tours.

It is evident from the record that at some point Morland became obsessed with the mechanics of the H-bomb. This happens to every good reporter who gets absorbed in his subject. The more Morland learned, the more he wanted to learn.

Finally he learned everything about the design of an H-bomb that was available in the literature. He had pages of notes and diagrams. He couldn't bear to leave this voluminous research unused.

He therefore wrote an article telling us more about the H-bomb than we really want to know.

Retreat, Knoll! Knock it off, Morland! The affidavits in District Court abundantly demonstrate the government's imbecility. The Department of Justice has placed itself in the ludicrous position of insisting that textbook material be locked up that any serious student now finds freely available. If the point was to demonstrate that there are no H-bomb secrets, the point has been made beyond dispute.

Nothing can now be gained by pursuing an appeal. By yielding to the government's red-faced requests, the magazine will sacrifice nothing worth saving. Judge Warren's decree will have limited precedential effect.

But as surely as The Progressive persists, just as surely will the Burger Court knock us silly. There is a time, as the Preacher told us, to every purpose under heaven. This is the time, my liberal brothers, to run up a flag of triumph — and get the hell out.

review on the question of whether the state law allows an adequate weighing of all mitigating factors before the death penalty is imposed.

The law contains a specific list of mitigating factors, and Spenkellink's lawyers said the state applied that section of the law too rigidly.

Last July, the Supreme Court threw out Ohio's death penalty law because it did not allow enough room to examine mitigating factors.

Spenkelink's lawyers also contended he was denied adequate hearings on claims that electrocution is "an unnecessarily torturous and wantonly cruel means of execution" and that the Florida law unfairly imposes the death penalty on the basis of race, sex and economic condition.

Spenkelink can still be saved by a Florida clemency board which includes Gov. Bob Graham and six cabinet members. In 1977, then-Gov. Reubin Askew and his cabinet refused clemency for Spenkellink, and he came within three days of execution before a stay was granted.

The Supreme Court struck down all existing death penalty laws in 1972 on grounds they were administered in such a haphazard manner that they violated the constitutional protection against cruel and unusual punishment.

While some observers believed the ruling would eliminate the death penalty for all time, numerous state legislatures have since enacted laws designed to eliminate capriciousness and arbitrariness.

Idi Amin's Capital Is Deserted

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Residents of Kampala described Idi Amin's capital as a deserted and silent no-man's land today, with Libyan defenders retreating on one side and Tanzanian and exile invaders massed on the other.

"The fighting has pretty well died down, and the Libyans are on the road east to Jinja," a diplomat in Nairobi reported after contacting people in the Ugandan capital.

"The people there are relieved, even ecstatic. They believe it's all over in terms of any fighting."

Residents described a surrealistic calm — food was almost gone and gasoline was nonexistent, but at one country club a handful of golfers emerged for a game. Radio Uganda went on the air as usual with anti-Tanzanian tirades and pop music.

Diplomats said the invading Tanzanians and Ugandan exiles were massed in the southern and western sections of town, in no apparent rush to occupy the whole city after their two-month drive on Kampala.

Amin's whereabouts were publicly unknown. He was last sighted two days ago in the eastern border areas he still controls, confidently predicting victory even though his armies were evaporating before the invaders and the Libyans were in retreat.

Informed military sources in Tanzania said Entebbe airport south of Kampala was deserted by its Libyan defenders after an attack by Tanzanian air force MiG-21s on Sunday. They said the Libyans pulled out in a truck convoy toward Kampala under a rain of Tanzanian artillery shells.

There was no indication that the invaders, with a secure land supply route to Tanzania, were using the airport, which has been closed to international traffic for two weeks.

The Libyan forces, estimated at 2,000-2,500 men, were said to be retreating east on the Jinja road to an Anglican college at Mukono, 15 miles from the capital.

There, military observers said, they could either make a stand, head east for sanctuary in Kenya or move north toward safe air bases in northern Uganda from which they could be flown home.

Unconfirmed reports said at least 150 Libyans have been killed in the fighting. They were sent by Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafi to help his fellow-Moslem Amin.

FORECAST

Until Friday

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning from the Southeast into most of the West. Unseasonably cold weather is expected from the Plains to the upper Mississippi and for the Northeast. Snow is expected for northern New England and eastern Montana. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
After two days of heavy rains, skies were expected to clear over North Carolina today, beginning in the west and spreading over the east by afternoon.

The cold front which brought the rainy weather remained over the central part of the state this morning. It was drifting very slowly eastward and was expected to clear the coast by this afternoon.

A small low pressure center moved northward along the front Wednesday and caused widespread and locally heavy rains over much of the state. Rainfall totals ranged between one and two inches.

The dense cloud cover had considerable effect on temperatures Wednesday with high readings ranging mostly in the 50s. However, on the coast temperatures reached the low 70s.

Temperatures today were expected to reach the 60s inland and the low 70s along the coast. Friday is expected to be sunny, breezy and some cooler.

Carter Airing New Energy Blueprint Tonight

Two Injured In Auto Collision

CAR OVERTURNS . . . Police and firemen stand by early this morning after a car driven by a Greenville man went out of control and overturned injuring two persons. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Two persons were reported injured and an estimated $6,100 property damage caused in a 2:30 a.m. collision today at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Elm Street.

Police investigators identified the drivers involved as Jackie Denise Lowry of Hope Mills and Jimmy Arnold Averett of 2004 Brook Rd.

Officers, who estimated damage at $2,800 to the Lowry car and $3,000 to the Averett vehicle, said both drivers were treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for their injuries and released.

Investigators, who charged Averett with driving under the influence and careless and reckless driving, reported the Averett car went out of control on Elm Street, struck a utility pole as it crossed the median, and collided with the Lowry vehicle in the intersection, then overturned.

Damage to utility wires, officers said, was estimated at $300.

Outbreaks Of Hepatitis

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — Outbreaks of hepatitis have reached epidemic proportions in Catawba County, health officials reported Wednesday.

During the past six months, 60 cases of type A hepatitis, or yellow jaundice, have been reported in the county. They said that is three times the normal number of cases usually reported in that time period.

While no deaths have been reported from the disease, which can be fatal, officials said victims face possible serious liver damage.

Half of the confirmed cases have been reported at daycare centers. Health officials said all of the centers meet health standards, but said the disease spreads because children play closely with each other and have a tendency to put contaminated objects in their mouths.

Since the first case was reported in October, health officials have sent special teams to visit each patient and evaluate living conditions for cleanliness. They have discovered only one carrier.

Howard Surface, director of the county health department, said the number of cases has been increasing at the same rate for the past three months with no end in sight. He said it may be late summer before the disease runs its course in the county.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is unveiling a new energy blueprint for the nation tonight that will boost gasoline prices, perhaps by as much as 15 cents a gallon over the next two years, and add measurably to inflation.

Carter's plan, triggered by higher prices by oil exporting countries and an interruption in supplies from Iran, includes the gradual lifting of price controls on U.S.-produced oil.

Another component, facing an uncertain fate in Congress, would levy a new tax aimed at curbing windfall profits for the oil industry.

The basic components of Carter's plan were outlined by White House officials who asked not to be identified.

Although a number of congressional sources say they doubt the tax can be enacted, Carter is expected to sweeten the pot by suggesting the extra tax revenues be earmarked for programs designed to conserve oil by encouraging production of gasohol — a blend of unleaded gasoline and grain alcohol — and the development of solar and other energy sources.

GAVE SCHOOL PROGRAM

Walter Wilder, visiting artist from Pitt Technical Institute, played the guitar, lute, recorder and the ocarina at Aycock Junior High School Library Monday from 10 to 11 a.m. About 500 teachers and students attended the performance.

all of which have support in Congress.

The decontrol portion of Carter's new energy plan does not require action by Congress and officials say the president will go ahead with it regardless of whether Congress approves the windfall tax proposal.

Carter goes on television from his Oval Office at 9 p.m. EST for a radio-television announcement of plans to gradually decontrol domestic crude oil prices starting June 1, with total decontrol scheduled by September 1981.

Estimates of at-the-pump results of his strategy to both discourage consumption and encourage production through higher prices vary widely.

Gasoline could go up 7 cents to 15 cents per gallon by 1981, according to some unofficial estimates. But the American Petroleum Institute, an industry group, recently issued a study asserting that phased decontrol would add just 5 cents to each gallon of gasoline over the 2½-year span.

The inflationary impact is equally uncertain, with some forecasters seeing each stage of decontrol adding one-half of one percent to the federal cost of living index.

Carter's energy address will reflect fresh concerns aroused by the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania. Before the accident, he had been expected to declare full support for an expanded nuclear energy program.

Now, sources say, Carter is likely to announce appointment of a high-level commission to investigate the accident and reassess nuclear power safeguards.

WINSTON-SALEM — Lark Alane Shea, a senior at Rose High School and daughter of Dr. Philip Shea and Dr. Jannis B. Shea of Greenville, has been awarded a Guy T. Carswell Scholarship at Wake Forest University.

Ms. Shea is among 35 Carswell Scholarship winners announced by William G. Stirling, director of admissions and financial aid at Wake Forest.

Carswell Scholars are selected for qualities of intellect and leadership. The scholarships have potential four-year values ranging from $4,000 to $18,000 and are the university's most prestigious scholarships. This year's winners are from 11 states, with 16 winners from North Carolina.

At Rose, Ms. Shea is a representative of the Student Government Association, a member of the math, science, ecology, Quill and Scroll, Mu Alpha Theta clubs, and the Teen Republicans. The editor of the 1978 school yearbook, she is also secretary-treasurer of the French Club and is a member of the National Honor Society.

Bradshaw To Speak At Meet

Department of Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw will be the featured speaker at the 11th annual meeting of the Mid-East Commission, scheduled to be held at the Greenville Moose Lodge April 19.

Frank Bonner of Aurora, chairman of the Mid-East Commission — one of 18 planning regions in the state — will preside at the session, which begins at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour, followed by a 7:15 p.m. dinner.

Included on the agenda is a review of commission activities over the past year and the presentation of certificates honoring retiring members of Mid-East advisory and planning committees.

The Mid-East region includes Pitt, Beaufort, Martin, Bertie and Hertford counties.

Diggs Charged By House Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Diggs, already appealing his federal court conviction on 29 counts of mail fraud and filing falsified payroll forms, must now defend himself against a congressional committee's charges that he violated House rules.

The House ethics committee Wednesday accused Diggs, the senior black member of Congress, of 18 violations of the chamber's rules. That action opens the way to a possible "trial" of the Michigan Democrat by the panel and subjects him to the possibility he could eventually be punished by the full House.

The committee's action, similar to an indictment, was the first time it has made such a formal accusation since last year's conflict-of-interest charge against then-Rep. Joshua Eilberg. The Pennsylvania Democrat was defeated in November, however, and the committee's authority ceased with his loss.

Diggs will have the chance to respond to the charges against him and the committee will consider his responses before deciding on any public trial.

If a trial is held and the committee finds Diggs did commit the violations, it could recommend punishment ranging from a reprimand to expulsion from the House. Any actual punishment would be up to the full chamber.

The committee's allegations essentially parallel the charges Diggs was convicted of in an October jury trial.

He was sentenced to three years in prison.

N.C. House Bill Seeks Medical Use Of Marijuana

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Doctors would be able to use marijuana legally in the treatment of cancer patients under a bill filed by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham.

Miller said the bill was filed at the request of some physicians at Duke University. It would allow a doctor licensed by the Board of Medical Examiners to possess, dispense or administer controlled substances according to state Drug Commission regulations.

"They have found that marijuana and its derivatives are useful medication in the treatment of cancer patients," Miller said.

He said he doesn't expect much opposition to the bill.

"It would be solely for use in treatment purposes," Miller said. "The present law enables them to use a variety of narcotics so this is not a deviation of any great degree."

"Now they are using narcotics of all kinds — cocaine and everything else. I don't think this will cause any great concern."

In other legislative developments Wednesday:

State ERA

A House panel killed a proposed equal rights amendment to the North Carolina state constitution that has been in limbo since the federal ERA died in a Senate committee nearly two months ago.

The state ERA died at the hands of supporters of the federal amendment. Rep. Patricia Hunt, a staunch supporter of the federal proposal, said a state ERA might "undermine" chances for ratification of the federal proposal in future legislative sessions.

The House Constitutional Amendments Committee killed the proposal. It had been sponsored by an opponent of the proposed equal rights amendment to the U.S. Constitution, Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank.

Voters would have had to approve the state amendment if it had been enacted by the legislature.

Regardless of the outcome of the vote, it would have hurt the federal ERA, supporters said. Rejection would have doomed federal ERA in North Carolina, they said, and passage would have allowed opponents to argue the federal amendment was unneeded.

Blue Lights

Action on a bill that would make possession of a blue light like those on police cars a misdemeanor was halted in the House after supporters managed to push through an amendment attaching a mandatory jail sentence.

The bill, already approved by the Senate, was sent back to the House Judiciary II Committee after Mrs. Hunt succeeded in getting the mandatory jail term amendment approved by one vote.

She argued that misuse of blue lights by persons who impersonate law enforcement officers was a serious offense. The bill was originally introduced after reports of incidents in which women were stopped by cars with flashing blue lights that appeared to be police cars.

In one incident in Randolph County, a woman was raped after being pulled over.

But opponents of the amendment argued a mandatory jail term would take away a judge's discretion and mean that people who might have blue lights for innocent purposes would be jailed.

Insurance

A bill that would establish accident and health insurance plans for people who are not able to obtain such insurance was filed by Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood.

It calls for the creation of a facility much like the automobile reinsurance facility that would provide for people who cannot buy accident and health insurance elsewhere.

Monitor

Rep. John Church, D-Vance, filed a bill that would appropriate money to continue North Carolina's research and preservation of the USS Monitor, the sunken Civil War ironclad that is resting off the coast of Cape Hatteras.

The bill calls for a $43,250 appropriation for fiscal year 1979-80 to renovate the state's current underwater artifact preservation facilities and to buy the necessary equipment to establish a temporary preservation lab to retrieve artifacts from the Monitor.

It also calls for a yearly appropriation of $30,400 to staff and operate the preservation lab.

The Monitor was discovered in 1973. North Carolina has been competing with other states, including Virginia, for control of the sunken vessel and preservation efforts.

Award

A larger reward might be in store for those state employees who come up with ideas that save their employer money.

Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, has filed a bill that would increase that reward. It now amounts to 10 percent of the money saved by the suggestion with a $1,000 ceiling. The bill calls for an increase to 25 percent of the money saved with a $5,000 ceiling.

Schedules

A bill calling for creation of a commission to study alternative work schedules for state employees was filed in the House by Rep. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake.

The bill says state employees would benefit from alternative work schedules through better work schedules, reduced tardiness, absenteeism, fatigue and improved morale.

PROBLEM LIES HERE — Dr. John Money, professor of medical psychology at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., gestures during a Judiciary hearing Wednesday on a bill which would asexualize sex offenders of children under fourteen years of age. Dr. Money has done work with a hormone, Depo-Provera, which reduces the male sex drive and has successfully treated about fifty sex offenders with the drug. (AP Laserphoto)

May Lose Up To $12 Million

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina could lose about $12 million in federal money to its school systems if President Carter's 1980 budget is adopted, according to education officials.

The money, known as impact aid, is allotted to school systems near military bases. The military does not pay property taxes that are used to help finance school operating costs.

The funds are also designed to offset the loss of taxes in school districts that have government-subsidized, tax-exempt housing projects.

Cumberland County, home of Fort Bragg, would be hardest hit in the state, losing about $2.3 million next year. Fort Bragg is the nation's largest U.S. Army post.

A group formed primarily to lobby for impact funding plans to meet this week in Washington to press its case.

Jack Britt, associate superintendent of Cumberland schools, said it would take a 12 cent increase in county taxes to offset the loss of the impact funds, which make up 20 percent of that system's budget.

The impact aid program has two levels of compensation,

Appraisal Service Planned Saturday

RALEIGH — Five experts from the well-known auction house of Christie's will be in Raleigh from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, April 7 to provide appraisal information on heirlooms and works of art.

The five will be at the Faculty Club of the N.C. State University to look at sculpture, paintings, and other examples of art and antiques, and at photographs of furniture too large to be transported. Verbal estimates of monetary value and brief descriptive information will be given for all objects presented, except on coins, books, jewelry, stamps and pre-Colombian art.

Fee for each object appraised is $5, and proceeds realized from the project will go to the construction fund of the new N.C. Museum of Art building. This is the first major fund raising event sponsored by the N.C. Museum of Art Guild, a volunteer support organization.

Tickets for the appraisal service are available at the N.C. Museum of Art Store, or they may be obtained at the Faculty which are further broken down by several variables. In North Carolina, Category A students bring the local system about $400 each and Category B students bring in about $200 each. Category A students live on non-taxable military property and attend local public schools. Category B students live off base and attend civilian schools, or live in public housing. Carter proposed to eliminate all funding for Category B students. The schools use the money to hire extra teachers and provide pay supplements to others. Other Eastern North Carolina military areas that would lose funding if the budget is passed would be Onslow County-Jacksonville, which would lose $1,060,000; Fayetteville, $400,000; Wayne County, $200,000; and Craven County, $250,000.

No Comment By Hunt On Scott's Criticism

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he will not comment on some sharp criticism leveled at him by former Gov. Bob Scott, but he defended his administration Wednesday against questions about its progress.

"I think this state's record of progress over the past two years, and what our budget will allow over the next two years, speaks for itself," Hunt said at a news conference.

The governor was questioned about Scott's comments earlier this week when he accused Hunt of practicing the "politics of retrenchment," and questioned Hunt's standing as a progressive governor.

Scott, elected governor in 1968 after a term as lieutenant governor, is thought to have been testing the waters for a possible 1980 race for governor or even lieutenant governor.

Scott, son of former Gov. Kerr Scott, is co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission in Washington and said this week he intends to resign and return to North Carolina this year.

Pressed to respond, Hunt told reporters, "I am not going to get into what Gov. Scott had to say."

But defending his record, Hunt cited advances in education, economic development, utility reform and crime control. And he made a veiled reference to Scott's own four-year term in office.

"In all four of the areas...I'd say we've made as much or more progress as we have in any number of years," Hunt said.

Scott was critical of Hunt's proposed $40 million state income tax cut, and additional recommendation for a small tax rebate. Scott said there were more pressing needs in education, the predominantly black university campuses and highway maintenance.

On other topics, Hunt said the nuclear reactor accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania was sobering, but expressed confidence that adequate safety precautions would be taken by utility companies.

"We are now sobered by that experience, and we will move more cautiously and take greater safeguards with the use of nuclear power," Hunt said.

Hunt said he talked with Duke Power Co. Chairman Carl Horn this week about safety steps the utility would take in the event of an accident. Duke Power operates three nuclear reactors built by the same company that built the crippled reactor in Pennsylvania.

"They are doing a very thorough study of what they need to improve safety at their plants," Hunt said.

Hunt also threw his support behind three bills introduced in the General Assembly Wednesday that would establish an authority to direct the University of North Carolina public television network.

The bills, recommended by a telecommunications study commission, would set up a board of trustees, answering to the UNC Board of Governors, to run the system. Hunt said the board would be boosters for public TV and help the system acquire the money it needs to improve program quality.

"I think a lot of people realize other states have more resources for public TV and frankly do a better job than we do," he said.

Another provision would set up a state agency to handle all video and film projects that state government departments are now producing individually.

Retelling A North Carolina Frontier Family Story

By BILL STOWE
The Hendersonville Times-News

The Gillespies manufactured rifles and depended on the Sittons for iron, and a lot of settlers in western North Carolina needed the firearms for hunting and turning back Indian raids.

The two families teamed up in Henderson and Transylvania counties to make life a little easier for those early settlers in the stretch of wooded hills where the Blue Ridge mountains meet the Great Smokies.

It was there that a rifle was man's indispensable friend.

Mathew Gillespie married Elizabeth Sitton in 1810 and Mathew set up his own gun shop not far from his father-in-law's iron forge.

But the Gillespie-Sitton family merger didn't stop there. On Christmas Day of 1812, Isabel Gillespie from East Fork was married to Lawrence Sitton of Mills River. Thus, within two years, a Gillespie brother and sister respectively married a Sitton sister and brother.

As for Wilson Gillespie, his temper got him into trouble on at least one occasion. Church records dated Feb. 19, 1859, charged him with "having had a difficulty with one Mr. Hughs, in which he was used profane (sic) language and throwing a rock."

A month later, however, the church members, "after laboring on the case till satisfaction (an apology) was obtained from the Brother, restored him to his former position."

Tracking the Sitton family from the original Philip's iron forge at Mills River to the present day reveals some engaging highlights. As noted, Philip's son, Lawrence, married Isabel Gillespie in 1812. By 1838, this union had produced eight sons and three daughters.

When the Mills River Baptist Church was officially established in 1835, due in a large part to the efforts of Philip Sitton, the charter membership consisted mostly of Sittons and Gillespies.

Not all was easy for Lawrence Sitton, however. According to church records, Lawrence was charged with selling some apples "to be distilled into brandy." Three months later, with Lawrence "refusing to give satisfaction," he was excluded from the church fellowship.

But by the time Lawrence died and was laid to rest in Mills River's Sitton-Gillespie cemetery in 1873, he was once again a church member in good standing.

His obituary in church records, a glowing tribute to his good works, contains only one negative note. In parentheses, following the recorder's assumption that Lawrence had passed on to the protection of Divine Guidance, appear the words, "we trust."

One of Lawrence's grandsons, Silas Craton Sitton (1842-1912) deserves special mention. Silas, refusing to follow the lead of cousins Philip and Wilson Gillespie, joined the Union army at the age of 17. After the war, he managed to obtain a pension through the War Department despite the fact that a clerk had registered him as Silas C. Citten.

What's left now of the Sitton iron forge at Mills River, and Mathew Gillespie's nearby gun shop? And where are all the Gillespie rifles? Unfortunately, the sites of the iron forge and gun shops are unmarked. In Mills River, 4½ miles west of Routes 191-280 on South Mills River Road, there's a corn field between the road and the edge of Mills River South Fork. Careful digging and a lot of luck can produce pieces of slag from the Sitton forge, but the building is gone.

Just beyond the corn field, on the north side of South Mills River Road, a steep gravel drive leads to the Sitton-Gillespie Cemetery. The graves are well marked. In the nearby woods, one of the open-hole shafts that supplied iron ore for the Sitton forge is still visible.

Most of the existing Gillespie rifles are in private collections. The National Park Service has one on display at the Pioneer Museum on the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Gillespie weapons remain buried on Civil War battlefields, never made the trip back carried there by men who, like home.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, showing no ill effects from the news of another sharp rise in wholesale prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off a fraction in early trading, was up 3.03 at 872.83 by noon.

Gainers held a 7-5 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The government reported early today that wholesale prices of finished goods rose 1 percent last month, making a net increase of 3.3 percent for the first quarter of the year.

But analysts said the latest reading on price trends at the next-to-last step in the distribution chain came as no surprise to Wall Street.

And they also noted continuing expectations that President Carter would outline measures to decontrol domestic oil prices in his energy message tonight.

Fisher Foods fell 1 1/2 to 12 1/2. The company said it had a significant decline in its first-quarter earnings, and added that recent activity in its stock might have stemmed from unfounded rumors of an impending takeover.

The NYSE's composite index rose .16 to 57.87. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.22 at 181.87.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 14.19 million shares at noon, down from 20.03 million at the same point Wednesday.

Advise Limits On Sleeping Pill-Use

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctors should strictly limit sleeping pill prescriptions and better warn their patients of the medications' potential health hazards, a National Academy of Sciences panel says.

The panel, in a report published today, said sleeping pills normally should be prescribed only in limited numbers and for short periods of time.

Physicians should rarely, if ever, prescribe the drugs to new patients for more than two to four weeks, the study said. For patients already taking sleeping pills, doctors should refrain from providing automatic refills, it said.

Although the report called current practices of prescribing sleeping pills "difficult to justify," it said there is no need to ban barbiturates, as has been suggested, even if they are sometimes abused.

In 1977, 8.5 million American adults used prescription sleeping drugs, mostly barbiturates and benzodiazepines, according to the report published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

About a quarter of those used the drugs every night for two months or longer, it noted, even though there is little evidence the pills are effective beyond a few days.

The prescribed use of barbiturates has been declining steadily since 1970 and accounted for only 17 percent of the sleeping aid prescriptions in 1977, the report said.

The study was conducted by the academy's Institute of Medicine at the request of the White House and the National Institute on Drug Abuse.

Vetoes Death Penalty Return

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Gov. John Carlin has vetoed the Legislature's attempt to reinstate the death penalty, saying "society can find a way to deal with violence without using violence."

Carlin, expressing philosophical opposition to capital punishment, added that he believes it is not rehabilitative, punitive or a deterrent. The old Kansas death penalty law was struck down by a 1972 U.S. Supreme Court decision.

Abortion Ruling Most Important

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A Supreme Court justice who dissented from the 1973 ruling on abortion says it was probably the most important decision of the 1970s. The court ruled that a woman has the right to an abortion in the first stages of her pregnancy.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, who spoke Wednesday at the University of Dayton, said the abortion ruling has resulted in more litigation and appeals to the court than any other decision of the 1970s.

Bumgarner, a teacher at Bethel Elementary School, was selected to serve on a committee to meet with members of the North Carolina State Department for the purpose of discussing teacher education programs at East Carolina University. Pirates Set Grid Schedule

East Carolina's football team won't have the challenge of a conference race during the 1979 season, but its schedule, announced today by Athletic Director Bill Cain, gives the Pirates a chance to claim a state championship.

East Carolina, 9-3 last fall, and Independence Bowl champions, will meet each of the other six NCAA Division I football schools within North Carolina next fall, facing Western Carolina in Ficklen Stadium for the September 1 opener, and meeting N.C. State, Duke, Wake Forest, North Carolina, and Appalachian State all within the first eight weeks.

In addition to the Catamounts, the Pirate home schedule also includes VMI, The Citadel, Richmond and North Texas State.

East Carolina will meet the Wolfpack in Raleigh, the Blue Devils in Durham, Wake Forest in Winston-Salem, North Carolina in Chapel Hill, Appalachian State in Boone, and William & Mary in Williamsburg, Va. The latter will be the lone trip out of North Carolina for the Pirates.

Five of the opponents were defeated by the Pirates last year, Western Carolina, VMI, Appalachian State, Richmond and William & Mary. N.C. State and North Carolina defeated the Pirates.

Three opponents, Duke, Wake Forest and The Citadel return to the schedule after at least a year's absence. The Pirates beat all three in their last meetings.

North Texas State, the final home opponent of the year, is the only newcomer to the schedule.

The complete schedule:

September 1 Western Carolina (7 p.m.); 8 at N.C. State (7 p.m.); 15 at Duke (1:30 p.m.); 22 at Wake Forest (7:30 p.m.); 29 VMI (7 p.m.);

October 13 The Citadel (1:30 p.m.); 27 at North Carolina (1:30 p.m.);

November 3 at Appalachian State (1:30 p.m.); 10 Richmond (7 p.m.); 17 North Texas State (1:30 p.m.); 24 at William & Mary (1:30 p.m.).

Irwin In GGO For The Work

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Hale Irwin make no pretense he is doing anything other than preparing for next week's Masters.

"I hadn't even planned on playing here," Irwin said before teeing off today in the first round of the $250,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

He committed for this event just minutes before the deadline after the final round of the Heritage Classic in Hilton Head Island, S.C. last week.

"I need the work," he said. "My game needs the work. I haven't played well in two weeks and I just need the work."

Of course, he said, "I'd like to win here. You always try to win. That's the object of the whole thing. But, quite obviously, I'm looking ahead to next week."

Several top stars, mostly notably leading money winner Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus, are skipping Greensboro to concentrate completely on the Masters. But at least one hot player is in the field here.

"I'd planned on playing here all along," said Lanny Wadkins, the only two-time winner this season. "I'm the kind of player who plays good only when he plays a lot."

The vast majority — perhaps three-quarters — of the 150 man field shares Wadkins appraisal. They're the group that is not eligible for next week's elite, invitational Masters. One winner here of the $45,000 first prize.

Giants, Mariners Take Opening Wins

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer
A funny thing happened

Wednesday to Tom Seaver and Frank Tanana, two of baseball's best pitchers...only it wasn't very funny to Seaver inning all right, but was kayoed with two out in the second as the San Francisco Giants clubbed the Reds 11-5 in the traditional National League opener in Cincinnati.

Tanana fared a little better but still came away a loser. He served up home runs to Larry Cox, Willie Horton and a tie-breaking two-run shot to Leon Roberts in the sixth inning as the Seattle Mariners stunned the highly regarded California Angels 5-4 in the American League inaugural.

Today's NL schedule has two day games, with the New York Mets playing the Cubs in Chicago and the San Diego Padres visiting the Dodgers in Los Angeles.

In the AL, the Toronto Blue Jays play a night game against the Royals in Kansas City while the Milwaukee Brewers meet the world champion Yankees in New York and the Boston Red Sox entertain the Cleveland Indians in day games. The scheduled Texas-at-Detroit afternoon contest was postponed by rain and snow.

The rest of the openers, including Texas-Detroit, are set for Friday.

Seaver was charged with seven runs, four of them earned, in 12-3 innings. Mike Ivie singled and homered in San Francisco's eight-run second inning while Terry Whitfield collected four hits. Vida Blue went the route for the Giants, scattering nine hits.

Seaver, who began the season with a 219-117 lifetime record and a 2.51 earned run average, said he felt good, but in getting the ball over the plate he made it too easy to hit.

"That's something I'll have to work on the next couple of days," he said.

Tanana, who yielded nine hits and five runs — one of them unearned because of his throwing error — in 52-3 innings, said all three Seattle homers came on fastballs.

"You have to make them hit the ball on the ground here," he said. "I jammed Roberts. He probably hit it off the trade-mark, but it got over that 316-foot fence. You have to pitch the way the park is structured and I didn't do that tonight. I thought I threw well, and that's encouraging to me."

Roberts preferred to talk about the relief pitching of John Montague, who allowed two hits and one run over the final 62-3 innings.

The umpiring crew in Cincinnati included Paul Pryor, the only veteran major league ump who has signed for 1979. He worked with three amateurs while 25 other big league umpires picketed outside Riverfront Stadium protesting salaries and working conditions.

The game in Seattle was officiated by rookie Ted Hendry, the only AL umpire under contract for 1979, and three amateurs.

The great football coach, George Allen, attended three colleges — Alma, Marquette and Michigan.

the fourth inning of Wednesday's opening day game in Seattle. The contest was the season-starter for the American League. Seattle won by a 5-4 score. (AP Laserphoto)

Purple-Gold Game Is Set For Saturday

For East Carolina football coach Pat Dye, Saturday's Purple-Gold spring scrimmage game will be an important barometer of his team's progress in off-season drills. Kickoff is set for 2 p.m.

"We have a lot of veterans back from last year," said Dye. "But we have a lot of starting spots open and a lot of players trying to win them."

"We have a good idea about what most of the veterans can do, but I'm excited to see what progress some of our younger players have made and how much some of them will be able to help next fall."

To be specific, Dye can call on eight returning starters on offense and five on defense from the 1978 team which won the Independence Bowl. He has a roster which includes 45 returning lettermen. But, with freshmen and walk-ons that total comprises less than half the squad that will be available for the first game next fall.

"Maturity in the young players has been a great concern to me," Dye continued. "We have some holes to fill and need a large group of younger players to come along to support the starters."

Throughout spring practice the offense has drawn Dye's praise, with the line claiming a major part of the accolades.

"Our offensive line has really been outstanding this spring and I'm sure will be a big part of our success next fall," Dye said.

"We want to reestablish the punishing, physical running game that we have had in the past and this line will be a big part of that effort."

Up front, the Pirates have tackles Joe Godette and Matt Mulholland, guards Mitchell Johnston and Wayne Inman, along with center Jeff Hagans. All are returning starters, although Godette was at tight end last year, after having been a starting tackle in 1977.

Leander Green, a 1978 starter, has been impressive at quarterback in spring action. Halfback Anthony Collins and fullback Theodore Sutton, the leading Pirate grounders for the past two seasons, complete the list of starters.

Defensively, tackle Vance Tingle, all-America candidate Mike Brewington at linebacker, and the backfield trio of Charlie Carter, Willie Holley and Ruffin McNeill are the only returning regulars from last fall.

There will be no admission charge for the game Saturday.

NBA Season Draws Toward Close As Berths Begin To Fall In Line

By The Associated Press
As befitting a champion, the Washington Bullets have clinched the best season record in the National Basketball Association. And as befitting a player considered the most exciting in the sport, Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers won a game in dramatic fashion, hitting a dunk shot with one second remaining.

The Bullets, last season's league champions and this season's Atlantic Division titleholders, raised their record to an imposing 54-25, routing the defenseless Boston Celtics 145-119 Wednesday night. With only three games remaining in the regular season, no team can match the Bullets' mark.

Erving, meanwhile, is the player the 76ers would like to see do it himself. And he did it Wednesday, slamming in the winning field goal just before the final buzzer as Philadelphia edged the Houston Rockets 121-120.

76ers 121, Rockets 120
The 76ers were led by Darryl Dawkins' 24 points, Erving's 21 and Henry Bibby's 18. Moses Malone scored 30 points for the Rockets.

Spurs 110, Nets 103
George Gervin, the league's top scorer, paced San Antonio with 30 points, while James Silas collected 21 and Larry Kenon and Billy Paultz each had 16 points and 15 rebounds.

Kings 115, Lakers 111, OT
Kansas City's Scott Wedman tied the score 100-100 at the end of regulation time, hitting a 15-foot shot at the final buzzer. The Kings won it in overtime with the help of two key baskets by Sam Lacey.

Suns 106, Trail Blazers 95

Phoenix, enjoying its longest winning streak of the season, broke open a close game with 14 consecutive points midway in the fourth quarter for a commanding 97-81 advantage.

SuperSonics 115, Clippers 107
Seattle, which retained its 1½-game lead over Phoenix in the Pacific Division, got 26 points from Gus Williams and 25 from Jack Sikma in beating San Diego.

Hawks 118, Bucks 109
Atlanta rolled to its 15th straight homecourt victory behind the 20-point scoring of reserve Terry Furlow, 18 points by Eddie Johnson, and 17 apiece by John Drew and Dan Roundfield.

Pacers 102, Cavaliers 95
Indiana's victory was its 37th of the season, tops for the club since it joined the NBA three seasons ago.

Sampson Might Go For Pros

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Harrisonburg High School basketball star Ralph Sampson reportedly will be offered a contract "in seven figures" to bypass college and go directly to the National Basketball Association.

Roger Bergey, Harrisonburg basketball coach and man in charge of all recruiting offers to the 7-foot-3½ inch star, said Detroit Pistons Assistant Coach Mike Bruner contacted him by phone Wednesday afternoon and told him the Pistons were interested in Sampson.

"I must say, the person talking to me (Bruner) had some pretty impressive things to say. They were talking big money," Bergey told the Roanoke Times & World-News.

Like six figures?
"Seven figures," replied Bergey. "I guess Ralph and I will talk about it."

"Detroit's head coach (Dick Vitale) apparently saw Ralph at the Capital Classic in Washington and was really impressed," said Bergey.

In the all-star game last weekend, Sampson scored 23 points, grabbed 21 rebounds, blocked four shots and was named the tournament's most valuable player.

Bergey said Bruner believes Sampson would be one of the top 15 NBA draft picks if he skips college. San Antonio Spurs General Manager John Bzozos said earlier this week he thought Sampson would be a

Striking Umpires Feel Sold Out By Lone Contract Signee Pryor

CINCINNATI (AP) — Striking major league umpires say they've been sold out by Paul Pryor, the only umpire who has signed a contract with the National League for the baseball season.

Pryor called balls and strikes in the major league season opener here Wednesday while 25 other major league umpires marched outside Riverfront Stadium in an informational picket.

"I wouldn't want to be in a foxhole with the guy (Pryor) with the enemy coming," said umpire Bruce Froemming. "There's no way I could stand next to Paul Pryor and feel good."

Froemming said Pryor, 51, had received an $8,000 raise because of the umpires' collective bargaining agreement two years ago but had turned his back on his fellow umpires by signing a contract with the league.

"I feel sorry for Paul that he sold his soul like that," Froemming said.

After the game, which San Francisco won 11-5, Pryor told his side of the story.

"I signed for personal and financial reasons," he said. "If I hadn't had those two reasons, I'd be with them (the striking umpires). I walked the picket line in 1970 during the playoffs between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati."

Pryor said he hopes the contract dispute will end soon.

"I wish the thing could get over and everyone would go back to work," he said. "I hope they understand. If they come back, I'll wish them well."

But Pryor may not find the other league umpires willing to forgive and forget.

"I have no sympathy with him," said umpire Ed Vargo, who would be starting his 20th season. "My feelings toward Paul will never be the same."

The umpires wore signs saying "Baseball unfair to umpires" as they walked outside the stadium. They left as soon as the game started, with many of them heading for other cities where games were scheduled for Thursday.

"We're with you guys," one fan shouted as he walked toward the stadium. Some members of a local pipefitters union joined the march.

Major league umpires make from $17,500 to more than $40,000 a year and receive $53 a day expense money.

Cauthen Wows English Fans

LONDON (AP) — Steve "The Kid" Cauthen, America's 18-year-old wonder jockey, wowed Britain's hard-bitten racing aficionados Thursday as few have wowed them before.

They had nothing but praise and yet more praise Wednesday for the cool way he handled his first British news conference here the previous day, and they predicted British racegoers will love him too.

Cauthen, who has ridden 944 winners worth $12 million in the United States since May 1976, arrived in England this week to spend the summer riding for millionaire owner Robert Sangster. He is scheduled to ride his first race in England on Saturday at Salisbury.

"Not since the arrival of Tod Sloan, the first top American to try his luck here 80 years ago, has there been such a stir in British racing," wrote Jim Stanford in the Daily Mail.

"Steve Cauthen's presence in this country is a heaven-sent bonus to British racing as a spectator sport," wrote John Oaksey in the Daily Telegraph. "I wish him all the luck that's going."

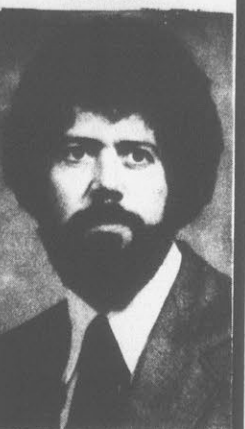

He said Cauthen handled the news conference "with quite extraordinary charm and self assurance ... the impression one got was of a modest, highly intelligent young man who is quite used to facing challenges and has come to England looking for a new one."

James Lawton quipped in the Daily Express: "This is the kid with the melting point of tungsten. This is 5-feet-2 inches and eight stone (112 pounds) of rare metal."

"Operations and hospital rooms cost a lot more than you think."

Pro Women Keep Close Watch On Calories

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — In a time of calorie-counting in a nation where concern over waistlines is almost as common as concern over gas prices, it's somehow comforting to know that even the athletic types worry about their weight.

"Even walking hundreds of miles of golf course a year and swinging golf clubs literally thousands of times isn't enough to keep me trim," said Sandra Post, who opened defense of her championship in the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle tournament today.

"So I only eat breakfast and dinner when I'm on the tour. Besides, too much body weight robs my strength."

There are 80 golfers in the field for the Winners Circle, the richest event on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, and most appear to pay strict attention to staying in shape.

"The Palmer method is at least two miles a day; I find it keeps me from craving sugar," said Sandra Palmer, who jogs five days a week to stay fit.

"I want to look good now, while I'm publicly visible," Palmer added. "Of course, I want to look good, and be active, when I'm 70."

Hollis Stacy, who'll be shooting for an unprecedented third consecutive LPGA Open triumph later this year, has lost 15 pounds in the past year.

The Winners Circle at the Mission Hills Country Club course wraps up Sunday, with $37,000 going to the winner.

Among the favorites are Nancy Lopez and JoAnne Carner, each of whom has already won two tournaments this year.

The Winners Circle is sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Co.

Youth Accents Greene Central Spring

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Youth permeates the spring sports teams at Greene Central this year, but most of the coaches still expect to do well.

Baseball

The Rams have gotten off to a good start in the Eastern Carolina Conference after losing their first four non-conference games, but the start hasn't surprised coach Jim Fulghum.

"Since we got in the conference, our pitching has done well, our hitting has been good and so has our defense."

The Rams are an almost entirely junior team with the only seniors on the pitching staff. "For a young team, we've come a long way in a short time. The progress of the hitting and pitching haven't surprised me, but the little things, like communication, have."

One big plus for the team is the fact that nearly all the players played together last summer on the same Senior-Babe Ruth team and many have played together since seventh grade.

Another strength has been timely hitting. "We've gotten the hits at the right times. Defense has also been one of our strengths," Fulghum said. "We've turned three double plays in the last three games."

Of concern to Fulghum is the squad's lack of senior leadership. "Most times, you go about as far as your seniors take you," he said. Also, as a whole, the team has not hit consistently.

Junior Ken Johnson has been the top pitcher on the team this season and senior Jerry Rouse should come around, Fulghum said.

The top hitters are junior outfielders Jeff Scott and Al Murray, while, defensively, the club is tough up the middle with juniors Donald Shaw and short, Chip Hardy at third and Junior Fulghum at second.

Boys' Track

The Rams had only 12 people on the boys' track team last season and only four of those came back this year. Coach Stewart Smith has had to rely on freshmen and sophomores, but the team has done fairly well so far.

"We've got 32 people on the roster this year and that helps,"

he said. "In the conference, we more or less fit right now into the middle of the pack, but we expect to finish in the upper half in the conference meet."

Senior Anthony Carmon is the only real sprinter on the team. Smith said, running the 100, 220 and 440 relay team, which is one of the top two in the conference.

Junior Melvin Rynum participates in the long jump, triple jump, low hurdles and 440 relay. Sophomore Anthony Gonzalez runs the 440 and should finish in the top four in the conference, Smith said.

Other top performers include junior James Holmes in the two mile, sophomore Duane Sanders in the mile, junior Thomas Graham in the high hurdles and sophomore Tom Bullock in the 800.

Girls' Track

The girls' track program is really still in the building stage at Greene Central, according to coach Lenny Herrington, who was Smith, who also handles the boys' team, along with Sports Director Al Musgrave.

"We've only had one year of girls' track, but we're trying to make it as good as we can," Smith said. "We're trying to get it organized."

The team has some good individuals, however, but the coach said he expects them to do well in the conference meet.

Three of those are junior shot putter Rosemary Jones, and freshmen Deborah Heather and Arlene Bridger, both of whom Member Two is senior Steve Foster, who alternated between first and second last season. Senior Robert Mowbray is the third seed, moving up from six last season where he won the ECC and tournament championships.

Another tournament champion a year ago is fourth-seeded putter Rosemary Jones, and freshmen Deborah Heather and Arlene Bridger, both of whom ting great leadership from his four seniors.

"We're looking for a winning season, hopefully a championship," Corbett said. "Our four returning seniors are great leaders and the team has a terrific attitude. We also have a very talented group of freshmen."

The Lady Rams have proven to be strong defensively, giving up only four runs per game in conference play. But they need more power at the plate. "We only have base hitters and we're leaving too many people on base," Corbett said.

In the infield, the team leaders are seniors Sarah Taylor at third and Cindy Creech at first. Taylor is averaging around .420 at the plate and has good range on defense. Creech is also a great defensive player and one of the better hitters on the team.

The outfield is led by junior Melody Ham in left and freshman Lisa Speight in center. Both cover a lot of ground, while Speight is a strong hitter, Corbett said. Senior Lynn Shackelford is the team's top pitcher. She has also shown good control, walking only three batters all season.

Last Minute Effort To Prevent Execution

By KENDAL WEAVER
Associated Press Writer
ATMORE, Ala. (AP) — Condemned murderer John Louis Evans III, seeking to end "a hell on Earth in prison," awaited electrocution tonight while his mother pleaded with the governor and the U.S. Supreme Court to save him.

In Washington, attorneys for the mother, Betty Evans of Beaumont, Texas, planned to ask a U.S. Supreme Court justice, apparently Justice William Rehnquist, to stay the electrocution pending a hearing on Evans' mental competence.

Mrs. Evans met with the Gov. Fob James briefly Wednesday. One of her attorneys, Morris Dees, director of the Southern Poverty Law Center, said the governor indicated he would not act until he saw what the courts would do.

Evans gave no sign late Wednesday that he would change his mind and oppose his scheduled death in the electric chair. He would be the first person executed in the United States since Gary Gilmore faced a Utah firing squad in 1977.

But there were private, eleven-hour discussions between the governor's office in Montgomery and Holman Prison near Atmore late Wednesday. And the Rev. Kevin Duignan, a local Roman Catholic priest who has befriended Evans and expressed a desire to see the condemned man live, said he was "very cautiously optimistic" that the execution, scheduled for 12:01 a.m. CST Friday, might be postponed.

Duignan said he spoke by telephone with James for 25 minutes Wednesday night and expected further communication with the governor's office today. He declined to say what was discussed and, when asked what James might do, said, "I don't know."

But Duignan said that when

Evans' mother paid an unexpected visit to her son Wednesday afternoon, Evans said he would "consider" asking for a clemency hearing before the governor.

Duignan said Mrs. Evans, who met briefly with James earlier Wednesday, asked her son to request the clemency hearing. "He refused with qualifications," Duignan said. "He said he would think about it."

Evans, 29, sentenced to forfeit his life for the 1977 slaying of a Mobile pawn shop owner, voiced repentance earlier Wednesday and reaffirmed his desire for death in a "final statement" that he read on the lawn of the prison.

But Duignan said Evans was prepared to change his stand entirely and "fight for his life" if the execution was postponed. He said Evans would view such a postponement as "a message from God."

Lawyers at the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery had hoped for a stay Wednesday from the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, but it was rejected in a 2-1 decision by a three-judge panel.

High Losses To Tornado

ENFIELD, N. C. (AP) — Officials have estimated damage from a tornado which touched down in Halifax County Tuesday at $300,000 to $500,000. Only one minor injury was reported.

Eight houses were leveled and eight others in Enfield were damaged when the twister struck about 2:20 p.m. It was one of four tornadoes reported in eastern North Carolina Tuesday afternoon.

Damage in the Scotland Neck area of Halifax County was estimated at $29,000.

Most damage in Enfield was centered in a three-block downtown area. Also, roofs were blown off six homes near Enfield and two warehouses were damaged.

Betty Hamill, a Red Cross volunteer who heads the disaster committee, said volunteers were busy providing food and seeking shelter for families left homeless by the tornado.

Enfield Mayor B. D. Kimball said the Red Cross set up headquarters in the police station within 30 minutes after the twister hit.

"It was a right rough 15 minutes during the storm, but the Red Cross has been right on top of the situation since then," the mayor said.

Chills N.C. Coors Choice

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A squabble over a 1,600-acre parcel in Anson County could result in the Adolph-Coors brewery striking a North Carolina site from its list of potential brewery locations.

The Coors brewery is negotiating for 6,000 acres along the Pee Dee river in Anson County, 60 miles south of Charlotte. Snagging the negotiations is the parcel owned by the McAlister-Little Farms Inc.

The McAlister family is asking $8 million for the land.

William Coors, chairman of the Coors company, said the McAlister offer has not been accepted or rejected. He said, however, that the company likes to pay the same amount to all landowners.

Coors said the McAlister's price tag was about $3,250 per acre more than the other landowners' prices.

State Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, and some state industrial development officials are trying to assemble a package of land in Richmond County, just across the Pee Dee river from the Anson site, as a back-up location for the brewery.

National Humanities Center To Be Formally Dedicated Saturday

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Even on a gloomy day, light floods into the National Humanities Center, bringing out the colors in the Oriental rugs on the floor and the warm patina of the furniture.

The arrow-shaped brick and glass building gathers light, but those working inside are working on bringing forth some light of their own.

The center is a home for scholars from all over the world. It will be formally dedicated Saturday.

Its main purpose, said its director, Dr. Charles Frankel, is to "provide an ideal place for good people to do thinking and writing and research."

In its first year, the center has brought in 28 scholars on one-year fellowships. Frankel said that eventually the center will have 45 to 50 fellows a year.

Some are philosophers; others, historians. Still others are psychologists and political scientists.

In universities, Frankel said, professors are often isolated from colleagues in other departments. Within their own departments, they are often separated by rank, age and their special field of interest.

"Here we have a really free and equal community," Frankel said.

"No matter what field you're in, you tend to become dug in. The world gets to be seen from only the point of engineering or what have you," said Frankel, adding that the center provides scholars with the opportunity to work with persons from other disciplines.

Frankel, who is on leave from his position as professor of philosophy and public affairs at Columbia University, said that he doesn't want the center to be "just an ivory tower."

"I want to encourage them (the fellows) to reach the public," he said. "Scholars are citizens and should think of their jobs in that light."

The youngest fellow this year is 32 and the oldest is 75, he said. Frankel said he expects most to be between 40 and 70 years old. "The overriding criteria (for selection) is always individual merit and the (intellectual) merit of the individual project," he said.

Subjects under include the Supreme Court in the 1930s, a history of right-wing extremist movements, Shakespeare, aspects of the history of science and the development of political philosophy.

The idea for the center came several years ago in a meeting among professors from Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Berkeley and Columbia. The center receives support from the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the state, private foundations and corporate and private donors.

The $2.5 million building lies on land owned by the Triangle Universities Center for Advanced Study, Inc. The three universities in the triangle, Duke, North Carolina and North Carolina State, have each pledged $75,000 a year for five years to the center.

The speaker at the dedication at 10:30 a.m. Saturday will be Dr. John Hope Franklin, professor at the University of Chicago and a leading writer on the black experience in the United States.

Holy Week Services Readied By Church

Holy Week Observances at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church will begin Palm Sunday, April 7, with the Blessing of the Palms at the 11 a.m. service. Maundy Thursday Holy Communion will be held at 7:30 p.m. with joint participation by the Gloria Dei Lutheran congregation.

Maundy Thursday is observed as the anniversary of the institution of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and gets its name from the new commandment, manadatum, the apostles received, "That you love one another as I have loved you."

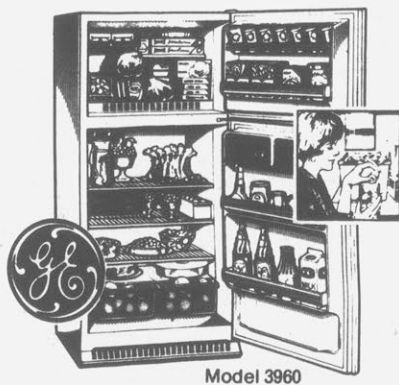

Good Friday will be marked with the Service of Shadows, Tenebrae. The service, beginning at 7:30 p.m., is one of Scripture, hymns and prayer focusing on Christ's Crucifixion.

The congregation will gather for a Sunrise Service at 6:30 a.m. on Easter Day to greet the dawn of the Resurrection and light the Paschal Candle. Following the service, there will be a fellowship breakfast, with an Easter egg hunt for the children afterwards. Holy Communion will be celebrated at the 11 a.m. worship hour.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1♠ Pass 2♠ Pass
 2♠ Pass 4♠ Pass
 Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

The trump suit seems to wield a hypnotic influence on many declarers. They don't mind losing a trick in a side suit, but heaven forbid that they should lose a trump trick. Their machinations to avoid this fate have resulted in the loss of countless contracts.

The bidding was brief and to the point. North elected to respond in his minor suit as a temporary measure. That was accepted procedure, for a two-over-one response of two hearts normally guarantees a five-card suit. When South rebid his spades, North saw no reason to introduce his heart suit. With adequate spade support and a full opening bid, he simply went straight to four spades.

The opening lead of the jack of clubs was won by dummy's king. After a brief glance at dummy, declarer, entranced by all those intermediate spot cards in trumps, realized that he could pick up the trump suit without a loser, even if East had five to the queen. All that was necessary was for the spade finesse to succeed.

So, without any consideration, declarer ran the jack of spades at trick two, losing to the queen. West persisted with the ten of clubs, and now there was no way declarer could prevent the defenders from taking a trick in each suit for down one.

The location of the queen of trumps should have been declarer's last concern. He should plan to lose at most a diamond, a heart and a spade. After winning the club opening, his first play should be a low heart. The jack will win and the suit should be continued to East's ace.

Best defense is for East to return a trump. Declarer wins, crosses to the ace of clubs and discards a club on a high heart. Now he can try the diamond finesse, and even though it loses, the contract is cold. The defenders cannot prevent declarer from ruffing a diamond in dummy, and declarer will still be able to take the trump finesse in search of an overtrick.

'Today' On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Syndicated talk-show host Phil Donahue will become a regular on NBC's "Today" program beginning next month.

"Donahue on Today," in eight-minute segments, will be a three-day-a-week feature of the early morning news and entertainment program, Lester Crystal, president of NBC News, said Wednesday. Most of the segments will be produced in Chicago, although some will be recorded on location in various cities, Crystal said Wednesday.

Donahue, an Emmy-winner, has been host of "The Phil Donahue Show" — now "Donahue" — since Nov. 6, 1967.

News Approach Makes Difference

'Intelligent Actors'

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Marlene Dietrich wasn't impressed with many of the American actors she worked with in the movies. Many of them were "not richly blessed" with brains, she says.

"I will not say that there were no intelligent actors in Hollywood, but the really great actors were regrettably never my partners," the 74-year-old actress says in her memoirs, which are being serialized in the West German magazine Stern.

She led Jimmy Stewart, one of her leading men, played love scenes "as if he had put on only one shoe and couldn't find the other."

Miss Dietrich was impressed, however, by Spencer Tracy.

"It was in the film 'Judgment at Nuremberg.' Sadly, my role was only small. But working with this partner was for me a great experience."

MARLENE DIETRICH

She also recalls meeting John Wayne while he was supporting a wife and two sons on a meager salary — "when he worked."

She said Wayne "could barely say his lines. I helped him as much as I could. He told me that he never read books. Today, John Wayne is one of the most important personalities in America and rich as Croesus. He doesn't need my good wishes anymore. He has made it — without reading books. But one should not take that as an example."

Her book, "Marlene Dietrich, My Life," is published in German by C. Bertelsmann of Munich.

Satellite To Radio-Use

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press announced Wednesday that it will establish a broadcast-quality satellite delivery system for its 660-affiliate radio network.

The news service said it would file an application shortly with the Federal Communications Commission, seeking licensing for 15-foot earth stations in 37 cities.

"We have signed a lease agreement with California Microwave, Inc., for 15-foot earth stations in the 37 cities," said Keith Fuller, president of AP.

"With these earth stations we hope to bring the advantage of high-quality satellite circuits to a large number of broadcast stations affiliated with the AP Radio Network, and also start delivering certain limited data services to newspapers."

The 15-foot earth stations will be installed on frequency coordinated sites by CMI, an electronics manufacturing concern headquartered in Sunnyvale, Calif. The earth stations will be licensed to and maintained by The Associated Press.

The primary signal directed to the satellite for relay to the 37 cities will be The Associated Press Radio Network, an audio news program service currently reaching more than 600 AP member radio stations via terrestrial lines leased from American Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Sixty-one APRadio affiliates are located within the 37 cities where earth stations initially will be located. Landline extensions leased from AT&T from each of the earth stations will continue to provide 3kHz channels to the remainder of the stations.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Last week's breakdown of a nuclear power plant in Pennsylvania was a confusing, alarming news development. If averages held true, about 50 million Americans got an explanation of the incident from the evening news, as delivered by CBS, ABC and NBC. About 3.5 million tuned to "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" on public TV.

Those who watched the commercial evening news saw helicopter views of the stalled plant, plus reporters' speculation and bits of interviews with power company officials, who assured reporters and their audiences that everything would be OK.

Those who watched "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" were offered a brief overview of the situation by Robert MacNeil, and then a 22-minute discussion with two experts on the possible effects of radiation on the human body.

The network news' coverage raised some questions; the nightly "MacNeil-Lehrer" program answered some. The difference was a matter of approach.

The traditional view of television news, ascribed to by the commercial networks and most local TV stations, has as its Golden Rule: The Show Must Never Lag. That is, not too many seconds should pass without some visual excitement dancing across the screen.

The premise behind this view is that viewers have very short attention spans and will flip to "I Love Lucy" reruns if there's nothing exciting on the news. No one has ever really challenged this notion; it's just the way it's always been done.

So, TV news directors desperately try to avoid stories that last more than a minute; if a bit has to go longer than that, it should at least have some fire or smoke something nifty in it. On the local news, a two-car accident is better than a city council meeting. It's more visual.

That's why the Three Mile Island nuclear plant story was not a good TV news story. Reporters couldn't take their cameras inside the crippled plant, and from the outside, it just looked like a nuclear plant. So, reporters took to gimmicks, hoping to make the story sexier, visually.

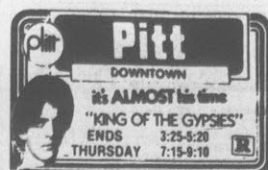

"MacNeil-Lehrer," on the other hand, is founded on a different philosophy. Robert MacNeil, a veteran broadcast journalist, and Jim Lehrer, a converted newspaperman, believe that people watch news because they want to. Viewers don't have to be enticed to the set with sexy pictures.

So, they sit and talk. They ask questions. And they keep asking questions until they're satisfied with the answer. No sexy pictures, no screaming sirens, no scary talk to pump up a story. In fact, MacNeil and Lehrer try to take the emotion out of a story.

"On stories with a very high factor of audience emotion or anxiety built in, we try to de-emotionalize them so people can get at them," says MacNeil. "That's our point with the nuclear plant story."

Singing Salesman - Professional Recommender

By JERRY SCHWARTZ
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Like Little Tommy Tucker, the Singing Salesman sings for his supper.

Unlike the Mother Goose character, the Singing Salesman also sings for his blue slacks, his white shirt, his $40 print tie, his black shoes with gold buckles and even his curly hair style.

The Singing Salesman — Marty Echols, a 29-year-old native of Salt Lake City — earns all of these things as a "professional recommender," peddling products and services to a public that has never even heard of him, let alone heard him sing. He says he earned only $3,000 in cash last year, but with all of the freebies he was given, he lived "an upper-middle class existence."

His ads, placed in newspapers and on the walls of newsstands, depict a Las Vegas-style singer wearing a three-piece suit, hefting a microphone over his head. "Marty Echols, The Singing Salesman, RECOMMENDS..." the ads say, and then they list several stores that paid a fee so they could be considered deserving of the Singing Salesman's imprimatur.

Below, the Singing Salesman thanks "the many companies and production people who have made my shows and advertising a great success."

He lists the photographer who took his picture ... the tailor who made his suit ... the jeweler who furnished the silver bracelets that dangle from his wrist ... the hair stylist who cut his brown locks.

All of these things were given to the Singing Salesman, in exchange for a mention in his ads. Echols knows he has a good thing going, even if he's not quite sure of why it works.

"I guess it's because I only recommend things for people who were creative enough, gentle enough, kind enough to give me a chance," he said recently, over a lunch that was purchased by an Indian restaurant he recommends.

Life was not always good to Echols. He arrived in New York in 1972 with nothing but $80 and a lifelong ambition to be a singer.

His baritone — "I can sing Elvis Presley better than Elvis could," he says — did not boost him to instant stardom.

In fact, he says he spent 18 days living in Central Park, sleeping on the park benches and shaving in washrooms in Manhattan skyscrapers.

Then, one day, "I asked myself, 'What is it that I can do to single myself out from the other 23,000-odd singers in New York?'" he said. "These people (audiences) are so nice to me. I wish that I could give them a television set, a washer, even a vacation somewhere where they could rest. And if I could do that, I would be the only one."

His idea was similar to a Tupperware party: he would talk merchants into donating merchandise and services for a show, in exchange for publicity. People would pay to see the show, and in exchange they would receive free gifts and watch young entertainers.

The entertainers are paid for their appearances, and Echols also urges members of the audience to help them in their careers.

Echols sometimes charges an admission fee, and uses that for his own costs and to pay other entertainers. The restaurateur keeps the money he makes on food and drinks. Sometimes, no admission is charged, and the nightclub owner pays Echols and the entertainers a fee.

He has done five shows at small nightclubs and at trade fairs, giving away about $200,000 worth of vitamins, eyeglasses, tickets to the Empire State Building observatory, pen and pencil sets and sessions at health clubs, to name a few.

"I think it's remarkable," said Norman Crider, owner of The Ballet Shop near Lincoln Center, the first to donate to Echols' cause. "His idea is so unique, and he himself is so wonderfully personable, upright and honest. And we've had good results with his promotions."

At about the same time that the shows began, he started his endorsement ads. The endorsements have become his bread and butter, and he has registered "The Singing Salesman" as a trademark.

He says his standards for endorsements are high. But how do people know that, especially when the Singing Salesman's fame is hardly on a par with that of Frank Sinatra?

"That's the problem, isn't it?" he says, smiling.

To overcome this small obstacle, he plans to do several radio ads in the next few months. He also envisions giveaway shows that fill Madison Square Garden, and an ultimate television game show.

"I think it would be great to do a game show, not like a television quiz show where five or six people get gifts, but where 60 to 70 percent of the audience comes away with prizes," he says.

These projects are on the far horizon, but Echols has a few more solid plans. He hopes to add 20 pounds to his 150-pound, 6-foot frame as "a promotion for a health club."

Beyond that, he plans a give-away show celebrating Spanish culture, although he does not speak the language. It will be, he suggests, a fantastic promotion, and he expects to follow it up with another, in French. He doesn't speak that language, either.

"If you exploit yourself intentionally, you're either really stupid or you're really bright," the Singing Salesman says.
