HEW Offered Extra $40 Million Outlay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's has told federal officials the state is willing to boost the amount of money earmarked for improvements in the University of North Carolina system's predominantly black campuses in an attempt to end the university's longstanding federal desegregation dispute.

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce said today that Hunt has made the offer to spend an additional $40 million to upgrade those campuses.

Enhancement of the five predominantly black campuses has been the major stumbling block in the negotiations between UNC and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare over desegregation of the system.

Pearce said that Hunt also told federal officials the university is not willing to budge on the issue of program duplication. UNC officials have resisted HEW suggestions that they merge or close programs duplicated on predominantly white and predominantly black campuses.

Pearce said the $40 million offer was discussed with two visiting HEW officials in Chapel Hill Wednesday. Hunt attended that meeting briefly, along with UNC officials.

"From talking with the university people, I believe this is what they are willing to do," Pearce said.

Pearce said Hunt and the university are now awaiting a response from HEW.

Meanwhile in the General Assembly, House Speaker Carl Stewart met with House committee chairmen this morning to brief them on the latest development in the negotiations.

Stewart said afterwards he believed a majority of legislators would go along with appropriating the extra money for the predominantly black campuses, if Hunt, UNC officials and the UNC Board of Governors support the step.

Stewart also said he believed state revenues would be sufficient for the state to appropriate as much as $40 million for improvements on the five campuses in the upcoming budget year, and still have enough money to provide a tax cut of about $40 million.

Stewart said if revenue estimates remain as high as he expects, there will be a "good prospect of settling the HEW matter in the $40 million range, and also granting tax relief in the $40 million range."

Stewart cautioned, however, that he had no assurances the state's settlement offer would be acceptable to HEW.

Stewart said he had asked university officials to present the legislature with a firm request for enhancement of the predominantly black campuses within 10 days.

"I think if the president of the consolidated university and the Board of Governors come to the legislature with something approaching a unanimous view that this is best for North Carolina, and the governor concurs in this, it would be difficult (for the legislature) to resist," Stewart said.

The added money could be provided through adjustments in the proposed budget now before the appropriations committees and would not require a separate bill, he said.

Stewart said comments by

HEW officials that there was a Friday deadline for major legislation were inaccurate. Stewart said he has suggested that all major bills be introduced by Friday, but said that was only an "informal suggestion."

The meeting on Wednesday, details of which are expected to be discussed at the UNC Board of Governors meeting Friday, involved Hunt, university President William Friday; David Tatel, head of HEW's office of civil rights; and Richard I. Beattie, executive assistant-HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

Economic Growth Rate Slows

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The nation's economy sputtered to its lowest growth rate in a year during the first three months of 1979, indicating the economy could be dipping toward a recession if the trend continues, government figures showed today.

The 0.7 percent increase in the gross national product in January through March was less than expected and was down sharply from a 6.9 percent rate of growth in the final quarter of 1978. The first-quarter rate was the lowest since a 0.1 percent decline in the same period last year.

The sharp slowdown in growth seemed certain to support the argument of G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, that economic growth already is slowing and that further measures to dampen the economy could plunge the nation into a serious recession.

While the 0.7 percent rate of growth was near the recession level of less than zero percent growth, Miller and top administration experts believe the economy will rebound at least partly from the low first-quarter growth, thus avoiding a recession in the near future.

The unusually severe winter in many parts of the country was at least partly to blame for the slow economic growth in the first quarter. But it probably also reflected efforts by the government to slow the economy through high interest rates and reduced federal spending. The administration is aiming for overall economic growth this year of about 2.2 percent, down from 4 percent last year but at a level it believes is necessary to help combat inflation.

The Commerce Department said in its GNP report that prices in the first quarter increased at an 8.7 percent annual rate, up from 8.2 percent in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The department said the slower economic growth in January through March was caused by an 0.3 percent decline in sales throughout the economy, a sharp turnaround from a 7.2 percent annual rate of increase in the final three months of 1978.

"The decrease ... reflected decreases in consumer expenditures for goods, construction outlays, net exports and government purchases," the department said.

The figures on economic growth were computed at an annual rate, meaning it would be the total growth for a year if the first-quarter levels were continued for an entire 12-month period.

The Commerce Department said the GNP, which is the total value of goods and services produced in the economy, was at an annual rate of $1,413.3 billion in the first quarter, after discounting for the effects of inflation.

Howell To Speak

ECU News Bureau

Dr. John M. Howell, chief academic administrative officer of East Carolina University since 1973, will be commencement speaker at ECU's 70th graduation ceremonies on May 11.

Howell announced last January that he will relinquish his duties as Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and return to his professorship in the Department of Political Science to teach, conduct research and write. A search committee is engaged in selection of a successor as vice chancellor.

Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer said on the occasion of Howell's decision to leave the vice chancellorship that Dr. Howell "is one of ECU's greatest assets."

Degrees will be conferred upon approximately 2,600 graduate and undergraduates at the Commencement in Ficklen Stadium.

I've seen a swarm of bees and wonder if there's anyone in the area who would know how to get them into a hive. S. S.

Carl Lupton says he would be glad to go any reasonable distance to pick up a swarm of bees anyone in the area sees.

Asked what one should do if he sees a swarm of honeybees, he said, "Please don't destroy them. They've been filling up on honey for their move and are very lethargic and not prone to sting. All you have to do is stay away and call someone who would like to have them."

Lupton's phone number is 752-6116.

N.C. Distillery Bill Advancing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would allow commercial liquor distilleries to operate in North Carolina cleared its first legislative hurdle today.

The House Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee gave the bill a unanimous favorable report and sent it to the full House.

No one spoke in opposition to the bill, which was introduced by Rep. George Hux, D-Halifax.

Marvin Speight, chairman of the state ABC Board, endorsed the proposal, saying it would provide a lot of potential for North Carolina.

"They are the most controlled manufacturing places in the world today," he told the committee. "I don't see any way we could have any trouble. If we can drink it here and we can buy it here, why can't we make it here."

According to state ABC officials, North Carolina is one of the last states in the country prohibiting the operation of commercial whiskey distilleries.

The bill would require any distillery that wants to locate in North Carolina to obtain a permit from the state ABC Board under essentially the same conditions set down for breweries and wineries.

However, the liquor distillery permit would be for 10 years rather than one.

The bill would allow distilleries to sell their product to local ABC boards and to retailers in other states.

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Byron R. White, author of the Supreme Court's latest word on libel law, disagrees with many members of the nation's news media over the impact of his work.

A 6-3 court majority led by Justice White ruled Wednesday that the Constitution's free press safeguards do not protect reporters and editors from being forced to explain how they prepared statements subsequently alleged to be libelous.

The court said public figures who sue for libel may probe the "editorial process" that led to the challenged statement.

Reporters and editors may be asked about their "state of mind" while they worked on the report, the court said.

The justices thus overturned an unprecedented appeals court ruling that such questions are unconstitutional. The case that led to the ruling is a still-pending $44.7 million libel suit against CBS and others brought by a retired Army colonel.

News media reaction to Wednesday's ruling was quick.

"The First Amendment was designed to give the press substantial protection in its uphill battle to investigate the workings of government," said W.H. Hornby, editor of the Denver Post and vice president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors. "The Burger court seems determined to erode those protections and burden the investigative efforts of the press."

York Times, said the decision will "hamper" investigative reporting because reporters now know they "are going to have to stand naked in front of the courts with respect to all their thought processes."

Other newspaper and broadcast executives said editors and reporters might be inhibited from discussing reporting projects candidly when at some future date they could be hauled into court to tell about those conversations.

But in his lengthy opinion, White said he found it "difficult to believe that error-avoiding procedure will be terminated or stifled simply because there is liability for culpable error and because the editorial process will itself be examined in the tiny percentage of instances in which error is claimed and litigation ensues."

Lebanese Militia Fire On UN Peacekeepers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese Christian militiamen, fighting to drive "foreign troops" out of the vest-pocket republic they proclaimed in southern Lebanon, wounded eight U.N. troops today in a 35-minute machine-gun and mortar attack on the international peace force's administrative headquarters in the tiny enclave.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis convened his Cabinet in emergency session today to consider "coercive action" against the Israeli-backed Christian rebels in the south.

Government sources said Sarkis was expected to order a court-martial that would try Maj. Saad Haddad, leader of the rebels, on treason charges and sentence him to death in absentia.

U.N. spokesman Hugo Rocha said six Irish soldiers and two Dutch officers were hurt when the Israeli-armed militiamen poured 4,000 machine-gun rounds and 150 rockets and mortar shells into the U.N. compound at Naqoura, three miles north of the Israeli-Lebanese border.

"It was a totally unprovoked attack," Rocha told The Associated Press in Jerusalem. "That is only the administrative unit."

Although their mandate permits them to defend themselves, the peacekeepers did not return fire, said Rocha.

Israeli officers arranged a cease-fire, Rocha reported, but the militiamen fired two more short machine-gun bursts later in the morning.

Preliminary reports said

two helicopters were damaged.

A Norwegian soldier was killed Wednesday during clashes Wednesday between the militiamen and peacekeeping troops of the United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, or UNIFIL, Rocha said.

Population Survey Of Greenville Is Underway

The city began conducting a population survey here Wednesday in an effort to determine a more accurate count of Greenville's population.

City Manager Ed Wyatt said that information gathered in the survey, which is expected to take approximately ten days, may be used by the state as the basis for distribution of state tax revenue.

Wyatt added that the city will also use the information for programs and service planning. He asked the cooperation of each person contacted in supplying survey information.

All information collected is strictly confidential and will be used by the city and the Division of State Budget for statistical purposes only, it was mentioned.

According to Wyatt, the survey form is relatively brief, usually taking no more than five minutes to complete. There is a slight possibility that a household may be contacted more than once, in order to check how accurately the enumerator recorded the information originally.

The city has hired seven student interns from East Carolina University as survey representatives. The survey interns will be contacting approximately 521 randomly selected households during the survey period by telephone or personal visit.

Wyatt said that all representatives will have proper identification to verify who they are. He said that if a citizen has doubts regarding a surveyor or the survey in general, the city manager's office should be contacted. Ben Shivar is survey coordinator and can be reached at 752-4137 from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Nutritionist Says Food For Elderly Should Handle Easy

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — If you're old — or young and hoping to make it into the so-called golden years — Dr. E. Neige Todhunter has some advice for living to the fullest and enjoying it. "Follow the best dietary knowledge available to you, then accept what happens in life with all its unknowns," said Ms. Todhunter, a visiting professor of nutrition at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine in Nashville, Tenn.

Speaking at a recent University of Minnesota conference on nutrition and the elderly, she said there is no way the public can protect itself from consuming food containing possible carcinogens, or cancer-causing elements.

"There are too many factors interacting," she said, but eating good nutritious food that includes fiber can give a person a leg up.

Ms. Todhunter has these suggestions about food for the elderly:

Don't puree it — "that's an insult to them." But make sure it is prepared so they can handle it easily.

Meat and lettuce should be served in small pieces that can be cut with a fork, she said. "People don't know what arthritis does to old people," making it impossible for many to handle both a knife and a fork.

Avoid high temperature cooking, so foods such as meat loaf do not develop a tough crust. Many older persons have dental problems that make it impossible for them to eat crusty food.

Ms. Todhunter said people do not pay enough attention to the value of a good thick soup, canned if necessary, that can be loaded with vegetables.

Since many elderly persons object to leftovers, call them "planned overs" instead, she said: make a dish for four rather than one or two, and freeze the unused portions for use at a later date.

An emergency shelf containing soups and other canned items also is advisable, she said, providing food for week-ends and other times when special dining areas for the elderly are closed and home-delivered meals unavailable. She also urged that food be home-delivered only to elderly people who are housebound. The mobile among them should get out and make eating a social event, she said.

There is no set pattern, no one perfect meal for the elderly, she said.

"There is a marked difference in individuals ... a difference in their size, shape, color, income, socio-economic status, lifestyle and heredity," she added. "They are individuals, the sum of their lifetime experiences."

She thinks not enough research is being done to determine nutrient requirements for the elderly, but better information may be available when this year's RDA (Recommended Dietary Allowances) tables are released in Washington.

Miss Dixon Entertained

On Saturday morning, Miss Robin Dixon, May bride-elect, was honored at a lingerie shower given by Mrs. Bob Conway, aunt of the bridegroom, and Miss Laura Conway, both of Virginia. The shower was held at the home of Mrs. John A. Conway Jr.

The honoree was presented a corsage of white daisies.

Hostesses greeted guests and introduced them to Miss Dixon, Mrs. Scott Dixon and Mrs. John Conway Jr.

The refreshment table was decorated with silver candleholders holding lighted white tapers. Spring floral arrangements used throughout the house carried out a rose motif.

Shower Given Be Bride-Elect

Miss Robin Dixon, bride-elect of Mark Conway, was entertained at a kitchen shower held at the home of Mrs. Mitchell Jones Friday. Hostesses were Miss Phyllis Conway, Mrs. John Conway III and Mrs. Jones.

The honoree was presented a corsage of white daisies tied with yellow ribbon.

Special guests were Mrs. Scott Dixon and Mrs. John A. Conway Jr., mothers of the bridal couple-elect, and the bridegroom-elect.

The dining table was covered with an imported French embroidered linen cloth and centered with a silk floral arrangement. A color scheme of yellow and white was used.

The honoree was remembered with a gift from the hostesses.

Road To Heaven Isn't Toll-Free

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young clergyman, new in the community and eager to do the best job possible.

I am told that a few years back you had an excellent answer for someone who wrote in complaining that every time he turned around the church hit him for money.

The writer asked you what the church did with all the money.

If you can find that letter, I would be most grateful if you ran it again.

TENNESSEE PREACHER

DEAR PREACHER: I found it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: We are not overly religious people, but we do like to go to church once in a while. It seems to me that every time we turn around in church we are hit for money. I thought religion was free. I realize that churches have to have some money, but I think it is getting to be a racket. Just what do churches do with all their money?

CURIOSUS

DEAR CURIOSUS: Even priests, ministers and rabbis must eat. Since they work full time at their tasks, the churches must support them. Staff, professional choir members and musicians must also be paid. Buildings must be maintained, heated, lighted and beautified. (And, of course, first they must be built!) Custodial staff must eat and feed their families. Most churches engage in philanthropic work (aid to needy, missions and education); hence, they have their financial obligations. Even orchids, contrary to folklore, do not live on air. Churches can't live on air, either. Religion, like water, may be free, but when they pipe it to you, you've got to help pay for the piping. And the pipe!

DEAR ABBY: When my son, his wife and their baby come to my home for dinner I always put newspapers under the baby's high chair. My son told me that his wife will not allow him to place newspapers under the baby's high chair at home because it is "low-class." She claims that it's all right when feeding animals, but not children!

Abby, I certainly would never put my grandchildren in the same class with animals. I'm only trying to protect my dining room rug.

I have placed newspapers under high chairs with all my children and now my five grandchildren, and I've never had any complaints until now.

Am I out of line? Or is my daughter-in-law?

SOCORRO, N.M.

DEAR SOCORRO: She is. And you may place THIS under the baby's high chair.

DEAR ABBY: I got a big kick out of that etiquette-conscious couple who asked about the socially acceptable way to list their names on their mailbox. Since they have obviously chosen to thumb their noses at convention by living together without marriage, it seems a little ridiculous to fret about the "proper" way to do anything.

CONVENTIONAL IN BRIDGEPORT

DEAR ABBY: The letter about getting rid of door-to-door religious pitchmen reminded me of how I got rid of the first team I encountered.

I had just moved from New York to California, after growing up under two religious influences — Episcopalian and Quaker.

A young mother, I was having one of those hectic days. The baby had just thrown a bowl of Pablum on the floor, the older boy was smearing the dog with honey, the cat had just given birth to kittens on the clean clothes in the linen closet, and the vacuum cleaner had given up the ghost. At that point the doorbell rang. I answered it and was faced with two obese women, the daughter as wide as the mother. The mother, with no introduction whatsoever, sang out, "How would you like to live on this earth forever?"

My instant response was: "GOD FORBID!"

Talk about being stopped cold! They were totally speechless!

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

At least a dozen times during a year, I will hear from a reader who wonders what a superficial column on Monday dieters, oversexed coat hangers, legally dead football enthusiasts, and siblings who argue for a living, is doing in a newspaper.

It does seem incongruous — in the midst of global wars, energy crises, unemployment, rising food costs and nuclear threats — that my prime concern is taking the static electricity out of my underwear.

On occasion when the criticism gets through to me, I pull out a letter written by a surgeon in Derry, N.H. In it, he describes the cardiac operating suite in a general hospital.

"I stare in wonder like any visitor. "The blood sweeps rich and red through the bypass pump, its pulsating progress checked constantly by the 'pump driver,' the technician entrusted with this flow of life. Other artisans huddle over their machines and monitor the rhythms of existence.

"The knives flash in the brilliance of the overhead lights. Clamp, tie, cut.

"The hours go by. The surgeons stand like storks over the patient and by their side leans the nurse orchestrating with now weary gestures the clamor and chatter of the instruments, the sounds of survival.

"All is science. Technology is god. The room is a cathedral to the detachment, the unreality and the impersonality of modern life. And to life's inconsistencies. "Because there, over there in the corner, beside the stainless steel supplies, the burnished food sinks, the abundant accumulations of the systems of surgery, there on the notice board with all its checklists and warnings and instructions to those who worship at this temple, is stuck a piece of newspaper, the down-to-earth, back-to-basics benediction of the Erma Bombeck columns.

"I call it re-entry to reality. A welcome home."

I've read that letter a thousand times. Maybe I need reassuring more than my readers that this day a new baby will utter his first words, "Make him stop looking at me," a bird will get sauced on pyracantha berries, and my mother will duly report that she became constipated ... in Mexico.

More Non-Farm Jobs For N.C. Are Indicated

RALEIGH — Business and industrial expansion will add almost 340,000 new nonagricultural jobs to North Carolina's economy between 1976 and the end of 1982, according to a new study by the state Employment Security Commission.

This is an average growth of 2.7 percent a year for the period. During the same six years, non-farm employment in the nation is expected to increase by about 13.7 million or at a rate of 2.9 percent a year.

Taking into account replacement needs as well as new jobs, the study estimates that a total of about 120,600 jobs will open up in the state in various nonagricultural occupations during each of the six years.

The study, which covered job needs in 1,500 occupations, estimates that a total of nonfarm employment in North Carolina will rise from 2,067,630 in 1976 to 2,406,940 at the end of 1982.

The study, conducted by the ESC's Bureau of Employment Security Research in cooperation with the BLS and the Employment and Training Administration of the U. S. Labor Department, states that employment increases should be seen in most of North Carolina's major industry groups through 1982.

The study also noted that two major groups, lumber and tobacco, should likely see a continual decline in employment with the replacement of more and more manual operations with mechanization.

Additionally, 24-hour on-call coverage will be maintained in the Columbia area, as has been the case previously. It is expected that this physician coverage will support the already-installed x-ray unit provided by the Northeastern Rural Health Development Association.

Dr. DeVine, originally from Ohio, received his M. D. degree from Ohio State University. His family practice residency was completed in Florida in 1978. For the past year he has worked in emergency medicine. He and his wife, Cindy, have two children.

A Signed Agreement Is Best

There have been a number of reports of developments in the HEW-UNC higher education dispute in the past few days. A newspaper reported HEW might agree to the expenditure of $40 to $50 million on predominately black campuses. There were also reports Gov. Hunt might agree to giving up on a tax rebate in order to finance improvements on the black campuses. From Chapel Hill there were expressions of doubt that any settlement is imminent, and consideration continued of a lawsuit against HEW to block a cut-off of funds. Whatever develops, we hope UNC officials will insist on a signed document from HEW that any expenditures agreed upon will meet HEW expectations. There should be no philosophy of if-UNC-does-this-we-will-see about the future. Anything less than a firm and binding agreement can mean the UNC System can be hounded by HEW forever.

Also Tragedies In Highway Freedoms

Automobiles and modern highways have given us a wonderful freedom to travel, but they have also been the cause of major personal tragedies. That was brought home once again Monday when the wives of two eminent British men and a Greensboro man were killed in a grinding crash at Williamston. The two British brothers, one a member of the English Civil Aviation Authority and the other an authority on group child care, were critically injured in the crash. For the two Keith-Lucas couples, the day was to have been an outing at Kitty Hawk and a visit to the historic Wright Brothers Memorial. The outing ended abruptly in a horrible collision that is all too familiar on our highways. The families can be certain that they have the sympathy of all of us who live in the east-central section of the state.

Little Support By Public

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It's a long — and littered — road ahead for an effective anti-litter law in North Carolina. Until the general public gets fed up and demands legislative action, not much is likely to happen. Meanwhile, most members of the General Assembly will continue to hear from their friends and neighbors the merchants and drink bottlers and distributors who are opposed to a law requiring a deposit on every container sold, says the sponsor of such a proposal. "There is no leadership support in North Carolina for this. They're not willing to stick their necks out," says State Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry.

Again
And in the face of almost certain defeat, vowing to keep pushing his bottle bill every session of the General Assembly in which he serves; hoping the drink bottlers won't get together and try to have him defeated in coming elections. There are laws against throwing litter to the ground, but obviously notable more from their lack of enforcement than their effectiveness. Bottles and cans do not constitute all of the litter: paperbacks, hamburger boxes, chicken packs, and dozens of other hallmarks of our throwaway lifestyles abound. But glass, metal or plastic cans and bottles are the most visible, the least biodegradable, and the most sizable portion of the junk, Diamont believes. His proposal is simple: any drink container must be marked as to its returnable value and the buyer must pay that deposit. Typically, the charge on a container which won't be used again (nonreturnable type) would be a nickel. Given the "throwaway ethic" which pervades society these days, many people won't care about the five cents, and will toss the container out the car window. But, those individuals who want to can scour the roadsides for cans and bottles and claim the refund simply by presenting the containers to any dealer or reclamation center. Major opposition comes from retailers required by the proposed law to redeem, sort, store and return to distributors the collected litter. Retailers would get a 20 percent "profit" for handling the stuff.

BILL NOBLITT

On The Road
"We have got to make a decision in the face of retailer opposition. You either want it of the side of the road ... or you want it in the store." Diamont reasons. As for the argument that bottle and can makers will lose jobs as a result of the law, results in states where the system is already working do not back that up, Diamont says. An alternative earlier rejected by the North Carolina General Assembly is a tax against all distributors of materials which constitute litter, with the money used to educate the public, collect trash and enforce anti-litter laws. In states using that approach, Diamont says, the result has largely been use of funds to build more governmental bureaucracy and collect more taxes with no appreciable reduction in litter. "I think the general public is fed up with litter, if they would just let it be known to their legislators. And I'm convinced it will take this free enterprise approach — people can make money helping clean up litter — to clean up our environment," Diamont says.

How To Lose Friends

WASHINGTON — Last week's dust-up between the United States and South Africa provides one more dismal chapter in the chronicle of Jimmy Carter's blunders abroad. The president is about to forfeit the friendship our only significant allies in the whole of southern Africa in order to cozy up to various gangs of Marxist terrorists. The story baffles understanding. The spy plane episode was resolutely viewed in Pretoria as quite simply the last straw. Of course our embassy plane was engaged in espionage. The only credible thing that can be said of Mr. Carter is that he did not deny it. The plane's mission was closely to photograph certain nuclear facilities that had been turned up by a satellite scanner. If this inquisitiveness could have been viewed in isolation, as a regrettable but certainly not unusual breach of manners, the incident might have passed with no more than a strong protest. The very blatancy of our spying expedition, coming on top of everything else since the first of the year, was more than the South African government could swallow. They expelled three of our people; we retaliated by expelling two of theirs; Prime Minister Pieter Botha demanded an apology; Mr. Carter told him to go fish. Temporarily, there matters stand. But only temporarily. The episode of the spy plane was merely the trigger. The explosion resulted from what is seen in Pretoria as a renegeing by the United States on its commitment to a settlement in South West Africa. Reneging is too kind a word. Let us substitute "double cross."

A Debt Meant Prison

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MOUNT HOLLY, N.J. (AP) — If you have not yet paid your income tax and feel nervous, go visit Nick Kurti. You will feel better. "They used to toss people in here who owed somebody as little as one dollar," Kurti said. "Nowadays, with credit cards and all, who could escape? I can't conceive of a worse fate." Kurti leads the tourist tours at one of the last remaining debtors' prisons in the land, and his conception is accurate. It is a wretched place: dank stone walls 20 inches thick, ugly old iron bars, thick oaken door with a foot-long key. A dungeon.

It was designed in 1810 by Victor Hugo — no, according to the brochure, by a Philadelphia architect named Robert Mills — and was the most elegant penal institution, in the current designation, of its day. Now it is on the National Historic Register. A grand slammer. The horror is that it served as the Burlington County jail from that nostalgic era until just 14 years ago. Unchanged except for the addition of bare light bulbs and equally elaborate plumbing, it rendered 155 years of continuous service to the family of man. Its alumni association numbers in the thousands. It includes an insignificant draftee at nearby Ft. Dix, Albert DeSalvo, who went on to become the Boston Strangler, and it includes Doc Jones, who hated to see the old lockup go out of business. "Everybody knew Doc Jones," Nick Kurti said. "He used to hang around the river at Florence, where I grew up. He slept here and there, and North Carolina's official World Fair hosts and hostesses visited Greenville this morning viewed various points of interest in the city, were entertained at an informal reception at the home of Col. and Mrs. E.G. Flanagan and later continued on their tour of the state which will be completed this week. Those in the visiting party were Miss Mariam Converse, chief hostess of Aberdeen, Miss Anna Corinne Jones of Nashville, Miss Frances Roughton of Old Fort, Miss Anna Bellamy Williamson of Wilmington, Paul Leroy Lambert of Cherokee, George Clarence Courtney of Lenoir, Voit Gilmore of Winston-Salem and U. Benton Blalock of Wadesboro.

One of the questions discussed last night at a special meeting of the Greenville Board of Aldermen, called by Mayor M.K. Blount, was one concerning an orderly system for numbering houses in the city. After the board had denied permission to J.A. Miller of Rocky Mount to mark the street numbers on the curb in front of houses, the board instructed the ordinance committee to look into the possibility of carrying out a systematic numbering program and to report back at a later meeting.

Where To Hold Summit?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The struggle between the White House and the Kremlin over where Jimmy Carter will meet Leonid Brezhnev in the much-delayed summit conference is heating up every day, with no quick solution in sight. Holding the whip hand is Brezhnev. He can genuinely plead poor health as a bar to travel. Soviet diplomats here have bluntly informed the White House that the ailing Soviet president, although only 72 years old, is under doctor's orders not to fly. That means a summit that can fairly easily be reached by train: read Geneva or Vienna. But the freedom of Brezhnev's whip hand is restricted by the fact that it is the Russian's turn to come to the U.S., in return for Richard Nixon's summit trip to see Brezhnev in 1974, and Gerald Ford's to Vladivostok also in 1974. Carter's top political aides and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski have warned him that an agreement to meet Brezhnev on Soviet soil would be exceedingly politically damaging to Carter. Indeed, they warn it might even hurt in the Senate SALT debate. But there's another reason Carter won't go to Moscow: the juicy prospect of a pre-election summit there in 1980. If Carter met Brezhnev on Soviet soil in 1979, a repeat in 1980 would be out of the question. With a Brezhnev flight to Washington or Alaska now out, the likeliest prospect seems to be Vienna, much easier to get to than Geneva. But it's not decided and some Carter advisers have been talking up Warsaw, Poland, homeland of Brzezinski's family. The problem with Warsaw is twofold: for Carter, its position as capital city of the Warsaw Pact would make it embarrassing; for Brezhnev, it would be unthinkable to meet Carter in a Soviet satellite after Carter had refused to go to Moscow.

It may not qualify as a "crash" diet, but Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's new, abstemious eating habits have reduced his bulk from 222 to 210 pounds in the last three weeks. That is not enough, say Kennedy staffers who are pushing him to get down to at least 200 pounds. The senator's breakfast is now

Other Editors Say Dictator's Fall

(Greensboro Daily News)
As thousands of Ugandans cheered ecstatically, strongman Idi Amin's eight-year reign of terror collapsed last week before the invading columns of Tanzanian soldiers. For the sake of human decency and humanitarianism, Amin's fall from power is a belated blessing for Uganda's 12 million citizens. When he seized power in 1971, Amin was but a poorly educated army sergeant with delusions of grandeur. By 1976, Amin, who fancied sleek limousines and festooned himself with colorful military medals, had proclaimed himself president for life. His hero, incredibly, was Adolph Hitler. Amin unleashed a wave of bloody horror that reportedly sent tens of thousands to their death, untold thousands to political prisons, and thousands more across the borders into exile. His erratic behavior, moreover, gave rise to questions about his sanity. In 1973, the United States withdrew all economic aid to Uganda and severed diplomatic relations. In 1977 the Commonwealth conference condemned Uganda for its "disregard for the sanctity of human life." Even within the Organization of African States, an alliance that includes its own supply of strongmen, Amin had become a pariah. The first to recognize the new provisional government of Yussufu Lule last week, in fact, were Tanzania, Botswana and Mozambique. Although Amin's tumble from power appears irrevocable, he is, at this writing, still alive and hiding with remnants of his army in the remote regions of the countryside, claiming in radio broadcasts that his army still controls the country. The new provisional government, in its own broadcasts, has issued orders that the dictator must be found and sent to the gallows. Although the ethical questions raised by one country invading another are not to be overlooked, it would seem that Tanzania's invasion of Uganda — and the relief it is expected to bring to millions imperiled by a blood-stained dictator — could be countenanced as a rescue mission.

BROTHERHOOD OF MAN
Saint Paul, preaching to the Athenians, declared, "God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." He then adds, "We are the offspring of God ... in Him we live, move, and have our being." Paul makes plain that human beings are unique among God's creatures, made in His own image. Whether we want to admit it or not, we are all brothers. When we fly at one another's throats, we are not only committing violence, but are outraging God's original intention that we should dwell peaceably within our own habitations. We should live our lives in and through Him, bear patiently the differences between ourselves and others, and combine everyone into a great army of well-disposed persons committed to justice and mercy. God looked upon His creation in the beginning and called it good. If it is bad, we have made it so. Elisha Douglass

Economy Grows Despite Cloud

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The small business outlook is down. So is the view from the towers of big business. The banks say the economy's forward motion will slow. Various consultants raise their odds on a recession. No surprise, then, that the popular measurements of consumer behavior show ordinary Americans worrying about the future, and comparing their lives unfavorably with the past. Meanwhile, the economy ignores it all, seemingly living a life of its own. It expands. What began in March 1975 is now destined to live at least 50 months, making it one of the longest this century. And one of the most unusual. Unusual for several reasons, one of them being that so few people really believe the nation's output of goods and services has been expanding. If it has been, they ask, where in the world has it gone? Up in smoke, consumed by inflation rather than by consumers, is one explanation, but a partial one only. Living standards really have risen, measured by economics. Measured in attitudes, they haven't. Those attitudes are measured every month by at least one of the popular consumer opinion firms: the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center, Sindlinger & Co., the Conference Board and Citibank. And those surveys have for many months been sending out bearish signals, based on the announced intention of consumers to pull in their credit cards and renounce their buying ways. Promises, promises. When will determination be translated to action? From early in the second half of 1977 to the end of 1978 the Michigan index fell, except for minor, brief recoveries. In the 1978 final quarter it plunged. Since the economy continued to expand since that time, contrary to the suggestion of the index, what is the explanation? The Michigan people say that consumers bought in anticipation of higher prices; that they might not have wanted to buy but they did buy because it was the lesser of evils. Albert Cox, president of Merrill Lynch Economics Inc., is one of those who has been forced to change the timing of his forecast, but in so doing he has raised the odds on it coming. Though it's exact timing remains an open question, he told clients during the past month, the odds are now higher than before that a downturn will occur within a year. He gives it an 85 percent chance. While believing that a moderate recession by midyear is the most probable, Cox has also raised his odds to 35 percent from 30 on the chance of a deeper and later recession occurring by yearend. No matter that there timing has been off, and very badly so, the surveyors of big business and small, the economic consultants, the banks, and the consumer forecasters do not feel the need to apologize. The downturn is coming they say. You just wait and see.

Nuke Plants Endorsed By Legislative Panel

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Nuclear generating plants are the most economical way of producing electricity now available and must continue to be used in North Carolina, a legislative panel has concluded.

The House and Senate Utilities Review Committee came down firmly on the side of nuclear power in its annual report issued Wednesday. At the same time, the committee had praise for the state Utilities Commission's public staff, created by the 1977 General Assembly.

"Nuclear power as an energy option must be implemented as a matter of survival," said the panel's report, adopted in a joint meeting.

"Whether our state and nation proceed to grow and develop is dependent upon whether we can continue to obtain the required energy," it said. "This continuation of energy supply must be as free as possible from outside coercion, extortion and exploitation."

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the House committee, said the committee reached its conclusion before the recent nuclear power plant accident at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg, Pa. But he said the accident did not change the panel's outlook.

"We came down on the side of nuclear power because we don't think we have very many options," he said.

The report concluded that "conventional nuclear-fired generation of electric power is the most economical and clear-that he was practicing what he had preached the night before: conserve energy.

Instead, Carter apparently gave the idea no thought at all and proceeded with business as usual. Likewise, on his Easter weekend trip to Georgia the president could have taken an energy-saving train to make a symbolic point. Instead, he flew in Air Force One.

The disdainful attitude toward his own appeals to reduce energy consumption raises this question: If the president himself does not cut down on energy consumption, why would he expect anyone else to do so? The White House response — that a solar heating system is being installed for part of the west wing — is ridiculed as causing Jimmy Carter not the slightest personal discomfort.

Boosting Haig

The first Haig-for-president office has been quietly opened in Chicago by a successful composer-conductor who stresses that his "Citizens for Haig" has been launched without the approval of Gen. Alexander M. Haig, the outgoing NATO commander.

Indeed, Mark D. Camphouse, who told us he had never met Haig, said he had carefully not informed the general about his new committee. Some Republican politicians have shown interest, responding both with letters and an occasional unsolicited check to Camphouse's first letter boosting Haig. Camphouse sent it to members of Congress, governors and other leading Republicans.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, for example, is encouraging Camphouse's effort. Boschwitz has not endorsed Haig, but he told us he places Haig in first or second spot today in terms of his own choice for the 1980 presidential nominee. Actually, the general, who will retire as supreme commander of NATO and from the Army on June 30, is at best a very dark horse in the crowded Republican presidential stable.

rest, currently available source of power."

The panel recommended passage of a resolution, already introduced in the House, saying that North Carolina should accept for permanent storage only nuclear waste generated by electric utilities doing business in the state.

The report said since the establishment of the public staff the state Utilities Commission has held electric company rate increases in line with the general inflation rate.

Just as the spy plane episode might have been glossed over, the monitoring of SWAPO forces might have been negotiated. But there have been other incidents also. Mr. Carter, inexplicably, has joined in demanding that South Africa relinquish control of Walvis Bay to the new Namibia. Mr. Carter, through U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, has broken an understanding on the number of U.N. troops to be assigned to a peace-keeping mission. Our president has thrown his influence at every step behind the Marxist forces in South West Africa precisely as he has embraced the Marxist forces seeking to shoot their way to power in Rhodesia.

If there were positive advantages to the United States in the president's course, it would be one thing. No such advantages can be perceived. In Rhodesia, Mr. Carter may yet wind up with an extension of Communist influence over that last bastion of British inheritance and tradition; he may yet wind up with primary responsibility for a bloody civil war and another brutal dictatorship as in Mozambique and Angola. If Walvis Bay falls under the control of SWAPO revolutionaries, our fleet will find no friendly port for another 800 miles to Capetown. Walvis Bay could become a major Soviet naval base before we know it.

The prospects are unbelievably gloomy. If the Tories win in England, that would help; some measure of firmness and reason might be restored. But so long as Mr. Carter plays Trilby to Andrew Young's Svengali, we will continue to lose friends in southern Africa and to waste our influence on a gaggle of tinpot dictators who know an Uncle Sucker when they see him.

every winter the poor old guy did something to get himself put in jail. He had no place else to go.

"I caught some tourists chipping at the peeling paint in one of the cells. They almost erased where Doc Jones had scratched his name. I stopped them just in time."

Nick Kurti, 59, retired from his job at a rope and cable manufacturing firm 10 years ago, after three heart attacks. The job as assistant curator at the debtors' prison museum, he says, was literally just what the doctor ordered.

It gives him time to interest himself by idly poring over yellowing jail registers, discovering who has dwelt in these ancient walls, and why.

"I do like to chat with the old timers who drop by. They tell me things about this place that aren't in the brochure.

"For instance, we had one sheriff who dealt with troublemakers by making it easy for them to escape. The sheriff would wait for him on the other side of the wall, catch him, and send him off to the state penitentiary for jailbreaking."

If the most illustrious inmate of the Burlington County jail tried to bust out, it has escaped notice. It is known only that he did not like the joint.

That would be James Wilson, who did a stretch in a debtor's cell until he could come up with $300 owed to one Gratz, of Philadelphia, whom Wilson's son finally paid off.

It availed Wilson not a bit that he was a justice of the United States Supreme Court at the time of his jailing, or gaoling.

Competency Testing Strongly Backed By Poll Of Tar Heels

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — People across the state overwhelmingly support competency testing, according to a poll conducted by the University of North Carolina School of Journalism.

The Carolina Poll, conducted last month, shows 82 percent of those questioned favored the reading and mathematics tests required for high school graduation.

Among blacks questioned, 82 percent supported the tests, 15 percent opposed them and 3 percent were undecided.

The poll was conducted by students at the UNC journalism school. They asked 513 persons, "Do you support or oppose the statewide reading and math tests now required for high school graduation?"

Thirteen percent said they opposed the test, and 5 percent were undecided.

The greatest support was found in persons under age 30. Of the 133 persons in that age group questioned, 91 percent said they supported the test and 9 percent said they were opposed.

The tests got the least support from women. Of the 275 women of all ages and races questioned, 78 percent said they favored the test.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who first proposed the tests for the state's students, said the results "demonstrate that the people of North Carolina strongly support rigorous standards in the public schools. I'm pleased by this indication of widespread public support for our testing program."

Dr. James J. Gallagher, chairman of the state Competency Test Commission, said, "The opposition (to testing) is a very tiny voice."

"Almost everywhere we (commission members) go, you do get a sense of the rightness of the whole thing," he said of the tests.

The test has been criticized by several black groups, among them the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The Greensboro field director for the NAACP opposed the tests in a recent speech to the Senate Education Committee.

"We see this as a wholesale conspiracy to deny blacks and other disadvantaged students an equal education and (to) help preserve racial segregation," said Carolina Coleman, the field director.

About 25 percent of the black students who took the reading section of the test last fall failed, and about 34 percent of the blacks failed the math section. That compared with an overall failure rate of 10 percent on the reading section and 15 percent on the math.

Beginning with the class of 1980 — this year's juniors — all students must pass the two-part test before they can get high school diplomas.

The Carolina Poll has not been officially released, and Robert Stevenson of the Journalism School, who supervised the students, declined to comment.

Among other findings of the poll were that those with a college education gave an 85 percent approval rating for the tests, while those adults with grade school educations gave 81 percent support.

The highest rate of disapproval was voiced by those in the mountain region and by persons in the 30-59 age group. Sixteen percent of each group disapproved of the testing requirement. The disapproval rate was also higher — 15 percent — among persons living in rural areas.

Celebrated Arrival Of A Chinese Ship In U.S.

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The first Chinese cargo ship to sail into a U.S. port in 30 years is taking on corn from the Midwest while officials hold trade talks about the reopened shipping lane between the superpowers.

The 637-foot Liu Lin Hai docked in Seattle harbor Wednesday as an escort fire boat shot festive jets of water skyward and a Navy band blared tunes like "Jesus Christ Superstar" and "Put Your Hand In The Hand Of The Man Who Stilled The Water."

The red Chinese flag with its five gold stars flapped from the ship's stern, while the Stars and Stripes flew from the starboard yardarm, a place of honor.

Chinese crew members snapped photographs from the ship's railing of awaiting dignitaries and news media representatives clicked back.

After speeches, dignitaries mounted the steep, wobbly gangplank to the captain's suite for a feast of Chinese hors d'oeuvres, shrimp, beef, liquor and Tsingtao beer.

The vessel is the first ship flying a Chinese flag to berth in a U.S. port since 1949, when communist forces of Mao Tse-tung defeated the nationalists of Chiang Kai-shek.

With a crew of 43, the merchant ship carried only seawater ballast on its 20-day voyage across the Pacific. About 30,000 tons of corn from Minnesota, Nebraska and Iowa will be loaded on the vessel before it leaves directly for Shanghai early next week, said Capt. Zhang Jie.

Further Chinese sailings to the United States "will depend on need," and none is scheduled right now, said Chai Zemin, Chinese ambassador to the United States, as he waited on the dock for the ship.

After the visiting ship's officers clambered down a gangplank to be swept to a reception line, Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., called the docking "the beginning of a long, significant step of good will and trade."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a frequent visitor to China, called the ship's arrival a "special and festive occasion, which in the years ahead we expect to be a routine occasion."

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams told the crew, "We hope the ship will carry not only grain but friendship from the hearts of our people back to China."

Relations between the two countries were normalized Jan. 1. Barriers to direct shipping between China and the United States were dropped March 2 when Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal reached agreement with China on the repayment of American assets frozen in China since 1949.

Even before the Blumenthal trip, a private trade pact was reached between Lykes Bros. Steamship Co. of New Orleans and China Ocean Shipping, a government-owned company.

A Lykes ship, the Letitia Lykes, arrived March 19 at Shanghai.

An estimated 250 Pitt County firemen attended a supper sponsored by Coatal Chemical Co. here last night to express the firm's thanks to the men for a job well done in combatting a February 19 fire at the chemical firm's plant just South of Greenville on the Tar Road.

The fire caused the evacuation of several hundred people in the area of the blaze and caused problems because the run-off of water used to battle the blaze was laced with chemicals from the site.

Coastal officials said, however, that cleanup of the site is almost complete.

niversary cake will be cut and served.

The Rev. E. Gordon Conklin, the present pastor, invites the public to attend.

Fire Dept. To Sponsor Supper

The Eastern Pines Fire Department will sponsor a chicken pastry supper Saturday from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m. at the fire department.

See Big Vote For Carteret

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Heavy newspaper, radio and television advertising should result in a large turnout as Carteret County determines its preference in Friday's liquor-by-the-drink referendum.

County elections officials predict a turnout of up to 70 percent of the 19,119 registered voters.

Both sides are using campaigns similar to those used in previous statewide referendums. But one new approach by the opposition was a newspaper ad in the Carteret County News-Times that showed two identical liquor bottles, one with a $5 tag on it and the other with a $30 tag.

The accompanying text said the cost of drinking outside of the home would increase by $25 based on per-drink costs in a lounge.

Dr. Charles Nicholson, a local surgeon, said his anti-mixed-drinks organization had sought to arouse interest in the referendum. He said they worked to bring in concerned citizens in opposition, instead of the churches. "We didn't want an emotional campaign," he said.

And opponents are happy voting is set for the coming weekend, the traditional tourist season kickoff.

Nicholson said the sight of long lines at local establishments this week could work to the drys' advantage. "There are many folks here who don't want any more people," he said.

That factor has ruined the wets' campaign. The statewide push for the measure has been based on increasing tourism and convention business.

Earl Taylor, chairman of the group supporting the issue, said, "We're fighting a good battle. It looks good; not a landslide, but an awfully big vote."

Stamp-Collecting Hobby Inexpensive

"Soaring prices and inflation may discourage some pastimes, but Americans have found that stamp collecting is still relatively inexpensive," Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills of Greenville said Wednesday.

The most popular hobby in the world, stamp collecting, has attracted more than 20 million collectors in the United States alone, Mills said.

He added that the number of stamp collectors of all ages has been growing faster than the population, and pointed out that national postal sales to collectors have grown four-fold in the 1970's.

"The fascination of the American public with stamps and postal products has never been keener," Postmaster Mills noted, pointing to national postal philatelic sales which now approach $100 million annually.

"A prospective stamp collector can get started with the fun and educational rewards of stamp collecting by making one trip to his local post office, station or branch," Mills explained. "Philatelic starter aids available there include a miniature encyclopedia about the world of philately, mint sets of recent commemorative and special stamp issues, and topical collecting kits on a variety of subjects."

The Postmaster's comments were made in conjunction with a two-week "What's Philately" nationwide program now under way at local postal outlets.

High Water Expected By Pearl River's Downstream Residents

By RON HARRIST
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Downstream residents looked for higher ground today as the rampaging Pearl River moved relentlessly toward the Gulf of Mexico after causing an estimated half billion dollars damage to the state's capital city and leaving some 17,000 persons homeless.

"We've still got a serious situation here," Viva Polk, a spokeswoman for the city of Jackson, said Wednesday. "Our homes and businesses are still flooded, we've got thousands still out of their homes and we're having to conserve our drinking water and electricity because of damage to equipment."

Meanwhile, in Alabama, the bulging Alabama and Tombigbee rivers sent many persons living near their banks packing to the homes of friends, relatives or Red Cross shelters. President Carter declared the state a major disaster area late Wednesday.

And in Southeast Texas, hundreds of residents chased from their homes in Conroe faced the prospect of more flooding today after a stubborn thunderstorm poured more than 8 inches of rain on the area Wednesday, in-undating schools, houses, businesses and highways.

Forty miles downstream from Jackson, tiny Georgetown lay deserted Wednesday as the Pearl advanced. A spokesman for Mississippi Power and Electric Co. said the flooding had cut electrical power to about 160 customers in the community, and telephone connections into the town were sporadic Wednesday night.

Farther south in Columbia, Miss., Marion County Civil Defense Director Jim Thornhill said 1,500 persons had fled their homes in the face of record floodwaters.

"Everything is cool as a cucumber in Columbia. Now we're just waiting for it to happen," said Thornhill. "We're sitting back and waiting for the inevitable."

A crest of 27.5 feet is expected Saturday at Columbia, and the river will probably peak at 34.5 feet at Monticello the same day.

"The rising water — it has stopped," Jackson Mayor Dale Danks said Wednesday after the Pearl began dropping from its record crest of 42.25 feet. By 9 p.m., it had fallen to 41.4 feet and was still going down.

But hundreds of homeowners still were kept from their ruined houses in Jackson as the waters began slowly to recede. Downtown Jackson, where pumps whined behind sandbag levees to keep water out of the central telephone company building, remained off limits to all but persons providing essential services.

Interstate 55, the major north-south route between Memphis and New Orleans, remained closed as floodwater covered lanes in spots.

Some 200 persons were lodged at a Red Cross shelter in Selma, where the Alabama crested Wednesday at 55.34 feet, 10 feet above flood stage, and began to recede. About 300 others took refuge at the homes of family or friends, officials said.

At Demopolis, the Tombigbee rose to 72.2 feet, but the Army Corps of Engineers was still predicting a crest of between 73 and 74 feet before today.

Ethnic Russians Seen Becoming A Minority

By SETH MYDANS
ALMA ATA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — With the Soviet Union's Asiatic population exploding faster than that of any other race, a Central Asian demographer says local Kazakh youths should be encouraged not to intermarry with Russians.

Edyge Turkebayev, a Kazakh himself, said in an interview that 95 percent of native Kazakhs in the Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan intermarry with each other, rather than with the Russians who make up nearly half the republic's population.

Russian racial policy in this nation of more than 100 ethnic backgrounds is of particular interest now at the close of a census that is expected for the first time to put Russians in the minority in their own land.

In the last census, in 1970, Russians made up 53.4 percent of the population, and since then the Central Asian peoples have led a non-Russian population explosion with a growth rate about 2 percent faster than that of the country as a whole, according to Turkebayev's figures.

million is expected to double. Meanwhile, the ethnic Russian population, which stands at about 130 million, has reached close to zero population growth, despite vigorous efforts to ignite a Russian population explosion.

Turkebayev did not explain his preference for racially unmixed Kazakh marriages, except to say "we consider it an honorable thing."

"This is a good event, and it is necessary to encourage it," said Turkebayev, who is director of Kazakhstan's Institute of Economy.

"Naturally, if 5 or 6 percent have feelings of love between the races and want to join together, there is nothing bad in it," he said. "We have no prejudices."

According to the projections of another demographer, G.A. Bondarskaya, the populations of the four Central Asian nationalities of Uzbekistan, Tadzhikistan, Turkmenia and Kirgizia are expected to triple by the year 2000 to a total of more than 40 million in this nation that now numbers 260 million.

The Kazakh population of 5.3

The subject of race is a sensitive one in the U.S.S.R., and Turkebayev made a point of repeating the official Soviet line that "there is no nationality question in the Soviet Union."

He declined to speculate on the future effects of an exploding Asiatic population, in a country governed mostly by Russians, other than to say Central Asia would grow in economic importance.

Avers Suffocated Child Was Doomed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Wake County medical examiner testified Wednesday that blood poisoning from untreated wounds would have killed a five-year-old girl had she not suffocated first.

child would have been able to cough up the blood.

Another source of infection was a loose clot of blood and pus on her skull, Kaasa said. "The clot was formed as a result of hemorrhaging from a blunt force injury," he said.

Dr. Laurin J. Kaasa testified that Cathy Spence's body was filled with blood poisoning and infection from untreated wounds. But he said she died from suffocation, caused by a blood clot in her throat.

Kaasa also testified the child's face appeared scalded and that two ribs were broken. He also said the girl was covered with untreated cuts and scars at the time of her death.

The child's mother, Margaret Catherine Mapp, and her stepfather, Charles Thomas Mapp III, are on trial in Wake County Superior Court on second-degree murder charges.

Radiologist Julius Green, who studied X-rays of the child, told the jury that some of the child's bones showed evidence of fracture from severe injury and no treatment.

Autopsy photos showed the child's swollen knees bearing large wounds that were filled with pus.

Mrs. Mapp's sister, Emma Sills of Raleigh, had testified earlier that the child was sick and weak all her life. She said the child was clumsy and frequently fell down and hurt herself.

Kaasa said that although the child suffocated by blood dripping into her windpipe, a healthy

Western observers have suggested that what Turkebayev called the increase in "specific gravity" of Central Asia will raise a series of potential problems.

These range from natural overpopulation to pressures for relocating industry to a new racial balance in the armed forces to a need for a change in the ethnic makeup of the Kremlin to a possible rise in influence of the Moslem religion, which permeates Central Asia.

Lee And Michelle Both Celebrate Court Victories

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
Corks popped and champagne flowed as Michelle Triola Marvin celebrated the $104,000 she won from Lee Marvin, while the actor claimed he won "on all counts" the suit his former lover filed against him.

Miss Marvin and her lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, toasted at a party what they said was a triumph in her suit to win $1.8 million, an estimated half share of Marvin's earnings during the time she lived with the actor.

A beaming Miss Marvin arrived at the party with her poodle, a present from Marvin during the time they lived together.

Miss Marvin's friends, other attorneys and members of the press were invited to Mitchelson's palatial office for the party.

Although the Superior Court award was only 6 per cent of what she had sought, Miss Marvin said a larger sum would surely have been appealed by the actor.

"If I had won all of Lee's worldly goods, I'd probably be in court until I was 80," Miss Marvin said several hours after Judge Arthur Marshall ruled Wednesday in the landmark case.

Citing the relatively minimal award, attorneys for both sides said it was unlikely they would appeal.

"I think it's sensational," Marvin said of the decision. "I couldn't have hoped for more...We won on all counts."

As he left his Tucson, Ariz., home to visit his wife's family in New York, Marvin reflected on the trial's aftermath.

"All this has done for me is make me more famous than acting, which is a sad commentary because I want to be known as a fine actor," he said.

Arriving at New York's Kennedy Airport, Marvin said, "On every one of their claims they were defeated. I don't know how you can do that in any court under any circumstances."

He said the settlement Miss Marvin received was "the same thing I agreed to a long time ago" and was "a total defeat for them."

Miss Marvin, 46, called the ruling a victory for women's rights and predicted others would benefit from her legal battle.

She said she hesitated to become involved with any man during the trial because "I wouldn't want anyone to have to go through this with me."

between the two to share property acquired during their liaison.

"The court in equity awards plaintiff $104,000 for rehabilitation purposes so that she may have the economic means to re-educate herself and to learn new, employable skills...and so that she may return from her status as companion of a motion picture star to a separate, independent but perhaps more prosaic existence."

Mitchelson said this first major award of alimony-like payments to an unmarried woman creates a healthy climate for similar lawsuits.

Mitchelson has three more celebrity cases waiting to be tried — the claims of former lovers of rock star Alice Cooper and actors Nick Nolte and Rod Steiger.

"There are a thousand Marvin cases out there," he said of future litigation. "So fellas, beware."

Mitchelson conceded that he did not take Miss Marvin's case with an eye on dollars. "The precedent is what was important," he said.

He worked on contingency, meaning he is entitled to no more than a third of the award — about $35,000. He probably spent more than that on trial costs.

Marvin's lawyer, A. David Kagon, who was on retainer to Miss Marvin had tears in her eyes as she left the court for home.

"Last night," she said, "I took down every moment of Lee, every picture. The shrine is gone. Every picture is locked in a trunk now."

Bike Safety Week To Be Launched April 21

The annual observance of Bike Safety Week here is scheduled for April 21-28 under the coordination of the Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee and the Greenville Department of Parks and Recreation.

Mayor Percy Cox has issued a proclamation recognizing the period, running from Saturday through next Saturday, as Bike Safety Week in Greenville.

Jim Hix, chairman of the Bikeway Committee, said that a variety of activities are scheduled during the week, including bike rodeos, a hike-bike-a-thon, and bike clinic. In addition, local officials are dedicating the new Arlington Boulevard bikepath in conjunction with the safety week observance.

According to Hix, five bike safety rodeos are scheduled, including two on April 21 and three on April 28. The two rodeos on the 21st will be at Aycock Junior High School, sponsored by the Greenville Host Lions Club, and at the Boy's Club on W. Skinner Street, sponsored by the youth organization. The April 28 events will be conducted at Jaycee Park, sponsored by the Optimist Club; at Nichols parking lot, sponsored by the Breakfast Lions Club; and Elm Street Park, sponsored by the Greenville Jaycees.

Hix, noting that the rodeos will be held from 10 a.m. until noon at each site, said that trophies will be given at each location to the top three winners in three age categories. The age groups will include: third grade and younger; fourth through sixth grade; and seventh through 12th grade. Hix added that although youngsters may participate at more than one rodeo, they are only eligible to win at one location.

The Hike-Bike-A-Thon this year will be held from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. on April 21, the chairman noted, under the sponsorship of the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens Inc. The event will begin at Aycock Junior High School and refreshments will be served.

A bicycle clinic that will be of particular interest to families just getting their bikes out after winter storage, is scheduled for Monday, 7:30 p.m. at Elm Street Gym. Hix noted that clinic activities will include a safety film and discussion of preventive maintenance, safety equipment and laws.

Hix urged local citizens to attend the clinic, which will be sponsored by the Bikeway Committee, the Parks and Recreation Department, and the Crime Prevention Department of the Greenville Police Department.

School assemblies during the week in all of the local elementary facilities will emphasize bike safety and a film, "Just Like a Car," will be shown. In addition, a traffic safety officer from the Police Department will visit the schools to discuss bike rules and regulations.

Bike safety literature and permanent (free) registration will be available at all of the week's activities, Hix related. Bicycle registration is also available at city hall or at any of the city recreation facilities.

'Spacemobile' Visits School

AYDEN — George D. Allison, space specialist and assistant professor at California State University, spoke to students at Ayden Middle School on Tuesday.

Allison used a NASA Spacemobile to demonstrate the many applications of space systems to improving the quality of life on earth. He also showed samples of rocks from the moon, as well as samples of food, clothing, instruments and other spacecraft items.

More Dining On Poultry

U. S. consumers ate more poultry in 1978 than ever before, according to agricultural extension specialists at North Carolina State University.

Per capita use reached 57 pounds, an increase of three pounds over the 1977 level.

Also, U. S. Department of Agriculture figures indicate an increase in per capita egg consumption last year for the first time since 1971. Use of eggs in 1978 rose to 278 per person, six more than in 1977.

Broiler consumption last year increased to 44 pounds per person, up from 41.7 pounds the previous year. Per capita use of mature chicken held steady at 3.2 pounds. Turkey consumption rose slightly to 9.4 pounds per person.

NCSU extension specialists said broiler and turkey consumption will probably show a moderate increase in 1979.

Free Weekends For Billy Carter

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter is headed for another bar this weekend, but when he bellies up this time it'll be for a Coke, according to his doctor.

Dr. Paul Broun Jr. said Wednesday the president's brother is allowed to spend weekends away from the hospital where he is being treated for alcoholism.

"When I called him late last week, he sounded in real good spirits," said Broun. "He indicated he is not going back to drinking when he gets out of the hospital."

"He said we'd go to a country bar and gullivant, but I could drink beer...he'd stick to Coke."

Committee Kills Four-Year Term For Legislators

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A move to make state legislators' terms last four years instead of two years, blasted by opponents as self-serving legislation, died Wednesday in a House committee.

The Senate-passed proposed constitutional amendment, along with a slightly different House measure, was killed by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee on a voice vote.

The action came after supporters lost a 6-9 vote in an attempt to send it to the House floor without any recommendation from the committee.

The committee's action ends weeks of debate by committee members and a subcommittee, which had offered changes and recommended the Senate version be approved.

The proposed amendments drew sharp criticism from Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, who said it could allow the same legislators to dominate sessions for years.

"If you change this, you are going to significantly change the character of the General Assembly," said Helms.

Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, called the measure "self-serving," and said it would prevent voters from expressing their wishes to legislators.

Supporters of the constitutional change had argued that campaign costs are rising and that people with average incomes would find it easier to run for a legislative seat if they faced a campaign only once every four years.

In other legislative action Wednesday:

Open Meetings
The open-meetings bill, which would revise the state law requiring most meetings by government bodies to be open to the public, was delayed once again Wednesday, this time in the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

The House-passed bill, heavily amended in another Senate committee, was sent to the ways and means panel for consideration of provisions that some say could cost local governments money to comply with.

The panel made no changes in those provisions, but Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, said he wanted to offer amendments in other parts of the bill. The panel voted to hold the bill over for at least another week.

Exhausts
A bill that would require auto exhaust systems to be kept in good working order won approval in the House Highway Safety Committee and was sent to the House.

The measure, already approved by the Senate, would require any major defects in an exhaust system to be corrected before an automobile passed its state safety inspection.

Exhaust systems are now part of the state inspection, but the law does not require any defects found in the inspection to be corrected.

Sen. Charles Vickery, D-Orange, who introduced the bill, called it a safety measure aimed at reducing the number of deaths due to accidental carbon monoxide poisoning.

Odometers
A bill that would make it easier to prosecute someone for rolling back the mileage indicator on an automobile won approval in the House Highway Safety Committee and was sent to the full House.

Insurance
An amendment aimed at strengthening a bill governing the sale of life insurance was killed by the House Insurance Committee Wednesday. The bill had been adopted by the same committee by a narrow margin the day before.

The amendment was proposed by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, who opposed the bill because he said it wasn't tough enough.

The bill, which has the support of the insurance industry, would require life insurance sellers to provide customers with information comparing their policies with others on the market. It won committee approval after the amendment was killed Wednesday and was sent to the full House.

day as scheduled.

Truckers
The House insurance panel also killed a bill that would have prohibited automobile insurance premium surcharges for traffic offenses committed by professional drivers.

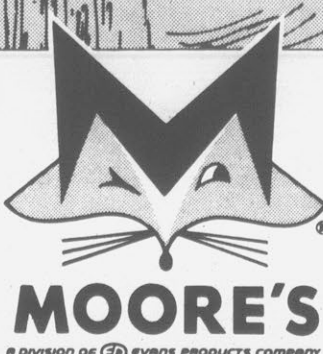

Airport Drinks
On a 36-12 vote, the Senate enacted a House-passed measure that allows the sale of mixed drinks at large airports outside the limits of an ABC system where a liquor-by-the-drink referendum has passed.

The Greensboro-High Point regional airport would be the only one effected by the bill, although it applies statewide.

Fuel
Action on a resolution calling for a study of alternate fuels that can be derived in part from agriculture products was stalled on the House floor. The bill was sent back to the agriculture committee for changes.

Elections
Rep. John Jordan, D-Alamance, filed a bill that would require most state and local elections to be held on the regular primary and general election dates in May and November.

An Admirer Of The Pig

BALTIMORE (AP) — A dishwasher and salad chef at a local restaurant has a beef: People don't respect pigs.

"I never met a pig I didn't like," said David Spero, 25, who is also founder, editor and publisher since 1971 of "Conspiracy Trail," probably America's only journal of pig lore. Spero claims 500 subscribers from England to California.

"There's no central pig movement," he said in a recent interview. "...In the past 10 years, there has been an awakening of pig consciousness.

"Most city slickers never see a pig in their entire lives, and a lot of 'em when they see a pig — a sow and her piglets — they go crazy. It's love at first sight," he said.

Spero traces his own affection for pigs to his student days at Park School, when he and friends ran a toy pig for a student government post. Spero, who lives in downtown Baltimore, said he is considering taking in a pig to test a zoning ordinance forbidding the harboring of livestock.

"The East Coast is the most pig-ignorant part of the United States," said Spero. "People say pigs are messy, but they're among the most clean of animals. They clean up after themselves. But that's not the trait I admire most in pigs.

"They're very democratic. If you treat them right, they treat you right. They're not submissive like dogs, and they're not aloof like cats," he said.

Open Season On State Mascot

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — When Ms. Jo Reichel's fourth grade class in Gardiner learned that Maine doesn't have an official state animal, they thought of the moose.

So the children took their case to the Legislature's State Government Committee.

Nobody expressed any opposition to the bill sponsored by Rep. Charles G. Dow of Gardiner. In fact, several lawmakers said they favor the plan.

"A wonderful animal," said Rep. Nancy Masterton, R-Cape Elizabeth.

"I'm 100 percent in favor of the bill," said Rep. Sherry Huber, D-Falmouth. "But it's going to be ironic when they start plugging away at them."

It seems the Legislature already enacted a bill reopening the hunting season on moose next year.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead slightly today as traders reacted with cautious optimism to news that the economy's growth rate had slowed by more than expected in the first quarter.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was ahead 1.48 to 861.75 at noon.

Advancing issues outnumbered those declining by almost 7-4 on the New York Stock Exchange.

As the market opened, the Commerce Department announced that the gross national product had grown at a 0.7 percent rate in the first quarter, significantly below the 2 percent growth rate which had been predicted by the government and many analysts.

The low growth rate, which was attributed to adverse weather in many parts of the nation, was seen by some analysts as proof that government attempts to stem inflation by slowing the economy's growth were working. But a slowdown in the growth rate also could mean lower profits in coming quarters, and analysts said that brought caution to the market.

American Motors topped the active list, up 1/4 to 8 1/2. The company reported a growth in first-quarter earnings from 9 cents to $1.06.

The NYSE's composite average of more than 1,500 common stocks gained .10 to 57.43. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .93 to 181.32.

Big Board volume was 13.73 million shares at noon, compared with 12.73 million at the same point in Wednesday's trading.

Favorable earnings reports continued to boost prices of many stocks. Among stocks reporting higher profits, Gillette gained 3/8 to 26 1/2. Amstar rose 1 1/2 to 51 1/2. Alcoa went up 1 to 54 1/2 and Bristol-Meyers added 1/4 to 34 1/2.

Sen. Lowell Weicker wants the Supreme Court to decide if his foreign birth disqualifies him from running for president.

The Connecticut Republican told a state Capitol news conference Wednesday he hopes for an early court test and a Supreme Court ruling on the question. He was born in Paris, although his parents were American citizens.

There has never been a test of the exact meaning of the constitutional provision banning foreign-born presidents.

Weicker said he hoped his status as a presidential contender would soon be challenged, either by the Federal Elections Commission or the Secretary of the state in one of the states where he plans a primary. He said he wants the issue cleared up once and for all.

RALEIGH — Warren Wheeler, president of Wheeler Airlines which supplies commuter service to Greenville and several other North Carolina cities, said his firm may be forced to move its base of operations from Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The Federal Aviation Administration has told the commuter airline that it can no longer send its passengers through the RDU security areas because of FAA regulations against mixing screened and un-screened passengers.

The Raleigh-Durham Airport Authority has also rescinded an offer that would have allowed the airline to switch hangers in order to house a new 40-passenger prop-jet purchased by Wheeler. Under FAA regulations, the airline cannot operate the new F-27 without maintaining a service hanger for the plane, and Wheeler's present hanger is too small.

Wheeler passengers are routed through security areas at RDU, but not in Greenville or other cities served by the commuter service.

Under the FAA order, Wheeler Airlines would have to screen passengers at the other airports it operates from, where passengers do not pass through security before boarding its planes, or operate from non-secure areas at RDU, such as ramps used by private aircraft or flight schools.

RDU director Thomas McDowell said Wheeler could "put his passengers in a bus and move them anywhere he wants," at RDU. There are a number of solutions.

"At this point," Wheeler said, "we feel like we're being forced to consider another city for a base of commuter operations."

The security problem, according to Wheeler, "must be worked out...some arrangement will be made." The airline has until April 30 to find an answer to the problem.

However, he said, the question of facilities at RDU is, "basically a situation where they are not going to have any accommodations for us in the foreseeable future. They can't make plans because they haven't made plans," for a new runway, terminal building or other crowded conditions, Wheeler explained.

"They don't seem to be that interested," in keeping the airline at RDU, Wheeler noted, adding that the airline is, "in the preliminary stages of negotiating," for a maintenance base at another airport. Eventually, he said, the airline's offices will also be moved from Raleigh.

Wheeler said Greenville would be, "a very remote possibility," for the location of its base of operations. The new base, he emphasized, "most likely," will be Asheville, although Charlotte and Newport News are being considered. Kinston, he added, would be another remote possibility.

Even if the airline's base of operations is moved, Wheeler said the commuter flights would still serve RDU.

Wheeler airlines began operations in 1973 with service between Raleigh and Greenville. Last year the commuter service carried 40,000 passengers, with 15 to 20 per cent from the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Wheeler now serves Raleigh, Greenville, Charlotte and Asheville.

Services To Vets Honored

For the third consecutive year, the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission has received the IAPES Award for Outstanding Services to Veterans.

Two awards are given annually statewide — one for offices with less than 15 employees, and one for larger offices with 15 or more employees.

The Greenville office is in the larger office category. More than 60 offices throughout the state competed for the award at the IAPES Convention held recently in Asheville.

For the six-months (two quarters) period October 1978 through March 1979, the Greenville ESC office processed 794 new and renewal applications on veterans. Of that total, 260 individuals were placed in jobs, 175 were counseled and 510 job development contacts were made when no suitable job opportunities were available for applicants.

Kendrick Taylor is the Greenville office Veteran Employment Representative, and James Hannan is the office manager.

Earning For Educations

Last summer some 14 college students from Pitt county worked in local public or private non-profit agencies under the PACE-I. N. C. program.

PACE-I. N. C. is an acronym for Plan Assuring College Education in North Carolina. The program is administered by the Div. of Social Services, N. C. State Dept. of Human Resources.

During the summer of 1978, through PACE, Pitt County students earned a total of $13,496 toward their educations, says Lois Gray of Pitt County Social Services, who serves as the local county coordinator.

Persons from local agencies who would like to hire students or students interested in summer work under PACE should contact Ms. Gray, 758-2167. Application blanks may be obtained through her, through high school guidance counselors, and through college financial aid officers.

Friendship Force Goes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A group of North Carolinians leaving on a good will mission to England got a send-off Wednesday from First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

The Friendship Force will travel to Newcastle-on-Tyne for a 10-day stay. The group of 254 people from the Triangle area is led by Carolyn Hunt, wife of Gov. Jim Hunt.

Mrs. Carter, who with President Carter started Friendship Force while he was governor of Georgia, told the group that they were going to be ambassadors for the United States.

"Private citizens like you can do so much to promote international understanding and good will," Mrs. Carter said. "Peace comes from understanding."

In exchange for the Tarheel visit, some residents of Newcastle-on-Tyne will visit North Carolina on Thursday.

At one point during the send-off, Mrs. Carter stooped and hugged 8-year-old Charlie Wicker of Durham, who looked at her wide-eyed and shook his head when she asked if he had ever met the wife of a president before.

State Sweeps Doubleheader From Bucs

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor For the second time in four days, East Carolina University's baseball team went down to a double defeat, this time falling to N.C. State University, 1-0 and 3-1.

The opening game was a pitching duel between N.C. State's Frank Bryant and East Carolina's Parker Davis. Bryant allowed only two East Carolina hits, while Davis gave up just three to N.C. State.

"Parker did a heck of a job," Coach Monte Little said. "It's just too bad that he had to lose a fine game like that."

Davis was actually more effective than Bryant, but didn't get the same backing as did the Wolfpack moundsman. Davis allowed only seven runners, and only four of them got as far as second base. East Carolina put ten on base and six of them reached as far as second.

State's, and the game's, only run came in the fourth inning. With one down, Tom Crocker walked and moved up on an infield out. John Isley hit a shot down the left field line that Butch Davis made a diving catch for, but was unable to reach. It went for a double, and Crocker scored on the play.

East Carolina's best chance came in the fifth inning, but an outstanding fielding play by State killed the threat. Mike Sorrell walked, as did Bob Neff and both were sacrificed up. Davis hit was looked like a sure sacrifice fly to right, but Rich White fired a strike to home, easily nailing the running Sorrell at the plate.

State struck early in the second game, getting its first run in the opening inning. Ray Tanner led off with a single to right and stole second. He scored when Isley came up with another double. That double, by the way, broke the single season mark for two-baggers by a State player, giving Isley 15 on the year.

State was held in check the rest of the way, although there were several other threats, until the seventh when the Wolfpack added two more runs.

A freak double play killed a State chance in the third. With runners on first and third, batter Chuckie Cannady swung at a third strike to protect Crocker. Canady lunged across the plate during the play, colliding with catcher Rick Derechailo, and plate umpire Joe Colenda signaled Crocker out because of Canady's interference.

State left a runner at second in the fourth, and the sixth, and at third in the fifth.

Pat Sheehy led off the seventh with a walk and Tanner reached on a high hopper between the mound and plate. Crocker laid down a sacrifice bunt that was errored, loading the bases. Then, after two were out, Ken Sears singled to left, scoring both Sheehy and Tanner for a 3-0 lead.

The Pirates didn't get a hit off State hurler John Skinner until Macon Moye opened up the fifth with a single.

But it was a controversial play in the sixth that may have meant the difference in the game.

With out, Sorrell singled and Neff followed with a shot down the left field line that appeared to hit inside the line. When the action came to a halt, Sorrell was at third and Neff on second. But as Billy Best stepped in to bat, Colenda called it a foul ball.

That brought Little charging in from the third base coaching box to protest, and he was immediately ejected by the umpire. Little, furious over the ball, spun Colenda around to continue the argument, but to no avail.

"It was clearly inside," Little said after the game and his return to the ball park. "Even the State third baseman said it was inside, and laughed over the call. I just don't understand it. That could have made the difference in the game. We'd have had men at second and third with just one out and our best hitters coming to the plate."

At any rate, it killed the rally, and after State came back with two more. The Pirates did avoid a second shutout with a run in the bottom of the seventh. Davis led off with a single and moved up on an errored pickoff attempt. Raymie Styons singled to left, scoring

Davis, but the rally ended there. The twin losses dropped the Pirates to 17-14, while State climbed to 22-9.

Zimmer Enraged With Sub Umpire After 'Blown' Call

By ALEX SACHARE AP Sports Writer Don Zimmer has had his fill of the fill-in umpires. The manager of the Boston Red Sox became enraged after Dallas Parks, a former International League umpire who is one of the replacements for the striking major league ump, called ball four on a 3-1 count with Boston's Steve Renko pitching to Milwaukee's Sixto Lezcano with the bases loaded. That forced in the first run of the game, and the Brewers went on to win 4-1.

After the call, Zimmer marched to the mound, ostensibly to talk to Renko. When Parks came out to break up the huddle, the Red Sox manager gave him an earful. "He said he blew the call," Zimmer said of Parks, who was unavailable for verification of that assertion. "It was a hell of a time to blow a call. I've never been an umpire baiter and I don't want to be. I won't go out there unless I think I have a point."

Milwaukee got three more runs in the seventh inning on consecutive home runs by Paul Molitor and Sal Bando, a triple by Cecil Cooper and a single by Larry Hisle. Boston's only run came on Rick Burleson's homer in the eighth.

In other American League games, the California Angels outscored the Minnesota Twins 11-6, the Chicago White Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 12-5, the Cleveland Indians topped the Texas Rangers 6-4, the Oakland A's defeated the Seattle Mariners 5-2 and the New York Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-1.

Angels 11, Twins 6 California won its seventh in a row, beating Minnesota in a game that included five errors and nine unearned runs. "It wasn't an artistic success, but so what?" said Angels Manager Jim Fregosi.

Former Twin Rod Carew went four-for-four plus a walk, scored three runs and drove in two for the Angels. It was the 44th four-hit game of Carew's brilliant career.

White Sox 12, Blue Jays 5 Greg Pryor, the No. 9 batter in the Chicago lineup, had three hits and drove in four runs as the White Sox pasted Toronto with an 18-hit attack. Chet Lemon, Alan Bannister, Eric Soderholm and Mike Squires also had three hits apiece for Chicago as Richard Wortham coasted to his third victory without a loss.

Indians 6, Rangers 4 Gary Alexander slugged a three-run homer off Rangers reliever Homer Lytle in the seventh inning to give Cleveland its first victory over Texas in their last 14 meetings.

A's 5, Mariners 2 Only 1,215, the second-smallest crowd in Oakland A's history, showed up to watch the A's win their third in a row. Rob Picciolo's snapped a 2-2 tie with a bases-loaded single in the seventh inning and an error by Mario Mendoza let in two more runs.

The record low of 653 attended Tuesday night's game.

Yankees 3, Orioles 1 Tommy John scattered eight hits in 7-2/3 innings for his third consecutive victory and Jim Spencer and Reggie Jackson belted home runs to lead New York to its fourth straight triumph.

Spencer's homer in the fifth inning snapped a 1-1 tie and struck the facade of the third deck in right field, while Jackson's blast in the sixth inning cleared the fence near the 417-foot mark in center field.

Farmville, Conley, Rose Post Wins

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Three local teams took victories yesterday in the first round of the Greenville-Pitt Baseball Tournament at Guy Smith Stadium.

Farmville Central won a controversial 5-4 decision from previously-undefeated New Bern yesterday afternoon, while D. H. Conley downed Wilson 3-2 and Rose High blanked North Pitt 5-0 last night.

In today's second round, Fike will play North Pitt at 3 p.m., Farmville will face Washington at 6 p.m. and Conley and Rose will square off at 8 p.m.

Farmville 5,
New Bern 4

Credit Jaguar scorekeeper Michelle Steppes with a save as she was instrumental in helping the Jags defeat New Bern, which came into the game with a 12-0 record.

With two out in the top of the seventh, the Bears trailing 5-4 with runners on first and second, Craig Martin came to the plate one turn too soon.

Steppes noticed immediately that the correct batter should be John Connors and pointed the fact out to Jaguar coach Linwood Woodard. Woodard let pitcher Ted Johnson throw one pitch before taking the scorebook out to plate umpire Jimmy Grimsley.

Grimsley immediately ruled that the proper batter was out, ending the game with a 5-4

Jaguar victory. But that's not the end of the story.

About 20 minutes later, after both teams had run wind sprints and were packing up to leave the stadium, Grimsley reversed his decision and announced that the proper batter, Connors, was not out, but should take his place in the box with an 0-1 count against him.

Ken Jones, who had led off the frame with a double, and Joe Weipert, who had walked, took their places on second and first and Connors went to the plate. He doubled down the right field line, scoring both runners and Martin singled up the middle to plate Connors before being thrown out at second on a steal at.

The Jaguars, down 7-5, went down in order in the bottom of the frame. But that's still not the end of the story.

Woodard protested the game and his protest was upheld this morning in a meeting of the tournament committee and a representative of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association.

It seems that the professional rules require a proper batter to complete his time at bat for the proper batter to be called out on appeal. But under national high school rules, the improper batter has only to step into the batter's box for his teammate to be ruled out so Farmville won.

The Bears scored first in the game when Joey Hardison reached on an error in the first and scored on Weipert's base hit. The Jaguars came back with a pair of runs in the second. Lewis Yelverton walked, one of three free trips for him, and after one out, Johnson reached on a fielder's choice.

Allen Corbett singled in Yelverton and Johnson scored on a base hit by Billy McLawhorn.

Ken Jones scored for New Bern in the third on a base hit up the middle, an error, a passed ball and Weipert's sacrifice fly.

The Jags regained the lead in the fifth. McLawhorn led off with a double and went to third on an error. Greg Hardison got an infield hit and Moore hit a sacrifice fly to plate McLawhorn.

Hardison stole second and went to third on Phillip Gordon's base hit. He scored on a passed ball and Gordon followed on a shot to left by Eason.

The Bears pulled to within one run in the sixth. With one away, Owen Andrews walked and Bruce Behrendt came in as a courtesy runner and stole second. Pinch hitter Rudy Lupton walked and Johnny Wade was sent in to pinch run for him.

Curtis Martin loaded things up with a walk and Gary Stilley singled up the middle to score Behrendt and Wade. The next batter flew out to end the inning and the Jaguars held their lead on the controversial play in the seventh.

Woodard said he was pleased with his team's attitude coming into the ballgame. "The boys were ready to play. We've been lackadaisical at times this year, but they were up for this game."

Far ille is now 7-5, while the Bears are 12-1.

Conley 3,
Fike 2

The Vikings survived a seventh-inning scare before finally defeating the Golden Demons by one run.

Conley scored two runs in the third, gave up a run in the fourth and then scored another in the fifth for a 3-1 lead, but the Demons scored again in the seventh and had two runners on when the Vikings got the final out.

Ben Wilson pitched the win for Conley, his sixth in seven decisions. "Ben had another good game," coach Walter Claybrook said afterward. "He might have gotten a little tired at the end, but I felt like I had to stay with him because of his experience."

The Vikings got on in the first when the Vikings got the final out.

Claybrook said he was pleased with his team's performance and that he was unsure what to expect from his young charges coming into the tournament. "We're basically a young team, but we kept our composure and did a good job."

A pair of Fike errors helped the Vikings get on the scoreboard in the third inning. With one out, Arnell Credle walked. Sammy Tucker then singled to left field and Credle scored when the ball was erred by the left fielder. The Demons tried to throw out Tucker going to third, but another error allowed him to score.

In the bottom of the next inning, Wilson's Lackey Duke led off with a base hit up the middle and stole second. Ricky Matthews reached on an error and Phil Batts doubled in Duke.

With one out in the fifth, Credle reached on an error and stole second. He scored on Micah Dixon's double to left.

The Vikes had runners on second and third in the sixth, but neither team scored again until the bottom of the seventh.

Fike's Charles Flowers walked with one out in that inning and went to second on a wild pitch. After a strikeout, Bobby Owens reached on an error and Flowers came home.

Owens stole second and Tommy Langley got an infield hit, but the Vikings came up with the third out to end the game.

Conley is now 7-4 on the season, while the Golden Demons are 5-6.

Rose 5,
N. Pitt 0

After playing to a scoreless tie for four innings, Rose scored two runs in the fifth and three in the sixth to defeat the Panthers handily.

Lindsey Winstead went the distance on the mound for the Rampants to gain his sixth straight win. He gave up only two hits, struck out six and walked one.

"Winstead really had his curve ball breaking tonight," Rampant coach Ronald Vincent said after the game. "He was really sharp."

Vincent said the contest was "a very well-played ballgame. North Pitt's got a heck of a team. It's far and away the best North Pitt team I've seen."

Panther coach Pat Smith was also fairly pleased with his team's performance, except for a few mental errors.

"We hustled, and I'm proud of them," he said. "Rose has a good ballclub."

Despite Winstead's pitching performance, North Pitt was very much in the game until the Rampant offense got untracked in the fifth. Neither team advanced a runner past second until that inning.

Mike Campbell led off the fifth with a single for the Rampants and Mark Shank followed with a base hit. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch and scored when Will Sanderson singled to right field.

Mike Williams led off the sixth for Rose by reaching on an error and Joey Mattheis sacrificed him to third. Junior Neal waited out a base on balls and Charles Daise came on to pinch run.

Williams and Daise pulled a double steal, and after an out, Shank singled in Daise. He followed on an error and a balk.

It was the ninth victory of the season for the Rampants against just one loss, while North Pitt fell to 5-6.

Fireworks By Bull

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The fireworks at Three Rivers Stadium was a little premature, and anyway, it hardly compared with the rocket Greg Luzinski sent into the fifth level seats.

"Awesome. That's the only word to describe it," said Philadelphia pitcher Randy Lerch of the 500-foot shot by his teammate that gave the Phillies a 3-2 victory over Pittsburgh Wednesday night.

Padres 7, Giants 6

Joe Coleman's pitching line in the San Francisco-San Diego boxscore showed all zeros, but his one pitch lost the game for the Giants. San Francisco reliever Gary Lavelle was ejected by plate umpire Dave Pallone, an amateur ump subbing for the major league's striking pro pumps, with the score tied 6-6, two outs in the bottom of the ninth and a 3-1 count on Mike Hargrove. Lavelle argued too vehemently that his fourth pitch to Hargrove was not a ball.

Coleman's only pitch of the ball game was low and outside, forcing home Bill Almon with the winning run and capping a three-run San Diego rally.

Expos 6, Mets 5

Montreal rallied for two runs in the ninth — including Ellis Valentine's game-winning single — to send the Mets down to defeat for the fourth straight time.

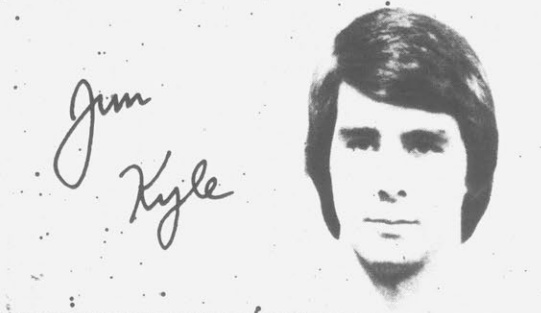

Warren Cromartie's bases-loaded, double-play grounder scored the tying run, and then the Mets watched helplessly while Valentine's hit handed New York its fifth one-run loss of the young season.

Cards 3, Cubs 2

Tony Scott scored from third base on Mike Phillips' slow roller down the first-base line to tie the game in the seventh inning, then seven innings later knocked in the winning run with a single.

Astros 4, Dodgers 0

Vern Rühle tossed a six-hitter for his first victory of the season, and Jose Cruz backed him with two RBI on a double and a sacrifice fly. Rühle, 1-2, struck out two and walked one.

GOLFER ED SNEED'S collapse in the final round of last weekend's Masters Tournament will probably haunt him for a long, long time. It's one thing to blow a big lead in a tournament like the Greater Greensboro Open, but to do it in the Masters is something else again.

The Masters is one of the four so-called "major" tournaments and probably the most respected of those four. It's a great achievement to even be in a position to win the tournament and Sneed has to realize he may never be in that position again.

Sneed held a five-shot margin going into Sunday's final round at Augusta National. He saw that edge quickly fall to just one stroke over the first 10 holes, but then he birdied a pair of par 5's, the 13th and 15th, and led by three going into the final trio of holes.

He bogied all three of those holes, missing a short par putt on 18 by a fraction of an inch. The ball stopped on the lip of the cup, suspended, it appeared, by just a blade or two of grass.

That set up a three-way sudden death playoff between Sneed, 1977 Masters champ Tom Watson and the charging Frank Zoeller.

Zoeller, whose initials are FUZ for Frank Urban Zoeller, is known to nearly everyone as "Fuzzy" and is one of the most personable golfers on the tour.

Playing in his first Masters, Fuzzy was six strokes down at the start of Sunday's round. But he has been one of the hottest players on the tour this year (third in money-winnings after his $50,000 Masters paycheck) and stayed close enough to take advantage of Sneed's ill-fated round.

All three golfers parred the first playoff hole, the 10th, and on the par-4 11th, Zoeller and Watson hit the green in two, while Sneed was just off. Sneed chipped close and one-putted, while Watson, who had a great approach shot, got down in two.

Zoeller's approach shot was inside Watson's, about eight feet from the cup. Stepping up to the putt, he knew that he would win if it went in. He drilled it and let his putter fly as the ball went in the cup, making him the first golfer ever to win the Masters in his first appearance.

Zoeller, whose wife is expecting their first child in about a week, is on top of the world right now, while Sneed has to feel pretty low. Zoeller needs to concentrate on keeping his game solid. Sneed, on the other hand, badly needs some type of victory to get his confidence back.

Pirates Ink Star

East Carolina track coach Bill Carson has announced the signing of junior college All-American sprinter Stan Curry of Marietta, Pa., to a grant-in-aid to attend East Carolina next fall.

Curry, a 1978 All-America at Hagerstown, Md., Junior College in the indoor 440-yard run and the outdoor 400-meter run, will enroll as a junior. He was the runner-up in the national meet in the indoor event and fourth in the outdoor race.

Curry and his teammates will be taking aim on the national junior college mile relay record this spring, beginning with the Penn Relays April 28. He owns a 46.2-second clocking for a relay split at the 1,600-meters distance. He has run a 9.8-second effort in the 100-yard dash in school, and also owns a 20.8 split for the 800-meter relay.

Curry was a Pennsylvania 440-yard run champion at Donegal High School with a 47.4 effort and also placed second in the 220-yard dash at 21.6 in the state meet.

Curry will major in food and restaurant management at East Carolina.

Lady Rams Lose First

SNOW HILL — Wilson Beddingfield High School handed Greene Central's girls' softball its first loss of the season yesterday, taking a 9-8 victory.

Beddingfield picked up four runs in the first inning and then watched while Greene Central rallied for one each in the first and third and five more in the fifth for a 7-4 lead.

But Beddingfield picked up five more in the top of the sixth for a 9-7 lead. Greene Central rallied for one in the bottom of the seventh, falling one short.

Joann Griffin was the winning pitcher for Beddingfield. Susan Hill and Kathy Barnes led the Bruin hitting with two each. Sara Taylor had two for Greene Central.

The Lady Rams, now 12-1, have a chance at revenge in a return meeting at Beddingfield on Friday.

Bath Tops Jamesville

BATH — Bath High School moved into sole possession of first place in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin girls' softball race with a 9-4 victory over Jamesville yesterday.

Bath scored once in the first and added two more in the third before Jamesville came up with two in the fifth. Bath added another in the bottom of the fifth, and after Jamesville got one in the top of the sixth, Bath broke the game open with five more in its half of the frame.

Jamesville got its other run in the seventh.

Kim Waters got the victory for the Lady Pirates. Rhonda Boseman led the Bath hitting with four, while Molly Hopkins and Brenda Morgan each added two. No one had more than one for Jamesville.

The Lady Bullets, not 3-2, travel to Pantego on Friday.

Jamesville Sets Sights On Titles

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School has only two spring sports, baseball and softball, but it is looking for conference championships in both of them.

Baseball
Coach Ron Davenport's baseball team has posted a 12-1 record so far this season, including a victory in its own Jamesville Invitational earlier this week. Jamesville beat Roanoke, 5-0, in 11 innings in the championship contest.

"Our strong point is our pitching," Davenport explained. "In our last four games, we've had shutouts, and we've allowed ten hits over the last 25 innings."

Emphasizing that the Bullets don't have any single ace, Davenport lists Tommy DiNardo and Trent Ange as the best moundsmen. "Tommy is our strikeout artist, and Trent has more control. I really feel good if either one of them is on the mound. They are really both our aces."

Davenport also had praise for catcher Toby Holliday. "It doesn't matter how good your pitchers are if you don't have a good catcher, and Toby is the best catcher I've seen in the last two years."

The Bullets went unbeaten in Beaufort-Hyde-Martin play last year, and so far this season are rolling along undefeated in the league. Last season, Jamesville bowed in the Class A semifinals to Lucama, which went on to win the state title.

Other top players on the Bullet team include second baseman Danny Lilley; left fielder Keith Modlin, who leads the team in runs batted in; and center fielder Alan Frazier, who currently has the hottest bat (7-11 in his last three games).

"I look for Bath to be our toughest competition in the conference," Davenport said. "If our pitching holds us, I really feel like we have a real good shot to take the conference, and I think we have a shot at winning the state title, too. I don't see any reason why we can't win it all."

"We have the two best pitchers in 1-A ball, and I believe that will be the key for us."

Softball
Jamesville's girls were tied with Bath and Aurora going into a game with Bath yesterday, and Coach Deborah Wilson is hopeful that the Lady Bullets will have the stuff to win the B-H-M title this year.

"We're 3-1 right now" Wilson said, "with our only loss to Aurora. And that was the worst we've played so far."

In the other three games, no one scored over five runs against the Bullets, who lost that one, 13-10. They've averaged over 13 runs a game, while giving up just five a game overall.

"We made a lot of errors against Aurora; that was what beat us," Wilson added.

"Our running and hitting have been very good. And in all our other games, we've been able to keep our errors down."

After losing the top four hitters on last year's team to graduation, Wilson wasn't expecting the team to be as strong. But now, she feels that the Bullets have a contender.

"Bath will be strong since they are the defending champions, and Aurora has been fairly strong so far. I think there are several teams that are right even and have a chance to win."

Top players for the Bullets include first baseman Lorey Modlin; shortstop Jeanette Barber, centerfielder Kellie Hardison, a freshman; third baseman Tammy Williams, and pitcher Mika Ellis.

"If we get past Bath, that will put us in really good shape. I really think we have a chance to win the title."

Says Puerto Rican Men Resist Change

By CYNTHIA VICE ACOSTA Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — It will take Puerto Rican men at least until the next century to change their attitudes of superiority toward women, a leading local feminist says.

Dr. Milagros Lopez Garriga, president of the governor's commission for the improvement of women's rights, said men would adopt more liberal attitudes on women's rights "in two or three more generations." She notes that the island's deep Hispanic roots were inbred generations ago and that it's more convenient to keep the "status quo."

Despite 80 years of U.S. influence on this U.S. commonwealth, many of the social mores that dominate the lifestyle here are Spanish in origin.

In an interview, Dr. Lopez Garriga said that men's attitudes toward their female counterparts "date back to Puerto Rico's agricultural era" in the 1930s when women were expected to stay at home.

In spite of the industrial advancement made in the past 25 years, Puerto Rican society "is still underdeveloped regarding its attitudes" toward the woman's role.

Dr. Lopez Garriga said most

Puerto Rican men resisted these social changes but would have no alternative but to accept them eventually. She pointed out that many U.S. laws regarding women's rights were also applicable here.

The university professor said social "equality is a more comfortable role" for both men and women.

"Men would not have to maintain the image of being a good provider and a tremendous lover, while women could cast aside their role as sweet, weak doves," she said.

However, not all Puerto Rican women agree with the liberationist views of the organization, the president acknowledged, "because they believe it's not in their best interest."

A 32-year-old high-school teacher said recently that although she favored equal rights, "I prefer Puerto Rican men to American men because they make me feel like a real woman, besides being good lovers."

Dr. Lopez Garriga interpreted that remark as being an "ambivalent" attitude typical of many women in the transitional stages of the women's movement.

Asked what goals have been achieved since the "International Year of the Woman" was proclaimed almost five years ago, she said that there were more females entering male-dominated professions such as engineering and agronomy, although women were still looked upon as "sexual objects."

Benefit Fair At Ft. Bragg

FORT BRAGG — A big fair to consist of a large commercial carnival, military equipment displays, entertainment events and a wide variety of exhibits — both military and civilian opens Thursday, April 26 and runs through Saturday, May 5. Proceeds realized will be distributed among authorized Fort Bragg community agencies.

In addition to the benefit factor, a major purpose of the fair is to create a better understanding of the wide range of activities available in the local area.

Rules applicable to persons, groups or agencies wishing to take part in the fair include: — No charge for participating, and a limited number of passes will be issued to exhibitors. Also, participants will not be paid for their display or performances.

— Activities must be limited to family type events or entertainment, they cannot be commercial ventures, nor advertise a business. No activity which wishes to charge a fee or collect revenue during the fair will be permitted.

— Entertainment groups of a reasonably high quality will be considered, such as bands, shows, groups, etc.

— Most events are envisioned as only once on one day; however, longer term participation will be considered.

Any group, agency or entertainment activity will be required to furnish whatever booths or equipment is needed, except that a stage with limited lighting and electrical outlets will be available for smaller shows and activities — bands, choral groups, etc. Limited electrical power may also be arranged for other activities. All such provision will be at no cost to the participant.

— A large area (about 100 by 100 feet) will be available for larger type events such as major displays.

Interested persons or groups are to write for exhibitor application forms to: Fort Bragg Fair Project Officer, P. O. Box K018, Ft. Bragg, N. C., 28307.

Because of the short time available now before the beginning of the fair, anyone interested is advised to send for forms at the earliest possible moment.

High Plant Of Soybeans

Farmers in North Carolina intend to plant a record high acreage of soybeans in 1979. Corn acreage is expected to increase, while tobacco acreage is below 1978 levels.

These findings are a result of a survey of North Carolina farmers conducted around April 1 by the N. C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The survey shows that soybeans are to be planted on 1.75 million acres, up eight percent from last year and a record high. Prospective corn plantings are expected to be 1.9 million acres, up eight percent from 1978.

Survey results showed flue-cured tobacco down 11 percent from last year, with growers planning to set 346,000 acres. Burley tobacco is expected to be down 200 acres from last year to 8,300 acres.

Intended plantings of peanuts are set at 168,000 acres, down slightly from 1978. Cotton plantings are expected to total 70,000 acres, well above the 45,000 acres in 1978. Sweet potato acreage is expected to hold steady at 38,000 acres.

Lonely Americans Building Mexican Oil Pipeline

By WILLIAM F. GENTILE
BAY OF CAMPECHE, Mexico (UPI) — A dozen men linger on the bow of the U.S.-owned construction barge M-289.

In the morning chill, they drink coffee, smoke cigarettes and watch a giant orange sun creep up over the blue ocean horizon. Their faces are leathery brown though many are under 30.

An oil-drilling platform stands silhouetted a few hundred yards away.

Contracted by Mexico's state oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex), the M-289, with its complement of 160 Americans, is one of two U.S.-owned construction barges laying an underwater pipeline from the Bay of Campeche oil fields to the Mexican coastline.

More than 103 miles long and 36 inches in diameter, Mexico's largest pipeline will transport crude from the bay's 18 oil-drilling platforms to shore for refining and export. To be completed by the end of the year, it's average daily capacity will be nearly half a million barrels.

Because of union problems and intense nationalistic sentiments about their new-found oil reserves, most Pemex officials are reluctant to admit they must contract foreign companies to help exploit those reserves.

"But we just don't have the know-how to lay that pipeline ourselves," said one Pemex engineer.

Most of the 160 Americans on the M-289 come from Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Texas and Virginia to work 12 hours a day, seven days a week, sometimes for months on end.

And they do it for just one reason: money.

"Hell man, I can make $31,000 in 24 weeks on this boat," said "Coonie" O. Carter, 32. Born in Alexandria, Va., Carter has worked as a welder on barges like the M-289 since 1967.

"You know I ain't goin' to be doin' this for the rest of my life," he said. "When I get enough cash saved up I'll just go right on and quit."

I.A. "Pappy" Lowe, 62, from Kosciusko, Miss., worked a 115-acre farm until 1969 when he took his first job on the barge.

He sports a white, Ernest Hemingway beard and a gold anchor medallion around his neck and says, "I wouldn't mind goin' back to farmin' if I could make the same kinda' money I do here on this barge."

According to one of the old hands, most of the key men — head mechanics, foremen and officers — have been on the barge at least 10 years, and will probably be there for that much longer. But the younger hands are there only to save some money.

"I'm just here so I can support my skydiving habit and finish school," said Roy Butler, Jr., from De Ridder, La. Butler, a husky, 26-year-old welder's helper, leaned forward on his narrow bunkbed and explained that "Skydivin'" is expensive as hell, so I got to do somethin' like this to keep it up." The wall behind his bunk was decorated with pictures of skydivers and nude women.

"I'll work on this thing for a few more years and then I'm goin' to get out," said Johnny Fortner of Covington, La. Married and with three children, Fortner, 34, is one of the barge's three scuba divers and one of the highest paid men on board. He earns a base $100 a day — and more when he dives, depending on how deep he goes.

"I already got some investments back in Louisiana," he said. "Pretty soon I'll have enough to quit and go back with my family."

Work on the M-289 is seasonal. When not docked during the winter months in Bell Chase, La., the barge might be stationed off Saudi Arabia or in the North Sea. Affected by the recent strong winds on the bay, the M-289 waited idly for the waves to calm before her men could go back to work. At night they talked of their jobs' joys and frustrations, of the camaraderie, of dreams and ambitions.

Johnny Fortner and three others sat down to a game of dominoes over the ever-present coffee and cigarettes.

"I miss women, movies and my car," one of them said. "Sure you get bored," said another. "You get bored after two days, but I need the money more than I do the variety."

"No matter what kinda' work you're in it's a hassle," Fortner said. "But this beats that 9 to 5 stuff."

"Hell man, we don't even know what time those shifts is!" one of them said and the four broke into laughter.

Skydiver Roy Butler sat in his own room, explaining once again "the feeling of total freedom I get when I jump out of a plane." One of his bunkmates complained, "Oh man, not again," and the conversation switched to the sober topic of a friend who recently "dragged up" and went back home because he couldn't handle the long separation from his girlfriend.

"It gets real hard out here sometimes," one of them said. "You know, the loneliness, the hard work, the isolation."

Pappy Lowe leaned over the rail of the barge, holding a fishing line in his hand. He stuffed a bit of Red Man chewing tobacco into the corner of his mouth and said, "I miss my wife, but my six kids is all married off and got a life of their own. Anyway, I've made a lot of good friends on this boat."

National Front To Stir Tension

LONDON (AP) — The ultrarightist National Front, which seeks to end all non-white immigration into Britain, is running 280 candidates in the general election and threatens to whip up simmering racial tensions.

It is the largest field the Front has mustered for a general election since it first competed for seats in the House of Commons with 10 candidates in the 1970 election. In the last election in October 1974, it ran 90 and got 3.12 percent of the vote.

Led by men with known fascist links, the Front has been involved in bloody street battles with leftists and non-white immigrants. None of its candidates has ever come close to getting elected despite an increase in racial tensions and opposition to non-white immigrants. But its slate of candidates running for election to the House of Commons May 3 is the fourth largest on the ballots, exceeded only by the "big three" Conservatives, Laborites and Liberals.

By having more than 50 candidates, the Front will get media exposure previously denied it.

It qualifies for a five-minute election broadcast on all TV channels April 26. It can also legitimately claim to participate with the three major parties in campaign TV and radio discussions.

The Front's national organizer, Martin Webster, said one of the reasons for running so many candidates was to beat what he called "the conspiracy of the media against us."

The Front, formed by a merger of the British National Party, the League of Empire Loyalists and other rightist groups, aims to restore Britain's lost imperial greatness, halt non-white immigration and repatriate the 3.2 million non-whites living in the country.

Its founder and chairman, 44-year-old John Tyndall, once paraded in Nazi-style uniform as one of the leaders of the British National Socialist party in the early 1960s.

The Front's support ebbs when the racial climate cools off and surges when it heats up. But Scotland Yard estimates it has 12,000 full-time members.

ECU Teacher Education Is Evaluated By Team Of 37

ECU News Bureau

An evaluation team of 37 educators from North Carolina universities, colleges, schools, and state agencies visited East Carolina University recently to evaluate the university's teacher education programs.

The evaluation team was directed by Dr. Lewis Swindell, former dean of Atlantic Christian College, now retired, who once taught at East Carolina, and Dr. H.M. Eldridge, associate director of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction's standards and certification division.

The visit followed a year-long self study by ECU, in which each academic department offering a program leading to teacher certification evaluated its curriculum offerings, faculty, students and facilities.

A steering committee, chaired by Dr. Kaye O. Sowell of the ECU Department of Mathematics, also evaluated overall policies, student services, campus-wide facilities and the student teaching program.

Their published report was sent to members of the visiting team in February.

The off-campus evaluation team included the following educators: Dr. Isaac Barnett and Iris Williams of N.C. A & T University; Drs. Grace Black and Brooklyn McGeachy of Fayetteville State University; Elsie Brumback, Clementine Holloway, Toni Patterson, Mary Purnell, Alice Solomon and Mrs. L. Preston Hancock, Doc McCulloch, Carolyn Myrick and Horace Robertson of the State Dept. of Public Instruction; Dr. Judy Dowell of Western Carolina University; Dr. Eugene Hermitte of Johnson C. Smith University; Drs. Alvin Hooks and Charles Porterfield of Appalachian State University; Dr. Barry Houschell of UNC-Chapel Hill; Dr. Joseph Lockvitch of Sacred Heart College; Dr. Jo May of Winston-Salem State University; Dr. Michael Michlin of Duke University; Drs. Barbara Parramore, William Waters and Walter Cox Jr. of N.C. State University; Dr. Morris Peterkin of Bennett College; Dr. Marian Solleder of UNC-Greensboro; Dr. David Webb of Atlantic Christian College; Dr. William Wiener of Lenior Rhyne College; Dolores Ford of Wahl-Coates Elementary School, Greenville; Dr. Hiram Mayo of the Craven County Schools; Dr. Ghza Sakran and Tony Swider of the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County Schools; and Delano Wilson of Ayden-Gritton High School.

They were joined by Dr. Donald Stedman, UNC Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs, and Dr. J. Arthur Taylor, director of the Division of the Standards and Certification, N.C. Dept. of Public Instruction. A highlight of the evaluation team's visit was a reception given by ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer in the Gray Gallery of the Jenkins Art Center.

In addition to visiting each department involved in teacher certification, team members met with 33 students and recent graduates of ECU's teacher education programs.

Arrest Woman In Theft, Fraud

Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that Marie Tripp Jones, 25 of 141 Holleybrook Estates, has been arrested on charges of credit card theft and credit card fraud.

Cannon said the woman was charged with one count of credit card theft and 12 counts of fraud in connection with the alleged illegal use of the card.

Rosalynn Sees Expansion Step

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter said Wednesday she expects President Carter to have legislation introduced soon that would expand community-based mental health services and increase the independence of local officials.

"Too often in the past few years, federal policy has made it difficult, if not impossible, for communities to assume responsibility for meeting the mental health needs of their citizens," Mrs. Carter told the Governor's Conference on Mental Health.

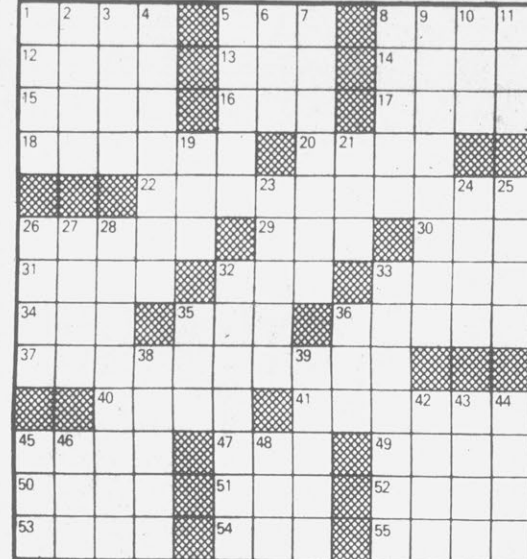

"For far too long, red tape and conflicting regulations and requirements at the federal, state and local levels have forced professionals to spend more time filling out forms than taking care of those in trouble," Mrs. Carter said.

A Charlotte woman, Suzanne McLeod, interpreted the remarks of Mrs. Carter and others who spoke at the conference into sign language for the deaf.

A spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources said Ms. McLeod would be interpreting for deaf participants throughout the three-day conference. The conference is sponsored by the state Division of Mental Health Retardation Services, a division of Human Resources.

Mrs. Carter, who is honorary chairman of the President's Commission on Mental Health, also pleaded for an end to the stigma she said follows persons with histories of mental illness.

"Stigma is such a crushing problem," she said. "Mentally ill and emotionally disturbed people need someone to provide them with friendship and support. Too often these people find just the opposite."

The bidding:
South West North East
1♦ Pass 2♦ Pass
3♦ Pass 4♦ Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Three of ♠.

In bridge, as in many other competitive activities, the man with nerve has a decided edge over his adversary. The fear of losing a trick has ruined many a defensive campaign.

South's bidding might not meet with the approval of some. While it is true that he does not hold much in the way of high cards, he has considerable playing strength. When North raised spades immediately, South realized that, despite a minimum point count, North's diamond holding was the key to game. He made a trial bid in that suit, and North had the right holding to accept.

Since the bidding suggested that declarer might need ruffs to make his contract, West decided to draw trumps as quickly as possible. To this end, he led a low trump. The nine won in dummy, and declarer led the singleton diamond from the table.

Not many players have the fortitude to refuse this trick, so when East played low without any problem, declarer finessed the jack. West won the queen and continued with the ace of spades and another. Declarer was able to ruff only one diamond in dummy, so he had to lose two more diamond tricks in addition to the ace of hearts, and he ended up down two.

Observe that, if East flies with the ace of diamonds when that suit is led from dummy, declarer will have no trouble in making his contract. One ruff is all he needs to set up his diamonds, and with the ace of hearts outside, declarer will lose only one trick in each suit except clubs.

Even if declarer has both the king and queen of diamonds, ducking the ace is unlikely to cost. Declarer will win the first diamond trick, but he still has quite a few diamonds to handle. The trick more than likely will come back one way or another.

The moral: Don't waste your aces on thin air. Try to capture something worthwhile with them.

Carters Host Oyster Roast

SAPALO ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — President Carter has hosted an oyster roast for the state employees who helped make a success of his eight-day holiday on this secluded coastal island.

Carter, who had no announced plans for his final day here today, held the food fest Wednesday evening for employees of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and the University of Georgia Marine Institute. Carter has been staying in a mansion rented from the institute, and many of the fishing grounds he has been frequenting are maintained by the natural resources agency.

The president spent four hours Wednesday fishing for sea trout, then went to a freshwater pond in pursuit of bream. There was no word on his success, or lack of it.

Mrs. Carter returned to Sapelo Island after spending much of Wednesday making public appearances in Raleigh, N.C. The president and his wife will be flying to their home in Plains, Ga., on Friday.

3rd Season For Real Talk Show

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The best talk show on television is about to start its third season on the air. Among its scheduled guests you'll find not a single author of a best-seller on running. No busy starlets or budding comedians.

Don't look for the Gabor sisters here. If you want David Brenner, tune in "Tonight" or Merv Griffin. He won't show up on Steve Allen's "Meeting of Minds" on public TV.

Allen invented the television talk show with the original "Tonight" show 25 years ago. Three years ago, with "Meeting of Minds," he perfected it.

I mean, this is a talk show host's dream. No agents to fool with, no union minimum, no plugs. Allen's guests say exactly what he wants them to say. He writes the script.

Among the personalities who missed the usual talk show circuit but made it to Allen's show are Teddy Roosevelt, Cleopatra, St. Thomas Aquinas and Galileo. When Johnny Carson's people want a naughty boy to liven things up they call Robert Blake. Allen got Attila the Hun. Tony Randall and Lola Falana are great, but how could you pass up the lineup Allen has set for his first show next month? Aristotle, Sun Yat Sen, Elizabeth Barrett Browning and Niccolo Machiavelli.

"Meeting of Minds," Allen says, is "drama disguised as a talk show." Allen acts as host to four people who figured prominently in history, preferably four people of unlike minds. Karl Marx, for example, had some wonderful disagreements with Ulysses S. Grant and Marie Antoinette.

Allen, a philosophy fanatic and an avid reader, writes conversations drawn from the writings and actions of his "guests," tinkering a bit here and there to make it seem spontaneous. It is educational and entertaining, superbly executed by a man who clearly loves history and philosophy as much as he loves to talk.

Allen says the research is demanding, but it's the actors who really have it tough. "It's a very difficult exercise for actors. I explain to them that they are asked to do two things at once. One is to act, and act damned well. The other is to not get caught at it."

The actors must display the flamboyance they'd employ if they were doing Shakespeare, but "they also have to speak as if they were there chatting with Merv Griffin," says Allen.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 20, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although you do not have any means by which to put a positive plan into motion, nevertheless you are able to find the right means by which to build a more up-to-date set of circumstances that can later be put into motion. Be more detailed about your specific aims.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Decide early which friends you want to have in your life in the future and contact them, show how much you appreciate them. Be more practical in going after your aims.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study how you want your career to trend and take steps in such direction. Get your credit rating improved by right methods. Don't be so irritable with family and have more happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go after information you need and then many interesting situations develop from which you can profit. Use good judgment and don't rely solely on your intuition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study debts and credits and get your affairs in better order. Show affection for your mate instead of antagonizing this person. Don't permit outsiders to disturb harmony. Be wise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to come to a better understanding with associates, so confer with them early for best results. Relieve tensions with those who oppose you. Showing kindness to others pays off.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is important that you handle work before going off on some foolish time-wasting activity. Find a better way of improving health and be more dynamic. Avoid that person who saps your strength.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Enjoy recreation that is not too expensive and get good results. But first finish any important work. Don't try to project yourself too much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make others aware of what it is you want. You'd like to delve into a new outlet, but it would be premature.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Pay visits to others, but take care you do not argue with them. Show kindness and all is well. Take no risks with your good name.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You feel like redecorating, but count the cost well first. Plan to save more money in the future. Postpone plans for now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Know what your subconscious aims are and how best to achieve them, gradually and safely. Make sure your health and appearance are good before dealing with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Seek out an adviser and handle confidential matters wisely. Take care you do not argue with loved ones. Show more thoughtfulness instead.

Asserts Studio Used Her Story

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Crystal Lee Sutton, who says the movie "Norma Rae" is based on her life at a North Carolina textile mill, is planning to sue 20th Century Fox, which produced the movie, for invasion of privacy.

"The movie is the story of my life as Crystal Lee Jordan, during 1973, as a union organizer at the J.P. Stevens Co. in Roanoke Rapids," said Mrs. Sutton.

The story line, Mrs. Sutton contends, follows the book "Crystal Lee." The book was written by Henry Leifermann and is about the life of a young girl in Southern textile mills. She said the book "was about me."

Mrs. Sutton also said she agreed to permit a Hollywood studio to base a film on her life. The deal fell through when the studio would not let Mrs. Sutton review the script. She said 20th Century Fox made "Norma Rae" without her permission.

Mrs. Sutton said two segments out of the movie were taken directly from her life.
