

Consumers Offered Little Relief Hope

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's advisers are offering little hope that consumers have seen the end to price surges such as the 1 percent increase in March.

"We can still expect months of bad news on the economy," especially on the inflation front, White House press secretary Jody Powell said Thursday after the Labor Department reported the latest rise.

The March increase — fueled by large price rises in food, fuel and housing — followed boosts of 1.2 percent in February and 0.9 percent in January. That translates to an annual inflation rate of 13 percent for the first quarter — the worst quarterly rise in 4½ years and far above the president's 7.4 percent target.

Despite continuing sharp increases in prices, Powell insisted the administration will stick to its anti-inflation policies that include voluntary wage and price guidelines.

Many officials — from Federal Reserve Chairman G. William Miller to Barry Bosworth, director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability — have warned that the public needs signs soon that inflation is slowing.

Bosworth, in a recent interview with The Associated Press, said, "The next two to three months are crucial."

He explained that "if the price situation doesn't begin to improve," wage earners will abandon hope that government policies can soften the bite of inflation and start demanding ever higher wages that would only worsen the inflationary spiral.

Alfred E. Kahn, the president's anti-inflation chief, told the Congress' Joint Economic Committee on Thursday: "We still have some bad months ahead. We can win this fight if we persevere. There are no other quick fixes around."

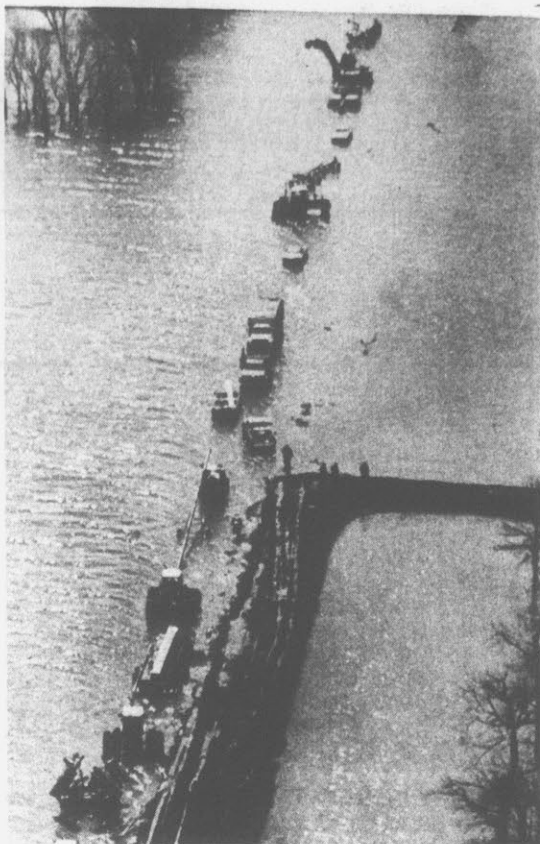

Only last month, Kahn said, "I will regard this program as having failed if by sometime like the beginning of the summer, we don't see the inflation rate tapering."

The Commerce Department reported that gasoline rose in March by nearly 4 percent, while food, housing and transportation costs all rose a percentage point or more.

Bosworth said consumer and business activity were not as high during the first quarter of 1979 as at the end of 1978, indicating a slowing of the economy that could translate into a more modest rate of inflation.

Supporting his premise that a "price explosion" could come soon if inflation continues at current rates, Bosworth noted that most workers have been settling for wage increases of 7 percent or 8 percent — well below the inflation rate — over the last couple of years and will not do so indefinitely.

Proposed Windfall Tax Not As Big As Expected

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President's Carter's

proposed tax on oil profits would have far less bite than generally supposed on the additional billions of dollars oil price decontrol will give to producers.

Although described originally as a 50 percent tax, the levy actually will cost oil companies only about 13 percent of the first three years' worth of extra income from decontrol, according to figures made public by the administration for the first time Thursday.

Carter's decision to eliminate gradually the federal ceilings on domestically produced oil will transfer $15.4 billion from consumers to oil companies by the end of 1981, administration officials said.

Far from taking half that amount, Carter's proposed "windfall profits tax" would net only $2 billion more in taxes that the oil companies would have to pay anyway under existing state and federal tax laws.

These figures contrast with the president's description of his proposed tax as the only barrier to a "massive ripoff" of consumers by oil companies.

If Congress enacts Carter's proposal intact, oil companies will get to keep $6 billion of their estimated $15.4 billion in additional revenue. If Congress passes no "windfall tax" at all, the companies still would get to keep only $8 billion, the new figures show.

The president proposes to funnel money from the windfall tax and from other oil-company taxes into a fund to help the poor pay their higher fuel bills, and to improve mass transit and look for new energy sources.

Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic policy aide, provided the estimate that decontrol will produce a gross increase of $15.4 billion in oil prices over the next three years.

Only $3.3 billion of that would be taxed away by the windfall levy, which figures out not to 50 percent but to a little over 21 percent.

The reason is that the administration would exempt several categories of oil, including oil flowing in the Alaskan pipeline, oil from wells that produce relatively little oil, and oil from wells that require certain expensive techniques to induce production.

Red River Nears Crest

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
Associated Press Writer

Rising Red River floodwaters, surging toward an expected crest today, churned along a 150-mile front of prime prairie farmland from Grand Forks, N.D. to Winnipeg, Manitoba, threatening the area's important wheat crop.

National Guard helicopters swooped low Thursday over the upper Red River Valley, their crews scanning vast flooded areas in search of marooned farm families. "There was water as far as you could see going north into Canada," said one helicopter pilot.

"Our chopper pilots reported a couple of farm families who said they hadn't seen anybody in four days and appreciated the food brought in," Lt. Col. Adrian Beltrand said Thursday.

In East Grand Forks, Minn., and its sister community, Grand Forks, N.D., the Red River climbed to more than 48 feet late Thursday, 1½ feet under its expected crest. An estimated 2,000 persons remain away from their homes in the beleaguered communities, civil defense officials said.

A hot, steady sun baked South Florida Thursday as residents of the wealthy Gold Coast area north of Miami tried to dry out following Wednesday's record rainfall of more than 16 inches in a 24-hour period.

"It's like a big swimming pool here and it's impossible," said Mayor Lenny Kimmel of North Lauderdale, Fla. "The kids are out of school and they're swimming along with the fish and the snakes and the alligators."

In Broward County, hardest hit by the deluge, Lew Watson of the Agricultural Extension Service said farm, nursery and livestock business may have been set back by as much as $20 million. Some 5,000 acres of vegetable crops, worth an estimated $5 million, were destroyed by the torrential rains in Palm Beach County.

President Carter declared 40 counties in North Dakota a federal disaster area Thursday and Minnesota Gov. Al Quie said he would request similar designation for Minnesota sections of the valley once the water has receded enough to assess damage.

The flat, fertile Red River Valley allows no real drainage. Flood waters spread over wide areas, threatening a score of towns, breaking through farm dikes and overflowing country roads and interstate highways alike.

Hundreds of farm families have chosen to stay at their sandbagged, waterlogged homes to protect livestock and property.

"You can get in a boat right here and go 10 miles either direction just across the fields," said Ed Jundt, chairman of the Pembina, N.D., Flood Committee. "Most of the grain bins are full of grain and some are sitting in four or five feet of water."

Injunction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has granted the University of North Carolina's request for a temporary injunction against the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

U.S. District Court Judge Franklin T. Dupree issued the order Thursday while in Wheeling, W. Va., hearing another court case, officials said.

The order restrains HEW and other defendants in the suit from deferring any federal funds to the 16-campus system.

Dupree also enjoined HEW from further pursuing any administrative enforcement proceedings against the university, according to the state attorney general's office.

The order runs through May 6. Dupree further ordered that a hearing on a preliminary injunction would be held at 9 a.m. on May 6 in Raleigh.

The university board of governors filed suit Tuesday against HEW after the two parties failed to reach agreement over the university's desegregation plan.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano announced recently that he would begin cutting off some of the $89 million in federal funds the university system receives beginning next month.

University officials could not be reached for immediate comment.

Says State Unprepared

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP)

After hearing state, local and Carolina Power & Light Co. officials talk their way through a mock nuclear accident scenario today, Gov. Jim Hunt said state authorities are not prepared to handle their responsibilities in such an accident.

Hunt made the statement to reporters after listening to authorities describe what they would do in case of an accident at CP&L's Brunswick Nuclear Power Station near Southport, about 20 miles south of Wilmington.

Hunt was asked why no drills were held and none of the accident plans were tested today.

"If we tried to do it on the ground today, we would not have done a very good job in my opinion," Hunt replied.

Asked if that meant if an accident did occur, authorities would be ill-prepared to handle it, Hunt said "I think the local people would be prepared to do a reasonably good job. I think on the state level we are not prepared, but we are going to get prepared."

Hunt said state plans are lacking regarding state authorities' ability to determine radiation levels in the vicinity of a nuclear accident and state authorities' ability to coordinate with local officials in such a case.

LIGNITE REPRESENTATIVE

An alleged representative of Phillips Petroleum Co. stopped by my house today to do some drilling for lignite. I asked for identification, and all he had was letterhead stationary, which could have been duplicated anywhere. I want to know if this is a legitimate operation, since I didn't feel that the identification was proper. C.M.

Hotline found that Phillips Coal Co. in Dallas, Texas, a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum Co. with headquarters in Raleigh, does have a legitimate representative in your area named John Keester.

"He is representing Phillips Coal Company in Dallas, Texas," said Steve Milburn, director of public affairs for Phillips Coal Co. "He's not a full-time, regular-type employee, but he's under contract for us in the field."

According to Milburn, Keester's job is to contact landowners, such as yourself, to obtain their permission and the necessary permits from their state and local government to drill in their areas.

If the required permits and landowner's permission are received, exploratory drilling crews of Phillips Coal Co. will follow.

Lignite or brown coal is an imperfectly formed coal. It's usually dark-brown and often has a distinct woody texture.

According to Milburn, this low-grade coal is presently being used to produce electricity in the northern plains area, for instance in North and South Dakota and especially in Montana. He added that in Texas alone, 40 to 50 per cent of that state's electricity is produced by lignite.

Milburn added that the Gulf coastal area has an estimated 22 to 23 billion tons of recoverable lignite.

At present, Milburn said that Phillips Petroleum Co., of which Keester is part, is beginning an exploratory program in the southeastern U.S.

He added that the Phillips Co., which has already worked its way up through Georgia and South Carolina, is now checking to see if there are any lignite deposits in this state.

ECU Commencement To Be Notable Event

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University's 70th annual graduation ceremony, scheduled for Friday, May 11, in Ficklen Stadium, will be a notable one in ECU's history.

For the first time, degrees will be conferred by ECU's seventh leader, Chancellor Thomas Brewer, and the ECU Trustees' Mace, wrought in gold and sterling silver last fall before Dr. Brewer's installation, will be borne by Professor Marguerite Perry, the ranking member of faculty in years of service.

In addition, Dr. John M. Howell, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at ECU, will deliver the commencement address.

Dr. Brewer, will confer the baccalaureate and graduate degrees to approximately 2600 students.

The Trustees' Mace, a ceremonial instrument that was given to the university by members and former members of the Board of Trustees, was designed and crafted especially for ECU by John Satterfield of the Art faculty.

The 1979 commencement ceremony will begin at 9 a.m. with a concert by the Symphonic Wind Ensemble.

Howell's address is scheduled for 10 a.m. and degrees will be awarded at 10:45 a.m. The public is invited to attend.

Service Stations Not Sharing In Big Profits

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Those big profits being reported by the oil companies apparently are not filtering down to the corner service station, a check indicates.

Questioning of a number of owner-operators in the Durham area brought these answers:

—Their profit margins are limited by the federal government and have not changed substantially in five years.

—Their profit margins range from 3 to 5 cents per gallon on self-service gas, and from 9 to 13 cents per gallon on full-service gas.

—Most stations now are closed on Sunday and have shortened their hours. They've done this, they say, to cut overhead cost because they are receiving less gas than a year ago.

—Most say they are angry because the general public thinks they are responsible for the continuing gas price increases.

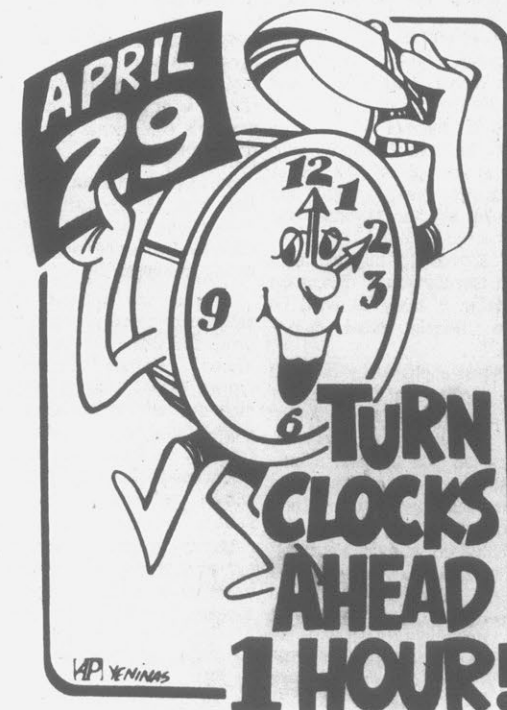

—Most say they are angry at their own oil companies because the companies, they say, are making big profits while the man who pumps the gas is limited as to what he can make.

On another front, the service station operators say frankly they don't believe there is a gas shortage, and they do think there is something going on in Washington between the gas companies and the government that has resulted in some American gas going overseas.

Meanwhile, a check of a number of service stations in eastern North Carolina indicates they will have enough gas to make it through April. Some stations are experiencing shortages, but most feel they will have an adequate supply.

In the mountains and at coastal resorts, it appears that motorists will have no trouble getting gas if they go about it at the right time. Some stations at resorts, as elsewhere, are closing on Sunday. Some, as elsewhere, also are closing early for the night.

The answer is: get there at the right time, and keep that tank as full as possible.

Remember!

To keep up with daylight-saving time, which begins in most parts of the United States at 2 a.m. Sunday, set your clocks and watches AHEAD one hour. You can turn them back again the last Sunday in October.

There's a catch-phrase that makes it easy to remember how to turn the dial: Spring ahead, fall back.

The following areas remain on standard time: Arizona, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the portion of Indiana in the eastern time zone.

How To Wield A Diner's Club

DEAR ABBY: STAN, who complained a lot in restaurants, may have gone overboard but he had the right idea. He had a habit of sending back food that was either overcooked, cold, smelled "funny" or wasn't what he ordered. And if the service was poor he left no tip and complained to the management.

Stan also carried a little battery operated fan to blow smoke back into the faces of people who smoked while he was eating.

With the prices one has to pay in restaurants today, we should demand top quality food and first-class service. It is our willingness to accept mediocrity that makes for sloppy service, bad food and shoddy merchandise in general.

As for Stan's little fan, he should be congratulated for having the courage to give those inconsiderate boors a taste of their own pollution.

You probably think I'm just another cheap, demanding, hard-to-please klutz like Stan, but I'm not. I'm one of the millions of weak, gutless wonders of the world who gets ignored, pushed around and walked over while continuing to overtip for second-rate service because I never had the guts not to.

DEAR NO GUTS: It takes a lot of guts to admit you've got no guts. So you may be a gutsier klutz than you think you are.

DEAR ABBY: Do you believe that only the good die young?

RUPERT IN TORONTO

DEAR RUPERT: Not necessarily. I'm more inclined to believe that only the YOUNG die GOOD!

DEAR ABBY: A friend recently invited us to her home for a salad dinner.

Every guest was asked to bring a salad as well as a going-away gift for a mutual friend who was moving.

When we arrived, there were no less than 75 people standing around. There was no place to sit. The guests were trying to juggle their plates in one hand and coffee cups in the other.

I am of the opinion that when you invite people to dinner you should provide them with a comfortable place to eat.

This was a building contractor's home. Maybe they just wanted to show it off to as many people as possible. Or perhaps they wanted to round up as many gifts as they could.

I've had it. The next time they invite us, I'll say, "Thanks, but no thanks."

Husbands Face Abuse Problem

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Queens College sociologist says verbal abuse of husbands is as rampant a problem as the physical abuse of wives.

Dr. Thomas Thompson said the stereotype of the sweet housewife being used and abused by her husband just isn't true.

A 32-year-old married man with two daughters, Thompson is doing a study on what he calls "female verbal aggression."

"When a physically battered wife shows up at the emergency room, it looks awful. And it is," he said in an interview. "But can you imagine a husband showing up saying he's been verbally battered and needs care?"

Thompson said as much attention needs to be given to the abused husband as to the abused wife.

In questioning 145 women of ages 18 to 54, Thompson found that the amount of abuse declined with the rise in the mother's educational level and the family income.

He said he was surprised to find that family size, sexual composition and the father's occupation had no bearing on the extent of abuse.

"Women are equipped mentally to be more verbally abusive, and that can't be understated ... No one living in the United States today is responsible for setting the sex roles women have been expected historically to follow. It's out of their hands, but they have to suffer the consequences," he said.

Thompson said the women in his classes are not surprised when he presents his research figures.

Conscious After Her Year In A Coma

AWAKE AT LAST! — Twenty-three-year-old Karen Delahanty lies in a hospital bed in New Britain, Conn. Injured in a car crash last year, the young woman spent a full year in a coma and has just begun to revive. Her mother, Lorraine Delahanty, looks on from right. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — When 23-year-old Karen Delahanty regained consciousness, she asked her mother, "How long have I been sleeping?" The reply: "A year."

Miss Delahanty spent that year in a coma — a year in which doctors first said she would not survive, then predicted she would not awaken.

Doctors aren't sure if she will regain use of her paralyzed legs and right arm, but to her parents, the fact that Miss Delahanty is alert and talkative is a miracle and a blessing.

The Avon, Conn., woman went into the coma when the car in which she was riding collided head-on with a police cruiser responding to an emergency call.

Less than a month ago, the mother, Lorraine Delahanty, affirmed her faith that recovery was possible. She told a reporter simply, "I believe in miracles."

Miss Delahanty had responded to pain, even had wept, but never had spoken. On April 12, nurses at New Britain Memorial Hospital excitedly telephoned her mother to tell her that a nose tube used to feed her daughter had become dislodged. When a nurse went to reinsert it, Miss Delahanty cried out, "No!"

The next day, Good Friday, Mrs. Delahanty was ready to leave after her daily visit to her daughter's bedside. As was her habit, she was talking to her daughter, despite the comatose woman's apparent inability to comprehend. Her mother said she had to go home and prepare dinner for the rest of the family.

"I don't want you to go," the daughter responded, speaking slowly but clearly, according to Mrs. Delahanty.

"It had to be God. It's got to be a miracle. There's no other explanation," Mrs. Delahanty said Wednesday.

Miss Delahanty's father, Joseph Delahanty, described the daughter's improvement as "an Easter blessing."

But her prognosis remains blurry, according to her parents. She has some pain and the paralysis.

"I am hoping," Mrs. Delahanty said.

The award, presented by Ms. Ellen Avery, president of the Winterville Jaycettes, was voted on by the members of the club.

Mrs. Weathering, who earned perfect attendance for the year, was complimented on the job she did as Scrapbook Chairman during the past year.

Mrs. Weathering is the wife of John G. Weathering and the mother of two sons. She is presently employed by the Pitt County Schools as a reading lab teacher at W.H. Robinson Primary School.

She was also presented a plaque by the Jaycettes for her outstanding contributions to the Winterville club and community.

Also during the meeting, Debbie Avery was named Jaycette of the Month for April. Avery, who will serve as president of the club in the upcoming year, has just completed serving as co-chairman of concessions for the Winterville Tractor Pull.

Avery is presently a teacher at North Pitt High School.

INSURANCE FOR STAYING MARRIED CHICAGO (AP) — Marriages of rich and of poor couples are more likely to dissolve than those of the middle class, reports Gary S. Becker, a University of Chicago economist who has been doing research on the family for the past seven years.

Becker, who conducts a weekly workshop on the family and related subjects for students and faculty members in economics, says these couples are most likely to remain married:

Those who do not marry too young or too old — the mid-20s is a good age — who share the same religion, who have children, where the husband earns a reasonably high salary — $20,000-$40,000 — and where the wife does not work.

Our Tar River Proves Friendly

The plight of residents along the Red River, and the Pearl River and elsewhere in the nation serves to remind us that we are fairly fortunate concerning flood conditions in Pitt County.

The Tar River rises and falls yearly, but because of the flood plain area to the north, it doesn't threaten large amounts of property.

There have been some gigantic floods, of course, including at least one which sent the waters over N. Greene Street, and frequently some buildings are threatened by rising waters. It would be rare, indeed in this area, however, to see water up to the rooftops of dwellings.

The Tar at Greenville furnishes much of the city's water supply. Throughout the county it offers recreational advantages. The river is something to be respected at all times but generally it is friendly to our populace.

Good Approach To Public Convenience

Perhaps there were legitimate excuses, but a meeting of the Joint City-County Planning Commission had to be postponed this week because of lack of a quorum.

This results in inconvenience to those who did attend and those awaiting action on projects.

It has been proposed that a simple majority of members constitute a quorum, regardless of whether they are city or county members.

This seems a logical approach to us, in that it would allow the commission to meet and act under most circumstances.

THIS AFTERNOON

Reaching For A Solution

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There is a growing and increasingly complex traffic problem in North Carolina... and one law enforcement officers can do little about.

The problem is vehicular traffic on private property where the usual state laws and local ordinances don't apply; places like military bases, college campuses, and especially shopping center parking lots.

When most stores were downtown, the traffic was largely on city streets. The proliferation of shopping centers has had a tremendous impact on that.

The knotty question is how to enforce parking and traffic flow controls, and how to resolve conflicts when there is a wreck.

A legislative proposal has been put into motion, but even the sponsor confesses that governmental entry to privately owned property and parking lots opens a Pandora's box.

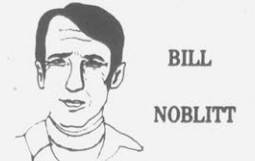

Rules of Road
One measure is called "Rule of Road for Private Roads", and in one paragraph says simply that all laws would apply to "any private road, roadway, street or alley which is accessible to the public."

"There are obvious problems with that," says State Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "I'm not at all sure we are equipped with manpower to handle that."

As though Highway Patrol, city police and sheriff's deputies didn't have enough to do on the public roads, they could be called on to enforce parking lot speeding, stop-sign violations, or parking restrictions.

But the manpower situation is further compounded by another problem, Miller adds: "Many private areas which are accessible to the public have no uniformity in width of roads, maintenance and upkeep of pavement, road markings, signs posted, and so on."

Additionally, there is a great debatable area involving college campuses and military installations. State or local law enforcement officers don't have jurisdiction on many such streets (unless they are designated as state or county roads), while Military Police can't prosecute a civilian who violates the law.

BILL NOBLITT

Topping off the confusion is the proliferation of local ordinances and enforcement techniques (such as towing) already in use from place to place, but lacking uniformity in warnings or enforcement, and dubious as to the authority under state law to perform such action.

Miller introduced the legislation at the request of state agency officials (motor vehicles and transportation) and terms the measure "an Administration bill."

Fire Lanes
State officials want to bring some uniformity and logical procedure to the hodgepodge, but Miller isn't at all certain the proposal can accomplish that.

A companion piece would give legal clout to parking restrictions in fire lanes designated in shopping center parking lots and elsewhere. In practice, such marked fire lanes simply provide a readily accessible parking space for numerous motorists who ignore the signs.

Police would be empowered to tow violators under the proposal, but again, Miller finds weaknesses in the measure. There is no uniformity in design or posting such areas, and it is questionable that local law enforcement manpower would be available to carry out the program at any rate.

THE GALLUP POLL

Carter Is 2-1 Over Brown

By George Gallup
PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter holds a solid 2-to-1 lead over California Gov. Jerry Brown as the choice of Democrats nationwide for the 1980 nomination.

In a two-way head-to-head contest, Carter wins 55 percent of the vote of Democrats to 28 percent for Brown. The California governor has not declared his candidacy but is expected in a few months to formally announce his intention to challenge Carter in a number of 1980 state primary elections.

While Carter holds a substantial lead over Brown, he trails Sen. Edward Kennedy. Despite his disavowal of any intention to run for the presidency in 1980, Kennedy currently runs ahead of Carter in the latest two-way matchup, 58 to 31 percent.

Kennedy's current margin closely parallels the results of the previous matchup in February when he led Carter, 60 to 28 percent.

This question was asked:
"Suppose the choice for president in the Democratic convention is 1980 narrows down to Jimmy Carter and Edmund (Jerry) Brown Jr. (Edward Kennedy). Which one would you prefer to have the Democratic convention select?"

Here are the latest choices of Democrats in the Carter-Brown showdown test and those from a comparable test in November:

	Carter	Brown	Undecided
Latest	55%	28%	17%
November	56%	28%	16%

Although Carter currently leads Kennedy by a substantial margin among Democrats, the race is a virtual dead heat among independents, 39 percent for Carter to 36 percent for Brown.

Here are the latest Carter-Kennedy results and results from February:

	Carter	Kennedy	Undecided
Latest	31%	58%	11%
February	28%	60%	12%

Kennedy also leads among independents, but by a narrower margin.

February	32%	53%	15%

The 'Why' Behind The Figures
The following verbatim comments from survey respondents give the flavor of the debate among Democratic voters over Carter and Kennedy:

Those Preferring Kennedy:
"I see the same great strength in Edward Kennedy that I saw in John and Bobby" ... "Kennedy's more exciting" ... "Carter hasn't shown too much leadership" ... "I think Kennedy's more experienced and stronger in his beliefs" ... "I'd vote for Kennedy if he could tell the truth about Chappaquiddick" ... "Jimmy Carter has shown that he is not capable of running this country" ... "I've always liked the Kennedys — they believe in equality and justice" ... "I believe Kennedy's senatorial experience has fitted him for the job."

Those Preferring Carter:
"I think a good president should have a second term to finish things they've started" ... "Jimmy Carter is more a middle-of-the-road Democrat or a conservative — Kennedy is a socialist and would turn this country into a socialist state" ... "No more Kennedys — I'm afraid of Kennedy's radical ideas of spending more than we can afford" ... "I like Kennedy's compassion and social vision, but I would have a feeling of uncertainty about his performance" ... "Kennedy would send us into the poor house" ... "Kennedy is a watered-down

Romeo versus Juliet

WASHINGTON — Romeo Montague and Juliet Capulet came to see me the other day. "We want to live together," Romeo said, "but since the Lee Marvin decision Juliet wants something in writing."

"I'm not a lawyer," I warned the lovers.

"It doesn't matter," said Juliet. "Anyone can draw up a contract as long as it's witnessed. I just want some protection if I'm going to give up the best years of my life for this loser."

"Are you certain you want to live together?" I asked.

"Sure," said Romeo. "We love each other. Besides, I'm tired of washing my own socks."

"And," said Juliet, "I'm tired of working in summer stock. It will be a relief to sit at home and watch the soap operas on television."

"You both sound like you're in love. Why do you need a contract?"

Romeo said, "All that female love talk can fool you."

One day it's "I can't live without you" and the next day it's "I'm going to take him for everything he's got."

Juliet said, "Men are all alike. They'll tell you anything to get their shirts ironed, but then they'll find somebody else and tell you to

To the editor:
As Greenville's Bicycle Safety Week comes to an end, I would like to remind residents of Greenville that safety is an issue that should be a concern during the entire year and not just during recognized safety weeks.

Bicycles are considered as vehicles and are, therefore, legally granted all of the rights and privileges of the road that automobiles have. They are also subject to the same restriction and laws. Oftentimes we tend to overlook these facts. There have been too many serious accidents and fatalities involving bicyclists over the past several years. Perhaps the best rule of the road for all vehicle drivers is to use common sense and courtesy in the operation of your vehicle. Share the road with others and be aware of their rights, as well as your own. Please drive defensively, not offensively, when on your bicycle as well as when in your car.

Romeo said, "I don't mind giving her a few bucks when I get tired of her as long as she gets out of my hair."

I told them, "It sounds like you are truly crazy about each other."

Romeo said, "We are in love, but I'm not going to break my neck as an actor and give it all away just because I went nuts over some chick who looked good in the moonlight while standing on a balcony."

Juliet said, "Daddy is so mad at me for moving in with Romeo that he's cut me off without a dime. If I'm going

Mental State: Panic

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) — "What was the state of your mind when you wrote last Wednesday's column?"

Justice Byron White, who posed the question, is peering anxiously over the great carved desk awaiting my answer, while the other justices rock meditatively back and forth in their high backed leather chairs.

Empty. Vacuous. Hung-over. Naked before mine enemies, the Smith-Corona people.

Are these legal terms? Valid alibis?

Actually, Your Honor, my mind was as blank as the paper sticking out of the typewriter and the problem was, like now, to come up with 500 or so words to get me off the hook for yet another day.

Panic might best express the state of my mind, but there must be an imposing psychological term for fear of empty spaces protruding from a typewriter roller.

When the High Court ruled the other day that a reporter can be compelled to disclose his thoughts, opinions and judgments in sitting down to write a story, I immediately dreamed my attorneys were entering a temporary insanity plea or pleading no contest on the grounds that no recognizable thought process could ever be detected in these random thrice weekly musings.

But if plea bargaining is permitted, I should like to suggest that my own mental condition in approaching a deadline is best expressed in Hal Boyle's favorite quote from Emily Dickinson: "Help, help, another day!"

The same sort of daymares troubled my desk-bound afternoon nap when the Supreme

Ed T. Whitehurst who has been a member of The Daily Reflector staff in various capacities for the past several years left today for Dallas, Texas where he has accepted a position with the Lance Packing Company.

Whitehurst had been connected with The Daily Reflector for about 11 years, having started as a small boy delivering papers, serving later as director of carriers in the circulation department and finally in the advertising department where he worked until resigning to accept his new position in Texas.

Pitt County ABC officers yesterday located and destroyed a 100-gallon gallon capacity steam-operated still in Swift Creek Township. The still was not in operation when discovered and no one was at the scene.

The officers found three 400-gallon fermenters at the scene, but no new mash was found. Also, six cases of one-half gallon glass jars were found about the still. The belief was expressed that the still had made a run recently and all the newly manufactured liquor removed.

Strength For Today

PEACE OF MIND
Two friends sat on a porch late one summer afternoon. The family dog lay stretched out in the sunshine, drowsing happily, occasionally rousing enough at the sound of his master's voice to open one eye and beat his tail lazily on the floor.

"Talk about peace of mind," said the dog's master, "there's real peace and contentment."

In a way, of course, he was right. Not only was the dog happy and content at the moment, but he was entirely free from the worries that plague most of us.

Some of us, when we wish or pray for peace of mind, seem to want to be very much like that dog — free from work and worry. But that kind of peace is not possible for human beings — certainly not for Christians.

Real peace of mind comes not from the absence of problems but from the possession of confidence and strength to face the problems. Christians know that only God can help them do that in confidence and strength.

A Real Learning Experience

By GAIL MICHAELS
A married man's return to school is a real learning experience for his wife. Perhaps he learns the workings of the world of high finance, the intricacies of chemical engineering, or the newest theories in behavior modification. But it's his wife who learns to feed a family of two or more on a negative income, to remove ink stains from permanent press, and to fall asleep after an 18 hour day to the rhythmic beat of pica type.

In fact, the only measurable difference between the school experience of the students and that of their wives is that at the end of it all the students are rewarded with a diploma. All the wives get is battle fatigue. No wonder the typical graduate wife feels helpless, uprooted, and resentful.

Most wives I know respond to these feelings in one of three ways. Some really comlicated matters by going back to school, too. Others join a graduate wives association which teaches them the virtue of forbearance. But most of them practice the laying on of guilt.

Now this response may not help the immediate situation, but it's a great way to get even. An experienced graduate wife can spread guilt as thick as peanut butter. When her husband mentions that she's served scrambled eggs for supper three times in a row, she says, "And whose fault is that? I certainly never wanted to be poor."

When he comments on her lack of interest in their three room apartment with concrete block walls, she says, "What do you expect? You're the one who made me give up my nice home." And when he gets angry because the kid down the street hit his kid over the head with a croquet mallet, she says, "I never wanted to move to this town in the first place."

Of course, I would never say such things. Whenever I felt compelled to say something along those lines, I would tell myself that the anxiety was worth it, that Phillip was learning important skills in business school which would eventually benefit us both in the real world. That's why I was so happy when he came home just beaming and said, "I had a great day today. My marketing professor was really impressed by our group's presentation."

"Wonderful! What was your presentation about?"

"Marketing contact lenses for chickens."

"You're kidding."

"No, I'm not. And do you know what our plan was? A chicken fry in Southern California."

"Isn't that going to alienate a large number of potential customers?"

"We're selling them to the farmers, not the chickens. smartly. 80 percent of the chickens are raised in Southern California, and we figured a chicken fry would be a good opportunity to demonstrate our product."

"How? With an optometrist and an eye chart? I didn't know they made one in chicken scratchings."

"Very funny. The contact lenses don't help them see better. The lenses make their vision so bad that they have to bend over to see everything."

"This is really beginning to sound like one of your visionary products."

"It's actually very useful. Bending over is a gesture of humility, so the chickens don't peck each other to death while establishing a pecking order. Isn't that interesting?"

I glared at him. "For this you made me leave my friends and my home?"

Court ruled it was within the bounds of the Constitution for police to probe the files of newspaper offices.

My first thought was, welcome, you'll be the first ones in history ever to find anything useful in these files.

But then I began to have second thoughts about strangers rifling through my random collection of inconsequential. What if the agents assigned to my case discovered that battery-operated yo-yo in my top left hand drawer? That set of Las Vegas souvenir loaded dice? An ashtray from a second-rate Roman hotel that somehow found its way into my portmanteau? Two old expense accounts that I could probably explain if I had to, but ...

The long awaited decision in the Lee Marvin "palimony" trial also occasioned some subliminal brooding. The thoughts were stirred by what feminist Gloria Steinem, the editor of Ms. magazine, said after the judge handed down his ruling. Asked what effect the decision would have on other live-in relationships, she thought it was likely that from here on out women would insist "on an agreement in writing before they gave up their careers or wash even one dish."

Well, it just so happens that I am in possession of just such a written document. It is called a marriage license. Mine, issued under remote Vatican jurisdiction, has a no-trade clause, and even with recent advances in the technology of automatic dishwashers I believe it is a little late in the game to have myself declared a free agent.

salesgirl in Bloomingdale's." "Are you sure you want a contract?" I asked.

"Why do you ask the question?" Romeo demanded.

"Well, let us suppose that at some stage Romeo says, 'I can't take this woman any more. She nags worse than a fishwife.' And Juliet says, 'I'm tired of being a surrogate wife when I could be the star of the Stratford-Upon-Avon Shakespeare Festival.' If you have a contract you can't sue each other."

"That's the idea," Romeo said.

"If I don't trust him now, you can imagine my feelings about him later," Juliet said.

"I understand that," I told the lovers, "but do you realize what a lawsuit would mean? You would have worldwide notoriety. Can't you see the headlines? 'Juliet Capulet Sues Romeo Montague for $1 Million. Romeo Tells Her to Take Poison.'"

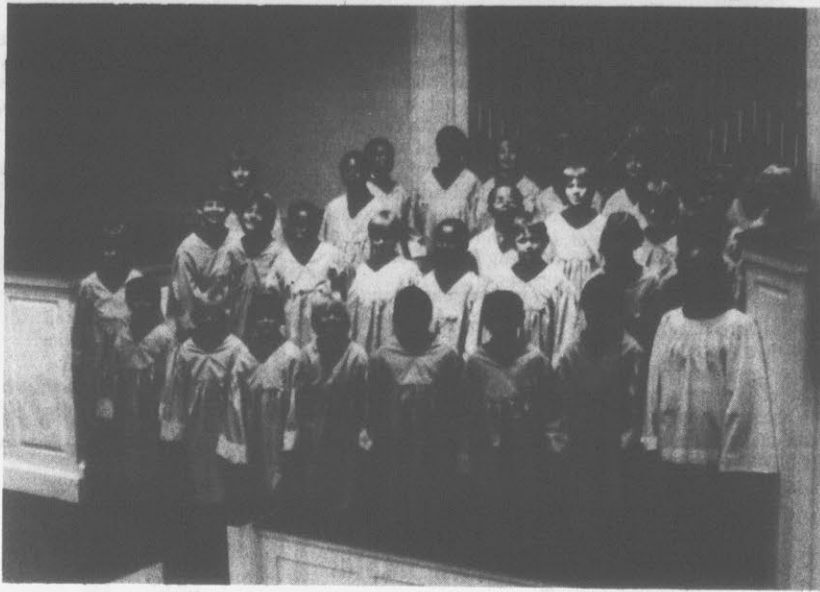

"So?" Romeo said. "Who wants the publicity?"

"Don't you see the commercial value of such a suit?" I told them. "The William Morris Agency will get a book contract for Juliet. As an actor, Romeo will be hot again and could renegotiate his contract with the Globe Theater. Juliet could go on the lecture circuit and give speeches to Women's Lib groups. Romeo could get on 60 Minutes. Your lawyer would make a mint with all the publicity he got from the case. Everybody would win on this one. A contract between the two of you would destroy any literary value your tragic romance has."

"He's right," Juliet said to Romeo. "I'll just move in with you and we'll play it by ear."

"Okay. You can hang your clothes in my closet until the bloom is off the rose," Romeo

Greenville Boys Choir Gives Concert Sunday

BOYS CHOIR ... The Greenville Boys Choir, shown here with director Tom Hawley (right), will give the spring concert at 3 p.m. Sunday at St. James United Methodist Church. There is no admission charged, and the public is invited to attend.

Twenty-nine young singers, members of the Greenville Boys Choir, will present their annual spring concert at St. James United Methodist Church at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 29.

A reception, to be held in the fellowship hall of the church, will immediately follow the concert.

Tom Hawley, director of the Greenville Boys Choir, informs that the Sunday program will consist of both sacred and secular selections.

Songs to be performed are: Bach's "Now let all the earth adore thee" and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," Muriel Anderson's "Alleluia! Praise the Lord!," Hal Hopson's "O Praise the Lord, Who made all Beauty," "Father, Lead me day by day" by Georg Strattner; Cat Stevens' "Morning has Broken," and a selection of traditional and spiritual songs.

The boys will be joined by men of St. James Choir in the singing of Mozart's "Gloria."

Also on the program are songs constituting a tribute to Walt Disney, including "Whistle While You Work," "When You Wish Upon A Star," "Want To Be Like You," "With a Smile and a Song," "The Bare Necessities," and "Super-califragilisticexpialidocious."

Recently, the choir sang for the Rockingham Arts Festival before an audience of more than a thousand junior and senior high students. The boys from Greenville received a standing ovation for their performance.

They have also made appearances at St. Mary's Episcopal Church in Kinston, before various local civic clubs, at the Greenville Utilities Christmas party, and last autumn they sang for a special Thanksgiving Vesper service in Greenville.

There is no admission for the Sunday concert and the public is invited to attend.

According to Jean Darden, council chairperson, the forum is designed to provide local residents with educational information concerning both sides of the amendment proposal. The forum will be the first in series of programs to be presented by the council during the coming year.

Speakers presenting information favoring ERA will be Tena Gross and Jim Rees. Speaking against the amendment will be Elizabeth Savage and John East. Terry Shank will serve as moderator for the forum.

The program will be limited to one hour and will include a 15 minute question and answer session. The public is invited.

The Pitt County Council on the Status of Women is a 15-member council appointed annually by the Pitt County Commissioners to study and report on the needs, issues, and trends affecting women today.

Analysis of the support of Democrats for Carter and Brown shows the former to be particularly strong among Democrats with a college background, older adults, Protestants and Southerners.

Brown shows his greatest support in the West where both Carter and Brown run neck-and-neck.

OZ

is coming to PITT PLAZA in a balloon.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday

The biggest balloon this side of the rainbow will be at Pitt Plaza this Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The Wizard of Oz will be there, too. And all the other characters from Oz will be there. Except Dorothy. We'll be looking all over Pitt Plaza for her.

Enter the Dorothy look-alike contest.

There's a Dorothy look alike contest on Saturday with judging from 3 to 4 p.m. The Tin Man, Scarecrow and the Cowardly Lion will judge the contest to see who looks the most like Dorothy! The winner will be announced at 8 p.m. Saturday night.

And win a trip to Oz.

The winner of the look-alike contest will win a full tank of gas, room, and tickets to the Land of Oz in Banner Elk for herself and three friends and her parents.

The Winner Of The Dorothy Look Alike Contest Will Also Win A Ride In A Hot Air Balloon.

All you have to do is dress like Dorothy and come to Pitt Plaza before 3 o'clock on Saturday. Or, come Thursday or Friday and ask the Wizard for details. He's easy to find. Look for the biggest balloon this side of the rainbow.

It is commonplace to find hands where declarer needs to count distribution to produce the winning play. But it is just as important, and it occurs just as frequently, to count on defense. By taking time out to count the hand at a critical stage, West was able to come up with a thoughtful play to defeat South's spade slam.

The bidding is recorded as it actually took place, and does not have our stamp of approval. We prefer a two no trump opening with the South hand. The danger with opening one spade on such a strong hand is that partner might not be able to respond at such a high level, with the result that a game could be missed. North's jump to four spades is certainly open to question—despite his five-card trump support and singleton, two spades is ample on a hand that contains neither an ace nor a king.

West led a diamond and South was most disappointed with his dummy. He won the jack of diamonds with the ace and ruffed his remaining diamond. After drawing trumps in two rounds, declarer ran the hearts, discarding a club from his hand. Now he led the jack of clubs. East covered with the queen and declarer produced the king.

Had West won the ace of clubs, the slam would have been made—a club continuation would have been into declarer's 10-8, and a diamond would allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other. Fortunately, West took time out to count the hand.

Declarer is known to have four spades, three hearts and two diamonds (if he had another diamond, he would have ruffed it before playing on clubs). Therefore, he had started with four clubs and, despite his discard, he still had two more clubs; so there was no need to rush in with the ace. Accordingly, West allowed declarer's king to win the trick.

Now there was nothing declarer could do to prevent the loss of two club tricks. A fine defensive play was well rewarded.

Show Uplifting And Also Informative

By PETER J. BOYER

AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

When was the last time you saw a TV news special that made you feel happy? Here's one. "The Boston Goes to China," tonight's edition of "CBS Reports."

It is informative, as news specials are supposed to be, but it is also uplifting, which news specials seldom are.

Reporter Ed Bradley and his crew followed conductor Seiji Ozawa and the Boston Symphony Orchestra to China — the first major cultural exchange between the U.S. and China since the two nations normalized relations. Bradley seized the opportunity to produce a fine news report on the changing China, using a man-on-the-street approach that gives viewers a feel for the Chinese people, whom, it seems, are less a lot of happy automations than some of us might have supposed.

In his side excursions into the streets of Shanghai and Peking, Bradley found people willing to talk about the demise of the Gang of Four and the end of the Cultural Revolution, and in an open manner that Bradley tells us would have meant jail a short time ago.

In Shanghai, for example, the cameras caught a group of demonstrators loudly protesting their imminent departure for the countryside work farms. There is something reassuring about their protest.

Then there is Bradley in the midst of a crowd, quizzing a man about the Gang of Four, a group of radicals led by the wife of the late Chairman Mao. At one point, the man told Bradley he'd said enough and started to move away. The crowd squeezed him back toward Bradley. "They demand I say more to you," he said.

And there is the music. It is a moving moment when the Peking Central Philharmonic joins the Boston for a rendition of Beethoven's Fifth before an excited audience of 18,000. Until a year ago, the only piece in the Peking Philharmonic's repertoire was that revolutionary tune (and everybody's favorite) "Taking Tiger Mountain by Strategy."

It's nice, this, a warming piece of journalism that focuses on a ray of light in a world whose dark and ominous aspects are usually the subjects of news specials. Even the calused might get a shiver when, prompted to encore, the joined musicians launch into a spirited rendition of John Philip Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Can you imagine that? These Chinese in Mao suits, sitting in with the running dogs from Boston, playing that most American of anthems. It's the Fourth of July, and you want to believe the hopeful prophesy in Bradley's paraphrase of the Irish poet: "Maybe," he says, "it's the music makers who are the movers and shakers."

Carson Aware ABC 'Stroking'

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Johnny Carson leave "The Tonight Show" for a job with ABC? "I can't answer that," Carson tells CBS' Mike Wallace, conceding ABC may be "doing a little stroking, as all networks do," in an effort to attract him.

Carson, in an interview for CBS' "60 Minutes," to be broadcast Sunday evening at 7 p.m. EDT, recalls an informal get-together after his appearance as host on ABC's broadcast April 9 of the Academy Awards show.

"They...made no direct overtures of my coming to the network," Carson says. "I would assume that when somebody has you socially for dinner — I'm not that naive — that they might say, 'Hey, it would be nice possibly if Johnny Carson worked over here.'" Wallace and the "60 Minutes" crew visited Carson April 15 at his home in Bel-Air, Calif., about a week before the story broke that Carson wanted out of his NBC contract, which runs until mid-1981.

CBS had planned to produce a profile of the entertainer for fall broadcast, but pulled some of the newsworthy material — from the footage shot Easter Sunday for immediate broadcast.

The segment runs about 14 minutes. Carson tells Wallace he did not fight with his boss, NBC President Fred Silverman, over the amount of time he spends as host of "The Tonight Show," and he refuses to answer Wallace's repeated questions on his legendary salary.

"Now who said I got three or four million dollars annually?" asks the man who probably is the highest paid entertainer in TV.

"You know that you do," Wallace says.

"Nobody's ever quoted my salary correct," says Carson, "and that's always intrigued me. Nobody has ever had the figure right."

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Power Line Re-Routed

SHANNON, N.C. (AP) — A
Carolina Power & Light Co.
transmission line has been rerouted so it won't cross the site of the annual Flora McDonald
Highland Games, company officials report.

Officials for the games have said the line would destroy the natural beauty and home setting of the games, which take place on Donald H. Humphrey's
60-acre farm in the Robeson County community of Shannon near Red Springs.

The company had planned to route a four-mile segment of a 500-kilovolt transmission line through the site.

Fred Jerome, manager of CP&L's transmission-line engineering and construction, said the company was not aware of the games site until after the proposed line was first surveyed.

"As soon as we identified the games site and verified that it is a cultural event of significant public interest, we evaluated alternate routes and have determined that it is feasible to reroute the line to the south," Jerome said.

The controversial section is part of a 60-mile transmission line that will link substations
near Fayetteville with substations near Rockingham, where CP&L's system connects with an electrical system operated by Duke Power.

Humphrey and G.T. Ammons of Red Springs, president of Flora McDonald Highland Games Inc., had said they would draw up a formal agreement about the games'
rights to the use of the farm for the annual event to keep them from being disrupted.

Mormon Leaders Combat 'Irreligion'

Private School Vote Is Today

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Final House action on two Senate-passed bills removing the state's Christian schools and other non-public schools from current state regulations was expected today.

A group of fundamentalist Christian schools has been fighting state Board of Education regulations for nearly two years, saying they are an infringement on their freedom of religion.

The bills, which would set up separate, more lenient regulations for the schools' operations, gained tentative approval in the House Thursday.

Approval on the church-school bill, on a 91-15 vote, came after nearly two hours' debate and attempts by opponents to have it re-referred to a House judiciary committee to consider legal questions.

Both bills would exempt the state's private schools from a requirement that they hire only certified teachers and that they must administer the state minimum competency test.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said the provision about the competency test could jeopardize the state's entire minimum skills testing program that was set up by the 1977 legislature.

Under the bill, the church-affiliated schools would be required to give a competency test, but it could be one of their own choosing instead of the state test. And while the schools would have to make passage of the test a requirement to receive a diploma, they would be able to set the passing score.

Miller said consideration should be given to the effect the bill would have on the public schools.

State law now requires that all high school students pass the state minimum competency test before they receive a diploma.

"What effect would this bill be on the competency test requirement passed in 1977," Miller asked. "We are running afoul of the equal protection provisions in the constitution. There are serious questions as to the effect the bill would have on the 1977 law."

However, Miller's efforts were defeated when supporters of the bill insisted it be voted up or down on the floor without further committee consideration.

"I want a chance to vote on this bill," said Rep. Ernest Messer, D-Haywood, a supporter. He said that if the bill went back to committee it might not come out or it might come back heavily rewritten.

There were also efforts to amend the bill to address, in an indirect manner, the lack of a requirement for hiring certified teachers.

Rep. Casper Holroyd, D-Wake, offered an amendment to require the schools to list the members of their professional staff, their professional background, and their experience for parents' perusal.

"If you pass this bill as it is now, there is nothing about certification of teachers," Holroyd said. "No one will know who is teaching the children in these schools." He called for a provision requiring the hiring of certified teachers, but said he knew he couldn't get it passed.

His amendment failed on a 34-72 vote.

The second bill, dealing with other non-public schools, won tentative approval on a 80-24 vote after some of the same objections were voiced. Miller objected to the final vote on both, delaying them at least until today.

Mormon leaders, whose church cherishes its American roots, have called for struggle against "growing efforts to establish irreligion, such as atheism or secularism" as the official position of the United States.

Such efforts are contrary to the "historical facts" and founding principles of the nation, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints says.

It was the most direct appeal of its kind from a major denomination, although individual church leaders have previously spoken against modern pressures to restrict public marks of faith.

Urging Americans "to resist the forces that would transform the public position of the United States from the constitutional position of neutrality to a position of hostility toward religion," the church's first presidency said:

"We urge our members and people of good will everywhere to unite to protect and honor the spiritual and religious heritage of our nation."

Hold District Union Meet This Weekend

District Union Meeting no. 2 will convene at Cherry Lane F.W.B. Church Friday, April 27, and run through Sunday, April 29, announced Union president Rev. C. R. Parker.

On Friday, services will begin at 7:30 p.m. with a sermon by Eldress P. Phillips, assisted by the Good Hope youth choir and ushers.

Services on Saturday will begin at 12 noon with a one hour prayer service led by Eldress R. Knox. Business matters of the

The first presidency is the 4 million-member denomination's chief governing body, made up of church President Spencer W. Kimball and two counselors, N. Eldon Tanner and Marion G. Romney.

For instance, a current law of church President Spencer W. Kimball and two counselors, N. Eldon Tanner and Marion G. Romney. They are religiously motivated. However, many causes, such as equal civil rights, drew power time when numerous religious leaders, Protestant, Roman did the settling of America it Catholic and Jewish, have self.

Some see a trend toward abolishing religious considerations from public discourse, as in officially atheist states, through expanded applications of the principle of separation of church and state.

The principle derives from the constitutional prohibition against any "law respecting the establishment of religion," barring a state church, which no longer is seen even as a remote possibility. But in some cases, some churchmen say the principle is being applied differently to rule out religious expressions — or motivations — from consideration in framing public and social policies.

"We are committed by experience as well as by precept to the wisdom of a constitutional principle that government ... should maintain a position of respectful neutrality in the matter of religion," the new church statement says.

But it adds that the principle "does not call for our nation to ignore its religious heritage, including the religious motivations of its founders and the powerful religious beliefs of generations of its people and its leaders."

CREATIVITY

Only man can create with his hands, making beautiful things from the substances that come from God's earth. Only man can truly reason. Only man can run the full gamut of feeling from joy and victory to despair and defeat.

We are complex creatures, because we can create and reason and feel. Sometimes it seems virtually impossible to bring our faculties into a sensible focus. Everything from unpaid bills to vital decisions affecting ourselves and our loved ones seems to be just a step ahead of us. We are eternally running to keep up, and often falling short.

No one ever said that we had to go it alone. The Church isn't a crutch but it is a sanctuary, a place where souls are healed. Have you been there lately?

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market retreated again today, faced with concern over a sudden surge in the money supply.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 6.49 on Thursday, lost another 4.07 to 856.90 by noon today.

Losers outdistanced gainers by about a 5-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Federal Reserve statistics issued late Thursday showed a $4.1 billion jump in the basic measure of the money supply for the latest reporting week.

Analysts said the unexpectedly large rise might well increase pressure on the Fed to tighten credit further, pushing interest rates upward.

It also was seen as one piece of evidence that, despite the central bank's efforts to date, inflationary forces remain strong in the economy.

Oil stocks generally declined after their recent broad rise. Texaco was off 1/4 at 27 and Mobil lost 1/4 to 79 1/2.

General Public Utilities slipped 1/4 to 10 1/4 after a 1 1/4-point drop Thursday, when the company's directors cut the quarterly dividend from 45 to 25 cents a share following last month's accident at the company's Three Mile Island plant in Pennsylvania.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 22 to 57.30, and the American Stock Exchange market value index was down .06 at 183.37.

Volume on the Big Board came to 13.38 million shares at noon.

First Recipient Of Annual Scholarship Fewer Units For Renting

ECU News Bureau
Thomas Sallenger of Windsor, a junior accounting and finance major at East Carolina University, is the recipient of ECU's first annual James Mallory Scholarship.

The $250 award, named in honor of ECU's current Dean of Men, is to be given each year to a male dormitory resident who has a superior record of academic achievement and leadership in campus organizations.

The Mallory scholarship program is sponsored by the ECU Men's Residence Council.

Sallenger formally accepted the award at the recent MRC spring banquet and installation ceremony, at which the following MRC officers were sworn in: Charles West of Dunn, president; Grady Gresham Dickerson of Oxford, vice president; Kim Carlisle of Roanoke Rapids, treasurer; and Steve Moore of Durham, secretary.

The ECU Men's Residence Council, representing the 2,000 male dormitory residents who live on College Hill at the south end of the main campus, promotes fellowship and service among its members.

Its major projects include improvement of campus facilities through the MRC Grounds Committee and annual sponsorship of gifts for foster children in local homes.

Grant Awarded To Crittenden

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Dan Crittenden, research associate in the Department of Physiology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has received a $1,300 grant from the N.C. United Way to study changes that occur in the lungs as a result of stellate ganglion stimulation, an effect that produces alterations in respiratory function similar to those resulting from head injuries.

Crittenden plans to simulate head injuries in animal models to learn more about how a massive discharge of adrenalin produced by the injury causes the lungs to be less elastic and unable to function properly.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Families searching for apartments this spring face hard times because fewer units are available. And housing experts say the situation will get worse, especially with inflation boosting rents.

"There is really a crisis in multi-family rental housing in this country," Lawrence B. Simons, federal housing commissioner, said in an interview Thursday.

Jay Shackford of the National Association of Home Builders agreed. "The vacancy rate has been declining since the recession of 1974-75," he said. "You don't see the big rental apartment projects going up any more. They're just too costly."

Statistics show that the tightest rental market is in the Northeast and that apartment dwellers in central cities everywhere fare a bit better than their counterparts in rural and suburban locales.

Most housing experts believe at least six to seven apartments of every 100 must be on the market to give families enough choices.

However, the Census Bureau reported Thursday the rental vacancy rate nationwide was 4.8 percent in the first three months this year — the first time in more than two decades of records-keeping that fewer than five of every 100 units were on the market.

Brewers Erupt For A Sweep

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Call them the modern-day hitless wonders — Robin Yount, 1-for-29; Gorman Thomas, 0-for-24; Ben Oglivie, 1-for-31. The three Milwaukee Musketeers broke their slumps with a vengeance Thursday night, collecting 12 hits in 25 at-bats with four doubles, three homers and nine RBI as the Brewers snapped a five-game losing streak by sweeping a 5-1, 7-5 double-header from the Detroit Tigers.

In a stroke of genius, Manager George Bamberger made Yount and Thomas the 1-2 hitters in the Brewers' batting order and it paid off. Yount broke his slump with a three-run sixth-inning double in the nightcap and doubled home another run in a three-run eighth. Thomas, who homered in each game, followed with a decisive two-run single.

Including the double-header, there were only eight games on Thursday's major league schedule and two of them — the New York Yankees at Oakland and San Francisco at the New York Mets — were rained out.

In other games, the Boston Red Sox blanked the Seattle Mariners 2-0, the Baltimore Orioles downed the California Angels 4-2 and the Kansas City Royals nipped the Cleveland Indians 5-4.

The Brewers won their first game from Detroit as Cecil Cooper homered and Charlie Moore lined a two-run single in a three-run seventh-inning.

They loaded the bases in the sixth inning of the nightcap on Oglivie's fourth straight hit, a walk and a checked-swing pinch single by Larry Hise. Yount then doubled to score all three runners and give the Brewers a 4-3 lead. A walk and an error preceded Yount's RBI double in the eighth and Thomas followed with a two-run single.

Thomas' six hits were one more than he had all season and the free-swinging center fielder had struck out 18 times in 42 at-bats.

Red Sox 2, Mariners 0
Bob Stanley scattered six singles and Rick Burleson delivered a two-run single in the third as the Red Sox won their seventh game in a row and extended Seattle's losing streak to a club record 11 games. Burleson's hit followed Bob Montgomery's double, a single by Jerry Remy and a stolen base. Boston ran its record to 12-4, matching its previous best effort for April. In 1971, the Red Sox were 12-7 in the first month.

Orioles 4, Angels 2
Pinch hitter Lee May's tie-breaking single and Eddie Murray's sacrifice fly in the top of the ninth inning helped Baltimore record its eighth straight victory and hand the Angels their fourth consecutive setback.

California starter Nolan Ryan had to leave the game after two innings because of a pulled groin muscle.

Royals 5, Indians 4
Cleveland reliever Sid Monge threw a bases-loaded wild pitch in the bottom of the ninth inning and Willie Wilson streaked home with the winning run. Monge was brought in to face George Brett after the Royals loaded the bases against loser Dan Spillner.

Brett's triple keyed a three-run rally in the sixth and Darrell Porter clubbed a solo home run as the Royals won their fourth game in a row. Bobby Bonds and Gary Alexander homered for Cleveland.

Pirates Face Tough Field

The Penn Relays, one of the most important meets of the season, comes up this weekend for East Carolina's men's track team. The Philadelphia event annually features many of the top amateur athletes in America.

"We will concentrate on times this weekend," said Pirate coach Bill Carson. "If we run well, we hope we can qualify for the NCAA finals next month."

Again this year, East Carolina will enter four outstanding relay teams. Carson hopes to break the school record of 1:24.1 in the 800 relay using Warren Days, Bobby Phillips, James Fields and Otis Melvin. Days, Fields, Terry Perry and Bill Miller will be in the sprint medley event. In the 1,600 relay, Carlton Bell will joint Perry, Fields and Melving. The last relay will be the 400 shuttle hurdles with Valentino Robinson, Antoine Holloman, Bobby Phillips and Marvin Rankins.

Rankins, who finished fifth last year in the 110 high hurdles, will be competing in a field of 26 alongside all-Americans Renaldo Nehemiah of Maryland and Greg Roberts of Southern Illinois.

Long jumper Darryl McCoy and high jumper Russell Parker will compete in a field of 15 competitors in the championship division of their events.

"It is quite an honor for Rankins, McCoy and Parker to be chosen for the championship division," Carson said. "That's an elite group. The Penn Relays is always fun for the athletes, and coaches too."

Lady Pirates Seek State Title

East Carolina's women's softball team is rounding its game into shape at the right time with the AIAW State Tournament coming up this weekend in Graham.

The Pirates, now 18-12, have won eight of their last 12 games heading into the first round of the tournament against North Carolina A&T. The Pirates will play the Aggies at 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon.

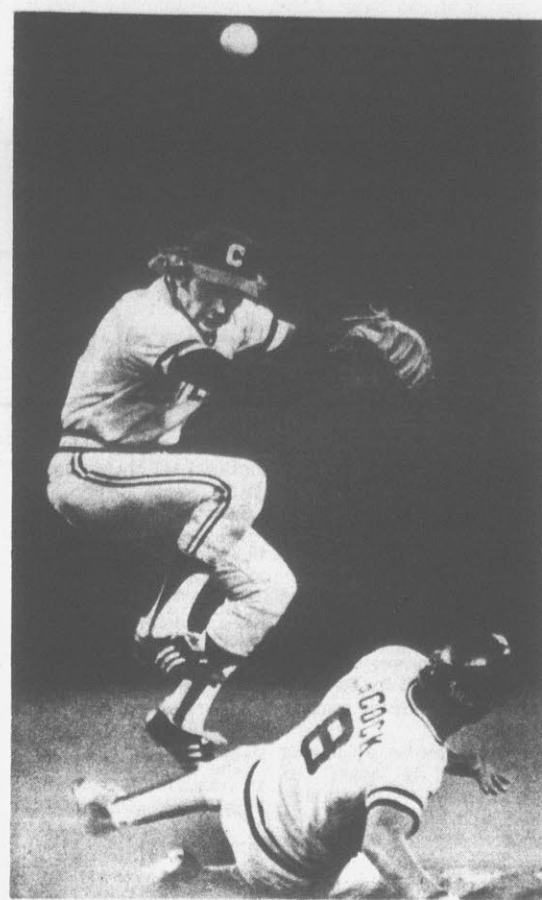

Top-seeded N.C. State meets Campbell in the first round while Appalachian State faces UNC-Greensboro, and North Carolina plays Western Carolina. The tournament is a double-elimination format with the championship set for 2:15 p.m. Sunday.

Some of the key players in the lineup for East Carolina this weekend include Robin Faggart (.343), Kim Holmes (.295), and leading hitter Shirley Brown (.386) in the outfield, Teresa Whitley (.351) at first base and pitcher Mary Bryan Carlyle, all of whom made the all-tournament team in Appalachian State's invitational last weekend, along with shortstop Mary Powell (.353), who was named the Most Valuable Player in the tournament.

"We really played good ball in the ASU Tournament," said Brown. "If we hustle just as hard, we can take the state tourney too."

Pirate coach Alita Dillon feels she has a better team now than last year or even a month ago. "I feel that we are going into the tournament with a better team this year. We have been adjusting the lineup all season and now have found one that really looks good," Dillon said. "I'm very comfortable with it. We have also found three or four substitutes we can count on. We're all more confident, especially with our hitting."

Richard, Despite Getting 4th Win, Home Run, Still Unhappy

CHICAGO (AP) — J.R. Richard is different. Not merely because he is an awesome sight on the mound at 6-foot-8 and 237 pounds but, unlike most pitchers, he wants to be a complete player.

Richard improved his record to 4-0, hurling the Houston Astros to a 6-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs Thursday. But he had mixed emotions about having to leave the game after five innings because of a slight back strain.

Richard also helped his cause by slugging a home run into a 12-17 mph wind.

"I like to go nine innings all the time, and every game I start I even think about going 10 innings," said Richard. "It makes you work that much harder and your stamina that much stronger."

Although he told Manager Bill Virdon he injured his back, Richard appeared reluctant to be taken out.

Why would he tell his manager his back was hurting, then resist leaving the game?

"That's because I have heart," said Richard. "You just don't want to come out when you have that big a lead but you can't jeopardize a whole season for one game."

Richard attributed the best start of his baseball career to his consistency plus "the whole ball club is executing, moving runners along, doing the right things at the right time, which is what makes a winner."

"I want to become better in every respect — bunting, pitching, fielding and hitting," said Richard. "Every time I come up to bat, I think of myself as a hitter."

"I'm proud of hitting a home run, definitely," he said. "It's a part of the game. I usually get one or two a year."

Richard, who now has eight career homers, allowed only three hits, three walks and struck out six before departing. He insisted he is not as wild as his reputation indicates.

"Do I scare batters?" said Richard, repeating the question. "I don't know. You would have to ask them. I've never had a chance to bat against myself, but intimidation is part of every pitcher's game."

Richard homered in the third inning, and Bob Watson and Alan Ashby contributed run-scoring singles in the fourth. Craig Reynolds doubled in a run in the fifth and singled home two runs in the sixth.

Hawks, 76ers Stay Alive, Take Lopsided Victories In Playoffs

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Defense was the difference as the no-name Atlanta Hawks and the big-name Philadelphia 76ers stayed alive in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Both clubs were one loss away from elimination prior to Thursday night's games, but both postponed their summer vacations with lopsided victories in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

Steve Hawes and Eddie Johnson scored 12 points apiece in the second half as the scrappy Hawks beat the defending champion Washington Bullets 104-86 to even their best-of-seven series at three victories apiece. The deciding game will be played Sunday in Landover, Md.

"The most important thing in the game was defense," said Hawks Coach Hubie Brown. "It was absolutely great."

Meanwhile, at San Antonio, Julius Erving was shifted to guard as Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham juggled his lineup to give muscleman Darryl Dawkins a start at center. The Doctor responded with 32 points, 24 of them in the second half, as the 76ers routed the Spurs 120-97.

The Sixers, who now trail 3-2 in the series, will attempt to draw even on their home court Sunday. "Our defense was the key," said Sixers Coach Billy Cunningham. "They missed some good shots, but it had a lot to do with our defense."

In the Western Conference semifinals, the Phoenix Suns confident he could put four good rounds together. "Maybe I shouldn't say that, because I've never done it," he said. "But I'm in good shape. I jog every day. I've got my game together, and I feel like I can do it."

Conner opened his round with three straight birdies, shot par on the fourth hole, then birdied the next two holes. His putts lipped the cup and rolled away on the next three holes.

His only bogey came on the 16th when he rushed himself off the tee and had to take a penalty stroke after his shot went into the water.

"It's a lot easier to take that bogey when you're eight under," he said. "I hated to dunk that one, but it didn't bother my game."

Conner Switched From Tennis

By AUSTIN WILSON
AP Sports Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Frank Conner, leading the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open after one round of play, said he became a professional golfer when he found out he couldn't eat tennis trophies.

Conner shot a seven-under-par 65 over the 7,080-yard Lakewood Country Club course Thursday, missed the tournament record for 18 holes by one stroke.

Doug Tewell, Curtis Strange and Jim Colbert were a stroke back at 66 after Thursday's first 18 holes. Allen Miller and Phil Hancock were at 67.

Tom Watson, leading money winner on the PGA tour this year, was at 71. Lon Hinkle, fifth on this year's money winning list and defending tournament champion, was at 69, and Lee Trevino, ninth on the list, was in a six-way tie at 68.

Conner is in his sixth year on the PGA tour after starting his career in professional athletics playing on the World Championship Tennis circuit.

"I wasn't going quite as far in tennis as I thought I should be, and professional tennis wasn't as big then, so I figured I'd better do something else," Conner said. "I was 24 years old, and I felt I wasn't going as well as I should have been."

"I played golf about three months and turned pro. I didn't want to spend time as an amateur. You can't eat those trophies. I have a shelf full of tennis trophies."

He turned pro in 1971, spent three years on the mini tours and got his PGA card in 1974. Golf hasn't put a lot of steaks on his table, either. Conner has earned only $40,155 since joining the PGA tour.

He failed to make the cut in the past four tournaments he entered, but he said he was

An AP Analysis: Money Isn't Problem In Strike Of Umpires

An AP Sports Analysis
By WICK TEMPLE
AP Sports Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — The umpires' strike has gone on long enough. Baseball is being hurt by a cheap image and by bad calls from well-meaning but not quite-professional substitute umpers.

The problem is not money. Baseball drew over 40 million people last year. A few teams are in financial trouble, but most are doing well. What the umpires are asking would cost each team about $20,000 a year. It's peanuts, literally peanuts. The proceeds from a few concession stands.

The umpires are getting the heat from owners who want to present a tough front for upcoming negotiations with the players' union. These negotiations could cost them plenty. Marvin Miller and his players' association are tipping the balance of power in the game and a lot of baseball people are understandably worried.

The owners have had their way for so long that they tend to be very stubborn. The umpires may be a convenient target for a show of strength because of an attitude that nobody appreciates them anyway.

But the umps are picking up a lot of sympathy. Anyone who travels in a job knows that you can't make it on $53 a day expense money in major league cities.

Fortunately, there is a solution that will permit the umpires to be treated better and will allow the owners to save face.

All the owners have to do is cut out the free food and beer in the press box and use that money to pay umpires' salaries and expenses. The food and drink should be there but the news people could pay as they go.

Some teams already have cut out free items to the media. Some newspapers are refusing to take free food and beer. The Boston Globe, for instance, sends a check to the Red Sox every year for food and drink its writers have consumed in the Fenway Park press box.

This is a way of demonstrating that sports writers, long reputed to be free-loaders, are not. The argument in journalism is that the city council doesn't feed the reporters for free, so why should the sports teams?

In the past, some baseball teams have given regular writers expensive gifts, including TV sets. This has been pretty much wiped out by a campaign within the media to improve standards of professional ethics.

The National Football League once passed out wrist watches to media people covering the Super Bowl. No more. Each gets an inexpensive carrying bag full of the brochures, statistics and other printed material he or she needs to cover Super Bowl week.

But football and baseball still spend many thousands of dollars wining and dining the press. This is incongruous when juxtaposed with the cheap attitude toward the umpires.

Under this solution, the owners might even save money as well as face. The umpires would be paid salaries and expenses commensurate with the professional (and thankless) nature of their jobs.

No reporter can be bought for a hot dog and a beer. But neither does he or she need such largesse from the people he or she is covering.

And baseball can get back to the business it is supposed to be in — entertaining people with a quality product

Women Chase Track Title

East Carolina's women's track team travels to Chapel Hill today to defend its state title in the North Carolina AIAW championship meet.

Several team members who sparked the Pirate women this season will be among the top competitors in the meet.

Cookie McPhatter broke the East Carolina record in the 800 meters three times during the season, trimming her time to 2:09.4 last weekend at the Maryland Invitational. McPhatter has qualified for the national AIAW meet to be held at Michigan State in late May. She is the first East Carolina woman to qualify for the track nationals.

Roz Major, with consistent long jumping, is another who has scored well for the Pirates this spring. She set a new varsity record of 18-8 1/4 at the Carolina Records.

Linda Mason, a strong distance runner, set a new school record in the 1,500 meters with a time of 4:54.0 at the Maryland Invitational.

Pirate coach Laurie Arrants feels her team is healthy going into the state meet, except for Dawn Henderson and Maria Gudjohnsen, who have recently had skin problems. The two, both members of the 400 relay team, are expected to compete today.

"We have reached a plateau at this stage of the season," Arrants said. "We will have to alter the line-up some, doubling up in some events. The record book has been rewritten this spring and hopefully we can continue this trend."

The meet opens at 1 p.m. today with trials in running events up through the 400 meters. Field events are set to begin at 1:30 with finals in the running events scheduled to start at 3. The final event, the mile relay, is set for 5:15.

Bicycling Tops List In Sports Hurts

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 400,000 Americans who went bicycling last year ended up at hospitals for treatment. Nearly as many baseball, football and basketball players suffered a similar fate, government statistics indicate.

Skateboard safety seemed to be improving, but direct comparisons with statistics of previous years may be misleading because of changes in the number of hospitals reporting to the counting systems and changes in what is included in some categories. The government's National Electronic Injury Surveillance System is still preparing its annual analysis of injuries caused by various products and activities, but preliminary data indicate 446,878 Americans suffered injuries involving bicycles last year.

To be counted, injuries must be severe enough to require hospital attention.

The system was notified of 493,234 injuries to bicyclists in 1977. But spokeswoman Nancy Johnston, noting the possible margin of error, cautioned against assuming the lower 1978 figure indicated an actual decline in injuries.

She did say there appeared to be a significant decline in skateboard-related injuries in 1978, though no exact comparison can be made.

In 1978 skateboards were blamed for 87,093 injuries. In 1977 they had been counted in a category together with roller skates and scooters, but the total for that group was 226,666 injuries — about 42,000 more than the 1978 total for the three.

Mrs. Johnston said the reason for the apparent decline in skateboard injuries "could be in usage, perhaps the fad has peaked, or maybe kids are more aware of the danger."

In team sports, government experts estimated 399,874 baseball-related injuries in 1978, with 394,827 in football and 349,760 in basketball.

The 1977 estimates were: baseball 400,266, football 406,477, basketball 371,875.

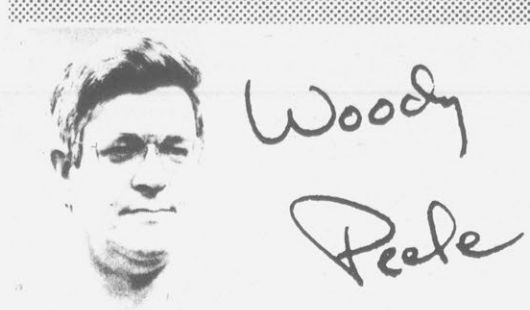

The new statistics show two other major sources of recreational injuries: playground equipment with 155,158 and snow skiing with 103,893.

Other listed sports and recreational categories in 1978, and the estimated number of injuries, were:

Bowling 15,409, exercise equipment 20,568, fishing 51,320, golf 21,369, guns 26,489, gymnastics 50,300, hockey (field and ice) 41,325, ice skating 32,198, mopeds and minibikes 20,464, snowmobiles 25,042, soccer 73,395, swimming 68,405, tennis, badminton and squash 61,557, toboggans and sleds 61,067, track and field 15,996, trampolines 15,387, volleyball 70,764, water skiing and surfing 29,838, wrestling 53,691.

Strict Bingo Bill Tentatively Adopted By Senate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would ban bingo-for-profit, leaving only churches, fraternal organizations and charities to operate bingo games, has gained tentative approval in the state Senate.

By a vote of 41-5, the Senate approved one of the strictest of several bingo bills introduced during the current legislative session. Final Senate action was delayed until at least today.

The bill would restrict bingo games and raffles to non-profit organizations. A group could have a bingo game only once a week, limited to five hours a session and have a maximum jackpot of $500.

"It was our opinion," said Sen. Robert Swain, D-Buncombe, "that only non-profit organizations should benefit from the game of bingo."

The bill would prevent professional operators from running a bingo game for a charity and taking a cut of the profits, the practice now allowed in some counties.

Swain said some professional bingo operations are now operating with prizes of as much as $15,000.

The Senate also added an amendment preventing cash to be offered as the prize in any raffle.

One senator who voted for the bill said he cleared his conscience with a speech afterwards.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said profiting from bingo was no worse than dealing in commodities or the stock market, and he felt like a hypocrite for voting for the bill.

"There are lots of people who enjoy the same type of thrill from bingo, not as an investment, but for enjoyment," he said.

In other legislative action:

Sentencing

A Senate judiciary committee approved and sent to the full Senate Gov. Jim Hunt's presumptive sentencing bill. It would revise most of the state's criminal sentencing laws, narrowing a judge's discretion in imposing sentences.

It would also replace the current parole system by allowing a certain release date of one-half the imposed sentence.

The panel first added an amendment raising the presumptive sentence for first-degree rape from 32 years in prison to life. Hunt, in a news conference Thursday, praised the bill as a way to fight crime.

Marijuana

The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would allow licensed physicians to prescribe a marijuana derivative in the treatment of cancer patients.

The bill would allow doctors to prescribe marijuana's active ingredient, THC, in pill form to cancer patients to stop nausea and vomiting, side effects of chemotherapy.

Drinks

The Senate approved on a 31-12 vote and sent the House a bill allowing sale of mixed drinks in publicly-owned convention centers and coliseums.

S&L's

Senate opponents sidetracked a bill that would allow state-chartered savings and loan associations to convert to stock ownership. The Senate, which had voted tentative approval to the bill on Wednesday, voted to send the measure to the Senate Finance Committee.

The chairman of that panel, Rauch, is an opponent of the stock-conversion bill and says conversions will allow savings and loan insiders to reap windfall profits from the sale of stock issues.

Judges

A proposal that would allow the nomination and election of Superior Court judges by judicial district rather than statewide election was approved by the House Election Laws Committee.

It is sponsored by House Republicans and now goes to the full House for consideration.

Under current law, judges are nominated by judicial district but subject to statewide election.

Nuclear Waste

North Carolinians who oppose nuclear power turned out at a public hearing to speak in favor of a joint resolution that says North Carolina should not accept any nuclear waste for permanent storage unless the waste was produced in electric power generation in the state.

About 75 persons attended, urging adoption of the resolution in a hearing before the House Natural and Economic Resources Committee.

They said the bill should be a first step because the real answer to the nuclear waste disposal problem is to ban nuclear power altogether.

No action was taken on the resolution, and the hearing will continue next week.

Late Fees

A bill that would authorize state-chartered savings and loan associations to collect late fees from borrowers who don't get their mortgage payments in on time won tentative approval in the House.

The bill would allow the state S&Ls to charge a late fee if a payment is more than 15 days past the due date. It would allow the levying of an $8 fee if the payment is $250 or less and a charge of 4 percent of the payment if the amount is more than $250.

Busing

House action on a resolution requesting Congress to prohibit the forced busing of school children as an energy-saving means was stalled.

Rep. Mary Pegg, R-Forsyth, introduced the resolution, which was re-referred to a House judiciary committee because opponents said it asks Congress to do something that is illegal.

Gov. Hunt Reaffirms Teacher Pay Position

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he realizes North Carolina's public school teachers are underpaid, but he still will not support efforts to increase the size of their pay raise in the next state budget.

Hunt, at a news conference Thursday, said he will not give in to demands by teachers groups and state employees associations that they be given a full 7 percent pay raise with additional fringe benefit increases this year.

Hunt has recommended a 5 percent pay hike with new fringes totaling 7 percent.

"I think salaries in some of these areas are too low, particularly teachers," Hunt said.

Hunt said his recommendation, included in the proposed state budget now being completed in the General Assembly, is in line with President Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines. To meet the teachers' and state employees' demands, he said, would be to violate those guidelines and fuel inflation.

"The fact that the teamsters (union) have violated it doesn't mean everybody else should," Hunt said. "I wish we could do more for our teachers and state employees."

Hundreds of public school teachers gathered in Raleigh to protest the small pay increase Monday. They talked with legislators, then held a candlelight vigil outside the governor's mansion where Hunt talked with them.

Hunt said he believed 90 percent to 95 percent of salaried workers in North Carolina will have pay raises limited to 7 percent this year, the maximum allowed by the voluntary controls.

"We have to fight inflation in North Carolina," he said.

On another topic, Hunt said he was requesting $40 million from the General Assembly for improvements on the five predominantly black University of North Carolina campuses because it is "the right thing to do."

"The question is what's right," he said. "If we haven't done what's right in the past, for goodness sake let's don't put it off any longer."

Hunt said the request was not made because of pressure from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. He said he had not urged that the General Assembly provide the money until this week because the UNC Board of Governors hadn't asked for it previously.

"It's apparent more is needed and they have now recommended it," he said.

The $40 million was part of an offer by UNC to settle its desegregation dispute with HEW. UNC officials and Hunt have asked for the money from the legislature despite their failure to reach an out-of-court settlement with the federal agency.

Hunt said that if the state spends the money despite the lack of an agreement with HEW, it would constitute "evidence of good faith" in their court case.

'Scare' Tactic Value Doubted

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The "scared straight" program in which inmates brutally tell juvenile offenders how bad their lives will be if they continue a life of crime is coming under question in the state where it was first developed.

A researcher says the program isn't as successful as some have claimed, the state is moving to limit participation, and the superintendent of Rahway Prison, home of the program, has been reassigned.

The Juvenile Awareness Program, portrayed in the Academy Award-winning documentary "Scared Straight," brings juvenile offenders into the prison to be told by inmates — in raw, frank language — of the horrors of life in the maximum security facility.

As word of the program spread, corrections officials from several states had contacted New Jersey for information on it.

But now a study commissioned by the state Department of Corrections casts doubt on the ability of the program, run by the 80-member Lifers Group of inmates, to deter youths from a life of crime.

Following that report, Correction Commissioner William Fauver said Thursday that participation in the program from now on will be limited to proven juvenile delinquents, and will no longer be open to teenagers who merely show tendencies toward trouble.

More than 12,000 New Jersey teenagers in trouble have participated in the inmate-run program.

Fauver said he had urged his assistants to warn other states that the program had not been evaluated and that claims made in the documentary had not been substantiated and were not endorsed by the state.

And the commissioner reassigned Rahway superintendent, Robert S. Hatrak, to duties at the state capitol in Trenton.

The reassignment was partly due to Fauver's belief that Hatrak had become too interested in the national publicity surrounding the "scared straight" program. The New York Times reported in today's editions.

Bands To Be Performing

J. H. Rose High School will be the site of the annual Greenville City Band Festival Tuesday, May 1, 8 p.m. Band students in grades 5-9 will perform for students, parents and friends.

The highlight of the program will be the presentation of music scholarships, provided by the Greenville City Band Boosters and the Music Shop. The scholarships will go to students entering the summer music program at East Carolina University.

A special guest conductor and soloist from ECU will perform with the middle school concert band.

Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Proceeds will go toward student scholarships. The public is invited to attend.

Hostility May Await Garwood At Lejeune

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — When Pfc. Robert Garwood, who spent 13½ years in Vietnam, reports for duty next month, he may encounter animosity as stiff as the spine of a Marine at attention.

Garwood, 33, returned to the United States last month. He disappeared while on duty in Vietnam in 1965, and military authorities are investigating allegations of desertion and collaborating with Vietnamese communists in North Vietnam.

Garwood is in the midst of a 30-day leave, and he is scheduled to report for a physical examination at the naval facility at Great Lakes, Ill., on May 14. Shortly after that, he will come to Camp Lejeune, where he will wait while authorities decide whether to take military court action against him.

There is no way to tell how all the 38,000 Marines at the base feel about Garwood, but if random interviews are any indication, there will be ostracism and perhaps outright hostility toward Garwood.

"He'll be lucky if he lasts a week without somebody getting to him," said an out-of-uniform Marine who identified himself as 17-year-old Pfc. Anthony Pike.

"Why he came back, nobody knows, and nobody gives a damn. But he spent 13 years over there. If I was in his shoes, I'd cut my throat before I'd turn against my own country."

It is not the older Marines and the Vietnam veterans who appear hostile to Garwood; it's the baby-faced crew-cut enlisted men who populate much of today's Marine Corps who have already convicted Garwood in their own minds.

"If they locate him in a grunt (combat) unit, he'd definitely be in danger," said Cpl. Carmelo Otero, 19, of New York City.

"He's innocent until proven guilty. That's the American way. But he stayed 13 years. Obviously, he stayed of his own will or he wouldn't be alive today," Otero said.

Garwood's lawyer, Dermot Foley, said in a telephone interview from his office in New York City that Garwood is "under wraps" and is no longer talking with reporters. "I cut that stuff out," Foley said of the interviews.

"I see him when I need to and we're working hard on the case. He's optimistic that the case will never come to trial. There's a lot of stuff we just can't talk about right now," he said.

Asked what Garwood expected when he reports to Camp Lejeune, Foley said, "His basic attitude is that the people in uniform there ought to believe in the American way and let any court action that's taken proceed with an open mind. Otherwise, they ought to question why they're wearing that uniform."

Earlier, Foley released Garwood's account of his capture, in which Garwood said he was on patrol and was taken prisoner only after firing his 45-caliber pistol and killing two of his attackers. Foley has never discussed Garwood's time in North Vietnam.

Officially, the Marine Corps is keeping a closed mouth about Garwood.

Major John Woggon, public affairs officer at Camp Lejeune, said the corps does not have definite plans for Garwood when he reports for duty. Unless authorities decide otherwise, Garwood will have the same privileges as any other Marine and will probably be assigned to temporary duty in the base command — a non-combat role.

In addition to his unique position, Garwood will stand out among other privates because of his age.

"I've been in the Marines for 16 years, and I don't think I've ever known a Pfc. that old," Woggon said.

Unless security measures isolate Garwood from other Marines, he will probably live in the typical motel-like barracks and share a room with one or two privates.

Brig. Gen. David B. Barker, commanding general at Camp Lejeune, will ultimately decide whether Garwood will face a court martial.

Officers on the base take a calmer view of Garwood's situation than younger enlisted men.

"It's kind of hard for a man like myself whose never heard a shot fired in anger to judge Garwood," said Capt. William Talbot, 28.

"I think the commanding general is going to bend over backward to remain impartial, but informed as to Garwood's day-to-day activities," said Maj. John L. McLaughlin, 40.

McLaughlin, a Vietnam veteran who was involved in the 1968 Tet offensive, said he would have no problems if Garwood were assigned to his command.

"I think I share with those who've thought about it the notion that once you complete boot camp, you are a Marine and you are accepted as a Marine and given all rights and privileges. And allegations such as the ones against Garwood don't affect that," he said.

But McLaughlin added that he thinks Garwood's case should go before a trial board. "The country — maybe the world — and this command demand it be investigated. But if he goes to a court martial, that doesn't mean he's guilty."

"Some people might say it's best if he weren't court martialled. But others say if the case is dropped, there would always be questions," he said.

'Misconceptions' Said Wide

By AL LANIER
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Sydney Rittenberg Jr., back in his native South Carolina after 34 years on mainland China, says there are "widespread misconceptions" about Red China's views towards Taiwan.

"Peking does not demand that its social and economic system be imposed on Taiwan," Rittenberg said Thursday. "The Chinese government is saying, 'Keep your leaders and your style until you think they ought to be changed.'"

However, he adds, the Chinese communists insist that "China be one country, one flag, and with one seat in the United Nations — while prepared to recognize there can be different systems, different customs and different ways of life."

"There will eventually be a settlement," Rittenberg said, "but there's first going to be a certain amount of backing and filling and horse trading" on the Taiwan problem.

Rittenberg, 57, a member of a prominent Charleston family, is on his first trip out of China since he went there in 1945 with the U.S. Army as an interpreter. He stayed on voluntarily after the communists gained control in the late 1940s, and plans to return in June.

The short, balding and bespectacled Rittenberg has been called a "mystery man," a communist collaborator and an American espionage agent. Whatever he is called, it is widely acknowledged that Rittenberg is one of the most knowledgeable and influential foreigners in China.

Accused during the Cultural Revolution of being an American spy, Rittenberg was sent to a prison in Peking in 1968 and remained there for nearly 10 years in solitary confinement. His Chinese wife, Wang Yulin, and their four children were placed under house arrest, and she spent three years in forced labor.

"I know it sounds strange, but I'm not bitter," Rittenberg said. "The people who were responsible are the people who have now been overthrown and removed."

"Their anti-democratic, fascist policies are now being criticized. The Chinese people won out in the long run," he said.

After his release from prison in 1977, Rittenberg returned to the New China News Agency. His job is to translate and "polish" news stories coming into China from the outside.

Censorship is not involved, said Rittenberg. He said he tries to bring out "nuances" of incoming news articles.

Rittenberg and Yulin arrived in Charleston in mid-April after brief stopovers in New York and Washington. He said the trip is partly a reunion with friends and family, and partly a personal effort to talk to anyone who will listen about life in communist China.

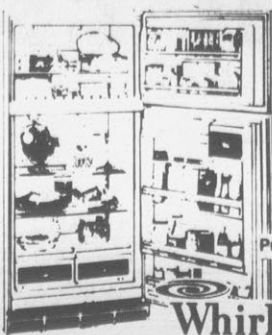

He predicts steadily improving relations between the United States and China based on their own self-interests.

Rittenberg's grandfather was a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives and his father was president of the Charleston City Council. He and his wife are visiting in Charleston with his uncle, Dr. Henry Rittenberg.

Patient Can Strike Back

CLEVELAND (AP) — Young patients at Mount Sinai Hospital who may be fed up with getting a cheerful earful from nurses and doctors now can strike back by writing their sentiments on billboards.

Like the youngster who wrote, "I can't laugh because the pain is killing me."

Or the one who griped about "getting shots in the rear."

Or the one who wrote expressively, "Melted Jello YUCK."

"When kids are in the hospital, they feel that they are not allowed to say what's on their mind," said Martha J. Cliffe, supervisor in the Child Life Department.

The patients, 17 and under, can write their sentiments on large sheets of paper posted on a wall of the pediatrics ward since last month. One side is for "Things I Like About the Hospital" and the other is for "Things I Hate."

People are always telling them everything is going to be all right, but nobody ever asks how they feel about being there, Ms. Cliffe said. The billboards give them "a chance to put in writing how they feel."

The "like list" is short, but some patients do contribute. One youngster liked the housekeepers, but another found one perfect word for the good side: "Leaving!"

Biting A Boss Is Last Straw

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Scottie has been fired.

The two-year veteran of the Oklahoma City police force was officially terminated Thursday, one day after he knocked down and bit police officer Kenneth Linn instead of chasing a suspect in a stolen vehicle case.

Police Chief Tom L. Heggy said the biting was just the final straw.

"We had a psychological test run on the dog, and the experts say he is not suited to his work," the chief said. He said Scottie would be returned Monday to Lackland Air Force Base, where he was trained to sniff out bombs for the police department.

Heggy said Scottie is expected to be retrained for military use.

Urge Hiring Of Mexicans

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A tobacco producers association is pressuring some tobacco farmers to hire Mexican rather than domestic migrant workers, a state employment official has charged.

The official said that the Virginia-Carolina Agricultural Producers Association has put pressure on some members not to hire U.S. workers so they can claim the cheaper, foreign workers are needed.

Steve Adams, a manpower supervisor with the state Employment Security Commission, said that before the U.S. Labor Department will approve the hiring of Mexican workers, it has to determine that not enough U.S. workers are available for the jobs. He said they must determine that the employers aren't deliberately trying to drive U.S. workers away by offering below-average job benefits.

Adams said he believes that the association thinks its members can take advantage of Mexicans, making them work for lower wages and under harsher conditions.

R. Hart Hudson, president of the association, denied the allegations Thursday.

Hudson said the workers sent to the association by state employment officials were unacceptable because they required travel expenses in advance. He said the farmers don't want to pay advance travel expense for fear the workers will take the money and never report to work.

Hudson was indicted last month by a federal grand jury in San Antonio, Texas, on a charge of illegally trafficking aliens. He declined to comment on the charge.

Action To Consolidate

By action of the Trustees of the Duke Endowment in Greenville, S. C., the Charlotte and New York offices of the Endowment will be consolidated during the months ahead in Charlotte.

The transfer of the foundation's New York operations and personnel from Rockefeller Center to Charlotte will enable the 55 year-old philanthropic trust to relate its entire program more directly to its beneficiaries, all of which are located in North and South Carolina. The move will bring various administrative, investment and accounting divisions to Charlotte where the offices of the hospital, child care and education sections are already located.

"The trustees' objective," according to Archie K. Davis, trustee chairman, "is obviously to achieve improved operating efficiencies and a better coordination of managerial functions."

His 'Present' Pleases Senate

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Veteran cigar-smoking state Sen. Warren Henderson gave his wife a birthday present Thursday, but it was his colleagues in the Senate who said thanks.

Henderson, R-Sarasota, took to the floor to announce that he was giving up smoking as a birthday present for his wife Polly.

"I'm going to quit — quit smoking cigars," Henderson vowed. "I figure the best way to do that is to announce it to everybody and then if anybody sees me smoking one, you'll know what a dirty rotten liar I am."

His pledge drew immediate praise from most of his fellow senators. The only qualification came from Senate President Phil Lewis, who chews cigars instead of smoking them.

"I just wish you'd done it two years ago when I sat over there right by you."
