On Whether To Separate Or Integrate Greenville's Rescue And Fire Departments

City Council Has Promised A Decision By July 1

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Council, faced with a request from members of the rescue squad and interested citizens to separate the rescue unit from the fire department, will have to decide what course of action is in the best interest of the citizens. And a decision on the question has been promised by the time the budget for the 1979-1980 fiscal year is adopted the first of July.

The first question that should be considered in any decision is what level of service should be provided by a city-sponsored rescue unit...what quality of service should the people of Greenville receive.

The second question is how can that service best be rendered.

City officials, for some time, have been studying the issue.

Several months ago, the North Carolina League of Municipalities turned over to the city a 40-page financial efficiency and management study of the city's fire department and rescue squad operations.

Attached to that report for members of the council was a 19-page addendum prepared by city staff members outlining the estimated costs involved in separating the two services.

The council has also asked the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce to review the situation and make recommendations.

The League study, made public last Monday, is a two-part report, first outlining the current situation, and secondly, listing alternatives and recommendations for improvements.

First, the League study points out that at present, the rescue squad, although organized under the Fire Department, is actually a separate operating entity, having its own organization, staffing, and equipment, with the assistant chief for rescue having complete operational responsibility for squad operations, and responsible directly to the chief of the fire department.

The report suggests that three additional rescue officers are needed to provide adequate service (operate two vehicles), taking into account vacation, sick leave and other situations that require employees to be off-duty.

However, the study said it, "appears to be possible," to make greater use of the 18 volunteer rescue squad members to satisfy this need. "Assuming this could be done, no additional personnel would be needed," the report said.

The 13 paid rescue officers (including the assistant chief for rescue), "do not generally perform fire-fighting duties," according to the report, which adds, "fire personnel — with some exceptions — do not perform rescue functions."

The fire department also has manpower needs, the report said.

A "major weakness in the fire structure," the study said, is the fact that the two assistant fire chiefs are on call but not on duty during weekends, emphasizing that the best situation is to have an assistant fire chief present and in command of fire operations each day.

Six new positions will be needed at the Memorial Drive substation when Carolina East Mall opens, according to the study, while six to nine new firemen are needed at the presently understaffed headquarters station in Downtown Greenville.

At present, the report points out, the city uses part-paid and volunteer firemen to augment the manpower needs of the department. However, the study suggests that the volunteer firefighters be phased out and that money supporting the eight part-paid firemen would be better spent paying regular firemen for call-back time.

Volunteer firemen are paid $2.50 per hour for their services, while, the report said, part-paid firefighters are paid $60 per month, "so long as they meet one night per month." (Fire department officers report that the part-paid men are required to attend one three-hour training session per month, and a two-hour stand-by period per week, for a total of 140 hours per year.)

In addition to the pay, the city provides insurance and turn-out gear for volunteers and uniforms for part-paid firemen.

(Rescue volunteers are required to attend one meeting per months and pull 12 hours stand-by duty each month for a total on 180 hours per year and in addition, must maintain their Emergency Medical Technician or ambulance attendant certification. They receive no pay from the city and raise money through projects and donations to purchase their uniforms, although the city insures the volunteers while on duty.)

"It would appear to be more effective and economical," the report suggests, "to simply utilize regular fire personnel on a 'call-back' basis," and pay time and a half for call-back time, rather than support the part-paid fire program.

The report also suggests that the city and county enter into a, "contractural agreement," under which the county would bear the costs — based on actual operating expenses — for rescue service provided outside the city limits. Pitt County Commissioners this year contributed $30,000 to the city for rescue operations, while projected costs, based on last year's experience, the report said, would amount to $61,638.

If the county elects not to pay for the costs of the service, the report suggests, "the city should consider reducing its rescue...service limits to the city boundry."

Secondly, the League study offers two alternatives, "...operational recommendations for improving the overall rescue and fire operations."

Both functions, "if operated separately, will require additional manpower to provide the present level of service, the report says.

"In view of the manpower needs (three additional rescue officers and 12 firefighters), the city may elect to fully integrate," the fire and rescue functions and significantly increase the utilization of the present staff, the study suggests, and at the same time, "completely eliminate the need for additional manpower."

Total integration, according to the League suggestion, would be, "initially at the operating level," meaning the present firefighters and rescue officers. Supervisory personnel, according to the study, would not be, "dual trained in fire and rescue operations," at first.

The study proposes that under a unified department, a third assistant fire chief position should be created, and, "the assistant chief of rescue position should be abolished or reclassified, whichever is most expedient," to provide direct supervision of fire and rescue operations on their respective shifts.

It also suggests that one of the city's two rescue units be relocated at the Memorial Drive substation, "to provide greater overall ballance in rescue coverage," and eliminate the need for six fire positions at the station.

Leaving the other rescue unit at the headquarters station would, "satisfy (eliminate) the need," for six additional firemen at the main station, the study added.

"Personnel should be rotated (specifically) to rescue duty periodically and should remain in such capacity for a reasonable period of time which permits a high degree of specialization and experience in such capacity," and the name of the department should be changed to, "Fire-Rescue Department...in view of the dual function"' according to the report.

Hiring new personnel — the three additional rescue officers and 12 firefighters — would cost $158,200 a year if the present separate operations are maintained, while the, "potential savings" of a fully-integrated department would be $143,200, according to figures contained in the League study.

"The primary concern of integrating the fire and rescue services," the report emphasized, "is the potential decrease in the skill and level of service that is now being provided."

Saying the present EMS service, "appears to be provided at a high skill and service level," the report suggested that if the operations are integrated, "current rescue personnel would continue to provide the 'backbone' and framework for the rescue operation."

However, it continues, over a period of time, a cadre of trained and experienced officers would be developed and utilized within the system, and, "be utilized within the fire system."

"Thus," the report concluded, "it would appear that with continued prudent management of the rescue operation, no decrease in the skill or level of service would be forthcoming."

The second alternative — the creation of a separate rescue department — "is certainly not an economical alternative," the report suggests.

It would require a minimum of three new rescue officers; the construction, lease or purchase of a separate building and facilities; and additional communications equipment and personnel would, "potentially be required or other arrangements to provide such services would have to be made," the report noted.

If a separate operation is established, "the advantages cited for integration would become liabilities under separate operations," the report advises.

Stockholders Beat Inflation

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Somebody is beating inflation in this country — and that somebody is the stockholder.

Judging by the dividends paid out by companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the man or woman with money in the market is faring much better these days than the wage earner.

Companies listed on the NYSE in 1978 increased their dividend payments to shareholders at a rate that outstripped inflation, and the increased dividend trend is continuing into 1979, a year already highlighted by whopping first quarter profit increases reported by oil companies.

NYSE reports show the total dividend payout by firms listed on the exchange rose 13.5 percent in 1978 to $41.15 billion from $36.27 billion in 1977. That 13.5 percent compares with an inflation rate that ran from 7 to under 9 percent for most of last year although the current rate is 13 percent.

The NYSE reports on dividend payments only once a year but Standard & Poor's keeps track all year of dividend changes of major companies, although not of the amounts or rates of change.

S&P said there were 903 dividend increases in the first three months of this year, against 844 in the first quarter last year and only four dividend cuts against 10 reductions a year earlier. Thirty-four companies omitted first quarter dividends compared with 28 last year.

There is one fly in the Big Board's dividend ointment. Even though the payout to stockholders rose for the third consecutive year, the market value of the stocks did not keep up with inflation. The median yield, which is figured on market value of stocks as of Dec. 31, was only about half as much as the inflation of money — 4.8 percent in 1978 as against 4.5 percent in 1977.

The NYSE report contained other interesting information about stock ownership. Of the 1,552 companies listed on the Big Board, 88.5 percent, or 1,373, paid dividends last year. Twenty-eight of these have not missed a dividend for a century or more and 102 have paid for more than 75 years without a break. More than half of all NYSE companies have paid a dividend for more than 20 consecutive years.

The biggest increase in 1978 dividend payout among Big Board companies was by the aircraft companies — 42.5 percent for a total of $426 million.

Other groups that dispensed liberal increases were furniture and office equipment firms, up 38.2 percent; miscellaneous, including a large proportion of service companies, up 34.9 percent; the amusement industry, up 34.1 percent; retailers, up 22 percent; building companies, up 21.3 percent, the leather and shoe industry, up 19.5 percent and transporation companies, up 18.1 percent.

Oil company dividends rose only 10.3 percent in 1978 but they were biggest chunk of the total dividend money — $5.9 billion. And the increase still ran ahead of the inflation rate.

The only groups with dividends payout smaller than in 1977 were automobiles, off 5 percent, steel, down 5.1 percent, and mining, off 10.3 percent.

Six-Year Term?

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he has come to believe that "it would be an improvement" if the presidency were limited to one six-year term with no chance for re-election.

He also says, however, he would not want to place a similar limitation on members of Congress.

The president expressed his views during an interview Friday with the Newspaper Advisory Board of United Press International. The White House released the transcript Saturday.

"I have begun to realize lately that if I could just by the stroke of the pen, change the Constitution, I think one six-year term would be preferable," he said.

Carter, who has given supporters the go-ahead for creating a re-election committee but has not yet declared himself a candidate for 1980, complained that the public seems to suspect there is a purely political motivation behind everything he does.

"No matter what I do as president now," he said, "where I am really trying to ignore politics and stay away from any sort of campaign plans and so forth, a lot of the things I do are colored through the news media and in the minds of the American people by (the question) 'is this a campaign ploy or is it genuinely done ...in the best interest of our country without any sort of personal advantage involved?"

He added:

"I think if I had a six-year term, without any prospect of re-election, it would be an improvement. I have come to that conclusion reluctantly."

The idea of a one-term presidency has been proposed several times in Congress, but has drawn little support.

Asked whether the one-term limitation should extend to members of the House and Senate, Carter replied, "No, I think not."

"Congress ought to be constantly under the political pressure of maintaining contact with the people back home," he added. "It is onerous for incumbents, but I think it is good."

His views differ sharply from comments he made in October 1977 when talking by telephone with members of the National Newspaper Association in Houston.

"I believe that the present arrangement is the best one," he had said of the constitutional allowance for two, four-year presidential terms.

"My summary is to leave it like it is," he said then.

Dependent On Reactors

By JERRY MITCHELL

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Like it or not, the South is dependent upon nuclear reactors to produce much of the region's electricity.

With 19 units in operation and 35 others under construction in the 10 Southeastern states, nuclear power portends to be een more important in the years ahead.

The 10 Southeastern states have more nuclear generating plants either in operation or in various stages of construction than any other region in the country. One power company official says the South would be thrown into chaos if all nuclear plants were ordered closed.

In times of low electricity demand, such as spring and fall, many utilities could compensate for the loss of nuclear units by running coal or oil-fired plants at full tilt.

It's almost impossible to pinpoint the amount of electricity produced by nuclear reactors at any given time. Units are routinely taken out of service for repairs or refueling. But most utility firms have virtually every available plant in service in the warmest and coldest months of the year to meet peak demand.

"I think we might as well face the fact that nuclear power is a fact of life now and it has to be for some time to come so we ought to do everything we can to make it as safe as possible," Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., commented.

"The fact of the matter is we don't have the oil to generate all the power we need, the people will not tolerate polluting the environment to the extent that we can use all coal, and hydroelectric power is almost a thing of the past because we're not going to see any more rivers dammed up," he said.

Duke Power Co. put forth a full scale lobbying effort last week when it became apparent that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was seriously considering closing the three-unit Oconee nuclear plant near Seneca, S.C., for modifications because of the March 28 accident at the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

State Sen. Allen R. Carter of South Carolina predicted the loss of Oconee-produced power this summer could result in such dire measures as banning the daytime use of electrical lights in homes and offices with access to natural light and the prohibition of social and sporting activities after dark.

Carolina Power & Light Co., which like Duke serves portions of the two Carolinas, normally relies on its two nuclear units to produce 47 percent of its electricity.

"We would have difficulty meeting our summer peaks if we did not have our nuclear units available to us," said Albert Morris, CP&L vice president for corporate communications. "There are so many variables here such as how much reserve our neighboring power companies have."

Georgia Power Co. has only one nuclear unit in its system, producing nine percent of the company's power.

"Although we primrily rely on coal, the nuclear plant is extremely valuable and helps keep a downward pressure on the total cost of fuel," said

Shut Down

SENECA, S.C. (UPI) — Duke Power Co. officials said Saturday night they have shut down reactor No. 3 at the Oconee Nuclear Station without incident to make safety modifications ordered by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff. Duke spokesman Alex Cofin said the reactor was brought off line in about two hours and modifications will begin immediately.

Time To Change

It's that time again — the last Sunday in April, which means there'll be a change made in our clocks.

For those who did not turn their clocks forward one hour last night, the time to do it is the first thing this morning.

Member Of The ECU Swim Team Receives Severe Arm Injury

Kevin Meisel, a freshman member of the East Carolina University swimming team, suffered serious arm injuries when he was struck by a train Saturday afternoon.

Meisel, from Orlando, Fla., along with several other members of the ECU swim team, were returning from the intramural fields adjacent to Ficklen Stadium to the dormitory area when the accident occurred.

According to Ray Scharf, swimming coach, a train had stopped on the tracks between the athletic fields and the dormitories. Meisel and another student were apparently moving between cars of the train when it suddenly started, knocking the other student out of the way, but passing over Meisel's arm.

Scharf said that Meisel was given emergency treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital, then transfered to Duke University Hospital to their organ re-implantation unit. Reportedly Meisel's arm was severely damaged and it may be several days before it will be known whether it can be saved.

Two Dead' 50 Injured By Texas Sniper

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — The retired truck driver who gunned down a crowd of parade watchers ended his rampage by shooting himself in the head, authorities said Saturday.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Ruben Santos ruled suicide the cause of death of Ira Attebury, who would have been 65 Sunday.

Lt. Walter Hall said Attebury killed himself with a gunshot to the head after Friday's 30-minute fusilade that killed two women and injured some 50 other people.

Hall said Attebury had a contact wound — meaning the barrel of the gun was placed against his head — near his right ear. A .38-caliber pistol and a spent shell were found near his hand in the camper that Attebury had furnished with 15 rifles and pistols and used as a bunker in his assault at the Battle of the Flowers parade Friday.

"At first a couple of the officers thought they had shot him but the only gunshot wound on him was the wound to the head and it was a contact wound," said Detective Charles Gilmore.

Attebury opened his assault by shouting "Traitors! Traitors! Traitors!" and firing at a group of seven police officers working the parade route. Six of the officers were wounded.

"He just didn't like policemen," Hall said. "That's as close to a motive as we can get.

"He left no notes, not at least that we've found yet. The people that were around where he lived said he didn't like police."

Attebury lived in a trailer park and was described as eccentric and secretive by his neighbors. Authorities were interviewing relatives and acquaintances to learn his motive.

"He went there prepared to do what he did. He was just a real crazy guy," said Hall.

Bodies To Be Buried

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — Bodies of all the identified but unclaimed victims of the Peoples Temple mass murder-suicide are en route to California for burial, a federal official said.

Charles M. Wyman, a State Department attorney who has been handling the transfer, said Friday that six trucks, including one that left Thursday with 50 coffins, are carrying a total of 297 bodies to their final resting places.

The trucks are expected to arrive Monday or Tuesday at Oakland Army Base near San Francisco and MacArthur Army Base near Los Angeles.

The cost of trucking the bodies is being picked up by the Peoples Temple under a plan approved by San Francisco Superior Court Judge Ira A. Brown, who is presiding over the dissolution of the temple's $10 million assets.

Next month, 248 unidentified bodies, most of them of children, are scheduled to be trucked in five separate shipments for immediate burial in Oakland.

Shutdown Ordered For Eight Plants

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has ordered eight nuclear power plants shut down until they make safety improvements needed to pravent a repetition of the Three Mile Island accident.

The agency also said Friday it would continue to study these plants and might require additional safety changes later.

All eight plants plus the heavily damaged Three Mile Island Unit 2 in Pennsylvania were designed by Babcock & Wilcox Co. using systems which, NRC officials said, made the facilities sensitive to malfunctions and hard to control.

With the crippling of Three Mile Island Unit 2 and the closing of its eight sister plants, there are now 14 plants shut down by NRC safety orders, or one out of every five nuclear power plants in the United States.

Five other plants have been shut down since March 13 for inspections to make sure they can withstand earthquakes without serious damage to their cooling systems.

The only western plant affected by Friday's shut-down order is the B&W-designed Rancho Seco plant in California which opened in 1974. The NRC ordered it to shut down starting today until its safety improvements are completed.

Also ordered to shut down today was one of the three Oconee units, which were opened in 1973 and 1974 at Lake Keowee, S.C.

A second Oconee unit was ordered to shut down May 12 and the third unit May 19, unless improvements are completed before then.

Already shut down and ordered to remain out of operation until the improvements are made are: Arkansas Unit 1 at Russellville, Ark.; Crystal River Unit 3 at Red Level, Fla.; Davis-Besse at Oak Harbor, Ohio, and Three Mile Island Unit 1, which shares the site of the stricken Unit 2 near Middletown, Pa.

Harold Denton, NRC director of reactor regulation, estimated Friday that the safety improvements would take about one month to complete. But William Lee, president of Duke Power Co., operator of the Oconee plants, said improvements there may be completed sooner.

Industry and NRC officials have warned that if there are prolonged shutdowns, "rolling blackouts" could result as the increased electricity demands of summer meet the shrunken Eastern generating capacity.

Denton, who took command of recovery operations at Three Mile Island after the March 28 accident, said Wednesday the remaining B&W reactors should be shut down because "we do not now have reasonable assurance that these B&W plants can continue to operate without undue risk."

But the five-member commission postponed a decision and sent Denton to negotiate safety improvements with the utility companies.

Obsessed With Bottles

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, is a man obsessed — obsessed with the bottles and cans that litter North Carolina's roadsides and his efforts to get rid of them.

Diamont is the main sponsor of the bill that would require North Carolinians to place a 5-cent deposit on certain drink containers, including bottles and aluminum cans. He introduced it in an effort to get the containers off the landscape.

"I dream about bottles," he said recently. The East Surry High School coach has become a cheerleader for his proposal, mounting one of the most intensive campaigns for a piece of legislation in this session of the General Assembly.

Everywhere he goes he talks about the bottle bill. Before it was filed, when it was filed and since then he has been a walking encyclopedia on the bottle bill.

He never misses a chance to get in a plug for it. If he's before a committee talking about another piece of legislation he's interested in, he's likely to slip in a comment about the bottle bill.

"Maybe it's something I learned in sports," he said in a recent interview as he leafed through a huge red notebook filled with comments on his bottle bill and information from other states where similar legislation has been enacted or attempted.

"To be good at something, you've got to really concentrate and put a lot of time into it," he said. He has put so much time in it that he has lots of propaganda — as he himself calls it — for anyone who is willing to listen.

"How many other people do you know that have put together a book on any legislation," he asked. "I reckon I am obsessed."

However, he says some of the bill's co-signers are as enthusastic as he is.

"Marie, Bruce and Charlie are just as fanatic as I am," he said. He was referring to Reps. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe; Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow and Charles Holt, D-Cumberland.

Diamont has likened himself to the newscaster in the movie, 'Network' who urged people angry about the world situation to lean out their windows and yell, "I'm mad as hell, and I'm not going to take it anymore."

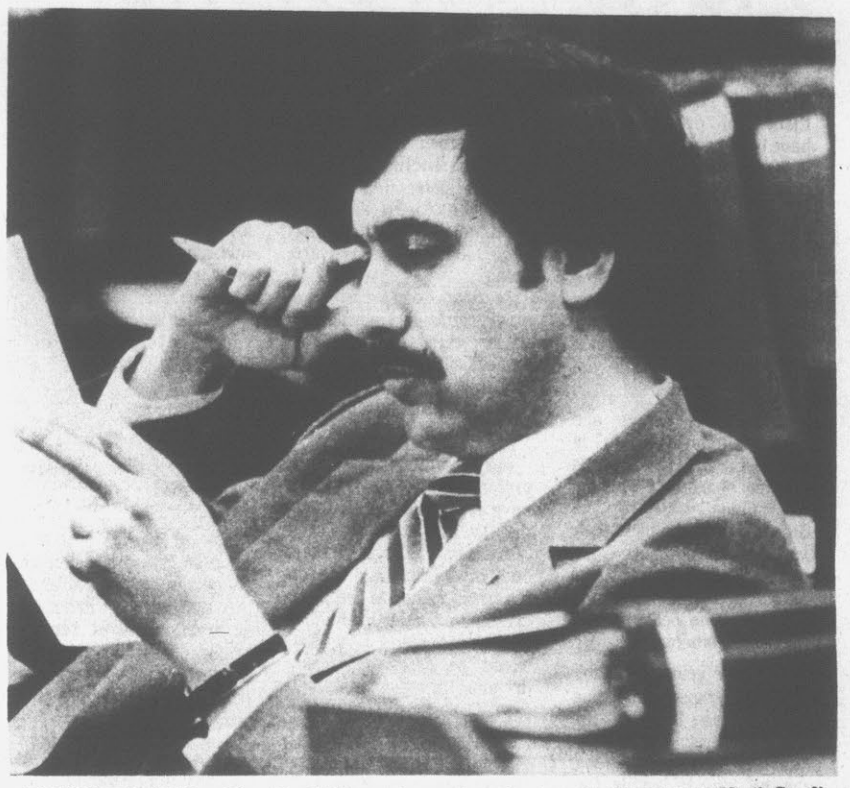
He has said as much before legislators that will act on his bottle bill, usually ending his spiel with this ultimatum.

"It's a simple decision. Do you want the bottles and cans on the side of the road or do you want them taken back to the store where they came from?"

Diamont is convinced that if people have to put down a nickel deposit on each container, they'll take it back to the store rather than toss it out. And in the process the state's roadsides will eventually be cleared of the litter.

But not all legislators are convinced. Attempts in 1975 and 1977 to get a bottle bill passed were unsuccessful. And some members of the 1979 General Assembly say this version won't get through.

The group opposed to the bill that will damage the bill the most are the small grocers, the mom-and-pop operators who don't want to have to be bothered with collecting bottles, refunding deposits and turning the empties back to the distributor.



THE BOTTLE MAN — Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, is the man behind the bill that would require a 5-cent deposit on drink containers. Diamont thinks making drink containers return-for-deposit will encourage North Carolinians to take them back to the store rather than toss them out. (AP Laserphoto)

Must Build Facility For Hazardous Waste

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Under new federal regulations announced Friday, a hazardous waste facility must be located in North Carolina before 1980.

Currently, it is against the law to dispose of hazardous waste materials within the state.

The state Department of Human Resources plans to hire consultants to select potential sites for hazardous waste facilities, said O.W. Strickland, assistant branch head of solid and hazardous waste management in the division of health services.

"We may be looking at the Piedmont area to establish a facility," he said. "It could be a $6-to $10-million investment for the county that gets it."

Hazardous waste is material that could present a danger to human health. The four main types of hazardous waste, according to Strickland, are flammable, corrosive, reactive and toxic.

Newspaper Seeks FBI Files

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An Asheville newspaper is appealing under the Freedom of Information Act for Federal Bureau of Investigation files involving state Sen. Larry B. Leake, D-Asheville.

The Asheville Citizen-Times is asking for information collected by the FBI involving police charges that Leake made threatening and obscene phone calls to a 15-year-old girl.

An FBI spokesman told the newspaper that there is insufficient public interest in the matter for the agency to release the records.

Richard B. Wynne, president and publisher of the Citizen-Times, took exception to the FBI's statement. He questioned whether someone in Washington had any idea what is of public interest in Asheville.

Developing N C Railroad Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Department of Transportation is developing a state railroad plan to make sure small lines won't end service to some communities because it is not profitable.

State railroad planner Mark Boggs said the North Carolina rail plan "will lead us into a program of funding for some of these lines in communities that otherwise may lose their rail service."

The DOT's preliminary plan examined 15 light-density rail lines operated by major railroad companies and four shortline independents.

The report showed that many of the light-density lines were in areas of declining demand for rail service and appeared headed for abandonment.

N C May Receive $300,000

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina may receive $300,000 under an anti-trust settlement announced Friday by State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

All 50 states were named plaintiffs in the suit that charged some manufacturers of master key systems were in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act by fixing prices of the contract hardware involved in the system.

A total of $16,080,000 was awarded in the settlement. North Carolina's share amounted to 2 percent of the total and will be divided among agencies who purchased the locks.

Edmisten listed the defendant companies that produced the systems as Eaton Corp., Emhart Corp., Sargent and Co., and Ilco Corp.

Health Center For Haliwas

HOLLISTER, N.C. (AP) — A $160,000 grant to build a rural health center for the Haliwa Indian community was announced recently by Rep. L.H. Fountain, D-N.C.

The Haliwas are a little-known Indian group, most of whose members live near Hollister.

Haliwa Chief Herbert J. Richardson said the Farmers Home Administration has said it will provide a federal loan for the construction of a clinic building.

Exchange Of Two Spies, Five Dissidents Made

By GERALD NADLER

NEW YORK (UPI) — Five Soviet dissidents, all gaunt and four with their heads shaved, said Saturday they felt as if they were "on the moon" and thanked President Carter for freeing them from labor camps in a swap for two Soviet spies.

Alexander Ginzburg, the most prominent of the released prisoners, vowed to continue his dissident work in the United States and quoted American author Henry David Thoreau to explain that in an unjust society "the true place for a just man is prison."

Eduard Kuznetsov, appointed spokesman for the group by his fellow dissenters, told a jammed news conference at the U.N. Plaza Hotel the swap moved swiftly once it got underway. The five were taken from labor camps on April 25, were in Moscow on Friday at 5 a.m. and flown out two hours later.

"First of all we wish to thank the American people, President Carter and the Congress and all the people in the West who have worked unceasingly on our behalf," said Kuznetsov, perspiring with his lips twitching.

"Yesterday we were still deprived of all our rights, today we are in a country that for 200 years has been the symbol of freedom.

"We are here in the U.S. and this is as incredible as had we found ourselves on the moon."

Ginzburg, 42, was more stark in describing the swap that sent him, Kuznetsov, Georgi P. Vins, Mark Dymshyts and Valentin Moroz to freedom in exchange for two Soviet spies, Valdik A. Enger, and Rudolf P. Chernyayev, former employees at the United Nations.

Ginzburg, his skin pale, his shaved head covered with fuzz, and his lips eerily orange, said the five were marched into a room at Lefogrtovo prison at 5 a.m. Friday and read a decree stipping them of their citizenship. He said 20 Soviet guards accompanied the prisoners on the plane.

But Ginzburg, who was imprisoned three times with the last sentence for Soviet agitation running eight years, vowed he would continue his dissident work of attempting to ensure the Soviet Union complies with the human rights provisions of the Helsinki Conference of 1975.

Ginzburg, bespectacled and dressed in the same blue suit he wore on the swap flight, said he would have preferred to remain in the Soviet Union to continue administering a fund set up by exiled Soviet novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn to aid Soviet prisoners.

Then quoting to explain his lonely quest for which he spent more than 10 years in jail, he said:

Acknowledged And Reformed

Billy, whose can of beer was frequently evident in the past, now says he is a "reformed acoholic," and hasn't had a drink in 60 days.

There have been a number of other political and public figures who have admitted to alcoholism, enough so that we must recognize that there are many, many more private citizens with similar problems.

Our society has tried eliminating alcohol once, with little success in eliminating alcoholism. The real alcoholic will get what he craves, whether it is legal or not.

The answer lies in education concerning the dangers of excessive drinking, and providing examples to alcoholics that there is hope for quitting.

It is difficult for well-known people to publicly discuss their problem and how they overcame it, but their candidness might provide the strength to thousands of little known people who are alcoholics to get their problem under control.

Compensation: Extra Daylight For You

If you are a little more sleepy than usual this morning you did what you were supposed to do last night — that is, move the clocks ahead one hour.

Thus you are up and around an hour earlier than normal.

It's that confusing time of the year when the nation goes on Daylight Time, and we all lose an hour's sleep over Saturday night.

Perhaps you don't feel too happy about it this morning, but the rewards will be obvious this evening when we all enjoy an extra hour's daylight.

Auto Tax Sticker Dying

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The idea of a windshield sticker to signify that local property taxes have been paid on the vehicle is the target of legislative opposition likely to scuttle the notion.

Devised by a study commission after years of research and debate as the least objectionable among many methods of capturing those who evade the local tax, insiders say even this approach is in trouble.

Experts say county and municipal governments in North Carolina are being cheated of between $10 and $12 million yearly by individuals who don't list their vehicles on property tax forms. Some counties use auto registration lists to cross-check on local property tax listers; others don't.

Over the years, methods have been proposed including letting the tax lister sell the auto tags; requiring an affidavit of listing before a tag can be issued; having the State Division of Motor Vehicles collect the property tax when selling the license tag then rebating the local governments. All have run into opposition from various sources including auto dealers, state officials, and taxpaying citizens who don't want to be penalized for something lawbreakers are doing.

So this year's proposal emerged: issue a windshield sticker each year, and any vehicle owner without such a sticker would be arrested and charged with a law violation for not having a sticker.

But lawmakers see many problems with that: police have eough to do without trying to spot tax stickers; citizens have enough stickers on their windshields already; it isn't right to impose criminal penalties for failure to pay a property tax; who would be arrested — the driver or the owner?

Scott's Job

Even before he made that speech in Chapel Hill lambasting Gov. Jim Hunt for trying to push through a tax cut, former Gov. Bob Scott was in trouble on his job as federal co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The word from Washington is that Scott has fallen from grace at the White House, among members of the commission, and with several governors of Appalachian states.

A letter dated February 28 which Scott wrote to Basil

BILL NOBLITT

Paterson, secretary of state for New York, is being circulated in Raleigh. The entire tone and content is defensive, as Scott answered "certain impressions about my role" which he said conversations with several people had brought to his attention.

Not Interested

Some believe he is not interested in his job. "This is simply not the case. I am fully committed...." Scott wrote. Not much has been accomplished "because of weak leadership" from Scott was rebutted with a partial list of accomplishments.

The impression that Scott spends too much time making speeches and traveling was answered by noting that the chairman is supposed to leave daily routine to others, and that speechmaking is part of the job. The fact that most invitations come from North Carolina is because that is his home, Scott said.

"There is the allegation that I spend too much time in North Carolina and that I do not like Washington. This is partly true. I do not like living in Washington. I go home to North Carolina each weekend because it is my home and my family is there." Further, Scott argued, he is not a career federal employee.

As for speculation that he will take another job, Scott said such offers do come up and, "If such did not happen, then I would consider myself politically dead."

Sunday Morning Notes

When Lynn Whitley, secretary for an organization, called to ask for some publicity for a clean-up project we assumed it was a part of clean-up month.

"What's the name of your organization?" we asked.

It was a permanent committee formed by the city government, she explained, and the name was a mouthful.

It will be known as the . . . Beautification, Clean-Up and Litter Control Committee.

Well, it will never fit in a headline but if the name fits the purposes we are all for it.

The committee, we learned, will be seeking ideas on how we can maintain a cleaner city, not just in April, but throughout the year.

Of course, the first idea that comes to mind is for every citizen simply to stop throwing out trash, cans and bottles along the streets. That is elementary to most of us, but incomprehensible to some . . . and the condition of many streets on Monday morning is indicative of this.

Anyway the Beautification, Clean-Up and Litter Control Committee had its first meeting last week and is now looking for ways to bring about an improvement.

We wish them all the luck. Street litter is not only unsightly, it is costly to the taxpayers to continually clean it up.

Last week a Tar River Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce took a boat tour down the river and discovered a virtual paradise of wilderness.

The Tar has been a commercial route for our area in the early days of the settlement of Pitt County.

The railroads virtually killed the freight traffic on the Tar. Then it became recreational with fishing for catfish and carp in the Greenville area, where raw sewage flowed into it, and net fishing at Grimesland and below.

Always, though, those who made the boat trip down the Tar toward the Pamlico have been impressed by the virtually unbroken wilderness along its banks. It is an impressive and serene trip.

Now the Tar is free of raw sewage and its has great recreational potential.

Its beauty is freely available to anyone who wants to take the trip.

Ethnic Vote A Force

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 1.2 million non-white registered voters are considered a major factor in the general election next Thursday. They hold the key in a dozen districts and could tip the balance in 40 others, political analysts say.

The Guardian, a liberal newspaper, recently noted: "The ethnic vote ...is for the first time considered to be a real force in a British general election."

A Community Relations Commission study after the October 1974 election noted there were more than 50 districts in which non-white voters outnumbered the majorities that put winning candidates in the House of Commons.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Same Old Republicans

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A standing ovation behind closed doors two months ago and a non-announcement six weeks later point to this increasingly probable development: the Republican campaign to regain the White House in 1980 will offer few new challenges, blaze no new paths.

The ovation was given John B. Connally the morning of March 7 by a select group of Republican House members. Such acclaim at these breakfasts is rare. What made it meaningful was Connally, while failing to mention tax reduction, gave a characteristically spirited defense of the massive intervention into the economy he directed as Richard Nixon's secretary of the treasury.

The announcement, due April 16, aborted. On that dour tax collecting day, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York was supposed to announce formation of an "exploratory committee" — the first step to qualify for federal funds to finance a presidential campaign. No committee was formed. Kemp's friends now think it improbable that it will be.

This is more than new proof that Connally is a rising Republican star and Kemp is flinching at an uphill presidential run. Beyond that, it suggests an early grave for the bright new Republican doctrine of economic growth rather than austerity, emphasizing tax reduction rather than reduced spending.

It was this doctrine that transformed the famed football quarterback overnight into a national Republican star. It was envisioned as the vehicle to elect him president by his closest advisers: Irving Kristol, writer and teacher; Jude Wanniski, journalist and business consultant; Jeffrey Bell, 1978 Republican Senate nominee from New Jersey.

Preaching the gospel across the land, Kemp has left audiences feeling more hopeful than before — a rare feat for Republican orators since the coming of the New Deal. But hedonism is uncongenial to conventional Republicans. In the 1978 campaign, uncomfortable Republican candidates moved away from Kemp's growth doctrines as Democrats sounded the alarm of fiscal irresponsibility.

As 1979 began, Kemp was concerned that Republicans were about to engage in an austerity contest with President Carter. He did not see front-running Ronald Regan, with whom he has close ties of long standing, propounding a philosophy of growth. Kristol, Wanniski and Bell grew optimistic that Kemp would run.

They became nearly certain as the political community perceived Regan's decline and Connally's rise. Connally boasted he did not travel aboard "The Republican Tax Clipper," the planeload of Republican politicians boosting the Kemp-Roth tax reduction bill, and had never even endorsed that bill.

On March 7 at his breakfast with Republican congressmen, Connally was asked a pointed question by Rep. David Stockman of Michigan (an ally of Kemp): did he regret his role as Treasury secretary in 1971 imposing wage-price controls and ending dollar convertibility into gold. Both steps have been assailed by Kemp (and by Jeff Bell in his Senate campaign) as part of the crusade against government stifling of the economy.

Big John neither hesitated nor apologized. Economic controls, he said, were a political necessity; closing the gold window, he added, was essential to save the dollar, then endangered by a British assault. The subsequent ovation for Connally indicated Kemp's colleagues were hardly dedicated to his economic doctrine.

But that only spurred Kemp's advisers to greater efforts in urging a presiden-

The Open Spaces

(The Laurinburg Exchange)

In 1940 Hyde County numbered nearly 8,000 people. Since then, at least through the 1970 census, Hyde has been going downhill population-wise. From 1960 to 1970 Hyde dropped by 3.4 percentage points to 5,571 people.

With such an insignificant population, the average North Carolinian might not know where Hyde is. Mentioning Fairfield, Nebraska, Middleton and Gulf Rock won't help. But perhaps Swan Quarter and Lake Mattamuskeet will. They are all located in Hyde, which fronts on Pamlico Sound.

The big news down there these days is that Hyde's Rural Health Corporation has attracted a dentist. For the first time in 20 years that county will have a practicing dentist. A $50,000 dental clinic has been provided for the new professional who will open practice this summer.

Commenting on this big event, The Greenville Daily reflector said, "Hyde, and a number of other areas of the state, are small in population, but they are ideal places to live if you shun the bright lights and problems of the cities."

The Greenville editor echoes what many others about North Carolina have been saying for a long time. Small town America, even remote America, has for some years been attracting outside investment and good citizens from overcrowded parts of other states.

This lure/remote "idea place to live" — has worked so well in parts of North Carolina that seemingly "down east" counties would have done better than they. One reason success has been choosey is that a good lure must have a good fisherman to case it, and not all of this state's small communities have been as aggressive in extending their lines as, say, Hyde has in seeking a dentist.

40 Years Ago Today

April 29, 1939

J.H. Rose, candidate for state commander of the American Legion, has the unanimous support of Limer Post No. 25 of Warrenton that organization having gone on record at a meeting this week as endorsing the Rose for the next department commander.

Rose received the support of the Warrenton chapter, it was said, not only because he once lived there but also on account of his ability as a leader, his work with the younger people, and the many fine traits he possesses.

Candidate Rose is the son of the honorable W.W. Rose, Methodist minister, who served in Warrenton for four years about 30 years ago.

Along with the endorsement of Rose, Limer post chose Major Claude Bowers and Captain Harold R. Skillman as delegates to the convention, which is to be held in Raleigh in June. Russell Palmer commander of the local post and Dr. W.D. Rodgers were named as alternates.

Strength For Today

FACING OUR FEARS

A certain woman, speaking of her husband who had recently died, said, "He walked up to all his fears."

He faced them. He did not cross to the other side when he saw them coming down the street. He did not allow himself to be tortured by them as they came before his mind in times of relaxation. When there was something in life he feared, he went right up to it and dealt with it as the situation required.

There are few types of bondage more dreadful than the bondage of fear. Certainly there are things in life of which we should be afraid. But the prompt response here is to do everything we can to obviate the danger. The taking of precautions is something quite different than the knowing emotion of fear.

After the precautions have been taken and we have done everything we can to give ourselves reasonable safety, then — forget fears. The worst might happen, true, but our fearing it will neither hasten it nor prevent it.

Inflation Wrecks Old Values

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Asked last year why he believed inflation would soar to the statistical mountaintops, an economist partcipating in a panel discussion answered, "Because it's here."

"...we have inflation, we'll have inflation. It discourages saving. It encourages spending. It entices people to borrow money for purchases that otherwise might be postponed.

"Why save at 5.25 percent when value declines at 9 percent?. Why not spend now and avoid higher prices later? Why not borrow to buy now when you're fairly certain of repaying in cheaper dollars?"

His explanation described the strategy aready employed by a good many Americans, and it continues to explain the dilemma involved in battling a monster that, for the moment, some people see as friendly.

DOES IT PAY TO SAVE? The explanation given — by the U.S. Savings Bond people, for example — is that of course it pays to save. They declare it in advertisements. They honor those who broadcast the message.

Annualized, the latest inflation rate is about 13 percent. Savings Bonds pay 6 percent. Arithmetic provides a negative answer. How can the Savings Bond people — or the savings bank people — say you are saving?

DOES IT PAY TO SPEND? It often does. It explains why people are "into" collectables. By exchanging paper or metal money for something more durable, they explain, they better retain their assets.

Prices of single-family houses, for example, have been rising at better than 10 percent for several years. That beats bank rates, and usually exceeds the rate of inflation too.

Those using the strategy must, however, be concerned with long range consequences too. Will those purchases continue to rise in value? Can they be reconverted to cash? Can the payments be maintained?

DOES IT PAY TO BORROW? Very often it does. The logic is clear when you consider that the domestic buying power of the dollar has been halved in just 11 years. The term is "paying back in cheaper dollars."

But there are other considerations. Did you really need the money? Was the purchase made from the borrowed money worthwhile? How high was the interest rate? Did the purchased object rise in value? Or did it fall?

Offseting some of the negatives is an enormous positive: Interest paid is deductible on income taxes. Consider what this means to a person in a 50 percent tax bracket; his or her cost of borrowing is cut in half.

On the other hand, consider that the saver must pay income tax on the interest earned. Never mind that such earnings might be an illusion — that inflation might have wiped them out. You still pay.

The economist had a point: Inflation, at least of the current type, breeds itself. Why does it persist? Because it's here.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Should Study Legislative Wastes

Were it not so galling, it would be hard for power companies to keep a straight face on the instant expertise of the Johnny-come-latelies to nuclear generation of power.

Ranking among the most absurd of these is our estimable rookie senator, Bob Davis, Jr., who has announced he will introduce a bill in the General Assembly requiring power companies to adhere to "stricter" safety measures and adopt "viable" methods of disposing of radioactive waste.

The bill, he admits, will have no specifics. We are glad to hear that. Were he to specify what is "stricter" and what is "viable," we would worry about our safety and the future of Duke Power Company. At least our young senator admits that in introducing the bill he does not know what he is talking about. That practice is not unknown in the General Assembly.

The excuse for the bill, he explained, is that he wants to open "communications" between Duke Power and the legislature.

Since when, Senator Davis, have they been closed? There is nothing secret about the mechanics of using nuclear energy to generate electricity nor is the method of disposing of the nuclear wastes hidden from the legislature or the general public.

All the senator has to do is to ask. Duke will bury him under pounds of material explaining the processes.

But what we would rather see the senator do is to concentrate on the fall-out wastes from the General Assembly of which his bill is a splendid example. It should be wrapped in legislative brass and lowered into the nearest sewer.

Doing Their Share

From time to time, government leaders underestimate the private sector's self-reliance, and a case in point may prove particularly embarrassing to Launch Faircloth, North Carolina's Secretary of Commerce.

At a recent conference on tourism in the state, the chief of the commerce department was grousing about the state's tourist businesses and their apparent lackluster approach to promoting themselves.

If businesses want more money allocated to the state Department of Travel and Tourism for promotion, he said, they must first be willing to spend more on promoting themselves. According to the commerce chieftain, the tourism industry hadn't spent so much as a million dollars in tourist promotion last year.

That's wrong, and our own Dare County tourist industry has pretty much proven so.

With those remarks from Faircloth, the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce set out to poll their own beach businessmen. Unfortunately, they received only minimal responses from motel, restaurant and other local businessmen. Only about 20 area businesses have replied thus far.

But among those few, the results were surprising. They alone had spent about $454,000 in advertising and promotion during the last fiscal year.

If that's true, the figures statewide are undeniably higher than Secretary Faircloth has in mind. North Carolina's tourism business is obviously doing its share, and then some.

As I Recall It

Birth & Death Of The N.C. Speaker Ban Law

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired recently after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

When a leftwing speaker came to Chapel Hill one day back around 1963, he stationed himself on the street side of the wall that separates the University of North Carolina campus from Franklin Street. A throng of students gathered on the other side of the wall to hear him speak.

The reason the speaker carefully remained outside the UNC campus was the Speaker Ban Law which was rushed to passage in the closing hours of the 1963 General Assembly without giving university officials a chance to be heard. The law forbade communists from speaking on state-supported campuses.

The first public mention of the Speaker Ban Law came on the afternoon before the 1963 legislature adjourned, when Rep. Phill Godwin, D-Gates, introduced the measure in the House. Under suspended rules it was passed in less than five minutes and rushed to the Senate by special messenger. There it also passed quickly under suspended rules. Opponents protested that Senate President Clarence Stone had not given them a chance to voice their objections.

William C. Friday, the president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, first heard of the bill's passage over the radio as he was driving from Raleigh home to Chapel Hill. He returned to Raleigh and went to the Sir Walter Hotel, then the place where most legislators lived while in Raleigh, to seek reconsideration of the new law.

That reconsideration came the following day when the Senate voted 25-19 against recalling the measure from the Enrolling Office , leaving the new law on the books.

Those who argued for the motion included Sen. Robert Lee Humber of Pitt, who asserted the Senate should give more thought to the measure "involving as it does the question of principles of freedom, the reputation of the university and the wisdom of the General Assembly."

Sen. Luther Hamilton of Carteret said, "We have come to a sorry pass if we do not permit that liberalism of thought and expression on which this country was made. I resent with all my being any attitude in North Carolina or the country which denies the right of anyone to stand on his feet and say what he thinks."

The following day, one of the state's newspapers pointed out editorially that the Leningrad Symphony Orchestra had recently appeared in Reynolds Coliseum on the campus of N.C. State University and that at the end, the conductor, a communist, stepped forward and addressed the audience. "He only spoke of the pleasure of himself and his associates in playing ... But he spoke on the campus of a state-supported institution of higher learning," the paper said.

The editorial went on to tell of the visit of a group of Russian farmers and a Yugoslav newspaperman to state campuses.

"The General Assembly has made us safe from all such now," the editorial continued. "The visit of any such persons to the campuses of state-supported colleges is illegal now.

"Legislators may feel safer. Certainly we look sillier", the editorial concluded.

Friday pointed out that the law would mean that visiting professors and private citizens from communist nations couldn't appear on state-supported campuses to deliver lectures.

The Speaker Ban Law controversy which developed during the administration of Gov. Terry Sanford continued to rage under Gov. Dan Moore, who appointed a commission to study the issue. The commission, headed by David Britt (now an associate justice of the state Supreme Court) recommended revisions that toned down the law. These revisions were enacted by the legislature, but the issue was finally settled when the courts ruled the law unconstitutional.

PAWNS IN A HIGH POWERED GAME!

"It's obvious that colored voters have the capacity to wield significant electoral power," a Labor Party campaign official said.

"Proportionately, they could elect as many as 12 blacks to the House of Commons if they chose. But there's little chance of that happening because they have never used their votes or have never been organized in the way they voted."

There are only five non-whites among the record 2,751 candidates running for the 635-seat House of Commons. But that's the highest number of non-whites ever to run in a general election in Britain.

There has been no non-white member of Commons since an Asian, Sapurji Saklatvala, was elected on a Communist ticket in 1928. However, there are signs that the traditionally-fragmented non-white vote is being organized to a greater extent than in any previous election.

Non-white community leaders last week drew up a Black People's Manifesto listing racial issues that non-whites should question candidates about in the current campaign.

Russell Profitt, a non-white Labor Party candidate in London's traditionally Conservative Westminster district, said: "This is an attempt to educate black voters and shake the political parties out of their complacency towards blacks. It is an attempt to intervene in the election on our own terms instead of just reacting to issues as they come up."

Profitt was born in the former British colony of Guyana in South America. He is now a deputy school principal in London's Lewisham borough, where racial violence erupted last year.

The three major political parties — Labor, Conservative and Liberal — have stayed away from the racial issue in the campaign. But the ultra-right-wing National Front is waging what its national organizer, Martin Webster, said is a "very, very heavy racialist campaign."

The Front, which has more than 280 candidates in the field, advocates an end to non-white immigration and repatriation of the 1.9 million that are here. They make up 3.4 percent of the total population, which is 56 million, and most of them came from former British colonies in Africa, Asia and the Caribbean.

With the latest polls showing the Conservatives still in the lead but losing ground, all three major parties are making a major pitch for the non-white vote.

tial race, since Connally appeared to be overtaking Reagan. The opening gun was set for April 16, not only because it was tax day but because a major segment on CBS'S "60 Minutes" the previous evening unveiled Kemp's economic strategy to a mass audience.

But while Kemp's advisers see him as the engine to drive their new economic policy, his friends in Congress warned against windmill tilting. While no final decision has been made, Kemp probably has postponed the April 16 decision permanently. "As far as his career is concerned," one friend said, "Jack decided not to throw the long pass."

That leaves the field essentially to proponents of a constitutionally-imposed balanced budget (which Kemp has rejected). Dr. Herbert Stein, chief economic adviser in the Nixon administration, recently called for five years of economic austerity. Reagan private lauds the therapy of an economic slowdown. In short, Republicans are sounding much as they have the past half-century.

An exception was made on ABC's "Issues and Answers" April 22 when Connally appeared to change his tax tune by saying "I would decrease taxes by about $15 billion to $18 billion next year." That is a crack in the austerity line, but clearly secondary to cuts in spending. Connally's cautious venture is scarcely the bold new Republicanism envisioned by Jack Kemp's advisers who prayed for that long pass.

Self-Proclaimed Home Of The Topless Oyster

ST. MARKS, Fla. — Belly up to the bar, order a beer, then sit back and ogle a bevy of raw-skinned topless beauties guaranteed to make you drool.

Welcome to Posey's Topless Oyster Bar — where oysters on the half-shell, not employees, go topless. For seven years now, Posey's — the self-proclaimed home of the "topless" oyster — has drawn seafood lovers to the historic port of St. Marks from as far away as California and Sweden.

They come for three reasons: raw oysters, boiled shrimp and smoked mullet.

From the outside, the two-story eatery looks like a clapboard shanty, bent and twisted by the Gulf winds. "They won't let you do anything to the building," says owner Bill Helson of his customers. "They yell at you if you try to paint it."

Inside, the ghosts of fishermen past hover about a honky-tonk jukebox that fills the air with sad songs about unfaithful sweethearts. "Darlin' save the last dance for me..." croons a wary Jerry Lee Lewis.

Helson, 40, a Tennessee native who has been in the carnival business all his life, says he doesn't allow dancing or hard rock music in the eatery: "It attracts your troublemakers."

The people Helson wants as customers are family types, he says. But anyone who can demonstrate a wild-eyed-though-respectable craving for fresh seafood is welcome.

Consider the Florida State University English professor who shows up most weekends to wait on tables and sweep floors. Or the Swedish business executive who flies his private airplane all the way down from New York just to eat at Posey's. And then there is the former Speaker of the Florida House of Representatives who goes to Posey's to shuck his own oysters.

There is no menu at Posey's. Nor are there silverware, plates or glasses. Helson explains there is a good reason for the rustic atmosphere at the oyster bar. "The building is too old to qualify for a restaurant. When I first bought the place, they gave me a hassle. They told me I would have to register with the Department of Natural Resources as a seafood dealer."

As a result, the mullet is served on a paper towel. Shrimp are piled on plastic plates and oysters are dumped on the counter. There are no side orders of grits or hush puppies, and all beverages are served in cans or bottles.

Helson says he sells so many oysters a week (about 125 bushels) that he has hired an Apalachicola Bay fisherman to work exclusively for him.

Norma Folks, a waitress here for more than four years, explains that most of the customers are from out of town. When they return, they bring friends. "I know two-thirds of them by name," she says.

At the back of the bar are pool tables and pinball machines. Helson estimates the average customer spends about four hours in the bar, shooting pool, eating oysters and making new friends. By the end of the night, he says, customers are in such good spirits they usually lock arms and sing a final stanza of "Lucille" — the Kenny Rogers song about hard luck in love and marriage. "You know, they'll sound pretty good. Especially when 15 or 20 of them are all singing together."

The oyster bar closes every summer, May through August, when the oyster season grinds to a halt. During that time, Helson travels with a carnival, in charge of amusement and concession booths.

When he reopens in September, chaos is the first customer. "They come three hours early and fight over who gets the first oyster," he says.

The Screaming That Drives Mothers Wild

By GAIL MICHAELS

Have you ever noticed how some children express every emotion with a scream? They scream with delight; they scream with anger; they scream with fear. These kids always are in high gear, They're the ones who throw temper tantrums when their block towers won't stay put on their pillows, when Barbie's dress doesn't fit Kermit the Frog, and when the green crayon doesn't write red. They yell and throw books at the snakes on TV. They shriek and jump up and down when someone suggests a trip to the ice cream store.

The mother of one of these kids lives on the ragged edge of a nervous breakdown. She sends the child outside to play on a bright spring day, and five minutes later she hears a scream and a sickening thud. She rushes outside, her diaphragm knotted around her tonsils, and finds that the kid has thrown a tricycle at a sweat bee.

She leaves the child in the tub while she goes to answer the telephone, and the second she picks up the receiver, there's a howl, violent thrashing, then a silence that sends her streaking back to the bathroom. The kid is sitting calmly on the side of the tub. He has just dumped two gallons of water on the floor to drown a spider.

Upon hearing her child cry, "Help, help!" at 3 a.m., this is the mother who grabs a poker and runs to drive out the intruder, and the kid greets her with, "I couldn't make it to the potty."

It's impossible to be entirely impervious to these assaults on the eardrum, but most mothers learn eventually to consider the source. When Meg screams, I still go to her, but I finish the dishes or the chapter first. I even managed to stay calm when she went into hysterics because a fly accompanied us on a drive to the post office.

"For heaven's sake, Meg, that fly couldn't hurt you even if it wanted to."

"But it might bite me! " she quivered.

"No it won't. Only horseflies bite, and they are much bigger than that little fly."

Later that day, while she was playing in her bedroom, she started screaming again. This time a gnat had set her off.

"Oh, come on, Meg. Look at how tiny that gnat is. He wouldn't hurt you any more than a fly would."

I walked back into the kitchen, and the screaming redoubled in vigor.

"What is it this time?" I called.

"Mommy, I think it's a horse gnat!"

Best Of The Books About Patty Hearst Case

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SAN FRANCISCO — Most of California, it is reliably reported, is just as normal as anywhere else, and doubtless this is so. But California's great cities — San Francisco and Los Angeles — have not only a star quality but a super-star quality. Only super-stars can tackle them on equal terms.

I thought about this last week in flying around the West Coast. In my saddle bag was Shana Alexander's new book from Viking, "Anyone's Daughter." It tells the story of the trial of Patty Hearst. This is a superlative work, the product of a super-star in our craft. I count it the finest court reporting since Rebecca West covered the Nuremberg trials.

The Hearst case sprang from the very loins of San Francisco. Oh, sure, large parts of this incredible city are as ho-hum as large parts of Omaha, but no city in the world matches San Franciso in sheer vitality. Something in the air, perhaps, breeds the flaky, far-out apostles of a hundred giddy obsessions. The sidewalks teem with bald bell-ringers in saffron robes. Turn your wheels to the curb! First you go up; then you go down. It is the dizziest roller coaster ever devised.

Only San Francisco could have bred a Symbionese Liberation Army, a Black Guerrilla Family, the August 7 movement. Out of this fertile culture came Hearst the old lord of San Simeon, Tania the brain-washed revolutionary, the whole cast of characters that summoned a gold rush of reporters to Patty's trial three years ago.

Shana Alexander was part of the journalistic swarm. When the story of the Hearst kidnapping first broke in 1974, she recognized it instantly as her story; Patty's subsequent trial for bank robbery was her trial. "Anyone's Daughter" is Shana's book and Patty's book wrapped into one. And for any person who regards the English language as so much silver and gold to be worked by master craftsmen, this is prose by Cellini. If there is a better writer-reporter at work in America today than Shana Alexander, I have not read his stuff.

Here is the marvelous gift of looking intently; it is the quality of high resolution that one finds in the lens of a Leica. Her characters spring to life. Patty herself is the "pale face with the charcoal smudge eyes." Her five pink and perfectly enameled fingers "flutter like the frilly fin of a Siamese fighting fish." Again, those fingers gesture rapidly "as if she were doing a newscast for the deaf." Patty pours water for her lawyers as primly as "a hostess at a sorority tea."

Shana draws the supporting cast in lines as pure as Picasso's. The judge enters, "his narrow head poking out of his robes like a turkey caught in a black sack." As the trial ends, the judge "reads his instructions so badly he seems to throw the law at the jurors like rice upon honeymooners." She limns lawyer F. Lee Bailey with his Brillo sideburns and his candy-box duds. Catherine Hearst "flashes her Double-Mint smile." We see the Hearst family bunched together at a luncheon table, "60-year-old Randy, an abbot huddles with his nuns awaiting the barbarian invaders."

This is not a sob sister's gushy defense of Patty Hearst. Shana began covering the trial with a pro-Patty prejudice. She cooled considerably as the case went on. In her view, Bailey made a botch of the defense: "This case needed empathy, and Mr. Bailey doesn't have much of that." If the jurors could have heard evidence that had been ruled inadmissible, Patty might well have been acquitted; but "as the judge read them the law it is hard to see how they could have come up with any other verdict but guilty."

The Hearst trial cannot be ranked as "the" trial of the century. It lacked the echoing overtones of Sacco-Vanzetti, Scopes, and Alger Hiss. As Shana herself acknowledges, "the Hearst case was an interesting story about a fundamentally uninteresting girl." But out of the strands of wealth and sex and violence and fanaticism that tangled together in California, my friend Shana has woven a beautiful fabric of beautiful reporting. "Anyone's Daughter" qualifies as almost anyone's book of the year.

Red River Rages In Flood

By United Press International

The Red River of the North made an inland sea that encompassed Minnesota and North Dakota villages Saturday and pushed a devastating flood crest relentlessly northward, sending thousands of persons fleeing for high ground.

The glutted Mississippi River touched off backwater flooding that swamped parts of Louisiana and Mississippi. A combination of rain and melting snow pushed rivers and streams over their banks in northern New England.

Sandbagging crews exhausted by a week of back-breaking toil on flood-strained dikes along the Red River at Grand Forks, N.D., got a long-awaited breather Saturday as the river began to fall slowly.

But the river was still rising, isolating farm communities, stranding families and sending some 10,000 Canadians in Manitoba province fleeing for cover in anticipation of devastating flooding.

The Red River was racing past Drayton, N.D., at a record pace of 673,200 gallons per second. The Army Corps of Engineers said more than 825,000 acres have been flooded, causing more than $60 million in damage in the 100-mile stretch of river between Grand Forks and the Canadian border.

Red Cross worker Barbara Wilks said her organization was concentrating relief efforts on Oslo, Minn., 30 miles north of Grand Forks.

"We're taking in supplies and food for isolated families by boat and helicopter," she said.

"You can still drive into Oslo, but the community is almost completely surrounded by water," she said. "We've got no idea how many farm families are completely isolated."

Flood Control officials at Grand Forks breathed easier — but not much easier. Some of the 2,000 persons who fled their Grand Forks homes began returning to their mud-caked houses — against the advice of emergency crews.

The river dropped to about 48 feet and as was falling slowly but steadily.

"We really think the worst part's over here," a flood control spokesman said. "But we won't feel really safe until it hits 44 feet. Some people are going back home now, but we don't really advise it."

The Mississippi River pushed its crest toward Vicksburg. Miss., Saturday, sending backwaters spilling over fertile Delta farmland and through rural areas of Mississippi and Louisiana.

About 250 families have been ordered out of their homes in the Vicksburg area because of the flooding. The Mississippi River Commission said damages could mount to about $18 million. About 1,000 homes, hunting and fishing camps, as well as industrial property, have been flooded.

Recent floods have taken a heavy toll across Mississippi, where four persons have died in floodwaters. The rampaging Pearl River's forced about 25,000 persons to leave their homes and caused damages officials fear could total $1 billion. The Pearl also forced evacuations and caused millions of dollars in damage in Louisiana.

Marchers Arrested

OKOLONA, Miss. (UPI) — About 175 blacks, marching peacefully in continuation of protests against racial discrimination, were arrested Saturday for demonstrating without a permit and blocking city streets.

All those arrested were released on their own recognizance on the misdeamnor charges. Some of those arrested did not participate in the march.

In a confusing sequence of events, the United League of Mississippi had received a temporary restraining order from U.S. District Judge William Keady on Friday that stopped Okolona officials from prohibiting their marches.

Anti-Nuclear Demonstration

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — More than 8,000 anti-nuclear acitivists, roused by the recent nuclear accident at Three-Mile Island, Pa., massed at one of the nation's major nuclear weapons plants Saturday to demand the plant be converted to non-weapons production.

"This marks the beginning of the end of the nuclear age," said Sister Pam Solo, one of the rally organizers. "We demand a monument to the future. We will no longer allow the government to plow the resources of this country into the largest defense budget in history."

The sister, who is in the Sisters of Loretto order, is a leader of the Rocky Flats Action Group, which has planned a civil disobedience demonstration at the plant Sunday.

The rally Saturday, held on the rangeland buffer around the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant, was the first of a series planned around the nation this spring to halt continued production of nuclear weapons.

Rocky Flats, operated by Rockwell International for the Department of Energy, manufactures plutonium "triggers" for nuclear weapons. The plant was built 18 miles northwest of Denver in 1952.

Energy Secretary James Schlesigner announced two weeks ago the DOE would study the possibility of phasing out nuclear weapons production at Rocky Flats.

More than a dozen speakers addressed the crowd, estimated at 8,200 by the State Patrol. Many of the demonstrators wore heavy parkas and used plastic garbage bags to shield themselves from an intermittent cold rain.

They chanted "No More Nukes" between the speeches and jeered government surveillance helicopters as they passed overhead.

"The power of the people is immense. You got rid of Nixon; you got out of Vietnam. The American people have the power to save the human race," said Dr. Helen Caldicott, author of "Nuclear Madness" and a pediatrician at Boston's children's Hostpial.

The demonstrators released several hundred colored balloons with tags attached to warn the finders they would be contaminated by radiation in the event of a nuclear accident at Rocky Flats.

Dr. Caldicott earlier told a demonstration in Denver that the lack of information about the public health hazards created by the accident at the Three-Mile Island nuclear power plant was typical of the government's refusal to tell the public about nuclear dangers.

"If there had been a meltdown at Harrisburg and the wind was blowing toward New York, where the Nuclear Regulatory Commission meets, the Pentagon would have been uninhabitable for hundreds of years. No one said that, but they were sweating," she said.

Green Supports Pay Raise For Teachers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has sided with school teachers and state employees in their call for a bigger pay raise than the Hunt administration is willing to grant them.

In a prepared statement Friday, Green said the 174,000 teachers and state workers have fallen more than 18 percent behind the cost of living over the past four years.

"I firmly believe that fairness requires that state employees and teachers be granted a 7 percent salary increase, plus the built-in merit increment of approximately 2 percent," Green said.

Gov. Jim Hunt has recommended that the teachers and state workers be granted a 5 percent pay hike plus 2 percent for merit and longevity raises. Hunt has said a 7 percent total boost is the most the state can pay and remain within President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines.

Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, said the administration would not change its position. "We're going to follow the guidelines," Pearce said.

The Tennessee Valley Authority has the three-unit Browns Ferry plant in operation which provides 13 percent of its electricity. But TVA has six other plants (12 units) under construction.

TVA spokesman Mike Butler said if Browns Ferry were closed "TVA would be able to make up the lost generating capacity by using our coal-fired plants, oil-fired peaking turbines, hydroelectric units and by getting power from other utilities."

Austin C. Thies, Duke's vice president — production and transmission, doesn't like to think about the consequences of a shutdown of all nuclear units in the South.

"The situation would be very chaotic," he said. "You wouldn't know whether you would have power from one day to the next."

Thies said the Three Mile Island accident could prove beneficial to the industry in the long run.

"We've got everybody's attention now," he said. "Maybe now we (the public) can decide whether we want nuclear power or we don't want nuclear power."

"I think the Three Mile Island accident was bad for the nuclear industry but good for the safety of nuclear plants," he said, adding that it is leading to increased safety precautions.

The Southeastern Reliability Council in Atlanta reports that South Carolina, Virginia and Alabama are the most dependent upon nuclear generation of electricity.

South Carolina has the capacity to produce 30 percent of its electricity by nuclear units while Alabama has a 25.8 percent capacity and Virginia a 25 percent capacity.

Ken Clark, a spokesman for the Atlanta regional office of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said the Three Mile Island accident has had no direct effect on the construction schedule of nuclear plants in the South.

"Three mile island has not resulted in any slowdown thus far," he said. "After the TMI incident is fully studied and evaluated it could result in modifications being required."

Left Over $12 Million

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh broadcast pioneer A.J. Fletcher left an estate of over $12.5 million and scattered bequests among relatives, a foundation and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Helms, a former WRAL-TV editorialist, was one of several co-workers of Fletcher's who received shares of stock in Fletcher's will.

Fletcher, who died April 1 at age 91, willed the bulk of his estate to his two grandsons, James F. Goodmon and Ray H. Goodmon III, and to Culture Inc., a non-profit organization that supports the A.J. Fletcher Educational and Opera Foundation.

No provisions were made in the will for two of Fletcher's three sons. One of the two, Fred Fletcher, 68, retired president of Capitol Broadcasting Co., declined to comment on the will.

The other son, J. Floyd Fletcher, 64, one of the founders of WTVD television in Durham, said, "My father's will was his baby, and when I write my will it's going to be my baby."

Both said they would not contest the will.

"I have made no provision in this will for my sons, Fred Fletcher and J. Floyd Fletcher, or their issue, because during my lifetime, I have made gifts and otherwise assisted them financially," the will read.

The third son, Frank U. Fletcher Sr., a Washington attorney, received more than 200 shares of stock.

City Council Promises Decision On Rescue, Fire Departments

In the addendum to the League report, City Manager Ed Wyatt reports that first year costs to operate a separate rescue department — including construction of a building, additional personnel to man the facility, and additional operating expenses — are estimated at $530,300.

Additional personnel expenses, according to the supplement, including four dispatchers, three rescue officers and upgrading the rescue chief to fire chief pay level, would account for $74,600 of the increase, while operating expenses for separate facilities (which rescue squad members say they would raise the money to build), would total $11,600.

ART IN INDUSTRY — What looks like a metal sculpture is in reality a key part of the feeder system in glass-container-making machinery. Its bore height is being measured by a quality control inspector in the Emhart Corporation plant in Windsor, Conn., recently. (AP Laserphoto)

The supplement also notes that office space at the present headquarters station is inadequate, "bath facilities...are totally inadequate, storage facilities are inadequate, and sleeping quarters, "are very cramped."

The space used on the Greene Street side of the station, the addendum continues, "is so small and the station is so close to the sidewalk that when we wash fire equipment and rescue units the front bumper protrudes into the street, causing a hazardous condition for passing cars," and adds that anytime the snorkel is washed, "it has to be taken to the drill tower."

The supplement also makes note of police department needs.

"Recognized standards," according to the addendum, indicate that a new police building should contain a minimum of 10,000 square feet. The Police Department is now housed in some 2,000 square feet of space in a portion of the municipal building.

The cost of a new police department home, the supplement estimates, would be $592,000.

If the two operations are consolidated, "it's going to take management," to make it work, according to Sherman Pickard, an official with the League of Municipalities, who favors consolidated fire and rescue operations.

"If you let the quality (of emergency medical services) slip, it's purely a management problem," which can be dealt with, Pickard emphasized. "You don't need two separate management structures to do a good job."

James O. Page, considered an authority in the field of emergency medical services, has his own ideas on joint fire-rescue operations.

"We are training and committing today's generation of firefighters to do a job that was beyond the imagination of their predecessors. We are giving them life-death responsibility to be performed with little or no on-site supervision. We are expecting them to live up to an image that has been magnified by Hollywood.

"Advanced life support programs using paramedic personnel are medical programs with hospitals serving as the focal point." As such, Page contends, they should have a high degree of skill-monitoring and medical control.

Skill decay, through too little action, should not be allowed, he emphasized, Skill maintenance, through continuous training and practical experience should be required.

Page, currently director of the ACT Foundation, an organization supported by various pharmaceutical companies to promote quality treatment for acute coronary patients and other emergency medical problems, is a former Los Angeles County Fire Department batallion chief, who supervised the department's rescue operations. He also served as chief of North Carolina's Office of Emergency Medical Services and was a technical advisor and script writer for the television series, "Emergency," as well as an advisor for the California legislature on emergency medical affairs.

Asked to comment on the League report, Assistant Chief For Rescue Tony Brannon said, "I haven't been able to get a copy of the study."

"I've asked to see the study...submitted a letter asking for a copy, and they told me I couldn't see it.

"Last week, since the report was made public by the mayor," Brannon said, "I asked for a copy and all I got was a two-page press release. Since I think it affects me directly, I ought to be able to get a copy."

Brannon noted that late Thursday, he was told he could go to city hall and read the report. He also noted that a rescue officer was able to purchase a copy of the study on Thursday for $17.

Brannon continued, "I think it boils down to how good a rescue squad the people want. Right now, we're giving the basic level of service as emergency medical technicians. We want to go into the EMT-IV program and hope to start training sometime this summer or fall...whenever the medical school (East Carolina University School of Medicine) and the hospital can get things worked out."

The EMT-IV program, he explained, will allow rescue officers, in consultation with physicians and on a doctor's order, to start intra-venous fluids in the field to help stabilize patients before they arrive at the hospital.

Eventually, according to Brannon, "we want to go into the mobile intensive care technician (MICT) program, so rather than simply stabilize a patient and transport him to the hospital, we can begin definitive treatment in the field." This, he added, "takes intensive training, skill...and practical experience."

Even at the basic EMT level, Brannon said, "I don't see how the men can maintain their proficiency and offer a high level of service if they are rotated back and forth between firefighting and rescue duties...if they aren't working rescue full-time."

"Another thing," he added, "I don't see how you can be in two places at one time. From what I can gather...I don't see how a man can be answering a fire call and answering a rescue call at the same time. If they need more firemen and are using the rescue officers to fight fire, how can they answer a rescue call."

If a man has been fighting a fire for 20 or 30 minutes, Brannon asked, "is he capable of giving CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) to a heart attack patient when he leaves the fire?"

Brannon said rescue officers "offered an EMT class to the firemen a year ago," but said no one signed up.

"When the city said we'll give you a five per cent pay raise," according to Brannon, "28 of them enrolled."

Gill Dunn of the Insurance Service Organization in Raleigh — the group that sets fire insurance rates for municipalities in North Carolina, said the city would receive credit for fire-rescue officers if the two services are integrated. However, he emphasized that time spent on rescue duties would be subtracted from the total amount of credit allowed. .. "definciency points charged."

"If fire fighters are involved in rescue operations," Dunn explained, "the amount of time involved in rescue operations... calculated on a percentage type basis...would be subtracted from the on-duty strength. We give credit, but subtract time taken from firefighting duties."

Dunn, who said Greenville has a Class 5 rating, said "the optimum standard...the most desirable manning," is to have six men per fire company (engine). Six men per company, he said, is a Class 1 standard.

According to Dunn, no fire department in the state has six men per company.

Greenville fire officers said that on a normal day, with all firefighters on duty three men, including a driver, an officer and one hoseman, are assigned to a company, although at times as many as five or six are assigned to the first-out pumper.

Pamlico Marijuana Haul

HOBUCKEN, N.C. (AP) — Eighty bales of smuggled marijuana were fished out off waters near here Friday evening and the Pamlico County Sheriff's Department launched an air search early this morning to seek more contraband.

Pamlico Sheriff Leland Brinson said, "a young person who was fishing a crabpot spotted the bales of marijiuana in a marsh at the junction of the Intracoastal Waterway, Goose Creek and Easthham Creek and contacted the sheriff's department.

Brinson said he believed the pot which weighs approximately 1,600 pounds had been in the marsh for some time and said it may be linked to the sinking of the trawler Captain Truman which was found abandoned and afire in Pamlico Sound March 20 with marijuana in its hold and floating nearby.

Brinson notified the Hobucken Coast Guard Station which helped retrieve the marijuana. The bales were in shallow water only an inch or two deep, Brison said and some were "up on a mosquito ditch bank." He added, "they've been there some time."

The bales are being stored in a locked truck parked outside the Pamlico Sheriff's Department., and may be destroyed locally, Brinson said.

'Happenings' Now In Farmville

FARMVILLE — Al Long, former four-star athlete of UNC at Chapel Hill, and his group, The Happenings, will appear at the Farmville Central High School Gym from April 29 to May 2, according to Clyde Dunn, president of the Farmville Ministerial Association.

Dunn said Long is the organizer and chief executive of Albert Long-Happenings, Inc., a group dedicated to sharing the excitement and enthusiasm of the Christian faith.

During those four evenings, today through Wednesday, sponsored by the Farmville Ministerial Association and the Baptist, Christian, Episcopal, Methodist, Pentecostal Holiness, and Presbyterian churches of Farmville, some of outstanding talent will be featured.

Among those to appear, will be: Donna Stephenson, an operatic soprano who has appeared with Billy Graham; Randy Atcheson, a musician who was the first and only student allowed to pursue a double major in piano and organ at New York's famed Julliard School of Music; and Lester Matte, a black belt karate instructor from Durham.

Atcheson will present an organ/piano concert at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Farmville Methodist Church. At the age of six, he began his piano studies in Clanton, Ala.

In 1975, Atcheson, then 23, won first place in Juilliard's organ competition and an appearance with the Juilliard Orchestra at Lincoln Center. The appearance marked the first public performance on the new pipe organ in that Center.

Long, who will be the principal speaker for the Happenings, said, "It is a unique opportunity for Pitt County to be able to welcome a talent such as Randy's."

The Happenings will be interpreted in sign language for the deaf, and a nursery will be provided at Farmville's First Baptist Church each of the four evenings. There is no admission charge, and everyone is invited to attend.

For more information, contact J. Robert Parvin, secretary of the Farmville Ministerial Association, at either 753-3179 or 753-4912.

A Film Of Power And Dignity

Every once in a while all the right elements in making a movie coalesce successfully. This is the case in 20th Century-Fox's "Norma Rae," which opened Friday at Plaza Cinema.

An incisive screenplay by Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank; Martin Ritt's directing that maintains both tension and the Southern tempo of living; the effective use of a mill town locale (Opelika, Alabama); and above all, a sterling cast, make "Norma Rae" worthy of it's ad claim of being "a triumph."

As Norma Rae, a 31-year old cotton mill worker who has done a lot of living and more than her fair share of loving, Sally Field portrays to near perfection the character of this fascinating woman. Norma Rae is strong-willed, tough, yet tender and vulnerable, a woman totally believeable and likeable, both for her strength and her flaws.

Norma Rae is a child of the working class South far removed from Magnolia gentility or decaying aristocracy, a woman whose world — by choice and circumstance, revolves around men, with women playing an important, but peripheral role in her life.

One of the primary rewards of "Norma Rae" is that it achieves that goal rare in any film of any period — the successful unfolding of a blood-and-flesh life story of an individual along with the development of a major social theme.

When a Jewish union organizer, played by Ron Liebman, comes on the scene, the textile mill is a work factory where the last vestiges of the days of industrial barons hold sway.

The workers, entrenched in the ever-present fear of losing their livelihood, are reluctant to welcome an outsider whose aim is to change the status quo through unionization. And understandably, the plant's owners and bosses do not look kindly on the threat of changes.

But changes do come, and Norma Rae is the basic instrument of change. Step by step, she emerges as the person with the courage, determination and intelligence to sway her fellow workers to face the reality of their economic imprisonment, and to lead them to make the effort to break their economic bondage through the only available way open to them, unionizing.

That raw violence is never employed in a theme ripe with potential violence is welcome, and praiseworthy at a time when so many movies seem bent on exploiting the ugliest possibilies of man's behavior. There's only one fist-scuffle, although tensions, anger and frustrations are ever present.

Too often, movies based in the South can turn you off with pseudo-Southern dialects. But when Norma Rae scolds her young son for "messing up his bee-hiney playing in the dirt," we are assured that the screenplay writers know what it's all about.

"Norma Rae" is an understated movie of tremendous impact and dignity, one that refreshingly credits the viewer with having an adult intelligence. Try to see it.

Family Of Glacier Foxes Subject Of Documentary

It's a great shame that makers of documentary films, particularly when dealing with nature, cannot seem to resist the temptation to encompass more than can possibly work in this medium.

"The Glacier Fox," now showing at the Plaza Cinema, is an unfortunate example of good material left in shambles simply because of excesses.

From the viewpoint of photography, the color frames of the stars of the film, an active family of glacier foxes; of wild flowers in sun and rain; of sand dunes and rolling sea; and a lone farmhouse and its adjacent lands — "The Glacier Fox" is a stunning success.

Four years went into the filming of "The Glacier Fox," based on a true story on the study of the fox, a threatened species.

But in feeling compelled to add a second dimension to this beautiful film — that of turning it into a contemporary folk-rock-opera with a full dozen songs, the filmmakers have succeeded only in providing a constant distraction, a loud, insistent annoyance that seldom allows a blessed lapse into state of near silence where the sounds of nature can be heard.

Filmed at Abashiri, on Hokkaido, Japan's large northernmost island by Japanese and American filmmakers, the painstaking patience of capturing the life cycle of a couple of foxes and their five offspring pays off handsomely. The film effectively portrays the near insurmountable odds against the survival of this small, spirited species of wildlife, following the parents and the pups in their daily struggle against the foes of nature and man.

Bird lovers too are treated to some splendid footage of huge cranes performing courtship rituals, of geese coming into the waters of the Sea of Okhotsk from Siberia, of colorful small songbirds flitting among branches and over fields of flowers.

Despite the assault of an irrelevant music score, it is a film not to be missed by anyone who finds pleasure in nature. Children will certainly be enchanted by the antics of the young foxes, and will also gain an insight into the inevitability of death at any moment that is the sad lot of wild creatures in today's world.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH S. FOLTZ

Among the new books at Sheppard Library are the following novels selected for young adults.

IT AIN'T ALL FOR NOTHIN' by Walter Dean Myers. The illness of his grandmother sends twelve-year-old Tippy to stay with his father Lonnie. Not caring what kind of father he is, Lonnie ignores Tippy unless the boy gets in the way or is needed for helping in a robbery. Tippy's secret enjoyment of his part in Lonnie's crimes goes against the teachings of his respected Grandma Carrie. Feeling guilty, Tippy turns to drinking and slips further into the rougher side of life in Harlem.

FATHER FIGURE by Richard Peck. The suicide of Jim Atwater's mother brings his father back into the lives of Jim, 17, and his brother Byron, 8. Jim hopes that his father will disappear after the funeral just as he disappeared eight years earlier when the parents divorced. Grandmother, though, packs the brothers off to summer with their father in Florida. During the visit, Jim's eight years' worth of resentment grows as he competes with his dad for the affections of a woman and for the role of father to Byron.

FIND A STRANGER, SAY GOODBYE by Lois Lowry. When the question on the application form for college asks what one thing makes her special and how that quality will affect her college years, Natalie Armstrong answers first on impulse. Her special quality, she writes, is that she does not know who she is and she will be affected by that fact until she finds the answer. Natalie — intelligent, beautiful, blessed with a loving family — is adopted and haunted by what she does not know of her birth. She sets out, in the summer after high school graduation, to follow the scanty clues which may reveal her natural parents.

ENCOUNTER by Ivy Ruckman. Camping in the Wyoming wilderness, JD and Stephanie Anderson witness the landing of a brilliart UFO. As JD runs toward the UFO to snap a picture of it, he disappears. Stephanie later finds him lying on the ground, dazed and without his camera. Overwhelmed by an experience which he cannot even fully remember, JD comes to feel desperately set apart from his high school friends who tire of the UFO story and turn it into a joke.

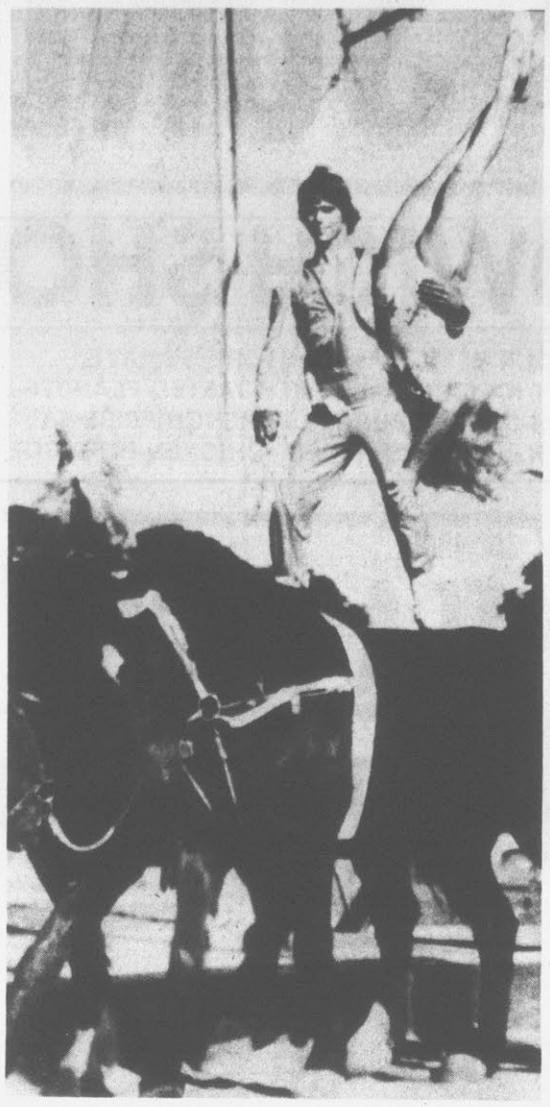
SIGMET ACTIVE by Thomas Page. Scientists working in great secrecy develop a laser powerful enough to puncture the atmosphere's ozone layer. Project Windowpane's weapon will be used to open a temporary hole in the ozone through which pure, deadly solar radiation will pour on a patch of enemy land. The first test of the laser is quickly followed by a mysterious thunderstorm with murderous lightning which begins tracking down each of the Project Windowpane scientists.

THE MAN WITH THE PRESIDENT'S MIND by Ted Allbeury. The Russians want to take over West Berlin, but they also want to know what to expect from the United States government. To that end, the KGB programs a man to think and react just as the new American president will. When the programmed Russian is smuggled into the United States though, plans begin to change.

Hoxie Brothers Circus Coming Here May 7

Hoxie Brothers Circus, America's National Circus, and the world's largest round tent circus, is coming here on Monday, May 7 and will give two performances, an afternoon one at 4:30 p.m. and an evening performance at 8 p.m.

Sponsored by the Winterville Fire Department, Hoxie Circus will be at the new fairgrounds



BAREBACK RIDERS . . . The Timi Loyal-Repensky Bareback Riders are one of the feature attractions of Hoxie Brothers Circus, coming here on Monday, May 7 for performances at 4:30 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. at the new fairgrounds. The circus is sponsored by the Winterville Volunteer Fire Dept.

The performers, technicians and animals will arrive early on Monday, with unloading scheduled between 7 and 8 a.m., and the big top to be pulled into the air by elephants between 9 and 10 a.m.

Hoxie Circus has an unusual collection of elephants— African, Indian, adult, baby, male, female — collectively accounting for a 40-ton herd.

The elephants are trained, presented, and supervised by James Crawford. They will consume 5,700 bales of hay and 150,000 gallons of water during this year's circus tour.

But elephants are only one major attraction of Hoxie Circus. On the circus' roster is human talent from many points of the globe — bareback riders, daredevil aerialists, and other performers who provide traditional big tent fare.

Michael Cecere, at 22 the youngest wild animal trainer in the history of the circus, handles the lions in the circus. Cecere speaks of his animals as "my own portable jungle."

Advance tickets at reduced prices are available from members of the Winterville Volunteer Fire Department (telephone 756-2515). Tickets will be be sold at the tent prior to performance at regular prices.

GOLDSBORO — A new interpretive center at Cliffs of the Neuse State Park near Goldsboro will be dedicated at noon on Monday, April 30.

Howard N. Lee, Secretary of the N. C. Dept. of Natural Resources and Community Development, will officiate.

Highlights of the center focus on geological, natural, and cultural heritages of the region. Sixteen multi-media exhibits show visitors, through sight, sound, and touch, things to discover about the birth of the Neuse River and the formation of the cliffs.

A massive diorama with audio-phones tells the story of dinosaurs and plant life of the Cretaceous Period of 135 to 163 million years ago. Other dioramas show the diversity of habitats, where mountain galax and Spanish moss of the coast meet.

Through a magic mirror visitors can see how fossils were formed, and an Indian log pallisade leads visitors into the time of the Tuscarora Indians. An audio-visual presentation tells something of how the Tuscaroras lived with nature.

Another little known fact is that in the 1890's the mineral waters of the area made the cliffs a health spa mecca for Eastern society.

Cliffs of the Neuse State Park, established in 1945, covers 608 acres and is the second park in the state system to open a visitor interpretive center. Weymouth Woods Sandhills Nature Preserve near Southern Pines has a natural history center.

Popular seasonal features at the park include areas for picnicking, tent/trailer family camping, fishing, and hiking. The park is open daily from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. The park is 13 miles southeast of Goldsboro on N.C. 111 near the community of Seven Springs, a distance of about 55 miles from Greenville.

Students Presented Program

Four students of the School of Music, East Carolina University presented a program of classical and popular music earlier this month for the Sir Walter Cabinet at the North Ridge Country Club in Raleigh.

Vocalists Ann Gunn, Sheila Brooks, and Doug Newell, and accompanist Carol Wolfe appeared in a program that included solos and duets, ranging from songs by Mendelssohn and Brahms to musical comedy songs by Cole Porter.

Dr. Charles Stevens, Assistant Dean of the School of Music, ECU, introduced the students. Among those in attendance from Greenville were Mrs. Betty Brewer and Mrs. Gladys Howell, guests of Mrs. Horton Rountree.

The Sir Walter Cabinet is made up of spouses of state legislators, judges, and government officials.

Barbershop Quartet To Sing

An introduction to the time-honored American art form of four-part harmony will be presented, with guests afforded an opportunity to participate in singing.

Any local men who like to sing and can carry a tune are invited to attend and to try out with the singers. Wives and sweethearts, as well as males who cannot sing, are also invited.

Completes Six Cities Tour

Rodney Schmidt, violinist, and Rosemary Fischer, pianist, both musician faculty members of the School of Music, East Carolina University, have completed a concert tour of six eastern North Carolina cities.

They began their concert series at Atlantic Christian College in Wilson. Other engagements were at Lenoir Community College, Kinston; Meredith College, Raleigh; the Duke University Extension Center, Beaufort ; ECU, Greenville; and the final of the concerts was at the First Baptist Church, Lumberton.

Featured on each of their concerts was Enesco's "Sonata No. 3," and works by Paganini, Mozart, Bach, and Brahms.

Ritt replaces filmmaker Peter Werner, who was originally scheduled as the major speaker, but who had to cancel this engagement.

Ritt's film "Hud," a modern cowboy film, won for its stars, Pual Newman and Patricia Neal, Academy Awards for their roles.

The Film Festival is being held two days, May 4 and 5 and is under the sponsorship of the N. C. Musuem of Art. Activities at the Festival include showing of films submitted for the competition, lectures, and workshops on movie-making in North Carolina.

Atlantic Christian Rallies Past ECU

WILSON — Atlantic Christian College rallied for two unearned runs in the seventh inning and gained a 3-2 victory over East Carolina Saturday night.

The game was the final road contest for the Pirates, who dropped to 22-17 with the defeat. Atlantic Christian, which will wind up its season on Monday in Greenville against the Pirates stands 19-21-1 on the year.

Parker Davis took the loss, his second in seven decisions, and his second in a row. He gave up seven hits, walked two and struck out seven in going the distance.

Tim Ross, also 5-2 now, gave up six hits, including just two in the final six innings, as he struck out five and walked six.

Atlantic Christian struck first, getting a run in the bottom of the first inning. With one out, Mark Watkins singled to left. After a second out, Teddy Brinn tripled to left center, scoring Watkins for a 1-0 lead.

The Pirates came back with two in the third to take the lead. Mike Sorrell reached on an error and Bob Neff walked. Billy Best laid down a bunt between the mound and first, beating it out to load the bases. Butch Davis hit a foul fly to the outfield, with Sorrell tagging up and scoring after the catch. Macon Moye followed with a single to left, scoring Neff, and although Raymie Styons walked to reload the bases, a strikeout ended the inning.

The Pirates got only two hits in the remaining innings and only one man got as far as second base. That came when Styons walked in the sixth and courtesy runner Jay Carraway moved up on a wild pitch.

The Bulldogs threatened in the second on a Tim Bardin single and a Bobby Stratton double with two outs, but a strikeout ended that. In the fifth, a hit batsman, a single and a sacrifice put runners at second and third with an out, but again Davis came through, striking out the next two batters.

But in the seventh, the Bulldogs came up with two unearned runs to move back ahead, 3-2, this time for good.

Frank Carmichael reached on an error and was sacrificed up. After another out, Watkins hit a line drive off Davis' foot. Davis scrambled after the ball, but his throw to first was not only late, but off target. The error allowed Carmichael to score the tieing run and moved Watkins all the way to third. Then, after Mark Hodges drew a walk, Brinn reached on an error, allowing Watkins to score with the go-ahead run.

Moye led the Pirate hitting, getting a pair. Stratton and Watkins each had a pair of hits for Atlantic Christian.

The two teams will meet again Monday night at 7:30 p.m. at Harrington Field in Greenville. The Pirates then have a doubleheader Tuesday night against North Carolina Wesleyan, and close out the season on Saturday and Sunday with single games against the University of South Carolina.

Shot Clock For The ACC? It Worked In Sun Belt

By BILL MILLSAPS
Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch

RICHMOND, Va. — In a couple of weeks, Atlantic Coast Conference poo-bahs will gather in Myrtle Beach, S.C. and decide, among other things, whether a basketball shot clock is good for the future of the league.

Well, Vic Bubas has seen the future, and he says it works.

Bubas, the former basketball coach at Duke, is commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference, which installed a 45-second shot clock for the 1978-79 season. The response among coaches, players and fans of the Sun Belt, according to Bubas, has been socko.

No such positive consensus has arisen since North Carolina Coach Dean Smith proposed three weeks ago the ACC adopt a 30-second clock for conference games next season, and in fact the idea appears doomed to the trash-can when the official vote is taken.

"I think ACC coaches are unanimously in favor of a shot clock as being good for all of college basketball," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland, "but we're not going to go to it when the rest of the country isn't using it."

It is ironic the proposal would come from Smith. First, he had long been openly opposed to a shot clock. Second, such a device would be inimical to the interests of Smith's four-corners delay offense. Third, it was Smith's strategy that resulted in North Carolina playing a scoreless first half against Duke Feb. 24 in Durham.

So what changed Smith's mind?

"I don't want to have our coaches meeting in the newspapers before it takes place," said Smith, "but I feel that a 30-second clock, coupled with a rule against zone defenses, would be good. I was against it before because it works to the great disadvantage of the 'have-nots' in college basketball. In the ACC, everybody is a 'have.' We all have great players."

The problem on occasion is that not all those great players get a chance to really play, because some ACC coaches are so intent on not losing they play prolonged and dull games with the scoreboard clock.

To make coaches play, something is needed in the ACC. Not the 24-second clock, which is one reason the NBA is a yawner. Probably not even a 30-second clock, especially when a no-zone rule is attached.

If the ACC is really serious about eliminating pitty-pat basketball, perhaps it should listen to Bubas and try, as a one-year experiment, the Sun Belt approach.

In the Sun Belt, the 45-second clock operates for all but the last four minutes of a game, plus any overtime. The plug is pulled in the last four minutes because there is no shot clock in the NCAA tournament, and "that makes it advisable for a team to know how to use a pressing defense against a team that's holding the ball," said Bubas.

"In addition, it enables a team to protect its lead, if it can, by holding the ball. And the team that is behind with just four minutes to go will almost automatically be in a pressing, action-packed defense for the remainder of the game, thereby ensuring action."

Perez Provides Spark As Expos Defeat San Francisco By 6-4

MONTREAL (AP) — Tony Perez drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a single to pace the Montreal Expos to a 6-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday.

The third-inning homer by Perez, his third of the season, came on the first pitch from Giants starter Ed Halicki, 1-2, snapping a 1-1 tie and providing a cushion for Scott Sanderson.

Sanderson began the third-inning rally when he led off with a single and Andre Dawson followed an infield single. After a pair of fielders' choices, Perez smashed a homer over the left-field fence.

Perez had given the Expos their first run with an RBI single in the first and they scored their game-winner in the sixth on Gary Carter's RBI double.

Jack Clark provided most of the offense for the Giants, punching a homer in the fourth and scoring each time after doubling in the sixth and eighth innings.

Detroit Tigers Slip By Twins

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Steve Kemp and Jason Thompson, returning to the Detroit lineup following injury, each knocked in a run and right-hander Kip Young notched his first victory of the season as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-3 Saturday.

The Tigers unleashed a 10-hit attack against four Minnesota pitchers as starter Dave Goltz suffered the loss, his third in five decisions.

The Twins took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first inning on Butch Wynegar's home run. The Tigers tied the game on Kemp's RBI single In the first and went ahead 2-1 in the fourth on Lynn Jones's run-scoring base hit.

Craig Kusick pulled the Twins even in the fifth with his first homer of the season. But the Tigers went ahead for good in the same frame with two runs, one coming on a Goltz wild pitch after Ron LeFlore had led off with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice and took third on a fly ball. Lance Parrish brought home the second run with a double after Kemp had drawn a walk and was replaced by runner Jim Corcoran.

The final Tiger run came in the seventh when Ron LeFlore led off with a walk off reliever Pete Redfern, was sacrificed by Whitaker and came home on Thompson's long single to center.

John Hiller, recording his second save, took over for Young with one out in the sixth and held the Twins to two hits the rest of the way.

Steve Yeager Leads Dodgers Past Mets

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Yeager slammed a two-run homer and Burt Hooton tossed a four-hitter to power Los Angeles past the New York Mets 3-1 Saturday and end a three-game Dodger losing streak.

With one out in the fifth, New York left-hander Pete Falcone, 0-1, walked Derrel Thomas. Yeager then lofted a 3-2 delivery into the screen about halfway up the foul pole in left field for his third homer of the season.

The Dodgers scored their third run in the sixth. Reggie Smith walked and, running with the pitch, took second on Steve Garvey's groundout. Falcone wild-pitched him to third and Smith scored on a double to right center by Dusty Baker.

The only New York run came on Joel Youngblood's leadoff homer in the fifth, his third of the season.

Hooton got out of a third-inning jam. John Stearns led off with a single, and Doug Flynn doubled down the right field line, sending Stearns to third. But Falcone and Frank Taveras grounded out weakly, and Bruce Boisclair flied deep to Thomas in center field.

Boisclair came into play in the second inning after. New York's starting third baseman Richie Hebner experienced mild dizzy spells while striking out in the first inning.

The Dodgers tried to assert themselves early, getting two men on with one out in the second. Ron Cey singled sharply past the glove of third baseman Youngblood, who had swapped his right field spot with Boisclair. Dusty Baker followed with another single, but Falcone escaped unharmed and Thomas grounded into a double play back to the pitcher.

After going down in order in the third, the Dodgers again threatened. Falcone, who was wild low much of the day, walked Smith with one out in the fourth, but Garvey and Cey grounded into consecutive forceouts to end the inning.

Youngblood's homer was his third in four games for the Mets.

Again in the eighth, wildness got Falcone into trouble. With one out, he walked the defensive replacement Gary Thomasson. After Garvey flied out, Falcone threw two wild pitches, advancing Thommasson to third, and walking Cey in the process. That brought on Mets right-hander Dale Murray, who got Baker to fly out, ending the inning.

Curtis Strange Pulls Into Lead At New Orleans; Gilder Has 62

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Lee Trevino considered his position, one shot back of surprise leader Curtis Strange after three rounds of the $250,000 New Orleans Open Golf Tournament. Very carefully, he said all the right things.

"I'll be playing the golf course tomorrow," he said, looking ahead to the final 18 holes in the chase for a $45,000 first prize.

"You don't play your opponent except when it's match play," Trevino said. "Then it's like a boxing match, one on one."

He noted, however, that he'll be paired in the final round with Strange, the 24-year-old former amateur champion who is seeking his first professional title. And Trevino noted that might be something of an advantage, "since I can keep an eye on what he's doing."

It could be more than a slight advantage. Strange hasn't been in this position often. Trevino has been there many times before, and has proved himself a master of the situation.

For example, he won the 1971 British Open in a last-round, head-to-head confrontation with Lu Liang-Huan of China. He won the 1972 British Open in a last-round, head-to-head confrontation with Tony Jacklin of England. And he won the 1972 U.S. Open title in an 18-hole playoff with Jack Nicklaus.

"I've played three good rounds. There's no reason I can't play one more," said Strange, who slipped past Trevino into the lead with a solid, 5-under-par 67.

"I'm just not wasting any shots, not making any mistakes," said Strange, who put together a 54-hole total of 203, 13 strokes under par on the 7,040-yard Lakewood Country Club course.

Strange, who joined the pro tour in 1977 and has yet to win, didn't make a bogey in his jaunt through bright, warm sunshine and took the lead with a pair of key birdies on putts of 20-25 feet on the 15th and 16th holes.

Trevino, the second-round leader by a shot, had a 69 and dropped back to a tie for second with Frank Conner at 204. Conner, who played open tennis before turning to golf, shot a 68. Trevino has not yet made a bogey in the tournament.

The group at 206 included Bob Gilder, Doug Tewell, Cal Peete, Australian Bob Shearer and Steve Melnyk. Tewell had a 68, Peete and Shearer 69, Melnyk 70.

Gilder made up the most ground with a 10-under-par 62, the course record by two shots. Gilder twice holed it from off the green, the more spectacular a 136-yard nine-iron shot for an eagle two on the 16th hole.

The best score on the tour this season was a 61 — also 10 under par — by Ben Crenshaw in the Phoenix Open.

"It was just one of those days when everything fell into place," said Gilder, who had some erratic moments off the tee but more than made up for it with a spectacular short game. "I birdied the first hole and was off and running."

He birdied that hole off an eight-iron shot from the rough and a 10-foot birdie putt. He came out of a greenside bunker to six feet and made it for birdie-four on the next hole, missed the fairway but birdied the third with a wedge to six feet, saved par after missing the green on the fourth, chipped in from 35 feet on the fifth and dropped a tough, four-foot, downhill birdie putt on the sixth.

Gilder missed two greens in that stretch of six holes, birdied five of them and used only five putts. It was typical of his play all day.

In all, nine players were locked within three strokes of each other going into Sunday's final round, with Strange holding the advantage on the strength of a good save on the 12th, the only green he missed.

"In every good round there's something that keeps it going," he said. "The 12th was what kept it going for me today."

He had birdied the 11th before chipping to about 6-8 feet, and was closing in on the lead. But he drove into a fairway bunker on the 12th, missed the green with his approach, chipped to 12 feet and made that putt to keep it going.

Brewers Nip Blue Jays, 11-8

TORONTO (AP) — Cecil Cooper's one-out single in the 10th inning scored Gorman Thomas from second with the winning run and Paul Molitor delivered two more with a triple as the Milwaukee Brewers outscored the Toronto Blue Jays 11-8 Saturday.

Thomas opened the inning with a walk off Mike Willis, 0-1, and was sacrificed to second by Sal Bando. Larry Hisle drew an intentional walk and Cooper followed with his run-scoring single.

Sixto Lezcano then forced Cooper at second but Molitor followed with his triple over the head of center fielder Rick Bosetti to cap the rally.

Winner Bob McClure, 3-0, the last of four Milwaukee pitchers, blanked the Blue Jays over the final 12-3 innings.

After the Blue Jays had taken an 8-5 lead with three runs in the eighth, the Brewers struck for three in the ninth to tie it.

A single and a pair of walks loaded the bases and Molitor forced in the first run with a bases-loaded walk off Dave Freisleben. Charlie Moore greeted Jesse Jefferson with a single and pinch-hitter Ben Oglivie's single to deliver the third run of the inning.

The Blue Jays, who had built a 4-0 lead after two innings with the help of a two-run homer by Rico Carty in the first, scored their three runs in the eighth on run-scoring singles by Dave McKay, Rick Cerone and Bosetti.

St. Louis Romps Over Cincinnati By 12-1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Vuckovich handcuffed Cincinnati with a three-hitter through seven innings while his St. Louis Cardinal teammates slammed 17 hits to beat the Reds 12-1 Saturday.

Lou Brock scored a pair of runs, drove in two and had two singles and Mike Tyson spiced the Cardinal barrage with a solo home run.

Vuckovich, 2-0, pitched five innings of no-hit ball until Ken Griffey led off the Cincinnati sixth with a single. Johnny Bench and Cesar Geronimo added singles for the Reds in the seventh.

Cincinnati starter Tom Hume, 2-3, gave up the Cardinals' first runs in the first inning on a two-run single by George Hendrick.

Tyson jumped on Hume's first pitch of the second inning for a homer over the 375-foot sign in left field. Vuckovich singled and Garry Templeton reached base on an error and reliever Doug Capilla took over for the Reds. Brock hit Capilla's first pitch into right field to drive in two runs and the Cardinals scored twice more that inning to continue the rout.

St. Louis added three more runs in the fifth inning with the help of doubles by Keith Hernandez and Ted Simmons.

North Pitt Nips Vikings By 3-2

BETHEL — North Pitt pushed over a run in the bottom of the ninth inning and gained a 3-2 triumph over D.H. Conley in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game yesterday.

Conley scored first, getting two runs in the second inning. Curtis Spencer led off with a single and Mike Edens cracked a two-run homer.

North Pitt came back with one in the third. Carl Knight singled and stole second. He scored on Ronnie House's hit.

The fourth saw the Panthers tie it up. Victor Evans reached on a three-base error and was sacrificed in by Bob Hemingway.

The game continued knotted at 2-2 until the ninth. North Pitt's Robert Bunn then singled and moved up on a hit by Knight. Jeff Hines followed with another single, scoring Bunn with the game-winning run.

Conley is now 9-7 and travels to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday, while North Pitt is 7-8 and plays host to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

NFL Draft Scheduled Thursday; Bills First

NEW YORK (AP) — At about 10 a.m., EST, next Thursday in a ballroom in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, Pete Rozelle will call upon Buffalo to make a selection, someone from the Bills will scratch a name on an index card — and another instant millionaire will be born ...

...unless the Bills trade away their first-round choice in the National Football League's annual draft of college players.

It would not be that unusual. Tampa Bay did it last year — and when Rozelle, commissioner of the league, called the meeting to order, the Houston Oilers wound up with Earl Campbell.

The Bills got this year's pick the same way — in a trade with San Francisco, the one that sent O.J. Simpson to the 49ers before the start of the 1978 season.

This year's crop of millionaires will undoubtedly include Charles Alexander, a running back from Louisiana State; Tom Cousineau, a linebacker from Ohio State; Russell Erxleben, a punter-placekicker from Texas; Jack Thompson, a quarterback from Washington State, and Mike Bell, a defensive end from Colorado State. They are among the so-called blue-chippers, the cream of the crop, players almost certain to be chosen before the first round comes to an end.

In the first two rounds, each of the 28 teams will have 15 minutes to decide upon each selection. For the remaining 10 rounds (four or five of which will be conducted on Friday) each team will have five minutes to make up its mind.

The New York Jets have the most thinking to do. They have the most picks coming, 17 of them as a result of previous trades. Miami is next with 16, followed by Buffalo, Dallas and the Super Bowl-champion Pittsburgh Steelers with 15 apiece.

At the other end of the spectrum is Washington, still paying for George Allen's "the future is now" philosophy. Allen, former coach of the Redskins, dealt away draft choices by the bushel in exchange for veterans. This year the Skins have just five picks in the 12 rounds.

Gross Sparks A's In Rally

OAKLAND Calif. (AP) — Wayne Gross' two-run triple sparked a five-run rally in the sixth inning as the Oakland A's defeated Baltimore 8-5 Saturday and stopped the Orioles' nine-game winning streak.

Oakland's sixth-inning splurge knocked out Baltimore's Scott McGregor, 0-1. Three straight walks forced in another run, then Mario Guerrero lashed e two-run single for an 8-4 Oakland lead.

The A's, despite being outhit 16-6, also broke a 13-game losing streak against the Orioles and an 11-game string 9f victories by Baltimore at the Oakland Coliseum.

Jeff Newman's three-run homer, his first home run of the season, put the A's ahead 3-1 in the second inning. Oakland starter Mike Norris couldn't hold the margin, giving up 12 hits in 51-3 innings.

Shot Clock...

There was plenty of action in the Sun Belt last season. Bubas had detailed statistical studies made of 32 conference games in both the regular season and tournament. In those games, 3,407 shots were taken, and 83 percent were taken before 20 seconds had expired. Ninety-six percent were taken before 30 seconds had expired. There were only five shot-clock violations.

If 96 percent of the shots were taken inside 30 seconds, why the 45-second clock?

"I think 30 seconds makes for a game that is too much like the pros," said Bubas, "and still dictates a racehorse game. Forty-five seconds allows for some cat-and-mouse play, deliberate basketball, if that's the way you want to play. In my opinion, 30 seconds does not."

The great majority of college coaches, according to the latest vote, object to any shot clock. In part, they fear zone defenses would soon dominate the offense.

"A zone is a problem only if you can't shoot from outside," said Bubas, "or don't want to."

Some coaches like the option of a stall when one or two key players are in foul trouble. "Why penalize 15,000 fans and a TV audience because a player has too many fouls?" asked Bubas. "Part of a player's training is to learn how to play without fouling."

Bubas sees college basketball as "out of step" with the game being played by the pros, by women and by international teams, all of which have shot clocks. Also, he thinks college basketball suffers in contrast to other major American spectator sports.

"In football," he said, "a team gets four downs to move the ball 10 yards and so many seconds between downs. In baseball, it's three outs per inning and a controlled number of seconds between pitches. In hockey, it's hazardous to freeze the puck for a long time, particularly in your own area."

While most writers oppose a shot clock ("the freeze is controversial copy and it's good copy for a week," said Bubas), most players like the idea. And most fans would, too, if they could see it was in their entertainment interest.

ECU, Methodist Swap Shutout Wins

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Things continued rough for hard-luck Pirate pitcher Mickey Britt Friday night, but Bobby Patterson came up with a one-hit gem that helped right things a little for East Carolina.

The Pirates and the Methodist College Monarchs swapped shutout victories at Harrington Field. Methodist took the first game with a 3-0 shutout of the Pirates, while the Bucs came back on Patterson's effort to gain a 4-0 triumph in the afterpiece.

Mickey Britt, who came into this year's campaign with a sparkling 19-4 record, saw his mark drop to 4-7 with the loss that again saw him tagged for unearned runs. Two of those runs came in the first inning, helped along by a three-base throwing error and a passed ball.

Britt gave up only four hits, but was taken out after five and a third innings.

Oddly enough, East Carolina got only two hits off Methodist pitcher David Flowers, who shut the door on the Bucs. He walked two and struck out seven in the seven-inning game. The oddity of it all was that last year, the Pirates shelled Flowers on the way to a 23-1 victory.

The Pirates did bounce back in the second game, as Patterson hurled a top-flight game against the Monarchs. He allowed only one hit, a fourth inning double, along with walking one and striking out six. Patterson raised his record to 5-2 with the victory.

Britt, who has seen unearned runs score in the first inning in nearly all of his losses, watched a replay again in the first frame last night. Art Finley opened with a single and was sacrificed to second. Steve Neal grounded back to Jerry Carraway at third. He faked Finley back to second, but then threw over the head of Mike Sage at first, and before the ball could be chased down, Finley had scored and Neal had pulled in at third.

A passed ball by Raymie Styons then allowed Neal to score for a 2-0 lead.

The Pirates had several chances to score. They left a runner at third in the fourth inning, and had one thrown out at the plate on an attempted double steal in the fifth. Another runner died at second in the sixth.

Things got better for the Pirates in the second game. They scored their first run of the night in the second inning. Moye led off with a single to center and Max Raynor singled to right, moving Moye to third. Carraway then laid down a perfect bunt on the safety squeeze, scoring Moye for a 1-0 lead.

East Carolina added two more in the fourth after missing a chance with a runner on second in the third. Moye opened with another hit and Raynor picked up another. Rick Derechailo doubled to left center, scoring Moye. Jerry Carraway flew to center, but Raynor, trying to score on the play, was thrown out at the plate.

The other run came in the fifth inning on a solo home run by Butch Davis, his sixth of the year.

Moye and Raynor each had two hits for the Pirates in the second game.

Methodist did offer a couple of threats in the game, putting a runner on third via a walk, stolen base and a ground-out in the second, and having another reach second in the fifth only to be thrown out trying to steal thiird. In the sixth, an error put a runner at second, but he died there.

The lone hit came in the fourth when Chester doubled to left center with two outs, but was thrown out when he tried to stretch it into a triple.

Nino Espinosa's Luck Holds As He Hands Perry His First Loss

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Nino Espinosa recalled his checkered pitching career and thought to himself briefly in the ninth inning: Oh no, it's happening again.

Espinosa, traded from the New York Mets to Philadelphia just before the season, was leading 2-0 and took a two-hitter into the eighth inning against the San Diego Padres.

He yielded hits in the eighth and ninth innings, winding up with a four-hitter, but there was a point at which he could see it slipping away from him.

"I wanted to go all the way so bad," the Phils right-hander said. "My first win in New York I was ahead 6-0 in the eighth. They got three runs, and I left with two on." The Phils wound up winning that one 6-3 on April 15.

"The last time out, I was throwing a two-hitter into the eighth, then they (again the Mets) got a hit and a walk, and I was out of the game again," Espinosa said. The Phils won that one 3-0 at home last April 21.

On Friday night, the script changed, however. Espinosa pitched his first complete game of the year for his third victory. He struck out six and walked two in a 2-0 victory over the Padres.

The Phils got their first run when San Diego's Cy Young winner, Gaylord Perry, 2-1, hit Garry Maddox with the bases loaded in the first inning. "I hit him with a forkball. That was a bad mistake on my part," Perry said.

Larry Bowa smacked an RBI single for Philadelphia in the second.

In the other National League games, Montreal clubbed San Francisco 14-8, Houston outlasted Pittsburgh 9-8 in 11 innings, Atlanta edged Chicago 3-2 and Cincinnati got by St. Louis 4-3. Los Angeles at New York was rained out.

Expos 14, Giants 8

Andre Dawson and Gary Carter each slammed two home runs as Montreal pounded the beleaguered Giants' pitching staff for 17 hits and extended San Francisco's losing streak to five games.

The Expos started early, sending nine men to the plate in the first inning and scoring three runs on five singles off Giants starter Bob Knepper, 1-2.

Carter's second homer, a two-run shot, came in the Expos' five-run sixth inning and made a winner of left-hander Bill Lee, 2-0.

Astros 9, Pirates 8

Light-hitting Art Howe smacked a two-run double, a solo home run and an RBI single in the 11th inning to boost Houston over the Pirates, who have lost seven of their past nine games.

Houston led 6-0 in the early innings before the Pirates chipped away and finally pulled even in the bottom of the ninth on consecutive home runs by Dave Parker and Willie Stargell.

Braves 3, Cubs 2

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro recorded his 199th career victory when Jeff Burroughs' checked-swing double scored Pepe Frias with the go-ahead run in the bottom of the eighth.

Niekro limited Chicago to five hits, the only damage being done by Dave Kingman's two-run homer in the first inning. It was Kingman's seventh of the year.

Reds 4, Cards 3

St. Louis reliever Mark Littell's wild pitch allowed George Foster to score in the bottom of the ninth with the winning run for Cincinnati.

Trailing 3-2, Joe Morgan doubled to lead off the ninth and scored on a single by Foster, who took second on a throwing error. Foster got to third on Johnny Bench's sacrifice bunt, then scored when Littell threw into the dirt past catcher Ted Simmons.

Bonnett Looking For Win In New Chariot

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Neil Bonnett, who will make his first superspeedway appearance driving the Wood brothers' Mercury in the May 6 Winston 500 Grand National stock car race, hopes to practice his Victory Circle routine after the Talladega 300 Grand American race the day before.

"I've never been in Victory Circle at Talladega before," said Bonnett, who made his Grand National racing debut at Talladega in 1974. "But I hope to find out how to get there the day before the 500 in the 300-miler.

"I've got a super Camaro for the Grand American race, and I wouldn't be a bit suprised to see us run 200 mph in that car. I'll guarantee you it will be a dandy."

Bonnett, Bobby Allison, Donnie Allison, Red Farmer, Johnny Anderson, Morgan Shepherd and other short track veterans are among the entries for the $75,000 race that traditionally serves as a Saturday preliminary to the $275,000 500-miler.

Bonnett, who recently replaced three-time Winston 500 winner David Pearson in the Wood brothers' Grand National car, said he'd like to change two things from the last time he drove the Camaro owned by flamboyant millionaire Pee Wee Griffin.

"I drove the car in the Grand American race at Daytona in February," Bonnett recalled, "and gave myself a thrill a second. The brake pedal fell off about halfway and I drove the rest of the way with no brakes.

"If you don't think you can thrill yourself at 195 mph with no brakes — well, you just don't know what a thrill is.

"I finished second in that race with no brakes. I hope to change two things this time. First off, I don't want to have to go 300 miles without brakes, and second, I don't want to finish second."

More than 100 stock cars will begin arriving at the World's fastest speedway Tuesday when practice begins for the Talladega 300. Grand National practice opens Wednesday.

Pole position qualifying for the 300 is Wednesday. Winston 500 qualifying for the pole position starts Thursday at 2 p.m.

Cale Yarborough is the defending pole position and Winston 500 champion, but the three-time national champ has been winless on superspeedways so far this season. Yarborough won the Richmond 400 earlier this year.

Richard Petty, Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison have won two races each. Other Grand National winners among the Winston 500 entries are rookie sensation Dale Earnhardt and two-time Winston 500 winner Buddy Baker.

Bird's Attorney Hits At Boston's Auerbach

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Red Auerbach has been acting like a dictator, not a negotiator, during contract talks involving All-America Larry Bird and the Boston Celtics, attorney Bob Woolf claimed Friday.

Woolf, who is representing the 6-foot-9 senior who led Indiana State to a second-place finish in this year's NCAA basketball tournament, made the comment in a press conference he held concerning the stalemated negotiations.

The Celtics, of the National Basketball Association, had announced earlier this week they were breaking off negotiations for Bird, their No.1 draft pick after his junior season last year.

"Dealing with Red Auerbach is a very difficult situation," said Woolf. "He treats everybody like he used to treat the referees. He taunts you, he baits you, he tries to intimidate you. He never lets up...He's more of a dictator than a negotiator and I don't think Larry deserves this kind of treatment."

Woolf was in Terre Haute to attend activities conducted as part of "Larry Bird Day" and to discuss the contract situation with his client. At night, Bird was honored at a $50 a plate banquet. Money raised from the banquet is to be used to create a scholarship in his name.

Woolf said he was willing to resume negotiations, but feels the next move is up to Boston.

Woolf read a statement concerning the negotiations. He said he and Bird agreed on its contents.

The statement claimed that the Celtics had made only one contract offer.

"If the Celtics wish to remain with their first and only offer, then as much as we would like to be with Boston, we will choose to go elsewhere or enter the 1979 draft in June," the statement said.

Earlier, Bird spoke at a news conference after the mayor issued a proclamation honoring him. He supported Woolf's role in the negotiations.

"He's done a great job, negotiating and keeping his word," said Bird. He said any decision concerning a contract was up to Woolf.

Both Bird and Woolf said they had hoped to reach a settlement with Boston.

"They broke off the negotiations," said Woolf. "I've negotiated some 1,800 contracts in my career and I've never had anyone do that before...Maybe it's an effort to put us on the defensive."

There have been reports that Bird is seeking a six-year contract worth $6 million. Boston reportedly was offering $3 million over six years. However, Woolf refused to give any figures.

In the statement, Woolf said: "Larry Bird is a very private person and he considers his contract negotiations to be a private matter. He further considers the Celtics' public announcements of real or fictitious figures to be an invasion of his privacy."

The statement asked the Celtics to stop making public announcements of contract demands or offers if talks resume.

The Celtics retain Bird's rights until the NBA draft June 25. Until then, they can sell or trade the rights. If Bird is unsigned when the draft is held, he can be selected by another team. Los Angeles has the first pick and Chicago the second.

Trio Seen AsFavorites

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Women basketball players from 12 nations open the 8th World Championships Sunday with the United States, Japan and South Korea rated as favorites.

South Korea has recently dedicated a $10.8 million modern gymnasium in a newly developing residential area in southern Seoul. It can accommodate about 20,000 fans.

The 12-woman American team, coached by Patricia Head, includes Carol Blazejowski, Collegiate Player of the Year in 1978, and Nancy Lieberman, and Ann Meyers, who played on the 1976 Olympic team that earned a silver medal. Lieberman also was selected as Collegiate Player of the Year in 1979.

Arriving Friday for the championships, Lea Plarski, manager of the American team, said that the U.S. women were hopeful of winning the title. But she predicted that Japan and South Korea would make the competition very keen.

Hunt Rally Gives Rose Third Defeat

Belly Landing

Rose High School's baseball team, already beginning to look like the returning veterans of a beachhead invasion force, weak from injuries, suffered its second straight Division I loss Friday night, bowing to Wilson Hunt, 7-6.

The Rampants, already reeling from the loss of two varsity starters, may have lost another in the game. Catcher Skip Topping suffered a knee injury during the contest, and Coach Ronald Vincent said there was a possibility that it might keep him out of the lineup for the rest of the season.

The Rampants have already sent Ronnie Chapman (broken ankle) and Will Sanderson (ruptured liver) to the sidelines for the remainder of the season. In addition, reserve Chris Ross suffered an arm injury in a "B" team game and will be out for the rest of the year.

"Things are getting critical for us," Vincent said. "I just can't believe how things have piled up like this."

The injuries have played a big role in taking the Rampants and turning them from a title contender to a team struggling to have a shot at one of the two playoff berths instead.

Hunt, after a threat in the first inning, went meekly down in order until the fourth when two unearned runs came across. K. Wright walked with two away, and R. Parrish reached on a three-base error, scoring Wright. R. Deans then singled in Parrish for a 2-0 lead.

The Bruins increased that lead to 4-0 with two more in the top of the fifth, also both unearned. L. Deans reached on an error and moved to third on wild pitches. With two away, A. Boyette walked and Mi Wells singled, scoring Deans. Wright reached on an error, loading the bases and a walk to Parrish brought in Boyette.

The Rampants, who had seen chances in the first two innings die in double plays, finally broke the ice with four runs, tieing the score, in the bottom of the fifth.

Mike Campbell reached on a one-out error and Joey Mattheis walked. With two away, Mark Douglas walked, loading the bases. Mark Shank slapped a two-run single, and Junior Neal followed with another two-run shot, tieing the score.

Rose then took the lead with two in the sixth, making it 6-4. Mattheis singled and Emmett Walsh got a walk with Mitchell Brann running for him. Douglas reached on a fielder's choice and Shank again delivered a two-run single, scoring Mattheis and Brann.

But Hunt managed a rally after one out in the seventh inning. M. Wells walked and Wright did too. Parrish singled in a run to pull within one, and a hit by R. Deans brought in Wright to tie it up. M. Lewis reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Parrish with what proved to be the winning run.

Rose came back to put two on in the bottom of the seventh but got the tieing run no further than second.

The loss dropped the Rampants to 12-3 on the year and 5-3 in Division I. Hunt climbed to 12-5 overall and 6-2 in the conference.

Jaguars Hand 1st Loss To Greene Central, 5-4

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central handed Greene Central High School its first Eastern Carolina Conference defeat of the season Friday, taking a 5-4 win in the contest.

Farmville scored first, getting a run in the bottom of the first. Greg Hardison walked and was sacrificed to second. After Philip Gordon was intentionally walked, unintentional walks to Lewis Yelverton and Tony Eason forced in Hardison for a 1-0 lead.

Greene Central came back with one in the second to tie it. Jeff Scott singled and Cohen Cox reached when his sacrifice was errored. Robin Bowen singled, loading the bases and Greg Holmes sacrifice fly scored Scott.

But Farmville came right back to score two in the bottom of the inning and take a 3-1 lead. Alan Corbett singled and Hardison walked. Alam Moore singled in Corbett and Gordon reached on an error, scoring Hardison.

In the fourth, Farmville added another run. Billy McLawhorn singled and stole second. Hardison singled and also stole second. Moore reached on a fielder's choice, scoring McLawhorn.

In the sixth, the Rams got another run. Cox singled and moved up on an out and a hit by Jerry goff. Holmes then singled in Cox.

Greene Central came back to tie it up at 4-4 with two in the top of the seventh. Donald Shaw reached on an error and Scott tied it up with a two-run homer.

But the Jaguars came back to score one in the bottom of the seventh and win it. Eason reached on a two-base error and Ted Johnson doubled down the line, scoring Eason with the winning run.

The loss dropped Greene Central to 10-6 overall while Farmville Central climbed to 10-6 also.

The Rams play Southern Nash on Tuesday, while Farmville will travel to Southwest Edgecombe.

Koosman Records 3rd Victory For Twins

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Last year wasn't Jerry Koosman's best season. This year just might be.

"I'm throwing the same now as I always have," the unbeaten Minnesota Twins' left-hander said Friday night after winning his fourth game this year, a 5-3 decision over the Detroit Tigers. "It's just that these guys are giving me excellent support. Anyone could win with the kind of support they have given me."

Which is what Koosman didn't get last year while pitching for the New York Mets, a 3-15 season he'd like to forget. Seemingly washed up, Koosman was sent by New York to Minnesota in an offseason deal.

In the other American League games Friday night, the Seattle Mariners defeated the New York Yankees 6-5; the Baltimore Orioles trimmed the Oakland A's 7-1; the California Angels turned back the Boston Red Sox 8-6; the Kansas City Royals buried the Cleveland Indians 15-7; the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and the Chicago White Sox blasted the Texas Rangers 11-0.

Koosman allowed seven hits and struck out eight before needing relief help from Mike Marshall in the ninth inning, when John Wockenfuss slammed a leadoff homer.

The Twins jumped on Dave Rozema for four runs in the second inning for all the runs they needed on five singles and a sacrifice fly. Willie Norwood, Rivera and Mike Cubbage each singled in a run after Glenn Adams and Rob Wilfong had singled. Roy Smalley added the sacrifice fly.

Mariners 6, Yankees 5

Pinch-hit home runs by Bob Stinson and Dan Meyer in the eighth inning capped a three-run Seattle rally and led the Mariners past New York. Meyer delivered off Dick Tidrow after Willie Horton and Stinson also hit solo homers in the eighth.

The rally made a winner out of Mike Parrott, who took over for Seattle starter Rick Honeycutt in the second inning after the Yankees scored all five of their runs. The victory snapped an 11-game losing streak for the Mariners.

Orioles 7, A's 1

Baltimore defeated Oakland as Mike Flanagan pitched a three-hitter and Ken Singleton, Lee May and Gary Roenicke hit solo home runs. Flanagan completed his first game in five starts and helped the Orioles to their ninth straight victory.

The triumph was Baltimore's 20th victory in 21 games against Oakland, including the last 13 in a row.

Angels 8, Red Sox 6

Dan Ford smashed three singles and scored twice as California ended a four-game losing streak by beating Boston with the help of four Red Sox errors.

Royals 15, Indians 7

Al Cowens clubbed four hits and Frank White smashed three, including a home run, as Kansas City blasted Cleveland. The Royals, winning their fifth straight game, pounded starter Wayne Garland for four runs in the first inning and added five in the second.

Brewers 8, Blue Jays 5

Gorman Thomas' three-run homer capped a four-run Milwaukee second inning, triggering the Brewers over Toronto.

White Sox 11, Rangers 0

Chet Lemon drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a double and Claudell Washington also drove in three runs and scored three to lead Chicago over Texas.

The triumph snapped a four-game losing streak as Ross Baumgarten scattered six hits to register Chicago's first shutout of the season. Doyle Alexander took the loss.

Firebirds Top Pitt

STANHOPE — Southern Nash High School gained a 6-3 baseball victory over North Pitt on Friday.

Southern Nash got things started in the second inning, gaining an early lead on a home run by R. Wilder.

North Pitt came back in the third to push over three runs and take a 3-1 lead. Jeff Hines walked and Ronnie House singled. Tim Corey singled in Hines and a passed ball scored House. Corey then scored on an error.

But in the fourth, Southern Nash added two runs to tie it up. Brown walked and Strickland singled. Dunn reached on an error, scoring both runners.

The winning run came in the fifth. Grady singled and stole second. He scored when Oberlin reached on an error.

In the sixth, the Firebirds added two more. Brown was hit by a pitch and stole up. He scored when Joyner reached on an error. Griffin then doubled to score Joyner.

North Pitt fell to 6-8 with the loss and was to face Conley on Saturday. They play host to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

Roger Williams hurled a two-hitter in the shutout win and also had two hits for Aycock. Billy Brannigan also added two hits.

Brewers Nearly Called It Off

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Brewers, one of major league baseball's most economically viable franchises despite its low television market, considered folding just seven years ago, club President Bud Selig said Friday night.

"We took a marketing survey that year after we had drawn 600,000 people, the fewest in the major leagues, and found that only 25 percent of the fans could name even one of our players," he said.

"That tells, I think, everything about the magnitude of our problem. It seemed like everything in the deck was stacked against us. We gave at least fleeting consideration to packing it in."

Selig made his remarks to the annual meeting of the Wisconsin Associated Press Sports Editors. He had sought help from the same group in a previous appearance in establishing an identity for the team's floundering expansion franchise.

The Brewers' president, whose quest for another major league baseball team for Milwaukee began after it had become known in 1964 that the city's National League Braves planned to leave for Atlanta, said he had been close to total discouragement in the early years of the American League franchise.

Kansas City Rules The Boards, But It's Not Enough To Win It

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Friday night was the first time Kansas City had dominated Phoenix on the offensive boards in their NBA Western Conference semifinal series.

However, the Kings couldn't come up with the offense to match it, and succumbed to the Phoenix Suns' excellent passing and finely tuned running game 120-99. The victory, paced by guard Paul Westphal's 32 points, allowed the Suns to capture the best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series, 4-1.

Phoenix will meet Western Conference defending champion SuperSonics in Seattle Tuesday as they open their best-of-seven series for the conference crown.

"I thought it was an excellent first half for us," said John MacLeod, whose Suns took a 70-46 halftime lead. "Kansas City did not shoot the ball well, and we played well, except for the offensive boards.

"I think this is really the first time that Kansas City had dominated the boards."

"I thought we came to play but we just couldn't get the shots to fall," said Kings center Sam Lacey, who wound up with a team-high 10 rebounds. "We got 29 offensive rebounds, but we just didn't capitalize on it. The effort was there but again we just played poorly offensively."

The second period proved to lead to the Kings' demise as they were able to hit only 18 percent of their shots from the field, connecting on five of 28 attempts.

The Suns outscored the Kings 40-25 in that period, with Westphal picking up half of his 24 first-half points. In that 12-minute stretch, Westphal was 4-for-4 from the field and 4-for-4 at the free throw line.

"They just had more experience and it showed up in the playoffs," he said. "But we'll be back, and with more experience because of the playoffs, we'll be better.

"I think Kansas City played hard the whole series," MacLeod said. "It's a young club, with the exception of Lacey, and a team for the future."

Trailing by 24 points, the Kings came on strong at the onset of the third period, outscoring the Suns 15-6 in the first 5½ minutes. That Kansas City effort was keyed by guard Otis Birdsong, who got eight of his 21 points during that run, and by forward Bill Robinzine, who tallied his first six points of the game then.

But after the Kings had whittled the Suns lead to 15 points at 76-61, two fouls and a traveling call allowed the Suns to regain their momentum. The Suns finished the quarter with a 26-point lead and the Kings never threatened the rest of the way.

The only other players scoring in double figures for the Kings, the Midwest Divison champs, were forward Scott Wedman with 15, and reserves Billy McKinney and Darnell Hillman, each with 10.

The Eastern Conference semifinals will resume Sunday. The Atlanta Hawks and Washington Bullets, tied 3-3, meet in the deciding game in Landover, Md., while the San Antonio Spurs, leading 3-2, attempt to close out their series against the 76ers at Philadelphia.

The Hawks bounced back from a 3-1 deficit to even their series with the Bullets, the defending NBA champions. Four of the six games of the series have been won by the road team.

"We've had six battles up to now," said Hawks center Steve Hawes. "Sunday will be the war."

"It's a one-game series now," said Hawks guard Armond Hill. "They have confidence because they're the world champions. We have confidence because we've been fighting and scrapping all year and now we're even with them."

Philadelphia also trailed 3-1 but averted elimination by clobbering the Spurs 120-97 at San Antonio Thursday night. Julius Erving, starting at guard, led the Sixers with 32 points.

"It was one of those nights you want to forget about," said San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, whose Spurs were the top offensive team in the league during the regular season but shot just 38 percent Thursday night. "We never gave ourselves a chance to get in the game. We played so bad — just terrible."

THE U. S. COAST Guard has issued an advisory to boaters to be aware of the potential dangers involved in using certain lithium sulfur dioxide batteries, which may be powering emergency locating transmitters on recreational boats.

The warning was issued following an order by the Federal Aviation Agency for aircraft pilots to remove all such batteries from their planes because of a danger of explosions or fires.

Although most of the emergency locating radios for boats do not use the lithium sulfur dioxide batteries, Coast Guard officials believe there is a possibility that some boaters may have purchased devices with such batteries.

If this is the case, the boater and boat are in danger from fires and explosions. The lithium sulfur dioxide batteries shoud be removed as soon as possible and buried.

Federation Favors Fee Increase

The North Carolina Wildlife Federation has come out in favor of at least a 20 per cent increase in hunting and fishing license fees issued by the state Wildlife Resources Commission.

Citing a deep concern "about the financing of future wildlife programs by the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission," the Federation's board of directors unanimously passed a resolution endorsing the Wildlife Resources Commission and its operating organization in a recent meeting.

The Board also recommended that due to inflation and other factors depleting funds to carry on a well-balanced wildlife program, the Commission conduct a thorough study to determine alternate means of increasing revenue.

Shad Locking Schedule Set

The Wildlife Resources Commission and the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers have established a shad locking schedule on the Cape Fear River to allow American shad to pass upstream through the locks on the Cape Fear to their spawning grounds.

The locking schedule is as follows: Locks 1, 2, and 3 are currently open and will remain open until May 4. The locking schedule will run from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Public access is available for fishermen at each lock and dam facility located near Highway 87. Fishermen are cautioned to be extremely careful when fishing near the boiling water below each dam and lock, however.

Tigers Top Redskins

ROBERSONVILLE — Williamston High School handed Roanoke its second Northeastern Conference defeat and its third overall Friday, taking a 4-1 win.

The Redskins got their only run in the bottom of the first inning. Steve Wallace walked and stole second. He scored on Glenn Cargile's single.

Williamston came back with three runs in the second to take the lead for good. Keith Clark walked and Leslie Beacham also got a free pass. Jeff Odom doubled in Clark, and Chuck Rogerson tripled, scoring both Beacham and Odom.

The other Tiger run crossed in the sixth. Odom and Rogerson both singled and a hit by Randy Ellis brought in Odom.

Odom led the Williamston hitting with three, while Rogerson had two.

Roanoke got only three hits off Clark, and no one had more than one.

The loss dropped Roanoke to 8-3 overall, while Williamston climbed to 7-9. Following a Saturday game with Bear Grass, the Redskins host Edenton on Tuesday, while Williamston travels to Roanoke Rapids on Tuesday.

CBA Downs Valkyries

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock outlasted D.H. Conley in a girls' softball game Friday, taking a 10-8 victory.

Aycock pushed over two in the first, only to see Conley match that in the second. Both teams scored five runs in the third, making it 7-7.

Conley then added one in the top of the fourth for an 8-7 lead, but Aycock came back with three in the bottom of the frame and that closed out the scoring.

Aycock's hitting was led by Head with three, while Diane Gurley and Proctor each had two. Gardner was the winning pitcher.

Lisa Hardy, Lori Garrish, Pam Manning and Joanne Franke each had two hits for Conley.

The Valkyries are now 10-3 and play host to Ayden-Grifton on Wednesday.

Labor Secretary Marshall Has Maintained Esteem

EDITOR'S NOTE — The man in the middle usually gets shot at from both flanks, but not Ray Marshall. As secretary of labor, he has managed to retain the esteem of his boss and the nation's union chieftains.

By OWEN ULLMANN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Walter Mondale had just delivered some impromptu remarks at a White House news conference called to announce a new employment program. Then, as he was introducing Labor Secretary F. Ray Marshall, Mondale noticed a thick typescript in Marshall's hand.

"You're not going to read that whole thing, are you?" the vice president kidded the secretary.

"Well, you know, I'm programmed for 50-minute lectures," Marshall replied in his Texas drawl.

The flat speaking style, the authoritative gestures, the scholarly stares from behind oversized glasses expose Marshall as the professor he once was. Under the academic veneer is a savvy politician.

After two years as Jimmy Carter's secretary of labor, Marshall is getting high grades in the two main courses offered in this town: politics and diplomacy. More than anyone else, he is credited with preserving the link between labor and Carter's administration.

"There could have been a permanent rupture if it weren't for Marshall," says one Labor Department aide.

A White House official acknowledged: "Ray's kept that strained relationship together." He added:

"He works harder at day-to-day Democratic politics than any other cabinet secretary we've got. But you don't think of him as a politician."

Colleagues, aides, labor leaders and others say the 50-year-old former University of Texas economics professor is an influential adviser to President Carter on domestic policy and a persuasive advocate of organized labor's causes. Carter trusts him and labor trusts him, though a gulf of mistrust separates Carter and labor.

Union leaders are fond of Marshall because of his efforts to present their views to the White House and because he has won battles within the administration on their behalf. "We think he's doing a very good job for us," says one top AFL-CIO official.

Carter has high regard for his secretary, according to the White House official, because of "his unquestioned loyalty" and because "Ray and the president think alike on most things."

To labor leaders, however, Marshall and Carter do not think alike. They view Marshall as Carter's "liberal conscience," who is always going to bat for organized labor. They view the Democratic president as a conservative Republican on economic policy.

Marshall the politician finesses the point. "It's easy to exaggerate the differences" between labor and Carter, he says, adding: "I firmly believe that the things the administration and the labor movement have in common are much more important than the things that tend to divide them."

That observation has become Marshall's stock refrain as he travels the country. His message is that this Democratic administration cares about the needs of working people and that this labor secretary will make sure it keeps caring.

He has fought vigorously for his positions and has won on several major issues. That is why, he says, he supports most of Carter's economic programs. "This department played a major role in shaping those policies," said Marshall. "I think we have been able to shape them in a direction that is sound from the workers' point of view."

Marshall is generally credited as a key architect of the government's expanded public service jobs program. He persuaded Carter in 1977 to back larger increases in the minimum wage, and won Carter's promise to resist a delay in future minimum wage increases. And he triumphed in a battle with Carter's advisers in preventing the administration from weakening proposed regulations to increase textile workers' protection from cotton dust exposure.

He was the first administration official to propose that Carter adopt voluntary wage-price guidelines to fight inflation and avert a recession. The guidelines have angered organized labor more than any other Carter program, but labor leaders don't blame Marshall.

AFL-CIO President George Meany once said Marshall was "one of the few American professors who understands the working people."

Born in 1928 in Oak Grove, La., Marshall's family moved to Mississippi while he was an infant. His mother later died, and he was reared in an orphanage in Jackson, Miss.

He ran away at 15 and joined the Navy in 1943 after lying about his age. He then served as a radio operator during World War II.

Later, he got married and enrolled in a Mississippi junior college. He received a B.A. from Millsaps College; an M.A. from Louisiana State University; and a Ph.D. in economics from the University of California at Berkeley.

A Fulbright scholar, he taught at the University of Mississippi and LSU before becoming a full professor at Texas at age 34.

Unlike his two immediate predecessors, John T. Dunlop and William J. Usery Jr., Marshall has little experience in labor relations and collective bargaining.

That, along with what one aide calls "a congenitally optimistic view of the world," may be his principal drawbacks.

He also has been preoccupied with a family tragedy: The fourth of five Marshall children, 16-year-old Christopher, is suffering from cancer and has lost an arm and part of a lung to the disease.

Marshall has kept steadily at work — work which, by all accounts, he relishes. "He loves what he's doing," says one aide. "I think he would like to stick around here for eight years."

Design Blends Shelter, Surroundings

Jerry Bishop

For the family that needs shelter but loves nature, the Sierra, today's featured home achieves a pleasing unity of both. Indoors and outdoors mingle in the design, which is capable of virtual camouflage into a woodland setting.

Exposed stone, wood siding, and a cedar deck create exterior harmony. Inside, the emphasis is on air, space, and light.

While the foyer helps protect the living room from entry traffic, it also allows an immediate view of the room, a spacious area for family and friends. Clerestory windows heighten the sense of space, and a wood-burning fireplace with stone hearth promises cheery warmth in cold weather. The heavily glassed rear wall of the living room overlooks a cedar deck, and double doors invite merging of deck and room for plentiful party space.

Also accessible to the deck is the large kitchen, featuring indoor dining space and sliding glass doors for easy preparation of outdoor meals. The kitchen is edged by a highly functional hallway with storage closet and carport entry, and a full bath/laundry combination is opposite.

For entertaining, the front-facing dining room exudes formality and is close to the kitchen for convenience.

Sleeping quarters are nestled to the left of living areas and manage to be easily reached but sufficiently private. Two sizable bedrooms are separated by two full baths, one private to the double-closeted master bedroom and one handy to the living room.

On the lower level, the design outlines a storage room, utility room, another full bath, and a recreation room or third bedroom. Accessible from this level is an unusual covered patio with fireplace.

A Major Celebration Of Silver In American Life

By BARBARA BASLER
AP Newsfeatures

An American humorist once voiced contempt for a couple by haughtily remarking that they were the kind of people who bought their silver.

The writer was implying — perhaps in jest — that silver truly belonged only to those well-connected enough to inherit it.

But for more than three centuries, silver has played an important part in the lives of most Americans, even those who were not born with a silver spoon in their mouth.

Indeed, scholars say that while the rich may own more silver than you and I, every American has inherited a silver tradition.

"Ever since colonial times, Americans have used silver objects to mark birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, religious observances, civic achievements, and wartime and athletic events," says Gerald W.R. Ward, of the Yale University Art Gallery.

Ward and his wife, Barbara McLean Ward, have just finished preparing a major exhibition of American silver, drawn from Yale's fine, comprehensive collection.

The exhibition is "Silver in American Life." After opening in April in Pittsburgh, it is scheduled to tour museums in 11 major cities over the next three years. Organized by the American Federation of Arts and the Yale University Art Gallery, the exhibition contains more than 200 silver objects that illustrate the role of the precious metal in American cultural life from the 17th to the 20th centuries.

The exhibition explores the close relationship between silver and American life. Its 25 display cases show silver objects arranged in groups according to use, featuring everything from coins for the marketplace to goblets for the church.

The collection includes the earliest known piece of American-made silver, a tiny dram cup fashioned by a Boston silversmith about 1650.

One of the most monumental pieces of silver made in America is also included. "The Monteith Bowl was a kind of large punchbowl used for cooling and holding wine glasses," Ward explains.

MONTEITH BOWL, cir. 1700-10

And, of course, no exhibition of American silver would be complete without several pieces by one of America's most renowned silversmiths — Paul Revere — a man who Ward says would have been famous as a silversmith even if he had never been a patriot.

The collection also includes many of the highly specialized silver pieces Americans were once fond of, from silver shoe buckles to a Victorian bread fork that was used to take a piece of bread from platter to plate.

The pieces are divided not only by use, but by age, as well.

In colonial America, Ward says, only those with real money owned any quantity of silver. In fact, silver objects were literally made by melting down money and turning it into pitchers, trays, cups and so on.

"Melting coins and shaping them into objects for the home did not decrease the value of the money," Ward explains. Indeed, it protected the money. "Silversmiths placed identifying marks on the objects they created, and colonial newspapers are full of accounts of how stolen objects were returned thanks to these marks."

In the 1840s, '50s and '60s, great deposits of silver were discovered in the American West. And, at about the same time, English craftsmen invented the silver-plating process. "This meant that silver was abundant and accessible," Ward says, "and what was once a very elitist metal became more democratic."

The 19th century, then, saw the beginning of mass-produced silver in America and the rise of the big silver companies.

Finally, Ward says, today there has been a revival of the tradition of hand-crafted silver, in contemporary form.

Q. — We would like to put down hardwood floors over a concrete base. The concrete sometimes gets damp. We have been told that an application of sealer is first required before the 2-by-4s are laid in the adhesive. Will this take care of the dampness?

A. — Before you start a project of this nature, be sure you know what you are doing. It is a job that requires a certain amount of know-how which cannot be explained in the space available here. As for the dampness, when it is slight, you apply sealer, then moisture-proof adhesive and then the 2-by-4s. But when there is severe dampness, use 1-by-4s instead of 2-by-4s. Put down the sealer and the adhesive, then the 1-by-4s. A plastic moisture barrier goes over the wood, then a new seat of 1-by-4s over the first set. The hardwood boards go on over the second set of 1-by-4s. As you can now see, this is no project to be taken lightly, since all of the above must be done before you begin nailing the hardwood, which is quite a task in itself.

Q. — You told a reader that oil-based paint should not be used on stucco because the cement contains alkali, which attacks oil paint. A few years ago, I bought an oil-based house paint for our stucco house and used it without any ill effects. Thought you'd like to know.

A. — The advice was general and still applies, although there is a special type of oil-based paint formulated especially for use on stucco and other types of masonry. You probably used that kind. A reader who might want to use an oil-based paint on stucco should ask whether the dealer has that type of paint in stock. In any case, read the label carefully.

Q. — I have been using rottenstone in powdered form for more than 20 years to smooth newly finished furniture. It takes all the irregularities out of the varnish or lacquer and makes the surface like glass. I have always used water with the powder, but a friend now tells me I should have been using oil. Is he right and should I change to oil in the future:

A. — Of all the do-it-yourself endeavors, wood finishing is the one most likely to produce differences of opinion. That's because everybody has his own pet method of finishing wood. Rottenstone powder can be used with either oil or water. Why should you pay attention to anyone else if your own procedure has produced such excellent results? As they say in baseball, never change a winning lineup.

Gardening Questions

Q. I grow dipper gourds and pumpkins on one side of my garden. Is there any chance they will cross pollinate? (H.S., Ramseur)

A. No. Dipper gourds and pumpkins are not genetically compatible. However, bees may bring in "foreign" pollen from other gourds and pumpkins. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Can gasoline be used safely to destroy "white maggots" below the soil line in a small garden? (E.H., Durham)

A. No. Gasoline is dangerous to use, gives poor control of insects and could cause severe injury to seeds, seedlings and plants. The "white maggots" to which you refer are probably seed corn maggots which attack germinating seed of several vegetables. Good control of this pest can be obtained by planting treated seed that are commercially available. (R.L. Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. How do I treat Helleri hollies that are infested with nematodes? (W.S., Fuquay)

A. Mulch well and water during dry periods. If they die, replace with rotunda Chinese or dwarf yaupon holly. No effective chemicals are available to treat hollies and other landscape ornamentals for nematodes. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. I understand that clear plastic is more desirable than black plastic for use as a mulch in the garden. Is this true? (H.S., Winston-Salem)

A. It is true that the soil gets warmer under clear plastic than under black plastic. But clear plastic permits weeds to grow under it, and the weeds sometimes tear through and destroy the plastic. You will be better satisfied sticking with the black plastic. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — Chandeliers with built-in dimmers.

Manufacturer's claim — that these chandeliers provide general room lighting and the means to create dramatic area focus, since they have down lights and up lights as well as the dimmers ... that the dimmers have a complete range of light intensity, from candlelight to full power .... that the chandeliers are built for easy maintenance, with metal shades and glass chimneys that lift off for cleaning and bulb replacement ... and that they come chiefly in earth tones with wood and antique brass merged with soft shades of handcut, bronze smoke glass.

Manufacturer's claim — That these squares are available in 24 prints and are designed primarily for use in kitchens, bathrooms and entrance halls, as well as to accent walls in similar areas . .. that they can also be used to cover valances and other accessories to create a coordinated decorating statement ... that the paste on the square is activated simply by dipping in water ... that the squares are made of a spun-bonded olefin, a strong material that has exceptional dimensional stability, either wet or dry ... and that they have an acrylic top coat which gives them extra soil resistance and washability.

Manufacturer's claim — That the insulation is made of cross-linked cellular polyethylene which can be used on hot or cold water pipes ... that it is sold in packages of four sections of 3-foot lengths ... that it comes in different sizes for pipes of different diameters ... that the zipper-like closure eliminates the need for installation with metal clips, adhesive or tape ... that, should the pipes need repair, the closure is easly opened, permitting the insulation to be removed without damage ... and that, after the repair, the insulation can be reinstalled easily.

Truck Stops Turn Into Big Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Truck stops, once a Mom and Pop business with Mom turning out a minimal menu and Pop pumping gas for anyone who had the cash, today are a $10-billion-a-year industry, reports the National Association of Truck Stop Operators.

Not only are some of the nation's 6,500 truck stops likely to have been built by large corporations, but the person who runs a truck stop often is a new breed also, says NATSO chairman Charles Floyd.

"He can just as easily be a former banker or lawyer as an up-by-the-bootstraps man," Floyd says. "But, on the average the operator is basically a business executive, with one twist — he runs a 24-hour-a-day, 365-day-a-year business that caters to automobile passengers as well as truck drivers."

The changes in the industry have been enormous, he points out. If Mom and Pop were able to survive on two gas pumps and a cigarette machine, today's operator can't. A large truck stop pumps more than 6 million gallons a year of fuel alone.

"But fuel is not the only attraction for motorists," Floyd adds. "The truck stop today is fast becoming a city unto itself. They offer everything from motels and posh restaurants to saunas, laundromats and mini-department stores."

At some stops a driver can roll in at 3 a.m. and find a check-cashing service, a communications center, a barber-shop or beauty salon to visit while a vehicle is being repaired. At one stop, in Doswell, Va., there's even a live disc-jockey radio show produced for instant entertainment.

The family is not overlooked at truck stops, Floyd notes. Many have installed self-service diesel pumps on a "cash and carry" basis for recreational-vehicle owners, and have added items to their retail stores to woo trade from other highway establishments. And some locations have opened grocery stores for campers and pleasure drivers, and have installed waste-disposal areas for recreational vehicles.

Generally, truck stops are located on Interstate highways and primary highways at intersections with state highways. Those on the Interstate system are situated on an average of 12 acres of land, and can generally park more than 100 trucks and cars, Floyd says. Several stops cover 20 to 30 acres and can accommodate several hundred vehicles.

But prime interstate locations are not cheap. According to NATSO, the independent businessman located on Interstate-highway property has paid an average of $9,378 per acre.

About 35 percent of the truck stops in the nation are operated as part of a chain. The other 65 percent are independents.

So sophisticated has the industry become that NATSO now stages seminars for its members that range all the way from "Retail Store Management" to one seminar that has been dubbed "Trucker vs. Truck Stop Operator" which allows both sides to air their gripes in an academic-type environment.

Big Loss If Undervalued

NEW YORK (UPI) — Practically all homeowners have insurance against fire, storms and other catastrophes, but millions are under-insured against losses of homes, furnishings and personal possessions, says the Insurance Information Institute.

The trade group says many people also overlook the effects of inflation and never think about the results until disaster strikes. It's better, the institute says, to review your policies often, checking four phases of coverage:

— Insure to 80-100 percent of replacement value, not the original purchase price or current market value.

— Inventory personal possessions and increase coverage to cover replacement at current prices.

— Have silverware, antiques, works of art and other valuables appraised, and add coverage if necessary for replacement. Both the appraisal and inventory should be kept in a safe deposit box.

— Consider increasing personal liability coverage to protect the household and others if a suit or claim is filed by someone for injuries or damage to property. Jury awards for thousands of dollars, a rarity 20 years ago, now are common, the institute says.

Home Buyers Are Spending To Save Energy

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Energy costs and high utility bills have made prospective home buyers more conscious of investing in homes that will save money later, according to a housing expert here at the recent International Air-Conditioning, Heating, Refrigeration Exposition.

"A builder survey showed more than 89 percent of buyers are willing to spend an extra $600 or more during construction to cut heating and cooling bills $100 a year," said Honeywell's James P. Nunke.

He said contractors who fail to offer and promote energy conservation, especially features that will cut monthly heating and cooling bills, may be missing out on new housing's strongest selling points.

Collector Enjoys His Tarantula Companions

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Sharing your bedroom with 35 varieties of tarantula spiders would be an unsettling experience for most people.

Not however, for Lt. Col. Murray Cragin, a medical liaison officer for North American Air Defense Command's 20th Region-Air Division at Fort Lee Air Force Station here.

A native of North Hollywood, Calif., Cragin collects tarantulas as part of his interest in arachnology — the study of spiders. He says it began in 1967 when a spider started spinning a web outside his office window at Poper Air Force Base, N.C.

He photographed it (another hobby) and has since further developed his interests in both photography and the study of several species of spiders, including the tarantula. He obtained his first tarantula four years ago while stationed at Kirtland Air Force Base, N.M. A friend who worked for the U.S. Forest Service found the spider in the desert.

"I am primarily interested in studying spiders in their natural habitats in the field," Cragin says. "That requires that spiders be studied and photographed under natural conditions whenever possible. Most scientists work primarily on classification of spiders into genus and species, not behavior," he said.

"Keeping live tarantulas is a natural and visible offshoot of the study of spiders," he says. "Since most domestic spiders live only a single year and are fully grown only a few months of the year, they do not lend themselves to be kept in captivity, whereas tarantulas may live from 12 to as long as 25 years."

Cragin's collection consists of tarantulas from all over the world. He has spiders from Mexico, Haiti, Guatamala, Honduras and Thailand, as well as from the states of Texas and Arizona.

He obtains them through tropical pet suppliers and from private collectors. Supply and demand determine the cost of a tarantula. Prices vary between $9 and $25, but some exotic foreign species cost up to $60.

"Each genus and species in my collection has its own distinct personality," Cragin says. "Some are desert burrowers while others live in trees and on jungle vegetation. Some are wanderers, whereas others never stray more than a few feet from their burrow.

"Some of my spiders are docile while others range from mildly aggressive temperament to violently aggressive. However, none of them is known to be dangerous to man; their bite is similar to a bee sting. Even those that are violently aggressive give fair warning that they will be bitten only if you are careless and ignore their warning," he said. "That warning is issued by raising themselves on their hind legs in a threat position and baring their fangs."

Tarantulas, like most spiders, are cannabalistic. So Cragin keeps the collection in aquarium-type glass tanks, with each spider separated in its own section.

They eat only live food: crickets, lizards, grasshoppers and mice. Feeding is necessary only once or twice a week, depending on the time of year and the species of spider; however, a constant source of water is required.

He has recently obtained two adult males and plans to breed them with his females.

Asked to explain the benefits of keeping tarantulas as pets, Cragin said, "They don't bark, they don't bite the postman, they don't require a litter box, they eat only a few cents worth of food a week, and you can leave them alone for a week while you're on vacation!"

Cyclists To The Rescue

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The disabled auto, its drive shaft inoperative, coasted to a stop along the edge of the dark highway. Moments later, two bearded motorcyclists pulled up.

But instead of having trouble on his hands, the driver had help.

"Hi, we're members of Joel's Horsemen," said one of the motorcyclists as he handed the driver a leaflet. "We help people in trouble on the highway."

The 100-member group is an offspring of the Church of God. The members practice what they call "New Testament Judaism." The Horsemen, dressed in bulky jackets, black ties and white helmets, patrol busy Interstate 95 from Pompano Beach to North Miami Beach from 6 p.m. until about 11 p.m.

Proselytizing is kept to a minimum, the group says.

"Changing tires, there's no religion in that," said Pam Wilson, 21, of Kansas City. "It's just helping someone."

The group was organized in 1969 in Kansas City by Earl Steward, 49, and began helping motorists six years ago. He said the winter snow and ice in Kansas had led him to form a Florida branch of the group last year.

"In having our activities so curtailed in the winter time, we sought a place we could do good all year," said Steward. "We came down here, we liked it, we saw the need."

Most of the 30 local members hold everyday jobs to support their nighttime work, and many live together in a large Lauderdale Lakes house.

The name "Joel's Horsemen" is taken from the Old Testament book of Joel, 2:4, in which that prophet describes "a great and powerful people." "Their appearance is like the appearance of horses, and like war horses they run."

Covington, Said America's Most Distressed City

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

COVINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Covington once sold for a keg of whiskey and then a quarter of a buffalo and now depends $4 million a year on Washington and is sensitive about being called America's most distressed city.

Mayor George Wermeling took the Fifth Amendment under grand jury questioning ("It had nothing to do with city business," His Honor said) but talks with hand gestures in defense of Covington.

He stood at the window of his ninth floor office in the city hall of this Kentucky town of 50,000 and pointed his right forefinger across the Ohio River to Cincinnati, a city of 400,000.

"We used to be the second city in Kentucky, like Cincinnati was in Ohio. They dropped to third in Ohio and so did we in Kentucky." Wermeling smiled.

"So, you see, we're equal with Cincinnati." He clapped his hands.

Handclapping almost went out of fashion in Covington that terrible awful day in Feburary when an official of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development was quoted as saying Covington, "Gateway To The South," is America's "most distressed city."

HUD backed off saying Covington is the most distressed. "Good God, what about Cleveland and New York? And, in Kentucky, have you ever seen Ashland, Hopkinsville, Louisville or Owensboro?" a HUD bureaucrat said.

It seems HUD's list of the most distressed cities — a tally it had no intention of making public, what with even the South Bronx still having voters and Congressmen being champions of even the meanest streets — charted Covington as the 172nd most distressed. Alas, poor Camden, N.J., ranked worst.

However, HUD had a companion list of the cities suffering most from some dreadful urban blight called, in bureaucratic unlanguage, "impaction." HUD said impaction involves matters such as population loss, poverty and aging housing.

Covington rubbed its jaw. It was not so much as to soothe the pain of an impacted tooth. But it gave the city folk a chance to consider their municipal health.

Four years after the Declaration of Independence, a grateful baby- of a nation gave American Revolutionary War veteran George Muse the 200 acres that is now Covington. He traded it for the whiskey keg. The fellow who paid the whiskey later sold the peninsula for a quarter of buffalo meat. By 1814 the price had risen to $50,000 and the next year the town, now cut up into 299 lots, was named after a War of 1812 hero. A Golden Age dawned.

The Dixie Highway ran to Covington. Up to its factories came Southern cotton. In the Civil War it stood off a Confederation invasion. But German immigrants took Covington.

Their German National Bank had Covington's first telephone listing. They built a Roman Catholic cathedral ("Bigger than Cincinnati's," said Mayor Wermeling, clapping his hands again) and what are locally called slice-of-bread houses. The Germans could afford only 25-foot-wide lots but raised their new brick houses three stories high.

Covington produced what was once America's largest suspension bridge. U. S. Grant's father was postmaster. Dan Beard, founder of America's Boy Scouts, lived here. A 1915 tornado and a 1937 flood messed Covington for some days.

But the bad years set in after World War II. The era of the suburban shopping mall and middle class flight came. As Detroit, Buffalo, Providence, Boston, New York, Baltimore, Washington, D.C., Cleveland, so went Covington, suffering the all-American city syndrome.

The main street, Madison Avenue, still is home to Woolworth's with cheaper house plants on the sidewalk, banks with repolished fronts, jewelry stores proclaiming their establishment a century before the Florence Mall. But there are vacant shops.

Madison Avenue also has an expanding Army & Navy store, a bar ("The Most Beautiful Girls in Kentucky," a sign of nostalgia for the era when Covington was where Cincinnati's gentlemen went at night without their ladies) and a gray haired woman typing zealously behind the Kentucky Right To Life plateglass window, sandwiched between the local Democratic and Republican headquarters storefronts.

The Madison Avenue department stores are gone to suburbia. Plants shut. City Hall made puffing noises about attracting new business, to rebuild the downtown retail district that is the traditional tax base of American cities.

Two recently arrived shops buy blood by the pint. They are called "the blood suckers." But something other than a vampire has come to town.

Not City Hall, which raises $9 million of the municipal budget. Not Washington, which furnishes the $4 million remainder. But it is private citizens, with a little help from the commercial banks (oddly, the savings and loan treasure houses have been tardier partners), who are the fathers and mothers of what may be a rebirth of Covington.

In Covington Avenue, a block-long island of a street surrounded by a sea of empty lots, vacant warehouses and the other landscapes of blight, Steve Gongola stepped over his son's tricycle in the backyard of his 10-room, 125-year-old house. He grinned.

"The house is worth more than $55,000 now," he said. It had been a rooming house, one of a block of peeling, leaking houses built in the Golden Age and then slipping into slums. Two years ago Gongola and his wife had been living in Cincinnati. They heard about "rehab."

What the academic city planners and Washington dreamers called "urban rehabilitation" has been shortened to "rehab." When a word is in heavy use, it is subject to change. Covington's citizens have been using the word.

Gongola came, saw the low price tag, bought and "rehabbed." He installed modern plumbing. He painted and papered. The basic foundation and brick work of yesteryear's German immigrants needed no redoing.

The Gongola home has polished paneling, marble fireplaces, ceilings higher than many condominium apartment rooms are long. Couples like the Congolas have done the same up and down the block.

And in Russell Street. And down by the river where City Hall once wanted to rip down the remains of Golden Age mansions and build a parking lot or something.

"Rehab" is rising. Getting into the act, city fathers are refurbishing a complex of downtown streets into "Main Strasse," a doffing of the civic cap to the German drive of the Golden Age. City Hall, doing something else than raising a city payroll tax, has joined, agreeing to pay $3,000 to homeowners for "rehabbing" the street fronts of houses.

No longer does the middle class, loyal enough to stay in town but cautious enough to move in only in such non-downtown areas as the fringe of Devou Park on the forested hills above Covington, avoid the center. Even Cincinnati residents, sensing the delights of Washington, D.C.'s, Georgetown and such other reborn districts as in Philadelphia, Savannah, Ga., Charleston, S.C., and Newport, R.I.

One sign of Covington's enthusiasm: in the cityroom of the Kentucky Post, reporters and editors in their 20s and 30s — not a professional group known for putting down roots — are joining "rehab."

Two blocks away, at the Roman Catholic Mother of God Church (another product of the Teutonic forefathers; the name of the church is carved "Muttes Gottes Kirche" in stone above the door), Father William Mertes cheerfully skips lunch.

The church is pleased because he has doubled membership since his coming. But part of his being busy is that he fathered "rehab."

Mertes and friends had sensed the possibilities of Covington Avenue. The friendly owner of much of the street sold to them so that couples could buy — for $7,000 — and refurbish. The local banks loaned money. Rehab was born.

"I like the old houses and hated to see the city go to Hell," Mertes said. "Covington is coming back to life."

"Well, we always have been a bedroom for Cincinnati and with rehab we can go on being so," said Tom E. Hill, owner of one of the city's oldest businesses. He is 65 and kept the family store — founded by his father who moved in from the Kentucky town of Hard Scrabble a century ago — in town while others fled.

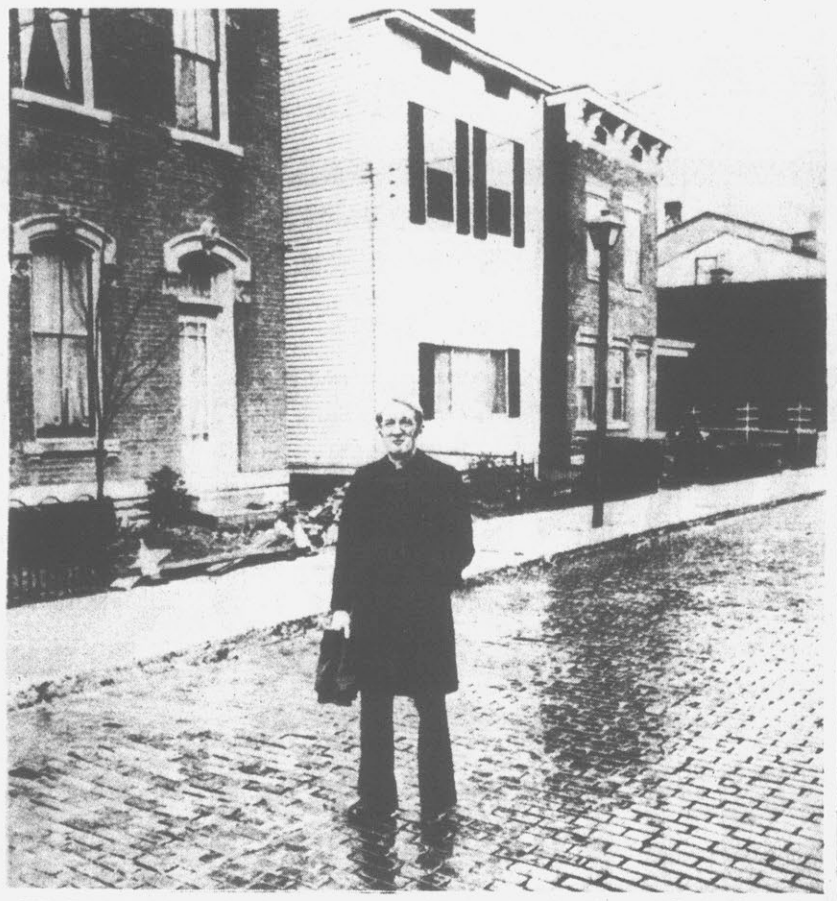
His seed company opened a distributing branch in suburbia. It has boomed, a tail that now wags the downtown dog. "When I go, and I'm 65, I suppose the children will shut down this downtown store," Hill said.

He had proven his loyalty to Covington by occupying a building on Covington's attempt at a downtown business mall, a place of some business, some "for rent" signs, no traffic and no crowds of shoppers.

"The mall laid an egg," Hill said. "Distressed? Well, I suppose downtown merchants are keeping their noses above water. But more should be done."

A credo of rehab is that retail business will prosper when the middle class is back living downtown. Hill and other businessmen say City Hall should act sooner.

"I'm a landlord and I would be willing to give up six months' rent to a new business if City Hall also would agree to some tax cut to the newcomer," Hill said. He leaned back in his balcony office chair and gazed at a framed drawing of his father's Hard Scrabble store. "It's a mess," he said. "That's our distress," Hill said. He smiled. "Covington is my home. It is changing. No one wants to go back to Hard Scrabble. Covington will make it."



FR. WILLIAM MARTES, standing on Covington Avenue, has reason to be pleased. He has been a leader in urban rehabilitation. "Covington is coming back to life", he says. (UPI Photo)

Business Notes

S&L SESSION

The North Carolina Savings and Loan League, the trade association representing 197 savings and loans in the state, is making preparations for its annual spring session of the Savings & Loan Academy, set for May 13-15 at Appalachian State University.

In its sixth year of operation, the Academy has been attended by 348 employees of savings and loan associations from across the state. Instruction is offered in the area of basic S&L concepts, advanced concepts, leadership training, and goal setting and management by objectives.

Vicki Karpick of Home Savings and Loan here and Joy Farrell and James Stocks of First Federal Savings and Loan of Greenville have been accepted for attendance at the academy.

RECORD YEAR

Thorne Gregory, chairman and chief executive officer of Branch Corp., reported at the annual meeting of shareholders in Wilson that new records were achieved in 1978 in earnings, total assets, total loans, deposits, and dividends paid.

Gregory said a ten percent stock dividend was declared in December and cash dividends paid topped the $2 million mark for the first time.

The official pointed out that net earnings increased 21.6 percent and totaled $5.8 million; deposits increased 9.1 percent on a monthly average basis; loan demand continued to be strong during the year, he said, and increased 11.7 percent by year end.

SALES GAIN

Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company's sales of new life insurance during the first three months this year amounted to $217,646,000, a gain of $24,926,000 over volume for the corresponding period in 1978.

Seth Macon, senior vice president-agency, said that first quarter sales boosted ordinary life insurance in force with Jefferson Standard to a new high of $5,943,503,000 on March 31.

INCREASED EARNINGS

First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co. reported increased earnings for the first quarter of 1979 compared to the same quarter last year.

First quarter income before securities transactions totaled $2,527,000, compared to $1,412,000 for the first quarter of 1978. Net income after securities transactions was $1,138,000, compared with a loss of $189,000 for the same quarter in 1978.

First-Citizens operates an office in Grimesland.

CONSTRUCTION CONTINUES

WITN-TV in Washington reported that the second phase of construction at the station's new transmitter site at Grifton is underway as work has begun on the new 5,000 square-foot transmitter building.

The building, which will house new transmitter and related equipment, will contain all support equipment for the broadcast operations, WITN-TV said, including an auxiliary power plant that will enable the station to continue normal operations in the event of a commercial power failure. In addition the building will contain controlled internal encironmental facilities, fire and safety controls, and a remote-control operations center.

The new facility is being constructed adjacent to the base of the station's new 2,000-foot tower that is also under construction. Completion is scheduled for mid-September.

Educational Experience: Volunteerism

"The image of the volunteer is rapidly changing from the one of feminine do-gooders with too much time on their hands," said Anne Creech, volunteer coordinator for the Pitt County Schools Community Schools Program.

"Now most are active members of the community, housewives, business persons . . . just all kinds who contribute their time and effort."

Gov. James B. Hunt declared the week of April 22-28 as Volunteer Week in North Carolina in honor of the thousands of people who give to others. Gov. Hunt and his wife, Carolyn, also contribute time as school volunteers.

"Over six million volunteers serve in organized programs across the nation," noted Mrs. Creech. "They're a tremendous resource and we hope to tap that resource in Pitt County."

INTEGRAL PART OF PUBLIC EDUCATION

Not so very long ago, Anne Creech was a volunteer in the schools, taking an interest in the schools her five children attended.

"Anne had participated as a volunteer with the PTA and did work in the county's initial learning disability program," noted Alice Keene, coordinator for the CSP.

When the Community Schools Program started in Pitt County, the volunteer section already had a head start, since many parents across the county were contributing time to various schools.

"Pitt County has pushed community volunteerism from the start," said Ms. Keene. "Unlike some counties, where only one person is hired to do the total program, we have three. We're glad to have that committment and backing from our Board of Education."

Under Anne Creech's guidance, approximately 100 volunteers now serve on a regular basis in Pitt County schools, with many others serving on an on-call basis.

"Some industries give employees release time to volunteer on a regular basis," said Mrs. Creech. "Most volunteers are parents, but we'd like to have folks who don't have school age children, and especially retired persons."

According to Mrs. Creech, the program benefits children, who receive individual attention; community bonds with the school are strengthened; and teachers, who are relieved of non-professional duties.

"We want to be an integral part of public education, as well as give the parents an opportunity to participate in education," she noted.

The CSP offers orientation classes for both the volunteer and school personnel who will work directly with volunteers. A staff coordinator is in each school to monitor the program, with a volunteer coordinator to serve as a liason between the school and the community.

"We're trying to have prepared persons in prepared schools," commented Alice Keene. "We want a 25-year program, not a one-year program."

"SOMEONE TAKES THE TIME"

In most cases, Pitt County principals use school volunteers in a reading capacity, working with children on a one-to-one basis.

However, many volunteers participate in such activities as working in school media centers, making cards for books or doing book repair; driving activity buses for field trips; or just speaking to classes about job or life experiences.

"We've had people on call to do things such as drive activity buses, speak to classes, many things," said Mrs. Edith Warren, principal at Sam Bundy School, Farmville.

"Our volunteers work mostly with reading," said Blanie Moye, W. H. Robinson School, Winterville, principal.

Both principals noted that their schools have employed the use of volunteers for some time, but that the Community Schools' volunteer program had brought the volunteer efforts more into focus.

Volunteers at Sam Bundy and Robinson usually work one day a week, for about three or four hours a day. Chris Halsey, a volunteer at Robinson, feels that her time is well spent.

"It's not that you're just spending a half hour with a child, it's what it means to children that someone takes the time to be extra caring," she noted.

Mrs. Halsey, who now has a little girl in the Robinson kindergarten, remembers when her little boy, now at A. G. Cox, was in the first grade:

"When my son first came to Robinson, he brought home so many papers, I couldn't see how the teacher could have ever gotten around to all of them. I went to his teacher, offered my services, and I've loved it ever since."

Volunteers at Sam Bundy have had a similar experience, taking an active interest in their children's school.

"We are working, in many cases, in our children's own classrooms," explained Nancy Morgan, a Bundy volunteer. "It really helps in getting to know the teachers."

According to Betsy Parker, Harriett Baker, Burk, Morgan and Frances Lewis, each volunteer works in some capacity at the school. One may listen to children read, another help in the school media center, but all agree that the program has been successful.

"We sent letters and forms to the parents, with several needs or jobs they could possibly perform to be checked off," said Mrs. Lewis, who is co-coordinator with Mrs. Burk. "Mrs. Warren had a screening program for interested parents, then we had another meeting."

"The teacher cooperation has been really good," she continued. "The teacher is usually ready for the volunteer when she comes. They're very well prepared."

Mrs. Morgan noted that volunteers stick with the teacher's methods, doing what she wants done.

"I worked with some children last week on writing poetry," Mrs. Morgan explained. "I try to fill in where she can't."

Judy Batchelor, a volunteer at H. B. Sugg, took time out from helping children with math problems to explain why she became involved with the CSP program:

"I love the children. It's very rewarding when you have that good feeling, knowing that you've helped those who need individual attention."

Although she has a part time job, Mrs. Batchelor finds the time to work from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. each Tuesday at Sugg. She has a little boy in the Sugg kindergarten.

"TRY IT, YOU'LL LIKE IT"

What qualities does a volunteer need to successfully aid in the educational process?

"Volunteers definitely need understanding, patience, acceptance of children as they are, and most of all, be a good listener," said Mrs. Halsey.

The Bundy volunteers pointed out that a volunteer should also be dependable, and above all, patient, "for a child can tell when you're getting uptight," as Donna Burk pointed out.

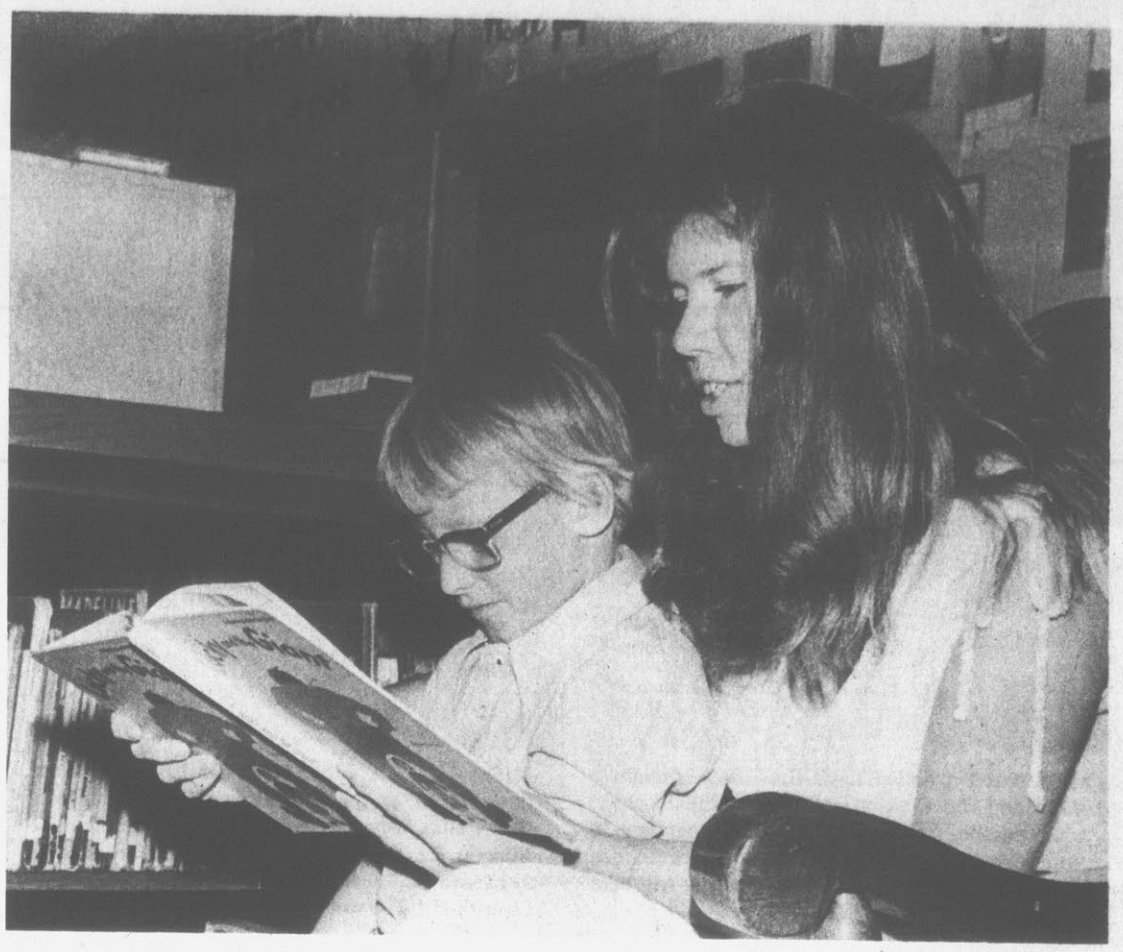
"Being a volunteer is an educational experience," said Mrs. Morgan. "You learn about the school hierarchy, and especially the needs of the schools, not just the one your child attends."

"I think it's very important for persons to volunteer, even if they're not a mother or someone who has a child in the schools," she continued. "A farmer can come in and explain his business, older women can devote some of their time, there's so much to do."

"There was an old-fashioned attitude of a special teacher-child relationship that parents felt they couldn't break," Mrs. Morgan concluded. "People used to feel that only teachers cuold be involved with the learning experience."

As time moves on, educators are welcoming more aid from the community in bringing a total perspective of the world to school children.

According to Ott Alford, Superintendent of Pitt County Schools, even students, concentrated in the four high schools, with others at such schools as A. G. Cox and G. R. Whitfield, are serving in a volunteer capacity as peer tutors or volunteer student aides. These students usually work on a one-to-one basis with fellow class mates, serving in some sort of remedial work.



SEE THE GIANT ?. . .asks Chris Halsey to her attentive listener, Scott McKinney, as they have a storytime session in the Robinson media center.

Sam Bundy principal Edith Warren noted that the Farmville Junior Woman's Club will sponsor a RIF (Reading Is Fundamental) project at the school, with book distribution to begin next fall.

"The club will be involved with the project in a lot of phases here at school," she noted. "I believe we're the first school to have this kind of project here in the county."

Volunteers from the county will be honored Monday night at a banquet at Wellcome Middle School. Madeline McElveen, who serves as coordinator for the state Primary Reading Program, will be the featured speaker.

One need voiced by many volunteers was for male volunteers in the school. Although there are some volunteers, such as Ross Persinger and J. J. Brown in Ayden, who give time to the schools, more male figures are needed-since some children do not have a father at home.

"One important thing about the program is that you work with children who really have needs, needs your own child doesn't have," said Frances Lewis. "Those needs make you aware."

Children's Defense Fund Has No Bounds

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Needy children among the nation's 64 million youngsters keep Marian Wright Edelman moving as though she had an acetylene torch at her heels.

Edelman, head of the Children's Defense Fund in Washington, D.C., is a mover-and-a-shaker shaped by many forces, including a Baptist minister, father, the Civil Rights Movement, Yale Law School, a term on the Yale board, and Harvard University's Center for Law and Education — which she directed.

The letters say:

"Dear Lord Be good to me The sea is so wide and my boat is so small." No periods. It is child's work, a version of the old Seaman's Prayer.

The children whose needs drive Edelman on are rich and poor, black and white. Some have welts from recent beatings or scars from previous ones. For others, the scars or new injuries are inside — deep hurts from brutal insults and beratings that dim a child's eyes as much as a physical beating.

Edelman's needy kids include the "latch-key" crowd, children of working mothers with housekeys dangling from chains around their necks so they can let themselves into an empty house or apartment after school.

There are hungry kids on her list. And sick kids, plus juvenile delinquents and other kids — some in foster care, some in institutions, many abused.

Her priorites also include lonely kids dumped by parents and even those fenced out by an alcoholic or otherwise ill parent.

In the schools, Edelman's concerns center on poor programs for not-too-bright kids, too-bright or gifted kids and the handicapped.

All those needy kids have one pathetic thing in common: they can't speak up.

With Edelman and the Children's Defense Fund in their corner, that may change.

People who know her say Edelman "could start a fire underwater, using a safety match and a green 2-by-4."

The Fund operates on a budget of $1.5 million a year, could use more money but, to maintain independence, won't take a penny from government.

"We want to be free to bite the hand that dis-serves children," Edelman said.

The Fund recently "bit the hand" of President Carter and frequently snaps at the "hand" of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare led by Secretary Joseph Califano Jr.

"Generals and admirals are given a cost-of-living plus 3 percent increase, while children and their families, including widowed mothers, battered by inflation, unemployment and shrinking services, are told to make do with last year's level or much less," the Fund noted.

—"We are deeply disappointed that the President requested only a $20 million increase...for Head Start, designed to meet the urgent nutritional and educational needs of our neediest children. This would not even provide for cost of living allowances and will result in a net reduction of 20,000 children currently being served. This successful program, now serving only 20 percent of those eligible, requires $50 million just to stay even —in view of additional costs induced by the federally mandated increases in minimum wages, FICA, utility costs, and the like."

—"The real present and future security of this nation lies less with the military than with the health and stability of American children and families. It is time the budget reflect this common sense fact. Parents and others who care about children, widows and families, must let the Carter Administration and Congress know that while we support a strong military, we support equally strong children and families. We demand a fair balance between these important national needs and if we must choose, then children...should come first."

—The Fund is critical of President Carter's proposal to cut $16 million out of the children's inoculation program but increasing the anti-flu inoculation budget. "This proposal occurs despite the fact that the inoculation programs are beginning to reverse the recent downtrend in immunizations for polio and tetanus, while the federal flu program has a checkered history."

Officially, the Children's Defense Fund is a national public charity set up to provide a systematic and long-range advocacy on behalf of children.

Its goal: to place the needs of American children higher on the nation's public agenda.

Its first publication of 1979 is titled "It's Time to Stand Up for Your Children: A Parent's Guide to Child Advocacy."

The Fund also is setting up the first "National Children's Network" to give a voice to the needs of 64 million children who cannot vote but whose needs ought to be heard.

"We will continue to monitor federal policies, to research, investigate and publish reports in a variety of areas, to sue on behalf of individuals or classes of children," Edelman said, speaking of the Network.

"But we believe the issue now is to inform, mobilize and organize to accomplish what we know ought to be done for children."

She said the Fund will identify and coordinate an effective and flexible Children's Public Policy Network at the national, state and local levels.

"We will work with a core network of advocates around the country who in turn can reach a much larger netwrok of people in their states and commuunities to support specific goals for children over the next decade.

"Children are not a special interest. They are everybody's concern.

"Many labor, women's, religious, civil rights, and other civic groups have a long history of support for programs that benefit children and families.

"By joining forces more systematically, we will amass the strength to move children's issues higher on the public agenda."

Letters from parents and children are being sought on a continuing basis — telling about wrongs, and, if possible, how they can be corrected.

The Fund has set up a Post Office box for such letters. Anyone sending a letter should should address it this way: Children's Fund, P.O. Box 19085, Washington, D.C. 20036.

For those working in child advocacy or children's programs, per se, there is a tollfree number to call. This phone will be an information gathering and exchange point. The number is 800-424-9602.

Edelman cited some of the children's needs:

—Children without homes total over 500,000. They live various places, many inappropriate, including institutions. "We are willing to spend the least amount of money to keep a kid at home, more to put him in a foster home and the most to institutionalize him."

—Childcare and family support. An estimated 10 million children are in families with incomes below the poverty line. Over 7 million kids 6 to 11 and over 6 million under age 6, have mothers who work. There are licensed daycare slots only for about 10 percent of these.

"Children can't eat speeches and conferences or commission reports," Edelman said, referring in particular to conferences and such funded by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"Children need programs and money," she said.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I think it's safe to say that I lusted after a food processor for two years.

I wanted it to give birth to my zucchini, respond to my push-button control and flash those whirling blades just for me.

Being practical, however, I had to justify it. I told my husband the children would make better grades in school if their carrots were sliced uniformly. I told him no one would need glasses if we got the lumps out of the white sauce. And once I got the hang of how to use all the blades, I could take in potatoes to slice for profit.

He bought it. Literally.

The first week I dedicated my life to chopping, slicing and grating. I had bags of sliced tomatoes, bags of chopped onions, bags of diced peppers, bags of soups, bags of mushrooms, bags of ground meat, bags of bread dough and if they ever made a pizza the size of the Astrodome, I had the grated cheese for it.

My refrigerator looked like pillow city.

One morning, my husband opened the refrigerator door and shut it quickly. "What's that blob in there?"

"What blob?"

"The one that is restless."

"It's pureed lettuce."

It was clearly time to move on to the next plateau: sauces. I had bags of mayonnaise, bags of hollandaise sauce and bags of white sauce. Maybe it was a coincidence, but in moving a bag of lemon sauce one day I was struck with the similarity to the pouch I was carrying on my hips.

By the time I got to the chapter on breads, cakes, and cookies, I began getting complaints from the family. My husband said to me one afternoon, "I don't know how to tell you this, but I have never trusted anything ground up. Somehow I always feel they are hiding something by giving it another form."

"What are you trying to say?"

"I am sick of sipping salads through a straw. I cannot eat another thing that is chopped, sliced, diced, liquefied, mashed or grated."

"Maybe we could have another baby?" I asked brightly.

"Well, maybe just a little more pureed lettuce," he said, extending his plate.

Engagement Announced

Ms. Christine Wilson of Simpson announces the engagement of her daughter, Evelyn Varnell, to Pfc. Willie Eugene Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Roberson of Black Jack. The wedding will take place May 19.

Cooking Is Fun

APPLE RED CABBAGE

Its flavor is sweet and sour.

¼ cup butter or margarine
Medium onion, finely chopped (¾ cup)
5 cups firmly packed finely shredded red cabbage
Juice of 2 lemons
2 to 4 tablespoons sugar
2 cups thinly sliced pared apples
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

In a large saucepan or skillet gently cook the onion in the hot butter until golden. Add the remaining ingredients. Cover and cook gently, stirring occasionally, until cabbage is tender — about 30 minutes. Taste and correct the sweet-sour flavor to suit your own taste. Serve hot. Makes 6 servings.

The potato is one of the few vegetables that originated in the Western hemisphere. Potatoes were grown in England and continental Europe as a curiosity, but the Irish were the first to recognize their food value.

New nutritional plus for babies

DALLAS (UPI) — Research has revealed another nutritional advantage to breast feeding infants.

Biochemist Gary W. Evans says he and co-workers have identified a component in breast milk that may help babies who consume it absorb zinc more efficiently.

The component is pyridine-2-carboxylic acid, also called picolinic acid.

Evans said the discovery may help medical science in its study of a rare inherited disease, acrodermatitis enteropathica, that is sometimes fatal if it is not diagnosed and treated in time.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"Mother, I hope you don't clutter the house with your things," said Mrs. Marie Spain's daughter, when she started china painting some 15-16 years ago.

"That's just about what I have done," said Mrs. Spain. "Of course, my daughter now likes the things I have painted for her."

Mrs. Spain has painted three sets of china — giving one set each to her children and the third one she kept. The 12-place settings include a cup and saucer, dinner plate, bread and butter plate, soup bowl, dessert dish and plate. Her son's set has a different flower on each setting and her daughter's has a border design of pastel pansies, which is a copy of an old plate admired Mrs. Spain.

When beginning lessons in china painting Mrs. Spain went to a teacher and told her, "I don't have any talent, but I have a great desire to learn."

She started painting while living in Washington, D. C., where her late husband was administrative assistant to the late Congressman Herbert Bonner, the late Senator Clyde Hoey and Senator Sam Ervin Jr. The couple maintained their home in Greenville and she spent the summers here while their children were young. She says she has "made some very good friends through china painting in Greenville."

In telling of her beginning interest, Mrs. Spain recalled, "I had seen some things that other people had done and I hoped I could do it." She likes painting a big variety — jewelry, light switch covers, pictures, pitchers, bowls and platters, tea and chocolate sets, compotes, figurines, cookie jars, candy and trinket boxes, ash trays and vases.

"China painting is my favorite hobby. Over the years, the plain china has increased in price as the gold has — it can certainly be an expensive hobby, but it's a rewarding hobby, too. You feel a sense of accomplishment when something turns out good and right now it has filled up many lonely hours."

Husband Should Be Numero Uno

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I know that you have a twin sister. I have also heard that you are happily married.

Can you please tell me how the love you have for your husband compares with the love you have for your twin? Does you husband come first or second?

I married a twin, and I would not recommend it to anyone. My wife's twin sister came first with her, which is why are are no longer married. I am now married to a woman who has no twin, thank God. What a difference!

Please be honest with me.

G.G. IN SCRANTON, PA.

DEAR G.G.: When a person marries, the spouse is (or should be) Numero Uno! At lease that's the way it is at MY house.

DEAR ABBY: I work in the office of a fairly large company located about four miles from my home, so I often bike to work. When I do, I wear tennis shorts and carry my work clothes in a back pack.

When I'm early, I have a cup of coffee with some of the other early arrivers while I'm still in my tennis shorts.

After four months of this routine, my supervisor called me into her office and told me it was very "unprofessional" for me to be standing around in tennis shorts, and I was not to do it anymore!

I told her that as long as I didn't WORK in tennis shorts I saw nothing wrong with it, and I intended to continue. She looked me in the eye and said, threateningly, "We shall see!"

I'm not sure of what she meant by that, but since when can a supervisor tell an employee what to wear to work? You opinion is needed.

IRKED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR IRKED: What you wear to work is your own business, but once you enter the building, what you wear in the presence of your co-workers becomes the business of your supervisor. Remember, too much exposure can be hazardous to your health—and your job!

DEAR ABBY: I have a complicated problem. My grades were too bad to pass this year so I quit high school, intending to go back next year to do it right.

My father got mad at me for dropping out and he's using that as an excuse for not letting me use his car.

Abby, I need a car to get a job. Once I earn some money I'll get my own car. My father refuses to let me use his because of this drop-out situation, so I am stuck. No car, no job, no money.

My father is unreasonable. Every time I bring up the fact that his refusal to let me use his car is the root of all my trouble, he gets mad and a fight starts.

What should I do?

NO WHEELS

DEAR NO: I'll tell you what NOT to do. Don't expect your father to provide you with a car. Figure out some way to get a job on your own and to furnish your own transportation. How about public transportation? It may not be as convenient as having your own wheels, but it's a solution.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday my children and I were in a doctor's office. A boy about 4 was there, running wild. He beat on the furniture and kicked the door, then attacked the other patients—children and adults alike—shouting the whole time that he wanted to fight.

I couldn't believe my eyes. His mother was nowhere in sight. Another patient and I tried to subdue the child. We learned that his mother was down the hall in another waiting room, so I took the boy by the arm and found his mother. When I told her that her child had been tearing up the waiting room and hitting people, she barely looked up from her magazine and said tersely, "He is just fine!"

Needless to say, I was stunned. I then better understood the boy's behavior and actually felt sorry for him for having such an unconcerned mother.

What should I have done? I'm completely confused.

BEWILDERED IN DAYTON

DEAR BEWILDERED: You should have asked the doctor's nurse to handle it. The mother, the child, or possibly both, have serious problems. Such aggressive, anti-social behavior as the child exhibited is a symptom of a serious mental problem. The mother may have been acting under doctor's orders (ignoring the outbursts) instead of being "unconcerned."

CONFIDENTIAL TO MARY L. IN LA JOLLA: Anyone who maintains that he's too old for "love stuff" either is or may as well be.

Have a question or comment for Abby? Address: Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal reply, include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Wedding bells in your future? Whether your lifestyle is bridal gown or blue jeans, Abby lays it all out for you in her booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Small Progress For Chavez' Farmworkers

By STEVEN CAPPS

SALINAS, Calif. (UPI) — The women's faces are hidden behind pastel scarves worn for protection against the morning cold, afternoon sun and insecticide dust. Men wear hats with brightly colored bandanas trailing behind.

The morning mist combines with the field dirt settling on the huge leaves of the knee-high cauliflower plants and turns to mud that trickles down the yellow rain pants of the pickers as they make their way down the neat rows.

Stooping to get at the ground-level vegetables, a picker chops off a yellow head with a square-ended knife, trims off the excess leaves and places the head in a box on a tractor-pulled trailer following him through the field.

That is the scene today. It could have been the same nine years ago, when Cesar Chavez' United Farm Workers Union walked out of California fields in its first lettuce and cauliflower strike.

Despite the presence of the UFW, the rewards of this labor haven't changed much.

In 1970, lettuce and cauliflower cutters made $1.65 an hour. Chavez' union, seeking to better the figure, launched its strike against growers and later signed its first contract with them.

Today, lettuce workers make about $3.75 an hour. But it's still not enough, in the eyes of the union and in the bellies of its members.

Harvesters are only able to work full shifts during the peak harvest period, May through September in Salinas. Income thus remains on the low end of the organized labor scale — and frequently dips far below the official poverty line.

The UFW says the average income of their members is $6,000 a year or $700 below the federal government's poverty level for a couple with three children.

The union has called another strike this harvest season, its longest to date. The UFW today wants benefits as well as fatter paychecks and has turned down offers of $5.25 per hour because there wasn't enough in the overall package.

Violence flared during lettuce harvest this spring in the Imperial Valley between union pickets and field supervisors. One picket died in that round of confrontation. Now the trouble is moving north with the harvest.

Mrs. Rivera, 30, has worked in Salinas Valley sheds wrapping lettuce — among the most tedious harvest jobs — and knows what it was like before the UFW organized.

"You would show up at work," she said, "and if you had some complaint, they would say, 'Just go complain at your own house and take off.' They give you your check. You're fired. We had a lot of that until the union came."

Lotte Marcus, founder of an educational program to teach English to Salinas area farm workers, also has watched the UFW since it was formed in 1962.

"There has been some improvement but the struggle continues," she said. "I don't distinguish farm workers' problems from any other poverty problems in this country. The farm workers' struggle is connected to education, work, health, housing and immigration."

Initial organizing efforts by the UFW were hampered by the transitory nature of farm work. Migrant workers would often travel from harvest point to harvest point, following the farmers' needs for labor.

But more and more former migrant workers seem to be settling down.

They have settled in places like Hebbron Heights, the Spanish-speaking barrio of Salinas. Crowded houses with peeling paint line the streets. Children play in dirt yards. There are few green plants to remind residents they live in one of California's lushest agricultural areas.

Some others live in Mexico and, after receiving work permits by the U.S. government, travel north to join the harvest in California, where their poverty-level pay is nevertheless far in excess of their earnings at home.

"Yes, it's true," said Mrs. Marcus, "there are fewer migrants. Housing is so costly they can't afford to move their families. It's not because life is better for them, not because they are participating more in society."

William Friedland, a professor of community studies and sociology at the nearby University of California's Santa Cruz campus, also said migrant workers are slowly disappearing. He said they comprise 15 to 30 percent of the total farm labor force.

"They're settling down in the Salinas area and using it as a base," said Friedland, considered an expert on California's farm workers. "Then they follow the crops but leave their families behind."

A recent report by the state Economic Development Department showed 6,385 adult workers stayed at the 25 state-operated Migrant Family Housing Centers throughout California last year.

The report said 5,442 children came with their parents; 42.3 percent said their home base was Mexico, and 97.9 percent listed their nationality as Mexican or Mexican-American.

The report said the average income for a family of five was $5,551; for a family of six, $5,893; and for a family of seven, $6,472 — all below the poverty level by at least $1,100.

Friedland said those statistics do not reflect all the migrants that work in California's vineyards, vegetable fields and orchards.

"You have to remember that you have all kinds of crazy living arrangements for the migrants," he said. "They just don't live in those (state-operated) places. Some owners provide housing, some of the migrants rent and some even 'ditch-bank' (live on the banks of irrigation ditches)," he said.

Employers argue that farm workers can be paid well if they stick with so-called contract work where pay is tied to production and they travel with the crops. Earnings can go as high as $12 an hour, company spokesmen have said.

"The point is," said Friedland, "you don't earn that kind of money on a year-around basis. They are just citing the peak daily earnings during the harvest."

Alfonso Salazar, 31, is married with two children. He has refused to cross picket lines in Salinas to work this season.

"The strike will help," he said.

"If it works for other unions, it will work for us," said Flavio Alejo, 35.

But not everyone in the work force follows the union lead. Enough non-union help was found in the Imperial Valley, 400 miles south, to bring in a harvest producing record profits for growers.

In Salinas, Carlos Perez, 43, also intended to keep working as a driver for Bruce Church Inc., one of the Salinas Companies hit by the strike. He said his family came first.

"But they threatened me," he said. "The strikers told me not to go against the strike. I stopped working."

After 14 years as a crop irrigator and the last two years as a driver, Perez was paid $4.50 an hour last year. He is in the process of buying the two-bedroom home where he lives with his wife and three children.

"I had my savings we've been living on but it's run out," he said. He paid bills in April with his $500 tax refund but is uncertain how he will meet May's expenses.

"My intention is not to lose my home but if I am without a job too much longer, I might. I've put my application in at several companies that are not on strike. I hope to start working by the end of the month."

Safety Program In Lab Research

By JACK STILLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A relic of the nation's early space program has become an important part of a safety system to protect researchers who work in isolation laboratories at the National Center for Disease Control.

Some experiment with exotic diseases for which there is no vaccine or any known treatment.

In the event that they are exposed, the CDC has designed an elaborate system for their care without endangering doctors, nurses or the community.

The mobile home was used in the U.S. Apollo space program to isolate crewmen returning from the moon. It has been modified to provide additional safety precautions.

Although it has never been used by the CDC, it is kept in readiness.

The mobile home is part of a system, said Dr. John Richardson, director of the CDC's office of biosafety. For instance, a researcher exposed to the risks of Lassa fever would not be whisked the 25 miles to Lawrenceville by ambulance or taxicab. He would be moved in a special van, a smaller isolation transport unit.

To get to the van, he would be carried in a sealed, plastic envelope.

The CDC conducts research in several exotic diseases — all of which are extremely contagious viruses, said Richardson.

"All are exotic, in that they don't naturally occur in this country," he said. "All are serious, in that they are all life threatening and there is no vaccine or specific treatment."

Besides Lassa fever, they include Ebola fever and Marburg fever, all of which are known mostly in Africa.

Although the isolation unit can be transported, Richardson said there were no plans to move it.

"It will remain here," he said. "The doctors, nurses and others needed to treat the patient will be brought here."

The threat of exposure to the community is small, he said.

The patient would be isolated for twice the time of the incubation period of the virus — usually about three weeks.

A doctor entering the isolation capsule would first go through an air chamber, where he would change into plastic clothing with a mechanical breathing device.

"If there were more than one person, there would be a lot of togetherness," Richardson said. The unit can adequately house four persons.

The mobile home has a lounge, office, bedroom, bath and a fully equipped kitchen.

Young U.S. Chefs Show Can Equal Europeans

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

One guest called the last course "a Norman Rockwell dessert."

Everybody applauded it — and gobbled it up.

The dessert in question consisted of miniature hand-made chocolate cottages filled with fresh strawberries and surrounded by coconut shreds tinted grass green. As waiters ladled hot strawberry-Grand Marnier sauce over the chocolate, it melted into a devastatingly delicious mess.

The Cajun Cottages were a spectacular ending to a spectacular American regional dinner, one of six private showcase meals staged in New York City under the auspices of The International Review of Food & Wine, a monthly magazine, to mark its first anniversary.

The event was organized by La Jeune Gastronomie Inc. (The Young Gastronomy) to give talented young American chefs a chance to share ideas with their foreign counterparts, said Jack DuArte, a New Orleans sports promoter and a co-founder of the corporation.

The six participating chefs were Paul Prudhomme of New Orleans, Alice Waters of Berkeley, Calif., Henri and Gerard Charvet of Aix-en-Provence, France, Alain Dutournier of Paris and Pierangelo Cornaro of Bergamo, Italy.

The show-stopping dessert was conceived by Prudhomme and prepared by a seventh chef, Louie Vacher of Brennan's of Dallas.

DuArte said he and his two partners — Melvyn Master, a wine importer from San Francisco, and Pierre Hugo, a French silversmith and Victor Hugo's great grandson — hope to hold a similar event in Europe in the near future, working with a French culinary periodical.

The dinner was planned and prepared by Prudhomme, executive chef for five restaurants in New Orleans, Dallas, Houston and Atlanta.

It was billed as a break with tradition. It began with three types of peppery creole and cajun sausages with a marvelous mustard sauce and petit pains (little breads) flown in from New Orleans that morning. It went on to crawfish bisque and veal scallops with a souffle-like breading and oyster cream sauce.

A tiny glassful of fig sherbet separated the veal from the filet mignon debris. By then, most guests were so satiated they could only pick at the meltingly tender steak in a charred tasting brown sauce. In an interview, Prudhomme said the flavor was achieved by roasting beef bones and vegetables until the bones blackened and crumbled — thus, the name debris.

The first break with tradition was serving red wine with the first course, white with the second and third, and red wine again with the fourth.

But a white wine would have been overwhelmed by the spicy boudin, andouille and seafood smoked sausages. The Chateau Bouscaut 1974 was just right, despite its youth.

Boudin is a by-product of hog killing time in Louisiana. It uses up trimmings, with rice as a filler. Andouille are peppery pork sausages in chitterling casings. Seafood sausages are a spring specialty combining seasonal local seafood.

The crawfish in the bisque are another reminder of spring in creole and cajun country — the bayou area where chef Prudhomme was born.

He called his menu high creole. In an interview, Prudhomme and Miss Waters, talked about their culinary points of view.

Both are young (she is 34, he, 38), enthusiastic, self-taught and dedicated to the idea of lighter dishes that are either adaptive or break entirely new ground. They use fresh local ingredients prepared to order whenever possible.

Both said they hope to re-educate the palates of Americans accustomed to canned, frozen and other processed foods.

At 5-feet-2 and about 115 pounds, Miss Waters looks more like a college student than chef-proprietor of a restaurant, the 60-seat Chez Panisse in Berkeley.

Prudhomme is a large, jovial, bearded man who carries a silver-headed cane. His home base, Commander's Palace, seats 400 persons and can serve 1,400 meals daily.

Miss Waters' restaurant has a family style menu that offers no choices and changes daily. "Someone called (the menu) Franco-Californian," she said.

Prudhomme's specialties are Cajun and Creole food, adapted from rich and filling old-time recipes such as the gumbos, jambalayas and etouffees of his childhood in Opelousas, La.

Peppery Cajun fare was developed in the bayou country north and west of New Orleans by the Acadians who fled Nova Scotia in the 1800s for religious reasons. Creole cooking reflects the culinary heritages of Louisiana's general population: French, Spanish, African, Caribbean and, more recently, Sicilian, Prudhomme said.

"We probably make the only Creole gumbo without a roux. It's much lighter," he added. A roux is the butter-flour blend used to thicken, and to a lesser extent flavor, sauces and soups.

Gumbo is now more a soup than a main meal, DuArte said.

In Prudhomme's zeal to use mostly local products, he substitutes pecans for almonds in preparing trout with nut butter.

"Our food presents badly," he said. "Everything is cooked in the same pot and it looks messy although the flavor is great."

So he is developing spicy sauces to give the traditional flavor to cooked-to-order entrees. One example was the debris sauce with the filet mignon.

Miss Waters said she doesn't like to cook or eat very rich dinners, so her menus usually have just four courses: an hors d'oeuvre, soup or fish, an entree and dessert, often improvised on a French theme.

"We have a garlic festival every year," she said.

The highlight of the lunch she prepared for the New York event was baked Mexican red garlic, a whole head per guest. You punched the top with a fork and the cloves popped out, to be spread on crusty bread with sweet butter and goat cheese.

"Very mild," said one guest.

Miss Waters said Chez Panisse menus are printed a week in advance. That leads to entries such as: "Duck roasted and served with poached green figs (if available) ..."

Posting the menus in a window attracts staff as well as patrons, Miss Waters said: "Every day one or two persons drift by who want to become apprentices or work in the kitchen."

Jean-Pierre Moulle, a young French chef who had worked in a Washington, D.C., restaurant, was among those persons one day more than three years ago. He read the menu and asked for a job. He's been there ever since.

Data On Hymns Being Put Into Encyclopedia

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Bits of information are slowly coming together — the hymn titles, authors, country and date of origin and often the reason they came to be written.

It is for an encyclopedia of hymns being compiled by the Hymn Society of America, which has its principal office at Wittenberg University in Springfield, a school with roots in the Lutheran Church.

Alongside the encyclopedia, Professor Louis Voight is developing a concordance that alphabetically lists the first lines of hymns.

"Many people know a line of a song, but not the title or where to find it," he explains. "This way, we can find the song.

"We will list every hymn we can find in America and cross-reference it in a number of ways, from authors to denominations.

"But the basic body of the index will be an alphabetical list of first lines, authors, translators and code numbers on where to find the hymn books it appears in."

Voight says the Thomas Library at Wittenberg contains over 1,000 hymn books. "The people who started this thought they were well along when they had about 4,000 hymnals to work with," he said. "I found literally hundreds of books they never heard of.

"My guess is that there has been in the neighborhood of 10,000 hymn books published in the United States since the early days of this country. We have seen records of at least 6,000, maybe 7,000 of them and it's my guess there are many more."

Voigt said the only similar previous reference was Julian's Dictionary of Hymnology.

"It was done before the turn of the century," he explained. "It was an excellent reference on writers, hymns, church bodies, etc. But after the war the English authorities felt it needed updating.

"The American writers were not included and they asked to be put in the revised work. Eventually, we realized the English work wasn't coming off. It lacked resources.

"So the Americans got started on it...

"We indexed the hymn books in the Library of Congress first. Dr. Leonard Ellinswood was formerly with the library and is of immense help. The workers realized that many of the hymnals were not in that library. We had a catalogue of hymn books in the Thomas Library here and they asked us for help."

Voight, a professor of bibliography with the Hamma School of Theology at Wittenberg, was already into such research. He was put out of work last year when the Hamma school was abolished and some of its resources transferred to Columbus and combined with another seminary.

"But I decided to stay here," he said. "I'm having a ball."

Voight supports himself with a private income while he continues the unpaid labor of love for the hymnal dictionary and index.

While it has been a long time under way, Voight said officials of the society were beginning to push to finish it.

"They'd like to complete it in two or three years," he said. "My guess is it will take closer to five years."

Church-State Controversy Said Brewing

WASHINGTON (AP) — A church-state controversy was reported brewing this week over a proposed federal move to cut participation by church-related schools in a job-training program in which they have long participated.

Voicing "grave concern" about it, Bishop Thomas C. Kelly, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, sent detailed documentation about the move to all Catholic bishops in the country.

He cited preliminary steps by the labor department to draft new regulations against participation by church-related schools in the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, a job-training program in which they have participated since it began in the 1960s.

He said the proposed new labor department regulations were advised by the justice department in reaction to an American Civil Liberties Union lawsuit in Milwaukee against CETA participation by church schools.

Playing For High Stakes In The Oyster Business

By DICK BROWN
Fayetteville Observer

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — Walt Godwin plays for high stakes in the game of oysters along this section of the Carolina coast. Jobs hang in the balance.

Godwin is director of the southeastern section of the state Division of Marine Fisheries. His earnings, conservatively estimated at 10 to one on the dollar, go back into the public pocket, with oystermen like Carson Varnum and Robert Sutherland the major beneficiaries.

Transplanting and shell seeding shellfish are no-sweat propositions when played by Godwin's rules. The result is in the bag every time the crew of the Stone's Bay, a rehabilitated, self-propelled surplus barge, casts off its lines and heads for the "oyster rocks."

Godwin's oyster operations get under way somewhere at high tide among the meandering channels and shallow inlets that dot the southeastern coastline.

Operating from Little River north to Onslow County, Godwin directs North Carolina's first serious efforts to revitalize the flagging shellfish industry.

The eastern American oyster, scientifically known as Crassostrea Virginica, is the prime target. Results over the past few years have been little short of dramatic.

In 1966 the counties of Brunswick, New Hanover, Pender and Onslow reported total oyster production of approximately 78,000 bushels. Eleven years later the figure had dipped to an alltime low of just under 19,000 bushels.

Today, thanks to new techniques and equipment developed by Godwin and fellow marine biologists, the oyster is once again coming into its own as a vital part of North Carolina's marine economy.

Godwin says his has been an uphill fight primarily because of limited money. He says the potential of a quarter of a million bushels per year oyster harvest makes his efforts worthwhile.

"That's a conservative estimate, based on surveys of just seven out of 10 known and available oyster beds" Godwin said. "I firmly believe North Carolina has the potential resources to become the nation's number one oyster producing state if we can continue and expand our present programs."

Primarily Godwin and his crew of biologists are involved in moving live oysters from polluted waters and transplanting them in clean areas where they can become a harvestable commodity in a matter of months.

Utilizing a homemade "seed-oyster head" constructed primarily from a hay baler, the fishery crews comb known oyster rocks in rivers and creeks such as the Shallotte and Dutchman.

The "head," a steel square measuring some three feet by three feet, contains 12 rows of flexible steel tines attached to a pair of cylinders rotated by a chain drive, underwater hydraulic motor. The box slides on steel runners over the bottom with the tines raking the live oysters and shells from the rocks and depositing them onto a conveyor belt.

The conveyor drops the oysters onto a smaller barge that is towed alongside the Stones Bay. Its load is then transported to clean-water areas and washed overboard with high-pressure hoses.

"We can transplant up to 1,000 bushels per day under ideal conditions with the proper equipment," Godwin said, "and oysters from pollutted waters, replanted this spring, will be ready for harvest next fall."

In just over 20 hours of work last April and May on the Shallotte River in Brunswick County Godwin's crew harvested and relocated 5,250 bushels of oysters at a total average cost of 50 cents per bushel.

These replants were ready for this season's market and represented a commercial return of better than 10 to one on the state's investment.

Oystermen like Southerland and Varnum are enthusiastic over the oyster-seeding projects.

"It can mean the difference between success and failure for us," Varnum, a long time Brunswick County oyster and clam dealer, said. "We know what the potential is now, and, if the state will provide the necessary support, the oyster trade can once again become a major source of income."

The work out of Wrightsville Beach is in reality a two-pronged effort. The summer months are spent in shell planting, a slower but equally effective method of increasing oyster yields.

Here the same equipment is utilized to dump tons of shell clutch which form new beds in pollution-free waters. This provides a haven for the spat, or baby oysters which will grow to marketable size in a two-to-three year period.

"The time lag is the biggest drawback to the shell clutch process," Godwin said. "It makes the plantings highly susceptible to damage from both natural and man-made environmental changes.

"On the other hand the transplanting of the live oyster produces a crop that can be harvested and sent to market within a few months."

As matters now stand, financial support is the major obstacle to continued success of the shellfish program.

"Our equipment is old and badly worn," Godwin said, "and with our present budget we are unable to replace to expand. We badly need a second planting barge and we could use a shallow-draft mother vessel to enable us to work some of the areas that are presently unavailable."

With neighboring Virginia investing over a million dollars to develop its shellfish resources, and other east coast states budgeting large sums for similar programs, North Carolina appears to have a decision to make.

"Our folks are doing a remarkable job on what they have to work with," Jim Sutherland of Laurinburg, a member of the state Advisory Commission on Marine Fisheries, said.

"However, more help is badly needed. We know the potential exists and the dollar return on the state's investment so attractive that it becomes a virtual necessity to see that the program is adequately supported."

Neighborhood Power Is Through Little City Halls

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A generation or two ago, you could solve day to day problems in many American cities by calling your political party's precinct captain or your councilman. Garbage would be picked up, snow cleared, an aging parent taken to the doctor. All that was asked in return was your vote.

No more. Now the councilman won't return calls and if there is a precinct captain, you can't find out his name. The cop who stood on the corner is tooling around in a squad car on the other side of town. Try to get some information from the Hall of Records and they'll tell you the computer is down.

"From the neighborhood, City Hall may seem as distant as Capitol Hill," a presidential commission on neighborhoods reported recently. One conclusion: officials have to restore faith in government in the face of increasing public antagonism.

One way may be neighborhood power. More and more cities, large and small, are trying to decentralize. In Boston, Atlanta, New York, they've had little city halls in neighborhoods for a decade. In cities like Norfolk, Va., and Independence, Mo., neighborhood centers provide places to take requests, gripes or problems.

What neighborhood councils or centers can do, government professionals agree, is make urban living more personal. Giving a neighborhood control over routine can restore some of the atmosphere of small town living. "Government has to change with the times," says Gordon von Stroh, head of Denver University's School of Public Management. "This is one of the ways to respond."

Immigrants created neighborhoods such as Boston's South End, New York's Lower East Side, San Francisco's Chinatown, Chicago's North Side. They're communities where people from Ireland or Italy or Poland or China or Russia found people who spoke their language; priests, ministers, rabbis aware of their needs; uncles, aunts, sisters, brothers, cousins who had taken an earlier boat.

"Seen as a country," said the presidential commission, "America might appear to be a melting pot. Seen from the perspective of neighborhoods, it was, and is, a mosaic, one nation of many differing neighborhoods, its essential unity strengthened by rich diversity.

"The neighborhood movement represents a demand for self government in the daily lives of people ... It represents a demand for returning to the residents of neighborhoods the capacity for effective influence and policy-making."

Nowhere is neighborhood power more alive than in Independence, Mo., a city of more than 100,000, where 39 neighborhood councils control services ranging from trash removal and tree planting to health care and foster home placement. The councils are run by volunteers, using about $550,000 a year in state, federal and private foundation money.

As in many cities, community organizations in Independence have come together over issues. But the program tries to turn issue coalitions into permanent fixtures.

In a blue collar neighborhood, for example, a tavern was planned for a busy street with little parking. Residents worried about traffic congestion and drunks. With the backing of the neighborhood group, a petition drive ended with the city council turning down the tavern's license request.

But it's not always protest that brings neighborhoods together. Last spring, Independence's neighborhood councils ran "Project Plowshare," a gardening and beautification program in which two-thirds of the neighborhoods took part.

And in a southwest Independence neighborhood with many elderly residents, the councils started a cardio-pulmonary first aid program. Thirty-three people in the neighborhood's 900 households now are certified in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation.

A third of the Independence residents engage in council activity each year, and more than 10 percent are enrolled in neighborhood organizations. Meetings are once a month and, to encourage family participation, any member over 12 can vote.

In larger cities, decentralization stems from political pressure, often racial divisions, a fact noted in the presidential commission's report, which found that racial minorities most often felt themselves cut off from government.

Boston's little city halls were started by Mayor Kevin White when he was first elected in 1968. There are 18 now, in storefronts, office buildings, or conspicuously parked house trailers. They operate on a budget of $1.4 million. Last year, they handled more than 700,000 complaints, many about day-to-day hassles like pot holes, clogged storm drains, dirty streets and abandoned cars.

But they also have been used for political action. The East Boston branch helped mobilize opposition to the expansion of nearby Logan International Airport. In the South End and in Roxbury, they fought against contruction of an interstate highway.

New York also has tried decentralization in other areas, notably school administration, where elected local boards now determine many policies. There also are neighborhood advisory committees on urban planning, welfare, hospitals, mental health and urban renewal.

In the end, says the presidential commission, neighborhood power may be one answer to the nation's frustration with government.

"It represents a demand for self government in the daily lives of people as well as in the dry abstractions of the law," the commission reported. "It represents a demand for returning to the residents of neighborhoods the capacity for effective influence and policy-making. It represents a demand for de-bureaucratizing America."

Combatting Swine Fever

ROME (AP) — For the second time in a decade, countries in the Western Hemisphere are battling an invasion of African swine fever which threatens the region's pig industry, reports the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

The FAO has allocated more than a million dollars to the 11 countries affected or threatened. The money will assist in establishing laboratory and technical facilities for controlling the disease and for the training of veterinary personnel.

Brazil and the Dominican Republic have been hit directly, while Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Haiti, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela are struggling to prevent the disease from spreading into their areas, the FAO says.

African swine fever is a highly virulent disease with a high mortality rate among pigs. No vaccine or treatment exists. The only remedy is to destroy all infected animals, bury the carcasses, disinfect the affected areas and apply quarantine measures against its spread. Human beings are not affected.

African swine fever has been prevalent for the last two decades in Portugal and Spain, the FAO says. It appeared for the first time in both Malta and Sardinia in 1978. An outbreak in Cuba in 1971 was successfully contained and the disease eradicated there.

It is suspected that the disease was introduced into Latin America via commercial airliners from an affected country. Virus-infected leftover food from passengers' lunches, instead of being disposed of properly, was apparently fed to the pigs as swill, infecting them.

Hunting Has A Hall Of Fame

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — The Hunting Hall of Fame, a national museum dedicated to hunters and hunting conservation, will be located at Pueblo Memorial Airport.

K.W. Vaughn, president of the Hunting Hall of Fame Foundation, said foundation business headquarters, however, would remain at Rancho Sante Fe, Calif.

Isolated By Rockslide

By BARBARA RIEGELHAUPT
Associated Press Writer

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — No one in this picturesque seaside community minds the small town intimacy forced on the area by a rockslide that has closed the main road from Los Angeles. But the isolation is another matter.

"None of my employees can get in unless I go pick them up," said Judy Johnston, manager of a fast food hamburger restaurant that lost $10,000 in business last week. "I'm frustrated. And even when the road does open, will my employees still be around?"

Two weeks ago, the hillside overlooking the Pacific Coast Highway burst loose, sending tons of boulders and rocks down onto the road. The state Department of Transportation closed a 5½-mile stretch of the route after four motorists suffered minor injuries from rocks that crashed through their windshields.

Most of that road was later reopened, but a 500-foot stretch remains closed. Surrounded on one side by the 150-foot cliff and on the other by the sea, the road is impassable.

The debris has continued to trickle down the hillside, and geologists say they expect the hillside to tumble into the sea, destroying six $500,000 homes and an apartment building.

Shifting earth is not uncommon for the irregular terrain of Southern California, and as the rocks tumbled from Pacific Coast Highway, two other areas were trembling.

In Rancho Palos Verdes, 30 miles south of Malibu and the scene of a major landslide that destroyed or damaged 150 homes in the 1950s, new cracks began opening last spring. And farther south, in Laguna Beach's Bluebird Canyon, two more $150,000 homes fell victim to the same slow slide Monday that destroyed more than 30 homes last fall.

But those are residential neighborhoods and the problems — though serious — affect only the few residents in the area.

Malibu, a popular tourist area known for its beaches, is cut off from the world just as the summer season is getting underway.

Businesses along Pacific Coast Highway are devastated — customers are down 95 percent at some restaurants, with losses estimated at between $10,000 to $25,000 per week. One seafood spot had more than 50 reservations for Easter Sunday; all were cancelled.

The residents, many of whom work southeast of the slide area in Santa Monica, about 10 miles away, must either drive a circuitous mountain road 30 miles out of their way or walk past the slide area to the cars they left parked overnight on the other side.

"Every time we open our doors in the morning, it costs at least $1,500," said Connie Spiros, co-owner of the 680-capacity Sea Lion Restaurant, whose huge picture windows face the Pacific Ocean. "We employ 77 people, but look around today — it's incredible."

The restaurant was empty. One of the two waitresses working, who said waiting lists are common at lunchtime, said only 13 checks were written by dinnertime the day before.

He's scheduled a meeting of Malibu businessmen at his oceanside restaurant Monday and hopes to work out a plan for publicizing alternate routes to the area.

"Instead of yelling and screaming, we have to let the disaster work for us," said Yuro, who had 65 employees but is now back to "a momma-and-poppa" operation. "I want to get people to support the community and go out of their way to get here. And I want to make it interesting to come here."

To encourage them, Yuro wants the community to sponsor "Malibucks" — providing $12 worth of food and fun for only $10 in Malibucks. He wants the creation of a carnival on weekends, with magicians, mimes and other entertainers walking the streets and beaches.

"We're thinking of chartering buses to leave the (San Fernando) Valley or Hollywood to bring people to Alice's for brunch, and then they can go to the beach for the day," Yuro said. "We'll have a couple of social directors out there with them and then we'll drive them back in the afternoon. They won't have to worry about the traffic.

"I think it can bring the community together," he said.

Most residents, however, won't be satisfied with any solution that fails to open at least two lanes of the highway. It is a mostly two lane road, but is four lanes at the point that is closed.

For now, residents walk single file along a narrow pedestrian path left open when the transportation department built a chain-link fence around the slide area.

"Right now, there's a spirit of goodwill and it's almost fun," said Thomas McDonald, after he parked his car on the south side of the slide and began the 1½-mile walk home. "All the wives come down early to drop their husbands off, and it's not an unpleasant walk in the morning.

"But solutions that extend out for a month are going to change the attitudes," continued McDonald, a Hughes Aircraft employee.

Quick Turnaround Freighters Do Work Of 3 Ships

By JIM MORRIS

ABOARD THE BARBER TOBA (UPI) — No more brawling, hard-drinking sailors headed ashore for fun — at least they won't be found on the new model tramp freighters the owners prefer to call cargo ships, "SuperCarriers," in fact.

The end of the rough and tumble stereotype of the merchant mariner is simple to explain. These freighters aren't in port long enough for any shore leave to speak of.

A 750-foot-long SuperCarrier of the Barber Blue Seas line, can enter port, unload cargo and be under way in less than 12 hours — all with what for so large a vessel is a skeleton crew of 27.

That makes for a profitable voyage for the ships' owners, but little or no shore leave.

"Oh, you still see sailors in all the bars that are around docks," said Robert Pouch, president of Barber Steamship Lines, the company's American agent. "But they aren't any of our guys."

The absense of shore leave is made up for, in part by individual staterooms that resemble economy motel rooms for the crew. And crewmen dine along with the ship's officers from a long buffet table. They also have a small swimming pool.

The ships — two are in service now, with four more scheduled to be commissioned in the next four months — have both the features of "RoRos," which handle roll-on, roll-off cargo such as automobiles, and those of the newer container ships.

A 40-ton-capacity deck crane and a massive cargo ramp attached to the stern facilitate unloading and loading. The stern ramp, which gives the vessel a strange appearance, becomes a two-lane highway for truck cargo when lowered to a dock.

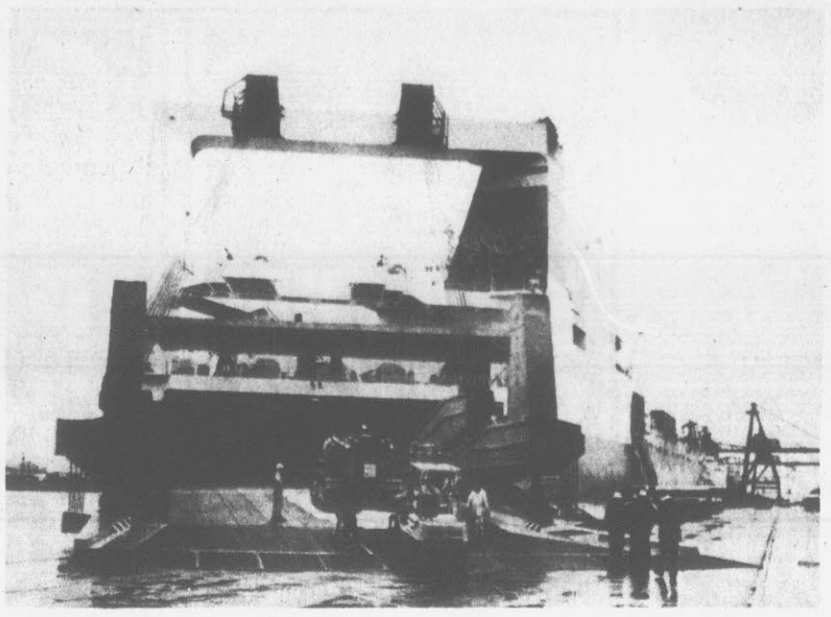
The result is a fleet of floating warehouses that "represent probably the ultimate in current development of intermodal transport," said Barber Blue Sea President Ivar Lovald.



SUPERCARRIER — Stern ramp unfolded by Barber Toba becomes a two-lane dockside highway for cargo-handling. Supercarrier, built in Kobe, Japan at a cost of $32 million, made its maiden voyage last month. (UPI Photo)

The Barber Toba — the first of the six ships owned by the Norwegian, Swedish and British consortium — sailed into Baltimore the second week of March on its maiden voyage from Kobe, Japan.

It reached the city's port complex shortly after noon. By 9 p.m., more than 700 Japanese-made automobiles and 50 containers the size of railroad cars had been unloaded. The ship was on its way to New York by midnight.

There is no hold in the conventional sense. Rolling stock — cars, school buses, even two 40-foot yachts — are driven to the ship's third deck by way of that two-lane highway cargo ramp.

Containers, which have been used in cargo shipping for about 17 years, are secured by steel cables on the fourth deck.

The SuperCarriers are expected to do the work of three ships at a time, said Pouch, who as the line's U.S. agent is concerned with filling the vessels with cargo once they reach American ports.

In all, more than 1,800 containers, 400 automobiles and two million cubic feet of baled cargo can be shipped on the Barber Toba. The cargo compares with the company's next largest vessels. They carry between 800 and 1,000 containers.

"Right now, the Barber Toba is sold out for the next six months," Pouch said. "When this ship leaves New York for the Middle East, we'll be filled. It's one of our most profitable markets. They will take anything we can send."

The Barber Toba cost $32 million to build at the Kobe shipyard. Construction took nine months, with the ship's officers overseeing the final stages.

The bridge of the Barber Toba looks more like the flight deck of a jetliner than it does a ship. Radar discloses not only the position of the land and nearby ships, but can even plot the course of other vessels in the area.

The ship's engine room looks more like a laboratory than the legendary home of oil-splattered sailors. Oil temperatures and pressures engine conditions are automatically checked, and an engineer may visit for only a few hours each day.

The bridge is manned around the clock, but about the only recognizable piece of equipment is an old-fashioned helmsman's wheel that stands in the middle of fluorescent red and green lights.

But the new technology has not made for a new breed of sailors, said Barber Toba Capt. Harald Lovik.

"All the computer systems, they are backed up by the conventional systems," said Lovik, who has been at sea 25 years with Norwegian ships. "These computers and satellites cannot do the work of a sailor. A captain still has to have all the nautical skills."

Lovik, 44, went to sea on freighters when he was 19 years old. He commanded two conventional container ships before being assigned to the Barber Toba, but, surprisingly, finds little difference between the two.

"The ships handle about the same. The first few times, you have trouble learning to dock, but we had no trouble on the way over from Japan," he said.

It is a good life for Lovik and other officers on the ship, most of whom are on board for six months, then on shore for three. Company officials will not disclose salaries, but a source said the captain of a ship such as the Barber Toba earns in excess of $75,000.

Other officers are apparently paid well, too. Radio Officer Donald Larsen talked of buying an American luxury car that, with import duties imposed in Norway, would cost him twice its $15,000 price.

Crew members — all Norwegian, with the exception of two Japanese natives who signed on in Kobe — might make up to $20,000. They also spend all but about three months a year on board ship.

The limited time in port makes it necessary to have adequate recreational facilities. Sailors on the Barber Toba can use a swimming pool, movie lounge and recreational room during their off hours. When the ship is cruising near shore, two large color television sets can be used.

But it is no nine-to-five job. "These guys work their butts off during the day," said Pouch, the company executive. "When they're at sea, they work from about 8:30 to about 5 p.m. But they arrive in port at all times of the night, and they'll often end up working 18-hour days."

Has ths new breed of ships taken the romance out of the sea?

Six Great World Fragrances Inspired By One Family...

Behind all of this is something rather unique. The House of Guerlain. It is the only perfume company in the world to remain in the same family for 150 years.

Impériale. It's creation, in 1861, paid homage to the Empress Eugénie. A dry, invigorating fragrance that quickens the pulse, freshens the spirit. A unique fragrance that can be used by men and women.

L'Heure Bleue. Introduced in 1912 and named for the twilight. It's a profoundly touching scent, the kind that creates deep, deep memories.

Mitsouko. With the infatuation of the Far East, Mitsouko was born in the early 1920's. An oriental word signifying mystery and evoking the image of the beauty and mystery of woman.

Shalimar. The fragrance that captured Paris in 1925. An absolute masterpiece; heady, as exciting and intoxicating as Prohibition itself. Inspired by a man's love for a woman, it's an incomparable classic.

Habit Rouge. An altogether unique masculine scent developed in 1965. It means "hunting coat" and is a fragrance that is bold and direct, clear and bright.

Chamade. Yet another great perfume emerges in 1969. It was created for the liberated woman. It's unabashedly female - rich and heady, and a little coy, too.

Piedmont, Mountain Plants Thrive In East

Text And Photos By Carol Tyer

There are certain north-facing slopes in Eastern North Carolina which have plant life, and possibly some animal life, characteristic of the Piedmont and Mountain areas of the state.

In these areas along the southern banks of the four principal Coastal Plains rivers — the Tar, the Roanoke, the Neuse and the Cape Fear — and their tributaries are found beech trees, mountain laurel, edible-fruit pawpaws and lovely yet tiny white wind-flowers, to name a few. All of these, with the exception possibly of beech, are almost never found east of the Fall Line generally thought of as the divider between the Piedmont and the Coastal Plain. Good examples of these "disjunct communities" are found on the Tar River near Falkland and on the Roanoke River near Hamilton and Fort Branch.

There is much study left to be done, said Dr. Vincent Bellis of the East Carolina University Department of Biology, about why these assemblages of plants normally associated with other areas exist. Usually, though, he said the terrain is not unlike the hillier sections of the state. The sloping, sandy banks provide good drainage and the areas because they are steep, usually have not been cleared and cultivated. Often they've been used for garbage dumps, he said.

During a recent visit to the Fort Branch area, a Greenville group saw a number of plants atypical of a Coastal Plains woodland:

— hepatica or liverleaf or liverworth — This early-spring-blooming plant has flowers that are usually lavender, but sometimes white or rose. This plant occurs fairly often in the Coastal Plain, but is nevertheless characteristic of these Piedmont-Mountain disjunct communities, Dr. Bellis said.

— bloodroot — This poisonous rhizome with showy white flowers is "unusual and out of place" in the Coastal Plain, according to Mrs. Christine Wilton Helms, retired East Carolina University botany professor.

— trout lily or dogtooth violet — This one of the earliest of spring flowers has nodding yellow blooms and is usually found in open deciduous woodlands of the mountains and the Piedmont.

— Jack-in-the-Pulpit — This plant is found in a number of places in the East, but is also abundant in the Fort Branch woods. Some green, some maroon striped spathes (pulpits) were seen. It can be recognized by its pulpit and its three leaves.

— Green Dragon — Jack-in-the-Pulpit's cousin which has five or more leaves with a less conspicuous, but similar spathe and no flap over the spathe. It's more of a Piedmont plant than its cousin, Jack, Mrs. Helms said.

— Pawpaw — The variety found in these woods is the edible-fruit kind of the Piedmont. There is a coastal shrub that bears a fruit too seedy to eat, Mrs. Helms said.

— Laurel — Definitely a mountain plant, this shrub, however, is found in a number of places in Eastern N. C., including as far east as the Aurora area, Mrs. Helms said.

— Buckeye — Also called horse chestnut, this bush has beautiful blossoms, but poisonous brown seeds called buckeyes.

— Windflowers — These dainty anemones have been seen nowhere else in Eastern N. C. by Mrs. Helms.

— Maidenhair fern — This dainty fern is found nowhere else east of Orange County, Mrs. Helms said.

— Bladdernut — This bush with delicate white blooms has never been seen elsewhere in Eastern N. C. by Mrs. Helms, she indicated.

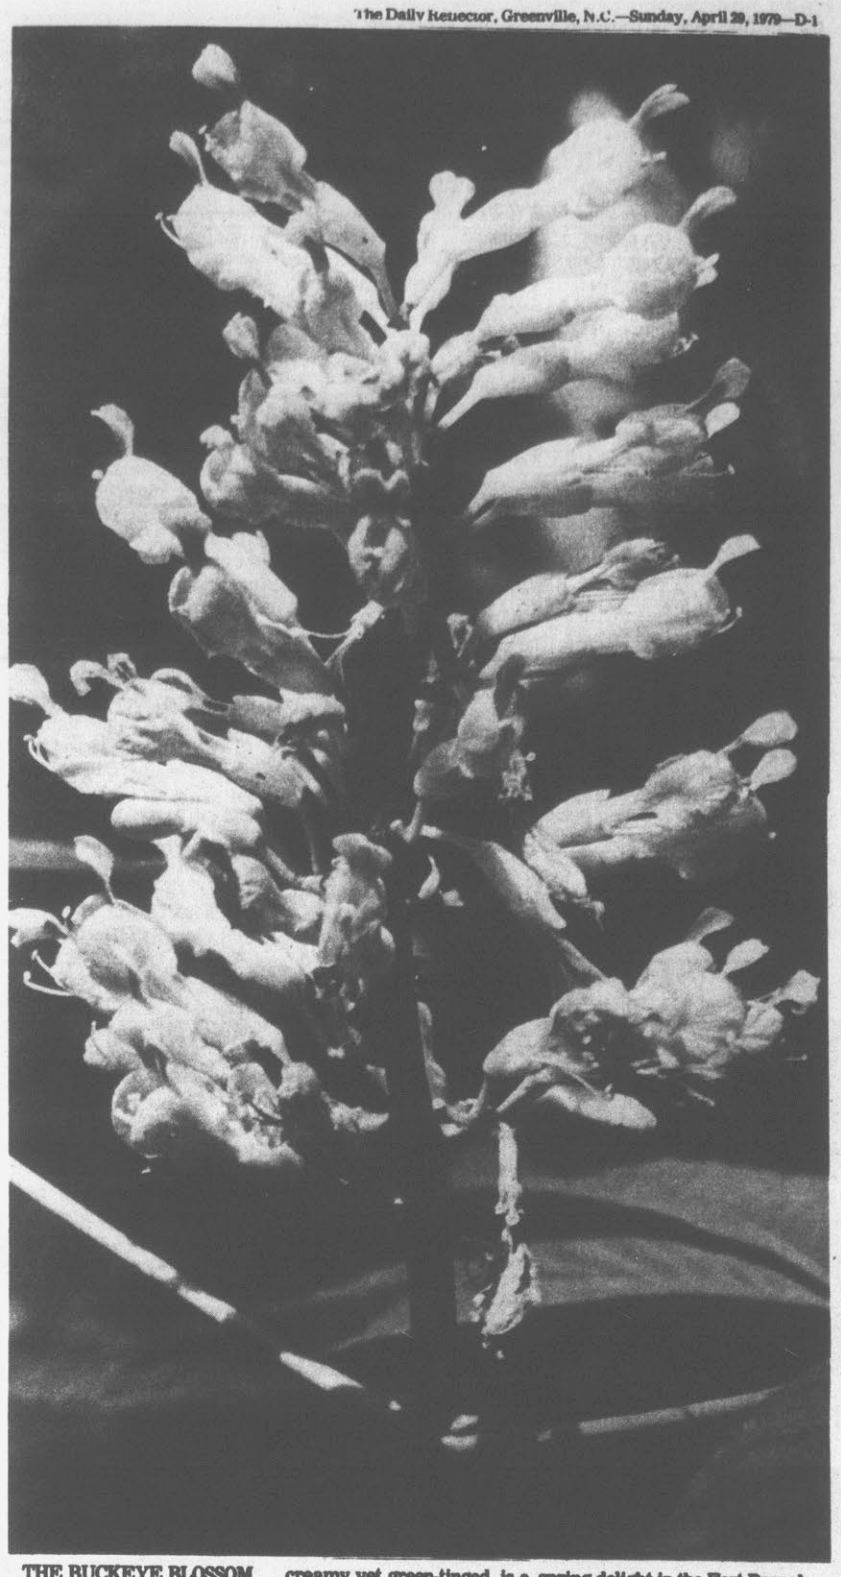
— Filberts — Also called hazelnut, this edible-nut tree grows at Fort Branch and is uncommon in the East.

Privately Owned

Dr. Bellis emphasized that the Fort Branch area is privately owned and should not be visited without the express permission of the owners.

Much scientific investigation may yet be done about disjunction communities, Dr. Bellis said. For instance, he said, it needs to be determined if plants found in these communities are still in genetic contact with their relatives in other areas or if they've been separated long enough for the development of traits that make them better suited to the differing climate and other conditions of the East.

Bellis is Eastern N. C. representative of the Natural Heritage Program, with headquarters in Raleigh. He said he and other Program representatives would like to hear from anyone who believes that his or her land or other areas known to him or her may have plants different from those usually found in this area. He may be contacted in care of the ECU Biology Department.



THE BUCKEYE BLOSSOM. . .,creamy yet green-tinged, is a spring delight in the Fort Branch woods. Also called the horse chestnut, this is a tall shrub generally found in the Piedmont.

HEPATICA,. . .also called both liverleaf and liverwort, may be seen in the Fort Branch area, though Mrs. Helms says it's not unknown elsewhere in the coastal plains.

"ISN'T THIS THE SWEETEST THING?!" . . .Mavis Alder exclaims over a delicate wind-flower, usually found only in the mountains and Piedmont.

AUTHORIZED DEALER CHRYSLER CORPORATION

The Chrysler 5/50 Protection Plan is the longest protection plan of any car maker in America. It protects you from unexpected power train repair bills for 5 years ... or 50,000 miles ... whichever comes first (from the time you take delivery of your vehicle). Plan not available in Nebraska.

Coverage includes cost of parts and labor for repair of major power train components: engine, transmission, transaxle, drive axles and drive shaft.

You pay only the first $50 for each covered repair.

All you are required to do is use your car or truck in a normal way and give it the routine maintenance called for in the Owner's Manual.

Chrysler 5/50 Protection also includes coverage for towing, car rental—even a toll free help-number. See your Chrysler-Plymouth dealer for full details.

The Chrysler 5/50 Protection Plan could pay for itself in your first visit to your dealer's service center.

Confidence in Chrysler engineering makes it possible for Chrysler Corporation to offer you the longest protection plan of any car maker in America ... longer than GM or Ford by two full years.

Great Expectations presents another chapter of
THE GOOD LIFE
$99,845
Nine weeks' gross sales*

During the nine weeks ending December 31, 1978, the Great Expectations store in a Miami shopping mall reached $99,845 in sales.

This store is owned by a businessman/franchisee who operates it on a part time basis (with a paid manager). He has no prior experience in our business. For perspective this volume would normally produce 30%–35% net, pre-tax profit.

Our Great "X" mall units nationally gross from 4 to 10 thousand dollars weekly with potential pre-tax profit margins from 23% to 35%.

If you would like to match your great expectations with ours, we'll show you how it can be done.

Vinyl siding is for happy, carefree homes

"IT LOOKS MORE LIKE WOOD than wood itself!" That's how one happy homeowner describes Vanguard vinyl siding from GAF, which combines space-age super-toughness with the traditional appearance of wood grained clapboard. Solid vinyl siding presents an unusually trim and neat appearance not only at the time of installation but for years afterwards with minimum maintenance. Unlike other sidings, vinyl never needs painting.

Vinyl siding is not for worriers, or dedicated housepainters. If, on the contrary, you are the kind of homeowner who likes peace and quiet, money in the bank, and a beautiful home that requires minimum maintenance year after year, then vinyl siding is for you.

Designed to fit the needs of the space age for a supertough material superior to previously known products, solid vinyl siding is acclaimed by happy homeowners as the most desirable new siding material in both new home construction as well as remodeling.

What are the advantages of vinyl siding? A typical example is GAF Corporation's Vanguard vinyl siding, reported to be resistant to the destructive forces which attack wood, corrode metals, and otherwise change and destroy commonly used building materials.

Compare vinyl with wood, for example. Vinyl siding is unaffected not only by the elements but also the destructive attacks of termites and vermin, as well as woodpeckers. Wood requires painting every few years at constantly increasing costs because of inflation.

Solid vinyl siding never needs painting, since the color is locked into the vinyl itself. The savings, over a period of twenty years, can help pay for a child's college education.

Do you like a house that looks good and stays neat and attractive year after year with a minimum of maintenance? Vinyl is obviously the siding for you.

Because the same uniform color is present throughout, vinyl will stay new-looking year after year. Since it is impervious to most liquids, it may actually be washed when necessary with mild soap and water to remove weathering marks, stains, bird droppings, dust, etc.

Pollutants, such as acids from automobile exhausts, which destroy metals and discolor other materials, have no effect on this wonder material of our time.

Do you like money in the bank? Consider this. The cost of installing vinyl siding is a one-time cost. After that, it becomes a saving. Aluminum will need painting after a while, especially in coastal areas where corrosion is an ever-present danger.

Wood looks beautiful when freshly painted. Unfortunately, it needs a fresh paint job every few years to maintain its pristine appearance, as well as to prevent rot and deterioration.

Why does vinyl siding look so neat? The craftsmanlike appearance of GAF Vanguard vinyl siding is based upon accurately formed panels with nailing slots at the top edge and a locking flange at the bottom one. The flanged edge overlaps and covers the nailed edge to hide the nailheads. The result is an unusually trim and neat appearance.

Unlike aluminum, a metal and a very good conductor of electricity, vinyl is a nonconductor and is actually used for insulation in the electrical industry. It doesn't need grounding, cannot attract lightning, and will not interfere with radio or television reception.

Do you like a quiet house? Because vinyl is a plastic, it tends to muffle the sound of rain and hail. Aluminum siding, on the contrary, magnifies these sounds and creates a drumbeat effect.

Do your kids like to play ball in the yard? Vinyl siding simply flexes under impact and then returns to its original shape. Sidings made of aluminum are easily dented by a child's baseball.

What kind of person are you? If you are a dedicated housepainter, love to spend money unnecessarily, and like to live in a noisy environment, vinyl siding is obviously not your type of siding.

If, on the contrary, you enjoy beauty, money in the bank, and a home which is quiet and tranquil, invest in vinyl siding now. It's a once in a lifetime decision you will never regret.

Modernize with homemaker in mind

But don't despair. Remodeling can convert a kitchen that's draining your energy into one that will work for you, says the National Home Improvement Council.

Redesigning an inefficient layout using the 'kitchen triangle' principle in which each major appliance is conveniently located at equidistant points of a triangle can eliminate unnecessary steps between work areas.

In kitchens too small to seat the whole family, install a built-in snacking counter to make serving and clean-up easier on the homemaker.

To keep kitchen maintenance to a minimum, shop for washable wallpaper, flooring that won't show dirt easily and stain resistant cabinets. Cabinets certified by the National Kitchen Cabinet Association are tested to assure years of service under tough kitchen conditions.

A kitchen that tires you out needs work. NHIC points out that while energy-saving kitchen improvements can be do-it-yourself jobs, more difficult projects require a home improvement contractor.

Save energy: shop wisely for windows

With new home prices steadily rising and existing homes changing ownership at a rate about double that of sales of new homes, it's no wonder home remodeling and modernization activity is so hectic.

Since many home improvement projects involve the replacement or installation of windows, homeowners are wise to keep energy conservation in mind when shopping for windows.

And the same care should be devoted to the selection of windows as to other factors in an energy-efficient house.

Like other energy-conservation measures such as adding wall, attic and under-floor insulation, windows should be chosen for their ability to provide insulation.

Double-pane insulating glass for example—standard in Andersen Corporation's Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors—sharply reduces expensive heat loss through the glass.

Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors also have factory-installed weatherstripping to reduce heat robbing air infiltration. In fact, this weatherstripping is twice as weathertight as accepted industry standards for allowable air infiltration.

And the sash and frame have a preservative-treated wood core that is sheathed in rigid vinyl for long-lasting low-maintenance protection.

Perma-Shield windows also are available with triple glazing for added energy conservation in areas that experience unusually harsh winters.

ORANGE HERIZ DESIGN RUG — This new addition to Karastan's Orient Treasures collection illustrates how beautifully Oriental design rugs can live with contemporary settings. Used here in a very current apartment space combining living and dining areas, the Orange Heriz design rug makes a bold statement with its orange ground color and strong geometric pattern in an interior full of hemp and wood tones. Sofas are by Thayer-Coggin. Cocktail and end tables are by Hickory Mfg. Co. The cane dining room pieces are by Hurricane Mfgt. Co. Made by Karastan's Kara-Crest system in a luxurious pure wool pile — skein-dyed and lustre-washed — the rug comes in three sizes. The 6'x9'6" size shown here has a suggested retail of $569.

Gardening: America's favorite hobby

Planting, growing seasons claim participation of over half of nation's households

Interest in outdoor gardening and raising plants indoors is becoming widespread among American homeowners and apartment dwellers.

The latest Gallup Study of gardening—done in 1977—showed that more than half the nation's households—41 million—participated in some form of lawn and yard care. It also indicated that most people planned to increase the size of their gardens.

At the same time, the study revealed that interest in houseplants has boomed in recent years. Some 33 million households sported indoor plants in 1977. This compares to 19 million in 1973.

Although twice as many women as men grow indoor plants, interest in indoor gardening among men is actually growing at a faster rate than among women.

Regionally, the Midwest is the garden center of the country. Approximately 53 percent of the households there have gardens. The South is second with 44 percent. In the East, 41 percent of the households have gardens, and in the Far West the figure is 34 percent.

Far-reaching appeal

There are a number of reasons for the far-reaching appeal of growing things. For one, people need living things around them, according to the people at Ortho, a company which publishes a wide range of books on gardening and related subjects as well as manufacturing plant protection products. Plants help to purify the atmosphere and give us oxygen. They also absorb noise pollution.

In addition, people want to feel closer to nature. And whether a person has a large outdoor garden or one seed and a pot of moist soil, he will have the opportunity to experience all the good things of plant life—nature's perfect cycle and the heady aroma of healthy soil.

Americans regard gardening as a pleasurable recreation as well as a serious pursuit. It's interesting, for example, to look at gardening in the context of recreational activities. We find that 6 million people in this country play golf once a week; more than 6.5 million play tennis; close to 9 million go to the movies every week and more than 21.5 million play cards.

But more than 48 million Americans work in their gardens every week during growing season.

While gardening can simply be a pleasurable pastime, it also can provide very practical benefits. The Gallup Study revealed that almost a quarter of the households surveyed in 1977 looked to their gardens to help with the family budget. Figures over the years indicate there may be a historical relationship between vegetable gardening and inflation.

Inflation triggers vegetables

In the high inflation years of 1974 and 1975, 47 percent and 49 percent of households, respectively, had vegetable gardens. After that, there was a small drop off. In 1977, 43 percent of households had vegetable gardens. And with inflation on the rise, chances are that percentage figures will increase during the current year.

High real estate prices also have an effect. Rather than move, people are becoming more involved in home and garden improvements. And in the long run, a well designed and well cared for landscape can add to the value of the property.

But the sheer fun of growing things is still one of the main reasons people garden. Contributing to this, say the people at Ortho, is the revolution in plant distribution, which makes it possible to enjoy growing plants native to other habitats in almost any climate.

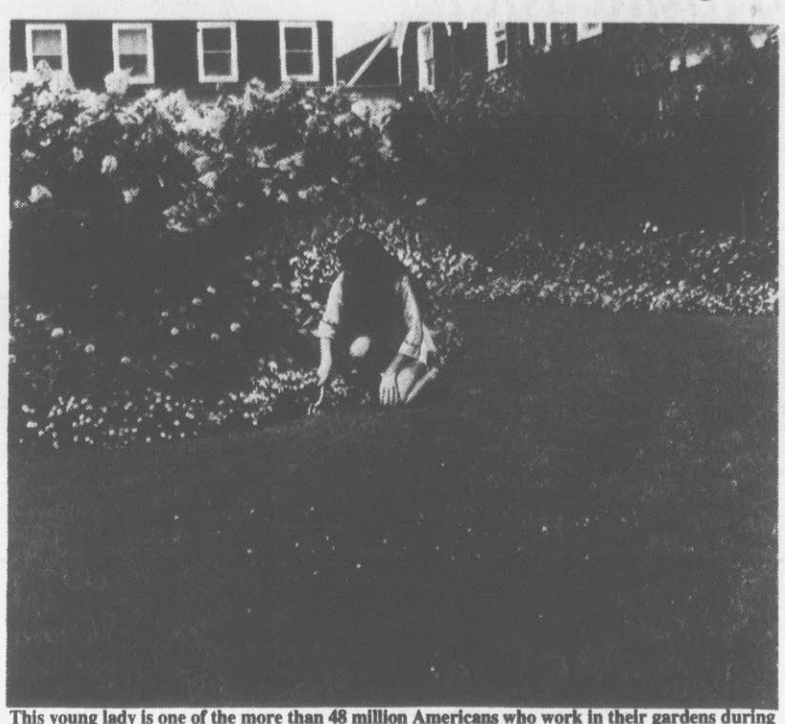
Gardeners grow exotic bulbs in and out of season. They plant herbs and vegetables, not only to enjoy the harvest, but for the beauty of their foliage and flowers, as well as their fragrance.

Citrus and other fruiting trees can provide people everywhere with year-round orangeries. Desert species can be transported from their arid habitat and grown on window sills in homes and offices. Many plants unheard of by our grandparents are available from specialty growers and importers.

Gardening continues to grow

Gardening has been going on since the earliest beginnings of civilization. And being one of the most pleasurable of pastimes and rewarding of endeavors, it will continue to grow in popularity and find new adherents.

As Charles Dudley Warner wrote in his book "My Summer in a Garden": "To own a bit of ground, to scratch it with a hoe, to plant seeds and watch the renewal of life—this is the commonest delight of the race, the most satisfactory thing a man can do."



This young lady is one of the more than 48 million Americans who work in their gardens during the growing season. While gardening is regarded by many as a pleasurable pastime, it also provides practical benefits. The latest Gallup Study of gardening revealed that almost a quarter of the households surveyed looked to their gardens to help with the family budget. But the sheer fun of growing things is the main reason people garden. Contributing to this, according to Ortho, is the revolution in plant distribution, which makes it possible to enjoy growing plants native to other habitats in almost any climate.

Never too late to begin . . .

Now is time to grow your home garden

Next time you're complimented on that crisp, fresh salad you made, why not take credit for the "mixings." It's not every great chef who can toss a savory salad with ingredients he grew himself!

And you don't have to be an old hand at gardening either; just stick to the basics of outdoor gardening—plenty of sun, proper soil, enough water and nutrients, and an effective pest control program.

First, choose a plot that receives sunlight all day. While leafy and root vegetables (beets, cabbage, carrots, chives, kale, leeks, lettuce, mustard, green onions, parsley, radishes, Swiss chard and turnips) can flourish in partial shade, vegetables grown for their fruits or seeds (corn, squash, pumpkin, tomatoes, cucumbers, eggplant and peppers) should have full sun.

Once you've chosen a spot to grow your vegetable garden, you must prepare the soil. Vegetables need a moist but well-drained medium, one in which water circulates rapidly without shutting off the movement of air, according to Ortho's "All About Vegetables."

But don't worry if you have a heavy clay soil or a light sandy one. You can create good planting dirt by adding organic matter—compost, manure, sawdust, or ground bark, which opens up the soil to improve drainage and air circulation. Then keep it moist, but not drenched.

Plump, juicy vegetables demand food along with water. You can provide a balanced diet of required nutrients—nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium—with a good commercial fertilizer available at your local garden center. You'll find products in liquid form or timed-release granules, like Ortho's Tomato and Vegetable Food 10-20-5 (10% nitrogen, 20% phosphorous, 5% potassium), which will last for up to four months after application directly to the soil.

With a good growing medium, you're ready to plant. The old rule of thumb is planting at a depth equal to four times the diameter of the seed. However, in wet weather or in heavy soils, plant shallow, and in light, sandy soil, plant deeper.

Once they spring up, you'll want to make sure your vegetables reach the tasty stage. Protect them with an effective pesticide, like Ortho's Tomato Vegetable Dust, which not only rids your plants of insects and disease as listed on the label, but can also be safely used within one day of harvest. With a good spray program, garden pests won't be taking the first bite!

Find your thrill with hearty blueberry hill

Supermarket prices for a small box of blueberries are sky-high. So beat the cash register by planting your own. Surprisingly, if you provide blueberries the conditions they like, they are hardy and take very little care.

"All About Growing Fruits & Berries," one of Ortho's best sellers, points out that "blueberries are about as hardy as a peach, need a fair amount of winter chill and will not grow well in mild winter climates."

So if you have chilly winters, find a spot with soil rich in organic material such as peat, very acid and extremely well-drained. Soils such as these are perfect for blueberries and are usually in areas which get high rainfall—lucky, since the berries need constant moisture.

Blueberries belong to the health family and are a cousin to azaleas, rhododendrons, mountain-laurel and huckleberries. If any of these grow well on your land, then blueberries will do well, too.

Your nurseryman can give you advice on varieties available and will probably suggest you plant two varieties for better crops. For details on planting, pruning and protection, check the Ortho book or talk to people at your local garden center.

COMPARE THE SIZE of an under-the-sink type of water filter with one that screws on the faucet and you'll appreciate the difference! Culligan unit shown gives up to 28 times more activated carbon filtration to remove odor and taste impurities, like chlorine. Made of stainless steel, the filter can be connected to deliver water through a separate faucet, shown here installed on the sink deck. Put one of these filters at each place in your home where improved drinking water is needed. It's super-tasting water!

The sparkling news about water filters

A water softener produces water that's best for laundering, dishwashing and bathing. For water that's best for drinking or cooking, you need a water filter.

Over 99% of the water produced by a community waterworks is used for such things as sprinkling lawns, fighting fires and flushing away wastes. Less than 1% is used for drinking or cooking.

That's why it doesn't make economic sense for your waterworks to treat all water to drinking water quality, and why filtering is best done in the home.

An activated carbon filter is everyone's choice for removing tastes and odors, including chlorine. You'll save money by combining it with a "pre-filter." The pre-filter removes sediment that otherwise might quickly clog the carbon.

A carbon filter that attaches to a faucet has limited capacity. Better is a larger unit, like the Culligan Super-Gard. It's installed under the sink, or in an adjacent space, and offers efficiency, durability and all the water you need. You can even hook it up to supply your automatic ice maker.

U.S. Government and state authorities recommend carbon filtration, but few community systems are equipped to provide it. If you want this water improvement, you must provide it yourself.

For more information about water filters, write Dept. PR, Culligan USA, Northbrook, IL 60062.

Secret ingredient for less work...

Put an end to dishwashing drudgery with handy helper

Anyone who memorized Parkinson's Law back in school may recall that "work expands to fit the amount of time available to it."

Parkinson might well have had household duties in mind, for it's been found that the average amount of time spent on household tasks by today's employed woman ranges from 4 to 8 hours daily—while the average for the nonemployed homemaker ranges from 5 to 12 hours daily.

Whether this means that employed women are more efficient because of time pressures or, perhaps, freer of standards held important in the past is anyone's guess.

Wipe out extra work!

But whether a woman's out in the work force or at home, she's likely to agree that one job she could well do without is dishwashing. And thanks to modern science, it's one job that is, indeed, almost wiped out.

And the term is used advisedly—for the new non-stick skillets, such as the French import, T-Fal, need only a touch of a soapy cloth or sponge to clean them.

World's slipperiest

The secret ingredient that makes this miracle possible is PTFE—the slipperiest substance known to man. And when 100 percent pure PTFE is applied to the metal surface by means of T-Fal's mechanical bonding process, it's virtually "locked in."

This means that food never sticks to the super-slick, durable surface. And when food doesn't stick, there's no reason for soaking, or scouring, or scrubbing.

And that means that dishwashing, at least, doesn't need to keep you in the kitchen to help prove Parkinson was right!

WHY SCRUB POTS and pans the old way (top) when a great work-saver such as this non-stick French skillet (bottom) makes scrubbing obsolete? Food simply can't stick—so cooks never have to scrub!

Inspections can avert hasty repairs

A damaged or worn out roof that's ignored can lead to serious problems in the attic and beneath the roof surface. It can result in hasty and costly repairs.

To forestall such problems, the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association advises homeowners to check their roof's condition at least once a year and preferably twice a year.

But don't go up on the roof to do it, warns ARMA. Inspect it from the ground instead. Walking on a roof is dangerous and could damage the shingles.

Indications that a roof is in need of replacement include cracked, curled, brittle or missing shingles. If a roof is fairly new and has suffered limited damage such as loose or missing shingles from a storm, these can be renailed or replaced.

If it looks as though the roof requires replacement, ARMA suggests you call in a professional roofer to conduct an on-the-roof inspection.

Not only can a reputable roofer tell you whether the roof needs to be replaced, but he can provide assistance in the selection of roofing material and the design elements inherent in color and dimension.

Increasingly popular, for example, are three-dimensional asphalt shingles in handsome earthtone colors of browns and beiges that serve to relate a home to its surroundings.

Designed to last up to 25 years with little maintenance, multi-layered asphalt shingles produce deep, attractive shadow lines that give a roof dimension.

Certified cabinets — great kitchen helpers

Ever wonder where your next door neighbor finds the time for her morning jog, game of tennis or the latest novel?

Organizing your time to include some of your favorite things is no small feat. In fact, it takes careful planning.

Ours is a world of devices. Take the kitchen for example. Perhaps nowhere in the house have more improvements been made.

Getting your kitchen to work for you is smart management. Consider the time saved with a food processor chopping up the ingredients you need to make that special Chinese dish you're so proud of.

Think of the extra time a self-cleaning oven gives you. Imagine the time gained in locating, without the aid of a road map, that crepe pan you know you have—somewhere.

Kitchen cabinets offer an easy way to stay organized and at the same time conceal the tools of the trade. If your kitchen lacks adequate storage space, why not consider the advantages of kitchen remodeling.

When shopping for kitchen cabinets you may be impressed by their beauty. The convenience they afford will be obvious. But how can you be sure you are buying durability as well?

Look for the blue and white certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association. It is this seal, usually found on the inside of a cabinet door or drawer, that leads the way to cabinets that have been tested for durability, stain resistance and low maintenance.

To qualify for the seal, cabinets have to meet the tough construction and performance standards of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI).

More tips on how you can get your kitchen to work overtime for you can be found in "Kitchen & Bath Planning," an illustrated booklet available for 35 cents from the National Kitchen Cabinet Association, Box 2978, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

New illustrated books: guide to stationary power tool use

Four new hardcover instructional books showing and telling how the user can get the most out of various stationary power tools have just been introduced by Rockwell Publications.

These books, entitled "Getting the Most Out of Your Table Saw," "Getting the Most of Your Drill Press," "Getting the Most Out of Your Band Saw," and "Getting the Most Out of Your Radial Saw" (suggested retail price, $4.99 each), describe techniques for the do-it-yourselfer and woodworking hobbyist, to help and encourage them to tackle more extensive and complicated projects.

These clearly written, heavily illustrated books are designed to assist the novice up through the craftsman to "get the most out of their stationary power tools."

These quality, hardbound books can serve as an in-use guide for the millions of stationary power tools already in the marketplace, as well as serving as a guide for those persons considering or purchasing tools today. These books are applicable to most tools, in the general tool category for which they were written, regardless of brand.

Each hardbound book contains over 250 photographic illustrations and line drawings describing the category of tool in use in the home workshop. And, these first four books in the new Rockwell publication series encompass the tools considered to be the most common "basic shop" stationary power tools.

These books are primarily available through Rockwell power tool dealers and Rockwell factory service centers throughout the USA.

If not available in your locality, sample copies will be made available at $4.99 each, plus $1.01 for postage and handling (USA only).

A GRACIOUS SPACE for intimate little suppers can be achieved right in your kitchen by ingenious redecorating. Here an added wall creates a separate galley-style work area, while the sweep of Congoleum's Reflection II vinyl flooring in the "Palace Court" design unifies the look. Trim, clean-lined furniture enhances the spacious feeling in this elegant oasis for family meals or small-scale entertaining.

Decorate with care so you can always dine with flair

Dining in style doesn't require a baronial hall. Even an eat-in kitchen or a breakfast alcove can offer small-scale dining elegance when you use the right decorating ingredients.

The secret is selecting furnishings that are light and sleek, to suit modest space, and a flooring that is compatible with both areas without being "kitcheny."

In this kitchen a handy home-owner added a wall to screen the food preparation section. Unifying the two areas is Congoleum's Reflection® II cushioned vinyl flooring, in the octagonal "Palace Court" design that conveys an ordered, formal feeling.

Furniture is airy—the table seems to float, only a gleam revealing its criss-cross plexiglass base (supply houses will custom-cut plexiglass to interlock). The tuck-under chairs save space, too.

Through the door, the kitchen view is made guest-worthy with floral wallcovering on cabinet fronts. And the easy-care no-wax flooring can survive family traffic, while being pretty enough for company at a moment's notice.

For information on how you can dramatize any room in your home with install-it-yourself flooring at big savings, write for "How to Install," Congoleum Consumer Dept. M, 195 Belgrove Drive, Kearny, N.J. 07032.

Cassini suggests combining carpet styles in same room

Want to create a look that is truly your own in a large living room, or focus attention on a conversation area? Then try combining different styles of carpet in the same room.

That decorating advice comes from Oleg Cassini, internationally known fashion designer who has created a complete line of carpet styles for Galaxy Carpet Mills.

"No longer does carpeting simply cover a floor. It can create a total atmosphere in a room. With the unique mixability of different carpet styles integrated within color-coordinated groupings, you can mix and match different carpets within a room or throughout your entire home. You can create a look that expresses the way you feel and the way you live."

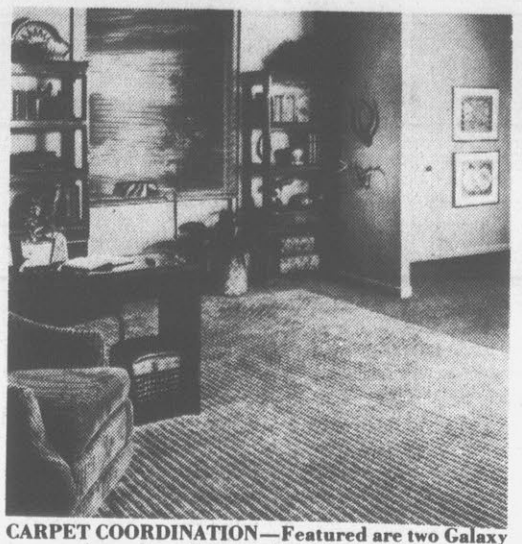
This creates a focal point of interest for a conversational furniture group. It also can highlight a room's architectural features such as a fireplace or dining area.

The unusually rich color combinations have enabled some decorators to use three Cassini carpets in the same room.



CARPET COORDINATION—Featured are two Galaxy carpets from the collection designed by Oleg Cassini. Forming a focal point of interest for a furniture grouping is "Roman Stripe" in the foreground, color-coordinated with "San Marco" used as a border and extending into the adjoining room to create a spacious, unified look.

Tired of waiting in line for your shower? There may be space for a new bathroom!

Adding a bath is not a tough job, says the National Home Improvement Council, especially if you let a professional home improvement contractor help. Little used closets, pantries, nooks or corners can often provide the necessary space.

Decorating it with curtains and wallpaper, vanities, mirrors and artwork, gives your new bath a personality of its own.

What about cost? Home improvement loans are available to help you finance the project. NHIC suggests you ask your banker for details.

The Council also reminds homeowners that adding a bath may increase the resale value of a home.

Whether upstairs or downstairs, plain or ornate, your new bath will be a welcome addition to your home.

Modernize with homemaker in mind

But don't despair. Remodeling can convert a kitchen that's draining your energy into one that will work for you, says the National Home Improvement Council.

Redesigning an inefficient layout using the 'kitchen triangle' principle in which each major appliance is conveniently located at equidistant points of a triangle can eliminate unnecessary steps between work areas.

In kitchens too small to seat the whole family, install a built-in snacking counter to make serving and clean-up easier on the homemaker.

To keep kitchen maintenance to a minimum, shop for washable wallpaper, flooring that won't show dirt easily and stain resistant cabinets. Cabinets certified by the National Kitchen Cabinet Association are tested to assure years of service under tough kitchen conditions.

A kitchen that tires you out needs work. NHIC points out that while energy-saving kitchen improvements can be do-it-yourself jobs, more difficult projects require a home improvement contractor.

Stylish siding lets you...

Coordinate colors and textures

Color is in, and this is as true for the exterior of a house as it is for the interior furnishings. No longer, however, is a wide selection of colors limited to paint, because the choice in pre-finished siding is equally broad.

More than half the homeowners remodeling with aluminum siding, for example, are turning to color instead of traditional white.

In aluminum siding colors run the gamut from light to dark, with shades of brown, green, blue, red, ivory, avocado and the earth tones increasingly popular and easy to coordinate.

These colors are baked onto the pre-finished siding at the factory and they remain bright and clear throughout its life—up to 30 years and more—with virtually no maintenance.

Despite the wide variety of colors available, don't make the mistake of choosing one just because it appeals to you.

To be most effective it should be appropriate to the style of your home and compatible with its interior color scheme. Equally important, it should blend with other houses in your neighborhood.

Coordinate colors carefully and don't overdo them. Decorators suggest limiting your choice to three, including the siding, roof and trim, and keeping them complementary.

Trim and accessories, such as corner posts, columns, soffit, fascia, gutters and down-spouts, are available to match or blend with the siding.

Having chosen the color, think about texture. Finishes in aluminum siding range from a smooth surface to embossed replicas of almost every style wood finish, including cedar shakes.

There's a siding to match any type house, whether Victorian, colonial or contemporary.

Prized architectural details can be retained on an older house because aluminum trim can generally be formed to duplicate them. If they can't, the details can be refinished and repainted to blend with the new siding and look perfectly natural.

Design alternatives are not limited to color, texture and fittings. Pre-finished siding can be used either horizontally to accentuate the long, low lines of a house, or vertically to minimize an overlong horizontal sweep or accent gables of colonial architecture.

Properly installed, pre-finished siding can actually enhance the charm of an older house rather than diminish it. When installed skillfully, it is virtually impossible to distinguish from wood without going up and touching it.

Pre-finished siding comes in vinyl plastic, hardboard and steel, in addition to the traditional aluminum, but none of the others offers the same choice of colors and textures as aluminum.

Vinyl plastic, only recently introduced, is available in a limited range of colors.

With steel, weather may rust the exposed edges of the siding. Once you've made the decision to invest in aluminum siding—in the 30 years since its introduction more than 11,000,000 homeowners have done so—spend just a little more and select the insulated kind because the added cost will usually be offset by fuel savings.

It will certainly add to your comfort because it helps maintain interior wall surface temperature closer to room air temperature—cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

Your contractor can be your best friend when it comes to resurfacing your home. He should be chosen with as much care as the siding itself, for it is his expertise that will determine the quality of the finished job.

Check with people who have had their homes resided, with local bankers, the Better Business Bureau and the Chamber of Commerce for references.

YEAR-ROUND COMFORT is provided by this Weathertron® heat pump by General Electric. It provides central cooling in the summer and central heating in the winter. One of the outstanding characteristics of the heat pump, according to the experts at GE, is its economy of operation during the heating season.

Did you know that heat pumps can cool?

Each year the heat pump captures a greater share of the heating and cooling market, yet there persists a mystique about the product.

What is it? It's a single system that provides central heating in the winter and central cooling in the summer by means of transferring—pumping—heat from a place where it is to a place where it's wanted.

The experts at General Electric explain: in winter it absorbs heat from the outdoor air and releases it indoors. In summer, the refrigerant flow is reversed and the heat is collected inside the house and pumped outdoors to make the house cool.

The heat pump is able to gather heat from the cold winter air because even at 0°F there is 89 percent as much heat in the air as there is at 100°.

This capability of capturing outside heat in winter makes it possible for the heat pump to save from 30 to 60 percent on electric heating bills, depending on geographic location and the equipment used.

For example, at 47°F outdoor temperature, the Weathertron® heat pump supplies up to 3.1 BTU's of heat for each BTU of electricity consumed. By contrast, regular resistance heat, which operates on a one-to-one ratio, delivers only a single unit of heat for each unit of electricity consumed.

REDDISH ALUMINUM SIDING with an embossed cedar shake finish rejuvenated this older house and eliminated the need for periodic repainting. Contrasting pre-finished white aluminum trim and accessories (storm windows and doors, shutters, soffit, fascia, gutters and downspouts) define lines of the house and add character. New colors and textures baked into the aluminum panels remain attractive up to 40 years and more.

Springtime homemaking made easier

It's spring and time, once again, to take advantage of sunny days and clean, fresh air.

Before you begin to enjoy vacations and outings with family and friends, make a few changes in your household routine, so your home will be more livable during the warmer months.

Here are some suggestions:

• Take up area rugs throughout the house and store them for the season. If your floors are natural wood or pretty tile, you may like the look of the exposed surface; a cool bare floor is easily kept clean with a quick sweeping.

• With sunlight growing stronger every day, it is a good time to rotate your plants. Some plants thrive on direct sunlight and look pretty hanging in natural baskets at each window. To keep your windows sparkling clean use Glass*Plus® glass, appliance and cabinet cleaner. Just spray and wipe dry with a paper towel or lint free cloth. Cloudy days are especially good for washing windows.

• Make use of the coolest areas of your home during the warmer months. Cool basements, corner rooms, porches and patios can be easily converted into the "summer" den by simply rearranging furniture to take advantage of cross-ventilation and decorating with cool, soothing colors.

• During the warmer months, you can brighten the look of bedrooms and lighten your early morning chores by "undressing" the beds. Simply pack away your quilts, heavy bedspreads and woolen blankets and show off your pretty patterned sheets.

Expand your home's usable space with an easy-to-build wooden deck

Looking for a relatively simple, do-it-yourself project for your backyard some weekend? How about a wood deck of two-by-two foot squares that can be built in modules to cover virtually any size area? Such a deck blends well with either grass or garden areas.

Build for durability

For durability, build the deck of western cedar or a good grade of western pine or fir treated with a wood preservative. Uniform spaces between the 2x4's used to construct each module will assure easy drainage.

One way to make the project easier is to order all lengths precut. It'll cost more, but will probably pay for itself in reduced time and labor.

Top grade

When ordering the lumber, ask for a grade without large knots and specify pieces that are fairly straight.

The amount of ground to be covered by the deck should be measured carefully so that when the ground is dug up for drainage, it is the correct size for the deck you have in mind.

The soil should be dug to a depth of about four inches, smoothed and tamped down. A layer of gravel above the soil will assist drainage.

Be sure that each of the two foot square modules fits snugly against the other. To secure the deck, build a border of 2x6's set on edge.

Plans book

A plans book of three do-it-yourself decks is available for 35 cents from Western Wood Products Association, Dept. SR-513, Yeon Bldg., Portland, Oregon 97204.

Cheery time check

BREAKFAST IS BORING? You eat on the run? Right two wrongs at once by installing a breakfast bar where you can keep one eye on a favorite picture or poster, the other on a handsome clock. This one from the Howard Miller "Sculptura" collection has a sculptured case with white lacquered finish, and its black dial has white arabic numerals, orange hands. Quartz battery movement is accurate to five seconds a month.

From grill to griddle...

It's a barbecue grill . . . it's a griddle . . . it's a rotisserie. It can be all of these and more in one convenient unit with the new Whirlpool convertible cooktops. These versatile new units are featured with changeable modules that can be simply and quickly switched to suit whatever cooking mood you happen to be in.

Available in two sizes, 46 inches and 33 inches, the cooktops come equipped with two surface unit modules and a barbecue grill with lava rocks. One module features a 4-inch and an 8-inch element while the other module has two 6-inch elements. The grill module provides "infinite" heat control to give high heat for searing, and low heat for slow cooking.

Three modules at a time can be accommodated in the 46-inch size and the space-saving 33-inch size accommodates a combination of two modules at one time.

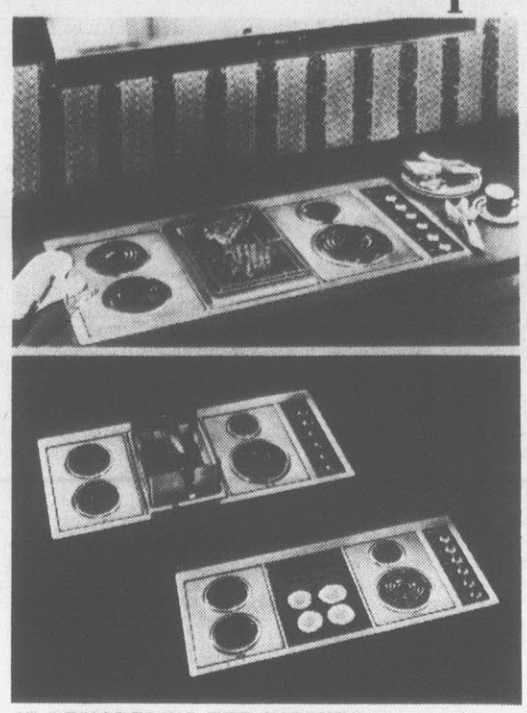
These brushed chrome surface modules fit into a stainless steel rim to make the cooktops easy-to-clean as well as elegant in appearance. And, the infinite heat controls allow fine tuning of the surface units and other cooking modules between the highest and lowest temperatures for the desired cooking results.

Optional accessories offer even greater cooking flexibility. You may choose a rotisserie for use with your grill module. It has a motorized spit which adjusts to two positions and accommodates roasts up to 5 pounds and poultry up to 6¼ pounds.

Another option is a teflon-coated griddle with a built-in grease ring and well to help drain grease away from the cooking food. The griddle comes with a cover to help protect the teflon surface when it is not in use as well as giving additional counter space.

As another option, consider getting a hard wood cutting board with a juice ring to give you handy cutting and carving convenience.

With a Whirlpool convertible cooktop, there's no need to travel back and forth from kitchen to patio for grilled steaks or barbecued chicken . . . no need to get out your special egg or pancake skillet . . . no need to chop vegetables at the sink and then carry them over to the range to add to the stew. Now you can do it all in one convenient spot right in your own kitchen.



IF REMODELING THE KITCHEN is one of your spring projects . . . Whirlpool convertible cooktops can help you make every inch of space designated for surface cooking really count. In this unit, changeable modules can be quickly and easily switched to let you grill, barbecue, rotisserie, griddle, chop and carve, or simply boil water.

Helpful advice for installing kitchens

It's easier to install a kitchen than you might think. Non-professionals do it every day, with professional results.

If you're wondering if you can be among them, here's a way to find out. Write for a booklet titled "How To Install Your Own Kitchen" available for 75 cents (the price includes postage) from Yorktowne Cabinets, Dept. M, Red Lion, PA 17356.

If you're handyperson enough to accept the booklet's initial words of advice—be patient!—and to follow its step-by-step instructions, you're probably capable of picking up chalkline, carpenter's level and C-clamps, and proceeding to install cabinets.

All the information is here, in 16 pages of commentary and line drawings, including an illustrated list of the tools you will or may need.

First, the booklet notes, you must plan your layout and identify cabinets—wall cabinets that are 12 inches deep and base cabinets that are 34½ inches high by 24 inches deep.

Before you can install new cabinets, of course, you have to remove old ones—and the range, refrigerator and any other major appliances that will be in the way. (It's suggested that water systems be removed and, if necessary, relocated by a plumber; also that a professional make electrical connections.)

"How To Install Your Own Kitchen" tells how to measure and mark walls to receive cabinets, how to find the high points and compensate for the low points of floor and walls, how to find the wall studs.

Then it tells you—having accomplished the preparatory steps—how to install your cabinets. It tells you to start with corner wall units and work away from them, checking that each is square and level before you attach them to one another.

It tells you how to install a blank corner or revolving corner unit as the point of departure for other base cabinets, and how to align and attach the base cabinets to each other in the same manner as the wall cabinets.

Wallcoverings celebrate color!

Confused about color in decorating? Choosing the right color for a room this spring need not be the most difficult decision you make.

"Wallcoverings offer not only the best value for your decorating dollar, but also provide a wealth of color combinations to spark your imagination," states Edmund Motyka, A.S.I.D., leading interior designer.

Perfect color selection

Wallcoverings offer an excellent solution to color questions in decorating, suggests the Wallcovering Information Bureau. If you are unsure of the colors to use in a room, take a cue from the hues used in a favorite multi-colored wallcovering. It can be any style—traditional, contemporary or nostalgic—or in any design from striped to floral or geometric.

Collections are constantly updated to include new colors that reflect fashion trends in home decorating. Professional artists and designers have put their talent into choosing colors that work well together.

Rich earthtones

This spring, you will find earthtones reminiscent of natural materials—wood, bamboo, canvas—and soft metallics such as pewter and bronze. Rich tones in red, navy and russet, watercolor pastels, and softer, dusty colors also will abound.

To assure a successful color choice, carry a swatch of upholstery and carpet fabric with you for perfect color matching without guessing.

Check lighting effects

The Wallcovering Information Bureau advises, to eliminate unwanted surprises, remember to check the wallcovering colors with your swatches in several types of light—natural daylight, incandescent and fluorescent—whichever type of light predominates in the room you are decorating, the Bureau recommends.

Let the function of the room and the traffic guide you in your selection of materials. You may choose from strippable, peelable, pretrimmed, pre-pasted, scrubbable and washable wallcoverings.

Easy care

Strippable wallcoverings are perfect for the apartment dweller or if you want to make a change in a few years. Scrubbable wallcoverings are advisable for problem areas, such as a child's room where wear and tear is unavoidable.

Wallcovering sample books are a bountiful source of inspiration for color and design ideas. All the knowledge and expertise of design professionals is available to you simply by opening one of these books.

Selection tips

To determine how a wallcovering will look on your wall, the Wallcovering Information Bureau offers these tips:

- Prop the wallcovering book open and stand six to ten feet away from the sample.
- Imagine how the design will look throughout the room.
- Look at the photographs of room settings to get an idea of how the wallcovering looks in "real life" and note clever decorating ideas you might wish to use.
- Ask the store manager to loan the wallcovering book to you for a day or two or obtain a sample from the manufacturer.

Decorating with wallcoverings offers an infinite number of choices. To help you begin, you may write for a free color selector and room analysis chart. Address your request to: Wallcovering Information Bureau, Department S79, 66 Morris Avenue, Springfield, N J 07081.

Spring is here and it's time to check on everything and anything that may need cleaning.

Now that the snow has melted away and the rain is falling, debris can get stuck in the gutters and cause poor drainage.

Climb on up!

While you're up there, check your roof for any damage that might have occurred during the winter. Shingles may need to be replaced, cracks fixed, etc.

Spring is also a good time to inspect your house in general.

'Face lifts'

It may need a new coat of paint or bricks fixed. Shutters may also need repairing.

It's time to replace your storm windows with screens, too. Don't forget to wash those storm windows before storing, and check your screens for holes and rips before installing them to keep out the bugs that summer brings.

Do-it-yourself carpeting never looked so good or cost so little!

Whether you want to cover an old unsightly floor or just make your home look more luxurious, new wall-to-wall carpet can produce decorating "magic."

At one time, carpet installation was a job for professionals. Today, with the growing array of D-I-Y carpets on the market, any homeowner can achieve outstanding results and save money in the bargain.

Carpet squares have come a long way from the original indoor-outdoor variety. Now you can find an enormous selection with textures and colorways to suit anyone's taste. Newest among the variety are the multi-toned Saxony plushes.

The neat thing about carpet squares is that they are "neat." You can bring them home from the store easily in your car. Armstrong packs them ten to a box, so the amount needed is easy to measure beforehand.

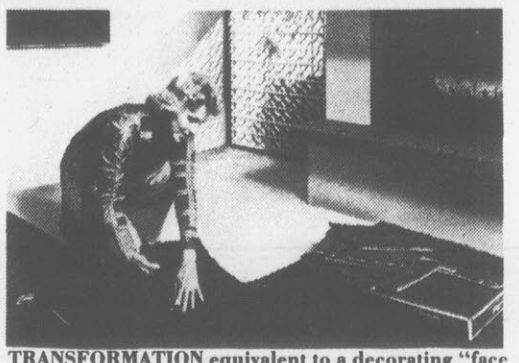
What's more, there's little or no waste with squares . . . particularly useful in odd-shaped rooms.

To apply, all you do is peel back the protective paper on the back, place on floor and press.

Kings Valley, Armstrong's newest addition to its do-it-yourself line, is available in 12" x 12" carpet squares.

The carpet is made of bright-luster nylon yarn and has its own high-density foam self-stick backing. Six colorations are available.

Kings Valley is made entirely from synthetic components, which means that squares can be safely installed in basements, bathrooms and other high humidity areas. The 100% synthetic composition effectively resists rot, shrinkage and mildew.



TRANSFORMATION equivalent to a decorating "face lift" takes place with wall-to-wall carpet that you can put down yourself! For only a few dollars and a few hours time, you can install this luxurious new Saxony plush carpet called Kings Valley from Armstrong. Six decorator-inspired colorways are available in 12" x 12" carpet squares.

One solution is to move to a bigger house. However, high moving costs, soaring real estate prices and the trauma of 'pulling up roots' are convincing many homeowners to increase the living space of their present homes instead.

Grow with family

The National Home Improvement Council offers some ideas to make your home grow along with your family:

- Add a room, or a whole wing. Be sure the windows, siding, roofing and architectural style of the new addition complement the rest of the house.
- With a little insulation, an attic or basement can be converted into an extra bedroom or rec-room. Garages and porches can also be made into year-round rooms.
- Add another bath. An additional bathroom is a great convenience, if not an outright necessity, in larger families.
- Install a patio or deck, which can extend your family's living quarters to the outdoors.

Write for pamphlet

For help in beginning your space-increasing projects, write for a free pamphlet entitled "How to Start Your Home Improvement Project with the Help of a Reliable Contractor."

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the National Home Improvement Council, Dept. M, 11 East 44th Street, New York, New York 10017.

It's closer than you think...

Lawn days come soon: prepare mowing machine

Grass cutting time is closer than you think! Now is the time to insure that your mower will work well and will conserve fuel, according to the Simplicity Manufacturing Co., an Allis-Chalmers company.

Simplicity believes that everything starts with your attitude toward power mowers—lawn and garden tractors, riding mowers, walk-behind mowers. Specifically, don't neglect the operator's manual because no machine will operate effectively and efficiently without some effort by the operator. Go over the manual both at the end of the mowing season and the end of the storage season.

Storage creates problems

Things happen to power equipment as it sits all winter in sheds and garages. So, check all exposed areas for rust, and clean and paint these areas to retard deep rust infestation. But covered areas also need cleaning; a good grade of grease solvent will do the job for the engine's exterior.

As the manuals say: inspect steering controls and linkages for security. You'll appreciate the firm control offered by a firmly adjusted steering wheel. A loose wheel is a hazard to property, to the mower and to people.

Things do loosen up even as metal assumes new shapes or stresses with weather changes. In addition, operators sometimes adapt to loose steering, ignore it, and then store equipment without maintenance. Months later, loss of control comes as a surprise.

Tires are particularly susceptible to change during storage. Pneumatic tires must be refilled to the recommended pressures. Unequal tire pressure can cause uneven cutting height or slash down to the roots.

In addition, tires must be inspected for wear or damage, which is often ignored in the fall. Yet, tires can be damaged during storage by other objects falling against them, or cracks produced by months of resting in one position.

Replace worn or damaged tires. Grease the wheel bearings so that the equipment will move with uniform flexibility on startup. A wheel that binds can cause a machine to move in unexpected directions, causing loss of control.

THE NEW 14 hp Baron garden tractor from Simplicity Manufacturing Co. is like all other lawn mowing equipment; it needs proper pre-season preparation.

Watch electrical systems

Even a little neglect can hamper the effectiveness of an electrical system. While preparing your equipment for use, you remove the spark plug (or plugs) and wipe it dry. Clean the plug's electrodes with emery cloth or a similar abrasive until all carbon is removed. Set the plug gap to the dimensions specified in the operator's manual. Blow all excess oil out of the spark plug hold by cranking the engine over rapidly.

Replace worn plugs

If plug electrodes appear worn or if the plug itself is damaged, replace it with a new one. Be sure the new plug is gapped as specified in the operator's manual.

Igniting a spark plug requires that the proper ratio of fuel and air be present in the engine's combustion chamber. You'll get this ratio if you clean and oil the air cleaner, then drain all the old fuel from the tank if you neglected to do so in the fall. Refill the tank with fresh "regular" gasoline that contains no oil.

This gasoline purity is important because dirty gasoline clogs the carburetor and fuel lines, thus reducing operating efficiency. Finally, replace the fuel filter with a clean one. Such filters become dirty in the dusty atmosphere of lawn mowing and the last dirt of the season tends to cling tightly during the winter.

Check for clean battery

Be sure the battery is clean, in fully charged condition, and connected properly and securely, Simplicity advises. The specific gravity of a 12-volt wet charge battery should read on a hydrometer no less than 1.280 at 80 degrees Fahrenheit. The sealed, lead acid battery used to start walk-behind mowers requires no water or liquid electrolyte. Recharge this type of battery for 48 hours after storage and for 24 hours once a month during the cutting season.

Examine wiring

Examine the condition of all electrical wiring. If it is broken, worn or frayed, replace it. Be sure that it is connected securely and to the proper location. See your operator's manual for the wiring diagram. Much trouble with operation of machinery is electrical.

Always check the condition of any belts used on your equipment. Belts must be flexible for safety and performance. Inflexibility is often the result of old age and will result in cracks or breaks in belt cords. Replace old belts immediately.

If a belt is worn, also check for pulley misalignment and belt adjustment as instructed in the operator's manual. Also replace all worn belts. And here's something important: problems with belts and pulleys waste energy.

Is blade sharp?

Next, check the mower blade for sharpness and balance. Small nicks that reduce cutting efficiency may be removed with a file. Blade balance may be checked by placing the center hole of the blade on a sharp object and observing any imbalance. Replace any blade that is extensively damaged or that is not balanced.

Drain all oil from the crankcase. Refill with clean, fresh oil as specified in the operator's manual. Dirty oil wears out engines alarmingly fast. Next, lubricate all points as specified in the operator's manual using the lubricant specified.

Keep up care

Your equipment should now be ready for summer operation.

But there is one more word of advice from Simplicity: watch for changes in performance of your equipment. If you don't conduct preventive and needed maintenance, you'll set up serious drains on energy, as well as lose efficiency and create safety hazards.

Belt and pulley problems create friction, which uses up energy. Soft tires hold back the machine as it rolls. Loose steering consumes energy needed for work. Improper air blows fuel out the exhaust. Dirty oil creates engine friction and slows down engine action. Dirty plugs cause misfires.

Moving mealtime outdoors — get ready for barbecue fun

Warmer temperatures and longer daylight hours make spring barbecuing a welcome meal-time change.

If you enjoy a sizzling barbecue in your backyard, you can relax and enjoy your cookout from start to finish by remembering these tips:

• A charcoal fire will smoke until the flames have died down to cooking coals. When the coals are ready for cooking they look ash-grey by daylight and have a red glow after dark.

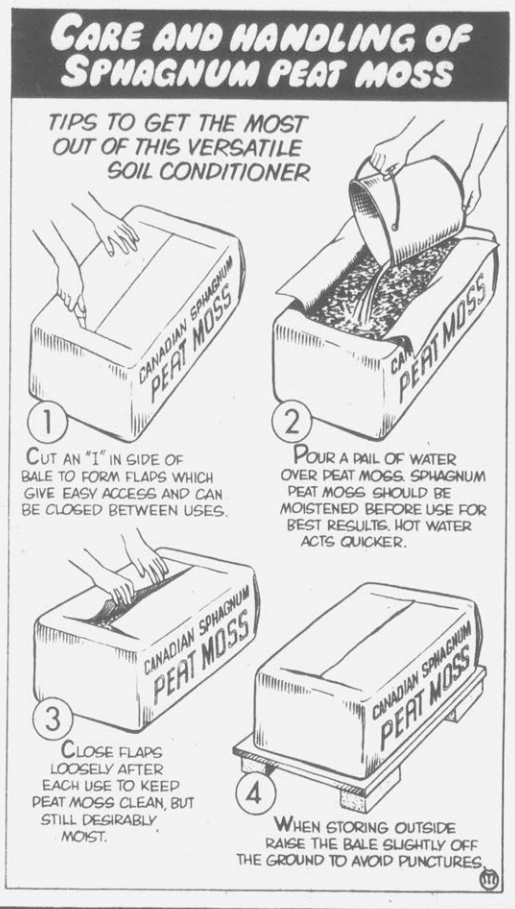
It's important to heat the coals to just the right temperature for cooking so you don't dry out and ruin the meat.

• To quickly and easily clean away those unavoidable greasy spots and splatters on barbecue grills and picnic tables, spray some Grease relief® all-purpose degreaser directly on all washable surfaces and wipe with a damp sponge or paper towel.

To remove unwelcome grease spots from your clothing, apply degreaser directly to soiled areas before laundering.

• You can also minimize clean-up and ready your grill for the next cookout by lining the pit with aluminum foil. When the ashes have cooled, simply wrap the foil around them and throw the package away.

An added bonus when using foil is that less charcoal is needed; foil reflects the heat from the coals to help cook the meat.



Spring cleaning freshens up your home from top to bottom

Spring cleaning means getting your house into shape for that clean, fresh weather ahead.

A good place to start is the attic, then work you way down to the basement. Get rid of musty smells left from having the house closed up for the winter.

Take care of all those little things that you've neglected. Fix door knobs and cracked walls; wipe clean dirt that's collected in corners.

Get your money's worth...

Don't let inflation go through the roof! Check to see if you need 'top' repairing

If the cost of inflation seems to be going through the roof, you had better check to make sure that your roof doesn't have any holes in it!

Even if there aren't any holes, you may be in the market for a new roof anyway. If so, there are three important points to consider before you attempt to evaluate the cost of a new roof, according to the CertainTeed Home Institute.

Suit your home

One of the first features to look for when purchasing a new roof is the type of roof covering that would best suit your own home.

Many roofing materials are available today. Among them are: felt-based asphalt shingles, fiber glass-based asphalt shingles, roll roofing, ceramic tiles, slate, wood shingles and shakes, aluminum shingles, asbestos-cement shingles and built-up roofing.

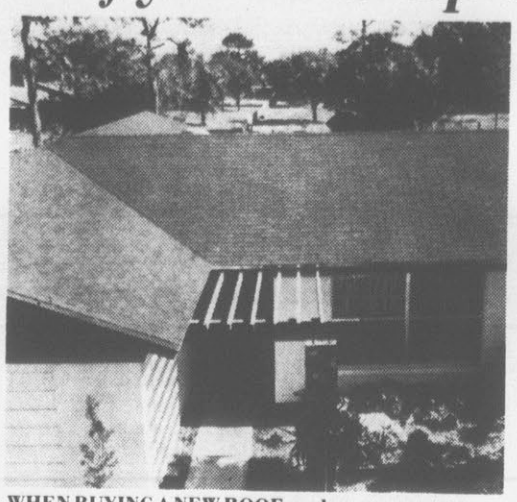
Overwhelmed by the wide range of choices? It's important to note that asphalt shingles are the most popular type of roof covering for new home construction and remodeling.

In fact, they are topping off more than 80 percent of all U.S. homes and, because of their durability, economy and attractive appearance, fiber glass-based asphalt shingles are fast becoming the most popular of all types of asphalt shingle products.

Stop, look, listen

Whatever covering you select, the material, obviously, will constitute the first cost. Labor will be your second expense. Added together . . . you've got the initial cost of a new roof!

STOP, LOOK, AND LISTEN. We're not finished yet.



WHEN BUYING A NEW ROOF, make sure you get your money's worth. Fiber glass roofing is becoming the most popular because of the benefits available. These CertainTeed "Glassguard" fiber glass shingles offer good looks, a "Class A" fire rating and exceptional durability (they come with a 20-year warranty).

Homeowners must remember that initial cost is but a small part of the whole picture. The long-term cost, determined by life expectancy and maintenance requirements of the particular type of roof covering, makes all the difference.

Life expectancy

Find out what the life expectancy is for your choice of roofing, and ask about any guarantees or warranties offered by the manufacturer. The CertainTeed Corporation, for example, warrants some of their fiber glass-based shingles for up to 25 years.

Life expectancy is influenced by many factors, like fire safety, wind resistance and, of importance to homeowners in warm, humid climates, fungus and algae resistance.

Don't let your roof go up in smoke! Fire safety is tested by Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., an independent, non-profit public testing laboratory.

Roofing that is classified as Class "C" has been tested for light fire exposure, indicating that it will not be easily ignited, and will not readily support the spread of fire over the roof area.

Natural fire protection

Some roofing materials, such as slate and ceramic tiles, offer natural fire protection. Felt-based asphalt shingles are manufactured to meet Class "C" standard or better.

Wood shingles are readily combustible and will not meet the Class "C" standard unless they are chemically treated for fire retardancy.

Most fiber glass-based asphalt shingles, however, have been awarded a Class "A," the highest rating conferred for fire resistancy.

Wind resistance is also tested by Underwriters Laboratories, and shingles must withstand test winds of 60 miles per hour continuously for two hours to be classified as "wind resistant."

Check labor costs

Self-sealing asphalt shingles that bear the "wind-resistant" label were originally developed for high-wind areas, but now are standard in most parts of the country.

Now that you know what to look for, have selected your roofing materials, checked into labor costs and determined the life expectancy of your new roof—it is easy, with a little simple arithmetic, to estimate the annual cost.

Magic formula

Here's the magic formula:

Total cost of materials and labor, divided by design life, equals the annual cost of use.

COME AGAIN? Just add the cost of labor and materials, and then divide by the shingle's design life.

You may be surprised to learn that the more expensive shingle is the more economical one in the long run, because the cost of materials and labor is spread out over a longer period of time. Remember the old adage, "You get what you pay for!"

BEDSIDE TABLE can be used as night stand with a shelf for books and drawer for bedside necessities. Finished with Formica® brand decorative laminates, the table was designed by Dexter Studio, New York.

KITCHEN ISLAND is one do-it-yourself project for skilled craftsmen. This 38-inch-high divider features one wide and one narrow drawer on each side plus a knife slot. Designed by Dexter Studio, New York, the kitchen island is surfaced in Formica® brand decorative laminates.

Do-it-yourself furniture jobs are fun way to beat inflation

Living with inflation today usually means either doing without or doing-it-yourself.

For a growing number of homeowners and apartment dwellers, do-it-yourself in home decorating has become the rule rather than the exception.

In addition to providing that personal touch in decorating, it is also just one of the many ways consumers have found to stretch their dollars these days.

One of the most popular areas is in do-it-yourself furniture. For the adventuresome, there are a number of chic, versatile, functional furniture pieces that can be made at home without too much strain on the budget.

D-I-Y furniture has grown so popular that many designers and manufacturers have responded with new products that not only look beautiful but are easy to make. Above all, they are practical, particularly in filling those extra storage needs.

Dexter Studio, New York, for example, has designed a line of 13 occasional pieces ranging from a cocktail table to a kitchen island. All are crafted of Formica® brand decorative laminates for durability and easy maintenance.

Among the items is a console table that in its 60-inch length is useful as a bar or buffet. However, it can be made in any length to suit a specific storage need in foyer, bedroom or other area.

The bedside table, another handy and popular piece, includes a shelf plus roomy drawer where bedside necessities can be stashed.

The cocktail table is so simple it can be made in a single shop session. However, the kitchen island is suggested for the skilled craftsman.

Those just attempting a D-I-Y project are advised to start with some of the simpler designs even though carpentry for advanced projects has been simplified.

Once it's discovered how easy it is to work with laminates, a variety of other applications may come to mind. These can include everything from resurfacing a door to a countertop.

For detailed instructions on the furniture, send $1 for each project desired to Formica Corporation, 120 E. 4th Street, Cincinnati, OH 45202. Information available includes detailed drawings, specifications, list of materials as well as step-by-step construction.

Easy repairs around the home will reward you with unexpected savings

Spring may herald the rebirth of nature, but for many people it also heralds the end of personal and household items that have weathered rough seasons of stress and strain. And that's not perfectly natural.

Spring cleaning needn't clean out your closets—or your pocketbook! Every home harbors a surprising array of useful possessions, from winter galoshes to summer beach shoes, which lie torn or tattered one drawer away from the trash can.

Look around your home and you'll spot them easily: a stylish sandal with a broken strap, a cheery set of mugs made incomplete by one broken handle, a child's sneaker with a loosened sole.

Make a list

Make an inventory of the items in your home that could be reborn this spring with a little smart reconditioning. You'll see that as often as not a moment's care can mean a season's savings.

But before you begin this archaeological dig through your own possessions, it's wise to prepare yourself to administer unexpected repairs with an adhesive that performs quickly, lastingly and inexpensively.

The product is Eastman 910 adhesive, the original cyanoacrylate adhesive, which forms strong bonds in seconds to minutes between many types of materials, including rubber, metals, most plastics, ceramics and hardwoods.

Economical strength

It's economical too, since only one or two drops are needed for most repairs and each three-gram tube contains about 200 drops.

Besides offering economy, the adhesive is easy to use. There's nothing to mix, no heating is necessary and only minimal pressure is required to secure firm, long-lasting bonds.

Few seconds does it

The adhesive is applied to only one of the mating surfaces and then the parts are pressed together using only firm finger pressure for a few seconds to spread the adhesive and form a good bond.

You might begin your spring search for salvageable items in the basement. Did you toss the children's torn galoshes into a closet, relieved that winter was finally over? Instead of discarding them later, why not repair them now and be ready for next year in advance? Similar advice applies to winter sports equipment, such as skis, sleds and snowshoes.

Look for summer

And, of course, spring is just the time to examine the lawn tools, golf clubs, bicycles, sports paraphernalia and camping equipment which give the summer its special excitement. You might also look in the garage and do some touch-up work on the car or motorcycle.

Next, approach your kitchen. What about those pretty flowered mugs which herald summer like a crowd of spring daffodils? You can repair broken handles with a drop of Eastman 910 adhesive.

If the insulation gasket around the refrigerator has come loose, prepare it for heavy summer use by resealing it with the fast-setting adhesive.

Check closets

There's a host of easily repaired items tucked away in bedroom closets and drawers. Children's sneakers, just the thing for spring sports, can be refurbished easily with Eastman 910 adhesive. One drop on a loosened sole should do the trick.

A leather sandal with a torn strap can be all set for that spring stroll in high fashion with a drop of the tough adhesive. A spring handbag can easily be brought back to tiptop shape.

And toys that bore the brunt of rough and tumble winter activity can be mended for a long-lasting summer season.

Bicycles, costume jewelry, gardening tools, athletic equipment—the list could go on and on. A spark of imagination and a taste for investigation can help solve the mystery of time and money-saving minor repairs around the home.

REPAIRING A BICYCLE HANDLE BAR GRIP to ready it for spring riding is typical of the bonding jobs that are easily accomplished with Eastman 910 adhesive. The clear liquid adhesive can be applied to clean, non-porous mating surfaces including metals, ceramics, hardwoods, rubber, smooth leather and most plastics for money-saving repairs in seconds to minutes.

Look for home professionals

Doing it yourself may seem a great way to cut remodeling costs. But, unless you know what you're doing, you're likely to pay later for your mistakes, warns the National Home Improvement Council.

A professional home improvement contractor can prevent costly mistakes and help you make your home exactly the way you want it.

How do you choose a reliable contractor? NHIC offers some help.

- Ask friends, neighbors or a nearby NHIC chapter to recommend a contractor. Your local Better Business Bureau or Chamber of Commerce can inform you if any complaints have been filed.

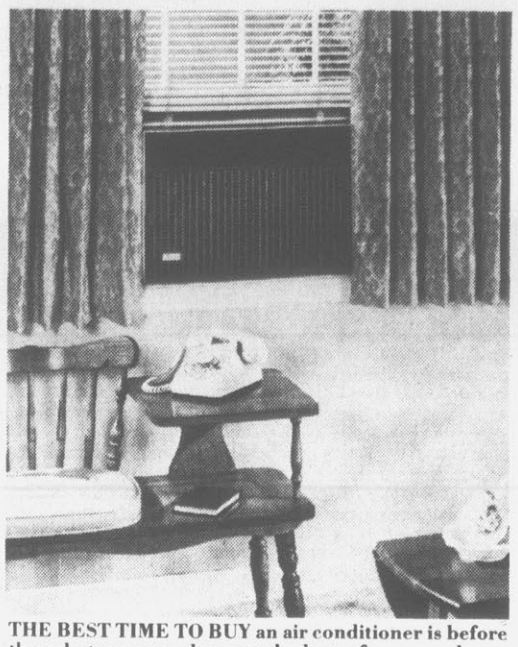
When is the best time to buy your air conditioner?

When the cold winds blow, the very last thing most people think about is how to keep the inside of their homes cool. But winter is really the best time to think ahead to spring and summer, say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation.

For instance, picture this scene . . . you're eating supper in a sticky, humid kitchen and the heat is sweltering. After a few restless nights and uncomfortable meals, you decide that you've got to get an air conditioner. According to the home economists, you've just chosen the worst time to buy.



THE BEST TIME TO BUY an air conditioner is before those hot summer days get the best of you, say home economists from Whirlpool Corporation. Between January and May, air conditioner sales are generally slower, so you can shop in less crowded stores and get the full attention of the appliance salesman. Prices may also be lower when the temperature is lower.

Buy before heatwave

The best time to buy an air conditioner, they advise, is before the hottest summer days arrive. Between January and May, air conditioner sales are generally slower so you can shop in less crowded stores and get the full attention of the appliance salesman. Prices may also be lower when the temperature is lower.

Think about what your requirements are. For example, it's important to select an air conditioner of the right capacity to meet your needs. An air conditioner cools and dehumidifies the air.

A unit that's too large cools a room too quickly, before it can do enough dehumidifying, so the room feels cold and clammy. A too-small unit can't cool adequately. Make sure you know the dimensions of the room or rooms you want to cool.

Fans save energy

Some models have a fan control that can be set for continuous fan operation or intermittent fan operation which can help save energy. During intermittent operation, the fan turns on only when the room temperature begins to climb and additional cooling is needed.

A variety of air direction controls are available. Some have two-way controls that direct cool air to the left or right. Others offer four-way controls that aim the air up or down and right or left.

Consider room position

In making your choice, consider where in the room the air conditioner will be installed. Will you want cooled air directed toward or away from the door, directly toward you, or in yet another direction?

Some models have an air changer control with three choices: circulating room air only for fastest cooling, bringing in outside air to alleviate that "closed-in" feeling, or exhausting room air to the outdoors.

Before you go shopping you should know: How many rooms and connecting halls do you want to cool? What is the size of each room and hall? Are the rooms sunny or shaded? How many windows are in each room and what size and type are they? Are room walls insulated? What about the ceilings? What electric voltage is available?

Beat the heat!

Following these suggestions offered by Whirlpool home economists can help make your air conditioner shopping trip much easier—and you'll be a step ahead in beating those uncomfortable hot summer days and nights that will soon be here.

Condensation-resistant windows aren't enough!

There's a difference between a mystery and a myth. There's no mystery about condensation and ice on your windows.

But if you've ever looked for an explanation of its causes, you've probably encountered a lot of myths . . . none of which solved the problem.

Research report

Recent research, completed by one of the country's foremost manufacturers of window energy conservation products, identifies the energy efficiency and condensation resistance of 200 different windows, which includes virtually every existing window type found in American homes.

And the study shows a possible condensation and icing situation can exist in as many as 158 of these 200 windows.

According to Fred M. Schmidt, Manager of Corporate Communications for Season-all Industries, who completed this research, "These condensation and icing possibilities can exist in 79% of the window systems we've identified.

Condensation factor

"But this doesn't mean that changing to windows or window systems which are condensation resistant will necessarily solve the problem. Even these windows are dependent on the amount of moisture in the air inside the house and the difference between the inside and outside temperature."

No window is condensation proof, any more than a wall or a dresser or a drinking glass. Any material will condense excessive moisture from heavily laden air if the material is significantly cooler than the air.

Two-fold solution

So, the solution to condensation problems with windows is two-fold. The first requirement is to bring the inside relative humidity under control. Once this is done and the problem still exists, then the second need is for warmer windows.

Excessive moisture can be reduced by decreasing the production of moisture into the inside air and by proper ventilation.

Some windows can be warmed up by adding storm windows. Others, particularly drafty, deteriorated windows, may have to be replaced.

Informative booklet

Solving window condensation problems requires being knowledgeable about relative humidity, living habits which generate moisture, proper ventilation and how to identify condensation-resistant windows.

All of this is discussed in detail, in a new 36-page book, "Windows and Condensation," which is available for $2 from Season-all Industries, Department MS-2, Indiana, Pa. 15701.

Mr. Schmidt advises anyone thinking about investing in window improvements, particularly to remedy a condensation situation, to first become thoroughly knowledgeable about the subject before calling the window man. Too many people selling windows simply don't know the answers.

Start your day a delightful new way with a light, colorful approach to kitchen decorating.

It's easy to turn a part of your kitchen—or any unused home space—into a cheerful breakfast bar with the decorator zing of contemporary Americana.

Interior designer Emy Leeser (NHFL) has created a new look for kitchens using neutrals and naturals highlighted by pretty pastel accents.

She begins her perky approach to the breakfast bar with a rich foundation—sleek sheet vinyl flooring in the "Olympia Tile" pattern from GAF's GAFSTAR 5400 Series of patterns.

Ms. Leeser uses a rich sienna brown for a deep, natural color beginning. The handsome hexagon motif of "Olympia Tile," which looks exactly like glazed ceramic tiles, is as practical for kitchen use as it is pretty.

Topped with the super-shiny urethane coating of GAF's Brite-Bond floor coverings, it makes for easy cleaning, easy viewing and easy living.

For a light and airy contrast to the rich browns of the floor, Ms. Leeser has introduced the new look of pastels in a smart wallcovering fabric and a painted counter and stools, using soft and warm curry, pale paprika and cream beige.

The see-through fabric of the window curtains and the addition of hanging plants heighten the open feeling of this charming setting.

A wonderful space-saving idea for apartment dwellers and homeowners alike, this softly colorful nook can be created in any unused area or "lost space" or in, or adjacent to, the kitchen proper.

But no matter where you choose to create your pretty new breakfast nook, it's one of the best improvements you can make not only for your home, but also for yourself and all your brighter mornings!

Seal up house to cut leakage

Federal government figures say that as much as 55% of the normal heating load on your house comes from 'air infiltration.'

That's heat lost through open doors and other leaks. Some 15% to 30% of the load is heat lost through cracks around closed doors and windows.

Put them all together and the cracks in an average house equal a hole half the size of a card table! You can throw a lot of money through a hole that size!

And, of course, it works both ways: wasted heat in winter is the same as lost cooling in summer when you have air conditioning.

Stop leaks

The most cost-effective way to cut loss of heating and cooling energy around doors and windows is to caulk and install professional weatherseals.

Homeowners, for the first time, can obtain professional weatherseals from the nation's largest producer: Schlegel Corporation of Rochester, NY.

Two kinds of weatherseals do the job: "Polyflex" door seals and foam window seals. Each comes with self-adhesive backing for easy mounting.

Weatherseal for doors

When the door is closed, it presses against the strip, creating a tight seal that is invisible when the door is closed.

Polyflex weatherseal will last for many years without shrinking, cracking, fading or rotting.

Multi-purpose foam

Schlegel brand foam weatherseals are made of a compressible polyurethane foam clad with a tough vinyl skin which is both attractive and easy to clean.

The skin is coated with an adhesive backing that permits the foam seal to be quickly mounted to any surface.

There are four shapes to choose from, so that there is a shape to meet those tough sealing problems around kitchen fans, outside vents and attic hatchways.

A particularly popular use for foam, now that the warm season is almost here, is to seal the cracks between air conditioners and sash when they are installed in windows.

The full story of how weatherseals can cut your home heating and cooling expenses can be obtained from: Weatherseals Department, Schlegel Corporation, P. O. Box 23113, Rochester, NY 14692.

Your kitchen design should keep energy-saving in mind

Beauty is only skin deep—or surface deep, you might say when applying the adage to kitchen remodeling.

Whether your plans include total revamping or the simple addition of a new appliance, remember that there's more to remodeling than just aesthetics.

For long-lasting satisfaction from kitchen improvements, try to strike a balance between decorative appeal and energy-efficiency.

An eye-pleasing arrangement will quickly become a sore spot if it takes its energy toll on you and the utility bill.

To establish a kitchen scheme that's energy-sound, experts at McGraw-Edison Kitchen Appliance Division, makers of Modern Maid appliances, suggest you locate major appliances so that functions do not conflict.

Keep the range and refrigerator at a distance to prevent the cooling elements in the refrigerator from working overtime to compensate for heat emitted by the range. Likewise, refrigerators should not be placed near radiators or heat-producing appliances.

Automatic dishwashing actually requires less water than doing the job by hand. Even so, there are important considerations when adding this kitchen convenience.

Situate dishwashers near the water source to prevent water heat loss. You may even want to install a water heater near the sink and dishwasher, or insulate pipes leading to these outlets to conserve heat and energy dollars.

Explore and expand cooking options for even more energy saving techniques. Microwave cooking reduces energy expenditure by half, with the added bonus of saving time, too. Since microwaves heat only the food, kitchen air temperature remains unchanged, a special advantage for summer cooking.

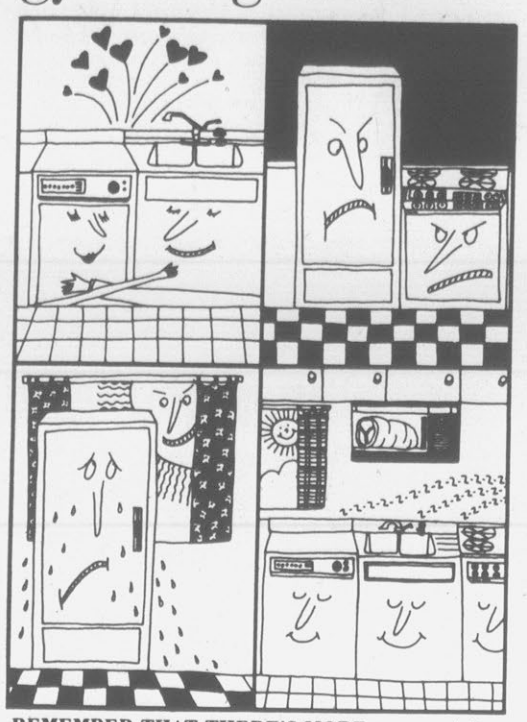
Another energy saver, and one that can cut food bills, too, is the new range that offers slow crockery-style cooking for old-fashioned goodness and economy.

For example, the Slo/Cook feature found exclusively on Modern Maid ovens reduces by half the amount of energy consumed by slowly simmering foods to a tenderness usually afforded by only expensive cuts. And, since Slo/Cook requires no stirring or attention from the cook, it frees valuable hours for the busy homemaker.

Integrate outside factors such as sunshine or drafts into your kitchen scheme to maximize efficiency. Sinks are best situated near windows to take advantage of the warmth and illumination of natural sunlight, while refrigerators "sweat it out" when exposed to warming rays.

Ranges shudder at the thought of a draft, but refrigerators work best when circulating air ventilates condenser coils and helps them to work at maximum efficiency.

Keeping these suggestions in mind, approach your remodeling project with a common-sense attitude. Making kitchen appliances work at maximum efficiency will save energy and dollars and contribute to a harmonious kitchen scheme.



REMEMBER THAT THERE'S MORE to remodeling than aesthetics. To keep your kitchen in tune, the McGraw-Edison Kitchen Appliance Division offers these suggestions. Clockwise, from upper left: Side by side is the ideal location for dishwasher and sink to best conserve hot water and energy pennies . . . Ranges and refrigerators should never be neighbors, or the refrigerator will have to work overtime to offset heat produced by the range . . . The warming rays of the sun can cause your refrigerator to break into a cold sweat. Keep refrigerators away from windows, radiators or any heat-producing source . . . Here's one easy way to give hard-working appliances and yourself a rest. Microwave ovens cook food without emitting heat or smoke so both kitchen and cook stay cool. Some models, like this one from Modern Maid, can be conveniently affixed beneath cabinets or attached to walls.

Beautiful ways to add home storage space

Are you going to lose money this spring?

In today's world of high prices and runaway inflation, being wasteful is not the smart thing to do. Yet, most of us, no matter how close we stick to our budget, are guilty of wasting a precious commodity in our homes—storage space.

Storage space is expensive. Just ask your local builder the cost of adding square footage to your home. If you were to add square footage, there's a good chance you could wind up wasting space there, too.

Utilize shelving

Every year at this time, many of us are faced with the problem of what to do with all the things that seem to have accumulated around the house. We wind up getting "rid" of perfectly good things just because there's no room for them. We either sell them at a garage sale for a fraction of what they're worth or, even worse, throw them away.

There is an answer to this dilemma and it is a lot easier and less expensive than building another closet or adding another room. The answer is—a shelving system.

Whether it's in the living room, the bedroom or the basement and attic, shelving puts empty wall space to work for you.

In addition to extra space, shelving can help with your decorating problems, too. It might be just the thing you're looking for to brighten up that bare wall that seems to be staring back at you.

Perennially popular

After all, why have all those nice figurines and other pretty "show-offs" in boxes in the attic, out of sight, when you can display them with shelving? Think of the extra storage space they take up.

Shelving in one form or the other has been around for a long time. During recent years, however, shelving has become an extremely popular do-it-yourself project, so much so that one would think people are discovering it for the first time. In a way, this is true, but rather than discover shelving, we have discovered shelving systems.

No longer is it necessary to put up shelving that becomes a permanent fixture or is unattractive and expensive. The Voyager, natural wood shelving from Knape & Vogt Mfg. Co., is a good example of the beauty and style of shelving readily available at local retail outlets.

Coordinate the look

Made of solid wood, Voyager shelving is so good looking you might want to call it wall furniture.

Most important of all, you don't have to go through many aggravating hours to install it, either. It is designed for easy do-it-yourself installation.

Coordinating wood brackets attach to the wall and the shelf is then placed on the brackets. Matching colonnades are available to add even more charm, so that in less than a half hour you have truly decorative shelving that is functional as well as beautiful.

Efficient alternative

In addition to all-wood, there is another form of wall shelving system. There are three basic components of this other type, starting with channel-shaped strips called standards. These standards fasten to the wall and matching brackets are attached. A shelf is then placed on the brackets to form the system.

Made of steel or aluminum, standards are available in a variety of lengths, in most instances ranging from 12 inches to 72 inches. They come in a wide selection of decorator colors and finishes.

For example, Knape & Vogt, who also makes this type of system (KV is the largest manufacturer of shelving products in the world), offers more than 20 finishes, from metallic bronze and brushed anochrome, to bright yellow and soft earthtone colors.

The brackets in these systems are available in the same styles and colors to match the standards and give an appealing coordinated look.

With hook-shaped projections which lock into place on the standard, they can be located at different positions along the length of the standard.

Bracket lengths vary, usually from 8 to 12 inches. Of course, the size selected depends on the width of the shelves in the system.

Like the standards and brackets, there is also a wide selection of shelves available to blend with or match the system you select.

This type of shelving is extremely easy to install, too. With a few simple tools, such as a screwdriver, a level and a drill, you can install it with hardly any work at all.

Don't waste space

So, if you are planning a garage sale this spring, perhaps you should think twice about it.

Let's face it, garage sales are great to go to, because there are quite a few bargains to be had. But, on the other hand, since they are such a great place for bargains, why would yours be any different?

By making use of the wasted space in your home with shelving, you won't have to get rid of those perfectly good things you own. And, you can go get the bargains at someone else's garage sale.

SHELVING SYSTEMS, like Voyager from Knape & Vogt, are good looking and functional. In addition, they're very easy to install and designed for the do-it-yourselfer.

Restoring lawn and garden important springtime chore

Whether you opt for flowers, vegetables, or both, there are times when Mother Nature needs a bit of help.

Spread some grass seed to fill in those "after winter" brown spots dotting the lawn, and prune shrubs to promote growth and keep the yard looking neat and inviting.

Keep your gardening hand tools in good working condition by taking proper care of them after each use. Fertilizer attracts moisture and invites rust, so begin by scraping off any fertilizer-mud build-up. Then, spray your hand tools with Fantastik® spray cleaner and wipe with a paper towel or clean cloth, and then dry.

Don't leave tools out-of-doors, exposed to the elements; when they're not in use, outdoor equipment should be kept in a dry place.

Before storing metal tools for long periods of time, coat them with oil to protect them from moisture and rust.

When the landscaping and gardening is completed, reassemble—and recondition, if need be—your lawn furniture so you can relax in a refreshing spring breeze and enjoy the scenery.

Kitchen remodeling starts with planning

There really is no great mystery to planning a kitchen layout that suits your family's needs.

Haas Cabinet Company of Sellersburg, Indiana says it is well within the province of a homeowner knowledgeable about his requirements. Some may even wish to do their own cabinet installation.

But there are some things to consider. You may want to add a few cabinets, update your kitchen or do a complete remodeling job.

Some professional help may be required, however, for electrical or plumbing installations to meet legal requirements.

Once you've decided on the kind of kitchen layout you have in mind, Haas suggests you lay out the plan on graph paper, the way a professional would.

The most efficient step-saver is the work triangle which places each of the three main work areas—the refrigerator-freezer, the range-oven and the sink-dishwasher—at approximately equidistant points of a triangle.

Besides the standard wall, base and corner cabinets, Haas suggests you consider specialized cabinets such as sink and range base cabinets and oven and utility cabinets.

Haas cabinets, which bear the certification seal of the National Kitchen Cabinet Association, are designed to withstand years of hard use, besides making the kitchen more efficient.

An excellent source of help is the "Do-It-Yourself Kitchen Guide," which can be obtained for 50 cents from the Haas Cabinet Co., Dept. M, Sellersburg, Indiana 47172. The booklet offers useful tips and includes a plan-graph.

Another source of assistance with any special problems that might arise is your local Haas Cabinet dealer.

NHIC predicts record spending for fix-ups

An economy that is showing signs of returning to double-digit inflation, growing family incomes, the soaring cost of new homes, and a desire to get things done before the price goes up is leading American homeowners to record spending levels on repairs, remodeling and modernization.

Homeowners have learned an important economic lesson: whether it involves a new home or an existing one, homeownership remains an excellent investment and a solid hedge against inflation. However, with the price of new homes soaring out of sight, rising to $63,000 in the first half of 1978, from 1977's $54,400, many homeowners are opting to stay put and remodel their current homes.

Others are discovering the cost of existing single-family homes more suited to the family budget.

According to the latest figures, the median price of an existing single family home in July 1978 was $49,400, nearly $14,000 less than the price tag on a newly built home.

Home bargains

The National Home Improvement Council says many first time buyers are beginning to recognize existing homes as bargains. Often, they use the money saved on the cost of a new home to modernize the existing home they purchase.

A result of this is the added spaciousness and charm of an older home, and a remodeling industry that is enjoying record spending levels.

Record high

NHIC points to Commerce Department figures which show that expenditures for upkeep and improvements in the second quarter of 1978 rose to an estimated seasonally adjusted annual rate of $38.3 billion, a record high. This compares with modernization spending of $30.7 billion in the like period of 1977.

NHIC president Edward A. More, of Formica Corporation, predicts home repair and remodeling expenditures will reach $40 billion in 1979.

He bases his estimate on the annual 10 percent growth, or more, the remodeling industry has experienced over the last several years.

Vital economy booster

Citing these figures, More says the record volume represents "solid evidence that the home remodeling industry is performing a necessary and vital function in boosting the nation's economy."

"At the same time," More adds, "the NHIC serves as a key element in seeing to it that the high professional and ethical standards in the home remodeling industry are maintained."

Umbrella organization

The National Home Improvement Council is the umbrella organization for more than 2,600 contractors, manufacturers, sales firms, utility companies and publishers in the home improvement field.

In happy homes he saw the light
Of household fires gleam warm and bright.

THERE IS A WEALTH of oriental design furniture and decorative accessories to add a fresh accent to homes or to theme a full room. These pieces, selected from the showrooms of the New York Merchandise Mart, typify the vast selection now available at stores across the country.

Oriental styles are new western favorites

Whether attributable to political trends or other factors, oriental decorative motifs and shapes, always among the most enduring and favored styles for furniture and accessories, are attaining new heights of popularity.

Either adapted as the theme for furnishing a full room or as an accent, the designs are pleasing to live with, blending with almost every period and type of furnishings.

The Far Eastern love of nature, attention to detailing and classic form have inspired the unusual elegance and variety of forms exemplified by this multitude of home furnishings from exhibitors at the New York Merchandise Mart. Evident in them is the manner in which designers through the ages have reinterpreted picturesque oriental studies of flora and fauna to suit western tastes.

The gentle shapes and softly curving silhouettes of ginger jars, ceremonial tea cups and bamboo styling reflect these cultures. Colors are clear, with deep jewel tones providing depth and pastels imparting tranquility.

Manufacturers focusing on these forms now offer an enormous selection of Eastern-influenced merchandise that can add their refined nature and decorative character to the home. Any of the pieces shown here would make a pleasing addition to the mood of a room. These latest definitions of this trend can be seen in stores everywhere.

Self-cleaning ovens save time and energy

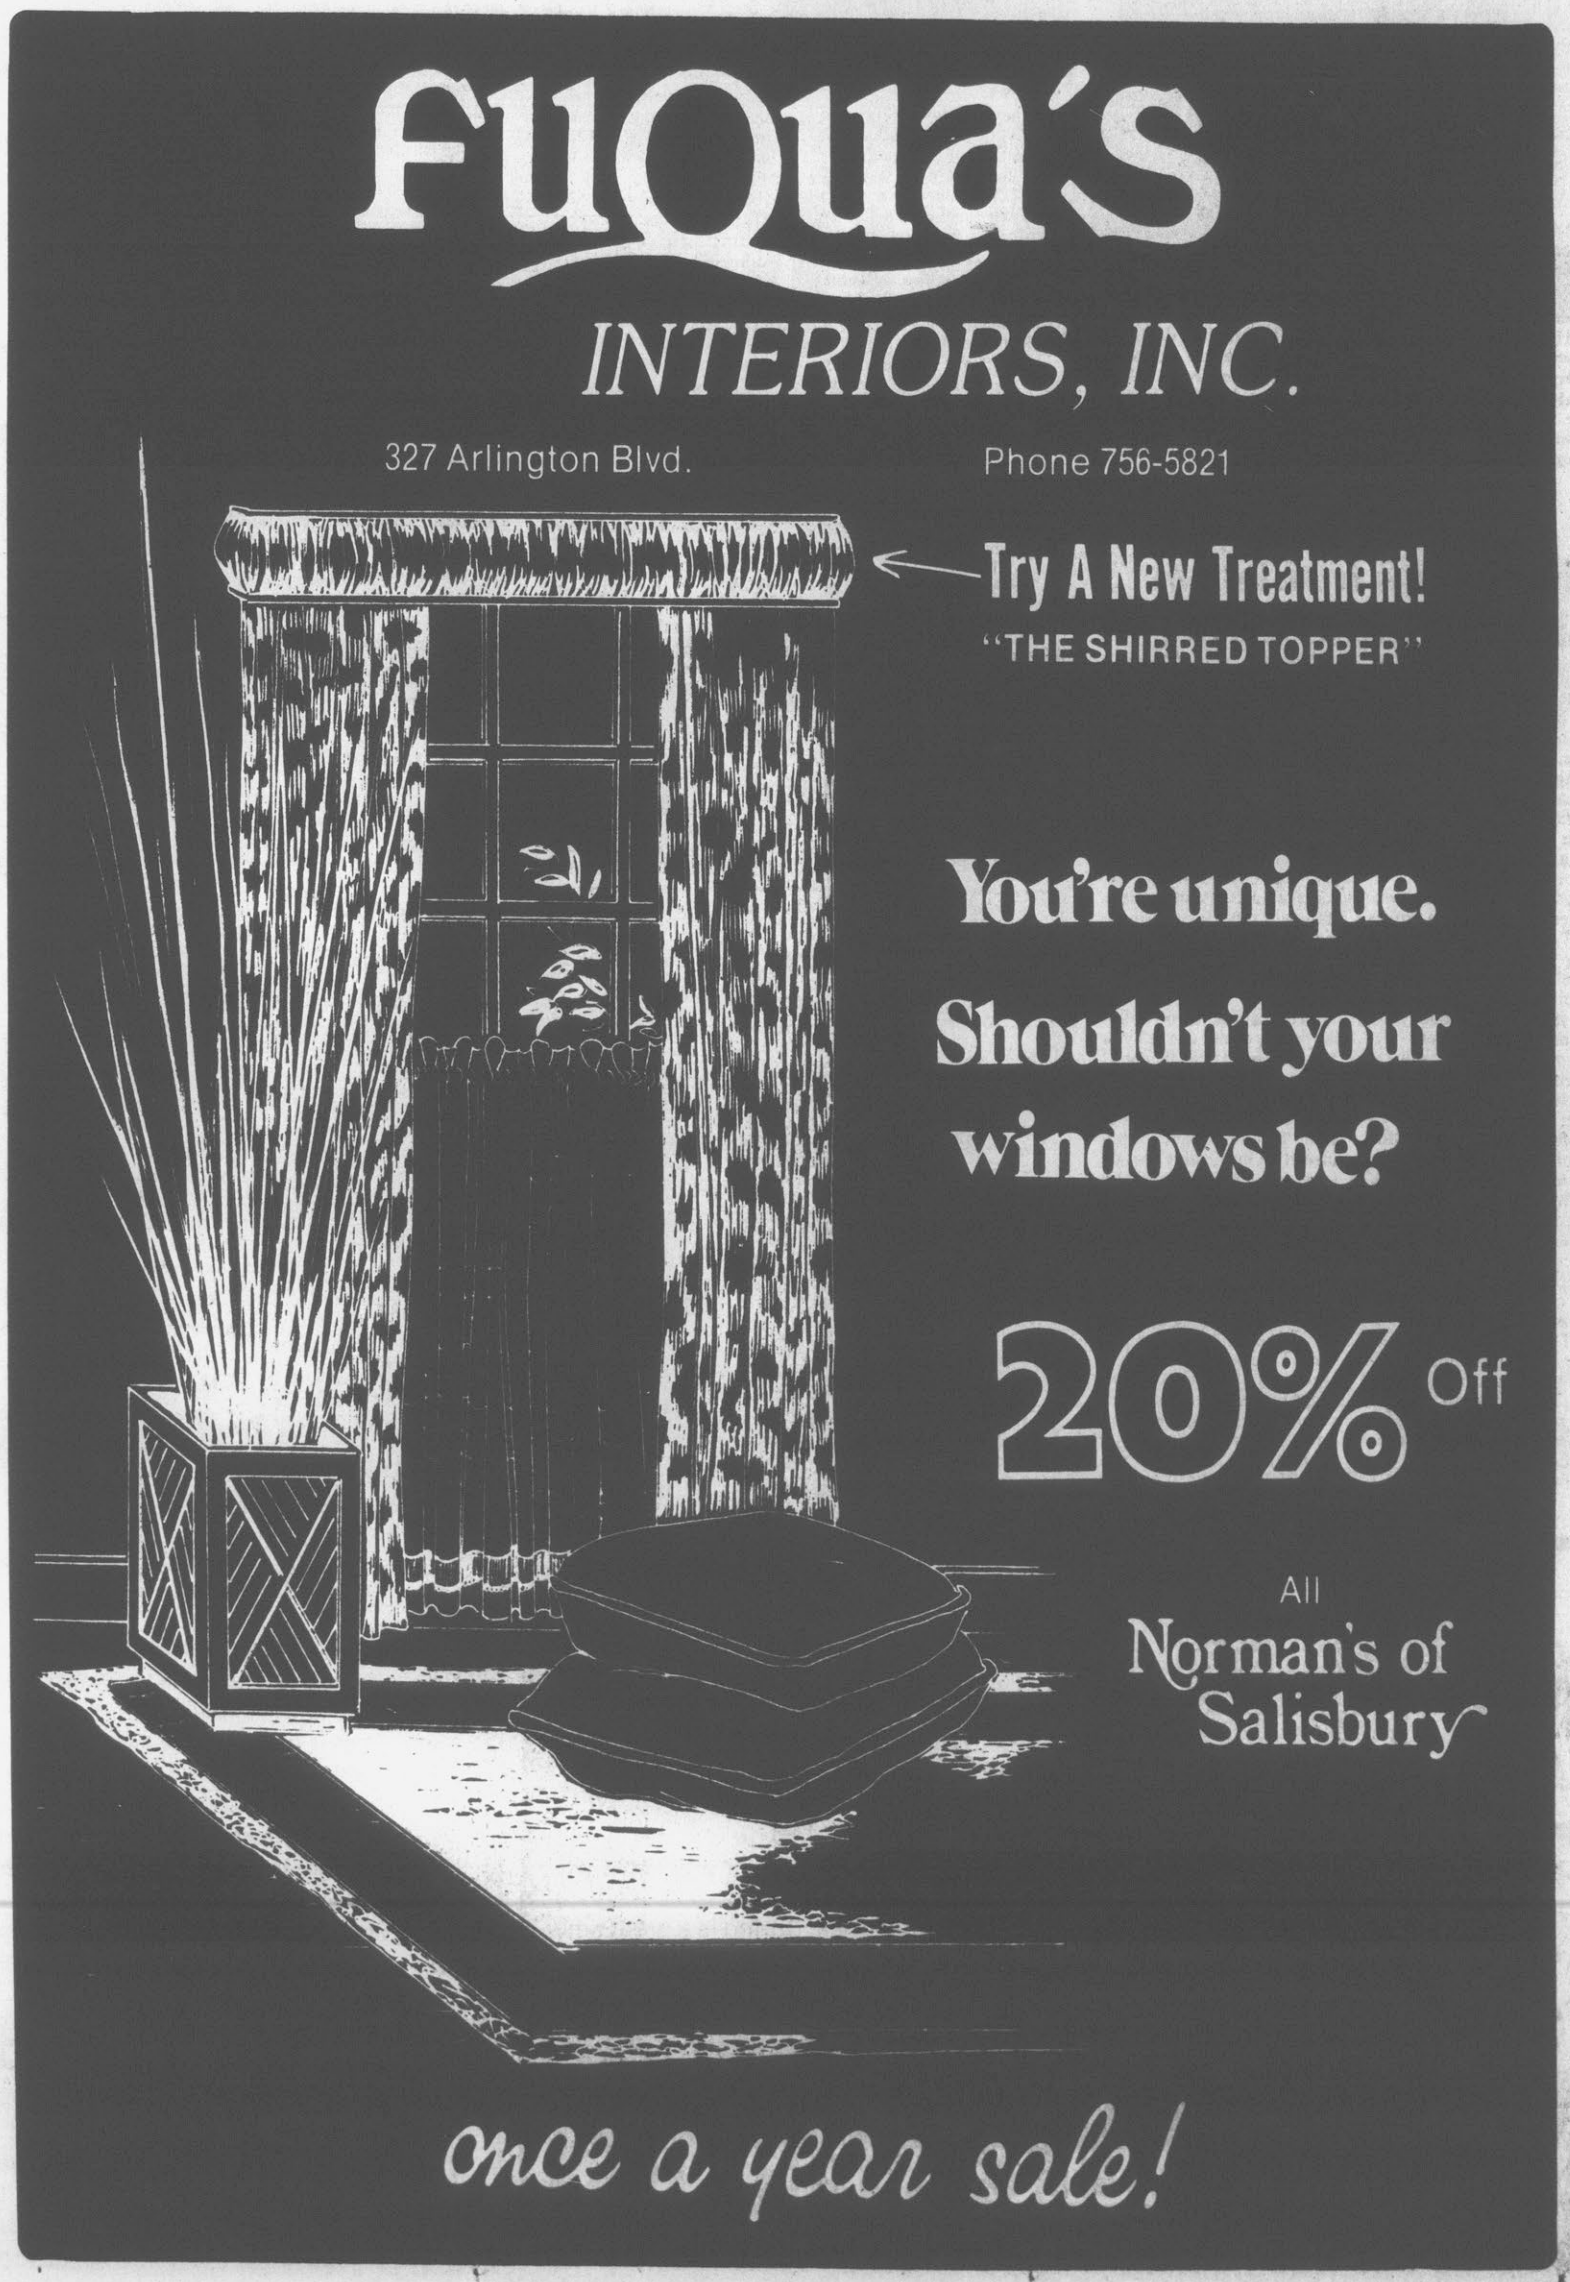
Electric ranges with the Self-Cleaning oven feature sometimes are accused of being wasteful of energy.

But studies show that such ranges use no more electricity than do conventional ranges that must be sprayed, foamed, scrubbed and scoured by hand. It takes only seconds to set the Self-Clean controls for automatic, electric cleaning, which results in saving hours of a homemaker's time over the course of a year.

According to spokesmen at Hotpoint, it costs about 16 cents for the oven to clean itself. That is the present national average cost (based on a national average cost of 3.8¢/kwh for electricity, as determined by the U.S. Department of Energy) of the approximately four kilowatt-hours of electricity used by the range during the cleaning process.

However, the specially designed insulation system means using less electricity during normal baking and roasting. In fact, enough energy is saved throughout a year's time to offset substantially the average cost of using the self-cleaning feature.

But even if it did cost 16 cents extra to clean the oven, the people at Hotpoint point out that it is still far less than the cost of aerosol, paste or foam cleaning agents which are offered to help the homemaker with the messy, difficult chore of removing burnt-on spills and splatter.



How to cover your walls and curb costs

Finding attractive, inexpensive wall covering is becoming a big problem. As the prices for home decorating materials continue to rise, the choices seem to become more and more limited.

The solution to this problem, available in any home decorating center, is more cost-effective than all the alternatives, creates a background compatible with any decorating style, and is applicable to any surface. What is it? Paint!

For example, a roll of vinyl-coated wallpaper can cost $15.00 (or more) and cover 30 square feet. This means that it would cost $120.00 to wallpaper an 8′ x 8′ bathroom. However, you can paint the whole room with a half gallon of the most expensive paint on the market for approximately $10.00.

What's more, a new generation of paints is revolutionizing the industry, making it possible to create rich-looking designer backgrounds at a fraction of the price of wood, fabric, or vinyl wall coverings.

PAINT MAKES IT POSSIBLE . . . a four-tone graphic winds its way through the living and dining areas of this apartment. The effect is inexpensive yet dramatic.

Keeping up with fashion-minded wallpaper and paneling manufacturers, The O'Brien Corporation, maker of Fuller-O'Brien Paints, has created a variety of wall coating collections to meet your every imaginable need for beauty and style, durability, long-lasting protection and scrubbability.

One of the innovative newcomers, called Ultra-Colors, is available in latex and alkyd formulas. These exceptionally deep toned hues can be applied to both interior and exterior surfaces. You generally achieve complete coverage with only one coat.

These high-fashion, vibrant colors make a dramatic and effective statement when used as part of a complete color scheme, inside and out. When used to accent, they enhance the beauty of furniture and accessories.

Traditional earthtones, so popular in today's decors, can be found in the Fuller-O'Brien Heritage Collection. Also applicable to interior and exterior surfaces, these colors recreate the dignity and warmth of the Colonial or Early American periods. They are, however, equally compatible with a sophisticated, contemporary setting.

Then there are Whisper Whites—a palette of neutral background hues, running from oyster to champagne.

Fuller-O'Brien Paints come in over 1,000 different shades and you will have no problem in finding a match for your decorating scheme. But can this color be duplicated later? It's as easy as a trip to your local paint store.

Fuller-O'Brien has standardized its formulas, making it easy to match that exact shade of beige for your new modular couch. If in five years you and your couch move into new digs with pink walls, don't spend $800 on a new couch. Take your formula to one of the 3,200 Fuller-O'Brien Pro Shops for an exact color match. In no time at all, you're back in beige.

If the price of labor, yours in particular, is a consideration, today's paints and applicators make the job less taxing than a round of golf—and, in many cases, less time-consuming. Brushes, rollers, pads and special gadgets for woodwork and hard-to-get-at places make it possible to cover a spacious dining room and entertain dinner guests the same evening.

Paint is one of the most versatile and inexpensive wall coverings available to home decorators. Many, however, live with white walls rather than risk choosing the wrong shade. Or spend a fortune on wallpaper, paneling and fabric to achieve a designer look.

With deference to economy and value, let's get over this habit and turn to paint to design a backdrop for our furniture and accessories. Even if you do make the wrong choice, a wall can be repainted at a fraction of the price of replacing wood, fabric, or expensive vinyls.

BRIGHT WAY TO START THE DAY! Interior designer Emy Leeser used the handsome hexagon motif of "Olympia Tile" in rich sienna brown from GAF's GAFSTAR 5400 Series of patterns as her inspiration for a charming breakfast bar with the unique color combinations of neutrals, naturals and pastels and the zing of contemporary Americana.

How to find out yourself if window improvement will pay

You suspect your windows are a major cause of heating and cooling energy waste. But, how can you tell how much they're wasting? How much of this might be conserved by adding storm windows? Or by installing new windows?

A new window energy use survey, devised by Season-all Industries of Indiana, Pa., identifies Energy Use Index (E.I.U.) numbers for more than 200 existing and energy improved window conditions.

It also identifies possible condensation situations you can expect from various improvement options.

With these numbers, it's easy to calculate the approximate percentage of energy efficiency improvement that is possible with different window energy conservation measures.

For example, non-weatherstripped, single glass, double-hung (operate up and down) wood windows could have an E.U.I. of something like 125.

If these windows were fitted with good storm windows, the E.U.I. might reduce to about 75, which is 60% of the 125, or a 40% improvement.

If the old windows were replaced with new "thermalized" windows, the E.U.I. might be as low as 50. This is a 60% improvement.

Knowing the window improvement, you can estimate the reduction this could make in overall heating fuel and cooling power consumption.

Existing windows in average condition probably account for about 15% of the space comfort conditioning costs in an average home. A 40% window improvement, therefore, would save 40% of this 15% (or 6%) of the total bills.

A 60% window improvement could reduce overall heating and cooling consumption by 9%. This is based on improving average condition windows. For deteriorated windows, this could be as much as a 15% total energy saving.

Window improvement can lead to maintenance savings as well as energy savings. For example, the cost of painting windows every five years ($40 to $50 per window is about average for two coats of paint) could be reduced by about one-third by installing storm windows which help the paint last longer.

Or, virtually the total painting cost could be saved every five years by replacing existing wood windows with baked enamel finished aluminum replacement windows.

By dividing the cost of window modification by the annual estimated energy and maintenance savings, you can find the number of years it should take for your savings to repay your investment.

Generally, a window energy improvement investment is a good investment. If your payback period is twenty years, your investment is earning 5% a year.

A ten-year payback means you are earning 10% a year on your investment. And you keep on earning for as long as you own your home.

The new window energy use survey is available in two versions. Part A is for use by people thinking about adding storm windows and Part B evaluates the energy and maintenance payback for new replacement windows.

Fiber glass insulation for year-round savings

With all that has been said about the energy crisis and with homeowners experiencing the reality of rising fuel costs, many homeowners are taking the necessary steps to insulate their homes as well as they possibly can. Still, there are some who put off doing what they know to be important.

Possibly many homeowners feel that insulation proves itself most effective in keeping a house warm in winter, thereby helping control heating bills. They should realize that insulation is equally important in hot weather.

Proper insulation will cut the energy used for air conditioning. Insulation helps keep homes consistently comfortable and this comfort factor also applies to homes that are not air conditioned.

"When it comes to insulation, most people are aware of the fact that the preferred material is fiber glass," says Joseph D. Murphy, General Merchandise Manager of Johns-Manville.

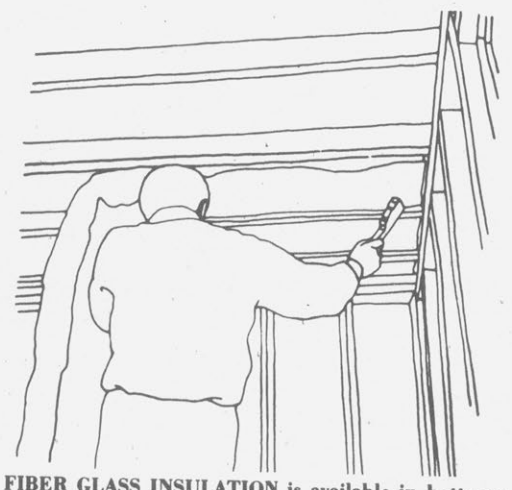
"The reason for this is that fiber glass insulation, exclusive of facings, is fire resistant, impervious to moisture and rot and, once it is properly installed, will not 'settle' as do some insulations."

Fiber glass insulation is available in batts or blankets (meaning pre-cut or in rolls) and is easily installed in accessible open areas either by a contractor or do-it-yourselfer.

The attic area is a prime target for reinsulation in many older homes. If there is no insulation in the attic, fiber glass faced with kraft paper or foil is recommended. If there is some insulation already in the attic, unfaced batts or rolls should be laid on top of the existing insulation.

"The contractor or building supply dealer can tell you what you need to do the job," continues Murphy. "Insulation comes in various thicknesses from R-11 to R-30. It is important to buy insulation by R-value, not by inches. The higher the R-value, the better the insulation.

"One of the important facts about fiber glass batts and rolls," concludes Johns-Manville's Murphy, "is that these products are quality-controlled at the factory. This gives them advantages over blowing wool or foam type insulations. And, when properly installed, they will work for the homeowner both summer and winter virtually indefinitely."



FIBER GLASS INSULATION is available in batts or blankets (meaning pre-cut or in rolls) and is easily installed in accessible open areas either by a contractor or do-it-yourselfer.

Join in a spring reaction!

React to Spring! Now that winter's snows have receded, revitalize your thinking . . . and enjoy the warm weather.

Here are some suggestions to help you prepare for Spring both in and out-of-doors:

• Restock your kitchen—it's a much-frequented place in warm weather. Reorganize pantry and refrigerator shelves so that between-meal snacks and fruit juices are in easy-to-reach places. To quickly and easily clean-up greasy spills and splatters, use Grease relief™ all-purpose degreaser. Simply spray the degreaser directly onto washable kitchen surfaces and un-plugged appliances and wipe with a damp sponge.

• Reaffirm your special interest: join a theatre group; take a course at a local college; renew your library card and borrow this year's best seller.

• Reassemble your lawn furniture and relax in a refreshing Spring breeze. Replant the garden . . . and teach the kids how plants grow by letting them plant carrot tops and fruit seeds.

• Re-enact a New Year's resolution: resist fattening foods.

• Also, get together with friends at someone's house and form your own private "health spa." Begin by doing calisthenics to an inexpensive exercise record. Serve a low-calorie lunch to everyone, and spend the afternoon giving each other facials and manicures or experimenting with new hairstyles.

You may buy your next home —and its contents—in a store!

For years, builders have displayed home furnishings as options with their new model homes.

Now, the trend has been reversed. A major home furnishings dealer is displaying and selling homes, and offering his furniture, bedding, carpets, draperies and accessories as options!

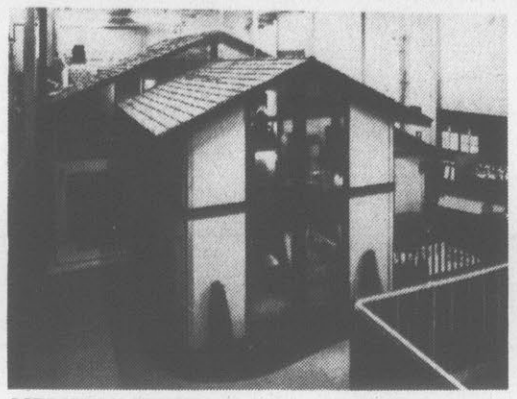
The Seattle retailer introduced the idea of one-stop shopping for a completely furnished "Lifestyle Home" early last year, when he erected an energy-efficient modular model home in the warehouse of his main store.



LIFESTYLE HOME—This isn't a doll's house, but a completely furnished, two-story modular home on display in the warehouse of a Seattle home furnishings merchant. The one-stop shopping idea may soon be nationally franchised.

Popular homes

Based on the widespread acceptance of the home-and-furnishings package, Doces hopes to franchise the concept to other home furnishings retailers around the nation.

The most popular home with consumers, thus far, has been a 1,909-square-foot two-story model with celestory and spiral staircase to the upper level.

There are five other home styles offered, starting at $39,800. They range in size, from a 1,024-square-foot rambler to a 2,168-square-foot four-bedroom, 2½ bath colonial.

The homes being marketed by Doces are built by Nanco Corporation, a well-known West Coast manufacturer of windows and doors, which has branched out into modular housing.

"Lifestyle Homes" feature Nanco's precision-fitting, interlocking mega-strut wall panels. They are pre-assembled in standard configurations at the factory and a complete home can be erected, by just two men and ready for occupancy, in less than 30 days.

Considerable savings

By reducing on-site labor and construction costs, the Nanco system provides savings which enable the buyer to completely furnish his new home, while spending overall no more than he would for a conventionally built, totally unfurnished home.

Doces offers, at a discount, houseful of furnishings packages ranging in price from as little as $2,500 up to $10,000. The buyer can make his furnishings selections, with the help of a Doces interior decorator, any time within 12 months of his home purchase.

Credit terms available

While the home is financed with a long-term FHA, VA or conventional mortgage, financing for the home furnishings can be arranged through the General Electric Credit Corporation.

GECC was selected by Doces because they are the leading national lender in the home products field.

With spring here, there's no better time to repaint or wallcover your home.

Another plus about the fair-weather, you can throw open all your windows to avoid a "stuffy" house.

There's a variety of do-it-yourself kits on the market that let you do anything from paneling a room to laying down carpets, all by yourself, without spending a fortune on outside help.

The only thing to watch out for here is to make sure you have the basic knowledge and skill to do these projects yourself.

Start thinking of roofing before trouble starts

The best time to think of buying a new roof is long before trouble starts. If you have a leaking roof, you may already have extensive damage in the deck beneath the roof. When and if your roof is in that kind of shape, it's panic all the way.

It's not easy at a time like that to start worrying about color and shadow lines and texture, and the many other options that should be considered when investing in a new roof. Obviously, the time to think of a new roof is when nothing is wrong with the old one except that it is approaching its middle teens.

Most homes in the U.S.A. (more than 85%) have asphalt shingle roofs. The remainder are roofed with cedar, slate and other materials. In any case, when the roof is reaching old age, and the critical time for most standard weight roofs is approximately 15 years, it's time to call on a professional roofer for an inspection.

Some of the things he will look for are split and missing shingles; shingles which have curled at the edges and are obviously dried out; bare shingles, no longer covered with a coating of protective granules; lots of granules in the drains and gutters; and so on.

He will also check the areas where roof and chimney, vents or other structures meet. The flashing used for protection at these vulnerable portions of the roof may have deteriorated. Caulking may have dried out and disappeared. Nails may be loosened or missing, so that the shingle is not adhering tightly to the deck.

HEAVYWEIGHT Timberline asphalt shingles provide the massive appearance, accented shadowline and irregular roof pattern so popular with homeowners. Available in six earth-tone blends designed to harmonize with all types of sidings.

Drains may be clogged and gutters full of leaves and debris, so that snow and moisture have backed up and penetrated beneath the shingles. Even though no damage may be apparent as yet, the day of reckoning could be only a snow or rainstorm away.

The wise homeowner will act long before that time arrives. In doing so, he will not only be able to buy his roof at the best price by checking estimates of a number of reputable roofers in his vicinity, but will also have the option of choosing the type and color of shingle he really wants to live with.

Considering that standard weight shingles normally last 15 years, and heavyweight shingles may last up to 25 years, such a choice comes only once or twice in a lifetime and should be given the time and thought reserved for important purchases.

What should a homeowner look for in a new roof? Protection is obviously the primary consideration. The roof must protect the house from rain, sleet, snow, hail, fire and other potential dangers.

Asphalt shingles, which combine protection against all of these hazards with reasonable cost, are by far the favorite choice of homeowners throughout the country.

Appearance, which combines color and design, is another reason why asphalt shingles are so popular. No other type of shingle offers practically a rainbow of color, and so much texture and pattern to choose from.

Cedar, in comparison, is available in a single color, and offers no protection against fire. Slate is difficult to apply and is extremely expensive.

Asphalt shingles are offered as standard weight 235 lb. per square types, or as heavier types weighing approximately 280, 300, 330 or more lbs. per square (a square equals 100 square feet of roof area).

Heavier shingles are thicker, with extra layers of waterproofing asphalt. Heavier weights are often warrantied for up to 25 years, in comparison with the 15 year warranty normally accorded to standard weight shingles.

For very long service, and the desirable massive appearance preferred by so many home-owners, GAF recommends a heavyweight shingle such as Timberline.

According to surveys, color is the primary factor in the choice of a shingle by most home-owners. Which color is best for you? A lot depends on your siding and the surrounding environment.

Light-colored roofing makes a house look taller. The darker colors, such as the popular earth-tones, can help to reduce the impression of height. A contrasting roof color, such as charcoal, will provide a dramatic roof for a house with white or gray siding.

Do not use more than three colors for roof, siding and trim. Finally, do not ever forget that you may be living with the same roof for the next 15 to 25 years. Choose carefully.

Residing restores an aging home

Is your home aging gracefully? If not, maybe it needs a 'face lift.' New siding can rejuvenate an aging home, says the National Home Improvement Council.

Residing your home can restore its looks, or it can give your home a completely different appearance.

Textures, colors and patterns can be varied to make your home appear taller, wider, more rustic or more modern. With the application of one of numerous sidings that simulate other materials your home can be made to resemble fieldstone, clapboard or brick.

But residing is more than cosmetic surgery, notes the Council. New siding can also reduce upkeep and maintenance costs. Depending on the material, siding can provide protection against cold, heat, noise, fire, rot, peeling and warping.

Among the siding materials available are vinyl, aluminum, wood, hardboard and steel. With such a large selection to choose from, your home can easily put its best 'face' forward.

A hammer is not just a hammer

The hammer—one of the most common tools around the house—may also be one of the most abused when it comes to both safety and usage.

According to the Hand Tools Institute, much of this danger and misuse is caused by the dangerous misconception that "a hammer is a hammer," and can be used for any job around the house.

The Institute, whose members include manufacturers of hammers and other striking and struck tools, points out that the average American owns only one hammer—usually a nail or claw hammer. In actual operation this popular hammer may be used in many ways it was never intended for.

For instance, that popular nail and claw hammer is designed for driving common nails and finishing nails which are relatively soft.

The claw hammer should never be used for striking cold chisels or hammering metal. When used for the wrong purpose the nail hammer face could chip and cause eye or body injury.

HTI recommends that, in addition to the claw hammer, every home handyman also should have a light ball pein hammer and a heavy ball pein, blacksmith's or hand drilling hammer.

The heavier hammers are used for striking cold chisels and for straightening or shaping metal. The lighter ball pein can be used on punches and in light metal working operations.

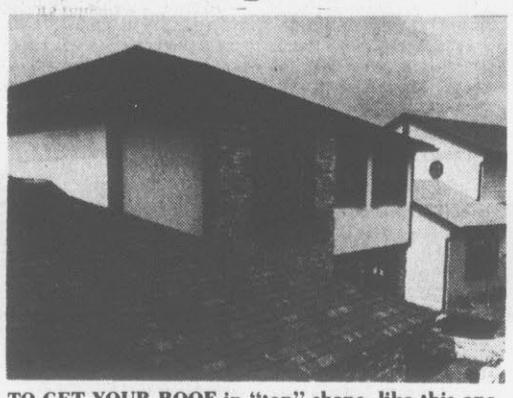
'Roofingese' in one easy lesson



TO GET YOUR ROOF in "top" shape, like this one, you should be familiar with the products available, and terms used to describe them. For more information, write to the CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482.

With inflation skyrocketing into outer space, most people are doing all they can to keep the roof over their heads. Even with all that trouble, though, very few know anything about their roofs.

In order to maintain a proper shelter, roofs are virtually indispensible. They keep out rain, snow and other falling elements from the sky.

And, though they prohibit a good look at the stars at night, it is generally a better idea to keep your roof in good repair and forget about stargazing.

According to the CertainTeed Home Institute, to be able to talk intelligently about your roof, you should know the special language used by roofing contractors.

For example, the term "flashing" to some people may mean anything from taking pictures to indecent exposure not necessarily related to photography.

However, in "roofingese," flashing means something quite different—it's strips of metal or roofing material used in making watertight joints on a roof, especially in valleys or where inclined and vertical surfaces intersect.

As you can see, it's very important to know the language of roofing. If you didn't, and your roofer mentioned that he was going to perform some flashing on your roof, you might get all dressed up or have him arrested.

And if your roofer tells you that your hip needs fixing, don't think he's been moonlighting at the hospital.

A hip, in roofingese, is an external angle formed by the intersection of two sloping ends of the roof; it's also a certain type of roof.

To save you further misunderstanding and possible embarrassment, here are some other roofing terms and their definitions from the CertainTeed Home Institute.

SQUARES—A roofing square is the amount of roofing materials required to cover a 100-square-foot area of roof surface. That's a ten foot by ten foot area.

EXPOSURE—This is the distance between the edge of one course of shingles and the edge of the next course. The exposure should not exceed the manufacturer's recommendation.

WEIGHT—When the roofing contractor refers to the weight of the shingle, he is talking about how much the shingle weighs (per square). The general rule is that the heavier the shingle, the longer the life expectancy.

However, the exception to that rule is the new class of fiber glass-based shingles which are lighter shingles that give long-term protection. CertainTeed's Glasstex fiber glass-based shingle, for example, has a light weight of only 260 pounds, yet it carries a long-lasting 25-year warranty.

"UL" LABEL—Underwriters Laboratories, Inc., is a widely known and accepted agency for testing fire resistant properties of materials. They award various materials different ratings based on their resistance to fire.

Most felt-based shingles are rated Class "C." CertainTeed fiber glass-based shingles offer the superior Class "A" rating, the highest UL rating conferred for fire resistance.

So, the next time you consider roofing, you'll know exactly what to think about. And, the next time people bring up the subject of roofing, you can tell them that they must take care of their hips, they should pay particular attention to flashing, be sure to check their exposure—and watch their reaction.

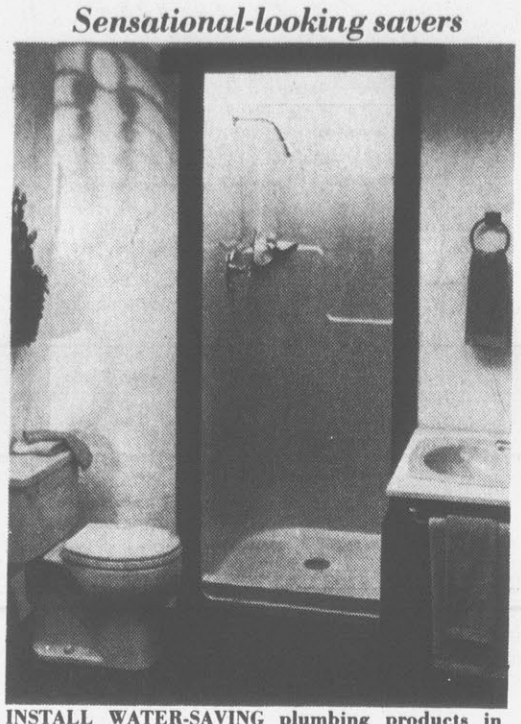
Sensational-looking savers



INSTALL WATER-SAVING plumbing products in your new bath or powder room and you can save water, energy and money, says Kohler Co., a leading manufacturer of Water-Guard water-saving toilets, faucets and showerheads. The Water-Guard toilet, shown in a typical water-saving bathroom, above, looks like many other toilets. But it is specially designed and engineered to flush with less water than conventional toilets. It could save a family of four as much as 14,600 gallons of water every year. Water-saving Centura lavatory faucet limits water flow to a rate that is ample without being wasteful. Water-Guard showerhead reduces flow from 6 to 8 gallons of water per minute to 3 gallons per minute while still providing drenching, thoroughly satisfying showers. It could save a family of four as much as 21,900 gallons of water annually plus significant savings in fuel used to heat that water. These water-saving products cost no more to install than conventional fixtures. For more information, write: Water-Guard, Kohler Co., Kohler, WI 53044.

Directly and indirectly...

Soft water saves both energy and expense

In this era of critical energy needs, the good news is that soft water saves energy both directly and indirectly.

It saves energy directly by cutting the cost of heating water. About 85 percent of the country has water that is hard. The dissolved rock in hard water coats the inside of plumbing pipes and water heaters with scale.

Soft water saves

This scale is an insulator, and trying to heat water through it wastes fuel in gas heaters as well as results in the inefficient operation and early burnout of heating elements in electric heaters. By minimizing scale buildup, soft water keeps energy costs to a minimum.

Energy is an important ingredient in the making of every manufactured product. It runs the machines that make the products, powers the trucks that deliver them, heats and lights the stores that sell them. When a product lasts longer, energy is saved.

Clothes last longer

Clothing lasts longer when laundered in soft water. In hard water, laundry soaps and detergents produce deposits on clothing fabric. These deposits tend to make the fabrics brittle and, with the flexing and bending encountered in normal use, they increase the rate of wear.

Save on soaps

The resulting shortening of fabric life may be substantial. The American Institute of Laundering, for example, reported an increase of up to 50 percent in the life of linen when soft water washing was substituted for hard water washing. In addition, soap and detergent use was sharply cut.

Energy conserver

It takes energy to run the pumps that deliver water, and energy to run the mining equipment that digs salt. Even before the current emphasis on the conservation of water and energy, Culligan, the leading water softener manufacturer, had developed a device that conserves the water, energy and salt used by water softening appliances in their recharge cycles.

Prolong appliance life

It is the Aqua-Sensor®, a device that can save as much as 6,000 gallons of water a year, reduce salt usage by as much as 47 percent, and also cut the amount of electricity required for softener operation.

Further, proper water treatment prolongs the life of all water-using appliances, such as clothes washers, dishwashers, coffee-makers and humidifiers, and extends the life of all bath fixtures and plumbing pipes themselves. These may be indirect savings on energy, but they are big savings nonetheless.

Cleaning is easier!

Finally, and not to be overlooked, is the physical energy soft water saves. It makes every cleaning task easier.

For a valuable free illustrated booklet on what you should know about water treatment in the home, send a self-addressed stamped long envelope and ask for "Tips on Water Conditioners," to Dept. PR, Culligan USA, Northbrook, IL 60062.

Make your whole garden thrive: how to use sphagnum peat moss

Now, in the spring, is a perfect time of year to condition soil. Here are some typical applications of Canadian sphagnum peat moss to make your flowers, plants, vegetables and shrubs thrive.

Gardens

Work ample amounts of sphagnum peat moss into the first six inches of soil. One 6-cubic foot bale for every 150 square feet of garden area is about right for the average soil. If soil is heavy in sand or clay double the amount.

Shrubs and Trees

When planting shrubs and trees, make sure the hole is about twice the diameter of the root ball. Fill the hole with water and allow to drain. Then mix equal parts of sphagnum peat moss and soil, fill the hole halfway and water thoroughly. Set shrub or tree in, loosen burlap covering and fill in around roots with remaining mixture of sphagnum peat and soil. Apply a three-inch layer of sphagnum peat moss mulch and water thoroughly.

Mulching

Sphagnum peat moss is an excellent mulching material. Because of its unique structure, it provides insulation and permeability which keeps soil temperatures even, and virtually eliminates moisture loss and weeds. Spread a two-to-three inch layer of sphagnum peat moss around the base of shrubs, plants, trees and between rows in the gardens.

Remember that sphagnum peat moss is compressed into bales. When thoroughly loosened, a bale equals twice its volume. Other type peat products are already loosened material sold by weight.

To compare value correctly, it must be understood that it takes five 40-pound bags of peat or peat humus to equal the bulk of one 4-cubic foot bale of sphagnum peat moss.

Make the laundry room a 'laudable' home asset

Coming out from hidden nooks and basement crannies, today's modern, streamlined laundry appliances are taking their place in bright, decorative areas located conveniently for the modern, hurried-up homemaker.

Serving as an integral part of the household, the modern laundry room works in tandem with fast-paced lifestyles to meet the needs of overflowing hampers and rising demands of home laundry care.

With some 80 percent of today's fabrics falling in the machine or hand-washable categories, home laundry facilities are being positioned for easy access and are often in full view of family and friends.

With the trend toward home laundry centers coming "out of the closet," laundry specialists at McGraw-Edison Company, makers of Speed Queen appliances, suggest these decorating tips to help homemakers win laurels for the laundry room:

- Color coordinate in bright combinations to give the room and the chore of laundering a needed lift. Instead of washday "blues," choose boldly-patterned wallpaper or contact paper that's water repellent to protect against spots.
- Store bleach, detergent, softener and other laundry aids in various size canisters covered with contact paper or glued with gaily printed fabrics.
- Hang plants in pretty pots to bring new dimensions to the laundry room.
- Select appliances in colors ranging from soft almond to bright harvest gold to enhance the laundry room or area. The new Speed Queen line of automatic washers and dryers is attractively designed with a jet black control panel contrasted with easy-to-read settings in warm tones of yellow and gold to blend in with any decor from traditional to modern.

TV SCREENLINE
For Week Of April 29 - May 5, 1979

Series Depicts 20th Century Hero

By 1978, of course, both Sir Winston and "Ike" — international heroes who fought Adolf Hitler and each other through the catastrophic years of World War II — were long since dead. The D-Day invasion they debated — the massive landing of Allied troops at Normandy — was past history, a proven stroke of military brilliance. And stately old Knebworth house — once a wartime meeting place for world leaders — was just another stately home of England, open to tourists — and film companies.

It was a film company that cased the time warp, putting Churchill and Eisenhower back into the halls where they squared jaws at each other and argued over the conduct of the most devastating war in human history. And "Ike," the movie being filmed, with Robert Duvall in the title role as America's greatest hero of the 20th century, brings those years of struggle to home screens in the three-part saga airing Thursday, Friday and Sunday, May 3, 4, and 6 (9 to 11 p.m. all nights), on ABC-TV.

English actor Wensley Pithey is Churchill, the crafty old British bulldog, and Pithey's eyes flash in anger from beneath his jutting eyebrows, looking more like the hawk that Churchill must have been to those who challenged him. ("Actually, Winnie cried easily," Pithey tells a visitor. "And he's been such an inspiration to me since I've been working on the film that I'll probably have a good old blubber myself when we finish. He played polo, too. But I don't think I'll go as far as that.")

On the other side of the room, under a ceiling-high inscription that reads ironically "Where Rooted Friendships Grow," Duvall seems to stay to himself between takes, reflecting the isolation of the leader on hostile ground.

Robert Duvall stars as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Lee Remick is Kay Summersby, who was his friend and aide in war-torn London, in "Ike," ABC-TV's three-part saga which airs Thursday, Friday and Sunday, May 3, 4 & 6 (9-11 p.m.).

Dottie West Had Unusual Beginning

Country singer Dottie West has an unusual claim to fame: one of her songs became a hit through a commercial.

"That song — 'Country Sunshine' — has done more for me than almost anything," said Dottie, who with Kenny Rogers will perform the top nominated songs on "The 14th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards" show, airing Wednesday, May 2 (9 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

In 1972, Dottie signed a lifetime contract to write and sing commercials and serve as "ambassadoress" for a major soft-drink company. In 1973, with commercial producer Billy Davis, she wrote a song for the company, "Country Sunshine." The commercial using the song won the advertising industry's Cleo Award. The number became a country hit and earned Dottie two Grammy nominations.

Now she's been nominated, with Kenny Rogers, for the Academy of Country Music's Vocal Group of the Year Award. She's had 10 hit records; a Grammy Award and 16 nominations; 32 albums; and a standard, "Here Comes My Baby," which has been recorded by 100 artists.

West has been a regular at the Grand Ole Opry since 1964. She also has performed with the Memphis Symphony Orchestra and the Kansas City Symphony, in addition to playing at state fairs, concerts and night clubs. She has toured Europe eight times and was voted Top American Female Vocalist in England in 1972 and '73.

The first time she appeared on the "Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," Carson greeted her warmly with a kiss. "I've waited a long time for that kiss," she told him, knowing she had just passed another important point in her career.

PRIZE PERFORMERS — (clockwise from lower left) Roy Clark, along with Loretta Lynn, Dottie West & Kenny Rogers, plus Barbara Mandrell will be among the entertainers when "The 14th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards" is presented live, Wednesday, May 2 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Miss USA Had A 'Very Good Year'

Around this time last year, Judi Lois Anderson — Miss USA 1978 — was in New York, and sporting the kind of tan that made most Manhattan faces look like freshly peeled potatoes. The tan's mostly gone now, but not because of worry. The face remains lovely, what with cascading honey-blonde hair and eyes the hue of turquoise.

Come Monday, April 30 (9 to 11 p.m. on CBS-TV), millions will see Judi hand over her coveted crown and reign to Miss USA 1979. To 21-year-old Judi, the moment will be more thankful than teary. Thankful because, as she says, meaning every word, "It's been a fantastic year."

"I wish," she continues, "that every girl could experience what I've been through. It's been a very, very good year."

Include in the good things visits on the Carson, Douglas, and Griffin shows, a tete-a-tete with Burt Reynolds, and a White House visit with the President ("A really fantastic experience!"). Also include getting to meet a multitude of mayors and other civic types, jetting in and out of just about every state in the Union (plus a flock of foreign lands), and having everything handed to her deluxe, first class.

"You get awfully used to the royal treatment," Judi says, "the flowers and bowls of fruit when you get to your room. That was all alien to me before I became Miss USA."

Before becoming Miss USA, Judi was Miss Hawaii. Before that, Miss Teen-age Hawaii. Years back, her mother Joan (Judi's folks own a sportswear company in Hawaii), was a runner-up in the Miss Hawaii contest. "I was never pushed into

Pirate Adventure Airs

Robert Shaw and James Earl Jones star as two fun-loving pirates in "Swashbuckler," an action adventure pitting sea pirates against often corrupt authorities assigned to maintain law and order on Caribbean islands during the 18th century. The feature, which also stars Peter Boyle, Genevieve Bujold, Beau Bridges and Geoffrey Holder, will be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, April 29 (8 to 10 p.m.).

Shaw portrays Red Ned Lynch, a daredevil pirate who masterminds the bold rescue of his comrade, Nick Debrett (Jones), just before he is to executed by Major Folly (Bridges). As the two sail off in the Blarney Cock, Lynch's ship, a messenger brings the news to the acting Governor, Lord Durant (Boyle).

Durant angrily arrests and jails popular former Chief Justice James Barnet (Bernard Behrens). When thieves set upon Barnet's estate and steal the family treasures, the former jurist's daughter, Jane (Bujold), and her mother (Louisa Horton) are forced to flee.

The inept Major Folly turns out to be the culprit, but Ned and Nick again foil his plans as they steal the treasure from him. When the two buccaneers go to a local tavern in broad daylight, they have a chance meeting with Jane, who accuses them of stealing her family's fortune. the encounter ends in a stand-off but when Jane learns that Lord Durant has executed her father and made plans to leave with all of the fortune he and Folly have stolen, she turns to the pirates for aid.

Genevieve Bujold, as Jane Barnet, is rescued by a pirate, Red Ned Lynch (portrayed by the late Robert Shaw) in this scene from "Swashbuckler," to be presented on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Sunday, April 29 (8-10 p.m.).

Has Racing Blood

The adventures of Jolly Roger, a thoroughbred trotter who couldn't get racing out of his system, are recounted in "The Tattooed Police Horse," airing on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, April 29 (7 to 8 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

NBC Probes College Sports

The commercialism, exploitation and corruption in big time "amateur" athletics will be graphically explored in an NBC News Special Report, "College Sports Inc. — Big Money on Campus," to be telecast Sunday, April 29 (10 to 11 p.m.).

Throughout the report, the program will present interviews and discussions with a number of sports personalities, experts and Congressmen who are greatly concerned about the condition and future of amateur sports at the collegiate level.

Among the areas to be covered by the report are the lures, blandishments and techniques used to attract talented high school players. In this part of the broadcast, correspondent Edwin Newman points out how confusing the NCAA rules are which govern abuses and violations concerning college recruiting — because most coaches cannot live up to the letter of the law and still field competitive super-teams." As one basketball coach states on the program, "So we cheat. Doesn't everyone?"

To fill out their rosters with super-talented players — whether academically qualified or not — Newman reports that most basketball powers depend on raw talent, usually black, generally under-educated hopefuls dredged up from the inner-city ghettos. In this segment, the report examines the special problems of the improvished athletes, and how many of them are exploited by the schools for which they play.

The special also examines the behavior of the all-powerful NCAA, which rules collegiate sports with an infractions committee that supposedly safeguards both the amateurism and clean recruiting practices of all its members. Newman reports that lately, the NCAA has come under intense fire for its erratic behavior toward certain colleges and coaches. During this segment, Newman will question Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA, on the viability and reliability of the NCAA today.

In addition, this special will examine what effect Title IX is having on college sports. Under HEW's Title IX rulings, Federal aid to college and universities may be withheld from institutions which fail to provide equal opportunities, facilities, coaching and teams for female athletes.

ABC Has Double Fare

Southern California's sandy beaches and martial arts skills are highlighted in the two films airing on "The ABC Monday Night Movie Double Feature," April 30 — "Beach Patrol" and "Samurai."

Patrolling the sunny beaches of Southern California in dune buggies, two special police teams must elude a deadly sniper and capture a fugitive drug pusher in "Beach Patrol (8 to 9:30 p.m.), the opening feature.

Policewoman Jan Plummer, an ex-narcotics officer, is a newly assigned member of a special police team patrolling the coastline in dune buggies. When her partner is shot and seriously wounded, the officers are puzzled about the unprovoked attack until Jan spots a fugitive drug kingpin and realizes that she is targeted for murder.

Christine DeLisle stars as Plummer, Richard Hill as veteran officer Earl Hackman, Jonathan Frakes as rookie cop Marty Green, Robin Strand as veteran Russ Patrick and Michael Gregory as commanding officer Sgt. Lou Markowski.

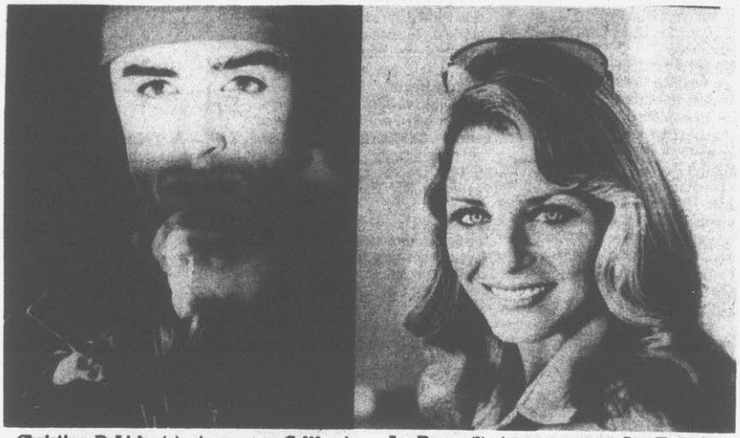
The guest list includes Paul Burke as Wes Dobbs, Mimi Maynard as Wanda, Michael V. Gazzo as the banker and Panchito Gomez as an unruly boy.

"Samurai" (9:30 to 11 p.m.) is the story of a young assistant district attorney, Lee Cantrell, who calls upon his skills in the martial arts when a land-grabbing tycoon threatens San Francisco with a machine that causes earthquakes.

Lee is the son of wealthy socialite Hana Mitsubishi Cantrell and the late General Cantrell. He is deeply versed in Oriental philosophy and daily practices the martial arts with Takeo Chisato, the family's majordomo.

Lee discovers that Amory Bryson, one of the richest and most powerful men in the world, is systematically destroying neighborhoods for a private land renovation project. When the courts prove ineffective in stopping Bryson, the young attorney dons Samurai garb, straps on his sword and does battle with the tycoon's goon squads.

Joe Penny stars as Lee Cantrell, James Shigeta as Takeo Chisato, Beulah Quo as Hana Cantrell, Dana Elcar as Frank Boyd, Charles Cioffi as Amory Bryson and Morgan Brittany as Cathy Berman.



Christine DeLisle (r) stars as a California Beach Patrol police officer in "Beach Patrol," the opening film in "The ABC Monday Night Movie Double Feature," April 30 (8-9:30 p.m.).

Joe Penny (l) stars as a young San Francisco City prosecutor in "Samurai," in the concluding feature (9:30-11 p.m.).

It Is 'K' Week With The Captain

Jack Gilford is the Easter Bunny, Andy Griffith plays Chuck Steak, and Dick Latessa is Sherlock House, on "Captain Kangaroo" during the week of Monday-Friday, April 30 — May 4 (8 to 9 a.m.) on CBS-TV. The Captain also begins week "K" of "Picturepages," the popular at-home participation project.

Monday: Guest Dick Latessa, as Sherlock House, must find Professor Poof's missing formula. Mr. Pennywhistle has to patiently deal with a customer's unusual order, and "Captain Nemo" is trapped in a treacherous coral reef. The Captain reads "Bug of Some Importance."

Tuesday: Mr. Pennywhistle tries to turn Bernard into a scholar, and Mr. Doodles becomes Mortimer the Magician's assistant. "Captain Nemo" must save an Icelandic Village from an active volcano. The Captain reads "The Guest."

Wednesday: Uncle Backwards thoroughly confuses a door-to-door toy salesman, and Willy and Wally take an adventurous train trip. Mr. Pennywhistle's shrunken suit fits a very unusual wearer. The Captain reads "Big Dog, Little Dog."

Thursday: Captain Kangeroo must convince the Easter Bunny (guest Jack Gilford) to give up show business, and "Captain Nemo" encounters the world's largest shark. The Captain reads "Little Gorilla."

Friday: Andy Griffith as Chuck Steak must solve the mystery of the Ten Gallon Kid. An emergency forces "Captain Nemo" to hijack an iceberg. The Captain reads "Quail Can't Decide."

Violence Simmers In Macon County

Violence simmers and finally erupts in "Macon County Line," a story of unfortunate chance and circumstance airing on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" April 30 (9:30 to 11 p.m.).

Two brothers, Chris and Wayne Dixon, take a two-week joy ride through the South prior to their induction into the Army. Along the way, they pick up a girl here and there and are not so scrupulously honest that they don't mind skipping out on a lunch counter bill from time to time. Eventually, they meet and team up with a young girl — Jenny — who's similarly, though not slovenly, on the road.

Their troubles start when their fan belt breaks in a small Louisiana locale and they meet up with the local sheriff, Reed Morgan, who's hostile and bigoted towards them. What they don't know is that the sheriff's wife will be raped and murdered that very day by a pair of psychotics, and fate takes a hand when their fan belt breaks again on the road near the sheriff's house.

The sheriff discovers his wife's body and, crazed almost to incoherence, assumes that the Dixons had something to do with the murder, and begins a vendetta against them.

Alan and Jesse Vint portray the Dixon Brothers, and Cheryl Waters plays Jenny. Max Baer, who also produced the movie, makes a believeably belligerant sheriff, and Joan Blackman is cast as Carol Morgan, the sheriff's attractive but ill-fated wife.

College In The 1950's

The fun and the heartaches of college life in the '50s is the subject of "Fraternity Row," a drama about the events leading up to a campus tragedy, to be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," May 1 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Acclaimed by some film critics as a potential "sleeper" when it was released theatrically in 1977, the movie was produced and written by Charles G. Allison, a graduate student at the University of Southern California, under various motion picture industry grants.

Gregory Harrison, who starred in "Logan's Run," "Centennial" and "The Gathering," and Peter Fox, Scott Newman, Nancy Morgan, Wendy Phillips and Robert Emhardt star. Cliff Robertson narrates, and the score features music by recording artist Don McLean.

As narrator Rodger Carter (Robertson) remembers, there were many wonderful things about Summit College, the best small private school in the East, and its most prestigious fraternity, Gamma Nu Pi, back in 1954. It was a warm, friendly world, bound together by family, school and political connections, a world of adolescent high spirits, practical jokes and crazy stunts, formal parties and rock 'n' roll dances, serenading pin mates at sister sorority Kappa Delta, costumed rites, traditions and bull sessions.

But there was a darker side to that insulated world of privilege, a side that leads to a tragedy that forever mars his memories.

That spring, young Carter (Fox) is editor of the school paper and pledgemaster for Gamma Nu. He's extremely proud of his crop of freshmen, particularly Zac Sterling (Harrison), pledge president and a fellow journalism major.

Zac is a dreamer and an idealist who takes seriously the concepts of brotherhood expressed by Gamma Nu, even after he sees some of the other side of fraternialism — the narrow mindedness represented by the threat of the blackball, the ostracism of anyone who doesn't fit in, and the childish brutality of hazing.

Rodeo Rider Has Problems

Steve McQueen stars as a busted-up rodeo rider, down on his luck but high in his pride, trying to find his future by returning to his roots in "Junior Bonner," airing as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" May 1 (11:30 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Robert Preston and Ida Lupino are cast as Junior's battling parents. New York Daily News critic Kathleen Carroll, after saying "the film cracks like a bullwhip," added, "What a joy it is to watch seasoned pros like Preston and Miss Lupino at work."

Junior learns the hard way that you can't go home again when he returns to his Arizona hometown to find his parents separated, his father in the hospital after an accident and his brother Curly (Joe Don Baker) swindling both parents. Determined both to prove himself and to reconcile his family, Junior enters the local rodeo and insists upon riding the vicious Brahma that once almost killed him.

'The Love Boat' Sets Sail With A Ship Full Of Stars

An all-star cast sets sail on a cruise ship filled with romance and drama in "The Love Boat II," rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, May 1 (12:30 a.m.).

Starring in the four interrelated stories are Wesley Addy, Ken Berry, Diana Canova, Bert Convy, Celeste Holm, Hope Lange, Kristy McNichol, Robert Reed, Craig Stevens, Marcia Strassman, Tracy Brooks Swope and Lyle Waggoner. Also starring as the ship's crew are Candice Azzara, Fred Grandy, Bernie Kopell, Ted Lange, Quinn Redecker and Diane Stilwell.

In "Unfaithfully Yours," Elaine Palmer (Lange) is taking an unexpected vacation with her tennis pro, Roger (Waggoner), after she has found evidence that her husband is having an affair. But her husband, Stephen (Reed), boards the Love Boat determined to win her back.

In "Here's Looking at You, Love," Eva McFarland (Holm) and her daughter, Pat (Strassman), are on the cruise hoping that Eva can forget that she is both divorced and overweight. But Eva is jolted by the sudden appearance of an old flame, Robert Grant (Stevens), who not only does not seem to remember her, but has a gorgeous blonde (Swope) on his arm all the time.

Swords Flash, Bullets Fly

Swords flash and bullets fly as Tom Laughlin shows the icy nerve of a gunfighter and the deadly determination of a Samurai warrior in his most demanding adventure since "Billy Jack" when "The Master Gunfighter" airs as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 29 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Laughlin, who also directed the film (billed as "Frank Laughlin," his young son's name), is up to his gunbelt in action as Finley McCloud, the master gunfighter of the title. After unwillingly participating in the massacre of members of an Indian tribe — slain so that they cannot testify about the thievery of a powerful ranchero (Ron O'Neal) — Finley leaves his home and his wife in self-disgust.

Three years later, the gunfighter is discovered working in a sideshow when four hired killers are sent to eliminate any chance of his ever returning. After disposing of his would-be assassins, Finley arms himself with a 12-shot pistol and a Samurai sword to begin his voyage back to redeem his honor.

Ambushes, rapacious gangs, a prison of fire and a doomed ship all stand between Finley and the cleansing vengeance he seeks, and the final moment must inevitably come down to one thing — two deadly enemies face to face, swords in hand, in single combat that only one will survive.

Tom Laughlin stars in "The Master Gunfighter," an action drama to air on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 29 (9-11 p.m.).

Swashbuckling 'Scaramouche' Airs

If Scaramouche were alive today, he'd probably be found on television, slick-talking his way through a series of rib-tickling sketches on a variety program.

That's the logical latter-day evolution of the hero of the film version of Rafael Sabatini's classic adventure tale starring Stewart Granger, Mel Ferrer, Janet Leigh and Eleanor Parker slated to air Sunday, April 29 at 6 p.m., on Channel 5.

When Granger, who plays the title role, was called upon to explain the character he brought to life in the lavish MGM 1952 technicolor film, he likened Scaramouche to a fore-runner of the glib vaudevillian whose forte was the traditional black-out sketch.

Back in the 18th century, the time-period in which Scaramouche goes through enough feats of derring-do to satisfy the most adventure-hungry viewer, it was the custom for strolling players to wear masks. That gave Sabatini's hero a ready-made disguise — in reality, he's Andre Moreau, seeking to avenge his closest friend by the villainous Marquis de Magnes (Ferrer).

Intertwined in the suspenseful tale is what appears to be Scaramouche's never-to-be-consummated love for beautiful Aline (Leigh) and his relationship with tempestuously enticing Lenore (Parker), an actress in the troupe which he joins and in whom he has more than an on-stage interest.

Set against a background of the tense period of the French Revolution, "Scaramouche" combines adventure and romance with film versions of the traditional strolling players' comic pantomime, and a duel to end all duels as it tells the tale of an 18th century handsome daredevil and his fantastic escapades and amours.

Looks Familiar

As you watch NBC-TV's new comedy series, "Highcliffe Manor," do you have a feeling that you've seen the handsome but weird scientist, Dr. Felix Morger, before?

If so, relax. Gerald Gordon, who's playing Felix, is known to millions of daytime viewers as Dr. Nick Bellini in the series "The Doctors." Gordon starred on 'Doctors' several years prior to moving to Hollywood.

Space Comedy

"Starstruck," an intergalactic space comedy combining film and taped elements, is currently in production.

The comedy is slated to air next fall as a half-hour pilot for CBS.

Romantic Drama Airs

Lee Remick stars as a woman torn between the love for her husband and family, and the thrill of a new romance and a new life, in "Torn Between Two Lovers," also starring George Peppard and Joseph Bologna. The drama will air on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," May 2 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Miss Remick stars as Diane Conti, a woman devoted to her husband, Ted (Bologna), and her teen-age son. But when she is stranded in an airport on her way home from a trip, she encounters a sophisticated and charming architect, Paul Rassmussen (Peppard).

Rassmussen provides Diane with the romance and excitement missing from her stable and comfortable marriage. The pair continue to see each other, although Diane is fully aware that she is jeopardizing her marriage. Then, Rassmussen suggests that Diane needs a change in her life and he asks her to marry him.

Diane seriously ponders the questons: should she leave Ted and her son for the chance of a new and more sophisticated life? Or, is she merely being selfish, throwing aside the people who love her for a grab at something a little more glittering and glamorous? Diane must analyze her life and her loves. She must weigh her past life against the promise of a new life and she must decide which way to go.

Remick is a star in both motion pictures and television. She portrayed Winston Churchill's mother in the BBC series, "Jennie," and also starred with Rock Hudson in the mini-series, "Wheels." Her motion picture credits include "Days of Wine and Roses," for which she received an Academy Award nomination, "Anatomy of a Murder," "The Long Hot Summer," "Sometimes a Great Notion," and the thriller "The Omen."

Delbert Mann, who directed Lee in "Torn Between Two Lovers," is quick to praise her abilities. "She's a professional in every sense of the word, which is the highest accolade I can give anyone. Her work is of the highest standard."

While Remick and Mann see eye to eye on many things, the star disagrees with his analysis of the film as merely "contemporary." She feels the story of one woman caught between her love for two men is "timeless" and totally believable. "She really does love them both in different ways for a short period of time," she says.

But both agree that the character of Diane Conti could be a character that the audience may not like. "Playing the part of Diane is like walking a tightrope, which is what she does anyway," Lee explains.

Lecture Series Is A Memorial

The Chet Huntley Memorial Lecture Series honoring the distinguished news correspondent has been established under the joint sponsorship of NBC News, New York University and the advertising agency of Levine, Huntley, Schmidt, Plapler and Beaver, Inc., which Chet Huntley helped organize in 1972.

Beginning in the fall of 1979, a lecture will be given annually at New York University by a person of distinction. "The series will relate to the field of communications and the principles for which Chet worked," said NBC-TV's Lester Crystal.

The committee to choose the lectures consists of Crystal; Dr. John C. Sawhill, President of NYU; Harold Levine, Chairman of Levine, Huntley, Schmidt, Plapler and Beaver, Inc.; Seymour Topping, Managing Editor of the New York Times; NBC News' John Chancellor; and Mrs. Tippy Huntley, wife of the late correspondent.

In announcing NYU's participation in the series, Sawhill underscored the desire of the university not only to honor Huntley, but to participate in lectures that will highlight the current role and responsiblity of the media.

"Media communicatiohs are the key to the health of our society today. Hopefully this lecture series will help in the defining and clarification of their role," he said.

Levine said, "I look to this lecture series to help reinforce the spirit of moral and ethical standards that guided Chet's life and is so essential in all media communications."

The lectures will be held in Saklad Auditorium, Arnold and Marie Schwartz Dental Center, College of Dentistry, New York University, which has a seating capacity of more than 1,000 persons. Special invitations will be extended to about 100 prominent persons from broadcasting, education, government and the professions. The audience also will include NYU faculty members and students.

Chet Huntley, who died March 20, 1974, was one of the most honored broadcast journalists. He, along with David Brinkley, received the 1967 Distinguished Service Award from the Board of the National Association of Broadcasters. They became the first pair in broadcasting history to receive this prestigious award.

Castaways Are Back

Six of the seven original cast members of the popular "Gilligan's Island" series return to television and again succeed in getting rescued from their "uncharted desert isle," then turn their happy paradise into a tropical resort for mainland tourists, in "The Castaways on Gilligan's Island." The feature airs as an NBC World Premiere movie Thursday, May 3 (8:30 to 10 p.m.).

Bob Denver stars as the lovable Gilligan, the error-prone first mate of the pleasure boat Minnow II, and Alan Hale Jr. co-stars as Gilligan's exasperated idol, the Skipper. Also co-starring are Jim Backus, as the eccentric billionaire Thurston Howell III; Natalie Schafer as his aristocratic wife, Lovey; Dawn Wells as the naive ingenue, Mary Ann; Russell Johnson as the mentally proficient Professor; and newcomer Judith Baldwin as Ginger, the buxom Hollywood starlet.

The story resumes where the previous movie, 'Rescue From Gilligan's Island," concluded last October when the castaways were ship-wrecked a second time on the same island on which they had frolicked for 15 years. Now, with drinking water running low, Gilligan stumbles upon two deserted World War II aircraft, which the resourceful Professor uses to reconstruct into a single creaky plane, allowing the seven survivors only one take-off, and a last chance to escape.

Once airborne, the goofy Gilligan accidentally jettisons himself, forcing his buddies to turn back and retrieve him. However, during their short flight, they are picked up on radar and rescued soon after. Using Mr. Howell's vast fortune, the old friends buy the island, and construct and operate The Castaways, a leisurely resort for uptight mainlanders — such as Henry (Bosley) and Myra (Wallace) — with "no phone, no lights, no motor cars..."

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Staff Writer

Isn't it the same KATE JACKSON who is leaving "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" that went on the "MIKE DOUGLAS SHOW" when FARRAH FAWCETT shed her Angel wings and said that all three original 'Angels' signed five-year contracts and should honor them? You bet it is!

As a follow up to that, lest it not be forgotten that 'ANGELS was originally created by SPELLING-GOLDBERG PRODUCTIONS specifically for KATE as a gesture of gratitude for her indulgence during the run of "THE ROOKIES" in which she did little more than dress up the screen. Furthermore, what's not been mentioned is that Kate still has a contract with Spelling-Goldberg for TV movies. Unless, of course, that's been severed with her departure from the series.

A portion of U.S. Highway 411 in DOLLY PARTON's hometown of Sevierville, Tenn., is going to be named in her honor and will be called "Dolly Parton Parkway."

Singer BOBBIE GENTRY is expecting her first child from hubby JIM STAFFORD and is cancelling her upcoming singing engagements to avoid any complications.

For reasons known only to a great wise few, DONNA PESCOW of "ANGIE" is suddenly not available for media interviews, outside of three major magazines. Well, at least ROBIN WILLIAMS now has a feminine counterpart.

LONI ANDERSON ("WKRP"), MARION ROSS ("HAPPY DAYS") and DONNY OSMOND headline the guest cast of "THE LOVE BOAT's" two-hour premiere episode for next September. As it's been the last two seasons, the opening segment will be filmed while on an actual cruise to Mexico.

Everyone associated with MARY TYLER MOORE admits it's going to be a big chore coming up with a format for a half-hour situation comedy series that won't remind all TV viewers of Mary Richards. Still, after giving it two tries this season, it's obvious that Mary's audience wants her in a sitcom, so that's what they'll get come September of 1980.

Isn't NBC seriously trying to come up with a spin-off idea for "LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE"? Scuttlebutt has it that one would have already been done with MELISSA SUE ANDERSON had her character not gone blind, thus limiting what could be done in a spin-off.

Daytime's "DAYS OF OUR LIVES" has celebrated its lucky 13th anniversary, and try as the publicist did, the cast party couldn't be held on Friday, the 13th of April, because of filming problems.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Is it true that Buddy Allen, Buck Owens' son, is dead? T. GRAYSON, GREENVILLE, N.C.

A: No. Possibly this rumor stems from the death of one of Buck's musicians several years ago — Buddy Rich — who died as the result of a motorcycle accident.

Q: Did David Naughton, who plays Billy on "Making It," make the Dr. Pepper Commercial? G. SHEARIN, SANFORD, N.C.

A: Indeed he did. In fact, it was this commercial that brought David to the attention of the series' producers.

Q: Will the movie titled "The Awakening Land" that starred Elizabeth Montgomery be shown on television again? Also, may I have Ms. Montgomery's address? B. THOMPSON, FLORENCE, S.C.

A: "The Awakening Land" aired on NBC a little over a year ago and should be coming back within the next few months. Write to Montgomery c/o Screen Actors' Guild, 7750 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

Q: What is the name of the guy who plays Bo Duke on "Dukes of Hazzard," and where do I write to him? D. WARREN, SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: The guy's name is John Schneider, and he is one of Hollywood's most talented newcomers. Send that letter to CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 91505.

Q: Could you please give me some background on Olivia Hussey, who portrayed Mary on "Jesus of Nazareth"? T. JAMES, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: Olivia was born in Buenos Aires (1951), and grew up in London, where she made her first stage appearance at 15. Shortly after this, she was chosen from 800 applicants to play Juliet in Franco Zeffirelli's production of "Romeo and Juliet." A natural beauty. Olivia wears no makeup except a bit of mascara to accent her eyes, all of which prompted Zeffirelli to describe her as "classically beautiful with a husky voice and mesmerizing eyes."

He Likes It Quiet

General Hospital's Richard Dean Anderson is daytime television's new matinee idol, but public acclaim and the limelight is not an arena in which the actors feel uncomfortable.

In fact, while aware of his growing popularity, Rick, as he's called by his friends, just recently made the commitment to acting but still guards his preferred quiet life carefully.

"I've learned a lot in the three years I've been on the show," the cordial and soft-speaking actor says. "I've signed a new two-year contract but as the negotiations for that were happening I was making some large decisions in my life. Specifically, whether or not I wanted to stick around and try to do something in the business or just take the money and run.

"I just wasn't sure," he adds. "I'm not sold on the Hollywood scene, so it was a matter of making up my mind whether I did want to make the jump, take the chance and admit to myself that I did want to continue a life as an actor."

Fortunately, for fans of the long-running ABC series which has just entered its 16th year, Rick decided to stay with his profession. However, he remains very protective of his life away from the sound stage.

"Until this show I'd never had any discipline in my life as far as sustaining any rhythm in life other than being a vagabond," he says with an amused grin. "I still have the urge to get away, but I'm able to compromise by living in a rural and remote area of Los Angeles just above Malibu.

"I have not compromised that part of my life," he says. "People can't understand why I live so far away from work and all, why I want to spend so much time commuting back and forth. But my day starts out coming down a mountain to the ocean, the sun rising on the horizon and I get a little kick and energy from that.

"Then, on the days I'm not working I'm surrounded by nature. I don't have a stereo, I seldom watch TV, but rather I prefer romping in the hills with my dogs and just enjoying the quiet of where I live. That enables me to do my job as an actor."

That 'Wild And Crazy Guy' Returns

Steve Martin focuses his zany, satirical sense of humor on a couple of dozen subjects, from nude beaches to rodeos, in a rebroadcast of his first special, "Steve Martin: A Wild and Crazy Guy," airing Friday, May 4 (10 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV. Milton Berle, George Burns, Johnny Cash, Bob Hope and Strother Martin are Steve's featured guests.

Berle, Burns, Cash and Hope are seen in brief segments, each trying to give Martin pointers on comedy, stage fright, and his first TV special.

Martin opens the show as a test pattern, settles into a state of frenzy and panic, does a concert bit, fantasizes about a beautiful blonde in the audience, and tries to get out of a paternity suit.

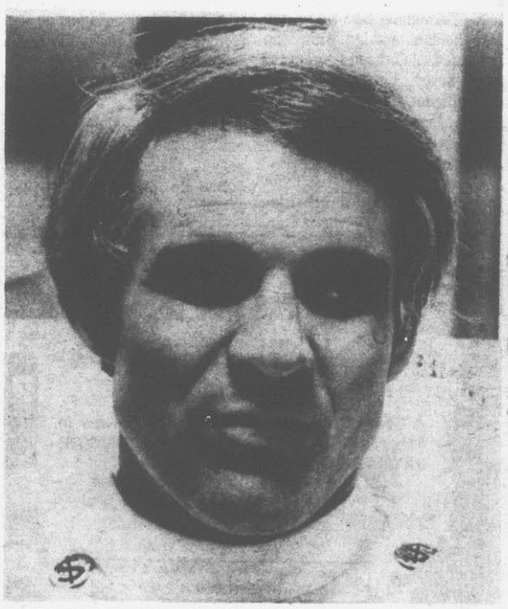
He next finds himself buying a car from a private party which creates some peculiar problems. Then, assuming his French love god character, he pontificates about his subject of expertise — women.

Other highlights include segments in which Martin seeks to prove, with mock-seriousness, that he is a comedian with a social conscience, and tackles such weighty issues as the environment (dumps), special interest groups (beaches), parenthood and roadside littering.

There are cameo bits with unlikely characters calling on well-known individuals, and some off-beat treatments of football, tennis, skiing and camping.

Martin does a routine about restaurant parking lots and the kind of variety show he might have done, but didn't do. He recalls an old girlfriend, and his old ridin' and ropin' days on the rodeo circuit (joined by Strother Martin).

He concludes his special by taking viewers into his private life to answer the question people have been asking: "Are you really a wild and crazy guy?"



COMEDY CHARACTER - Steve Martin stars in "Steve Martin: A Wild and Crazy Guy," to be rebroadcast Friday, May 4 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

McKay Celebrates 18th Year

Eighteen years ago — April 29, 1961 — a relative unknown by the name of Jim McKay stood on a soggy Franklin Field in Philadelphia to report on the Penn Relays on the first show of a 20-week summer replacement series called "ABC's Wide World of Sports." Now, 18 years, seven Emmys, 1,000 shows and eight million miles later, McKay says that even though back in 1961 he didn't imagine that 'Wide World' would endure so long and rewrite television sports history, in retrospect, the success of the show doesn't really surprise him.

"I'd always wanted to do a show in which there was more than one sport involved," said McKay. "So when they called me to do 'Wide World,' even though they said it was a summer replacement show, I had very strong hopes and feelings that the show would continue beyond the summer of '61. It has certainly exceeded McKay's expectations. He has covered nearly 100 different types of sporting events.

'Wide World' got off to a slow start, but gained momentum. "If there was one show that turned 'Wide World' around in that first summer, it was our trip to Moscow to televise the U.S.A.-U.S.S.R. Track Meet. Up until then we really hadn't attracted much attention, and there was even talk of taking the series off before the summer ended. But that show from Moscow," recalls McKay, "seemed to turn things around. So by the time 'Wide World' did go off at summer's end, there was a commitment to bring it back on the air in January of 1962."

That trip to Moscow came close to being scrubbed. Fifty technicians and 20 tons of equipment were sent to the Russian capital, but McKay remembers that when the plane left New York, clearance still had not come through to enter the Soviet Union. The ABC crew did get clearance to land in Moscow, and one of the innovative pieces of equipment they brought with them was a videotape machine. "The Russians didn't have videotape at that time," says McKay. "A couple of our technicians had orders to sleep with the videotape recording heads under their pillows — literally — because it was still sort of a secret thing at that point."

Now, as the program's 18th anniversary is at hand, many of the production techniques and technical capabilities have advanced considerably. But the basic ingredients of the show remain the same: McKay spanning the globe each week to bring viewers the constant variety of sports . . . the thrill of victory, and the agony of defeat. 'That's "ABC's Wide World of Sports."

The Teen Scene

GENIE FRANCIS, the first teen-age regular on ABC's daytime soap opera, "GENERAL HOSPITAL," is the preferred choice by the network to star in a projected mini-series for airing sometime next season. The only roadblock is that she'd have to be written out of the serial for a couple of weeks.

MARIE OSMOND will star in a half-hour situation comedy pilot to be produced and filmed by OSMOND PRODUCTIONS. The projected series would be geared as a mid-season replacement next January.

WILLIE AAMES confides that he's been able to finance the costly upkeep of his rock band, PARADISE, from the residuals he still receives from his work on the animated series, "WAIT 'TIL YOUR FATHER GETS HOME." For those of you who didn't know, Willie was the voice of the teen-age son in that show which also had TOM BOSLEY of "HAPPY DAYS" as the father.

LEIF GARRETT continues to rack up more fans. Just back from his first concert tour in Japan, Leif caused near-riots at each stop and has already been asked to return for a longer concert stay.

SHAUN CASSIDY's performance in the TV movie, "LIKE NORMAL PEOPLE," softened even the hardest Hollywood critics, and already no less than four movie offers have arrived at his agent's desk.

'Island' Renewed

People will continue to have their wildest hopes and dreams become realities, thanks to the magical, mystical powers that exist on "Fantasy Island": the series has been renewed for a third season.

Ricardo Montalban and Herve Villechaize star in the hour-long fantasy drama that premiered on ABC as a mid-season entry in January, 1978.

Efforts To Improve Children's Shows Realize Little Support

"I don't like to say that no one is watching, but this is the feeling I somethimes get," says Robert Chenault, executive producer of ABC-TV's "Weekend Special," the series that everyone loves, but few are supporting.

"This is the network's effort to better Saturday morning programming," he continues, "and obviously provides some sort of answer to those who go around the country critizing children's programming, saying a lot of it is not worthwhile material."

Airing this Saturday, May 5 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.), is "Soup for President," a light-hearted tale about the girls against the boys in a zany campaign for president of their history class.

'Soup' is typical of the shows Chenault says he is making "purely for entertainment. We're not doing moralistic stories or trying to better a child's education, just because it was a book and we can imitate their response to go out and buy the book. We're always getting material submitted from libraries across the country — and they differ widely in what they think will make good children's Saturday morning shows. One librarian from Chicago sent us a list of what were supposed to be popular children's books. I read about the first three titles and threw the list away. It mostly concerned kids who had an operation — or who were facing an operation — or whose uncle died — or some other terrible tragedy."

What Chenault wants to do are stories with interesting characters. "Something that actors can take hold of and go with," he explained. "Comedies seem to work best." He is continually searching for "light stories with a strong theme which provides strong roles for the stars and not too much action."

Chenault says there are a lot of things he can't show on Saturday morning. "Guns, for instance, have to be handled ver-ry carefully. And kidnapping. So we use the line, 'We've got to steal this kid.' It's still kidnapping, of course, but it doesn't come off like that.

"In one of the shows, a kid took a sip of a Slushie as he was coming down the hill on a skateboard. What I quickly learned is that eating or drinking on a skateboard is a no-no."

Is anybody watching "Weekend Specials"? If not, maybe you should. Chances are strong that you're missing an excellent program.

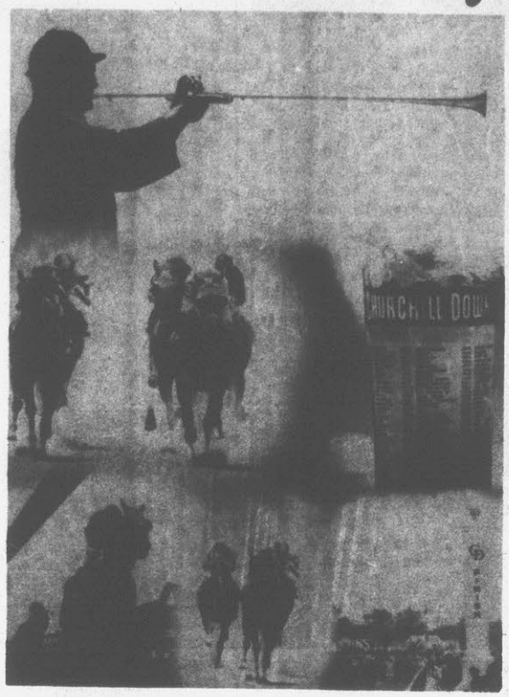
It's Kentucky Derby Time



Live, exclusive coverage of the Kentucky Derby, America's greatest horse race, will be presented by ABC Sports on Saturday, May 5 from 5 to 6 p.m.

In the world of sports, the first Saturday in May means only one thing: time for the Kentucky Derby, America's greatest horse race and a subject of office pools all over the country.

The 105th running of the Run for the Roses will be telecast from historic Churchill Downs in Louisville, Ky., on ABC Saturday, May 5 (5 to 6 p.m.), and the horse to watch is Spectacular Bid.

How good is this dark gray son of Bold Bidder? In the words of his trainer, Grover (Bud) Delp, "He's the greatest horse I've ever seen." His jockey, 19-year-old Ronnie Franklin, puts it this way: "Riding him is like sitting in a Rolls Royce."

Spectacular Bid headed for Kentucky with a record of 11 victories in 13 starts at ages 2 and 3. He had a winning streak of nine straight stakes victories, the last of which, in the Flamingo Stakes, won by a huge margin of 12 lenghts.

To those rail birds who have watched him run in Florida this winter, Spectacular Bid appeared to be following in the footsteps of Seattle Slew and Affirmed, who not only won the Kentucky Derby in 1977 and 1978, respectively, but went on to become the first back-to-back Triple Crown winners in history. Almost surely, he will go to the post as the odds-on favorite on the first Saturday in May.

But odds on favorites are not exactly sure things in the Kentucky Derby. The most recent, Honest Pleasure, a 2-5 favorite in 1976, was beaten by 3-1 Bold Forbes. Of the 29-odds on favorites in the history of the Derby, 13 were beaten.

The pre-Derby speculation is that Spectacular Bid's domineering presence will reduce the field at post time to anywhere from seven to ten 3-year-olds in this mile-and-a-quarter classic. The most prominent challenger appears to be Flying Paster, an impressive winner of the Santa Anita Derby on April 1.

Flying Paster's victory brought his career earnings to $550,310. He has won nine times in 13 career starts. Spectacular Bid has earned $649,980 to date, with one more pre-Derby start scheduled in the Blue Grass Stakes at Lexington, Ky., nine days before the Derby.

Long Road Back

Lee Trevino has made the long trek back. And speaking of his back, the likeable Mexican-American appears to have fully recovered from surgery to his back that was performed in November, 1976.

Trevino joins some of the top golfers in the world, including defending champion Gary Player for the Houston Open. NBC will televise semi-final round action live from the Woodland Hills Country Club in Houston, Texas Saturday, May 5 (5 p.m.).

Although he only won one tournament, Trevino put together an amazing string of second-place finishes to end up sixth on the money list with $228,723. He also moved past Billy Casper and Arnold Palmer into second place on the all-time money list. Lee served notice that he was in fine shape in the 1978 season when he finished in the top-ten in the first three tourneys he entered. His triumph came in the Colonial National Invitation, just one week after he placed second in the Byron Nelson Classic.

At the Colonial, Lee assumed a one-shot lead after a sizzling start the first three rounds, then really took off and hid when he fired a four-under 66, four strokes in front of Jerry Pate and Jerry Heard.

Two starts later, he closed with a 65 at the Danny Thomas Memphis Classic to force a playoff with Andy Bean, but lost when Bean birdied the first extra hole.

Trevino is currently 11th on the PGA 1979 money list with better than $68,000. His game appears to be getting stronger with each passing week, and he should be in his prime when the Houston Open starts.

Last year's Houston event saw an old great emerge as the hottest golfer on the tour. Gary Player, the indomitable South African, closed with a 69 to take top honors.

The Houston Open is played over the Woodlands course, which is the first even approved by the PGA. It was designed by Joe Lee, who also fashioned Doral's famed "Blue Monster."

Woodlands is famed for its treacherous sand traps, and the course is mined with 92 bunkers and 80,000 yards of white sand.

A Close Finish

'Supertrain' Gets Face Lift

"Viewers are seeing an all-new Supertrain each Saturday now," says Robert Stambler, producer of NBC-TV's "Supertrain" series. "We've had our shakedown run, and, if you'll pardon the expression, we're now on the right track."

Stambler smiles as he responds to questions about the series, which is seen Saturdays (10 to 11 p.m.).

Q: What's new about the new Supertrain?

A: We have two great new regulars in Joey Aresco and Ilene Graff. They are just what we want on the show — young, bright, and happy. They're the kind of people anyone would enjoy having around. Joey is the train's new Chief of Operations Officer, and we brought Ilene into the cast because we are having so many new and exciting activities aboard Supertrain that we really needed a Social Director.

Q: Are you still going to have those large guest-star casts?

A: Certainly. We're still bringing the top names in Hollywood aboard Supertrain, but now they're much more involved with our cast regulars. The viewers are now getting to know our regulars, and look forward to each week's involvement with such stars as Abe Vigoda, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Lyle Waggoner, Peter Lawford, Roddy McDowall, David Huddleston, Cleavon Little and dozens more.

A: Taking a television journey on Supertrain should be pure fun. The show, of course, is called "Supertrain," but, as far as I'm concerned, it could also be called "Fun Train" from now on. We're including a lot of comedy and romance.

A: No. We're still going to give the viewers mystery and suspense, but it will be melded into a world of glamour, humor and fun.

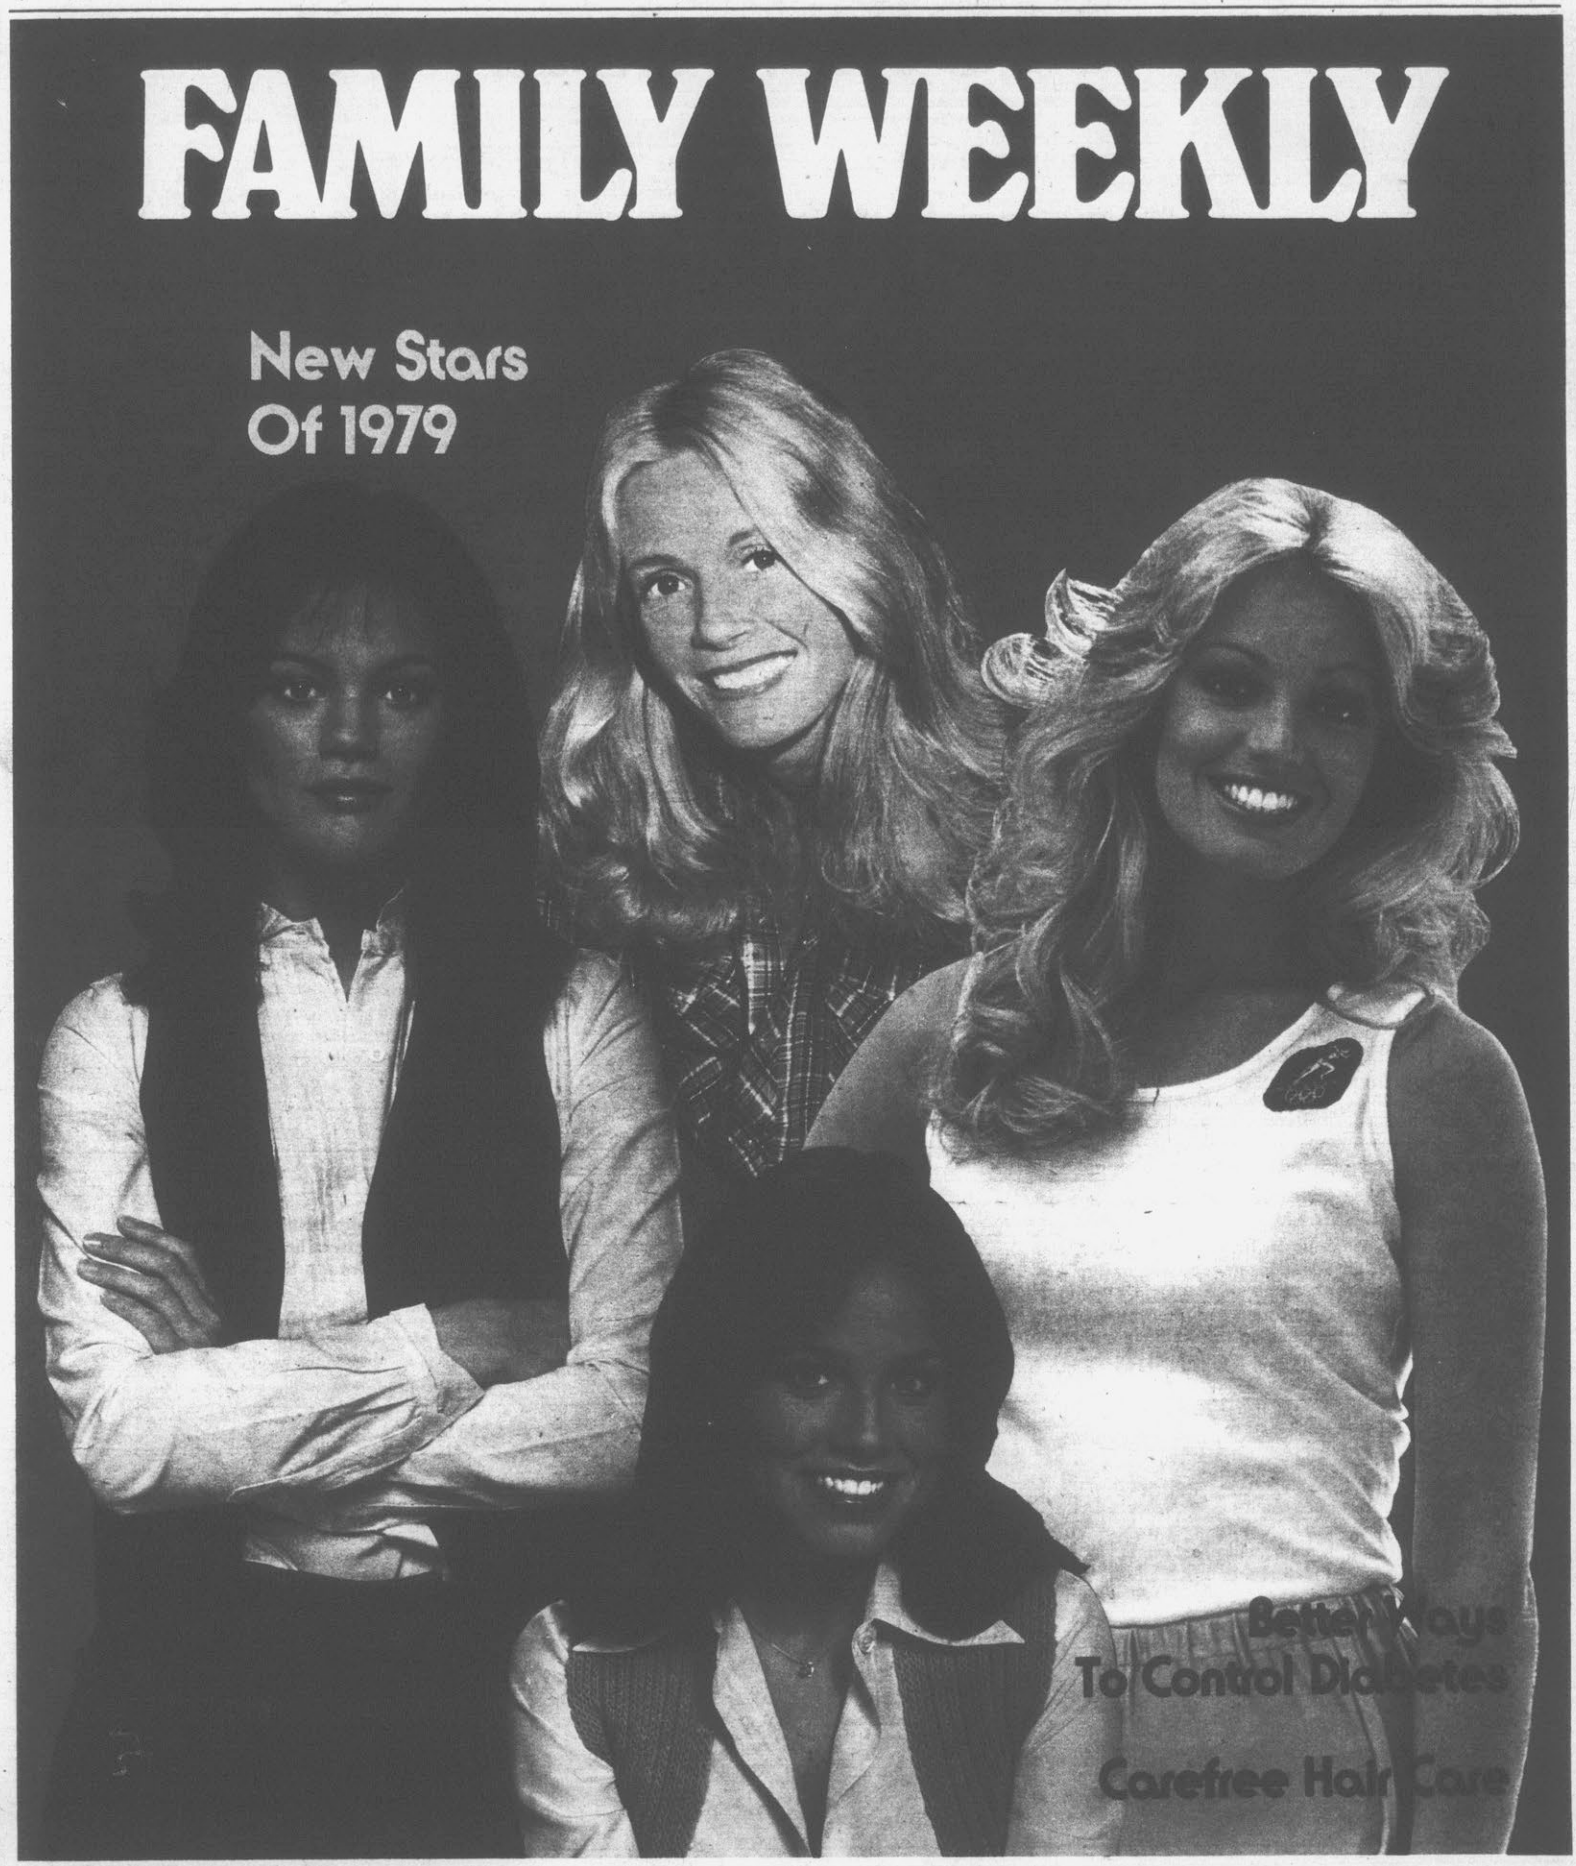
FAMILY WEEKLY



ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Peace is our first priority.

FOR HAROLD BROWN, Secretary of Defense

What precautions have been taken to protect the public from a nuclear attack? —Ray Markowsky, La Feria, Texas

● The number-one priority of this Administration, of course, is to maintain peace. In the event deterrence should ever fail, the military services would provide our first line of defense. Civil defense also would contribute to the protection of people and property. President Carter recently proposed a reorganization of the Federal structure for more effective response to disasters of all types, including nuclear attack. Congress has approved the proposal, and we expect that the President shortly will issue an Executive Order affecting the reorganization. Our program stresses planning for use of public fallout shelters and for the option of relocating people from high-risk areas to areas of lower risk if attack threatens.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Burt Bacharach is self-contradictory. He often says he dislikes writing for the theater, without explaining why; yet he's said to be working on a new Broadway musical. Please explain —J. Willins, Little Rock, Ark.

● Burt filled us in: Seems he's not all that enamored of composing for the stage (his last was Promises, Promises in 1969) because he does not have permanent, full control over his work: "With a movie score, I record it, and that's that forever. It never changes. But with the stage, unless I'm there every night, on guard, I have no way of knowing how it sounds and if the orchestra goofs off." The Academy Award-winning songwriter cited the time he dropped in, unexpectedly, on Promises, Promises to find two singers in the pit instead of the required four, and the regular drummer was missing. That's why he's embarking on his new project — a musical about Charlie Chaplin — with misgivings.

Coming: a musical about The Tramp

FOR SALLY FIELD, star of Norma Rae

Is it true that you dropped all your old friends the moment you hit it big on TV? —E.P., Whittier, Calif.

● I didn't drop them, I just did not keep in contact with them. I'm very shy and was even shier when I first started out. Had they approached me, I would have been delighted. What did strike me as amusing at the start was that people were always coming up to me and saying, "My friend dated you in high school." For a girl who did not date much, I was the most dated girl around!

FOR BOWIE KUHN, Commissioner of Baseball

The Cincinnati Reds are in the Western Section of the National League, whereas the St. Louis Cardinals are in the Eastern Section. As the City of St. Louis is farther west than Cincinnati, shouldn't it belong in the Western Section? —John J. Wargo, Trenton, N.J.

● When the two leagues separated into divisions in 1969, the decision was made to preserve some of the natural rivalries that might have been affected had the first six teams located in the western part of the country merely been assigned there.

FOR ARTHUR HAILEY, author of Overload

● It's a fact. For the first time in many years, I have no book planned and no unfulfilled contract with a publisher. Before I get too old (I'm 59 this month), I plan to enjoy the fruits of my long labors by not working, at least for several years. I have a good marriage, our children are grown and on their own, and my wife and I plan to travel. I will not state categorically that I will never write a book again; I may come out of retirement to do it.

FOR LYNN-HOLLY JOHNSON, star of Ice Castles

Since you've been skating from childhood, did your schoolwork suffer? —M.L., Framingham, Mass.

● Definitely. No doubt about it, I'd have been a much better student had I paid as much attention to my books as I did to my skates. School didn't matter that much to me; high marks were unimportant. As long as I passed, I didn't care by how much. The most important thing in my life was getting out of class and onto the rink. School was a way to pass time until I could put my skates on.

FOR KATE SMITH

Are you more at home with people your own age or those younger than you? —W.N., Green Bay, Wis.

● My 70th birthday comes up on Tuesday, and I have great respect for the elderly, but I'd much rather be with my juniors! I don't feel my age; that's because I work at feeling young. I always had young people with me at my concerts. I love youngsters. I'm not married, and so I don't have any children, but I love kids — especially nice ones; but not the precocious or obnoxious kind.

FOR IRENE FRANGIDES, Director, Council for the Cosmetology Industry

What's your feeling about the cosmetic labeling laws from the FDA? What effect have they had on the beauty industry? —W.P., Colorado Springs, Colo.

● The Industry welcomes and supports the labeling efforts. In fact, some manufacturers were instrumental in getting such legislation passed. After all, if someone is allergic to an ingredient, you want them to know it's in the product. Of course, labeling is an added expense, but no one has made a big fuss about it.

PRO AND CON

Should Home-Teaching Be Allowed Instead Of School Attendance?

PRO John Holt, former schoolteacher, editor, Growing Without Schooling magazine

The Constitution — first, ninth and 14th amendments — protects this right. No legislature ever meant to make home-teaching a crime, nor would today. Parents who like and trust their own children will teach them better than schools. Only thus can parents protect children from educational malpractice — being physically and mentally hurt by schools. Most schools are, by any standards, incompetent and getting worse. Children most full of health — curiosity, energy, excitement, enthusiasm, joy — the schools call sick. Children learn to be afraid and ashamed to ask questions or, in any way, to show ignorance, confusion, wonder or delight. Schools destroy most children's self-respect.

CON Paul B. Salmon, Executive Director, American Assn. of School Administrators

To suggest that parents do not have vast responsibilities for the education of their children is unthinkable. To suggest, however, that all parents are equipped to assume the responsibilities of the schools is fuzzy, if not dangerous thinking. Each has a vital role to play. Schools must furnish highly trained professional teachers in the subject areas who know how to teach. Parents must assist schools to shape the curriculum, to motivate youngsters to learn and to reinforce the learning process in day-to-day living. Education in these hectic times is a shared responsibility between home and school. With the two working together, each child will benefit. Neither can provide the total needs of children without the other.

OVERNIGHT SUCCESS SOMETIMES TAKES NINE YEARS

Warner / Reprise

CBS

ABC

By Suzy Kalter

One day you're waiting on tables, complaining about your aching feet and wondering when a big tipper will come your way. The next day you're in a limousine, driving through the studio gates on your way to fame. Or so the fantasy goes.

While it hasn't particularly happened that way for anyone, especially recently, "getting discovered" is a dream harbored by almost everyone. Behind the dream comes the belief that if you could just get started, you really would be a star.

Yet, of the handful who are "discovered," only a few will become stars. The reasons are many, having to do mostly with money, merchandising and timing. A few people become stars automatically. Most stars are created by the studios and record companies they are signed to.

Will 1979 be a big year for new stars? Yes. An important reason is that the established stars are getting older. Or they are very young. Liz Taylor, Rock Hudson and Gregory Peck aren't younger than springtime. Tatum O'Neal, Jodie Foster and Brooke Shields are, but none of them can play a woman. Such starlets of yesteryear — Jane Fonda and Faye Dunaway — are now well-established stars who can pick and choose their properties, but they are in their near-forties. There's a void to be filled.

And then there's money. Money is probably the biggest single factor in creating a celebrity — or transforming a starlet into a star. Or course talent counts, but the money for the promotion and publicity count more. And right now, everyone has a bit more money than he did a few years ago.

There are few overnight sensations in this business. Sure, every now and then a girl shows up in a new TV series with two other look-alikes and suddenly becomes a phenomenon. But usually the phenomenon is "crafted" and publicized as surely as a commodity would be.

Nothing could be clearer on that point than the full-page advertisements in the trade papers of the entertainment industry announcing that Susan Anton, for example, would be made into a star of considerable brilliance in 1979. Anton had been reaching for stardom since 1970 when, as Miss California, she became first runner-up in the Miss America pageant.

It's only now, a full nine years later, that she will reach her goal. And while she may have made it anyway, there's no denying the fact that Anton has been handpicked by Fred Silverman, NBC president, as the next blonde bombshell superstar.

Silverman, who along with costume king Bob Mackie, made Cher a star in 1972, has chosen Anton as his next protégée. The 5-foot 11-inch, 135 pound beauty is now also dressed by Bob Mackie and is currently starring in the new NBC series The Cliffhangers. She has her own variety special coming up on NBC and has just released a record album for Columbia Records. Her first feature film, Goldengirl, will be released in July. In it, she plays a track star at the Moscow Olympics.

"It's a tremendous breakthrough for pretty women to be doing television," Anton says, "but now they have to insist on higher-quality stories and roles. Too many of them are being put into comic-strip characterizations, and the public will soon get tired of that." For that reason Anton turned down the opportunity to replace Farrah in Charlie's Angels. She considers herself a singer first and doesn't want to be typecast as a sex symbol. (Maybe because her first career breakthrough was as a sex symbol.)

After years as a carhop, sales girl and office worker, Anton got her big break as the Muriel Cigar Girl, after winning a national contest for the part. The cigar ads, one of which was banned because it was too suggestive, skyrocketed Anton to national notice. Her success with cigars brought her a series with Mel Tillis that bombed after several weeks. No matter. Anton immediately surfaced in small parts on television, on talk shows and specials before springing into her prestellar position. Now she's ready to take off.

Many starlets get their first big break in television commercials. Like Susan Anton, Debra Clinger, 23, made her TV debut plugging such products as toothpaste and laundry detergent. Last year, she graduated from 60-second spots to become one of the two leads in The American Girls, a CBS series that lasted only a few weeks before cancellation.

But being canceled doesn't mean having to say you're sorry. Susan Anton was canceled in her first series, as was starlet Kim Basinger, who played in the ill-fated Cats and Dogs but will again surface this year in several juicy parts. Clinger, you can bet your TV set, will rise like the phoenix and have another show in no time at all. Besides, she doesn't have to depend on being simply curvaceous.

The blue-eyed brunette has been a professional singer since she was four and was a member of The Clinger Sisters, a group with three of her sisters who played state fairs and moved into Las Vegas as they grew up. Debby, as she is called by friends, will undoubtedly have an album out and may move into variety shows, musicals or films.

Of course, you don't have to be canceled to make it as a starlet. Maren Jensen, 24, landed a small but steady part in Battlestar Galactica and became famous when the show was an instant hit. Now, as Athena, the beautiful daughter of Capt. Adama, Jensen is seen not only on TV but on lunchboxes, posters and hundreds of promotional items featuring the cast of Battlestar Galactica.

Jensen came to the part through a small role on a Hardy Boys Mysteries series. Ironically enough, it was a part that demanded singing, and Debra Clinger's voice was dubbed in for Maren's. Battlestar is Jensen's first series and was the first major part she tried out for. Before the audition she had been a model, appeared on several magazine covers and was a waitress in a pizza restaurant.

"I'm resentful when people say I'm a model turned actress," complains Jensen. "I've always been an actress. It just happens that when I couldn't get work as an actress I was able to make some money modeling."

Jensen's only other screen test, besides the one she made for the part of Athena, was for the lead in the movie Hurricane. Because her mother is Hawaiian, Jensen thought she might have a chance for the part. Instead, it went to Mia Farrow when the director decided that Jensen looked too Eurasian. Although, at the producer's insistence, she did the screen test again with a blonde wig on, Jensen still didn't get the part.

But she's not complaining. "This is my first time up, and I'm really lucky to be in a hit series. I don't make a lot of money, and I work terrible hours. But it's great."

While Jensen is an actress without aspirations to sing, 26-year-old Nicolette Larson is a singer who plans to make it in the world of records rather than as an actress or variety-show star. Billed as "the only artist with a hit song who can sit on her hair," Larson is the pride of Warner Records. At her recent debut in a Hollywood club, Warner Records went to the expense of printing matchbook covers and table cards for each of the tables in the club, all in color. Companies don't spend that kind of money for starlets who aren't going to be stars.

One of six children, Nicolette grew up all over the country and ended up in San Francisco, where she began singing in bars and clubs. She soon moved to Los Angeles as a back-up singer and became friendly with Linda Ronstadt, Jesse Colin Young and Emmylou Harris.

"I always wanted to be a singer," she says, swinging her long braids over her shoulder. "I'd watch singers on television and think, boy, they're having so much fun. But I lived in Kansas City then, and they didn't have too big a music business. About the closest I came was working in a cocktail lounge. They had a singer there, but I was too nervous to audition. I just waited on tables."

"I'm real happy at the way things are going. I've got a good producer and a bunch of good songs. And I'm real wary of hype. When someone tries to tell me how great I am, I try to run off somewhere and do something real normal, like go to the grocery store or take the dirty clothes to the laundry. That's the best way to keep in touch with reality."

For Kim Carnes, 32, her reality is that she's the only woman in the music business who writes, sings, produces and arranges her own material. For other vocalists, those functions are performed by others. Singer-songwriters are rare enough, but few men or women can do everything that's involved in record-making.

Carnes knows how to do it because she spent years in studios as a demonstration singer — working out test songs with other artists who would present their words and music to the industry. She also spent years writing songs and won the American Song Festival songwriting competition. The combination of her talent and her husky Rod Stewart-like voice has made EMI America Records decide that this is the year Kim Carnes should become a star.

Her first album for EMI, St. Vincent's Court, is being released this spring and a multicity tour is planned for the summer. The album is a bubbling collection of well-produced and well-written songs that will probaby provide hits for other artists as well as for Carnes herself.

"I've always paid a lot of attention to lyrics," she says. "I have always loved a good ballad, and I'm definitely a romanticist. I don't like folk music, and there is only a certain kind of love song that I like. And I have a tremendous fascination for Europe."

Carnes writes about 40 to 50 songs a year. Many of them have become hits for such singers as Sinatra, Streisand and Rita Coolidge. But Kim is reluctant to talk about the celebrities who have had success with her work. She wants her work to speak for itself. And she wants you to remember her singing it. Chances are you will. You may not have heard of Kim Carnes yesterday, but she's going to be famous tomorrow.

In fact, you may not have heard of any of these women before now. But next time you see their faces in the movie magazines, the gossip rags and the awards shows — don't say we didn't tell you. FW

FIRST WOMAN SHERIFF KEEPS A "CLEAN HOUSE"

By Mary Jean Pramik-Holdaway

Cleaning up is her job. That's nothing new for a woman, but her house is really different. It's the century-old Belmont County, Ohio, jailhouse, located in St. Clairsville, and she is the first woman to oversee its care and upkeep. Meet Kathy Crumbley, the first elected woman sheriff in the United States.

Sheriff Crumbley, a favorite on Johnny Carson's Tonight Show, has been offered contracts for television movies, appeared on Hee Haw and received fan mail from 17 foreign countries (she even has a proxy godchild in Poland!). But, she emphasizes, her job as sheriff of Belmont County comes first.

The road to that peace officer's star has been a long one for Kathy Crumbley. She set out as the secretary to the sheriff several years ago and later achieved deputy status after 600 hours of law-enforcement schooling. Defeating the other male candidates in the Democratic primary in spring, 1976, and again in the general election in November, she feels that she was chosen by "the people." Other women have become sheriffs by inheriting their husbands' badges and desks, but Sheriff Crumbley is the first woman in this country to win her office.

Sheriff Crumbley logs a 12-hour work day but reserves time for her three-year-old son Joshua. With baby-sitting help from her mother and a cousin, she is able to care for her family as well as for the people of the county. She writes nightly in the family Bible for her son, preserving for him the exciting events of her job.

One such incident in this eastern Ohio coal-mining community bordered on the dangerous. The wife of a coal miner, and the daughter of one as well, Sheriff Crumbley faced striking miners. Blocking a county road and preventing nonunion coal from passing through, out-of-state agitators met the sheriff head-on.

"Gentlemen," said the sheriff, an impressive woman standing six feet tall and weighing well over 200 pounds, "— and you know you are gentlemen — I would hate to arrest one of my husband's brothers. Please disperse." And they did. Later, at a strike rally, the local workers cheered her for her courageous stand.

Sheriff Crumbley believes there is a need for women in law enforcement, especially in cases of wife-beating and rape, about which the woman victim often just wants to talk with another woman. Also, children relate to her easily in her position of sheriff. She recalls one occurrence in which a young child had shot his younger brother. The two investigating deputies called her in on the case when the boy ran away, hid behind an outdoor shed and wouldn't let anyone approach him. That particular day the sheriff was not wearing her uniform. "Come to Kathy," she gently coaxed the frightened youngster. He ran to her immediately and clung to her for some time afterward, during which time, she was able to calm his confused terror.

"She's mean," one of her 14 deputies laughs. "No, seriously," he continues, "things are more in order around here now than ever before." These men like Sheriff Crumbley and find that working with a woman sheriff is a challenge, interesting and fun.

Sheriff Crumbley states that her specific goal as chief law officer of Belmont County is to "Bring law enforcement back to the people, to put it on a level so that the people know what's going on and can relate to it." She also intends to modernize the deputy force and to build a new jailhouse. After more than three years as sheriff, Kathy Crumbley feels that she is just beginning to do her job. "Women clean up after themselves. And women stay with something until it's neat and organized; they are more conscientious, and they like a clean house. I intend to do the same thing to the law-enforcement system in this county."

And she means it, too. FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

DO YOU LET ANGER GET THE BEST OF YOU?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Even if a person is exceedingly mad, you can cool his anger just by making a joke or telling him a funny story.

2. People who anger or aggravate you can "get under your skin" in more ways than one.

3. Anger that you carry around with you — which you swallow or bottle up — can have ill effects, mentally, physically and emotionally. And one of the best ways to get rid of anger is to share it.

4. When you feel there is no one you can talk to, there is another way of getting rid of intense anger, resentment and hostility that is almost as effective as bending a sympathetic and understanding ear.

5. Anger is like a two-edged sword which can be used to injure both oneself and others — or it can be used constructively and creatively.

ANSWERS

1. True. But in psychological studies at Lewis University (Ill.) only one type of humor was found effective in anger reduction: the racy or ribald type of joke. Similar research at Purdue University also has shown jokes in this category to have a significant effect on the reduction of anger and aggression.

2. True. Studies at the George Washington University School of Medicine have shown that the anger and hostility provoked by an aggravating person can result in neurodermatitis — itching and irritation of the skin.

3. True. Findings of a University of Akron study of the psychodynamics of anger indicate the importance of getting rid of your anger by sharing it with understanding members of the family, relating the events of the day that have gotten you down and made you mad enough to commit various kinds of mayhem. It is pointed out that "every anger verbalization of this kind, especially when it is done in the presence of loved ones who are not critical but forgiving, makes possible a reduction of the failure feeling that can develop during the day in competitive living. Abreaction (the releasing of repressed emotions by reliving, in words, feelings or actions, the original traumatic situation) is good for the soul, the heart and the mind and should be practiced whenever possible."

4. True. It is pointed out in the same study that at times when there are no trusted and sympathetic persons you can talk to, you can abreact "by speaking into a tape recorder and then playing the tape back." And it is noted that while this method of getting anger out of the system is not quite as effective as abreacting before another person, it does get rid of the anger by extraverting it — providing it with means of expression — and thus keeping it from doing damage to the self.

5. True. In a University of California study of the psychosocial effects of anger, which evaluates the findings of other leading researches, it is concluded that "One of the most recognizable functions of anger arousal is that it energizes our behavior and increases the vigor with which we act. In addition to strong responses, such as slamming doors or raising the volume of one's voice, this energizing effect can also enable a person to assertively confront provocation or injustice." And it is noted that nearly all social movements have anger as a driving force for efforts at social change. It is also observed that anger serves an important expressive or communicative function in the marriage relationship. It is pointed out that "A healthy relationship depends on the ability of partners to express anger (when they feel it) and give one another negative feedback at times. Some problems never even reach the discussion stage — where they can be aired — until one member of the relationship becomes angry." FW

HAIR 1979... IT'S THE LOOK OF LIGHT!

Hair fashion trends for 1979 mean many different looks in style and color. Short, long, straight or curly — the nation's top stylists are using all of these effects to create the look to suit the person! There are lots of options — the possibilities seem endless!

The hair experts also agree that the cut is only half of the right look for you. It's the color that brings out the glow in your hair and puts the smile on your face. And lately, it's creating beautiful lights in the hair that is making blondes, redheads and brunettes look and feel terrific!

How light do you want to be?

Try it out a little at a time — just a shade or two lighter than your own haircolor with a one-step shampoo-in formula haircolor. That's easy and the new hair growing in won't be very noticeable. If you love it and want to try it a little lighter, you can choose a shade or two lighter the next time.

When you consider a haircolor change, you should consider a styling change, too. Hairdressers call it a "total look" of cut and color.

By strand testing, trying the color out on one small section of hair before coloring your hair overall. Then if you don't like the color, you can change easily. Ask your hairdresser, or if you prefer to do it yourself, directions are in every haircoloring package. Salon color charts or the color guides on the packages will give you a pretty good idea of the color you'll get, but everybody's hair is different and so color results can differ. The only way to know for sure is to strand test.

Can you try out a lighter color with a temporary color rinse?

Not really. Anything that lightens your hair will be a permanent haircoloring.

However, if you have quite a bit of gray, there is a neat trick you can try with semi-permanent hair color. It won't lighten, but you can cover the gray with a shade lighter than your non-gray hair.

For instance, if your natural hair is light to medium brown, try a golden blonde shade. The color will only show up on your gray hair, and the overall effect will be lighter. The semi-permanent hair color will wash away after several shampoos.

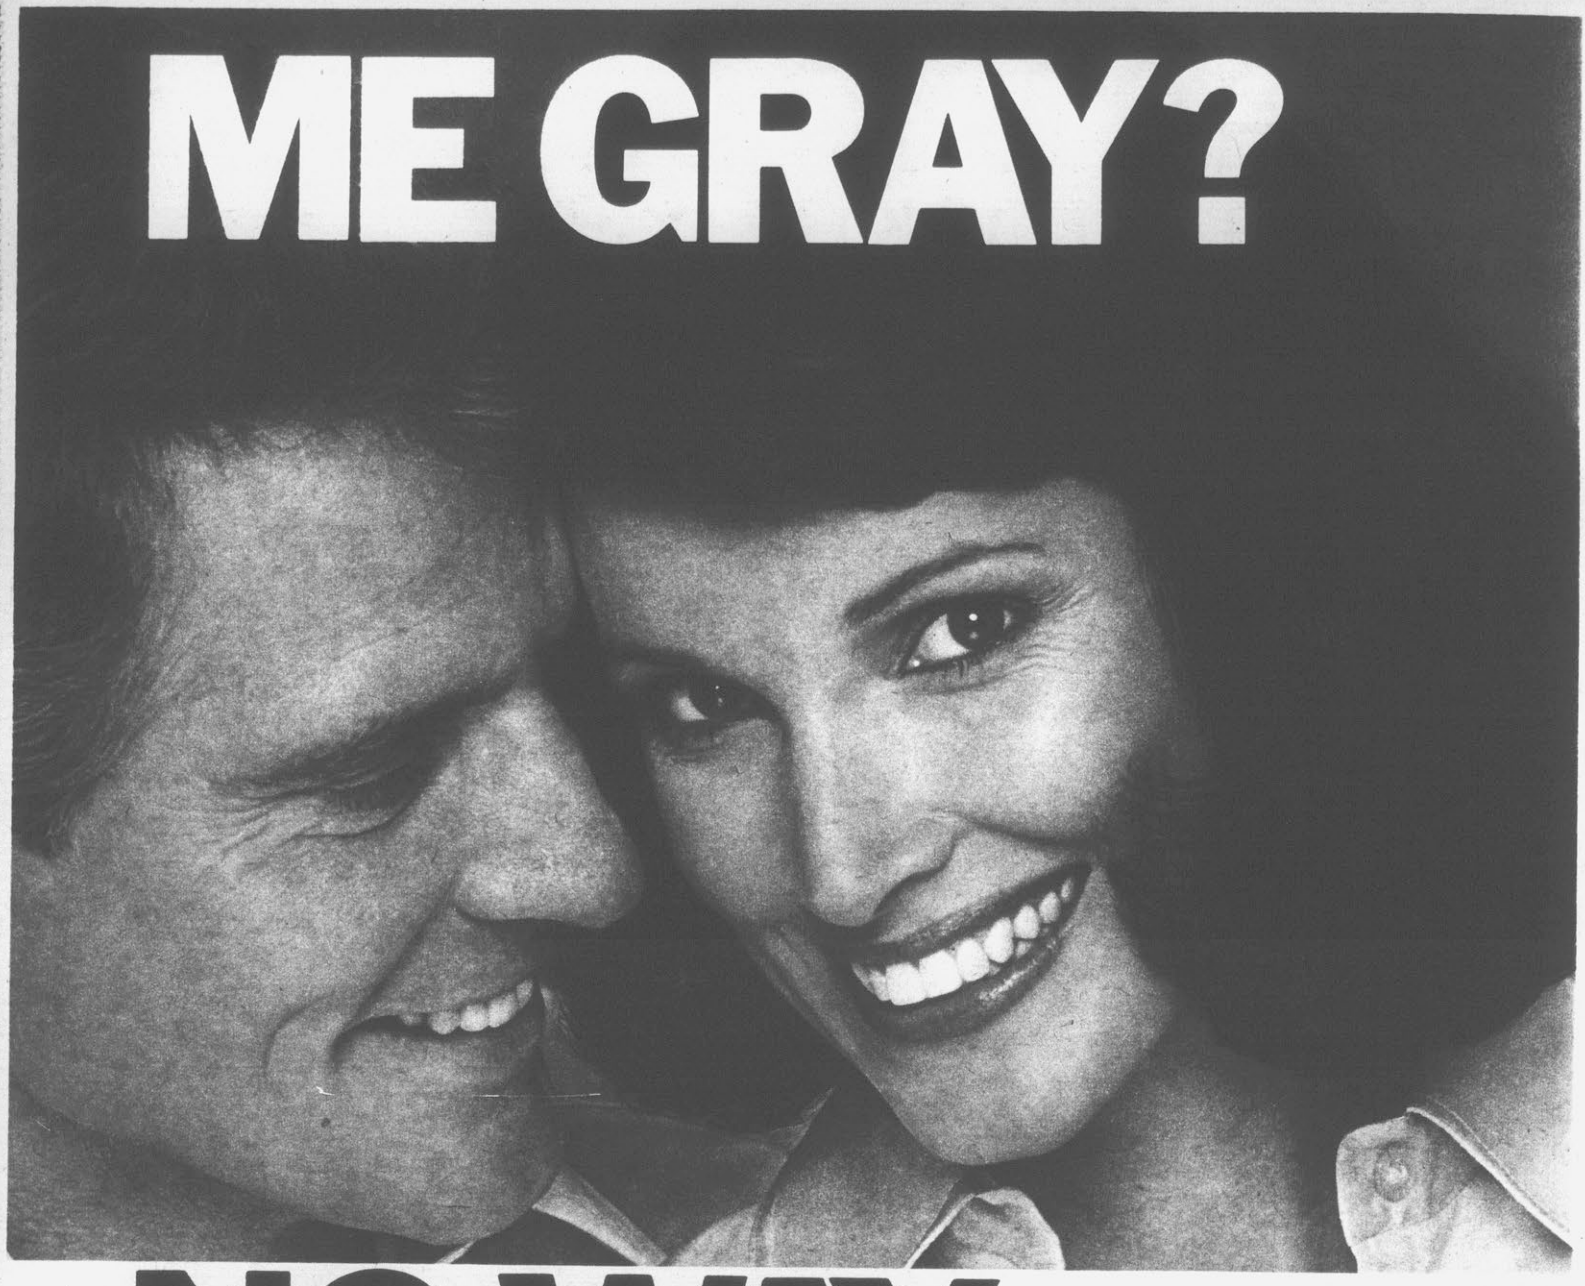
If you want to be lighter overall, use a one-step shampoo-in formula haircoloring. It lasts until the hair grows out.

After

Before

Julie was pretty even before her hair was colored. But look what a difference the new color and style make! And it's not a big change — just a few shades lighter with a one-step shampoo-in formula haircoloring. The new color and the bangs play up her big brown eyes and beautiful skin. The lighter lipstick does, too. A good professional haircut makes her hair easier to style, and haircoloring has given her hair more body. Now, she can turn under the ends of her hair with an electric curling iron, and the curls will stay. What a difference a little haircoloring can make!

ME GRAY?



NO WAY.

My gray looked so awful, it made me look older than my husband.

I'm too young to look old. But no way did I want to use haircoloring. Until I found Loving Care® Color-Lotion.

It's not like most haircolorings. It's gentler. Because Loving Care has no peroxide. And no peroxide to me, means it's not forever.

It comes from Clairol. (And nobody else has anything like it.) It's so simple and easy. All I do is wash away my gray and wash in my own natural color. And I look like "me" again.

But that's not all the good news. My hair's in super shape now. It's got body. And shine. I can't believe how full it is. Loving Care is actually good for my hair.

My hair's never looked better. My hair's never felt better. And neither have I!

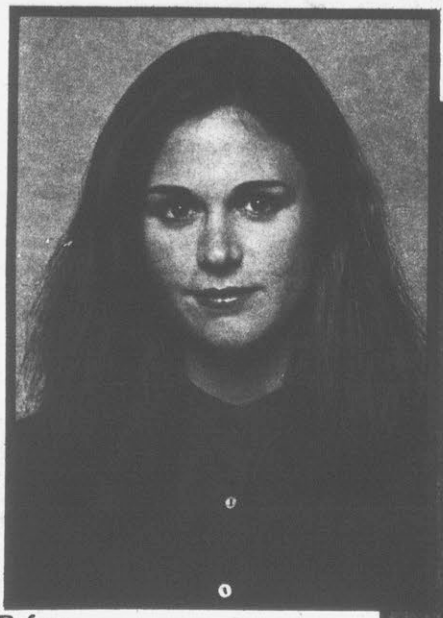
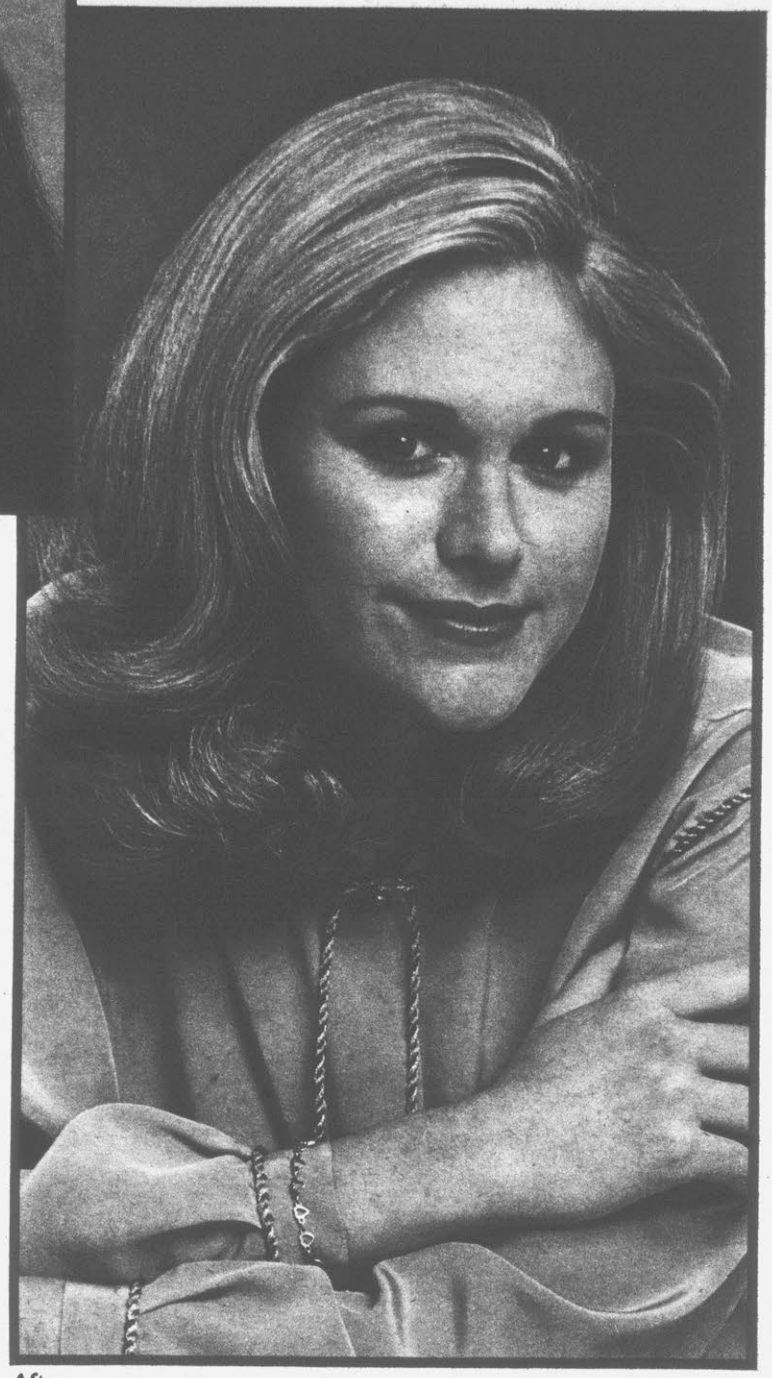
Beauty & You



Before



After

Aileen became a 'blonde-believer' when she went from 'boring brown' to all-over light! She had "never tried being a blonde before," says Aileen. "I love it!"

Aileen's haircolorist, Michael of Yves Claude for Hair in Manhattan, explained that he lightened Aileen's all-over base color of light, mousey brown with a single-process hair-coloring. When her base color became a warm honey blonde, he then added lots of highlights for a beautiful blending of blonde.

The lighter look and soft curls created by an instant hairsetter brought out her pretty features. A spritz of non-aerosol hair mist helps to hold her soft curl in shape.

Aileen's hair needed conditioning. After her split ends were trimmed away, a deep penetrating conditioner was put on her hair for 30 minutes to help get it back into healthy-looking shape. From now on, she plans to follow a faithful program of conditioning.

Is the very light blonde coming back?

It is if it's right for your skin tones and looks very natural on you. The day of the "artificial looking" blonde is gone. Talk to your hairdresser. Try on some wigs. If it looks great for you, go ahead. You'll be right in style.

If your hair is fairly light and doesn't have red undertones, you might be able to become very blonde with the lightest shades of one-step shampoo-in formula haircoloring. But most light blonde shades are achieved by "two-step blonding." In the first step, the hair is lightened. In the second step the desired color is put in. That color is called the "toner." A surprisingly wide range of shades is available in toners, from golden to ash blonde to very pale champagne blonde.

What kind of haircoloring takes the least time?

They're all pretty quick. Most take 20 or 30 minutes once a month. Two-step blonding takes longer, depending on your natural haircolor. Frosting takes longer to do, but you'll do it less often.

New York haircolorist Leslie Blanchard says that haircoloring today means "spending only a minimum of time to maximize your looks!"

How about highlights?

Highlighting is a terrific route to the lighter look without lightening the hair overall. The great professional hairstylists have developed a variety of techniques using several different shades on one head of hair to create a 'dimensional' haircoloring effect. They use special highlighting patterns to emphasize the hairstyle. The color literally enhances the cut!

Then, there's frosting, too, which involves the lightening of selected hair strands wherever you want them — just at the front or throughout the hair.

Can you lighten your hair and cover gray at the same time?

Absolutely. The one-step permanent shampoo-in haircolorings are designed to do that, and it's a great idea. Because skin tones lighten as you get older, lighter hair becomes more flattering. Gray is nature's way of lightening the hair to compensate. A lighter color lets you make the adjustment with that 'older' look that comes with gray.

According to hairstylist Travis Johnson, a new, softer hairstyle is in order as a woman matures. (See his comments later on in this article.)

Most people look better lighter. Some may prefer darker shades, and that's very easy to do. Make it a gradual change, though — just one shade darker the first time. You can always go darker the next time if you prefer.

Again — another use for semi-permanent haircoloring. Remember, it will fade away gradually with several shampoos.

And, if you decide you like it and want color that lasts longer, you can change to a permanent one-step shampoo-in formula haircoloring.

It gives your hair body and shine, makes your own color even prettier. Hair changes without our realizing it. Blondes darken, brunettes dull and redheads fade. Gradually the grays creep in. Take a good look at your hair. If you really love it, fine. Just keep an eye on it! And, as you see more of the lighter look, you might just be tempted to try it out.

Where's the best place to get haircoloring advice?

From a professional hairdresser with a reputation for good haircoloring. From a good cosmetician in a retail store. Or you can write to manufacturers of haircoloring. To find out where they are, check the packages or instruction sheets.

Who are the hairdressers talking about the light look?

Read on. You will find out what's happening with hair from top hairdressers around the country — and their professional advice for you!

John Dellaria, Boston, Massachusetts

"There's a great thing happening in haircutting today. When a client comes in for a cut, she can actually get several cuts all at once. I call this the 'cut-within-a-cut' — it's one basic cut with extra 'hidden touches' that allows you to wear your hair in several different ways. You could actually get five completely different looks from one basic cut. Women want versatility in their hairstyles, and this is the newest option open to them.

"My cuts look their best with the right haircolor accent. I like to emphasize the direction of the hairstyle with highlights, lots of lights that just 'go' with the way the hair falls. The result is hair that shows off beautiful blends of color, whether hair is brushed forward, back, up or down."

'The Cut-Within-A-Cut'

Louis Gignac, New York City

"My clients demand hair that is free and easy — no restriction or limitations on them between salon appointments. This means that the basic cut must be right for each type of hair — hair should fall beautifully back into place after brushing. A good cut means a woman doesn't have to worry about how her hair looks — she simply enjoys it.

"The right cut should build volume into the hair. Even fine, limp-looking hair can look fuller and thicker without any need for teasing. Volume is built by subtly layering the hair — each layer of hair builds upon the next for added fullness."

"When a woman is considering a new look of cut-and-color, she should ask for a salon consultation with one or two local experts. It's like shopping for clothes — you look and think before you buy. Make your hairdresser aware of your lifestyle, the problems you have maintaining your hair and what your 'new look' will mean in terms of cost and maintenance."

THE CONDITION

The 'Conditional Agreement' Between You And Your Hair

Gerard Bollei, New York City

"Your new haircut and new haircolor will look beautiful 'on the condition' that you condition your hair. Healthy-looking hair means hair with shine and luster and that is only achieved by proper conditioning. Conditioning makes your hair more manageable and controllable and really shows off your haircolor.

"I tell my clients that the whole shampoo and conditioning experience is very therapeutic — for the senses as well as the hair. That's the time of day when you relax, massage your scalp while shampooing, let the conditioner soak into the hair and then rinse out with a final cold-water rinse. It's a bit of self-indulgence that makes you feel wonderfully refreshed."

'Cut, Color and Condition Mean Beautiful Hair'

Don Estes, Visalia, California

"My California clients know how I feel about conditioning their hair... it's a must! My clients are always in the sun or swimming or playing tennis and golf, so I give them easy-care cuts that are casual by day and can be 'dressed up' for evening. Their hair has to 'weather the elements,' and conditioning is the solution. Just like moisturizer on the face, conditioners act as an invisible 'protective coating.'

"Women should ask their hairdressers for a personalized conditioning routine to follow at home. Different types of hair require different types of conditioners and frequency of treatments.

'Casual Day Looks Dress Up For Evening'

"Many of my clients are blondes. They typify America's image of the healthy-looking California blonde. They range from the very light all-over blonde to the gal who wants lots of blonde highlights in her hair for a look of sun.

"One thing for sure — blondes are more popular than ever!"

THE COLOR

'Blondes are Back'

Susan MacCoy, Chicago, Illinois

"Women of all ages are going blonde all over the country. Many of my younger clients are just now discovering what it's like to be a blonde, and they love it. I try to create different looks of blonde for different clients, depending on the degree of lightness they want.

"Blonding today is different from years ago. Beautiful looks of blonde can be created by putting highlights throughout the hair or simply around the face for a framing effect. I call this a blonde feeling that looks sensational when hair is shining and beautifully cut.

'Being Blonde — It's a Glamourous Feeling'

"Many women prefer to be 'definitely' blonde, an all-over blonde that is soft, lovely and definitely glamourous."

Doris Williams, Statesville, North Carolina

"Lighter hair is generally more flattering to most women. And though 'blonde' is certainly not for everyone, blonde is generally the most flattering shade of all. It's really a matter of optics... if a blonde and a brunette walk into the room, the blonde hair is noticed first. The eye notices the lighter color first.

"Being blonde is being 'in fashion' today... just look around at the most-publicized personalities in fashion and entertainment. Most of them are blondes. They are young, pretty and definitely influence the younger woman into going blonder or simply lighter, depending on their haircolor.

"Being a blonde has always been popular in the South, but everywhere I go, I see more and more blondes."

Francesca Oliveri, Fort Wayne, Indiana

"My younger clients are now asking me to go lighter and lighter. They want to have the look of sunlight in their hair, as if they had just spent a fabulous summer in the sun.

"And because the cut is never complete without the color, I pattern these highlights after the style itself. If the hair falls straight and forward, I pattern the highlights to 'hit' the surface as if the sun were shining down on the top of the head. Hair is lighter at the front and crown and is gradually blended into darker tones toward the back. This is a very natural but very light look.

"If hair is shorter and curly, I use a brush to 'paint on' highlights onto and around the curls for a sensational swirl of light throughout the hair."

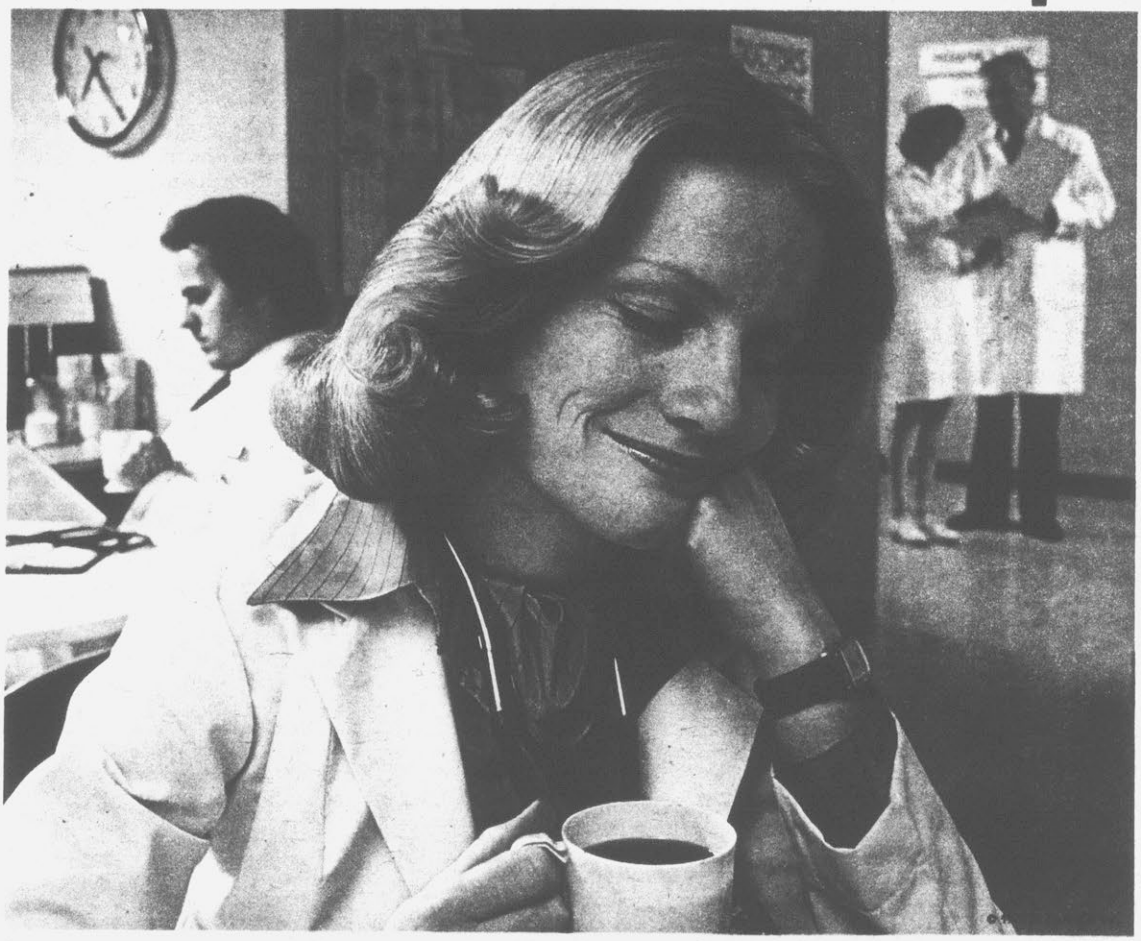
Travis Johnson, Dallas-Ft. Worth, Texas

"The mature woman who is naturally gray should usually go into a lighter shade, perhaps a soft tone of blonde that teams beautifully with a soft, flattering hairstyle. Blonde shades are flattering to skin tones and minimize facial lines or wrinkles. Going darker is too harsh a look for most mature women."

Marty Gross, Cherry Hill, New Jersey

"Once you have discovered the benefits of haircolor, become a 'color believer.' It's like wanting more and more of a good thing.

She conked out but her hair held up.



After a long night's tour of duty, your hair still looks great. Thanks to Final Net—the clear, concentrated mist from Clairol that you spritz on once to hold your hair all day. Final Net isn't an aerosol—it's nearly 100% holding power. So 8 ounces of Final Net goes as far as 12 ounces of aerosol hairspray. You may be too pooped to take another pulse, but your hair will still be holding up. Beautifully.

"For instance, once a woman discovers the feeling of light in her hair — even if it is just a few highlights — she eventually wants more and more highlights. Before she knows it, she's a beautiful blonde — that's what she really wanted to begin with but didn't know it!"

Martha Garrett, Baton Rouge, Louisiana

"The blonding hair fashion trend has influenced the look of other haircolor shades as well. The blonde feeling that has swept the country has even caused redheads and brunettes to want 'more light' in their hair.

"Darker, deeper redheads, for instance, now love the thought of being a lighter honey red or even a strawberry blonde — now that's the blonding influence. The redheads want to be sunny and light with lots of light tones in their hair. They are getting away from the look of the deeper, earthier red tones."

Charles Ross, Beverly Hills, California

"My redheads tell me that they want to be 'brighter.' What they are saying is that they want more light and luster in their hair — a look of 'vibrance' that I achieve with highlighting or all-over colors and lots of conditioning. With the right cut, it's a marvelous combination."

'Light and Luster Make Hair Come Alive'

Jon Guenter, New York City

"Many brunettes don't realize all the beautiful highlighting options now available to them. Brunettes now want to add more interest to their hair . . . they say that brown can be very dull, and they are certainly correct.

"I believe that dark brown hair looks terrific with very light brown contrasting strands blended throughout. I call it 'brown-on-brown,' and it's extremely popular among my clients with that 'ordinary' brown hair.

"For the gal with mousey brown hair, often bordering on dishwater blonde (a dark blonde), I suggest warm blonde highlights done very finely on selected strands for a lighter, natural-looking feeling. Sometimes, just framing the face with soft highlights gives my client the look of light and just enough added interest to otherwise dull, tired hair. Combined with the right cut and a conditioning treatment, the hair and the lady literally come alive!"

'Highlights Bring Out Soft Curls'

Leslie Blanchard, New York City

"Going blonde has changed a lot of lives in my salon; my clients say it is definitely more exciting to be a blonde. And whether you're a movie star, a homemaker or a working girl watching her budget, there is a marvelous look of blonde for you.

"When you're thinking about coloring your hair, you should definitely get a free consultation with one or two professional haircolorists. The haircoloring possibilities are endless . . . there are so many beautiful options to choose from. That's the beauty of haircoloring today."

I like any kind of ice cream as long as it's strawberry. And any kind of haircolor as long as it's named Nice 'n Easy. It gives me the built-in conditioners I need. And the natural-looking highlights I love. It's as if they made it especially for me!

Nice 'n Easy® haircolor. It sells the most.

AN EASY SKIN-CARE PROGRAM FOR A GLOWING COMPLEXION

Our grandmothers knew what they were talking about, says esthetician Edouard Hayoun, when they told us to eat fresh fruits and vegetables, not only for general health but for our skin, too!

In the thirty-two years he has spent treating skin conditions, Hayoun, who's been particularly successful in treating severe cases of acne, has encountered every kind of condition.

"First of all," Hayoun points out, "'normal' skin is rare. In addition to environmental factors, what we eat (too much fat) and drink, as well as the amount of stress we're able to tolerate, all affect the skin inside and out."

All of us are born with beautiful skin, but within an average of 15 years the problems of oily skin, blackheads, pimples and enlarged pores arise. The top layer of skin, the epidermis, acts as a barrier, while the dermis, the layer directly under, literally supports the whole structure. It contains the protein collagen, the chief constituent of our connective tissue that gives the skin its elasticity. As skin ages, the under layer thins, losing some of its capacity to hold water, while the collagen and other fibers lose resilience. This is when wrinkling occurs.

"Sun-worshipping is a ritual which must go. All it does is age and damage healthy skin."

That's only one reason why "sun-worshipping must be stamped out," says Hayoun, who sees this ritual as more than a mild form of insanity. "All you do is damage healthy skin," he emphasizes. Sunbathing, contrary to myth, is not good for oily skins, either. The ultraviolet rays do dry out excess oil, but the oil glands respond to this, by speeding up to produce extra oil. The result: clogged pores that frequently produce the dreaded blemishes. "If you must sunbathe, do it sparingly," he adds.

An important bit of advice he gives to all those who seek his professional help (Grandma was right again) is to drink eight to ten 8-ounce glasses of water daily. This helps the body flush away waste material and, he promises, will reward you with glowing skin.

Since most people turn a little green at the thought of drinking one 8-ounce glass of water a day, Hayoun suggests that you would be surprised at how light and delicious boiled water, refrigerated, can taste. Squeeze in some lemon or lime to stimulate your taste buds. "You can drink a pitcherful, while you're watching TV," recommends Hayoun.

What is his prescription for a good skin-care regimen? It consists simply of daily cleansing, and moisturizing. Wash your face with hot water and a clean face cloth. If you have time, a good way to open pores for deep cleansing is to dip a fresh white towel into boiled water, squeeze it out, then bring it to within one inch from the face; when the towel cools, apply as a warm compress and wipe face, using a mild cleanser, followed by an astringent to close pores. Finish with a moisturizer applied in a gentle, upward, rotating motion. For dry skins, upon retiring, use a non-greasy night cream (the more greasy it is, the less penetrating). If you use foundation, whatever your skin type, use a water-based makeup, rather than one with an oil-base — which, Hayoun believes, only clogs pores.

Is dry skin making you look older than you should? Touch these 5 spots and find out.

1. Corner of your eye. Does it feel tight and drawn? Chances are, you're drying your skin with soap. And that can make it look older.

2. Under the eye. Does this area feel smooth and soft? If it feels dry, stop using soap. Soap strips away much of your skin's natural moisture.

3. Your cheek. Does it feel dry, almost chapped here? Remember, all soaps are drying. But Dove® is not soap, and it can't dry your skin like soap.

4. Corner of the mouth. If it feels tight and pinched, your skin needs moisture. And only Dove is one-quarter moisturizing cream.

5. Your throat. The key sign here is a rough, dry feel. But with Dove you can start having smoother, younger looking skin in just 7 days.

Well, how did you do? Need a little help? Then stop drying your skin with soap. Start moisturizing it with Dove. For younger looking skin.

Hayoun recommends frequent bathing, with a mild soap and a loofah (a natural abrasive sponge) available at most drug and toiletry stores. It's excellent for stimulating circulation. After a bath or shower, pat, but let the skin air-dry. Use a good body lotion to seal in the moisture. For dry skins, if you've tried everything else, preparations with placenta, shark or turtle oil are recommended as very penetrating.

Can we look forward to better knowledge about skin care through current research? We asked Dr. Barbara A. Gilchrest, a dermatologist, assistant professor at Harvard Medical School and co-author of a new book, Between You and Me: A Sensible and Authoritative Guide to the Care and Treatment of Your Skin. "The exciting news," says Dr. Gilchrest, "is that a new derivative of vitamin A, cis-retinoic acid, is proving exceptionally beneficial in treating acne." It's long been known that an excess or a deficiency of vitamin A can cause abnormalities in the skin — and retinoic acid by itself has been used topically for acne treatment.

"But just this year," says Dr. Gilchrest, "it was reported that cis-retinoic acid, taken in pill form, made acne disappear in many cases, and the condition did not return even after the pill was discontinued."

Dr. Gilchrest adds this warning: Don't rush out to get vitamin A (unless your doctor thinks you have a deficiency). The benefits to skin are only from derivatives of vitamin A, not the vitamin itself.

What of the future in skin research? "We're engaged in a continual study of the effects of sunlight on skin. The prize will go to the researcher who discovers a pill that would effectively screen out harmful ultraviolet rays," declares Dr. Gilchrest. FW

BETTER WAYS TO CONTROL DIABETES

By Paula Dranov

It may be due to better diagnostic techniques, or just because we're living longer these days. A more disturbing explanation is the fact that so many Americans are not only overweight, but obese. Whatever the reason, this is the reality: The incidence of diabetes is increasing at a rate of six percent per year. Today, approximately five percent of the population — 10 million Americans — have diabetes. What's most disturbing of all is that four million of them don't even know it or are not receiving treatment. Given the current rate of increase, the number of diabetics will double every 15 years, and babies born this year will have a one-in-five chance of becoming diabetic within their lifetimes.

Any way you look at it, diabetes is a major health problem, the direct cause of more than 38,000 deaths per year and a factor in perhaps 260,000 more. At that rate, diabetes and its complications rank as the third leading cause of death by disease in the United States, after heart disease and cancer.

Why has diabetes become such a threat? Doctors are uncertain, but they do know that the risk of diabetes doubles for every decade we live over the age of 40, and with every 20 percent of excess weight we carry. The vast majority of diabetics — 80 percent — are more than 45 years old, so some of the increase is linked to our rising life expectancy. But, it's also related to the prevalence of obesity in our society — 13 percent of adult men and 23 percent of adult women are overweight enough to be considered obese.

Although diabetes can be controlled with medical treatment, diet and exercise, the outlook may be especially grim for the four million who don't know they have it. It can lead to heart attack, blindness, kidney disease and gangrene.

Diabetes mellitus is the full name of this chronic, hereditary disease, which has been recognized for more than 4,000 years, and for which there is still no cure. It is a disorder stemming from the way the body processes carbohydrates which we take in through food high in sugar and starch. Normally, these foods are converted into a form of sugar called glucose, which is either used to produce heat or energy, or stored in the body. Instead of being used, the glucose accumulates in a diabetic's blood, and is later expelled in the urine. As a result the body has to draw on other reserves for energy.

Doctors aren't sure why this happens, but they do know it has to do with the workings of the pancreas, a large gland located behind the stomach. The pancreas produces insulin, the hormone which regulates the body's use of sugar. With insufficient amounts of insulin, or without insulin, the process by which glucose is burned or stored goes awry.

The symptoms can range from not feeling well to such obvious warning signs as frequent urination, unusual thirst, weight loss, easy tiring, weakness, irritability, nausea, or an uncontrollable craving for food, especially sweets. Other danger signals include changed or blurred vision; pain or cramps in the legs, feet or fingers; frequent infections of the skin, gums or urinary system; slow healing of cuts and bruises; intense itching and drowsiness. In juvenile-onset diabetes, the most severe form of the disease affecting children and young adults, symptoms can be followed by diabetic coma. In the days before insulin injections, the young victims usually died within a few years.

Only about 10 percent of all diabetics have the severe form. Most have what doctors refer to as maturity-onset diabetes, which first occurs in middle or old age. The most likely victims are the overweight, and individuals with a family history of the disease. It is more common among women than men.

For most of us, the very thought of diabetes raises the specter of daily insulin injections. But in fact, more than half of the six million Americans under treatment rely on diet alone to control the disorder. Symptoms may disappear entirely once an overweight patient gets down to normal weight. But diabetics must watch carefully that they don't gain, and make sure that they stick to a meal plan especially tailored for them. Impulse-eating or food binges can bring on the symptoms again, and

ACCEPT NO SUBSTITUTE ZOYSIA!

Lady Plugs In Zoysia Grass Gets Rid of Lawn Problems

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER. UP TO 600 AMAZOY ZOYSIA GRASS PLUGS FREE

By Jack T. Johnson, Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn ". . . is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in. . . . Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn—nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long. It will NOT winter-kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial!

DON'T BE MISLED! THERE IS ONLY ONE AMAZOY

Amazoy plugs are taken from genuine Z-52 Meyer Zoysia . . . guaranteed winter-hardened for 3 full years under the supervision of trained agronomists. Over a HALF-BILLION plugs sold (outsells the others 10 to 1)! So don't take chances with inferior plugs. Accept No Substitute for Amazoy Zoysia! NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Easy planting instructions with order.

YOUR OWN SUPPLY OF PLUG TRANSPLANTS

Every Plug Guaranteed to Grow In Your Area • In Your Soil

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER-KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT-KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazoy remains green and lovely.

Plug Amazoy into an entire lawn or problem areas. Plug it into poor soil, "builders soil", clay or even salty, sandy beach areas. I guarantee every plug, regardless. Any plug failing to grow in 45 days replaced FREE. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we're 100% sure of our product!

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by ⅔.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed-like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass was perfected by U.S. Govt., Released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

DIABETES

Another 1.25 million diabetics are treated with oral medication, drugs that seem to lower the blood-sugar level by stimulating insulin production. These drugs are considered suitable only for mild cases of diabetes in older people. Patients with juvenile-onset diabetes, no matter what their ages, must be treated with daily insulin injections, a balanced diet and exercise. The idea is to regulate the body chemistry so that foods are used as normally as possible.

With proper treatment, most diabetics can avoid the life-threatening complications of the disease — heart attacks, gangrene, strokes. These are caused by hardening or thickening of the arteries, which seems to occur in diabetics at an earlier-than-usual age. The arteries most often affected are those leading to the heart, legs and brain. When they can no longer provide adequate circulation, the results are heart attacks, gangrene or strokes. Diabetes also can damage the capillaries, the tiny blood vessels connecting arteries and veins. If this occurs, the end result may be hemorrhages of the eye (and, possibly eventual blindness) as well as kidney trouble.

The most important advance in the treatment of diabetics was, of course, the discovery of insulin in 1921. Until then, patients rarely lived more than a few years after diabetes appeared. Today, most diabetics live normal life spans and lead normal lives. Only a few jobs are off-limits to those taking insulin — operating heavy machinery, flying airplanes and truck driving — because of the danger, slim but real, of insulin reaction. This can occur when the blood sugar drops to abnormally low levels, usually due to exercising more than normal without eating enough to compensate for the calories expended. Or, it can be caused by delaying a meal or eating only a skimpy one. Most diabetics carry a candy bar or sugar cubes against the chance of insulin reaction, but the onset can be sudden. The warning signs include excited, nervous, confused or irritable behavior; rapid, shallow breathing; hunger, headache and a numbness or tingling of the tongue. A diabetic coma, another extreme reaction, is the result of too much, rather than too little, blood sugar. It is rare today, and can occur only when a patient seriously neglects his diet or doesn't take his insulin. Onset is gradual rather than sudden, and is characterized by flushed, dry skin; drowsiness; deep, labored breathing; vomiting, thirst and abdominal pain. The coma follows and, without medical treatment, can result in death.

Although there's no sure way to prevent diabetes or to cure it, treatment is still improving dramatically. The insulin now in use is extracted from sheep and cattle. But last September, human insulin was first produced in a laboratory — a breakthrough that eventually could prevent potential chronic shortages.

Another recent advance is a waist-size artificial pancreas capable of normalizing blood-sugar levels. These devices are to be carried or worn by diabetics, and there's even the possibility that scientists will be able to produce an implantable artificial pancreas that could sense blood glucose levels, compute individual insulin needs and automatically inject the hormone.

All in all, it's beginning to appear that the worst thing about diabetes today is not knowing you've got it. FW

QUIPS & QUOTES

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

What shall we name the baby?
What name if a boy, if a girl?
If a girl, maybe Molly or Merla.
If a boy, maybe Erik or Earl.

And hope for a change in his will.
Will, in fact, might promote the suggestion.
Or Wilma might fill the bill.

Better still, call it Eks or Zero,
A just-for-the-present name.
Let it later choose what it wishes,
And thus you'll escape the blame.

AH, THERE'S THE RUB

A housewife is someone who spends seven days a week scrubbing floors, shopping for food, cooking the meals, washing and ironing and being a valet, maid and chauffeur for the kids. But that isn't what hurts. What hurts is when someone asks her husband, "Does your wife work?" and he answers, "No."

SLIM-SKINS: SLENDERIZING AMERICA UP TO 1,000,000 INCHES A MONTH!

"We were identical twins... until Slim-Skins™ reduced my sister 17 inches in 25 minutes!"

THE INCREDIBLE SLIM-SKINS GUARANTEE

YOU MUST LOSE 9 TO 18 INCHES FROM YOUR WAIST, ABDOMEN, HIPS AND THIGHS IN JUST 3 DAYS -WITHOUT DIETING!-

—FOR MEN AND WOMEN—

IN ALL THE WORLD ONLY THE USERS OF SLIM-SKINS ARE ACHIEVING RESULTS LIKE THESE: From coast to coast hundreds of thousands of users, like Jan and Jill, are discovering that Slim-Skins is indeed the world's fastest slenderizer taking off excess inches up to 7 times faster than diet pills, crash diets or any other method they have ever tried.

DOCTOR TESTED. Over 4" from each thigh–8" from tummy–7" from waist–and 3½" from hips: these are just some of the fantastic inch losses achieved by Slim-Skins users in just one to three days on a special slimming test conducted by a prominent American physician: losses 7 times faster than the diet pills of the leading 'fat burn' diet.

FANTASTIC INCH LOSS WITHOUT DIET. Developed in Europe, the sensational Slim-Skins are now achieving slenderizing results far beyond the scope of other reducing products. And Slim-Skins takes off the excess inches where you need to lose them, without dieting–and won't leave you with loose, flabby skin as 'crash diets' do. With Slim-Skins, as you lose, your body becomes tighter, firmer and more shapely–the inches stay off. And yet the Slim-Skins work so amazingly fast that you can actually measure the difference in just 25 minutes.

INCHES DISAPPEAR OR YOUR MONEY BACK. Slim-Skins is a new slenderizing concept that combines with your own vacuum cleaner to create a super new inch reducer so far ahead of its time that it reduces excess inches 7 times faster than 'crash diets.' Just step into the Slim-Skins, snap the attached hose to your vacuum cleaner with the universal adapter–which fits any make vacuum cleaner–and turn on your machine. Instantly the Slim-Skins seem to come alive with a delightful reducing action on every single inch of your body from beltline to knees. Not every user may experience the same degree of inch loss but you must lose a total of 9 to 18 inches from your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days or your money back.

OUR SLIM-SKINS EXPERIENCE:

"Jill went through the Slim-Skins experience and lost over 17 inches in just 25 minutes. Suddenly we were no longer identical twins any more. Now Jill was the slim twin–and I wanted to be a slim twin too. So..."

"I put on the Slim-Skins and went through the 10 minutes of rhythmic motions and 15 minutes of pure relaxation of the Slim-Skins inch reducing program–and I could almost feel the excess inches melting away."

"The Slim-Skins come off and Jill and I are identical again. She lost over 17 inches in 25 minutes. I lost 17 inches in 25 minutes–so together we lost over 34 inches in less than one magic hour with the absolutely incredible Slim-Skins."

"...Now we're identical twins again... our waists are 8½" slimmer...our tummies are 9" trimmer...our hips and thighs are over 16" smaller...still identical but 34" slimmer and a whole lot shapelier–in just 25 minutes–thanks to Slim-Skins!"

Bike-Riding Rules

May is Bike Safety Month and the National Safety Council has a few suggestions for safer riding.

1.) Always drive with, not against, the traffic. 2.) Properly maintain your bicycle. 3.) Obey all traffic signs and signals. 4.) Never drive with a passenger on your bike and never hitch a ride from another vehicle. 5.) Drive single file. 6.) Watch for drain gates and other bad road surfaces. 7.) Find out local ordinances and register or license your bike with the police department. 8.) Make sure your bike has the proper reflectors and wear light-colored clothing, particularly at night. 9.) Drive your bike defensively; always watch out for the other guy.

Pigs On The Run

Piggy is not a wildly popular nickname, and swine and hog don't fare much better. For all the insults accorded to them, however, pigs are really very humanlike. A few have even taken up jogging at the insistence of their doctor, Robert Hamlin, a professor of veterinary physiology and pharmacology at Ohio State University, who has been using pigs to study the effects of exercise on heart disease.

According to Dr. Hamlin, "Pigs get tired from running, just like humans. They are not natural athletes." To get his hogs in shape he has them jog on a treadmill for 20 minutes, three times a week. "Pigs, like humans, can be conditioned to run. And pigs are good models for studies of heart disease because, like humans, they can suffer from sudden heart attacks." Dr. Hamlin also plans to do research on the effects of diet on coronary heart disease, and again pigs are the animals he will use because, like us, they are meat and vegetable eaters.

Canine Heart Worm

Mosquito season is here, and the Mass. S.P.C.A. suggests that you protect your dog against heartworm, a killing disease that is carried by mosquitoes.

According to Dr. Gus Thornton, chief of staff at Boston's Angell Memorial, the largest animal hospital in the world, "The severity of heartworm disease varies greatly depending on where you live. In the South it is a year-round problem because mosquitoes are always out."

Adult heartworms live in the right side of a dog's heart. There they breed, and their young circulate in the bloodstream of the dog. When the dog is bitten by a mosquito, some of the young are transferred into the bug and are passed on to an uncontaminated dog when the mosquito has its next meal. The young worms then circulate in the dog's bloodstream until they lodge in the heart, where they mature and begin the cycle again.

Coughing, difficulty with breathing, tiring easily and heart failure are symptoms of heartworms, but the best way to treat the problem is to prevent it entirely. Your veterinarian can advise you about preventing heartworms in your dog.

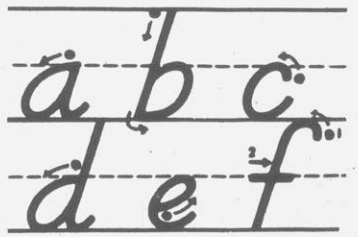
Tug That Line To The Olympics

Tug-of-war in the Olympics? If the United States Amateur Tug-of-War Association has its way, that could soon be a reality. Tug-of-war-competitions used to be part of the Olympics, but according to Robert Pulfer, president of the nonprofit Association, "They were dropped in 1920 because not enough nations participated. Now the sport is picking up in popularity." Last year, Tug-of-War Championships were held in Dundalk, Ireland, and 200 teams from 17 nations participated. This year, Sweden will host the games.

Pulfer hopes to spread the word about tug-of-war by encouraging athletic groups and schools to give the game a try. For information on rules and membership in the Association, write to, U.S.A. T.O.W.A., Inc., Dept. RP. Box 9626, Madison, Wis. 53715.

A Handwriting Expert

Writing is one of the three R's every child begins to learn in the first grade, but many children are now being taught a new method of handwriting called D'Nealian (above right). D'Nealian is a program based on years of observation and research by Donald Thurber, the principal and curriculum coordinator for the primary schools in Rockwood, Mich.



What makes D'Nealian different? According to Thurber, "Writing is one of our basics, and it's illogically taught. First, children learn to print vertically and then they have to relearn everything when they begin cursive writing, which slants. With D'Nealian, a slant is part of the method, and most letters are formed with one continuous motion so that rhythm is built from the beginning."

With the D'Nealian method, letters are taught according to similarity of formation. Children learn a few vowels and consonants, and then they begin making words. "Handwriting is more meaningful to kids when they can take home a paper and say, 'Look, this says dog.'" And, Thurber emphasizes, "Individuality is very important. While legibility is stressed, D'Nealian recognizes that no two people have the same handwriting, just as no two people have the same fingerprints. There is no 'perfect' writing."

Lifestyles

Sports. Now that the baseball season is in full swing, here's some interesting trivia about the sport's popularity. Last year 40,636,886 people bought tickets to major league games, making 1978 a record-setting year. The Los Angeles Dodgers drew 3,347,845 fans to their games, setting the season's record, and it seems that baseball's popularity will continue to boom. Armed with statistics based on the advance ticket sales for this year, baseball officials are predicting that 1979 will bring more people to the stadiums than ever before.

Books. Has your diet taken over your life? For a glimpse at the lighter side of losing weight, take a look at The Bronx Diet (Workman Publishing), Richard Smith's hilarious answer to Stillman, Atkins, Macrobiotics and other corporal punishments. Smith, who's been on more diets than he can count, admits that he is not "adverse to eating. And since three of my favorite eating companions are from the Bronx, and since the Scarsdale became so popular so quickly, I knew I had to do this." So,as the book advises, begin now to take the "die" out of "diet."

Sun Day. Solar energy proponents have chosen Thursday, May 3rd as the day for publicizing their message to the public about the increasing need for solar energy.

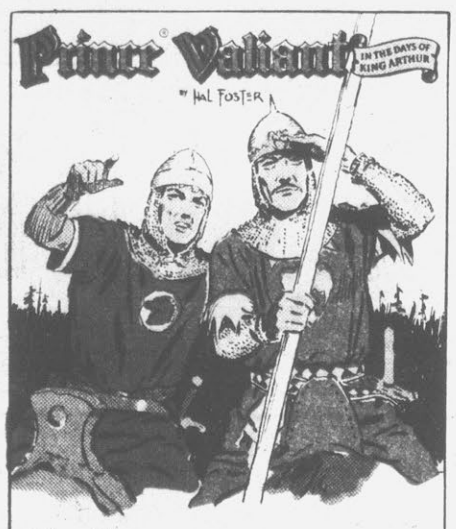
IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

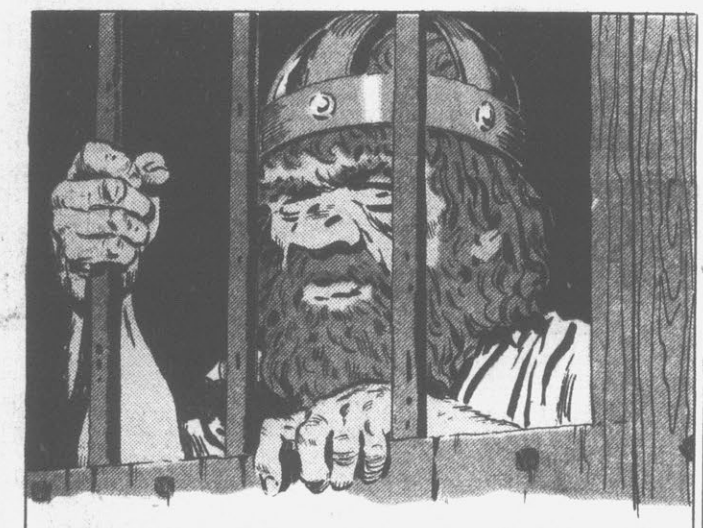
by HAL FOSTER



Our Story: FINALLY THEY LOOK DOWN ON LORD CONDON'S CASTLE. "IT IS VERY PRETTY," SAYS GAWAIN, "BUT I COULD TAKE IT WITH TEN GOOD MEN."

ON A HILLSIDE ABOVE THE CASTLE, LORD CONDON EXPLAINS THE DEFENSES AND WHAT HE KNOWS OF THE ENEMY. "OUR ENEMY IS A MYSTERY. HE AND A FEW RUFFIANS ENTERED WHILE WE WERE BUSY IN THE FIELDS BRINGING IN THE HARVEST."

GAWAIN ADVISES HIS LORDSHIP TO GATHER ALL HIS NEIGHBORS WHO MIGHT HELP THEM. THEN HE RIDES UP TO THE GATES AND SOUNDS A BLAST ON THE HORN HANGING THERE.



THE RESULT IS STARTLING: A FACE APPEARS AT THE GRILL. A GIANT FACE, FOR THE GRILL IS A GOOD NINE FEET FROM THE GROUND. "YOU ARE NOT WANTED HERE.., ALIVE!" THE GUARDIAN OF THE GATES MUMBLES.

HE DISMOUNTS, TAKING THE HALTER ROPE WITH HIM AND REACHES FOR THE WOODEN LEGS AND GIVES THEM A PULL. STRANGE THINGS FOLLOW...

NEXT WEEK–Small Blessings

STEVE CANYON

by MILTON CANIFF

ZEEE CALLS THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND SAYS COPPER CALHOONS TOWN HOUSE IS OVERRUN WITH BIG RATS!

I DON'T HAVE TO GO TO THOSE DUMB BOARD MEETINGS AND DULL DINNERS!

PEOPLE ASKING FOR MONEY WRITE ME IN SWITZERLAND, AND I LEFT ORDERS TO BURN EVERYTHING...

I DON'T HAVE TO GO OUT WITH AMBITIOUS WIDOWS WHO WANT MY BEAN BAG!

I THINK I'LL JUST STAY HERE AND READ ABOUT MY CONTEMPORARIES DYING OF HEART FAILURE ON THE GOLF COURSES —OR ELSEWHERE!

PLEASE DON'T GIVE ME AWAY

LATER

CANYON, BABY— TELL US EVERYTHING!

HOW DID IT GO? WHAT DID YOU FIND?

I FINALLY GOT INTO THE BOMB SHELTER...

BUT SUMMER CANYON WASN'T THERE!

MEANWHILE..

IT'S FOR COL. CANYON!
