

Report Less Hunger In Survey Of States

By BRIAN B. KING

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Teams of doctors touring the rural backwaters and urban slums of America found far less hunger there than similar groups encountered 10 years ago, according to a new study.

The Field Foundation report, being delivered today to the nutrition subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee, concluded that the billions of dollars spent in a 10-year federal government war on hunger were largely effective.

Much of the impetus for those federal programs came from debate sparked by a 1967 Field Foundation report.

The new report says hunger has not been erased and suggests that in terms of jobs, housing and medical attention, "the facts of life for Americans living in poverty remain as dark or darker than they were 10 years ago."

"But, in the area of food, there is a difference," it said.

The report released today was based on surveys taken in 1977 by some of the same doctors who compiled the material used in the 1967 study, which concluded that "hunger is a daily fact of life" for thousands of children.

The followup study found a markedly different situation. "Our first and overwhelming impression is that there are far fewer grossly malnourished people in this country today than there were 10 years ago," the doctors wrote.

They said hungry children like those found in 1967 "are not to be seen in such numbers."

A summary accompanying the six teams' 1977 findings for the New York-based private research foundation, said, "The doctors'... findings suggest that food-aid programs may represent one of the unsung, yet most effective anti-poverty efforts of the last 15 years."

The summary, written by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Nick Kotz, said the "second principal conclusion was that, while federal food assistance has made a difference, it still is far from adequate."

Hunger and infant death rates have declined, the doctors said, but no one yet knows whether anyone, poor or not, receives all the essential nutrients scientists recommend for healthy lives.

Kotz said the worst nutritional problems are still found among Indians in the South and Southwest, "but there has been 'progress' even in this distressed area."

One example cited from the 1977 survey was of a revisited Mississippi Delta shack. It was still crowded, housing four adults and six young children. It still had no plumbing and the only heat was from open fires.

But not everything was the same.

"In the one working refrigerator, there was fresh milk and meat," the new study said. "This food, purchased with food stamps, was the one difference from the situation 10 years ago, and the children's health and liveliness reflected this."

In fact, food stamps have made "a crucial difference" nationwide, the new report concluded.

The food stamp program was a pilot effort in 1968 that reached 2.88 million persons. Today it is a national program benefitting more than 18 million people at an annual cost of about $7 billion and is the cornerstone of the federal government's $10 billion annual program for helping feed the poor.

Free or reduced-price school lunches that reached 3.3 million children in fiscal year 1969 now are eaten by more than 12 million. Free school breakfasts, eaten by 330,000 then, now are served to about 3 million youngsters.

And a special program for pregnant and nursing women and infants, started in 1974 for 206,000, now reaches 1.32 million.

Suez Voyage

SUEZ CITY, Egypt (AP) — An Israeli freighter entered the Suez Canal today as cheering Egyptians welcomed the first Israeli-flag ship to travel the 107-mile waterway in 25 years.

The 4,500-ton Zim Shipping Co. freighter Ashdod entered the southern end of the canal near Suez City and will end the 14-hour crossing at Port Said on the Mediterranean.

An Egyptian escort ship accompanied the Ashdod, a correspondent for Israel's Army Radio reported from the ship. Witnesses said crowds on the canal banks cheered the Israeli ship and launches in the waterway tooted their horns.

The canal crossing marked a major development in the framework of peace being build between Israel and Egypt following the signing of their historic peace treaty last month. The last Israeli ship to try crossing the canal was seized by Egypt in 1954.

Indicators See Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government index designed to gauge the nation's economic outlook declined in March for the third consecutive month, providing new evidence the economy may be headed for a sharp slowdown and a possible recession.

The composite index of leading indicators dropped 0.5 percent in March following declines of 0.4 percent in February and 0.3 percent in January.

A three-month decline in the index is considered an indication the economy is about to sink into a recession, although the measure is by no means foolproof.

The decline comes at a time when key economic policy makers are disagreeing over the economic outlook. Federal Reserve Chairman G.

William Miller, for one, believes the economy is slowing down, while Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal argues it is gathering steam.

Today's report by the Commerce Department appears to support the view the economy is slowing. The index now has declined in four of the past five months. By contrast, it declined 12 consecutive months during the 1974-75 recession.

The Commerce Department said a decline in cash and other liquid assets in March contributed most to the latest decline in the index. Also pushing the index downward were negative showings in the job layoff rate, investment activity, the money supply and new orders for consumer and business goods.

Talmadge Counterattack

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herman Talmadge launched a blistering counterattack on the financial misconduct allegations against him today, saying three allegations were trivial and the major charge was based on the word of a "liar, cheat and embezzler."

The emotional presentation by the veteran Georgia Democrat came as the Senate Ethics Committee opened its public hearing on allegations that Talmadge had violated Senate rules.

The committee has accused the 22-year Senate veteran of violating Senate rules by converting campaign contributions to his own use, of submitting incorrect expense vouchers, of filing false reports of receipts and expenditures, of failing to properly report gifts and property owned and of incorrectly reporting taxes on gifts to his former wife.

Talmadge said in his opening argument that only one count against him was worthy of the committee's time, the allegation he knew of a secret bank account set up by his former administrative assistant and that he profited from the more than $39,000 in campaign contributions and improperly drawn expense funds deposited in the account.

He said evidence would show he neither knew of the (Continued On Page 10)

WASHINGTON — Some 350 Pitt County Boy Scouts were among roughly 3,000 scouts attending the annual East Carolina Council Camporee this past weekend.

The Pitt scouts represented some 29 troops, quartered in the Gold Area of the campsite at Bonner Scout Reservation North near here.

In addition to the Boy Scouts from the Pitt County area, approximately 200 Cub Scouts from the area visited the camporee on Saturday. Over 1,000 Cub Scouts from the Council took part for the first time in the annual event.

Richard Kelly, district executive from Greenville, said that in observance of this year's camporee theme, "See-N-Do," many of the Boy Scout activities on Saturday were aimed at allowing the visiting Cubs to see and observe camporee events and projects.

This year's camporee, held Friday through Sunday, enjoyed unusually favorable weather, Kelly reported, in contrast to recent years when the rains played a role in the weekend activities.

F. Milam Johnson of Greenville served this year as overall camporee chief, while Joe Goodson of Greenville functioned as Gold Area chief.

CITY TAGS

What is the law concerning Greenville city tags for automobiles? Is it required of people living in the city limits of Greenville and not for Pitt County residents? If so, what is its purpose and how is it enforced? T.

Hotline directed your questions to Mrs. Anna Garris, manager of the local license bureau located within the Home and Auto Supply Co. on 718 Dickinson Ave.

"If you live in the city limits and have a city address, you need a city tag," said Garris. She added that persons failing to purchase the tags could be charged with a $28 penalty fee.

Each one-year tag costs $1, however, according to Al Averette, finance officer for the city of Greenville, of each dollar paid for a tag, "60 cents goes to the purchase of the tag, and 40 cents goes to the cost of the receipt and the cost of selling it."

He added that at best, the city "breaks-even" on the sale of the tags, and concerning the $28 penalty fee, Averette said, "The city does not benefit from revenue in that situation, the state court system keeps that money."

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, the city license tags are an asset in helping to enforce the local laws. For example, he added that the tags are especially helpful when local police are looking for stolen vehicles for example.

"They're some help but not as much as the state license," he added.

High Court Declines Fla. Death Row Appeal

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused today to reconsider the appeal of a Florida death row inmate who is likely to become the second U.S. prisoner executed since 1967.

The justices, without comment, denied a "petition for rehearing" submitted by John A. Spenkelink, sentenced to die in Florida's electric chair for a 1973 murder.

Spenkelink's fate now appears to rest with Florida Gov. Bob Graham. A state clemency board already has completed its review of Spenkelink's case, but Graham withheld word pending the prisoner's last bid for help from the nation's highest court.

The justices rejected Spenkelink's final appeal last month, and today's action came as no surprise. The court almost never grants requests for reconsideration.

A 30-year-old drifter from Buena Park, Calif., Spenkelink was convicted six years ago in Tallahassee, Fla., for the murder of Joseph Szymakiewicz, 43, of Detroit, who had been traveling with Spenkelink.

In all, Spenkelink made three unsuccessful appeals that reached the Supreme Court. Once, his execution was postponed only three days before he was to die.

The Supreme Court in 1976 used Florida's death penalty law, as well as laws in Georgia and Texas, to rule that capital punishment may be constitutionally imposed for convicted murderers.

Since then, 33 states have sentenced nearly 500 people to death. But only one prisoner has been executed. He was Gary Gilmore, who rather than appeal his murder conviction and sentence asked authorities to kill him. He was shot by a Utah firing squad in January 1977.

Newspaper Says $130 Million Gamble By UNC

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina system and students on its 16 campuses stand to lose almost $130 million in federal aid if its desegregation dispute is not settled with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The actual amount of money that could be lost is closer to the $130 million figure than the $89.5 million that has been widely reported, according to a report from the Washington bureau of The Charlotte Observer. That amount includes the direct federal aid to students that the university could eventually lose if the dispute is not settled.

HEW plans to begin selectively putting off action on new grant applications from the university next month. However, the university and the state have sued to block the action, and last week a federal judge issued a temporary injunction blocking the cutoff until at least May 6 when a hearing is scheduled in Raleigh.

The announced blocking action won't affect student aid, but if the university, after a series of administrative and court procedures, is found to be illegally segregated, it will lose the student aid also.

The few court cases on the subject all lead to the conclusion that the student aid cannot be given to illegally segregated schools or to students attending those schools.

In one of the best known cases, a federal appeals court in 1975 ruled that veterans enrolled at Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., could not collect GI Bill benefits because the school discriminated against blacks.

University and federal officials have been citing the $89.5 million figure as have state legislative leaders when talking about the possibility of using state money to replace the federal aid.

The Observer said that the apparent mistake in the amount of federal aid to the university system occurred when the university, asked how much money it gets from the federal government, reported that for the year 1977-78, it got $89.5 million.

The figure was picked up, apparently without checking, by the Office of Civil Rights at HEW, without figuring student aid. Hugh Buchanan, UNC's associate vice president for finance, said the $89.5 million does not include the opportunity grants, National Direct Student Loans, federally guaranteed student loans or GI Bill benefits.

More of UNC's black students stand to lose if the dispute is not settled and the federal student aid is stopped. While only 19 percent of the university system's students are black, they get more than 58 percent of federal student financial aid.

DEAR ABBY: What's my problem? My husband doesn't want me to talk to him. Gerhard asks me not to talk to him during mealtime because he's "busy" eating. He doesn't want me to talk to him while he's driving because he's "busy" driving. And God forbid I should try to talk to him while he's reading or watching TV!

Abby, this is very hard on me because I come from a large, talkative Jewish family and I love to talk. Gerhard is half Norwegian and half German. (Cold and bossy.)

He calls me from work every day to find out what was in the mail. Then I get to talk.

Please put this in your column. Gerhard never misses "Dear Abby," and it's the only way to tell him what I think. ESTHER IN FLATBUSH

DEAR ESTHER: If this is the only way of telling Gerhard what you think, face it, Esther, your marriage is finished in English, "kaput" in German, "ferdig" in Norwegian, and "in drerd" in Yiddish.

DEAR ABBY: What does a person do when a friend has lost a member of his family by suicide? It doesn't seem right to ignore the tragedy. Yet you can't write a note saying, "I was sorry to hear that your father shot himself." If I said, "shot himself accidentally," would that be better? R.R. IN S.F.

DEAR R.R.: No. Just offer your condolences and don't mention the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: We live in a first-class high-rise and pay high rent. We walk as lightly as possible so we don't disturb the tenants below us. We keep the volume on our TV low after 10 p.m., and ask our guests to keep the noise down out of consideration for our neighbors.

Last month a young couple moved in above us, and I've never heard such noisy people! And what sounds like stereo music goes continually—and very loud.

I complained to the manager, and she suggested I speak to them, so I went up and asked in a VERY nice way if they could be a little more quiet. They slammed the door in my face!

Since then, out of spite, they've been noisier than ever. I complained to the manager again. She said she was sorry but there was nothing she could do.

Our nerves are shot. We're not old grouches. We are reasonable people. What should we do? We have another two years to go on our lease.

NOWHERE TO TURN

DEAR NOWHERE: Assuming the apartment manager is not the owner, appeal to the owner of the building. If that doesn't bring results, hunt up another apartment. And about that lease—hunt up a lawyer.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (25 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

1904 World's Fair Is Still Celebrated

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — No exhibition before or since has matched the grandeur of the 1904 World's Fair — the fair that gave birth to the ice cream cone. It was such a success it is still being celebrated.

On Monday, St. Louis will observe the 75th anniversary of the opening of the fair, known officially as the Louisiana Purchase Exposition and immortalized in "Meet Me in St. Louis."

The ice cream cone and iced tea are said to have been invented at the fair.

It was the fair with a 25-story Ferris wheel, a head-hunting tribe of Igorots, and John Philip Sousa's band.

It also included illusionary trips to the North Pole, gondola rides on the Grand Basin, baby elephants, the world's largest searchlight from Russia, a Chinese village, the Liberty Bell, the first American Olympic games, Tyrolean Alps and the Democratic National Convention.

"It was something you can never forget," said 81-year-old Elmo G. Replege, a retired stationary engineer who toured the fair when he was 6 years old. "People talked about it for years and years afterward."

Twenty million visitors from around the world poured through the gates to tour the 1,240-acre fairgrounds. More than 1,500 buildings — 15 of which could be described as nothing less than palaces — displayed the treasures of nations and wonders of technology.

Replege said modern technology and theme amusement parks will never duplicate the St. Louis fair. For one thing, it would be too costly. More importantly, he said, the year 1904 cannot be brought back. "That magic is gone forever," Replege said. But St. Louis is trying to recapture it.

More than 200 businesses will display copies of the world's fair flag from April 30 through Dec. 1, the dates of the fair.

The anniversary observance will begin Monday with the dedication of a St. Louis World's Fair exhibit at the Missouri Historical Society. The exhibit will include photographs of the fair plus various costumes and memorabilia. Work also is under way to build a scale model of the fair for the society.

Baker Candidacy Appears Assured

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker Jr. has all but made it official.

Baker said Sunday he is a candidate for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination. But, in an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," he said he would formally announce his candidacy later at a "media event." The Tennessee Republican said that while he plans to hold onto his Senate leadership post, he will let Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, assistant minority leader, assume most of his duties. Baker has made no secret of his presidential ambitions, but it was his strongest statement to date on his plans.

Telegram By Finlator Touched Of A Rhubarb

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Late last month, the Rev. W.W. Finlator fired off a telegram to President Carter, urging a cut-off of federal funds to the University of North Carolina.

But his congregation at Pullen Memorial Baptist Church includes a number of faculty members at North Carolina State University, part of the UNC system. And Finlator's telegram touched off a sensitive nerve there, one that has led to what may be the biggest dispute in Finlator's 23-year tenure at the church.

"The telegram created a rhubarb," said James L. "Jay" Jenkins, a special assistant to UNC President William C. Friday and a member of the church for 30 years.

"It's the biggest bruhaha I've ever seen in our congregation," said Jenkins.

Finlator, outspoken and liberal, is chairman of the N.C. Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. In his telegram to Carter, Finlator said UNC had failed to submit an acceptable desegregation plan to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

He sent copies of his telegram to the press. But he is maintaining a policy of strict silence and turned down several requests for an interview.

The Pullen Memorial congregation, numbering about 600, was invited to attend a meeting with Finlator last Sunday. About 40 persons attended.

"It was a charade," said L.S. Winton, a mathematics professor at N.C. State. "The minister refused to open his mouth, which just made people angrier than they already were."

"I, for one, wanted to ask Rev. Finlator what he meant by saying there's 'illegal segregation' in the UNC system."

The church treasurer, Howard M. Nahikian, expressed a different view. "We have a free and open pulpit," he said. "And whatever disagreement there is, we're not trying to fire the preacher."

Dr. Roger Crook, who attended the meeting, said that Finlator was there to listen to different opinions.

"It had been made clear in the invitation printed in the church newsletter, informing the congregation that the meeting would be held, that the minister would be there to hear out what everyone had to say. And he was very attentive," said Crook, who is chairman of the religion department at Meredith College.

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A group of 167 Vietnamese boat people who say they "feel like we have been reborn" has traded the steamy tropics of Southeast Asia for the cold prairies of the Midwest.

Many of the refugees wore light clothing and sandals, the children shorts and small tops, as they arrived in 50-degree weather Sunday after a 24-hour flight from Malaysia, where most of them have been living on boats along the coast.

A large sign greeted them at Camp Dodge, where they were given clothing and warm food and were matched with their sponsor families. The sign read: "Chao Mung Cac Ban den Iowa" — "Welcome to Iowa."

Gov. Robert D. Ray told President Carter earlier that Iowa can accommodate 1,500 new refugees this year. The Iowa Refugee Service Center is handling their placement. About 3,500 Indochinese already have resettled in Iowa.

The refugees also had signs that read, "We the boat people are grateful to Governor Ray and the Iowans. Thanks to all of you who have welcomed us with your opened arms."

Colleen Shearer, director of the refugee service, welcomed the group in Vietnamese. Her effort was received with laughs and smiles.

"We feel like we have been reborn in this wonderful state," said refugee spokesman Ngyeya Tu Cuong of Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. "We feel like Governor Ray is our savior. We pray that other states will take his lead and follow."

"We promise to be useful," he added.

Ray told the refugees, "We extend a warm greeting to all our new Iowans. We promise to help you. We won't guarantee your success. But your sponsors truly want you to succeed."

People in nearly 30 cities and towns volunteered to serve as friends, counselors and advocates.

The entire town of Lamoni, in south central Iowa, is sponsoring the Quan Cam Hoa family. Mayor Pat Lesley said their sponsorship is enriched because this is the year of Lamoni's centennial.

"This is a good place to be and a great land," said Lesley. "You're fine people and I wel-

Escapes In Brief Flight

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — Four young prisoners were back in custody Sunday only hours after they overpowered a jailer and escaped from Brunswick County's new jail, authorities said.

Sheriff Herman Strong said the inmates, all from Columbus County, asked for an aspirin, then beat up jailer Louis Medley, 62, and tried to strangle him before fleeing late Saturday night.

Sgt. James Moyer said three of the men threatened to kill Medley, but the fourth talked them out of it. Medley was treated at Brunswick County Hospital and released.

Lt. John Davis said the four were taken into custody before noon Sunday after a citizen reported seeing them walking along a dirt road about four miles from the jail.

Davis identified them as Ricky Gene Graham, 19, Johnny Calvin McPherson, 22, Eugene L. Reaves Jr., 19, and his brother, Wayne H. Reaves, 18. All are from the Whiteville area of Columbus County.

All were charged with escape and assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Davis said they were being held on charges of breaking and entering in Brunswick, Columbus, Bladen and Pender counties in North Carolina and Horry County in South Carolina.

The men had been moved from the Columbus County jail to Brunswick County Saturday because the Columbus County jail was overcrowded, Davis said.

Strong said that Medley disobeyed instructions never to go into the jail area without being accompanied by a deputy. However, he said Medley would not be disciplined because he is retiring soon.

Lamoni, population 2,500, has three other Vietnamese families whom Lesley said are industrious, hard-working people. State officials said the sponsors have no financial obligation to the refugees, who are eligible for federal resettlement funds. The U.S. State Department gives the Iowa Refugee Service Center about $350 for each refugee it resettles. The center is allowed to allocate the money as it sees fit.

Mrs. Shearer said critics who claim refugees will be added to the state's welfare rolls are wrong. Fewer than 35 Indochinese families who have resettled in Iowa are receiving welfare benefits, she said.

Sunday's welcoming commemorates the fourth anniversary of the United States' withdrawal from Vietnam.

Miss Leggett, Mr. Clark Marry Sunday Afternoon

Miss Catherine Louise Leggett and Willis Edwin Clark were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. in an outdoor ceremony at the Town Common, Greenville.

The Rev. Will R. Wallace officiated at the double ring ceremony. The couple exchanged vows before an arched trellis decorated with ivy and flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas W. Leggett of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Clark also of Greenville.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Billy Stinson, guitarist and soloist of Greenville. Songs included "The Long and Winding Road," "Morning Has Broken" and "The Wedding March."

The bride wore a floor length gown of giana with a wateau train trimmed in silk Venise lace motifs. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and full length tapered sleeves. Silk Venise lace enhanced the neckline, encircled the empire waist and adorned the sleeves.

Helen Fitzsimmons of Kirksville, Mo., aunt of the bride, designed and made her bridal veil which was fingertip of silk illusion attached to a lace and seed pearl capelet. She carried a cascade of lily-of-the-valley, violets and baby's breath surrounded by greenery.

Mrs. Carey Leggett of Winterville, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a formal gown of lavender giana and carried a bamboo fan adorned with violets, lily-of-the-valley and yellow velvet streamers.

Bridesmaids were Portia Elks, Laurie Lucas, Pat Sermons, Teresa Simonowich and Alice Singletary, all of Greenville. They wore mint green dresses identical to that of the honor attendant and carried identical fans.

Suzanne Clark, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. She wore a floor length dress of lavender giana and carried a miniature white basket filled with rose petals.

The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included Gary Elks, Tracy Finch, Rick Flythe, Johnny Wainwright and Jack Ward, all of Greenville. Wayne Clark, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and carried the rings on a white silk heart shaped pillow.

The bride's mother wore a formal length gown of peach chiffon and the mother of the bridegroom selected a floor length gown of blue chiffon. Both wore white carnation corsages. The grandmothers were remembered with corsages of pink carnations.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the Moose Lodge. Hostesses were Mrs. Louise Crisp, Virginia Leggett, Pat Pollard and Grace Whitaker.

Guests were greeted by the wedding party. Miss Donna Hopkins presided at the register.

Mrs. Connie Clark, sister of the bride, received gifts and Mrs. Lona Ratcliffe, Hazel Browning and Judy Barnes served guests.

The wedding party was entertained at a rehearsal dinner given by the bridegroom's parents at Arlington Street Baptist Church. A brunch was served by Mrs. Carey Leggett and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Candra Sunday morning at their home.

Garden Club Names New Members

New members were welcomed by the Potpourri Garden Club at its meeting Thursday held at the home of Mrs. R. W. MacKenzie Jr. Present were Mrs. Edward Davis, Mrs. John Melvin, Mrs. Leon Moore and Mrs. Charles D. Vincent.

Co-hostess Mrs. Charles Bath's guest was her mother-in-law, Mrs. Herman Bath of Niles, Mich.

Kay Etheridge, decorator with Sherwin-Williams, presented a slide program "Fundamentals of Interior Design."

Mrs. Charles V. Wilkerson Jr. conducted the session. Mrs. Eddie Harrington reported the club's entry in the recent flower show won first place and the club's entry in the spring breakfast tray, won third.

Mrs. Wilkerson won first place for her entry in the smallest treasures class. Mrs. Harington, Mrs. Fred Robbins and Mrs. Dallas C. Clark Jr. won first places in horticultural classes.

Mrs. Clark, project chairman, reported on the club's plot around the sign at the Town Common. Mrs. Wilkerson and Mrs. Larry Land told of the recent trip to Charleston made by 10 members, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Wilkerson, Mrs. Land, Mrs. McKenzie, Mrs. Hickman, Mrs. Beverly Reid, Mrs. R. Lee West and Mrs. John L. Winstead. The group stayed at the home of Mrs. Wilkerson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Robinson of Sullivan's Island.

Mrs. Robbins gave horticultural tips and Mrs. Land reminded members the annual luncheon and exchange of cuttings will be held at the next meeting.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Add new dimensions to your decorating scheme with the stunning stitchery of this needlepoint sampler pillow, worked in four blending color tones and accented with just a touch of gold or silver.

The average needlepointer will have no difficulty learning each of the 16 fascinating stitches that are combined in such a delightful fashion. Just start with blank canvas, beautiful yarns and the stitch charts and diagrams and end up with an exciting example of your newly found skills.

To obtain directions for making the needlepoint sampler pillow, send your request for Leaflet No. PH-16 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. PK-16 by sending check or money order for $16.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains a 16-inch square of 10-mesh mono canvas, Persian yarn, needle and instruction leaflet. Price includes shipping charges. Please specify your choice of blue tones, lavender tones, rose tones, salmon tones, lemon-lime tones or tangerine-brown tones.

Happily, needlepoint is one of the simplest of the needle arts and, surprisingly, many of the fancy pattern stitches are faster and easier to work than the basic background or tent stitch.

To hundreds of thousands of people, needlepoint means working small diagonal stitches over a single joining or mesh of canvas threads, either around a pre-worked center or over a painted design.

Depending on the manner in which they are worked, these stitches are called half-cross, continental or basketweave. The term "tent stitch" can refer to any one of these three.

If, like many people, you find it difficult to maintain an even tension with the tent stitch, you will be happy to know that slight variations in tension seldom show in pattern stitches.

Pattern stitches can be worked horizontally, vertically or diagonally. They may pass over one, two, three or more threads with a single stitch.

All you need to do is learn to read a chart or stitch diagram. Most such diagrams are composed of lines drawn on a graph chart with the lines denoting the direction of the stitches and the number of canvas threads crossed with each stitch.

Usually, there will be numbers on the chart with the odd numbers denoting the places where the needle comes up through the canvas and the even numbers showing where the needle goes back down through the canvas. For example, you would bring the needle up through the hole marked with a one, down through the hole marked with a two, up through the hole marked three and so on.

There are very few hard-and-fast rules for needlepoint but one thing you should always do is leave a good-sized unworked margin around your work. This will be needed in the event that your piece needs blocking when the stitching is done.

I recommend a border of 1½ inches around all sides. For example, for a pillow which will be 13 inches square when finished, start with a 16-inch square of canvas.

Also, don't ever mark your canvas with any type of marking pen that is not absolutely waterproof. If blocking is necessary, you will have to moisten your work. It's a real tragedy to have markings bleed through on a beautifully worked piece of needlepoint.

If you want to mark off the canvas in sections, simply run a basting thread along the lines to be marked. If you use sewing thread for this, you can stitch right over the thread and it will not show.

One final tip for today deals with the "fuzzies" — those little bits of yarn that cling to the canvas when you rip out any stitches. You may not even see them after ripping, but, when you restitch with another color, they are very likely to show up on the surface, giving your canvas a messy appearance.

Just cut off a length of masking tape and wrap it once around the four fingers of your right hand with the sticky side out. Now, pat the area where you did the ripping with the masking tape and you will see all the little bits of fuzz clinging to the tape instead of to the canvas. Happy stitching!

Bridge Winners Announced

Wednesday morning duplicate bridge winners at Planters Bank were:

Cut Demand And Lower Prices

One of the great advantages of a free economy is that the consumer is ultimately king and/or queen.

You doubt this?

Think back to the meteoric rise of sugar a few years back. Sales resistance set in and sugar prices settled back to a reasonable rate.

That is all right for products you don't have to have, one might argue, but what about gasoline?

The principal can work there, too. Oil product prices are shooting skyward because demand is so high. If consumers cut demand we can be certain economics will dictate that prices will come down.

Why so? The oil, after all, can be left underground until the marketing situation improves.

That is true but the huge investment the oil producing nations and oil cartels have in equipment continues to hang over the industry whether the wells produce or not.

Idle refineries in which billions have been invested don't return anything if they are not producing gasoline, diesel fuel and other oil products.

Of course, to create that situation there would have to be a major decrease in the amounts of fuel we use in this nation. The consumer can easily bring this about by cutting the use of fuels to essential needs. There will be inconveniences, of course, but no real hardships if every family carefully reviews its energy needs.

If this is done a surplus can develop overnight and there will be a dramatic reversal in the costs of energy. It is one of the great benefits of the free enterprise system, and we, the consumers, are the ones who make it work.

An Essential Need: Industrial Sites

The Pitt County Industrial Commission is seeking potential industrial sites around the county.

There are a number of good sites available in the Farmville-Greenville area but the commission would like to have sites available to show clients elsewhere in the county.

Certainly a variety of sites can be helpful to the commission in its work, and if industries can be placed in various areas of the county the employment picture will be improved.

Hopefully a number of desirable sites will become available.

THIS AFTERNOON

Govm't Jobs Leading All

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Where's the job action in coming years in North Carolina?

A just-completed survey by the state's Employment Security Commission offers some clues, zeroing in on developing patterns to the end of 1982.

Two key facts emerge:

1. College graduates may have trouble finding a job in their field, but shouldn't fret too much since there will be plenty of jobs available in crafts and skills areas;

2. Government will once again be a leader in creating new jobs.

As to government jobs, the survey determined that five major industry groups are expected to have the largest annual increases in employment during the coming years — textiles, apparel, local government, furniture, and electrical machinery.

Five Top
Textiles should add 5,520 workers each year, apparel should add 3,770; local government should add 3,750; furniture should add 2,870; and electrical machinery should add 2,270.

But according to the announcement by the Employment Security Commission, only local government promised a growth rate of 6.7 percent to boost that category into the top five. Why was state government not included? Because growth is expected to be only 4.9 percent, just below the cutoff.

Why not combine state and local government jobs as a category? After some consideration of various factors including guidelines and red tape having to do with job classifications, the answer is obvious — government will be the leader in job growth in North Carolina.

Counting the six years from 1976 to 1982 this pattern emerges: Federal jobs are expected to grow relatively slowly at a rate of 1.1 percent, increasing from 46,300 to 49,200. State jobs are expected to grow from 44,200 to 57,200. Local government jobs are expected to increase from 56,300 to 78,900.

State jobs during the six years would climb 13,000; local jobs would climb 23,000; a combined total of 36,000 jobs, and enough to rank first among major industry groups having largest annual increases in employment.

BILL NOBLITT

The study estimates that an annual average of 25,304 professional and managerial employees will be needed in the state during the six-year period, while college graduates will run better than 28,000.

This means, "it appears that some degree recipients will not be able to find a job in an occupation in which they are expected to be employed" in the next few years, the study points out.

Good Jobs

But there are, specialists reasoned, "excellent career opportunities in other occupations ... when the lifetime earnings of people who work in many of the operative and craft operations are compared to those of selected professional and managerial occupations, the earnings of the people in the former group or exceed those in the latter group."

Among crafts and skills like construction specialties (plumbing, heating, electrical, etc.) and blue-collar supervisory, inspection, mechanics, and heavy equipment operators, the survey projects healthy annual growth in jobs.

Overall, the study indicates a healthy match between increasing numbers of jobs and population growth projections.

Discord Policy Alive

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — "He can be charming for a while, and then the knives come out."

A knowledgeable American student of Brazilian affairs was speaking of Antonio Francisco Azeredo da Silveira, Brazil's former foreign minister who has become a legend around the State Department because of his acid tongue.

American officials had assumed that a major side benefit of the change in administration in Brasilia last month was that Brazil would finally get a new foreign minister. Relations between the two countries, it was thought, would no longer be poisoned by Silveira's invective.

A new foreign minister, Ramiro Saraiva Guerreiro, was appointed. Then, President Joao Figueiredo dropped a bombshell: Silveira was being sent to Washington as ambassador.

Diplomacy was once described by a British cynic as the art of engaging in "polite, optimistic guff." Silveira obviously doesn't see his role that way.

When President Carter visited Brazil a year ago, Silveira shunned the role of gracious host by pointedly telling reporters that Carter had, in fact, invited himself.

Undaunted, Carter invited then-President Ernesto Geisel to visit the United States. Thanks but no thanks, Silveira said. Geisel has no time for such things.

Earlier, the two countries had clashed over Brazil's plans to buy a nuclear reprocessing plant from West Germany.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher flew to Brazil shortly after the Carter administration took office to explain the U.S. position.

Afterward, U.S. officials said Silveira was responsible for a "totally distorted, self-serving" explanation to reporters of the results of the Christopher mission.

When Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance went to Brazil several months later to raise the nuclear issue again, Brazil again stood firm.

Silveira also took offense at the U.S. emphasis on protection of human rights and canceled a 25-year old military assistance program with the United States.

It is not uncommon for nominally pro-Western Third World countries to stake out an anti-American position as a means of asserting an independent foreign policy.

For Brazil and the United States, the most troublesome issue is nuclear power. Brazil felt the 1973-74 fourfold increase in the world price of oil was a threat to its economic growth — and to its aspirations of becoming a world power.

As a substitute for oil, Brazil turned to nuclear power and signed a contract with West Germany in 1975 to buy facilities that would give Brazil the capability to produce nuclear weapons.

Silveira's audacity, however, does not seem to have cost Brazil much in its relations with the United States. The Carter administration, rather than giving Brazil the diplomatic cold shoulder, appears to have redoubled its efforts to improve relations.

Just Pass The SALT

WASHINGTON — "I never have understood why so many hawkish civilians and retired military men are against SALT II," Millirem said.

"They feel the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks will give the Soviets an edge on us," I replied.

"Nonsense. If we sign a SALT treaty we're going to spend billions of dollars on new weaponry that is not included in SALT. We will have to escalate our military budget to take into consideration all the advantages we had prior to a SALT II agreement. SALT will be a boon to the Pentagon chiefs because they can argue that unless they get what they want, this country will be at the mercy of the Kremlin's multiple warheads. Congress will have to give them anything they ask for to prove they are not stripping this country of its defenses."

"You mean SALT II doesn't limit the arms that the Soviet Union and the United States possess?"

"You're really dumb," he said. "An arms limitation treaty just forces the military leaders of the two powers to come up with more sophisticated ways of not being caught with their missiles down. If you reduce your throw weight capacity in one area, you have to strengthen it in another. The Air Force wants an MX system which is a giant underground railroad that will move our missiles around so the Soviets won't know where they are. This shell game has been priced at $30 billion. The military have a much better chance of getting it with a SALT treaty than if we don't sign one. They're going to go up on the Hill and prove that with arms limits it's essential. We have the system or our missile bases will be caught naked in a first-strike attack."

"I thought SALT was supposed to save us money."

"Don't you believe it," Millirem said. "SALT is the mother's milk of defense appropriations. Without it the military would have to make do with what they've got now."

"Do you think the Soviet military will ask for more money for their weapons if a SALT treaty is signed?"

"They have no choice. Their marshals will tell the Kremlin that SALT has put the Soviet Union in a very precarious position, and they will have to have billions of rubles if they expect the Soviets to have superiority over the United States. They will demand a crash program to make the missiles allowed under SALT three times as deadly as they are now."

"I guess I am dumb," I said, "but why would both countries go to so much trouble to work out a treaty on limiting nuclear weapons if

Other Editors Say Bureaucracy Wins

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

The federal bureaucracy wins again. This time it triumphed over an individual who quit his job with the government, not because he wasn't getting paid enough, but because he felt he was overpaid.

Andrew Bavas, who was earning $40,000 a year in his job with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, tried to turn down a $1,272 pay boost from Uncle Sam. But Uncle wouldn't hear of it. So now Bavas says he will quit his post in May and look for another job.

"I've never been a very good bureaucrat," he said last week. "And after all this I think it would be impossible for me to be effective in the federal government."

Last November, Bavas, who had been with HEW since 1971, learned he would receive a pay increase which is largely automatic if a supervisor finds an employee's work acceptable.

But Bavas decided his present salary was enough. He told Christopher Cohen, regional director of HEW, that he didn't want the extra money. Cohen had never heard of such a thing.

He informed Bavas that an employee can't refuse a raise, but could contribute it to the government. Said Bavas: "When I tried to turn the raise down, I didn't know it couldn't be done and I told Cohen there's no precedent for this."

But Cohen, true blue bureaucrat that he is, said no one in Chicago (where Bavas worked) or Washington could recall a federal worker trying to turn down a pay raise.

The fact of the matter is that the government doesn't know what to do; apparently it has no ground rules covering a conscientious employee who doesn't want to take the goodies offered by Washington.

But the bureaucracy knows how to take care of its own: In February when Bavas was told he couldn't turn down the raise, he was also told by HEW that he was being transferred to an unspecified position in Philadelphia, that his grade level would be reduced from 15 to 13 and that his salary "most definitely" would be cut.

That'll show Bavas a thing or two. He'll learn he can't kick Uncle Sam around.

CAPITOL LETTER

Open Meetings Languish

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The open meetings bill, much amended and long delayed, is languishing in a Senate committee that has a reputation for quietly killing bills or holding them hostage.

Backers of the open meetings legislation say they aren't worried about losing the bill yet, but they are beginning to wonder when it will ever come out of the Senate Ways and Means Committee and what shape it will be in when it does.

The committee, created by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green two years ago, has been a graveyard for bills the Senate leadership doesn't like. Some supporters fear the committee may be holding this one for leverage against the House, which has already passed the open meetings bill and could be forced to act on Senate bills in order to dislodge it.

The bill was recommended by a legislative study commission and has been picked at with amendments since it first went to a House judiciary committee.

In the Senate, it has twice been to the chamber floor and twice returned to committee, the second time going to ways and means because opponents said the new law could cost local governments money if they violate it.

By the same reasoning, one observer noted, every law enacted costs money if someone breaks it.

The committee has resolved the money question, but postponed a final vote. Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, chairman of the panel, says he is not trying to stall the bill, but he has not called a committee meeting in two weeks.

The pattern of delays is similar to the way North Carolina got its first open meetings law in 1971, a law whose deficiencies and court interpretations prompted the press to seek a revision this year.

"It's exactly what happened in 1971," said Rep. Patricia Hunt, D-Orange, a leading House supporter of the bill. "That's how the law got so confused. The Senate held it up until the last minute and picked away at it."

Supporters of the bill say it would be more specific than the current law in stating circumstances under which a state or local governing board could exclude the public from its meetings. It would clarify that notice of meetings must be given and allow court suits to block illegal meetings.

Opposition, mainly from the League of Municipalities, has been successful in gaining amendments diluting the measure. One now requires that a violation be "willful" before a government could be assessed attorney fees in a suit. Other changes broadened the exclusions for private sessions, and state politicians won a renewed exemption for the Advisory Budget Commission and Council of State.

Sen. Helen Gray, D-Guilford, who served on the study commission that drafted the bill, objects to the way the league, an association of more than 400 North Carolina towns and cities, has chipped away at the original measure that was written as a compromise.

"I've come through local government and I've worked for League of Municipality bills on other matters," she said. "I'm disappointed that they've fought this so. I don't understand what they have to fear it."

A dispute of sorts arose after the bill was sent to ways and means. Mrs. Gray and

Strength For Today

NEIGHBORS
Had you visited the kitchen of any house two hundred years ago you would have seen, standing on the hearth before the open fireplace, a black metal box with a lid and handle. It was used to carry live coals from a neighbor's house to rekindle the fire when it went out.

With modern electric or gas stoves we no longer have to depend upon our neighbors to help us relight the fires. Often, especially in cities, we do not even know our neighbors or care about them. But when trouble strikes, we find out that we are not independent after all. In case of fire, burglars, accidents or sickness, we suddenly learn how much we need our neighbors. But why wait until then to meet them? Contact with them will create new friendships, and all we have to do is make the initial effort.

And when trouble comes, it is much better to turn to friends than to strangers.

Talking School Bus Has Mission: Teach Safety

A TALKING BUS — Students and teachers from Shiloh Elementary School in Union County, listen to "Gus", North Carolina's first talking school bus. (AP Laserphoto)

By ELLEN BRIGHTWELL
Monroe Enquirer-Journal
MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Gus is nine feet high, 27 feet long and weighs in the vicinity of 12,000 pounds.

Yet, despite his imposing size, Gus is no monster — far from it. In fact, Gus' one ambition in life is to save the lives of school children by teaching them school-bus safety.

Gus is the state's first talking school bus and probably one of only two in the country. He was patterned after a similar bus in Little Rock, Ark., by the Union County school system. He will make trips to the 16 Monroe and Union County elementary schools and may be displayed at area shopping centers to re-emphasize school-bus safety to parents.

Gus has a sheepish grin, big blue eyes and wears a green baseball cap. He converses with students, reminding them of the safety rules, chatting with them about the bus they ride to school and answering their questions.

"Don't you ride bus 29?" Gus asked one kindergarten student. As she responded affirmatively, Gus amazed her and the other students by saying, "Didn't you just move up here? It was from Florida, wasn't it?"

Bright red planks in front of Gus remind students to walk far out in front of the bus, so the driver can see them crossing. He tells students and teachers to walk in front of the planks and to hold onto the boarding rails as they step on and off the bus.

Recently, when one student kissed Gus before returning to class, his amber "nose" began to flash, much like Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

While students stare in wide-eyed amazement at Gus, they aren't the only ones intrigued by the near-human bus. State transportation officials, who visited the county recently to see Gus, found him appealing.

"I was very much impressed by Gus," said Lewis Alexander, director of the Division of Transportation. "He looked good, and the children were impressed. They were spellbound."

Gus is a 1965 bus that was being used as an extra. Harold Funderburk, assistant superintendent of the Union County schools, brought the idea home after seeing Gus' Arkansas counterpart.

State transportation officials authorized the transformation of the spare bus. John Knight, a school-bus garage employee and a former disc jockey, provides Gus' voice. He is stationed at a point nearby and is briefed beforehand on the students' names and even the bus they ride.

The total cost of transforming Gus was a little more than $1,700, of which $1,500 was for painting. The radio equipment that produces Gus' voice cost $200.

"The children seem to be very interested and attentive," said Bob Mickey, Union County school bus driver trainer and the person in charge of the project. "I hope they will remember Gus, that he stands for safety, and that they will remember the safety rules. Gus will save lives."

Sentence Thought To Be Too Severe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two state Supreme Court judges say they agree with the conviction of a Beaufort County man on manslaughter charges, but they say his 18-year sentence was too severe.

The two, Justices J. William Copeland and Joseph Branch, have asked that the Paroles Commission investigate to determine whether a reduction of sentence is in order for Marion Uriaiah Hodges, 46.

It is rare for judges to make such a request, and the action has prompted complaints of political favoritism and a petition campaign in three counties.

Hodges was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death in November 1976 of Kenneth Harris, 39, a Washington tobacco farmer.

Copeland and Branch said they thought the sentence handed down by Superior Court Judge Herbert Small was too severe.

Copeland has asked the Paroles Commission to study the sentence and report to Gov. Jim Hunt, who can commute sentences. Branch has asked conviction. "It was a close case where self-defense could have been argued on Hodges' part," Branch said.

"This was totally done on our own initiative," Copeland said. But the actions led District Attorney William Griffin of Wilmamston, who prosecuted the case, to charge in a letter to the commission that political favoritism was involved. He declined to elaborate.

The judges' requests also have resulted in a petition campaign that has gathered 500 signatures in Beaufort, Martin and Wake counties opposing a reduction in Hodges' sentence.

Family Reunion In North Korea

By ROBERT CRABBE
PYONGYANG, North Korea (UPI) — With tears streaming down their faces, a 36-year-old Korean-American and his mother and sisters were reunited Saturday for the first time since he left North Korea and followed the retreating U.S. Army south 29 years ago.

Ko Young Il, operator of an automobile body repair shop in Annandale, Va., came to North Korea as an interpreter for the American team at the 35th World Table Tennis Championships.

In this heavily politicized Communist country Ko saw his mother and two sisters for the first time since 1950 in front of a battery of reporters and cameramen for an hour.

He sat poker faced while his relatives went through the political ritual of expressing thanks to North Korean President Kim Il Sung, and calling for the withdrawal of American troops from South Korea.

Then his family was allowed to take him home.

The reunion took place in the Changsangwon Hotel in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang where the American team is staying.

Ko was only 7 years old when he left and they did not recognize each other at first. They sparred for two or three minutes, talking about their long ago home near the China-Korea border before the doubts vanished.

The face of Ko's oldest sister, Mrs. Ko Ryo Hang, 46, began to crumple with emotion. His 69-year-old mother, Mrs. Lee Jung Ho (Korean women keep their own names after marriage) came forward and stared at Ko's right ear, permanently scarred in a childhood accident.

Then she threw her arms around his neck.

The sister followed her into Ko's embrace sobbing, "Don't leave us, don't leave us."

The reunion symbolized the tragedy of divided families that overtook Korea when it was separated into Soviet and American occupation zones at the end of World War II. About 10 million Koreans were separated from their families because of the hostilities between the two Koreas.

Ko and his father left North Korea together and followed the retreating American Army into South Korea after China intervened in the 1950-53 Korean War.

It was a family decision typical of a culture where first sons were given priority. Ko's relatives said Saturday it was believed at the time the United States would use atomic bombs against North Korea.

"I don't know how to explain my impression of today's meeting," Ko said. "There are so many Koreans who are separated from their families and loved ones. This tragedy should be put to an end."

Ko's mother and sisters urged him to stay in North Korea, but he told newsmen he would return to the United States with the American team.

Declares Ordeal Improved CIA

WASHINGTON (AP) — CIA Director Stansfield Turner says the CIA is a better organization now, after having gone through the recent period of changes.

In an interview with U.S. News & World Report, Turner agrees that the changes was unsettling, but he said there is "no question it's been worth it, in my view." He said there have been some morale problems in the intelligence agency because of the frustrations caused by the changes. The interview was released Sunday.

Activists Go To Jail

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — Volunteer attorneys circulated among anti-nuclear activists, offering advice and helping to keep order as more than 280 persons were arrested in a tightly-orchestrated protest at the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant.

"It's kind of like a play. But that's cool. It helps keep things under control. I guess there's an art to getting arrested," plant spokesman Bernie Velasquez said.

At least 284 protesters were arrested Sunday in what organizers called a deliberate act of civil disobedience — blocking access to the plant, the nation's only producer of plutonium "triggers" for nuclear weapons.

Buses took the arrested demonstrators to a west Denver suburb south of Rocky Flats where a makeshift processing center was set up in a warehouse used by the U.S. Geological Survey to store rock samples.

The protesters, many of them laughing and calling to their friends, were photographed and then passed through an assembly-line operation that had the same coordinated precision that marked the protest itself. It took 10 minutes to process each protester.

They were charged with trespassing under the U.S. Atomic Energy Act of 1954, a misdemeanor carrying a maximum fine of $1,000. They were released and ordered to appear in U.S. District Court in Denver next month.

other bill supporters contend there was an agreement that only the money question would be examined by the panel.

But Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, a Senate leader and philosophic opponent of open meetings legislation, plans to offer at least two more league amendments — the main one allowing action in closed sessions on land purchases.

Ernie Ball, lobbyist for the league, says his side has violated no agreement. The league wants a new open meetings law, he said, but it wants more changes in the bill.

"I've got some amendments I want in there," he said, "and if I can get them in committee, I will."

With all the amendments to the bill — at least 15 were considered in the House alone and half were adopted — some legislative observers now refer to it as the "closed meetings bill."

But supporters say that while they've had to compromise, the bill is still strong and will ensure the public more access to its local and state governments.

"From our standpoint," said William Lassiter, lobbyist for the N.C. Press Association, "the clarification of this bill is the important thing."

"It's a compromise bill," he added, "but we think it's still just as good or better than any open meetings statute in the United States."

they know it is going to cost them so much more in the end?"

He said, "The reason the leaders of both countries want a SALT agreement is that, having started their talks, they will be put in a bind if they fail. Their reputation as peacemakers will be in serious jeopardy. Once you have a taste of SALT you have to eat it."

"So, we're damned if we have SALT II and damned if we don't."

"You can say that again."

"What's the answer?"

"What's the question?"

"Why are the Hawks and the retired military leaders so adamant against a SALT treaty if it means the Defense Department will get what it wants if an agreement is signed?"

"It beats me. All I know is that, if the President wants to get his SALT treaty through Congress, he will have to prove he is not going to let this country wind up second best in the missile race. Brezhnev is also going to have to assure his people that he hasn't given anything away to the United States."

"Where will it all end?" I asked.

"SALT III."

Special Olympics Drew Many

The 1979 North Carolina Area I Special Olympics Spring Games were held Saturday at East Carolina University's Bunting Field, with more than 400 Special Olympians from 12 northeastern counties participating.

The event was co-sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and East Carolina University.

The day began with the Parade of Athletes led by the D. H. Conley High School JROTC Color Guard. Charles A. Vincent of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Dept. welcomed the athletes to Greenville and the Special Olympics torch was lit by David Carr of Elmhurst School. The Rev. Richard Gammon, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, offered the invocation and Dr. Hugh Wease, president of the Civitan Club of Greenville, officially opened the games as hundreds of balloons were released to float skyward. Bill Twine, Coordinator of Greenville Special Olympics, led the Special Olympians in reciting the Special Olympics Oath.

Events included the softball throw, long jump, broad jump, high jump, 50-yard dash, frisbee events, soccer, 440-yard run, 220-yard run, 440-yard relay, wheelchair race, plastic pin bowling, toss and crawl.

Many of the athletes participating in these games will later compete in the North Carolina Special Olympics State Spring Games to be held at St. Andrews College, Lenoir, June 1-3. Seven of these athletes will make their way to the Fourth International Special Olympics Summer Games to be held at Brockport, N. Y. in August. In 1979 more than a million mentally handicapped people in more than 20 nations will take part in Special Olympics programs.

Greenville area winners are Floyd Barrett, softball throw; Serina Roach, standing broad jump; Jeff Cameron, running long jump; Willie Council, frisbee; Bobby Hodge, crawl; Frederick Best, bowling; Adam Dowell, toss; Zachary Benjamin, softball throw, David Carr, 50-yard dash; Steven Baker, 50-yard dash; Zara Bernard, frisbee; Jody Craft, 440-yard run; Catherina Marrow, softball and 50-yard dash; Frank Smith, softball, Joseph Gillahan, softball; Ricky Godwin, 50-yard dash; Marsha Ward, softball; Candy Joyner, running long jump; Tony Barnes, running long jump; Alfonza Jenkins, broad jump; Andrew Smith, 50-yard dash; Benjamin Barnhill, running long jump; and Carland Waters, running long jump.

Scholarship And A Wardrobe Go To Winner Of Annual Pageant

Miss Lisa Williams was crowned "Miss Greenville" during the 17th annual Miss Greenville Pageant sponsored by Les Gaylenettes Civic Club and the Eastern N. C. Regional Assn. of Black Social Workers.

This year's pageant featured the theme, "Ain't No Stopping Us Now." The event was held Friday evening in the St. Gabriel's School Auditorium.

Miss Greenville for 1979 is the daughter of Ms. Lizzie Williams of Ayden and Fredda L. Williams of Greenville. A senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, she received a scholarship to the college of her choice and a wardrobe. She was sponsored by Mrs. Rosa Harris.

Miss Sharon Brewington was chosen first runner-up. She is the daughter of Mrs. Edna Williams and James Brewington. A Rose High School junior, she also received a scholarship and a wardrobe. Her sponsor was Mrs. Ruby Taylor.

Second runner-up was Miss Josephine Cobb, daughter of Ms. Geneva B. Andrews. A sophomore at Conley High School, she was sponsored by Mrs. Doris Hansley.

Miss Lauretta Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Laura Wilson, was selected "Miss Congeniality." She is a junior at Rose High School and was sponsored by Mrs. Pearl Rodgers.

Winner in the talent division was Miss Nancy Andrews doing an interpretive dance. Miss Rovera Parker, first runner-up, presented an innovative debate between Booker T. Washington and W. E. Dubois. Second runner-up Lisa Williams presented a clarinet solo. Honorable mention went to Miss Crystal Barnes for her scene from the Broadway play, "No More Coloured Girls."

Other contestants were Miss Vickie Barnes, Miss Linda Hines, Miss Charlene Newton, Miss Sandra Green, and Miss Rosalyn Thomas.

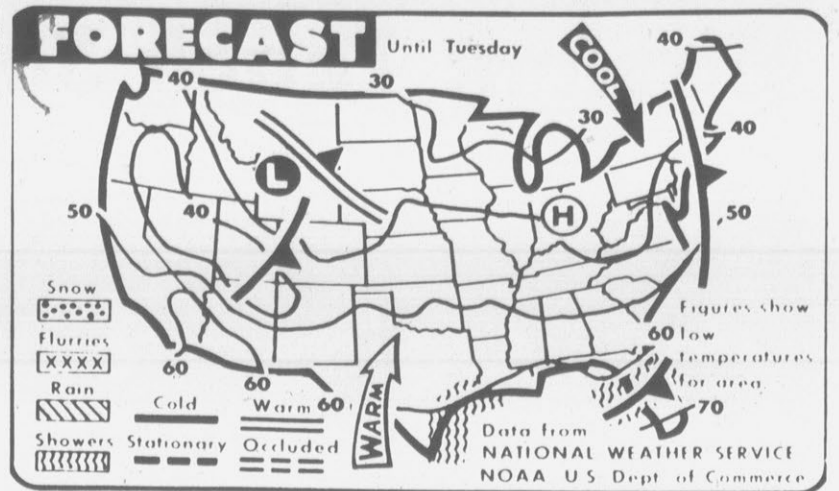

Miss Barbara Rodgers was the recipient of a plaque presented by Les Gaylenettes in recognition of meritorious services to the community.

Judges for the pageant were Mrs. Lillian Powell, Mrs. Becky Norcott and Mrs. Agnes Jones. Mistress of ceremonies was Mrs. H. B. Jones. Music was provided by J. A. Wooten and W. L. Morris Jr.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm temperatures are expected in the forecast period until Tuesday morning from the Southwest to Florida. Most of the country is expected to be cool. Showers are forecast for the western Gulf coast and most of Florida. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press

Weak high pressure was in control of North Carolina's weather today, providing mostly sunny skies. A weak cold front is expected to move through the state tonight without causing any significant change in the weather.

It felt like the cold front had passed through this morning as temperatures dropped to the 30s and low 40s over inland areas. Asheville had a low of 35, Raleigh 38, Greensboro 40, Charlotte 41, and Hickory 42.

Temperatures during the day were expected to rise to the 60s through the mountains and reach the low to mid 70s in the southeast. There will be a risk of frost in the mountains tonight as temperatures drop to the 30s, while ranging to around 50 on the coast.

Cloudiness moved across the state Sunday, holding temperatures mostly to the 60s, with some low 70s over the southeast portion.

— John Maye Jr. and David Andrews will present a project overview of the Alcohol-Drug Education Program for the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools.

— Assistant Superintendents Bernard Haselrig and Kathryn Lewis will submit Title One planning for 1979-80 for the Board's consideration and approval.

— Policies on programs of remediation, examinations and follow-up procedures on county high school graduates will be presented for study and discussion with adoption to be considered at the June 5 meeting.

— Board member Jim Black will give a brief report on the progress of the Countywide Steering Committee for promotion of the June 8 school bond issue.

Sunday Saw 2 Collisions

An estimated $2,200 damage resulted from two Sunday collisions investigated by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard, involving a truck driven by James Ammitt Croom Jr. of Route 2, Grifton, and a car operated by Gary Lee Hunnings of 1308 Dickinson Ave.

Investigators estimated damage to the truck at $800, and set damage to the car at $500.

A collision at the intersection of Tenth and Elm Streets involved cars driven by Henry V. Murray III of 107C Belk Dorm, and Winborne Rudge King of 309 Aycock Dorm.

Police, who charged King with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $600 to the Murray car and $300 to the King auto.

Conferring On Farm Market

An important meeting will be held Monday, April 30, 7:30 p.m., at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 203 W. Third St., for persons interested in producing fruits and vegetables for sale at the Pitt County Farmer's Market this summer.

According to extension agent Sam Uzzell, the market will open this summer in the old Pitt County fairgrounds livestock building. For more information on the program, contact Uzzell at the Extension office, 758-1196.

Jaycees Hosted 23 Grads From Center

The Greenville Jaycees recently hosted a graduation program and luncheon in honor of 23 graduates from the Greenville Pre-Release and Aftercare Center.

Warren Stroud, vice president of the Greenville chapter, introduced guest speaker, Gus Tulloss of Rocky Mount.

Tulloss, who served as North Carolina Jaycee president in 1975 and was named one of the five outstanding young men in North Carolina in 1977, talked to the graduates about "How to Be A Success In Life."

According to Tulloss, the four points of the success formula include having a positive mental attitude, setting goals, caring about people and being competitive, not fearing failure.

According to Pat Higgins, center director for the Greenville PRAC Center, nearly 300 area volunteers have devoted almost 2,000 hours to develop the pre-release and aftercare program for North Carolina inmates.

Eddie Knox, chairman of the state Advisory Budget Committee, has estimated that the PRAC program probably saves North Carolina $11 million each year, largely due to the efforts of volunteers and volunteer groups, such as the Jaycees.

There has been some indication that Jaycees on the state, regional and local levels may mesh their volunteer program with the PRAC to provide continuous counseling for inmates from prison to communities.

Fulbright Gives 'High Marks'

JONESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Former Sen. J. William Fulbright, 74, who served as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for 15 years, says he gives the Carter administration generally high marks for its foreign policy efforts.

"Still, the game has to be played out in the Middle East. This is where he (Carter) has committed so much and so far has gotten very little," Fulbright said Sunday in a television interview.

He said unless Carter gets a settlement reasonably satisfactory to most of the Arab world, the conflict "will just go on and on. It'll fester. And then we'll have serious trouble for a very long time."

On arms limitation, Fulbright, who lost in his 1974 reelection campaign to Dale Bumpers and now is with a Washington law firm, said he does not believe the Soviet Union has passed the United States, but he conceded that Russia has a larger conventional arsenal "because I think their situation requires it." He referred to the Soviet-China border clashes.

Former Vietnam POW Teaches From Book Of Job

EDITOR'S NOTE — Monday, April 30, marks the fourth anniversary of the fall of South Vietnam to North Vietnam. This interview is with a man who spent more than seven years imprisoned in Vietnam.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Vice Admiral James Stockdale has been teaching the Book of Job from the Bible.

"The story of undeserved suffering — how people cope with it," says the former prisoner of war who was in the hands of North Vietnamese captors for 2,714 days.

"Life is unfair, but that does not justify you in acting unfair," says Stockdale. "What I mean is that you have to be a man, as Job was asked to be a man by his Lord, and stand up like a man when you are faced with undeserved hardship."

Stockdale, 55, blazed new trails with his philosophy classes during the past two trimesters at the U.S. Naval War College, where he was appointed president in October 1977.

He is leaving the Navy next fall after 36 years military service to become president of The Citadel, South Carolina's 137-year-old military college.

EXPENSIVE "DRACULA"
LONDON (AP) — A first edition of Bram Stoker's vampire novel "Dracula", inscribed by the author and dated June 1897, has been auctioned for $1,500 at Sotheby's. The purchaser was not named.

He says he will eventually transplant his teachings of philosophy to The Citadel as elective courses to "add flavor to an already very good, high quality educational pursuit based on traditional structure."

"I'm thrilled," he says. "You can bet I'll be a classroom teacher as well as president. The reason I accepted is because it allows me to establish myself in education as a profession with long-term tenure rather than just practicing when the military assignment rotation allows me to do so."

Stockdale was shot down on Sept. 9, 1965, and parachuted from his crippled A-4 jet into a crowd of angry North Vietnamese who beat him so badly that they tore his left leg at the knee, leaving it permanently stiff. He walks with a limp.

The philosophy that he learned as a Navy fighter pilot enrolled in a master's program at Stanford University's Hoover Institution from 1960 until 1962 kept him going during his 7½ years of captivity, half of the time in solitary confinement and leg irons.

He was awarded the Medal of Honor for resisting his captors. The first week of his course, "Foundations of Moral Obligation," was devoted to stories of those in prison.

"The best, I think, by Koestler, 'Darkness at Noon,'" he says. "Not for the reason that anybody here is ever going to be in prison ... I'm not teaching them to be prisoners. But the prison, the intensity of prison life, seems to illuminate many things, the need for morality in the extortion environment. So I refer to it frequently in examples."

"There are usually extortion environments in prison where the jailer wants to manipulate you, wants to scare you, probably wants to hurt you. But most of all he wants you to feel guilt.

"Because it's there the soul starts to deteriorate. If he can get you on the downhill slope, he can put you where he wants you, put you in his pocket.

"It's not only there that happens. We're all in an extortion environment of some subtle sort all the time. Thus a man is well advised not to do anything he is ashamed of.

"Another thing I think that brings out in general, and it's illuminated there, is the dependence of one of us upon the other. You can't go it alone.

"If you're going to have any form of corporate activity, you can't give yourself the opportunity to opt in and out as you individually judge the merits of the case. If it's serious enterprise, to drop out is to betray."

Stockdale said he was "scared to death time and again" while a POW. "We were always scared," he says. "I would recite to myself liturgies of pep talk and memorized stuff on the way to interrogation because I knew I had a performance."

"I had to demonstrate commitment. It was genuine, but I could not give the idea that I was willing to, as they say, meet them halfway. You've got to look him (the interrogator) in the eyes and tell him to go to hell.

And does this Stockdale see philosophical lessons to be learned from the American involvement in Vietnam?

"Millions of them, I'm sure," he says. "You cannot finesse a war. War is cruelty and you cannot refine it," says Sherman. I like to quote Napoleon, who said, 'sentiment rules the world.' And any person who does not take that into account can never hope to lead."

Riding After Six Decades

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Marie Elizabeth Warren last rode on a train 61 years ago.

But the 80-year-old great-grandmother took the plunge Sunday, and now she says she's raring to go again.

Mrs. Warren, of Fayetteville, N.C., came to Charleston to see relatives. The last time she was on a train, in 1918, it was also a trip to Charleston. She remembered the ride as cold and a bit uncomfortable.

More than six decades later, Mrs. Warren boarded Amtrak's Palmetto in Fayetteville, N.C. She said she found rail travel had changed for the better.

"I had a wonderful time. This trip was really beautiful. I'm ready to go again," said Mrs. Warren as she smiled at a group of relatives who met her at the station.

"There has been a big change in trains. Seats are 100 percent better," she said. Back in 1918, the seats were hard and leather-bound, without foam padding. They also didn't recline.

"The passengers were wonderful and the conductor so nice. I'm telling you, it was like a dream," she said.

"I told the conductor I was riding trains before he was born," she said, adding that she wants to continue travelling on trains.

Raleigh Spotlight Focus On Education

By REP. SAM D. BUNDY

Education took center stage in the General Assembly this week. On Monday night some 800 teachers were in Raleigh with respect to the "cost of living" salary increase. The Governor and Advisory Budget Commission have recommended a seven percent increase as a cost of living raise. Gov. Hunt contends that the seven percent should include increments and longevity, whereas the teachers and state employees contend that the fringe benefits should not be included in the cost of living raise.

There were 62 members of the House, and I was among this number, who signed a bill to this effect. At any rate, the teachers visited the offices of their respective legislators on the matter. It was my privilege and pleasure to talk with teachers from both Greenville and Pitt Counties. Later, there was a candlelight parade to the Governor's Mansion, at which time the Governor talked to the group. He still holds to his decision.

Thursday, Senate Bill 383 and Senate Bill 526 dealing with Christian schools and private schools were debated on the floor of the House. Both were compromise versions of the original bills and generated long and heated debate. The Christian schools bill passed by a vote of 91 to 15 and the private school bill passed by a vote of 80 to 24. Both could wind up in court.

The Fourth and Sixth Grades of North Greene Elementary School visited the Legislative Building on Tuesday and I had the privilege of talking to them in the House Chamber. 2092 bills have now been introduced and adjournment date has been set for some time between May 25 and June 1.

See you next week.

Special Month For Seniors

Governor James B. Hunt has designated May as "Older Americans Month" by proclamation. The month was made a special one for older citizens when President Kennedy issued the first proclamation in 1963.

"But the movement goes farther back," according to Nathan H. Yelton, Assistant Secretary of Aging, N. C. Department of Human Resources. "In the 1950's many state Governors set aside the month of May for Older American observances. Over more than two decades, Older Americans Month has become an American tradition. "We must reach out for the older people who are living isolated lives and bring them back into the community. We must make their needs known and strengthen programs for them. This is a time when we can demonstrate the effectiveness of services already being provided for older adults and press communities and organizations to do more."

Planting peanuts and cucumbers according to soil temperature, rather than what the calendar or almanac indicate, is a key to establishing good plant populations. Research supports the fact that planting some crops a little early will not always be advantageous or will make harvesting any earlier.

Research with cucumbers indicates that planting April 6, 13 and 20 is still too early in an average year. Regardless of whether the crop was sown April 10 or May 1, cucumbers will be ready to harvest about June 1 to 5. The heart of the matter is that temperature of the soil really determines how rapidly germination proceeds. At a soil temperature of 60 degrees Fahrenheit, it takes nine to 16 days for seedlings to emerge. On the other hand, it takes only five to six days for cucumber seedlings to emerge at a soil temperature of 70 degrees.

The soil temperature requirements for peanuts are similar. North Carolina extension specialists recommend that soil temperature at seed depth to be 65 degrees or better. In order for optimum germination to occur, enzymes in the peanut seed must be generated. If soil temperatures decrease after the seed has sprouted, the peanut can still grow into a healthy seedling. Temperatures must be 60-65 degrees, however, for these enzymes to be produced. The peanut seed is a large oily seed that is capable of withstanding adverse soil conditions, to some degree. Extended periods of cool, wet soils will force many farmers to replant some fields each year. With the price of peanut seed at about 60 cents per pound, and 100 pounds of seed per acre, it costs around $60 per acre to plant peanuts for only seed.

To find out the soil temperature, farmers should use a soil thermometer, sold by many garden centers and hardware stores. Local radio and television stations are including soil temperatures as part of their weather broadcast.

Another estimate of soil temperature can be obtained by adding the daytime high temperature and the night time low, then dividing by two. When the high and low are added, they should exceed 120 degrees. Later, temperatures have approached 70 degrees in the afternoon, but have dropped at below 40 at night, giving an approximate soil temperature of 55 degrees.

Regardless of how a farmer takes a soil temperature, he should be sure to plant when the soil is warm. Cool soils are excellent for the growth and development of many soil-borne fungus diseases, but can be avoided when planting is done in sufficiently warm soil.

Friday Pick-Ups For Aluminum

The Reynolds mobile unit will make collections this month as follows: Pitt Plaza, every Friday of the month, from 1:30-3:30 p.m.

Reynolds pays 20 cents a pound for most aluminum products, including soft drink and beer cans. Reynolds also accepts other clean household aluminum objects such as pie plates, foil, trays and containers. Such objects as aluminum siding, gutters, storm door and window frames, and lawn furniture tubing are also worth 20 cents a pound. These materials must be free of foreign substances, cut to lengths under three feet and should not be mixed with cans.

Name-Dropping Starts Early

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It's more than a year until the 1980 elections, but the name-dropping already has begun, and one being dropped as a possible opponent to Sen. John Glenn is former Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes.

Both Columbus daily newspapers speculated in their weekend editions that Hayes, 66, could be the Republicans' choice to take on Glenn, a Democrat, next year.

"Various GOP sources come up with a bundle of names of possible opponents for Glenn,"

ELECTED — Jaime Roldas Aquilera swept to victory in Ecuador's presidential election Sunday. Roldas, a 38-year-old lawyer, will head the first democratic government after nine years of civilian and military dictatorship. (AP Laserphoto)

Pedestrian Injured Here

A pedestrian was injured and an estimated $605 damage resulted from two mishaps Saturday night on Cotanche Street, 50 feet North of the Fifth Street intersection.

Investigators said the first of the mishaps occurred at 9:50 p.m. and involved cars driven by Abdul Hameed Kamal-Pasha of 1100 South Charles St., Donald Wayne Wilson of Route 5, Greenville, and Clarence Edward Matthews of Route 5, Greenville.

Officers estimated damage from the collision at $5 to the Kamal-Pasha car, $400 to the Wilson auto and $200 to the Matthews car.

Police said the second mishap occurred at 11 p.m.

Officers said a car driven by Spellman Johnson Jr. of 303 Elizabeth St. struck a pedestrian, Douglas Paul Lucas of 138E Longmeadow Rd., when Lucas allegedly walked into the path of the car.

Lucas received minor injuries investigators said. No damage resulted to the Johnson car.

The Dispatch said Sunday. "One of the more surprising names offered is that of Woody Hayes, ousted Ohio State (University) football coach."

Neither Hayes nor Glenn could be reached Sunday for comment.

Farm Bureau Day Is Observed

Although today has been officially declared by the American Farm Bureau Federation as National Farm Bureau Day, members of the Pitt County organization celebrated a little early with a picnic Friday night.

Approximately 90 persons brought picnic baskets to the Farm Bureau building to enjoy the fellowship of other farm families, be entertained by the singing of the Overton Sisters, and hear speeches by Mrs. Irby Walker, secretary and treasurer of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, and Billy Upchurch, state Farm Bureau Director of Field Services.

Mrs. Walker emphasized the importance of the leadership from such men as the late J. E. Winslow, Bruce Sugg and Haywood Dail in forming the Pitt County Farm Bureau in 1932.

According to Mrs. Walker, after a mass meeting on the East Carolina University campus, 6,500 farmers paid their $2 dues to join the newly-formed organization, with Winslow as its president. She pointed out that farmers saw the need for such an organization, since tobacco was selling for five cents a pound in 1932.

Winslow went on to become the first president of the state Farm Bureau, paving the way for fine leadership from Pitt County, stated Mrs. Walker.

Billy Upchurch, state director of field services, gave a slide presentation on North Carolina's agricultural riches, pointing out that food prices will continue to rise in America as long as inflation is uncontrolled. Rising farm production costs will heighten prices of food, Upchurch added. Speakers were introduced by Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, member of the N. C. Farm Bureau Women's Advisory Committee, and Atlas Wooten, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau.

President Wooten thanked Pitt County members Mrs. Lois Briley, Judy Wingate, Helen Allen, Wilbur Worthington and R. H. McLawhorn for their help in the picnic plans.

According to Mrs. Wilbur Worthington, a luncheon was to be held today in Raleigh in observance of the special day, sponsored by the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation.

As part of the national observance, officers of the National Farm Bureau Federation will dine with U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and his wife today to discuss the rising costs of food and farm production.

Dissident Teamsters Ask Return-To-Work

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The dissident Teamsters for a Democratic Union has called for a return to work following an end-the-strike vote by the largest steel-hauling local in the Teamsters union.

"Our committee's advocating that we not make a last ditch stand," an aide to TDU leader Ken Paff said in Detroit on Sunday after the 1,600-member Local 800 voted here to return to work.

The vote came as support for the month-long strike waned in the East, where some non-striking union members had already resumed hauling general freight and steel.

The strike had kept many of the Teamsters' estimated 17,000 steel haulers idle since April 1, and forced the layoff of some 6,000 mill workers because steel shipments were bottled up.

Steel haulers in Youngstown, Ohio, were scheduled to vote on a possible return to work today, TDU said.

Members of steel-hauling Local 92 in Canton, Ohio, voted Sunday to end the strike if holdout companies signed the agreement and agreed to immediate pay for six days' retroactive sick pay negotiated in the proposed agreement.

"In Gary (Ind.) they'll be in full operation Monday. In Detroit, Cleveland, Canton (Ohio) and Erie (Pa.) they don't think they're going to be able to hold up past Monday," one spokesman said.

The Teamsters' 300,000 drivers ended a 10-day walkout April 10, but steel haulers defied a back-to-work order, demanding a separate vote on their provisions in the proposed master freight agreement.

Local 800 Secretary-Treasurer Charles Carelli said work would not resume immediately at about 10 Pittsburgh-area National Steel Carriers members who had not settled as of Sunday. But he predicted quick agreements once other trucks started rolling.

The proposed contract offers company drivers and owner-operators a flat percentage of the gross revenue on long-distance loads.

Applying current freight rates to the proposed contract, an owner-operator's earnings hauling a 50,000-pound load of steel from Pittsburgh to Chicago would rise from $460 to $521, Carelli said.

A union member driving a company truck on the same trip would earn $185 instead of $159, he said.

During the festival, more than 60 groups, choirs, orchestras, dance ensembles and marching bands will perform and compete for prizes.

TOBACCO GROWERS TALK ABOUT VIKING SHIP® CALCIUM NITRATE

"We depend on Calcium Nitrate for all of our crops"

James A. Bryan
Newton Grove,
N.C.

"We like the fast action of Calcium Nitrate and use it on both our tobacco and produce crops. On peppers I find that 'CN' and good land selection fits my total pepper management. It's just as fast acting after a rain or applied ahead of rain. I know I can depend on 'CN' in the field and in supply."

Intangibles Tax Repeal Is Given Little Chance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Those working for repeal of the state intangibles tax say it would enable the state to attract more retired people and more industry.

But two bills dealing with the issue are before the General Assembly, and the attempts to repeal the tax appear to have no better chance of passage this year than they have in the past.

Encourages Mediocrity

BOWLING GREEN, Ohio (AP) — Professor Raymond K. Tucker freely admits he's encouraging mediocrity when he advises people to forget about trying to always do their best.

"If we do the best we can under all circumstances, then we just won't get much done in life," Tucker contends. "Besides, our best isn't necessary."

Tucker says his anti-perfection formula, which calls for taking 10 percent or less of the time required to do a job perfectly, can be applied to any project.

To prove his point, he began testing his formula under a variety of circumstances at Bowling Green State University and elsewhere.

In one experiment, he assigned students to compose and deliver a 10-minute speech. The students were divided into 10 groups and given different lengths of time to prepare and rehearse, ranging from one hour for group one to 10 hours for group 10.

Tucker said each speech was rated by three judges and the results were that the group with one hour was rated as highly as the group given 10 hours.

SALT Negotiations Inspire A Rare Russian Tranquility

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Whatever finally happens to a new strategic arms limitation treaty now in the final stages of negotiation, it has already given the Carter administration its first period of tranquility and cooperation in relations with the Soviet Union.

The prisoner exchange that brought five Soviet dissidents to New York over the weekend is only one example of the restrained and conciliatory policies the Soviets have adopted in an unspoken, but obvious effort to help President Carter persuade the Senate to ratify the treaty.

bate takes place at a time when the Soviets appear to be on the march once more.

The administration, for its part, is reciprocating in quiet ways. It has, for example, approved the export license for a computer the Soviet news agency wants to buy for the 1980 Olympics. That license was withheld last summer.

It is also exploring ways to make a more substantial gesture in the direction of improving U.S.-Soviet trade relations by granting the Soviets "most-favored nation" status, perhaps in time for the SALT summit meeting likely to occur in late May or early June.

Most-favored nation status would mean the Soviets would have access to the American market at standard tariff rates, the kind assessed in trade with most of the world. They would also be able to get financing from the U.S. Export-Import Bank.

The Soviets lost the trade status in 1974 when Congress passed the Jackson-Vanik amendment. It denied the status to communist nations that do not allow free emigration.

The negotiations over the trade status have a particular urgency because the United States is moving rapidly to grant the status to China. Secretary of Commerce Juanita Kreps is due in Peking early in May to talk about it. Carter has insisted he will be even-handed between the Soviets and China.

Health Systems Meeting May 9

The monthly meeting of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency (ECHSA) will be held Wednesday, May 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

The agenda items will include, but not be limited to, the following: approval of the ECHSA 1979-84 Health Systems Plan; approval of ECHSA Governing Body selection process; and Project Review Reports on Halifax Memorial Hospital expansion and relocation of emergency room and ancillary services, Hyde Rural Health Corporation-RHI continuation, and 25 proposals from within the 29-county HSA VI area for Hugs funds to be used in alcohol and/or drug-related programs.

The public is invited to attend this meeting.

counts. It is understood the committee is preparing an alternative that would phase out the tax over a two-year period. Gunnells said this would reduce revenues $4.5 million the first year and $4.8 million the second.

The N.C. League of Municipalities is also opposed to the repeal effort.

He said his group also opposed the measure that would repeal taxes on checking accounts.

dividuals have to pay on money in their bank accounts, money on hand, notes and stock and accounts receivable.

The opponents of repeal are mostly officials of cities and counties. They say the taxes provide a small but steady source of revenue.

Two bills dealing with the issue are before the legislature. One would repeal the tax only on checking accounts. The other bill would repeal all intangibles taxes and would seek to replace the lost revenue by adding a stiff surcharge to the franchise (or privilege tax) which corporations pay.

The second bill is before a House subcommittee, and observers say an informal poll of the committee members shows it has little chance of winning committee approval.

Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, who sponsored the bill, conceded it has little chance of passage. He said he is working to gain some relief for older people. "I hope to get an exception, to get intangibles taxes repealed on the first $25,000 in stocks and bonds owned by people over 65," Auman said.

But an exemption for older people is running into the same opposition that outright repeal has encountered.

"We will oppose this on the same grounds that we oppose other exemptions: The real problem is a little exemption here and a little exemption there; they all eat away at our tax base," said Durwood Gunnells, staff counsel of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

"Plus, if you make an exemption then the tax burden becomes heavier on everyone else," he said.

Gunnells said that the intangibles taxes brought in $35.1 million to county and city coffers last year. This was about 3 percent of the total revenues of the cities and counties.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost ground today, depressed by expectations of higher interest rates. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 4.16 at 852.48.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a 7-4 margin in the broad rally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Steps taken by the Federal Reserve late last week in the money markets were taken as evidence that the Fed was seeking to tighten credit a bit further by encouraging money rates to rise.

The central bank's action came after weekly statistics last Thursday showed a sharp rise in the money supply.

Meanwhile, the government reported today that productivity declined at a 4.5 percent annual rate in the first quarter.

And the index of leading economic indicators dropped 0.5 percent in March, marking its third consecutive monthly decline. The index is designed to detect early warning signals of the future course of the economy.

American Telephone & Telegraph was one of the most active NYSE issues, down 3/4 at 58 1/2. In response to a suit filed by MCI Communications Corp., the company said it hasn't violated any antitrust laws.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .18 to 57.22. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .01 at 183.66.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 10.74 million shares at mid-day.

Report Meisel Outlook 'Good'

Kevin Meisel, a freshman member of the East Carolina University swimming team was "doing as well as can be expected," this morning in Duke University Medical Center's intensive care unit.

KEVIN MEISEL

Meisel suffered severe arm injuries when struck by a train Saturday afternoon. He and another student were apparently moving between the cars of a stopped train when the train suddenly started moving, running over Meisel's arm.

Athletic Department spokesmen this morning said Meisel's outlook is good, although he can have no visitors. It may be as long as two weeks, the spokesmen noted, before it will be known if his arm can be saved.

Meisel does need blood, the spokesmen noted. Anyone wishing to donate blood may call Dick Carney at the Red Cross blood center at 758-1140, and designate the blood for the injured athlete.

The spokesmen added that swimmers at N.C. State University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and at Duke University, are donating blood for Meisel.

Talmadge...

account or that he profited from it. He said his actions in ordering an audit of his affairs in June 1978 and in turning over evidence to the Justice Department showed he could not have known of the account.

"These are steps that only a fool would take if he were aware ...that there was a hidden, phony bank account waiting to be found," Talmadge said. "Even my enemies don't claim that I am stupid."

The 22-year Senate veteran said his attorneys would present evidence that showed that his former administrative assistant, Daniel Minchew, needed funds at the time the secret account was in operation.

"You will have evidence that in one year alone, 1974, when most of the money was taken from Daniel Minchew's secret account, his obligations and expenditures exceeded his legitimate sources of income by more than $40,000," Talmadge claimed.

He added, "If I had intended to steal money, I would not have used an accomplice who could later implicate me. I would not have used a bank account and left a paper trail that could later be discovered."

He characterized Minchew as a "liar, cheat and embezzler."

Talmadge dismissed the other allegations against him by contending they were trivial and that most were the result of errors made by his staff in filling out expense forms.

The committee's proceedings against Talmadge are the first public scrutiny in 12 years of a senator's ethics. The last such session came in 1966 and 1967 when the committee investigated the conduct of Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn. That investigation eventually led to the Senate censuring Dodd for financial misconduct.

The panel planned to hear from four witnesses later in the day, with T. Rogers Wade, Talmadge's current administrative assistant, leading off.

Band students from grades five through nine will perform under the direction of Dottie Jo Knight, James Rodgers and Johnny Wooten.

Highlights on the program will be the presentation of band scholarships by the Greenville City Band Boosters. The scholarships will go toward students' attendance at the East Carolina Summer Music Camp at East Carolina University.

Guest conductor Donald Reaser of the ECU Music Department will perform with and conduct the Middle School Band. Reaser will team with the Middle School Super Stars in a selection, assisted by Lewis Roberson, percussionist, and Chris Love, trumpet.

Admission will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for students. Proceeds will go toward student scholarships. The public is invited to attend.

Iran Restrains Oil Production

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The National Iranian Oil Co. says production of Iranian crude oil will average 3.5 million to 4 million barrels a day for the rest of the year, with a total of 1.05 million barrels daily going to Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Caltex and Shell.

Reza Azimi, the company's marketing director, told a news conference Sunday nine-month contracts had been agreed on with 35 countries and oil companies. He said the price was $16.57 a barrel for light crude and $16.04 for heavy crude.

Azimi said all the buyers agreed not to sell any of the oil to South Africa or Israel. Before the revolution, although production was 50 percent more, it averaged $55 million to $60 million because the price was $3 to $4 a barrel less. That was 90 percent of the country's foreign income.

The head of the Iranian oil company, Hassan Nazih, told the news conference the government is limiting daily production to 4 million barrels for the time being.

"We at this time do not need any foreign personnel at any level," he declared.

Before the revolution, some 600 foreign technicians were employed in the industry by the Oil Services Co., which was owned by 17 foreign oil companies and produced and marketed most of Iran's oil for the national company.

"OSCO is finished," said Nazih. Azimi said the company sold oil on the spot market in March for $18.70 to $22.20 a barrel and will continue to sell 200,000 to 300,000 barrels a day on a spot basis.

Industry sources expect Iran's daily oil income to average $48 million to $50 million. Before the revolution, although production was 50 percent more, it averaged $55 million to $60 million because the price was $3 to $4 a barrel less. That was 90 percent of the country's foreign income.

County-Owned Cars Damaged

Greenville police are continuing their investigation into an incident that resulted in damage to four Pitt County-owned cars parked at the Health Department on West Sixth Street early Saturday morning.

Officers said $100 damage resulted to each of three cars, while an estimated $250 damage resulted to a fourth vehicle when the cars were struck by a truck.

Police, who found the damage about 3:26 a.m., found a dump truck, owned by E. L. Scott Roffing Co. of Kinston, parked on the Allen Road about 5 a.m. The truck, officers noted, is believed to have caused the damage to the county-owned vehicles.

Thatcher's Lead Fading

LONDON (AP) — With only three days until Britain's general election, two of three new public opinion polls show a further blunting of the lead Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party holds over Prime Minister James Callaghan's Laborites.

The latest polls, released Sunday, also indicated Mrs. Thatcher, seeking to become Europe's first woman prime minister, was still trailing Callaghan and Liberal Party leader David Steel in personal popularity.

A poll by Research Services Ltd., put the Conservatives 11 1/2 percentage points ahead of Labor, a drop of 9 1/2 points in one week. One taken by Market Opinion and Research International put the Tories ahead only 3 percentage points, a 3-point drop in three days. But the Gallup Poll increased its Conservative lead from 5 1/2 points to 8 points in a week.

A Marplan poll predicted a Conservative majority of up to 60 seats in the 635-member House of Commons, compared to the five-vote edge won by Labor in the last election in October 1974.

Investigating Prison Slaying

ATLANTA (AP) — FBI agents are investigating the 11th killing in three years at the crowded Atlanta federal penitentiary. Prison spokesman William Noonan says no special security measures had been taken after Saturday night's stabbing of Harold W. Stansfield, 34, of Burlington, N.C.

Stansfield was serving a 14-year term for distributing narcotics. Extra security measures were instituted at the prison last year after an investigation requested by Rep. Wyche Fowler, D-Ga. The prison, designed to house 1,500 inmates, has operated with more than 2,000.

Find Problems Among Violent

CHICAGO (AP) — Yale University researchers say most violent delinquents studied in a Connecticut reform school have brain or neurologic disorders or psychiatric problems.

Dr. Jonathan H. Pincus, a neurologist on the research team, said 96 percent of those studied had neurologic abnormalities, compared to 22 percent of a nonviolent group in the same institution. This suggests factors other than socioeconomic conditions may contribute to violent behavior in delinquents, Pincus reported at the annual meeting of the American Academy of Neurology.

Bullets Outlast Hawks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even with President Carter in the stands rooting against them, Bobby Dandridge and Elvin Hayes have shown they get their act together when the money's on the table.

Forwards Dandridge and Hayes combined Sunday for 68 points, 23 in the final quarter, to power the defending champion Washington Bullets to a 100-94 victory over the tenacious Atlanta Hawks and into the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference championship.

The Bullets will play at home Friday night and Sunday against the winner of the Philadelphia-San Antonio series, now tied 3-3, which will be concluded in Texas on Wednesday.

"It was a man's game out there today," said Washington Coach Dick Motta after the game that gave the Bullets a 43 edge in the best-of-seven series. "It was no place out there for the weak at heart."

Dandridge scored 17 of his 29 points in the final quarter and Hayes was the game's high scorer with 39 points, six in the last period. John Drew led the Hawks with 24 while Terry Furlow had 21.

"This is the toughest seven-game series that wasn't for all the money that I ever played in," said Dandridge. "Atlanta gave us everything we needed and then some."

The Bullets suffered once more from the inability of their guards to score. At one point, the Washington guards had hit on only two of 23 attempts, but Phil Chenier and Larry Wright came off the bench to make four quick baskets to boost the Bullets' spirits.

Hayes had nothing but praise for the Atlanta club.

"They are truly winners," he said. "I have more respect for Atlanta, basically, than for any other team in the league. Any other team than us Atlanta would have beaten today.

"Atlanta played a tremendous game today. We just played a little better," said Hayes.

Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown said, "The old pros knew they were in a donnybrook. We have nothing to be ashamed of."

"We took them out of their offense, but what really hurt was where they outscored us 28-6 in second shots. That allowed them to keep control without working out of their offense. Their muscle was allowed to score."

As for Carter, who attended the game with his wife Rosalynn, daughter Amy and Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., a former pro basketball player, he said he was rooting for the Hawks.

"I'm for the Hawks," said Carter before the game and at halftime. "I always have been since they were born."

Sixers Win To Knot Series

down a lot, but we got a spurt going."

The 76ers outscored the Spurs 8-0 and soon led 85-84 with 4:05 left.

The lead changed hands five times after that, with James Silas giving the Spurs a 90-89 edge with 20 seconds on the clock. Philadelphia called time out.

"The play was designed to go to Dr. J. (Erving)," said rookie Maurice Cheeks. "But he told me he was going to be double-teamed. I slid down the lane, got down low. I knew there were a lot of big guys around me, but I really didn't feel any pressure."

Erving was double-teamed after taking a pass from Cheeks, and shot the ball back to the 6-foot-1 rookie, who spun and laid in a left-handed layup for the winning basket. The Spurs had two more shots after that, but Silas missed a 10-foot jumper, and Mark Olberding's buzzer shot went in and out of the hoop.

Caldwell Jones topped Philadelphia with 20 points and 17 rebounds. Darryl Dawkins collected 18, Cheeks 15. For the Spurs, Silas totaled 27 and George Gervin 21.

San Antonio's dejected coach, Doug Moe, didn't want to talk about the seventh game.

"I'm not going to worry about Wednesday when we're thinking about this (the sixth) game," said Moe. "It was a tough loss. We just didn't do a good job on the defensive boards in the last quarter. They got behind us and got the layups."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Billy Cunningham remembered it as if it were yesterday.

Cunningham recalled 1967-68 when the Philadelphia 76ers led the Boston Celtics 3-1 in a best-of-seven National Basketball Association championship series. But the Celtics came back and won the title.

Cunningham, now coach of the 76ers, talked about that season after his team rallied from a 13-point deficit in the final period to edge the San Antonio Spurs 92-90 Sunday.

The Philadelphia victory tied the best of seven set 3-3 after the Sixers had trailed 3-1. The seventh game will be Wednesday night in San Antonio.

Cunningham hopes his 76ers will become the third team in NBA history to come back from a 3-1 deficit to win. The Los Angeles Lakers were the other in 1970 over Phoenix.

And also, if you're a believer in omens, or superstitions, history shows that the Spurs in nine tries have never won a seven-game series, counting their time in the old American Basketball Association.

The 76ers took a strange route to victory as they went 6-32 without a field goal and 5-07 with nary a point as the Spurs built an 11-point lead in the third period, and led by 13 with 10:43 to play.

Philadelphia appeared ready for a summer vacation.

"No, we weren't thinking of going on vacation," said Julius Erving. "I knew we were

Green Takes New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Hubert Green pocketed the $45,000 winner's check from the Greater New Orleans Open, reflected briefly on his erratic golf game and began a week's vacation.

"I've won two tournaments this year and missed the cut three times, and that doesn't fit in the boat very well," he said.

His victory Sunday gave him total season earnings of $127,357, making this the seventh consecutive year in which he won more than $100,000. It was his second victory of the season, giving him 16 tournament victories for his eight-year career.

He opened his season with a victory in the Hawaiian Open, then hit a dry spell before placing 10th in both the Masters and the Tournament of Champions and 11th in the Heritage Classic.

"I guess I'm like the little girl with the curl; when I'm good, I'm very, very good, and when I'm bad, I'm horrible," he said.

He said he was lucky, rather than good, on Sunday.

"I did not drive the ball well, and usually driving is the best part of my game," he said. "I foot putt for a birdie on 18, and Green sank a six-footer for par, winning the tournament."

"It was my tournament to win or lose, and I lost it," Melnyk said. "I had the opportunity to make a good putt to win it. I made a good putt, but it just wasn't good enough."

Trevino, who has finished second seven times in his last 14 tournaments, said he just wasn't putting well.

"If Lee had been putting well, he would have won by 10 strokes," said Green.

At the end of nine holes over the 7,080-yard, par 72 Lakewood Country Club course, Green was tied with Trevino, Lietzke and Melnyk at 13 under. After 15 holes, Melnyk had gone 15 under, and Green was knotted with Trevino, Lietzke and Conner a stroke back.

But Melnyk bogied the 16th and Green birdied the par-4 hole to take the lead. Melnyk missed by two inches on an 18-

Wake Golfer Wins

STATESBORO, Ga. (AP) — Wake Forest's Gary Hallberg capped off two strong, sub-par rounds with a steady par 72 to capture the ninth annual Chris Schenkel Intercollegiate Golf Tournament.

But steady play by the Florida State team gave the Seminoles the team title at the end of Sunday's final round.

Hallberg, a Barrington, Ill., junior, took a five stroke lead into the final round and never was seriously challenged.

Yanks Suffer From Seattle Syndrome

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Yankees continue to get hit hard by the Seattle Syndrome.

"If I knew what was wrong, I'd do something about it," said Yankee Manager Bob Lemon after another lost weekend with the Seattle Mariners in the Kingdom.

The Mariners are one of baseball's worst teams, but you'd never know it the way they handle the Yankees at home. They beat the world champions for the 11th time in 14 decisions in the West Coast city Sunday and after the 6-5 loss, Lemon was just as perplexed as ever.

"Nobody goes up there and deliberately makes an out," the Yankee manager said tersely in reference to a question whether his team took the Mariners too lightly.

For the third straight game, the Yankees blew a lead and lost in the late innings. This time, New York led 5-2 in the eighth inning before the Kingdome roof caved in on them.

Bruce Bochte's pinch-hit RBI single off Dick Tidrow with two out in the bottom of the ninth capped a three-run rally for Seattle. Seattle relief pitcher Rafael Vasquez, who pitched four shutout innings, was the winner while Yankee reliever Paul Mirabella took the loss.

Willie Horton's two-out, two-run single off Ron Davis tied the game at 5-5 before Bochte came through with his game-winning hit.

New York's Tommy John, bidding to become baseball's first five-game winner, departed in favor of Mirabella after Ruppert Jones' RBI single in the eighth cut the Yankee lead to 5-3.

Red Sox 2, Angels 0
Steve Renko hurled two-hit ball before leaving with one out in the ninth inning, pitching Boston past California. Renko had a no-hitter until Don Baylor spoiled it with a one-out double in the seventh. The veteran right-hander gave up a ninth-inning single before Dick Drago and Bill Campbell finished up.

A sacrifice fly by Butch Hobson in the Boston second provided the game's first run and Rick Burleson singled home another for the Red Sox in the fifth.

Orioles 13, A's 1
Gary Roenicke and Ken Singleton each belted three-run homers during a 10-run seventh inning as Baltimore overpowered Oakland. Kiko Garcia, Lee May and Rich Dauer also homered for the Orioles, who have won 10 of their last 11 games and have beaten the A's 14 times in 15 games.

Left-hander Tippy Martinez, taking over for the injured Jim Palmer in the first inning, blanked the A's on two hits over the next 6-3 innings for his first victory of the season.

Rangers 10, White Sox 0
Buddy Bell's two-run double keyed a three-run eighth inning and Texas scored five more times in the ninth to rout Chicago. Dock Ellis held the White Sox to four hits before getting late relief help from Jim Kern, who retired all seven batters he faced.

Twins 5, Tigers 3
Roy Smalley collected four hits, including a homer, to help Minnesota beat Detroit. Smalley singled and scored in both the first and third innings and hit a solo homer in the fourth. His final single improved his batting average to .400.

Geoff Zahn struggled to his third victory without a loss and Mike Marshall, who relieved in the sixth, picked up his seventh save.

Indians 5, Royals 4
Toby Harrah delivered a two-run double and Rick Wise teamed up with Sid Monge on a six-hitter to lead Cleveland over Kansas City. Wise gave up all of the Kansas City hits before Monge came on to pitch the ninth.

Wise snapped a personal three-game losing streak against the Royals. He had not won in Kansas City since June 1975.

Brewers 3-3, Blue Jays 0-5
Sixto Lezcano's RBI triple in the seventh inning broke up a scoreless game and triggered Milwaukee over Toronto in the opener of their double-header behind the six-hit pitching of Mike Caldwell.

Consecutive home runs by Rick Bosetti and Bob Robertson leading off the eighth inning helped Toronto win the second game.

Pitching a couple of shutout victories during the course of a high school baseball season isn't a rare feat these days. Nearly all of the top pitchers on a good team's staff might come up with one or two during the year.

Jamesville High School's pitching staff, however, might put some others to shame.

The 1-A Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference school is building a record that it can be proud of. And one that is the envy of a lot of other schools.

Through Saturday night, the Bullets had posted a 15-1 record. The lone loss was at the start of the season, when Plymouth gained a 4-2 victory over the Bullets.

Since then, the Bullets have more than made up for that loss, and Saturday night they avenged it with a 2-0 triumph.

The shutout was the seventh in a row for the Bullet moundsmen, dating back to a 2-1 victory over Edenton on April 7. During that span, Jamesville has not allowed a run in 53 consecutive innings, and at least three of those games have been against 3-A opponents.

Trent Ange is leading the way with 31 and a third innings, while Tommy DiNardo is next with 15 and two-thirds. Carl Ange had three innings, while Greg Sullivan has pitched two and Danny Lilley, one.

Tomorrow night, the Bullets play host to Bath, regarded as its toughest opposition for the league title this year.

But looking at the record, it's no wonder Coach Ron Davenport feels that this might be the year for Jamesville to win a state title.

Rose Bad Luck Continues

Rose High School went into the Easter holidays with only one loss to blot its record, and appeared headed for a sure showdown with Rocky Mount for the Division I baseball title.

It seemed like almost a sure thing that the two schools would end up representing the conference in the post-season playoffs.

But during Easter week, the Rampants were hit by two serious injuries. First Ronnie Chapman broke an ankle and suffered torn ligaments sliding into third base during the second round of the Greenville-Pitt Tournament.

The next night, Will Sanderson suffered a ruptured liver in a collision on the base paths.

That left the Rampants with relatively inexperienced people at shortstop and first base. It also cost them a great deal of their senior leadership, an intangible that cannot be replaced.

Then, this weekend, another injury to a starter hit the team. Catcher Skip Topping, who had already missed a couple of games with a torn fingernail on his throwing hand, was struck on the knee by a pitch.

Coach Ronald Vincent noted sadly that there is a good possibility that Topping may be out for the remainder of the season.

Losing a third regular will make it difficult, but still not impossible, for the Rampants to make the playoffs, but they will have to pull together from here on in if they want to keep playing after May 17.

Three-Run Homer

Things Less Hectic For Trainer Jolley

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — LeRoy Jolley, who lived under the intense pressure of training three Kentucky Derby favorites, is preparing two Derby starters this week, but under less hectic circumstances.

General Assembly and Sir Ivor Again will be outsiders in Saturday's 105th Derby at Churchill Downs.

In the favorite's hot seat this year is talkative Bud Delp, the trainer of Spectacular Bid. Two others who will be barraged by questions in the days leading up to the Derby are Gordon Campbell, trainer of Flying Paster, and Loren Rettele, trainer of Golden Act.

"Those three horses pretty well dominated their areas," said Jolley, who finished third with Ridan in 1962, won with Foolish Pleasure in 1975 and finished second with Honest Pleasure in 1976.

Spectacular Bid, owned by Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff, won the Florida Derby and Flamingo in Florida. Benjamin J. Ridder's Flying Paster accounted for California's Santa Anita and Hollywood derbies. Golden Act, owned by Robert W. Phipps and William H. Oldknow, won the Louisiana Derby and the Arkansas Derby. It looked like General Assembly, Bert Firestone's son of Secretariat, might be the leading Derby horse to come out of

New York. He looked impressive in winning the 11-16-mile Gotham to snap a five-race losing streak (three of the losses were last year) and he appeared headed for victory with Kinney's birds took first and second places in the initial race. Guy Rouse was third. The winning average was 1,076 yards per minute.

Thompson's bird won the second race with a 1,133 ypm average. Thomas Fisher was second and Raeford Kennedy third.

Legends' Playoff

sudden par 70 Onion Creek Country Club course.

"I never was in a playoff or anything else like this," said the 59-year-old Boros.

"I am a terrible putter ... I didn't make one for 54 holes until the playoff," said Argentinian's DeVicenzo, who was using a brand new putter.

After pars on the first playoff hole, the duos began a birdie duel.

A wedge to within five feet on the 360-yard par 4 No. 16 hole and a putt true into the heart of the hole meant the difference between the winner's share and the loser's payoff of $40,000.

"It was truly a fantastic finish," said Wall. "I was happy for Tommy. He made all those great putts. I'll have to think about it for awhile, but it is one of the greatest thrills if not the greatest I've ever had."

HOUSE VALUE VS LOT VALUE

What is the proper relationship between the cost of a lot and the value of the house on it? This question concerned building economists more in the past than it does now. Old rules of thumb have lost much of their meaning. It used to be said that land should represent about one-sixth of the home's purchase price. Then it moved up to one-fifth and is now approaching one-fourth. And it will change again as the cost of land continues to rise.

Nevertheless, the land value versus house value ratio cannot be totally dismissed because it does, to some extent, affect the resale value of the property. And resale value determines the ease or difficulty you'll encounter in securing a mortgage. In this light, it may not make a great deal of difference if you put an inexpensive house on an expensive lot, but it could be a mistake to have too much house for the land.

Cubs Return From Dead

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

First the Chicago Cubs jumped all over Atlanta relief ace Gene Garber. Then they jumped all over each other.

"Unbelievable," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox, who learned the hard way Sunday that a baseball game is never over until the last man is out.

The Braves entered the ninth inning with a 5-0 lead behind Larry McWilliams, who was hurling a two-hitter. They led 50 when Garber came on with the bases loaded and two out. But they trailed — and lost — 6-5 by the time Garber finally got that elusive third out following Tim Blackwell's two-run single, pinch-hitter Larry Blietner's RBI single and Bobby Murcer's three-run homer.

"I was on second when Bobby hit it," said Blackwell. "When I got to the dugout everybody was jumping up and down, jumping all over everybody."

In other National League action, the Philadelphia Phillies scored two runs in the bottom of the ninth and edged the San Diego Padres 4-3, the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Houston Astros 10-5, the Montreal Expos beat the San Francisco Giants 7-5, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1 and Los Angeles and New York split a doubleheader, the Dodgers taking the opener 8-3 and the Mets capturing the nightcap 6-3.

Until their late explosion, the Cubs' only hits were leadoff singles by Ivan DeJesus in the first inning and Steve Ontiveros in the second. In the ninth, they loaded the bases on Dave Kingman's single and a pair of walks.

"McWilliams pitched a fine ballgame, but he was worn out when I came and got him, but he still had his shutout," said Cox. "When you have Garber in that situation, you expect to win. I figured the game was a lock. It's a surprise to me any time he's hit like that."

It probably surprised the Cubs, too.

"I sure didn't look good for us for a while," Murcer conceded. "But I've seen it happen a few times ... in 16 years. You've just got to get lucky for something like that to happen."

"The last couple of days we just haven't been getting a hit in the right place, but we got one in the right place today. I just wanted to hit it (the pitch he hit for a homer) hard someday. It was a sinker, down and in. I wasn't really sure if it would be off the fence, or what."

Jerry Royster helped the Braves to their big lead by rapping three singles, scoring twice and driving in a run, while Dale Murphy hit his ninth home run, tops in the NL.

Phillies 4, Padres 3
Second baseman Manny Trillo, whose error gave San Diego a run in the third inning, capped the Phillies' two-run ninth with an RBI single. Philadelphia entered the ninth trailing 3-2, but Mike Schmidt drew a leadoff walk from San Diego relief ace Rollie Fingers and Garry Maddox hit a looping fly that went for a double when left fielder Jerry Turner was unable to hold it. Schmidt scored on a wild pitch before Trillo's game-winning single.

Pirates 10, Astros 5
Omar Moreno and Willie Stargell drove in three runs apiece to rally the Pirates after Houston began the game with a leadoff homer by Terry Puhl. Pittsburgh starter Don Robinson left the game with a shoulder injury after delivering the home run pitch and Bruce Kison earned the victory with 713 innings of strong relief.

Expos 7, Giants 5
Gary Carter drilled two home runs in a game for the 10th time in his career and drove in four runs for Montreal, which erased a 4-3 deficit in the fourth inning when Ellis Valentine, making his first appearance since serving a three-game suspension for bumping an umpire, slammed a three-run pinch homer off Vida Blue. Larry Herndon drove in three San Francisco runs with a homer and triple but couldn't prevent the Giants from losing their seventh game in a row.

Reds 5, Cardinals 1
Paul Moskau pitched 52-3 innings of scoreless relief and singled home the winning run in a four-run fourth inning. Moskau took over in the third inning when Tom Seaver reinjured his back. Johnny Bench passed a team and career milestone with his 6,000th time at bat. The only other Reds to reach that plateau were Pete Rose, Vada Pinson and Tony Perez. Bench took a called third strike in his 6,000th at-bat but walked the next time up and scored the tying run on a double by Ray Knight, who scored on Moskau's single. George Foster homered in the fifth.

Dodgers 8-3, Mets 3-6
Richie Hebner drove in the go-ahead run with a single and Joel Youngblood smacked his fourth homer in six games to lead the Mets in the nightcap. In the opener, Dusty Baker drove in five runs with a homer, single and bases-loaded walk and Gary Thomasson had three RBI while Don Sutton scattered five hits. It was Sutton's 208th career victory, one shy of the Dodgers' record held by Don Drysdale.

Another Shutout

PLYMOUTH — Jamesville's pitching staff continued to shut out its opponents Saturday night as the Bullets gained a 2-0 baseball victory over Plymouth.

Trent Ange and Tommy DiNardo combined for the two-hit shutout win, the seventh consecutive shutout hurled by Jamesville pitching. The stretch covers 53 innings now.

Jamesville got its first run in the first inning. Ange reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. He moved to third on an out scoring when Keith Modlin singled.

The other run came in the fourth. DiNardo walked and hits by Alan Frazier and Carl Ange brought him around.

Modlin led the Jamesville hitting with two.

Jamesville plays host to Bath on Tuesday, as the Bullets return to Beaufort-Hyde-Martin play.

Ali Won't Fight Again Says His Former Agent

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

Recently one of the television game shows, "Hollywood Squares," posed an intriguing question for a celebrity guest to be matched by one of the contestants.

"In polling a recent studio audience," host Peter Marshall said, "we asked which of these three men exerted the greatest influence on civilization — Alfred Einstein, Abraham Lincoln or Muhammad Ali."

"I would say Einstein," replied the celebrity.

"I agree," said the contestant.

"Wrong," said the host. "It was Muhammad Ali."

"That doesn't surprise me a bit," says Gene Kilroy, the one-time Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer marketing expert who joined the Cassius Clay entourage back in 1963 and served as one of the key figures in an odyssey that touched every continent and brought Ali the heavy-weight crown an unprecedented three times over the ensuing 16 years.

"I don't think there's ever been a single man who had access to so many world leaders — in Africa, Russia, Asia, the United States. I will never forget while we were in Zaire for the George Foreman fight. Ali made a trip into the jungles where natives lived in grass huts and had no communication with the outside world.

"They knew Muhammad Ali."

Kilroy was in New York over the weekend, tying up some loose ends and quashing published reports that the Ali entourage had disintegrated except for two — Lana Shabazz, the champ's favorite cook, and the court jester, Bundo Brown.

"Not so," insisted Kilroy, "I am in constant touch with him. Although he has signed with the Mark McCormack agency, I am still his administrative assistant. I still am in on his travel plans and public appearances."

Kilroy said Ali definitely would not fight again, although he plans to hang on to his World Boxing Association crown until the deadline to defend the title in mid-September.

"The champ is up to 248 pounds," Kilroy said. "It would be tough on him to get into fighting trim again. He is at his best when he is fighting consistently. He loves to fight but hates to train."

Kilroy said he believes Ali could beat Larry Holmes and recapture the undisputed title if he were able to go into absolute seclusion for six months and undergo spartan training.

"He won't be able to make himself do it," Kilroy said. "He is a man of tremendous pride. Now that he has achieved every goal, I am positive he would not dare risk it in another fight."

Except for trainer Angelo Dundee, Kilroy was the only white in the Ali entourage.

"I got it from both sides," he said. "Some of the black men wanted my job. The whites called me a draft-dodger (because of Ali's antiwar stand) and a nigger lover."

"But Ali always treated me with the greatest kindness. All his bombast was just a show. He really was quiet, humble and very sincere."

Sober Days In Whiskey Land

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — These are sober days in whiskey country.

Hiram Walker & Sons is closing its distillery in Peoria, the last in a city where bourbon-making has been a major business for more than 100 years. So, where more than a dozen plants once made corn whiskey on the banks of the Illinois River, now there will be none.

"When your sense of security is raped like that, and raped is the word for it, a kind of rush goes through the whole community," said Mary Freeman, who's worked 11 years on the bottling line. "The day we got the news, there were men crying at their desks."

The plant, Hiram Walker's only U.S. bourbon distillery and once the world's largest, will be phased out by the end of 1981.

Officials say rising costs, government regulations and a declining market for whiskey are to blame for the closing. They have promised to do what they can to help 1,050 employees get other jobs.

The distillery was the second largest industrial plant in the city and the 11th largest employer in the area. Last year alone, it paid more than $1.3 million in local taxes.

"The picture looks pretty grim," said Bob Arnett of the Greater Peoria Chamber of Commerce. "Any time you take this many jobs out of the economy it's going to be felt."

One who will feel the closing hard is Melva Meacham, who is 29 and has worked at Walker for 11 years. Her husband has worked there for 16 years and they have two children.

"What are we going to do?" she asked. "We just built a new house, our first house, the one we saved for. My husband just shakes his head. He'll be 41 and no matter where he goes, it'll be impossible for him to build up a 30-year pension."

In addition to the unemployment problem, City Manager

James Daken said, there will be a loss of tax revenue.

But there is more to it than economics, something more basic and abiding. The employees call themselves Walker people and see that cluster of red brick rack houses at the river's edge as not just another plant but as an institution.

They see themselves as a sixth generation of the distiller's art in the heart of America's Grain Belt. And, with the passing of their plant, so goes their history.

"There's one thing about Walker people," said Mrs. Freeman. "We drink the product. We're very loyal to it. And even now a lot of people are so trusting in Hiram Walker, believing that it's going to stay after all, that Hiram Walker will be good to you. But not anymore. It's over."

The distilling industry in Peoria began in 1844 with an entrepreneur named Almiran S. Cole. By the end of the Civil War, there were 12 distilleries.

When Hiram Walker opened its distillery in 1934 with a fireworks display in which a huge bottle of Canadian Club tilted across the sky and filled a glass, it was touted as the world's largest.

It seemed natural to be here where everything was close at hand: The best grain, cheap coal, a navigable river, pure well water for superior mash, a willing labor force. So what happened?

"The problem is our costs are going up much more quickly than we can increase our prices," said A.E. Downing, president of the parent company, Hiram Walker-Gooderham & Worts Ltd. of Toronto, Canada.

"Merely to keep the plant going and also to comply with existing government regulations would have cost approximately $19 million and we still would have been left with exorbitant operating costs."

Downing said it would cost $66 million to properly modernize the aging plant, $8 million alone for scrubbers so it could burn coal and meet state and federal EPA guidelines.

He also blamed "excessively high unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation costs in Illinois."

Further, Downing admitted, people aren't drinking as much whiskey as they used to. Young drinkers have moved to wine, beer, vodka and rum and away from the big Walker products such as Imperial blend whiskey and Ten High bourbon.

Jim Burtis, president of Local 55 of the Distilling, Rectifying and Wine Workers union, vigorously denied that high salaries and workmen's compensation levels were to blame.

"Those were minor," Burtis said. "In my opinion, the big thing was the EPA, all the government regulations. I care about clean air and water, but I also want to eat."

At Bob Penn's tavern, a cinderblock structure in the shadow of the distillery, Gary Bierwirth shook his head after a day's work.

"It's a multitude of sins," he said. "I don't know. I think maybe I'll head south. That's where it seems all the industry is going."

Hiram Walker intends to build a new bottling plant in Fort Smith, Ark., for its cordials, whose sales have grown sharply in recent years. It also will continue to operate distilleries in Canada, France, Scotland, Spain, Argentina and Mexico, as well as a rectifying plant in California. Hiram Walker labels will be sold to other companies on contract.

"I can remember as a boy there were 10 or 12 distilleries around here," said Jerry Hayes, bartender at the Disabled American Veterans club, as he poured a shot of the bar favorite, Wagner Deluxe bourbon.

Deterioration Is Found In New York City Study

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — New York City is not "falling down" but it is deteriorating in some important respects and needs major new investment to avoid serious problems in future years, a new study says.

"It is a crisis that should be viewed in terms of years or decades — not days or months," concludes the 100-page report, "The Future of New York City's Capital Plant," released by the Urban Institute, a private non-profit research organization.

It is one of a series of studies the institute, working under a government contract, has issued on the condition of the so-called "physical infrastructure" — things like water, sewer, highway and transportation systems — of individual American cities.

The New York report was written by David Grossman of the Nova Institute.

Among its conclusions: Water: Much of the city's 6,000 miles of water mains is more than 75 years old and "reaching the latter part of its planned life." Coupled with recently reduced maintenance, this has produced a gradual increase in the frequency of main breaks.

"Physical and fiscal problems have halted construction on a third tunnel bringing water from the Catskill system," Grossman adds. "Without it, neither of the other two tunnels can be shut down for inspection and repair for fear that the by-pass mechanisms will stick shut."

Sewers: Many of the city's water treatment goals have been met, and capital spending for this purpose should ease during the next decade. Government priority will shift to maintenance and replacement of existing sewer lines, for which there have been "sharp cutbacks" in spending.

Highways and bridges: The closing and collapse of the West Side elevated highway is considered "archetypical" of urban deterioration. "Less spectacular," the report said, is a "steep decline" in street resurfacing since 1974. It said a fourth of the city's waterway bridges are classified as "poor."

Transit: Transit maintenance and replacement programs have "fared relatively well" and "most system performance measures lie within the acceptable range." Putting the subway system on a 100-year replacement cycle, the report said, would require nearly doubling present capital outlays.

"In sum," the report said, "although New York City is not 'falling down,' its infrastructure is deteriorating and needs a significantly increased rate of investment in maintenance and replacement if serious problems are to be avoided in coming decades."

The report took note of the city's past financing difficulties and its 10-year, $12 billion capital plan.

"Now that the city has surmounted its immediate financing problems," it said, "it remains to be seen whether it can exercise the political will to redirect its capital priorities to the extent called for in the capital plan."

Turkey Sausage For Breakfast

NEW YORK (UPI) — Smoked turkey is not just for specialty food shops and departments any more.

Louis Rich, Inc., a major turkey processor whose products are widely available in supermarkets and delicatessens, has added packaged sliced smoked turkey breast to its ready-to-eat selections. The flavor is mild.

Other new products from the same processor include chubs of breakfast turkey sausage — ground dark meat seasoned like traditional pork breakfast sausage, and turkey bologna. All have higher protein and lower fat and calorie content than their meat counterparts.

Show Sculpture By Geo. Segal

NEW YORK (AP) — Fifty sculptures by George Segal will be on view at the Whitney Museum of American Art May 23 through Sept. 9.

The museum says, "This retrospective of works created during the past 20 years provides an overview of Segal's artistic development and an opportunity to observe the full range of his ideas and achievements."

The exhibition was organized by the Walker Art Center of Minneapolis.
