Quorum Requirements Of Commission Revised

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
A change in the rules of procedure regarding quorum requirements for meetings of the Joint City-County Planning Commission was adopted Wednesday night by the board.

Commissioners voted to require that at least three members from the county and three from the city contingent be present in order for joint board business to be conducted.

Discussion regarding the quorum for the meeting took place at last week's regular board meeting when county members failed to have a quorum present. Commissioners who attended the session agreed that something needed to be done in order to avoid the problem of not being able to conduct scheduled business due to lack of a quorum.

Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, suggested that the commissioners consider adopting a simple majority procedure whereby business could be conducted as long as six of the 11 city and county members were present. Under the simple majority procedure, a quorum would be met if six members were on hand, regardless of whether they were city or county members.

County representative Elbert Mills objected to the simple majority proposal and said that he felt the county should have at least three on hand for adequate representation.

Bill Heymann, also a member of the county contingent, said that he would favor three from each group or a simple majority from each group in order for city-county business to be conducted.

In adopting the rules of procedure change, commissioners stipulated that six of the total of 11 city-county members would have to be present, specifically at least three from each board. It was pointed out that although there have been problems in having the required number of county members present in the past, seldom has there been a case where three of the five were not present.

Until now, procedure had required attendance by four of the five county members and four of the six city members for a total of eight in order for joint board business to be considered.

Commission chairman E. E. (Ed) Howell mentioned that under the former guidelines, there have been at least three situations within the past year where there was insufficient representation from the county in order to have a quorum.

Wholesale Prices Up Despite Food Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher prices for gasoline and heating oil helped push wholesale prices up 0.9 percent in April, despite the first decline in food prices in eight months, the government said today.

Although the increase in wholesale prices was the lowest in five months, it still showed inflation continuing at above 10 percent at the wholesale level. The April increase represents a compound annual rate of 11.5 percent. Prices had increased 1 percent in March and in February.

Food prices at the wholesale level declined 0.3 percent, the first drop since last August and an indication that the upward spiral in supermarket prices may be about over. Wholesale prices eventually are reflected in the prices consumers pay.

But the Labor Department said prices of goods other than foods increased 1.3 percent in April, the biggest monthly increase since October 1974.

The department said gasoline prices increased 4.4 percent and home heating-oil prices were up 6.7 percent.

The rise in gasoline and heating oil prices reflects a partial shortage of petroleum products resulting from the cutback in Iranian oil production.

President Carter's proposal to decontrol domestic oil prices is certain to push fuel costs even higher in months ahead.

The wholesale price changes were reported in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index for finished goods — those which are ready for sale to the consumer.

The department said the index in April stood at 211.2 percent of the 1967 average of 100, meaning that goods priced at $100 then had increased in price to $211.20 last month.

Wholesale prices had increased 10.3 percent in the 12-month period ending in April.

The increase in prices for goods other than food showed that the nation will continue to have serious problems with inflation even after the upward spiral in food prices eases. However, administration officials expect inflation will begin to ease at all levels by summer and continue to improve during the rest of the year.

April's 0.3 percent decline in food prices at the wholesale level followed four consecutive months in which those prices had advanced at more than one percent. The department said there were lower prices for pork, coffee, fresh vegetables and poultry.

Wholesale price changes are included in the Producer Price Index, which reports prices at three levels: the wholesale — or finished goods — level, when goods are ready for sale to the final user; the intermediate level, where they have received some processing; and the crude level, where goods have not yet received any processing.

The department said prices at the intermediate level were up 1.5 percent, the most in nearly five years, while prices for crude goods declined 0.4 percent, the first drop in more than a year.

Newspaper Says Hunt Pressed UNC Accept A HEW Compromise

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors' decision to file suit against the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was made despite the insistence of Gov. Jim Hunt on a compromise agreement, the Winston-Salem Journal reported today.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified members of the Board of Governors and UNC officials, said board Chairman William A. Johnson prevailed over Hunt and UNC President William Friday in the decision to file the suit, aimed at blocking a cutoff of federal funds to UNC.

Hunt was intent on announcing a settlement of a dispute over desegregation of the UNC System on April 20, the day of the board's last meeting, the report said.

Friday told board members the night before the meeting of Hunt's wishes and that the governor repeated them in six telephone calls Thursday night and three on Friday morning, one member of the board told the newspaper.

Although Hunt has said he was never directly involved in negotiations with HEW, the board member said the governor was in regular contact with HEW Secretary Joseph Califano and that the two had reached agreement on a desegregation plan by Thursday, the member said. He said the plan would have allowed the government to require merger of programs at predominantly white and mostly black campuses if other measures failed to bring about sufficient desegregation.

Hunt denied today that he had reached a tentative agreement with HEW.

"I wasn't involved in language. I was involved in encouraging them to talk," Hunt said.

He said he had "no questions about how that was done. I stand behind the board and what it's done, and I hope they win that court suit."

Two board members were quoted as saying Hunt's uncritical acceptance of the plan helped incline the board toward the views of Johnson, who was reported to have leaned toward filing the suit.

"The real friction wasn't between the people who wanted to negotiate further and those who wanted to sue then and there," one board member told the Journal. "It was between Johnson and Hunt. The governor just didn't understand that the real issue was control of educational policy."

The Board of Governors, in announcing its decision to file suit, indicated the main issue was HEW's insistence that any agreement leave open for future discussion the question of duplication of programs.

Johnson denied the report that he was at odds with Hunt, saying the governor has been "very supportive of the action we've taken."

British Go To Polls

LONDON (AP) — Britons braved foul weather and began electing a new government today with final opinion polls promising a Conservative victory and Europe's first woman prime minister after five years of Labor Party rule.

Election officials said that despite unseasonable chilling winds, sleet and snow coming from the Arctic, there was a brisk start when the polling stations opened at 7 a.m.

It was the 11th election of a House of Commons since World War II, and three polls forecast margins of 5.7, 6 and 7 percentage points for Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives over Prime Minister James Callaghan's Laborites.

This indicated the Tories should win 330 to 333 of the 635 seats in Commons, giving Mrs. Thatcher a majority of 25 to 30. That would be the biggest majority for a British government since the Laborites won a 96-seat majority in 1966.

The Conservatives are the traditional supporters of business and free enterprise.

Bottle Bill Is Braked In House

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Action on a bill that would require a 5-cent deposit on drink containers was stalled today when a House subcommittee voted to delay action until next week in order to consider alternatives.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, called for the delay and asked industries opposed to the bottle bill to bring in alternative ways of ridding the state of unsightly roadside litter.

"I think there is merit behind the concept of the bill," Miller said. "But frankly, I am not in a position to say this is the best approach."

Sponsors of the bottle bill, which was introduced as a means for cleaning up the state, said they did not see the delay as a setback.

"I'm glad to wait," said Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry. "Any time they want to compare the bottle bill with what the industry has proposed, they can. The facts and figures are on our side."

During today's subcommittee meeting, Miller pressed representatives of the soft-drink and beer industries and a spokesman for the state's merchants about alternatives for cleaning up litter.

Representatives of the soft-drink and beer industries said they had contributed thousands of dollars to community and statewide cleanup programs and recycling efforts.

Thompson Greenwood, head of the North Carolina Merchants Association, suggested the answer was to educate people not to litter.

MARIJUANA LAWS?

What are the laws in N.C. concerning marijuana? I recently saw a show on television which said N.C. was one of the states in which marijuana was an offense, something that could be held on your record or something of that nature. Could you please print what the law in N.C. is now for the use of marijuana in small amounts?

Hotline directed your question to Sheriff Ralph Tyson of the Greenville Police Department.

According to Tyson, the state law presently states that a person can be fined $100 for possessing less than one ounce of marijuana, and fined $5,000 and/or sentenced to not more than five years for possessing more than one ounce of marijuana.

"Any conviction of any kind goes on that person's criminal record," said Tyson, explaining that possession of less than one ounce is a misdemeanor and possession of more than one ounce a felony.

However, a bill was submitted by N.C. Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake County, recommending that a misdemeanor instead of a felony be charged for the possession of four ounces or less of marijuana.

On April 24, that bill, which would relax the penalties for possession of marijuana, passed the N.C. House of Representatives and is currently in the N.C. Senate where it must also be approved before becoming a new state law.

However, Hotline would like to emphasize that the N.C. law states that possession of more than one ounce of marijuana is currently a felony.

Gasless Weekend 'Protest Action' Spreading

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Buying gasoline the weekend of May 17-20 may be difficult in many parts of the nation if service station owners are successful in their plans for a "gasless weekend" to protest federal controls on their prices.

The idea originated in California, where most dealers are expected by industry officials to participate, and since has spread to other states, including Connecticut, Illinois, Idaho, Iowa, Washington, Nevada, Louisiana and Arizona, according to officials of state dealer associations.

It is unclear, however, just how many dealers nationwide might participate in the proposed closing.

"If something isn't forthcoming from the Department of Energy, many dealers may join the movement," said Charles Matties, who operates an Exxon station in West Hartford, Conn.

"There's a definite feeling toward doing something," said Matties, a former president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, an industry group that has refused to endorse the shutdown proposal.

The aim of the gasless weekend is to force the government to loosen controls on the markup gas stations are allowed to take on sales of gasoline. That mark-up, known as "dealer margin," cannot now exceed the amount it was in May 1973, plus 3 cents. Dealers also have been allowed to add small amounts to cover some other costs.

The dealers want the current system replaced with a straight 25 percent mark-up over the wholesale price of gasoline.

The dealers acknowledge that the gasless weekend would inconvenience the public.

"It wasn't our intention to hurt the public, but we don't know what else we can do," said Don Skilling, a spokesman for the California Service Station Association, which represents 2,000 of the state's 14,000 dealers.

Robert Jacobs, executive secretary of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association and a longtime advocate of a gas dealer strike, said the planned shutdown "is doomed because of the timing."

Jacobs said it would be more logical to hold the gasless weekend at the end of the month, when supplies are low anyway as monthly allocations run out.

But that weekend is Memorial Day weekend, and the gas dealers are apparently trying to keep from interfering with traditionally heavy holiday traffic by holding their protest the weekend before.

powered explosives, devastating one floor of the building and causing damage to other floors in the six-story structure.

Scores of police cars and armored vehicles rushed to the scene near the Tiber River in downtown Rome and helicopters hovered overhead in an attempt to spot the fleeing gang members. Some were said by witnesses to have fled in a red Simca.

Italian radio said firemen found the gang had painted the five-pointed Red Star symbol of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared terrorist group, on the walls inside the building.

The Red Brigades' reputation stems from their kidnapping of five-time Premier Aldo Moro in a street ambush in Rome.

The attack came a month before Italians go to the polls in a national election, and the radio said the terrorists scrawled on the wall: "Transform the electoral fraud into a class war."

Sketchy reports from the scene described the gang members as young and unmasked. The gang was said to include several women.

Police closed off a wide area of downtown Rome, behind the Parliament buildings.

Couple Should See Counselor

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have some good friends I'll call Marge and Bob. We had some terrific times together until they began having marital problems. They kept calling and asking if they could come over to talk. Their talks always ended up in shouting matches. Nothing was ever settled, and it made wrecks of us, so we asked them not to come over to talk anymore.

Now they call us on the phone and talk endlessly. First Marge calls me and complains about Bob, and when she hangs up, Bob calls and tells my husband his version of the story.

Abby, I know good friends are supposed to be supportive, but we're out of patience with these two.

How can we refuse to listen without giving them the impression that we don't care. We do.

GOOD FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: Tell them that BECAUSE you are such good friends you can't view their situation objectively. Urge them to seek help from a qualified marriage counselor. It could save their marriage—and your friendship.

DEAR ABBY: You told a reader whose husband kept bringing home unexpected dinner guests, "Quit being a GOOD scout—be a GIRL Scout instead, and be prepared!"

Abby, "Be Prepared" is the motto of the BOY Scouts—not the GIRL Scouts.

Girls have succeeded in invading nearly all of the male organizations. Can't the Boy Scouts be kept separate from the Girl Scouts, without making them share a common motto?

EAGLE SCOUT, BRADFORD, PA.

DEAR EAGLE: Your knowledge of Scouting is for the birds. "Be Prepared" is the motto for Girl Scouts, too. (Scout's honor!)

DEAR ABBY: Please don't laugh at my question, or throw this away thinking it's from some silly kid. It's not. I'm a normal, 33-year-old man who would like to learn how to be a great lover.

I know what to DO, but I don't know what to say to a lady while I'm making love to her. I feel as though I should be saying something. But what?

They don't have schools for this sort of thing and I can't ask anyone to give me lessons. I have very few hangups, and I've never had any trouble with my love life, but I'd like to know how to make my partner feel really great.

WANTS TO PLEASE

DEAR WANTS: Anyone who sincerely wants to make his partner feel "really great" is well on his way to becoming a great lover. You say you have very few hangups. Fine, because frank dialogue with one's partner is essential. There's also a wealth of information to be found in books. And finally, practice makes perfect.

Miss Edwards Entertained

Miss Caroline Edwards, bride-elect of Hugh Therman Hardee III, was honored at an informal party Saturday morning at the home of Miss Lois Edwards, Simpson.

Hostesses were Miss Elizabeth Edwards, Miss Lois Edwards, Mrs. Leon Evans and Miss Gail Evans.

Guests were greeted by Miss Elizabeth Edwards, Miss Lois Edwards and Mrs. Harold J. Edwards, mother of the bride-elect.

The table was covered with a white Belgium linen cloth edged with lace and centered with an arrangement of white and yellow daisies. Mrs. Leon Edwards, Miss Gail Evans and Mrs. Sammy Tucker assisted at the refreshment table. Arrangements of mixed spring flowers were used throughout the house.

Good-byes were said to Miss Elizabeth Edwards.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and a gift of china in her chosen pattern.

The wedding will take place May 19 at the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church.

ERA, Pro And Con, Reviewed

Information concerning the pros and cons of the Equal Rights Amendment was presented at an ERA Forum Tuesday by the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women. Tennala Gross and Jim Rees presented information favoring the passage of the ERA, John East and Mrs. Elizabeth Savage presented information against the passage, and Terry Shank served as moderator of the forum.

"The passage of the Equal Rights Amendment is unnecessary. You don't need it to challenge discrimination against women at the present time," East said in his opening remarks.

East explained that women can currently challenge discrimination on the basis of sex by using the 14th Amendment and the due process clause of the Fifth Amendment.

"There are areas in the American society where we would want distinction of sex. Passage of ERA would not allow this," East said.

Military draft and marital laws concerning alimony, child custody and support were areas which East said that might be subject to nondiscrimination of sex if the ERA should be adopted.

Speaking in favor of the ERA, Jim Rees said, "I don't consider ERA difficult, dangerous or anything to be afraid of."

Rees read the proposed amendment aloud and explained that the amendment is "clear, simple and needed. I wish it were not needed, but women have been discriminated against just as cultural and racial groups."

Rees said that passage of ERA does not necessarily mean that women will be drafted or alimony and marital laws will be changed. "It is a matter of interpretation. The biggest amount of interpretation has come from opposition."

"I believe in equality for everyone; white, black, male and female. All should have an opportunity to go as far as their abilities allow them," Rees stated.

"I'm afraid of the amendment. I don't believe in the amendment. It completely nullifies the present laws which protect women," Mrs. Savage said.

Mrs. Savage noted that laws now protect women in work from lifting heavy objects and 40 hour work weeks. She also pointed out that women have more lenient insurance regulations.

"We have laws, customs, and we are made differently. ERA will change the laws, but it will not change the way we are made. I enjoy being a woman," said Mrs. Savage.

In her concluding remarks, Mrs. Savage said that she disagreed with the wording of the amendment. "I think that we should leave states' rights in ERA. ERA will be fine for skilled women, but for unskilled women, it will not be so good."

Ms. Gross explained that 35 states have ratified the ERA and only three more states are needed to make it become an amendment to the constitution. She also read several cases of discrimination against sexes in many of the states.

"The North Carolina General Assembly could pass ERA for the state, but the federal government, the largest employer of women in the United States, would continue to discriminate," she said.

"It was not until after 40 years of struggle that women were given the right to vote in 1920," she added.

"With the passage of ERA, it will place the burden of non-discrimination on those who discriminate," she concluded.

Approximately 55 persons attended the forum, held in the Pitt County District Courtroom.

Greenville Police are continuing their investigation into an armed robbery at the Fast Fare on Tenth Street, just East of the Cotanche Street intersection, Tuesday night.

Another Story In Recent Data

Greenville officials — and we suppose officials in Wilson and Goldsboro, too — were astounded to find on a list of "distressed" areas compiled by a Chapel Hill graduate student based on an index.

For Greenville the ranking was impossible to comprehend in view of the city's being fourth in the state in new construction last year, with construction totalling more than $50 million.

The city seems again headed for near records in new construction this year, with the medical school building contributing heavily to the building totals. Industries expanded in 1978 and 1979 and new industries have announced they are locating here.

The day the index was publicized, statistics were released that showed the Greenville Area Transportation system had the largest increase in riders of any system in the state.

In Greenville we have become accustomed to statistics which rank the city among some of the largest metropolitan areas of the state.

In the past two decades Greenville has cleaned up most of its slum housing, its central business district has been upgraded and new commercial areas have developed, and are still developing.

There were indications in news accounts that the Southern Urban Health index was based on population growth figures from 1960 to 1970.

If that is the case, the index can be very valuable in telling us where we have been. If we wish to know where we are, and where we are going, we have to look at more recent statistics, and assess our progress from today's point of view.

Answer Is Not In Extra $22 Million

HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano, Jr. has announced a renewed campaign against alcoholism... and that is fine.

He also requested $22 million in additional spending for the campaign... that's not so fine.

Throwing more money at the problem and hiring more people is not necessarily going to do anything about alcoholism.

The National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism now spends $118 million annually.

Sec. Califano should be demanding results from the funds his department is already spending... and Congress should demand results from the secretary.

"But be of good cheer... I'm composing a little tune that should bring it under control!"

Unique Retiree Benefits Watergate Postscript

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The special interest legislative muscle of North Carolina court officials is strikingly obvious in figures detailing retirement plans for state and local governmental workers.

Judges, district attorneys, and clerks of court are getting two-to-three times the money which other retirees draw.

Some members of the General Assembly are irritated that the apparent inequity is only now coming to light. The law setting up the special retirement program was passed five years ago, but details are clear for the first time, due to a comparison study recently published by the Treasurer's Office which runs the retirement plans.

A set of complicated employee-employer contribution formulas, and equally complicated equations for figuring retirement pay, must be deciphered to understand the situation.

Close study of the columns of data produces this information:

The Match

A regular state employee or teacher, a local governmental employee, or a law enforcement officer puts in six percent of his or her salary and the employer puts up another amount — 9.12 percent for state employees and teachers; seven percent for local governments; 4.84 percent for law officers.

At retirement, the employee will draw pay based on this formula: the average salary of the four highest paid years multiplied by 1.55 multiplied by number of years. Full benefits come after 30 years at age 60, except law officers may retire at 55.

Compare court officials. The employee puts in six percent to the fund. For judges, the state puts in 30.35 percent of the salary, and for district attorneys and court clerks, the state puts in 23.69 percent and 27.6 percent respectively. At retirement, court officers get to take the "final compensation paycheck figure as the formula basis rather than the best four-year average. That means a raise the month before retirement puts the recipient in a higher category.

Averages

The average governmental retirement salary runs about $3,400. For court officials, the average runs $10,800.

A judicial officer who had a salary of $36,000 and draws full benefits would get $27,000 in retirement pay. Many collect that amount. Other government retirees in the same category would get $16,740. A $10,000 salary base would produce $7,500 in retirement for court people against $3,689 for others.

How did this occur? Time dims the reasons, but insiders agree that heavy lobbying by the court officials and the obvious complexity and lack of understanding among legislators were major factors. Also, the influence of lawyers in the General Assembly far exceeding their numbers played a role. Those attorneys often are asked for legal advice by non-lawyer colleagues in the course of legislative work. Those attorneys like to go into a friendly courtroom with their cases back home.

Then, the base is multiplied by three for clerks, solicitors, or district court judges; by 3.5 for superior court judges; and by four for appeals and supreme court justices. Full benefits come at age 50 after 24 years.

The net result of all this is simply that the formula would pay so many court people their full salaries on retirement that the law had to specify that no more than 75 percent of full salary could be paid in retirement.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Seven years after it all began, the spring brings two more books about Watergate. One of these memoirs prompts a cry of scorn, the other a sigh of regret. One will be fulsomely acclaimed, the other will be widely ignored.

The first is Judge John J. Sirica's "To Set the Record Straight." It already is receiving adulatory notices warmly tracing the rise of this poor Italian boy through law school and Republican politics to a place on the federal bench. Once again we are being urged to believe that only by reason of Sirica's "courage" and "determination" were the villains of Watergate given their just desserts.

It would be pleasant if someone really would set the record straight about this tinpot tyrant. Sirica is a vainglorious poobah, as ill-tempered and autocratic as any judge since Samuel Chase of Maryland 180 years ago. When the Watergate criminal trials were assigned to him in the fall of 1972, he set out to enjoin the whole countryside with an encompassing gag order that perfectly reflected his lust for power. The order was patently absurd — it embraced even "potential witnesses" and "alleged victims" — and had to be watered down.

During the trial the following January, Sirica was seldom content to let prosecutor Earl J. Silbert do his job. He repeatedly took over the questioning, hectoring witnesses, postured to the press. Sirica's grandstand performance provoked attorney Gerald Alch to the kind of biting criticism seldom heard from a practicing lawyer about a sitting judge; he charged that Sirica "permeated the whole courtroom with prejudice."

Five of the seven defendants, it will be recalled, pleaded guilty. James McCord and Gordon Liddy were found guilty. McCord began to sing and Sirica postponed his sentencing. Libby remained, and Libby had infuriated this paragon of jurisprudence by standing upon his clear constitutional right not to be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

Hooked By The Circus

By JULES LOH

AP Special Correspondent

BARABOO, Wis. (AP) — Bob Parkinson was well past 40 when he finally realized every child's dream and joined the circus.

Not the circus of today, which would be thrill enough. The circus he joined was the circus of his boyhood: gaudy wagons, prancing Percherons, screaming calliopes, dusky odors of elephants and sawdust and canvas. The real circus.

"I got hooked when I was 11 years old," he said. "That was in 1934, in Decatur, Ill. The date was May 16."

"I had been to other circuses, but that was the one I remember best. It was the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus. Clyde Beatty was in it. I can still remember the order of march of the parade."

40 Years Ago Today

May 3, 1939

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt County health officer, returned today from the annual N.C. Health Association meeting which concluded yesterday in Greensboro. Ennett declared the session a success in many respects.

According to Ennett, probably the most important subject discussed at the meeting was a plan to put into effect in the near future a unified health service in the public schools, with the state boards of health and education coordinating efforts on the program.

Both Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, state health officer, and Dr. Clyde Erwin, state commissioner of public instruction, emphasized the importance of such coordinated efforts.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The U.S. And The Shah

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Despite a May 10 departure deadline quietly imposed on the former shah of Iran by the Bahama government, he has now been privately informed by a letter from the Carter administration that "the high probability" of anti-American reprisals in Iran rules out any early admission to the U.S.

The decision has caused anguish here. That is true not only for American politicians who feel the U.S. had a clear obligation to help its erstwhile Persian Gulf protector who repeatedly stuck his own neck out for American presidents. It is even more true for foreign governments watching the behavior of Jimmy Carter in a tight fix: would he behave in a principled fashion despite heavy political pressure both from Tehran and from shah-haters in the U.S.? Or would he duck the U.S. obligation?

A new offer of asylum by Mexico does not take the Carter administration off the hook. In one example abroad, it is known that Carter's refusal to give asylum to the shah made an impressionistic and harmful impact on the Saudi Arabian government where the U.S. connection has become frazzled.

Also, Metin Toker, a powerful Turkish senator now here to discuss deteriorating U.S.-Turkish relations with the State Department, told us that rejecting the shah under threats from Iran "guarantees your citizens now are even more likely to be mistreated, not in Tehran but everywhere."

The May 10, Bahama deadline at first hand had been perceived here as a possible break for the wandering shah by ericans ashamed at President Carter's rewriting of the ancient U.S. tradition of political asylum. With the shah's stay in the Bahamas terminating in 10 days, these Americans hoped Mr. Carter would see fit to open America's once-hospitable doors.

That is not to be, despite the Carter administration's public declaration of human rights. The unsigned letter to the shah, dated April 19, was delivered in the Bahamas before the shah learned about Mexico's willingness to accept him and his family. It informed the shah that "we do not say we would submit" to political blackmail against the U.S. by the revolutionary government of Iran — the threat of violence against American citizens in Iran unless the shah were returned forthwith for trial and probable execution in Tehran.

"But these actions would cause serious problems for all," the letter said. "We find it is in everyone's interest to wait until conditions in Iran provide a greater degree of order and security." If that was an effort to offer a delayed welcome signal, it failed. It could be many months and possibly years before the revolution in Iran is consolidated and violence ends.

Even worse are the poisoned darts being slyly tossed in the direction of the deposed

To the editor:

Recently Wichita Falls, Texas and its surrounding area was partially devastated by a tornado. Upon hearing the news at 11:00 Tuesday evening, Apr. 10, I was extremely upset as my sister and her husband live there. Attempting to get in touch with them unsuccessfully until 2 a. m., I called family members in Paris Texas, and in Tucson, Arizona, who themselves had been unable to reach Wichita Falls.

Wednesday morning I contacted the Pitt County Information Center of Library Services which had assisted me in locating agencies and persons a number of times before. Ms. Carolyn Hibbard suggested that she contact Ham operators in the area and referred me to Bob Knapp, a retired businessman and member of Bright Leaf Amateur Radio Club. Mrs. Knapp talked with me, suggesting that she would contact Jack Bone of Rocky Mount, another member of the same group. Since Mr. Knapp was not at home, she felt immediate action was expedient. I mentioned that I would take care of any expense involved, such as phone calls, but she would not discuss this at all.

In the meantime, my relatives in Paris, Texas had learned through efforts of their county attorney that my sister and her husband were not on the injured or dead list. While this was comforting, I needed to learn more to be satisfied. My niece in Tucson, Ariz. called on Thursday to assure me that she had called continuously until she finally talked to my sister and to her husband that morning. Great as this news was, I wanted to hear their voices, and on Friday afternoon, Apr. 13, I was able to do just this.

Both good friends and people I did not know at all helped me to endure this harrowing experience.

To the editor:

I just returned from a very inspiring experience. Art work of many elementary students from the Pitt County System is on display at the Greenville Art Center through May 8. It is obvious that our young artists are developing their skills very rapidly. Until three years ago our boys and girls did not have instruction in art. Today we are fortunate and so pleased to have this opportunity for them. Our principals and teachers have given great assistance to nine art teachers who are just super-super persons. I sincerely want to commend Rudy Hofheinz, Joanne Robertson, Marsha Hemby, Becky Thomas, Ron Swartz, Mary Helen Rountree, Freddie Outerbridge, Mary Waters, and Annette Brooks.

I issue a special plea to parents of students who have art work on exhibit. You owe it to your children to show interest in them and their work by visiting the Art Center.

Productivity Gains Slowing

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Productivity is the efficiency with which goods and services are produced. A diligent work force contributes to it. So does the wise use of capital. Innovative management is a factor too.

It's a word once automatically associated with the American experience of producing high-quality goods at great speed and low cost.

No accident. Historians say it developed because of a spirited, mobile workforce, a willingness to take risks, big investments, innovative technology, creative management, and a supportive government.

Now listen to the economists: American productivity gains during the past decade have been among the lowest of major industrial nations, less than a third the increases in Japan and The Netherlands.

The numbers tell a story of why some American goods fail to compete abroad, why the dollar's value has fallen, why inflation rages.

From 1967 to 1977, output per manhour (a measure of productivity) rose at an annual rate of 7.9 percent in The Netherlands, 7.5 in Japan, 5.5 in West Germany, 5.4 in France, 4.9 in Italy and 3.6 in Canada.

In the United States the rate slugged along at about 2.4 percent, just a fraction of a percent above that of the United Kingdom. Last year it fell to under 1 percent. This year it has gone below zero.

Has something happened to America? A lot. So much that you hardly know how to explain. If a discussion of inflation is a can of worms, then a discussion of productivity drops one into a snakepit of emotions.

Among the accusations made: Unions are restrictive, management fears risks, the work ethic is unappreciated, government is interfering, industries are monopolistic, bankers have too much control of money.

The list continues: Big business crushes small, innovative concerns. Taxes have made capital formation, or savings, almost impossible, leaving companies without funds to modernize. And on and on.

So complex does it become that when you trace the accusations you find them interrelated, part of a web in which strands connect almost visibly to blur the difference between cause and affect.

What generally is heard is only part of the story. Reginald Jones, chairman of General Electric, spoke about one aspect a few weeks ago, when he said foreigners now receive 37 percent of all U.S. patents.

"It is not happenstance," he said that in 1960 the comparable figure was just 20 percent. Foreigners, he said now spend much more on new ventures, new technology, new plant and equipment, he said.

What would be his solution to this aspect of productivity? A better attitude by government, he said, explaining that in his view the antitrust laws and their interpretation discouraged innovation.

The attitude would include tax relief, more "realistic" regulation, more research grants to universities, and improved patent protection. The result, he indicated, would be technological innovation.

Strength For Today

IF CHRIST CAME TODAY

Have you ever wondered what the revelation God made through Jesus Christ would be like if it had been made in the 20th century instead of at the beginning of the first century?

Suppose Christ had been sent as a little baby about 1945 and had risen from the dead about thirty years later. Suppose you had talked with Him. Your memory would be of a man dressed in a business suit taking part in life as we live it, going to baseball and football games, being welcomed as a guest at dinner parties. He would touch illness and it would disappear. He would preach, sometimes in pulpits, but more often in the open field or on street corners. And some would be impressed by him and some would be made angry.

It by no means demeans Jesus to imagine Him living as we do. His career two thousand years ago shows that He would be in, but not of the world; an inhabitant and savior of it at the same time.

shah by high officials here. The shah gave the U.S. extraordinary help that could have come from nowhere else during his long reign. In the Arab-Israeli war of 1973, for example, the shah secretly dispatched oil that enabled the U.S. carrier task force to continue patrolling the Indian Ocean. He also sent his army to the border of Iraq during that same October war to tie down Iraqi troops and prevent their use against Israel.

"Sure," said one diplomatic official, "but he made us pay through the nose for his kindness." Another criticized the shah for killing so much time in Egypt after his Jan. 16 departure from Tehran. "He was hoping to be called back," he said. "If he had come here right away, we would have let him in."

That may be true, but it is revealingly self-serving and implies that the shah had no right to hope that he might yet have maneuvered himself back to power. The shah showed multiple weaknesses — of character, of will, of nerve — during his last days in Tehran. But that has nothing to do with the political decisions made here that blocked his entry to the U.S. in violation of what a House foreign affairs subcommittee (in Feb. 4, 1971, report) called "the long-established American principle of asylum."

Barring last-minute change, the unfortunate shah and his family are now headed for residence in Mexico. But the way he got there has gravely damaged the U.S. with its dwindling band of friends abroad, and struck yet another blow to Carter's once-acclaimed policy of human rights.

"I watched it pass down El Dorado Street and then I ran to the corner of Wood and Water streets and stood in front of the Orlando Hotel and watched it again. I can see it still."

Bob Parkinson is the librarian and historian at the Circus World Museum, a 40-acre anachronism on the banks of the Baraboo River in Wisconsin's rolling countryside, a place where those rich memories of more innocent times remain intact for all.

The town, Baraboo, was the family home of an immigrant harness maker, August Ringling, and his sons, John, Charles, Alf, Al and Otto. The Ringling brothers.

A dozen or so of the museum's 27 buildings are the very ones the brothers used as winter quarters for their traveling circus. Baraboo was home for them from the time they started it, in 1884, with nine farm wagons and one tent, until they moved it to Florida, in

Kilpatrick Col. . . .

Sirica could not stand this affront to his overblown ego. He hit Liddy with the kind of sentence made famous by Torquemada — up to 20 years in prison, plus a $40,000 fine, for a two-bit conspiracy to commit burglary in which no one was injured and nothing was stolen. This spiteful vengeful sentence was characteristic of justice by Maximum John. But his book will be petted and stroked.

You will not hear so much about Maurice Stans' "The Terrors of Justice." Stans has pretty well dropped out of sight. He was a New York investment banker who came to the Eisenhower administration as budget director and served Nixon as secretary of commerce. He was chief fund raiser for the campaigns of 1968 and 1972. He now lives in retirement in Los Angeles; he was 71 in March.

Stans is a proud man, stiff, reserved, impeccably starched and pressed. It is hard to feel much sympathy for many of the rogues, freebooters and opportunists who wound up with a Watergate brand, but Stans was different. He was a man of honor, and there never was a shred of credible evidence to connect him to the burglary attempt. Stans disbursed money on authorized vouchers, the obedient banker, the meticulous steward. In the end, after his name had been dragged in and out of the Vesco affair, he finally pleaded guilty to a handful of highly technical violations of regulations having to do with campaign accounting. The offenses were rather less serious than tickets for overparking.

Stans' book is a pathetic work. It suffers woefully for want of an editor who might have told him that "media" is plural, that "imply" and "infer" are not the same thing, and that one ought not to write "less than" when what is meant is "fewer than." There is little to indicate that an editor ever put a pencil to his manuscript.

Nevertheless, as a cry of pain for himself and for a host of others stained by Watergate, this sad memoir carries a punch. Remember the innocent, he pleads. Not everyone identified with Watergate was a crook. The scales of justice in this period were set lightly for Democrats, but they weighed heavily upon Republicans.

With tedious, repetitive documentation, Stans makes his painful case. His prayer is to win back "my own good name." His book will help.

Twenty-four physics instructors from colleges in nine states will participate in a solar energy institute at East Carolina University June 4-15.

The event, a Faculty Institute on Solar Energy, is supported by the U.S. Department of Energy and hosted by ECU's Department of Physics. Drs. Carl Adler and J. William Byrd of the ECU physics faculty will direct the program.

Purpose of the institute is to develop a corps of solar energy resource persons among higher education personnel for the dissemination of solar energy information to consumers.

The two-week program will include lecture and laboratory activities on practical aspects of solar energy use: solar radiation, energy conversion and transfer, heat load calculations, collector design and choice of materials, energy collection system performance, passive solar systems, commercial equipment, and solar electricity.

Participants in laboratory sessions will work with solar instruments, liquid and hot air solar collectors, solar storage alternatives and photovoltaic devices.

East won the king and noted the fall of the queen. If that was an honest card, there were no more tricks to be had from the heart suit. With solid spades and the ace-king of clubs, declarer would probably have leaped to four spades rather than three, so the defenders could expect one trick from those suits. Therefore, if the contract were to be defeated, diamonds would have to furnish two tricks — and those tricks would have to come quickly, before declarer could obtain any discards on the clubs.

For the defenders to make two diamond tricks, declarer would have had to start with at least three diamonds. So, since the only way must be the right one, East shifted to the jack of diamonds at trick two!

Declarer was left without recourse. He won the diamond in dummy with the queen and ran the nine of spades. West won the king and promptly reverted to a diamond through dummy's king. East's ace-ten scored two tricks for a one-trick set.

Observe that the diamond suit had to be attacked at trick two. With any other defense, declarer will have time to concede a trick to the king of spades, draw trumps and discard a diamond on the fourth club. Time was of the essence.

Planning Body...

session, commissioners gave their endorsement of an amendment to the city's subdivision ordinance that would allow developers alternatives to putting up obligation bonds as guarantees that subdivision improvements would be completed.

In considering the amendment, the board will recommend adoption of a "waiver of the bond requirement" amendment by the City Council.

However, Roberson indicated following last night's meeting that he felt that prior to the Council receiving the proposed amendment, the final draft should be presented to the planning board for consideration in order to give the general public the opportunity to comment or ask questions on the document.

Roberson said that the amendment will be brought back to the planning board at the regular May meeting and then it would probably be forwarded to the Council.

Mayor Percy Cox concurred and indicated that he would prefer that the Council receive the amendment in its final form as recommended by the planning board. He said that if any revisions are necessary, they should be considered by the planning commission prior to forwarding to the Council.

Present subdivision requirements stipulate that cash bond will be put up by developers to guarantee completion of improvements but it was pointed out that the bond provision has not been enforced.

Local developers have contended that in all of the years of subdivision building here, only one instance has arisen where a developer defaulted on improvements. They questioned why the city has decided to seek to enforce the ordinance now.

The amendment, according to Roberson, would offer developers alternatives to the obligation bond requirement so that final subdivision maps could be recorded on schedule and lots could be sold.

The alternatives to the bond requirement, he said, could be: provision of an irrevocable letter of credit; a second deed of trust for the amount of the improvements; a certified check for 100 percent of the improvements; an escrow deposit; or a performance bond.

Roberson said that the city has been receiving calls from residents complaining about improvements not being completed.

The ordinance amendment was not scheduled as part of the regular agenda.

In another matter not on the scheduled agenda, commissioners agreed that the developers of Woodridge Apartments, located west of Courtland Road, would be able to submit a revised final plat for the development at the next meeting.

At the commission meeting last week, commissioners voted to turn down the preliminary plat of Woodridge due to questions regarding access to the property from a dedicated street. It was felt that the property did not meet the requirement of having 60 feet abutting a dedicated street.

Roberson said last night that it was pointed out since the meeting last week that the footage is measured from the minimum building setback line instead of from the property line. The development would probably meet the abutting provision using the setback line measurement, it was noted.

The revised final plat will contain a provision for easement rerouting in order for Greenville Utilities to have access to the townhouse development.

Commissioners tabled action until the next meeting on a request by Donnie Dixon for rezoning 18 acres on the east side of State Road 1204 some 1,400 feet south of the NC 43 intersection, from RA-20 to R-6.

The matter was tabled in view of the announcement that the Department of Transportation has rescinded conditional approval of sections of two subdivisions in the area due to D.O.T. approval of the relocation of US 264. Commissioners felt last night that D.O.T. should be consulted before action on the Dixon request is taken.

A request by David Evans Sr., with Leroy Cherry serving as agent, for rezoning 31 acres on the west side of 14th Street Extension from RA-20 to R-6 was also tabled.

Several property owners from neighboring Brook Valley were on hand for the meeting and objections were voiced to the request for rezoning. A protest petition signed by Westchester Drive residents was presented to the board.

Roberson said that he would recommend a phased rezoning rather than rezoning the entire tract to R-6. He said that he would favor staging the zoning from R-6 on the front of the property back to RA-20 on the Brook Valley side.

Cherry noted that a lower density development than Windy Ridge across the street from the property was planned and he added that a buffer would be left on the Brook Valley side of the property.

Approval was given by commissioners to:

— Final plat of Lot two, Block J, Section 1 of Stonestrow Subdivision, located north of NC 43 across from the new hospital;

— Preliminary plat of United Industrial Park, located on State Road 1579 between the Fieldcrest Mills property and the Sheltered Workshop; and the — Preliminary plat of Quail Ridge, located on State Road 1704 across from Windy Ridge, with easement stipulations.

Action on the preliminary plat of the Harry A. Hardee property in the vicinity of Bell's Fork was tabled for six months upon the request of the developer, and action on a request by H & H Development Co. for rezoning 9.1 acres on the south side of NC 33 across from Country Square Estates from R-6 to Neighborhood Commercial was tabled for 30 days.

Discussion on signs in the Downtown Commercial Fringe was tabled by the board for 60 days.

Outdated Data Said Applied In Southern Urban Health 'Index'

Reserpine Risk Is Questioned

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Reports that a drug used to control high blood pressure may cause cancer in humans probably should not be taken seriously, a former president of the American Cancer Society said Wednesday.

Dr. Wayne Rundles said initial reports on the drug reserpine are very preliminary and lack sufficient detail.

The benefits of the drug, which is marketed under a number of brand names, "are so great and the hazards are so questionable" that patients on the medication should not stop taking it, he said.

Government sources reported last week that National Cancer Institute had found that reserpine causes cancer in animals and may cause cancer in man.

Rundles, who is a professor of medicine at Duke University Medical School, said he knows of no one who has developed cancer from taking reserpine or any other drug used to control high blood pressure.

Rundles joined the institute itself in warning against discontinuing use of the drug.

Paul Van Nevel, the cancer institute's associate director, said, "The risk to life from untreated high blood pressure, which causes stroke, heart disease and kidney failure, far exceeds the potential risk of cancer."

The largest-selling product containing reserpine is CIBA-GEIGY Corp.'s Ser-Ap-Es. A spokesman for the company said laboratory procedures used in the cancer institute study were inadequate and the conclusions were inaccurate.

Reserpine occurs naturally in the plant rauwolfia. It has been used for centuries as a tranquilizer and hallucinogen.

The Southern Urban Health Index study of UNC graduate student Mary Dodson, released Monday at a conference in Asheville, has evoked a response from another Greenville source.

Jerry Powell, chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday stated that "outdated is the best way to describe the information included in the Southern Urban Health Index prepared by UNC graduate student Mary Dodson. "The Index," Powell said, "included Greenville and five other North Carolina cities as the state's most disadvantaged cities."

Powell points out "the information included in the report was based on factors such as housing, population, poverty, and employment. The report was based on statistics from nine to 19 years old, for the period between 1960 and 1970.

"Greenville," Powell adds, "is currently considered as the third fastest growing city in the state—third only to Charlotte and Raleigh. In 1978, an estimated 25 new families moved to the Greenville area each week."

Other factors noted by Powell is that "unemployment is down in Greenville and the city officials have done much to improve housing in the area. Greenville does not have a slum or Harlem situation, and continued housing improvements are taking place."

Powell mentioned that the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce has statistical indicators which show Greenville's current growth and projected future expansion.

Eve Of 'Three Faces' To Speak Here May 22

Chris Costner Sizemore, the Eve of "Three Faces of Eve" who eventually experienced 22 different personalities, will speak here Tuesday, May 22, at 8 p. m.

The appearance, sponsored by the Mental Health Association in Pitt County and co-sponsored by the ECU Dept. of Psychology, the ECU School of Allied Health, and the Pitt Co. Interagency Council, will be held in the Belk Building (School of Allied Health) Auditorium on Charles Street.

Mrs. Sizemore, now promoting her book, "I'm Eve," written with her cousin, Dr. Elen Sain Pittillo who knew her during her turbulent years, is an Edgefield, S. C. native whose father was from North Carolina. Her multiple personality was diagnosed in 1952 in Augusta, Ga. by Drs. Corbett Thigpen and Dr. Hervey Cleckley, who wrote the book, "The Three Faces of Eve," a best seller and a movie precursor. She later exhibited numerous other personalities, but managed to stay married to "a very understanding husband of 25 years." Don Sizemore, The resolution to her illness came in June, 1974 under the care of Dr. Tibor Ham of Vienna, Va. and Dr. Tony Tsitos of Annandale, Va.

The mother of two grown children and grandmother of two, she has been lecturing since 1975 and displaying and selling art work for two years. She is now working on a book of poetry, "The Attic Child," and a series of paintings for wood carvings for hand-pulled prints, also titled, "The Attic Child." She and her husband and son live in Herndon, Va., where he is an electrician. Mrs. Sizemore's lecture is free and open to the public and is an activity of the Mental Health Association in Pitt County's observance of Mental Health Month.

Area Consumer Interest Group Organizes Here

The Consumer Interest Group of the Greenville/Pitt County area met Tuesday at the Planters National Bank conference room to finalize plans for organization.

Mary Kilpatrick Ferguson was elected president of the Consumer Council, with Evelyn Spangler as secretary. A nominating committee, composed of members Benjamin Braswell, Faye Brown, and Mary Williams, was elected to present a slate of candidates for vacant offices.

Council member Dr. Vila Rosenfeld, who chairs the Home Economics Education Department at East Carolina University, has pointed out that consumer education is important, for it gives the consumer the best protection against himself.

"People need to consider how much credit to involve themselves in and how important purchases are with relation to values and financial stability," Dr. Rosenfeld said.

The following possible goals were outlined by President Ferguson: to plan and conduct mini-workshops and consumer programs in areas throughout Greenville and Pitt County; to provide an answering service for consumer problems and complaints to be dealt with by consumer specialty groups; to serve as a consultant for surrounding counties interested in forming similar organizations; to communicate consumer tips to the

House Barely Approves Only Attorneys As Judges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposed constitutional change that would allow only attorneys to be North Carolina judges barely won final House approval Wednesday and advanced to the Senate.

The measure won just three votes more than the 72 — or three-fifths majority — needed for House approval. It had carried a more comfortable 79-36 margin on tentative approval Tuesday.

If approved by 30 members of the 50-member Senate, the proposed amendment would be subject to ratification by a statewide vote before it is added to the North Carolina Constitution.

Approval came after lengthy debates both days. Opponents said it was wrong to establish an educational requirement for judges and said they feared the proposal would take away the people's choice in some cases.

"Our system has been good," Rep. Sam Bundy, D-Pitt. "All of a sudden we want to make judgeships a closed shop."

Bundy said if the legislature were going to require judges to be lawyers, it should require the state commissioner of agriculture to be a farmer, the superintendent of public instruction to be a teacher and the state auditor a certified public accountant.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, a lawyer, said attorneys were more qualified to rule on legal matters. "We are not speaking from the standpoint of a closed shop," he said. "To render a decision you must have knowledge of the subject matter."

In other legislative action: UNC TV

The House voted tentative approval to a bill that would restructure the University of North Carolina television network. The bill would establish a separate board of trustees for the TV system, a move backers say will give it more visibility and allow more money to be raised for public television in North Carolina. The vote was 94-4.

Sentencing
The Hunt administration's uniform sentencing bill won final Senate approval Wednesday and was sent to the House. Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, failed to offer amendments that would reduce the severity of sentences included in the bill, as he had planned.

Supporters of efforts to reduce the sentence length said the amendments would be offered in the House.

The bill would narrow judges' discretion in sentencing by specifying prison terms for each crime. To vary from the expected sentence, a judge would have to give his reasons in writing.

Beach Tax
The Senate Finance Committee approved and sent to the full Senate a bill that would allow the towns of Wrightsville Beach and Carolina Beach to levy an additional 1 percent sales tax, if the towns' voters also approve.

The extra tax would be used to finance beach erosion control projects. The measure has already been approved by the House.

If it is approved in the Senate, those two towns will be the only areas in North Carolina where a 5 percent sales tax is levied. The state has a 3 percent sales tax, and 99 counties levy a 1 percent local-option sales tax to raise money for local purposes.

Divorce
A House committee sent to the full chamber a Senate-passed measure that would cut in half the separation period required in order to get a divorce. Current law requires a couple to be separated for one year before obtaining a divorce.

Insurance
The House Insurance Committee unanimously approved a bill that would require insurance policies to be more readable. The bill, sponsored by Rep. Marilyn Bissell, R-Mecklenburg, would establish minimum standards for language used in insurance policies and contracts.

Land
Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, filed a resolution in the Senate calling for public referendums before tracts of land larger than 30 acres can be taken by the state or federal government for wildlife preserves, parks or other recreational uses.

The measure could potentially effect the federal government's efforts to make part of the Outer Banks in Currituck County part of national seashore system.

New Bills
Among bills filed were: —House and Senate bills that would make it a misdemeanor to go on a parking lot when the business owning the lot is closed.

—A House bill that would require adults and juveniles convicted of malicious destruction of personal property to make restitution in accordance with their financial ability.

—A Senate bill creating a statewide board and school administrative unit to govern the North Carolina Schools for the Deaf and the Governor Morehead School.

—A Senate bill that would allow a widow to resume her maiden name or the name of a former husband at any time after she is widowed.

—A joint resolution urging the International Whaling Commission to adopt a 10-year moratorium on the needless slaughter of whales.

Open House

The Pitt Co. Mental Health Center will have Open House Monday, May 14, from 5 to 7 p. m.

The public is encouraged to come to the center at 306 Stanstonsburg Road, adjacent to the Pitt Co. Memorial Hospital to tour the center, meet the staff, and learn more about service and programs offered at the center.

Public awareness of mental health services is being encouraged, according to Dr. Robert Ratcliffe, medical director. The full staff of the center will be available to meet citizens and share information about programs and center outreach endeavors.

According to Stephen K. Creech, area director, the original Pitt Co. Mental Health Clinic opened in 1956. A building opened in July, 1958, as the original Pitt Co. Mental Health Center was the first building in North Carolina built as a mental health outpatient clinic.

The present Center was completed Mar. 15, 1976 and dedicated the following May. Open house will mark the third anniversary of the completion of the building, Dr. Creech said.

No Bidders In Big Tax Sale

ATLANTA (AP) — A million-dollar dream house for $12,200? It sounds too good to be real, but it was for that amount in back taxes that convicted pornographer Mike Thevis' Tudor-style mansion was put on the auction block this week.

The only catch was that the buyer of the lien had only the slimmest chance of ever owning the property.

For that and possibly other reasons, no one bought the house when it was put up for auction on the steps of the Fulton County Courthouse.

"It's a secured lien," Fulton County tax official Ernest Cook said Wednesday. "We have no right to the property for at least one year. He (Thevis) has one year and 45 days to redeem the property for the amount of tax owned plus 10 percent."

It is generally assumed that Thevis has more than enough resources to pay the back taxes, and a representative of the one-time pornographer king is expected to satisfy the debt in a few days.

Although investors would have little chance of owning the mansion, they could have picked up a quick $1,220, which is the amount Thevis must pay above the tax owed to redeem the home, Cook said.

But there were no bidders. "Some of the people at the sale told me they were afraid of it and of him," said Cook, who conducted the sale Tuesday.

Thevis is currently in custody at the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary awaiting trial on a series of federal racketeering charges in connection with his alleged effort to seize control of the nation's pornography business through murder, fire bombings and strong-arm tactics.

Cook said the county ended up buying its own lien on the 14-room home located in a fashionable northwest Atlanta neighborhood.

The house, presently occupied by Thevis' former wife, has been appraised for tax purposes at about $750,000. "But just looking at it, I'd say it's probably worth more," Cook said.

In 1974, Thevis attempted to donate the home to the city of Atlanta. At that time, published reports put the value of the house, which sits on a four-acre tract and includes a swimming pool, at $3.3 million.

Another Look At N.C. By The National Geographic

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It has been 17 years since the National Geographic called North Carolina the "Dixie Dynamo" and Malcolm Ross ended his feature article with the statement that North Carolina was "bright with sun and promise."

In the next year or so, the widely read journal will take another look at North Carolina, and one of the questions that it may answer is whether the Tar Heel state has lived up to its promise of 1962.

The answer will be provided by a native son who was called Strawberry (for the color of his hair) when he wrote part time for the News and Observer more than a quarter of a century ago.

Whether Neil Morgan disproves Tom Wolfe's assertion that "you can't go home again," he is certainly having fun attempting to do just that. He and his journalist wife, Judith, are roaming the state, imbibing the atmosphere that he left during World War II.

The 55-year-old Smithfield native got to know Eastern North Carolina first hand while growing up as the son of a popular Baptist preacher, the Rev. Samuel Lewis Morgan, who died at Wake Forest in 1972 at the age of 100.

The elder Morgan wrote often for state newspapers and journals — "one of the best reporters," Neil wrote in dedicating his most popular book, "Westward Tilt," to his father.

Neil carried on a dizzying schedule while a student at Wake Forest College. He made Phi Beta Kappa, edited the campus magazine and cut his journalistic teeth on the News and Observer. A fellow reporter, Jim Cheney, recalls that the student "moved like a writer who would go places."

And go places he did. The Navy took him to the west coast, and some strange lure kept him there.

He took a job on the San Diego Daily Journal, soon became a favorite columnist, and in 1959 switched to the San Diego Evening Tribune, where he is now associate editor. His syndicated column has appeared in about 40 newspapers, and he has won the Ernie Pyle and Bill Corum memorial awards.

Then came a dozen books. "My San Diego" and "Crosstown" contained collections of his columns; "It Began With a Roar" told the story of the famous San Diego Zoo; "The Pacific States" was a volume in the popular Time-Life series.

A poker game in Las Cruces spurred him to undertake his most widely read book. That night he and his partner, James A. Michener, discussed their interpretations of the far west. They discovered that each planned a book on the subject.

Wrote Michener, "I also discovered that he had already assembled most of the information that I was going to have to ferret out. And his generalizations were so perceptive and precise that I suggested he write the book and not I." Instead, Michener prepared the preface to the volume that appeared in 1963.

The title came from Frank Lloyd Wright's theory that America had tilted and everything loose was sliding into California. Morgan said that more people had moved to California since World War II than had immigrated into the United States from abroad throughout its entire history.

For Tar Heels who think that "Nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina," the book ended with a worrisome sentiment: "I love the West. I love its hard-bitten scenic majesty, its eagerness, its friendliness, its unconquerable faith in itself."

Morgan's love for that third of the nation lying between the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean has not waned, but those interviewed by him recently observed an unmistakable trait of a true North Carolinian.

It showed most clearly when he talked of growing up during the depression, of his days on his grandfather's farm in Bladen County, of the small North Carolina towns in which he lived as a preacher's son.

His enthusiasm quickened when he talked of his father's carefully preserved handwritten journal, which, with his own diary begun as a boy, records life in Eastern North Carolina for over half a century.

One of these days, he promises, he is going to write a book based on those manuscripts.

In the meantime, though, he is busily gathering data for the National Geographic article — renewing old acquaintances, making new ones, feeling the pulse of his native state and applying an objective measurement to the changes that have come about since he left it a quarter of a century ago.

Just as Malcolm Ross's article in 1962 helped form a national image of North Carolina as the "Dixie Dynamo," Neil Morgan's assessment in 1979 will probably reflect just how far and in what direction his native state has moved in the intervening 17 years.

make that assessment than among us but who has watched one who was born and raised from afar for 25 years.

Dividends Are Soaring Today

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

The stock market may not be soaring these days, but common stock dividends are. Fifty billion dollars of corporate funds were paid as dividends in 1978, a 14 percent gain over the 1977 figure and double what was paid in 1972.

In relative terms, the 100 percent increase in dividends since 1972 compares with a 60 percent rise in the Consumer Price Index in the same period.

The absolute yield level has risen as well. The S&P 500 yield was recently at the 5.4 percent level compared with less than 4 percent in 1976.

The number of dividend increases continues to set records. In 1978, there were 3,211 dividend increases compared with 2,964 the previous year. And in the first quarter of 1979, 903 increases were announced, a new quarterly record.

Yields rise when dividends increase faster than stock prices, and stock prices are not rising much. The S&P 500 is still below the level reached last September when dividends were lower than today.

There are many uncertainties facing the stock market today which could account for its recent performance, but a major reason has to be the gap between yields on common stocks and interest rates paid on alternate investments.

In the early 1950's, the yield on common stocks was more than two percentage points higher than interest on AAA corporate bonds. Since 1959, interest has exceeded stock yields, last month by more than four percentage points. Thus the attraction of stocks from a current yield point of view is considerably lessened.

There are differences in bonds and stocks that make stocks more attractive, however. Ownership of stock is ownership of a corporation's assets, which should appreciate in inflationary times. And with common stock, both share price and yield can rise, while with a bond the price of the bond must fall for the yield to rise.

The absolute level of income from a bond will not change, but common stock dividends are expected to continue to grow. Corporate earnings have risen more sharply than dividends in the recent past. Over the last three years, however, the payout ratio averaged only 42 percent, a rate reached only twice in the past eight years.

Shareholders are showing a decided preference for dividend growth, and the attitude of corporate managements is to accommodate them. A recession will probably not slow the growth of dividends. In the last recession, dividends rose 11.5 percent overall.

Interest rates usually peak after a recession sets in, and then begin a decline. Common stock dividends are expected to continue to increase, with the result that the gap between yields on fixed income securities and common stocks could narrow significantly, possible setting the stage for a new bull market.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in moderate trading today, despite a new report showing another large increase in wholesale prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 4.76 to 860.27 in the first two hours of trading after ending unchanged in the previous session. Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 3-2 margin in a noon tally of New York Stock Exchange trading.

Analysts said the .9 percent rise, at a 10.8 percent annual rate, in producer prices in April was within a range most traders had expected.

The NYSE composite index added 22 to 57.56. Big Board volume was a moderate 13.65 million shares at midday against 13.02 million in the previous session.

Among the actively traded NYSE issues, Ramada Inns rose 1/4 to 14 1/2. Ramada said its proposal for a casino in Atlantic City, N.J. had been approved by the city planning board and other approvals needed for construction could come this month.

Among other gambling related issues, Holiday Inns gained 1/2 to 21 1/2; Bally rose 1 1/2 to 79 1/2; Del E. Webb rose 1 1/2 to 20 1/2; and Playboy Enterprises added 1/2 to 23.

General Public Utilities tumbled 1/4 point to 10 1/2 as the second most active issue at midday. The utility is seeking about $450 million in credit to help cover the cost of the nuclear accident at its Three Mile Island plant.

Smithkline rose 2 1/4 to 91 in active trading after tumbling 5 1/2 points in the previous session. The company said it received approval from the Food and Drug Administration to market a new drug to lower blood pressure. On Wednesday its stock fell sharply on a report in medical journal raising questions about the effects of an ulcer drug.

 On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .55 to 184.83.

Riley, 20, was released by mistake Tuesday from Graterford Prison and was given a ride into Philadelphia by a sheriff's deputy.

After learning on a television newscast that he was wanted for escape, Riley voluntarily returned to custody, police said. He took a taxi to the city's detention center.

Riley, who was serving a 22-to-45 year sentence after being convicted of robbery, attempted murder, assault and weapons charges, was not charged with escape. There was no immediate word on what his return trip cost.

Philadelphia Common Pleas Judge Fred DiBona said someone apparently was confused by his order that Riley's sentence be vacated and a new sentence determined. Riley was to have been jailed pending a June 4 hearing but the order apparently was misplaced, DiBona said. "You can't blame him," said DiBona. "He was told he could go and he went."

The allegedly contaminated road oil was found in Corrigan, a community in Wilson's congressional district.

The state Department of Water Resources has found 15 sites in southeast Texas where possibly contaminated sludge was spread on roadbeds. The road oil was available free from one of the state's largest waste disposal firms, and most went to subdivision developers.

Water Utility System In Pitt Cited By EPA

The Environmental Protection Agency has announced that 43 North Carolina water utility systems — including one in Pitt County — have failed to meet Federal Safe Drinking Water regulations, and have been cited for repeatedly failing to monitor their water systems for hazardous bacterial contaminants.

The water system in Pitt cited by the EPA was identified by EPA's Atlanta office as the Sand Dunes Mobile Home Park water system at Greenville.

Included in the list also was the Mimosa Mobile Manor water system near Washington, and three systems in Carteret County, including Ballou Mobile Home Court at Morehead City, Bill's 66 Trailer Park at Newport, and Merrimon Community Water System near Beaufort.

The Safe Drinking Water Act set standards to insure the safety of water used for public consumption, and requires all public water systems to regularly sample their water for coliform or "indicator" bacteria, which come from human and animal wastes and may be found in drinking water if it is not properly treated.

EPA regional administrator John C. White said, "failing to regularly monitor drinking water means that we have no indication as to whether or not the coliform bacteria limit is being violated."

"The risk of contamination is always present," White continued, adding, "it can pose an immediate threat to the health of the citizens if it is not checked on a continual basis."

White said that although no health risk has been proven because of the violations, "the possibility of contamination is nevertheless very real" and, "the situation should be of grave concern to the customers of these water systems."

Installation ceremonies for new board officers of Greenville Moose Lodge No. 885 were held in the main ballroom of the Lodge on Saturday, April 28.

Ronald Payne was elected and installed as the new governor. Other officials elected and installed are: Jerry McLawhorn, Junior Governor; Dick McKinney, prelate; O. J. Smith, treasurer; and Richard Barnes, three-year trustee.

Ed Blanton, Deputy Supreme Governor from Charlotte performed the installation ceremony. Following the installation, members and guests were entertained by dancing to the music of the Joy Makers.

Paid For A Return Trip

Nolan Ryan Outduels Ron Guidry To Post 1-0 Win For California

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Giving up just one run and five hits, you'd normally expect to win a baseball game.

Unless, of course, the opposing pitcher is Nolan Ryan.

At the top of his form, the star of the California Angels staff is hard to beat — as he was Wednesday night. New York's Ron Guidry was as stingy as ever, yet wound up getting burned by Ryan's flame-thrower and lost a 1-0 decision in Anaheim.

"I didn't throw the ball very well at the beginning," said Ryan after his nifty six-hitter, "(but) the longer I threw, the more confidence I got."

Ryan had been removed from his last two starts because of a groin injury, but it didn't seem to bother the hard-throwing right-hander against the defending world champions.

"I wore a rubber sleeve on my right leg to keep the moisture and the heat in," noted Ryan. "It worked."

In other American League games, the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 6-1; the Boston Red Sox stopped the Oakland A's 2-1; the Baltimore Orioles routed the Seattle Mariners 9-3; the Minnesota Twins defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 7-5 and the Texas Rangers nipped the Kansas City Royals 3-2. Rain postponed the Detroit-Chicago game.

Terry Humphrey scored California's only run on a double by Jim Anderson in the third inning off Guidry, 2-2. A sellout crowd of 40,648 watched the strong pitching performance by two of baseball's best hurlers. Ryan, 4-1, struck out seven and walked two while Guidry fanned nine batters and walked three.

Humphrey singled with one away in the third inning and Guidry struck out Orlando Ramirez before Anderson doubled to left-center to score the game's lone run.

"We played the powers from the East and proved we can play with them," said Ryan, whose Angels took two out of three games from both Boston and New York. "The fans are getting confidence in us."

Brewers 6, Indians 1
Gorman Thomas slapped four singles to lead a 14-hit Milwaukee attack and Moose Haas posted his first major league victory in more than a year as the Brewers defeated Cleveland.

Haas, 1-1, struck out six, walked three, and allowed only five hits in going the distance for his first victory since April 12, 1978, before he tore a muscle in his pitching arm.

Cleveland loser Wayne Garland, 0-3, was tagged for three runs and eight hits before he was relieved by Dan Spillner with none out in the fourth.

"I'm still not all the way back, but the first step is the most important," said Haas. "I didn't let the injury get me down and I never doubted myself. I knew the muscle would heal and with a little patience and a lot of work. I knew I would get things together."

Red Sox 2, A's 1
Dwight Evans' solo home run in the eighth inning provided the winning run and Mike Torrez hurled a four-hitter as Boston beat Oakland.

One of the hits off Torrez was a homer by Jim Essian that tied the score at 1-1 in the bottom of the seventh. There were two out in the eighth when Evans connected on a 1-2 pitch from Matt Keough and hit his second homer in two games.

Evans singled in the third and scored Boston's first run.

Orioles 9, Mariners 3
Billy Smith knocked in three runs, John Lowenstein blasted a three-run homer and Mike Flanagan and Don Stanhouse combined on a seven-hitter as Baltimore beat Seattle.

Smith had a two-run single in the second and a bases-loaded RBI groundout in the fifth. The Orioles smashed 15 hits off four Mariner pitchers while winning their 13th game in the last 14. They capped their scoring with a five-run ninth, three of them on Lowenstein's blast.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 5
Ken Landreaux drove in four runs with a pair of hits, leading Minnesota past Toronto. Landreaux drove in two runs with a single in the third inning and another two runs with a double in the fifth that gave the Twins a 5-4 lead.

Ron Jackson hit a solo homer in the fourth inning for the Twins as Dave Goltz picked up his third victory in six decisions after surviving a shaky start. Mike Marshall notched his ninth save when he came on in the eighth inning to relieve Goltz.

Rangers 3, Royals 2

Al Oliver smashed a solo homer in the fifth to help Texas take a rain-soaked victory over Kansas City. The Rangers, expected to challenge Kansas City's three-year grip on the American League West, took the first season series between the rivals, 2-1.

Steve Comer scattered eight hits in 7-1 innings as a light-to-heavy rain fell steadily throughout the game. Sparky Lyle finished up for the Rangers, gaining his fourth save.

Said Oliver of his homer: "Just before I went up to the plate, I told (Mike) Jorgensen, 'The only way I'm going to get a base hit off these guys is to hit one out.' Their defense is super. They pitch me well and play me according to the way they pitch me. These guys are tough."

Not Having The Favorite Makes Trainer Become Downright Jolly

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Not having the "big" horse in the Kentucky Derby has helped trainer LeRoy Jolley's disposition. If his colt, General Assembly, springs an upset in Saturday's 105th running of the Derby, Jolley might become downright charming.

Jolley is making his fifth Derby try and has won with favored Foolish Pleasure in 1975 and finished second with another favorite, Honest Pleasure, when Bold Forbes won in 1976.

The pressure of having the Derby favorite had made LeRoy anything but jolly during those times.

The veteran trainer, however, was pleased at General Assembly's final workout Wednesday.

The son of 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat was clocked in a swift 57.5 seconds for five furlongs and 1:10.15 for six furlongs while pulling up at Churchill Downs.

"General Assembly seems to run best after he works best, somewhat like Foolish Pleasure and Secretariat," said Jolley. "General Assembly seemed to like the track. I hope the conditions Saturday are just like they were this morning."

"He looks like Secretariat and runs fast. Secretariat is the best horse I ever saw," he said.

Secretariat's final workout for the 1973 Derby also came on a Wednesday and the champion colt registered a 58.5 over a sloppy track.

"Maybe we can get history to repeat itself," said Jolley, who did not train Secretariat.

General Assembly was expected to be entered today along with favorites Spectacular Bid and Flying Paster and six other 3-year-olds for the 1 1/4-mile Derby worth $200,000 added.

Jolley also trains Sir Ivor Again, who is regarded as a Derby longshot. The Everglades winner was timed in 1:00.5 for five furlongs Wednesday, a half-hour before General Assembly took the track.

As for General Assembly's chances on Saturday, Jolley said, "I think we have a chance. Of course, I was disappointed he didn't win the Wood (Memorial), but that was a very strong field and he was beaten by only about three lengths."

General Assembly won half his six 1978 starts, which included two losses to Spectacular Bid. This year, he has won only once, the Gotham at Aqueduct, in four starts. He finished fifth in the Wood in his last start.

His career has been marked by inconsistency and there have been rumors that General Assembly has ankle problems.

Jolley denies that, saying, "If he's been hurting, I don't know about it."

Aycock Takes 40th Straight

E.B. Aycock boosted its track record to 40 straight victories yesterday by downing three opponents in a meet held here.

The Jaguars finished with 76 points, while Kinston was second with 48. New Bern had 20 and Bertie, five, in the meet.

Aycock set three new school records in the meet. Kenny Smith set a new mile mark in 4:41.5, while Chris McLawhorn broke the 400-yard dash record with a :52.26 timing. Chip Little took the 880 in 2:09 for another new record.

Smith also won the pole vault, while McLawhorn added the long jump as both were double winners.

ROSE HIGH'S BASEBALL team received a boost Tuesday night against Wilson Fike when two of its senior starters, shortstop Ronnie Chapman and first baseman Will Sanderson, returned to the dugout after being injured in the Greenville-Pitt Baseball Tournament a couple of weeks ago.

The pair, who are out of action for the season, were injured on consecutive nights in the tournament, which the Rampants won. Chapman broke his ankle in a slide and Sanderson suffered a liver injury in a collision with a runner.

Both spent several days in the hospital and Tuesday night was the first time they were both back in the Rose dugout since their injuries. The Rampants celebrated their return with a seven-run second inning against the Golden Demons. They went on to win the game 9-6, surviving a seventh-inning Fike scare.

It was the first victory for the Rampants since the tournament. They lost two Division I games in the meantime and are now 6-3 in the conference with only an outside chance at the crown.

Rocky Mount, whom Rose travels to face on Friday night, leads the league at 8-1 and Wilson Hunt is in second place with a 7-2 record. The Rampants lost to the Gryphons in their first meeting 1-0 and have split with the Warriors.

It will take some luck and hard work for Rose to rebound and take the conference title at this point.

EAST CAROLINA UNIVERSITY closes out its baseball season this weekend with games Saturday night and Sunday afternoon against powerful South Carolina at Harrington Field.

The Pirates, after splitting with N. C. Wesleyan Tuesday night, stand at 23-18 on the season. They clinched a winning year Monday night with a win over Atlantic Christian, but it has been a disappointing campaign for Monte Little and his players.

With a number of top returnees off last season's 27-18 team, the Pirates were hoping for better things this season and a possible NCAA tournament bid.

But things did not work out that way as the team hovered around the .500 mark all season and was unable to find a combination that could win consistently.

The team won't suffer too much from graduation this spring, but will be hurt by the fact that it won't be playing in a summer league. Nevertheless, maybe next season it can earn that elusive NCAA bid.

THE RAMS OF Greene Central are running away with the Eastern Carolina Conference race and a look at the league statistics shows why.

Two Rams, Al Murray and Jeff Scott, lead the league in batting averages with .471 and .441 marks, respectively. Teammate Donald Shaw is ninth on the list of the top 10 with a .371 average.

Murray and Shaw are 1-2 in runs scored, while Scott is second in RBI's.

Scott also is second in doubles and first in homers. Shaw is first in triples, while Walt Tyndall is second. Murray is second in home runs.

In addition, three of the league's top six pitchers are on the Greene Central staff, Jerry Goff with an 0.82 ERA, Ken Johnson at 1.24 and Kevin Korpi at 2.10. Johnson and Jerry Rouse are both ranked high in strikeouts with 26 and 22, respectively.

With a 10-1 record, the Rams are virtually assured of running away with the ECC crown, provided they don't fall apart in the stretch.

JV, Junior High Results

WINDSOR — E.B. Aycock Junior High School romped to a 17-0 five-inning victory over Bertie Junior High School yesterday.

Gordon Douglas tossed a no-hitter at the Bertie squad, walking one and striking out six.

Keith Phillips, Roger Williams, Bill Kittrell and Ashley Ferrell each had two hits to pace the Aycock batting.

Aycock is now 9-0 and plays host to Bertie in a rematch on Friday.

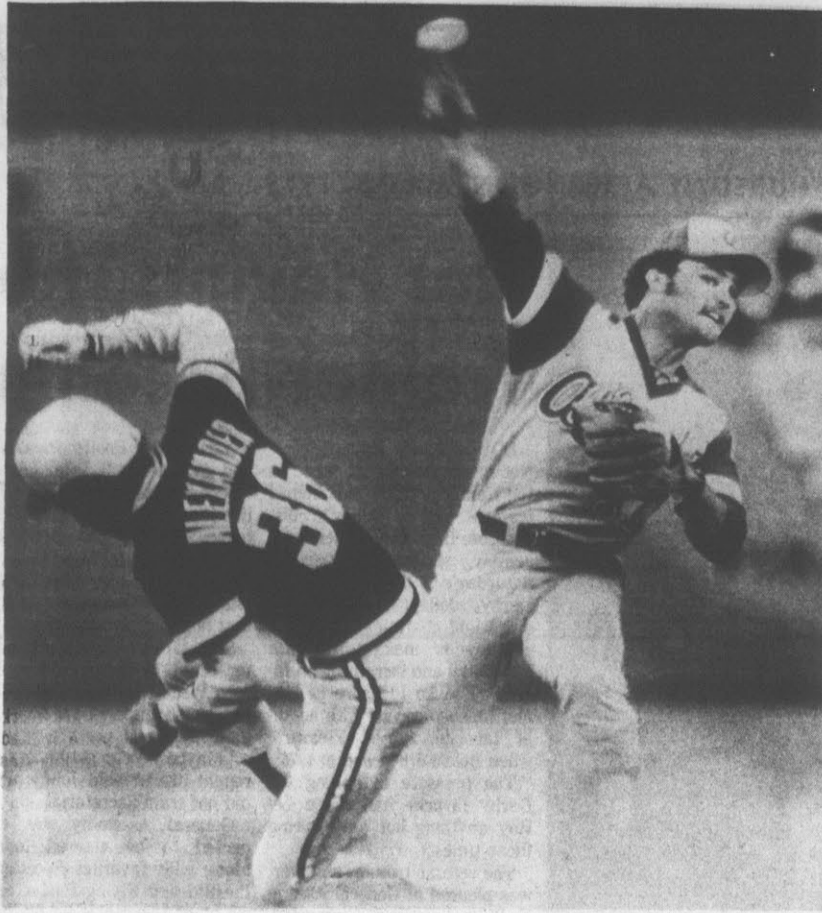

Greene Central's "B" baseball team handed Rose High School's "B" team its first loss of the season yesterday, 10-7.

Billy Dough and Paul McMillan led the Rose hitting with two to each.

The Rampant Cubs are now 6-1 on the year.

FARMVILLE — A.G. Cox and Farmville Middle School split a pair of junior high school games yesterday.

Farmville won the boys' baseball game, 14-7. Joey Steppe led the Farmville hitting with two, including a double; while Taylor Walston had two doubles, Wade Corbett had two hits, Gary Hobgood had two, one a double; Bobby Caraway had two and Alton Baker had two. Ronald Daniels had four for Cox with

For Redskins, Draft Is Just Observation

NEW YORK (AP) — The names rolled by, one by one, one dozen after another. They were duly noted by the Washington Redskins — who could do no more.

George Allen's "The future is now" philosophy came home to roost today.

While the rest of the National Football League's 28 teams went through the annual rite of rebuilding, the Redskins sat helplessly by as one blue-chipper after another went from the college ranks to the high-priced rosters of the pros.

Normally, you can count the gilt-edged players in any draft on one or, perhaps, two hands. And by the end of the second round, you can be certain virtually every star will be gone. But today, Washington had to wait until the fourth round — the 103rd player — before making its first selection. In all, Washington has only five picks in this draft, the fewest in NFL history.

Allen didn't believe in youth movements. He wanted veterans, and was willing to deal away draft choices by the bushel in order to get them. He believed in instant success. The future was, indeed, now, he believed.

But now he is gone — along with so many of the rookies that might have been his.

When he arrived in Washington in 1971, he immediately began acquiring proven talent in exchange for potential. He was looking for instant success and he got it, guiding the Redskins to the most victories they had achieved in 29 seasons and into the playoffs for the first time in 26 years.

The next year was even better — an 11-3 record, a division title, playoff victories over Green Bay and Dallas and a berth in the Super Bowl. Only a loss to the Miami Dolphins in the championship game soured that season.

Allen and the 'Skins were riding high. They had their believers. Allen's philosophy seemed to be a sound one.

But although he didn't know it, it was his last hurrah.

The Redskins had a few more winning seasons and a twice more made the playoffs. But age started to catch up with them. The veterans were perhaps a step slower, yet there was nobody faster on the bench.

The team's downfall was dramatic and after the 1977 season, Allen was dismissed.

Jack Pardee, who had breathed life into the stagnant Chicago Bears, took over. But he inherited a club in a virtual vacuum. He had almost nothing on which to build a future and paid for it last season, when the Redskins stumbled to an 8-8 record.

For the Washington Redskins, a future that never arrived may now be further away than ever.

Gant On 'Bama Pole

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Harry Gant of Taylorsville, N.C., won the pole for the Alabama NASCAR Sportsman-Grand American stock car race Saturday when his Pontiac whistled around the Alabama International Motor Speedway at a record 195.796 mph.

The previous mark set for Gant's type car was 188.185 mph, which Joe Millikan of Randleman, N.C. set last year.

Second in Wednesday's qualifying for the $72,000 event was John Anderson of Massillon, Ohio, who posted a 192.610 in his Chevrolet.

Rusty Wallace of Arnold, Mo., was third in a Pontiac, and Bobby Allison of Hueytown, Ala., was fourth in a Matador.

"Our car has run pretty good ever since we backed it off the truck Tuesday for practice," Gant said.

Robinson Has Good Time In Buc Victory

By MARV SCHNEIDER
AP Sports Writer

Pittsburgh's Bill Robinson went into the game determined to have a good time, which, lately, has been a rarity for him. But this time, he had a ball.

Robinson belted a pair of two-run homers and went 3-for-5 as Pittsburgh ripped the Atlanta Braves 10-2 Wednesday night. With two swipes of his bat, Robinson doubled his home run production for the season. "I was perfectly relaxed," he explained.

It has been a long time between laughs for the 6-foot-2, 200-pound slugger, who will be 36 next month. Last year, when he was hampered by an early-season injury, his batting average plunged 58 points below his major league high of .304 in 1977, and this spring, Robinson lost his left field job to the John Milner-Lee Lacy tandem. When he did get chances to hit, he didn't make the most of them. He took a .232 batting average into Wednesday night's game as a replacement at first base for Willie Stargell, who was resting an ailing hip.

Robinson said he made up his mind wpnz's game, that, "I was going out there and have fun. It didn't matter if I got five hits or made five outs."

Robinson's night for fun came on a relatively quiet National League program. In the only other games scheduled, the Cincinnati Reds beat the Chicago Cubs 4-1, with Mike LaCoss pitching perfect ball for the first five innings, and the St. Louis Cardinals downed Houston 5-2, scoring two runs after a fifth-inning error by Astros shortstop Craig Reynolds.

Robinson belted his first homer of the game off Mickey Mahler in the first inning after Dave Parker had doubled. "Mahler threw me a change up that came in real fat," Robinson recalled. "It went out."

He chipped in with a single in the third inning when the Pirates scored five runs and chased Mahler, then had some more fun in the fourth inning. Parker again was on base, on a fielder's choice, when Robinson slammed homer No. 2 off reliever Frank LaCorte.

Reds 4 Cubs 1
LaCoss' bid for a perfect game ended when he walked Barry Foote to start the Chicago sixth, then Ted Sizemore followed with a single. LaCoss, 2-0, gave up two more hits before leaving with two outs in the eighth. George Foster's double and Ray Knight's single drove in two of Cincinnati's runs.

"I made one or two bad pitches," said the 22-year old right-hander. "But other than that, I wasn't hit that hard."

Cardinals 5 Astros 2
Reynolds' error in the fifth set the stage for Mike Tyson to double home the tying run, and he scored on a single by Garry Templeton. John Denny, who had to pitch his way out of several jams, conceded his victory was "not a thing of beauty."

Coaches Beat Path To Door

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — All-everything scholastic basketball player Ralph Sampson has become a coach's version of a better mouse trap, and they are beating a path to his door.

The University of North Carolina coaching staff came up from Chapel Hill, N. C., Wednesday night to visit with Sampson's parents.

They missed Ralph. The 7-foot-3½ Harrisonburg High School senior and his coach, Roger Bergey, were in Victoria for a banquet.

Virginia Tech coaches get their turn tonight, and Kentucky coaches are due Friday night.

Bergey, meanwhile, said he has no intention of visiting the University of Maryland and Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell today.

Driesell reportedly has offered to hire Bergey as his top assistant if he can persuade Sampson to accept a scholarship to play basketball for the Terapins.

Bergey said Wednesday, "I'm not going to College Park tomorrow. I am going to see Ralph Sampson through this recruiting period. Then, if any schools still want to talk to me about a coaching position, I'll be glad to talk to them."

Driesell has made it clear he would like to acquire the services of Sampson, probably the most heavily recruited high school basketball player in the nation this year. He averaged more than 30 points and 20 rebounds a game this past season in leading his team to the state Group AA championship. Dozens of colleges entered the Sampson sweepstakes, but Sampson, with counseling from Bergey, has narrowed the field to the University of Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virginia Tech.

Virginia, Maryland and Wake Forest reportedly have talked to Bergey about the possibility of an assistant coaching job. Bergey said the schools initiated the contact, Virginia has since hired an assistant coach.

Ralph's mother, Sarah Sampson, said the family asked the UNC coaching staff to visit here because Sampson's parents were unable to travel to Chapel Hill when their son made his official visit to the UNC campus last month.

She said when Virginia Tech and Kentucky learned the North Carolina coaches had been invited to Harrisonburg they asked if they could visit.

So, she said, "We thought it was only fair to let them come, too."

She said Virginia coaches were not invited because Virginia Coach Terry Holland had visited her son twice this week at the high school.

Roanoke Tops Ahoskie, 7-6

ROANOKE — Roanoke High School pushed over a run in the sixth inning to break a tie with Ahoskie and gain a 7-6 baseball victory yesterday.

Ahoskie scored first, getting two runs in the first. Kenneth Spivey singled and Johnny Murray slapped a two-run homer.

Roanoke came back with one in the bottom of the first. Anthony Latham doubled and scored on a hit by Street Lee.

In the second, Roanoke added two more for a 3-2 lead: Wesley Johnson reached on an error and Will Harris got a hit. Latham singled in Johnson and Glen Cargile reached on an error, scoring Harris.

Ahoskie came back with two in the top of the third to regain the lead, 4-3. Curtis Bond led off with a home run and Murray kept it going with a walk. Mike Rountree and David Mansfield both walked, loading the bases.

A walk to Craig Woolard scored Murray.

Roanoke then came right back with three, taking a 6-4 margin. Wally Keel reached on an error and Joey Ross singled. Johnson then cracked a three-run homer.

Ahoskie tied it up with two in the fourth. Willie Mitchell walked and Bonds singled. Larry Ringer doubled, scoring both runners.

Roanoke then got the winning run in the bottom of the sixth. Lee walked and Neal Cargile ran for him, moving up on an out. He scored on Tony Whitfield's single.

The victory raised the Roanoke record to 11-3 overall and 6-2 in Northeastern Conference play. The two teams play a return match today at Ahoskie.

San Antonio Stops Philadelphia To Earn Rematch With Washington

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)—The San Antonio Spurs have earned a playoff rematch with the Washington Bullets. And veteran Louie Dampier says the Spurs will show up this year without the playoff monkey that's been on their backs for a decade.

Green hitting nine crucial fourth-quarter points and guided by the seldom-used Dampier, the Spurs shaded the 76ers 111-108 Wednesday night in the decisive seventh game of an National Basketball Association Eastern Conference semifinal series.

The Central Division champion Spurs have qualified for either the ABA or NBA playoffs in 11 of the franchise's 12 years, but hadn't won a series since 1968 — when they were the ABA's Dallas Chaparrals.

They also won the Central Division last year and got a bye into the second round, only to be eliminated by Washington in six games. There was grumbling about a playoff jinx.

"That (jinx) ended right here tonight," San Antonio's George Gervin said after the game. "A lot of people said we couldn't win, but we all had faith in ourselves," said forward Larry Kenon.

The Spurs, who had frittered away a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven series, led the 76ers by as many as 18 points in the second period and nine at half-time.

But the 76ers, led by Julius Erving, had clawed back, taking a 104-101 lead with 2:33 remaining. The 6-foot Dampier, who had played briefly in only two games of the series, connected on an 18-foot jumper and Mark Olberding had a free throw to knot the score.

Greenspan's Documentaries On Sports Figures Are In Demand

By FRED ROTHENBERG
 AP Sports Writer

Network sports programming is on target most of the time in its coverage of live entertainment. But nobody does sports documentaries better than Bud Greenspan, who has been hired by ABC, CBS and NBC to do mini-shows for the upcoming Olympics and Pan-American Games.

Although the networks have the resources to bring documentaries to the small screen, the networks' focus is on events and pizzazz that will attract big audiences, ratings and advertising dollars.

Greenspan, who works with his wife, Cappy, also believes in events, but he likes to retell the historic ones — the first sub-four minute mile, for example, which was run by Roger Bannister of England 25 years ago this Sunday. The piece on Bannister is part of Greenspan's "Numero Uno" series.

"We went to 13 countries and did the life story of their Babe Ruth," said Greenspan, whose series includes shows on skier Jean-Claude Killy of France, Canadian hockey star Maurice Richard, Japanese sumo wrestler Taiho and American discus thrower Al Oerter. "The idea is greatness maintains greatness if done properly. If we do enough research and create the right atmosphere, the event can still be exciting."

That credo took Greenspan to the Olympic Stadium in 1964 to film "Jesse Owens Returns to Berlin". Having Owens listen to a record of "Deutschland Uber Alles" wasn't enough, it had to be a 1930s copy.

But it took four years before the Hughes Sports Network bought the show for a limited broadcast in 1968. And it was another four years before ABC decided to show it to American network viewers.

Once it reached a national audience, critical acclaim was much swifter — three Emmy Award nominations.

The Bannister show is another gem. The British Broadcasting Co., located just five miles from Bannister's home, has bought this show and the other 12 "Numero Uno" segments. "ABC's Wide World of Sports" will air portions of the Bannister piece this Saturday.

With fabulous footage of the race and the principals, Greenspan has brought excitement and anticipation to an achievement 25 years old, but one that will last forever. No one can take that away from Roger Bannister, and Bud Greenspan's artistry makes that certain.

The following contains excerpts from the Bannister script. It picks up in 1952 after Bannister, a 23-year-old medical student at Oxford, failed to win a gold medal at the Helsinki Olympic Games.

"I can still remember the headlines, huge headlines: 'BANNISTER FAILS,'" said Chris Brasher, Bannister's teammate. "And it was then that he decided he had to have something to replace this... The one thing that everybody was after was the four-minute mile."

Shortly after the Olympics, Bannister met Franz Stampfl, a coach who believed that the four-minute mile was a reality. "Four minutes at the present time is nothing at all," said Stampfl "... But at the time, it was an absolutely monumental task because the vast majority of people didn't believe it was possible."

Plan Nationwide Rally For Sen. Jesse Helms

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A nationwide rally for Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., is planned by out-of-state allies of the conservative senator. The event is scheduled to take place in Charlotte in early 1980. Planned and financed by the Washington Legal Foundation Inc., the event is designed to honor Helms for his political stances, said Daniel J. Popeo, executive director of the foundation. Promoters of the event said it was not geared to launch a bid for a national-ticket campaign for the senator. It has been speculated in GOP circles that Helms will be a favorite son presidential candidate in North Carolina and is a long-shot vice presidential possibility.

Helms said he knew nothing of the project and had not made a decision about a favorite son candidacy. D.E. "Dick" Marable, organizer of the project, said the national affair would recognize Helms as the country's foremost conservative. Popeo said the guest list would include major national figures from government, politics, law, business and entertainment. He said all Republican presidential candidates would be asked to attend the event, which would take place three months before the state's presidential primary. Marable said the festivities would begin on Feb. 28, 1980 with a "good old Union County homecoming" for Helms at his hometown of Monroe. On Saturday, March 1, Helms will be the guest of honor at a banquet for 2,000 at the Charlotte Civic Center. Marable said the banquet tickets would cost around $100 each. Thomas F. Ellis, the Raleigh attorney who has managed Helms' campaigns, insisted there were no national ticket overtones to the event. The event will be held nearly a month after the presidential primary filing deadline in the state. Helms would have to file by Feb. 4 in order to appear on the ballot.

Women Body-Builders

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Upper body strength is not just for linebackers and boxers, according to the Tallahassee Feminist Women's Health Center. The self-help clinic for women promotes weight-lifting for American women to produce "stronger, healthier upper-bodies...and to become safer, more independent, self-reliant and self-confident." Members of the group meet four to five times a week early in the mornings. Most of them begin their workouts with a one-mile run and stretching exercises. Then they split into groups of two to three and begin repetitive exercises similar to those performed by male bodybuilders. They keep records on the weights they lift, the repetitions performed and the sets of repetitions done. For safety, one partner "spots", or stands by to help in case of emergency while the other lifts. Participants report swift improvement in arm and shoulder strength.

Russian Intelligence Agents Visit Piedmont Area

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — It probably comes as a surprise to most people to learn that Russian intelligence agents visit the Piedmont area of the state.

And sometimes businesses aren't cooperative in sharing information about their foreign visitors, an FBI agent says.

But the Triad office of the FBI allocates 10 percent of its energies to foreign counter-intelligence work, said Andrew Pelczar, head of the office.

Because of the nature of many of the businesses that operate in the area, he said dozens of Soviet and Soviet-bloc contacts are in his office's jurisdiction.

"What's of concern is that an alarming percentage of the visitors are known to be Russian agents ... part of their intelligence-gathering force," Pelczar said.

William H. Webster, director of the FBI, estimates that more than 65,000 communist-country officials and officials visitors are in the United States, "many of whom were undoubtedly instructed to gather information — both of a traditional military and political nature, and industrial information on microelectronics, computers or lasers."

Although Pelczar was reluctant to name them, there are both industries and universities in the Piedmont that are involved in the three technological areas.

"There are literally dozens of technological contacts in the Piedmont that are visited as a matter of routine," Pelczar said. "When these people come down here, we have the responsibility of determining their points of contact as well as the nature of their business."

This is not always an easy job, he said. The industries are not always eager to cooperate with the FBI, he said.

"There have been instances," said Pelczar, "where Soviets have visited businesses in the area and when we have contacted representatives of those firms, we were advised by the respective employees that they have been ordered by corporate directors not to discuss with us the nature of the contact, which would seem to sort of indicate a fear of losing contracts."

Even when the businesses cooperate, it is often difficult to determine just what the Soviets were after. " ... We consider ourselves laypersons in these areas (of technology)," Pelczar said.

"And when we talk with someone about microcomputers or lasers, we don't feel we have the technical expertise to effectively maintain any discussion ... what we do is ask them to analyze the give-and-take of the situation and determine in their own minds if there was ... an attempt to steal thoughts, techniques, formulas, processes or whatever."

But the hardest part of the job is the long hours spent tailing the agents while they are in the area. A team of FBI agents puts the Soviet intelligence-gatherers under 24-hour surveillance, he said.

Pelczar said that he does not want the public to think that his agents are looking behind every door and under beds and in closets. "My concern is that somebody is going to pick up the newspaper and say, 'What are these guys doing? Don't they have anything better to do?'"

"And my response to that is the obligation is ours. We have the responsibility by law and nobody else is going to do it," he said.

The FBI tries to identify, neutralize and frustrate the agents by monitoring their activities. But Pelczar said the agents are usually after public information.

The agents may go to public libraries and look through city directories and census data.

Pelczar said the Russian agents may be trying to locate a Russian refugee who still has family ties in Russia. And the agents are always looking for persons who have defected, he said.

Pelczar pointed out that maps, city directories and census information are not available to the public in the Soviet Union. But with all the information available for public inspection in the United States, he said computers in Russia, when fed the data, can give the Soviets a remarkably accurate picture of any American community.

Special Benefit Plan Is Invoked

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Special federal unemployment benefits have been approved for the 400 workers laid off with the closing of an iron pellets plant in Copperhill, Tenn., a state commissioner says.

Commissioner Bob Bible of the Department of Employment Security said Wednesday the U.S. Department of Labor had ruled that workers laid off by the Cities Service Corp. of America at the southeast Tennessee plant were eligible to receive 70 percent of their average weekly wage.

Additionally, the workers will be eligible for the benefits for nearly a year as opposed to the normal 25 weeks.

Cecil Whaley, public information officer of the department, said the benefits were granted under the Trade Readjustment Act because Cities Service had been forced to close the plant because of losses caused by foreign competition.

"All workers related to production of iron oxide pellets will become immediately eligible," Whaley said.

He said the money received would be, in some cases, double the maximum of $95 a week allowed under state law. He said the employees also would get specialized assistance in securing new jobs.

He said the laid off workers are being asked to make a new claim for benefits at the plant site at Copperhill.

Whaley said Bible was especially pleased at obtaining the added benefits because "when we first applied we were given very little hope that we would obtain them."

Cities Service, headquartered in Tulsa, Okla., announced March 13 it was shutting down the plant which it said had lost money since it was started up in 1973.

A company spokesman said at the time the losses were "in the millions."

The firm has continued its other mining, milling, copper systems and chemical operations in Copperhill.

Cities Service is the only major employer in the southeast Tennessee area. The firm's 1,850 workers come from the surrounding areas of North Carolina and Georgia as well as Tennessee.

Women Judges Are Still Hard To Find

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — At long last, a woman had made it to the Minnesota State Supreme Court, and Millie Jeffrey was invited to the swearing-in as a representative of the women's movement.

"I was honored, and feeling very good," says Ms. Jeffrey, head of the National Women's Political Caucus and a native Minnesotan.

"Then in walked the eight other justices. I cringed. I was consumed by anger.
"There they were, eight men in black robes. Here, in my liberal state of Minnesota, we had never had a woman on that court. I tell you, I burned."

Last year, Congress passed a bill creating 152 new federal judgeships and the women's movement saw a once-in-history chance to break into a male bastion.

But it hasn't worked out. Ms. Jeffrey's rage is likely to be shared by many of the nation's 45,000 women lawyers when the new judges don their robes.

In the history of the republic, there have been more than 2,100 federal judges. Only 19 were women. No woman has ever sat on the Supreme Court; only three have been on the U.S. Court of Appeals.

Only 2.5 percent of today's federal judges are women.

When the new judges take their seats, the federal judiciary is likely to remain 95 percent male, the women's caucus calculates.

President Carter has tried to fulfill a promise to appoint women, Ms. Jeffrey says, but "the process has been a disaster for women."

"At every stage of the selection process we have found well qualified women excluded or overlooked," she says.

Carter, declaring "we need more than token representation on the federal bench," created 13 nominating commissions to screen candidates for 35 new appeals court judgeships.

The panels submitted 138 names — 119 men and 19 women.

Presidents traditionally let senators of their own party recommend nominees for U.S. District Court judgeships in the senators' states. Carter went along with tradition but encouraged senators to appoint panels to find diverse candidates for the district judgeships.

Some senators took Carter's advice. Others exercised a tradition as old as the Constitution and chose from among their acquaintances.

With reports now in from two-thirds of the 40 states with judgeships to fill, 104 men and only nine women have been recommended to the senators by their panels for consideration for 77 vacancies.

In 18 states, no women were recommended. Only one state, Texas, recommended more than one.

So even if Carter nominated every woman recommended — surely unlikely — the number of women judges would increase only marginally.

Women lawyers worked hard for a different outcome.

They organized to ferret out qualified women lawyers, to persuade them to seek appointment, and to persuade senators to end the monosexual bench.

Running this effort is Susan Ness, a 1974 graduate of Boston College Law School. She heads the Legal Support Caucus, a unit of the women's caucus formed by women lawyers.

"We're not saying that just having women on the bench means issues important to women are going to be treated differently," Ms. Ness says.

"But a judiciary without women cannot have the breadth and variety of experiences to deliver justice that a more representative judiciary would have."

Ms. Ness spends much of her day calling long distance, passing along information to state units, gathering the latest intelligence, "and trying to demystify the process." The caucus set a goal of having 30 percent of the appointments go to women.

"That's now out of reach," Ms. Ness concedes.

Ms. Jeffrey and Ms. Ness agree that these obstacles existed:

Many senators had already made commitments to men. The senators' screening panels were male dominated — 294 men, 84 women — and sometimes were "a smokescreen operation," Ms. Ness says.

The panels were plugged into state bar associations, also dominated by men.

Women lawyers often don't promote themselves; many work in the law firms' back shop, away from trial experience.

Carter recommended that candidates have 15 years legal experience. But law schools admitted few women 15 years ago, and the women's caucus protested. The guideline was changed.

State courts always have been a source for federal appointments, but among the nation's 5,940 state judges, only 110 are women.

No matter how the final numbers work out, Ms. Jeffrey and Ms. Ness feel they've made real headway.

Every year 40 to 50 vacancies occur in the judiciary, and the effort will continue to name women — and many candidates have been found.

Until this campaign began, presidents used to ask only the American Bar Association to screen candidates. Now, at Ms. Jeffrey's suggestion, the Federation of Women Lawyers also screens nominees.

Moreover, the system has been put on notice: women lawyers want to climb the ladder, too.

"We recognize the problem isn't simplistic," Ms. Jeffrey says. "We're not saying Carter and (Attorney General Griffin) Bell haven't tried. We're not charging they operated in bad faith. But it just hasn't been enough."

Ms. Ness adds: "A judiciary that doesn't represent 51.3 percent of the population can't deliver justice."

N.C. Tobacco Farms' Operating Costs Rise

RALEIGH — An analysis of the operations of 44 tobacco farms enrolled in the North Carolina Farm Business Records program shows that operating expenses and depreciation averaged $1.04 per pound of tobacco sold in 1978.

These costs do not include labor and management performed by the grower or any charges for his own quota, land or interest on his own investment.

Dr. Charles R. Pugh, extension economist at North Carolina State University, said the highest categories of costs in 1978 were hired labor and rent, followed by depreciation and gas, fuel, oil and utilities.

"Market prices on the farm analyzed were up significantly from the previous year, but costs were also higher," he noted. "The margin between average price and the enumerated costs was 27 cents per pound."

In 1977, on 38 farms whose records were analyzed, prices averaged $1 and allocated costs averaged 94 cents, leaving only six cents of margin per pound.

"The farms included in the analysis for 1978 are not necessarily representative of all flue-cured tobacco farms in the state, especially in terms of farm size. But the analysis of cost per pound may provide other growers some useful benchmarks for comparison," Pugh said.

The prominence of tobacco as a source of income varied widely from farm to farm. Average sales were just under 80,000 pounds per farm, well above the typical tobacco farm's level of production.

Most farms in the analysis reported some expenditure for rental of additional quota. Data was not complete on the amount of quota leased.

Total rental expenditure divided by total production resulted in an estimated rental cost of 21.1 cents per pound produced in 1978. But on nine farms that reported the actual poundage of quota leased, the average cost per pound of quota leased was 27.5 cents.

Pugh said calculation of tobacco costs involved all costs directly earmarked to tobacco by a given farmer's record, and a pro rata share of general farm expenses based on the proportion of ordinary income derived from tobacco.

Data obtained through NCSU's Farm Business Records program show that ordinary expenses and depreciation on tobacco farms studied have increased from 74 cents per pound in 1975 to the 1978 figure of $1.04 per pound, a 40 percent rise.

"Even though there were differences in the particular farms included in the analyses for various years, the increase in costs over the past four years has been startling," Pugh said.

The largest increases were for hired labor, which doubled in cost, and for tobacco quota rental, which more than doubled.

Depreciation, energy costs, interest, insurance and taxes also increased. Cost items that stayed about the same or decreased were fertilizer, chemical and other supplies, repairs, seed and plants.

Although operating expenses and depreciation were up ten cents a pound in 1978 as compared with 1977, tobacco prices received by farmers were up even more sharply, from $1.18 to $1.35 per pound. Most producers, therefore, were in better financial condition at the end of the 1978 season than they were a year earlier.

A resolution was adopted during the 1978 business session to accept as members those who attended Farm Life as a student but graduated from another high school. These persons are also invited to attend.

Alumni Of Farm Life To Meet

The 59th annual banquet and dance of the Farm Life School Alumni Association, Vanceboro, will be held Friday, May 11, 7 p.m. The dinner will be served in the Farm Life School cafeteria, followed by the dance in the school gymnasium at 9 p.m.

This will be the 50th year reunion for the graduating class of 1929. Special recognition will be given to those alumni. There will be reserved tables for the classes of 1929, 1939, 1949, 1959 and 1969.

Attorney Paid Price Defending First Amendment

By JOSEPH R. TYBOR
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The hate mail has slowed but David Goldberger, an attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, still bears the emotional scars of his successful effort to gain a small band of Nazis the right to march in a heavily Jewish suburb.

"I don't think I'll ever look back on it without remembering the pain it caused," he says. "The hardest thing was being at odds with people for whom you had strong feelings of empathy."

It was slightly over two years ago that Goldberger, legal director for the ACLU, answered a call from Frank Collin, leader of a little group of neo-Nazis barred by village laws from marching in Skokie.

Goldberger, who finds Collin and his belief "absolutely disgusting," tried to find another attorney for the case. He couldn't, and agreed to represent Collin because the dispute raised classic constitutional questions about free speech and assembly.

The ACLU attorney, who is Jewish, says that "defending the rights of Nazis is one of the ugliest things an attorney can do, but the First Amendment has to be protected."

After an 18-month court fight, Goldberger won Collin's fight for the right to march through Skokie, but the march never took place. Collin changed his mind and held a protest in Chicago last July.

Skokie was particularly sensitive because thousands of the Jews living there are survivors of Hitler's concentration camps. The ACLU also suffered, losing about 30,000 members and $500,000 a year.

The ACLU recently has begun to recoup its losses, but the personal traumas of Goldberger and David Hamlin, then executive director of the ACLU in Illinois, have largely been kept private.

When the ordeal ended, Hamlin resigned. He said he was "battle-fatigued and burned-out," but he had planned to take time to write and Skokie provided the vehicle. His book will be entitled "The True Protest" after lines in a poem by the late Phil Ochs.

When the Supreme Court last October declined to review lower court decisions upholding the Nazis' right to march, Goldberger "had the biggest celebration I ever had in any case," not because he had won but because of "the belief of finally being out from under."

Goldberger, 37, has remained with the ACLU and is working on another First Amendment case, this one dealing with the censorship of a college newspaper.

He says he wants to go on to other things but there is "no reason to forget and I don't expect to forget" the Skokie affair.

There's a stereotype of the lawyer as a stony-hearted, hard-hearted kind of cretin who doesn't care about anything except winning the lawsuit," he said recently. "That's true of some lawyers, I'm sure, but it certainly is not true of me and not true of people who work in the civil liberties area. These are cases that raise deep, human feelings and touch upon fond human values in every way."

Goldberger won't discuss details but says that throughout those 18 months he was personally and professionally vilified and physically threatened. He is still careful about telling people where he lives.

A good deal of Goldberger's anguish, says Hamlin, was that much of the criticism and abuse "was directed at him from a variety of directions, each of which was part of who David Goldberger is.

"The Jewish community questioned him openly and attacked him. The legal community questioned, if not attacked him. It was our mutual experience that even our friends would at least question, if not attack, what we were doing. So it became a very isolated existence and one which could easily have led to a lot of bitterness, particularly given the outcome."

Goldberger and Hamlin say they never really wavered from their position in the controversy.

"You always wonder whether the agony of this kind of a case was really worth it," Goldberger says. "But you just keep going over it and going over it and you come up with the same answer: The First Amendment has to be protected."

"When it started, I regarded the case as one that was unpleasant and would raise some unpleasantness in the Chicago area for a couple of months and then would fade into oblivion like most cases do," Goldberger says.

It didn't.

Early in the affair, an attorney for Jewish survivors in Skokie referred to Goldberger in court papers as a "Neo-Nazi counsel."

It shook Goldberger to the extent that he called Aryeh Neier, then national executive director of the ACLU in New York.

"Only after I called national officers of the Anti-Defamation League myself, in fury and in outrage, and got them to call their Chicago counterparts" did the attorney back away a bit, says Neier in his recently published book, "Defending My Enemy."

Rested Carson Staying With 'Tonight'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — America's insomniacs can have a sigh of relief — Johnny Carson says he's going to stay on the "Tonight Show." At least for awhile.

"I love doing this show," Carson told a cheering "Tonight" audience that gave him a standing ovation Wednesday night.

"Originally, I had expressed an intent to leave after our 17th year, which would have been Oct. 1 of this year. I intend to stay past that time," he said.

Carson said he was staying "not because of any extreme pressure from NBC. I could make that decision (to leave), but I think I owe something to the show, and I think I owe something to NBC also."

"Besides," he added, "I would probably miss this show terribly and maybe regret walking away from it that quickly."

The 54-year-old Carson returned to "Tonight" after a two-week vacation, a period in which his reported intention to leave the program was a major topic of show business conversation. In patented Carson style, he milked the reports for laughs.

"I've made a new deal with NBC," he quipped. "I won't get a salary but (NBC president) Fred Silverman has agreed to keep my gas tank filled."

Carson denied reports that his relationship with Silverman was strained, saying their meetings always have been amicable.

Carson's request to leave the "Tonight Show" was a blow to NBC, badly beaten in the ratings race this season and not eager to lose its biggest star.

The "Tonight Show" is a big revenue earner for the network, accounting for about 17 percent of NBC's before-tax profits last year.

After his show-opening monologue, Carson explained the situation.

"I had expressed the desire to NBC to finish the "Tonight Show" earlier than I had originally intended which is 1981 (Carson's current contract runs to the spring of 1981). They, of course, would not like me to leave. I have very ambivalent feelings."

Carson said he'd decided "it might be time to pack it in after 17 years, for a couple of reasons."

"I didn't want the show to become boring to the people. I didn't want to get bored with it and I wanted to work at a professional level that I take a certain amount of pride in. Nobody wants to 'dog' a show like this."

"The worst sin is to bore people."

Carson said he and the network are still in negotiations, but he did not say precisely how long he would continue as host of "Tonight."

It seems likely that a compromise will be reached and that Carson will stay with the show until spring of next year.

Liza Minelli Is Sued By Hotel

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A suit has been filed against entertainer Liza Minelli by the Riviera Hotel here on grounds she failed to live up to a multi-million dollar contract.

The action asks that Ms. Minelli be prevented from appearing at other resort hotels and seeks damages "in excess of $10,000."

The suit was filed in Clark

County District Court and names Ms. Minelli and her agency, Flora Inc. It claims the singer had a contract to appear at the hotel for 24 weeks between Aug. 8, 1973 and Aug. 7, 1977, but alleges she appeared at the club for only 13 weeks during the four-year period.

The contract called for her to be paid $100,000 per week, the suit said.

"I will certainly continue say, to be honest. We're just in through the 17th year and possibly on into next year. As to any longer than that, I can't say, are going to be here awhile..." Carson said.

Young Scientists Predict The Future

WASHINGTON (AP)—Real-life bionic women and men, people talking to computers that have consciences, a solution to the energy crisis and a cure for cancer. These are among the advances some of the nation's top junior scientists expect to become realities before the end of this century.

The predictions were made by 40 high-school seniors who met in Washington recently to receive scholarships and awards for original scientific research projects as winners in the 38th annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search.

"Bionic women and men are distinct possibilities," said 17-year old Patricia M. Sandborn, who attends Fort Collins High School, Fort Collins, Colo. "However," she added, "I wouldn't want the concept used to replace people, only to replace body parts. And certainly not to replace parents."

For her winning project, Ms. Sandborn developed a theory to explain why some flying insects can generate more lift than others, concluding that butterflies are the most efficient fliers and flies the least efficient.

She plans to study biomedical engineering at Tulane University, but she feels technology may be moving too fast. "Problems cannot be solved by technology. They have to be solved by people," she said.

In contrast, Bertha M. Olazabal, 18-year old senior at Hialeah Miami Lakes Senior High School in Hialeah, Fla., views the rapid pace of technology as a challenge to scientists. First in her class of 800 high-school seniors, Ms. Olazabal is hopeful that both scientific progress and the democratic process will prevail.

She speculates that by the 21st century, "We shall have control of genetics. Also, we shall be living in a computer world, communicating with computers to help solve our problems — including computers into which consciences have been programmed.

"We shall also have reached the point where we shall have to go from earth to outer space to get the natural resources we need."

For her winning project, she established a quick and reliable test to identify endothelial cells (the cells that line internal body cavities). For a career in either medicine or biochemical engineering, Ms. Olazabal will attend the University of Miami.

Ron K. Unz, the 17-year old winner of the first-place $12,000 scholarship, foresees "mechanized, almost completely automated homes and the disappearance of cash through the use of universal credit cards."

Unz, top student in his class of 650 at North Hollywood High School, North Hollywood, Calif., believes that a solution to the energy crisis may be forthcoming. "If a great deal of effort is expended," he predicts, "nuclear fusion may be accomplished by the turn of the century."

"Nuclear fusion is the way the sun and other stars generate energy," he explains. "In the sun, this occurs billions of times every second, and scientists are now trying to duplicate that process to furnish a viable energy source on earth."

The original research project submitted by Unz relates to the possible effects of gravitational fields on electromagnetic interactions. After further study at Harvard College, he is planning to be either a theoretical physicist or mathematician.

"Cancer will be licked soon. It's inevitable," said John P. Karis, 17-year old from Durham, N.C. His winning entry was the development of an electronic safety device he developed at the Charles E. Jordan High School there.

His invention has been used successfully during open-heart surgery at Duke University Medical School Hospital. After studying electrical engineering at Princeton University, Karis expects to enter medical school.

"For a complete health evaluation and medical diagnosis, the patient of the future will either have a light beam passed over his or her body or place the hand into a liquid," he says. Far from achievable right now, he concedes, but, he adds, who knows what a future scientist will perfect?

"The sky's the limit," says Dr. Glenn T. Seaborg, professor of chemistry, University of California at Berkeley and winner of the Nobel Prize for Chemistry in 1951. He also serves as president of Science Service, the non-profit organization that administers the $89,500 in scholarships and awards of the Science Talent Search program for Westinghouse Electric Corp.

"There will be great advances in molecular biology that should get right at the basis of life itself," Dr. Seaborg said. "There will be great developments in devices, bio-engineering, artificial organs, and maybe even artificial kidneys and artificial hearts. Just fantastic things."

Yogurt Lowers Cholesterol

I read in advertisements that yogurt is good for people who have high cholesterol. Is this true? — Mrs. B.L., Tenn.

Dear Mrs. L.: For a long time, doctors have been interested in learning more about why so many of the people of the Caucasus live past the age of 100. It has been suspected that it is the yogurt in their diets that tends to lower cholesterol, thereby prolonging life.

Very recently, a group of doctors at the University of California, in Los Angeles, found that three cups of ordinary yogurt each day can reduce the serum cholesterol levels in the blood by about 9 percent in a week. It's an interesting idea. There are, of course, many other dietary regimes which can effectively reduce cholesterol. Some drugs now available, when used in conjunction with these diets, produce gratifying results.

The exact reason why yogurt reduces cholesterol is still being investigated.

I have had polyps taken out of my nose six times in the last 20 years. Is there no way they can be prevented? — Mr. F.T., Mass.

Dear Mr. T.: A polyp is a grape-like mass of tissue that occurs in the lining of the nose or in the sinuses. They occur most frequently among people who have chronic allergy, infections or a combination of both.

Patients who have some allergic reaction in the nose frequently develop sinus infections. Germs grow and flourish in the warm, watery mucus. Polyps then develop singly, or more often, in bunches, especially when the underlying condition is neglected.

Many people do nothing about the polyps, the allergy or the infection until the nose is completely blocked and they can no longer breathe comfortably. When the polyps become large, they block the free flow of air through the nose and frequently impair the delicate sense of smell.

It has been my experience that when polyps are removed, and patients again begin to breathe freely, they often fail to continue treatment for their underlying allergy or infection. This, probably, is the reason why your polyps recur. It is imperative that patients who have had their nasal polyps removed by surgery continue treatment after surgery, in order to delay or prevent the recurrence of the nasal polyps.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAY 4, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are inclined to break up an existing condition but by being very quiet you can get the correct answers from deep within yourself. It's also an excellent time for enjoying yourself and for being most creative in your ideas, thoughts.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Handle responsibilities well. Listen to ideas of others that could be of help to you. Do some entertaining of those who are devoted to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do nothing that kin would resent. Fundamental affairs need particular attention and conscientious effort. Avoid anything that has an element of danger in it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Any changes where work is concerned is not good at this time. Give support to partners who are loyal to you. Listening to gripes on the part of others is wise. Do whatever is fair and just.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care you are not extravagant where pleasure is concerned. Avoid whatever is not worthwhile, wholesome. Buy a thoughtful gift for a loved one.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Learn to save more so that you can have more in the future and build up a reserve quickly. An expert's advice in the morning is not correct but later you get the true facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be careful in motion of all kinds and you make this a happy and safe day. Make sure statements, reports are correct. Take no unnecessary risks in investments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't mix finances and personal relationships or there can be trouble now. Relegate the social to the evening. Don't reach decisions about changes until evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are in a nervous dither until the middle of the afternoon, so calm yourself and then the evening goes well for you. Get as much done as you can, especially where civic work is concerned.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Out to whatever is interesting so that you forget any anxieties you may have. Find the right new outlet for yourself. You are now capable of understanding new ideas, attitudes and can grow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can take care of obligations well now, but don't involve your friends in them or there is trouble. Try to please your mate more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show loyalty to associates and don't antagonize bigwigs today or tonight. Not a good day to solve a nagging problem. Get busy at others matters.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some old problem can best be handled during evening hours, so postpone it until then. Handle work affairs quietly. Give more thought to your diet for better health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will require more kindness and encouraging words than most in order to accomplish more during the lifetime. The mind and ability are good here and your progeny can tackle big projects, be it in governmental, corporational lines. Sports are a must for your progeny.

Second Chance On Competency Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Students who failed the state's minimum competency test last fall got another chance to pass this week.

And a top state official predicted Wednesday that 70 percent would receive passing scores.

H.T. Conner, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, said he based his prediction on Florida's experience with similar minimum skills tests in reading and math.

Conner added that high schools across the state had concentrated on improving skills since last fall to prepare students for the second round of the competency test, which was held Tuesday and Wednesday.

The state has spent $7.5 million this year on basic reading and math programs for high school students, he said.

When the first test was given last fall, 13,312 students in the 11th grade, or 16 percent of those who took the test, failed to pass either one section or both.

Florida officials say close to 90 percent of the 11th graders who failed its test subsequently passed it, Conner said.

Those who fail the test in North Carolina get at least three more tries to pass it before the end of their senior year.

If they don't pass, they will not get high school diplomas. The testing requirement becomes effective with the class of 1980, this year's juniors.

The test was given again to juniors Tuesday and Wednesday. The results will be available in mid-June, Conner said.
