

Registration Deadline

Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections, reminded area voters that the deadline to register for the June 8 special elections is Wednesday, May 9 at 5 p.m.

Miss Register said that the special $9 million School Bond referendum and the issue regarding on-premises sale of mixed beverages in the county will be decided in the June 8 balloting.

According to Miss Register, the Uniform Election Law of North Carolina provides that when a person registers once with the county, he or she is eligible to vote in all elections. She added that new residents of the county who have not registered, as well as persons who have changed their names and addresses since the last election, would make sure they are properly registered.

The Elections spokesman said that in order to assist area voters, special extended registration hours will be observed by the Pitt Board of Elections. The Greenville office at 201 E. Second Street will remain open Monday, May 7 and Tuesday, May 8 until 7 p.m., she said.

Voter registration may also be made in the county at several locations, she reminded voters, including: town halls in Ayden, Falkland, Fountain, Grimesland, Grifton and Winterville; police station in Bethel; building inspector's office in Farmville; at Steve Little's home in Belvoir by appointment; and at Mrs. Sally Glisson's home in Stokes by appointment.

In Greenville, persons may register at Sheppard Memorial Library, East End Library, Carver Library and at the mobile unit of the library when the appointed registrar is on duty, she reported.

Miss Register mentioned that absentee voting will be allowed only on the school bond issue on June 8 and requests for absentee ballots may be made until 5 p.m. on June 6.

Pitt County currently has a registration total of some 28,000 persons, including nearly 11,800 who are registered to vote in Greenville.

Europe's First Woman Prime Minister

Ms. Thatcher Names Cabinet

By MICHAEL DENNIGAN
LONDON (UPI) — Margaret Thatcher, Europe's first woman prime minister, today announced her new Conservative Party Cabinet to run Britain for the next five years. It did not include former Prime Minister Edward Heath, the man she ousted four years ago from the party leadership.

Mrs. Thatcher, the 53-year-old grocer's daughter, was formally asked by Queen Elizabeth II to form a new government Friday after she led her Conservative Party to clearcut victory in Thursday's parliamentary general election.

Heath had been expected to be named Foreign Secretary. Instead, Mrs. Thatcher appointed Lord Carrington, 59, who was defense secretary in the 1970-74 Heath government.

Heath campaigned energetically during the election. But relations between him and Mrs. Thatcher have been cool since she won the party leadership from him four years ago.

As widely predicted, William Whitelaw, 60, her deputy party leader, was named home secretary and Sir Geoffrey Howe, 52, chief Conservative economic spokesman in the last parliament, was named chancellor of the exchequer.

Howe's first job was to draft a new national budget providing for big personal income tax cuts promised by the Conservatives.

Humphrey Atkins, 56, until recently Conservative Party chief whip in Parliament, was named secretary of state for Northern Ireland, a job slated for the late Airey Neave until his assassination by a terrorist car bomb as he drove out of the House of Commons underground garage March 30.

Francis Pym, 57, former Conservative foreign policy spokesman in Parliament, was named defense secretary.

Other appointments were: Industry secretary, Sir Keith Joseph, 61; Lord Privy Seal, Sir Ian Gilmour, 52; Environment secretary, Michael Heseltine, 46; Social Services, Patrick Jernkin, 52; Education, Mark Carls, 50; Energy, David Howell, 43; Agriculture, Peter Walker, 47; Employment, James Prior, 52; Lord Chancellor, Lord Hailsham, 71; Scottish secretary, George Younger, 47; Paymaster General and Information, Angus Maude, 66, and Trade, John Nott, 47.

Visited The Duke

By DOUGLAS DOWIE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Jimmy Carter paid a visit Saturday to the bedside of cancer-stricken John Wayne and reported the actor made some jokes and "thanked everybody for loving him so much."

The 71-year-old Wayne had been informed Friday that tests had shown a recurrence of cancer and doctors said there was a probability that it was spreading through his body.

Carter, visiting Southern California on the Mexican holiday of Cinco de Mayo, took a detour enroute to the airport and his trip home to call at UCLA Medical Center where Wayne was reported in stable condition but facing non-surgical treatment beginning next week to try to combat the malignancy.

The president spent only a few minutes with Wayne in his hospital room. He also visited briefly with the actor's seven children.

ECU Alumni Day Luncheon Held

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

"We now have no 'hiding place' in education," East Carolina University Chancellor Thomas Brewer told a gathering of ECU alumni Saturday.

"Every day we are told something about our product — our students," he said. "The evidence comes in from competency test scores, from rejects from the Armed Forces, from scores on the teacher exams."

"Industry mails us complaints about our failures with reading, math and spelling, and national commissions worry about declines in SAT scores."

Brewer was featured speaker at ECU's Alumni Day luncheon, an event which drew about 250 ECU graduates.

"What I would propose for us at East Carolina is that we 'go public', that we join the side of those who want improvement in education."

Brewer commented that during his "freshman year" at ECU he had been impressed by the warmth and friendliness of the campus as well as by such evidence of growth and development as ECU's new doctoral studies, the excellent reputations of its nine professional schools and its athletic and extramural activities.

Brewer expressed gratitude for the response of ECU's friends and alumni to needs for "enrichment monies" saying that this support "has encouraged many able students to enroll at East Carolina."

Brewer paid tribute to the emeritus faculty and staff, who will total nearly 100 after the ten currently-retiring members conclude their final academic year this spring.

Virginia Beach business leader E. Marvin Slaughter, a 1950 graduate, received the Association's Outstanding Alumni Award, and N.C. Rep. Ron Taylor of Elizabethtown, class of 1974, received the Outstanding Young Alumni Award.

Slaughter, a native of Dunn, has the BS degree in history from ECU, and taught in North Carolina public schools upon graduation.

He began a wholesale distribution business in Norfolk, Va. in 1953, and is now president and treasurer of Southern Tile Distributors, Inc., a firm with subsidiary companies in Norfolk and Richmond.

Taylor, a Democratic member of the N.C. House of Representatives, 19th House District, is associated with Taylor Tobacco Enterprises of Elizabethtown and has farming interests in Bladen County.

During his studies at ECU, Taylor majored in business administration and correctional services and completed an internship with the N.C. Dept. of Corrections.

He was elected to the N.C. House in 1976, serving the 19th House District of Bladen, Columbus and Sampson Counties.

The alumni group re-elected three of its officers: Jerry Powell of Greenville, president; Daniel Thomas Hannon of Henderson, vice president; and Pam Kachmer of Greenville, secretary.

Newly-elected treasurer is William Mitchum of Greenville. Donald Leggett, director of Alumni Affairs at ECU, was re-elected executive secretary.

James Maynard of Raleigh, Baxter Ridenhour of Durham and Luther Taylor of Lost Tree Village, Fla. were elected to fill three vacancies on the association's board of directors.

AF Secretary Resigning

BALTIMORE (AP) — John C. Stetson is quitting his post as secretary of the Air Force, becoming the first of President Carter's service secretaries to leave, the Baltimore Sun reported today.

The newspaper said Stetson submitted his resignation to Carter, who has not yet announced the former businessman's decision.

The onetime president of the Houston Post Co. will leave his Pentagon job May 18, the Sun's sources said. Stetson refused to comment Friday on his resignation, referring any questions to the Air Force information office, which also declined comment.

But the Sun quoted informed sources as saying they believed the difficulties of furthering Air Force programs, and especially of getting decisions made on key weapons such as the new MX intercontinental missile, lay behind Stetson's decision to leave.

Confederate Flag To Fly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Confederate flag will fly over the state Capitol Thursday to commemorate Confederate Memorial Day in North Carolina.

Gary Pearce, press secretary of Gov. Jim Hunt, said Friday that the Stars and Bars would be displayed because a resolution adopted by the 1961 General Assembly "recommended as appropriate" that the flag be flown on May 10 each year.

Believes No Jeopardy

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Anti-government activists who seized the French and Costa Rican embassies warned Saturday that a police cordon around the French building put the lives of both ambassadors and nine other hostages in "grave danger."

But an employee of the French embassy and the wife of one of the captives said they believed the ambassadors and other French hostages were not in any imminent jeopardy.

Telephones to both embassies were cut.

both a logical and politically attractive move for Carter in an election year.

For one thing, the president would be delivering on his 1976 campaign promise to balance the budget by 1981, a goal that has seemed out of reach until very recently. It also would help defuse the controversy over whether there should be a constitutional requirement for a balanced budget.

Carter has not made any decision on whether to offer Americans a tax cut in 1980, and such a decision wouldn't have to be made for awhile, his advisers say.

Lyle E. Gramley, a member of the Council of Economic Advisers, said Friday that the question of a tax cut in 1980 is something that will be carefully considered during planning for the 1981 budget. But the administration budget expert said he thinks it will be difficult for Carter's advisers not to urge a tax reduction.

The federal government has not had a balanced budget since 1969 when there was a $3.2 billion surplus. Rising tax receipts already have shaved several billion dollars off the outlook for the budget deficits in 1979 and 1980.

What might rule out a budget surplus in 1981 — or even a balanced budget — would be a recession, which would reduce tax receipts and force increased expenditures for unemployment and welfare programs.

Some of Carter's advisers are arguing for new actions to slow the economy to help combat inflation. However, they continue to maintain that a recession will be avoided.

Rep. Barber Conable of New York, ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, said he thinks Congress will agree to a cut of about $15 billion for individuals and $5 billion for corporations.

"Some sort of symbolic tax relief ... is likely before the election," said Jack Carlson of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

He said it would be symbolic because it would return to Americans only a portion of the taxes that inflation will take from them. Carlson estimated that inflation will increase the 1981 tax burden on each household by between $800 and $1,000 dollars over 1979 taxes. A $15 billion reduction would return only $200 of this, he added.

Lost Battle Of Chesapeake To The Saudi Arabian Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Virginia crabbers say they have lost the Battle of Chesapeake Bay to the Saudi Arabian navy.

The crabbers complained they lost hundreds of crabpots — each worth $12 — when Saudi ships swept a dummy minefield laid right in the middle of commercial crabbing waters.

A spokesman for the U.S. Navy's Atlantic Fleet Surface Force in Norfolk acknowledged that four new Saudi mine-sweepers, with U.S. Navy instructors, had been training in the area last month.

Glenwood Pruitt, one of the irate crabbers, claimed propellers and minesweeping equipment on Saudi ships cut lines to the crabpots, which are sitting on the bottom of the bay.

"They got in our pots and were dragging them here and there, cutting (the lines) with their propellers," Pruitt complained. "It seemed like they didn't care. They've stopped now, but the damage is done."

Some crabbers went alongside the Saudi vessels to complain, he said.

"They just gave us the finger, a couple of them, and told us to get out of the way," Pruitt said.

"They had steel boats with guns. There was nothing we could do."

Pruitt said the area of Cape Charles is used heavily in April by crabbers from Tangier Island in Chesapeake Bay and elsewhere on the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia.

He said when he asked the Navy about reimbursement for the crabpots he was told to go to the Virginia Marine Resources Commission. And in turn, he was then referred to the Saudi Embassy in Washington.

"How am I going to get in touch with the Saudi Arabian Embassy, a poor guy like me?"

he asked.

Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Jeff Renk said Friday, "Should a claim be presented, we would, of course, investigate and process it in accordance with our established procedures."

He said a notice to mariners, establishing the dummy minefield as a restricted area, had been issued before the training maneuvers.

When the Navy learned at the end of April that the minefield was in a crabbing area, he said, the dummy mines were relocated about five miles to the north.

Denials From Morgan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., Friday denied a story published in Thursday's editions of the Atlanta Journal, which said Morgan's 1974 Senate campaign asked Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Georgia, for help in getting a contribution.

The story said the request came after the 1974 election and was for a contribution from a dairy producers' political action committee. The story was published under the headline, "Talmadge diverted milk funds to Morgan."

Morgan is a member of the Senate Ethics Committee, which is conducting hearings into alleged financial improprieties by Talmadge and will have to vote on whether to discipline Talmadge.

"The headline, with its innuendos, inferences and implications, is false, untrue and without any foundation in fact," Morgan said in a statement to the Ethics Committee.

"Nowhere in the story does it appear that Senator Talmadge ever delivered or even knew of any political contributions to my 1974 political campaign by anyone," Morgan said.

The Journal story also said former Talmadge aide Daniel Minchew, who is Talmadge's chief accuser in the committee hearings, was asked by a Morgan campaign worker to help Morgan get a contribution from one of two milk funds.

"No such call was made with my knowledge, and neither I nor anyone ever associated with my campaign that I can find made or knows of such a call," Morgan said.

SBI To Probe Martin Fires

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation may be asked to expand its probe of two recent fires in Williamston to include a blaze early Friday morning that destroyed one of the town's oldest buildings, a city fire official said Saturday.

The fire Friday destroyed White's Heating and Sheet Metal Co., which was housed in a three-story, turn-of-the-century building. The building was valued at $75,000, and the fire caused an estimated $100,000 in damage to the structure's contents, according to Darrell Taylor, assistant chief of the Williamston Fire Department.

The SBI is currently investigating a March 16 fire that caused about $200,000 in damage at the Williamston Meat Curing and Processing Co., Taylor said.

"Arson is suspected," he said. "They had a strike that day, and 16 to 18 men walked off the job."

Another fire April 13 at the Holiday Inn caused about $200,000 in damage. Taylor said officials believe that fire started accidentally.

Gas Shortage Investigation

By HELEN THOMAS
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Carter Saturday ordered Energy Secretary James Schlesinger to determine the cause of Southern California's latest gasoline shortage to see what can be done about it. In a statement, Carter said he has directed Schlesinger to consult with state and local government officials and industry leaders "to immediately determine the facts" surrounding the California gasoline famine. He also directed the Energy Department to take immediate steps to ensure that recent changes in the allocation programs providing additional gasoline to high-use areas are strictly enforced. Carter said Schlesinger's study was needed to determine what steps, if any, beyond what he already has recommended to Congress, can be taken "to alleviate the situation now and in the future." He asked Schlesinger to report to him by the end of next week. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. announced an oil rationing plan Friday while Carter was on a two-day trip to Iowa and California. During motorcade rides around Los Angeles, the president had a chance to see the long lines, some going for blocks, in front of service stations. "I want to ask drivers in this area to resist the urge to try to keep their tanks full at all times," said Carter. "This only exacerbates the problem. And obviously there is a great need to avoid all non-essential use of gasoline." "Although this particular crisis came on suddenly," he said, "We have known since 1973-74 that something like this was bound to happen." "The reason for the gas lines and terrible inconvenience here — and the rest of the nation faces similar problems later this summer and maybe worse next year — is that we have failed to be prepared," Carter said.

He urged support of his proposals for phased decontrol of oil, a windfall profits tax, a standby gasoline rationing plan, a gasoline conservation program, and two other conservation measures. Carter said the immediate cause of the problem appeared to be less oil than expected from Iran, increased consumption in California and nationwide as well as his decision that priority be given to heat for homes, hospitals and other public facilities and to food production in times of shortage.

'No Hazard' Statement For Reactor Leak

ATHENS, Ala. (UPI) — A leak in a reactor cooling system at Browns Ferry nuclear plant released a small amount of radioactivity into the Tennessee River, the Tennessee Valley Authority said Saturday. TVA spokesman Mike Butler said the leak was a "small amount" that posed no hazard. He said the leak was found in the cooling system of reactor unit 2, which was shut down April 27 for scheduled refueling and placed on a heat exchanger for removing heat remaining in the reactor. Butler said the amount of radioactivity detected was 16 percent of the "maximum permissible amount" set by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in safety guidelines. "It was a small amount and it didn't pose any kind of hazard," Plant engineering supervisor

Robert Metky said radioactivity was detected but said the amount was so small "I wouldn't mind drinking it or giving it to my family to drink." But Metky said there was some question of whether there actually was a leak in the cooling system. He said the radiation registered could have been a fluke in the radiation detection instruments. The radiation detected, he said, was "a slight tinge but it's well below the threshold limits specified by NRC." The reactor core is cooled through a system of circulating water that is in turned cooled by water from the river. "If you get a leak in the heat exchanger it allows radioactivity from the primary system to leak into the river water," which flows back into the river, Butler said. He said instruments at the discharge point set off an alarm when the radioactivity was detected and the plant operator switched to another heat exchanger. Unit 2 is expected to return to service in June after the refueling. The other two units of the plant are operating normally, said Butler.

Award For Salk

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Dr. Jonas Salk, who in 1953 developed a successful vaccine against polio, is the fifth person to receive Boys Town's Father Flanagan Award for Service to Youth. The physician, who received the award Friday, joined Mrs. Spencer Tracy, Mother Teresa of Calcutta, Bob Hope and Dr. Mildred Jefferson, the previous winners.

Biggest To Date

By PATRICIA KOZA
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tens of thousands of protesters will raise the cry "No more Harburg," today in what is expected to be the nation's biggest anti-nuclear power demonstration, organizers said Saturday. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., consumer advocate Ralph Nader and actress Jane Fonda, all of whom oppose nuclear power, were on the list of about two dozen speakers and entertainers scheduled during the day-long protest. Police said they were expecting 20,000 to 50,000 demonstrators, many of whom were arriving by bus, while rally sponsors said they were preparing for as many as 70,000. The demonstrations were scheduled to begin at mid-morning on the Ellipse south of the White House and then move to the Capitol. An estimated 20,000 persons showed up in San Francisco April for a rally opposing construction of the nearby Diablo Canyon power plant, while last year's demonstrations at Seabrook, N.H., drew 25,000 by some estimates.

Reynolds Plant In Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Opening ceremonies for a new $3.5 million R.J. Reynolds Tobacco-Puerto Rico facility were held Friday in San Juan. The company, a subsidiary of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco International Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C., will house all administrative and distribution operations at the 34,000-square-foot facility. It is the country's only cigarette manufacturer. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco-Puerto Rico also has a manufacturing plant in Yabucoa, Puerto Rico. That plant opened in November 1970.

Drugs Do Reach The Children

For those of us who aren't involved in day-to-day school activities, it comes as a shock when authorities tell us that illegal drug use extends down to the fifth or sixth grade levels.

David Andrews and John Maye Jr., coordinators of the alcohol and drug education programs for the county schools, discussed the program Tuesday. They were asking that the alcohol and drug education program be extended to the fourth and fifth grade levels.

Andrews said young people have experimented with drugs as early as fifth and sixth grades.

He told of one sixth grade child who has been "busted" once for marijuana; another has been caught twice and a third charged with dealing in drugs.

Alcohol, according to Ass't Sup't Kathryn Lewis is still the major drug abuse problem among young people.

Why do young people, with all their energies and interest, need drugs and alcohol? That is an age-old question.

Suffice it to say that it appears both are a problem in the schools and we must do all we can to cope with the situation.

The county board took no action on the proposal to extend the program to lower grades pending conferences with the principals.

If the problem is widespread, then clearly the program must be extended.

New Rules Resolve Quorum Question

The City-County Planning and Zoning Commission changed its rules to allow a minimum of three county members and three city members to constitute a quorum.

The action was taken last week after the commission had failed to obtain a quorum of county members the week prior.

The new rules should make it easier for the commission to have enough members on hand so that it can meet and act on matters before it. That will be better for all concerned.

The Philosophical Key

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The Declaration of Independence confirmed that "all men are created equal." It said nothing about university campuses.

The Constitution of the State of North Carolina promises equal educational opportunities to all students. It says nothing about equality of college campuses.

The students are equal; the opportunities are equal; the campuses of the 16 schools in the North Carolina University System can never be equal.

In that short summation is the foundation on which North Carolina's arguments will rest in the developing court battle between the university system and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"If all campuses were equal, there would be no Chapel Hill," says a close advisor to Gov. Jim Hunt. "There wouldn't be enough money or manpower or energy to have one of the finest engineering and technical schools in the nation at N.C. State University and at 15 other campuses. There would be no way to have the Southeast's most prestigious medical school at Chapel Hill and 15 other campuses.

"There will always be flagship universities. There has to be excellence. There have to be Chapel Hills and there have to be Harvards.

"The test is whether students have equal opportunity to attend the school for which they are qualified and which they choose," this insider commented. State officials are excited at the prospect of answering the Civil Rights complaints after nine years of quietly listening to charges and seeking to meet demands.

No Botulism

A speaker at a legislative hearing recently endorsed a proposal restricting disposal or storage of nuclear waste in

BILL NOBLITT

North Carolina, and went on to speak against growing use of nuclear products which cause the waste disposal problem.

Those who favor nuclear fuels argue that many things in life pose threats. The question is whether the threats are acceptable in light of society's needs.

Retirement

Some angry legislators are trying to find a way to change the retirement system which gives judges, district attorneys, and court clerks between two and three times as much as other state employees and teachers.

Two members of the General Assembly are members of the retirement system board of trustees: State Rep. Tom Ellis, D-Henderson, and State Senator Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

They are being urged by colleagues to investigate the situation. State Rep. Mary Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, thinks judges "should be treated the same as us lowly folk." She is a school teacher.

State Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, another teacher, threatens to introduce a proposal that all other employees be placed under the same retirement plan as judges. It would cost about $600 million to do that; obviously an impossible approach. But it will draw logical attention to the situation, Foster believes.

Sunday Morning Notes

Someone has told us about the ECU Publications Banquet.

"Just as one never knows exactly what may occur at an Academy Award presentation, perhaps the same can be said for the Publications Banquet," they wrote.

The writer related that during the banquet a tribute was paid to Ira L. Baker, professor of journalism "for his distinguished and inspiring teaching, and for his special interest in and help to ECU publications."

The master of ceremonies waxed eloquent about Baker and the professor squirmed uncomfortably.

Then Baker interrupted the speaker. "Oh hush," he declared. "I'm not dead yet!"

That brought the house down . . . and ended the tribute.

A student was reading about the housing shortage on some state campuses, which could mean that some incoming freshmen may have to find housing off-campus.

Vienna Hosts Spies

By SYLVANA FOA

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Their empire crumbled, their power and opulence vanished, the Viennese still boast that their city is the "spy capital of the world."

"Some people say Hong Kong has taken over as the spy center, but it isn't true," said Interior Ministry spokesman Hannes Drossler. "Vienna's right at the top of the list of spy towns."

There are between 2,000 and 20,000 spies at large in Vienna, but contrary to popular belief they do not conduct business in the swinging red cars of the Prater wheel.

In fact, Prater operators say no spy has been thrown off the top of the world's biggest ferris wheel since Orson Welles tried to eliminate Joseph Cotton that way in Graham Greene's 1948 spy classic, "The Third Man."

Today most "moles" and their "controls" exchange codes in the elegant coffee houses along Vienna's Graben.

One of those coffee houses was fingered by East German superspy Werner Stiller when he defected and opened a Pandora's Box of spy fever in West Germany.

When the excited West Germans communicated the information to Austrian intelligence it was greeted with a big yawn. The Austrians had known for years that the cafe was run by the dean of the Vienna spy corps, a senior KGB operative.

Drossler admits that a lot of romance has gone out of spying since Cold War days, but he says the profession is on an upswing.

"Classical cloak and dagger spying is going out and the style today is toward more technical or commercial spying," he said. "But there are a lot more spies around now than in the 1950s."

Drossler said that "as long as they're only spying on each other" the Austrian government isn't about to invest the money or manpower necessary to find out exactly how many spies are here.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Jerry Is Alive And Well

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

SACRAMENTO, Cal. — While Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and his inner circle rejoiced April 26 over good tidings from New Hampshire, bipartisan enemies down the hall in the state Senate were plotting a select committee investigation designed to embarrass him.

That is the essence of Jerry Brown's undeclared campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. His strength is being on the popular side of cutting issues, as shown that day when the New Hampshire Senate passed the constitutional amendment for a balanced budget. His weakness is disrespect among Democratic politicians, as shown by the would-be Brown probers here.

Brown believes he has much the better of that tradeoff. "The legislators simply have missed what is going on in the country," an exuberant Brown told us the day of the New Hampshire triumph, for which he justly claimed some credit. He will ride prevailing popular opinion not perceived by many politicians, at home or away, in his imminent challenge of President Carter.

Thus, while those politicians (including Carter aides) have buried Brown after prolonged abysmal publicity, he exuberantly considers himself alive and well as a presidential contender. Furthermore, while preparation is not nearly so expensive as in several Republican presidential efforts, Brown's men are quietly preparing to run for the White House, as they did not do in the impromptu 1976 effort.

Brown's exuberance is fueled with the nuclear power issue, which reached a critical mass in the Three Mile Island accident. By refurbishing his anti-nuclear credentials, Brown strengthened tattered links to the left (including activists Jane Fonda and Tom Hayden). In his most recently nationally televised appearance on ABC's "Good Morning America," he belabored Carter for placing undue reliance on the nuclear option.

The overriding reason for those tattered links to the left has been his late advocacy of a balanced budget, and that is the real thrust of the Brown presidential effort. Accordingly, the April 26 New Hampshire Senate vote — despite White House lobbying to the contrary — was seized on by Brown as proof of his own political viability.

Brown was on the phone that day exchanging mutual congratulations with new friends in New Hampshire.

The governor told us to pick up an extension to listen in to his talk with state Rep. Mark Bodi, a 24-year-old Democrat converted by Brown to the balanced budget during Brown's abortive trip to Concord, N.H., April 2. When Brown hung up, Bodi told us the vote was "a loss for the president."

Such words have eased Brown's humiliation in backing out of testifying in New Hampshire for the balanced budget amendment under pressure from pro-Carter Democratic leaders. Even aides who privately admit Brown's handling of the New Hampshire affair was atrocious believe he gained sympathy and support there by avoiding confrontation.

Nor are there worries about adverse repercussions from Brown's African safari with singer Linda Ronstadt. His aides believe the extravagantly publicized vacation was not only popular with younger voters, but also brought him wider recognition. "How else," asked one aide, "could he get on the

Other Editors Say No Energy Crisis

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

There is no energy crisis in America when you meet 10 cars on the highway, and nine of them contain one person. Of course, you are driving alone.

There is no energy crisis when you can drive over any bus route in Chapel Hill (and unless there are students involved) you will usually find no more than three or four riders, sometimes none. Driving a bus route in the average residential district around here must be the loneliest job in town.

There is no energy crisis when the housewife doesn't try to make a couple of trips to the grocery store instead of four or five.

There is no energy crisis when two or more professors (one of whom might be working on energy) live in the same neighborhood, work in the same proximity to the campus but won't make any attempt at car pooling. The same can be said about the teachers in our public schools, and most of the businessmen in the area.

There is no energy crisis when 50,000 persons drive a half million miles on a Sunday afternoon to watch a stock car race.

There is no energy crisis when the air conditioner goes on at the first sign of a heat wave, and the furnace is still turned on every slightly cold morning.

There is no energy crisis when almost half of the UNC student body has access to an automobile. There is no case on record where any student made Phi Beta Kappa or became a good doctor or lawyer because of an automobile.

There will be no energy crisis as long as the oil interests continue to keep the politicians in their hip pockets.

There isn't an energy crisis when the 55-mile speed limit is treated like most mothers-in-law.

As long as there is gas available at almost any price, the average American will never voluntarily get himself involved in a gas-rationing program. Most of us spend part of every waking hour raising hell about inflation and then we go out and do something stupid to keep it "flying".

Somebody Always Has To Pay

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In an almost unanimous vote for motherhood, Congress last October changed the law of the land to provide disability income for employees who lose work time because of pregnancy.

But motherhood comes at a price, and eventually the price of the new legislation, which became effective April 29, will be felt by everyone, in their insurance costs immediately, and in product prices later.

"Social legislation has to be paid for. Ultimately, all society pays for it," says Lloyd Kaye, an authority on the subject. "It's an added cost; it's got to be reflected in higher prices."

Kaye, legal counsel to

William M. Mercer, Inc., the nation's largest employee benefit consulting firm, estimates the added cost to insurance programs will be at least 5 percent to 10 percent.

His rule-of-thumb guide is that costs of disability insurance plans will rise about one-half the percentage of women on the payroll. If 50 percent are women, the cost increase is likely to be 25 percent.

Note: That's for disability income plans; the impact on medical benefit plans is likely to be much less, since many plans already have provisions for pregnancy payments.

As Kaye explains it, a company without an insurance plan might have no problem. But not necessarily.

If, for example, its practice is to pay a worker out with a virus, it now must do the same for a pregnancy.

While shocks to medical plans — as distinct from disability income plans — will be limited, they'll be felt. In some, for example, benefits were nominal; now they must be on par with other payments.

It could have an added impact on some plans, because in the name of equality a male worker is entitled to medical benefits for his wife's pregnancy. Thus, male as well as female workers may collect more.

But the seismic-like shocks will be felt mainly by the disability income plans — plans that provide for a continuance of income, perhaps on a descending scale as the period grows longer, for work time lost.

Few plans up to now permitted pregnant employees to leave work and remain on the payroll, and for what seemed to have been a sound reason: The Supreme Court said you didn't need to pay them disability income.

That decision, in Gilbert versus General Electric in 1964, eventually distressed Congress. Last fall it passed with almost no opposition a bill to change the law. President Carter signed it last October.

Now that the law is on the books, as of last Sunday, those concerned with equal rights might have another loophole to fill. If women are given disability pay for pregnancy, how do you give men equal benefits?

PENITENCE AND REMORSE

Remorse is probably one of the most futile of all emotions. There is a considerable difference between remorse and penitence, even though the two are sometimes considered synonymous. Penitence is being truly sorry for a wrong one has done; remorse is morbid prolongation of penitence.

Penitence, when it is sincere, is always spontaneous, heart-searching, and deep. The truly penitent person sets his feet resolutely in different pathways, and then — most important of all — tries to forget what happened. The person caught in the toils of remorse keeps turning his wrongdoing over in his mind until sorrow for his evil act becomes sorrow for himself. The last extremity of remorse is self-pity.

St. Paul said that every day he tried to forget the evil he had done before his conversion on the road to Damascus. As he expressed it, "Forgetting the things which are behind . . . I press on."

To the editor:

Those people who point a finger at the "windfall profits" of the oil companies are pointing three fingers back at themselves. Let me give three examples.

First, take the Carter Administration (please!) A study by Senator William Proxmire shows that the budget for chauffeurs has increased from $3.33 to $4.86 million. The annual salary of the average government chauffeur has risen from $20,000 to $25,000. Isn't that increase a windfall? Some 20 percent of the cost of a gallon of gas goes to the government; the oil companies get three percent. Isn't that 20 percent a windfall?

Second, take Congress. Representative Dan Rostenkowski has introduced a bill allowing Congressmen to deduct $50 a day (while Congress is in session) as a "business expense." Multiply the daily amount by 270, the average length of a session of Congress, and you have a reduction in taxable income of $13,500. Isn't that deduction a windfall?

Third, consider some of our newspaper editors who criticize the oil companies. The average profit for firms in the newspaper industry is 76 percent higher than that of all other U. S. Industries. Isn't that profit excessive? An inexorable law of economics is that producers require profits as an incentive for innovation, expansion, investment, exploration, and more production. Pres. Carter's socialist proposal violates this economic law by taxing away needed profits and allocating them as he and his central planners see fit. If the truth be known, this talk of "windfall profits" is designed to prepare our minds to accept a government takeover of the oil industry. Can we trust a government-owned oil company to efficiently deliver gas if the government-owned postal service does an inefficient job of delivering our mail?

Lytle Barlow

To the editor:

Your vacation will be more enjoyable if you protect your home against break-ins during your absence. Below are some ways to do this.

1. Stop all milk and newspaper deliveries, or have a neighbor take in all deliveries while you are away.
2. Advise the post office to hold your mail until you return.
3. Put lights on timers so that they go on and off at various times in the different rooms.
4. Leave the shades or blinds open.
5. Have jimmy-proof locks installed on all doors and take the key with you.
6. All windows should be securely locked.
7. Notify your police department that you will be away and have them place your home under surveillance. Explain that the lights are on timers.
8. Outside illumination on a timer should be focused on doors and windows.
9. Have neighbors contact the police if they notice suspicious vehicles or persons loitering around your property.
10. Metal grills on doors and windows will add protection against break-ins.
11. Do not advertise that you are contemplating a trip to the newspapers or speak about it in public places.
12. Secure any sliding patio doors by placing a length of wood or metal in the track so that the door cannot be forced open.
13. Do not leave ladders or tools available for anyone to use.
14. Put all valuables in a safe deposit box.
15. Inscribe an identifying mark on your T.V., radio, stereo and whatever you have that can be easily removed and sold. Some police departments have scribing tools that you can borrow for this purpose.

Practice of the above hints will reduce the number of vacation break-ins.

covers of Newsweek and People magazine in the same week?"

No governor is a hero to his own legislature, but the poor opinion of Brown there is extreme. Brown-for-president supporters down the hall are indeed rare, and these few are less than fully supportive. Assemblyman Willie Brown of San Francisco, a nationally prominent black who opposes the balanced budget amendment, backs Brown anyway "because Jerry is such a strange man I know he will be able to worm out of this (the balanced budget)." Secret requests for support from legislators in the presidential campaign have drawn several polite rejections.

Criticism from politicians and press alike is so intense that state Assembly Republican leader Paul Priolo, perhaps to stir Democratic strife, calls it "a conspiracy." Willie Brown agrees, suggesting the attacks on the governor "are being orchestrated out of the White House."

Orchestrated or not, the rising intensity of attacks on Brown began with his full embrace of fiscal conservatism by endorsing the balanced budget amendment. What previously had been "interesting" suddenly became "flaky." This is no short-term commitment. Brown is backing a new statewide initiative in California that would limit annual state spending. Assembly majority leader Howard Berman, an old Brown ally, opposes the new limit. Coincidentally or not, Berman is not yet ready to join Brown's presidential campaign.

But the governor thinks he is on the side of the people, and the other Democrats are not. "I believe the Democratic party is in very serious trouble," he told us, noting Republican success in special elections. He believes his exotic brew of pro-balanced budget and anti-nuclear power will override party leaders and the White House. That is why the New Hampshire Senate vote April 26 was the first step for Jerry Brown in his long uphill quest for the presidency.

Intelligence sources said Austrians judge increases in the spy community by increases in resident diplomats.

"The Soviet, American and Chinese embassies here are huge and get bigger every month," said one source. "Those can't all be cultural attaches."

"The spies are about evenly divided between East and West," said the source. "This is a nice neutral marketplace for buying and selling information in both directions."

"If someone wants to open an office here and hang out a shingle with the words 'Spy for the CIA' or 'KGB Agent,' that's okay with us," said Drossler.

The Austrians only put their feet down when they uncover espionage aimed at "disturbing Austria's commerce and trade."

"That means spies are forbidden to spy on our know-how or do anything that will bring us less money," Drossler explained.

"We also forbid spying for foreign military interests and spying against Austrian national security."

But Austria hasn't arrested a foreign agent for breaking those rules in years.

"Very few spies are interested in Austria," Drossler sighed. Most Austrians are fond of spies and, lacking many of their own, they've latched onto "Mr. 7."

"Mr. 7 is supposed to be a high government official who sells our secrets to an Eastern country," said Drossler. "Whenever things are dull the newspapers bring him up. He's sort of our Loch Ness monster."

As I Recall It

The Night 20 Inmates Fled Ivy Bluff Prison

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

Probably the worst prison break in the history of the North Carolina prison system occurred the night of Dec. 7, 1959 when 20 of the system's most incorrigible felons escaped from the tough Ivy Bluff Prison near Yanceyville and the Virginia state line. Ivy Bluff was known as "Little Alcatraz" and was considered as near escape-proof as a prison can be. But that night the prison's strong points fell one by one like the proverbial row of dominoes.

At that time Ivy Bluff housed about 41 of the prison system's worst prisoners, described by Prisons Director William F. Bailey as "incorrigibles, hardened criminals — the type you find in Alcatraz." The convicts were made to work in a nearby rock quarry. It was so unpopular with prisoners that a number of inmates had maimed themselves in order to be transferred to the hospital at Central prison in Raleigh. Only a month before the mass break, seven inmates had been convicted of maiming themselves.

Credited with planning the Ivy Bluff escape was the notorious Charles (Yank) Stewart, a 52-year-old convict from Wilmington who was serving 25 years for armed robbery, and James Christy, 26, of Concord, serving 19-25 years for breaking and entering and manslaughter. Bailey said they apparently used smuggled hacksaw blades to cut their way out of isolation cells. Then they lay in wait and ambushed a guard on his rounds. They repeated the process until they captured the prison control room. They forced a guard to phone one sleeping in an outside guard shack and asked him to bring a master key. Finally, Sgt. L.E. Phillips was hit on the head and forced to phone the guard towers with word he was sending guards to relieve them. So the two tower guards were captured. At that point, the inmates were in complete control of the prison.

They locked six guards in cells, took their weapons — eight rifles, eight pistols and a submachine gun — and fled in a stolen car and truck. Despite Ivy Bluff's hard reputation, 21 other inmates refused the chance to escape.

The fugitives left the prison between 12:30 and 1 a.m., getting a four-hour start on pursuers because the prison break was not discovered until 4:30 a.m. when E.N. Pegg, assistant superintendent, arrived for a routine check. He realized something was amiss when he noticed the guard towers were not manned and heard the imprisoned guards shouting. The only person injured was Phillips who had contusions where he was struck on the head.

The prison break occurred early Wednesday morning. By Friday night all but three of the escapees had been recaptured. They included three who got lost in Harlan, Ky., and attracted attention when they drove around in circles.

Yank Stewart was caught Friday at Martinsville, Va., after a wild chase.

He told his captors he would "rather be dead than go back" to Ivy Bluff. Stewart said he was headed for Raleigh when he was captured because he was hoping "I could talk to Gov. (Luther) Hodges about the way they are treating their prisoners. Somebody has to tell him."

About all Stewart and the others got out of it was added time on their sentences. As for Ivy Bluff Prison its name has been changed, and its inmates no longer work in the rock quarry. It is known now as Blanche Prison, and houses 104 inmates under close custody conditions. It's no longer a center for the worst prisoners in the prison system.

COSTLY SPOT TO GET INTO!

Puppeteer Chooses To Live With Loneliness

MARS HILL, N.C. — Debbie Compton is a lonely young woman. As soon as she enters her apartment she flicks on the TV. The program is immaterial; it is the sound she needs, to give an illusion of company.

Loneliness is not new to Debbie. As an only child living on a farm and with both parents working, she was often lonely, and she compensated by imagining herself somewhere else. She tells about sitting for hours astride a green rug draped over an oil tank, riding in her imagination through the jungle.

"I watched a lot of Walt Disney movies too," she says. "Sometimes I think they shaped my whole personality."

Now Debbie is a puppeteer, working in the North Carolina mountains. A native of Greer, South Carolina, she studied drama at Mars Hill College.

"I was terribly inhibited," she says, "and drama helped bring me out personally. That's one of its major values for people, and that's why I like children's drama."

After finishing a master's program at the University of Georgia, Debbie went to Atlanta, confident that she could find a good job in the world of theatre. "Was I in for a shock. All my life I'd heard, 'Go to college and then you can get ahead. Anyone with a master's degree can have his pick of jobs.' I went to school for eighteen years and then was told I was over-educated. I'm convinced college doesn't teach you how to do anything."

Finally, however, Debbie found a job as costumer for Atlanta Children's Theatre. In addition, she began freelancing as a costumer at Mars Hill and Shorter Colleges and helping build the outdoor drama, Drumbeats, at Jekyll Island, Georgia. Two years later, she was named artist-in-residence in Rutherford County, North Carolina.

Since that time, Debbie has won wide recognition and success as a puppeteer. To only a few people does she appear other than a talented young woman, self-confident offstage as well as on, and secure in the knowledge that she is rising in her profession. But in reality Debbie is tormented by self-doubts which have compounded since she reached age thirty.

Speaking of her sense of alienation from the people she grew up with, Debbie observes, "A textile mill town tends to be homogeneous. We're all a bit dull, really, and we get duller as the years go by. I went to my high school class's tenth reunion, and afterwards I sat in the car and cried. They wondered why I don't have an established job the way they do. They just don't know there are other ways of living."

Both the type of work and the location she has chosen intensify feelings of isolation. Believing that puppetry has as much appeal in rural as urban areas, Debbie decided to stay in the mountains, after her term as artist-in-residence was over, and work on a free-lance basis. The number and variety of ways in which she has been called on to use her art clearly show the extent and value of her work. But at times, Debbie sees only the discrepancy between these accomplishments and goals she has set for herself.

"I'm most attracted to people whose minds are alive and who do things," Debbie says. "In a small town I don't have an opportunity to meet people to date or have as

Wrong Emphasis On The Pervasive Myth

Feminists have been pointing out for over 10 years that the snakes n' snails - sugar n' spice distinction between boys and girls is a myth. But they've got their emphasis all wrong. This pervasive myth is not a crime perpetrated against little girls. It's perpetrated against their mothers. The mothers of active little girls labor under a set of false expectations that keep them in a permanent state of bewilderment and guilt.

Mothers of boys are much more relaxed. It's not that boys are easier to handle. It's merely that the mothers' expectations are lower. If a boy comes home covered with mud and dragging the dog by the ear, his mother just sighs and says, "Boys will be boys." If a girl comes home in the same condition, her mother immediately assumes that she's raising a sociopath.

She just can't conceive that any other girl would throw a handful of rocks at the preacher. Or do a flip in the shoe store and knock three shoe racks over like dominoes. Or use her solid mahogany dresser drawers to build a fort.

When a little girl is told to do something to which she objects, she is supposed to pout defiantly and say, "No way!" And it's quite a jolt when the only thing she tells her grandma about her first trip to the circus is, "Aw, it was no big deal."

I once knew a mother of four year old twins who complained constantly of how perverse her daughter was compared to her easy-going son. I couldn't tell any difference. They were both perverse. They both "shot marbles" with their English peas. They both broke their arms while attempting to stand on the handlebars of their tricycles. They both played football with their mother's heirloom needle-point pillow.

And they both zoomed through the grocery store howling like fire engines. It was mere chance that it wasn't the son who knocked the pantyhose display over on the little old lady standing in the express lane.

In fact, judging from all the little girls I know, not only do I think that the sugar n' spicers are in the minority: I think they're almost nonexistent. It would seem that a more realistic assessment of a little girl's potential for mischief is in order. But old stereotypes die hard. And even those of us who see through the myth suffer from it.

For instance, the other morning a friend of mine with two active little boys called. I had just put Meg in a chair and had threatened her with dire catastrophe if she so much as moved. In the space of an hour, she had waxed the refrigerator with peanut butter, had climbed on one of the posts on my four-poster bed, had lathered herself with my hand cream, and had fed my Boston fern a bottle of Chanel No. 5.

When I picked up the phone, I could hear my friend's children whooping it up in the background. She yelled at them, then said, "This is one of those days when I'd like to trade them in for a pair of nice, quiet little girls."

She didn't understand why I cried.

A Memory Of Spring Worthy To Be Bottled

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

SCRABBLE, Va. — Here in Rappahannock County we tend to sip our seasons, spring and fall, testing them for color and for body and bouquet. Like the wine makers, we have good years and poor ones. Last year was only so-so. But 1979! We have a vintage spring to savor, and a sparkling joy it is.

This will go down in the record books as the slow green spring. Ordinarily our dogwoods open by mid-April; they float like whitecaps in a sea of pines and willows. Ordinarily, our mountains shake off their dark policeman blues by April 20 and pack them away for the summer. We get highs in the 80s. The honey bees spit on their hands, so to speak, and go to work on the peach and apple blossoms. This is how it usually works.

Not this year. It wasn't until the very end of April that the dogwood tired of playing hide and seek: Ready or not, here I come. There followed an overnight explosion of creamy petals, brown-tipped. The redbud had been waiting and the two of them twined like lovers walking through a park. Everything else in the forest cried hallelujah, free at last! One day a young birch tree was as frilly as a lampshade. The next day the brown fringes had turned into leaves.

I asked Clifton Clark about this. He lives down the Rudasill's Mill Road. He raises registered Walker fox hounds, and while this has nothing to do with spring in Rappahannock, he asked me to tell you that his hounds did mighty well in the Hanover field trials a few weeks ago. Anyhow, Clifton has lived here practically forever, and he is respectable authority for the proposition that spring seldom has come later than it has come this year. He is a judicious fellow, and I believe what he says.

You will surmise that the days have been unusually cool, and that is exactly right. Some of the nights have been frigid. We had ice on Piper's water bucket this past Monday morning. Piper is the collie, heir to the kingdom left behind by old Lorenzo. He has barely begun to shed, which provides more evidence of the exceptional cool. The fish aren't biting yet, either.

And green! We have never seen the fields so magnificently green. They are emerald green, apple green, Kelly green; they are greener than the green in the flag of Ireland. One theory is that this peppermint exuberance is the result of the snows of February. They say that snow is the poor man's fertilizer, and maybe so. Whatever the reason, the first crop of hay hugs our hills like a cheerleader's sweater.

The only drawback has to do with our gardens. Half of the first potato planting rotted in the cold and the wet and had to be replanted. Vegetable seedlings are way behind schedule. We have early peas, lettuce, radishes and onions coming up, but they're not as far along as they ought to be. The moles have practically destroyed $38 worth of bulbs we planted last year. Meaning no offense to any of God's creatures, I hunger for some way to throw the moles out.

Funny thing about some of the other animals. For years had no squirrels on the place. Now they are bounding all over the yard. Two of them simply dismantled a bird feeder. They took it apart piece by piece, chewed up the scraps, and swaggered away like a pair of muggers in Central Park. But something has happened to the rabbits and the groundhogs. Last spring we had constantly to stop for them on the road; they were so many pedestrians in a crosswalk. This year they've gone somewhere else.

The birds, however, are right on schedule. The last junco departed a month ago, just as Charlie the chipping sparrow was coming in. The bluebirds are back. So are the goldfinches and the evening grosbeaks. A kildeer, stupid bird, is trying again to nest in the gravel by the driveway.

Everything comes together on this Rappahannock canvas — white and pink and plum red, a dozen tints and shades of green, flights of scarlet and blue and yellow, and at every turn a dogwood moves and shimmers like a Calder Mobile. Vintage year! We will drink it now and bottle the memory to warm a winter night.

More Executions, New Violence Reported In Iran

EXTRA ALERT—Revolutionary guards were doubled Saturday outside Khomeini committee headquarters which was machine-gunned in three separate attacks May 4. Here, guards are on extra alert outside the ornate headquarters, which was formerly the Majlis—the Iranian parliament. (AP Wirephoto)

TEHRAN, Iran (AP)—Revolutionary firing squads executed four more of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's supporters early today, the newspaper Kayhan reported, bringing the total of known executions to 169 since the monarchy fell in February.

Kayhan said the four men were shot to death in the northwestern city of Khoi. It said the victims had been convicted of killing innocent people and of being "corrupt to the core." The report also said that in recent proceedings revolutionary courts across the country had sentenced 37 backers of the shah to jail terms ranging from a month to 12 years.

The newspaper Ayendegan reported, meanwhile, that an undetermined number of unidentified men armed with machine guns and revolvers opened fire three times on the central office of the country's Islamic revolutionary committees. No injuries were reported.

The newspaper said revolutionary militiamen guarding the headquarters building did not shoot back during Friday's attacks because they feared hitting bystanders.

The latest violence came three days after Ayatollah Morteza Motahari, a close associate of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was assassinated. Khomeini was the architect of the Islamic revolution that swept the shah from power. Khomeini leads the Revolutionary Council, the supreme authority in the current post-revolution period and the guiding force for the revolutionary committees.

A little-known, militant Islamic organization called Forghan claimed responsibility for Motahari's death. The same group claimed responsibility for the slaying of Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani on April 23. Gharani was a former armed forces chief of staff of Khomeini's revolutionary regime. The newspaper said Friday's attack was carried out by men firing from motorcycles. The committees' central offices are located in an ornate building that formerly housed the Iranian Parliament.

Famous Seal Back For His Vacation

ROCKPORT, Maine (AP)—Andre the Seal, Maine's most famous summer visitor, arrived in Rockport today for his annual summer vacation, breaking by 17 hours his old record for the 160-mile swim from Massachusetts.

Trainer Harry A. Goodridge said Andre made the trip in just 65 hours, making none of his customary stops along the way.

Goodridge had stocked up on one of Andre's favorite fish—alewives—and he tossed a few into Andre's pen as soon as he paddled in, at 8:45 a.m.

Only a handful of people were on hand to greet the celebrity flipper-flapper, who set out Wednesday from Marblehead, Mass., amid the customary fanfare from the media. It was one of the four spectators who first spotted Andre this morning, Goodridge said.

The 220-pound harbor seal, who winters at the New England Aquarium in Boston, is set loose in the ocean each year and by instinct returns to the same spot in Rockport. Last year, he made the journey in a record-setting 82 hours.

Fuel Sipper Makes 73.9 MPG

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Moodymobile, a fuel-sipping car driven by two former Charlotte hot-rod mechanics, recently ended a 840-mile trip from Daytona, Fla., to Washington with an average of 73.9 miles per gallon.

Inventors Ralph Moody and Mike Shetley, who learned their engineering in Charlotte race-car pit crews, ended their journey to the cheers of politicians.

Congressional members stood in line to have their pictures made with their diesel automobile, and 11 of them agreed to buy one of the gas-pinchers.

Rep. Jim Martin, D-N.C., was among those placed on a six-month waiting list to purchase one of the $8,900 cars.

Moody and Shetley said the engine will be housed in a Mercury body.

The two men said the Moodymobile made one stop for gas on its trip north in suburban Virginia. The drivers filled the tank with 11.1 gallons under the watchful eye of television cameras and reporters. The cost of the fill-up was $8.22.

Moody and Shetley said the car averages 84 miles to the gallon. They blamed the lower mileage on the recent trip on a heavy load in the car.

Moody and John Holman in 1957 founded Holman and Moody Inc., a Charlotte-based stock-car team that raced on the NASCAR Grand National Circuit. Moody left Charlotte three years ago to join Shetley at Old Car Reproductions Inc. in Oak Hill, Fla.

Wisconsin Tax Cut

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Wisconsin's eight-week tax moratorium went into effect this week, with taxpayers' paychecks enriched by the amount normally withheld for state income taxes—a total of more than $200 million dollars.

The tax hiatus is part of a $942 million tax cut bill signed into law by Gov. Lee Dreyfus in February. The bill is designed to reduce a state budget surplus some observers estimated at near $1 billion.

Figures from the state Revenue Department show extra income from the moratorium— from payroll periods starting April 30th to those beginning June 27th—will add $125 to the family of four with one wage earner making $15,000 annually.

A family of four with a single wage earner making $20,000 annually should realize about $193 dollars, the department said, with ceiling of $900 for those with incomes of $75,000 or more.

Once the moratorium is over, a new, lower tax rate goes into effect so taxpayers won't come up short at year's end.

The Girl Scouts of America was founded in Georgia in 1912.

Czarist rule ended in Russia in 1917.

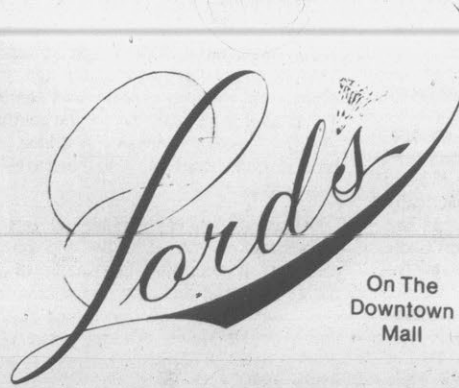

TESTIFY ON HIGH MILEAGE CAR—Ralph Moody, right, and Mike Shetley appear before a House appropriations subcommittee Friday in Washington to testify on a car they refined which gets 80 plus miles to the gallon. The automobile is an American made vehicle which has had a turbo-supercharged diesel engine installed in it. (AP Laserphoto)

Garden Club Members Share Love Of Plants

"I LIKE FERNS," ... Barbara King said, "but I'm planting these other kinds for someone else."

"I LIKE TAKING CARE ... of my plant," Robin Arrington said as she began the planting procedure.

"I LIKE CHOOSING ... my plant," Patricia White said as she demonstrated the correct way to place soil in a container — holding the pot over the bucket of soil so the excess will fall back into the bucket.

Four years ago the Greenville Garden Club began working with the P-VAC students of Aycock School here to teach them the joys and the skills of planting. This has been an ongoing project, one that has brought joy to students and mentors alike.

Former ECU Student Enjoys Touring With Luboff Choir

She's home for the summer, happy to be back in Greenville but equally happy about the exciting recent months she spent traveling across the U.S., including Alaska, and Canada as a singer with the famed Norman Luboff Choir.

Jackie (Jacqueline) Willis Carnes is one of two dozen singers — twelve female and twelve male — chosen by director Luboff for his 1979 touring season. She's the only North Carolinian in the choir.

"This year," Ms. Carnes explained, "the choir's tour has been divided into two parts. The first part, just completed, opened in January and the second part will begin in October."

A native of Morehead City, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Willis, Ms. Carnes is well known locally for many performances on the East Carolina University campus, where she completed both undergraduate and graduate studies in voice. Mrs. Gladys White was her teacher.

In her student years, Ms. Carnes sang the lead role of Tiresias in Poulenc's opera, "Les Mamelles de Tiresias," and Giannetta in Donizetti's "Elixir of Love," as well as several principal characters in ECU's Opera Theater's periodic production of scenes from operas, such as Marie in Berg's "Wozzeck;" Cio-Cio San in Puccini's "Madame Butterfly;" and Fiordiligi in Mozart's "Cosi fan Tutte."

Winning in musical competitions became an established habit for Ms. Carnes. In the long list of wins have been first places in state and regional auditions sponsored by the National Association of Teachers of Singing; winner of state and regional auditions of the Federation of Music Clubs; and for several years, recipient of awards in District Metropolitan Opera Auditions. One year she placed fourth in the Regional Metropolitan auditions held in Atlanta.

Other highlights of student days she recalls with pleasure were opportunities to sing with local groups. She mentioned, as examples "solos in the ECU Christmas production of Handel's 'Messiah,' and I was featured in concerts given by the ECU Chamber Singers. I was also invited to sing solos with the Women's Glee Club, and most recently, I sang with the ECU Concert Choir under the direction of Brett Watson."

Outside Greenville Opportunities to sing have taken Ms. Carnes outside Greenville. "In 1974 I studied opera in West Virginia under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, and had roles in scenes as musically different as Wagner's "Die Walkure," Tchaikovsky's "Eugene Onegin" and Bizet's "Carmen," plus a full production of Mozart's "Magic Flute." The next summer, 1975, Ms. Carnes added, "I sang with the Chautauqua Opera Company in New York. Leonard Treash was the director. I had the honor of creating the lead role of Liz in the world premiere of Philip Marshall's opera 'Seymour Barab.'"

That was the summer she sang "one of my favorite roles, Musetta in Puccini's 'La Boheme.' Other roles I had at Chautauqua were in Bernstein's 'West Side Story' and Verdi's 'La Traviata.' Someday she wants to sing the role of Elizabeth Proctor in Robert Ward's 'The Crucible.'"

When not on tour, she and her husband Larry work together as conductors of three youth choirs in the First Presbyterian Church in Kinston.

"Sometimes, we sing duets together," Ms. Carnes said. Larry Carnes was formerly a voice student at ECU. A baritone, he was featured in two productions of the ECU Opera Theater.

Musical talent runs in both their families. "My brother, Jerry Willis had a fine basso voice. He died at Christmas in 1976 after having been paralyzed for sixteen years following a diving accident."

Carnes' mother, Mrs. Rebecca B. Carnes of Chapel Hill is a lyric soprano who often performs in the Chapel Hill area.

"I miss being in Greenville and am looking forward to getting home to Morehead and being on the beach again," Ms. Carnes said. But I'm excited about the second part of this year's tour. We go on the road again in October. One of the places we'll be performing is at Raleigh on November 22 when the Luboff Choir appears in a Friends of the College concert."

"I like planting the plant," Terry Rhodes said.

"I like choosing my plant," Patricia White said.

"I like taking care of mine," Robin Arrington said.

"I like ferns. I'll plant these other kinds for someone else, but the one I want to take home is the fern," Barbara King said.

These answers from Pre-Vocational Activities Center students at Aycock Junior High School here were in response to a question from Mrs. Sally Klingenschmitt during a gardening workshop. "Mrs. Sally," as she asks the students to call her, has been chairman of a Greenville Garden Club Garden Therapy with Handicapped Students project since its beginning in 1976.

Every school semester, Mrs. Sally and other Greenville Garden Club members spend a few days visiting with special education students at Aycock School teaching them the joys of planting and plant care.

Among the Garden Club members who have donated their time this semester, are besides Mrs. Sally, Mrs. Christine Helms, Mrs. Phoebe Owens, Mrs. Christine Galloway, and Mrs. Maude Moore. The women share their gardening knowledge and skill with the students both to add their enjoyment of the world around them and also to possibly introduce them to a promising vocation field.

"This is a pre-vocational class," the students' teacher, Mrs. Nancy Walters, said. "We spend a lot of time exploring various job areas. Working with plants is one good possibility of a life work for some of my students, so we look into this area thoroughly."

"First choose a pot," Mrs. Sally advises, gathered around a table covered with newspaper. "It can be any kind of container just as long as it has holes in or near the bottom. And what are those holes for?"

"Drainage," a student answers.

"Let's give him applause, because that's exactly right," Mrs. Sally said.

"And what, besides rocks that we all know about, do you think makes a good filter at the bottom of the pot?"

Nobody could guess, so Mrs. Sally held up a scrap of nylon hose. "Isn't this funny? But it works great because it filters so well that no bits of dirt can fall out on your mama's furniture. Of course, you need to use a plate or a plastic lid or something under your pot anyway."

She then discussed the components of good potting soil, and congratulated the students because they remembered from last semester about compost — what it is and how it can be made at home from yard clippings, kitchen scraps, and the like.

She elaborated on each of the things plants need to live and do well, all suggested by the students — sunlight; the right temperature air, 65 to 70 degrees for most, "about what feels good to you," food from its soil; water and love.

Many of the students placed plants in containers they had painted or otherwise decorated themselves. The same day, in the morning, they'd had fun labeling each of the plants they'd already potted with the assistance of Mrs. Christine Helms and Mrs. Maude Moore.

In addition to the every-semester workshop project, the Greenville Garden Club members have landscaped, with the help of the students themselves, a courtyard near the P-VAC classroom.

"I just love these children," Mrs. Sally, a retired primary teacher and teaching supervisor, said. "They're so spontaneous, so genuinely interested in what we're doing. I really believe they're all plant lovers just like I am."

Robert Ward To Teach Opera Composing At Duke University

By BEVERLY WOLTER
Duke University News Service
DURHAM — Composer, conductor, teacher, administrator, editor — Robert Ward is a man of many musical parts.

The affable Pulitzer Prize-winning composer, who, among other things, thinks people ought to be able to enjoy contemporary music, will add still another hat to those he has worn, when he becomes part time professor of music at Duke University next fall.

He has been a visiting professor teaching composition in the Duke music department this year.

For seven years president of the North Carolina School of the Arts, and for five years teacher of composition and composer-in-residence there, Ward is currently occupied with three varied musical commissions.

Opera for Charlotte
For the Charlotte Opera Association, he is writing an opera based on the medieval love story of Abelard and Heloise.

For the Nashville Symphony he is composing an orchestral work to be performed in connection with the opening concert of a new arts center in Nashville in 1980.

For the American Guild of Organists, he is doing an organ composition for the 1980 national conference in Minneapolis.

He described the opera, to be performed during the 1980-81 season, as "contemporary but reflecting the medieval period." It opens with Latin hymn, "Veni Creator Spiritus," sung by a chorus of nuns. The second scene will depict a rehearsal of a medieval mystery play on the steps of Notre Dame.

"The crucial part of a new opera," Ward said, "is to set the tone of the period, and get listeners into a frame of mind for what the opera's going to be about."

His success in doing so is illustrated by "The Crucible," which in 1962 was not only a Pulitzer Prize winner but also the New York Music Critics Circle citation winner. The libretto is based on Arthur Miller's play by the same name about the Salem, Massachusetts, witch hunts.

Unmistakably American

A Milwaukee critic, after hearing his "Festive Ode," written for the Milwaukee Symphony, wrote, "Ward is modern in outlook, but is not afraid of tunefulness and he drives to the heights in exhilarating fashion. He is not only capable and clever in his craft, but he is thoroughly and unmistakably American."

Ward said he feels that "at a time when listeners have been besieged, bothered and bewildered by verbal explanations, apologies and sales pitches for every kind of music, there is a strong temptation to remain silent altogether and trust that the simple hearing of one's music will amply justify and explain its existence.

"Never in the history of music have we had so much verbalizing and theorizing about music as in the past 50 years. Much of this has been based on the assumption that musical progress is achieved by the use of increasingly complex materials with the development of new 'systems' to justify the complexities.

Expressive Potential

"I don't mean to throw out the baby with the bath water," he continued. "I think many new materials have been created in this century that are usable and full of expressive potential, including rock, primitive music and the Broadway musical, as well as serial and electronic or synthesizer music."

But Ward also believes that "much of the highly publicized, pretentiously complex music which has flourished under subsidization in the university atmosphere may be doomed to a final resting place in some short paragraphs in future music history books.

"I suspect that 100 years hence the music of our best popular composers may have survived in terms of listener interest better than that of the self-conscious often arrogant, composers who will not deign, and perhaps cannot express themselves in simple musical language."

Conductor

As a conductor, Ward has appeared with many orchestras and opera companies in the United States. He was the first American composer to conduct a premiere of his opera in a German opera house when he directed a performance of "The Crucible" at the Hessisches Staatstheater in Wiesbaden.

He doesn't talk much about his conducting, other than to say that he would like very much to do more of it. Even for him, and his energy, time imposes limitations.

Before he went to the School of the Arts, he was executive vice-president and managing editor of Galaxy Music Corporation and Highgate Press.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Ward is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music and studied composition in the graduate school of the Juilliard School of Music. He has held three Guggenheim Fellowships and a grant from the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

He holds an honorary doctorate from Duke, serves on innumerable boards, and has had his works commissioned by musical organizations ranging from the New York City Opera and Central City Opera to the Powder River Foundation and the Goldman Band. During World War II, he was the bandleader of the 7th Infantry Division.

Assisting Students

When it comes to teaching at Duke, he is looking forward particularly to assisting students in writing operas.

While the nation has many music schools and departments, none, Ward said, actually teach the writing of opera and musicals — how to handle the combining of music and libretto or books with the elements of staging a production.

The Eugene O'Neill Theater Center in New London, Connecticut, last summer started a program under which young composers and librettists could have their works given workshop productions by a professional company. Ward worked with the center then, and will again this summer as the young artists learn through seeing their works performed.

He already has started working in a similar manner here, but with work in a beginning stage, not in the completed stage in which it arrives at the O'Neill.

He is advising Michael Ching, a pianist and Mary Duke Biddle scholar in the Duke Music department, and also another student, Elise Glickman. Ching is writing the music and Ms. Glickman an original libretto for an opera.

Teaching New Course

This fall Ward will be teaching a new course, open to non-majors as well as music majors, titled "The Musical Theater in Western Civilization."

The prospect of encouraging young operatic and musical composers and librettists is enticing to Ward as he dons still another hat.

Incidentally, one hat he wore once upon a time has been overlooked so far. The robust, white-haired Ward once was a boy soprano.

No Legal Grounds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal court judge has found that a Rocky Mount Senior High School 10th grader has no legal grounds to test the legality of North Carolina's competency testing program.

U.S. District Court Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. ruled April 4 that the plaintiff, Bobby Green, had no legal standing since he had not taken the competency test and would not have to take it until he reached the 11th grade.

The suit was brought last Oct. 31, at the instigation of the state chapter of the Southern Conference Leadership Conference shortly before the first test was administered to 11th graders in November.

Six Cents Damages Awards

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Durham man and his son Friday were awarded six cents in damages from the Four Seasons Mall and a former security guard at the mall as a result of a shooting incident in 1977.

The two had filed a suit seeking $150,000.

A Superior Court jury awarded David R. Fuller of Chapel Hill, who was arrested after the incident, one cent in actual damages and one cent in punitive damages. His father, Peyton Fuller, a Duke University administrator, who had sued for damage to his automobile, received four cents.

May Close Wilmington District

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers say the Corps' Wilmington district may be closed in response to strong opposition to the proposed closing of its smaller district in Charleston, S.C.

Corps officials said Friday that closing or reducing the Wilmington operations were alternatives included in a study aimed at improving civil works activities in the Southeast.

The study is expected to be completed in June. Corps officials said if changes are approved by federal officials, they would be implemented this fall.

Col. Robert L. Bouffard of the Corps' regional office in Atlanta said a report outlining the impact and advantages of the alternatives would be released on May 14.

Baker Undecided

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said Friday he has not decided whether he will enter the North Carolina presidential primary next year.

Baker, addressing the annual convention of the North Carolina Federation of Republican Women, said a favorite-son candidacy by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., may keep Baker out of the state's primary.

"It is simply too early to make the decision," he said during a news conference. "My present plans are to run in every primary, but I recognize that Jesse Helms is a significant political figure. My inclination would be to stay out (if Helms became a candidate)."

Guards Back At N.Y. Prison

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state's prisons are slowly beginning to return to normal, as guards head back to the job after ratifying a new three-year contract and ending their 16-day walkout.

Guards began going back to work late Friday night for the midnight shift. But the first contingent of guards approaching normal staffing levels was expected to arrive this morning.

And the state was to begin sending home some of the 12,000 National Guard troops who helped run the prisons during the strike.

Holding Talks On $15 Million Va-N.C. Causeway

ROAD BLOCK — A thunderstorm which dumped more than seven inches of rain on middle Tennessee caused this rural road blockage near here Friday. Over 100 persons had to be evacuated in areas that are not normally flooded in times of heavy rain fall. Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander is asking for disaster relief over a fourteen county area. (AP Laserphoto)

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Virginia, refusing to slake the federal government's appetite for False Cape State Park, is talking with North Carolina about a $15 million causeway to connect it with Knotts Island, N.C.

The Interior Department's U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service wants to acquire the state park and adjacent land on the Currituck Outer Banks in North Carolina to protect it from future development.

Until the two states started talking, Virginia had all but given up hope of developing access to its 4,200-acre False Cape State Park because of the enormous cost.

The park has water on two sides, a federally owned wildlife refuge on another and the North Carolina Outer Banks on the fourth.

Ben Bolen, Virginia director of parks and recreation, said Friday the fact that North Carolina officials have agreed to discuss sharing the cost of a causeway "is the first real advance they have made. They are sincerely interested."

The causeway not only would provide access to the state park, but would open a route to North Carolina's Outer Banks to the south.

Access to the park and the North Carolina Outer Banks now is available only through Back Bay National Wildlife Refuge, owned by the Department of Interior.

The department will not allow a road to be built through the refuge because it believes traffic would be harmful to marine and wildlife. Permits to travel through the refuge are now available, but won't be after December of this year.

Virginia 165 goes directly to Knotts Island, which is partly in Virginia and partly in North Carolina.

There is no road south of False Cape Park, but vehicular travel along the beach or behind the sand dunes is possible.

Consideration is being given to building a road south of False Cape in North Carolina if North Carolina can buy land owned by private real estate developers.

The Fish and Wildlife Service wants to acquire False Cape Park, along with the entire northern section of Currituck's Outer Banks to Corolla. Wetlands and a protective buffer strip to Dare County, N. C. would also be acquired under this alternative.

Bolen said, "The Interior Department has been told, flatly, that the park isn't available."

The department, Bolen said, probably doesn't have the authority to condemn the park — "It probably would take an act of Congress to do that, although we haven't really researched the legality yet."

Bolen said no reply had been received from Interior about Virginia's stand on the issue, "but we didn't expect a response. They are kind of like the Russians. They say what's mine is mine and what's yours is negotiable."

New Technique To Implant Teeth

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — University of Florida dentists say they have developed an operation that could make dentures unnecessary for some patients.

The technique involves treating extracted teeth with a "bioglass-ceramic" material and reimplanting them. In tests on baboons, the treated teeth fused to the animals' jawbones 55 percent of the time.

"In many of the things we dentists do, we just try to get something that will not be rejected. Here, we can induce things to occur which are positive," said Dr. Caleb King, a Gainesville periodontist who has worked in research at the university's School of Dentistry for seven years.

Dentists plan to try the technique in the next two weeks on a Gainesville woman, who had a diseased tooth pulled.

If the operation works, the woman will be spared the trouble and expense of having a denture made.

King noted that the success rate could be higher in humans than baboons.

"Of course you're not working with the ideal patient," he explained. "They don't do exactly what you ask them."

However, he said general use of the material and technique is a long way off, though.

Mental Health Month

May has been proclaimed "Mental Health Month" in North Carolina in a proclamation made by Gov. James B. Hunt, urging all citizens to observe the month and commending the efforts of the Mental Health Association in the state.

The Association is a volunteer, non-profit organization with 37 chapters in North Carolina. It promotes good mental health, works to prevent mental illness through public education, and works to assure that adequate services are available for people in need.

"May, 1979, is an especially important time to devote to mental health in our state," said Cecil Merritt of Goldsboro, president of the Mental Health Association in North Carolina. "The recent Governor's Conference on Mental Health held in April pointed to the many things that still need to be done to assure all citizens in need of mental health care to receive adequate and appropriate services.

"We still have a big job to do to educate the public about the fact that help is available and that mental illness should be treated just like any other illness," he continued.

"The President's Commission on Mental Health estimates that one in every six or seven Americans will need some type of mental health care in their lifetime," Merritt noted. "This translates to over 800,000 people in North Carolina. Mental illness has been described by the American Medical Association as the nation's number one health problem."

NEW DIRECTOR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Esther Novak, director of the Hispanic Arts Program at Rutgers University, has been named director of the National Endowment for the Arts' Office of Special Projects.

Pitt County Mental Health Association, Coffman Bldg., Evans St. Mall.

Jeen Kim Honored

Rose High senior Jeen Kim has been honored twice in recent days at the national level for outstanding achievement academically.

From Irvine, California, headquarters of Golden Plate Awards Council, Kim has received an invitation to attend the 1979 Banquet of the Golden Plate weekend to be held June 21-23 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

If Kim accepts the invitation, he will attend as the sponsored guest of Barbara De Voss, manager of Carolina East Mall, Greenville.

The event this year, the 18th annual one, will honor 400 of America's most outstanding students from all parts of the country.

The second honor bestowed on Kim is his selection as one of the 1,000 outstanding young American students to be awarded a certificate by the President's Commission on Presidential Scholars.

The annual selection of finalists by the President's Commission identifies the most intellectually distinguished and accomplished graduating high school seniors from among a total of more than three million scheduled to graduate this year.

Kim is the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Kim of Greenville.

Observes National Metric Week

The National Council of Teachers of Mathematics has proclaimed the week of May 7 as National Metric Week. In the third annual observance of this event, many Pitt County Schools are planning special activities related to metric education.

According to Jane Huffman, math resource teacher for the county schools, many educators support the use of the metric system because of its universality and simplicity.

"More than 99 percent of the world's population lives in a 'metric' country," said Mrs. Huffman. "While there are more than 50 units to remember in the English or 'inch-pound' system, there are only seven basic units in the metric system."

Mrs. Huffman pointed out that just like the American monetary system, the metric system is related to the number ten. Figuring with the system will be easier with its use of decimals, which are easier to teach and learn than fractions.

The youngest children in the schools are working with metric vocabulary and measuring devices to increase their metric education.

"Primary grade students will be working on relating the metric system to their closest environment — their body — by measuring their own heights and weights," said Mrs. Huffman. Intermediate and upper grade students will observe the week with more indepth projects, with high school students involved with daily announcements in metric and field trips.

Just a few of the schools' activities are as follows: a metric field day at D. H. Conley, with all estimations to be made in metric form; the selection of Mr. and Mrs. "Metric America" at Bethel Elementary — along with a metric "Kool-Aide" party; a poster and collage contest at Ayden Middle School, with all entries based on metric education; dancing the "metric hop" at G. R. Whitfield, along with a scavenger hunt; the figuring of the faculty's height and weight at Falkland Elementary; the releasing of 100 balloons from Grifton School with metric slogans; daily announcements at Farmville Central by the Math Club; and a "Metric Spot" on WFAG May 9, 9 a.m., sponsored by Farmville Middle School, along with a "metricream party" for weekly winners of intercom problems.

NEW DOLLAR COIN DESIGN — The new dollar coin authorized by Congress, to be placed in general circulation July 1, will bear a likeness of Susan B. Anthony on the obverse, with a design emblematic of the symbolic eagle of Apollo 11 landing on the moon on the reverse.

Frank Gasparro, the Mint's Chief Engraver and Sculptor, executed both designs. The new dollar is slightly larger than a quarter and smaller than a half-dollar and weighs 8.1 grams. (U.S. Mint Photo)

Claims Millions Wasted

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader's Health Research Group says Medicare, Medicaid and other federally financed health programs are wasting hundreds of millions of dollars a year paying for prescription drugs the government admits are ineffective.

pending a review by the National Academy of Sciences, which found many ineffective and others of doubtful usefulness. And administrative procedures to ban further sales of the products have dragged on for years.

Meanwhile, Wolfe said, the government generally has been reimbursing patients, hospitals and pharmacies for inferior products, "wasting from $200 million to $300 million per year" in state and federal funds.

He noted that as recently as July, Food and Drug Commissioner Donald Kennedy recommended that HEW stop using federal funds to pay for less-than-effective drugs.

HEW spokesman John Blamphin said, when asked about Wolfe's letter, that Kennedy's proposal has been "under active review" and that Califano plans to act on it promptly after he returns from a week-long trip to Europe which begins today.

Typical of the drugs the group referred to is Mystecilin-F, a combination of the broad-spectrum antibiotic tetracycline and the anti-fungal agent amphotericin.

The required labeling intended for physicians carries a boxed statement that the "National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council has stated that in its informed judgment Mystecilin-F is ineffective as a fixed combination. ... It is preferable, in the panel's opinion, to prescribe anti-fungal drugs when clinically indicated rather than to use them indiscriminately as 'prophylaxis' against an uncommon clinical entity."

The drug, manufactured by E.R. Squibb and Sons, nonetheless has retail sales estimated at $11 million a year for more than 1.5 million prescriptions.

Next Year, Maybe?

WRENTHAM, Mass. (AP) — Paul Guilbert didn't get to attend his Cumberland High School junior prom, but he has his eyes set on next year's senior prom, which he hopes to attend with a male escort.

Guilbert, 17, of Cumberland, R.I., an admitted homosexual who lost his bid to take a male friend to Friday's dance, did not picket the dance as he had planned earlier.

Also, several gay rights groups who had said they planned to demonstrate outside the King Philip restaurant here failed to show up.

The American Civil Liberties Union decided not to press the case in court because Paul's father-opposed his son's plans.

North Korea's Lavish Kiddie Culture

By EDITH LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
PYONGYANG, North Korea (AP) — North Korean toddlers are literally singing the praises of President Kim Il-sung before they're 2 years old.

At the age of 3, the kiddies have perfected simple songs and dance steps about "eagerly waiting to see the beloved leader of the fatherland."

By the time they're 4-year-olds, they're performing on xylophones, accordions and mini-pianos and singing about "the train of reunification of the fatherland."

And this is just the beginning. As the youngsters get older, the instruments get bigger, the songs and dances more complex, the costumes and make-up as lavish as a Las Vegas show — and the devotion to Kim Il-sung even stronger.

The result is a nation of minishowmen with a single-minded commitment to glorifying one man in music, paint and song. From kindergarten through the country's 11-year compulsory education course, a large chunk of time is devoted to studying music and the arts in school — and after school.

"Our great leader taught us if one knows only knowledge without practice, he will be only a bookworm," explained Kim Si Bom, general director of Pyongyang's Childrens and Students Palace.

The practice begins in the nursery where almost all infants are sent when 19 months old. They immediately start learning songs and dances and by age 3, they're already learning notes and scales.

Kim Yung-sook, director of the September 15th nursery, said it's a group effort. "If a child has a special talent, we will develop it, but it must be done through collective education. If there is a leader, others will follow him until they are all almost equal ... as our respected and beloved leader said, children may have envy if they differ with others, so we have to overcome this."

Youngsters start performing at a very early age and take it seriously. The night before the opening ceremony at the 35th world table tennis championships, more than 100 7-and 8-year-olds were practicing a dance routine in a gymnasium until well after 1 a.m.

When students get to secondary school at about age 11, they have a chance to indulge in a double dose of the arts — once in regular school and once at a children's palace after school.

Most students get to spend at least a month and as long as a year at a children's palace learning a special skill. At the Pyeongyang children's palace, where 10,000 students come every day, there are 23 specialties in art, music, dance, gymnastics, sports and science.

"These children's palaces are not supposed to train specialists," said Kim. "There are other specialist schools. The mission of the palaces is to heighten the level of general knowledge of the child and make him acquire more than one skill."

Music, art and literature are only taught in specialized schools which students enter after high school.

Visitors to any school — from nursery to college — are always taken to the music and dance class for an instant performance. Last Sunday, students at the childrens palace put on more than an hour-long show with professional-looking scenery and lots of talent.

The program ranged from a 10-year-old boy soprano singing "I Seek Friends in the South" to a dance by a dozen girls praising "the marshall's love for us." Of the more than a dozen numbers, only one was non-political — a dance about a bear stealing honey from bees.

"As far as quality is concerned, their music is excellent," said Sue Butler of Iowa City, Iowa, a former music teacher and mother of the U.S. under-11-year-old Ping Pong champion. "I was surprised to see the variety of instruments in the schools and how Western their music is, though there is Oriental influence and something uniquely Korean."

But she said: "It's not any better than in our schools ... though I think they use music more than we do. No way do our kids go marching down the streets singing like they do."

A STUDY IN LINES— Photographers to whom lines in a photograph composition appeal will find many subjects in wooden buildings of rural eastern North Carolina. This long closed small store in Williamston is strong in vertical lines in the building and surrounding fence, and also has right and left-angled lines in the two roof sections. A strong white horizontal line on the extension roof and a black line in the foreground, as well as the lines of tree limbs and overhead wires all add to the diversity of lines in this simple photographic composition. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Farmville Festival on Sunday, May 13

FARMVILLE — The third annual Farmville Spring Arts and Crafts Festival, sponsored by the Farmville Community Arts Council, will take place from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, May 13 at J. Y. Monk Memorial Park.

Preceding Festival Day on the 13th, the Arts Council is sponsoring a week long Photography Contest for amateurs only. This event opens Monday, May 7 and continues through Friday, May 11 and will be at the office of Dr. Bert Warren Jr., Church Street and at Morgan Grain, Pine Street, during regular business hours. Entries can be black and white or color, and there is no restriction on size, subject matter or type of mounting—in fact, photos need not be mounted, although it is preferred they be if at all possible.

Entries will be judged in three age categories — young people through the eighth grade; high school students; and adults. Winners will be displayed in the Farmville Public Library the week following the Festival.

For the Arts and Crafts event on Sunday, there will be displays and sales of macrame, pottery, stained glass, needlework, jewelry, weaving, paintings, etc. All area artists and craftsmen are invited to enter the Festival. Entry fee is $5 and covers any number of entries. Display equipment (stands, tables, etc.) must be furnished by the entrant.

Interested persons are to contact Mrs. Nancy Morgan, 202 W. Church Street, Farmville, N.C., 27528, or phone her at 753-5252. Interested persons can also phone the Festival chairman, Carol Moore at 757-4487 (work) or 749-5521 (home).

Part of the Festival will also feature display of art work from local schools.

Entertainment will be provided during the day as follows:

— 1 to 1:30 p.m. — Music by the Farmville Central High School Band.

— 1:30 to 2 p.m. — Girl Scout troops performing international dances.

— 2 to 2:30 p.m. — A skit by members of the Farmville Central High School cast of "Annie Get Your Gun."

— 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. — A children's hour featuring face painting, puppet shows, bracelet making, street painting, and visits from storybook characters. There will also be an old fire truck for the children to explore.

— 3:30 to 4 p.m. — Music by Barry Shank's Brass Band.

— 4 to 4:30 p.m. — Music by the Methodist Church Cherub Choir; and

— 4:30 to 5 p.m. — Music by Barry Shank's Brass Band.

Later in the month, on May 19, a photographers workshop will be held, with sessions for beginners in the morning and intermediate photographers in the afternoon.

Has World Premiere

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Symphony has performed the world premiere of a composition by one of its own musicians, violinist Jess Isaiah Levin.

The first performance was given May 2 in Galax, Virginia and will be given three more performances in May — in Hayesville on May 9; in Ashe County on May 15; and in Williamston on May 21.

The work is entitled "Tessellation, Variations for Orchestra" and is described by the composer as music in which he has "attempted to achieve considerable contrast in variations" with the whole orchestra afforded a chance to demonstrate its virtuosity.

A native of New York City, Levin joined the Symphony in 1974. Two of his earlier compositions have been premiered by the Symphony — his Violin Concerto in 1977 and "Taki, 183" in 1978.

Fiddle Contest Announced and the Trick and Fancy Division, open to all ages.

The competition is without charge, and prizes totaling nearly $2,000 will be given.

Socialist Art Not Cheap

BY ROLAND TYRRELL
— MOSCOW (UPI) — Whatever else socialism has done for art, it has not made it cheap.

Mrs. Elena Kornetchuk, a blonde 30-year-old former art student from Pittsburgh, Pa., now makes a business of importing contemporary Soviet art to the United States.

"She runs Russian Images, a private Pittsburgh gallery devoted exclusively to modern Soviet art."

"I first got the idea a couple of years ago when I was visiting the Soviet Union to do research for my Ph.D.," she said during a recent business trip to Moscow.

"I took a few things back home with me and friends kept asking if they could have copies of them."

"It was ridiculous. I couldn't take out hundreds of canvases for my friends, so I went into business."

Mrs. Kornetchuk admits she still has not completed her Ph.D., which she began in 1975 at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., with the ambitious title of "The Politics of Soviet Art."

Instead, she and her husband, Jonathan Showe, a former White House adviser on international economics, bought, renovated and converted the Trust Department of the Pittsburgh

National Bank and set up their gallery there.

They opened last July and since then have sold about 200 works of Soviet art with a total value of about $100,000.

"About 50 percent of our customers are private collectors, 40 percent are corporations and the rest are private galleries," she said.

Prices range from $200 to $400 for small graphic works printed in limited issues of 25 copies by a little known artist such as Yevgeni Sidorkin, right up to $1,000 or $2,000 for a full-size oil painting by Yevgeni Kumankov, a Moscow stage and movie designer.

"In fact, we take most of our pictures on consignment — about 80 percent of them," Mrs. Kornetchuk said.

"On consignment" means the gallery takes a picture and only pays the artist if it is sold. If it is not sold, the picture can be returned to the artist. A bankers letter of credit, posted with the official Soviet agency for the import and export of art works, is collateral for the "loan."

"I can work much faster now than when I first started out buying pictures," Mrs. Kornetchuk said, sitting rapidly through a pile of watercolors, rejecting most of them but setting some aside for a later look.

"Before, I used to buy what I liked. Now I have a better idea of what sells."

She holds up a large, dark watercolor by Kumankov showing the onion domes of St. Basil's Cathedral on Moscow's Red Square.

"I'd like to buy it," she says wistfully. "But Kumankov's too expensive and his pictures don't go quickly."

She holds up another watercolor, a winter scene showing Russian villagers tramping in the snow.

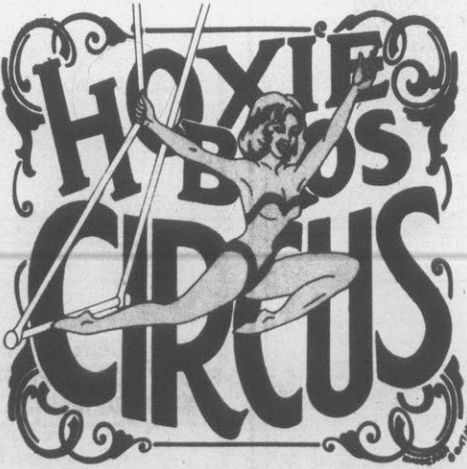

"This one's nice, but a corporation wouldn't buy it. Corporations won't buy anything with figures in it. Nudes, of course, are out. They like landscapes or abstract pictures."

"Whatever it is, it must have movement and color and it must work from 50 yards as well as from close up because it will probably hang in a hall or lobby."

Children's Art Now On View

ONE OF THE WALLS ... at the Greenville Art Center covered with the colorful art of students in Pitt County Elementary Schools.

There used to be a time when the gayest spring event for school children was the annual May Pole festival on the first day of May with its bright ribbons wound around poles and frilly dress up clothes.

Since the 1950's, when military president "Ike" Eisenhower confiscated this joyous day to turn it into National Law and Order Day, children have channeled their love of color and action into art, so that each spring becomes a time of creative celebration.

The annual exhibition of art by children of Pitt County elementary schools now at the Greenville Art Center is an exhilarating show, another of those floor to wall marvels of enchanting children's art in riotously rich colors created with paper, pencil, crayons, ink, tempera, etc. that young children handle dextrously.

Clowns, school buses, birds, fantasy creatures, houses, flowers are all part of the cheerful collection that people this show.

It's the finest show ever exhibited by Pitt County elementary students, and will have appeal to all ages.

Ms. Edith Walker, director of the Center, notes that parents in the county (or others) who cannot fit in seeing the show during regular 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. hours can call her for an appointment to see it at some other hour.

Working With Hands Spurs Writing Creativity

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — James McConkey thinks writers should use their hands for more than pushing pencils or pounding typewriters.

McConkey, whose new novel "The Tree House Confessions" brings the number of his books to five, feels "it's very important to work with the hands" — building and making things.

And he practices what he preaches.

He's built, among other things, a tool shed, a carport and a tree house, and currently is into barns. He's helped build two — one for horses, the other for goats — on his 173-acre farm near Ithaca, N.Y., and has another — to house farm implements — about half finished.

The slender, 57-year-old McConkey says, "I've always wanted to build something. So I learned how to by observing things, how they were put together."

He says working with his hands, making things, "makes me feel clean, makes me feel good."

And, on occasion, it gives him ideas for his books.

"The Tree House Confessions," for example, deals with a man who retreats to a large tree house in an effort to sort out his life, trying, as McConkey says, "to get a notion of his identity."

The idea for the book, he says, came a few years back when he was helping the youngest of his three sons build a tree house on their farm.

"While working on it," he says, "I began to see the tree house as an episode in a life. In actuality, building that tree house helped build my novel."

A teacher of writing and literature at Cornell University for 23 years, McConkey tries to pass his passion for building along to his students.

"I try to encourage the writing students to take courses in carpentry or masonry or welding," he says with a smile, "but I never have any success. 'Except,' he adds wryly, 'for one student. He took a course in welding and the next thing I knew he was teaching a welding course.'"

McConkey, an amiable, soft-spoken man who says he took up teaching after he couldn't find a job as a newspaperman, says teaching both complements and detracts from his writing.

"I don't like to teach too much writing," he says, "because it's too much like what I am trying to do myself. Working with manuscripts keeps you from your own."

"Teaching literature, however, is a lovely thing to do because not only does it give me the chance to teach the books that I love, but it also is very conducive to active writing. Reading Chekhov, for example, makes me want to write."

If his books made him enough money, he says, "I'd teach half-time. I love teaching, but I also love writing. At 57 you realize you are not going to be writing forever and there are several more books I really want to write.

"I could be more prolific that way. As it is, I'm prolific about every seven years. I get a sabbatical every seventh year, which gives me the time to complete a book that I have been working on in the summers, between classes and on weekends."

When he was younger, McConkey says, he liked to write at night but now prefers to work in the morning. "Maybe it has to do with psychic energy," he guesses, "or maybe the phases of the moon, or the barometric pressure. Who knows?"

McConkey has an unusual way of writing. "I start out in longhand, until I get stopped, then I switch to the typewriter. That carries me along a little further, but when I'm stopped I go back to my pencil. It's sort of like pushing my writing forward with alternate use of pencil and typewriter."

McConkey says he is now working on a series of short stories that he eventually hopes to make into a novel.

"I also have thought of another novel. I'm working it out in my head now, but I know it will go. The right thoughts are coming together, and I realize I can, I want to write another book. It's an exciting state."

("The Tree House Confessions" is published by Dutton.)

One-Day Art Show At Belvoir School

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor
Community talent was featured for a one-day art show on Friday, May 4 at Belvoir Elementary School. Six local artists contributed works that were displayed in the school's library, with pupils coming in by classes during the day to see the art.

The six artists are — Mack Dupree, with several portraits in the style of Rembrandt as well as a small number of landscapes and a print; Dempsey Parker, crafted birds on driftwood; Paul Tucker, drawings; Judy Mangiapane, drawings; Jeanne Jenkins, paintings; and Howard Bullock, paintings.

In addition to these six, one of the art teachers in Pitt County schools, Annette Brooks, exhibited some portraits and collages.

The show was designed to give the artists a chance to exhibit their work, and also served to provide students in Belvoir School a chance to see original art.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe R. Stines

Among recent additions to the Children's Library, young readers will find several exciting and well written juvenile novels. Ellen Raskin's most recent work, THE WESTING GAME, was awarded the John Newbery Medal by the American Library Association. With her own special blend of intricacy, humor, and upside-down perceptions, Ellen Raskin has entangled a remarkable cast of characters in a puzzle-knotted, word-twisting plot. She then deftly unravels it again in a surprising and highly satisfying ending.

Sixteen people were invited to the reading of the very strange will of the very rich Samuel W. Westing. They could become millionaires, depending on how they played the game. The not-quite-perfect heirs were paired, and each pair was given $10,000 and a set of clues. All they had to do was find the answer, but the answer to what? The Westing game was tricky and dangerous, but the heirs played on, through blizzards and burglaries and bombs bursting in air. And one of them won!

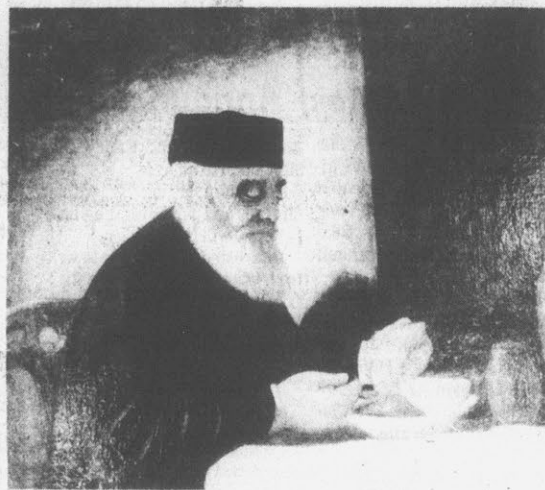

Raskin's style is staccato, her characters well-defined, her plot complicated, her storyline a bit labored — but the device of the game should intrigue readers, and the whole thing is more fun than its parts.

In the year 1922 the hidden tomb of the boy king of Egypt, Tutankhamen, was found by an English archeologist, Howard Carter. The tomb was filled with treasures of gold and silver — beautiful sculpture, jewels, furniture and vases, and everyday personal belongings that the young king used in his lifetime.

Although his treasures were unearthed, very little was discovered about his life. June Reig within her first book, DIARY OF THE BOY KING TUTANKHAMEN (1979), imagines that King Tut's diary was found in his tomb along with his other treasured possessions. The diary kept during his ninth year of life, the year he became King of Egypt, about 1334 B.C., forms a touching and informative book from which indirectly children will learn much about the way of life in Tutankhamen's time.

Richard Peck gave young readers Blossom Culp, a doughty and persistent ghost's companion in THE GHOST BELONGED TO ME (1975). Now fourteen, Blossom tells her own story in GHOSTS I HAVE BEEN (1977). She's spunky, devious, a bit of a female chauvinist, and the outspoken outcast of Bluff City, Mid-America. But she begins a climb to fame one Halloween night when she deliberately put the blame on Letty Shambargh for squelching Alexander Armsworth's conspiracy to overturn Old Man Leverette's outhouse. She goes on to develop the gift for seeing the unseen and in ghostly form she witnesses the terrible last minutes of the sinking of the TITANIC.

Low comedy and high tragedy are beautifully blended by a master storyteller. Who says that spirits and haunts have forsaken the modern age in this twentieth century? There exists enough of them to fill a book and this is the book, GHOSTS I HAVE BEEN.

Horace Page Jr., a 1978 Master of Fine Arts graduate of East Carolina University, has been awarded a Fulbright-Hays Award to study and work in Italy during the academic year 1979-80.

Notification of Page's award was received by Dr. John D. Ebbs, professor of English at ECU and campus representative for national and international fellowships and scholarships.

Page was nominated by Dr. Ebbs for an award during the 1977-78 year, and in that competition was designated an alternate by the Institute of International Education.

Before pursuing his studies in sculpture at ECU, Page attended the College of San Mateo, California, and Norfolk State College and received the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from Old Dominion University.

The Fulbright-Hays Award will go toward the expenses for Page's nine-month period of study under master Italian sculptors at Florence and other locations in Italy and at various sculpture centers.

Volcanos A Source Of Energy

By NORBERTO L. SVARZMAN
NEW YORK, (UPI) — In ancient times, volcanos were seen as gods of fire and destruction but nowadays, man pushed by the energy shortage is harnessing their fire to produce electricity and break the heavy chain of oil dependence.

El Salvador, a little Central American country, about the size of Maryland, has now more geothermic power installed — 60 megawatts — than the Soviet Union with 5.7 megawatts. In 1978 El Salvador produced 20 times more electricity by that method than by the use of oil.

The president of Rio Lempa's Executive Hydroelectric Commission, known by the acronym CEL, U.S.-trained Juan Jose Roberto Cuno Mathies Regalado, while visiting New York, spoke of the big project his country has for the use of the steam and hot water obtained by drilling near the volcanos.

The core of the project is at the Ahuachapan Geothermic Plant, 75 miles west of the capital city of San Salvador, where the volcano Santa Ana rises 7,500 feet above sea level.

El Salvador's 10 volcanos are dormant, Mathies Regalado said, "but still down there we can find fire and heat, which is needed to produce steam and electricity."

"So, considering the energy crisis, we decided to develop the geothermal and hydroelectric resources, as a question of national liberation."

"Nowadays we can offer energy to our people, and even to export electricity to neighboring Guatemala," he said.

Work on the project at Ahuachapan began in 1957 and 20 years later, with two generating units, it is the country's main generating center, with 400 million kilowatt hours, 32 percent of the nation's total production, including fossil fuels and hydroelectric power.

A third unit will be built at a cost of $10.2 million to increase generating capacity to 635 million kilowatts by 1982.

Last year the gross energy production totaled 1,366 million kilowatt hours. Hydroelectric power totaled 930 million kilowatt hours; geothermal 413, and oil-generated 23.

Mathies Regalado, a business administration graduate of Georgetown University, said El Salvador is already the most electrified country of Latin America.

"We foresee a totally electrified country, with the volcanoes being the slaves of the man, not the awesome master of the past," he said.

PINEWOOD DERBY WINNERS — 15 Pitt County Cub Scouts, representing approximately 10 different packs from Pitt County, competed in Saturday's Pinewood Derby Contest held on the Downtown Mall. From a block of wood, each scout had carved and painted a model race car and had already won first-place in contests held earlier by their respective packs. In yesterday's finals, first-place winners in the three categories were: (left to right)

Brad Dickson, Pack 401 of Black Jack, for the most beautiful model; Eddie Harshburger, Pack 385 of Greenville, for the most unusual model; and Mike Means, Pack 385 of Greenville, for the fastest model. Sponsored by the Pitt District Boy Scouts, with arrangements made by Pack 385 of Greenville, it was the first such contest to be held in Pitt County. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Morgan)

Accusations Made

WASHINGTON (AP) — A close aide to Sen. Herman Talmadge says Daniel Minchew, once Talmadge's top aide and now his chief accuser, is "devious and indirect" and spent significant amounts of time in a government job working on his private finances.

Allyne Tisdale also told the Senate Ethics Committee Friday that one day in early 1974 the senator's former wife fired Minchew — temporarily — during a stormy meeting in which she also wrote herself a check for $21,100.

The senator's former wife, Betty, and Minchew are expected to be the major witnesses against Talmadge in the current hearings on allegations the Georgia Democrat violated Senate rules concerning his finances.

Wants To Keep Black Colleges Identity

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — Alumni leaders of North Carolina A&T State University Saturday urged state and federal officials to maintain the identity of the state's predominantly black universities and charged the schools have been the victims of "gross denial and neglect."

About 75 members of the A&T National Alumni Association unanimously approved a resolution calling for enhancement of the black schools and sent copies to Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., University of North Carolina President William C. Friday, members of the UNC Board of Governors and the NAACP.

The future direction of the black schools is a major issue in a desegregation dispute between the university and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, which has rejected UNC proposals for desegregation.

The state filed suit last month in an effort to block HEW's efforts to cut off some of the $89 million in federal funds the 16-campus university system receives from the federal government.

The A&T alumni, including Greensboro City Councilman Jimmy I. Barber, president of the alumni group, and state Rep. Henry E. Frye, D-Guilford, said in the resolution that "The historically black colleges of North Carolina should be maintained and enhanced to a great degree so they can achieve their ultimate potential."

"The black colleges have achieved notable academic and social successes, in spite of being forced to operate within a system of gross denial and neglect."

The resolution also cited the nation's "vital cultural diversity" and said black schools have contributed to that diversity by serving "for nearly 100 years as the fountain of higher education for thousands of students from across the state and the nation."

It also said the black schools — A&T, North Carolina Central University in Durham, Fayetteville State University, Winston-Salem State University and Elizabeth City State University — have produced the majority of black leadership in North Carolina.

The dispute between the university system and the federal government over desegregation stems from a nine-year-old lawsuit filed by the NAACP which charged North Carolina and other southern states discriminated in their public higher education systems.

A federal judge ruled in favor of the NAACP and ordered HEW to come up with programs to speed desegregation in the states involved. Only North Carolina has not settled with HEW.

USC Doubles Sink Pirates, 3-2

Back-to-back South Carolina doubles in the fourth inning gave the Gamecocks a 3-2 victory over East Carolina last night in the first game of a season-closing series for the Pirate baseball team.

South Carolina had to survive a ninth-inning scare from the Pirates to get the win, the Gamecocks' 31st in 42 games this year. Trailing 3-1 going into the bottom of the ninth, ECU's Raymie Styons led off with a solo homer that pulled the Bucs to within one.

Jeff Twitty replaced starter Aaron Scott on the mound for the Gamecocks at that point, striking out a batter and forcing a ground out before Mike Sorrell singled. He was left on first, however, as a ground out ended the inning and the game.

Scott, who got the win, raised his record to 6-4. Twitty was credited with a save. Parker Davis went the distance for the Pirates, losing his fourth game in nine decisions.

South Carolina won the game without the services of coach June Raines. In his third year at the USC helm, Raines was beaned in the head while pitching batting practice before the game. He was taken to Pitt Hospital and kept overnight for observation.

Old-Timers

Some former East Carolina baseball players, including a number expected from the 1961 NAIA championship team, will participate in an Old-Timers Game at 10:00 this morning at Harrington Field.

The Pirates lost two players in the game, center fielder Billy Best, who was ejected for arguing with an umpire in the first inning, and first baseman Mike Sage, who took Best's place in the batting order and was spiked trying to break up a double play in the sixth.

The Pirates end their season tomorrow against the Gamecocks at 2 p.m. at Harrington Field. They are now 24-19 on the season and tomorrow's game will be the last for ECU coach Monte Little, who announced his retirement before last night's contest.

The Gamecocks scored first in the game with a run in the second. Keith Taylor reached after his third strike, a wild pitch, got by catcher Styons. He went to third when Jim Curl's fielder's choice was erred by Pirate third baseman Jerry Carraway. A throwing error by Styons on a steal allowed Taylor to score.

The final two South Carolina runs came in the fourth. With one away, Taylor doubled to left and Curl followed with a two-base hit up the middle that plated Taylor. Walks to Ronnie Crapps, Wes Westbrook and Mark Boatwright pushed Curl across.

The Pirates, who had runners on third in the second and fourth frames, finally broke the ice in the fifth when Jerry Carraway hit a solo shot over the left field fence with one away.

Another ECU player reached third in the seventh, but the Bucs were unable to score again until Styons' homer in the ninth.

Designated hitter Max Rayner paced the Pirate attack with a 2-4 performance, while Taylor was 2-4 for the Gamecocks. The Pirates turned a pair of double plays, in the third and fourth innings.

Irwin Knots Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Hale Irwin, using a new, longer putter, fired a 7-under-par 64 on the still-flooded Woodlands Country Club course and moved into a tie with longshot Sammy Rachels for the lead Saturday in the rain-delayed second round of the $300,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

The steady Irwin, a frustrated non-winner on the American tour last year, and Rachels, who hasn't even come close to leading a tournament before, had 36-hole totals of 133, 9 under par going into Sunday's 36hole windup. Rachels had a second-round 65.

The double-round finish was necessitated when heavy overnight rains drenched the course, made it unplayable and forced the cancellation of Friday's play.

It also forced officials to make some changes in the course that played as a par-72 at 6,997 yards last year when Gary Player, the eventual winner, set the course record at 64. Irwin and others matched that record, but their figures may go in the books with asterisks.

This year, at the start of the tournament, the 10th hole was converted from a relatively short par-5 to a long par-4, measuring some 460 yards.

Then the rains sent Panther Creek flooding out of its banks and over the 16th fairway. In order to make the hole playable, to get the round in, officials moved the tees far forward on that hole, reducing it from 569 yards to 335. To simplify scoring, however, it remained listed as a par-5. In all, the course was reduced by about 360 yards to a length of 6,637.

That reduction, along with the near-ideal playing conditions and the soft greens — which held shots extremely well — and fairways contributed to some unusually low scoring.

In addition to Irwin, Bob Gilder and Orville Moody also tied the listed course record of 64 while Rachels and Wayne Levi each shot 65.

Irwin and Rachels, a 28-yearold who has won only $27,000 in four years on the tour, shared a 1-stroke lead over Leonard Thompson, Gilder, Levi, Mike Brannan and John Schroeder, tied at 134. Brannan and Schroeder had a second round 66s, Thompson a 68.

Lee Trevino, who has made only one bogey in his last 110 holes, was next at 66—135.

"I'm playing awfully good right now," said Trevino, who tied for second last week in New Orleans. "It remains to be seen how well I'll hit the ball over 36 holes tomorrow. That's a lot of golf. I've played four weeks in a row and I've been flying all over the country playing pro-ams and filming commercial in between.

"But if you can get in the hunt, you kind of forget how tired you are. That pumps you up."

There were 10 others at 136, leaving 17 men within 3 strokes of each other going into the last day's play.

Player shot a 68 for 139 and Arnold Palmer had his best round of the year, a 67, for 140. He was 5 under par for the day until he three-putted his 16th hole, missing a second putt of less than two feet.

"This is the first time this year by putting has been up to par with the rest of my game," Irwin said.

Little Retires From ECU Post

East Carolina Baseball Coach Monte Little Saturday announced his resignation from the post, effective the end of the current season, to return to school to complete a doctoral degree.

Little, Pirate coach for the past three years, led the team to an 81-49 record with home game Sunday afternoon against South Carolina the only remaining contest.

He took both his undergraduate and master's degree in physical education from ECU and plans to enroll at Middle Tennessee State to receive his Ph.D. Little also served as an assistant professor of health and physical education at ECU.

"I've really enjoyed my years here at East Carolina," said Little. "It won't be easy to leave, but I feel like I need to add this degree now."

His Pirate coaching career began as an assistant baseball coach in 1973 under Jim Mallory, continued under George Williams, and then saw him become the head coach for the 1977 season.

"Monte has been a valuable member of our coaching staff," said Athletics Director Bill Cain. "I can look at his record here and in the past, and I know that he will be successful in any endeavor. We wish him nothing but the best for the future."

Little's teams at East Carolina won the Southern Conference championship in 1976, the final year for the Pirates in the league, and gained a berth in the NCAA tournament. His next two Pirate teams were tournament contenders as well.

During his playing days, Little starred at Ayden High School, signed with the St. Louis Cardinals organization and also was associated with Houston and Detroit before an injury concluded his playing career.

Little is married to the former Debbie Williams and has two children, Ty, 7, and Tracy, 4.

Arum: Ali Won't Fight

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (ap) — U.S. boxing promoter Bob Arum told the Johannesburg Sunday Times that Muhammad Ali never will fight again because of "severe kidney damage."

Arum, here to promote a June 2 heavyweight fight between South African Kallie Knoetze and American John Tate, said in an interview, "Ali is a great champion but he has been fighting since he was 12 years old. That's 25 years. His kidneys are in such bad shape that he suffers agony even in training and sparring."

Arum added, "He passes blood for two months after each fight. His kidneys have been beaten into a state that if he does not retire now he might never lead a normal life."

Ali is the World Boxing Association heavyweight champion. Larry Holmes holds the World Boxing Council title.

Arum said Ali only is waiting for a sufficiently lucrative offer to stage his retirement announcement.

Arum did not say how he had learned of Ali's serious health problems, and he did not cite any source for the report.

In the interview, Arum also said of Ali: "Ali has taken some bad punishment in the fights in the later stage of his career ...His hands are badly battered and at this stage of his career, even the damage he has sustained to his head must be a worry."

Kentucky Derby

Spectacular Bid Rallies In Stretch

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Favored Spectacular Bid, with 19-year-old Ronnie Franklin in the saddle, took the lead in the upper stretch and charged to victory in the $304,900 Kentucky Derby Saturday at sun-splashed Churchill Downs.

Spectacular Bid was the odds-on favorite and ran like one as he took the lead from General Assembly after turning for home and drew away to a clear victory.

General Assembly was second, followed by stretch-running Golden Act and long-shot King Celebrity.

The time on a fast track was 2:022-5, well off the track record but time doesn't matter to a winner.

After winning the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland April 26, Franklin said, "I know one thing. They won't beat us in the Derby."

It was a big day for Franklin, who has been criticized in the press and was called an idiot by trainer Bud Delp after his poor but winning run in the Florida Derby.

Spectacular Bid did not go for the lead as expected. He was seventh going into the clubhouse turn after the run past the stands for the first time. Shamgo led.

Shamgo continued to lead entering the backstretch, followed by General Assembly, Lot o'Gold and Flying Paster.

General Assembly then took the lead entering the final turn but Franklin had Spectacular Bid moving on the outside and he moved up to challenge General Assembly with a quartermile left in the 1¼-mile race. Once the two straightened for home, Spectacular Bid, the roar of another huge Derby crowd ringing in his ears, took charge and scored his 11th straight victory.

The grey colt, owned by Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff, finished 2¼ lengths ahead of General Assembly and paid $3.20, $3 and $2.80.

General Assembly, owned by Bertram Firestone and ridden by Laffit Pincay, made a gallant bid to write Derby history. His sire, Secretariat, won this race six years ago to the day. General Assembly paid $5.80 and $3.40.

Golden Act, owned by Robert W. Phipps and William H. Oldknow, made a stretch run to finish three lengths behind General Assembly and 1¼ lengths ahead of King Celebrity. Golden Act paid $4.20.

Flying Paster, who went off as the second favorite, never really was in contention and finished fifth. He was followed by Screen King, Sir Ivor Again, Shamgo, Lot o'Gold and Great Redeemer, who is still looking for the first victory of his career.

Sir Ivor Again was coupled in the bidding with General Assembly as part of a LeRoy Jolley-trained entry.

Spectacular Bid justified the great faith shown in him by outspoken trainer Delp. "I'm a little better than them all ...rain or snow," Delp said before the race.

The weather was perfect and so was Spectacular Bid, as he became only the third grey to win the Derby. The other two were Determined in 1954 and Decidedly in 1962.

Spectacular Bid, running his record to 13 wins in 15 starts, earned $217,400 from the purse and boosted his career bankroll to $947,037. He also earned $11,250 from the Kentucky Thoroughbred Development Fund, which was posted for the Derby winner if he was a registered Kentucky-bred. Spectacular Bid was bred in Kentucky by Mrs. William G. Gilmore and Mrs. William M. Jason, and purchased as a yearling for $37,000 by the Meyerhoffs.

"I had the horse where I wanted him," said Franklin. Where he wanted him obviously was sixth after the first half-mile, fourth after three-quarters, second after a mile and first at the finish line.

AP Laserphoto

'Bid' pass the grandstand

"I let him do what he wanted to do. As we came around, my horse looked Flying Paster in the eye," Franklin said. Spectacular Bid obviously stared down his arch-rival from California.

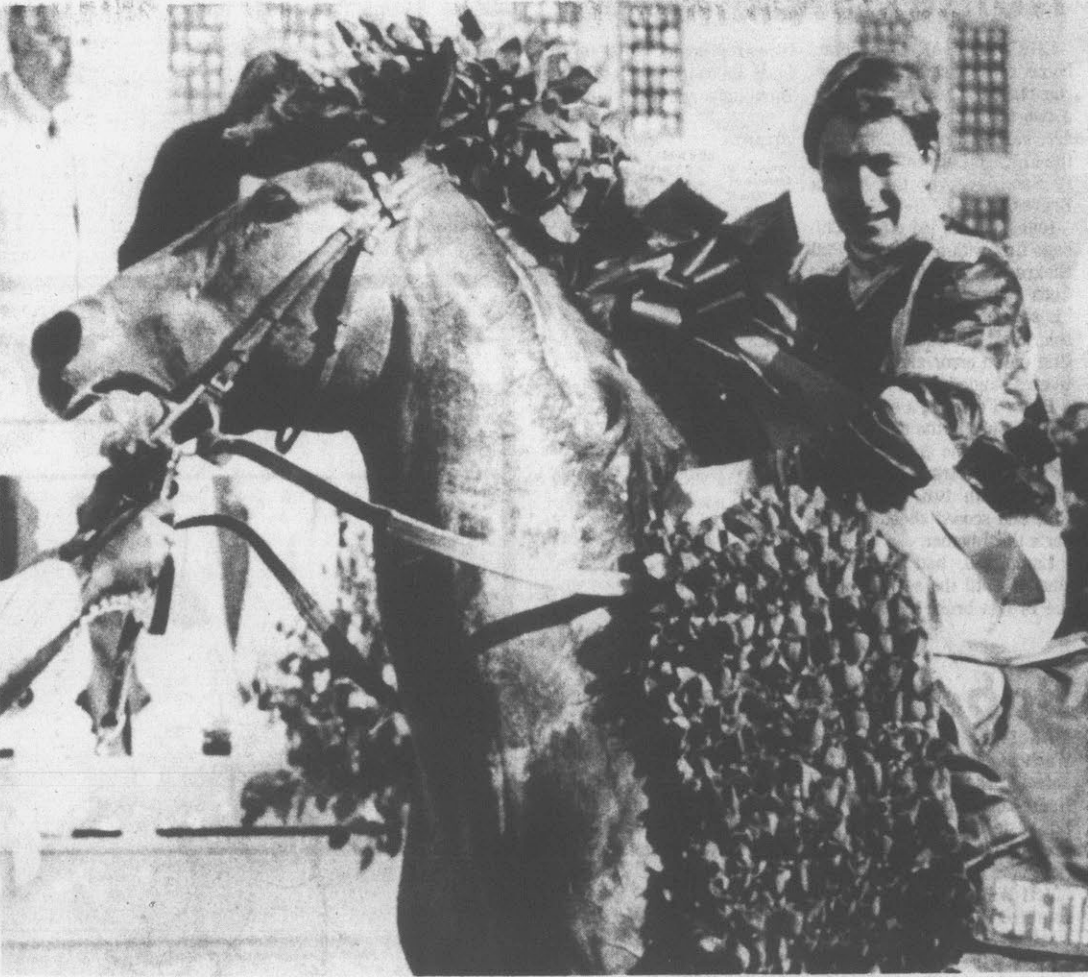

Delp said he was a little worried at the start when Spectacular Bid, who broke from the No.3 post, was inside horses in the heavy traffic of the run to the first turn. But the trainer said he felt confident when Franklin took the colt outside.

Delp said he felt the track was a little on the dead side — it was rated fast despite three days of rain — "but my horse beat some fine horses today."

General Assembly ran a fine race after his disappointing fifth-place finish in the Wood Memorial April 21 in New York, and for a time it appeared he might come off his Wood defeat to win the Derby just like Daddy did in 1973.

Golden Act, the Arkansas and Louisiana derby winner, ridden by Sandy Hawley, made his expected stretch run but at no time did it appear that he would catch the winner.

As big a surprise as the poor performance by Flying Paster, ridden by Don Pierce, was the fourth-place finish by King Celebrity, who went off at $112.40 to the dollar. The Che-Bar Stable runner was ridden by 17-year-old apprentice Cas Asmussen.

Braves Mourn Death Of Popular Bill Lucas

By JON BIXBY
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The griefstricken Atlanta Braves mourned the death Saturday of Bill Lucas, who, as the major league's highest ranking black executive, was the moving force behind the development of the Braves' young squad.

The 43-year-old Lucas, the Braves' popular vice president and director of player personnel, died at 8:20 a.m. at a southside hospital where he had remained in a coma since being stricken by a massive brain hemorrhage and cardiac arrest early Wednesday.

"He had suffered progressive deterioration of his heart rhythm during the night," said Dr. Arturo Corso. "At 8 a.m., he suffered another cardiac arrest, which led to his demise."

As the Braves' top front-office executive under owner Ted Turner,

Lucas is credited with developing much of the team's young talent, including Dale Murphy, the National League's leading home-run hitter, and Bob Horner, the league's Rookie of the Year in 1978.

"We're deeply saddened by the entire thing," said Braves Manager Bobby Cox. "I, the players and the entire baseball world will miss him. He was a gentleman at all times."

"He was a friend of all the players ...was very dedicated to baseball and had a burning desire to see the Braves do well," said Cox, who was hired two years ago at Lucas' urging.

"I was able to get a job as a major league manager because of him," Cox said.

Turner had left on a fishing trip shortly before word of Lucas' death reached his suburban Atlanta home, his wife, Jane, said.

Mrs. Turner said her husband "has been really broken hearted" since Lucas was stricken. "He said it was the worst thing since his father died. He's having a hard time accepting it. I felt they really loved each other" she said.

In New York, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said, "Bill Lucas was one of the really good guys of our game. Very dedicated and decent, he was a cherished friend of baseball people. We all share with his wife, Rubye, his children and the Braves' organization a tremendous sense of loss, all the more so because he was much too young with so much promise ahead."

Lucas was stricken at his southside Atlanta home early Wednesday, shortly after watching on television as Braves pitcher Phil Niekro passed a career milestone by winning his 200th major league game in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Turner said Lucas called her husband after the game asking whether he could send champagne to the Braves locker room to commemorate the event.

"He felt good that he talked to Bill the night he died," Mrs. Turner said.

Niekro, contacted in Chicago where the Braves were playing a weekend series with the Cubs, said Lucas "fought hard" as a minor league ballplayer "but never got the big break."

Perhaps for that reason, Niekro said Lucas "stayed close" to Braves' farm system players in a similar position and "always fought for the underdog."

"He could have left the Braves organization a few times for other jobs but didn't," Niekro said.

Cox said it would be some time before a successor to Lucas would be chosen. "You don't replace a man like Bill Lucas right away," he said.

A native of Jacksonville, Fla., Lucas played second base in the Braves' minor league system before entering the front office in public relations just before the franchise moved from Milwaukee to Atlanta in 1966.

Before being named to his latest post three years ago, he served as director of the Braves' farm system.

He was a former brother-in-law to baseball great Hank Aaron, who currently is a Braves' vice president and director of player development.

Lucas is survived by his wife, Rubye, who had remained at the hospital with her stricken husband as he lay comatose in the coronary care unit, and three children — 20-year-old Bill Jr., 18-year-old Wanya and 16-year-old Andrea.

The son is a sophomore at Florida A&M — Lucas' alma mater — where he plays in the infield for the baseball team.

Mrs. Turner said her husband has expressed a desire to assist in the college education of all three children.

Rice Breaks His Slump

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice broke a mild slump by driving in four runs with a homer and a pair of singles Saturday, powering the Boston Red Sox to an 11-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Fred Lynn triggered a 14-hit attack off four Seattle pitchers with his 10th homer in the first inning, and Rice capped the scoring with a three-run homer in the eighth. It was Rice's third homer of the season and his first in two weeks.

Carl Yastrzemski contributed a two-run double and George Scott had a double and two singles as the Red Sox boosted their record to 16-8, tops in the American League East.

Yankees 5, A's 4

NEW YORK (AP) — Lou Pinella's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the bottom of the ninth inning gave the New York Yankees a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday as unbeaten Tommy John became the first six-game winner in the major leagues.

The Yankees, who had dropped seven of their previous eight games, had only one hit and trailed 3-0 after five innings.

Homers Aid Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — Four home runs, including a three-run blast by Jerry Martin and a two-run shot by Bobby Murcer, carried Dennis Lamp and the Chicago Cubs to a 9-3 victory Saturday over the Atlanta Braves.

Ivan DeJesus led off the Chicago first with a homer off Phil Niekro, 3-5. Martin capped the Cubs' four-run first inning with his shot, his second of the season, after Bill Buckner reached first on an error and Steve Ontiveros singled.

Barry Foote hit a solo homer for the Cubs in the third inning.

DeJesus, who drove in another run with a triple in the third, walked with two outs in the fifth and scored ahead of Murcer's third homer.

Lamp, 3-0, had a three-hit shutout until the seventh when the Braves broke the spell on a three-run homer by Glenn Hubbard following singles by Jeff Burroughs and Mike Lum.

Babe Ruth Baseball

Aaction Movers pelted Wachovia Bank 17-4, Coca-Cola defeated Planters Bank 9-4 and Home Builders edged Pepsi-Cola 3-2 yesterday in opening pre-season Babe Ruth Baseball action.

Jeff Wilson and Billy Kirtrell combined to pitch the win for Aaction Movers. Darryl Joyner was 3-4 at the plate, while Wilson had two hits for the winners.

Sammy Hodges, Ed Frazier and Troy Hudson all had two hits for Wachovia.

Paul MacMillan, Jimmy Jones and Jeff Porter were the leading hitters in the second game, each getting a pair of hits for Coke. John Cutlett and Marshall Rand were the winning pitchers.

Danny Woods and Scott Galloway teamed up on the mound for Home Builders to no-hit Pepsi. Lloyd Hudson had the only hit of the game, a single, as Ricky Owens and Mike Holloman pitched a one-hitter for Pepsi.

Down Stretch

Derby Victory Excites Owners

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mrs. Meyerhoff said, "I relaxed when he came around the far turn."

Meyerhoff, sipping champagne, acknowledged that he was not happy when Spectacular Bid came out of the first turn — seemingly trapped between horses.

"But when he came to the outside and was free, I knew no one behind him would pass him and all we had to worry about were the ones ahead," he said.

Mrs. Meyerhoff said that despite the family's deep-seated confidence, "the whole thing was exhilarating. It's such a thrill to be in the Derby, to have the favorite, to know that the horse we bought in 1977 has made our dream come true."

Teresa Meyerhoff, his wife, said that the 3-year-old was "spectacular" and that the race was very exciting, even though the family had faith all along in Spectacular Bid.

"We were just a little frightened when he got boxed in,"

'Kid And Bid' Win Derby

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The kid and the Bid did it in the 105th Kentucky Derby Saturday, and 19-year-old Ron Franklin said it doesn't pay to make his horse mad.

"They came out at me and banged me around with about a half-mile to go," the boyish rider of Spectacular Bid said after the race. "It only made my horse madder."

Franklin said the near collision, which occurred with the Bid's arch Pacific Coast rival, Flying Paster, represented the only near problem during the 1 1/4-mile race.

Flying Paster finished fifth in the 10-horse field, 10 lengths back of the winner.

Young Franklin, who completed his apprenticeship in February, rushed into the jockey room, smiling broadly and raising his hands high in the air. Rival jockeys rushed up to congratulate him, some throwing their arms around him.

The 42-year-old Don Pierce, rider of Flying Paster and old enough to be Franklin's father, was among the first to reach the winning jockey. He patted Franklin on the back warmly and said: "Your horse done real good."

Franklin said he used the whip five times left-handed to urge Spectacular Bid into the move that won the race. But he added that the greatest influence comes from "tweaking."

"I talk to him around the course," he revealed. "When we made our move, I leaned over and said, 'Come on, big daddy.'"

Franklin said that it was an easy race and that never once did he doubt that Spectacular Bid would win it. "Cordero (who rode Screen King) got inside of me on the backstretch," Franklin said. "We just moved to the outside. We were where we wanted to be. I let him do what he wanted to do and he did it. I was never worried."

The inexperience of the jockey was one of the doubts raised by some handicappers of Spectacular Bid's ability to win the Derby, although the horse was heavily favored.

A high school dropout, Franklin had shown up at Laurel Race Course in Baltimore in 1976 at age 16 and asked for work. Bud Delp, Spectacular Bid's trainer, said he needed a hot walker and gave the boy a job.

It is one of the lowest jobs around a race track, leading horses around to cool off. Delp took a liking to Franklin, taught him to ride and started allowing him to race about the time that Spectacular Bid came along.

After the race, Delp was seen and heard on television upbraiding his rider and even at one stage calling him an "idiot."

Cale's Engine Flies Back Home For Repairs

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Defending Winston 500 champion Cale Yarborough's engine will have gone more than 1,000 miles before he even takes the green flag in Sunday's $280,000 Grand National stock car race here.

The engine that Yarborough had depended on to help him defend his title developed mechanical troubles Saturday and was flown back to car owner Junior Johnson's shops in Ronda, N.C., for repairs. It is due to be flown back here prior to the 2 p.m. EDT start.

"The problem was in the heads," Johnson said. "We should be able to get it corrected and get it back here in time."

The engine problem is only the latest for the team, which has struggled in through the first third of the season. Yarborough has only one victory in nine starts and trails Winston Cup point leader Darrell Waltrip by a sizable margin in his effort to win a fourth consecutive national championship.

Yarborough has crashed in four races, and not run all that well in others. He has a new Oldsmobile for this race, and it doesn't have all the bugs worked out.

Yarborough remains optimistic, though, and points to last season for the reason.

White Sinks Birdie For One-Shot Margin

By AL LANIER

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Donna Horton White sank a 39-foot birdie putt on the 18th green Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after the third round of the Women's International Golf Tournament.

Her par 72, carved out partially in persistent drizzle, gave the West Palm Beach, Fla., professional a 54-hole total of 213, three under par.

One stroke back at 212 were Donna Caponi Young, a co-leader with White going into the third round, and Nancy Lopez, last year's LPGA player of the year and leading money winner.

Lopez had a 71 and Young, despite a bogey on the first hole and a double bogey on the second, came in with 73.

Sugar Ray Is Cautious

By THERESA HUMPHREY
Associated Press Writer

DISTRICT HEIGHTS, Md. (AP) — "You meet the same faces going up and the same faces going down."

Sounds like a warning, doesn't it?

For Sugar Ray Leonard it's a message on the wall of the Oakcrest Recreation Center that helps him keep his feet on the ground.

"Everyone loves a winner," he said, "so I have to be cautious of my friends. Fame comes and goes."

Leonard should be wary — it's not every day one finds a 22-year-old who has made over $1 million. And money can do strange things to people.

In the boxing world, there are several champs — mostly heavyweights, including Joe Louis — who have made the big money and wound up broke.

Then there are others, such as Muhammad Ali and Leon Spinks, who have received much publicity for their extravagant spending; the public tends to forget that the money was hard-earned.

Leonard, unbeaten in 21 pro bouts and just signed to fight

World Boxing Council welterweight champion Wilfredo Benitez in the fall, says he sees nothing wrong with spending money.

"I don't see anything wrong with what Leon Spinks is doing. I don't fault him for spending his money. He deserves it," Leonard said.

Leonard says money and fame has not changed him.

"It's very true that older people will say that," he said. "But I haven't forgotten where I came from. If I had, I wouldn't speak to them."

Leonard has had to do a lot of growing since he turned pro, and it shows. His face can flash that Sugar Ray smile for the cameras in a minute, but once the smile is gone, a close look reveals a mind that's always thinking, working on something, very unrelaxed.

Part of the problem could be what Leonard calls the "box."

"Sometimes I relax, but every time I step out of the house, I feel like I've been placed in a box," he said. "I feel like someone's always watching. But I have to set an image for the young people. I can't go around acting wild."

If this is the case, is Leonard giving the public a false image?

According to his father, 56-year-old Cicero Leonard, his youngest of four sons was always a good child.

"He's always been to himself. He was a quiet child and he's still quiet," the elder Leonard said.

Indy Driver Subpoenaed

By HANK LOWENKRON
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Action in U.S. District Court downtown held opening-day activity at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway to a minimum Saturday, with one driver subpoenaed in the auto racing anti-trust suit for what he called "harassment."

Veteran Dick Simon, trying to qualify for his 10th consecutive ride in the May 27 Indianapolis 500, received a subpoena to testify in the suit filed by Championship Auto Racing Teams.

The suit asks U.S. District Judge James Noland to order the U.S. Auto Club, which conducts the race, to reverse its decision rejecting six CART teams because they are "not in good standing" with USAC.

The subpoena — and $30 to cover travel expenses for the six-mile trip to the federal courthouse — were delivered to Simon as he sat in his car, trying to become the first car on the track at 1979 practice. The document was served about 20 minutes before practice was scheduled to begin.

"This is just more harassment instituted by those (CART) who have created all the problems here," said Simon, who drives for Rolla Volstedt, a member of the USAC board of directors.

The court order told Simon to appear at 11 a.m. — the same time as the scheduled start of practice.

"I didn't just jump out of the car and run," said Simon, who finished second to Larry Cannon in the race to be No. 1 on the track. "I think any court in the land will understand why I was late."

"The plaintiff is just playing games, as far as I'm concerned. They've got so much money and that's how they're using it. I respect the court's order and I'm going down there, although I'd rather be here practicing," Simon added.

"Also, I haven't even had time to talk to a lawyer and I don't like the idea of receiving a subpoena and going to court without talking to counsel," he said. "There isn't anyone here. I hope to obtain one before I testify."

The rejection of some of the CART entries meant that such drivers as three-time winner and defending champion Al Unser, along with two-time winners Johnny Rutherford and Bobby Unser, were unable to practice.

USAC and Speedway officials have said that as far as they're concerned, the drivers have not been rejected. However, they all have signed exclusive driving contracts with the teams that have been rejected.

Before Simon, still sporting his driving suit, left for court, he had reached a speed of in excess of 174 mph — four mph faster than the temporary speed limit imposed by track officials for the opening day.

"I don't have a speedometer in my car," he explained. "And didn't know I was going that fast. The car feels great. I feel it's ready for the race right now. And we just have to work on the nitty gritty between now and race day."

Gryphons Slip Past Rampants

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
ROCKY MOUNT — The Rose High baseball team saw its chances of capturing the Division I crown dwindle to almost nothing Friday night as the Rampants suffered a 5-4 loss at the hands of league-leading Rocky Mount.

Rose, which has lost three of four games since two key players were injured in the Greenville-Pitt Baseball Tournament, is now 6-4 in the conference, while the Gryphons are 9-1. The Rampants were at or near the top of the league all year before the injuries, which sidelined shortstop Ronnie Chapman and first baseman Will Sanderson.

Nevertheless, it took a great pitching effort by Gryphon

Rodney Birth to stop Rose Friday night. Birth, now 9-0 on the season, saw a run score and the tying and winning runs reach scoring position with just one out in the seventh inning before he struck out the next two batters to end the game.

"We're still making too many mistakes in the field," Rampant coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. He referred not only to the three official errors committed by his team, but to mental mistakes that hurt the Rampants.

Vincent added, however, "I don't think I'll ever coach a crowd that fights as hard as this one."

That fight kept the Rampants in the game up to the very last after they had fallen behind by a 4-1 margin in the fourth inning. But it wasn't quite enough to overcome the two unearned runs scored on a bloop single in the fourth that did Rose in.

The Rampants scored a run in the top of the first inning when leadoff batter Mark Douglas walked, stole second, moved to third after Mark Shank walked and Will Barrett was hit by a pitch, and scored on an infield hit by Mike Williams.

But Rocky Mount came back with two runs in the bottom of the frame. Dee Whitley led off with a walk, and after one out, Billy Merrifield smashed a triple into right center field. He scored when Jeff Newsome followed with a single to left, making it 2-1.

Each team had only one other baserunner until the bottom of the fourth when the first two Gryphon batters reached base. Lynwood Silver led off with an infield hit and Bill Wilkes followed, reaching on an error.

Rampant starter Lindsey Winstead, who was charged with the loss, his second in eight decisions, struck the next two batters out and appeared out of the woods when Whitley popped up.

Whitley's hit dropped in front of charging Rampant left fielder Joey Mattheis, however, and both runners scored to make it 4-1.

Rose got a pair of runs in the top of the fifth. Winstead walked and Robert Morehead singled with no outs. Douglas sacrificed the two runners up and the Gryphon first baseman, after receiving the throw to put Douglas out, hurled the ball to second for a double play. The throw went into center field, however, allowing courtesy runner Charles Daise and Morehead to score.

Three straight sacrifices brought the final Rocky Mount run across in the sixth. Pinch hitter David Downs led off with a walk and Paul Bauer returned to the lineup to run. He was sacrificed to second by George Currin, who reached on a fielder's choice.

Whitley sacrificed Bauer to third and Kevin Bunn knocked a sacrifice fly to center field that allowed the runner to score.

With one away in the top of the seventh, Mark Shank got an infield hit and Barrett reached on an error. Williams singled to right to score Shank, but the next Rampant bunted foul with two strikes for the second out.

Daise came in to run for Williams and stole second, but the final Rose batter struck out, leaving runners on second and third.

Williams had two hits in the game and both Rose RBI's, while Rocky Mount, held to five total hits, had no batter with more than one.

Rose, now 12-4 overall, travels to play Northeastern on Tuesday.

Grimsley Hurls Junk To One-Hit Padres

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Ross Grimsley has learned to make the most of what he's got.

"I wish I could throw a ball 100 miles an hour," says the 29-year-old left-hander of the Montreal Expos. "But I can't. If I'm going to win, I'm going to win my way. If people don't like it, I don't care. That's all I hear: how much junk I throw."

Grimsley's junk — fastball, curve, slider, changeup — was too much for the San Diego Padres Friday night. They managed just three hits as Montreal breezed to a 12-1 victory.

It was the eighth triumph in the last nine games for the Expos, 16-6, who lead Philadelphia by one game in the National League East.

Grimsley, who signed with Montreal as a free agent last season and proceeded to win 20 games, has picked up right where he left off. Friday night's victory raised his record to 3-0.

"Grimsley is a lot of fun to catch," said Montreal's Gary Carter. "He has such a reptoire of pitches. That type of guy is going to throw the hitters off. He was back to his old rhythm even though he had the lead."

The Expos made the night's work easy for Grimsley by staking him to a 6-0 lead in the first inning when they sent 10 men to the plate. Home runs by Carter and Andre Dawson, the seventh of the season for each, highlighted the inning.

"I've never had that happen in the first inning," Grimsley said. "It was the first time I ever got to bat before I got to pitch."

Reds 6, Astros 5

George Foster's bases-loaded single with none out in the 10th inning brought home the winning run for Cincinnati, which pulled to within 2½ games of front-running Houston in the NL West.

Johnny Bench, demoted to the No. 8 spot in the batting order earlier this week when his average dipped to .177, drove in three runs for the Reds with a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly. Bench credited a 40-minute

Phils 5, Dodgers 2

Steve Garvey's seventh-inning error permitted Greg Luzinski to race home with the tie-breaking run as the Phillies beat the Dodgers behind the six-hit pitching of Randy Lerch.

Giants 4, Mets 3

Roger Metzger slammed an eighth-inning triple that sent New York center fielder Lee Mazzilli crashing into the wall and scored on a throwing error on the relay by pitcher Skip Lockwood to give the Giants their third straight victory. Vida Blue, 5-2, scattered six hits.

Cards 4, Pirates 3

Tony Scott and Ken Reitz drove in two runs apiece for St. Louis while Lou Brock had three singles, stole his 919th career base and scored the decisive run.

Cubs 6, Braves 2

Bill Buckner's run-scoring double capped a three-run fifth inning and Jerry Martin's two-run single keyed a three-run seventh that carried the Cubs over the Braves.

Panthers Belt Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt defeated Ayden-Grifton 20-16 Friday afternoon in a 36-hit baseball slugfest.

The Panthers scored seven runs in the second and eight in the third, but still needed runs in the fourth and fifth to defeat the Chargers.

In the third, Greg Briley and Melvin Howard singled and scored when Carl Knight reached on an error. Jeff Hines tripled in Knight and Ronnie House reached on an error to score Hines. Tim Corey walked and Robert Bunn singled House home. Bob Hemingway got a base hit to plate Corey and Briley singled in Bunn and Hemingway.

Hines doubled to start off the fourth, and after a walk to Ronnie House, scored on Tim Corey's fielder's choice.

In the fifth, Briley walked,

Beacham singled and both moved up on Howard's sacrifice. Knight hit a sacrifice fly to score Briley.

Beacham was 3-4 and Hines 4-6 for the Panthers, while Ed Coley was 4-5 and David Smith 4-5 for Ayden-Grifton. North Pitt is now 9-8 overall and 8-5 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, while the Chargers are 2-15.

North Pitt plays at Farmville Central Tuesday, while Ayden-Grifton hosts North Lenoir the same day.

Jaguars Win Tenth

E. B. Aycock's baseball team pushed its record to 10-0 Friday with an 8-3 victory over Bertie.

Donnie Daughtridge hurled the win, while Roger Williams was 3-4, Marshall Rand 2-3 and Sammy Hodges and Bill Kittrell both 2-4 for Aycock.

Chill At Line Costly For Suns

SEATTLE (AP) — Supposedly one of the easiest shots in basketball, the free throw, proved to be the most difficult — and damaging — for the Phoenix Suns.

"Free throws is what did it," said a dejected Suns guard Paul Westphal. "That, plus rebounds."

Normally a fine shooting team from both the floor and the foul line, the Suns hit just four of 10 free throws in the final seven minutes in Friday night's 103-97 National Basketball Association loss to the Seattle SuperSonics.

The victory before a Kingdome crowd of 31,964 gave the Sonics a commanding 2-0 lead over the Suns in the best-of-seven Western Conference championship series.

Games 3 and 4 are set for Sunday afternoon and Tuesday night in Phoenix.

Seattle, the defending conference champion, is shooting for a second straight appearance in the NBA finals.

"We can probably wrap it up (in Phoenix)," said Sonic power forward Lonnie Shelton, whose 18 points and game-high 15 rebounds highlighted a balanced Seattle performance at both ends of the court.

"If we can get one win we'll be happy," added Shelton, "but we'll be shooting for two."

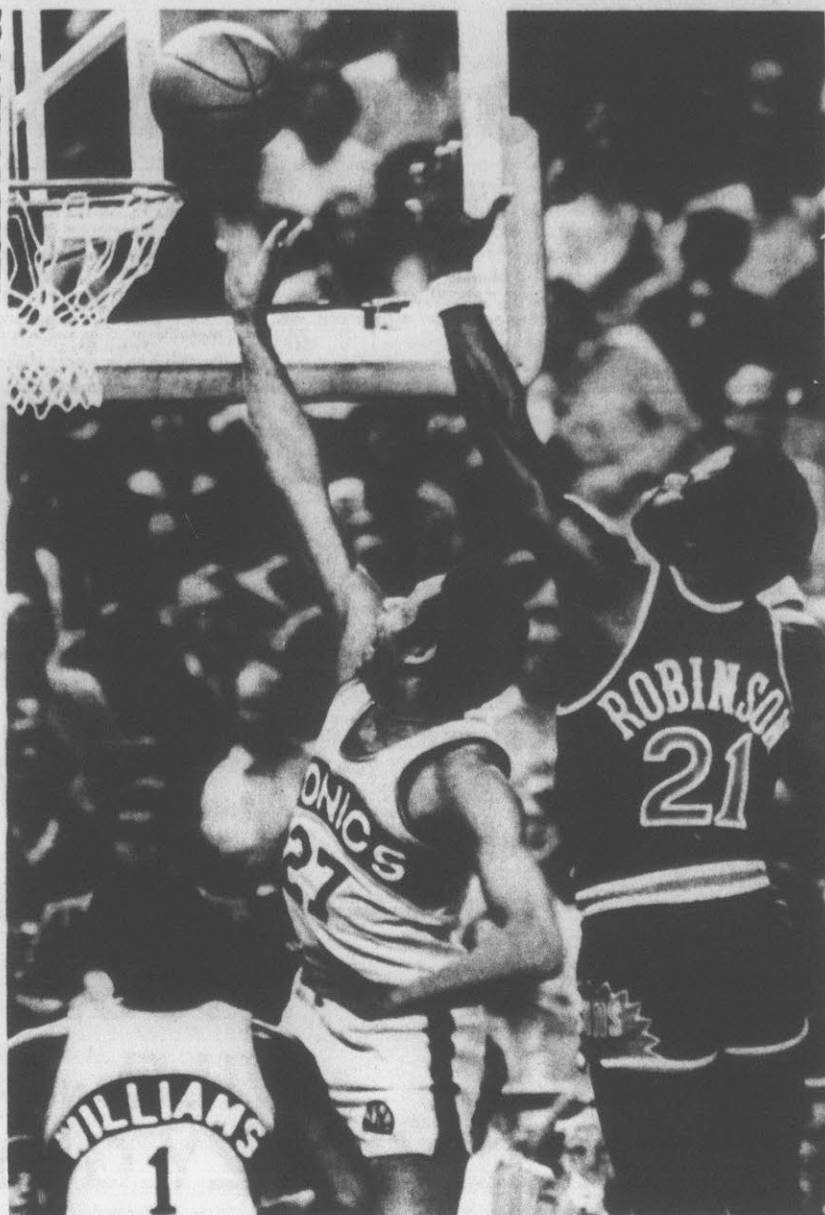

A basket by Suns center Alvan Adams tied the rugged, seesaw game for the last time at 87 with 5:40 to play. Then Phoenix went cold at the line.

Walter Davis, an 83 percent free throw shooter, hit four of six foul shots down the stretch. Don Buse, a 77 percent foul shooter, missed four free throws in a row with the Suns behind 93-88.

"We had our opportunities," said Phoenix forward Truck Robinson, who made his first start in the Suns' 10 playoff games and responded with 10 points and nine rebounds in 35 minutes. "I thought we outplayed them as far as total play. The last couple minutes was the key."

"Missing all those free throws, you don't win that way."

John Johnson's 21 points led six Seattle players in double figures. Gus Williams finished with 16 points, his lowest total in seven playoff games this season. Fred Brown had 15, Dennis Johnson 12 and Jack Sikma 10.

Silas Sees Defeat In Eyes Of Bullets

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — San Antonio's James Silas said he could see a Spurs victory in the eyes of the Washington Bullets.

"It was in their faces," said Silas after the Spurs defeated the Bullets 118-97 Friday night in the opener of their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference championship series.

"They were so tight," he said. "They were so far out of it and that gave us confidence. We were all fired up because we knew (Elvin) Hayes couldn't do it all."

The five Bullets guards, continuing an inept performance that started during the semifinals against Atlanta, helped the San Antonio cause by hitting only 10 of 39 field goal attempts.

However, George Gervin scored 34 points and Silas 28 in addition to 24 by Larry Kenon, to power the Spurs to the victory.

In taking the opener of the best-of-seven conference championship series, the Spurs recorded their first victory in 10 outings at the Capital Centre since they joined the NBA three years ago.

Game Two is scheduled here Sunday.

Spurs Coach Doug Moe said he thought his team, after finishing an emotional seven-game series with Philadelphia Wednesday night, would have to struggle in the opening game. Instead, the Bullets had their difficulties after a five-day rest.

"After that seventh game, we said we wouldn't have a chance up here so we decided to slow it down to keep them from running," Moe said. "In the second half, we got our running game going when they were having a difficult time."

"We knew they would go to Hayes and (Bob) Dandridge, so we doubled (coverage) there and left their guards free. But when they had a guard shooting, we had a man running at him."

Dandridge was high scorer for the Bullets with 25 points. Hayes had 22.

"The execution was there but the shots just didn't fall," said Dandridge. "In order to win, we've got to get contributions from everybody."

Three More Picked

By The Associated Press

Three more players from North Carolina colleges were chosen Friday in the final round of the National Football League college draft.

Linebacker Carl McGee of Duke was chosen by Cleveland in the ninth round. McGee, a 6-foot-3, 225-pound senior from Cincinnati, Ohio, came off the bench as a freshman against Southern California and made 11 tackles and two sacks.

In his junior year, McGee led the team in tackles with 134 even though he was playing with a hamstring injury. An operation on his hamstring in the spring of his junior year improved his mobility.

Billy Diggs, a wide receiver for Winston-Salem State, was also selected in the ninth round. The 6-foot-3, 200-pound Diggs went to Minnesota.

Diggs, a senior from Rockingham, was the only CIAA champion in both football and basketball in 1977.

In the 12th round, the New York Giants picked Tim Gillespie, a 6-foot-3, 224-pound senior offensive guard for North Carolina State. Gillespie, who is from Greensboro, played defense his first two seasons and then switched to offense in his junior year.

UNC—A Post Filled

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Green, an assistant coach at the University of North Carolina at Asheville, has been named the school's new head coach.

Green will succeed Bob Hartman, who will remain with the school as athletic director.

Before coming to UNC-A, Green was the coach at Hunter Huss High School in Gastonia for four years. In three of those years, his teams ended their seasons high in the state 4-A tournament. His record at Hunter Huss was 78 wins and 19 losses.

Rutledge Not Drafted Until Ninth By Rams

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Alabama quarterback Jeff Rutledge was rated right up there with the best of them, while wide receiver Mike Almond of Northwestern Louisiana didn't even rate a mention.

Yet they shared the same sort of disappointing fate — and the same kind of hopeful outlook, too.

They were, in effect, mere afterthoughts in the National Football League draft, the annual flesh-peddling rite in which the top choice goes for millions of dollars and the lower grades generally wind up getting cut.

Rutledge is the latest in a line of Alabama quarterbacks which included Bart Starr, Joe Namath, Ken Stabler and Richard Todd. And according to the predraft scouting reports, Rutledge was considered just a shade behind Washington State's Jack Thompson and Clemson's Steve Fuller in ability.

Thompson and Fuller were drafted Thursday in the first round. Rutledge, who completed 30 touchdown passes during his career to break Namath's school record of 28, wasn't drafted until the ninth round Friday, when most of the names being read could just as well have come out of the local phone book with nobody being the wiser.

Almond, meanwhile, earned a dubious distinction. He was selection No. 330, the last man in the last round, picked by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

That could be his albatross, his millstone.

Being picked in the last few rounds usually means nothing more than a passing glance or two in training camp — but it means only one training camp until the team brings down the axe. Players who aren't drafted at all, though, have an advantage of sorts. They can try to sell themselves to as many teams as they want without restriction.

The 12-round draft took 17 hours, 13 minutes, with 168 offensive players, 150 defensive players and 12 specialists picked. Linebackers led the way with 54, starting with No. 1 selection Tom Cousineau of Ohio State by the Buffalo Bills. Oklahoma and Notre Dame had 10 players apiece drafted, followed by Penn State with nine. The Big Eight, with 34 players taken, led all conferences.

For the Rutledges, the Almonds and the rest of the low-round draftees, the future usually means an instant career out of pro football — although Starr, it must be noted, was a 10th-round pick by Green Bay.

They get none of the attention, the glory and the money which literally buries the top picks like Thompson (taken by Cincinnati), Cousineau, a linebacker, and the rest. Still, they smile in adversity and find reasons to be optimistic.

"Los Angeles is the only team in the NFL that had only two quarterbacks, Pat Haden and Vince Ferragamo," Rutledge said, "so I'll make the third one. If I'd gone anywhere else, I would've been the fourth or fifth quarterback. Besides, with LA I'm with a winner, just like I was with a winner at Alabama."

Bird Now Swings Bat

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Larry Bird, the two-time All-American who led Indiana State to the runner-up position of the NCAA basketball tournament this spring, was deadly serious when he asked to play on the Sycamore baseball team.

"It wasn't just a big gag for him," said baseball Coach Bob Warn. "It was something he wanted to do, and do well."

Bird, the college basketball player of the year, had not played baseball since high school, although he has played slow-pitch softball in a city league and last year hit 12 home runs and drove in 48 runs in 20 games. He also is an assistant baseball coach at West Vigo High School, where he is a student teacher.

Last week, while negotiations were getting nowhere with the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association, Bird appeared in a doubleheader with the Sycamores against Kentucky Wesleyan.

"Talent-wise, I'd say he's more skilled at the game (baseball) than most people would realize," said Warn. "I think he has a sincere interest in the game. So much in fact that he's often stated that he would probably as much like to play baseball as basketball, especially as he was coming up in the high school ranks and so forth."

"It's an honest interest and desire that he has. Until he got so popular, he'd show up for all the home baseball games the last two or three years and he's become good friends with the players on the team."

The Sycamores are 30-6 for the season, hoping for an NCAA tournament bid. In Bird's two at-bats last week, he struck out in the first game, then delivered a two-run single up the middle that put the Sycamores in front to stay in the nightcap. He also played first base and had nine putouts in the two Indiana State victories.

"He plays the game just as he does basketball, with every ounce he has," Warn said. "He's very intense. He was remarking to one of the players before the game that he just wanted to do well, he didn't want to let the team down."

Warn said the idea for a guest shot for Bird on the baseball team first came up last winter.

"I was kidding him, 'Hey, you'd better get a bat.' He said, 'Hey, I'll do it.' We kind of laughed it off. Then as I was walking away I said, 'I'll take you up on that.'"

SCLC Wears Battle-Scars From Internal Strife

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Two years ago, the nonviolent civil rights organization founded by Martin Luther King Jr. was searching for new leadership. This spring, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference decided it had one leader too many.

The subsequent firing of Hosea Williams as SCLC executive director triggered a bitter and occasionally violent internal dispute and raised some doubts about the battle-scarred organization's ability to survive.

The quarrel erupted just as SCLC, which led front-line civil rights confrontations from Selma, Ala. to Cicero, Ill. in the 1950s and 1960s, appeared to be regaining its balance.

Williams — a rabble-rousing field organizer under King — was named executive director in 1977 as part of a compromise in which the Rev. Joseph Lowery was elected president to succeed the Rev. Ralph David Abernathy.

Lowery already had been chosen by a nominating committee when Williams announced his candidacy at the SCLC national convention. He withdrew his name as part of the bargain.

Williams, 53, now says he was offered the $20,000-a-year job as SCLC's top staff member because "conservative" SCLC leaders knew he had enough strength among the delegates to beat Lowery. Lowery says Williams never had a chance, but the deal was struck because "many people felt SCLC was just too fragile at that point to survive a confrontation."

But Lowery and the SCLC board apparently were ready to risk the confrontation this year. They fired Williams and then fired National Field Director Tyrone Brooks, who had come to Williams' defense. Lowery and the board say neither man was doing his job adequately.

Williams claims he and Brooks were dismissed because they were the last of the "radicals," and both have vowed to challenge Lowery's leadership at the next SCLC convention in Norfolk, Va., in August.

Lowery, a soft-spoken, 54-year-old Methodist minister, brushed aside Williams' attacks. He said SCLC has made the changes necessary to survive and again established itself as the "action and moral arm of the civil rights movement" at a time when reverse discrimination suits, high black unemployment and increased Klan activity make a resurgence imperative.

"I'm not Martin Luther King Jr.," Lowery said. "Nobody can be like Martin. He was exactly the right man at the right time and there will never be another like him. But I took the job as president because I believe there's still a need for SCLC. There's still a need for an independent movement based in the black church.

"When I became president, we were $10,000 in debt and unable to pay most of our staff members," Lowery said. "Now we're out of debt and we've hired new staff and managed to pay them."

"We've organized several new chapters around the country. We're moving in Alabama (the scene of several recent confrontations with the Klan) and we're working with the Black Leadership Forum to challenge the administration to keep its commitment to the poor and the black," he said.

According to the Rev. Fred Taylor, SCLC director of chapters and affiliates, the organization now boasts 41 active chapters and 15 affiliates in 13 states.

When Lowery took over, SCLC had dwindled to seven active chapters, he said. King's widow, Coretta, had severed her ties with SCLC several years earlier and put her energies into the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change.

A substantial amount of "movement money" also followed the widow, some SCLC leaders complained.

Williams, a street campaigner who boasts of being arrested 102 times during rights confrontations, accuses Lowery and other SCLC leaders of selling out in order to survive, of turning SCLC into a "federally funded elitist group acceptable to the power structure."

Lowery says SCLC will not accept direct federal grants but is willing to "use its good offices to channel federal funds into the poor community" to create jobs and services.

He maintains that Williams had been too preoccupied with local matters to do his job with the national organization.

Williams, a member of the Georgia House of Representatives and president of the Metro Atlanta SCLC chapter, accuses Lowery of "abandoning leverage" by softening SCLC's public image.

"One of the claims they are pushing is that I am a great civil rights field general during war time, but I can't adjust to peace time," Williams said. "If you're poor and black in America, you're still at war."

Some SCLC officials say privately that even in the 1960s, Williams posed as many problems as he helped solve. They say that he once got into a fist fight with Young, that King was thinking of firing him before he was killed and that Abernathy suspended him in 1971 for insubordination. They point to Williams as one of the reasons Mrs. King refused to stay with the SCLC after her husband's assassination in Memphis, Tenn., in 1968.

Williams concedes that he often crossed swords with more conservative SCLC members during King's lifetime, but claims he was highly valued by King and Abernathy for his organizational abilities.

Williams was charged this year with being a habitual traffic offender after he was caught driving with a revoked license. The arrest ended in a shoving match with a black state trooper.

Williams said the SCLC fired him shortly after this incident because they wanted to "kick me while I was down."

"SCLC is my life. It's my religion," he said. "I'm not going to give up 19 years of my life, 19 years of seeing my best buddies murdered and going through all the blood and guts we've gone through just to walk away while SCLC is in the wrong hands."

FIRE LEADER — When the SCLC decided it had one leader too many, it resulted in the firing of Hosea Williams (above) as the organization's executive director. The firing triggered a bitter and occasionally violent internal dispute. (AP Laserphoto)

The Stone Harbor

Deck Enlarges, Enhances Cottage

By Jerry Bishop

Ideal for use as a weekend home at the beach or in the mountains, the Stone Harbor, a one bedroom design, makes use of a main deck for outdoor living space.

The deck, which serves as an entry porch, promises space for sunbathing or dining and helps to visually enlarge the plan. While the design is quite basic, the Stone Harbor does manage to include all the necessities: an 11-ft. bedroom, a full bath, kitchen, and living/dining room. Furnace and water heater are provided to ensure year round livability.

The exterior of the Stone Harbor is a merger of wood and glass. Besides the wood deck, vertical wood siding helps achieve a natural, rustic appearance.

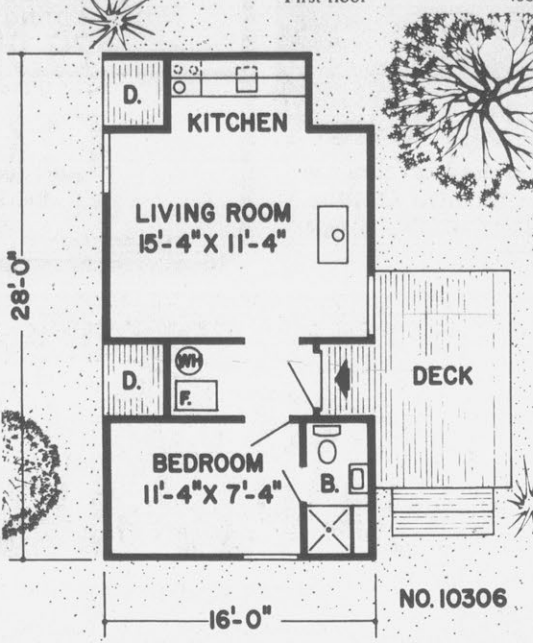

Entry is into a central hallway, edged by space for utilities. At right, the living room and one wall kitchen form a spacious and practical area for food preparation, meals, and relaxing. A front window overlooks the deck.

adequate sleeping space. A full bath with shower opens directly into the bedroom for convenience.

In the living room, a free-standing fireplace for warmth and atmosphere is suggested.

For many years now, gypsum board has been used widely, although not exclusively, in place of plaster walls in new and remodeled homes. Sometimes loosely called wallboard or plasterboard, gypsum board actually is made like a sandwich, with layers of heavy-duty paper on both sides of a gypsum filling.

Like plaster, gypsum board requires patching from time to time — and mostly for the same reason: Because it has been damaged by house settlement, stud and joint contraction and expansion, water leaks and abuse.

Ordinary patching plaster may be used for a tiny hole in gypsum board, but what is called joint compound does a better job for all other repairs. This applies to other holes of varying sizes, separated seams, dents, bumps and imperfections caused by popping nails.

The repair that perhaps causes the most trouble is one which calls for the use of a piece of scrap gypsum board as the patch. When this patch is necessary — which it is for all damaged areas other than the aforementioned tiny openings — the old gypsum board should be cut with a keyhole saw. Cut out a piece larger and more regularly shaped than the damaged spot. It might be, for instance, a piece 6 inches square. Then cut from the scrap board an identical piece that fits snugly into the opening. Try it first for a good fit, but don't leave it there yet.

Apply joint compound generously to the edges of the opening in the wall. Place a screw partly into the center of the patch, leaving enough of the screw protruding so that you can hold it with your fingers. Set the patch in place and carefully withdraw the screw. When the joint compound has dried completely, sand lightly until everything is smooth. If necessary, apply a bit more compound to fill any gaps.

When the damaged area is very large, a piece of backup material may be required. It can be another piece of gypsum board, plywood or almost anything else that can be cut larger than the section to be replaced. The simplest way to handle this backup material is to drill a hole in the center of it so that you can insert a finger in it. Apply compound around the borders of the backup board, which is then inserted into the opening at an angle so that it will go in easily. With a finger in the drilled hole, pull the board towards you and hold it there while you drive in a couple of screws around the borders. The combination of the screws and the compound will hold the backup board securely.

After you judge the compound to be dry, proceed with the rest of the repair as previously mentioned for a smaller opening.

Light Needs Might Vary

FAIR LAWN, N.J. (AP) —

Light placed the proper distance from tasks like reading, sewing and putting on makeup helps avoid fatigue. It can also save energy if your previous light was too distant and thus unnecessarily strong.

So says Woody E. Bickford of the Duro-Lite Home Lighting Institute in Fair Lawn. He offers these guidelines to help you judge.

—Reading and sewing: To help avoid eyestrain, place a light so the shade is a minimum of 47 inches from the floor for a floor lamp and 38 to 42 inches for a table lamp.

The base of a table lamp, Bickford says, should be in a line with the shoulder and about 20 inches from the reading material. Floor or wall-hung lamps should be located behind, either to the left or right of the reader or sewer.

—Reading in bed: If you read in bed, there's another set of guidelines. Your light source should be about 30 inches above the height of the mattress. If you're using a table lamp, it should be about 22 inches from the reading plane.

The bottom of the lamp shade, Bickford says, should be about 20 inches above the lamp shaft and about 16 inches back from the center of the reading material.

—Putting on makeup: Lamps on a dresser or dressing table should be selected in proportion to the furniture. Shades for them may be as small as 9 inches in diameter.

For even lighting, Bickford recommends choosing a pair of lamps and placing them about 36 inches apart and as close to the mirror or wall as possible.

deep does the taproot go? (R.D., Hickory)

A. Buckeyes generally develop a strong taproot the first growing season. Depending upon the soil texture, I would say that a two to three year old seedling could have an 18 inch taproot.

These seedlings could be moved easily in the dormant season. (Bill Stanton, extension forester)

Q. How can an amateur gardener promote cross pollination of corn? (C.W., Salisbury)

A. Pull a paper bag over the tassel immediately after it emerges and tie the bag around the corn stalk. Do the same for the silks if you want controlled pollination. When the pollen is shedding from the tassels bend the tassel over and shake the pollen in the bag. Remove the bag from around the silks (young shoots) and pour the pollen on the silks of the plants which you wish to cross. Replace the bag on the silks for 10 to 12 days or until the silks are dying and no longer receptive to pollen. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Is there a weed control method — other than a sling blade — that I can use in a drainage ditch? (G.P., Siler City)

A. Trimec 352 Weed and Brush Killer has just been cleared by the Environmental Protection Agency for spraying along drainage ditches. It may not have reached the market in North Carolina. Dowpon may be used for the control of grasses along ditches, and Amitrol-T will control certain grasses and broadleaf weeds. Certain 2,4-D products can also be used for the same purpose. Read the label on all of these products carefully. (Bill Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Branches on my 7-year-old rhododendron are wilting and dying. This is occurring randomly instead of from the bottom up. (M.N., Chapel Hill)

A. Most rhododendron problems can be traced to too much water or too little water. The dying back of branches is probably the result of one of these conditions. Rhododendrons must have good drainage. If you have clay soil, try mounding up your rhododendrons on top of the soil. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. I have four buckeyes that I planted two or three years back. Can I transplant them and how member which colors produce which effects. Basically, she says, there are three types of color — warm, cool and neutral.

Warm colors — red, orange, yellow — can make a room appear smaller and ceilings appear lower. They can warm up rooms that have too few windows and too little sunlight, but they can be too bright for rooms with lots of both. Warm colors, Ms. George says, create a stimulating mood, but they can be overpowering if they are used excessively.

Cool colors — blue, green, purple — can make a room appear larger and they can make the long walls of a narrow room appear further apart.

These colors, which create a relaxed atmosphere, can cool down a room with too much window exposure, but they can be too subdued for a room that lacks windows and light. Ms. George says.

According to Ms. George, black, white and grey, the neutral colors, are good for large backgrounds. And, in their lightest and darkest shades, they make good accent colors.

To choose colors you can really live with, Ms. George advises researching your color preferences.

"I ask my clients to visit several museums and notice the colors in the paintings and watch which colors appeal to them. I also ask clients to bring me a favorite scarf or blouse or necktie — some piece of clothing whose color has never lost its appeal," she says.

Ms. George cautions against following decorating trends in colors because "trendy colors tend to become boring or uncomfortable after a while. I steer my clients away from 'with-it' color schemes."

When it comes to decorating a room, Ms. George recommends starting from the bottom up. "Choose a color for the rug or carpet and the walls and ceiling. Then you are ready to select fabrics, drapes and accessories," she says. Rugs and walls, she explains, "exert a great deal of control over the room," so their color should be more than an afterthought.

Ms. George says a good decorator will gather dozens of paint and fabric samples — the bigger the better. "Take them home and try them in the room where they will be used," she says. "Remember that colors change according to the amount of light and the source of light in a room. So always evaluate colors in the same kind of light they will receive at home."

When selecting a color for a sofa or chair or any other piece of furniture, remember that colors can produce different effects depending on their value and intensity.

Value refers to a color's lightness or darkness, intensity refers to its brightness or dullness.

If you like the color blue, you must decide whether you want a light or a dark blue, and whether you want it bright or dull.

Light, bright shades of color tend to make furniture appear lighter in weight, Ms. George says, while dark or dull shades will make the same piece of furniture appear heavier.

When you put together your color scheme for a room, try to combine one dominant color with two supporting colors for the best effect, Ms. George says. And if you are using a fabric pattern as the basis for your color scheme, the decorator recommends using and repeating the colors in about the same proportion as they appear in the pattern.

One-Legged Diver Ends Unique Career In Navy

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Carl Maxie Brashear, the only one-legged diver and first black diver in the U.S. Navy, ended a remarkable career here recently when he retired after 32 years' naval service.

The loss of a leg wasn't the only obstacle the master chief boatswain's mate surmounted during his success story career, but he says "it was definitely the hardest."

"It took more willpower than I ever thought I had to accept the fact that I had lost a leg," recalls Brashear, 48. "Once I accepted that reality, I knew I would win the fight to achieve my goal."

That goal was to become the Navy's first black master diver. He became the first black Navy diver in 1953.

"I joined the Navy in 1948 and worked as a steward and with a beachmaster unit before I decided diving sounded like an exciting field and one I'd like to work in."

"In those days, blacks weren't readily accepted into the diving field and I also figured I might be paving the way for other blacks by becoming a diver."

In 1966, while serving aboard a Navy salvage ship, Brashear was assisting in recovering a nuclear bomb lost at sea after two planes collided over the Mediterranean.

During the recovery effort a line on a landing craft broke, slinging a pipe across the ship's deck. Brashear pushed a shipmate out of harm's way but the pipe smashed into the back of his own leg.

"I'd thought I'd seen the end of my doggone life," he says. Five months and seven operations later, Navy medical personnel amputated Brashear's left leg 4 inches below the knee. "It's something you never really get used to," explains Brashear, who confides that a philosophy he grew up with as the son of a Kentucky sharecropper helped him remain on active duty as the Navy's only one-legged diver.

"When I was growing up," says the Elizabethtown, Ky., native, "we never had anything, and we were always striving for something. I grew up with the attitude that anything you set out to do, you had to do it."

His new leg in place, Brashear began an extensive therapy program which included climbing two flights of stairs several times a day — carrying 100-pound barbells.

Fearing disqualification from the Navy's diving program after his release from the hospital, Brashear used a variety of diving equipment at different water depths and had a photographer with him to document his activities.

Brashear forwarded the photos of himself in action to Washington, D.C., in 1967. When he heard the medical people in Washington were still skeptical of his diving abilities, even after seeing the photos, he went to them and "auditioned."

"I did things I had never seen done underwater," he remembers. "But I convinced the medical people I was still qualified to be a diver."

Brashear remained a diver and took up jogging and lifting weights to stay in shape. In 1970, his dream of becoming a master diver became a reality. He was promoted to master chief boatswain's mate in 1972.

"This leg is made of fiberglass and wood," he says of his "diving leg." "It's heavier than a normal artificial leg and has holes in the trunk that allow the leg to fill with water so I can maintain negative buoyancy when I dive."

Brashear has three other artificial legs — one for jogging, one for showering and one for everyday use.

Brashear has been the subject of several Navy and civilian films about overcoming handicaps, and is scheduled to star in an episode of a new television series called "The Comeback," featuring people who have successfully overcome personal tragedies.

Brashear says he has no intention of leaving the diving profession even though he is retired from the Navy. He says he has had a few job offers.

"No, sir," declares the Navy veteran, "I'm not going to stop now! Carl Brashear is one person who knows from experience that you never give up."

Reelection Is Based On Filling District's Needs

By ED ROGERS
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington oldtimers say the way a congressman votes on the problems of the world means nothing on election day if he hasn't taken care of the problems of his district.

"If he doesn't get veterans benefits or social security claims straightened out he can't get reelected," one seasoned congressional observer said.

Nothing better illustrates the importance of serving constituents as the reelection last fall of two House members whose helpfulness had become legend.

—Rep. Daniel J. Flood, D-Pa., was indicted Sept. 5 in Los Angeles and Oct. 12 in Washington on bribery charges.

On Nov. 7 he won a 17th term with a 54 percent majority. His first trial ended with a hung jury.

—Rep. Charles C. Diggs Jr., D-Mich., now appealing a sentence of up to three years, was convicted on kickback charges last Oct. 6. A month later he was elected to a 12th term with a spectacular 80 percent majority.

How did they do it?

For Flood, it may have been that folks in Wilkes-Barre remembered how he used his power in the House Appropriations Committee to muster military helicopters to rescue victims of a flood spawned by Hurricane Agnes in June 1972. This was not an isolated theatric of the one-time professional actor. He also had a long record of bringing industry and jobs to his district.

For Diggs, it could have been the recollection in his heavily-black Detroit district that Diggs had championed rights of minorities throughout the nation back to the 1950s, when he was one of only three blacks in Congress.

"The constituency is always No. 1," says Diggs. "My entire career is based on representing the under-represented — those who have had no voice in government, or who feel government is not acting in their interest."

But successful "case work," as handling constituent problems is called, does not always guarantee reelection.

Rep. Joel T. Broyhill, R-Va., found that when he sought a 12th term in 1974, Broyhill was famous for his constituent service, which included getting one day action on appeals for help for his constituents across the river from Washington.

"I think fame outran his achievement — it got to be an echo chamber effect," says Rep. Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va., who defeated Broyhill.

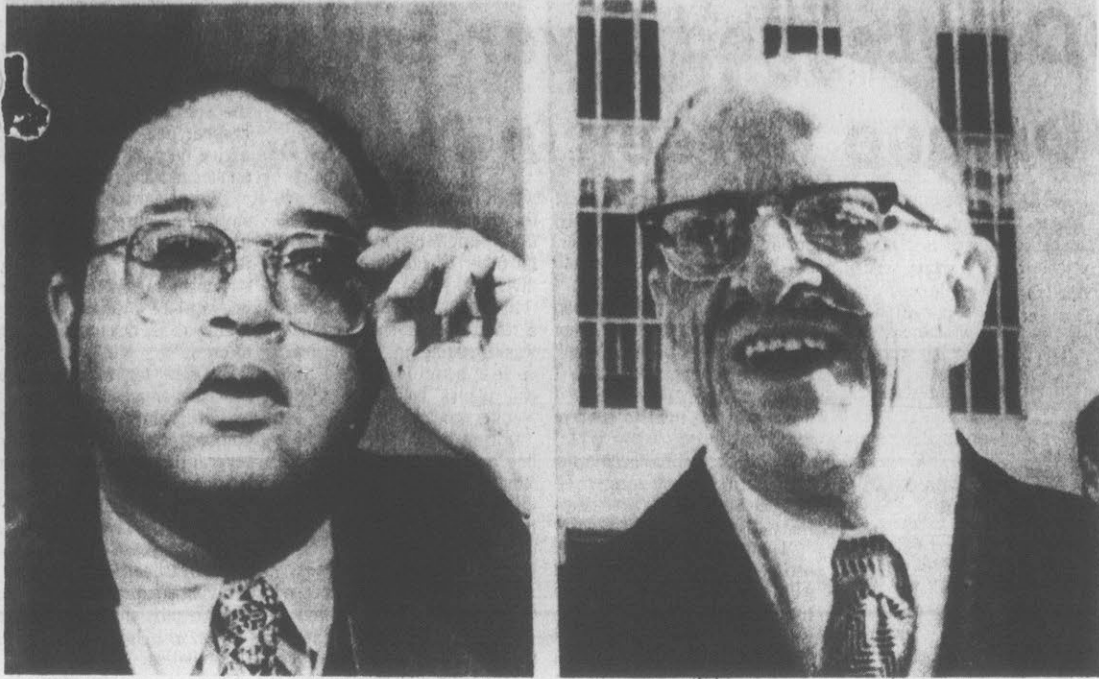

As a former government economist and elected county official, Fisher had good "name recognition" and party backing to try to unseat the previously unbeatable Republican. Also, Fisher thinks Broyhill, a staunch conservative, was hurt by being late in "speaking out against Watergate."

Fisher's suburban district is a bedroom for relatively well paid government officials, military officers, business executives and lobbyists. It also has about 8,000 Vietnamese refugees. The district is high in per capita income and level of education.

"They know how to use a congressional office," Fisher told UPI. "I doubt if a snow storm in Kalamazoo would bring the telephone calls from citizens who need their streets plowed."

One call for a snow plow came from the wife of one of two congressmen whose "Washington" homes are in Fisher's district. It also is the home of three Supreme Court justices and three cabinet members.

Fisher can spend a lot more time working in his district than most other House members. "I've tried to be innovative," Fisher said. "I knew I had to do as well or better than my predecessor or I'd be in trouble."

RE-ELECTION SECRET — Oldtimers say the way a Congressman votes on problems of the world mean nothing on election day if he hasn't taken care of the problems of his district. Rep. Daniel Flood, D-Pa., indicted Sept. '78 won his seat back in Nov. 1978. Rep. Charles Diggs, Jr. (left), appealing a prison sentence, was elected to a 12th term a month after his Oct. '78 conviction. (UPI Photo)

A Case History Of Problem-Solving

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On Feb. 23, 1976, Mrs. Elizabeth P. Berger learned her son Blake, 19, a Virginia Highway Department worker, had been pinned against a dump truck and killed by a chauffeured Buick sedan.

Police said the driver had failed to heed a flagman's warning.

The accident was destined to come to the attention of the State Department, Congress and the White House. It also serves as a model of how members of Congress respond to constituent concerns.

What set all this in motion was something Mrs. Berger discovered soon after she received word of her son's death. The Buick was not insured and she could not sue the owner. No charges could be placed against the driver.

The reason: the sedan belonged to the embassy of Senegal and the driver, a Philippine national, was protected by a 1790 statute that granted civil and criminal immunity to foreign diplomats and embassy staffs.

Mrs. Berger called the district office of her congressman, Rep. Joseph L. Fisher, D-Va. She told the woman who answered the telephone something that congressional aides often hear: "They ought to change the law."

Fisher, who had won election to Congress in 1974 on a pledge to give constituents as good or better help with their problems than his predecessor, swung into action. He set about to change the law.

Fisher, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, could not help Mrs. Berger directly. But he introduced bills in 1976 and 1977 to strip away some civil immunity of embassy staff members and require insurance for embassy cars.

The committee brought in the State Department for advice.

With the help of Sen. Charles Mathias Jr., R-Md., Fisher last year gained a repeal of the 1790 law that had provided embassy staffs with more protection than required by the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations.

After getting a prodding letter from Fisher, President Carter signed the bill last September and it became effective last Dec. 31.

"The new law ... means that many embassy employees will be subject to some of the same laws as U.S. citizens and be responsible for their unofficial act," Fisher said.

As a former government economist and elected county official, Fisher had good "name recognition" and party backing to try to unseat the previously unbeatable Republican. Also, Fisher thinks Broyhill, a staunch conservative, was hurt by being late in "speaking out against Watergate."

Fisher's suburban district is a bedroom for relatively well paid government officials, military officers, business executives and lobbyists. It also has about 8,000 Vietnamese refugees. The district is high in per capita income and level of education.

"They know how to use a congressional office," Fisher told UPI. "I doubt if a snow storm in Kalamazoo would bring the telephone calls from citizens who need their streets plowed."

One call for a snow plow came from the wife of one of two congressmen whose "Washington" homes are in Fisher's district. It also is the home of three Supreme Court justices and three cabinet members.

Fisher can spend a lot more time working in his district than most other House members. "I've tried to be innovative," Fisher said. "I knew I had to do as well or better than my predecessor or I'd be in trouble."

To learn more about "case work," a UPI reporter visited Fisher's main district office, staffed by Mrs. Valerie McCormick, the 26-year-old office manager, and Mrs. Ruth Kanter.

Case work, they said, is chiefly a sort of referral service — sending problems to the right government agency in the right way. Their "Bible" is a 902-page catalogue of federal agencies they regularly thumb through.

But many constituent problems get them involved with state, county and city government agencies as well.

"We don't ask them (the agencies) to change their minds," Mrs. McCormick said. "We ask them to look at it again. If an error was made, they will admit it. This is most important: we follow up."

"Someone has to listen to them," Mrs. McCormick said. "The fact that we are good listeners — that is one of the prime qualifications you need to do a good job, and patience."

Fisher loves statistics so Mrs. McCormick keeps plenty of them. Her files showed Fisher's office had handled 16,796 constituency problems since he took office in January, 1975.

For the week ending Feb. 9, the office had 442 cases in progress. That week the district office received 72 new ones.

They involved civil service, consumer affairs, the courts, health, housing, immigration, federal legislation, local government, military discharges, a federal worker's leave problem, the Postal Service, prisons, social security, taxes, potholes, street lights, traffic lights, veterans benefits, state affairs, and workmen's compensation.

Has anyone ever complained about the weather?

"Indirectly," Mrs. Kanter said. "They thought someone was seeding clouds in another area so they were not getting rain, and wanted it looked into. I never was able to find out."

Landmarks Are Letters

CINCINNATI (AP) — At age 48, Harold LeBlond has turned his back on the family business and taken a year off to work on his brainchild — a graphic design concept that spells out the names of cities by using their most famous attributes to represent letters.

At night, while other people are counting sheep, LeBlond lies awake dreaming of city landmarks that look like letters.

The "T" in Cincinnati, he discovered while strolling downtown one day.

"I just happened to glance up at the Old Lady Fountain Square and thought, 'By God, she's a T,'" LeBlond said.

He decided to develop designs for the top 30 U.S. cities, and for about 15 resorts such as Hilton Head, S.C., and Sea Island, Ga.

LeBlond haunts the libraries, reading up on American cities and trying to squeeze their prominent points into a few eye-catching letter-symbols.

His "letters" include steamboat smokestacks for the twin "N"s in Cincinnati, a cable car for the "O" in San Francisco, a stethoscope for the "V" in Cleveland, a chauffeur opening a Rolls Royce door for the "H" in Palm Beach, Fla.

He has started testing his designs on T-shirts, sweat shirts, shorts, needlepoint pillows, ashtrays, coffee mugs, playing cards and souvenirs of all sorts.

"It's like creating a monster. You wonder 'What are we going to do with this thing?'" LeBlond said.

He has contracted with a local department store for exclusive rights to market the items and hopes to place his needlepoint pillow kits with a catalog firm.

The switch to letter designing is a big change for LeBlond, whose family is known locally for its connection with LeBlond Inc., a local manufacturer of machine tools.

DR. ANCEL KEYS has changed the eating habits of millions of people — from foxholes to dinner tables. (UPI Photo)

Better Eating Crusader Now In Retirement

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Ancel Keys is not exactly a household name but his work has changed the eating habits of millions of people — from foxholes to dinner tables.

The University of Minnesota professor, who developed K-rations for GIs in World War II and a few years later led the cholesterol scare, has retired to a village on the west coast of Italy.

Still active and healthy at 75, Keys made his annual visit to Minnesota this spring to confer with university colleagues and see his two daughters and grandchildren.

"Studies seem to indicate people are healthier and eating better," he said in an interview. "There has been a falling off in the death rate, especially from heart-related diseases."

"But it's hard to tell if it can all be attributed to better eating. There is less smoking now and there has been a big increase in those getting more exercise."

Keys has preached on the need for sensible eating for nearly 40 years and he once complained, "Americans have Sunday dinner every day."

He has never eaten at a McDonalds or a Burger King but, he said, "I see their ads on TV and some of the food may be all right."

His early fame for discovering the danger of a cholesterol build-up in people who eat a lot of fatty meat, dairy products and eggs, led to research and teaching assignments in all parts of the world. He chuckled in recalling how closely he is associated with his work in many areas.

"There is a little hotel in Brussels that my wife and I stop at now and then, and every time I go in there the maitre d', a lady in her 60s, says, 'Ah, Monsieur Cholesterol.'"

Keys retired in 1972 after 36 years at Minnesota and 26 years as director of the Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene.

He started his first research to "find out before people get sick why they get sick" in a makeshift lab underneath Memorial Stadium. On the turf outside the stadium Bernie Bierman was turning out national football champions.

Bierman was recruited for one of Keys' initial long-range studies on diet and heart disease. But an unhealthy Wisconsin dairy farmer first gave Keys a big push in his work on cholesterol.

"He had big knobs on his knees and elbows and over his eyes, and when you opened them, it was just pure cholesterol inside," Keys recalled.

The farmer and his brother were put on a fat-free diet for a week and their cholesterol levels dropped drastically.

"That got me thinking furiously and it was the testing of these ideas about diet and fat" that led to further studies, Keys said.

His early warnings did not go over well in a state known for its meat, butter and milk and there were legislators and farm leaders who viewed the land-grant college professor as somewhat of a heretic.

But his views were quickly snatched by a health-conscious, diet-prone nation. In 1961, Time magazine honored him with a cover story.

Keys could talk tough about poor eating, once blaming heart disease on "the North American habit of making the stomach the garbage disposal unit for a long list of harmful foods."

He also claimed television was "doing a disservice to the nation and the individual... If we could find some way to make people do push-ups during commercials, then we'd all be strong as lions — the commercials are so long."

In an interview with William Hoffman of the University publication Update, Keys said, "nobody wants to eat mush. But a reasonably low-fat diet can provide infinite variety and aesthetic satisfaction for the most fastidious — if not the most gluttonous — among us."

Keys and his wife, Margaret, wrote a book, Eat Well and Stay Well, in 1958, giving advice on a good diet. It quickly became a best seller.

With Margaret providing 200 low-fat recipes, they urged people to "eat less fat meat, fewer eggs and dairy products. Spend more time on fish, chicken, calves liver, Canadian bacon, supplemented by fresh fruits, vegetables and cereals."

In 1950, Keys went to Rome as chairman of the World Health Organization's first commission on food and agriculture and in later years he spent much time on his research and studies in Italy. Keys and his wife eventually retired in Italy, mainly to escape Minnesota's severe winters.

They built a home in a fishing village on the Mediterranean Sea south of Naples. They have 80 olive trees, 75 citrus trees and a few "kumquats and chinotto."

"We know everybody in town," Keys said. "They bring us things — a fish, a rabbit, a loaf of home-baked bread."

Baha'i Community Fears A Massacre In Iran

By ED LION

WILMETTE, Ill. (UPI) — On the shores of Lake Michigan near a spectacular $10 million temple dedicated to unity and God, officials of the Baha'i Faith worry about the fate of their brethren halfway around the world in Iran.

"We're very apprehensive," said Glenford E. Mitchell, secretary for the Baha'i National Spiritual Assembly of the United States, based in this Chicago suburb.

"Homes of Baha'i members have been looted, Baha'i property has been seized and occupied by armed men claiming to be from the revolutionary committees.

"We know of four deaths. Two involved a father and son who were killed, cut into pieces and then burned.

"My fear is for the destruction of Baha'i holy places and for the well being of Baha'is in Iran. We fear a massacre."

Mitchell displayed a sheaf of news clippings in his office, a stone's throw from the gleaming white, 10-story high Baha'i House of Worship, the only one in the United States.

"We're trying to keep a close watch about the persecution," Mitchell said. "We follow press reports and have our own sources from the Baha'i community there. We are very disturbed at what is happening.

"Whenever there is a rising of passions, hatreds that have been previously controlled get out of hand. Hostility against Baha'is had always existed in Iran. Now it is being expressed.

"As was the case with the Jews in Germany, there is religious prejudice and some envy and accusations have been raised against them."

Mitchell said the combination of Baha'i beliefs and an emphasis on education among the community has put Iranian members in a precarious position.

There are an estimated 400,000 believers in Iran, — birthplace of the monotheistic religion — making it the biggest non-Moslem minority in the nation. The Iranian followers make up one of the largest Baha'i communities in the world.

The Baha'i Faith — with about 100,000 members in the United States and at least 2 million worldwide — extols unity of mankind. It believes that God manifested himself progressively through different prophets — including Buddha, Moses, Mohammed and Jesus.

The latest prophet to appear on earth, officials said, was Baha U'llah, a court minister's son who proclaimed himself a messenger of God as prophesied by an earlier sect based in Iran. He was imprisoned for allegedly joining a plot to kill the Shah of Persia and established the religion in 1863 while in exile at Baghdad.

Mitchell said the current persecution can be linked to Muslim conservatives who denounce the Baha'i Faith as a heresy against Islam, spawning prejudice against its members.

And an emphasis on education — which has enabled some Baha'is in Iran to fill administrative positions of high visibility — also has led to anti-Baha'i actions, Mitchell said.

Because of their positions, Mitchell said, they have been considered beneficiaries of the deposed Shah's rule and his supporters and thus have incurred the wrath of other Iranians and are being used as scapegoats.

"And Baha'is are spiritually obligated to be loyal and obedient to established authority," he said, explaining why they did not join in the revolution to topple the Shah. "They do not engage in partisan politics. Baha'is were neither pro nor anti (to the revolution)."

Baha'is who participate in politics or hold political positions can be drummed out of the faith community, but Mitchell said many interpreted the nonparticipation of Baha'is as a gesture of support for the old regime, setting the community up for reprisals.

In fact, he said, the last anti-Baha'i wave occurred in 1955 while the shah was in power and some of his top generals participated in actions against faith property.

Some accounts have identified top ministers under the shah and even a head of Savak, the monarch's dreaded security apparatus, as Baha'i members. But Mitchell said those accounts were patently false. He said they were encouraged by elements out to discredit the Baha'i Faith.

Mitchell said the Baha'i belief that each person is responsible for his own spiritual state — meaning the faith has no clergy — also has fueled persecution against the community.

"Partly because we have no clergy, people in Iran don't think we are a religion," Mitchell said. "In newspapers there are statements that we are not a religion. And that makes it easier for us to be persecuted."

The revolutionary leader in Iran, Ayatollah Khomeini, branded the Baha'i Faith a harmful political faction in an interview with an American scholar.

"They are a political faction," Khomeini was quoted. "They are harmful. They will not be accepted."

According to reports, Khomeini also said Baha'is would not have the same rights in Iran as other minorities, but his chief spokesman in Washington said in a televised forum that they would have full rights.

Mitchell, however, said he has no hard proof that revolutionary authorities actually ordered the wave of persecution. He said "other forces," presumably Islamic fanatics, may be taking advantage of the situation and acting on their own.

"What is published in this country are spears that can pierce Baha'is in Iran," Mitchell said, careful not to level unsupported accusations at the government or the parallel revolutionary forces.

Mitchell specifically said two Moslem holy men called for Baha'i holy centers to be occupied and documents seized. The birthplace of the religion's founder in Teheran also has been occupied, Mitchell said.

"I think they are looking for something incriminating, though I don't know what."

Some 500 Baha'i homes were looted or burned in the cities of Shiraz and Mashhad and the northwest province of Azerbaijan during the turmoil dating back several months, leaving 700 homeless, Mitchell said. Two of the four deaths occurred in the town of Miandowab, he said.

In the last month, he has not received word of further attacks, but the occupations of Baha'i property is continuing.

In the face of the reported persecution, Baha'is in the United States have appealed to the State Department as well as taken newspaper ads and issued statements to clarify and inform the public on the Baha'i Faith. The worldwide Baha'i community has appealed to the new government in Iran and a relief fund has also been set up.

GLENFORD E. MITCHELL, secretary for the Baha'i National Spiritual Assembly of the U.S., says that he and other members of his faith fear for the lives and property of compatriots still living in Iran. (UPI Photo)

Twin Daughters Need Physician

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have twin daughters, 18, who are driving me crazy. They are obsessed with being thin. They were always a little on the plump side until two years ago when they decided they wanted to be as thin as fashion models. They dieted themselves down to skin and bones. Now they eat whatever they want—and force themselves to upchuck afterwards. They also take a lot of laxatives to stay thin. I've tried to tell them that they are ruining their health but they won't listen to me. They think they look wonderful, but they look sick to me.

I am worried about them, Abby. What should I do?
WORRIED MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Get your daughters to a doctor! They could be suffering from "anorexia nervosa" (self-starvation). Your physician will probably recommend psychotherapy for the girls, as this condition involves psychological as well as physical problems. I urge you to act at once. They can be helped, but they can't do it alone.

DEAR ABBY: A friend and I were recently discussing pickups. Do you think it is all right for a woman (age 25) who is waiting for a bus to accept a ride from an attractive, polite man on a rainy evening? I have always felt that if a woman accepts a ride with a stranger, he might get the idea that she was a pickup. My friend says that anyone could tell by just looking at me that I am not the type, so it would be all right to accept the ride. What do you think?

DINAH IN LINCOLN

DEAR DINAH: Anyone who thinks he or she can tell anything about a person just by looking should think again. No sensible woman gets into an automobile with a strange man regardless of how "attractive and polite" he appears to be. And a man who picks up a stranger also is taking a big chance.

Lunch Given Miss Branch

A luncheon honoring Miss Elizabeth Jean Branch, bride-elect, was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton May, Winterville, last week. Guests were received by the hostess.

The buffet table was centered with an arrangement of roses, iris and anemones in a crystal pedestal. Individual miniature bone china baskets filled with pansies marked guests' places. A table decorated with wedding bells was arranged for the junior attendants.

Bridal games and oran music followed the three-course meal. The host and hostess presented the honoree a gift of crystal and guests shared recipes. The honoree and honor attendants were remembered with gifts of china flowers, also from the host and hostess.

Miss Branch was given a corsage of white silk summer flowers. She presented her attendants gifts of silver tea bells.

Mrs. Robert Franke assisted Mr. and Mrs. May in serving.

Mrs. Lester Branch, mother of the bride-elect, and Mrs. Herald Dean Hines Sr., mother of the bridegroom-elect, were introduced.

Bride-Elect Honored

Miss Denna Kay Howell, bride-elect of May 6, was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon given by Mrs. Walter E. Johnson at her home Saturday. Miss Howell was presented a corsage of yellow silk daisies.

The sun room and dining room were decorated with spring flowers and greenery. A bridal arrangement and the brides book where the attendants registered were placed on a lace covered table located near the entrance.

After the luncheon, Miss Howell remembered her attendants with a gift. Mrs. Johnson presented the bride-elect with a silver invitation tray.

Miss Gardner, Mr. Hugill Wed

AYDEN — LaRue Jeannette Gardner and John Randall Hugill were united in marriage Saturday in the garden of the home of the bride at "Sunny Lawn," Rt. 2, Ayden. The double ring ceremony was held at 5:30 p.m., conducted by the Rev. Tom Tunstall, assisted by the Rev. Ramon Redford and Rev. Paul Brown.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Alton Gardner. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hugill of Olney, Ill.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown of candlelight satin with French alencon lace and silk organza. Designed by the bride and bridegroom, the gown featured turn-of-the-century styling of a high Victorian collar of alencon lace, full illusion sleeves extending to the elbow with fitted satin to the wrist with miniature pearl buttons, a sheer yoke trimmed with ruffled lace and centered with a lace motif repeated in appliques on the front of the skirt, and a empire bodice enhanced by pearls entwined on the satin sash. The chapel length train of silk organza was edged with alencon lace and attached to a halo of silk flowers complementing her bridal bouquet. White cabbage roses, lily-of-the-valley, baby's breath, pink daisies, and pink and white miniature lilies, surrounded by white lace and ribbons were used in the bridal silk flower bouquet, which extended the full length of the gown. Mrs. Bertha Haddock of Greenville created the bridal gown and attendants' dresses.

Mrs. Patrice Morrison of Winston-Salem was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Jackie Gardner of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Jacque Davis of Terre Haute, Ind., sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Sharon Cypher of Raleigh, Ms. Robin Gerson and Mrs. Jacqui Kroschell of New York, and Mrs. Marita Orr of Orlando, Fla.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of chiffon, each in graduated shades of rose, in the classic Victorian style. They carried bouquets of pink silk cabbage roses mixed with spring flowers and decorated with lace and pink ribbons. Miss Hunter Gardner, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a pink chiffon floor-length dress in the Victorian motif and carried a basket of rose petals. David Davis, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. The mother of the bride wore a formal dress of peach silk knit with a cape of matching chiffon, encrusted with beads at the waist. The bridegroom's mother wore a yellow silk knit formal dress. Both mothers wore peach silk corsages.

Robert Nigro of New York served as best man. Honorary groomsmen were Donald Davis of Terre Haute, Ind., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Ben Gardner of Greenville, brother of the bride, Scott Bakula, Dennis Cole, and Gary Munch, all of New York, and John Cosgrove of Coral Gables, Fla. Usherettes were Ms. Andrea Naier and Ms. Elisabeth Rosenthal of New York and ushers were Ray Lloyd of New York, Ralph Paul, and Patrick McGrath of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Wilma Smith, organist, Mrs. Josephine Lewis, harpist and Gary Munch, guitarist.

Soloists were Ms. Tricia Witham of New York, who sang "Entreat Me Not To Leave Thee" and "The Wedding Prayer." Scott Bakula sang "The Wedding Song." The bridal couple wrote their own wedding vows and sang them to music composed by Andy Bloor of New York. The Rev. Redford, uncle of the bride, officiated during the special communion during the ceremony, which closed with an exchange of greetings between families and the presentation of long-stemmed roses to the mothers. Mrs. Patricia Tunstall of Danville, Va., directed the wedding.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the bride's home. Guests were greeted by Ms. Ruth Gardner, aunt of the bride, and directed to the guest registry by Mrs. Iva Lou Hardee the bride's cousin. A pink and white color scheme was carried throughout the house. Mrs. Marguerite Weeks, aunt of the bride, served cake. Others assisting were Mrs. Irene Stancill, Mrs. Joan Redford, Mrs. Lois Spain, Mrs. Beverly White, and Mrs. Terri Bibb. Mrs. Wilma Smith provided piano music for the event, and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Ben White. After a Bermuda honeymoon, the couple will reside in New York City.

The bride is a graduate of Greensboro College and the Carolina School of Broadcasting. She is presently a professional actress, singer and dancer and will be featured in a symphony tour of "Musical America" this summer. The bridegroom is graduate of the University of Florida, where he was a member of Phi Kappa Tau Fraternity and Omicron Delta Kappa Honorary Fraternity. He is presently a professional actor, director and choreographer in stage, screen and television productions.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained members of the wedding party with an after-rehearsal dinner Friday at the King and Queen Restaurant.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It's another one of life's greatest mysteries.

The moment your kids borrow something from you...it is never the same again.

I have a phonograph that I've had for years. OK, so it doesn't bounce sound off of every wall, but I can hear Andy Williams and Frank Sinatra on it well enough.

My kids used it at a party one night because it was plugged in to the living room wall and ever since then it rejects any record that isn't rock and there's only one volume level—the one that causes sterility.

It was the same with my hair dryer. They borrowed it and now it keeps blowing and drying even after the switch is turned off. As for my clothes, by the time they're returned, most of them are not recognizable. The sweaters are stretched, the colors faded, buttons and snaps have fallen off, and they have developed perma-stains for which there is no known cure.

The car is probably worst. There is something contagious about a teenage driver for which a car has no antidote. The moment they climb inside and insert the key, the transmission goes into failure, tires turn bald, and the battery with two years left on a three-year guarantee goes dead. The gas tank turns to sponge, pointing the gauge to E when it hits the garage.

The list goes on and on. They return luggage with bent frames that will never close again, let alone lock... cameras which when focused make every subject look like a Rorschach test...binoculars that will never again enjoy the protection of lens caps.

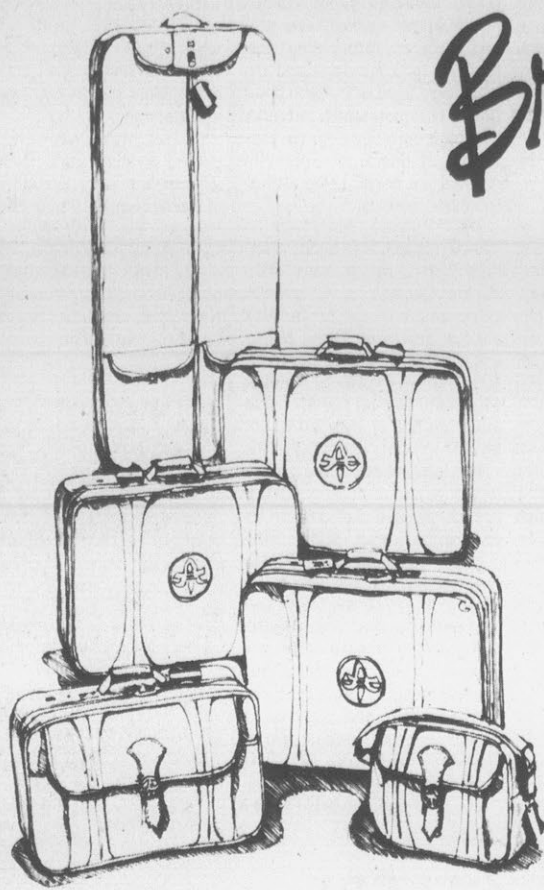

You would think the theory would work in reverse, but it doesn't. A man in Highland Heights, Ohio, recently asked to borrow his daughter's baseball glove for a game with some friends.

She threw him the glove and added, "It's okay to use unless it's a hot and sweaty day. When it's hot and sweaty, the bubble gum which has been in the index finger for two years, runs down your finger into your hand. If it bothers you, just pick at it with your teeth."

Whatya wanta bet when he picked all the gum off and the glove fell apart, his daughter said, "You've ruined my glove and now you'll have to buy me a new one."

Kids put quite a price on their lifestyle.

Mother's Day Started As Tribute To One

NEW YORK (AP) — Mother's Day is not the sales-generating brainchild of a greeting-card company or a florist, but the product of one woman's lifelong obsession. And it is the nation's only national holiday that commemorates the anniversary of a death.

"Thanks to the tireless, even obsessive, labors of Anna Jarvis of West Virginia," notes the current issue of American Heritage magazine, "we honor all our mothers on the second Sunday in May, the anniversary of her own mother's death in 1905."

Anna was the eighth of 11 children (only three of whom reached adulthood), born to Anna Reeves Jarvis. Mrs. Jarvis "became a 'mother' to the communities in which she lived," the article notes.

"Before the Civil War, she organized local women to fight the epidemic diseases that had stricken some of her children. Later, she convened a 'Mother's Friendship Day' social gathering at which she advocated the power of motherhood to heal the war's wounds and to reduce the Union-Confederate rivalries that many West Virginia mountaineers still harbored during Reconstruction.

"As a Sunday-school teacher and as head of the Andrews Methodist Church infant department in Grafton, W.Va., Mrs. Jarvis lectured adults and children on 'Great Mothers of the World.'"

When Mrs. Jarvis died, the story continues, "Anna seemed unable to let her mother go." In replies to condolence letters, she sent her mother's picture. Then young Anna set out to create a grander monument.

In 1907 she persuaded the Andrews Methodist Church in Grafton to hold a Mother's Day service to mark the second anniversary of her mother's death. She anonymously donated money for a memorial picture of her mother and for a table for the Sunday school, and she provided 500 carnations — her mother's favorite flower — for the mothers in the Andrews congregation.

At her urging, several Philadelphia clergymen also preached on motherhood that Sunday in their own churches.

"The following year, the Andrews Methodist church officially proclaimed the third anniversary of Anna Reeves Jarvis' death to be Mother's Day. Special music and sermons in honor of mothers filled Grafton churches. Grafton florists sold out of carnations," the article says.

At the same time, Anna was in Philadelphia organizing a Mother's Day committee. She addressed a crowd in the John Wanamaker auditorium on the glories of motherhood and proposed that Mother's Day be celebrated universally. During subsequent years she wrote thousands of letters to public officials eliciting support.

In 1910 West Virginia Gov. William Glasscock issued the first Mother's Day proclamation, asking that all West Virginians "attend church on that day and wear white carnations." State after state joined the movement to which Anna now devoted full time.

In December 1912, she incorporated herself as the Mother's Day International Association.

On May 10, 1913, the House of Representatives unanimously passed a resolution stating that "the American mother is the greatest source of the country's strength and inspiration... (and does) so much for the home, the moral uplift, and religion... that as a token of our love and reverence for the mother, the President and his Cabinet, United States Senators, Representatives of the house, and all officials of the Federal Government are hereby requested to wear a white carnation or some other white flower Sunday, May 11, in observation of Mother's Day."

On May 8, 1914, a joint resolution was passed by Congress that authorized and requested the president to call upon Americans to display the flag on the second Sunday in May as a "public expression of our love and reverence for the mothers of our country." In 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a new Mother's Day proclamation, reasserting the principles in President Wilson's original 1914

There is a touch of irony to the story, according to American Heritage. Anna was outraged that florists profited from her day.

"When the price of carnations rose to a dollar apiece, she developed an inexpensive Celluloid button as a substitute. People bought flowers anyway, and Anna scathingly attacked 'infringers,' 'detractors,' and 'profiteers'."

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"Miss Polly" (Mrs. Bill Turner) is retiring from her job of four years at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine as administrative assistant in the ultrasound postgraduate program.

Her future plans include traveling with her husband, visiting family and friends and fishing, which she says is "very important."

She came to the job from being a wife, mother and volunteer. Because of the assistance she has given to physicians from the 11 countries represented in the ultrasound program, she is known from Rio to Cairo as "Miss Polly."

Ultrasound is the use of high frequency sound to diagnose and treat disease. It was far removed from Mrs. Turner's life when she was approached by Dr. William McKinney, a neighbor and director of the ultrasound laboratory at Bowman Gray.

In an article printed in Winston-Salem's "The Sentinel," written by Roger Rollman, Dr. McKinney said he thought she would be good in the postgraduate program because of her background of meeting people and her good humor in the face of difficulties.

"The children were getting bigger and I was getting tennis elbow. When Dr. McKinney mentioned the new program, things just clicked into place," said Mrs. Turner.

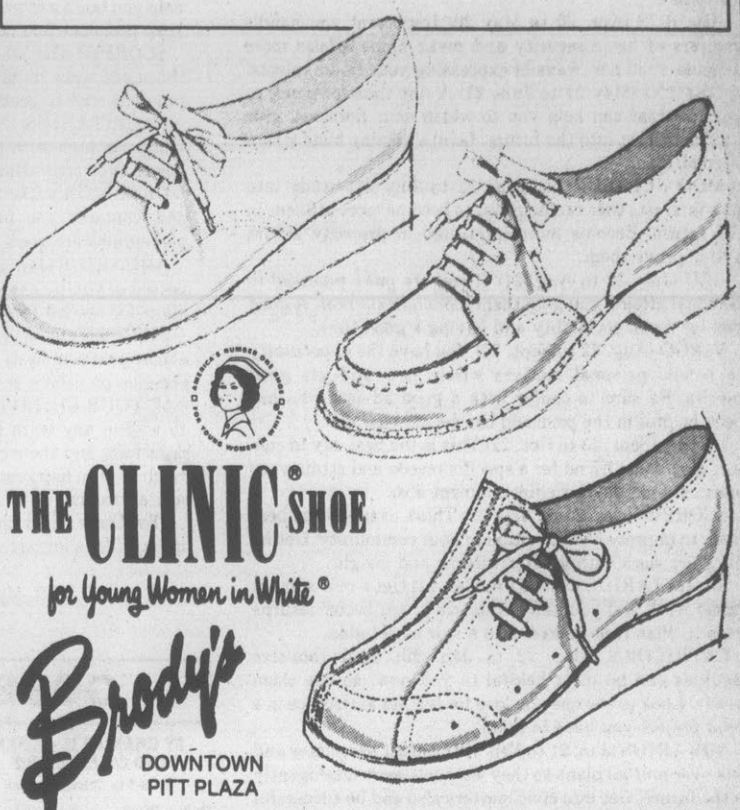

"A graduate of Vassar in liberal arts, I was not raised to have any career goals. If anything, my career goals were to be a wife and mother."

"I think volunteer work did more to prepare me for the work at Bowman Gray than anything else. That type of work develops a lot of management skills. And you have to learn to deal with people in those kinds of jobs," she continued.

Mrs. Turner's in-laws, the W. David Turners Sr., lived in Greenville for approximately 25 years.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — PROPER MISS CAN AVOID IMPROPER ADVANCES.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: O equals A
The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Sprouts Add To The Vitamins

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Horticulturist Don Steinegger of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says the usable vitamins, minerals and proteins in some seeds are increased by sprouting. Such sprouts are especially high in vitamins C and B2, he adds.

No special equipment is needed, he says. A wide-mouth quart jar is adequate for sprouting two to three tablespoons of fresh, clean seed that has not been chemically treated against insect or plant diseases.

Place seeds in the jar, add three cups of water, cover the mouth with a doubled piece of cheesecloth or a fine plastic mesh screen held tightly with strong rubber bands. Soak the seeds overnight, drain the water and rinse the seeds at least twice daily by running lukewarm water through the cheesecloth or screen and draining. In between these steps, store the jar in a warm spot (65-75 degrees F) slanted downward to drain excess water.

When the seeds begin to sprout, and before they become mature and stringy, place the jar near a window or in indirect sunlight 2 to 8 hours to turn them green, he said. To use them in hot dishes, he suggests adding the sprouts only during the last 3 to 5 minutes of cooking to retain some of the vitamins.

Grade Cards Replaced By Progress Reports

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
LONGMEADOW, Mass. (AP)

Kindergartners still learn their ABCs as usual in this affluent Springfield suburb. It's their grades — M, N and P — that are different.

The town's school department has replaced the often feared and loathed traditional report card with a less painful and more optimistic new marking system.

Now pupils get their grades on bright yellow "progress reports" that feature illustrations by a child and language aimed at children.

The marking system, says the principal who developed it, is based on the assumption students are or will be making progress.

The reports list a series of 43 statements, such as "I finish what I start," "I remain interested in new things," and "I respect adult leadership," that are marked M, N or P.

"M" means "most of the time," "P" means "part of the time," "N" means "not yet."

The progress reports, sent home to parents of kindergartners at all elementary schools for the first time in February, don't look like the report cards that used to make you ponder running away to a career in the French Foreign Legion.

Officials hope the new report cards will relieve some of the anxiety traditionally associated with marks, and make the trip home on the day of their issuance a little more pleasant.

There's a drawing of a smiling face over the academic progress section of the card, and illustrations of children at work and play above sections on work habits, physical development, social and emotional development and art.

The "I remain interested in learning new things" category, for instance, is a cartoon of a wide-eyed girl sitting up straight in her chair. The drawings were done by the 9-year-old niece of an art teacher in the Longmeadow system.

So far, school officials say the response has been enthusiastic.

"I expected at least a few complaints, but they haven't come," said Philip Frost, superintendent of schools. "It's unique in this area, but it reflects a national trend toward focusing on academic development," he said.

"Everyone seems to be delighted — parents and students," added Margaret Wentzel, principal of Blueberry Hill School and the primary force behind the new reports.

"The old card really had nothing a child could relate to."

"A's, B's and C's historically have been used to peg kids," said Carl Trip, principal of Greenwood Park School. "With this marking system we're trying to avoid pigeonholing them,

'Transegrity' By Buckminster Fuller

By BRUCE DALLAS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — R. Buckminster Fuller said he created the word "tensegrity" to describe how a bundle of rods and cables can be made into a giant sphere so light and strong it can support a floating space station a mile in diameter.

That's right, agreed physicist Ernest Okress, who has developed a double plastic-film envelope to cover Fuller's tensegrity geodesic. That double envelope will trap air heated by the sun and enable the STARS (Spherical Tensegrity Atmospheric Research Station) balloon to float 19 miles above the earth, Okress said.

Fuller, who at 83 maintains the work schedule of three men, wears two hearing aids and tri-focals, currently is World Fellow in Residence for the University of Pennsylvania and Bryn Mawr, Swarthmore and Haverford colleges. But for part of his life the tiny, white-haired inventor-philosopher-poet-engineer-architect-teacher-author was known as a crackpot. crackpot.

He was thrown out of Harvard twice, considered suicide at age 32, and decided common man could do something and so invented a rear-steering car that seated 10 and got 40 miles per gallon 50 years ago. He also resurrected the ancient Greek word "ecology" and struck out in just about every direction known to modern man.

Fuller, who now owns more than 2,000 patents, is best known for inventing the geodesic dome.

Although it was Gulliver whose travels took him to the floating city of Laputa, and it's more likely that science fiction would dream up a mile-wide floating balloon that can launch space ships and record scientific data, the STARS project isn't fiction.

Okress, a principal scientist at the Franklin Research Center, has completed more than a year's analysis proving that Fuller's structure and his double envelope are feasible. He's applied for government grants for engineering studies needed before building a prototype a mere quarter-mile in diameter.

Fuller patented his tensegrity sphere in 1967. "No compression member touches another. The tension is continuous. That's why I call it tensional integrity — then cut down the name to tensegrity," said Fuller, speaking from his offices decorated with brightly-colored posters, souvenirs from his worldwide travels — and suspended transegrity models.

Each metal spar of the tensegrity sphere is suspended by taut cables. The spars are strung together in hexagonal and triangular patterns, linked only through the cables. The resulting sphere is extremely light because of the minimal number of spars needed.

"Take a sheet of paper and roll it into a cylinder — I can use it for a column," Fuller explains. "That's called simple curvature, but the lines are in parallel."

"Now the compound curvature of a sphere is simply triangulation. That's the essence of my discovery of the geodesic dome — realizing people didn't know what a sphere really was — it's all triangular."

Fuller says he next examined compression. "While man was building stone on stone, nature dealt with gravity through spheres — the moon, Earth, the atom. Man had done just the opposite. I wanted to reverse that."

"I found man had done that when he invented the wire wheel. I simply said I have to find how you do that in a general way, and that's what I did in (inventing) tensegrity."

Depending on the configuration of the spars, Fuller's tensegrity spheres can be either rigid or so flexible they can be bounced like balls.

"A sphere not only gives the most volume for the least surface but it gives the strongest structure," he says. "We're getting the most for the least for humanity in a sphere."

Fuller thought the tensegrity sphere — if big enough — would be lighter than air and float by itself. He also envisioned filling the struts with helium and patented a balloon-type covering of his own.

But Fuller floated off to other ideas, leaving the practical application of the sphere to his young aides.

About two years ago, a Fuller aide brought a model of the sphere to Dr. Robert Soberman, then director of advanced programs at the University City Science Center, where Fuller has his offices. "We were intrigued by it and by Fuller's concept that anything that large could be made to float," Soberman said.

Soberman gave the job to Okress, who was more than a little skeptical. He also was more than a little interested.

"We haven't seen any flaws," says Okress, 68, who has made the STARS project his fulltime concern at the Franklin Center. "It looks very promising, although we tried to kill it."

Okress did puncture the idea of the tensegrity sphere floating all by itself or even with helium-filled struts. "But I liked the structure — mass is very low compared to strength. The reason I got interested ... I began to think of two envelopes (around the structure)."

The concentric envelopes, made of two layers of very thin, strong plastic, would create a "greenhouse effect," Okress says. The outer layer of plastic would be spectrally sensitive, in effect creating a "one-way thermal mirror" that would allow solar energy in but keep the heat from escaping at night.

"The buoyancy comes from the warm air inside," he says. The STARS dirigible would float gently about 19 miles above the Earth in the stratosphere, where because of the extremely low barometric pressure 50 mph winds would seem like mere whiffs.

Okress says a doughnut-shaped ring around the inside perimeter of the STARS balloon would absorb sunlight admitted by the plastic envelopes. The radiation would be absorbed by a water cloud inside the closed ring, which could then be stored as heat energy to maintain a constant internal temperature.

Inside, the temperature would be about 80 degrees; outside, the stratosphere is about 27 degrees, Okress says. To descend or ascend, the inside temperature could be lowered or raised gradually, just like a hot air balloon, he adds.

The nucleus of the mile-wide STARS balloon would be the actual control center, where a crew of about 30 would oversee scientific operations, repairs and even spaceship launchings, Okress says.

Because pressure, not temperature, would be the same inside the STARS balloon as outside, crewmen would have to wear pressurized space suits outside the control center.

The mile-wide balloon would weigh about 6,000 metric tons. "Most of the technology is already in place," says Soberman, adding that the 30-foot-long metal struts and cords can be mass produced.

Engineering studies will take about 3½ years and it would cost around $1 billion to develop a full-flight model, Soberman says.

Nuclear Age Carries Its Price

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOUNT TAYLOR, N.M. (AP) — For 34 years, ever since a small atomic bomb was exploded in the desert wilderness known as Jornada del Muerto, New Mexico has been capital of the world's nuclear community.

The industry, ranging from weapons development to uranium mining and processing, evolved in tranquility here. Yet today, when uranium producers may be on the verge of an enormous expansion, New Mexicans are beginning to raise serious questions about the nuts and bolts of the atomic fuel cycle: mining, processing and waste disposal.

"You'd have to be crazy to suggest there'll be a divorce between the state and the industry," says one mining executive. "But the honeymoon is over."

This is bad news for the industry, already troubled by coast-to-coast setbacks due to relentless public opposition to nuclear electric generating plants and the fresh doubts created by the accident at the Three Mile Island atomic power plant in Pennsylvania.

New Mexico has no nuclear power plants and no plans to build one. Even environmental activists have shown scant interest in the anti-nuclear campaign that has bedeviled the industry elsewhere.

After Three Mile Island, however, an anti-nuclear group in Albuquerque organized several rallies, and the accident has "created a higher level of concern about nuclear processes," according to a spokesman for an organization opposing a federal proposal for a nuclear waste dump in the state.

Still, there's been no "ban the bomb" fever in New Mexico. Weapons research continues without much controversy at Los Alamos.

Rather, "We have very narrow concerns," says lobbyist Sally Rodgers of Friends of the Earth in Santa Fe. "New Mexicans are apprehensive about mining and burial. In 40 years, when the uranium has run out and the mining companies have packed up and left, we don't want New Mexico to be a radioactive wasteland."

These thoughts have been awakened by growing scientific evidence concerning radioactive waste — dangers from towering uranium tailing piles, and the still-unknown threats posed by waste disposal schemes. On top of that, New Mexicans worry about the impact of mining on precious water supplies.

The activism already has spawned reaction. Organizations of atomic advocates — EAT (Energy Association of Taxpayers) and New Mexicans for Jobs and Energy — are drumming up public support for the nuclear industry.

For decades the industry has been treated gingerly in New Mexico, a state that depends heavily on its payrolls. Taxes are low, regulation is minimal, water rights are almost unlimited. "The people of New Mexico have always been understanding," says an executive with United Nuclear Corp.

But lately, the industry has come under closer scrutiny. For example, the legislature has been chipping away at the industry's tax status. While oil and gas producers have been pulling their weight for years, the tax on uranium production was set for years at less than 1 percent. Today's 6½ percent severance tax — still modest by most standards — is 12 times the previous rate. And the legislature is considering efforts to increase the levy again.

The industry helps provide a sure base of growth for the state, and the promise of more for decades to come. By any account, most New Mexicans favor further development of uranium resources. And many accept as geologic necessity, and poetic justice, that Washington has tabbed the state as a logical site for burying radioactive wastes.

Yet, state officials, environmental activists and local Indian leaders are uneasy about the effect of a tripling in uranium production and the ever-closer arrival of high-level waste materials.

"Every day we see a new report about the dangerous side effects of radiation. We'd be crazy if we weren't skittish," says an aide to Gov. Bruce King.

In the beginning — it was 1942 — J. Robert Oppenheimer turned a boys' camp on Los Alamos Mesa, 7,300 feet up on the Pajarito Plateau, into the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, a nuclear workshop that would build the first atomic bomb.

For most state residents the more significant activity is to the southwest in an area known as the Grants Uranium Belt, which cuts a swath 100 miles long and 20 miles wide from Gallup in the west to Rio Puerco in the east. The region produces some coal, and 46 percent of the nation's "yellowcake," the fissionable uranium used in atomic bombs and nuclear power plants.

From World War II through the 1960s, yellowcake sold for $8 a pound. Now, with 72 nuclear power plants in operation in the United States, uranium sells for between $41 and $44 a pound. New Mexico's remaining reserves are valued at $32 billion.

Between 75 and 100 new U.S. plants could start up in the 1980s, barring further special consequences from Three Mile Island. And worldwide demand for uranium is rising.

State officials say the number of uranium mines in the state will more than double by 1990, from 34 to 73.

The expansion is bringing thousands of new jobs into the state and will bolster a tax base already so solid that New Mexico ranks 42nd among all states in overall tax burden.

But there's another side to New Mexico's uranium expansion — the dangers involved in producing and disposing of radioactive materials.

The U.S. Department of Energy has looked at 13 sites for permanent nuclear waste disposal, but the big push and the big money are going into plans for an underground depository in the salt beds of southeastern New Mexico, near the town of Carlsbad. The government hopes to dispose of high-level radiation military wastes there.

This Waste Isolation Pilot Project would bring New Mexico full cycle in the nuclear process. "We grow it (uranium) here, and now it looks like we'll bury it here," says Jack Kennedy, director of the mineral division of the State Land Office.

But it's becoming an issue. State legislative and congressional leaders insist on state concurrence before the project actually goes into construction, which may not happen for another two years.

Scientists from Los Alamos have told state lawmakers that the project's problems are being exaggerated. And in Carlsbad, Mayor Walter Gerrels, a founder of New Mexicans for Jobs and Energy, and many other community leaders say they'll back the project if it passes scientific review.

Another issue shaping up is water. Deep-well uranium mines waste a lot of it, and a trip down the shaft at Gulf's Mount Taylor mine is a very wet experience. Water pours into the mine from underground aquifers and is pumped to the surface at 5,000 gallons per minute then "laundered" of contaminants and disposed of.

The uranium processors are fighting a legislative proposal to subject mine de-watering to the same licensing as other users of underground water resources. They contend it would drive up mining costs and in some cases block operations.

By 1990, says State Engineer S.E. Reynolds, the mines may be de-watering up to 100,000 acre feet a year and could "adversely affect" existing water rights.

As mining expands, the multiplying piles of uranium tailings also are raising concern. The tailings are slightly radioactive, and in huge piles radiate isotopes can escape into the atmosphere or into the water tables, posing risk to human and animal health.

There's also radon, a gas which if inhaled can cause harm to the respiratory system and cause cancer.

The Environmental Protection Agency is preparing to regulate siting and treatment of tailings, and New Mexico officials hope to get oversight jurisdiction once the rules are promulgated.

Contemplating the permanent byproducts of the nuclear process, from tailings to the waste disposal center planned for Carlsbad, a veteran state legislator said recently: "New Mexico has reaped many rewards from the all mighty atom: jobs, tax revenues, a place in history. Perhaps now we will have to pay the piper."

Islanders Weigh Electricity System

By KEN O'QUINN
Associated Press Writer
MONHEGAN ISLAND, Maine (AP) — While people across the nation are worried about rising electric rates and the dangers of nuclear power, residents of this remote island are getting around to debating whether to have electricity at the flick of a switch.

For the past 30 years, most islanders have obtained electricity from either oil-fueled household generators or 12-volt car batteries.

But now there's a move to bring centralized electricity to the island, home to about 40 families year-round, 11 miles offshore.

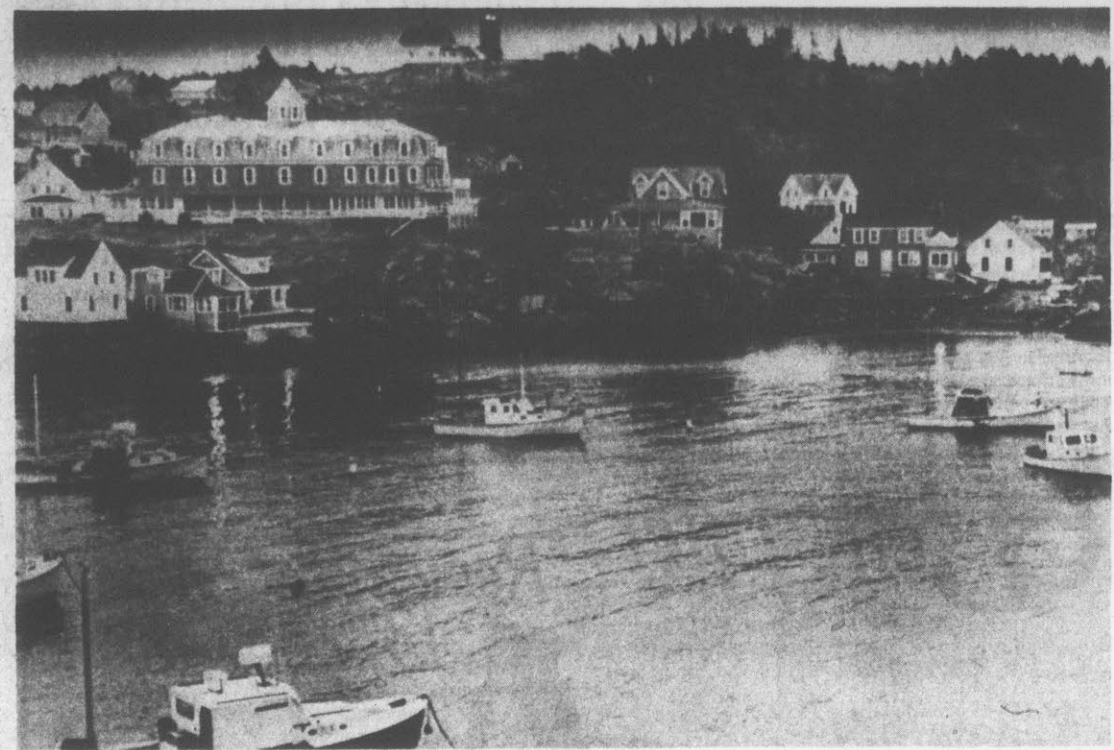

And while this hasn't caused any real controversy, it's certainly been all the talk down at the Monhegan Store, the only food store on this island that also is a summer home to such artists as Jamie Wyeth.

"The worst thing about living with batteries is watching a Red Sox game in the ninth inning with the score tied and having your battery die," said one veteran fisherman.

"I wouldn't like to see the character of the island change," said Sandy Dickson, an artist.

The proposal to build a centralized generator, discussed off and on for years, is being studied by a three-member committee. Many of the island's residents are fishermen and some prefer life without regular electricity and say they'll turn it down even if it arrives.

But for most people, the generators have become a burden. Diesel fuel is growing more expensive — many residents burn a gallon an hour — and maintenance can be costly. Hiring a mechanic from the mainland can run as high as $350.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, shown here as dusk approaches, is a remote ocean island located eleven miles to sea off Main's rocky coastline. For thirty years, residents have obtained electricity either from oil-fueled generators or batteries. Now there's move afoot to bring centralized power to the island. (AP Laserphoto)

Generators also are wasteful, according to Harry Odom, a lifelong islander who, along with his brother, owns the Monhegan Store. He has to refrigerate an empty soda cooler and keep unneeded lights on to maintain the demand needed to keep his generator running.

Because of high operating costs, tasks requiring power, such as vacuuming and ironing, are set aside until evening when generators are running to supply lights.

And many people are fed up with the noise that blares until the clattering motors are turned off at bedtime.

With a cable to the mainland dismissed as too expensive, centralized electricity would probably require an oil-fired generator on the island, which is about one mile wide and two miles long.

Center-Of-World Name Questioned

CENTER OF THE WORLD, Ohio (AP) — Anne Nye recalls wondering, when she was a child of 10, "Is this really the center of the world?"

And Thomas Barnes says he had similar doubts when he was a youngster, thinking, "There ought to be more people around here" if the tiny crossroads in eastern Ohio really is the center of the world.

A center comprising about 50 houses, a couple of taverns, a furniture store and one small rubber factory may not appear very imposing. But, for many residents, the name seems completely logical.

"Wherever you're at, you're in the center of the world," observed Harold Mechling as he quaffed a beer in the Lucky Inn at roughly the center of Center of the World.

How did this stretch of road at the intersection of Ohio routes 82 and 5 get its name?

While residents of the area know all about C-O-W's most famous son — heavyweight boxer Earnie Shavers — many are unaware of the origin of the community's name.

MIRACLE PILL

A recent article in a well-known national newspaper revealed the thoughts of doctors who hailed the attributes of the safe, natural L-TRYPTOPHAN, that can virtually eliminate stress, depression and sleeping problems, and is available without prescription.

It is not a drug. According to medical experts in the article, L-TRYPTOPHAN can calm you down by relieving nervousness and stress. It can pick you up when you are blue, and help you to sleep like a baby. L-TRYPTOPHAN has been tested and can replace Valium, Tranquilizers, and Anti-Depressants. It is the first safe non-barbiturate, non-toxic sleeping pill that leaves you with a clear head in the morning. It is better than tranquilizers because it is non-habit forming.

THE DLC-7 CUISINART FOOD PROCESSOR IS ONE BREAKTHROUGH. THE ACCESSORIES ARE FIVE MORE.

Cuisinart has done it. Again. The new DLC-7 Cuisinart food processor is built to perform the way no other food processor can. It has 46% more capacity than even Cuisinart's other models; a far stronger motor; an ingenious off-on pulse system, providing more control; and it's very quiet.

Most importantly, the DLC-7 has available a set of unequaled accessories, each one a breakthrough in its own right. They're like skilled professional "hands" that enable you to cut just about everything from lemon in paper thin slices or bread or butter or meat in 1/4 inch slices or to turn out a square julienne, match-stick shaped strips.

In short, the new DLC-7 is not just the next step in food processors. It's more like a whole staircase.

Chevy Chase's Humor Test On NBC

Chevy Chase continues to be one of the freshest comedy talents on the entertainment scene. His zany, cockeyed, madcap view of life first brought him into national prominence as head-writer and a performer on "NBC's Saturday Night Live," resulting in his own TV specials.

Now he aims his wit and humor at national TV tests with his special, "The Chevy Chase National Humor Test," a tongue-in-cheek effort to learn what makes people laugh. The program will air Thursday, May 10 (9 to 10 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

It comes as no surprise to Chevy's army of fans that he'll do just about anything for a laugh — never mind the physical discomfort.

He'll even dive into a shallow creek, fully clothed, which he does in a sketch on this special.

Preparing for the water-rescue scene, Chevy carefully went over details with the director and cameraman to make sure he would only have to dive into the water once.

"I'm going to get up pretty high in the air," explained Chevy. "Let me do a dive for you. I'll land in the water face down — and I'll be in more trouble than the victim."

"I'll give you all the time in the world," said the director reassuringly.

"Just do whatever feels comfortable," exclaimed the cameraman.

There's nothing comfortable about it," cracked Chevy. "Well, this is it!"

With that, he got off to a running start and did exactly what he had promised to do.

"Great dive!" shouted one of the writers. "Eight points, on a scale of one to 10!"

Playboy Celebrates 25 Years

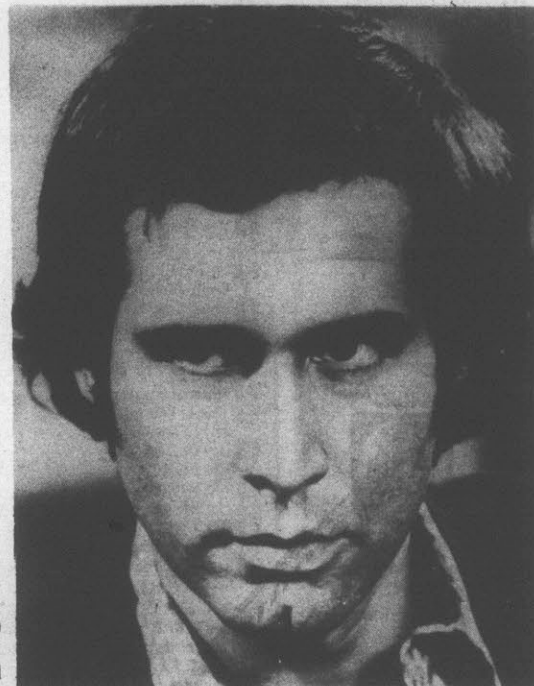

Playboy's 25th Anniversary Playmate, Candy Loving, is an ideal choice for that honor. She's beautiful, intelligent, has a terrific figure, a pretty face and a lovely personality.

Playboy representatives spent seven months searching in 28 cities in the United States and Canada, netting them some 3,000 candidates, for the "Playmate." Ironically, Candy was discovered in the first city visited — Norman, Oklahoma — but it was not until Oct., 1978, that she was selected from the three remaining finalists by editor and publisher Hugh M. Hefner, who makes the final decision on all Playmate choices.

Candy grew up in Ponca City, Oklahoma, where she attended school. She writes poetry and wants to publish a book of poems and possibly a novel. A University of Oklahoma senior, majoring in public relations, Ms. Loving will represent Playboy Magazine during an anniversary year tour of the United States, Mexico and Canada.

Kicking off this occasion will be "Playboy's 25th Anniversary Celebration," airing Monday, May 7 (10 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV. Hefner hosts the glamorous, star-studded gala at the Playboy Mansion-West and will present a kaleidoscopic retrospective of the Playboy years. Joining Hefner are James Caan, Tony Curtis and George Plimpton.

The look at Playboy's first 25 years features film clips from many memorable "Playboy After Dark" shows, and montages depicting the evolution of Playboy and the revolutionary changes in American life during the '50s, '60s and '70s, as well as comments on Playboy and Hefner by such notables as Chevy Chase, Buck Henry, Ray Bradbury, Carl Sandburg, Bill Russell and Bill Cosby, to name a few.

Chevy Chase stars in "The Chevy Chase National Humor Test," a tongue-in-cheek special spoofing national TV tests, Thursday, May 10 (9-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Johnny Cash Has Spring Special

"The Johnny Cash Spring Special," an hour-long entertainment special, featuring guest stars Waylon Jennings, Martin Mull, George Jones and June Carter Cash, will air Wednesday, May 9 (10 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Johnny's other guests are The Carter Family and the Tennessee Three. There will also be cameo appearances by Earl Scruggs, Hank Williams Jr., Merle Kilgore and Jack Routh.

During the taping of the special at the Grand Ole Opry House, June Carter Cash took the stage during the long waits — as musicians tuned their instruments and stagehands raced through their chores — making the audience feel "fireplace cozy."

"The reason I'm out here talking to you is no one else is doing anything," she deadpanned, going on to poke fun at herself and her husband.

Earlier in her dressing room, just before she was to go on stage, June ("That's what I like to be called"), draped in one of her beautiful, floor-length shawls (she collects them and also makes them), reflected on her celebrated way of making people laugh and feel at home.

"I guess I'm the world's greatest buffer," she offered. "You know, my mother (the late Maybelle Carter) had a lot to do with that. She would always tell me and my sisters, Anita and Helen, 'Be yourself, always sing like yourself, even if it's bad.' I was always the one who told the jokes."

Reminded that there are no bad singers in either the Cash or Carter families, June replied, "My sisters sing perfect pitch, so when I fall into the cracks, nobody notices." She admits, however, that Mother Maybelle would have.

On the special, Johnny and June, along with the guest stars, give tribute in song to the late Mother Maybelle Carter, Aunt Sara Carter and Uncle A.P. Carter, three of the original members of the famous "First Family of Country Music."

Hugh Hefner is in very distinguished company — 1978 Playmate of the Year Debra Jo Fondren (l) and 25th Anniversary Playmate Candy Loving (r) as he prepares for the "Playboy's 25th Anniversary Celebration," Monday, May 7 (10-11 p.m.) on ABC.

The English pronounce his name DU-vall, and the producer of "Ike" says he was able to recruit major English actors for minor roles in the film because "They wanted to work with Robert Duvall. He's a very big star over here."

Duvall heads a stellar cast, including Paul Gleason, J.D. Cannon, Laurence Luckinbill and Darren McGavin in the drama that concludes Sunday, May 6 (9 to 11 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

Duvall's background would seem to suit him for this role as America's greatest military hero of the 20th century: "My father was a military man; he went into Annapolis when he was 16 years old, right off the farm in northern Virginia. After I was born, we moved around from coast to coast. He was mainly, I think, in the North African invasion with a squadron of destroyers during the war."

Given that heritage, with his father a career officer, it would not be illogical to assume that the young Duvall grew up surrounded by military lore, and probably had to fight to overcome family objections to his choice of acting rather than Annapolis. Not illogical, but not true, either. I was never in the Navy, no. I went into the Army at the end of the Korean War, but my folks never wanted me to go into the military. They sent me to prep school instead of Annapolis, and they encouraged me — kind of pushed me, really — to go into acting. They were the ones who brought it up first, because they used to see me do skits and stuff when I was a kid, always singing songs and entertaining. Besides, I was doing lousy in school."

He didn't do so "lousy" at Principia College in Illinois, where he earned a degree in drama before going on to the Neighborhood Playhouse to study under Sanford Meisner for two years, working odd jobs to support himself.

The odd jobs didn't last long. Within a few years, he had been seen in more than 60 productions on and off Broadway.

Robert Duvall stars as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in "Ike," ABC's six-hour drama about the wartime experiences of America's legendary hero, which concludes Sunday, May 6 (9-11 p.m.).

'Double Life'

Linda Gray, who stars as Sue Ellen Ewing in "Dallas," has been added to the cast of "The Double Life of Jenny Logan," a television movie currently in production for broadcast on CBS-TV. She joins previously announced Lindsay Wagner, Marc Singer and Alan Feinstein.

Also filling out the cast of the feature, adapted from David Williams' novel, "Second Sight," are Constance McCashin, Henry Wilcoxon, Irene Tedrow, Joan Darling, Allen Williams, Pat Corley and Gloria Stuart.

Miss Gray portrays a woman hopelessly in love with her late sister's widower, in the romantic fantasy.

"Double Life" is being filmed entirely on location in Camarillo, Fillmore and Piru, Calif., and at the Fox Ranch.

'Rollercoaster' Airs

George Segal as Inspector Harry Calder aims "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," May 7 to capture an amusement park saboteur in "Rollercoaster," the thriller slated to air on (8-10:30 p.m.).

George Segal, Richard Widmark and Timothy Bottoms star in "Rollercoaster," a suspense drama about a manhunt for a wily extortionist who preys on the owners of vulnerable amusement park. The action thriller, which also stars Henry Fonda and Susan Strasberg, will be collocated on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 7 (8 to 10:30 p.m.).

Bottoms portrays a mysterious but brilliant young man who covertly plants a small explosive device on a rollercoaster at a crowded amusement park, causing a serious accident.

Harry Calder (Segal), a standards and safety inspector who recently checked the ride, is dispatched by his boss (Fonda) to conduct an investigation. Calder initially feels the mishap was an accident — a view shared by the police lieutenant (Harry Guardino) assigned to the case.

Calder reads about a mysterious fire at a Pittsburgh amusement park and, suspecting a connection, attempts to gather further information via a phone call to the manager of the park. But he is unsuccessful.

Soon after, he learns that the managers of both parks where the accidents occurred have gone to the same hotel in Chicago. When he goes there, he discovers the giant corporations owning parks are under threat of extortion for one-million dollars. Faced with the possibility of more tragedies at their parks, the owners agree to Calder's suggestion and call in Federal authorities.

When FBI agent Hoyt (Widmark) arrives to meet the owners, he dismisses Calder, thanking him for his help. Nevertheless, the unsuspecting Calder soon finds himself in the midst of a suspenseful cat-and-mouse game with one-million dollars and hundreds of innocent lives at stake.

Few suspense dramas are as engrossing as "Rollercoaster," and it moves at breakneck speed in a style reminiscent of Hitchcock's "North by Northwest."

Sequences were filmed at three world-famous amusement parks — including Magic Mountain in Valencia (near Los Angeles) which boasts the world's largest steel coaster, "The Revolution." It was used in the climactic confrontation between Segal and Bottoms.

A festive picnic turns into a terrifying nightmare when a party of friends is trapped inside a disabled sightseeing tram left dangling high above a treacherous mountain gorge, in "Hanging By A Thread." The gripping four-hour drama will be telecast in two parts — "The Big Event," Tuesday, May 8, and "NBC Novels for Television," Wednesday, May 9 (9 to 11 p.m. both nights).

Patty Duke Astin, Joyce Bulifant, Bert Convy, Sam Groom, Donna Mills and Cameron Mitchell head the cast of the Irwin Allen production that was filmed almost entirely in the Mt. San Jacinto sky train gondola outside of Palm Springs, Calif.

Part I — The annual, fun-filled gathering of the Uptown Club turns into a harrowing physical and emotional ordeal for a seemingly close-knit group of friends when lightning strikes the cable-assisted tram carrying them to a mountain-top picnic. Stranded in the gondola 7,500 feet above the ground, past jealousies, simmering conflicts, and forgotten secrets erupt when the partygoers are forced to deal with the ever-increasing possibility of death.

Flashbacks reveal the tangled backgrounds of the passengers and the emotional forces that shaped their lives as they desperately wait for the help promised to be on the way.

But more trouble ensues when a flash-fire breaks out, seriously burning one of the group; then the cable supporting the tram snaps — leaving the tram literally hanging by one frayed wire.

Part II — As rescuing the burn

DISASTER VICTIMS — Paul Craig (Sam Groom) and his wife, Ellen (Donna Mills), are among those trapped on a disabled tram car in "Hanging By a Thread," a miniseries to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Tuesday, May 8 and on "NBC Novels For Television," Wednesday, May 9 (9-11 p.m.).

victim of the flash-fire becomes the number-one priority, complications continue to unfold. Gusting mountain winds make it a near-impossible for a helicopter rescue attempt, and safety engineers fear the frayed wire, already weakened beyond the danger point, may not hold together long enough for the winds to die down so an air-rescue attempt can be carried out.

Danger also lurks down below the passengers, unbeknownst to his wife, son and friends, is a "protected" government witness being stalked by underworld assassins alerted by news broadcasts of his whereabouts.

The trapped party of friends is forced to try a desperate gamble that more than likely will end in tragic failure.

Life In Hollywood

"Hollywood," says youthful Jameson Parker, "is a place where you play a passionate lover, and the minute the scene is finished, you get deep into a discussion of real estate." Passion and real estate were all part of the Hollywood experience for Parker, who worked on the West Coast for the first time in "Anatomy of a Seduction," a romantic drama in which he, Susan Flannery and Rita Moreno star. It will be broadcast Tuesday, May 8 (9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Parker went from regular roles on two daytime dramas, "One Life to Live" and "Somerset," both taped in New York, to the recent TV movie, "Women at West Point." Then came his first starring role in "Anatomy," and he says about Hollywood, "That's when I found out about the land of make-believe."

In the film, he plays a college student who has a passionate love affair with his mother's best friend.

'Love Affair' Is A Better Term

"It's about mutual gratitude, but that doesn't sound exciting, does it? So we call it a love affair," says blonde, beautiful and exciting Susan Flannery.

She's talking about the new television feature, "Anatomy of a Seduction," in which she stars with Jameson Parker and Rita Moreno, airing on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," May 8 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Flannery plays a divorced woman, a successful architect who arranges a summer job in her office for the college student son (Parker) of her best friend (Moreno). The two, thrown together by their work and mutual interests, have a passionate love affair. Says Flannery:

"The script has my character's ex-husband (played by Ed Nelson) react the way most people would when they hear of a relationship with the woman as the older partner. He says, 'It's unusual, it's unconventional, it's embarrassing.'"

"The older man looking for younger girls is one side of the coin, and that seems to be more acceptable in our culture than the older woman in love with a younger man."

Where does gratitude come in?

"It starts as the foundation of the relationship. We have two people somewhat alienated from the life they're leading. She's tired of going out with men her own age who are too busy proving something to themselves to care for her feelings. The young man likes her self-assurance and the fact that he can talk to her about himself and find a sympathetic, uncritical audience."

"He likes her for what she is inside — bright, warm and appealing. We all need ego builders, and in this situation, they're grateful for appreciation of their own merits where age doesn't matter."

Of course, there's conflict. In this case, it comes from his mother, who reacts with rage and jealousy when she learns what's happening, and from the woman's teenage son, who is understandably confused by his mother's relationship.

Flannery resembles her character, Maggie, in that she is very forthright and believes in directly addressing a problem. As Maggie doesn't flinch from the inevitable pain and problems of her relationship, Flannery, as an actress, would not accept the lukewarm roles that were coming her way.

Cast As A Sexpot

Julie Newmar, who plays a former Las Vegas showgirl in the TV movie "Terraces," admits that she may be a bit typecast.

"I think I've played more showgirls — and hookers — than anybody else in the business," reported the statuesque (5-foot, 11-inch) beauty.

"This part is strictly an ex-showgirl with a heart of gold, platinum and diamonds," she continued, referring to her role in "Terraces," to be rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, May 8 (12:30 a.m.).

"She's the perfect neighbor, the kind of person who would bring you a big bowl of soup if you were sick."

Julie, who played a showgirl in the first film she ever made, comes by her showgirl status quite naturally. Her mother was with the Ziegfeld Follies, and Julie simply followed in her graceful, long-legged footsteps.

"But I think hookers are much more interesting to play. When you take the time to think about it, as an actress playing a hooker must do, you can develop a great deal of sympathy for that type of girl. Since I've played hookers a number of times, I've developed a tenderness toward them, an understanding that I didn't have before."

She remembers one "hooker" role in particular when she came out of the dressing room painted up and moving in seven directions at once inside a tight blue dress.

Jameson Parker stars as a 20-year-old college student who has a passionate romance with an older woman, played by Susan Flannery, in "Anatomy of a Seduction," to be presented on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," May 8 (9-11 p.m.).

It was ten years ago this year that television viewers said farewell to "The Wild Wild West" after a highly successful four-year run.

Now, on May 9 (8 p.m., CBS-TV), Robert Conrad, as James West, and Ross Martin, as Artemus Gordon, are reunited in a two-hour movie appropriately called "The Wild Wild West Revisited."

Of course, as the personable Martin explains, "It's really never left the air because it's been one of the most successful syndicated re-run shows in TV history."

That is due, in part, to the fact that mixed with the adventure of the old west there is what Martin admits is "out and out satire."

He adds, "West and Artie are pulled out of retirement ten years later, and predictably, they're both ten years slower. There is a scene where Bob hits somebody and I say, 'Are you sick?' He says, 'No, why?' I say, 'Well, that guy you hit didn't travel more than ten feet. I can see that your skills have dwindled in all this time, so I'm taking over your training. Two weeks from now you'll either be in shape, or dead.'"

"Of course, all I do is drink or read while he's running behind the train and I yell at him, 'Save your breath, the last five miles are uphill!'"

Still West and Gordon do have an objective, Michelito Loveless Jr., portrayed by Paul Williams.

"He's the son of our former arch-enemy and is even more ruthless because he's captured the heads of state and cloned his own copies in his quest to rule the world," Ross says amusedly.

He adds, "We don't take ourselves seriously, not for one second, just as we never did in the series. And what makes that so delicious is the added fact that ten years have passed and not only are we older, but we're not familiar with the advances made in espionage so we have to improvise a lot."

"Of course, we're pursuing this mad-man who has an atomic bomb, on top of everything else. In the series I always created some kind of counter-measure just at the last minute, but of course, there is no counter-measure for the A-bomb. So, we have to compromise around that, and we're almost inept in our effort."

Ross Martin and Robert Conrad (top, l & r), who played Artemus Gordon and James West, the intrepid secret service agents, in the series "The Wild Wild West" (bottom), are reunited in "The Wild Wild West Revisited," a special movie presentation Wednesday, May 9 (8-10 p.m.) on CBS.

McMahon Workoholic

on a fast pace since I was 10 years old — and the more things I have to do, the better. Call me a 'workoholic,' that's a good way to describe me."

McMahon, Johnny Carson's sidekick on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," since Carson took over as host almost 17 years ago, is the host of NBC-TV's new mystery-game show "Whodunnit?" seen Thursdays (8 to 8:30 p.m.).

"I think a completely busy schedule makes a person more efficient," Ed continued. "There's a saying that if you want a good job done, give it to a busy man. I function better when I'm busiest."

A typical McMahon day could run something like this:

9:30 a.m. Tape a series of TV commercials for a New Mexico bank.

1-2 p.m. NBC-TV Studios to tape Alpo commercials.

2:30 p.m. Rehearse a sketch with Carson, for 'Tonight Show.'

5:15 p.m. 'Tonight Show' warm-up.

5:30-7 p.m. 'Tonight Show' taping.

7:30 p.m. Dress rehearsal for "Whodunnit?"

9 p.m. "Whodunnit?" taping.

10 p.m. Charity work or dinner.

"There are other projects which sometimes are added to my agenda," says Ed. "I might do Budweiser Beer radio commercials, or some kind of promotion work for such companies as Hollywood Bread, almost two dozen banks or saving and loans, Mannington Mills or Citizen Watch. I've also added Mel Simon and Associates who develop shopping centers.

"As a kid I began to sell Saturday Evening Posts when I was 10. I found out you are rewarded for enterprise. I shined shoes, I bought the Bayonne Times newspapers for one cent and sold them for two cents. The more I worked, the better I felt.

"Oh yes, I'm in the process of building a house in Beverly Hills and I try to spend at least an hour

So, if at times you see Ed on television, hear him on radio, see him at a personal appearance, there really aren't three of him — just one very busy "workoholic!"

HOLLYWOOD — KATE JACKSON's departure from "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" was perhaps one of the biggest favors she could have done for the series, what with the search for a replacement taking on all the facets of a theatrical production. Speculation has been running rampant, and it will probably come to an end only when it's most advantageous in renewing viewer interest.

There's been a printed report that KRISTY McNICHOLS wants out of "FAMILY", and while she's yet to confirm the story, one thing does seem a certainty about the show — it won't be left in its new Friday night timeslot. Its ratings there are more than poor.

Despite troubles with the lack of production funds, 20th Century-Fox will still offer for syndication, "PEYTON PLACE '79," later this year. It'll air on most stations after primetime.

Scuttlebutt has it that CBS has submitted a bid of $5 million for rights to a one-night showing of the movie, "OH, GOD," starring JOHN DENVER and GEORGE BURNS.

"THE WALTONS" may be back for still another season, with or without MICHAEL LEARNED, but it'll be a costly endeavor since RALPH WAITE has now been guaranteed more than $2 million as well as the assurance of four TV movies in as many years.

JOHNNY CARSON's announcement that he definitely plans to leave "THE TONIGHT SHOW," maybe as soon as September, was not only expected, but will very likely bring an end to the long-running late-night talk show. There are those at NBC who confide that interest in the show has dwindled immensely by the web itself, not to speak of sponsors.

If the prolonged and highly publicized LEE MARVIN court case sets a precedence, imagine how many a father feels in learning that JAMES STACY, despite his disability, has won custody of his 10-year-old daughter, HEATHER, from former wife KIM DARBY!

Twice on recent occasions, ROBIN WILLIAMS has again appeared at a public social gathering without his wife, VALERIE.

PATTI WEAVER, who plays Trish Clayton on NBC's daytime drama, "DAYS OF OUR LIVES," is devoting all her spare time on her nightclub act which she'll showcase during the month of June in Australia.

It's said that Alan Alda is keeping a lot of notes in preparation for a book on his experience on "M*A*S*H" when that series comes to an end, which could be after the upcoming season.

Russian Art Featured

Natalie Wood and Peter Ustinov recently visited one of the world's great museums — The Hermitage, in Leningrad, Russia — to film a 90-minute special which will be presented on NBC-TV during the 1979-80 season.

Wood and Ustinov, both lovers of art and both with a Russian heritage, explored the history of The Hermitage from the days of Peter the Great and Catherine II to the present. They also visited the Winter Palace, stormed by the Soviets in 1917, and filmed a behind-the-scenes look at the work needed to maintain the grandeur and artistic excellence of The Hermitage.

On view will be paintings by Da Vinci, Raphael, Tintoretto, Van Dyke, Rembrandt, Picasso, Matisse, El Greco, Cezanne, Gauguin, Monet, Van Gogh, Renoir and other giants of art. There is a segment devoted to the "leather man," thought to have been born about 500 BC, whose remains are preserved, and another on some of the silver and gold artifacts in the Treasury Room. During the section devoted to the Winter Palace, there will be glimpses of Eisenstein's historic film which re-created the storming of the edifice in the Bolshevik revolution. There will also be references to the cruel 880-day siege of Leningrad by the Nazis during World War II.

Wood, an enthusiastic art lover, possesses paintings by Courbet, Dali, Matisse and Giacometti plus a collection of more than 500 pieces of pre-Columbian sculpture.

Ustinov collects rare prints and original drawings by Daumier, Tiepolo, Forain, Toulouse Lautrec, Gys and many of the French modern painters.

Commenting about the special, NBC-TV's William F. Storke said: "This is the first United States network prime-time special totally devoted to The Hermitage. It will take viewers to rooms that were former residences of Russian royalty for a look at priceless paintings and artifacts dating to ancient Greece and Rome."

Michele Will Tell

Q: People tell me that Jackie Gleason died a few years ago. Did he? J. COOK, MT. AIRY, N.C.

A: Gleason is very much alive but definitely not the man he used to be. Gone are the all-night parties, the women, the drinking, the nightclubs. The turnabout came three years ago with his marriage to Marilyn Taylor Horwitch — June Taylor's sister. These days he cooks for his wife, goes over the homework of his stepson and rarely drinks anything stronger than milk. Gleason pans TV's "bureaucracy" and thinks all the sit-coms now airing are the same. He says he only watches sports programs.

Q: Has Sada Thompson ever played on any other show than "Family"? Is she married? N. BARTON, COWPENS, S.C.

A: Despite all the awards and acclaim for her work in the theatre over the past 30 years, Sada is the first to admit that she has received the most recognition as Kate Lawrence on "Family." During her distinguished career, she has collected most of the major awards the theatre can bestow. Her other television credits include "Sandburg's Lincoln" (she portrays Mary Todd Lincoln), "The Entertainer" and "Our Town." Sada has been happily married for 28 years and has one daughter, Liza, a costume designer in Hollywood.

Q: What was "Mission: Impossible" about, and how long did it run? L. DUNKLEY, FORT BRAGG, N.C.

A: The adventure series centered around the cases of the I.M.F. (Impossible Missions Force), a top secret U.S. government organization that handled dangerous and highly sensitive international assignments. The segments depicted the step-by-step planning and final execution of highly tense and complicated missions. It ran from 1966 through '73 and is still in syndication.

Q: Please give me the address of Tom Snyder of the "Tomorrow" show. L. COLLINS, FLORENCE, S.C.

A: Send your letter to NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10020. Snyder is returning to New York after two years in Los Angeles. In June — in addition to his "Tomorrow" duties — he will be the anchorman of a weekly prime-time magazine program and will also host three celebrity-interview specials for the network.

Q: Has the "Osmond Family Hour" been cancelled? E. PREDDY, HENDERSON, N.C.

Looks Back On 14 Years

Dean Martin was viewing clips that would be seen on NBC-TV's "The Best of Dean," Friday, May 11 (9 to 11 p.m.), from his variety shows going back to 1965 when they began.

"It's two hours packed full of memories," he said as sketches and production numbers flashed in front of him. "One of the things the viewers always liked, and wrote to us about, was the spontaneity of our shows."

"Well, for the most part, it was that. I didn't rehearse. I rehearsed the songs, that's all. I'd come in and watch the run-through with people like our producer-director Greg Garrison or Lee Hale, walking through my part. Then when the audience came in, I'd do it and since it was 'new' to me, it came out that way to audiences."

"Sometimes we got going so well, we would tape two or three shows on a weekend. That way we finished our season early and I could make films or play night clubs."

In the beginning of Dean's tapings, he used to rehearse at his home but after a while, Garrison decided Dean would work better with less rehearsal time. "But he was always prompt," said Garrison. "We'd say to be there at noon and he was there. In all these years, Dean never refused to do what was asked of him, or rejected what he felt was good material for him. His timing and understanding of comedy made everything work."

Producer Lee Hale adds: "All the years Dean spent in clubs, making the most of ad-lib situations, it all helped Dean when he needed bits and pieces to fall back on. His showmanship was, and is, superb!"

"We had some of the greatest performers on the show," Dean added. "Orson Welles brought us a touch of class. Our routines with Jack Benny, Bob Newhart, Rickles or Jimmy Stewart, were just great. Jimmy even came to the rehearsals early so he could watch how we put on a show."

"We had a lot of people who believed in what we were doing, and did their first-variety show with us, like Elke Sommer, David Jansen and Peter Falk."

"This show brings back a lot of memories that I'll treasure for a long, long time. I guess with all the singing and dancing, the beautiful girls, it probably looked like it was all one big party. Well, it was... it was one hell of a party!"

His Second Film

Ricky Schroder, the 9-year-old lad who made his film debut in MGM's remake of "The Champ," is now filming his second feature film, Disney's "The Last Flight of Noah's Ark."

It is reported that Ricky's salary is 10 times the sum he received for "Champ."

A Problem Puppy Finds A Friend

The puppy who wanted a boy has to prove that puppies — like people — are not all the same when his new young owner is adopted by parents who don't like dogs in "The Puppy's Great Adventure," an animated romp on "ABC Weekend Special," Saturday, May 12 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

The puppy now has a boy — an orphan named Tommy — and a name of his own — Petey — but he also has a new problem: Tommy's new parents leave Petey behind at the orphanage. The puppy is determined to overcome their prejudice by proving that he is an individual, so he hops a freight train in pursuit of his boy.

The search for acceptance isn't easy. In his effort to be reunited with his boy, Petey is suspected of trying to steal a diamond from Tommy's father, locked up in a closet by the real diamond thieves and set adrift to hand glide on a leaky kite. Fortunately, Petey has his faith in himself — and the friendship of a young lady puppy called Dolly — to see him through.

Soccer Is Easy And Popular

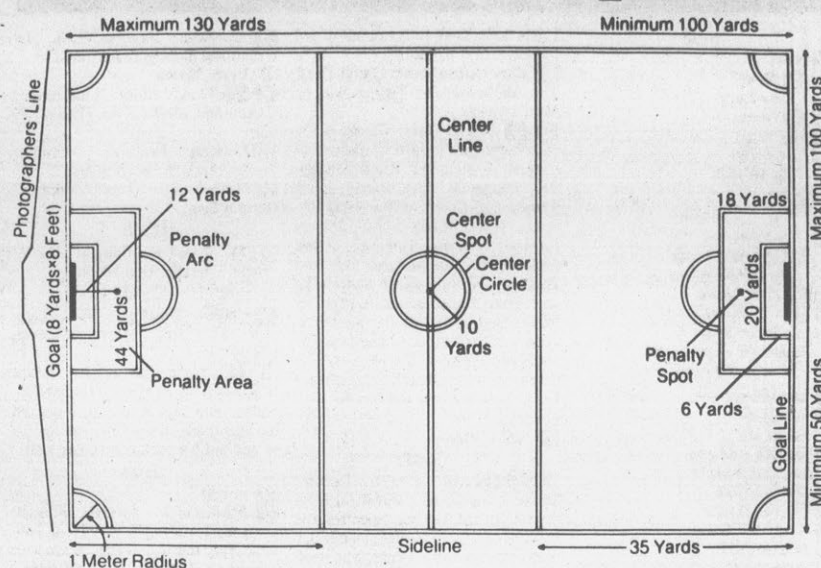

Soccer is not only the world's most popular sport, it's also one of the world's most simple sports to understand: two teams, eleven men each, maneuvering a ball using their feet, heads, and bodies — but no hands — with the aim being to put the ball into a goal area.

To help you enjoy ABC Sports' coverage of the NASL's season opener, the New York Cosmos vs. the Tampa Bay Rowdies (Saturday, May 12), here is a run-down of the game.

If during play the ball goes over the sideline and was last played by a member of Team A, it is put back into play by a 'throw-in' taken by a member of Team B. Here the hands are used, but the player is standing outside the field of play when he makes the throw.

If the ball goes over the goal line (other than into the goal) and was last played by the attacking team, it is put back into play with a 'goal kick'; the ball is placed within the goal area and kicked upfield by a member of the defending that goal line, it is put into play with a 'corner kick' taken by the attacking team from the corner area.

There are nine major fouls in soccer. Four of them involve use of the hands: the obvious one — handling the ball — plus holding,

SOCCER — the world's most popular sport — is also one of its simplest. ABC Sports' coverage of the North American Soccer League premieres Saturday, May 12 (3-5 p.m.), when pushing or striking an opponent. Two involve use of the body: charging an opponent violently or dangerously, and charging from behind — though one form of body contact, the shoulder charge, is permitted. Three involve use of the feet: tripping, kicking or jumping at an opponent. After any of these fouls the referee will award a 'direct free kick,' to be taken at the point where the foul occurred, against the offending team, whose players must back off at least 10 yards from the ball. The kicker can score a goal directly from such a kick.

If one of the nine major fouls is committed by the defending team in its own penalty area, the attacking team is awarded a 'penalty kick.'

There are a number of minor offenses — e.g. obstructing an opponent, arguing with the referee — which are penalized with an 'indirect free kick' against the offending team. Here, the kicker cannot score a goal direct — he must kick the ball to another player first.

Hopefully, outlining the soccer rules will enable you to watch the game with a full understanding of what is going on.

The Teen Scene

The subject of teen-age alcoholism will come to the TV screen later this year in a movie titled "The Boy Who Drank Too Much," (that's the working title). It's being filmed presently on location in Wisconsin and it stars SCOTT BAIO and LANCE KERWIN.

Fifteen-year-old ROBBIE RIST stars in an ABC Afterschool Special this month called "Seven Wishes of Calvin Brundage," a role portrayed so effectively by Robbie that there's talk of an Emmy nomination for the teen actor. The movie was filmed on location in New York.

Fresh from her appearance with SHAUN CASSIDY in "Like Normal People," LINDA PURL will star in the theatrical film, "The Flame Is Love," and then reports to "HAPPY DAYS" RON HOWARD for the film he'll produce called "Leo & Laurie."

Come July, MANOR BOOKS will release a book written by MARTIN GROVE called "THE NEW HOLLYWOOD TEEN IDOLS."

Singer ROGER VOUDOURIS, who is rapidly becoming a new teen idol, has had to pull out of his tour with THE DOOBIE BROTHERS, at least temporary, due to an inner ear infection. Roger left the tour in the Midwest to return to his Sacramento, Calif., home where he's under the care of a doctor.

JON WALMSLEY, who plays Jason on the long-running series, "THE WALTONS," is not only in negotiations with a record company for his first album, he's also very involved with one very pretty LISA HARRISON, who is a very accomplished actress/singer herself. In fact, they'll very likely be a new vocal duet that will be heard from a lot in the very near future.

Soccer Premieres On Network

Soccer is one of man's oldest sports — although no one is quite sure just how old it is. It probably began in a more primitive form almost 1000 years ago in Great Britain, although there are some who claim a form of the game may have been played in China as long ago as 500 B.C.

Now this old and respected sport comes to television via ABC Sports Saturday, May 12, when the network premieres its coverage of nine North American Soccer League games (3 to 5 p.m.).

Following its first surge of popularity, interest in soccer lapsed for a while — about 400 years — beginning during the 12th century reign of Henry II, when it was banned in England because "futballe," as it was known, interfered with archery practice.

In 1603, James I lifted the ban and people were encouraged to play soccer. From that point there was no stopping the game, and its popularity grew and grew as the ages passed, and as the British Empire expanded so did soccer. It was introduced in India during the British occupation, and caught on because it was an inexpensive sport that many played barefoot. It began in South America in the 19th century, and the Montreal Football Club began playing soccer in Canada in 1866.

In 1869 the game came to the United States, with the early games being played at the Ivy League colleges (where it later evolved into rugby and American-style football).

In 1882, England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales organized and adopted a universal code of rules, and soccer has been basically the same ever since.

It was introduced into the Olympic Games in 1900, and the World Cup competition, held every four years, was organized in 1930. Soccer is without a doubt, the most popular sport throughout the world — except in the United States. But now that's changing. The North American Soccer League, organized eleven years ago, struggled through some hard times, but it's apparent that soccer is coming of age in America.

Over the past few years, there has been a dramatic jump in the number of colleges and high schools playing soccer. The establishment of the professional league completed the familiar pattern of the other American sports: youth program — high school — college — pros.

How Good Is It?

How good is the Reggie candy bar, named after the New York Yankee, Reggie Jackson? "When you unwrap one, it tells you how good it is," quips Reggie's teammate, Catfish Hunter.

As this historical etching and contemporary photo indicate, the game of soccer, really hasn't changed very much during the past century. ABC Sports will premiere its coverage of North American Soccer League games on Saturday, May 12 (3-5 p.m.), with the game between the New York Cosmos and the Tampa Bay Rowdies.

The Dynamite Kid Plays With Pros

The "Dyn-o-mite" Kid, comedian Jimmy ("J.J.") Walker of "Good Times," will have his chance to play with some of pro basketball's greatest performers when CBS Sports presents its version of the old schoolyard game, "Three on Three," Sunday, May 6 (1 to 1:30 p.m.).

This version of the halfcourt game features a current National Basketball Association star, a retired NBA star and a show business celebrity on each team. Joining Walker in the competition will be Randy Smith, the outstanding guard for the San Diego Clippers, and former great, Chet "The Jet" Walker, of the Chicago Bulls and the Philadelphia 76ers.

Those three will have to defeat the team of San Antonio's George Gervin (the NBA's scoring king), former Boston Celtic all-star Bob Cousy, and actor Beau Bridges. The winning squad advances to the semi-finals of the eight-team, single-elimination tournament.

To ensure action, a 15-second shot clock has been installed, with a team losing possession if it fails to shoot within that time frame. Also, the celebrities must handle the ball within a 20-foot shooting area of the basket or the ball goes over to the opposition.

All games are officiated by NBA referees Ed Rush and Darrel Garretson.

In the first two broadcasts of "Three on Three," the teams of Pat Boone, David Thompson and Tom Van Arsdale, and David Steinberg, Paul Westphal and Sam Jones have advanced to the semi-finals.

He's A Different Hare

Rabbits are simply not your classic heroes, and that's a fact, albeit a harsh one.

It's a fact that has bugged Bugs Bunny for about 40 years of super-stardom, up to and including his latest stellar role in "The Bugs Bunny Mother's Day Special," animated adventure to be broadcast Saturday, May 12 (8:30 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Think about it. How many rabbits do you know who have ever had a chance to play the stalwart hero, the damsel-rescuing gallant, the intrepid warrior, the romantic Romeo? Only one, right?

Oh, there have been famous rabbits from time to time: Brer Rabbit in the Uncle Remus stories, the Peter Rabbit in children's tales, Harvey the invisible one, and, of course, the Easter Bunny.

But the only real man of action in the bunch, the sole concocter of crafty conquests, the wisecracking villain with a heart of gold, is Bugs — and he's getting mighty tired of upholding the honor of the hare all by himself.

Even worse than the lack of respect accorded the rabbit genus are the insults that have become a part of our everyday language: "dumb bunny," "timid as a rabbit," "run like a scared rabbit" and similar put-downs. It's enough to make your fur curl.

And scarier yet, it was only by the merest quirk of fate that Bugs himself missed becoming one of those cuddly, pink-eared little "blah bunnies." Bugs was rescued by Mel Blanc, that man of many voices, when he was called upon to create a voice for the then-new Warner Bros. cartoon rabbit.

Blanc eschewed the classic timorous, nose-twitching bunny as too much of a stereotype and, with a blend of accents from the streets of New York's Brooklyn and the Bronx, endowed the character with a brash, bold, cunning, tough-guy identity that has made him Mister Big Bunny in the worlds of motion pictures and television for nearly four decades.

Paul Lynde Goes MA-A-A-D

Paul Lynde celebrates the bad, the mean and the rotten on "Paul Lynde Goes MA-A-A-D," a special airing Saturday, May 12 (8 to 9 p.m.), on ABC-TV. Guests are Charo, Vicki Lawrence and Marie Osmond.

Saying that he's tired of being portrayed as warm and lovable, Paul opens his show by telling how it will be a "tribute to the baddies" and he will portray them all — with much gusto and glee. Highlights include:

Paul as the evil Mu Fanchu who needs a formula for his doomday machine; Vicki as the British scientist who knows the formula; and Charo as her mother whom Mu has kidnapped along with Vicki.

Marie portraying a bride who's late to her own wedding, and who runs into Paul as a supermarket checker, as a garage mechanic who insists she's Ralph Nader in disguise, and as a hair dresser.

Paul has Henry VIII with Marie, Vicki and Charo portraying some of his wives.

Coming: more high-mileage cars.

FOR HENRY FORD II, chairman, Ford Motor Co.

Why have car manufacturers stubbornly refused to make a low-priced, high-mileage car so we could buy American-made instead of foreign-brand cars? —Mary N. Rathbun, Micanopy, Fla.

● I believe that in recent years the U.S. auto industry has responded very well to the preference for high-mileage cars. Last year, sales of these "foreign brands" totaled just under two million. So, about three of five of the more fuel-efficient cars sold in the U.S. were made in this country. The U.S.-made cars, in many instances, have become very good values. Today some makes are priced about $1,000 below comparable imports, and, since 1970, many millions of them have been sold. Rest assured, there will be more high-mileage, good-value cars coming from U.S. manufacturers in the months and years ahead.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Can you come up with a list of unusual jobs once held by movie stars? I know already that Charles Bronson was a coal miner and that Cary Grant walked on stilts. —V.K., Fort Smith, Ark.

● How about Sean Connery polishing coffins, Sterling Hayden being first mate on a steamer, singer Minnie Ripperton being a receptionist in a funeral parlor? Wayne Rogers' stint as a lifeguard was short-lived; he quit when he failed to save a drowning man. Brenda Vaccaro, who had a weight problem as a youngster, realized she had no future as a candy packer because she packed as much in her mouth as she did in boxes. What we think is the funniest job of all was that held by Johnny Johnson (his new film is Trionic Warrior). He inspected igloos at a furniture show in L.A. His job was to keep the air-conditioning under control, so the igloos wouldn't melt during the night.

From coal miner to cowboy

FOR GIL GERARD, star of Buck Rogers in the 25th Century

Which appeals to you more — being a superstar or First Man on Mars? Which would you choose? —C.J., Canton, Ohio

● I'd try to negotiate for both, but I'd settle for the First Man offer. Just think of all the offers I'd get when I got back to Earth. The publicity would be incredible. After all, look what happened to swimmer Mark Spitz — and he didn't even get off this planet.

FOR JEAN STAPLETON, star of All in the Family

How have you managed to stay happily married for so long? —Betty Fuller, Gary, Ind.

● When Bill (William H. Pugh) and I got married on Oct. 26, 1957, neither of us gave up his individuality. Our lives together have been so successful because we're two individuals working and living together under one roof. We try to help the other but not in a way that's meddling. I don't nose into his affairs, and Bill doesn't stick his fingers into what I'm doing. Yet we're a team and always have been.

FOR FRANKCINA GLASS, author of Marvin & Tige

I know your first book was a smash when it was published a year ago. Has your big success changed you in the last 12 months? —T.E., Durham, N.C.

● I'm not so shy. When I first started promoting the book, I was scared out of my wits. I think I've finally crawled out of my shell and have gotten more mature. Other than that, I'm the same. I haven't gone on the expected spending spree (I hate shopping and especially hate buying expensive things). I'm still finicky about what I eat. I go for simple stuff.

FOR JAY SOLOMON, Administrator, General Services Administration

How will the GSA dispose of the several million small cardboard boxes that were intended to hold silver dollars sold at public auction and to carry a message from Richard Nixon? —B.R.S., Beachwood, N.J.

● Of the original 2.9 million coins, approximately 978,000 remain. Each coin is packaged in a box bearing a message from Nixon. GSA hopes to sell the remaining coins in their original boxes in order to save money.

FOR JOHN BRODIE, NBC-TV sports commentator

How do you feel about women covering sports events? —T.M., Winona, Minn.

● It does not matter to me if the announcers are men or women as long as they're good at what they're doing. And I feel the same way about broadcasting. If ladies are authorities on sports, we need them. Women have never objected to men in this area (whether playing or covering), and we certainly owe them the same courtesy. Actually, when it comes to TV reporting, men will get a refreshing viewpoint.

FOR ANNETTE CROSBIE, star of PBS-TV's Edward the King

Was it difficult to turn you into an old Queen Victoria? —Jean Grayson, Westchester, N.Y.

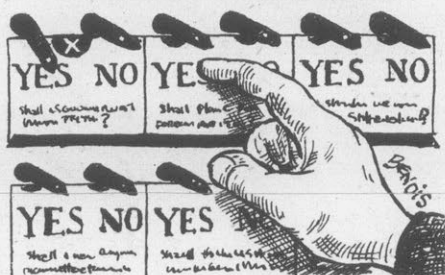

● I'd say so. The makeup artists spent three hours just to apply my plastic double chin. Then, once it was in place, all my eating ceased until filming was over (if I moved my mouth around too much, the chin fell off). Sometimes I went a whole day without solid food. Just so that I didn't pass out from hunger, I "ate" nourishing liquids through a straw.

PRO Roger Teleschow, national director, Initiative America, Washington, D.C.

After 80 years of successful voter initiative at the state level, a national Voter Initiative Amendment is now before Congress. This bill would allow public votes on issues at national elections. The Gallup poll shows Americans more than two-to-one in favor. State experience shows a national voter-initiative process would encourage a more responsive and representative Congress, increase voter interest and turnout in elections, strengthen our system of checks and balances and lead to the discussion and passage of long overdue reforms now blocked by special interests. Citizen-initiated state referendums have passed such reforms as abolition of poll taxes, workmen's compensation and women's suffrage.

PRO AND CON

Should Voters Enact Some Federal Laws Directly?

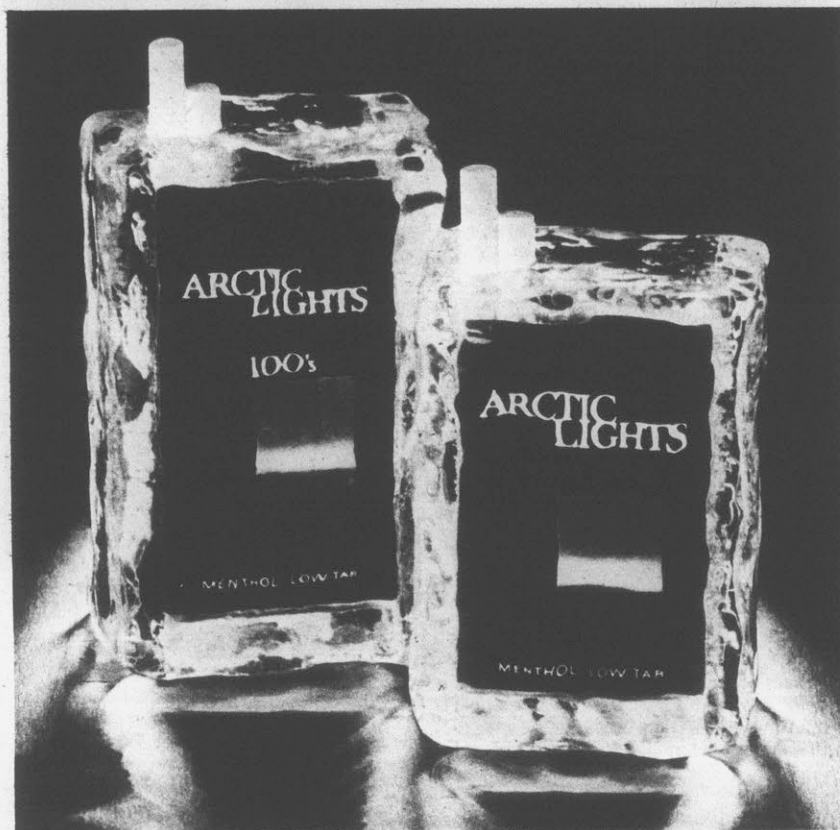

CON Peter G. Fish, associate professor, political science, Duke University

The proposed national legislative initiative is a mischievous and deceptive means of centralizing, polarizing and destabilizing a tested Constitutional order. It would undermine the government of balanced power, reason and broad-based consent, prophetically advanced by our Founding Fathers. The Supreme Court, the states, Congress, political parties and the Presidency would have to take a back seat to well-financed campaigns by passionate single-issue groups for simplistic national solutions to complex problems. Consider the havoc which would be caused by "yes" votes on initiatives repealing civil rights acts, or balancing the Federal budget by percentage reductions in defense appropriations.

PETE ROSE: THE SWEET SMELL OF EXCESS

By Wilfrid Sheed

There is nothing in a fan's contract that says he has to be fair-minded. So I'll allow that a Rose on any other team would smell at least different. If Pete hadn't once gone barreling into our mascot Bud Harrelson of the Mets, well-nigh totalling the little fellow. I might take a kindlier view of his greedy ways today.

As it is, Rose's hustling on the field and off seem to blend into a single act of pointless aggression. Racing from city to city this winter, sliding into tax shelters and beer distributorships as if they were so many pot-bellied catchers, one had to wonder what he hustles for, and whom.

Baseball has always had a soft spot for guys who bustle about knocking people down. So Rose has always been a model of sorts: running out his walks and pop flies and tearing out to his position as if baseball were actually an activity rather than a cud-chewing rumination. Even those of us who prefer the grace of a DiMaggio or Clemente enjoy these baggy pants guys for contrast, like a burlesque team of Smooth & Dirty, Abbot & Costello. After all, we could never be a Clemente, but we could run out our pop flies, and, by George, we probably would.

What was unspoken, perhaps even unthought, was one's gut belief that the superstars probably played for themselves but that the hustlers played for us. So when Reggie Jackson reached for the Rolls-Royces, it hit our mythology just right; it's what we expected of him, and the dude in all of us silently applauded.

But Rose...with his all-American face, born in Cincinnati and owing that city at least as much as Socrates owed Athens; leaving a squad that had shared as rich a life together as an infantry platoon; and leaving it just for money...well, it was a shock to the system.

Our mistake, of course. Rose's prototypes, such as Ty Cobb and Country Slaughter, were very private players, for whom an extra base was always more real than any human flesh in front of it. All the jokes about spiking one's own grandmother were not jokes to Cobb (there were no jokes to Cobb): in fact, this kind of player, often hailed as the very essence of the game, sometimes seems to verge on the psychotic.

Pete Rose is, of course, a far cry from that. He is an affable fellow with a relatively low body count. But he plays with the same narrow monomania as Cobb did, and it shows in his banking habits. Exhibition game, World Series, Reds, Phillies, it's all the same to him: he would do his same spastic number in an empty parking lot. There is no more reason to praise him for hustle than to praise a hyperactive kid for tapping his foot. He can't help it. If one wants to throw in a little psychodrama, it turns out that Rose's father had only one comment after his young son's performances, to wit: "You didn't hustle enough."

Rose's desire for the most money in baseball is an extension of the same single track. Between that and breaking Stan Musial's National League record for hits, there seems no significant difference. You simply fling yourself on your belly and slide for what you're worth. Since the hits and the cash are dimly connected, Rose has actually taken a pinch less money than he might go to a club whose park and line-up should suit his lonely record obsessions to perfection. And he can easily recoup as an Aqua Velva man and whatever he is in Tokyo (yes, he even squeezed in some commercials there). Of course, in none of this is he really unusual, but dreadfully typical. Where you play, what product you hold up, it's all the same, just put the money on the track and he'll follow it anywhere.

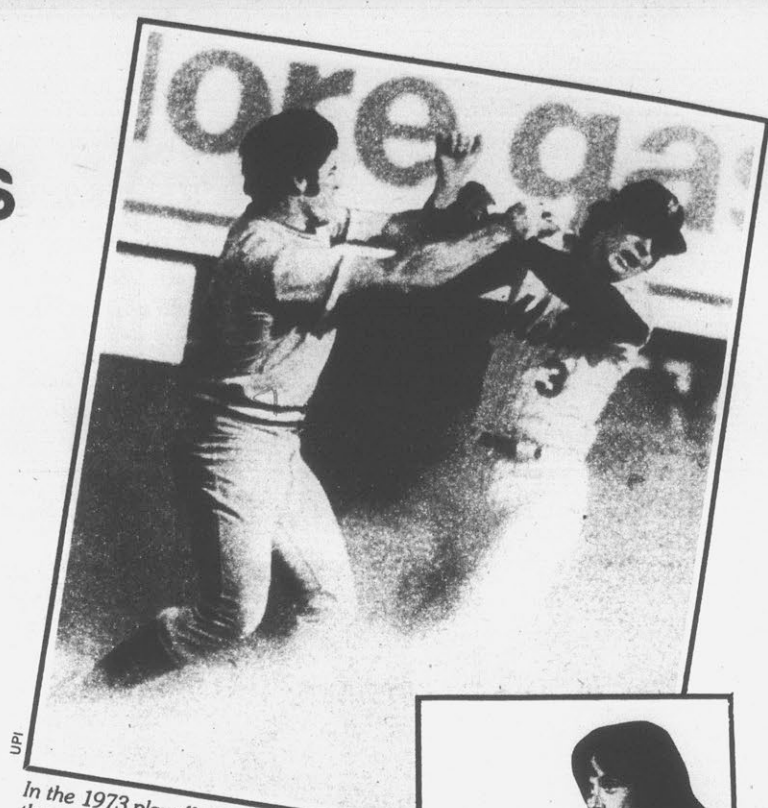

We've obviously come a long way since Babe Ruth was admonished for being a bad example to kids and cried his great eyes out in atonement. Just because Pete Rose plays like something out of the Gay Nineties does not mean he has to have a soul to match. What is interesting is that he either doesn't know or doesn't care how much simple admiration his gold fever is costing him. Fans pinned to the floor by inflation can't see why old Pete can't rub along on, say, $400,000 a year. It's nice that his family is secure, but does it have to be 80 times as secure as everyone else's?

It is true that Rose fills the stadium at any price and earns his pay fairly. By the same token, there must be players who don't bring in a single spectator and who shouldn't be paid at all. This way of grading players by box-office appeal was inevitable the day the agents arrived, and it puts an end to any silly notion that one went to watch a whole team, or even a good game. The feeling of camaraderie engendered in the meat counter, or locker room, as the players stare at each other's price tags may explain why nobody has yet quite succeeded in buying a pennant.

Thus ballplayers join the solitary adventurers who play tennis and golf, and perhaps it suits them in some intrinsic way. At least, there has been no voluble protest from Rose's colleagues about the goofy market they now work in. A ballplayer who didn't dream of making more than Rose would lack the necessary fire, the baseball virility, the edginess that managers like to see. A team that voted to share the wealth evenly, or to plough some of it back into the minor leagues or even into old timers' pensions, would be the laughingstock of baseball.

Such a team would also do wonders for the game, which is beginning to suffer slightly from circulatory problems as the

In the 1973 playoffs, Rose tussled with the much smaller Bud Harrelson.

Pete's two biggest fans are wife Karolyn and son Petey.

Focus On Sports

At 37, Rose still possesses the enthusiasm and physique of a rookie.

The Phillies

supply of good, average players dwindles and the super-stars find themselves with no one to play. I remember taking my father to see Willie Mays for the first time. Willie went hitless in four trips, and not one ball was hit his way. So much for the star system. In no other sport can a great player show so little on a given day.

To lapse grudgingly into fairness: Rose nearly always shows you something. And it is not his fault that the sports section reads during the winter like the Financial Times. Publicity has turned salary negotiation into a sport in its own right, with its own long season, and maybe it's too much to ask a competitive man not to try to win. If one hoped for more from Rose, chalk it up to the 12-year-old in every fan: a kid who has taken some brutal beatings lately and may not recover.

Besides, Rose has gone to a team I like, the Phillies, and that automatically improves his character. It will be instructive to see whether he brings that team to life or whether that team does what it usually does and puts him to sleep for good. If he brings a championship to Philadelphia, I for one will refuse to listen to a single bad word against that finest of men, Pete Rose. The 12-year-old fan in us is not all heart. He likes a winner. He is as American as Pete Rose.

IN HER OWN WRITE, MARILYN SHARP IS A WINNER

By David Grunwald

Marilyn Sharp doesn't remember when she first knew she wanted to become a writer, just that in the back of her mind was this secret desire to someday write a book. "I was always starting books, even as a little girl," she recalls. "I'd sit down and just start writing."

Only she would never finish them.

There was the unfinished novel she started for a writing seminar at De Pauw and the mystery she began when she was an editorial assistant at The New Yorker.

Then one day she read The Day of the Jackal, a best seller about an attempted assassination of Charles de Gaulle. "I thought, Ah ha, the secret of this book is one dramatic idea. That's what I need."

She thought first of an assassination attempt, then about crashing the President's plane, but both had been done. "Finally I thought about kidnapping the President's child. I thought if I had that the story would more or less tell itself. I was right in the first assumption and very wrong in the second."

She soon, at age 29, bit the bullet, quitting her public-relations job to write a novel. "I had saved some money and thought I could support myself for about a year if I was careful."

Seven years, 24 chapters, two rewrites, four moves, three political campaigns, marriage, and a young child later, her first novel, Sunflower (Marek), a fast-moving tale involving the abduction of President Matt Easton's four-year-old daughter by one of the CIA's best operatives on apparent orders from Easton himself, has just been published to critical acclaim. Selected by both the Literary Guild and The Reader's Digest Condensed Book Club, paperback rights have been purchased by Fawcett for a staggering half million dollars.

Not bad for a 37-year-old former high-school gossip and lovelorn columnist whose high-school English teacher back in Muncie, Ind., urged her to try writing "something original."

True, it wasn't exactly easy. All that first year she was stuck at the end of the fifth chapter, the point when operative Richard Owen learns his assignment, "because I didn't know why he was doing it. I didn't know who he was working for. So I kept rewriting the first five chapters."

Then in August 1972, her savings almost gone, she decided to go home to Muncie for a month. She soon was involved in the political campaign of a professor named Philip Sharp who was trying for the second time to unseat the Democratic incumbent of Indiana's 10th Congressional District. She had first met him when they were both students at De Pauw and on her visits home they had dated. A month later they married.

After that, progress came in fits and starts. During the 1974 campaign, in which her husband unseated the incumbent (Sharp has since been reelected twice), she wrote in the car as they were traveling from town to town. Their son Jeremy was born in November 1975. The next summer she completed a rough draft. Then publisher Richard Marek bought the book on the strength of its plot and the quality of these first five chapters. Two rewrites followed before it was ready for publication.

Probably the biggest hurdle was getting the abduction scene right. In the first draft the cards were stacked too much in Owen's favor. Marek told her it must be more difficult and that Owen must be in complete command, not at all relying on luck, in pulling the improbable off.

"I sat down for three hours one morning trying to figure out how Owen was going to kidnap the President's daughter. I finally came up with the idea (it's a dilly! and plausible). Then I started typing and that part of the story just fell into place."

Writing Sunflower, she discovered herself. "I grew up thinking authors were not real. It never occurred to me that I could get a book published."

But now "I think of myself as a writer." While her son is in nursery school or napping, she is writing, busily working on her second novel of international intrigue.

And Marilyn Sharp already has 120 pages completed. FW

Announcing the limited availability of First Day of Issue Specimens

The United States of America New Dollar Coin Honoring Susan B. Anthony

Mint-condition Susan B. Anthony dollar protectively encased and bearing the official mint-mark of the U.S. Mint where it was struck.

Steel-engraved cachet depicting the U.S. Mint where the new dollar was struck.

Shown smaller than actual 6 1/2" x 3 1/2" size.

Official U.S. postmark applied on the exact date the new dollar was first issued—in the city where it was minted.

Personalized with your name and address, if desired.

Reservations are now being accepted for First Day of Issue Specimens of this new dollar coin, sealed in First Day of Issue Commemoratives, to be postmarked at each of the three U.S. Mint cities (Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Denver) which will produce this historic new U.S. dollar.

On July 2, 1979, the United States Treasury Department will release, through the Federal Reserve Banks, a new U.S. dollar coin honoring Susan B. Anthony. While the issuance of any new U.S. coinage or currency is always a notable event, this particular new issue will be of special interest because of two unique aspects:

- The first resizing of the dollar coin since the introduction of the Liberty Head dollar more than a century ago.
- The first time that U.S. coinage has ever carried the portrait of an American woman.

So that families throughout our great nation may obtain a permanent commemoration of this historic event, special arrangements will be made to obtain First Day of Issue specimens of the new dollar, seal them inside special collector's covers, and postmark them on the exact day of first issue to forever certify their first-day status.

Three First Day Specimens

The Susan B. Anthony Dollar will be minted at the Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Denver Mints. Coins from each Mint will carry the appropriate mint-mark (P, S, or D), permitting collector verification.

First-day specimens for each of the three Mints will be available, involving Numismatic Philatelic Covers postmarked on the exact day of issue in each of the Mint cities. These First Day Covers may be reserved individually or in complete sets to include all three Mints.

Reservation Procedure

Reservations may be forwarded now for First Day of Issue specimens. While every effort will be made to meet collector demand, there may be limitations on the number of First Day specimens which can be obtained. Accordingly, all reservations are subject to acceptance, and will be filled on a priority system based on date received.

The processing and fulfillment of these First Day of Issue Commemoratives for the Susan B. Anthony Dollar will be handled by the Postal Commemorative Society, a private agency which is not affiliated with the U.S. Mint or any other government agency. Allow 8 to 10 weeks from issue date for shipment.

HOW MUCH PAIN CAN YOU TAKE?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How much a given pain hurts depends on your self-esteem.
2. Everyone is subject to aches and pains, but you won't feel them nearly as much if you raise your self-esteem and get on better terms with yourself.
3. Many aches and pains will cease if you simply tell them to.
4. The time of day when you're most sensitive to pain depends on whether you're an introvert or an extrovert.
5. Some people make a "career" of pain.

ANSWERS

1. True. In studies conducted by a team of University of Melbourne psychiatrists, subjects from various walks of life were tested on a Self-esteem Scale, "which measures the individual's personal judgment of his worthiness. They were then divided into three groups: those who had a low pain threshold, who were extremely sensitive to various types of aches and pains, with no organic cause; those with chronic organic pain; and a normal control group whose sensitivity to pain was only moderate. Findings: Self-esteem scores of the pain-sensitive group were significantly lower than for the other two groups. It is pointed out that the amount of pain a person feels from any hurt or indisposition depends on his pain threshold, which is directly affected by his mental attitude. And it is suggested that the greater physical pain suffered by the low self-esteem individual may help to restore his feeling of worthiness "by the belief that he would be capable of functioning well in all areas, were it not for the fact that he is physically afflicted. Similarly, such feelings of guilt and responsibility for failure may be considerably lessened."

2. True. The same research showed that the pain-prone persons in the studies showed a significant reduction in their pain sensitivity after psychological counseling, which resulted in a significant improvement in their self-esteem scores.

3. True. Research at Boston College has shown that a great many pains — especially those which are mainly psychological — are quickly relieved if the sufferer shouts, "Stop, relax!" and then imagines the pleasantest scene he can think of, repeating the process whenever the pain may recur. And while this is not always effective, experiments showed it to be highly effective with certain pains with certain people. So if something hurts, it not only won't hurt to give it a try but may stop it. (Of course, persistent pain from an unidentified cause may signal a condition requiring medical treatment and should be diagnosed by a physician.)

4. True. A team of University of Sussex (England) behavioral specialists made a study of the diurnal variation of pain thresholds of a specimen group of men and women ranging in age from 16 to 78 years. Pain sensitivity was checked every two hours from 8 A.M. to 10 P.M. for seven successive days, using a special scale. Subjects were then given standard personality tests. Findings: Introverts evidenced the greatest sensitivity to pain in the morning hours, between 8:00 o'clock and noon. With extroverts, pain sensitivity peaked in the afternoon hours, between 2:00 o'clock and 6:00.

5. True. Dr. J. Blair Pace, associate clinical professor and chairman of Family Medicine at the University of California, sums up his findings in a monograph, Pain: A Personal Experience. He observes that a person may fail in an attempt to succeed and be impressed by the attention and "stroking" it brings from loved ones when some sort of painful illness strikes. "Such a person," he finds, "may then subconsciously learn that the career he is most suited for is a career of pain: A person once launched upon such a 'career' develops skill in manipulating individuals in the family and in the medical profession."

ANNE JACKSON AND ELI WALLACH'S DREAM KITCHEN: A RENOVATION FASHIONED WITH LOVE

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Small kitchens can be dull and uncomfortable — little more than walkways between refrigerator, sink and stove. But they're usually endured.

A notable exception is the newly remodeled kitchen of Eli Wallach and Anne Jackson, the husband-and-wife acting team who recently, with their two daughters, starred in a Broadway stage revival of The Diary of Anne Frank. Combining the best of today's technical marvels with the warmth of country charm, the new kitchen has received bravos from family and friends alike.

Like most people, the Wallachs suffered with their kitchen for some time, making do with the small space, dark walls and poor lighting. But when a friend of theirs, Alvin Colt, showed Eli his newly remodeled kitchen, Wallach decided to investigate further. He contacted Colt's designer, Florence Perchuk, C.K.D. (Certified Kitchen Designer), of SVP Kitchen and Bath Designs, New York City, to talk about the problem. He explained that Anne was away working and that they had recently discussed moving into a more modern home but that with a remodeled kitchen as a lure, perhaps she would stay.

Mrs. Perchuk agreed to give it a try and, as a first step, asked each of them to write down their thoughts about the kitchen. What came out of that were the guidelines that Mrs. Perchuk used for the general ambiance of the finished product. For instance, the Wallachs both wanted easy-maintenance in their kitchen, but plenty of warmth. Therefore, Mrs. Perchuk used Formica on the cabinets and countertops but other materials, such as tile and wood, for the floors and walls. But first came the major problem of working out the space.

The kitchen, as it existed, was small and narrow. But alongside the kitchen were a butler's pantry, a hallway and two small maids' rooms. In total, there were close to 600 square feet to work with. So they ripped out partitions, leaving a maid's room.

Because of an electrical column that had been behind the old kitchen's wall and couldn't be moved without extensive rewiring, the kitchen was divided into two separate spaces. Mrs. Perchuk worked with that of textures to give the room the warmth and country style the Wallachs wanted. She used hickory and oak beams, quality hardwoods, tile counters with wood trim and terra cotta floors to give a country aura. The arrangement of oak shelves over the counter island in the middle of the room and the oak paneling and wainscoting of the walls complete the warm, cozy feeling associated with a farm kitchen. Plants and accessories, such as Eli's clock collection and Anne's ceramics, contribute to the homey ambiance which has been created.

The Wallachs enjoy entertaining, and Mrs. Perchuk says they entertain frequently in their new kitchen. With two daughters and a son, all of whom cook and all of whom spend time at home, the new kitchen gets a great deal of use. In fact, last New Year's Eve, at a party the Wallachs gave for friends, Mrs. Perchuk said she was very proud to see "Streisand, Paul Newman and other-stars all congregating in the kitchen." What better indication of success?

When asked about do-it-yourself remodeling and general kitchen arrangements, Mrs. Perchuk had this to say:

"The most important base is the refrigerator, sink and stove triangle (the total distance between appliances shouldn't exceed 15 to 20 feet), but there are always extenuating circumstances. First of all, think of the shape of the room you have to work with. Then, think of the way you work. Either of these things can change the triangle. I always recommend going to a certified kitchen professional, even if it's only for a consultation. He can give you the guidance and direction you need. But if you won't or can't, be practical. Plan out your space on paper and see how it by creating a gallery-type working space on one side and an informal dining area with a wet bar and counter space on the other, using the column as a natural divider.

All existing equipment in the kitchen was removed, including the lights, floors, cabinets, stove and refrigerator. The only part of the original kitchen now remaining is the location of the back doorway and the window, which was replaced by a less cumbersome one that still lets in the light.

After the basic renovation came the hard part — putting the equipment in to make the kitchen what the Wallachs really wanted: a warm, comfortable place for both family and friends to gather. The Wallachs agreed that Anne would have final say on all choices, and she did, indeed, become involved. Mrs. Perchuk and Anne spent time together picking out materials, tiles, woods, equipment and choosing colors, textures and generally coordinating the total effect.

Mrs. Perchuk used a variety fits and how it seems to you in terms of the way you work in your kitchen. Do you work to the left? Are you right- or left-handed? Do you bump into your refrigerator every time you turn around?"

To make a small kitchen bigger she suggests:

"Try to contain the cabinets. When I get a highly decorative, heavy-looking cabinet, I find it imposes itself in the room. If I find I can flush out the cabinets — do something very, very simple with other details, such as tile, perhaps, on the floor, or with wallpaper, then I find the cabinets begin to blend in, and there's more of a feeling of a uniform room as opposed to something heavy and massive being introduced into the room. That's one approach.

"The other, as far as making a small room large-looking, is the lighting. It should be kept at a maximum, not a minimum. The overhead lighting and under-the-cabinet lighting are very important. The overall feeling of the Wallachs' kitchen before we renovated was its darkness — so many dark shadows. There was only one overhead light. By introducing the fluorescent lighting, we gave a feeling of openness to that area. I find that off-whites and the new almond colors help — any light color will tend to open the room up."

Mrs. Perchuk does not recommend consulting your friendly neighborhood contractor or your kitchen-supply salesman for advice on where to put things, if you're thinking of remodeling your kitchen, unless you're sure he's a good cook! Oddly enough, most kitchens are planned by male architects or builders. When the house is built, many of these kitchens have little or no relationship to the way the woman of the house, most often the cook, likes to work.

Remodeling or renovating your kitchen is not an easy job. The Wallachs' kitchen took six months from start to finish to do, and that was all done by professionals. So if you're doing it yourself and want it done right, consider the time element, too. And Mrs. Perchuk's final word is, whether you do it yourself or not, if you want to change your kitchen: Think, plan and write it down. Whether or not you'll end up with a kitchen you love, like the Wallachs did, is up to you.

And, P.S., they decided to stay!

LEARNING TO LIVE WITH YOUR PAST

By Isobel Silden

To the growing list of know-yourself-better-and-improve-your-life practices, add an intriguing new one: Past Lives Therapy. Psychologist Morris Netherton maintains that we've all passed this way not once, but several times before, and many of the problems we faced in previous lives have been carried over into this one.

The idea isn't new: Zen Buddhists espoused the same thinking 1500 years ago. But Dr. Netherton and his dozen disciples maintain that one does not have to believe in reincarnation for their therapy — which already has its detractors — to work. And they use no extraordinary means — such as hypnosis — to bring patients back to their former lives.

Instead, certain phrases that crop up constantly in a patient's conversation are the simple clues they use to understand a person's past and present life, and then to solve his problems. The thousands of patients Dr. Netherton has helped in the past 10 years have come to him with an assortment of ailments, ranging from ulcers, claustrophobia, alcoholism, epilepsy, unexplained pain and sex problems, as well as general inability to function in today's society.

Says Dr. Netherton in the book he co-authored with Nancy Shiffrin, Past Lives Therapy, "We assume that the events of previous incarnations can have as devastating an effect on a patient's current behavior as anything that has happened to him in this life."

To reveal the influential events in a patient's past — and present — Dr. Netherton first draws him into relaxed, informal conversation. Or as he explains his method: "First we request the data from the unconscious mind. The patient's unconscious mind communicates voluntarily, not by hypnotic inducement."

As the patient freely associates, Dr. Netherton listens for repetitive phrases. A woman patient may frequently comment on how tired she is, for example. Or a male patient may complain repeatedly about the burden of his duties. "I have him repeat the phrase, until he separates himself from the trauma associated with it," Dr. Netherton says. Eventually, out of the repetition, Dr. Netherton believes that a patient's subconscious is jogged and an image forms.

What kind of image? The answer is different for each patient. The woman who always feels tired may see herself as an overworked charwoman in a past life. The man with the weighted-down feeling might get a sudden vision of himself squirming under the weight of a heavy crown — in his former life as a king!

Once the image surfaces, Dr. Netherton reviews different periods in the patient's life for events and phrases that might trigger other revelations, beginning with the prenatal period. "We reach back to the crucial nine months before birth," he says, "and there we find the roots of every patient's behavior. The fetus records all the mother's thoughts, everything said to the mother, by her, and in her presence, as if it applied to him."

A typical example is the alcoholic who frequently said to himself, "I've gotta have a drink or I'm going to die."

After repeating this phrase again and again during therapy, he saw an image of himself wandering in a desert centuries before. Either abandoned or lost, he needed water and kept repeating the same phrase: "I've gotta have a drink or I'm going to die."

With his therapist encouraging and guiding his recollections, the alcoholic also recalled hearing something similar in his present life, even before he was born. His father had been an alcoholic, his mother an abstainer. Her frequent complaint to her husband during her pregnancy had been, "You've got to have that drink, don't you?" And his father had belligerently defended himself by saying, "I'm gonna drink until I die."

Now, in his own life, the alcoholic saw that he'd sought out drink not only to deal with stress but to fulfill his father's prediction. After a week of intensive counseling, he decided he no longer needed a drink, thanks to his new insights.

Another patient, recuperating from a heart attack, still experiences pain. "Her definition of life is 'I have to have pain to know I'm alive.' She heard that from her mother during childbirth, and in one of her past-life experiences, she was brutally murdered," explains the woman's Past Lives therapist.

Outside the circle of Past Lives therapists, however, there is a more guarded view of the ways our prenatal, present and possibly even past lives might reflect each other. Daniel Borenstein, M.D., president of the Southern California Psychiatric Society, warns against taking the images revealed by Past Lives Therapy too literally. When a patient relates the events in his dreams, Dr. Borenstein points out, it is not the dream which is significant. It is the unconscious meaning that only the trained therapist, with knowledge of the patient and his background, is capable of interpreting, and using to aid the patient.

A traditionalist, Dr. Borenstein recognizes the fact that during therapy, patients experience painful memories from all the material revealed during treatment. But he points out that even what is reconstructed from early childhood is not totally accurate or complete. "There is another part of the psyche that observes what is going on, as does the doctor," he notes. "There is rarely a total regression."

There will probably never be universal agreement about the merits of Past Lives Therapy. As even Dr. Netherton concedes, "This is not a miracle cure, nor am I a healer in any sense of the word. The patient," he adds, "is responsible for his own improvement."

QUIPS & QUOTES

TWO LIVES

I lead, it seems, a double life.
So does my ever-faithful wife.
One life is what our friends all see.
The other life is on TV.

We follow what some call a "soap."
And watch, intent, while others cope
With danger, illness and deceit.
Perhaps a mugging on the street.

With actors we identify.
We sometimes laugh, more often cry.
Our love and hate are both intense.
Our feeling mainly is suspense.

Our second life has such great power
I'm glad each day it's just an hour.

—Richard Armour

Here is our favorite sign of the week: NO PARKING BY PERMISSION ONLY.

—Martin Ragaway

At first she loved her waterbed, but now she was getting rid of it. "Why?" I asked. "Oh," she replied wistfully, "my husband and I were drifting apart."

—Thomas LaMance

THINKING THE UNTHINKABLE

My pessimistic next-door neighbor now has a new worry: "I'm concerned about the soundness of Social Security. What if I reach 65 and there isn't enough poverty to go round?"

—Robert Orben

You've got to understand that TV is in its infancy, and that's why you have to get up so often to change it.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

After being reprimanded and told to sit on the couch and behave, my two-year-old daughter kept saying between sobs,
"Poor baby, poor baby."

WHAT ^{IN} THE WORLD

Fire Watch

Fires are one of the leading causes of accidental death in this country, and annually more than 325,000 people are injured in about 4.5 million fires in the home. Most vulnerable to injuries are the very young, the aged and the handicapped, whose lack of mobility hampers their chances of escape. In an effort to alert rescuers to the presence of someone who needs help to escape, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has issued an orange iridescent sticker which can be placed on doors and windows to alert firefighters. The free sticker is available through fire departments or through your nearest Metropolitan office.

Clothes Consciousness

Because there is such a vast array of fabrics on today's market, it is often difficult for buyers to keep straight the instructions on how to care for each. The textile industry in this country manufactures some 25 billion square yards of fabric each year, much of it from man-made fibers. Although manufacturers usually do put care labels on clothes, home sewers are often left in the dark about the kind of care they should be giving their garments. Following are some specifics about the cleaning of a few common man-made fabrics.

Polyester is a strong, wrinkle-resistant fabric that should be machine-washed in warm water, machine-dried and immediately removed from the drier.

Acetate, an elegant, versatile fiber, should be dry-cleaned and pressed with a cool iron on the reverse side.

Acrylic is a warm, wool-like material that should be washed in warm water and dried at a low temperature.

Spandex, an elastic, light-weight fabric often used in bathing suits, may be machine-washed and dried at low

Weight-Watching

With the bathing-suit season fast approaching, many women are thinking about how they're going to look in this year's styles. "Diet" is the first word that springs to mind, and, according to Dr. Barbara Edelstein, author of The Woman Doctor's Diet for Women (Ballantine), this is the best time of year to diet.

"The motivating factor for most women who decide they're going to diet is how they look in clothes," says Dr. Edelstein. "Now is a great time to diet because not only are all the great diet foods like fresh vegetables and fruits available, but exercising becomes much easier and summer clothes are more revealing, motivating most women to lose weight."

According to Dr. Edelstein, "Most men lose weight much more easily than women, and women often feel inferior because they aren't losing as quickly as their husbands or their male doctors expect them to. And yet, a woman's body metabolism changes monthly, affecting the way her body uses calories. Men never have to deal with that change."

Dr. Edelstein suggests that, along with a sensible diet, anyone trying to lose weight should get plenty of exercise, since exercise is a natural appetite suppressant. She feels that social sports like tennis are more enticing than sports like jogging because they don't allow the overweight woman to feel sorry for herself. "Most overweight women don't like to exercise in any way that speeds up their heart rate, and misery loves company." So get out that old tennis racquet or organize a softball team if losing 20 pounds is your goal for this summer.

temperatures. Fragile garments should be hand-laundered.

Rayon, used because it resembles linen, must be dry-cleaned or hand-washed and pressed with a moderate iron on the wrong side while still damp.

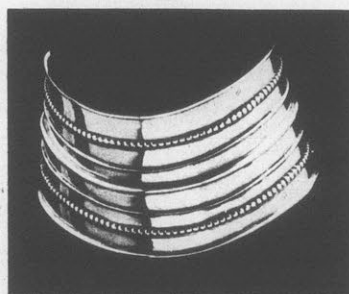

If you are unsure of the kind of care a fabric requires, ask the retailer from whom you are buying it. Most manufacturers send care labels along with their bolts of material.

Functional Jewelry

Jewelry becomes more than just mere baubles when designer Mary Ann Scherr gets her hands on it. Ten years ago Ms. Scherr began creating jewelry that was not only beautiful but that served a medical function as well. Called "body monitoring jewelry," her designs include a sterling silver whiplash collar (pictured above right), a gold and silver heart-pulse-sensor bracelet that contains a sound device that goes off when extreme changes in heartbeat are recorded, and a necklace that is actually a portable EKG. The wearer's heartbeat pattern is revealed on a heat-sensitive screen in multicolors, and little doors cover the functional circuitry contained in the piece.

Ms. Scherr, who shows her work at the Florence Duhl Gallery, 31 West 54th Street, in New York City and teaches at the Parsons School of Design, says she gets mail from people all over the country who want her to design jewelry around a special problem. "The whole idea of body monitoring is catching on. It means that people can have more control over their lives if they're warned about a problem in time to seek medical help. It's a very freeing thing for many people. And I really enjoy designing these pieces."

Lifestyles

Entertainment. Mountains don't pop up with great regularity, but Virginia acquired one this year. The peak, located in an amusement park called Kings Dominion, is made of 3,000 nuts, 2,500 bolts, 3,000 washers, 3,950 nails, 70,000 feet of conduit, 4,070 gallons of paint, 14,000 concrete blocks, 16,000 yards of metal lath, 1,200 pounds of tie wire, 2,350 pounds of welding rod and 30 tons of sand. It covers 90,000 square feet of land, and this man-made construction is the tallest mountain in eastern Virginia.

Books. Every sport has its own vocabulary, and if the language of baseball or table tennis sounds like Greek to you, Sports Lingo by Harvey Frommer (Atheneum) will help you sound like a pro. A dictionary of the language of sports, this book will teach you the lingo for sports ranging from bowling to motorcycling to football. So, if you've been thinking about mastering a sport this summer, you can know what you're talking about before you even begin.

Anniversaries. This week (May 6-12) marks the 65th year that the American Humane Association has sponsored "Be Kind to Animals Week." For more information about this event, contact your local Humane Society.

TIGER

BUD BLAKE

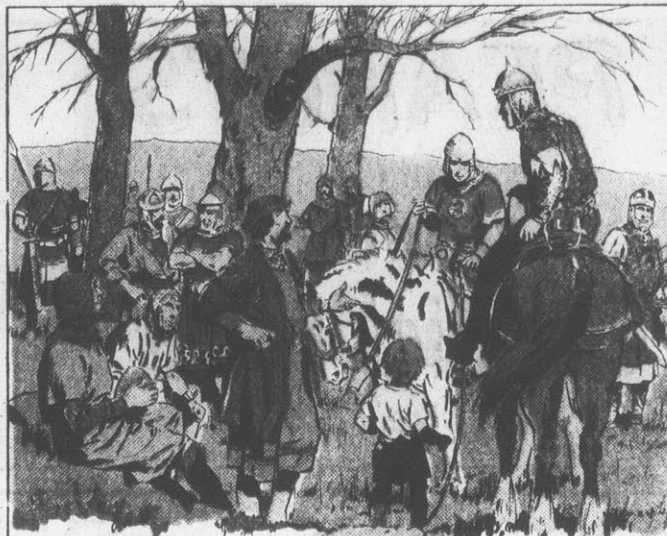

Our Story: SIR GAWAIN AND ARN EXAMINE THEIR PRIZE. NOT THE GIANT HE SEEMED AT FIRST BUT A VERY FRIGHTENED DWARF.

A STONE, HURLED FROM THE GATE TOWER, REMINDS THEM THAT A WAR IS ON AND IT IS TIME TO LEAVE.

GAWAIN PICKS UP THEIR SMALL PRIZE AND THEY GALLOP BEYOND THE RANGE OF A FLIGHT OF ARROWS.

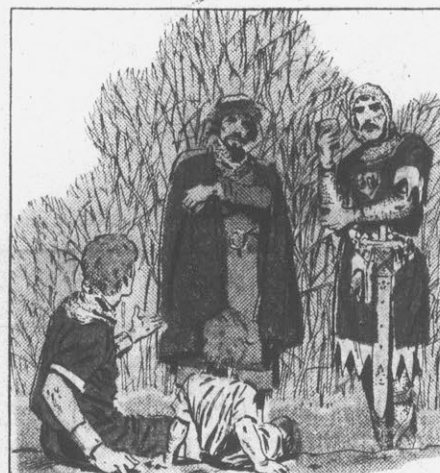

A SHORT DISTANCE AWAY LORD CONDON AWAITS WITH SOME OF HIS NEIGHBORS WHO HAVE GATHERED TO HELP HIM REGAIN HIS CASTLE AND GROUNDS.

IN MEDIAEVAL TIMES THE MISSHAPEN, THE DWARF, THE CRIPPLE WERE CONSIDERED OBJECTS OF FUN, AND ANY TRICKS PLAYED ON THEM, NO MATTER HOW CRUEL, WERE CONSIDERED FUNNY. ARN PITIED HIM AND SEES TO IT THAT HE IS FED.

NOW AN IDEA COMES TO ARN. "WE DREW YOU OUT FROM UNDER THE PORTCULLIS. NOW IF YOU CRAWL BACK TONIGHT, IS IT POSSIBLE FOR YOU TO UNLOCK THE INNER GATE?" "YES, IF THE SENTRIES CAN BE DRAWN AWAY."

A MIXED GROUP MAKE PLANS TO TAKE THE CASTLE, A PRINCE OF THULE, THE LORD OF THE CASTLE, A KNIGHT OF THE ROUND TABLE AND A RAGGED DWARF.
