Showdown Set For Gas Rationing Plan

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's latest proposal to gain standby gasoline rationing authority headed for a showdown vote in the Senate today. Leaders predicted a closely fought battle.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, asked about the rationing plan's chances of approval, told reporters: "We're working on it."

Said Assistant Senate Republican Leader Ted Stevens of Alaska: "It will be very close."

Under Carter's new plan — the second revision made by the White House — gasoline coupons would be distributed to states based on past gasoline usage.

Stevens said he and many GOP members opposed the plan because it sets no standards governing how rationing would be invoked.

Under the measure, such a decision would be left solely to the president's discretion. Energy officials say the plan would not be invoked unless there were at least a 20 percent reduction in current U.S. oil supplies, such as might be caused by another Arab oil embargo.

"It could be triggered by a bureaucratic error, by a misallocation of oil supplies," Stevens said. "And if it ever is imposed, it would be hard for the country to ever get out of it."

Meanwhile, the House Rules Committee met today on procedural matters that would allow a House vote on the rationing proposal — should it pass the Senate — to take place Thursday.

The administration has said it has no plans to impose gasoline rationing in the near future, but wants the authority in the event of a severe oil shortage.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, warned that "the alternative is to tolerate anarchy at the gasoline pump."

Carter ditched two earlier standby rationing proposals and sent Congress an entirely new version Tuesday, one that would distribute rationing coupons based on how much gasoline states generally use.

Those in states where gasoline use per vehicle is high would receive the largest share of the coupons.

Carter's original plan would have allocated the fuel solely on the basis of the number of registered vehicles in a household.

City Thermogram Results Mailed

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission, Tuesday night, received an April Progress report from Energy Conservation Manager Reese Helms concerning the Thermogram Project recently conducted in Greenville.

In the report, Helms announced that the local energy department had received a very good response on that project from participating customers who indicated they considered the thermogram to be beneficial.

Recently, about 298 such thermograms were mailed to local customers who had infrared scans of their homes completed during February. The thermograms pointed out to each customer the possible heat loss areas detected in their homes during the infrared scans.

From those scans, the customers were provided with information they needed to take corrective actions in order to conserve energy.

Also last night, Charles O'H. Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, reported that paving of the new Operation Center's asphalt areas is currently at a standstill.

However, he added that the paving would probably be completed sometime next week. Transfer of Greenville Utilities, operations to the new center has been rescheduled for May 19.

Horne also announced that in compliance with the North Carolina Utilities Commission adjustment which matched VEPCO's retail rates of January 1, 1979, local rates have been adjusted 46 cents per thousand kilowatt hours — about 40 cents per month for average residential customers, effective May 1.

Site preparation and foundatations for a new 115 KV transformer station at the main plant off W. Third Street were completed and the switching towers were installed during April, the commission was told. Construction continues on the site.

In addition, final bids for the Patrick Run Sanitary Sewer Extension were awarded to the Frank Vaughn Construction Co., at $29,777.50 and to T. A. Loving Co., at $143,451.55. Greenville Utilities will share in 50 percent of the cost with the developers paying 50 percent.

Also, the commission last night awarded the following three bids for chemicals to Howerton Gowen Chemicals: $20,800 for 200,000 pounds of liquid chlorine to be used in the water and sewage treatment plants; $16,950 for 250,000 pounds of 50 per cent liquid caustic soda; and $21,852 for 450,000 pounds of aluminum sulfate.

The commission also awarded electric bids to the following companies: $19,770 to Rigby Electric Supply Company for 30-50 KVA

FARMVILLE CONNECTOR ... This Department of Transportation map indicates the proposed corridor in which a connector between the existing US 264 and the US 264 freeway would be located. Possible routes for the roadway presented at a DOT meeting yesterday were located in the eastern half of the shaded area.

Hold Farmville Hearing On Highway Connector

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — The North Carolina Department of Transportation held a public meeting here yesterday on the location of a connector to the East of Farmville to tie the existing US 264 by-pass to the US 264 freeway project to the North of the town.

Ormond Bliss, a DOT project engineer said the session was held to "involve the general public early in the planning process," for the proposed connector, and to "obtain comments, opinions and suggestions, and to identify any areas of special concern."

The connector is scheduled for construction during the first phase of the US 264 freeway project from Wilson to Greenville.

In addition to the eastern connector, phase one of the freeway project includes the acquisition of right-of-way for the entire freeway and construction of the roadway between Wilson and Farmville, a connector to the West of Farmville joining the freeway to the existing five-lane bypass to the south of the town, and completion of the freeway between Farmville and Greenville. The second phase of the project includes completion of the freeway — a bypass of Farmville to the North.

Although the corridor study area ranges up to a mile wide as its widest point, three possible locations for the connector outlined on maps presented at the meeting yesterday were located in the East of the center of the corridor.

All three possible locations originated at the eastern end of the Farmville bypass, in the vicinity of Pitt Spraying Company, and terminated at the intersection of the Stantonsburg Road (SR 1200) and Secondary Road 1221, just North of the proposed freeway.

Bliss noted that an interchange would join the connector, SR 1200 and SR 1221.

The closest of the three possible locations to Farmville was about 1,000 feet East of the Farmville Central High School, and a number of persons attending the session, which lasted from 2 p.m. until 9 o'clock, suggested that the eastern-most of the routes, rather than the one nearest town would be the best location.

Bliss noted that officials are considering construction of a link joining the connector with US 258 to the South of Farmville.

No preliminary estimates of the cost of the project are available, Bliss noted. The project, he said would be between three and 3½ miles long, depending on the location of the roadway within the corridor and whether the US 258 connector is included.

In all, an estimated 60 to 70 persons appeared at yesterday's session.

The "general consensus," according to Bliss, although "not unanimous," was that the eastern-most alignment presented was the most favorable location.

Shooting

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating a shooting Tuesday night at a restaurant near Greenville that resulted in the death of a 63-year-old man.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that John Earl Vanderburg of Rt. 1, Box 54, Greenville, died at 1:05 a.m. today at Pitt Memorial Hospital after he was admitted following a shooting at B's Barbecue Grill on NC 43 north.

Sheriff Tyson, who said that his department received a report on the incident at 11:22 p.m. last night, reported that Vanderburg was shot in the stomach as he stood outside between a barbecue pit and the back of the store.

According to the sheriff, the shot was apparently fired from a vehicle on the highway. He added that the vehicle fled towards Falkland following the incident.

Sheriff Tyson noted that Vanderburg was hit with a bullet from a small caliber weapon.

The restaurant, he said, is located approximately a mile north of Greenville, just beyond the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

Deputies continued their investigation into the shooting this morning, he said.

LOG CABIN INFO?

I have been asking around for information on obtaining kits for building log cabin homes. No one seems to know how to obtain literature on the way they're built or the expense of these homes. D. M.

Sheppard Memorial Library should have a wealth of material to help you. Check back issues of "Tar Heel Magazine," "Mother Earth News," and building and home improvement magazines. A librarian there told us of a couple of articles and there are numerous ads giving the addresses of companies from which you may request information and price lists.

If there are any local representatives of log cabin kit companies, Hotline will be glad to publish the names of these in a future column — only local.

FIRE SCENE ... Damage was light, estimated at $1,200 in a fire in an office of the Martin County Agriculture Extension Office last night. The fire was the fifth in Williamston since

March 16, and assistant fire chief Darrell Taylor says "there's definite evidence of arson" in the Tuesday night blaze. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Suspect Another Blaze In Williamston Was Set

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Fire hit Williamston again in a blaze discovered at 10:23 p.m. Tuesday night in an office of the Martin County Agriculture Extension Building on East Main Street, next door to the Martin County Courthouse.

Assistant Fire Chief Darrell Taylor said "there's definite signs of arson in this fire. We have enough to go on to feel there's no doubt it was started deliberately."

Taylor said "we were fortunate in getting to the scene early as the building has a fire alarm hooked directly to the fire station."

"The material used to start the fire was strictly paper, there was no evidence of fuel or other combustible material at the scene," he added. A rack of paper publications was a blaze when firemen arrived. Taylor said there was evidence that another collection of paper "had been set on fire, but had failed to catch and had burned out."

Estimated damage to the office was placed at $1,200, "very little damage really," Taylor noted, "just smoke and paint damage in the office."

Last night's fire is the third in Williamston within the past week, and the fifth since mid-March. All fires this past week were near the downtown area, while the earlier two were away from downtown.

The first of the fires was on March 16 at the Williamston Packing Company. The second occurred on April 13 at Holiday Inn. Estimated damages have been placed at $200,000 each for these two fires.

Then on May 4, a fire destroyed White's Heating and Sheet Metal Works one block from Main Street, resulting in an estimated loss of $175,000 for the building and contents.

The fourth fire was on May 7 at the Old Health Center Building on Ray Street, a couple of blocks from the downtown area. Damages there were estimated at $75,000.

"We have all men working full time," Taylor commented. "Our 11 day men as well as volunteers are on a ready available basis, with the men taking turns at getting a little rest and sleep."

SBI officials are assigned to an investigation of the series of fires that has plagued the town. "They are investigating all the evidence available," Taylor said.

Open House Today At Stanfields

STOKES — Numerous baskets of various shapes and sizes have been used throughout the home of Carl and Jean Stanfield since the high ceilings and open ledges created many open spaces.

The color schemes and baskets are the two features that make a lasting impression. Bright yellow is the predominant color in the kitchen and utility room. Rust and black are the main colors in the master bedroom, with pink and green in another bedroom and rose in the third. The family room is decorated in green and rust with green, yellow and rust as the living room's colors.

The carpet and wall colors throughout are neutral. Colorful levered blinds are used on the five sliding glass doors on the main level. Track lighting accents areas of interest throughout.

The living room (downstairs) and family room (upstairs) are brought together by an open stairway. The living room has a high pitched ceiling and standing fireplace, whose pipe extends up through the family room.

"The furnishings are contemporary oriental designed. Our decorator integrated some of the furniture previously acquired with new furnishings to carry out the contemporary design," said Mrs. Stanfield.

One of the main points of interest in the house is a large macrame hanging planter.

The interior is "very open and light. The floor space is 1,780, but it feels much more spacious because the design also lends itself to privacy."

The economical construction costs and energy-saving features appealed to Mrs. Stanfield when making her selection in house plans. "I liked the looks of the picture." When we finish landscaping our house will be very similar to the magazine picture," she remarked.

The house exterior is stained fir exterior plywood and it's design is contemporary. The plans were printed in "Family Circle" in 1974.

"After living in Plymouth for 26 years with my husband commuting to Greenville for 11 years, we decided to move nearer Greenville. He now has about a 15-minute drive instead of an hour. We like living in a rural area, where we can have a garden and fruit trees. Our four-acre plot is ideally suited to our needs," she said.

CONTEMPORARY ORIENTAL... designed furnishings decorate the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stanfield.

Open house is being held this afternoon until 4:30 and again this evening from 7:30-9:30 at the Stanfields. The couple lives four miles east of Stokes, between Stokes and Bear Grass.

A Good Friend Spares Pain

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Your best friend is filing for divorce, and she asks you if you knew all along that her husband had a mistress for many years. You know it is true, and everyone else knows it. What do you tell her?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: In the first place, common gossip is not necessarily fact. I would tell my friend that I have no reliable evidence to confirm her suspicions. (True, you haven't.)

A good friend spares unnecessary pain whenever possible. For you to join the others who said, "I knew it all along" would only add to your friend's misery.

DEAR ABBY: My husband went to Japan on business and brought back some Oriental "art" that really has me baffled. It looks like pornography to me, but my husband says it is valuable erotic art—centuries old. (It shows men and women in all sorts of intimate positions. One looks like a bunch of contortionists at an orgy.) I wouldn't think of hanging any of this stuff in our home, and it seems ridiculous to spend money on something you have to hide away in a closet. My husband paid a small fortune for it.

Abby, how do you tell the difference between valuable art and cheap pornography?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Webster defines pornography as "writings, pictures, etc., primarily intended to arouse sexual desires." (This could be good or bad, depending on the circumstances.)

All such art is not cheap, bad or worthless. Some (known as erotic art) is expensive, good and valuable.

Take your husband's collection to a reliable art dealer. For a fee, an expert will appraise it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a great guy. (I'll call him Bill.) We've known each other for 10 years and have gone together for two years.

We are totally happy together. I have joined Bill in his business and we work well together. We have talked about marriage, but Bill says he will not marry me until I submit a list of all the men I've made love with. I'm 35 and have never been married. Bill is 37 and has been divorced twice.

The men I've had affairs with were all decent men and I was never promiscuous.

I do not intend to have any affairs outside my marriage and I haven't looked at another man since I started going with Bill.

I do not feel that my past relationships have anything to do with Bill or our future together. Am I wrong? And what should I do about Bill's demands?

CONNECTICUT

DEAR CONN.: Your past relationships are none of Bill's business. If you must either meet his demands or say goodbye to this "great guy," say goodbye.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ASHAMED IN LAUDERDALE": Don't ever be ashamed to admit you were wrong. It's one way of saying you're smarter today than you were yesterday.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212

The bride is the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Aaron Hines Sr. and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Studie White and the late Mr. James White.

Given in marriage by her brother, Aaron Hines Jr., the bride wore a floor length gown of medium blue polyester knit and a matching lace headpiece. She carried a bouquet of mixed spring flowers surrounded by white and blue satin ribbons.

FARMVILLE — A seven-year-old on a bicycle was hit by a car on Green Pine Road here yesterday about 5 p. m., but was not seriously injured.

Police Chief Ron Cooper said Bryan Scott Tugwell was treated at and released from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he had been taken by the Farmville Rescue Squad.

Huge Burden If We're Alone

The prevailing opinion, since Earth people discovered the nature of the Universe, has been that there almost certainly is some form of intelligent life out there.

This has become more likely as scientists discovered there are billions of stars and an infinitesimal number of planets in the Universe. By numbers alone the probabilities exist of life forming elsewhere.

All that has been the basis of science-fiction from Buck Rogers to Star Wars, from Flash Gordon to Battlestar Galactica.

But, hold on. There is a serious school of scientific thought that believes only the Earth, of all the heavenly bodies, supports an intelligent life form.

Dr. Michael H. Hart, an astronomer interviewed by United Press International holds to this theory. He points out that if the Earth were five percent closer to the sun it would be covered with clouds and have temperatures of 900 degrees...

one percent further away and the Earth would be barren desert.

Either theory about extra-terrestrial life is believable. The odds against life developing as it has on our planet were stupendous, but again there are so many other possibilities for life developing throughout the Universe that those odds could be overcome elsewhere.

At this point all that can be said is that Earth men have found not a trace of intelligent life anywhere else in our solar system, our galaxy or the Universe... and scientifically we cannot accept something until it is proven.

If we Earth creatures are alone... if we are the sole custodians of the vast Universe then the burden upon us to maintain life is awesome. It would be the ultimate tragedy if we were to blow ourselves away, or annihilate our species by destroying our environment.

Ruling Does Not Apply In This State

A Dade County, Fla. judge has ruled against the police radar system of clocking speeding motorists.

The judge allowed motions to suppress radar evidence in cases before him in ruling the radar system unreliable.

But before we in North Carolina start thumbing our noses at police radar, it is well to note that the judge's ruling doesn't apply here. In fact, the Florida judge noted that other judges in Dade County might not follow his lead.

It is still prudent to slow down and smile at the radar units.

THIS AFTERNOON

When Will It Be Enough?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The track record of recent years in school construction money in North Carolina reveals an interesting pattern.

The state, in 1949, issued $25 million for local construction. Four years later, that amount was doubled to $50 million. Ten years later, doubled again to $100 million; then in 1973 tripled to $300 million. The pattern was established.

Now, Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, is calling for a state bond issue of $600 million; double the previous amount in less than six years.

Those figures refer to state dollars. Local citizens have matched each state dollar with three local ones in using the bonds. Thus, the latest suggestion would mean better than $2.4 billion for school construction in coming years.

When does it end? When will the rapidly deteriorating and obsolete buildings be gone, replaced by enough new buildings to make them last awhile? When will the temporary, mobile classrooms fade from the scene? When will barriers to the handicapped by sufficiently gone that further major spending for that purpose will no longer be required?

Keep Up

Phillips can't make a firm commitment on those critical questions which citizens asked to fund the new construction programs will no doubt ask. But he does believe that the time is coming near when North Carolina can "keep up rather than catch up."

Declining school enrollments are expected to level off in the mid-1980s; the public school kindergarten program and the influx of new students are fully in place; the impacts of mainstreaming the handicapped are now well known; and the design innovations of recent years — many of them fated for early obsolescence and the junk heap — have largely been rejected in favor of more traditional building approaches.

"I can't say for certain, but we would think that the investment now of $600 million would move us closer to the point when we would have eliminated the obsolescent and the temporary arrangements," Phillips says.

Most of the money which he is calling for would be for such purposes; not for new school construction to meet growing student populations. Phillips adds. Still, use of the money remains the decision of local school systems which would be granted state bond dollars on the basis of average daily membership in the local schools.

BILL NOBLITT

Those same local school systems — the superintendents and the board members which run them — are the ones which have provided the information on which Phillips bases his call for a new bond issue.

Phillips thinks the estimates are to be trusted despite several instances in which it is known that wishes exceed absolute need; and at least one case in which a local superintendent who says new buildings are needed is being second-guessed by a special study

Timing

Timing — the political mood of the people — is all important to a statewide school bond issue, Phillips concedes. There is no doubt a popular sentiment of citizens to cut governmental spending rather than enlarge it. Both Gov. Jim Hunt and State Treasurer Harlan Boyle, himself a member of the State Board of Education, have expressed skepticism of the chances for passage of a school bond vote.

That same resistance is one of the large reasons a statewide bond issue is currently being suggested.

Raleigh Dingman, chief executive of the statewide association of local school boards, puts it bluntly: "Difficulties in getting the money from local property taxes has certainly encouraged the move to a statewide bond issue." An atmosphere and climate must be created both in the General Assembly which must authorize the election, and among the public, Dingman feels.

In 1977, local citizens passed $24 million and rejected $11.1 million in seven county elections. In 1978 the record was $36.7 million approved and $9.9 million rejected in eight counties. So far this year one issue of $16 million has been approved; and one of $4 million rejected.

THE INSIDE REPORT

As Nixon Sees Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Richard M. Nixon recently had some charitable things to say about Jimmy Carter, telling one visitor that the president is doing much better than the press gives him credit for but badly needs to tighten his control of the federal bureaucracy.

In an expansive mood during ing a long, rambling political chat with a well-known Washington lawyer, Nixon offered his usual list of helpful hints. To start with, he said, Robert Strauss, Carter's inside jack-of-all-trades, should be made director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) — one of the truly powerful jobs in any administration.

Nixon's message: control of the bureaucracy, which Nixon himself never achieved, is eluding Carter. Part of the reason are cabinet members too much out for themselves (Nixon cited Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano) or not "with it" (he cited Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris).

With Strauss running OMB, he said, Carter could use his talents to extend presidential influence to all the departments and tighten up White House control over policy decisions.

Carter also needs a hard-nosed "Kennedy-style" politician to run national politics for him, said the former president. But on the inflation front, which he called Carter's toughest issue, Nixon was not critical of Carter or of his inflation-fighter, Alfred Kahn. Nixon described Carter's deregulation plans as good anti-inflation medicine, but declared himself in the dark as to just how inflation could be brought to heel.

The Glenn Factor

The condition of bad blood that President Carter seems to have encouraged between himself and Ohio's Democratic Sen. John Glenn, a vocal critic of the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II), threatens lethal harm to the president in the Senate treaty debate.

The president has failed to communicate in any way with America's first

The Ladies Who Tell

WASHINGTON — A day doesn't go by without a new book appearing on the market by some lady revealing every love affair she's had since she was 13 years old. The bigger the names in her memoirs, the hotter the property.

My friend Rock, a Hollywood star, says that it's taken all the fun out of seduction.

Rock took a beautiful, young lady out to dinner a few weeks ago, and then she invited him to her apartment.

When they arrived she said, "Pour yourself a drink while I slip into something more comfortable."

She returned in 12 minutes dressed in a black negligee, holding a yellow-lined legal pad and a ball point pen, and set down on the couch.

"You have beautiful eyes," Rock said.

The young lady started writing. "Don't go too fast," she said, "I can't take shorthand."

"I couldn't stop looking at your lips when we were in the restaurant — they were so succulent."

The girl gazed at Rock bewildered, and then said, "How do you spell succulent?"

ART BUCHWALD

Rock spelled it for her and then said, "Do you mind if I turn off the lights?"

"No, but leave one on, otherwise I can't take notes."

"Why do you want to take notes?"

"Because," the girl said, "I want to remember this moment forever."

My friend continued, "I know you're not going to believe this, but I've never felt this way about a woman before. I want to crush you in my arms and feel your body pressed against mine."

"That's very good," the girl said, as she continued writing. "No one has ever said that to me."

"Will you stop taking those damn notes? You're making me nervous."

The girl stopped writing. "You look so hot, why don't you take your shirt off?"

Rock ripped off his shirt and the girl started examining him.

"What are you doing now?"

"I'm looking for scars on your body. It's so much more interesting if you have a scar."

"Oh my darling," Rock said, "do you believe that two people who meet for the first time can look into one another's eyes and know immediately that this is it?"

"Yes, I do. Isn't there a literary term for that?"

"It's called 'kismet.'"

"That's it," the girl said, writing it down. "I saw that once in a movie."

"We're wasting time, my beloved. Let me take you to

Prices Not A Factor

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent
BETHEL, Conn. (AP) — Here in Connecticut, they are known as tag sales, a litter of junk on a lawn surrounded by a parking problem.

In New Jersey, they are called garage sales.

When I lived in Vermont, they were called barn sales. Elsewhere in the land, and in many foreign climes, they are called backyard sales, flea markets, white elephant sales and junk jamborees.

Regardless of their regional designation, these impromptu bazaars enable householders ordinarily unconnected with the world of retail merchandising to become bedouin traders for a day or a weekend and unload the jetsam of their attics and cellars on a trusting public.

The sale is usually connected with spring cleaning, a move to another house or the purchase of a new car that cannot fit into the presently trash-encumbered garage. The idea is not to make a profit, although that is not an unwelcome possibility, but to have the customers haul off the rejected impedimenta of a lifetime.

Surplus books seem to be a popular item at these suburban souks, and a neighbor has hit on an ingenious scheme for upgrading the quality of the rejects from his personal library before putting them on sale.

Again, neither price nor profit enter the picture. All books, regardless of size, age or content, are retailed at 50 cents apiece for hardbacks and a quarter a throw for paperbacks. His concern is that the purchaser of these volumes — probably one of the neighbors — should realize that they played a key role in the intellectual development of the recent owner.

The book should tell the prospective buyer at first glance that he is about to possess the treasured keepsake of a family of scholars.

To create the impression of being on corresponding if not speaking terms with the leading lights of literature, all that

To the editor:

Several energy tax credit bills designed to promote conservation and alternative energy sources have been introduced in the 1979 North Carolina General Assembly. They are now being considered by the Joint Subcommittee on Finance.

Senate Bill 35 provides a 15 percent credit against personal or corporate income tax for the conversion of industrial boilers to wood fuel. This incentive is needed to demonstrate that burning wood is economical outside the wood products industry. Industry has been reluctant to invest in wood-fueled boilers because there is little experience to go on.

Although this bill would cost the State only about $450,000, it would offer the following advantages:

1. It would keep the energy dollar in North Carolina.
2. It would create jobs for construction and logging industries in North Carolina.
3. It would make North Carolina industries less vulnerable to fuel interruptions.
4. It would provide new markets for low-grade timber that is currently unmarketable.
5. It would provide an incentive for land owners to reforest and improve both the quantity and quality of the State's forests.

As a nation and as a State, we need to encourage the development of renewable energy sources. I hope that the General Assembly gives Senate Bill 35 favorable consideration.

To the editor:

I wish to express my strong objection to the new sign at the corner of the 264 Bypass and Charles Street for the following reasons:

1. It is a dangerous traffic hazard at one of the most congested intersections in this part of the state. I would even go so far as to suggest that the University might be liable in case of an accident.
2. I question the appropriateness of private concerns advertising on state property.
3. It is way beneath the dignity of our University and reflects more of a "Coney Island" culture.

1977 Insurance Law Revived

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With none of the controversy that has marked the deliberations of the House Insurance Committee, the Senate insurance panel Tuesday approved a bill that would continue the controversial 1977 insurance law.

The measure now goes before the full Senate.

That law, enacted after a bitter struggle in the 1977 General Assembly, allows insurance companies to file and implement rates on automobile and some forms of casualty insurance without the prior approval of the state insurance commissioner.

But that law self destructs next year, giving the 1979 legislature the task of deciding once again how rates on some forms of mandatory insurance will be set for the next two years.

The proposal approved Tuesday would extend the 1977 law for two more years, meaning that Insurance Commissioner John Ingram would not have the power to block rate hikes on the policies involved.

The bill contains a 6 percent annual maximum on policy increases, as does the 1977 law.

Approval came in the Senate panel with only one member in opposition. Sen. Robert Davis, D-Rowan, tried to amend the bill and stall action on it for a week in an effort to make it more palatable to the Department of Insurance. But his efforts were voted down by the rest of the committee.

While most of the controvery over deciding how insurance rates has been over whether to restore Ingram's prior-approval power, no mention was made of that in the committee meeting Tuesday.

Byron Tatum, director of technical operations for the department, was on hand to speak to an information section of the bill. He avoided any mention of the conflict during the committee meeting.

But he said afterward his silence didn't mean Ingram and the department had given up efforts to get the prior-approval power back.

"We still want the prior-approval system," Tatum said. "We have made our position known." He admitted, however, that approval of the bill by the Senate panel meant chances

TAKING SALVATION

"What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits to me? I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord."

"What Shall I render?"

"What shall I give?" "What shall I pay?" It would seem that we would have to do something to make ourselves worthy of salvation.

But the Bible makes it very plain that nothing we can do in the form of "works" will be good enough to earn salvation. It can come only by faith. We must make our lives ready to receive this gift, however. We of course cannot make our lives perfect, but we can be truly sorry for the sins we have committed. We can also make restitution for any harm we might have done to other people. But of course, even after doing all this we will still be a sinful people.

Nevertheless, it is to people like us that God extends the cup of salvation. His love is so wonderful that we can never fully understand it.

Ambassador Fund Is In Sight Of Goal

More than $2,200 of the $3,000 goal for the Greenville Community Ambassador fund has been raised, according to Dr. Richard Taft, chairman of the committee.

"The response has been wonderful," Dr. Taft commented. "Most contributions have come from civic groups and interested individuals who have supported this project in the past and who are aware of the value of this worthwhile program."

Taft said it is also "the hope of the committee to be able to send two community ambassadors abroad in 1980.

"If contributions continue to be received, it will be possible to have Greenville represented by two of our young people in foreign countries in the following summer," Taft added.

This year's ambassador, Patricia Bath, will be representing Greenville in a home in Switzerland.

Contributions can be sent to: Greenville Community Ambassador Committee, P. O. Box 1187, Greenville, N. C., 27834.

Feigning an author's signature, preferably a dead one, and some appropriate sentiment of regard will let the book's new owner know that the purveyor was not your ordinary neighborhood klutz.

"In gratitude for long nights, tall drinks and a new outlook on the ablative absolute at St. Juan Les Pins," you let the past ad lib on the fly-leaf of Somerset Maugham's "First Person Singular" and sign it off tenderly, "your friend and father confessor, Willie."

Ernest Hemingway was always inscribing books to friends, so why not you? Just the initials "E. H." and a line like "To my old sparring partner" can make a real find out of a dog eared copy of "The Sun Also Rises."

In the interest of verisimilitude, however, it might be wise to avoid tender tributes from Truman Capote, Alexander Solzhenitsyn and Karol Wojtyla. And, remember, James Baldwin is Jim to his pals. Or is it Jamie?

I must look up the book I autographed from him.

"You're toying with my emotions," Rock cried. "Do you want me to beg?"

"Yes. That would be very good."

"I'm on my knees. Are you satisfied?"

"Oh, darn. This ball-point pen has run dry. Don't move from that position. I'll be right back with a new pen."

She quickly returned. "This is going to be one of the best scenes in my book."

Rock was incredulous. "You're writing a book?"

"Of course I'm writing a book. You don't think I play around without writing about it. What kind of girl do you think I am?"

My friend put on his shirt and said bitterly, "And I thought you were different from all the others. You don't want me — all you want is a chapter for your memoirs. How did a nice girl like you wind up in a profession like this?"

"It's a long story," the girl said tearfully. "But I met this editor from New York at a party and he said, 'How would you like to make some easy money, kid?', and the next thing I knew I had signed a contract for two hard-cover books and a paperback."

astronaut since the day that Glenn, under heavy presidential pressure, censored his remarks during christening of the new Trident submarine Ohio.

Glenn agreed to remove from his prepared text that day early last month most allusions to the explosive question of verification of Soviet honesty in adhering to the still-unsigned treaty. Yet, despite the expurgations, Rosalynn Carter, representing her husband at the Groton, Conn., christening, publicly chided Glenn for raising "very damaging" questions about verification.

What this means is that Glenn, whose opposition to SALT II does not approach the intensity of the bipartisan defense-oriented Senate bloc may be lost to the president in the hot ratification debate.

FIRE VICTIMS

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Police report 10 persons killed and more than 50 injured in a fire that raged through a five-story Woolworth variety store here Tuesday.

The conspicuous absence of Anatoly Shcharansky from the list of Soviet dissidents exchanged for those two Russian spies worries Soviet specialists here. Shcharansky, it is felt here, is being held as a carrot-and-stick weapon to play against President Carter in the final stages of the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II) negotiations.

Under this plausible theory, Shcharansky's fate would be thrown into the balance to influence Carter to yield on the last few details in the negotiations between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet foreign minister Andrei Gromyko.

Jailed as an American spy despite Carter's personal pledge that he had never been paid by or involved with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Shcharansky is the most celebrated dissident now in Soviet jail. Some authorities here believe that if Shcharansky is not useful to Moscow as a pawn during the tail-end of the negotiations, then the Soviets will play him as a political card during Senate consideration of SALT II amendments. The prospect worries critics of SALT.

A 'No' For Jerry

A possible attempt by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s inner circle to recruit a top political professional from the Democratic party establishment to help run Brown's campaign for the presidential nomination would be met by a rebuff.

Brown's political advisers have their eyes on Robert Keefe, a former executive director of the Democratic National Committee who is now a Washington lobbyist. Keefe played a key role in the presidential efforts of Hubert Humphrey and Henry M. Jackson and would give Brown's political movement a new dimension.

But Keefe is not playing. He has no intention of taking part in the 1980 presidential campaign. Moreover, in any Brown-vs.-Carter contest, he unequivocally supports President Carter and would tell Jerry Brown's men precisely that if they approach him.

A footnote: The Carter-Keefe tie was advertised when the president invited Keefe and his wife to the White House state dinner for Japanese Prime Minister Ohira on May 2.

The Greenville Optimist Club has honored longtime member Billy Ross with a plaque in recognition of his service and also instituted a new award that will be presented annually in Ross' honor.

Ross received the plaque, citing him for unselfish service to the club and community, this week from Optimist president, Jim Bullock.

The new permanent award will be presented each year to the Optimist Club member who exhibits the qualities voted by the club membership.

In addition, the Greenville organization has made a $500 contribution to the Optimist International Foundation in honor of Ross. The Foundation was created to further the objectives of Optimist clubs worldwide in fostering service to youth.

Ross has been a member of the Optimist here for 18 and a half years and earned a perfect attendance mark for 18 years.

A past president of the club, he has held every office on the club level and holds a life membership in the organization.

He and his wife, Jane, have three children.

Block-Long Pump Lines

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Some California drivers found blocks-long lines at gasoline pumps today despite an "odd-even" rationing scheme begun at midnight to ease the state's gas panic.

The plan, which alternates days of eligibility to buy gas between drivers with odd and even-numbered license plates, appeared to have an uneven effect and also produced some nervous moments for gas station operators.

About a half-dozen cars were lined up in the pre-dawn darkness when a Texaco station in Valencia, 35 miles from downtown Los Angeles, opened at 5:30 a.m. This was about half the number waiting when the station opened Tuesday.

But stations near Los Angeles International Airport and in the western section of the city were as swamped as before the restriction program. Cars stretched six blocks at one West Los Angeles station.

At a Santa Monica station, about 15 driverless cars waited parked and locked at a station at 7 a.m., an hour before the station opened. They'd been left the night before.

Some service station operators found at least part of the rationing plan tricky.

Before turning on his pumps this morning, the Valencia station owner diligently checked each license plate in line to make sure they were in the odd-number category. But he did not check fuel gauge levels to see if they were half-full or less, as required by the plan.

Atrocity Reported

SOROTI, Uganda (AP) — Idi Amin's troops, in one of their final acts of vengeance in this northeast Ugandan town, stopped a train carrying 1,000 fleeing civilians and shot about 50 of them beside the tracks, railwaymen reported.

They said Amin's men ordered 41 passengers, most of them men, to lie face down under the mango trees near the Soroti station, then started shooting.

They said four young women hiding in a nearby toilet were shot and four girls were kidnapped by the killers.

Reporters who reached Soroti after it was occupied last weekend by Tanzanian troops and the new Ugandan government's soldiers found four skeletons in a cassava patch near the looted, bullet-marked station and two bodies in a latrine pit.

The railwaymen said the Amin soldiers carried away the other bodies at night, apparently in a belated effort to hide the slaughter. The troops from Kampala said they found a mass grave in the town and estimated 200 bodies of men, women and children were in it. Nearby were three empty pits 10 feet long, 2 feet wide and 3 feet deep.

The escape train that became a death trap still stood at the small arched station with bullet holes in several of its nine cars. It had come across northern Uganda, where bands of Amin's troops and security police have been on a rampage of revenge since their leader lost control of Kampala nearly a month ago. Most of the passengers were believed to have been Christian members of the Acholi and Lango tribes, favorite targets of Amin and his Moslems during his eight years in power.

School Desegregation In Urban North Said Failure

ATLANTA (AP) — Twenty-five years after the Supreme Court's landmark 1954 school desegregation decision, public schools in much of the urban North are more racially segregated than those in the South, civil rights leader Julian Bond said today.

"The biggest failure of school integration has been in the urban centers of the North," Bond said in prepared remarks accompanying a report by the Institute for Southern Studies marking the 25th anniversary of the ruling.

The May 17, 1954, ruling, which held that separate education is inherently unequal, led to a wave of federal school integration orders, primarily in the South. As a result, Bond said, the 11-state region "now has a more integrated school system than the rest of the nation."

Bond, a Georgia state senator and president of the Atlanta chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said fewer blacks now attend predominantly black schools in the South than in the rest of the nation.

Referring to 1976 statistics, Bond said 12 percent of the South's minority students attend schools that have a minority enrollment of 99 percent or more, compared with 31 percent in six industrialized Northern states and 17 percent in the nation as a whole.

The six Northern states referred to by Bond are Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

While noting the success of integration "in mixing bodies inside school buildings," Bond said school systems, particularly in the South, have failed to retain and hire black teachers and principals once dual school systems were eliminated.

Bond said the institute's report shows that although 34 percent of the elementary and secondary school children in the South are members of minorities, only 24 percent of the region's teachers belong to minority groups.

He said the gap has widened since 1968, when 30 percent of the students and 25 percent of the teachers were minority group members.

"If the ratio of minority teachers to white teachers was the same as minority students to white students, we'd have 57,000 more minority teachers in the South bringing in annual salaries of over $640 million," Bond said.

Bond said the report, published as the summer issue of the institute's quarterly journal, "Southern Exposure," shows that black children are bearing the heaviest burden from school desegregation.

"Today, black children still are the ones who are bused more often for longer distances; who lose the identity of their own schools, athletic programs and social functions; who are expelled if their attitudes do not conform to white, middle-class standards," he said.

The report also points to what it says is the widespread underfunding of newly integrated school systems in the South.

Bond is president of the institute, which is based in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Plan Compiling Address Lists

Workers for the U.S. Census Bureau will begin compiling house-by-house address lists within the next few days in Pitt County.

"The purpose of this address listing program is to compile a complete list of households in the country for use next year when the 1980 census questionnaire will be mailed to each residence," said Ms. Doris Buhl, census office manager in Raleigh.

Census workers will be walking or driving on streets and roads in the county to prepare the address lists. They will be knocking on doors and asking householders for a correct mailing address.

Ms. Buhl said residents can identify the census employees by a red, white and blue census identification card which all will carry. Census workers also will carry 11 inch by 16 inch books, or address registers, in which the addresses are written.

These address lists will play a vital role in the nationwide 1980 census. They will be used to produce mailing labels for the census questionnaires. Census Day is April 1, 1980.

English-Speaking Union Event Set

The Rev. John Waddington, Provost Emeritus of St. Edmundsbury Cathedral in Bury St. Edmunds, Suffolk, England, will speak at a dinner meeting of the Greenville Branch of the English-Speaking Union to be held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club, Wednesday, May 16.

During World War II, Waddington was on the headquarters staff of Field Marshal Montgomery in the Western African Desert and in Italy. He is active in the Actor's Church Union in the United Kingdom. This is the vehicle which provides the church's ministry for every "live" theatre group.

The cathedral of which Waddington was provost for 18 years is the birthplace of the Magna Carta. It was there that the Barons of England met in 1214 to ratify the charter.

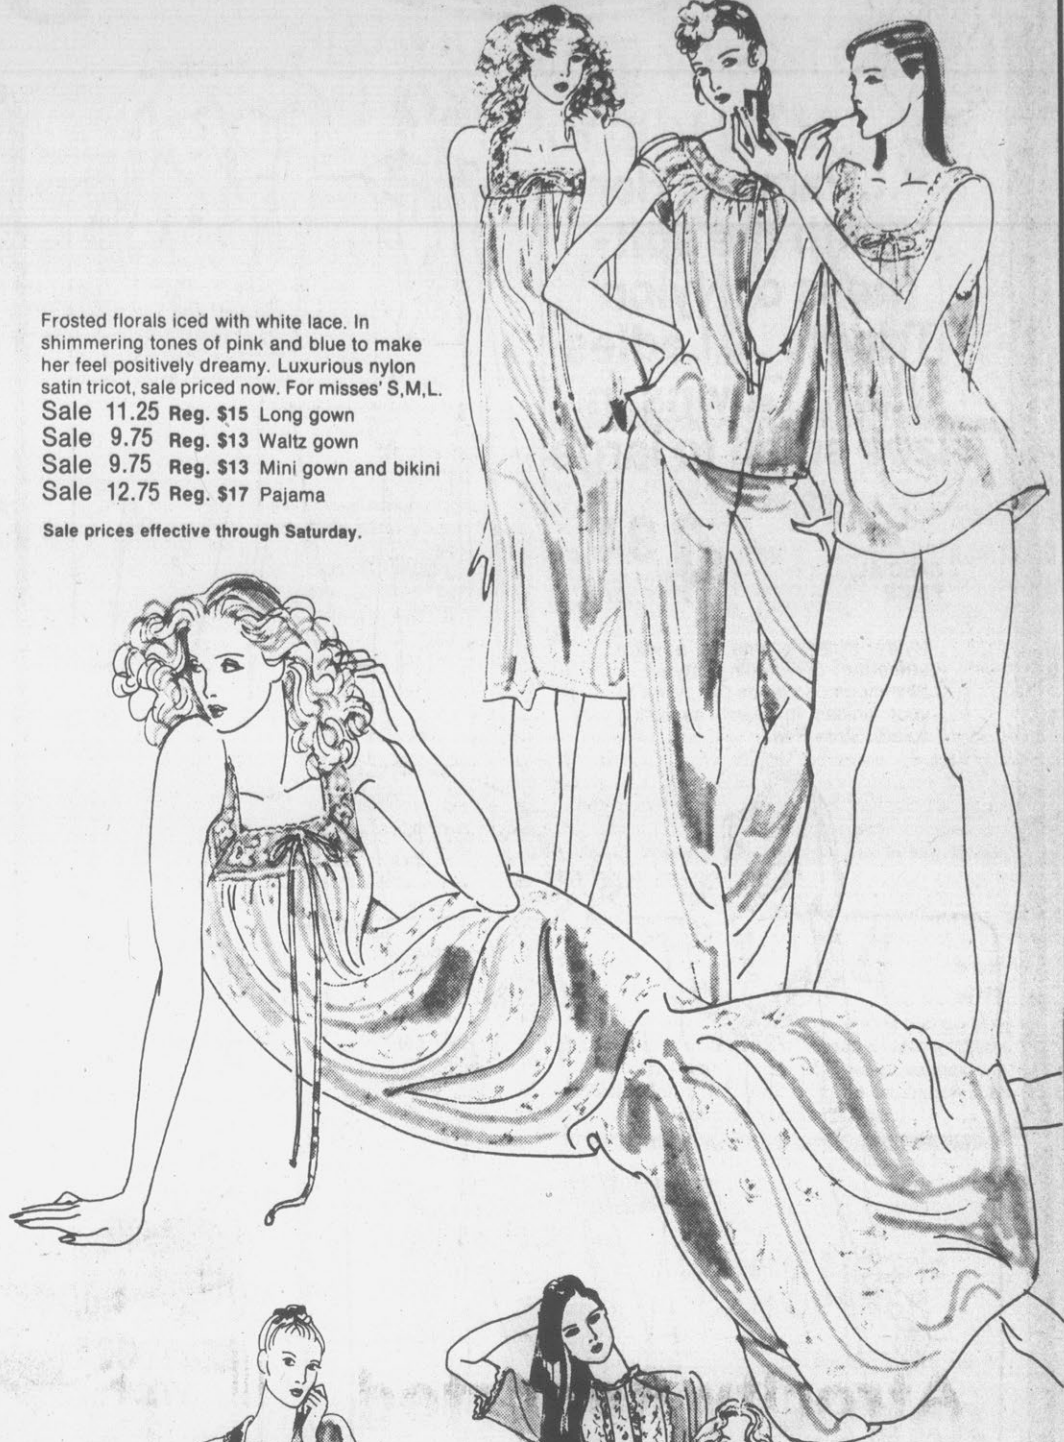

Reservations for the dinner must be made by noon May 14 with Annie Turner, 1701 E. 4th, St.

Malpractice Suits A Spur To Genetic Counseling

By RICHARD HUGHES
NEW YORK (UPI) — New impetus is being given to genetic counseling by recent court decisions holding doctors liable for failing to warn parents of the potential of giving birth to an abnormal child.

In decisions by the New York State Court of Appeals last Dec. 28, the court ruled in favor of two women who claimed their doctors did not warn them of their potential for giving birth to mentally retarded, deformed or afflicted children.

One woman gave birth to a girl suffering from Down's syndrome or mongolism. At 37 and in her first pregnancy, the woman was in the high-risk age category for Down's syndrome. The second woman gave birth to a second child with polycystic kidney disease. Several years earlier, the woman had a child with the same disease who died five hours after birth, but doctors told her the chances of having a second child with the same ailment were "practically nil." The second child died at age 2½.

The New York court said doctors who fail to warn of such high-risk pregnancies could be held liable for payment of the special care and treatment over the lifetime of persons born with genetic defects and diseases.

"The court acted upon two cases that might never have happened had the physicians and patients availed themselves of the services provided by the National Genetics Foundation," according to Dr. George W. Melcher Jr., president of the foundation.

The New York malpractice cases and similar ones in other states have brought genetic medicine out of the family closet and focused attention on means of identifying, detecting, treating and preventing genetic diseases.

Many doctors are more routinely administering a relatively simple procedure called amniocentesis to determine whether Down's Syndrome or other genetic diseases are present in a fetus. But this is a surgical probe and there is some risk — in less than 1 percent of the cases, the patient or the fetus suffers some damage. Many doctors are exploring a safer, though more time-consuming, alternative — genetic counseling.

Founded in 1970 as a nonprofit agency, the National Genetics Foundation has been fighting an uphill battle to get physicians and parents to use its services. "The sad part is that we were not getting sufficient inquiries from doctors," said Arthur G. Steinberg, chairman of the foundation and professor of human genetics at Case Western Reserve in Cleveland.

But with the threat of medical malpractice suits, doctors today are turning to the foundation out of self-protection if not medical enlightenment. "Physicians are going to have to use centers like ours more and more each day," Steinberg said. "They're going to have to turn to us for help."

The foundation provides the most complete storehouse of information on the 2,000 identifiable genetic disorders through a network of 54 centers located in medical teaching institutions and linked to a central clearing house in New York City.

Prospective parents can inquire directly to the centers or through their physicians. The centers provide testing to determine the risks of a genetic disorder in a newborn and give guidance on treatment and prevention. The goal is to make genetic counseling as common as a dental examination.

The most critical element in determining the risks of giving birth to a genetically disabled child is a thorough medical history of the family. Because a social stigma is irrationally attached to genetic disorders and most people are reluctant to reveal family health secrets, the medical interview must be handled with sensitivity and caring, Steinberg says. "You learn very quickly that genetic histories take a long time to get. People block it, hide it and don't want to talk about it."

He told of one family he visited in their home after four children had died of leukemia. "They kept denying it. After three hours of getting nowhere, I was on my way out the door. As I was walking out, the old grandmother yelled, 'We told them not to get married. They're second cousins and no good would come of it.'"

Too often, he adds, physicians are incapable of doing such interviews or do not want to spend the time to conduct them. In either case, all the doctor need do is refer the patient and family to one of the foundation's centers. "Any physician anywhere in the United States can appeal to us for help," says Steinberg.

Despite the fact that medical malpractice cases are focusing more attention on genetic diseases, Steinberg said the "average physician thinks genetic diseases are rare. They say, 'I don't need information on that. I don't have time to spend on something very rare, very esoteric.'"

Steinberg says doctors also don't like to deal with genetic disorders because many view them as "not treatable, and physicians do not want to have anything to do with something that is not treatable."

According to the genetics foundation, between 12 million and 15 million Americans have a genetic disorder of some kind. One out of every 250 newborn babies has a genetic disorder and one out of three hospitalized children is being treated for genetic problems. One fourth of all people in institutions for the handicapped have a genetic disorder of some kind.

Although it is true that many genetic disorders cannot be "cured" in the sense one is cured of an infection, all can be treated and managed and many can be prevented. But first, says Steinberg, patients and physicians must stop viewing genetic disorders as a "flaw in the family" to be hidden and ignored.

Would Freeze Fees On Parks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Entrance fees would be frozen at current levels at all national parks under legislation approved by the House.

The bill, sent to the Senate for action, would scuttle a Carter administration plan to raise fees at 30 national parks, monuments, seashores and historic sites. The administration wants the higher admissions to raise an additional $8 million to defray some of the cost of maintaining and operating the parks.

Nuclear Plant Sabotage Try Is Termed Inside Job

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Federal officials are saying the attempted sabotage of fuel elements at Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s Surry nuclear plant probably was an inside job.

The FBI is investigating what Vepco Vice President C.M. Stallings Tuesday called possibly the first documented case of attempted sabotage of a nuclear generating facility in this country.

Stallings said company inspectors Monday discovered that a caustic white crystalline substance had been dumped into 62 of 64 new, unirradiated fuel elements at Surry.

Officials won't know exactly what the substance is until it is tested, but Jim Miller of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission said it appeared to be similar to a corrosive crystal drain cleaner that Vepco has on the site for cleaning.

The incident posed "no threat to the health and safety" of Vepco employees or the public, Stallings said.

Because of the tight security at the plant, officials are saying the effort probably was done by someone on the inside.

"At this point, it's a little early to speculate, but it's a secure plant...and it would lead you to believe that it would come from the inside," said special agent Sherrill W. Law, of the FBI office here, who is directing the bureau's investigation.

An NRC official said it "is our preliminary conclusion" that the effort was from the inside.

Law said the FBI began its investigation after Justice Department attorneys determined the sabotage to be a violation of the Atomic Energy Act.

Miller said an NRC security specialist arrived at Surry Tuesday to help the FBI investigators and check out possible security gaps.

The fuel elements were scheduled to be used to refuel Surry Unit No. 2 later this summer. The unit is now out of operation for replacement of its steam generators.

The elements are housed in a storage building between the two nuclear reactors. Each consists of 225 12-foot zirconium tubes of uranium fuel pellets strung together with steel supports.

Each element is wrapped in plastic and held in a metal container embedded in the floor of the building and covered with a square manhole cover taped to the floor, Stallings said.

What apparently happened, he said, is the culprit untaped the cover, unwrapped the plastic and dumped from "a couple of cupfuls to a gallon of the chemical" on each element and then replaced everything exactly as it had been before.

"Whoever got in there knew what he was doing," Stallings said.

Stallings said preliminary indications are that the fuel elements were damaged very little, if any, and cleanup operations may take no more than two weeks.

The value of the 62 fuel elements was placed at $30 million, and Stallings said if the fuel rods would have had to be reconstructed, as first feared, it could have cost some $6 million.

He said uranium fuel pellets were not damaged because the tubes surrounding them are unaffected by caustic substances.

Access to the fuel storage building is controlled by a special card that activates the door and signals a security guard that someone has entered the building and whose card has been used, Stallings said.

Vepco officials could not say Tuesday how many people have the card, but Stallings said he has ordered impounded the records of all cards used to enter the building since February.

Construction workers are on the site because of the repair work to the steam generators, but they would not normally have cards to the door, he said.

The fuel, supplied by the Westinghouse Corp., began arriving at Surry in February and shipments were completed in mid-March. After each shipment arrived, Stallings said, the fuel was inspected before being stored.

Vepco's only nuclear unit in operation now is Unit 1 at North Anna. Surry Unit 1 was shut down in January for the generator repairs and Unit 2 was ordered off line by the NRC to check for its ability to withstand the stress of an earthquake.

Weakened Products Liability Bill Ready For Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A weakened products-liability bill, limiting opportunities for consumers to sue for defective products, has won tentative approval in the state House and will be up for a final vote today.

The bill was a compromise resulting from conflicting bills, one backed by manufacturers and the other supported by consumer advocates. It advanced on a 105-0 vote Tuesday after little debate.

The Senate has already approved a more restrictive version of the bill and will consider concurrence in the compromise measure if it gains final House approval.

The Senate version would have given broad immunity from lawsuits to manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers for alleged injury due to defective products.

Rep. Ben Tison, D-Mecklenburg, a supporter of the Senate-passed legislation, called the new bill a workable compromise but said it tended to favor consumers.

"It does less for the manufacturer than the original bill did," he said.

Tison said a key concession to consumers was the elimination of a state-of-the-art provision. That would have allowed manufacturers to use as an absolute defense in court cases the contention that a product was manufactured in conformity with the prevailing standards or state of the art.

But the bill still limits suits to within six years after the date of purchase or 10 years from the date of manufacture.

In other legislative action: Sex Offenses

With little debate, the House gave tentative approval Tuesday to a bill that would revise and consolidate North Carolina sex offense laws. The bill was approved on a 95-4 vote, but some legislators said they expected more of a fight over the proposal today.

The bill defines rape and other illegal sexual acts, setting up new categories of sexual offenses other than rape, and would establish homosexual rape as an illegal sexual offense.

Mrs. Brennan said the bill was based on similar legislation enacted in Maryland and carried the support of district attorneys and sheriffs.

Auto Repairs

Bills were filed in the House and Senate that would extend consumer protection laws to cover automobile repairs. The bills were recommended by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Under the legislation, all auto repair shops would have to offer 30-day warranties on parts and labor and issue detailed descriptions of work done and parts used. It would require that shops first obtain a customer's approval before doing extra repairs.

Blue Lights

A bill making it illegal to have a blue light in an automobile and restricting the use of red lights by motorists was approved by the House and sent back to the Senate to consider concurrence in amendments.

The bill was introduced as the result of assaults on women in Randolph and other counties by persons who used a blue light to stop their victim while driving.

Defense

A Senate judiciary committee approved and sent the full Senate a bill that would establish a pool of 30 lawyers from across the state to defend indigent persons charged in cases where they face a possible death sentence.

The sponsor, Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said lawyers in the group would be experienced in capital cases. He said it would ensure competent defenses for indigents charged with murder.

Divorce

The Senate voted 32-17 to kill a bill that would allow uncontested divorce cases to be settled by district court clerks rather than judges as now required. The measure was opposed by senators who said it would make divorce too easy to obtain.

School Policies

The Senate voted 26-21 to kill a bill that would require each public school system to have a written personnel policy. Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, said the measure would encourage collective bargaining.

Children

A bill that would make child abuse a felony was approved by a House judiciary committee and sent to the full House. The panel also approved a bill that would revise the state's juvenile laws, a comprehensive measure recommended by a juvenile-code study commission.

Alien Landowners

A House judiciary committee approved and sent the full House a bill that would require the secretary of state to collect information on land holdings in the state by aliens. The secretary would be instructed to gather information contained in alien reports required by federal law.

Competency Tests

A bill filed in the Senate would block the new minimum competency test requirement for 10 years. The bill, filed by Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, would give public schools until 1989 before they must require passage of the tests as a condition for high school graduation.

The competency-test requirement was pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt and enacted by the 1977 General Assembly.

ABC

Rep. John W. Brown, R-Wilkes, filed a measure that would change the name of the state Board of Alcoholic Control, or ABC board, to the Board of Alcoholic Promotion. Brown's measure says that is a more accurate description of what the ABC board does.

Committee To Weigh School

WILLIAMSTON — A committee to study the feasibility of constructing a middle school in the Roanoke (western) section of Martin County was appointed Monday by members of the Martin County Board of Education.

The committee is charged with presenting to the board ideas about the possibility of a middle school in that area at a future date.

Bethel Pupils To Give Play

The Bethel Elementary School Drama Guild will present Tim Kelly's play, "Monster Soup," Tuesday, May 15, 8 p.m., in the school auditorium. Roscoe Locke, assistant principal, will direct the production, assisted by Mrs. Helen Burton.

The play involves a group of clever ghouls, who try to trick the villain, Lawyer Fleasom, "the meanest man in Graveyard Corners." The comedy should prove to be a stimulating and motivating experience, according to Locke.

Admission will be 75 cents for adults and 50 cents for students. The cast of characters is as follows: Donna Gordon, Granny; Martha Rollins, Belle; Debra House, Pearl; Patricia Lee, Minnie; Sandy Pollard, Ada Mae; Kenneth Cherry, Lawyer Fleasom; Isaac Ebron, Preacher; Levon Shaw, Professor Barker; and Ann Hamm and Wilbert Person, assistants.

Formal approval was given to renewal contracts for Superintendent Eugene Rogers and Assistant Superintendent C.J. Comer Griffin.

The board was informed of the receipt of $55,000 in Title C funds to provide money to use drama techniques in teaching reading and vocabulary skills in classrooms.

A preliminary discussion on the school budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year was held, and other meetings will be scheduled in the near future to go more deeply into the preparation of the budget to submit to county commissioners.

Central Florida Twister Leaves At Least 6 Dead

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer
A black funnel cloud crushed an elderly woman huddled in a shed and a young girl and her mother were sucked into a storm drain as thunderstorms and tornadoes left at least six dead in a trail of wreckage across central Florida.

Damage from Tuesday's twisters and heavy rains was estimated in the millions of dollars, state officials said, and area hospitals reported treating about 40 persons for storm-related injuries.

Gov. Bob Graham called out 120 National Guardsmen to Auburndale, the area hardest hit, as rainy, thunderous clouds stretching in from the Gulf of Mexico still covered much of Florida's mid-section today.

Tornadoic winds collapsed a small concrete-block shed in Auburndale where Margaret and Stanley Schnaare had sought refuge, killing the 83-year-old woman but only slightly injuring her husband.

Schnaare dug in the rubble behind the couple's mobile home, trying futilely to save his wife, before he was taken to a nearby hospital to have his cuts treated.

Hours after a tornado ripped through their 200-lot Sun Acres trailer park, three schools, an orange juice cannery and nearby homes, a "For Sale" sign still swayed in the steady rain in Schnaare's front yard.

About 60 miles to the west in St. Petersburg, where flood waters claimed several lives, police continued to search today for a missing nurse and a young girl.

The water swept Judith Coloom, 37, and her 12-year-old daughter from a busy street near a school and shopping center, stuffing them into a curb-side storm sewer. Mrs. Coloom's body was found by searchers in a drain about 12 blocks away. Police said the girl would not be counted dead until her body was found or no hope remained.

Mrs. Coloom had just picked up her daughter up at Tyrone Middle School and they were wading in waist-deep flood water across a street when they were swept into the drain.

Police managed to warn others away from the same fate, with one officer diving into the rushing torrent to save a teenage girl being swept away.

Also missing in St. Petersburg was a 53-year-old Dade City nurse whose truck floated off a road into a creek. Witnesses pulled her 15-year-old passenger out of the water, but the current carried Norah Smith beyond their reach.

Three other persons died at Brooksville, 50 miles north of St. Petersburg, when two cars collided on a rain-slicked highway, the Florida Highway Patrol reported.

Thirteen Auburndale high school students were cut and bruised when the tornado tore the roofs from school buildings.

"We were lucky. We got advance warning of tornadoes in the area and we came out all right," said Auburndale High School principal John Stewart. He said the toll could have been worse if not for drills begun after a tornado hit a Largo elementary school last spring, killing two children.

The Adams Packing Association citrus plant west of Auburndale looked "as if a giant fist had slammed down in the middle," one observer said. A warehouse was destroyed and a main refrigeration line ruptured, spewing ammonia into the air, police said.

No one was injured by the fumes and the leak was repaired, said company vice president Wally Adams, who estimated more than $2 million damage to the plant.

One Auburndale resident, Jewel Evans, found everything swept out of her kitchen but the goldfish.

"Everything was just wiped off the tables and flung out of the kitchen, except my 10-gallon aquarium," Ms. Evans said. "My five goldfish are still swimming away."

Patients Set Doctor's Fees

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — If Dr. Milton Seifert's patients are upset about his prices, they have only themselves to blame. After all, they're the ones who call the shots for the Excelsior, Minn., physician.

For the past five years, an advisory council of 50 of his patients has set the budget for Seifert's practice, including fees, salaries and collecting overdue bills; mediated complaints by other patients; and decided which cases should be treated as emergencies.

The council has also run annual health-education conferences and supplied transportation to the office for patients who needed it.

The physician admits he was a little concerned at first about the experiment, but his fears proved unfounded.

"The hardest thing I had at first was getting my patients to believe that it was all right to tell me what to do, and what they had to say was useful," said Seifert, who was in Dayton to explain his practice before the Wright State University Medical School recently.

"Now the great thing is that I as the doctor don't have to worry about getting involved in fee increases and so forth. The patients depend on the practice themselves so they want to be sure it's in good financial health and they don't want me to get mad and go someplace else," Seifert said.

Seifert said his advisory council had decided this year he should earn $45,000 a year, but he said he was actually earning about $40,000 because of inflation and debt delinquency.

The fees set by his patients are not different from those at other private family practices in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, he said.

Most doctors in the area make about $65,000 a year, Seifert said, and "I think the reason I'm getting paid less is because we're doing the extra things."

The "extra things" include a health educator and a "living problems counselor" who helps patients with emotional and family problems.

Seifert said he hired these professionals because he realized that he had neither the time nor the expertise to deal with emotional problems.

"Every patient who walks through the door has both a mental and a physical problem," Seifert said. "Every family doctor sees that. Some take the time to deal with it and some don't."

Seven More Executed

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Islamic firing squads executed seven more men early today, including a leading Jewish businessman accused of "contact with Israel and Zionism," Radio Tehran announced.

The executions, which followed 21 Tuesday morning, brought to 198 the number put to death since Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's forces ousted the regime of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February.

Among the latest group was Habib Elghanian, who held controlling interests in a large number of companies and was a prominent member of Iran's Jewish community.

The broadcast announcement said he was accused of "corruption and contact with Israel and Zionism and betrayal of his fellow citizens. His properties were confiscated for the weak people."

Iran's new revolutionary government has taken a militant anti-Israeli stance, and when former Prime Minister Amir Abbas Hoveida was executed April 7, working for international Zionism was one of the charges against him. Although Iran is not an Arab country, it has a large Arab minority which supplies much of the work force in the vital oil industry.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures
(I've moved — cameras, equipment and darkroom — from a lifetime in New York to a new home in Delray Beach, Fla. To help during the transition period, my guest columnist this week is Ed Hannigan, dean of the School of Modern Photography in Little Falls, N.J. Here's Hannigan.)

The right use of accessories at the right time can often make the difference between a successful photograph or just another so-so shot. And you must be aware of what light does for your subject and know what your equipment and accessories can do for you.

In the studio, lighting can be closely controlled to do the job required. Even on location shots, we can use portable lighting in the form of flash units and/or reflectors to improve on existing illumination.

But when your subjects are mountains, sky, trees and water — landscapes, seascapes, snowscapes — we lose direct control of the lighting. Or do we?

We can't move the sun around like a spotlight in a studio. But we really can, in a way, because we can select the time of day when the sun will be in the right position to give the lighting effect we desire or need.

Photographers too often fail to recognize that the sun does move and that its lighting effects go through a broad range of changes, hour by hour. And too many camera fans are content to snap away at a scene regardless of how inadequate the light may be. They are not patient enough to wait a while or return when the light can make a world of difference.

Flat lighting (when the sun falls on the scene over your left shoulder) is the least impressive for recording scenic beauty. In order to depict dimensions and shapes, the sun should be at an angle which creates natural shadows where the light, gradually or suddenly, encounters the irregularities of the terrain.

The same scene will appear completely different when the sun gives a backlighting effect. Such lighting can be quite dramatic — but it can also backfire and ruin pictures. The hazard of shooting in the direction of the sun — or any bright light — is flare, the fogging of a picture area by light. One way to minimize its effect is to use an adequate lens hood.

Competent use of backlighting gives interesting and sparkling highlights on water and snow, and produces brilliant edge-lighting on trees, leaves and flowers. Skillfully used, it can delineate a number of planes in a scene, achieving visual separation that adds a three-dimensional feeling to a two-dimensional photograph.

You can also improve your pictorial scenes through wise use of one or more of the many front lens accessories that are available for cameras.

My vacation experience last fall in a photoscenic area of Colorado illustrates how time of day and use of a polarizing filter made a great difference in photographic results.

I arrived in the Maroon Bells area near Aspen in the afternoon and the mountain peaks were mostly in shadow. But there were still pictures that could be made with the sun glinting off the surface of Maroon Pond and an aspen tree framing the subdued mountains. With the sun low in the heavens, the use of a polarizing filter to darken the sky was not worthwhile.

I returned early next day and the morning light illuminated the rugged, snow-frosted mountains. At the same time, the sun was in the right quadrant of the sky for use of a polarizing filter. It darkened the clear blue sky and made the peaks stand out in bold contrast. I re-shot the views I had taken the previous afternoon and there is a spectacular difference in the two sets of original color photographs of the same scene.

The polarizer works for both black-and-white and color films but it is most effective when the sky area included in the view is at right angles to the sun itself. That produces the maximum darkening effect of the blue sky.

Besides filters, there are many other front lens attachments in the arsenal of accessories. Among them are close-up supplementary optics and even split lenses for sharpness in both foreground and background at the same time. In addition there are multi-image prisms, random type diffusers, Starburst, Colorflow and Rayburst filters, mistmakers, vignettes and diffraction gratings.

Every one of these can be used effectively for a specific situation at some time. The creative application of the right one at the right time will help you produce unique and outstanding photos. But using any of these accessories does not guarantee that it will automatically produce a good picture out of a dull subject. Improperly applied, the result can be meaningless and a waste of one's time, effort and material.

Yellow, blue, red, green and orange filters can all be used effectively with black-and-white films to make better pictures. But in my category of no-no's is the use of these filters with color films. It had a novelty value the first time it was done and one photographic magazine published the results. Then came the copyists and imitators, and as a gimmick it became overdone. You can channel your creative urge to better things.

I suggest that to improve your pictorial studies you use sunlight to its best advantage, and the right front lens accessory in those situations where it adds an imaginative touch. These two factors can make the big difference between snapshots and fine photographs worthy of display.

Eyes Profit In Old Tires

SYCAMORE, Ohio (AP) — Noble Kirby has collected about 4.5 million discarded tires on 12 acres of his Wyandot County farm, and he has 68 more empty acres that are waiting to be filled.

Kirby is convinced that some day there will be a market for his mountain of rubber.

Kirby and his two sons are in the bulldozing, crane and earth-moving business. They also own a sandpit and deal in sand and gravel.

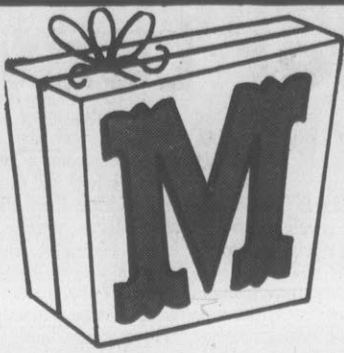

The tire stockpiling is a spare-time occupation. They unload about five truckloads a day, adding the old automobile and truck tires to the huge mound that towers above their cranes.

The cigar-chewing Kirby said he had noticed the potential for rubber recycling during World War II. The United States, England and France have no rubber plantations, Kirby said, but rubber can be recycled "and I'm getting ready for that time."

Kirby, who believes he is the only such tire collector in Ohio, has been accumulating the tires for 10 years.

"There's a guy in Minnesota that does the same thing I do, but he doesn't have near so many tires," Kirby said.

"This guy figures if he ever sells them, they'll be worth about a dollar apiece. That's not a bad figure," he added.

Understanding Aids Recovery

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Failing to understand and respect a hospital patient's culture may be just as harmful to a satisfactory recovery as failing to prescribe proper medical treatment.

That lesson is taught by Marilyn Rubin, a professor at St. Louis University, in her course on transcultural nursing.

Not every culture views illness in the same way, Miss Rubin said in an interview, so African hospitals and nurses should be careful not to impose distinctly American values on patients from other backgrounds.

"We don't study every culture," Miss Rubin said, "but we use a few examples to whet the students' appetites, to open their eyes to these questions."

"We want to make sure they're not denying anything to their patients just because they don't understand their needs. It works."

Lectures by representatives of black, American Indians and Chinese cultures are part of the course. Miss Rubin recalled what a black nurse on the university's staff told the students:

"After white patients have been hospitalized for a few days, nurses probably will address them by their first name. The patients may be calling the nurses by their first name. But blacks generally don't like that.

"They want to be addressed more formally, to be called Mr. or Mrs. They haven't had a history of this respect in our culture — for a long time it was 'Hey, boy' or calling them by their first name. They want to be addressed with respect. It affects the personalization of their care."

Miss Rubin said care should also be taken in assigning personnel — black patients generally want white doctors and nurses to look after them.

"It may not be true that the whites give better care," she said, "but the blacks often judge the quality of their care by what the white patients get."

Hospital rules may seem arbitrary and impersonal to all patients, regardless of background. But to someone from another culture, Miss Rubin said, they may seem particularly harsh and could even be harmful.

"Some patients, when they are acutely ill, may not want their spouses to be with them. American Indians want their mother's sisters, who are very important to them."

"This is important to know, especially in hospitals where many times only the husband or wife is allowed in the intensive-care unit. This would be very bad for the dignity of this family."

Indications Are Red Tape Jungle Getting Wores

BY DONALD LAMBRO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — In 1969, businessman Jack Evans began seeking federal approval to build an oil refinery in Portsmouth, Va. He thought the whole project would take "a few years at most."

Nine years later, after spending over $7 million on attorneys fees and environmental impact studies, Evans says he and a group of investors still do not have final approval.

His decade-long journey through a multitude of departments and regulatory agencies has been, "a nightmare of frustration." But he blames the system, not the people he has had to deal with.

"The poor bureaucrat is so buffeted by the laws that he doesn't want to say yes or no. It's always a maybe. And it goes on for years and years."

Evans' experience is familiar to John Lamb, a Cincinnati businessman who since 1974 has been fighting an energy conservation proposal that would curb the use of illuminated signs by small businesses.

"Nobody has paid a damn bit of attention to anything we've said," he recalled bitterly.

Evans and Lamb have never met, but their experiences with the government in many ways parallel each other. Both speak of frustration, delay, and of an unresponsive government that has not heeded their pleas for help and understanding.

In 1976, President Carter promised to make the government more responsive to its citizens. And some federal agencies are widely praised as models of efficiency in dealing with citizen inquiries and problems.

Agencies rated highly for their citizen complaint handling systems include the Federal Communications Commission, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, and the Federal Trade and Interstate Commerce Commissions.

Others, however, are viewed as jungles of redtape, "fudge factories" of delay. Interviews with government officials, private citizens, survey specialists, and trade organizations suggest things may be getting worse.

Complaining to the government is as old as government itself. An unending stream of complaints flow daily to the White House, Congress, federal agencies, and consumer and trade associations throughout Washington.

The Carter White House gets 30,000 to 60,000 letters each week. Up to 30 percent of them are answered by a staff of about 75 persons, or referred to another agency for reply.

Congress alone, by one count, has more than 4,000 people who handle "casework" problems, many of which are passed on to executive agencies.

One of these is the Small Business Administration's Advocacy office, where Nick Kalcounos directs a relatively small staff tackling a big problem — trying to respond to the complaints and problems of business people who often don't know where to turn for help.

Frequently, SBA can help. But Kalcounos admits that his five caseworkers are no match for a bureaucracy of nearly three million civilian employees.

People who run small businesses, Kalcounos says, "don't think the government is responsive. They think the government is never going to give them a fair shake."

"Red tape really does exist," he says. "If you don't know what you're doing, they (the bureaucracy) can keep you on a merry-go-round."

The letters his office must deal with daily tell the story. A great number complain about federal paperwork and regulation.

In a letter sent to SBA by Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., vice president Alton Smith of the Omega Engineering Co. in Stamford, Conn., objected to "staggering amounts of various reports, surveys, census, etc., etc., etc., that businesses have to respond to ..."

"For smaller companies with limited staff, the bulk and magnitude of each report does create, in our opinion, undue hardship," Smith wrote. "How much do these agencies feel the small businessman can absorb?"

Many letters sent on from the White House want the president's attention: "I would like the President to read this personally," wrote Lou Lavigne, a rug merchant from Whitinsville, Mass. He complained that manufacturers raise their prices when production peaks, hurting small business.

An SBA case summary says Lavigne was told "this agency is working with other federal agencies to make sure that unfair price manipulation does not occur. Case closed."

There are some successes. When Agriculture Department inspectors went "out of their way to make it tough" for an egg plant in the northeast, Kalcounos recalls, "we called the USDA and the inspectors were transferred to other areas."

Numerous complaints are heard about the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) and the Consumer Product Safety Commission, but of all the agencies the public hates most "the Internal Revenue Service has to head the list," he says.

Kathleen Clarken, a caseworker with the National Federation of Independent Businesses, puts OSHA near the top of her list but says the worst is the Mine Safety and Health Administration.

"Our mail is telling us the inspectors are mean, nasty, arrogant and petty. They have this attitude that we're going to nail you to the wall unless you comply with our rules."

"By and large the bureaucracy has grown less responsive," says David Marsh, director of the Business Advisory Council on Federal Reports which is trying to combat excessive government paperwork.

"There's so damn much of it," he says.

"People move within these agencies so frequently that there's no continuity, no accountability," complains Herbert Liebenson, vice president of the National Small Business Association. "One fellow filed three times with one agency because his application had gotten lost. You hear this all the time."

Donald Ubben, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce director, says, "The only time you get really quick action is when a chairman of a (congressional) committee or subcommittee complains. It's amazing how fast things get done. Some agencies have a 48 hour rule to reply to a member of Congress but not to the average citizen."

Many businesses, Marsh says, are afraid to complain to the government, preferring instead to write to their trade association.

"This cover up occurs frequently," he says, "because they want to maintain their anonymity. They are afraid that by complaining they will end up being inspected by OSHA or some other agency."

Liebenson says he would rank "OSHA as a good candidate for one of the worst" agencies in Washington from the small business point of view.

Some people write to Washington when they should turn to their local or county federal office. A consultant who has studied the way the government handles consumer complaints, bluntly advises, "Don't write to Washington if you want to get results."

"Washington is far away from the actual operation in the localities in most situations," says John Goodman. "Complaints going to Washington have a low probability of being solved. Most of the agencies here are generally out of touch with the operating agencies out in the field."

"Say you have a problem and complain about an allotment check from the Department of Agriculture. The USDA sends it down to the regional office, and then to the state office, then the county office where it will be handled. The potential for a piece of paper making it through that chain is very slim and very time consuming."

Goodman found consumer complaints were poorly handled by more than one-third of the agencies he examined.

Among his findings: complaints are assigned to inexperienced clerks; many complaints are referred to the wrong agencies; written responses often provide "little specific information on the consumer's problem"; there is an "unsatisfactory" link between the Washington headquarters and field offices.

Another finding: "In many agencies serious complaints receive low priority, while trivial, congressionally referred complaints consume substantial resources."

"By definition," Goodman says, "agencies give congressional letters top priority. They know where their bread is buttered. Unfortunately, letters to congressmen are often not high priority problems."

At the root of the problem, Goodman says, "it is the massiveness of the system" that hinders major progress toward more responsiveness.

He recalls one agency head telling him, "We never hear from consumers." Then he discovered 20,000 complaints in the basement of their agency.

Another agency administrator told him, "Nowhere in our enacting legislation does it tell me to be responsive to consumers." He was furious at us for wasting his time.

"In one department they said, 'We throw that stuff away.' And some of it was heartrending." But Goodman said this department has since "tightened up its system."

Who is better at responding to complaints, business or the government? Goodman says, "without any doubt, business. Business has an incentive. In government you are a monopoly. They don't worry about looking for customers."

"The general public unfortunately doesn't complain as much as they should," he says. "They think it's not worth my time. Nobody will help. Nobody will care."

And, too, "people are afraid. They think that if they complain, they will lose some government service, their checks will be cut off, or whatever."

Adds Clarken of the NFIB, "Some people are very hesitant about complaining to the government; they are very, very frightened. They don't want their name to be used — because they are afraid they are going to get reported to OSHA or some other agency."

"There are people who say 'I'm not going to bother to fight it because there's just no hope. It's not worth the effort. I'm just going to pay the fine.' Frankly, I would give up, too," she says. "It doesn't leave you with a positive outlook."

But many people refuse to give up. Jean Witzburger, runs a small, firm in Wheeling, W.Va., which contracts drivers out to other firms. The National Labor Relations Board is trying to make her reinstate a man she claims she never hired.

"They (the NLRB) came down here and told me I had to pay him back wages," she says. "I say I don't. I have never paid this man any salary. I complained to my senators but all I got from them is a bunch of ambiguous bull—"

"I'm waiting to go to court," she continues. "My attorney says I don't have much of a chance, but I'm determined to fight this."

Phyllis Anderson, a widow, owns and runs General Services Contractors, Inc. of Roscommon, Mich., which provides men for oil field maintenance. She says the Labor Department's manpower program is competing with her. The program, she says, has lured employees away from her company and then placed them with the same firm with which she has been doing business.

She complained to the SBA, which referred her complaint to the Labor Department, but thus far there has been no resolution of her problem.

Ex-Ration Boss Avers It Wouldn't Be Bad

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
ATLANTA (UPI) — If gasoline rationing is imposed, it will not be as bad on the economy or the nation's lifestyle as the American people have been led to believe, says a man who ran a World War II rationing program.

"Gasoline rationing will not paralyze our nation. It will not destroy our economy," said Ted M. Forbes Sr. "We have lived with gasoline rationing and we can do it again if necessity forces it upon us."

"Maybe it might even teach us to live in less pressure and tension and not to be in such a hurry all the time."

Forbes speaks from experience. He was executive secretary of the Georgia Cotton Manufacturers Association in December 1941. The Japanese had bombed Pearl Harbor and Gov. Eugene Talmadge appointed Forbes rationing administrator for the state.

Forbes, now 79 and living in retirement, says the success of a gas rationing program would depend a lot "on the type of leadership we have and the courage of that leadership."

"It could be done. There's no question about that in my mind," said Forbes, if the need for it is effectively explained. "People would adjust themselves to it if it was a necessity. We're in an economic war now with the rest of the world."

He believes there is an energy bind and that it is not flexible. "I do think it's serious and I think it is going to become more serious."

Forbes said he did not think gas rationing would free the United States from dependency on Arab oil. "But they want to sell us their oil," he said. "I think it (rationing) would bring them to their senses."

Forbes says he is disturbed "over the attitude of apprehension and hysteria which so many people exhibit when the subject of gasoline rationing is mentioned."

The news media, according to Forbes, exaggerates the impact of fuel rationing upon the way of life of Americans.

"It cannot be as bad nor as destructive as we are being led to believe," he said.

His own experience with rationing during World War II strengthened his faith in human nature, Forbes said.

"Of course people were inconvenienced. Our production and distribution systems were handicapped. But I soon found that for the sake of the well-being of our country, people would endure such hardships and deprivations as were demonstrably necessary, as long as they were convinced that all people were treated with fairness and equality without favor or discrimination."

Forbes recalled his work as rationing administrator, a job he held for nearly a year.

"The first thing we did was to set up a ration board in each county. They were made up of five to seven members, people who would be willing to serve for nothing," Forbes said.

The first thing rationed when the country went to war were automobile tires, followed quickly by gasoline, sugar, automobiles, coffee, and shoes, among other items.

Forbes said punch cards were first used in the gasoline rationing program but it quickly became apparent that wouldn't work and the switch was made to the A, B, and C-type coupons.

"There was a minimum of gasoline, five gallons a week I believe, available to everyone," he said. To get more than the basic ration, a person's work had to be in an essential field related to the war effort. "It depended on what work you were doing."

Forbes described some of the political pressures exerted on him in an effort to gain special favors for certain people and in about a year, the volunteer program was replaced by paid government workers and books of regulations.

Forbes quit. "As long as I could use common sense, I was willing to serve," he said. He joined the War Labor Board and served on it for 4½ years.

Who is better at responding to complaints, business or the government? Goodman says, "without any doubt, business. Business has an incentive. In government you are a monopoly. They don't worry about looking for customers."

"The general public unfortunately doesn't complain as much as they should," he says. "They think it's not worth my time. Nobody will help. Nobody will care."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose marginally in early trading today, reflecting some of the strength that sparked a late rally and left the market mixed Tuesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up .09 to 834.98 in the early going.

Two issues advanced for each on declining on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts attributed the increase in stock prices to bargain-hunting following the 24-point slide of the Dow Jones average Friday and Monday.

That slide, they said, was due to worries about inflation, the prospect of rising interest rates, and the possibility of widespread gasoline shortages this summer.

In early trading, Santa Fe International rose 1/4 to 20 3/4. General Signal was off 1/4 to 28. Citicorp gained 1/4 to 23 1/4 and Wells Fargo rose 1/4 to 28 1/4.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average rose 1.47 to 834.89.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 9-5 spread on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 32.72 million shares, compared to 30.48 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .04 to 55.79.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.27 to 175.66.

Smoker Voting Result Is Close

MIAMI (AP) — Dade County's "clean air ordinance" that would segregate smokers from nonsmokers in most public places appeared headed for defeat today with the smokers holding a 1,203-vote lead and needing less than a third of the absentee ballots to win.

But regardless of the outcome, elections officials say there may be a total recount before everyone is satisfied.

The unofficial final tabulation of Tuesday's voting was 93,871 in favor of the ordinance and 95,074 against — a 0.63 percent difference.

It was the third Florida referendum sparked by controversy in two years. In 1977, singer Anita Bryant successfully campaigned against repeal of a Dade County ordinance to prohibit discrimination against homosexuals. And last fall, residents statewide voted down casino gambling in Miami Beach.

On Tuesday, slightly more than 27 percent of Dade County's 702,008 registered voters turned out.

Still to be counted and certified today were 3,287 absentee ballots, said Jody Gluck, assistant superintendent of elections.

Proponents needed more than two-thirds of the absentees to turn defeat into victory. However, tradition was apparently against them.

"Absentee ballot do not generally have a history of overturning a ballot," said Ms. Gluck. She explained that among the absentee ballots are 170 described as "questionable." These must either be invalidated or accepted by the screening committee that will also tally the entire absentee vote.

If the absentees reduce the smoker's victory margin to less than one-half of 1 percent, a recount of all votes must be made.

"I'm not conceding anything at all," said 57-year-old Charles Freefield, a spokesman for the Group Against Smokers Pollution — GASP — that forced the election with 10,000 petition signatures.

Despite the results Tuesday, GASP claimed a moral victory over the Dade Voters for Free Choice, which received $850,000 in contributions from the tobacco industry. GASP reported $80,000 in cash gifts.

A similar referendum failed in California last year. In that election, tobacco interests contributed about $6 million.

"I think they (GASP) would have claimed a moral victory for anything," said Free Choice spokesman John Spire. "They almost served their purpose by getting in on the ballot to begin with."

The ordinance, if approved, would segregate smokers from nonsmokers in most public places except private homes, hotel rooms, pool halls and gambling parlors. Restaurants would have to divide seating space equally and waiting rooms and lobbies would be partitioned. Violators could be fined up to $500.

Rampants Fall To Eagles

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High's baseball team fell to its third straight defeat yesterday afternoon as Northeastern handed the Rampants a 5-1 loss.

Rose had seven hits in the game to six for the Eagles, but the Rampants could put two together in only one inning and left seven runners on base.

"We're not playing good," Rampant coach Ronald Vincent said simply. "I'm disappointed for the boys. These guys deserve a lot better than they're getting."

"I wish there was something we could do to turn things around. We just have to keep playing hard."

The team hasn't been able to put things together since it lost two starters in the Pitt-Greenville Tournament and has now lost four of five games since then.

Skip Topping made his second start on the mound for Rose, pitching the whole game and evening his record at 1-1. He struck out eight batters and only walked two, but all five Eagle runs were earned.

Northeastern used a pair of hurlers. Starter Kenneth Meekins pitched for six innings and was responsible for Rose's lone run, unearned. Eric McDaniels moved over from shortstop in the final inning and allowed the Rampants two hits before forcing the next three batters to hit into force plays. Meekins is now 4-3 on the year.

The loss left the Rose team at 12-5 overall and 6-5 in Division I. The Rampants still have a mathematical chance of coping the conference's second spot in the state playoffs, but it is unlikely they will enter post-season play.

The team is playing well defensively, making two double plays in the game and getting a good relay from left field to peg a runner at the plate. But the Rampants are lacking at the plate, where they can't get the hits to sustain a rally.

Rose scored first in yesterday's ballgame. The lone Rampant run came in the top of the fourth. With one away, Will Barrett doubled to center field and moved to third when Mike Williams reached on an error. He scored on Topping's sacrifice fly.

The Eagles scored a trio of runs in the bottom of the inning. Miles Brite led off with a walk, and after a strikeout, Bion Jolley sent him home with a ground rule double. Meekins aided his own effort by smashing a two-run homer to left that made it

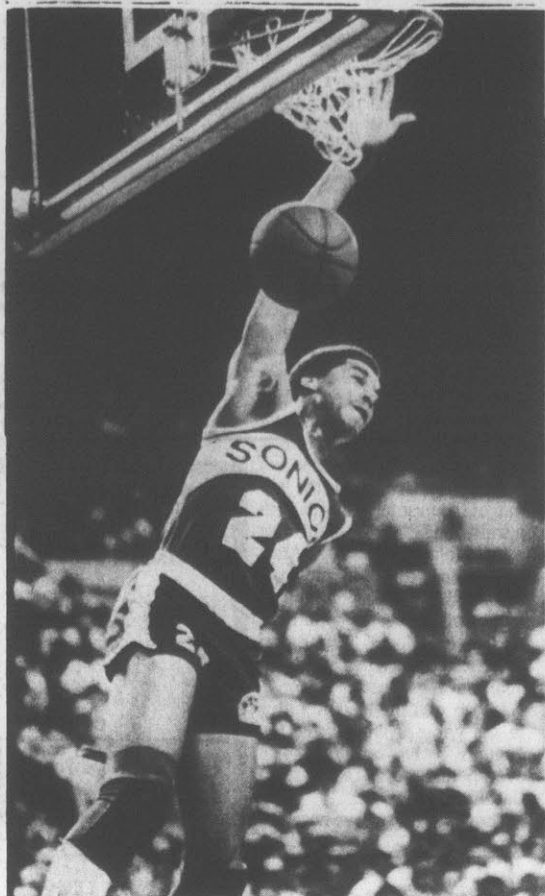

3-1. Joey Mattheis led off the fifth with a wind-aided double and made it to third, but was left there.

The Eagles rounded out their scoring in the sixth. Brite, McDaniels and Jolley got three straight infield hits. Meekins hit into a double play with Brite scoring and Jolley being thrown out at second. McDaniels came in on a wild pitch.

The Rampants began the seventh with hits by Mike Campbell and Mattheis, but the next two batters hit fielder's choices and the final out came on a line drive to third, ending the game.

Barrett was the leading Rose hitter with a pair, while McDaniels and Jolley each had two for Northeastern.

The Rampants host Beddingfield in another Division I encounter on Friday.

Cowens, White Hit By Erratic Ranger

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Kansas City Royals took a beating from the Texas Rangers Tuesday night — literally.

The Royals not only lost an 8-7 decision to the Rangers, but also lost two of their best players, Al Cowens and Frank White, when they were felled by pitches from erratic Texas starter Ed Farmer.

"I don't know what their pitching situation is, but the way he was throwing he should have been out of the ballgame," said White, whose right thumb was broken by a Farmer pitch. "I was lucky I got my hands up or he would have hit me in the face, too. They talk about knocking guys down, but after seeing what happened tonight, it isn't funny at all. It was frightening."

Cowens, taken off the field on a stretcher after Farmer broke his jaw with a pitch, was operated on at an Arlington, Texas hospital. He was placed on the disabled list for 21 days, and White for 15 days.

Farmer, starting in the major leagues for the first time in five years, also threw a wild pitch and in one inning walked three straight batters.

Jim Kern took over for Farmer after the Ranger starter uncorked a wild pitch in the fifth that let the Royals tie the game at 7-7, and hurried one-hit ball the rest of the way.

Twins 16, Blue Jays 6

Ken Landreaux drove in five runs and Roy Smalley and Bombo Rivera collected four RBI apiece as Minnesota stopped Toronto in a fight-filled game. The Twins, who have won 11 of their last 13 games, trailed 6-5 before scoring six runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh.

Landreaux capped a 4-for-5 performance with an inside-the-park home run, a solo shot, in the bottom of the seventh. He also had a two-run single and a two-run double.

Both benches cleared three times as a beanball war erupted in the game and four players were ejected.

Angels 10, Red Sox 2

Joe Rudi smashed his 10th major league grand slam home run and Carney Lansford added two homers as California routed Boston behind the seven-hit pitching of Chris Knapp.

"We were due to score some runs," said California Manager Jim Fregosi, whose Angels had lost nine of their last 13 games.

Brewers 9, Indians 5

Sixto Lezcano slammed a three-run homer to cap a seven-run Milwaukee fifth inning, kept alive by Bobby Bonds' error in right field, as the Brewers defeated Cleveland. Bonds' error, on a drive off the bat of Ben Oglivie, should have been the third out of the inning, but instead allowed two runs to score.

Orioles 8, A's 2

Eddie Murray, Lee May and Gary Roenicke hit consecutive sixth-inning home runs, leading Baltimore over Oakland. The Orioles, winning their 16th game in their last 18, also rapped four doubles and enabled Mike Flanagan to gain his fifth triumph against two losses.

Tigers 10, White Sox 8

Jerry Morales drove in three runs with a homer and a double, while Steve Kemp, Jason Thompson and Lance Parrish knocked in two runs each to lead Detroit past Chicago.

Yankees 5, Mariners 3

New York defeated Seattle for the first time in five meetings this year, rallying with four runs in the fifth inning — two of them on Willie Randolph's triple.

Phoenix Pulls Even In Series

By STEPHEN J. HATTLEY
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Rebounding is causing concern for the Seattle SuperSonics, who return home to find their play-off series against the Phoenix Suns tied at 2-2.

The SuperSonics, the defending National Basketball Association Western Conference champions, out-muscled the Suns in the first two games of the best-of-seven set, picking up 119-92 and 109-106 victories before hometown crowds.

However, the Suns closed the rebounding gap in Game 3 Sunday in Phoenix, and slipped past the Sonics, 119-104. Tuesday night, the Suns finally won the battle of the boards, 49-40, and beat the SuperSonics, 100-91, before a sellout crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

Game 5 is set for Friday in Seattle.

"We can't let that happen (get out-rebounded) and expect to win," said Seattle center Jack Sikma, who averaged 15.6 points a game during the regular season and 12.4 rebounds. "We need to control the boards. We're the big team and they're the quick team. We'll have to work harder and do a better job the next time on the boards."

The 6-foot-11 Sikma was held to five points and nine rebounds Tuesday night.

"You can't depend on your shots day in and day out," added guard Dennis Johnson, who had 21 points in the losing effort. "But the defense can remain constant, and rebounding."

However, Johnson promised the SuperSonics would "be all right when we get back to Seattle."

Sanderson One-Hits Giants

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Andre Dawson was playing a step or so too deep in center field and Rodney Scott was playing a shade too shallow at second base — which is why Scott Sanderson never had the chance to toy with the idea of a no-hitter.

"You're always going to regret a hit like that. But we were playing him right and he's a good hitter. You've got to give him all the credit," Sanderson said after Terry Whitfield punched a bat-handle single to short-center field in the first inning, the only hit off the Montreal right-hander.

Dawson gave the Expos the only hit they really needed, a fifth-inning single off Ed Halicki that broke a scoreless tie, then Larry Parrish sealed Tuesday night's 4-0 victory with a three-run homer off reliever Randy Moffitt.

In the rest of the National League, Cincinnati edged Chicago 8-7, St. Louis beat Houston 4-1, Atlanta defeated Pittsburgh 4-1, Philadelphia shaded San Diego 8-7 in 12 innings and Los Angeles nipped New York 3-2.

Reds 8, Cubs 7

Dave Concepcion hit his third homer of the season plus a double and single, driving in three Cincinnati runs and scoring three against the Cubs in cozy Wrigley Field. It was the Reds' sixth victory in seven games and enabled them to move within one-half game of first-place Houston in the West.

Cardinals 4, Astros 1

Keith Hernandez singled, Ted Simmons walked, then George Hendrick pounced a Ken Forsch pitch over the wall for St. Louis' tie-breaking homer against the sagging Astros. Pinch-hitter Dane Iorg's first major league homer accounted for the Cardinals' other run in the seventh inning. Forsch singled home Houston's lone run in the fifth. It was the Astros' fourth loss in five games but only their second loss in 10 games at home this year.

Braves 4, Pirates 1

"I threw strikes. That's the key to pitching," Eddie Solomon said after he shackled Pittsburgh on three hits to halt Atlanta's five-game skid. The Braves jumped on Rick Rhoden for three runs in the second inning, two on Darrel Chaney's double.

Solomon was nicked for the Pirates' run in the first inning on Omar Moreno's triple and Tim Lincecum's sacrifice fly.

Phillies 8, Padres 7

Pete Rose hit a two-run single in the sixth inning and a tie-breaking two-run double in the 12th to lead the Phils to their comeback victory over San Diego. Rose's double off John D'Acquisto was his third hit of the game and came after Rudy Meoli and Bake McBride walked and Larry Bowa singled. Meoli was thrown out at the plate trying to score on Bowa's hit.

Dodgers 3, Mets 2

Dusty Baker doubled off Dale Murray, took third on Gary Thomasson's single and came home on Joe Ferguson's tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning to give rookie Rick Sutcliffe and the Dodgers their victory over the Mets.

RBI singles by Ed Kranepool in the first inning and Lee Mazzilli in the third gave New York a 2-0 lead. The Dodgers scored a run in the bottom of the third when Ferguson walked and Dave Lopes tripled. They tied it three innings later on Ron Cey's RBI single.

Jaguars Romp

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's baseball team rolled over North Pitt to the tune of a 13-2 victory yesterday.

The Jaguars scored five runs in the first inning and added two in the third, two in the fourth and four in the sixth. North Pitt's runs both came in the second.

Greg Hardison led off the bottom of the first for the Jags with a walk and he moved to third on a pair of wild pitches. Allen Moore singled him in and stole second. Phillip Gordon walked and Lewis Yelverton got a base hit to score Moore. Tony Eason sacrificed Gordon home and Ted Johnson hit a three-run homer.

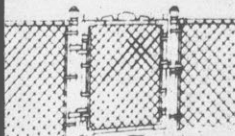

Moore was the leading hitter in the game, going 2-3 for the Jaguars, who are now 14-6 overall and 9-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The Panthers are now 9-9 overall. They will be at Greene Central Friday night, while the Chargers will be at North Lenoir Saturday afternoon.

Spurs Host Bullets

Win 11th

E.B. Aycock Junior High School continued unbeaten yesterday, taking a 10-0 romp over Southern Nash.

Jeff Porter tossed a two-hitter in getting the win. He walked three and struck out three along the way.

Roger Williams and Marshall Rand led the Aycock hitting with two each.

The Jaguars are now 11-0 and play at Nash Central today.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP)

— There's no textbook way, says San Antonio Coach Doug Moe, to neutralize the rebounding of powerful Washington center Wes Unseld. You've just got to slug it out with him — and hope for a few favorable decisions from the referees.

The 6-foot-7, 250-pound Unseld, whom Moe says is the strongest basketball player he's ever seen, has collected 40 points and 41 rebounds as the Spurs and Bullets split the first two games of the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference championship series.

The Spurs host Washington tonight for Game 3 and Moe says Unseld will again be a major concern.

"Unseld has been the key for them so far," Moe said Tuesday. "We just have to get as physical with him as we can. We have to be more determined to get to the ball and hit him more than he's hitting us."

"Unseld isn't going to trick you, he's just like a bulldozer. He just shoves people out of there," added Moe.

Rams Clinch Tie For ECC Championship

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's baseball team clinched at least a tie for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 4-1 no-hit victory over Southwest Edgecombe yesterday.

"I don't know if you could play much better than Wes did Sunday," Washington Coach Dick Motta said Tuesday.

Greene Central's Ken Johnson ran his record to 5-0 with a no-hitter in the contest. He struck out 13 and walked six along the way. The lone run against him came on errors.

The Rams got their first run in the first inning. Greg Holmes walked and was sacrificed up. He scored on Donald Shaw's single.

The Cougars came back with one in the second. Perry Edmondson walked and Jay Harrell grounded to the first baseman. The attempt to get Edmondson at second was overthrown, and the ball was then bobbled in the outfield, allowing Edmondson to score.

The Rams came back with one in the third, regaining the lead. Al Murray reached on an error and scored when Shaw tripled.

Another run crossed in the fifth. Jimbo Fulghum reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on an error on the play. Murray then singled him in.

The sixth saw the final run score. Walt Tyndall singled and Jeff Scott got a hit. Cohen Cox singled in Tyndall.

Shaw led the Greene Central hitting with two.

The Rams are now 12-1 in the Eastern Carolina Conference and need only one win to clinch the title. They are 14-6 overall and play host to North Pitt on Friday.

New Med School Role Assigned Dr. Monroe

ECU News Bureau
Dr. Edwin W. Monroe has been named associate dean for external affairs at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

As associate dean, he will coordinate the development of undergraduate and graduate medical education programs in Eastern North Carolina hospitals and health centers. He will act as liaison between the medical school and community medical education programs and will coordinate the school's activities sponsored in conjunction with the Eastern Area Health Education Center.

Monroe has directed the university's health affairs programs since 1968, when he was appointed as the first dean of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions and director of health affairs.

In 1971, Monroe was named

vice chancellor for health affairs, a position in which he guided the development of the School of Medicine as well as new programs in the allied health and nursing schools. These include the master of science and family nurse practitioner programs in the School of Nursing and nine professional undergraduate and three master's degree programs in the School of Allied Health and Social Professions.

As the leader of the university's rapidly expanding role in new health manpower program efforts, he organized the Eastern Area Health Education Center involving sixteen hospitals in the region. He has served as president of the board of directors since the center was established in 1974.

Monroe holds a faculty appointment as professor of medicine and participates in various teaching and patient care activities in the Department of Medicine.

$42,500 Of Perfect Pig

HUDSON, Iowa (AP) — His shiny, auburn hair is clean and bristly, the wide-set beady eyes are attentive and the handsome tail curves into one perfect curl. Glacier, a 7-month-old Grand Champion is one "perfect pig" say Iowa farmers Wilbert and Myron Meinhart and worth every cent of the $42,500 they paid for him.

"He's the price of a combine, but we can use him all year around," said Myron, who with his father, Wilbert, runs a hog farm southeast of Hudson.

Glacier has been their prize stud since February, when the father and son bought him for a price that knocked a $38,000 boar sold in 1973 right out of the Guinness Book of World Records.

Myron was responsible for the tenacious bidding at the Southwestern Duroc Congress in Wichita, Kan., that brought Glacier to Iowa. He stayed off two other hog breeders who were still in the running at the $38,000 mark. The second place boar went for $5,500.

Twice a day, rain or shine, a sow is singled out of the Meinharts' 65-sow Duroc herd and ushered to Glacier's pen. In a matter of 10 or 15 minutes, a litter of little Glaciers is on the way.

And the breeders are hoping that in each litter there will be at least a couple facsimiles of the sire.

How 50 States Rank In Gasoline Consumption

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is a list of monthly consumption of gasoline per vehicle for each state, in descending order.

This list, compiled by the Department of Energy, would be the basis for determining rationing allotments if the latest version of President Carter's standby plan for gasoline rationing is put in place.

Administration energy officials have said they would not consider rationing unless a fuel shortage on the order of 20 percent occurred.

Thus a 20 percent reduction in the below figures would give a rough approximation of the size of the monthly ration each vehicle in the nation might receive under such a rationing plan.

Actual figures might be somewhat smaller because up to 10 percent of the nation's gasoline would be set aside by federal and state governments for special purposes under the plan.

Colorado, 55.3 gallons; Pennsylvania, 54.0 gallons; Hawaii, 51.3 gallons; Rhode Island, 50.4 gallons; Montana, 47.4 gallons; North Dakota, 37.7 gallons.

Radar Ruling Is Spreading

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The effects of a Dade County, Fla., judge's ruling against radar speed detectors is beginning to spread.

In Fort Lauderdale, 30 miles to the north, Broward County Judge John J. King threw out speeding cases based on radar Tuesday after reading the decision by Dade County Judge Alfred Nesbitt.

"The presumption of accuracy that radar used to have is no longer there," King said, predicting ripples from the decision elsewhere in the nation.

Dade State Attorney Janet Reno, meanwhile, decided not to appeal Judge Nesbitt's ruling that radar speed measurement is not reliable enough to be the basis of speeding convictions.

On Monday, Nesbitt forbade using radar as evidence against 23 drivers represented by public defenders, plus 57 others who asked to join the case.

"You're going to find throughout the nation, though each judge is going to go on his own... that we are not bound by Nesbitt, but we can be persuaded by it," King said.

He said he plans his own hearing on radar's reliability in about three weeks and would throw out any speeding citations based solely on radar in the meantime.

Indict Ten For 'Cookie Caper'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Ten men identified as employees of a moving company have been indicted on charges stemming from what police call the "great Girl Scout cookie caper."

The suspects were accused of stealing about 300 cases of Girl Scout cookies from a warehouse. The cookies were valued at about $15 a case.

Frances Dalley, executive director of the Girl Scout Triad Council, said the theft caused little delay in delivery of cookies to customers and that the scouts did not suffer any loss because the warehouse ordered replacement cookies when the theft was discovered.

The defendants were Robert Dean Essick, Bruce Webster, Harrison Eugene Webster Jr., George Franklin Lea, Roosevelt Leggett, Vincent Adriel Sturdivent, Randall Davis, Jesse Vinson Jr., George Franklin Barrett and Bruce Alan Barfoot.

The indictments were returned Monday by the Guilford County grand jury.

How Tar Heels Voted In The House And Senate

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes April through May 2.

HOUSE
SHAH'S SHIPS — The House rejected, 88 for and 325 against, an amendment whose main purpose was to prevent the U.S. government from buying two destroyers ordered years ago by the Shah of Iran but not wanted by the new Iranian government. The amendment sought to eliminate $628 million in fiscal 1979 budget authority. Its failure may result in the Defense Department acquiring the destroyers from the Ingalls shipbuilding company at Pascagoula, Miss. The vote came during debate on the fiscal 1979 and 1980 budgets (H Con Res 107).

Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, a supporter, called this a vote on priorities because symbolically it meant "we either cut the money for food stamps (or) for two destroyers, outdated, outmoded, ordered by another government than ours."

Rep. Charles Dougherty, R-Pa., an opponent, said the Navy had testified that the ships "were not inadequate, that they were advanced destroyers, something that the U.S. Navy could use."

Members voting "nay" favored budget authority to acquire the destroyers for the U.S. Navy.

Rep. W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Rose, D-7, did not vote.

DEFENSE BUDGET — The House rejected, 188 for and 209 against, an amendment in favor of higher defense spending. The amendment sought to increase fiscal 1980 budget authority for the military by about $2.6 billion over the $135.2 billion ceiling urged by the House Budget Committee. The vote came during debate on H Con Res 107 (see vote above).

Rep. Charles H. Wilson (d-Claif.), the sponsor, said his amendment is necessary because "we need a sustained period of real growth if the Soviets are not to achieve overwhelming superiority."

No member spoke against the amendment. Opponents generally favored the Budget Committee ceiling of $135.2 billion or a lower figure. Members voting "yea" favored higher defense spending.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Hefner, Martin and Gudger voted "yea."

Preyer and Broyhill voted "nay."

Rose did not vote.
URBAN v. RURAL — The House voted, 212 for and 198 against, to eliminate budget authority for a program to fund nel $250 million to some 1,200 cities and counties having unemployment rates of at least 6.5 per cent. Later, the House reversed itself and okayed the authority. However, both votes (occurring during debate on H Con Res 107; see above votes), were largely symbolic because legislation that would implement the "counter-cyclical aid" program appears to be permanently stuck in a committee pigeonhole.

Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, who favored eliminating the budget authority, said the program was "an effort to appease some of the urban interests" and that of the $250 million "very little, if any, would ever reach the people it was intended to help."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., an opponent of the cut, said that "for a number of cities in this nation, including my home city of New York, these funds are essential to insure the city would not have to make dire sacrifices in services to citizens."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to the counter-cyclical aid program.

Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Whitley voted "nay."

Rose did not vote.

SENATE

AIRCRAFT NOISE — The Senate rejected, 33 for and 57 against, an amendment to deny the Secretary of Transportation authority to waive certain deadlines for complying with federal airline-noise standards. This vote left unchanged language that allows the waivers to be granted. One effect of the vote is that commercial airlines in some instances will meet noise standards by buying new aircraft at some later date rather than by retrofitting existing craft at an earlier date. The amendment was offered to S413, later passed, which dealt with airport safety and aircraft noise levels.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, a supporter, said the waivers "would allow the airlines to avoid the 1981, 1983 and 1985 deadlines for fleet-quieting currently mandated by the Federal Aviation Administration's aircraft noise regulation."

Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., an opponent, said the waiver language "does not 'gut' (the noise regulations) or allow non-compliance through some contractual trickery. It seeks only to allow a rational alternative to retrofitting that portion of the fleet that can be replaced."

Senators voting "yea" were opposed to granting the waivers.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

DEPT. OF EDUCATION — On a vote of 72 for and 21 against, the Senate passed a bill to create a Cabinet-level Department of Education. The U.S. Office of Education and a score of other education agencies and programs throughout the government would comprise the new department. The Senate bill (S 240) allows the department about 17,000 employees and an annual budget of $14.3 billion. The new department is a keystone of President Carter's government reorganization plan.

Supporters said that the consolidation of most federal education functions under a Secretary of Education will curtail bureaucracy and improve the delivery of services to the public.

Opponents said the new department would itself become a bureaucracy and would increase federal control over local and state education.

Supporters favored the new Department of Education.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

OUTDOOR LIGHTS — The Senate rejected, 24 for and 70 against, legislation (S Res 123) to give the President standby authority to restrict the use of electricity in advertising lighting. The Department of Energy estimates that if the authority were utilized it would save 4,400 barrels of oil daily, about .03 per cent of current petroleum consumption. The House had not yet taken up a companion resolution.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., a supporter, said: "I hope that by passing this measure we will double the emphasis to the American people as to the seriousness of the (energy) crisis, that it is not manufactured..."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said that "of all the users of energy in this country, the one industry that voluntarily has done an admirable job is the outdoor advertising industry."

Senators voting "yea" wanted the President to have the stand-by authority.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

Sulfur Deficiency Said On The Rise

RALEIGH — The frequency of sulfur deficiency is on the upswing in North Carolina soils, especially in the sandy textured soils of the Coastal Plains.

According to Dr. Ray Tucker, plant agronomist of the N. C. Department of Agriculture, several factors have attributed to the increased frequency of sulfur-deficient and sulfur-marginal soils.

These factors include the following: increased use of high analysis fertilizers, such as ammonium nitrate and triple super phosphate, which include little or no sulfur; suspension and liquid fertilizers minus sulfur; heavier NPK fertilizer rates which increase crop yields resulting in greater crop needs for the nutrient; more stringent restrictions on sulfur emissions from industry which reduce the sulfur content in rainfall; heavy crop removal with little or no crop residue being returned to the soil; leaching of sulfur below the root zone of plants; and decreased use of sulphur containing insecticides and fungicides.

The visible signs of sulfur deficiency resemble those of nitrogen deficiency — a general uniform chlorosis, which gives the plant a yellowish cast. However, plants lacking sulfur show this condition first in the younger leaves.

"Plant tissue analysis and soil tests are the most accurate and practical means of determining the status of sulfur for a crop," said Tucker. "Top and subsoil samples should be taken. Chemical tests of both plant and soils should be made immediately after the symptoms appear. Routine monitoring would be appropriate if past crops have indicated sulfur may be marginal or deficient."

The Agronomic Division, NCDA, analyzes plant and soil samples. Information about these services can be obtained from county extension offices or by calling 733-2656 in Raleigh. There is a $3 fee for plant tissue analysis, with no charge for the soil tests.

Reading Skills Are Workshop Topic

ECU News Bureau
Factors which affect reading ease were the subject of a workshop conducted for the International Reading Association in Atlanta by Drs. Patricia Terrell and Dorothy Muller of the East Carolina University School of Education.

Working with them was Noel Thomas Manning, literature editor for the Free Will Baptist Press Foundation, Inc., Ayden, and a teacher of creative writing and music at Pitt Technical Institute.

The workshop was designed to help publishers and educators recognize factors which influence readability, at the elementary and high school levels, with emphasis upon appropriate selection of textbooks for classroom teaching.

The workshop was part of the International Reading Association's annual convention, an event which drew 20,000 publishers, editors, educators, administrators and reading specialists from all parts of the U.S. and several other nations.

Contestant In Charm Pageant

Miss Elizabeth J. Sendel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Sendel of Cary, has been selected as a finalist in the Miss North Carolina Charm Pageant July 19-21 at Meredith College in Raleigh. She will be competing with contestants across the state in the Miss division.

U.S. Inflation Forecast Hiked

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as the Carter administration raises its inflation forecast to at least 8.5 percent, some private economists are warning that price boosts for such necessities as food, energy and housing will far exceed that rate.

Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal admitted Tuesday that the administration had "screwed up" by predicting only a 7.4 percent inflation rate for 1979.

"I would be surprised if we're below 8 1/2 percent," he told a Senate appropriations subcommittee.

Barry Bosworth, the director of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability, later agreed with Blumenthal's prediction.

At a dinner of the Society of American Business and Economic Writers, he said inflation now is "absolutely inconsistent with forecasts last October."

The revised prediction threatens to toughen labor's already hard stand against President Carter's 7 percent wage guideline, a COWPS spokesman acknowledged.

The United Rubber Workers union is seeking a package far in excess of the president's ceiling and the United Auto Workers union has warned the administration not to interfere in its upcoming negotiations.

"It doesn't make a more happy situation with labor," said spokesman Joe Carter of the wage and price council. "We recognize that it's a very difficult situation labor leaders are up against."

Even before the new prediction, the AFL-CIO's executive council, meeting here, blasted the president's anti-inflation program as "an absolute flop" that penalizes workers and urged that it be scrapped.

Meanwhile, economists at Data Resources Inc., of Cambridge, Mass., said energy prices are expected to increase at an annual 15.5 percent rate. Domestic crude oil should rise 20 percent in price, said Bob Gough, a senior economist at the company headed by Otto Eckstein, a former member of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Gough said the median price of a new single-family home this year will be about $63,500, which would represent a 13.5 percent increase over last year. Food prices, he said, are likely to rise 9 percent to 12 percent.

PRISON VISITORS — Iranians wait in line outside Qasr prison in Tehran, in the hope of seeing relatives held by the revolutionary government. The prison was notorious during the Shah's regime for torture and incarceration of thousands of political prisoners.

It is now said to hold up to 4,000 inmates. The revolutionary courts have been sentencing an average of one or two people a day to death in recent weeks, however 21 men were sent to die before firing squads in Tehran Tuesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Revenue Sharing Program To Be Topic Of Public Hearing

The city has invited citizens interested in participating in the 1979-80 revenue sharing program here to attend a proposed use hearing on the appropriation of revenue sharing funds.

The hearing will be conducted by City Manager Ed Wyatt and is scheduled for 8 p.m. on Monday, May 14 in the Council chambers at city hall.

Wyatt said the two major objectives of the hearing are to provide citizens with information on the nature and purpose of revenue sharing and to give citizens an opportunity to present their suggestions on the use of the funds first hand.

General revenue sharing, he explained, is a federal program, first enacted in 1972, under which federal funds are distributed to state and local governments. Revenue sharing funds may be used, obligated, or appropriated for any purpose for which a recipient government may spend its own funds.

Wyatt pointed out that during the current fiscal year, revenue sharing funds were used for resurfacing approximately three miles of city streets and for maintenance and operating expenses of the city's public transportation system, Recreation and Parks Department, and the Sheppard Memorial Library.

As a participating city in the program, Greenville expects to receive the following revenues in the 1979-80 fiscal year: $588,010 in allocation payments; $1,500 interest on investments; and a fund balance of $10,000; for a total of $599,510.

The city manager said that local citizens are urged to attend the hearing at which time they will be given the opportunity to provide written and oral comments on the possible use of the revenue sharing funds.

Bake Sale Plan Is Approved

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of a request by the Gethesemane P. H. Woman's Auxiliary for permission to conduct a bake sale at the K-Mart and the Greenville Square Shopping Centers to raise money for the church building fund on May 12.

Wyatt said the request was submitted by Ms. Jeanette Williams of Rt. 3, Greenville.

ALUMNI NOTICE

All alumni of Eppes High School classes 1942-49 who plan to participate in the reunion to be held in Greenville July 6-8 are asked to call Ms. Marion Wilkes, 752-0862, or Imogene Dupree, 752-2655, as soon as possible.

Man Draws 15 Years For Uranium Extortion

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — David Learned Dale, a 39-year-old Wilmington man who admitted he took two cans of uranium from a nuclear manufacturing plant and demanded $100,000, was sentenced Tuesday in U.S. District Court to 15 years in prison.

Judge John D. Larkin Jr. recommended that Dale be sent to a federal prison at Butner to serve the sentence. Dale could have been sentenced to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000.

Dale was employed by a subcontractor at the General Electric plant in Wilmington when the two containers of low-grade uranium were stolen from the plant in January.

Dale testified at a sentencing hearing Tuesday that he was disturbed because his job was about to end at the time of the theft and that he was sorry for the problems he caused.

"I can't excuse what happened," Dale said. "I know it was wrong. I'll take whatever punishment the court gives me."

A plant official testified that the extortion plot cost the company $1 million. He said the uranium was valued at $50,000 and that the plant had to be closed for two days while employees searched for the missing uranium.

Dale testified Monday that he entered the plant by showing a guard an expired Florida driver's license. He said he took the uranium on Friday and wrote the extortion letter on Sunday.

The FBI said the Nuclear Regulatory Commission was notified on Jan. 29 that Randall J. Alkema, manager of the plant, had received a vial of the missing uranium and a threatening letter.

FBI Agent John Willis testified that the letter said an unidentified group had 66 kilograms of uranium that would be distributed to nuclear-energy foes and politicians, including President Carter, unless Alkema paid $100,000.

Dale was arrested after a suspicious call to Alkema's home was traced to the home of Stephen Dale, the defendant's brother. The uranium was recovered in a field near the plant.

Renovation Work OK'd

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board of Commissioners voted Tuesday for renovations to proceed with the Grifton Police Department, with money to be included in the 1979-80 budget to cover remaining expenses.

The board agreed for the town tennis courts to be constructed on the west side of the town Civic Center, as stated on the grant application. Low bids were also accepted Tuesday for the tennis court construction.

A public hearing was set for Monday, May 14, 7:30 p.m., for the town house numbering system and the location of the tennis courts.

The board approved the moving of two hour parking from the intersection of Queen and Church Streets to the intersection of Queen and Highland Ave. The parking will be from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Approval was given for Edward Mooring's contract to continue duties as accountant for the 1979-80 fiscal year. The board also approved the purchase of a communications radio for the Grifton Fire Department.

Quit Over Ticketing

BENSON, N.C. (AP) — Five of Benson's eight police officers have resigned after a dispute over traffic tickets with Police Chief Lyndell Nordan, two former officers said Tuesday.

Nordan confirmed Tuesday that he attended an April 20 meeting with the force in which some officers claimed they had been ordered by Nordan to ask for voluntary dismissal in court of some traffic tickets.

Nordan denied he had ordered the officers to dismiss the tickets. He said he advised the officers to take a voluntary dismissal if they saw thought the case warranted the action.

A police officer can voluntarily request in court that the prosecuting attorney dismiss traffic citations that the officer has issued.

Both Nordan and Town Administrator Edison E. Temple, who also attended the meeting, said they did not think the resignations stemmed from the traffic-ticket controversy.

Temple said "one or two of the officers may have mentioned" the ticket controversy as a problem they had with the chief.

But two officers who asked not to be identified said in telephone interviews that they had told Temple that the five officers would resign because of Nordan's alleged order.

The officers said the tickets Nordan allegedly ordered dismissed involved prominent Johnston County citizens.

Town officials were expected to meet in closed session Tuesday night with Nordan and some of the officers who have resigned to discuss the reasons for their resignations

Mushroom Crop Needs His Compost

By ROBERT MACKAY
JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) —
Gorman O'Reilly, like most midwestern grain farmers, used to struggle to make an income in the winter months so he could feed his family and pay his field hands.
Then he discovered mushrooms.
O'Reilly now supplies a product to about a dozen mushroom growers in northeast Illinois that, in turn, provides many Chicago area restaurants and stores with fresh mushrooms and O'Reilly with a substantial new year-round income.

O'Reilly makes compost — a mixture of manure, hay and other ingredients — which is needed to grow mushrooms. He produces about 1,000 cubic yards of compost a month and sells it to growers at $20 a yard.

"This is a good sideline for us," said O'Reilly, who grows corn and soybeans on about 2,500 acres from spring to fall. "It fills in our year."

The compost processing business has done so well, he said, it has made the difference for him when he and other farmers have lost crops in recent years to drought and early frost.

Before he got into compost, O'Reilly, who has farmed most of his 51 years, worked in factories, kept livestock and sold hay — anything to bring in an income until spring planting. He found factory work boring and livestock proved to be more trouble than the animals were worth.

Campbell Soup Co. approached O'Reilly about eight years ago and began buying his hay for use at its compost processing plant and mushroom farm in West Chicago. Three years ago, Campbell was forced to move its compost processing plant to Michigan because the owner of a nearby outdoor theater complained about the odor.

"When Campbell Soups moved to Michigan, private growers heard of us and approached us about selling them compost," O'Reilly said. "They told me to figure out a price so I could make a profit and they'd buy it."

The 12 private mushroom growers in the Chicago area are family-sized operations, O'Reilly said, and they turned to him because they are located in residential areas where processing of compost would offend their neighbors' noses.

He thought about starting a mushroom farm himself but decided against it.

"It takes money and brains, that's why we don't do it," said O'Reilly, who has built a small family farm into one of the largest farming operations in northern Illinois.

"It takes a perfectionist to do it. The buildings (where the mushrooms are grown) have to be kept at 68 degrees at all times. It's really a full-time job."

O'Reilly began his compost operation with horse manure from Chicago area race tracks. The tracks, which used to pay people to haul it away, now sell manure because of the demand for it by mushroom growers.

But O'Reilly has not been able to buy horse manure since December because Campbell and another major mushroom grower, Ralston Purina Co., are buying it at inflated prices. So O'Reilly has turned to a synthetic compost, using the nitrogen in soybean meal to replace the nitrogen in manure.

"We're really in the experimental stage with the synthetic formula," said Reilly, who with three or four full-time helpers take about two weeks to make one batch of compost.

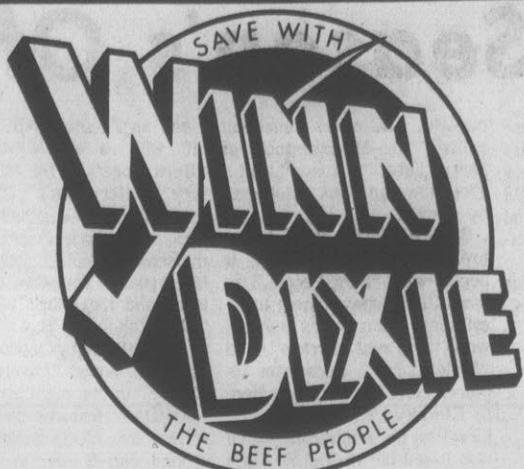

First, they mix together ground corn cobs, soybean meal, gypsum and potash, frequently water it and turn it every other day for a week. Then the mixture is blended with hay and formed into "ricks," bundles about 7 feet high and 4 feet wide.

Large machines are used to turn the ricks occasionally, allowing air, water and nutrients inside and permitting micro-organisms to grow. The ricks sit on a large concrete slab, about half the size of a football field, and steam pours out of them.

"That stuff gets hot enough in the middle to burn your hand," O'Reilly said.

When the ricks reach a 72 percent moisture level, they are ready for marketing. Because of the high moisture level, O'Reilly said, a grower will buy the compost by volume instead of weight.

Private mushroom farmers use about 200-300 yards a month, said O'Reilly.

NBC Stands By Many Of Last Season's Offerings

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC, it is no secret, is in trouble. The network is coming off its worst television season in history and last week announced a fall schedule comprised largely of the low-rated programs that made the current season an NBC disaster. Of the top 20 programs in once recent week, ABC had 11,

CBS had eight. "CHiPs," at No. 20, was the only NBC program that made the list. So, it came as something of a surprise when NBC announced a schedule that included only six new series — as few new shows as planned by the No. 1 network, ABC. It doesn't seem to make sense to carry over failed programs to a fresh new year. NBC may show gains in the new season, but it seems very unlikely that the network will climb out of third place. NBC's best hope lies in the 1980-81 season, which begins with the Moscow Olympics. In the meantime, the 1979-80 NBC lineup:

SUNDAY begins nicely enough, with the durable "Wonderful World of Disney" starting things. Things sour after that. NBC offers "The Big Event," a variable, against ABC's popular "Mork and Mindy" and a strong lineup of CBS sitcoms. MONDAY is less blue for

NBC because of "Little House on the Prairie," but movies come after that and will likely lose the battle against a CBS lineup featuring "M-A-S-H" and ABC's "Monday Night Football." TUESDAY is a lost cause for NBC. Against "Happy Days" on ABC, NBC offers something called "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo," a sitcom about a goofy lawman. This is followed by movies. WEDNESDAY may be a breakthrough night for NBC. It begins with "Real People," an innovative, funny human interest show. Then comes comedy, with "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Hello Larry," midseason replacements. Then "From Here to Eternity: The War Years," based on the miniseries, which was based on the James Jones book. THURSDAY isn't likely to be as happy an evening for NBC as Wednesday, but it's not as bleak as Tuesday. NBC starts off with a sci-fi beginner, "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century." After "Buck" NBC offers "Quincy," a genuine success, and "Kate Columbo," a midseason replacement that fared poorly. Thursday, though, is a solid night for CBS, with "The Waltons," "Hawaii Five-0" and "Barnaby Jones," and ABC has moved "Laverne and Shirley" to this night. FRIDAY features two new series for NBC, sandwiched around Jim Garner and "The Rockford Files." "Shirley," about a single New York parent (Shirley Jones) moving her three kids west, and "The Force," a cop show, are the newcomers. This lineup is going against "Fantasy Island" and a movie on ABC and "The Incredible Hulk" and "Dallas" on CBS. SATURDAY may be NBC's strongest night, with "CHiPs," starting things off. It's followed by "BJ and the Bear," a mid-season newcomer that's held its own, and "The Man Called Sloane," a new series about a secret agent.

Opening lead: King of ♣.

We are constantly urged to conserve. This trend toward frugality should leave its mark in bridge circles, where for many years the amount of waste has been prodigious. It is impossible to estimate the number of tricks that are lost by the promiscuous play of honor cards. Through sheer mental laziness, many of us are apt to fall into the same type of error committed by South in this hand.

We should dwell for a moment on the auction. With 18 points in high cards and good intermediates, North's hand was too strong for a one no trump opening bid, so he elected to open with one diamond and rebid two no trump. South showed a hand with a long spade suit as its main feature, and North opted for the suit game rather than no trump.

The king of clubs was opened and declarer won the ace in dummy. He reached for the queen of spades in a reflex motion, and with that one slight gesture he tossed his game out of the window. The queen of spades was covered by the king and won by the ace. But because trumps split 4-1, West's line of spades was now promoted to a winner, so the defenders scored two club tricks and a heart, in addition to a trump, to defeat the contract.

A moment's thought would have revealed that nothing could be gained by leading the queen of trumps at trick two. The two should have been led and, if East plays low, the ten is finessed. There are plenty of entries to dummy so that, if the finesse wins, declarer can get back to the table to repeat the finesse.

If East had two or three spades, the same result will be obtained either way. But if East happens to have the bare king of spades, as was the case here, leading the queen at trick two will cost dearly.

It is rarely wise to use your high cards before you have first made your opponents play to the trick.

More Albums Of Isaac Stern Music Released

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International
Isaac Stern must be the busiest man in classical musicdom.

There are at least seven new albums featuring this great violinist on familiar compositions, and otherwise.

One of the better albums is "Brahms Violin Concerto in D Major" (Columbia M35146) which Stern recorded with Zubin Mehta and the New York Philharmonic. Stern and Mehta, who is in his first season with the Philharmonic, hit it off nicely from the very beginning.

And for Mozart devotees, Stern teams with flutist JeanPierre Rampal on "The Two Flute Concertos" (RCA ARL13084). Rampal is a formidable musician and a suitable soloist for Stern, who on this album is on the podium as conductor of the Jerusalem Music Center Chamber Orchestra.

Stern again is soloist on violin on Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. 4 in D Major and Violin Concerto No. 2 in D Major" (Columbia M35111) and on "Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto Meditation" (Columbia M35126) with Mstislav Rostropovich and the National Symphony Orchestra.

Stern also may be heard on two unfamiliar but compelling works. One of them, George Rochberg's "Violin Concerto" (Columbia M35149) was commissioned for Stern by William Steinberg's Pittsburgh Symphony and the other, Krzysztof Penderecki's "Violin Concerto" (Columbia M35150), is an excellent recording of a work which this Polish composer wrote especially for Stern. Penderecki's work is a departure from the dissonance and atonality which generally characterizes modern classical composition.

Happy Coincidence — It has been some time since a fine complete recording of Smetana's "Ma Vlast" has been available. Now we suddenly have two — one translated as "My Fatherland" (Angel SB387) with Paavo Berglund conducting the Dresden State Orchestra, and the other translated as "My Country" (RCA CRL2-3242) with Wolfgang Sawallisch conducting the Orchestre de la Suisse Romande. Take your choice and you can't lose as

Federal Proposals For Outer Banks Meet Critics

Move To Save Old Lighthouse

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State and local officials are taking separate action to save the Cape Lookout Lighthouse in Carteret County from erosion that threatens to topple it into the ocean with a few years.

State officials with the Cultural Resources Department and Natural Resources and Community Development Department have joined others in reviewing a document that says the lighthouse should be saved for historical reasons.

In Carteret County, the board of commissioners voted Monday to take their appeal to Gov. Jim Hunt, U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., and other state and federal officials.

"We feel that now we have to take our case directly to them so they will know how strongly we feel about saving that lighthouse," said board chairman Nathan Garner of Beaufort Tuesday.

The National Park Service announced last month that it would not take any steps to battle the continuing erosion that threatens the structure. The service said plans for holding back erosion were too expensive.

"The document from the National Park Service concerning what they would do at the Cape Lookout Lighthouse is being reviewed at several state agencies, including the commission, the Division of Archives and the Natural Resources Department," said Brent D. Glass, a deputy preservation officer for the state Historical Commission. "All the various agencies involved are trying to get one statement together on how and why the lighthouse should be saved and give it to the governor for his approval," he added.

The statement would then go to the park service for consideration.

$30,281 In ECU Grants

ECU News Bureau
A total of $30,281 in outside funding was awarded three research and service projects at East Carolina University during April.

Dr. Garrett Hume of the ECU School of Allied Health and Social Professions received the largest grant, totaling $26,000, to support the development of a training program which involves further training of speech and hearing professionals through actual service.

The funds originate from the U.S. Office of Education. Other grants were a $3,281 award to Dr. Lynis Dohm of the ECU School of Medicine from the National Institutes of Health for Dohm's research of muscle-protein metabolism and a $1,000 award from the Human Development Agency-Region P to Allen Churchill of the ECU School of Home Economics, director of ECU's CDA Training Program.

Through the Division of Continuing Education, Churchill administers ECU's Child Development Associate training program, which recognizes the special skills and achievement of persons who work with young children through opportunities for further learning and awarding of the CDA credential.

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Federal proposals to restrict development to protect the Outer Banks were blasted at a public hearing Tuesday night, receiving labels from idiotic to Communist.

The hearing was the second of three the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is holding on the proposals for preventing overdevelopment in the region.

The federal government's five proposals range from taking no action to buying all the land from Virginia's False Cape State Park to the Dare County line in North Carolina.

But J. B. Jackson of Virginia's Commission on Environmental Quality scuttled any proposal involving False Cape State Park.

He told the panel that "the Commonwealth of Virginia is not willing to negotiate on any basis you have described to sell any part of the False Cape State Park."

Parker Chessen, chairman of the North Carolina Coastal Research Commission, read a letter from North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt in which Hunt accused the service of "ignoring North Carolina and its programs" when it made its preliminary proposals.

"Your department has not respected my commitment and that of President Carter for a strong partnership on any decision concerning North Carolina," Hunt said.

Chessen said federal law requires that any federal action be "coordinated to the maximum possible extent with state programs. But that phrase 'maximum possible extent' is a loophole and I expect we will find out how big the loophole is."

Baxter Williams, chairman of the Currituck County Commission, said the commission was "unanimously opposed to any action by Fish and Wildlife on the Currituck County Outer Banks."

Sandra Carlin, a property owner on the Outer Banks, said, "It seems to me that after hearing all these eminent speakers, you gentlemen should just say you made a mistake and leave."

"But I doubt that you will leave and I doubt that you will admit making a mistake with this idiotic proposal."

Another speaker said the service was "dedicated to protecting the land for the people by removing the people from the land."

"To just come in and take out land is something that is only supposed to happen in Communist country, not in America."

Culture Now Emphasized In Singapore

By KENNETH L. WHITING
SINGAPORE (AP) — After years of concentrating on the country's economic well-being, officials in Singapore are pushing culture.

"I think the atmosphere is right and this view is shared by cabinet ministers, politicians and others outside, that we should now go ahead into other non-economic areas to help Singapore develop the total man," said Ong Teng Cheong, minister of communications and acting culture minister.

Ong defined this total human as the citizen whose basic needs have been satisfied, who is professionally or technically competent, who shows sufficient public consciousness and concern and who is able to appreciate the fine arts.

An island with no natural resources, Singapore was controlled by Britain until 1963, when it gained independence as part of the Malaysian Federation. It was ousted from the federation in 1965 with poor economic prospects for its 2.3 million people. The Chicago-size city-state prospered, however, and now boasts a per capita annual income of $5,317 (U.S. $2,450), second only to Japan in Asia.

Culture got little attention in the past because government planners had to deal with more urgent matters such as economic growth and social services, Ong said.

This causes some observers to acknowledge Singapore's prosperity, but give it low marks as a cultural center.

Dr. Nalla Tan, a University of Singapore professor who also writes a newspaper column, described some of the side effects of success "like the obsession with money, materialism and a compulsive acquisitive trait."

"Money is necessary and important, but when it becomes an obsessional objective, then it can be sad and with very little reservation we can say that we are a sad society."

Ong said a mass approach was planned, involving "the aesthetics of life as manifested by the arts, but also political and social realities, as well as the physical creations of man which, in turn, mold man's thought and attitude."

"So we believe that to develop a suitable culture, we must get the whole population to participate."

The Ministry of Culture, which is also responsible for publicizing the country, has been beefed up, and $2.17 million (U.S. $1 million) has been budgeted for music, drama, dancing and literary activities.

The country's first drama festival was held last year when groups from the four official language streams — Chinese, English, Malay and Tamil — staged 15 performances. An arts festival in December is scheduled as an annual event.

A Cultural Foundation has been organized as "spiritual torch" for the campaign, Ong said. It also coordinates donations.

The Ministry of Culture encourages schoolchildren to write simple poetry, the best of which may be set to music written by Singaporeans.

Parliament has been told that a cultural center is on the drawing boards. It will probably include a concert hall, theaters, art galleries and practice studios. Existing auditoriums are to be renovated in the meantime.

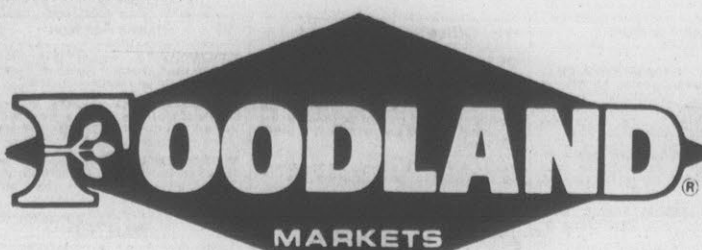

The first full-time national symphony made its debut in January. It was established by a private firm headed by Attorney General Tan Boon Teik. Almost half of its musicians are foreigners under contract until enough local performers can be trained to adequate standards.

Shad Festival In 1980 Scheduled

GRIFTON — The third weekend of April, 1980, was set as the date for the next Grifton Shad Festival during a recent Shad Festival evaluation meeting. Rides and softball will begin April 14, with major events to be held April 18-20.

A highlight of the 1980 event will be a Shad Run, a running contest to coincide with the annual migration of fish up Contentnea Creek. George Sugg, who made the suggestion, offered to help coordinate the new event for the coming festival.

Tommy Sugg, 1979 Festival Chairman, agreed to serve in the same position for 1980, with Joan Gaddy offering the services of the Grifton Jayettes in coordinating the Shad Queen Pageant.

Trash Fish Cheap, But Good Eating

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Thelma Snyder served trash fish recently at a dinner party. Her guests loved it — even after they were told they'd eaten shark.

Her family eats shark a lot and likes it, Mrs. Snyder said, offering samples of dogfish (sand shark) quiche and barbecued mako chunks to passersby at a sidewalk cook-out in front of a New York City fish market.

"Trash fish" refers to the habit many fishermen have of throwing back species such as mako, dogfish, skate, whiting, ling, cusk, conger eel and hake because demand is small.

Mrs. Snyder, a Cornell University extension home economist, said her children, ages 6 and 9, preferred dogfish to flounder when she deep-fried it in imitation of a fast food chain.

The barbecue was staged by Cornell's cooperative extension service to kick off a state-wide campaign promoting low-priced, under-utilized fish.

Comparable species are available regionally in the United States.

Pacific hake, members of the whiting family, are beginning to sell on the West Coast, says Lee Weddig, executive vice president of the Washington-based National Fisheries Institute.

Midwesterners in the Wisconsin area buy monkfish, Weddig said. "They call it poor man's lobster because they boil it and the texture is something like lobster," he added.

Mullet and croakers are finding a growing market in the Gulf of Mexico area, he said.

If consumers ask their local markets to supply such fish, said Wanda Mead, another extension home economist, their prices might rise but would still be less than such popular species as sole, salmon and swordfish.

Mako steaks look and taste much like swordfish. They were $1.89 per pound that day, compared with $5.49 a pound for swordfish steaks.

During the 2½-hour barbecue, one woman arrived in a chauffeur-driven limousine to buy ling for $1.10 a pound. She said she shopped at the market several times a week.

Constance Sturz, another regular customer, likes mako and mullet.

"I'm from Massachusetts, and I was brought up in New England," Mrs. Sturz said. "We always ate mako shark when swordfish was unavailable or when the price was high. When it's prepared properly, you can't tell the difference."

"When I was a kid in the South in the winter, we ate smoked mullet," she said, but tourists shunned it as a scavenger.

"It's super high in protein and reasonably priced," she said of the mako. "It's the best value in the store."

Most passersby sampling the free food were blase when told what they'd just eaten.

"Shark? Yeah?" said William Munoc, a merchant seaman. "We're getting even," he added, grinning. "It's good. I like it."

Shopkeeper Mike De Martino was full of suggestions for other alternatives to such high-priced items as king salmon steaks, $6.49 a pound, and flounder filets, $4.49 a pound.

Try skate wings at $1.10 a pound, he said. To the French, they are a delicacy called raie. Some of New York's top French restaurants serve poached raie with browned butter and pickled capers. The extension people recommend oven-frying in cracker crumb coating.

Skate are about 25 percent waste, De Martino said. He estimated the true cost of the edible wings at about $1.50 a pound. Not bad for a fish so similar to scallops in flavor and texture that unscrupulous dealers used to punch out rounds with biscuit hole cutters and pass them off as the expensive shellfish.

WOMEN'S STUDIES PROGRAM GETS GRANT
LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The University of Kansas Women's Studies Program has received a $100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, the major part of which is for a 1980 Summer Research Institute at KU on "Women's Public Lives."

Researchers will draw on the university's resources, including the Gerritsen Collection on early suffragist literature in KU's Kenneth Spencer Research Library.

Combating Suicide By Teenagers

By EILEEN McNAMARA
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI)
— When Bill was 17, he was a Student Council officer and a varsity basketball player in his suburban New England high school.

When he was 18, he was dead. By his own hand.

Bill — college-bound and popular — was one of 5,000 Americans under age 24 whom friends and teachers thought had everything to live for who committed suicide in 1977.

Missing from Bill's public profile are the parental divorce he felt he failed to prevent, the empty scotch bottles he found in his mother's closet and the pressure to choose between a college near home and the girl he loved or an out-of-state university where he could leave family pressures behind.

Much like the 100,000 young people who made attempts on their lives that year, Bill's private pains were not obvious to the people who thought they knew him well.

"What is going on inside is often very different from what you see on the outside," said Sara Benet, director of a suicide prevention project for the Massachusetts Committee for Children and Youth. "No one kills himself without reason."

But what, adults ask when Ms. Benet speaks publicly about adolescent suicide, could drive a teen-ager to choose death.

"You tell people that the suicide rate among young people has increased 300 percent in 14 years and they think you're crazy," Ms. Benet said. "It is an epidemic and we have to deal with it, whether we want to or not."

The answer to why a 17-year-old would choose to die will vary, said Dr. Eleanor Weeks, chief of child psychiatry at Cambridge City Hospital. But there are some constants.

"Depression, trouble in school, trouble with peers, family problems, divorce, romantic problems — they are all causes," Dr. Weeks said. "But there is seldom just one cause. There are too many stresses and one finally breaks the camel's back."

The bafflement of friends and teachers in the face of teen-age suicide is often intentional delusion, Ms. Benet said.

"There are signs, there are always signs," she said. "Someone who feels that badly has communicated it to someone. If that someone only knew what to do."

That someone is often a trusted teacher and the Cambridge School Department — and a handful of others across Massachusetts — has committed itself to preparing its teachers to recognize and respond to a student contemplating suicide.

"It's not as if the problem is that rare," said Cambridge's Director of Pupil Services Patrick Murphy. "I've had five calls in the last month alone from teachers or counselors concerned about students."

A workshop, coordinated by the private, non-profit Massachusetts Committee for Children and Youth, "is not designed to make teachers psychotherapists but to make them sensitive when something is seriously out of shape with a child," Ms. Benet said.

Teachers in Cambridge, Boston, Arlington and Belmont who've participated in the program bring their personal and professional experience with suicide to the workshops, Ms. Benet said.

One Cambridge teacher listening to doctors describe the warning signs of suicide, left the room to call the parents of one of his students.

The next afternoon, the parents told their son — who'd told the teacher about his fits of depression and his father's extensive gun collection — to a psychiatrist.

"Prevention is the answer in psychiatry, especially in child psychiatry," Dr. Weeks said. "If teachers can be alert to the problem, we can save lives."

LOGAN TEMPLE
LOGAN, Utah (AP) — Renovation on the historic Logan temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been completed.

One of the main reasons for the renovation, which began in 1976, was to increase the 95-year-old temple's capacity to handle sacred ordinances such as marriages, baptisms and family sealings.
