Chinese Trade Pact Initialed

CANTON, China (AP) — The United States and China initiated a broad trade agreement today, and both sides hailed it as a significant step on the road to economic normalcy after a 30-year break.

Canton for the ceremony. "Today marks a major step on the way to full normalization of Sino-American economic relations," Mrs. Kreps told the ceremony at the initialed, which was toasted with champagne.

be signed and submitted to Congress for approval. Mrs. Kreps said she hoped that could be accomplished within the next two months, but the end of the year would be a more realistic target date.

"For 30 years the people of the United States have had little or no commercial, or other, contact with nearly one quarter of the population of the world," she said. "Today we take a major step together in resuming the unimpaird exchange of goods and services — and therefore the exchange of experiences, ideas, and good will."

Weekend Pinch

PASSING BY — A lone bicyclist passes part of a long line of cars waiting for gas on Pico Blvd. at 10th Street in Santa Monica, Calif. Saturday. The line was five blocks long, to a station near the top of the photo. Nearly two-thirds of all gasoline stations in California were closed Saturday. (AP Laserphoto)

Gasoline Squeeze

Frustrations Spur Demands

By The Associated Press A gasoline hunt that spread from the Pacific to the Potomac over the weekend brought new demands today for governmental action at the state and national levels. In California, where the longest lines yet formed at the few gasoline stations that were open, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. asked the State Energy Commission to draft emergency regulations requiring at least half of the stations affected by the odd-even rationing plan to remain open on the weekends.

But Jackson said he hopes Congressional leaders will be able to work out an acceptable standby gasoline rationing plan to submit to President Carter. Only about six of 50 gasoline stations along Florida's South Dixie Highway, the main thoroughfare from Miami to Key West, were open Sunday and state police said they received half a dozen distress calls from drivers out of gas. Dade County Fire Department paramedics said two people were treated after inhaling vapors while trying to siphon gasoline.

and limits on sales. Between 80 percent and 90 percent of the gas stations were closed in Texas on Sunday, compared to less than 50 percent five weeks ago. Kansas, Illinois, Indiana and Georgia reported about 50 percent of the stations closed Sunday, and in Massachusetts, only half the stations open three weeks ago were open Sunday. Elsewhere, about half the stations in the metropolitan New York area were closed. And AAA officials in Texas and Kansas worried that gas stations might not have enough fuel to handle Memorial Day crowds.

City Budget Said Sharply Limited

This is the first in a series of articles prepared and submitted by the city government explaining the process of preparing the annual budget.

In recent months continued popular concern has been focused on balanced budgets for governmental agencies. The Proposition 13 and Constitutional Amendment for a Balanced Budget supporters have caused a wave of increased public concern for more efficient governmental operations.

The City of Greenville's budget for fiscal year 1979-80, which will be recommended to the City Council by the City Manager this month, reflects a concern for efficient operations within the city government with strictly limited increases in expenditures.

In 1978, the Greenville City Council dealt with a tight budget and it was necessary to increase the tax rate six cents per $100 assessed valuation; originally a 10 cents tax increase had been proposed. Budget controls made it necessary to delete most personnel and equipment requests and requests for travel, education and training were reduced. In one area, eight positions were not funded in order to buy major equipment in the Public Works Department.

The tax increase, major cuts in the budget, increased revenues from the Utilities Commission to the city, and the county assuming operation of the city landfill were major factors which made it possible to balance the current city budget. The city's major source of revenues of property taxes has not provided sufficient growth to solve the city's budget needs. Last year, the City Council received a great deal of input from citizens concerning continued funding of Law Enforcement Assistance Administration positions such as the Crime Prevention Officer, Legal Advisor and Juvenile Officer, since federal funding of these positions had terminated, and increased funding for the library. In addition, the council received requests for programs such as the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop, an improved computerized financial accounting system and city electrical inspection service.

As Greenville continues to grow, the city receives added service responsibilities such as extended water, sewer, police, fire and sanitation services. Inflationary costs of equipment purchases, operating expenditures, and progressive personnel compensation programs have also added stress to the

Saudis 'Dissolve' Egyptian Project

By The Associated Press In a fresh reprisal against Egypt for signing the peace treaty with Israel, the Saudi defense minister announced today the dissolution of the $1.4 billion Egyptian-based Arab arms manufacturing company. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, in a speech near Cairo, attacked his Arab critics as "dwarfs" and said their actions were those of little children. He also indicated that he expects Egypt and Israel to reach a settlement of the problem of Jerusalem by the end of this year.

A committee representing the four participating states in the arms company, Saudi Arabia, Qatar, the United Arab Emirates and Egypt, has been formed to liquidate the company, the Saudi minister, Prince Sultan Ibn Abdul Aziz, added in a statement published by the official Saudi News Agency.

The Arab Organization for Industrialization was formed by these four states in 1975, and has since been producing rockets, bombs, armored vehicles and automatic weapons for Arab armies. The joint venture had employed 15,000 workers after its first complete year operations in 1977. The organization claimed profits that year of $44 million on an undisclosed sales volume. Iran, Pakistan and Somalia had been customers although those countries were not participating in the consortium.

The announcement did not indicate if the three withdrawing nations would be able to continue operations without Egypt, which had provided its $1.4 billion share of the consortium's start-up capital in the form of existing factories. Operations will cease by July 1, the announcement said.

There was no immediate reaction from Egypt, but President Anwar Sadat said Sunday he no longer expected Saudi Arabia to buy 50 F-5E jetfighters for his air force.

"It seems from what is going on these days that the Saudis are trying to withdraw from their commitment," Sadat told a university group Sunday on a tour of construction projects 50 miles north of Cairo. "The contract is shaky."

The Saudis have broken diplomatic ties with Egypt over the peace treaty with Israel, and Sadat said last month he would not be surprised if the Saudis canceled plans to pay $525 million for the F-5Es which Congress agreed to sell Egypt last spring.

The New York Times reported Sunday that Sadat said he would appeal to the American people for donations to pay for the F-5Es if the Saudis reneged.

Sadat also said he will use $1.5 billion in U.S. military assistance credits to buy Phantoms and that the jet fighters will be flying over Egypt by October.

Curbs Courts

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini put a new restriction on his Islamic revolutionary courts, decreeing execution only for persons who killed people or ordered them killed.

Pars, the official news agency, announced the execution of the 205th man to die before Khomeini's firing squads. And the ayatollah heading Tehran's revolutionary court appealed to supporters abroad to assassinate Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, his wife, mother-in-law and sister, and several of his close advisers, including the former ambassador to the United States, Ardeshtir Zahedi.

Khomeini, Iran's Shiite Moslem patriarch and the leader of the revolution that ousted the shah, said in a communique Sunday death sentences would be limited to those "proven to have killed people" and to "any person who has issued orders for the killing of people or who has committed torture resulting in death."

"No court has the right to issue death sentences, and no person should be executed except under the above two conditions. Violation of this order is an offense and liable to punishment," the communique said.

There was speculation that the order was in response to fears of the Iranian Jewish community and foreign criticism resulting from the execution last Wednesday of millionaire Jewish businessman Habib Elghanian. He was convicted of sending Israel funds that the court said were used to finance the killing of Palestinians.

Dole's Hat In The Ring

RUSSELL, Kan. (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, shedding his gutfighting image of the 1976 campaign, today announced his candidacy for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination and declared "I will neither attack my opponents in the Republican Party nor the incumbent president."

Dole made the announcement at a city hall news conference in Russell, his hometown.

The Kansas senator, whose hard-hitting style drew criticism as the GOP vice presidential candidate in 1976, said in this campaign, "I will be speaking with our friends in the Democratic Party as well as Republicans and independents, believing that neither party has a corner on wisdom.

"We seek not a Democratic approach or a Republican approach to the nation's future, but we seek the correct approach and it will combine the best thinking and best efforts of all."

He called for a reduction of the role of government but added that "I do not intend to campaign against those who serve in government. ... Those who serve in government reflect the nation: human, with human strengths and human failings."

This western Kansas community of 6,000 declared today "Bob Dole Day." Most businesses delayed opening an hour for Dole's announcement and schools were closed for the morning.

Life Saved By An ECU Grad

ATLANTIC BEACH — A 20-year-old Greenville woman, who received her diploma from East Carolina University Friday, was credited with saving the life of a 5-year-old Kinston boy here late Saturday morning.

Atlantic Beach Fire Chief Samuel W. Piner said quick action by Julie Miller of 1902 Brook Rd., Greenville, saved the life of Earl Perry of Walnut Drive, Kinston.

Piner said Miss Miller and two companions were swimming at the Fort Macon State Park swimming area shortly before noon Saturday when they heard a scream. They turned and saw the child face down in the water, Piner explained.

Miss Miller went to the youth and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation immediately and revived the child, who was not breathing, Piner noted.

Miss Miller, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn R. Miller, received her degree in business administration from ECU, Friday. Mrs. Miller, who said her daughter was traveling to Florida today for a vacation, described her actions last week as, "a recommendation for first aid classes at ECU and the teacher." Miss Miller knew the importance of quick action and began artificial respiration while still in the water, according to Mrs. Miller.

Spokesmen at the Registrar's office at the university said Miss Miller's first aid instructor was Kirby Patterson, a graduate instructor in the Department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety.

By starting artificial respiration immediately, according to Piner, Miss Miller was, "very instrumental in saving the boy's life."

"We appreciate any assistance people render at a rescue scene," Piner emphasized. "Many times," he continued, emergency units are delayed in reaching the scene of an emergency because of heavy traffic and other reasons. "Seconds

Transit Sums Awaiting Final Agency Approvals

Federal and state funds totaling some $662,582 have been approved by the N.C. Board of Transportation for capital improvements to the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system, the board announced.

Ben Shivar, Greenville's Community Development coordinator, said that while the funds have been approved, reviews are now required by both the Federal Highway Administration and the Urban Mass Transportation Administration before the money is appropriated.

The local share, which involves $73,620 in state and $588,962 in federal money, is part of nearly $2.8 million in federal and state funds approved by the Board of Transportation for transit systems improvements in three cities. Wilson and Chapel Hill also received funding, pending reviews.

According to Shivar, who mentioned that Greenville also participates in the funding with a $73,620 local share to match the state's total, the funding format calls for 80 percent federal participation and ten percent each from the state and local municipalities.

Shivar explained that funding for the Greenville system includes roughly $275,000 for a new bus maintenance garage, including construction as well as architectural and engineering fees, and also money for the purchase of new vehicles and other equipment.

The grant application calls for funding for six new buses, it was pointed out, and the initiation of two new bus routes and reduction of headways or times on two routes. Shivar emphasized that the implementation of the new routes would depend upon the availability of federal operating funds and the City

Industrial Feasibility Study For Pitt Areas

An industrial feasibility analysis study will soon be conducted in the Ayden-Grifton areas of Pitt County due to a $30,000 grant from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission.

Wayne Harris, local government coordinator for the Mid-East Commission who prepared the application, commented that the study will be performed during the span of one year.

The study, which is the first for the Ayden-Grifton area, will encourage new industries to locate in the area, improve employment opportunities and raise the per capita income for citizens, particularly minority groups.

The Pitt County Development Commission will carry out the project.

The approach to be rendered will analyze the area's economy, regional resources, labor force characteristics and natural conditions. Other characteristics to be examined will be transportation, utilities, the tax structure and industrial suitability.

According to Harris, "several obvious benefits will result from the project. Expanded industrial site offerings to more industries, a reduction in unemployment and the stimulation of outside business investments will be some of the derivatives of the study."

He's Underfoot, She's Overboard

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is 72 and retired, but he's making a career of making my life miserable. He used to be quite the man about town. I spent many lonely evenings wondering where he was and when he'd come home.

Now, I can't get him out of the house. I actually have to look for things for him to do: "Go to the grocery store! Go to the drugstore! Go to the hardware store!"

I can hardly stand the sight of him! My stomach turns over when I hear his key in the door.

After he reads the morning paper, he follows me around supervising the cooking and housekeeping.

If a lady friend of mine comes over for a cup of tea, he horns in and monopolizes the conversation.

Dear God, I am so sick of him, death would be a welcome release!

AGING IN INDIANA

DEAR AGING: Yours or his? The quality of a marriage is only as good as the materials used by the builder. The "lumber of life" is caring, sharing, patience, forgiveness and understanding. One can't expect to spend his twilight years in a cathedral when he's accumulated only enough "lumber" for a shack.

DEAR ABBY: I was invited to the home of a married couple for dinner so I brought my hostess a bottle of expensive French wine.

She thanked me for it, then promptly put it away. Instead of serving my lovely wine with dinner, she served a domestic wine. I thought that was tacky. I was also very disappointed because, enjoying fine wines as I do, I had looked forward to having some of the wine I had brought.

According to the rules of etiquette shouldn't my hostess have served my wine?

STATEN ISLANDER

DEAR ISLANDER: No. And don't assume that because a wine is expensive and French, it is superior to a less costly domestic wine. It ain't necessarily so, say impartial wine connoisseurs.

DEAR ABBY: I recently learned that our 22-year-old son in college is the father of a child who was given away for adoption last year. Our son did not confide in us. I found this out quite by accident.

My husband and I have always looked forward to our first grandchild and I am sick with grief to think that somewhere in this world I have a grandchild whom I will never know. I haven't been able to bring myself to tell my husband. My question: Do I have the right to keep this from him? It's HIS grandchild, too.

GRIEVING GRANNY

DEAR GRANNY: No good can come from telling your husband. Your grandchild is now somebody else's child and grandchild as well. Be kind and silent. And don't dwell on it. Regret is the cancer of life.

CONFIDENTIAL TO SOLLY IN THE WINDY CITY: You've got a "gelt" complex. Don't assume that every woman who shows an interest in you is after your money—unless, of course, that's all you have to offer.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Tar Heel Weekend School Bond Issue Brochures Will Be Ready Next Monday

By The Associated Press
Traffic accidents in North Carolina killed 10 persons during the weekend, according to the Highway Patrol. The deaths pushed this year's toll to 500, same as it was in the comparable period last year.

One of the latest reported deaths occurred Sunday evening, when George Farley, 31, of Robbinsville, wrecked on U.S. 19 east of Andrews. Trooper J. L. Hall said Farley's car ran off the road and overturned.

One of the first reported fatalities occurred Friday when Jimmy Lee Woods, 37, of Rt. 5, Lincolnton, was killed in a two-car collision on a rural road near Lincolnton, the patrol said. John Randall Simpson, 22, of Greensboro, was killed Saturday when his car ran off a road in Greensboro and hit a tree.

Forrest Earl Reel, 61, of Marion, was killed Saturday when his car ran off a rural road eight miles south of Marion in McDowell County and hit a ditch.

Harrison Riddick, 46, of Portsmouth, Va., was killed Saturday when his motorcycle ran off N.C. 32 4½ miles north of Sunbury in Gates County and overturned.

James Eugene Smith, 29, of Winston-Salem, was killed Saturday night as he stood beside his car parked on the shoulder of N. C. 52 seven miles north of Mount Airy. The patrol said Smith had his head in the window of his car when another vehicle struck the car in the rear.

Mexican Gas Is Also Gone

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Some Californians thought they could leave the gas crisis behind by crossing the border to buy fuel in Mexico. They were wrong.

For the second weekend in a row, almost all of the 68 gas stations in Tijuana and its outlying areas ran out of the premium gasoline usually bought by American drivers, who have been flocking to the tourist town in record numbers.

"I was told there was plenty of gas in Mexico and now I don't know whether I can make it home," said James McFarland of San Diego. "My tank is empty and this thing won't run on Mexican regular."

McFarland had waited in line for more than an hour Sunday only to pull up to an empty premium pump.

Many stations reported they have been without premium gas since Saturday and supplies of regular were low Sunday night.

"They've got me. I have no choice but to remain overnight," James Coleman of Newport Beach on Sunday. "I think the Mexicans are getting even with us for stealing California."

Coleman said he had relied on press reports indicating he could find ample supplies of gas here.

Some Mexicans have suggested that Americans be denied gas unless they buy other merchandise while in the city.

"There's no gas for us Mexicans — the Americans are cleaning us out," said Miguel Chavez, a Tijuana gas station attendant.

Superintendent of Pitt County Schools Ott Alford informed members of the Countywide Steering Committee for Passage of the June 8 School Bond Referendum that informational brochures concerning the issue would be available for public distribution as of Monday, May 21.

Committee member Ken Rollins, who will be primarily concerned in coordinating information for the issue, also displayed for the group a selection of advertisements suitable for newspaper, television and radio during the Monday morning session.

Rollins pointed out that definite plans for advertisements must be made in advance, and noted that businesses would be contacted toward using one-line endorsements in the regular advertisement schedules.

According to committee chairman Jim Black, superintendents in the Pitt County school system have been in contact with local advisory councils, with committees devoted to getting out the information in such communities as Bethel, Stokes-Pactolus, Ayden, Grimesland, Farmville and Winterville.

Superintendent of Greenville City Schools Glenn Cox stated that members within the local PTA organizations were beginning to work with individual school communities toward organizing committees.

Committee treasurer Naomi Edwards noted that a total of 110 letters had been sent out so far to area businesses, soliciting funds for the campaign. An amount of $125 had been received within two days, with results untabulated through the weekend.

Committee members stressed the importance of making sure that citizens understand that the school bond issue is separate from the idea of merging the city and county schools.

Members pointed out that many citizens were confused about the separate items, and stated that the issue should be stated clearly on the informational brochure.

Committee member Dot Dail spoke of the need to work toward promoting the school bond issue and its importance to the rural communities of the county.

"Farmers, whose property is real and is taxed, want to know that the school bond issue has something for them," she noted. "They should be made to feel a part of this campaign."

Superintendent Cox again stressed that the city and county central office phone numbers — 752-6106 and 752-4192 — are available to the public as use as "hotline" numbers so that interested citizens may call for information on the $9 million issue. He noted that when a person calls, his number will be taken down, and someone in the office will call him back with an answer.

Also, committee members stated that civic clubs and organizations should contact the city and county schools offices for information as to obtaining speakers for meetings on the school bond referendum issue.

Cultural Fair Held At School

The students of G. R. Whitfield presented a "Circus of Cultural Arts", Thursday, May 11, in the school gymnasium. The Ringmaster for the event was Ray Taft, an eighth grade student.

Students from all grades participated in the activities which included the Dancing Dollies, tightrope walking, snake act, parachute activity, hula dancer, tumbling and hoop acts, the metric hop, disco and pyramid acts. The circus activities were outgrowths of physical education classes taught by instructors Amy Carroll and Charles Dempsey.

Music throughout the program was presented by the Whitfield Band, directed by James Fleming. Anton Wesley directed the singing. An art exhibit of student work was displayed in the gymnasium lobby. The art display was organized by Freddie Outterbridge.

The program was coordinated by Eleanor Mills, Curriculum Coordinator. A host of parents and interested members of the community attended the program.

Field Day For Pork Producers

A field day for pork producers will be held at North Carolina's model demonstrational swine unit near Rocky Mount Wednesday, May 23.

Rep. Vernon G. James, chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, N. C. General Assembly, will be the keynote speaker. The program will begin at 10 a.m. The unit is located on the Upper Coastal Plain Agricultural Research Station.

Whitfield SGA Officers Chosen

An election of Student Government Association officers for G. R. Whitfield was held May 11. Pupils from grades 5-8 participated in the selection of officers for 1979-80.

Current SGA President Betty Staton announced the slate of officers as follows: Dawn Adler, president; Jason Starnes, vice president; Christina McLawhorn, secretary; and Paula Gatlin, treasurer. These officers will assume their duties when school reopens in September.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Stitch up a stunning tote — roomy enough to use as a beach bag, needlework bag or travel tote. This "learn-a-stitch" tote is worked on large mesh, easy-to-handle plastic canvas with four-ply acrylic yarn in a combination of decorative stitches. It's a needlepoint sampler you'll carry with pride.

To obtain directions for making the Learn-a-Stitch Tote Bag, send your request for Leaflet No. PT-113 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-113 by sending check or money order for $11.00 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit includes six-mesh plastic canvas, yarn, needle, full instructions including stitch charts and diagrams. The background is white or ecru with your choice of light and dark cherry, light and bright blue, cocoa and rust or persimmon and burnt orange. Design is worked from chart and is not stamped on canvas.

When I first took up needlepoint some 20 years ago, instructors were few and far between so I learned mostly by trial and error. Today, many good needlecraft shops offer instruction and many community colleges offer classes.

If, however, you don't find it convenient to go for classes or simply prefer to learn on your own, perhaps I can smooth the way for you.

The seemingly simple task of threading the tapestry needle can be the first stumbling block for the beginner. You can't just stick the end of tapestry yarn through the eye as you do with sewing thread.

The easiest way I have found is to fold over the yarn an inch or two from the end and pinch this fold between the thumb and forefinger of your left hand. With the needle in your right hand, push the eye of the needle down over the fold. Then pull through the folded part and your needle is neatly threaded.

If you find this difficult to do, cut a small piece of paper and fold it in half. Place the folded paper over the cut end of the yarn and pass paper and yarn through the needle eye.

Before you take the first stitch, it is wise to prepare your canvas by taping all of the cut edges with masking tape. Until recent years, this was necessary to keep the canvas threads from unraveling. Much of the canvas used today is a type called "mono" which does not unravel.

Even with this type, however, taping is still a good idea as this prevents the raw edges from catching on your clothing or irritating your hands. It is not necessary to tape plastic canvas — just cut it so that all edges are smooth.

With traditional canvas, do allow for a margin of an inch or two of unworked canvas around all edges. You will need some of this margin to turn under and more of it to do any necessary blocking.

Not so with plastic canvas — it needs no blocking and no edges are turned under. With this type of canvas, the design is worked right to the edges. Just be absolutely sure that you have allowed the right number of holes before doing any cutting as you cannot repair a cut in plastic canvas as you could with the traditional type.

Except in one instance, making a knot in your tapestry yarn is a definite no-no. You start and end each new strand of yarn by running your needle through a few stitches on the wrong side of your work.

Before you take your first stitch, however, there are no stitches under which to run your yarn. This is the one time a knot is permissible. This knot is placed on the top or right side — of your work. Called a "waste knot," it will be clipped away later.

Insert the needle from the

"LEARN-A-STITCH". . . needlepoint sampler makes a beach bag, needlework bag or travel tote.

right side of your work, placing the knot so that it is in a direct line with the stitches you will be taking. In other words, if you will be working from the top right corner to the top left corner, place the knot about two inches to the left of the point where you will be taking the first stitch. Then, bring the needle up at the starting point and you will see that this places the beginning end of the yarn under the stitching line. Now, as you work from right to left, you will be covering that beginning yarn as you stitch. When you are within three or four canvas holes of the knot, turn your work to the wrong side and clip the knot away, clipping the yarn very close to the last stitch worked.

Whenever you finish one strand of yarn and fasten it under a few stitches, clip away the tail end that is left. If you leave these little short ends, they will inevitably be caught up in later stitches, causing a matted and tangled mess.

This not only will give you a botched-up look on the back of your work, it can cause a knotty appearance on the right side.

Responsibility Is Expected

The U. S. House of Representatives Thursday curiously stuck its head in the sand and disappeared a standby gasoline rationing plan.

The plan had previously been approved 58-39 by the Senate. The House defeated the administration-sponsored measure by a vote of 246 to 159.

No doubt congressmen don't have to stand in line to purchase their gas, but we wonder if they relish the idea of their constituents wasting time and gas in the long lines such as already have developed in Southern California.

We have all sorts of dark suspicions about the gas problems this nation now faces, and the sky rocketing prices we are paying for gas. Neither we, nor Congress, however, can ignore the fact that there were lines at the gas stations in 1974 and they are developing again.

The rationing program is imperfect in that it could mean inequities and it will certainly mean more government bureaucracy . . . but if any of the 246 congressmen has a better idea for avoiding the wastefulness of gas lines, then he should come forward.

We fervently hope that a gas rationing plan will not have to be used in this nation, but not being prepared with some sort of plan in the event of dire emergency is foolhardy.

The nation expects leadership from Congress in this time of an energy crunch, not confusion and foot-dragging.

Three Key ECU Positions Now Filled

Three key positions were filled by the ECU administration with announcements last week.

Donald L. Lemish was named to the position of vice chancellor for institutional advancement and planning; Richard H. Laing was announced as dean of the School of Art and Walter M. Bortz, III was named director of admissions.

All three come with strong credentials and we anticipate they will play major roles in further building the academic standards of the university.

THIS AFTERNOON

Drunken Driving Goes On

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Is there nothing the law can do about North Carolina's Number One Crime: drunken driving?

The record seems to say that little can be done. For years the General Assembly has grappled with the dilemma of keeping drunks off the roads. But when faced with the tough job of enacting really tough laws, legislators have invariably balked.

And the courts have done little better — with plea bargaining, reduced charges, and appeals eating away at swift, sure, tough punishment.

Again, this session, the General Assembly is taking a look at the law. Present direction involves making offenders attend an alcohol-traffic school in an educational effort to help the driver who doesn't yet have a drinking problem.

In Jail
In 1978 the Legislature enacted a mandatory three-day jail term for the convicted drunken driver...but only on second and third offense. Lawmakers balked at having the jail sentence apply to the first offender.

A little-noted amendment at that time restricted the court to a second offense committed within three years of the first. A change being studied in this session stretches that offense time to 10 years.

Another measure being mulled would require a person arrested for driving under the influence who refused to take a breath or blood test to determine alcohol content to lose his driving license for 12 months rather than six. Also a proposal to allow the breathalyzer operator to submit a written statement of results instead of having to appear in court to testify in every case is in the works.

But what will any of this mean?

Despite change after change in the law, drunk driving remains the state's number one crime with arrests topping 50,000 per year.

Additionally, statistics show that drunk drivers were involved in exactly half of the 1,509 fatalities in the state last year.

BILL NOBLITT

Statistics invariably show that over the years the statewide conviction rate in drunk driving cases is about 63 percent. So one out of three is not convicted even with the state's breathalyzer law, license suspension provision, and automatic assumption of guilt if the blood alcohol level is over .10 percent. Few of those convicted go to jail, even for one day, and then only when other charges accompany the drunk-driving charge.

Furthermore, of those convicted of drunk driving, fully one-third are granted limited driving privileges by the court.

Unlimited

Those privileges are supposed to be only for the health, education and welfare of the driver or his family, and the court can put strict limits as to time, place, type of vehicle, etc. In truth, judges have little time to work out such details and limited driving generally becomes unlimited.

In summary: Law change after law change to the contrary, North Carolina's drunken driving record remains virtually unchanged.

Some experts think the lenient attitude of the public largely at fault in this, and that nothing will happen until there is a public demand on legislators for truly effective sentences to deter drunk driving . . . and on the courts to really crack down.

Some think it may be that the law has done all it can about the problem and only a change in public attitudes away from sympathy for the offender who is caught can bring about results.

The Women Who Wait

WASHINGTON — It is only fitting as we celebrate Mother's Day that we honor those women who sit at home and wait. Some of them wait for the plumber others for the electrician. There are women, as I write this, who are still waiting for rug cleaners, United Parcel, J.C. Penney, a tree surgeon or the appliance repairman.

These are brave women, unsung, afraid to leave their houses for even a half hour because the person they are waiting for might show up the moment they are gone.

Mrs. Katherine Davenport has been chosen this year to represent all the mothers of America who sit in a lonely vigil waiting for a repairman or a delivery driver who never comes.

I visited her home in Bethesda, Md., the other day to talk to her. She answered the door excitedly, but when I told her I was a journalist, her face dropped. "I was hoping that you were the linoleum man," she said. "I've been waiting for him for three weeks."

"That's not a long time." "It seems like an eternity," she said. "He promised me he'd be here to lay the linoleum in the kitchen on April 23rd at nine o'clock."

"Have you heard from him since?" "No, but I received a postcard from the Red Cross a week ago telling me he was well and that he was thinking of me." She showed me the card which she apparently had read many times.

"Every morning I call the linoleum store and they say he's coming that day. I'm going out of my mind with worry. They get your spirits up and then by the end of the day they've sunk. Why do they say he's coming when they know he isn't?"

"I guess they don't want you to despair," I suggested. "We all need hope."

Mrs. Davenport twisted a handkerchief. "You don't know what it's like to just sit here waiting for the doorbell to ring. I don't sleep at nights because I have these nightmares that he took another job in Rockville. I keep wondering if he's getting enough to eat, or whether his truck has broken down, or even worse that the linoleum I ordered never arrived. If he would just call and tell me he is all right, I could get through the days. But the uncertainty of it is driving me crazy."

Holmes 'Alive' Today

by HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — If Dr. John H. Watson and Sherlock Holmes still reside in Martha Hudson's comfortable digs at 221B Baker Street, as many of us think they do, they won't have to go clattering off to Charing Cross Station in a two-wheeler the next time the game is afoot.

At a cost of $170 million, which was a pretty penny in Holmes's day, the London subway system has linked these two famous Victorian landmarks with a three-mile extension that was recently opened by Prince Charles, who still rides in open carriages more often than in underground railway cars.

The Baker Street tube station has been decorated with a number of posters depicting scenes from the adventures of the great consulting detective. These should please his many admirers around the world but undoubtedly will elicit some complaints from the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, the Baker Street Irregulars in America, the Solitary Cyclists in Sweden and other scholarly groups, who will notice right off 'hat Holmes is shown smoking a curved pipe.

This, of course, he never did in any of the novels or short stories by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

Holmes preferred a straight-stemmed clay pipe or his favorite old briar root when he put down his violin and reached for his Persian slipper of tobacco.

Two theories have been advanced to explain the curious case of the drooping calabash pipe and how it entered into Sherlockian lore.

Down at the Players Club, a hangout for erudite gentlemen of the theater, they will tell you that the great American actor William Gillett, still revered in many quarters as the finest stage Sherlock of them all, adopted the curved-stem pipe as a prop because he couldn't speak his lines with a straight pipe in his mouth.

Paxton Whitehead, the excellent British actor who has just completed a successful

"I'm sure he's all right or you would have heard from the Retail Linoleum Layers of America. Three weeks is not a long time to wait for a tradesman who promised to come on a certain day."

"But when he measured the kitchen floor he said he'd be back in a week. Why would he say that if he didn't mean it?"

"They all say that," I told her. "We once called a sewer man who said he would be there in two hours. He showed up alive and well six months later. When he finally came my wife asked what had happened, and all he said was, 'I got here as fast as I could. Just when you give up all hope they do arrive.'"

"You're just saying that to make me feel better. Many of my friends have called repairmen who said they would come, and they've never been heard from again," she said as tears clouded her eyes.

"Have you thought about getting another linoleum man?" I asked.

"Every woman thinks about it," she said, "but what guarantee do I have that the second linoleum man won't do the same thing to me that the first one did?"

I didn't have an answer for her. I got up to leave.

She took me to the door. "Would you like to see the

Other Editors Say A Warning

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Proposition 13 keeps getting closer and closer to Orange County, and one of these days it is going to hit the Board of County Commissioners right smack in the middle of the face. We favor the best possible education for our children, but the county school board's request for a budget increase of more than 16 percent is beyond the taxpayers' ability to pay. The Chapel Hill-Carrboro School district has asked for roughly a 13.9 percent increase, and that board is now in the process of reducing its request to about seven percent. That is more reasonable.

These remarks are not directed to the local school boards. Rather, they are a way of reminding everyone concerned of what happened in Alamance County last week. Alamance County is not located in California; it is the adjoining county to Orange as you head west. The voters in Alamance voted against an additional school tax referendum, not to exceed 20 cents per $100 evaluation, by a margin of six to one. The money was to be spent to supplement funds for county schools. More than 50 percent of the voters turned out, and the vote was 10,929 against to 1,850 in favor. No one, by the widest stretch of the imagination, thought that the referendum would be defeated by such a wide margin.

A spokesman for the Alamance County Taxpayers Association stated that the commissioners should interpret the election results as an opinion poll "of what to expect on any increases in taxes in the near future."

We do not like to be a bearer of bad news, but we would like to remind the local boards of Chapel Hill and Carrboro and the Orange County Commissioners that if Alamance can react so violently to a school referendum, it could happen here. We do not want to see that happen, but we do want to see our tax dollars spent with good judgment and restraint.

Small Business: Large Asset

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Compared to the din of publicity generated by giant corporations, little is heard from small business. It has been making its point though, perhaps more effectively than in many years.

In the past year or so an advocate has been named to the Small Business Administration, his express job being to present the small business position to other segments of the Washington bureaucracy.

A White House Conference on Small Business has been called for January 1980, and already the first of 57 meetings throughout the country have taken place, the aim being to make government more responsive.

A congressional study last November fairly well documented the claims by small business that it was a national resource being squeezed to death by big business, big government, big unions.

Not that much change has yet taken place, but some spokesmen for small business feel that at least they are getting the story across, which is more than they'd been able to do for many years.

What a story. In making proposals earlier this year for a Department of Small Enterprise, a group of regional small business organizations told it concisely.

The 14 million small enterprises, they said, represent 97 per cent of the country's businesses, employ more than 50 million workers, and account for 43 percent of total Gross National Product.

Measured in jobs, they described their importance this way: "One new hiring by only half of the nation's small enterprises would have eliminated the 6.9 million unemployment in 1977."

Not that they weren't hiring. They were. But was big business, on which government spends more time and effort? "Of the 9.5 million job created between 1969 and 1976, just 75,000, or seven-tenths of 1 percent, were accounted for by the Fortune One Thousand," they said.

The dominance of other economic sectors, particularly the big three — big business, big government and big unions — arose for understandable reasons. They are organized; they possess know-how; they have funds.

And progress isn't swift for small business. Spokesmen say that not only must they sell their viewpoint, but they must adjust laws and regulations already on the books that, unintentionally penalize them.

THE CARTER IN-BOX

Readingest President

By SAUL PETT
WASHINGTON (AP) — Most days, even after ruthless staff winnowing, President Carter finds 30 to 40 things to read in his in-box. Bad days, as many as 60. Some are only short memos. Some are several or many pages each. Occasionally, there is one two or three inches thick.

It goes with the territory. June promises several three-inch days for Jimmy Carter.

He will be boning up for a meeting on the world economy with the leaders of six other nations in Tokyo near the end of the month. That probably means, that on his way to the summit, he will devour about 18 pounds of briefing books. In addition, he probably will read other books by or about the men and the nations he deals with. Along with the comprehensive, four-inch briefing book prepared for him for the visit of Deputy Premier Deng Xiaoping, Carter read four published volumes in the hope of making the Chinese more scrutable.

While he has publicly tried to house-break the bureaucracy of its passion for the torrential verbiage, Carter, himself, is known in the government as a "paper-eater." It is said he will read anything put before him, gobble it up overnight and fire back a barrage of marginal notes and questions next morning.

He claims he can read 3,000 words a minute (a claim some assistants gently doubt) as a result of a speed-reading course he and the missus took. They learned on Orwell's "Animal Farm", and Camus' "The Stranger". He liked the course so much he insists various assistants take it.

John Kennedy, too, was a speed-reader and read much. Richard Nixon, in addition to his historic interest in the recorded word, liked his briefing papers comprehensive. Dwight Eisenhower preferred crisp military-type summaries. No-nonsense Lyndon Johnson preferred pithy, incomplete sentences, just the facts. Carter may be the "readingest" president of them all.

Last November, more than 20 men and women in the State Department, two other agencies and the National Security Council spent the weekend producing long memos to prepare Carter for a phone conversation with the president of France. They talked 17 minutes.

On another occasion, word came from Canada that Prime Minister Trudeau would be calling on an unspecified matter. But what? The bureaucracy guessed right in a one-page briefing paper.

"It is extremely rare, says the president, "that a foreign leader raises a subject on which I was not briefed."

Carter has his briefing books, and most of the foreign presidents and prime ministers he deals with have theirs. There is, in fact, a joke among people who prepare leaders for summits. "Why don't we send them out to a long lunch and settle everything ourselves by exchanging briefing books?"

The Germans are known to come to meetings with briefing books even "fatter than Carter's. The Israelis come with detailed documentation for their arguments. The Japanese give as much concern to form as to substance. The Russians, according to an American source, "come very well programmed but with little flexibility."

At the summit, world leaders usually prefer to face

Strength For Today

MEANING OF EDUCATION

What is education? "Education today is too abstract and impractical", a parent one day complained to the principal of a high school. "Bring it down where we live. For instance, I would like my boy to learn to milk a cow." The principal replied, "I would also like my boy to learn to milk a cow, but I'd like him to do something else that a calf can't do just as well."

Education is preparation for life. Therefore, we should learn much more at school than the mere techniques that can be turned into dollars and job promotions. Often the attempt today is made to make education so practical that it becomes little more than a meal ticket. Our minds and souls need to be fed as well as our bodies.

Education exclusively practical is not education at all; it is mere training. Education is preparation for happy living.

each other with little visible sign of all the work their bureaucracies put in. At best, Carter usually shows up with only a few notes on a card.

Prime Minister Callaghan of Great Britain, at one meeting, sat down and laid three briefing books on the table. Most unusual.

"You're obviously better prepared than I am," said the president. "You have all those briefing books. I have nothing." (Carter's were in the next room.)

A presidential briefing book includes a precise schedule, proposed speaking texts, issue papers, background papers, talking points and biographical sketches (frequently psychological and sometimes spicy) of the leaders he will be dealing with, their wives and subordinates.

There are also covering "scope" papers, in which the secretary of state and the president's adviser on National Security outline the main thrust of the meeting, the strategy, the objectives.

Texts for all occasions. Arrival, departure, toasts, formal speeches.

Issue papers, talking points, tactics:

"If he says ... Stress ... Better be on offensive on this ... Make clear we do not want to be drawn into haggling over details ... We do not want to press you but we are interested in reading a long-term understanding that will ..."

"He wants to be treated as a world leader, so start with the global picture, then to bilateral issues ... If pressed on price, we should leave specific formulas to the experts ... If he says his country was not informed of U.S. concerns early enough, remind him we set forth our concerns early in ..."

For China's deputy premier, there was a separate long memo on the Chinese psyche and what the president should do if his visitor indicated he regarded Carter as weak. The president was told that the Chinese tend to regard people in terms of inferiors and superiors. He was warned against falling into the pitfall of trying to prove Americans are not inferior because he would then end up seeming to claim their superiority.

The biographical sketches are prepared by the Central Intelligence Agency, which apparently can tell the president much about any leader in the world — his personality, his eccentricities, his strengths and weaknesses (professional and personal), his marital state and, if any, unusual sexual proclivities. Press Secretary Jody Powell says Carter spends a lot of time on the bios trying to get as much sense of a man as possible in advance of dealing with him.

On strategy and tactics, Carter usually sticks closely to the counsel provided by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Zbigniew Brzezinski, his adviser on national security affairs. But at the end of the flow of advice and information, it is the president who chooses which lines to pursue. Negotiations can't be entirely programmed in advance like a chess game.

Some 60 people in the government worked on the four-inch briefing book by which Carter prepared for his sessions with Deng Xiaoping. For his two-day meeting in Mexico where the list of issues between the two countries was long and varied, about 90 people in the State Department, National Security Council, Justice, Agriculture, Energy, Treasury and Commerce contributed their expertise.

The usual pattern is that State collects the information and recommendations from the other agencies, adds much of its own and sends it on to the Security Council, where Brzezinski prunes it.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to organize your efforts in a practical and intelligent manner and gain progress in your material and mundane interests. Be careful you do not become involved in an argument that takes you away from your success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Contact influential persons you know and gain their backing for a promising project. Improve credit but don't assume more than you can swing later on. Be clever.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Any new ideas should be put in motion early since later there can be many interruptions. Make new contacts early. Take time later for important study.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle important responsibilities and then study new outlets, but don't commit yourself to anything as yet. Listen to what a loved one has to say and increase happiness.

Triple Slaying In The Family

MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Town officials and friends said Sunday that Charles Wayne Frye, Morrisville's part-time police chief, was an even-tempered man who held down two jobs and was devoted to his wife and brother.

Frye's brother, Phillip, 32, had moved in with him and his wife, Suzanne C. Frye, 28, last year. But when Phillip Frye moved out last week to a Raleigh duplex, he took Mrs. Frye with him.

Wayne Frye used pistols to kill his wife and brother Saturday night, then used a rifle to kill himself, Raleigh police say.

"I reckon that (the departure of his wife) was more than Wayne could take," Arthur Lee Jones, a Morrisville town commissioner, said Sunday.

Police believe that Wayne Frye entered the duplex shortly after 10 p.m. Saturday, walked back to the kitchen and shot Suzanne Frye five times. After she was shot, Phillip Frye ran out the front door, down the walkway and over to a neighbor's driveway screaming for help, police say. Wayne Frye followed, caught up with him and shot him four times, according to police.

Wayne Frye then walked across the street and put two pistols into his car. He took a .30-caliber rifle from the car and shot himself in the head, police say.

"The wounds each received would have been fatal instantly," Wake County pathologist Dewey Pate said Sunday after performing autopsies on the three victims.

As a police officer, Wayne Frye had a reputation as a fair dealer, friends said, often letting someone off with a firm warning when he didn't think a citation was necessary.

"Wayne was always soft-spoken, never one to raise his temper," said Gerald W. Perry, a Morrisville storekeeper. "That's why everyone was so surprised today."

On Sunday, neighbors described hearing gunshots and running into their houses for safety.

"It was just like Vietnam. I ran into my house and turned off the light," a neighbor said.

Broadway run in "The Crucifer of Blood," a dramatization of "The Sign of the Four" (with the opium den scene from "The Man With the Twisted Lip" thrown in for audience shudders), believes the familiar curved pipe trademark was the invention of Frederick Dorr Steele, who illustrated the Sherlock Holmes stories for American readers.

If more evidence of Holmes's immortality is needed, movie houses across the land are packing them in with "Murder by Decree," in which Jack the Ripper meets Sherlock Holmes, as played by Christopher Plummer, and Dr. Watson, in a high camp performance by James Mason.

Several critics have acclaimed them as the greatest Holmes-Watson team ever, but I must remain loyal to Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce, even if Hollywood did cast aside the original Conan Doyle classics and toss them a lot of turkeys involving Nazi spies and wartime bomb plots.

GET A BIGGER SLICE OF LIFE.

You can expect to add an actual 11 extra years to your life, if you follow these 7 rules.

- 1 Start each day with breakfast. Your body needs refueling in the AM. Try a sandwich or spaghetti if your taste isn't for cereal, bacon or eggs.
- 2 Eat three meals a day. Skipping meals could shorten your life, so eat regularly and wisely — three square meals a day to stay healthy.
- 3 Limit alcoholic beverages. If you drink, do it in moderation. Try to avoid drinks served on the rocks or straight up. Have some food in your stomach. And sip, don't gulp.
- 4 Limit your smoking. If you smoke, use moderation. Don't smoke your cigarette all the way down. Limit the number of cigarettes you smoke. Don't smoke till noon. You'll breathe a lot easier if you cut down a little or even stop.
- 5 Watch your weight. Each extra pound you put on brings you closer to diseases of the heart, arteries, internal organs, even diabetes. But diet wisely. Follow your doctor's advice.

- 6 Schedule enough sleep. Your body needs enough time to rest. Get 7-8 hours sleep if you're between 20 and 55. If you're over 55, you could get by on slightly less.
 - 7 Get plenty of exercise. Long walks count as exercise. So does dancing, gardening, climbing stairs. Plan to get moderate exercise of some sort two or three times a week.

Thousands Graduated On Tar Heel Campuses

By The Associated Press
More than 5,000 students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill received degrees in a packed Carmichael Auditorium Sunday after commencement exercises were moved indoors from Kenan Stadium because of rain.

Richard J. Richardson, a professor and chairman of the political science department, said in the commencement address at UNC that the purpose of education was not as much preparing for a high-status job as to give students a broader view of the world. "Those who take cheap shots at liberal education for its irrelevancy should not discourage us," he said.

The UNC-Chapel Hill students joined thousands of other North Carolina seniors who graduated Sunday.

In address to graduates at Belmont Abbey College, Duke University Chancellor A. Kenneth Pye said rising costs in public institutions be met by increased legislative appropriations, "while in the private sector they must be met primarily by increased tuition."

In a sometimes tearful address to St. Augustine's graduates in Raleigh, Dr. Marie Gadsden challenged the students to join her in issuing "the second emancipation proclamation for blacks." The college graduated 215 students.

Judy Woodruff, NBC White House correspondent, told 297 Meredith College graduates that women must continue to work harder than men until women and men have the same opportunities and privileges in careers and marriage.

More than 2,000 students received degrees at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro Sunday. Three honorary degrees were also awarded during the ceremonies. It marked the last commencement at the school's chancellor, James Ferguson, would preside over. Ferguson will retire later this year.

At Pembroke State University, William A. Johnson, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors, spoke to the 483 graduates. He also paid tribute to Pembroke's retiring chancellor, Dr. English Jones. Jones will retire June 30.

Call Meeting
The City Council has scheduled a special call session for Tuesday, May 15 at 7 p.m. in the first floor conference room at city hall.

The only scheduled item on the call agenda is the consideration of bids on Community Development street improvements.

U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, D-N.C., told the 126 graduates that the federal government should stop regulating schools before it harms them further. He said UNC's desegregation dispute with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare was an example of harmful federal interference.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in quiet trading today against a backdrop of continuing energy uncertainties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 16.98 last week, lost another 26 to 830.30 by noon today.

Losers held a small lead over gainers in the mid-day count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors remained fearful that gasoline supply problems could depress economic activity in a number of important industries.

But they also noted buying interest in stocks of companies that could stand to benefit from the situation.

Greyhound, for example, was up 3/4 at 14 1/2 in active trading, and Auto-Train jumped 2 1/2 to 7 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange.

Another "hot" group was the grain-and alcohol-processing companies, thanks to speculation focusing on gasohol, an auto fuel produced by mixing gasoline with ethyl alcohol made from grain.

A.E. Staley Manufacturing rose 3/4 to 24 1/2; Publicker Industries climbed 1 1/2 to 10 1/2, and Archer-Daniels-Midland was up 1 1/2 to 21 1/2.

Gambling stocks, hit hard last week by gasoline-shortage worries, rebounded today. Cae-

City Budget....

City departments have been preparing their budget requests since February 16. Initial work for the new budget began in January by the City Manager's Office and the Finance Department.

All department and agency budgets have recently been reviewed by the City Manager and the budget will be presented to the Council before June 1, 1979.

According to the City Manager, Ed Wyatt, the proposed budget offers a "base budget" approach due to the city's limited funding.

The budget recommendation which is being formulated provides for the current level of services provided by the city, but will not include additional personnel, and will provide for only basic equipment needs, some of which were deferred in last year's budget. The operation costs have been calculated at the very minimum to account for increased costs for utilities and automotive fuel for its 182 pieces of equipment.

Personnel expenses are the major single cost in the city's annual budget. The payroll is estimated at $4.4 million plus approximately $500,000 for benefits. The proposed 1979-80 budget includes annualized funds for a cost of salary adjustments in addition to benefit improvements which were granted during the present year. While personnel expenses are a major part of the budget, the city has proposed to adhere to President Carter's suggested wage guidelines.

Eight allocated positions in the Fire and Rescue Department which were funded with Anti-Recession funds, which terminated in December, 1978, are included in the proposed budget. In addition, eight unfunded positions in the Public Works Department are proposed to be funded this year. The city will also participate to a greater degree in the cost of positions created through the Community Development Program, because the harmless Community Development Program is being scaled down.

The proposed budget takes into consideration the city's relatively small increase in revenues and additional governmental costs.

The council will be faced not only with providing the continued level of service but also reviewing substantial budget requests cuts during its deliberation concerning the budget. The city council must also consider the solution for continuing to offer the current level of services and expanded services to a fast growing community at continued increased prices.

The proposed budget will be available to the public after it has been presented to the City Council prior to June 1.

The second part of this series of articles concerning the City of Greenville's proposed budget will include information concerning the Public Safety operations in the city.

Transit Sums....

Council is expected to consider that matter. The balance of the new buses not used in the event of new route implementation would be replacement vehicles for current buses.

The grant money will be designated for capital improvements only, Shivar said, and will not be available as operating funds.

In addition to the major items earmarked, the funds will be used for the purchase of a van equipped to provide transit service for the elderly and handicapped, the purchase of a general transit service van, radio equipment for the buses, and various miscellaneous items including bus stop signs, benches, a limited amount of spare parts for vehicles, fare boxes (buses do not come equipped with fare boxes), and administrative funding to implement the grant.

The Board of Transportation, which administers the overall program, reported that $32,670 in state and $261,356 in federal funds were approved for Wilson, while $202,740 in state and $1,621,920 in federal money was approved for Chapel Hill.

Woman Dies In One-Car Crash

HOOKERTON — A Rt. 2, Stantonsburg woman died Sunday morning in a one-car accident near here.

Greene Co. Medical Examiner L. W. Rouse said Patricia Atkinson, 20, of Rt. 2, Stantonsburg, died of head and neck injuries after her car left Rural Road 1413 and overturned in a canal near here.

The car was spotted by a passing driver about 5:30 a. m. Sunday, Rouse said. Miss Atkinson had apparently been dead for some time when the wreckage was discovered, he said.

GOING THE LIMIT

It's not unusual to find that the amount of money needed to finance the purchase of a home and the amount of cash in the bank account are too close for comfort. When does it make sense to pull back your horns and when would propriety say - "Go the limit?"

It's better not to spend every last cent available for a home if you customarily buy big ticket items, such as cars and appliances on time; if the local property taxes are likely to go higher; or if you have any unusual financial obligations, such as medical care for a member of the family.

On the other hand, you might justify going the limit if you can make a big down payment; if the home is unlikely to need maintenance or repairs which are above and beyond your personal capability; if your outlook for financial advancement is bright, and if your family has proven that it can tighten belts if you really have to.

Watson Takes Playoff

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson pocketed the $54,000 check that went with his third tour victory of 1979 and squirmed when asked if runner-up Bill Rogers was right in calling him the greatest player in the game.

"When I'm striking the ball well, I feel I can win any tournament I play," said the 29-year-old Watson, who shot even par Sunday to turn back the challenge of Rogers, Larry Nelson and Jerry Pate to win the Byron Nelson Golf Classic at 275, five under par.

Rogers, 27, a former University of Houston All-America golfer, hit the pin with "the best 3-iron I ever hit" on the 18th hole and tapped in a birdie putt to tie Watson and send the tournament into sudden death.

Rogers chipped his third shot against the pin on No. 15, on the first hole of the playoff. Watson had an uphill lie in a bunker, 90 feet from the pin on the 568-yard, par-5 hole, but he'd birdied the hole from almost the same position in regulation play earlier.

After Rogers' shot, Watson shook his head, grinned at his rival, then grabbed a sand wedge and stepped into the trap. "It was either do or die. You either had to do it or you don't. There were no in-between thoughts," Watson confessed later.

He blasted straight at the hole and watched as his ball died only 10 inches from the pin. He knocked in his putt, Rogers missed his four-foot birdie try, and the victory was Watson's. To Rogers went the $32,400 check for second place.

Nelson, despite two late birdies, finished third at 276, four under par and 1 shot off the pace. Pate, tied for the lead until he bogeyed No. 14, bogeyed the last hole and finished 2-over-par for the day and 278 for the tourney, alone in fourth place. Jerry McGee, Mike Brannan, Clavin Peete and Morris Hataisky were at 279.

A few years ago, said Watson, "I had the reputation as a choker," but he two-putted from 70 feet on the 18th hole to preserve his playoff spot, after Rogers' late birdie. Watson came through when it counted from the bunker in sudden death.

Rogers and Tom Kite fired 66s for Sunday's best rounds.

Cale Finds Home In Nashville

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cale Yarborough, from Timmonsville, S.C., has found a home away from home at the Nashville International Speedway.

Yarborough overcame two spinouts and a determined Richard Petty to win the Music City 420 Grand National stock car race by a margin of 2.8 seconds Saturday night.

It was Yarborough's third consecutive victory on the .596-Mile Nashville oval and it was worth $14,025. He won the 1978 Music City 420 and the 1978 Nashville 420.

"I like the layout," Yarborough said in a post-race interview. "The track is wide, high-banked, and I get around it pretty good. I like it and it seems to like me."

Unlike his victories here last year, where he held the lead from the starting flag, Yarborough had to come from behind to win — surviving two spinouts and lingering tire trouble to finish first.

"We had the quickest car," he said. "No doubt about it. If we hadn't had any (tire) problems, we would have lapped the field three times."

Yarborough overcame not only the tire problems but leg problems as well. Both of his legs were bruised badly from the knees down during a 17-car pileup last weekend at the Talladega 500.

Following pre-race introductions Saturday night, he limped slowly down the track to his Oldsmobile and gingerly eased himself through the window and into the driver's seat.

"I feel good," he said later. "Just my legs. But they didn't bother me any during the race. By next week I'll be 100 percent."

Petty, from Randleman, N.C., finished second Saturday night in a Chevrolet. Placing third was Bobby Allison, of Hueytown, Ala., driving a Ford. Dale Earnhardt, of Kannapolis, N.C., was fourth in a Chevrolet.

Blair Homers

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Paul Blair was waiting for them to start kicking dirt into his grave at the age of 35.

Cut by the New York Yankees in April and resigned to a career as a high school or college baseball coach, he had given up on a major league career that had spanned 15 years.

However, Cincinnati picked him up last week, and Sunday Blair got his first National League hit, a two-run homer that snapped a 1-1 tie and started the Reds to a 7-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"This is a reprieve," Blair said. "I was dead."

Blair's homer came off Pirates right-hander John Candelaria in the sixth, and brought home Ray Knight, who had walked. Dan Driessen also smacked a solo homer for the Reds in the eighth inning.

In other NL games, Philadelphia clobbered San Francisco 12-3, Los Angeles downed Montreal 8-2, Houston shut out the Chicago Cubs 3-0, St. Louis whipped Atlanta 7-3 and San Diego edged the New York Mets 5-4 in 10 innings.

After his release by the Yankees, Blair said he went home to Troy Hill, N.J., and prepared to enter St. John's University.

"I was doing nothing, just working out a little in my basement in case somebody called me and preparing to go to school," Blair said.

Ironically, it was the Pirates who put in the first call to Blair, but they never got back to him. Meanwhile, Blair's lawyers worked out a deal with Cincinnati.

"I was only interested in coming back with a contender," Blair said. "Cincinnati called and made a definite offer. They said, 'Look, we want you to play for us.' And here I am."

Blair, who played most of his career with the Baltimore Orioles, started in center field Sunday while the Reds rested a slumping Cesar Geronimo.

"Paul Blair comes from a winning background," Reds Manager John McNamara said, "and he can play. He can definitely play."

Mike LaCoss, 4-0, went 6-2 in three runs, one unearned, on seven hits. Candelaria, 0-2, was the loser.

Walton Back Home

SAN DIEGO (AP) — By luring Bill Walton to his hometown, the San Diego Clippers found the dominant center they coveted.

Now the question looms: Will the price be Free — high-scoring guard Lloyd Free?

"I don't think we'd be so happy to give up Free," said Irv Levin, Clippers' president, after announcing he had signed Walton to the highest salary ever paid in the National Basketball Association.

Under NBA provisions, San Diego must compensate Portland for the loss of the 6-foot-11 Walton, a three-time All-American at UCLA who turned the Trail Blazers into champions in three years.

"Bill Walton is the most valuable player in the NBA, and we expect to be compensated accordingly," said Harry Glikman, Blazers' executive vice president and general manager.

Free was the NBA's No. 2 scorer this past season, averaging 28.8 points per game for the first-year franchise. A major stumbling block in the compensation discussions will be the broken foot Walton suffered at Portland in playoffs a year ago. The fractured arch sidelined Walton the entire past season and, to some, remains a matter of concern.

Guards Key Win

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Game 6 will be played Wednesday night in San Antonio. If Game 7 is necessary, it will be played here at the Capital Centre Friday night.

Only two teams in the history of the NBA playoffs have come back from a 3-1 deficit to win three straight and a series — the Boston Celtics in 1968 and the Los Angeles Lakers in 1970.

The NBA championship series will begin Sunday between the winners in the East and the Phoenix-Seattle series in the West.

Although Elvin Hayes scored 24 points and 22 rebounds to lead the Bullets statistically, Washington Coach Dick Motta said it was the play of the guards, Grevey and Henderson, that keyed the victory. He said the guards were able to drive the middle while containing the Spurs' guards, George Gervin and James Silas.

"I think we're going to play them awfully even," said Grevey, who scored 23 points as the Bullets defeated San Antonio 107-103 Sunday to send the best-of-seven series to Game 6 with the Spurs up 3-2. "We're not going to blow them out. They have too much offense to do that. But there will be a lot of pressure on them."

Henderson, the Bullets' other starting guard, who scored 16 and had nine assists, said, "There will be a lot of pressure on them. We want to bring it back here. We're about ready for a win down there."

Sonics Gain Tie

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — When Jack Sikma plays well, the Seattle SuperSonics fare well, says teammate Fred Brown.

Sikma was in the midst of his worst shooting slump of the season and the SuperSonics had dropped three straight games to the Phoenix Suns and faced a do-or-die situation in Sunday's Game 6.

The 6-foot-11 center, who had hit only 25 percent of his shots in the four previous games against the Suns, broke loose for 21 points Sunday, hitting seven of 11 attempts from the field and going seven for eight at the free throw line.

At the same time, Seattle came up with 54 percent shooting from the field, walloping the Suns, 43-27, and picking up a 106-105 victory before a sell-out crowd of 12,660 at Veterans Memorial Coliseum.

The victory knotted the best-of-seven, National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series at 3-3 and sends the two teams back to Seattle's Kingdome for the finale Thursday night. The victor will meet the winner of the San Antonio-Washington Eastern Conference title series for the NBA crown.

Win For Garland

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Wayne Garland was a red-hot item in 1976.

But since signing a lucrative 10-year contract with the Cleveland Indians as one of baseball's first big-money free agents, the pitcher has had a lot of curves come his way.

Part of his problems stemmed from mental pressures attached to his signing, and these were further complicated by injury. So a victory now and then sure eases the pain.

"It's been a long time; no doubt about it," Garland said after pitching the Cleveland Indians to a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins Sunday.

"I'm very pleased, though. When you only make one bad pitch you have to be," added Garland of the mistake he made on Ken Landreaux's solo home run in the fourth.

Garland allowed seven hits before needing relief help in the seventh and gained his first victory since April 25, 1978.

"The physical part is over with," said Garland, who underwent shoulder surgery last May after six starts and a 2-3 record. "Now it's just mental. I'm still trying to find myself when I get runners on base."

Elsewhere in the American League, the New York Yankees outscored the California Angels 12-10; the Boston Red Sox whipped the Oakland A's 8-2; the Kansas City Royals hammered the Chicago White Sox 14-5; the Detroit Tigers defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 6-2 and the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Texas Rangers 3-1 in the first game of a double-header before losing the nightcap 7-5. The Seattle-Baltimore game was postponed by rain.

Mears Takes Pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Rick Mears has proved last year was no fluke.

Mears, an easy-going 27-year-old desert racing specialist from Bakersfield, Calif., showed the veterans a faster way around Indianapolis Motor Speedway Sunday and won the pole position for the May 27 Indianapolis 500.

Even Joe DiMaggio's 39 home runs couldn't help the Yanks that year. They finished two games out in the losing column.

But, Cleveland came on strong after clinching the American League title in a playoff with the Red Sox. The Tribe's pitching took the Series 4-1 from the National League's Boston Braves and Bob Elliot's powerful bat.

What affect does a successful athletic program have on the city in which it is located? East Carolina University's Pirate Club executive director Gus Andrews has worked up some figures that prove that the university's impact on Pitt County is considerable.

Ficklen Stadium currently seats 35,000 fans. With the Pirate program meeting continued success, it is likely that several sellout crowds may fill the stadium this year.

If all five home games turn out to be sellouts, that would bring in $527,000 a game, or $2,635,000 a season.

DHC One-Hits SWE

HOLLYWOOD — Jeff Allen hurled a one-hit shutout at Southwest Edgecombe for D.H. Conley Saturday night, as the Vikings gained a 2-0 victory.

Allen struck out ten and walked five on the way to the win. He held the Cougars hitless until the fifth inning.

Both of the Conley runs came in the fourth inning. Ben Wilson singled and moved up on an error on the play. Curtis Spencer's grounder was errored, allowing Wilson to score. Spencer stole second and courtsey runner Billy Bunting then stole third. Micah Dixon singled, scoring Bunting.

Wilson led the Conley hitting, getting a pair.

Conley is now 12-9 on the year and plays at Farmville Central on Tuesday.

SW Edgecombe 000 000 0-0 1 3
Conley 000 200 x-2 3 0
Rhodes and Lewis: Allen and Spencer.

Minges Coliseum seats around 6,500. If the program gets to the point where it brings in capacity crowds, that would bring in $40,000 a game or $486,000 a year.

Income from contributions and advertisements are expected to shortly reach $750,000 a year. The athletic income, including ticket sales, game guarantees and student fees totals $1,300,000.

That brings the total of $5,171,000 a year. According to Andrews, this money turns over seven times inside the county, through sales, purchases, and other ways, making a total yield of $36,197,000 in the county.

For this reason, Andrews states, being a member of the Pirate Club, and supporting East Carolina athletics, makes good sense for the businessman in Pitt County.

In the same vein, new basketball coach Dave Odom isn't following in the footsteps of his predecessor and promising success is just around the corner.

Instead, Odom admits that it will take several years. But, he feels, the job can be done. Just as it has been done in football, but even that was not an overnight thing.

East Carolina wants a successful basketball program, and its fans deserve one.

There are plans to improve the seating in Minges Coliseum, giving more downstairs seats and eliminating those in the corner upstairs. Perhaps later, a different type of seating might be added in the balcony levels.

However, with hoped-for success will come the crowds, and we would like to see tickets for ECU games at a premium in a few years.

That would again highlight the need for some type of civic center in Greenville that would host the ECU basketball games, and many other events which could be put on in such a building.

We believe the need for such a building is already at hand. But it will take a joint effort by the university, Greenville and Pitt County to see it become a reality.

Media Seminar Planned At ECU

East Carolina University has announced its first Sports Media Seminar will be held on campus July 15-16, for high school students desiring to improve their journalistic skills and learn more about covering sports.

The one-week event, directed by East Carolina sports information director Walt Atkins, will offer students the opportunity to develop skills in writing news and feature stories, editing, use of pictures, graphics and layout, as well as information and public relations principles.

Numerous outstanding guest speakers enhance the program. Smith Barrier, executive sports editor of the "Greensboro Daily News" and Maryland sports information director Jack Zane, also a member of the NCAA public relations committee, will speak, along with A.J. Carr, the sportswriter of the year in North Carolina and a member of the sports staff of the Raleigh "News and Observer."

Mary Garber of the "Winston-Salem Journal" will visit the seminar as will Tim Stevens of the "Raleigh Times." Jim Woods, Sports Director of WCNC-TV in Greenville and the play-by-play voice of East Carolina football and basketball; Tom Harris, scholastic sports editor of the "News and Observer;" Woody Peele, sports editor of the Greenville "Daily Reflector" and a veteran football statistician; and Gene Cherry, city editor of the "News and Observer" and a former president of the Track and Field Writers of America will also attend.

The staff for the program will include Betsy Bjalobok, assistant sports information director at Old Dominion University, who handled the media needs for that school's 1979 national championship women's basketball team; John Justus, sports information director at UNC-Wilmington; and R.V. Hight, sports editor of the "Sanford Herald" and former SID at Campbell College.

"The best feature of this seminar is that it is not just a series of lectures," Atkins said. "It is a week designed to assist students in improving their skills by working at them. Our students will learn from some of the best and then have a chance to apply what they learn in work sessions and laboratories. Students will interview Cedric "Cornbread" Maxwell, former UNC-Charlotte basketball all-America and Boston Celtics standout; Pirate football coach Pat Dye, along with a number of East Carolina athletes and members of the Kinston Eagles baseball team of the Carolina League.

Work and lab sessions will be held in the spacious, ultra-modern press box at Ficklen Stadium on the East Carolina campus.

Enrollment is limited to 100, with dormitory students registering for $125, which includes all instructions, meals and lodging. Day students register for $75 which includes all instruction and lunch daily. A $35 non-refundable deposit is required.

Applications may be obtained through the Sports Information Office, Minges Coliseum, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834, or by calling 919-757-6491.

We'll pay you $1200 to get in shape this summer.

Join the Army for 3 months and we'll get you into shape. And pay you over $1200 while we do! When the 3 months are up, you'll come home, a civilian again and a member of the inactive Army Reserve for six years, no monthly drills or meetings to attend. And you'll take home a tougher body, a sharper mind and the maturity that soldiering gives you. For more information, call your Army Representative, listed in the Yellow Pages under "Recruiting."

3 months in the Army.

Stay with the reliables.

Bargain basement sucker control is no bargain.

When you're raising a crop that's worth up to $3600 an acre, you don't take chances on anything as basic as sucker control.

That's why most tobacco growers stay with the industry's two leading systemics. MH-30 or Royal MH-30 from Uniroyal Chemical.

Good tobacco growers know that you never sacrifice dependability for price. So go for all the reliability you can buy. Insist on original MH-30 or fast acting Royal MH-30 with Sorbatran*. It's just good business. Uniroyal Chemical, Division of Uniroyal, Inc., Naugatuck, CT 06770.

Health Insurance An Important Asset For N.C. Farm Families

By BILL HUMPHRIES
NCSU Agricultural Information
RALEIGH — Farm families should not overlook the importance of health insurance as a source of financial security, says Stephen R. Sutter, extension farm business specialist at North Carolina State University.

"Health insurance is one of the more complex lines of insurance, and the farmer should take care in determining the adequacy of present coverage or protection given by a policy that he is considering purchasing," said Sutter.

A health policy may cover medical expense solely as a result of accident, or both accident and sickness. Accident policies may also contain death, dismemberment, and loss of sight benefits as part of the contract.

Policies may be purchased by individuals or families directly from insurance companies or through group health plans offered by employers or farm organizations.

Sutter said health insurance policies are of several benefit types:

- Basic hospital and surgical expense policies provide a daily hospital benefit of some amount for a specified number of days.
- A surgical schedule may be included that lists specific operations that are covered, and the maximums payable for each. Provisions may also be made for miscellaneous hospital expenses, nurse attendance, or maternity expenses up to specified maximums.

— Major medical expense policies protect against catastrophic economic losses that would result from more serious and extended medical treatment.

These policies are characterized by a deductible, the initial amount of expense that the policy holder must pay in full. Expenses above the deductible are paid in part (generally 80 percent) by the insurance company, with the remaining part paid by the policy holder.

The policy will have a relatively high maximum coverage, per insured or per family, beyond which expenses are not insured.

— Disability income policies provide a specified monthly cash income for a certain number of months, to replace in part the income lost as a result from total or partial disability.

It is important for the farmer to know how partial or total disability is defined in his policy and duration of benefits. There may also be a waiting period before benefits begin.

Sutter said disability income benefits and waiver of premium may be attached as rider provisions to ordinary life insurance policies at an added premium. Farmers engaged in off-farm employment, he said, may be covered under workmen's compensation, and those age 65 and over usually qualify for Medicare coverage. Also, Medicare coverage is extended to individuals under age 65 if they are continuously disabled and received social security disability payments for 24 months.

"In choosing a health insurance program, important considerations are premium paying capacity, personal risk aversion, and the level of financial sources," the NCSU specialist said.

New Variety Of Soybean Seed

Farmers who have not purchased all of their soybean seed for 1979 might want to consider the new variety Centennial.

Jim Dunphy, extension soybean specialist at North Carolina State University, thinks Centennial might be advantageous to some farmers in the Coastal Plains.

"Centennial is the first mid-season variety available with resistance to cyst and root-knot nematodes," Dunphy said. "These nematodes are a real problem on a high percentage of the farms in the Coastal Plain.

Forrest is the only other variety with such a resistance, but is an earlier maturing variety."

Centennial was released in 1976, and adequate seeds are available this year for the first time. It has yielded slightly over one bushel more than Lee in official variety tests conducted over the past three years at NCSU.

Centennial is slightly taller growing than Lee and has a seed size similar to Davis. It also has excellent resistance to shattering like Lee, and like both Lee and Davis, tends to lodge when planted at high populations.

If liquid farm assets could absorb $500, $1,000, or more in medical expense, a comprehensive major medical policy with a deductible of this amount would be a possible choice.

Cost is relatively more constraining for decisions regarding disability income policies, especially for farmers of middle or upper middle age.

Monthly disability payments are made to farmers by social security. However, supplemental income protection may be desired above this basic coverage. Social security disability payments begin after five full months of disability and continue as long as the disability prevents the covered individual from working.

Benefit levels in basic hospital and surgical expense policies should be periodically reviewed to evaluate their present protection adequacy.

If hog prices slip to the low $40's and production costs increase moderately, will producers be able to break even? Since production costs vary widely by size of operation, part of the answer lies in studying the feeding budgets of different size operations.

Feed costs per hundredweight of hog sold remain nearly constant for all sizes of production units. But ownership costs such as investment, interest, taxes and insurance differ with an operator's size, yielding a wide range of returns to operator, family labor and management.

In the short run, producers must only cover cash costs such as feed, fuel, and marketing to stay in business. But over the long haul, total expenses including non-cash cost must also be covered.

Cash costs are estimated at approximately $34 per 100 pounds of hogs sold this year from all sizes of operations. Thus, even with falling hog prices, producers should be able to cover their cash costs of production.

However, the non-cash costs vary widely with farm size. Non-cash costs for producers selling 300 head a year are about $18 per 100 pounds sold. But for operators selling 5,000 head, non-cash costs are about $11 per 100 pounds sold.

So, for producers marketing 300 head a year, the total cash and non-cash costs are about $52 per hundredweight, but only $45 for large volume operators selling 5,000 hogs annually. This means that farmers who sell 300 head a year will be able to cover short run cash costs, but not the total costs or production during late 1979 and early 1980 if price predictions are accurate. Those selling 5,000 head will not only cover cash costs, but nearly cover total costs as well.

Pork producers will have to be as efficient as possible to cover production costs. Using facilities to the fullest will lower fixed costs per unit of production. In view of prospects for larger supplies and lower prices, producers can figure on an average near the mid-40's per 100 pounds during the second and third quarters, and the low 40's by the fourth quarter.

A great way to protect your tobacco growing reputation and profit...

Enide 50w at layby.

Your layby cultivation throws herbicide-treated soil up on the row ridges. The middles are left exposed to late-season weeds and grasses. A tough, lower profit harvest is sure to follow.

Economical, easy-to-apply Enide 50w banded over middles during or after layby cultivation fights the weeds and grasses that ruin your tobacco growing pride and profits.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A63 ♥75 ♦9762 ♣10932
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—You have 4 points and a potential misfit. Your hand will produce one trick for partner, but nothing more. If your side has a game, partner must have enough for a demand bid. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ63 ♥A964 ♦7 ♣KJ97
The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♦ Dble. ?
What action do you take?
A.—This is a good hand opposite a partner who could open the bidding. If you have a fit, prospects for game are excellent: if you do not, you should be able to punish the opponents. Even though you do not have support for partner's suit, the correct way of describing your hand is with a redouble. That requests partner to pass the next bid round to you. Obviously, you intend doubling any suit that the opponents bid.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK4 ♥6432 ♦AQ3 ♣AK5
What is your opening bid?
A.—Your hand is too strong to open one no trump, but not good enough for two no trump. The recommended method of treating this hand is to open one club and rebid two no trump. If you opted for one no trump, take a big demerit. The maximum for a one no trump opening is 18 points and you have 20.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J54 ♥KJ765 ♦K652 ♣4
The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♦ 1 ♦ ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you make a free bid of two hearts at this point, partner would be compelled to speak again. In all likelihood, he will rebid three clubs, which will place you in a most uncomfortable position. You can pass with perfect safety now. If partner has a strong hand, he will reopen the bidding. Beware of making forcing bids on potential misfits.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠63 ♥A95 ♦52 ♣AKJ754
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♥ 1 ♠ ? Pass 4 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—While you have shown a good hand with your two-over-one response, it need not be that good—your holding in partner's suit is most important, especially since you have two ruffing values. We would not blame you if you bid slam right away, but a more cautious approach is to raise to five hearts, and leave it to partner to bid slam if he has controls in both unbid suits.

Q.6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ97 ♥AJ ♦K43 ♣Q1063
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—The one thing you cannot do is double—you are unprepared for partner's likely heart response. It is a close decision between pass and one no trump. We prefer the former, for the opponents could easily get beyond their depth, which at this vulnerability will allow you to collect 100 points for each undertrick.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J5 ♥KQ10 ♦AQ104 ♣KJ95
The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♥ 1 NT Pass Pass 2 ♥ Pass Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Don't be overimpressed by partner's bid of two spades. Bear in mind that he was quite happy to let you play one no trump. Now he simply does not want the opponents to buy the hand cheaply and is showing a five-card or longer suit. We would pass. Too bad we didn't double two hearts, but at that time we didn't know partner had any values at all.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ10974 ♥KQ ♦9 ♣J1094
The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Had partner simply raised to two spades, you would have jumped to game. Therefore, a pusillanimous bid of four spades now doesn't come close to expressing the value of your hand. You should make some effort to get to slam. Unfortunately you do not have a first-round control to cue-bid; however, a jump to five spades will describe your hand quite accurately.

Paul Newman In Victory Lane

SUMMIT POINT, W.Va. (AP) — Actor and sometime auto race enthusiast, Paul Newman, is back on the winning track. The star of such movies as "Hud" and "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," opened his 1979 road racing champion bid Sunday with two victories, one of them during a rainstorm.

Newman encountered problems in both 46-mile races around the two-mile Summit Point Raceway course. In the second lap of the first event, Newman's car spun off the track when it slid through mud. On the 20th lap, he collided with a car driven by Bob Barnhill of Ruxton, Md., who finished second.

As a rainstorm passed overhead, Newman won the second race 14 seconds in front of his nearest challenger.

The 50-year-old actor won a national driving championship in 1976.

Adventure-Romance On Screen

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another of those lusty romance-adventure TV movies is upon us — John Jakes' "The Rebels," the continuing saga of Phillip Charboneaux, whom we originally met as "The Bastard."

As was the case with "The Bastard," "The Rebels" is a product of Operation Prime Time, a consortium of independent TV stations banded together to produce large-scale,

Redford Talks

Directing Role

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Film star Robert Redford says he may end his acting career and turn to directing soon. In the meantime, don't look for him to use films as propaganda.

Redford, well known for his environmental concerns, told a news conference Sunday he was offered "The China Syndrome" two years ago when Jane Fonda's role as a television reporter was written as a man's part.

"But the script I read seemed like propaganda," he said, adding that he was pleased with the way the film turned out.

The actor is in central Ohio for the filming of "Brubaker," which is based on the experiences of a reform-minded prison warden.

"The Bastard" — showed quite well, actually topping the networks in ratings in some markets. So far, the thing has worked. The first four Operation Prime Time efforts — "Testimony of Two Men," "The Immigrants," "Evening in Byzantium" and straightforward drama, light, fluffy dialogue, simple plots. Like "The Bastard," the newest offering is loaded with cleavage, costumes and manners. This time around, Phillip Charboneaux is known as Phillip Kent. He's the illegitimate son of a French nobleman, who's fled to America to escape a troubled past. Lucky for the story, the American Revolution just happens to be brewing, and Phillip jumps in with both boots. All romance novels have to have a lovable rascal, and this has three. Phillip is joined by another aristocrat with a past, Virginian Judson Fletcher. He brings along his backwoods pal, Eph Tait, who adds some earth to the stew.

Judson, says Eph, "has the kinds of style that gets him shot at by husbands and fa-

Every Day: Hello Americans, This Is Paul Harvey

WARMING UP — Paul Harvey gestures as he warms up with a series of vocal caesthenics prior to going on the air from a tiny network studio in Chicago. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — His voice boomed a sound test: "Woof one, two, three, four. Diddle dee, didlee dee. Woof, one, two, three." Then vocal caesthenics: "Nee-naw, neenaw, neenaw."

Seconds remained before he would talk to seven or eight million people.

His shoulders sagged a bit, and he turned to his three visitors in the tiny network studio and asked in a stage whisper: "Did you see the thing about Mickey Mantle dreaming every night about a comeback?"

"Real sad. Says he can understand why people talk about suicide. Once you get used to the applause it's hard to have it stop."

He swivels back to the two microphones. The red light flashes on.

"Hello Americans, this is Paul Harvey!"

It's a typical day for the 60-year-old Harvey. Wake before 4 a.m., do pushups "with zest." Wash down oatmeal with juice and Kava. Ride from his suburban River Forest home in a chauffeur-driven limousine to his fourth-floor office overlooking the murky Chicago River.

He uses the hours flanking sunrise to scan wire service reports, news magazines, letters, newspapers — looking for the oddball story, the human touch, the bright phrase, the incredible saga, the sex crime, the 60th wedding anniversary.

"I love work now more than ever. The second youth is the best youth." He jogs or plays golf in the afternoon and is in bed each day by 8 p.m., even if he's on one of his frequent speaking trips. He's a workaholic. His secretary says "he'd make notes in the shower if he could."

He recently signed a seven-year contract with ABC, which calls him "America's No. 1 radio commentator ... (whose) listeners respond by ... spending millions of dollars on advertisers' products."

He sends three radio newscasts a day to 809 stations — five minutes at 8:30 a.m., 15 minutes at noon and a "Rest of the Story" feature in the afternoon. He writes the newscast material: his son Paul, 30, composes the feature copy.

Typically, the newscasts begin with an advertisement that sounds as if to be a top news story. "Energy crisis ... invention can help nation ... buy Macklanburg-Duncan door threshold." His secretary says Harvey takes pride in writing all his ad copy.

Then news: Brezhnev ill ... Salt Lake City without phones because pipe breaks in women's room at Mountain Bell ... two causes of cancer found ... Shah of Iran's gold stolen ... Kennedy-Carter clash on oil decontrol. Carter refreshingly candid ... Fran Tarkenton may retire, likes ABC ... Mantle dreams of comeback, understands talk of suicide. ...

Another live commercial, Harvey reads: "Possible food shortage ... can what you can't eat ... think Kerr every time you can."

More news: Disneyland in Toyko ... farm prices up ... the author of song "Cheaper Crude or No More Food" is disabled Vietnam vet ... Steve and Cindy arrested in kidnaping and rape, maybe this time he'll get the chair ...

Newscast over: "My bride and son just came in," Harvey tells his visitors, pointing through the glass into the control room. "They're here for the 'Good Morning America' TV pieces I'll do later this morning."

Harvey and his entourage walk to the other side of the building to his suite of offices. The security door buzzes open and Harvey says, "Feel free to look around while I change."

Beige carpeting, wood paneling, modern furniture made of or trimmed in chrome. On the wall are copies of the Bill of Rights, the Gettysburg Address, the Declaration of Independence, keys to cities around the nation, plaques. One reads, "Whereas Paul Harvey informed the public to the dangers of anarchists ..."

Harvey closes the door to his private office where his wife, Lynne, helps him put on a different suit coat over his red suspenders, and a toupee over his balding top. She has been called the driving force behind Harvey. He says he "married an education," noting her Phi Beta Kappa key and his "very few classes in college."

A makeup woman takes over, puts some "pancake" on his face and hands so they won't reflect the TV lights.

"This is the first time I've used makeup," he says. "Don't know if I'll like it. It's just an experiment. ABC sent her over."

Back to the studio. Harvey's been doing twice-weekly segments for ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" since January. For radio, he needed only an engineer. For TV, Harvey adds a director, light man, script man, makeup woman and minicamera. Harvey doesn't write his own TV scripts. That's left to his son, whom Harvey calls "young Paul," although he's 30 and married. "Great way to get a second-string, raise 'em yourself," Mrs. Harvey whispers, pointing to her son as the script is rehearsed. The son is a concert pianist who finds better money working for his dad, writing "The Rest of the Story" scripts.

"I grew up in Depression-era Tulsa," Harvey says. "My education is all in one direction, vertical. I'm very proud that my son's education is horizontal. He can handle any subject."

His son was a conscientious objector to the Vietnam War. Long, sometimes heated, discussions between the two resulted in Harvey's switch in the late 1960s from super hawk to dove.

Harvey was angered by a recent story in Esquire magazine that said he changed his position on Vietnam because he wanted to keep his son from being drafted.

Harvey says he was brought up to believe that the only reason to fight a war is to win it. "The best the U.S. could do in Korea was to install a military dictatorship. In Vietnam, we weren't out to win, just mark time and bleed so I thought it was time to get out."

Harvey says his son had received a medical deferment a year before the famous newscast Harvey opened with, "Mr. President, I love you, but you're wrong" about Vietnam.

The Esquire story also said Harvey was discharged from the Army in 1944 because of psychosis, lied about the circumstances of his father's death, and changed his name to cover his Army record.

Harvey says he wrote "a point-by-point response to each point raised in the article, but then decided it was pointless. ... ABC convinced me that all it would do is result in headlines that repeated the charges — 'Paul Harvey denies beating his wife.' So I decided to step around it rather than step in it."

Harvey gave The Associated Press a copy of the rebuttal he had written, but had withheld at ABC's request.

"...First, I have never undergone any kind of psychiatric treatment in my life," he wrote. "This does not disparage such therapy but I have never experienced any of it at any time ..."

"I have never, in military service or out, tried to kill or maim myself ..."

"My time in uniform was abbreviated because I had volunteered for the Air Corps. I had left a comfortable deferment to enlist — was accepted — passed all tests — but before I could start training I was advised that the Air Cadet program had been abolished and I was 'in the infantry.'"

"I resisted the arbitrary switch vigorously until I was mustered out of uniform with an entirely honorable discharge ... and before I could be drafted back in we ran out of war."

"I remember an Army officer who thought I was crazy; I thought he was. I was angry, not mad ..."

"Next: My father was not killed in 'a hunting accident.' He and the then chief of police in Tulsa, Okla., were ambushed by hijackers, both shot, my father was killed and Chief Blaine never walked again."

The Oklahoma Sheriffs' and Peace Officers' Association confirmed that his father, Harry A. Aurandt, "is enshrined on a public monument among Oklahoma lawmen killed in the line of duty."

Harvey says he dropped Aurandt as his last name at the request of his first Chicago sponsor in 1944, adding "my own immediate family cannot agree on the pronunciation of Aurandt."

Harvey says he can't explain his success. "I'm not an introspective person. You'd have to ask someone who listens to me. But I can say that health is terribly important. I love what I'm doing but I couldn't do it without health and a great deal of energy."

Then he was off to tape his syndicated TV commentaries, to write his thrice-weekly newspaper column, to give a luncheon speech in Chicago, to fly to Fayetteville, Ark., for a speech. "But you can reach me at my office every morning after 4:30."

NATIONWIDE AUTOMOTIVE SERVICE LIMITED WARRANTY

All Goodyear service is warranted for at least 90 days or 3,000 miles, whichever comes first — many services, much longer. If warranty service is ever required, go to the Goodyear Service Store where the original work was performed, and we'll fix it, free. If, however, you're more than 50 miles from the original store, go to any of Goodyear's 1500 Service Stores nationwide.
