BROTHER "IN CUSTODY" — Clayton Jones, a brother of Texas State Senator Gene Jones, fastens a seatbelt in a Texas Department of Public Safety helicopter in Austin Sunday as they prepared to return Jones to his Houston home. Jones was arrested and taken to Austin Sunday after police mistook him for his politician brother. State police were ordered to arrest and bring to the senate chamber at Austin 12 missing senators dubbed the "Killer Bees" who have paralyzed senate action after their disappearance Friday. Texas Senate Is Tied Up By Absenteeism Tactic

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It will take more than Texas Rangers on their trail and threats to remove them from office to flush Texas' "Killer Bees" senators from their undercover hives, says a defiant member of the group.

"We can stay gone as long as we want to," Sen. Gene Jones, D-Houston, said Sunday as he and 11 other missing senators began their third day of disrupting Senate action and avoiding arrest.

State police and Texas Rangers made one arrest in their statewide search — only to find they had grabbed Jones' brother, Clayton, in Houston by mistake and flown him to the capital in a helicopter.

"It's not likely we're going to be found until we return on our own," said Sen. Jones, who telephoned a reporter. He said 10 senators were together Friday, talking of going to Mexico.

Meanwhile, their 19 colleagues — minus some with excused absences — convened briefly Sunday before adjourning without a quorum.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby ordered the dozen lawmakers, all Democrats, arrested Friday after they boycotted a Senate session. The chamber needs 21 senators to conduct business. Unless two absentees are found, the Senate can do nothing.

Hobby invoked a procedure last used in 1969. By "putting a call" on the Senate, absent members can be ordered arrested and brought back to the chamber.

The "Killer Bees" — so dubbed after they tried to kill several Hobby-backed bills — want to block passage of a presidential primary measure they say would benefit Texan John Connally and conservative Democratic state officeholders.

The Hobby-supported bill would authorize a March 1980 presidential primary separate from May general party primaries. Critics say it would encourage cross-over voting by Democrats eager to vote for Connally, who was elected governor three times as a Democrat.

The group's absence has halted other Senate action, including a decision on the state's 1980-81 budget and school financing program. A special legislative session could be required if these bills are not passed by the mandatory May 28 adjournment date.

Human Error Is Played Down

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators are saying "human error" was not a major factor in the Three Mile Island nuclear accident. Instead, they are blaming equipment malfunctions and misleading control-board readings for the near-catastrophe.

Congressional sources said a task force investigating the accident concluded operators were unable to halt the nation's worst nuclear accident because their in-

One Suspect Charged In Kidnapping, Assault

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One man was seriously wounded and another escaped unharmed late Sunday night after they were allegedly kidnapped by two other men, police said.

Authorities said Darrill Lewis Handsome, 25, of Goldsboro was held under $50,000 bond today after being charged with kidnapping and assault with intent to kill.

Investigators said they were searching for another man identified as Gerald Bryant, 27, an escapee from the state prison system. They said Bryant, who was serving a term for second-degree murder when he escaped, apparently was armed with three weapons and was considered to be dangerous.

George Thomas Bryant, 22, and Floyd Uzzell, 19, said they were kidnapped from Bryant's home Sunday night by two men.

Uzzell told officers he and Bryant were put in a car but that he jumped from it at an intersection on U.S. 117 south of Goldsboro. He said one of the abductors fired at him but missed as he fled.

Uzzell was treated at Wayne Memorial Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Investigators said Bryant was found along a road south of Goldsboro about 12:15 a.m.

Travel In N.C. As Usual

By The Associated Press

Despite rising prices for gasoline and numerous service station closings on Sunday, spot checks indicated it was travel as usual during the weekend in North Carolina.

In Raleigh, Lt. W. K. Chapman of Highway Patrol zone operations said there was no noticeable difference — increase or decrease — in the number of cars on the road.

"Teen-agers are still riding around, people are still traveling to resort areas," Chapman said. "We might be able to tell more after the Memorial Day weekend, when the summer beach season really starts."

Meanwhile, service station owners were repored to be bringing increasing pressure on the Department of Energy to allow them to boost their profit margin, threatening otherwise to close their pumps and "take a vacation" en masse.

Robert Dugan, president of the Guilford County chapter of the North Carolina Service Station Association, said Sunday sentiment is rising among owners to try to force the lifting of gasoline pricing by closing stations simultaneously.

Dugan said he foresees a national protest by station owners within three to four weeks.

The profit margin at the station level has been frozen since 1973, and many owners, caught between inflation and rising operating costs, are hurting, said Dugan.

A check of motels at beach and mountain resort areas brought replies that occupancy rates are about the same as they were this time last year.

While many stations have begun closing on Sunday, they were reported staying open at some beach resorts on Sunday for the tourist traffic.

Sen. Jackson Looks For Spreading Gas Shortage

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The rest of the nation may soon join the plight of California motorists and be forced to wait in long lines to obtain gasoline, predicts Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee.

"I think it will spread," Jackson said as his panel prepared to grill officials of five major oil companies on the reasons for the current shortages and the prospects for easing them.

Executives of Shell, Chevron, Exxon, Texaco and Amoco (Standard Oil-Indiana) were testifying today in what Jackson called "a fact-finding effort."

It began a week in which the Carter administration's energy policy will face key congressional tests. The biggest will come when House Democrats meet in a caucus Tuesday to vote on a proposal designed to block the president's decision to lift price controls on oil.

Organizers claim they have the votes to put Democrats on record against decontrol and to line up a House floor showdown on the issue.

In other congressional action, a task force looking into the nuclear power plant accident on Three Mile Island was presenting its findings today to a House Interior subcommittee. And the full House was to consider a Senate-passed measure to give the presidential commission investigating the accident the power to put witnesses under oath.

In an interview prior to the beginning of today's hearing,

Jackson, D-Wash., said gasoline shortages will get worse before they get better.

"It's going to be tight all over the country," Jackson said. "We have a national psychosis that is not dissimilar to a run on a bank when everyone tries to get his money out. This time it's a run on the oil bank and everybody is out to get all they can while they can.

"Gasoline supplies will be tight all over the country as people start keeping their tanks full," he said.

He said oil companies should give a better explanation of why there's a gasoline shortage. "The biggest issue in the country today is whether there is a contrived effort to withhold supply of refined oil products from the market.

"I have no evidence that there is such an effort. But I want to get the facts out on the table."

Jackson also said he wants to know what will happen to the price of gasoline if President Carter follows through with his intention to decontrol prices.

Three Ex-Beatles Are Reunited For Weekend

LONDON (AP) — Three ex-Beatles played and sang together at a weekend reunion celebrating the marriage of rock guitarist Eric Clapton to George Harrison's former wife, Patti Boyd, the London Daily Express reported today.

The reunion of Harrison, Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr took place at Clapton's mansion home at Ewhurst, Surrey, about 20 miles from London, the paper said.

John Lennon, who lives in New York, was the only ex-Beatle missing, it said.

The reported gathering may have been the closest the Beatles have come to a full musical reunion since they broke up in 1969.

The paper said the three ex-Beatles, joined by Clapton, performed on a makeshift outdoor stage before 200 invited guests. They sang 1960s Beatles hits such as "Sgt. Peeper's Lonely Hearts Club Band."

The secret gathering celebrated the recent wedding in Tucson, Ariz., of Clapton and Harrison's first wife, Patti, who was divorced from the ex-Beatle in 1977 after 11 years of marriage.

Harrison, 36, has also remarried. He wed his Mexican girlfriend, Olivia Arras, last September and they have one son, Dhani. They live near Oxford.

McCartney, 36, who lives in Britain with his American wife Linda, and Starr, 38, a tax exile in the United States and now concentrating on acting, have pursued their own careers with success since the Beatles' breakup.

The Daily Mirror also said McCartney and his current band, Wings, have just clinched the richest recording contract in the history of pop music.

The paper said Columbia records in America has offered McCartney and Wings a $2 million annual advance for each of the next three years to cut just one album per year. They also get a record 22 percent in royalties, the report said.

Lennon, 38, and Harrison have been more reclusive since the demise of the Beatles, the long-haired quartet that emerged from the cellar rock clubs of Liverpool in 1962 and went on to dominate pop music around the world for most of the swinging 60s.

The group drifted apart in 1967 when their manager Brian Epstein died. Lennon's marriage to Yoko Ono deepened the rift in 1969, the last year they performed together, and in April 1970, McCartney announced that the Beatles were finished. Their legal wrangles lingered on for several years.

At Least A Dozen N.C. Counties Reject Revised Medicaid Billings

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A change in the formula for Medicaid contributions by North Carolina counties has some of those counties complaining.

The state says the counties must pay an increased share of the Medicaid bills. But at least a dozen counties are refusing to pay them.

Under the law, Medicaid pays for care of patients in a skilled nursing home but not for those confined to rest homes. Local governments are required to pay a portion of the costs for Medicaid-covered patients in their counties.

Last year, the legislature decreed an increase from 15 to 35 percent in the counties' share of the Medicaid cost for skilled nursing care in an effort to get more people sent to rest homes, where the state does not share in the costs, or into nursing home beds where less-skilled care is provided, where the state and the counties pay less.

Legislation to change the financing formula back to what it was before last year's change is pending in the General Assembly.

The change became effective July 1, 1978, at a time when county commissioners had already prepared their budgets for 1978-79 without knowing that the change was coming.

Because the counties were not financially prepared for the increased costs, they are now running out of Medicaid money. About a dozen counties have refused to pay the increase.

The unexpected change is reported to have cost the counties $2.5 million. It is estimated that it will cost them $3.2 million in 1979-80 and $3.9 million by 1980-81.

Kenneth Martin, chairman of the Catawba County Commissioners, said his county expects a shortfall of $60,000 to $90,000 in its social services budget this fiscal year. He said the Social Services Department is asking for a 22 percent increase in its budget for the coming fiscal year — mainly because of the Medicaid problem.

The Catawba commissioners operate under an ordinance that forbids the use of local funds to finance shortfalls in mandated programs. "I'm not sure just what we'll do," Martin said.

Some other counties say they will not pay the difference even if it means a loss of federal funds.

Jerry Hobbs, Sampson

County finance officer, said his county faces a deficit of $104,000 in the Medicaid program this year and will not pay the shortfall from local funds. The commissioners there have notified the state Department of Human Resources of their decision and have been told they stand to lose about $150,000 in federal Medicaid funds.

The Davidson County Commissioners voted Thursday not to pay $106,000 remaining on this year's Medicaid bill and said it will include only 60 percent of the program's estimated cost in next year's budget.

Right To Speak

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today left intact a ruling that convicted criminals have a right to speak in their own behalf before being sentenced.

The justices refused to hear an appeal by North Carolina officials aimed at reinstating the sentences of two convicted safecrackers.

VIOLATING MAXIMUMS?

I understand service stations are now required by federal law to post a sticker on each gasoline pump stating the maximum price chargeable to the customer by law. This maximum varies, I understand, from company to company, according to a complicated formula. I have checked around town and have found a number of local stations charging more than their stated pump-sticker prices. Either they're overcharging their customers or are not keeping their stickers up to date. I even found one station that, though apparently not overcharging, had the sticker price written 99.9 cents per gallon, evidently to keep from changing the price so often. C. C.

Hotline checked with the Department of Energy in Washington, D. C. and found that many stations in the United States have been found to be overcharging their customers and violating federal law as a result.

According to Bill Webb, Information Director for the Economic Regulatory Administration of the Dept. of Energy, service stations violating the federal law which sets maximum prices can be penalized.

"Civil penalties for unintentional violations can be as much as $2,500 per day per pump and up to $10,000 per day for each willful violation," Webb said. "Since late 1973 stations have been receiving formulas from the Federal Economic Regulatory Administration which they have been required to use in computing their maximum prices."

Webb added that the maximum price varies from station to station and depends on wholesale costs and numerous other factors, including rent.

Stations failing to post a price-maximum sticker on each pump in service are violating the law, too, he said.

There are about 180,000 service stations in the United States. To aid the Dept. of Energy in its search for violators, a hotline number — 1-800-424-9246 — has been established, Webb said.

Persons, such as yourself, who have witnessed possible violations should call that number to inform the Dept. of Energy. However, you should be aware that overhead factors can make prices vary and your report could, in fact, be unwarranted. The federal agency does, though, say that it investigates each violation reported.

DAR Chapter May Fellowship Holds Meet Lunch Honors New Members

The Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) was formally organized in a meeting held Thursday at the home of Mrs. J.B. Barringer.

Persons organizing the local chapter were Mrs. Everett M. Ballengee, Mrs. Barringer, Mrs. James W. Briley, Mrs. Richard Dupree, Dr. D.G. Fogelman, Mrs. Robert V. Hall, Miss Geneva L. Jenkins, Mrs. D. The chapter's name, Susanna Coutanch Evans, was selected for its historical significance. Susanna, the daughter of Sara Pilkington and Michael Coutanch of Bath, married Richard Evans. In November, 1771, when the town of Martinborough was laid out, Richard Evans offered land; however, he died before the transaction was legalized. In July, 1772, Susanna, widow of Richard Evans "confirmed to the commissioners" the land for the town of Martinborough to be laid out. The area later became the city of Greenville, the county seat of Pitt County.

Ballengee, organizing regent, has been active in the DAR since 1941 when she transferred from the Children of the American Revolution. In New Jersey she has been state vice regent, state organizing secretary, state chairman-flag of the U.S., state chairman of Americanism and chapter regent. She and her husband, who retired from the Ford Motor Co., selected Greenville as their retirement home. Both are members of the First Presbyterian Church.

Judge Dink James greeted the newly organized chapter and commended the group for its dedication wishing it continued success in reaching the following objectives of the DAR: patriotism, education and historical preservation.

A May fellowship luncheon for 70 Methodist ladies honoring new members of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Women was held at the church today. Chairman of the luncheon was Mrs. William G. Blount.

Economic Impact Is Evident

It has been estimated that payroll of an industry turn over seven times in a community.

If that is the case, says Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the ECU School of Medicine, all he can say about the combined budgets of the medical school and Pitt County Memorial Hospital is "wow."

Speaking at a Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce coffee talk last week he said the combined budgets of the school and the hospital should come to $45 to $50 million by 1981. This year the budgets should total $40 with $28 million of that for personnel.

In addition to the operating budgets, Laupus pointed out that the $26 million medical science building is now under construction. Funds have also been allocated for a 166-bed addition to the hospital.

The main goal of the medical complex, of course, is to provide improved health care, but it also has a significant impact on the community, a "direct impact like an industry," he said.

The economic impact of the medical school and hospital is already evident in Pitt County. We can expect it will be an important part of our overall economic growth in the future.

Coal-Fired Plants Part Of Picture

The N. C. Municipal Power Agency No. 2, which includes municipalities of this area, has approved a study of constructing a coal-fired electric generating plant.

If the studies are favorable they could lead to the agency building a power plant which would provide electricity to the municipalities more economically.

We are all for proceeding with the study. Coal-fired plants now seem to be the wave of the future. The municipalities must explore every possible way to provide electricity in the least expensive way.

Competency Needs Effort

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A lot of local school board members and parents across North Carolina obviously think the law needs to be changed regarding teacher tenure.

Willing to take a stand on that belief despite prospects of alienating some teachers, both the Parent-Teacher Association and the School Boards Association have been promoting a futile legislative effort to change the tenure law.

present law can be used effectively to accomplish the desired goal of improving the classroom teacher ranks, it is felt.

No Use

One of the biggest problems is that all too many local school administrators use the present tenure law as an excuse for doing nothing about the occasional incompetent teacher. It is easier than preparing a case under provisions of that law and pressing the point to conclusion. That is often an ugly process and one which inevitably leads to unpleasant confrontations.

session of the General Assembly would have caused teacher tenure to be up for renewal every five years, at which time a teacher held incompetent could be dismissed without legal red tape.

The posture of the Association of Educators is that tenure is essential to protect teachers from politics, from parents angry because a child flunked a test, and to provide genuine professional status for teachers.

Local school officials have argued that the law in combination with the commitment of the NCAE to take every case to court effectively rules out dismissal, or even effective discipline, for teachers.

Gov. Jim Hunt says he firmly believes in measuring competency and effectiveness in the classroom, and has strongly supported the National Teacher Exam and other measures of competency.

No Effort

"The major problem is that we have not set our heads to doing that", Hunt says. It is, he added, a "hard job" involving regular classroom visits by the principal, note-taking, record-keeping, meetings and counseling.

"Some do all of that. Some don't. Some just throw up their hands and say you can't do anything with the tenure law," Hunt commented. The principal is the key person. "He is the leader, and makes all the difference in the world," Hunt says.

What is needed, Hunt believes, more than a change in the law is a "strong effort to ascertain the competency of teachers, and this may require state support for local people ... to help them learn to evaluate and to upgrade their management skills."

Find It In The Record

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Where else would you learn about the Gordon Bennett balloon race, about the night the directors of the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce burst into woe, and about National Pest Control Month?

Nowhere else but in the Congressional Record.

The Record is a remarkable document. Its purpose is to provide a reasonably accurate transcript of House and Senate floor proceedings. The members get a chance to "correct" the transcript of their remarks. As a result some of the more outrageous comments have failed to appear.

Recent reforms have led to identification of speeches which were not actually delivered by the member. But the Record is much more than floor debates. Members of Congress use it to pass on all sorts of information.

Thanks to Rep. Fortney H. (Pete) Stark Jr., D-Calif., readers of the Record have a little song to sing while waiting in gasoline lines.

Noting the long lines at gasoline stations in California, Stark said, "Inconvenience and disruption are the Californians' lot today." He told how the board of directors of the San Leandro Chamber of Commerce reacted with this song, sung to the tune of "O Tannenbaum":

"Energy, oh energy
"How sadly we have used you
"Energy, scarce energy
"So badly we've abused you
"Those BTU's we dissipate
"The gas pumps closed, in line we wait
"Oh, energy, spent energy,

"Your loss takes getting used to.
"Energy, our energy
"Your cost has hit the ceiling,
"Energy, dear energy,
"You're not at all appealing,
"The Carter plan has come and gone,
"Inflation's here — where's Alfred Kahn?
"Oh, energy, steep energy,
"Your price still has us reeling."

Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-Calif., used the Record to pass on the news that the Gordon Bennett balloon race will be revived next Saturday in Long Beach, Calif. Eighteen balloons from the United States, Europe and Japan will participate in the 27th flying of the race, last held in 1938.

Be grateful to Rep. Thomas N. Kindness, R-Ohio, for passing on the text of President Carter's proclamation declaring June as National Pest Control Month.

Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., wants to proclaim the week of June 17-23, "National Sky(lab) is Falling Week." His proposed proclamation would call upon "the people of the United States to observe such day with appropriate activities, skywatching and evasive action." and goes on to say the return will result in a man-made meteor shower, on "the people of the United

Tainted Money Is OK

WASHINGTON — Man and woman cannot live by bread alone. All of us need fantasies to keep us going, particularly when we're trying to fall asleep. Some people have difficulty coming up with a good fantasy, so as a public service I shall provide one which has worked for me for the past two weeks. You are all welcome to steal it.

I am driving along a highway and I notice that my gas tank is getting close to the "Empty" mark. Up ahead I see a gas station with 16 pumps. It is all lit up in beautiful colors. There is a large sign which says: "Unleaded Gasoline 27 Cents a Gallon — With Free Car Wash."

I pull into the vacant station. A man in a spic and span blue uniform with starched hat rushes out from his office and says, "Welcome, sir. I was afraid I wouldn't have a customer this evening. How may I serve you?"

"I would like a full tank of unleaded gasoline, please."

"Yes, sir," he salutes me smartly. "We have the best that money can buy. Would you like a cup of coffee while I'm filling you up? It's on the house."

Other Editors Say Death Penalty

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

In reading news reports of a throng of people, most carrying signs or banners and chanting, as they demonstrated in Atlanta against the death penalty, one can hardly escape the inevitable question: "Is all this necessary?"

The Demonstrators had termed Georgia the "Death Belt" as they demanded an end to "legal lynching" and decided that "death row must go," but one wonders if demonstrations in the streets could be as effective as some heart-to-heart talks with legislators.

As a matter of fact, demonstrations have become so commonplace, not only in the South but almost everywhere else, particularly in front of the U.S. Capitol, that one wonders if they haven't lost most of their effectiveness.

It all boils down to the matter of whether anyone has the right to take a human life. But the argument loses some of its vitality when the state asks for the life of one who has just taken a life himself and is being punished for it.

Georgia has executed more people than any other state, and today it is one of the three states with the largest death row population.

Some statistics involved indicate that the death penalty continues to be imposed, in an arbitrary fashion, according to opponents of capital punishment, and 11 southern states of the old Confederacy currently house 83 percent of the 494 people under death sentences across the country.

Some 34 states today have some kind of capital punishment law on the books. Most of them are patterned after the laws upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1976. And 24 of those 34 states have at least one person under death sentence.

If the matter of the death sentence were to be made subject to an amendment of the U.S. Constitution, the consequence indeed would be challenging.

At the moment, however, it seems unfair to castigate certain states or regions for upholding laws which have been placed on the books.

We believe there are more effective ways of dealing with the death penalty than employing slogans, marches and demonstrations. Getting at the core of the question, whether one is for or against capital punishment, must properly come about through legislation at the statehouse rather than marching in city streets.

"That's very kind of you," I say. "Black with two lumps of sugar."

The attendant gives me a steaming cup of coffee and puts the nozzle into my tank.

"Would you care to use the restroom? We have shaving equipment, hair lotion, combs and cologne if you'd like to freshen up."

"Thank you very much. I might just do that."

"In the meantime," the attendant says, "I'll check your oil, your battery and fill your tires with the correct pressure of air. Is there anything else you would like me to do?"

"I wouldn't be mad if you checked the oil filter," I say.

"I would be delighted, sir."

I go into the washroom and clean up and then return to my car.

The attendant, with a big smile on his face, says, "I took the liberty, sir, of putting your automobile through the car wash so you wouldn't have to wait."

"That's very decent of you," I say.

"I also vacuumed the inside of your car and washed

THE INSIDE REPORT

CIA Chief's Last Stand?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — On the eve of an historic Senate debate, President Carter's SALT II treaty has been jolted from an unexpected source: proposed testimony by CIA Director Stansfield Turner making clear that Russia can indeed cheat on the treaty.

That was not at all what the president had in mind when he ordered Adm. Turner to prepare testimony bringing the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) into line on the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT). He wanted Turner to back Carter's own statement that the treaty "will be verifiable from the first day it is signed."

Turner's voluminous brief, still secret, has stunned the White House by sharply disagreeing with the president. Examining various "cheating scenarios" that the Kremlin is likely to attempt, Turner points out one way after another Moscow could violate provisions of the treaty. "The way Turner makes his case," one of the few officials who have seen his brief told us, "it looks like the treaty can't really be enforced at all."

classmate at Annapolis.

It was naturally taken as a matter of course in this town that Turner would play Carter's SALT tune without a single errant note. If instead he pursues his present course, in the face of possible pressure from the president, it will be a remarkable valedictory for a career officer whose career has reached dead end.

The first sign of Turner's inclination came when his secret April 10 testimony to the Senate Intelligence Committee was leaked a week later. Presidential aides were mortified by Turner's statement that full recovery of U.S. ability to monitor Soviet missile telemetry could take up to four years after the loss of the Iranian stations.

The reaction by Carter aides was apoplexy, not because they viewed Turner as a rebel in their midst but because they considered him too dumb to know any better. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown hurriedly issued a public statement that Soviet compliance could be verified "adequately" in about a year. Carter aides peddled it hard to the television networks to wipe out the aftertaste of the Turner leak.

The president then ordered Turner to prepare his brief grievous blow to Carter's hopes of ratifying an unamended SALT II.

The brief is an elaborate series of charts and graphs matching each provision of the treaty with the following: the "monitoring task" of the CIA; the "monitoring system" available; the "confidence" the U.S. could place in forcing Soviet compliance.

Some of these violation attempts could be quickly discovered and stopped; some might be discovered; still others could prove irresistible to the Soviets, even though they would run the risk of discovery, on grounds that the gain from cheating would outweigh the loss of being found out. In short, Turner's brief is dramatically at variance with Carter's verification pledge.

That has stunned the administration's SALT-sellers, but it conforms to the way Turner regards himself in what could be his last great service in public life. He was made unhappy not only by the leaking of his April 10

Strength For Today

We frequently find people of pronounced Christian character who are members of other faiths.

Mahatma Ghandi, the Hindu leader, mystic, and founder of modern India, was such a person. He was not a Christian as far as the orthodox definition of the term goes, but his behavior often seemed to be modeled on Christianity.

He read the New Testament more eagerly and regularly than most Christians do today. He often said that he thought it was the greatest book ever written. He was unqualified in his praise of Jesus. Yet he still clung tenaciously to his Hindu faith.

One of the things he most loved were Christian hymns. At his funeral service the hymn "When I survey the Wondrous Cross" was sung.

Ghandi's career shows that many religions hold their noblest spiritual concepts in common. His career also shows the great power of the Christian faith.

Broadsides By Howard Jarvis

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Howard Jarvis was in good form. "The way to stop inflation is to refuse to sell paper to the government; then they won't be able to print more money," said the promoter of Proposition 13.

To Jarvis, the big issue today is people versus politicians, who he feels ignore the public's wishes, spend too much, create inflation, pass needless laws, and decline to take stands on important issues.

"They're a bunch of clowns in a business with no investment, no risk, no responsibility," he said of elected officials. "They're sitting on a gravy train."

Everyone at the hotel breakfast table laughed.

Jarvis was relaxed, having completed the tasks that brought him here, including the promotion of "Ax Your Tax," an upcoming board game in which players seek to beat the "Internal Revenue System."

He turned to big business. "It has two weaknesses," said the 76-year-old former businessman. "Political stupidity and abject cowardice." He paused. "It lies there like a mackerel in the hot sun."

On the day before, Jarvis had given his favorite talk, to some of New York's biggest money men. He felt he had impressed them, but he found their questions unusually discerning. "A tough audience," he said.

Generally, Jarvis indicated, he found listeners less challenging. Since last June, he said, he has spoken in 48 states, "and no matter where you go there's no difference: they want a tax cut."

Are people prepared to accept the alternative of fewer services, he was asked? He replied in an instant: "Yes. They don't give a damn about services the government says it is giving them."

He qualified the answer. Those who don't want the alleged services, he said, are those footing the bill. "There are others," he said, "who want twice as many services, and someone else to pay."

Howard Jarvis, who before retiring from business in 1962 made a fortune in newspapers and manufacturing (light appliances and aircraft parts), is having the time of his life. He feels honored. He is very pleased and surprised, he says, by his rapport with college students.

For many years, however, he suffered anonymity, waging a sometimes lone fight for lower taxes. Then he scored last year with Proposition 13, which lowered California property taxes to 1 percent of value.

Now he is engaged in a new initiative that would, among other things, reduce the California personal income tax by 50 percent, eliminate the business inventory tax, and freeze the sales tax.

Pitt Delegate To Workshop

Patrick Dixon, a rising senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, has been chosen by the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District as the delegate from Pitt County to the 1979 Resource Conservation Workshop, District Chairman Robert G. Little has announced.

The workshop will be held Monday through Friday, June 18-22 on the N. C. State University campus, with 100 delegates from across North Carolina expected to attend. Sponsors are the N. C. Assn. of Soil and Water Conservation Districts, the N. C. chapter of the Soil Conservation Society of America, and the N. C. State Soil and Water Conservation Commission.

PATRICK DIXON

Dixon, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Dixon, lives in Grifton. He is a member of the Ayden-Grifton School Science Club, VICA Club, Junior ROTC, and the Honor Society, and also the Grifton Presbyterian Church. He plans to attend N. C. State University and major in conservation, engineering, or history. During this past summer he worked in Gates County with the Youth Conservation Corps and said he acquired a special interest in conservation and how he, as an individual, can help in this field.

"Why thank you, my good man. Here is a dollar bill for your kindness."

"I'm sorry, sir, but we are not permitted to take tips. We get our satisfaction from making our customers happy. Will this be cash or a charge?"

"Cash. But I only have a $20 bill."

"That's no problem, sir. I'll be glad to make change. Since you have purchased 10 gallons of gasoline, you have the choice of a complete set of dishes or a copper frying pan or a new set of golf clubs."

"I think I'll take the golf clubs."

"Very good, I'll put them in the trunk. We also have a fire engine for your child, or would you prefer a computerized football game?"

"The fire engine will do."

"Here it is. And here are your green stamps. You get a bonus of 30 for purchasing unleaded gasoline."

"I must say you have a very smooth operation here."

"Our job is to sell gas, and if we can induce you to come back, then we feel all the trouble we've gone to will not have been in vain. We're in a very competitive business, and since people can buy unleaded gasoline anywhere, we have to make them believe that we're the best."

We shake hands and I start off on the highway. A few miles down the road I pass another gas station with a large sign: "Free Massage With Purchase of One Quart of Oil."

By this time I am blissfully asleep.

struments conveyed data that was either wrong or hard to interpret.

Those conclusions are in contrast with previous contentions by some Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials that operator error played a major role.

The task force report, the first congressional assessment of what went wrong at the nuclear plant located near Harrisburg, Pa., was scheduled for presentation today to a House Interior subcommittee.

A senior member of the investigating team, who asked not to be identified, said the central findings of the task force, headed by Rep. James Weaver, D-Ore., are that:

—Control room operators acted reasonably in light of the information available to them during the first hours of the March 28 accident and followed prescribed procedures.

—A pressure relief valve stuck in the open position was the single most serious malfunction, but conflicting information reaching the control room delayed a diagnosis of the problem for more than two hours.

—An emergency core cooling system that had turned on automatically was throttled back dramatically, contributing to reactor overheating, — but was done so based on confusing instrument readings and testimony but by Secretary Brown's rebuttal. He feels the administration should handle such highly classified matters in private, free of political salesmanship.

Turner also has left a strong impression that he does not regard his role as a seller of SALT. He sees no part for himself in pushing the Senate, either for or against the treaty.

Will the president (or more likely one of the president's men, considering Carter's aversion to confrontation) lean on Turner hard enough to drastically amend his brief? If such pressure is applied, the admiral's friends predict, he may resign. Turner is determined in his last stand to be neither a purveyor nor a detractor of SALT, and that is the worst kind of news for the White House.

cannot be considered "operator error."

—Temperature in the reactor core soared to a dangerous 2000 degrees Fahrenheit during the first two hours of the accident but control room monitors were inadequate for measuring this high a temperature directly.

—Two valves on an auxiliary water pump system that mistakenly had been left closed when they should have been open contributed little to the severity of the accident.

—Given the information available, the control room operators did what they were supposed to do, they acted reasonably," said the task force official.

—They weren't highly trained engineers. They weren't the most profound people in the world. And they weren't prepared for this type of thing," he said.

—We're emphasizing design error more than human error."

He said a sophisticated nuclear engineer, presented with the same information, might have realized the reactor core was deprived of cooling water and headed for a possible meltdown.

Two Collisions Early Sunday

An estimated $800 damage resulted from two pre-dawn collisions investigated by Greenville Police Sunday.

Officers reported $500 damage resulted to a car driven by Vernon Donald Cooke of Youngsville, when his car struck an embankment at the end of Arlington Boulevard, west of the Red Banks Road intersection about 1:30 a.m.

Police said an estimated $150 damage resulted to each of two cars which collided about 12:50 a.m. at the intersection of Reade and Fifth Streets.

Investigators identified the drivers of the vehicles as Jeffrey Dean Baker of Route 1, Stokes, and William Eugene Tucker III of Fayetteville.

ATLANTA (AP) — A disease once associated with persons living along the lower Connecticut River is showing up around the country, according to the national Center for Disease Control.

Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent Sam Uzzell called for warmer days and nights as county croplands received almost an inch of rainfall this weekend.

According to the Water Department of the Greenville Utilities Commission, the river level rose from 12.6 feet on the national scale Friday to 13.7 feet Monday morning.

Saturday's rainfall was measured at .86 of an inch, with .14 of an inch received Sunday. Temperatures rose to the high 60's during the weekend, with low 50's recorded during the nights.

Crops should get back on an even keel with warmer temperatures, Uzzell noted. However, he pointed out that if air conditions become stagnant, some plants may suffer from air pollution damage during hot, humid weather.

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—You have very sound opening bid values, especially if you take into account that the king of clubs has gained in worth. You should be sure of game, and there is no question about where you want the hand played. Bid three no trump. Don't bid two no trump. This is only invitational and partner will almost surely decline if he has a minimum.

What do you bid now?

A.—An old friend in a new guise. Should we raise partner despite the fact that we have only three-card support, or rebid hearts to show a good five-card suit? When partner's response is in a major, it is usually sound policy to raise his suit, if your hand meets the requirements. This one does, so two spades is the recommended action. Besides, if you rebid two hearts, partner is likely to suspect that you are not interested in his suit, and this suspicion will be difficult to correct later in the auction.

Ticket Dismissal Charge Disclaimed

BENSON, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Lindell Nordan denied that he ordered his officers to get traffic charges dismissed.

A former Benson policeman, Sgt. Joseph W. Smith, said that among the alleged cases was one in which the mayor's mother-in-law received a traffic citation. He and several other Benson police officers recently quit the force, alleging that they had been ordered to have traffic cases dismissed.

Johnston County court records show the failure to yield charge against Mayor Whitley Hood's mother-in-law and three of the other six cases were dismissed. The defendant in a fifth case was acquitted, and Smith said he could not recall details of the sixth case.

Nordan, a 10-year veteran with the Benson police, denied in an interview that he had ordered the charges dismissed. He said that in the four cases Smith recalled, the officers had agreed that the charges should be dismissed because they would be difficult to prosecute.

"I have nothing to hide on this," Nordan said. "I'll be damn glad when it's over, and I can stop hearing about it."

He declined to comment on the case involving the mayor's mother-in-law.

Morehead City Port's Crane Being Dismantled

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — From his office, Morehead City port manager Robert Goins can look out the window and watch construction crews dismantling a huge crane.

The $2.6-million crane, which is used to handle cargo shipped in containers that fit on the back of trucks, is being moved down the coast to North Carolina's other port at Wilmington.

The State Port Authority's decision to move the crane to Wilmington, which already has one container-cargo crane, is a political hot potato in Carteret County now. Goins isn't about to burn his fingers by saying whether losing the giant crane will hurt the Morehead City port.

"That's a policy decision that was made by the (ports authority) board without consulting me, and properly so," Goins said in a recent interview.

But some Morehead City residents remain upset about losing the crane and their anger manifests itself in a bumper sticker that proclaims, "Remember the Hunt regime — They took our crane."

The ports authority decided to move the crane, and Gov. Jim Hunt backed that decision, because Morehead City wasn't getting much container business while Wilmington was. Local supporters of the state port see the moving of the crane as a blow to the area's economy.

They say industries that use containers to ship their cargo may not be attracted to the Morehead City area, which now lacks a major industry and relies instead on tourism and fishing.

"From an economic development standpoint, that crane leaving here hurts us," said Leonard Safrit, a member of the Morehead City Port Committee, a civic organization that works to boost business at the port.

"If we owe our children anything, we owe them the right to come back to Carteret County and live where they were born. In Carteret County now, that's not a choice," he said.

Safrit's committee launched an extensive but unsuccessful campaign to keep the crane at Morehead City. The committee compiled data that showed the potential for container business at Morehead City was much greater than that indicated by State Ports Authority figures.

But the ports authority voted late last year to move the crane, and it is scheduled to be on the docks at Wilmington late this month or early next month.

Safrit said there is no animosity or competition between the ports of Morehead City, which handles mostly exports of agricultural and mineral products, and Wilmington, which gets both imports and exports of a range of goods, including industrial products.

"Nobody is arguing that they (Wilmington) needed a second crane," he said. "But our figures showed it would be (best) over the long run to buy a second crane for Wilmington and leave ours here."

State Ports Authority officials disagreed. Moving the crane from Morehead City, at a cost of about half a million dollars, will actually improve the Morehead City port's financial picture, said ports authority chairman Thomas Taft in a recent interview. He said the crane was losing money for the port by sitting idle.

In recent years, Morehead City has lost money in its operation each year while Wilmington has made money. Because it is closer by road, and therefore less expensive to shippers, from Wilmington to the industrial Piedmont, Wilmington has basked in a reflected glow from the Piedmont's industrial development.

Morehead City traditionally handles mostly exports of agricultural and mineral products while Wilmington gets both import and export shipments of a variety of products.

Wilmington handled 455 ships during the state's fiscal year of 1978 while Morehead City handled 200. But in tons of cargo, Morehead City was in front, moving two million tons in 1978 compared with 1.9 million for Wilmington.

Taking the container-cargo crane will leave Morehead City with two smaller gantry cranes, which Taft contends can adequately handle that port's amount of container cargo.

Safrit and other members of his committee don't see it that way.

"Cargo can be handled with the gantries, but it's like using firecrackers to build a road when you've got blasting powder," said Kenneth Fischler, also a member of the Morehead City Port Committee.

Meanwhile, Goins is optimistic about the future of the Morehead City port. He points to increases in recent years in the number of tons of cargo handled here. Exports went up from 871,251 tons in 1977 to 947,665 tons last year, and imports went from 160,087 tons in 1977 to 275,308 tons last year. "The trend is up," he said.

New Retirement Bonus For N.C. Judges Eyed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislation has been introduced in the General Assembly that would allow nine judges to receive retirement benefits for past service as prosecutors or clerks of courts.

The bill would give judges an opportunity to buy additional retirement benefits for the years that they held those positions.

It would substantially increase the retirement benefits for several, officials say, and could cost taxpayers as much as $367,192 in matching payments.

Under the bill, the judges could purchase retirement credit, paying a percentage of their salaries for the years involved in order to have those years credited to the state's judicial retirement system. The bill doesn't specify the percentage.

Sponsors of the bill were Sens. Harold Hardison, D-Leonoir; Edward Renfrow, D-Johnston; and William D. Mills, D-Onslow.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles, whose department administers the retirement system, said in an interview, "It's changing the rules in the middle of the game."

Boyles said that the judicial retirement system's board of trustees "has not seen fit to recommend that bill."

A New York actuarial firm, George B. Buck Consulting Actuaries, Inc., was retained by state retirement system officials to determine the impact of the bill on the state treasury.

The firm said that while the bill would cover 13 judges, four of them probably would not take advantage of it because they would have to pay a large amount to purchase the credits.

The 13 judges are Superior Court judges John R. Friday of Lincoln, Giles R. Clark of Elizabethtown, D. Marsh McLelland of Burlington and Albert W. Cowper of Kinston; Appeals Court Judge R.A. Hedrick; and District Court judges Robert L. Warren of Concord, Claude W. Allen Jr. of Oxford, Ben H. Neville of Whitaker, Robert E. Williford of Lewiston, Frank M. Montgomery of Salisbury, Joseph E. Dupree of Raeford, Charles E. Manning of Williamston and John S. Gardner of Lincolnton.

Judges Cowper, Dupree, Manning and Gardner probably would not take advantage of the change, according to the actuarial firm.

Largely Blame Driver-Error

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — About three-quarters of the school bus accidents investigated in a recent study were due to bus-driver error, researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say.

John Lacey of the UNC Highway Research Center said preliminary findings of the study indicate that improper turns by bus drivers are the most frequent cause of accidents.

"Most of the accidents occur when a driver cuts a corner too close or takes it too wide. If they take the corner too wide, they can hit a car in the opposite lane," Lacey said. "Most of the accidents from cutting too close involve scraping a parked car."

Investigators at the center studied school bus accidents in Orange, Durham and Chatham counties in an effort to develop ways to reduce the number of accidents and student injuries in North Carolina.

In gathering information, researchers interviewed drivers, followed buses on their routes and took numerous photographs and measurements of accident scenes.

Lacey said steps being taken to improve school bus safety include installation of special crossing arms on the front of buses carrying elementary school children and additional mirrors to improve the vision of bus drivers.

"The crossing arms will swing out from the bumper when the front door is open to force the children to cross at least six feet in front of the bus," Lacey said. "The safety arms will be installed on the approximately 8,200 buses carrying elementary children."

Dallas Whitford, assistant director of the Division of Transportation of the State Department of Public Instruction, said mechanics should begin installing the crossing arms and mirrors on the buses by June 30. While the crossing arms will be installed only on elementary school buses, the mirrors will be placed on all 12,100 buses operated by the state, he said. Whitford estimated the cost of the project at $600,000.

Lacey said the final results of the study should be ready in August or September.

Try Reimplant Of 3 Fingers

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Doctors may not know for some time whether surgery was successful on a South Carolina girl who had three fingers reimplanted at Duke Medical Center, a hospital spokesman said Sunday.

Kimberly Denise Enlow, 11, of Batesburg, S.C., was flown to Duke Saturday after her index, middle and ring fingers on her right hand were severed in a motorized bicycle accident.

Doctors started surgery about 9 p.m. Saturday and didn't finish until early Sunday, said Ken Wheeler, a spokesman at Duke.

"So far, everything has gone as scheduled," he said Sunday. "Physicians won't know for some period of time just exactly what the outcome will be."

Wheeler said she was in stable condition Sunday night. Kimberly was flown to Duke by Army transport, her fingers packed in ice.

Authorities in Lexington County, S.C., said the girl apparently was riding on the back of the motorized bike when it fell on her hand, severing the fingers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prospective takeover candidates were the standout gainers as the stock market chalked up a modest advance today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 2.42 at 844.33.

Gainers held a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Fairchild Camera & Instrument, which agreed to be acquired by Schlumberger Ltd. for $66 a share in cash, led the active list and rose 7 1/2 to 63 1/2. Fairchild had opposed a previous bid by Gould Inc.

Schlumberger, meanwhile, was down 1 1/4 at 70 1/2.

Shakespeare Co. gained 1 1/4 to 12 1/2. The company said it had been approached by an investment banking firm seeking "detailed information" about its business.

Florida Gas was delayed in opening on word of a merger agreement with Continental Group.

So was Seaboard World Airlines, after Flexi-Van Corp. announced plans to acquire the company for $18.25 a share. Flexi-Van dropped 1/4 to 16 1/4.

Analysts said there was nothing particular in the economic news to account for the general market's advance.

The NYSE's composite index rose .14 to 56.40. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .85 at 180.95.

Volume on the Big Board was a sluggish 9.70 million shares after the first two hours.

City Policeman Injured In Pursuit, Accident

SCENE OF MISHAP...Members of the Greenville Rescue Squad place Policeman S. B. Pass on stretcher for transportation to the hospital after patrol car the officer was driving ran off Memorial Drive while in pursuit of another vehicle last night. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

A Greenville Police officer received minor injuries last night after his vehicle went out of control and ran into a vacant field off Memorial Drive after the driver swerved to avoid colliding with a car which pulled into his path from Country Club Drive.

Officials said the mishap occurred about 11:20 p.m. when the police car was in pursuit of a south-bound vehicle.

Highway Patrol Sgt. Claude Harrison, one of the investigating officers, identified the driver of the police department car as Ptl. Steve B. Pass.

Harrison said Pass was in pursuit of a car when a vehicle operated by Cynthia Lynn Thompson, 23 of 113 Greenway Apts. pulled into Memorial Drive from Country Club Drive.

Pass, according to the Highway Patrolman, swerved to the right to avoid colliding with the Thompson car, then went out of control and struck the left hand curb, coming to rest about 150 feet from the roadway in a vacant lot.

Harrison said three tires on the city-owned car were flattened by the impact with the curb. He noted that there was a possibility of some front suspension damage to the vehicle also.

No charges were made in connection with the incident.

City officials said Pass was in pursuit of a car wanted in connection with an incident on Albemarle Avenue a short time earlier in which some type of gas was allegedly sprayed in the face of William Monk Jr. of Bell Arthur.

Investigation of that incident is continuing.

Need Funds To Promote Vote

Co-chairman Dr. Jon Tinglestad stressed the importance of accumulating more donations for publicity efforts at the Monday morning meeting of the Greenville/Pitt County Steering Committee for Passage of the School Bond Referendum.

According to the treasurer's report given by Mrs. Naomi Edwards, a total of $885 has been collected so far, with $130 designated by the Greenville City Board of Education for a special newspaper advertisement.

Dr. Ken Rollins, who has been named by the committee to handle the media aspect of the positive vote on the referendum, noted that approximately $300 will be needed to pay for the flyers and information bulletins, which will be distributed throughout the county and city this week.

"We will need money for television, newspaper, and radio advertisements as the campaign goes on," said Dr. Tinglestad. "Every small donation will help in paying for the promotion."

"I've been asked by many people why no ads have been seen in the papers or on television," Tinglestad continued. "We must have money in hand to pay for these advertisements."

Superintendent of Greenville City Schools Glenn Cox noted that principals and parent-teacher organizations within the city school system had allowed some sort of donation in their promotion plans.

Dr. Tinglestad told committee members that he had explained to school groups that the money in the bond referendum was definitely needed to go on with projects, such as the construction of the auditorium for city schools.

Committee members reviewed the information bulletins and promotional flyers, which will be distributed this week, before adjourning to meet again Monday, May 28. Committee co-chairmen Dr. Tinglestad and Jim Black have been scheduled to appear on WNCN-TV's "Carolina Today" program, Tuesday, May 22, at 7:15 a.m.

Wright Hits FT's For Bullets Win

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Bobby Dandridge of the Washington Bullets nodded, but it was the Seattle SuperSonics who went to sleep.

As he prepared to make an inbound pass with two seconds remaining in the opener of the National Basketball Association championship series Sunday, Dandridge made an almost imperceptible motion with his head.

But Larry Wright picked up the subtle signal, drove the lane for a bounce pass from Dandridge, and was fouled by Dennis Johnson on a layup attempt as time expired.

Wright, who came off the bench to score 26 points, missed his first free throw but sank the next two, giving Washington a 99-97 victory and a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series which resumes here Thursday night.

"Bobby motioned that the lane was open," Wright said. "I gave a head fake the opposite way and came down the lane."

"Wright just beat me," said Gus Williams, who scored 32 points for the SuperSonics and had blocked another Wright attempt when Washington brought the ball inbounds with five seconds left.

The Bullets, trying to become the first repeat champions of the NBA in 10 years, had three chances to win after Dennis Johnson rebounded a John Johnson shot and tied the score with 25 seconds left.

After Tom Henderson missed and Seattle's Lonnie Shelton fumbled the ball out of bounds, the Bullets intended to set a double screen for Dandridge, their clutch performer who had 23 points.

But Dennis Johnson switched to foil the strategy and after Wright's hurried shot was tipped by Williams, Seattle's Jack Sikma knocked the ball out of bounds.

This time, Dandridge tossed the ball inbounds, a move which may have confused the SuperSonics.

Dennis Johnson, guarding Kevin Grevey, moved to block the lane when Wright broke free and didn't agree with the call by official Ed Rush.

"I thought I blocked the shot," Johnson said, "but with all the noise, I couldn't hear a whistle. I thought we were going into overtime."

The SuperSonics, who won the opener of last year's seven-game series with Washington after trailing by 19 points, almost equaled that miracle comeback.

Trailing 91-73 early in the fourth quarter, Seattle reeled off two 10-point strings — with Williams scoring six during each streak — and forged the tie when Dennis Johnson scored his 23rd point.

The SuperSonics picked up 23 points on 20 Washington turnovers, several while using a press in the closing minutes. But Seattle was outbounded 55-41 and hit only 11 of 23 free throws.

Neil Wins M-D

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Blue combined with yellow to produce long green for Neil Bonnett and a picture-perfect ending to an otherwise frustrating weekend for the veteran race car driver.

The blue was from the shirts of the Wood Brothers, the faded pit crew that tuned Bonnett's Mercury to perfection. The yellow was a last-minute caution flag that enabled him to catch up with fast-running Cale Yarborough. And the long green was the $17,750 Bonnett earned for winning the Mason-Dixon 500 Sunday.

Near-Ace Provides Lift For Geiberger

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It was a grand scheme, and Al Geiberger dreamed of it often. The final hole of the U.S. Open. He would lash a long iron to within an inch of the cup.

There would be cheers and champagne and a tap-in and a bunch of money.

Well, it wasn't the Open, or the last hole, or even a cinch. But he did what he dreamed of. And it won him the $300,000 Colonial Invitational golf title.

With his 4-shot lead eroded, his confidence in shambles and the wolves at his heels, the lanky, affable Californian slapped a 5-iron 2 inches shy of a hole-in-one on the par-3 16th hole.

It netted him a birdie, restored his confidence and propelled him to a one-shot victory Sunday in a typically traumatic final round.

It left Don January, with a 65, and Gene Littler, with a 68, frustrated runners-up.

"I hadn't done anything sensational all day," Geiberger concluded after firing a closing 3-over-par 73. "I had a few doubts...All of a sudden I hit an iron like that."

"It gave me a lift. With 2 more holes to go, I thought, 'I can go to work and try to win this.' It seemed like a new ball game all over again."

Geiberger snaked in a 7-foot par putt on No. 17 and recorded a safe bogey at the 18th to close out with a 72-hole total of 274 and his first victory since 1977.

It was worth $54,000 which, he dead-panned, "will go good with the $5,000 that I won so far this year."

Tom Watson, with a foot in the grave, dipped to 5-under through 10 holes. With four straight birdies, the tour's leading money winner appeared almost certain to challenge for his fourth triumph of the year. But a double bogey at the 12th torpedoed that possibility and Watson's 3-under-par 67 left him tied with Jim Colbert for fourth.

Colbert and Watson earned

$13,200, precisely one half of what Littler and January got as runners-up. Colbert slipped home with a 69.

First and second round leader Leonard Thompson slumped to a 2-over-par 72 and tied Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller at 278, a shot ahead of Wayne Levi, Ed Sneed, Bruce Lietzke, Jack Renner and Lindy Miller.

Geiberger, one of the tour's 20 millionaires, embarked on the final round with a 4-shot lead over Barry Jaeckel and was five shots ahead of Thompson.

Both challengers collapsed. Littler and January shot threatening 4-under-par 31s on the front side, leap-frogging into contention. But neither could master the tricky cross winds to maintain a charge.

The 1979 spring sports season is virtually at an end as far as the area high schools are concerned, and this year didn't produce much in the way of spectacular things for the Pitt-Martin-Greene schools.

Except for a couple of things of note, it was somewhat of a ho-hum year, with little happening.

There were a few highlights, however, and perhaps a couple yet to come.

Martin County must be tremendously proud of the play of Jamesville High School's baseball team, which went through the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference for the second straight year without a loss. During the year, the Bullets put together a string of 56 and two-thirds innings of scoreless ball against their opponents, which included both 1-A and 3-A opposition.

Research by the North Carolina High School Athletic Association proved that string tied a national high school record, first established by El Camino High School of San Francisco, Cal. Ironically enough, the Jamesville string ended on a bases-loaded walk.

The Bullets were to have opened playoff activity in the 1-A classification on Saturday night.

Elsewhere in Martin County, Chris Morning of Roanoke High School, won the regional high jump title with a leap of 6-10 and will participate in the state meet this weekend.

Only two others made the state field from the area, Conley's Bernard Hill, third in the long jump, and Greene Central's Melvin Bynum, third in the triple jump in the regionals.

Greene Central, however, had a banner year in its baseball and softball programs, both winning Eastern Carolina Conference titles. The Rams play Washington tonight in the first round of the 3-A playoffs, while the Lady Rams, who went unbeaten in the league, play host to New Bern on Wednesday in the unclassified girls' playoffs.

Rose High School's golf team qualified for the state tournament for the first time last week, and began play today in Chapel Hill. The four qualifiers are Pat Dye Jr., Mike Moye, Jack Mann and Greg House. They won the sectional tournament to qualify.

Fred Matney of the Rose tennis team also qualified for the state net tournament this week, another first time thing for the Rampant team.

Rose's baseball team probably would have been in line for a playoff berth but for two back-to-back injuries that robbed them of the services of two of their senior leaders, Ronnie Chapman (broken ankle) and Will Sanderson (ruptured liver).

The Rampants seemed to fall apart without their play and fell by the wayside after losing only once in the first half of the season prior to their injuries in the Pitt-Greenville Tournament.

One of the brightest things on the high school level, however, really isn't there. It's at the junior high level at E.B. Aycock.

The Jaguar baseball team went through a one-loss season, while the track team was unbeaten for the third straight year.

Many of the times and distances recorded by the junior athletes were better than those posted by their senior high fellows.

The fact that many of these players will be on the Rose High level next year gives a bright future to prospects over the next few years.

Ozark: Sweep Won't Hurt Phils

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

It's a long, long time from May to September and, according to Danny Ozark, now is not the time to worry.

"I don't think losing one game or three games out of 162 is going to have an effect on professionals," the Philadelphia manager said Sunday after Montreal ripped the Phillies 10-6 to complete a three-game sweep of the National League East's three-time champions.

"If this were September, it might have some effect," Ozark added.

Still, it had the double effect of shaving the Phils' division lead to one game and of making the upstart Expos believe in themselves a bit more.

"This has to lift the team up. Taking three games from the team in first place is enough to give anybody a lift, and especially the way we did it," said Gary Carter of the Expos. Montreal had needed lifting, taking a five-game losing streak into Philadelphia.

They Expos turned it around with three come-from-behind victories and with some solid relief pitching. "We had three starters knocked out, and each time our bullpen pulled us out. It's something we didn't have before."

Dodgers 6, Reds 4

Don Sutton gave up a threerun homer in the bottom of the eighth that pulled Cincinnati into a tie, but he was still the pitcher of record when Von Joshua led off the ninth with a homer that made Los Angeles a winner.

Mets 8, Cardinals 7

Richie Hebner had a two-run double in the first inning and a three-run homer in the 10th to keep New York in the game, then Frank Taveras belted a bases-loaded single in the 11th inning over St. Louis' drawn-in outfield for the victory.

Giants 8, Braves 1

Bob Knepper stifled Atlanta on three hits while Bill Madlock drove in three San Francisco runs with a homer and a single.

Pirates 6, Cubs 5

Pittsburgh won its fifth straight and Chicago dropped its fifth in a row, thanks to homers by John Milner, Dale Berra and Omar Moreno.

Astros 1-6, Padres 0-3

Terry Puhl's home run gave Houston the only run it needed in the opener and Gene Richards' error paved the way to the Astros' winning run in the nightcap.

Puhl's first-inning homer was all Rick Williams needed. He five-hit San Diego in the first game, outdueling Gaylord Perry. In the second game, with runners on first and third in the eighth inning, Richards, the Padres' center fielder, dropped Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly, allowing a second run to score and helping the Astros put together a five-run burst. Enos Cabell and Art Howe had RBI singles in the explosion.

Ryan, John Hurl Gems

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Nolan Ryan's express left the Chicago White Sox limp and Tommy John's local anesthetic was anything but painless to the Boston Red Sox.

The two veteran pitchers used contrasting styles to fashion brilliant two-hitters Sunday. Ryan, California's fireballing right-hander, blew his smoke past the White Sox for 11 strikeouts in pitching the Angels to a 4-0 victory. John, a left-hander, only fanned five but used his sinker to record 16 ground ball outs and boost his record to 9-0 as the New York Yankees blanked the Boston Red Sox 2-0.

John, backed by home runs from Reggie Jackson in the fourth inning and Graig Nettles in the ninth, allowed only a bunt single by Jerry Remy in the first inning and a sliced double by Fred Lynn in the fourth and then retired 14 batters in a row until a one-out error in the ninth preceded a game-ending double play.

John matched a two-hitter by teammate Ron Guidry late last season. They are the only southpaws to blank the Red Sox in Boston's cozy Fenway Park since 1974.

"I've been lucky pitching on the right day, wet and heavy air," John said. "I'm also in a good groove."

Angels 4, White Sox 0

Like John, Ryan faced only 28 batters, one over the minimum. He allowed only singles by Chet Lemon in the first inning and Greg Pryor in the third and retired the last 20 batters.

Ryan has struck out 10 or more batters in a game 122 times, extending his own major league record.

Orioles 6, Blue Jays 2

Dennis Martinez fired a four-hitter and Lee May drove in two runs, one with a solo homer. Martinez, 6-2, retired 19 consecutive batters after Toronto scored in the second and third innings.

Royals 5, Twins 1

Darrell Porter and Pete LaCock hit consecutive triples when Minnesota's outfield defense collapsed and Kansas City scored two runs with the help of shortstop Roy Smalley's throwing error while Paul Splittorff checked the Twins on nine hits.

Rangers 6, Mariners 4

John Grubb drove in three runs with a homer, sacrifice fly and single. Grubb's RBI single in the sixth capped a three-run rally, highlighted by Larvell Blanks' two-run single, that gave Texas the lead.

A's 7-2, Brewers 6-1

Dwayne Murphy knocked in both Oakland runs with a homer and a single and Steve McCatty pitched five innings of shutout relief in the nightcap. Wayne Gross' two-out ninth-inning single snapped a tie in the opener. Milwaukee's Dick Davis hit a solo homer in each game.

Indians 9, Tigers 7

Gary Alexander smashed a game-winning two-run homer off John Hiller in the bottom of the ninth inning.

Strohs Finals

Top-seeded Dan Attlerud and unseeded Sam Modlin faced off at noon today for the right to meet Andres Alvarez in the men's singles finals of the Stroh's Greenville Open tennis tournament at ECU's Minges Courts.

All three are Atlantic Christian College players. The finals are slated for 4 p.m.

The men's doubles finals will follow at 6 p.m. and pit Attlerud and Soren Blumgren, the number one-seeded team, against Alvarez and Modlin.

Nancy Powell and Carlie Wille captured the women's doubles championship yesterday with a 6-0, 6-4 victory over Lib Proctor and Margaret McGlohn.

The women's singles championship will be held at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon against top-seeded Anne Sayetta and second-seeded McGlohn.

First Federal 7, Exchange 3

Both teams scored three runs in the first inning, but First Federal added one in the third and three more in the fourth to defeat Exchange yesterday in a make-up Tar Heel League game.

Erwin Best scored the winning run in the third when he walked, moved up on a pair of wild pitches and came in on an infield out.

Brian Joyner was responsible for the winners' first three runs with a three-run homer in the first, while Billy Michel had a two-run homer for Exchange.

Michel was the leading hitter in the game, going 2-3.

Kiwanis 10, Coca-Cola 9

Robert Ehrmann scored in the bottom of the eighth inning yesterday to give Kiwanis a 10-9 victory over Coca-Cola in a make-up game in the North State League.

Coke scored four runs in the first, three on a homer by Jay Wynn, and added another in the second for a 5-0 lead before Kiwanis could get on the scoreboard. The winners put one across in the third, but Coca-Cola scored four in the top of the fourth for a 9-1 lead.

Kiwanis scored five in the bottom of the inning and added three in the fifth to tie the game up and send it into extra innings.

In the bottom of the eighth, Ehrmann walked, moved up on a passed ball and scored on a pair of wild pitches.

Chicod 2, Farmville 0

Two years ago, excess rainfall caused damage to many tobacco fields in Pitt County. However, some fields were damaged more than others. The rate and degree of recovery was better on those fields with good surface and sub-surface drainage. However, just as important, one could easily recognize the fields that had plants on a high row ridge. The high row ridge is good protection from water damage.

To guard against water damage, a high row ridge should be maintained throughout the cultivation period. An even larger ridge should be built up at the last cultivation. The row ridge serves at least two purposes in avoiding water damage. The ridge will give a "house top" effect which will shed some of the excess water to the row middles and then help it drain out of the field. This will reduce the amount of water that passes through the fertilized zone, which in turn reduces leaching.

A high row ridge also insures that a larger proportion of the roots will be above the openings in the row middles. Thus, a larger proportion of roots will be above the zone subject to waterlogging and will be less apt to be killed by ponded water in the soil. High row ridges may be especially helpful on soils that have poor internal drainage and are subject to possible waterlogging.

Tobacco drowns because of free water accumulating in the root zone and filling the soil pores. This prevents air, or more specifically, oxygen, from entering the soil and being available to the roots. A lack of oxygen in the soil causes roots to die; and prevents plants from picking up enough water to keep the leaves turgid. Thus plants wilt and in extreme cases die.

The extent of root damage depends on the height of the "ponded" water, on the root system and how long it stays there. "Ponding" of water in the root zone is caused by poor surface drainage causing fields to be flooded, or more frequently, by the accumulation of large quantities of water in the soil due to its inability to pass through a hardpan layer or a poorly drained impervious clay subsoil.

The rate and degree of recovery from drowning is dependent on many factors including severity of damage, freedom from diseases, and weather following drowning. If nearly all of the root system is killed, there is little or no chance of recovery.

However, if only the lower 20-25 percent of the roots are damaged, recovery may be good if favorable weather follows. Favorable weather for good recovery means warm, but not excessively hot temperatures and frequent, light rains to keep the top six to eight inches of soil reasonably moist, so that the top roots can function most efficiently.

Plan To Hold Annual Sessions

The new Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce announced plans today to conduct an annual Legislative Affairs Conference each year on the Wednesday following Easter, beginning Wednesday, April 9, 1980.

M. W. (Mokie) Stancil of Smithfield, chairman of the Governmental Affairs Council of the new regional Chamber, said the location of the conference will be alternated annually between Greenville and Raleigh, with the 1980 conference being conducted in Greenville.

He said the date of the conference has been set to coincide with the Spring Recess of the Congress so that Representatives in Congress from districts in the 43 county eastern area and the two U. S. Senators can attend along with their legislative aides.

"We will also invite all members of the General Assembly from Eastern North Carolina Districts," Stancil said in discussing plans for the conference.

He said the conference is being planned to give officials of local Chambers of Commerce, leaders in local governments and business leaders in the East an opportunity to see and hear our state and national elected representatives, back in home territory, in one place so that a "communication can take place regarding legislation related to Eastern North Carolina."

Stancil said extensive efforts by the North Carolina Citizens Association in the area of legislation "are beginning to pay off, and we are hopeful that this conference will enhance those efforts.

"No single local Chamber of Commerce could under undertake a project of this scale," Stancil said.

"But, each local Chamber of Commerce in Eastern North Carolina can have some major input into this conference," he said.

Stancil said his Governmental Affairs Council has already started to work putting together the details of the conference and will make periodic announcements of progress in this regard.

Incorrectly Attributed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An Associated Press report last week incorrectly attributed a statement about a draft of regulations on oil refineries in North Carolina.

The report quoted Denny Shaffer, an officer of the Sierra Club and member of a citizens' advisory committee studying refinery regulations, as saying the state attorney general's office had reviewed a draft and found that parts of it exceeded the state's authority.

The statement should have been attributed to Larry Wallace, director of enforcement for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Dilemma For Canada's Voters

By CHARLES HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
TORONTO (AP) — Grocery

prices are climbing. Jobs are tough to find. A flood of immigrants seems to clog the economy. But in Toronto's St. Paul's district the real issue of the general election Tuesday is the men at the top — Pierre Elliott Trudeau and Joe Clark. And as St. Paul's goes, so may go the nation.

Trudeau, the brainy but abrasive prime minister of 11 years, is "uncaring" and a "dictator," many people say. Yet Clark, the boyish neophyte who covets Trudeau's job, is "incapable," "no kind of leader" and "immature," say some of the same people.

The St. Paul's voters' dilemma in choosing between Trudeau — that is, the Liberal Party — and Clark — the Conservatives — is a problem felt by citizens across the country.

Under Canada's parliamentary system, they actually will be voting for their individual representatives in a 282-member House of Commons. The party winning the most seats generally forms the new government, and the party leader becomes prime minister. But the voters in most cases care more about the leader than the local candidate, and the tight St. Paul's race between incumbent Liberal John Roberts and Conservative challenger Ron Atkey has become a facsimile of the neck-and-neck race nationwide. For these reasons, political analysts have been watching St. Paul's closely.

"There's no doubt the anti-Trudeau feeling is the big thing helping Atkey," admits a Conservative campaign aide in St. Paul's.

It's certainly the big thing for George Warren. He said there was no special point of policy that turned him against the French-Canadian prime minister. "It's his dictatorial attitude. ... What kind of leader tells guys to 'get off your ass and look for work' when they complain." He was referring to a Trudeau retort to unemployed men who heckled him at a rally.

Warren is voting Conservative. Of the 39-year-old Clark, whose vacillation and inexperience worry many voters, Warren said, "He isn't up to it, he's no leader. But with some good advisers telling him what to do, he'll be OK."

If many people in St. Paul's find the 59-year-old Trudeau overbearing, many also think his youthful Conservative opponent falls short of the mark.

"He doesn't really project himself very well," 26-year-old Bob Martin said of Joe Clark. "He has no real profession, no business experience, no special training. He comes across as unpolished, sometimes bumbling but undeniably ambitious."

Martin, a bookkeeper, says he's undecided on the vote. "But I know Trudeau will make a better leader than Clark."

Most Americans would be surprised at how easily their Canadian cousins decide to vote

Socialist.

The New Democrats, a social democratic party on the Scandinavian model, will probably badly undercut liberal strength in St. Paul's on Tuesday, and possibly lose the seat for Trudeau's forces.

The NDP, offering Ed Broadbent as its candidate, has tried to soften its staunchly leftist image for this campaign. Even little old ladies, it seems, are going Socialist.

"Trudeau's no good, and Clark is immature," a white-haired matron told a reporter. "I'm voting NDP because they're the only people with a real program. They're the only ones who want to help people."

Professor Teaches Planning Is Key To Disaster Survival

PROVO, Utah (AP)—Teaching people how to survive calamities has earned Alton Thyngerson the nickname of "Professor Disaster" on campus, but that doesn't bother him.

It's all part of a campaign to educate people about preparing for disasters—before they hit. The key, says Thyngerson, professor of safety and health at Brigham Young University, is thinking out beforehand what to do should disaster strike.

"Every family or individual should have a plan made out beforehand on what to do in case of fire, flood, earthquake, or other catastrophes," said Thyngerson. "When you're dealing with human lives, a little bit of planning is a very small price to pay for keeping people safe."

Thyngerson believes that it's important to be prepared to feed and clothe a family for an entire year, not just a week or two, should disaster strike. He advocates storing a year's supplies of food and other necessities, and learning to develop skills for self sufficiency such as gardening, hunting or fishing.

"Most people are threatened by disaster at some point in their lives," said Thyngerson. "I ask my students each semester how many of them have seen some kind of disaster in their lifetime, and most of them raise their hands to say that they've seen a tornado, or been in a hurricane or flood or earthquake. And these students are only 20 years old."

Thyngerson, author of the recently published "Disaster Survival Handbook," himself was raised on disasters. "As a child growing up in Texas I remember heading for the storm cellar when a tornado was on its way. That's how I first became interested in what to do about impending disaster. "We lived close to a refinery, too, and I remember evacuating the town when there was a danger of fire. The announcement to evacuate would be made over the radio, and we'd take all our important papers and some blankets and leave town, hoping we'd still have a house when we returned."

Some disasters are predictable, but others can take us by surprise, Thyngerson noted. That's why it's important to have a plan in mind for the unexpected.

"We know that hurricanes frequently visit the Gulf and Atlantic coasts, earthquakes occur more often in the West, and a tornado belt extends from Texas to Wisconsin. But disasters don't follow hard and fast rules. Towns far from rivers have been flooded. Tornadoes have been reported in all 50 states at one time or another, and lightning can strike almost anywhere," said Thyngerson.

What should be done to prepare for disaster? Think your plan of action through according to the situation, Thyngerson advises.

"For example, the safest place to be during an earthquake depends on whether you're in the city or the country. If you're in a city with skyscrapers, the most dangerous place to be is in the street; go inside. If you're in the countryside, it's smarter to stay outside. If you're at home, the safest places would be in a doorway structure, or under a solid desk, table or chair.

"If you're caught in an avalanche or landslide, use a swimming action, where you actually try to swim out. If you're hiking in snow country, an avalanche rope is suggested. It's about 3 feet long, and attaches on the back, so if you're in an avalanche it floats to the top and you can be spotted better."

"During an avalanche, if possible, get rid of your skis if you're cross-country skiing. Then just before you settle, go into a fighter's stance, and try to get your hands in front of your face to form an air pocket. After 30 minutes, there's a 50-50 chance of survival in an avalanche," said Thyngerson.

In case of fire, the best way to get out of a second-story window is to crawl out, hang by the window ledge, and then drop. Land with bent knees, and then roll as you land, like a parachutist.

"If you have a third or fourth floor in your home, there are rope ladders that you can buy, or you can tie bedsheets together and climb out, just like you see in prison movies," said Thyngerson.

A person's best mode of action in a blizzard depends again on where the individual is when it hits.

"If you're in your car in front of your house, you should obviously get out and walk in. If you're out in the country, it's best to stay with the car because it can offer shelter, and if people are looking for you, the car's easier to spot than you are. If you run your heater to keep warm, and the wind is coming from the left to right, roll down your right window to avoid carbon-monoxide poisoning. Run the heater periodically, instead of continuously," Thyngerson suggests.

"If you plan out your survival strategies beforehand, your chances of living through the disaster are much higher," he added.

When the wraps finally came off the long-awaited legislative proposal for a tax cut last week, it was clear there's been much ado about very little in this General Assembly session.

Since first proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt on a network television program last summer, a tax cut has been on the minds and in the comments of legislators.

But when its benefits, in dollars, are weighed against its cost, in services and programs that will go neglected, the value of the entire tax cut package is well worth questioning.

Even one of the leading advocates of a tax cut in this session, Senate Finance Chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, frankly concluded that the tax cut dollars won't mean much to the average taxpayer.

"No, it's not meaningful tax relief," he acknowledged to a reporter last week.

The plan agreed upon by a House and Senate subcommittee amounts to $85 million returned to taxpayers over the two years of the upcoming state budget. But $22 million of that is for special tax benefits, narrowly drawn and not having broad effect, leaving $63 million for a general income-tax reduction.

The plan will raise by $100 a year the exemption for children and other dependents. It will increase by 10 percent other personal exemptions and push the standard deduction up $50 to $550.

But in application, the plan will mean little to the average taxpayer. With close to 2½ million North Carolina taxpayers, the benefits for each will range from $10 to $49 and average about $25.

And that is over a two-year period.

The tax cut will take effect Jan. 1, 1980, and slight reductions may be reflected in tax withholdings from pay checks. But the real effect will not really be seen by the average taxpayer — assuming it is noticed at all — until he fills out his 1980 state tax forms in early 1981, nearly two years from now.

While they have haggled over the shape and size of the tax cut for five months, a number of legislators have voiced complaints about what it has caused them to give up in the state budget. Rep. Clyde Auman, D-Moore, head of the appropriations committee on human resources, is one.

"This tax cut is so small feel like it's going to be meaningless for most people, and there are a lot of poor people out there that are going to be hurt by it," he said. "Not that they're losing services, but they're not getting any new ones that they need, that I hear them begging for."

Illustrating his point, three groups boosting the causes of talented, handicapped and mentally ill children protested in front of the Legislative Building Friday because of $5 million cut from a new appropriation for children with special needs and from developmental day-care programs.

The general budget for public education, kindergarten through high school, is where some have suggested that more money could go.

The state Board of Education asked for $300 million in additional money, above their operating budget, and they appear likely to get about half of it. A $140 million request for personnel was trimmed to $38 million. Education leaders say that is still a significant start because it will reduce junior high school class size from 33 to 30 students. But they had asked to reduce the size to 26 and to 23 in the first four elementary grades.

Large amounts are included in the proposed budget to complete Hunt's reading program in the primary grades and for remedial education in upper grades. But $8 million asked for increases in fuel and other expenses to operate school buildings was cut to $1 million, and education leaders say the rest will have to be picked up by local school systems.

Rauch, the finance chairman, says the tax cut will have a broader purpose, beyond the small economic value and beyond budget cuts.

"We've done something more important that give the average taxpayer a tax cut," he said. "The legislature is saying we are going to stop the accelerated growth of government. The principle, this first time, is greater than the dollars."

Given the months of rhetoric that brought the tax cut, however, and the maneuvering last week by legislative leaders to be out front with a pay bonus to teachers and state employees, most of those legislative accomplishments appear to have more political than economic meaning.
