Standing By Proposal To Ignore Federal Guideline

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Legislative leaders are sticking by their proposal to include a $200 bonus in the pay raise for teachers and state employees, despite federal objections that it violates the spirit of President Carter's anti-inflation guidelines.

The supplemental budget proposal got its first airing before the full joint appropriations committee today. No questions were raised about the pay bonus, despite the objections from federal officials.

House Appropriations Chairman Ed Holmes, D-Chatham, took issue with comments made Friday by Alfred Kahn, chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, who said the pay raise package violates the intent of the guidelines.

"I think Alfred Kahn's statement, if interpreted, might indicate it violates the spirit but it's technically correct," Holmes said.

By JERRY RAYNOR

A proposed budget of $774,874 for the School Food Service (SFS) of the ten schools in the Greenville City School System was approved by members of the City School Board at its action meeting on Monday night. The SFS budget, unlike the current expense and capital outlay budgets, is one that does not involve local funds. Sources for the budget's funds come primarily from U.S. Department of Agriculture grants — a regular grant of $467,288 and a cash-in-lieu grant of $10,000. State Aid Supervision funds requested amount to $28,637; $174,095 is projected from sale of full pay school lunches; and the remainder of funds budgeted are monies representing sales of breakfasts, meals to adults (staff members) and the milk program.

school units within Region I of northeastern North Carolina relative to per pupil expenditures.

The report reflects four categories — state, federal, local and overall figures of per pupil expenditure funding.

On the state level, the amount of $862.79 per pupil is allocated to students in Greenville schools, which places Greenville in 52nd rank statewide and 12th within the 17 units in Region I. The highest support in state funds goes to the Hyde County schools at $1,025.17 per pupil, making it the highest also statewide. Pitt County Schools place 46th statewide at $870.58.

Federal funds received per pupil for students in Greenville schools amounts to $203.17, placing it 47th statewide and 11th within the region. Pitt County Schools at $244.20 is in 25th place statewide, with Gates County Schools in top place in the state at $452.00 per pupil.

The category of local funds support per pupil shows Greenville 22nd statewide at $364.78, and third in the 17 unit list. Pitt Schools in this area is 44th statewide, and seventh in Region I at $312.21, and Dare County is in top place, with $444.75 received per pupil from local fund sources.

Overall, within the context of the 17 school units in Region I, Greenville ranks 24th in funds received per pupil, at $1,430.74 from all sources. Pitt County schools rank 26th overall, at $1,426.99 per pupil, and statewide overall, Gates County receives the highest per pupil amount, $1,741.02.

In personal action, the resignations of three teachers were accepted, and the election of two interim teachers was approved. Five persons were added to the approved substitute teacher list, three with teaching degrees and two with non-teaching degrees.

Turnover To City Talked By Utilities

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The proposed $33.24 million 1979-1980 Greenville Utilities Commission budget was reviewed last night at a joint Commission-City Council session.

The formula also provides that non-betterment improvements to the utilities distribution systems (such as relocating utility service for street improvements where no new customers would be served and no improvements in service to customers would result), would either be paid for by the city when the work is done — if such work is the result of city council action — or deducted from the turnover.

The most lengthy discussion centered on the Commission's turnover to the city and a review of a formula agreed upon by commission members at a session last week.

The formula also includes a provision that when Gas Department profits increase, some turnover from that fund will be made to the city.

Under the formula, the commission will turnover an amount equal to six per cent of the net investment in the electric department to the city each year...some $915,000 for the 1979-1980 fiscal period.

Commission member Gene Prescott suggested that if the formula is followed in the future, the Commission should consider moving to a cost-of-service system for establishing rates, rather than the present practice of simply tracking wholesale rate increases to retail customers.

"Doing one without the other is a short-sighted mistake," Prescott said, pointing out that it is possible that wholesale rates paid to Virginia Electric and Power Co., which are regulated by an agency of the U.S. Government, might be higher than retail rates which are controlled by the North Carolina Utilities commission.

In addition to the budget, Ed Walker, president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce appeared at the session and presented a proposal under which the commission would enter into a contract with the chamber for public information service assistance, similar to the contract now in effect between the chamber and the City Council.

Commission postponed discussion and any action on the proposal until their June meeting.

GUC director Charles Horne told commissioners and council members that a chemical-pharmaceutical firm is considering a location in the Greenville area, although he emphasized, "it's quite a bit up in the air at this point."

Horne, who said the firm would produce amino-acids for use in intra-venous fluids, said it would employ between 130 and 400 persons and require some 450,000 gallons of water a day initially.

Saying the amount of water required would tax the present system, Horne explained that two deep wells would probably have to be installed to help meet the industry's needs until the new water plant is constructed and placed into operation.

"Wherever one assigns the responsibility for this situation, there is clearly a stark absence of coherent leadership on this issue," Riegle said. His panel opened hearings on how the gasoline shortage is affecting independent oil suppliers and individual service station owners.

Make Up Day

Monday, May 23 will be a regular school day in the Greenville City Schools. This date was originally scheduled as a holiday (Memorial Day), but is being used as a makeup day for a day lost earlier due to snow.

Administration Urges Refineries To Boost Gasoline Production

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, its energy policy under new attack today in Congress, is urging oil refiners to boost their production of gasoline to help ease shortages at service stations.

Refineries have been asked by federal officials to "help ease the immediate shortage by increasing the rate of use of available crude oil and gasoline stocks," says Deputy Energy Secretary John F. O'Leary.

Current oil and gasoline reserves could be tapped by as much as 380,000 barrels a day through the end of August, O'Leary said Tuesday in written testimony for the Senate Energy Committee.

Such a step would permit gasoline supplies to reach about 96 percent or 97 percent of last year's level and "help reduce long lines at gasoline stations," O'Leary said.

The statement appeared to reflect a significant change in administration policy, which previously had stressed the importance of building heating oil stocks for next winter — even at the expense of gasoline production.

However, O'Leary said crude oil and gasoline stocks could be drawn down "by a total of about 42 million barrels by the end of the summer without causing serious operational problems."

Meanwhile, House Democrats were meeting today on a proposal to put Democrats on record as opposing the president's decision to lift price controls on domestic crude oil.

Leaders of the move said it was possible that a vote by the Democratic caucus on their resolution might be postponed until Wednesday.

Sen. Donald W. Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate Banking subcommittee on economic stabilization, criticized the administration today for blaming energy shortages on Congress.

"Wherever one assigns the responsibility for this situation, there is clearly a stark absence of coherent leadership on this issue," Riegle said. His panel opened hearings on how the gasoline shortage is affecting independent oil suppliers and individual service station owners.

Duke Scholarship Is Announced For Greenville Student

Susan L. Tucker, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Donald A. Tucker of Greenville, has been awarded an Angier B. Duke Scholarship for study at Duke University.

The Duke Scholarship is the highest honor an undergraduate can receive. It carries a stipend of from $1,000 to the current cost of attending Duke, depending on need.

Tucker, is one of more than 60 winners of A.B. Duke Scholarships for 1979. She is a graduating senior at J.H. Rose High School.

Her extracurricular activities include membership in the National Honor Society, the swimming team, cheerleading and track.

A.B. Duke Scholarships, funded by the Angier B. Duke Memorial, were established in 1925 by Benjamin N. Duke in memory of his son. They include a six-week summer session at England's Oxford University or up to $1,200 for self-designed summer learning experiences. Winners of the scholarships were selected from a field of 132 finalists on the basis of their academic accomplishments and extracurricular activities by a student-faculty selection committee at Duke.

SECTION EIGHT?

I would like to receive information on the Section Eight Housing Assistance Payment Program for Pitt County residents. I believe they help pay portions of rent for families unable to do so.

Hotline talked to William I. Cochran Jr., Executive Director of the Mideast Regional Housing Authority in Washington, N. C.

According to Cochran, funds already having been allocated to assist 100 families in Pitt County with housing anywhere in the county except within the corporate limits of Greenville or Farmville.

Cochran said, however, that an application has been filed requesting funds for assistance for 50 additional families from the Department of Housing and Urban Development in Greensboro. He said that, if the application is approved, the requested funds should be allocated in the near future.

The Section Eight Housing Assistance Payment Program is designed, he explained, to assist "lower income" and "very low income" families who would otherwise be unable to afford "decent, safe and sanitary housing" to do so.

The term, "family," includes handicapped, disabled and displaced persons; persons 62 years old or older; and married and unmarried persons have dependents, he said.

For further information, one may call 756-9312 or write the Mideast Regional Housing Authority, 200 E. Greenville Blvd., U. S. 264 Bypass, Office 17, Greenville, N. C. 27834.

Hotline would like to emphasize, however, that there are no available units at this time.

N. C. Per Capita Income Decline For 2nd Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Per capita income in North Carolina has declined for the second consecutive year compared with the rest of the country, according to a U.S. Department of Commerce report.

In 1978, North Carolina ranked 41st in per capita income, down from 40th in 1977 and 37th in 1976. The 1978 income figure was $6,607 per resident up $691 from the 1977 level, the Commerce Department reported.

North Carolina's per capita income was 15 percent below the national average of $7,810.

The two-year drop came despite record industrial growth over the same period. Industries made commitments in 1977 and 1978 to invest $3.5 billion in North Carolina.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who has made economic development a keystone of his administration, said he was disappointed with the report.

"Of course, it's a disappointment to me that our per capita income ranking has declined even further, especially since we've been working so hard to bring it up by diversifying the industrial base and bringing in new industries," Hunt said.

"With an industrial and manufacturing work force as large as ours, it's a tough challenge. But we are going to keep at it," he added.

Larry D. Cochick, state director of industrial development, said the results of the last two years' investments would not show up for two or three years.

"I would think that the results of 1977 and 1978 will begin to show up about 1980 in terms of these new industries going on line," Cochick said.

Per capita income is the state's total personal income before taxes — wages, salaries, interest, dividends and government payments — divided by population.

Among 12 Southeastern states, North Carolina ranked sixth in income last year. Highest was Virginia, with income of $7,624 per person.

Other Southern states with higher incomes were Florida, Georgia, Louisiana and Kentucky. Lower-ranking states included Mississippi, Tennessee, West Virginia, Alabama, South Carolina and Arkansas.

There was a bright spot for North Carolina in the report. The 1978 income gain over 1977 was 11.7 percent in the state, compared with 11.2 percent nationally.

Couple Marries Sunday In Afternoon Ceremony

Miss Ora Kathryn Allen and Jack Jones Allen were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Red Oak Christian Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heber Robert Allen Jr. of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fenner Leslie Allen Jr. of Winterville.

Dr. Harold Deitch and the Rev. James Bussell Jr. performed the double ring ceremony. A program of nuptial music was presented by organist, Dr. Sam Winchester Jr., and soloist, James Sidney Allen who sang "Always and Forever," "Love Me Tender" and "Wedding Prayer."

The chancel was centered with two 17 candle crescent candelabra with standards of bridal greenery flanked by two cathedral candelabra holding nine candles interspersed with mixed bridal flowers. At the entrance of the chancel were two Hogarth arches of mixed bridal flowers holding single candles. The couple knelt for the wedding prayer and benediction on a white prie-dieu. Pews were marked with white satin bows interspersed with greenery and mixed bridal flowers.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silk organza over peau de soie. The gown was designed with a Queen Anne neckline and full bishop sleeves. Re-embroidered alencon lace adorned the neck, waist, wide cuffs and sheer back yoke. The A-line skirt and cathedral train were finished with a self-fabric flounce trimmed with Venise lace.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsmen were Robbie and Sam Allen of Greenville, brothers of the bride, Buddy and Tim Allen of Winterville, brothers of the bridegroom, Dwight Grady, Charles Allen Jr. of Greenville and Greg Allen of Winterville, cousins of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a rose crepe gown with a matching waist length jacket. The mother of the bridegroom selected a navy pointed de ves gown with a cascading scoop on white chiffon. DEAR PAT: I would like to share with your readers my favorite way of making a one-row buttonhole. It is worked in six steps as outlined below.

Step One: Work desired number of stitches before starting buttonhole.

Step Two: Bring yarn to front of work. Slip one stitch from left-hand needle to right-hand needle, pass yarn to back of work and drop it there. The yarn is left hanging and is not used during Steps Three and Four.

Step Three: Slip another stitch from left-hand needle to right-hand needle and pass the first stitch over it — one stitch bound off. Step Three is repeated until the desired number of stitches for buttonhole have been bound off.

Step Four: Slip the last bound-off stitch back to left-hand needle and turn work to wrong side.

Step Five: Pick up the hanging yarn and pass it between needles to back. Now cast on the same number of stitches that were bound off for the buttonhole, plus one more, using the "cable cast-on" as described in the next paragraph.

To make the cable cast-on, insert right-hand needle between the first and second stitches on left-hand needle. Draw up a loop and slip this loop onto left-hand needle to serve as a new stitch. Repeat until desired number of stitches have been cast on.

Before placing the last loop on left-hand needle, bring yarn through to the front to form a dividing strand between the last stitch and the next to last one. Turn back so that right side is again facing you.

Step Six: Slip the first stitch from the left-hand needle to right-hand needle and pass the last stitch over it. The buttonhole is now completed and you can work to the end of the row. Edna F., South Windsor, Conn.

Thanks, Edna, for sharing your excellent method of making horizontal buttonholes. While it is similar to another one-row buttonhole I have given in the past, it is really quite an improvement as it makes a very firm, smooth buttonhole. I might mention here that I do not recommend horizontal buttonholes in a vertically ribbed band. In next week's column, I will give you a couple of choices for vertical buttonholes. I would like to hear from any of you who might have unique ways for working that type.

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Redwood Furniture Moves Indoors

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Redwood furniture is moving indoors. Manufacturer Harry Gillespie says his company's indoor redwood furniture is lighter in color than the traditional dark, coppery red, to blend with living areas. The wood varies from white through several stages of red to brown, and several different shades are combined in some of the "knock-down" pieces recently introduced for indoor use. Gillespie says redwood is the lightest weight of all furniture woods.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every year I like to set goals for myself. This year is no exception. For 1979, I vowed I would (a) find inner peace, (b) study the religions of the world, (c) buy a bathing suit.

I was going to compromise the third goal when I got out my old two-piece bathing suit this year. Only one piece of it fit me. It is not important for anyone to know which piece it was. It is sufficient to say that if I appeared in it in public it would totally destroy my aura of mystery.

I don't buy a new bathing suit every year. It isn't because it represents a major purchase. It is because if I wanted that kind of pain I'd run the Boston Marathon or give birth in a Volkswagen.

To begin with, I am never psychologically ready for the styles. When I heard that this year's bathing suits were one piece, I had an entirely different concept in my mind as to what they would look like. Imagine my surprise when I picked up a one-piece suit and it caught on my ring finger.

The nymphs who appear in the ads lead me to believe the artist is sketching from memory. There hasn't been a girl with those measurements since Scarlett O'Hara trussed herself into a 16-inch corset.

To survive the summer at the pool I had to devise a list of Rules for Swimming.

1. Never frequent pools with full-length mirrors in the dressing room.

2. Do not go into the pool area until you have seen three women who look more rotten than you do in a suit.

3. If someone is wearing the same floral suit, do not stand close unless her flowers are opened at the same size as yours.

4. Make sure the chlorine foot bath is deep enough to tread water in.

5. Do not go into the water until three hours after you've eaten or your stomach goes down, whichever comes first.

6. A beach ball, a folding chair and an air mattress may seem cumbersome, but when worn cover the effects of a long winter.

7. When sunning, hold a child on your lap.

If swim suits get any more daring, I may have to learn how to swim and hug the bottom of the pool.

DOCKET NO. M-100, SUB 80 Before The North Carolina Utilities Commission

In the Matter of Investigation and Rulemaking Relating to Advertising Expenditures and What May Be Included As a Utility Bill Insert) NOTICE
) OF ) HEARING

BY THE COMMISSION: The North Carolina Utilities Commission is conducting an investigation into the subjects of utility bill inserts and utility advertising for the purpose of formulating general rules to govern these subjects. The Public Staff, the Attorney General, the utilities and other intervenors filed proposed rules and comments in this proceeding on March 1, 1979, and the Commission has set a public hearing in this docket for the purpose of receiving testimony and comments from the public and oral argument from the parties.

This hearing will be held for the purpose of deciding whether the Commission should promulgate rules restricting bill inserts and advertising, and the legal and constitutional problems involved in making such rules.

Pursuant to the requirements of the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA), the Commission will also consider whether electric and gas utilities may recover expenditures for promotional or political advertising from ratepayers, rather than being required to charge said expenditures to their shareholders (or other owners).

Public hearing will begin on Tuesday, September 18, 1979, at 10:00 a.m., in the Commission Hearing Room, Dobbs Building, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. Receipt of testimony from members of the public will be the first order of business.

The Public Staff is authorized by statute to represent the using and consuming public in proceedings before the Commission. Written statements to the Public Staff should include any information which the writer wishes to be considered by the Public Staff in its investigation of the matter, and such statements should be addressed to Hon. Hugh A. Wells, Executive Director of the Public Staff, North Carolina Utilities Commission, P. O. Box 991, Raleigh, North Carolina 27602.

The Attorney General is also authorized by statute to represent the using and consuming public in proceedings before the Commission. Statements to the Attorney General should be addressed to Honorable Rufus L. Edmisten, Attorney General, c/o Utilities Division, P. O. Box 629, Raleigh, North Carolina 27602.

Dear Abby

To Summer Cottagers: How To Repel Boarders

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Now that the summer season will soon be upon us, how about some help for us poor suckers who have summer cottages?

We've had our cottage for eight years, and each summer we grow more popular than the summer before. Friends and relatives come in droves to enjoy themselves in the sun and partake of our food and drink. They stay anywhere from a weekend to a full week. They always come empty-handed, of course.

We have even written notes in advance saying, "We are sorry, but we can't have you this year," — but they come anyway. Why are some folks so thick? We bought this place to get away from these people.

We don't want to seem cranky, but we'd like to entertain the guests we really WANT, without all these others "surprising" us. We're tired of running a free hotel, and are thinking of selling. Can you help us?

HAD IT IN MINNESOTA

DEAR HAD IT: If you've actually written to say you can't accommodate them, but they come anyway — your only salvation is to develop a thicker hide. Greet the unwelcome ones at the door with, "You may stay for a few hours, but when the sun disappears, please do likewise."

DEAR ABBY: You are so right when you say, "Live your life one day at a time."

After 13 years of a happy marriage, beautiful children, a successful husband (due to my help), a beautiful home and all the trimmings, my husband informs me that he is just not "happy" anymore!

At the same time, my brother's wife has decided the same thing. Strange? Not really. She is divorcing my brother (they also have a lovely home and two beautiful children) so she can marry my husband.

Need I tell you how much hurt and unhappiness these two selfish people have caused everyone involved?

So, here I sit, still in shock, very hurt and bitter, thinking of how wise your philosophy is. "Live your life one day at a time."

That's all any of us really has. Sign me...

ALONE WITH TWO CHILDREN TO RAISE

DEAR ALONE: You asked for no advice, but may I give you some? Don't dwell on your bitterness, hurt and resentment. Turn your attention to putting your life together by pursuing new interests. Work on being a positive, attractive, likable person. You still have a lot of living to do. Good luck!

DEAR ABBY: My husband is convinced that shampooing his hair will cause it to fall out.

Arnold is 25 and good-looking, but he's got this thing about losing his hair because his father was bald at 40. He never brushes his hair because if he sees a few hairs in his hairbrush he practically freaks out! And if he wakes up and finds a few hairs on his pillow, it spoils his day.

He's a wonderful guy, but you don't know how hard it is to sleep with a man who has hasn't washed his hair since last July. Help! Maybe he'll believe you. I've given up.

HIS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Tell Arnold that I said cleanliness and massage promote the growth of human hair. He stands to lose more hair (and friends) if he allows rancid oil to collect on his scalp.

DEAR ABBY: I've read your column for years and respect your advice.

I just learned that our 19-year-old daughter, a junior in college, bought birth control pills. I am distressed and shocked and wouldn't have believed it if I didn't have the facts.

She will be home in a few weeks. Please tell me how to handle this.

I can't give you my address because my husband opens the mail first. I haven't told him. He'd be heartbroken.

I hope to read your answer in your column.

HEARTSICK

DEAR HEARTSICK: I can understand your disappointment, but there is nothing to handle now. Apparently your daughter is either considering having sex or she's already into it. However, she's over 18 and it's her decision. In any case, be grateful that your daughter is protecting herself against accidental pregnancy.

As for your husband's reaction, would he be less heartbroken to learn that his college daughter was pregnant instead of on the pill?

Shouldn't Hurt Public Service

A major controversy has developed in the city government over the administration of the fire and rescue units.

There is sentiment, both within the department and among some citizens, for completely separating the two units, giving the rescue squad its own chief. Proponents of this suggest operating the rescue out of a separate building which they say could be built without city funds.

Presently, of course, the rescue squad operates under the general supervision of the fire chief and is housed in the main fire station at Fifth and Greene Streets.

A League of Municipalities study requested by the city government indicated that most cities the size of Greenville maintain the fire and rescue departments as one unit, and that this is the least expensive way to provide the services.

It appears that strong feelings have developed here over the matter and we fervently hope that the debate won't affect the fine service that both fire and rescue personnel are providing to the community.

The rescue unit has the awards to show for its efforts to serve the public, and anyone who has ever needed the services will attest to the competent way the rescuemen handle their duties. And there is no question either about the service the firemen are providing.

The city council, however, has the obligation to the public to provide services in the most economical manner and it is clear that separating the two services will mean more expense to the taxpayers. The argument that a rescueman might not be in shape to answer a rescue call after helping fight a major fire is a valid one, but since the rescue squad answers twice as many calls as the fire department, we would envision firemen assisting the rescue department far more than the opposite way.

We would certainly want to see the rescue squad kept intact within the department, but with careful administration the problems of the fire and rescue departments can be handled within the present framework. Service to the community shouldn't suffer, and the citizens will get the benefit of these services at the least possible cost.

The Ambitions Of Castro Fell Short

Cuba's president Fidel Castro visited Mexico last week.

He once dreamed of spreading his Marxist doctrine throughout Central and South America. If he had done so Mexican oil might be controlled by communist today.

Fortunately, Castro cut us off only from Havana cigars and sugar when he took over Cuba, not oil.

Suggest Growth Actions

By BILL NOBLITT

No Debate

RALEIGH — All but lost in the verbal barrage between Gov. Jim Hunt and the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research regarding balanced growth for the state is one thoughtful conclusion: The key question is whether growth policy will be made in Raleigh, or in the communities across the state.

The research project entitled "Which Way Now?" covered a lot of territory in its report of some 129 pages. One point, and the authors insist it was not the most significant one at all, was criticism of Gov. Hunt's Balanced Growth Policy Act as it was overwhelmingly approved by the General Assembly.

The Balanced Growth Act calls for identification of "growth centers" where intensive state, federal and local resources would be focused to create conditions promoting economic (mostly industrial) growth. Primary emphasis is on rural and small town development.

But even legislators who fell in line to endorse the program without question or debate admit privately that they are skeptical of the outcome. Actually, the law provides for at least one "growth center" in each of the 100 counties. Most of the mandated activities originally contained in the proposal have been changed to permissive ones, and the research group feels the approach is "nebulous ... not definitive enough to be a policy ... too loose in definitions ... subject to interpretation by the governor and his appointees ... heavily involves the state in a centralized decisionmaking process ... and aimed at putting three major goals which themselves conflict into one package.

"The attempt ... can only be marveled at as remarkable sleight-of-hand", the report comments flatly, those three aims: to raise incomes by attracting higher-pay industries; to locate more job opportunities in rural areas; to strengthen diversification.

Gov. Hunt defends the policy. It was founded on statewide conferences with citizens who spelled out what they want in the way of growth, and he personally attended many of those public hearings.

True, the researchers admit, the people said what they wanted. But the hearings did not develop — nor does the legislative act contain — logical, positive actions designed to accomplish those aims.

"We are doing in North Carolina what they say can't be done ... what academic studies say can't be done," Gov. Hunt argues.

"The people have said they want jobs close to home. It is working. We do have industries going into small towns and rural areas," Hunt argues.

Power

The problem with this direction, says Mercer Toty, director of the research group and former director of the fiscal research operation of the General Assembly, is that we are "moving in the direction of state government control.

"We can concentrate enormous power in the hands of the governor ... power that is clearly intended to increase the flow of state and federal assistance to some communities and counties, and to decrease that flow to others."

As it is now constructed, the policy is "almost meaningless and subject to interpretation almost exclusively by the governor and by appointees of the governor. That places a lot of power in the hands of the governor with few guidelines. That is centralized decision-making and it raises unrealistic expectations in rural areas," Doty feels.

A Matter Of Overkill

WASHINGTON — The whole might, majesty and power of the federal government is slowly descending upon a social evil so vast and so grave that only the might, majesty and power of the federal government can put things right.

And what, you may ask, is this terrible wrong? Stand back! The evil is — brace yourself! — the health spa industry. The Federal Trade Commission intends to make it shape up.

Sometimes you wonder, working in Washington, if our federal masters have any sense of priorities. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration once was deeply involved in the design of toilet seats. The Consumer Product Safety Commission waged war on aluminum baseball bats. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has filed some of the most frivolous lawsuits in the history of jurisprudence. But when it comes to crushing eggshell evils with regulatory steamrollers, the FTC is the unchallenged champion of them all.

Last month's report from Roger J. Fitzpatrick, one of the FTC's presiding officers, provides a case in point. For the past four years — more than four years! — the FTC has been working upon a proposed trade rule regulation to govern health spas, figure salons, physical fitness centers, and other such palaces of perspiration.

The first federal notice appeared in August of 1975 after months of preliminary work by FTC staff. Regional hearings were conducted in Atlanta, San Francisco and New York in 1977. A full-blown formal hearing saw 133 witnesses testifying in 1978. The record now runs to 46,700 pages of material occupying 30 volumes and, or 115 binders, depending upon how you count things up. The end is not in sight. A revised final draft of a proposed rule must yet be prepared, and this must be commented upon, and the draft and the comments must be further reviewed; and eventually, within the next year or so, or the year after that, the full Federal Trade Commission will enter its order. It is incredible. The whole thing is incredible.

What has provoked this massive overkill? It appears (and indeed it cannot be doubted) that some spas in some cities have behaved very badly. They employ high-powered sales artists whose shabby art is to con the suckers into signing expensive contracts for physical fitness. It is like the dancing schools that used to fleece old ladies out of their life savings with a promise to make them perfect partners for a tango. Contracts can be canceled only with difficulty, and sometimes not at all. Some really crooked operators sell contracts in spas that never open.

The hearing record overflows with tales of such perfidy. Much of the accusing evidence is six or eight years old, but no matter. It is hard to quarrel with Fitzpatrick's conclusion that the record clearly demonstrates "a persistent, nagging and widespread pattern of

To the editor:

On May 10 and 11 I attended a delightful musical play, "Rock 'n Roll," performed expertly by the Drama Club at Rose High School. The cast was superb, the music terrific, the direction fantastic. ... what about the facilities? What torture to watch those talented young people entertain a captivated audience on a dangerous set, built by the cast, without a curtain, and no acoustics. These performers rehearsed for two months on a raised platform in a regular classroom. They built their own set on Saturday on the gym floor and rehearsed only three nights with the combo and the set before opening night. It's a miracle that the performance "came off" as well as it did!

And what about our band program? What a performance by Mrs. Doty Jo Knight's elementary student, Mr. Wooten's middle school students, and Mr. Rodger's Aycock students. It's hard to imagine how well those students could have performed if they had proper facilities — an auditorium!

Our family had many surprises upon our return to live in Pitt County after 15 years. ... But what a surprise to find the Greenville City Schools without an auditorium!! Our young people are bursting with talent — give them a place to display it. Vote "yes" on the bond referendum, and after it passes, keep the auditorium as top priority!! (I often wondered why bleachers were not built in auditoriums. Anyone in the audience at Rose High should now know why.)

Education At Crossroads

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN

"We have succeeded in sending a great many people to college," observed educator and scholar Dr. Russell Kirk, "we have not succeeded in educating most of them."

This indictment is contained in Dr. Kirk's latest book, "Decadence and Renewal in the Higher Learning" (Gateway Editions, Indianapolis, Indiana, 1979) which surveys the last twenty-five years of public education. The evidence the distinguished educator-scholar presents leaves little doubt that education has become a vast bureaucratic wasteland. Dr. Kirk's work should be read by every member of the House of Representatives before deciding how to vote on a proposal recently passed by the U.S. Senate to create a cabinet level of education.

Significantly, the supporters of a new Federal Department of Education, President Carter included, are lobbyists for the National Education Association (which poured money and manpower into Mr. Carter's 1976 campaign). They argue that the 300 current educational programs in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and other federal agencies, totalling $10 billion annually, can be more efficiently administered with a separate cabinet level of education. This, of course, was the rationale offered in the early 1950s when the Eisenhower Administration created the current bureaucracy of HEW. In fact, after only 18 months the new Dept. of Energy is spending $10 billion annually and handicapping our national capacity to produce enough energy to keep our economy at a high pitch. "The proposed thirteenth Department of the Cabinet", writes Thomas Ascik of the Heritage Foundation in an analysis of the proposed new federal education bureaucracy, "would be larger than the current departments of Commerce, HUD, Interior, Justice and State. If the federal government precedence is any indication, the department can be expected to grow in size and expenditures as soon as it is established.

The most persistent fear about the establishment of a Department of Education is that such a department would lead to a final takeover of education ... the federal role in hiring and firing of teachers and other educational personnel, admission of students, and construction of buildings is already persuasive and can be expected to grow."

The empire builders at the NEA see in the new cabinet level of education the realization of their dream.

Strength For Today

WATCHFUL WAITING

We hear very little in most churches today about the second coming of our Lord. There are groups within some churches who dwell at length on this teaching, and there are a few churches where it constitutes almost the outstanding Christian doctrine. But in the church at large one does not often hear a sermon on this topic.

Yet it is one of the things upon which our Lord himself laid great emphasis. He frankly said he did not know when it would occur. This knowledge, he declared, was in the counsel of the Heavenly Father only. What he did say, however, with a directness we should never forget, was that we should always keep ourselves in readiness for his return. No matter at what hour this would occur, we should be ready.

Counseling his apostles, he said that they were to be like servants awaiting their Lord when he returns from the marriage feast. They were to watch, for they knew not the time nor the hour.

Sees All Problems 'Solvable'

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Tyler Hicks gets frustrated when people do little to protect themselves against inflation and taxes. He feels they aren't helpless. He refuses to believe obstacles cannot be overcome.

Ty's message isn't just one of hope; it's practical. An esteemed, well-paid professional who holds a demanding executive position, he uses his sparetime to manage private endeavors that bring him a second income.

You've heard of others who do the same, but probably not with the same success as Ty. Year after year his second income is in six figures, for a few hours each evening and on Saturday mornings.

Now 58, Tyler Hicks has made several fortunes. He began early, and of necessity; it was a matter of financial survival. Now the habit is as much a part of him as his big house, his boat and his Caribbean trips.

He has written 45 books, many of them for Parker Publishing Co., a subsidiary of Prentice-Hall, Inc., some to occupy his time on the train trip to work, some because his always active mind demands expression.

Many of them are engineering works, such as a nine-year labor of love, McGraw-Hill's "Standard Handbook of Engineering Calculations," which has sold 100,000 copies at $30 each, and which he is now improving.

More recently his efforts have been personal finance volumes for the ordinary person, such as his current big seller, "How To Make $1 Million in Three Years Starting With No Cash."

Another volume, scheduled for December, will wrap up scores of ideas Ty has devised, discovered or developed over the years. It will be called "Tyler Hicks' Encyclopedia of Wealth Building Secrets."

Books do not occupy all his time. For 14 years he has published the newsletter, "International Wealth Success," out of Rockville Centre, N.Y. Like his books, it is filled with detail rather than promise.

He offers training kits for home study in various moneymaking fields, such as real estate and mail order, in which he has long been ac-

Voting Day In Canada

By CHARLES HANLEY

Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Canadians from Eskimo settlements above the Arctic Circle to the steel and glass canyons of major cities today choose the government that will lead them into the 1980s and through the gravest crisis in their nation's 112-year history.

The choice is between the Liberal administration of Pierre Elliott Trudeau, the flashy, tough-talking French-Canadian who has been prime minister for the past 11 years, and the opposition Progressive Conservatives, led by untested 39-year-old Westerner Joe Clark.

In a two-month campaign, Trudeau appealed for support in the name of national unity, saying only he could keep separatist-minded Quebec province from seceding and splitting the country in two. Clark told Canadians that for the sake of a troubled economy it was time for a change at the top.

The opinion polls showed the two major parties dead even at about 40 percent each in the popular vote. But because of the peculiarities of Canada's parliamentary system and political patterns, analysts gave the Conservatives a slight edge.

It would be the first Conservative government since 1963, and Clark, the career politician who would head it, Canada's youngest prime minister.

An expected 70 percent of Canada's 14.5 million eligible voters were casting ballots for their representatives in a newly expanded 282-member House of Commons. Polling places were open to 8 p.m.

The party winning the most seats generally forms the government and its leader becomes prime minister for a maximum mandate of five years. In today's election neither major party is expected to win a clear 142-seat majority. The one winning a plurality can expect to rule as a minority government for a year or two, longer if it can get firm support from a minor party.

Trudeau, 59, spent most of the campaign's final day at his country retreat near Ottawa, then traveled to Montreal and watched the Canadiens defeat

Advises Recession-Resistance

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

Baking and food processing, automotive replacement parts and tobacco-related firms are just a few of the "recession-resistant" industries that Bill Staton, senior vice-president and director of research for Interstate Securities Corporation (ISC), would advise potential investors to put their money in during the coming months.

Those industries to avoid this year are the auto industry, some housing related industries and some textile firms, said Staton in a visit to the ISC office in Greenville Monday.

"A recession is usually not discernable until it has already started," said Staton. "During the early stages it can remain undetected."

"Several economic indexes are currently pointing the way to a recession during 1979 — near-record levels in the interest rate and amounts of mortgage money, not to mention double-digit inflation. Also the economy has been in an economic expansion for a very long time. Productivity is on the downswing while prices are continuing to rise."

However, Staton was quick to point out that a recession isn't all bad.

"A recession helps to eliminate the negative excesses in an economy. It usually decreases the interest rate and increases the efficiency of many companies who cut back in order to save money."

"The economy and accompanying recessions can be compared to blowing up a balloon. Two things can happen — you can either let out some of the air before it blows up, or you can continue expanding the balloon until it finally pops."

Staton added that recessions have always been a part of history and that government actions don't have much power to abolish them or prevent them from happening.

Staton, who is a native of Bethel, attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and graduated with a bachelor's degree in business administration in 1969. He then attended the Wharton Business School in Pennsylvania and earned his master's degree in finance in 1971. He has been with ISC since the fall of 1971.

Headquartered in Charlotte,

ISC researches about 100 companies, most of which have their headquarters in the Southeast, in an effort to make sound recommendations to their clients as to which stocks to buy and/or sell at any given time.

companies, these being smaller industries with firms with the ability to grow faster than the economy and can provide above average returns for our customers."

abuses." The presiding officer concedes that the situation falls short of a grandiose fraud perpetrated upon the American public, and he acknowledges 10,000 letters from satisfied customers of the spas. Nevertheless, he feels the record supports an FTC rule that at the very least will provide a cooling-off period for cancellations and a schedule of pro rata refunds for those who drop out.

Let us assume that everything the complainants charge is true. The question still arises: How did this situation get to be a federal case? There are 135 million persons in the country between 18 and 64. Only some minute fraction of them are members of the spas, salons, fitness centers and health clubs. A still smaller fraction complain of being bilked. An even more minute fraction would embrace the poor, the ignorant and the non-English-speaking minority for whom special protections might be warranted. The might, majesty and power of the government would here be interposed to succor a relative handful of potbellied dreamers who sign up to shape up — and the discover they have bitten off more exercise than they can chew.

This is not a gross evil in interstate commerce. It is a local problem that the states and cities are entirely capable of handling through their own laws and ordinances. Reputable spas already have done much to police their own industry. The federal muscle, I mean to say, surely could be flexed to better effect somewhere else.

the New York Rangers for the Stanley Cup hockey championship at the Montreal Forum.

Clark's last campaign hours were spent in his home province of Alberta, in Canada's West, the base from which he worked his way up from running campaign errands to member of Parliament and leader of his national party in a surprisingly swift climb.

The campaign in the end came down to the issue of these two personalities.

Clark's theme was "Let's get Canada working again." He assailed the Trudeau economic record, pointing to 10 percent inflation, 8 percent unemployment and huge government deficits. He proposed new programs to aid private business and big tax cuts, including U.S.-style deductions for mortgage-interest payments.

Ed Broadbent, leader of the socialist New Democrats, the third-strongest party, denounced Trudeau for the inflation and unemployment, dismissed the Conservatives as lackeys of big business, and called for greater government intervention in the economy and industry.

tion of two specific political objectives. The first is for them to have the unlimited power to force teachers to join a union thereby bringing under their direction, via a cabinet level of education, power to make and break political candidates at all levels. The second is the complete domination of this country's educational process for social engineering. Until now, NEA and other extremists in the public educational system have been frustrated in attempts at busing, behavior modification of children and the teaching of values contrary to those of most American parents because education has been controlled by local and state boards. The new cabinet level would give the NEA the power of the law and the federal purse to destroy control of education by these local and state boards. "Education is in turmoil," observes The Heritage Foundation study, "...Education consumes 37 percent of the yearly budgets of state and local governments, by far the largest annual outlay. The costs to the taxpayer for education continue to soar, despite declining enrollments. In the past several years nationwide controversies have erupted over education policies such as court-ordered busing, textbooks, basic skills and parental rights over the education of their children."

Thus, the new cabinet level of education will insure that the NEA and its handpicked bureaucrats in the new Federal Dept. of Education will have complete power to do as they wish, whether parents at the state and local level like it or not.

Dr. Kirk contends that many of our national problems can be traced to the failure of modern public education because political, moral and social leaders are the product of a public education system that is producing mediocre minds under the illusion this is true education. The new cabinet level of education is not the renewal and reform Dr. Kirk had in mind. Empire building in behalf of bureaucratic brainwashing is hardly the road to reform, but it is the road to greater ruin of both mind and the nation. (Copyright Washington Dateline, 1979).

Rules Death Accidental

SIMPSON — The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating the apparent accidental death Monday of a 40-year-old Simpson man.

Analysts said the news raised fears of further price hikes by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries when the cartel holds its semi-annual meeting in Geneva at the end of next month.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Joe Linwood Moore of P.O. Box 163, Simpson died in a late afternoon incident at the residence of Ezkie Little, located behind Simpson Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Brokers said another damper on the market was uncertainty over the future course of Federal Reserve credit policy. The Fed's policy-setting Open Market Committee meets today.

Sheriff Tyson said that Moore apparently stuck his head through an opening in a structure behind the Little residence in order to look into the locked building. The sheriff said that Moore apparently lost his footing, causing him to hang by his head until he was unconscious.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .05 to 56.36. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .02 at 181.20.

According to the sheriff, who said that the incident was reported at 6:10 p.m., neighbors helped to free Moore but he died soon after the incident.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.84 million shares by noon, up from 9.70 million at the same point Monday.

Hold 2 On Rape Count

Greenville Police have arrested two men on rape charges following investigation of a Sunday afternoon incident at a Lakeview Terrace apartment.

Special Election Raised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said today he is thinking of declaring vacant the seats of the 12 "Killer Bee" senators who skipped town and stopped action on a bill they didn't like.

Telling reporters he might try to call a special election to replace the absentees, Clements said, "We'll explore that possibility today. We're going to look into it and look into what precedents we might have for it."

Clements has taken a hands-off attitude on the bill at the center of the dispute, a 1980 presidential primary election measure.

On Monday, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby conceded the Killer Bees probably have succeeded in blocking the bill they contend was tailor-made for John Connally.

If the AWOL senators return, Hobby was asked, would the presidential primary stand a chance of passage? "I think not," he replied.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, sponsor of the bill, agreed the primary measure is dead.

As the group ended their fourth day under cover, Hobby, the Senate's presiding officer, refused to withdraw warrants for their arrest.

Caesars World fell 5 to 64%

The company said the Securities and Exchange Commission staff apparently plans to recommend a civil action against the company and its chairman, Clifford S. Perlman.

The company said the SEC staff alleges that it failed to disclose personal dealings by Perlman with companies that did business with Caesars World.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .05 to 56.36. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .02 at 181.20.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.84 million shares by noon, up from 9.70 million at the same point Monday.

Greenville Police have arrested two men on rape charges

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the two charged as Theodore Lindsey Jr., 30 of 115G Lakeview Ter. and John Gatlin, 25 of Lakeview Ter.

The chief said the 3 p.m. Sunday incident was reported to Police yesterday afternoon.

The victim, a 16-year-old girl, told officers she was enticed into Lindsey's apartment, then dragged to a second-floor bedroom, threatened with a shotgun and raped by both men.

Cannon said both Lindsey and Gatlin were jailed without privilege of bond pending a court hearing in the case.

Other matters considered and action taken are:

- Waiver of physical education credit requirement for graduation purposes of a student who has carried six full subjects each school year;
- Granting of credit for early graduation (at the end of the summer) of a student who will by that time meet all graduation requirements;

Building/Fire Inspection Report reveals that numerous minor deficiencies listed in the previous report have been corrected.

It was noted that one of the major problems arises from students tampering with fire extinguishers. Cox was requested to have another inspection made by city officials prior to opening of school for the 1979-80 school year.

Approval of a field trip by the school orchestra to Williamsburg, Va.

Cox reported that information on the Dental Accident Policy was being made available to students in the city schools. This supplemental policy is a state approved one, and does not involve any money collection or administrative action on the part of school staff.

N.C. Budget...

 package includes a one-time 1.5 percent increase in payments to retired workers.

Holmes said the proposal was similar to one approved by the federal council for Georgia state employees, who will get a 5.5 percent increase this July and another 3 percent in January.

Holmes said delaying the payment means it will not be made until after the first year of the 7 percent wage-increase guideline expires in October.

"I think our interpretation is similar to Georgia's and both are correct," he said.

The subcommittee recommended a balanced, $230 million supplement to the main state budget already before the full committee. The full state budget totals nearly $10 billion over two years.

The supplemental package also includes $78.2 million for a tax cut and $40 million for improvements in the five predominantly black University of North Carolina campuses.

The added pay-raise package will cost the state $31.5 million during the 1979-80 fiscal year. No money is included to extend the cash payment or added retirement allowance during the following year.

The extra $200 makes the general pay raise equal to about 6.5 percent for the average worker, or 8.5 percent when the new fringe benefits are included.

The tax-cut recommendation is reduced $6.8 million from the amount legislative leaders said last week that it would total.

Holmes said the reduction was made by staff analysts, who revised their estimate of how much state revenues would be decreased by the tax-cut package now before House and Senate finance committees.

Rules Death Accidental

SIMPSON — The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating the apparent accidental death Monday of a 40-year-old Simpson man.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Joe Linwood Moore of P.O. Box 163, Simpson died in a late afternoon incident at the residence of Ezkie Little, located behind Simpson Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Sheriff Tyson said that Moore apparently stuck his head through an opening in a structure behind the Little residence in order to look into the locked building. The sheriff said that Moore apparently lost his footing, causing him to hang by his head until he was unconscious.

According to the sheriff, who said that the incident was reported at 6:10 p.m., neighbors helped to free Moore but he died soon after the incident.

Sheriff Tyson said that his department was investigating the incident as an accidental death. However, Dr. Stan Harris, area medical examiner, could not be reached this morning to verify the cause of death.

An autopsy was ordered in the case, the sheriff said.

Montreal Captures Cup 4th Time In Row

MONTREAL (AP) — They are called "Les Glorieux," the glorious ones, by the French-speaking fans who adore them. They are "The Habs," the inhabitants of Montreal, to the English-speaking.

To any and all, they are the National Hockey League's champions yet again. A fourth consecutive summer of celebration awaits the Montreal Canadiens, who have earned every vestful drop of it.

"I think the next-toughest thing to winning the Stanley Cup is celebrating," said Montreal left wing Steve Shutt, who had three years of practice before Monday night's 4-1 triumph over the New York Rangers assured another, "I'm going to go crazy for three or four days, just like everyone else," he said.

Everyone else, it seemed, had a head start. One frisky Canadian splattered champagne in Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau — and got away with it. Car horns blared in the streets after the glorious ones had won the title for the eighth time in 12 years but only he first on their home ice since 1968.

"I just feel incredibly relaxed," said goalie Ken Dryden, who faced only 15 shots in winning the fifth championship of seven active seasons with the club. "I'm interested in going home and drinking in the aftermath of what has happened."

What happened: Jacques Lemaire scored twice — including the second Cup-winning goal of his career — and Rejean Houle added three assists to pace the Montreal triumph. Bob Gainey, named the playoffs' Most Valuable Player, and Rick Chart-raw had the other goals as the Canadiens extended their record playoff series winning streak to 12.

Carol Vadnais scored for New York, which powered into this best-of-seven series seeking its first title since 1940 and left this series seeking the same thing. For the Rangers, this final ended the same as the last one in 1972 — in defeat.

"But our team, and the organization, we should be proud of ourselves," said right wing Anders Hedberg, who with Swedish countryman Ulf Nilsson and Coach Fred Shero were major factors as New York went from the league's 12th-best record last year to the Stanley Cup finals this season.

"We lost tonight, against a better team, but we have accomplished something in New York this year. We can have this summer in peace."

The Canadiens made sure summer got as early a start as possible. They scored first, when Chartraw's 35-foot shot glanced off Rangers defenseman Mike McEwen and past John Davidson at 10:36. From that moment, until it no longer was needed, they kept the pressure on.

"They dictate the pace of the game," said Hedberg, "and that pace is usually higher than anybody else can play in the National League. They just wear you down."

They had worn the Rangers down by the end of the first period. New York managed just seven shots over the last two, none even a mild challenge, and all that remained was the wait for the final buzzer and the wild celebration which followed.

First, as 18,076 jubilant spectators looked on, NHL President John Ziegler handed the Cup to team captain Serge Savard, who carried it halfway around the rink before handing it to Lemaire.

"I've been playing hockey with Jacques Lemaire since I was 17," said the 33-year-old Savard. "Lemaire has been one of the greatest hockey players in the world for several years now, and he'll never have the chance to carry the Cup as ap-tain. That's why I wanted him to do it this once in front of our fans."

The fans, of course, loved it. So did the players. Though the last three post-championship scenes had been reserved in their ebullience — perhaps because all had come on the road — this one was startling in its craziness.

Defenseman Gillies Lupien shook a bottle of bubbly up and down for a minute, then opened it and sent a 10-foot spray directly onto the clothing of anyone who was wearing any. It was at this moment many reporters learned that pens cannot provide good notes on soaked paper. One shrewder individual wore a raincoat into the nuthouse.

Meanwhile, there was twice as much champagne spilled as consumed. There were beer fights and ice water fights. A woman reporter was knocked to the carpeted floor and at least two men were having their shirts autographed.

Defenseman Larry Robinson explained how years of such parties have taught him something. Having found a quieter spot, away from the hubbub, he cradled a beer and said: "I've learned you've got to start (celebrating) slow. You can't just go in with both feet. Doing it my way, you'll get to the same place as everyone else; you just don't get there as fast and you don't feel as bad when you wake up."

The Rangers will feel bad when they wake up, because they lost — even though they were never expected to get this far.

"They were just awesome tonight. Awesome," said center Phil Esposito. "What can I do, except say congratulations to them and hope that some day I can be part of dethroning those guys."

He may have a while to wait. The Canadiens won a record five straight titles from 1955-56 through 1959-60, and would like nothing better to tie that mark next season.

Until then, they can relax and enjoy. "Les Glorieux." It's a very nice nickname.

Even Ron Guidry has his off-days.

And it was one of those days Monday night against the Detroit Tigers.

"My control was too good — I kept hitting their bats," joked the New York Yankee ace after giving up a career-high 13 hits and losing a 3-1 decision to the Tigers.

"They were just hitting the ball. I thought I threw well," added the Cy Young Award winner who had never before given up more than 10 hits in a game. "I kept the ball in play and they just got a few hits that fell in. And that's the name of the game."

While the Tiger hits were falling in, the same couldn't be said for the Yankees. Detroit's winning pitcher, Jack Billingham, could thank a splendid defense for that.

"If I was a spectator, I would have loved to have seen this game," said Billingham, who pitched an eight-hitter. "There were some great plays behind me and double plays really helped me out."

In other American League action, the Minnesota Twins edged the Texas Rangers 7-6; the Seattle Mariners walloped the Kansas City Royals 12-7 and the Toronto Blue Jays turned back the Cleveland Indians 8-1.

The last time that Guidry faced the Tigers, just last Wednesday as a matter of fact, the left-hander put on a 13-strikeout performance while whipping Detroit 6-2. What was the difference this time?

Twins 7, Rangers 6

Hosken Powell's RBI double capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning to lead Minnesota over Texas. Mike Marshall gained his 11th save of the young season, preserving the victory for Pete Redfern, 2-0, with a ninth-inning appearance. Sparky Lyle, 3-3, who attempted to stop the Minnesota rally in the ninth, was the loser.

Mariners 12, Royals 7

Willie Horton smashed a three-run homer and Dan Meyer collected a single and two doubles, powering Seattle over Kansas City. Glenn Abbott, who hadn't beaten the Royals since July 1976, got roughed up for four runs in the first but, with seventh-inning relief help from Shane Rawley, improved his record to 2-5 behind the 15-hit Mariner attack. Horton's 197th career homer and ninth of this season capped a five-run outburst in the third against Rich Gale, 3-3, giving the Mariners a 5-4 lead they never lost.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 1

Rick Bosetti drove in two runs with a double to key a five-run outburst in the fourth inning, leading Toronto over Cleveland. Dave Lemanczyk, 4-2, matched his victory output for 1978 when he had a 4-14 record. Twenty-year-old Dan Ainge collected three hits in four at-bats, scored three runs and added one RBI in his first major league appearance for Toronto.

Walton Has Surgery

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Bill Walton was listed in good condition at a Los Angeles hospital after ankle surgery Monday to remove bone spurs.

The San Diego Clippers' center has had trouble with bone spurs in recent years, but it was not immediately known whether the spurs removed at Daniel Freeman Memorial Hospital were new growths.

Surgery was performed by Dr. Tony Daley, head physician for the 1980 U.S. Olympic teams.

Dr. Daley said the surgery was the same procedure that Phil Ford, the National Basketball Association's Rookie of the Year, underwent prior to his senior year in college.

Walton will be ready for the 1979-80 season, Dr. Daley said.

The 6-foot-11 former Portland Trailblazer star underwent surgery as part of a rehabilitation program, a club spokesman said.

The surgery may be a factor as the Clippers' try this week to arrange compensation with Portland, sources said.

A former advisor to Walton, Jack Scott, said over the weekend that Walton's physical condition renders the former All-American from UCLA unfit to play basketball.

Rose In 5th Place

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — John Inman of Grimsley High School in Greensboro moved into the lead after the first round of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association Golf Tournament Monday.

Inman shot a 2-under-par 70 in Monday's play. Mark Thaxton of Walter Williams High School in Burlington and Mike Barrow of East Forsyth in Winston-Salem tied for second place with par-70 each.

Walter Williams was the team leader after the first round with a 306, followed by Terry Sanford High School in Fayetteville and East Forsyth, both with a 309.

Play was scheduled to continue today in the two-day, 36-hole event at Finley Golf Course.

Rose High School was in fifth place in the team standings, ten strokes behind Williams with a 316 total.

Mike Moye led the individual scorers with a 75, five off the pace set by Inman. He stood in a tie for tenth place. Jack Mann had a 77, while Pat Dye Jr. had an 81 and Greg House had an 83.

Greene Central Tops Pam Pack

WASHINGTON — Greene Central's Eastern Carolina Conference champions rolled to an 8-1 victory over Northeastern Conference champ Washington, last night, in the first round of the State 3-A baseball playoffs.

Greene Central pitchers Ken Johnson and Jerry Goff combined for a no-hitter against the Pam Pack, which scored its only run off four straight walks.

Johnson started the game, going through two outs in the fifth inning when he walked all four of the batters to account for the lone Washington run. He struck out nine and walked five along the way. Goff, who went the last two and a third innings, struck out three and walked two.

Greene Central started the scoring in the third inning, getting two runs. With two away, Jimbo Fulghum doubled and Al Murray singled him home. Murray moved up on the throw home and scored on Donald Shaw's hit.

In the fourth, the Rams got another. Jeff Scott walked and Chip Hardy beat out a bunt single, with both moving up a base on an error. Cohen Cox then grounded out, scoring Scott.

In the fifth, the Rams added a fourth run. Shaw and Walt Tyndall both reached on errors and Scott walked. Robin Bowen then laid down a squeeze bunt, scoring Shaw.

Washington came back with its only run in the bottom of the fifth. Ed Stowe, Larry Woolard and Lonnie Harris all walked. With two away, Johnson walked Don Parker for the run. Goff came on after that to retire the side.

The Rams added four more runs in the sixth. Goff led off with a walk and Holmes singled. Both advanced on a passed ball and scored when Fulghum reached on an error. Shaw doubled in Fulghum and two wild pitches brought him around.

Greene Central moved to 18-6 with the win and next faces the winner of the White Oak-Clinton game.

Jamesville Rips Chowan By 12-1

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School surprised Chowan with ten first inning runs and went on to roll up a 12-1 victory last night in the first round of the State 1-A Baseball Playoffs.

Trent Ange started and got credit for the win, allowing only one hit in five innings of work. Carl Ange came on in the final two frames and allowed the only Chowan run.

By the time the first inning was over, the game had been decided.

Danny Lilley opened the bottom of the first with a single and Toby Holliday walked. Trent Ange singled, leading the bases. Keith Modlin singled, scoring Lilley, and a double by Tommy DiNardo brought in Holliday and Ange. Alan Frazier singled in Modlin, and Carl Ange's hit brought in DiNardo. Greg Sullivan kept it going with a hit scoring Frazier, and Lilley, back up again, reached on an error.

Holliday singled to score Ange and Sullivan, and Modlin also reached on an error, scoring Lilley. DiNardo singled in Holliday with the final run.

Jamesville added single runs in the fourth and fifth, while Chowan picked up its lone run in the sixth.

Holliday had three hits, while DiNardo had two and Lilley had two. A. Harrell had two to lead Chowan.

Jamesville, now 21-1, will face Manteo in the second round of the playoffs, at a date and site to be decided.

Odom Adds Two Guards To List

East Carolina basketball coach Dave Odom today announced the signing of two guards, 6-4 Tony Byles of Brooklyn, N.Y. and 6-1 Bryant Wiggins of Rolesville, concluding his initial season of recruiting for the Pirates.

Byles a student the past two seasons at Garden City (Kan.) Junior College, was honorable mention all-New York City as a senior at South Shore High School.

In junior college, he averaged 15 points, five rebounds and four assists per game as a freshman and last year averaged 10 points, six rebounds and four assists. He was chosen all-Jayhawk Conference and was all-JC Region 6. While at Garden City, he was given the top academic award for minority students.

"Tony is a multi-talented player," said Odom. "He could really play any of three positions, either guard or small forward. He brings a lot of maturity with him, both on and off the court."

Wiggins, a former standout backcourt man at Wake Forest-Rolesville High School attended Massanutten Military Academy in Woodstock, Va. following his scholastic days. He was not in school last season.

Wiggins helped Wake Forest-Rolesville to the state 3-A championship in 14 points and four assists and winning all-conference honors. While at Massanutten, he averaged 12 points per game.

"Bryant has worked two years since he finished high school for the chance to play major college basketball," Odom said. "And I know he'll make a fine contribution at East Carolina."

Earlier, Odom inked 6-8 Michael Gibson of Richmond, Va. and 6-1 Raymond Tyson of Goldston.

"I'm very satisfied with our recruiting this year," Odom said. "We filled areas where we had the greatest needs and that's important. We started later than most schools, but I wouldn't want to start over at the beginning and try to do any better. I'm very happy with the four we have signed. I'm sure each will make his mark with the Pirates."

Seattle Sees Silver Lining

Doubles Winners

Soren Blomgren (1) and Dan Attlerud teamed up to win the doubles title in the Strohs Greenville Open tennis tournament with a 4-6, 6-1, 7-5 victory over Andres Alvarez and Sam Modlin yesterday. Both are members of the Atlantic Christian College team. (Reflector photo)

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — If ever a loss had a silver lining, it was Seattle's 99-97 defeat at the hands of the defending champion Washington Bullets in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

The Sonics erased an 18-point deficit in the final 9½ minutes, running off a pair of 10-0 streaks and tying the score in the final minute, only to lose on two free throws by Larry Wright following a controversial call at the buzzer Sunday.

"That comeback showed the character of our ballclub," said Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens. "We don't give up."

And the Sonics are confident that with a few days' rest, they'll be able to apply that fourth-quarter pressure from the start of Thursday night's second game of the best-of-seven playoff finals.

"We played defense and put good pressure on them, and they didn't handle it well," observed Sonics forward John Johnson. "We'll start the next game with pressure. We've got the greyhounds to keep up the pressure the whole game."

"If we play our pressure defense, there is no way this team will beat us," predicted Paul Silas, the Sonics' 35-year-old reserve forward. "If we can come from 18 down in this one, things will be different if we play that way the whole game."

The Bullets say they don't fear Seattle's pressure tactics, despite the near disaster in the fourth quarter Sunday.

"It's much easier to press a team when you're 20 points down," forward Elvin Hayes said. "The team that is trailing doesn't have anything to lose so they say, 'Let's go all out and see if we can come back.' Meanwhile, the team with the lead just relaxes. A big lead sometimes is more dangerous than a two-point lead."

"We relished the thought that they would press us," Washington Coach Dick Motta said. "But in the late going, I thought we dedicated ourselves to the clock. We weren't playing Seattle. That's a good lesson."

Wilkens said the Sonics didn't apply full pressure throughout the opener because he was afraid his players were too tired after their charter flight from Seattle. After waiting for several hours at the airport, the plane took off at 12:15 a.m. Saturday, and the Sonics didn't check into their downtown Washington hotel until 11 a.m.

"I didn't want to tire my people out early in the game," Wilkens said. "When there is a lot of tension and emotion, it (a long flight) takes a lot out of a player. My players were out of synch. I thought the players needed a day off to recover from the flight."

Both clubs took a day off Monday to recover from Sunday's hectic series opener. Both had practices scheduled for this afternoon at the Capital Centre.

The Sonics wasted no time putting Sunday's loss behind them. Guard Fred Brown said that only moments after that game ended, before newsmen were admitted to the Seattle locker room, the players already were looking ahead to Thursday.

"There wasn't any complaining about the referees," Brown said. "We discussed the game, the things that worked and the things that didn't, and what we could do on Thursday. We were into preparing for Thursday's game. Very few teams would have done that."

The Bullets, meanwhile, feel they must run — as they did in the first three periods Sunday — in order to take a 2-0 lead to Seattle for the third and fourth games of the series.

"We played too cautiously in that span," said Grevey, referring to Seattle's comeback. "We have to run and push the ball inside."

"They had tried to run with us early and they couldn't," forward Bobby Dandridge said.

Horner, Schmidt Hit Homers To Pace Wins

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The 1979 stories of Bob Horner and Mike Schmidt are a study in contrasts. But Monday night, the slugging third basemen were headed in the same direction — around the bases.

Horner's three-run homer paced Atlanta to a 7-5 victory over Houston while Schmidt's 15th home run of the season, tops in the major leagues, led Philadelphia to a 5-3 triumph over St. Louis.

In other National League games, San Diego edged Los Angeles 3-2 and Pittsburgh topped Montreal 4-2.

Against Houston, Horner's decisive blow followed a double by Gary Matthews and a throwing error by Enos Cabell on Jeff Burroughs' grounder. It came off reliever Bo McLaughlin, 1-2, and made a winner of Phil Niekro, 5-6.

Gary Matthews also homered for Atlanta and Terry Puhl connected for Houston.

Phillies 5, Cardinals 3
While Horner has had a spring he wouldn't mind forgetting, Schmidt is off to a memorable start. The Phillies star is batting .293 and has knocked in 34 runs. Nine times he's had the game-winning hit.

"Pete Rose is rubbing off on me," said Schmidt, crediting Philadelphia's off-season free-agent acquisition for improving his own attitude. "He doesn't need me," said the Phillies first baseman. "God gave him a gift, power, and he's using it."

He used it in the sixth, powering a leadoff homer off John Denny, 3-3, to put the Phils ahead. St. Louis had reached Philadelphia starter Steve Carlton, 5-5, for a 3-0 lead after three innings but the veteran left-hander gave up just two hits the rest of the way.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2
Eric Rasmussen won his first game of the season after losing four by firing a five-hitter and outdueling Andy Messersmith, who tossed a six-hitter. San Diego won the game on Kurt Bevacqua's one-out RBI single in the ninth.

"That's the best I've seen him pitch," said the Dodgers' Derrel Thomas, a former Padre. "That's the first time I've seen him throw that much junk. He must have been watching Gaylord Perry."

Rasmussen wouldn't admit to throwing any "junk pitches," but did say he had "a good slider and good control."

Pirates 4, Expos 2
Willie Stargell belted his seventh homer in his last nine games and Bert Blyleven won his first game in three decisions this year. Ed Ott and Omar Moreno also homered for the Pirates and Tony Perez slammed one for Montreal.

Fitch Leaving Cleveland Club

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — When it came to the final moments of his nine years as coach and general manager of the Cleveland Cavaliers, Bill Fitch unashamedly shed tears.

Fitch, the 46-year-old quipmaster and admitted basketball junkie, asked for and was given his release from the final two years of his current contract with the National Basketball Association team.

"Sometimes the actors need a new stage," Fitch said, his voice choking with emotion as he and Nick Mileti, team president and majority owner, made the announcement Monday.

Fitch said he went to Mileti following this past season and talked about his future with the club.

"He said, 'Think about it and take your time,'" Fitch said. "I talked to some people that I respect, I went on vacation for 10 days and I talked to a couple of (NBA) clubs. I just think it was time for a change."

The Cavaliers slipped to 30-52 last season, missing the NBA playoffs for the first time in four years. However, Fitch, the only coach in the expansion-born team's history, said that had little bearing on his decision.

"I don't think I'm as bad as 30-52 and I think if our club is healthy next year, it'll be a good team. I can say that now," Fitch added with a smile. "I'm no longer a touter here."

There has been speculation that Fitch will be the next coach of the Boston Celtics, but about his future he would say only, "If I stay in basketball and go elsewhere — and I think the chances are 90 percent that I will — I just want to give myself 24 or 48 hours of breathing room before I do anything."

Mileti, the man who brought the NBA to Cleveland in 1970 and hired Fitch, called the decision "a mutual conclusion."

NAIA Said In Money Trouble

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Times quoted unnamed sources within the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics today as saying the 43-year-old organization is in deep financial difficulty.

"Financially, we're as low as we've ever been," one NAIA official said in the copyright story. "When Al Duer (former executive director) left, there was a big reserve, but now there is none, we have nothing to fall back on. And we're in trouble."

Harry Fritz, director of the Kansas City-based NAIA, which serves 515 small-school athletic programs around the country, denied the charges.

"I don't know where you got your information, but there is no crisis problem," Fritz said. "There is a continual financial problem, but most organizations have concern about meeting expenses. We have to watch our P's and Q's." The newspaper said sources within the organization who wished to remain anonymous took a different view. They indicated the situation is so severe the NAIA might fold within two years if the fiscal outlook continues to decline.

WINTERTVILLE — Winterville opened its Pitt County Babe Ruth season last night with a 9-6 victory over Ayden.

Ronald Daniels hurled the victory for Winterville. Doug McRoy and Joey Joyner led the Winterville hitting with two each, while Wade Tucker paced Ayden, getting three.

Controversy At Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indianapolis 500, regarded as the showcase of the U.S. Auto Club's schedule for years, has turned into a nightmare for the organization as controversy overshadows the question of who will win Sunday's $1 million race.

Jerry Karl, one of the drivers bumped from the field filed a protest over the time trials Monday. He said he and others in racing have "become victims of USAC's incompetence in enforcing its rules."

The denial of seven protests involving decisions made during the time trials was announced Monday by chief steward Tom Binford following a day of hearings on the protests.

Most of the protests involved efforts by USAC to enforce its regulations restricting engine power and claims that those regulations were changed last Sunday in the middle of the time trials which determine the 33-car field.

Binford, referee Art Meyers, USAC technical director Jack Beckley and race registrar Bob Cassaday held a closed-door hearing on the protests. They rejected claims that the regulations were changed since the track opened this month.

Binford said a notice stating competitors could qualify with at least an opening of 1.47 inches in an exhaust pipe that helps limit the amount of boost an engine receives was a warning to prevent further attempts to violate the rules and not a new standard.

Museum Curator Declares Queen Victoria Secretly Wed Servant

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON — Queen Victoria, whose stern morality set the straight and narrow public standards of generations of 19th century Britons, may have secretly married her favorite servant and had a son by him, says Scottish museum curator his research showed Victoria "was not the little black-clad dumpling that everybody thought she was."

Michael MacDonald. Despite official denials, MacDonald, curator of the Museum of Scottish Tartans at Comrie in Perthshire, insisted Monday

He said official histories of Victoria's reign were doctored to cut out all references to the alleged marriage and the monarch's own memoirs were edited.

He claimed a 10-year investigation into the relationship between Victoria and Scottish gamekeeper John Brown shows they were lovers after the death of Victoria's consort, Prince Albert.

Victoria, who gave her name to an era of rigidly formal social mores, married Albert in 1840, and had nine children. After Albert's death from typhoid in 1861, Victoria went into seclusion for three years and publicly mourned him for decades. She died in 1901.

MacDonald said he uncovered evidence that Victoria and Brown went through "a form of marriage ceremony" in Scotland after Albert's death, and cited three major suppressed clues:

—A report that a royal lady-in-waiting saw Brown coming out of the queen's bedroom at 4 a.m. and handed in her resignation, which the queen did not accept, telling the woman nothing improper had happened.

—A tape-recorded account of someone who had heard the deathbed confession of a clergyman said to have officiated at the marriage.

—New evidence that the couple had a child who lived in Paris as a recluse until the age of 90. MacDonald says the son sometimes visited Balmoral, the queen's Scottish home where in 1852 she met Brown. He was a stable boy and six years her junior. According to historical record Albert selected Brown, then 21, as Victoria's gamekeeper.

MacDonald's investigation came to light after Scottish television announced plans to produce a drama about the alleged relationship. His comments have appeared in newspaper and television interviews.

On Monday a palace spokesman officially denied that Victoria secretly married Brown and bore his child. "On the basis of historical evidence in the royal archives, there is nothing to support such a suggestion," he said.

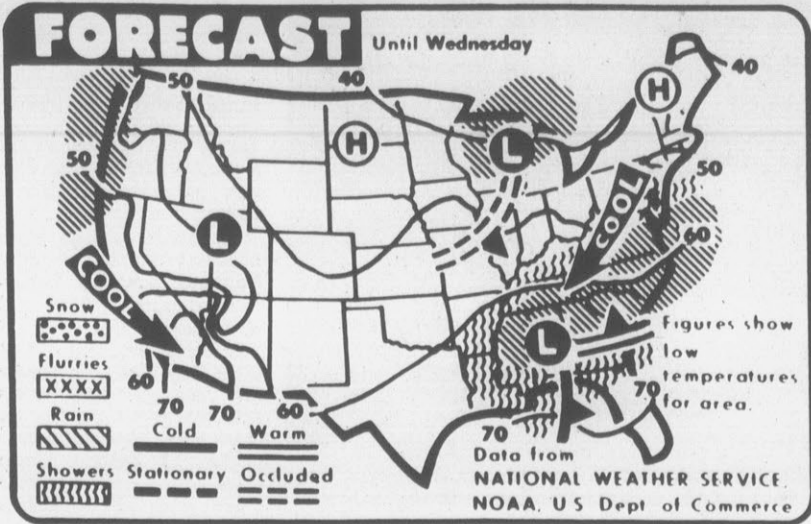

Lady Longford, historian and author of a book on Queen Victoria, dismissed the theory as "a rehash of rumors."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecast for today until early Wednesday predicts rain and showers for much of the South and parts of Michigan and Wisconsin.

Rain is also indicated for the Pacific coast from Northern California to Washington. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A cold front over the western part of North Carolina this morning was moving toward the coast where it is expected to become stationary. Warm air flowing over the front will bring rain along the way.

The rain will be further enhanced by an area of low pressure developing over Texas this morning. The low will move over western sections of the state on Wednesday and this could bring some locally heavy rains.

The forecast called for occasional periods of rain spreading over the state today as the cold front progressed, with the rains continuing tonight and Wednesday. Scattered thundershowers also are possible Wednesday.

High temperatures today and Wednesday were expected to be mostly in the 70s. Similar readings were experienced Monday under cloudy to partly cloudy skies.

'Greatest Depression' Began On U.S. Farms

By BILL HUMPHRIES
NCSU Agricultural Information
RALEIGH — The greatest economic depression in U. S. history did not originate on Wall Street with the stock market crash of October, 1929. It started nine years earlier, on the farms of America.

In 1919, farmers received record high prices of more than 35 cents a pound for cotton and 49 cents a pound for tobacco. In November that year, the average price paid for tobacco in North Carolina was nearly 70 cents, and the Spring Hope market achieved an unheard of average of almost 87 cents.

Then the bubble burst. In 1920, prices per pound fell to less than 16 cents for cotton and 21 cents for tobacco. The price level for general commodities reached a peak in May 1920 and as credit tightened, deflation began.

Throughout the 1920's, farmers struggled to improve their lot, but without success. Prices remained depressed. U. S. business and industry generally prospered, but agriculture languished. By the late 1920's, the need for a strong farm organization in North Carolina had become obvious. Several influential newspapers urged that such an organization be formed.

At a convention of farm men and women in Raleigh in 1927, a committee was appointed to the study of possibilities. Dr. Clarence Poe, editor of "The Progressive Farmer," was named chairman.

The committee, which included such men as Dr. Carl C. Taylor, Dr. T.E. Browne, and I. O. Schaub, concluded that the Grange, which had been originally organized in the state in the 1870's but which had died out by the 1890's, seemed "best suited to the needs of the farmers of North Carolina" and ought to be revived.

With help from the National Grange, many local or subordinate Grange units were established in the state during the spring and summer of 1929. Then in September of that year, at a meeting in the hall of the House of Representatives in the State Capitol, the North Carolina State Grange was organized.

In light of his leadership, Dr. Poe was unanimously chosen as the first Master, and he agreed to serve for one year.

This year, the state Grange is observing its golden anniversary. Lloyd Massey, the current Master, has announced that the 1979 annual meeting will be held in Raleigh beginning Nov. 1, with one or more sessions to be conducted in the Capitol Building in the Hall of the House.

As a fraternal organization composed of rural families, the Grange has worked vigorously over the years for strong agricultural programs, improved education, better health care, and improved transportation and communication facilities for rural areas.

Today the state agricultural leaders credit the Grange with having played a significant role in the tremendous progress that has occurred on the farms and in the rural areas of North Carolina over the past 50 years.

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — British rock star Elton John's first concert in the Soviet Union erupted into a frenzy, with nearly 4,000 Russian fans dancing on their seats or in the aisles.

Uniformed Leningrad police and other Soviet officials were helpless to control the screaming, clapping mobs Monday night.

"I was determined to make it successful," the 32-year-old singer told reporters after the concert. "That's the biggest achievement I've ever received as an artist."

After the 2½-hour performance, which John ended with a spur-of-the-moment of the Beatles hit tune, "Back in the U.S.S.R.," young people at first refused to leave the Oktyabrsky Concert Hall. "El-ton, El-ton," cried the teen-agers who surged below the stage.

Outside the hall, at least 2,000 youths spilled over wooden barriers and a human chain of police just to catch one more glimpse of John, who stood in his dressing room window and waved to the crowd.

"I'm so delighted. The kids are incredible," John said.

An official with the Soviet concert agency, Goskontsert, which had arranged the British star's appearance after months of negotiations, said: "I've never see anything like this. Never. No Western rock star as well known as John has ever been allowed to tour the Soviet Union. Monday night's performance was the first of four concerts he will give in Leningrad, followed by four more shows at Moscow's Rossiya Hotel.

The British rocker noted that after 10 years of performing to huge audiences all over the West, "I needed a challenge so we said, 'Let's try Russia.'"

Before John even walked on stage, scores of young people were gathered outside the hall trying to beg a ticket from foreigners and passers-by. Tickets were said to be selling on the black market for 100 rubles — $150 — each.

John greeted his audience by saying "Dobry vecher" (Good evening) and gave a short bow as fans admired his purple sat-in tunic-and-pants outfit worn with a black, gold-spangled scarf.

The audience ranged from middle-age women in bouffant hairdos to jeans-clad, leather-jacketed teen-agers in the rear of the hall.

Groups of teen-agers ran up to the stage in between songs to give the singer flowers, for his autograph or get a kiss on the cheek until concert hall ushers blocked off the way to the stage.

One group of well-wishers was even expelled from the hall.

The atmosphere electrified when percussionist Ray Cooper arrived on stage in an eerie, dramatic swirl of smoke and pulsing strobe light that sent the Soviet crowd whistling and cheering.

The two performers launched into expert renditions of their famous hits, including "Saturday Night," "Tommy" and "Crocodile Rock."

They brought both young and old leaping to their feet with the chart-topping tune "Benny and the Jets."

Cooper and John urged the crowd to clap and sing along. Hundreds streamed down the aisles to crowd in front of the stage, to the distress of Soviet officials.

HIGH-KICKING ELTON — British rock singer Elton John does a high kick during his performance Monday in Oktyabrsky Hall in Leningrad, the first stop of his eight concert tour of the Soviet Union. Russian teen-agers, some paying a reported $150 for black market tickets, crowded the 3,200-seat hall for the concert. (AP Laserphoto)

Gold Medal In Wayne's Future

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Wayne, who brought law 'n order to the American West single handedly, who fought and won World War II dozens of times, is taking Congress without a struggle.

"Few people are given the title, 'The,'" Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr. was saying. "There's The President — The Pope — The Queen — and The Duke."

John Wayne, the Duke, 71, hospitalized for treatment of cancer, is going to have a congressional gold medal struck in his honor. No doubt about it.

The Senate already has approved the idea, and the House of Representatives is certain to do the same. Specifically, the legislation would authorize the president to present the gold medal to Wayne and authorize the Treasury Department to strike bronze replicas for sale to the public.

Only 83 Americans have been so honored. And most of them — George Washington and Andrew Jackson to name two — didn't make movies about wars and the West. They lived them.

A House banking subcommittee met Monday to kick around the idea of a medal for Wayne. It wasn't a hearing, it was a love feast.

Rep. Thomas Evans, R-Del., remembered growing up as a kid in Seaford, Del., shelling out 11 cents to watch John Wayne on the big screen. "And 11 cents meant something," he said.

"I learned a lot from John Wayne and I think America learned a lot from him because he set the standard for American manhood," he said.

Evans, 47, grew up on John Wayne. He was born three years after The Duke made the first of his 200 films.

From the President of the United States, in a letter to Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., subcommittee chairman:

John Wayne's "true grit helped win the West, World War II, and the hearts of thousands of us across the country and the world."

From Goldwater, R-Calif., sponsor of the medal legislation in the House:

"Suffice it to say that this award will represent a sincere 'thank you' from his government and fellow citizens for a lifetime of loving his country with a fierce loyalty and more than a little pride in its goodness and despite its faults."

From a tearful Maureen O'Hara, actress, for 39 years a friend of Wayne, and his co-star in "The Quiet Man":

"To the people of the world, John Wayne is not just an actor, and a very fine actor. He is the United States of America."

From Elizabeth Taylor:

"He's tough as an old nut, soft as a yellow ribbon. . . Kids today and myself talk about cool. Well, Big John is one cool cat. He is a giant and he will be with us always."

Neighbor Helps Foil Burglary

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A sharp-eyed neighbor helped foil a weekend burglary attempt at Barbara Streisand's Bel-Air home, according to police.

Detective Gerald Winkle said Monday that officers recovered $30 from Carol McClure, 42, of Oklahoma City, after arresting her at Ms. Streisand's home Sunday. The officers were summoned by a neighbor who was keeping an eye on the home while the actress-singer was gone.

Bianca To Get Jagger Money

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bianca Jagger will get some financial help from her estranged husband, Mick, to pay for medical repairs after a roller-skating accident.

Jagger's attorneys said he was in England Monday, but Mrs. Jagger was present when a judge ordered the rock star to pay his wife $12,000 in temporary support and up to $2,500 for her medical bills.

Superior Court Judge Harry Shafter also ruled Monday that Jagger must deposit $35,000 to be held for paying Mrs. Jagger's attorney fees as the couple's bitterly disputed divorce case proceeds.

Weissmuller Goes Into Home

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Weissmuller is being transferred to a convalescent home because his health — not his mind — is failing, says an attorney for Weissmuller's wife.

Albert Coombes on Monday disputed statements by Jack Staggs of the Motion Picture and Country Hospital, where the 74-year-old former "Tarzan" movie star is staying. Staggs had indicated the actor is "suffering from "psychological problems."

"The move was only necessitated by fear that medically he might need 24-hour care," Coombes said. "The problem is that Johnny has several medical conditions that could endanger his life, were he to be unattended for a period of time."

If you need a minor miracle to set an opposing contract, conduct the defense as if that particular distribution exists. Here's a case in point.

The bidding was, in part, dictated by the fact that both sides had a 60 part score. West contemplated interfering with a takeout double over the two heart response, but prudently decided that would be too risky with such poor suits and insufficient values. East could take no action since the opponents had bid two of his better suits.

West led the two of diamonds, and declarer fell from grace when he ducked in dummy. He should have realized that if the deuce were fourth-best, and there was no reason to suspect otherwise, East was marked with a singleton king or queen. If West had both honors, he would have led the king. There was the additional danger that West's lead was a singleton.

East won the king of diamonds and paused to consider the defense. If West held the ace of clubs, the defenders could get two club tricks. It was likely that the defenders would score a spade trick, but that still left them two tricks short of defeating the contract. Those two tricks had to come from diamond ruffs, and West had to have two entries. The only suit in which West could have these entries was clubs.

Since this was the only real possibility for the defense, at trick two East shifted to a low club! He worked out that, unless his partner also held the ten of clubs, West would have no second entry. Note that if East leads the queen of clubs, declarer could foil the defenders' plans by refusing to cover, thus denying West the vital second entry.

Declarer played the king from his hand, losing to the ace. The defense was clear. West reverted to a diamond. East ruffed and returned a low club. West won the nine and gave his partner another diamond ruff. East exited safely with his last trump, and no matter what declarer did, he still had to lose a spade trick. Enterprising defense was rewarded with a one-trick set.

ECU Science Camp Begins On June 17

The Department of Science Education and the Division of Continuing Education are having the first annual Summer Science Camp for Teachers and Students at Camp Caroline June 17-23.

The Summer Science Camp is for students in grades 4-6 or ages 9-12 and will be directed by Dr. Dale R. Rice, a faculty member in the Department of Science Education.

Emphasis of the camp will be placed on high interest science activities designed to increase the awareness and knowledge of the environment. Fishing, swimming, sailing, canoeing, snipe hunts and model rocketry will be offered along with other activities. Certified teachers will work closely with students, along with six counselors.

In addition, a teacher camp will be held along with the student camp, so that teachers may receive instruction in ecology, outdoor biology experiments, geology and environmental education. Teachers will receive three semester hours of college credit from East Carolina University, noted as Science 6019, Science in Elementary Education.

In addition to activities at Camp Caroline, a summer science day camp will be offered at East Carolina University from June 11-15 for students in grades 1-3. Activities will bring awareness of the environment, with the final day planned around a field trip to the N. C. Marine Science Center near Atlantic Beach.

Enrollment for both camps is limited, so interested students and teachers should apply as soon as possible by writing the Division of Continuing Education or Dr. Dale R. Rice in the Department of Science Education, ECU.

The Student Council of South Greenville School for permission to sell baked goods, candy and gum on June 2 at the school auditorium to raise funds for the student supply store; and by the North Carolina Central University Alumni Association for permission to have a fish fry on May 26 to raise money for the association.

CLAIM PROVOCATION

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist party newspaper Pravda claims American foes of the new SALT II treaty have begun a campaign of "gross propaganda provocations" in a bid to block Senate ratification of the treaty.

Costlier Sportsmen's Licenses Are Inching Ahead

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hunting, fishing and other sportsmen's licenses would increase in cost an average 26 percent this year under legislation given tentative approval in the state Senate Monday night.

The bill passed on a 34-7 vote with minimal debate, and a final Senate vote was expected today. If given final approval, the measure goes to the House.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, the bill's sponsor, said the money was needed to erase a $1.4 million deficit of the Wildlife Resources Commission, which is financed solely through game licenses and fees. He said the new fee schedule would bring in an extra $1.7 million a year to the commission.

"Inflation has hurt the wildlife department just like it has hurt everyone else," Rauch said. "This is just trying to keep up with inflation."

The bill would raise resident hunting licenses from $7.50 to $9.50 and resident fishing licenses from $7 to $9.50. Resident combination licenses would increase from $10 to $12.50.

Non-resident hunting licenses would go up $6 to $31, and similar increases would be made in more than 20 other special licenses.

Meanwhile in the House, a bill establishing a new $25 annual guest-fishing license won tentative approval on a 95-3 vote. It would allow the commission to issue licenses to persons owning property on inland waters, allowing their guests to fish from their property without personal fishing licenses.

In other legislative action:

Bottle Bill
Sponsors of the so-called bottle bill, which would lead to a mandatory five-cent deposit on drink bottles and cans, have asked that the legislation be delayed until next year. A House subcommittee voted to recommend a delay for the bottle bill until the short legislative session in 1980.

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, primary sponsor of the measure, called the move a victory and said it would give supporters more time to counter lobbying efforts against the bill by industry and labor groups.

"This is a step forward because the bill would have been killed if it had been put to a vote on the subcommittee," health insurance. Health-maintenance organizations are pre-paid clinics in which a person receives health care for a regular, monthly fee.

The bill allows county and local governments to offer HMO membership to employees when a clinic is located in their area. The House voted 56-52 to approve an amendment deleting a provision that would have required HMO membership be offered where available.

ABC
The House approved and sent the Senate a resolution giving the state Board of Alcohol Control clear authority to establish regulations limiting mixed-drink sales in social clubs.

Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson, said he had been unable to write legislation preventing social clubs from having both mixed-drink sales and brown-bagging without also banning both methods in country clubs. The vote was 61-41.

SOME BABY! — Police inspector John Steven and six-year-old Marsha Zemskiv from Moscow, look back in time at the Earls Court Exhibition Hall in London. They are viewing Dima, a baby mammoth—an extinct species of elephant—which has been perfectly preserved for 40,000 years in Siberia's permafrost. The mammoth, which is four feet long, three feet high with a two-foot long trunk, died when only six months old. It is insured for eight million pounds sterling, and will go on show to the public at the Soviet National Exhibition tomorrow. Dima was flown to London from Leningrad—its first trip outside the Soviet Union. (AP Laserphoto)

Svoboda was given the ECU Department of Aerospace Studies Outstanding Senior award, and Lambe was recognized as the recipient of one of two campus-wide Outstanding Senior awards given by the ECU chapter of Phi Sigma Pi honor society.

Names, hometowns, career specialties and base assignments of the area new second lieutenants include:

Top House Billing For 3 Measures

By SAM D. BUNDY
 Liquor by the drink, divorce and bingo took top billing this week in the House.

Senate Bill 293, a bill which would permit divorce on basis of six months separation, passed the Senate about three weeks ago and came over to the House and passed second reading by a 54-36 vote; however, later the House voted to return it to committee for further study, and after two weeks the committee returned the bill to the House in the same form. After about an hour of quiet, but emotional debate the "six-months" separation for divorce was defeated by a vote of 62-39 and the clincher was applied so that the bill cannot come up again until 1981.

Next, a bill to permit sale of liquor by the drink in convention centers, civic centers, coliseums, etc. carried by a vote of 60-39 on the previous Friday, however, this week the dry forces let go with both barrels and the bill was defeated by a 66-to-51 votes and the clincher was applied again and this cannot return until 1981.

Finally, on Wednesday a three-hour debate was held on a statewide "Bingo" bill and it carried with only 16 dissenting votes. Third reading on Thursday and it carried again with 26 dissenting votes.

Two hours on liquor by the drink, one hour on divorce and four hours on bingo made for seven hours on these three issues.

Next week money will be the big item. Finance and Appropriation Committees are in the home stretch.

Lisa Jones from Greene County was my page in the House and Moses Moye Jr. of Farmville was a page in the Senate.

Tuesday the seventh grade and their teacher, Mrs. Yvonne Averett from G. R. Whitfield School visited the Legislative Building.

Also, nine students from Farmville Central High School, along with Mr. Cotton, principal, and Mr. McAdams, assistant principal, were in Raleigh to receive the First District Award for School Beautification and it was my privilege to have Speaker Stewart recognize them for this achievement.

See you next week.
