Marathon Operation Separated Hansen Twins

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen, joined at the tops of their heads since birth 19 months ago, were successfully separated today in pioneering surgery that lasted over 16 hours.

"It's done and it's a success. They're awake and crying," said John Dwan, spokesman for the University of Utah Medical Center. He said the twins were separated at 1:19 a.m. EDT.

He said the tops of the twins' heads were closed at 5:05 a.m. EDT. Two teams of surgeons, one for each twin, participated in the marathon operation.

Dwan said the twins were in "critical but stable condition and their prognosis is unknown."

The parents, David and Patricia Hansen of Ogden, were "very grateful and very tired," Dwan said. The Hansens and several close members of the family kept a vigil at the hospital during the surgery, which began at 12:40 p.m. EDT Tuesday.

Working in shifts through the night, teams of surgeons tied off shared blood vessels and cut apart the girls' skulls. Before the surgery, the twins faced the same direction.

When they were wheeled out of the operating room today, it was the first time in their lives they had independent movement.

Dr. Stephen Minton, a spokesman for the medical team, said recently that separation of this type had never before been completed successfully. Other attempts had ended in death or severe mental retardation, he said.

Asked if either of the twins may have suffered brain damage during the grueling surgery, Dwan declined comment. He said doctors would hold a news conference at 3 p.m. EDT today.

Newsmen were not allowed near the operating theater, but Dwan compared the lengthy, delicate operation to a ballet. He said the operating room was very noisy and very busy as up to 11 doctors conferred and worked in teams.

Before the operation, Minton had described Lisa and Elisa as healthy children who were perfectly normal, both physically and mentally, except for their being joined together.

During the surgery, Dwan said doctors — including neurosurgeons, plastic surgeons, anaesthesiologists and pediatricians — worked more slowly for a time because they encountered scar tissue from four previous operations which set the stage for final separation.

However, he said doctors were able to accelerate their pace during other stages of the operation, which doctors had predicted could last 20 hours.

Doctors have said the girls' brains were separate, although touching. They had shared veins carrying blood away from their brains, and their skulls were fused together, but there was a slight indentation where Lisa's head stopped and Elisa's began.

Grounding Disrupts World Air Travel

By The Associated Press
Thousands of passengers scrambled for new flights or cooled their heels in airport lounges and hotels as a U.S. government-ordered grounding of all DC-10 jumbo jets disrupted world air travel.

Some DC-10s were called back in mid-flight Tuesday, and on the ground passengers were bused hundreds of miles to catch substitute flights or lodged overnight until an available seat turned up.

Sir Freddie Laker's Skytrain was derailed. It uses six DC-10s for its cheap-fare flights between England and the United States.

Many took the inconvenience philosophically, mindful the inspections were prompted by the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 that killed at least 273 people in the nation's worst air disaster.

"It's better to be safe on the ground rather than go 'Oh! Oh!' in midair," said singer Pat Boone, who had a reservation for a DC-10 flight from New York to Los Angeles.

The Federal Aviation Administration's decision to ground the three-engine jets pending new checks of their engine assemblies left about 40,000 DC-10 seats empty on U.S. carriers alone — about 12 percent of domestic capacity, the industry estimated.

The order followed discovery of "grave and potentially dangerous deficiencies" in the engine assemblies. An engine fell off the ill-fated American plane on Friday.

Eight U.S. carriers have 134 DC-10s in operation. Foreign airlines have at least that many, and while they were not bound by the FAA order, many grounded their jets.

Joseph Scott, an American spokesman in Chicago, estimated about 17,000 persons nationwide were bumped from DC-10s. About 3,200 persons were bumped in Chicago, he said.

Assassin Of Judge Hunted By 40 Agents

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — An army of federal agents commanded by the FBI's top criminal investigator has been called in to search for the assassin who gunned down U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., known as "Maximum John" because of his stiff sentences for drug offenders.

"We cannot have a country where judges are assassinated or killed," said U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell, himself a former federal judge. "We don't intend to leave a stone unturned."

Wood, 63, was shot once in the lower back Tuesday morning as he was getting into his car in the parking lot at his apartment. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a San Antonio hospital.

The judge was the second federal official involved in West Texas drug investigations to be the target of gunfire in the last seven months. He was believed to be the first federal judge ever assassinated.

Bell assigned James Ingraham, whom Bell described as the FBI's foremost investigator, to direct a team of 40 agents in the case. He also sent federal marshals to protect four federal judges in the San Antonio area.

The FBI said Wood was apparently shot with a small-caliber rifle. Although the judge's wife and the son of a fellow jurist arrived at the scene only moments after the shooting, there was no report they saw the assassin.

Last November, assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr, one of the prosecutors in the investigation, narrowly escaped death when his car was riddled by gunfire. Wood was put under protective guard but ordered it discontinued three weeks ago.

Wood had often alluded to the danger posed by his drug cases, which included that of Jimmy Chagra, a professional gambler charged with conspiracy to possess, import and distribute cocaine and marijuana.

Chagra's lawyers asked at an April pretrial hearing in Midland that Wood remove himself from the case, scheduled to be tried July 23, but Wood refused, saying he would be unbiased.

Safety Records Honored At Annual Awards Event

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer
Approximately 100 persons from 50 Pitt County plants, businesses and service establishments attended the Tuesday safety awards banquet sponsored by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and the North Carolina Department of Labor.

Companies qualified for the safety certificates by maintaining perfect safety records during the calendar year, or by recording an occupational injury incidence rate of at least 50 percent below the statewide rate for their particular industry.

Master of ceremonies for the event was Kenneth M. Buck, GACOC Safety Awards Banquet chairman. Douglas Starr, vice chairman of the Chamber's Economic and Industrial Development Council, introduced the featured speaker, North Carolina Commissioner of Labor John C. Brooks.

Brooks, a Greenville native, commended those present "for a job well done." He pointed out that good safety records increase productivity and are successful in controlling spiraling inflation. Brooks spoke of the need for North Carolina high skilled craftsmen, and noted that community colleges and technical institutes should be authorized to implement more high skilled programs in their curricula.

"Industries will not choose to come to North Carolina if there are not enough high skilled craftsmen," said Brooks. He noted that the low number of high skilled craftsmen, such as sheet metal workers and carpenters, cause higher increases in craftsmen's pay.

Commissioner Brooks presented awards to the business representatives. Union Carbide Corporation,

Public Employee Union Ban Argued At Hearing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Enacting into law a bill that would prohibit public employees from joining certain unions and from striking will only make public employees more inclined to join unions, opponents of the bill told legislators Tuesday.

In a public hearing called after several of the state's labor leaders implied the General Assembly was trying to rush the bill through without public airing, opponents said it would only increase the discontent felt by those employees now.

"If you don't want public-employee unions in North Carolina representing state, city and county public employees," said Barbara Brown, president of the N.C. Federation of Teachers, "you are going to have to upgrade quickly your treatment of public employees..."

Several dozen speakers spoke against the proposal, which was introduced by Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr., D-Wake, and Rep. Hartwell Campbell, D-Wilson.

A smaller number, including former state Sen. Lawrence Davis of Winston-Salem, spoke in favor of it.

Davis' Winston-Salem law firm represents that city in litigation stemming from successful union organization of several departments there.

"We have in North Carolina today no law relating to what unions public employees can join," Davis said.

"Virtually every state has an appellate court case or a statute saying public employees cannot strike," Davis said. "We have not needed it.

But that can change and change rapidly."

Another Winston-Salem official agreed.

"We need the limitations on public employees' union membership and activities this bill provides in order to ensure our continued economic well-being, as well as protect the health, safety and welfare of all the citizens of the state," said Richard Stockton, president of the Greater Winston-Salem Chamber of Commerce.

But opponents warned the bill would prompt public employees to seek union representation.

"Yes, poor public employees in this state are just ripe for organizing. Winston-Salem proves just that," Ms. Brown said. "By outlawing public employee unions, you are just going to make them look more enticing."

The bill would prohibit public employees from becoming members of unions that use strikes as bargaining tools and require members to participate in authorized strikes. It would also prohibit police officers from joining a union that represents any employees in private industry in the same municipality.

The Senate and House committees handling the bill are expected to act on it this week.

HUMMINGBIRD ATTRACTERS

I would like to know some plants to plant that would attract hummingbirds. My children have never seen one and it's been years since I have. L. T.

There's a book at Sheppard Memorial Library titled, "Hummingbirds and Their Flowers." This would give a good idea of the kinds of plants that would be likely to draw hummingbirds. Some locally-easy-to-grow examples might be scarlet runner green beans, columbines, trumpet vines, and tiger lilies.

Another possible hummingbird attracter is a "store-bought" hummingbird feeder, which can be hung from a tree limb and filled with red soft-drink mix or sugar water colored red. The price at most local garden supply stores is $3 or thereabouts.

Rent Subsidy

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The federal government will help pay the rent on nearly 1,000 apartments in North Carolina this year at a cost of nearly $2.8 million.

The program, which will be funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, is a new project designed to encourage landlords of deteriorating housing to renovate their property. The landlords will also be urged to help low-income families find places to live.

The incentive will be the ability to charge the fair-market rent, which is usually much higher than the rent landlords could expect for deteriorating structures.

Under the program, landlords owning deteriorating housing must renovate their property to standards acceptable to a housing-authority inspector. If acceptable, the authority will provide tenants who will pay about 20 percent of their income for rent and utilities with the government paying the rest.

To be eligible for the subsidized rent, the maximum income a family of four can earn is $12,600. HUD said it must receive applications by July 23.

Found Locked In Attic

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Police responding to a call for first aid in suburban West Seneca found a naked, emaciated 69-year-old man who they said may have been locked in an attic for half a century.

West Seneca Police Chief Bruce Manning said Erwin Moll was found Monday lying in a fetal position in a second-floor attic of the home occupied by his brother and sister.

"The man was found in very poor condition," Manning said Tuesday. "More or less a Howard Hughes-type condition. Emaciated, you know."

"Officers at the scene said he had very long toenails, was lying naked in a fetal position, twisted grotesquely and apparently in an advanced state of malnutrition," Manning said.

He said Moll had been apparently locked in the attic for some time by his sister Agnes. "His sister said he had been mentally incompetent for the last 50 years," Manning said.

Police were trying to determine whether Moll had been confined in the attic for the entire half-century, Manning said. The Erie County Medical Center reported Moll in fair condition.

The police chief said Miss Moll called police, but officials had not been able to determine what caused her to seek assistance. The residence did not contain a telephone, and family members could not be reached for comment.

Manning said no charges had been filed, but an investigation was under way.

He said investigators have found that Miss Moll and her 72-year-old brother Raymond were both receiving Social Security benefits, but Erwin had never been registered in the Social Security system.

What Causes Food Price Increases?

Food price increases result mainly from general inflation in the economy and changes in farm level commodity prices, according to economists with the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

A year-long study of food prices by USDA economists indicates reducing food price inflation will require the same long-term effort necessary for curbing inflation in the rest of the economy.

Recent fluctuations in food prices primarily responsible for the higher than normal food price increases. But the underlying rate of food price increases closely corresponds to changes in marketing costs which reflect inflationary pressures in the economy.

Rapid food price increases in 1973 and 1978 were due largely to higher farm-level commodity prices. In contrast, higher marketing costs accounted for most of the food price increases from 1973 to 1977, USDA economists said.

Changes in consumer lifestyles, particularly the increasing demand for food services, have also increased food prices. Sales by fast food outlets, for example, have risen faster than any other part of the market since the sixties — six-fold between 1967 and 1977. Growth in consumer purchases of frozen and partly prepared foods, costs of providing nutritional and ingredient information, and restrictions on pesticide and chemical use also have pushed up costs of producing and marketing food.

The formation of grain reserves and pursuit of international trade agreements help to bring stability to the commodity markets. USDA economists say emphasis on other aspects of the food system may have a greater potential to reduce inflation in the years ahead.

Actions that government, the food industry and consumers could take to reduce food price increases include: monitoring merger activity and encouraging price competition in farm input supply, food manufacturing and food retailing industries; improving public knowledge of nutrition for better food purchase decisions; and encouraging adoption of available technology by the food industry and discouraging forces that impede technological adoption.

DINNER FOR FOUR

Baked Chops Potatoes

Okra and Corn

Coconut Cake

BAKED PORK CHOPS

Adapted from Puerto Rican cuisine.

4 pork rib chops (about 2 pounds)

2 tablespoons lime juice

1 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon pepper

2 to 3 teaspoons dried oregano leaves, crushed

2 teaspoons crushed garlic

1 egg, slightly beaten

1/2 cup (about) fine dry bread crumbs

If necessary, trim some (but not all) fat away from around chops. Stir together the lime juice, salt, pepper, oregano and garlic; spread over chops. One at a time, dip chops in egg, then in crumbs, pressing crumbs down firmly. Place in a shallow greased baking pan (lined with foil) into which they just fit. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven until browned on bottom side — about 30 minutes; turn and continue baking, uncovered, until very tender and well browned — 30 to 45 minutes longer. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings.

Retardation— Not a Dead End, Only a Detour!

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Enclosed please find my check for $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope for your booklet "How to Have a Lovely Wedding."

This wedding has to be specially lovely, because it is for a special daughter and a special young man. Both were labeled retarded as children, but have overcome their handicap and grown into mature, capable people. (She is 31 and he is 29.) Both work and are able to manage their own affairs with a little assistance from both sets of parents.

Friends and relatives are so happy that this beautiful couple found each other. If they were growing up today I'm sure they would not be labeled retarded, but would be considered to have "learning disabilities." They will be married in a church because their religion means so much to both of them.

This is my first letter to Dear Abby, and the only advice I need is how to make this wedding one of the loveliest our family has ever had.

REJOICING IN N.Y.

DEAR REJOICING: Thank you for a beautiful letter bearing a message of hope for all "special" children and their families. May the happy couple enjoy all of God's blessings.

DEAR ABBY: Frannie asked if birth control pills were deductible, and you replied, "Only if they don't work."

Cute answer, but for your information, according to Internal Revenue ruling 73-200, birth control pills are deductible whether they work or not—if prescribed by a physician.

NEIL WITH THE IRS

DEAR NEIL: Thanks for the info. Who am I to argue with the IRS? They're the nice people who know you can't take it with you—so they remove the temptation.

DEAR ABBY: I have two big, good-looking sons. One is 18 and the other is 16, but he's as big as his older brother. These boys have been fighting each other ever since they were old enough to swing their arms.

The 18-year-old just bought himself a secondhand car with his savings. He drove past his brother walking down the road and wouldn't even give him a lift.

The younger brother keeps his clothes in better shape, so the older one helps himself to his brother's clothes without asking. These boys fight and cuss like a couple of mule skinner.

Why can't they act like brothers?

TENNESSEE MOM

DEAR MOM: They do. Cain and Abel.

DEAR ABBY: Today I received a note which read, "Please give Suzie another week to pay for the social studies books she lost as we are making her pay for it out of her baby-sitting money."

Abby, if more parents taught that kind of responsibility at home, our job would be a great deal easier!

A JUNIOR HIGH TEACHER
ALVIN, TEXAS

DEAR TEACHER: Amen!

DEAR ABBY: Why do fellows say, "I'll call you," and then you never hear from them again?

This has happened to me and a lot of my girlfriends so often it's not even funny.

HURT IN KOKOMO

DEAR HURT: Some fellows say, "I'll call you," because they think that's what most girls want to hear. And they're right. But it has about as much meaning as, "See you around," or, "Let's get together sometime."

The next time a fellow says, "I'll call you," if you want to shake him up, say, "Terrific. When?"

DEAR ABBY: Please settle an argument between my husband and me. He says that my sister's husband is HIS brother-in-law. I say that my sister's husband is MY brother-in-law, but he isn't my husband's brother-in-law. He is my husband's sister-in-law's husband. Who's right?

SAN CLEMENTE

DEAR SAN: Webster defines "brother-in-law" as follows: 1) the brother of one's husband or wife; 2) the husband of one's sister; 3) the husband of the sister of one's wife or husband. So your husband is right.

Gap Is Bridged By Translators

NEW HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — How do you ask, "How do you feel today?" in Turkish or Tagalog?

Whatever the patient's language, from Arabic to Yiddish, chances are an employee of the Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center can ask the question in the patient's native tongue and translate the answer.

"It is a trying enough experience to be ill and in a hospital, but when the patient doesn't even speak English a sense of loneliness and isolation further compounds the problem," says Dr. Abe Lurie, Director of Social Services at the medical center.

To cope with this situation the center has created an Interpreters' Bureau made up of employees who speak two and even three and four languages.

The Emergency Room, the admissions office, nursing stations and other strategic areas are supplied with a directory of translators' names and the languages they speak so that they can be called at a moment's notice.

"Finding someone who can communicate with the patient contributes to the quality of care he or she will receive," says Dr. Lurie. "Talking in his native tongue, the patient can discuss not only his physical state but his anxieties about himself or his worries about his family."

"A lot of tension is relieved this way," he adds.

For example, Helen Mavroidis, an employee manager who speaks Greek fluently, is called to the kidney dialysis unit where a woman in her 30s is under treatment for kidney failure.

Mrs. Mavroidis spends an hour with the Greek woman and talks to her about her most serious worry, her three young children. The patient also talks of her apprehension over her own condition and her concern over the cost of treatment.

Mrs. Mavroidis recounts all of this to a social worker who maintains close contact with the patient through the interpreter and helps her work through some of her problems.

On another day, Mrs. Mavroidis is called to the Emergency Room when a Greek restaurant worker arrives by ambulance following an accident. The man breathlessly tells the interpreter about his allergies, concerned that he might be given some medication he cannot tolerate.

Still another incident draws on the language ability of a pediatric resident named Dr. Jeffrey Phillips who attended medical school in Spain and Mexico and who speaks Spanish as though it were his mother tongue. A baby, en route from Lisbon to the midwest, has become ill on arrival at Kennedy Airport and has been whisked by ambulance to LIJ-HMC.

The physician becomes the liaison between the baby's parents and hospital personnel.

Tags Will Tell Energy Cost

NEW YORK (UPI) — Energy-use tags are expected to be available on some home appliance tags, starting this summer, says Hada de Slosser of Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service Consumer Education Office.

The new tags being designed by the Federal Trade Commission will estimate operating costs in energy based on standard tests. An estimate will indicate monthly operating costs in dollars and cents. The tags are designed to help prospective buyers compute costs for their locales, based on area utility rates.

Tags will give a range of energy costs for similar models. Appliances using hot water will be tagged for costs based on different types of fuels.

It Hurt When He Turned 40

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — When Bob Cready turned 40 recently, his family didn't forget his birthday; and they didn't let him forget it either.

His children Mikki and Travis wore T-shirts that read, "My Dad is Really Old," and his wife, Bonnie, wore one saying "I Prefer Older Men."

What really hurt, though, Cready said, were the bumper stickers that read "Life Begins at 40 — When Your Wife Is In the 20s."

Mrs. Cready explained that within a month she'd be in her 30s and wanted to make the most of her youth while she could.

learning the pertinent facts about the child quickly from the family and feeding back information on the infant's condition.

"If these parents had suddenly found themselves with a very sick baby, and no one to tell them what was going on, they would have been extremely apprehensive, but Dr. Phillips, with his fluent Spanish, was able to allay their fears," Dr. Lurie points out.

Three hundred and fifty interpreters at the medical center cover the globe, linguistically, even to Urdu and Hindi, should the occasion ever arise.

"The Interpreters' Bureau has proven so helpful, other hospitals may want to consider the same service, even if they must reach beyond their own employee ranks to the community; people get a great deal of gratification out of helping," Dr. Lurie says.

Obscure Factors Guide Lives

It is difficult to absorb the American Airlines DC-10 jet crash in Chicago which became the nation's worst air tragedy in taking 273 lives.

The sudden crash brought sudden terror and then sorrow to hundreds of families and friends of victims whose charred bodies lay scattered across a field near O'Hare International Airport.

Hardly had the agony of the disaster begun to unfold before National Transportation Safety Board investigators moved on the scene. They knew from eyewitness accounts that an engine had wrenched loose and fallen to the run-way.

During the weekend they found out why. One of the bolts which held the engine to the wing, had failed from metal fatigue. The broken bolt was located in the grass after an exhaustive search.

The investigators emphasized that the bolt was not necessarily the cause of the crash since the plane was designed to fly with the two remaining engines.

Still it appears likely that the engine's tearing away from the plane set in motion other failures which caused the plane to lose power.

It was a horrible twist of fate, of course, that a lone bolt failed on this particular flight and 273 people died. Yet at times all our lives depend on something equally obscure.

Important To Filling Hospital Needs

The Project Review Committee of the Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency last week approved a certificate of need for a new bed tower at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The recommendation must go to the full HSA board but it is an important step forward in allowing the construction of the 166 additional beds... and they are badly needed because of the regional nature of the hospital.

We are pleased that this important action has been taken.

The Tail Wags The Dog

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Has the bureaucratic tail wagged the legislative dog?

A cross-section of leadership in the 1979 session of the North Carolina General Assembly agrees wholeheartedly with the blunt assessment rendered by the veteran chairman of one of the most powerful committees: "Oh, absolutely."

The Legislature this session has moved a step closer on the inexorable road toward becoming, itself, a bureaucracy bent more to self-perpetuation and self-protection than much of anything else.

Supposed to be, by Constitution and definition, the Board of Directors for the State Corporation, legislators are supposed to function as the bosses, overseers, supervisors, critics and gadflies of the governmental bureaucracy... and most especially the governor and his administration.

Two quick illustrations serve to describe how that hasn't worked.

Raises

That tragicomic exercise in legislative leadership trying to outdo one another in how much of a raise to give state employees and the infighting over who got the increase the first demonstrates how much the General Assembly waltzes to the orchestrations of state employees and teachers.

The fact that best estimates show half the bills introduced this session were written by state agencies; another big number produced by the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt; and a relative handful originated from the minds and pens of members of the General Assembly — and those have been typically ill-fated — proves the power of outside influence on the lawmakers.

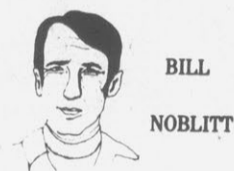

What is happening? The answer is complex, and derives from a number of legislators who see things from varying perspectives.

Here, in overview drawn from a number of conversations, the scene:

Intent on winning reelection every two years, legislators are intimidated by the organized numbers of state employees and teachers. "They may not guarantee you will win, yet. But they sure threaten you can be beat... and they're right", says a legislator.

Freshman legislators are heavily courted by employee organizations, agency representatives, and special interest lobbies like banks and utilities and local governments. Isolated in legislative glamour, they are quickly roped and branded. Most bills introduced with the name of a sponsor on the top were presented by the influence group.

Advocate

Assigned to committee, a legislator tends to become an advocate for the causes put forth by state agencies or special interest groups affected by the particular committee.

Too much is going on to keep track, so a legislator must develop limited fields of interest and skill, and in doing so becomes a recognized "expert" to whom his colleagues defer. After enough time, the lawmaker becomes a "legislative leader" whose yea or nay in a particular area is enough to determine the outcome of the vote.

As legislative salaries and fringes improve — and as lawmakers become pampered, fed, wined and entertained — more and more decide they enjoy Raleigh more than the office or store back home. Much of this is ego factor. The net, however, is an increased "professional" flavor to the assembly rather than a "citizen assembly" at which those serving do as they think best without regard for next year or next election.

When this session of the General Assembly is viewed from the perspective of the months ahead, it will be seen as one which strained mightily to satisfy demands of the bureaucracy, to reward the banks and savings and loans people with whatever they wanted, to produce higher raises for state employees than most Tar Heels will enjoy, and to rubber stamp a stack of administration proposals without truly understanding them.

THE INSIDE REPORT

N. Y. Blues For Jimmy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — President Carter's rapid political deterioration here can be measured by the fact his political agents will be forced into a bruising confrontation this week to undo a new state primary election plan custom-made for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

That Kennedy-style primary was tentatively approved by a 24-member delegate selection committee, blithely overriding White House wishes. It was to have been finally approved May 24, but the meeting was cancelled after backstage urgings by the president's men. That sets a showdown in which, whatever the outcome, efforts to undo the Kennedyized primary rules will leave Democratic blood on the floor — some of it Jimmy Carter's.

The New York primary will not decide the Democratic presidential nomination. But events here have exposed Carter's astonishing weakness in New York. Lacking committed backers, he depends on elected officials and regular party leaders who see him as the source of federal funds and patronage (support with all the ardent generally expected from mercenaries).

While left-wing Democrats here chastise the president on ideological grounds, this is not Carter's basic problem in a state no longer so liberal. "Not that I approve of the things Ted Kennedy is saying and doing," one politician long associated with the Kennedys told us, "but I have to be for him because Carter is so weak a leader." Accustomed to assertive leaders, New Yorkers find the Carter style unappealing.

But mostly, Democratic politicians view Carter as a loser. Andrew Stein, the fiercely ambitious Manhattan borough president who is eyeing the 1980 Senate race, sees himself as a surrogate for all Democratic candidates who don't want to run with Carter. While Kennedy is the overwhelming choice, politicians believe somebody will beat Carter in New York even if Kennedy finally refuses to run.

The president also has suffered here from political fumbling of a kind chronic in his White House. Carter's interests in revising the state's 1980 delegate procedures have been represented by his campaign committee's legal counsel, 31-year-old Tim Smith, one of Carter's 1976 "campaign kids."

Smith has been working closely with the state Democratic party's counsel: Melvin Schweitzer, lawyer for a Park Ave. firm which formerly employed Smith. Some two months ago, the White House tapped Schweitzer to head the General National Mortgage Assn. (Ginnie Mae), but he withdrew when Housing Secretary Patricia Harris was unenthusiastic.

Smith and Schweitzer worked up a delegate plan

Strength For Today

A GREAT SAINT
St. Francis of Assisi was one of the greatest Christians that ever lived. The church in which he prayed and from which he conducted his missionary efforts, now stands within the great Assisi Chapel, in Italy.

The son of wealthy parents, Francis as a young man lived the worldly life of his day. But on one occasion he was returning home at night with gay and singing companions, he fell behind and saw a heavenly vision. He thenceforth dedicated his life completely to the service of his fellow men. So great was his devotion and so contagious his personality that others joined with him, and the Franciscan Order became one of the great religious bodies of the church.

Francis is the ideal of every Christian whose confidence in unseen things is complete and whose dedication to God is without qualification. And Francis is not a man of a single age. Every age, as well as every branch of the Church, can claim him.

Commencement Speech

WASHINGTON — Every graduating class has the same problem, and that is to find a speaker who will bring honor and as much money for the school as possible.

Very few people realize how graduation speakers are chosen.

This is how it goes: In January, the president calls in the senior class committee and says, "Whom have you chosen as your speaker?"

"We had an election and the senior class has decided it wants Woody Allen."

The president blanches.

"Yes, he would make a very good speaker though I'm not sure he would be available. Do you have a second choice?"

"Garry Trudeau, who draws 'Doodles'."

"And your third choice?"

"Jane Fonda."

"Those are all excellent suggestions and I'll do everything in my power to see if we can get them. You'll be hearing from me in a short while."

In April, the senior class committee returns and the

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

After reading some of the recent letters in the Public Forum, I feel compelled to share some thoughts concerning the Greenville Rescue Squad.

1. Greenville Rescue Squad is the "World Champion" at "Heavy Duty" rescue, NOT basic first aid, where they spend 99 percent of their time.

2. Out of the whole world, only two other teams competed against G. R. S. for the world title. One team was volunteer and the other an oil company team. G. R. S. placed third in first aid in a field of only six teams. Where was Los Angeles, Calif., and all the other famous teams?

3. Part of the competition team was volunteer, not the paid men you see every day. One of the volunteers is a reporter for The Daily Reflector, and writes most of the paper's unbiased articles about the squad.

4. The training level of G. R. S. is "E.M.T." The same E.M.T. as the newly trained firemen we have heard so much about. A bit more polished, perhaps, but still just plain E.M.T.

5. G. R. S. will go in another squad's territory at will. This situation has improved since Chief Allen has taken over, but it still happens regularly. Evidently the leadership of G. R. S. wants the extra number of calls in the county for statistical purposes so they can ask the county for more money.

6. G. R. S. apparently as a squad policy, will make an injured or sick person wait for an available truck instead of calling for assistance from a county squad when G. R. S. units are busy. This is not championship quality service to people who think they are receiving it.

Tony Day, E.M.T.

To the editor:

June 8th is a very important day for the students of Greenville City and Pitt County Schools. On that day, concerned citizens will have an opportunity to vote for a $9 million bond issue for the improvement of both school systems.

These funds will be utilized to build classrooms in overcrowded schools, to replace outdated, crowded lunchroom facilities, to provide media facilities which meet state standards and to make many other improvements in the city and county schools.

The children of Pitt County are our most important product. The future of these children is dependent upon the education they receive in our schools. How can we afford to vote "No" for such an important bond issue? Won't you join me and my family in voting "Yes" for the school bond issue on June 8th?

A Vast Slice Of Life

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
CLASSIFIED INFORMATION
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Those orderly rows of classified ads at the back of the nation's newspapers can sometimes sandwich an awesome slice of life in the space of four or five lines.

"Never worn. White wedding dress. Petite size."

That two-line message in the New Orleans Times-Picayune with a phone number attached conjures up enough imaginary emotional wallop for a mini TV series. What happened to the little lady? Jilted? Died? Changed her mind? Left him waiting at the church? Decided to go groupie?

If that wedding ever does come off, it might be just the occasion to enlist the classified services, offered on the same day of "Sam, the video man, Weddings video-taped professionally."

"Wanted to Buy," beseeched a classified advert in the Frederick (Md.) Post a few Saturdays ago. "1976 Linganore High School Year Book. Doesn't matter if autographed."

Surrounded by all those "I will not be responsible for any debts other than those contracted by me" notices, someone in Barbara Fritchie's home town was trying to get a handle on the past, not forget it.

The Frederick paper that day featured a number of "In Memoriam" ads, with sad, simple and very moving bits of verse to dear departed friends and relatives.

There was one to "Nellie who left us four years ago" that crammed a lot of love and heartache into the space of a half dozen lines:

"Memories, memories, the hurt is always there,
Loneliness and sadness, more than we can bear.
We look at your pictures and tears always fall.

40 Years Ago Today

May 30, 1939
Eleven men clung throughout Sunday night and part of Monday to the wreckage of the pleasure cruiser Dixie, as it literally went to pieces under them and drifted into Pamlico Sound.

Buffed by storms and high winds, four of the party finally left the ill-fated craft and rowed a lifeboat for six hours to get help.

The 11 survivors gave their story as they were landed safely at Englehard last night from a fishing boat that had completed the rescue about 5:15 yesterday.

Members of the party included J.H. Waldrop, J. Howard Moye, G.J. Woodard, H.J. McGinnis, E.C. Hollar, J.R. Gullledge, Dr. W.I. Wooten of Greenville, J.A. Staton of Bethel, Elijah Edwards, Captain Jesse Keech and Victor Ruark of Belhaven. Capt. Keech and Ruark were the crew of the ill-fated craft.

Despite their harrowing experience, their exhaustion and terrible sunburn, the survivors are recuperating at their respective homes today.

Playing Down The Guidelines

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with growing evidence that the wage and price guidelines aren't working, the Carter administration has begun to play down their importance.

It has little choice, since the only other option may soon be to admit failure, and politicians and bureaucrats are loathe to admit they have failed at anything.

Alfred Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser, scarcely mentioned the guidelines during a speech to the National Association of Homebuilders last week in which he gave a detailed explanation of the administration's efforts to control inflation.

He acknowledged that he had given the guidelines

"shortshrift" in his remarks. But he said he didn't want to exaggerate their importance because they never were intended to play anything but a minor role in the anti-inflation effort.

Kahn had said previously that if the guidelines didn't show results by the beginning of summer, he would personally consider them to have failed.

The time for such a judgment is almost at hand. Summer is less than a month away, and inflation hasn't abated significantly yet.

Indeed, President Carter said last week he expects "serious, adverse" inflation figures for the next two to three months. Prices increased at an annual rate of nearly 14 percent during the first four months of the year.

Kahn admitted last week, after the government reported another 1.1 percent increase in consumer prices in April, that the government can't do much about the worse current causes of inflation, rising oil, housing and food prices.

Both Kahn and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal now say consumer prices will increase at least 8.5 percent this year, up from an original target of 7.4 percent, and could easily be higher. Prices increased 9.2 percent last year.

Rather than declare the guidelines a failure, Kahn told the home builders that anyone who thought the guidelines could by themselves restrain inflation was afflicted with "economic illiteracy."

Kahn stressed the importance of other steps being taken to restrain inflation, especially fiscal policies to slow government spending and monetary policies to tighten the money supply and raise interest rates. Blumenthal has adopted a similar stance.

The administration will be reluctant to drop the guidelines entirely anytime soon.

In fairness, the guidelines never were supposed to be the end-all solution to controlling inflation, but the administration had hoped they would contain the upward spiral of prices for a time until fiscal and monetary policies had a chance to work.

The guidelines ask business to hold price increases one-half of one percentage point below the average increases during the 1976-77 period.

geared to keeping Kennedy out of New York: early primary date, early filing deadline, arduous requirements to get delegates' names on the ballot, voting for delegates instead of presidential candidates. But there was one little problem. It had no support. Regular county leaders wined and dined at the White House of late did nothing for the president's cause.

The delegate selection committee tentatively adopted a scheme pushed by the state's Kennedyite faction, headed by state Attorney General Robert Abrams. It was Carter's plan in reverse: late primary date (April 29), late filing deadline (10 days before the primary), lenient requirements for petition signatures, the name of the presidential candidate — not his delegates — on the ballot.

With no voiced opposition, the New Yorkers were moving toward a system that would give Kennedy a late, late chance for president, with a predictably overwhelming win in New York. "The White House will go crazy," Schweitzer predicted at the meeting. Democratic state chairman Dominic Baranello later informed Schweitzer that he was not supposed to be representing the White House.

But White House pressure, probably filtered through Gov. Hugh Carey, was surely the cause when Baranello suddenly cancelled the May 24 meeting to pin down the new plan. At the rescheduled meeting (perhaps this week), representatives of Gov. Carey and Mayor Edward Koch will seek a primary plan closer to Carter's specifications, particularly an earlier filing deadline for Kennedy.

Now it is the Kennedy forces who "will go crazy," forcing a confrontation disastrous for the president to lose and dangerous to win. Winning it would be risky because Carter's advocates are not with him for the long haul. Koch's aides tell friends the mayor is backing the president, only temporarily, because his city depends on federal largesse.

Is there no prominent New York Democrat backing Carter as a believer, not as a mercenary? No, say the politicians. But there may be one who qualifies: Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo, who last week in the midst of the president's troubles telephoned Carter aide Gerald Rafshoon to avow faith in Jimmy Carter and to pledge support. That this is worthy of mention shows why the White House now must apply naked pressure to make less devastating a primary he seems incapable of winning.

Remembering how good you were to us all. Mom, we miss you. Your devoted family."

Around Memorial Day and All Souls Day, memorial poems and remembrances fill page after page in the classified sections of both New Orleans papers, as befits a city where the dead rest above ground, the saints are on the street signs and at the Superdome, and heaven, the Elysian Fields, is just a bus ride from Canal Street.

Almost every day in the Picayune and the State-Item, classified ad buyers are thanking their favorite saints for answered prayers:

"Thanks to Our Lord, His Blessed Mother, St. Jude, St. Anthony, St. Lucy, Padre Pio and Mother Seton for favors granted."

The Vatican hasn't got around to canonizing him yet, but St. Expedite has a big following in New Orleans. Hagiographers, as saint students are called, would have a difficult time tracing his claim on a halo since he was actually born of a printer's devil. Long ago, a customer in a hurry to thank his heavenly patrons wrote "expedite" on his classified ad form and the printer somehow included the name in the litany of saints. Now St. Expedite, with his French sounding name, appears often in the classified columns of this bilingual town.

Office Complex For Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Plans were unveiled Tuesday for a $50 million office complex in southeast Charlotte.

Developers said work is scheduled to begin on two of the six buildings in the complex, to be called The Park, within the next two weeks.

The 65-acre complex, to be built in the SouthPark area, includes two major corporate headquarters, a shopping center and a 150-room hotel. The hotel was announced in November by golfer Arnold Palmer and associates.

A new $2.5 million building, to house the Travelers Insurance Co.'s Charlotte offices, will be the next structure in the complex.

Buildings occupied by Equitable Life Assurance Society and the Gold Bond Building Products are already on the tract.

A spokesman for the project said the new offices will provide about 665,000 square feet of rentable space.

Khomeini Has Foes In Iranian Arabs

KHORAMSHAHR, Iran (AP) — Iranian Arabs set fire to government buildings and battled troops of Iran's revolutionary regime today in Khoramshahr, the country's largest port and the center of the Khuzestan oil region. Official sources said armed Arab tribesmen were moving toward Khoramshahr from all over Khuzestan province.

The Arabs, renewing their fight for the autonomy which both Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini have denied them, attacked the naval base and the district governor's office and set fire to the main police station, the post office and the government tobacco factory.

Officials said at least 11 Arabs were killed and dozens more wounded. A huge column of black smoke hung over the city from at least a dozen burning buildings, including several supermarkets and a warehouse of the National Iranian Oil Co.

Radio Tehran said Adm. Ahamad Madani, the governor general of Khuzestan province and the head of the Iranian navy, proclaimed a state of emergency in the city of 100,000 at the head of the Persian Gulf and advised residents to stay indoors.

Troop reinforcements rushed to the city after the fighting broke out at dawn and set up sandbag barricades on all the main streets. Heavy gunfire continued into the afternoon.

But oil industry officials said there was no interruption in operations at the world's largest oil refinery at Abadan, across the Karoun River from Khoramshahr.

In the holy city of Mashhad in northeastern Iran, meanwhile, a revolutionary firing squad executed four more of the shah's soldiers, raising to 239 the number shot since February, newspapers reported. They said the four, ranging from a lieutenant to a colonel, were convicted of killing and wounding innocent people.

Workshop For City Council

The purpose of the workshop is to study the 1979-80 budget proposals for the City of Greenville.

Shooting Still Being Studied

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers are continuing their investigation of a shooting incident here Sunday morning.

Cannon said William A. Smith, 38 of 1604 Henry St. told officers he had been shot while riding along Greene Street in his car.

The chief said officials at a local motel later reported that blood and what appeared to be bullet holes had been found in a room.

Investigators said Smith, wounded in the right arm and shoulder, had allegedly rented the room under another name and charged the room on a credit card.

Carter Now Expects No Election-Year Tax Cut

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is joining leading congressional taxwriters in predicting the traditional election-year tax cut will go by the wayside in 1980 as federal officials concentrate on trying to balance the national budget.

"I doubt very seriously that we'll have any tax cut in 1980," Carter said Tuesday at a news conference.

"If we have the option between substantial reductions in the deficit and controlling inflation on the one hand, and having tax reductions for the American people in an election year on the other, I would forego the tax reduction and insist upon controlling inflation and cutting the deficit."

Similar sentiments have been expressed by the two most influential tax experts on Capitol Hill — Sen. Russell Long, D-La., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"The top priority is to control expenditures and balance the budget," Ullman said last week. "That pre-empts any tax cut, unless the country is dropping into an obvious recession."

Carter and administration economists insist no recession is on the horizon.

Long told a U.S. Chamber of Commerce seminar recently he also believes balancing the budget over the next two years should take priority over tax cuts. "I don't think a...tax cut should keep us from balancing the budget," Long said.

The historic tendency is for Congress to approve tax cuts in election years, largely because it's a politically painless vote to cast. With inflation pushing taxpayers into ever-higher tax brackets, dollars flow into the federal treasury in ever-larger amounts. Legislators can thus vote to cut the tax rate every few years without reducing the funds available to pay for government programs.

That phenomenon, often called "taxflation" by government taxwriters, is working overtime now and could yet provide a way for Carter and Congress to balance the 1981 budget and approve a tax cut at the same time.

With federal tax receipts now pouring in in much greater amounts than previously estimated, some private and government economists have suggested a tax cut and balanced budget may both be possible by 1981.

Tax legislation applying to the 1981 fiscal year, beginning Oct. 1, 1980, would come next year — just in time for the fall elections.

On other matters Tuesday, Carter:

—Signed an executive order delegating some of his authority over gasoline sales to the nation's governors. The action authorizes governors to do such things as order odd-even rationing plans, regulate gas station operating hours and set minimum purchases.

But the president warned that any plan making gasoline shortages less painful does nothing to solve "a long-term chronic problem in obtaining adequate energy supplies....It is necessary to stop aggravating the problem by blaming one another and by seeking out scapegoats," he said. "The fact is that the oil-producing countries are holding down supply while the rest of the world has increased demand."

—Said the United States will give Egypt and Israel a chance to resolve questions dealing with the Palestinians and other Israeli neighbors before offering any U.S. suggestions.

—Insisted that his anti-inflation program, including its wage and price guidelines, eventually will be successful in stemming inflation. But he acknowledged it probably will take a long time.

—Said he will wait until a new bi-racial government takes office in Rhodesia to decide whether to lift the U.S. trade embargo against the African nation.

—Reiterated his desire to eliminate nuclear weapons from the world and defended pending development of the new MX nuclear missile as necessary to maintain the military balance between the Soviet Union and the United States while negotiations aimed at reducing nuclear arms continue.

—Expressed confidence that Congress eventually will approve legislation implementing treaties turning the Panama Canal over to Panama. Failure to do so, he said, would leave the United States powerless to protect its interests after the transfer takes place.

Install Officers Of Secretaries

At the annual installation banquet of the Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association held Monday night, Betty Thompson was installed as president for the 1979-80 year.

Ms. Thompson, who served previously as vice-president of the board of directors and as vice-president of the Secretaries Week Committee, was also chairman of the CPS Education Committee for the 1978-79 year. For her role in developing and organizing review courses for certification of professional secretaries exam, in April she was elected the outstanding member of the Greenville Chapter.

Currently a secretary with Pitt Pathologists, Ms. Thompson is a graduate of Lee's-McRae Junior College with an associate arts degree. She served her internship year as a medical secretary at N. C. Memorial Hospital, Chapel Hill, and has had 13 years experience in secretarial work.

Active in workshops and seminars of the chapter, she completed the CPS exam in Raleigh the first of this month. She is married to Bill Thompson and the couple has two children.

Other officers installed at the Monday night banquet are: Mary Kittrell, vice president; Barbara Evans, recording secretary; Betty Andrews, corresponding secretary; Myrtle McRoy, treasurer; and Carolyn Evans, Yvonne Hardee and Amy Mills were elected to the board of directors.

Amtrak-Crescent Could Yet Survive

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Amtrak Crescent — better known as the Southern Crescent — may still have a chance of survival, an aide to Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., says.

Preyer's aide said Tuesday that the Crescent's ridership has increased since Feb. 1, when the federally operated Amtrak system took over the Crescent from Southern Railways.

However, Amtrak's operation of the train has been so brief that federal officials are having difficulty deciding whether the increase in ridership has real meaning.

The aide said the Crescent's best chance for survival passed last week when both Houses of Congress declined to overturn Transportation Secretary Brock Adams' plan for reducing the nation's passenger rail network.

Adams announced in February that he would eliminate 43 percent of the nation's passenger trains Oct. 1 in an effort to save $1.4 billion during the next five years. The House had until May 22 to veto Adams's decision, the Senate until May 23. Neither House took action on the issue.

Preyer's spokesman said the only chance left for the Crescent is separate legislation now pending in Congress. An appropriations bill would set up a new funding formula intended to save a few passenger lines on which ridership is increasing.

Criteria for each train's eligibility for continued existence won't be known until the House and Senate complete work on the bill.

The new formula is based on passenger miles and not just the total number of people who ride the train. Passenger miles are based on how far the average rider rides.

Suggests Primitive Living Is An Answer To Energy Crunch

By KAY LYNCH
HONOLULU (UPI) — Jan Newhouse believes population pressures and the energy crisis have triggered a decline in living standards that will force a return to primitive living. Hoping to teach people how to live without the energy luxuries, he is beginning an experiment on a Polynesian atoll. "The U.S. Statistical Yearbook says per capita energy consumption has been declining worldwide since 1973," Newhouse said. "It means we have had less energy available each year since 1973. Energy availbility means standard of living. "In Hawaii we'll all be living like primitives 100 years from now, because when the oil runs out, all this will be gone." He raised a tanned arm toward urban Honolulu. So he has taken leave of the chairmanship of the University of Hawaii's General Science Department for his project in the Tuamotu Archipelago of French Polynesia. He hopes to pool technical information with information from people who still have the skills that enabled their island ancestors to subsist.

group will list all its plant and animal life, fresh water resources, rate of replenishment by rainfall, and how it all can handle various standards of living. "You figure out how much pie there is, and then you figure how you're going to cut it up. This is something industrialized nations don't do nowadays."

"But the early Hawaiians and Tahitians did this. Island peoples have always done this. They have said, 'Not only do we want to eat, but we do not want to spend all our time just gathering food or planting or catching fish. We would also like to have time to make canoes and make love and sing and have festivals.' "They calculated their resources and divided their time, and they reached a particular standard and they held it. We don't do that. We continue to expand and are getting less and less pie worldwide."

"One important thing is to get away from the idea that we should duplicate the crops of the western world," he said. "Instead, we'll work with some of the things that have been time-tested over 2,000 years on atolls... Things like breadfruit, banana, papaya, pandanus and taro."

The project will draw on technology in working out systems for obtaining fresh water, preserving food and providing a small, temporary electricity supply, but will aim to avoid metals in the long run. His project may not appeal the islanders now but, he said, "when the boat stops coming and the store shelves are bare... then they may say, 'Hey, that looks better than the sloppy conditions I'm living in now.'"

Radiation Is Halted

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, in what was seen as an attempt to improve relations before the upcoming Carter-Brezhnev summit, has stopped bombarding the U.S. Embassy with microwave radiation, an embassy spokesman said today. President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev will meet in Vienna, Austria next month to sign the SALT II nuclear arms accord.

Since the mid-1960s Washington had repeatedly protested the Soviet radiation bombardment. The exact purpose of the activity never has been clear. U.S. officials theorized that the microwaves could have been intended either to jam American electronic intelligence-gathering equipment or to trigger Soviet surveillance devices planted within the embassy.

During the past 3½ years the Soviet beams had been aimed at the embassy's upper floors from transmitters located east and south of the 10-story structure on Tchaikovsky Street. However, the embassy spokesman said, "Neither the east nor the south signal has operated since the end of April. Hence we have detected no radiation since that time from those sources."

DRUNK DOGS
SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — When a truck loaded with champagne and wine crashed near Sydney recently, dogs came from miles around to lap up the liquor flowing through the streets, says driver Colin Bennett.

"Finally they fell over dead drunk," he said, "and we had to drag them to the sidewalk to let them sleep it off."

WANCHESE EXCAVATIONS — A group of eight students from East Carolina University are spending five weeks on Roanoke Island excavating the site of a 2,000 year old Indian camp in Wanchese. Dr. David S. Phelps heads the group excavating an area of two or three acres of marshland in Wanchese first discovered in 1895 by Talcott Williams, a historian looking for the site of the Lost Colony. In the first week of digging, the ECU group has found large deposits of oyster shells, bone and pottery fragments and a human tooth. They are attempting to find evidence of changes in cultures, including the Algonquin Indians who occupied Roanoke Island long before English settlers appeared on the scene. (Photo by J. ## Special Summer Camps Helpful To Kids With Health Problem

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Camp is a magic word for kids. It can mean fun in the sun, swimming, horseback riding, a dizzy world of delights after a long cooped-up winter.

But most camps don't accept all children because some have health problems such as diabetes or asthma, or physical disabilities ranging from speech and hearing impairment to crippling disorders. Others are mentally retarded. Those children must rely on specialty camps. They have one thing in common — an interest in providing a camping experience for kids who need it more than most.

At Camp Needlepoint, which accepts diabetic children, "it was the first time I realized I wasn't the only diabetic in the world," said Mo Farrell, a former camper and now assistant camp director.

Needlepoint is one of about 60 camps for diabetic children across the country. It is held at Camp St. Croix in Hudson, Wis., and accepts 125 to 130 children from the ages of 7 to 16.

Dr. Don Eitzwiler, medical director, said diabetic children frequently suffer from psychological problems as well as diabetes-related restrictions and their parents suffer guilt feelings. In many cases, the children are overprotected.

Needlepoint gives the child an opportunity to take part in a group experience and to learn while doing it. "Once you've learned how to test your urine in the woods behind the bushes," Miss Farrell said, "you don't have too many apprehensions."

Eitzwiler has seen an increased need for the camping experience in older age groupings and has begun a wilderness challenge program for young adults, 16 to 18. Three groups of eight or nine teenagers will backpack and canoe this summer in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area in northern Minnesota, Michigan's Isle Royale National Park and the Big Horn Mountains in Wyoming.

Camp Courage near Maple Lake, Minn., is one of those for physically disabled children and adults and retarded child who can be "mainstreamed."

The camp, and a second in northern Minnesota, serve over 900 persons a summer aged 7 through senior citizen. The emphasis is on as much physical involvement as is possible for each individual.

"If they can benefit intellectually and are able to sit in a wheelchair a certain number of hours each day, they are appropriate for camp," said camp director Bob Pollard.

The camp also has a program for persons with speech, hearing and language disorders.

Among camps for the mentally retarded is Camp Friendship at Annandale, Minn.

"It is basically a recreational and leisure period for campers," said Judy Morris, program director. She called it an opportunity for these individuals, two-thirds of whom come from state institutions and residential group homes, to spend a whole week outside.

"Asthma is a scary word for lots of camp directors," Dr. Richard Cushing said.

Camp Superkids, near Loretto, Minn., where Cushing is the medical director, is one of 10 camps for asthmatics in the country.

Campers learn breathing exercises, how to take medication and how to cope with and avoid asthmatic attacks.

"Parents of asthmatic children are in a conflicted situation," Cushing said. "They are very protective and also very tired. Camp gives them a chance to free themselves and their children from the constant problem."

Camp Superkids has served as a model for a number of camps in Illinois, Nebraska, Indiana and Michigan. "We've proven our point and have a system that works," Cushing said.

208 Telephone Books For Him

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Buddy Melnik believes in efficiency, but decided Illinois Bell went too far when it began charging him for calls to directory assistance in other central Illinois cities.

So Melnik told telephone-company officials if they expected him to look up the numbers they should provide the phone books — 208 of them. And they agreed to do so.

Illinois Bell said they would be happy to provide any customer with the telephone books he needed for towns in the same area code. "If you're too lazy to look the number up, you should be penalized," said Melnik. "But, they don't normally provide you with those books and that's the only way we have to get the numbers without paying."

Melnik operates a wholesale heating and air conditioning company, and says he frequently makes calls to other cities in the 217 area code, which includes a large section of central Illinois.

Early this year, Illinois Bell began charging its customers 20 cents a call for directory information. The first eight calls a month are free, and customers may get two telephone numbers per call. Melnik said he had not realized that the charge would apply to calls made outside Decatur, and did not think other people realized that either.

He had a Decatur phone book and used it. But when he needed an out-of-town number, he called directory assistance.

Terry Henkle, manager of the Illinois Bell office in Decatur, said every customer got 25 cents taken off his bill because of the new directory assistance charge.

Henkle said Illinois Bell had paid $900,000 to customers in February, while collecting $950,000 in directory assistance charges. The phone company contends that the people who use directory assistance should pay for it, instead of spreading the cost over everyone's bills.

Henkle said the number of calls for information had dropped 19 percent in February, compared with a year earlier, and that the new program could result in a decrease in labor costs for the utility.

"We are willing to give each customer a reasonable number of directories so he can place the calls he needs," said Henkle.

Extension Of Insurance Law Hits Senate Snag

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would extend indefinitely the controversial 1977 insurance law ran into a snag on the Senate floor Tuesday over a House amendment that would place a 6 percent limit on annual rate increases on all lines of so-called essential insurance.

The Senate refused to concur in the House amendment by a 26-23 vote, meaning the bill will now have to be sent to a conference committee composed of senators and representatives in an effort to resolve the differences.

The bill would extend the law enacted by the 1977 Legislature that allows insurance companies to raise rates on some auto and casualty insurance policies without the prior approval of the state insurance commissioner.

It was approved first by the Senate, and it contained a 6 percent cap on annual increases on automobile liability and collision insurance rates.

The House extended that ceiling to cover workers' compensation and fire insurance.

The head of the Senate Insurance Committee, Sen. Carolyn Mathis, D-Mecklenburg, urged the full Senate to refuse to concur with that amendment, saying the 6 percent cap on workers' compensation could cause trouble because of other pending legislation on workers' compensation benefits.

But she said her refusal to go along with the House action did not mean she was opposed to workers' compensation rate hikes being limited annually.

She said the Legislature must determine how those benefits will figure in the 6 percent annual rate increase. If it doesn't, she said, the insurance companies might successfully challenge the ceiling on workers' compensation.

they budgeted last year.

Knott told the commissioners that they should stay firm on their demands. "Our position is akin to a man's head in a lion's mouth and trying to figure out how to get it out without losing it," he said.

The commissioners also met with their counties' legislators. Most commissioners said after that the legislators were sympathetic but gave no assurances that the General Assembly could help them.

Eight counties have said they cannot meet their Medicaid obligations for the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends June 30. The counties are Alamance, Anson, Burke, Stanly, Sampson, Jones, Buncombe and Washington.

Medicaid is a federally mandated program that picks up the cost of health care for poor persons.

Told Medicaid Formula Stands

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt told county commissioners from across the state Tuesday that it's too late to change the formula for Medicaid contributions.

Each county is required to contribute a certain portion towards paying its county residents' Medicaid bills. A number of county officials have said the portion is too high and that they are unable — or unwilling — to pay all of their share.

The North Carolina Association of County Commissioners held a special meeting Tuesday morning to discuss financial problems caused by last year's change in the formula used to determine each county's share of the cost of the Medicaid program.

The change was designed to encourage counties to place more people in less-expensive rest homes, rather than in skilled-care nursing homes. It reduces the amount the state pays for skilled care.

Hunt told J.T. Knott, president of the association, after its meeting that Medicaid funding isn't only the biggest drain on county budgets, it also accounted for the largest single increase in the state's budget this year.

During Tuesday morning's meeting, many of the commissioners said their counties' share of the Medicaid expenses has doubled over the amount

Courses For The Camper

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — A series of 20 vacation courses called Camper College will be offered this summer by Western Carolina University.

The program is designed to help visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park "experience more than a wind-shield view of the area," said a college spokesman.

Courses offered through the school's division of continuing education include backpacking, fly-fishing, woodcarving, clogging, soapmaking and dulcimer playing.

"We look upon Camper College as an expanded dimension of our efforts to interpret the park's significance and consider it a rich opportunity for visitors to enhance the quality of their park experience," said Merrill D. Beal, superintendent of the park.

The courses are to be taught by a 15-person staff and will last two days each. Camper College begins June 25 and will offer courses through Aug. 11.

The teachers are considered experts in their subjects. Cherokee Indians will teach the art of Cherokee cooking, Indian pottery and woodcarving. The park is next to a Cherokee reservation.

Tuition is $25 for each course. Families may enroll in a course for a rate of $25 for the first family member and $10 for each additional member.

Advance registration is requested. Information is available from the continuing education division at the school in Cullowhee.

compensation insurance and cause the ceiling on the other three types of insurance to be declared invalid also.

"I don't think either body would like to see a situation without any cap at all," she said.

A number of senators disagreed with Mrs. Mathis. Charles Vickery, D-Chatham, was one.

He said the 6 percent cap should be kept on all four lines of insurance in order to ensure the constitutionality of the bill.

"If we tamper with it and put it on auto insurance but not workmen's compensation, then the companies will take it to court and we won't have any cap," he said.

After the Senate's action, Gov. Jim Hunt released a statement saying he was disappointed by that body's refusal to accept the cap on increases in workers' compensation insurance rates.

"As I have said before, I believe we need to take strong action to protect consumers against inflationary increases in rates on essential lines of insurance," Hunt said. "I hope the Senate will reconsider its action and vote to place a cap on all the essential lines ..."

ECU Faculty Members Appeared On Programs

ECU News Bureau
Several faculty members of East Carolina University's professional schools appeared on programs at recent national and regional professional meetings.

Dr. John Eatman of the ECU School of Business economics faculty spoke on "A Simulation Study of the Use of Ordinal Data in Regression" at the Boston, Mass. meeting of the American Institute for Decision Sciences.

Eatman and Drs. Jerry Hunt and Robert Angell also appeared at the Washington, D.C. Meeting of the Eastern Finance Association.

Eatman and Hunt presented a report of their research, "Regulatory Influence on Growth in the Savings and Loan Industry," and Hunt and Angell reported on their project, "Efficient Markets and Underwriting Performance in Small Stock Offerings."

Dr. Charles Snow and Patricia McMahon of the ECU School of Home Economics spoke at the annual conference of the Southern Association on Children under Six in Birmingham, Ala. Both are members of the child development and family relations faculty.

Snow's topic was "Personal Development and Sources of Support for Child Development Programs," and Ms. McMahon discussed the results of her research project, "Stimulating Imagination and Creativity in Young Children."

Dr. Norman Pendered of the ECU School of Technology spoke at the eighth international conference of the American Industrial Arts Association in San Antonio, Texas, on organizing, financing and publishing state newsletters.

Two members of the School of Education faculty presented papers at the first annual Urban Affairs Conference at UNC-Chapel Hill.

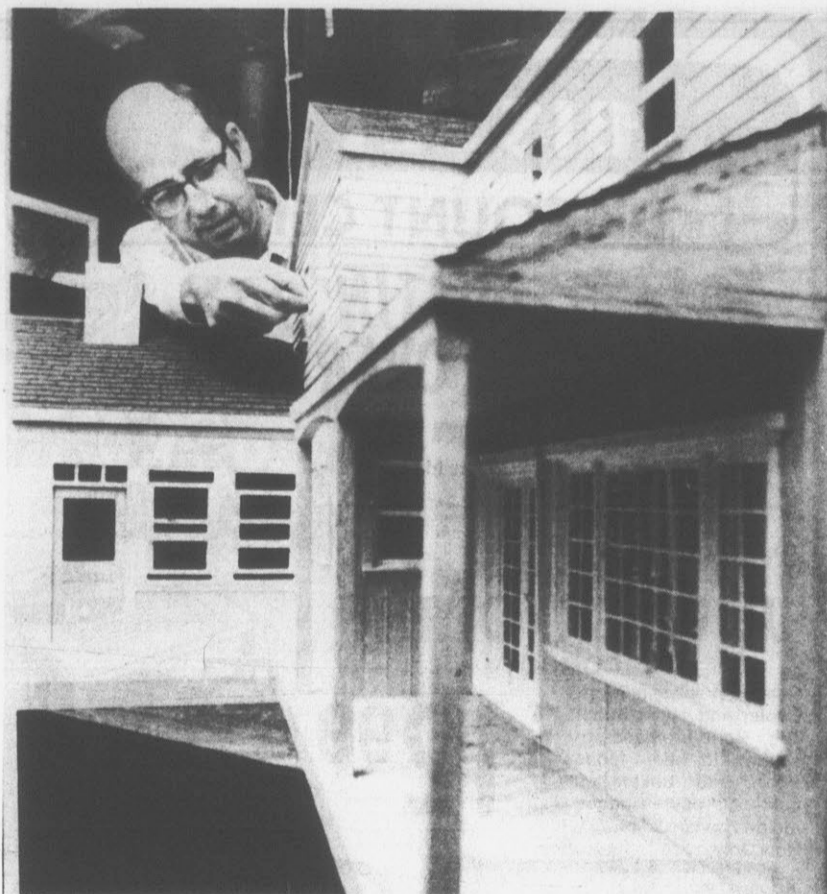

Dr. Frank Fuller, chairman of the Department of Counselor Education, discussed "Utilizing the Expertise of Members of the University Community in Helping to Improve Conditions of Living in the City."

Dr. Clinton Downing of the administration and supervision faculty spoke on "Developing and Implementing a Functional School-Community Relations Program for the Urban School Community."

Dr. Dennis Davis of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions directed a session on "Pain Management Using Modalities of Physical Therapy and Acupuncture Points" at a meeting of the South Carolina Physical Therapy Chapter.

The Davis presentation was based on procedures and techniques he worked with at a San Francisco symposium on the uses of acupuncture.

STILL BUILDING HOUSES — Bob Stein works on the latest of his houses in the basement of his home. When he was a boy he built model houses instead of model planes. (AP Laser-photo)

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MIDDLETON, Wis. (AP) —

In the generation before TV antennas forested the land, the popular pastime for boys was making model airplanes. Few kitchen tables survived the stains of airplane glue.

The rage, however, never caught the fancy of Bob Stein. Instead, he built model houses — and hid them away. They might, he considered ruefully, be thought of as, egad, doll houses.

One day his mother embarrassed him by entering a model he had built in a crafts contest at school. It was a model of his own home and it won first prize. His mother still has it.

Now past 40, Bob Stein still builds model houses as a hobby but they are a far cry from the rude efforts of his youth.

Indeed, they are in such demand by people who have gotten word of his skills that he is battling the urge to let go his career as a landscape architect and pursue his hobby full time.

"I had no idea of the popularity of doll houses," he said. "People are spending fortunes on them, decorating them, furnishing them. My wife, Beth, bowls with a lady who just laid out $250 for a couch. A couch for a doll house. When they put that kind of money in them they want a good house to start with."

Bob Stein no longer has boyish misgivings about making doll houses, but the term is inadequate to describe what he makes.

Just now, for example, he is working on a scale model of an actual mansion, room for room, fireplace for fireplace, staircase for staircase; an exact replica built from the blueprints of the mansion on a scale of an inch to a foot. Slide away a section of wall, or lift a hinged roof, and every interior room opens to view.

"I have a hunch the lady I'm building it for is going to sell her house," he said.

"It's a beautiful place and must hold many memories for her. Her children are grown and gone. I think she wants a replica so she can at least keep the memories."

Bob Stein's workbench is a miniature itself: tiny table saws, knives, clamps. He cuts and shapes with the precision of a jeweler.

The workbench is in the basement of a house which, not surprisingly, he built himself — full scale, of course. The house snuggles into the side of a steep, wooded hill on a lot commercial builders rejected because of the difficulty of building on it.

Besides doing landscaping, Bob Stein put his hobby to use at one architectural firm he worked for and made miniatures of proposed buildings.

That's how he got started making doll houses. An associate, whose wife worked in a toy store, suggested he make some for sale.

"Beth and I drove around looking at houses, looking for ones that were interesting but simple enough to become doll houses. We found three. I measured them and duplicated them."

"I build about 30 of those a year, not counting the custom made jobs for people with their own plans. Beth makes the titles, the deeds. She prints them up."

Titles? Deeds? "Sure. A person buys a little house, he ought to have a little deed."

May Be Losing A Sweet Tooth

WASHINGTON (AP) — America may be losing its sweet tooth.

The Commerce Department says U.S. confectionery manufacturers produced 3.174 billion pounds of candy last year, which was a 2.5 percent decline from 1977. Consumption dropped 3.2 percent in 1978 to 14.9 pounds per person, the department said. That places candy consumption at the 1935 level, the figures show. Despite the decline, manufacturers' shipments were valued at $3,337,000 last year, a 9.1 increase over 1977.

Some Southerners Claim The First Memorial Day

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The grinch may have stolen Christmas, but the Yankees stole Memorial Day.

Or at least that's what a lot of Southerners think.

Ironically, it was a Southerner, President Lyndon Johnson, who issued a proclamation in 1967 crediting Waterloo, N.Y., with holding the first Memorial Day observance on May 5, 1866.

Well, now, let's see about that.

Boalsburg, Pa., claims that in October 1864, Emma Hunter and a neighbor decorated the graves of their father and son, respectively, who had been killed in the Union Army. The two women were said to have pledged to repeat the ceremony each year.

Southerners have several competing claims for being first. For instance, on April 26, 1865, the ladies of Vicksburg, Miss., placed flowers on the graves of Confederate soldiers; in Charleston, S.C., on May 30, 1865, Negro children strewed flowers on four trenches that held Union dead, and on June 9, 1865, the women of Petersburg, Va., decorated the graves of their soldiers.

There is also evidence that the Ladies Memorial Association of Columbus, Ga., decorated the graves of Confederate soldiers on April 26, 1866, ten days before the date that the New York village defends.

We have no proof as to when the first decoration of graves occurred in North Carolina, but we do know that on May 10, 1866 — only four days after the Waterloo ceremony — a large number of women of Raleigh, "in accordance with the previous announcement," gathered in the Senate chamber "with flowers, festoons, and evergreens, whence they proceeded to the City Cemetery and the other places where our brave dead lie sleeping, and dedicated their hallowed graves."

The Raleigh Sentinel noted that business ceased for the day and that the women also "festooned with flowers the grave of Andrew Johnson's father, to testify their respect for the President and their gratitude for the magnanimous policy when he has adopted towards our unhappy section."

Two years later, the Sentinel reminded its readers, "the usual memorial day ceremonies will be observed to-day at 4 o'clock p.m. at the Memorial Cemetery, under the auspices of the ladies of the Memorial Association." This was Saturday, May 9, chosen because the proper date — the anniversary of the death of Stonewall Jackson — fell on Sunday.

Then, only three weeks later, the Sentinel carried this note:

"In accordance with orders from the headquarters of the Grand Army of the Republic, the members of the order and such others as are disposed to participate, will observe memorial ceremonies at the Cemetery, near this city to-day."

Added the editor, "Approving, as we do, most heartily, the annual memorial ceremonies for the loved, and these lost, and the brave among the Confederate dead, we cannot withhold our entire approval of similar observances in behalf of the Federal army ..."

In that statement in 1868 the newspaper confirmed that "annual memorial ceremonies" for the Confederate dead were firmly established in Raleigh. It also recognized the advent of two separate memorial days — one to honor the Confederates, the other the Federals.

As the years passed, Confederate Memorial Day in the South became a time for remembering the lost cause through parades, band concerts, eloquent addresses, veterans' reunions and the decoration of graves.

On May 10, 1879, for instance, the holiday was observed around the state. Bands, fire companies, police, school and college students and faculties, organizations, state guard, governmental officers and the veterans themselves joined in the ceremonies. By 1904, some of the bitterness had faded, and the News and Observer noted that at Federal Memorial Day exercises in Raleigh, representatives of the Confederate Veterans Association were in attendance. The glory of the Union soldier was also the glory of the Confederate, the speaker said.

During the next 50 years, May 30 gradually was transformed into a National Memorial (or Decoration) Day for the dead from all wars, and as a federal holiday, it gained aspendancy over Confederate Memorial Day in all but a few Southern states.

Until 1971, state employees in North Carolina received a day off on May 10. That year the State Personnel Department quietly changed the holiday to May 30. To test the sentiment of the public, the News and Observer interviewed 20 persons, only two of whom knew the significance of May 10.

The Yankee victory was complete. But, just as Southerners were getting adjusted to May 30 as a common observance, Congress stepped in and changed the calendar, making Memorial Day the fourth Monday in May.

Bear Grass students, who have for several years been award winners, were in the top achievement level again this year with a first place in the Special Achievement category for student Derek Price's "Scale Model of a Brig, Sailing Ship."

Bear Grass students also took second place for a group project in the Bloombury Book Awards for "Weird Tales of Martin County."

A total of 53 entries were made in the annual competitions, cosponsored by the N. C. Museum of History of the Dept. of Cultural Resources and the N. C. Literary and Historical Association.

Paper Sale By Shriners

Pitt County Shriners will be out Friday and Saturday, June 1 and 2, participating in the First Annual Sudan Temple "Shrine Paper Sale," according to Hugh T. Hardee Jr., president of the Pitt County Shrine chapter.

The local Shriners are offering their newspapers to raise funds to operate the Shriners' Hospitals for children.

According to Sudan Potentate John R. Godwin, it took in excess of $46 million to operate the 18 orthopedic Hospitals and three Burns Institutes in 1978.

More than a quarter million children have benefited from the treatment centers since they were begun in 1922 by the Shriners. No government funds support the hospitals and 100 percent of funds raised by Shriners for the hospitals go toward that purpose.

Taking Ferry Is Daily Routine For Students

KNOTT'S ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — Tourists take the ferry ride to relax and feed the seagulls.

But for 22 high school students on Knott's Island, just below the Virginia border and lying between the Outer Banks and the mainland, it's routine, everyday stuff.

The ferry was started in 1962 to transport children from the island across Currituck Sound to attend high school on mainland Currituck County.

The drive from the island to Currituck County High School is two hours long, and the only possible land route goes through Virginia. No insurance would cover North Carolina buses travelling in that state, officials said.

The school ferry — which takes both the students and their bus aboard — is one of two such ferries in the country. The other is in Michigan.

"I just wish we would go faster," said Mark King, a freshman, of the 50-minute ferry ride. It's only 4 1/2 miles from the Knott's Island ferry dock to the mainland; but the ferry travels at a leisurely — some say lethargic — four mph.

"It's really bad for athletics and dating," said Janet Williams, a senior who says she plans to leave the island after graduating. "There can be no school participation in anything at night."

The boat leaves Knott's Island at 7 a.m. and returns the students at 4:35 p.m. Only high school students make the trip.

Most of the students say they like the ferry, despite their complaints about the lengthy cruise.

"It's better than riding in a car, and you can get up and talk to your friends," one said.

A bridge would "mess up" the wildlife, they say.

"It'd just mean more trash and traffic if a bridge was built ... and all the tourists would come here. I think we should keep the island the way it is," said Debbie Brumley, a sophomore.

The students pass the ferry ride by doing homework, sleeping, playing cards and chasing each other around the deck.

"They're a pretty good bunch of kids," said Gilbert Brickhouse, a ferry crew member.

Davis Papers For Collection

ECU News Bureau
The East Carolina Manuscript Collection has acquired the personal papers of Captain Louis Poisson Davis, U.S.N. (1883-1978). Captain Davis, a native of Wilmington, N.C., was the son of attorney Junius Davis and grandson of eminent Confederate statesman George Davis.

A 1905 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Davis served on or commanded the U.S.S. KEARSARGE, GALVESTON, DELAWARE, PANTHER, MINNESOTA, JARVIS, TEXAS, ALABAMA, MARYLAND, RINGOLD, WOODBURY, and COLORADO during 30 years of active duty. He participated in the "Great White Fleet," a flotilla of 16 new battleships dispatched by Theodore Roosevelt to circumnavigate the globe in a demonstration of U.S. naval might.

The papers, which consist of personal and military correspondence, financial papers, orders, pamphlets, personal military records, diaries, and photographs, were donated by Davis' widow, Edna S. Davis of Washington, D.C., and his sons Louis P., Jr., George J., Shethar, and Thomas Walker, II.

Three of the Davis sons graduated from the Naval Academy and all four received commissions in the Navy during World War II. Researchers interested in the Davis Papers may visit the Collection, located in ECU's Joyner Library, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Glenn Turner Still Motivates

By PAULA SCHWED CASSELBERRY, Fla. (UPI) — Glenn W. Turner sometimes jokes that he and the caped crusader from Krypton have a lot in common.

"Sometimes I think I was dropped in from another planet, like Superman," Turner says. "Cause nothin' bothers me, nothin' worries me. I have become a symbol of keeping your head."

The 44-year-old salesman is back in the motivation business with a new pitch called "Challenge to America."

Fraud litigation toppled the $300 million pyramid sales empire and ended the "Dare to Be Great" motivation courses that inspired and misled thousands. It turned business associates against Turner. It landed him in jail, briefly. It also left him penniless, forcing him to depend on his children for money.

But Turner says now, "I haven't had it bad. I came from so far down, it all looks like up to me. Even in jail they feed you three meals a day — which is more than I had as a kid."

Turner constantly refers to his early years in Marion, S.C., and the ridicule he suffered as the harelipped son of a sharecropper. He uses the stories to prove that losers, dropouts and has-beens can succeed beyond their wildest dreams with positive thinking.

He enjoys telling about the customer who could not keep her eyes off his mangled upper lip in the days when he was selling sewing machines door-to-door.

"That's just something I put on every morning so's people will notice me," he told the woman in his nasal voice.

Turner never has been the kind of man who goes unnoticed. At the height of his glory he used to leap from his own Learjet — flanked by twin midgets — before crowds of cheering disciples.

He owned 180 pairs of boots and too many red suits to count. He used to autograph $100 bills and hand them out to every hard-luck case he came across.

Turner ordered construction of his own $3.5 million white stone castle complete with helicopter landing pad and a bathtub big enough for 10 people. It now stands empty and unfinished on the banks of Bear Gulley Lake, 10 miles north of Orlando.

Turner lives above the stable with his wife and his youngest child. Several hundred yards away in a boathouse is the office of Ed Rector, who heads the company that markets "Challenge to America" motivational courses.

Turner is billed as a consultant to the courses because his attorneys still are trying to settle with the IRS on the issue of back taxes and penalties. He claims any income of his would be seized. The flamboyant salesman never has admitted wrongdoing, he merely pleaded no contest to federal misdemeanor charges stemming from his business deals which the FTC said in 1973 left "a staggering human toll — money borrowed, jobs quit, homes mortgaged and even personal bankruptcy for some who dared to be great."

Rector says the marketing approach of "Dare to Be Great" and Koscot Interplanetary Inc., a cosmetics company, that was attacked by the government as fraudulent, has been eliminated from "Challenge to America."

The two former businesses operated on the principle of a chain letter. Those who wanted to induce others to take the motivation course or sell Koscot cosmetics first had to buy their way in. The idea was to bring a few friends, and let them bring a few friends — for a hefty commission.

"The government saw that as selling people, not selling a product," said Rector. Turner's former bodyguard, "Selling the right to re-sell. With Challenge to America, they have to sell the courses to move up. But they don't have to buy the course in order to sell it. They may not be too proficient in selling it, but there's no requirement to buy in order to sell or to sell in order to buy." Besides that and a 30-day, money-back guarantee, "Challenge to America" sounds identical to "Dare to Be Great."

"Much of it is the same material that skyrocketed thousands to success, assembled in a different way," Rector said. "It's still based on belief in yourself. It's still Mr. Turner's secrets of success. We just didn't feel like we could improve on the course of instruction, although we have added to it. Some of it is exactly alike." Rector and Turner are expecting government opposition.

"I think we'll be tested in some states and have to prove ourselves," Rector said.

"I've told them to run it so clean that the Girl Scouts will look like Mafia. The government would like to fix it so I can't do anything except go back to South Carolina and drive mules," Turner said.

"The only way they're going to stop me is to pass a law against harelips."

Train Depot In Backyard

IVANHOE, Calif. (AP) — Howard Morris, an insect exterminator who demolishes buildings in his spare time, has merged his collection of architectural memorabilia into a house he saved from destruction.

Incorporated into the home's design are turn-of-the-century street lampposts now used as roof pillars.

Redwood beams from a nearby town's train station grace the living-room ceiling. Bricks that cover the front of the house were originally used in a general store that served as the first post office in this small Central California community.

The 2,000-square-foot building started out as a triplex apartment in 1926, and later housed an employment agency and a Girl Scout headquarters before being moved to the Morris property.

Bits and pieces of old hotels and commercial buildings that Morris helped demolish also have found their way into the home. Brass doorknobs and other hardware, including hand-hammered brass chandeliers, will be added before the house is complete.

His interest in the history of the area prompted him to assemble the unusual house, Morris said.

"I've been an antique collector for years and years. I know most people don't care about history, but someday this house might mean something to somebody."

The project was begun nine years ago and has taken so long partly because of the time required to repair the components.

Uniform Sentencing Bill Moves Toward Passage

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A uniform-sentencing bill pushed by Gov. Jim Hunt as a way to reduce the wide disparity in prison terms handed out for the same crimes neared passage

Tuesday when the House voted overwhelmingly to give it tentative approval.
Hunt, who has made the bill one of his top priorities during the current legislative session, said he was "gratified" by the 102-8 House vote. Final House action was expected today.

Rep. Jim Ezzell, D-Nash, floor leader for the legislation, said the measure would increase the certainty of punishment facing criminals and reduce the broad differences in prison terms defendants receive for similar crimes. But he said it would not cause an increase in the population of the state's already over-crowded prisons.

"The intent behind this bill is to bring sentences that are being issued by judges closer together, so that a sentence in one section of the state will be pretty near that imposed in another section of the state," he said.

Called "fair sentencing" by Hunt, the bill would replace most sentencing laws with a system of categories that match crimes with maximum and presumed sentences.

A judge would be expected to impose the presumed sentence for a given crime unless he showed aggravating or mitigating circumstances and entered them into the written court record.

For most crimes, the bill would also replace the paroles system. In the system's place, inmates would be given one day off their sentences for each day served on good behavior, so a prisoner could expect to serve one-half the sentence imposed. In addition, an inmate could earn earlier release with "gain time" for work release and other accomplishments.

Only one legislator, Rep. William McMillan, D-Iredell, opposed the measure, saying it would clog the courts with more delays, create more appeals of sentences and inhibit plea bargaining.

"It's going to take more judges; it's going to take more prosecutors; it's going to take more public defenders," McMillan said.

Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, said he supported the legislation because of committee changes that reduced the presumed sentences for a number of crimes and allowed judges to give a reduced sentence on the basis of a defendant's negotiated plea.

Adams said Hunt and Senate backers of the bill had agreed to the changes.

Among the other House amendments were reductions from four to three and one-half years the presumed sentences for larceny and breaking and entering.

First-degree rape and murder were kept at life in prison, but the paroles system was retained for persons convicted of those offenses, permitting their release after 20 years instead of after 40 years, as approved by the Senate.

The bill does not alter the death penalty as a possible sentence for first-degree murder.

It narrows the wide range of sentences possible for other crimes, such as second-degree murder. That offense is now punishable by anywhere between two and 20 years in prison, which would be changed under the bill to a presumed sentence of 16 years — or eight years with good-behavior time.

Rep. Henry Frye, D-Guilford, said he was reluctant but voted for the measure. Frye sponsored a similar bill in 1977 but said he believed the Hunt version contained sentences that were still too harsh.

New Dino Theory

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — A lethal bombardment of cosmic radiation from an exploding star may have blanketed the Earth 65 million years ago, wiping out the dinosaurs and paving the way for man's evolution, University of California researchers say.

The new theory, based upon radiological testing of the rare element iridium, is another attempt at explaining the relatively rapid disappearance of the huge reptiles who once ruled their steamy environment, the researchers say.

University geologist Walter Alvarez, who presented a report on the group's findings Monday to an American Geophysical Union conference in Washington, D.C., called it "the most dramatic event involving the most dramatic animals ever seen."

"And it had tremendous implications," he said. "It gave the early mammals scope for evolution. Had the dinosaurs not become extinct, we might not be here."

$18,395 For Inmate Use

RALEIGH — The N. C. Department of Cultural Resources has been awarded $18,395 by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration for a model arts program for the N. C. Correctional Center for Women, according to Secretary Sara W. a Hodgkins.

The funds are coming through the American Correctional Association's project CULTURE (Creative Use of Leisure Time Under Restrictive Environments), and will be jointly sponsored by the departments of Cultural Resources and Correction.

The project calls for long-term instruction in a number of artistic media, with special emphasis on writing and drama. Artists will be contracted to conduct the different courses.

The Correctional Center for Women, in Raleigh, was chosen because it is the main such facility in the state.

Implementation of the project is expected to begin immediately.

Unaffected By Orders

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — President Carter's order giving governors regulatory powers over gasoline sales won't affect North Carolina.

State Energy Director Brian M. Flattery said that North Carolina already had given such powers to the governor and that Carter's action will establish similar measures for the 19 states whose governors did not have the regulatory power.

Flattery said North Carolina was the first state to set up an emergency plan. The 1977 Legislature passed a law giving the governor certain powers over gasoline sales and other energy sources.

Under the plan, the governor can regulate gasoline sales, alternating daily from odd to even license tag numbers. He can also direct certain stations to stay open on weekends and regulate purchase sizes.

The governor's powers may be overruled by a committee composed of the lieutenant governor, president pro tem of the state Senate, majority leader of the Senate, speaker of the House and speaker pro tem of the House.

Flattery said he did not think Gov. Jim Hunt would have to use the emergency powers this summer.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 17 through May 23.

HOUSE
PANAMA CANAL — The House approved, 200 for and 198 against, the parliamentary rules under which it will debate legislation to implement the treaties turning over the Panama Canal to Panama by the year 2000.

Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., who wanted to debate the legislation, said: "The time to vote for or against the treaties was two years ago, not today."

Rep. George Hansen, R-Idaho, an opponent, said the House should postpone treaty debate until the CIA provides "firm assurances that Panama is not a mainland-based Cuba-type revolutionary operation rampantly exporting terrorism among its neighbors with the money they get from the Panama Canal."

Most members voting "nay" don't want to relinquish the Panama Canal.

Reps. Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

DISASTER LOANS — The House rejected, 174 for and 232 against, an amendment to lower the interest rate on government loans that compensate for damage inflicted on homes and personal property by natural disasters. The amendment sought to lower from three to one per cent the rate on the first $10,000 loaned. The vote came during debate on HR 4011, later passed with a proposed rate of three per cent on the first $55,000. A House-Senate conference now has the bill.

Rep. Jon Hinson, R-Miss., the sponsor, said: "This is not a spending amendment. There is nothing inflationary about restoring the economy of a disaster-stricken area."

Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, an opponent, said "probably it will not do any good anyway" to vote for the lower interest rate, because the Senate was firmly against the one per cent figure.

Members voting "yea" wanted to lower the interest rate to one per cent on certain federal disaster-assistance loans.

Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay."

SMALL BUSINESSES — By a vote of 192 for and 216 against, the House rejected an amendment to limit the size and scope of the Small Business Development Center (SBDC) program. The vote came during debate on a Small Business Administration bill (HR 4011) later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

The program in question has set up, on a pilot basis, 11 centers designed to counsel small businessmen on federal regulations, tax matters, new technology and other matters. Rejection of this amendment cleared the way for possible expansion of the program beyond its pilot basis, at a fiscal 1980 cost of $18 million.

Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., who supported the limiting amendment, called the SBDC program "a classic case of the government giving more help than the people who are getting the help really need."

Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, an opponent of the amendment, said "I have talked to many small businesses who need just a bit of help in the way of what we might call adult education...."

Members voting "yea" either were opposed to or had doubts about the federal program (SBDC) intended to advise small businessmen.

Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Martin voted "nay."

SENATE
TURKEY — The Senate adopted, 64 for and 32 against, an amendment providing Turkey with a grant, rather than a loan, of $50 million in U.S. military aid. The vote came during debate on HR 3173, a foreign aid bill that was passed and sent to conference with the House. Altogether, Turkey is slated to receive more than $400 million in U.S. economic and military aid this fiscal year.

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the sponsor, said: "The U.S. is not alone. Greece (and) the NATO countries and our friends in the Middle East also have a profound stake in a sound and stable Turkey."

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., an opponent of the grant, said: "In addition to Turkey's poor performance regarding Cyprus, we are also witnessing a Turkish sabotage of Greece's efforts to return to the integrated military command of NATO."

Senators voting "yea" wanted a $50 million military outlay for Turkey to be a grant rather than a loan.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

NARCOTICS — The Senate voted, 65 for and 29 against, to increase by $16.6 million the fiscal 1980 outlay for narcotics-control programs in Colombia. This brought to $54.4 million the amount in the new foreign military-aid bill for supporting Colombian government efforts to slow the flow of Colombian cocaine and marijuana into the U.S. The bill (HR 3173) was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., the sponsor, said: "My personal belief is that we are essentially unable to control the supply of illicit narcotics once it has entered into the U.S. Therefore, the principle of moving as close to the source as possible is our only alternative to controlling this insidious problem."

No senators spoke against adding the $16.6 million. Senators voting "nay" opposed the additional outlay for the Colombian government's "narcotics intervention" program. Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

'Crazy' Girl Scout Project Is Timely

By JO-ANNE BYRNE
ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Four years ago the people of St. Paul thought the girl scout project was crazy.

Along came the energy crunch and at its dedication this month, it was hailed as a unique achievement in energy conservation.

The project is the Program Center for the Girl Scout Council of St. Croix Valley. It is unusual because it is a public building built to incorporate many of the known ways to conserve energy. It is expected at the outset to produce up to 65 percent of its own heating and cooling.

The center is constructed partially below ground to utilize soil insulation. It has a solar system and a heat-pump which draws warmth from the air and increases the efficiency of the solar system. South-oriented windows aid the solar collectors.

An experimental vertical-axis wind mill funded by the Minnesota Energy Agency also will be put into use.

An internal waste-disposal system — Swedish Clivus Multrum — will produce compost during an 18-month cycle to be used in an atrium in a ramp area connecting the building's two floors.

Task lighting designed to provide illumination only when and where it is needed will save on electricity.

The roof of the center will be soil-covered for insulation and planted with prairie grass and wildflowers. Plants in the building are designed to help control the humidity. All energy systems employed will be color-coded so that four groups can be instructed on their use.

The building was planned to express the concern of a branch of the national Girl Scout organization about natural resources and their proper utilization.

"Any parent with teen-agers has to be concerned about the environment," said Mrs. Thea Childs, executive director of the 11-county Girl Scout council.

The center will be used for indoor camping, she said, and also for meetings by the state energy agency and groups such as the Sierra Club. Up to 32 Scouts using sleeping bags can be accommodated overnight in the second-floor program center.

Financing for the building was secured through a fund raising campaign and a variety of grants and gifts.

Delano Erickson, an architect who worked on the project, said the building cost $725,000, the total project, more than $1 million.

KING'S SALOON
LONDON (AP) — A 1936 Lancashire saloon, once owned by King George VI, was recently sold at an auction for about $3,600.

But the auction house reported that two other royal cars on the auction block were not sold because bids did not meet the reserve prices.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy worries helped keep the stock market in retreat today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.85 to 829.70 in the first half hour.

Gainers trailed losers by about a 4-3 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said concern over rising gasoline prices and uncertainty about fuel supplies continued to set the mood on Wall Street.

Texaco and Gulf announced Monday they would reduce further in June the amount of gasoline they supply to service stations.

Meanwhile, Libya was reported Monday to have raised its official price for crude oil by $2.30 a barrel to $21.31, topping the previous high of $21 set by Algeria and Nigeria last week.

Today's early volume leaders included Inco Ltd., up 3/4 at 21; Great Western Financial, off 1/4 at 19 3/4, and MGIC Investment, unchanged at 20 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 3.73 to 832.55.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 5-4 spread on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 27.04 million shares against 27.81 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index lost .08 to 56.53.

At the American Stock Exchange, by contrast, the market value index gained 2.04 to a new high of 187.49.

Shot In Holdup, Recovery Seen

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A New Hanover County man was in serious condition after he was shot Tuesday during a holdup of a Wilmington bank.

David Voorhes, 32, of Castle Hayne, was in the First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. branch at Long Leaf Mall on an errand for his employer when the robbers shot him in the abdomen, police said. Authorities say the man apparently didn't respond quickly enough to orders to lie on the floor.

According to witnesses and police reports, the robbery occurred at about 9:15 a.m. when two gunmen, wearing ski masks and gloves, stormed into the bank and ordered everyone to lie on the floor. There were two customers and five bank employees in the office at the time.

Police Sgt. Fred Law said the two bandits stuffed an undisclosed amount of money into a pillow case and fled in a green pickup truck.

Witnesses said the robbers, wearing ski masks and black gloves, were so thoroughly disguised that they could not identify their race.

An FBI spokesman said the robbery was characterized by vulgar language.

Dogs Turn On Five-Year-Old

BASEL, Switzerland (AP) — Four Saint Bernards bit a 5-year-old boy to death even though the child had been playing nicely with the big dogs for months, police said today.

They said the boy, Daniel Lesser, was playing with the dogs when he was bitten in the neck and then lay helpless as they continued to attack him, severing a main artery.

The dogs were put to death. Their 66-year old owner, who neighbors said treated the boy as his only human friend, disappeared after the incident, apparently in shock, but reported to police today.

He was being investigated for possible negligence.

Recruiters Told 'Stay'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Some Army recruiters under investigation in connection with allegations of fraudulent recruiting locally have been ordered to remain at their posts and not take leave or accept transfers until the investigation is ended, according to the Charlotte News.

The paper said in its Tuesday editions that at least 10 recruiters are being investigated in connection with allegations that recruiters coached enlistees so they could pass Army entrance examinations.

None of the 10 has been charged.

"It doesn't mean the 10 are guilty of anything," an unidentified Army source told the News. "It just means that there have been accusations of malpractice leveled against them, and they're under investigation."

Lt. Col. Edward Walker, head of the Charlotte recruiting command, which covers 47 counties with 50 recruiters, confirmed that some persons have been ordered to remain at their posts during the investigation.

"It's not a serious action," he said. "It's just to insure that the folks are available for questioning."

Walker would not say how many recruiters have been ordered to remain at their jobs.

The Baltimore Orioles survived a 10-count and flattened the Kansas City Royals Tuesday night.

One night earlier, the Orioles dropped their 10th consecutive game in Royals Stadium. But Tuesday evening, Ken Singleton, Rich Dauer, Gary Roenicke and Lee May unloaded haymakers and the Orioles pounded the Royals 8-1, their first success in Kansas City since June 4, 1977.

Says Bird Will Sign

BOSTON (AP) — Celtics owner Harry Mangurian has stepped into negotiations for Larry Bird and plans to sign the Indiana State star to a National Basketball Association contract on Wednesday, the Boston Herald American reported.

"Harry is up here to sign Bird. We'll have him under contract tomorrow," a source close to Mangurian told the newspaper Tuesday night.

Terms of the contract were not reported.

Mangurian, Celtics president Red Auerbach and Bob Woolf, attorney for the Celtics' No. 1 draft choice in 1978, were scheduled to meet at 10:30 Wednesday morning.

"Hell, does this feel good," exclaimed Manager Earl Weaver. "You get to wondering what the hell you have to do. Last year it was 100 percent Kansas City and last night (Monday's 5-4 16-inning loss) we had plenty of chances but still couldn't win."

In other American League action, the Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the New York Yankees 7-3, the California Angels downed the Seattle Mariners 6-4, the Detroit Tigers edged the Toronto Blue Jays 9-8 and the Chicago White Sox shaded the Cleveland Indians 4-2. The Oakland-Minnesota and Boston-Texas games were rained out.

Baltimore ace Jim Palmer, making his first start in 10 days since complaining of soreness in his right arm, retired 13 Kansas City batters in a row between the first and the fifth. He allowed five hits, struck out three and walked two before Tippy Martinez relieved in the eighth when Palmer's forearm tightened again.

Brewers 7, Yankees 3 Cecil Cooper slammed a pair of bases-empty homers and Robin Yount added a two-run double as Milwaukee handed winless Catfish Hunter his fourth setback. Cooper's 11th homer of the year and second of the game broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning and three infield hits and Yount's double, which right fielder Reggie Jackson misplayed, helped the Brewers to three more runs in the seventh. Milwaukee's Moose Haas scattered seven hits, including home runs by Jackson and Graig Nettles.

Angels 6, Mariners 4 Bobby Grich collected three hits and drove in three runs while Jim Barr scattered eight hits before needing help from Dave LaRoche in the eighth as the Angels posted their fourth consecutive triumph. Barr replaced scheduled starter Nolan Ryan, who remained behind in California with his injured son and then was delayed by the grounding of a DC-10. Grich delivered a two-run double in the seventh inning. In the fifth, his single scored Brian Downing all the way from first. Ruppert Jones and Bob Stinson homered for Seattle.

Tigers 9, Blue Jays 8 Lance Parrish snapped an 8-8 tie with a run-scoring single in the eighth inning following a two-out intentional walk to Jason Thompson. Lou Whitaker opened the eighth with a single and was sacrificed to second. After Rusty Staub fied out, Thompson was purposely passed, but Parrish spoiled the strategy with his game-winning hit. The Tigers also got a two-run single from Alan Trammell and a two-run double from Jerry Morales and Parrish had an RBI double. Rookie Dave Tobik earned his first major league victory with one inning of relief.

White Sox 4, Indians 2 Bill Nahorodny doubled home two runs and Richard Wortham blanked Cleveland on four hits for eight innings. Nahorodny's double came in the fourth inning off loser Eric Wilkins after Alan Bannister singled and Lamar Johnson walked. The White Sox scored two more runs in the sixth on RBI singles by Milt May, making his debut with Chicago, and Rusty Torres.

Sonics Remember Last Year, Nip Bullets, 114-112, Lead 3-1

By TOM SEPPY AP Sports Writer SEATTLE (AP) — Dennis Johnson says the Seattle SuperSonics only have to remember last year to keep from squandering their lead in the National Basketball Association championship playoffs against the Washington Bullets. "Everybody on this team is remembering last year," said Johnson after the Sonics defeated the Bullets 114-112 in overtime Tuesday night to go ahead 3-1 in the best-of-seven finals. "We had the lead then and relaxed. The next thing we knew, we were being blown out."

Last year, the Sonics led in the final series 3-2, but got pas-ed in Game Six in Washington, 117-82, and the Bullets went on to win the championship. The next game in this series will be played Friday in Landover, Md., with Game Six, if necessary, here on Sunday and Game Seven in Landover next Wednesday. Dennis Johnson also said it doesn't mean a thing that the Bullets were down 3-1 against San Antonio in the Eastern Conference finals and came back to win the series, only the third time in NBA history such a comeback was made in the playoffs. It has never been done in the championship round.

"We're not the Spurs," said Johnson, who tipped the last Bullets shot into the hands of teammate Jack Sikma with three seconds remaining in the overtime. "We don't get all the publicity that the Spurs do, but they don't play defense like us. We aren't your average team. We're not going to lose the 3-1 lead."

Dennis Johnson and Gus Williams, the two Sonics guards, once again paced Seattle. They got 32 and 36 points, respectively. They got lots of help inside from Sikma, who had 20 points, 17 rebounds, five blocked shots and aided in getting Washington's three big men — Elvin Hayes, Bobby Dandridge and Wes Unseld — to foul out of the game. Washington Coach Dick Motta was angered about those foul calls, claiming San Antonio Coach Doug Moe set the stage for them when he criticized the referees after the final game of the Eastern Conference playoffs.

Otis Melvin Goes For NCAA 800-Meter Crown

For East Carolina sprinter Otis Melvin the time is right. After three straight weeks as a winner in the 200 meters he took last away from competition and trained for this weekend's NCAA championship meet at Illinois.

that prepared me well for this outdoor season," Melvin said. "I met the qualifying standard and I've won my last three races, so I'm in a great frame of mind and looking forward to this meet more than any I've ever entered before.

curve now I bring my right arm across my body while my left arm stays on that side. It helps me to put more effort into running the curve while holding my balance better and helping me to run the shortest distance to the finish line."

The slender 6-2 junior from Fayetteville won meets in Richmond, Va., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Knoxville, Tenn., in his last three outings and appears primed for a sterling NCAA performance. Melvin ran a 20.6-second hand-timed effort at Pittsburgh to qualify for this weekend's track carnival and hopes to become the third Pirates all-American in as many years in the 200 meters. Teammate Calvin Alston earned the honor the past two years. "I had a good indoor year and "I feel good physically, too. I've shortened my workouts some and done a lot of work on the curves so I'll be ready if I'm in lane one or on the outside. "It's an advantage for a tall runner like me to be in the outside lane because it's a lot straighter, while the inside lane requires a different running technique. I have to prepare for them all because I never know where I'll be running."

Melvin participated in an Olympic development camp in Colorado last summer. He spent a lot of time there working on running the turns and he believes that it has made him faster this year. "I changed my style for running the inside lanes because of what I learned at the Olympic development camp," Melvin said. "Most of the time a runner's hands and arms both do the same thing, but when I run a

Sampson Choice Set Thursday

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — Ralph Sampson, the 7-foot-3 3/4-inch basketball star who is the hottest prospect left on the recruiting market, will announce Thursday where he'll play college ball, although he hasn't decided on his choice yet. Roger Bergey, who coached the star center at Harrisonburg High School, said Tuesday that Sampson will hold a news conference at 7 p.m. Thursday in the high school gymnasium to reveal his plans. Bergey said Sampson apparently has not yet reached a final decision, "but he's pretty close."

Sampson attended an athletic banquet at Strasburg High School Tuesday night and remained vague about his college plans. He made no reference to the Thursday night news conference and said only that he'd make up his mind "in a week or two."

Meisel Improved

East Carolina University swimmer Kevin Meisel, a sophomore from Orlando, Fla., continues to make progress in the Duke University Hospital after having his right arm almost severed in an accident with a train April 28. A reimplantation team at Duke worked to save the arm. He has had skin grafted from his left leg to his arm and faces another similar operation, probably this week. "I'm looking forward to going home soon," Meisel said this weekend. "If I have the next graft soon, then I might be able to go home the second weekend in June."

He is no longer confined to his bed and therapists have begun to move his arm and fingers through their range of motion.

Waltrip Is New Leader

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip's racing luck turned for the better and Bobby Allison's turned for the worse. Result: Waltrip won the World 600 at Charlotte and replaced Allison on top of the Grand National stock car racing point standings. Allison finished 22nd. Rookie Dale Earnhardt, who was fifth in the race, is the sixth driver to top $100,000 in winnings this year. After 13 races of the scheduled 31, Waltrip has 2,066 points, Allison 2,013, Cale Yarborough 1,897, Richard Petty 1,887.

Sampson narrowed his list of schools to four — North Carolina, Virginia, Virginia Tech and Kentucky. He has visited only those four schools and East Tennessee State. Bergey said Sampson plans to notify the college he chooses only a short time before the news conference and that the chosen coach isn't expected to be present for the announcement. At least two of the four coaches plan to be on hand,

Parker Sparks Pittsburgh To Victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Dave Parker is starting to shake out of his "slump." You know it when he tells you so.

The Pittsburgh Pirate star never hesitates to blow his own horn, as many know, and that's exactly what he did Tuesday night after helping his team blow out the Chicago Cubs 8-0.

"It's about time for me to put something together," said Parker after hitting two doubles and a home run and driving in three runs.

In the other NL games Tuesday night, the Montreal Expos routed the Philadelphia Phillies 9-0; the Houston Astros nipped the Cincinnati Reds 2-1; the New York Mets turned back the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2; the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the San Francisco Giants 6-5 and the San Diego Padres swept a double-header from the Atlanta Braves, 6-3 and 3-2.

Pittsburgh took a 2-0 lead in the first inning with the aid of a throwing error by pitcher Ken Holtzman and a run-scoring single by Willie Stargell. Phil Garner led off the Pirate second with his third homer. Parker clouted his seventh homer with two out in the seventh, and then doubled in two more runs in a four-run Pirate eighth.

Don Robinson and Grant Jackson combined on a five-hitter for the Pirates, who turned in only their second shutout this season.

Expos 9, Phillies 0
Ellis Valentine's three-run homer capped a five-run, fifth inning and Steve Rogers pitched a six-hitter as Montreal beat Philadelphia. Rogers triggered the fifth-inning outburst with a lead-off single and Warren Cromartie later delivered a two-run double before Valentine's fifth homer of the season.

The Expos had provided Rogers with a 2-0 lead in the second inning when Chris Speier doubled in two runs. Perez and Valentine both hit RBI doubles in the seventh to stretch the Montreal lead to 9-0.

Astros 2, Reds 1
Pinch-hitter Denny Walling's run-scoring single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning led Houston over Cincinnati. Craig Reynolds and Cesar Cedeño started the decisive Houston ninth with singles off loser Paul Moskau. Reliever Doug Bair then intentionally walked Jose Cruz to load the bases, setting the stage for Walling's winning hit. Randy Niemann, recalled from the minors earlier this month, scattered eight hits for his first major league victory.

Mets 6, Cardinals 2
John Stearns and Steve Henderson belted run-scoring doubles to highlight a four-run rally in the seventh inning and lead New York over St. Louis. Lee Mazzilli's double, one of 14 New York hits, triggered the New York uprising off St. Louis right-hander Pete Vuckovich.

An inning later, the Mets added an insurance run on two singles and Richie Hebner's sacrifice fly in support of Pat Zachry, 4-0, who yielded nine hits in 71-3 innings.

Dodgers 6, Giants 5
Dusty Baker's fly ball single to deep center field drove in the winning run as Los Angeles rallied for three runs in the ninth inning to defeat San Francisco.

twice in the ninth and had the bases loaded with one out and Baker hitting against San Francisco reliever Dave Roberts. Baker lofted a fly ball over the head of Giants center fielder Bill North for the game-winning hit.

Run-scoring singles by Reggie Smith and Steve Yeager gave the Dodgers their first two runs of the inning.

Padres 6-3, Braves 3-2
Dave Winfield homered and Gene Tenace cracked a two-run triple to help Gaylord Perry record his 27th career victory as San Diego defeated Atlanta in the first game of their double-header.

The Padres completed their sweep as Ozzie Smith's run-scoring single broke a tie in the eighth inning.

Perry Closes Out May With 4th Victory After Long Drought

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I hope number five is not as hard coming as number four," Cy Young Award winner Gaylord Perry said of a personal drought that finally ended during a San Diego doubleheader sweep over Atlanta.

Perry struck out 10, allowing seven hits in the Padres' first game victory by a 6-3 score. Shortstop Ozzie Smith ended his dry spell at bat with an eighth inning RBI single to give San Diego a second game 3-2 victory over the Braves.

"The last was May 1 in New York. I remember 'em all," Perry said of the long passage between victories No. 270 and 271 of his career.

Now 44 for the season, he had a good April before hitting the sour streak. During May he had three losses and two "no decision" starts, although most of his games were well pitched.

It looked like another of those nights when Atlanta got three unearned first inning runs, but Perry shut out the Braves the rest of the way.

"It was great to have some runs to work with," the 40-year-old Perry said. "When you're going bad you've got to face it, and fight it, and keep going."

The victories gave San Diego its first three-game win streak of an otherwise troubled season — but not quite as troubled as the Atlanta fortunes.

"A loss is a loss," said the losing pitcher in the second game, Phil Niekro, now 5-8. "I think it hurts a little more because with the win, we'd have been in the same position with the Padres as we were when we came into town (tied for last in the National League West). Now that puts us two back."

"Niekro pitched a good ballgame and he lost," said Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox. "He's got almost 190 losses in his career, and 140 have been just like that one."

"We're always close to winning. We never get blown out of games and we're always in them, but one thing after another keeps happening," Cox said.

San Diego left fielder Jerry Turner had two doubles, a triple and a homer in the doubleheader, after being moved to cleanup.

"I have no gripes about where I hit, if I'm producing. This is my first year playing as a regular. I've been hitting third all of my career."

Padres' Manager Roger Craig, doesn't think the switch of Winfield to third and Turner to fourth as important as the switch of shortstop Smith to second in the order.

"Ozzie batting second is a psychological thing," Craig said. "It showed I had confidence in him. Ozzie really wants to hit second." Smith came into the doubleheader hitting .161.

Then his average dropped near his weight of 150 with an 0-for-6 night before his game winning single in the second game. But Smith also had sacrificed two runners into scoring position and both eventually scored.

Long Shadow Of Ali Still Hides Unknown Champ, Larry Holmes

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The best heavyweight fist fighter in the world stands in an isolated corner, talking in subdued tones with a couple of newsmen and a handful of the curious.

Meanwhile, there is a shoving, six-deep mob around a handsome, mustachioed Californian of Mexican extraction, Carlos Palomino, a former welterweight champion. Outside on the patio, a pack of ring buffs struggles to get within conversation distance of Jersey Joe Walcott, a colorful throwback to the Joe Louis era.

For Larry Holmes, unbeaten in 30 bouts and holder of half of the world heavyweight boxing crown but rightful owner of all, it's a lonely, frustrating existence.

The long shadow of Muhammad Ali continues to block him from the public view.

"Until that man officially retires or fights me, nobody will know I exist," says Holmes, who accepts his fate placidly. "I have fought everybody who is willing to fight me. What else do they want me to do?"

Holmes can walk the length of 5th Ave. without once being asked for an autograph. It's the same when he strolls the Champs Elysees in Paris or pauses to admire the scenery on London's Trafalgar Square.

He is the forgotten champion — boxing's "Mr. X."

"I have the same trouble at home," Holmes said at a press conference Tuesday aimed at hyping his June 22 bout in Madison Square Garden against a little-known ex-Marine, Mike "Hercules" Weaver.

"I go home and ask my 11-year-old daughter, Missy, if I am her champion," Holmes said.

"She says, 'Yes, daddy.' I ask her, 'Am I the best fighter in the world?' She says, 'I don't know, daddy.' I ask her, 'Can I beat Muhammad Ali?' She replies, 'I don't know, daddy.' I ask her if I am going to knock out Weaver. She says, 'I don't know, daddy.'"

Holmes, recognized as world champion by the World Boxing Council, is risking his $3 million purse for a scheduled September fight against tough Earnie Shavers by going against a fighter who has lost eight times and is No. 8 among heavyweight challengers.

All, who lost and then regained the World Boxing Association title against Leon Spinks, is capitalizing on his auspicious time formally to retire from the ring.

He has insisted — and almost everybody believes him — that he will never fight again. Certainly, he wants no part of a younger, stronger, more dedicated Holmes, who once was his sparring partner.

Holmes will be fighting Weaver for practically nothing, repaying a debt to Promoter Don King, who befriended him in his struggling early days.

The TV networks spurned the fight, insisting it would be one-sided and lacking in appeal. His back to the wall, the ingenious King had to scrounge around for an attractive supporting cast, including Palomino against Roberto Duran.

"When I first came up, I couldn't get on TV," Holmes said. "They said I wasn't good enough. Now TV doesn't want me because they say I am too good. Once ABC told me they'd use my fight if I scored a knockout. I won by decision. They never took the film out of the can."

Holmes, 29, a onetime truck driver, is an impressive gladiator — 6-foot-3, 214 pounds with massive neck, shoulder and arms. He is reminiscent of Ali in his speed and ring finesse. Tender knuckles keep him from being a murderous puncher.

But he is unquestionably the finest heavyweight now in action and a man destined to rule the division for perhaps another five years — not, let us hope, in virtual anonymity.

"I can't get famous for not going into the service or for becoming a Muslim," the modest, low-key champ said. "Ali was known for what he was and what he did and all the people around him. I'm not Muhammad Ali. I don't expect to be. I came into the world as Larry Holmes. I will go out as Larry Holmes."

Nobles Aids Brave Effort

AYDEN — Rod Nobles, a junior at Pembroke State University, was a member of the school's mile and 440-yard relay teams that placed nationally at the 28th National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics track and field championships.

The NAIA meet was held in Abilene, Texas.

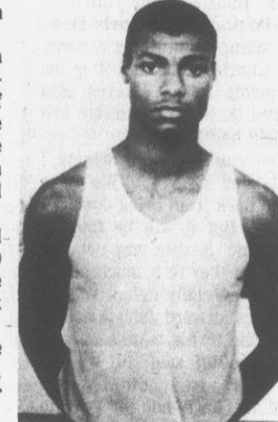

The Braves' mile relay team was nationally ranked sixth going into the meet with a time of 3:13.3, and they finished the championship meet in fifth place with a 3:11.2 time. Nobles ran the third leg on the relay, and had a split time of 48.3 seconds.

In the 440, the team finished seventh, with a time of 41.0 seconds. Nobles again ran the third leg, but his split was not available.

During the regular season, he also ran the 220-yard dash, posting the top time of 21.4 for the year.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy

Nobles of 1209 Fleming Street in Ayden, Nobles is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School. He is a business administration major at Pembroke State.

Kemper Bowling Out In N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — There's a certain sense of nostalgia to this week's $350,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

It is the last to be played at the 7,160-yard, par-72 Quail Hollow Country Club. Despite an extremely successful 11-year run in Charlotte, the tournament next year will be moved to the famed Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Md.

It isn't unusual for tournaments and or cities to disappear from the PGA Tour schedule. In the last 10 years, more than two dozen events have dropped off the circuit.

But there was a difference. In those cases, the tournaments had problems of one type or another. They'd be played this year, then quietly drop off the schedule the next, without fanfare or announcements. They'd just be gone.

New Owner For Lakers

By TOM HARRIGAN
Associated Press Writer
INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The House that Jack Built — and household names like Kareem, Magic and Marcel — are being bought by Los Angeles real estate man Dr. Jerry Buss.

The purchase for about $67 million of the 16,000-seat Forum, pro basketball's Lakers and the pro hockey Kings from Jack Kent Cooke gives Los Angeles a homegrown sports entrepreneur.

Until now the baseball O'Malleys from New York, former Canadian Cooke and football franchise owners moving from the East have controlled the pro sports market in the Los Angeles area. One exception was formation of baseball's Angels by former movie cowboy Gene Autry.

The 46-year-old Buss, who holds a doctoral degree in physical chemistry from the University of Southern California, showed the necessary financial muscle when he bankrolled a great deal of the struggles of World Team Tennis for five years.

He owned the Los Angeles Strings, putting Ilie Nastase and Chris Evert together to win a WTT title last year. Buss also was a part owner of the San Diego, Anaheim and Indiana franchises before the 10-team WTT folded last fall.

Winning the WTT trophy only cost him "a couple of million," he joked. He has estimated his fortune in 20 years of real estate has grown to $350 million. He quit a research job with an aircraft company in 1958 and sunk his entire savings into one apartment building — the first of very many with 5,000 units in Los Angeles and another 5,000 in other cities.

The 66-year-old Cooke and Buss made separate announcements Tuesday that they are finalizing the package deal, the largest transaction in sports history. In addition to the Lakers, the Kings and the 11-year-old Forum, the sale also includes Cooke's Ranjon, a 13,000-acre ranch in the California Sierra.

"I am elated," said Buss in a statement released by spokesman Bob Steiner. "It is something I have wanted for a long period of time. It is like a dream come true. It's very exciting for me to work with people like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Marcel Dionne. And I'm excited about the arrival of Dale McCourt."

To add to Laker center Abdul-Jabbar, a five-time NBA most valuable player, and high-scoring Kings center Dionne, the Lakers recently signed Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who led Michigan State to the national collegiate championship. And the Kings won an appeals court verdict in the struggle over young center McCourt of Detroit.

Calling Cooke's Forum "The House that Jack Built" recalled the importance of Babe Ruth 40 years earlier for Yankee Stadium — "The House that Ruth Built."

Cooke built the Forum for $16 million in 1967 following disagreements with the Los Angeles Coliseum Commission over conditions for use of the Sports Arena by the Lakers and Kings.

National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle had urged Cooke to divest himself of other sports interests if he desired to stay affiliated with that league's Washington Redskins.

Cooke was given time to settle a divorce suit. Two months ago an agreement was reached giving his former wife, Barbara, one-half of his holdings which were estimated at $100 million.

Roeser walked to score Hall, and a double by Smith brought in Howard and Rhodes to close out the scoring in the inning.

The lone Kiwanis run came in the bottom of the first. Van Alston singled and moved up on two wild pitches. He scored on an out.

Kiwanis 4, Robersonville 3

The Kiwanis opened the Senior Babe Ruth season with a 4-3, ten-inning victory over Robersonville last night.

The Kiwanis came back to tie it up with two in the sixth. Arthur Fletcher walked as did Mac Stokes. Walks to Kenny Barnes and Charles Daise forced in Fletcher, and Stokes scored when Jeff Worthington hit into a fielder's choice.

It stayed that way until the tenth, when Robersonville scored to regain the lead, 3-2. But the Kiwanis came back with two in the bottom of the tenth to win it.

Stokes reached on an error and Barnes walked. Daise reached on a fielder's choice.

and another, by Worthington, scored both Stokes and Barnes for the win.

Ancient Ghetto Of Venice Now Being Restored

By SAMUEL KOO

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Venice's long-neglected Jewish quarter, the home of Shakespeare's Shylock and where the word "ghetto" originated, is being restored, supported partly by American benefactors.

The ghetto, a three-block area once inhabited by more than 5,000 Jews, derives its name from the old Venetian word "geto" meaning foundry, so called because it was built on the site of an abandoned foundry for casting iron.

Here for centuries, ever since the colony was created in 1516, the Jews lived their segregated and unequal life, apart from the rest of the city, surrounded by walls, but with their synagogues, schools and traditions.

"Venice's ghetto represents a unique experience in the history of the Jewish people," says Colombo Vitaliano, the cantor at the Spanish Synagogue. "It's an interesting example of the possibilities for living — in the heart of a pluralistic society — of a minority that had been able to preserve intact its faith and customs."

"It was a Jewish melting pot," says Mark Harris, a University of Manchester student writing a doctoral dissertation on the Jewish community in Venice.

"Jews from different countries, with entirely different customs, traditions and languages, were thrown in together bound by one faith," he says. "It was not unlike a Chinatown, but with exaggerated difficulties and elements of repression thrown in."

In "Merchant of Venice," Shakespeare portrays a relentless moneylender named Shylock operating in the Renaissance ghetto.

Fewer than 20 Jewish families now live in the area, built around a large square and isolated by canals. Impoverished families, mostly those of migrant workers, occupy the rest of the slum buildings. Most apartments do not have baths, and many rooms, especially on upper floors, are barely four feet high.

Fusetti Leda, who runs a third-generation jewelry shop, says her business is good, but her children do not want to live in the ghetto.

"They all left for comfortable places," says Mrs. Leda, who was born here 46 years ago. "Maybe someday if we can at least redo the interiors of these buildings — some people say they can make attractive duplexes or triplexes out of them — then, maybe, they may return."

Many of the Jewish specialty stores that used to dot the slum streets have disappeared. A snack bar with a big star of David on the window is serving ham-and-swiss sandwiches. A souvenir shop selling Jewish artifacts is run by a non-Jewish family.

But Columbo insists the ghetto remains the center of Jewish life in Venice. He points out that it still holds the synagogues, the rabbi's office, a rest home with kosher restaurant, the ritual bath and a bakery for unleavened bread.

On Saturdays and holidays, the Jews from Venice as well as Jewish tourists come to worship at two of the slum's five synagogues, all built within slum buildings presumably not to embarrass the dogs, the Renaissance rulers of Venice, who had barred their construction.

Considered exquisite examstruments.

They can perceive polarized light and ultraviolet light, which enables them to locate the sun even on a partly cloudy day, and helps them understand the lay of fog-covered terrain.

There are theories, some of which have been in and out of favor, that they can orient themselves by hearing thunderstorms or the pounding of surf at distances of thousands of miles; that some may smell their way home from the sea; that keen perception of barometric pressure gives them advance warning of weather fronts; that they are helped by a feeling for the earth's magnetic field or for the force generated by its rotation; and that young birds follow the lead of wise elders while journeying south in the fall.

This last lacks universal truth, quite obviously, because adult puffins, among others, desert their half-feathered offspring, who follow later as best they can.

It is considered quite likely that various birds rely on not just one set of skills but on two or more, giving them backup systems for various weather and other conditions. Even so, millions come to grief each year and sink into the sea, slam into lighted buildings, plate-glass windows and radio towers, or die in unseasonal weather.

At best the navigational systems merely supply compass directions, for the most part. What mental chart or road map do the lonely voyagers use to guide them to the little plots of land they call their own? No researchers can say.

built in the early 16th century, they have undergone repeated renovations.

They are the Schola Tedesca, the Schola Canton, the Schola Italiana, the Schola Levantina and the Schola Spagnola. The Schola Levantina and the Schola Spagnola are open for services, and the other three are used as museums.

The Chicago chapter of the International Fund for Monuments took part in the restoration of the Schola Canton and America's Save Venice Inc. in that of the Schola Levantina.

Work on the Schola Tedesco was supported by private German donors, and Italian organizations have contributed to the restoration of the Schola Italiana.

But the entire ghetto still needs a lot of work, and American and Italian groups are now preparing an international program for students to do volunteer work in the ghetto during their vacations.

Bird Migration Still Mystery

By JOE WING
For AP Newsfeatures

A single swallow returning this spring to nest under the eaves of a barn almost anywhere in the United States poses a mystery that some of the world's keenest scientists have yet to solve.

How does this familiar, 7-inch bundle of feathers find its way each year from South America to the very same farmyard in which it nurtured a brood the year before?

Not only barn swallows, but hundreds of other migrant species making up most of North America's five or six billion birds, pose the same basic question.

Even if they could speak, as birds do in fairy tales and folklore, they could hardly explain to mankind their extraordinary navigational skills, which must be more complex, and more baffling to the human mind, than the highly sophisticated ones worked out by engineers.

Ornithologists, such as those in the world's largest bird orientation research program at Cornell University, continue to experiment and sift reams of data, but the key to the inner door of the migration mystery eludes them, even as it did Aristotle, who thought 2,300 years ago that many birds dive into marshes, come fall, and hibernate like frogs.

There are plenty of clues to the mystery. It is known that on occasion some birds fly from landmark to landmark, but that seems an unlikely method for those, like the indigo bunting, that make their journeys at night.

Some seem to take their directions at all hours of day or night from sun or stars, in which case they must harbor in their tiny bodies a system as complicated as a whole battery of navigational tables and in-

Execution By Injection Fails In Committee Vote

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would make lethal injection of drugs the method of execution in North Carolina failed to pass a committee vote Tuesday, but supporters said they would try again Thursday to send the measure to the full House.

The legislation would make a lethal dose of drugs replace the use of Central Prison gas chamber, which has gone unused since 1961. It is sponsored by Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, a physician and supporter of the death penalty, and has drawn opposition from legislators who are against the death penalty in any form.

Gamble's measure failed to pass when the House Judiciary II Committee deadlocked 6-6 on a motion to approve it.

Committee chairman Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg, cast the decisive vote against the measure, forcing the tie. But the committee did not kill the proposal. And Helms, who opposes the death penalty, said he would bring it up in the committee again Thursday.

Gamble told the committee that the use of drugs is a more humane way to execute a person and that the drugs would put the condemned criminal to sleep before killing him.

Gamble also contends his bill would save the state the expense of constructing a new gas chamber when the present one is demolished. Central Prison is being replaced with a modern facility on the same site near downtown Raleigh. But Helms said making the condemned person more comfortable in death would only soothe the conscience of legislators who enact the death penalty.

"If we pass it, we're not really doing that for the prisoners' comfort," Helms said. "I believe we're doing that to soothe our own conscience."

"It will interfere with our ability to see that the death penalty is wrong, that killing people is immoral," he added. "This legislation tends to make us feel better about what we're doing."

Some committee members said they expected an effort on Thursday to send the bill to the House floor for debate "without prejudice," or without a recommendation.

Minimum Wage

A bill that would increase the state minimum wage from $2.50 per hour to $2.75 per hour in July and raise it another 15 cents an hour next July won tentative approval in the Senate.

The House-passed bill advanced on a 44-2 vote with little discussion or debate and was expected to be up for final consideration today.

The measure would cover state employees, and according to its sponsor, Sen. Jack Childers, D-Davidson, would primarily affect cafeteria workers in the state's schools.

Firing

A House-passed bill that would make it illegal for an employer to fire a worker solely because he filed a workers' compensation claim gained final approval in the Senate.

Now the measure must go back to the House for concurrence on an amendment added in the Senate that says the burden of proof for the claim as the basis for firing is on the employee.

Credit Cards

Another House-passed bill that would strengthen the law against credit-card fraud gained final approval in the Senate. It revises the fraud laws to cover illegal use of new debit cards in electronic banking.

It must also be returned to the House for concurrence on amendments.

Insurance

A bill raising the minimum amount of automobile liability insurance motorists must have was approved in the House and returned to the Senate for concurrence on amendments.

The bill, when enacted, will cause a small increase in automobile liability premiums, supporters said.

Community Colleges

A Senate-passed bill that would remove the state community college system from control of the state Board of Education was approved by the House Higher Education Committee. The measure now goes to the full House.

The committee amended the bill by increasing the size of the new community college board from 17 to 19 members. It also ensures the board and system president would have complete authority over top-level personnel in the statewide system. Odometer Rollback Legislation strengthening the state law prohibiting automobile owners from rolling back the odometers on their vehicles was enacted when the House voted to go along with Senate amendments to the bill.

Supporters say the new law will allow easier prosecution of persons who have sold cars and are suspected of having changed the mileage indicator.

Campus Cops A bill that would give arrest powers to college and university police forces was approved by the House and sent to the Senate. However, the House amended the bill to require that campus police be subject to the same training requirements as regular police officers.

The bill would not prohibit city police and other local law enforcement agencies from making arrests on campuses.

A DECORATOR'S TOUCH — A nesting bird couple in a tree on the grounds of "The Daily Reflector" evidently liked the bright yellow color of perforator tape used in the newspaper's operations. Or maybe it was simply handy at the time of construction. Whatever the birds' reason for using the tape in their nest construction, the bright tape interwoven with more conventional dark twigs create an unusual, colorful contrast. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Galifianakis Case Delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday delayed until June 5 any further proceedings in the case against former U.S. Rep. Nick Galifianakis, D-N.C., who has been charged with perjury.

The delay, by U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey, came after Galifianakis' lawyer said he was having trouble getting information from the House ethics committee.

Galifianakis was indicted last month on a charge that he lied to the House committee about an alleged $10,000 contribution from Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

The former 4th District congressman, who is from Durham, pleaded innocent April 17.

Barry W. Levine, Galifianakis' lawyer, told Richey that he had asked the committee to give the defense copies of lie detector tests given Park, Park's diary and other documents on the Korean influence-buying scandal. However, he told Richey Tuesday that the panel had not given him the documents.

Richey said the court "will not look with favor" if the committee tries to withhold the documents.

Richey told Levine to "tell the clerk (of the House) that the court expects his cooperation — and promptly."

Under the Speedy Trials Act, the government has 70 days to bring the case to trial from the time the defendant is arraigned. If the deadline is not met, the indictment could be dismissed.

Park and Barbara Fletcher, a former aide to the congressman, told the House ethics committee that Park gave Miss Fletcher $10,000 in $100 bills for Galifianakis' unsuccessful 1972 Senate campaign against Republican Jesse Helms.

Miss Fletcher and another aide, Margaret Suggs, told the grand jury that indicted Galifianakis that he knew of the donation.

If convicted of the perjury charge, Galifianakis could be sentenced to five years in prison and be fined $2,000.

Volunteers Donate Time And Materials For A New Home

Volunteers Donate Time And Materials For A New Home

BUILT BY VOLUNTEERS — Emma Traylor, 75, stands on the porch of her new home built with volunteer help and donated materials to replace her leaking cottage, at left rear, that had been her residence. With Mrs. Traylor is Darrel Dietrich who organized the project. (AP Laserphoto)

CLOVIS, Calif. (AP) — When Darrel Dietrich saw the elderly woman's crumbling home, he was shocked. So he started a drive to get it repaired. Before the utility company official was done, 145 people had donated their time and materials to build 75-year-old Emma Traylor a new home valued at $25,000. "I didn't know what to say," Mrs. Traylor recalled Monday. "I didn't believe it."

But this past weekend Mrs. Traylor moved from her 240-square-foot cottage with its leaky roof into the new 600-square foot cottage complete with indoor bathroom. "It's beyond words," said Mrs. Traylor as she surveyed her new home. Dietrich, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. manager in this central California city, said he happened on Mrs. Traylor's home while checking a broken utility pole. He found shingles on the roof crumbling and aluminum foil tacked to the ceiling to keep out the rain. The one-room home was heated by a propane oven; the bathroom was outside — a converted chicken coop. Dietrich said he first got $100 in donations from fellow Rotary Club members to fix Mrs. Traylor's electrical service, but an electrician in the group volunteered to do the work for free. Then, Dietrich suggested the Rotarians pay to have a new roof and siding built on the old house. He found that was impractical because the structure was riddled with termites and dry rot. So, he suggested building a new house and began organizing volunteers. Members of the local carpenter's union local built the structure on weekends. Sheet metal workers donated a natural gas wall heater. The move also was handled by volunteers with Mrs. Traylor doing only the supervising because of her age and high blood pressure. Next weekend, the volunteers will tear down Mrs. Traylor's old cottage. In the meantime, she wants to get used to her new surroundings. "I just want to get settled, that's the main thing," she said. "I don't remember the last time I moved, but this time's the last, that's for sure."

An excellent physical education program has been developed for the children featuring gymnastics, folk dancing, basketball, softball, and many other activities to help with physical and social development of Academy children.

Conversational French is an added advantage in grades K-5. In grades 6 and 7, French culture is emphasized with a visual, oral, and written approach to the language and people. This in depth study of French culture prepares the student for French I in the eighth grade.

High standards of conduct and maximum effort on the part of students are essential at Pace Academy.

Extra curricular activities include: an optional trip to Europe, boy's basketball, girl's basketball, student government, and cheerleading.

All teachers hold North Carolina "A" certificates or Masters degrees in education. Each is carefully selected for their position at the Academy.

Emphasis is placed on small classes with not more than 25 students per class. All children must pass an entrance test before entering Pace Academy.

The Academy is now accepting applications in grades 1-8. We invite you to come out and visit our Academy if you are concerned about your child's education.

Notice of Nondiscriminatory Policy As to Students

Pace Academy admits students of any race, color, national or ethnic origin to all the rights, privileges, programs, and activities generally accorded or made available to students at the school. # Truck Runs On Propane FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — While soaring gasoline costs have forced many motorists to curb fuel consumption, a Fayetteville man drives his truck on a cheaper gas substitute.

 When Jim McElroy wheels up to the pumps, it's to a propane pump.
 "If you're paying 75 to 85 cents a gallon for gasoline and you can convert your car and pay 57 cents a gallon for propane, the savings in fuel alone, in time, will pay for the equipment needed to convert the engine," he says.
 McElroy, a Fayetteville propane distributor, says that in addition to the low cost of the fuel, extra benefits include fewer tune-ups and oil changes and longer engine life. He said the $1,000 cost of a conversion kit will, in time, be outweighed by fuel cost savings.
 McElroy said his truck is proof of the success of the conversion kit. He said it registers 131,000 miles on propane fuel and still starts with just a flick of the key.
 Gas dealers say mileage for propane-operated cars is lower for city driving compared to gasoline, while highway mileage is much better.
 McElroy said the $1,000 kit can be removed and attached to another vehicle when it's time to trade the car.
 The kit includes the fuel tank, priced about $400, hoses and the carburation system.
 McElroy said that until two months ago he got few, if any, calls about converting cars to propane. But, since the price of gasoline has been soaring he's getting between one and five calls a day.
 Already, he has 15 propane conversion kits on order, and they won't be delivered until September.

'Dirty Post Card' Display

PARISIAN SCENE—A stroller takes a look at the post cards on display at bookseller's stand along the embankments of the Seine, in Paris. In the background, on the other side of the Seine, stands the cathedral of Notre Dame.

By MARCUS ELIASON Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — With hardcore pornography comfortably settled in Paris, "le dir-tee post card" seems no naughtier than the stockinged leg of a can-can dancer. But the post card as art or history retains its humble corner in the pantheon of French passions.

The capacity of the post card to evoke laughter, nostalgia or distaste is being artfully displayed at a museum in Paris' Bois de Boulogne.

Each of the thousands of post cards on display is a captured splinter of time, bringing to life a faded world of handlebar mustaches, horse-drawn carts, shoeshine stands, billowing bonnets, thatched roofs, organ grinders and knee-length swimsuits.

There were days, these cards remind us, when people wrote with goose feathers, sculpting the "M" of a Mademoiselle with a zestful flourish.

French post cards were born in the 1870 Franco-German war. Bismarck had captured Strasbourg from Napoleon III.

So the city's Red Cross printed small message cards that could be carried to Paris by balloon. Homing pigeons were taken along in case the balloon didn't make it.

The balloons and pigeon post have vanished along with the sleazy hawkers who would tug the tourist's sleeve and hiss the oft-parodied line, "Do you want to buy a dirty post card?"

Today an old post card, whether it pictures a plump half-nude Victorian woman or a long-forgotten prime minister, is a collector's item to be rummaged for in the used-books stalls along the Seine River.

With the appearance in 1889 of the first picture post card, portraying the newly built Eiffel Tower, a major industry was born. By 1909, the Reunies Co. in France was printing half a million cards a day.

Some cards show little has changed in a hundred years. One portrays a policeman with a dog on a leash watching a park for hoodlums.

Another depicts a healthy young man with beard and shoulder-length hair scything garden weeds. He looks like a graduate of the 1960s back-to-the-land movement, and indeed, the post card's message is: "Sun, Earth, Work, Peace."

World War I made the post card a propaganda tool. Kaiser Wilhelm was pictured entwined in snakes.

There were post cards which, pasted together, formed lifesize portraits of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Another vogue was the series of post cards which told a story. These ranged from simple boy-meets-girl yarns to the 1890s' trial of army captain Alfred Dreyfus, an espionage case with anti-Semitic overtones that became a sort of French Watergate.

There were post cards for the social conscience — breadlines in 1906, street demonstrations in 1910 — and others portraying Mata Hari doing a belly dance.

The great poster designers did not disdain the post card as an art form, and cards by Alfons Mucha, Jules Cheret and Leonetto Cappiello sell today to collectors for hundreds of dollars each.

The French remain avid senders, as well as collectors, of post cards. The exhibit includes a model of a bistro bedecked with the 200 post cards the owner receives every summer from her vacationing customers.

HSA Meets On June 13

The Eastern Carolina Health Systems Agency will meet June 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Ramada Inn.

Included on the HSA agenda will be the consideration of the agency's Project Review Committee's recommendation for approval of the construction of a bed tower at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The 166-bed addition, and the conversion of 20 existing beds to intensive care unit status are part of the clinical training program of the East Carolina University School of Medicine program at the hospital.

Construction of the bed tower will be funded by the State as part of the medical school program.

In addition to other Project Review Committee reports, the HSA board will consider the annual implementation plan and review the preliminary fiscal 1980 budget.

George Is Still Most Popular

NEW YORK (AP) — Father Time may be catching up to the Father of Our Country. The greatest American Father of them all is still George Washington, according to an informal survey by Hallmark Cards, but his margin of victory was not as large as might be expected.

Twenty percent of the cross-section participating in the poll named Washington as their favorite father, while 17 percent selected Abraham Lincoln and 14 percent picked Bing Crosby.

The solid fourth-place finisher was "my own father," who received 8 percent of the vote. Other favorite fathers surfacing in the survey included Joseph Kennedy, John Wayne, Henry Ford, Ernest Hemingway, and "me."

Struggling For Mary Pickford, First Movie Rating In News Star Of America, Is Dead

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — About three years ago ABC relinquished its place as the laughing stock of network television when, through clever promotion and programming moves, it displaced CBS as the No. 1 network.

But ABC News carried on the tradition of No. 3. The estimable CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite was top-rated, getting about 30 percent of the viewers. NBC was garnering about 27 percent.

ABC, ever last here, could only attract 18 percent of the audience.

ABC decided to fix things. The network's first attempted remedy was the highly publicized acquisition of Barbara Walters from NBC as co-anchor of the evening news program. Typical ABC move, detractors said. If you can't be good, be gaudy.

Viewers tuned in for a couple of nights just to see what a million-dollar-a-year anchor person did. They promptly returned to Cronkite and Brinkley and "I Love Lucy" reruns.

Next, ABC announced that Rooney Arledge, the successful sports director, would be made chief of the news division, too. More typical ABC, rang the chorus. This will be the first network-level happy-talk news show.

It wasn't. In the 11 months since Arledge introduced the "World News Tonight," the show has climbed into a virtual second-place tie with NBC's evening news show. And for the first time in history, ABC News is holding its audience gains.

Arledge, a personable and forthright fellow, talked about his undertaking in an interview. "Well, the first objective was to not do what ABC has always done in the past — go for a quick-fix gimmick of some sort, with a superstar or something. I mean, they've always in the past thought they could change things just by buying Barbara Walters or Harry Reasoner or Jim Haggerty or whoever."

"I said that what we had to do was build a news department, that we had to make a product that, when we could get people to look at it, they would return to it...."

"First of all, I had to get rid of every one of the executives that had been here before, or reassign them...."

Then, he said, he wanted to get ABC's documentaries back to where they should be and also to use "Good Morning America" as a vehicle for people to see ABC News in a good showcase....

The "World News Tonight," was switched to a multi-anchor concept with anchormen in London, Washington and Chicago.

Arledge has spent 60 percent of his time working with the news division, and it has paid off.

"In the past," he says, "ABC has had so many problems that their priorities, understandably, did not include news on a very serious level... But we're making progress. I think we've gotten to the point where the public understands that ABC is serious about news."

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Mary Pickford, who reigned as America's Sweetheart during the colorful, formative period of American movies, is dead at 86 after 13 years of seclusion in her legendary home, Pickfair.

Her death Tuesday was attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage suffered last Friday.

The journey to the hospital was one of the few times Miss Pickford, whose golden curls and spunky innocence won her the adulation of millions, had emerged from the mansion since she withdrew from public life in 1966.

In 1976, she appeared before cameras at Pickfair to accept an honorary award "in recognition of her unique contribution to the film industry and the development of film as an artistic medium" from the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, which she helped found.

Miss Pickford was perhaps the first great international screen idol. In an era of such stars as Greta Garbo and Gloria Swanson, she was the first to have her name in marquee lights and the first to command thousands of dollars a week. She was box office gold for such movies as "Pollyanna" and "Poor Little Rich Girl."

The romance of the Pickford name grew when she married the screen's most dashing hero, Douglas Fairbanks Sr., in 1920. Even five years later, 300,000 people went to a Moscow train station to see them.

Miss Pickford was known around the world as "America's Sweetheart," a title that

'Coincidence'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Symphony's top administrator resigned Tuesday to accept a position with the Detroit Symphony.

Ralph O. Guthrie, 58, said his resignation was not related to the announcement Monday that conductor John Gosling would step down next year.

"It's just a coincidence. I don't know how you're going to convince people that the orchestra is not collapsing, but it's not," Guthrie said.

Guthrie came to North Carolina in 1975 as vice president and general manager of the state symphony. He said that he had planned to stay in North Carolina, but "Detroit made me an offer I absolutely could not refuse... they're paying me almost twice what I'm getting here."

Sesame Street To Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the world's most famous thoroughfares is moving to the nation's capital this summer.

To commemorate its 10th anniversary, "Sesame Street," the internationally-viewed children's educational television show, will be the subject of a three-month-long exhibition through Sept. 3 at the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of History and Technology.

In the free show are parts of the original Sesame Street set, including the door and steps of 1-2-3 Sesame Street; a 60-foot-long section of "the street" containing Big Bird's nest and Oscar the Grouch's trash can.

KING OF SWING IS 70 — Benny Goodman "The King of Swing" turns 70 today. He is shown here in a recent picture in his New York apartment. Decades after being recognized as the world's greatest jazz clarinet player, Goodman typically is taking nothing for granted. He practices daily, maintaining "every note counts." Goodman advises "you can't do it by memory. You have to work at it. Your fingers have to be limber. Your body has to be in shape." (AP Laserphoto) completely satisfied with anything I did. But my public accepted me at last as not only an adult, but an adult that has an illicit affair."

"Coquette" won her the Oscar as best actress. After the 1932 film, "Secrets," she quit acting. "I knew it was time to retire. I wanted to stop before I was asked to stop," she said.

Miss Pickford remained active in the film industry. She retained ownership in United Artists, which she had founded in 1920 with Fairbanks, Chaplin and Griffith. She produced movies, starred on radio and helped found the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

Fairbanks and Miss Pickford divorced in 1936 and the following year she married Charles "Buddy" Rogers, who had been her co-star in the 1927 "My Best Girl." They had two foster children, Ronald Pickford Rogers and Roxanne Pickford Rogers.

Her fortune was estimated at $50 million.

Funeral services were pending.

Yesterday's Cryptiquip - WOULD THE BEST BULL DARE WOO THE SACRED COW?

Today's Cryptiquip clue: W equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. ## Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Longtime Drinker Fears Liver Damage

I'm not a heavy drinker, but I have drunk alcohol over a long period of time. When a friend of mine, who is really a heavy drinker, developed cirrhosis of the liver, I began to worry about myself. Even though I'm in good health, is there a way of finding out if I'm heading for trouble? — Mr. C.O., Mass.

Dear Mr. O.:

You are very wise to give consideration to the state of your health, and especially to your liver since you do have a history of prolonged alcoholic intake.

Doctors have observed for a long time that people react with tremendous anxiety when a friend or relative comes down with a heart, liver or lung condition, or other severe medical problems. Their anxiety mounts until they seek the medical attention that they probably have avoided up to that point.

Yes, it is possible to study your liver and to learn if it is functioning properly. The so-called "liver profile" is a series of chemical tests which, with remarkable accuracy, reflects the health of the liver and its capacity to function. There are probably about 15 complicated and sophisticated tests included in these liver function studies. These should be done in your case, mostly to give you the assurance that you obviously need.

My 4-year-old daughter was left with two scars on her face after a bout of chicken pox. Our concern is whether these will eventually go away when she gets older. If not, can anything be done about it later on? — Mrs. R.E., Va.

Dear Mrs. E.:

Facial scars due to chicken pox, acne and injury can be removed in a number of ways. Small ones can often be eliminated by a process known as "dermabrasion." It is a simple procedure and is often done in the doctor's office. After anesthetizing the skin, a high-speed rotary abrasive brush removes the outer layer of skin. Then, when healing follows, a smooth surface replaces the pitted marks. The crust that appears remains on the skin for about 10 days. In carefully selected cases, this procedure is very effective.

Only in some isolated cases is plastic surgery resorted to.

We hope to make a trip to India in the fall with two of our young children. I know they will resent injections and I'd like to cut them down to a minimum. What tests are absolutely essential for safety? — Mr. J.R., N.M.

Dear Mr. R.:

Most European countries have excellent control over their water and milk supplies. This is not always true in tropical, sub-tropical and Far Eastern countries. The United States Health Department, the Armed Forces and local health officials are constantly kept abreast of the need for inoculations for visitors to foreign lands. Typhoid, paratyphoid, yellow fever, cholera and smallpox inoculations are essential for travelers to India and neighboring areas.

Principal Also School's Cook

ANDOVER, Conn. (UPI) — The principal is also the cook at the Andover elementary school.

David Kravet makes french toast or pancakes and bakes zucchini muffins every Friday for as many as three dozen children who eat breakfast at school five mornings a week.

Kravet's breakfast program is one of several projects he began after heading up the 250-student school five years ago.

He also organized the school's vegetable garden, using a U.S. Department of Labor program to hire two local high school youths as gardeners. The U.S. Department of Agriculture helps pay for both programs.

Author, 70, Chops Wood To 'Relax'

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — When Wallace Stegner tires of writing, he chops wood. "It relaxes me," says Stegner.

"My wife and I live outside of San Francisco. We've got three acres and there are a lot of trees that need pruning or cutting. So, after I write for maybe four hours, I stop and become a handyman. I've got a real Vermont woodpile in California. We live among the wild-life and the woodpile, very quietly."

Stegner has spent much of his 70 years on the move — living in Iowa, North Dakota, Washington, Saskatchewan, Montana, Utah, Nevada and California.

"It was like living in a covered wagon," he recalls with a smile. "I did a lot of roaming, but now I've decided to settle down."

The West plays a major part in some of his more than 20 fiction and non-fiction books, but Stegner says, "I wouldn't like to be tagged as a Western writer, the West is the country I know and like the best. But my feeling is that while I write about people who happen to live in the West, these people would be legitimate anywhere."

His latest novel, "Recapitulation," is set in Salt Lake City. "I went to high school and college there," he says. "I worked my way through the University of Utah driving a delivery truck for a rug and linoleum house. Driving a truck is a splendid way to learn a town, you go all over the place, and I drew on the knowledge I acquired back then for this book."

After taking his doctorate in 1935 in American literature, Stegner continued with a teaching career that lasted until 1971.

While teaching he sold short stories and finished a short novel. The book, "Remembering Laughter" won a publishing house competition in 1937 and earned him a prize of $2,500. "After that," he says, "there was no going back, there was no alternative."

Stegner says that during his later teaching years he would combine history writing with teaching because "you feel you are getting something done by going to the library for a couple of hours and taking necessary notes."

Fiction was different. "I wrote my novels while on vacation. You can't work on a novel for a couple of hours and then quit. You have to submerge yourself in your story and stay under..."

He says he was a teen-ager when he decided to be a writer. But it wasn't, he says, until he won the National Book Award and the Pulitzer prize that "my not very confident suspicion that I was a novelist was reassured..."

Stegner won the NBA for "The Spectator Bird" in 1977 and the Pulitzer for "Angle of Repose" in 1972.

Stegner says he quit teaching 1971 and "was glad to be done with it. All my life I had been doing two jobs, and it was a relief to get back to one — writing."

"Besides, I had a sense of time passing, of hearing time's chariot drawing just a little closer. I figured I had a few more years to write books and I'd better make the most of it."

Author, 70, Chops Wood To 'Relax'

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — When Wallace Stegner tires of writing, he chops wood. "It relaxes me," says Stegner.

"My wife and I live outside of San Francisco. We've got three acres and there are a lot of trees that need pruning or cutting. So, after I write for maybe four hours, I stop and become a handyman. I've got a real Vermont woodpile in California. We live among the wild-life and the woodpile, very quietly."

Stegner has spent much of his 70 years on the move — living in Iowa, North Dakota, Washington, Saskatchewan, Montana, Utah, Nevada and California.

"It was like living in a covered wagon," he recalls with a smile. "I did a lot of roaming, but now I've decided to settle down."

The West plays a major part in some of his more than 20 fiction and non-fiction books, but Stegner says, "I wouldn't like to be tagged as a Western writer, the West is the country I know and like the best. But my feeling is that while I write about people who happen to live in the West, these people would be legitimate anywhere."

His latest novel, "Recapitulation," is set in Salt Lake City. "I went to high school and college there," he says. "I worked my way through the University of Utah driving a delivery truck for a rug and linoleum house. Driving a truck is a splendid way to learn a town, you go all over the place, and I drew on the knowledge I acquired back then for this book."

After taking his doctorate in 1935 in American literature, Stegner continued with a teaching career that lasted until 1971.

While teaching he sold short stories and finished a short novel. The book, "Remembering Laughter" won a publishing house competition in 1937 and earned him a prize of $2,500. "After that," he says, "there was no going back, there was no alternative."

Fiction was different. "I wrote my novels while on vacation. You can't work on a novel for a couple of hours and then quit. You have to submerge yourself in your story and stay under..."

He says he was a teen-ager when he decided to be a writer. But it wasn't, he says, until he won the National Book Award and the Pulitzer prize that "my not very confident suspicion that I was a novelist was reassured..."

Stegner won the NBA for "The Spectator Bird" in 1977 and the Pulitzer for "Angle of Repose" in 1972.

Stegner says he quit teaching in 1971 and "was glad to be done with it. All my life I had been doing two jobs, and it was a relief to get back to one — writing."

University Helps Ease Prison Life

By GEORGE TIBBITS
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) —
Some University of Utah students can pick up three credit hours this summer in how to get along in prison.

One student who's taken the course, David Savard, said it had taught him more about himself, although the prerequisite was a little tough. In his case, a 1-to-15 year term for armed robbery.

Created and taught by university Division of Health Science professors Gerald Braza and Bryan Smith, the course helps inmates cope with physical and emotional strains of confinement at the Point of the Mountain prison. The class is offered through an inmate education program under a Division of Corrections contract with the university.

Braza said inmates were encouraged to take more responsibility for their health and behavior by learning methods of solving problems, handling stress and dealing with emotions.

The weekly class, first taught last summer, also teaches better personal health care and fitness, he said. As a result, some students have given up the traditional prison exercise of weightlifting to become joggers.

Weightlifting is popular because inmates can readily see results in the mirror. But "inmates often overdo it with weights and pay scant attention to other components of good health," Braza said.

He started some of the inmates running, and it's been so successful the prison now holds a semi-annual five-mile race.

Savard, 42, was one of about 25 medium and maximum security inmates in the course last fall. He said it had boosted his self-esteem and sense of responsibility and had made life easier "not only at the prison but in the sense of what I want to do when I leave here."

He credits the class with moving him toward a Utah degree in psychology, with a goal of going into alcohol counseling and therapy.

"When I started this program, it was like a dream — 'What the hell, I would try for it,'" he said of his major. "The class has made it a reality. In five quarters I'm halfway home to a bachelor's degree."

Assignments include keeping diaries and carrying out behavior-change projects, such as losing weight, stopping smoking or reducing tension.

"Confinement, by its very nature, creates a lot of stress and tension, which a lot of inmates have difficulty understanding and handling," Braza said. "We had a lot of discussions on controlling tempers and reducing anxieties in a prison environment."

Braza said some students, after release to half-way houses, had gone on to do well as full-time university students. "I'd say about 75 percent were affected by the class, one way or the other," Savard said.

"I gained a lot from working with the prisoners since I no longer have a stereotype on what a prisoner is like," Braza said. "Their needs are just the same as others'."

KROGER SAV-ON MEATS

Sliced pork loins with natural proportions of center cuts. What some stores call "sliced quarter pork loin" is all skimpy first cuts at "a hot price" because the choice center cuts will go at a premium price. Never at Kroger Sav-On. When you buy a pork loin (sliced) the package will contain a natural proportion of center cuts and first or end cuts. That seems fair and right to us. We're sure it does to you!

In the Kroger Sav-On garden most of our fresh fruits and vegetables are in bulk displays as opposed to pre-packaged, as many stores have. You can choose one green pepper or 5, one lemon or a dozen, and YOU pick and choose the one you want. Then take your choice to the "Gardener" for weighing and pricing. Your Kroger Sav-On "Gardener" will be pleased to answer your questions about any of the hundreds of fresh fruits and vegetables we have here for you.

HEARTY CHEF'S SALAD

Another all-time
FAVORITE RECIPE from McCall's

- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 1 cup red-wine vinegar
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1 1/2 teaspoons dry mustard
- 1 1/2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 small avocado, cubed
- 1 cup thinly sliced raw mushrooms
- 1 quart crisp bite-size pieces Boston lettuce
- 1 quart crisp bite-size pieces romaine
- 1 cup chopped watercress
- 1 bunch scallions, sliced
- 1/4 pound ham, cut into thin strips
- 1/4 pound Swiss cheese, cut into thin strips

- 1/4 pound cooked chicken, cut into thin strips
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, cut into quarters

1. In a pint jar with tight-fitting lid, combine oil, vinegar, salt, mustard, sugar, and pepper. Shake vigorously.

2. Coat avocado and mushrooms, each in a small bowl, with dressing. Refrigerate rest of dressing and all salad ingredients.
