

New City, Utilities Budget Presented

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The City Council received for its consideration today the proposed 1979-80 operating budget for the city and Greenville Utilities Commission.

The proposed budget package amounts to $41,651,121 and reflects a city total of $8,823,567 and a Greenville Utilities total of $33,247,700.

According to City Manager Ed Wyatt, the proposed city budget represents an increase of some 4.42 percent over the revised appropriation for 1978-79 of $8,450,221, while the GUC total reflects a decrease of less than one percent from the $33,549,452 adopted last year.

Wyatt, who explained that the city segment excludes a $736,203 grant from the Urban Mass Transit Administration, pointed out that the proposed operating package for the city does not include on-going appropriations for the Community Development program, Public Works facility, and recreation land capital project fund.

The city manager, in his budget message to the Council, reported that his "recommendation presents an unbalanced budget which is now permitted by the General Statutes."

Wyatt explained today that the budget is presented in an unbalanced amount of $137,271 and he is proposing alternatives as possible ways to bring the total nearer a balanced figure. Alternatives available, he said, are a moderate tax increase of up to four cents and/or reduction in service levels. A third alternative is the continued review of revenues, he suggested.

The present tax rate structure involves a 70 cents per $100 valuation and Wyatt said that he is not proposing a tax figure but rather offering alternatives to help balance the budget and maintain the present tax level.

Wyatt termed the 1979-80 proposal a "bare budget" that provides for the same level of services now offered. He said that "substantial needs for additional personnel, 18 in number, and also equipment needs have been eliminated from the proposed budget."

The official added, "With the present financial situation, the city's department heads and agencies funded by the city have been most cooperative in realizing our budget situation." The department heads, he noted, "have been particularly cooperative in anticipating unspent funds that can be reappropriated."

Overall, the proposed 1979-80 operating figure includes: $7,408,410 General Fund (up 3.61 percent from 1978-79); $659,510 Revenue

Sharing Fund; $549,632 Debt Service; $138,174 Public Transportation; and $67,841 Parking Authority.

Wyatt said in his budget message that a five percent cost of living salary adjustment.

No Changes Reported In Unemployment Data

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment remained unchanged in May at 5.8 percent of the labor force, showing that the slowdown in economic growth in recent months has not yet forced people out of work in large numbers.

But Labor Department figures today showed that employment in manufacturing industries did decline slightly for the second consecutive month. These job losses were offset, however, by gains in other areas.

The department said an additional 65,000 workers were employed in highway and street construction, "probably due to heightened road repair activity resulting from severe winter storms."

It said employment rolls also were bolstered by the return of 50,000 workers who had been jobless in April as a result of the trucking strike and lockout.

The 5.8 percent unemployment rate in May, unchanged from April, remained close to the five-year low of 5.7 percent set in March.

The unemployment rate seems to be defying other economic indicators showing that economic growth is slowing significantly as a result of Carter administration efforts to contain runaway inflation.

Administration officials say unemployment will increase sooner or later this year as a result of the winding down of the economy, but the Labor Department figures showed this has not happened yet.

The department's report gave this breakdown by population category in May, compared with April:

—Adult men: 3.9 percent in May, down from 4 percent in April.
—Adult women: 5.8 percent, up from 5.7 percent.
—Teen-agers: 16.8 percent, up from 16.5 percent.
—Whites: 5 percent, up from 4.9 percent.
—Blacks and other minorities: 11.6 percent, down from 11.8 percent.
—Minority teen-agers: 36.9 percent, up from 34.5 percent.

—Full-time workers: 5.2 percent, down from 5.3 percent.
—White-collar workers: 3.2 percent, down from 3.3 percent.
—Blue-collar workers: 6.7 percent, down from 6.9 percent.

The nation's unemployment rate has been in the 5.7 percent to 5.9 percent range for the past 10 months. It was 6.1 percent in May 1978.

The Labor Department said total employment in the economy increased by 140,000 in May following a sharp decline in April. Last month's increase raised the number of persons with jobs 96.3 million, up 2.4 million from a year earlier. Some 5.9 million persons were jobless.

The department said its separate survey of industrial payrolls showed that employment in manufacturing fell by 31,000, the second consecutive decline in that sector. But those losses were offset by gains in construction, primarily of highways; transportation and public utilities and wholesale and retail trade.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said Thursday that unemployment undoubtedly will increase in future months as a result of the apparent slowdown in economic growth.

Accused Killer Of Three Lawmen Finally Captured

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — After surrounding a mountain thicket throughout the night, a small army of law-enforcement officers today arrested a 50-year-old textile worker in connection with a shooting rampage that left two sheriff's deputies and a highway patrolman dead.

Authorities said James Williams Hutchins yelled at officers and fired at them from a 300-acre, jungle-like tract before he surrendered as a pack of trained attack dogs was sent to the area.

Hutchins, accused of beginning the shooting spree during a family quarrel over spiked punch his 17-year-old daughter wanted to take to a high-school graduation party, was taken under heavy guard to the Cleveland County Law Enforcement Center at Shelby.

Larry Davis, a highway patrolman from Forest City, said he and several other officers came upon Hutchins in the thicket about midnight and stayed near him until daybreak.

"We walked up and he said 'Who are you?'" Davis said. "One of our men said, 'Who are you?' and he said 'I'm Hutchins.'"

"We hit the dirt and he said 'You goddamn sons of bitches, I'll kill you if you come any closer,'" a muffled and sweating Davis said shortly after Hutchins was arrested. He said Hutchins accused the dead officers of beating him with a blackjack.

When Hutchins surrendered at 7:13 a.m., he left behind a high-powered rifle and shotgun that he had taken with him from his house, officers said.

Rutherford County sheriff's Capt. Roy Huskey, 48, brother of Sheriff Damon Huskey, and deputy Sgt. Owen Messersmith, 58, were shot at Hutchins' residence. Highway patrolman R.L. "Pete" Peterson was killed when he apparently tried to arrest Hutchins after Hutchins fled the scene of the two earlier shootings, investigators said.

Davis and other officers said Hutchins fired two blasts from a shotgun at about 6 a.m. and that they returned the fire sporadically.

Sheriff Huskey, his eyes red and voice breaking, told reporters the shooting was "a personal tragedy for me. I'm just glad it's over. I'm glad he was brought out alive and nobody else was hurt."

Five agents of the State Bureau of Investigation in two cars took Hutchins to Shelby. Officers surrounded the suspect as he was hustled into the Cleveland County Law Enforcement Center.

Authorities initially set up a command post at a lumber office in the tiny Gilkey community. Armed civilians lounged on the fringes of the post as officers tried to coordinate the search for Hutchins, an expert rifleman with a violent past. The command post was later

DIAL A TEEN

I am looking for someone to cut my yard. It's very small, but I don't have a lawnmower. Are there any young boys who can cut my yard? G.

Hotline asked Mrs. Mary Smith, director of REAL Crisis Intervention, Inc., about the "Dial A Teen" service offered by that local center.

"We have youth here, between 13 and 19 years old, who are interested in doing any type of work at all, especially yard work this summer," said Mrs. Smith. "Some of them have their own equipment, including lawn mowers."

According to Mrs. Smith, REAL makes no profit from the service which is available to anyone living in Pitt County. She explained that all money exchanged is done so between the employer and the worker. However, she added that after each job is completed, REAL contacts both the employer and the worker to receive possible complaints from both parties.

If an employer submits a complaint about a worker, that worker may be removed from the "Dial A Teen" service.

In addition to yard work, Mrs. Smith said workers also perform office work (typing included), babysit, clean-up construction areas, houses and garages, wash windows, paint, help farmers, etc. In fact, she said the workers perform practically any type of temporary part-time job.

"We prefer 24-hour notice. It makes things a lot easier, since most of these kids are in school," said Mrs. Smith.

During summer, 30 to 40 jobs are performed by the workers each month. Persons interested in placing a job order with the "Dial A Teen" service should call 758-1976 or visit the REAL Center on 1117 Evans St. from 8 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Lockheed Corp. Pleads Guilty In Payoff Case

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Lockheed Corp. pleaded guilty today to federal charges stemming from payoffs to former Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka and other Japanese officials and agreed to pay $647,000 in fines.

The Justice Department filed a 10-count criminal information in U.S. District Court here and Lockheed admitted guilt to four counts of wire fraud and four counts of making false statements to the government to conceal the payoffs.

The government said the payoffs were made from October 1972 to August 1974 and included $1.8 million to Tanaka.

Lockheed also pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor violations of customs law in connection with transporting $17,000 in Japanese currency from Los Angeles to Tokyo and $37,000 in U.S. currency from Atlanta, Ga., to Mexico in 1974.

Today's settlement ended a 2½-year criminal investigation in which the government decided not to file charges against former Lockheed Board Chairman Daniel J. Haughton and former Lockheed President A. Carl Kotchian.

According to Lockheed's previous admissions to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the company paid at least $30 million secretly to government officials, military officers and consultants in 19 countries.

The government said Lockheed concealed from the U.S. Export-Import Bank payoffs made in Japan to get contracts to sell 21 L-1011 wide-bodied jet planes to All-Nippon Airlines, a Japanese passenger airline.

The government said

Lockheed paid $50,000 in Japanese currency to officials of All-Nippon for each of the first L-1011s sold to the Japanese airline. And it said the company paid $100,000 in

Monday Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of a request from the Mid-East Commission for a resolution supporting Regional Historic Restoration Planning, approval of the final plat of the Donald R. Warren subdivision near Stokes, and consider a resolution authorizing the acceptance of a Federal Aviation Administration grant for the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Commissioners will also consider resignations and appointments to the following bodies: Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees; the Pitt County Development Commission; Pitt Technical Institute's board; Sedimentation Control Commission; Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority; Pitt Mental Health Area Board; Greenville Board of Adjustments; the Pitt County Nursing Home Advisory Committee, and the Pitt County Planning Board.

The board will also consider a request from the Town of Farmville's Recreation and Parks Division for approval of a fireworks display on July 4.

Japanese currency in the fall of 1972 to six Japanese political officials.

A criminal information is an alternative to a grand jury indictment in some criminal cases and is, in effect, a statement of criminal charges by the government.

A law prohibiting bribes to foreign officials did not take effect until 1978 and therefore the government cannot specifically charge that the payoffs themselves were illegal.

But the government now has used a procedure similar to today's action against Lockheed in four previous cases involving corporate payoffs to expose the activities and to penalize the companies with fines. There has been no criminal prosecution of individuals.

Lockheed lied to the Export-Import Bank in the early 1970s when it denied it had made payments to foreign officials to influence overseas sales, the government charged.

Lockheed has since said it has made no improper payments abroad since 1972.

Thatcher Seeks Refugee Plan

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is urging an immediate conference to organize an international operation to resettle the thousands of Vietnamese fleeing their country.

"Regrettably the majority of member states are doing little to help ... although many have capacity to resettle and give new hope to these unhappy people from Indochina," Mrs. Thatcher said in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Decontrol Is Begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — You won't be able to tell from the price on the local gasoline pump, but today marks the beginning of the end of federal price controls on crude oil.

While some may consider it a dramatic change, the Energy Department estimates that no more than 31 percent of the nation's total crude oil supply is still under price controls anyway.

That means consumers are already paying uncontrolled world prices for the other 69 percent.

Taking controls off the remaining 31 percent may raise the price of gasoline and other petroleum products by perhaps 5 to 7 cents a gallon over the next 27 months, the Energy Department has estimated.

Energy officials suggest the increases will come in a slowpaced series of steps so small they should hardly be noticed against the larger effects of foreign oil price increases and general inflation.

"Against all the 'noise' in the marketplace, it's going to be hard for the consumer to notice it and say: 'Gee, the price went up a penny due to decontrol,'" James Voyco, a special assistant for policy analysis, said Thursday in an interview.

The ultimate impact will depend on how high world oil prices climb. Under Carter's policy, domestic oil prices would match world prices by October 1981.

The prices of crude oil produced in the United States have been under federal price controls since general price controls were imposed in former President Richard M. Nixon's anti-inflation program.

TWO INJURED IN WRECK — Two Greenville men were injured this morning in a one vehicle accident near Greenville. According to Trooper Alan Basnight, a truck driven by William Horace Teel was headed north on rural paved road 1204, when it apparently ran off the right side of the road onto a soft shoulder. Basnight said the truck traveled about 150 feet before striking a culvert, throwing Teel through the windshield. A passenger in the truck identified as Jesse Leroy Barnes was also injured. The truck, according to the investigator, caught on fire, and two men working near by, identified as Kelly Adams, and Daniel Blount saw the accident and pulled Barnes from the wreckage and moved Teel away from the burning vehicle. A car Teel was transporting on the rear of the truck was thrown off. Damage estimates were not available. Basnight said Teel was seriously injured and there was no report of Barnes' injuries. Always Some Customers For His Marvelous Mess Of Junk

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass. (AP) — Earl Jones comes by his talent genetically. "My father," he said, "could sell stump holes."

His father was a preacher who traveled from town to town persuading people to give him money to build churches. Earl doesn't have to persuade. People line up to fork over money to Earl. In exchange he gives them, for the most part, junk.

"Sometimes I stand in my room on a Saturday afternoon looking out the window shaking my head. You wouldn't believe what people will buy. Put it out there, somebody will buy it."

What Earl Jones sees from his window is five acres of marvelous mess.

In the Berkshire hills, countless antiques stores line the winding roads. Even more numerous are barns and sheds advertising "collectibles," stuff from old attics too useless to keep but too nostalgic to toss out.

Among the latter emporiums, Earl Jones' wins first prize. Only the strong of will can pass up such curious clutter.

Weathered, pumps, horse-shoes, old brass beds, new brass beds, whiskey barrels, wagon wheels, rusty tools, dishes, churns — name it, it is there, scattered in wonderful confusion among five labyrinthine buildings and all the spaces between.

Earl dumped a thriving real estate business to get into this chaos. "That was in 1965," he said. "I was 55 and my late wife, Moxie, decided all the moving around we did trading in real estate was too hectic a life. I agreed. She thought it would be nice if we had a little antiques shop to keep us busy.

"I agreed with that, too. Look what happened. Now I have a dozen people working here and six big trucks rolling from Canada to Florida, buying, selling, trading."

One of the properties Earl owned was a turn-of-the-century prep school for boys, the Hallock School.

He and his wife moved into the dorm, a grand old building with big white columns built in 1890, an antique itself. They took the headmaster's suite as an apartment and opened their little shop in the parlor.

"I began buying antiques, and also 'uniques,' as I call them," Earl said. "Whichever, everything I bought we sold. All we had to do was let it sit around here long enough."

As their stock — collectibles — began to multiply like rabbits (which he sells, made of porcelain) they built shelves in other buildings, the classrooms, the chapel.

Those full, he built another building, and another. He added a 40-foot trailer, stocked it, added two more. What doesn't fit inside he just scatters around the lawn.

"I suppose it is impressive," he said, surveying his domain of disarray. "Especially when you realize that all we really wanted was a few shelves with dishes on them."

Energy 'Summit' Killed By Congressional Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top congressional leaders, while claiming they want to de-emphasize party differences with President Carter, have torpedoed a White House attempt to stage a Camp David "energy summit" this weekend.

The president still plans to have several members of Congress and their families at the presidential retreat — but the two top House leaders will be absent and the White House is now stressing that the event is really just a social occasion.

Both House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and House Majority Leader Jim Wright acknowledged Thursday they had turned down presidential invitations to the get-together.

Both said they had other commitments.

But congressional sources, who requested anonymity, said the two House leaders had expressed coolness earlier this week when approached by chief White House lobbyist Frank Moore on the possibility of an "energy summit."

White House officials maintain that the purpose of the Camp David gathering is social. Presidential spokesman Jody Powell claimed the president had invited a few House members to what he called a "primarily social" meeting Saturday.

The president was to fly to the retreat today and remain there until late Saturday afternoon. Tomorrow night he is scheduled to speak at a Democratic party function in Indianapolis.

Powell would not say how many members of the House were coming nor who had been invited.

As to the decision of O'Neill and Wright to turn down Carter's invitation, a White House official who refused to be identified said: "I'm sure if they did it, it was for good reason."

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd also turned thumbs down to an earlier version of the proposal that would have brought both House and Senate leaders to Camp David, the sources said.

Byrd, O'Neill and other top Democratic leaders were fearful such a highly-publicized session would do more to dramatize the deep divisions within the Democratic party over energy policy than to present a united front on energy problems.

Democratic leaders met in O'Neill's office Thursday and agreed they should support "positive, upbeat" programs to deal with the energy crisis and to de-emphasize the differences among themselves and with the president on controversial issues like oil decontrol.

Just last week the House Democratic Caucus approved 138 to 69 a nonbinding resolution opposing the president's decision to gradually lift price controls from domestic crude oil.

Carter's decontrol program begins today. Under it, the price gap between U.S. oil and world oil — now on the order of $7 a barrel — would disappear by mid-1981.

Earlier in May, the House overwhelmingly rejected Carter's standby gasoline rationing plan.

Still Puzzled By Event At Three-Mile Island

By H. JOSEF HERBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine weeks after the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island, investigators remain puzzled by a number of mysteries surrounding the event. Some, they concede, may never be answered.

Detailed sequences of events, tracing second by second almost every move by plant operators during the crisis, have been compiled by federal authorities as well as the plant's owners.

The shift operators, utility executives and Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff have been quizzed repeatedly by congressional investigators and a presidential commission.

The commission, in the last day of three days of hearings, was scheduled to hear from the five NRC commissioners today.

But so far, a number of key events that occurred at the plant after the March 28 accident remain shrouded in mystery.

—Why were two valves of a critical auxiliary cooling system shut, blocking water from cooling the reactor core, when they should have been open? Who shut them and when?

—Was the release two days after the accident of a puff of high level radiation — which nearly caused Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh to order an evacuation — intentional or accidental?

—Why did an electromagnetic relief valve, for no apparent reason, become stuck in the open position when it should have closed, allowing the loss of coolant for more than two hours and contributing significantly to the severity of the accident?

The mystery of the closed auxiliary cooling system valves may never be answered, sources involved in the investigations say. Four utility employees insisted under oath Wednesday before the presidential commission they left the valves open after examining the system 42 hours before the accident.

"At this moment we haven't got any clues on how...those valves got closed," presidential commission chairman John G. Kemeny told reporters Thursday.

Another major contributor to the accident was the open electromagnetic pressure relief valve in the cooling system.

Plant operators could give no explanation as to why it might have stuck open, although Harold Denton, a top ranking NRC staff technician, said Thursday problems with that valve had surfaced before the accident as well.

She wore a chapel length mantilla bordered in re-embroidered lace held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in matching lace. She carried a cascade of gardenias, stephanotis and white sweetheart roses with greenery.

A List Of 'Don'ts' For Recent Widows

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am getting so much advice I am dizzy, and here I am asking you for more advice yet, which only proves how mixed up I am.

My husband dropped dead of a massive heart attack three weeks ago. He was only 55 and never had any kind of heart trouble, so you can imagine how shocked I was when he died in the middle of a poker game.

Now I am getting advice from all sides. My sister tells me to sell my house and move into an apartment. My brother tells me to keep the house—it will be worth more next year. One friend tells me to take a trip. Another friend says, "Stay home. You can't run away from yourself."

I'm also getting business advice. Some say, "Sell the business and put your money into securities." Others say, "Hang on to the business and run it yourself."

Abby, how does a widow know who to listen to?

CONFUSED IN BUFFALO

DEAR CONFUSED: The best advice I can give you is to take no advice while you are in a state of confusion. You have suffered an enormous shock and need more time to think things through before making any decisions.

In the meantime, don't sell anything, don't buy anything, and don't sign anything. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am 57 and John is 62. We have been going together for nearly four years. I've been married and so has he, and neither of us wants to get married again, but we do enjoy each other's company. We do NOT live together, but I'm not saying we haven't spent some nights together.

We also have taken some wonderful trips together. What I am saying is that we are very close—like a married couple, only we don't live together.

What do I call him when I introduce him to people, or refer to him? It sounds so foolish to call him my boyfriend. He's not my fiancé because we have no plans to marry. He's more than an escort, but I certainly wouldn't call him my lover.

Please advise.

OUT OF IDEAS IN BIG D

DEAR OUT: Introduce him as your friend. The nature of your relationship need not be explained.

DEAR ABBY: You made the statement that a child cannot be darker than his darker parent.

That is correct, Abby, if only ONE parent has Negro genes. Skin color has no dominance but is a blending of genes.

It is possible, however for a child to be darker than either of his parents if—and only if—both parents carry Negro genes.

Your answer needs to be clarified. I have known such occurrences to cause husbands to unjustly accuse their wives of adultery.

My authority is "Principles of Human Genetics" by Curt Stern, published by W.H. Freeman & Co., San Francisco, Calif. (1956), pages 325 to 332.

REPROVING YOUR POINT

CONFIDENTIAL TO "R.T. IN THE VALLEY": If you love something, set it free. If it comes back to you, it's yours. If it doesn't, it never was.

DEAR ABBY: I used to get upset because my husband forgot birthdays and anniversaries until I recalled how my father used to go out with the boys on Saturday night, come home in a cab, broke, drunk and ready to fight at 3 in the morning.

Dad was a wonderful, attractive, smart man, but he just couldn't handle his liquor. Eventually he lost his job, then his self-respect. From then on, it was downhill all the way.

So now I rate my husband five stars for coming home sober every night.

Four stars for fidelity.

Three stars for paying the bills.

Two stars for being a good father to our kids.

One star for working harder than he'd have had to work if he had stayed single.

And minus one star for forgetting occasions like anniversaries and birthdays.

So my man still gets 14 stars. Not bad, huh?

Soft Drinks

Remain Popular

Even though the consumption of soft drinks per person has increased 133 percent in the past 20 years, the popular flavors remain the same.

Colas still make up 61 percent of total, though part of this is diet cola now.

Fruit-flavored soft drinks have increased from 17 to 20 percent of the market, but the other standard flavors—root beer, sarsaparilla, cream soda, ginger ale, club soda and quinine—have all lost ground, report specialists with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

Save On Ingredients, Fuel

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Many ethnic foods can save money on your food budget at least three ways: with inexpensive ingredients, or small amounts of costlier ones, and fuel-saving cooking methods.

Several recent cookbooks provide good examples galore:

Introducing Chinese Casserole Cookery, by Lilah Kan (Workman $4.95) paper is a fuel saver because all its recipes call for rangetop cooking. Although each casserole tends to take an hour or more to cook, the amount of fuel needed is far less than would be used for the same dish in a full-size oven.

The long cooking times don't necessarily put the recipes off limits for working women. Like most rangetop casseroles, their flavor improves when they are allowed to mellow overnight in the refrigerator. However, the soy sauce content makes them unsuitable for people on low-sodium diets, and a few recipes also call for expensive shellfish in substantial amounts.

In Pasta International, Gertrude Harris (101 Productions $4.95 paper) has divided recipes according to their sauces: the vegetable, fruits and nuts, and eggs, cream and cheese chapters are chock full of good ideas for reasonably priced main courses. Many are suitable for vegetarians if the meal planner is careful to get additional protein from other sources such as dairy products and in other courses such as salads and certain desserts. Even the seafood chapter includes a few money-saving ideas, including Italian style tuna sauce for spaghetti, tuna and sour cream mold and some clam recipes made with canned bivalves.

The recipes in Flavor of Mexico, by Angeles de la Rosa and C. Gandia de Fernandez (101 Productions $4.95 paper) were adapted from two books published in Mexico in 1972 and 1975. They tend to be peppery hot and call for special chilis and other ingredients available by mail from sources listed in the book.

How economical a recipe is depends to some extent on the quantity of special ingredients used and whether one must obtain them by mail instead of buying at a local market. And, of course, the oven recipes use more of increasingly costly cooking fuels than rangetop foods.

The economics of baking your own breads—yeast and-or quick—are complex: you can save fuel energy if you bake enough at one time to fill the oven to capacity. But fuel energy for freezing the extras could outweigh the savings if you crammed your freezer with such food, leaving too little space for good buys in high ticket ingredients such as meat, poultry, fish and seafood. The home economics department at your public utility may have helpful advice on this, based on local fuel rates.

That said, The Garden Way Bread Book, by Ellen Foscoe Johnson (Garden Way Publishing $14.95 hardcover, $8.95 paper) is a gold mine of unusual recipes: carrot corn bread, yogurt doughnuts, parmesan batter bread and French bread made with beer, for example. Because Mrs. Johnson favors honey as a sweetener, her breads seem to keep better and longer than comparable recipes made with sugar. The recipes are arranged seasonally, but obviously can be made whenever a baker chooses. The book's one flaw is failure to specify that flour should be sifted before measuring for all the non-yeast recipes. Otherwise, you end up with stiff batters and unpleasantly dry results.

Brown Bagging It, by Adeline Garner Shell and Kay Reynolds (Sovereign $3.95 paper) is a good choice for people who want either specific recipes or suggestions for what to tote to the office, factory, school or elsewhere. It's hard to imagine many people taking the trouble to make gaspacho or cioppino or other fancy soups for their vacuum bottles. But the book represents good value for, among other things, tips on how to pack what to ensure safety as well as quality from home to mealtime. Other commendable features include a calorie-control chapter, a handy salad scanner and a long list of ingredients and suggestions for their uses in carried lunches.

Cooking Is Fun

By TOM HOGGE

AP Newsfeatures Writer

Having written more than once about the cuisine of Georgia since a son of that state entered the White House, I think it's time to switch to another southern state, such as South Carolina.

I'll never forget the rich fare I was piled with during a brief visit to Charleston a number of years ago. There was a breakfast built around grits drenched in butter. Then a lunch featuring okra soup, a rich puree of okra slices, tomatoes, onions and beef, well seasoned and whirled in a blender.

This was followed by a dinner of roast oysters, then pork with collard greens, black-eyed peas and sweet potatoes.

Recently, I heard of another South Carolina classic. It's a rich crab bisque a friend of mine was served while visiting a family at Moss Creek Plantation, a community of homes situated in a corner of historic Beaufort County. The region was established back in 1718 under the formidable title of Devil's Elbow Barony.

In the early 19th century the barony was the seat of a colony of wealthy planters and it flourished until the Civil War.

The manor houses are gone now and most of the ground is covered with dense forest. But the traditions live on and with them the old southern dishes.

The shrimp bisque has been handed down by generations of the family of Thomas Cotesworth Pinckney, U.S. Minister to Great Britain during the 18th century.

Crab has been a staple in South Carolina's low country since the days of the Indian tribes. The blue claw crab is still readily available in the lagoons and salt marshes of Moss Creek. All you need in order to catch them is a couple of chicken necks fastened to a weighted string.

Here's a recipe my friend obtained from the files of the Pinckneys.

1 pint milk
1 teaspoon mace
2 lemon slices, with rind
1 pound crab meat
¼ cup butter
1 pint heavy cream
1-3rd cup cracker crumbs
1 ounce dry sherry
Salt and pepper to taste

Simmer milk, mace and lemon in top of double boiler 5 minutes. Add crab, butter, cream, cook about 15 minutes over low heat. Thicken with cracker crumbs, season and let stand on warmer a few minutes to enhance flavor. Just before serving add sherry. Serves 6. Good with dry white wine, well chilled.

Safety Record Is Own Reward

Wednesday night a group of people gathered at a dinner to be honored for things that didn't happen.

Some 100 representatives from 50 industries, businesses and service establishments were receiving certificates for maintaining safety records for a year.

John C. Brooks, commissioner of labor for North Carolina and a Greenville native, commended the representatives for the job they had done. He noted that a good safety record increases productivity and helps control inflation.

At first glance the achievement of a safety milestone doesn't seem to be big news. It is to us, however. It means that no employee of the honored firms suffered a painful or maiming injury during the year . . . and it means that the employee's productive time wasn't lost during that year. If you think that is not important, ask anyone who has ever been laid up with a crushed hand or a broken leg.

We think the firms which were honored Wednesday can take pride in what they have accomplished. We hope they all will be back next year along with many others.

Dependable Market

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There are many farm products which could be grown successfully in North Carolina. But just growing them is not enough. The goods must be sold in a dependable market to make them profitable.

That is the nut of the problem in the future of Tar Heel farmers, and experts at the school of agriculture and life sciences at N.C. State University are moving strongly toward building those dependable markets.

"North Carolina has the soil, temperature and moisture to grow a tremendous range of crops. A rapid increase in vegetable crops has emerged and is still on the rise.

"Campbell Soup, Gerber, and Joan of Arc companies are processing significant quantities of our fruits and vegetables. The future is before us in this area," researchers conclude in the 1978 annual report from the university.

Processing

Many successful businesses are built on the claim to "service what they sell". North Carolina could generate additional income by "processing what she produces," the report points out.

The thoughts on future markets are contained in the lead article of the annual report. The item is titled: "What If Tobacco Should Go?"

Merely running such an article as the introduction to point out the seriousness to this state of present tobacco activities.

Too many Piedmonters and westerners shrug their shoulders at troubles in Tar Heel tobacco fields. They shouldn't. The leaf brought in more than one billion dollars in 1978 — about one-third of all dollars paid for farm products. The payoff is a lot of food, shelter, clothing and transportation purchased as the dollars change hands in the community — "not to mention trips to the beach, automobiles, television sets, and the other good things of life," the article notes.

Federal officials are spending $23 million to discourage smoking; California narrowly rejected the idea of restricting public smoking; the U.S. Congress regularly mulls elimination of tobacco allotment and support programs.

forest products, milk, peanuts, and turkeys contributed over $100 million. But that isn't close to the billion's worth of tobacco.

Alternatives

But specialists say there are alternatives to tobacco. Nationally, this state ranks first in forestry on the farm, pickling cucumbers, sweet potatoes, and tobacco; second in turkeys, fourth in broilers and eggs, seventh in swine.

University research is aimed at locating new crops for the state, with sunflowers, grapes, trellis tomatoes, woody ornamentals, and Christmas trees as examples.

"But just growing them is not enough; there must be a continuing substantial market for them. Such markets are often difficult to develop for new products", the university reports.

Developing the processing facilities would add a "third level of value" to North Carolina's farmland, researchers believe.

BILL NOBLITT

If tobacco goes, can anything take its place?

Nothing yet comes close to being able to replace the massive revenue from tobacco.

Five commodities last year (broilers, corn, pork, eggs and soybeans) brought in more than $200 million. Beef,

THE INSIDE REPORT

Trying To Rescue Sadat

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Twice in recent weeks, imported Arab terrorists with murder in their heart and Anwar Sadat in their gunsights have been stopped and seized by Egyptian security agents. Both attempts at the life of President Sadat, today's leader most hated in the Arab world, are believed to have been plotted by Palestinian guerrilla commands based in Syria.

Whatever the source, the aborted attempts at Sadat's life have galvanized President Carter's Mideast diplomacy toward this objective: do something, anything, to prove to the Arab world that the Camp David accords were not aimed at any separate peace between Egypt and Israel but as a broad framework for total Arab-Israeli peace.

But what actually to do? The fact is that U.S.

diplomacy, perhaps fatally, has misread Arab reaction to the Camp David accords which should have been clearly predictable.

This reaction was bound to be embittered in the best of fates. But given the temperate, seemingly calculated moves by Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin to embrace and isolate Sadat, reaction against the U.S. and Sadat within the rest of the Arab world has been instinctive, unavoidable and inflammable.

There is no quick American fix. Carter has ordered a series of quiet moves to play for time. He wants to create at least a pretense that serious bargaining has started on the future of the West Bank and Gaza. Most important, he wants to persuade the Arabs, particularly oil-rich Saudi Arabia, that Camp David did not repudiate United Nations Resolution 242 which called for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab lands on all of Israel's fronts.

Without fanfare, Carter's orders are being followed. Thus, Energy Secretary James Schlesinger spent a very private two-and-a-half hours at breakfast May 14 with Saudi oil minister Sheikh Zaki Yamani.

No word leaked out of this unusual session, not even the fact the two men met. However, these were Schlesinger's goals: to stop the disintegration of the U.S.-Saudi connection, to appeal for Saudi patience and understanding of Sadat's predicament, to persuade Yamani that chances of the West Bank-Gaza negotiations are better than they look.

Now enters Robert Strauss, Carter's newest Mideast innovation as presidential emissary in the West Bank-Gaza stage of the Egypt-Israel talks. With no public disclosure, Strauss quietly invited this city's top Arab ambassadors on May 22 for a get-acquainted cocktail in his elegant penthouse apartment in the Watergate. There was more than getting acquainted on his mind.

Although avoiding conspicuously serious conversation, Strauss nevertheless dropped a word to his guests of utmost political importance. The Camp David accords, he said, could be interpreted in two different ways: very narrowly (which is Begin's way); or very broadly — meaning broadly enough to embrace the full undertakings of UN Resolution 242.

Although Strauss did not say Carter will insist that Israel accept the broad interpretation, that was the implication. His Arab visitors came away impressed.

Carter, Strauss, Schlesinger and the State Department seek to prevent the fatal unraveling of Camp David — perhaps even including some aspects of the Egyptian-Israeli accord. That means visible progress on the West Bank to ease vicious inter-Arab battles involving America's three best Arab allies: Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Jordan. Without such West Bank progress, Sadat cannot open his borders to Israel and Saudi Arabia cannot finance U.S. warplanes for Egypt.

U.S. policymakers have even worse nightmares. If Sadat attacked neighboring Libya (partly to exploit Egyptian nationalism), would Carter be compelled to back him all the way? Sadat's

RELIGION AND SCIENCE

"I guess I'm an incurable skeptic but I just can't assent to most religious doctrines. They appear to me to conflict with well-known and accepted scientific facts."

Many people feel this way. But science and religion should never conflict because they deal with two different realms, and if we keep these realms well-defined in our minds, there should be no problem.

Science deals with the physical world. If a scientist says that he finds no evidence

To the editor:

Many of the people who support liquor-by-the-drink argue that our county will benefit from increased revenue received from tax on liquor. These people are either grossly misinformed or intentionally misrepresenting substantiated facts. The American Business Men's Research Foundation reports that for every dollar collected from tax on liquor there has to be collected over 440 percent more money to combat the damage caused by that liquor. Any student of basic mathematics can readily determine that as the amount of tax collected from liquor sales goes up, so does the amount of money needed to repair the damages caused by liquor; however, the gap between the two becomes wider and wider.

In other areas where liquor-by-the-drink has been voted in, sales and consumption have heavily increased; thus, if liquor-by-the-drink is voted in, Pitt County will have a heavier load of liquor-related problems to bear. Municipal citizens face a double financial burden. Already the mayor of Greenville and its police department have ascertained that at least four more men and another patrol car will have to be underwritten by the taxes of Greenville citizens if the citizens of Pitt County vote yes on June 8th.

Liquor-by-the-drink is unwise and unprofitable business for the citizens of Pitt County. The only people who will financially benefit from it are those who deal in the sale of liquor. The successful businessmen of Pitt County in general, and Greenville in particular, have not become so by practicing unsound business sense such as liquor-by-the-drink presents. One does not spend $4.41 in order to take in $1.00. Liquor-by-the-drink proponents would have us to do just this. Liquor-by-the-drink is unsound business!

"How much do we have now?"

"Lt. Schlesinger, how much fuel do we have?"

"I have no idea, sir. I keep getting different reports every hour. All I know is we're going to have to conserve as much as possible."

"Then I guess we better start rationing it," the captain said.

One of the congressional leaders replied, "How?"

"Lt. Schlesinger, do we have a plan?"

"Yes sir. Here it is."

The chiefs looked it over. "We don't like this plan."

The captain said, "All right, we'll come up with another one. Lt. Schlesinger, do we have another plan?"

Health Secret Proven

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — No need to tattoo the bride and groom with a health warning from the Surgeon General.

A new survey has determined that marriage is not hazardous to your health.

The old vaudeville comics used to say married people didn't necessarily live longer; it just seemed longer.

Well, Smith and Dale, if they were still conducting funny business in the office of Dr. Kronkite, would have to bury that gag along with the patient to keep abreast of the latest research on the marital front.

A researcher at the Rutgers, N.J. Medical School has concluded that connubial-cohabitation is the healthiest way to live, regardless of the quality of the relationship.

In her report, Dr. Anne R. Somers, a specialist in family and community medicine, says that statistics from 1940 to 1961 show that married people residing with a spouse live longer on the average than the single, widowed or divorced.

Since I was married during that two-decade time frame, I was about to conclude that those were the vintage years for the old nuclear family, but more recent data indicate that the marriage bond is even more conducive to good mental health than a free-lancing lifestyle.

There's no satisfaction anymore in going around telling people that your helpmate in life is driving you crazy. Medical science just won't back you up. The absence of a sparring partner is more likely to drive you bananas.

In 1975, according to the National Institute for Mental Health, only about 90 out of every 100,000 married Americans were admitted to mental hospitals, the lowest in any category studied.

Among those divorced or separated, the admission rate to a

Newspaper Clippings In Mail

By GAIL MICHAELS

My aunt is a sweet little old lady with white hair and orthopedic shoes, and my father-in-law is a vigorous, middle-aged man. On the surface, these two are entirely different, but they do have one thing in common. They both love to send us newspaper clippings.

Now, my quiet, gentle aunt prefers clippings of the death and disaster variety. When Phillip and I first announced that in addition to our beloved cat, we would soon have a human baby to cuddle, she immediately sent a clipping headed, "Toxoplasmosis Transmitted by Cats; Affects Unborn Children."

And when we moved into a house with a fireplace, we received this clipping: "Deadly Brown Hermit Spider Lurks in Woodpiles."

The clincher came last September after Phillip entered Carolina's two year MBA program. It was entitled, "Economists Predict Major Recession in 1980."

My father-in-law is much more pragmatic. After three years of dutifully holding down a screaming child while applying antiseptic concoctions to her scrapes and cuts, we received the clipping, "First-Aid Doesn't Have to Hurt."

And when we moved into an old house, he sent us a smoke alarm and the warning, "Faulty Wiring Major Cause of Fires in Old Homes."

This is a man who raised four children by the rule, "Spare the rod and spoil the child." But when we were at his home for a week-end visit and happened to administer one of Meg's semiannual spankings, we received this clipping in the mail two days later: Spanking Teaches Violence."

The last clipping we received from him concerned Phillip's search for a summer job. This clipping gave a detailed description of what to wear and what not to wear to an interview.

The first no-no was bow ties. Men who wear bow ties are considered unpredictable, the article said. This particular prescription didn't bother me too much. I despise bow ties, although I wouldn't go so far as to judge a man's entire character by one. But Phillip got upset.

"Look at the men of genius who have worn bow ties! Schweitzer! Einstein!"

"Mo, Curly, and Larry."

"Okay. Okay. But you've got to admit that this article is a little far out. Even conservative plaid suits are out. It doesn't make any sense."

"Maybe they think a plaid suit is an indication that your political convictions aren't solid."

"Well, since you're so good at explaining the symbolism of the business community," he groaned, "please tell me the significance of a yellow shirt. It says here that only blue or white shirts are supposed to be worn. The only shirts I have that aren't frayed are yellow. Does that indicate that I'm a coward or merely that my disposition is too sunny?"

"Maybe it means that you have a liver ailment."

"I guess what it really means is that I have to go out and buy a new shirt. So what do you suggest? Blue or white?"

How about stuffed?"

Plan Many 'Jesus 79' Rallies

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Jesus

79," the offspring of a vast, fervent gathering of Christians last year, has come on bigger than ever this time.

Instead of just one huge rally, more than a score of them is happening this Saturday in cities across the country.

"It's wild," says Dan Malachuk, co-chairman of one of the ecumenical celebrations of thousands at New York's Shea Stadium.

"Never before have there been simultaneous events of this scope involving evangelicals, Protestants and Roman Catholics. A unifying wind of the spirit is blowing. It's historic."

The grass-roots, cross-Christian effusions of faith comes on the eve of Pentecost, the birthday of the church, when thousands of many nations felt the outpouring of the spirit in ancient Jerusalem.

"And suddenly a sound came from heaven like the rush of a mighty wind," recounts Acts 2. "...And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit... And at the sound the multitude came together... And all were amazed."

The series of rallies this year stemmed from the massive "Jesus 78" gathering of 60,000 last spring in the Giants Stadium of the Meadowlands in New Jersey, where it also is holding forth again.

It in turn had stemmed from an ecumenical charismatic renewal conference in Kansas City in 1977, where several had

Wishing Wells and Well-Wishers

Few wishing wells left. Those that remain are preserved more by sentiment than superstition.

Lots of well-wishers, though! They guild the day with their cheery platitudes. They just know everything will work out right — without their getting involved.

Lord, grant me grace to be a friend — not a well-wisher. Give me courage to stand for something, and to stand with others who share the belief. Prime me with vision to build tomorrow... faith to know it will come... patience to await the dawn.

Deliver me, Lord, from the sentimentality of simply wishing... the polite indifference of well-wishing... the numbing temptation not to get involved.

Lead me! To church... conviction... commitment.

Carter, Consumer Advocates Meet

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, facing prospects of prolonged oil shortages and skyrocketing OPEC prices, is meeting with consumer advocates who oppose his order to lift price controls on domestic petroleum starting today.

Carter summoned consumer representatives and environmentalists to the White House today following a session Thursday with oil company executives who praised decontrol and warned that petroleum will struggle with petroleum shortages for years to come.

Oil decontrol gets underway just as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries appears primed to increase prices as much as $3 per barrel, according to Saudi Arabian officials.

Meanwhile, Carter's problems were complicated on Capitol Hill Thursday. Top congressional leaders, while claiming they want to de-emphasize differences with the president, torpedoed a White House attempt to stage a Camp David "energy summit" this weekend.

The president still plans the session, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill and House Majority Leader Jim Wright said they turned down the invitation because of other commitments.

A White House official, who refused to be named, said, "I'm sure if they did it, it was for good reasons."

At least three consumer advocates attending today's White House meeting strongly oppose oil decontrol, claiming it will punish low-income Americans by increasing gasoline and home heating oil prices.

Carter's order is expected to cost an average family of four between $100 and $175 a year, according to different government projections.

Oil prices will rise even higher with the latest flurry of increases announced Thursday by Saudi Arabia and Iran. They said a barrel of their highest-grade crude will rise $1.40 and $1.30, respectively.

This could lead to a 3-cent-per-gallon increase for gasoline and home heating oil in the United States, analysts said.

More significantly, Saudi Arabia indicated it wouldn't stand in the way of future price boosts when OPEC meets in Geneva this month.

Saudi officials said the cartel may raise the base price of oil to $17 or $18 per barrel, compared to $14.45 now.

Even before this news, gasoline prices were rising more rapidly than ever, although supplies apparently were generally stable, the American Automobile Association reported.

Its weekly Fuel Gauge Report said average gasoline prices rose 1.5 cents per gallon last week. Prices exceeded 90 cents in at least 19 states, representing an average 16.5-cent increase since Christmas.

In addition, the average price of diesel fuel jumped 2.3 cents to 78.5 cents a gallon, the AAA said.

Price was only one concern of trucking industry officials on Thursday. They said diesel shortages are disrupting truck transportation in several areas and may spread rapidly, threatening the nation's economy.

List 4 Traffic Accidents Here

An estimated $1,655 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 12:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Maxwell Streets involving cars driven by Mary Ann Purvis of 412 Colonial Ave., and Cynthia Lynne Daniels of Sea Level.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Purvis car and $400 to the Daniels auto.

Cars driven by Clara Roberson Black of Ayden and Joyce Butts Cayton of Route 1, Winterville, collided about 7:46 a.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 350 feet East of the Memorial Drive intersection, causing an estimated $225 damage to the Black car and $205 damage to the Cayton vehicle, Police reported.

A 1:35 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth Street and Greenville Boulevard involved a truck driven by Joseph Ledo Silva of 209 Caddie Ct., and a car operated by Allen Edmondson Tripp of Route 1, Grimesland, and caused an estimated $175 damage to the truck and $150 damage to the car.

Investigators reported a car operated by Vicki Irene Moody of Langston Park collided with a truck driven by Robert Bennie Goggin Jr. of Norfolk, Va., about 5:45 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Elm Streets, causing $300 damage to the Moody car.

No damage resulted to the truck driven by Goggin.

Scott Admits Run For Governor Is Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott, who plans to step down from his federal post later this year, says he is seriously thinking about running for governor next year.

Scott said in an interview he plans to leave his $52,500-a-year job as federal co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission probably later this summer. In the post, he heads an agency that coordinates federal economic programs for parts of 13 states stretching from New York to Alabama.

Scott, who was lieutenant governor from 1965 to 1969 and governor from 1969 to 1973, said he will remain in his federal job until Congress extends the life of the commission which expires this year. He said he'll then return to North Carolina and make up his mind whether to run for governor or possibly lieutenant governor.

"A decision by early fall would be necessary for a major, statewide race," he said.

Scott, who returns to North Carolina every weekend, admitted he has felt a little out of the swing in Washington.

Recently, he's been making speeches critical of the administration of Gov. Jim Hunt who is expected to seek reelection next year. In a speech May 25 to the Lenoir Rotary Club, Scott criticized the creation of a separate board to run the state's community college system. In an earlier speech he had criticized Hunt's tax cut plans, saying the money was needed for education and other state services.

"The reaction to my talks has been more than I anticipated it would be," he said. "I feel I owe it to take a look at running."

"Yes sir. Here's a new plan."

The chiefs studied it. "This is worse than the other plan," one of them said.

"Then you people come up with a plan!"

"We don't know anything about conservation," one of them said.

"See here," Capt. Carter said grimly. "I'm in charge and you people must think about the good of the ship. We have to work together or we'll go on the rocks."

Ensign Hamilton Jordan came on the bridge, "Sir, we're taking on water."

The captain got on the phone, "Lt. Blumenthal, you're in charge of damage control. How much water are we taking on?"

"Well, I thought it would be seven percent, but apparently we screwed up. We'll lucky if it doesn't go to 10."

"What happened to our plan to reduce the bilge in our tanks?"

"We thought we could keep the boilers from overheating but we were wrong."

"You're a big help, Blumenthal."

"Thank you, sir."

Capt. Carter hung up and said, "If we can only get through the Panama Canal we'll be all right."

Chief Tip O'Neill said, "I'm having trouble getting the crew to agree to go through the canal."

"Why?"

"The petty officers are being very petty."

"How can I command the Ship of State when no one wants to follow my orders?"

"Why don't you abandon ship?" Chief Kennedy suggested.

"You would like that, wouldn't you, Kennedy? It sounds like mutiny to me."

"No sir, I'll support you as long as you're captain, but any time you want me to take over the wheel just let me know."

The helmsman said, "Captain, we seem to be drifting out to sea. Do you want to set a new course?"

"That's a good idea," the captain replied. "Which way is the wind blowing?"

"Port," someone shouted. "Starboard," somebody else said.

"Fore," another voice offered.

"Aft," was the last reply.

"Good," said the captain. "Stand by your stations until I come up with another plan."

total dependence on the U.S. today, as Israel blocks his West Bank maneuvers, makes the U.S. as much a hostage to Egypt's policy as it long has been to Israel's policy. That is a foreboding road for the U.S. to travel.

The interception by Egyptian security agents of those two assassination teams from Sadat's Arab neighbors shows how deeply the triumphant Camp David accords have been undermined, and how vulnerable Sadat is, despite his treaty with Israel. The "separate peace" that looks so good to Menahem Begin could become the dagger in the heart of Jimmy Carter's most glittering achievement.

Even those who never married at all were heading off to the psycho ward at the rate of 685 for every 100,000 bachelors and old maids, or swinging singles as they used to be called before the fellows in the white coats began bagging them in their butterfly nets.

Men in all categories (single, widowers, divorced-separated, married) had a higher incidence of mental health problems requiring state or community care, which I did not find surprising.

Clinically speaking, the stressful life event known as marriage is conducive to a longer, saner existence.

$9,000,000 BOND ISSUE

School Bond Issue:

Have you stopped long enough to realize how fortunate we are to live in this county? Good roads are generally available to all of our people. Plans now are underway to complete the Raleigh to Greenville 4-lane highway. Over the past 14 years a medical complex in the heart of this county has been given birth and is now a reality. The best medical services available to any people are at our finger tips. We can visit our sick and yet spend the night in our own beds. People from throughout Eastern North Carolina are now looking to us for an extension of a first-class health care system.

During the mid '70's when there was an economical slow down throughout the country, the rate of unemployment in this county was less than generally found in the state. A good mix of agriculture and agricultural related jobs, industrial companies, and various businesses of all kinds help provide many jobs for our people.

Located in our midst is a first-rate university, enabling our people to continue their education at a minimum cost. Cultural activities are available for those who enjoy such. Pitt Technical Institute has an enviable record in the training of our people for new industries locating in the county. A wealth of programs are available, enabling those who care to do so to upgrade their skills.

Our climate is a tremendous plus for us today with the ever increasing costs of utilities. Our farmers, with a good growing season, are very productive and it is easy to understand how 5% of our total population can feed all of the people of this country, as well as those of many other countries.

We are surrounded by fine churches and service agencies of all types skilled in meeting our needs. The business community takes a leadership role in development and is responsive to us and serves us well.

Town boards and city councils, along with the County Board of Commissioners, have moved carefully over the past two decades in helping provide for the orderly growth and development of our county. Urban Renewal and Public Housing have provided better living accommodations for those less fortunate. Downtown Greenville, our county seat, is alive as a result of the work and aspirations of local businessmen and city officials. Lending institutions, along with the County Courthouse, help bring people downtown, which is so important to a thriving community.

The County Commissioners in their wisdom located the Pitt Memorial Hospital and indirectly the ECU School of Medicine very strategically in serving county residents, as well as those of the City of Greenville. Western Greenville will remain vibrant and accessible to all people because of the action of the city and county fathers.

While we have some problems and concerns yet unresolved, it is easy to see that we have an awful lot for which to be thankful. But it didn't just happen, it took a vision, supported by faith and a lot of hard work to help bring the good life to county residents.

June 8 will be another Red Letter Day. Our people will vote in favor of the Bond Issue to provide $9,000,000 for the construction of new and expanded facilities in the City and the County School Systems. We care about our children and our grandchildren. For us to accept the legacy of preceding generations while not providing for those yet to follow would be rank heresy and our people will not allow this to happen.

Think positive! Be a part of the future by supporting the needs of the present. Our children deserve no less than our very best.

Reynolds Grant To Colleges Announced

WINSTON-SALEM — The Independent College Fund of North Carolina has announced that it has received an unrestricted grant of $300,000 — its largest single contribution — from R. J. Reynolds Industries, Inc.

The contribution, which will benefit 28 independent colleges in North Carolina, was announced by Carl Horn, the 1977-79 Fund chairman, during the organization's annual meeting on May 24 in Clemmons.

Horn also announced that in recognition of the on-going support from the South's largest corporation, the Fund's trustees had voted to create a special R. J. Reynolds Industries Fund within its overall program.

The Independent College Fund of North Carolina provides a source of income for schools which do not receive significant tax support. Those 28 colleges have a total full-time enrollment of more than 25,000 students.

Over the past 25 years, R. J. Reynolds Industries has contributed $2,510,000 to the Fund.

Among the 28 North Carolina independent colleges are Atlantic Christian, Wilson; Chowan, Murfreesboro; Louisburg, Louisburg; Mount Olive, Mount Olive; and North Carolina Wesleyan, Rocky Mount.

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa offered "the hand of fellowship" to black guerrillas today only hours after the birth of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, Africa's newest black-ruled nation.

His first official function was witnessing the swearing in of his 11 black and five white Cabinet ministers, including former Prime Minister Ian Smith. The ceremony took place beneath the portrait of Cecil John Rhodes, the British adventurer who annexed the territory for Queen Victoria and who remains a hated symbol of white supremacy for many blacks.

"We want to do something that has never been done in Africa, and that is that someone comes into power and extends a hand of fellowship to all his brethren inside and outside and that they are welcome and there is no need for confrontation or fighting or anything like that," Muzorewa, this nation's first black prime minister, said.

He urged the guerrillas to accept a government amnesty first offered in the waning days of the previous white-minority administration.

Muzorewa, a Methodist bishop, will also serve as defense minister in the new government, taking charge of the government's six-year-old war with guerrillas seeking to topple the Salisbury regime.

Muzorewa, flanked by two white policemen in khaki uniforms, moved into his new office today in the red brick colonial-style government headquarters.

Wearing a clerical collar and a wide grin, he appeared fresh and fit as he chatted with reporters and photographers. He had spent a late night Thursday, listening to the singing, dancing and tribal drumming coming from independence celebrations in Salisbury's black townships.

Muzorewa said "very fast" government policy changes would be announced probably Saturday.

The new government abandoned plans to ferry thousands of blacks into the capital to demonstrate support for Muzorewa. Fleets of trucks and cars had been mobilized to bring blacks into the city, and there was no immediate explanation of the cancellation.

statue after draping a placard around its neck reading: "This Space to Let." The angry whites jeered them, then three of them climbed the statue, ripped off the sign and threw it to the ground. Infuriated blacks surged forward, but white and black police kept the two groups apart. Two of the whites were arrested and driven away after a brief struggle.

Muzorewa, who promised the nation "sober and decent leadership," was to begin the day by swearing in his Cabinet of 11 blacks and five whites. Among them is Ian Smith, the man who declared Rhodesia independent from Britain 14 years ago to stave off black rule but finally engineered the current transition to preserve as much white power as he could.

Awards For Girl Scouts

The Fellowship Hall of the First Pentecostal Holiness Church was the scene of the Saturday Annual Awards Banquet for Girl Scout Troop 115.

Individual troop members presented the program, "The Past Year in Review," followed by a magic show given by Mrs. Janie Keeter, a McDonalds Restaurant representative.

Girl Scout of the Month awards were presented to Lynne Wiseman, Regina Hudson, Jackie Lynch and Michele Teel, for February, March, April and May, respectively by Girl Scout Leader Mrs. Wanda Wiseman. Each girl received a certificate and a gold add-a-bead necklace.

Mrs. Martha Hudson, Girl Scout Leader, presented year pins and badges to Valerie Avery, Kristi Carraway, Lisa Everett, Rhonda Hardee, Jackie Lynch, Vershine Sheppard, Vanessa Smith, Michele Teel, Wendy West, Lynne Wiseman, Cheryl Wooten and Cynthia Wooten.

In addition to their other awards, Sandra Holder received the Sign of the Arrow and Regina Hudson received the Sign of the Star and Sign of the Arrow, two of Scouting's highest awards.

LaWanda Jones, the troop's newest member, was presented her Girl Scout membership pins and year pin from Regina Hudson, patrol leader.

Valerie Avery, Sandra Holder, Regina Hudson, Vanessa Smith, and Michele Teel were recognized for their movement up to Cadet Scouts. The program concluded with the troop members singing "Taps" in sign language.

Instead, Salisbury bustled with typical rush hour traffic as Zimbabwe Rhodesia's first black prime minister began a round of meetings with his staff.

Muzorewa, a 54-year-old Methodist bishop educated in America, ushered in the birth of the new nation at the stroke of midnight Thursday, declaring it "the victorious minute we have struggled for and waited for over 88 years of colonial domination and subjugation."

His brief radio and television address, highlighted by a plea for national unity, made no direct mention of problems facing the nation at birth — international sanctions and isolation, an escalating guerrilla war and factional political rivalries.

Muzorewa's speech and a proclamation in the government gazette were the only official acts marking the nation's transition from white-minority rule to a government headed by blacks, with a black majority in the Cabinet and Parliament, but with the whites retaining much power.

There were generally low-key celebrations in Salisbury's black enclaves with scattered groups of up to 400 of Muzorewa's jubilant followers singing and dancing in the streets under a clear night sky.

Much of the capital was deserted. One group of whites held their annual Rotary Club dinner-dance at the popular Meikles Hotel.

Simmering emotions threatened to erupt on one street corner in downtown Salisbury when seven white toughs confronted about 150 blacks at the 25-foot-high statue of Cecil John Rhodes, the British founder of Rhodesia.

The blacks were singing peacefully at the foot of the

Will Try Again To End License Requirement

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fundamentalist church leaders say they will try again to put legislation before the full Senate that would drop state licensing requirements for their day-care centers.

The Senate Human Resources Committee rejected the bill on a 9-6 vote Thursday, despite pleas by fundamentalist leader

Rev. Kent Kelly that the licensing requirement violates their religious freedom.

But Kelly and legislators supporting his bill said they would take a minority report to the Senate floor, attempting a rarely successful parliamentary maneuver. To be successful, they need a majority vote of the Senate to put their bill on the calendar for debate.

Kelly, from Southern Pines, won enactment earlier in the session of bills exempting church-run schools from state regulation.

Twenty church-run day-care centers have refused to submit to state licensing requirements and are embroiled in a suit brought by the state.

Kelly told the committee the churches are willing to meet state standards for health and safety but said requiring them to obtain a license is a violation of religious freedom.

"We have a very sincere religious conviction against required state licensing to carry out a church ministry," he said. "We're talking here about a principle, a principle for which Christians went to the lions in the first century."

Jane Patterson, assistant secretary of the state Department of Administration, opposed the legislation and said it would undermine the entire licensing process by treating one set of day-care centers differently. Of 1,965 day-care centers operating in the state, 370 are run by churches.

The bill was not supported by all churches, however. N.C. Council of Churches lobbyist, the Rev. Collins Kilburn, said his group does not consider it a question of religious freedom.

"It's a matter of health and safety, and we don't believe churches need special treatment," he said.

Sihanouk Says Family Missing

PARIS (AP) — Deposed Cambodian ruler Prince Norodom Sihanouk says more than 20 of his relatives disappeared when the Pol Pot regime was ousted, and he's appealed to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim for help in finding them.

In a letter to Waldheim, Sihanouk said three daughters, two sons, eight grandchildren and other relatives vanished in the turmoil following the Khmer Rouge takeover in Cambodia.

Chou's Statue In North Korea

TOKYO (AP) — A statue of the late Chinese Premier Chou En-lai now graces the front of a fertilizer factory in Hamhung, North Korea, according to a North Korean radio broadcast.

The unveiling Thursday was accompanied by a grand ceremony, attended by President Kim Il-sung of North Korea, Chou's widow Deng Yingchao (Teng Ying-chao), former Cambodian head of state Norodom Sihanouk and his wife, Monique, and other officials, the broadcast said.

Pyeongyang radio, in a broadcast monitored here, said the factory was once visited by the late premier. Deng has been visiting North Korea since Saturday at the invitation of President Kim.

Execution By Injection Is Killed By House Panel

A FIRE TO BE HAPPY ABOUT — If the firemen at the scene of this house fire in Williamston seem relaxed about the whole thing, it's understandable in light of the fact it's only a training session using an abandoned house in an area being cleared for a new housing project. "This is a fire to be happy about," one fireman commented, referring to the six or real fires that hit Williamston for a seven week period this spring. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Gunned Driver Loses His Leg

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Police protection stepped up Thursday at Seaboard Foods Inc. after a non-union driver was shot in the leg Wednesday, an incident believed related to a bitter strike at the plant.

Stacy Fulford of Rocky Mount, the driver, had a leg amputated Thursday at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill after doctors decided his leg was too badly damaged by the gunshot wound to be repaired. Fulford was hit in the kneecap, police said.

Seaboard posted a $5,000 reward for information about the shooting and the theft and

Oil Price Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabian officials have indicated they will not stand in the way of a large increase in the official price of crude oil when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in Geneva next month.

The reports came as Saudi Arabia increased prices by $1.40 a barrel on its Berri grade of crude oil, a high grade of petroleum that comprises about 4 percent of the 8.5 million barrels OPEC's largest member produces daily.

Arabian American Oil Co., the agent for the bulk of Saudi Arabia's oil output, said the new price for the Berri grade will be $17.87 a barrel. The OPEC base price for oil is $14.55 a barrel, plus any surcharges individual members want to add.

The Saudi price increase itself would not increase prices of gasoline and heating oil in the United States, but it confirmed that Saudi Arabia is somewhat amenable to a price increase at the OPEC meeting June 26.

Saudi Arabian officials reportedly indicated they think the cartel will raise the base price of oil to $17 or $18 a barrel, recognizing the surcharges imposed by OPEC's members but also strengthening the OPEC price structure that many analysts believe has been weakened by the mish-mash of individual price increases.

In a related development, Iraq further increased its surcharge, raising the price of its oil about 64 cents to $17.79 for its best-quality oil.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A House panel Thursday killed a bill that called for the replacement of the gas chamber with a lethal injection as the form of execution in North Carolina.

The House Judiciary II Committee killed the bill after opponents said it could make capital punishment more palatable to the public and could lead to an increase in the number of executions.

The bill was introduced by two legislators who are doctors — Rep. John Gamble, D-Lincoln, a surgeon and Rep. John Varner, D-Davidson, a psychologist. They said administering a lethal injection would be a more humane way to carry out capital punishment.

But opponents of the bill, most of whom are leading opponents of the death penalty, said it would make executions more acceptable to the public.

Car Mileage Cost Is Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As inflation drives up the price of gasoline, cars and car maintenance, workers who drive their vehicles on company business have found mileage allowances don't cover their costs.

Gas prices have doubled in the last six years, rising from a 1973 average of 38.9 cents a gallon for regular to the current average of 85.9 cents a gallon for unleaded. But, a spotcheck of Raleigh-area businesses showed that typical mileage allowances had risen 3 cents to 5 cents per mile.

Between 1973 and 1977, maintenance and repair costs increased 43 percent and insurance premiums went up 52 percent, according to the Insurance Information Institute.

But state employees have recently received some help from the Legislature to combat the rising car care costs. A joint House-Senate appropriations subcommittee approved Monday an increase from 17 cents to 19 cents a mile. The allowance in 1973 was 11 cents.

Southern Bell allows its employees 15 cents a mile, a rate that has been in effect since August, 1977, when it was raised from 12 cents.

"What we're talking about is making it easier and easier to take a person's life," said Alan McGregor of the Southern Coalition on Jails and Prisons. "The whole thought of executions being done quietly horrifies me."

The 1977 General Assembly enacted a new death-penalty law after the previous statute was declared unconstitutional.

The last execution in the state's gas chamber was in 1961.

In other legislative activity Thursday:

Unions

A bill that would prohibit public employees from joining certain unions and from striking was stalled in a Senate committee Thursday, and the sponsor of the bill said the delay meant the bill was probably dead for this legislative session.

The Senate Manufacturing and Labor Committee voted to send the bill to a subcommittee for further study.

It was the second legislative committee that delayed action on the bill in as many days.

Wednesday, a House judiciary committee took the same action on the companion House bill.

"I think the effect will be that we will not consider it either in the House or the Senate this year or next year," said Sen. I. Beverly Lake, D-Wake, the bill's Senate sponsor. "It will be the '81 session before this important question is spoken to."

Labor leaders fought for delays in action on the bill, implying that legislators were trying to rush the bill through in the waning days of the session without proper public airing.

After the Senate committee action, state AFL-CIO President Wilbur Hobby said he doubted the bill would be enacted this session.

"I don't think the members of the Senate will put themselves on record and not have the House on record until after the primary next year," he said.

Observers say the bill is not likely to get out of the House committee. What may emerge is a bill calling for a study of the question of public employees membership in unions.

Adjournment

The end may be in sight for the 1979 legislative session. Resolutions were filed in the House and Senate calling for adjournment next Thursday at 6 p.m.

The resolution does not ensure that is when the session will adjourn, however, as delays by legislative committees could push the adjournment time and date back farther.

The resolution would place a limit on consideration of bills during the short session to convene June 5, 1980. It would generally limit them to bills that have passed either the House or Senate this year.

Auto Repairs

The Senate sent the House a watered-down version of legislation that would prohibit automobile repair shops from charging customers for unauthorized repairs.

The Senate adopted an amendment offered by Sen. Walter Cockerham, R-Guilford, exempting garages without a full-time mechanic on duty. The amendment was narrowly adopted, 26-23, and the full bill was approved on a 39-10 vote.

The legislation was recommended by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Sex Ed

The House delayed action on a Republican-backed bill that would require local school boards to approve materials used by schools to teach sex education. The bill has already passed the Senate.

Workmen's Firing

The House enacted into law a measure preventing employers from firing workers solely because they filed a workers' compensation claim. The measure became law when the House voted to go along with Senate amendments.

Insurance Policies

The House refused to concur with amendments to a bill that would require insurance policies to be written in clearly understandable language. The bill includes a complicated formula for determining the degree of difficulty for policies.

The House-approved bill would require the policies be readable at a high school level, but the Senate loosened the restriction, requiring them to be written at college level.

The bill now goes to a conference committee.

Fishing

The Senate enacted legislation establishing a new type of fishing license. For $25, a person who owns land on inland waters may now buy an annual guest fishing license, permitting his or her guests to fish from that property without possessing a personal fishing license.

Loan Fees

The House approved a Senate-passed bill that would allow commercial mortgage companies to charge fees for issuing home loans at rates below the prevailing interest rate. The Farmers Home Administration and the Veterans Administration are now the only loan companies allowed to charge such fees, or points, on home loans in North Carolina.

Hens
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina hen market was lower, supplies moderate, demand light. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday slaughter, 18 to 22 cents, mostly 22 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today in the grip of continuing energy worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 1.64 to 820.69 by noon.

Losers outpaced gainers by a small margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said accumulating reports of price increases by oil-exporting countries were keeping the market on the defensive.

They also noted some caution prompted by expectations of an increase in the Federal Reserve's discount rate — the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks.

Analysts said recent increases in other borrowing rates appeared to have made a "catch-up" rise in the discount rate likely.

Smithline jumped 3 1/2 to 44 1/2. An advisory group recommended favorable action by the Food and Drug Administration on an anti-ulcer drug produced by the company.

International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 76 1/2 in active trading. A 4-for-1 split of the stock took effect today.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .03 to 55.96. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .37 at 187.31.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11 million shares at noon, down from 13.73 million at the same point Thursday.

ment is recommended for city employees. The increase, if approved, would become effective the first payroll period in July, it was mentioned.

He said this morning that a "pressing need" exists for personnel and he mentioned that the "greatest concern is with the compelling need for additional fire fighters and police officers." Also, an additional staff planner is needed, Wyatt said, "in light of services the Planning Department is expected to provide."

Addressing the unprecedented unbalanced budget proposal, Wyatt said that a factor that still may have some effect on the unbalanced figure is that a number of steps have been taken "that under normal circumstances would be less than financially advisable, such as taking into account anticipated unspent funds during the next fiscal year and trying to take into account all surplus funds that would be available at the end of the current fiscal year."

Budget needs that have been deferred and additional future levels of service must be continually reviewed, he added.

According to Wyatt's budget message, "The 1979-80 city budget includes funds for continuation of the six firemen and two rescue officer positions which were funded one-half of the present fiscal year with Anti-Recession funds. The 1979-80 cost to the city to assume the full cost of these eight positions is $89,239."

In the area of capital outlay, Wyatt explained to the Council that, "The proposed budget includes only essential capital outlay items." He said that "major automotive equipment recommended" includes: seven police patrol vehicles, one fire combat vehicle, one rescue unit, one containerized refuse truck, one residential refuse truck, a dump truck and a park ranger vehicle, all totaling $142,650.

Wyatt mentioned in his message that the "proposed budget has been developed to reflect minimum operating costs and only essential capital outlay items. In developing the proposed budget, it has been our primary goal to provide the present level of service at the lowest possible costs."

The city manager said that, "Operating expenses have been cut to the 'raw bone.'" He added that the budget "does not recommend the addition of any personnel requested by various department heads."

The GUC budget package proposes an Electric Fund amounting to $27,430,000, Water Fund of $1,597,600, Sewer Fund of $1,223,600, and Gas Fund of $2,996,600.

Kept Alive By Cannibalism

ESTEVAN, Saskatchewan (AP) — One of two survivors of an Idaho plane crash says he and his sister-in-law ate parts of her father's body while they desperately waited to be rescued from the snow-covered White Cloud Mountains.

"It was right. We talked to God and we prayed. And whatever else came back, we knew we had to eat him and we did," Brent Dyer, 20, said in a copy-right interview published in today's Regina (Sask.) Leader-Post newspaper.

He said the decision to eat some of the body of Donald Johnson, 50, was made only after Dyer and Donna Johnson, 18, had been without food for a considerable time.

Dyer, Johnson and Johnson's daughter were the passengers aboard a light plane that crashed May 5 about 45 miles southwest of Challis, Idaho. The four Estevan residents had been on their way to pick up a puppy at a kennel near Boise, Idaho.

Johnson was dead by the next morning. Pilot Norman Pischke survived the crash but disappeared from the site, apparently seeking help. His body was found May 25 about a mile from the crash site. Dyer and Miss Johnson reached safety May 24 after walking for five days from the site.

Dyer, interviewed here Thursday with Johnson's widow, mother and son beside him, said he was unconscious until the day after the crash, when he found himself jammed and bleeding in the corner of the plane's cockpit.

In the rear seat, Miss Johnson was crying over the body of her dead father.

Before Johnson died, he gave his leather coat to his daughter, Dyer said.

"He's dead but he wants us to live," Dyer said he told his sister-in-law. "And he's given us his leather coat."

"We were so damn close to God we knew the man was looking after ... he was in peace. Of the cannibalism, he said, "I want it known that we weren't ashamed. We knew it was right. God told us it was right. We knew it was what Don would have wanted."

After Boise television station KTVB, without naming its sources, reported Wednesday that Johnson's body had been cannibalized, the sheriff of Custer County, Idaho, Sid Teuscher, refused to comment.

Release Due In October

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Joan Little, the black woman whose murder trial for the icepick slaying of a white jailer drew international attention, likely will be released from prison in October, a spokesman for the state Correction Department said today.

Miss Little is participating in a mutual-assistance program involving a three-way contract that sets a specific time for parole. She will be released in early October if she fulfills her obligations, said Stuart Shadbolt, information officer for the department.

Although Miss Little normally would be eligible for a parole review June 9, Shadbolt said, the contract involving the Paroles Commission, Department of Correction and Miss Little takes precedence.

Shadbolt said Miss Little is doing excellent work in a cosmetology course she is taking in prison, has embraced the Islamic religion and is making plans for her life out of prison.

Miss Little was acquitted of a first-degree murder charge in a highly publicized trial in 1975 stemming from the slaying of a jailer in Beaufort County, where she was being held pending an appeal of a breaking and entering conviction.

She is currently serving a sentence of seven to 10 years for breaking and entering.

Resolution

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners has adopted a resolution endorsing the $9 million school bond issue to be voted on by Pitt residents June 8.

The resolution, saying commissioners have determined that school facilities are in need of repair, remodeling, and additions and that capital outlay funds to provide the necessary facilities, "cannot be met on a current appropriation and tax levy basis," urged, "the citizens of Pitt County...support the $9 million school bond issue..."

The resolution added that trying to meet the needs of the city and county school districts through current appropriation tax levies "would place a too heavy burden on tax payers," of the county.

Sampson Going To Virginia--Maybe

By ESTES THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — While Harrisonburg High basketball star Ralph Sampson appeared to leave a loophole in his announcement that he'll attend Virginia, his coach and athletic director say they expect him to sign a national letter of intent with the school today.

The 7-foot-3½ Sampson, who scored 1,670 points and grabbed more than 1,000 rebounds in slightly over three years at Harrisonburg, said Thursday night "I changed my mind at least 50 times" before settling on Virginia.

"Right now I'm going to Virginia," Sampson told at least 100 media representatives who crowded into the local high school gym to hear the decision that ended months of speculation on the future of Virginia's mostly hotly recruited player since Moses Malone. That drew a loud round of applause from 45 to 50 local residents who heard the news conference by loudspeaker outside the gym.

Sampson, 18, the only non-collegian named to the U.S. team for this summer's Pan-American Games, said it came down to Kentucky, "known for basketball," and Virginia, "not well known for basketball but in a strong (Atlantic Coast) conference."

"This (Thursday) morning, I was still undecided. I was changing back and forth the whole day. I just sat down and made up my mind to myself where I wanted to go," said Sampson.

"Kentucky was strong. It was on top for a while. I just siphoned everything out and just decided on what I wanted to do," he added.

But then Sampson appeared to cloud the issue when he said "I have a letter of intent to Virginia. If I have any doubt and change my mind, it will be Kentucky." He added that if Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall "wants to talk to me, I will talk to him."

Later, however, Harrisonburg Coach Roger Bergey and Athletic Director Brownie Cummins said they expected Sampson to stand by his announcement and sign with Virginia, probably today.

So, too, did Virginia Coach Terry Holland, who did not attend the news conference and learned he was the lucky man in a telephone call from Bergey four minutes before it began.

"I'm not worried about running over there and getting his signature. This youngster has made his own decision...and I'm not worried about it...He's just a super young man," Holland said.

Virginia, which won 19-10 last season and made it to the second round of the National Invitation Tournament, returns starters Jeff Lamp, Lee Raker, Jeff Jones and Mike Owens.

"What we're thinking about now is winning the national championship. That has to be our goal," said Holland.

Sampson, who averaged nearly 30 points and 20 rebounds a game in leading Harrisonburg to a 26-0 record this past season, said all the schools recruiting him knew he might turn pro in two years.

The pros "supposedly are going to offer me a lot of money in two years," he said.

Sampson had received feelers but no firm offers earlier in the year from the San Antonio Spurs and Detroit Pistons of the National Basketball Association.

He said, however, he turned down a chance at pro ball right now "because I want to go to college."

Besides Virginia's membership in the ACC, Sampson said he was impressed by its location in Charlottesville, "like Harrisonburg a small city. It's where I want to go. My mother and father told me to go where I want to, to do what I want to. If I had signed with any other school, there would have been doubt."

Sarah Sampson said her son didn't tell her of his decision until just before the news conference, although he spent the entire afternoon at a pants factory where she works in the personnel office because "the phone was ringing at home..."

The three losing coaches expressed disappointment but not bitterness.

"...It's a momentary thing and it involves this one recruit. It doesn't reflect our feelings toward the year of recruiting we've had and the respect that we have for the outstanding players that have chosen Kentucky," said Hall from Lexington, Ky.

Sampson will play with the Pan-Am squad in a June 22 exhibition game in Lexington against a team of former Kentucky stars and Hall said "I want to urge all of our fans to accept him graciously, to respect his ability...This is an outstanding young man. He has a great future..."

In Chapel Hill, N.C., North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said "we're disappointed Ralph did not select the University of North Carolina, but wish him every success. He will undoubtedly go on to become one of the greatest college and professional players of all time."

Virginia Tech Coach Charlie

Moir said from Blacksburg that "we worked awfully hard on him...I felt we did a good job recruiting. I think we're gonna have a good basketball team without Ralph...We'll look forward to the challenge of playing against him."

Celts, Bird Will Meet

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics and the attorney for college basketball star Larry Bird will meet Tuesday in an effort to sign the Indiana State college-player-of-the-year to a National Basketball Association contract.

A meeting between the two sides had been scheduled for today, but Red Auerbach, Celtics' president and general manager, said Bird's agent, Bob Woolf "had to be away and I had to be away."

"We won't even be talking about it again until Tuesday," Auerbach said Thursday.

"Both sides are taking the weekend off," said Woolf. The Celtics had hoped to reach a tentative agreement with Woolf today in the long negotiations for Bird.

At a meeting Wednesday, the Celtics increased their original multi-year offer from $500,000 to about $600,000 per season. Woolf's most recent proposal was $700,000.

Auerbach said he and Woolf did not discuss the contract Thursday.

Jerry McGee Trying Not To Get Too Elated About 61 In Kemper

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry McGee was trying very hard not to be too elated about his career-best score.

"It's very, very unusual to put two rounds like that back to back," he said, looking ahead to today's second round of the $350,000 Kemper Open Golf Tournament.

"I really can't expect that. I hope I do it, but I don't expect it."

"There's a lot of golf left. We're still just jockeying for position."

McGee jockeyed his way to an 11-under-par 61 in Thursday's storm-delayed first round but — amazingly — held only a 1-stroke lead over Craig Stadler, who chipped in three times on the way to a 62.

While a 61 and a 62 in the same round is rare enough, even more remarkable was the gap to the next group — 5 shots back of Stadler and 6 behind McGee. It was composed of Joe Hager, Bobby Wadkins and Gary McCord, tied at 67, 5 shots under par on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course.

McGee's effort, which included 11 birdies and no bogeys, matched the best score on the tour this year. Ben Crenshaw's 61 at Phoenix, however, was on a shorter course, was 10 under par and came when the players were allowed improved lies in the fairway. Only two other scores of 62 had been shot this season.

McGee said a pep talk from his wife Jill and a tip from Jack Grout, Jack Nicklaus' teacher, to stand closer to the ball were the key ingredients in his effort.

McGee, winner of two titles in 13 years on the tour, missed only one green and almost made birdie there, his chip stopping two inches from the cup. He birdied his first five holes, only one with a putt longer than 15 feet. He made the turn in 30, reeled off another string of three birdies, got a share of the lead with an 18-footer on the 15th and then leaped high in the air when his 45-foot birdie putt found the hole on the 18th for the lead alone.

Stadler, who had chipped in for three of his nine birdies, had an eagle, a bogey and only 22 putts. He was being interviewed when McGee swept past him. He could only shrug helplessly when his 62 wasn't good enough to stand up for the lead.

Texas Is Favorite

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — In years past, the College World Series more often than not has been a showcase for Arizona State or Southern California.

Those two teams have won 10 of the last 12 national baseball titles and with the Sun Devils and Trojans in the series, the question is not so much whether they'll win, but how many of their players will sign major league contracts.

Not so this year. Neither Southern Cal, the defending champion, nor Arizona State, last year's runner-up, qualified for the 33rd CWS that opens tonight. In fact, neither team even made it to regional play this year.

Instead, the teams to beat will be Texas, rated No. 1 and owner of the best record in the country, and second-rated Miami, Fla., which finished fourth in last year's series and is the only member of the 1978 cast returning.

Four other teams from the nation's top 10 also are in the field, including No. 5 Arizona, which already has beaten Texas three times this year. No. 7 Arkansas, 46-13, runner-up to Texas in the Southwest Conference, meets No. 8 Pepperdine, 50-16, in the series opener tonight, followed by a game between Miami, 55-9, and Arizona, 42-23.

On Saturday night, Texas, 53-6, takes on Connecticut, 31-11, and No. 3 Fullerton State, 55-13, tangles with No. 4 Mississippi State, 47-10.

Pitcher Darold Knowles of the Oakland A's worked in all seven World Series games against the New York Mets in 1973.

Indy Winner Gets Greeting

By JOE BIGHAM

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A proud hometown crowd cheered and shouted and told Rick Mears he was "someone special" for winning American auto racing's most prestigious title, the Indianapolis 500.

Mears, an All-American grin creasing his handsome, boyish face, shyly shook hands, signed autographs and told his fans here about Sunday's race.

"I just tried to get to the end," said the 27-year-old Mears, who roared from duce buggy racing to the Indy 500 championship in just three years. "I just tried to keep everybody in sight and figured if I got down to the end, then I'd sprint with them."

Mears said he won by "having the right help with the right people with the right equipment."

His humble attitude was cited during a brief ceremony Thursday in this Central California city of 90,000 at which Mears received several plaques honoring his victory.

Bradley Off To Great Start

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Bradley usually opens a Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament by shooting a 78 or a 79 and then finds herself battling the remaining three rounds to finish with a respectable total.

But the unusual happened Thursday as the $100,000 tournament got underway at the par-72, 6,410-yard course at the Wykagyl Country Club. The 28-year-old Bradley, winner of this tournament in 1976 for her first pro triumph, shot a 66.

In the process, she built up a 1-stroke advantage over Nancy Lopez, the defending champion and currently the No. 1 money winner with $103,475, and tied an LPGA record with a 29 on the front nine. Trailing Lopez was Judy Rankin with a 69 while Beverly Klass, Peggy Conley, JoAnn Washam and JoAnn Prentice were bunched at 70.

Bradley had a similar score last year in Los Angeles, but it was Marlene Hagge who set the original standard in 1971 in Columbus, Ohio. Carol Mann first duplicated the feat in 1975 in Dublin, Ohio.

Can the six-year tour veteran, who had an eagle on the par-5 third hole and also ran a string of five straight birdies, stand such first round success?

"Everyone will know the answer tomorrow," Bradley said, smiling. "This is the first time that I've ever jumped off to such a good start."

"All along I felt that I should have been winning, but it has always been the opening round that is my downfall. I've been in the top 10 in 11 of 13 tournaments this year. Four times I finished second and three times I was third."

"Imagine what it might have been if I had shot even a par score? Instead I have posted a 77 or sometimes even a 79. One thing I have to say is that I am proud of the way that I have always hung in and bounced back for those close finishes."

Also, in Monday's writeup of the club championship, it was incorrectly reported that Enoch Spencer had won second place in the fourth flight. Actually, it was Enoch Reid.

Glenn Cox also has eagled the ninth hole, hitting his second shot, an 8-iron into the hole from 140-yards out.

Bullets Say They Can Rally, Sonics Say No

By TOM SEPPY

AP Sports Writer
LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Elvin Hayes says the Washington Bullets will make National Basketball Association history. The Seattle SuperSonics disagree.

Hayes, as do many of his teammates, coaches and management, believes the Bullets will win three consecutive games from Seattle, beginning tonight, and become the first team to stage a successful comeback after being down 3-1 in the best-of-seven NBA championship.

"I am positive we are going to come back," Hayes said after the Bullets returned here from Seattle. "There is no question in my mind. We are the world champions."

"They are going to have to beat us. We aren't going to give it away. We are going to win Friday night and then go back out there and win and force a seventh game."

"We had to win one of three in Seattle so it doesn't matter which one. It's hard to beat us three times on a court. We've proven that."

The Bullets are confident they can win three straight because they accomplished the feat against the San Antonio Spurs to take the Eastern Conference Championship. Seattle's Dennis Johnson is quick to point out that the Sonics are not the Spurs.

"We don't get all the publicity, but the Spurs are weak defensively," Johnson said. "We remember last year, and the difference now is we're not playing on emotion. We did it a lot last year. Now we're playing with confidence."

In last year's final, the Sonics led the Bullets in the final series 3-2 but came into Washington for Game 6 and got blown off the court 117-82. The Bullets went on to win the seventh game in Seattle.

"Seattle is better than Atlanta and San Antonio," Bullets guard Kevin Grevey said. "But we always play better when we have to win. No doubt we'll play well now — we can't have another bad game. I can't explain it. When we have to be at our peak, we come alive."

"We're not by any means out of it, especially with two of the last three at home," he said. "Our confidence hasn't been deflated."

Expos Blank Phillies For Third Straight

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN

AP Sports Writer
The Montreal Expos and Philadelphia Phillies seem to be in a rut. The Expos can't do anything but pitch six-hit shutouts...at the suddenly "Phutle" Phillies.

"I've never seen anything like this before. Each time out seems to be better than the last one," Manager Dick Williams said Thursday after the Expos blanked the Phillies for the third time in a row, this time 1-0 behind Scott Sanderson's six-hit — what else? — pitching and Warren Cromartie's first-inning sacrifice fly.

It marked the first time in the Expos' 11-year existence that they hurled three consecutive shutouts. Steve Rogers and Bill Lee turned the trick Tuesday and Wednesday by scores of 9-0 and 2-0, respectively.

It was the first time since 1974 the Phillies had been blanked three times running and the three-time National League East Division champs fell three games behind first-place Montreal. They have dropped four games in a row and 10 of their last 13.

In other National League action, the Los Angeles Dodgers outlasted the San Francisco Giants 12-10, the Houston Astros blanked the Cincinnati Reds 3-0, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 9-6, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 4-3 in 10 innings and the San Diego Padres defeated the Atlanta Braves 3-1.

Dodgers 12, Giants 10
Steve Garvey slugged a homer, double and single and drove in four runs, Dave Lopes collected three doubles and Derrel Thomas had four singles as the Dodgers handed the Giants their sixth consecutive setback. The Dodgers erupted for seven runs in the fourth inning for a 10-4 lead, then withstood a five-run San Francisco seventh.

Winner Don Sutton was charged with nine runs on 13 hits in 62-3 innings while loser Vida Blue was knocked out in the fourth after giving up nine runs on eight hits. The triumph enabled the Dodgers to pass the Giants and move into third place in the NL West by one-half game.

Astros 3, Reds 0
Houston charged into first place in the West for the first time since May 10 on the strength of Jose Cruz's three-run homer in the sixth inning off Fred Norman that put the Astros one game ahead of the Reds. Craig Reynolds led off the sixth with a single and Cesar Cedeño walked. The next pitch sailed over the right field fence for Cruz' fourth homer of the year. Rick Williams scattered seven hits for the victory.

Cardinals 9, Mets 6
Keith Hernandez hammered a three-run homer in the first inning and George Hendrick followed with a towering solo blast, chasing rookie Mike Scott after one-third of an inning. Ken Oberkell chipped in with three hits, including an RBI single that capped the Cardinals' five-run first inning, and Lou Brock had two singles, boosting his batting average to .381. Winner Bob Sykes lasted until the eighth inning, when the Mets scored four times.

Pirates 4, Cubs 3
Chicago's ace reliever, Bruce Sutter, shut down a bases-loaded Pittsburgh threat in the ninth inning, but he couldn't do it in the 10th. He gave up singles to left by Ed Ott and Phil Garner and Manny Sanguillen's pinch-single off third baseman Steve Ontiveros' glove. Omar Moreno gave him a brief reprieve with a grounder to force Ott at the plate, but Tim Lincecum hit an 0-2 pitch into center for a game-winning single.

Padres 3, Braves 1
Dave Winfield hit a two-run homer, his 11th of the year, and Gene Richards drove in San Diego's other run with a single as the Padres posted their fifth straight victory. Winfield's sixth-inning homer gave him a league-leading 41 runs batted in and gave the Padres a 3-0 lead.

Dr. Pepper took over control of first place in the Prep League with a 10-2 win over Cox Realty last night.

Dr. Pepper is now 3-1 on the year, while Cox fell to 2-2.

Cox scored first, getting a run in the top of the second. Ted Stanley singled and moved to third on two barks. He scored on Edward Farley's single.

Dr. Pepper came back with five runs in the bottom of the third to take the lead for good. Daryl Pettis tripled and scored when Andre Wooten reached on an error. Wooten was then thrown out trying to steal. Calvin Bradley singled and moved up on a passed ball. Mark Gatlin walked, and Tony Daniels singled to load the bases. James Smith got a hit, driving in both Bradley and Gatlin. David Hammond walked, and Marvin Barrett singled to score Daniels and Smith for a 5-1 lead.

Dr. Pepper added two more in the fourth and three in the fifth, while Cox got its other run in the sixth.

Stanley led Cox with two hits, while Bradley, Gatlin, Daniels, Smith and Barrett each had two for Dr. Pepper.

Babe Ruth

Planters Bank 14, Wachovia Bank 6

unbeaten in Babe Ruth League play last night, downing Wachovia Bank, 14-6.

Planters is now 4-0, while Wachovia slipped to 0-2.

Wachovia scored first, in the bottom of the first. Ed Frazier walked, stole second and scored on Troy Hudson's single.

They added three more in the second for a 4-0 lead.

But Planters came up with one in the top of the third. Mont Carter walked, stole both second and third and scored on Crowell Pope's hit. Planters then tied it up with three in the fourth. Both teams scored two in the fifth, leaving it tied at 6-6.

Two more scored in the sixth, giving Planters the lead for good. Pope walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Mike Pollard also walked and both stole up a base. Keith Phillips reached on an error, scoring both runners. Planters added six more runs in the seventh to wrap it up.

Carter and Jim Whitehurst each had two hits to lead Planters, while Hudson had two for Wachovia.

Little League

First Federal 5, Moose 0

First Federal pushed past the winless Moose, 5-0, yesterday in the Tar Heel Little League.

The win left First Federal with a 4-4 mark, while the Moose are 0-8.

First Federal got all it needed in the first inning, scoring twice. Tyrone Barrett walked and scored on a triple by Ricky Outlaw. He scored on an error.

The other three runs came in the fourth.

Outlaw and Derek Dickens each had two hits to pace First Federal, while Charlie Littleton and Greg Jones had two each for the Moose.

Jaycees 32, Kiwanis 6

The Jaycees drowned the Kiwanis in a run barrage yesterday in the North State Little League, taking a 32-6 victory.

The win boosted the Jaycee record to 5-3, while the Kiwanis fell to 2-6.

The Jaycees got all they needed in the first inning, scoring eight runs. Maury Harris was hit by a pitch to open things up and David Lee walked. Walks to Kenneth Butler and Evan Hause brought in the first run. Rocky Ziehr, Tyrone Daniels and Bruce Koonce also walked, bringing in three more. Harris singled in a run, as did Lee. Butler walked to score another, and a wild pitch brought in Harris with the eighth run.

The Jaycees added nine in the second, nine more in the third, and six in the fourth.

The Kiwanis got their first four in the second. Van Alston reached on an error and moved up on a walk to Robert Evans and a fielder's choice by Scott Scharinger. William Smith singled in two runs, and Jason Galloway reached on an error, scoring the next two.

The Kiwanis added one each in the third and fourth.

Butler and Jordy Smith led the Jaycees with three hits each, while Harris added two. No one had more than one for the Kiwanis.

Senior Babe Ruth

Clifton Ins. 2, Kiwanis 0

Bill Clifton Insurance remained unbeaten in Sr. Babe Ruth League play with a 2-0 win over University Kiwanis last night.

Clifton is 2-0 while the Kiwanis are now 1-1.

Clifton got its first run in the second. Billy Dough singled and moved up on an error. He took third on an out and was brought home by Wayne Stokes' sacrifice fly.

The other run came in the fourth. Joey Mattheis reached on an error and moved up as Tod Galloway reached on another misplay and Dough arrived on a fielder's choice. A wild pitch scored Mattheis.

Mattheis allowed only two hits by the Kiwanis in hurling the victory. Clifton got only one off Mac Stokes, who took the loss.

The other two Sr. Babe Ruth League games, Winter-ville at Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt at Farmville, were postponed because of rain.

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

Did Pat and Tom Underwood pitch Thursday night?

Oh, brother, did they ever!

Pat, a 22-year-old making his major league debut with the Detroit Tigers, silenced Toronto for 81-3 innings, then left the mound to a standing ovation from the Blue Jays' fans.

Meanwhile, Tom, his 25-year-old brother, was pitching almost as well for the Blue Jays...almost, but not quite.

He, too, had a shutout going for seven innings. But when Jerry Morales pounded his first pitch in the eighth inning over the left-center field wall, Pat had his first victory in the big leagues. Tom had his seventh loss without a win and the Tigers had a 1-0 triumph, their sixth in a row.

"I felt like I was watching myself," Tom said.

In the rest of the American League it was Minnesota 13, Oakland 2; Milwaukee 5, New York 4; Seattle 12, California 10, and Boston 3, Texas 2 in 12 innings.

Pat gave up a fifth-inning double by Rico Carty and an eighth-inning single by Dan Ainge. And when Alfredo Griffin doubled with one away in the ninth, Tigers Manager Les Moss trudged to the mound and, to the disapproval of the 12,423 fans, yanked his young starter, bringing in Dave Tobik and then John Hiller to get the final two outs.

Pat had four strikeouts and walked just one batter while Tom allowed six hits, walked two batters and struck out six.

Helen Underwood was flown up from her home in Kokomo, Ind., by the Blue Jays so she could watch her sons pitch.

Twins 13, A's 2

"It was just one of those games," said Oakland Manager Jim Marshall, who has seen a lot of these games, with the A's wallowing around the bottom of the West Division while the Twins challenge for the lead.

Minnesota put the game away in the second inning, taking a 5-0 lead with three runs scoring on rookie John Castino's triple. But after Oakland scored twice in the third, the Twins added four runs in the fourth, two on Ron Jackson's single and two on Jose Morales' homer. Jackson added a two-run homer in the eighth.

Brewers 5, Yankees 4

Ron Davis, who had beaten Milwaukee twice in the last three games, couldn't stave off the Brewers this time as they pounded out one hit after another in a decisive three-run ninth to wipe out the last vestige of what had been a 4-0 New York lead.

The Brewers started their comeback against Luis Tiant in the seventh inning, when Ben Oglivie hit a two-run homer. Before that inning was over, Ken Clay had replaced Tiant.

Mariners 12, Angels 10

Bruce Bochte hit RBI singles in the first and fifth innings, then slammed a three-run homer into the upper deck of the Kingdome in the sixth to put Seattle ahead for good against the Angels.

California built a 6-1 lead but the Mariners wiped it out with five runs in the fifth inning, three on Dan Meyer's homer off Mark Clear. Bobby Grich's second homer of the game put the Angels on top 8-6, but Clear was rocked by Bochte's blast that made it 9-8.

The Mariners added three runs in the eighth and they needed them. Don Baylor hit a two-run homer for the Angels in the ninth.

Red Sox 3, Rangers 2

The Red Sox ended a jinx in Arlington Stadium that had reached back to September 1977 and halted the Rangers' four-game winning streak.

Sparky Lyle, who had retired the first eight Boston batters he faced after taking over for Jon Matlack in the 10th, walked George Scott with two out in the 12th and pinch-runner Jim Dwyer stole second before Jerry Remy got his game-winning hit, a liner off Lyle's glove into center field.

MOURNS MARY — With tears streaming down his face, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, right, is escorted by Dr. William H.D. Mary Pickford Laid To Rest

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The woman who was "America's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford, was eulogized as being "truly the sweetheart of the world" during the private funeral services she had requested.

About 100 close friends and co-workers of Miss Pickford, once the most famous movie star in the world, gathered Thursday in the Wee Kirk O' the Heather chapel at Forest Lawn Memorial Park.

The group was reminded by Dr. William H. D. Hornaday of the United Church of Religious Science that in her will Miss Pickford had this "gentle admonition": that there be a memorial service with beautiful music — but no weeping.

An organ and a violin softly played "Mary," "My Buddy," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "Unforgettable" and "Feelings."

Tears streamed down the face of the star's husband, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, as he was led out into the hazy sunshine at the end of the ceremony.

Miss Pickford and Rogers, a Navy veteran of World War II, had sponsored the Naval Sea Cadets, a pre-Navy training organization, and outside the church eight teen-age Naval Sea Cadets stood at attention.

Stepson Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and silent film star Lillian Gish were late arrivals at the church, a replica of the one made famous by poet Robert Burns.

Among the few celebrities from the Pickford-Rogers era were Mary Brian, Carmel Myers, William Bakewell and Mrs. Richard Arlen.

The tiny church was decorated with only a few floral displays.

plays for the simple ceremony, including an American flag in carriages to honor Miss Pickford's fund-raising during two world wars.

Dr. Hornaday cited her contributions to many hundreds of charities, adding: "She cared, she shared and she asked no credit."

A cousin of Miss Pickford, television producer-writer John Mantley of "Gunsmoke" and "How the West Was Won," delivered the eulogy.

"Kings and emperors gave her elaborate gifts, princes vied to be invited to her home," said Mantley. "But most of all, people of the world gave her their love with overflowing."

Miss Pickford died Tuesday at age 86 of a cerebral hemorrhage. She was buried in a plot she had purchased at the Glendale cemetery in 1948. It is the burial place of her mother, Charlotte, her sister, Lottie, and her brother, Jack.

Glenda Holds Two 'Oscars'

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — She has won the Oscar for best actress two times, and this is her measure of its worth: "It's a fine weapon for repelling intruders."

Like many English performers, as well as a number of Americans, Glenda Jackson disapproves of the competitive aspects of the Motion Picture Academy awards. Happily for her, she was working in England when she won hers for "Women in Love," 1970, and "A Touch of Class," 1973. She did appear on the program one year.

"Once is quite enough," she commented. "It is an experience not to be missed. I did watch the awards on television this year, and it was wonderful to see Audrey Hepburn looking so beautiful."

"There is a highly charged emotion atmosphere to the awards, but it is all in anticipation. When the winner is known, all of that is dissipated. Meanwhile, what about the losers? It is disgusting to make them sit there and be seen by millions in their disappointment. It's like a public hanging."

"An acting performance is not something to be framed in order to win some prize. It should stand or fall on its own merits. To place it in competition with other actors playing other kind of roles is a refined form of cruelty."

Her auburn hair clipped by Francesca Annis, was the kind of lady men named towns after. She mastered men and convention, and used them to work her will.

I suppose some might tire of 13 weeks' worth of costumes and curtsies, but I didn't. I was hooked early, and looked forward with zeal to each Sunday night scandal.

I can't remember whether there was actually an affair-a-week, but it seems like it. I hadn't known much about Mrs.

Langtry, but from the first episode, I knew this was going to be juicy going.

In that chapter, Lillie was still Emilie Charlotte Le Breton, a minister's daughter growing up on the English Channel Island of Jersey. She falls in love with a fellow, but her brother warns not to get serious. It seems their minister father was something of a ladies' man whose long-ago indiscretion had resulted in the birth of the lad whom Emilie was now falling in love with.

He was her half-brother. Well, Emilie grows up and becomes Lillie. She marries Edward Langtry, a boorish fellow who claims to be a wealthy sporting type, but soon finds him to be a boring pretender. That's okay, though, Lillie uses him to make her way into royal society, and her career as courtesan and coveted lady begins. Her first affair was with Edward VII, then Prince of Wales. In ensuing episodes, lovers and would-be lovers were everywhere.

There were others, many others, plus a wonderful cast of friends and acquaintances. My favorite was Oscar Wilde (Peter Egan), the consummate aesthete who became Lillie's closest friend, but never her lover.

In the background through most of this lurked the oily Edward Langtry (Anton Rodgers), who became a drunken bum but hung to Lillie — in name, at least — by refusing to grant her a divorce. What a hateful, pitiful character he was, weak, yet resolute in his aim to strike back at Lillie.

In the preview for the final episode, host Alistair Cooke

(who, I suspect, has fallen in love with Lillie himself in the course of these weeks) tells us the fate of a lady who lived by her beauty. Now in her 60s, a faded Lillie goes to America, where she spends an evening in a 50-cents-a-dance joint.

She is attracted to a young lout, from whom she buys two dances. "I have danced with princes," she tells him. "Ah, "Well," she says with a laugh, "It doesn't matter ..."

Inventor Will Get Millions

AWARDED MILLIONS — Peter Roberts displays a socket wrench which he invented. Thursday a U.S. Circuit Court ordered Sears Roebuck to return all profits on the wrench. (AP Laserphoto)

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — David slew Goliath with a slingshot. Peter Roberts used a quick-release ratchet wrench to do in Sears, Roebuck and Co. and get back the rights to his invention and perhaps more than $60 million in profits the retailing giant made on it.

"It shows how a small man can receive justice even against an enormous corporation if right is on his side," Roberts said Thursday. "Right is the strongest weapon a person can have."

A federal judge has ordered Sears to return to Roberts all the profits made from sales of the wrenches, plus the American and Canadian patents, and ordered the company to rescind a 1965 contract under which Roberts sold all rights to Sears for $10,000.

U.S. District Judge George N. Leighton said the patents and rights are to be returned to Roberts by June 15 and set a July 9 hearing to determine total profits made.

He said Sears had acquired Roberts' rights through fraud, breach of a confidential relationship and negligent misrepresentations.

Sears says it will appeal.

Roberts' chief attorney, Louis G. Davidson, said that during trial a year ago, Sears records showed that 25 million wrenches had been sold at a profit of $44 million. Davidson said the firm has been ordered to make no more quick-release wrenches. It has about eight different lines of such tools, another of Roberts' lawyers said.

Roberts, a 34-year-old delicatessen operator in Chattanooga, Tenn., sees what has happened as "a victory for the little guy."

He was 19, working as a clerk in a Sears store in Gardner, Mass., when he modified existing socket wrenches through an invention allowing easy, one-handed removal of socket heads.

He retained a patent lawyer and approached Sears with his

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Throngs of Poles headed for Warsaw today to welcome Pope John Paul II, the first Polish ruler of the Roman Catholic Church who comes home Saturday for the first time since his election seven months ago.

At least a million visitors are expected in the Polish capital, a city of 1.3 million. The government set up an elaborate system of roadblocks to bar non-essential traffic that with the vast crowds expected would cause chaos in Warsaw and the other major cities on the nine-day papal itinerary.

The government appealed to travelers to use buses, trains and other forms of public transit. Special traffic controls for Warsaw extended as far away as Sochaczew, 32 miles from the capital. Parking lots were set up as much as eight miles from places the pope is to visit.

Special detours were laid out for drivers, and police circulated instructions on how to get from place to place. They issued passes to motorists with pressing reasons to drive into blockaded areas.

Officials also hoped limited alcohol sales would control the crowds. Liquor stores will be closed throughout the country Saturday for a regular monthly day off and on Sunday as they always are for the Sabbath. In addition, officials in Krakow ordered the liquor stores closed while the pope is visiting the city where he was archbishop when he was elected.

St. Norbert's Church in Krakow urging parishioners to pledge total abstinence.

The pope will be welcomed at an airport arrival ceremony in Warsaw Saturday morning, then cheered by crowds lining the streets as his motorcade travels to the Warsaw Cathedral. He will meet with Communist Party chief Edward Giersek and celebrate Mass and speak in Victory Square.

He goes to Poznan, in western Poland, on Sunday and then to Gniezno, Poland's first capital, for another Mass and meetings with young people and dignitaries.

From Monday to Wednesday he will be in Czestochowa, site of Poland's most sacred shrine, the Jasna Gora Monastery. On Thursday, he visits his birthplace, Wadowice, and the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz for a memorial service, then returns to Krakow.

Next Friday, June 8, he goes to Nowy Targ to celebrate Mass, then returns to Krakow in the afternoon. On Saturday he visits the Holy Cross Sanctuary in neighboring Mogila and again returns to Krakow.

On Sunday, his last day in Poland, he celebrates Mass in Krakow and delivers an address and then departs for Rome in the afternoon.

Halina Kwiatkowska, 57, a leading Krakow actress described by an Italian magazine as the pope's youthful love before he was ordained a priest, said Wednesday they were just "good friends" in high school and during the Nazi occupation when they were active in an underground theater group.

She said they remained friends after his ordination in 1946, that he celebrated a Requiem Mass of 1970 for her father, his high-school Latin teacher, and that she last saw him in 1976 during Christmas festivities.

SBI Aiding Funds Hunt

REIDSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation is assisting the Reidsville Police Department in probing a complaint of missing money in the city recreation department's operations, a bureau official said Thursday.

SBI district supervisor Charlie Ray said that the bureau got involved at the request of the police department.

"The complaint is that some money is missing ... there is a possible embezzlement," Ray said.

Bob Cox, Reidsville city manager, announced last month that an internal audit had "disclosed a shortage between cash receipts and cash deposits within the recreation department operations."

Under normal procedures, the recreation department takes in funds and deposits them at the city finance department, he said.

City officials have refused to say how much money was determined to be missing during the audit.

They also would not comment on whether the reports are connected to the resignation of Stan Perry, city parks and recreation director. Perry said he resigned under pressure by Cox because of the missing money but has declined to comment further.

Ray said that he expects agent Terry Johnson to make a report of his findings in about a week.

Singers Offer Music Program

A musical program will be held Friday, June 1, 7:30 p.m., at Fleming Chapel Church, featuring the Temple Singers of Jacksonville and the Southern Jubilees of Greenville.

Sunday, June 3, 7:30 p.m., a revival will begin at Fleming Chapel, with missionary Sister E. L. Marsha of Baltimore, Md., and the Rev. J. L. Williams of Robersonville. Services will begin nightly at 7:30 p.m., ending Friday, June 8.

The following churches and choirs will appear: Monday, Fleming Chapel; Tuesday, St. John's, Stokes; Wednesday, Best Chapel, Greenville; Thursday, Holly Hill, Belvoir; Friday, to be announced. The public is invited to attend these services.

Witnesses Set Summer Events

The Watchtower Bible and Tract Society of New York has announced a series of over 90 "Living Hope" district conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses for the summer of 1979.

Charles L. Corey, spokesman for the religious group in Greenville, said 950,000 delegates are anticipated at the meetings scheduled for over 60 cities in the continental United States.

Corey said 150 persons will represent Greenville at a four-day meeting scheduled for the Hampton Coliseum in Hampton, Virginia, June 14-17.

Fuel Made Of Wood Refuse

FROM SAWDUST TO FUEL — A large hydraulic platform pushes a truck loaded with sawdust and wood chips up to a 50-degree angle as the wood by-products are unloaded at the Pullman-Woodex company at Goldston, N.C. The chips are converted to small wood pellets which can be used as an energy source. The company hopes the pellets will be a valuable alternative to conventional energy sources. (AP Laserphoto)

GOLDSTON, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina company says it's manufacturing a fuel made by converting sawdust and other wood refuse into pellets.

Officials of Pullman Woodex, a subsidiary of Pullman Inc., unveiled a wood-fuel product designed for industrial use, saying that because it uses waste material, it can be produced without depleting forests.

The company calls the product Woodex biomass — small wood pellets made from sawdust and fallen limbs and branches.

The pellets' inventor, Rudolf Gunnerman, said, "If you take 150-million tons of renewable resource and make them into pellets, you have the equivalent of 50-million tons of coal and 150-million barrels of oil in BTU value, and it's much cleaner."

North Carolina's total yearly energy consumption is about 1.4 trillion BTUs a year.

Gunnerman, president of Bio-Solar Research and Development, said he started work on the process in the mid-1960s. His product is patented, he said.

He described the pellets as "basically synthetic coal, only a lot cleaner."

The plant in Goldston receives 30 truckloads of sawdust and woodscraps daily and sends out 12 truckloads of pellets.

The scraps are fed into a machine that separates wood from other materials and sent to a hopper that pulverizes the wood. The powder is then compressed into pellets.

Officials of Pullman Woodex displayed pellets and showed the company's new plant outside of Goldston to reporters Thursday.

Harvey J. Trilli, president of another Pullman subsidiary, described the process as "another big step for energy independence for America."

"Once you take coal, oil or gas out of the ground and use it, it's gone forever. Now we're producing a fuel that is eternally renewable," Trilli said.

Opening lead: Three of ♥.

Declarer has an advantage in the play of the cards. He can see his side's total assets while the defenders can see only one hand and dummy and sometimes must infer what partner has.

On occasion, however, the defenders get a chance to signal their holdings. And at other times the manner in which declarer plays can give a clue to a defender's holding. Today's hand is an illustration.

North-South reached four spades in routine fashion, and West correctly chose to lead the three of hearts. Many players are in the habit of "playing it safe" by leading through dummy's suit from this type of hand. The bidding, however, made it evident that the defenders had to attack before declarer could extract trumps and set up dummy's long suit for discards. Leading dummy's suit is more likely to help declarer than the defense.

Declarer flew with the ace of hearts and East encouraged moderately with the five. The jack of trumps was run to the queen, and West decided to cash the king of hearts and exit safely with a trump in the hope that, in the fullness of time, he would collect two club tricks to defeat the game. But declarer was able to discard two clubs on dummy's diamonds, so the contract was made.

As soon as West cashed the king of hearts, the contract became ironclad. He should have realized that it was vital to get East on lead for a club shift, to insure two club tricks for the defenders before declarer could get any discards. To accomplish that he should win the king of spades and lead a low heart! Declarer's play at trick one made it a virtual certainty that East held the queen of hearts. If declarer held that card he would no doubt have let the opening lead run up to his hand.

East, of course, was guilty of contributory negligence. He should have been much more vigorous with his signal at trick one. When dummy's ace was played, East should have followed with the nine. There is surely no other suit he would like his partner to lead, and it had to be advantageous to gain the lead for a club shift.

New Governing Board For Colleges Advances

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would remove the state community college and technical institute system from control of the state Board of Education, setting up a new 19-member governing board, drew closer to enactment Thursday.
The bill, already approved by the Senate, won tentative House approval on a 104-5 vote.
The state Board of Community Colleges and Technical Institutes would be created by the legislation, becoming the third state education panel. The state Board of Education would continue to govern public school policy. The third board is the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

The move has been opposed by the state Board of Education, but supported by Gov. Jim Hunt.
Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, the bill's floor leader, said the community and technical college system needs more direction than the education board has been able to give it.
"You need stronger accountability. You need stronger leadership," she said. "It's not that the state Board of Education hasn't been trying to do that. It's just a matter of time."
Rep. Eugene White, D-Caldwell, opposed the legislation, saying it would increase competition for state money between public schools and community colleges and would decrease cooperation between high schools and the technical college system.

After final House approval the bill must still go back to the Senate for concurrence in amendments.
Under the House version, the new board would take control in 1981. It would consist of 10 persons appointed by the governor and seven named by the General Assembly, the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.
The Senate version called for two fewer members on the board and would make it effective next year.

A Downstalk 'Overload'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fred Bond, general manager of the Flue Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation, says the tobacco growers' cooperative must reduce the amount of downstalk tobacco in its inventory.
"To achieve this goal, we must encourage farmers to leave the lower leaves in the field this year," Bond said. He said current holdings of more than two million pounds of downstalk tobacco are in the stabilization inventory, which has been growing rapidly since 1974.
Bond was interviewed recently along with several other tobacco-industry leaders for a 30-minute television show to be aired June 3 on Channel 6, WECT-TV in Wilmington.
According to Bond, the way to give the stabilization program a shot in the arm is to decrease the supply of downstalk tobacco going to auction so prices will rise to a point at which they will be sufficient to cover the increased costs of stored tobacco.
"The quality of our aged tobacco is very good," Bond said. "It rivals the quality of the downstalk and non-descript tobacco currently available and is suited to the needs of the manufacturers."
Appearing with Bond on the show will be Billy Yeargin, managing director of Tobacco Growers Information Committee, and Cletus Horne, president of Federal Land Bank and Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Columbia, S.C.

Bank Robberies Are Sharply Up

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — More bank robberies have been reported in North Carolina so far this year than there were in all of last year, and Charlotte is getting more than its share of the action.
A branch of Wachovia Bank was robbed Thursday, marking Charlotte's fifth robbery in two weeks and the 12th so far this year. On May 22, there were two bank robberies in the same day in Charlotte and another one the next day.
Last year, six bank robberies were reported in Charlotte during the entire year.
"I don't know what's causing all the activity. Bank robberies are up all over the country, and North Carolina is just going along with that," Herbert Monahan, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said Thursday.
"Some people say it's the economy and unemployment, but we had that last year, too," Monahan added.
In the state last year, there were 47 bank robberies. The Charlotte robbery Thursday, in which two suspects were arrested, and a bank robbery in Greensboro Thursday put the state's total so far this year at 62.

According to the FBI, agents arrested suspects in 11 different bank robberies in the Charlotte area in May.
"We're putting people in jail almost every day but they just keep on robbing banks," Monahan said.
"I just don't know what it is," Monahan said. "We've had more robberies already than all of last year, and we're not even into the sixth month."
