WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration today suspended the design certificate of the DC-10, indefinitely grounding all 138 of the jetliners flown by the nation's airlines.

earlier, an agency spokesman said. The spokesman, Jerry Doolittle, said the grounding order came in the form of an emergency suspension of the DC-10's design certificate, an apparently unprecedented step involving a commercial jetliner.

a type of airplane is given an airworthiness certificate, a document that attests to the safety of the airplane. "It's too early to tell" exactly what the inspections will entail, said another FAA spokesman, Jerry Lavey.

they were cancelling all DC-10 flights immediately. United and Northwest Orient said it hoped to substitute other aircraft for the grounded jets, but Continental said it had no spare equipment.

City Council Votes Join Fire Dept., Rescue Unit

In a decision termed by Mayor Percy Cox as the "most important...this Council has had to make," the City Council voted five to one that the Fire Department and Rescue Squad here be operated as one system under one department head.

Councilman John Howard offered the motion that fire and rescue "be under one department head and the city manager...directed to work with this department head and that the department head in turn work with his subordinates to select the most highly qualified personnel for basic assignments and duly train each of them as fire fighters and rescue."

Under the Council directive, which charges City Manager Ed Wyatt with administering the program, present Fire Chief Jenness Allen will serve as department head over fire and rescue.

new budget package under consideration for 1979-80 is out of balance. Cox said that in making a decision on the fire and rescue operations, the Council would have to "do exactly what...can afford."

Nicaraguan Rebels Are Stepping Up Pressure On Strongman Somoza

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza rushed reinforcements to his besieged garrison in Leon as heavy fighting continued along Nicaragua's southern border and a general strike crippled Managua.

Journalists who reached Leon, Nicaragua's second largest city 54 miles northwest of Managua, saw a heavily-armed troop convoy moving toward the city late Tuesday and said it included a tank, two armored cars, a half-track and several truckloads of troops.

GUERRILLAS HOLD CITY — Sandinista guerrillas on Tuesday controlled the streets of Leon, Nicaragua's second-largest city, and kept national guardsmen pinned down in their garrison with heavy gunfire, witnesses reported.

Leon residents also reported heavy firing in the city. They said the guerrillas had used public works department backhoes to dig deep trenches through major streets.

SIGN FEEDBACK
The North Carolina Attorney General's Office has ruled that the sign on the East Carolina University property located at the corner of the 264 Bypass and Charles Street is not in violation of the City of Greenville Zoning Ordinance.

The national guard, Somoza's 10,000-man army and police force, said it had "begun an offensive to drive terrorists from two neighborhoods in Leon." It also said the guerrillas had "fired indiscriminately into the city with mortars, causing innocent victims and property damage."

$1.5 Million Grant Given To ECU Medical School

The East Carolina University Board of Trustees was expected to name the medical school's $26 million educational facility now under construction, the Brody Medical Science Building, at a special session this afternoon following an announcement of a $1.5 million grant to the ECU Medical Foundation by the Brody family of Greenville and Kinston.

Building is in recognition of the family's support of the developing School of Medicine. William Stanley of Rocky Mount, chairman of the trustees Development Committee, who made the announcement of the grant, said the donation is the largest single private gift ever received by the university.

School Calendar Adopted By Pitt Education Board

After much discussion, the Pitt County Board of Education adopted a school calendar for 1979-80 at its Tuesday meeting, which would set children coming in school for a full day September 5, with a tentative graduation date of June 10.

Teachers present at the board meeting voiced their opinion on the number of teacher workdays before the official opening of school, saying that the workdays should be interspersed throughout the year to allow time for teachers "to do their work," as ACT President Annette MacRae said.

operating expenses in the proposed budget are up only 1.5 percent," Thomas commented. Significant operational cost increases identified by Thomas in his budget message to the commissioners were higher energy costs, increased capital equipment costs, employee fringe benefit costs mandated by state and federal legislation, services to the U. S. 264 West annexation area, and maintenace of downtown improvements. Thomas pointed out to the commissioners that the current 55-cent rate is the equivalent of a 33-cent tax rate in inflation-adjusted dollars and that the enacted 65-cent rate is the equivalent of a 39-cent tax rate in inflated dollars.

General fund appropriations were set at $1,446,532; debt service at $129,749; water and sewer costs at $906,128; electric costs at $2,013,655; revenue sharing (police, streets, sanitation and rescue) at $81,160; library trust at $1,200; and capital reserve at $450,892.

For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. ## Waitress' Woe: A Choosy Eater Scales Her Tips

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a waitress with a complaint I'll bet you've never heard before. Some customers tip according to how they like the food!

Yesterday I had a really bad day. Our regular chef was off, and we had a substitute. I served dinner to a quiet, middle-aged couple, and when they left, the man said, "I'm only tipping you a dollar because the food was lousy."

I said, "But the service was OK, wasn't it?" And he said, "Yes, the service was okay, but the food was lousy," and with that they walked out.

Abby, please tell people that the waitress has to serve whatever she picks up in the kitchen. And it takes just as much effort to serve a lousy meal as it does to serve a good one. Thank you. You can sign this, either "Varicose Veins" or "Fallen Arches." I've got both in...

CINCINNATI

DEAR CINCINNATI: Most people tip according to their moods. Even though it's grossly unfair to the waitress, if she serves a lousy meal she's in very much the same position as the messenger who gets shot because he delivers bad news.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I plan a large wedding. His mother is asthmatic and highly allergic to perfumes and colognes.

Would it be proper to write on our wedding invitations, "No perfumes or colognes, please"?

MAKING PLANS

DEAR MAKING: No.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I need a solution to a very sticky problem. A couple we knew as neighbors several years ago in another city still regard us as their "dearest" friends although we never felt especially close to them. (We have kept up a Christmas card contact.) They wrote saying, "We would love to visit you this summer and can arrange our vacation accordingly. Which week would be convenient for you to have us?"

Abby, at no time did we invite them to be our houseguests, but that is obviously what they have in mind. We wouldn't mind entertaining them for one evening at dinner, but we certainly don't want them staying with us.

We hate to hurt their feelings and we don't want to make up any lies we might get caught in, such as... "illness in the family, we're redecorating our house, or we plan to be away all summer, etc." So how can we tell them they can't expect to be our houseguests?

NO LOCATION, PLEASE

DEAR NO: Try total honesty. Simply say that you would be pleased to entertain them for an evening but you cannot accommodate them as houseguests. Blunt? Yes. But unless you spell it out clearly, they might appear at your doorstep prepared to stay for a week.

DEAR ABBY: SUSIE IN SPOKANE found a pair of silk panties in her husband's pickup truck and would like to meet the chick who's fooling around with him.

What makes her so sure it's a chick? Maybe it's a rooster. Susie's husband could be macho-straight when he's with her, but a transvestite who enjoys fondling feminine underthings now and then, either alone or in the company of another rooster.

JOE IN CHESTER, PA.

DEAR JOE: Rooster or chick—it's a fowl situation.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Teacher Starts New Career

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For three years, Carl Anselmo taught English at a grade school in Yonkers, N.Y. He related to the kids and seemed well launched on an academic career. Today, Anselmo is a gourmet chef who creates wine and beer dishes, among other things.

"It happened when I got caught in one of those faculty layoffs and had to find some other way to make a living," said Anselmo as we chatted in his gleaming kitchen at the Maison Glass in New York's Citicorp Center.

"I always liked cooking and used to dream about going into it professionally, so when the layoff came, I enrolled at the Culinary Institute in Hyde Park."

The move paid off. Upon graduation, Anselmo got a job at a new cafe in Stamford, Conn., whose owners had a little experience in the restaurant business as he did.

"It was great at first because they gave me a free hand," Anselmo recalled, "but soon they settled on a fixed menu and it got boring. So I moved to New York's SoHo district and began experimenting with French dishes.

"I became interested in the new French cuisine where they no longer disguise everything in rich sauces. If you cook a fish, it tastes like fish. "It used to be the rule that a chef should be a master at making exotic sauces, and the dishes themselves were really secondary, but not any more. Today people are becoming more conscious about what they put in their stomachs and they shy away from some dishes packed with eggs and heavy cream."

This doesn't mean that Anselmo shuns gourmet cuisine. Rather, the trend is toward lighter and more natural flavors.

In his present job, Anselmo cooks a variety of dishes. He serves small orders for people to take out onto the terrace. And he caters dishes like rabbit stewed with chestnuts for a party of several hundred. Here's his recipe for chicken sauteed in beer.

One 3 1/2 pound chicken, quartered
4 ounces minced onions

1 clove of garlic, chopped
2 shallots, chopped
1 sprig fresh tarragon
6 ounces dark beer
6 ounces chicken stock
1 tablespoon tomato paste
4 ounces butter

Fresh-ground black pepper
Brown chicken in non-stick pan, add onion, garlic, shallots, tarragon, beer, stock, tomato paste; cover and cook slowly 20 minutes till chicken is done. Remove chicken. Reduce liquid by one half, swirl in butter, season with pepper and serve with chicken. Serves 3 to 4 persons. Good with chilled dry white wine.

Magazine Sent To Females

By DAN HALL
Associated Press Writer
STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — George Schiele has dubbed himself publisher of the "world's largest invisible magazine."

The magazine is Once. But a circulation of 1.6 million persons with its second full-scale issue still doesn't mean that Schiele will be recognized at cocktail parties.

One reason is that Once is mailed to girls and young women between the ages of 13 and 21. It's the largest "controlled circulation," meaning free, magazine in the world, says its publisher.

The handbag-size quarterly has a lively format with all-color ads that are difficult at first glance to distinguish from some of the editorial features.

"If we can say it with a picture and a short caption, we do it," Schiele said, during an interview in his roomy, fourth-floor office overlooking a commercially growing stretch of Stamford's Summer Street.

Why a free magazine for girls and young women?

Schiele said surveys showed that while 18 million females in the 13-21 age group shared $30 billion in buying power, no medium had so far been successful in reaching many of them.

But Schiele said surveys showed that Once, contradicting its name, was being handed on until an estimated 13 million persons would see it in a year.

The mailing list is drawn from some 5 million names collected annually from sources such as scholastic-jewelry sales, auto licenses and commercial photographers.

"There have been a number of extremely successful magazines over the past few years," Schiele observed. "But they've gotten that way by being either sensational or sexy."

"We came out with a success story that happens to be a clean magazine."

Schiele said he would not put anything in the magazine that he wouldn't want his 16-year-old daughter to read.

The 68-page April issue contains 15 articles on subjects ranging from bikini wear to animal care as a career.

City Budget Reasonably Lean

A $41,651,121 budget has been presented to the City Council by City Manager Ed Wyatt.

The budget calls for city expenditures of $8,823,567 and Greenville Utilities expenditures of $33,247,700.

The budget in its proposed form is out of balance by $137,271. It will, of course, be brought into balance either by increasing taxes, reducing expenditures or finding alternative sources of revenue.

Wyatt said the budget is a "bare" one, and it probably is. He said there is a need for 18 additional personnel, as well as some new equipment which is not included in the budget. Of particular concern is additional firemen and police officers, needed to serve the growing city, which are not being provided.

The new budget will, however, continue funding for six firemen and two rescuemen which were added during the present fiscal year with anti-recession funds.

Among the capital improvements items are seven police vehicles, one fire combat vehicle, a rescue unit, refuse trucks and other motorized equipment.

It appears that the proposed budget is not a spend thrift one...and it should not be this year. We need to hold the line on taxes since our taxpayers are beset by inflation on one hand and possible recession on the other.

Still more trimming will be necessary to bring the budget in balance, and we expect that there are items which can be cut out without affecting the efficiency of the city government.

The moral equivalent of defeat

Wanton Destruction All Around Us

We don't expect it to do any good, but what a shame that there are people who will wantonly destroy public property.

The most recent incident was in Rose High School over the weekend, where thousands of dollars in damage was done.

We see it frequently in city parks... just about everywhere.

It's too bad that such destructiveness cannot be channeled into positive endeavors. Hopefully some day it will.

THIS AFTERNOON

Blow To Life In Shelby

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Except for a shattering explosion, over in a split second, their names would never have been in newspapers all across North Carolina and the nation. A television news manager would not have spent valuable seconds of air time calling out their titles.

That split second in Shelby the other day when two city firemen, two volunteer firemen, and a gas department employee died beneath the rubble of a downtown building brings painfully into focus the question: who are the real leaders in our communities?

Nobody ever called a news conference to ask those five what they thought of anything. They never posed and postured before the television cameras. No long and boring hours were spent at committee meetings devising strategies for implementation to effect positive impact upon perceived problems.

No political ego trips pushed their decisions or actions.

No Leaders

A Shelby pastor summed it up in a few words: these were not political leaders nor financial wizards. They — and their thousands of kin in North Carolina schools and hospitals and police cars and firetrucks and rescue squad ambulances — are simply the heart and muscle of this state.

Among the five dead there were deacons and Sunday school teachers, scout leaders and Little League coaches. As fathers and husbands they built with their own time and energy and hands — and lives — in a quiet way a better world for themselves and their children and their neighbors. Two of the men were volunteer firemen.

"I think this terrible accident should make us all pause and think about what others are giving for us. In this instance, they gave their lives," Gov. Hunt commented.

Hunt has pushed volunteerism as the foundation of an involved, caring society.

BILL NOBLITT

"This is an appropriate time for those of us who such volunteers protect... those of us who benefit from the efforts of thousands of volunteers all over the state who risk their lives for people in their communities every day... to resolve that we are willing to give some of ourselves for our fellow man in some other way," Hunt said.

Without volunteers, Hunt points out, there is no way a community could provide enough fulltime fire protection. Fire departments are not the only community facilities which are shor-thanded and short-funded: are there enough nurses to carry the flowers and snacks and magazines from room to room without the help of Candy-Strippers?

Help

Could anybody be paid enough to go out in the snow and floods to merely help someone as rescue squadmen do?

Would any neighborhood school be as good as it is without the special equipment and the special programs which volunteers provide?

What would happen to the churches, youth programs, scouts, or sports for the little kids without volunteers?

"I think this terrible accident should make us all pause and think about what others are giving for us..." the Governor said.

Dead are firemen Nathan C. Hall, George L. Magness, Donald E. Melton, Floyd P. Sharts, and city gas department worker Max P. Bowling.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Can Strike Back

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Stung by criticism of his well-known leniency, President Carter gave a sharp back-of-his-hand to Transportation Secretary Brock Adams in full view of his entire cabinet and top White House staff May 21.

Adams affronted Carter and undercut his beleaguered oil decontrol decision, under heavy attack from liberal Democrats, by publicly debunking the effect of decontrol on new oil production. It is not news that Carter was angry; but that he showed his anger on May 21 and let his entire cabinet share in it was very much news and might conceivably mean the president is finally deciding to change his nice-guy image.

Carter raised the matter at the outset of the cabinet session, calmly but emphatically expressing concern and pain that one of his top aides would publicly dispute him. He ordered Adams to send him a transcript of his May 19 remark knocking decontrol.

Then, looking squarely at Adams, Carter said it "does not help" when a cabinet member or anyone else in the administration publicly disputes a presidential decision. When I make a decision, Carter said in effect, I want it to stick! He implied, but did not quite say, that if Adams or some other cabinet member feels constrained to take an anti-Carter position, he should first resign.

Such talk does not comport with Carter's original promise of an "open" administration, but that concept long ago died a natural death. The president's new hard line on critics within his official family pleased almost

An Army recruiting station recently opened in Greenville under the direction of Col. Harry Wells, who commands the recruiting district embracing North and South Carolina.

Cpl. Stonewall Jackson will be in charge of the local station located in the Armory building. All men having necessary qualifications, between the ages of 18 and 36, and interested in enlisting in the Army are asked to call the recruiting office.

Cpl. Jackson said there are vacancies for regular army reserves, men with one year continuous service in the regular army who are not

James L. Whitfield, who has had considerable newspaper experience on high school, college and daily newspapers during the past few years, will be on The Daily Reflector staff during the summer. Whitfield, an ECTC student, remained in touch with news sources during the school term when he worked during his spare time for The Daily Reflector and as a correspondent for the past few years for leading papers in North Carolina and Virginia. Having also worked on the college news bureau, he plans to resume his studies at ECTC next fall.

Strength For Today

AMERICA'S MOST IMPORTANT SCHOOL

We read much today about the crisis in our schools. Declining test scores, discipline problems, slackening motivation — these are just a few of the problem areas.

But we should never forget that the most important school in the world is the home. Most of us are what our homes have made us. No matter what great teachers we have had in school or college, the most influential of all of these have been our parents.

Formal education can be left to professional teachers, but what children learn from their parents will determine the kind of persons they later become.

Sometimes the very real crisis in our schools hides an even more serious crisis in the homes an increasing number of children are coming from. Unfortunately this is much harder to rectify than problems in the schools. And the situation is even more somber when we consider that easing the crisis in the schools will be of little if any effect if the crisis in the home is not solved.

Comments From Readers

To the editor:

The opponents of the mixed beverage referendum are crying out that life in Pitt County as we know it will never be the same. The sun will never shine again. All of the citizens will be subjected to hordes of unscrupulous "money hungry liquor pushers" and that any person who enjoys wine with meals, a cold beer on a hot day, or a cocktail prior to dinner shall become a social outcast and imminent alcoholic.

That North Carolina is a national leader in problem drinking is factual. So what have all these pious and concerned citizens been doing for the last 40 years? All of a sudden we hear preachers beating their chests, and so called "free will" Christians trying to dictate their opinions about alcoholism to the rest of the community. We also have a free will. The present ABC system and "brown bagging" are out-moded. Legislators decided that time had come to modernize the way alcoholic beverages should be handled in the state.

Let those who oppose the mixed beverage referendum in Pitt County show us how much the quality of life has deteriorated; how many churches have closed; how much church attendance has suffered in our neighboring counties that have voted to modernize. There are no monsters. The opponents chastise the state ABC commissioner, a county resident, for expressing his opinions about mixed beverages, yet quickly quote the mayor and his viewpoints.

I charge that after Friday, the opponents who decry alcoholism, will withdraw to their shells and do exactly as they have for the past 40 years — absolutely nothing.

Robert Wayne Sauter

To the editor:

On Friday, June 8, the voters of Pitt County will have before them an important school bond referendum. If approved, this bond issue will provide vital funds to upgrade many useful, inadequate facilities in the city and county school systems.

We, the members of the Student Government Association of J. H. Rose High School, strongly support this bond issue. We have suffered with our drama and music organizations as they have tried to perform in a gymnasium built for basketball. The bond issue will provide funds to build an auditorium in which future students could exhibit their talent. The bond issue would also provide funds for an athletic facility for the city high school. With its own football stadium, J. H. Rose would no longer have to schedule its activities around the East Carolina football schedule.

The bond issue to be voted on Friday would also provide funds for other less obvious, but equally necessary, projects. As students who are at J. H. Rose High School every day, we know that the funds to be provided by the bond issue will not provide for luxuries for the school; the funds will provide for necessities. We hope that you will vote yes in the June 8 school bond referendum.

To the editor:

Seeing that the liquor-by-the-drink decision in Pitt County is such an important one, it seems imperative that "The Daily Reflector's" lead editorial for June 4 be factual in reporting statistics. Mr. Marvin Speight is used as a source to set forth the idea that Virginia has had a decline in arrests for drunken driving since legalizing liquor-by-the-drink in 1973 and since then there has been a very definite increase in arrests for both drunkenness and driving under the influence. These figures come directly from the Virginia ABC Research Department: in 1968 there were 40,652 arrests for drunkenness — in 1977 there were 54,575 arrests; in 1968 there were 6,136 arrests for driving under the influence — in 1977 with mixed beverages for three years there were 28,578 such arrests.

If "The Daily Reflector" is committed to practicing its stated policy, "Truth in Preference to Fiction," the editor should take time to do the proper research and report factual information to the public rather than error. The fact is — there has been an increase in consumption of liquor, the number of outlets, drunken driving, and alcoholism in EVERY state where liquor-by-the-drink has been legalized. Do your homework! If you have the public good at heart, you should feel obligated to at least be honest in reporting easily-accessible facts on such an important issue.

Van Dale Hudson

To the editor:

The greatest danger that can result if "liquor-by-the-drink" is passed is that it can result in more persons taking their "first" drink. This is how the nine million or more chronic alcoholics in the United States got started on their drinking problems. Somewhere along the line they just took their first drink. In this situation, there is no discrimination as to age, sex, class, race, creed, or anything.

Many arguments and reasons are being given as to the pros and cons on this upcoming vote on June 8, but it is only common sense to say that the more outlets and easier availability will only make the drinking problem worse.

It is true that Prohibition did not stop drinking, but since its repeal the alcohol problem has become steadily worse. We are now having to live with younger persons and even those in their teens becoming steady users. The crime rate is soaring due to use of alcohol.

When you go to the poll to vote this coming Friday, think about the potential new alcoholics that passage of "liquor-by-the-drink" can bring and vote against it.

John D. Griener

To the editor:

Has anyone thought what is probably the reason for the bond issue? There's usually more to an issue than meets the eye. Some may say it has nothing to do with the possible city-county schools merger, but I have reason to believe otherwise. Many people in the city wouldn't go for a merger simply because they don't want their children going to school in dilapidated buildings.

Everything has to be up to par before this next game plan can be put into effect. Then they'll say it won't mean more bus-ing, but don't you believe them or me. Just ask the citizens of Wake County. They'll be glad to tell you about their children being bused like freight all over the county. Besides the inconvenience for the students, think of the tax money going to buy precious gas to be wasted in these longer trips.

Oh, maybe you're wondering what the name of the game is. It's called socialization. Consolidated schools fit in with the new society, you know. Then they can get the next textbooks, teaching values fit for a pig pen. Next we'll have homosexual and lesbian teachers to teach an alternate life style. By the way, sex education is being taught under the camouflage of health, etc. If you think I'm exaggerating, listen to Dr. Jerry Falwell or guests on the 700 Club on WBZQ some time.

A new constitution has already been written for us. I have a copy. Funny, but I still love the old one. Plans are being made for us. All we have to do is fall in place like peas in a pod. Don't think for yourself. Fit the mold. Dry up. Fold up, but don't speak up. You'll be unpopular and uncontrollable. That's the last thing they want — a person who can't be controlled by the government.

Consumer Still Strong Force

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — What is so special about the consumer?

The question is barely launched when the replies blast back like shrapnel, answers designed to demonstrate that affronts of that sort will not be tolerated.

But who is this consumer? Certainly not a minority, since every woman, man and child is a consumer, and sometimes a very greedy one. Buying, eating and destroying certainly confer no distinctions on anyone.

Is the consumer exploited? You can argue a strong case that he and she is. The argument is put forth every day: We are gouged by farmers, middle men, oil companies, welfare recipients and on and on.

But wait a minute: Farmers, middle men, oil companies and welfare recipients are consumers too. Of fertilizers, transportation, drill bits or whatever it takes to sustain activity. Consumers all.

Well then, perhaps the consumer is helpless. Hardly. Several hundred federal, state and local agencies serve him and her. Scores of lobbyist organizations, some self-appointed, fight the cause every single day.

You couldn't have said that 15 years ago. At that time the buyer was an amateur trying to fight it out with the professional marketer. It was no match. Buyers were ill-informed, naive, and often tricked.

Fifteen years, during which the buyer evolved into what is now called the consumer, have corrected some of that. School, media, government, industry, and personal programs helped turned the trick.

The consumer today is a force, one often to be feared. He and she have enacted hundreds of laws. They've wounded scores of food chains, some mortally. They've forced recalls. They've demanded and got guarantees.

Generally speaking, they command the attention of elected officials, including the president. Of course they do; adult consumers are voters, or potential voters. It pays to keep them happy, to be on their side.

President Carter certainly was aware that there were more votes in catstaging the oil companies than in asking consumers to make more sacrifices. Often overlooked is that he came down on consumers too.

Exxon Corp., for example, is an enormous operation that sold more than $60 billion of its products last year, earning $2.76 billion. But Exxon is made up of consumers too — employees, shareholders, suppliers.

What then is the consumer battle? Well, it's to protect the consumer, of course, and it has made many advances in the quality of life that are now accepted, even admired, by companies that once opposed them.

But often the consumer is narrowly defined, and the producer aspect of the consumer personality is often overlooked.

To some extent, the battle is a state of mind in that millions of Americans have the option of viewing themselves as either producer or consumer, whichever is suitable. They can be the abuser — or abused.

City Council...

building or additional funds were requested now. Hadley said that the committee feels that separation of the two systems as far as administration is concerned "would help both," while dual training would represent "false economy." Wyatt reported that it is estimated that a cost of $444,000 would be involved in the construction of a new building, while the cost involved in new personnel and fringe benefits, as well as operational considerations is estimated at over $74,000. If the present facilities are used, the cost of a series of promotions is estimated at from $4,800 to $5,200 and the addition of three personnel, and related benefits, which he said would be sufficient for the time being to meet the needs of a separate administration, would cost an estimated $37,555.

With use of the present facilities considered, Wyatt added, there would be several instances of shared arrangements, particularly secretarial work, telephones, bath facilities and housekeeping functions.

Cox said that the cost of separating the fire and rescue units worried him. He added that if the two are separated, "then the next thing would be a building."

Tony Brannon, who serves as assistant chief for rescue, and several rescue personnel discussed with the Council various aspects of the rescue situation, including information on the history of the squad, duties, administration and the outlook for future rescue services.

While Woody Underwood, who discussed the League of Municipalities study, indicated that the overall trend is toward integrated fire and rescue systems in the state, Joe Burris of the local rescue unit pointed out that discussions he and fellow rescue personnel had with members of rescue units in other towns revealed a trend toward separate systems.

Burris said that only in Goldsboro did the total integrated system format apply and he added that personnel in the Goldsboro rescue unit were dissatisfied." He mentioned that Goldsboro spokesmen said they were not able to maintain a desired level of care and opportunities were not available for advanced training.

John Conway of the Greenville rescue unit said that moral in the 12-man paid unit here is at an "all time low." Conway cited "almost day by day changes of rules and regulations governing the squad" and continuous harassment and dissention between fire and rescue personnel. He mentioned that fire and rescue personnel were sitting on separate sides of the room at last night's meeting.

Brannon also mentioned harassment and said that the fire department has "resented rescue from the time it started." Brannon said problems could be handled if rescue men could be answerable to him as assistant chief.

Cox asked Brannon who served as his superior and the assistant chief for rescue said that Allen was his superior. Brannon said he had "never questioned that."

Brannon noted also that the volunteer rescue staff had decreased from 32 to 20.

Asked by Howard if one of the two rescue vehicles could be reassigned to the Memorial Drive station, Brannon said he felt the move would decrease the squad's efficiency. The assistant chief added that he could see where eventually a rescue unit would be needed at another station.

Brannon said that the city would be justified in going to paramedic services in the city, noting that the rescue squad has had occasions where he felt lives could have been saved if paramedic services had been available, under the direction of medical personnel at the hospital.

The assistant chief said that total separation of the two departments was not the rescue unit's intent. He said that the rescue personnel were not opposed to training firemen but "we are opposed to having it run down our throats."

Mentioning that it had been over four years since there had been a transfer from fire to rescue, Brannon said that four men on the present rescue squad came from the fire department. Wyatt informed Brannon that he had instructed Allen "to let people have the opportunity to transfer if they desire." Wyatt said he hated to think a person was in a limited opportunity for advancement.

Vincent said that it would not be an advancement to go from the fire department to rescue or vice versa. Wyatt added that a transfer to rescue would represent a promotion since a salary grade one step higher would be involved.

Conway said that rescue disagreed with the League study, which suggested that personnel would be more effectively utilized under a dual system. He said rescue personnel feel their services would be better utilized if they are able to specialize in their own field.

Conway said that rescue feels that two departments can operate out of one building, provided rescue has a chief over its department.

James Wagstaff of the rescue section said that continued training is a must and he noted that compared to the local squad's true potential, the present system here is at a minimum level. He said that the training of Emergency Medical Technicians to the paramedic level is necessary.

Wagstaff said that advanced life support is a "skillful profession," not just a "three to six months program added to the training of firemen." Paramedic training involves some 400 to 500 hours, he noted. Wagstaff said the "future will demand more."

Brent Stocks, representing the volunteer rescue personnel, read a letter from the unpaid men offering support for the total separation of the fire and rescue departments.

Stocks said that under a totally integrated system, the need for volunteers would be diminished. He added that volunteers are required to have the same courses as regular rescue personnel and he contended that "we are an integral part of the squad."

Wyatt commended the volunteers for their "great enthusiasm."

Shelby Brannon said that she felt the person best qualified to save lives should have the most training. She noted that "you can't do that with two jobs."

Phyllis Daniels said that neither the fire department or rescue section wanted total integration. She added that she felt operations would be more effective if the two departments were separate.

Allen said that rules and regulations have not been changed every week as implied and he added that some regulations, however, were not workable and had to be changed.

Allen contended that if cross training is utilized, rescue men could help firemen "until we get stabilized to handle a situation."

Underwood, in discussing the League of Municipalities study, said that three alternatives were offered for consideration in changing, modifying and improving the local situation. He said that the city could cross train and utilize fire and rescue personnel in dual services, create a completely separate fire and rescue departments, or continue as the departments now operate.

Norman Casey, representing the firefighters, read a statement saying that the firemen wanted to see the citizens receive the best fire and emergency medical services possible. Casey added that the men would support the decision of the Council.

Connally Buttons

The latest evidence of John B. Connally's popularity in the corporate boardrooms of America came in a private poll taken by 10 top corporate executives at the Augusta National Golf Club, an exclusive hangout of business and industrial moguls. After agreeing to keep their names confidential, seven of the 10 executives — including Robert Baldwin, chief executive officer of Morgan Stanley, the big New York banking house, and George Love, former president of Consolidation Coal Company, one of the nation's biggest — wrote Connally's name on a piece of paper as their first choice for president next year.

A few weeks later, 22 corporate executives at an economic conference in the famed Homestead Hotel at Hot Springs, Va., took a similar not-for-attribution poll. Connally got 19 votes — but not that of Melvin Laird, the former secretary of defense under Gerald Ford, who was present, but has never been a corporate executive.

Some Connally advisers worry that this sort of strong backing for the former Democratic governor of Texas who turned Republican during the Nixon administration could backfire.

Protests Halt Farmville Rezoning Plan

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
FARMVILLE — Citizen protest blocked the rezoning from residential to central business classification the west side of the 100 block of South Contentnea Street during a meeting of Farmville Commissioners here last night.

The zoning change had been recommended by the Planning Board "for consistency," but B. S. Smith, a resident of the block, and Mrs. Frances Riley and her son, both of Raleigh, whose mother and grandmother, Mrs. C. R. Townsend, lived on the block for many years until her recent death, argued against it. They said the character of the neighborhood, however close to downtown, should remain residential. Riley, who said he serves on the Historic Hillsboro Commission, said razing of residences to provide for consistency has been proved in Raleigh not to be a good idea in the long-run and that the preservation of old residences has brought good effects to Hillsboro, a town smaller than, but not unlike, Farmville.

A thoroughfare plan update was presented by Calvin Leggett of the N. C. Dept. of Transportation. Consideration of renewal of a franchise agreement with N. C. Natural Gas was turned over to the Utilities Committee of the Board.

There was also discussion of hiring a local animal control officer on a part-time basis.

Med School Gift...

richly deserved by the people of this region.
The gift, according to medical school dean Dr. William Laupus, will be used to enhance many of the functions relating to the quality of the student body and faculty.

family's second major financial donation to the School of Medicine. In 1972, they established the Brody Brothers Fund within the Medical Foundation, with a donation of $100,000 — at that time the largest contribution in the history of the school.

Income from this contribution has provided funds for scholarships, recruitment efforts, the development of new programs, and the first Brody Brothers Professorship, which has been filled by Laupus since he joined the faculty in 1975.

The Brody family first came to North Carolina in 1928 when they began a retail business in Kinston. They opened their first store in Greenville in 1935. The family has been active in the growth and development of East Carolina University and of Eastern North Carolina for more than 50 years.

In addition to naming the medical science building in recognition of the Brody's, the trustees were expected to adopt a resolution, which says in part, "the Board of Trustees, the Administration, Faculty and Staff, Students and Alumni ... express sincere appreciation to the Brody Family for a most generous and important gift of $1.5 million to the School of Medicine."

"We greatly accept this gift and dedicate the University and School of Medicine to the high goal of excellence in service to the people of North Carolina, especially those in rural communities where the need for adequate, modern health care is so great."

The university, the resolution concludes, "will forever be indebted to the Brody Family for their friendship, understanding and support."

The family will be honored for their philanthropy and support by over 300 friends at a banquet tonight at the Ramada Inn.

Some 1.1 acres on which Cobb's Barbecue is located on South Main Street and adjacent was rezoned from light industrial to general business "for compatibility with other land in the downtown revitalization area."

A half acre adjacent to the Pierce-Lewis properties now occupied by mobile homes was changed from light industrial to residential.

The Zoning Ordinance Text was amended to allow residences as a conditional use in the central business classification "if certain findings were made by the Board of Adjustment. It was pointed out that there are now residences in the CBD which the owners cannot legally bring up to standard because previously they have violated zoning codes."

Much of the drainage work in the Mandarin Drive Improvement Project has been done, Town Administrator Patrick Thomas reported.

Thomas was asked to pursue with the Southern Railway Company the possibility of the route along the north side of the track between S. Main and S. Walnut Streets, becoming a right of way for the public. The long-used thoroughfare is now barricaded by the railroad company.

Tenets of the new Open Meetings Laws, recently enacted by the N. C. General Assembly, were reviewed.

Lt. Bruce Baker, Commander of the local Armory of the National Guard, appeared to explain why the Guard wishes for the Older Adult Nutrition Program to find other quarters. He said that, as of Oct. 1, the Armory will lose funding for its secretary and janitor and cannot continue to house this town program.

The Board approved extending access to the additional 35 units planned by the local Housing Authority from Anderson Avenue.

According to Laupus, the gift will be used to support the school's faculty by providing additional Brody Brothers Professorships. It will also provide student scholarships and assistance to the recruitment and retention programs for minority and disadvantaged students.

"It is a fitting tribute that our finest facility will be known as the Brody Medical Science Building in recognition of the close relationship between this influential family from the business community and the developing resources at East Carolina University," said Laupus.

A groundbreaking ceremony for the medical education facility was held in March. The nine-floor, 451,000 square foot building will be located on the new health campus adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and completion of the facility is expected in the fall of 1981.

Dr. Ed Monroe, vice-chancellor for Health Affairs at the university said, "We're tremendously grateful to the Brody family for this very generous evidence of their friendship and support for the university and its medical school."

"History will prove the timelessness and great significance of this gift," Monroe said, adding, "Again, the Brody's have stepped forward to give a tremendous boost to our school of medicine when it is sorely needed."

The $1.5 million grant announced today is the Brody

Sex Education Requirement Killed On House Floor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A bill that would have required local boards of education in North Carolina to approve all materials used for sex-education courses was killed on the House floor Tuesday.

The bill had already been approved by the Senate, but failed to win initial approval in the House on a 45-60 vote.

And Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, applied a seldom-used, parliamentary maneuver known as the "clinch," which virtually assures the bill cannot be brought up again this session.

The bill was introduced by Republican Sen. Anne Bagnal of Forsyth County, and was strongly supported on the House floor by Republican Mary Pegg of Forsyth County.

Mrs. Pegg said requiring the prior-approval of sex education materials by local boards would ensure the material was being scrutinized by someone.

But opponents argued that requiring the local boards to approve the material would place too much of a burden on them.

"I think it's a terrible abdication of responsibility" by the state, Adams said.

Mrs. Pegg said local boards should bear the responsibility.

"The school board people are elected to assume responsibility," she said. "They should be willing to take the heat...."

In other legislative action Tuesday:

Bottle Bill

The controversial bottle bill died at the hands of a House judiciary committee. The legislation would have required a nickel deposit to be placed on most drink containers and was seen by its supporters as a way to clear the state of unsightly roadside litter.

But heavy opposition was raised by the beverage, bottle and can industries who said they were being singled out to solve a statewide problem. They argued that bottles and cans make up only a portion of the roadside litter.

If the bill had been enacted, the question of deposit-for-return containers would have been put to the voters in a statewide referendum.

S and L's

The General Assembly enacted legislation that will permit state-chartered savings and loan associations to convert to stock ownership.

The measure gained final legislative approval when the House voted 92-10 in favor of it. The Senate had already approved the measure.

The new law becomes effective Jan. 1, 1980, and will allow state-chartered associations to seek conversion if approved by their boards of trustees and depositors.

Pot

A bill that would reduce the penalties for possession of from one ounce to four ounces of marijuana gained tentative approval in the House and was expected to be up for final consideration today.

The bill would reduce possession of those amounts from a felony to a misdemeanor, with an increasing scale of penalties for possession of two, three and four ounces.

Currently, possession of less than an ounce is a misdemeanor punishable by a $100 fine, and possession of more than an ounce is a felony that carries a maximum five-year jail term and $5,000 fine.

Insurance

A compromise was reached late Tuesday on a bill that would continue the controversial 1977 insurance law allowing insurance companies to put new rate hikes into effect on some policies without the prior approval of the state insurance commissioner.

The House and Senate became deadlocked over what types of insurance would be under a 6 percent cap for annual rate increases.

In the version of the bill the Senate approved, the cap would have been permanent on automobile insurance. The House amended that version to extend the permanent cap to workmen's compensation and homeowners' insurance. But the Senate wouldn't go along with that extension and the bill was sent to a conference committee.

The conferees agreed that auto and homeowners' insurance should be placed under the 6 percent cap for annual rate increases for two years while workmen's compensation insurance would be held to the 6 percent for only one year.

The conference report must now be accepted by the House and Senate.

Prostitutes

A House-passed bill that would make loitering for prostitution or loitering by those aiding prostitution against the law won approval in a Senate committee and was sent to the full Senate.

The bill would make it unlawful for persons to beckon motorists and pedestrians repeatedly, to attempt to stop or stop passers-by repeatedly or to continually interfere with the free passage of others.

The legislation was requested by police chiefs and district attorneys throughout the state, according to its sponsor, Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg.

Juveniles

A bill rewriting most of the state laws covering juveniles gained final approval in the House and was returned to the Senate for concurrence in the amendments.

Health Officials Fight Bubonic Plague Carriers

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ground squirrels — and the plague-infected fleas they are believed to carry — are being hunted by health officials who have set traps in the hills east of Los Angeles.

The effort began in Riverside County when a 15-year-old boy was stricken with bubonic plague after visiting a camp ground near Idyllwild, some 90 miles east of Los Angeles.

A similar effort is under way in Los Angeles County, where health officials worry that a recent plague case means the disease is nearing the densely populated metropolitan area.

With modern treatment, it's unlikely Los Angeles is poised on the edge of a catastrophic epidemic, said Dr. Shirley Fan-

Early symptoms include swollen, tender lymph nodes, chills and fever.

Plague has been lurking in the mountains and deserts of much of the American West since at least 1900, when a four-year epidemic claimed more than 100 San Franciscans.

The last major outbreak in the United States killed 33 people in Los Angeles in 1924. A few cases are still reported each year, most in California, New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado. About one fourth are fatal.

Most human cases today occur when a person is bitten by an infected flea, itself destined to die of the plague it carries.

It's not likely ever to be completely eradicated, "but we can keep ahead of it," said biologist Harvey Magy of the state health department.

Magy, who is directing the Idyllwild attack, said plague can be controlled by controlling the carriers. He said state and county health officials are trapping ground squirrels near the campground to test the animals and their fleas for plague.

If plague bacteria are confirmed in the area, he said, the squirrels and their burrows will be dusted with insecticide. The squirrels will be lured into dusting traps — lengths of pipe with grain in the middle and flea-killing dust piled at either end.

"Once we've got the fleas under control," Magy said, "we'll ask the (state) Agriculture Department to go in and eliminate the ground squirrels. We can't eliminate them all, of course, but they should be reduced to a minimum....Without the rodents, you're not going to have plague."

Officials say the end of California's once-active squirrel suppression program may explain a recent spurt in plague cases.

No Dead-End Jobs Around

NEW YORK (AP) — A job isn't "dead-ended" — a person is "dead-ended" in the job, Kent Haskell, head of an executive-search firm, maintains.

"In fact, there is no such thing as a 'dead-end' job," says the president of MSL International Consultants. "It's possible to be replaced by someone who will become successful in the job you thought was a dead end. I have seen this happen time and again."

The reason, he suggests, "is that the job simply wasn't right for the person in the first place."

But it's never too late to discover the job is not right, adds Haskell, who points out that a survey by Industry Week showed that at least a third of the business people who changed jobs last year were in their mid-40s.

"When people tell me that their job is going nowhere," he says, "my reply is that a job can be as rewarding and as challenging as they make it. To succeed you need a goal and to achieve that goal you must show initiative, be productive and earn more responsibility. "Equally important," advises Haskell, "and this is very often overlooked, you must talk to the right people within your company about your future. Let them know that you want to move up, and what your aspirations are."

According to Psychology Today, 44 percent of middle managers surveyed felt "trapped" in their present jobs, Haskell reports. And fully 60 percent thought they would change jobs within the next five years.

"Clearly, they're in the wrong job," says Haskell, who offers these "early-warning signals" to alert a manager that he is dead-ended in his job:

- You've lost your ambition and drive.
- You don't feel productive.
- You feel trapped.
- You don't want to go to work.
- You've become a clock watcher.
- You're not communicating with your bosses.
- You don't find any challenge in your job.
- You haven't made any progress.
- Your salary hasn't increased with your expectations.
- You see others around you happy and succeeding in their jobs.
- You have no pride in either your job or your accomplishments.

School Has Open House

GRIMESLAND — The Whitfield Advisory Board and the Concerned Citizens for Whitfield sponsored an open house at G. R. Whitfield School Sunday.

Visitors were given tours around the school, with attention given to areas that would be improved if the June 8 school bond referendum passes. The D. H. Conley JROTC Drill Team conducted a flag raising ceremony, with Ray Taft as master of ceremonies. The Whitfield Band, conducted by James Fleming, gave an outdoor concert.

Special guests included members of the Pitt County Boards of Education and Commissioners, as well as Superintendent Ott Alford and Assistant Superintendent Jamie L. Keeter.

Parents who assisted with the open house were as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Little, James Rountree, Mr. and Mrs. Beville Searcey, Mrs. Brenda Hawkins, Mrs. Christine Buck, Mrs. Willie M. Hawkins, Mrs. Nora Gatlin, Mrs. Joy Grubbs, Mayhew Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Manning, Mrs. Karen Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Stokes, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Bell, Mrs. Vivian Roach, Mrs. Bettie Daniels, and Mrs. Yvonne Moye.

Haskell emphasizes that changing a job because you think it is dead-ended can be dangerous. "You risk moving into another job and facing the identical situation," he notes.

"Above all do something you want to do. Don't rush into either a new job or career. Think it out. The ambition, drive, and motivation required to succeed, are sure to re-surface."

Association To Meet June 11

Debbie Coleman, a Clairol technician, will demonstrate the Clairol Hair Color Wheel and explain the new reformulations. A question and answer session will follow.

The meeting is open to licensed cosmetologists only. A fee of $4 will be charged for non-members.

Williamston Board Activates Council

WILLIAMSTON — The Human Relations Council of Williamston has been regenerated. At the Monday night meeting of the Williamston Town Board, town commissioners approved by-laws drawn up by a group which has been meeting for a couple of months to outline plans and policies for the council. Dr. S. F. Koesy, minister of Williamston's Presbyterian Church, is chairman of the council. A similar council was active some years ago, but in recent years had become inactive.

Three persons were approved for appointment to the Williamston Housing Authority. Thomas S. Speight, Jr. was named chairman to succeed J. E. Griffin, who has resigned due to health reasons. Two alternate members named are Jack B. McLelland and Mary K. Wynne. Budget amendments in the amount of $39,000 were approved. The amendments represent a shift of funds from surplus areas to areas where cost expenditures had exceeded budget allocations. Commissioner Thurmon Perry presented a recommendation that the Recreation Board, now an advisory one, be made into a Recreation Commission with more authority. The board asked the town attorney to look into legal aspects of a change in status and authority of the recreation group and to bring this information back to the board.

Promotions At Center

Promotions of three employees of the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center were announced recently. Alice Fay Phillips has been appointed infirmiry secretary. Miss Phillips, who has been employed at the center for 10 years, will be among the several employees honored this month at the 10th anniversary celebration of the center. A Winterville native, she is a graduate of Robinson High School and a member of Mount Calvary Church.

Brenda L. Wooten has been appointed admissions officer at the center. She has been employed at the center for about 10 years. She, also, is a Winterville native, a Robinson School graduate, and a member of Mount Calvary Church.

Louise Dixon has been appointed as Supervisor I in the Housekeeping Department. A center employee for six years, she is a Winterville native, a Robinson School graduate and a member of English Chapel Church.

America's Economy No Longer Shapes The World

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a time when the economic policies of the Western world could have been stamped, "Made in U.S.A." No more.

In the decade of the 1970s, the American economy is being hurt by decisions made abroad, and there is very little the United States can do about it, in the short-run at least.

It can be seen in long gas lines, colder houses, in inflation, and in unemployment. The American standard of living will shrink as a result, U.S. experts say.

Americans still look to their leaders to solve these problems, and the leaders often promise solutions. But the reality is that most of the rest of the world is suffering from similar ills and there is little that one country can do on its own to solve them.

Recognizing the need to develop joint solutions to common problems, U.S. presidents have attended annual economic summit conferences with leaders of six other industrial nations since 1974. President Carter will attend the fifth summit in Tokyo on June 28-29.

"We in the United States have been slow to realize the extent to which the economic health of our own nation depends on the economic health of the world as a whole," Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told a congressional committee last week.

"The age where the United States could get its way in the world by imposing its will militarily or by economic pressure is past, if it ever existed," he said later.

The steady increase in oil prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is the most glaring example of how Americans are affected by decisions elsewhere. But there are others:

—Inflation was worse and the dollar weaker last year because Japan and Germany refused to follow the U.S. lead in promoting greater economic growth.

Seek Kin In Newspapers

HONG KONG (AP) — Many people in China are writing to Hong Kong Communist newspapers in an effort to re-establish contact with parents, brothers and sisters here. Many of them have been separated for more than 30 years.

Hong Kong's Communist papers have carried notices almost daily from people in China trying to get in touch with family members in this British colony.

One recent notice from the neighboring province of Guangdong (Kwangtung) in the Communist newspaper Ta Kung Pao read:

"Dear son, Hung Peizhou (Hung Pei-chou). Our blood mother has been looking for you for years. I wrote to you once but never received any reply...Please write to me at the following address upon seeing this notice. (your mother) Li Zhi (Li Chi)..."

Another notice from Liaoning Province in northeast China said a textile worker was looking for his 53-year-old father, reported to be in Hong Kong. The father and son had been separated for 33 years, said the notice, which gave the son's address in China.

Similar notices have appeared in other Communist and pro-Communist dailies here. They included elder sisters looking for younger brothers and sisters, wives for husbands and sons for parents.

Newspaper officials said they ran the notices free of charge as a service to those in China who wanted to re-establish contact with loved ones here. They said in several cases the notices did help writers find family members in Hong Kong.

Mail service between Hong Kong and China has never been interrupted. However, many Hong Kong residents, particularly those who fled China, had been reluctant to write to their folks in China for fear of Communist harassment. This was particularly true during the Cultural Revolution in the 1960s.

Since the downfall of the "Gang of Four" headed by Jiang Qing (Chiang Ching), chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, in October 1976, China has adopted a moderate policy. Many escapees, who fled China by swimming to Hong Kong, are now allowed to visit China and return to this colony.

—Aggressive and successful exports by other nations are dominating American products in markets around the world, including the U.S. market. The United States had a record trade deficit last year of nearly $29 billion, of which $12 billion was in trade with Japan.

—There are more U.S. dollars — $600 billion by one estimate — circulating outside the United States than inside the country. Misuse of even a small share of this money, which is beyond the reach of U.S. banking and currency regulations, could undermine the dollar. The United States has always been influenced by other nations' economic policies, of course. But in the years after World War II, the U.S. economy was so strong that it was rare that other nations took actions that ran counter to U.S. interests.

However, the four-fold increase in oil prices in 1973 and 1974 shattered the image of the United States as self-sufficient and exposed a major weakness in the U.S. economy, as well as in the economies of other major industrial nations.

"The industrial nations are all too dependent on a small group of countries for energy, and that dependence threatens the health of our economy and imperils our national security," Blumenthal says.

The vulnerability of the U.S. economy is underscored by two major developments in the post-war period. The first has been the rise of other nations, notably Japan and Germany, as economic powers with domestic needs that often conflict with those of the United States. The second development has been the growing reliance of the United States on imported oil to meet its energy needs. The U.S. economy had been structured to function on low-cost oil, most of which was available from domestic wells.

But oil became high-cost after U.S. oil production began to trail consumption earlier in this decade, and OPEC took advantage of that to drastically increase oil prices. Nearly half of U.S. oil needs are now imported — at a cost of $40 billion last year alone.

Even though OPEC nations invest much of their earnings in this country, there is still a net loss of wealth to Americans since the oil nations retain control over their investments and reap the profits that result. The enormous cost of the war in Vietnam has also been a factor contributing to the economy's instability, especially since some economists blame it for starting the current inflationary spiral.

The United States, with a 14 percent annual rate of increase in consumer prices so far this year, isn't the only country suffering from inflation. Most other nations are experiencing inflation rates of near 10 percent, or higher.

Alfred E. Kahn, President Carter's chief inflation adviser, says Americans must accept lower standards of living in order to control inflation, in part because of the need to adjust to higher oil prices. "All we can do is adapt to that," he says.

The increase in oil prices is only part of the problem. Inflation already was serious enough by 1971 that the President Nixon imposed wage and price controls — two years before the OPEC price hike. There were official deval-uations of the dollar in 1971 and 1973, in part because of trade deficits.

Informal Talks Of Merger By Integon

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — Trading in Integon Corp. stock was suspended Tuesday following announcement by the firm that it has held informal merger talks with two companies.

The firm announced the suspension after more than a year of recurring rumors of takeover bids and run-ups in Integon stock. More than a million shares were traded during May.

Integon was quoted in a news account Monday as saying it did not know of any reason for the activity of its stock and that it was not conducting talks with anyone.

However, trading on the New York Stock Exchange was suspended at 1 p.m. Tuesday. The last trading price was 21 3/4, off 3/8 from Monday's close. Volume was 8,800 shares.

Negotiations among brokers indicated that trading on the stock would resume today at more than 22.

Integon's statement Tuesday said two companies that previously had held talks with Integon contacted a senior Integon official within the last three weeks and conducted more informal talks.

"The discussion did not cover price or other terms and no offer has been made," the Integon statement said. "These talks are not in progress, but they might be revived at a later date."

Integon, an insurance company with operations in more than 30 states, declined to identify the companies involved.

Recreation Role Cited

Traditionally June is the month of roses and children getting out of school for summer vacation.

Now, in Greenville, in North Carolina and a nationally, June has been designated as the Month of Recreation and Parks to highlight activities offered by this agency.

Locally, Mayor Percy R. Cox has signed a proclamation in which he notes that "suitable and positive leisure experiences are vital to good physical and mental health and enhances the quality of life for all peoples."

He adds that in Greenville, "citizens can enjoy self-renewal in the out-of-doors through green spaces and facilities in our parks," and further they can "fulfill their potential in the use of their leisure time through the varied individual and group opportunities provided by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department."

Pitt School Bd....

evaluation, except in special cases.

Dr. Rollins proposed that a workshop/training session be held for principals, so that they might be better informed on the evaluation process. Also, Rollins noted that teachers should be presented booklets on the evaluation process.

ACT President MacRae praised the new process, but pointed out that assistant principals should not be allowed to serve as evaluators. She also questioned the idea of using a five point grading scale, "since it is so hard to define good teaching."

Dr. Rollins also gave a presentation on recommendations for changes in the library/media programs within the county. Under Rollins' proposed plan, a comprehensive educational media center would be housed at the county central office. A full-time position would be allowed for a library/media supervisor.

Dr. Rollins called for the end of the use of the film bus, and asked that the films used within the county be stored in adequate structures, noting that the quality of film deteriorates if a level temperature is not maintained.

He pointed out that similar equipment should be bought for each school, so that the same replacement parts may be used, cutting the "down" time for school machines.

The board praised Rollins' fine work for the county system, as well as for his role in the recent county/city school bond issue. Rollins will resign his post as of the middle of June.

North Pitt principal Josh Potter came before the board to request matching funds for the school. He noted that the school had recently raised $4,495 at a barbecue dinner.

The board had voted in April to honor a request for matching funds from the Griffon School community. Potter pointed this out, saying that many community people had worked extremely hard to make the North Pitt dinner a success.

The board voted to average the amount of money raised by the school within the past three years, not counting school year 1978-79, and subtracting that figure from the new money raised this year. The board would then match that figure, dollar-for-dollar, on a one-time basis.

Director of Testing and Research John McKnight reported on the recent retesting of those 11th grade county students who had failed the fall competency testing.

According to McKnight, out of 116 11th graders who failed the competency reading test, 109 were retested. Forty-eight of the students passed the retest.

Out of the 159 students who failed the math portion, 140 students were retested. Fifty-eight students passed the retest.

"This is a tremendous pat on the back to teachers, those students who really tried to do their best, and the administration," said McKnight. "I fell very positive about this."

McKnight noted that the students will be eligible to take the test again in the 12th grade if they did not pass the spring testing.

Superintendent Ott Alford asked for the board's direction on the rewording of the 25-year lease required by the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for use of facilities at several county schools.

"This will be $160,000 for our youngsters," said Alford. "We won't get these things if we don't go with this lease."

Board members objected to the setting of a specific three-hour time limit for school's use of the facilities, which will include such items as a tennis court at Ayden-Griffon High School and outdoor lighting for the D. H. Conley High School baseball field.

However, the board voted to set the time limit after school, so that the lease may be sent back to the BOR for further consideration.

Irene Hanifer, coordinator of the county's Extended Day program, gave a report on the program's progress, with many of the students now housed at Greenville City's Agnes Fullilove School.

In other business, the board voted to modify office hours at the central office during the summer to 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., with local schools having the option to do the same.

Anglers Hooked Pickup Truck

SCOTFIELD, Utah (AP) — Some Utah anglers may boast of the fish they hooked during the general fishing season opener, but it was Larry's Amoco Service that had the biggest catch at Scofield Reservoir.

At the end of Larry's line was Don Penrod's pickup truck. Penrod had parked his trailer and pickup at a boat camp, but when he unhitched the trailer, officials said, the truck began rolling and plunged into the lake. Because of the season crunch, the truck had to sit under 15 feet of water for several days until a skindiver had time to hook a cable to it Monday.

After some difficulty and one lost chain, the truck was pulled ashore. Penrod's grandson was especially pleased — his fishing pole was inside.

They Said I Do, Good Buddy

CHASE, Kan. (AP) — The bride changed from blue jeans to lace and tulle and wedding guests parked their big rigs at the church for the ceremony joining truck-driving team Jacques Wiens and Richard Neal in holy matrimony.

Before he read the vows, the Rev. Raymond Massey addressed the bride and groom by their CB handles. "Sportster Queen and Snow Blind, have you got your ears on?"

The couple drove their truck to the bride's parents farm near Chase for a reception, then took a "four-wheeler" on a honeymoon.

Carlton Hurls One-Hitter At Astros

By KEN RAPPOPORT AP Sports Writer Steve Carlton isn't having a Cy Young Award-winning year so far, but he usually looks like a Cy Young winner to the Houston Astros.

Phillies to an 8-0 victory with a one-hit beauty. That masterful performance improved Carlton's lifetime record to 23-9 over the Astros, and gave the faltering Phillies a shot in the arm. They had lost eight of their previous nine games.

drive single to left-center in the seventh inning. While Carlton pulled his record over the .500 mark at 7-6, the Phillies brought their offense back to life with a 17-hit attack that included Mike Schmidt's 17th home run of the season. In their previous nine games, the Phillies had scored but 13 runs.

In other National League games, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-1; the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Francisco Giants 5-4; the Cincinnati Reds beat the New York Mets 6-1; the Atlanta Braves stopped the Montreal Expos 4-1 and the San Diego Padres routed the Chicago Cubs 11-3.

Carlton gave up four walks and struck out four in pitching the fourth one-hitter of his career. The Phillies scored all the runs they needed with five in the fourth inning on eight hits, including McCarver's two-run double. Schmidt added a sixth run with his towering homer in the fifth inning.

Norman retired the first 11 Mets he faced and was in trouble only once, when New York scored in the fifth inning on a double by Steve Henderson and a single by Doug Flynn.

Alex Trevino got a landmark single for the Mets in the fifth inning. It was the first successful pinch-hit by New York in its last 27 attempts.

Pirates 3, Dodgers 1 Dave Parker hit a two-run homer in the first inning, triggering Pittsburgh over Los Angeles behind the combined seven-hit pitching of Bert Blyleven and Kent Tekulve. Parker's homer, his 11th of the season, came off loser Don Sutton and followed a one-out single by Tim Foli.

Blyleven yielded a leadoff home run in the second to Gary Thomasson, his sixth of the season, and left the game in the eighth in favor of Tekulve after issuing consecutive walks to Dusty bn.

Cardinals 5, Giants 4 Jerry Mumphrey drove in the tying runs in the seventh inning, then tripled in the ninth and raced home on a passed ball to give streaking St. Louis a tight victory over San Francisco.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The National Motorsports Association's Stock Car Racing Hall of Fame received a new inductee — the late Bobby Isaac.

Isaac, who began his stock-car racing career at the Hickory Speedway in 1955, was joined by Louis J. "Red" Vogt, 77, the first inductee in the pre-1950's category.

Vogt build numerous winning race cars that were driven on the old Daytona beach course prior to World War II.

Isaac, who won 37 Grand National races and was the 1970 NASCAR driving champion in that division, will be honored in Darlington, S.C., prior to the Southern 500 in September.

Vogt's induction will be prior to the Daytona 400 next February.

After joining the Grand National circuit on a regular basis in 1963, Isaac earned $585,897 during a career that spanned more than a decade. His final Grand National win came in the Carolina 500 at the N.C. Motor Speedway in Rockingham in 1972. He died at the age of 43 in 1977.

Vogt, prior to World War II, built cars for such drivers as Bob Flock and Bill France, a founder and past president of NASCAR. After the war, he built winners for Chevrolet and Ford factory racing teams, as well as Robert Byron, NASCAR's first Grand National Champion.

Braves 4, Expos 1 Bob Horner broke a scoreless tie with a three-run homer in the sixth inning, leading Atlanta past Montreal. Jerry Royster was on base with a single and Gary Matthews with a walk when Horner connected against Montreal starter Scott Sanderson, sending a drive over the left-field fence for his sixth homer. Right-hander Rick Matula was the winner, yielding five hits in seven innings. Matula was removed for a pinch-hitter in the seventh when his back tightened.

Padres 11, Cubs 3 Dave Winfield slugged a double and a triple and Gene Tenace and Dan Briggs smashed home runs to pace San Diego over Chicago behind Eric Rasmussen's six-hitter. Loser Dennis Lamp was racked for seven runs, three of them in 22-3 innings.

Mike Marshall Saves Game, Then Helps Out Waiting Media

By BOB GREENE AP Sports Writer Mike Marshall saved the game for Paul Hartzell, then saved the night for the media. "I don't know why everybody is around me," Marshall protested to reporters after he had made his 30th appearance and posted his 12th save of the season. "Paul Hartzell did the pitching tonight."

Then, when reporters became impatient as they waited for Hartzell to finish icing his arm in the off-limits trainer's room, Marshall carried the container of ice to the locker room, giving newsmen a shot at the winning left-hander.

Hartzell, 3-3, allowed only three singles and retired 13 consecutive batters before being lifted in the ninth following a one-out pinch double by Pat Kelly and a single by Eddie Murray as the Minnesota Twins beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-1.

In other AL games Tuesday, Boston defeated Texas 9-3, Kansas City downed the New York Yankees 3-1. Milwaukee stopped the Chicago White Sox 5-3, California edged Toronto 3-2, Cleveland bombed Oakland 12-3 and Detroit downed Seattle 3-1.

Red Sox 9, Rangers 3 Two-run homers by Fred Lynn and Carl Yastrzemski and a solo shot by Jim Rice powered Boston past Texas. The victory moved the Red Sox back into first place in the American League East for the first time since May 17.

Indians 12, A's 3 Cleveland struck for two five-run innings as Rick Waits coasted to his sixth straight victory as the Indians downed Oakland.

Brewers 5, White Sox 3 Milwaukee downed Chicago as Cecil Cooper and Sixto Lezcano each singled home a run in the fifth inning, snapping 2-2 tie. With one out, Paul Molitor bunted for a hit and went to third on Jim Gantner's single.

Angels 3, Blue Jays 0 Frank Tanana pitched his first complete game of the season, a four-hitter, and Bobby Grich and Don Baylor homered to boost California over Toronto.

Seattle's Willie Horton clobbered an apparent home run that became a single when it hit a loudspeaker suspended 110 feet above the playing field.

Foreign Duo Crowd Pleasers

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — The British Amateur may well be won this year by the sound and solid golf of one of America's victorious Walker Cup squad.

But the crowd-pleasers at this year's championship at the Hillside Club's 6,951-yard, par-72 course are a small and chunky 17-year-old from South Africa and a tall and willowy Mexican with a drive like a kick from a mule.

The South African is Wayne Player, whose father Gary is one of the game's all-time greats. The Mexican is 20-year-old Rafael Alarcan, who plays on the Oklahoma State University team.

Alarcan, brimming with self-confidence, is already through to the third round of the tournament after beating two Britains — Roger Chapman 4 and 3 in the first round, and Tony Shingler by a crushing 7 and 5 in the second.

Player, who says he prefers stroke to match play, has only played one round so far. But in that he dropped the first hole then reeled off a string of nine pars and two birdies to win the next 11 holes for an 8 and 7 victory over Australian antique dealer Ray Vanderluis.

But the way to tame Hillside, a bewildering mixture of dunes, hillocks and copses, has already been shown by a couple of experienced and mature Americans.

One is Jim Holtgrieve, 30, a manufacturers' representative from Kirkwood, Mo., who reached the third round Tuesday with a 4 and 3 win over Charles Green, a Scottish international. The other is 34-year-old Jay Sigel from Philadelphia who has only played one round so far and beat George Parkhill of Britain 5 and 2.

They showed the way to play straight down the middle, without any frills or what Mike Gove, a 21-year-old Weber State student and a first round loser, called the "smarty" shots. Plus, of course, the ability to pull out something special when necessary.

Both did that Tuesday — and both on the par 4 15th. Sigel, going for the kill against Parkhill, was on the green 20 yards from the pin in two, sank that chip for a birdie and Parkhill immediately conceded.

Holtgrieve, fighting to contain a sudden Green resurgence, found himself bunkered on the 15th in his match. A tremendous last dash out from 150 yards and a chip to within two feet of the pin were enough to destroy Green 4 and 3.

Holtgrieve was joined in the third round by Scott Hoch, one of the most dangerous of the younger Americans; who beat Danny Burrow, of Britain 3 and 1. There are still 12 Americans playing in the tournament out of 22 originally entered.

The other first-round victors were Doug Fischesser, Griff Moody, Sigal, Doug Clarke and Mike Peck, plus Dick Siderowf, Dick Runkle, Wesley Mohr, Bob Gaiser and Bob Dickerson.

All of them were due to play their second round matches Wednesday.

Arkansas Gains Upper Hand In College Play

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arkansas has gained the upper hand in the 33rd College World Series, thanks to the hitting and fielding exploits of a part-time farmer who had to chop wood to keep warm this winter.

Marc Brumble, who manages a 100-acre farm outside Fayetteville in addition to going to class and playing baseball, sparked at the plate and in the field Tuesday night as the Razorbacks whipped Texas 9-4.

The victory leaves Arkansas the only undefeated team in the series and assures the Razorbacks of a berth in the championship game. Texas, the nation's No. 1-rated team, will be eliminated if it loses one more game.

"Everyone was talking about a low-scoring game," Brumble said, "but I couldn't see us not hitting and I know Texas is a good hitting club."

Brumble certainly contributed to the hitting, smacking a three-run double to highlight a seven-run third inning and belting a solo homer in the seventh.

He also made four outstanding catches in left field, including a diving grab that took an extra base hit away from Terry Salazar.

Brumble became a farmer when he and his wife, Cayla, agreed to manage an acreage owned by a Fayetteville resident. They live on the farm rent free, but Brumble has found the life of a farmer-student-athlete to be a busy one.

"During the winter, we had no heat, just a wood stove," he said. "I had to chop wood every day. I'd go to class, feed the livestock twice a day and go to practice."

"They call me 'Country' on the team. I grew up in Tulsa, and I hope to have a farm some day."

Cayla is expecting the couple's first child later this month, however, and Brumble says that will force them to return to city life.

"It was tough the past year.

Jamesville Goes For State Championship

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
JAMESVILLE — The Jamesville High School Bullets will take on Prospect High School of Maxton in a best-of-three series for the State 1-A Baseball Championship starting Thursday.

Prospect will be the home team for the series, and brings a 16-4 record into the affair.

Jamesville, 23-1, has a 23-game winning streak on the line in the opening game, set for 5 p.m. in Maxton Thursday. The second game, on Friday, will also be at 5 p.m., with a third, if needed, set for Saturday at 3 p.m.

Jamesville lost its first game of the season, 4-2, to 3-A Plymouth, then came on to win its next 23, sweeping the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference, and taking wins over several 2-A and 3-A opponents along the way.

During the season, the Bullets managed a national record-setting 56½ inning scoreless streak against their opponents.

The Eastern finalists last year, Jamesville will be going up against last year's runner-up for State honors. Prospect lost to Lucama in the final series last year, after Lucama became the only 1-A team to beat Jamesville in 1978.

The Bullets have been paced by their pitching staff all season. While Tommy DiNardo and Trent Ange have been the ace, the overall staff has a fine 1.25 earned run average. Ange, with a 12-1 record, is slated to start the game Thursday. The junior righthander has a 0.96 era.

DiNardo, who will start on Friday, is a senior southpaw with an 0.99 era. He owns an 8-0 record.

Carl Ange is the only other pitcher with a win, claiming a 1-0 mark. The other two wins came on forfeits.

"While Trent is going to start," Coach Ron Davenport said, "I won't be afraid to bring in Tommy if I need him for short relief. He can pitch an inning or two and still go on Friday."

Catcher Toby Holliday is the team's leading hitter, batting a cool .387. Right behind him is second baseman Danny Lilley with a .382 mark. Lilley hasn't made an error this season. He's also the base-stealing leader among the starters, with a perfect 25-for-25 mark.

Lilley gives way to the overall leadership on the basepaths to Stanley Lilley, who's accomplished 28 steals in 29 tries. He's generally the courtesy runner, but also plays second on occasion.

Four others also have a batting average of over .300. They include centerfielder Alan Frazier (.352); freshman shortstop Carl Ange (.343); Trent Ange (.342); first baseman DiNardo (.327).

Trent Ange is the leading homer producer with four, and tops the runs-batted-in category with 24. He plays shortstop when not pitching. DiNardo, when on the mound, gives way to Jeff Rogers (.267) at first base.

Batting cleanup is left fielder Keith Modlin, who has a .290 average and follows Ange in rbi's with 22. Keith Long is at third with a .234 mark, while Greg Sullivan at .216 rounds out the order in right field.

The overall team batting average is just over .300.

"We're not a power hitting team, although we have several who can hit the ball with power. Generally, we just meet the ball and collect singles."

About his foe, Davenport said that he understands that Prospect has one outstanding pitcher, and "they swing the bats."

He also feels that Prospect has several advantages over the Bullets. "They have the home field and the crowd. They don't have to travel, and we have to go 180 miles and then play."

"But biggest of all, they have the advantage of being in the state finals before, and we haven't been there," Davenport said.

The Bullets plan to leave Jamesville at 8:45 a.m. Thursday for the 5 p.m. game that evening. They will stay at the Ramada Inn in Lumberton, some 15 miles away.

In contrast, Prospect coach James Locklear feels that Jamesville will have the advantage in the series because of its hitting and pitching depth.

"We only have one pitcher of the quality they have," he said. "That pitcher is Eric Collins, a senior righthander with a 10-0 record and an 0.86 era. 'He's our ace. The people behind him aren't that good, and I don't think, in a three-game series, we really have the pitching it takes.'"

He also discredits his team's hitting. "We don't hit the ball well. We've gotten as far as we have by taking advantage of the other teams' mistakes and by getting some timely hits."

He lists Collins as the team's leader with the bat, hitting .280. "We don't have a three-hundred hitter," he said.

"If we have an advantage, I guess it would be by being the home team," Locklear said. "But from everything I've heard about Jamesville, I don't know if that's even going to help us."

History Would Pick Irwin As A Winner

ATLANTA (AP) — If recent history is a guide, Hale Irwin is due to win the $250,000 Atlanta Golf Classic this week.

He's taken the last two Atlanta events that were played in odd-numbered years and would like nothing better than to continue the string in the tournament that starts Thursday on the leg-straining hills of the Atlanta Country Club course.

"It's certainly time to win again," Irwin said before a practice round over the 6,883-yard course that ranks as the hilliest the touring pros encounter all season.

"The last year and a half has been frustrating. But I supposed, in all honesty, you would have to say it's pleasantly frustrating," said Irwin.

It's been frustrating in that Irwin has failed to win in this country since 1977. He did win the Australian PGA last season but is the first to admit "it's not quite the same thing as winning here."

The pleasant part of the frustration involves his money winnings. While he hasn't won, he could hardly be described as being in a slump. Last year he won more than $191,000, a record for a man who didn't win a tournament, and this year has collected almost $80,000 — again without winning.

He's been close, however. Last year he was fourth or better in eight events. This year he's recorded three third-place finishes.

"Of course the money is important," he said. "After all, this is the way we make our living. But after you reach a certain level, winning is the most important thing."

A definite threat in any tournament he enters — and doubly so on the tougher golf courses, such as this one — Irwin had to be considered a strong challenger for the $45,000 first prize.

Among the other major contenders in the field of 156 were South African Gary Player, opening his second swing around the American tour this year in a tournament in which he has played very well before. Also in the field are three men who have scored two victories this season: Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller, Hubert Green and Lanny Wadkins.

Also on hand are Jerry McGee, still riding a high from his victory in Charlotte last weekend, Johnny Miller, Al Geiberger, Andy Bean, Ben Crenshaw, Ray Floyd, J.C. Snead, who appears to have fought his way out of a protracted slump, and defending champ Jerry Heard.

CBS will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

FSLIC means all Savings and Loans are not alike.

Many people never think about the differences between Savings and Loans.

But, quite often, the differences are important. And if you haven't thought about them before, maybe it's time you did. Because you probably borrow or save substantial amounts of money at your Savings and Loan.

Home Savings is a state chartered mutual association. And the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. insures all our deposits. Accounts are automatically insured against loss for up to $40,000. In 45 years, no one has ever lost a penny that was FSLIC insured.

So, before you decide on a Savings and Loan, consider us. We think you'll find there's no place like Home Savings.

Reaping Profits From Visit By John Paul II

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (AP) — A leftist Catholic organization favored by Poland's Communist government and scorned by Polish bishops is reaping most of the profits from the rosaries and holy pictures that the faithful hold up to be blessed by Pope John Paul II.

A coal miner from nearby Silesia or a steel worker from the Boleslaw Bierut Mill across the river from Czestochowa gives half a day's pay — 165 zlotys, or about $4.95 — for the plastic-framed picture of the Black Madonna or works at least two hours to earn 80 zlotys for a rosary or a wooden crucifix to hold on high for the pope's blessing at the Monastery of Jasna Gora, the site of the national shrine.

"Everybody knows that the profits go to Pax, which formerly was a wing of Soviet intelligence," said Brother Konstanty, a fine arts teacher from Warsaw who extracted 24 zlotys from his string-tied coin purse to buy a cardboard likeness of Pope John Paul from a vendor on Holy Mary Boulevard.

The vendor, who also carried a full line of religious medals, icons and both Vatican and Polish flags, wore a little green overseas-type cap with the word "Veritas" printed on the band. Veritas is a branch of Pax, the so-called "progressive Catholic" movement that has a near-monopoly on the sale of religious articles in Poland and that many Catholic bishops suspect had its beginnings as a communist attempt by Moscow to infiltrate the Polish church.

Briefly Had $6 Million

LOWELL, N.C. (AP) — A Gaston County yarn-packer supervisor became a millionaire for a day, but didn't realize it in time to spend his riches.

John Knighten's windfall came through the courtesy of a bank teller from whom he had ordered a $50.91 money order last January. Instead, he got one for $6,000,050.91.

Knighten didn't realize an error had been made because the amount had been printed partially over the logo of the Gastonia Independence National Bank. He sent the payment to New York to cover charges on a Visa credit card.

The next day officials at the Lowell branch of the Gastonia bank noticed a slight shortage — more than $6 million.

"These things can happen," was the reaction of the bank's surprised president, Plato Pearson Jr. "All I can say is we have controls to keep this kind of thing from happening. I really can't say what went wrong."

When the mistake was discovered, Citibank stopped payment on the money order but returned it to Knighten "so I could have proof that I was a millionaire for a day."

"It's kinda funny that I was so rich and didn't even know it. I guess I'll have to put the check in a frame so I can remember my rich days."

Cut, Beaten By Mistake

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An Edgecombe County man was beaten and cut this past weekend, apparently because his assailants believed he had crossed picket lines.

Edgecombe County Sheriff Phil H. Ellis said that William Earl Edmondson, 23, of Red Oak, was assaulted and warned to quit working at Seaboard Foods Inc., although he had not worked there for about a month.

Authorities have not linked the beating to the Teamsters strike at the plant, Ellis said, although deputies are investigating the incident as part of a combined probe into other violence that might be connected to the strike.

Edmondson told deputies that a car carrying three men passed him as he was driving to visit some friends Saturday. He said the car blocked his way and he turned into a dirt road to avoid an accident.

Ellis said the men dragged him from his car and beat him. One of them then pulled a switchblade knife and said they'd kill him if he didn't quit working for Seaboard," Ellis said.

Ellis said they cut Edmondson with the knife five times. He was treated and released at Nash General Hospital Saturday night.

In an earlier incident, a non-union driver for Seaboard was shot in the leg as he was making a delivery. The driver, Stacy Fulford, underwent surgery last week to amputate his leg. Authorities have said they don't know if the shooting is related to the strike.

The union has been striking Seaboard since April 2. The company has hired non-union drivers to replace the 36 drivers and warehousemen who went on strike.

Second Arrest For Break-In

FARMVILLE — Another arrest has been made in an attempted breaking and entering here.

The incident allegedly occurred Monday night about 10:30 p. m. and involved the breaking of windows at J. B. Davis Furniture Store on W. Wilson Street here. The second arrest in the case is that of Mike Lambert, 25, of Farmville, Police Chief Ron Cooper said. Lambert was placed under $500 bond and a hearing was set for July 5 in Farmville District Court.

Previously arrested in the same alleged attempted breaking and entering was Tommy Moore, also of Farmville.

Fourth Series Of Ship Fires

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — The Navy is investigating the fourth outbreak of fires to hit the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy this year, with arson a possibility for the second time.

Five or six fires broke out on the carrier, docked at the Norfolk Naval Shipyard here, with no injuries and what a Navy spokesman described as only "cosmetic" damage.

Those fires brought to 18 the number that have broken out since Feb. 9 on the 4,500-man carrier, which came to the shipyard March 7 for a 10-month, $80 million overhaul.

A series of 11 fires April 9, seven of which the Navy blamed on arson, killed a civilian engineer and injured 34 people. No arrests have been made in connection with those fires.

The cause of the Tuesday's fires was not immediately determined, but arson was still a possibility.

One shipyard fireman, who asked not be identified, called the blazes suspicious.

Chief Petty Officer Mike Walsh said, "Apparently some were set deliberately."

"We're naturally concerned about that possibility of arson," said Lt. Cmdr. Jim Lois, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet Naval Air Force. "We're not ruling it out."

The fires were discovered about 5:30 a.m. and were extinguished by 7:15 a.m. by fire crews from the shipyard and the vessel.

They occurred in several storage compartments and heads, or rest rooms, that were "virtually empty at the time," Lois said.

Lois said he still was uncertain late Tuesday whether there had been five or six fires, although it appeared there were six.

The fires were roughly amidship on the two levels below the flight deck, the same levels where the April 9 fires occurred.

About 100 civilian workers were ordered off the 1,000-foot-long carrier when the alarm sounded, and an estimated 500

Kennedy crew members were sent to damage-control stations.

On Tuesday, the Navy for the first time said the damage estimate from the April 9 fires is $106,000.

In addition to the fires April 9 and Tuesday, there have been two other fires aboard the Kennedy in the last five months.

A minor fire broke out Feb. 9 in an unoccupied compartment beneath the flight deck when a leak in a high-pressure steam line caused a bulkhead to smolder.

The second fire occurred April 12 when a welder's torch accidentally ignited dust and lint inside a vent system.

Navy officials say it is not uncommon for small fires to erupt when a ship is being overhauled because welding and other torching is constantly in progress.

But Capt. Alfred Kurzenhauer, commander of Norfolk Naval Shipyard, was quick to say after the suspicious fires April 9 that he didn't believe any of his workers were responsible.

Myers said he didn't think any of his crew would start a fire either.

The Serious Falconers Are Small, Select Group

By STEPHEN J. MORGAN
UPPER BLACK EDDY, Pa.
(UPI) — Even before Roy F. Frock Jr. opens the door to the weathering pen his Red-tailed hawk, Gale, is shrieking loudly and rocking back and forth on her perch.

"She knows what time it is," he says, nodding to the meat between the thumb and forefinger of the protective glove on his left hand. "This is pigeon I'm going to feed her."

Frock enters the pen, enclosed by fine wire that allows Gale to enjoy air and sunlight. He removes her from the perch, the bells on her leg tinkling softly in the spring air, and puts her on his fist.

He has already explained that there is almost no emotional attachment between falconers and their hawks.

But as the bird rips apart the meat, apportioned carefully so she doesn't get fat, Frock's demeanor shows that his relationship with her, if not love, is certainly that of deep respect.

Frock is one of a handful of men and women in the United States that practice falconry, an ancient sport that has had its ups and downs over the years but one which never fails to capture the imagination.

There is an aura of nobility about falconry, a "sport of kings" that lingers from an earlier time when it was practiced by the ruling classes.

Contemporary falconers are wary of such labels. They say overanxious amateurs, enthralled by articles, films and television shows that depict the glamour and none of the hard work, get the urge to capture hawks without knowing what they're doing.

Sometimes the birds die. Sometimes they're injured. Always, say serious falconers, the sport takes a bad rap.

Falconers are a small, select group and want to keep it that way.

Falconry probably originated 4,000 years ago in Persia and eventually spread through Europe. It gained wide acceptance in Britain in the Middle Ages but later almost died out.

Never an effective way to hunt, devotees kept it alive as sport.

In the United States today, falconry is legal in 39 states. Most of the estimated 1,500 falconers live in California. Pennsylvania has the third largest number, about 85. The sport, according to federal officials, is growing by about 5 to 6 percent each year.

At one time almost anyone could get a state falconry permit. That changed in 1976 when the federal government issued strict regulations which states had to meet.

Falconers welcomed the new laws, which govern everything from the number of hawks that can be "taken," or captured, from the wild to the size of birdbaths, because they weed out persons not committed to spending the endless hours required by the sport.

It's said that all birds of prey, or raptors, can be trained to fly free and return to the falconer but only a few species have traditionally been used.

Generally, falconers use two types, long-winged falcons and accipiters, or short-winged hawks. While all falcons are hawks, not all hawks are falcons.

Among the most commonly used are the Red-tailed hawk, Goshawk, Kestrel, prairie falcon, Cooper's hawk and pigeon hawk.

One of the most majestic, the Peregrine falcon, has declined in recent years because of the use of pesticides but is making a comeback.

Since Frock, 45, a swimming pool engineer, got his permit in 1966, he's taken about eight or nine hawks. One of them took over 85 head of game until she died two years ago.

"What falconry does for me," said Kenneth Felix, 31, a veterinarian and president of the Pennsylvania Falconry and Hawk Trust, "is give me the opportunity to see on a daily basis, more frequently than I would in the wild, a hawk chasing prey. You can see that natural occurrence set up for you, so to speak. You don't have to catch anything. It's just the chase."

"Most falconers are loners," said Frock. "They want to be on their own. They want to do it separately. They're all individualists."

"There are very few falconers casually interested. They're either fanatics or not. Opponents of falconry say we're on an ego trip." He shrugged. "I suppose so."

"It's kind of a challenge to trap a bird and train one. The training is exciting. The actual hunting is pleasant, too."

Falconers want to keep their ranks as closed as possible, Felix said, in order to "avoid the deaths of birds from inexperienced people, pressure from pressure groups, and pressure from anti-hunting groups."

"Every time there's an article or even a picture of a hawk in any of the media ... the (Pennsylvania) Game Commission is bombarded with hundreds and hundreds of calls on falconry," he said. "It's a real headache."

"If any preservation groups attack falconry we'll be in a hell of a mess, so we try to keep as low a profile as possible."

"The second thing, a lot of falcons we use are going down in population, especially Peregrines, and if a lot of people get involved that would encourage more groups to fight falconry."

Falconers, like other hunters, have been assailed by some environmentalists.

But in a 1976 report, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service concluded that while the continuation of falconry would "temporarily or permanently remove individual birds from the population... the biological impact on either raptors or their prey is expected to be negligible."

"Where raptor populations are protected from over exploitation and captive birds afforded proper care," it said, "falconry represents one of the finest forms of recreation compatible with modern wild-life management goals."

Pitt County Mixed Beverage Committee

P.O. Drawer 6085

GREENVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA 27834

514 E. 14th Street

June 1, 1979

Dear Fellow Citizens:

We are working FOR approval of the mixed beverage referendum on June 8, and we'd like to tell you why!

It will provide more regulation of the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages in our community. Only those restaurants which are primarily in the business of selling food will qualify for a mixed beverage license. (Grills, snack bars, lunch counters, fast food outlets and similar establishments are not considered restaurants under mixed beverage regulations and would not be able to obtain a mixed beverage license.)

Presently there are 47 facilities in Pitt County which have a brown-bagging permit. We have determined that if the referendum passes, 23 of these will qualify for a license. Within two years an additional 8 may be added, bringing the total number of establishments where mixed beverages can be sold to 31--an actual decrease in the number of outlets for consumption!

Greenville and Pitt County are progressive. We have consistently sought to broaden our economic base, and passage of the June 8 referendum will have a positive effect on our economy. It will provide more employment opportunities in food service establishments and related businesses, generating economic growth throughout our area.

Tax revenues will be increased. Nine dollars of each $10 additional tax on the sale of liquor to establishments licensed to sell mixed beverages will remain in Pitt County. It is estimated that an additional $350,000 will be generated annually for local government, thus easing to some extent the tax burden on our citizens and possibly delaying an increase in property taxes.

Further, for those who enjoy a mixed beverage with dinner, being able to purchase one in a restaurant is infinitely better than having to "bring your own bottle" in a brown bag.

Finally, if I did not strongly feel that passage of this referendum would be a true asset to our community, I would not be personally involved and committed to its approval.

I urge you to go to the polls on June 8, take a friend with you, and vote FOR mixed beverages.

Self Service Needs Care

By JEFFERY L. SHELER
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — With gasoline prices soaring, millions of motorists are finding they can save a penny or two per gallon by pumping their own gas at cut-rate self-service stations in the United States.

But their savings could be wiped out by huge repair bills if regular maintenance, normally performed by service station attendants, is neglected.

The Automotive Information Council recently reported on a survey by the operator of a Los Angeles service station who checked the cars of 100 customers who pumped their own fuel.

He found 56 of the cars were at least a quart low on oil, 34 needed radiator coolant, 33 had low pressure in at least one tire, 29 needed power steering fluid, 28 were low on brake fluid and 27 needed battery water.

"All of these items are so easy to check and so inexpensive to remedy that a motorist is being unwise to neglect them," the AIC said.

Here are some maintenance hints if you are pumping your own gas:

—Check the crankcase oil frequently. Once a week is not too often, especially if you drive many miles. The proper level is indicated on the dipstick, which is readily visible and accessible on most cars. (Check your owner's manual for exact location. Also, follow the manual's recommen-

—Check the water level in the radiator every two or three weeks. If the cooling element is visible, add water until it is covered. Anti-freeze and summer coolant also should be used. An inexpensive gauge can be used to check for the proper amounts of those additives.

—Proper air pressure in tires helps prevent premature tire wear and can improve fuel economy. This can be checked with an inexpensive pencil-like gauge. Once every two or three weeks should be sufficient.

—Power steering and automatic transmission fluids should be checked at least once a month. Like checking the oil, this is done with dipsticks calibrated to show proper levels. Again, check the owner's manual for locations.

—Battery water should be checked every two or three weeks and water added to each chamber as needed. (Some new batteries are sealed and do not require additional water.) Also, keep battery terminals clear of corrosion.

—Brake fluid also should be checked once a month. Remove the cap from the fluid reservoir, located near the top of the fire wall on most cars, and make a visual inspection. The reservoir should be kept full.

When you have the hood up, occasionally check: the air filter (and replace it if it is dirty), the hoses for cracks or small leaks and the belts for fraying or improper tension.

Detached Retina Can Be Repaired

Out of the blue I developed a detachment of the retina. I haven't been given a satisfactory reason why this happened to me. I can't believe that no one knows the cause. — Mr. D.W., Wash.

Dear Mr. W.:

The retina is a fine, delicate lining in the back of the eye. Vision depends on this fragile membrane. It can be compared to the film in the back of a camera on which images are superimposed. Sometimes, the retina is detached from its normal position for no apparent reason. In some instances, a blow to the head may be responsible. And some cases have been attributed to physical exertion or even to an ordinary attack of sneezing, vomiting or even straining at stool. It has been said that severe near-sightedness may be a predisposing factor in detached retina.

When there are so many possible reasons for this condition, sometimes it is virtually impossible to definitively state the exact cause.

There was a time, not many years ago, when retinal detachment was thought to lead to inevitable blindness. With today's remarkable advances in the early detection and treatment of the condition, this is no longer so. As soon as a detachment is suspected, immediate programs of treatment are instituted. The purpose of all of these treatments is to reattach the retina to its normal position, so that vision is again restored.

It is now possible to use a high frequency electric current to reattach the retina.

Or, with the use of the laser beam and cryosurgery (freezing) it is estimated that more than 95 percent of all detached retinas are again replaced, with almost total restoration of normal vision.

I've been told to wear elastic stockings to cure varicose veins. I can't see how this is possible. — Mrs. E.N., Neb. Dear Mrs. N.:

You are correct. Elastic stockings cannot possibly cure varicose veins. The reason it was suggested that you wear them was to give added support and to relieve the symptoms of pressure that are so often associated with this condition.

Varicose veins are an anatomical change in the blood vessels. Once these changes have occurred, there is no reversal.

Normal veins in the legs have within them tiny, intricate valves that prevent a backup of the normal stream of blood as it goes to the heart. When these valves weaken and fail to function, the veins lose their elasticity, become distended and twisted. You can, therefore, understand why wearing elastic stockings cannot possibly return varicose veins to their previous state of good health.

Cracks, Metal Fatigue Are Routine To Aviation

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM and DON WATERS
Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) — The DC-10 that crashed in Chicago taking 274 lives was not alone in having cracks or metal fatigue.

An Associated Press check of Federal Aviation Administration records shows the problems of cracks and other structural faults were around before the jet age. They are a fact of life in aviation.

Every American-built commercial jetliner has been subject to "airworthiness directives" — or ADs — government orders for maintenance checks or repairs. Many ADs — roughly one in four for most planes — order checks of specific metal parts for cracks. Such an FAA directive last week grounded DC-10s for checks of engine supports. Some of the same planes were grounded again Monday after the FAA learned of additional problems. "There's not an airplane in the world, civil or military, that doesn't have metal fatigue eventually," said Fred Farrar, an FAA public affairs official. "You know metal fatigue is going to occur... So you keep watching, and then you put out the AD." Farrar cited the noticeable flexing of an airliner's wings in flight, a sight that often frightens neophyte fliers. Like a paper clip that is bent back and forth, he said, each movement of the wing contributes to a slight weakening of the structure.

"But better that it bend than break," Farrar said. Metal fatigue first drew attention in the 1950s, when the first commercial jetliner — Britain's de Havilland Comet — had a series of unexplained crashes, some fatal. It was discovered that a misaligned bolt near a window flexed and eventually failed, resulting in explosive decompression. The crashes destroyed confidence in the plane and in effect ended its commercial service, though the problem had been found.

Most ADs deal with less urgent matters, however, and the situations they point out generally are considered as the inevitable problems of highly complicated machinery rather than a life-threatening hazard. For example, a total of 129 ADs had been issued as of mid-May on the first U.S. commercial jet, the Boeing 707, which began service in 1958, and on the nearly identical Boeing 720. Of the 129 ADs, 49 covered possible cracks in metal parts, particularly wing surfaces.

Twelve of the ADs were considered important enough for airlines to be alerted by telegram. Those ranged from possible control obstructions to a 1962 warning that lint and moisture accumulating behind lavatory outlets for electric razors could pose a fire hazard. But a high number of ADs does not necessarily mean a lack of safety, Farrar said, adding: "The number of ADs issued shows the system works," with most issued early as a new plane's problems are found.

For example, 99 of the Boeing 707-720's total ADs were issued through 1969; only 30 have been issued in the 1970s. Ironically, the DC-10, a tri-engine, long-range transport in service since 1971, has among the fewest ADs. Only 43 have been issued in the past eight years, with only one requiring a check for cracks — in the mechanism that extends the wing flaps.

The Associated Press check of airworthiness directives covered the Boeing 707-720, 727, 737 and 747; the McDonnell Douglas DC-8, DC-9 and DC-10, and the Lockheed L-1011 — the bulk of domestic airliners. Here are the results for aircraft other than the DC-10:

—Boeing 707-720, a four-engine long-range transport introduced in 1958. ADs: 129. Those requiring checks for cracks: 49, including 17 for the wing skin or structure; 11 for various control surfaces; 8 for the horizontal stabilizer; 7 for the landing gear and associated mountings; and 2 for engine mountings.

—Boeing 727, a three-engine medium-range transport introduced in 1964. ADs: 70. Requiring checks for cracks: 24, including 11 for the landing gear and surrounding structure and 4 each for the horizontal stabilizer and various control surfaces.

—Boeing 737, a twin-engine, short-range aircraft delivered to airlines in 1967. ADs: 27. Requiring checks for cracks: 7, including 4 for control surfaces and 1 each for the wing structure, landing gear and airframe.

—Boeing 747, a four-engine wide-body, long-range jumbo jet introduced in 1970. ADs: 39. Requiring checks for cracks: 10, including 6 for the fuselage and 4 for control surfaces. —Lockheed L-1011, a wide-body, tri-engine, long-range transport in service since 1972. ADs: 32. Requiring checks for cracks: 3. Includes 1 each for an engine duct assembly, cargo door and landing gear.

—McDonnell Douglas DC-8, a four-engine, long-range transport introduced in 1959, now out of production. ADs: 55. Those requiring checks for cracks: 14. Includes 6 for engine wing mounts, 5 for various control surfaces and 3 for landing gear.

—McDonnell Douglas DC-9, a twin-engine, short-to-medium-range transport in service since 1965. ADs: 43. Those requiring checks for cracks: 12. Includes 4 for engine mounts, 3 for fuselage, 3 for various control surfaces and 2 for landing gear.

ADs often are prompted by bulletins issued by manufacturers and monitored by FAA engineers. But unlike the bulletins, the directives carry the force of law. Also, he said, the FAA receives reports of problems found by airline mechanics and may issue a directive before a manufacturer is fully aware of the problem.

Airline mechanics, who are FAA-licensed, must follow a government inspection schedule and report problems to supervisors and the FAA.

A component subject to stress or wear is, in theory, on a schedule that calls for replacement long before it could cause trouble.

But the Air Line Pilots Association argues that the system is not as fool-proof as it should be, partly because the FAA is too lenient and has a "protective attitude" toward the airline industry.

The pilots' union sees a conflict in the FAA's dual mission to promote air safety and to "encourage and foster" civil aviation.

AN AVIATION FACT OF LIFE — Metal fatigue first drew public attention in the 1950s when the first commercial jetliner, Britain's de Havilland Comet, second from top, had a series of crashes. But every American-built commercial jetliner now in service has been subject to airworthiness directives with roughly about one-quarter of these ADs being for metal fatigue. Among those for which ADs were issued were, the McDonnell Douglas DC-10, top; Boeing 707, third from top; Lockheed L-1011; and Boeing 747, bottom. (AP Laser-photo)

Well, wake up, it's not a dream. It's reality! Thanks to a new scientific breakthrough in liquid protein. You see, your nails are naturally made of protein... and when they crack and split and weaken, they can be built up again naturally with this liquid protein formula.

NBC Rises In Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, mired for 15 weeks in third place, nudged past CBS in the prime-time ratings race in the week ending June 3, thanks in large measure to big audiences for the concluding chapter of "The Best Place to Be" and "Bob Hope's Birthday Party."

ABC, off track a bit, had five of the week's 10 most-watched programs, including "Three's Company" in first place for the third week in a row, and regained the No. 1 spot in the networks' competition. ABC, in recent weeks, seldom listed fewer than seven of the week's most-watched shows.

Figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed CBS in third place for the first time since the week ending Feb. 11. CBS won the networks' race the previous week following a 19-week domination by ABC.

"The Best Place to Be," No. 2 for the week, and "Bob Hope's Birthday Party," No. 4, were being broadcast for the first time, as was CBS' "60 Minutes," which finished ninth. All other Top 10 programs were reruns of previous episodes.

CBS was hurt by the relatively small audience for its broadcast of the pro basketball championship game Friday night between Seattle and Washington. The sports special was No. 55 of 62 programs in prime time.

ABC's rating for the week was 16.2, with NBC second at 15.4 and CBS third at 15.3. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 16.2 percent of the homes in the country with TV were tuned to ABC.

The rating for "Three's Company" was 23.4, less than a point better than the runner-up, Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 23.4 percent saw at least part of the ABC situation comedy.

Despite the basketball game, CBS did not have a show in the bottom five. The ranking: No. 58 "Battlestar Galactica" and No. 59 "Welcome Back Kotter," both ABC; No. 60 "Comedy Theater," NBC; No. 61 "Operation Petticoat," ABC, and No. 62 "Hizzonner," NBC.

Here are the week's 10 most-watched programs:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 23.4 representing 17.4 million homes, ABC; Movie: "The Best Place to Be," Part II, 22.8 or 17 million, NBC; "Mork and Mindy," 21.9 or 16.3 million, ABC; "Bob Hope's Birthday Party," 21 or 15.6 mil-

An Invitation In Ski Poles Gift

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — When Pope John Paul II returns to the Vatican after a tour of his native Poland, he'll find a gift from three New Hampshire state senators — and their hopes that he will use it in their state.

Sen. Clesson Blaisdell, who owns a sporting goods store, said the three sent the pope a set of $25 ski poles to replace those recently stolen by a souvenir hunter. "We all chipped in," said Blaisdell of Sens. Robert Preston and Alan Rock.

Wrote the senators: "Please accept, as a small token of our respect for our Holiness, a replacement set of ski poles that we pray you may enjoy in good health, and wishes that the relaxation these may help provide will assist in a long reign as our pontiff."

They added that New Hampshire offers "the finest skiing and would welcome the honor of your visit if your schedule ever permitted."

'Mork' Appears In The Laugh-In Rerun

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — A joke about NBC's troubles, delivered by comic Michael Sklar:

"NBC's negotiating to buy three shows from a bright, progressive company," he says. "ABC."

Like that? Well, there's more to the joke, and it gets funnier. Sklar delivered that one-liner two years ago on NBC's short-lived return of "Laugh-In." The show was axed then, but NBC is rerunning its six episodes of "Laugh-In" this summer, starting tonight.

Why? Let the NBC publicity sheet tell you:

"Robin Williams of TV's 'Mork and Mindy' appears as a cast regular in encore presentations of the second edition of the 'Laugh-In' series..."

Get it? NBC had Williams in a show, and lost him. ABC grabbed him and "Mork and Mindy" became the biggest new show of this season. NBC, unable to show reruns of "Mork and Mindy" this summer, went after the next best thing — pre-'Mork' Williams.

The hope is that some of Williams' ABC ratings success will carry to the NBC reruns. A sort of "We knew him when" retrospective. If the idea catches on, CBS could dust off a copy of that famous 1964 Ed Sullivan show, call it "The Beatles Variety Hour," and play it over and over through the summer.

Actually, Williams was not quite the star of "Laugh-In." He was but one of a dozen regulars on the show, though you'd never guess it from this NBC release:

"Robin Williams (now Mork on TV's 'Mork and Mindy') sings and dances with Tina Turner, jokes with Jimmy Stewart and Cavorts with former President Gerald Ford's daughter, Susan..."

Anyway, NBC did have Williams before ABC. George Schlatter, who produced "Laugh-In" and is now doing "Real People" for NBC, found

The bidding:
 North East South West
 1♥ 2♣ 2NT Pass
 3NT Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

We all have a tendency to put our best foot forward, but carrying that principle to extremes can prove to be one's undoing.

East's overall of two clubs had a devastating effect, for it prevented the opponents from reaching a superior contract at four spades. South had no convenient way of showing his weak four-card spade suit, so he opted to show his club stoppers by responding two no trump. North might have checked back by bidding three spades, but he was afraid that South might treat that as a reverse bid and that his side would get either too high or into the wrong contract. (Note that South can make four spades even after a club lead if he runs the slight risk of cashing three hearts for a club discard before starting on trumps.)

Unfortunately, East's defense was not on a par with his bidding. West led his top club and East stepped up with the queen. South made a fine play when he allowed

East to win the first trick; had he taken his ace, the defenders would have prevailed if West won the first spade and continued clubs. The club continuation was won by the jack and declarer led a spade. Since the spade honors were split, the defense was helpless. When West won the king of spades, he could not lead a club, so East's suit could never be run. Thus, declarer easily took ten tricks.

Some careful analysis would have directed East to the winning defense. South almost surely has three clubs and, from West's lead, they are headed by the ace-jack, giving declarer two stoppers. Since East has only one entry card, it is essential to force South to expend one of those stoppers on the first trick, while West still has a second club to lead should he have an entry.

Observe what happens if East plays the nine of clubs to the first trick. Declarer wins the jack, or else his club stoppers are reduced to one. Declarer cannot make his contract without developing a trick in spades, but West can win the first spade and continue clubs. East forces out declarer's club ace and, when he gets in with the ace of spades, he can cash enough club tricks to defeat the contract.

See Fear Of Math As A Job Problem

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — People who suffer from "math anxiety" — including many women and minorities — are blocked from advancing in two-thirds of the country's professions, says Sheila Tobias, head of a consulting firm that treats fear of mathematics through seminars and counseling.

"Math anxiety is panic, muddled thinking and an inability to concentrate," Ms. Tobias said at a New England conference at the University of Rhode Island. Author of "Overcoming Math Anxiety," she spoke on such anxiety's effects on women and minorities.

Fear and hatred of mathematics, which keeps most women and many men from studying advanced algebra and calculus, forces many people into dead-end jobs. Ms. Tobias said in an interview.

Obviously, a scanty background in mathematics will hold back students of engineering, economics or medicine. But Ms. Tobias said fear of math can also prevent a person from entering business or becoming a banker or even a mail carrier.

"The federal civil-service exams are called 'general intelligence' exams, but they're testing logic and numbers," she said.

You don't have to study algebra or calculus to pass the exams, but people who have learned to reason in a mathematical way will do better and come up with the answers faster, Ms. Tobias said.

Any job that entails planning, drawing up an annual budget, using computers or analyzing finances requires the ability to think mathematically, Ms. Tobias said.

She studied a federal dictionary of occupational skills to make her estimate that two-thirds of the professions in the country use these skills.

Ms. Tobias, formerly a European-history professor at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., first became interested in math anxiety in 1974 when she studied career choices of women.

She found that women were avoiding jobs in science and business and flocking to traditionally female occupations.

"I've been out of school 25 years and it looked as though they were making the same decisions we were — despite the women's movement and everything else," Ms. Tobias said.

Mathematics, she decided, was the key. She remembered her own days as a student: she did quite well in math until she got to calculus.

"I thought calculus was 'real math' and that was for boys," she said. "Girls who were good in math were not the kind of girl I wanted to be."

Appeals Court Upholds Ingram; Orders Refund

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's insurance companies were ordered Tuesday to refund excess premiums from automobile insurance rate increases. The increases were put into effect last year over the objections of Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

Automobile insurance rate increases totaling 12 percent went into effect April 1, 1978, and Dec. 1, 1978.

The state Court of Appeals upheld Ingram's rejection of the last two rate increase requests for automobile insurance, each for 6 percent a year.

And, Bernard H. Parker, chairman of the N.C. Rate Bureau's board of governors, indicated the insurance industry would not appeal.

It was one of Ingram's few court victories. Since 1973 when he took office, the state's courts have ruled against Ingram in 36 of 38 decisions in 21 major insurance cases, according to the N.C. Insurance News Service.

Under a 1977 law, the industry was allowed to put the rate hikes into effect, subject to refund with interest, even though Ingram rejected them.

"Despite the fact that the 1977 session passed that bad law, and despite the fact that the current session is in the process of making this bad law worse (by extending it indefinitely), our office will continue fighting against special interests," Ingram said in a recorded statement.

The House and Senate conference committee agreed Tuesday on a compromise bill to extend the controversial 1977 law.

Nightly Revival Services Held

Nightly revival services are now underway at Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ, Fifth and Hudson Streets.

Services will be held nightly through Friday and also on Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Host pastor is Bishop L. B. Davenport. Mrs. Velma Moore, Greenville District Missionary for the church, will conduct communion each night.

Also, prayer meetings are being held at 6 a.m. each morning, with Missionary Evelyn Gay in charge. Noon prayers are Prayer Warriors.

Girls who want to be popular and smart usually give in at math, and let themselves be smart in English or history, she said.

Blacks and other minorities often become frightened of advanced math courses because they are "tracked" into general mathematics courses rather than college preparatory classes in high school, she said.

Ms. Tobias conducts "math anxiety reduction" seminars with secondary school teachers and college students, secretaries who are afraid to use company computers and labor union officials who panic at the thought of having to figure out a consumer price index.

Her firm, called Overcoming Math Anxiety, is based in Washington, D. C. She travels all over the country to lecture and give workshops.

Exercises at the seminars include having participants work on a math problem on one side of a sheet of paper and write down their "feelings" toward solving the problem on the other side.

The participants use their written comments to try to understand why they are so afraid of mathematics.

"Solving the problem is secondary to exploring the feelings," Ms. Tobias said. "The focus is not on the right answer. The focus is on the process."

NO Liquor By The Drink NO

🍷 L-B-D will provide much better control.

🕒 Who's kidding whom? De-control is more like it.

Bartenders, waiters and waitresses are paid to sell, not to limit sales. Don't expect any control from a bartender pouring your favorite brand (?) from an open bottle. Though the new law expands outlets from 5 to 150+, it makes no provision to expand the ABC enforcement staff. Incredible, but true.

🍷 L-B-D will increase city tax revenues.

🕒 Yes. But the increase in alcohol related costs will far exceed the additional taxes collected.

States with L-B-D pay out 5 to 10 times their liquor tax revenues for related costs of policing, jailing, rehabilitating, prosecution and welfare. The $10. per gallon tax will tempt many to cheat by refilling empty bottles with off-brand or untaxed liquor. The bootleggers will have a heyday.

Abandon Goal Middle School

WILLIAMSTON — Special committee members who have previously advocated consideration of a Middle School for the western portion of Martin County have had a change of heart.

At the June meeting of the Martin County Board of Education on Monday night, committee members who have been taking a look at the possibility of a Middle School to serve the Hamilton, Oak City, Robersonville areas, conceded they felt it wiser to abandon the idea of a Middle School at this time and instead to concentrate on improving current facilities.

A low bid of $15,059 to erect a covered walkway at Williamston High School was accepted. Low bidder was Ernest Knox of Greenville. Another low bid was accepted for $10,967, made by Brown and Campbell, for floor covering at East End School in Robersonville.

The resignations of two staff members in the school system—a teacher and a principal, were

Mrs. Ward, mini-games were led by Mrs. Judy Williams, Ayden-Grifton's Teacher of the Year, and Sam King, math instructor. William C. Wiggins, principal at Ayden-Grifton, won the Memo-Gram prize, with Mrs. Elva Smith, secretary-treasurer, winning the Autograph game.

The FBLA chapter climaxed its year of activities with a dinner meeting at Peppi's Pizza Dean, Greenville. Mrs. Ward was presented a bouquet of carnations and daisies by Jane Cochran, FBLA member. The group went to Sportsworld after the dinner meeting.

The descendants of the late Joshua and Francine Chadwick will hold a family reunion Sunday, June 10, at the Jones County Moose Lodge near Trenton. A covered dish supper will be served around 1 p.m.

'Untypical' Nun Fights Status Quo

By CLIFFORD KRAUSS
CIUDAD NEZAHUALCOYOTL, Mexico (UPI) — Margaret Navarro is not your typical American nun.

A broad-shouldered, 47-year-old woman from Cincinnati, Ohio, Sister Navarro mixes rudimentary health care with leftist political lessons in Ciudad Nezahualcoyotl, a rancid slum housing between 2 and 2.7 million people.

She is one of hundreds of priests and nuns in Latin America who have challenged the Catholic Church's traditional role of quiet obedience to — or outright support of — the status quo.

Sister Navarro is a believer of the "Liberation Theology," a movement in the Latin American Church that insists Jesus Christ was not only a religious liberator but a socialist prophet as well.

"Christ taught man not to take advantage of his brother and to share with his brother," she said. "The Church is a power in Latin America. If Christians did what they profess there would be a big change in Latin America. If the Church spoke out it could bring changes. You see this in El Salvador."

Hundreds of churchmen have been imprisoned and some even killed for their political beliefs throughout Latin America in the past decade.

After 10 years of social work in Panama and an eight-month medical course, Sister Navarro came to Nezahualcoyotl where medical care, like jobs and social services, is scarce.

She holds classes at neighborhood homes in "barrios" throughout the slum, teaching elementary medical skills, hygiene, nutrition — and birth control.

She also mixes in politics to "help the people analyze the situation in which they live and for them to be more critical thinkers and ask why."

On birth control, she said, "They should be free to plan a family if they wish to. It shouldn't be forced upon them. We only want them to understand what are the methods."

She also differs from the Church on Cuba which she supports. "It's not perfect," she said noting several churches have been closed there. But she added, "The Catholic Church is living in Cuba and is richer for it."

Sister Navarro lives in an apartment house that dwarfs rows of gray, one-story cinder block houses and shacks. Her two-bedroom apartment is simply decorated but far more comfortable than the homes nearby.

Sister Navarro had strong words to say about Pope John Paul II's six-day whirlwind tour of Mexico last February.

"Perhaps he did some good, but the Pope was used by the wealthy class in their interests," she said.

During his visit to Mexico, the Pope told the bishops and clergy of Latin America their "worldly activities." Jesus Christ, he said, was not a political revolutionary.

"As the visit went along his talks began to change, especially in Oaxaca," Sister Navarro said. "I think he is a great man, a man of faith, and he can do a lot of good."

Selected To ### Attend Institute

Dean Painter, air and water resources department chairman at Pitt Technical Institute, has been selected to attend an institute on "Energy and Air Quality" in June. This will be the second time the Argonne Center for Educational Affairs has selected Painter to attend one of its faculty institutes.

Painter will be attending one of approximately eight, one week, institutes during the summer. Each institute covers a different subject of interest designed to update lecture and laboratory techniques. Each institute is limited to 14 students selected from education institutions throughout the United States that are currently teaching environmental-oriented courses.

Painter has been teaching in the air and water pollution area since 1968. He has been chairman of the Pitt Tech program since its inception in 1972, and is the author of a textbook, "Air Pollution Technology."

How Tar Heels Voted In House Of Representatives

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes May 24 through May 30.

'REVOLVING DOOR' — The House approved, 327 for and 48 against, a bill (S 869) relaxing the stiff ethics-in-government law due to take effect in the executive branch July 1, 1979. The law is largely aimed at blocking the "revolving door" by which many officials leave government to take private-sector jobs closely related to their former government position. Critics say the revolving door opens the way to conflicts-of-interests.

In part, this bill relaxes the definition of "contract" between the ex-government official and his former government agency.

Supporters said the law is so rigid it is driving many dedicated and honest officials out of government. Rep. Milliecent Fenwick, R-N.J., said: "I will be forced to vote for the liberalization until the day comes when we (Members of Congress) are prepared to apply the rules that we consider appropriate for others to ourselves."

Rep. Romano Mazzoli, D-Ky., an opponent, said: "For those who come into government altruistically — and I am sure there are many — if there is this little bit of sacrifice...it ought to simply be part of that altruism..."

Members voting "yea" wanted to relax the ethics law.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

ETHICS LAW — The House rejected, 88 for and 292 against, an amendment to limit the contact the new ethics law (see above vote) permits between an ex-government official and his or her former federal agency.

The amendment said that, in addition to prohibiting for two years personal appearances by an ex-official before his ex-agency, the law should also prohibit "backroom" work. An example of backroom contact would be a lawyer writing arguments to be presented to the agency not by himself but by his law partner.

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., the sponsor, said "so long as he is working in the backroom, this is the biggest loophole in the entire bill."

Rep. Carlos J. Moorhead, R-

Calif., an opponent, said that "in almost any job (a former government employee) could get in private industry, there could be some effect on preparations that might eventually be made to a governmental agency..."

Members voting "yea" supported the amendment limiting "backroom" contacts.

Rose voted "yea."
Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

MID-EAST AID — The House passed, 347 for and 28 against, a bill (HR 4035) authorizing $4.8 billion in grants and loans for Egypt and Israel. The aid, an addition to normal U.S. foreign aid outlays, was promised by the U.S. as part of the new Mid-East peace treaty. Israel would receive $800 million for two airbases and $2.2 billion in arms. Egypt would get $300 million in economic aid and $1.5 billion in military equipment. The bill was sent to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., a supporter, said: "If the United States is to play a mediating role in the negotiations, it must be reasonably responsive to the security requirements of Israel and Egypt."

Rep. James P. Johnson, R-Colo., an opponent, argued: "We are paying ransom to them to stop fighting each other. It seems to me that peace should be an incentive to them — not our arms." Members voting "yea" favored the aid to facilitate the Mid-East peace treaty.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Gudger voted "yea."

Broyhill did not vote.

BUDGET — The House gave final approval, 202 for and 196 against, to the congressional "master plan" for the fiscal 1980 federal budget. The fiscal year begins Oct. 1. The budget plan is non-binding, but sets ceilings and guidelines which the House and Senate are expected to obey as they approve actual spending bills later in the year. The plan anticipates $509 billion in revenue, a maximum of $532 billion in outlays, and an annual deficit of $23 billion. The total national debt thus would be $887.2 billion.

Supporters regarded the measure as imperfect but acceptable. Opponents were mostly conservatives objecting to the overall price tag and liberals who thought defense spending was emphasized too much and social programs not enough.

Members voting "yea" favored the fiscal 1980 congressional budget plan.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Gudger voted "yea."
Broyhill voted "nay."

Child Music Programs Reach Into Community

WILMETTE, Ill. (AP) — Fourth-grade beginning band students at the Stewart School in Garden City, N.Y., have an unusual problem at practice time: getting the instruments away from their parents.

Mom and Dad have rehearsing of their own to do for the school's 35-member Parent Band.

New last fall, the Parent Band grew out of an orientation meeting called to acquaint parents with the problems of the first-year band student, from instrument assembly to the importance of regular practice. The response was so encouraging that parents were invited to form their own group, using their children's instruments.

In expanding the music program to include parents, the Stewart School is following a trend toward community involvement increasingly evident in schools across the country. According to the American Music Conference in Wilmette, schools are turning to community outreach programs as a way to strengthen support for school music.

Programs for adults give parents an opportunity to share a learning experience with their children, while building local support by providing a community service. Often, these programs introduce adults to the joys of making their own music, the AMC points out.

"A few of the parents were band participants in high school," said Stewart School music director Thomas Wagner, "but for most this is the first experience with a musical instrument. They learned scales and 'Lightly Row' right along with their 9-year-olds, and it's been a very positive experience for the kids."

"Those with parents in the band have a definite edge. They show more interest in music, and they're better prepared when they come to class because they're getting help at home. The experiment has significantly reduced the dropout rate among first-year band students."

enth, eighth and ninth graders goes into the community to entertain at homes for the aged, Kiwanis luncheons, church affairs and other social events.

"Many of the adults in the three college classes are people who became interested in guitar after they heard my students perform," said teacher Duane Burr. "And dozens of students have encouraged their parents to take up the instrument. The adult students, in turn, encourage their children to take guitar when they reach junior high school. The community is really behind us."

Another possible way for schools to encourage community involvement is to offer equipment and facilities for adult education classes. At the William Monroe Elementary School in Stanardsville, Va., adults from the surrounding area are learning to play the piano in the school's electronic piano lab. The fee: $15 for ten lessons, much less than a private instructor would charge.

The lab features 12 electronic pianos which are connected to a master piano by headsets, enabling the teacher to monitor the progress of individual students. Teaching aids include films and audio tapes, and a visualizer that permits the student to see the notes being played on both a staff and a piano "keyboard."

The lab was installed in 1975 to give disadvantaged students an opportunity to study a musical instrument. As teacher Bula Stein explained, "Band members are required to rent or buy their instruments, but not all students can absorb the cost. The county-financed piano lab, which is used by about 200 students per year, means that no student need be denied musical training for financial reasons."

The low cost of the adult lessons also offers an opportunity to senior citizens and others who might not be able to afford the cost of private lessons.

"But the big appeal seems to be the group-lesson format," said Mrs. Stein. "We're drawing students from the county as well as the town, because learning piano in a group situation is more fun than studying privately."

Grant To Aid In Cataloguing

ECU News Bureau
Description and cataloguing of almost 200 years of historical documents in the collected William B. Rodman papers will be aided by an $11,187 grant by Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation to the East Carolina University Manuscript Collection in Joyner Library.

"Historical research dealing with hundreds of North Carolina-related topics will be greatly advanced through the availability of the Rodman papers," says Donald R. Lennon, director of the ECU Manuscript Collection.

The grant, approved by Foundation trustees May 11, will provide for a staff position for arranging, describing and preparation of complete finding aids for the approximately 50,000 items in the Rodman collection.

"When the project is completed, it will provide access to a vast array of material pertaining to nineteenth and twentieth century agriculture, antebellum life, slavery, politics, the Civil War and Reconstruction, railroad history, lumber operations, legal and judicial history, women's history and life in Eastern North Carolina," Lennon said.

Thomas W. Lambeth, executive director of the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation Inc., in a letter to ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer, said, "Please know that our Trustees are happy to have a part in this important project."

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation was established in 1936 as a memorial to the younger son of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

Calls For Solar Energy Goals

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The nation needs specific national goals if it is to stimulate solar-energy development, according to a University of Michigan professor.

"The goals probably should be in the form of the quantities of solar energy that would be produced at various dates," says Professor John A. Clark of the university's mechanical-engineering department.

The basic question, Clark says, is how to stimulate the development of new, improved and more cost-effective solar-energy conversion systems.

One way he suggests is with a closer government-industry partnership, perhaps a consortium of private industry, government agencies and user groups.

Goodwill Visit By Royal Pair

TOKYO (AP) — Crown Prince Akihito and Princess Michiko will make a goodwill visit to Romania, Bulgaria and the Netherlands in October, the Imperial Household says.

The royal couple will visit Romania and Bulgaria as the proxies of Emperor Hirohito to return the visits made in 1975 by Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu and in 1978 by Bulgarian President Todor Zhivkov, the agency said Tuesday.

The announcement said the visit to the Netherlands will be informal.

Polar Visit Was By 'Ford'

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — When Rear Adm. Richard Byrd and pilot Floyd Bennett crossed the North Pole, they did it in a Ford, so to speak.

Their craft, a tri-motor Fokker monoplane, was named the "Josephine Ford." It's now preserved in the Henry Ford Museum, which has the largest civilian-aircraft collection in the country.

By PAMELA J. HUEY RANTOUL, III. (UPI) — The highest ranking woman in the U.S. Air Force has been called a chronic optimist.

For an example, Maj. Gen. Norma E. Brown said, "Everybody told me I would hate St. Johns, New Foundland — cold, rainy and all that. I didn't believe it for a second."

"I went up there and I didn't hate it. We didn't get any mail for 21 days because of fog and planes couldn't land. That was terrible to an awful lot of people."

"We really wanted the mail to come in, granted. But I said when it does come in, just think how much we'll have."

Miss Brown has brought her own special brand of optimism to command of Chanute Air Force Base, the oldest and one of the major technical training centers in the Air Training Command.

"I do a good job because I want to do a good job," she said. "I wouldn't set out on anything I couldn't enjoy. I've never had a job that wasn't better than the last. I just have a great time all 24 hours. I enjoy working hard problems and I don't enjoy sitting doing nothing."

Her type of optimism has been a rare commodity lately at Chanute, a military installation just emerging from a year-long cloud of possible closure. About the same time the Air Force officially named Miss Brown commander at Chanute, the Pentagon announced the 62-year-old base would remain open.

The 53-year-old, two-star general appears to have charmed almost everyone at Chanute and in the Rantoul community.

"People seem to be almost overwhelmed by her gracious, friendly manner and her charm," said Col. Roy Brunhart, chief of public information at the base.

Miss Brown, a high school physical education teacher in 1950, began her 28-year career in the Air Force as a means to earn money to attend graduate school so she could teach at the college level.

"I joined the Air Force because a second lieutenant made twice as much as a teacher," she said. "You probably wouldn't find a soul who came into the service for money except me."

The family, which also consists of the children's grandmother, spends its free time bicycling, riding horses and going to the beach.

She had another thought about that "chronic optimist" label.

"I think if I had gotten married I still would have been a super, great success."

As for the prospect of women in combat, she said the secretary of defense should assign any military personnel where he sees fit.

"The best pilots ought to go to war. I can't speak for the Army but I can tell you that women pilots should be judged on their skills, not their sex. I think that's a very sensible approach to it."

Miss Brown has two adopted children — Bunny, 16, and Tim, 15. Both are high school students and remained at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, to finish the school year.

The family, which also consists of the children's grandmother, spends its free time bicycling, riding horses and going to the beach.

She had another thought about that "chronic optimist" label.

Find Helmets

No Impediment

NEW YORK (AP) — Some motorcyclists refuse to wear helmets in the belief they make riding unsafe — but don't you believe it, says the University of Illinois.

Reporting on a behavioral study conducted by the university, the Motorcycle Safety Foundation reports 15.3 percent of the riders interviewed said they never wore helmets.

Many of these believe helmets restrict vision, some contend they interfere with hearing, and others think a helmet might cause neck injury in an accident.

A review of reports on thousands of accidents involving motorcycles showed that even full-face helmets permit ample peripheral vision, according to the Foundation, which adds that a helmeted rider's hearing is not impaired and no evidence was found that neck injuries resulted from wearing helmets.

Medical Claims Are Bolstered

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — A pharmacy professor says scientific experimentation with wine over the past 30 years has strengthened the validity of many ancient medical claims made about it. Steven Strauss, an associate professor from Long Island (N.Y.) University's pharmacy college, says the clinical uses of wine declined because of Prohibition and competition with new drugs. "Wine lacked the dramatic quality of the claims made for the increasing number of new drugs," Strauss said in a paper presented at the recent convention in Anaheim of the American Pharmaceutical Association.

Pale, Elegant Look For Trendy Interior Design

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
NEW YORK (UPI) — Some of America's trend-setting interior designers have previewed the decorating year. They are firmly on the side of the simple, elegant Art Deco styles of the 1920s and 1930s — plumply stuffed unholstered furniture, pale colors, lots of lacquer, fiber rugs and Oriental accessories.

A trend away from excessive use of French and English 18th century antiques and the cluttered look for every flat surface was evident at two of the New York area's most prestigious decorator show-cases. These opened recently in a 1903 Stanford White-designed town house on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue and a 1912 castle in suburban Sands Point, Long Island. The castle was built by the railroading Goulds and later occupied by copper-rich Guggenheims.

Room after room of these mansions, each furnished by a different decorator, made strong statements for comfort — with curvaceous, often outsized banquettes, sofas, one-armed chaises and armchairs reflecting the era of flappers and bathtub gin. Curves have replaced corners on tables, desks, consoles and even standing screens.

Blond woods such as ash and birch, blond-painted floors, parchment and travertine lacquer, pale sisal rugs and upholstery in shades of off-white, goatskin, oyster, wheat and cream recreate the environment of a Jean Harlow film. And everywhere — as Tut tomb discoverer Howard Carters said — the glint of gold and an occasional bibelot from the Egyptian revival period of the mid-20s.

Fifteen designers are participating in the Kip's Bay Boys' Club decorator show house in Manhattan through May 20, and 41 in the Children's Medical Fund-North Shore Science museum show castle in Sands Point through June 10. Although their viewpoints are not homogenous, there is surprising agreement on one thing — the soft, squishy comfort symbolized by puffy upholstery and plump pillows.

"In the next decade design will be heading towards casual opulence, eclecticism and romance," said Samuel Botero, a Colombian-born New York decorator whose all-purpose room features a deeply cushioned Art Deco sofa with flanking lacquer cabinets in peacock blue and an antique celadon and garnet Agra rug.

NOT ENTITLED
WASHINGTON (AP) — A former soldier who took LSD as part of a military experiment is not entitled to damages because he was later notified of possible adverse effects, but continued to take the drug on his own, a federal judge has ruled.

"This new brand of opulence is created with functional, rich materials, large scale elements designed for comfort, and a wealth of luxurious detail mixing High-Tech elements with antiques and the best of contemporary design."

Although many decorators pay lip service to use of industrial furniture known as High-Tech, there is not much of it in these shows. And not much elegance in the grand manner of crystal chandeliers and museum quality porcelains either, except in a dining-living room created by Richard L. Ridge.

Ridge paid homage to the 18th century look with Chinese temple tables and other red lacquer furniture and four blue-and-white Chinese ginger jars centering a modern glass dining table, a ubiquitous item in both shows along with lucite. Similar jars appear in oversized print quilt pillows tossed on big, well-stuffed velvet sofas that can be converted into beds. Here, as in many of the rooms, large palms, ficus, flowering crab, orchids, anemones and calla lilies strike a natural note.

One designer, Harvey Herman, struck the same note with bedroom walls and furnishings in an evergreen and white First Editions print, Beau Geste. The fan back of the Art Deco bed is picked up in the backs and arms of chairs. Other details are a large lacquered wardrobe, a chandelier that could have graced the S.S. Normandie, a Deco-style full length portrait of Barbra Streisand, and metallic glints of gold and silver.

The fourposter beds of last season's decorator shows have been banished in favor of posterless beds of princely proportion, often on a low dais, a feature emphasized by the venerable firm of McMillen.

Rona Levine's bed with carved wood head and footboard was designed like Oriental fans in lavender lacquer.

Eleanor Leonard chose a gilt Egyptian revival bed borne on the backs of cow-headed goddesses.

For her luminous dusty rose Art Deco room, Mercedes Sempliner chose a sectional sofa that converts to a bed with the addition of a pie-shaped wedge.

Open Markets Draw Shoppers

HONOLULU (AP) — Shoppers on Oahu, Hawaii's main island, have an alternative to high supermarket prices, but they have to get up early to take advantage of it.

Beginning at dawn, six days a week, vendors set up in parking lots of neighborhood schools and parks to sell fresh fruits, vegetables, meat, fish, flowers and plants at wholesale prices.

More than 60 vendors make up the People's Open Market at 20 locations scattered around the island. More than 30 others are on a waiting list.

Prices are set three times a week from a wholesale market report.

Shoppers can save more than 40 percent on some items. Head lettuce and broccoli selling for 55 cents a pound at the open market were priced at 99 cents a pound at a local supermarket. Cauliflower was 75 cents per pound at the open market but $1.19 at the supermarket. Honolulu-area food prices increased more than 17 percent in 1978.

Some of the produce comes from vendors' back yards. But others sell for small farmers and mainland producers, according to James Ota, an open-market supervisor.

One farmer who raises bananas said he had formerly sold to supermarkets but there was no consistency in the amount bought or the price paid. He said selling at the open market let him meet consumers and learn what they wanted so he could produce accordingly.

The vendors' battered, mud-splattered pickup trucks, vans and station wagons — filled to the brim — form a caravan traveling from one location to another. The vendors spend an hour at each of three or more locations each day.

Customers line the fences shopping bags in hand, anxiously awaiting the signal for the start of trade. Once a horn is sounded, throngs crowd around tables, grabbing for the products of their choice.

Some attribute the success of the open market to dependability. Shoppers know that, whatever the weather, they will be able to buy fresh produce and meat at the same time and place every week.

"If the customer is happy and the vendor is happy, we know we have a good program," said open-market coordinator Yoshito Sagawa.

The open market began five years ago after the wife of Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi visited an open market in the Orient and decided something similar should be set up in Honolulu.

The original intent was to allow farmers to sell ungraded and surplus produce, which was being plowed under, in low-income areas.

Now, the program has been expanded to middle-class neighborhoods and some top-grade produce is available, a fact which has not gone unnoticed by wholesale dealers.

Selling mainland produce and in other than low-income areas "is not following the original intent of the mayor when he began the People's Open Market," said Richard Kurahara, President of the Wholesale Fruit and Vegetable Dealers Association.

Citizens of the Greenville City School District:

North Carolina Public School Law states that a board of education "shall have general control and supervision of all matters pertaining to the public schools in their respective administrative units." The Greenville City Board of Education in attempting to fulfill its obligation has seriously considered the facility needs of the Greenville City Schools.

In an effort to determine the needs, members individually and the board collectively have determined that the most appropriate method of improving the existing facilities and providing additional facilities to meet the ever growing demands on the school system is through the promotion of a bond issue.

On June 8, the proposition will be placed before the voters within the Greenville City School District asking their approval to issue $9,000,000.00 worth of school bonds. Greenville City Schools will receive its pro-rate share of these bonds which will amount to $2,813,130.00. These funds will be utilized to provide more and better facilities for the children of Greenville.

Individually and collectively the members of the Greenville City Board of Education endorse this bond proposal. The proposal is recommended after thorough consideration of the alternatives. Your support is enthusiastically solicited.

Vote "YES" on the bond issue June 8. It will be a vote for the children of Greenville City Schools and for the future of Greenville.

Sincerely,

Members

POCATELLO, Idaho (AP) —
The Bannock County Fair ground isn't the Roman Coliseum, and Ron Carter isn't Ben-Hur.

But Carter and about 7,500 others who jammed the Pocatello racetrack for the world chariot championships share the same enthusiasm that historians say packed 'em in at Rome.

The sport's changed some since the old days. Modern charioteers run a two-horse team, usually quarter-horses, down a 440-yard dirt straightaway. The chariots resemble — and in some cases are — sawed-off, 50-gallon oil drums attached to a pair of motorcycle wheels.

Racers now compete for trophies and horse blankets instead of olive garlands. And a disqualification means being bumped a notch in the standings, not being sent back in chains to a galley oar.

Darryl Harris, historian of the World Championship Cutter and Chariot Racing Association, said the sport was pretty much limited to the Intermountain West, with most racers coming from southern Idaho, northern Utah, Nevada and Wyoming.

AT THE FINISH—Three teams charge to a close finish in a preliminary heat at the World Championship Cutter and Chariot races in Pocatello, Idaho. Racing association officials say the sport has grown from casual wintertime challenges between horse owners in the 1930s to a sport that now has organizations throughout the Intermountain West.

essentially a quarter-mile drag race for horses." Teams line up in a starting gate, then barrel down the track in times often under 23 seconds.

There's no tote board, tip sheets or $2 windows. Instead, spectators, many clad in cowboy hats and boots, drink beer and talk horses. As teams parade to the post, the announcer describes each horse by bloodline and American Quarter Horse Association ratings.

Carter, the Utah state champion who drives a rig called Generator Exchange and Galco Construction, said most owners were amateurs who were nuts about quarter horses. The horses, he said, are gentle, smart, and love to run.

"You don't have to push them or use funny mechanisms to make them run," he said. "They run just out of desire."

Carter, who runs Generator Exchange in Salt Lake City, said it had cost him about $11,500 for his team, which pulls a custom-built chariot valued at $1,500. However, he said some teams were worth up to $50,000, especially if the horses were raced singly at summertime meets.

For his efforts at the world championships, Carter got a second-place trophy, a set of horse blankets and a share of gate receipts divided among all drivers. However, he said a winning horse increased in value as did its offspring and breeding fees.

ARTS GRANTS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Endowment for the Arts has announced 22 grants from the Expansion Arts Program for support of regional tour events in 15 states and the District of Columbia. The grants total $158,750.

West Is Loser If China Modernization Falters

Pennsylvania's Trees Are Subject Of Search

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Halfred Wertz spends his free time searching for the gnarled survivors of William Penn's woods, which if not the state of Pennsylvania's family trees, certainly are her roots.

list for posterity the oldest trees in the region, it is hoped by the middle of next year. "In time to publish a book for the tricentennial of Penn's landing here in 1682."

"After all," adds the gray-haired Wertz, "there's already a 300th-anniversary committee zeroing in on cultural events. I felt this tree business was equally important."

The little group calls itself the Penn Tree Committee. It includes retired foresters, and two former superintendents of Valley Forge Park.

Wertz, 67, has been fascinated by trees most of his life. A retired mathematics teacher, he owns a 150-acre tree farm in Mifflin County.

In their spare time, members of the little committee, outfitted with camera, map and measuring tape, scour the back roads and major highways in search of the old trees.

They also carry a little book, "Penn's Woods," published in 1933 and written by Edward E. Wildman, which catalogued about 300 trees that were growing when Penn stepped ashore.

Many are now crowded by civilization. The well-known Drinker Oak, for instance, today is precariously perched at the entrance of a store near Route 202 in King of Prussia. The giant tree was already a century old when the commonwealth was founded, and served as a landmark for Washington's Army en route to Valley Forge.

And the white oak in Emil Prosen's yard in Bala-Cynwyd, just outside Philadelphia, was a sturdy sapling when the Pilgrims landed in 1620.

At last count — and the numbers keep changing — the little committee had found 84 of Wildman's Penn trees still living, plus 56 trees that Wildman did not identify but that are believed to be at least 300 years old. Most of the Penn trees are oaks, according to Wertz, because they live longer than other trees, 400 to 600 years, and survive in poorer soil.

Finding the trees is one problem, judging their age another. "You can't tell for sure how old a tree is unless you cut it down and count the annual rings," says Wertz.

So the committee must rely on a practiced eye.

"The general rule of thumb is that any tree greater than 15 feet in circumference (measure at 4½ feet above the ground) is probably a Penn tree," said Wertz, a past president of the Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

Most of the ancient trees are being found in the four suburban counties surrounding Philadelphia. The city itself had 24 Penn trees in 1932.

Today it has but two.

By WILLIAM J. HOLSTEIN
HONG KONG (UPI) — Like the disastrous "Great Leap Forward," China's leaders are concluding their faltering modernization drive must undergo a "modification" that could shut down thousands of factories.

Top leaders of China's Communist Party have concluded a meeting in Peking at which they are believed to have made the painful decisions on how to revamp the "four modernizations" plan announced in March 1978.

The "Modification" — Chinese leaders also refer to it as a "reassessment" or "readjustment" — is certain to have major economic and political impact inside China and in China's dealings with the outside world.

Foreign businessmen in particular are likely to lose out on billions of dollars in contracts.

The Chinese have masterfully drawn in thousands of Westerners to give them free technical advice and to bid on projects, but few businessmen emerge with contracts — usually only "letters of intent."

"A letter of intent doesn't mean a damn thing," said one veteran Western trader. "I think it's going to break very conservatively and a lot of companies that spent $50,000 or $60,000 going in there will come up empty-handed."

The crux of China's dilemma is that it lacks the resources — money, energy and know-how — to carry out modernization of its agriculture, light industry, heavy industry, transportation and raw materials sectors all at the same time.

"They are finally having to sit down and make tough decisions about what they can afford and what they cannot afford," the Western trader said. "In a way, their bubble is bursting."

A Chinese-language magazine, Cheng Ming, which generally reflects the views of Chinese officialdom, says the result will be a wrenching readjustment. That will be even more severe than the collapse of the Mao Tse-tung's Great Leap Forward first announced in 1958.

That attempt to transform China into a modern industrial power, complete with a scheme to set up backyard factories, misfired and resulted in 20 million of China's 50 million industrial workers being laid off, according to Cheng Ming.

The Hong Kong-based monthly said China's "modification" this time will be even more far-reaching, but that workers will be paid to take training in higher technology.

Western analysts agree that a major readjustment is in the works, but they believe estimates of 20 million or more workers being thrown out of jobs are exaggerated.

"This is a selective retrenchment," said Peter Harris, head of the political science department at the University of Hong Kong. "The idea that they are going to have wholesale dislocation of the Chinese economy is ridiculous."

Many of the factories presumably scheduled to be shut down are uneconomical because of a stunning breakdown in China's planning process: factories have been built without proper access to raw materials or electricity.

The Wuhan Iron and Steel Works, for example, has been at only a fraction of its capacity because there is not enough electricity in all of the Hupeh Province, where it is located, to keep it going full blast, Cheng Ming said.

But it was not until late April that party leaders were summoned from the provinces for a top-level meeting that ended just in time for the traditional May 1 festivities throughout China.

Premier Hua Guofeng (Hua Kuo-feng), who announced the "four modernizations" in March 1978, was the first to indicate the extent of the retrenchment in remarks to visiting U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

"Starting from 1979, we are shifting the focus of our work to a modification program (of economic goals) so China needs an international environment of peace in order to build up our country," Hua said.

Hua's phrasing was of particular interest. China's official media for more than a year have been urging the masses to "shift the focus" of their work from Maoist-style political struggle to economic modernization. By using that same phrase, Hua may have signaled another swing in China's pendulum.

Western analysts believe, on the basis of provincial radio broadcasts and official Chinese statements, that the "modification" will mean more resources devoted to producing electricity and to agriculture. Heavy industries such as iron and steel are expected to be de-emphasized and some factories shut down.

A recent article in Peking's People's Daily said a great rise in steel production would be out of proportion with other areas of the economy such as agriculture. Provincial leaders already are grappling with the implications.

Provincial radio broadcasts indicate that construction plans — made in the initial burst of modernization enthusiasm — are being scaled back.

Seminar Is Set June 28

"How to be Prepared if Left Holding the Financial Bag" will be the topic of a seminar to be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. June 28 at the Pitt County District Courtroom. It will be the second in a series of programs for women sponsored this year by the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women.

According to Jean Darden, president of the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women, the purpose of the seminar is to make women more aware of financial responsibilities.

"Separation or death of a spouse can often times leave women at loose ends to solve financial obligations. The seminar speakers will discuss legal and financial responsibilities of the separated partner, widows and single women," said Darden.

Speakers at the seminar will be Mrs. Curtis Hendrix, Dr. Susan McDaniel, Sandra Gaskins, Pitt County Clerk of Court, and Charles (Sonny) McLawhorn Jr., attorney.

Specific topics to be discussed include the following: "Your Previous Education Concerning Finances," "Your Role Concerning Finances in the Home," "Your Interest in Planning the Financial Future" and "Coping With Finances After — Professionals Needed."

Took 26 Visits To Fix A Door

HATFIELD, England (AP) —

There was no doubt in the minds of Edith and Leonard Parman the back door of their government-subsidized house was rotten and needing replacement.

After two years of complaining about the leaking door, the council finally agreed to send workmen to paint it.

The paint did not stop the leaking, so a new door was installed — backwards. Then it was found to be too small.

The Pearmans say workmen had to make 26 visits before the door was fixed properly.

Tax On Coal Pays Costs Of Research

HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — Montanans, looking toward the day when the state's vast coal reserves give out, are paying for alternative energy source research with tax money from mining operations.

There's not another state program like it.

Fortunes in gold, silver, copper and other precious substances — oil among them — have been dug, dredged and pumped from under Montana over the last 100 years with little return to the state's treasury.

But in 1975, about the time OPEC became a household word, the state legislature decided Montana should see some returns from its increasingly attractive coal deposits. So it created the stiffest coal tax in the nation — 30 percent of the coal's mine mouth value.

Much of the return from that tax is being held in trust for that incalculable time when the coal and its revenues are gone. But a portion of the coal tax is being spent now for what is called the Alternative Renewable Energy Sources Program.

The program's share of coal tax money has been slightly less than 2 percent since it was founded in 1976. In 1980 it will be 2½ percent and remain at that level. That has figured out to about $800,000 a year and will increase to slightly over a $1 million budget in each of the next two years.

Thus far, 473 grant requests have been received and 134 funded for a total of nearly $2.2 million.

The projects have covered the five major renewable energy categories fairly extensively — solar, wind, water, geothermal, and what is called biomass. The latter refers to the use of organic materials, in this state principally livestock and timber byproducts. Wood is widely used in western Montana as a heat source, and the potential is great for production of methane gas from cow manure.

Some of the more dramatic results of the three-year-old program:

—Former teacher Dick Dill received a solar study grant that allowed him to design and build solar collectors and a heat storage system for his dome house. Now he markets light weight collector and storage systems through his company, Sunset Solar Construction.

—Inveterate tinkerer Bill Delp has developed small-scale hydroelectric generators which he sells through his company, Independent Power Developers. —The New Western Energy Show has traveled throughout the state as a small carnival, celebrating the virtues of renewable energy in song and original theater. The troupe carries renewable energy hardware and publications along, and has attracted so much attention that it now has its own funding sources and travels to other states.

—Dick Sheridan, a University of Montana professor, received a grant and built solar heating panels for his home. He has written a manual on solar energy construction and teaches a solar energy class at the university.

One of Sheridan's students was so inspired that he built a solar heating panel and dangled it out his dormitory window. It pumps hot water into a barrel and provides heat for his room. Although it was the first solar collector on campus, campus authorities were not impressed and he became a celebrity through ongoing efforts to get him to remove it.

The funding program is now steering away from strictly solar projects and has begun to design its own requests for proposals. Among the unanswered dreams are wind farms, geothermal sites and educational and training programs.

The U.S. Department of Energy is engaged in a study of large wind generators capable of supplying whole communities with electrical power. But Dana Gunderson, one of the Montana program administrators, believes the large scale approach will never work. The state program will, instead, investigate small wind generators in the 25 to 100 kilowatt range that can be mass produced and manufactured cheaply enough for the average family.

DECISION 'SOON'
WASHINGTON (AP) President Carter will announce shortly his decision on whether to build the MX mobile missile, a White House official says. Carter met with military leaders Monday to discuss the issue, officials said.

LET THE DELI DO IT!

THE KROGER DELI BAKERY

Wonderful specialties and ready to serve foods for last minute meals is what awaits you at the Kroger Deli/Bakery. Many kinds of ready to enjoy salads and desserts ... fresh sliced lunchmeats and cheese ... as well as many gourmet treats not found in your average supermarket.

In our bakery you'll find a friendly hostess or assistant to help fill your order from our service displays of tempting cakes, donuts, pies, cookies and other delights. Many of these favorites are baked right in the modern ovens built into the store. Here is where you also place your order for birthday, anniversary or other special occasion cakes.

Graduation Cakes

The Kroger Deli/Bakery is where you can come and have your Graduation cake (or any cake!) made up specially for you. Choose from one of our designs or bring in your own pattern and we'll transfer that into a cake decoration.
