Pitt voters Friday defeated a proposed $9 million school bond issue and, under the present law, killed by-the-drink sales of liquor in the county for the next three years.

Some 13,556 persons — 46 per cent of the 29,700 registered voters — cast ballots in the election.

Nearly 53 per cent of the votes cast in the school bond referendum, 6,946 ballots, were against issuing bonds for school capital improvement projects, while 6,090 votes were cast in favor of issuing the proposed bonds.

Only 51 per cent of the ballots in the mixed drink referendum, 6,567 votes, were cast against the sale of mixed beverages, while 6,335 votes favored selling liquor by the drink in restaurants and social clubs.

The defeat of both issues seemed to support the fears, expressed by some supporters of the school bonds and mixed drink sales before the election, that the timing was wrong.

Liquor-by-the-drink supporters, who lost their bid for mixed drink sales by 232 votes, had expressed support for a referendum earlier in the spring, or favored a fall vote on the issue.

School bond supporters, who were defeated by 856 votes, said two recent bond elections in the City of Greenville, probably hurt their cause.

Under the present law, it will be three years before another referendum can be held on the question of mixed drink sales in the county. However, some school supporters indicated that it might not be that long before another referendum is considered for school facilities.

Jim Black, co-chairman of the school bond steering committee said, "by failing to ratify the bond referendum, Pitt County voters are saying they want school construction money to come from current tax dollars.

"Naturally, I am disappointed, but we can live with this decision," Black said. "I know the two school boards, the administrations and teachers will continue to give our children the best education possible."

"I'm tremendously disappointed," Greenville school superintendent Glenn Cox said after the ballots were counted.

"I've talked with several of our board members, and we aren't able to determine where things went wrong, at this point.

"The only thing I can see," Cox said, "is it was so much an economic thing...voting against taxes. I hope they weren't voting against schools."

Ott Alford, superintendent of the Pitt County school system expressed his, "terrible disappointment," also.

"I really felt we had a good chance to carry it. There's no other alternative now, than to try to do the best we can with what we've got. That's all we can do.

"I'm terribly disappointed for the youngsters, that's all."

The city and county school boards called for the $9 million referendum earlier this year after county commissioners repeatedly told them that the county is not able to provide needed facilities on a pay-as-you-go basis through current appropriations.

The bonds would have provided funds for new school buildings, additions and renovations to present structures, and equipment.

Supporters of mixed drink sales had contended that there would be more control over the use of alcohol in public places and a reduction in the number of outlets if mixed beverage sales were approved.

Marvin Speight, chairman of the State ABC Board, said before the Friday balloting, "you're not voting liquor in or out. You're voting whether you want liquor-by-the-drink, or liquor by the bottle."

He said if the sale of mixed beverages were approved, brown-bagging would be baned, and alcohol could be consumed only in restaurants having mixed beverage permits.

Louis Clark, chairman of the Mixed Beverage Committee said only 23 of the 47 establishments in the county now holding brown-bagging permits would be eligible to receive mixed drink permits.

Opponents of mixed-drink sales contended, however, that liquor-by-the-drink would increase the availability and the consumption of alcohol.

An analysis of the votes by precinct shows that only one-third of the 24 polling places in the county — eight — voted for the school bond issue. Only two of them were precincts outside of Greenville — Ayden and Simpson — while six of the nine Greenville boxes carried the issue.

However, the Greenville vote of 3,397 for, and 3,107 against the

Calls Decision HEW Victory

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano said Friday that a federal court's decision to allow administrative hearings that could result in a cutoff of federal funds to the University of North Carolina was a victory for HEW.

"The decision of the U.S. District Court against the University of North Carolina is a significant victory for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the cause of equal opportunity for all students in the University of North Carolina system of higher education," Califano said.

The 16-campus university system had requested that HEW be enjoined from holding an administrative hearing that could result in a cutoff of federal funds after a series of lengthy proceedings.

But Judge Franklin T. Dupree ruled that HEW may not withhold federal funds from the school until the administrative hearing is held on HEW's charges that the university system is illegally segregated.

Clearly, said Judge Franklin T. Dupree, the university "will suffer irreparabale injury" if HEW is permitted to proceed with random deferral of UNC's federal-aid funds before an administrative hearing into the segregation dispute is held.

The judge also retained jurisdiction of the case but deferred further judicial proceedings pending the administrative hearing. Attorneys for HEW had asked Dupree to transfer the case to the U.S. District Court in Washington.

In Washington, an HEW spokesman who asked that his name not be used, said that UNC had failed to get from Dupree three things that it had requested: (1) An order forbidding HEW from holding an administrative hearing. (2) A ruling that HEW's revised criteria for higher education are invalid, and (3) A finding that UNC is in compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

The ruling, the spokesman said, might lengthen the administrative hearing process since UNC is no longer under the threat of federal fund deferral.

UNC President William C. Friday said he welcomed the Dupree decision because "jurisdiction has been retained and the threat of deferral of funds enjoined until we have an opportunity to present our case in an administrative hearing."

"I am pleased Judge Dupree retained jurisdiction of the case and that HEW may not defer any funds pending resolution of an administrative hearing," said Andrew Vanore, senior deputy state attorney general who argued the case before Dupree on behalf of the university. He pointed out that the ruling freed the university from "the threat of a fund cutoff" pending the administrative hearing.

May Cost Customers Millions

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A little-known provision of a federal law on nuclear accident liability may end up costing North Carolina and South Carolina electric utility customers millions because of the accident at Three Mile Island.

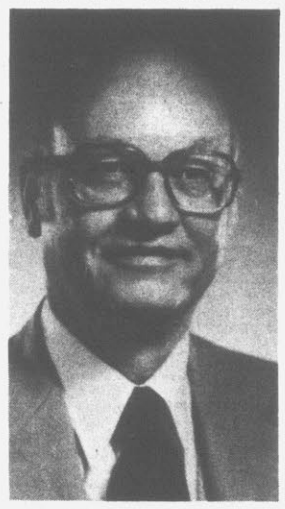

Under a complicated formula, utility companies that use nuclear power to generate electricity share the costs of settling suits stemming from an accident at any nuclear generating facility.

If insurance settlements in the Three Mile Island case exceed $140 million — and suits already filed far exceed that amount — Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light could each be assessed $15 million as their share of the damages, spokesmen for both companies confirmed.

Vice Chancellor Named

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

Elmer E. Meyer Jr., who believes that college student activities provide the best possible training for citizenship, will become Vice

Elmer Meyer, Jr.

Meyer, a native of Green Bay, Wisc., who holds the Ph.D. in Counseling and Behavioral Studies from the University of Wisconsin, has served as Assistant Vice President for Campus Affairs and Dean of Students, Cornell University, for the past eight years.

"I am delighted to have the opportunity to join the forward-looking administration, faculty, staff and students at East Carolina University," Meyer said in a telephone interview from Ithaca, N.Y.

His appointment to the newly created vice chancellorship at ECU was approved Friday by the UNC Board of Governors. The ECU Board of Trustees had approved the recommendation of Dr. Meyer during an executive session Wednesday.

Meyer said he was "particularly attracted" to the ECU post because Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer "is very supportive of student life programs" and that recent administrative reorganization which created the new vice chancellorship "is such that student life takes on an important educational dimension in the total program of the university.

"In training for citizenship there is no better way than involving the students in all these activities available on a college and university campus," he said.

The new vice chancellor will have administrative responsibility over the offices of the Deans of Men and Women, the Dean for Student Activities, the ECU Financial Aid Office, Counseling Center, Career Planning and Placement Office, Housing, Food Services, Security, Student Health Services and Intramural activities.

Chancellor Brewer said, "Dr. Meyer has an impressive record of success and achievement in this important area of higher education. He is imaginative and progressive and possesses great administrative ability and leadership skills. We are extremely fortunate to have

Greenville's 75th Graduation

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Different dreams that young people can dream, and an awareness of the complex problems facing society today were common themes touched on by five speakers at the graduation ceremony for about 390 seniors at Rose High Friday night.

"All of us are going to change, going on to our own lives, chasing different dreams," Becky Dixon, the first to speak, said. Jolinday Daniels noted that seniors today face problems—"A solution to the energy crisis, a cure for cancer, the balancing of the nation's budget."

Susan Tucker, referring to the end of 12 years of associations with classmates, added that "such separations from old friends open the door to new avenues, new adventures and experiences." Caren Hix said "The center of every man's existence is a dream . . . without a dream, we don't know where we're going."

The final of five speakers, Jeen Kim, looking to the future, remarked, "No matter how reluctant we are, we owe it to ourselves to move on to new dimensions."

A note of sadness marred the joy of graduation. Two seniors, Carlton Staton and Mary Eva Randolph, died before graduation. Staton died early Friday, less than 24 hours before he would have graduated. Principal Howard Hurt called for a moment of silence in memory of the two.

Students and Supt. Glenn Cox both made note of the fact that the 1979 class is the 75th graduating class of Greenville."Hopefully, this class will enhance their lives and society in general," Cox said in formally presenting the class for the graduating ceremony.

Once again, luck held good for Rose seniors, with warm weather without rain making it possible to hold the exercise outdoors at Ficklen Stadium.

As the seniors marched behind marshals and members of the Greenville Board of Education, a near full moon emerged through a misty cloud touched sky. At one point a pigeon overhead flashed like silver in the brilliant lights of the stadium.

The Rose High Band played the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance" processional. Laura Denise Lauffer gave the "Thought for the Day," William Joseph Wallace introduced the speakers, and Leslie Karen Gordon led in the tassel ceremony.

Diplomas were awared to seniors by Ed Carter, chairman of the Greenville City School Board and Howard Hurt, Rose principal.

Reflector Staff Writer

Tricia Tenpenny and Jeffrey Fussell, graduating senior speakers at Ayden-Grifton High School, spoke on "Where We've Been" and "Where We're Going."

Tricia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Tenpenny of Ayden, reviewed the graduates' past years within the school system, and noted the changes that had come about during their lives.

Jeffrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Fussell of Ayden, gave the graduates a capsule prediction of where they would be in a year, and noted the day "when we'll sit in the stands and see our children graduate."

After awards were presented by Ayden-Grifton principal William Wiggins, diplomas were awarded by Mrs. Dot Dail, chairperson of the Ayden-Grifton Advisory Council, and Frederick S. Parks, assistant principal.

The Ayden-Grifton High School Band under the direction of Ron Payne, opened the ceremonies with the traditional "Pomp and Circumstance." The high school chorus, directed by Mrs. Katherine Burke, sang "Times of Your Life" and "No Man Is An Island." A trio performed "The Way We Were."

Jill Cutler and Susan Lawrence spoke to the graduating seniors at Farmville Central High School on "Make Each Tomorrow Better Today." Jill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cutler of Farmville, and Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Lawrence of Falkland, said that helping each other leads to a better way, with persons to live for today and hope for tomorrow.

"Stairway to Heaven" was performed by the Farmville Central High School Band.

North Pitt's 157 graduating seniors heard the speeches, "We Accept the Challenge" and "Last Will and Testament" given by graduating senior speakers Paula Morris and Jason Garris.

Miss Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Morris of Belvoir, challenged her classmates to go forth and achieve their goals. Jason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Garris of Belvoir, gave a reflection of the events of the past 12 years and expressed the class's gratitude to several persons.

Miss Barbara Plummer directed the North Pitt Chorus in "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor." The welcome address was given by Miss Glenda Stancill, co-secretary-treasurer of the senior class. Miss Cynthia Barnes, co-president of the Student Council Association, offered the farewell address. The North Pitt Band, under the direction of James Powell, performed "The II Scipio March."

Held On Two Murder Charges

WHITAKERS, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Whitakers man has been charged with murder and manslaughter in the deaths of two Nash County men.

The men were killed when they were struck by the same vehicle at separate sites Friday, Sheriff Frank Brown said.

Raymond Richard Bradley III, of Route 1 Whitakers, was being held without bond in Nash County Jail Friday night.

William Rosser III, 21, and the son of Whitakers attorney W.O. Rosser, was found dead on State Road 1520 about a mile and a quarter north of Whitakers, Brown said. Rosser's body was found about 7:30 a.m. Friday by a school bus driver.

A second man, Larry Sledge, 21, also of the Whitakers area, was found dead soon after midnight on N.C. Highway 44 by Whitakers policemen responding to a telephone call.

Bradley was charged with murder in the death of Rosser and manslaughter in the death of Sledge.

Brown said Sledge was struck by a passing pickup truck as he was walking down the road. When a truck — registered to Rosser — returned 20 minutes later, police said they arrested Bradley, who they said was driving the truck.

Brown said Bradley was charged with manslaughter and driving under the influence of alcohol and was released at 4 a.m. under $25,000 bond to his father.

At 7:30 a.m. Friday, Rosser's body was found, and Brown said SBI agents established that Rosser had been struck by his own pickup truck.

3 Bodies Recovered

CALUMET, La. (UPI) — Rescue workers Saturday found the bodies of three miners killed in a gas explosion that ripped through a salt mine late Friday. Seventeen men were injured in the blast, and two others were missing.

Gas-masked rescue workers groped through the 1,200-foot deep south Louisiana salt mine for the two missing men.

The explosion at the Cargill Inc. salt mine, located on marshy Belle Isle about 90 miles southwest of New Orleans, apparently was touched off by leaking methane gas.

Of the 17 injured, four men — one with a damaged lung and another with a broken back — were hospitalized in satisfactory condition at Franklin Foundation Hospital. The others were treated and released.

The bodies of the three workers were found shortly before noon Saturday in the dark, gas-filled cavern.

A Message For The World

By BARRY JAMES

KRAKOW, Poland (UPI) — One memory will endure.

Going down into the death cell at Auschwitz where Franciscan Father Maximilian Kolbe met a martyr's death, Pope John Paul II suddenly sat on the cold, stone steps and buried his face in his hands.

John Paul had many messages to deliver during his nine-day visit to his homeland: to the Poles specifically, to eastern Europeans, to church people, to Communists and the young — above all to the young, who are most exposed to Marxist propaganda and intimidation.

"It is impossible merely to visit it," the pope said. "It is necessary ... to think with fear of how far hatred can go, how far man's destruction can go, how far cruelty can go."

The message the pontiff delivered to a vast crowd assembled on the railway tracks where four million human beings, mostly Jews, were shunted toward death was this: unless human dignity is respected absolutely, Auschwitz can happen again.

In fact, it does.

"I thought of the persons who suffered here, but also of the tortured prisoners who are suffering in Africa today," said Senegalese Cardinal Hyacinthe Thiandoum, one of the prelates accompanying the pope, after laying a wreath at the wall where Nazi victims were clubbed and shot to death.

"Man is capable of committing the same crimes, no matter under what skies, if he loses his sense of human dignity," Thiandoum said.

Running through John Paul's homilies was the theme of unity and reconciliation, not only between East and West, but between Poles and Russians — never an easy proposition.

Earlier, the pope criticized the Russians. They were the "allies" who abandoned the Poles to their fate while Nazi Germany razed Warsaw, he implied during his first mass in that city's Victory Square. And in addressing Communist Party First Secretary Edward Gierek, the pontiff made a pointed reference to "cultural imperialism," which means only one thing to a Pole.

But at Auschwitz, he asked the Poles to remember "how much the Russians also suffered."

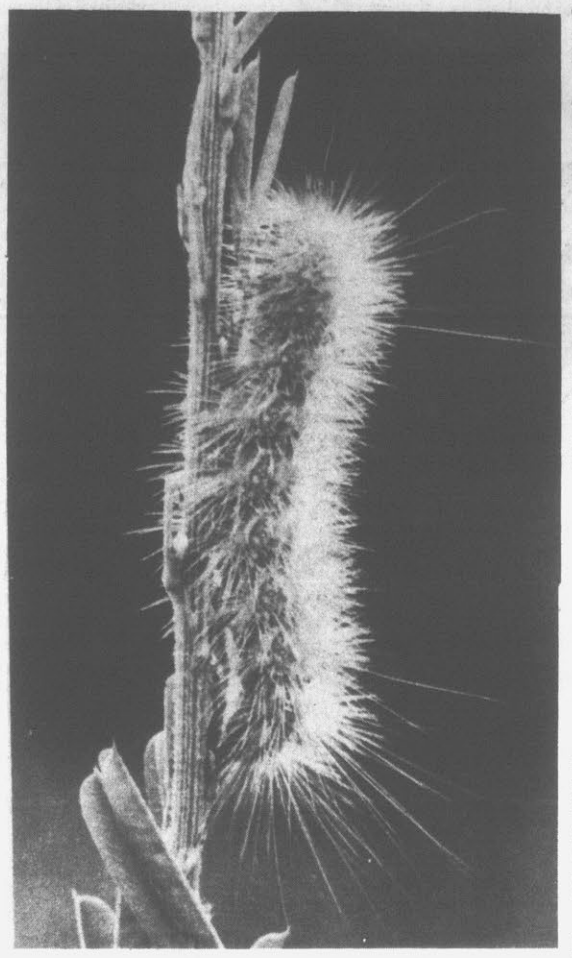

It became clear from the pope's homily at the ancient Polish capital of Gniezno that he sees himself, a Pole and a Slav, as having a special mission to bridge the gap between East and West.

He appealed to the Christians of eastern Europe, including the Russian Orthodox, whose faith has been tempered by oppression and suffering, to join in manifesting "the spiritual unity" of all Europe.

John Paul said that he, as a Slav determined to speak out on behalf of "forgotten nations and peoples," had been elected in part "to confirm in our age the presence of these peoples in the church and their specific contribution to the history of Christianity."

He said Christianity "must commit itself anew to the spiritual unity of Europe.

"Economic and political reasons alone cannot do it. We must go deeper — to ethical reasons."

Unable To Control Runaway Oil Well

By JUAN O. TAMAYO

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A runaway offshore oil well, spewing 30,000 barrels a day into a huge oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico, drove back divers trying to cap it before it further pollutes vital Mexican coastal waters, officials said Saturday.

Shrimp boat captains in the Bay of Campeche complained the government oil monopoly Petroleos Mexicanos was not giving them the full story on the Ixtoc I oilwell, which was spouting oil unchecked after an explosion and fire last Sunday.

In Carmen, home port of Mexico's $110 million-a-year shrimping industry, boat captains demanded PEMEX give them "the true facts" about the oil spill and complained the oil finds in Campeche were putting their jobs and the industry in danger.

PEMEX officials in Mexico City said divers tried Friday to check a valve at the mouth of the well 150 feet down, but were pushed back by the rush of oil boiling to the surface.

PEMEX was trying to place a floating boom around the oil to contain the spillage and allow pump ships to vacuum up the oil, but there was no indication whether it succeeded, they said.

There were widely conflicting reports on the size of the oilslick spreading out from the Ixtoc well, 48 miles northwest of the city of Carmen, some 500 miles southeast of Mexico City.

One boat captain who cruised the area said it was about six square miles. Two airplane pilots said it was 70 miles long by 40 miles wide, and a PEMEX official said it was only about 2.4 miles long.

But another PEMEX official said it was three miles long, but when asked whether that was the length or width, he added, "I don't know. I just hope it isn't depth."

PEMEX said the well produces 30,000 barrels of oil a day worth $513,000 at $17.10 per barrel.

PEMEX officials said if the frogmen failed to fix the valve on the oceanfloor and cap the well, it might take more than three months to stop the gusher by drilling an intercepting well.

Was Centerfold Subject In Penthouse

N.C. Teacher Loses Job

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — When she woke up one morning in April, Carla Kimberlin didn't know she was going to lose her job that day.

But Brightwood Elementary School principal Donald York left a message for her that he wanted to see her. And Miss Kimberlin said she feared what was coming.

After all, when you live in Greensboro, she said, "where their moral and ethical standards are so much higher than everywhere else," it's not considered seemly to be the featured nude centerfold in Penthouse magazine. And the nude Miss Kimberlin, looking fetchingly at the camera, her face framed by blond-tendrilled hair, graces the centerfold of the May issue of the magazine.

In a telephone interview last week, she recalled her talk with York.

"I heard you've been in a magazine. Is that true?" she said the Guilford County principal asked her. She said it was.

Miss Kimberlin said she told him she'd resign if he thought her appearance would be detrimental to the kids she taught and that he told her he'd eventually have to fire her if she didn't.

So Miss Kimberlin said she signed a resignation letter York dictated. York declined comment on the matter.

But at least she was $4,000 richer. That, she said, was the fee for posing in the buff. It certainly rivaled the $20 a day she made at the school.

For Miss Kimberlin, 22, the experience was a disappointing end to what started out as fun.

She said she thinks a former roommate tipped off the school where she was an aide and substitute teacher in a classes for handicapped students. She didn't use her real name in the article and was called Brieanna Bujold.

After the publicity, her family, with whom she lives, received some obscene phone calls, she said.

Since she lost her job and got her parents upset, would she do it again?

"My life is my life, and I'm going to lead it the way I want to," she said. "I don't stick my nose in anybody else's business, and I don't see why they should stick their noses in mine ... Personally, I don't see anything wrong with it."

26 Graduated From Pre-Release Program

Father Tony Simeone, pastor of St. Gabriel's Catholic Church, hosted a graduation program and luncheon June 6 honoring 26 graduates of the Greenville Pre-Release and Aftercare Center.

Ann Bennett, training coordinator of PRAC, introduced the guest speaker, Edgar L. Boyd of Greenville, Dean of Students of Pitt Technical Institute. Boyd emphasized individual determination and persistence as key traits in one's future.

He added that everyone is unique with unique talents and must challenge themselves to extend and pursue their talents. PRAC, under the Department of Correction's Division of Adult Probation and Parole, is the sixth such center in the state.

The Pre-Release training is a four week educational program for prisoners who have been identified as requiring socialization skills before being released.

Other training segments deal with the family, vocational aspects and the community. Much of the training is given by community volunteers who have special knowledge in the subject areas. The volunteers work closely with the center's professional staff.

The training sessions are designed to prepare prisoners for the problems they may face when they are released and make them more able to cope with life on the outside.

HEW Grant For ECU

Congressman Walter B. Jones announced Friday the approval by the Office of Education, HEW, of a grant under the cooperative Education Program in the amount of $55,239 to the East Carolina University Office of Cooperative Education.

The purpose of the program is to provide federal support for carrying out cooperative education programs in institutions of higher learning.

Cooperative education programs are those which alternate periods of academic study with periods of public or private employment.

1,030 Died In June 1904 Boat Disaster

By GORDON BOCK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sunday that heading up the River ended in death for more than 1,000 people — most of them children — who perished in a blazing inferno aboard the wooden vessel.

The June 10, 1904, General Slocum disaster remains one of the worst maritime fires in history.

As the morning sun shone on the river's rippling waters and the 13-year-old sidewheeler steamed its way toward Long Island Sound, deckhand John Coakley spotted flames below deck.

"Jump or burn, sink or swim!" a crew member shouted.

Within seconds, hundreds of people poured into the river as deck rails snapped under the weight of a stampeding mob.

Some grabbed lifebelts — bags whose crumbled cork insides burst on hitting the water, dragging the wearers to their deaths. Still others who would not venture into the river died on board the flaming vessel.

The exact cause of the blaze that took 1,030 lives and practically wiped out the congregation of St. Mark's German Lutheran Church remains a mystery.

The names of 61 of the victims remain unknown even now. It's estimated that 20 of the 330 survivors are still alive.

One of them is Minnie Muller Rolka, who to this day doesn't know who rescued her from the boat. After losing consciousness, she woke up in Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx.

"I'm glad to be alive," the 80-year-old Mrs. Rolka said in an interview at her Queensborough home. She recalled that she was on board the Slocum with her aunt and two brothers, who have since died.

"But we were saved," she said. "And I go to the memorial service every year."

Sunday, as in years past, a dwindling number of history buffs who belong to the Slocum Memorial Committee will gather for a service in a Queens church.

A city Fire Department fireboat will drop a wreath and sound three blasts of its whistle in the river where the Slocum turned from the teeming lower East Side to begin its ride to Port Washington, N.Y.

Voters Say No

bonds was not enough to outweigh the county vote of 2,693 for and 3,839 against.

If the support for schools seemed good in Greenville, the support for liquor-by-the-drink sales in the city might be considered excellent.

Again, six of the nine Greenville voting places approved the sale of mixed drinks. But the 3,992 to 2,343 vote for by-the-drink liquor sales in the city was not enough to carry the county, where only one polling place — Grifton, with a four-vote margin, 264 to 260 — joined Greenville in its support for the mixed drink referendum.

County voters defeated the liquor-sales measure by a vote of 4,055 to 2,512

Says Stockholders Should Pay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Utilities Commission public staff says stockholders and not customers should pick up the tab for the cost of political or promotional advertising by utilities to boost their own image.

In getting set for a hearing before the commission in September on proposals to restrict such advertising, the public staff is running legal notices in newspapers asking for public comment on utility advertising.

The staff believes customers should bear the costs only of ads — including inserts that come with monthly bills — that give advice on conservation, relay rate information or tell how to use utility services more efficiently. The public staff represents the public in matters before the commission.

D. H. Conley's 186 graduates heard "Success-A Search For Values" and "The Pursuit of Success" from D. H. Conley's senior speakers, Melissa Ann Bailey and Christopher Gene Paramore.

Melissa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Louis Bailey of Black Jack, urged graduates to put their values on lasting things, not materialistic items. Chris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Gene Paramore of Grimesland, noted the past 12 years of the seniors' lives, and challenged his classmates to go forth and achieve their goals.

The D. H. Conley High School Band under the direction of Candace Dixon, offered the prelude. Tammy Jean Stocks sang "Climb Every Mountain," with "You'll Never Walk Alone" sung by Catherine Claire Dews. Jeff Credle, Vergenell Person and Sidney Suggs performed "Would You?" All were accompanied by Christy Braswell.

Malcolm Moore, senior class president, presented the senior class gift. D. H. Conley Principal J. R. Carraway presented awards, then awarded diplomas, assisted by Robert Halstead. Nora Rachel Smith presented the invocation and Deborah Renee Howard closed the program with the benediction.

A Fitting University Tribute

The Brody family of Greenville and Kinston has made a $1.5 million gift to the ECU Medical Foundation.

The gift, announced last week, is the largest single contribution ever made to the university.

The fund will be used to provide Brody Brothers professorships, student scholarships and assistance in recruitment and retention of minority and disadvantaged students.

The Brodys have previously given a $100,000 gift which was used to establish a Brody Brothers Professorship.

Chancellor Thomas Brewer said of the gift, "True greatness in public universities results from the generous support of the private sector. This commitment to the university now and in the future not only strengthens our ability to meet the needs of rural North Carolina, but to minister to those needs at a level so richly deserved by the people of this region."

The Brody family has long been a major supporter of East Carolina University and Eastern North Carolina.

Now, with the largest gift ever for the university, they are giving their support to a new venture in the medical school — one which promises to bring better health care throughout our region.

In a session here Wednesday the ECU board of trustees voted to name the $26 million medical science building now under construction the Brody Medical Science Building. It is a fitting tribute to this family which is so very willing to be of service to our area.

The Result Of Twelve Years' Effort

Hundreds of young people have received their diplomas from high schools throughout the area this weekend.

It took 12 years of hard work on the part of these graduates to earn their high school diplomas.

Each of them has every right to be proud of what each has accomplished. We look for further achievements from this group of graduates as they further their educations, and begin careers.

A Christmas Tree Crop

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Add to the growing list of new growth records being achieved in North Carolina: Christmas trees.

The industry is so new that many citizens still don't realize it exists.

A milestone occurred last year which escaped the attention of most — the harvest exceeded a million trees for the first time. Specialists at the School of Agriculture at N.C. State University took note of the event, however, and predict bigger things ahead.

Over five million new trees have been planted in each of the past two years, and 5.5 million new trees are going in the ground this year.

In two mountain counties, Avery and Jackson, Christmas trees are now the leading source of farm income; and the number of growers overall has doubled in the last five years. Now capturing between three and four percent of the national market, North Carolina should eventually take 15 percent.

Bears, Too

Also on the upswing in western North Carolina's bear sanctuaries are evidences that the population is increasing.

The Pisgah Bear Sanctuary has 60,000 acres where bears are protected. Surrounding land is open for hunting, and that puts the pressure on the bears.

Specialists with the state's Wildlife Resources Commission and the Department of Zoology say counting methods include use of bait stations and index trails. Signs of bear activity are increasing in the sanctuary and declining outside.

And Honey

A German custom official has refused to allow a shipment of North Carolina honey into that country. The honey was blue.

Federal regulations have caused state officials to investigate the unique blue honey being produced in several counties of southeastern North Carolina.

BILL NOBLITT

The federal defintion requires that honey come from the nectar and saccharine exudations of plants. It was suspected that the Tar Heel bees were visiting the berry bushes and grapevines to get the blue material ... thus, it wouldn't qualify as honey.

But scientists have now determined that the blue color comes from two plants — the sourwood and the summer titi, and that heavy concentrations of aluminum in the soil contributes.

All work completed in the future, North Carolina could make a name for itself as the "Blue Honey Capital of the World."

Pooling It

Early predictions that probably enough publicly-owned vans and small buses are running about North Carolina counties to form an effective rural transportation system appear to be on the mark.

Preliminary work by a study commission have identified between 1,200 and 1,300 such vehicles variously owned and operated by a host of agencies dealing with the elderly, the handicapped, and the poor.

If some central coordinating system could be devised, the vehicles could comprise a valuable transportation resource for rural residents who need a ride to market, job, hospital, or recreational activities.

A report to that effect will be forthcoming later this year.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Hardball By Sen. Baker

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CLEVELAND, Miss. — The rich planters and businessmen of the Mississippi delta were not at all prepared for Sen. Howard Baker's performance: playing Henry Cabot Lodge the elder to Jimmy Carter's Woodrow Wilson.

The diffidence and compromising stance that have been Baker's trademark as Senate Republican leader were dropped when he addressed the 44th annual meeting of the Delta Council, a mirror of the establishment. If President Carter rejects Sen. Baker's amendments to SALT II as President Wilson did Sen. Lodge's to the Versailles treaty, said Baker, "I don,t think there is a prayer" for Senate ratification.

Republican national committeeman Clarke Reed, who previously rated Baker only marginally higher than the new arms control treaty, rushed over to pump the Tennesseean's hand and praise his speech. "Hey, that fellow's playing hardball," one surprised listener commented to Republican Sen. Thad Cochran of Mississippi. Cochran himself admitted he was impressed.

Measured by his own standards, Howard was playing hardball. While lacking the charisma of Ronald Reagan and John Connally, he was slashing away at Carter with unaccustomed vigor here and the next day in Arkansas. If any of the president's men had listened, their lingering hope that eventually Baker will support SALT as he did the Panama Canal treaty would have expired

Actually, audiences here and at a Republican fundraiser in Little Rock, Ark., were split between Connally backers (including Reed and Sen. Cochran) and Reaganites. A Baker-for-president supporter in the Deep South is as rare as an atheiat in a foxhole. If Baker becomes the first resident of the old Confederacy to be nominated for president by the Republicans, it will be without many delegates from his home region.

Nevertheless, Baker's performance here and in Arkansas significantly improved his acceptability. While his nomination would depend not on the South but on the big northeastern and Great Lakes states that backed Gerald Ford in 1976, Baker cannot afford to look to Dixie like a southernfried Nelson Rockefeller.

That this danger exists is less because of Baker's voting record (25 percent "liberal," 71 percent "conservative" in the last Congress) than the Panama Canal blot. Deny it though Baker and his aides do, his support for that treaty did him permanent damage — especially in the South.

Consequently, his backers in Mississippi have been hard put to find enough people to fill a committee. When he appeared before the Delta Council, the prestigious audience was prepared to sit on its hands. He responded with an obligatory attack on Carter's energy policy, moving quickly to SALT II. Although Howard Baker could not brin9 himself to be 100 percent critical, he came close to 90 percent -surprising, considering his usual style.

IN PRAISE OF DREAMERS

People often speak in contemptuous terms about dreamers. To say that a person is a dreamer generally means that he is impractical, lazy, and perhaps shiftless.

But it is well to remember that somebody has to dream before anyone can act. Most of the really creative people of the world have been dreamers. Joseph was a dreamer; as was Isaiah and the apostle Paul. Columbus dreamed of reaching the East by sailing west. George Stephenson dreamed of the locomotive; Edison of the incandescent light; Robert Fulton of the steamboat.

A dreamer must meet two requirements in order to be effective, however. First, he must dream about the right things; and second, he must point his dreams in the direction of achievement. The impractical folk who day dream about things wholly within the realm of fantasy and who never exert themselves to make these dreams come true are the people who lead society as a whole to scoff at dreamers.

Sunday Morning Notes

There was a time when comparing gas mileage for automobiles was the main topic of conversation in rural stores and other gathering places.

That was in the days before air conditioning, power steering and other accessories which draw power away from the engine.

It was also in the days when gas sold for less than a third what it does today . . . and a dollar saved was indeed a dollar earned.

Then along came more affluence and with the price of gas remaining fairly stable, it was not so important the number of miles one got to the gallon. Car buyers added air conditioning and power accessories to their cars. Then the government began requiring emission controls cutting still further into fuel efficiency.

Next the price of gasoline began shooting up, and lo and behold, wherever folks gather these days the conversation once again turns to miles per gallon for their automobiles. — with fuel efficient cars being a matter of great pride.

We overheard a group talking the other day.

"I'm getting 19 miles per gallon," one person said proudly.

"With my little car, I'm getting 28," said another.

Other Editors Say Not The Wisdom

(Washington Daily News)

With so many thousands of protesters over this nation out waving banners, holding placards, hurling ugly words, and with a sense of human madness about them as they shout objections to nuclear energy operations in this land, we must wonder how right or how wrong they are.

Yet, many Americans right now who have great fear of nuclear energy and what it can or might do, hold to a feeling that in future generations it might be cleaned up, made completely safe, and indeed might be the one answer to our energy problems in the years ahead.

The violent protesters who are out day by day shouting have no positive answers, and they apparently are not interested in alternatives. Their interest lies in the effort to destroy present day nuclear power plants. They see them as dangerous and destructive.

They march; they shout insults; they defy; they hold all manner of banners and placards aloft as they make their protests heard. And none of us can say that they do not have that right. They do possess the constitutional right to protest, to march, to shout and to be ugly about it all if they wish.

But what about their wisdom?

Surely, that is another question, but just as surely we cannot answer it. We do not have the wisdom either way to answer, but in truth we feel that neither do they have such wisdom.

We hear the president of the United States being smeared, and we even heard him called an "ignoramus", but in truth to all, President Jimmy Carter knows more about nuclear energy than editors know.... more than the multitude of protesters know ... and more than the critics who seek to cut him down, know. Let us not forget that President Jimmy Carter is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, and he graduated in nuclear engineering. As a full-fledged nuclear engineer, certainly he has some wisdom and knowledge denied to the most of the rest of us. And when he speaks on the subject, we want to be able to hear what he says.

When the protesters say they know as much as the president knows about nuclear power, they are not telling the truth.

We admit that we do not have the wise answers. But neither do the protesters.

Food's Fame Zooms

By HELEN M. BRADLEY

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — For 45 years, residents in the Clinton-Dunn-Fayetteville area have known the delights of Old Hickory Barbecue.

But it's only in the past few years that it's broadened its gourmet audience to include a large part of the Southeast.

This is how it came about.

Nearly a half-century ago, H. Worth Heath and his wife, Juanita, sold their restaurant business in Greensboro to return to her family home in the Godwin-Clement community becauses his eyesight had failed.

It was during the Depression and times were tough. He was restless and, in looking for something to do, hit on the idea of capitalizing on his restaurant knowledge to produce a barbecue mixture for sale. For some time, he and his wife did the whole thing.

They prepared the raw pork, using his special hot-sauce recipe. Then they took off in the early morning to sell it at retail to grocery stores and restaurants. Their market expanded rapidly because the barbecue was so good and so was his salesmanship.

While his health remained good, he built the business to an annual volume of about $100,000.

As the business grew, the Heaths hired as a salesman a "neighbor boy," Gary Wrench, whose family had been close to the Heaths for many years.

That was in 1956. A few years later, in 1969, Gary's brother Pete joined the company, also as a salesman.

About 11 years ago, Pete and Gary Wrench bought the Old Hickory Barbecue business and it has zoomed to its present size under their direction.

Old Hickory Barbecue now employs 30 to 40 perssons, depending on the season, and it maintains a fleet of trucks to transport the barbecue in its fa-

Slowdown In Debt Payments

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The unprecedented slowdown in the repayment of consumer debt during April could mean two things: statistical error, or that borrowers are finding it difficult to meet repayment terms.

The possibility of error never can be fully discounted in dealing with numbers issued by the federal government, since most of them are massaged by seasonal adjustment factors, to make them "meaningful."

Still, the shortfall in repayments was so marked as to suggest that many borrowers are running into problems with their finances. In an over-extended budget, loan repayments understandably become tardy.

This does not automatically mean the onset of a slowdown, however, because in this unique economy of ours there is still money available for installment loans. That being so, the inevitable can be delayed.

An overextended borrower might, for example, simply renegotiate the the loan that he is unable to repay. The technique, repaying by reborrowing, is common enough. Uncle Sam has used it for many years.

Eventually, however, neither borrower nor lender is willing to put up with such tactics. Lenders get tougher, borrowers more realistic. The latter realize there is no other way out but to cut back on lifestyle.

The April debt statistics suggest we are coming to that point, but that we are still one step away. Consumers added $25.8 billion to their debts. And their repayments slowed, to only $21.7 billion.

That repayment figure was $1.2 billion less than in May, the sharpest repayments decline on record. It seems to indicate that borrowers had a tough time repaying. And a tough time is prelude to a spending cutback.

One doesn't need to rely solely on government figures to reach that conclusion. Delinquencies have shown up in several credit areas, home mortgage loans excepted. And personal bankruptcies are rising again.

Anyone can extend the reasoning to the next step: A sharp spending cutback could catch sellers with too many goods for the lowered demand. Poor business, of course, means rising unemployment. And unemployment means difficulties in repaying loans.

In short, while a downturn could correct a lot of the economies current imbalances — price increases, high interest rates, an inflation psychology among them — it could raise the dickens too.

The problem facing officials is to bring about a correction without creating a cascade of disruptions. This has always been the problem with corrections, but this time the dimensions might be larger.

To begin with, the expansion has thrown interest rates, prices, expectations and other factors further out of line than in most recessions of the past few decades. And then there are the elections.

But rarely are solutions reached for purely economic reasons; in most instances politics are involved.

The dilemma for the Carter administration is whether to permit the economy to correct itself with a minimum of interference or to plunge into the battle with an array of political weapons.

To the editor:

Pres. Carter on Apr. 5 took an important first step in helping us achieve a sound energy policy by deciding upon decontrol and proposing a 50 percent windfall profits tax. He did not go far enough.

Under the Carter plan, it is estimated that 29 cents out of every dollar of increased revenue from already discovered oil will still go to the oil companies. This is pure windfall profit. The League of Women Voters believes that a higher tax should be applied so that more of this windfall can be recovered. The windfall tax will not be applied to certain important categories of oil. Oil produced using special enhanced recovery techniques and all newly discovered oil will receive the full world price on June 1, without any windfall tax being applied unless OPEC makes future price increases over the rate of inflation. And the price of oil from marginal wells will be allowed to double before the windfall tax is applied. Congress must enact a higher windfall profits tax!

The Carter proposal has other shortcomings. Only about 18 percent of the new tax revenues would be rebated to the poor. The League believes that a much more substantial portion of the revenue resulting from decontrol should go to protect the American people from price increases. It should be a heavily progressive rebate based on need.

The President also proposes a tax credit for oil shale production and other subsidies for development of non-renewable resources. This should not be done. Oil shale technologies, for example, pose a serious environmental threat.

The President has also unwisely proposed an Energy Trust Fund to hold the revenues obtained through a windfalls profit tax. This revenue should be handled as other revenue is — the regular Congressional budget process on a yearly basis.

To make sure the decisions reached in Congress on the windfalls profits tax reflect the needs of the American public, contact your Congressman by letter or phone.

To the editor:

Much of the Greenville community is heartsick over the city council's decision regarding the rescue squad and fire department integration.

Many of us have taken pride in our world champions and have appreciated their life-saving services. It is so good to feel secure and we feel secure that when we call 752-1133 any hour day or night that we will get an immediate response from rescuers who are, not only prompt and skillfully trained, but who are totally devoted to their work — who often work and train long hours without pay.

Many of us cannot understand why our city council has failed to listen to the pleas from the community to support the advancement of the Greenville Rescue Squad.

Our rescuers should be allowed to receive all the training and education their abilities allow — training that would allow them to be paramedics who can administer medication under the direction of a physician — medication often needed to save lives in critical emergency situations.

Our rescuers should be provided a building large enough to house their vehicles and equipment with space available for the needed additions.

Our rescuers should be allowed to be rescuers without trying to be experts in other fields.

Many of us are heartsick because these opportunities have been taken away from the Greenville Rescue Squad by the city council decision. Our rescue squad now is akin to the unfortunate high school senior who has worked hard for years and kept a straight "A" average, but through some tragedy cannot get the money to attend college. What a loss.

I believe the decision would be different if put before the citizens for a vote. I believe the citizens who pay enormous taxes on cigarettes, alcohol and gasoline would be happy to spend just a little more per person for a progressive rescue system here.

To the editor:

Almost two years ago Governor Hunt wrote a letter to a North Carolina constituent which said, "Like me, she, (Dr. Sarah Morrow, Secretary of Human Resources) believes we must concentrate on raising new generations of children who aren't stunted or handicapped in some way."

Gov. Hunt's dream is about to come true. On Apr. 11, 1979, the legislature adopted the State Health Plan, which includes this objective, "To reduce the rate of births involving genetic disorder from 6.1 per 1000 live births to 3.06 per 1000 by 1982." How to do this? Among other plans: "Make funds available to cover amniocentesis and therapeutic abortions."

Considering that the unborn child will not be treated but killed, and that the mother will encounter extreme physical risk (abortion is especially hazardous for a woman past 16 weeks, the earliest at which amniocentesis can be performed), it is indeed ridiculous to classify such an abortion as "therapeutic." Of course, a more definite diagnosis could be made after birth, and the handicapped little one killed with considerably less danger to the mother. But Gov. Hunt must take into account that pre-natal killing is legal and post-natal killing is not. . .at least not yet.

The Nazi elimination of six million Jews was preceded by the killing of 275,000 retarded and mentally ill Aryan Germans who were adjudged socially burdensome. This euthanasia program was initiated and carried out not by Hitler, but by respected physicians, acting on the premise (quite prevalent in our society now) that there are some lives not worth living.

I used to ponder how the German people let this happen. I ponder no longer. After all, over 25,000 unborn babies were killed in our state last year, including 3,480 whose deaths were paid for with our tax dollars.

Let God plan the new generation, not Governor Hunt.

One member of the group said rather cheerily, "I'm getting eight on my gas burner."

Then with a smile he motioned to his bicycle, "That's why I'm riding this."

So far, at least, around Pitt County gas has been fairly well available . . . assuming you can pay the price.

None of the long lines which were prevalent in California last month . . . nor the kind of lines we all stood in here in the last gas crunch a few years back. It isn't difficult to recall those lines, however, and anyone who ever bought gas that way hopes they won't be back. There were early morning trips to the gas stations to be in line. and the agony of being the auto behind the car on which the "Final Car" sign was posted.

There are mental pictures of cars running out of gas in the lines, and its passengers pushing the vehicle ahead each time the line moved.

If those mental pictures won't make gas conservers out of all of us, nothing will.

As I Recall It

Two Wanton Slayings And The Great Manhunt

By Noel Yancey

(Noel Yancey retired last year after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column he retells some of the big stories he recalled.)

One of the most extensive manhunts in North Carolina history was touched off the night of Nov. 5, 1957 by the wanton slaying of two state highway patrolmen. In short order Trooper Wister Lee Reece was slain near Hamlet and Patrolman J.T. Brown was fatally wounded near Sanford. Both officers were gunned down by a motorist they had stopped for speeding.

Two weeks later at Bakersfield, Calif., police arrested a man they found lurking suspiciously in an alley behind a clothing store. The man turned out to be Frank Wetzel, 36, a four-time loser in New York state who faced a life sentence under that state's habitual criminal law.

Officers described the blondly handsome Wetzel, who had spent nearly half his life in prison, as a "finished product in the school of crime". They said he had fled a New York mental hospital, stolen a car and a small arsenal of weapons and headed south for the avowed purpose of rescuing his brother who faced execution in the Mississippi State Prison at Parchman for the murder of a fellow convict.

Wetzel was tried in Superior Court at Rockingham in January 1958 for the Reece slaying. The state's first witness was Robert Terry of Norman, an itinerant preacher who identified Wetzel as the motorist who had picked him up the night of Nov. 5 and as the man who later shot Reece after being stopped for speeding.

Much of the state's case was based on items officers said they found in a stolen 1957 car they claimed Wetzel had abandoned in Chattanooga, Tenn. These articles included six revolvers, a high-powered rifle, ammunition, three diamond rings, three expensive watches and a quantity of new clothing and shoes. Terry told of being taken to Chattanooga and identifying the automobile from a cigarette stub he said he put in the ash tray.

The defense was able to throw some doubts on Terry's testimony. He admitted the cigarette bore no identifying mark. There was also testimony that he had told officers he looked at the motorist only once, got only a side view and had told a coroner's jury he could identify the driver only by his voice.

Witnesses testified Wetzel's fingerprints were found on two articles from the car..... a North Carolina license plate and an adapter for an electric razor. Charles Reedy of Roanoke, Va., identified some trousers found in the car. He identified Wetzel as the man who brought them in his shop for alterations. There was also testimony that a person who signed the register at a Chattanooga motel had used the name Paul Cameron, the same name Wetzel had used when he signed a fingerprint chart after his arrest in California.

Although District Attorney M.G. Boyette sought the death penalty for Wetzel he was given a life sentence when the jury recommended mercy.

A throng of teen-aged girls who had packed the courtroom throughout the trial squealed and clapped their hands upon learning Wetzel's life would be spared.

Much of the same testimony was heard in Superior Court at Sanford three months later when Wetzel was convicted of first degree murder in the Brown slaying. He again received a life sentence when the jury recommended mercy.

Wetzel has lived the last 21 years behind the walls of Raleigh's grim Central Prison, the state's only maximum security prison. There he apparently has carved something of a niche for himself. Prison officials say he takes part in the affairs of the Central Tar Heel Jaycees, the prison's Jaycee unit, and writes for the prison newspaper, the Wallspaper.

Someone Is Trying To Ease Life Of Migrants

SORRENTO, Fla. — Why can't someone do something?

That was the question that Finain Riley, a Franciscan priest, asked himself on a cold February night in 1972 as he sat in front of a potbellied stove in a house on Fifth Street in Apopka, Florida. The street is a dirt track between rows of clapboard houses. Rusting cars sit up on blocks, and barefoot children play in the dirt yards during the day.

Apopka is located halfway down the Ridge, a swath of land cutting through central Florida, containing the densest concentration of citrus trees in the world. Fr. Riley wanted to know why the families who came every year to pick the estimated 163 million boxes of oranges were condemned to rent shacks like the one described by nine year old Leonor Alvarado: "It was not a house, it was just one room and 15 people were living with us, and it didn't have no light or water or floor or at least a bathroom."

As Fr. Riley began looking for answers, a recurring theme manifested itself: credit. The typical lending agencies would not extend credit to migrant farm workers because of their uncertain incomes. They may make 200 dollars a week in the height of the picking season, if conditions permit; but when the harvest is over, they must pack up and follow the crops.

Fr. Riley had an idea: organize a non-profit corporation and create a revolving fund from which loans could be made to migrant workers for the purchase of homes.

With the help of the Diocese of Oralando, and numerous loand and donations (two from citrus and vegetable growers) Project HOME — Help Our Migrants Escape — was born. A plot of land was bought in the small farming community of Sorrento, and seven mobile homes were erected. They were sold to migrant workers at cost, plus four percent interest. Not only were the monthly payments substantially lower than the rent the migrants had been paying, but, even more important, for the first time in their lives these workers were building up equity in something that was their own — something they could call home.

Encouraged by their success in Sorrento, members of Project HOME purchased a tract in Astatula, another rural community, and received permission from the city council to erect ten mobile homes. Water and sewage were installed.

But as plans coalesced, the Astatula city fathers realized that the homes were to be occupied by migrant farm laborers. Immediately, a moratorium on building was declared in Astatula, and a couple of months later the first official zoning map appeared. It excluded the ten mobile homes.

"So we appealed," says Fr. Riley, "and they told us we had to go through channels." They did, and were turned down repeatedly. "So we brought them to court, and the local court turned us down." Four years later, the case remains under appeal.

Children's Literature Needs Some Exploring

There's been plenty of concern over the relationship between television and children's behavior, but there hasn't been much research on the influence of children's literature. Each year millions of parents read their favorite fairy tales to their children without once thinking of how their kids will react.

And yet, in our family, fairy tales have caused more conflict than potty training. Not only do we have to read Meg's current favorite at least twice a day until she tires of it, but she always incorporates some detail of the story into her own repertoire.

For instance, after reading "Snow White," she refused to eat apples for six months. And when she went on her Cinderella binge, she almost disowned us because we wouldn't let her adopt a community of mice for her friends.

After reading "Hansel and Gretel," she wouldn't let me cross the street by myself. She was afraid I'd get "smushed" and Daddy would have to marry another woman.

When we read her Peter Pan, she decided that she never wanted to grow-up and that until Peter appeared at her nursery window, she would just have to keep squeezing herself periodically in order to stay small. That all changed after she read Walt Disney's version of "Sleeping Beauty." Now we can't set foot in a card store without her asking, "Don't you want to buy me a card for my 16th birthday?"

Of course, it is not always easy to pinpoint the source of her newest idiosyncrasy. Occasionally, she will try out something from a book that she hasn't read in months. So when she started getting extremely sassy lately, I couldn't figure out what the problem was. The misbehavior itself didn't puzzle me, but the deliberate defiance did. With Meg, mischief has usually been more like a natural impulse.

Anyway, we endured two days of nonstop naughtiness. Whenever we asked her to do something she planted her feet on the floor firmly as a two-year-old and shouted, "Never!"

Mild efforts at discipline did no good. Reprimands didn't help. Neither did freouent visits to the time-out chair. She was determined to be obnoxious.

Phillip reached his limit first. After supper on the second day, he asked her to go into the bathroom and get ready for her bath.

She kicked her chair. "I will not!" she screamed.

Phillip rose halfway out of his chair. "Don't you talk to me that way, young lady. You go into that bathroom right now!"

"No way!"

With that Phillip jumped up and spanked her.

Her initial reaction was a howl of surprise. That gave way to ear-splitting shrieks. She cried without stopping as Phillip ushered her to the bathroom, undressed her and ran her bath water.

Finally, after he put her into the tub, her sobbing subsided. Phillip patted her on the back and kissed her head to let her know that all was forgiven.

Still trembling, she looked up at him and said, "Daddy, why did Pinocchio think being bad was so much fun?"

Torments Of Fidel Castro Largely Unnoticed

By William F. Buckley, Jr.

The Pope's awesome reception in Poland is testimony to the endurance, if not the triumph, of the spirit. The Soviet response is a splendid example of self-consciousness: the eternal fear that its own subjects — under Marxist scripture the inheritors of the earth, the proletarian dictators who will preside over the withering away of the state — will know the truth. Soviet television showed brief pictures of the Pope, none of the huge crowds that applauded him. There were dark references to those who sought to turn the Pope's visit into excuses for "antistatist activity."

Meanwhile, a half-world away in Cuba, the torments of Fidel Castro go largely unnoticed. It was only a fortnight ago that the president of Mexico, shortly after being eclipsed at a public ceremony by the Pope's visit there, greeted Castro as the man who had brought dignity to the Cuban people. Here is an example of that dignity.

Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo is a member of a Spanish family that fled Spain in the early 50's in protest against the regime of Francisco Franco. Menoyo's older brother had died fighting the Nationalists in Spain during the civil war. Menoyo's younger brother died in an attack on Batista's palace in Havana. Eloy Menoyo led one of the two major military divisions that moved finally against Batista. The other front was led by Fidel Castro.

After six years of enduring a dictator alongside whom Batista and Franco were John Stuart Mill constitutionalists, Menoyo struck out against his former comrade-in-arms, joining the ill-fated Alpha '66, which led a commando operation against Castro. He was caught, tried, and sentenced to 30 years in prison. Bernard Levin of London, the distinguished critic, has often reminded us of the distinctive strain of sadism in Fidel Castro, and one comes on traces of it time and again. In 1977, Gulag-style, Menoyo was retired, and given another 30 year sentence, presumably on the grounds that he had been conspiring against the government while in prison, which is perfectly conceivable: great thoughts are frequently thought in prison, as Lenin reminded us.

Now Castro, as we all know, has in recent months engaged in intensive efforts to endear himself with anybody guileful or foolish enough to fall for his act. His marks are Shirley MacLaine-types, Mexican presidents and U.S. senators. On several occasions he has permitted to roam about parts of Cuba television crews and journalists. On one such trip, the absolutely inconceivable happened: a cameraman found himself conducting an interview with Menoyo. And here is what Menoyo said

1. The much-touted "dialogue" Castro seeks in order to better relations with the rest of the hemisphere with the view to releasing political prisoners isn't really necessary at all, inasmuch as in order to release the prisoners, all Castro has to do is release the prisoners. A thoughtful observation, that.

2. As far as getting concessions from the prisoners, that is quite simply, excluded, because the prisoners have nothing to give — except their ideals, and these are inalienable.

3. Menoyo is all in favor of a dialogue, but hopes it would be a dialogue not between Castro and Castro, but between Castro and the Cuban opposition.

That interview, to say the least, had unfortunate consequences.

On May 4, Menoyo was dispatched to the punishment cell in Combinado de la Havana del Este prison. Punishment cells in Cuban prisons, by the way, lack beds and light and are said to be plagued with mosquitoes. Menoyo then went on a hunger strike and was joined by 20 other prisoners. Like Menoyo, these men are far from being ex-Batistaites.

They include such as Ernesto Diaz the poet; Guillermo Rivas, a former journalist whose crime, committed 11 years ago, was attempting to leave Cuba without proper documents; Ignacio Leal, like Menoyo a former rebel officer, in prison since 1960; Ernesto Claro, a peasant who with other peasants against the Castro government in 1962, and has been in prison since he was 19; and Mario Gavilan, a labor leader from the transportation industry who has been in the prison since 1960.

These hunger strikers also belong to a generic class of prisoners known as "plantados," a term designating a type of prisoner that refuses to accept the prisons' "rehabilitation" program — refusing, e.g., to wear the uniforms of common criminals, which often leaves them nothing to wear except underwear. This makes for difficulties in administration, and the prisoners are not regularly checked upon.

Whether these men will be alive by the time the Pope leaves Poland is unknown. But surely the Pope has yet another opportunity to stress the universality of his concern. And the president of Mexico, so much concerned for the dignity of his brothers in Cuba, might consider parachuting in some medical supplies.

miliar brown and white cups as far south as Tampa, Fla., and north through much of Virginia.

There have been several expansion periods through the Wrench tenure. The latest will soon result in the construction of a new cooking room and new roofing that will protect the trucks and provide a sheltered loading and parking area.

Inside the present building, there are expanses of stainless steel in ceilings, ovens, huge grills, cutting tables, cabinets and so on, all the work of the subsidiary Old Hickory stainless steel fabricating operation.

The barbecue production equipment includes one bit of stainless steel that was not Pete's work. It is an enormous mixer brought from Stuttgart, Germany, capable of mixing 150 pounds of meat and seasonings in a matter of seconds, Gary said.

The company secures all its pork from Lundy Packing Co. of Clinton. After about six hours of cooking, then boning, the meat heads for the mixer and the final seasonings, which are still mixed according to Heath's formula, Gary said.

The brown and white cups of Old Hickory Barbecue seen on grocery shelves were also inherited from the founder, and the design is highly valued by the present owners, he said. The cups have come from the same supplier for more than 22 years.

Almost wholly automated and electrically powered, the Old Hickory Barbecue building is on U.S. 13 near the Cumberland County line. It has one large room that looks very much like a good restaurant. It has a huge open-fire grill surrounded by tables.

It's a relatively new addition to the business, Gary said, and was used for an employees' Christmas party last year.

It is used as well for pig-pickings to entertain guests and prospective customers.

Fr. Riley is a practical man, who is able to view the problem from the perspectives of both the migrants and the Astatula city fathers. But his criticism of the circumstances under which these housing injustices exist is sharp. "It is one of the bad parts of the system. Capitalism. I believe in the system, but like everything else man does, it could stand improving. The money-people have gotten everybody else right where they want them."

Slowed down, Fr. Riley is far from defeated. Recently he has relocated two homes for purchase by migrant workers, and has financed the design of a king-sized travel trailer that migrants can move from job to job. Already, 43 families have been helped by Project HOME.

"These are agricultural people," says Fr. Riley. "They have a great attachment to the earth and the land, and they want that little piece of ground where they can stick a few seeds and grow something of their own."

The work continues and every day new problems must be dealt with, but Fr. Riley is optimistic about the future. "We hope soon to have a resolution of our lawsuit against the town fathers of Astatula," he says, and we have 200,000 in our revolving fund, of which 50,000 has come from the migrant workers themselves."

It's a long way from the shanties of Apopka. — JONATHAN HARRINGTON, free-lance writer, Eustis, Fla.

General Assembly Adjourned Friday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1979 General Assembly ground to a halt Friday night after 108 legislative days with a flurry of new laws enacted in the final hours.

Adjournment marked the end of a long session that began Jan. 10 in which nearly 2,500 bill were introduced and about a third of them enacted into law.

The legislature will reconvene in June of next year for a mini-session to finish some of the work started this session and to do some fine tuning on the two-year state budget.

Most of the work Friday was centered on enactment of a $13 million appropriations package for special projects, which were sought by legislators for their home districts.

A massive rewrite of the state's game law, enacted earlier in the week, postpones the fox-trapping issue to future sessions.

The Senate made an eleventh-hour attempt to enact the measure permitting the trapping of foxes through an amendment. The House refused to approve the amendment, sending the bill to a committee to gather dust for a year instead.

The amendment would have permitted the Wildlife Resources Commission to allow fox trapping without the passage of local legislation in future General Assemblies. It was added to a House bill that would have prohibited the sale of game animals.

Other developments on the last day of the 1979 session included:

Beach Money

A special appropriations bill allocating $700,000 for beach erosion control projects that will also allow another $2.8 million to be spent for the same purpose if available, was enacted.

The bill was passed after the House added an amendment preventing any of the money from being spent on beaches where the public is denied access.

The money was appropriated as a replacement for a House-passed bill that would have allowed Carolina Beach and Wrightsville Beach to levy an additional 1 percent sales tax to raise funds for erosion control.

The $2.8 million is to be provided if there is a surplus of money next year from new fees on unrelated items enacted by this year's session.

Bottle Bill

The sponsor of the controversial bottle bill, which was killed in a House committee, had 48 petitions with over 800 names of supporters entered into the legislative record.

Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, presented the House with the petitions for the bill that would have required a nickel deposit on most drink containers sold in the state. It was introduced as a means to clean up the state roadsides of unsightly litter.

The measure faced stiff opposition from the beer, soft drink and plastics industries and died before it ever reached the full House.

Generic Drugs

Druggists will now be permitted to substitute a generic drug for the brand name prescribed by a doctor, if the generic drug is less expensive but of equal medical value.

Under the new law, a pharmacist may not substitute a less expensive drug if the prescribing doctor expressly states it is to be filled as written.

POWs

A bill that would give veterans who were once prisoners of war free auto license plates each year was approved by the Senate. The bill was sent to the House for consideration in 1980.

Audit

House-passed legislation authorizing the Legislative Services Commission to order audits of tax money used by political parties was enacted by the Senate. The tax money is provided through a $1 checkoff on individual income tax forms.

PCBs

The Senate tried but failed to limit the disposal of PCB-contaminated soil. The Senate voted 25-12 to defeat an amendment that would have prevented the burial of PCB-tainted soil in any county where the county commissioners did not approve it.

Legislators representing Warren County, a potential site for disposal of miles of ground contaminated by PCBs dumped illegally last year, had sought the measure.

The sponsors said their intent was to have each of the 14 counties where the PCBs were dumped dispose of their own tainted soil, or to leave in place.

The provision was offered as an amendment to another bill, which was later enacted, reducing the fine for littering.

HAMMERING DOWN THE FINAL GAVEL — House Speaker Carl Stewart D-Gastonia hammers down the final gavel of the 1978-79 N.C. General Assembly at 7:43 Friday night, bringing to an end the 108-day legislative session. The General Assembly will reconvene in June of 1980 for a short session. (AP Laserphoto)

He revealed that he informed Carter in the White House May 9, the day SALT II initialing was announced: "I don't want you and me to get in the same situation as Henry Cabot Lodge and Woodrow Wilson." That is, the president had better accept amendments — Baker's amendments — or forget about Senate ratification.

Baker refuses to define his "laundry list" of amendments, but his political speeches give two large hints: an amendment prohibiting concealment of missile test data or telemetry by the Russians; an amendment including the Soviet Backfire bomber as a strategic weapon.

He skillfully fits talk about "telemetry" and "Backfire" into a politically marketable warning of danger to U.S. security, and he emphasizes it heavily — more than either Reagan or Connally. Baker regards declining U.S. strength in comparison with the Soviet Union as a prime political issue. He also feels that as Republican floor leader while SALT is being debated, he is in a better stance to exploit that issue than the former governors of Texas and California.

What's more, what he said in Cleveland, Miss., can be repeated in Cleveland, Ohio. The Lodge-Wilson analogy was used not only here but in Wisconsin, Indiana, Minnesota and New Hampshire during his Memorial Day recess travels. He is considerably tougher on the oil industry than Reagan and Connally, but otherwise says nothing to annoy hard-shelled conservatives.

"The floodtide of conservatism is running," Baker said in Little Rock. That this should come from the man supposed to represent the Republican "liberal" wing shows how far the center of the Grand Old Party's spectrum has shifted rightward. Howard Baker's "hardball" will pass inspection in the Deep South, leaving him the formidable task of winning the big state delegates from the front-running Reagan.

Heavy Fighting In Nicaragua

By ALFONSO CHARDY

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Heavy fighting was reported Saturday as Sandinista guerrillas battled government troops in several districts in Managua and two rebel-held cities to the north and south of the capital.

President Anastasio Somoza boarded a helicopter for a personal tour of some the fighting areas as his aides discussed a forthcoming diplomatic initiative to stop the fighting.

Foreign Minister Julio Quintana said his Venezuelan and Ecuadorian counterparts, Jose Alberto Zambrano and Jose Ayala, would arrive in Managua today to meet with Somoza and propose a political solution to the crisis.

"I don't know what the proposal will be. But they will certainly try and come up with something concrete," Quintana said.

Quintana and other high government officials had moved from their Managua homes to the hotel, across the street from Somoza's bomb-proof office known as "The Bunker," because of fears of a guerrilla uprising in Managua.

Western diplomatic sources said that the Venezuelan and Ecuadorian proposal was being sponsored by the member nations of the Andean Pact, an economic alliance of South American nations.

It will be the second diplomatic effort to solve the Nicaraguan crisis. The first, led by the United States after the civil war last September that killed at least 1,500 people, ended in failure when the 53-year-old Somoza rejected a proposal for a nationwide vote on whether he should resign from office.

In Managua, heavy gun fire echoed through at least a dozen poor districts overnight as national guardsmen fought with youths wearing the Sandinista red and black handkerchiefs around their necks.

Residents of the capital feared the shootouts augured the start of major fighting in Managua, which has not seen much fighting in the first 13 days of the current guerrilla offensive to end the Somoza family's 43-year rule over the Central American nation of 2.5 million.

The clashes in Managua came only hours after hundreds of government troops attacked Masaya, a mostly indian town of 20,000 some 15 miles south of Managua that had been held by the rebels since Wednesday.

Tobacco Speculators File Class Action Suit

Two tobacco recycling manufacturers, better known as speculators, Jack Teel and Charles Teel, have filed a class action suit in U.S. District Court against the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Secretary Robert Bergland, the Flue-cured Tobacco Advisory Committee, the Agricultural Marketing Service, and others, asking $8 million in damages, an injunction against limiting resale opportunities for speculators, and that the court set aside the, "tobacco warehouse designation system."

The federal complaint filed Friday describes speculators as, "individuals engaged in the buying, cleaning, recycling and improving of unprocessed tobacco for resale," and describes the class as consisting of less than 500 individuals in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

According to the complaint, the Flue-Cured Tobacco Advisory Committee, established by the Agriculture Secretary in 1976 to aid, "in making an equitable apportionment and assignment of tobacco inspectors...and recommending selling schedules for the marketing areas and each warehouse within..." in 1978 established that, "only one percent of the daily resales opportunity shall be made available to dealers (speculators), upon request, for the resale of tobacco purchased by dealers at auction on the respective market."

Indicating that warehouses, who resell tobacco purchased at auction, as well as floor sweepings, are reluctant to provide resale opportunity to speculators, the Teels complaint said speculators activities on the market, "acts to maintain a strong tobacco market with the highest guaranteed market price to the producer," and by limiting activities of speculators, a decrease in the price paid to the producing farmer results.

"Unlimited resale time to the dealer (speculator) creates the best possible climate for free enterprise...and maintains the highest possible price for the producing farmer," according to the complaint.

Suggesting that, "the formation and existence," of the tobacco advisory committee, "is not in the best interests of the industry or the public," and that the committee, "should be terminated," by the agriculture secretary, the complaint asks the court issue an injunction, "to prevent the limitation on resale opportunity by dealers," and, "against any limitation or restriction on resale opportunities of any kind," as well as, "enjoin the use of and set aside the tobacco warehouse designation system and any and all other restraints, limitations and restrictions on the free economic marketing and trade of tobacco," as well as $8 million conpensatory and punitive damaged.

Americans Knew About SK Kidnapping

By JIM ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Publication of two secret cables that detail American knowledge of the kidnapping of a South Korean opposition leader in Japan has created a cloud over the trip by President Carter to Japan and Korea later this month.

The cables, apparently released by mistake, showed the United States had firm information the South Korean CIA engineered the kidnapping of opposition leader Kim Dae Jung in Japan in 1973.

They also show Secretary of State William D. Rogers had the information at the same time he was saying publicly that he did not.

The two cables, still marked "Secret" and "Exdis," were handed out this year with other U.S. government documents requested by the Japanese news agency, Kyodo, under a Freedom of Information request.

"Exdis" is a State Department code meaning the documents should be distributed to only an exclusive group of officials.

One of the cables came from Ambasssador Philip Habib in Seoul. It said, "reports indicating ROK (Republic of Korea) CIA involvement in the Kim Dae Jung case as well as in harassment of dissenters in ROK and abroad are essentially correct."

That cable was sent in August 1973, the same month Kim was kidnapped. He was brought to South Korea, put on trial, and jailed for political activities. He has since been released, but is reported under close supervision by Korean authorities.

Asked about KCIA involvement in the Kim Dae Jung kidnapping, Rogers said in 1973 he was aware of the reports of the kidnapping and Korean involvement, but added: "We weren't sure by whom. How much solid basis there is for these allegations, I have no way of knowing."

The kidnapping, and harrassment of South Korean dissidents in Japan and the United States, came at a time when the Richard Nixon administration was building up South Korea as a strong regional power, a country to be supplied with U.S. arms, while American manpower would be reduced.

Habib said in his cable, "I am using every appropriate occasion to impress quietly on (the South Korean) leaders (the) seriousness of outside reaction to the Kim Dae Jung case and ROK CIA activities."

"I am particularly cautioning government leaders against any future untoward actions involving Kim Dae Jung could further damage ROK standing abroad and affect ROK prospects at the UN."

Another cable was sent in January 1975 by Habib's successor, Richard Sneider. It said Sneider was informed by South Korean Foreign Minister Kim Dong Jo that the KCIA agent responsible for the Kim Dae Jung kidnapping was "to be quietly dismissed."

Although the events occurred before Carter took office, Japanese anger at South Korea for the illegal kidnapping of Kim Dae Jung on Japanese territory is spilling over to the State Department because of its concealed knowledge about the affair.

The State Department said the complete set of cables, including the ones apparently released by mistake, have been made available to the Japanese foreign ministry.

Hold Off Appeal

By JIM ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's top African policy expert appealed to Congress Saturday to hold off action on Zimbabwe Rhodesia for a few months while the administration and the British work for change in the war-torn country.

Richard Moose, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, acknowledged in an interview that the White House faces "a very unfavorable situation" in the Senate — where at least four pieces of legislation are moving toward votes that could overrule the president's decision to continue economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Expect Challenge To Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's decision to push for full-scale development of the $30 billion MX mobile missile system is expected to be challenged in the Senate next week, but survive intact.

A military weapons bill scheduled for debate Monday would authorize $670 million for the program. The money, requested earlier this year in Carter's 1980 budget, is for engineering work on the missile.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who is expected to lead a campaign to delete the MX money, said Carter's decision, announced Friday, "could represent the biggest single waste of public funds since the Vietnam war.

To Pay $3,000 Weekly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rock star Mick Jagger has been ordered to pay his estranged wife, Bianca, $3,000 a week for at least a month — until another hearing is held on her divorce case.

Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer on Friday ordered the Rolling Stones singer to pay the allotments for a governess and schooling for the couple's 7- year-old child, Jade. Mrs. Jagger, 28, said the couple spent about $450,000 a year on expenses before they separated, and that Jagger grossed $13 million on a recent band tour.

Jagger, 35, was not in court for the Friday hearings.

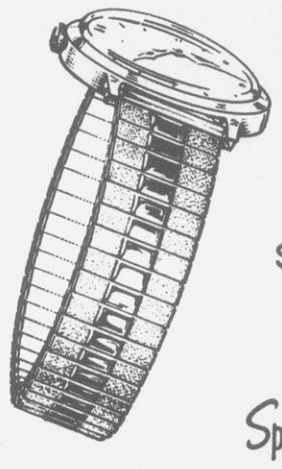

Shocked By Bagley Case

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal judge, "shocked this case has been sitting around so long," says he will rule soon on a series of motions to dismiss stock manipulation charges against Smith Bagley, heir to the R.J. Reynolds tobacco fortune.

The comment came Friday night from U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. after a four-hour hearing in which he denied all but one dismissal motion by Bagley and four co-defendants.

"In this district it (the case) would have been disposed of in 60 days," Merhige said in setting a July 16 trial date but leaving open the possibility he might rule favorably on one motion to dismiss.

That motion is based on defense contentions that what Bagley and his co-defendants are accused of doing by a federal grand jury in Greensboro, N. C., does not constitute stock manipulation.

Green Grass Cloggers Off To Canadian Festival

GREEN GRASS CLOGGERS . . . Eight dancers of the Greenville Grass Cloggers pose in costume in front of their tour bus. The Greenville group of dancers and musicians are soon heading to Canada to perform at the Mariposa Folk Festival, Toronto, June 15-17. Afterwards, the Cloggers will fill engagements in New York, Illinois, and at two festivals in western Canada before returning to the U.S. for a performance in Pulman, Washington.

The Green Grass Cloggers, Greenville's top contribution to the entertainment world today, will be heading (again) for Canada in a couple of days to be dancing for a three day period at the Mariposa Folk Festival in Toronto.

Already this spring, during April and May, the dancers and their accompanying musicians have drawn plaudits from audiences in North Carolina, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Michigan, and Alabama.

Founded in 1971, the Green Grass Cloggers in recent years have become more and more in demand wherever Appalachian type music and dancing is featured.

They have frequently been invited to festivals, clubs, and universities including an earlier performance date at the Mariposa Festival, the Philadelphia Folk Festival, the National Folk Festival, Washington, D. C., the Bluegrass Festival of America at Louisville, Union Grove, and the Old Dominion Folk Festival at Norfolk.

Club dates have included ones in Michigan, Virginia, and Pennsyvlania as well as in North Carolina, and they were invited to perform at the Governors Mansion in Raleigh.

Last year they received enthusiastic notices for a performance at Carnegie Hall in New York City, where they made a special guest appearance with the New Lost City Ramblers' 20th Anniversary concert.

One of the highest tributes paid them is the fact that other groups have adopted many of the dance patterns and steps evolved by the Grass Green Grass Cloggers. Their lively dance forms are derived from many sources — American Indian ceremonial dances, Black Buck dancing, Scots/Irish stepping and English clogging. The dances are round and square dance formations involving four to eight couples.

Exuberant, razzle dazzle, tremendous, incredible, infectious — these are some of the words that dance and music critics have used to describe their responses to Green Grass Cloggers performances.

After the performances at the Mariposa Folk Festival in Toronto, the Green Grass Cloggers will return to the U.S. for appearances at the Hudson River Revival at Croton Point, New York (June 23-24), then travel to Chicago for a performance at the University of Chicago on July 3.

From Chicago they return to Canada for two engagements in the western part of that nation — at the Winnipeg Folk Festival on July 6-8, and at the Vancouver Folk Festival on July 13-14. Then it's on to the northwest U.S., where they will perform at Pulman, Washington on July 21.

Greenville Community Chorus In Concert At 7 p.m.

Sunday In The Park Opens

Greenville's favorite at home summer entertainment, the Sunday in the Park series of musical events, opens today with a performance by a contingent of about 35 singers and four instrumentalists, all members of the Greenville Community Chorus.

Ed Glenn, director of the chorus, has revealed that popular music of fairly long ago, from two and three decades past, and some songs from not too far back are all to be part of the Park's inaugural program for Summer 1979.

The Chorus will open today's offering with an "Americana Medley" that includes the familiar "Shenandoah" and a lilting old timer, "Skip to My Lou."

The music of Jerome Kern's 1946 score for "State Fair" will feature Hit Parade songs such as "In Love In Vain," "That's For Me," and "It's A Grand Night For Singing."

Another great American musical' Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" will provide well remembered songs like "It Ain't Necessarily So," "Summertime," and "Bess, You Is My Woman Now." Soloists in the Gershwin selections are Patricia Hiss and Jeffrey Krantz.

Cole Porter comes to the fore in songs like "Let's Fall In Love" and "Just One Of Those Things," featuring soloists Hiss and Jill Galloway.

More recent songs from Broadway musicals will include "What I Did For Love" from "Chorus Line," "Tomorrow" from - "Annie," and songs from the show "Mame."

The combo — acoustic piano, electric piano, bass and drums, will be featured in "Hand Full of Keys," a Fats Waller special from "Ain't Misbehavin'."

The Sunday series of entertainments are coordinated by Stuart Aranson, are under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department with supportive funding from the City of Greenville.

Wilmington Tour

WILMINGTON — The Historic Wilmington Tour of noted homes and other places of public interest are now open for the season.

Tours are held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday with an admission of $5 for adults and $1 for students, with group rates available. Additionally, the Latimer House is open from 2 to 5 on Sundays.

Five major places are included in the tour — Thalian Hall, the Burgwin-Wright House, Latimer House, St. John's Art Gallery, and the Governor Dudley Mansion.

Thalian Hall, at Third and Princess Streets, was built as a cultural center in 1858 when Wilmington led North Carolina in commerce and industry — and was the state's largest city.

Designed by John Montague Trimble, the Hall is a classic 19th centry, American Community Theater, in the style of the famous Ford Theater in Washington, D. C. Architects for the Ford Theater restoration used Thalian Hall as a model.

For 50 years after the theater opened, touring companies presented a variety of performances there. Later, the first motion pictures in Wilmington were shown in the Hall.

In the years of its success, Thalian Hall played host to many of America's greats of the stage — "Buffalo Bill" Cody, Otis Skinner, Tyrone Power, Lionel Barrymore, and Lillian Russell.

Persons interested in more details on the Wilmington tour or wanting to make reservations are to call 763-9328 or write: Historic Wilmington Tour, P. O. Box 330, Wilmington, N. C., 28402.

PBS Specials

CHAPEL HILL — An Outer Banks native, the common soldier viewpoint of the Revolutionary War, and interviews with San Quentin inmates are among the line-up of specials being aired during the coming week over UNC-TV, Channel 25, Greenville.

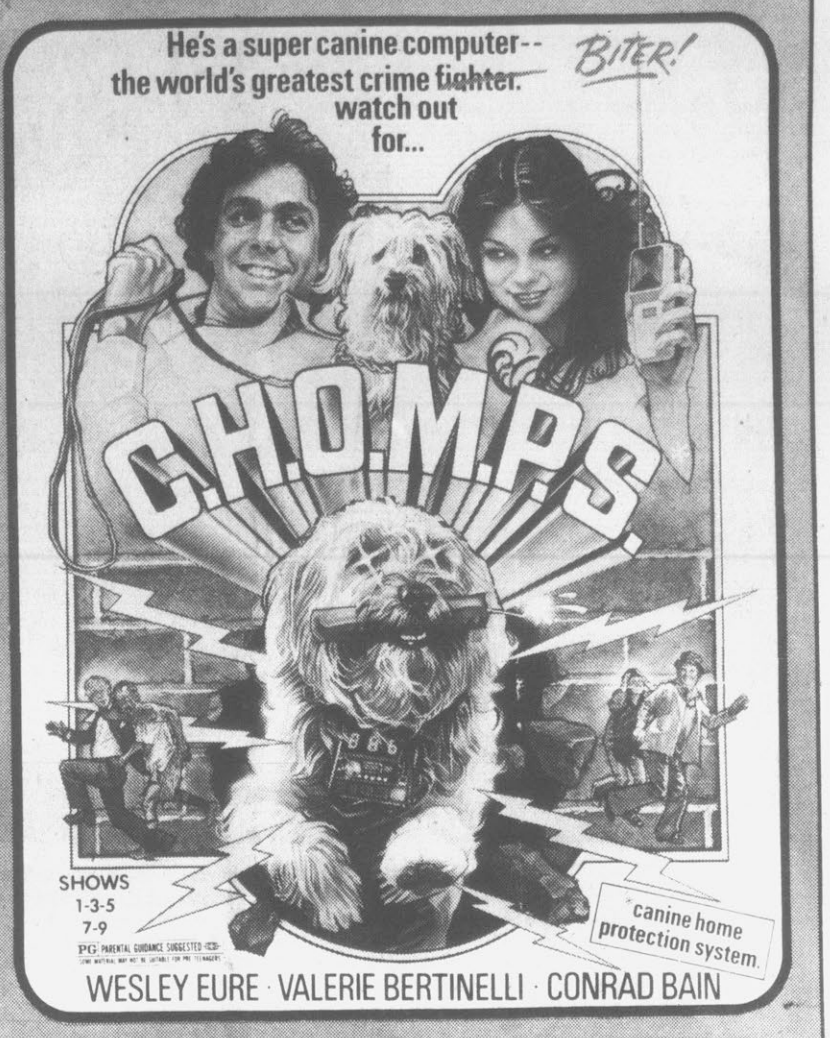

Brief details of the three programs are:

— Monday, June 11, 8 p.m. — "Captain Ellery Midgett: Reflections of a Seaman" is part of the "Made in North Carolina" series. It is the story of the Outer Banks native who has spent most of his life before the mast, and touches on the prominent role the sea has played in the Midgett family history.

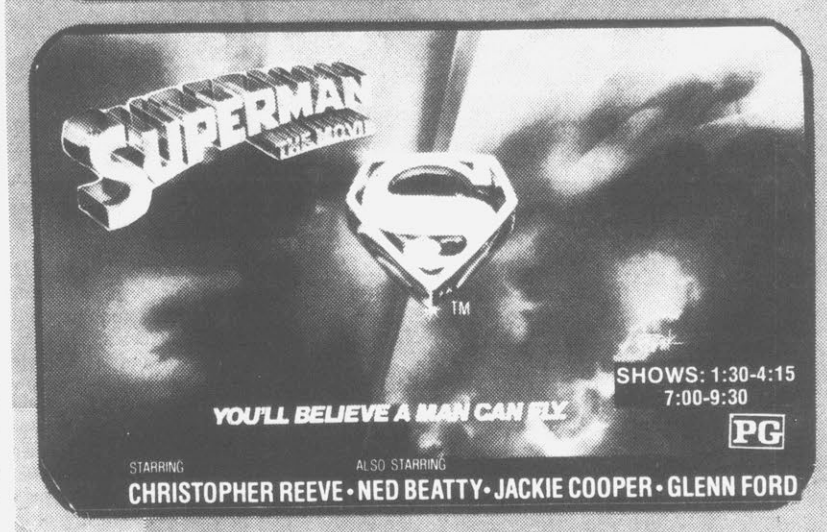

— Tuesday, June 12, 9 p.m. — "The Other Side of Victory" tells the story of the Revolutionary War from the viewpoint of the common soldier. His fears, frustrations, and divided loyalties during the bleak winter of 1776 are depicted in a film that builds up to a climatic clash of arms between Continental militia and British regulars.

— Tuesday, June 12, 10 p.m. — The experiences, emotions, and opinions of San Quentin's inmates are documented in "Inside San Quentin," a documentary produced by a group who had extraordinary access to the prison. Murders, a gang war, armed inmates and prisoners on drugs were among those witnessed by the film makers. The documentary was produced during one of the most violent periods in the prison's history, when three murders a week were not unusual. One of the factors stressed is that value systems among inmates is different from that of society as a whole.

New Poems And Stories Reflect More Emphasis On Realism

Tar River Poetry. Edited by Dr. Peter Makuck. Volume 18, Number 2. Spring 1979. Greenville. East Carolina University. Paper, 48 pages. $1.50 postpaid. (Also available at several local outlets).

Crucible. Edited by Dr. James Hemby. Volume 15, 1979. Wilson. Atlantic Christian College. Paper, 62 pages. Illustrated, $1.50 postpaid.

Several noticeable developments are apparent in the poems and stories published in these two outstanding literary issues.

One of the most significant trends is a marked return to concrete subject matter, a definite swing away from abstractions and nebulous philosophies that in recent years have preoccupied many poets and prose writers. In short, realism is "back in."

This is particularly true of many of the poems in "Tar River Poetry." Place and mood are frequently keynote elements in several lyrical passages tied to rural and small urban locales.

Consider, for example, these typical lines.

"There are white roses / in the center of each red cabbage,/ The smallest petals are the shape/ Of finely veined shells . . ." (Sue Aydellette)

. "Half in a drowse, / I watch the vines dancing,/ listen to leaves/ rattle, halt-then/ shake again. . ." (Ralph J. Mills, Jr.), or

"On the way back we drank/ Dr. Peppers with bags of salted peanuts/poured to the bottoms/ and I wondered where/ you learned so much." (Randy Stalls).

These are commonplace subjects, it is true, but in the hands of talented poets homely scenes of contemporary America are elevated to images that effectively convey subtle evocations of the consistencies and inconsistencies of human experiences in the time frame of today.

This issue of "Tar River Poetry" pioneers new ground in that emphasis is away from primary selection of poetry by local poets. A new policy opens the publication to a wider range of poets nationally.

It might be argued that the decision to accept more "away from home" poets might diminish opportunities for local poets to be published. Whatever one's feeling about this, there's no denying that the quality of the current volume is enhanced by the broader source available for editors to choose from.

Another first for the current issue of "Tar River Poetry" is book reviews on volumes of poetry.

Joseph B. Wagner's review of three new books of poetry eloquently probes the essences of poetry as far apart in mood, style and expression as that of Pamela White Hadas in "Designing Women;" Gary Soto's "The Tale of Sunlight;" and Philip Dacey's "How I Escaped from the Labyrinth and Other Poems."

ECU's Lucy Wright, in a finely crafted short review of "The Heart of the Flute," a long poem by Laura Villasenor, translated by Marco Antonio Montes de Oca, succeeds in piquing the interest of readers in this poem — which Mrs. Wright obviously finds delightful.

Where "Tar Heel Poetry" deals basically with poetry, "Crucible" gives equal space to short stories and poems, with a liberal use of drawings and photographs.

The current volume continues to be successful in bringing to readers a number of stimulating short stories. At a time when the short story is not as popular, nor as readily accessible as it once was, it's reassuring to know that the short story form is alive and doing very well indeed.

"When The Dying Season's Over," Lynwood Sawyer's first-prize fiction in "Crucible," is a convincing, beautifully told story of the relationship of a young man and an older woman. It's a vivid tale of two strong people who accept the friendship of the other in an understanding that erases the differences in years.

An air of subdued mystery is sustained in S. Gardner Hoff's short story, "Off The Road." Again, as in Sawyer's story, the theme is that of a relationship between two people — one, a beautiful young woman, the other, a strange monk living a recluse life in a dark room beneath a noisy bar.

The best poems in "Crucible" do what poetry should do — give new meaning, provide refreshing viewpoints to ageless ideas. Such is the case in Elizabeth Yopp's first-prize poem, "Motor Development."

". . . I see athletes move inside their wet skins/ As quick and sure as currents rush in wires,/ . . . And I have seen lovers coursing at ease/ In their limbs like rivers move between their banks . . ."

There's other nice things in "Crucible," including Ann Deagon's frighteningly low-keyed horror story, "The Same River."

"Tar River Poetry" and "Crucible" both continue a commendable tradition of publishing outstanding literary work. At $1.50 each, they represent a treasury of good reading at bargain prices.

New Dining Facility

ASHEVILLE — One of the newest dining attractions in North Carolina is "Deerpark," a recently opened restaurant at the Biltmore Estate. Located on what was originally a deer preserve, a historic brick barn was restored and surrounds a landscaped garden court which contains brick walkways, park benches and a dance floor with a bandstand.

Features of the facility include serving galleries that provide up to eight buffet lines, two open grills for roasting and barbecuing, glass top tables, Wedgwood china, banners, ceiling fans and a landscaped courtyard.

Biltmore House & Gardens, completed in 1895, is a 250 room mansion with adjacent gardens that have been open to the public since the 1930's. It is located on 11,000 acres in Asheville and has been named a national historic landmark.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Julie Hicks

There are some new mysteries at Sheppard which are perfect to have at the beach or to curl up with on those all too frequent rainy days.

LOOK BACK ON DEATH by Lesley Egan. Dick Tredgold, a young successful businessman and heir to half a million dollars was sent to prison for the murder of his aunt which followed a heated quarrel. Now, after eight years, when Tredgold comes up for parole, he refuses to allow himself to be released. His stubbornness is to prove a point — that he was and is not guilty. An acceptance of parole seemed to him to be an admission of guilt. Tregold's brother, Walter, consults a highly recommended and resourceful lawyer, Jesse Falkenstein, to try and talk some sense into Dick. Falkenstein gets interested, does some digging on his own, and decides to reopen the case — unofficially at least. Psychic phenomena plays a role in unearthing the real killer.

WELCOME TO THE GRAVE by Mary McMullan. All is going well for Harley Ross, successful novelist, until his estranged wife, who ran off with an aspiring artist two years before, turns up unexpectedly, assuming her role as lady of the household. Harley, who is at first enraged at the sight of Marta, tries to get her to leave voluntarily. After all, he never mourned her departure. Actually, she had become rather boring to him anyway. And at present, he is currently involved with Jill Gaynor who isn't exactly wild about Marta's return either. His pleas with Marta are to no avail — even promises of money (and lots of it) do not budge her. She has a weapon, a secret about Harley, which she has kept for just the right moment. She is not above blackmail to get what she wants — stability and security. But Marta's return has an effect on Harley's work. His writing comes to a complete stop right in the middle of his new book. Harley is transformed into a crazed man as he takes matters into his own hands.

FELONY AT RANDOM is a Luis Mendoza mystery and the thirtieth novel by Dell Shannon that amazingly prolific writer. In it, a series of senseless, violent crimes occur including a kidnapping, a brutal murder, a double suicide, and narcotics dealing. Are these incidents related? Lieutenant Mendoza calls upon his experience as a veteran on the Los Angeles police force and guides his able staff to expose the culprit. Dell Shannon has used her firsthand knowledge gained from extensive research in the area of police procedures and criminal laboratory techniques to put together an authentic detective story which will hold your attention from cover to cover.

Sergeant Advises Enlisted Men Of Five Nations

NAPLES, ITALY — At the Naples, Italy, Headquarters of NATO's Allied Forces Southern Europe (AFSOUTH), a United States Air Force Senior Master Sergeant is a Sergeant Major, a title normally reserved for army personnel.

Unusual? Yes, but that's only the beginning.

The Senior Master Sergeant is Roosevelt Dawson, Jr., the "eyes and ears" of the NATO Post Commandant — a U. S. Army Colonel — and, as such, is referred to as the "Post Sergeant Major."

But that's where the similarity between Dawson and a typical U.S. Army Sergeant Major ends.

An Army Sergeant Major only looks after soldiers. Not so with "Rosey" Dawson. At AFSOUTH the enlisted population includes soldiers, sailors and airmen from Greece, Turkey, Italy, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Men Of Five Nations

Chances for misunderstandings are myriad and it takes a tactful "people engineer" to keep the little problems from becoming big ones. That's Sergeant Dawson's job.

It makes his day when the people he counsels leave his office in a better state of mind. To keep the small problems small, he emphasizes good communications.

Usually Dawson has little difficulty communicating with the enlisted men from the five allied countries, since English is the official NATO language. When there is a language barrier, he uses an interpreter.

Advisory Council

To stay tuned to the concerns and suggestions of his "troops," he re-established the Command Enlisted Advisory Council. After the council, which he heads, considers suggestions of each national representative, Dawson presents the council's recommendations to the Commandant. Then he frequently helps put the approved suggestions into action.

His concern for the needs of people extends his advisory role to the post's International Enlisted Club, where he helps plans activities that will appeal to all nationalities.

Sergeant Dawson feels that previous assignments, where he worked with all the American service branches and the Republic of South Korea armed forces members, prepared him for the AFSOUTH job by teaching him how the other services think.

Job Challenging

Dawson says his job is challenging, different and educational. He feels all American service members should have the opportunity to serve with a NATO unit such as AFSOUTH, which is responsible for the land-air defense of Italy, Greece and Turkey, and the defense of NATO sea lines of communications throughout the Mediterranean and Black Seas.

Eastern N.C. Native

A native of Craven County and a graduate of Newbold High School in Dover, North Carolina, "Rosey" has served in the Air Force for 23 years.

He admits to having a soft heart for children. As Worshipful Master and Program Committee Chairman for Mediterranean Masonic Lodge 149, Dawson played an active role in a lodge-sponsored boxing "smoker" which raised $5,000 for American youth living in Naples.

He is married to the former Erma Daniel and their children seem to be following in the footsteps of their father. The youngest, Stacie, 7, would like to become the first woman commander-in-chief of the United States armed forces. A son, Joe, is a Specialist 4 in the Army, and daughter, Renee, plans to marry an Army man.

Sergeant Dawson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt "Jake" Dawson, live in Vanceboro. A sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Mills, lives in Greenville.

"The highlights of my Air Force career have been this job and working aboard the National Emergency Airborne Command Post, which is the flying White House for the President during wartime," Sergeant Dawson remarked when summing up his career to date.

Algae In The Chowan

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A buildup of blue-green algae along the Chowan River in northeastern North Carolina indicates there will be a heavy algae bloom on those waters this summer, state environmental management officials say.

The blooms impair commercial and sport fishing as well as all water-based recreation in the Chowan Basin, which includes some 5,000 square miles in North Carolina and Virginia.

The state took steps earlier this month to declare the Chowan the state's first "nutrient sensitive waters," thus empowering the state to limit nutrients discharged within North Carolina's power of the basin.

RIDING THE RAILS

Sections of rail 70 feet long are fed into a Burlington Northern plant here to be welded into quarter-mile-long rails which are loaded onto racks of a "rail train." The ribbons of rail are then sent to construction sites either to replace jointed rail or become part of a new line.

San Clemente Goat Slaughter Blocked

PLEADS FOR GOAT 'S LIVES — Animal advocate Cleveland Amory and actress Cindy Williams, star of T.V.'s LaVerne and Shirley, hold a "San Clemente goat" in front of a United States Federal District Court in Los Angeles Friday. LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has heard the cry of the wild goat and blocked the proposed slaughter of about 4,000 of the beasts on the Navy's San Clemente Island.

U.S. District Judge Robert M. Takasugi issued a preliminary injunction Friday preventing the shooting despite the government's contention that it was a matter of "national defense."

Arguing against the injunction, Assistant U.S. Attorney Steve O'Neil told Takasugi that 50 weeks a year, Navy ships use San Clemente Island as a shooting gallery — necessary to national defense.

The government claimed the target practice would have to be postponed because of the goats.

They also claimed the foraging animals are upsetting the ecology of the 100-square mile island, where they have lived since their introduction more than 200 years ago by Spanish missionaries.

A group called Give Our Animals Time (GOAT) had won a 10-day delay in the slaughter but it expired Friday.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Navy, landlord of the chaparral-covered island 75 miles west of San Diego, had proposed an airborne shoot using helicoptors and professional hunters.

Four years ago, trappers removed 13,000 goats, but the government says the remaining animals must be shot because they live in rocky, inaccessible canyon areas.

But Takasugi said the shooting plan was "arbitrary and capricious" because it failed to compare costs of alternative methods of goat removal and to consider a potential health hazard from 4,000 decomposing goat carcasses.

The judge said his own son had a better idea for the goats. He said the Navy should shoot tranquilizer darts from helicopters that would then airlift the dazed beasts off the island.

O'Neil said government attorneys will wait until Takasugi formally signs the order Monday before deciding what to do next. But he said: "The goats will live and we will probably have to come up with another solution."

At a news conference on the steps of the federal courthouse, animal advocate Cleveland Amory and actress Cindy Williams of the "Laverne and Shirley" television show, national chairman of the Fund for Animals, exhibited a black-bearded San Clemente goat named Christopher.

"I'm so unused to winning that I'm flabbergasted," exulted Amory. "We're here to celebrate a victory over the U.S. Navy, the Department of Defense and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department and it's really exciting."

Matt Whalen, a meat packer from Chino, said he had a proposal for the government, including his paying to relocate the beasts to U.S. Forest Service land for fire prevention "because I want to save them." He said about 1,500 goats are now happily eating brush in the Cleveland National Forest.

Visibility Declining Nationally

By JAMES PHILLIPS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Visibility is declining across much of the nation despite efforts to clean-up the air.

Scientific studies show visibility has decreased from 10 percent to 30 percent in the Southwest, once celebrated for its pure air, and from 10 percent to 40 percent in East and Midwest.

Moreover, findings show the loss of visibility is not confined to metropolitan areas, but is occurring in remote unpopulated regions as well as rural and suburban locations and small towns.

The declines are based primarily on increases in the amount of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen dioxides and ozone found in the air. Theoxides react with other airborne elements to form haze.

The widespread geographical distribution of the haze is believed to stem from the fact that modern power plants are generally located away from major urban areas, EPA officials said.

In addition, the plants generally use taller smoke stacks which distribute the pollutants over a wider area, they added.

Of the 20 locations studied, only two showed improvements. They were Newark, N.J., where average visibility increased 14 percent over the past 25 years, and Pueblo, Colo., where visibility increased 35 percent.

The cities which showed declines, and the average loss of visibility are:

Washington, 8 percent; Chicago, 6 percent; Cleveland, 10 percent; Lexington, Ky., 41 percent; Charlotte, N.C., 33 percent; Columbus, Ohio, 11 percent.

Dayton, Ohio, 9 percent; Williamsport, Pa., 9 percent; Dulles International Airport, Virginia, 25 percent; Phoenix, 23 percent; Tucson, 22 percent.

Denver, 13 percent; Salt Lake City, 27 percent; Fort Huachuca, Ariz., 27 percent; Prescott, Ariz., 25 percent; Winslow, Ariz., 17 percent; Colorado Springs, Colo., 12 percent; Grand Junction, Colo., 4 percent; Ely, Nevada, 42 percent; Cheyenne, Wyo., 23 percent.

'Choking' Bid Is Upset By Coastal

NEW YORK (AP) — Coastal was "a dead horse" on the backstretch during the Belmont Stakes, in the eyes of trainer David Whiteley. But Whiteley's view of the drive to the wire was that of Coastal killing the king.

The lightly raced Coastal swept into the lead with a little more than an eighth of a mile to go and won the $269,000 Belmont Stakes in a shocking upset that ended odds-on favorite Spectacular Bid's try for the Triple Crown.

"We're all speechless," said Tom Meyerhoff, who owns Bid with his father Harry, and Harry's wife, Teresa. That comment said it all.

A crowd of 59,073 showed up at Belmont Park on this hazy, hot Saturday expecting to see Bid become racing's third stright Triple Crown winner. Instead they got a result that left 19-year-old Ronnie Franklin, Bid's jockey, saying "I feel like crying but I'm not going to."

"The best horse won the race," said Bid's trainer, Bud Delp. "We have no excuses."

Franklin thought Bid got something in his throat that caused him to choke with about a quarter of a mile to go. Bid was in the lead at that time.

But after checking over Bid at the barn, Delp left for the airport and a flight back to Baltimore. Exercise rider R.A. Smith will remain behind, and he said he thought that Spectacular Bid was just tired and that nothing was wrong.

Coastal, unbeaten in three previous starts this year, charged from fourth place with a quarter of a mile left to win by 3¼ lengths under Ruben Hernandez. Golden Act, a veteran of Triple Crown competition, closed to be second, a neck ahead of Spectacular Bid.

Screen King was another 9½ lengths back, followed by King Celebrity, Gallant Best, General Assembly and Mystic Era.

"I thought he was dead at the five-eighths pole," said Whiteley. "But I was hoping he could make it up in the next three-eighths or one-half mile. I thought maybe he was waiting."

Hernandez said that he took Coastal back to fourth after the first eighth-mile. "After that, he was very nice and did what I wanted," the Panamanian jockey said.

When Hernandez asked for the winning drive, he got it and was surprised by how easily Coastal won.

"I wasn't expecting him to run by him (Spectacular Bid) the way he did. I was expecting him to fight back a little bit when we put a head in front, but he didn't."

Coastal, a chestnut son of Majestic Prince — who lost his Triple Crown bid in the Belmont 10 years ago, was not nominated for the Belmont, so owner William Haggin Perry had to pay supplemental fees of $20,000.

"It certainly paid off and we're certainly very happy with the results," said the owner after Coastal earned $161,400.

As for what's next for his giant killer, the happy Perry said, "Oatmeal."

He was referring to Coastal's victory dinner.

Coastal carried scale weight of 126 pounds over the mile and a half in 2:28 3-5.

The winner, who earned $161,400, returned $10.80, $4.80 and $2.10. Golden Act paid $5.40 and $2.10. The millionaire Spectacular Bid, winner of 12 straight stakes going in, was $2.10 to show.

Before the race, Lucien Lauren, the trainer who saddled Secretariat to win the Triple Crown in 1973, said of Coastal, "He's a fresh horse with great ability, racing on his home track (Coastal has raced four times at Belmont, winning three, and trains there regularly), he's comfortable and confident here and I just think he's going to be awfully tough to beat."

He was impossible to beat — on this Saturday.

Ronnie Franklin broke Spectacular Bid third out of the gate and had him second into the clubhouse turn. Shortly after entering the backstretch, Spectacular Bid took the lead and the crowd roared.

The throng continued to cheer Bid on, but then just before the eighth pole, as Coastal flashed by on the rail, the cheers of an expected victory turned to a roar of disbelief. The king was dead.

Bid went into the race as the overwhelming favorite to join Secretariat, Seattle Slew in 1977 and Affirmed, 1978, as the fourth Triple Crown winner in this decade. Instead, he became the ninth 3-year-old to win the first two jewels of the Triple Crown, only to come up empty in the Belmont.

Chris Lloyd Wins French Open With Lopsided One Hour Waltz

PARIS (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd patiently mowed down Australia's Wendy Turnbull 6-2, 6-0 Saturday in the most one-sided final seen in the French Open Tennis Championships since World War II.

In the men's final Sunday, top-seeded Bjorn Borg is to take on little-known Victor Pecci of Paraguay, who vanquished Jimmy Connors Friday.

In just over an hour in hot sunshine on the center court of the Roland Garros Stadium, Lloyd gave another lesson in playing on slow clay.

It brought her a first prize of $30,080 and bright prospects for Wimbledon later this month.

"When I first won the French title in 1974 I went on to win Wimbledon," Lloyd said. "We will have to see if it helps this time."

Wimbledon's faster grass courts need a different style of tennis and Lloyd will have to get past defending champion Martina Navratilova, the Czech-born serve-and-volley specialist, who defeated her there last year.

But on red clay against Turnbull, Lloyd was relentless. It took her four games to assert her authority. From 2-2 in the first set she sailed on unimpeded.

In the long baseline rallies on the slow surface, it was patience that won the points and over-eagerness that lost them.

In the second set, Lloyd made only one unforced error — a misjudged backhand in the fourth game — while Turnbull made 14.

"Wendy had been patient in her earlier matches in the tournament," Lloyd said, "but today she did not seem ready to stay out all afternoon to win the match. There's a right way to play on a clay court, and she just didn't do it."

Turnbull, 26, runner-up in the U.S. Open in 1977, left Paris with second prize of $15,000.

She kept the rallies going but did not win the points when it mattered. It was a baseline duel of cat and mouse, and the little Australian had to play the role of mouse.

In the second set she took Lloyd to deuce once, in the second game, but apart from that won only seven points.

The Mayer brothers of the United States, Sandy and Gene, defeated Phil Dent and Ross Case of Australia 6-4, 6-4, 6-4 and got into the tennis history books.

They were the first brothers to win a doubles title in one of the major championships since the famous British pair, Lawrie and Reggie Doherty, won at Wimbledon in 1905.

Homers Spark Jays By A's

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Home runs by Bob Davis, John Mayberry and Rico Carty gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 5-0 victory over Oakland Saturday and their first three-game winning streak since the opening week of the season.

Rookie Phil Huffman, 3-6, halted a personal six-game losing streak although he needed ninth-inning relief from Dyar Miller, his first appearance for Toronto since being obtained from the California Angels. The loss was Oakland's seventh in a row.

Winless Matt Keough absorbed his eighth loss. Since his All-Star appearance last year, Keough is 2-19, including 12 losses in a row.

Keough gave up a fifth-inning homer to Davis, his first of the year, and yielded Mayberry's seventh of the year and second in two games in the sixth inning. Carty hit his third homer of the season off Jim Todd in the eighth.

Martin Leads Cubs To Win

By FRED GOODALL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Jerry Martin drove in three runs with a single and a double Saturday to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 5-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Martin's two-run single capped a three-run first inning and his double into the left-field corner drove in Dave Kingman from second base and snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth.

Dennis Lamp, 5-2, scattered six hits over six innings to gain the victory. He received relief help from Dick Tidrow, who recorded his second save since being acquired from the New York Yankees.

Los Angeles took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Davey Lopes smashed the second pitch of the game over the left-field wall for his 16th home run, then Reggie Smith doubled and Steve Garvey singled him home.

Ted Sizemore drew a walk off Rick Sutcliffe, 6-4, with one out in the bottom of the first. Bill Buckner then singled and both runners moved up on a wild pitch. Kingman's run-scoring single cut the lead to 2-1 and, after Kingman took second on Bobby Murcer's fly ball, Martin drilled his two-run single to center field. Kingman was safe on an error and stole second in the sixth before Martin doubled him home.

Bosox Blitz Twins, 12-6

By DAVE O'HARA

BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrezmski, Carlton Fisk, Jim Rice and Fred Lynn belted home runs in a 17-hit barrage Saturday as the Boston Red Sox trounced Minnesota 12-6 for their third straight victory.

Mike Torrez, 6-3, allowed only one hit for 7 2-3 innings before being chased when Minnesota erupted for five runs in the eighth.

The triumph was the Red Sox's sixth victory in their last seven games and raised their Fenway Park record for the season to 22-9.

Boston mauled Roger Erickson, 0-6, and two Minnesota relief pitchers for 12 extra-base hits, including seven doubles and a triple.

Yastrezmski hit a two-run shot, his 10th homer of the season and No. 393 of his career, in the first inning. He later doubled for his 998th extra-base hit.

Fisk, still used as a designated hitter while nursing a sore elbow, tripled in the first inning and hit his first homer of the year in the third.

Rice unloaded on a 3-0 pitch and drilled a tremendous homer far over the screen near the 379-foot mark in left-center field in the fifth. It was Rice's fifth homer in the last six games.

And Lynn, the American League's leading home run hitter, belted his 16th, a three-run shot 12 rows into the bleachers in distant right-center field in the sixth.

Andy Bean Blisters Atlanta For 61, Takes 5-Shot Advantage

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Andy Bean's spectacular 11-under-par 61 established 5-stroke command in the third round of the $300,000 Atlanta Golf Classic, but Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller and Joe Inman both insisted they have a chance to catch him in the final 18 holes Sunday.

"Anything can happen in this crazy game," said the optimistic Zoeller. "The Masters proved that. Your chances are always good."

"Andy can be caught, but it won't be easy and it'll take an awfully low number to do it," Inman said Saturday.

The powerful Bean took a different view of it.

"I won't be trying to protect anything tomorrow," he said. "I'll play aggressively. I'll shoot 65 if I can. And I'll sure try to shoot in the 60s. You can't lay back and protect and hope to win.

"I'll shoot just as low a number as I can," he said and offered the grin that has caused his fellow tourists to nickname him "Li'l Abner."

"I'd like to say I'll play as well tomorrow as I did today. Just keep it going. But sometimes that's not possible."

It's possible, of course. But not probable.

Bean, who has a habit of playing his best at this stage of the season, holed a 3-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to complete the back nine in 29. His 18-hole score was a record for the hilly, 7,019-yard Atlanta Country Club course and marked the second time in as many weeks, and the third time this year a 61 has been recorded on the PGA Tour.

Better scores have been posted only eight times in the history of the Tour.

Bean, packing enormous power in his 6-foot-4, 210-pound frame, finished 54 holes with a 198 total, a dizzying 18 shots below par, matching the best 3-round total of the Tour season.

Playing conditions were ideal. The weather was hot and humid, with just the breath of a breeze ruffling the pines and oaks that crown the red-clay hills along the Chattahoochee River. And Bean, who grew up on the islands off the south coast of Georgia, took full advantage of it.

He didn't make a bogey; didn't even come close. He reeled off 11 birdies, including 4 in a row opening the back 9 and finished with 3 more, then lifted both hands high above his head to the howling glee of the big crowd around the 18th.

"You didn't think I was gonna miss it," he said of the final birdie putt. "Those kids around the green would have killed me."

Bean, who won three tournaments in a five-week stretch at precisely this time of the season a year ago, said he's "never played like this before. Never."

His spectacular performance completely overshadowed a remarkable 64, 8 under par, that lifted Masters champion Fuzzy Zoeller into a tie for second at 203. But that is a distant 5 shots behind the big guy with the curly red hair.

Joe Inman, the second round leader, had a solid 68 and, incredibly, was beaten 7 shots by Bean. He shared second with Zoeller.

"I can't figure out how you can shoot 68 from the lead and be 5 shots back," the stunned Inman said. "It's like he's been caged up."

Grier Jones was next at 69-205. It was another 2 strokes back to Barry Jaeckel, Morris Hatalsky and Larry Nelson at 207. Nelson matched par 72, while Jaeckel and Hatalsky had 68s.

"I made a couple of putts early and that seemed to get me going. The golf course played pretty well, but when you're hitting it close to the hole and making the putts, I guess it seems pretty easy.

"I guess I gained a little bit of ground. I wanted to be closer to the lead. I guess I did that."

Inman agreed.

"I'm looking at the leader board as we're playing along and every time they put up another number he's another shot under par."

Bean did it all. He reached par-5s in 2. He holed long putts. He hit his irons close. And when the situation arose, as on the 18th, he had the deft, delicate touch to chip it close.

He reached the par 5 second with two big shots and 2-putted for birdie. A 9-iron approach left him a four-footer on the fourth. He scored from 25 feet on the next, and went 4 under for the day after a pitching wedge to 6 feet on the 7th.

A 9-iron shot that left him a three-footer on the 10th kicked off a string of four birdies in a row. The par-5 11th went to a 3-iron second shot in 2 putts. He made it from eight feet on the 12th and missed an ace by a scant two feet on the 13th.

A 2-iron on the 220-yard 16th stopped four feet from the flag and Bean said that "kind of set up the next two birdies." He made it from 12 feet on the 17th then chipped close after reaching a green-side bunker in 2 on the water-guarded 18th.

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Two-time U.S. Open champion Donna Caponi Young fired a 2-under-par 70 Saturday and surged into a tie with non-winner Jeriyn Briz for the 54-hole lead in the 25th Ladies Professional Golfers Association championship.

Young, 34, fired her second straight 70 and became the only player in the field to register three sub-par rounds in a row over the Nicklaus Golf Center course.

Meanwhile, Briz struggled to a 1-over-par 73 and dropped back into a tie with Young at 209, 7-under par on the 6,313-yard layout just north of Cincinnati.

Five players were within two shots of one another headed into the final round Sunday, and the defending champion, Nancy Lopez, was a menacing four shots off the pace.

Briz, 36, who did not turn pro until she was 31, ran into three bogeys and carded two birdies for her only over-par round of this, the first of three major tournaments for the women.

Young, who has been in the top 11 in her last eight tournaments, was the most consistent of the contenders in the muggy, 90-degree heat. She played bogeyless golf, ramming in birdie putts at 4 and 12 to earn a share of the lead in her bid to win her first LPGA championship.

Amy Alcott, the runnerup here last year, was tied with Britz and Young until she missed a 3-foot putt for par on the 15th hole. Alcott had 69 for 210, 6-under-par and good for third place.

JoAnne Carner, still fighting an injured right hand from a month-old motorcycle accident, matched par of 72 and shared fourth place with Australian Penny Puz, who had a 69.

Lopez, chasing her fourth consecutive victory this year, also fashioned a 69 and predicted she would be in contention for the first prize of $22,500 in the $50,000 event.

"Tomorrow's the pressure day and I like a lot of pressure," said the 22-year-old sensation who has won five tournaments and more than $118,000 in 1979.

"I like a lot of pressure. I'm on my toes then," she said.

She was in a logjam for sixth place with four other players. They were left-handed Bonnie Bryant, Jan Stephenson, Judy Rankin and Jo Ann Prentice.

Stephenson fired a 68, the best performance among the top contenders in the third round. Prentice and Rankin had 70s while Bryant settled for par 72.

Wilson's Inside-Park Homer Tops Yankees In 13th Inning

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Willie Wilson's inside-the-park home run leading off the 13th inning gave the Kansas City Royals a 9-8 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday.

Wilson pounded the first pitch of the inning from Ken Clay, 1-2, up the alley between left fielder Roy White and center fielder Mickey Rivers. White retrieved the ball but his throw got past Fred Stanley at shortstop while Wilson roared home.

Marty Pattin, 3-0, got the victory. In all, the teams used nine pitchers and got 29 hits.

The Yankees went ahead 8-7 in the top of the ninth when Willie Randolph singled to left off Al Hrabosky and Graig Nettles ripped a two-out double off the wall in left-center field. Kansas City tied it in the bottom of the inning when Wilson singled, was bunted to second and scored on George Brett's two-out single up the middle off Ron Davis.

Lou Piniella's single in the seventh inning scored Rivers and Randolph and give the Yankees a 7-6 lead. But Brett's RBI double drove Wilson home in the bottom of the seventh to tie it 7-7.

Ray Burris replaced New York starter Tommy John with two on and one out in the sixth and John Wathan, snapping a 1-for-16 slump, tripled to put Kansas City on top 6-5.

Sigel Tops Hoch In Br. Amateur

SOUTHPORT, England (AP) — Jay Sigel of Philadelphia staved off a determined challenge from Scott Hoch of Raleigh, N.C., to win the British Amateur Golf Championship 3 and 2 in an all-American final on the Hillside Club's 6,951-yard par-72 course Saturday.

The 36-hole match was a grim battle all the way between 34-year-old Sigel, playing calm and composed golf, and 23-year-old Hoch, playing with eagerness but little sense of direction at times.

In the morning round, Sigel had finished 3 holes in the lead but faltered in the afternoon and frittered that lead away by shooting three bogeys in the first four holes to suddenly find himself suddenly back on even terms.

In fact, the start of the afternoon round was a disaster for both men. Hoch, on the sixth, threw his advantage away by getting all sorts of trouble in the rough, finally finding himself with an unplayable lie behind a post and conceding.

That put Sigel back in the lead and then his putter, somewhat wayward in the morning, made amends at a crucial point.

On the ninth, Hoch was on the green 12 feet from the pin and looking set for a par.

Sigel was on the green's edge in 2, a full 50 feet from the pin. He rammed that putt conclusively home for a birdie 3, went 2-up, and from then on always was in control.

The turning point came on the 16th when Sigel was 3-up with three holes to play. Hoch was within 20 feet of the pin with his second, while Sigel was just off the green, under a plateau.

A Hoch win there could have given him a lift at a crucial time. But Sigel chipped to within 10 feet of the hole, and sank from there for the half and the match.

It was vintage golf throughout, played in ideal weather with sun and a light breeze. The large gallery following the match had plenty to applaud.

Sigel's refusal to be rattled under initial pressure won him the title.

In both rounds the pattern was the same. Hoch's strength up to the green gradually was worn down by Sigel's nagging accuracy with the younger man beginning to wilt and stray from the line.

After his birdie on the 27th, to turn 2-up, Sigel played only one bad shot. That was on the 29th, which he lost with a weak pitch from just off the green tht meandered to a stop nine feet from the pin after Hoch had birdied.

But Hoch three-putted twice after that — once on the 31st, to give Sigel his 2-hole lead back again, and the second was two holes later to make Sigel 3-up with three to play.

Auto Specialty is now 3-4, while Dr. Pepper is 3-5.

Auto Specialty came up with three in the second. David Jester reached on a three-base error and Cal Glisson walked. Mike Kinley singled in both runners. Walks to Mont Brown and Jeff Austin loaded the bases and Michael Smith singled in Kinley.

Dr. Pepper came back with three in the bottom of the second to tie it up. Marc Gatlin singled and stole both second and third. James Smith singled, as did Daryl Pettis, scoring Gatlin. Smith scored on an error, and walks to Jeff Anthony, Tony Daniels and Andre Wooten brought in Pettis.

After adding three in the third, Auto Specialty came up with two in the fifth to insure the win. Walter Perkins walked and was balked to second. He stole third and scored on Kinley's single. Brown advanced Kinley on a hit, and Kinley came home on an infield out.

Auto Specialty added two more in the sixth and four in the seventh. Dr. Pepper picked up one in the fifth and three more in the seventh.

Smith, Ravaris and Kinley each had three hits, with Brown leading the way with three for Auto Specialty. Dr. Pepper was led by Smith with two.

The Optimists added five in the second, and got another in the fourth as Scott homered with no one aboard.

Swan Blanks Houston, 4-0

NEW YORK (AP) — Craig Swan pitched a seven-hitter Saturday for his second shutout of the season and Steve Henderson drove in two runs to lead the New York Mets past the Houston Astros 4-0.

Swan, 6-4, who pitched the Mets' only other shutout this year when he beat San Francisco 2-0 with a two-hitter on April 25, retired 13 Astros in a row from the second inning until Terry Puhl singled to lead off the sixth. He struck out three batters without issuing a walk.

The Mets jumped on Joaquin Andujar, 5-4, for two runs in the first inning when Joel Youngblood walked, Frank Taveras beat out a bunt and John Stearns walked to fill the bases before Henderson singled to center field.

Yankees Couldn't Even Give Win Away To Kansas City Club

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes you can't even give a ballgame away.

Bob Lemon, manager of the New York Yankees, saw his team offer plenty of opportunities to the Kansas City Royals Friday night but still come away with a wild 11-10, 10-inning victory.

"It was one of those weird games," said Lemon. "We gave them too many outs, about eight outs."

Kansas City had 18 hits in the game and also benefitted from an error by Yankees second baseman Willie Randolph with two out in the ninth. But when it was over, it was the Yankees who emerged on top on the strength of Graig Nettles' towering home run in the 10th inning off Ed Rodriguez.

In other American League games, the Boston Red Sox trimmed the Minnesota Twins 2-1, the Baltimore Orioles blanked the Texas Rangers 3-0, the Toronto Blue Jays edged the Oakland A's 2-1, the California Angels beat the Detroit Tigers 6-4 and the Seattle Mariners defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-2.

Chicago at Milwaukee was rained out after the teams had played 1½ innings. The score was tied 2-2 when the game was called.

Red Sox 2, Twins 1

Boston posted its seventh victory in the last nine games, getting the winning run in the eighth inning on two-out singles by Jim Rice, Carl Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk. Reliever Bob Stanley, 6-4, threw only 12 pitches in retiring the last four batters to get the victory.

The loser was Dave Goltz, 5-6, who had beaten Boston five times in a row since July 8, 1976.

Orioles 3, Rangers 0

Baltimore got all its runs in the fifth inning on a single by Gary Roenicke, a walk to Eddie Murray, a single by Rich Dauer, walks to Kiko Garcia and Dave Skaggs, and a sacrifice fly by Al Bumbry.

Johnny Grubb, who has a 20-game hitting streak, entered the game as a defensive replacement for Texas in the eighth inning but did not come to bat. Thus his hitting streak was not affected.

Blue Jays 2, A's 1

John Mayberry homered in the ninth inning off Oakland reliever Dave Heaverlo to give Toronto the victory and send the A's to their sixth straight loss.

Mayberry led off the ninth against Heaverlo, 2-6, and hit a 1-1 pitch into the right field seats. Tom Buskey, 2-1, got the victory.

Angels 6, Tigers 4

Dan Ford hit the first grand slam home run of his career and drove in five runs for California to back the combined four-hit pitching of Don Aase and Mark Clear. Ford connected for his seventh home run of the season in the seventh inning off Detroit reliever John Hiller.

Mariners 6, Indians 2

John Hale homered and drove in three runs as Seattle beat Cleveland. Ruppert Jones also homered for Seattle, his 13th of the season.

Jamesville Rips Prospect, 15-3 To Become State 1-A Champions

MAXTON — Jamesville High School won what is believed to be its first state championship ever Friday evening, stopping Prospect High School, 15-3, for the State 1-A Baseball crown.

The Bullets had little trouble with the runner-up "Cats, pounding them for 11 runs in the first two innings.

"We began substituting in the third inning," Coach Ron Davenport said. "We played everyone we had." The other four runs came in the sixth inning, when the regulars began returning to the lineup to finish up their championship season.

Tommy DiNardo hurled the victory, gaining his ninth against no losses this season. "It was a great way for him to wind up his high school career," Davenport said. "It couldn't have happened to a nicer guy either. He's going on to Louisburg College next year, and should be a fine asset to them."

For four other seniors, it was their farewell appearance in a Bullet uniform: catcher Toby Holliday, second baseman Danny Lilley, third baseman Keith Long, and designated runner Stan Lilley.

The victory also ran to 25 games, the winning streak of the Bullets. Their only defeat of the season came in the first game of the year when they bowed, 4-2, to 3-A Plymouth. Several of their later wins came over 2-A and 3-A foes. Two of their 25 wins were forfeits.

Jamesville, which advanced to the state semifinals last year before bowing out to eventual champion Lucama, pushed over five runs in the first inning against Prospect, which was the state runner-up last year also.

Danny Lilley opened up the first with a walk, and Holliday followed with a single. Trent Ange doubled in both runners, and scored when Keith Modlin doubled. DiNardo singled in Modlin, and later scored on a sacrifice fly by Keith Long.

Lilley got things going in the second inning also. Both he and Holliday reached on an error. Ange doubled in Lilley and Modlin was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Not for long, however, as DiNardo doubled, driving in all three. Long then walked, and Jeff Rogers reached on an error, scoring DiNardo. A passed ball scored Long for an 11-0 lead.

DiNardo had retired the 'Cats in order in the first three innings, and had one out in the fourth when he walked Sanderson. Eric Collins then tripled, driving in Sanderson with the first Prospect run.

In the fifth, the 'Cats got another. Cummings walked and D. Locklear singled. Bullard also walked, loading the bases. Brayboy singled in Cummings.

In the sixth, the final Prospect run crossed the plate. L. Locklear tripled and scored on a hit by B. Locklear.

Jamesville began putting its regulars back in in the sixth, and came back with four runs. DiNardo singled and Long got a hit. Rogers singled in DiNardo, and Clarence Thomas got a hit, loading the bases. Danny Lilley walked, scoring Long and Holliday doubled in Rogers and Thomas.

"I'm extremely proud of our kids," Davenport said. "They showed a great attitude all season, they hustled and had great enthusiasm. We had beautiful weather for the finals, and Prospect was a perfect host for us. This has just been a super season."

DiNardo also led the Jamesville hitting, getting three, while Holliday and Ange both had two.

Week Has Been Good One For Earnhardt

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The race hasn't even started yet, and already Dale Earnhardt's won more money than in the winner's purse.

Since he rolled in at Riverside International Raceway earlier this week, the 27-year-old rookie standout has accomplished the following:

—He received an official invitation from Raceway President Les Richter to be a participant in the 1979-80 International Race of Champions series, which was worth $75,000 to last year's winner.

—He won the pole position Friday for Sunday's 400-kilometer Grand National stock car race here. It was the first pole position of his career and was worth $1,000.

—By winning the pole position, the ninth different driver to do so in 15 races so far this season, he qualified for a special match race next February at Daytona Beach, Fla., worth $50,000 to the winner.

"I'm turned!" said the excitable Earnhardt. "I can't believe all this. Even if I finish last in the IROC and the other race, I'm still going to win $20,000 to $30,000.

As good as the news is, it's just another chapter in the storybook season young Earnhardt is having.

After stunning veterans by challenging for the lead through most of the Daytona 500, Earnhardt bounced back a month later and won the Southeastern 500. It made him the first rookie to win on the circuit since 1974 and the youngest Grand National winner in recent memory.

Since his Southeastern 500 victory made him eligible for nearly $200,000 in bonuses and incentive awards, Earnhardt's team will be able to financially attack the circuit with gusto. The most recent results have been near victories in the circuit's last two races, the World 600 and Texas 400. Minor mechanical trouble near the finish fouled him up in both.

"We had a little bad luck there, but I'm prepared to forget all that in a hurry with a good showing here Sunday," said Earnhardt, making only his second career start at Riverside.

"We've been doing our homework in the engine department and I really think we can come up with the winner for here," he said.

Earnhardt said the motor and his growing confidence in himself combined to put him on the pole position. He qualified 10th here in the season opener and finished 21st after "doing a pretty good job of tearing up the transmission."

Bird Becomes Richest Rookie In NBA History

By DICK BRAUDE
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Blond bomber Larry Bird got lost jogging Friday morning but found his way to a ballyhooed Boston Celtics ceremony where he became the richest rookie in sports history at $3.25 million for five National Basketball Association seasons.

Hailed as one of the great collegians of all time, the 6-foot-9 Indiana State star, and self-professed "hick from French Lick," was annointed the prospective savior of the once-powerful NBA team.

"I'm ready to play right now," said Bird at a mobbed Boston Garden news conference where he was given uniform No. 33 by Celtics President Red Auerbach.

"I should have told Mr. Auerbach I would have played for nothing," joked Bird, who emerged from his French Lick, Ind., home to make official what Auerbach, Celtics owner Harry Mangurian and Bird's lawyer Bob Woolf had spent two months hashing out.

No terms of the pact were announced, but sources said it has an annual worth of $650,000 in salary and fringes.

Bird, drafted a year ago as a junior, stayed at Woolf's home in Brookline — a Boston suburb — Thursday night, went jogging at 6:30 a.m. Friday and promptly got lost.

He was collected by a passing motorist and returned safely to Woolf — who had negotiated what the lawyer-agent termed the best contract in sports history.

"I guess I'm still the hick from French Lick," said Bird, who plans a Cape Cod vacation.

Celtics Coach Bill Fitch jumped into the contest for generating puns on Bird's name, declaring, "This Bird is no turkey." Later, the new coach said The AP's college basketball Player of the Year, who averaged 30.3 points, definitely will play forward for Boston.

"We're 12 fouls away from moving him into the pivot," Fitch said, alluding to the presence of veteran center Dave Cowens — the former player-coach — and second-year center-forward Rick Robey.

Despite the financial wrangling, Bird said he wanted to come to Boston all along, in part because he has friends — Robey and swingman Jeff Judkins — on the team.

Auerbach claimed bitterness with Woolf was an exaggeration. But then he added, "In situations like that, everyone gets cute. I didn't get cute, I got mad."

As for being the team's savior, Bird said, "I didn't put that in my contract."

But Auerbach said the team, which missed the playoffs for the second consecutive year, is only "one or two little moves" away from climbing back into championship contention." Celtics officials confirmed the team wants to sign Detroit free agent forward M.L. Carr, who is making the NBA rounds in search of contract bids.

When negotiations began April 10, Woolf's version of that was more than $1 million per year. He later slashed the proposal to $700,000 and the Celtics — after Mangurian intervened — hiked their offer from $500,000.

Babe Ruth

Aaction Movers 13, Pepsi-Cola 5

Aaction Movers rolled to a 13-5 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the Babe Ruth League Friday night.

Aaction boosted its record to 3-4 with the win, while Pepsi fell to 2-4.

Aaction got all it needed in the first inning, scoring six times. Jeff Wilson reached on an error and Donnie Daughtridge walked. Bill Kittrell then cracked a three-run homer. Scott Wilson got it going again with a single and Chris Joyner singled. Rudy Stalls got a two-out hit to score Wilson, and stole second. An error let Joyner score and another brought in Stalls.

Aaction went on to score four more in the fourth and three in the fifth.

Pepsi got its first two in the third. Mike Holloman walked and Lance Searl reached on an error. Both were sacrificed up, and scored on a double by Ricky Owens. The other three runs came in the fifth.

Owens got two of the four hits allowed by Daughtridge by Pepsi. Kittrell led the Aaction hitting with three, while Stalls had two.

Planters Bank 7, Home Builders 6

League-leading Planters Bank rallied for four seventh inning runs to squeeze out a 7-6 win over Home Builders and remain unbeaten in the Babe Ruth League Friday night.

Planters is now 7-0, while the Builders fall to 4-3.

The Builders scored first, getting a run in the first. Scott Galloway singled and Curtis Evans got a hit. Lloyd Jackson reached on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. Danny Woods reached on an error, scoring Galloway.

After the Builders scored two more in the second, Planters got its first run in the bottom of the second. Chip Cayton walked and moved up on an error that let him take third. Another misplay brought him in.

Planters got its second run in the third, then fell behind 6-2 as the Builders added three more in the fourth. Planters cut it to 6-3 with a run in the fifth.

Then, in the seventh, Planters came back with four to win it. Marty Radford walked and Jim Whitehurst's grounder was errored at second, leaving both runners safe. Mont Carter hit into a fielder's choice that got Whitehurst at second. Carter then stole second and Gordon Douglas walked. Crowell Pope cracked a three-run triple that tied the score at 6-6, and a sacrifice by Mike Pope with the game-winning run.

Galloway and Tony Burroughs led the Builders with three hits each, while Evans added two. Pope had three and Douglas two for Planters.

Little League

Lions 5, Union Carbide 2

The Lions gained a 5-2 win over Union Carbide in the North State Little League Friday and began their countdown towards another championship.

The win boosted the Lion record to 9-1, while Union Carbide dropped to 3-7. Union Carbide and Coca-Cola were both eliminated from the title picture with the Lion win.

The Lions scored twice in the first inning. Patrick Rand doubled and moved up on an error. Tony Taylor reached on an error, scoring Rand. Taylor moved up on an out, took third on William Ward's hit and scored on a wild pitch.

Two more came over in the second. Lindsey Grimes reached on an error and moved up on a passed ball. He scored on Jimmy Bryant's single. Bryant advanced on an out and a wild pitch, scoring on Rand's single.

The other Lion run came in the third.

Union Carbide got its first run in the third. Billy Overton walked, as did Chris Stokes, Jeff Howard and Frederick Hurt, bringing in the run.

The other run came in the fifth.

Rand and Grimes each had two hits for the Lions, while Steve Rhodes got the lone hit off Rand, that coming in the fifth inning, spoiling the no-hit bid.

Big Value Drugs 14, Pepsi-Cola 2

Big Value Drugs romped to a 14-2 win over Pepsi-Cola in the Tar Heel Little League Friday.

The win left Big Value in first place with an 8-2 record, while Pepsi dropped to 5-5.

Big Value got all it needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Eric Jarman reached on an error and Steve Wall singled. Sterling Edwards also got a hit, scoring Jarman and Wall. Les Turner reached on an error, and Kevin Lang singled to score Edwards. Turner scored on an error on the play.

Big Value added nine in the second, with Turner hitting a two-run homer. The other run came in the fifth.

Pepsi got the first of its two in the second. Lee Cox walked and moved up on a passed ball. Two wild pitches brought him around. The other run came in the fourth.

Pepsi got only two hits off Lang, who went all the way for the win. Lang also led the hitting with four, while Wall had three, and Jarman and Matt Saieed each had two.

Stargell Gets Pirates Going As He Comes Alive With Homer

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The Pittsburgh Pirates were only playing dead Friday night — until they resurrected Willie Stargell.

The Pirates were trailing San Francisco 2-0 in the bottom of the eighth inning and, with two outs, managed only their third hit off John Curtis when Omar Moreno singled.

"I was laying over in the corner of the dugout, half-dead. They took the lid off my coffin and pulled me out," he joked.

As he strode to the on-deck circle to bat for Dale Berra, 21,238 fans cheered wildly.

"I still respond. It's a wonderful feeling," said Stargell. "You're sitting on the bench, you're stiff, you haven't been in the tempo of the game. But when that happens, automatically it starts opening up pores. You get the adrenalin going."

But his 11th home run of the season only tied it 2-2...for maybe a minute. Dave Parker followed with his 12th homer, also off Curtis, and the Pirates had a 3-2 victory over the Giants.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers ripped the Chicago Cubs 11-4 in a rain-shortened 6½-inning afternoon game, the Atlanta Braves beat the Philadelphia Phillies 11-5 in 10 innings, the San Diego Padres edged the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 also in 10 innings, the Cincinnati Reds shaded the Montreal Expos 3-2 and the Houston Astros blanked the New York Mets 5-0.

Dodgers 11, Cubs 4

Steve Garvey's homer and Ron Cey's homer against Chicago weren't real surprises. But even Dave Lopes was taken aback by his blast. It was, after all, his 15th of the year — tops on the Dodgers and just two below his best for a season. The Dodgers got two runs in the first inning on Garvey's 11th homer. Jerry Martin's two-run single tied it in the bottom of the first and the Cubs went ahead in the second on RBI-singles by Ivan DeJesus and Ted Sizemore.

Lopes led off the third with his 15th homer before Cey belted his 10th homer, a two-run shot, to put the Dodgers ahead to stay.

Braves 11, Phillies 5

Atlanta's Biff Pocoroba hit a two-run double to launch a six-run burst in the 10th inning and bury the Phillies.

Jeff Burroughs was safe when Pete Rose, back at third base, made a throwing error. Joe Nolan was hit by a pitch and Mike Lum walked before Pocoroba doubled down the right-field line.

RBI singles by Jerry Royster and Gary Matthews and Bob Horner's third RBI of the game, a sacrifice fly, drove in the other runs.

Padres 8, Cardinals 7

Darold Knowles couldn't do much of anything right on the mound for St. Louis in the 10th inning. He gave up Barry Evans' single and dropped Bill Almon's sacrifice bunt for one error. After Fernando Gonzalez forced Evans at third, Knowles tried to pick Gonzalez off first, threw the ball into right field and Almon scored from second.

Rollie Fingers got the victory despite giving up three ninth-inning runs that allowed the Cardinals to tie it.

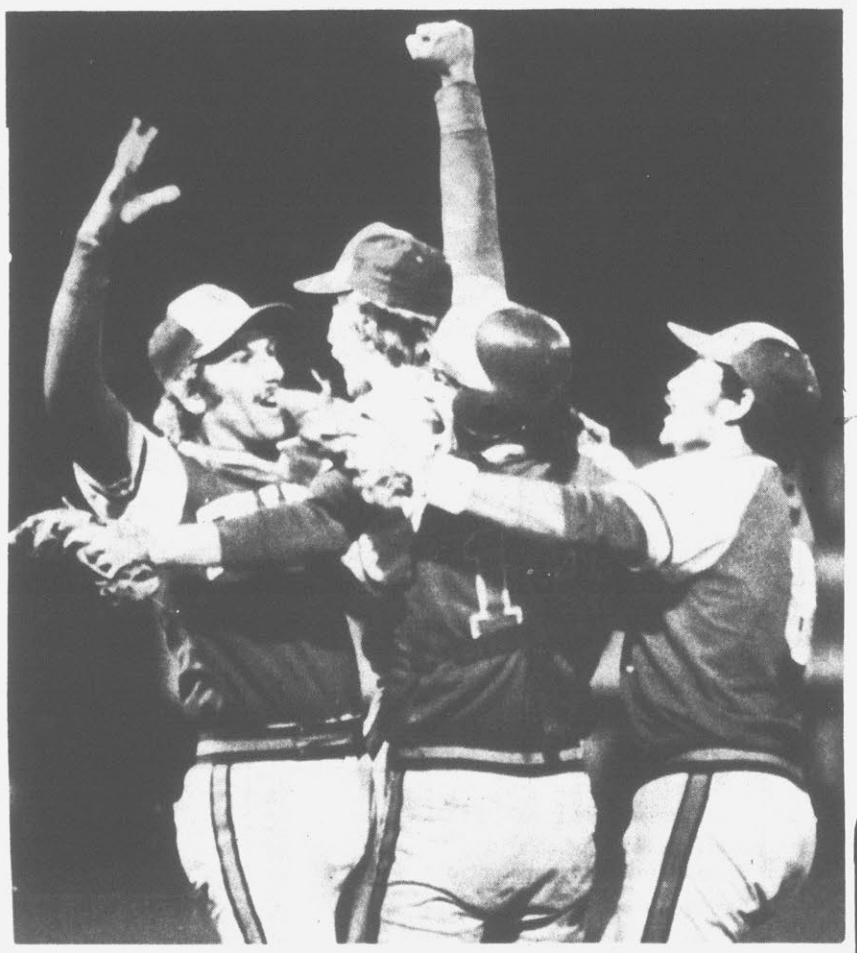

Reds 3, Expos 2

Dan Driessen drove in two runs with a grounder and his 11th homer of the year to back the seven-hitter by unbeaten Cincinnati pitcher Mike LaCoss.

LaCoss, who has won seven games, lowered his earned-run average to 2.36 — tops among NL starters.

Astros 5, Mets 0

Joe Niekro scattered four hits for his eighth consecutive victory, tying a club record, as Houston defeated the Mets. It was Niekro's fourth shutout and sixth complete game this year and the Astros' 11th victory in their last 13 games. Pat Zachry, who has won five, absorbed his first loss of the year for the Mets.

NCAA Champions

Fullerton State Is New Baseball Champ

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — As Fullerton State and Arkansas lined up for the championship game of the 33rd College World Series Friday night, the last thing anybody expected was a pitchers' duel.

Both teams were hitting well over .300 for the series and only two nights earlier, Fullerton had beaten Arkansas 13-10 in a 27-hit, five-home run slugfest.

So what happened? Fullerton's Dave Weatherman pitched a four-hitter and Steve Krueger of Arkansas allowed only five hits. Weatherman won the duel as Fullerton prevailed 2-1 for its first national collegiate baseball title.

"Finally, pitching does have to win," said Fullerton Coach Augie Garrido, whose team reached the series on the strength of its hitting. "I didn't know if we would get it, but I was hoping we would because we needed it.

What Fullerton had was a sharp pitcher who had lasted only one-third of an inning in an 8-5 victory over Pepperdine the previous night. Weatherman (15-2) struck out four and walked three as he checked a team that had been hitting .345 in the series.

These three anglers, Raeford Kennedy, Tony Day and Larry Vincent, caught these weakfish (or gray trout) when they visited Ocracoke recently. They fished off Portsmouth Island in Wallace Channel.

Freeman In Star Game

Quarterback Donald Freeman, who led Farmville Central to the state 3-A semifinals last season, is the only area player to be chosen for the North Carolina Jaycees' Boys Home Football game.

The 6-1, 170-pound Freeman will be one of three quarterbacks for the South squad, which will be coached by Ray Durham of Jacksonville. A total of 66 North Carolina high school seniors were picked for the game, to be held July 14 in Raleigh's Carter Stadium.

A two-year starter for the Jaguars, Freeman took his team to the state playoffs both seasons. Last year, he led the Eastern Carolina Conference in passing with a 58 per cent completion rate and 1,264 yards gained. He was intercepted only three times out of 120 attempted passes during the regular season.

Freeman threw for 12 touchdowns during the season and scored 10 himself. The Jaguars have not lost a conference game for the past three seasons.

THE MATTAMUSKEET NATIONAL Wildlife Refuge will be open for public duck hunting during the 1979-80 hunting season, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service has announced. Refuge Manager Steve Frick said there have been some changes in the original proposal, but a limited duck hunt is scheduled this fall.

The hunt this year will be conducted during the entire early season and the first three weeks of the regular duck season, Frick said. Specific dates will be announced after the state duck season dates have been set by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

Hunters will operate from 15 blinds constructed along three miles of Lake Mattamuskeet's shoreline. Hunts will be conducted four mornings (Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday) each week and hunters will be chosen by a lottery system, open to anyone who wishes to apply.

All hunt applications will be put in a box and drawn at random. Hunters whose names are drawn will be given their choice of a two-day period. If that choice is full, second and third choices will be taken. If all the dates are not filled, the drawn names will be returned to the box and drawn again, giving hunters a chance to be selected for more than one hunting period.

There will be a $10 fee per day for each blind which will entitle a maximum of three hunters the use of the blind plus two dozen decoys. Licensed hunting guides may assist in the hunt, but are not eligible to shoot unless drawn for the hunt through the lottery system.

Frick said if there are no problems with the hunt during the first year, the program will be expanded to include twenty blinds and the entire duck season next year. He added the hunt will be "tightly controlled and closely monitored to assure that a quality hunt is provided and that disturbance to non-hunted species in kept to a minimum."

ROCKY MOUNTAIN SPOTTED fever is a deadly disease and North Carolina has more reported cases and deaths from it than any other state. That's why those who spend time outdoors during the summer months should be careful to avoid ticks.

The disease is carried by the American dog tick and people can contract the virus only through the bite of an infected tick. The state had 204 reported cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in 1978 and six of those resulted in deaths. The disease is most prevalent in children, but most dangerous to adults over 40. It is estimated that about five per cent of dog ticks carry the disease.

Symptoms appear within two to 14 days following a bite. They start with a headache, fever, chills and aches and pains. A rash often breaks out around the wrists and ankles. If not treated, the fatality rate runs about 17 per cent and many of the survivors may die years later from organ damage caused by the disease. Even if caught early, the mortality rate runs about five per cent.

It takes about six hours for a tick to transmit the virus to humans, so a person should remove any ticks from his body immediately and note the day the bite occurred. If any of the symptoms occur within two to 14 days following the bite, treatment should be sought immediately.

To prevent infection, persons outdoors should check their body for ticks several times a day, especially arms, legs groin area and hair. If a tick is found grasp firmly with tweezers or a paper towel and slowly pull it out. If mouth parts break off in the wound, dig them out with a sterilized needle. The mouth parts can't transmit the disease, but can cause an infection.

Many common insect repellents work against ticks and since ticks tend to crawl upwards, it's a good idea to tuck clothes in to eliminate bare skin. Pets should also be checked regularly for ticks. A flea-tick collar can help.

Jazz Blessed, Told To Move

CHICAGO (AP) — The New Orleans Jazz, contending it can't get some prime dates in the Superdome, has been given the go-ahead by the National Basketball Association's 21 owners to move to the 13,200-seat Salt Palace Arena in Salt Lake City.

The move, however, could be the subject of court action.

Unanimous approval Friday by the NBA Board of Governors followed a recommendation in favor of the move from the board's advisory committee, Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien said.

O'Brien said the Utah franchise would be put in the league's Midwest Division, with the Indiana Pacers shifting to the Central Division.

O'Brien refused to discuss what position the NBA would take regarding the threat of suite resulting from the move. He said the matter "would be left to the league's counsel."

Sam Battistone, one of the New Orleans franchise's majority owners, added: "Court suits are things that happen on a daily basis. Suits are filed for many different situations, and we have a large group of attorneys to handle the situation."

Bill Curl, a spokesman for the Louisiana Superdome, said Thursday in New Orleans that suits might be filed by the Hyatt Management Corp.; the state of Louisiana, which owns the Superdome; the city of New Orleans; the team's ticket outlet; its television and radio network, and "perhaps a class action suit by the fans themselves."

O'Brien said the move was made because "it was no longer possible to strike a deal" that would keep the Jazz in New Orleans.

He said New Orleans now would be entered in a pool of cities under consideration for one of the league's two franchises expected to be named by the 1980-81 league season.

Barbara J. DeVoss, general manager of the new Carolina East Mall, will be the guest speaker at a Coffee Talk, June 12, 7:32 a.m., at the Holiday Inn.

The Coffee Talk, which will be sponsored by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Coffee Hour Task Force and Jack S. Warren and Ed N. Warren Enterprises, will allow chamber members and citizens to meet Ms. DeVoss and learn more about the new mall.

According to Maxine Brown, chairman of the Coffee Hour Task Force, Ms. DeVoss will discuss, ""What's Happening in Greenville on August 1, 1979?"

A native of Muleshoe, Texas, Ms. Devoss has completed various University courses sponsored by the International Council of Shopping Centers and holds the coveted designation of "Certified Shopping Center Manager," a degree granted by the International Council of Shopping Centers after having passed an extensive examination.

Curb Elevator Elevation

FARMINGTON, Conn. (UPI) — The computer age has almost eliminated the sinking feeling that used to be part of some elevator rides, say service experts for one manufacturer, the Otis Elevator Co. The computer monitoring system they use to check and adjust the firm's units also eliminates excessive or under-acceleration that can produce the "amusement park ride" effect.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Meadowside

Quadrants Mark Unique Bi-Level

By Jerry Bishop

With each level divided into quadrants for the ultimate zoning efficiency, the Meadowside, a three bedroom and den design, achieves a unique appearance and guarantees privacy.

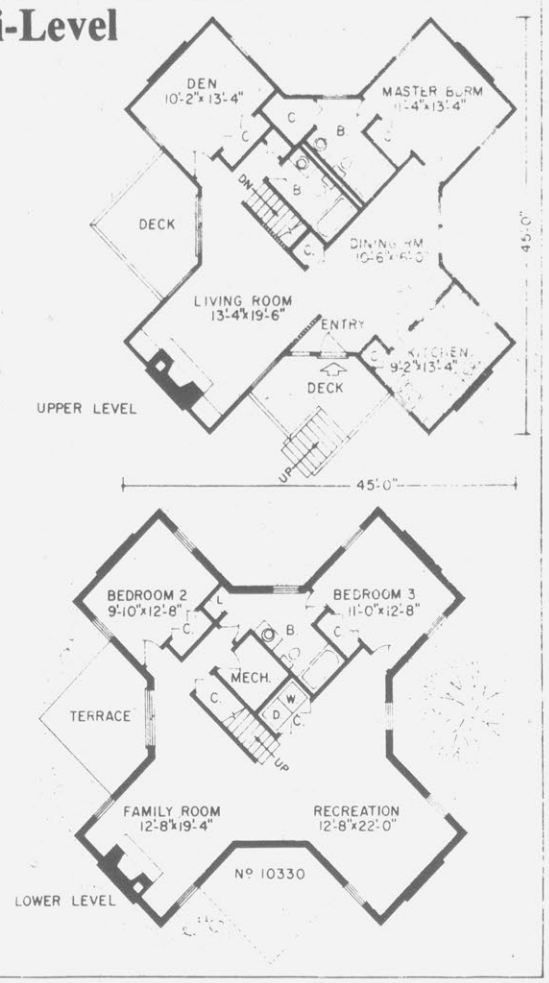

Living areas, service areas, and bedrooms are nestled in individual sections of the floor plan, and the result is a design that handles entertaining and everyday activities with equal ease. In all, eight totally separate areas make up the home.

The exterior of the multi-winged plan uses vertical siding accented with decks. Entry is up steps, onto the deck, and into the upper level. Living room at left and dining room at right are both comfortably large. For family and guests, the living room welcomes with a wood-burning fireplace. The sizable den, which may be used as a fourth bedroom or family room, is equally close to sliding glass doors to a second deck.

It's dining made simple with the combination kitchen/snack bar/dining area. For formal occasions, the kitchen can be closed off from the dining area. Counter space is abundant, and the storage closet is a useful feature.

Completing the upper level is the master bedroom, with double closets and private bath. Two more bedrooms, separated by bath and linen closet, enjoy a private world on the lower level.

Low Tech, High Style Home Decorating At Low Prices

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Designer Leslie Linsley is addicted to secondhand stores and junkyards the way some women are to dress shops.

She can't pass one by. Ms. Linsley reacts the same way to military surplus stores, garage and tag sales, hardware stores, lumberyards and suppliers of plumbing, industrial, restaurant and pharmaceutical equipment.

What most other people regard as either worthless junk or institutional products, she turns into attractive and unusual home furnishings and accessories. They are also cheap.

"Some people call it 'low tech,'" she said in an interview, a reference to the current vogue for "high tech" — industrial furniture and furnishings in the home.

Most of the projects in Ms. Linsley's 15th crafts book, "Army-Navy Surplus" (Dell paperback $7.95) cost less than $10 to make, sometimes a lot less.

She said she paid $1 for a baker's five-loaf steel bread pan at a sale of used restaurant supplies. After cleaning it up, she spray-painted it bright red and marked each pan with press-on letters from an art supply house. She uses it in her Nantucket, Mass., kitchen to hold table knives, forks, spoons, napkins and miscellaneous articles.

She uses an old French map case she bought in an army-navy store in San Francisco as a purse.

Army-navy stores sell cooking equipment for a fraction of the cost of department stores and specialty shops, she said.

Not that she uses them to cook in. Smaller pans become ash trays or serving dishes. Spray-painted, the kidney-shaped field cup from a mess kit becomes a vase or a handy holder for cosmetics, toothbrushes and toothpaste.

"A brushed aluminum paint bucket makes a good ice bucket," she said, and when it frosts up, that adds to its charm. To make ice last longer in it, she suggests a cheap plastic foam ice bucket as a liner.

"We're very visually oriented," Ms. Linsley said of herself and her husband, Jon Aron, a designer and photographer.

"This is our way of living, using space creatively without spending a lot of money. We often can't afford what we want to buy.

"I think today people will spend money on a comfortable couch but they might not spend money on accessories — ash trays, a candy dish, a fruit bowl.

It's a lot cheaper, she said, to spray paint the kind factories buy. She said sources can be located by consulting industrial catalogs in your local library.

Suppliers are surprisingly nice to deal with, she said. "They're fascinated by someone walking in off the street (to buy their merchandise.)

"Hardware and plumbing supply houses have wonderful hooks that do a better job than decorative hooks."

If the gasoline shortage puts a crimp in her weekend drives to find objects to make over, she can always look in her own kitchen drawers. The last time she did that, she found two giant, spring-operated tension hooks, the kind used to fasten tennis nets to poles.

She put them together end-to-end to make a hanger for a planter — a yellow plastic paint bucket that cost about $1.25.

Redevelopment Meet Monday

The Redevelopment Commission will hold its regular June meeting on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at its 1103 Broad Street central offices.

Commissioners will consider progress reports concerning finance, land acquisition, disposition, demolition and relocation in the various urban renewal and Community Development areas.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Every once in a while, the double tubs in our basement get several inches of water in them even though the faucets haven't been turned on for days. This water seems to be backing up from the two drains in the tubs. At first, I put a chemical drainer in the tub, but this didn't do any good. I also tried using the rubber plunger, again without results. I even cleaned out the traps at the bottom. No matter what I do, the water stays in the tubs for several hours then drains away. I know the backing up isn't coming from a cesspool or septic tank because we are connected to a regular sewer. What can be causing this?

A. — It is almost certain that your main soil line leading to the sewer is clogged just enough so that the water goes through it under ordinary conditions but backs up when too much water is sent into it at one time. You are going to need professional help to unclog it — either a plumber or a company that specializes in that type of work.

Q. — I saw an explanation some time ago of what is meant by a performance code in regard to the construction of houses, but lost the clipping. Can you explain it to me?

A. — For many years, building codes specified exactly what maerials could be used in construction work. This prevented the use of new materials. As more and more builders and engineers complained, states began to change their codes to permit the use of a wide variety of materials provided they could pass certain performance tests. In other words, if a material can do the job, it can be used. State inspectors check the product, both at the factory and at the site of construction. Unfortunately, some states still haven't changed the old codes.

Q. — A few years ago I put down vinyl tiles on a floor that had been covered with sheets of hardboard underlayment. It looked swell, but after it had been walked on a couple of weeks, some of the adhesive began to ooze up at the joints. I have to do a similar job now. How can I avoid the trouble I had last time?

A. — There are two general causes for this. One is the application of too much cement. Using a notched spreader can help prevent this. The other is sliding the tiles into place. Instead, lay each tile in place without any sliding motion.

(Complete instructions and drawings for installing floor tiles are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Resilient Floor Tiles," which can be obtained by sending 35 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A rake with adjustable prongs for different purposes.

Manufacturer's claim — That this rake can be adjusted to perform garden tasks usually requiring three different rakes ... that, when fully open, it is ideal for sweeping up leaves and debris ... that, in a half-open position, it is excellent for flower and vegetable garden work and weeding, as well as for tending shrubs or collecting grass clippings ... that, when the prongs are shut still further, the rake is perfect for raking gravel, driveway stones and lawn thatch ... and that, in the latter position, the rake can be taken indoors and used to fluff up shag carpeting.

THE PRODUCT — A solar-energy pool cover.

Manufacturer's claim — That this cover is designed to trap the sun's rays to help warm a swimming poool ... that the cover retards heat and chemical evaporation and keeps water up to 15 degrees warmer than water in an uncovered pool ... that ultra-violet stablizers are built into the material to keep the solar cover clear and allow more sunlight to enter the pool ... that the 16-by 32-foot-size cover weighs only about 20 pounds ... and that it can be installed easily without any special tools.

THE PRODUCT — A thermal window shade.

Manufacturer's claim — That this shade acts as an insulating shield to stop heat leakage through the window ... that it consists of a five-layer sandwich of polyester fiberfill, aluminized plastic film and a covering of off-white polyester ... that the layers are quilted by ultrasonic stitching instead of thread to bind the layers without piercing them, which would permit air to escape... that it is easy to install and can be used at night and, if desired, rolled up during the day.

THE PRODUCT — A snap-off knive.

Manufacturerer's claim — That this knife contains 11 cutting points on a blade that will not slip ... that a new point is made ready, when required, by extending the blade to a scored line and snapping off the used portion with a simple blade-breaking device ... and that the slim knife body is lightweight, rust-resistant and handles like a pencil for fine cutting of artwork, silk screening, wall paper, model-making, etc.

(For Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," send $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Helmet Drive By Foundation

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Motorcycle Safety Foundation wants states to launch a safety education campaign to help increase the use of helmets by riders. The foundation's president says the organization thinks voluntary use is preferable to the "pass a law and every thing will be all right" philosophy. Dr. Charles H. Hartman said a study by the University of Illinois showed 55.3 percent of the riders interviewed wore helmets always or most of the time.

Tico Times - Crusader

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — The Tico Times is a pushover for a cause.

The English-language weekly newspaper has crusaded for everything from saving endangered turtles to exporting fugitive financier Robert Vesco. It usually wins.

It was the first business in this sunny Central American democracy to have its own blood drive. "People would come in the office to place a classified ad and we'd grab 'em and say: 'Your money or your blood,'" says editor Dery Dyer, the 30-year-old daughter of publisher Richard Dyer. "We had a great time, served cookies and beer, had people fainting all over the place. But we got a lot of donors."

Its readers happily contribute to the country's zoo, an annual Christmas party for poor children, and the fledgling Animal Protection Society.

The Tico Times — Costa Ricans call themselves Ticos — is feisty and irreverent. Its 6,500 readers — half of them in 52 other countries and all 50 American states — devour its tabloid pages and flood the office with letters.

The newspaper, headquartered in a cheerful, cluttered old frame house in the heart of this Latin capital, also "safeguards the public welfare."

That's a high-falutin' phrase for a publication that staff members jokingly call "a rinky-dink rag." It is a valid one, coined by the Supreme Court of Costa Rica when it vindicated the Tico Times in libel action brought by a land developer.

The lawsuit by Czech-born naturalized Canadian Josef Slyomovics stemmed from a series of 1977 articles about his alleged debts and a coastal tourist development.

Costa Rica has no press censorship but does have a 1902 statute making conviction for libel or slander punishable by a jail term and a fine. Slyomovics asked the court to sentence reporter Stephen Schmidt and publisher Dyer to 120 days in jail, and sought hefty damages.

All cases involving the country's press are heard by the supreme court, in one trial with no appeal. The Tico Times' day in court was Jan. 25, 1978.

Defense attorney Joaquin Vargas Gene, himself a local newspaper publisher, argued before the three magistrates that "What will be decided here is whether or not the national press can report without fear on dubious business activities ..."

In less than 24 hours the judges ruled: "The press has the duty to inform the public on all matters of general interest ... it is its obligation to make these facts known ..."

Not only did it find Dyer and Schmidt innocent, it charged Costa Rica's press with the obligation — and guaranteed it the right — to print the news. In Latin America, such journalistic liberty is rare.

"The decision," said Guido Fernandez, publisher of the nation's largest circulation daily, La Nacion, and president of the Freedom of the Press Committee of the Inter-American Press Association, "establishes a very important legal precedent in that it presumes the good faith of a professional news report, and at the same time it stimulates investigative reporting, a field in which the Tico Times sets an excellent example."

The Tico Times was born May 18, 1956. Its first editorial described it as non-profit with no salaried employees, but "Any young person who knows English and is interested in learning.. .come aboard."

It was the first English-language newspaper in Central America, and dozens of kids flocked to it. In 1960, the paper suspended publication when the Dyers moved to Chile, but after the death of Mrs. Dyer in 1971, Dery and her father decided to resurrect it.

The Tico Times reappeared Feb. 4, 1972, and has been growing ever since, although no one can say exactly how it came to have such a large overseas readership.

"We've got subscribers in Andorra, Afghanistan, Alaska, Saudi Arabia, and I think there's even one in China," says Judie Faerron, 28, who's been with the paper for seven years.

The paper now has 13 full-time staffers and 13 contributing columnists and parttime employees, and an office cat, Beanbag, who lives in the bathtub.

"I think what makes the Tico Times special is that it has heart," says Dery. "We're a little paper trying to do the best we can for the community and the country. We also have a good time."

Auctioning Off Gacy Property

ST. CHARLES, Ill. (AP) — A car, van, pickup truck and household goods belonging to John W. Gacy Jr., accused of killing 33 young men and boys, will be auctioned June 17 in St. Charles to help pay his legal fees, according to his attorney.

Gacy, 37, was arrested last December after police linked him to a missing 15-year-old Des Plaines boy, Robert Piest. After his arrest, Gacy reportedly told police he had killed 32 males after having sex with them, often against their will. Cook County sheriff's investigators later found the remains of 29 men on Gacy's property in an unicorporated area in Norwood Park Township.

No More Nazi Symbol

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's largest toy maker has agreed to stop producing toys with Nazi markings, the American Jewish Congress says.

The group had threatened to raise the issue at next week's annual meeting of Mattel, Inc., of Hawthorne, Calif., Julius Schatz, director of the Congress' Commission on Jewish Life and Culture, said Thursday. The drive against Mattel was launched in January 1978, and the company agreed last week to discontinue the use of the Nazi swastika on war toys, Schatz added.

Army Office Found Guilty

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — An Army major was found guilty Friday of marijuana sales on post. The 19-year veteran was sentenced to three years confinement at hard labor, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, and dismissal from service.

The dismissal of a commissioned officer from service carries the same stigma and loss of privileges as does a dishonorable discharge for an enlisted man.

The defendant, Maj. Sequoyah E. Trueblood, also faces trial in civilian courts on multiple charges of conspiracy and possession, and sale and delivery of cocaine.

Wants Smuggling Report

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt ordered the N.C. Department of Revenue Friday to find ways to use North Carolina laws and tax regulations to stymie cigarette smugglers.

Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, said the governor told Revenue Secretary Mark G. Lynch, "Given the resources we have, what can the Department of Revenue do to move against cigarette smuggling? That's the beginning point, that's where we start."

Hunt told Lynch he wants a report by Monday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States once prided itself on its own advanced mass urban transport systems. Now the nation's capital is starting to put into service 43 new German buses and will soon place an order for 96 Italian subway cars.

The diesel-powered, air-conditioned, double length buses are 55 feet long and are built to be flexible in the middle so they While in use in some other countries for years, they draw curious looks from pedestrians and motorists here.

"Some passengers are letting the old buses go by to get a ride on the new ones," said Marilyn Dicus, speaking for Metro, the transport system owned by the city of Washington and nearby local governments.

The buses originate with the Maschinenfabrik Augsburg—Nuernburg A.G.,of Augsburg, West Germany, better known by the initials M.A.N. which appear prominently on the side of each bus. They are among 298 bought by a group of 10 American cities, including Los Angeles and San Francisco, at a cost of $173,500 each.

They were made in part by an American firm, AM General Corporation, and assembled at South Bend, Ind.

When the German buses were first being considered in 1975, Rep. William M. Brodhead, D-Mich., wrote to Frank C. Herringer, administrator of the U.S. Urban Mass Transport Administration:

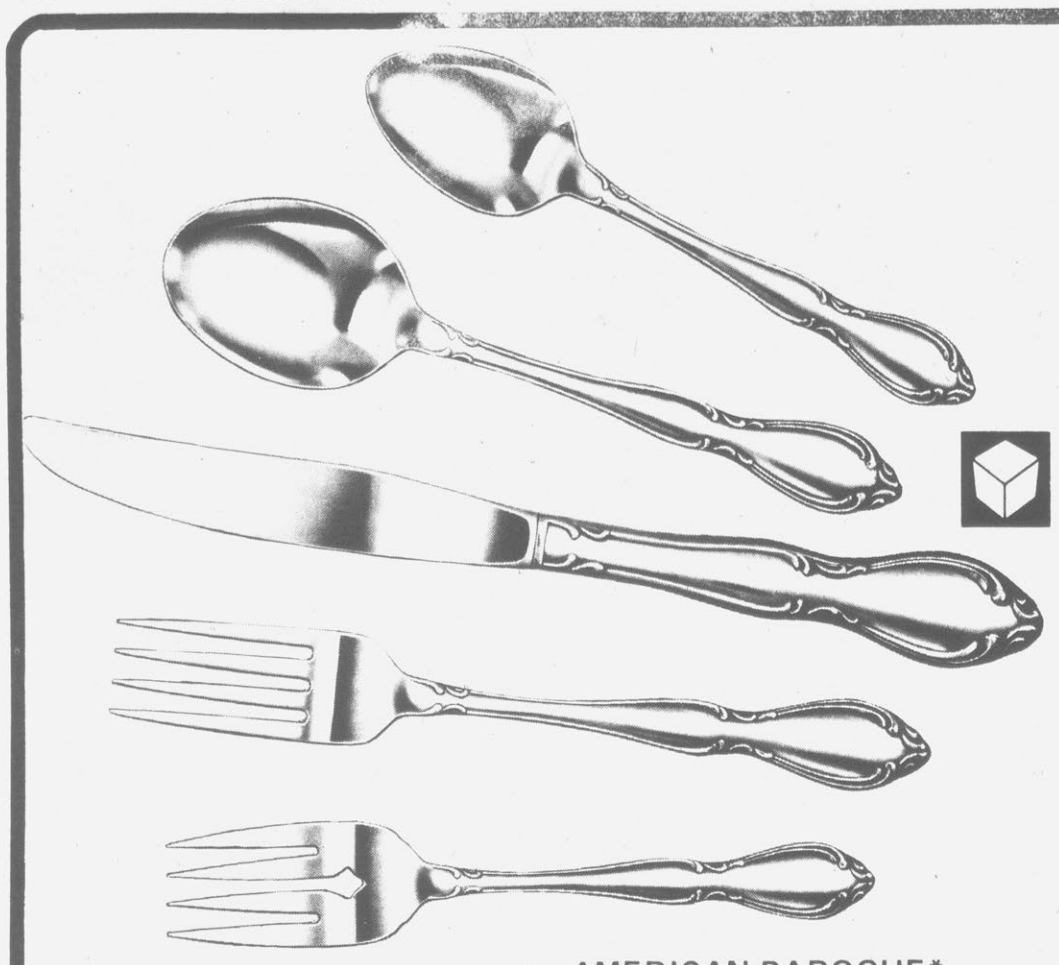

"It is demonstrative of a callous disregard for the welfare of American workers to be using their tax money to purchase foreign buses while these same workers are standing in the unemployment line."

But the German firm made the low bid and got the order.

Brodhead's staff showed no concern about the prospective order for the Italian subway cars. "There's no local interest at stake," explained Phill Jourdan, the Detroit congressman's spokesman.

The cars for Washington's rapidly expanding subway, which opened only three years ago, probably will be ordered from Breda Costruzioni Ferroviarie of Pistoia, Italy. It offered to furnish them within two years for $76.4 million.

Under a law passed last year, more than 50 percent of the construction must take place in the United States.

New Loan To Soul City?

SOUL CITY, N.C. (AP) — A government task force studying Soul City will recommend in the near future whether the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development should guarantee another multi-million-dollar loan to the project.

HUD has guaranteed $10 million in loans since 1974 to The Soul City Co., a partnership headed by former civil rights leader Floyd B. McKissick. If the company fails to repay them, HUD must assume responsibility for the loans.

Sen. Jesse A. Helms, R-N.C., wrote HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris on May 17 asking whether HUD indended to issue an additional $4 million in loan guarantees to Soul City.

Joan Little To New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Little has come to New York to start a new life, far from the state where she was championed by feminists as a defendant in a murder trial which attracted worldwide attention.

Miss Little was released on parole Friday from the North Carolina Correction Center for Women in Raleigh, and she immediately flew here to start work with a law firm this week.

Phillip Brown, a spokesman for the North Carolina Board of Paroles, said Miss Little would live with a Queens family and would work as a file clerk, but refused to identify the family or the firm.

Eastern N.C. Rail Lines To Get Public Subsidies

ARAPAHOE, N.C. (AP) — Ailing independent rail lines will receive public subsidies, thanks to action taken Friday by the State Transportation Board.

The board adopted North Carolina's first comprehensive rail plan, which included a recommendation to provide the subdidies

Transportation Secretary Thomas W. Bradshaw said the plan "represents the state's first assessment of its rail freight system. The purpose ... is to obtain federal funding for projects that will help maintain or improve rail service on small, light-density freight lines that are considered vital to the economic well-being of small communities."

Eight lines were considered for funding. Four of the eight, all of which were considered prime candidates for abandonment because of deficits and overdue improvements, were in Eastern North Carolina.

These were Warrenton Railroad, a three-mile independent shortline linking Warrenton and Warren Plains in Warren County, recommended for $197,339 in assistance; Scotland Neck to Parmele branch lines of Seaboard Coastline Railroad, 24.3 miles in Halifax and Martin counties, recommended for $365,067 in assistance; Spring Hope to Bunn branch line of Seaboard Coastline Railroad, 8.55 miles in Nash and Franklin counties; and Tuniss to the Virginia border branch of Seaboard, 16 miles in Gates and Hertford counties.

No financial recommendation was made for the latter two lines. All funding would be 80 percent federal, 10 percent local, and 10 percent state.

Sentenced To 114 Years

MIAMI (AP) — Her head down and her face expressionless, 13-year-old Eve Postell listened as the judge read her sentence: 114 years in prison.

Circuit Court Judge Jon I. Gordon said Friday he will retain veto power over parole decisions for 38 years. That means Miss Postell may not get out of prison before she is 51.

She and four other teen-agers aged 12 to 17, all of Miami, were charged with kicking and beating 85-year-old Ralph Germano while robbing his home in February. He died a month later.

Small Harvest In USSR Grain

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union appears in for a much smaller grain harvest this year after a record crop in 1978, says the Agriculture Department.

Production in the Soviet Union and in other major grain areas of the world has a major bearing on U.S. grain exports, the prices American farmers get for their crops and, ultimately, the cost of food to American consumers.

Bull Market For Smaller Stocks

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a bull market on Wall Street that has been running, almost without interruption, for 4½ years.

To the many investors who own shares of big-name blue chip stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange, that statement may sound like an unfunny joke. Prices of most of those issues are depressed, showing only mixed results so far this year after declining in 1977 and 1978.

But the 1,100 or so smaller stocks traded at the American Stock Exchange, just a couple of blocks west of the Big Board in the financial district, are behaving in a much different fashion.

In the past week the Amex market value index jumped 6.28 to 194.28, hitting record highs daily before pulling back a bit on Friday.

The index has more than tripled since the end of 1974, when it stood at 60.32.

By contrast, the Dow Jones industrial average's weekly gain of 13.94 to 835.15 left it far below its 1973 peak of 1,051.70.

The upsurge at the Amex still has a way to go to match the buying spree that swept the junior exchange in the late 1960s, before the "go-go" market of that era collapsed.

Trading volume on the Amex for 1979, which passed 400 million shares in the past week, is running behind the pace of 1968, when the full year's total was a record 1.44 billion.

And the aggregate market value of Amex stocks — $45.7 billion as of the end of April — is still well short of the peak of $59.21 billion at the end of 1968, when there were fewer issues listed on the exchange.

Analysts also noted that the latest market-value figure for all Amex stocks is matched by a single NYSE issue — International Business Machines.

Nevertheless, some of the statistics the Amex has piled up in the last few years are impressive. The market value index scored gains of 38 percent, 32 percent , 16 percent and 18 percent in the years 1975 through 1978, and in the first five months of this year climbed another 24 percent.

A recent tabulation of individual Amex issues turned up 36 that had doubled or more since the start of 1979, against only three that had fallen by a half or more.

Analysts have given much of the credit for the prolonged rise on the Amex to a revival of investor interest in smaller companies.

Recently, it has picked up new impetus from another direction — a wave of enthusiasm for independent energy companies.

As of late last week Juniper Petroleum was trading at 9, up 6½ for the year; Howell Corp. at 24½, up 16¾; Crown Central Petroleum at 80⅛, up 53⅞; Great Basins Petroleum at 11¾, up 6⅞, and Canadian Homestead Oils, up 8½ at 16¼.

Will the "Amex bull market" continue? The question can't be answered absolutely, of course, but some analysts argue that at least a temporary pause is due.

Moodymobile Developers Split

OAK HILL, Fla. (AP) — The two developers of a super-saver engine for use in what's been dubbed the "Moodymobile" are going their separate ways — and apparently plan to market two different engines.

Mike Shetley says he will "build my own engine" and put it into Mercury Capri automobiles after it receives certification from the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Ralph Moody says he is continuing his work on the ShetleyMoody team's modified Perkins diesel engine.

But Moody — who dissolved his partnership with Shetley on Thursday — declined comment on whether he and his financial backers will sell the rights to their engine to a major car manufacturer or go into production themselves.

DC-10 Grounding Hurts Military

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The recent grounding of civilian DC-10 planes is handicapping the Military Airlift Command, the airlift commander said Friday.

Gen. William G. Moore Jr., MAC commander, said during a tour at Pope Air Force Base that the situation is not likely to get much better until the late 1980s.

The grounding of the DC-10 jets is hurting the command, Moore said, because the command has for years contracted for the use of the airplane for transport purposes.

Day Care Dilemma: Mother's Influence Lessened

EDITOR'S NOTE — With so many women in America working outside the home, who minds the kids? For pre-schoolers, the answer increasingly is day care centers. Here's what some experts have to say about the growing trend in child rearing.

By WENDY DRESKIN
For The Associated Press

"When my mommy went to work I cried and want my mommy. And then I went to day care." The speaker is a 3-year-old named Todd, one of the 6.5 million pre-schoolers in the United States today with working mothers.

Their mothers work because they are heads of household and need to support their families, or because they need to bolster their husbands' income. Or they work because they want to.

All of this means that someone must care for the children, and day care centers are mushrooming.

Many child psychologists, educators, pediatricans and even parents are becoming increasingly concerned about the effects of day care on the child.

Selma Fraiberg, a professor of child psychoanalysis at the University of Michigan, says that except under ideal conditions, a day care center cannot provide this relationship so essential to the child's intellectual and emotional development.

Even under good conditions, day care workers will not be equally fond of all children. And while they may feel affection for some, it is rare that any worker could love a child as much as the parent does.

Phyllis Levenstein, a professor at State University of New York at Stonybrook and director of the Verbal Interaction Project, recognizes this problem. "The kids in day care who are the hardest to deal with need the love the most," she says. Needless to say, problem children are rarely the favorites of overburdened day care workers.

When children are raised away from parental love there can be a retardation of development. "My conclusion, based on related research, is that the child may lose out intellectually and emotionally, and the mother will lose out emotionally," says Dr. Levenstein.

Dr. Levenstein also has investigated the importance of specific types of interaction between mother and child. Her research shows that "the degree to which mothers converse with their children has an influence on IQ, reading, arithmetic, and creativity."

Parents also influence their children's social development. Ms. Fraiberg writes in her recent book "Every Child's Birthright: In Defense of Mothering," that the potential for violence is greater among people who did not experience bonding in their early years. "Where there is no human attachment there can be no conscience," she says, adding that adults denied bonding form a large part of the criminal population. Seen this way, the issue of day care is not simply one which affects parents and children but one which may have an impact on the whole society.

Dr. Julius Segal believes that generativity (putting your child's interests ahead of your own) must be balanced with the recent "me first" trend. In his new book, "A Child's Journey," Dr. Segal says, "The mother's right to an independent life outside the home cannot be denied, but her search for that life without at the same time insuring her baby's security can be costly without measure."

Dr. Segal stresses that children do outgrow their anxieties about separation, and parents who are attuned to their children will recognize the time when they can tolerate separation without ill effects. Although he would not set an age, emphasizing that emotional development varies from child to child, other authorities believe a child is ready sometime between 3 and 5 years of age.

What can the mother of a young child do if she has to work? In the United States a few women work at home or take their children to jobs, but most feel trapped into sending their children to day care.

In many European countries it is different. There, a mother may choose to stay home with her baby until the child is 3, She receives a monthly check from the government. It is not welfare, and there are no strings attached. It is simply regarded as her right.

In Dr. Levenstein's study of hundreds of low income families, she found that many mothers wanted to stay home with their children. The idea of work as a source of self-fulfillment simply did not occur to these women who did not regard a factory job as a career. Dr. Levenstein feels strongly that "government should allocate its resources to give mothers the choice of staying home until a child is 3 with no strings attached, or of excellent day care. Also government should provide to parents information about the importance of bonding."

The Town & Country Senior Citizens Club

They're Active, Independent, Proud

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Town and Country Senior Citizens Club here is made up of 125 "very active members."

There are also 50 on an inactive list — and many more on a waiting list to get into the club.

"We have so many members," Mrs. Repsie Baker said, "that we ought to split, but nobody would want to be in the other group. We have so much fun in this one!"

Between 80 and 100 members attend every meeting, making the club one of the best-attended in Greenville. The lower age limit is 55; there is no upper limit, though the oldest active member at present is 90.

"We're sponsored by no one," the members say. "We're independent — very independent. We do what we want to when we want. We have by-laws, but when they get to cramping us, we bend 'em."

"For instance, we used to have a bylaw that a president could serve only two years. But we liked Sarah Ashton as president so much we changed that one."

"Sarah is the best president that could ever be," another member said. "She gets things done, and we love her."

Frances Dixon is vice president and program chairman. She is one of three in her family who belong to the club. Her mother, Mrs. Reppie Buck, is also a member, as is her sister, Lillian McDaniel. The group has everything from singing groups to city managers on their programs and welcome them all profusely.

"Our trips are what we like best," Secretary Louise Ward said. "Before the bus gets back to town from one, we're planning another one." Some trips taken by the club recently include a trip to the Planetarium in Chapel Hill at Easter, attendance of a performance of "The Nutcracker Suite" in Raleigh in December, and a day at Chinquapin Plantation near Reidsville. Trips to the North Carolina Zoo and Manteo are planned for the near future.

"All our activities are fun," member, Mary Robinette said. "We swim and play tennis and play shuffleboard and have marvelous meals — nothing catered, mind you. We cook our own and everything's delicious."

The club meets in the Parish House of St. Paul's Episcopal Church on the first and third Thursday of each month. Formed in 1961, it used to meet in a city-owned facility and be part of the city recreation program, but it withdrew when the Recreation Department began requiring the club's members who were out-of-city resident to pay a $25-a-year fee. "We were faced with losing some of our long-active members," Mrs. Ashton said, "and we just weren't going to allow that. We left the city program with some misgivings, but we haven't been sorry. We've had just as good a club since we became independent."

Mrs. Ruby Parkerson is the club's Sunshine Chairman. It is her job to send birthday, get well and sympathy cards on behalf of the club and to make a report at each meeting.

According to Alma Letchworth, treasurer, the club members pay no dues. A good-will collection is made at each meeting and this money is sufficient to meet expenses, plus provide a generous donation every so often to the church which provides the meeting place at no charge. Contributions are also made periodically to various causes which the group considers worthwhile.

"We're proud," Mrs. Ashton said, "that we're givers, not takers."

SUNSHINE REPORT. . . Ruby Parkerson gives the club an accounting of the greeting cards sent in the name of the club during the previous two weeks.

Accent On Living

Womanhood Is Being Redefined Today

EDITOR'S NOTE — She's better educated — college or a smattering of it — healthier, able to have a healthy child later in life than her forebears, able to decide when or if she'll have that child. Her ambitions outside the home, lately being realized, are formidable. But greatly enhanced freedom of choice has its psychic costs. This is the second of two articles on the changed and changing world of American women.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Today's young American woman, in her 20s and 30s, her child-bearing years, is redefining just what it means to be a woman.

She is, of course, the best educated, the healthiest, the most socially powerful female in American history. Thirty-three million strong, she is also the most active lobby of America's largest majority — women.

More than any of her predecessors, she is free to choose the goals of her life — marriage, children, career — and the timing, the depth of fidelity to each.

But all of that freedom — and some consider it less freedom than mandate — costs in deep and personal ways. No one woman can speak for all women, but through a series of interviews with experts and young women at this stage in life, strong themes emerge. And with the average educational level reaching into the college years, the freedom to choose tends to minimize the differences in social and economic levels.

A special demographic study of three generations of American women — commissioned by The Associated Press — charts just how much things have changed from grandmother's day to this demanding new world today's young woman has inherited.

Most things are "up" in her life. She has something better than a high school education, an advance of more than four years since her grandmother's day.

At birth, she could expect to live 77 years, 15 more than grandmother.

If she becomes pregnant, she has only a one in 7,000 chance of dying in childbirth; her grandmother had one chance in 205. Her newborn has only one chance in 70 of dying at birth, compared to one in 20 in grandmother's time.

These are not random statistics. They reflect and influence the way she lives, the way she decides who and what she will be.

She is marrying later, postponing babies, sometimes postponing marriage to the point of not marrying at all.

There is another statistic in her life:

A young woman in her 20s, marrying today, has a 40 percent chance of divorcing or being divorced.

All of which diminishes the urgency of marriage.

These young women, themselves the children of the baby boom, with the greatest numerical potential of producing children in American history, have produced the lowest fertility rate in that history — only 1.8 births per woman, less even than the 2.2 children produced by her Depression-fatigued grandmother.

Aided and abetted by the Equal Employment Opportunity law, she is a sought-after member of the labor force, and she is advanced in positions of responsibility much faster than her grandmother could dream of.

With 97.5 million workers, women constitute 41 percent of the labor force, and 61 percent of those are women in their child-bearing years. More than half of the women with young children work.

All of these forces conspire to change the lighting on womanhood, the concept of what a woman is — in male and female eyes.

"Any period of rapid social change results in considerable confusion and distress on the part of people who are used to having rules set out for them," says Dr. Marjorie Hershey of Indiana University, who instructs women on new female roles.

"It's very scary. Yet I also appreciate the feelings of many older women caught in between..."

Today's women face a far different world than did the young women of only 20 years ago, says Dr. Matina Horner, president of Radcliffe College. "With that comes considerably more stress and conflict ... You find many more young women today knowing they must have a career, and searching for something that would be satisfying and fulfilling."

That means more than just a job as a way-station on the road to marriage. In some cases it means a job that carries the same emotional weight as marriage.

"The young women today that I talk with want it all," says Dr. Margaret Huyek, a psychologist studying women at Illinois Institute of Technology.

"They do not want so much to renounce what their mothers did. They want to add what their fathers did. They really have the sense that they don't have to choose between the two. Somehow they can do everything, and do it all between the ages of 20 and 40."

But can they?

Today's young women are aided and abetted by relatively new biological technology. They are no longer a prisoner of their ability to reproduce. That, too, makes them more equal with men.

"Contraceptive methods within the last 60 years are quite as significant as anything that has happened in the Industrial Revolution," says Gail Putney Fullerton, president of California's San Jose State University. "It means that child-bearing can now be truly a matter of choice for most married women. Grandmother didn't have that choice."

Both grandmother and mother adapted to not having that choice. Today's young women are adapting to having it.

Deborah Smith is 26, a reporter for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat who covers the Missouri legislature. Married, she commutes weekly between her job in Jefferson City and their home, a distance of 150 miles. She spends five days at work, weekends at home.

"You've got me at the essence of my struggle at the moment. I have identified too closely with my work, and in some ways I've over-reacted. But it's too important for me to give up.

"I had this image when I was in college in California of being a sophisticated working woman with a fabulous apartment and 14 men around all the time."

But at age 25, she met her husband to be. "I had reached a point where I was getting satisfaction from my work, moving toward my goals, but I was tired of not particularly satisfying affairs. Emotionally, I was ready for marriage."

But still she had doubts. He reassured her. She is still uncertain. "Women like me are caught in the bind of being superwoman. We want to be dedicated and serious about our work, and yet we want the intimacy which is such a profound part of life."

The idea of family is still alive and well in the minds of today's women, in one form or another. Dr. Horner wonders, considering the rising divorce rate and longer life, if "serial families" might be the future.

Dr. Fullerton also sees stability in this unstable social milieu. "They may reinvent the forms and context of marriage, but the conjugal relationship is pretty much a solid one. People keep trying to get it into some other form, but the need for a kind of intimacy in a relationship that has some kind of continuity is still there."

Many of today's women quarrel with the Freudian image of sex, which, they say, casts men in aggressive roles and women in submissive ones. In fact, in some tests, there is considerable switching between traditional "male characteristics" (aggressive, independent, self-reliant) and traditional "female traits" (sympathetic, compassionate, gentle, warm).

Why, asks Indiana University's Dr. Hershey, can't men be as readily sympathetic and compassionate and women as readily aggressive and self-reliant?

"I think it is interesting that more women are taking on previously masculine roles than men are taking on previously feminine roles," she says. "That suggests that those feminine traits that people thought so terrific are not so valued when people have a free choice."

Dr. Fullerton notes that the fastest-growing group of enrollees at San Jose State are women over 25. While economic pressures are an obvious factor, by and large most women enter the job market now for the greater satisfaction they can get than as fulltime homemakers, Dr. Fullerton says.

Just how this generation will mold the future of this society, no one can say for sure at this point. Certainly things are in transition, and in all the stress of the moment there is considerable conflict between the sexes.

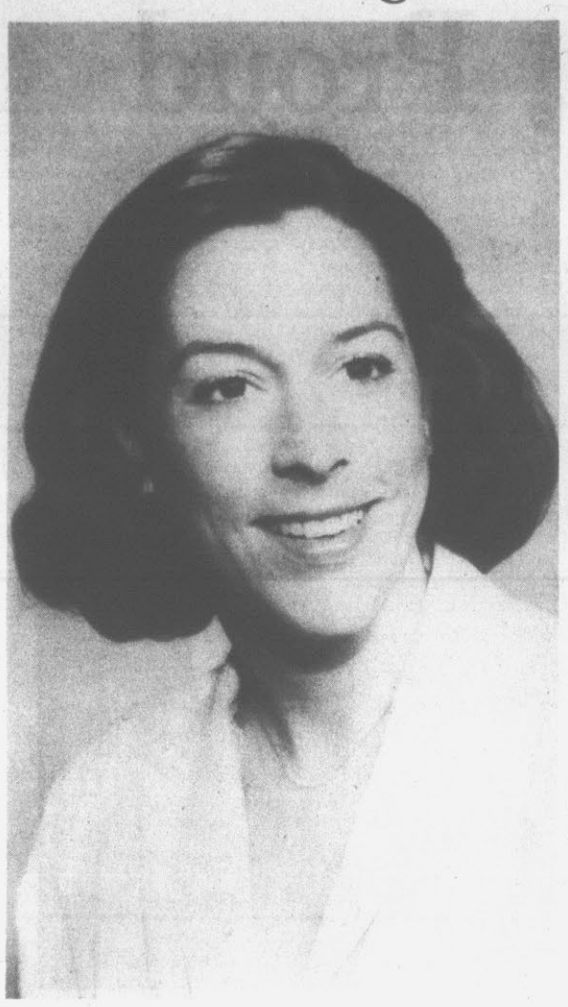

Says Dr. Huyek: "There is a kind of rage, a kind of compensation because women have been so long devalued. I hope it is just a transition. We either do it all together, or we don't do it at all."

There are signs that attitudes are changing even as far back as high school. A nationwide study by the Survey Research Center at the University of Michigan found that high-school seniors felt that when there were no pre-school children, the wife should work. They also said that when both parents worked, they should share housework and child care.

In this and other respects, society is beginning to readjust for the new role for women. Great-grandmother might have been shocked. Not so the nearer generations of women.

Says Dr. Huyek: "We hear from a lot of middle-aged women that they have learned a lot from their daughters. They say, 'I've learned to stand up for my rights, for interests of my own. My daughter has shown me that I will not lose everything if I assert myself.'"

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Deborah Anne Lambeth has been selected as one of the dinner pianists to work this summer at the Farm House Restaurant, Blowing Rock.

A graduate of Rose High School, Deborah was accompanist for various groups and school plays. Currently she is a junior at ECU majoring in music education. She was the accompanist for the 1976 North Carolina 4-H Bicentennial Singers, the ECU Madrigals and for various performing groups at ECU.

She started working in Blowing Rock last week and will return home in early September.

Mrs. Formanek was born in Austria, Hungary, in 1896 and came to the United States in 1910. She became a citizen in 1944.

The Rev. Jim Bussell is leaving the Winterville Disciples of Christ Church today after seven years of service. He will be going to a church in Williamston.

The church members presented him with a homemade quilt at a church dinner last week. According to Hazel Worthington, church member and one of the quilters, the quilt was made of 42 squares, which measured 12 by 12 inches each. When asked what kind of pattern the quilters were following, Mrs. Worthington answered, "An original".

Mrs. Worthington was quick to add that Rev. Bussell will be sorely missed. He has been a very community-minded minister, active in the Scouts and the Sunshine Club.

"We sure do hate to see him go," said Mrs. Worthington. "He is a nice, all-around good person."

If only half an onion is needed in cooking, save the root half. It will last longer.

What's New With Carrot Bread?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Ever since carrot loaves arrived on the American culinary scene I've tried a good number of recipes for them and passed some along to you. Even so, interest in this tea bread and-or cake remains high. Cooks ask for new recipes to use now with supermarket carrots, later with carrots from their own gardens.

As I searched in my files and in my large collection of cookbooks for new variations on this by-now-hackneyed theme, the recipes were similar to those I've given you.

Then luck was with me. A test kitchen worked out a seductively new recipe for a carrot loaf and asked me to consider publishing it. After it was tried in my own test kitchen, enthusiasm for it ran high. It has lovely flavor and good golden-brown color interlaced with pretty shreds of coral-color carrot. And instead of the usual all-flour and all-sugar combination, it includes two foods now extremely popular — nutrient-packed oats and flavorful honey.

HONEY-OAT CARROT LOAF

- 2¼ cups all-purpose flour
- 5 teaspoons baking powder
- 1¼ teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ginger
- 1½ teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 cup quick-cooking oats
- 3 large eggs
- 2-3rds cup honey
- ½ cup corn oil
- ¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 2 cups lightly packed, coarsely shredded, pared carrot
- 2-3rds cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts or pecans

Stir together flour, baking powder, salt, ginger and cinnamon; stir in oats. Beat together eggs, honey, oil and sugar until blended. Add flour mixture; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Stir in carrot and nuts. Turn into an oiled 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 1 hour and 15 to 20 minutes. Cool on wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on rack; turn right side up. Cool completely. The top will be delightfully flat with only one or two small cracks. Although the crust is on the crisp side, the loaf may be sliced several hours after cooling. The crust will soften after storage in a tightly closed plastic bag.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Boy, a really weird thing happened last week to two friends of ours, Bud and Babs Peripatetic.

They moved from Indiana to California and — get this — the house they bought was vacant when they arrived, the van carrying their furniture showed up when it was supposed to, the utilities were turned on in the house and (is this too much?) they got their own furniture back.

Do you have any idea what the odds are of having everything come out on schedule during a move? Some guy in Vegas figured it out once and it's a twelve-million-to-one shot.

Frankly, I would have thought the odds would have been higher. You won't believe it, but I'm one of those wonderfully organized people who is prepared for anything.

When we moved a couple of years ago from Ohio to Arizona there were no surprises. When the van arrived at the house and discovered the truck was too wide to come over the bridge, I expected that.

When we arrived at the house and the mover called from Taos, New Mexico, and said he exited too early, I expected that.

When the only room in the motel was a honeymoon suite at $85 a day and the kids crayoned on the heart-shaped toilet seat, I expected that.

When the mover insisted the bill be paid in cash and the bill was $220 more than they figured and it was Saturday and all the banks were closed and no one in town knew us well enough to cash a check, I expected that.

When we found that the water in the toilet was hooked up to the hot water tank and we were shrouded in steam every time we flushed, I expected that.

When something happened to my "system" and I was surrounded with 75 cardboard boxes in the living room all marked "Miscellaneous," I expected that.

But when the mover who had loaded up the furniture from our old house moved it into our new house, stopped suddenly, looked around, picked his teeth with a matchbook cover and said, "I wouldn't have traded you the old house even for this one, lady," I didn't expect that.

Members Hold Farewell Party

A wine and cheese farewell party for Father J. Paul Byron was held Wednesday by the St. Peter's Women's Club.

President Ann Reese proposed a list of activities for the coming year beginning with a bake sale Sept. 9 at the church hall. A welcome tea is planned for Sept. 23 welcoming new women to the parish. A fashion show and a craft show were discussed as tentative projects.

Sister Happy Shondell appealed for health kits or layettes to assist Sister Jane Paris' work this wummer with migrant workers. The sisters are also planning a women's retreat Sept. 14 at the IHM House for all ladies of the parish.

Group To Hold Lunch

The Welcome Wagon Club of Greenville will have its monthly luncheon at the Ramada Inn Wednesday beginning at 11:30 a.m.

The program will be presented by La Kosmetique Beauty Salon on care and styling hair for the summer.

Reservations may be made until 10 a.m. Monday by calling Judy Trolley, 756-9945, or Lee Birkette, 756-1748.

Keep a box of baking soda in the glove compartment of your car to use as an emergency fire extinguisher for an engine fire. Should a fire occur, turn off the ignition and toss the soda on the engine. Soda will also smother a blaze should a fire start in the seat cushion or floor mat. Keep a sprinkling of soda in the ashtrays to prevent cigarettes from smoldering in the car.

Logger Once A Waitress

MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — The guys at the Calais, Maine, logging school where Sarah Davis was the first female student nearly ignored her until they discovered she couldn't start a chain saw.

Try as she might, the Manchester woman couldn't get the 17-pound saw to start. But she bet an instructor she could, and began lifting weights and doing pushups every night.

"In two weeks, he owed me a bottle of wine," said the former waitress who is believed to be Connecticut's only woman logger.

Tall and slender, the 23-year-old isn't sure why she persevered in a profession too tough for most men. She's no firebrand feminist or brawny athlete, and she says she always preferred pastimes like crossword puzzles to hiking.

He "told me one of the nicest things about working in the woods is in the winter when it's cold and you're alone and you look up and realize you've been working in a snowstorm half an hour," Miss Davis said. "That happened to me after I was in Maine about three months."

Her neighbor inspired Miss Davis to enroll in the wood-harvesting course at the Washington County Vocational Institute in Calais. That move came after she'd shed the last of a string of unsatisfying indoor jobs.

Her neighbor is now her boyfriend and the boss of her three-member crew criss-crossing Connecticut to harvest timber.

She set her first record in Calais just by showing up. Other women had signed up in past years, but never arrived on campus.

What preceded graduation this spring were six rigorous months learning to take apart chainsaw motors, heave 4-foot-long logs onto trucks and topple trees 20 times her size.

She also spent three months logging in a Georgia-Pacific logging camp.

Saw An Opportunity In 'Kinder-Care'

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Perry Mendel had an idea whose time had come 10 years ago, and he turned it into the country's largest professional child care organization with revenues expected to reach $30 million this year.

But Mendel, a 56-year-old grandfather, says his Kinder-Care Learning Center business is still in its "genesis" as it enters a second decade that promises "an exciting time of growth."

Emanuel Kulbersh, the firm's real estate vice president, describes Kinder-Care as "a company on the grow." And the track record of the past 10 years seems to bear him out.

From the opening of the first center in 1969 in Montgomery, the firm has blossomed to the point that it now has 348 centers in 32 states. In addition, Kinder-Care has announced plans to merge with Mini-Skools Ltd. of Canada, a move which will bring another 88 child care centers under the Kinder-Care umbrella.

And with 138 new centers already in some stage of development, Mendel says the company is aiming to open 110 new centers during the coming year.

"I envision reaching 2,000 learning centers over the next 10 years," Mendel said. "I envision being international, going beyond the confines of the United States and Canada.

"And I envision a licensing program that will allow manufacturers who make educational equipment and toys to use the Kinder-Care name," he said.

When he first got the idea of starting a child care business, Mendel said he did his homework and found a growing female labor force, a diminishing domestic labor pool and a day care industry that was "in the age of antiquity."

"Working mothers had developed a guilt complex and it became even deeper when they had to place their children in substandard facilities," he said.

"But we made the working mothers realize that their children would get a more well-rounded upbringing at Kinder-Care than even the mother could have provided. That eliminated the guilt feeling."

At first, the Kinder-Care centers offered only a full day care service complete with hot meals and an educational program designed by professionals around a different theme each week.

A program for school children was added later to allow working parents to drop their school children off at the center in the mornings. They are fed breakfast, transported to school, picked up in the afternoon and cared for until their parents arrive to pick them up.

While those two programs were proving immensely successful, the Kinder-Care businessmen soon noticed that their enrollments were dropping some 30 percent during the summer months.

So they devised a summer day camp program to provide youngsters in their care with a variety of physical activities and field trips. The result was that enrollments began to drop only about 8 percent during the summer months, keeping the Kinder-Care cash flowing.

Mendel attributes much of the success of Kinder-Care to the real estate and financing expertise of the firm's managers that enabled them to get the physical facilities built.

They did this in large part by finding developers who would build to Kinder-Care specifications and then lease the building to the child care firm. Today, about 80 percent of the centers are leased.

Mendel tried franchising his centers at first, but the company later decided that owning the centers outright offered better profits, more control and a better image.

Only nine of the 348 centers today are franchised, and Kinder-Care officials say they would like to purchase those and return them to the company fold.

In interview after interview over the past 10 years, Mendel has compared his chain of child care centers to other successful chains such as McDonalds and Holiday Inn.

But he says he recognizes the difference between hamburgers and children and only used the comparision to illustrate the similarities between the business methods employed by Kinder-Care and those used by other successful chains.

"We've been accused of being the Kentucky fried children," Mendel said. "Isn't that ridiculous?"

But Mendel himself will acknowledge that he pays the staffers to whom more than 45,000 children are entrusted each day no more than McDonalds pays the workers who handle its hamburgers.

Starting staffers receive the minimum wage, and center directors often start at no more than $155 a week. Mendel says the low salaries are offset by advancement opportunities, fringe benefits such as free meals and reduced child care costs for the children of staffers, and automatic longevity raises.

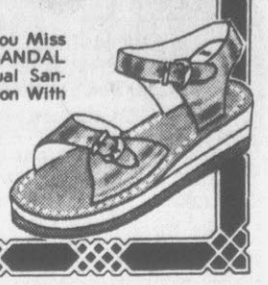

"If you are going to accommodate working mothers," he said, "there is an affordable price. If we had to pay starting staff members wages comparable to teachers in the public schools, working mothers would have to pay an awful lot for child care."

To people who criticize the salary scales, Mendel said he tells them that "we're making jobs for people through an emerging new industry" that now employs more than 3,000 people.

That employment figure will jump even higher in August with the closing of the deal to merge Kinder-Care and Mini-Skools. The obvious benefits of the merger are increased revenues and profits, but Mendel says it means much more.

"I hope we can learn from each other, taking the best from each," he said. "They operate quality day care centers from our investigation and we feel very fortunate to join hands."

Peace Protests Under Control

VOLUNTOWN, Conn. (AP) — The "Peace Farm" in this rural community has been the target of violence many times over the past 17 years, but the peace symbol still hangs conspicuously at its entry gate.

Many of the people who formed the Community for Non-Violent Action in 1960 and moved into the 250-year-old farmhouse two years later have left.

But the peace movement is still alive on the 40-acre farm. Unlike the days of the Vietnam War when activists sang loudly to stop the war, the farm residents spend most of their time researching, organizing and training.

The product of their efforts was the thousands of well-disciplined demonstrators who turned out at the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton in April to protest the christening of the Navy's first Trident-armed submarine. The largest nuclear-weapons protest in New England history, it was a far cry from a 1960 demonstration when handfuls of people in tiny boats on the Thames River tried to board the Polaris submarines to protest the nuclear arms race.

CNVA coordinated the 30 groups that co-sponsored the EB demonstration, which drew a crowd of protesters estimated at 3,000.

The farm residents were most active during the height of the Vietnam War, spending their time working against the war with teach-ins, vigils and marches.

During that time the farm was often the target of violence — the farmhouse was ransacked in 1965, the historic barn burned a year later and in 1968 the farm was the scene of a shootout between police and a right-wing group.

Some farm residents were frightened away by the violence and more left as the Vietnam War wound down. By 1974 only Bruce Martin and Marta Daniels were left.

"When U.S. intervention ended, things kind of cooled off and people were very tired," said Martin, a field worker for the American Friends Service Committee, an arm of the Quaker religion.

"After the war we needed a new direction and we were very careful about recruiting," he said.

Gradually they rebuilt their numbers and developed a new strategy.

"The key is that people are making the link between nuclear power plants and nuclear weapons. There is no such thing as a friendly atom," Martin said.

The farm residents used to demand that plants such as Electric Boat, which makes nuclear submarines, be shut down, but that was hard to sell to the shipfitter who had a family and a mortgage.

Now they are pushing for conversion of such plants from construction of weapons to things like marine research vessels and mass transit vehicles.

"EB workers used to tear down our signs. This time some of them demonstrated with us," Martin said.

Judge Reversed Trustees On Closing Of College

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — "Silver and blue, we love you," Josephine Benincaso sang after a judge reversed a trustees' decision to close Wilson College, a 110-year-old liberal arts school for women.

And two days later the 22-year-old woman accepted her diploma without tears, happy her class wouldn't be Wilson's last after all.

"Women's colleges right now are on the upswing," said the Italian-born New Yorker who will return to Italy for medical school. "We survived when others failed, and we aren't going to fail now."

It is a hope shared by Dr. Donald Bletz, a part-time political science professor who became Wilson's acting president after Franklin County Judge John W. Keller ordered Wilson to stay open last month.

"Our goal is to rebuild," Bletz said, in the office vacated by Dr. Margaret Waggoner, the president for four years who quit after the court's ruling. "The college has been around 110 years and there's no reason we can't be around for another 110 years. We don't think the situation is hopeless."

Bletz said the faculty — those who didn't get new jobs after Wilson announced in February that it would close — is supportive, reorganizing, and considering curriculum changes.

"We are a liberal arts college, but we find little incompatibility with a certain amount of career orientation," Bletz said. "We do not intend to become a trade school, or a vocational school. We are planning to remain a women's college."

The unexpected decision to shutter Wilson and turn its assets into a scholarship foundation for college-bound women was fought by alumnae, students, and faculty who sought an injunction to block the closing.

"They didn't believe anyone would protest," said Gretchen Van Ness, a 20-year-old Rochester, N.Y., woman who is president of the student government association. "I think they were shocked that students and alumnae fought so hard to keep it open."

Dr. Harry Buck, professor of religion studies since 1959, blamed the move to close on an administration that forgot it was the 1970s and ran the school like it was still the 1950s. The school had been criticized earlier for not offering career-oriented courses.

And said Dr. R. G. Townsend, an economics professor: "We could have adjusted to the times...but we didn't."

Dr. Waggoner, silent now, told a reporter a day before the court ruling "the college was in very serious trouble when I came here, and most people thought it was an impossible job."

Asked what would happen if Wilson was ordered to stay open, she said: "I don't know where they are going to get students or money. I think it is unrealistic in the face of the facts. Closing a school is very emotional. I wanted to save it. I tried to save it."

Joan Edwards, an alumna and a leader of the Save Wilson Committee which already has more than $1.5 million in cash and pledges, blamed poor management by Dr. Waggoner and the 25-member board of trustees, headed by attorney Martha Walker until she also quit after the judge granted the injunction halting the planned closure.

Dr. Waggoner and Mrs. Walker both rejected the mismanagement charge and scoffed at the fund-raising efforts. "We can't make it without somebody bankrolling it," Mrs. Walker said. "We either need a lot of money, or a lot of students to make ends meet.

"If I thought there was any chance to make Wilson a viable operation, to grow in enrollment, and thrive, I'd say let's do it. But I don't see any glimmer of hope."

Bletz, however, credited the alumnae's spirit with keeping Wilson alive. "If we can continue with that drive and spirit there is no doubt that we will succeed," he said. "Exactly how we are going to do it remains to be seen. I have more questions in my mind than I have answers. I think it is worth a try."

The biggest problem is students. The dwindling enrollment was a major factor in the decision to close.

Wilson enrollment peaked in 1968 with 722 students. This past year it dipped to 214.

"Our goal is to tough it out in the coming year," Bletz said. "We will be open no matter how many students we get....We will have a program, and a good program, for those students who'll be there."

Mrs. Walker, in assessing enrollment, said informal surveys of the first year class indicated "we would have a college smaller than last year" and added: "We didn't think it was morally right to bring freshmen to campus when we weren't sure we'd be open another year, or maybe be in bankruptcy. I think we had become too small to be attractive to prospective students."

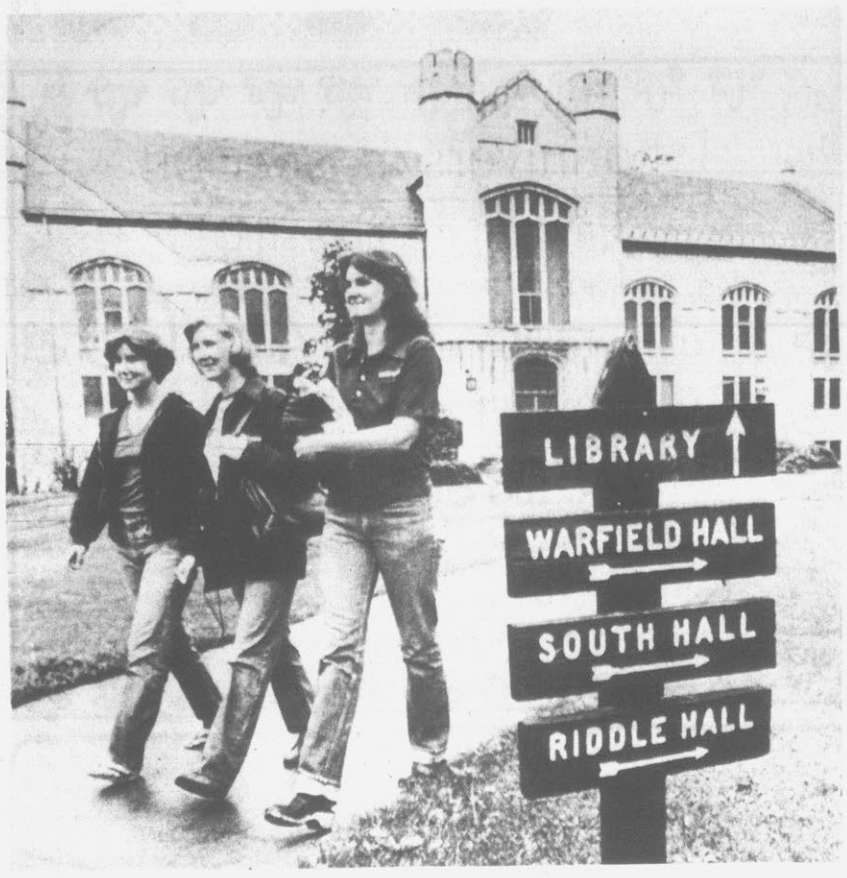

Mrs. Walker also pointed to reports that in the next 10 years there will be one-third fewer high school students. "When you see the Harvards, and Yales, and Princetons, and Bryn Mawrs worrying...what's in the cards for Wilson?" she asked.

Wilson isn't bankrupt, but it's dipped heavily into endowments to pay operating expenses for the 300-acre campus, with its 32 buildings, in this predominantly farm area near the Maryland border.

"From 1968-69 through 1975-76, the college operated at an annual deficit, the largest being $862,546 in 1974-75," the trustees said in a statement seeking to justify the closing decision.

Mrs. Walker said, "If President Waggoner hadn't made cuts in the budget this place would have folded two years ago."

Stamp Man's Mail Is Brought By Truckload

By JOHN KUGLIN
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Admittedly Jim Helzer gets a lot of mail.

But his own ZIP code?

Wyoming's capital has three ZIP codes.

One for regular mail.

And one for Helzer's Unicover Corp.

He gets 15 million pieces of mail a year — by the truckload — hauled to a tightly-guarded building.

Unicover, using the trade name Fleetwood, designs and markets first-day covers to 150,000 stamp collectors.

First-day covers are customized envelopes — usually with artistic designs, affixed with commemorative stamps. They honor an important event — as when the United States landed men on the moon — and some not-so-important events.

They're canceled on the day of issue by only one post office.

Helzer's philatelic business means travel around the world, including a trip to the Soviet Union to negotiate rights for first-day covers of space flights.

Helzer says Unicover, which employs 160 persons, "is the biggest of its type in the United States and probably the world, but you have to be careful about such claims."

"We try to deal with subjects of universal appeal, like space, flowers and animals," Helzer said. "Not stamps that emphasize the glory of the Soviet state. We're not interested in that, because most collectors aren't interested."

The most controversial?

"A United States issue on family planning. We called it the 'birds and bees' stamp," he said. "A great loser was a collective-bargaining cover.

"Now there's nothing bad about collective bargaining. But the design was terrible. It looked like a credit card."

The most bizarre cover? "One was issued by an Arab nation which could be played on a record player. Ironically, there are few record players in the country that issued it."

Helzer, in his 30s, formed the business 11 years ago, and the growth rate has been more than 50 percent a year. Unicover markets all first-day covers offered in the United Sates, Canada and Britain, and selected issues from 130 other nations.

Why should collectors go through dealers like Unicover, when they can deal directly with postal officials?

Unicover saves collectors the trouble of "dealing directly with governments and provides original art and historical information on the first-day covers," Helzer said.

But he concedes collectors can make amazing discoveries without going through dealers.

"One of my employees brought in a coil of stamps in 1974 which were printed without being separated. He thought we should cut them apart or take them back to the post office.

"I grabbed them out of his hand. They were worth $3,000."

Tell Children That Disability Isn't Inability

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A repairman who was obviously crippled by multiple sclerosis or cerebral palsy came to my home today. My 4-year-old daughter asked loudly, and in front of the man, "Mommie, why does that man walk so funny?"

I was terribly embarrassed and totally unprepared for her question, so I said, "The man wasn't as lucky as Mommie and you." I didn't mean to sound patronizing or condescending, but I didn't know what else to say.

Later I told my daughter that it wasn't nice to mention a person's handicap in front of him or her. My question is, what do you tell children when they ask what is wrong with a crippled or disfigured person in the person's presence?

AT A LOSS FOR WORDS

DEAR AT: You tell them the truth in language they can understand. ("The man has a sickness that made his leg crooked. It's a little harder for him to walk, but he can still do his job as well as anybody else".)

Very young children will not understand why it isn't "nice" to mention the obvious. They are naturally curious, eager to learn and shouldn't be discouraged from asking questions.

Bless those disabled who anticipate a child's curiosity and come right out with why they are in a wheelchair, wear a brace, or have difficulty talking, seeing or hearing.

DEAR ABBY: I'm 22 and my husband is 25. We've been married for three years. When I was first married I weighed 130. Now I weigh 180!

My problem is my sex life. My husband refuses to touch me until I lose 40 pounds. I'm trying, but it's not easy. What should I do?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: Keep trying. In the meantime, ask him if he'll kiss you if you lose 25.

DEAR ABBY: I had to make an emergency trip and couldn't get a confirmed reservation on a plane, so I went to the airport and took my chances on a standby. Fortunately, I got on a flight. Unfortunately, I was placed in the smoking section and I am allergic to smoke.

I was so grateful to have gotten a seat on that plane I wasn't about to make any waves.

Well, my seat partner was a chain smoker. After her third cigarette, I asked her politely if she could please cut down on her smoking. Her answer was, "I wish I could, honey, but I'm a nervous wreck when I fly, and I have to smoke."

What would Dear Abby have done in my place?

ALLERGIC

DEAR ALLERGIC: She would have sent up smoke signals to the flight attendant who said on take-off, "If there is anything I can do to make your flight more enjoyable, please let me know."

Queen Elizabeth 2 Marking Her 10th Anniversary

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
United Press International

Britannia still rules the waves, her flag proudly carried by the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth 2, which celebrates its 10th anniversary this year.

Ralph Bahna, who became president and chief operating officer of the firm's worldwide operations in 1977 at the age of 34, is a fitting champion for the last of the great seagoing Queens.

Bahna hails from Grand Rapids, Mich. He had been a successful airline executive when he joined Cunard in 1973 and, after only six months in shipping, was named to the top U.S. post.

He had to grapple with the challenge of revitalizing the company and keeping the QE2 afloat. He has sought to turn the tide for the 139-year-old firm and, at least for the present, the company is determined to continue to provide elegance instead of turning the QE2 into a mass market ship. The future may be another matter.

She will maintain her transatlantic schedule through November and other sailings through the 1980 World Cruise in January, Cunard has announced. However, the line said it is examining options to make the liner more cost efficient after that and that continuation of her schedule could hinge on labor demands.

When the QE2 makes its last voyage, which may be some years off, the log book will close on a vast armada of passenger steamships which once plied the Atlantic.

In 1969, as the QE2 steamed into New York harbor on her maiden voyage, the U.S. Coast Guard had to wave off a herd of welcoming vessels for the docking meneuver. And while some of the steam-trunk-era passengers on that crossing mourned the passing of the old liners, with their rich wood paneling and delightful stodginess, the stately ship was greeted with enthusiasm.

It was predicted at the time that the port would never see such a welcome again, since no one in shipping believed that a vessel of her dimensions and cost would ever be built again.

Bahna, and the QE2's present captain, Douglas Ridley, echo that prediction. Their estimates range from $300 to $400 million to build the ship today.

Interviewed aboard, after bringing in the world's largest passenger vessel unaided because of a tug boat strike in New York harbor, Capt. Ridley said, "Today you're talking about $100 million to get a ship a third of this size." He sees a good 10-to 15-year future for the QE2 but said, "without any question," she represents the end of a golden era.

"This ship is viable on the Atlantic not only because it was built when ships were cheaper but also to run an Atlantic service you've got to have a ship of this size. A smaller ship cannot maintain the speed in bad weather."

So the QE2 is something special and the officers and staff of the 67,107-ton superliner are readying her for a series of bargain-priced programs — but with all the pomp and circumstance that only the British can provide thrown in.

As part of the 10th anniversary celebration, Cunard is introducing the "Explorer Special," a one-week vacation which combines a QE2 transatlantic crossing with a weekend in Paris or London. Ranging from eight to 11 days, the cruise-air-land package is priced from $839.

There is in addition an extensive program of escorted and independent tours, ranging from seven to 30 days, from thrift to deluxe.

An expanded roster of celebrities and lecturers will be featured in a daily program of entertainment, recreational and educational activities. A few of them: Loretta Switt, Tom Stoppard, Clive Barnes, Scott Carpenter, Isaac Asimov, Sylvia Porter, George Plimpton, George Gallup Jr., Louis Jourdan, Jean Marsh, Rex Reed, Jimmy Breslin, Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst.

National Geographic filmed aboard the QE2 in May for a special on the great liners, for broadcast in 1980.

The ship's lavish facilities include 6,000 square yards of deck space, several public lounges, four swimming pools, a gymnasium, a miniature golf course, a shopping arcade, five nightclubs, six bars, four dining rooms, a casino and a theater. All staterooms are air conditioned and have private facilities.

Bahna describes the ship as "an amusement, a spectacle, a great wonder, a floating city." He feels "to tour something like this for a few days is well worth the admission."

This anniversary year getting there promises to be more fun than usual.

Americans Pioneered

NEW YORK (UPI) — An American, Ralph Bahna, as president of Cunard, the British showcase steamship line, is not surprising if one considers that the company's founder was a Halifax merchant with American roots.

Samuel Cunard, as a young man, worked in shipping in Boston and may have sailed on Fulton's early steamboat, the Clermont, says a Cunard company spokesman.

Samuel Cunard conceived the idea of regularly scheduled transatlantic steamship service in the late 1830s. He felt, without dependence on wind and sail, ships could run on schedule like trains.

In 1839, at 53 a relatively wealthy businessman, he went to England armed with a letter of introduction to the secretary of the East India Company. There he obtained backing for his enterprise from a group of English and Scottish financiers.

He began with four ships. The Britannia, however, is regarded as the first of the Cunard fleet — a tiny, 1,154-ton paddle-wheel steamer which made its maiden transatlantic voyage in 1840. The Atlantic crossing in those days, departing from Liverpool, took 14 days at 8.5 knots. The QE2 travels at 28.5 knots.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — George Bush is annoyed. His campaign for president is two years old and already one of the nation's senior columnists is writing that while Bush is qualified for the job, he lacks the glamor to be elected.

Bush is sitting next to the swimming pool at the Ramada Inn East. What he is doing in the muggy Florida air he will do a lot in the foreseeable future — talking to one reporter and waiting for another.

The column is forcing Bush to face a recurrent dilemma of running for president. To be a credible candidate he has to be perceived as a credible candidate, and a column that says his appeal is limited — whatever good things it says about him — can do him harm.

While it can be argued that American presidential campaigns never end, the 1980 contest is the earliest yet. A dozen Republicans are candidates, and one, Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, announced March 12 and dropped out May 4.

Bush announced in Washington on May 1. His staff had worked hard to get two dozen political reporters aboard a chartered DC-9 for a tour of New England, Florida and Alabama. But while the reporters provided more exposure, it proved a mixed blessing.

Bush is running on the Jimmy Carter example: If most people don't know him, they didn't know Jimmy Carter in 1975. For others, the key is to make sure the Bushes don't hog the spotlight.

So Ronald Reagan, the Republican front-runner, hops around the GOP banquet circuit, though he won't announce until fall. He's seeking support from big-name Republicans, trying to appear the candidate of the GOP establishment, not just the conservative wing.

John Connally is selling himself as a strong electable leader. Howard Baker is running on the prestige of Senate minority leader, his party's highest officeholder, party leader and spokesman.

Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois, who announced last August, has a problem. He appeared to be a factor, but his campaign was beset by financial problems and six top aides resigned or were fired, a house in disarray.

Bush is respected in the party, little-known outside. He served two terms in Congress, has been Republican National chairman, CIA director, United Nations ambassador and emissary to China. He's selling experience and acceptability to all segments of the party.

Bush is often perceived as a moderate, though his positions differ little from those of his conservative rivals. One Republican professional sees a problem: "The liberals think he's too conservative, and the conservatives think he's too liberal."

There are other problems, some endemic to presidential campaigning, some individual. Bush, for example, knows he can talk himself into traps (as he did on the three-day trip heralding his candidacy): "When someone asks me what time it is, I tell him how to build a watch," he concedes.

More than 200 people gather in the National Press Club ballroom on May 1. Many are the candidate's supporters, customary window dressing for such occasions.

Bush appears, followed by mother, wife, four sons, a daughter, two daughters-in-law and a friend, Rep. Barber Conable of New York. He says he's running in the spirit of presidents like Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower.

His catch phrase is "The New Candor." It is, he says, "a policy of substance, not symbols; of reason, not bombast; of frankness, not false promises." He cites inflation and loss of American prestige overseas as major problems. He offers no specific solutions.

A DC-9 has been chartered for two days. First stop Hartford, Conn. Bush tells about 350 people that the issues will be "extraordinarily complex" but doesn't get into the complexities. He's critical of the president but sounds a lot like the 1976 Carter when he says:

"I'm tired of apologizing for this country. We're the fairest, the most decent, the most generous country in the world and we ought to hold up our heads."

Bush says Carter was indecisive on Iran and encouraged the shah's downfall by suggesting it might be imminent. The shah was "less than perfect on human rights," he says, but the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is worse. Later, at a news conference, he's asked what President Bush would have done in Iran.

"I'm not convinced that revolutionary pressures could have been contained forever, but we could have shaped events," he says.

That evening, in Concord, the senior staff tells Bush to drop Iran. They've been busy on logistics and haven't devoted enough time to briefing him on issues. They tell Bush that if he has no specifics to say so. Don't keep talking, they say, or you'll only get in deeper.

Second Day

After a tour of the state capitol and an address to New Hampshire's legislature, Bush heads for Burlington, Vt.

At Burlington, local reporters press Bush on his oil connections, a negative in New England. Bush denies again he's a "Texas oilman" — "a Texas whatchamacallit" he likes to say — and adds: "I'm tired of having experience in a field described as a conflict of interest."

Augusta, Maine, and a news conference in a jammed motel room. Now local reporters ask about intervention. A national reporter asks about "destabilizing" Chile. Another asks "how about Italy?" Then someone asks about Uganda.

"I don't want to talk about this and you won't get me to talk about it," Bush says. "I'm not disposed to answer that question."

It's nearly 2 a.m. when Bush arrives in Tallahassee and the party is down to a dozen, including four reporters and a photographer.

Third Day

Bush spends time with local Republicans. Florida's primary will be the first outside New England, which Bush considers his second home. He hopes to finish in the top two or three here and in New England, leaving him one of three or four survivors for the later primaries.

Campaign manager Jim Baker and David Keene, his deputy and a former Reagan operative, lunch with reporters. Baker calls the trip upbeat except for "the minor glitch on Iran." In private, one staff member says: "We could have gotten stories about our strong New Hampshire organization or energy. Instead, they're writing about how Bush needs to learn to take the rough-and-tumble of national campaigning."

In late afternoon, Bush chats with a reporter. He calls the trip a good lesson. "I was a little vague on Iran, but it taught me not to get bogged down in something that's already happened instead of concentrating on getting me elected president."

In private, he's reflective, and he feels he'd be reflective as president; he'd listen to diverse viewpoints before reaching decisions. But he acknowledges there's a difference between running and governing. "I'm convinced it's better to avoid bringing those Republican women to their feet if you leave yourself open to oversimplification and recklessness," he says. "In foreign affairs particularly, I err on the side of caution."

That night, Bush nearly brings an audience to its feet. At a fund-raising dinner for GOP members of the Florida legislature, he's ticking off the shortcomings he sees in the Carter administration and wonders, rhetorically, "what in heaven's name is going to happen to this country." His staff is ecstatic; a rousing speech.

The DC-9 is gone now and Bush heads for Miami on a small jet. He plays backgammon and loses.

"Everything was going against me," Bush says, referring to the game. The campaign, he hopes, will go differently.

Bodyguard Service Offers Protection

By MARK CRANE
Associated Press Writer

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. (AP) — An elite corps of multilingual, college-educated bodyguards is ready for action if the "kneecapping" and kidnapping that has plagued Italy in recent years spreads to the United States.

The Executive Bodyguard Service will protect corporate executives, rock singers or anyone else willing to pay the minimum price of $25 per bodyguard per hour plus expenses.

More than $100 million in ransom was paid to kidnappers in Italy last year alone and most major American corporations have taken out kidnap insurance for their key executives, costing up to $400,000 a year in premiums, said John Fitzpatrick, operations manager for Arnold M. Jones Detective Agency, which established the bodyguard service a year ago.

"Kidnapping is not a serious reality in the United States at the moment, but it will be in the future as political and economic activism increases," the 6-foot, 6-inch private investigator said in a recent interview.

Fitzpatrick would prefer to use the term "agents" for his employees.

"Bodyguards have a negative connotation," he explained. "To the average person, a bodyguard is a hulking brute in a double-breasted suit with a big bulge under his left arm. He's the kind that frisks everybody and says, 'They're OK, boss.'"

The 35 full and part-time "agents" employed by the agency must be able to combine mental and physical agility in fending off a potential attack on a client, with the social graces needed to blend in with the world of corporate executives.

"We want that gray face in the crowd," Fitzpatrick said. "I want my people to be ignored while they're working — they should blend into the background until they are needed."

Agents undergo a rigorous personal interview and a series of tests in martial arts, firearms and driving.

"We prefer to hire people who have some experience with physical danger — either in the military or a police or fire department," Fitzpatrick said.

A minimum of two years of college is required.

"If nothing else, people who have attended college are familiar with the 'establishment life.'

"This is important because while they're on the job they live two lives — as agents and members of a corporate party," Fitzpatrick said. "I don't want my people to shovel peas with a knife."

Most clients are corporate figures who have received anonymous threatening phone calls or have had labor problems. "That's why they come to us.

"In kidnappings, the client is most vulnerable while in motion. We do the same kind of advance work that the Secret Service does for the president before he makes a trip. We set up the transportation and accommodations.

"In one case, we were protecting the chairman of the board of a multi-national corporation that had been the target of protests. As my men drove the man home, someone jumped out of the bushes with a pipe. My people took the pipe away and sat on him until the police came," Fitzpatrick said.

"I don't want romantics to apply for jobs," he added. "I want cynical people because they expect the worst and mke fewer mistakes."

Would Keep Stuart Paintings

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

SAUNDERSTOWN, R.I. (AP) — Neither side in The Great Controversy has asked her opinion, but if either should, Mrs. Kenneth Pettigrew, a Yankee through and through, would vote for New England.

Gilbert Stuart, she feels, would have wanted it that way, too.

Americans west of either the Charles River or the Potomac might be less familiar with The Controversy than those in this part of the country. It rages over where Gilbert Stuart's portraits of George and Martha Washington ought to hang, Boston or Washington.

Nobody has yet suggested a third site, Saunderstown, on the banks of the Mettatuxet, where Mrs. Pettigrew is curator of the old snuff mill that was Gilbert Stuart's birthplace.

"We really don't have the facilities here to keep the pictures," Mrs. Pettigrew said. Then she added, "But if they were offered, I think we could make accommodations."

The portrait of George Washington is the familiar one on the dollar bill. It and a companion portrait of Martha now hang in Boston's Museum of Fine Arts, on loan from the Boston Athenaeum.

The Athenaeum, in great need of dollar bills, wants to sell the pictures and the Smithsonian Institution's National Portrait Gallery, in Washington, wants to buy them, for $5 million.

"The Athenaeum bought them through public subscriptions," Mrs. Pettigrew said. "They raised $1,500 for Gilbert Stuart's widow, in 1831, just to help her out. The portraits were really all he left her."

Again through public subscriptions, Bostonians are now trying to raise the money to match Washington's offer and keep the portraits in their city.

Mrs. Pettigrew, for her part, stays above the fuss.

"My husband and I are busy enough watching over the place and showing people through," she said. "Did you know we have begun restoration of the grist mill? It should be finished soon."

The snuff mill, vintage 1750, and the nearby grist mill are themselves testimonials to local concern for keeping local heritage where it belongs.

Fifty years ago the old homesite, with its living quarters above and snuff mill below, was falling apart.

The neighbors, alarmed, got together to save it. They formed the Gilbert Stuart Memorial Association, Inc., and raised the money themselves. A board of directors sees to the upkeep.

Today it is a place of chapel-like serenity. You reach it by turning off the highway onto leafy aisles flanked by rock fences and wild violets. The millpond, the mill with its worn, wooden gears, the mossy millwheel, make a scene almost fancifully idyllic, a page from a Currier and Ives picture book.

"Gilbert Stuart lived here until he was somewhere between six and 10 years old, just a boy," Mrs. Pettigrew said.

"His father's mill prospered, then went out of business because of the Revolution. His father was a loyalist, a Tory. I always thought it ironic that his son should have painted so many pictures of the Founding Father — at least 111 of them, maybe more."

Summertime Photography

Photography is a fascinating hobby any time of the year, but in many ways summer is the best time for taking pictures. Wild flowers abound, vines grow green and rank on old buildings, interesting people to photograph are more accessible in the summer sun, and long daylight hours increase the time available to take pictures.

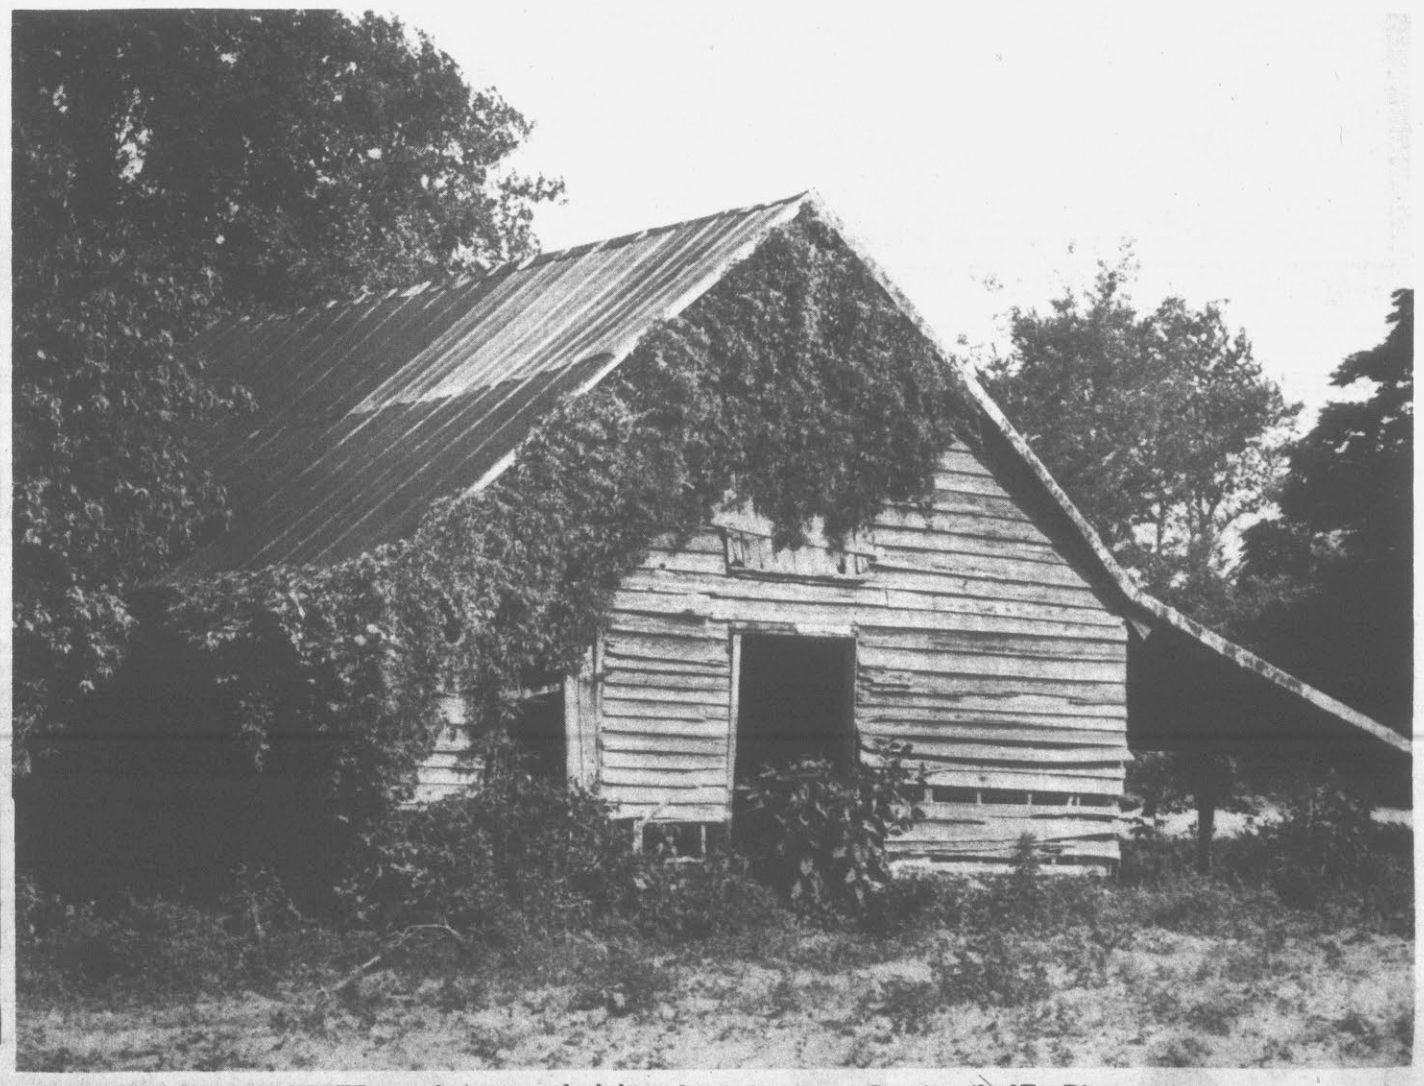

Long hours of travel and use of expensive gasoline are not necessary to find good subject matter. While it's true that to get beach scenes one must go to beaches, there are many subjects to explore within a few minutes from wherever you live. And quite often the commonplace object or sweat stained worker down the street will provide a photograph that is as rewarding as one of some noted historic site or famous personality.

TV SHOWTIME

For Week Of June 10 - June 16, 1979

WITH THIS RING — Adam Kendall (Linwood Boomer) takes his fellow teacher blind Mary Ingalls' (Melissa Sue Anderson) hand in marriage, in "The Wedding" to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's popular "Little House on the Prairie," Monday, June 11 (8-9 p.m.).

Host Of Rebroadcast

As a result of the overwhelming public response to "Who Are the DeBolts — And Where Did they Get 19 Kids?," hosted by Henry Winkler, ABC-TV is rebroadcasting the television version of the Academy Award-winning feature documentary Sunday, June 10 (7 to 8 p.m.). An estimated 25 million people saw the special when it was first shown last December.

"The DeBolts are a dynamic, magnetic, heartwarming family who give us all something special," says Winkler, who also served as executive producer of the show. "This year is the International Year of the Child. I can't think of a better program to emphasize that celebration, and I'm encouraged to learn that the American public shares my enthusiasm and has asked for another change to see this special."

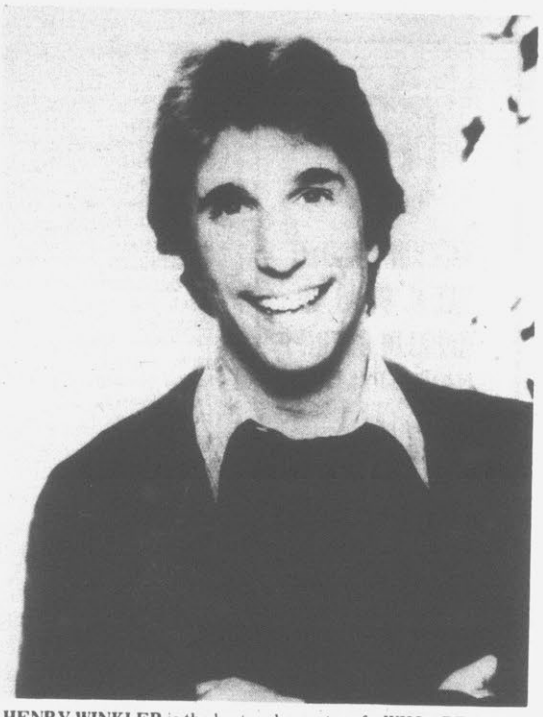

Since the program aired, another child has joined the DeBolt throng, bringing the total to 20. Thirteen-year-old Reynaldo, a Mexican-born victim of polio and child abuse, came to Bob and Dorothy DeBolt in March. In the short time he has been a member of the family, Reynaldo is already beginning to overcome his unhappy past and look ahead to the bright future all children are entitled to.

According to Dorothy DeBolt, the special has had an unexpected national impact. "We're discovering that the documentary has definitely changed attitudes. Families from all over the country are calling us, wanting to know how to go about adopting children whom no one wanted before. We've shown, by our own example, that it can work."

Mrs. DeBolt says that the number of families which have approached Aid to Adoption of Special Kids (AASK), the DeBolts' non-profit, national organization formed in 1974, has more than doubled since the special. "We had approximately 5,000 before and that was a three-year total. Now we have 12,000 new families per month, and the letters are still pouring in."

Over the past several months, the DeBolts have become very much in demand on the national lecture circuit, traveling all across the country to fulfill speaking engagements on a variety of subjects. Among the prominent organizations that have featured or requested the DeBolts are the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, the American Medical Association, the Board of Education, town hall series and the junior league, plus a variety of conferences on adoption and foster care, mental health and care for the disabled.

Perhaps Henry Winkler most effectively described the DeBolts when he said: "Some people worry about whether their cup is half full or half empty. But the DeBolts cup is running over. They get on with life."

HENRY WINKLER is the host and narrator of "WHO ARE THE DeBOLTS — AND WHERE DID THEY GET 19 KIDS?" which will be rebroadcast by ABC-TV on Sunday, June 10, 7 to 8 p.m.

Melissa Isn't What She Appears To Be

Melissa Sue Anderson isn't what she appears to be.

The young star of NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie" (Mondays, 8 to 9 p.m.), isn't blind — she isn't plain, and she isn't planning on being a teacher when she "grows up."

Melissa, who portrays Charles Ingalls' eldest daughter, Mary, on the popular series, is pleased and amazed at the public's reaction to her on-screen blindness.

"I'm getting mail from people all over the country telling me how happy they are to see a blind girl get a chance to be the star of a television series," she exclaims.

Thousands of viewers thinks she's blind in real life, and the series star/producer Michael Landon says, "That's quite a tribute for her acting ability."

Except for the fact that she is quiet and a bit shy, Melissa is not at all like the character she portrays. Although she's only 16-years-old, producers have already spotted her as one of the true natural beauties in Hollywood, and are predicting superstardom when she reaches her 20s.

Melissa, who lives with her mother in a San Fernando Valley (Calif.) condominium, brings home a salary that is bigger than that of most American professional men, but she still earns her pocket money by baby-sitting; her mother banks the rest of her earnings for her future.

Melissa recently took a special test and was granted a high school diploma. As a reward, she was given a flashy red sports car — which she uses to drive to the 'Litte House' set even when she isn't working — because her goal in life is to become a director.

"I'm very lucky to be working with Michael Landon," she says. "He started as an actor, and then became a director, too. He knows that's what I want to do, and he helps me in every way he can."

LOVELY MARILU HENNER stars as Elaine Nardo on ABC-TV's comedy series "Taxi," telecast Tuesdays (9:30-10 p.m.).

Love In The 'Fare'

It was the first day of spring and the New York cabbies, a reputedly tough lot, were going to see the redheaded angel who has captured their hearts via the television show that has captured their lives — Marilu Henner of ABC-TV's hit comedy series "Taxi." Love was in the fare.

The cabbies, who weave about New York City at heart-in-the-throat speed, stopped for a moment to greet the woman who plays Elaine Nardo, the only female driver in the series' cast, and brought her a token of their affection — Hack License No. 182621.

Marilu met the cabbies on their own turf, the Belmore Cafeteria, a famous New York taxi driver hangout established 50 years ago by the Siegel family. ("We feed 500 to 1,000 a day," said the owner proudly.) Thus, the occasion seemed more like a warm reunion than a first introduction.

"Well, I feel at home with 'Taxi,'" explained a massive driver who looked as if he could easily pulverize the series' sometimes heartless dispatcher, Louie, particularly if he gave Elaine (Marilu) a hard time. "Most of the drivers can relate to it. I think it's pretty realistic," he went on to say as he clutched the T-shirt and jacket the Minute Men Radio Dispatchers had brought to give Marilu.

New York City Taxi and Limousine Commissioner Jay Turoff echoed those sentiments later as he bestowed the honorary hack license. "'Taxi' has done more for our prestige this year than clean cabs and new cars," he said.

But the person in attendance who seemed to have the greatest affinity for "Taxi" and Marilu was Cynthia Baldwin, a young mother who supports her 7 1/2-year-old daughter by driving her own cab on the 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. shift. After most of the cabbies went back to work, Marilu and Cynthia, both wearing their Minute Men jackets, got a chance to huddle and talk. "You have the same shift I have on the show; how does it affect your relationship with your daughter?" asked Marilu. "No problem," was Cynthia's answer. "What do you wear on the job?," inquired the actress. "Jeans! You can get pretty dirty hauling people's trunks," she said.

SOCCER REFEREES, just like pro football referees, have their own repertoire of arm signals. Here are the basic ones to watch for when ABC Sports provides live coverage of the North American Soccer League game, Sunday, June 10 (2:30 to 4:30 p.m.) as the Vancouver Whitecaps meet the Minnesota Kicks.

Glossery Of Soccer Terms

Soccer is not only the world's most popular sport, it's also one of the world's most simple sports to understand: two teams, eleven men each, maneuvering a ball using their feet, heads, and bodies — but no hands — with the aim being to put the ball into a goal area.

If you're new to soccer, here's a capsule glossery of the more commonly-used terms — taken from the official North American Soccer League (NASL) Guide which will help you understand the competition between the Vancouver Whitecaps and the Minnesota Kicks. ABC will televise the game Sunday, June 10 (2:30 p.m.).

CLEAR — A throw or kick by the goalkeeper or a kick by the defender in an attempt to get the ball away from the goal area.

CROSS — Same type of pass as center.

DRIBBLE — A way of advancing the ball past defenders by a series of short taps with one or both feet.

FORWARD — Primarily an attacking player whose responsibility is to create and score goals.

GOALKEEPER — The last line of defense. The only player who can use his hands within the field of play. He is limited to using his hands only within the penalty area.

HEADING — A method of scoring, passing and controlling the ball by making contact with the head.

LINKMAN — Another name for midfielder.

SWEEPER — A defender who roams either in front of or behind the defender line to pick up stray passes.

TRAP — Controlling a ball passed close to the player by means of the feet, thighs or chest.

Jon Voight In 'Odessa File'

A secret organization of Nazi war criminals, which has spent years preparing for World War III, plots to launch death-dealing warheads in "The Odessa File," an espionage thriller starring this year's Academy Award-winner Jon Voight as a reporter obsessed with the destruction of this new Reich before it rises.

The drama, which also stars Maximilian Schell, Maria Schell, Mary Tamm and Derek Jacobi (most recently hailed for his performance in "I, Claudius"), will air as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" June 10 (9 to 11:40 p.m.).

The suicide of an elderly concentration camp survivor in Hamburg, Germany, places the old man's diary in the hands of freelance journalist Peter Miller (Voight), and reading the diary changes Miller's life unalterably.

In the diary, the old man has documented the atrocities committed by a concentration camp commandant — SS Captain Eduard Roschmann — and proves that "The Butcher of Riga" is still alive. Moved by the story and enflamed to action, Miller sets out relentlessly to find and capture Roschmann. However, the reporter is soon in great jeopardy himself as he comes into conflict with the deadly Odessa.

This secret society of former Nazi officers, living prosperously behind new identities and preparing for a bloody return to power, is also the target of an Israeli intelligence team, and the Israeli is convince Miller to join them and infiltrate the Odessa.

Miller's masquerade is successful and he is accepted as a surviving storm trooper by the Nazi leaders. However, just when his mission seems assured of success, his encounter with Roschmann (Maximilian Schell) explodes with a startling revelation that brings the story to its shattering conclusion.

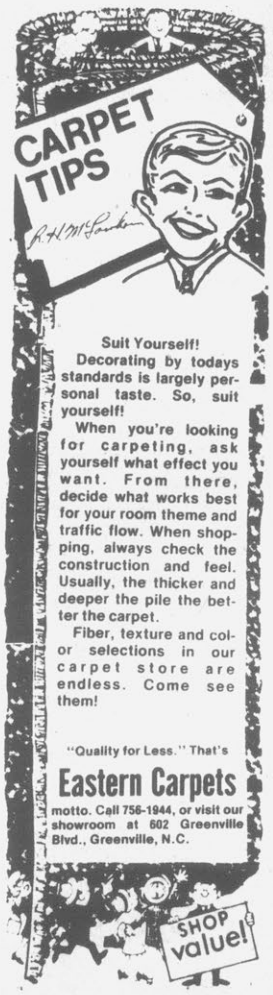

JON VOIGHT stars as a freelance journalist in "The Odessa File," an international espionage thriller on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," June 10 (9-11:40 p.m.).

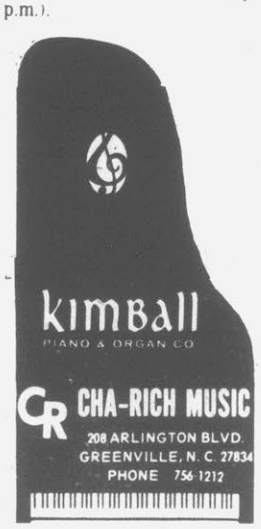

Voight's performance — low-key in keeping with the material — is excellent and Maximilian Schell is exceptionally good as the butcher who can still rationalize his past actions of a true fanatic. And, in an all-too-brief appearance as Peter's mother, Maria Schell is highly moving as she recounts her own tragic memories. Supporting roles are all well-played. Production values are excellent and Oswald Morris' cinematography is exemplary.

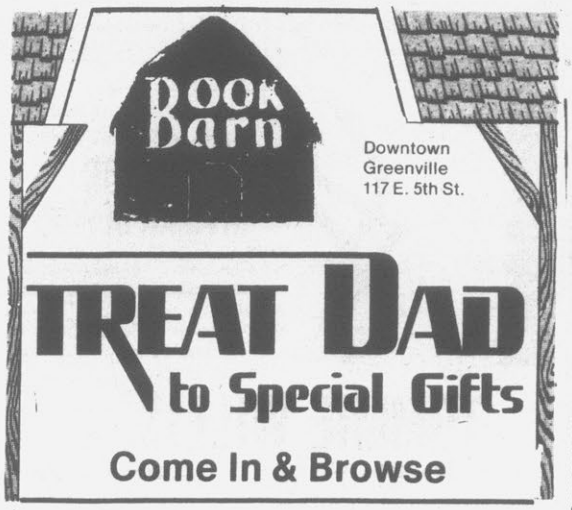

"The Odessa File" is based on Frederick Forsyth's best-selling novel of the same name.

Both Have Signed

Dan O'Herlihy has been signed to star as the elder Mark Twain in "Mark Twain: Beneath the Laughter," a one-hour production for PBS. O'Herlihy's son, Gavan, will play the author as a young man.

Bottoms Stars

Production has begun in Albuquerque, N.M., on "A Shining Season," a new motion picture-for-television to be broadcast on CBS.

Timothy Bottoms portrays a track star with a fatal illness who spends his last year of life coaching a girls' track team in a New Mexico elementary school.

Bottoms made his film debut in "Johnny Got His Gun." He also starred in "The Last Picture Show," "The Paper Chase," "A Small Town in Texas," "Operation Daybreak" and "The Other Side of the Mountain — Part 2."

'Stupid' Says Delp

Grover (Bud) Delp, trainer for Spectacular Bid, doesn't appear to hold a horse's intelligence in very high regard: "Horses are pretty stupid animals," says Delp. "As long as they have hay in one corner, water in the other and the same groom, it's all the same to them."

Home Comforts

The Texas Rangers' third baseman Buddy Bell is testing the latest in clubhouse accommodations. He has a padded reclining chair and a foot stool in front of his locker.

O'Brien Stirs Ripples

Tim O'Brien, the lawyer, wa hesitant. Tim O'Brien, the new correspondent, was not.

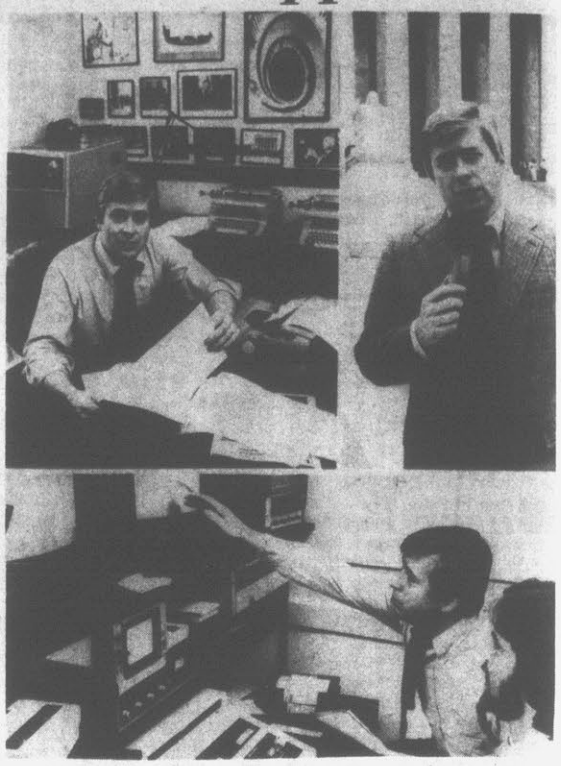

So when the ABC News Co respondent learned of two Su preme Court decisions befor they were made public, he reported the story. "My job is to report the news," said O'Brien in retrospect. "As a lawyer, I understood the implications of reporting the Supreme Court decisions before they were announced. As a reporter, I had no other choice than to report the stories."

Leaks of forthcoming Supreme Court rulings are extremely rare. In the court's 190-year history, there have been only two decisions reported before an official court announcement. In two consecutive days, O'Brien reported two decisions.

On Monday, April 16, O'Brien reported that the Supreme Court, in an opinion by Justice Byron White, would rule that public figures suing for libel may ask what the journalist's "state of mind" was while preparing the challenged news story. The court, in its formal announcement, confirmed O'Brien's story two days later.

In his second disclosure on April 17, O'Brien reported the court had reversed a lower court ruling, which held that prison inmates up for parole must be afforded certain procedures under due process of law.

ABC NEWS Supreme Court Correspondent Tim O'Brien, from his office at the Supreme Court, (clockwise) puts together a story and then edits it for ABC's "World News Tonight."

O'Brien still remains silent about his source. All he will say is that the source is "impeccable."

The Daytime Dateline

"One Life to Live's BRYNN THAYER and GERRY ANTHONY (Jenny Vernon and Mario Corelli) were the big winners in "$20,000 Pyramid of Daytime Stars," a week-long tournament on the popular game show featuring two stars from each of the ABC serials. Gerry and Brynn, playing for Save the Children, won a whopping $21,810 which was presented to the charity, and the funds are earmarked to benefit the children of Sri Lanka ... Two wealthy new residents of "All My Children's" Pine Valley, Palmer Courtlandt and his daughter, Nina, are being played by JAMES MITCHELL and TAYLOR MILLER. SUSAN LUCCI, who plays the officious Erica Kane Cudahy on "All My Children," is hard at work on a speech she has been asked to give at the commencement exercises of her high school alma mater in Garden City, N.Y., on June 24. Susan will be the first woman ever to address that school's graduates ... For those "Ryan's Hope" fans who may have lost count, that show now has a total of nine Emmy Awards to its credit since its premiere in July of 1975 ... KAREN ANN MORRIS (Faith Desmond on "Ryan's Hope") and Curt Gowdy, Jr. have announced they will be married on August 11 in Karen's hometown of Cheyenne, Wyoming ... Recent Emmy Award-winner AL FREEMAN (Ed Hall on "One Life to Live") is joining castmates NAT POLEN and MIKE STORM on the golf links June 25 when they will be playing in the St. Francis Hospital Celebrity Golf Tournament for the benefit of children with heart disease ... The sound of music will ring loud and clear this summer in Milford, Penn., when daytime serial stars from all three networks perform at the Milford Playhouse.

Teen Scene

The Screen Actor's Guild is receiving as many as three phone calls a day from TV and movie producers trying to locate the agent representing REX SMITH. However, since Rex's only acting credit is the TV movie, "SOONER OR LATER," he has no such agent, and is losing job offers left and right.

ERIK ESTRADA will make his singing debut during the upcoming new season of "CHiPs." The show's executive producer, CY CHERMAK, is writing lyrics to the show's theme which Erik will sing.

If one youngster has the promise for super stardom from the new Fall TV lineup, it appears to be PETER BARTON, who'll star as SHIRLEY JONES' son in her new series.

JIMMY & KRISTY McNICHOL will be among those teen favorites who'll star in their own TV specials during the new season on CBS. Also signed are PAUL McCARTNEY, CRYSTAL GAYLE and DAVID COPPERFIELD.

The most sought-after guest star on every variety special planned by all three networks for next season is ROGER VOUDOURIS.

RICKY SCHRODER gained a lot of fans for his film role in "THE CHAMP," and among his most avid admirers is KRISTY McNICHOL. In fact, Kristy recently paid a visit to the set of Ricky's upcoming film, "LAST FLIGHT OF NOAH'S ARK," and then took the 9-year-old actor and his sister out to dinner.

Little ROBBIE RIST is no longer little. At 15, he's not only the owner of a new station wagon (his mom drives), but he's also financed the recording of a couple of songs he's written. What's more, they've both got a lot of promise.

Rome's Dirty Work

The political and personal intrigue, corruption and lust that toppled the glory of vainglorious Rome will unfold on Masterpiece Theatre when "I, Claudius" encores nationally on PBS Sunday, June 10.

Based on Robert Graves' best-selling novels about dirty work in ancient Rome, the series lavishly depicts the orgiastic society of the all-powerful Claudians, the family whose business was ruling the world. In their egomaniac pursuit of power at any price, they underestimated Claudius — a dribbling lame spastic whose mind, they assumed, was as deficient as his disease-riddled body.

It was more pleasant to try to ignore Claudius, and real sport to ridicule his infirmities when they couldn't escaped his distasteful company. So Claudius survived to become emperor, and to set down the inside story of his conniving, murdering royal relatives and the Rome they destroyed before his uniquely observant eyes. In the end, it's crippled Claudius who has the last word when he decides, as emperor, to let Rome go to the hell it so richly deserves.

One of eight awards showered on the series when it aired in England went to Derek Jacobi, who plays Claudius. Another went to Sian Phillips as Livia, the breathtakingly beautiful, murdering Mother of Rome — a female Machiavelli who is Medea and all the Borgias rolled into one.

Messalina, his third wife, and incidentally one of the history's most celebrated ladies of questionable virtue, is Shelia White, and Brian Blessed is Augustus and Stratford Johns is Piso.

Brahms PBS Recital

At the age of twenty, Johannes Brahms was formally introduced to the lieder ("songs" in German). From that time, until his death 57 years later in 1897, Brahms embraced them with an almost mystical devotion. A selection of his most exquisite songs comes to PBS Wednesday, June 13 (9 p.m.), in "A Brahms Lieder Recital With Christa Ludwig and Leonard Bernstein."

Melody, craftsmanship and more than a hint of national pride are intrinsic to Brahms' lieder. Brahms' biographer, Karl Geiringer noted that "A further feature of Brahms' songs (lieder) is their splendid organic unity and completeness. If we examine a Brahms song merely from an architectural standpoint, we shall almost always find a symmetrical, beautifully complete, and even form."

Raft Has Returned

George Raft has returned to movies with his role in "The Man With Bogart's Face," now in production at MGM.

2 Life In Spirit

THE REV. JESSE JACKSON, guest starring as himself, delivers a stirring address about what is needed to help minority students do better, in a ghetto high school, on "Lou Grant," Monday, June 11 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Jesse's Ringing Speech

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, noted black leader, appears as himself in an episode of "Lou Grant" which will be rebroadcast Monday, June 11 (10 to 11 p.m.).

Jackson speaks at a high school honors ceremony that figures in the story of a troubled ghetto school. Unusual for a television dramatic show, the producers asked him to speak extemporaneously instead of from lines in a script. Mr. Jackson is head of People United to Save Humanity (PUSH), an effort to improve the achievement level of minority students in various communities across the land. His remarks follow:

"Today, we have the distinct privilege to share with you in this honors ceremony, and there are some basic principles that we need to establish very early. One of them is that learning is a personal thing. You really must want to learn.

"You must say to yourself, as a student, 'I can learn, it is possible. I ought to learn, it is the moral thing to do. It is possible, it is imperative that I learn.' A teacher ought to say 'I can teach, I ought to teach, I must teach.'

"And thus we start with a very attitudinal premise, and we often say that it is not your aptitude but your attitude that determines your altitude, with a little intestional fortitude.

"We must live with the consequences of our decisions. If we spend three hours a night in front of a TV being entertained rather than three hours a night trying to learn how to read, write and think, we will live with the consequences of that decision.

"If we become weak and superficial — and use pill power and cop out rather than will power and cope with it — we will live with the consequences of that decision. If we become isolated from the real world rather than insulated from it because we are tough in the inside, it's nothing but choice."

A Comedic Western

Paul Newman stars as the legendary Judge Roy Bean in the comedic western directed by John Huston. "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," June 12 (8:30 to 11 p.m.).

Ava Gardner, Anthony Perkins, Jacqueline Bisset, Ned Beatty, Stacy Keach, Tab Hunter and Roddy McDowall also appear in the film.

The Judge, "the law west of the Pecos," assumed his title after taking over the sleepy Texas town of Vinegaroon, hanging all of its outlaws (making him the only non-Mexican in the town) and confiscating their property for "court costs." His confidence as a lawmaker was based upon his intimate knowledge of the law, "having spent my life in its flagrant disregard."

Upholding the law was not the Judge's only activity — upholding the honor of the lovely actress Miss Lillie Langtry (Gardner) was the other. The Judge had never met Miss Langtry, but his adulation of her led him to install her picture over the bar in the courthouse, and to rename the town after her.

A giant, friendly grizzly bear, given to the Judge by an old mountain man (John Huston), becomes his third love, after Miss Langtry and his mistress, Marie Elena (Victoria Principal). The animal, affable as long as there's beer in his belly, becomes the town's official watch bear.

The Judge's wealth grows, as does his power. But there's a snake in the grass — lawyer Gass (McDowall), who claims to have a deed entitling him to the Judge's domain. A skirmish with the watch bear convinces him that he made a mistake, but Gass is not convinced for good.

Twenty years pass. Oil has been found in Langtry, and Judge Bean left the town in disgrace two decades ago. Gass, now prosperous, is attempting to evict Rose Bean (Bisset) from her father's property. But Rose is defending herself. On the eve of the showdown, an old man rides into town — it's the Judge, coming to aid his daughter in a climactic gun battle.

TWO WOMEN figure prominently in the colorful life of Judge Roy Bean, played by Paul Newman, the actress Lily Langtry (played by Ava Gardner, bottom) and his daughter Rose (Jacqueline Bisset, top) in the comedic western, "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, June 12 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Set In The Old West

Garrett Brown and Robert Pierce star as George and Billy Dooley, a bumbling duo who ride through the Old West dispensing justice to all its deserving inhabitants, even though they can't ride, shoot, rope or even chew tobacco, in "The Dooley Brothers." The comedy adventure will be broadcast Tuesday, June 12 (8 to 8:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

John Myhers also stars as Jack Black, who "invented" the legendary Dooley Brothers, of which he has eight "franchise" teams operating from the Mississippi to the Pacific and from Mexico to Canada.

Only one set of 'brothers' gives Jack any trouble. Billy, his nephew, and Billy's partner, George. Their ineptness is only exceeded by their naive approach to every crisis, which, in this case, is saving Cool Sam Bennett, an aging sheriff (played by Dub Taylor), from the revenge of the notorious Simons gang.

THE HINDENBURG, one of Germany's luxury Zeppelins, unexpectedly crashed while landing in New Jersey after a 1937 Atlantic trip, a scene from "The Hindenburg," an adventure drama on "The Big Event" Sunday, June 10 (8-10:30 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Drama About Disaster

A German counteragent travels across the Atlantic in his nation's immense dirigible with a sense of impending doom, in "The Hindenburg" — based on one of the century's most spectacular air disasters — to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, June 10 (8 to 10:30 p.m.). Academy Award winners George C. Scott and Anne Bancroft star.

Scott (Best Actor — "Patton," 1970) and Bancroft (Best Actress — "The Miracle Worker," 1962) portray two of the passengers aboard the huge lighter-than-air craft which crashed on landing at Lakehurst, N.J., in 1937.

When the Hindenburg takes off from Germany with 97 people on board, Agent Ritter (Scott) muses to himself, "I have an uneasy sense of disaster."

His fears are somewhat realized when, during the course of the voyage, he learns that eight travelers have a motive to sabotage the prestigious luxury craft.

Ritter becomes more and more convinced that there is a plot to destroy the dirigible, particularly after he discovers a bomb in the ship's rigging and a Gestapo agent finds a knife in a hazardous section of the Hindenburg.

As the ship nears the American seacoast, Ritter doubles his efforts to prevent a disaster and uncover any saboteurs.

"The Hindenburg" opens with an original black and white newsreel, an entertaining segment that capsulizes the history of ballooning and introduces the Hindenburg ("the pride of Germany") and, in its usual light-mannered tone, provides an ironic contrast to the fictionalized drama that follows.

Caine Is Secret Agent

Michael Caine stars as a British secret agent who searches out his son's kidnappers while suspected of engineering the crime by his own superiors in "The Black Windmill," ABC-TV's "Tuesday Movie of the Week," June 12 (11:30 p.m.).

Caine is excellent in a properly cold-blooded portrayal of a sheerly professional agent forced to turn renegade when his superiors pragmatically refuse to hand over a ransom of diamonds after his schoolboy son is kidnapped by a desperate gun-running mob. While a complex scenario, played out by arch-villains John Vernon and Delphine Seyrig, manufactures mounting evidence that Caine is the source of information leaks in his bureau, he eventually steals the ransom himself.

Pursued by a variety of British Intelligence agencies, Caine embarks on a mad dash from London to Paris and back again, skirting a potpourri of fates and eventually retrieving both his son and the identiy of the infiltrated agent (his bureau chief, John O'Connor).

Counterpointing Caine's calloused exterior and adding to his resolve is the wretcheness of his estranged wife, sensitively played by Janet Suzman. As his desperate adversaries, Vernon and Seyrig are excellent, his menace conveyed primarily through violence, hers through icy sexuality.

'Paper Moon' On CBS

Oscar-winner Tatum O'Neal and her father, Ryan O'Neal, star in the uproarious comedy of America in the 1930s, "Paper Moon," which will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," June 13 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Tatum won an Academy Award as Best Supporting Actress for her work in "Paper Moon," her screen debut. Madeline Kahn, who was nominated for the same award, also stars in the film, as well as John Hillerman and P.J. Johnson.

In the midst of the Great Depression, Moses Pray (O'Neal), a two-bit Bible-selling con man, is out-conned when he falls prey to the innocent charms of the not-so-innocent 9-year-old, Addie Loggins (Tatum O'Neal).

Addie blackmails Moses by publicly and loudly insisting that he is her father. Moses, who can't be sure that it's not true, has no recourse but to take her along with him as he plies his "trade" — fleecing widows by selling them Bibles supposedly ordered by their late husbands.

Quickly proving herself more adept at the con game than Moses — yet displaying a sense of conscience that he lacks — Addie begins engineering new schemes, and they form an unlikely but highly profitable alliance. They set out on a series of madcap confidence games, but it's not long before their bunco ploys land them in hot water with both sides of the law.

OSCAR-WINNER Tatum O'Neal and her father, Ryan O'Neal, star as a couple of con artists who form an unlikely alliance, in "Paper Moon," a comedy of America's Thirties, to be rebroadcast as the "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie" June 13 (9-11 p.m.).

Suzanne Somers Stars

Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company" stars as a once-popular singer who goes to the beach to unwind and forget about her faltering career only to become involved in the problems of a group of young people, in "Zuma Beach," to be rebroadcast on "NBC Wednesday Night at the Movies" June 13 (9 to 11 p.m.).

At the beach, Bonnie (Somers) becomes the object of admiration by a group of teen-age boys who make a point to get acquainted with her even though she's an "older woman."

For her part, Bonnie is amused by it all and finds herself forgetting her problems as she becomes involved with those of the teen-age boys and girls she becomes friendly with during the Labor Day outing.

A Happy 'Angel'

When Shelley Hack was asked how she reacted to being selected as the third angel on "Charlie's Angels," she replied, "I just sat there with a great big smile on my face."

The five-foot-seven-and-a-half inch blonde from Greenwich, Conn., best known as the "Charlie Girl" of the Revlon perfume commercials, was chosen as the new co-star for Jaclyn Smith and Cheryl Ladd following a nationwide search in which more than 150 actresses were auditioned. She will play a new character named Tiffany Welles, the daughter of a Connecticut police chief who is an old friend of the angels' employer, the unseen Charlie.

Others who appear to be as pleased are Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg, executive producers of the series. In their announcement to the press, they said: "We feel that Shelly Hack has exactly the talent, style and intelligence that we were looking for. She will make her debut on a special two-hour opening episode of the series in September."

Star Of 'Eternity'

Barbara Hershey, just seen in the miniseries "A Man Called Intrepid," will co-star as Karen Holmes — opposite previously announced William Devane — in NBC-TV's "From Here To Eternity: The War Years."

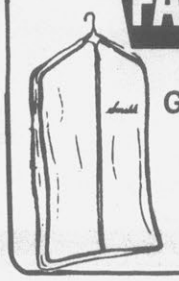

The new series continues the story of the six-hour miniseries, which was based on the James Jones best-seller about Army life in Hawaii just prior to Pearl Harbor.

Hershey will portray the role originally played by Deborah Kerr in the 1953 Oscar-winning movie; and more recently by Natalie Wood in the miniseries.

Planning To Air

Among the miniseries NBC is planning to air next season are: "Shogun," "The Martian Chronicles," "The Night the Bridge Fell Down," "Beggarman, Thief" (the followup to "Rich Man, Poor Man"), "The Last Convertible," "Ivanhoe," "Alexander the Great" and "Freedom Road."

Those Frustrated Gardeners!

If your pests are proliferating, your phlox won't flower, and grubs just ate your grass, don't despair — help is on the way! Just in time for the summer gardening season, "Crockett's Victory Garden" continues with a new series of 26 programs packed with tips on growing flowers, vegetables, shrubs and trees — outdoors, indoors, or in a greenhouse — whether your thumb is green or not. The 1979 Victory Garden in all its flowery and leafy glory will brighten television screens starting Thursday, June 14 (7 p.m.), on PBS.

Now in its fourth year, the series will again feature the thriving Victory Garden and greenhouse, along with visits to outstanding gardens both here and abroad. The show will continue to focus on keeping your garden and houseplants healthy, productive and beautiful — and some special additions and innovations are promised for the new season.

Landscaping is among the upcoming features, and a plot of land adjacent to the Garden has been turned into a demonstration area where viewers will see how to plan a perfect landscape setting with evergreen and deciduous trees, flowering shrubs, groundcovers, and decorative accents such as a small ornamental pool.

A Monthly Basis To Weekly Time

It has never been peaceful and quiet at the uptown Manhattan offices of "20/20," ABC News' prime time weekly magazine program.

But things are especially hectic these days as the producers, writers and correspondents are shifting from a monthly on-air schedule to a weekly schedule.

"20/20," which aired on a monthly basis during the winter, is now seen on Thursdays (10 to 11 p.m.). Hugh Downs is the host.

"We've had teams of correspondents, producers, camera crews and researchers spread out all over the country — Texas, the Great Lakes region, New Orleans, Puerto Rico — and in two foreign countries," says Al Ittleson, the show's Executive Producer.

"We intend to be current, but we also intend to be substantive," says Ittleson. "We're going after significant stories that break at the last minute. We're going to show how they relate to viewers and how they affect the lifestyles of this country. That's the most challenging, the most rigorous part of producing a newsmagazine program every week."

Ittleson has made some basic changes in "20/20" geared to the weekly format. Each week, the program opens with "Up Front," an in-depth report on a current news topic, followed by "Special Report," an investigative story; a personality profile on a major newsmaker; and other news features that will vary in style from week to week, including stories on health, science, justice and injustice, lifestyles, art and the performing arts.

"We want '20/20' to be current and to show a concern about what's going on in this country as well as in other parts of the world," says Ittleson. "But the key to our coverage of domestic and foreign events will be how those events affect people in this country.

"Our stepped up pace means a lot more work to meet weekly deadlines, and it means our correspondents are going to be on the road a great deal of the time," says Ittleson. "But it will all pay off each Thursday evening, because we intend ultimately to be the most substantive, hard-hitting newsmagazine program on the air."

Variety Specials

Four top stars — John Travolta, Goldie Hawn, John Ritter and Donna Summer — will headline their first variety specials for ABC during the next two seasons.

SPOTLIGHT

An Actor Or Cowboy?

Larry Hagman became an actor because being a cowboy is hard work. "At the time that I chose acting, I could imagine myself with two titles — actor or cowboy," says Hagman. "Acting was the easiest thing to do at the moment. Besides, actors travel. They do things. There are no social barriers with actors."

An important factor in Hagman's life is that he is the son of actress Mary Martin. But unlike many offspring of great entertainers, Larry has had to pay his own dues.

Today he co-stars as J.R. Ewing in CBS-TV's hit series, "Dallas," and this marks his fifth series. Others were "The Edge of Night" (he starred in 600 episodes), "I Dream of Jeannie," "The Good Life" and "Here We Go Again."

Larry was born in Weatherford, Texas, and attended schools there and in New York, Vermont and California. "Then," he says, "I went to Bard College — that's in New York — and took drama. I went there because I was terribly rich and terribly oddball and couldn't get into any other college.

After a year, he decided that on-the-job experience was a better pathway to acting than school, so he quit and went into repertory theatre and summer stock. He tried to avoid opportunities for roles with his famous mother, but times got so hard once that he accepted a job as a chorus boy in "South Pacific" for a week's work. Prior to that he had appeared in over 50 plays and musicals.

LARRY HAGMAN

Then another relative, Uncle Sam, called and Hagman enlisted in the Air Force. While assigned to special services, he met and married Maj Axelsson, a Swedish dress designer.

After finishing his duty in the military, Hagman worked briefly on his mother's ranch in Brazil and then returned to New York and show business.

Larry enjoys skiing, fishing, sailing, touring in a motorhome of his own design, collecting hats and flags. He also gives of his time to work with the mentally retarded including the making of a film for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare regarding the de-institutionalization of the retarded.

Inverness Hosts Open

Inverness Club in Toledo, Ohio, which will host the U.S. Open Championship for the fourth time, is steeped in golf tradition.

ABC Sports will present the action at Inverness with its extensive coverage at various times, June 14 through 17.

Inverness originally borrowed its name from a small village in Scotland. The original course, designed in 1903, had a nine-hole layout which was expanded into 18 holes in 1919. Golf officials were so impressed with the merits of the course that they slated the U.S. Open for Inverness in 1920.

Hundreds of evergreens and hardwoods surround the course, with two brooks and 110 sand bunkers providing ample hazards. The greens are true, fast and undulating with very few flat surfaces. The golfer with a precise game will have an easier time at Inverness than will the big hitter.

Inverness' early years were beset by fires which twice destroyed the clubhouse in 1911 and 1918. A Tudor-style clubhouse was built which stands today as a beacon of the golf history at Inverness.

The 1920 Open was won by pipe-smoking Britisher Ted Ray with a 72-hole total of 295, 11 strokes over par. Only one stroke separated Ray from Leo Diegel, Jack Hutchinson, Jack Burke and the great but aging Harry Vardon. Vardon was leading by five strokes on the last seven holes, but an angry storm with gale winds helped to bring about his defeat. Ray was the last Britisher until Tony Jacklin in 1970 to win the U.S. Open, and no one from Great Britian has won the tournament since Jacklin.

There was some precedent setting at the 1920 Open because it was the first time golf professionals were allowed free access to a clubhouse. To show their appreciation to Inverness' President, S.P. Jermain, the professionals pooled their resources to buy an enormous grandfather's chime clock which still stands in the lobby, keeping excellent time.

THE NEWEST of the NASCAR millionaires, Darrell Waltrip, won the World 500, Saturday, May 27. Highlights of this exciting race will be presented on "CBS Sports Spectacular" Saturday, June 16 (4:30 to 6 p.m.).

Nascar's $$$$$aire

The newest of the NASCAR millionaires, Darrell Waltrip, has taken the world of stock car racing by storm.

Sunday, May 27, Waltrip won the World 600 at the Charlotte Motor Speedway for the second straight time, only the second driver ever to do so. Highlights of this exciting race will be featured on "CBS Sports Spectacular" Saturday, June 16 (4:30 to 6 p.m.).

This was Waltrip's 18th victory in his Grand National career, which spans only the last seven of his 32 years. This places him in the 20th place on the all-time winners list, past the late Curtis Turner, considered to be a legend around the oval tracks.

Much of the World 600 was anything but an ordinary race — for Waltrip and everybody else. The leaders started out running a tight draft, and a slew of caution flags gave them the opportunity to stay on fresh tires and run their best.

This resulted in a battle for the lead that gave the appearance the race distance was in yards, not miles. Several drivers crowded each other for space all around the track, running in a tight knot.

"It was because of the lap money," explained Waltrip, referring to the bonus money the speedway paid. "We were trying to get as much of it as we could. If it hadn't been for that, we could have sat back and waited."

Donnie Allison's engine expired early, as did Buddy Baker's. The same misfortune hit Joe Millikan, Neil Bonnett and Bobby Allison. Benny Parsons slapped the wall after misjudging a corner, and Cale Yarborough lost a lap he never made up because of a bad set of tires.

During the first half of the race, the crowd of 130,000 saw 45 lead changes. Then the competition thinned out and there were only 14 second-half lead swaps.

The handsome Kentuckian, who calls Franklin, Tenn. his home, has become known for saying exactly what he thinks, when he thinks it, and is one of the NASCAR superstars.

Prowse On BBC

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — A brief chat with SHELLEY HACK, the new 'ANGEL,' finds her to be personable, intelligent and as excited as a child on Christmas morning. She is also a history buff, a good cook who also cleans her own home, still dates writer/producer NICHOLAS MEYER — despite reports to the contrary — and admits she's nervous about her new job.

STEVE CARLSON (Dr. Gary Lansing) on ABC's "GENERAL HOSPITAL" has been notified that his contract will not be renewed and thus he'll disappear from view permanently this week.

NBC won't give out any details, but a spokesman for the web does confide that there is going to be a major, even drastic, change in the storylines of BILL and SUSAN SEAFORTH HAYES (Doug & Julie), JOHN CLARKE (Mickey Horton) and SUZANNE ROGERS (Maggie) no later than this Fall. The spokeman said that fans of the show will probably be "stunned" by the alterations.

Still another daytime note. CBS has announced that "THE YOUNG & THE RESTLESS" will be expanded to an hour beginning in September. The number one-rated soap opera will air from 12:30 to 1:30.

SYLVESTER STALLONE is wanted by COL. TOM PARKER in the projected ELVIS PRESLEY film biography of which he's co-producer, while Sly's brother, FRANKIE, is wanted by still a different producer for a different film version of the singer's life and career.

SALLY STRUTHERS and husband DR. WILLIAM RADER are the proud parents of a new-born daughter, SAMANTHA.

ROBIN WILLIAMS' representatives are involved in negotiations for a new contract for TV's 'MORK' in which they're asking that Robin's percentage of the series be increased, and his $15,000 per episode salary at least be doubled.

On still another front, CARROLL O'CONNOR has yet to sign his CBS contract for his return as Archie Bunker, even though he says there is no real reason that he won't sign. It's not money Carroll is seeking. He wants the assurance of a new series should "ARCHIE BUNKER'S PLACE" not make it as well as the guarantee of five pilots and three TV movies for his own production company. On the other hand, maybe it is money!

Chris' Close Call

ABC Sports announcer Chris Economaki had a close call with disaster the week prior to the running of the Indy '500.' After showing how gasoline and alcohol burned, he accidentally spilled the flaming alcohol on his pants legs, and burned both legs.

Post In Top Position

Sandra Post proved the best "mudder" a few weeks ago when she shot a final round 69 in a rain-plagued Lady Michelob to overcome a faltering Pam Higgins and capture her second win of 1979. Post's previous win came in the prestigious Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle. The $15,000 first prize vaults Post into the top position on the LPGA Money List, with $91,758 ahead of JoAnne Carner and Nancy Lopez.

A heavy rainstorm hit the Brookfield West Golf and Country Club where the event was taking place, forcing a 47-minute suspension of play. The 30-year-old Canadian birdied the first hole when play resumed and went on to finish with a three-under-par 33 on the front side. Birdies on 10, 12 and 13 moved her into a three-shot lead which she never relinquished.

Now Sandra Post has an opportunity to enhance this year's earnings when she competes in the LPGA Championship Sunday, June 10. NBC will televise the action (2:30 p.m.).

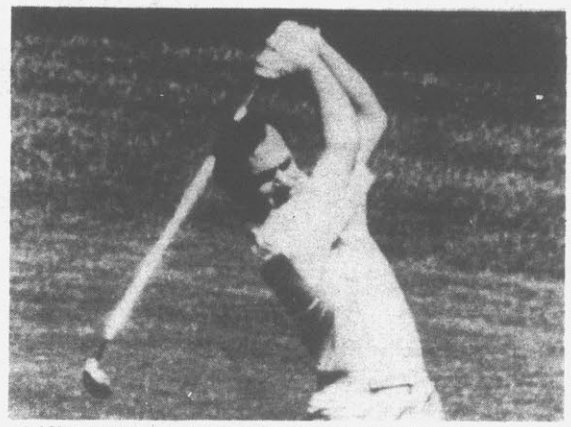

Post was a three-time winner of both the Ontario and Canadian Junior Championships, and she won the South Atlantic Amateur just before turning pro in 1968.

She got off to an auspicious start in her professional career by winning the LPGA Championship in her rookie year at the tender age of 19, defeating veteran Kathy Whitworth in an 18-hole play-off. She was subsequently named Rookie-of-the-Year.

Then came a 'dry period' which lasted 10 years. During this time she did not win another official tournament. But she finally broke through as a double winner in 1978, capturing the prestigious Colgate-Dinah Shore Winner's Circle, in which she shot her low career round of 65, and the new Lady Stroh's Open.

SANDRA POST, now at the top of the LPGA Money List, hopes to enhance her earnings with another win when she competes in the LPGA Championship. NBC will televise the event Sunday, June 10 (2:30 p.m.).

LOU GRAHAM, one of the PGA's most consistent players, will be among those competing in the Atlanta Golf Classic. CBS will televise final-round play Sunday, June 10 (4 p.m.).

Consistency Is Key

Whenever Lou Graham's name is mentioned in golf circles, the fact quickly surfaces that he is pleasant company and in possession of a disarming sense of humor. Nor is it unusual to hear people pondering over how well Graham plays golf and yet has so few victories to show for his abundance of talent.

Lou Graham has been playing the PGA Tour since 1964 and has chalked up only three tournament victores; the 1967 Minnesota Classic, the 1972 Liggett & Myers and the 1973 U.S. Open.

True to his reputation for consistency, Graham came out of last year's Atlanta Golf Classic $15,466 richer, and he's hoping to chalk up the winning score in this year's Atlanta Classic. CBS will televise final-round play in the $250,000 PGA Tour event Sunday, June 10 (4 p.m.).

In 1978, Lou topped $100,000 in winnings for the third straight year; the last time he was under six figures was '75, the year he won the U.S. Open in a playoff with John Mahaffey. During three winless years, however, he finished in the top ten in more than a quarter of his starts!

Last year, among eight top-ten showings, Lou was second in the Tournament Players Championship as well as the Atlanta Classic. In the former, he tailed winner Jack Nicklaus for the entire Championship; one stroke back after 18 holes, tied after 36, one back at the end of 54. Nicklaus had to make a difficult par on Sawgrass' treacherous final hole to prevent a playoff with Lou, who always plays the tough courses well.

The year before, 1977, Graham notched nine finished in the top ten. His best showing was, predictably, in the U.S. Open at Southern Hills, where he fell just one stroke shy of forcing a playoff with Hubert Green.

'Listen, Sport..'

Who is Andy North? Well, he's a tall, friendly, likable chap who won only one tournament before last year's U.S. Open Championship, and that was the Westchester Classic in 1977. He is a long hitter like so many other men on the tour, another of those fellows who learned his trade in the college ranks at the University of Florida. It may have added to his relative obscurity that Florida's two NCAA golf championships came the year before North got there and the year following his departure.

Now he's back among the ranks of the PGA Tour in an attempt to win the U.S. Open for the second consecutive year. ABC Sports will cover the action Thursday, June 14 (11:30 to 11:45 p.m.), Friday, June 15 (11:30 p.m. to 12-midnight), Saturday, June 16 (2:30 to 6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, June 17 (2:30 to 6:30 p.m.).

Over and over, throughout last year's U.S. Open, North had rescued himself with his putter and a putting style — hunched over, hands creeping down the shaft — that would dismay any instruction-book illustrator. Then he one-putted the first four greens of Sunday's final round, and it immediately became clear that this Open was going to be his for the winning or the losing.

The determining factor was a four-foot putt North faced to win the Open. And if things weren't suspenseful enough at this point, North added to the moment by twice stepping away from the putt as if he fully expected it to turn into a demon before his very eyes.

He got over the ball, paused and backed away. He got over the ball again, paused and back away. But the third time he crouched over the putt — and just when nearly everybody knew he would surely blow it — Andy North rammed the ball into the cup.

It might have been the 30th or 40th four-footer he made in last year's Open, but it didn't matter. What did matter was the fact that it was the longest putt the last player in the field ever made on the last hole to win an Open.

Later, North said, "Making a four-foot putt to win the Open is something you usually only pretend to do in practice rounds."

Andy claims that he backed off his putt because he was waiting for a lull in the wind. Maybe so. He also says that he talked to himself during this short time that seemed like an eternity to the spectators and other players.

ANDY NORTH, winner of last year's U.S. Open, will be vying for a second win when the U.S. Open Championship is played this week. ABC Sports will present 8 3/4 hours of coverage (Thursday, June 14, through Sunday, June 17).

ABC Dominates The Rating Charts

The ratings charts for the first three months of 1979 confirm the fact that ABC indisputably has defended its No. 1 ranking in sports telecasting. Among the top 10 shows, ABC showed the first five and tied for seventh. NBC was sixth, seventh (tied) and ninth in the ratings. CBS was left with the 10th program.

Following were seven that included four on CBS, two on NBC and only one on ABC.

Significantly, there was a sharp rating drop after the top five to NBC's "SportsWorld," which ranked sixth. That show marked the largest gain over the prior year — some 35 percent. But there is an ABC angel to that success — Don Ohlmeyer, 'godfather' of the program, came over from ABC.

The fact that Sunday's "Wide World of Sports" was top ranked is laced with irony. It was born six years ago, along with 'Superstars,' merely because ABC was looking for programming to film the time gap left when the National Baseketball Association went over to CBS.

The two 'heavyweights' on Sunday afternoons were instrumental in knocking the National Hockey League off NBC and later World Championship Tennis. Now the two shows are a primary peril to the NBA, attracting more than double pro basketball's audience on Sundays.

It can be argued that hockey, tennis and pro basketball have themselves to blame for network television difficulties — that the two ABC shows only exploited these weaknesses rather than create them. Still, the audience that remains constant over the years turned away from live sports when it was offered an alternative by ABC.

That network has had a long-time hold on technical personnel producing taped coverage. Its extended grip on weekend sports also has offered unique promotional advantages, which some consider a key to the ratings.

The ultimate test of ABC's rating magic should be the North American Soccer League telecasts it is now covering.

Racquet-Sport Stars

John McEnroe, considered by many as one of the world's finest tennis players, was a favorite, among others, in the third annual World Invitational Racquets Championship, which CBS Sports will broadcast Sunday, June 10 (2:30 to 4 p.m.).

Five different racquet-sport superstars, who have won more than 25 national or international titles, competed in the unique $40,000 tournament, held in San Diego, Calif., last month.

The championships featured five fast-moving sports, including tennis, racquetball, badminton, squash and table tennis — but with a catch — no superstar could compete in his own specialty.

Therefore, McEnroe, who won the Grand Prix Masters and World Championship Tennis tournament earlier this year, was not allowed to play in the tennis competition. He did, however, compete in the other four events and was permitted to coach the others in tennis.

The 20-year-old McEnroe, who is currently ranked among the world's top three professionals, knew the man to beat was Sharif Khan, who, for the past 10 years has been recognized as the world's greatest squash player.

Khan, 34 years of age and from Pakistan, won this championship two years ago, defeating Bjorn Borg in the process. He was upset last year by Guillermo Vilas in defense of his title. Khan learned squash from his father, Hashim Khan, who is probably the greatest squah player of all time.

Racquetball's 21-year-old "boy wonder," Hogan, will be another tough competitor. Known for provoking opponents by smashing racquets, he has earned the nickname "Hogan the Hooligan," given him by a national racquetball magazine.

With Hogan and McEnroe both having reputations as "hotheads," confrontations between the two will be worth looking forward to.

Making his third appearance is 24-year-old Dan Seemiller from Pittsburgh, Pa., who during the past year was recognized as the United States' top table tennis player. A former high school baseball standout, Seemiller now leads America's best table tennis team ever, and has played in some 40 countries.

A new entry this year is Chris Kinard of Pasadena, Calif., who is a four-time U.S. badminton singles champion. The 28-year-old was a key member of U.S. teams in such international competitions as the 1975 Pan American Games, the 1975 Devlin Cup, and the Thomas Cup in 1970, '73, '76 and '79.

Erik's 'Hacienda'

Erik Estrada, star of "CHiPs," reveals that a year ago when the show was picked up for a second season, he bought a modest condominium in the San Fernando Valley near the studios. "Now that the show is going into its third season, I've got my mom, sister and brother out here from New York, and we are looking for a Spanish hacienda with land surrounding it." Erik was brought up in New York's Spanish Harlem.

ROBERT CULP stars as the by-the-book police sergeant in "The Last of the Good Guys," to be presented on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," June 16 (9-11 p.m.).

Asking A Question

How long can a deceased man be kept 'alive'? That's the question "The Last of the Good Guys" asks. Moreover, can a law enforcement agency that's in the business to recognize and uncover cons, frauds, hoaxes, and miscellaneous shams be conned itself?

In the drama, airing on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," June 16 (9 to 11 p.m.), Frank O'Malley (Larry Hagman), a well-liked cop who's nearing his 20-year retirement, is dying from leukemia but tries to hide it from his family, fellow officers and the entire police department. He has endured the illness as long as he can and once his family and friends at the department discover his terminal condition, they realize that he's literally struggling to stay alive and on the job until his retirement date comes up so his family can receive maximum pension benefits.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

We are trading progress for security.

FOR REP. CARDISS COLLINS (D.-Ill.)

In your opinion, is the Carter Administration seeking to save money by lessening social services in favor of increased defense-spending? —W.O., Burlington, N.C.

● When attempts are made to reduce Government spending, those who are making the decisions often look toward programs which benefit the people who are essentially unable to defend themselves. In my opinion, the Administration believes that military spending must be increased, at the expense of social programs, to obtain the support needed in the Senate to pass the SALT II treaty and to protect the nation from any "threat" by Communist countries. The current Administration also seems to believe that middle-class Americans are becoming more conservative and are willing to forgo social progress for the sake of economic security.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

● Definitely not. She states that she must be the only one who is disinterested in exactly how far she tips the scales; then adds that her husband (Sen. John Warner) doesn't feel her weight is the most important thing in their lives. Close friends have heard her say she enjoys eating, and while she tries to curb her appetite, she doesn't feel that strongly about her excess (approximately 30 pounds) to go on a rigid diet. Experts stress Liz could improve her appearance if she gave her wardrobe and hairdo a complete overhaul; that her ill-chosen clothes and coiff tend to make her look heavier than she actually is. But then those same experts remark that with her face and eyes, Liz is still a gorgeous woman, who, at 47, doesn't have a wrinkle on her face.

FOR JAMES MICHENER, author of Chesapeake

Do you deliberately start off with the intention of turning out a long novel, and what part of writing do you dread the most? — Buell R. Snyder, Beachwood, N.J.

● I always start by thinking that I can write a short novel, but invariably I become interested in the background of each character, the setting, the ramifications, and it turns out long. I love the research, and I find real joy in doing a final draft, when I'm sure how things are going to come out. But the first draft can be hell.

FOR GEORGE HAMILTON, star of Love At First Bite

What's your opinion of Rod Stewart (your ex-wife's new husband), his music, and is it true you and Alana are bitter enemies? — S.C., Beckley, W.Va.

● I hardly know Rod, but, from all I've heard, he seems like a nice guy. His music, well, that's another thing. It's not to my taste, but that doesn't mean I look down on it. Alana and I have always been friends and always will be. Even during the worst of times, when we fought, our sense of humor was there and we never stayed angry for long.

FOR SUSAN ANN HORVATH, America's Junior Miss of 1979

How do you intend to improve on, or be different from, your 21 predecessors? — B.I., Council Bluffs, Iowa

● I want to speak out a bit more on the fact that not all youth is bad. That there are many teen-agers living clean, decent, wholesome and productive lives who don't make newspaper headlines. I wish it were not always the bad that get written about. I want to focus on the good aspects of youth. As to what all those girls before me did, I only hope I do as well.

Would you like to give up acting and become a storekeeper, as you are on the show? — T.N., Rome, Ga.

● My philosophy always was, and still is, if the Lord wants me to act, I shall act. If He does not want me to act, then I won't. While I was trying to make it in Hollywood, I supported myself by working in an art gallery — and I found I enjoyed people. As long as you meet them gently, not collide with them head on (in any business or area), you're O.K.

FOR CURT GOWDY, host of ABC-TV's The American Sportsman

Has there been any change in your attitude toward hunting during the 15 years you've been involved with the series? — V.G., Kokomo, Ind.

● When you thrash out the pros and cons of hunting, it's like discussing religion — you get nowhere. I've never been a game hunter. That doesn't mean I'm against it — it's my own personal thing. All I can say is that most of our hunters are the best conservationists we have.

FOR PETER NERO, concert pianist-composer-conductor

I hear you play chess against a computer and would like to know if you ever win. — H.E., Sacramento, Calif.

● I have two machines against which I play chess. One is a battery-operated machine that can only be programmed at an easy level of play — so I beat it all the time. In the other, I can program for easy and difficult levels of play. I beat the machine at easy levels and usually lose at difficult levels. The machine computes moves and decides which to make.

PRO AND CON

Has the Cost of Business Regulation Exceeded Its Benefits?

PRO Herbert E. Markley, chairman of the board, National Association of Manufacturers

Regulatory overkill is a major example of the truth that we have more Government today than we really need. Consumers pay about $100 billion annually for Federal regulations. Some are reasonable and necessary, still others are arbitrary and unfair. Many more provide not only very limited benefits, but cause harm — in reduced output, lost jobs and innovation and higher prices for everyone. Government bureaucrats, unelected and unaccountable to the people, are making too many decisions that citizens and businesses should be making for themselves. The bureaucracy's mistaken belief that it knows what's best adds to inflation and has shifted the scales to the point where the cost of regulation far exceeds its benefits.

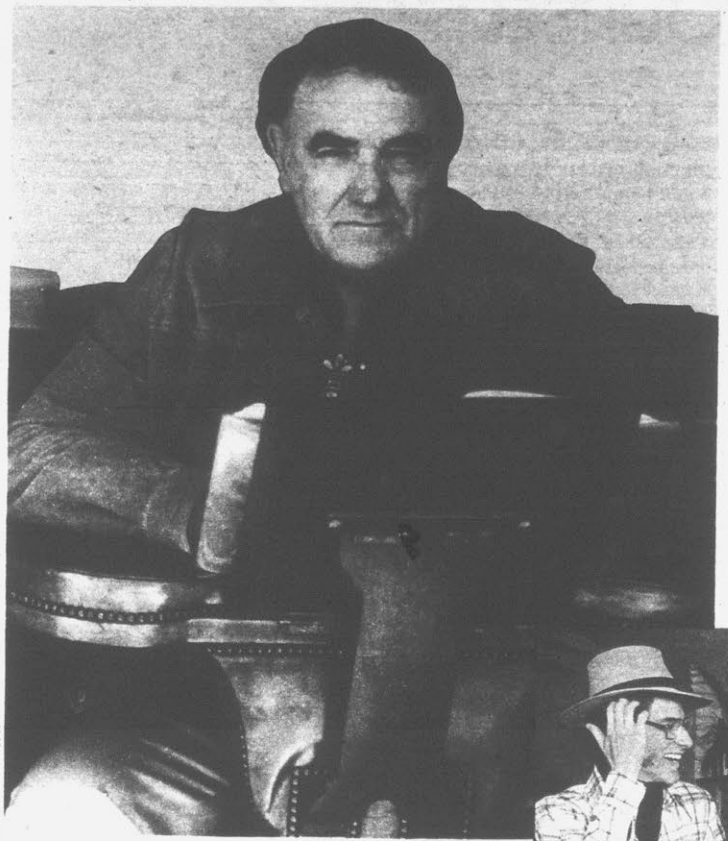

CON Rep. Barbara A. Mikulski, (D. Md.)

Government regulations are essential to protect our health and safety — at home, on the highway and in the work place. We can't afford factories where workers die of lead poisoning or submit to sterilization to keep their jobs. The existence of a few foolish regulations can't be allowed to trivialize the real issue of workers' health. Regulation needn't be an excessive burden. We should have a Congressional veto and some set provisions for regulation to insure periodic review; and we need more citizens' participation in the progress. Regulation should not replace citizen involvement; but in our technologically complex society, citizens are entitled to the protection only Government regulations can provide.

LOUIS L'AMOUR: HE TELLS HOW THE WEST WAS REALLY WON

Peter C. Borsari

Peter C. Borsari

"Research is what my books are all about," says the king of cowboy novelists. At right, L'Amour at home with his wife, Kathy, and son, Beau.

By Suzy Kalter

The world's best-selling and most prolific author of frontier fiction doesn't have spurs that jingle-jangle-jingle. But his pockets are filled with clinking, clanking coins, befitting his rank as America's top authority on how the West was won.

With more than 80 million books in print (including Hondo, Catlow and Sackett), Louis L'Amour ranks beside Harold Robbins and Irving Wallace as one of the world's best sellers of fiction. But unlike his peers, he writes no contemporary novels. All L'Amour books take place west of the Mississippi in times past. He writes of cowboys, Indians, gunslingers and, more importantly, of men and women brave enough and strong enough to find their way west.

"I won't say I'm a compulsive writer, but it's an apt description," muses the 69-year-old L'Amour. "I just love to tell stories."

It was L'Amour's ability to tell stories about the West that brought him to his current vocation. He'd been a longshoreman, elephant handler and officer in World War II before he turned western author. A wartime buddy asked him to put on paper some of the tales of his North Dakota childhood and the gunslingers he'd known. L'Amour was weaned on family stories about his great-grandfather (who was scalped by Indians) and his grandfather, who fought in the Civil War and then returned to the Dakotas to join his father's Army regiment to fight in the Indian Wars. Even in the tame days of L'Amour's childhood, old Indian friends often came to the house to talk about the old times and recount their fighting days.

When he was 12, L'Amour went to visit his older brother in Oklahoma City, and discovered a paperback book in his hotel room: The Passing of the Oklahoma Outlaw by the great former lawman, William Tilghman. He read every word of the book and was enthralled.

Two days later, Bill Tilghman came to the door to visit L'Amour's brother, and the 12-year-old was in ecstacy. "It was every kid's dream, to meet a hero like that in person," recalls L'Amour. He was so interested in Tilghman's tales of his days as marshal of Dodge City and his work as the frontier marshal who rode against the Dalton Gang, that L'Amour persuaded the good guy to teach him how to use a six-shooter. "He was very, very good," says L'Amour with a smile. (L'Amour doesn't like to talk about it, but he's not a bad shot himself.)

On his wartime friend's prompting, L'Amour delivered a short story which was then expanded into the novel, Hondo, and he was off and running. "Everyone wanted westerns," sighs L'Amour, who gave up his dream of writing about the Orient and Far East to make a living.

NBC

And some living. L'Amour and his wife Kathy live with their two teen-age children in a Spanish-style home in Little Holmby, a swank part of Los Angeles. It's there that L'Amour works every day, including Sundays and holidays, to produce three novels a year and to churn out his 40-volume saga of the winning of the West.

The main room in which he works is a library with some 8,000 volumes in it. Research, after all, is what a L'Amour novel is all about.

"I don't just tell you the man panned for gold," says L'Amour proudly, "I tell you exactly how he panned for gold."

An ardent historian, geologist, cartographer (map maker), gunsmith, ecologist, genealogist and book lover, L'Amour steeps each tale in fact, and surrounds each fiction with reality.

"People want facts, not nonsense," says L'Amour. "They're quick to recognize it when you give them the real story behind the facts. What they really want to know is how things were done. What was it really like? There isn't a western encyclopedia that people can really rely on, so they turn to me. But people already know a lot. You can't fool them."

To quench his readers' demand for authenticity, L'Amour does "endless" research with genealogicial records, court records, newspapers files and old people. "I always try to find two or three people who lived in the area the longest," he explains, "and I go up into the woods or the mountains with a man who's lived there 30 or 40 years. He can teach me a lot."

Then L'Amour will survey the area, taking photographs from a plane. He'll buy up old books, search out maps from time periods he is writing about, and get as many family records as possible.

His memory is so good that he seldom has to get up to check out a fact once he's actually writing. All L'Amour books are thoroughly researched and then planned in the author's head before they're written on his typewriter. He writes five to 15 pages a day, and spends the rest of his time reading and researching. "I'm doing research on a few books now that I probably won't write for 10 years," he admits, "and I wrote one book (The Lonesome Gods) which I conceived of some 20 years ago, and which will only be published next year. I never dash off a quickie."

L'Amour is currently publishing a paperback original, his 74th title for Bantam, The Iron Marshal, and the paperback version of last year's hardback book, Bendigo Shafter. About one-third of his books come out in hardback version first.

"People are inclined to think of the West as just cowboys and Indians," explains L'Amour. "They never think of the people who came west as real people. But those who came were the adventurers. A lot of younger sons came west, people who had no future in Europe or in the East. Fortunes were made overnight. Every day was a struggle for survival. They were very exciting times."

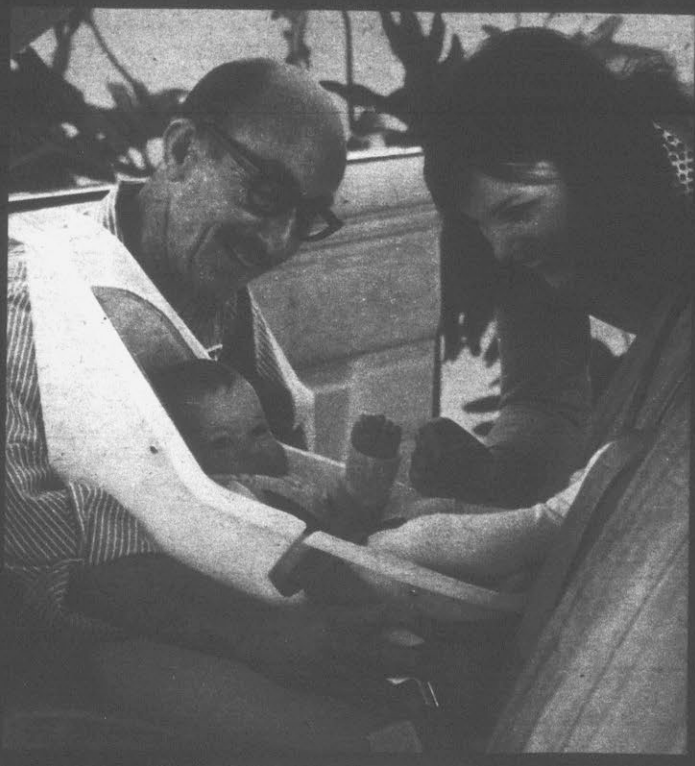

Times, L'Amour notes, that haven't been very accurately handed down to us. "We hear the same old stories all the time and they're only partially true. We're all told that Jamestown was built in 1607 and that the Pilgrims landed in 1620. No one ever talks about the fact that for the 100 years prior to those dates, between 100 and 200 ships were off the east coast of America constantly. There were colonies in Maine way before John Smith ever got to Jamestown, but you never hear anything about it. Some of the first Englishmen sent to this country were sent by Queen Elizabeth I to look for an English white woman who was captured by the Indians. Who was that woman and how did she get here? Elizabeth died in 1603, so there was a lot going on before the Pilgrims came here.

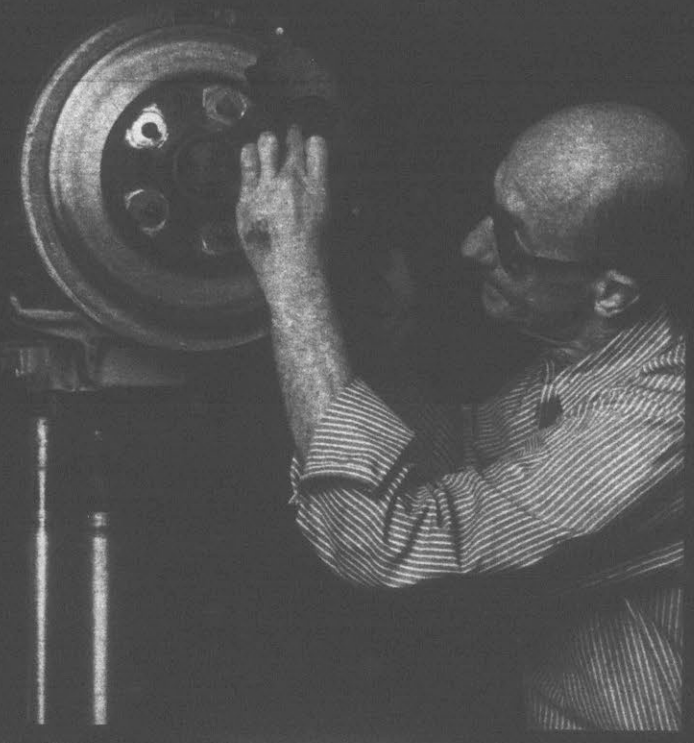

"There were so many people who were nameless, but who have great stories. I'm trying to pick up the loose threads and weave all the history bits together."

saga about three families, the Sacketts, Talons and Chantrys. Twenty of the books have already been published and a TV mini-series, The Sacketts, was just aired on NBC last month. The Sacketts, which is based on two L'Amour books, may well be made into a TV series. But it will remain in the western genre, rather than compete with the 300-year scope of history (1600-1900) that L'Amour has outlined for the entire collection. He claims that his 40-volume work will give a complete picture of the American frontier experience.

"My readers will have fun going back to reread some of the earlier books after the whole series is published," says L'Amour.

Although he is famous for his western books, they are not the only genre he is comfortable with. "I am familiar with about 6,000 years of history pretty well," he notes. L'Amour originally planned to be a poet, and has published some poetry as well as some historical novels, contemporary novels, sea stories and murder mysteries, which he no longer writes. He's also considering writing for the stage. Thirty-three of his works have been made into movies; The Sacketts is his first television project.

"I take a notion to read in a certain area," the author explains, "then I see there's a great story in there, and my brain gets to plotting it out." To feed these ideas, L'Amour's reading comes not from current best sellers but out of print sources. He's currently studying 19th-century American law on the subject of the seizure of ships by privateers. And he's also reading up on international affairs as seen by such statesmen as Sir Francis Bacon and Benjamin Disraeli.

L'Amour considers himself an "old-fashioned gentleman": "I believe in old-fashioned courtesy. I like to pull back the chair for a lady."

His attitude is directly related to the moral code of his characters, and the morality of the western times he writes about. Each of L'Amour's novels is set within a moral framework, so that his belief in good character and the invincibility of the human spirit dominates his work. There is very little sex in his books, no brutality and no gratuitous violence. There are plenty of exciting action scenes, lots of chase scenes, shoot-outs and fist fights, but no rape or rapture.

"You have to understand how different the moral structure of the times was," says L'Amour. "Rape and violence toward women were virtually unknown. Even outlaws were moral men. Women traveled alone and all men were gentlemen. A man's word was his honor. . .And if you lied, or didn't live up to your word, it could mean your livelihood."

L'Amour's own livelihood is something he'll never have to worry about. Although he refuses to figure out his worth, he is undoubtedly a multimillionaire. But it's not the money he's thinking about. It's the next book. Or the next 33 books, all already outlined. "My best work is still ahead of me," he declares. "Sometimes I can't wait to finish this book, to get on to the next one." FW

The International Society of Postmasters announces

Official Gold On Silver Proofs Of The World's First Stamps

"Liberty Seated" is the theme of the first stamp of Liberia. Based on a British colonies design, it differs in that the helmet has become a cap, a tassel has been added to the spear, and the figure is seated on a stone jetty.

Spain's first stamp features the portrait of Queen Isabella II, who reigned in 1850 when this stamp was issued. A special "spiderweb" cancellation was devised to avoid defacing the Queen's image when the stamp was postmarked.

The circular-shaped 1-shahi "Tiger's Head" of Afghanistan was issued in 1871 during the reign of Sher Ali Khan. The word "Mahsul" was torn out by the postmaster when the stamp was canceled. Thus, there are no unused specimens of this stamp in perfect condition. Below: detail of the gold on sterling stamp enlarged to show fine detail.

Classically simple, the 2-skilling "crowned numeral" design of Iceland was based on an earlier stamp of Denmark. Only 40,000 were ever printed—and they are extremely difficult to come by today.

In 1871, Germany was reestablished as an empire. And on January 1, 1872, the new Imperial German Postal Administration issued this ¼ groschen as Germany's first stamp.

The Dominican Republic's ½ real bears the Coat of Arms, framed by words identifying its denomination and postal status. Individual specimens are available but only one such stamp exists on an envelope.

The steamship on the 1 real stamp of Peru represents the method by which mail was delivered in Peru when its first stamp was issued in 1857. Only 100,480 were issued and they are very rare today.

The "Hermes Head" was the first stamp of Greece, issued in 1861. The stamp bears the denomination of 1-lepton and portrays Hermes, the winged messenger of Greek mythology.

The 1-candareen stamp of China is identified by its "Imperial Dragon" motif. The Chinese characters stand for the Great Tsing Dynasty. This early stamp was both gummed and perforated.

ALL GOLD ON STERLING STAMPS SHOWN ACTUAL SIZE

A definitive collection of 73 historic stamps from the 'Golden Age of Philately'—each one the first stamp ever issued by one of the 73 nations that were the very first to issue postage stamps. And each stamp to be authentically re-created in 24kt gold on sterling silver.

Advance subscription deadline: July 31, 1979.

IN THE YEAR 1840, the first postage stamp in history was issued. It was a stamp of Great Britain, which came to be known as the 'Penny Black.' And it bore a classic portrait of the young Queen Victoria along with the designation "Postage One Penny."

This historic stamp—with its modest denomination and simple design—was destined to change the course of life throughout the civilized world. For it heralded the issuance by other countries of their own postage stamps—and eventually resulted in an international postal network linking peoples in every corner of the globe.

Now, the International Society of Postmasters, which represents postmasters in more than one hundred nations, will pay official tribute to the first stamps of the world by issuing an unprecedented commemorative collection.

This fascinating collection will comprise authentic re-creations of 73 great stamps—each from a different nation. In each case, the stamp honored will be the first stamp ever issued by that nation. And together, the complete collection will include the very first stamps ever issued by sovereign nations anywhere in the world.

Working from the actual stamps themselves, the artists and sculptors of The Franklin Mint will carefully re-create the designs for these historic stamps, capturing all of their distinctive features—even to the most minute details. Then the mint's craftsmen will strike each gold electroplate on sterling silver stamp in flawless Proof quality—with a beautiful frosted-on-mirror finish.

The result will be a collection of fascinating and entirely accurate replicas of stamps that are among the most significant in history. Stamps that are today considered to be some of the world's most interesting philatelic treasures.

Officially authorized and fully authenticated

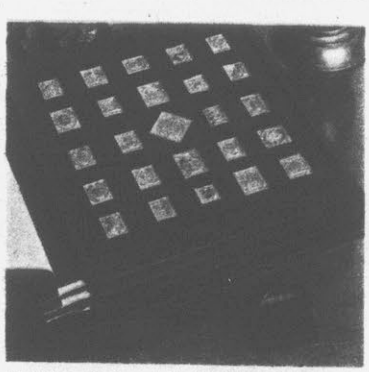

To certify that each gold on sterling silver stamp bears the approval of the International Society of Postmasters, the official symbol of the Society will appear on the reverse of each minted stamp along with its name and denomination—in English and French—and the designation 24kt gold on sterling silver.

A Certificate of Authenticity, bearing the signature of the Secretary-General of the International Society of Postmasters, will be provided to each subscriber. And the historical background of each stamp will be described in a specially-written commentary that will accompany the stamp.

Issued in limited edition

The International Society of Postmasters has authorized that this collection be issued in a world-wide limited edition. Furthermore, it is being made available only until the end of this year. After that date, it will never be offered again—anywhere in the world. And, when all sets have been delivered, the dies used to create the gold on sterling stamps will be destroyed.

The collection will be issued at the convenient rate of one per month, and the guaranteed issue price for each 24kt gold on sterling silver stamp is just $19.50.

To acquire this important new collection it is necessary that your advance subscription be entered by July 31, 1979. The application below should be mailed to the International Society of Postmasters, c/o The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, Pa., by that date.

Bake in preheated 350°F. oven 25 to 30 minutes or until center of pudding is just set.

Serve plain or with whipped cream.

Dorothy says, "I traditionally serve this at Thanksgiving, as my family has for generations. I also serve it to my church group."

BARBECUE LEFTOVERS

Stir in 1 cup ketchup, 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons brown sugar and 2 tablespoons vinegar. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer for 15 minutes, uncovered. Add about 2 or 3 cups leftover chopped cooked meat. Allow to simmer about 30 minutes longer, covered. Stir once or twice.

Marion says, "For years I have enjoyed this simple recipe to use up leftover pork or beef. It can also be tasty used with hamburger."

CHERRY CHEESE DELIGHT PIE

Pour cream cheese mixture into prepared 9-inch graham cracker crust. Bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for 35 to 40 minutes or until top is golden brown. Cool. Top with 1 can (1 lb.) cherry pie filling.

Terra says, "This pie can be garnished with whipped cream, or, if it is a very special occasion, you can dip sugar cubes in lemon extract. Place a dipped sugar cube at each serving. Then light cubes at table before serving."

IN MARILYN'S KITCHEN

One day this past March, I was one of the judges at the "Golden Tasting Spoon" recipe competition, held at New York City Community College. The event gives student chefs the opportunity to experiment with new and unusual seasoning combinations. The recipe is also judged on practicality and ease of preparation.

"Fish à la Worcester," Mr. Jonathan Bergman's entry, was the winner of the 1979 "Golden Tasting Spoon" recipe award. The attractive buttery bread-crumb topping, flecked with bits of crunchy red and green pepper, proved to be a delightful flavor accompaniment to the creamy white baked fish. I'd like to point out also that the bread-crumb topping would be equally as good on shrimp and lobster tails, budget permitting, of course!

FISH A LA WORCESTER

1½ lbs. halibut, flounder or scrod fillets
3½ teaspoons original Worcestershire sauce, divided
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
½ cup soft bread crumbs
¼ cup finely minced onion
¼ cup finely minced green pepper
¼ cup finely minced red pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon minced garlic
Parsley sprigs

2. Brush fillets with ½ teaspoon of the Worcestershire sauce; set aside.

3. In a small bowl, combine butter, bread crumbs, onion, green and red peppers, salt, garlic and remaining 3 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Spread mixture over fish.

4. Broil 6 inches from heat source until fish flakes easily when tested with a fork, about 4 minutes. Arrange fish on heated platter. Garnish with parsley.

Makes 4 servings

Also, I recently attended a large and lively party at my friend Bart Devito's home. Bart's wife, Kitty, is a great cook, and I persuaded her to part with her fantastic lasagne recipe. It has meatballs in it!

THE DEVITO LASAGNE

1 lb. ground beef
½ cup grated Romano cheese
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ cup chopped parsley
½ cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon salt
Several twists freshly ground black pepper
1 egg
1 lb. Italian sausage
1 cup chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons olive or salad oil
1 can (35 ozs.) Italian plum tomatoes
1 can (16 ozs.) tomatoes
⅓ cup tomato paste
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon basil leaves
1 lb. lasagne noodles
1½ lbs. ricotta cheese
½ cup grated mozzarella cheese
1 cup grated Romano cheese
6 quarts boiling water

1. To prepare meatballs, combine beef, Romano cheese, bread crumbs, parsley, onion, clove garlic, salt, several twists freshly ground pepper, egg and water; mix thoroughly.

2. Shape into balls about the size of a golf ball. Place on rack in baking pan with sausages.

3. Bake in 350°F. oven 20 minutes.

4. Meanwhile, in large pot, sauté 1 cup chopped onion and 2 minced cloves garlic in oil until tender, stirring often.

5. Puree both kinds of tomatoes in blender; add to pot with tomato paste, 1 teaspoon salt, sugar, basil and few twists freshly ground black pepper.

6. Add meatballs and sausages. Simmer, uncovered, about 1½ hours, stirring occasionally. Slice sausages.

7. Meanwhile, gradually add lasagne and 2 tablespoons salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally.

8. To assemble, have ready a 9 × 13 × 2-inch and 8 × 8 × 2-inch pan. Use ¾ of meatballs, sausages, sauce, lasagne, ricotta, mozzarella and ½ cup grated Romano cheeses for large pan; ¼ of ingredients for small pan.

9. Spread a small amount of sauce in pans; then a layer of lasagne, a layer of meatballs and sausage slices, a layer of ricotta, a layer of sauce and some grated mozzarella and Romano cheeses.

10. Repeat layers, ending with lasagne, sauce and Romano cheese. Bake, uncovered, in 375°F. oven 35 to 45 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes before cutting into squares.

Makes 18 servings

JOAN JOYCE: THE GREATEST WOMAN ATHLETE SINCE BABE ZAHARIAS

By Jim Benagh

As opportunities for American sportswomen grow by leaps and bounds, a theoretical question is also making the rounds: Will sportswomen ever compete with men?

For Joan Joyce, who is one of the best all-around American athletes of the past two decades, the question is outmoded. She already has.

Joyce may well be the only active pitcher — male or female — who can honestly say he or she has struck out both Ted Williams and Henry Aaron. True, it happened in her sport, softball, not their sport, baseball. But the feat of cooling the bats of two of baseball's greatest hitters is certainly worth retelling.

Joyce pitched against Williams in 1962. "He had just retired from baseball," she recalls. "He came to Waterbury (Conn.) and I was giving him stuff that he had never seen in baseball. There were 10,000 people there, and I shouldn't have done it, even though he told me to pitch all-out. I felt bad because Ted is a friend of mine."

What she did was give him pitches that have been clocked at 116 miles per hour. Women softball pitchers have an edge over their male counterparts because a softball mound is almost 20 feet closer to the plate, but few baseball pitchers have thrown as fast as 100 m.p.h.

Williams tried for about 10 minutes and couldn't get more than a foul tip off her. She threw at least 30 pitches.

Joan faced Aaron last summer under actual game conditions when the home run hitter toured with a team called Con's Kings. She threw six pitches to him during her stint on the mound, and Aaron didn't get a bat on any of them. Was he serious? "Oh, very," she smiles.

After 25 years of topflight women's competition in one sport or another, the unmarried 38-year-old Joyce is not playing for the pleasure of winning against men. "I can go out now and play against men, and I have," she says. "But I don't see that as a big deal — or a goal."

Joyce played against Williams and Aaron to gain some publicity. The right-handed pitcher has a 638-38 record with 139 no-hitters, including 41 perfect games. For three years she's been the star and part-owner of the Connecticut Falcons, a professional softball team which plays out of Meriden. All three years, the Falcons have won the league title.

No matter for whom she's pitched — amateurs or pros — her teams have won. The teams in which she's starred during the past 24 years have won national championships 18 times.

Joan got her start in sports during trips to the playground with her father and brother. When she was in her early teens, she was already playing competitive basketball and softball on a national level.

Joan E. Chandler

Softball was a breeze for the 5′ 10″, 162 pound pitcher. In fact, in 1975, her last year as an amateur, she ran off a streak of 229 scoreless innings (without even an unearned run), and won all 36 of her games to bring her winning streak to a total of 52 games.

And, as if softball isn't challenging enough, Joan joined the women's professional golf tour in 1977. Though she had played less than a dozen times a season, had never taken a lesson and had never competed in a tournament, Joyce, along with other topflight amateurs such as Nancy Lopez, graduated from the pro golf school and was allowed to join the tour.

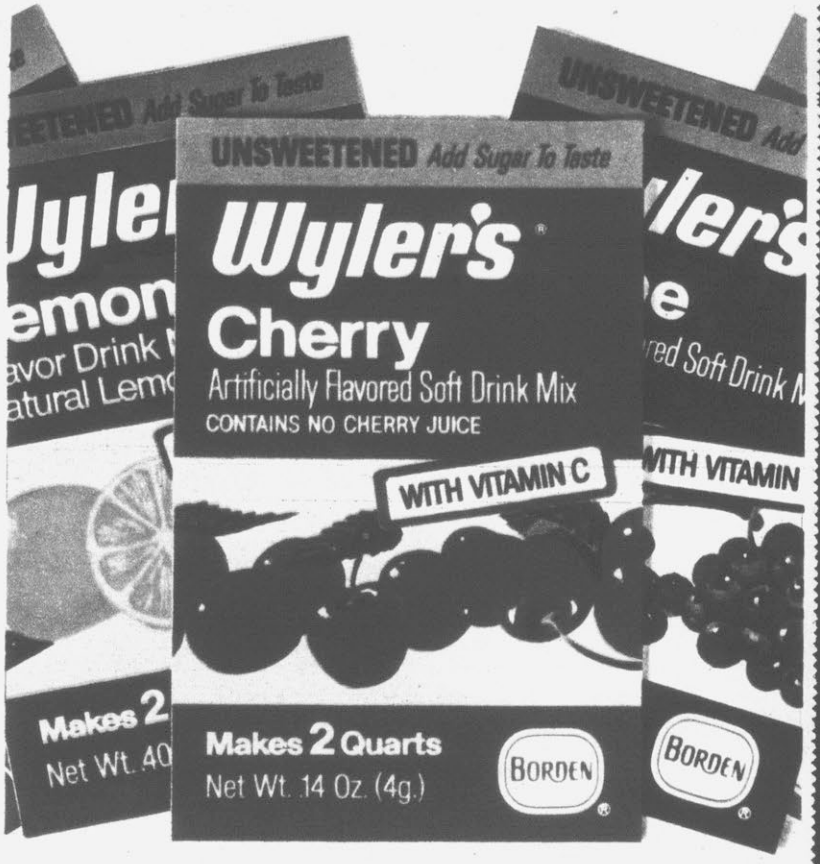

Joyce can boom a golf ball about 260 yards, which is about as good as anybody on the tour, but she doesn't shoot with consistency. "If Joan had started golf with the rest of those kids, no one would have heard of Babe Zaharias," says Chip Campbell, a women's tour official.

Joyce is determined to keep pitching for the Falcons and make it on the golf circuit, as well. During one week last summer, she learned just how difficult that would be. After playing in a Pro-Am golf tournament in Plymouth, Ind., one Thursday, she took a private plane to a softball game being held in St. Louis 3½ hours away. She arrived a half-hour before game time, pitched, flew back to Plymouth at 3:30 in the morning, and teed off at 9 a.m. This year, she expects to increase her number of pro golf events without diminishing her softball schedule.

It's been a rigorous schedule for sure, but it serves Joan's purpose. "I would hate to count the number of frustrated women I have met who wanted to compete when they were younger," she says. "I never wanted to be one of them, and end up only with frustrations." FW

WHAT A BLOOD TEST CAN TELL ABOUT YOUR HEALTH

Dr. Theodore H. Spaet

By Paula Dranov

A blood test can tell your doctor exactly what ails you. Or it can indicate that something — unspecified — is wrong. Most of the time, of course, it simply confirms that you're perfectly healthy.

These days, the blood test is a pretty sophisticated procedure. Actually more than one test, it's a biochemical screening of a single blood sample that provides a wealth of medical information. It can show, for example, that you're anemic; that you're a candidate for a heart attack; that there's something wrong in your body even if you don't have any symptoms; that your liver and kidneys are functioning properly — or not.

Complete Blood Count. This shows whether or not there's a correct balance of red and white blood cells, and if those cells are normal. Too few red cells mean you're anemic — a sign that you might have an iron deficiency, an infection or even a serious disease, and that the doctor will have to find the source of the problem. Too many red blood cells also can be troublesome. It may mean that your blood is too thick, that it clots too easily and can clog a vital blood vessel.

There are several different kinds of white blood cells, and while too many of certain ones merely indicate that you've got an allergy, too many of certain others can be serious.

The blood count also indicates any decrease in platelets, the element in the blood that controls clotting. Too few platelets can be a sign of a virus, or a drug reaction.

Blood Fats. Although there are several blood fats, the one we hear most about — because it has such an important bearing on the risks of heart disease and strokes — is cholesterol. Cholesterol is contained in dairy products, beef and shellfish, and also is produced in the body by the liver.

The incidence of heart disease is highest when cholesterol is elevated. A high level doesn't mean you will have a heart attack, just that your chances are statistically greater.

Blood Sugar. Should your blood sugar level be either too high or too low on a routine screening, the doctor will subject you to more tests to see if you've got either diabetes — too much sugar in the blood, or hypoglycemia — too little blood sugar. The level of sugar in the blood can vary, depending on how recently you've eaten. In addition to diabetes, high blood sugar may be an indication of a liver disorder, while low blood sugar can mean that sugar isn't being properly absorbed into your system because of stomach or intestinal trouble.

Uric Acid. When the uric acid level is high, the reason usually is gout. Either you've got it or are about to get it. Less commonly, a high uric acid level indicates kidney damage.

Potassium. The mineral potassium is vital to muscle contraction and cardiac rhythm. Too much can mean kidney disease or Addison's disease. Too little can mean other kinds of kidney trouble, chronic diarrhea or Cushing's Syndrome. Low potassium levels also may be due to the effect of diuretics, drugs that cause the body to lose water and sodium.

Acid Phosphatase. Found in men's bodies only, this enzyme is in the prostate gland. Small amounts in the blood are normal, but high levels indicate a problem.

Calcium and Phosphorus. These two minerals work together to perform a variety of functions, including forming and strengthening bones, maintaining normal blood clotting and muscle contraction. Their levels are regulated by a hormone produced by the parathyroid glands in the neck. If too much calcium is present, a parathyroid tumor is suspected.

Liver Function. The blood contains the proteins albumin and globulin, certain enzymes, plus the alkaline phosphatase, all of which are routinely measured during the screening. Should abnormal levels of any of them be found, it's because something is amiss in the liver. FW

4 Extra Miles Per Gallon
100 Extra Miles Between Fill-Ups
SAVE Up To $200 A Year On Gas

OR DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK!

See our guarantee

Think of it! Thanks to an amazing automobile discovery, every single car owner, every fleet operator, every truck or camper owner . . . everyone who operates a gas-powered internal combustion engine, can now save up to 20% and more on their gasoline bills!

Yes, you can actually get up to 70. . . 80. . . 90 . . . even 100 extra miles from every single tankful! No matter how old or run-down your car may be . . . no matter how many gallons of gas it now devours each week . . . FROM THE VERY INSTANT YOU INSTALL THE BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVE IN YOUR CAR, YOU MUST EXPERIENCE A DRAMATIC DECREASE IN GAS CONSUMPTION!

Here's why:

With all the advances made in automotive technology, the carburetor is literally 50 years behind the times! It is possibly the most inefficient component in the entire engine and is responsible for an incredible waste of gasoline! You see, the carburetor is pre-set at the factory for idle conditions. This means that it is most efficient in regulating the gas-to-air mixture when the car is standing still and up to speeds of 35 mph. When you drive over that speed . . . or start up from a dead stop . . . or negotiate grades and steep hills . . . or pull a trailer or camper . . . or carry a full load of passengers the whole system breaks down! Too much gas feeds into the carburetor and you get incomplete combustion. Every time that happens, it's just like pouring your money right down the drain.

The Most Significant Automotive Breakthrough Of The Past Ten Years!

Adding the BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVE to your engine is like having a "mini computer brain" which actually monitors the air-to-fuel balance on a constant basis. As soon as it senses an over-rich condition, it opens to permit a precise measure of additional air to enter the system. The result: more efficient combustion and a fuel savings of up to 20% or more!

Controlled Tests Confirm Big Dollar Savings

In the Spring of 1978, we arranged for a local Shell Service Station to conduct a controlled, supervised, test using seven different cars owned and driven by non-professional drivers. Each car was fitted with a locked gas cap and the keys were kept in the possession of the testers.

After establishing base mileage consumption data for the various cars, the BALL-MATIC was installed and miles-per-gallon figures were rechecked. Every single car in the test showed dramatic improvement.

Year/Make Of Car	MPG Improvement
1970 Cadillac Eldorado	21%
1970 Chrysler Imperial	28%
1969 Cutlass	11%
1974 Vega	11%
1972 Gran Torino	19%
1967 Camaro	16%
1973 Cadillac Eldorado	40%
OVER-ALL AVERAGE	18%

Start Saving Immediately

As of now, tens of thousands of motorists all over the country have put the BALL-MATIC GAS SAVER VALVES in their cars. It takes only 60 seconds to install and no special tools are required (easy-to-follow instructions are provided) — it's so easy, anyone can do it! But best of all, the BALL-MATIC works immediately. There's no "breaking-in period" — you experience a significant savings with the very first tankful.

The BALL-MATIC fits all American made cars (except diesel or fuel injection) and all foreign cars except Volkswagen.

READ THE RESULTS FOR YOURSELF!

The BALL-MATIC (gas saver) that I purchased has proven itself. I drive a 1970 Oldsmobile, now I get four miles more per gallon.
C. T.
Orange, California

Just a short note to inform you of the performance of your BALL-MATIC unit that I have installed in my 1972 Ford stationwagon. Prior to using your device, I averaged 12 to 13 MPG, now that I have installed your unit my milage has gone up to 16 MPG around town.
A. C. — Sherriff
Orange County, California

Before it was installed on my 1973 Ford L.T.D. I was getting 9 miles to the gallon, since installation of the BALL-MATIC I am getting almost 15 miles to the gallon.
R. B.
Hickman, Nebraska

After installing the BALL-MATIC on my 1972 Oldsmobile Toronado I increased from 7.5 to 10.5 miles to the gallon.

Seeing this I took my station on as a BALL-MATIC dealer and within the first week sold over 100 valves.

This is the kind of extra income producer that other service stations should consider during this energy crisis to service their customers.
L. M.
Mobile Service
New Britian, Connecticut

I want to express my thanks for the BALL-MATIC. Since it has been installed in my car, my gas mileage has not been under 18 miles per gallon. This is an increase of 5.5 miles per gallon.
Rev. R. N.
Claremont, California

QUIPS & QUOTES

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

IT BUGS ME

"Ladybug, ladybug, fly away home . . ."
I heard this quite oft as a youth.
And ladybugs' dresses, bright red with black spots,
Delighted me greatly, in truth.

But now, as a grown-up, at work in my yard
In places both sunny and shady,
I'm more of a skeptic. This question I ask:
Is a ladybug really a lady?

It might — I can't tell with my none-too-sharp eyes —
Be a manbug instead, in a lady's disguise.
—Richard Armour

The waiter had had it with the pesky diner. "I'll have you know I've been a waiter over half my life," he almost shouted. "Then how come," asked the diner — who was probably enjoying himself — "I got this half?" —Al Batt

One car in every two-car garage? Our standard of living in this country is now so high that no one can reach it.
—Edward Allen

THE BETTER HALF

A British doctor, advocating the after-lunch siesta, says too many people work when nature intended them to sleep. That's only half the problem — what about those people who sleep when the boss intended for them to work? —Henry Leabo

"He's not exactly a bad driver," my friend was telling me. "Let's just say John's the only person I know with a black belt in parking."

PEP TALK

The energy crisis is real enough.
There simply is no doubt of it.
And I have one that's just as tough:
I've recently run out of it.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

My four-year-old Tracy was asking about heaven: "When we go to heaven, will we eat up there?" I said that we wouldn't get hungry up there. She seemed to doubt this and frowned a bit. "Anyhow," she cautioned, "I think I'll take my lunch."

Christians to the Lions!

Bent on being rid of the new and strange religion, pagan Romans had a ringing slogan: "Christians to the lions!" But the followers of Christ had other ideas. They knew that Christ had given them a mission in the world, and they were not about to lie down and play dead, even if some of their number were called upon to suffer martyrdom.

They were idealists enough to hold fast to Christ's teaching and realists enough to know the need for self-discipline and organization if their mission were to be effective. Both the idealism and the realism are impressive in early Christian history as it appears in the New Testament and in the writings of later generations. This history and these writings give us reassurance and courage today, when the spirit of pagan Rome is again abroad in the land. We do well to remember Peter and Paul, Clement and Ignatius, and what they said and did.

For a short survey of the early Christian scene, we invite you to write for our free pamphlet, "The Early Years of the Church." No one will call on you.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Sensible Sunning

If the right precautions aren't taken, enthusiastic sunbathing can often lead to an uncomfortable burn, particularly for people with fair skin. According to Dr. Barbara Gilchrest, one of the authors of Between You and Me, a guide to the care and treatment of your skin, sunburn should be avoided, not only because it's painful but because it damages the skin as well.

"The redness that we call sunburn is caused by the dilation of the blood vessels," says Dr. Gilchrest. "Since the skin cells are badly injured by the ultraviolet light, the body reacts as it does to any injury and sends more blood to that area. In fair-skinned people, the damage happens quickly, since there's not much melanin, the skin's pigment, in their skin. Melanin is our natural sun screen; dark-skinned people have much more of it and can take the sun for longer periods."

Dr. Gilchrest recommends that people with a low level of tolerance to the sun use a sun screen. "We know that the sun leads to premature signs of aging and to skin tumors, and sun screens act as a sponge, soaking up the ultraviolet light that damages the skin. There are many effective sun screen agents, and it is increasingly possible to read the labels of sun screens and learn what kind of protection they'll give. Many manufacturers are putting a sun-protection factor (SPF) on their labels: the higher the number, the more protection you're getting." So, read labels, and tan sensibly this summer.

Souvenirs Worth Saving

If you're planning a leisurely trip this summer and are interested in collecting some distinctly unsouvenirish objects, the Indian Arts and Crafts Board publishes a free booklet which lists addresses and telephone numbers of Native American-owned-and-operated businesses that feature authentic, handcrafted Indian and Eskimo products. The directory, which is arranged alphabetically by state, is available from the Indian Arts and Crafts Board, Room 4004, Dept. AC, U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 29240.

The Camera's Eye

Posing before a camera petrifies most of us, but in this month of weddings and graduations we usually grit our teeth, submit and then cringe at the results. But posing doesn't have to be an agonizing experience, says Gaby, a renowned photographer whose subjects have included Kirk Douglas, Rita Hayworth and King Hussein. He advises people who are sitting for a portrait to wear plain, dark, familiar clothes. "Don't go out and buy a new outfit for the occasion," he warns, "unless it's your wedding dress. Otherwise you'll be uncomfortable, and the pictures will reflect that." For the same reason, he advises women not to change their hair or overdo their makeup.

Gaby admits that "it's unnatural for people to sit in front of a camera, and consequently, most people are on their guard. A camera's eye can be cruel, and the sitter should choose a photographer who inspires confidence. Also, the sitter can really do nothing to help, so he or she should just relax and be natural. It's the photographer's job to make the person forget about the camera." There! Sounds easy, doesn't it?

Hunting For A Summer Job

Good summer jobs are hard to come by, but, if you go about looking in the right way, they're not impossible to find. John Crystal, a well-known authority on career development, emphasizes that "anyone looking for a job should look first at what they really want to do. Capitalize on your own interests; even if you're only 14, you have interests, so pursue them. If you get a job doing something you enjoy, you won't be bored, and you'll be a much better worker. And just because you're 'working' doesn't mean you can't be having a good time; it's not illegal to like your job."

Crystal feels that the best way to get a job is to go and talk to the person who has the ability to hire you. If you want to work in a restaurant or a hospital, talk to the owner or the person in charge of the department where you'd like to be placed. Generally, you'll get a good response because people love to talk about their work, particularly if they know their listener is genuinely interested. So, don't be intimidated, and remember: You are your own best advertisement, and if people don't hear from you they're never going to know what they missed.

Lifestyles

Working mothers. More than half of all American women with children under 18 are working at jobs outside the home, despite the staggering difficulties of juggling housework, child care and work simultaneously. According to a recent Columbia University study entitled "Parenting in an Unresponsive Society," child care is "by far the most important problem" that working mothers have to contend with, and the lack of reasonably priced child-care services was "a source of constant stress" for all the women studied, regardless of family structure, race or economic level.

Radio. Radio fans who remember days of old will be pleased to know that CBS is currently featuring "Sears Radio Theater," a week-night story hour starring a variety of celebrities. The Monday night "Western" series is hosted by Lorne Greene, and the Wednesday "Mystery" story features the voice of Vincent Price. Check your local paper for participating CBS stations and times.

Accidents. An estimated 105,000 deaths were caused by accidents in 1978, says the Statistical Bureau of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The number of deaths from motor-vehicle accidents exceeded 50,000 for the first time in five years, while deaths from accidents in the home and on the job declined slightly.

To join the Club and get your 13 tapes or records just mail the application, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 13 selections, plus $1.85 for shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 9 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off the regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection from the hundreds offered, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

You'll also have an opportunity to examine the Club's comprehensive annual—"The Year In Music"—filled with stories and photographs of the year's top stars & events. When it's ready, we'll ship it automatically, and you can read it and live with it for 15 days FREE examination—with no obligation to buy.

The tapes and records you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 or $8.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement, you may cancel your membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous, money-saving bonus plan—a plan which enables you to enjoy great savings on all future purchases! And if you are not satisfied for any reason, just return your introductory shipment within 10 days for a prompt and full refund. Your membership will be cancelled and you will owe nothing. So you risk absolutely nothing by acting now!

Special Start-Your-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you at 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.99). Enclose payment now, and you'll receive it with your 13 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you then need buy just 8 more (instead of 9) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number.

Prince Valiant

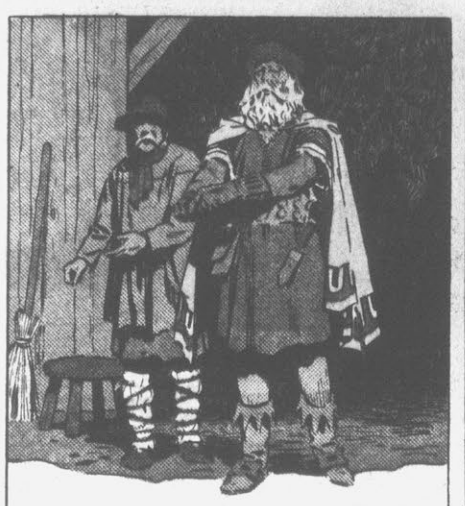

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

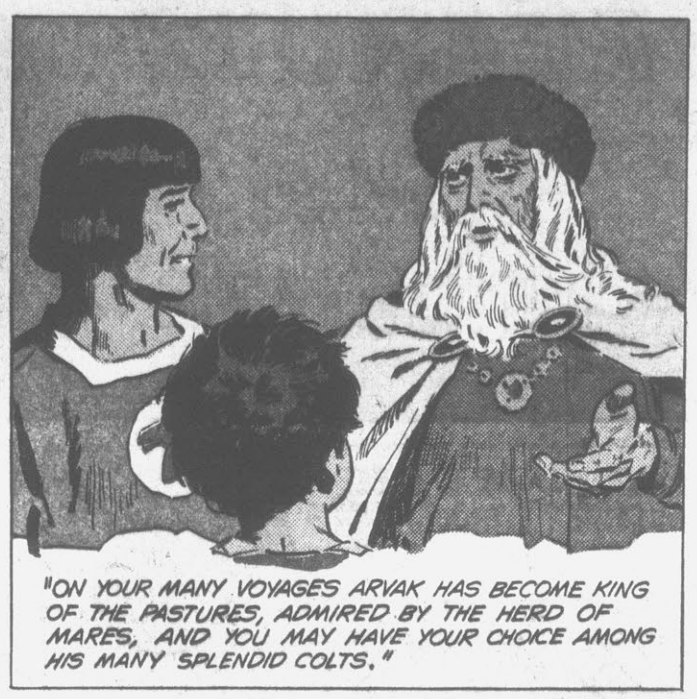

Our Story: ARVAK, THE GREAT RED STALLION THAT HAD CARRIED PRINCE VALIANT FOR SO MANY YEARS IN WAR AND JOUST, HAS DIED AND VAL IS HEARTBROKEN.

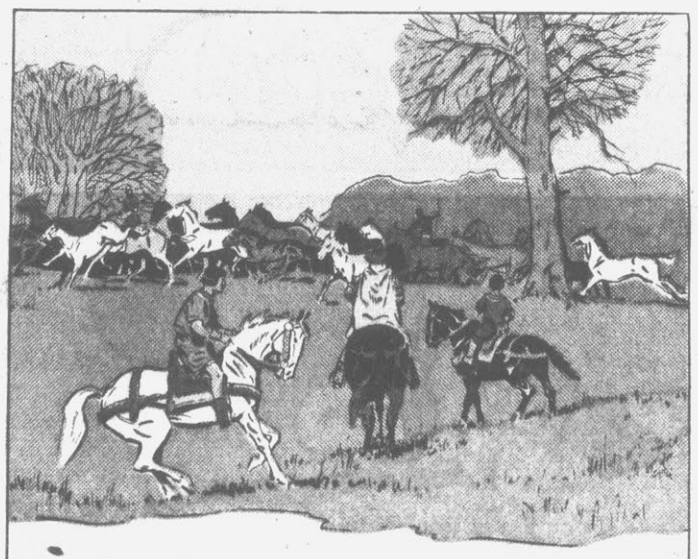

KING ARTHUR, RETURNING FROM A RIDE IN THE WINTER WOODS, LEARNS OF VAL'S TRAGIC LOSS. AND WELL HE KNOWS THAT A KNIGHT AND HIS MOUNT ACT AS A TEAM.

"ON YOUR MANY VOYAGES ARVAK HAS BECOME KING OF THE PASTURES, ADMIRED BY THE HERD OF MARES, AND YOU MAY HAVE YOUR CHOICE AMONG HIS MANY SPLENDID COLTS."

THE KING HAS THE HERDSMEN DRIVE THE HORSES BY IN REVIEW. BUT THE WHITE MARE PUTS ON A SHOW, PRANCING, TOSSING HER MANE AND TAIL, SO VAL SEES LITTLE OF THE PARADE.

"SIRE, I BELIEVE I'LL TAKE THIS WHITE MARE," VAL DECIDES. "A GOOD CHOICE, VAL, IT IS THE PICK OF THE MARES."

"I HAVE BEEN IMPRESSED BY THE CONDUCT OF YOUR YOUNG SON, GALAN. DON'T YOU THINK IT IS TIME HE BECAME A PAGE AND LEARNS THAT KNIGHTHOOD IS MORE THAN GALLANTRY AND FIGHTING. I KNOW A NOBLE AND HIS LADY WHO WOULD LIKE TO TAKE IN A PAGE FOR TRAINING."
