Folk Hero John Wayne Is Dead

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Wayne, a Hollywood hero for nearly 50 years and 200 movies, built his image as a fearless, determined fighter. That was the way "The Duke" died — in a courageous fight with cancer.

As the disease began its final assault and as the pain became more severe, Wayne sometimes refused the drugs that could have eased the way. He wanted, a hospital official said, "to be with his children, his grandchildren. He would tolerate discomfort just to be near his family."

His seven children were at his side when Wayne, known to friends and fans as "The Duke," died at 5:30 p.m. Monday at the UCLA Medical Center. His 72nd birthday was celebrated May 26.

"He was — and is — an American institution," said actor Charlton Heston. "It's not surprising that, to the end, Duke gave an example of courage that made him more than an actor and friend."

Hospital administrator Bernard Strohm, announcing the death at a news conference three hours later, said Wayne's family planned a private funeral.

Hospital administrator Bernard Strohm, announcing the death at a news conference three hours later, said Wayne's family planned a private funeral. Announcement of the death was delayed to accommodate the family, he said.

Reaction was swift as the news of Wayne's death flashed around the world. Bob Hope: "We've lost a big one, a jumbo in this business." Jack Lemmon: "John Wayne was bigger than life but he never abused it." Lloyd Nolan: "He was a magnificent man." Lorne Greene: "He had true character." Buddy Ebsen: "He had a big generous heart and a great soul."

And the little people, Wayne's fans, offered their tributes, too. Condolence calls from all over the country began pouring into the UCLA Medical Center shortly after Wayne's death and continued today.

Before Wayne's death, cards and letters by the thousands had flooded UCLA from around the country and the world. Queen Elizabeth even sent her greetings and President Carter paid the Duke a bedside visit on May 5.

Damage By Yesterday's Heavy Rain

By JERRY RAYNOR

Monday, June 11 was a rainy day in Greenville, with 4.91 inches of rainfall recorded between midnight Sunday and 8 a.m. this morning. Most of that rainfall — 3.8 inches, fell in the 12-hour period between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Monday.

The water level in Tar River, already high, rose to a peak point of 16.7 feet by 4 p.m. but had subsided by mid-morning today to 16.2 feet. Flood level for the river is 13 feet.

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works in Greenville, said "the water came so quick, and with the river level high and area ditches more than half-full from earlier rains, it really hit us hard. Our drainage system, our pipes are large enough to take care of most rains, even heavy ones, but not anything like this."

Allen said that considerable damages have been spotted by crews working this morning to survey and repair the places hardest hit. "There was heavy overflowing on Wright Road, and at First and Warren, a catch-basin stopped up there due to construction work being carried out caused problems."

Allen said that the possibility exists that the wet earth under asphalt could result in more potholes developing in several areas of town.

"I'd like to warn motorists to be on the lookout for this, and to report any potholes to us. We've discovered and have repaired a number of these, but others can still develop."

City crews helped state people in heavily flooded state road areas such as on Charles, Evans and Dickinson. "It was really a rushed situation, with calls for help coming from all directions," Allen commented.

Allen said at this time assessment of estimates of damages could not be made. "It will be considerable in that extensive repair work will be needed for curb and gutter areas at some places, for potholes to be repaired, and for things like removal of trees that fell due to being undermined by the water."

At East Carolina University, water problems were centered primarily in two areas — the steam distribution system on 14th Street and a student parking lot south of East Tenth Street.

James Lowry, Director of ECU's Physical plant, said "for a while it was tough and go as to whether the water would interfere with transformers at the utility plant. We got a lot of water into the steam distribution system and had to cut off a section. We're testing it out this morning to make sure it's all right."

In the student parking lot along East Tenth Street, Lowry noted "some automobiles, about a dozen of them, were submerged for a short time. I've no estimate of the damage water may have caused to the cars."

"We had leaks too, at

Health Plan

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced his long-overdue, limited national health plan today, saying it would combine Medicare for the elderly and Medicaid for the poor into a single federal program. And it would guarantee protection for all Americans against the cost of catastrophic illness.

The so-called Phase I would cost $23 billion to $25 billion in new federal spending in 1983, the plan's first year of operation.

Most of the money would be used to double the number of relatively poor Americans covered by state-run Medicaid programs and fold the various state programs into a single federally administered Health-Care system encompassing Medicare as well.

The White House said in documents designed to explain the new plan that Carter remains committed to the universal, comprehensive national health plan he promised during his campaign.

But "in a time of budgetary restraint and concern about inflation, it is not possible to enact a full, universal, comprehensive plan," the administration said. It said the president therefore has decided "to address the most pressing health needs of the nation" in his Phase I proposal, designed to permit eventual expansion to build the complete plan Carter would like.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and a coalition of organized labor, senior citizens, and religious interest groups broke with Carter after he refused to commit himself to seek congressional approval of a single comprehensive plan as he had promised during the presidential campaign.

PTI Gearing Up For College Role

In one of its final acts Friday, the North Carolina

General Assembly ratified Bill No. 845, which read as follows:

"The Pitt Technical Institute, an institutional member of the North Carolina Community College System, is hereby created a comprehensive community college, which institution shall be subject to all provisions of the General Statutes of North Carolina pertaining to community colleges. The State Board of Education and the Board of Trustees of this community college shall provide for students enrolling in the institution such programs of instruction in occupational and academic education and training as shall be approved by the State Board of Education."

The arraignment of Ruth Marie Stator, Dr. Andrew A. Best and Marvin Stephenson, charged with embezzlement of funds from the Eastern Tar River Credit Union, was continued until July 9 in Pitt County Superior Court.

Mrs. Stator, Best and Stephenson were indicted June 4 on charges of conspiracy and embezzlement of almost $100,000, and arraignment was first set for yesterday.

The hearing was continued at the request of attorneys for the defendants.

A fourth defendant in the case, Willie Taft, has not been taken into custody.

will award the implementation of college preparatory work at the Institute, "hopefully" in 1980, and no later than 1981.

PTI President William E. Fulford Jr. noted that the Board of Trustees will meet in the near future to employ new faculty members, include new curricula, and decide on the name for the community college.

"I can't tell you what the Board of Trustees will want to name it (PTI)," said Senator White. "It is their prerogative."

NINE YEARS OF WORK
The ratification of Bill 845 Friday was the culmination of nine years of work by Pitt Tech supporters toward community college status. Pitt County voters expressed their support for the status change during general elections in November, 1978.

"It's not like we're rediscovering the wheel," said President Fulford. "We've had a committee studying proposed curricula for the past eight or nine months. I've got job applications from at least five to ten persons, with doctorates, who are all local persons."

President Fulford expressed his pleasure over the new status, noting that the Institute will strive to offer quality programs in both college preparatory and technical programs.

"This (change) will mean so much to so many young people, as well as adults," said Fulford. "To drag our feet now would be almost a crime."

Vote Canvass

The official canvass by the Pitt Board of Elections of Friday's special referendum revealed several changes from those published in Sunday's edition, although the outcome of the election was not affected.

According to the canvass results, the final totals for the $9 million school bond issue were 6,075 in favor and 6,861 against, rather than 6,090 and 6,946 as published unofficially.

The mixed drinks vote, as indicated by the canvass, was 6,350 in favor and 6,541 against, rather than 6,335 and 6,567 as published by "The Daily Reflector."

The only change of any significance involved the Ayden precinct where 399 votes were cast against the school bond issue, rather than 499.

The Falkland totals were reversed in the Sunday report and should have reflected a school bond vote of 39 for and 117 against and a mixed drink vote of 54 in favor and 101 against.

According to Margaret Register, some 12,948 citizens voted in the county on Friday, or 44 percent of the total Pitt registration of 29,700.

Rate Increases Are Adopted By Ayden's Board

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners voted Monday to increase electric, water and sewer rates in the town, to be in effect with the July billing.

Rate increases in the water and sewer rates were discussed when Ayden voters approved the bond referendums on the two issues in January. The sewer rates will be raised from $1.19 to $1.25 per 1,000 gallons of water used. The increase will offset water revenues that have been used in support of the sewer system for the past two years.

The water rates will increase one dollar in the flat rates, with graduated water rates to also be adjusted.

Commissioner Robert Harris was the sole "no" vote in the electrical rate increase, which will be one penny more per kilowatt hour. In prior meetings, the commissioners had discussed the need to raise the electrical rates, due to increasing charges in fossil fuel rates. The town had been operating at a loss by trying to absorb the increasing rates, but has now found that the rates will have to be increased for the customers.

The increases will become effective in July, in order to realize a full year of revenues.

The board took the first steps toward annexation of "The Pines" and North Hills extended with the adoption of a resolution stating its intent. A public hearing has been set for July 16 at the regular board meeting on the matter.

Two public hearings were also set July 16 on the proposed granting of a conditional use permit to F. R. Bridges for a day care center at 209 Verna Ave., and the rezoning of a lot from residential to downtown fringe.

The board approved the reappointment of Steve Nobles and Mrs. J. R. Lowry to the Election Board, and appointed Ms. Diane Hill to the same board to replace Doug Woodworth.

The board voted to buy a truck for $5,063.35 from M & W Chevrolet, and another from Venters Ford, $5,175, for the utility and street divisions. The money will be appropriated in the next budget.

The board voted to adopt a resolution honoring Demetrius Edwards, an Ayden native, who is a contender for the world championship title in karate, light-heavyweight division.

In other business, the board approved the addition of $1,401.70 from the recent tax lien sale to the 1978 tax levy, and accepted $36.15 in uncollectible accounts from the Ayden Housing Authority.

SUGGESTION

In reference to the Hotline item regarding freight trains' tying up intersections of streets and railroads. Hundreds of gallons of fuel are wasted every week this way. It would be good sense for motorists to shut off their engines while they're waiting for an obviously long train. Restarting an engine takes less fuel than letting it idle one minute. The same is true in drive-in-window lines or wherever a driver must wait. T. K.

Farmville Woman Qualified As Project Bidder

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Redevelopment Commission voted Monday night to qualify Patricia Clemons of Farmville as a bidder on a disposal parcel in the Southside area.

Southside project manager Faye Brewington informed commissioners that the developer, if successful in bidding on the parcel at the corner of Elk and Pitt Streets, plans to construct a three bedroom home on the tract.

Mrs. Brewington noted that the disposal parcel, designated as T-1, is a 10,000 square foot tract. She added that the house would contain some 1,150 square feet, have one and a half baths, and sell for approximately $31,500.

The Farmville developer was qualified as a bidder, subject to a review by the staff.

In other business, the commission's executive director, Joe Laney, reported that a letter had been received from the law firm of Howard, Vincent & Duffus here informing the board that discussions regarding a transfer of interest in a downtown parcel to the firm have been cancelled.

The law firm had sought to assume ownership of the parcel at the corner of Third and Washington Streets through a transfer of interest from the current owners, T & C Co., involving Clarence Tugwell and Louis Clark. The matter had bogged down at the Department of Housing and Urban Development level and it was mentioned last night that the law firm is apparently looking at another site as an office location.

According to Laney, the situation now with the downtown parcel is that T & C Co. continues ownership of the property and will have to develop the tract. Laney said that the owners have indicated they have tenant prospects and are ready to proceed with development.

Commissioners agreed that T & C Co. should be notified that their development plans should be presented at the next meeting of the Redevelopment Commission and that construction should get underway within 60 days of the meeting. If the tract is not developed, the commis-

Managua Now A Battleground

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza's national guard pounded Sandinista guerrillas with planes and armored cars in Managua as the U.S. Embassy planned another attempt to evacuate about 50 Americans.

Fighting also raged in the northern cities of Esteli, Matagalpa and Leon. Somoza estimated 1,300 killed in the two-week rebel offensive, raising the 10-month toll to 4,300.

Large sections of Managua, to which the rebel offensive spread Sunday, were without water and electricity. Few residents ventured from their homes and those who did carried white flags.

Most of the fighting took place in slum neighborhoods where sympathy for the guerrillas is strongest.

Large columns of black smoke rose from opposite ends of the city. Major roads were strewn with debris left from pitched battles between the guerrillas and Somoza's troops.

During lulls in the firing, people sought shelter at Red Cross centers.

Miguel Shibel, general director of the Red Cross in the capital, said 12,000 persons were quartered at 10 centers in Managua.

"There's a large number of dead and wounded in the poor neighborhoods but there's no accurate information on how many," he said.

Ulrich Bedert of Geneva, who heads the International Red Cross mission to Nicaragua, said there were about 25,000 tons of food stockpiled in Managua but "it won't last long with this many people to feed."

"It's suicide trying to get into the poor neighborhoods right now. Both sides are shooting at anything that moves," he added.

U.S. Embassy officials said it hoped to fly out families of embassy staff members and other Americans on a U.S. Air Force C-130 that was to be sent from the Panama Canal Zone if it was safe for it to land and if the evacuees could get to the airport.

Dependents of some embassy staff members were flown out during the weekend, but an attempt to evacuate other Monday failed when a fire blocked the road to the airport.

The evacuees spent the night at the hilltop residence of Ambassador Larry Pezzullo, who has not arrived yet to take up his post.

"If we can't get them to the airport we won't move them," an embassy official said. "If it's not safe, they won't go anywhere."

Somoza told a news conference at his heavily fortified downtown headquarters called "The Bunker" that the estimated 1,300 dead in the latest round of fighting included 300 men of the national guard, his combined army and police force.

City Counts 3 Accidents

An estimated $3,520 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:47 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 40 feet East of the Rock Springs Road, involving cars driven by Jehu Thomas Taff of 103 Pinewood Rd., and Catherine Anne Stokes of Route 2, Winterville.

Officers estimated damage from the collision at $100 to the Taff vehicle and $1,800 to the Stokes car.

A 12:56 p.m. collision on Howell Street, 100 feet West of the Pitt Street intersection, involved a parked car owned by Earnest Lee Peterson of Greenville, and a truck driven by Wilmen Edward Cottingham of Route 10, Greenville.

Investigators, who charged Cottingham with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, set damage to the truck at $400 and estimated damage to the Peterson car at $900.

A 6:45 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Street involved a truck driven by Noah Ray Sutton of Route 4, Greenville, and a car operated by Malissa Howard Cox of 109 Charlie La.

Damage was estimated by police at $20 to the Sutton truck and $300 to the Cox car.

Kissinger Describes Efforts To Help Deposed Shah Of Iran

By THOMAS C. COTHMAN
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said late Monday he acted in the interest of "national dignity" in helping the deposed shah of Iran relocate in Mexico.

He denied reports that he went to the Bahamas, where the shah and his family had been living, and then flew to Mexico with the former Iranian monarch.

"I was never in the Bahamas. I was never in Mexico. I did it all by telephone" from a Washington office, he said in an interview after speaking at a $100-per-plate dinner in Columbia honoring Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond.

"I have not seen the shah since he left office," Kissinger added.

The former secretary said he appealed to Mexican president Jose Lopez Portillo "because, unfortunately, our own government wouldn't do anything."

The shah and his family flew on Sunday from the Bahamas to Mexico. After fleeing his revolution-torn nation, the shah had lived for a time in Egypt and then in Morocco, before moving to the Bahamas.

"I felt it was a question of the national dignity of the United States," Kissinger said. "It was a question of humanity, not a question of political support."

"When the administration didn't act I felt as the last secretary of state I had an obligation to do it."

He told a news conference earlier that "... I thought we had a moral obligation to show the world that some Americans stand by" the nation's friends.

Kissinger also said that he might run for the Senate if Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., decides against seeking re-election in 1980. "If the Senate positions arises, I'll take a look at it," Kissinger said.

Also present at the state Republican event were former Secretary of Commerce Frederick Dent, former White House Harry Dent, retired Maj. Gen. Williams Westmoreland and Thurmond.

Kissinger praised Thurmond and Westmoreland, saying the former Allied commander in Vietnam had labored with "great restrictions placed on his abilities. Not enough attention has been paid to the service of a very dedicated American."

The former secretary told his audience of some 750 persons the high oil prices and unsettled conditions in the Middle East had been brought about by the failure of American leaders to act decisively.

He said that in Afghanistan, Ethiopia, Angola, South Yemen and Vietnam the Soviet Union had succeeded in placing pro-Soviet governments in power.

America's failure to act "emboldened all our enemies and demoralized all our friends ... It is in this context that Iran collapsed last year," he said.

He said America must remain militarily strong, "but keep in mind that the question of peace and war does not depend only on whether arms can be limited."

Soviet leaders do not place a great value on personal relationships, he said. "Regardless of what we tell them, they think they understand us better than we understand ourselves."

New Mall Plans Open August 1

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The manager of the new Carolina East Mall, Ms. Barbara DeVoss, spoke at a Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce coffee talk program this morning on the mall, scheduled to open August 1.

Ms. DeVoss, employed with the Earnest W. Hahn Co., owners of the mall, for the past 11 years, said Belk-Tyler Co., Sears, and 40 other stores will open August 1, with some 20 other stores opening by the end of October.

The mall, with 394,000 square feet under roof, is equal in size to North Hills mall in Raleigh.

According to Ms. DeVoss Belk's will occupy some 142,000 square feet, while Sears will include some 75,000 square feet of space. A 20,000 square foot addition to the mall, including about 20 shops, is planned, she said, by 1984.

Ultra Conservative Wing Is Critical

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Scathing attacks on teaching at Southern Baptist seminaries and colleges have marked an attempt by ultra-conservatives to take over leadership of the nation's largest Protestant body.

On the opening day of the denomination's annual convention, the critics Monday pushed their tactics under the banner of "Biblical inerrancy" — the Scriptures as the direct word of God. They say the educational institutions aren't upholding the doctrine.

"We are being led aside by men who teach devil doctrines," said evangelist James Robison of Hurst, Texas, referring to so-called "liberal" professors.

Saying he would not "tolerate a rattlesnake in my house or a cancer in my body," Robison told a pre-convention meeting, "Those who question the word of God are worse than snakes or cancers."

Scholars of the 13-million-member denomination's seminaries insist their faculties read scriptures as God's infallible, authoritative truth, and say the attacks are irresponsible and misleading.

The denomination has six seminaries and 53 colleges and universities.

Southern Baptists, now expanded nationwide into a broad cross-section of social and economic levels, have characteristically maintained a conservative approach to Scripture compared to most mainline denominations.

She termed the mall, "a major asset to the Greenville area," saying some 386 people would be employed at the mall, and some 4.5 million shoppers and visitors are expected during the first year of operation.

Sales during the first year, Ms. DeVoss said, are expected to total $29 million, with $1.74 million in sales tax revenues resulting.

Describing the Hahn firm as one of the largest developers in the United States, Ms. DeVoss said Hahn operates from, "an old-fashioned, basic philosophy... honesty."

"We feel it is dishonest not to give customers and retailers anything but the best," Ms. DeVoss emphasized. "We're part of Greenville," she noted.

Mall hours, she explained, will probably be from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

But the critics demanding adherence to "Biblical inerrancy" say this means God inspired it verbally and, in effect dictating each individual word of it.

A showdown on the issue comes today in a contest over the convention presidency.

The ultra-conservatives have filed several potential candidates, following a series of pre-convention campaign meetings held around the country.

Opened Up For Timber

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has ordered a move toward cutting more trees from national forests, but it could be years before homebuyers benefit from cheaper lumber, if ever.

Administration officials estimate that eventually the move could drop lumber prices enough to save $250 to $750 on a new $50,000 house.

The move pleased the lumber industry but caused reactions among environmentalists ranging from polite skepticism to outraged opposition.

"We think they've been over-cutting the national forests already," said Brock Evans of the Sierra Club, adding, "We're sure going to see our lawyers."

Carter's order has no immediate effect. Before additional trees can be sold, there must be a lengthy series of governmental studies, formal proposals and public hearings.

Urges Priority On Smuggling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Monday that Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch should give a higher priority to enforcing laws affecting cigarette distributors who sell to smugglers.

"He needs to know the priorities that I, as governor, have set," Hunt said in an interview. "If it wasn't clear before, that's not his fault."

Hunt ordered the Revenue Department to crack down on cigarette smuggling out of North Carolina, which, given the state's 2-cents-a-pack tax, is a thriving business. That tax is the lowest in the nation.

"I have told them (revenue officials) that it is a primary responsibility of the Revenue Department to help reduce cigarette smuggling," he said. Lynch and Hunt met Monday to discuss several things the department might do to thwart smugglers.

Suggestions included requiring licensed distributors to keep more information about the flow of cigarettes through their warehouses and requiring truckers who haul large quantities of cigarettes to first get permits from the Revenue Department.

"I hope that, certainly within a couple of weeks, we can know what we can do — change our

Pitt NAACP Speaker Calls For Solid Front

FALKLAND — During the monthly meeting of the Pitt Co. Branch of the NAACP held here Sunday, Pitt Co. Pres. D. D. Garrett gave notice that the branch has begun "an all out fight to deal with the many critical issues at hand."

Garrett blasted the black community, saying, "It is time we stopped acting like NAACP doesn't exist and immediately get our membership cards. Whether we're laborers, educators, bankers, doctors, lawyers, or farmers — we need the NAACP."

He said that there are between 25,000 and 30,000 black citizens in the county and that the NAACP has nowhere near a representative membership. "It is time for us to stop being our greatest enemy and take a more active and positive role in this fight for freedom and justice," he said.

He said he is not greatly disturbed that liquor by the drink and the school bond were defeated. His main concern about the Friday election, he said, was "that the black community failed to get out and vote."

Pres. Garrett asked that the black community "not be misled in recent indictment handed down against leaders of our community. He stated "this is just another means by the system to destroy our prominent black leaders, and let us not help them do it by taking sides with their stand."

A group of parents with children in all schools in the county presented concerns over the large number of black school children retained at the end of this school year and asked the NAACP to investigate. "It seems that the Pitt Co. school system is continuing to reduce the future of our black children in the field of education unless we as black parents of this county become more concerned and visit the schools on a regular basis. Their future as citizens of tomorrow will be endangered, he said.

Rev. Charlie Wilson of Ayden was appointed vice president of Region 3, replacing J. R. Payton. Clarence Moore replaced Mrs. Ella Morgan as vice president of Region 6.

R. Dupree of Farmville was appointed Chairman of Local Redress, replacing Marvin Stephenson of Winterville.

It was voted unanimously to give the Executive Board the go-ahead to set up a non-profit mortgage loan organization under the Branch.

Chairman of Press and Publicity Calvin Henderson and Joyce Daniels were asked to contact local public television stations to secure coverage of the NAACP National Convention to be held in Louisville, Ky. June 25-29.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Can a 32-year-old bachelor lecture on — of all things — how women can overcome problems traceable to their sex in the work place, ranging from fending off advances to earning respect?

Lawrence D. Schwimmer certainly thinks so. He has a ready answer when asked to talk on the topic.

"I spent 10 years working in top echelons of the business world," he said. "In one of my jobs I employed 85 women. I saw the problems women encountered and I informally gave advice to women I worked with."

"The issue is not me-man, you-woman. It's that I was a successful businessman with real world success who has insight into some of their problems. I don't think a doctor has to have a disease to know how to treat it."

Schwimmer began advising women two years ago — after he left his job as a marketing manager because he felt it was lacking in satisfaction.

Now, he said, his seminars are being met enthusiastically.

Major companies, including General Electric, Coca-Cola Co. and American Telephone and Telegraph, are paying $225 a head for women employees to attend his all-day seminars.

The majority of those, he says, attending are secretaries, administrative assistants and low level managers who were raised traditionally and are becoming more career-oriented.

"It's really a good investment for businesses," he said. "It can help aid women employees in becoming more assertive, more willing to take risks and willing to make decisions. And the bottom-line of that is better on-the-job performance."

One time, he said, a business executive shot at him, "If you'll help them become more assertive, that means they'll be asking for raises."

His response: "If she's assertive, she can also prod a customer to make a bigger purchase or offer a suggestion that might save money."

But what does he preach at seminars?

Schwimmer said many women — more so than men — are economic push-overs on the job.

"A lot of women, in the more traditional mold, are afraid to be assertive. They equate being assertive with being aggressive or pushy. But it's not."

"Being assertive is acting directly, saying what you think. It goes back to men traditionally being rewarded for assertiveness, but women being expected to be meeker and humbler, like 'sugar and spice and everything nice.' And men generally are more assured of their competence than women. Women seem to put an emphasis on self-improvement."

Schwimmer said because of this women are often afraid to seek recognition, thus stunting their careers. Often they shy away from making decisions, taking risks, asking questions and demanding raises, he said.

And they tend to view the boss as a superior authority figure, he said, deferring to his judgments without arguments even if they feel they are wrong.

"That can be bad for business," he said.

Schwimmer said he tries to build their confidence and point out their fears so they can battle them.

Schwimmer has a long litany of advice for women. He said they should:

—Answer the phone with first and last name because that conveys more authority than just answering with a first name. "You don't see the boss answering with just his first name."

—Set limits on job tasks so they don't become menial workers. "So many secretaries wind up spending so much time doing personal things, like going to the shopping, for their boss."

—Never let chauvinism go unchallenged because remarks like "sweetie" or "honey" also undermine job authority. "You should respond to that in a non-threatening way to the person that it makes them feel uncomfortable. Like saying, 'John, please don't call me

Wooden Jokes Are Exchanged

At Wit's End

Without a shred of modesty, I can tell you I'm an authority on excuses.

I have a collection of them that spans every occasion. There's one for what to say when you're the only "nonworking" mother with a station wagon and the class trip to the meat packing plant is coming up, to what to say when your children want to know why you never wear the satin jogging shorts they bought you that show more than anyone wants to see.

But I have never known an excuse that has caught fire in this country like, "I have to watch my show." It has replaced "I think Dad has just set himself on fire" ... "I smell gas leaking" ... and the ever-popular "My longdistance phone call is coming in."

In a short span of time, these six little words have captured the imagination of everyone. I've seen high-level conferences dissolve when the chairman announced, "I have to watch my show." Intimate family dinners fall apart when someone shouts, "I have to watch my show." Little children leave play to do it. Kids skip class to do it. Grandmothers put down their grandchildren to do it. Babysitters go home early to do it and even priests leave the confessional to do it.

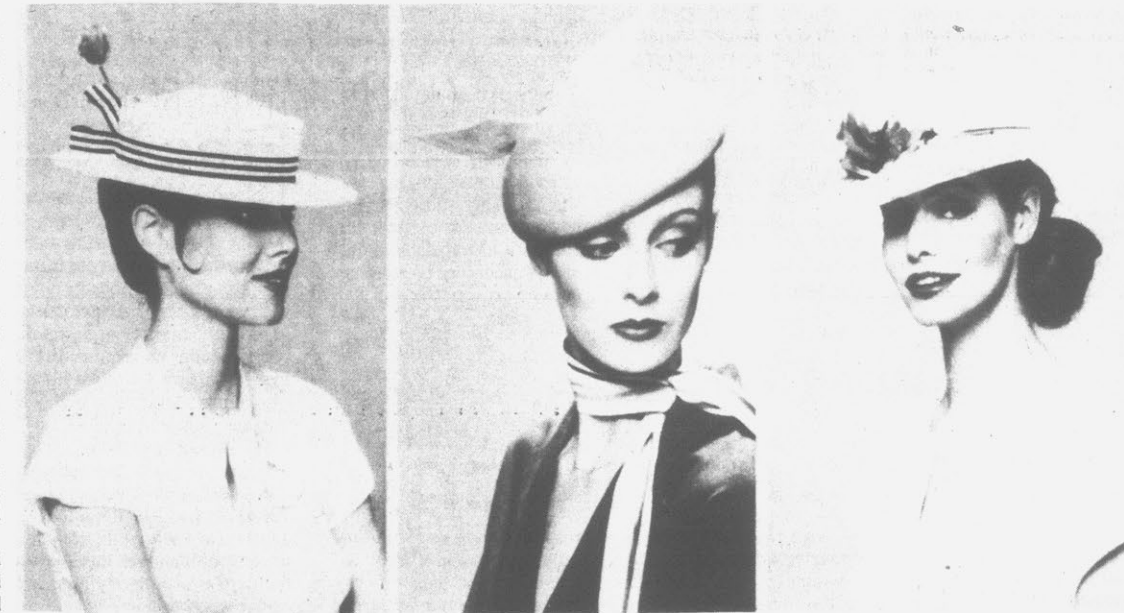

We all know that excuses go in cycles depending at what stage we are in our lives. When I was first married, I used "Something's burning" a lot. When the children came along, it was "I can't leave the children" and "I have nothing to wear." In recent years, it has been "Nothing fits" and "Redford might call."

Frankly, I never thought I'd see the day when a woman would plan the birth of her first child around the airing of Lillie Langtree.

The public acceptance of the excuse was really evident the other night when we stopped in at a friend's house. We were pulled into a darkened room illuminated only by a 21inch TV screen. Shadows hailed us in pantomime as we were gently eased into chairs. Finally, above the dialogue of "Lou Grant" came a voice, "We have to watch our show." We accepted the explanation as if we had just witnessed it on Mt. Sinai.

Excuses do go in cycles and it's hard to know how long this one will last. I only know Marj was relating an intimate meeting with a new man in her life and as he nuzzled her ear she heard the dreaded words. "He didn't!" I said. She nodded. "The Cubs were playing Cincinnati."

Cordless, Rechargeable

INDUSTRIAL AIRPORT, Kansas (UPI) — An appliance manufacturer has introduced what it says is the first cordless rechargeable unit for hydro-massage in standard bathtubs.

The unit comes with a UL-listed battery charger that restores the product to full power in 10-12 hours when plugged into a standard 110-120 volt socket. As an additional safety factor the hydro-massage unit cannot operate while it is being recharged, the manufacturer says. A water vibrator unit is an optional accessory.

DEAR ABBY: Now it has been disclosed that a certain brand of bread whose advertising claims "400 per cent more fiber" uses wood in part for that fiber!
The following questions come to mind:
How much of that bread must I eat in order to bark?
Will it help in searching for my roots?
Will it make me a budding genius?
Will it be easier to get leaves of absence?
Will it sap my strength?
Will my son be a chip off the old block?
I'm ready to climb the walls. (Paneled, of course.) I pine for some answers.
MARGARET IN HIGHLAND PARK

DEAR MARGARET: I wooden know.
DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will celebrate our 40th wedding anniversary soon. Our children plan a party for us in the social hall of our church.
A few years ago you ran a sample invitation in your column which I liked very much. It was a nice way of saying, "No gifts, please."
Will you please run it again? I'm sure others will find it helpful, too. Thank you.
NEBRASKA FAN

DEAR FAN: Here it is:
DEAR READERS: I have stated many times that any mention whatsoever of gifts was improper on an invitation. This includes the forthright "No gifts, please," as well as the tasteless (in my view) suggestion that cash is preferred to any other type of gift.
Many sent sample invitations in which gifts were mentioned. Below are two that changed my mind:
"Jane and Bob Smith invite you to dine with us on the evening of June 1 at our home at 7 p.m."
"It is in celebration of our 20th wedding anniversary. Your friendship is a cherished gift. We respectfully request no other."
"The children of Iver and Helen Dahl invite you to celebrate with them the 50th wedding anniversary of their parents. A reception will be held May 7, at 2 p.m., at the Elmhurst Country Club."
"We request your help in compiling a book which recalls memories from our parents' first 50 years of marriage. On the enclosed sheet, we ask that you write one memory or event that you have shared with them, and return it to us by April 26. We believe that the loving memories they have shared with you, their friends, would be the most treasured gift they could receive; therefore, we request that no other gift be sent."

DEAR ABBY: Our son is being married in September to a girl he's gone with for a long time. A big church wedding is planned. Yesterday he called and said, "Guess what? You're going to be a grandmother!"
I asked, "When?"
He said, "In November."
Then I said, "Don't you think you should move up the wedding date?"
And he replied, "Oh, no, all the plans are made and we aren't changing anything." (The bride's parents are paying for the wedding.)
Abby, that's not all. The bride's sister is maid of honor and she's expecting in December and she's not married. My daughter is matron of honor and she's also due in December but, thank God, she's married. Now I hear that one of the bridesmaids (not married) is expecting in October. I can just see that lineup of pregnant women at the altar!
I think they should have a small family wedding under the circumstances, don't you? I just can't invite my friends and neighbors to witness this. They will be bug-eyed! What should I do?
SORRY, NO NAME

DEAR SORRY: I agree. A small family wedding would seem more appropriate. But you weren't consulted—you were told, so invite only those you think will not be bug-eyed.

If you need help in writing letters of sympathy, congratulations or thank-you letters, get Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Something Troubled Voters

The voters of Pitt County have defeated a $9 million school bond issue and, to us at least, the results were surprising.

The issue was defeated by a comfortable majority, 6,846 to 6,090.

City voters approved it, while county voters were against.

The results are difficult to analyze. Some feel that a Friday in June was a poor day to hold such a referendum; others feel that putting the bond referendum on the same day as a mixed drink referendum was a mistake.

Pitt County historically has been a relative poor county, compared to more affluent sections of the nation, and our residents are conservative about government spending. Nevertheless, we know from years of observation that Pitt voters will support school bond issues if they are convinced of the need.

We think administrators of both the city and county school systems need to take a look at the image they are projecting in view of the school bond defeat.

There has been much foot dragging on on the question of merger, too much squabbling over school district lines in the past. Voters raised questions to us over the high cost of maintaining relatively modern schools such as Aycock in Greenville.

None of this is to blame school officials for the bonds' defeat; nor to say that the $9 million wouldn't have been spent in the most efficient manner.

Something was troubling the voters about the issuance of $9 million in school bonds, however, and if we were in charge of the schools we would want to figure out what it is.

Big Surprise In Closeness Of Voting

The question of mixed drinks in Pitt County went down to defeat Friday, but the surprise was in the closeness of the balloting.

There were 6,350 in favor and 6,541 against. In Greenville the vote was overwhelmingly in favor.

The narrow majority makes it almost a certainty that the question of mixed drinks will be back before the voters in the future . . . but under the present law it will be three years before another referendum can be held.

Revisions In Commitment

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The General Assembly has attempted to slow down, if not close, the revolving door at state mental hospitals and other institutions dealing with such cases.

Several changes in the law are aimed at procedures which many complain have made it too difficult to have an individual committed against his or her will.

The reversal in attitude over a period of years is plain.

In 1973 the Legislature rewrote state law governing involuntary commitments under pressure of concern with past practices which had often allowed individual abuse. A fairly simple procedure was then required: a complaint before a local law officer was the foundation.

There were problems such as the elderly being committed by family just to be rid of them when no mental problem sufficient to require hospitalization existed; commitment proceeding carried out in vengeance, etc.

Relaxed
Patients' rights came to the fore in the 1973 law, and the state required certification by a physician, court hearings, attorneys paid by the state, periodic review of the commitment, appeal procedures, and regular evaluation of the commitment to assure nobody remained without reason.

The biggest problem became, however, the standard of "imminent danger" under which the individual concerned had to be proved likely to harm himself or others at the present time.

Under changes adopted this year, the law removed "imminent" as a condition, and goes further to define danger: a person unable to care for basic needs such as eating, personal care or getting medical care; a person who has attempted or threatened suicide; a probability that the person will mutilate himself; and, in danger to others, a person who has inflicted or threatened to hurt somebody or creates a condition in which someone is likely to be hurt.

A key ingredient is the likelihood that the behavior at issue will be repeated in the future unless steps are taken.

The net effect is to define the conditions and remove the vagueness from the law, and also allow conduct at past, present, or future times to be considered rather than just the current condition.

Removing some of the problems associated with the 1973 law's guarantee of an attorney for the person to be committed, the new law will provide state-paid counsel for all sides: the state, the individual, and the person seeking to have the patient committed.

In recent years, critics say, the attorneys and court hearings overpowered the person seeking commitment of another.

were not of legal age; only a parent or guardian could do that. The court also provided for hearings in the commitment process.

Thus, a minor had difficulty seeking treatment voluntarily, and was also vulnerable to abuses by parent or guardian. Again, vague definitions complicated the matter.

The new law establishes that a minor is mentally ill if he is unable to exercise "age appropriate and age adequate" behavior.

That broad definition, specialists predict, will give the mental health professionals the power they need to control admissions, but will prove too vague and complex to be effective in practice.

BILL NOBLITT

Another change calls for a minor who is admitted voluntarily may not be taken out of the hospital except on release by the court or staff. That provision, say the experts, will probably cause parents to be reluctant to admit the child, for having done so, the child cannot then be released easily.

Minors
Another change in this session of the Assembly deals with voluntary commitment of minors. Courts held that minors couldn't commit themselves because they

Flower Power Awaits

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks like President Carter is ready to wheel and deal for Senate votes on the SALT treaty.

For presidents like Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, trading water projects and military bases for important votes on Capitol Hill was a way of life.

Carter took office as an outsider and until now he's refused to play that game. But White House lobbyists have convinced the president he must come through with a favor here and there to pick up critical votes on SALT.

However, informed sources say Carter balked at the suggestion he give every member of the Senate the water project of his choice.

If the president insists on being more selective, he ought to look at some of the favorite causes of key senators.

For example, Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, Senate Republican leader, is taking a tough stand on SALT. Baker says he's leaning against the treaty.

But for nearly 10 years, Baker has been the Senate's leading advocate of designating the marigold as the national flower.

An Unshared Integrity

Readers of a half-dozen metropolitan newspapers will have noticed that Joan Baez, known equally for the beauty of her simple song and for her adamant opposition to the Vietnam war, has sponsored public appeals directed to the leaders of North Vietnam to renounce brutality. Her eloquent message, endorsed by 80 veterans of conscientious resistance to the war, beseeches the North Vietnamese to desist from practices of torture, imprisonment, and repression which have resulted in the awful phenomenon of the boat people.

How should one deal with Miss Baez, under the circumstances? A defensible analogy would be to ask the question, How should one have dealt with Fritz Kuhn, or Lawrence Dennis, if after a vigorous period of defending Adolf Hitler during the thirties, they had sponsored a public advertisement in 1943 calling on the better nature of Hitler to renounce the gas chambers?

The quick temptation would be to savage the new-found humanitarians on the grounds that during the critical period of the thirties they had, by their obtuseness, permitted Hitler to accumulate the power to execute his grisly designs. It can justly be said about Miss Baez and her co-signers that during the vital period when the power of the North Vietnamese to kill and torture might have been aborted, they were agitating on behalf of the North Vietnamese. But it is incorrect, as a matter of charity, to take that position. The prodigal son, scripture and reflection teach us, is always welcome, never mind his tardiness, or his procrastinators.

In the case of Miss Baez, the position, so fashionable among Vietnam protestors, was that the whole business in Indochina was merely a civil war in which the North Vietnamese were the nationalists; so to speak, the patriots, pure of spirit. Ho ho ho, Ho Chi Minh Is Sure To Win.

That there is a difference between Miss Baez, whose integrity causes her now to speak out against those whose cause she in effect defended, and others, transpires from the knowledge we have of those who did not join her protest.

For instance Philip Berigan, who first signed — then removed his name. For instance Dan Ellsberg, whose energies are nowadays concentrated not on the people the North Vietnamese are killing, but the people Three Mile Island might have killed if only Three Mile Island had been scripted by the wonderful people who gave us The China Syndrome.

For instance Tom Hayden and Jane Fonda, who did not return Miss Baez's calls, presumably because their early testimonials to North Vietnamese humanitarianism represented insurmountable obstacles to their pride.

Baker took up the cause of the marigold upon the death in 1969 of his father-in-law, Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois.

Earlier this year, once again, he introduced his marigold bill.

Three state legislatures, including that of Carter's native Georgia, have adopted resolutions supporting the marigold as the national flower.

What easier way to win support for SALT?

Unfortunately, the marigold issue contains the seeds of yet another political problem for the harried president.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Panama Guns And Canal

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The administration's sub rosa encouragement of leftist efforts to overthrow Nicaragua's dictatorship now threatens President Carter's great foreign policy achievement, leading to his emergency telephone call Tuesday morning to Rep. John M. Murphy of New York.

Carter made this plea to Murphy, chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, about hearings scheduled the next day on gunrunning to Nicaraguan terrorists: don't let your hearings interfere with House passage of the bill to implement the Panama Canal treaties. The State Department the previous evening asked Murphy to substitute closed-door briefings for the public sessions; the president implicitly was backing up that request.

Despite the pressure, the hearings went on as scheduled, filled with evidence of gunrunning to Sandinista guerrillas from communist Cuba, democratic Venezuela — and Panama. That evidence adds to the considerable troubles to be faced on the House floor today by the bill turning the canal over to the Republic of Panama on Oct. 1.

Instead of telephoning Jack Murphy June 5, the president might better have remonstrated months ago with his great and good friend, strongman Omar Torrijos of Panama, about free-style gunrunning. But far from urging Panama to keep hands off Nicaragua, the U.S. government does not even admit that Panamanian hands have been very busy indeed.

Furthermore, the Carter administration is justly regarded throughout the Western Hemisphere as friendly toward any effort to oust Nicaragua's President Anastasio Somoza, despite absence of a democratic alternative. Bad enough that this might result in a communist regime in Nicaragua; it also might help kill the Panama Canal bill, with truly horrendous consequences for the president, the United States and Panama.

Even some foes of the canal treaty fear the consequences of a defeated bill: a Panamanian takeover of the canal Oct. 1 by force, mobilizing all Latin American sentiment against Uncle Gringo. No wonder then that even Jimmy Carter was on the phone trying to minimize the impact of what the Panamanians have been doing.

Actually, Panamanian intentions were flashed in December 1977, in a private conversation between Gen. Torrijos, "maximum leader" of Panama, and U.S. Lt. Gen. Gordon Sumner, now retired but then head of the Inter-American Defense Board. (Continued on page 5)

(Greensboro Daily News)
United States senators enjoy some cushy benefits that make the rest of us lesser mortals sigh with envy.

Take their loopholes, for instance. There is one in particular that's so graciously bountiful you could pad your pocketbooks with its largess. There are those, in fact, who suspect Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia has done just that.

The senator is accused, you will recall, of submitting false expense claims for office expenses that were never incurred. The reimbursements, it is charged, managed to find their way into the senator's pockets.

This would be an easy enough con game to play, given the Senate's free and easy accounting practices. Unlike us common folks who must submit receipts and documentation whenever we file for office expense reimbursement, U.S. senators are spared such nagging nuisances. Except for travel expenses which even they too, must document, the Washington honorables are merely required to put their signatures to an office expense claim.

More than $1 million in taxpayers' money is spent each year on Senate office expenses with only a senator's scribbled signature assuring us that the money goes for a bona fide expense. A Senate audit has already uncovered $37,125 of falsified claims paid to Senator Talmadge — a princely sum which the senator has contritely paid back.

Last week, some pious spoilsports tried to plug the Senate's loophole. The culprits are the six members of the Senate Select Committee on Ethics which is now in its sixth week of Talmadge hearings. The reforming six want U.S. senators in the future to submit documentation for all their expenses.

What a crashing come-down it will be if eminences of Capitol Hill have to live by the same accounting system used by the rest of us. Whatever is happening to standards in Washington — double standards, that is?

Immutable Laws Of Finance

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The surest indication that Americans can't keep up the wild borrowing and spending pace of recent years is that they are now running up against some immutable laws of finance.

The first of these is that you cannot spend what you don't have and can't borrow. The second is that without a gun there is no way you can get a bank to lend you money if it doesn't wish to do so.

Judging from the recent statistics, millions of Americans are face to face with this reality. They haven't been earning enough to ignore inflation, and they are sloshing in installment debt up to their noses.

Straight-time wages of a typical worker rose 7.8 percent in the 12 months that ended in March, a significant movement when you consider that the Carter administration's goal is something around 7 percent.

Matched against inflation, however, the rise is not just insignificant — it is nonexistent. It is a loss, a substantial 2.4 percent loss, based on a 10.2 percent consumer price increase for the same period.

It may have taken lenders a while to adjust to this lowered income, since they too have sought to live in a make believe world. They broke a lot of their own laws in their eagerness to shovel out loans.

Now, though, they're watching delinquency rates edge up. They are becoming more selective. Their concern is growing.

So is the concern of individual borrowers. Assuming they aren't made meaningless by errors, latest figures show either a reluctance or an inability to repay debt at the pace of earlier months.

These figures, for April, showed the growth of new installment credit slowed from the March pace, as expected. The surprise was in repayments — down so sharply that credit outstanding rose $4.07 billion.

While stress signals are now flashing red, there wasn't so much as an amber flicker for months. Consumers today are more knowledgeable about economics than they were a decade ago, and they use their knowledge.

It was the way in which they used this knowledge that helped delay the onset of a slowdown, despite forecasts. They borrowed on their houses, they cut their savings rate, they used credit cards creatively.

Since housing prices out-distanced inflation, owners remortgaged and used the money. They'd repay in cheaper dollars, they said. Families decided against saving because savings eroded in the bank. And if the credit card people had money to lend, they'd accommodate them.

No wonder inflation persisted and the correction was delayed. But, in the absence of firm economic leadership, and despairing of stability, what ordinary Americans did was nothing more than to play it smart.

Eventually, though, the laws of economics seem to hold, even if they bend. If you spend more than you earn you will have your day of reckoning. The same pertains if you borrow more than you can comfortably repay.

ROLE OF MINISTERS
The Bible, in one place referring to Christian ministers, refers to them as "ministers of Christ and stewards of the mysteries of God". The word minister comes from the Latin word "minor" which means "less". The minister is one who makes himself of less consequence so that he may be of service to others.

It is his duty not only to advice people as to how they may lead a good life; he is also under obligation to explain to them things which he only partly understands himself but which he must constantly investigate, reflect upon, try to understand, and explain to others. Elisha Douglass

But Christian ministers are also "stewards of the mysteries of God". What are these mysteries? There is the mystery of sin, of salvation,

Rev. Bailey Is Chosen A Methodist Delegate

A Greenville man was elected here Thursday as a delegate to United Methodism's national convention, General Conference, which meets in Indianapolis in April 1980.

The Rev. James Bailey, 107 Williamsburg Drive, was one of 10 clergypersons elected by the North Carolina Annual Conference meeting here, June 4-7. Bailey is the minister of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

More than 1,350 persons are attending this annual conference, which includes representatives of the 847 United Methodist Churches in the eastern 56 countries of the state.

Bailey is one of 10 clergymen, who along with three laywomen and seven laymen will represent the North Carolina Annual Conference at the two-week General Conference.

Bailey will also be representative to the Jurisdictional Conference, a regional meeting of delegates from a nine-state area in the Southeast. The Southeastern Jurisdictional Conference meets at Lake Junaluska July 15-18, 1980.

The Greenville minister previously served churches in Lumberton, Wilson, Weldon, and Elm City, before coming to Greenville in 1974. A native of South Carolina, he is a graduate of Wofford College and the Divinity School, Duke University. He has done graduate work at Yale Divinity School, Syracuse University and Southern Lutheran Seminary.

Bailey was instrumental in the establishment of the Wesley Pines Retirement Home in Lumberton and is a trustee of Methodist College in Fayetteville, from which he recently received an honorary doctorate degree.

Bailey is the author of "Miracles of Jesus For Today," and "Parables of Jesus For Today," the latter to be published in November.

As a delegate to the General Conference, the denomination's top legislative body, Bailey will have a voice in deciding the budget and major programs of the United Methodist Church for the next four years.

One of the important decisions to be made at the Jurisdictional Conference is the election of new bishops. At least three of the jurisdiction's bishops will be retiring due to the church's rules for retirement, so it is expected that the Jurisdictional Conference will elect three bishops.

Offer Time To Complain

Officials from federal agencies in Atlanta, Ga. that render services to migrant and seasonal farmworkers and agricultural employers will hold a series of meetings in North Carolina this week.

The meeting for this area to give migrant and seasonal farmworkers and agricultural employers the opportunity to complain and tell of problems concerning the services rendered by these agencies will be held at the Agriculture Building on S. Goldsboro Street in Wilson Thursday, June 14, at 10 a. m.

Agencies represented are the U. S. Dept. of Labor Wage and Hour Division, the Employment and Training Administration, OSHA, and the N. C. Employment Service Rural Manpower Unit.

Anyone wanting additional information or wishing to complain but being unable to attend the Wilson meeting may call the Greenville Employment Security Commission Office, 756-2686.

Will Meet At Blood Center

An ad hoc group of the Pitt blood committee will meet tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Tar River Sub Center on Highway 43 just north of the city.

The function of the committee, chaired by Ted Gartman, is to solicit and secure 2,000 blood donors to be added to the center on a scheduled basis during the year.

Since no more public visits are scheduled at the Moose Lodge, blood donations from area citizens are being taken at the Blood Center.

William Kunstler, whose wonderful candor must be acknowledged as exactly that. He said, "I do not believe in public attacks on socialist countries, even where violations of human rights may occur," a statement which is the equivalent of a Lord Haw Haw during World War II saying, "I do not believe in public attacks on countries determined to bring on Aryan purity, even where violations of human rights may occur."

Miss Baez, whose courage should be acclaimed, might, however, lend additional integrity to her appeal by a seemingly continence in political moralizing. In May, 1971, sixty American and European intellectuals, led by Jean-Paul Sartre, Susan Sontag, and Alberto Moravia, denounced Fidel Castro for torturing the Cuban poet Heberto Padilla into making a patently phony confession. On the occasion, a commentator in France's New York Times — La Monde — remarked that "the letter marked the effective break of European, United States, and Latin American intellectuals with the Cuban regime that they enthusiastically supported in the nineteen sixties."

Ah, but it didn't. Ideological inertia has kept most of those 60 American and European intellectuals effectively in the pro-Castro camp. And they continue to advise the world on subjects concerning which, on that occasion at least, they confessed themselves to have been mistaken. Jan-Francois Revel, in his wonderful book The Totalitarian Temptation, makes the striking point that liberal socialists are forever willing to give Marxists one more chance. By contrast, they judge the fascists by their record. Communism they judge by its professions.

That is why, incredibly enough, you find grown-up American pundits like Tom Wicker of the New York Times defending the representatives of the Patriotic Front. Tom Wicker is the kind of person who, five years from now, would sign a Baez-type appeal addressed to the better instincts of Mugabe and Nkomo. In between would be a lot of corpses.

Handicapped Facing Obstacles

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A Supreme Court decision rebuffing a deaf woman's attempt to get into nursing school poses new obstacles for the handicapped, even though it did not directly undercut most federal rules protecting their civil rights, government lawyers say. An activist for the handicapped tried to put the surprising 9-0 ruling Monday in the best light by calling it an extreme case in which the court decided that patients' health and safety were more important than the North Carolina woman's aspirations. "Hard cases make bad law," said Frank Bowe, director of the American Coalition of Citizens With Disabilities.

He said the court's decision narrowly interpreting Section 504 of a 1973 rehabilitation law did not undermine the law's protection for the handicapped in such areas as transportation, housing, health care and most education fields.

"There are limits to the law. ... Here is a case where the woman was stepping one step beyond it," said Bowe, who is deaf.

But a civil rights lawyer with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare commented, "The worst effect is it casts a shadow on Section 504 and the public's perception. That will make life more difficult, even if it had no effect on the regulations." The lawyer asked not to be identified. In the decision, the court ruled handicapped people have no legal right to attend a college if they cannot meet the physical qualifications.

Colleges are under no legal obligation to take "affirmative efforts" to reshape their course offerings to accommodate the disabled, Justice Lewis Powell wrote for the court.

A college still can "require reasonable physical qualifications for admissions to a clinical training program," he added.

The decision did not touch the 1975 Education for All Handicapped Children Act. Under that, states are required to provide a "free, appropriate public education" through the secondary school level for all handicapped youths aged 3 to 18, in the least restrictive environment.

Edwin Martin, deputy U.S. commissioner of education for handicapped programs, said he foresaw no impact of the decision on elementary and secondary school requirements for the handicapped.

The 4th Circuit Court of Appeals had ordered Southeastern

Community College in Whiteville, N.C., to disregard the deafness of Frances B. Davis in deciding whether to admit her to its nursing school. Mrs. Davis, 46, of Fairmont, N.C., is a licensed practical nurse.

The American Council on Education, representing most major colleges, and 27 states had joined Southeastern in appealing the order.

HEW lawyers fear that despite the unusual circumstances in this case, the ruling could impede federal efforts to make colleges provide guides for blind students and other help for the handicapped.

But it should not interfere with the June 1980 deadline for colleges, hospitals and other recipients of federal funds to make their programs physically accessible to the handicapped, they said.

Indicate Optimism For Hansen Twins

By BILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — For the first time, doctors have expressed a bit of optimism about the future of separated Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen.

The girls' conditions were upgraded from serious to fair Monday.

"Early indications are favorable," hospital spokesman John Dwan quoted attending physicians as saying, "and the doctors say recovery is progressing well."

The 20-month-old girls, born joined at the top of their heads, were surgically separated in a 16½-hour operation on May 30.

They were listed in critical but stable condition for one week after the separation. That was changed to serious but stable condition a week ago.

Doctors had declined to give a general prognosis for the girls, saying they were neither optimistic nor pessimistic.

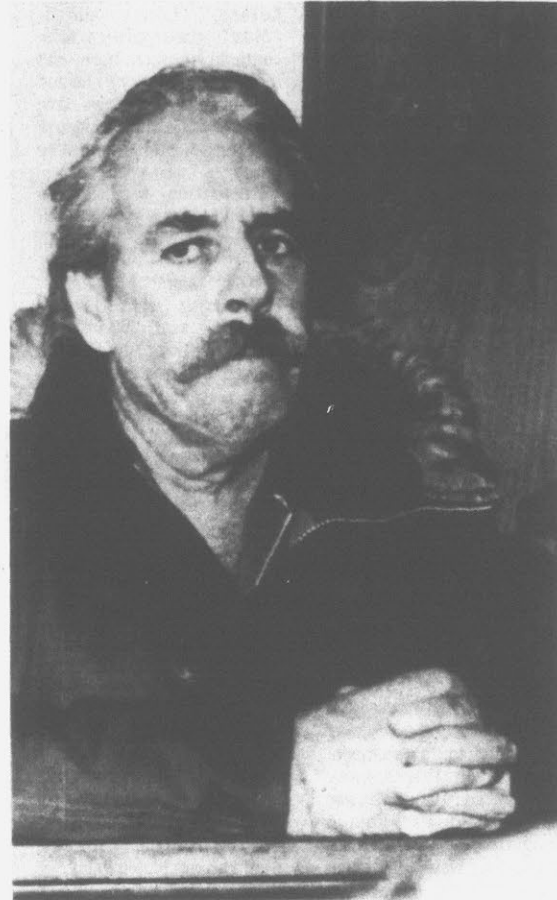

On Monday, however, Dwan said, "While it could be months before a definitive neurological evaluation is possible, the doctors also report that early indications are favorable."

"The girls continue to eat and sleep regularly. They are held often by their parents and the nurses and are responding to outside stimuli," Dwan said. He said the sisters also have started limited physical therapy "to help them move independently and to improve their ability to move."

He said doctors again said that even though both girls show "continued good progress, they will remain vulnerable for some time to several potential problems."

Dwan did not say what the problems were, but in the past he said doctors were concerned about infection.

Meanwhile, the girls' parents, David and Patricia Hansen of Ogden, have hired an attorney to help them with the crush of Committee, which is chaired by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

There is no sign Kennedy is willing to yield to pressure to hold hearings on the marigold bill.

Carter might try to build public support for the marigold by going on television and appealing to patriotism by telling the American people that the United States has no national flower.

He could address a joint session of Congress and, in a bipartisan spirit, quote Dirksen's description of "a field of blooming marigolds tossing their heads in the sunshine and giving a glow to the entire landscape. The marigold beguiles the senses and ennobles the spirit of man."

All he's likely to get for his trouble is Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., singing the praises of the yellow poppy, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., rhapsodizing over mountain laurel, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., filling the Senate chamber with praise of the rose.

Could Kennedy resist pointing out that the marigold, while hardy and colorful, also is known to have a pungent, some might say foul, fragrance?

Will Repatriate 27,000 Refugees

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Some 27,000 of more than 200,000 Burmese who fled to Bangladesh last year remain to be repatriated, and they will be sent home by mid-July, Home Minister Mustafizur Rahman told Parliament Monday.

Most of the refugees were Moslems who fled to escape persecution by the Buddhist Burmese army. Rahman said they are being repatriated at the rate of 2,500 every three days.

He reported 12,241 of the refugees — 2,081 men, 2,442 women and 7,768 children — died in Bangladesh.

aided by a prime rate reduction by a leading New York bank. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 6.75 at 844.33.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than a 4-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Late Monday the government reported that retail sales declined 0.2 percent in May after a downward-revised 1.1 percent drop in April.

The figures heightened speculation that the economy had begun a long-predicted slowdown. But investors have been responding favorably to such evidence lately, evidently going on the theory that reduced activity will help foster an easing of inflation and a decline in interest rates.

Those hopes were reinforced today when New York's Morgan Guaranty Trust cut its prime lending rate from 11 3/4 to 11 1/2 percent, effective immediately. The reduction in the basic charge on blue-chip loans follows recent declines in open-market interest rates.

Oil stocks showed broad gains, resuming their recent advance. Gulf Oil rose 1/4 to 27. Tesoro Petroleum 3/4 to 16; Amerada Hess 3/4 to 42 1/2, and Ashland Oil 2 to 44 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index added .56 to 58.18. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index jumped 1.87 to 195.94.

Volume on the Big Board reached 21.96 million shares by noon.

U.S. Airliner Hijacked, Flies To Cuba

Break-In Charged Man Caught In Rural Home

Pitt County deputies arrested a 33-year-old Ayden man at the home of a Rt. 2, Greenville woman late Monday night and charged him with second degree burglary in the break-in of her home.

According to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, deputies arrested Clarence Benjamin Faulkner of 333 Boulevard Avenue, Ayden, at the home of Bessie Garris after Faulkner allegedly forced his way into the house occupied by the owner and another woman.

Sheriff Tyson said that the Sheriff's Department received a call around 11:30 p.m. from Mrs. Garris, who reported that a male subject had forced open the back door of her house and entered the residence. The sheriff said Mrs. Garris told deputies that she and Lizzie Osborne, who resides with Mrs. Garris, fled to a bedroom and called the Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Tyson noted that when deputies arrived, they found Faulkner inside the residence. Mrs. Garris recalled that she was asleep on a couch when she heard a noise as someone was breaking open the back door. She reported that a man came in the house and started cursing, pulled his shirt off and then went into the bathroom and locked the door. The ladies then locked themselves in the bedroom, she said. The women were not injured in the break-in.

The sheriff reported that Faulkner is being held in Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond.

 places leaks never showed up before," Lowry added. "Mostly, damages seem to be confined to mud here and there which has to be cleaned up, but so far our crews have not found any visible evidence of extensive damages."

Recreation facilities in Greenville also encountered problems with the high waters.

"Our biggest problem," Recreation Dept. Director Boyd Lee said, "was at the Senior Citizen Building on Fourth and Greene Streets. Evidently the drains could not take all the run-off water, and it backed up into the building. We had to cancel our meals program and are at work this morning cleaning up mud and water."

"At Elm Street, water rose quickly, covered the wheels of the train caboose, flooded picnic tables and shelters, and came up to the old center building on Elm Street."

"There's one thing sure," Lee added, "I think all of us found out yesterday where the flood plain is located in Greenville."

Lee said that hopefully clean up work on mud and debris left by the high water would be completed today. "I think by the end of the day everything will be back in full operation," he noted.

Roy Griffin, manager of the Plaza Theaters at Pitt Plaza, reported flooding for a time of the theater floors. "The sump pump obviously could not take care of the volume of water," Griffin stated.

A report from Horace Vincent of the Pitt County Roads Maintenance Dept shows that as far as can be determined at this time, no major damages resulted to county roads as a result of the heavy rainfall.

"Some of the roads are washed pretty badly, with ditches clogged," Vincent said. "At a few places, roads were impassable for a time, but the water has gone down now. We'll not be able to determine damage to bridge structures until after the water has gone down further," he added.

"All our crews are out in full force checking roads and bridges this morning."

On the agricultural scene, Associate County Extension Agent Gaylon Ambrose reports "that as of mid-morning, it seems that overall possible crop damage is not as bad as we had feared it might be. There's some localized problems, it's true, especially with larger growths of tobacco, but so far it does not seem to be a pattern of extensive damages."

"As the rain came rather rapidly, it ran off the fields at a rapid rate, and that helps in this situation. If the temperature remains cool for a day or so that will make a big difference."

MIAMI (AP) — A stocky, bearded man who hijacked a U.S. airliner to Havana Monday night was tentatively identified today as the Cuban pilot who flew an armed MiG jet fighter to the United States in 1969 without being spotted by defense radar until just before he landed in Florida.

It was the first hijacking of a U.S. plane to Cuba in 4 1/2 years.

The hijacker told the crew of the Delta Airlines New York-to-Fort Lauderdale flight that he was carrying an explosive in a bag, forcing them to fly him and 194 passengers to Havana, FBI special agent William Nettles said. Cuban authorities who led him away in handcuffs after the plane landed did not say whether an explosive was found.

The plane, Flight 1061, was then allowed to leave and landed at Miami International Airport at 2:10 a.m. with all passengers and 12 crew members unharmed.

"He said, 'I'm sorry. I have to get to Havana,'" Don Donner of Fort Lauderdale recalled.

State Department spokeswoman Sue Pittman said the hijacker had been tentatively identified as Eduardo Guerra Jimenez.

Guerra, 37, shocked officials on Oct. 5, 1969, when he landed a MiG-17 at Homestead Air Force Base in a plane that carried 40 rounds of ammunition and two cannons armed with 160 rounds. He was not picked up on U.S. radar until just before his landing.

Guerra was then a lieutenant in the Cuban air force. He said he left his family and homeland because he wanted to be away from the Castro regime. Two years later he was arrested in New York on drug charges.

He told police then that he had been unable to find a job in the United States. "Flying is my business, and I can't find work anywhere."

It was not known today whether Guerra's family had ever joined him in the United States.

Passengers said the hijacker had seemed nervous during the flight, and was seen carrying a duffle bag into the front cabin. They didn't see him again until the plane landed in Havana. There, they said, the man yelled his apologies.

"When we were in the terminal in Havana, a Cuban — he looked like an official — told me the hijacker was a defector from the Cuban air force who decided he wanted to return to his homeland. I don't know why I was told this," said Sam Kass of Boca Raton, Fla.

The captain and crew who dealt with the hijacker were hustled away by the FBI soon after the plane landed here, a Delta spokesman said. The captain later refused comment.

One passenger was arrested on charges of interfering with a member of the flight crew and assaulting an FBI agent during questioning in Miami, Nettles said. He was identified as Lawrence Winters, 42, address unknown.

Pedal-Power Channel Flight

CAP GRIS NEZ, France (AP) — Bryan Allen, a 26-year-old Californian, furiously pedaled a flying bicycle resembling a giant dragonfly 22 miles across the English Channel today and became the first person to make the flight by human power alone and win a prize of some $200,000.

Allen, wearing shorts, crash helmet, cycling shoes and a life jacket, steered his 50-pound Gossamer Albatross through gusty winds to a beach landing at Cap Gris Nez two hours and 49 minutes after taking off from England, the International Aeronautical Federation said. It was the longest flight of its kind ever and Allen's speed ranged from six to 10 knots.

A posy of red, white and blue flowers with miniature French and American flags was thrust into his hands by Marie Agnieray, the American wife of a retired French merchant marine officer chosen for the honor because she was the only American resident of the little beach resort town. Champagne was quickly broken out.

Stepping out of the fragile craft with a 90-foot wingspan, Allen, a biochemist and racing cyclist from Bakersfield, said, "Right now, I feel marvelous, but about two minutes ago I didn't feel good at all because I had strong cramps in both my calves and one of my thighs."

Allen, who is about 6 feet tall and weighs 137 pounds, said the toughest part of the crossing was half-way between the takeoff point at Warren near Folkestone and the French coast.

"The swell was strong and the associated turbulence was strong too," said Allen, whose craft was guided by a fleet of small boats and was rarely more than 15 feet above the water.

Allen and the 35-member team that built the Albatross, led by Dr. Paul MacCready of Pasadena, won a prize of 100,000 pounds sterling — about $200,000 — offered by Englishman Henry Kremer.

HopeCosmonaut To Be Woman

PARIS (AP) — The French government hopes its cosmonaut on the first Soviet-French space shot will be a woman, Industry Minister Andre Giraud said.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and President Leonid Brezhnev agreed in principle in April on the joint manned space shot. Speaking at the Paris Air Show Monday, Giraud said the flight would be made "soon."

The most likely choice appears to be Anny Chantal Levasseur-Regourg, 33, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the four European places on the U.S. space shuttle.

K.C.'s Walthan's Brother Charged

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The half-brother of Kansas City Royals catcher John Walthan has been charged with a murder that closely resembles the plot of a Greek tragedy in which he had been cast just weeks ago.

Mark Yavorsky, a 34-year-old San Diego drama student, allegedly stabbed his 65-year-old mother to death with a three-foot saber Sunday.

Walthan flew to San Diego early this week to make funeral arrangements.

Police have no motive for the bizarre slaying, but Yavorsky's theater background has provided some gruesome parallels for detectives investigating the case.

Two weeks ago, Yavorsky reportedly took his mother, Mary E. Walthan, to see a college production of "Orestes, Orestes," a Greek tragedy in which a son fatally stabs his mother.

Yavorsky was to have played a role in that play, campus sources said, but he left the University of California campus in San Diego a month ago, apparently for health reasons.

Yavorsky, Mrs. Walthan's son by a previous marriage, offered no resistance when police took him into custody shortly after the murder.

Police Lt. John Gregory said Yavorsky and his mother, who shared a Pacific Beach home, were drinking coffee at a neighbor's house early Sunday morning when Yavorsky suddenly got up and went out to his car.

Gregory said Yavorsky allegedly returned with an antique saber and stabbed his mother repeatedly in the chest and abdomen. She died about five minutes later, he said.

Yavorsky was described by former teachers and coaches as a brilliant writer and talented athlete. He was also an award-winning actor.

Team For Putt Win

Lee Beacham and Henry Beacham teamed up to shoot 81, 27 under par for three rounds to win the Half-Way Championship at the local Putt-Putt golf course last night.

Gordon Clark and Carl White finished second, one stroke back. Junior Knox and Sammy Squires were relegated to third after losing a sudden-death playoff to Clark and White.

Clark and White also had medalist honors with a 25 in the second round.

Simmons Sparks Hot Cards

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Ted Simmons has it all straightened out. "At 29, I have reached the point where I know what I am doing at the plate," says the red-hot Redbird. "I've turned into the hitter I've always wanted to be."

Because of him, the St. Louis Cardinals have turned into high flyers in the National League East. Simmons continued his recent rampage Monday night with two home runs and six RBI as the Cardinals beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 9-7. That makes seven homers in the last 13 games for Simmons and 16 for the season.

The victory was the ninth in 10 games for the NL's most surprising team.

In other games, the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds 3-2; the Montreal Expos beat the Atlanta Braves 6-5 in 11 innings and the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Houston Astros 4-2.

Simmons hit a grand slam homer in the third inning off Los Angeles starter Jerry Reuss to highlight a five-run inning. Then he broke a 7-7 tie with a two-run blast off loser Lerrin LaGrow.

Tom Bruno, the third Cardinal pitcher, was the winner in the heavy-hitting game which also featured a home run by Lou Brock that put the St. Louis star 52 hits short of 3,000 for his career.

Mets 3, Reds 2

Wayne Twitchell's five innings of one-hit relief pitching and Lee Mazzilli's tie-breaking RBI single in the fifth enabled New York to beat Cincinnati. Twitchell relieved New York starter Jesse Orosco with two on and two out in the fourth and allowed only a seventh-inning single by Junior Kennedy over the final five innings, striking out four and walking

Expos 6, Braves 5

Rodney Scott's bases-loaded walk in the 11th inning forced in the winning run for Montreal. Ellis Valentine began the Montreal rally with a single off Craig Skok and went all the way to third when Braves right fielder Gary Matthews bobbled pinch-hitter Dave Cash's two-out single.

Skok was replaced by Adrian Devine, who promptly gave an intentional walk to Andre Dawson in order to face Scott. After falling behind 3-0, Devine threw two strikes before yielding the game-winning walk.

Woodie Fryman, the fourth Montreal pitcher, earned the victory, yielding three hits over two innings.

Phillies 4, Astros 2

Larry Bowa's RBI single in the seventh inning snapped a 2-2 tie and triggered Philadelphia over Houston. Bud Harrelson walked to start the Phillies seventh and moved to second on a groundout by winning pitcher Randy Lerch. Pete Rose walked, and Bowa then singled to left, scoring Harrelson.

Harrelson appeared out at the plate on a fine off-balance throw from left fielder Jose Cruz to catcher Bruce Bochy, but the ball squirted out of the catcher's mitt as the runner slid home safely. Garry Maddox then added an insurance run with a double that scored Rose.

Vet Says Pin Was No Factor

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dr. Robert Vallence, attending veterinarian for Spectacular Bid, said a safety pin injury to the horse before last Saturday's Belmont Stakes probably was not a major factor in Bid's third-place finish.

"I can't see that (the injury) as a major factor in the horse getting beat," said Dr. Vallence.

"It's like a splinter taken out of a finger. There is no soreness immediately, but 24 to 48 hours later, dirt may get up in there and it may become sore," Vallence said.

Trainer Grover "Buddy" Delp said that the colt had stepped on a safety pin in his stall before the race, but that it was decided not to scratch him.

Delp said the pin was dropped on the floor of Bid's stall when a groom was removing protective bandages from the horse's legs early Saturday morning. Delp said the colt began pawing at the ground, and the pin became lodged in his hoof.

Meanwhile, Belmont steward Gerard A. Burke said that veterinarians approved Spectacular Bid to race in the Belmont, so that action against Delp for allowing the colt to run with a bad foot appeared unlikely.

Drs. Manny Gilman and Ted Hill of the New York Racing Association both said that they had examined the horse before the race, and that he appeared healthy.

"I'm not saying Mr. Delp is telling a story," Gilman said. "All I can tell you is what I saw."

Gminski Drops Off

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mike Gminski said ill health made him drop off the U.S. Pan American basketball team over the weekend.

Gminski, Duke's All-American center and Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year, remained in Durham while the U.S. team assembled in Bloomington, Ind., to resume practice for the Pan-Am games next month in San Juan.

"It was my health," Gminski said. "I was enthusiastic about going and I was in good shape, but I guess my body wasn't. I was in the hospital for four hours Saturday night taking tests. They didn't find anything but I didn't get any better. I just couldn't keep anything down."

Gminski was playing third team center behind Minnesota's Kevin McHale and Pitt's Sam Clancy. Virginia recruit Ralph Sampson also joined the team Monday. Gminski said playing time and Coach Bobby Knight were not problems.

Detroit Spoils Rookie's Homecoming

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Steve McCatty wore the green and gold of the Oakland A's. But he felt right at home in Detroit's Tiger Stadium.

"I was excited, sure I was excited," McCatty, a native of Troy, Mich., said after making his first major league appearance in Detroit. "It was nice having all the relatives here, but it didn't have any effect on me."

It was Detroit's Lou Whitaker who affected the rookie A's pitcher the most as Detroit trimmed the A's 3-1.

The Detroit second baseman, last year's American League rookie of the year, singled and scored the game's first run in the first inning. He also scored in the fourth when Detroit trailed twice to chase McCatty and hand the Oakland starter his first loss in five decisions.

In other AL games in an abbreviated schedule, Toronto stopped Seattle 2-0, California defeated Cleveland 9-4, Baltimore blanked the Chicago White Sox 6-0 and Boston needed 10 innings to down Kansas City 4-0.

Jack Morris, 4-2, went the distance for Detroit.

Red Sox 4, Royals 0

Dwight Evans doubled home the first run and two more Boston runs scored on reliever Al Hrabosky's throwing error as the Red Sox broke up a pitching duel in the 10th inning to stop Kansas City.

The Royals' Steve Busby allowed only two hits in 9-3 innings before being saddled with the loss. Boston's Bob Stanley, 7-4, allowed only four hits as he went the distance.

With the bases loaded and one run in, Jerry Remy bunted back to Kansas City reliever Hrabosky. But the pitcher threw wildly to home plate, allowing two more runs to score.

Angels 9, Indians 4

California exploded for six runs in the ninth inning to overtake Cleveland. Brian Downing and Larry Harlow drove in two runs apiece in the inning after the Indians had moved to a 4-3 advantage in the eighth. After Cleveland pitcher Dan Spillner loaded the bases on two walks and a single, reliever Don Hood hit Willie Aikens to force in a run. Reliever Mike Paxton came on to face Downing, who doubled home two runs and Harlow then singled home two more runs. The Angels added their final run on a double by Dickie Thon.

Blue Jays 2, Mariners 0

Dave Lemaczky tossed a six-hitter and Rick Bosetti added a two-run single to give Toronto its victory over Seattle. It was Lemaczky's second shutout of the season and his seventh complete game.

Both Blue Jay runs came in the first inning as loser Floyd Bannister loaded the bases on a pair of walks and a single by Rico Carti before Bosetti slapped his single up the middle.

Orioles 6, White Sox 0

Ken Singleton doubled in two runs and Al Bumbry added a two-run pinch single to back the five-hit pitching of Scott McGregor as Baltimore racked up its sixth straight victory by blanking Chicago.

Singleton's double was the big hit in the three-run fifth inning and Bumbry came up with a bases-loaded single in the sixth.

It was McGregor's first victory of the year against two losses.

being contenders.

The Astros have gotten marvelous production from players who were shrugged off elsewhere. Craig Reynolds, who made stops in Pittsburgh and Seattle, has plugged the hole at shortstop and is batting .294. Rookie outfielder Jeff Leonard, who was a player to be named later in a deal with Los Angeles, has forced his way into the regular lineup with a .319 batting average. Outfielder Jose Cruz (.282) and third baseman Enos Cabell (.296), a couple of the game's most underrated players, are enjoying their usual productive years and journeyman pitcher Joe Niekro, with a 9-2 record, has won more games than any other National League hurler this season.

These are all ample reasons to let the Astros appear on television. And what's more, those sunburst uniforms look great in living color.

Many Questions About Incident

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — "For want of a nail, the shoe is lost," goes a line from the Jacula Prudentum classic poem which most of us had to memorize in high school.

From the shoe to the horse, to the battle, to the war and finally to loss of the nation itself, the story follows a tragic line that ends with:

"And all for the want of a ten-penny nail."

At Belmont Park over the week-end, there was a similar sequence of bizarre events that led to tragedy — certainly not as deep as the loss of a nation — but stemming, as the nail, from an insignificant, minuscule object.

The object: A safety pin. An ordinary household safety pin. The kind of pin you use on the baby's diapers or, in this case, to secure the bandage around the fragile leg of a champion race horse.

The race horse was Spectacular Bid, a big, iron-gray animal who had romped in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness and was favored at 1-5 to win the Belmont Stakes and become the 12th colt in 105 years of racing to capture the Triple Crown.

The Bid faded in the stretch, finishing third behind the winner, Coastal, and Golden Act.

Immediately after the race, Spectacular Bid's loquacious trainer, Bud Delp, said he had no excuses. The horse's jockey, 19-year-old Ron Franklin, said, "My horse choked — he couldn't breathe. He had nothing the last quarter."

Upon returning to his home in Baltimore, Delp made the stunning disclosure that his horse had accidentally stepped on a safety pin in his stall on the morning of the race and the pin had sunk an inch into the flesh.

That, he intimated, was the reason his runner failed to measure up to expectations.

Franklin immediately changed his story. "I lied about the horse choking," the young rider said. "I had to think of something and that was the first thing that popped into my mind."

Why didn't Delp disclose the injury immediately to track veterinarians? Why did he wait until he got to Baltimore to let the cat out of the bag?

Why should Franklin, a fuzzy-cheeked kid, be put in the position of deviousness to protect his bosses?

What about all those people who wagered close to $1 million on the Bid — $699,999 to win alone — believing they had been given sound information about the horse's health?

No matter how good Delp's motives, there is something ethically wrong with hiding the injury. It is an injustice to the millions who trust the industry to give them a fair shake when they put up their hard-earned dough.

In this case, bettors were duped — unintentionally or deliberately, but duped nevertheless.

That is, if Delp is correct and the sore foot actually did affect the outcome of the race.

It is much easier to believe that it did not. A more logical explanation is that Spectacular Bid, for all his past performances, either was worn out by a hard spring of campaigning or not able to go the 1 1/2 mile distance — theories only future races can prove.

Spectacular Bid was not, as Delp boasted, a better horse than the great Secretariat. According to comparative times, Secretariat would have whipped him by 20 lengths.

It was a tragic day for the Bid, the kid and the lip. All three must redeem themselves.

No Relief
Kansas City Royals relief pitcher Al Hrabosky picks up a bunt by Boston's Jerry Remy and throws wildly to the plate in the tenth inning last night, allowing two runs to score. After nine scoreless frames, Boston won it in the tenth 4-0. (AP Laserphoto)

Watson Says Open Is Needed For Greatness

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Maybe Tom Watson is right. He insists he doesn't belong on the same golf plateau with Jack Nicklaus — at least for now.

"I need to win more major championships. That's how the press, the fans, young peers judge a player," said Watson, well-rested for a charge to his first United States Open title.

America's most prestigious golf tournament opens at Inverness Club Thursday. Watson and Nicklaus will rank in the forefront as favorites.

"You must win the Open to be considered a great player," said Watson. "With one exception — Sam Snead — no one has been a great player without winning the Open."

The year-by-year yardsticks of the game's two greats, at comparable points in their careers, support Watson.

At age 29, Nicklaus had won two Opens, three Masters and one PGA National in eight tour years. That was six major professional titles among his 30 tournament victories.

Watson is now the same age a decade later.

His comparable figures in 8 1/2 tour seasons: no Open titles, one Masters, two British Opens and three majors among his 14 tour triumphs.

But this is 1979 and it's clearly Watson over Nicklaus in the first half of the tour.

The red-haired Missourian has needed just 14 starts to pile up a tour-leading $353,000. He's won four times. He's finished second four times. He's been in the top six on 10 occasions.

Meanwhile, Nicklaus, 39, is fighting over-the-hill charges. And, by his own admission, he's played very well just one time in eight starts — finishing 1 stroke back in the Masters for fourth place.

The man who has won an unprecedented $3.8 million on tour has paltry earnings of less than $35,000 this year.

"I haven't been satisfied with my final results this year," said the blond Ohioan, "but I've still got three majors left to put my game back in shape. I need a win under my belt to get untracked."

Even Nicklaus, the winner of an all-time record of 15 major professional championships, concedes he's no longer the man to beat every time he tees up.

Nicklaus says it's Watson now.

"Tom is playing so much better than anyone in the game," said Nicklaus. "He's going to have to play poorly for somebody to beat him."

Watson, however, can see problems with his game two days before the Open begins for a third time over Inverness, a relatively short but tight 6,982 yards.

"I'm still having trouble off the tee," he said after shooting "about par" of 71 in a tuneup Monday. Watson was headed for more driving work after his round, too.

But then Watson's confidence showed. Just over a two-week vacation, he grinned and added, "I'm putting well though and that's the name of the game."

A Disenchanted Movie Version Of American Revolution Airing

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A slick romance about the American Revolution is now playing, or has recently played, on independent TV stations around the country. It is John Jakes' "The Rebels," full of splendor and valiance and nifty uniforms.

There's another American Revolution drama playing this week, featuring ragged uniforms, disenchantment, cowardice and inhumanity.

This latter view comes from Schenectady, courtesy of the public TV folks there. It is an hour-long special called "The Other Side of Victory," airing tonight.

As the title implies, this drama isn't about memorable battles and triumph. Not a lot of heroism here. Rather, it is the American Revolution seen from the eyes of a small company of New York foot soldiers.

And a nasty sight it is — mud and misery and brutal conditions, incompetent officers and mutinous men.

Producer-director William C. Jersey's little drama is a close-up of one corner of the American Revolution tapestry, a stark picture of what it must have been really like for men who actually fought that war — farmers, tinkers and tradesmen losing an ambiguous struggle.

These aren't the high-spirited adventurers you'll find in "The Rebels." A halfwit, a 14-year-old boy, broken men — these rebels steal the boots off the feet of their dead companions. These rebels want to go home.

At the film's beginning, the ragged and dispirited militia company is introduced to its new officer, a young lieutenant with ideas of the proper military way — neat uniforms, trimmed hair and clean-shaven faces.

When one of the men shows up at formation with whiskers, young Lt. Phillips orders 15 lashes:

"Sergeant, have the drummer administer punishment."
"Sir," the sergeant replies, "our drummer deserted two weeks ago."

It is a lesson for the green Mr. Phillips in the utility his men knew well, a lesson driven home when Dooley, the halfwit, wanders from camp and is found in the company of British soldiers.

Though the men and Lt. Phillips protest that Dooley couldn't possibly be held responsible for his innocent action, Phillips' superiors order Dooley's execution — to set an example for soldiers who kept sane by constantly considering desertion.

There is something perverse about war accounted without its heroism, and, though this film is realistic, I almost wished for a little Hollywood gloss. But realism serves Jersey's purpose, which is to illuminate the dark side of America's greatest victory, to put flesh and blood alongside the legend.

Nowhere is this achieved more effectively than in the depiction of a battle between the Continental army and the British regulars. This is like a minute with bullets. Did they really fight that way, walking politely backwards while loading their rifles, firing only on command?

cient. So he cast about for a method of improving his odds.

A study of the spot cards in the club suit suggested a line of play which would succeed if clubs were 3-3 or if West had started with either J-9-6-5, J-5 or 9-5 in the suit. Declarer drew three rounds of trumps, maintaining an entry to the table, and then cleared the hearts, ending in dummy. He led a low club and, when East followed with the six, declarer inserted the seven.

West won, but he was end played. Since a heart return would have given declarer a ruff and sluff, West shifted to a diamond. Playing on the theory that the minor-suit kings were likely to be split between the two defenders, South went up with dummy's queen and that was that.

John Wayne...

following Wayne's final battle since Jan. 12, when a routine gallbladder operation turned into a 9½-hour ordeal as surgeons found cancer in his stomach and removed it.

The next five months brought small successes — release from the hospital, an ovation at the Academy Awards — and gradual, inexorable deterioration. He was back in surgery May 2. This time the cancer was in his intestines.

Wayne — who played the cowboy, the marine, the admiral, the football player — was granted scant expectation of progress, though he was taking short walks near his room, hospital officials said.

Cards and letters by the thousands poured into the Medical Center from around the country and the world.

As a measure of Wayne's immense popularity and almost legendary stature, Congress last month voted to have a gold medal struck in his honor. Among the other 83 recipients of the congressional medal were George Washington and Andrew Jackson.

Death began approaching Saturday, Strohm said, when "Mr. Wayne started doing rather poorly." His vital signs would not stabilize. He slept for long periods and, when he woke, "he would look around and ask for his children.

"No one could predict when death would come."

Wayne had faced cancer before. The disease claimed part of a lung 15 years ago — but the Duke won. "I licked the Big C," he boasted after that 1964 operation.

Then he went to Mexico and began filming "The Sons of Katie Elder," another in the long string of westerns that made Wayne one of the biggest box office draws in Hollywood history.

Wayne's last public appearance was April 9, when he ambled onstage at the Academy Awards. He was, he told a warmly applauding audience, "mightily pleased that I can amble down here tonight."

Wayne presented the award for best picture, for "The Deerhunter," and basked in the lengthy standing ovation, declaring it's "just about the only medicine a fellow'd ever need." The face and body were much thinner, worn down by the disease. But the grin was still there. The voice had not changed.

John Wayne never stopped being the Duke, the nickname he picked up from the Airedale dog his family had when he was a child.

He was born Marion Michael Morrison in 1907 in Winterset, Iowa. He moved with his family to California as a boy and played football at the University of Southern California.

After a series of bit parts and odd jobs around the movie sets, Wayne got his first starring role in 1930. He became a star nine years later for his role as a good-guy gunman in "Stagecoach." He was nominated for an Oscar in 1949 for "The Sands of Iwo Jima." He won the award in 1970 for his role as Rooster Cogburn in "True Grit."

Over the years, his legend grew with almost countless westerns and war movies. He almost always portrayed a twofisted and determined man from a simpler time, when right and wrong were clear and absolute.

He once mused that for his epitaph he would like simply a Mexican saying: "Feo, Fuerte y Formal" — ugly, strong and dignified.

Wayne's outspoken political views — usually conservative and always patriotic — made him an often-controversial figure during the unrest of the 1960s. He strongly supported America's role in Vietnam,

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

proclaiming in 1969, "There's a lot of yella bastards in the country who would like to call patriotism old-fashioned." It was never old-fashioned to him.

But Wayne survived the tumult of the '60s just as he survived mediocre movies and frequent disdain from critics.

He once said he expected to be panned by the critics, but, "hell, I don't care. People like my pictures and that's all that counts."

At his death, he was near the top of the all-time list of box office draws. It's been estimated that his movies brought in $700 million.

Wayne was married three times, and was separated from his last wife, Pilar.

In an interview almost two decades ago, Wayne said, "Hollywood had only one king — Clark Gable. And now that he and Gary Cooper are gone, I'm just a lonesome cowboy, nothing more."

Plan Raising Thermostats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moviegoers' blood may boil higher than usual this summer, but don't blame the sprouting number of sci-fi monsters.

Government policy is the likely cause.

The temperature in most theaters, as well as restaurants, stores, offices, and industrial and governmental buildings will be rising as of July 1, under a federal proposal aimed at saving 195,000 to 390,000 barrels of oil daily.

That represents 1 percent to 2 percent of daily U.S. oil consumption, but as much as 10 percent of the energy used for air conditioning and heating, federal officials estimate.

The proposal would require that thermostats in about 5 million nonresidential buildings be set no lower than 80 degrees Fahrenheit during the summer and no higher than 65 degrees in the winter.

Hospitals, clinics, elementary and nursery schools would be exempt. Also saved from wilting would be lodgers at hotels, motels, dormitories and resorts. Their rooms may be below 80 degrees, but the temperature in dining areas, conference halls and bars cannot be.

"The objective is laudable," says Leonard Adreon, vice president of the Building Owners and Managers Association International, "but there are problems."

"Storekeepers may lose some business. People will find it more comfortable to stay home and watch TV in an air-conditioned house than see a movie. Workers' productivity can be affected," said Adreon, whose Washington-based group has 3,500 members.

Aware of this, the Energy Department is conducting five public hearings on the plan. They will be held in Chicago and San Francisco on Thursday and Dallas, Washington and New York on Monday. Written comments are invited through June 22.

The thermostat limits are stipulated in President Carter's standby conservation plan that Congress approved in May.

In addition to room temperatures, the regulations require that hot water not be raised above 105 degrees, except where sanitary codes require otherwise.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Sunny skies and mild weather are expected for most of the nation in the forecast period until Wednesday morning. Cooler weather is due for New England. Showers are predicted for parts of the central Rockies and northern Plains. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Told Payoff Did No Good

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Rockingham County deputy testified Monday that a man convicted of running a prostitute across state lines once told him to tell Sheriff Carl Axsom that money paid to protect his enterprise "wasn't doing me any damn good."

Aubrey Henderson, of Danville, Va., is accused of lying to a federal grand jury last November when he told it that he couldn't remember giving the deputy $1,000 and that he couldn't remember whether he owned and operated the County Line Truck Stop near Rockingham as a prostitution business.

The deputy, Wayne Garrison, said Henderson also gave him five $100 bills and told him it was for Axsom's annual political fish fry or for his election campaign.

Henderson was convicted in federal court last week of transporting a prostitute from Virginia to North Carolina for purposes of prostitution.

He also faces a charge of obstruction of justice.

Axsom, who was subpoenaed to testify, will not appear. U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon quashed the subpoena after Axsom said in a motion that he had insufficient time to prepare and that he would invoke his 5th Amendment rights if called to the stand.

He said, through his lawyer, that he would testify only if given complete immunity.

J. David James, Henderson's lawyer, cross-examined Garrison Monday, trying to point out what he said were discrepancies in his testimony that he gave to the grand jury.

By The Associated Press
High pressure was building over North Carolina this morning, promising clear skies and cool temperatures for a while. A cold front that moved through the state Monday, accompanied by showers and thundershowers, was well off the coast and the high pressure building behind it will control the state's weather for most of the week. Warmer temperatures will be returning by the end of the week, but in the meantime temperatures will range for at least a couple of days in the 70s in the mountains and up to the low 80s on the south coast. By the weekend, readings will be up in the mid 80s in the mountains and range to the upper 80s and low 90s elsewhere. Cooler temperatures were felt this morning as readings dropped to the 50s and, in the mountains, even down in the 40s. Heavy rains developed ahead of the front over eastern sections included more than four inches of the state Monday. Five inches of rain were reported at Greenville where the heavy downpour also caused some street flooding.

Other heavy rainfall reports included more than three inches at the Duplin County community of Sloan, and more than three inches at Jasper in Craven County. Other eastern communities received similar amounts.

Enriched By Cattle Sold In Bank Error

BRECKENRIDGE, Colo. (AP) — Philip Stagg, an itinerant carpenter, is $50,521 richer today due to an apparent $608 mistake in his Bank of Breckenridge checking account.

Stagg, 33, was awarded $70,000 by a district court jury last February, but settled for the lesser amount in return for a promise by the bank not to appeal.

His attorney, Gerald Itkin, said the incident stemmed from an overdraft notice in 1977. He said Stagg found the bank had failed to post a $608 deposit on the statement the bank was using to accuse Stagg of bouncing a check.

Itkin said the bank agreed it probably was a bank error and advanced the $608. But when a banker "became convinced that Stagg had ripped off the bank," said Itkin, Stagg was arrested and tried on a felony theft charge that ended in acquittal.

Stagg sued for defamation of character and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Dean Boyd, president of the bank, said the bank had since changed ownership and the former president agreed to pay costs.

"If it had been up to us, we damn sure would have appealed it," he said.

Three loads of cattle have been sold in North Carolina's first slaughter cattle tele-auction held recently at Central Carolina Farmer's Livestock Market in Hillsborough, according to N.C. Agricultural Commissioner Jim Graham.

The livestock auction, conducted by a conference call via telephone lines connecting nationwide buyers with North Carolina livestock farmers, was announced as a "great success" by Graham.

Buyers paid nearly $1.10 per pound for choice, yield grade two and three slaughter cattle and also paid freight cost. During the sale, the price the cattle brought was higher than average prices reported by a national market news service.

While the buyer does not see the cattle in a 'tele-auction,' he is given grading information and a full description of the stock by a neutral government grader before bidding on the beef.

"Although North Carolina is not usually known as a cattle feeding state, the tele-auction gives our farmers who finish cattle the opportunity to sell at nationally competitive prices," said Graham.

The 123 steers averaged 1,100 pounds each. The tele-auction was set-up by NCDA Marketing Specialist Ralph Ketchie. The tele-auction is a new service available to North Carolina cattle feeder's and is available to them the first Tuesday of each month.

Beekeepers To Meet Thursday

The Pitt County Beekeepers will meet Thursday, June 14, 7:30 p.m., in the Agricultural Extension Office, corner of third and Greene Streets, Greenville, according to Gaylon Ambrose, associate agricultural extension agent.

Essential beekeeping equipment will be displayed at the Thursday meeting. Anyone interested in beekeeping is invited to attend.

Troopers Will Drive Slower

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — To save gasoline, Connecticut state troopers will be going slower and sweating a little more.

State police said Monday they were responding to an 18 percent gasoline allocation cutback in June by ordering troopers to change their habits.

When practical, troopers are to park their cruisers in a visible spot with the engine off for 15 minutes of each hour, said Donald Long, public safety commissioner. He said that will reduce the ground each trooper will cover but will increase visibility.

Other gasoline-saving measures include keeping "normal patrol speed" on freeways at 55 mph or below and decreasing use of air conditioners in cruisers equipped with them, he said.

GRAPE VINES DAMAGED NUIITS-SAINT-GEORGES, France (AP) — Violent hail and rain damaged or destroyed an estimated 1,500 acres of vines in the famous wine-growing district of Burgandy yesterday, authorities said.

Severely Burned By Explosion

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A workman received third degree burns over 80 percent of his body when an electric sanding machine that he was operating exploded.

Mike Townsend of Elizabethton, Tenn., was sanding a lane at an Asheville bowling alley when the machine struck a nail, causing sparks to fly into a bag on the sander. The bag contained fine dust particles and the spark caused the contents to explode, police said.

The work crew foreman, Robert Fenner, and bowling alley manager Thomas J. Smith told police that the dust particles in the air were also ignited by the explosion and set Townsend's clothing on fire. "We had to put him out," Fenner said of the flames.
