PRICE 35 CENTS

Also Providing Protection For Food, Gasoline Convoys

Troops Guard Depots

National Guard troops stood guard at fuel depots Saturday and rode shotgun on truck convoys moving vital food and gasoline shipments in open defiance of a nationwide independent truckers' strike.

Independent owner-operators — pressing for higher freight rates, more fuel at lower prices and higher speed and load limits — blockaded truck stops and gasoline delivery terminals.

Trucks venturing onto strikeslowed highways became targets for snipers who have killed one trucker and wounded at least three others since the shutdown began in the Midwest 17 days ago.

By Saturday, it appeared the independents had a stranglehold on the nation's economy.

Tons of produce rotted on idle loading docks in the South and West. Gasoline supplies dwindled as blockades idled or hobbled major fuel distribution terminals. Industries began to shut down.

The Hershey Chocolate Co. laid off 950 workers, a third of its force, at Hershey, Pa., because truckers refused to ship the perishable candy bars. Wausau Homes of Wausau, Wis., halted operations at its prefabricated house plant because of delivery problems. And an Armour meatpacking plant at Worthington, Minn., halted operations because it could not find refrigerated trucks to ship meat from the 4,500 hogs it butchers daily.

Grocery chains reported some shortages could be expected as the strike lengthened and said prices surely would rise as supplies dwindled. However, grocery experts said that though there might be bare spots on grocers' shelves, stores would not run completely out of food. They urged consumers to avoid panic buying.

Gunfire, vandalism and harassment were common on the nation's strikebound highways.

The windshields were shot out of two trucks in North Little Rock, Ark., Friday night and early Saturday. No one was injured.

Pennsylvania state police reported 30 incidents of vandalism or violence — including five shooting incidents — during a 24-hour period that ended Saturday. No one was injured and there were no arrests, police said.

A two-pound hunk of asphalt was tossed from an overpass through the windshield of a truck on Interstate 90 near Blue Earth, Minn. The driver was not injured.

National Guardsmen were called on in several states to help ease critical gasoline shortages and protect gasoline shipments. Troops armed with M-16 rifles rode in fuel-truck convoys in gasoline-starved Florida.

West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller called out about 100 troops to protect truckers loading at gasoline bulk terminals and ordered police to provide escorts to trucks hauling fuel.

Missouri Gov. Joseph Teasdale called out the guard late Friday, declared a state of emergency and authorized the state highway patrol to provide escorts and "necessary security" for truckers hauling fuel and other commodities.

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson ordered National Guard helicopters to keep watch on the highways for signs of possible trouble but stopped short of calling out troops.

Georgia produce markets, backed up with food left to spoil earlier this week because of the truck strike, reported the situation improving thanks to operators of small, gasoline-burning trucks. The small trucks stepped in to replace the strike-idled, 18-wheel diesels. A spokesman for a Cordele, Ga., produce market said deliveries were returning to normal.

The Georgia State Patrol reported it was escorting several convoys of large trucks through the state.

Gasoline and grain deliveries returned to normal in Minnesota, where National Guard troops were called out Tuesday to keep watch on shipments from grain terminals, refineries and gasoline pipeline distribution points. Authorities said long lines that materialized at service stations early in the week had virtually disappeared by Saturday. Authorities said 500 guardsmen and 400 state troopers were on duty in Minnesota.

Marijuana Culture Is A Problem In Farmville

By CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Pitt County soil not only grows good tobacco — it grows a plant infinitely more valuable monetarily, but illegal — marijuana.

Since April, 1979, the Farmville Police Department has destroyed approximately 1,500 marijuana plants. "This includes seeds that were planted for the purposes of transplanting when at the proper height and also plants that had reached two to six feet in height and were ready for harvest," Farmville Narcotics Officer Ken Godwin said. Green, uncut marijuana also has been confiscated by Farmville Police recently.

In the drug culture, Pitt County-grown "grass" is known as some of the best, Godwin says he understands.

"We know we don't find out about all that's grown, not by any means," Godwin said. "We mostly get just what we're tipped off about. It's easy to conceal, even to grow indoors."

Godwin said many parents and other associates of marijuana growers "are bound to know about it."

"It's sad," he said, "when parents or others in the know sit back and hope the situation will get better. They really should seek help for themselves and their children. We think most of the use of marijuana, alcohol, and other drugs here now is at the experimental stage in the young people's lives. But many really are addicted. All of them need help. They're not mature enough to get this kind of help on their own. They've got to have adults' help."

"Here's one way we know that the usage here is great," he said. "A check has been made at one of the local convenience stores. It is quoted that for only a six-months' period, $4,000 worth of marijuana smoking paraphernalia has been sold. This figure includes marijuana rolling paper which sells for 58 cents per package, and marijuana pipes that sell for $2.19 per pipe."

Godwin and Police Chief Ron Cooper both said they believe that most of the break-ins and incidents of vandalism that have occurred in Farmville during the past year have been "drug-related."

There are marijuana plants on display at the Farmville Police Department if one thinks he or she has seen some but isn't sure, Godwin said.

Godwin said he is aware that his and other police officers' efforts "are not putting a dent in the drug problem here."

"It's a 24-hour-a-day job — and then some," he said, "and there's no way we can win."

"But the kids that are messing with this stuff aren't winning either.

"Many of them and their families have already been damaged."

"We've got to do all we can. The Farmville Police Department is doing everything within its power to curb the problem that continues to exist here. But we need help. Any information will be kept confidential," he said.

RECENT HARVEST — Farmville Narcotics Officer Ken Godwin poses with some of a recent harvest of marijuana found growing on

As Carter Leaves For Far East No Bases In Vietnam, Soviets Assure U.S.

By JAMES HILDRETH

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA

(UPI) — President Carter has been assured by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev that the Soviet Union will not establish military bases in Vietnam, the White House disclosed Saturday.

The Soviets have utilized the Vietnamese ports Can Rahn Bay and DaNang — used by the United States during the Vietnam War — since the China-Vietnam border war this year. The Soviet military activity has caused growing concern within the administration and among U.S. allies, notably Japan.

In an interview with Japanese reporters, Carter said he discussed the Vietnam base issue with Brezhnev "this week" — presumably at the Vienna arms limitation treaty summit.

"He assured me personally that there would be no establishment of Soviet bases in South Vietnam," Carter said, "and that the present ship and plane use of the port and airports is of a routine nature."

"We have no fear of Soviet military presence" in the western Pacific, Carter said.

"We are concerned about a buildup whenever we consider it to be excessive beyond what is required for Soviet security."

Carter said the United States will maintain a "military presence in the Western Pacific adequate to protect American interests and to protect the interests of our allies."

The interview with Japanese reporters was held in the White House Wednesday but released Saturday to reporters traveling with Carter to the Tokyo economic summit conference.

In the interview, Carter said he was "concerned" about fresh U.S. intelligence estimates of North Korean military strength, which "are higher than we had previously supposed."

Carter said he would discuss the matter with South Korean leaders and U.S. military officials next weekend following his state visit to Japan and the two-day summit conference.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown told Congress Thursday that North Korea now has the fifth largest army in the world. Congressional estimates have set the size of that army at between 550,000 and 600,000 troops, up from the previous estimate of 450,000.

Carter repeated his previous stance that he will not act on any decisions concerning withdrawal of American troops from Korea until he returns to the White House.

"Whatever decision I make about the level of American forces, I will keep the commitment that I originally made, that is not to do anything to disturb the military balance or to create instability on the Korean peninsula."

"My own hope is there might be fruitful meetings directly between the leaders of South Korea and North Korea in the near future, either with or without an American presence during those meetings. I think this is the ultimate solution to the present divisions of the people of Korea."

Carter said all nations must play a larger role in resolving the Indonesian refugee problem.

"We would like to turn this critical problem into a much more wide ranging area of responsibility among numerous nations," he said.

N.C. Convoy Moves Produce

The highway patrol Saturday escorted a 10-truck convoy carrying produce through North Carolina while farmers in other parts of the state tried to organize their own convoys as the independent truckers strike continued.

Herbert Hyde, secretary of crime control and public safety, also said there were two reports of sniping incidents late Friday night, but no one was injured. He described the situation in North Carolina Saturday as quiet.

Hyde said a convoy that originated in Lumberton received a patrol escort on a northwest route through the state to Tennessee. He said officials in Tennessee, Kentucky, and Ohio had been alerted to offer escorts to the truckers.

Hyde said the highway patrol received reports of shots fired at a truck between Smithfield and Selma around 11 p.m. last night. Another driver had a bullet strike his windshield on I-40 in Burke County, he said.

On Friday, two groups of farmers in eastern North Carolina met and announced they would also organize convoys. One group located in Newton Grove, had planned to leave Friday night, but the truckers failed to show up. Hyde said a patrol escort would be available when the Newton Grove group was ready.

In a meeting Friday night in Greensboro, Pete Lane of the Department of Transportation told approximately 70 independent drivers that the farmers stand to lose $35 million in the next 30 days if the strike is not settled. Despite the warning, the truckers voted unanimously to continue the shutdown.

At the meeting in Greensboro David Edwards, president of the state chapter of the International Owner-Operator Union of America, said they wanted loading and unloading charges eliminated and only one license plate for each truck, in addition to increasing the speed limit and reducing fuel costs.

"People are going to start listening and we appreciate it," Edwards said. "If they (truckers) stay shut down, there's a lot of food that ain't going to be hauled."

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham voiced disapproval of the action and said it could affect availability of kerosene and fuel oil for tobacco curing and grain drying.

"I'm sorry about public opinion but the truckers are the link between the producers and the consumers and everybody is going to suffer," said a driver, who did not want to be identified.

Drivers Saturday also continued their blockade of many diesel fuel pumps across the state. In Charlotte, truckers barred entrance to storage terminals in the Paw Creek section of Mecklenburg County.

Brzezinski Stays Home

WASHINGTON (UPI) — National Security Affairs Advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski remained in Washington Saturday to monitor the "very unstable" situation in Nicaragua, instead of flying to Tokyo with President Carter as planned.

Tight Electrical Supply This Summer

Charles O'H. Horne Jr., director of the Greenville Utilities Commission, has reiterated that electricity will be in tight supply this summer.

According to Horne, Greenville's supplier (VEPCO) has advised the Greenville Utilities Commission that its generation reserves during the peak hours of usage for this summer will be practically zero due to the shutdowns of the two nuclear units in Surry, Va. However, he added that one of the nuclear plants in Surry is expected to be back in service by August.

Unless EPA restrictions on stack emissions are temporarily waived, Horne said that a major coal-fired unit at VEPCO's Chesterfield Plant will also have to be shut-down in August.

Meanwhile, VEPCO's No. 1 nuclear unit at North Anna, Va. is expected to continue operating throughout the summer.

"All of this simply means that a major part of VEPCO generation during the high-use summer months will have to come from oil-fired and older coal-fired plants," said Horne. "This combination translates into high fuel adjustment charges every month during the summer."

"Greenville Utilities has no option but to pass along VEPCO's fuel charge," he added. "The fuel adjustment charge for June is .8 cents per kilowatt hour or $8 per thousand, but this could easily go to $10 per thousand plus in the coming months."

According to Horne, from June through December, Greenville Utilities had a zero fuel adjustment charge.

At that time, however, VEPCO had two nuclear units on line and the summer temperatures were not quite as hot as in previous years.

Horne said that Greenville Utilities' load management system, with some 4,000 participating customers and 7,500 air conditioning/water heating switches, will be used during peak hours this summer. He pointed out that the temperature and system demand will dictate when the system is utilized.

The system is currently being tested to ensure that everything is ready for the summer months.

"With the limited availability of electric power and the extremely high cost consumers will be facing, restricted use of air conditioning is certainly advised," said Horne. "Thermostats should be set at 78 degrees plus, and electric fans rather than air conditioning units should be used whenever practical."

Information on summer energy conservation measures is available from the Customer Service Department at the Greenville Utilities Office.

Last Rites Today

ASHLAND, Ky. (UPI) — A score of executives from ABC Television in New York and eight correspondents from the network's Washington office will attend services today for colleague Bill Stewart who was slain in the Nicaraguan civil war.

Stewart, 37-year-old ABC-TV reporter killed at close range by a Nicaraguan national guardsman Wednesday, will be eulogized by ABC co-anchor Frank Reynolds and family clergyman John Eldridge.

Stewart's body was flown from in Miami Friday. Stewart's widow is the former Myrna Minnehan of Ashland, Ky.

Soldiers shot the reporter and his interpreter at a roadblock in eastern Managua, where intense fighting for control of the capital's slum area was under way.

His ABC camera crew kept the film rolling, allowing people around the world later to witness the execution-type slaying.

Residents Of Rebel Held Areas Told To Evacuate

By MARTIN P. HOUSEMAN
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Nicaraguan national radio warned residents of rebel-held eastern sector of Managua to evacuate Saturday, saying the national guard would launch an all-out attack to crush Sandinista guerrilla strongholds.

The radio issued an emergency bulletin calling for evacuation of the Belo Horizonte, El Dorado, Don Bosco and Colonia Luis Somoza barrios. The radio said the government would launch air attacks on the Sandinista headquarters in El Dorado. The threat of the all-out attack came after two weeks of intense fighting that has already left much of eastern Managua in ruins and claimed heavy casualties among Sandinistas, national guardsmen and civilians caught in the middle.

President Anastasio Somoza threw two elite battalions, light tanks and rocket-firing planes into the drive to clear east Managua earlier in the week. But their advance has met tough resistance by hard-core Sandinistas armed with Chinese-made RPG rockets, rifle grenades and heavy machine guns.

The rebels received air-dropped supplies Friday night from a light plane flown by the Sandinistas, according to guard radio messages.

A Nicaraguan Lanica Airlines 727 jet en route from Miami to Managua with 11 passengers Saturday morning was hijacked and diverted to San Jose, Costa Rica, Saturday morning by its pilot, copilot and flight engineer, who sought political asylum.

The plane landed safely at the Costa Rican airport. Authorities said Lanica would send another crew from Guatemala to return the plane to Nicaragua.

In the south, the Sandinistas week-old southern offensive aimed at capturing a provisional capital was bogged down Saturday under withering artillery and air bombardment from Somoza's forces.

Intercepted radio messages indicated the fighting near the Costa Rican border had settled into a war of attrition, with little movement since Sandinista columns striking from their Costa Rican refuge seized a slice of Nicaraguan territory early in the week.

Prospects for an early end to the bloody three-week-old civil war seemed dim, with both Somoza and the Sandinistas spurning outside peace efforts. "I will not resign and will die for my cause," Somoza declared Saturday in turning down a demand by the Organization of American States that he give up his family's dictatorial 43-year rule of the Central American country.

The provisional government of the leftist Sandinista National Liberation Front announced over Radio Sandino Friday its rejection of Secretary of Vance's plan for an immediate cease-fire and the creation of a new government.

It called Vance's plan "reactionary" and expressed gratitude for a final OAS decision not to intervene militarily in the civil war. The Somoza radio Saturday morning claimed rebel convoys made two runs across the Costa Rican border Friday, but were met by intense artillery barrages that drove them back into bases in the neighboring country. Radio Sandino has no made comment on the reported invasion.

Intercepted Sandinista radio messages showed the main rebel line, in a ravine near the village of Sapoa, and an advance line two miles to the north were still holding strong, but not progressing toward Rivas, 21 miles north of the border.

The Sandinistas have designated Rivas as their provisional government capital.

Rebel forces did consolidate their rear area Saturday with the capture of Cardenas on the southern rim of Lake Nicaragua.

In the east and northeast, heavy fighting surrounded key road junctions on Highway 7 and 9 at Matagalpa, Boaco, Jinote and Masaya, where Sandinista forces were attempting to open a way west to beleaguered comrades dug into Managua's eastern slums for the past two weeks.

BUCKET BRIGADE — When these folks showed up at the pumps with buckets in hand for gasoline, the service station attendants in Miami, Fla. held up a long line of automobiles that handle their problem. Like many places in the nation, South Florida is wrestling ing with a gasoline shortage caused in many places by the truckers strike. National Guard units were mobilized to escort gasoline tankers to stations. (AP Laserphoto)

Sandinistas Blame The U.S.

PENAS BLANCAS, Costa Rica (UPI) — The Sandinista guerrillas who are battling President Anastasio Somoza's regime in Nicaragua almost unanimously blame the United States for the problems in their homeland.

Although the Carter administration took a dramatic turn in its Nicaragua policy this week and called for Somoza's resignation, the move has not yet made any impact on the rank-and-file guerrillas.

Many of the Sandinistas gathered at this border customs post — some as young as 15 — lounge about at the wooden rail crossing point, ride around on stolen horses and bicycles and blame President Carter and "the gringos" for the civil war. Said one bearded young man with a black beret and a .45-caliber pistol in his belt, "I hope the gringos don't try to intervene in our fight. If they do, we will kill all the damn gringos left in Nicaragua."

"This is all the United States' fault for leaving us with the Somoza dynasty and his national guard. And Carter, well, Carter is a hypocrite," he said bitterly.

Somoza's family has ruled

Nicaragua for 43 years.

It was through this border point that 700 guerrillas based in Costa Rican sanctuaries stormed into Nicaragua last weekend.

The guerrillas move freely in the border region. They have unrestricted access to the Costa Rican immigration and customs area and use it as a rest place and possibly as a rear base and a supply route, as well as an evacuation point for wounded.

The Costa Rican government has declared the stretch of highway from Penas Blancas to La Cruz, about 10 miles, a military zone. Many civilians have been evacuated and all civilian and commercial traffic has been banned.

A boy of 15 armed with a rusty M-1 carbine signaled cars to stop at Penas Blancas.

"I'm a Nicaraguan Sandinista guerrilla," he said with a big smile. "You may go a little in Costa Rican sanctuaries and look for Commander Juancho and he will tell you whether you can enter Nicaragua's first free territory or not."

Five hundred yards further on there were scores of rebel youths. They lounged around the chairs and tables of a shuttered cafeteria inside the customs post, cradling Belgian-made rifles and M-1s in their arms.

Two in black berets, their guns slung across their backs, rode around on horses "liberated" from a nearby farm in Nicaragua. Others pedaled bikes or drove vehicles confiscated from Nicaraguans or from that country's national guard.

The agreement, based on a Latin American initiative, ruled out any intervention in the civil war-torn country and contains few of the proposals made by the administration.

The agreement was reached in a closed-door meeting of the chief of delegations to the emergency OAS meeting on Nicaragua. Officials said it has enough support to be ratified at a plenary session.

The resolution to which the United States finally gave its approval was considerably weaker than what Washington sought. The administration wanted a ceasefire, an end to all arms shipments and — if needed — an inter-American peace-keeping force to back a new "Government of National Reconciliation."

The only U.S. proposal accepted as a whole by the intervention-wary Latin American delegations called for an international humanitarian and reconstruction effort in Nicaragua.

Including the 13 original sponsors of the resolution, the agreement had the support of 18 nations — one more than needed for approval. Two of the OAS' 27 members, Dominica and St. Lucia, were not participating in the three-day meeting.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said "there is no precedent for the broadly-based and far-reaching resolution adopted today."

"By this resolution, an overwhelming consensus of the nations of this hemisphere has reached agreement on several important propositions ... (including that) the conduct of the Somoza government is the fundamental cause of the tragic situation faced by the Nicaraguan people and is should be replaced without delay."

The original sponsors were Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Venezuela, Barbados, Costa Rica, Grenada, Honduras, Jamaica, Mexico, Panama and the Dominican Republic. Saturday afternoon they were joined by the United States, Brazil, Haiti, Argentina and Suriname.

The final resolution said the solution for the political turmoil and civil war in Nicaragua should be arrived on the basis of:

—Immediate and definitive replacement of the Somoza regime.

—Installation in Nicaraguan territory of a democratic government, including the principal groups which oppose the Somoza regime and which reflect the free will of the people of Nicaragua.

—Guarantees for the respect for human rights of all Nicaraguans.

Largest Settlements

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Two disabled textile workers have received the largest out-of-court brown-lung compensation settlements ever awarded, according to the Carolina Brown Lung Association.

The association said T.L. Newsome, 58, a Roanoke Rapids man who worked in a J.P. Stevens plant weave room for 24 years, received a $42,000 settlement last week. James O. Johnson, 52, a 22-year veteran of Burlington Industries' Erwin mill card room, received $50,000.

Both men have been diagnosed as being totally disabled from brown lung, or byssinosis, with less than half of their lung capacity remaining.

No Mood To Back Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans for Democratic Action, apparently in no mood to back President Carter for reelection, debated Saturday whether to commit themselves to Sen. Edward Kennedy or search for another candidate with sound liberal credentials.

Lobbying among the 500 delegates to the ADA's 32nd annual meeting was intense in preparation for Sunday's showdown vote on resolutions that will determine the ADA's course in the 1980 presidential contest.

Carter supporters spread the message that liberals risked losing the presidency to a conservative Republican if they reject Carter. But anti-Carter forces said the nation must have a liberal to vote for in 1980 and the president's policies are so conservative he is as bad as the GOP.

Truckers Tie Up Traffic

A horn-toting, slowing-moving convoy of 24 independent truckers tied up traffic in the Charleston area Saturday enroute to Columbia to recruit other drivers in the nationwide truckers protest and meet Gov. Dick Riley Monday.

The rigs, traveling at 20 mph along U.S. 17 South, left the Southern Truck Terminal in Charleston headed for nearby Johns Island before turning west up Interstate 26 to Columbia.

"We want the people in Columbia to know that we're coming up to support all their efforts and let them know that we've got Charleston behind them," said Fred Gilbraith, a spokesman for the truckers.

"We're going to do as much recruiting as possible along the way."

Bush Opposes SALT II

WASHINGTON (UPI) — George Bush, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said Saturday he opposes the new SALT II agreement because it gives Moscow a military advantage, cannot be verified and will not "hold the Soviets in check."

Bush made the comments in a speech prepared for the Young Republican National Convention in Orlando, Fla. His office issued a copy of the text in Washington.

Bush said that as former head of the CIA and from other jobs he has held, he knows it is possible to get a fair treaty in bargaining with the Russians.

Weapons Cache Seized

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Islamic revolutionary raiders seized a weapons cache belonging to the Fedayeen Khalq, Iran's largest Marxist-oriented guerrilla group, in the government's first attempt to disarm the left, reports said Saturday.

Three men and a woman were arrested in the raid in the eastern Tehran quarter of Majdideh, a central revolutionary committee official told UPI. He said the raid was conducted Friday on orders from the Tehran prosecutor's office.

Revolutionary officials said a variety of arms — most of them Soviet-made — ammunition, grenades, tear-gas shells and radio equipment were seized.

Headaches In Future Traffic

Greenville thoroughfare plan has been adopted by the N. C. Department of Transportation.

DOT will now begin a study designed to delineate the state and city responsibilities for streets and highways in the plan. Most important the city can begin use of the plan immediately.

We can't begin too soon. Greenville is rapidly outgrowing its street system despite all we have been able to do in recent years.

Improvements to Charles Street and E. Tenth have helped tremendously in the movement of local traffic. So has the widening of downtown streets, some of which is continuing, and the opening of Reade Circle.

Still we have bottlenecks which are going to become king sized headaches in the future.

Dickinson Avenue is far from adequate for its traffic flow and so is most of 14th Street. Evans Street, while it is being widened to 14th, becomes a rural paved road from the Southern Railroad southward. It is entirely inadequate for the traffic it now carries.

Even as a major medical center is under development on the west side of town, we still have no reasonable east-west route. If we began building tomorrow it would not be ready in time to handle the heavy traffic we can see ahead.

Even with the gasoline problems the country now faces, hardly anyone sees the demise of the automobile. . . and if the auto remains, adequate thoroughfares will be required.

We have much to do in our growing city, and we must get moving.

Cold-Blooded Murder Shocks World

The cold-blooded murder of ABC correspondent Bill Stewart in Nicaragua shocks and saddens all the civilized world.

Those who cover the wars of the world recognize the dangers, but to be shot while defenseless and lying on the ground, by a so-called soldier, is abhorrent.

The United States should demand action to see that the murderer is punished and the demands should be backed up by economic measures against Nicaragua, if necessary.

Out-Of-State Students

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Students from other states obviously like North Carolina's system of higher education.

Overall, more than 20 percent of the college and university students in this state come from elsewhere; a total of 37,584 students among the 174,396 currently enrolled.

The private institutions draw more out-of-state students percentage-wise than do the public ones, with a single exception. The North Carolina School of the Arts at Winston-Salem leads the field with far more than half the students enrolled there coming from other states.

The private colleges are averaging about 43.5 percent out-of-state enrollment, while the public colleges are averaging 12.1 percent.

Among public colleges other than the School of the Arts, Chapel Hill has been traditionally the most attractive drawing card, with about 22 percent of the student population coming from other places.

But that record is being strongly challenged by N.C. Agriculture and Technical University at Greensboro where a steadily increasing freshman enrollment from out of state is boosting the percentages. Last year out-of-state freshmen at A and T made up nearly 30 percent of the students, compared to 14.2 percent at Chapel Hill.

Good Rates

Tar Heels who borrow money at the bank or savings and loan where the interest rates are going up almost daily (now well into double digits) should envy the State of North Carolina.

The state recently sold $60 million in highway bonds at an interest rate of just slightly over five percent; well below even the average six percent being charged most other states and local governments nationally.

"North Carolina's top credit rating has saved the state the sum of $5.6 million (interest) on the issuance of these highway bonds, for a percentage saving of nearly 20 percent over the life of the bond issue," State Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles said.

Boyles credits the state's long record of strict attention to a balanced budget and an unblemished payment record for the record.

BILL

Investments

Interest is not only paid by the state, but a great deal is earned on investments of public money until the time it is needed. North Carolina currently has more than $1.2 billion invested in short or long term methods.

Most people get five or six percent on their savings accounts. The state, because of the big volumes of money involved, typically gets more than 10 percent.

Prayer Remains

While some continue the debate over prayer in public schools, North Carolina has won a court battle over prayer on the state road map. U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree, Jr. has held The Motorist's Prayer all right.

It reads: "Our heavenly Father, we ask this day a particular blessing as we take the wheel of our car. Grant us safe passage through all the perils of travel; shelter those who accompany us and protect us from harm by Thy mercy; steady our hands and quicken our eye that we may never take another's life; guide us to our destination safely, confident in the knowledge that Thy blessings go with us through darkness and light . . . sunshine and shower . . ."

Sunday Morning Notes

Sports Editor Woody Peele reports that he and his wife pulled behind a flashy little sports car stopped for a Stop sign.

Both cars were on an upgrade.

Woody waited . . . and waited for the car ahead to move on through the intersection, but nothing happened.

Suddenly the door on the driver's side opened. A scowling young lady got out and ran around to the passenger side.

The passenger door opened and a grinning young man got out, ran to the driver's side and got in.

The car then pulled past the Stop sign and onto a level street beyond the intersection, where it again stopped.

The man got out of the drivers seat and returned to the passenger side. The girl returned to the driver's seat and the car whizzed off.

It was obviously, Woody says, a matter of a vehicle with a straight transmission which the girl driver was not accustomed to.

A prospective bride was discussing honeymoon plans recently.

"Maybe, I'll go to Las Vegas," she mused.

"Well, marriage is a gamble," commented a world worn eavesdropper.

As some readers may know, fantastic new word processing computerized equipment is being developed for newspaper production.

Some of this equipment has been installed at "The Daily Reflector" and still further refinements are planned, including the writing of stories on video tubes by the reporters for direct transmission to the typesetting equipment.

Recently a company representative demonstrated such a system for our staff members and everyone marveled at what the system could do.

The system answered most of the problems of getting news stories into type with the least amount of trouble.

When the salesman had completed his demonstration, one impressed staff member asked, "Will it go and get your morning coffee?" Well, no, but it will sing you to sleep at night.

Using as their theme, "Support June Rose for State Commander of the American Legion," a large number of Legionnaires of the Greenville and Farmville posts of the Pitt County division of the American Legion began invading Raleigh today for the twenty-first annual state Legion convention starting tomorrow and lasting through Tuesday.

14 North Carolina Legion posts have already instructed their delegates to support Bose, who is assured of support from other posts in the east and west.

Posts instructing support of their delegations were Frankinton, Louisburg, New Bern, Swansboro, Oxford, Henderson, Warrenton, Hyde County, Manteo, Washington, Tarboro, Plymouth, Greenville and Mount Olive.

Commenting on infantile paralysis which is causing so much concern in South Carolina, Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt County health officer, today declared that not a single case has been reported in Pitt County this year.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Quick Trigger Of Begin

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When Israel's Prime Minister Menahem Begin on June 11 lashed out against national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, he was not only reaching a new low in a generation of U.S.-Israeli relations but was showing why the State Department's hope for a tough line toward Israel may be doomed.

The prime minister's wrath was incurred by Brzezinski's statement over CBS's "Face the Nation" a day earlier praising Israeli activists trying to reverse Begin's effort establishing a new settlement on the West Bank. The prime minister responded with a handwritten statement, in both Hebrew and English, distributed to the press. Without naming Brzezinski, he accused President Carter's right-hand foreign policy man of anti-Begin "incitement" and derided "the evil path of the enemies of our people."

That enraged the State Department in Washington. "Begin is saying that anybody who is against settlements is anti-Semitic," one high official said. Yet, Begin's quick trigger as a weakened Carter hears his re-election showdown may doom Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's efforts to save this nation's Arab alliances through a tougher line with Israel. Indeed, Vance seems eclipsed by the vastly more politically attuned Mideast troubleshooter, Robert Strauss.

Vance prefers a get-tough U.S. policy. His argument: by saying nothing, the U.S. is fast losing control over Israeli political actions in the Mideast after Camp David. Yet, to advance the "peace process" beyond the separate Egyptian-Israeli treaty, Carter must convince America's Arab friends — Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Kuwait — that the U.S., not Israel, is in control of events.

Vance has considered several ways to persuade Begin that the U.S. will not let Israel dictate ridiculously narrow limits on promised autonomy for 1.3 million West Bank and Gaza Arabs. One would be to reduce Israel's annual aid from the U.S. for each new settlement. Another calls for a Carter speech describing why pressure on Israel is essential to keep the U.S. from losing the oil ballgame.

Political aides in the White House have other interests. Just home from the Vienna summit, they confront all those dangerously low Carter numbers in the 1980 presidential polls. To take on Israel publicly would further alienate the chilly Jewish vote.

So, the White House men argue that the newly installed bassador Strauss should be given some time. The last thing wanted by Strauss, a careful mediator, is sudden U.S. pressure on Begin and his hard-line colleague, agriculture minister Ariel Sharon.

The counsel for delay seems likely to win the debate. But delay is being used by Israel to strengthen its political muscle in the U.S. — at Jimmy Carter's expense.

Months ago, when Carter accepted the long-held U.S. legal edict that Jewish settlements were "illegal" and (in the president's words) "an obstacle to peace," leaders in the American-Jewish community agreed with him. Top U.S. officials dealing with the Mideast believe Begin is subtly changing that opinion, swinging in-

TO WITHSTAND GOD?

"Who was I, that I could withstand God?"

This was the query St. Peter addressed to his colleagues when they brought him before the Council to explain why he had disregarded certain ritualistic practices in his association with Cornelius, the centurion. "I did it," replied Peter, "because I had been directed by heavenly vision to visit this man, and when I did so I found that he and his Gentile friends gave every appearance of being in the good graces of God. Therefore I disregarded the lesser matter of ritual that I might accomplish the greater matter of obeying God and fulfilling His purpose."

In religious matters we often find it hard to get first things first and keep them there. We sometimes hold desperately to our creeds and rituals, forgetting that they are man-made things attempting to explain or symbolize the reality of God and His purpose for mankind. Sometimes a clearer vision of that reality comes through to us, as it did to Peter, and we should be prepared to act on it.

Numbers 'Measure' Recession

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —

Recession, officially, is measured by the numbers. When output of goods and services declines for two successive quarters, say the keepers of the numbers, we have a recession.

Even before we tumble into the economic pits we use the numbers to guide us. Like a pilot flying on instruments, we seek guidance from the dials of production, jobs, sales, credit and like.

This is fine for economists, and obviously necessary too, but for the mass of people a recession has come to mean not so much a numerical measurement as a mood, an attitude, a perception of times.

Ask almost anyone, if the past four years have been been economically good years or poor. They likely will choose the latter. And yet, the economy has been expanding rather than receding.

"So what," they are likely to say, "my buying power hasn't expanded." And, were it their style to do so, they could illustrate their case with the same numbers used to show that times are good.

They could show that in the 12 months through March, straight-time wages rose 7.8 percent, but prices jumped 10.2 percent, resulting in a net loss of buying power. "Isn't that recession?" they ask.

They know that passbook savings earn less than 6 percent interest, and U.S. Savings Bonds no more than 6.5 percent if held a minimum of five years, while the inflation rate is 13.9 percent. A net loss, they say.

They know that inflation has shrunk their life insurance values, that they can't afford college for the kids, that the house they aspired to is beyond their reach, and that they've had to retrench.

The mood of personal recession is measured by consumer polls. During the past four years, officially one of the longest continuous economic expansions in our history, consumer moods soured.

Which attitude is real: The official one, that the economy has been strong and expanding, or the mood, based mainly on personal experience, that the economy has been getting sicker all the time?

Each has its use, but they cannot be interchanged. But inevitably they are. The official statistics, valuable to professionals, are too often offered to the public as evidence of their misperceptions.

If anything, that use can only make ordinary individuals more cynical. Who knows the condition of family finances better than the head of a family? Who knows better how that family interprets its condition?

And so we continue the dichotomy. Officially, the expansion continues — in that the nation's overall output of goods and services continues to grow.

But ask the next person you meet to assess his personal finances and he will tell you bluntly and simply, and quite accurately too, that the padding in his wallet has been shrinking for many months.

To the editor:

Since hearing so much concerning the emergency room of the hospital, I feel obligated to write this since I had to use this service on Monday afternoon, May 30. When entering the emergency room, naturally, you are hurting and scared.

I understood the reason I had to wait so long was that all nurses on duty were having supper — too bad all have to be served at one time and keep the injured waiting.

I was disappointed at the nurses in the x-ray room who could not be pleasant. There was no excuse for the nurse's attitude in Pitt Memorial Hospital X-Ray Room.

To the editor:

I am writing this letter to put my observations "on record" and in the hope that they may stimulate a more thoughtful approach to surface water management in Greenville.

The nearly five inches of rainfall which hit Greenville Monday, June 4, produced the most severe flooding I have seen along Green Mill Run in the 13 years I have lived here.

Flooding of Green Mill Run downstream of 10th St. resulted in large measure from the already existing high stage of the Tar River. At other points in the city unnecessary flooding and erosion occurred because of inappropriate construction and poor water management practices.

Shortly after 4 p. m. on that Monday, while wreckers were removing submerged vehicles from the student parking lot below college hill, I measured the difference in water level between the upstream and downstream sides of the College Hill Drive bridge across Green Mill Run. Assuming the bridge to be level, this difference was 24.5 inches. Thus, this bridge functions as a partial dam and causes water to accumulate upstream. This bridge and others within the city are underdesigned for the often torrential downpours of our climate. (Recall how rapidly the water went down during Monday night.)

After each flood, citizens call upon the city to straighten and deepen existing channels in the mistaken belief that this modification will lessen the effects of the next heavy rainfall.

Several years ago the city used a dragline to straighten the channel of Reedy Branch just east of Eastern School. Surface clay silts were removed and soon floodwaters cut into the soft white sand underneath. The man-made channel is widening and deepening on its own and residents of E. Wright Road are losing their back yards. Before you demand that the city "ditch" out some stream, have a look at Reedy Branch (Canyon) from Jaycee Park and talk to residents of the 2000 E. block of East Wright Road.

To the editor:

Heading south on Charles toward 264, it is legal to turn "right on red." I go that way often, yet I see many drivers sitting there, burning up their gasoline and mine. Possibly a separate "yield" turn lane is needed there. Frequently it seems to be college students creating this nuisance.

North Carolina did mess up this nice feature of "turn right on red" for a while. Someone over in Raleigh misinterpreted this law and had "no turn on red" signs stuck up everywhere.

We have traveled considerably in the southeast and western states and hardly ever have seen any "no turn on red" signs.

Motorists, when you see these people sitting at these places, use your horn.

To the editor:

Your paper could do a real service to the citizens and taxpayers of Greenville and Pitt County by conducting a thorough investigation of the Aycock Junior High situation. It seems that every time I read about the school board asking for more money, a good chunk of it is going to fix something else at Aycock! A few years ago the roof was replaced. Now the heating and ventilating system needs extensive repairs. How can all these expensive repairs be needed to a school that doesn't look very old? I'd like to see a thorough investigative reporting job by "The Daily Reflector" on all the things wrong with Aycock and how much it has cost the public. The report should include the names of contractors and the public officials involved. Before I voluntarily ante up more tax money for schools, I'd like to see the Aycock story explained.

fluent Jewish leaders here around to the anti-Carter position.

A case in point is the highly regarded, very moderate Theodore R. Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations. Mann last week emerged from two long closed-door sessions with Begin in Jerusalem indicating a change of heart. Carter, he said, would sooner or later shift his position about the "illegality" of settlements and embrace them.

Mann was joined by another Jewish leader with impeccable credentials: Howard M. Squadron, president of the American Jewish Congress. He blamed the Carter administration for "creating an unnecessary cause of friction between the U.S. and Israel" by insisting that, under international law, settlements are illegal.

This suggests the longer Carter and Vance postpone a get-tough policy with Israel, the harder it will be to carry that policy with the American-Jewish community and its friends and allies in Congress. That helps explain the Vance line that a switch in U.S. policy is needed now.

Much objective evidence is being used by the hard-line advocates, including heightened Israeli actions in southern Lebanon. Secret diplomatic reports now claim that Israel has taken effective control of parts of southern Lebanon by shrewd use of its Lebanese-Christian clients.

As I Recall It

Low Point In N.C.: Smith-Graham Campaign

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired last year after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

The banner overhead proclaimed "Save Our South" and the band played Dixie as Raleigh lawyer Willis Smith campaigned in 1950 for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate. Smith pictured his opponent, Sen. Frank Porter Graham, as a socialist who had espoused subversive organizations and as a traitor to Southern traditions in race relations.

Many of us who recall the Smith-Graham campaign regard it as a low point in North Carolina political history. It was featured by appeals to passion and prejudice that left husband and wife, father and son, brother and son divided on the issues.

It was waged in a climate of fear—fear of communistic subversion aroused by U.S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy's charges that many government employees in Washington were communists. Whites were fearful as a result of black demands for equal rights.

Caught in the eye of this political hurricane was the idealistic Graham, former president of the University of North Carolina who had been appointed to the Senate by Scott the year before.

Graham, a gentle advocate of the Golden Rule and the brotherhood of man, campaigned with the backing of thousands of former UNC students and the support of friends and neighbors such as state Rep. John W. Umstead of Chapel Hill who described him as "the best all around man who has ever run for public office in North Carolina."

Backers of Smith pointed to his record as a successful corporation attorney, speaker of the state House of Representatives and president of the American Bar Association.

Graham was put on the defensive early in the campaign. Opponents pointed to his service on President Truman's Civil Rights Commission. Smith blasted what he termed Truman socialism and said Graham had pledged his support of Truman's Fair Deal "lock, stock, and barrel." In a speech at Wilmington, Smith labeled Graham a "left wing senator" who "has joined those who would socialize America."

In reply, Graham proclaimed his opposition to federal compulsion in achieving fair employment and achieving school integration. He said he believed the way to solve problems of racial discrimination was through education and religion.

Graham said he opposed socialized medicine and the Brannan plan proposed by the Truman administration to deal with the farm problem. To disprove talk that he had appointed a black boy to West Point, Graham was accompanied in his campaign travels by the white boy who did win the West Point appointment.

Scott's part in the campaign was assailed by the Smith forces who accused the governor of trying to pressure state employees to support Graham. A newspaper columnist wrote that John Marshall, Scott's private secretary had canvassed liquor distillers in an effort to raise money for the Graham campaign.

Dog Food Taste Cannot Come Under FTC Rule

Governmental strides in the area of consumer protection have been tremendous in recent years, but the one thing the Federal Trade Commission will never be able to recognize effectively is the dog food commercial.

Now, I'm not in any way criticizing the FTC. It has undoubtedly been enforcing the Truth in Advertising regulation. It made Carters drop the "Little Liver" from its pills. It made Listerine officials choke on their claim that their product prevented colds. It wants Joe Namath to prove he wears pantyhose and Bruce Jenner to swear that he ate Wheaties during his formative years.

And according to PBS's "Consumer Survival Kit," the FTC has insisted that the companies making "high fiber" bread specify the source of the fiber. It seems that those of us who eat this bread could get the same nutritional benefit from licking the floors in the local lumber mill.

Moreover, I expect that the FTC will continue to be active in the future. Pretty soon food companies will be asked to prove that husbands really like stuffing better than potatoes.

Not only that, these companies will be asked to demonstrate that a television star backed up by a camera crew can get a candid response to a taste test involving vinegar and lemonade even if the vinegar is labeled, "New, Improved."

In fact, it may not be too long before the FTC demands proof that Keebler cookies are baked by elves and that Florence Henderson can really smile after a slumber party.

But what FTC official in his right mind is going to question the claims of a dog food manufacturer? If the manufacturer says that the flavor has been improved, is the official going to taste it?

What I want to know is who tastes it in the first place? I can't imagine that all those white-frosted scientists who dream these concoctions up are tasting as they go along. And the dogs certainly can't confirm or deny that there's been any improvement.

My own theory is that they either hire winos who have lost their sense of taste anyway, or else they offer to shave a couple of months off the sentences of any prisoners who are willing to volunteer.

The irony of it all is that the dogs don't care. Let's face it. Any dog who knocks over a trashcan so that he can drag off a hunk of left-over lasagne covered with coffee grounds is just not a picky eater.

So the manufacturers are not appealing to dogs; they're appealing to the troubled consciences of dog owners.

And they've got us beat. The newest advertising trend, "Good taste guaranteed or your money back," puts the entire burden of proof on the consumer. It would take a person with the zeal of Ralph Nader to challenge that commercial.

What average consumer is going to taste the stuff any more than an FTC official is going to? And if someone does get up the nerve to taste it, will he have the nerve to admit it publicly?

And if he admits it, will he take it to court and face the life-long vendetta of 12 jurors and a judge who will more than likely have to taste it too?

But luckily, with the present inflation rate even the dog food manufacturers can only go so far. If they ever claim that it tastes just like a steak, they're going to have to back it up.

Facing South Sustained By Memory Of The Summer Nights

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. —

For ten years after our house was built on what was once a farm outside Henderson, N.C., we lived beyond the jurisdiction of the City Council. And then we woke up one morning, in the early 1960's, to find that the city limits had overtaken us in our sleep.

"At least we'll have police and fire protection," I offered, age 10.

We had no need of the police, but every now and then, particularly when the weather was dry, we ran the risk of being burned out of our house. The railroad that ran through the woods behind us was in bad repair, and the lumber and freight trains sometimes hit gaps in the rails that sent sparks into the brush along the tracks, setting the woods afire. It made life interesting. I remember my father standing in our driveway with a garden hose, wetting things down, a stoic expression on his face, while behind him the woods churned with smoke and flame. The county fire trucks arrived just in the nick of time, like the cavalry; but it gave us a certain feeling for life's impermanence.

I slept with my window open, and often, at some sleepy hour, I would be awakened by the baying of the hounds far off in the woods. It was a coon hunt, or maybe they were after

"When the train tries to burn us out, the city fire trucks will save us," I pointed out, a promise that produced brave smiles around the breakfast table. But each, in his heart, knew that progress had us in its impersonal grip and housing developments would follow.

But we enjoyed the best of it. The best.

The children had hurried through supper to have one last game under the oaks, where fireflies signaled that the daylight world of adults and rules and lessons was at an end. A new world was unfolding. Ghosts and all manner of unseen things that slept by day were stretching themselves in the shadows, in preparation for an all-night prowling. And when the moon rose, sometimes we could see the eerie light of their eyes at the edge of the woods.

This night-time scene was set to the timeless music of crickets, cicadas, tree frogs and whippoorwills, and if a wind came up, it made a sound in the oaks not unlike the sea. Perhaps heat lightning would put on a silent fireworks show. Or maybe the sky would be so clear that the bright band of the Milky Way seemed to rest like a crown in the tops of the trees. Always there was the smell of mowed grass that seemed to inject itself directly into the blood. Winter was a war we had fought long ago, scarcely remembered.

I slept with my window open, and often, at some sleepy hour, I would be awakened by the baying of the hounds far off in the woods. It was a coon hunt, or maybe they were after possum; whatever the game, this new music was always a welcomed variation in the night-time concert. The household was asleep, and it was as though the night had conjured up a special melody just for my benefit.

Sometimes I would get out of bed, kneel at the window, my elbows on the sill, and listen. You could tell the progress of the hunt by the way the dogs sang. When the quarry was "treed," the baying of the hounds reached a level of excitement that in opera is usually reserved for the death of kings.

In my mind I was right behind the dogs, dashing madly through the woods, the tree limbs lashing at my head. Over the hills, through pines and brambles, down gullies, across slippery creeks, in moonlight and in shadow, I ran with the hounds.

Sometimes dawn found me with my head on the window sill. And feeling a little foolish, I crawled back into bed to continue my dreams until summoned for the daily rituals.

But the memory of a summer's night was a potent talisman that sustained me then, as it does now, through the drudgery of daily obligations, rules, and adult realities — in a word, progress.

Unmistakable Slosh Of Mixing A Whitewash

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — After so many years in the newspaper business, a pundit learns to detect sounds that might otherwise go unheard — the rumble of momentum as it gathers, the shrill cry of crisis as it mounts. These days, unless my ears deceive me, we are hearing in the field of education the unmistakable slosh-slosh-slosh of whitewash being mixed.

An effort is underway, sponsored by the National Education Association and the International Reading Association, to create a prestigious Commission on Reading Trends in the United States. The prestigious commission will have a prestigious advisory board. Plans call for a small but scrvy staff, headed by an expert in the breadbuttering art, and the staff will do all the work. Once created, the prestigious commission will be heard from only rarely, and the prestigious board will be heard from not at all. This, as everyone knows, is How to Get Things Done.

The problem at hand is a critical problem for the educational establishment. This establishment embraces most teachers, principals and superintendents; it includes the manufacturers of textbooks and teaching devices; it takes in the teacher colleges. The establishment is made up of all the wonderful folks who gave our children the glories of new math and the marvels of Dick and Jane and their jumping munt named Spot.

The charge against the establishment is that its intellectual and political leaders have failed miserably in the vital task committed to them: They have failed to teach great numbers of our children those fundamental skills that are required for getting ahead in today's society.

Evidence to support this charge comes from many quarters — from the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), the California Achievement Tests (CAT), the Metropolitan Achievement Tests (MAT), and dozens of others. But whether the empirical data emerge from SAT, CAT, MAT or the Iowa Tests of Basic Skills, the figures add up to a damning indictment of the establishment's blunders.

Yes, the data conflict. The figures are fairly subject to varying statistical interpretation. But after every allowance has been made for differences in evaluation, a melancholy conclusion remains. Millions of our high-school graduates cannot comprehend the instructions on a box of macaroni; they cannot make change from a $20 bill. Because of this situation, hundreds of school boards are demanding a return to basics; at least 36 states have taken some action to require that graduates demonstrate minimal competency in order to earn a diploma.

All this represents a grave threat to the establishment; it has a heavy intellectual investment in the look-and-guess method of teaching reading, and it has an enormous financial investment in readers, audio-visual gadgets and various gimmicks.

How to protect this investment? One approach stands out: Let us create a prestigious study commission, financed by a prestigious foundation, window-dressed with the mannin names of such Divine Ones as Cesar Chavez, Alex Haley, Barbara Jordan and George McGovern — and, behold! Given a hand-picked staff, a splendid final report can be speedily put together.

Thus a skeptical prophecy cannot be avoided.

The Commission of Reading Trends in the United States will produce a report, early in 1981, replete with tables, graphs, pie charts and chi-squares; and the report will reassure us (a) that everything in education is really peachy keen, and (b) that if everything isn't altogether peachy keen, it is not the establishment's fault.

That is to say, the confusing, conflicting and misleading data will be magically "clarified." The clarified figures will show that reading skills have not declined but have in fact improved. The commission, thanks to its able and dedicated staff, will conclude that the declining scores on SAT, CAT and MAT have nothing to do with schools, principals, superintendents or textbooks, but are instead a reflection of socioeconomic factors that previously had been accorded insufficient weight.

In applying whitewash, as Tom Sawyer understood, staff is everything. A great executive director for this particular project would be Paul Copperman, author of the devastating critique, "The Literacy Hoax." Anybody want to bet a thousand bucks he won't wind up with the job?

Breeding Bonus

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit Zoo officials have discovered an unexpected bonus from an April ice storm that knocked power out for 48 hours at the reptile exhibit.

Kathy Latinen, assistant curator for reptiles, said the quick drop in temperatures after the electricity failed triggered the breeding instincts among several species, including the reticulated python, a native of Southeast Asia, and the California king snake.

"We expected some medical problems but we got quite a surprise instead," she said.

A pair of spotted turtles also mated, she said. None of them had ever bred before.

"The sudden drop stimulated them and they took a sudden interest in each other," said Mrs. Latinen after the king snake laid 10 eggs.

The turtle produced a single egg and the python showed signs of egg production.

Miss Latinen said, however, the zoo did not plan to duplicate the chilly treatment to try to spur the sex lives of other reptiles.

series of haphazardly fenced off beaches that hold something for everyone.

There are some elegant cabana clubs for Rome's patricians and politicians, a number of fine seafood restaurants fronting on the sea, family picnic groves among the scrubby pine covered dunes now scarlet with wind-blown poppies and a number of campsites for colonies of campers and caravanners who come from all over Europe.

Any Continental resort can offer pretty much the same for its classes and masses.

But only Ostia shakes out its sands to accommodate in separate coves the most extraordinary tides of humanity.

There is, almost in order, a nuns' beach, a tots' beach, a carabinieri beach for the police and their families, a topless beach, a nudie beach, a beach for gays and a beach for prostitutes. Democratically but aloofly sandwiched between the gays and the prostitutes, there is also a private beach for the president of the republic, an octogenarian who seldom uses it.

"Ostia's decadence began in Constantine's time," says the old Blue Guide to Rome, which is a long time for any resort to be going down hill.

Discounting the toga-less tribes who used to splash about in the Tyrrhenian Sea back in Pliny the Elder's day, Rome's seaside scene wended its way onto the wild side only in the last few days.

This latter day decadence dates from the time the Italian bikini began to approximate in skiminess its rival in the Western Hemisphere, the Brazilian string bikini, known generically in both countries as the "tanga," or the thong.

On the pasta-packed pottines of the Roman sea nymphs the tanga meets the eye as a pleasing packaged bit of folk craft, as if someone had been hanging bocci balls in macrame. From the rear, two mandolins seem to be playing a one-string recession.

The monokini, which jiggles its way down the coast from the French Riviera, soon made short shrift of traditional Italian modesty in dress, although total nudity as practiced in the outer reaches of Ostia's "spiaggia libera" — the free beach — is still rare.

For 400 lire (about 50 cents), the price of a ticket on the Metropolitana, Rome's subway, the visiting voyeur can easily crash the fences of all Ostia's way out watering holes by the simple expedient of walking barefoot along the shore.

All except one, that is. The president's beach at Castel Porziano is guarded by security people with submachine guns.

The tomb of President Grant and his wife is located on the eastern bank of the Hudson River near 125th Street in New York City. It is modeled after Napoleon's tomb in Paris.

Mondale In Charge

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

When President Carter flew to Tokyo Saturday, he left Vice President Walter Mondale in charge of the nation's anger-inspiring fuel shortage and empowered him to "take whatever actions may be necessary."

The president's decision to put Mondale temporarily in charge of government energy efforts — and the fact he announced it personally — reflected White House concerns about Carter leaving the country while gasoline lines are growing.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger accompanied Carter to Tokyo for the seven-nation economic summit that begins Thursday. Energy will be the major subject on the two-day agenda for the talks.

"While I work with our allies on our energy problems, I have asked Vice President Mondale to monitor developments here at home, to keep me fully informed of what is happening, and to take whatever actions may be necessary," Carter said.

"This is not just an American challenge," he said. "The long gas lines ... the mounting frustration over fuel supplies we see at home are symptoms of a global energy shortage."

"All of us must make some painful adjustments in our daily lives," the president said.

For many states, the first weekend of summer was chaotic because of the lack of gasoline supplies. Officials in the Northeast were telling motorists to stay off the road.

Gas prices shot up to as much as $1.50 a gallon in the New York metropolitan area and some drivers waited in lines three to four hours, only to find none available.

Lumbees Protest Appointment

PEMBROKE, N.C. (AP) — About 200 Lumbee Indians heard appeals for unity and hard work Saturday night at a rally held to protest the appointment of a white as chancellor of Pembroke State University.

"Don't forget our cause," said Ruth Revels, wife of PSU trustee Lonnie Revels. "Our battle won't be won overnight, so we're begging for a commitment."

Carnell Locklear, emcee for the rally staged at the Pembroke High School football stadium, said, "We've got to have faith in ourselves and faith in God. Once we say we can't do something, we have lost."

The Lumbees were protesting the appointment last month of Dr. Paul Givens as PSU chancellor. Givens was chosen by Dr. William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system. Givens will replace Chancellor English Jones, a Lumbee, who will retire at the end of this month.

Programs circulated at the rally stated, "We don't want you, Dr. Givens. Stay away."

Kenneth Maynor, executive director of the Lumbee Regional Development Association, said that he and a number of Indians were told by Friday that all four final candidates for the post were qualified. Two of the final candidates — Dr. James Chavis and Dr. Joseph Oxendine, are Lumbees.

"If all four were qualified, and two were minorities, you'd think he'd lean that way," Revels told those attending the rally, "It doesn't take many of us to get the job done."

Bumper Peach Crop

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers are harvesting a bumper peach crop.

The N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said that harvest has been under way about two weeks on a crop which is expected to total about 48 million pounds. This would be up 7 percent from 1978 and 37 percent greater than 1977.

So far, the peach harvest has not been affected seriously by the strike of independent truckers that has resulted in severe losses to growers of bell pepper, Irish potatoes and other vegetables.

Apparently, the peach crop benefited from the unseasonably cool and rainy weather North Carolina has experienced this year.

But the weather has not been as kind to some other crops.

Driver Killed

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A Trailways bus driver was stabbed to death Saturday on Interstate 95 in Richmond, State Police said.

Trooper L.M. Lamb said the alleged assailant then stepped from the north-bound bus and was struck and killed by a hit-and-run car.

Police are withholding the names of both victims pending notification of relatives.

Nominated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has nominated Hans Michael Mark, a German-American physicist, as secretary of the Air Force.

Mark, who became a U.S. citizen in 1945, has a PhD. in physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

that Graham did not mean it when he said he opposed a compulsory FEPC. They ran newspaper ads to reprint the article of a black columnist who wrote that "Everybody knows that Frank Graham is in favor of FEPC; but he had to back down before the terrible onslaught of his enemies."

Other Smith ads pointed to Graham's assertion that, "I have never been ... a member or supporter of any organization known or suspected by me of being controlled by the communists or socialists." One ad said the House Un-American Activities Committee had listed Graham as having been associated with 18 communist front organizations.

Another ad said Graham had admitted being active in the Southern Conference for Human Welfare which was "branded as a communist front by the House Un-American Activities Committee in 1944 and again in 1947."

While campaigning in Morganton, Smith said, "I do not believe in crackpot ideas, and when I find I cannot uphold the traditions of the South and represent the wishes of the people of North Carolina I will resign."

In a statewide radio speech, Graham said, "Those who have known me through the years know that my stands in this campaign are the same stands for human freedom I have fought for all the years of my life."

In a speech to a campaign rally at Greenville, Smith noted that Scott had opposed him as a corporation lawyer, but Smith added, "I am the same corporation lawyer he (Scott) asked to run for governor two years ago."

Although Graham led a field of four in the first primary by better than 50,000 votes and came within 11,000 votes of a clear majority that would have given him the nomination, Smith reversed things in the runoff and won the nomination by more than 20,000 votes.

The Choice: Stay Home Or Gamble On Gas

By The Associated Press
Odd-even gasoline rationing programs failed to dent long lines at service stations, so millions of Americans faced a choice this weekend — stay home or gamble on fuel supplies.

"If you don't have gas, don't go looking for it," was the advice of Jerry Ferrara, head of the New Jersey Gas Retailers Association.

But many chose to look — often without success. Lines stretched as long as 2½ miles in the New York metropolitan area, and a survey showed the average line was 64 cars long.

To make matters worse, the survey of 154 stations by City Consumer Affairs Commissioner Bruce Ratner showed about 75 percent were already closed Friday.

Nationwide, the American Automobile Association had forecast that only 42 percent of the stations would be open today, and only 31 percent on Sunday.

The AAA predicted only 21 percent of the gasoline stations in New England would open on Sunday — with a mere 12 percent expected to be operating in Massachusetts.

Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso and Minnesota Gov. Al Quie said drivers might be better off at home. The Automobile Club of New York, for the first time in its history, advised people to stay off the road.

Meanwhile, National Guard troops were activated in Minnesota to guard fuel shipments from attacks during a shutdown by independent truckers. Guardsmen already were moving gasoline in Florida.

Sentiment appeared to be growing for a nationwide station shutdown in the next two weeks.

The National Congress of Petroleum Retailers, which represents the nation's 60,000 service station owners, has called for the shutdown July 1 unless Washington allows the financially pressed dealers to increase their profits.

There was sentiment in other states, like West Virginia, for pushing up the date to June 28. The Minnesota Service Station Association urged members to pump all their gasoline and close up. Leaders said that could leave the state dry in two days.

The U.S. Energy Department moved Friday to head off the threatened shutdown, saying it was soliciting comment on proposals to increase dealers' profits. It said it would make a decision after July 26.

Three additional counties in Florida went on either voluntary or mandatory gasoline rationing, bringing the total in the state to eight.

Odd-even rationing was begun this week in a portion of New York and New Jersey, Connecticut, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, and was slated to go into effect Monday in Texas.

Rhode Island began an odd-even sales system Friday for four towns along its border with Connecticut. The towns' gas stations were swamped with people trying to beat the Connecticut system.

In Connecticut, the fuel crunch forced a construction company to lay off 45 employees for lack of gasoline to run its equipment. The mayors of Danbury and New Britain proposed a four-day week for city employees to cut gasoline consumption.

Wants Reactor Opening Postponed

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The reopening of the undamaged reactor at Three Mile Island should be postponed until "a number of very serious questions" have been answered, Gov. Dick Thornburgh says.

Thornburgh said in a letter to Chairman Joseph Hendrie of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that he was strongly opposed to any plans to reactivate Unit 1 until he is satisfied that:

—Official investigations into the accident are completed and their findings fully disclosed.

—Design flaws that may have contributed to the accident are fully corrected in Unit 1.

—Allegations of human errors have been resolved and training for operating and management personnel has been upgraded.

—Experts decide whether it is wise to start up Unit 1 while the crippled Unit 2, which sits right beside it, contains lethal levels of radioactivity.

—The psychological health of central Pennsylvania residents won't be adversely affected.

Strikes Oil In Great Salt Lake

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — An offshore test well in the northern arm of the Great Salt Lake struck what could be a major new oil field Friday, and an Amoco Production Co. spokesman says early tests show the well could produce up to 1,500 barrels a day.

Richard Murphy said the well hit oil at about 2,300 feet beneath the shallow lake bed. He said extensive tests would be needed to determine whether the discovery can be turned into a profitable commercial field.

Must Turn To Federal Judiciary

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Condemned murderer Robert A. Sullivan apparently has exhausted his attempts to find a state court to block his scheduled Wednesday execution and now must turn to the federal judiciary.

The Florida Supreme Court, in a split decision late Friday, turned down Sullivan's request for a stay of execution. The court said Sullivan's appeal raised no substantial questions of law or fact.

The court also gave prosecutors until Monday to respond to a petition for a stay filed by attorneys for convicted murderer Charles William Proffitt, who also is scheduled to die Wednesday.

Hijacker Sentenced To 20 Years

CHICAGO (AP) — Nikola Kavaja, the airline hijacker who declared himself a soldier in the cause of Serbian independence, has been sentenced to 20 years in prison on bombing charges.

A federal judge who said the hijacker "would kill people he considers his enemy" imposed the sentence Friday.

Kavaja, 45, and five comrades appeared before U.S. District Judge Hubert L. Will for sentencing in the 1975 bombing of the suburban home of the Yugoslav consul and a plot to bomb two receptions commemorating the beginning of the regime of Yugoslavia's communist premier, Josip Broz Tito.

Kavaja could have been sentenced to a maximum of 35 years and fined as much as $40,000. He drew the longest sentence of the six.

8.873 % Wachovia Six-Month Savings Certificates. They could be your safest, short-term hedge against inflation.

If you have $10,000 or more to invest and you're concerned about getting the highest return on your savings dollar, here's a tip.

Look into Wachovia Six-Month Money Market Savings Certificates.

Based on the average discount rate of the most recent Six-Month U. S. Treasury Bills*, they consistently offer some of the highest yields available. Both the interest rate and your deposit are guaranteed by Wachovia with the additional protection of F.D.I.C. insurance on deposits up to $40,000. And since the term is only six months, a very good case could be made for them as one of the safest, short-term inflation hedges available.

Want to know more? Have a talk with any Wachovia Personal Banker. But act now. The rate quoted above is effective only through June 27, 1979.

*Effective yield on Treasury Bills is higher than the discount rate. Payable at maturity only. $10,000 minimum to open.

Ask your Personal Banker about Wachovia Six-Month Savings Certificates.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of time deposits and prohibit the compounding of interest during the term of deposit.

Confusion Over PTL Funds

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The PTL Television Network has given the Assemblies of God Church $350,000 to launch a television ministry in Asia. But the man responsible for the receipt of the funds says he has not seen the money.

The donation, made to "Asia For Christ," came more than one year after PTL raised the same amount of money for a proposed Asian ministry, and then spent the money for other purposes.

The check, dated May 17, was mailed to the project during a Federal Communications Commission investigation to find out if PTL solicited money on television for a specific project and then improperly used the money for another purpose. In January, the Charlotte Observer reported that PTL had raised more than $281,000 for Korean evangelist Yonggi Cho to begin an Asian television ministry. That money was eventually placed in the PTL general fund and spent for other purposes.

While no formal announcement about the most recent donation was made, PTL President Jim Bakker told 700,000 supporters in a July newsletter that the money was sent to Cho.

Cho disagrees, saying he hasn't received any money. "I have washed my hands. I do not know anything,"

Cho says. He says he has not received any money. "I have washed my hands. I do not know anything,"

Seeks Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO says it will ask the Supreme Court to rule the president cannot deny government contracts to companies that flout his voluntary wage-price guidelines.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said he would seek review of Friday's U.S. appeals court ruling that President Carter can enforce his anti-inflation program with the threat of contract denials.

"We would hope that the government, in view of the importance of the issues, would cooperate in seeking an expedited review by the Supreme Court," Meany said.

Greenville 45th Class Reunion Held

The Greenville High School Class of 1933-34 held its 45th class reunion recently at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. Class members and guests were greeted by Mrs. Julia Gaylord Painter and Margaret Register. Name tags with pins, "Class 1933-34," were presented to each class member and guests. Corsages and boutonnieres, a gift from Mary Sutton Phillips, were pinned on those in attendance.

Miss Register served as mistress of ceremonies. The invocation was presented by Bishop James P. Dees.

Van C. Fleming Jr. gave the history of the class, and offered an account of the award winners on graduation night. The Keech Cup was presented to Ben Herring for the best rating in general school activities, with the Dr. Joseph Dixon cup presented to Tom Wilson for the best overall performance in athletics. Miss Tolle Williams and Ben Herring were presented $5 awards from the Woman's Club and the Pitt County Post of the American Legion, respectively. The awards were made on the basis of the scholastic ranking over a four-year period.

John G. Clark Jr. was in charge of the program, and each class member was recognized and gave his or her address and career. Some shared remembered experiences while in their senior year.

Special guests for the event were Vester Mulholland of Raleigh, Mrs. Mary Langston Evans of Raleigh and Mrs. Elizabeth Savage of Greenville, all teachers at Greenville High during 1933-34.

A moment of silence was observed in memory of deceased class members and for Junius H. Rose, GHS principal during 1933-34.

Those attending from out of town were as follows: Bill Carr Darden and wife, Raleigh; Bishop James P. Dees and wife, Statesville; Dr. Gus E. N.C. News Briefs

Will Settle Fertilizer Claims

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of Smith-Douglass Inc. said Friday they will settle claims with farmers whose crops were damaged by contaminated fertilizers manufactured by the company.

The fertilizers, laced with the herbicide picloram, contaminated 6,000 acres of tobacco crops in North Carolina and South Carolina. State officials said Thursday the tobacco, if taken to market, would receive no higher than an NOG, or no grade.

"Smith-Douglass and other interested parties have arrived at a suitable mechanism under which claims arising from the recent tobacco crop problem will be processed and settled."

Child Labor Laws Violations

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Numerous violations of federal child labor laws have been found in the central section of North Carolina, and a spokesman for the Employment Standards Administration says more violations are likely this summer.

James C. Stewart, area director for the administration, says with school now closed for the summer, he expects to see a rise in the number of violations, but he says many of them will go unchecked because his office cannot handle them all.

Stewart says the most common violation is when youths aged 14 to 17 are working at jobs described as hazardous. He says another common infraction is 14 and 15 year-olds working over the permitted 40-hour work week and the eight-hour day.

N C Tourism Down

Tourists are apparently not buying the idea that North Carolina has enough gas to supply them while they travel through the state, and an official of the tourism industry says the absence is hurting the business.

William Arnold, director of the state Travel and Tourism Bureau said Friday spot checks of tourist centers show a 20 percent decline in business since June 1, the date recognized as the official starting point of the tourism season.

He said the areas hardest hit appear to be the Outer Banks resort centers, which have reported a drop of 11 percent in business.

Denies Plan To Sell Ship

PARIS (AP) — A Saudi Arabian businessman who bought the luxury liner S.S. France will sell the moth-balled ship to a Norwegian group, the newspaper Le Havre-Presse reported today, but a spokesman for the owner denied the story.

The newspaper said Akram Ojje, the Saudi businessman who bought the famous liner in 1977 for about $20 million, will conclude the deal in Paris on Tuesday with the Oslo-based firm Knut Ulstein Kloster.

Peru's Teachers Strike Continues

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A 15-day strike by 50,000 Peruvian teachers continues today after police used tear gas to break up demonstrations by teachers in the capital Friday.

Peru's military government says it has closed 33 schools since the strike began and fired more than 1,200 teachers.

TOKYO (AP) — An average Chinese worker's annual wage in state-run firms was $412 in 1978 — $34.33 a month, up seven percent from 1977, Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Peking.

82nd Airborne Division Stage Band Concert Today

Today, the Army comes to the park as musicians of the 82d Airborne Division Stage Band make their first visit to perform in Greenville at 7 p.m. in the Sunday in the Park concert.

The regular contingent of the stage band is being supplemented by extra musicians to boost the number to 40 for outdoor playing of a variety of popular and patriotic music.

Of all the Army bands in America, few have had as colorful and exciting a history as the 82d Airborne Division Band. From North Africa to Europe in World War II combat, from Texas to New York on maneuvers, and from Miami to Cleveland on parades, the band has proudly served military and civilian populations in war and peace.

During World War II, the band followed the Division. It was activated April 27, 1942 at Camp

Claiborne, Louisiana, one month after the activation of the 82d Infantry Division.

Members of the band played for the troops when the occasion arose, while performing many other details, such as prisoner guard and litter bearers for the medics.

The band operated as a marching unit, concert band, and dance band to help in boosting troop morale.

In May 1965, the band joined the rest of the Division during the disturbance in the Dominican Republic. It served there for about five months, and appeared frequently in programs for the Dominican people in conjunction with the Civil Affairs program.

Today the band is consolidated with the Adjutant General Company of the Division Support Command.

As the only band on Fort Bragg, it is widely used for division and post functions as well as in community relations activities. It is the only Army band that has positions for airborne personnel.

The "All-American Band" is the only active Army band in the State of North Carolina. Its area of operation includes the entire state with the band also constantly receiving requests to play throughout the United States.

All musicians in the band have received extensive musical training, and a number of the men have professional music backgrounds. Chief Warrant Officer John H. Hamilton, Jr. is the band's director.

Today's Sunday in the Park performance by the 82d All-American Band begins at 7 p.m. on the grassy slope between East Third and East Fourth Streets east of Reade. Those coming to listen are reminded to bring along items for their personal sitting comfort.

The Sunday series is funded by the City of Greenville under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Stuart Aaronson coordinates the program. For today's program, he was assisted by Captain Gary Griffin of the local Army Recruiting Office.

In the event of rain, there is no immediate rain date scheduled.

Actor Spencer Tracy was nominated for nine Academy Awards during his career, of which he won two.

IN ACTION . . . The Army's 82d Airborne Division Stage Band is pictured in a recent North Carolina performance. The Stage Band, supplemented by other musicians, will play in today's Sunday in the Park concert at 7 p.m.

DANCERS — of the Pilobolus Dance Theater are shown in one of their typical intricate formations, where the bodies of dancers are used to construct intriguing structures in dance. Pilobolus will perform at 8 p.m. on three evenings, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 28, 29 and 30 in Page Auditorium, Duke University. Tickets are priced at $8 and can be reserved by calling 684-4059.

ECU Music Camps

ECU News Bureau

A record number of young musicians are expected to take part in the 26th annual Summer Music Camps at East Carolina University.

Sponsored by the ECU School of Music, the camp will be in two sessions — July 1-13, and July 15-27.

The first session will be directed by Harold Jones. Herbert Carter will direct the second session. Both are members of ECU's music faculty.

The camps are open to all junior and senior high school band students and provide a wide range of musical and recreational activities.

Students will live on campus, using campus dormitory and cafeteria facilities, and recreational facilities such as the pool, tennis courts and gym.

In addition to full band and sectional rehearsals, the musicians will play in smaller ensembles and attend clinic sessions. The students will hear musical programs featuring faculty artists, take part in electronic music workshops, and take classes in conducting, arranging and general music.

The camp's instructional staff will include several directors of high school bands as well as members of the ECU School of Music faculty — James Parnell, Joseph Distefano, Barry Shank, Ralph Shumaker, and James Forger.

Early registration is advised since quotas for each instrument have been set and cannot be exceeded.

Registration materials and further information are available from: Summer Music Camps, School of Music, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

Ervin Ambrose Back For Bath Blackbeard Role

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

After a year of being away from the scene, Blackbeard, in the person of actor Ervin Bonner Ambrose, Jr. is returning to eastern North Carolina to star once more in the Bath outdoor drama, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag."

The original Blackbeard in the 1977 premiere year of the drama based on the life of the infamous pirate, Ambrose said "it's good to be back, to take up again the portrayal of this many-faceted character. In the year I've been away, I've continued researching Blackbeard's life, everything I could find."

"The more I've discovered, the more I'm convinced that despite his being a cruel, very physical person, Blackbeard was also a shrewd, intelligent man. I think this is shown in documents and letters that have survived."

Now readying for its third year of summer production, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag" has a script by Stuart Aaronson, with music by Joseph Distefano, both Greenville men. Distefano is on the music faculty at ECU.

Commenting on the changes that have been made in the show since its initial year, Ambrose said "Blackbeard is shown as being a more rugged, even coarser individual than he was in the first year. There's also more dance, more songs, which I feel adds considerably to the color, the overall interest of the production."

Ambrose, who in his 1977 summer with the Bath outdoor production, went under the stage name of Ervin Bonner, has decided to again pick up his Ambrose last name this year. "It was a little confusing," he admitted, "with people thinking I must be one of the Bonners of Beaufort County, when actually I'm a native of College Park, Maryland."

And it was to Maryland that Ambrose returned following the 1977 Blackbeard season. "I attended the University of Maryland to do some more studying," he said. "It was a good year, and I had the lead in Thornton Wilder's 'The Male Animal.'"

"The experience was good for me, having a different physical type of male to play, a quarter-back instead of a pirate. Both are very masculine roles, but of an entirely different nature."

Ambrose has high praise for the casting system used in the Bath play. "The people there are remarkable," he noted. "They really have a deep interest in the play. If it was not for the local support, including working as cast members, the community could not afford to offer this production. This is the third year, and there's no doubt about it, they're determined to keep their outdoor drama going."

This year the main female lead, that of Mary Ormand, will be played by Susan McCandless of New Jersey, a graduate of the English Department, UNC-Chapel Hill.

And again, Washington's champ body building, Joseph Bailey, will portray Caesar, the Black Pirate. Narrator will be Chris Kara Eneff, who also doubles as choreographer for the fight scenes.

Ambrose says he opts for realism on stage, and has been victorious in having wooden swords discarded in favor of metal swords for the battle scenes. "I also hope to be allowed to have lighted candles in my beard, as I had the first year," he said. "I know it's a bit risky, but I think I'm like most actors, in wanting to work realistically."

The 1979 season of "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag" opens Friday June 29. Productions are given each Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings at 8:45 through Sunday, August 19 at the Bath Amphitheater on Bath Creek in historic Bath.

Reserved seats are $4.50, general admission is $4, and tickets for children under 12 are priced at $2. Group rates are also available.

Ticket reservations are available by calling 923-6931 or by writing to: Blackbeard, P. O. Box 209, Bath, N. C. 27808. Orders by mail are to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

School Football Stadium, with a reception after the parade at the Lumbree Regional Development Association Annex Building.

— Sunday, July 8 — Lumbree Homecoming Gospel Singing, 3 p.m., Moore Hall Auditorium, Pembroke State University campus. Admission free.

In addition to these activities, two major ongoing activities will take place during the period. These are a Creative Writing Contest and a Creative Art Contest. Works of winners will be on display at the Lumbree Regional Development Association Annex daily July 4-7 from 8:30 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Liberty Cart Drama To Open June 29

KENANSVILLE — Randolph Umberger's "The Liberty Cart" will open its fourth season June 29 in Kenansville. The outdoor drama is a portrayal of the colorful history and growth of eastern North Carolina, and covers a period spanning from 1755 through 1865.

The story of "The Liberty Cart" is told by Phenius Pickett, who takes audiences back in history to the battles of the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. Through the eyes of Phenius, colorful jigs, reels, and minuets, as well as love stories, are brought to life.

Nestled in a natural setting of holly and pine, "The Liberty Cart" is performed every Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday night in the William R. Kenan Jr. Memorial Amphitheatre in Kenansville. Performances begin at 8:30 p.m. For more information, call 296-0721, or write: "The Liberty Cart," P. O. Box 470, Kenansville, N. C. 28349.

PBS To Cover NAACP Events

CHAPEL HILL — Highlights of the 1979 convention of the NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) will be carried on UNC-TV, Channel 25, nightly Tuesday through Friday, June 26-29 at 11 p.m. The convention is being held in Louisville, Kentucky and will focus on a number of national issues.

Also, at 10 p.m. on July 2, UNC-TV will broadcast a 90 minute special wrap-up of the convention.

Opera Awards Announced

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Opera Institute recently presented its 1979 Awards for Service to American Opera at a gathering here.

The Santa Fe Opera (John O. Crosby, general director) received the Award for Outstanding Service to Young Artists.

The Seattle Opera (Glynn Ross, general director) received the Award for Outstanding Community Service.

The Minnesota Opera Company (Charles C. Fuller, general director) was given the Award for Creation of New American Works.

RETURNING BLACKBEARD . . . Ervin Bonner Ambrose, Jr., who played Blackbeard in the 1977 premiere production of the Bath outdoor drama, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," returns to fill the lead role for the 1979 season which begins on June 29.

Special Tour Of Battleship Slated

WILMINGTON — Visitors to the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial from Monday, June 25 through Friday, June 29, will have the unusual opportunity of touring the ship with a World War II crew member as a guide.

Members of the Battleship's wartime crew will have a reunion in Wilmington during the week and have volunteered to act as tour guides.

Paul A. Wieser of Linden, New Jersey, former Bosun Mate aboard the North Carolina will be in charge of the tour guides. Wieser said that he and other former USS North Carolina sailors will include in their narration their personal experiences, relating them to the many points of interest along the tour route.

Tours of the Battleship are normally self guided through the use of directional arrows.

The USS North Carolina was the first of the new battleships built following the expiration of the naval treaties after World War I. Her immense size and enormous fire power earned her the nickname "Showboat" in the wartime Navy. The North Carolina took part in all 12 of the major naval campaigns of the Pacific in World War II.

Rescued from the scrap dealers in 1961 by the people of North Carolina, the Battleship now stands as a lasting memorial to the more than 10,000 North Carolinians who died in the Second World War.

WHEN HELL FREEZES OVER, I'LL SKATE — is the title of a salute to Black song and poetry in Vinnette Carroll's vignette to be shown at 9 p.m. on Wednesday, June 27 over PBS (UNC-TV), Channel 25, Greenville. The eight-member cast go from gospel to disco and from slave-quarter sermons to contemporary Black poetry in a look at Black culture. The program is part of the Great Performances television series. The performers shown here are Clinton Derriks-Carroll and Brenda Braxton.

Magazine Guides The Off-Beat Traveler

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP
NEW YORK (UPI) — A lapsed geologist with a penchant for offbeat independent travel has turned publisher of a magazine designed to help others who wish to avoid packaged, guided tours.

Now in its second year of publication, Lawrence J. Buser's bi-monthly Great Expeditions is the only magazine in America that devotes itself to the flip side of travel — field studies, archaeological digs, adventure trips, land and sea expeditions, and sporting holidays. It has put thousands of readers in touch with the non-profit organizations and individuals who organize these adventures but have difficulty publicizing them.

"There is a great deal of interest in travel alternatives just now," said the youthful, Vancouver-based Buser on a visit to New York to add to his network of travel correspondents. "There's the gasoline problem, of course, and a growing appreciation of non-commercial type travel. We get a lot of feedback from our readers and it's mostly favorable."

Flipping through the pages of the last several issues of Great Expeditions would raise the bloodpressure of even an armchair traveler. Who has not dreamed of rambling through the Nepalese Himalayas, kyaking in the Caribbean, searching for sunken galleons off Yucatan, or touring the volcanoes of the Canary Islands?

These vacation opportunities and hundreds more like them are available to the traveler with get up and go — and in some cases an ample travel budget. Many, though not all, of the non-packaged travel adventures are fairly expensive because they are off the beaten track and often require specialized equipment and vehicles.

"The specialized expeditions are particularly costly," said Buser, citing $890 for a three-week dig for King Tut's father-in-law's temple and $725 for two weeks of camping in Panama for tropical bird watchers. "That kind of thing can be expensive for two and disturbingly so for a whole family. But I think something like diving with Jean-Michel Cousteau is worth almost any price."

There are bargains to be found in Great Expeditions. A 70-day backpacking expedition through the Masai, Luo, Kikuyu, Geirama and Bajun tribal areas of Africa combined with anthropological and ecosystem studies and instruction in how to mount an expedition is cheap at $1,800. Five days of air gliding and instruction over England's midland is only $100. Many of the outdoor and wilderness programs require the traveler to be in vigorous health, and the magazine carries updated information from the U.S. Center for Disease Control on the state of world health and the necessity for inoculations when visiting certain areas. It is also preparing a list of English-speaking doctors around the world.

"Great Expeditions is going through a process of expansion and possibly will offer membership for readers who need specialized information, such as publications and maps, which we would track down for them," Buser said. "As members, readers will feel like contributing more travel information to the magazine."

Buser receives most of his information from colleges, clubs, state travel associations, museums, societies and universities. Readers deal directly with these organizations, thus sidestepping any built-in travel agent commissions, although some museum trips require a donation to the museum.

The magazine carries articles giving practical information for travelers and letters from readers assessing expeditions they have taken and asking for information or for travel companions. One of the latter reads: "I am looking for hikers for a 2,000-mile trek along the Great Wall of China."

"One of the most useful things the magazine does is to turn people onto organizations where they can find companions for travel who enjoy hiking, canoeing, or whatever," Buser said, recalling it had taken him seven years to find someone who wanted to share the experience of sailing the Arctic Ocean.

As a geologist, Buser explored the Arctic, Mexico and Spain for minerals and traveled extensively on both land and sea. Gradually his interest in travel outdistanced his enthusiasm for his work, which he came to consider slow and boring.

"I realized there were too many other things I wanted to do with my life, so I retired from geology and started the magazine as a non-profit publication," he said. "Now Great Expeditions keeps me so busy I no longer have time for travel."

For information on subscription to Great Expeditions write the magazine's U.S. office at 6311 Yucca Street, Los Angeles, Ca. 90028.

Photographs In Show

RALEIGH — Photographs by three North Carolina photographers — Marsha Polier, Charles Springman and Caroline Vaughan are currently on exhibit in the Collectors Gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art. The exhibit will continue through July 22.

Polier's nostalgic photographs are hand-colored prints of fanciful, theatrical subjects, evocative of childhood imagery as well as adult fantasies.

Photographer Springman uses architectural details and other close-up views to create abstract compositions, playing color against elements of texture and line in direct, frontal photographs.

Vaughan's landscapes work, considered as that of a "romanticist," are often shots of unusual geographic features. At times, she superimposes human figures on the landscapes.

Museum hours for the N.C. Museum of Art are from 10-5 Tuesday through Saturday, and 2-6 Sunday. There is no admission charged.

Alfred Hitchcock's debut as a director in 1922 was in a film called "Number," a movie that was never completed.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second meeting for the month of June of the Greenville Writers Club will take place at 8 p.m. Tuesday, June 26 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Oral Parks, 1609 Oaklawn Drive.

All creative writers, including poets, are invited to attend. Manuscripts of articles, essays, fiction, poetry and other material are read and discussed by those attending.

2,000 Year-Old Ruins Discovered In Rome

ROME (UPI) — City workers clearing the banks of the Tiber River have discovered 2,000-year-old ruins of imperial Rome's port complex, including loading docks and warehouses, officials said Saturday.

The ruins were discovered on the river banks in the southern Monte Testaccio area of the city where archeologists have long known the ancient port complex was located.

Officials from the city's communal assessor's office said the discovery was made as workmen cleared the river bank of debris and silt that had accumulated over the past three decades.

Clearly visible from the opposite bank of the river are more than a dozen vaulted chambers used as warehouses for goods brought upriver from ancient Rome's former seaside port of Ostia.

At the base of the warehouse area is a platform that was used as the imperial city's loading and unloading dock for shallow draft vessels using the river, the officials said.

The officials said the location and layout of the dock and warehouse areas correspond almost exactly with descriptions of Rome's ancient riverside port in writings of the imperial time.

Brett's Work In Joint Show

George Brett, local sculptor and correspondence artist, currently has items being exhibited at the Stempelplaats Gallery, Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Works by Brett being shown include handcarved rubber stamps, postcards, and hand-stamped books.

Stempelplaats, a combination museum and art gallery, is sponsored by Posthumus, the oldest rubber stamp manufacturer in The Netherlands. Gallery director is Aart van Barneveld.

Brett's work is being shown in a two-man show with work by Henryk Bzdok, a rubber stamp artist from Katowice, Poland.

The joint exhibit will be on view through July 20.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Meredith S. Foltz

Sports fans — participants and spectators alike — will be delighted by these new books at Sheppard Library.

SPORTS OF OUR TIMES by Dave Anderson. Anderson has selected his choicest New York Times sports columns and stitched them together with the stories behind the stories. Here he tells the events which prompted him to write the columns, the tidbits which he did not or could not report earlier, and the unexpected impact of some of the articles. Anderson has captured in words crucial moments on and off the field both for the legends such as Aaron, Namath, and Ali and for the lesser lights of the sports world.

THREE AND TWO! by Tom Gorman. Twenty-five years behind home plate has given umpire Tom Gorman a unique view of National League baseball, its referees, its players, and its fans. His autobiography offers an informative glimpse into the split-second decisions involved in the calling of plays. Gorman "calls 'em as he sees 'em" when he describes his confrontations with angry players and manager, but he tempers his firm opinions with good humor and the wisdom of long experience.

ON THE ROAD: THE MARATHON by Jim Shapiro. Shapiro consulted veteran long-distance runners for their observations on "the joys and techniques of marathon running." His book focuses on the men and women who run the torturous 26-mile marathons and the longer ultramarathons. Specific advice for the beginner is limited to the final chapter, but the experiences of champions Frank Shorter, Miki Gorman, and others are full of tips about training, equipment, and preparation for the inevitable mental and physical stress of marathoning.

MARATHONS: THE ULTIMATE CHALLENGE by Joel Homer. A runner's guide to important marathon events, this book profiles eighteen races, mostly in the United States. For most of these marathons, facts about the climate, date, entry requirements, history, and record performances are given. The courses are described in text and diagram.

FRISBEE: SPORTS AND GAMES by Charles Tips. For the frisbee player who is beyond toss and catch, Tips' new book maps out ten sports and more than twenty games which can enliven frisbee play. Official rules for better-known games such as disc golf, Guts, and Ultimate Frisbee are included. The author, however, considers his rules only flexible guidelines, and he encourages readers to bend the rules and invent new games.

MAKE YOUR OWN GYM: INDOOR-OUTDOOR SPORTS EQUIPMENT by Richard Cummings. Instructions and diagrams for seventy pieces of athletic equipment are given here for the home builder, young or old. Included are designs for indoor and outdoor structures for specific types of activity — throwing, running, vaulting, lifting, etc. Using this book, the handy athlete will be able to create a gym tailored to personal needs and favorite exercises.

Cardboard Rule

FARMVILLE — Beginning July 1, commercial and industrial waste generators in Farmville will be required to begin breaking down all cardboard waste of significant size — one cubic foot or larger.

The requirement, adopted by the Farmville Commissioners June 5, is one element in a several stage plan to improve town solid waste collection methods.

In order to comply with the ordinance, local businesses will have to knock down or compact cardboard containers before they may be collected. Town Administrator Patrick Thomas noted that several local businesses and industries are already working with companies that pick up and recycle their cardboard waste.

Later in the year, according to the Solid Waste Improvement Plan adopted by the board, the town will convert its commercial collections to bulk container storage and pick up. Industrial and large commercial waste generators are being converted to mechanized bulk collection July 1.

Businesses which do not compact cardboard under the new ordinance will not be eligible for collection service and may be cited for a misdemeanor offense, Thomas said.

Woman Farmer Works Horses

DARFUR, Minn. (AP) — In these days of $50,000 tractors and $2,000-an-acre farmland, Mamie Hanson lives without electricity, running water or a telephone and plows her fields with a team of horses.

Miss Hanson hand picks 40 acres of corn and, at age 75, uses a handsaw to cut wood to heat her home and fuel her stove. When she needs provisions, she harnesses the team of horses to a wagon and drives into town.

There's a car on the farm, a 1936 Plymouth, but its roof and upholstery are gone, and the wheels stand in mud partway up the wooden spokes.

A recluse, she belongs to no organization and doesn't socialize. But she's not lonely, Miss Hanson says.

"I was once, but I'm so used to it," she says. "It don't bother you. There's lots that live alone."

Mamie Hanson farms and lives the way people did 100 years ago.

Caring for her horses and pigs means hauling water from a pump and carrying pitchforks of hay from a stack nearly a block away from her barn.

Rusted milk cans, sway-backed sheds, delapidated farm implements and the crumbled stone foundations of vanished buildings give the south-central Minnesota farmyard a look of desolation.

Miss Hanson, whose hardiness and strength have made her a local legend, has lived on the farm since she was a girl of 10. Mamie has been alone since a sister, Clara, died several years ago.

Neighbors are protective of Miss Hanson, whose health is apparently marred only by poor vision and hearing, and the way she chooses to live.

"She thinks we're different," says neighbor Ron Lindeen. "Maybe that's the way some of us should live."

She doesn't care to talk to strangers. Asked whether she ever considered bringing electricity to her place, she replied with an uninterested "I don't know."

She considers automobiles unsafe.

"There's a pile of 'em killed with a car," she says, adding that horses seem a more reasonable form of transportation. "Everybody is safer with horses," she says.

After Miss Hanson's home of 65 years burned April 10, her neighbors came together almost instinctively to erect a new house for her.

Though they live modern lives on up-to-date farms, the neighbors were quick to give aid in the rural American tradition of barn raisings and quilting bees.

Marvin Sorenson had an unused granary and the neighbors moved it to Mamie's farm and shaped it into a cottage. They added insulation, paneling and a window with red shutters. Because Mamie was known to be a talented flower

Offer Rush Hour Study For Masters Degree

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — There's a new dimension in education in downtown Portland — the rush hour masters degree.

Academic offerings at Portland State University in the city's downtown area used to be scheduled during the traditional eight-hour work day with a few classes at night to give lip service to its urban setting. But between 4 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., it was a desert — empty halls, classrooms, offices, reading rooms.

Then five years ago, came a memo titled: "How To Get An Education On The Way Home During The Rush Hour." Directed only to a few of the faculty, it outlined the availability of a new class time — 5:15 to 6:29 p.m. two nights a week for three credit hours.

The 5:15 was chosen as the logical time to catch commuters. And 6:29 was selected because it would stand out on the schedule and giving the impression of being earlier than 6:30.

People who worked in downtown Portland could come to the university immediately after work, park and be in class within minutes.

There was virtually unlimited parking. By 6:29, Portland's freeway system would be almost empty so students could arrive home just a bit later than usual but with ease and still have the evening before them.

By having classes two nights a week the commuter might miss now and then without fear of losing a whole week's lectures.

There also was the chance of cramming in 18 credits in one term by taking night classes which (by design) dove-tailed with the twilight courses and doing it in just four days of a regular work week. Friday nights still would be free.

The rush hour period thus would allow a worker (who could stand the pace) a chance at finishing off a degree in record time without having to give up a full time job.

For the newly divorced parent working anywhere in the three-county area of the Portland metropolitan district, a short extension of the babysitter's time would allow a return to the university and the possibility of a degree and a better job in the future.

Schoolteachers too could manage a class or two on the way home without crowding their schedules.

Portland State now has nearly 60 courses available in rush hours. Summer school too has hooked into the commuter trade student body by moving its night classes up to begin at 5:30.

American Love Affair With Automobile: Part Of History

By G.G. LaBelle
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — I've got a Bugatti but mine, sadly, is not what the late Spanish King Alfonso's was.

He had one of only six or seven Bugatti Royales ever made, even now the world's largest automobile, over 22 feet long, the hood alone 7 feet, the master work of master Italian automaker Ettore Bugatti. It cost upwards of $30,000 in the 1920s, and today its value — and that of the gas its 8-cylinder engine might gobble — would be inestimable.

Mine's different all right. It's just a picture stamped on a big ersatz-brass belt buckle bought at a street fair: total cost, $1.50.

King Alfonso, despite chauffeurs and royal privilege, was said to have driven the Royale himself. And sometimes — on a New York subway going to or from — I close my eyes and imagine driving a real Bugatti. Wouldn't be anything like my best car, a '50 Ford, a model Alfonso never knew.

What is it about cars, anyway?

Americans keep buying them — despite increased prices and costlier and scarcer gas. Car sales were off 9 percent last month, but that was compared to very good sales last May. And after the other gas crisis five years ago, the sales of even big cars went back up.

In 1900, according to the World Almanac, 4,192 cars were sold in the United States. The Automotive News yearbook says 11,308,078 cars were sold in the nation during 1978. Based on average sale price of $6,000, that adds up to $67.8 billion.

The love affair with the automobile, they call it.

In John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," Tom Joad returns home to look for his family and is told, "Well, they been choppin' cotton ... gettin' money together so they can shove on west. Gonna buy a car and shove on west where it's easy livin'."

The Joads' Hudson Super-Six sedan never found them easy livin' in California, but they became a part of that America — real and imagined — somehow entwined with the automobile. There were Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow robbing banks and stealing cars, and hundreds of movie counterparts in chase scenes.

Then there was James Dean rolling out of a clunker just before it sped over a cliff in "Rebel Without A Cause," and Robert Mitchum running across the South in "Thunder Road."

In songs, Lucille was offered that ride in the merry Oldsmobile. Later, another offer: "Gotta hot-rod Ford and a two-dollar bill ..."

And still later: "Bye-bye, Miss American Pie ... drove my Chevy to the levee but the levee was dry ..."

And, too, there was F. Scott Fitzgerald's Jay Gatsby and his car. "It was a rich cream color, bright with nickel ... terraced with a labyrinth of windshields that mirrored a dozen suns."

I never did get that '36 Ford. Got the '50, though, and was happy. Well, almost. At that point, it was just another '50 Ford. Had to lower the front, strip chrome off the hood and trunk, paint and rub, rub and paint, put on the dual pipes, get the Naugahyde interior.

Even then, I envied Larry's '36. It was special, maybe something I'd later call a status symbol. And I knew as much about "special" as Larry. I remember some family on the street getting new car — shiny and big — and the ride they gave to all the neighborhood kids, including me. I heard the talk about "that new car smell."

But still, there was Larry, with his great grin and bouncy walk and the girl sitting with him in the '36 Ford — Linda, I think it was.

In their classic 1930s study of Muncie, Ind., "Middletown," sociologists Robert and Helen Lynd quoted a juvenile judge as saying the closed car was a "house of prostitution on wheels."

The unclosed car — in an age when the convertible is a thing of the past — seems unthinkable. But in 1916 only 2 percent of cars manufactured were enclosed. By 1926, the figure was 72 percent.

As Frederick Lewis Allen noted about the '20s and '30s in "The Big Change," young couples discovered the automobile as a place for "private intimacies."

Allen notes, too, that others learned about the privacy — and convenience — of the auto. You could go alone, anywhere, any time, not depending on buses or trains or others.

Indeed, that's how the automobile changed the nation. It created suburbs not tied to railroads, shopping centers, motels out along the highway, drive-in movies and restaurants, the freeways of California and even — in neighboring Nevada — drive-in wedding chapels.

But finally, as Larry knew, there is still romance — maybe it's born of danger — in the American automobile. The '36 Ford did not survive unscathed. Robert Mitchum's character got it in "Thunder Road." James Dean got it, really, on a California highway in 1955.

Display History Of 3 Centuries

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Visitors to Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum can now follow three centuries of American history at a new million-dollar interpretive center.

Seven major collections are on display — home arts, agriculture, lighting and communication, power and shop machinery and transportation.

Among the displays are a "farmer" fashioning special corn into brooms, a printer laboring over a press like Ben Franklin used and a machinist spinning brass candlesticks on belt-driven lathes powered by a 100-year-old steam engine.

Water Safety Not Guaranteed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the public has confidence in the capability of their local systems to provide safe water, the confidence is based mainly on ignorance, according to one industry observer.

"Programs are needed to educate the public about water quality, the full range of practicable alternatives to improve it and what those improvements would cost," said Dr. Duane D. Baumann of Southern Illinois University at a meeting of Resources for the Future.

Tom Watson blast from trap on third hole

Texas Makes Triple Play , Tops A's, 8-5

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Pinch-hitter Dave Roberts smacked a two-run homer in the 10th inning to power the Texas Rangers to an 8-5 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Bump Wills led off the inning with a single, stole second and went to third when A's catcher Jeff Newman threw the ball into center field. Roberts' homer then put Texas ahead 7-5 and the Rangers added an insurance run when Eric Soderholm singled, went to second on a wild pitch by A's reliever Bob Lacey, 1-5, and came home on Oscar Gamble's single.

The Rangers tied the game 4-4 in the seventh on catcher John Ellis' two-run pinch single, and Bump Wills gave Texas a short-lived lead with an RBI double. In the eighth, however, the A's tied it 5-5 on Tony Armas' RBI double.

In the fourth inning, the A's completed their third triple play of the season, tying the American League record. The A's had triple plays earlier this season against Baltimore and against Kansas City last Tuesday.

The triple play occurred after Gamble and Bill Sample singled, putting runners on first and second. John Grubb, the next batter, attempted a bunt down the third base line, but A's third baseman Wayne Gross made a diving catch of the pop for out No. 1.

With both runners moving, Gross threw the ball wildly into center field. Center fielder Armas, backing up the play, fired the ball back to shortstop Dave Chalk, who stepped on second for out No. 2.

Chalk, holding the ball in the confusion, saw Armas run into the infield and signal for the ball. Chalk threw the ball to Armas, who tagged first base to complete one of the strangest triple plays in baseball.

Watson Three Ahead

By BOB GREEN
OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Although Tom Watson said his 3-shot lead was far from insurmountable going into Sunday's final round of the $350,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament, Lee Trevino wasn't so sure.

"Three shots is not very comfortable on this course. Anything can happen," Watson said Saturday after fighting whipping winds and biting cold for a 1-over-par 72 that was good enough to retain his leading margin after 54 holes of this national championship.

"I played the best I could and he's still three in front," said the heavily bundled Trevino, alone in second.

"He's the best out here right now. He seems to play good regardless what the conditions are. He's the one we felt we had to beat when this thing started."

"It's nothing new to him to be leading. He's playing awfully well. He's in control. He's right there.

"He's just damn good. He's a fantastic chipper. He's a good sand player. He's a great putter. He hits his irons very, very well. If he ever gets to driving it really good, he'll only have to play three rounds a tournament. We'll just pay him off after 54 holes, send him down the road and the rest of us will play for second."

Watson, seeking a fifth title of the year and apparently poised to become the first man to win $400,000 in a single season, put together a 54-hole total of 207, 6 shots under par.

Trevino, who wore two sweaters, a shirt and pants over his pajamas, also managed a third-round 72 and was at 210.

Australian Jack Newton bogeyed three of his last four holes for a 73 that left him at 211.

"I played just the way I wanted to through the first 13 holes, and then the wheels came off," said Newton, who lost an 18-hole playoff to Watson for the 1975 British Open title.

They were the only men able to break par for three trips over the 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course, which was made even more difficult than usual by the winds that gusted to 25 mph and the temperatures in the chill 40s.

Ben Crenshaw and D.A. Weibring were at par 213. Crenshaw shot a 73, Weibring 75. Curtis Strange was next at 73-214. Johnny Miller, with a 75, was at 215, a distant 8 shots back.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed this demanding layout along the banks of Oakville Creek, matched par 71 — equalling the best score of the day — and was at 216. U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin had the same figures. Defending champion Bruce Lietzke was another stroke back at 217 after a 72.

"It was a very difficult day to play golf," the globe-trotting Newton said. The figures bore him out. The field average was slightly over 76.

"With conditions like this again tomorrow, it will be very difficult for anyone to catch him (Watson) unless they play superbly. You'd have to shoot better than 70 because I can't see him shooting worse than 72 or 73 the way he's putting."

Watson, the outstanding player in the game over the last 2½ seasons and already the winner of more than $353,000 this year, opened the day's play with a 3-shot lead. No one ever got closer than 2.

And, with most of the would-be challengers falling victim to the wind and weather and their own mistakes, only Newton and Trevino appeared in position to mount any threat at all over the last 18 holes.

"I'll just keep an eye on what the other players do and adjust my thinking when I see what I have to do," Watson said. "Hopefully, I can put the pressure on them by getting a couple of birdies right off the bat."

It was the first three holes that served as the key to his round Saturday.

"I saved a good round right from the beginning," Watson said. "I missed the green on the first three holes and saved par on all of them."

He birdied the fourth and sixth on putts of four and 20 feet, went back to par with bogeys on the seventh and 11th, then made a remarkable save with a 40-foot, uphill, breaking putt on the 14th.

"A heck of a putt," Watson said. "You just don't make too many of those anymore, but on these greens, it's really something."

He 3-putted for bogey on the 17th.

Newton chipped in for par on the 14th, then bogeyed the next three holes, falling out of second.

Trevino regained the spot with a finishing string of four pars, including a 12-foot saving putt on the 17th.

Lloyd Nips Martina In Hard-Fought Match

By WINSOR DOBBIN
AP Sports Writer
EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Chris Evert Lloyd saved three match points before winning a dramatic three-hour tennis marathon 7-5, 5-7, 13-11 over Martina Navratilova to win the Eastbourne international grass court title Saturday.

Lloyd's victory, in one of the most thrilling matches ever played in Devonshire Park, was a reversal of last year's exciting final between the two which Navratilova won 9-7 in the third set after saving a match point.

Lloyd said afterward, "The match was the best and closest high quality match I have ever played."

The two top players scarcely made an unforced error between them. In 48 games, they served only one double fault each.

Navratilova's double fault, however, came in the crucial 47th game. With the score tied at 11-11, she first double faulted and then netted a simple volley to give the 24-year-old Lloyd the break she needed.

"At the end, whoever missed a couple of shots was going to lose," Navratilova said.

It was the 22-year-old reigning Wimbledon champion who cracked. But even in defeat she agreed with Lloyd.

"It was technically the hardest match I have ever played," she said. "It was so intense."

The crowd of 4,000 was gripped by the emotionally taut encounter that earned the winner $20,000.

But with Wimbledon starting next Monday, both players realized that even this classic duel will soon be forgotten.

"This match will probably be better than Wimbledon," said a tired Navratilova. "But Wimbledon is the one that matters."

Nothing could dampen Lloyd's satisfaction with the longest match she has ever played as a professional.

"We put so much mental and emotional energy into the match," she said. "I felt I was going really well, and in the third set I got overhyped. I would not even have tried for in another match."

The opening set gave no clue of the drama ahead, although both players settled down after four straight service breaks to produce some marvelous rallies.

Lloyd got the vital break to lead 6-5, but it was due more to Navratilova's brief loss of concentration.

The Czech-born star overhit three times in succession and netted a forehand to give Lloyd the set.

The second set started in different fashion as Navratilova got all her confidence and aggressiveness back. She served strongly and hit some excellent winners on return shots to lead 5-1.

Just as she seemed poised to take the set, Lloyd came back to level at 5-5. But the Wimbledon champion got her game together again just in time. She held for 6-5 and then hit two winners off Lloyd's serve for three set points.

She squandered the first but Lloyd then overhit, and it was one set all.

In the final set, Lloyd saved two match points at 5-6 and another at 8-9 during a spell of 11 straight games which went with service.

Then came the decisive 47th game.

"With Wimbledon so close, neither of us really wanted a hard match," Lloyd said. "It just happened that way."

Lopez Has 68, Ties For Lead

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Nancy Lopez shot a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to tie the veteran Kathy Whitworth for the second-round lead in the $100,000 Lady Keystone Open at Hershey Country Club's West Course.

Lopez, the tour's leading money winner, eagled the 16th hole on her way to a two-round total of 140, 4-under par.

Whitworth shot a steady 1-under-par 71 over the 6,400-yard Hershey layout. One shot behind the leaders was Betsy King, who carded a 71 Saturday.

First round co-leader Amy Alcott was next at 142, 2-under par for the tournament after a 74 Saturday. Jerilyn Britz, who also shared the first-round lead, ballooned to 77 and was at 145, five shots off the pace.

Lopez, a member of the Hershey Country Club and the hometown favorite, got hot on the back nine, where she recorded four birdies and her eagle. She could have been a shot better but she bogeyed the 18th hole for the second straight day.

At the 16th, Lopez hit a driver and a seven-iron to reach the par-5 hole in two. She then dropped a 25-foot putt for her eagle.

Whitworth had a scrambling round with two birdies and a bogey. She lipped out a possible eagle putt at the 16th.

King bogeyed three of the first four holes but managed to birdie three of the next five to make the turn at even par. She then birdied on the 11th to gain her spot, one shot behind the leaders.

Alcott struggled all day and needed a 30-foot putt at 18 to save par.

Chi Chi: Pro Golf Needs Some New Life

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Swashbuckling Puerto Rican Chi Chi Rodriguez put on a show and played golf at Brook Valley Friday, and between entertaining the crowds, said that professional golf needs a shot in the arm.

Rodriguez, the diminutive 19-year pro veteran, said that the game is dull on television, but that without television's money, the golf tour would be hurting.

A crowd favorite for years for his Latin hat dances and sword-play with his putter, Rodriguez put on an hour-long clinic and exhibition of shots while telling jokes and giving imitations of other tour favorites.

"The way inflation is, I don't think the golf tour can get along without the television money," he said. "We can't play for $100,000 tournaments any more. But golf is a dull game on television, and the ratings are dropping. We need something to give it a lift."

Chi Chi said he didn't have any answers, but added that more showmanship by the pros (such as his), or a separate and independent pro tour might be the answer.

"Free enterprise has always worked in this country," he said. "Tennis got successful when it got some competition. If we run two tours, we'll still have a monopoly unless the other one is run by another group besides the PGA."

The PGA has proposed several things along this line, one a "major" and "minor" tour, with the lower ranked players in the "major" dropping down and the upper ranked ones in the "minor" moving up each year. There is also a proposal for an Eastern and Western tour, with the top people meeting in several final tournaments at the end of the year.

"If the PGA runs both, it might work for a while, but I think eventually people will get fed up. It'll end up being the young guys vs. the old guys, when it should be two equal groups."

Rodriguez, who grew up in Puerto Rico, got most of his training for the sport as a caddy in his native island home. He took it up seriously in the Army.

But for now, he remains the lone Puerto Rican on the tour.

"There were several guys who were better than me, but they got hurt or killed in Korea. I guess I was just luckier. I had two things going for me. I was born in America and I think God had a plan for me. I worked hard, too. Anyone who works hard can make it in this country."

Chi Chi has some proteges in Puerto Rico, but didn't appear optimistic. "It's tough for the kids to stay interested. Kids don't want to work hard now like they used to."

The game has changed too. "There are no public courses in Puerto Rico. When I was coming up, kids learned to play as caddies. Now, they belong to the clubs, get lessons, and get polished in college. That's where the pros are coming from today—the colleges."

Chi Chi says that he adopted the swashbuckler style on his own. "Every human being is different. I used to idolize (Ben) Hogan and (Sam) Snead, but I have to be myself. We Latins have the bullfighting in our blood, even though there are no bull fights in Puerto Rico. I guess the torero is in me. I'd have to be a bull fighter if I wasn't a golfer. The hole is my bull, and the golf club is my sword. But really, I couldn't be a bullfighter. I can't hurt any living thing."

Now 43, Chi Chi has no plans to put his clubs away. "It's foolish to quit in your 40's," he said. "Golfers last forever. It's rougher after 50 or 55, but people like (Gene) Littler, (Arnold) Palmer, (Billy) Casper, (Don) January, and (Miller) Barber are still great players."

"Snead is 67, and if he could ride a cart, he'd still be winning his share. In fact, they should allow seniors (over 50) to ride if they want to."

"That would be good for golf, and I'm for anything that is good for the sport. Maybe that's what we need to pick up the ratings."

Rodriguez pointed to the National Basketball Association. "They just adopted a 3-point shot. Maybe it won't work, but they're trying. We're don't change enough."

Chi Chi pointed to the recent removal of amateur Bob Clampett in the U.S. Open, who jokingly hit a ball from his knees. (Rodriguez did the same thing in his exhibition.)

"Maybe it was wrong. But it got some interest up. He wasn't even in the field really, and is just a kid. I can see how it might be bad if somebody like me or Palmer did it, but not him. It just livened up things."

Rodriguez' antics on the course have brought some cold stares from some of his fellow pros, but he says that most don't mind. "I don't do my dance unless I'm the last to putt out, or the other fellow has only a tap-in. I don't want to make them lose their concentration."

"That's why most of them don't talk to the gallery. They concentrate so hard. Maybe if I'd concentrated more, I'd have won twice as many as I've won."

"But what the hell, that would have never been me. I'd have had no fun."

No Mystery For North's Hitting: When They're Over He Hits

By TERRY KINNEY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — San Francisco Giants center fielder Bill North says there's no mystery how he's raised his batting average more than 60 points in the last month.

"When they're over the plate I hit 'em, and when they're off the plate I walk," said North, who singled twice and scored a pair of runs in the Giants' 5-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday.

"Baseball is peaks and valleys. Right now, I'm on a peak," North said.

Giants Manager Joe Altobelli

said North is a big factor in the Giants' recent string of victories.

"He's not only getting on with walks any more, he's starting to get hits for us," Altobelli said. "He's probably as good a leadoff hitter as there is in this league."

North said pitcher John Curtis deserved a share of the credit for bringing the Giants back to life.

"He's picked us up tremendously since he became a starter," North said.

Curtis, making only his fifth start of the season, has lowered his ERA by more than five runs in his last four starts.

"I've had a lot of sleepless nights in this town," Curtis said. "I've gone away wondering what I had to do to win here."

The Giants, who once again reached the .500 mark with the victory, have won eight of their past 14 games while Cincinnati has been in a skid. The Reds have lost eight of 11, including four straight.

The Giants scored in the first inning on a single by Ivie and added three runs in the third on a single by Jack Clark, a sacrifice fly by Ivie and a single by Bill Madlock.

San Francisco added another run in the sixth on an RBI double by Johnny LeMaster.

The Reds got an unearned run in the third inning, and Johnny Bench smacked a solo home run in the fourth, his seventh of the season.

Left-hander John Curtis pitched six innings for San Francisco and got the victory to make his record 3-3. Left-handed reliever Gary Lavelle finished the game and got his ninth save.

Cincinnati lefty Fred Norman, 3-7, lasted three innings and was charged with the loss.

Lavelle faced just 10 batters in the final three innings.

North stretched his hitting streak to 13 games with a lead-off single in the first inning and scored two outs later when Ivie singled up the middle.

Optimists 4, Union Carbide 3

The Optimists scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to squeeze past Union Carbide, 4-3, in the North State Little League Saturday.

The Optimists scored first, getting a run in the first. Kelly Barnhill walked and moved up on a passed ball and an infield out. He scored when Gary Scott singled.

Union Carbide scored twice to take the lead in the third. Frederick Hurt singled and moved up when Duane Roeser reached on an error. Dwight Smith singled to score Hurt, and a passed ball let Roeser in.

Union Carbide added a run in the fifth for a 3-1 edge.

But The Optimists came back to score three times in the bottom of the sixth to win. Jason Boyd singled and George Iaboni reached on an error. Both moved up on a wild pitch, and another let Boyd score. Anthony Coward walked, and advanced on a wild pitch. An error let Iaboni in with the tying run, and Coward then scored the game-winning run on a wild pitch.

Smith led the Union Carbide hitting with two, while Boyd had two for Optimists.

The Optimists are now 9-5 and have clinched second place in the league. Union Carbide is 4-10.

Exchange 4, Big Value Drugs 1

The Exchange upset Big Value Drugs, 4-1, Saturday, and stalled the Tar Heel Little League leader's chance to clinch the championship.

Big Value is now 10-4, and must win one more game to avoid a tie with First Federal, a game back at 9-5. The Exchange is 8-6.

Big Value got its only run in the top of the first. Eric Jarman walked and was wild pitched to third. He scored when Les Turner reached on an error.

The Exchange got two runs in the third to take the lead. Joe Hobgood singled and moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball. Billy Michel walked and took second on the passed ball. Monte Atkinson doubled to drive in both runners.

In the fifth, the Exchange added its other two, as Michel hit a two-run homer.

Hobgood had two hits to lead Exchange, while Michel allowed only one hit by Big Value, while walking three and striking out 13.

Prep League

Dr. Pepper 5, Green Hardware 2

Dr. Pepper handed Prep League leader Greenville Hardware a 5-2 defeat yesterday.

The loss dropped the Hardware record to 6-4, while Dr. Pepper climbed to 5-5.

Dr. Pepper got its first run in the second. Marvin Barrett walked and Tony Daniels singled. James Smith reached on an error, and a wild pitch scored Barrett.

Dr. Pepper added two more in the third for a 3-0 lead. Daryl Pettis reached on an error and Andre Wooten got a hit. Marc Gatlin singled in Pettis, and an error let Wooten score.

Dr. Pepper added one in the fifth and another in the sixth.

Both Greenville Hardware runs came in the third. Timmy Norris doubled and stole third. Richard Pace singled to score Norris. Billy Godley walked and stole second, and Curt Hendrix reached on a fielder's choice, getting Pace. Todd Jordan reached on an error, allowing Godley to score.

Wooten led the Dr. Pepper hitting with three, while Gatlin had two. Pace had two to lead Hardware.

Cox Realty 7, Auto Specialty 2

Cox Realty rolled to a 7-2 win over Auto Specialty Saturday in the Prep League.

Cox is now 5-4, while Auto Specialty is 3-6.

Auto Specialty scored first with a run in the first.

Michael Smith reached on an error as did John Ravaris. A wild pitch scored Smith. The other run came in the third.

Cox pushed over four in the top of the third, however, moving ahead for good. Ed Farley walked and Raju Singh reached on an error. Mike Iaboni also reached on an error, scoring Farley. Eric Woodworth reached on still another error, scoring both Singh and Iaboni. Woodworth stole second and third and scored when Carlton Wilson doubled.

The other three came in the fifth, and included a two-run homer by Ted Stanley.

Wilson led the Cox hitting with three, while Auto Specialty got only two hits off Singh.

Senior Babe Ruth

Planters Bank 8, Wachovia Bank 7

Babe Ruth League champion Planters Bank had more trouble than expected from last place Wachovia Bank, but managed an 8-7 win Saturday.

Planters scored three times in the first inning. Mike Pollard singled and Gordon Douglas got a hit. Mont Carter doubled to score both runners. Carter scored on a hit by Keith Phillips.

Wachovia came back to score four in the bottom of the first. Roderick Harrell singled and Sammy Hodges doubled him in. Ed Frazier walked and stole second. Troy Hudson doubled to drive in Hodges, and Jodie Forbes got a hit, scoring Frazier. Burney Carraway sacrificed in Hudson.

Planters added three in the fourth for a 6-4 lead, and added one each in the fifth and sixth. The one in the sixth was the winner. Kenny Kirkland doubled and scored when Mike Pollard singled.

Wachovia rallied for three in the seventh, but fell short.

Pollard led the Planters hitting with three, while Phillips and Jim Whitehurst each had two. Hodges had three, and Harrell, Hudson and Forbes had two each for Wachovia.

Home Builders 13, Pepsi-Cola 0

Home Builders romped to a 13-0 victory over Pepsi-Cola in Babe Ruth League action Saturday.

The Builders got all they needed in the first, scoring twice. Horace Barrett singled and Roger Williams reached on a fielder's choice. Tony Burroughs doubled in Barrett, and Chuck Allen, who hurled the shutout win, grounded out, scoring Williams.

Home Builders added two in the second, one in the third, four in the fourth and four more in the fifth to wrap up their 13-run total.

Barrett and Burroughs each had three hits for the Builders, while Williams and Lloyd Jackson had two each. Billy Brannigan got two of the four Pepsi hits.

Home Builders 6, Aaction Movers 4

Home Builders added a second victory for the day Saturday by downing Aaction Movers, 6-4.

Aaction scored first, getting all four runs in the third. Keith Stancill walked and Jeff Wilson reached on a three-base error, scoring Stancill. Bill Kittrell walked, and a double by Rudy Stalls scored both runners. Stalls scored when Bryan Dye got a hit.

The Builders rallied for three in the fourth. Williams reached on an error and stole second. He scored on Allen's single. Danny Woods got a hit and Ashley Ferrell walked. Curtis Evans singled in both Allen and Woods.

The other three came in the sixth. Allen doubled and scored on Woods' single. Ferrell doubled and Evans singled in Woods. Scott Galloway grounded out, scoring Ferrell.

Allen, Woods and Evans each had two hits for Home Builders, while no one had more than one for Aaction.

Coca-Cola 4, Pepsi-Cola 0

Coca-Cola took a 4-0 shutout win over Pepsi-Cola Saturday in Babe Ruth League play.

Jeff Porter hurled the victory, allowing only two hits, both singles.

All four Coke runs scored in the fourth. Porter started things off with a walk and Randy Warren reached on an error. Steve Holloman singled in Porter, and Louis Fletcher singled to score Warren. Jimmy Jones reached on a fielder's choice that got Holloman at the plate, and Mitch Brann's single scored both Fletcher and Jones with the final runs.

Holloman had two hits to pace Coke.

BoSox Nip Jays, 4-3

BOSTON (AP) — Bob Watson hit a towering home run on the first pitch in the 11th inning Saturday, lifting the Boston Red Sox to a 4-3 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Watson, acquired from Houston last week, unloaded his third homer for the Red Sox against reliever Tom Buskey, the third Toronto pitcher, boosting the Red Sox to their fourth consecutive victory and 18 games over .500 with a 43-25 record.

Pitt Outlasts Edenton In 17-14 Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt County kicked a fourth-quarter field goal and came away with a 17-14 victory over Edenton Friday night.

Hey, wait a minute. That wasn't a football game. It was a baseball game, even though the score doesn't look like it.

The three and a half hour marathon that Pitt County finally won after blowing a 13-5 lead saw a total of 31 runs cross the plate as the two teams combined to bang out 35 hits. They also committed nine errors and walked a total of 17 batters.

Nine different pitchers worked the mound, one of them twice.

All-in-all, it was not what could be called a pretty baseball game.

"I just can't say a thing about this one," Pitt coach Gary Overton said. "I'm just glad that we won. We made some mistakes, both on the field and in the dugout."

Both teams came up with seven run innings in the game, the one by Edenton tying it at 14-14 in the top of the seventh. Pitt County pushed a run over on a controversial balk call in the bottom of the seventh, then added two insurance runs in the eighth to claim the victory.

The win ran the Pitt record to 7-2 on the year and kept the locals in the race for the regular season title. Edenton dropped to 4-7 and was put on the verge of elimination from the title race.

Edenton started the scoring in the first inning, getting a pair. Gary Hunter, a cousin of New York Yankee pitcher Catfish Hunter, led off with an infield hit. (Seven of Edenton's 17 hits were of the infield variety.) Steve Underkofler hit one through the middle that barely made it through for a single. He then stole second, and a wild pitch scored Hunter. Bion Jolley, trying to lay down a suicide squeeze bunt, hit a chopper that bounced over the head of pitcher Mike Williams for another in-

Pitt County took command with four in the third inning. Mark Shank singled and stole second. Ben Wilson got a single to right center and Skip Topping hit a sacrifice fly to score Shank.

Curtis Spencer singled and Mark Douglas walked, loading the bases. Two wild pitches brought in Wilson and Spencer and put Douglas on third. Will Sanderson walked, then stole second. The ball was thrown into center on the play and Douglas came in with the fourth run.

Edenton came right back to score two and tie it up in the top of the fourth. Buck Ambrose walked and Miles Bright came on to run for him. Paul Simpson reached on a high hopper to the infield along the third base line. Underkofler walked, and Eric McDaniel singled to center, driving in Bright and Simpson.

Pitt County then seemingly put the game on ice in the bottom of the fourth, scoring seven runs for an 11-4 lead. Mark Shank reached on a fielder's choice and second, going to third on an error. He scored when Will Barrett singled. Barrett then went to third on an error on a pickoff try, and scored on Wilson's single. Topping singled and Curtis Spencer doubled in Wilson.

Douglas singled to score both runners and Sanderson got a hit. Junior Neal grounded out, scoring Douglas, and Mike Williams reached on an infield hit, scoring Sanderson with the final run of the frame.

But it wasn't over. Edenton added a run in the fifth on an infield hit, a solid single, a walk and a out. Pitt County added two on an error and a two-run homer by Wilson. Edenton came back with two in the sixth on two singles, a double and a walk, while Pitt got one on an infield hit, two walks and an infield out.

Then, trailing 14-7, Edenton erupted for seven in the top of the seventh to tie it up. Hunter opened with a single to right and Underkofler lofted a fly to deep left. Wilson saved it from being a homer by leaping to deflect the ball back into the field. It went as a long single, since Hunter had to hold up to see if it would be caught. Both moved up on an out, and Bion Jolley's sacrifice fly scored Hunter. Ken Meekins singled in Underkofler, and

Expos Do It To Phils Again On Friday Night

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark received a vote of confidence Friday night, but the Montreal Expos continued to make the rest of the Phillies feel rather insecure.

After winning the National League East three times in a row, the Phillies have dropped 22 of their last 33 games to languish in fourth place, 5½ games off the pace. The Expos have beaten the Phils 7-for-7 this season, including Friday night's 6-5 squeaker.

"I've heard the rumors before about my firing but I'm not worried about my job," said Ozark, who was given a vote of confidence by Paul Owens, the Phillies' player personnel director.

In other National League action, Pittsburgh beat Chicago for the seventh time in as many meetings 7-2; St. Louis downed the Mets 4-2; Houston edged San Diego 2-1, San Francisco nipped Cincinnati 3-2 and Atlanta shaded Los Angeles 3-2.

Andre Dawson drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly and Warren Cromartie knocked in two runs with a single to pace the Expos' attack. Montreal, behind 2-0 in the first inning, scored three times in the fourth to take a 4-2 lead. Cromartie delivered the tying and lead runs with a single, Tony Perez added an RBI single and Dawson drove in the winning run in the fifth.

Ozark was ejected for protesting a stolen base by Montreal's Rodney Scott in the eighth inning.

Babe Ruth

Home Builders 8, Aaction Movers 0

Home Builders gained an 8-0 victory over Aaction Movers in the Babe Ruth League Friday night.

Home Builders ran its record to 9-4 with the win, while Aaction slipped to 6-7.

The Builders got all they needed in the first, scoring twice. Scott Galloway led off with a walk and stole second. Curtis Evans walked and Roger Williams doubled in Galloway. Horace Barrett grounded out, scoring Evans for a 2-0 lead.

The Builders added two in the third and four more in the sixth.

Galloway hurled a three-hitter at Aaction in getting the shutout victory.

Williams, Barrett and Chuck Allen each had two hits to lead Home Builders, while no one had more than one for Aaction.

Coca-Cola 6, Pepsi-Cola 4

Coca-Cola rallied to gain a 6-4 win over Pepsi-Cola Friday in Babe Ruth League play.

Coke scored first, getting a run in the first. Mitch Brann walked and moved to third on two passed balls. A wild pitch allowed him to score.

Pepsi came back with four in the top of the fourth to move ahead. Frank Norris singled and Allen Dickens was walked. Brian Hill reached on an error, scoring Norris. Lance Searl reached on a fielder's choice which got Dickens. Billy Brannigan then doubled in Hill and Searl, and Ricky Owens doubled to score Brannigan for a 4-1 lead.

Coke came back with three in the bottom of the inning to tie it up, then scored the winning run in the fifth. Randy Warren reached in the fifth on an error. Steve Holloman moved him to third with a hit, and an error on the play allowed Warren to score.

The other Coke run came in the sixth.

Brannigan led the Pepsi hitting with three, while Norris added two. No one had more than one for Coke.

Coke picked up four more in the second, while the Kiwanis got three. Coke added another in the third, but the Kiwanis scored four times, tying it at 8-8. Coke got another in the top of the fifth, then added three in the sixth to win it.

Brian Gee walked and Benny Vines did too. Matthews hit a two-run triple, then scored what proved to be the winning run on a passed ball.

The Kiwanis came back to score three in the bottom of the sixth, all on a homer by William Smith, but it fell short by one.

Allen led the Coke hitting with three, while Jason Galloway had two to pace the Kiwanis.

The Kiwanis are now 6-8, while Coke is 5-9.

Wellcome 7, Moose 4

Wellcome claimed a 7-4 victory over the hapless Moose in the Tar Heel Little League Friday.

Wellcome boosted its record to 8-6 in the league, while the Moose tumbled to 1-13.

The Moose had hopes, however, scoring all four runs in the first for an early lead. Charlie Littleton singled and Rob Deyton reached on an error. Daryl Perkins reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Littleton. Peter Kallweit singled in Deyton and a wild pitch let Perkins in. Kevin Baker reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Kallweits.

Wellcome came back with one in the fourth. Russell Vines singled and Tommy Warren got a hit. Both advanced on a passed ball and Bruce Thompson's infield out scored Vines.

After scoring another in the fifth, Wellcome came up with five in the sixth to win it. Bruce Thompson singled and Terry Warren got a hit. Lark Wetherington reached on an error, loading the bases. Cedric Hines also was safe on an error, scoring Thompson. Traye Fuqua polished it off with a grand-slam home run, giving Wellcome the win.

Warren, Fuqua and Vines led the Wellcome hitting with two each, while Kallweit had three and Littleton, two, for the Moose.

Pirates 7, Cubs 2

Phil Garner and Bill Robinson drove in two runs apiece as the Pirates won their sixth in a row behind the eight-hitter of Bert Blyleven, Grant Jackson and Kent Tekulve. Garner's two-run double off Ken Holtzman helped Pittsburgh to a 3-0 first-inning lead and Robinson had RBI singles in the third and eighth.

Cardinals 4, Mets 2

Ted Simmons belted his second home run of the game to start the seventh inning, snapping a 2-2 tie and enabling Silvio Martinez to beat the Mets for the fifth time in five career decisions. Simmons also hit a solo homer in the Cardinals' two-run first. Keith Hernandez and Martinez scored on sacrifice flies for St. Louis.

Astros 2, Padres 1

The Astros were held to one hit until Jeff Leonard doubled home the tying run in the seventh and scored on a pinch single by Denny Walling. That made Joe Niekro the majors' first 11-game winner with help from Joe Sambito, who pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the eighth. Sambito has not yielded an earned run in 29 innings.

The Astros are now 4½ games ahead of Cincinnati in the NL West.

Giants 3, Reds 2

Rookie Phil Hastu scattered seven hits in 82-3 innings, Bill Madlock singled home two first-inning runs and Terry Whitfield doubled home the winning run in the ninth. Reds George Foster and Dan Driessen homered.

The Giants have beaten the Reds six times in eight meetings.

Braves 3, Dodgers 2

The Dodgers' loss to Atlanta was their sixth of nine to the Braves. Rookie Tony Brizzolara allowed seven hits in eight innings and drove in the winning fourth as the Braves edged Los Angeles Friday night. Atlanta erased a 2-0 deficit by scoring all three runs off Bob Welch in the fourth.

Giants' Archer Dies In Wreck

NORTH BERGEN, N.J. (AP) — The New York Giants Troy Archer, a fiercely competitive football player who hated to lose, was killed along with a companion Friday night when the truck he was driving struck a pole on a winding road.

Coca-Cola 12, Kiwanis 11

Coca-Cola outlasted the Kiwanis, 12-11, in a North State Little League game Friday.

Coke scored first with three in the top of the first. James Matthews reached on an error, took second on a balk and third on a passed ball, but was thrown out trying to steal second, with Matthews scoring on the play. Lee Allen then singled and Jay Wynne hit a home run.

The Kiwanis came back with one in their half of the inning. Scott Davis reached on a fielder's choice, moved up on an out, and scored on Ryan Clark's double.

Holmes Wins On TKO

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike "Hercules" Weaver probably is not a name that will be remembered for long. Except, perhaps, by Larry Holmes.

They called Hercules a tune-up. They called him a bum. They said he wasn't worthy to fight for the world heavyweight championship. Network television shunned the fight because it wouldn't sell.

But Friday night in Madison Square Garden, 26-year-old Mike Weaver, who fought his first professional fight in 1972 for $85, proved there might really be a "Rocky Balboa."

Holmes still has his World Boxing Council championship belt, but only by the grace of a tremendous right uppercut that seemed to come from nowhere. Some of the ringsiders didn't even see it.

"Yeah, it hurt, but I wasn't finished," Weaver said of Holmes' punch in the 11th round that layed him out flat. Both men were dog tired. They had absorbed a giant's share of punishment. With time running out in the 11th round and Weaver knowing he was behind, the challenger backed Holmes into his own corner with a hook and two right hands.

Suddenly, Holmes turned loose a right uppercut that took the legs out from under Weaver. The challenger took the eight count and two seconds later, the bell saved him.

In the 12th, Holmes went immediately to the attack, backing Weaver to the ropes with vicious combinations to the head, and the challenger was defenseless. Referee Harold Valan stepped in and stopped the fight with 44 seconds gone in the round. Weaver's corner protested vigorously.

"I just got killed at the end by that right hand," said Weaver, er, who had many of the 14,136 fans at the Garden conjuring up visions of Rocky in his rags-to-riches movie fight against world champion Apollo Creed.

Did the referee say anything to Weaver when he stopped the fight?

"He didn't say nothing," Weaver said. "He just stopped it. I said I was all right. He said, 'No, you're not.' They just didn't want me to win the fight. Everybody was against me."

Well, not everybody.

In the fourth and fifth rounds, the crowd began to chant "Weaver, Weaver," as the challenger being to attack. Holmes went down midway through the fourth round from what Weaver said was a right hand, but the ref called it a slip.

In the sixth round, one of Holmes' worst, the champion looked tired. Again it was Weaver on the attack. However, in the seventh, eighth and ninth rounds, Holmes regained the initiative, throwing a heavy jab and combinations to the head. Weaver got in an occasional body punch, but when Holmes was dancing and jabbing, Weaver was helpless.

Then, in the 10th, Weaver's left jab found its mark. He hit Holmes with a walloping right hand that hurt the champ with less than 10 seconds left, and the crowd resumed its chant: "Weaver, Weaver."

The 11th round was furious, and Weaver perhaps had the best of it until that right uppercut ended his made-for-Hollywood fight script.

"This man might not have much credit or recognition," Holmes said, "but you'll have to give it to him now. Mr. Weaver surprised you like I did two years ago."

Holmes said Weaver hit him in the ear in the first round, and his ear was still ringing after the fight. He also accused Weaver of twice poking him in the eye with his thumb.

"I couldn't see for two rounds," Holmes said. "I swear I couldn't see the man, but I kept on fighting. Any man who believes I should have quit should die and go to hell."

Holmes, 29, of Easton, Pa., kept his flawless record intact with the victory, going 31-0 with 22 knockouts. He weighed 215. Holmes' next fight is planned for September against Earnie Shavers.

Weaver, of Los Angeles, now has a record of 20-9 with 12 knockouts. He weighed 202 for the fight.

Catfish Captures His First Win Of Season

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Catfish Hunter waited a long time for his first victory this season and the last three innings against the Cleveland Indians Friday night must have made it seem even longer.

Hunter saw six innings with a 3-0 lead but when he walked the leadoff batter in the seventh and issued two straight balls to the next, Manager Billy Martin took him out. Five relievers followed before the Yankees nailed down a 3-2 decision over the Indians.

"Rich Gossage's absence made me do a lot of thinking before we got that final out," said Martin. Gossage is out with an injured thumb.

Ken Clay finally quelled the Indian uprising after they scored two runs, throwing a double-play ball with the bases loaded.

Royals 9, Angels 5

Frank White drove in four runs with a home run, double and single and Rich Gale won his first game since May 30, leading Kansas City over California. Gale was chased in the eighth by Brian Downing's three-run homer and needed late relief help from Marty Patton.

Brewers 15, Mariners 8

Gorman Thomas, Charlie Moore and Robin Yount smashed home runs to lead Milwaukee over Seattle. Jim Slaton, 7-3, gave up five of Seattle's runs but managed his fourth consecutive victory with relief help from Bob McClure. Glenn Abbott, 3-8, took the loss for Seattle.

Red Sox 12, Blue Jays 1

Jim Rice hit two homers and Bob Watson and Fred Lynn one each to power Boston over Toronto. Rice, the American League's home run champion and Most Valuable Player last year, belted his 16th homer off reliever Dyer Miller in the third and lined one off Mark Lemongello in the sixth. Watson lined a homer in the second, triggering the Red Sox 3-0 lead against Toronto Jefferson and Lynn unloaded his 18th homer against starter Jesse Jefferson.

Orioles 6, Tigers 5

Baltimore scored three runs in the ninth on a solo homer by Ken Singleton and a two-run blast by Doug DeCinces to beat Detroit.

Singleton's 15th homer came off Dave Tobik, who relieved Kip Young after he threw two balls to leadoff hitter Kiki Garcia. Eddie Murray singled and after Gary Roenicke was retired for the second out, DeCinces lined his sixth homer over the left-field fence.

Twins 5, White Sox 3

Ron Jackson slammed a three-run homer and singled in another run as Minnesota cut a five-game losing streak by beating Chicago.

Jackson singled and scored in the second inning off loser Ken Kravec, 8-5, and hit his 11th homer in the third after Bobby Randall and Roy Smalley walked. Winner Geoff Zahn, 6-1, was lifted in the ninth in favor of Mike Marshall, who gained his 16th Twins' save.

A's 6, Rangers 5

Light-hitting Larry Murray drove in three runs with an inside-the-park home run and a double and reliever Dave Heaverlo shut the door in the eighth and ninth innings as Oakland beat Texas.

Murray's RBI in the sixth turned out to be the winner for the A's. The Rangers rallied from a 5-1 deficit, only to fall short on Heaverlo's fine pitching. He retired five of six batters he faced.

Williamston In 12-8 Win Over Wayne Club

DUDLEY — Williamston's American Legion baseball team rallied from behind twice to take a 12-8 victory over Wayne County Friday night.

The win boosted the league-leader's record to 8-2, while Goldsboro, now 3-7, was eliminated, along with Edenton and Washington, from title consideration. Williamston, through Friday, held a half-game lead over Rocky Mount and Pitt County, both 7-2.

Wayne County scored first, getting a run in the first. Joe Strouse walked and Ron Page reached on a fielder's choice. Terry Coates singled in Strouse.

In the fourth, Wayne added another run. Greg Browne walked, stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball. That made it 2-0.

Williamston rallied for five in the top of the fifth. Brady Pinner singled and Marty Evans walked. Hank Edwards was hit by a pitch, loading them up. Randy Ellis walked, scoring Pinner, and Trent Ange singled in Evans. Toby Holliday walked to force in Edwards and Anthony Latham's single brought in Ellis and Ange for a 5-2 lead.

Wayne County came back to score twice in the fifth and close it to 5-4. Dave Fredericks walked as did Page. Coates singled in Fredericks and Mike Burrell doubled in Page.

In the seventh, Williamston added another run. Joe Holley tripled and scored on Glenn Cargile's sacrifice fly.

Wayne County then came up with four in the bottom of the seventh for an 8-6 lead. Page walked and Coates doubled. Burrell singled in Page, cut was thrown out when Browne reached on a fielder's choice. Don Jones singled in Coates and Ralph Mills walked. Dave Searles walked to score Browne and Fredericks was hit by a pitch, scoring Jones.

Williamston came back with four in the eighth to move ahead for good. Keith Clark was safe on an error and Edwards walked. Ellis reached on a fielder's choice, getting Edwards and Ange singled to score Clark. Holley tripled in Ellis and Ange, and a hit by Cargile brought in Holley with the tenth Williamston run.

Williamston added two more in the ninth to wrap it up.

Ange led the Williamston hitting with three, while Ellis, Holley, Latham and Pinner had two. Coates had three and Burrell, two, for Wayne County.

Ancient Ebla Discoveries Stir 'Genesis' Debate

By ROBIN STAFFORD
ROME (UPI) — Uncanny similarities between 4,500-year-old writings found in the lost Middle Eastern kingdom of Ebla and the Old Testament book of Genesis have set off an acrimonious dispute between American, Italian and Syrian scholars.

The learned men have accused each other of being "Abraham chasers," "forgers" and "perverters of knowledge." At the root of the unscholarly language are apparent fears by Syria, where an Italian mission has been excavating Ebla, that the writing on 17,000 cuneiform tablets found five years ago may confirm the existence of Biblical ancestors of the Jews, hitherto thought to be mythical. That could lead to territorial claims by Jewish zealots.

The Biblical Archaeology Review, the journal of Washington's Biblical Archaeological Society, said in its latest edition: "It is now clear that anti-Zionist political pressures in Syria are attempting to affect the scholarly interpretation of the Ebla tablets."

The tablets resemble over-baked rolls. They measure between 170 square inches and only 2 inches across. They confirm that Ebla was a thriving kingdom between Babylon and ancient Egypt about 2,300 B.C. Until the discovery of the tablets, the area 35 miles southwest of Aleppo was thought to have been inhabited largely by nomads.

Archaeologists and linguists throughout the world consider the tablets as important a find as the Dead Sea Scrolls, maybe more so.

Prof. Giovanni Pettinato, 44, Rome University's chief Assyriologist and Sumerologist, has deciphered the Eblaite language as being a forerunner of Phoenician and ancient Hebrew.

What has stunned the archaeological world is the similarity to Genesis of names, cities and legends in the tablets.

Pettinato says Ebrum, one of Ebla's kings, has a name either evoking "Hebrew" or Eber, the descendant of Noah and forebear of Abraham, the first Jew, mentioned in Genesis more than 1,000 years later.

He has found a Flood and a Creation myth, references to trade with cities like Sodom and Gomorrah, a city named Urusalima that may be the earliest reference to Jerusalem, and names like Saul, David, Esau, Michael and Ishmael.

In the huge cache of tablets, four times greater than all other texts from all other sites of the third millennium B.C., Pettinato has deciphered a poem almost paraphrasing the first words of Genesis that begins:

"Lord of Heaven and Earth, There was no earth, you created it."

"There was no light of day, you created it..."

At first, Pettinato's discoveries were only whispered in the archaeological world.

Then a confidential memorandum was leaked to an American newspaper and the startling findings burst on the lay world.

As British authors Chaim Bermant and Michael Weitzman put it in their book "Ebla: An Archaeological Enigma," "The rest is hysteria."

Italian archaeological mission chief Prof. Paolo Matthiae appointed a 10-scholar international team to interpret the tablets without consulting Pettinato, who has now resigned.

"People have been calling me, a Sicilian, a Zionist," Pettinato told UPI. "I am a student of texts, not of politics. That is Matthiae's business."

Matthiae, 39, says of the Biblical Archaeological Review's accusations of Syrian interference: "There has been none. The article is unbelievable. Not only is it not scientific, it is provocative in the extreme."

The American journal also accuses the Italians of going slow on publishing their findings. Said Matthiae:

"Ten volumes on Ebla are to be published over the next three or four years, beginning later this year."

Before resigning, and being declared "unwelcome" to Syria by the Damascus authorities, Pettinato did publish a statement saying carefully:

"The fact that names at Ebla reappear in the Bible does not authorize us to make Eblaite the forefathers of Israel."

The statement was reproduced in the Syrian government monthly with the comment: "This refutes all Zionist allegations aimed at defacing Syrian Arab history."

In another interview, Syrian Director General of Antiquities and Museums Afif Bahnasi said:

"It is unfortunate that there are people, forgers and perverters of knowledge, who have tried for political motives serving the furtherance of Zionism to reverse the order of events and assert that the antiquities of Ebla and its writings came later than the Old Testament."

In fact, no reputable Israeli or Jewish scholars have attempted to use the Ebla findings to promote any claims to Syrian soil.

But Christian biblical scholars have stepped into the fray.

Father Mitchell Dahood, the American Jesuit dean of ancient eastern studies at the Rome Pontifical Biblical Institute, says of the Italian mission leader: "Those archaeologists, P. Matthiae to name one, who... facetiously distinguish between 'real archaeologists' and 'Abraham chasers,' do themselves and Near Eastern scholarship a disservice."

He called for a halt in the adoption of "the attitude of nervous nannies."

Dahood said that Matthiae, who has played down the Genesis similarities, "does himself no service by taking such an adamant anti-Biblical stance."

Arguments between scholars over similarities between the writings on the tablets and the Old Testament's Book of Genesis have eclipsed some of the other sensational discoveries in the archives.

The tablets include the world's first known dictionaries — in a language similar to Hebrew and Phoenician. They indicate Ebla had elected kings, double taxation, 11,700 civil servants, mercenary troops, beer, and a thriving trade with cities like Sodom and Gomorrah before Genesis reports their destruction.

The elected kings of Ebla made treaties with other cities, and a tablet records the first known international agreement, with a curse at the end if it is broken.

Pettinato has traced five kings over the 60-year period they cover, only two of them related.

"There appears to have been almost a presidential election system with each king reigning for a seven-year term, instead of the usual system of a monarch claiming his power came from a god or gods and handing the throne on to his son," Pettinato said in an interview.

The kingdom had a total population of about 260,000, run by 14 provincial governors who each had 500 superintendents under them. Citizens paid local tax to the governors and state tax to Ebla.

There was a chamber of elders and a chamber of former kings, who were given state pensions at the end of their terms. Pettinato believes the elders, from leading families, chose the kings. The first three kings he has identified served one seven-year term each. The fourth, Ebrum, served four terms and then the throne passed to his son Iybbi-Sipis before Ebla's destruction, indicating Ebrum changed the rules or was a very good politician.

In the first recorded international treaty, Ebrum speaks of local taxes with King Du-ud-ja of Assur, the treatment of merchants, and methods of criminal trial if people are injured. He ends with this threatened curse:

"The moment that (Du-ud-ja) does not respect the treaty, may the god Sun, the god Adad and his own personal god disperse his decision in the steppe, for his messengers who set out on a journey may there be no water, may he have no stable abode, may he undertake a trip of perdition." There are thousands of lists and records showing Ebla was a leading exporter of wood, bronze weapons, cloth and even beer to her neighbors. One brand of beer was named Ebla and the Eblaite themselves seem to have been fond of it.

Pettinato found a reference to a "man from Ebla" being given livestock and "weak beer and strong beer."

Modern tax collectors are considered by some to be stone-hearted. Ebla's were downright murderous.

The first recorded war communique described how Eblaite general Enna-Dagan set out to collect a debt from vassal King Iblul-Il at Mari, east of the capital.

Enna-Dagan describes how he conquered smaller towns on the way to Mari, adding after each battle the sinister note: "A pile of corpses did I amass."

Ebla are considered by scholars to be as important a find as the Dead Sea Scrolls. (UPI Photo)

Land-Use Is Object Of 3rd Manassas Battle

By BOB LIPSCOMB

MANASSAS, Va. (UPI) — In 1861 and 1862, the rolling countryside north of Manassas was the scene of two smashing Confederate victories over Federal troops, known in the South as First and Second Manassas.

In the last few years, the parcel of land in Prince William County has become the object of another battle, one fought in Congress and county government meeting rooms. The issue is whether the 3,030-acre Manassas National Battlefield Park, which opened in 1940, should be expanded by another 1,800 acres.

The leading proponent of expansion is Rep. Herbert Harris, D-Va. Harris has been working to expand the park since 1976. He says he favors park expansion because "this land is priceless and must be saved from commercial development." Backing Harris are several groups of Civil War buffs and many county residents.

On the opposite side is the county Board of Supervisors and, apparently, a slight majority of county residents.

The park expansion bill has twice passed the House of Representatives — but both times has been stopped in the Senate by Virginia Sens. Harry F. Byrd and William Scott. They invoked the tradition of "senatorial courtesy," in which the Senate is reluctant to pass

Evangelization Of Moslems Set

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — A center devoted to worldwide evangelization of Moslems, the Samuel Zwemer Institute, has been opened, headed by the Rev. Dr. Akbar Abdul-Haq of India.

Abdul-Haq, son of a former Moslem priest and now associate evangelist with the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, said at formalities opening the center:

"In the so-called Third World, there are indications of the beginning of a groundswell of interest in Jesus Christ on the part of non-Christians in general and Moslems in particular."

such measures over the objections of both of a state's senators.

The controversy comes at a time when Prince William County is caught, as are many other counties on the fringes of metropolitan areas, by the pressures of rapid development. The county, about 20 miles west of Washington, has tripled in size since 1960 to an estimated 150,000 residents in 1978.

Newspapers, including the Washington Post, the Washington Star and the Dumfries, Va., Potomac News have editorialized in favor of park expansion, saying the bill's opponents are "greedy developers" seeking to capitalize on the nation's heritage.

Donald White, a member of the county board of supervisors which opposes the expansion, is angry about that. "We've been called everything in the world and it's just not so," he said.

"If you're going to have development, that's the kind you want to have... I think some classy $100,000 homes outside the park would enhance it, not hurt it."

Dentist Has His Caboose

RYAN'S EXPRESS—Children's dentist Dr. John B. Ryan has turned a caboose into a waiting room at his Spokane Valley, Wash., office. Ryan, who has been a railroad buff most of his life, says it's good for the kids.

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — When it comes to taking the sting out of a trip to the dentist's office, Dr. John B. Ryan feels he's on the right track.

Youngsters just don't like to feel they've been taken for a ride in a sterile, white-walled dentist's office, he says.

"Every time I ever walked into a doctor's or dentist's office, I felt like I was walking into an autoclave. It was a joke," the Spokane Valley children's dentist said.

It was this train of thought and a lifelong interest in railroading that prompted Ryan to lay some track outside his office, buy a caboose, remove a couple of wheels, attach it to his dental building and turn it into a waiting room.

"I like to do things that are different. I get a bigger kick out of this than the kids. I feel like I'm practicing in heaven."

Bells, sirens, whistles, tools and lanterns line the walls of the caboose. A pot-bellied stove, used on a Union Army train during the Civil war, sits in a corner under a cluster of pressure gauges.

"I played with toy trains as a kid, there's nothing like getting into the real thing," the dentist said.

Ryan took his first train trip, from California to Chicago, 25 years ago. "I can still remember how great it was."

For Ryan, buying and converting railroad cars is easy compared to the job of collecting gadgetry to decorate them.

He scoured flea markets and antique shops all over the Pacific Northwest in attempts to furnish his caboose. Most collectors of railroad memorabilia are reluctant to part with their holdings.

"I picked that up in Denver during a collectors' show," he said, pointing to a bell. "It was once used as a fire alarm in the railroad roundhouse in Lewiston, Idaho. Before that, it was on a streetcar in Spokane."

The metal plates hanging on one wall of the caboose are "builder's plates. They are sort of like a locomotive's birth certificate. The plates are put on just before the locomotive leaves the factory.

"These are called peanut whistles," he said, tapping one of several whistles. "With these, the engineer could communicate with his firemen."

Like most of Ryan's paraphernalia, the whistles don't just hang on the wall. They toot. Ryan has them hooked up to an air compressor which works much like steam power in a locomotive.

"This is all tremendously satisfying," Ryan said. "I really enjoyed restoring the caboose and getting together all of the equipment."

Ryan has two additional cabooses parked on a 180-foot piece of track outside his office. He plans to sell one, bring in a Pullman he's got stored in Hill-yard, and buy a locomotive. The three-car train will then become his new dental office.

"The caboose will be my private office," he explains. "The locomotive will be the waiting room and the Pullman will be the dental working area."

Protest 'Opium' Perfume Label

VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP) — The national ministries department of the American Baptist Churches has protested the marketing of Yves Saint Laurent's "Opium" perfume, saying the use of the word "opium" is offensive.

In a letter to the Squibb Corporation, parent company of Charles the Ritz, distributors of Saint Laurent fragrances, the church agency said advertising for the perfume suggests that opium is somehow glamorous.

"This is repugnant to us because opium is a substance which causes addiction, misery and death," wrote Martha B. Savio, head of the agency's program of ethical responsibility in investments. The church owns 11,000 shares of Squibb common stock.

The Elgantine

Patio, Pantry Features of Plan

By Jerry Bishop

A semi-private patio and walk-in pantry are among the many features that make the Elgantine, a spacious four bedroom home, a livable design.

On the exterior, the styling exudes individuality, combining horizontal and vertical siding. Inside, the concern is for space, and good planning makes the most of it.

Through the closeted foyer, visitors are directed to the living room at right. The impressive 19-ft. living room furnishes a cozy wood-burning fireplace for warmth and charm and plenty of space for versatility.

For reading or quiet conversation, the study features a door that can be closed to shut out noise and activity. The study may also double as a guest bedroom.

At rear of the level, the dining room sports a convenient snack bar and sliding glass doors that open to the patio for summer cookouts. The corridor style kitchen benefits from plentiful counter space and includes a walk-in pantry. A half bath is situated nearby.

The plan's upper level is zoned for sleeping and includes four bedrooms in all. Notable is the luxurious master bedroom, with connecting dressing room, double closets, and full bath. Another bath and linen closet is off the hallway.

The home offers a front entry double garage, with an entrance directly into the foyer, and a basement for utilities, laundry equipment and storage.

Handmade Furniture Still Made By Few Craftsmen

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Anyone who has ever looked at a piece of commercially-made furniture and sighed for the days of good, old-fashioned craftsmanship, should rejoice.

A small but vital group of American craftsmen is keeping alive the tradition of fine workmanship in handmade wood furniture of outstanding creativity.

These woodworkers, who are scattered all over the country, got a chance to show the public just how good "good" can be in an exhibition of handmade furniture which opened recently at the American Craft Museum in New York.

The exhibition will remain on view in New York through July 15, after which it will travel throughout the U.S. and Canada.

There are more than 40 pieces on display and another 60 shown on video slides. The pieces run the gamut from chairs to tables, bookcases, sofas, clocks, lamps and other accessories. You are unlikely to find anything like them on retail sales floors anywhere.

The woods, workmanship, creativity, liveliness and humor of the pieces are impressive. And a chat with some of the furniture makers at the opening of the show made it clear that intelligence, mastery of craft and respect for the tradition of woodworking are among their important assets.

Since many of the contributors to the show are on the south side of 40, it seems clear that today's young craftsmen are fully qualified to translate the values of the past into the idiom of the present.

What turns someone on to the anachronistic craft of making furniture by hand, we asked at the opening.

Answers Timely
Gardening Questions

Q. I understand that the South Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station at Clemson University released a new collard variety last year. Is seed available? (G.S., Rockingham)

A. Yes. The new variety is called "Carolina." It is an attractive collard with good green color and resistance to downy mildew. It is very similar to the Vates variety. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. How can I keep Japanese beetles off my roses? (L.H., Elizabeth City)

A. The only sure way to protect roses from Japanese beetles is to cover the roses with a protective netting, which is often not practical. You can spray your roses with Sevin, which will control Japanese beetles for a few days. Then you will have to treat again. Another spray that you can use is dimethoate, which is sold as Cygon, Defend and Rebutate. (R.L. Robertson, extension entomologist)

Q. What causes blossom-end rot on tomatoes, and what can I do about it? (H.S. Troy)

A. Blossom-end rot is caused by a lack of calcium in the fruit. The best way to learn how to prevent this problem is to call Teletip, the statewide, toll-free answering service of the Agricultural Extension Service. The number to dial is 1-800-662-7301. Ask to hear message 2886. Teletip has quick answers to hundreds of questions. Ask your county extension office or the Teletip operator to send you a list of the messages. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. What causes apples to fall off when they get about an inch in diameter? (Y.W., Chapel Hill)

A. Improper pollination, excess load of fruit, winter damage, mechanical damage, water stress, wind and pests will all cause apples to drop. Pests in this case might include insects, diseases, squirrels and birds. A properly pollinated apple will have 10 seeds. You might cut some of your fallen fruit to see if they have a lower seed count.

A. — Anywhere from 15 to 25 years, depending on a number of factors, including weather conditions and the weight and quality of the shingles. Discuss this with your roofer, especially determining the guarantees or warranties offered by the manufacturer. In deciding on which type of shingles to use, remember that the labor cost of application is usually the same whether the life expectancy is 15 years or 25 years.

CLOUD CHAIR

Judy Kensley McKie, an artist from Boston, put it very simply: "I needed a chair."

When she made her first chair 10 years ago, Ms. McKie found the experience so satisfying that she readily found reasons to create more furniture for herself.

Eventually, friends and acquaintances began asking for custom-made pieces.

Today, Judy Kensley McKie maintains a studio and builds furniture to order.

She and other exhibitors who earn their living by their craft find a growing public for one-of-a-kind pieces that may qualify as the heirlooms of the future.

zle will help to remove the herbicide. The addition of a general cleaning agent will help. But to be on the safe side, I would suggest that you have one sprayer for herbicides and another for insecticides and fungicides. (Bill Lewis, extension agronomist)

Q. Please tell me how to kill poison ivy. I have a great deal of it and it needs to be sprayed. (Mrs. J.D., Greenville)

A. Amitrol or 2,4-D will control poison ivy. Follow label directions. Spray to wet the foliage and keep off desired plants. A second treatment six weeks after the first one may be required. Or you may have to spray again next year to finish killing the poison ivy. (Bill Lewis, extension agronomist)

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

While kitchen cabinets these days are made of a variety of materials, including those faced with laminated plastic, many home owners still prefer wood surfaces, believing, quite properly, that they impart a kind of warmth to the room.

It must be admitted, though, that wood is a bit more difficult to maintain than plastic in an area which is continually subjected to grease and grime. Constant attention to the finished surfaces is necessary, not only because of the dirt that settles on the doors and frames of the cabinets, but because everything in a kitchen is handled more than in other rooms. That's why there are usually signs of wear and tear around the door handles of the cabinets.

The door-handle area can sometimes be made to look new again with a little cleaning, a little retouching and a little wax. Speaking of wax, it must be thoroughly removed before any attempt is made to match the marred portion with the surrounding surface. And, of course, that is also true if you decide to refinish the entire cabinet, no matter what type of finishing material you plan to use.

Should the old finish be removed entirely if the cabinet is to be redone? Not if the old finish is in reasonably good condition. Sometimes, you will find that all the cabinet needs is a thorough cleaning. Since the wood should be cleaned whether or not a new finishing material will be applied, you can make the decision after the cleaning procedure. The first step is to take off the old wax. Use a commercial remover, although turpentine or mineral spirits may be used if desired. Whatever you use, it's always wise to provide plenty of ventilation in the room. If some dirt still remains on the wood surface after the removal of the wax, wipe it with a soft clean cloth that has been soaked in lukewarm water and a mild soap mixture. Dry the wood at once, section by section, rather than waiting until you complete the entire cabinet.

Remember that a new finish, whatever it is, will not adhere properly to a glossy surface. Therefore, all glossy areas must be given a light sanding. An alternative is to use one of the liquid products made especially to eliminate the sanding chore, after which the final finishing material can be applied.

If the old finish is lacquer, you can apply almost any finish over it except a penetrating material, which can be used only on raw wood. But don't apply lacquer over varnish or over anything else but lacquer; otherwise it may damage the old finish. There is a wide choice of finishing materials for your cabinets, including regular varnish, shellac, epoxy or one of the many plastics available these days. It will be easier to wipe the cabinets clean in the months and years ahead if wax is applied to them after the new finish is thoroughly dry.

Story-Teller Turns On Young Audience

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — He's big and bearded, he bounces on his feet, his eyes are large and bright, his hands flow around his body as he talks.

He makes his living telling stories to kids.

Schools and libraries pay Bob Gasch, in his late 20s, to do a stocking cap or a long robe and become Paul Bunyan, Elmer the Enormous Elf, the Wizard of the Great Wish Machine or any other number of characters.

Gasch says he sees storytelling as an entertaining way to get information across to kids, and keys much of his material to further reading, doing characters that kids can read more about in story books.

He also hopes his stories get children's imaginations going. "If you can start visualizing things in your mind, it stirs up creativity, whether it's problem-solving or artistic," Gasch said.

Gasch says children have to be warmed up a bit to visualize the stories he tells. "They have not lost the ability, they just can't do it as easily," he said. Television, which does the

Q. — For many years, I have been suspending new paint brushes in raw linseed oil for 24 hours before using them. Now I have been told that this is completely unnecessary. Which is correct?

A. — Suspending a new brush in linseed oil is not necessary if it is made of nylon.

Q. — I have just moved into a new house. The front of it is brick. Can I avoid moisture getting into the joints by applying some finish which will not change the color of the bricks?

A. — Yes. Use one of the colorless silicone water repellents. If the brickwork was done properly, you should not have to worry about water getting into the joints for many years. It may be a wise precaution, however. Some types of brick are more porous than others, although here again, there should be no reason to worry about that for years.

Q. — A neighbor of mine pours coffee grounds down the drain of her kitchen sink. I use instant coffee nearly always and seldom have grounds, but my husband says not to follow the practice of the neighbor. He says they can get stuck in the drain. Is he right?

A. — Yes. If there is any accumulation of hardened grease in the pipe, the grounds stick in it and make the situation worse. There used to be a theory that coffee grounds helped to keep the pipe clean, but that has been pretty much disproved.

Q. — I am having a new roof of asphalt shingles put on. How long should they be expected to last?

Homosexual 'Revolt' Had Far Reaching Impact

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer

One of the more volatile and emotional social movements in the nation's history emerged on a summer night 10 years ago at a ramshackle bar in New York City's Greenwich Village.

At 3 a.m. on June 28, 1969, police raided the Stonewall Inn, investigating alleged liquor violations. Until then, raids regarded as routine harassment of bars catering to homosexuals had met only token opposition.

Within minutes, however, more than 400 people had gathered in nearby Sheridan Square and a riot erupted. More disturbances followed the next night.

A minority shrouded in mystery, fear, self-deprecation and widespread loathing decided it had had enough. It was the Lexington of the homosexual rights movement, a gathering of forces and the beginning of a tumultuous march.

They persuaded two-fifths of the states to drop laws prohibiting homosexual conduct between consenting adults, won ordinances banning discrimination against them in housing and employment in more than 40 cities, garnered protection from the federal Civil Service Commission and challenged the military's ban on homosexuals.

Central figures in stormy public debates, they also met resistance and defeat. Four cities repealed gay rights ordinances. Legislation barring them from certain occupations such as teaching went on the books. Oklahoma is the latest to adopt such a law.

Nobody knows for sure how many Americans are homosexual, but Alfred Kinsey's Institute for Sex Research estimates as many as 20 million.

Pollster George Gallup, in a 1977 survey, found that 66 percent of the people questioned believed homosexuality was more widespread today than 25 years ago.

"Not necessarily true," contends John de Cecco, director of the Center for Homosexual Education, Evaluation and Research at San Francisco State University. "People in general are more open about sexuality now. A heck of a lot of gays are out and visible and people are talking about it."

City councils, legislatures, courts and the voters have struggled — often with baffling results — with the question of gays' rights.

Detroit and Tucson, Ariz., for example, have ordinances prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals in housing or employment. But Michigan and Arizona state laws forbid homosexual acts between consenting adults in private.

Boulder, Colo., voters repealed that city's gay-rights ordinance in 1974, drawing little attention. Miami, however, repealed a similar ordinance three years later in a tidal wave of emotion and world headlines.

St. Paul, Minn.; Wichita, Kan., and Eugene, Ore., quickly followed suit, and gay activists, fearing a backlash, staged voter registration drives and created speakers' bureaus.

The tide shifted a bit in November 1978 when Seattle voters became the first in the nation to refuse to repeal a gay-rights law. On the same day, California voters trounced an initiative requiring the firing of homosexual public-school teachers.

Before 1969, homosexual practice was legal in only a handful of states. Today, 19 have decriminalized private sexual conduct between consenting adults.

"The priority matter for the whole movement is to have laws prohibiting private, consensual sex acts declared unconstitutional," says Donald Knutson, professor of law at the University of Southern California.

Court battles have drawn mixed results. The Supreme Court ruled 5-4 in the mid-'60s that homosexual aliens could be deported because of their sexual orientation. But since then, the high court has declined to consider any gay-rights cases, leaving lower courts without definitive guidelines.

Legal ambiguities reflect the temper of the past decade, which has been sometimes hostile, sometimes conciliatory, sometimes confusingly mixed. The one question hovering over the debate: Why do homosexuals feel the need to reveal that most personal aspect of their lives?

The late Dr. Howard Brown, former New York City health commissioner, said he came out "to help free the generation that comes after us from the dreadful agony of secrecy."

In his book, "Familiar Faces, Hidden Lives," Brown recalled: "Homosexuals were mysterious, evil people, to be avoided at all costs. And I was one. Often, when I thought of this, I would break out in a cold sweat. I couldn't be. I shoved the idea aside. When it cropped up, I thought: I must be the only homosexual in northern Ohio. It took me five years to discover that I wasn't."

In 1973, the American Psychiatric Association stepped into the controversy, striking homosexuality from its list of mental disorders. The APA said that "homosexuality per se implies no impairment in judgment, stability, reliability or general social or vocational capabilities."

Some professionals disagreed. Psychoanalyst Herbert Hendin complained in an interview a couple of years ago:

"Anything goes" is a legitimate attitude for consenting adults toward each other, but for a culture to declare it as a credo is to miss entirely the stake all of us have in the harmony between the sexes and in the family as the irreplaceable necessity of society."

The public debate drew the attention of a president.

In an interview with The Associated Press in 1977, President Carter said: "I don't feel that it's a normal relationship. But at the same time, I don't feel that society, through its laws, ought to abuse or harass the homosexual."

Years of political activism, the changing laws, the increasing ranks of avowed homosexuals permeated society.

In 1975, the Civil Service Commission issued guidelines prohibiting discrimination against homosexuals in many federal agencies.

Elaine Noble was elected to two terms in the Massachusetts Legislature while openly lesbian. Allen Spear once served in the Minnesota senate. Mayors of some large cities have openly gay staff assistants.

Despite the gains after Stonewall, activists feel that the full acceptance they seek is still remote.

"We are at a crucial time for gay rights," says San Francisco Supervisor Harry Britt. "The past 10 years have given us the stage, so to speak. People know we are here now."

"There will either be a serious re-evaluation of sex roles or a terrible backlash against us. If we don't play it right, we may all end up in jail."

'Diana' Back On The Mall

NEW YORK (AP) — The city has a new but once-controversial treasure on view this summer, recapturing a page of its history.

As part of its centennial celebration, Madison Square Garden has put on display in its Mall a 13-foot-high bronze duplicate of the statue of Diana that used to grace the tower of a former Madison Square Garden.

A nude, Diana caused considerable controversy when she first appeared in 1893. One publication of the time, the New York Mercury, complained that because of Diana, "elderly gentlemen, Delmonico agents, Casino Johnnies and every other variety of local dude linger in listless idleness."

But the city came to love the statue, the work of sculptor Augustus Saint-Gaudens.

By the time it was sent in 1932 to the Museum of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, where the original still remains, the New York World lamented:

"Diana is going into exile."

But she's in exile no longer. The statue on view now was loaned by Peter White, Stanford White's grandson.

The Garden is having its own statue made, and when it is finished White's will be returned and the new statue installed as a permanent part of Madison Square Garden.

NEW YORK (AP) — A Jesuit theologian, the Rev. Kenneth Baker, editor of Homiletic & Pastoral Review, has urged Roman Catholic bishops to crack down on, even excommunicate when necessary, dissident theologians who openly teach opinions contrary to church doctrine. In an editorial, he blames them for much present confusion among Catholic laity.

Amnesty International Helped Some

By TODD R. EASTHAM
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — On Oct. 7, 1977, Epifanio Mendez Fleitas and his son Epifanio went to a police station near their home in Buenos Aires, Argentina, to fill out some papers.

They were arrested, held incommunicado without charges and later charged with associating with the People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) and the Partido Revolucionario de Trabajadores, a Paraguayan workers alliance.

Mendez Fleitas, now 62, is president of an exiled liberal Paraguayan political party. A former chief of police of the Paraguayan capital and president of the National Bank of Paraguay, he is a political opponent of the current regime but has no known affiliation with ERP or the Trabajadores. He has been in exile from Paraguay since 1956.

About three weeks after their arrest, they were moved from Buenos Aires to a prison in the Province of Chaco, which borders Paraguay.

Then Amnesty International, alerted by the victims' family, stepped in. On October 20, several hundred copies of a statement detailing the arrests were mailed to members of Amnesty's "Urgent Action" network around the world.

The flyer warned of Mendez Fleitas' impending transfer to Chaco, and stated, "A.I. fears that they may be mistreated en route and possibly handed over to Paraguayan authorities once in Chaco."

Within days, Gen. Jorge Rafael Videla, president of Argentina, and General Carlos Suarez Masson, commander of the army unit holding Mendez Fleitas, received several hundred letters and telegrams from all over the world.

On Nov. 15, Mendez Fleitas and his son were released, unharmed. They returned to Buenos Aires and made arrangements to leave the country. Mendez Fleitas now lives in New York.

The incident illustrates the influence which Amnesty — an apolitical, multinational organization working for the release of political prisoners and the eradication of torture and other forms of unjust treatment — has come to wield in South America and other parts of the world. Amnesty International works principally through sponsorship of groups which in turn work for the release and humane treatment of "prisoners of conscience" — individuals convicted of political crimes who do not advocate the use of violence.

In cases like Mendez Fleitas', where time is short, Amnesty initiates diplomatic missions, or, as in this case, launches an intensive letter-writing campaign.

Mendez Fleitas' daughter, Teresa Faith, who lives in Mountain View, Calif., and is a Stanford University lecturer, was asked if Amnesty and other human rights organizations had influenced Argentine officials in her father's case.

"It had to," she said. "This had to have a big impact on public opinion (in Argentina). Everyone knows this is a neutral organization, with no political ideology. That type of organization has a big effect on any government."

Fernando Flores, minister of economics in the deposed Allende regime in Chile, spent two years in prison following the September 1973 right-wing coup. He now lives near San Jose, Calif.

"For my release the efforts of Amnesty International in San Francisco and of Stanford University were very important," he said. "They put out the word, and they worked very hard to get my freedom."

"They (A.I. and other human rights organizations) can provide not only moral support, which is very important, but when you disappear, I believe that also in many regimes they save your life."

The U.S. Urgent Action network is about 4,200 strong — as large as A.I.'s 40 overseas networks combined. About 3,000 are A.I. members, and 1,200 are professional volunteers comprised mainly of lawyers, doctors, academics, journalists, unionists and representatives of women's groups.

The latter make up several smaller networks which respond selectively to cases involving fellow lawyers, doctors, journalists and other professionals. Pleas from professionals, it is reasoned, carry more weight than letters from non-professionals.

Most of the cases come to A.I. through church groups, community and professional groups and political organizations which monitor conditions in their country and report abuses. Some, as in the case of Epifanio Mendez Fleitas, come from private individuals.

If time allows, A.I.'s research department in London attempts to first verify the reports through alternate sources. Urgent Action appeals are telexed to A.I. offices for distribution to network members.

Each member is asked to send a series of letters and telegrams urging the authorities "to provide legal safeguards and ensure the physical integrity" of individuals in need of assistance.

How effective is this network? A followup study of the 215 cases involving nearly 400 individuals taken up through the network in 1977 showed "in nearly half the cases, the situation of the individuals improved. In several of these cases, there is strong indication that the improvement was directly connected with international action."

The report showed that one out of every five subjects was released outright. For another 20 percent, "the situation improved": torture stopped, visits allowed, arrests acknowledged by authorities, medical treatment administered, missing persons located or death sentences commuted.

In 17 percent "new information showed little or no change," but in only 8 percent did conditions seem to worsen after network action. In the remaining 27 percent no new information was available.

However, the network's track record in the Soviet Union and communist bloc countries is not as good. Many appeals directed to Russia or Eastern Europe specify that the writer make no reference to A.I. or the Urgent Action network. It seems the Soviets do not take kindly to meddling by human rights organizations.

"The psychological impact of A.I. in third world countries is greater than it is for the communists," says Scott Harrison, U.S. coordinator of the Urgent Action network. "The name carries more weight in poorer countries, which tend to be more responsive to international opinion."

Millions Eat Cold Meals

ROME (AP) — Millions of families in the rural areas of Asia and Africa are now eating most of their meals cold, according to experts of the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization.

The reason is a mounting shortage of wood, which is the basic fuel for both cooking and heating in most of the developing countries, even in the cities.

The problem is most often encountered in agricultural areas where the population is growing and small patches of woodland are the only source of fuel. Wood collectors have often reduced tree cover to less than 1 percent of total land area.

The use of alternative fuels is usually too costly for most of the rural poor. In parts of Asia where the wood supply is exhausted as much as 10 percent of the small family incomes may be spent on charcoal.

In an attempt to meet the growing wood-fuel shortage, the Republic of Korea has prohibited the sale of firewood in urban areas. Kerosene and soft coal are subsidized in India where home stoves have been developed which greatly increase combustion efficiency.

The only long-term solution, says the FAO, is planting more trees. The development plans of many African and Asian countries include village-level woodlots as well as major reforestation projects.

Fossil Bones Tell Much To Today's Anthropologist

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer

Tim White, a 20th-century anthropologist, holds up the first finger joint of a creature that lived in Africa more than 3 million years ago.

Beside it, for comparison, he holds the same kind of finger bone from a modern man.

"You want to know how much this is like a human hand? It's a lot like a human hand," says White, talking to reporters in a basement laboratory of the Cleveland Museum of Natural History.

The human bone is larger, browner and more porous than the shiny gray and gold fossil. But in shape and proportion, the two are almost identical.

It is graphic demonstration of a point that White has been trying to make all morning. He and a colleague, Don Johanson, maintain that the fossil finger comes from a distant ancestor of man — a creature ancestral to everyone who walks the Earth today.

White made the comparison of bones moments after he and Johanson announced their theory at a news conference in January.

They announced identification of a new species of early man, a creature they named Australopithecus afarensis, or the Afar ape man.

This creature lived in the African grasslands 3 million to 4 million years ago. It stood 4 feet to 5 feet tall, weighed about 50 pounds, had human-like hands, an upright gait and a brain slightly larger than a chimpanzee's.

Naming the new species was an audacious move for the two paleoanthropologists.

No one had tried it since the late eminent Louis Leakey named the species Homo habilis in 1964. And the new classification was known to be opposed by Richard and Mary Leakey, son and wife of Louis Leakey and respected scientists in their own rights.

But Johanson, 36-year-old curator of physical anthropology at the Cleveland museum, and White, 28, an assistant professor at Berkeley, had an important factor in their favor.

Many earlier species had been named on the basis of an isolated skull, a few jaw fragments or a handful of teeth.

But this new species was based on the study of literally hundreds of fossil bones and bone fragments, part of an explosion of new evidence about the distant human past that has come from east Africa in the last decade.

Some of the fossils were found by an expedition co-led by Johanson in the Afar region of Ethiopia.

Others came from Mary Leakey's expedition at Laetoli in Tanzania, an expedition assisted by White. Still others were from Richard Leakey's camp beside Lake Turkana in Kenya.

Together, the fossils push the detailed record of human origins back 1.5 million years to almost 4 million years ago.

They also raise a crop of thorny new questions about why people began walking upright, handling tools and organizing themselves into social groups that eventually became nations.

The source of these new fossils is the Great Rift Valley, a geological fault running the length of east Africa that makes ideal ground for fossil hunting.

The age of the fossils cannot be measured directly by radiologic dating because they are too old. But scientists can date some of the volcanic sediment layers that lace the Rift Valley.

The bones are cleaned, preserved and painstakingly reassembled. Then comes the difficult work — interpreting them.

Nevertheless, the bones tell some things. The steep angle at which the Afar creature's thigh joins his hip suggests he strode upright.

A recent remarkable find confirmed the upright walking. Mary Leakey located fossilized footprints more than 3.6 million years old.

These discoveries upset the theory that man's ancestors began walking on two feet to free their hands for tools. The oldest stone tools date back only 2.5 million years.

But what about intelligence? The Afar creatures had brains about 480 cubic centimeters in volume. That's bigger than a chimpanzee's but smaller than a gorilla's. The human brain averages 1,200 cc.

Johanson and White believe the Afar creatures were smarter than modern apes.

But that view is open to challenge. The earliest example of real brain growth doesn't come until a million years later.

Nonetheless, one Columbia University anthropologist says the Afar creatures may have been smarter than their small brains suggest.

Ralph Holloway has studied the relative proportions of ancient primate brains through rubbery "endocasts" of the inside of skulls. He detects changes in areas controlling vision and associative powers.

"Provisionally, that means the brain — not its size but its patterning — is very clearly hominit (meaning ancestral to man)," he said in a recent interview.

Could it have been the pressure of social relationships that made humans smarter? One current theory says so.

According to this theory, females were burdened with children who required ever longer periods of growth and instruction. To compensate, males and females divided the labor, with males scavenging for meat while the females gathered fruits and tubers.

Many primitive tribes show a similar organization today. And Don Johanson thinks there's evidence that the Afar creatures lived in small tribe-like units.

His expedition found the bones of about a dozen adults and children clustered together in one spot. Johanson believes they were killed in a single catastrophe, perhaps a flash flood.

"It should be possible in the next decade to look back 12 million years and understand pretty well where we came from," Richard Leakey says.

"I believe we will see we are as much an accident of history as the many creatures here with us today and the many others now extinct."

MINERAL EXPORTS

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Argentina earned $33.7 million from its mineral exports in 1978, an all-time high.

The record, a 63 percent rise over 1977 earnings, was based on exports of 108,141 tons, the mining secretariat says.

Principal exports were lead, tin, silver and uranium.

Senior Purchase Power Conference Scheduled

Plan Homecoming At Kennedy Home

ECU News Bureau
"Senior Purchase Power," a two-day conference for professionals and retired professionals interested in consumer education for older adults, has been set for East Carolina University Sept. 6-7.

The conference is funded by a grant from the Office of Consumers' Education and is one of several similar programs offered throughout the nation.

ECU's conference, expected to draw participants from the Carolinas and Virginia, will include sessions on effective local consumer education projects, funding for future programs, interagency cooperation and specific consumer problems of older persons.

Directing conference sessions will be staff trainers from the New York State Legislative Institute, Baruch College, City

Watch Survived Scene Of Fire

BLOOMINGTON, Ill. (AP) — During a fire at a produce store a couple of months ago, Bloomington assistant fire chief Gene Ploense lost his digital wristwatch.

It was found at the scene recently.
"I didn't think I'd ever see that thing again," Ploense said. He said he didn't know how the watch had survived the intense heat.

University of New York and local resource persons who have working knowledge of the concerns of senior citizens.

ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer will welcome the group, and John Matthis of the Consumer Protection Division of the N.C. Attorney General's Office will be dinner speaker.

The conference is sponsored by the ECU School of Home Economics and the ECU Division of Continuing Education.

Further information is available from Dr. Vila Rosenfeld, conference coordinator, at the School of Home Economics, or Herman Phelps of the Division of Continuing Education.

KINSTON — Over 100 alumni from all parts of North Carolina and surrounding states are expected to attend the annual Kennedy Home Homecoming, which will be held during the June 30-July 1 weekend on the Kinston campus of the Baptist Children's Homes of North Carolina.

Action will begin Saturday at 1 p.m. with a golf tournament at Falling Creek Golf Course. Registration will be held at the campus office at 2 p.m. for homecoming participants, with the afternoon devoted to recreation, sightseeing, and renewing old acquaintances. Supper will be followed by the film, "A Day in a Child's Life," and the traditional watermelon feast.

Sunday School will be held at 10 a.m. Sunday, with a brief business session for alumni to elect new officers and conduct other business. Morning worship will follow, with the presentation of Golden Alumni Awards to those who entered Kennedy Home at least 50 years ago. Lunch and a bus tour of the campus grounds and Skeeter Hut will round out the weekend events.

Kennedy Home Superintendent Roger E. Williams encourages as many alumni as possible to attend.

Engagement Announced

MISS JANIE WEBSTER PAUL... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Clifton Paul of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Bronson Phillip Matney, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Bronson Matney Jr. of Greenville. The wedding will take place July 28.

Jill Schwemley Is Bride Price-Moore Vows Exchanged

Jill Schwemley and Marvin Haddock were married Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Ralph G. Messick.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Rosemary Fischer, organist, and Ellen Heidenreich, soloist. The soloist sang "Evergreen" and "The Wedding Song" while playing the guitar. Accompanied by the organist she sang "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride's parents are Mr. Robert Schwemley of Santa Clara, Calif., and Mrs. June Schwemley of Greenville.

The church was decorated with two seven branch brass candelabras and greenery. In the center was a basket of white chrysanthemums, white gladioli and white and blue cushion poms. The couple knelt on a brass kneeling bench. The unity candle was lighted by the bridal couple. They presented their mothers with a red rose.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silkened organza over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with an empire waist, a colonial neckline and bishop sleeves. The bodice featured a cameo inset of Brussels lace with Nottingham lace edged with Venise braid accenting the bodice and encircling the waistline. The sheer sleeves and cufflets were enhanced with matching lace. The A-line skirt, which was edged in lace, fell into an attached chapel length train. A satin ribbon, Venise braid and pearl headpiece held the elbow length illusion veil in place. She carried a colonial nosegay of white carnations, white daisies, and yellow gypsophidia tied with a white bow and streamers.

Wendy Martin of Los Angeles, Calif., was honor attendant. She wore a formal length gown of print chiffone of bluebells on blue background over blue taffeta designed with a portrait neckline edged in piping with miniature tie bows at the shoulders. The blouson bodice featured short split sleeves and a self-fabric tie sash that encircled the waistline from which fell the full flared skirt. She carried a nosegay of blue, yellow and white cushion poms with a white bow and streamers.

Bridesmaids included Jean Ann Reelins, Cindy Cox, Carla Paratore, all of Vienna, Va., and Tammy Haddock, cousin of the bridegroom, of Greenville. Their gowns were styled identical to that of the honor attendant in a chiffone print of bluebells in ivory background over ivory taffeta. They carried nosegays of white and blue cushion poms with a blue bow and streamers.

The bridegroom's uncle served as best man and ushers included Scott Schwemley of Vienna, Va. and Greg Schwemley of Greenville, brothers of the bride, Dickie Haddock, cousin of the bridegroom, and Lennie Owens.

The bride's mother wore a formal length gown of blue knit featuring chiffon short caplet sleeves. The aunt of the bridegroom wore a formal length gown of shrimp knit with a shoulder walking length drape. They wore white carnation corsages.

The wedding was directed by

Mrs. Jane Laughinghouse.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents. Debbie Kite presided at the register, Linda Read poured punch and Mrs. Ann Jackson served wedding cake. Julie Jackson passed out rice bags.

A rehearsal dinner was held Friday given by Mr. and Mrs. Dilton Earl Haddock, aunt and uncle of the bridegroom.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Rose High School, is employed as an electrician by East Carolina University. The bride, a graduate of Rose High School, is employed by Greenville Opticians.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will reside in Greenville.

Edith Lynne Price and George Horace Moore Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 8 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony performed in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. James Bailey.

Music was provided by Miss Merle Bullard, organist, Dr. and Mrs. Daniel Mellado, cellist and violinist, and Mr. and Mrs. Dave Faber, vocalists.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. James Patric Price of Roanoke Rapids. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Horace Moore of Snow Hill.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Lyle Hayes of Raleigh was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Phyllis Price of Roanoke Rapids and Mrs. Barbara Price of Garner.

George Horace Moore, the bridegroom's father, served as best man and ushers included Patric Price of Garner, Dr. Paul Hayes of Raleigh and Phil Burton of Greenville.

The bride wore an ivory formal length gown with a Queen Anne neckline and a bodice of alencon lace. The sheer sleeves were appliqued and cuffed with alencon lace, which also bordered the sheer flounce of the organza skirt.

She wore a silk rose accented by stephanotis in her hair and carried a bouquet of white mums, white carnations and red roses.

The attendants wore light turquoise gowns with long flowing qiana skirts. The open weave knit bodice had a scoop spring flowers were carried by each of the attendants.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church parlor. Music was provided by the cellist and violinist, Dr. and Mrs. Mellado and Merle Bullard played the piano.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., the couple plans to live in Greenville.

The bridegroom, a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is currently in his third year in medical school at East Carolina University. The bride, a graduate of Appalachian State University, is a music teacher with the Wake County Schools.

The rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. George Horace Moore Sr. and included a pig pickin' and swim party.

Couple Weds Saturday

AYDEN — Miss Robin Braxton and Dr. Zeno Lester Edwards III exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 8 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony in the Ayden United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Travis Owen performed the double ring ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Andrea Norris, organist, and Miss Cindy Berry of Roxboro, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Braxton of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Zeno L. Edwards Jr. of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk organza with Nottingham and Venise lace over peau de soie. The dress was designed with a high neckline encircled by a band of Venise lace, empire waistline and Victorian sleeves. Seed pearls accented the bodice and the A-line skirt was appliqued with lace medallions and seed pearls and extended into a full chapel train. A band of lace encircled the hemline. Her cathedral length mantilla was of ivory silk illusion encircled in a band of Venise lace and attached to a lace Camelot hat. The bride carried a cascade of yellow and white sweetheart roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and fern.

Deborah Kittrell of Raleigh was her sister's honor attendant. She wore a coral formal gown and carried a bridal circlet of white daisies, shrimp pom poms and baby's breath with satin ribbon. Bridesmaids included Karen Chalk of Hickory, niece of the bride, Teresa Edwards, sister of the bridegroom of Charlotte, Cathy Gipson of Greensboro, Terri Allen of Cary, Polly Piland of Greenville and Patti Midgette of Chapel Hill. They were dressed identical to the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Wilson and Seth Edwards, brothers of the bridegroom of Washington, Greg Chalk, nephew of the bride of Hickory, Wes Minton, cousin of the bridegroom of Raleigh, Allan Levine of Trenton, N. J., Dr. David Mourhan of Chapel Hill, Felix Miller of High Point and Guy Stowe of Washington. Jeffrey and Jonathan Joyner, nephews of the bride, were acolyte and ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of shrimp chiffon and giana with a sheer matching capelet. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of mauve chiffon fashioned with a tulip skirt. Both wore white orchids.

The bride attended Technical Institute of Alamance School of Dental Assisting and was employed at the School of Denistry, UNC-CH. The bridegroom graduated from Duke University and was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity. He received a D.D.S. degree from UNC School of Denistry and was a member of Psi Omega Dental Fraternity.

Following the ceremony, the bride's family entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall. After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will live in Washington, where he will practice general denistry.

The bride couple, wedding party members, out-of-town guests and relatives were entertained by Dr. and Mrs. William Kidd and Mr. and Mrs. William Mayo at a garden party. A formal candlelight after-rehearsal dinner was held at the Washington Yacht and Country Club given by the parents of the bridegroom. Friends of the couple honored the couple at a dance at the country club. Music was presented by Gary Warren's Five Degrees South. All were held Friday evening.

A wedding day luncheon was given by Mrs. Zeno Edwards, grandmother of the bridegroom, and his aunts and uncles, Mr. and Mrs. English DesChamps III and Dr. and Mrs. Leo Wilson at the Washington Yacht and Country Club.

Mrs. R. W. Chalk and Mrs. J. H. Joyner honored the bride-elect at a bridesmaids luncheon at the Ramada Inn Friday. Mrs. Jim Abernathy and Miss Joan Abernathy were hostesses at a dessert party honoring the bride-elect Friday afternoon.

Double Ring Vows Unite Couple

Debra L. Zuern and Willie Daniel Kornegay III were united in marriage Saturday at 3:30 p.m. in the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church here.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. James Bailey.

The music was provided by Mickey Terry, organist.

The bride's parents are Lt. Col. (USMC ret.) and Mrs. Robert L. Zuern of Albany, Ga. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Kornegay, Jr. of Mt. Olive.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Rachel Noble of Winterville was the honor attendant.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included Carl Bailey of Ayden, Glenn Zuern of Albany, Ga., brother of the bride, and Nick Scandale of Goldsboro.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white knit over white peau de soie designed with a modified Queen Anne neckline outlined in white silk floral Venise lace. The blouson bodice was trimmed with Venise lace, with the short sheer cap sleeves overlaid in matching lace. The waistline was encircled with a rolled tie sash from which fell the flared skirt that extended to an attached chapel length train. Both the skirt and train were edged at the hemline with the floral silk Venise lace.

She wore an imported braid garden hat with an overlay of sheer organza encircled with silk floral Venise lace and braided organza tubing finished in back with bows of tubing and streamers. Silk lace appliques were featured on the hat brim. She carried a cascading bouquet of daisies and blue silk forget-me-nots. The arrangement was entwined with ivy.

The honor attendant wore a formal length gown of citron trilobal designed with an open scoop neckline edged in piping. The blouson bodice featured gathered cap sleeves. The waistline was encircled with a rolled tie sash from which fell the full flared skirt. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and white pom poms.

A reception was held in the church parlor immediately following the ceremony.

A rehearsal dinner given by the parents of the bridegroom was held Friday at the Holiday Inn. Members of the wedding party and family attended.

After a trip to the mountains, the couple will live in Washington.

The bride is a graduate of Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University.

Candlelight Vows Spoken Saturday

BURLINGTON — Cheryl Ann Massey and Bobby Ray Harris Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 8 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony performed in the First Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. James Ballard of Burlington.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Pleasant, organist, and Barry Carroll, soloist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Mack Massey of Burlington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Ray Harris Sr. of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory sheer organza and Venise lace over peau de soie. The dress was designed with a Queen Anne neckline, capelet sleeves, natural waistline and an A-line skirt flowing to a full chapel train. The neckline was outlined with Venise lace. A capelet effect outlined the neckline and extending down the back of the bodice was edged in lace with scattered lace appliques. Floral designs of lace embroidered in pearls were applied on the bodice and encircled the waistline. The skirt had a wide ruffle flounce with lace at the top encircling the hemline. Appliques of Venise lace were scattered over the skirt. She wore a cathedral length mantilla of ivory imported French silk illusion encircled in a floral band of lace and attached to a lace Camelot hat. She carried a cascade of orchids, miniature roses, carnations and ivy leaves.

Sandra Smith of Burlington, sister of the bride, was matron of honor while Susan Oakley of Burlington was maid of honor.

Bridesmaids included Debbie Paden of Denver, Col., Susan Sabol of Alexandria, Va., and Anita Aman of Raleigh. Tammy Harris, of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, was the junior bridesmaid.

The attendants wore formal gowns of light blue polyester with a scoop neckline, butterfly sleeves, fitted waistline and full pleated skirt.

Bobby Ray Harris, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Gordon Smith of Burlington, brother-in-law of the bride, Jimmy Harris and Floydie Harris, brothers of the bridegroom of Greenville, Randall Nelson, cousin of the bridegroom, and Herbert Smith both of Greenville. Sam Pulley of Burlington, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

The mother of the bride wore a green formal gown and wore a white orchid corsage. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of apricot and wore a white orchid corsage.

Mrs. John Youngblood, Mrs. Lelia Massey, grandmothers of the bride, and Mrs. Mary Jones and Mrs. Floydie Harris, grandmothers of the bridegroom, were presented carnation corsages.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Assisting were Mrs. William Keasler, Mrs. Doris Massey, Mrs. Greg Pulley, Mrs. Edward Youngblood, and Mrs. Raymond Massey. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Lee Youngblood.

After a wedding trip, the couple plans to live in Raleigh.

The bridegroom attended North Carolina State University and the bride is a graduate of Meredith College in Raleigh.

Even with research rats running interference for me, I don't know exactly when I'm going to die.

But I do know how. I'm going to die of boredom.

If they aren't discovering that kissing causes chipped fingernails and peanut butter brings on embarrassing itching, they're putting a curse on my pizza and the volume on my car radio.

I can't enjoy anything anymore. In fact, I'm downright paranoid.

I go around feeling cans to see if they're bent, spitting on my finger to lick stamps, holding my breath around smokers, boiling my water and avoiding X-ray machines at the airport (my luggage doesn't look too good and I'm suspicious).

Lord knows I've tried to please everyone.

A few years ago when they put the finger on cigarettes, I quit smoking and turned to music for entertainment.

Someone said, "Cooped up in here all day listening to all those decibels will make you deaf."

I went to the beach.

Someone said, "The water is polluted and the sun will cause skin cancer."

I decided to stay indoors and eat.

Someone said, "Tuna, fried foods, sugar, cereal products, meat and eggs are bad for you. You should have a check-up."

I went to the hospital for a

Miss Manning, Mr. Edwards Wed

BETHEL—Miss Bonita Lynn Manning and Raymond Wardell Edwards were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Bethel Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Earl Manning of Rt. 2, Robersonville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy T. Stewart of Greenville and the late Mr. Lennie Wardell Edwards.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Norman Joyner. A program of nuptial music was presented by Susan Byers, organist. Soloists included Steve Reel, who sang "The Wedding Song" and "More." He also played the guitar. Katherine Sauls sang "It Seems I've Always Loved You" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The couple lighted the unity candle.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped clipped chantilly lace beaded with clusters of pearls. The empire bodice was overlapped in imported French chantilly that extended over the waistline encircled with white satin ribbon finished with a double Dior bow with back streamers. The long fitted lace sleeves were trimmed at the wrist with a ruffle of embroidered schiffli lace. Schiffli and clipped chantilly lace enhanced the chapel length train and modified A-line skirt. Lace appliques were scattered over the skirt front.

She wore a walking length mantilla bordered in imported French scalloped chantilly lace with a pearl beaded motif. The bride wore a string of pearls that belonged to the bridegroom's mother. She carried a cascade consisting of a cymbidium, daisies, rosebuds and stephanotis with a lift-out corsage.

The matron of honor was Debra Perkinson of Oxford, sister of the bride, who wore a formal length gown of petal pink polyester designed with a high sheared collar. The blouse bodice was enhanced with short slit sleeves and a self-fabric tie belt encircled the natural waistline with an accordion pleated skirt. She carried a colonial nosegay of white miniature carnations, pink rosebuds accented with baby's breath and white streamers.

Maid of honor was Linda Manning and bridesmaids included Ellen Heath, cousin of the bride and bridegroom, and Mrs. Rita Andrews, both of Greenville, and Mrs. Kay Holland of Windsor. They wore dresses identical to the honor attendant and each carried a colonial nosegay of white and pink daisies accented with baby's breath and white streamers.

Robert E. Stewart of Greenville, stepfather of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers included Robert L. Edwards of Winston-Salem, brother of the bridegroom, Sherill M. Bryant of Virginia Beach, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Thomas P. Perkinson of Oxford, brother-in-law of the bride, and James W. Clark III of Greenville. Junior ushers included Robert L. Edwards and Hugh W. Bryant, nephews of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore an aqua formal gown of chiffon with long sleeves and a white orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother selected a flowered formal gown of qiana with a sheer candlelight overblouse. A white orchid was pinned to her handbag. Mrs. Hilda Manning and Mrs. Leota Tyson, grandmothers of the couple, were given corsages of white carnations.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Corinne Heath, cousin of the bride.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and graduated from ECU. She is employed by North State Savings and Loan Corp. The bridegroom attended Greenville City Schools and graduated from UNC-CH. He is a partner of Edwards and Clark, CPA. The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to St. John, Virgin Islands.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Bethel Rotary Club. Mr. and Mrs. James Dupree greeted guests and Dotie and Susan Bryant assisted during the reception. Mrs. Charlotte Hale poured punch and Mrs. Dessie Braxton, aunt of the bride, served the four tiered wedding cake.

Rice bags were distributed by Jon and Whit Edwards.

Members of the wedding party were entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner Friday night at the Greenville Country Club given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. Sherill M. Bryant.

Following dinner, a dance was given at the club by relatives and friends of the bride. Music was provided by The Silent Majority.

Say Vows In Saturday Ceremony

Lillian Gail Case and Reese Frederick Hendricks were united in marriage Saturday at 6 p.m. in Speight's Methodist Chapel, Whitakers.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Harold Pickett.

Music was provided by Mrs. Johnny Gray Everett of Robersonville, pianist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. C. Edgar Case, Jr. of Rt. 1, Fountain. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Albert C. Hendricks of Elm City.

The church was decorated with an arrangement of greenery interspersed with pastel yellow silk roses enhanced by two baskets of greenery accented by a single brass tipped white candle.

The bride was given in marriage by Jerry O. Bailey, her brother-in-law. Her sister, Mrs. Jerry O. Bailey of Rt. 1, Fountain, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Mrs. John Summerlin of Rt. 1, Fountain, sister of the bridegroom, Rachel Leigh Bailey of Rt. 1, Fountain, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid.

John Summerlin of Rt. 1, Fountain, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Johnny Hendricks of Stantonsburg and William Hendricks of Elm City, brothers of the bridegroom.

The flower girl was Shannon Renee Hendricks of Wilson, daughter of the bridegroom. The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight de-lustered satin designed with a street length wrap style tunic which tied in the back over a modified A-line skirt. She carried a bouquet of multicolored summer silk flowers interspersed with angel's lace and greenery, candlelight and tangerine streamers.

The attendants wore formal gowns of canary yellow de-lustered satin designed with a wrap style tunic which tied in the back. They carried a single long-stemmed apricot mum with candlelight and tangerine streamers.

The flower girl's dress was identical to the bride's gown. She carried a wicker basket of mixed summer flowers of angel's lace and greenery.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Punch was served by Mrs. Minnie Rodriguez of Elm City, sister of the bridegroom. Cake was served by Mrs. Fred Coker of Greenville, great aunt of the bride. Mrs. C. E. Case, grandmother of the bride, presided at the guest register.

Friday the cake cutting was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Gifts were presented to the bridal couple and toast of appreciation was made. Thank you gifts were given to the parents of the couple. Punch was served by Mrs. Albert Hendricks. After a wedding trip to Miami, Fla., the couple will live at Rt. 1, Fountain.

The bride, a graduate of Farmville Central High School, is employed by A.C. Monk and Co., Inc., Farmville. The bridegroom, a graduate of Nash Tech, is employed by E&R, Kinston.

A cookout was held at the home of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. C. E. Case Sr., Fountain, Wednesday evening. Guests included members of the bride's immediate family.

Mary Helen Rountree Is Bride

Mary Helen Rountree and Edward Harold Meyer III exchanged wedding vows Saturday at 3 p.m. in St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lawrence Patrick Houston Jr. Music was provided by Mrs. E. Robert Erwin, organist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Horton Rountree of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harold Meyer Jr. of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Dorene Rountree of Greenville, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Mrs. Everett Cameron Jr. of Richlands, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Charles Rountree of Winston-Salem, sister-in-law of the bride.

The bridegroom's father served as best man.

The bride wore an original floor-length white gown of eyelet batiste fashioned by her mother. The V-shaped bodice was princess styled, with an oval neckline and bell sleeves gathered to narrow embroidered cuffs. The slightly gathered skirt was finished with a wide embroidered ruffle, edged with scallops. The princess lines of the bodice and the skirt were accented by appliques of the embroidered motifs from the fabric.

The bride's tiered fingertip veil was of tulle, caught with spring daisies. It was further adorned by white satin streamers with daisies interspersed.

The bride carried a colonial bouquet of silk daffodils, lily-of-the-valley and white daisies, accented with garden greenery and gypsophila.

The bridal attendants were attired in matching floor length gowns of white batiste flocked with yellow and white daisies. The sleeveless dresses featured princess bodices with V-necklines and tiered skirts. They were buttoned from neckline to hem with mother-of-pearl buttons and tied at the waist with a yellow satin ribbon. They wore brimmed natural panama hats with yellow satin streamers falling from a single daisy at the back. They carried clustered bouquets of silk daffodils and white daisies, accented with greenery and tied with matching satin ribbon.

The mother of the bride wore a daffodil street length dress of woven qiana, featuring a shawl collar and buttoned bodice, with long full sleeves gathered to a buttoned cuff.

The bridegroom's mother chose a street length dress of moss green. The sheer gown featured a pleated bodice with a high ruffled neckline and long sleeves gathered to ruffled cuffs.

The mothers and grandmothers of the bride couple and the great aunt of the bride each carried a single long-stemmed white rose.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church Parish Hall. Receiving were Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Wade and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Waldrop. Mrs. A.W. Smith of Farmville, godmother of the bride, cut the wedding cake and was assisted by Priscilla Riddick and Rosalind Walters. Those pouring punch were Mrs. Ralph Lotz of Dayton, Ohio, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. William C. Murray of Farmville, great aunt of the bride. Also Mrs. Joseph Schweiker of Philadelphia and Mrs. Edward H. Meyer of Pompana Beach, Fla., grandmothers of the bridegroom. The reception table was centered with a silver epergne of mixed summer flowers.

A buffet supper following the wedding rehearsal was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at the Cherry Oaks Club House. Guests included the bridal party, family and friends of the bride couple and out-of-town guests.

A wedding breakfast honored the couple on the morning of the wedding was held at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. Hosts included friends and relatives of the bride's family from Farmville and Greenville. Guests included the bridal party and families of the bride and bridegroom and out-of-town guests.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple plans to live in Greenville. The bridegroom is an instructor with the Pitt County Mental Health Center. The bride teaches art in Pitt County Schools. Both are graduates of East Carolina University.

Ushers included Dennis Meyer and Mark Meyer, both of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, Charles Rountree of Winston-Salem, brother of the bride, and Andrew Frith of Greenville.

Everything it endured without damage, she went for. Two days ago she called and said the rat died. "What happened?" I asked. "Got hit by a mousetrap a block from home." "Tell me," I said wearily, "was it wearing lipstick? I have to know."

Barwick-Nobles Vows Solemnized On Saturday

Rhonda Joyce Nobles and William Robert Barwick were united in marriage Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Riverside Christian Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Eugene Purcell.

The music was provided by Billy Kilpatrick, organist, and Mrs. Barbara Wiggins, soloist, who sang "The Wedding Song."

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Angela Nobles of Grifton, sister of the bride, was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Gail Nobles, sister of the bride, Mrs. Mike Foss, and Daphne Roach, all of Grifton.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ray Nobles of Rt. 1, Grifton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lemmie Barwick of Cove City.

The bridegroom's father served as the best man. Ushers included Mike Barrow of Dover, Frank and Jack Kilpatrick of Fort Barnwell.

Patricia Nobles, sister of the bride, of Grifton, was the flower girl while Jerod Willis, nephew of the bridegroom, of Fort Barnwell, was the ring bearer.

The bride wore a white formal length gown of chantilly lace and silk chiffon over taffeta. The empire waistline of lace featured a half standing collar with a deep U-neckline edged in lace scallops. The waistline, also in scallops, was embellished in traces of seed pearls as was the neckline. From the short lace sleeves a full short chiffon sleeve ended in a deep lace cuff from which fell a circle of chiffon. The lace over the skirt formed a part of the built-in cathedral train which also had lace scallops the same as that of the gown. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion fell from a bandeau of lace from which the cathedral train was attached. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, and white pom poms.

The honor attendant wore a formal length gown of nile silesta designed with a portrait neckline edged in piping with miniature tie bows at the shoulders. The blouson bodice also featured short split sleeves. The waistline was accented with a self-fabric tie bow at the side. The full flared skirt was enhanced by a sunburst style of knife pleats. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, pink marguerita daisies, jackfrost pom poms, baby's breath, and lavender statice with a green lace ribbon around the flowers.

The bridesmaids' dresses were the same as the honor attendant's except in a shade of buttercup silesta.

The mother of the bride wore a formal length gown of pale blue with a white orchid corsage. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal length gown of fuchsia with a white orchid corsage.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church. Clara Richards presided at the guest register. Sandy Hartman directed the wedding.

After a trip to Charlotte, the couple will live in Fort Barnwell. The bridegroom, a graduate of West Craven High School, is employed at Cencar Services, Kinston. The bride, a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School, works at Grady-White Boats.

Use Legal Names For Patients

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Do you want to do the hospital volunteers of the world a big favor? Please tell your readers that mail addressed to Buzz Jackson, Skip Jones or Tootsie Brown will probably not be delivered to patients in the hospital.

Nicknames are not recorded on hospital records. The patients are registered under their LEGAL names (first, middle and last). We have no idea who Liz, Red, Corky or Junior are.

Yesterday I looked for an "Al" Johnson and found none. I did find a Henry Alvin Johnson, however. I later learned that the patient always called himself "Al" so he wouldn't be confused with his father who was called Henry.

So, please, Abby, print this. I could cry every time I see a stack of mail that can't be delivered because it is addressed improperly. And wouldn't you know they don't put a return address on the envelope, either!

FRUSTRATED IN PHOENIX

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I'll pass the word. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of six years has just ended his third affair. After the first two, he chose to stay with me, but after this last affair I'm not sure I want to stay with him.

He refuses to tell me whether these affairs included sex, although it seems impossible to imagine that they did not. I need to know!

The fact that he won't tell me bothers me more than whether he had sex with these women. Do I have the right to know?

ROSITA

DEAR ROSITA: If he said he had an "affair" don't press him for the particulars. It's not an "affair" unless it's the whole enchilada.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I married a good natured, loving, honest, beautiful little woman from a foreign country. We have had to contend with a variety of cultural differences, but that never was a problem. However, two unresolved problems persist.

The first is the matter of orderliness—or rather the lack of it. She hasn't the faintest idea what "a place for everything and everything in its place" means. She just puts a thing down anywhere, and when she wants it again she can't find it.

The other problem concerns punctuality. She starts getting ready to go out about the time we're supposed to arrive. We have never been on time for a party. Actually, the two problems are related. One reason she's always late is that she can never find the hairbrush. Can you help me?

OPEN TO SUGGESTIONS

DEAR OPEN: Have you tried to teach her? If not, put everything in its place and stress the importance of returning it there.

As for punctuality, urge her to start getting ready two hours in advance instead of an hour. And if this doesn't help, you've still got a good-natured, loving, beautiful little woman who's hopelessly disorganized and chronically late.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FIFTH GRADER": If I could give a youngster just one piece of advice, it would be read, read, read!

Every public library contains a wealth of information, and it's free for the taking. As much as you want. Discover the history of man, the wonders of science, the beauties of art, the best in literature and the wisdom of the ages. Read for knowledge and pleasure. The person who does not read has no advantage over the person who cannot read.

MRS. LARRY MINTON ROEBUCK

Couple Marries Friday Evening

Brenda Fay Garris and Larry Minton Roebuck were married Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Calvary Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Bobby G. Thomas.

A program of music was provided by Brenda Bland of Greenville, pianist, Pat and Diane Mooring of Farmville, singers. Pat sang "Love Is the Key" and Diane sang "Each for the Other." Both sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. David Lee Garris of Rt. 8 Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Margie M. Roebuck and the late Mr. Oscar Henry Roebuck of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Judy Garris of Greenville, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Donna Garris, sister of the bride, Brenda Bowen of Greenville, Barbara Rogerson of Winterville and Mary Banks of Greenville.

The bridegroom's brother, Bucky Roebuck of Greenville, served as best man. Ushers included Randy Garris of Greenville, brother of the bride, Ronnie Rogerson of Winterville, Timmy Singleton of Snow Hill, and Jeff Baker of Greenville.

Tammy Roebuck of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and Danny Bunting of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

The bride wore a white gown of white satin peau over peau de soie. The V-shaped neckline was trimmed with daisies and white seed pearls. The dress featured an empire waistline and long fitted sleeves trimmed with daisies and seed pearls. She carried a cascade of daisies and baby's breath and springerli fern on a Bible.

The bride's waist length illusion veil was attached to a headpiece of matching daisies and seed pearls.

The honor attendant wore a floor length dress of blue polyester with an empire bodice and lace trim. She carried a bouquet of sweetpeas with a blue bow and streamer.

The bridesmaids wore the same style dresses except in a pink color. They carried a bouquet of sweetpeas with a pink bow and streamer.

The flower girl wore a floor length dress of yellow dotted swiss to match the bridesmaids' dresses. She carried a basket of daisies.

Mrs. Dolores Harris, sister of

Cynthia Lee Avera Is Bride

The marriage of Cynthia Lee Avera and Maylon Edward McDonald Jr. was solemnized Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Oakmont Baptist Church. The candlelight, double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Gordon Conklin.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Cleveland Avera of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. Dr. and Mrs. Maylon Edward McDonald of Greenville are parents of the bridegroom.

Bridal attendants included Shannon Avera of Greenville, sister of the bride, maid of honor and bridesmaids, Dana Avera, sister of the bridegroom, and Teresa Odum, all of Greenville, and Kathy Davis of Fayetteville. Junior bridesmaids were Sonia and Tonia Blackwell of Valdosta, Ga., Mitzi Ann Taylor of Hahira, Ga., Deena Plaire of Valdosta, Ga., all cousins of the bride, and Stephanie Willford of Charlotte.

The ring bearer was Benjamin Britt of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom. The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Jimmy Britt, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Tony Avera, brother of the bride, both of Greenville, Drew Carter of Fayetteville, cousin of the bridegroom, and Gil Connelly of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. Louis Reith of Greenville, organist, and Edith Trotman of Greenville, vocalist. Mrs. Rosalie Trotman directed the ceremony.

The bride chose a full length gown of satin organza fashioned with an empire waist and long bishop sleeves with wide cuffs. The bodice was styled with a Queen Anne neckline. The neckline and cuffs were enhanced with Venice lace. The full skirt with built-in train was edged in lace.

Her long silk illusion mantilla the bridegroom, presided at the guest register.

An after-rehearsal party was held Thursday given by the bride's parents at their home. After the bride and bridegroom cut the first piece of cake, the guests were served punch by Mrs. Jeanette Pierce. The cake was served by Mrs. Betty Thomas.

Following a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bridegroom, a graduate of J.H. Rose High School, is employed by Save-A-Stop. The bride is a graduate of Calvary Christian Academy.

was attached to a Juliet cap of lace. Matching lace edged the chapel length mantilla. The bride carried a nosegay of yellow and white daisies, blue miniature carnations tied with white satin ribbons.

The honor attendant wore a formal length gown of buttercup lustre-glo designed with a round neckline edged in piping with a self-tie bow at center front. The sleeveless blouson bodice was enhanced by a sheer lace yoke of French Nottingham lace edged in scalloped Venice lace. The gown had a full flared skirt.

Bridesmaids wore gowns styled identically to that of the honor attendant in a shade of angel blue lustre-glo. They carried nosegays of mixed summer flowers with satin streamers.

The junior bridesmaids were dressed similar to the bridesmaids in a shade of angel blue lustre-glo. They carried two long-stemmed yellow carnations tied with yellow and white streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of pink silesta chiffon fashioned with a high neckline and shirred bodice. A floor length aqua crepe dress and matching chiffon cape with crocheted lace was worn by the mother of the bridegroom. The mothers wore white miniature carnation corsages. Grandmothers were given white carnation corsages.

The couple will live in Winston-Salem after a wedding trip to New York City.

The bride graduated from ECU with a degree in early childhood education. She taught in the Cumberland County School System. A graduate of Pembroke State University, the bridegroom is assistant manager of Roses, Winston-Salem.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Ramada Inn. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Culbreth, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Winstead, Mrs. Coleen Allen, Ms. Jean Carter, aunt of the bridegroom of Fayetteville, Mrs. Shirley Taylor, Mrs. Mary Blackwell, Mrs. Linda Plaire, aunts of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Ray King.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Three Steers for members of the wedding party, families and out-of-town guests. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Culbreth entertained the bridal couple, friends and out-of-town guests following the dinner.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Friday at noon at the Three Steers given by aunts of the bride, Mrs. Shirley Taylor of Hahira, Ga., Mrs. Linda Plaire and Mrs. Mary Blackwell, both of Valdosta, Ga. The bride presented her attendants with gifts of engraved necklaces.

Miss Frankie Carol Cash Weds Charles Langley

Debutantes Named; Ball Set

Miss Frankie Carol Cash and Charles Dudley Langley were united in marriage at 8 p.m. Saturday in The Salvation Army Citadel. The double ring ceremony was performed by Major Arnold Williford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Cash of Winterville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy S. Langley and the late Mr. Walter R. Langley, also of Winterville.

A program of nuptial music was provided by Eddie Hobgood and Mrs. Angela Langley, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, who rendered "Always and Forever" and "The Wedding Prayer." Also, Eddie and Kathy Hobgood, cousins of the bridegroom, sang "Devoted to You." After the couple exchanged vows, the bridegroom sang "Colour My World."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and re-embroidered chantilly lace etched with seed pearls. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline adorned with lace and etched with seed pearls, bishop sleeves applied with lace and ending with a pleated ruffle over the hand. The full length skirt extended into a chapel train and lace motifs appliqued the skirt. A pleated flounce bordered the hemline and accented the train in an apron effect.

The bride chose a waltz length mantilla bordered with lace and appliqued with lace motifs with an illusion blusher attached to a lace cup etched with seed pearls and bordered with a pleated ruffle for her headpiece.

She carried a prayerbook graced by an orchid, pink sweetheart roses, miniature white carnations and stepanotis and baby's breath.

Sheryl Gardner, sister of the bridegroom, and Juanita Cash, both of Winterville, served as matron of honor and maid of honor respectively. Bridesmaids were Miss Mecie Peaden of yakkland and Miss Susan Cooke of Kinston. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Gayle Cash, sister of the bride. The attendants wore frosted pink gowns of crepe de satin designed with a scooped neckline falling into a capelet with sashes crossed in front and tied in back. The full skirt fell into a flounced ruffle at the bottom. They carried lace and satin fans with miniature white carnations, pink sweetheart roses and baby's breath cascaded down the side. They also wore a single miniature white carnation and a pink sweetheart rose with baby's breath in their hair.

The flower girl was Miss Angela Lambert of Kinston, cousin of the bride. She was dressed identically to the other attendants and carried a lace basket filled with red rose petals.

Miss Leigh Langley of Winterville, niece of the bridegroom, served as miniature bride. Her dress was designed identically to the one chosen by the bride, and she carried a miniature bouquet matching that of the bride.

Miss Karen Jarman, Miss Amy Langley and Miss Nikki Gardner passed out rice bags.

Ricky Langley of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Randy Boyd of Greenville and Mike and Jeff Langley, both of Winterville, brother and nephew of the bridegroom respectively. Junior usher was Ashley Jarman of Jones town, cousin of the bride.

Ring bearer was Neil Jarman of Jones town, cousin of the bride. Miniature bridegroom was Chris Langley of Greenville, nephew of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother chose a blue gown with a full length flowing chiffon cape, and the mother of the bridegroom chose a rose gown with a ruffled capelet neckline. Both wore white cymbidium orchids. The grandmothers, Mrs. Neta Cash of Kinston and Mrs. William Jarman of Tranton were remembered with white carnation corsages.

Presiding at the guest register was Mrs. Elaine Nichols of Farmville, sister of the bridegroom.

Stewart Woodard of Raleigh directed the wedding, and Jim Cash, also of Raleigh, uncle of the bride, was in charge of the reception.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg and the coast, the Langleys will reside in Plymouth.

The bride is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and a 1979 paralegal graduate of Pitt Technical Institute.

The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed with The Colonial Stores of Plymouth.

A reception given by the parents of the bride immediately followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

Betty Sue Rhodes Married Saturday

Betty Sue Rhodes and George Timothy Smith were married Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Oakdale Baptist Church, Rocky Mount.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Harry Fowler assisted by the Rev. Wayne Adkisson.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Lillie Winders, organist, Angie Ruffin, pianist, and Mrs. Beverly Brady, sister of the bridegroom, soloist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Vernon L. Rhodes Jr. of Battleboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus G. Smith of Kinston.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Mrs. Dawn Rhodes of Tarboro, sister-in-law of the bride, was the honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Mrs. Diane Ingle of Pittsboro, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Mary Joe Karner of Nashville, Susan Roebuck and Susan Small, both of Greenville.

Rufus G. Smith, father of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers included Vernon Rhodes III of Tarboro, and James Rhodes of Battleboro, brothers of the bride, and Roy and Steve Williams of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal length white silesta gown over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in white floral silk Venice lace that extended over the empire bodice to the waistline. The long fitted sleeves were enhanced by a sheer inset of imported English net overlaid in the floral Venice lace that extended from the elbow to the calla point cuffs. The flared skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with coordinating Venice lace. She wore a walking length illusion veil bordered in a wide panel of floral silk Venice lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in the matching lace. She carried a nosegay of white roses, baby's breath, pixie carnations and daisies with satin streamers tied in love knots.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of blue azure trilobal designed with an open portrait styled neckline edged in piping. The blouson bodice was enhanced by short gathered cap sleeves. The waistline was encircled with a self-fabric rope tie sash from which fell the full flared skirt. They each carried a nosegay of assorted spring flowers.

Following the ceremony, a

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WILL MERRY-ANDREW DRAW MANY WISE SMILES?
Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Jenn-Air's Grill-Range puts the sizzling, outdoor flavor you love into steaks, chops, chicken...

Any meat you prepare on a Jenn-Air tastes better because Jenn-Air's exclusive Char-Flavor grill cooks juicy, outdoor flavor into every bite. Permanent "Flavor Rocks" turn natural juices into curls of smoke that delicately bathe the meat as it grills. Smoke and odors are then quietly whisked away by the powerful built-in surface ventilation system. The result is meat that is golden-brown on the outside, tender, hot and juicy on the inside. And, a kitchen that remains clean and fresh! Jenn-Air lets you do a lot more than grilling, too, with an array of deluxe accessories. Love the taste of meat grilled to char-flavored perfection? You deserve a Jenn-Air Grill-Range.

HEALTH INSURANCE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of persons covered by health insurance continues to increase, says the Health Insurance Institute.

In 1967, some 146 million Americans were protected by one or more forms of private health insurance, it says. Ten years later, nearly 179 million persons had private health insurance — an increase of 22 percent.

The figure included some 165 million persons under age 65 — 87 percent of the U.S. civilian population in this age group. In addition, more than 14 million persons 65 and over held private policies to supplement Medicare.

Crime Prevention Program Scheduled

"Stealing makes me blue... It hurts everyone especially you" is the motto of a new state-wide juvenile crime prevention program designed to build good citizenship among elementary children. The program is being launched in the Greenville City Schools this fall in the third grade through the cooperative efforts of the Greenville Police Department, school administrators, and local civic and business sponsors.

The educational materials feature a filmstrip and cassette, teacher guide, student activity booklet, story booklet, coloring book and parent guide. The program was developed by children's author, Mrs. Margaret Liles, of Orangeburg, S.C., on the premise that early childhood education is perhaps the best answer in reducing the juvenile crime rate of our nation.

Sue, a blue kangaroo who has human characteristics, becomes the housekeeper for a small family of three. When she sees Skip, the young boy in the family, take money from his mother's purse, she becomes bluer and sadder. Through various episodes in the story, emphasis is focused on shoplifting, car stealing, and breaking and entering — the three infractions of the law most common among juveniles.

Scarlette Williams of Pink Hill, State Director of the program, states that Sue is a highly effective teaching tool in demonstrating to elementary students the consequences of breaking the law.

Others that recommend the program are: Doug Jackson, Crime Prevention Officer, who believes that the program will create more desirable attitudes toward law enforcement in our society. The Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Retail Merchants' Committee urges community groups to work together to create a comprehensive program for the benefit of our youth.

Civic and business groups interested in sponsoring Sue, the Blue Kangaroo educational program are requested to write, Scarlette Williams, Rt. 2, Pink Hill 28572 or call 568-3781.

Turning To Natural Gas

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Lured by lower prices and promises of plentiful supplies, thousands of Americans are turning to natural gas instead of oil to heat their homes.

"We're backlogged by 800 customers at this point," said Louis R. Hampton, president of the Providence, R.I., Gas Co. "Gas at the moment is considerably cheaper than oil."

Columbia Gas of Ohio expects to add 7,000 customers this year; Intermountain Gas in Idaho has signed up 1,200 families so far in 1979; and the president of Northern Utilities in Portland, Maine, reports a "substantial increase" in customers.

The American Gas Association says its members reported that 144,000 customers converted from oil to gas last year; this year, said spokesman Terry Uhl, the figure is expected to be even higher.

Between 60 percent and 65 percent of American homes use natural gas; about half as many use heating oil. Heating oil prices are soaring, however; they are expected to hit 80 cents a gallon this winter, up from 50 cents at the start of the 1978 heating season. There are warnings of shortages, particularly in the Northeast, which relies heavily on oil. And price and supply are prompting some people to switch fuels.

Heating bills vary widely, but a look at some averages shows that the savings achieved by switching can be dramatic.

The National Oil Jobbers Council estimates that the average household which uses oil consumes about 1,300 gallons during the heating season. At 80 cents per gallon, that would mean an annual bill of $1,040.

The American Gas Association says the average gas-heated household used 78,000 cubic feet during the 1978-79 heating season. The group said the current average price is $2.53 per thousand cubic feet for a heating bill of just under $200. Prices are rising, but even if they reached $6 per 1,000 cubic feet, the annual bill still would be only $468 — less than half the amount spent by a family with oil heat.

Individuals aren't the only ones who are changing to natural gas. In New York City, the Lefrak Organization, announced it was converting 54 buildings with 9,214 apartments from oil to gas.

Legislation passed by Congress in 1978 lifted price controls on natural gas in a series of steps designed to result in nearly complete deregulation by 1985. It already has resulted in price boosts for consumers.

It also is expected to bring increased supplies and has prompted some authorities to lift restrictions on utilities which had been prohibited from adding new natural gas customers.

The Washington Gas Light Co., which supplies the District of Columbia and its Maryland and Virginia suburbs, had not accepted new customers for over five years. Area public service commissions okayed a limited expansion last year and company spokesman Paul Young said Washington Gas Light is adding customers at the rate of 2 percent or 11,000 to 12,000 a year. "Supplies have been improving for this area and we are now showing a steady growth period," said Young.

Columbia Gas of Ohio recently ended a seven-year moratorium on new customers and spokesmen say they have a backlog of 10,000 to 14,000 orders for residential service. Dave Talbot of East Ohio Gas Co. said over 85 percent of the new homes built in his company's service area are using natural gas. "We have a lot of customers who are switching from oil to gas and we are picking up a number of commercial accounts that are changing over," he said.

William Chapman of Idaho's Intermountain Gas said growth was small last year, but is up sharply in 1979. He said supplies were "excellent" and the company, which now has 96,000 customers, could add 70,000 more without trouble. Prices also are up; Chapman estimated that increases are running parallel to the general rise in the Consumer Price Index.

William Keveney of Northeast Utilities in Connecticut expects a 10 percent to 15 percent boost in prices. "Gas will cost the customer more, but will not touch the escalation that has gone on for oil," said Keveney. Bruce Griffin of the nearby Southern Connecticut Gas Corp. said: "There are a lot of people who want to convert to natural gas ... There's hysteria in the oil market."

Northern States Power Co. in Fargo, N.D., said it plans a "low-key promotion" to attract new customers. "We feel natural gas is going to be in demand because of its lower cost compared to fuel oil," said company spokesman Joe Peterson. Northern States currently charges $3.88 for 1,000 cubic feet of gas. That's the equivalent of 46.4 cents a gallon for heating oil, Peterson said.

In the state of Washington, electricity has been a traditional favorite for heating because of low prices due to hydroelectric power. Now, however, electricity prices are rising and William Wortley of Washington Natural Gas, said conversions are increasing twice as fast as had been expected.

Concerned Veterinarian Has Diet For Portly Pets

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Fat cats are scarce in the feline world, but obese dogs are a horse of a different color.

So veterinarian Howard Padwee has developed the East Side Diet to do for portly pets what the Scarsdale diet does for pet owners.

Padwee says he sees many dogs with obesity problems at his East Side Animal Hospital in New York City.

Overweight people tend to have overweight pets, he said in an interview, because both get too much food and too little exercise.

When a client comes in with an animal, "You can't say, 'You're fat and so's your dog,'" Padwee said. "You have to be tactful."

Overweight people tend not to recognize the symptoms of obesity in their pets, he said. Those symptoms include breathing difficulty, sluggishness, hesitancy about going for walks, and eating continuously.

Puppies and kittens escape the weight problems some children have because they are very active by nature. But middle-aged and older pets have basically the same needs as people of advancing years, Padwee said. They need less food because their metabolisms are slower, they are less active and burn fewer calories.

"Most obesity occurs when animals are over seven years of age," Padwee said. "That's equal to past 40 in a person."

His diet is designed to take 1/2 to 1 pound a week off small dogs and cats and 1 to 2 pounds a week off medium to large animals. Each gets one or two meals a day, with the total amount of food based on the animal's normal weight.

The diet contains only 60 percent of the normal caloric intake for a pet's size, Padwee said, but it is high in volume to keep the animal from begging for food.

"Lots of people feed canned and prepared foods as well as table scraps," he said. "The dog eats lickety split, then starts sniffing around the table and begging."

"People think, 'It's a shame to throw this good food out — and a little snack won't cause a problem.'"

But it does.

"Table food is perfectly all right for cats and dogs as long as it's a well-balanced diet," he said.

He said an all-meat diet is bad because it is very low in calcium and high in phosphate content. It makes pets develop bone problems.

He also recommends a pre-diet physical examination to make sure a pet's obesity isn't due to pathological problems instead of overeating.

Padwee's East Side Diet is based on home prepared foods — for psychological reasons.

"Pet owners have to prepare the diet themselves," he said. "They're putting a lot of effort into it, and it usually works better than just opening a can."

There are four choices of meals: beef, chicken, codfish or liver. Each is mixed with skim milk cottage cheese and canned green beans.

It's monotonous.
"Only to the owners," said Padwee. "The dogs don't mind."
One woman whose dog he had put on the diet asked the veterinarian to prescribe for her as well.
He said he wasn't licensed to prescribe for humans. So she went on the dog's diet.

War Criminals Are Enshrined

By KAY TATEISHI
TOKYO (AP) — Hideki Tojo, who served as Japanese prime minister in World War II and some 1,000 others branded as war criminals by the Allies, have been enshrined in a tomb dedicated to the nation's war dead.

An official told The Associated Press the honored dead include Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, one of Japan's foremost military officers, known as the "Tiger of Malaya" for his conquest of the Malayan Peninsula and Singapore from the British.

Also enshrined is Masaharu Homma, commander-in-chief of the Japanese forces in the Philippines, who forced Gen. Douglas MacArthur to flee the islands in 1942. MacArthur returned two years later.

After Japan's defeat, Yamashita was sentenced by an American military court and hanged in 1946 for atrocities by Japanese troops in the Philippines.

Homma was sentenced and executed by a firing squad in 1946, being held responsible for the Bataan death march.

According to the shrine official, who asked that his name not be used, 1,005 war criminals have had their names inscribed on tiny tablets in the Yasukuni shrine's inner sanctum during the past 10 years.

Twenty-four top war criminals were tried in Tokyo by an 11-nation international tribunal including Australia, Britain, China, France, the Netherlands, the Philippines, the Soviet Union and the United States, and charged with crimes against peace and humanity.

Some 5,700 Class B and Class C offenders were charged with violating conventional law and

Great Mileage By Homebuilt Vehicle

By ANNE DOBINSKY
BLADELL, N.Y. (UPI) — Tony Fini thinks he has a solution to the gasoline shortage — a car so fuel efficient it gets 60 to 70 miles to the gallon.

Fini has built a 1,200-pound runabout, compared to 4,000 pounds for a full-sized car. It runs on a 16-horsepower garden tractor engine. The body is made of Jeep replacement parts welded together with fiberglass. It has the axles and gearbox of a Volkswagen.

"It's for the guy who drives 10 to 20 miles back and forth to work," said Fini, an industrial arts teacher at Frontier High School in the Buffalo suburb of Hamburg. "It's not for a trip to Florida."

The key to the vehicle's fuel economy, he said, is a unique transmission system that uses a belt-type mechanical torque converter from a snowmobile. The converter is more fuel efficient and cheaper than the automobile hydraulic torque converter that replaces the gearshift and clutch, Fini said.

His runabout has a gearshift but no clutch. He just lifts his foot off the gas pedal to change gears.

"I really haven't invented anything spectacular," said the teacher, who has been rebuilding car engines since he was 12. "It's just a way of rearranging existing hardware in a new way to allow low-powered engines to run light vehicles efficiently."

The runabout has the engine mounted in the rear and has a top speed of about 50 mph. With its 1 1/2-gallon gas tank, the car has a range of about 100 miles.

"It goes a steady 40 mph — why should anyone take me off the Thruway?" he said. "I have gone to Medina about 45 miles away and to Sheraton Beach in Canada with it."

Fini said he has spent about $3,000 on the car since he started building it in early 1976. He said he would like to build another car, one that would weigh about 1,000 pounds and go a steady 60 mph.

"My system seems to be a practical solution to our economic problems," he said. "I believe vehicles weighing about 1,000 pounds with my system could get about 100 miles a gallon."

Volunteer Work Weighs Heavily In Job-Hunting

Gasoline Saver Doesn't Have To Suffer, Too

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Millions of Americans will spend the summer of 1979 living with less gasoline — and learning, perhaps, to like it. They will drive less often and less rapidly. They will stay closer to home — afraid to venture beyond known supplies of fuel. But saving doesn't have to mean suffering. "The problem is to avoid confusing conservation with curtailment," said Dave Schooler, a staff employee of the House energy and power subcommittee. "There's a lot of flexibility in our system for getting more out of every gallon of gasoline."

As families try to plan for the July 4th holiday and for summer vacations to come, the experts are still arguing about who is to blame for the shortage and how serious it is. But they generally agree that gasoline supplies for summer driving — and oil supplies for winter heating — will be tight, but adequate.

The same experts say this means we will have enough fuel to go around if drivers use a little common sense, not overreacting to reports of a temporary shortage by running out and filling up the tank — even if you don't need to.

It means little things: plan trips to combine errands, keep tires properly inflated and speeds down, think about nearby resorts instead of far-off attractions. With gasoline prices inching up to $1 a gallon — more in some areas — you can't afford not to conserve.

"In general terms, the (gasoline) market throughout the summer is expected to be tight," said Jack Vandenberg of the Economic Regulatory Administration in the Department of Energy. "It's not going to be as bad as it was in May ... With judicious use of gasoline we should be able to get through."

If Vandenberg could urge people to do only one thing, he said, he would tell them "to avoid unnecessary use of their personal cars. And stress the word unnecessary. I'd also like to urge them not to top off their tanks."

Dave Schooler, a staff member of the House Energy and Power Subcommittee, offered a similar view. "Long-term conservation," he said, "should be geared to being more efficient."

Long-term conservation doesn't mean abandoning your vacation; it means making sure your car is properly tuned so you don't waste, and it means in winter insulating your home so you can keep warm without throwing away heat and money.

There are about 110 million private passenger cars in the United States; there are an additional 40 million vans and small recreational vehicles. Together, they use 311 million gallons of gasoline a day. That's about two gallons a day per vehicle, 14 gallons a week — a little less than a tankful for the average car.

Suppose each vehicle cut back by just two gallons a week? That would cut demand by 14 percent — more than enough to offset the current shortage.

It doesn't have to take a lot. According to economists at Cornell University, family automobile trips average 5½ miles each. At 15 miles to the gallon, that's 2.7 gallons. Eliminate one trip a week — go to the supermarket once instead of twice — and you've saved more than two gallons. You've saved yourself money — over $2 at a price of 85 cents a gallon — and time as well.

Something as seemingly minor as underinflated tires or an overloaded trunk wastes energy. You cut your mileage by about 2 percent for every pound of tire pressure under the recommended maximum; each 100 pounds of added weight in your car cuts economy by 1 percent.

"Consumers have been doing a pretty good job of cutting back," said Carl Gustin of the public affairs office of the Department of Energy. While gasoline demand during the first quarter of 1979 was about 4½ or 5 percent higher than it was in the same period a year earlier, demand during the first 150 days of the year was 1 percent less than in 1978. And for the four weeks that ended June 1, gasoline demand was down 10 percent from 1978 levels and overall oil demand was down 6½ percent.

Spot shortages and "an elevated awareness" of the problem are responsible for the drop in demand, Gustin said.

In recent weeks, Gustin said, gasoline supplies have been running in the range of 92 percent to 95 percent of last year's levels. For the rest of the summer, he said, Americans can expect to get 95 percent or 96 percent as much gasoline as they did in 1978.

"If demand could be held down it could make a big difference," said Gustin, but he said he had no predictions about what people will do as the summer wears on. "We're just going into the vacation season now," he said.

"In the years ahead, we will be faced with a continued tight supply situation," Gustin said. Coping with that situation means keeping in mind the kind of adjustments we are making now and continuing them over the long term.

For The Associated Press

A woman in her mid-30s sits across the desk from a personnel officer of a corporation. He looks at her resume and asks why she's bothering to apply for the job. She has no college degree and only minimal work experience.

From her briefcase she pulls records of her volunteer work with five agencies and recommendations from agency executives. As a volunteer she had chaired major fund-raising efforts, spearheaded media promotions, was office manager, conceived and organized new programs, led search committees for agency directors and was on four boards of directors.

After further investigation, the personnel officer selected her as one of three candidates for the job.

The use of volunteer experience in the job market has been increasing since the status of volunteerism has begun a sharp turn upward. What is happening is "the professionalization of volunteerism," according to Carol Truesdell, active in volunteer career development.

With dwindling numbers of available housewives and the increasing number of groups seeking helpers, volunteer organizations are faced with making volunteer work more attractive.

Paid directors are being hired to develop and coordinate volunteer efforts. A multitude of training programs are being developed recruiting, training, record-keeping and problemsolving. A handful of universities are offering degrees in this relatively new field. Directors are documenting the work of volunteers, preparing job descriptions and work contracts and keeping personnel files which include evaluations and reference letters. Volunteers are screened and trained in such areas as communications and leadership skills.

Ms. Truesdell, of Minneapolis, says that more and more "people are volunteering much more out of self-interest than for altruistic reasons" — using volunteer work as a stepping stone to a career.

To help them, she has begun a program to set up business internships based largely on a person's volunteer background rather than so much on education. She has already placed nine women in entry-level professional jobs.

"I tried many, many places on my own to get a position," says Deane Gradous of Minneapolis, who found her MBA wasn't enough in a tight job market. "I went to CHART after I'd struck out on the others."

Ms. Gradous was selected as a statistical-analyst intern by an association of nursing homes.

Her experience in management and leadership volunteer positions at the YWCA and in other community organizations had paid off. Her volunteer work had other payoffs as well. "I had learned how to ask for what I want, how to use the community to find information, how to use an office intercom. These are simple things really, but it meant I didn't have to start from scratch on everything."

To help make the transition from volunteer to paid professional, models are rapidly developing for training and supervising volunteers and for evaluating and documenting their work. Job descriptions, work contracts, insurance benefits are evolving.

The volunteer community is also tackling the financial barriers to volunteerism.

"Volunteering is not free for the volunteer," Ms. Truesdell says. "Volunteering costs money in terms of babysitters, gas, uniforms in some cases, lunches, parking. Many, many people can't afford to volunteer. It's a luxury."

Advocates for volunteerism are recommending reimbursement for out-of-pocket expenses, allowing tax deductions for service and an IRS deduction for mileage on a par with business, and insurance, pensions, Social Security and retirement benefits.

Laura Lee M. Geraghty, director of the Minnesota Governor's Office of Volunteer Services, says that the altruistic service-oriented motive of volunteers still exists. "But I guess what we're getting into is trying to recognize that volunteering is a two-way street. You get something out of it or you wouldn't be doing it."

Motivations are changing because society is changing, say the leading voices in the field. The women's movement, the growing need for two incomes in many families, the trend toward mid-life career changes and the current preoccupation with self-development are among the major influences on volunteer motivations.

"People still volunteer because they want to give something to the community," says Paula Beugen, who organizes volunteers for a Minneapolis school district, "but they also look to document their experience should they need to draw upon it."

Job-application forms are slowly beginning to change to include unpaid as well as paid experience relevant to a job. The U.S. Civil Service Commission recognizes volunteer experience in its hiring practices. Resolutions by Congress, the National Governors Conference and the U.S. Conference of Mayors encourage all employers to take volunteer work into account.

"I think it's important to professionalize volunteerism, to upgrade it," says Ms. Truesdell, "but to always be sensitive to what you're about. And what you're about is better service delivery to the people in need."

College Hosting Workshop

FAYETTEVILLE — The ninth annual Youth Music Workshop will be held at Methodist College here June 25-July 1, sponsored by the Council on Youth Ministries of the North Carolina Conference of the United Methodist Church and the Conference Chapter of the Fellowship of United Methodist Musicians.

Over 90 United Methodist high school students and counselors from across eastern North Carolina will be spending three days of intensive training, rehearsal, fellowship and inspiration at the college, followed by a singing tour of southern Pennsylvania.

A final homecoming concert will be held at Jarvis United Methodist Church, Greenville, Sunday, July 1, 7:30 p.m.

Licensed As Commissioner

Susan M. Derocher of Greenville has been granted a Racking Horse Commissioners License by the Racking Horse Breeders Association of America (RHBA).

As a licensed commissioner, she is authorized by the association to register racking horses.

Anyone wishing to have their horse registered with the RHBA can contact Ms. Derocher at 752-1116 or by mail: 1102 Monroe Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834.

A Network Of 21 Locations Planned Throughout Pitt County

New Disposal Sites For Pitt Rural Residents

There's seven of them now, all with that new look—because they are new. They're the first of 21 planned sites for a system of Solid Waste Containers in the rural areas of Pitt County, and are being constructed in accordance with the "Solid Waste Collection and Disposal Ordinance, Pitt County, North Carolina."

The ordinance, recently adopted by Pitt County Commissioners, went into effect the fifth day of March this year.

Don Davenport, an administrative assistant to County Manager Reginald Gray, and the man most closely allied to construction, operation and maintenance of these sites, discussed plans involved in the eventual fulfillment of the goal of offering "disposal sites that will be convenient to rural people, no matter where they live."

Sites Completed

The first site completed, Davenport said, "is the one not far from Bells Fork on State Road 1725. Others have been completed at Stantonburg Road, just a short distance west of Greenville, and on Highway 121, north of Farmville."

In addition to these three, there's "sites that have been constructed just south of Bethel, one near Grimesland, and one less than a mile west of Stokes."

The Next Seven

Davenport said that work on the next seven scheduled placements of containers is well underway, with a couple of them due to be completed within a short time.

"Our biggest problem in planning is locating sites," Davenport commented. "We hope, and we feel that after people with land at the right places see what's being done with this first group, they'll be more willing to sell land for us to locate the others."

"Our goal is to complete and put into operation at least six or seven more waste sites before the end of 1980."

The seven now in the planning phase and in some instances, being constructed, are solid waste containers in the neighborhoods of Ayden-Grifton, Shelmerdine, Belvoir, Pactolus, Ballards Crossroads, Hudsons Crossroads, and Falkland.

Regulations

Because these are relatively small, compact waste sites, the Solid Waste and Disposal Ordinance sets forth a number of regulations designed to control the use of these sites.

"We don't want to be overly restrictive," Davenport remarked, "but it's obvious there's limits that have to be observed if these sites are to serve their primary function of providing rural people a workable system of waste disposal."

Among the major rules applicable to use are:

— They are not open to commercial and industrial firms producing more than ten cubic yards of waste in any one day.

— The sites are not open to garbage collectors who receive payment for disposing of garbage.

— Handlers of hazardous waste or items prohibited from deposit in the waste sites are prohibited from using the sites.

— Governmental agencies, schools, and non-profit organizations which produce over ten cubic yards of waste per day are not to use the rural disposal sites.

In addition to the general rules cited above, those normally authorized to use the solid waste disposal sites are limited to depositing certain items.

Items which are not permitted for deposit include — hot ashes or burning materials; explosives of any kind; poisons, pesticides, or chemicals; dead animals; auto or truck bodies; stumps, limbs, or logs; or concrete and construction material.

Although these limitations may seem to impose excessive restrictions, Davenport points out that items permitted for disposal in these units still allows most rural people an opportunity to get rid of their daily garbage and debris.

"Another thing," he mentioned, "is that these containers are open to the general public 24 hours a day, seven days a week. This makes it convenient for those for whom they are basically designed to use the sites at their convenience, which means a lot to people in rural areas, many of whom work long hours during the day."

He added that rural users, as well as other users, have at their disposal the central Pitt County Landfill.

"Even though this is not open on a 24 hours basis, it is open from seven in the morning until four in the afternoon Mondays through Fridays, and from seven until noon on Saturdays."

"So anyone, an individual or an agency or firm with larger loads of material they want to get rid of have the use of the County Landfill.

"Basically," Davenport added, "these strategically placed sites are designed to serve those without the benefit of regular collectors, and to provide a place where they can dispose of garbage without having to travel a long distance."

Beautification Plans

In general, the sites are constructed on a similar design — a circular drive with a road in and a road out. Each site has been built up so that the large containers are hidden from road view behind a mound of dirt. Vehicles bringing material for disposal simply stop on the crest of the mound, and waste can then be thrown into the containers positioned behind the mounds.

Constructed as they are, the sites readily lend themselves to beautification through landscaping.

"The Eastern Pines Volunteer Fire Department," Davenport said, "has contributed time and labor in seeding the area at one of the sites."

Mrs. Sylvia Wheelless, Projects Chairman of the Keep Pitt County Beautiful Committee said the committee hopes to interest various groups in volunteer work for landscaping the sites.

"We hope that church and civic groups, garden clubs, housewives, anyone with time and interest, will come forth and offer to help beautify these sites."

Mrs. Wheelless mentioned the sites in Wilson County, "which have gained a statewide reputation as being very clean and attractive, and this has been possible because of volunteers taking on these sites as landscaping projects."

She added that "Sam Uzzell, who is an associate county agent with the Agriculture Extension Service, has been working closely with the county manager's office in formulating plans to make efforts to beautify these sites."

"It has been shown, in Wilson County as well as other places," Mrs. Wheelless commented, "that there's no reason a garbage site has to be unsightly. They can be attractive additions to any community."

Historic Places In Goldsboro Are For Sale

GOLDSBORO — The historic Henry Weil House in Goldsboro is for sale, ending two years of controversy about its future.

The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc., is being given six months to find a buyer willing to restore the Goldsboro Victorian landmark under protective covenants. The house is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

"The Henry Weil House, known locally as Miss Gertrude Weil's house, is one of the most significant Victorian structures in North Carolina, because of both its history and its architecture," according to J. Myrick Howard, Executive Director of the Fund.

"Not only is the house an exceptional and well-preserved example of Victorian architecture, but for nearly a century it was also the home of one of the most important Jewish families in North Carolina."

History

The house was built in 1875 by Henry Weil to match the neighboring house of his brother, Solomon. The Weil brothers came as peddlers to Goldsboro from Baltimore in the 1860s, after having emigrated from Germany.

In 1865 they established a store which quickly grew into a major department store. During the post-war period, the Weils became involved in many other commercial ventures such as the operation of brick kilns, a rice mill, and an ice plant.

Henry and Solomon Weil rendered significant political and civic service to the Goldsboro community. They gave the Town of Goldsboro the land for Herman Park, named for their older brother.

Henry served on the board of trustees of the Goldsboro Graded Schools and the University of North Carolina. His wife, Mina, was well known throughout the state for her charity work.

Henry's daughter, Gertrude, who lived in the house until her death in 1971, is also remembered for her interest in social, civic, and humanitarian projects. Her special interests were the cause of women's rights and race relations.

After the ratification of the Nineteenth Amendment, giving women the right to vote, Miss Weil became the first president of the League of Women Voters.

The Weil House was recently bought by Wayne County, and its purchase by the county has been the source of much controversy.

Architecture

The Gertrude Weil House is believed to have been designed by G. S. Appleget, an architect who came to North Carolina from New Jersey. The two-story frame house is intricately detailed, both inside and out. Ornamental Victorian woodwork decorates the porches, bay windows, and door and window surrounds.

The interior features wood parquet floors and several marbleized slate mantels. The hall floor is laid in a lattice-like pattern of interlocking ceramic tiles. Several original gas chandeliers remain in place, having been adapted for electricity.

The bathrooms retain much of their early opulent character with marble-topped sinks, silver-plated bathtub fittings, and decorative tile wainscoting.

Future of the House

The Weil House has excellent potential for new uses as well as continued use as a residence. Located at the corner of Chestnut and James Streets close to downtown Goldsboro, the house contains approximately 5,150 square feet of floor space.

In July, 1978, the North Carolina Division of Archives and History estimated that "high-quality rehabilitation work using the best and most permanent materials available" would cost $48,000. Estimates by local contractors at that time confirmed this figure.

Howard notes "The house has been appraised by the Wayne County Tax Office for $48,500, and the County has agreed to sell the house to the Historic Preservation Fund for $50,000. The Fund has added $3,500 to cover its estimated costs in connection with the property, and is offering the house for resale at $53,500." He added that "A grant from the U.S. Dept. of the Interior is available for the building's purchase."

The Fund will place protective covenants in the deed of the property, which means that alterations to the house must be approved by the Fund.

By maintaining the covenants, the Fund will be able to make sure that this Goldsboro landmark is not demolished.

The Historic Preservation Fund has also been charged with finding a preservation solution for the neighboring Solomon Weil House, which is nearly identical to the Gertrude Weil House.

The Fund has additionally obtained an option on the historic Christian Science Society Church in Goldsboro and is offering the 1856 church building for sale.

Anyone interested in purchasing the Gertrude Weil House or the church should contact:

Myrick Howard, The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, 508 Insurance Building, Raleigh, N. C., 27601, or phone 832-3652.

TO BE SOLD . . . The Henry Weil House in Goldsboro (more commonly known as the Gertrude Weil House), is to be sold through the Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina. The house, built in 1875, is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY CHURCH . . . is another Goldsboro structure being sold by the Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina. Built in 1856, the pre-Civil War building is also listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

ECU Student Compiled Data On Factors Relating To Behavior

By Franceine Perry, ECU News Bureau

A complex study of the possible relationship of age, sex and right- or left-handedness to learning behavior will be discussed at a London conference this summer by East Carolina University graduate student Cara Massey.

The research, involving an intensive survey of 184 ECU seniors, was undertaken by Ms. Massey as part of her master's thesis work and will be reported at the Fifth International Conference for Improving University Teaching at the University of London July 4.

The Massey project is the second phase of a two-part investigation.

The first, conducted by Dr. Hal Daniel of the ECU Department of Speech, Language and Auditory Pathology and his research associate Patti Loesche, synthesized current findings regarding human learning strategies as they relate to brain structure and function.

Daniel and Loesche, who presented their findings at the same conference in Aachen, Germany last summer, indicated that behavioral differences observed in groups characterized by sex, age and manual preference, might have implications for educators.

Since certain human functions are known to be regulated by specific parts of the brain, they concluded, differences in brain structure and orientation linked to individual's age, sex and use of the right or left hand might account for some students' achievements within the present educational system and others' inability to cope with it.

The left hemisphere of the brain, for example, frequently linked to right-handedness when it dominates, is where language use, logical thinking and manual dexterity originate.

Ms. Massey tested the Daniel-Loesche hypothesis—that brain structure and operation associated with certain groups might significantly affect learning and achievement—in her study of the 184 subjects.

Factors considered in her computerized study were choice of major field and career plans, academic and other interests, preferred modes of testing and classroom instruction, personal study habits and, when permission was given, SAT scores and academic grade point averages.

The test group was studied in regard to sex, age (over or under 25 years) and use of the right or left hand by the respondents and members of their families.

Ms. Massey reported a "lack of significant differences" associated with right- or left-handedness and no new findings on sex differences regarding learning.

"Absolute classification by handedness appears inappropriate," she concluded. "However, behavioral differences as a function of age, sex and handedness may eventually be identified in university populations."

Ms. Massey was able to examine the responses of a relatively small number of left-handed individuals (17 out of 184). "A considerably larger sample size perhaps would have led to discovery of significant trends among variables investigated," she said.

But one interesting fact was noticed: eight of the 17 left-handed students refused to allow their confidential test scores to be examined, as compared to only 12 of the 167 right-handed respondents who denied permission.

"Although the low number of left-handed subjects prevents extensive speculation, this behavior may be considered in light of reported higher anxiety levels among left-handers and right-handers," she explained.

High anxiety may be the result of the left-handed individual's tendency to have less pronounced hemispheric dominance than right-handed people, whose brain functions are usually centralized in one half of the brain or other, as noted by Daniel and Loesche in their report.

Also, left-handed persons, a disadvantaged minority in a world designed by and for right-handers, have been victims of a long tradition of distrust, evidenced by the meanings of words associated with left-handedness: "sinister" (Latin) means wicked, evil, or dishonest; "gauche" (French) awkward or clumsy; "mancino" (Italian), crooked or maimed; and "canhoto" (Portuguese) weak or mischievous.

Cara Massey believes that her study "indicates a need for further investigation" using "a greater number of subjects, other universities and more complete background information."

(A candidate for the master's degree in speech, language and auditory pathology at ECU, Ms. Massey is the daughter of Arthur Massey of 466 Waterbury Drive, Fayetteville.)

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Gymnastic events are featured on five new stamps and a souvenir sheet issued by the Soviet Union to hail the upcoming Olympic Games to be held in Moscow the summer of 1980.

The gymnastic competition will take place at the Palace of Sports of the Central Stadium in Luzhniki, a section of Moscow.

The 4 plus 2 kopeck brown and ocher depicts a female gymnast performing in the free-style event. Often referred to as floor exercises, this popular event allows no apparatus use. The women's free style is performed to music while the men's corresponding event is performed in silence.

The 6 plus 3 kopeck blue-gray and violet shows the men's parallel bars event. This event requires the gymnast to utilize movements combining swings, vaults, strength and balances. An exercise on the parallel bars consists of 11 different movements.

The 10 plus 5 kopecks brown-orange illustrates a male gymnast on the horizontal bar. In this event only movements of swinging and vaulting performed without pause are permitted.

The 16 plus 6 kopecks in gray and violet-brown hues shows the women's balance-beam exercise. An event in which only women compete, the exercise includes the mounting of the beam, by vault or jump, and a series of movements that must utilize steps, running, jumps, turns and lying positions.

The 20 plus 10 kopecks red-brown stamp features the women's uneven parallel bars event. First used in the 1936 Olympic Games, this female event allows a great variety of fluid movements with hanging and swinging exercises.

The souvenir sheet, a 50 plus 25 kopecks, depicts the stationary rings, a men's exercise.

Did you ever hear of the Battle of Fallen Timbers?

The U.S. issued a special stamp in 1929 to commemorate Gen. Anthony Wayne's defeat of Chief Little Turtle in 1794 near what is now Toledo, Ohio. The 2-cent red stamp depicts the Gen. Wayne Memorial Monument at Fallen Timbers Memorial Park, Ohio.

Advisor To Foreigners

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Although Arthur H. Tichenor Jr. works at a large Midwestern university, much of his job is dictated by international events.

Tichenor has been foreign-student adviser at Purdue University since 1951, when he came from the University of California at Berkeley where he was assistant director of the International House.

Since then he has counseled several thousand students through their academic lives here, with problems ranging from homesickness to showing a student's wife how to do the laundry. Approximately 1,100 foreign students from 90 countries attend Purdue.

Tichenor maintains close contact with a foreign student from the time inquiries are made concerning Purdue until the student graduates. Some 8,000 requests for information and admission are received annually from foreign countries, with about 400 new students coming to the campus each year.

"There's a tremendous amount of very personal conversation done in this office — counseling or ventilating as some people would call it," Tichenor says of his job.

"The tension is so much at times that a student will just have to come in here and let it all fall out. The emotional pressures are terrific."

The counselor sees a large part of his role as being a pressure valve for the foreign students.

"We want to get them in here before they reach the breaking point," he says. "These people are brilliant and impatient. They tend to lose perspective and try to do too much too fast. The disappointment is overwhelming."

The foreign students are thousands of miles away from home but they are still deeply affected by events in their own countries, by recent developments in Iran and the Arab world, for example, Tichenor says.

He adds that he is often viewed with "a very unhealthy respect" by some of the freshman foreign students arriving on the campus.

"They're scared to death when they first come in," he says. "They think I have all the power in the palm of my hand. I try my best to show these kids there are kindly people around here they can talk to."

Tichenor has helped initiate several local and campus programs designed to make the foreign student feel more at home. One involves a luncheon at a nearby church the day of commencement. Adults from the community mingle with the students, congratulating the new graduates on their accomplishments.

"It's pretty hollow getting a diploma unless you have someone to share the joy with," he says.

ARTHUR H. TICHENOR JR.

points out. "It's a little bit of public recognition for the students."

Tichenor, who has traveled to some 45 countries, speaks Spanish, German and French fluently. Most of the students who come into his office have a good command of English.

Over the miles and years of international travel he has collected numerous souvenirs and mementos, many of which, he says, are gathering dust in the attic.

"I'm not a museum person," he says. "The things I get more satisfaction out of are the cards and letters from former students at Christmas and New Year's. That to me is one of the signs of someone's having had a pleasant experience here."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Surgery or Drugs for Heart Disease?

For two years I've had anginal pain in the chest, over the heart. I'm 52, and I have a bad family history of this condition. I've been told by my doctor that surgery might be a possibility within the next few years. I've been reading everything that's available on the subject. I've even gone to the medical library. Some doctors write that the results of heart surgery are no better than the results achieved by the use of drugs. Do you have any definite information on this subject? — Mr. G.M.B., Del.

Dear Mr. B.:

It's understandable that any intelligent person would want to thoroughly research a problem of such importance to him. Yet, within the framework of that research is the possibility of being confused by statistical material and differences of medical and surgical opinion.

The choice of the use of medicines as against the bypass operation is a highly technical one. There is no rule that can be applied to all patients with coronary artery disease of the heart. Some patients with this condition may not be incapacitated by the anginal pain over the heart. Others may be virtually crippled by their inability to function. This is only one of the determining factors in the decision.

Unfortunately, you alone cannot take on the responsibility of this decision. It can be made only by the doctors, heart specialists and surgeons who are observing the activities of a patient while at rest and while at work.

Special X-ray tests, known as "angiograms," are made to determine the extent of the coronary artery disease. This becomes vital in the choice of treatment.

Since you cannot properly evaluate statistics, you cannot predicate your life and your longevity based on your own interpretation of the material you have read. Open and frank discussion with your doctors will give you a far better insight into every aspect of your problem. Only after thorough evaluation of each individual patient's problems can doctors arrive at such an important decision. You must place your trust in their judgment.

How do you feel about an ex-alcoholic taking an occasional drink? — Mr. J.V., Ky.

Dear Mr. V.:

It is said that there is no such thing as an "ex-alcoholic." Alcoholism, like diabetes, is a lifetime problem which demands rigid control. I am aware of the fact that some studies have been made suggesting that an alcoholic can (after treatment), in some instances, return to moderate drinking. The proponents of this idea cite interesting details of their study. The opponents of this idea, on the other hand, believe that it is a distinct threat to the recovered alcoholic and invites trouble.

My own feeling is that the ex-alcoholic, with his new lease on life, should not expose himself to the slightest possibility of a recurrence of his illness.

ARTHRITIS HITS MANY
WASHINGTON (AP) — Today, nearly 32 million Americans — 1 in 7 — have arthritis severe enough to require medical attention and 250,000 of them are children.

Over-all, the disease strikes 1 in 3 families, says the Arthritis Foundation.

TV SHOWTIME

For Week Of June 24 - June 30, 1979

'Prime Time Sunday'

NBC News' forthcoming weekly magazine program, anchored by Tom Snyder, will be titled "Prime Time Sunday" when it premieres Sunday, June 24 (10 to 11 p.m.), says Paul Friedman, executive producer of the show.

"The vital factor is that this will be a different type of magazine program, with emphasis on the live segments," Friedman continued. "No one who tunes in will mistake it for any other program. There will be three pre-packaged stories, running a maximum of 10 minutes each.

"Two of those stories will be reported by highly regarded newsmen Jack Perkins and Chris Wallace. The third will be narrated by Snyder, or he will go into the field as the reporter."

Snyder will report mainly from the studio, and in live portions, he will conduct interviews or moderate discussions. These segments will be topical, not necessarily hard news, unless the subject is of an over-riding nature, such as Three-Mile Island and the DC-10 crash, in which everyone in the country is interested.

"The Three-Mile Island story would have lent itself to the use of a select studio audience," says Friedman, "with opinions from experts and the average citizen, perhaps with knowledgeable personalities resonating from remote areas and seen by Snyder and the viewers on large screens.

"With a combination of live, taped and filmed material, 'Prime Time Sunday' will employ the latest TV techniques in a newly constructed set that will give the audience a view of the control room and a sense of the modern electronics involved in producing the program."

Friedman will supervise a staff of approximately 18 field producers, whose stories will cover limitless territory and the widest possible range, from investigative to the bizarre.

Snyder has worked since the middle 1950's at a variety of news and informational broadcasting jobs. He joined KNBC, the NBC-TV station in Los Angeles, in 1970 as anchorman of the weeknight newscast, and helped make the program preeminent in the market. He was named host of the "Tomorrow" program in October, 1973, and moved the show to New York in December, 1974, at which time he began as anchorman on "Newscenter 4." In June of that year, he returned to Los Angeles with "Tomorrow."

ANCHORMAN SNYDER-Emmy-winning television personality Tom Snyder will be anchorman of NBC New's "Prime Time Sunday," the first TV magazine program with emphasis on live segments. The program airs Sundays (10-11 p.m.), beginning June 24.

Cronkite Anchors 'Universe'

"The single most convincing and authoritative figure in television news" is the way Time magazine described correspondent Walter Cronkite, who has covered virtually every major news event of the past 29 years for CBS News.

Since joining the network in 1950, Cronkite has reported on everything from wars and summit talks to America's manned space missions, the celebration of the nation's Bicentennial, and, since 1952, all aspects of the American political scene, from primaries, conventions, and elections to the Senate Select Committee hearings on Watergate (1973), the House Judiciary Committee hearings on the Impeachment of President Nixon (1974) and Mr. Nixon's subsequent resignation.

Through the years, he has conducted numerous timely and exclusive interviews with leading world figures. In November 1977, his conversations with Egyptian President Anwar el-Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin led to the first face-to-face contact between the two.

Now Cronkite heads in yet another direction with his journalism career when he anchors "Universe," a CBS News science magazine.

Following a brief opening sequence (using tape and film) which telescopes 20 billion years of the universe's history, anchorman Cronkite reports on the search for a cure for multiple sclerosis, a debilitating disease of the nervous system. The report focuses on the disease through the eyes of one of its victims, world-renowned cellist Jacqueline dePre, and describes the contradictory clues that make the disease one of medicine's most puzzling challenges.

CBS NEWS CORRESPONDENT WALTER CRONKITE will be the anchor for "Universe," CBS News' half-hour primetime science magazine, to be broadcast Wednesday, Jun. 27 (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Correspondent Charles Osgood reports on how recent satellite pictures of the far side of the moon may have solved an 800-year-old mystery concerning medieval reports of some bizarre lunar happenings.

Helen Speaks, Women Listen

According to the Nielsen ratings and the mail, "The Ropers" has become an overnight spin-off success, something Audra Lindley finds enjoyable and doesn't question.

Likewise, she's not apt to question why her character, Helen Roper, is the type of character so many women relate to. And yet she does believe the character is popular because Helen is what a lot of women aren't.

"She's a happy person in spite of her stingy husband," the personable actress says. "In the beginning of 'Three's Company,' I thought she and Stanley (played by Norman Fell) were mean people, and of course we didn't want to make them mean.

"So what's evolved is that they do, in fact, have a good marriage. It's just that they seem incompatible. But then, I think a lot of marriages seem incompatible. Still, each provides the needs of the other."

From a more individual point of view, Audra sees Helen as a woman "who'd like the finer things in life. Getting the new house was a step up the social ladder for the Ropers and Helen is very pleased by that, whereas Stanley seemingly couldn't care less.

"I think a lot of women relate to Helen because women in another day and age, not too long ago, were not supposed to enjoy sex, or even talk about it. Well, more and more women are verbalizing their feelings, and I think that's a terrific liberation for women.

NORMAN FELL AND AUDRA LINDLEY star as a basically loving couple in the new comedy hit series "The Ropers" on ABC-TV.

'Hardy Boys' Are Back!

The intriguing, suspenseful and frequently humorous adventures of Franklin W. Dixon's "The Hardy Boys," which have captured the imaginations of more than five generations of American youth, were brought to life in 1977 on ABC-TV's series, "The Hardy Boys Mysteries."

Now the network is bringing 'Hardy Boys' back for a limited run with Part I of a two-part segment titled "Defection to Paradise" Sunday, June 24 (7 p.m.). In the episode, Joe and Frank Hardy find themselves in Hawaii desperately searching for a beautiful Russian girl who has defected with the help of a member of a popular music group, David Gates and Bread.

Shaun Cassidy and Parker Stevenson starred as 16-year-old Joe and 18-year-old Frank, whose exploits were usually on the non-violent side, involving ghosts, missing persons, smugglers and other "mysteries," rather than violent action.

At first the series alternated on Sunday nights with "The Nancy Drew Mysteries," which starred Pamela Sue Martin in the title role. In the fall of 1977, the Hardy Boys and Nancy Drew appeared jointly in some episodes, and then in February, 1978, the two programs were combined into one, with the title changed to "Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew Mysteries" and all three leads appeared together regularly. Unhappy with the elimination of her separate series, Pamela Sue left the program and was briefly replaced by 18-year-old Janet Louise Johnson. The character of Nancy Drew was dropped altogether in the fall of '78.

In addition to filming the series, Shaun Cassidy found time to launch a highly successful singing career, much as his older brother David Cassidy had done while on another TV series, "The Partridge Family," seven years earlier. Now Shaun has further expanded his career by going into serious drama.

Stevenson has had roles in several films and guested on other series since 'Hardy Boys' went off the air, but he is still waiting for the 'right' part to come along.

PARKER STEVENSON, RIGHT, AND SHAUN CASSIDY are the two young stars of the adventure-mysteries "The Hardy Boys Mysteries," which will return Sunday, June 24 (7-8 p.m.) for a limited run.

Better In Fenway

Experienced pitchers seem to perform better in Fenway Park, according to Ron Miller, pitching coach of the Orioles. "They know what the challenge is there," says Miller, "and I think they might concentrate better on every pitch."

Conflicting Emotions Reign

A beautiful black woman who has worked her way up from the ghetto into the glamorous world of fashion is torn between the secure life she is leading and the memory of her first love that draws her back to her old neighborhood in "Hollow Image." The play will air as an "ABC Theatre" presentation Sunday, June 24 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Sandra Sharp is starred as Harriet Gittens, an energetic young woman whose talent and hard work have led her to a key position of responsibility in the women's wear department of a leading New York department store. Her life is moving ahead smoothly, with a new apartment on the chic East Side standing as a symbol of her success, when she is drawn back to her old neighborhood in Harlem after an encounter with her first love.

Dick Anthony Williams is Danny York, the compassionate young man who loved Harriet when they were in high school, but stayed behind to work to alleviate the neighborhood's problems. When Harriet returns to Harlem to buy some of the paintings being created in the youth center Danny runs, she finds that her feelings for him and her feeling of guilt for having "made it" and having turned her back on the people she grew up with — cannot be ignored.

The problem is: can she "go home again?" Can she live in the successful downtown world and still deal with the emotional demands of her roots?

Also starring is Robert Hooks

SAUNDRA SHARP stars as a woman torn between the luxury and dignity of her life as a successful department store buyer in "Hollow Image," airing as an "ABC Theatre" presentation Sunday, Jun. 24 (9-11 p.m.).

as Paul, Harriet's fiance, a lawyer who has made a clean break with the streets of his boyhood. Morgan Freeman is Sweet Talk, a poet of the ghetto who has been destroyed by time, and Hattie Winston is Ivy, a singer who has somehow managed to come to terms with both worlds.

The play, which won the second annual ABC Theatre Award at the new Drama for Television Projects at the National Playwrights Conference of the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center, was written by Lee Huhkins, a New York playwright with several off-Broadway productions to her credit.

Moses' timely tale

"Moses — The Lawgiver" is a parable of our time," explains producer Vincenzo Labella. "We in no way updated the Bible. Still, when you look at the series, in a large sense, you are looking at today."

Labella was discussing a project that took him to locations in Italy and Israel, working with a cast of international stars, to create "Moses — The Lawgiver," a series of drama specials. The second segment will be presented Sunday, June 24 (10 to 11 p.m.).

"Our parallel is with oppression everywhere today," he said. "It is with whatever rebellion man feels he has to make against repressive law and hypocritical convention. Our story emerged from the absolute need of man to achieve some sort of self-imposed discipline. We all want freedom, yet freedom for the sake of freedom is not enough."

The story line followed by the specials, which were taken from the Book of Exodus, tells of the plight of the Israelites who were an enslaved nation, used by the Egyptians to build pyramids. They are led out of bondage by Moses. But they are led almost reluctantly — fearful of the unknown and frightened of their harsh leader.

Captain's Place

Anita Gillette, Jack Aaron, Barbara Sharma and Jean Marsh guest star in this week's rebroadcasts of "Captain Kangaroo," airing Monday thru Friday (8 to 9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Monday, Willy and Wally create a great deal of confusion when they become bellboys at a hotel — and guest Jack Aaron plays Mr. Early, a hotel guest. A jill-in-the-box, played by Anita Gillette, and her friend come alive when the toy store owner leaves for the evening. Then, Mr.

Pennywhistle and friend (Gillette) attempt to catch a beautiful butterfly. Mr. Green Jeans reads "Look Who's Talking," and the Captain starts week 'S' of Picturepages.

Tuesday, the Cecil B. DeMoose Players act out the real story of King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. The Captain Nemo crew must save an Icelandic Village from an active volcano, and the Captain reads "The Horse in Harry's Room."

Willy and Wally learn to dance Wednesday when they clean Miss Hilda's dance studio — guest Barbara Sharma plays Miss Hilda. The Captain teaches Dennis how to pitch a tent when they go camping, and Dennis reads "The Nose Book."

Similarities Are Striking

Mary Stuart has played Joanne on "Search For Tomorrow" for over 27 years. This makes the actress the longest-running television personality and probably the only person in all theatrical history who has played one character for almost three decades.

In the early years of "Search," Mary Stuart's responsibility extended beyond acting. She also saw to the accuracy of her scenes by shopping for props herself, and she insisted that food served in her "kitchen" was homemade.

Mary has always been intensely committed to her portrayal of Joanne, and the character has changed and developed in response to changes in the actress' own life. When Mary divorced, she celebrated by cutting her long hair into a new and more up-to-date style. This meant that the character of Joanne, known for her homely bun and sewing basket she carried everywhere, had to change also. The writers hastily wrote a scene in which Joanne shyly untied a scarf to show off her new hairdo. For both Mary and Joanne, this signaled a change in personality. Mary had decided to become independent, and Joanne concurrently became more outspoken, adventuresome, and independent.

"It's not really like being two people," Mary says. "It's not a simple as that. You see, it's as if we've grown together. I've put myself into Joanne, and she in turn has helped me grow."

MARY STUART has always been committed to her portrayal of Joanne in CBS-TV's "Search for Tomorrow," and the character has changed and developed in response to the changes in Mary's own life.

Through her I've been able to try out new aspects of myself. As I tried to become more independent in my own life, I put the same things into her, and as they worked in her, they strengthened my ability to carry on with the independence I was also choosing for myself."

Lately Mary has been busy with her second career as a singer and songwriter, and regularly goes on tour with a nightclub act.

'Laverne & Shirley' Outlines

Following are storylines for encore telecasts of "Laverne & Shirley," airing as part of ABC-TV's daytime programming schedule for the week of June 25-29 (11 to 11:30 p.m.). Penny Marshall stars as Laverne De Fazio and Cindy Williams stars as Shirley Feeney. Co-starring are Betty Garrett as Edna Babish, David L. Lander as Squiggy, Michael McKean as Lenny, Phil Foster as Frank De Fazio and Eddie Mekka as Carmine Ragusa.

Monday — "The Nun's Story" — Laverne adamantly refuses to attend the high school reunion which Shirley has organized until she finds out that one of her old, fun-loving friends will be attending, and both girls are in for a big surprise.

Tuesday — "Guinea Pigs" — In order to come up with $20 each to attend a cocktail party where they will meet some businessmen, Laverne and Shirley agree to be subjects for scientific experiments.

Wednesday — "Dating Slump" — Shirley becomes a social recluse when she learns that her old dating buddy, Carmine, has another girlfriend, and she decides not to go out on dates — much to Laverne's chagrin.

Thursday — "The Society Party" — Wearing formal gowns obtained for them by friends, Laverne and Shirley attend their first society function and mingle with the "upper crust" folk until events take an ominous turn and they feel like a couple of Cinderellas after the stroke of midnight.

Friday — "Hi Neighbors" — Laverne and Shirley get more than they bargained for when their brewery buddies, Lenny and Squiggy, set up a bachelor pad in the girls' apartment building.

The DOOBIE BROTHERS will be heard coast-to-coast on July 4th in a special live broadcast to be aired on more than 150 radio stations. The two-hour concert, live from the Universal Amphitheatre at Universal Studios, will be heard on the largest radio network ever put together for a rock 'n' roll broadcast.

Now it's said that ERIK ESTRADA won't stop with just his vocal rendition of the "CHiPs" theme, but will put together an entire LP for release this Fall. In preparation, Erik is taking vocal lessons almost daily.

As a result of the success of their first movie, "UP IN SMOKE," CHEECH and CHONG have been signed by Universal Studios to star in a second movie, production for which begins late this summer for release by mid-1980. The tentative title is, appropriately, "CHEECH AND CHONG: THE NEXT MOVIE."

In case there was any doubt, THE BEE GEES were recently honored by Broadcast Music, Inc., for having the most performed tune of 1978 — "Night Fever." The award was one of 24 the Brothers Gibb received at the organization's annual awards banquet.

Even though the show won't air until September, there's already talk of a spin-off from SHIRLEY JONES' new show in which PETER BARTON, who'll star as her son, will leave the family nest and go out on his own. Peter is certainly getting the new star build-up.

Town Under Siege

RICHLAND, WASHINGTON, a nuclear boom town is the site of a debate between Ralph Nader (l) and Dr. Ralph Lapp on the issue of nuclear power. Nuclear plant worker Pat Eng (r) tell about the effects this controversial industry has on her life on "Do I Look Like I Want to Die?" Monday, Jun. 25 at 10 p.m. on PBS.

When the accident occurred at Three Mile Island, reporters were anxious to find out the feelings of the people in nearby Middletown, Penn. "Do I Look Like I Want to Die?" airing on PBS Monday, June 25 (10 p.m.), focuses on a community which has lived with nuclear since 1945 — the people of Richland, Wash. Film profiles of several people involved in the nuclear industry, and a public confrontation between anti-nuclear activist Ralph Nader and nuclear physicist Dr. Ralph Lapp make up this portrait of a town under siege.

Richland is a boom town because of the nearby Hanford Project — one of the nation's oldest nuclear facilities. The site of the Nagasaki bomb construction, Hanford now boasts three new nuclear plants, a test breeder reactor, numerous research laboratories, and 75% of the country's radioactive waste. The people of Richland always have seen themselves as an important part of America's future, as an oasis of progress and hope. Now, because of the bad publicity generated by events like Three Mile Island, they feel their dreams are being undermined and their integrity questioned.

Reporter Mike Kirk visits Richland as the townspeople prepare for a public forum that pits Ralph Nader and environmental scientist Dr. Ruth Weiner against Dr. Ralph Lapp and Dr. Linn Draper, a member of the National Academy of Sciences Committee on Radioactive Waste Management. The people see this event as the first step in rebuilding public confidence in an industry they love.

The program zeroes in on three women and three men: Pat Eng, a nuclear engineer who deplores the stereotype of all technicians as "40, male and white"; David Amerine, a re-fueling manager who prides himself on his ecological concerns, his vegetarianism and his jogging; Shirley Hankin, a radiation monitor who believes that if a nuclear education is given to children, they will grow up unafraid; Joe Holder, the superintendent of a nuclear plant who sees critics as "people who are always looking for a

Michele Will Tell

Q: Dear Michele: We have 75 members in our "Battlestar Galactica" Fan Club, and we would like to know where to send letters asking that the show be re-scheduled. There are a lot of kids who watch the show, but don't know where or how to write. DAVID BARNES, PRESIDENT, P.O. Box 412, Freemont, N.C. 27830.

A: Dear David: Three cheers for you and your fan club! Send those cards and letters to: "Battlestar Galactica", ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90028. P.S. Good Luck!

Q: "Paper Chase" is entertaining, clever, enlightening, and should — by all rights — be a success for NBC. What does the network have against this occurring? C. MAIBERGER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: NBC has EVERYTHING against this occurring, because it's not their show! It happens to have aired on CBS-TV. Send your complaints to CBS (7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90036).

Q: What has happened to model actress Suzy Parker? How old is she? Is she married, and does she have any children? L. LITTLE, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Since her marriage (No. 3) to actor Bradford Dillman in 1963, by whom she has two children, Suzy has just appeared in a few movies. One, "Flight From Ashiya," is currently making the rounds via the late shows on TV. She's now 45, still a redhead and still beautiful.

Q: Where does Bob Hope live? Where can I write him? V. MARTIN, TIMMONSVILLE, S.C.

A: America's most durable comedy star lives with his ever lovin' wife, Delores, on a Toluca Lake estate near L.A., surrounded by six beautifully landscaped acres. Write to him c/o Hope Enterprises, 9229 Sunset Blvd., Ste. 408, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Q: Who played the wife on "The Addams Family," and what other roles has she had? H. SIDES, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Carolyn Jones played Morticia, the beautiful but somber lady of the house. Carolyn starred in many movies from 1952 until 1969 when she gave up acting to become a published novelist. In '76, however, she announced the resumption of her movie career and has been busy with feature films and TV movies since.

What's New?

Politics makes strange bedfellows. How true that was — literally as well as figuratively — as far back as ancient Rome is revealed as "I, Claudius" dramatizes the unparalleled lust for power that spelled the ruination of an empire on Masterpiece Theatre Sundays on PBS (9 p.m.).

Author Robert Graves painted the portrait of limitless immoral and amoral political and social behavior in his historical novels, "I, Claudius" and "Claudius the God." Both of the revelations of a century of royal chicanery, debauchery and murder — fiction drawn from solidly researched fact — were instant popular successes when they were published in 1934. "I, Claudius" alone sold out six printings during that first year, and has been steadily gobbled up ever since.

G'bye, Lindsay! Hi, Sidney!

Hollywood directors have been known to bang their head against a wall and scream when they learn that they'll be working on a show that has children in the cast.

It's not that they hate kids. But California laws give the directors plenty of headaches.

The laws not only outline where the child's pay goes (to make sure that no parent or guardian can spend it), but they also set strict limits as to the hours that children can work.

Babies and very young children are limited to only 15 minutes per day. As they get older, they can work a wee bit longer. But until their 18th birthday, youngsters in Hollywood can't work more than four hours a day.

That's why producers love twins.

When the legal time limit is reached for one twin, the director can substitute the other one and go right on shooting.

The Greenbush twins of NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie" (Mondays, 8 to 9 p.m.) are a perfect example.

AN INVISIBLE FRIEND—The Greenbush twins, Lindsay (l) and Sidney, appearing together for the first time in an episode of "Little House on the Prairie," are in the spotlight in "The Godister" segment airing Monday, Jun. 25 (8-9:30 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Celebrity Players

Sal Viscuso, who stars in "Soap," and Linda Kelsey of "Lou Grant" are the celebrity players on "The $20,000 Pyramid" during the week of June 25-29.

Dick Clark is host of the game show, in which two celebrity-contestant teams compete against the clock in a fast-paced word game. The winning contestant can win up to $20,000 in cash.

Lindsay and Sidney, who are now 8-year-olds, have been working on the popular show for five years. They share the role of little Carrie Ingalls.

"We have so many youngsters on our show that we'd be in big trouble if we couldn't use twins," says Landon, the show's executive producer and star.

"When we're shooting a scene with Lindsay as Carrie, and the social worker on the stage reminds us that she has reached the legal limit of her working hours, we just kiss Lindsay goodbye and bring in Sidney to take-over the role," Landon explains.

The system not only limits the number of hours that children can work, but it also spells out how many hours of schooling they must have and how many hours of playtime.

"Personally, I'm in favor of these laws," Landon says. "It's true that these kids are professional actors, making a lot of money, but it is also true that they're still children, and they must be protected and cared for."

The system works so well for Landon that last season, when the "Little House" scripts called for the birth of a new baby in the Ingalls family, he went right out and signed up another set of twins, Wendi and Brenda Turnbaugh, who recently celebrated their first birthday.

JAMES CAAN stars as the World War II leader of a group of American submarines out to attack the Nazi fleet, in "Submarine X-1," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Jun. 26 (9-11 p.m.).

Caan's First Starring Role

British miniature submarines go after a fleet of Nazi warships during the height of World War II, in "Submarine X-1," an action drama starring James Caan, to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," June 26 (9 to 11 p.m.).

In this, his first motion picture starring role, Caan portrays Lt. Cmdr. John Bolton. After losing his submarine in a battle with the German warship Lindendorf, Bolton is put in charge of a top secret training project at a remote castle in Scotland.

Among the men being trained is Lt. Davies (David Sumner), another survivor of the ill-fated battle, a man who blames the loss on Bolton's incompetence.

At first, the purpose of the secret training is a mystery even to Bolton. After fighting off an enemy force, the men realize that they are being prepared to man a new class of miniature submarines, the last ace in the hole for use against a fleet of Nazi warships gathering in the Norwegian fjords to launch an invasion of Britain.

To all involved it means danger, but to Bolton and Davies it also means another crack at the Lindendorf.

Her diamond pendant, set in 14K gold, is available in a choice of sizes starting as low as $215.

Arness In 'Macahans'

James Arness shed his badge and the clean-cut look of "Gunsmoke's" Marshall Dillon for buckskins and a handlebar mustache as Zeb, an Army scout in "The Macahans." The drama will be rebroadcast as ABC-TV's "Tuesday Movie of the Week" June 26 (11:30 p.m.).

According to John Mantley, executive producer of the saga based on "How the West Was Won," Arness' role of mountaineer Zeb Macahan is a radical departure from the role of Marshall Dillon. Mantley was formerly executive producer of the long running series.

"Dillon was bound by rules and regulations surrounding a marshall," says Mantley. "He was supposed to maintain his cool."

"Zeb is a totally free spirit. He goes where he wants and does as he pleases and if somebody presses him, he doesn't have the restrictions of a badge as to what he can do about it," the producer said.

Gripping Factual Story

The triumph of the human spirit and physical courage of Lauren Elder, who survived an airplane crash and hiked down one of America's highest wilderness mountains is vividly portrayed in "And I Alone Survived."

Blair Brown portrays the young woman in the drama which also stars David Ackroyd, James G. Richardson, Vera Miles, Elizabeth Cheshire, and G. D. Spradlin.

Three years ago Lauren, then 29, was a passenger in a single-engine Cessna 182 when it plunged into the side of the Sierra 15 feet from the summit.

A woman companion died a few hours after the crash on a sunny, cloudless spring afternoon. The pilot perished during the night when temperatures plunged below freezing at an altitude of more than 12,000 feet.

Her teeth smashed, left arm fractured and right knee deeply gashed, a hallucinating Elder determines to claw her way down one-and-a-half miles of ice and rock.

Time and again she came to all but impassable precipices. Sharp rocks shredded her boots. She hallucinated, imagining houses and farms and people. She walked, tumbled and struggled through boulder-strewn canyons, down dry stream beds and water falls. A turned ankle or broken leg would have caused her death. Lauren covered some 20 miles of rugged terrain. She abandoned her boots the last 10 miles or so, proceeding barefoot, walking in streams when she could.

Eventually she reached the desert floor below and walked across sand and rock to a highway which she followed into the small town of Independence, Calif., where Charlie Manson was jailed after his capture.

Townpeople, who mistook her for a Manson-like hippie, turned her away. She eventually came upon a deputy sheriff who took her to a hospital and safety.

'Ruby Gentry' Airs On CBS

"Ruby Gentry," starring Jennifer Jones and Charlton Heston, will air as the "CBS Late Movie" Tuesday, June 26 (12:30 a.m.).

When the picture was first released, the New York Times critic said: "It is a credit to King Vidor's sensitive direction that Jennifer Jones, as a Ruby Gentry who is often more physical than delicate, gives stature to the delineation. A spirited and passionate creature, she generates voltage in tight-fitting jeans or evening gowns as the girl who could learn to hate as easily as she loves. Charlton Heston is a convincingly muscular and indomitable gent, whose attempts to better his lot destroy him."

The story concerns a luckless lady (Jones), born on the wrong side of the tracks in a status-conscious town, who is in love with Boake Tackman (Heston), the worthless son of a once-prominent family. When she is betrayed by her social-climbing lover, she marries a much older, but very kind and very wealthy, businessman (Karl Malden). The marriage works very well until Ruby meets Boake again and finds her love for him as strong as ever. When her husband is accidentally killed, the townspeople believe she has murdered him.

Ruby's inheritance gives her revenge on the town — and on her again-faithless lover — but the revenge is not sweet.

Rare Sequences Are Filmed

Just how big is a pelican's pouch? In a rare film sequence, Walt Disney Productions' underwater photographers have actually captured the gawky birds diving into the water and opening their beaks and pouches to capture their finney prey.

Filmed off the Florida Keys for "The Survival of Sam the Pelican," a one-hour nature adventure airing Sunday, June 24, on "The Wonderful World of Disney" (7 p.m. on NBC-TV), the exciting sequence was shot in both regular and slow motion.

Underwater cameramen William "Bumpy" Bell and Brian Burton spent three days recording the below-the-surface actions of nature's best fishermen. Using bait fish to lure the sharp-eyed birds, who will dive from as high as 75 feet in the air, the cameras captured birds diving singly and in groups into the water.

As the long slender beaks slip into the sea, they open and the pouches balloon out to entrap the fish. The birds pop back to the surface and leisurely have lunch, or else fly back to the mangroves where, during nesting season, a hungry mate and hatchlings await.

And how big is a pelican's pouch? About a foot deep, inflating enough to take in some 2 1/2 gallons of sea water.

Kim Friese, Scott Lee and Bill DeHollander co-star in the drama that begins with teenager Rick Preston (Friese) packing his belongings on his motorcycle and heading towards the Florida

Keys in hopes of finding a quiet spot to get his head together.

Once into the Keys, Rick runs into Pete Barns (Lee) who operates a charter boat service. Pete is on his way to a treasure dive and asks Rick to join him. The adventure is not enough, however, to keep Rick from his plan to live the life of a beach hobo. He asks Pete to drop him off on a secluded island. Pete does as requested and promises to check on Rick when he returns from a charter.

Out diving for lobsters, Rick is almost run over by Dave Weyburn (DeHollander) a Fish and Wildlife Department officer who is taking a pelican census during the nesting season. Weyburn convinces Rick to join him in the task.

CHARLTON HESTON and Jennifer Jones struggle desperately to escape "the wrong side of the tracks" in "Ruby Gentry," a movie classic on "The CBS Late Movie." Tuesday, Jun. 26 at 12:30 a.m.

Hard-Hitting CBS Drama

"Report to the Commissioner," a hard-hitting drama of an idealistic rookie cop's ensnarement in the complexities of big-city police politics, will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," June 27 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Michael Moriarty, Yaphet Kotto, Susan Blakely, Hector Elizondo and Tony King star in the drama.

Bo Lockley (Moriarty), a young narcotics detective, confronts Stick Henderson (King), a major heroin dealer, at his apartment. In a shoot-out, he inadvertently kills a young woman with Henderson, not realizing she is also an undercover narcotics agent. Henderson escapes and Lockley pursues him on foot through midtown Manhattan to a department store, where they wind up in a tense, gun-point standoff.

As police reinforcements gather, an investigation into the incident begins, swirling with treacherous crosscurrents of opportunistic politics, intrigues and cover-ups, building to a shattering climax.

SUSAN BLAKELY plays an undercover narcotics agent for the New York Police Department in "Report to the Commissioner," which will be telecast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Jun. 27 (9-11 p.m.).

Is there anybody else?

On a recent appearance on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson," consumer reporter David Horowitz told Carson and his nationwide audience that if everyone would cut their driving and gasoline usage by three to five gallons a week, "We would save enough gasoline to create a surplus and in turn other nations would be backed up with gasoline — they'd get our message then."

Horowitz, who also is seen on his syndicated "Consumer Buylines" program, must have hit home with his concept because, a few days later, he received a letter from March Fong Ue, Secretary of State, California (from her Sacramento office), which read:

"Dear David:

I want to commend your initiative and lend my support to your call for a three-to-five-gallon per week reduction in gasoline usage by automobile users in this country. It occurs to me that the Horowitz strategy promises to be the most effective and dramatic way the motorist can get his or her frustrated and angry message to the Federal government, the oil companies, and ultimately to the member nations of O.P.E.C.

"In California alone, there were 18,160,594 registered vehicles last year which drove an estimated 165,130,609,000 miles. We could reduce our consumption by 217,927,128 gallons per month with a voluntary three gallon per vehicle, per week reduction. The national impact would be astronomical.

"I want to help get the message across. I take the Horowitz Pledge. March Fong Ue Said Horowitz: "I'm flattered that March took the time to write to me. When you say something on 'The Tonight Show,' you do get results.

New Cast additions

Rip Torn, Allyn Ann McLerie and Benjamin Bottoms join the cast of "A Shining Season," starring Timothy Bottoms, a new motion picture-for-television now in production in Albuquerque, N.M., for broadcast on CBS-TV.

The inspiring drama is based on the true story of University of New Mexico track star John Baker, who knew he had a terminal disease but devoted his final year of life working with handicapped youngsters and coaching a girls' track team to a title-winning season.

Rip Torn, seen recently as President Richard M. Nixon on the mini-series, "Blind Ambition," plays Baker's father. McLerie, who appeared in "The Tony Randall Show" and recently completed another new movie for television titled "And Baby Makes Six," portrays Baker's mother. Benjamin Bottoms, Timothy's real-life younger brother, plays Baker's brother. The two brothers also appeared together in the film "Stalk the Wild Child."

DOWN TO EARTH-Karen (Donna Pontorotto, left) and Roxie (Carol Wayne) are back on Earth, after having been sent to Heaven before their time by a heavenly computer error, and will remain on terra firma as long as they perform good deeds, in "Heaven on Earth," the spirited "Comedy Theater" presentation Thursday, Jun. 28 (8:30-9 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Darn That Computer!

Carol Wayne and Donna Pontorotto star as two young women whose lives are cut short by "some mindless gadget," in "Heaven on Earth," a spirited romp on NBC-TV's "Comedy Theater" Thursday, June 28 (8:30 to 9 p.m.).

Due to an error in heaven's new computers, roommates Roxie (Wayne) and Karen (Pontorotto) are victims of a fatal auto accident. After the crash, the accident "unhappens" and the girls return to their apartment, where they find a distinguished conservatively dressed man waiting for them.

The visitor, Sebastian Parnell (1885-1928), played by William Daniels, offers to clear up the confusion by explaining to the girls that they no longer exist. He adds that the new computers make more mistakes in a week than 200 old codgers with quill pens made in a thousand years.

DEPUTY SHERIFF-Folk singer John Denver (l) guest-stars as Deputy Sheriff Dewey Cobb in "The Colorado Cattle Caper," a McCloud segment of the "CBS Late Movie," Thursday, Jun. 28 at 12:30 a.m.

Denver Has Fun

Singer-songwriter John Denver has shown city slickers how good a job a country boy can do. Marshal Sam McCloud proved to the sophisticated New York police how good a job a country cop from New Mexico can do.

So, it wasn't surprising that the real country boy got together with the fictional country boy to show how two country boys can expose a modern-day cattle rustling ring — on television.

Denver, with his wire-rimmed glasses, straight blond hair and trusty guitar, guest-starred in "The Colorado Cattle Caper."

Denver plays Deputy Dewey Cobb of Twin Forks, Colo., who allows McCloud to talk him into tracking down the bad guys "McCloud" style, which gets Cobb in trouble with his irascible superior, played by Claude Akins.

"The whole experience of filming this segment was exciting," Denver commented. "I had my first screen fight. The stunt guys showed me how to hit, how to feel with the body and how to fall."

It was fortunate for John that he did learn to fall. He threw his first screen punch so hard he lost his balance.

Although acting is relatively new for Denver, he feels it's not much different than singing.

"Acting and singing are similar, because in both cases you want to communicate something. I communicate a message in my music and we communicated a story in this film."

What Projects???

Michael Learned will return to CBS-TV's "The Waltons," the series she departed before the end of the seventh season to devote her time to other projects.

SPOTLIGHT

Never A Dull Moment!

It doesn't matter whether the cameras are rolling on the set of "Diff'rent Strokes" because the show's co-star, Todd Bridges, always seem to be 'on.' In fact, his mother candidly admits that "Things are never dull with Todd around, believe me!"

The irrepressible 14-year-old (Todd's birthday was May 27) comes by this naturally, however, because he is the youngest member of an 'all-show business' family.

His father, James Bridges, is a Hollywood agent. Also busy — with acting — are his mother, Betty, his older sister, Verda, 18, and brother James Jr., 19.

Todd, born in San Francisco, began doing commercials at the age of 6, and eventually appeared in some 16 national television ad campaigns. He moved into TV comedy and drama when the family went to Hollywood in 1974. One of his first big roles was on "Little House on the Prairie"

— he played the small black child who offered to sell himself into slavery in order to get an education.

TODD BRIDGES

Other television credits include two short-running series, "The Practice" and "Popi"; the television movie, "Catherine"; a television pilot, "The Orphan and the Dude"; "The Waltons," "The Love Boat" and "Police Story." He also was a cast member of the feature film "Fire Sale."

Prior to his co-starring role as Willis Jackson in NBC-TV's "Diff'rent Strokes," Todd was a 'regular' on "Fish."

While portraying the precocious Loomis on "Fish," Todd was honored with an "All-American boy" award at ceremonies attended by an aide to Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley. Postal workers kicked in to establish a special mail box for him, and area businesses — including a barber shop, a beauty parlor and a beauty contest organizer — plastered their walls with posters of the young star.

Todd is active in many sports but excels in baseball and football, which he plays in the Culver City, Calif., youth leagues. His other hobbies include fishing, biking and snake hunting.

Some Sisters!!

Twin sisters who are identical only in their love for the same men discover that those feelings seem to lead to sudden and mysterious death for the men involved in "Love Trap," a tale of suspense and romantic entanglement on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," June 29 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Tony Franciosa, Donna Mills, Patty Duke Astin, June Lockhart, June Allyson, Max Gail, Jeff Corey and Vic Morrow star in the film, with Sid Caesar in a special appearance and Roz Kelly as the special guest star.

In the film, Mark Higbee (Franciosa) is hired by one of the sisters (Mills) to investigate the death of her fiancé, who was last seen with "a dark, attractive woman" before his murder. Higbee soon learns that the murder may be one in a series of bizarre killings, all of which are connected in some way with one or the other of the sisters. Finally, Higbee begins to solve the case and learns the terrifying truth.

MARK HIGBEE (Tony Franciosa) and Flaps (Roz Kelly, right) are under attack by a huge spider in "Love Trap," a two-hour motion picture airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," Jun. 29 (9-11 p.m.).

Krauss Out

Michael Krauss, producer of NBC-TV's "Today Show," decided not to renew his contract with the network when it expired the end of May. Krauss cited "creative differences" between himself and NBC News as the decisive factor for resigning.

"NBC News decided that 'The Today Show' should maintain a hard news approach, whereas I felt that there should be more of a mix between hard news and other light material," Krauss explained. "I was hoping to present more people profiles and other material of general human interest."

Krauss stated that the parting was amicable. He served as producer of the program for about a year-and-a-half. "I was brought to the show originally to make changes in the general tone of the program," he added.

CHRIS CHAMBLISS, one of the finest clutch hitters in the game of baseball, will join his teammates, the New York Yankees, when they take on their ancient rivals, the Boston Red Sox on NBC's Major League Baseball Game of the Week, Saturday, June 30 starting at 2:15 p.m.

The Yankees' Unsung Hero

Sure, you can talk all day about the free agents like Reggie Jackson, Rich Gossage and Bucky Dent, and the superstars like Ron Guidry and Graig Nettles. But, over the past four seasons, Chris Chambliss has been one of the quiet, unsung heroes on the world champion New York Yankees team.

Few know, however, that Chambliss almost didn't stay with the Yanks, and that he didn't report to camp the first few days when the Cleveland Indians traded him to the New Yorkers.

The Yankee first baseman will join his team when they battle their old rivals, the Boston Red Sox, in a key American League clash Saturday, June 30, on "NBC's Game of the Week" (2:15 p.m.).

In 1974, the Yanks made one of the deals that helped carry them to two world championships when they dealt Fritz Peterson, Steve Kline, Fred Beene and Tom Buskey to Cleveland. In return, they received Dick Tidrow, Cecil Upshaw and Chambliss. Only the latter is presently on the Yankee club, but Tidrow was a key reliever and spot starter for New York for four seasons.

But Chris wasn't too happy about reporting to the Yankees.

"I had just gotten married and Audrey (his wife) and I had taken an apartment in Cleveland," Chambliss recalls. "The furniture arrived about the time I was traded to New York. It put me in a state of shock because I figured I'd be set in Cleveland for a long time. The only thing that helped me was knowing Gabe Paul had made the deal. He was my first general manager with the Indians."

Then came the 1976 season, when the big clutch hitter thought he might be traded. "That was the last year," he says. "I went to spring training knowing that no matter what I did, I wouldn't be playing. The man (Bill Virdon) had decided to use Roy White on first. But Roy got hurt and I was put in the lineup."

He has stayed there for three seasons and, not coincidentally, the Yankees have captured three consecutive American League Pennants over that span.

Chambliss is not a big home run producer (87 in eight seasons), but few will forget that dramatic blast against the Kansas City Royals in the final playoff game in the American League in 1976.

Earlier in the season, Chris belted a three-run homer in the bottom on the ninth with two outs to beat the Red Sox. So talk all you want about the Jacksons and the Guidrys: Chris Chambliss is one clutch hitter the Yankees can't do without.

Denver On Radio

John Denver will be the subject of the third of the NBC Radio Network's eight music specials in 1979.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
 PFA Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — SHARON FARRELL and WILLIAM SMITH have more in common than just being the two new cast members on "HAWAII FIVE-O." Before they each departed for Hawaii for the start of production, both Sharon and William had to arrange for someone to take care of their pet dogs during their absence. Sharon found a neighbor who volunteered while Bill coaxed a friend to welcome his canine into a new home for the next nine months.

Reportedly, CHERYL TIEGS has sent a bigtime lawyer to West Germany in an effort to free her estranged husband, STAN DRAGOTI. Stan, of course, has been in jail across the Atlantic since his arrest for alleged cocaine possession some three weeks ago. And oh yes, it's also understood that Cheryl has told the lawyer that price is not object, which might suggest that there's a rekindled flame in Cheryl's heart for her hubby.

As she did when "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" went on location in Hawaii and Aspen, CHERYL LADD took along her housekeeper nanny when the show went on location in the Caribbean to take care of daughter JORDAN while mommy's working. Likewise, JACLYN SMITH was accompanied by hubby DENNIS COLE, but the new kid on the block SHELLEY HACK, had only a couple of books in hand.

Not surprisingly, LONI ANDERSON has been in big demand for public appearances during her hiatus from "WRKP IN CINCINNATI." Loni has traveled all over the country this Spring, making no less than a dozen stop-overs in the Ohio city, but now she's back home in L.A. and is cutting herself off from the outside world until mid-July when the show resumes production.

LARRY WILCOX of "CHiPs" will host a benefit rodeo early this summer, with all proceeds going to the equestrian team of the U.S. Olympics. Larry, of course, is a professional rodeo cowboy when he's not in front of the camera.

Little known fact about the late JACK HALEY. It was actually a fluke that he ended up in the role of the Tin Man in "THE WIZARD OF OZ." Just days before MGM Studios was to begin production on the movie, the studio discovered that the contract actor who was to portray the character was allergic to aluminum paint, so Jack was hired on loan from another studio. The actor he replaced was BUDDY EBSEN!

Erik Estrada, who stars as "Ponch" on "CHiPs," was awarded the Golden Eagle by NOSOTROS, the Hispanic entertainment industry organization, at a banquet held recently in Los Angeles.

Estrada, whose parents are Puerto Rican, was one of 18 show business personalities honored at the banquet.

Others who received Golden Eagles at the affair were Pepe Serna, Mike Gomez, Andy Russell, the Lennon Sisters, Roxanne Bonilla-Giannini, Ricardo Montalban, Maria Richwine and Gordon Davison.

Boxing Airs On 'SportsWorld'

Hard-hitting boxing action, featuring top contenders within the heavyweight and light-heavyweight ranks will be the featured live main events on successive "SportsWorld."

The June 24th edition will spotlight former world heavyweight champ Leon Spinks — in action for the first time since he lost his title to Muhammad Ali last September — in a scheduled 12-rounder in Monte Carlo against unbeaten South African heavyweight champ Gerrie Coetzee.

On July 1, prison inmate James Scott, unbeaten in 15 professional fights, will make his first network television appearance when he goes against veteran light-heavyweight Yaqui Lopez in a scheduled 10-rounder before "SportsWorld" cameras inside the walls of Rahway (N.J.) State Prison.

Spinks, who won the light-heavyweight title in the 1976 Olympics, gained the world heavyweight crown February 15, 1978, with a stunning split-decision victory over Muhammad Ali. Seven months later, Ali regained the crown, winning the rematch by a unanimous decision. Spinks will carry a 7-1-1 (5 KOs) pro record into the Monte Carlo bout. Coetzee, at 24 a year younger than Spinks, is undefeated in 21 pro fights with 11 wins coming via the KO route. Dick Engberg and Ken Norton will be at ringside to describe the action.

The following Sunday, the spotlight will be on James Scott as he faces the toughest test of his pro career. The fighter, who

Robert Sacchi, a Humphrey Bogart lookalike, has been signed by writer-producer Andrew J. Fenady to portray the late star in "The Man With Bogart's Face." Also signed at the same time was Misty Rowe, one of the stars of "Hee Haw."

Sacchi has done several television commercials as the Bogart lookalike, and also has an extensive stage background.

Rowe, who plays a sexy, dumb blonde on TV's "Hee Haw," will play the same type role in the film.

'American Way'

Bob Hope, Howard Jarvis and Robert Sherwood are guest stars in the first episode of "The American Way," a syndicated series for television. Horace Heidt is executive producer and creator of the series.

Secured Right

ABC Sports has secured the right to the Larry Holmes-Earnie Shavers heavyweight fight Sept. 14, and will cover the event live.

SOUTH AFRICAN SLUGGER—Big and brawny Gerrie Coetzee, the undefeated (21-0) South African heavyweight champion, will face the toughest challenge of his professional boxing career when he tangles with former world heavyweight titleholder Leon Spinks in a scheduled 12-rounder on "SportsWorld" Sunday, Jun. 24 (4-5:30 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

made headlines when he upset then No. 1-ranked WBA light-heavyweight contender Eddie Gregory at Rahway in October, 1978, is serving a 30-40 year prison term for armed robbery. Scott, who sports a pro mark of 14-0-1 with 8 KOs, has spend most of the last 17 years as a maximum custody inmate, a fact that prevents him from boxing outside prison walls.

Lopez will be looking to set himself up for another shot at the world light-heavyweight title with a convincing win over Scott. A Mexican-American who fights out of Stockton, Calif., Lopez has a 45-8-0 lifetime mark including 29 KOs. Early in 1978 he demolished former WBA light-heavyweight kind Mike Rossman, scoring a six-round TKO over the Jewish Bomber in New York.

ON TO WIMBLEDON: NBC Sports commentator Bud Collins who has become such a familiar figure at Wimbledon that many tennis buffs suspect him of being there when the oldest and most prestigious event in tennis first began, will be at the All-England Law Tennis and Croquet Club to describe the play when NBC Sports telecasts extensive Wimbledon coverage Saturday, Jun. 30 (5-6:30 p.m.); Sunday, July 1 (2-4 p.m.); and Saturday, July 7 (9 a.m.-3 p.m.).

Soccer Action On CBS

En route to their second straight NASL championship last season, the New York Cosmos lost only one game on their home turf at Giants Stadium — to the New England Tea Men, their opponents in ABC's third 1979 NASL. New England's 3-1 victory at Giants Stadium last year ended the Cosmos' league-record home winning streak at 23 games. It was also the Tea Men's second victory over the champions in a week; they had beaten the Cosmos at Schaefer Stadium in Foxboro, Mass., by a 1-0 score in overtime.

The intensity and vigor of the two games between these teams last year prompted talk of another great Boston-New York rivalry, comparable to that of the Yankees and the Red Sox in baseball and the old Celtics and Knicks in basketball. Many thought the rivals might meet again in Soccer Bowl '78.

The Cosmos did make it to the title game (and won), but the Tea Men were ousted from the playoffs in the single-elimination opening round game, losing to Fort Lauderdale.

Still, their inaugural season was a great success for the Tea Men, who were born when Lipton Tea Company officials contacted the NASL about an advertising agreement and wound up purchasing a franchise. The expansion Tea Men won the American Conference Eastern Division title with a 19-11 record. They were the only team to beat the Cosmos twice — and the Cosmos lost only four of 30-regular season games last year.

The Tea Men are coached once again by Noel Cantwell, assisted by Dennis Viollet. The Cosmos have a coaching arrangement unique in the NASL — Prof. Julio Mazzei, longtime friend and advisor of the great Pele, has overall charge of the team but bears the title of Technical Director, while Ray Klivecka is the coach.

The two men have been guiding the Cosmos in tandem since the June 1 firing of Eddie Firmani, who coached the New Yorkers to their two previous titles, in 1977 and '78.

Cantwell, an Irishman, came to the Tea Men after a distinguished career in English soccer as a top defender and the longtime captain of Manchester United. After coaching in England for 10 years, he retired and bought a pub, deciding to try a different lifestyle. But Lipton lured him back.

NORTH AMERICAN SOCCER LEAGUE action will be televised on ABC-TV, Sunday, Jun. 24 at 2:30 p.m. when New England meets New York.

NATIONAL AAU SHORT COURSE SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIPS will be televised from Los Angeles on NBC's "SportsWorld," Sunday, Jun. 24 at 4 p.m.

One Of The Oldest Sports

One of the world's oldest sports, swimming, will be featured on NBC-TV's "SportsWorld" Sunday, June 24 (4 to 5:30 p.m.), with coverage of the National AAU Short Course Swimming Championships.

Man has always wanted to move around in water without worrying too much about style. However, novices have long been dominated by the instinctive fear of putting their heads in the water. The splashing dog-paddle head-out-of-water style easily developed into the classical breaststroke, known since ancient Egyptian times: a make-up spoon from Egypt in the Louvre Museum depicts a girl swimming breaststroke. But our ancestors probably knew about paddling with their feet; an Egyptian bas-relief shows soldiers crossing a river by this means of propulsion, although supported by goatskins filled with air.

Until 1800, the breaststroke was considered the fastest and best stroke for man. But at that time endurance was considered more important than speed; Lord Byron's crossing of the Hellespont in 1810 and of the Tagus in 1818, and the first cross-Channel swim by Captain Matthew Webb in 1875 were significant achievements of swimming endurance.

Efficiency in style was sacrificed for the sake of economy. Thus, the sidestroke made its appearance, to be followed by the overarm sidestroke in about 1883. The first association of clubs was created in January, 1869, at a meeting at the German Gymnasium in King's Cross, London: This was the Metropolitan Swimming Association, which later became the London Swimming Association. Disputes over the definition of amateurism led to the creation of the Amateur Swimming Association (ASA) in 1886.

The introduction of timed speed events quickly led to a profusion of different styles. In 1873 came a new and faster style with the recovery of both arms over the water. Around 1900, a stroke was introduced in Australia — each arm cleared the water in time with a deep leg kick. Charles Daniels, an American, saw the stroke, studied it, compared it with the almost identical stroke used by the Hawaiians and returned to Britain in 1906 to win the English 100-yards championship, with a faster and more flexible movement of the feet, in 58.6 seconds.

The backstroke is the direct and logical complement to the forward stroke, and the butterfly was the result of a loophole in the breaststroke regulations. These did not specify whether the arms were to be thrust forward in or out of the water after they had been pulled back, so the idea evolved to lift them above the surface, while keeping the breaststroke leg scissors movement.

Leonard-Chiaverini Bout

Live coverage of the scheduled 10-round junior middleweight fight between undefeated Sugar Ray Leonard and Tony Chiaverini, from Las Vegas, Nevada, will be presented on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," Sunday, June 24 (4:30 to 6 p.m.).

Leonard is currently ranked second in the world in the welterweight division by the World Boxing Association and third by the World Boxing Council. A 1976 Olympic gold medalist, Leonard has emerged as one of the most exciting professional fighters in the world. He is in line for a shot later this year at the WBC Welterweight Championship now held by Wilfred Benitez.

Bad Is Good For Faye

Being bad has been very good for Faye Dunaway. In "The Happening," she was involved with kidnapping. In "Bonnie and Clyde," she was a bank robber.

In "The Thomas Crown Affair," she played an unscrupulous insurance investigator, and in "Little Big Man," a lady of pleasure. She is at her morally worst yet in "The Three Musketeers."

"I played Milady, Cardinal Richelieu's spy and Rochefort's mistress," says Faye. "Milady embodies vengeance; she has an incredible taste for revenge. She is definitely not one-dimensional, but a total villain. Rochefort kills in the picture for pleasure, but Milady does so for ambition. She's very real, loving, crying, feeling, and occasionally killing."

FAYE DUNAWAY stars as the scheming Milady, who is a spy for the cunning Cardinal Richelieu in "The Three Musketeers," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," Jun. 30 (9-11 p.m.).

Merit Replacing High Tar Brands.

—National Smoker Study

Majority of 'Enriched Flavor'™ smokers show no regrets about leaving former high tar favorites.

Do smokers attracted to low tar MERIT stay with the brand, or "backslide" to former high tar favorites? Read what MERIT smokers had to say in a nationwide research effort.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

And in research conducted among smokers who taste-tested MERIT against leading high tar brands:

Confirmed: Majority of smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested!

Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

This ability to satisfy, and especially to satisfy over long periods of time, could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is the first real alternative for high tar smokers.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR STANFORD G. ROSS, Commissioner of Social Security

We hear of many cases where wealthy people, who don't need it, collect Social Security. What can be done to give some of this money to those who do? — E.N., Flint, Mich.

● Social Security benefits are not based on individual need, but are an earned right. Everybody is vulnerable to a sudden reduction in income, regardless of his or her station in life. Society needs some mechanism to guard against the risk when it is most likely to occur — at the retirement, disability or death of the worker. In our society, Social Security meets that need. The Social Security benefit structure is weighted so that low earners get a higher benefit relative to their contributions. Benefits replace about 53 percent of wages for the low earner, compared to 42 percent for the average earner and 30 percent for high earners.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Please fill me in on the Vice President's Norwegian roots — W.N., Jefferson City, Mo.

● Lester Mondale, the Vice President's brother and the family historian, has traced their paternal ancestors back several generations. Their great-grandfather, Frederick, was born in Vangsnes. He married Brita Mundal who had inherited a farm in the village Mundal in about 1856. He had changed his name when he married Brita, and they emigrated, with their son, Ole, the Vice President's grandfather, in the 1850's. The Vice President and his wife Joan visited Mundal this past Easter. He had been there the first time in 1975. He still has some distant relatives in Vangsnes and Mundal, and he is earnestly trying to learn Norwegian. This picture was taken after Easter services at the Mundal church. At left is Pastor Egil Thorbjornsen with Vice President Mondale.

Our V.P. in Norway: a touch of Viking.

Robert McNeely / The White House

FOR DOLLY PARTON, singer-composer

Would you have gotten where you are if you had a different face and figure? — T.I., Salina, Kan.

● As a performer, I probably wouldn't have achieved as much as I have without my looks and shape. But I'm certain my music-writing ability would have brought me far. And I'm sure that when I get as far as the "memories" department, I'll be remembered most as a singer. The clothes, wigs and my figure will see to that. But if I had my choice, I'd rather be recalled and classified as a writer.

FOR ROBERT WALDEN of CBS-TV's Lou Grant

How come you're not married? — S.G.S., Albany, N.Y.

● I don't know too many people who lead happy, married lives. Seems to me that most couples spend a third of their marriage complaining about each other to each other, which means their lives are not all that exciting. I almost got married once. I called off the wedding two weeks before it was due. That was the most difficult and best decision I ever made. Perhaps one of these days, though, I'll meet someone who'll make everything I've just said look ridiculous.

FOR BOB KEESHAN, CBS-TV's Captain Kangaroo

Do children prefer shows that are educational, or do they enjoy TV more if there is no "message" attached? — E.W., Pocatello, Idaho

● Do adults prefer to watch shows that are educational? That's your answer. Children are no different from adults. But the most educational program is the one that also entertains, and if you cannot find curriculum-related material in a program your child is viewing, don't be alarmed. Even your child needs to relax and get away from it all.

FOR RAQUEL WELCH, actress

You've been described as aggressive. Do you go along with that? — I.P., Dover, Del.

● My basic personality is to try to go ahead with what I have to do, and have planned to do, even though I'm aware of all the things that can go wrong. I like to overcome situations, rather than let situations overcome me. That happened a while ago when a director maligned me. So I keep on doing what I want to do. If this adds up to aggression, then I suppose I'm aggressive.

FOR EDITH HEAD, Oscar-winning designer

Does your experience in creating clothes for the movies help you in home decoration? — E.C., Fort Collins, Colo.

● Yes, because I use fabric, color and design to achieve whatever results I want. For example, if I want to make a woman look larger, I will put her in light colors and larger prints. The same applies to a room. Of course, to make a larger man or woman appear smaller, I do the opposite — use darker shades and plain fabric. This would also apply to the size of a room.

FOR BRIGADIER GENERAL MARGARET A. BREWER, U.S. Marine Corps Director of Information

Women are often said to be petty and thin-skinned. Do they lose these qualities when they enter the services? — G.V., Sacramento, Calif.

● I don't agree that women are petty and sensitive. Services provide opportunities for those men and women who join to develop and enhance their leadership abilities, and being "petty and thin-skinned" would be inconsistent with effective leadership.

PRO Rep. G.V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D.-Miss.)

Questions have rightfully been raised about the ability of America to respond to a threat to its security. The present lack of state and local Selective Service boards, unlike the past, makes it virtually impossible for America to mobilize its forces for a major national defense emergency. However, if we return to a revitalized

Selective Service by requiring registration, we could save 60 to 90 days if mobilization became necessary. Mandatory registration for Selective Service is needed, not to prepare for war, but to prevent war — because the perception other nations have of our ability to repel attack will influence their decision as to whether or not to take aggressive action.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be A Return To Selective Service Registration?

CON Rep. Jim Weaver (D.-Ore.)

Registration is not the issue. Preparation for a return to the draft is the real issue. Proponents in Congress say we must legislate registration for national defense — emergency preparedness. The fact is, the President has the authority to begin registration today should it be necessary. Universal registration would be a dangerous governmental invasion of the privacy of all Americans. Studies show that registrations would only save 13 days should a massive mobilization be necessary. Registration will not bring recruits into the Reserve. But the draft would provide the high number of bodies the military desires. Proponents of registration make no bones about it — registration is but the first step in a return to conscription.

GLENDA JACKSON: A STAR WITH A TOUCH OF SASS

By Jane Hershey

When British actress Glenda Jackson won her second Oscar for her role as "the other woman" in A Touch of Class, she blithely announced that now her mother would have a nice pair of bookends. "Actually," this disarmingly honest actress admits, "she polishes those 'bookends' every day!"

Next spring, when the Awards committee meets again, its members may well decide that Glenda Jackson deserves to begin another pair of bookends for her role in the Columbia Pictures release, Lost and Found. Like A Touch of Class, Glenda's new picture deals with two complicated individuals who fall in love and try to make the relationship stick despite overwhelming social problems.

Lost and Found reunites Jackson with her old Touch of Class partner, George Segal. But, while Segal has always had a reputation as a sophisticated screen comic, why is it that Glenda Jackson, one of the world's most sought-after stage and film personalities, ends up in so many of America's funniest domestic situation comedies?

Jackson has a ready explanation: "I like working with Americans, and doing films like 'Lost and Found' gives me a chance to examine aspects of American life without having to stand on a soapbox," she says. "It's fine for me to look at things in your country from a domestic comedy's point of view; it would be highly presumptuous of me to say what's right or wrong in a straight drama like The China Syndrome or Coming Home. For me to take an active stand for or against something, the film would have to be set in England, or at least Europe."

Lost and Found, charming and sidesplitting though it is, does have its serious side. Glenda plays an English divorcee who literally keeps colliding with American widower George Segal at a glamorous French ski resort. The two impulsively wed, and then return to his college where Segal immediately becomes embroiled in a tenure race which pits him against his best faculty buddy. What's more, Jackson quickly learns that her outgoing, devil-may-care husband is still hung up on his dead wife and his bohemian mother, and he can't seem to shake his drinking habits, or his sexy, graduate-student playmate.

"I was attracted to the script, because the film explores the gritty underside of academic life," says Glenda. "I was naive about universities — I thought that everyone gave up thoughts of backstabbing in such places. But I've been filled in on what really goes on. A horrible revelation!"

In Lost and Found Jackson plays a polished and peppery location film secretary named Trisha. She is a strong character, but "You might say I fought for her to be more well-rounded," explains Glenda. "You can't really go up to someone and say 'Yes, I'll do your film' and then demand a hundred changes. But I did discuss how certain scenes could be improved by having Trisha react in a stronger, more realistic manner."

"It bothers me that so many good writers find women characters too boring to develop properly," she continues. "It's getting better, but there's still so much that women haven't been allowed to experience on a movie screen."

While you could hardly call Glenda Jackson a knockout beauty or an instantly recognizable face, stardom, and the strains it puts on one's family and career are problems she must face. Her 17-year-old marriage recently dissolved, yet she and her "ex" share the parenting of their son, Daniel, to the point where they are willing to travel together when Glenda's work takes her abroad. But being a public figure is not something Glenda enjoys.

"I don't know how people like Carol Burnett and James Garner put up with it so well," she yells. "I worked with Carol on Robert Altman's Health, and it was unbelievable what people did to her if we went out for a meal. They would insist that she pose with every member of their family. If people did that to me, the air would be blue with my language."

This kind of fame has discouraged Jackson from doing more television work, despite the accolades she received as Elizabeth I in the BBC production, Elizabeth R.

"I know it's the bread and butter for many actors," she says with a sigh. "but to my mind, acting for television means working for a clock. No television camera is ever as interested in you as a film camera is. Audiences see television actors from between their toes. It's too casual an intimacy. The actors become too much a part of the audience's daily life."

Glenda lives with her son in a pleasant semi-suburb of London, and while she obviously treasures normality, she does have a few slightly decadent fantasies.

"I would love to be someone's kept woman," she says, smiling and clapping her hands together like a genie. "But only for a day or so. I mean, it would become so boring and degrading after that."

In reality, her thoughts about relationships are much more down-to-earth.

"I don't want to marry again," she stresses. "Marriage as a shelter from life's realities is a myth. We make marriage too easy in our society; divorce should be easy, but marriage should require contemplation and training."

Glenda Jackson is now in her early forties, an age many actresses feel is the prime time of their careers. But Glenda Jackson feels no great inner need to go on. She does it because the parts keep coming.

"When I first left the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London, they warned me not to expect too many good roles until I reached middle age," she says wryly. "That's because I wasn't blond and busty. I've been lucky, though, because I got a chance to do so many marvelous stage plays almost right off the bat."

"If someone had said that I couldn't act 20 years ago," she continues, "it would have crushed me terribly, but not now. Now, I could happily go back to school. I'm still amazed when people offer me work. It's such a tight market."

Glenda Jackson's screen and stage excellence comes from something much deeper and more committed than simple drive or need for an audience.

"I'm lucky because I've always had something I wanted to do, and I got the chance to do it," she explains. "It happened to be acting. I don't think that commercial success is the key to a rewarding life, but rather, a sense of wanting to excel at something. I believe in a commitment to quality in whatever you choose to do with your life."

There's a touch of class about Glenda Jackson.

OLYMPIC PREVIEW: THE RUSH FOR MOSCOW GOLD

Predicting Olympic medal winners more than a year before the Moscow Games is a little like playing Russian roulette with all the chambers loaded. Yet, a scenario of the Games of the 22nd modern Olympiad, billed by NBC as the most colossal sports and television event in history, is already taking shape, and several extraordinary American stars are emerging. In all, 400 of our finest athletes will survive next June's pre-Games trials to face over 11,000 opponents in some 200 events.

Despite the proliferation of statistics, the people straining body and psyche in pursuit of Olympic triumph are what the whole production is really about. Symbolic of the United States' effort is Al Oerter seeking a fifth gold in the discus at age 43; Kurt Thomas and Marcia Frederick breaking the medal barrier in gymnastics; Tracy Caulkins and Jesse Vassallo thrashing us back to supremacy in swimming; Bill Rodgers and Marty Liquori running thousands of miles to try again at the long distances; and Renaldo Nehemiah hurdling, Franklin Jacobs jumping and Mike Tully vaulting over all obstacles to reach for victory.

A closer examination of America's brightest hopes for medals in the glamour events, and the competition they must overcome, should provide an inkling of what our fortunes will be once the Olympic flame is kindled.

Flair on the floor. "In 1976 (Nikolai) Andrianov was by far the world's best gymnast," admits 22-year-old Kurt Thomas, perhaps our homeland's finest male prospect ever. "I wasn't even close to him then. Now I think I'm getting close." And Andrianov, the Russian's five-time gold medalist, has been quoted as agreeing. In fact, he feels the powerful Thomas will be his top rival in 1980.

Thomas' progress, since finishing 21st all-around in Montreal, has been mind-boggling. The 5'5", 127-pound Indiana

State senior placed ninth overall in the 1977 World Games, and then leaped to sixth in 1978 — the highest ever for an American. His crowning accomplishment to date, however, was the gold medal he won at those same Games in the floor exercise. The field he beat included Andrianov — the recognized master of that discipline. It was the first piece of gold copped by the U.S.A. in world-class competition since 1932.

Although the diminutive gymnast made his breakthrough in the floor exercises, he insists that the pommel horse, the most difficult gymnastic test, is his strongest suit. On the horse he developed his famed "Thomas Flair" — scissoring his legs around his body-supporting arms — and then adapted it to his floor routine. "I gear myself more toward the crowd than the judges," says the exuberant, Olga Korbut-type showman. Thomas and Bart Connor, who ranked ninth at the World Games, will need more than winning smiles to crack the "Big Three" — Russia, Japan, East Germany — at Moscow.

The other side of the U.S.A.'s assault on the gymnastic elite is 15-year-old Marcia Frederick. As a student of Muriel Grossfeld's superb School of Gymnastics, she has risen with blinding speed to international prominence. In May 1978, Frederick pulled a Nadia Comaneci by scoring a perfect 10.00 on the uneven parallel bars at the U.S. Championships. She followed that by astounding the world with a 9.95 at the World Gymnastic Championships in France. Marcia brought home the only world title ever won by an American female gymnast.

Her coach feels that there will be more surprises from Frederick and other U.S. comers like Kathy Johnson and Donna Turnbow. "I've always believed," says Grossfeld, a three-time Olympian herself, "that if any women's Olympic team could beat the Russians, it's the U.S."

Speedy strokes. On land anything can happen, but in Moscow's pools, the U.S. will rule the waves. Our aquamen have virtually swept Olympic swimming for more than a decade. The next name to watch for will be 17-year-old Jesse Vassallo of the famous Mission Viejo (Cal.) Nadadores swim club. He holds the world's championships and fastest times in the 400-meter individual medley and the 200-meter backstroke, and is rated in the top five in three other events.

While the American mermaids couldn't match the men's 11 conquests at the World Aquatics Championships, they did manage to resurface as the best women's team afloat, with nine gold medals. "Maybe the previous generation of American women swimmers were psyched out by the East Germans," offered 16-year-old Tracy Caulkins. "We don't

GENERAL MOTORS PARTS DIVISION

Now's the time to get your GM car as ready to go on vacation as you are. First, you should see Mr. Goodwrench. You'll want to have him check the shock absorbers, the brakes, the lighting system, the ignition system, air conditioner — and anything else you think ought to be vacationized to help you have a carefree trip.

You see, the professional service technicians at your General Motors dealers really understand your GM car. That's simply because they have special General Motors service school training available. And isn't it good to know that they have genuine GM parts available too — such as mufflers, tune-up kits and filters. That's important to you. Naturally, GM parts are engineered by many of the same people who helped design your General Motors car. That means GM parts fit.

So if you're ready for a great vacation, be sure to help your car get ready for a great vacation, too. See Mr. Goodwrench now! He's part of a General Motors program dedicated to improving customer care at more than 6,000 GM dealers.

Stop in. Then start looking for the swim suits.

OLYMPIC HOPEFULS

think about it." That was obvious after her five gold and one silver showing.

Three other stylish athletes should find gold in Olympic waters. Jennifer Chandler dazzled the Montreal judges with breathtaking springboard dives that earned a gold. "She's the most beautiful diver in the world," claims her Nadadores mentor, Ron O'Brien. Her diving mate at Mission Viejo, Greg Louganis, thrilled the crowds in '76 by nearly overtaking the legendary Italian diver, Klaus Dibiasi, in the platform confrontation.

Both Chandler and Louganis suffered post-Olympic blahs, but each is back on top at age 19. And Phil Boggs, a 28-year-old law student, has outdied all springboard competition since 1973. "In Moscow it will come down to the divers of the U.S.A., the Soviet Union and East Germany," says Boggs, who hopes to end a 15-year career with a second gold.

Driving the discus. If Al Oerter collects a fifth gold medal in 1980, it will give two generations of discus throwers a common nemesis. "My hardest job will be to make the U.S. team," confesses Oerter, who at 43 will be trying to add to his wins at Melbourne '56, Rome '60, Tokyo '64 and Mexico City '68. "If I should get to Moscow, I think my chances are good. The Olympics get into one's blood. I feel I can reach back and draw upon something special."

At every Olympics he took part in, Oerter was either injured or the underdog. At the U.S.A. trials he will have to face the likes of '76 gold-medal winner Mac Wilkins, and later, world-record holder Wolfgang Schmidt. To meet this task Al has pumped his solid-muscled body up to 285 pounds. This extra bulk has helped him to surpass his record toss at Mexico City, but still leaves him 20 feet shy of today's leaders.

High in the hurdles and jumps.

"In this pre-Olympic year I use every race as an indication of how I'll do in the Games," wheezed 19-year-old Renaldo "Skeets" Nehemiah, after cracking the world indoor mark in the 55-meter high hurdles. "I treat every race as the Olympic finals." That would explain why the University of Maryland sophomore broke four hurdling records in a two-week period. Upper body strength and incomparable speed between the hurdles will make him the greatest hurdler in history.

Greg Foster is the man pushing Nehemiah to greatness. In Moscow, Foster should be at Skeets' shoulder in the finals and on the medal podium. In the intermediate hurdles, Edwin Moses should hold off Volker Beck of East Germany and Harald Schmid of West Germany.

High-flying Franklin Jacobs and Russia's high-jump record-holder Vladimir Yashchenko will be up for their confrontation at Olympics time. Jacobs, only 5' 8", held the world's best with a 7' 7 1/4" flight (23 1/4 inches over his head), until the much taller, 20-year-old Yashchenko went 7' 8 1/2" last March. "One of us will break the record at the Olympics," promised the Fairleigh Dickinson junior. "If things go my way I look for 7' 9". Even 8 feet is possible."

Yashchenko uses the archaic straddle approach, while Franklin employs his own "Jacobs' Slope." He soars head-first, back sloped, over the bar with a twisting dolphin kick for leverage. Dwight Stones, who loathes Jacobs' lack of style, has gone pro, forsaking Moscow.

Powerful poles and rapid runners.

Our Mike Tully will lead a huge field of talented pole vaulters seeking the Games' loftiest goals. Over 30 men around the world have topped the 18-foot hallmark, but Tully sees 19 feet within his range. His disputed 18' 8 3/4" record vault — the bar fell before officially being remeasured — lifted him above the crowd. Dave Roberts, Earl Bell, Dan Ripley and some impressive Poles will be hoping to top his marks.

Bill Rodgers, on the other hand, will have 26 miles of hills and winding roads in which to lose his pursuers. Ever since an injured foot hobbled him into 40th place at the '76 Olympics, he has been leading the country and world on a not-so-merry chase. In the past year alone he eked out a two-second win over Jeff Wells in Boston and then buried the field of 11,000 runners at the New York Marathon. Not bad for a man who was only an average college two-miler in 1970.

In the 10,000-meter and steeplechase, Kenya's Henry Rono is absolutely untouchable — without a weakness in sight. However, 29-year-old track veteran Marty Liquori believes that the African Machine will skip the 5,000-meter.

Liquori is an intelligent, sensitive and dedicated runner, who has missed the last two Olympics due to injuries. He started as a legendary miler and 1,500-meter man, and has worked his way back as the nation's best 5,000-meter prospect. "I see this Olympics as my overdue last hurrah," says the part-owner of the Athletic Attic sporting goods chain. "If things had worked out in '76, I probably would not be running now. People don't realize what you have to sacrifice to get into world-class shape."

The most discernible trend in Olympic competition seems to be that nothing is a sure thing or lasts forever. Russia's dynasty in gymnastics will erode. America lost a basketball championship in 1972, and it could feasibly happen again. Track and field has become a potpourri of powers. In essence, to forecast is foolish, but to compete is divine. Fw

An Amazing Diet Breakthrough!

HOW TO BURN OFF BODY FAT, HOUR-BY-HOUR!

MEDICAL DOCTOR'S NEW DISCOVERY BURNS AWAY MORE FAT THAN IF YOU RAN 98 MILES PER WEEK!

DATeline SAN DIEGO — An amazing diet breakthrough has been developed by a southern California M.D.

This breakthrough literally allows you to burn off body fat faster than someone who runs almost 100 miles per week.

This may very well be the most amazing weight loss discovery of the century. In fact, it may be the fastest way to lose weight permanently that has ever been developed.

Testing so far is incomplete but there is a very strong suspicion that this discovery makes it possible for an overweight person to lose as much as 2 pounds of fat and fluid everyday for the first week. Actually, it may produce a 6 pound weight loss in just the first 48 hours! After the first week, this discovery could conceivably allow a continuing weight loss of as much as 9 pounds every two weeks thereafter. If needed, it should be possible to use this method to lose 50, 60, 70 or even 100 pounds and more.

When you begin to use this program, you can expect to be able to measure the difference in your waistline in just 24 to 48 hours. You will probably lose more inches each week than even if you faithfully did hundreds of situps everyday. You may very well lose as much as 3 to 5 inches off your waistline in the first month. If you are a woman, you can lose as much as a full dress size in only 7 days.

The doctor who developed this formula is more than an ordinary M.D. He is also a psychiatrist who specializes in alcohol and drug addictions. In addition to his other patients, he has treated more than 2500 drug addicts. But strangely enough, his practice has taught him that overeating is as difficult to deal with as any hard-core drug addiction. He came to realize that what was needed was an anti-fat weapon that was both safe and very powerful. After a lot of research, he has developed just such a weapon. Apparently, what happens is that his crash-burn system turns up your body's "inner furnace" and breaks down your excess body fat and automatically flushes it out of your body forever.

The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this program works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fat and fluid in the very first weekend.

Another nice thing about this discovery is that it does not require fasting, exercise or will power. Now at last, it is possible to lose weight without fasting or discomfort.

This weight loss concept is now being tested nationwide. So far, the preliminary results are nothing short of amazing. The first informal reports indicate astonishing weight losses of as much as 12 pounds in the first 7 days. There are early indications that some people are losing weight 3 times faster than ever before (including significant losses of as much as 50 pounds.)

Of course, something like this cannot be kept secret. Rumors of this doctor-developed breakthrough are spreading like wildfire. The rush is on. It is easy to imagine that professional actors, actresses and other celebrities will be going out of their way to get their hands on this wonderful anti-fat weapon.

You can't blame them. Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week.

"... Imagine how it must feel to drop up to 2 pounds a day and shrink your waistline up to 3 inches the first week ..."

The first concern of the doctor who developed this program is safety. Therefore, his anti-fat formula contains absolutely no drugs. It is made up entirely of 100% natural ingredients. He first tested it on himself and he now uses it religiously every day. This program can even help people who have been hopelessly overweight all their lives including those who need to lose 20 to 30 or 70 pounds or more.

The doctor recommends, however, that you consult your personal physician before you begin this or any other diet program.

This is a totally new concept in the war against fat. There simply has never been an anti-fat weapon quite like this. It almost seems to evaporate fat and inches from the very first day. It automatically converts body fat to body fuel.

Remember — this amazing reducing aid is a doctor-developed formula. It starts to work as soon as it enters your system. It instantly begins to shrink your fat cells and also starts

"... The amazing thing, of course, is the speed at which this program works. It is rather remarkable to throw off as much as 6 pounds of fluid and fat in the very first weekend ..."

Then, during the rest of the day, you eat a wide selection of tasty foods which is scientifically programmed to maintain a high level of fat burn-off.

That's all there is to it. This may be the most effective fat-burning method ever developed. It is not a drug. It is not a gimmick. As you have read before, this is a formula and a program developed by a medical doctor who uses it himself.

It works. More fantastic test results are pouring in everyday. Here's how you can prove all this to yourself without any financial risk at all.

Go ahead and order a supply of this crash-loss discovery by mail. Order as much or as little as you need. Then, as soon as the mailman delivers this fantastic weight-loss miracle to your door — start the program. If you have not lost up to 6 pounds in the first 48 hours and up to 12 pounds in the first week, if you are not 100% satisfied — then send back the empty product container and the company will return your entire payment to you quietly and without question.

If you are extra skeptical you can post-date your check or money order by 30 days. If you do this, the company promises and guarantees not to deposit it for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the product container, the company will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked. You can't lose money — you can only lose weight.

The price is just $8.45 for a full 10-day supply with complete instructions. A 15-day supply is $11.70. A 20-day supply is $14.95. And finally, a 30-day supply is only $18.95. (This is a 25% discount.)

To order, write your name and address and the words "crash-loss program" on a piece of paper and send it with your payment to:

Millburn Products
Dept. FW6, 161 Maplewood Ave.
P.O. Box 219
Maplewood, New Jersey 07040

Your order will be sent promptly by return mail. If you have any questions, you can telephone (201) 744-3777. Checks and money orders should be made payable to Millburn Products. (It is not a good idea to mail cash.)

to safely stimulate your fat-burning metabolism.

If you want to lose weight and carve inches off your body, here are the results that are possible.

- 6 inches off waistline
- 4 inches off stomach
- 4 inches off buttocks
- 3 inches off thighs
- 3 inches off hips

Remember — you don't have to wait weeks for this diet secret to work. It starts instantly! You can actually see the results in just a few days.

The way you use this formula is simple. All you do is mix it with a glass of your favorite beverage and drink it everyday the first thing in the morning.

As soon as you do this, you will have automatically stepped up your fat burning metabolism. This will continue for the next 24 hours.

PROJECTS EVEN KIDS CAN DO

Give them a push, and these easy-to-make scooter toys will go in crazy ways across the floor or a tabletop. The secret is under the shell.

Multicolored pendants or key-chain fobs can be made with construction paper.

Make funny-face planters or decorate a potato-chip can with magazine cutouts.

School's out and summer's here, and the old familiar question rings out, "What's there to do?" In answer, here is a variety of easy, inexpensive and relatively nonmessy craft projects for the youngsters. Some of them you might want to try for yourself.

With a marble, some paper and a plastic egg, youngsters can make scooter toys and then hold races to see which one goes the farthest or the fastest or the craziest. These also make clever party favors for the next birthday celebration.

Mix-em-up faces cut from magazine ads can provide hours of silly fun to make funny planters.

A piece of paper, a black crayon and a darkened room are all that are needed to make "mind pictures on the wall." Then try the same thing using colored crayons or markers and see what happens. Have plenty of paper handy. Nobody stops with just one!

Stacked construction-paper pendants or key-ring fobs are items the cut-and-glue crowd enjoys making.

Make-believe stained glass, another construction-paper project, can transfer an old cigar box or shoe box into a usable and attractive container.

Brown wrapping paper or cut-up grocery bags can be used to make handsome "wooden" beads.

Hours of tabletop playtime can be spent with a batch of homemade sculpting clay.

There's lots to do when there's "nothing to do," and Family Weekly's booklet, "Projects Even Kids Can Do," has the answers. Directions, photographs and illustrations for all the items are included.

THE BIRDS that visit us in our gardens are among the most beautiful and most delightful of all the creatures of nature. Soaring gracefully among the trees and flowers, they provide untold pleasure and inspiration with the richness of their color and the melody of their song.

Now, to remind us of the great joy birds bring into our lives, Franklin Porcelain will create The Garden Birds Thimble Collection. Delicate collector's thimbles in fine bone china designed by Peter Barrett, one of the world's most outstanding nature artists. Barrett is a distinguished naturalist as well as a superb artist. And his talent is so exceptional that his paintings have been exhibited in the famous Royal Academy in London.

Peter Barrett's collection of bird thimbles is created in a long and cherished tradition. The centuries-old tradition of building treasured private collections of decorated thimbles on themes that are related to nature.

The beauty of birds—captured in remarkably detailed miniatures

Each individual thimble is small and delicate. Yet, every feature of each bird is accurately portrayed—in rich, natural color. This is the remarkable art of miniaturization—the ability to portray intricate details, with complete accuracy, in a very small space. And Peter Barrett is a master of this most demanding art.

The garden birds he depicts are among the loveliest in the world: the stately Cardinal, the charming Nightingale, the flame-colored Scarlet Tanager, the Black-Capped Chickadee, the elegant Blue Jay, the Chaffinch, the Robin...25 of the favorite garden birds of the world, each portrayed in a natural setting surrounded by leaves or flowers.

The scientific name of the bird—rendered in a graceful script—will be a part of the design of each thimble. And the finishing touch will be a pure 24kt gold border, skillfully applied to the thimble by hand.

A collection to enjoy and display in your home

One of the greatest pleasures of owning this collection is to display the thimbles in your home. And, to enable you to do so in an attractive and appealing way, a handsome, hardwood wall frame will be provided at no additional charge. This special, custom-designed wall frame will hold all twenty-five thimbles.

Thus, you can display the full set—yet still invite your guests to hold the thimbles, feel the smoothness of finely glazed porcelain, and admire the intricate detail of the magnificent birds portrayed.

Available only for a limited time

In the tradition of classic porcelain collectibles, these fine bone china thimbles will be made available for a single year only. Thus, the collection will be offered solely during 1979 and will be permanently withdrawn at the end of the year. The original designs for the thimbles will then be retired, and this collection will never be offered again. Indeed, the only way anyone will be able to obtain any of the thimbles in the future is by direct purchase from an original subscriber.

A Certificate of Authenticity, attesting to the limited nature of the thimbles and their status as original works of art by Peter Barrett, will be provided to each subscriber. And an informative folder about the bird depicted on the thimble will also be included. The price for each thimble is just $9.75, and the collection will be issued at the convenient rate of one thimble per month.

Since it will take time to craft these bone china thimbles, it is important that the advance subscription application below be mailed no later than July 31, 1979. Send your application directly to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania, by that date.

Family Report

By Norman Lobsenz

Better Read Than Bed?

What do married couples enjoy doing most in their leisure time? If you can believe the results of a study of several hundred husbands and wives in a southern city, most men (almost 50 percent) said "engaging in affectional or sexual activities" while most women (37 percent) said they would rather read.

The survey, taken by two family sociologists and reported in the Journal of Sex Research, asked couples to choose their favorite activities from a list of 96 leisure pastimes. Men ranked "attending sports events" second and "reading books" third. Women ranked sex second, but only barely; it outscored "sewing for pleasure" by a single percentage point.

When the results were correlated with age and length of marriage, sex declined in popularity with both women and men. But the male preference for group activities, and the female preference for individual activities, persisted. Older husbands enjoyed camping and socializing with friends; older wives voted for gardening and cooking.

All About Babies

When a California woman delivered her baby recently, it was truly a family event. The child was born in a homey, wallpapered labor room while the woman's husband, two teen-age daughters and four-year-old son stayed with her during the entire procedure. The experimental program, called the Family Birthing Experience, has been underway for a year at Marin General Hospital, just north of San Francisco. Expectant mothers and the families or friends read, talk, watch TV, or listen to music while waiting for the baby to put in its appearance. (In case of an emergency, the full resources of the hospital are only a few feet away.) After delivery, mothers wait for several hours to make sure no complications develop (or overnight if an anesthetic has been used), and then go home with their infants.

According to doctors, the method is becoming increasingly popular, and medical journal articles have been highly approving of the technique. "It's a way of having some of the advantages of home birth — support of family and friends — along with the extra safety of a hospital birth," one doctor said. Moreover, when siblings can be present at the birth of a new brother or sister, they seem to be more accepting and less jealous of the baby.

• According to a University of Illinois psychologist, fathers are more likely to help take care of newborn sons than they are of newborn daughters. As part of an experiment, the psychologist had new fathers watch a videotape of other men diapering and feeding their babies. Several months later, studies showed that fathers who watched the tape took more part in child care than fathers who had not watched it; but even so, fathers of boys were more nurturing than fathers of girls.

• Anthropologists know that in virtually every part of the world, women use the left arm and hand to cradle infants when they carry them. But when a man holds a baby he is just as likely to do so with either hand and arm. Traditional theories said that mothers carried infants on the left because the sound of the heartbeat calms the children. Since men have usually not cared for babies as much as women, they have not learned the value of this discovery.

YOUR SUMMER BEAUTY GUIDE

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Camerique

"If you do nothing else this season, learn to emphasize your eyes."

Summer's here! And half the fun of it is not having to worry about your looks. Here are some timely tips to insure that it's a carefree season.

Cosmetic Cues

With fashions this summer so bright and vivid, makeup generally has more punch. If you've had trouble wearing the new bright lip colors, for example, here's some help from Scott Kale, Germaine Monteil makeup director. Start by lightly powdering your lips, then outlining with a lip pencil. Lining defines the color and keeps it from feathering. Then fill in with a lip brush, which allows you to apply thin, even strokes, which will cling longer than thick color applied directly from the tube. And, even if you prefer a completely natural face on the beach, remember that your lips will burn as easily as the rest of your face. So be sure to wear a lip gloss that contains a sun screen.

"If you do nothing else this summer, learn to emphasize your eyes," says Pablo Manzoni, creative director of Elizabeth Arden. Here's his prescription: Select neutral eyeshadows that harmonize with the color of your eyes. Don't match eyeshadow to clothing. Brown eyes look good with almost any eyeshadow; blue or green eyes look best with plums and grays, not matching eyeshadow. To further define the eye, apply a soft pencil under bottom-lid lashes, either the same color as eyeshadow, or a reddish-brown color. To make the eyes really dramatic, also use a skipper-blue pencil on the inside of the bottom rim. Then finish with black mascara on upper and lower lashes. If you are a platinum blonde, use dark-brown mascara.

Hair Savers

Famed hair expert Kenneth has a common-sense approach to caring for hair in the summer. Decide on the length you'd like. If you can wear a short cut and your hair has some wave to it, you can have a "wash-and-wear" cut; if your hair is bone-straight, you can get a body perm to hold in the style. If you like long hair, there are a number of ways to wear it, from a top-knot to rolled at the temples, finished off with combs or ribbon.

All hair, but especially processed hair (colored or straightened), needs to be protected from sun, salt and chlorine. Even if you usually don't use hair conditioner, it's a good idea to use it during the summer. Kenneth's tip for an all-time great conditioner is simple castor oil — a few capfuls combed through the hair. It makes a thick coating, so you may have to give yourself an extra-vigorous shampoo to remove it, but it keeps the "harshes" away. Another tip from Kenneth: When you emerge from the pool or ocean and you haven't used a swim cap, it's a good idea to have a can of soda water handy. But don't drink it! Rinse your hair out with it, instead, since your hair is wet anyway. It'll get rid of any chemicals, or salt, until you're ready to shampoo.

Super Summer Exercise

Exercise master Nicholas Kounovsky has devised a terrific body-toning exercise that you can do at the local pool. "Water is the perfect medium for exercising because the body is in a less-weighty state," says Kounovsky. Here's how to do the exercise. Step 1: Hold on to the edge of the pool with both hands and stretch out on your stomach. Step 2: Begin by contracting and releasing the abdominal muscle, lowering the legs; then contract and release your buttocks and lower back muscles, lowering the legs; then contract and release your buttocks and lower back overdo it. The benefits of this exercise are to the stomach, waistline, lower back and hips. It's also a good way to warm up before a long swim.

IS JOGGING DANGEROUS TO YOUR HEALTH?

By Paula Dranov

What's good about jogging is widely known: It's the best sport for improving the fitness of the heart and lungs, it strengthens and tones muscles, and it helps keep weight down by burning more calories than most other kinds of exercise programs.

What's bad about it, however, is often glossed over by enthusiasts' hard sell for their favorite sport. Some people, doctors say, shouldn't jog at all. And for those who do, jogging — like any other exercise — demands common sense, a certain amount of caution and, especially for beginners, moderation.

The President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, which endorses jogging as the best all-round exercise for good health, urges everyone over 30 to check with their doctors before trundling an out-of-shape body around the neighborhood. Here's the reasoning behind the Council's recommendation:

"As people get older, the chances of having certain diseases and not being aware of them increase, particularly diseases of the lungs, blood vessels and heart. Regardless of age, if your medical history includes problems of the heart, blood vessels, lungs or joints, you should see a doctor before starting any exercise program — including jogging."

There are some people who simply shouldn't jog or who should delay jogging for a variety of medical reasons. Patients who have had recent surgery, or those with kidney disease, some infectious diseases, very high blood pressure or certain abnormalities of the heart, are among those who may be steered away from jogging by their doctors.

If you ignore the Council's advice to consult a physician — and let's face it, lots of people will — be sure to get to the doctor immediately if jogging brings on chest pains, dizziness or any other disturbing or persistent medical symptoms.

Besides a medical checkup, there is another essential preliminary: proper shoes. Tennis or gym shoes simply won't do — they don't have a well-protected heel or arch support. The Council recommends shoes designed for long-distance running or walking, or ripple or crepe-soled running shoes. Whatever the choice, the shoes should not fit too tightly, the soles should be firm, the tops should be pliable and there should be good arch supports.

No matter how careful beginning runners are, though, they're susceptible to certain ailments. Using muscles that haven't had much exercise inevitably hurts. Some of the soreness can be avoided by a 10-minute warm-up of stretching exercises. Jogging isn't the best exercise for flexibility, but the more flexible the leg muscles, the less likely the chance of injury. For this reason, the Council emphasizes the importance of the warm-up. (The proper exercises are described in the Council's pamphlet, "An Introduction to Running: One Step at a Time," available from the P.C.P.F.S., Dept. FW, Washington, D.C. 20201.)

In addition to soreness, beginning joggers can develop a variety of foot or leg problems. To avoid them, it's best to start out by jogging every other day until the bones, ligaments and muscles of the legs get used to this unaccustomed activity. But even the most experienced joggers and runners are susceptible to injury. Here are some of the aches and pains jogging can produce and a few hints on what to do about them:

• Soreness. There's no simple cure in the beginning, and soreness also afflicts experienced joggers when they attempt to run faster and longer. It can be minimized, though, by a "cooling down" period after jogging — doing more of the warm-up exercises instead of abruptly ending the workout. A hot bath or sauna and a massage can help lessen the pain.

• Shin Splints. Another hazard for beginners, shin splints are inflamed muscles and tendons which can be very painful. There are a variety of causes — the jolts the legs take, shoes that are too stiff, the habit of running too high on the toes. Heat and massage may help, but sometimes you simply have to give up jogging for a while.

• Runner's Knee. The medical name for this condition is chondromalacia patella, and it results from damage to the cartilage in the kneecap. It's a common injury among runners, and results from a faulty alignment of the kneecap and the femur, the bone of the upper leg. It will improve if you stop running, but many joggers have gotten relief merely by altering the way their feet are supported with an insert in their shoes.

• Foot Injuries. Pain in the heel is a hazard of running, and can be traced to bone bruises caused by pounding of the heel, an inflammation of the ligaments where the sole of the foot joins the heel.

By taking adequate precautions and using common sense, jogging can be as safe as it is good for you.

or bone spurs on the heel bone. Heel cups available in sporting goods stores often relieve the pain.

Jogging also can bring on stress fractures — changes in a bone's structure due to strain or jolting. These usually disappear with rest. And then there are the ankle problems, the worst of which is Achilles tendinitis, an inflammation of the sheath enclosing the tendon at the back of the ankle. It can be extremely painful and usually requires rest, heat, taping and heel support.

Other jogging hazards:

• Rubberized or plastic clothing. Wearing rubberized or plastic clothing is a very bad idea, because it can cause body temperature to rise to dangerous levels without giving sweat a chance to evaporate. This can lead to excessive dehydration and salt loss, resulting in possible heat stroke or heat exhaustion.

• The weather. Avoid jogging during the heat of the day or when air pollution is bad. Running during hot weather is much more dangerous than it is in cold weather. Make sure you are accustomed to the heat before jogging.

• Traffic. Always run facing traffic, except on sharp curves when drivers of oncoming cars might not see you until it's too late. If you run at night, stay close to the edge of the road, wear light clothing or something that reflects light, keep to familiar roads and don't look directly into headlights.

By taking adequate precautions and using common sense, jogging can be as safe as it is good for you.

A herd of joggers in New York City's Central Park. Even experienced joggers are susceptible to aches and injuries.

WHAT DRIVES A PERSON TO CRIME?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. There is a significant difference between the general population and the average criminal.

2. An emotional person is likely to become either a neurotic or develop criminal tendencies — depending on whether he is an introvert or an extrovert.

3. Many antisocial acts — including self-destructive behavior — are contagious.

4. Shoplifters have different personalities than most people.

5. There is a reason why many victims of crime don't get more sympathy from others than they do.

6. It's stupid to murder somebody — aside from moral considerations — and most murderers are stupid.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a Trent University (Ontario) study, the Purpose-in-Life Test was administered to a specimen group of persons engaged in criminal activities, and their scores were compared with members of the general (noncriminal) population. Findings: Criminals scored significantly lower on meaning and purpose in life. It is noted that failure to find meaning and purpose in life causes a person to experience a psychological vacuum, "a state of emptiness and boredom, which, if not relieved, results in 'existential frustration,' and couldn't-care-less-attitudes."

2. True. Researchers at the University of London showed that "the evidence is quite strong that introverts with high emotionality seem disposed to become neurotics, whereas extroverts with high emotionality seem disposed to become criminals."

3. True. Observations made at the University of California indicate that a great many people are both impressionable and imitative — outer- rather than inner-directed — influenced more by what they see, hear or read about than by motivation originating in themselves. The research shows, for example, that "an examination of the effect of front-page newspaper suicide stories in California on the number of motor-vehicle fatalities showed that the average increase in such fatalities was 9.12 percent in the week after a story. The more publicity given to the story, the greater the rise in motor-vehicle deaths thereafter." Evidence indicates that this tendency surfaces in various other forms of antisocial behavior as well.

4. True. A study conducted by a team of Auburn University (Ala.) investigators, showed the chronic shoplifter's personality was "hostile, deceitful, emotionally shallow, impulsive with delinquent tendencies and high energy levels."

5. True. Studies of observers' reactions to crime victims made at the University of Kentucky and the University of Waterloo (Canada) show that a great many people have a need to believe that the world is just, a predictable place where everyone gets what he or she deserves. In a just world, suffering must be accounted for... and it was found that the observer often justifies suffering by perceiving the victim to be an unlikable person who obviously deserved the suffering.

6. True. Observations by criminologists show murderers average significantly lower scores on I.Q. tests than non-murderers. And Texas Research Institute of Mental Sciences studies "indicate that the intellectual pattern of delinquent juveniles is similar to that of their adult counterparts in that a lower general intellectual level is found among violent offenders (murderers, muggers, etc.) relative to that for nonviolent juveniles." It is noted that, more often than not, when a person resorts to murder it is because, under the stress of the situation, no alternate means of resolving his problem occurs to him. fw

For the American people . . .

THE NEW AMERICAN DOLLAR

. . . an opportunity to obtain the historic First Day of Issue Covers

Mint-condition Susan B. Anthony Dollar protectively encased and bearing the official mint-mark of the U.S. mint where it was struck.

The cachet is framed in gold and designed so that both the obverse of the Dollar and its reverse, depicting the Eagle of Apollo XI, can be easily viewed.

Official United States postmark applied on the exact day the new Dollar was first issued, in the city where it was minted, certifying the Cover's first edition status.

Each Cover comes with Album and bears a Certificate to verify the new Dollar's mint condition and first-day status. A special Album is included with the complete set of three.

*H*istory will be made on July 2, 1979, when the United States issues a new American Dollar: the first new size for any American coin in over a century.

This historic Dollar deserves an honored place in every American home. Because of its new size. And because it will honor Susan B. Anthony — an American Champion of Liberty — thus making it the first United States coin to carry the portrait of an American woman.

In coming years, the Susan B. Anthony Dollar will become a part of everyday life. But — like all firsts — the very first Dollars issued are more than just mementoes of an historic event. They are vivid reminders of the Spirit of Liberty which has abided in America from the very first.

Now — until July 2, 1979 — you may reserve an authentic First Day of Issue Cover of The New American Dollar officially certified by the U.S. Postal Service on the exact date the new dollar is issued — at the city where it is minted. This "July 2, 1979" postmark can never be duplicated, thus assuring the first edition character of your New American Dollar for future years.

Of special importance to you, the new Dollars are being minted at three mints: Philadelphia, San Francisco, and Denver. Thus, individual First Day of Issue Covers will be issued in each of the three mint-cities. And the Dollars themselves, encased within the First Day of Issue Cover will be permanently identified by the P, S, or D mint-marks.

First Day of Issue Covers for the individual mints as well as the complete sets of three can be yours. But because demand is expected to be keen, First Day of Issue Covers are subject to availability. Mail your order and payment or charge authorization to Fleetwood, One Unicovert Center, Cheyenne, Wyoming 82008. Price: $10.00 per First Day of Issue Cover. $28.50 per complete set of three.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Driving Down Gas Prices

With gasoline such a precious commodity these days, conservation has become part of our economic, as well as our environmental, vocabulary. "But you can save money if you follow a few basic rules, which most drivers already know," says Rufus Runzheimer, president of a Wisconsin travel and living cost-consulting firm.

"If you already own a small car, you're one step ahead," says Runzheimer. "Obviously not everyone does, but all car owners can save gas by doing things like obeying the 55 m.p.h. speed limit. Studies have shown that cars use nearly twice as much gas if they are cruising at 80 than they do if they are going 50. Keeping a constant speed and not pumping the accelerator will also reduce gas consumption."

Runzheimer also recommends that you keep your wheels aligned and your tires inflated at the right pressure. And remember, keeping your car at igloo temperatures is a tremendous waste of energy. If you can't stand the heat, use your air conditioner minimally or try opening the windows and letting the breeze blow.

Foot Care

With summer here, sandals are the most comfortable form of footwear, and, according to Dr. Elizabeth Roberts, "The best shoes you can wear are those with open toes and heels."

Dr. Roberts, a New York podiatrist and the author of On Your Feet, recommends that women who are going from high-heeled shoes to low-heeled or flat sandals make the change gradually. "A high heel," she says, "thrusts your body forward to the fore part of your foot. You

How Does Your Garden Grow?

If you want good nutrition as well as savings from your garden, your best bet is to grow tomatoes, carrots, beans, peppers and collards, says Frank Williams, a Brigham Young University horticulture professor.

"These are the vegetables with the highest economic value that also have a high nutritive value," explains the professor. By experimenting with a variety of vegetables, Dr. Williams discovered that such nutritious vegetables as broccoli, kale and spinach don't give the average gardener an economical rate of return for the amount of time and money spent on planting them.

Dr. Williams found that, with as little as 54 hours of work, $21.75 and a 50-by-50-foot plot, he could produce more than enough vegetables to feed a family of four for an entire year. He figures that the cash savings, based on the going rate of those vegetables at the supermarket, is $446.74. At that rate, the gardener produced 34.4 pounds of vegetables for each hour of work.

throw out your stomach and arch your back to compensate for the fact that you seem to be about to fall flat on your face. Eventually, the muscles at the back of your legs become shorter. If you suddenly switch to low heels, you might find yourself with leg and back pains, and you may feel as if you're falling over backward."

To lengthen the muscles in the back of your legs, Dr. Roberts recommends that you try a few easy exercises. Face a wall with your feet about a foot away from the baseboard, and do wall push-ups. Or, try pointing your toes straight ahead and walking across the room on the outsides of your feet. This will help to realign your muscles in general.

As with any exercise, Dr. Roberts suggests that you begin gradually. "Otherwise," she says, "you'll get sore and frustrated and quit."

Life At The Poolside

If you're a blond and you do most of your swimming in a pool, you've probably noticed that your hair takes on a rather unbecoming tinge of green in the summer. The color is caused by the absorption of copper salts that are often added to pool algicides, and, unfortunately, it won't wash out.

H. Armstrong Roberts

Help may be on the way, however. According to a study recently reported in the Journal of the Society of Cosmetic Chemists, the answer to the problem lies in most cream-rinsing conditioning products. Just before you swim, comb some conditioner through your hair; chemicals in the conditioner called quaternary ammonium compounds coat your hair, protecting it from the copper salts. You must remember, however, to apply the conditioner before each swim, since its protective properties do wear off. Because "green hair" is such an unrelenting adversary, you must be ever on your guard.

Lifestyles

Privacy. Fifty-one percent of the people questioned in a Harris poll commissioned by Sentry Insurance felt that "in the next 10 years, we will have lost much of our ability to keep important aspects of our life from the Government." A massive 76 percent felt that privacy was a fundamental right for both the individual and a just society. Seventy-two percent of the American public feel that "most organizations that collect information about people ask for more sensitive information than is necessary." The public cited finance companies (45 percent), credit bureaus (44 percent), insurance companies (38 percent), credit-card companies (37 percent) and the media (31 percent) as the biggest invaders of privacy in this country's private sector.

Allergies. Your hay fever misery is a big business. The number of people who receive injections to relieve ragweed pollen hay fever alone is estimated at more than one million. At $200 per patient per year, the total amount spent on treatment comes to $200 million annually.

Weight. Only one-third of all adults know the healthiest weight for people of their height and build, says a Pacific Mutual study. Fully 62 percent of those who are overweight overestimate their healthiest weight, while those who are not overweight are more likely to know or underestimate their best weight.

Our Story: WHEN NOT ON DUTY THE PAGE BOYS PLAY A GAME WITH STICK AND BALL. GALAN IS LONELY AND, FINDING A STICK, SEEKS TO JOIN THE GAME.

ONE OF THE BIGGER BOYS TRIPS HIM AND THREATENS: "WE ARE YOUNG GENTLEMEN OF BRITAIN. YOU ARE ONLY A VIKING PIG. REMEMBER THAT!"

"MY FAMILY WERE KINGS AND QUEENS WHILE YOURS WERE STILL DIGGING CLAMS! REMEMBER THAT!" HE IS ALL READY TO FIGHT WHEN THE KING TAKES HIS PLACE AT THE HEAD OF THE TABLE.

SO GALAN CONTROLS HIS TEMPER AND PICKS UP HIS HEAVILY LOADED TRAY AND BEGINS TO SERVE THE DINERS.

BUT THE BULLY, THINKING GALAN IS AFRAID OF HIM, TRIES ANOTHER TRICK AND HIS POOR VICTIM LANDS IN A DINNER PREPARED FOR THE KING.

PRINCE VALIANT, KNOWING GALAN'S QUICK TEMPER, HASTENS TO CALM HIM DOWN BEFORE HE RETALIATES.

BUT TOO LATE! HE PULLS AWAY FROM HIS FATHER'S HANDS AND SERVES THE DINNER TO THE BULLY.

ALL THE RULES OF COURTLY MANNERS HAVE BEEN BROKEN AND GALAN MUST COME BEFORE SIR KAY WHO DECIDES THE LAD IS TOO IMPETUOUS TO BECOME A PAGE.
