Carter, Ohira Discuss World Energy Problems

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — President Carter, his wife and daughter both stricken with a stomach virus, discussed new ideas for dealing with the world energy problem today with Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

Carter and Ohira publicly described U.S.-Japanese relations as uniquely close, but apparently reached no agreement on energy in their nearly two-hour private meeting today.

American sources, who asked not to be identified, said the two made no attempt to forge a common front.

The sources said the two hope instead to reach a consensus on proposals when they get together Thursday for a two-day economic summit with the leaders of France, Britain, West Germany, Canada and Italy.

The U.S. officials said Carter and Ohira spent more than half their time talking about energy and its impact on poor nations.

They also talked about ways to ease the plight of thousands of refugees fleeing Vietnam, and they agreed to set up a consultative group of American and Japanese businessmen and financiers to present recommendations on long-term solutions to economic frictions between the two nations.

Carter and Ohira both said the United States and Japan have the closest relations in history of any two nations so different in culture and background.

Carter went so far as to say the two peoples didn't act toward each other like nations at all, but "almost like members of one extended family."

Carter and Ohira made their remarks during an exchange of toasts following a business session and a formal luncheon today.

Earlier, Carter was welcomed in regal fashion by Emperor Hirohito.

He later paid an afternoon visit to the Meiji shrine, and wrote in the guest book: "Jimmy Carter — for peace and friendship among all people."

At an evening banquet honoring Carter, the emperor expressed his "ardent hope" that the president's visit would deepen mutual understanding and cooperation that would lead to "the enhancement of the welfare of mankind." Carter responded: "I am confident that together we can build a world in which all people can live in peace."

But wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy, 11, cancelled public appearances because of a stomach virus. After sleeping much of the afternoon, they were reported to be feeling better and Mrs. Carter attended the em-

Sunday's Storm Created A Few Minor Problems

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville and Pitt County residents seemed to fare well through a summer storm that dumped 2.04 inches of rain on the area Sunday.

According to Malcolm Green of the Greenville Utilities Commission, a lot of scattered problems, such as blown fuses, plagued some GUC customers, but noted that no main lines went out during the Sunday storm.

"This was one of our more severe storms, it spread out over our entire system," noted Green. "Our new computer restored some of the problems for us."

According to Green, four two-man crews worked from approximately 2:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday, with most customers restored by nightfall.

According to Mayo Allen, director of Greenville's Public Works Department, a fallen tree was the only problem encountered from yesterday's storm. He noted that no problems had been reported from the street crews who went on inspection tours Monday morning.

Pitt County Agricultural

Extension Chairman Leroy James said that no phone calls had been received concerning damages from the heavy rain.

"We've got a lot of weak spots in our crops right now," he said. "We're asking farmers to make sure those bottom leaves are fully ripened before curing them this summer. If the leaves aren't ripe, it'll show up on the market."

James pointed out that several cases of blue mold had been found in county tobacco crops, as well as some cases of Granville wilt.

Ray Bell, manager of Greenville Cable TV, said that the power fluctuation caused a computer to "lose its memory" thereby interfering with service on Channels 6 and 13 Sunday. The two channels offer local news, as well as news from the UPI wire service.

According to the Water Plant of the GUC, temperatures ranged in the mid-80's during the weekend, with lows in the 60's at night. The river level rose from 3 feet on the national scale Friday to 3.2 feet on the scale Monday.

To Waive Weight Limits On Tractor-Trailer Trucks

Hunt Appeals To Governors

By The Associated Press

In an effort to get North Carolina's perishable cucumber and bell pepper crops to market, Gov. Jim Hunt appealed Sunday to governors of five states to waive weight limits on tractor-trailer trucks.

And Hunt is expected to travel today to the areas hardest hit by the strike to inspect the damage done to the crop as a result of the independent truckers' strike, which has left produce rotting in the fields and in packing sheds.

The situation appeared to be easing somewhat over the weekend. The Highway Patrol reported no violence Sunday, and state officials said they had lined up commitments from truckers to haul more cucumbers and peppers out of the state today.

It is not known, however, how much of a dent that will make. Some farmers, especially in Sampson County, have already lost up to 25 percent of their cucumber crop, said Curtis F. Tarleton, director of the Agriculture Department's marketing division. He estimated the loss in Sampson County alone at more than $3 million.

And officials said that even if the promised trucks show up today, not enough will be available to haul all of the crop sitting in fields and packing sheds.

Hunt's appeal on state weight limits came after the Federal Highway Administration asked the governors of nine Southern and Midwestern states last week to consider a temporary suspension of their weight limits.

North Carolina's weight limit, however, is already at the federal maximum — 80,000 pounds.

Speaking for the governor, who was on vacation Sunday, crime control secretary Herbert L. Hyde said Hunt was expecting the governors of Indiana, Illinois, Maryland and Mississippi to respond to his appeals by telephone today.

Hyde said the governor of Tennessee agreed to allow trucks carrying the maximum weight to pass through the state in convoys if they were carrying produce or emergency supplies.

Friday and Saturday, 72 truckloads of cucumber and peppers left southeastern packing sheds over the weekend. No major shipments were reported Sunday.

Hyde said he knew of a 15-truck convoy that moved up Interstate 85 north from Charlotte Sunday, but he didn't know what the trucks were carrying.

In Greensboro, Dave Edwards, president of the state chapter of the striking Independent Owner-Operators Union of America, praised Hunt for his efforts on the weight limit. He estimated that 85 percent of the 2,000 independent drivers in the state were honoring the shutdown.

However, he and other truckers said the weight limit was only one of the drivers' demands. They also want lower fuel prices, a more plentiful supply of fuel and deregulation of independent truckers' rates.

In a meeting at Karns' Truck Stop in Mount Airy Sunday, about 100 truckers from that area selected three representatives to go to Washington today to talk with Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., about their grievances.

HOTLINE

752-1336

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

My purse was stolen from my car at the Fast Fare on Memorial Drive Thursday night. Besides the cash, I lost some things that are valuable only to myself. I'm hoping someone reading this will take the time to return my purse, or that, if they've already thrown mine away, the next time they'll have this small amount of consideration for the victim. If purse snatchers would just make some effort to leave purses where they can be found by honest people who will return them to the owners, it would prevent so much trouble and heartache. C.Y.

Hotline asked Police Chief Glenn Cannon for comment. He said he has never observed much honor and consideration of others among thieves, but that he agrees with you that the problem is great in Greenville. He urged women not to leave purses in cars for even an instant when running into stores or wherever. He said every effort is made to return all purses turned in to the Police Department, even if it's months after a robbery. Rooftops and ditches are favorite places to dispose of purses, he said, and he asked that the general public turn in to a law enforcement agency any found.

TREE FEEDBACK

I was pleased to see the Friday Hotline item making the public aware of the proposed cutting of large trees for a parking lot on the ECU campus — but it didn't go into enough detail. It's not one parking lot — it's four — and there are 84 trees involved.

There are 40 — oaks, magnolia, dogwoods, and others in the Alumni parking lot mentioned. Seventeen are to be saved, according to your item.

There are 11 in the lot at the corner of Cotanche and Ninth Streets to be paved — large oaks and pecans.

There are two in the lot at the corner of Eighth and James Streets — an 18-inch-diameter pecan and a 42-inch oak.

And there are 29 in the lot off Ninth Street south of Mendenhall Student Center — walnuts, pecans, pears, and oaks.

The time has come, I feel, for the administration to have expert help and possibly faculty committee input before any tree on campus is cut. They are, as the Friday item stated, valuable both for beauty and for energy conservation. T. R.

NATO Commander Haig Uninjured In Explosion

CASTEAU, Belgium (AP) — Gen. Alexander M. Haig escaped an apparent assassination attempt unharmed today when a powerful explosion injured three of his guards and damaged his car as he rode from his home to his office, authorities reported.

A spokesman for Haig, who is due to retire Friday, said a black Mercedes Benz trailing Haig's car and carrying two Belgian policemen and one U.S. security guard was completely wrecked by the explosion, which apparently was touched off by a land mine detonated by remote control.

He said the guards, who were not identified, were only slightly injured and had already left the hospital. He said Haig went to his office after the explosion and was working as usual.

The attack occurred at a bridge along the road between Haig's home in Obourg and his office in Casteau.

It was reported that two motorcyclists were seen earlier driving near the scene and one was taken into custody nearby. But police later said they were not involved.

Police said the explosives went off behind Haig's car, ripping up concrete blocks and stones from a narrow bridge over a ravine. The following car was blown to one side, averting a hole left by the blast, but its roof was crushed by flying concrete blocks, police said. Haig's spokesman earlier said the guard's car had been blown over onto its roof.

The exhaust and trunk of Haig's car was damaged but it was operable. Haig's car was in front of the guards' car and police said there appeared to be a second escort car preceding Haig.

Authorities at first reported only two security guards were hurt.

Belgian police, meanwhile, said two men riding motorcycles had been spotted at the site of the explosion, and the Belgian news agency Belga said one of them was arrested in Ath, about 12 miles away.

However, NATO officials said they had no idea so far of who was behind the explosion, and no group claimed responsibility immediately.

The incident took place at about 8:30 a.m. near the village of Obourg where Haig lives, as he was being driven to his nearby office. Obourg and Casteau are a few miles apart.

Casteau, site of Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe, is 31 miles south of Brussels, near the expressway to Paris.

Army explosives experts searching the blast area said the mine, placed under the bridge on a deserted country road, was detonated by a command device about 1640 feet from the bridge. They said only two of the four buttons on the command had been pushed, so they were looking for more explosives.

Haig was President Nixon's chief of staff and virtually ran the White House at the peak of the Watergate scandal until Nixon resigned on Aug. 9, 1974. He is believed to have had great influence on Nixon's decision to resign.

Haig, 55, is retiring after 31 years of active military service.

He has been considered among Republican candidates for the U.S. presidency. When he announced his retirement in January, Haig said he had no political plans yet, but "nothing is excluded."

Haig will pass his supreme allied command to another U.S. general, Bernard W. Rogers, 57, at a ceremony in Casteau.

New Eruption Of Violence

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer

New violence erupted on the nation's highways today in the independent truckers' protest, but in some areas drivers began dismantling the blockades that have squeezed food and fuel supplies.

A trucker was wounded by snipers near Parkersburg, W.Va., early today. State police said the driver, Kenneth Fullen, suffered a facial wound. Nearby, a group of men stopped another truck and shattered its windows. Authorities said the driver was not injured.

City Council Call Meeting

A special call meeting of the City Council has been scheduled for tonight at city hall for the adoption of the 1979-80 city and Greenville Utilities budgets and other matters.

The meeting will be held at 8:30 p.m. in the council chambers.

In Bucks County, Pa., where a protest over high gasoline prices and short fuel supplies erupted into a two day melee in Levittown, Sheriff John Mitchell today asked for state police assistance and said he was considering ordering a countywide curfew.

"There's a complete breakdown of law and order in lower Bucks and all police powers are exhausted," Mitchell said.

More than 110 persons were injured in the violence, and 127 persons were arrested. Authorities cleared Levittown streets of debris and parked cars today.

But in Michigan, Tennessee, Arizona and other areas, officials said fuel stations that had been blocked by the truckers were open again.

However, Bob Evans of the Utah Independent Truckers Association claimed today that some truck stop blockades were ended because "there's no sense

Miss Mann Is Bride Of Ronnie L. Faulkner

Martha Elizabeth Mann and Ronnie Loyce Faulkner exchanged wedding vows Sunday at 4 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Joel Easterling of Parkton, cousin of the bride, assisted by the Rev. Richard Gammon of Greenville.

Music was provided by Dr. Robert E. Irwin, organist, and Elizabeth Ellen, violinist.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Mann of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton L. Faulkner of Greenville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her cousin, Mary Ann Brannon, was honor attendant and bridesmaids included Laura Mann and Ginger Mann of Virginia Beach, Va., cousins of the bride, Jan Pulley and Beth Briley of Greenville. Junior bridesmaids included Paige and Marty Brannon of Greenville, and Janna Easterling of Parkton, all cousins of the bride.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers included Jeff Mann of Rock Hill, S.C., cousin of the bride, Walter Mann of Carthage, cousin of the bride, Harding Sugg of Greenville, John Carpenter of Greenville, Glen Mills of Wilmington, and William Mizzell of Greenville.

The bride wore a candlelight bridal gown with a fitted bodice, jeweled neckline and chantilly lace appliques with seed pearls, seed pearls.

The attendants wore long yellow and white floral scoop neck gowns. Each carried a long-stemmed yellow rose with baby's breath and a green ribbon streamer.

The junior bridesmaids wore white full length gowns with yellow daisies. Each carried three daisies tied with green ribbon streamers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents in Ayden. Hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. R.A. Swindell of Cary, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Martin of Fayetteville, Ark., and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Brannon of Greenville.

A rehearsal party was held at the Holiday Inn hosted by the bridegroom's parents. The wedding party and out-of-town guests attended.

A wedding luncheon was hosted by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Mann of Grifton at their home. Other hosts were Dr. and Mrs. T.J. Mann of Raleigh, and Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Mann of Cary.

Following a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple plans to live in Wilmington.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Rose High School, is employed by the N.C. Dept. of Transportation. The bride is a teacher at Webb High School in Oxford.

CLASSICALLY STYLED. Pullover has sculptured cable panels up the front, over the shoulders and down the back.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

You'll be a "soft touch" in a kitten-soft cabled pullover knitted with a fluffy yarn combining mohair and acrylic fibers. The sculptured cable panels travel up the front, over the shoulders and down the back of this classically styled sweater.

Directions are written without abbreviations for sizes 8 through 20 with a gauge of five stitches per inch.

To obtain instructions for knitting the cabled pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. B-783 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-783, containing the instruction leaflet plus Brunswick Eleganza yarn, from Pat Trexler at the same address. Send check or money order for $16.00 for sizes 8 and 10; $18.50 for size 12; $21.00 for sizes 14 and 16; $23.50 for sizes 18 and 20. Specify your choice of coral, ivory, mink brown, soft green or French blue.

DEAR PAT: Some time ago you gave us directions for a knitted ascot. I don't know if there was a misprint in our newspaper or what, but I couldn't make it come out right.

I thought that your readers might like to try my directions for the same type of scarf. It's really great as it stays in place and is very easy to make.

I use sports weight yarn and size three needles with a gauge of seven stitches per inch. It is worked in garter stitch (knitting every row) throughout.

Start by casting on three stitches. Knit all stitches for the first row. On the second row, knit all stitches, increasing one stitch in the second stitch of the preceding row.

Repeat rows one and two until there are 36 stitches on the needle. Work even (making no more increases) on these 36 stitches for three inches.

Now, divide stitches evenly on two needles as follows: *knit one stitch, slip next stitch off onto spare needle.* Repeat from * to * across row, having 18 stitches on first needle and 18 stitches on spare needle.*

Work the 18 stitches on first needle in knit 1-purl 1 ribbing for two inches. Break yarn. Work the 18 stitches from spare needle in the same manner.

Place the spare needle on top of first needle and work as follows: Knit one stitch from spare needle; knit one stitch from first needle. Continue in this manner across row until all 36 stitches are back on one needle.

Work in garter stitch for 12 inches or desired length of neck portion of scarf. Divide stitches again on two needles, using spare needle as before. Work as before. That is, work two inches of ribbing on each 18-stitch section.

As you did before, knit the stitches from both needles until you again have all 36 stitches on one needle and work in garter stitch for three inches.

On the next row, knit 1, knit two together then knit to end of row. For the following row, knit all stitches. Repeat these two rows until only three stitches remain. Bind off.

MRS. L.G.S., MARKHAM, VA.

I well remeber this monumental "goof" of mine when I omitted a full paragraph of the instructions by mistake. I couldn't forget the mountain of mail which flowed into my office at that time. Here's hoping that this set of instructions gets through with no typographical errors.

By the way, the scarf measures approximately five inches at the widest point. If you would prefer to work it in a heavier yarn, you can make it in knitting worsted weight with a gauge of five stitches per inch, using whatever size needle will give you that gauge and increasing to 24 stitches instead of 36 stitches. At the point where the work is divided, you would then have 12 stitches on the first needle and 12 stitches on the spare needle.

tain, Mrs. Charles Hinson of Rocky Mount, and Mrs. David Owens of Fountain. Wylie Yelverton entertained with organ music during the reception.

Saturday, the parents of the bridegroom entertained the wedding party and other guests in the fellowship hall of the church.

After a wedding trip to Nags Head, the couple will reside in Farmville.

The bridegroom is employed by R.E. Deans Oil and L.P. Gas, Inc. in Farmville. The bride, a graduate of Farmville Central High School, is employed by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company in Greenville.

Couple Exchanges Vows

FOUNTAIN — Lois Jeanette Dail and Bruce Irvin Oakley were married Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Fountain Baptist Church.

Dr. John A. Allen officiated the double ring ceremony.

A program of nuptial music was presented by the Rev. Ronnie Vann Hobgood of Bear Grass, organist, and Emerson Hobgood of Farmville, soloist, who sang "Whither Thou Goest," "More" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Dail of Rt. 2, Farmville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marl Oakley of Rt. 2, Walstonburg.

The vows were spoken before an altar decorated with two seven branch candelabrum entwined with ivy and pink bows, two baskets of pom poms, mums and gladioli, and two baskets of emerald and baker ferns. In the windows of the church were candles surrounded by greenery.

Given in marriage by her parents, and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel length train of organza and Venise lace. The empire bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline and full length tapered sleeves ending with a double flounce over the hand. Venise lace adorned the bodice. The full skirt extended into a chapel train. A double flounce edged with scalloped Venise lace attached to an all lace cap for her headpiece. She carried a bouquet of light and dark pink carnations, baby's breath, daisies and an orchid.

Mrs. Alan Bagley of Walstonburg, cousin of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a pink floor length flocked dotted swiss gown trimmed with pink. The empire sleeveless, scooped neck bodice was outlined with a ruffle. A pink ribbon encircled the waistline ending with a bow and streamers accenting the back. The full length skirt was bordered with a flounce. She wore pink daisies and baby's breath in her hair, and carried a nosegay of light and dark pink carnations and baby's breath with ribbons of pink and white.

Bridesmaids included Ann Dail of Snow Hill, cousin of the bride, Beth sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Bryant Oakley and Mrs. Kieth Oakley, both sister-in-laws of the bridegroom. Their dresses were identical to that of the honor attendant. Each carried a nosegay and wore flowers in her hair.

Kimberly Hinson of Kinston, cousin of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. She wore a pink organza gown. The fitted bodice featured a jeweled neckline and short puffed sleeves. The tiered full length skirt was accented with a bow in back. She carried a nosegay and wore flowers in her hair.

Natalie Flowers of Wilson, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white dotted swiss full length gown with a pink ribbon. She carried a small white basket filled with pink petals with a pink and white ribbon.

Daniel Vandiford of Rt. 2, Farmville was ring bearer. He carried a white pillow with a pink and white ribbon.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Edward Dail, brother of the bride, Bryant Keith and Lewis Oakley, brothers of the bridegroom, and George Hillard of Walstonburg.

Honorary bridesmaids were Deanie Lilley of Jamesville, Sherri Lewis of Macesfield and Janet Meeks of Fountain. They each carried a long-stemmed pink carnation.

The bride's mother wore a seafoam floor length silesta chiffon gown. The bridegroom's mother wore a pink gown of knit and chiffon. Both mothers wore an orchid corsage.

Grandmothers of the bride, Mrs. Mildred Hinson of Rt. 2, Farmville, wore a rose knit floor length gown and Mrs. Mable Dail of Snow Hill wore a floral silk gown. Grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. T.B. Oakley of Farmville wore a street length brown and white dress. They each wore a cymbidium orchid corsage.

Carrie Purser, aunt of the bride, of Farmville, presided at the register. Whitney Hinson, cousin of the bride, passed out rice bags.

Mrs. Clayton Harrell Jr. of Macesfield directed the wedding.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. The guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Milford Lamb of Tarboro. Serving punch was Mrs. Harold Edwards of Kinston, aunt of the bride. The wedding cake was served by Mrs. Battle Brooks Webb of Tarboro. Assisting in serving was Mrs. Douglas Norville of Foun-

Couple Marries On Sunday

BETHEL — Janie Carol Vick and William Andrew Dail were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Pentecostal Holiness Church.

The Rev. Eric Vernelson conducted the double ring ceremony.

Music was presented by Michael Taylor of Tarboro, organist, and Marilyn Dunning of Aulander, sister of the bride, soloist.

The bride's parents are the Rev. and Mrs. Wiley D. Vick of Princeton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Dail of Tarboro.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore a formal length gown of white peau de soie designed with a high neckline, encircled with silk Venise lace. The empire bodice was enhanced by appliques of Venise lace that extended down and around the waistline. The long sleeves were styled with lace edged on the modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were edged in matching lace appliques on the full skirt. The bride wore an illusion veil edged in lace. She carried a bouquet of daisies, carnations and baby's breath.

Mrs. Annette Mayo of Falkland, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a formal length pastel gown featuring an A-line skirt. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a long-stemmed mum with baby's breath.

Bridesmaids included Wilda Liverman of Winton, cousin groom of the bridegroom, Carrie Lou Rollins of Bethel and Betty Young of Aulander. They wore pastel gowns identical to that of the honor attendant and carried long-stemmed mums. They also wore baby's breath in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers included Phillip Dail of Pinetops, brother of the bridegroom, Sammy and Phillip Vick, brothers of the bride, of Princeton, and Tommy Rollins of Bethel.

Betty Whitfield, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the bridal register. Shirley Barrett, aunt of the bridegroom, directed the wedding.

An after-rehearsal party was held in the church fellowship

MRS. WILLIAM ANDREW DAIL

hall, given by the bridegroom's parents. The guests were greeted by Betty Whitfield, cousin of the bridegroom. The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and accented with pink bows and wedding bells. The centerpiece for the table was pink and white carnations and baby's breath. The wedding cake was served by Fannie Bell James, aunt of the bridegroom, after the first traditional slice was cut by the bride and bridegroom. Punch was poured by Mrs. Elsie Alligood of Hampton, Va., cousin of the bridegroom, after the toast by the bride and bridegroom. The good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Dalton Rollins. Assisting in the serving was Faye Whitehurst, aunt of the bridegroom.

Thursday the bride was honored by a shower given by Mrs. Marilyn Dunning and Mrs. Evelyn Rawls. The shower was in the community building in Aulander.

After a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Tarboro.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Tarboro High School, is employed with his father, W.O. Dail and Sons. The bride is a graduate of Ahsoskie High School.

State Summer Institutes Planned

The State Summer Institutes of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of North Carolina were planned for two locations this year.

The first was held Friday in Hickory and the east meeting will be held Tuesday at the Holiday Inn, Greenville. Dr. Jon B. Tingelstad, chairman of the Department of Pediatrics and director of Pediatric-Cardiology at the ECU School of Medicine, will be the speaker.

Workshops for clubwomen will be focus on Conservation, Education, Home Life, International Affairs, Public Affairs and Arts conducted by general and junior department chairmen.

Coordinators for the meetings included Mrs. Edwin McCoy of Statesville and Mrs. Ernest Holt of Greenville.

Mrs. Frank C. Moffett, NCFWC president, will preside.

Couple Honored On Anniversary

FALKLAND — Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Hamill Jr. celebrated their 30th wedding anniversary Friday.

They were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Smith at the King and Queen Restaurant in Greenville. A surprise reception followed at the Falkland Community Building, given by their children, Mrs. Connie Adams and Miss Vickie Hamill, both of Greenville, and Ronnie and Tim Hamill, both of Falkland.

Mrs. Dorothy Hamill presided at the register. Slices from the three-tiered wedding cake were served by Mrs. Melvin Murphy, Mrs. Hamill's sister of Trenton. Mrs. Holly Hamill poured punch and Miss Donna Hamill displayed gifts.

Court Rules Live-In Lover Contract Is Binding

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer
TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A New Jersey businessman's promise to support his former live-in lover was a legal and binding contract, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled today.

In a unanimous ruling, the court said Thaddeus Kozlowski was required to live up to that contract and support Irma Kozlowski for as long as she lives.

"Such agreements by adult non-marital partners which are not explicitly and inseparably founded on sexual services are enforceable," the court said. "To dispel any misunderstanding," the court added, "we emphasize that our decision today has not judicially revived a form of common law marriage which has been forbidden in New Jersey since 1939.

"We do no more than recognize that society's mores have changed and that an agreement between adult parties living together is enforceable to the extent it is not based on a relationship proscribed by law or on a promise to marry," the court continued.

New Jersey law states that a person cannot be held liable for a breach of a promise to marry.

The couple had lived together for 15 years but never married. The state Superior Court had ruled that a contract existed between the pair and ordered Kozlowski to pay his former live-in mate $55,000, based on Mrs. Kozlowski's life expectancy.

But the Supreme Court remanded the case back to the lower court to work out the exact amount to be paid and how it will be paid.

Mrs. Kozlowski, 65, believed Kozlowski would always support her, her lawyer, Michael Markensohn, said during arguments before the Supreme Court in April.

"When two people get together, they are contemplating an emotional as well as a financial involvement," Markensohn said.

However, Kozlowski's lawyer, Ben Slavitt, argued that Kozlowski only intended to support Mrs. Kozlowski for as long as they lived together.

Slavitt maintained that if a contract did exist, it was invalid because it was based on an adulterous relationship.

Both were married to other persons — Mrs. Kozlowski to a man with the same name as her lover — when they moved in together in 1962 after meeting at a dance. She was divorced two years later; he divorced shortly before they separated in July 1977.

The relationship ended, according to court papers, when Kozlowski became enamored with a woman at least 30 years younger than Mrs. Kozlowski. He later married the younger woman.

11 Dead In N.C. Accidents

By The Associated Press
At least 11 persons lost their lives in traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend, according to the state Highway Patrol.

The number brought the year's traffic death toll to 666, two more than during the comparable period last year, the patrol said. Isaac Elijah Turner, 58, of Hertford was killed Sunday on a rural road 4½ miles south of Elizabeth City in Pasquotank County. The patrol said Turner was driving under the influence of alcohol when the car he was driving struck a culvert and overturned.

Kenneth Lee Barrett, 56, of Brevard was killed Sunday on U.S. 64 two miles west of Brevard in Transylvania County. The patrol says Barrett was a pedestrian who was struck by the driver of a car who fell asleep and ran off the shoulder of the road.

Randall Darnell Crovell, 6, of Cove City was killed Sunday on a rural road in Cove City in Craven County when he rode a big-wheeled tricycle in the path of a vehicle.

Two teen-agers were killed Saturday night on Highway 17 four miles north of Bolivia when their compact car collided head on with a tractor-trailer. The victims were identified as Richard John Miller Jr., 17, and Michael John Thomason, 19, both of Fayetteville.

Fred Clifton Acree, 39, of Roanoke Rapids, was killed early Sunday when his car ran off U. S. 158 four miles west of Sunbury, in Gates County, and overturned.

Ronald Williams, 9, of Rt. 2, Dudley, in Wayne County, was killed Saturday night when he ran into the path of a vehicle, the patrol said.

Stafford Greg Livingston, 12, of Mooresville, was killed Friday night on a rural road near Statesville when the bicycle he was riding was struck by a car.

Elizabeth Pickett Mills, 78, of Laurinburg, was killed Saturday night when the car in which she was riding collided with another car on U. S. 220 10 miles north of Greensboro.

Another Saturday night accident took the life of Paul Edward Riddle, 45, of Asheville. He was fatally injured when his car crossed the center line and collided with another car head-on on a rural road two miles west of Weaverville.

Milton Eugene Grant of Fort Meade, Fla., was killed early Sunday in Sampson County when his car ran off the right side of the road, crossed back and then hit an embankment on the other side. The accident occurred on N. C. 55 five miles east of Dunn.

More Expelled

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Malaysia forced 13,000 Vietnamese refugees in 60 boats out into international waters in the past week, raising to 55,000 the number expelled since Jan. 1, the government announced today.

Kassim Ahmad, the parliamentary secretary to the foreign ministry, revealed the numbers while answering questions in Parliament. He said the expulsions were in line with the government's get-tough policy of refusing sanctuary to new arrivals. Malaysia already has 76,000 Vietnamese in crowded camps.

Kassim did not say how many refugees managed to return to Malaysia or to land here despite the government crackdown.

Western refugee officials here said 500 Vietnamese in two boats were towed back into international waters on Sunday. Reporters who talked to some of the refugees before they left, were told the two boats were attacked three times by Thai pirates during the five-day crossing from Vietnam.

Beside the economic drain of the refugee influx, Malaysia authorities fear many will not find new homes in other countries and will remain in Malaysia upsetting the fragile balance between the nation's predominant Malay Moslem community and the ethnic Chinese and Indians who make up the other half of the population.

But a Vietnamese official, who arrived here today to discuss the problem with Malaysian authorities, said Vietnam will not take back any refugees, even if they are cast adrift.

Meanwhile in Bangkok, Prime Minister Kriangsak Chomanan said today Thailand will temporarily halt the forced repatriation of Cambodian refugees pending the outcome of a proposed U.N.-sponsored conference on the Indochina refugee problem.

Somoza Vows To Continue Fight

By LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Anastasio Somoza vowed to fight on as Sandinista guerrillas captured their third major city and continued a two-week-long occupation of eastern Managua's slums despite heavy aerial bombing.

Somoza told the nation Sunday he was open to initiatives from members of the Organization of American States who "have a true interest in a peaceful solution" to Nicaragua's violence. He did not mention the OAS call for his resignation, but high government sources said his speech could be read as an emphatic rejection.

The sources said Somoza told national guard commanders by short-wave radio after the OAS resolution Saturday that he had decided to "continue the fight and beat the enemy."

Shortly afterward the guard fled from Masaya, 20 miles southeast of Managua. Sandinista guerrillas showed reporters the burned-out garrison Sunday and told them rebel sharpshooters had replaced guard snipers in the towers of the adjacent cathedral.

The city was the third to come under complete Sandinista control. The rebels drove the guard out of Diriamba, 28 miles south of Managua, late Saturday and have controlled all of Leon, the nation's second largest city 57 miles northwest of Managua, for more than a week.

The rebels also have the guard bottled up in their garrisons in several other cities, including Esteli, straddling the Pan American Highway 98 miles north of Managua; Chinandega, a major city 85 miles northwest of Managua, and Matagalpa, 84 miles northeast of the capital.

With the rebel victories have come increasing reports of heavy guard casualties and some desertions. Exact figures are not available. But reliable sources said two guard captains and a lieutenant have taken refuge in the Colombian Embassy, and that Lt. Col. Constantino Mendieta Herdierca, an architect in charge of remodeling Managua's airport, had sought asylum in the Peruvian Embassy.

Informed sources said the guard has been dropping 500-pound bombs along the southern front where rebels hold up to three miles of Nicaraguan territory north of the Costa Rican border.

The sources said there has been little change in positions near the border, but the guard was flying 90 percent of its missions on the southern front and has driven back rebel attempts there to push northward with heavy artillery and aerial bombardment.

Explosions rocked the capital's eastern slums Sunday night and huge fires lit the skies, presumably touched off by 250-pound bombs dropped from helicopters for the second straight day.

Firefighters that began in late afternoon continued into the night in areas of Managua including the usually quiet western sector not far from the American Embassy.

No Effective Program

A few months back, the Carter administration assured farmers that there would be enough diesel to continuing farming operations.

As a result, the nation's farmers were given priority on diesel supplies. That made sense. The farmers produce the nation's food supplies, and clearly need the fuel to keep operations from bogging down.

Then a funny thing happened. The operators of the big diesel trucks began protesting, and one of their prime complaints was the difficulty in obtaining diesel as they made their way around the country.

As the truckers struck there was no way to move the farmers' produce to markets and the vegetables began to rot in the fields.

So President Carter ordered an end to farm priority for diesel, which is supposed to make more diesel available to the independent truckers and hopefully get them back to work.

The poor farmer, meanwhile, has been unable to move his products while the truckers struck and may be unable to harvest them with the loss of his diesel priority.

When all is said and done, it appears no one yet has the answers to the nation's fuel crisis. To put it another way the nation does not have an effective energy program which will keep essential industries moving. If we don't find the answers soon we can expect crises which could topple our economy.

Conveniences, With Natural Beauty

A "Hotline" caller paid tribute to the ECU administration for saving 17 trees which were slated to go to make way for a parking lot on the west end of the campus.

With some re-designing the trees were saved and the university will have the 60-car parking lot, too. We think that was a good move. It proves once again we can have the conveniences we want and, with some careful planning, preserve the natural beauty we now have.

The Real Tobacco Threat

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — After all else is said and done, it is the threat of losing federal tobacco support programs which is causing North Carolina's belated crackdown on cigarette smuggling.

Gov. Jim Hunt, in discussing the several new approaches, put his finger directly on the real reason for making a change: "There is pressure from the governors in other states ... and that is a threat to our tobacco program."

"Governors all over the country are fed up ... and we must cut it out so we can have their support and friendship."

Hunt obviously has come under considerable fire from his colleagues as he moved up the ranks of the organization of governors to his present role as chairman of the Democratic Governor's association.

If there is enough state tax revenue lost, people in other states will say they don't want to continue the support program. Hunt fears. The political backfire will run from state officials to their Congressional representatives where the federal dollars which underwrite the billion-dollar tobacco crop in this state will be in jeopardy.

Loss? How much revenue is now being lost in states charging more than the two-cent North Carolina tax? Firm figures are difficult to come by, but best estimates from knowledgeable sources are that more than $400 million is being lost by the states which find smuggled cigarettes a problem, and that possibly half of that amount is being siphoned off into the coffers of organized crime.

Over the years, North Carolina officials took a shifting and less than serious view of the smuggling activity. At first, the reaction was that other states should cut their taxes so the appeal of North Carolina smuggling would be diminished. At times, comments included such as "Idaho potatoes aren't taxed, why should cigarettes be singled out?"

Gov. Hunt took a finger-in-the-dike approach some months back by assigning one fulltime agent in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety to the job of coordinating anti-smuggling activities with federal officials and those from other states.

A recent federal law making it a crime to transport more than 300 cartons across a state line was seen as the solution to the problem. Obviously, the smugglers have little fear of that measure.

In addition to the threat of

economic problems in the tobacco program, Hunt now points to the rakeoff by organized crime, and to the recent discovery that totally untaxed and unstamped packs are being smuggled out of North Carolina as other reasons for cracking down. He has ordered the Revenue Department to take action, and encouraged the State Bureau of Investigation to get involved.

Admitting that "traditionally, cigarette smuggling has not been seen as a high priority item," the governor now considers the situation "a corrupting thing."

Plain Folks While law enforcement and revenue agents may be able to make some inroads into the organized smuggling aspects, high officials admit they will have little or no success in stemming the informal flow of cigarettes out of North Carolina.

A close look at camper bodies, motorhomes, vans, and trailers passing through the state would show many of them loaded to the gills with cartons of low-tax cigarettes on their way to Florida or the northeastern states. It is readily admitted that many retirees finance their travels peddling smuggled cigarettes back home. One carton bought in North Carolina can be sold in Massachusetts where the per-pack tax is 21 cents, and still save the buyer a dollar and make the smuggler a dollar. That's $300 on the load which still avoids trouble with the federal law.

So popular is smuggling among the general public that one time a New England industrial prospect being chaffered about the State of North Carolina in the Governor's airplane took on board a hefty load for the return flight. That individual even called later and wanted a return visit with privileges. He was declined.

OF ALL THE GUYS WHO DON'T NEED ANY HELP-

Made A Mistake On Bell

By BROOKS JACKSON

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that he's getting ready to leave the Cabinet, some of Attorney General Griffin Bell's former opponents in the Senate have changed their minds.

Bell faced more Senate opposition than any of Carter's other Cabinet choices. But after 2½ years on the job, he's won some converts.

Three of the senators who voted against his confirmation, George McGovern, Bob Dole and Richard Lugar, now say they made a mistake.

Bell has said he intends to resign soon and go home to Atlanta to practice law. No date has been set, but he has talked of leaving by late summer.

He still faces the criticism of some Republican senators for his handling of politically touchy cases, and his close ties to Carter — who once had said he would remove the attorney general's post from the political appointment process.

But Bell has gained support in Congress for the job he's done.

Some of the 21 senators who voted against Bell are also having second thoughts, and the controversy over his commitment to civil rights has virtually evaporated.

The flap was fueled by his membership in private Atlanta clubs that exclude blacks and his former service as an aide to a segregationist Georgia governor.

But once in office Bell pressed vigorously for appointment of black judges. The number of blacks on the federal bench will more than double if the Senate confirms all those selected by Carter and Bell.

Bell has converted both Republicans and Democrats to his side.

Dole, R-Kan., said, "I think we were, some of us, concerned about some of the civil rights aspects. But I think he's been even-handed and I've said to myself at times, that's probably one vote I'd like to have back."

McGovern, D-S.D., said, "Griffin Bell has, in my opinion, turned out to be a good attorney general. ... I think I made a mistake in opposing his nomination."

Lugar, R-Ind., said, "I think that Griffin Bell has done a good job. I have been impressed by the sincerity, the quiet, judicial manner he has brought to the job."

This is not so for Republicans Sens. Lowell Weicker, John Heinz and Harrison Schmitt. All said they still would still vote against Bell on grounds he is too close to the president.

They variously criticized his handling of the Marston affair and the Korean payoffs probe, and his initial reluctance to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate loans to Carter's family warehouse.

Weicker, R-Conn., said the attorney general "shouldn't be a family friend, or a relative, or a political associate." Heinz, R-Pa., said, "I do not regret having vigorously opposed" Bell.

Schmitt, R-N.M., said he also feels Bell is too close to Carter. But adds: "I think from a general, technical point of view he has done a good job in office."

Queen Victoria gave royal assent to the British North America Act on May 22, 1867, and Canada became the first dominion of the British Empire the following July 1.

Out Cruising For Gas

Dear Artie: My husband came home at 10 o'clock last night, tired and worn out. I asked him where he had been, and he said he had had drinks with an airline stewardess in a cocktail lounge. I think he's lying. I believe he was out cruising for gas and found some. He gave me a cock-and-bull story about the airline stewardess because he knows that if I found out about the gas I'd ask to use his car. What should I do? — Big Bertha

Dear Bertha: It sounds to me as if your suspicions may be correct. The old "drinks with an airline stewardess" alibi is used by every husband during a gasoline crisis. My advice to you is to search his pants pockets and his wallet for a credit card receipt from a gas station. If you find one, confront him with it, and tell him he either lets you use his automobile or you will speak to your lawyer. If, on the other hand, you find a receipt from the cocktail lounge, apologize for thinking the worst about him, which was that he got a full tank of gas and did not tell you about it. — A.B.

Dear Artie: I am in love with a young, handsome, wealthy boy from one of the best families in town. He has a beautiful Lincoln Continental and a 60-foot diesel engine yacht. He wants to marry me in the worst way. But my parents want me to marry a fat, stupid service station attendant who works three blocks from our house. They say I have to think of my future, and their future as well. They also said a nice girl doesn't marry someone with a Lincoln Continental any more. What should I do? — Tearful Annie

Dear Annie: I'm afraid your parents are right. You'd be making a big mistake if

Other Editors Say The Fourth Branch

The traditional three branches of government are familiar to most Americans — executive, legislative and judicial. It seems now that a fourth branch can be added — the federal bureaucracy.

That's the view of former Sen. James L. Buckley of New York; and we suspect a lot of taxpayers would agree with him. In an address recently in Colorado Springs, he said the federal bureaucracy "in practical effect now constitutes a fourth, extraconstitutional branch of government."

Buckley pointed out that this bureaucracy is manned by insulated and sometimes imperious officials who wield an enormous influence over virtually every facet of American life.

"The bureaucrats are possessed of the broadest discretionary powers exercisable in pursuit of the most loosely defined goals," he said. His address ought to help the American people develop a clearer understanding of the danger of bureaucratic rule.

Buckley compared the vast numbers of bureaucrats loosed on the land with Thomas Jefferson's complaint that King George III had "created a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people, and eat out their substances."

Buckley didn't suggest the American people march on Washington in protest, "but I do suggest we take seriously the dangers to individual liberties and to truly representative government that is posed by these latest swarms of non-elected officers."

Too often the federal bureaucracy is treated as a nuisance. Its edicts are regarded as frivolous. All of which may be true, but the non-elected officials are a serious threat to constitutional government.

As the former New York senator pointed out, HEW can and does coerce schools into acceding to its most outrageous proposals. SEC will force compliance with demands of doubtful legality. The EPA has attempted to deny free speech to business.

The federal regulatory agencies deliberately adopt dilatory tactics that are designed to spend their victims into submission. This process is called "deep pocketing". Agencies will wage a war of procedural attrition that will force an opponent to reach deeper and deeper into his pocket, until his resources are exhausted.

This is the type of thing the people ought to be aware of. It illustrates graphically how a bureaucracy works. We don't need this fourth branch of government.

Reagan's Age A Concern

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

The Age of Reagan

LANCASTER, Pa. — The small thundercloud that trails Ronald Reagan on his self-confident ascent to the Republican presidential nomination appeared here in the form of a modest suggestion from an ardent supporter: why not pledge to serve only one term.

That question was put privately to Reagan and his campaign advisers by Rep. Robert Walker, whose congressional fund-raiser Reagan had waived his normal handsome fee to address. Like other Reagan supporters, Walker has noted with concern the preoccupation among Republicans with the fact that their presidential front-runner will be 69 years old during next year's Detroit convention.

Walker, a highly intelligent young (36) conservative in his second term, is unequivocally committed to Reagan and negative about John B. Connally as a turncoat Democrat. Thus, he is a friend seeking to bury, not to raise, the age of Reagan. The congressman's theory is that the sooner Reagan pledges a one-term limit, the quicker he will eliminate speculation about a man entering his second presidential term in his mid-70s.

A one-term declaration has been talked about for well over a year but never seriously entertained by the Reagan camp. Reagan himself does not like the idea. Neither does his master strategist, John Sears, who feels it will only call attention to Reagan's age. Yet, one senior Reagan adviser does not rule out Walker's suggestion. "It is something we might consider at a later date," he told us.

That cryptic comment recognizes the one great obstacle between Reagan and the presidential nomination. To many Republicans Reagan is so far in front that nobody can catch him. But reactions to him during recent speaking engagements in Lancaster, Boston and Washington showed that the age issue is real.

Reagan's political strategists have insisted it is not serious, contending his long-range problem in the general election campaign will be public perception of him not as an old man but as a heartless right-winger. They argue that only newsmen ask Reagan about his age (his stock reply being that the public is concerned not about "chronology" but "whether a person is physically fit").

In truth, however, the reporters are saying out loud what the Republican faithful politely whisper. At those recent stops in the East, his age was the overriding topic of conversation among listeners who heavily favor him for president. What Reagan said was ignored; how he looked generated endless speculation.

That was the case in Lancaster, stolidly Republican and overwhelmingly Reaganite. Republicans who

Strength For Today

A FULLY CREATIVE LIFE The creative period in the lives of most people is between the ages of thirty and sixty; yet there have been many exceptions to this general rule.

William Cullen Bryant wrote "Thanatopsis" when he was nineteen. Throughout his long and distinguished literary career he never again equalled that marvelous poem, as fresh today as it was when written over 150 years ago. Napoleon held Europe in his hand before he was thirty. Alexander Hamilton was commanding troops in the American Revolution when he was twenty. On the other hand, Titian, the great painter, produced his most notable picture when he was ninety-six. He lived to be over 100 and was producing great art until the very end.

Age certainly counts. But it does not necessarily control the development of our creative powers. It is certainly possible for us to rise above the years — to accomplish while quite young, and to continue to accomplish into old age.

Church Spires Vanishing

EDITOR'S NOTE — Not since Henry VIII tried to wipe out Catholicism in the 16th century has England lost so many churches. And as each tower comes tumbling down, a little bit of history crumbles, too.

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — John Betjeman, Britain's poet laureate, recently described the church spire as "an essential feature of the landscape of our islands." But the spires, the ornate chapels, the facades that have graced town squares and the countryside for centuries, are vanishing due to rising costs and dwindling congregations.

A modest state aid program to save historic churches was begun in 1977, but it was too late for many. Preservationists estimate that about 1,000 chapels and churches have been demolished in the past 15 years. Others, some of them built in the Middle Ages, have been abandoned to the elements and vandals.

Some preservationists contend that the loss of ecclesiastical architecture in the latter half of the 20th century rivals the Reformation of the 16th century when Henry VIII turned Protestant and shut down or destroyed Roman Catholic churches and monasteries.

It's not the Westminster Abbeys or Canterbury Cathedrals that face the wrecking ball, although they have their problems with upkeep. Rather, the victims have been among the estimated 65,000 places of worship in Britain — both Protestant and Roman Catholic — that have historical value for the community but are not national treasures.

In such cities as London, Leeds, Liverpool and Manchester, closed churches frequently are vandalized before the wreckers come to make way for a multi-story parking garage or chain store.

"There has been a lot of wicked wastage over the years," says Andy Thornton, who travels the country buying church artifacts to ship to the United States.

Thornton, 28, set up his Architectural Antiques Ltd., six years ago in the Yorkshire town of Brighouse and says he sends about 150 tons of church fittings a year to auction in Los Angeles.

Since then, the demand for church artifacts has boomed, and now there is concern that the Church of England is being short-changed because it has no real idea of what the fittings are worth.

"We have nothing against sales if no other church, or museum, wants the fittings," says Margot Eates, secretary to the Advisory Board for Redundant Churches. "But items being sold sell below the market value because advice is not sought."

In the past few years, an average of 85 Anglican churches a year are declared redundant so there is no shortage of fittings, ranging from Victorian chalices to ceramic floor tiles.

"Without such key buildings," the dean of Peterborough Cathedral, the Very Rev. Richard Wingfield Digby, wrote to The Times of London, "our cities, towns and villages will become visually impoverished. We surely need to arrest the rate of attrition of this unique part of our heritage."

The baby is about half the size of its four-inch mother, who frantically circled her baby, not at all pleased with its new-found independence. Employees have had to re-adjust their work habits to accommodate the birds. (AP Laser-photo) paid $50 to hear Reagan debated among themselves questions of cosmetics: Has he aged. Isn't he a bit pale. Or, a little wrinkled.

"Would you believe that guy is nearly 70 years old. . . one businessman asked his wife when Reagan spoke at Randolph, Mass., on Boston's south shore. Most people would not. Nor has the smooth-as-silk technique of the greatest Republican orator of his day diminished. Reagan is guaranteed to be interrupted frequently by well-satisfied business and Republican audiences.

Nevertheless, one reason for the intense interest in his age is the meager intellectual content of his current speeches. Attacks on big government and adulation of American business closely resemble his standard lecture two decades ago as touring troubador for the General Electric Co. Some of his 3-by-5 index cards are truly antique — particularly one telling how 131 separate taxes make up more than half the cost of a slice of bread.

Using such old material is part of the intentional Reagan campaign tactic of lying low until autumn. Reagan's staff has been developing new themes to be unveiled in September, when presumably the hoary index cards will be laid aside. So far, Reagan has survived this semi-submerged period with undiminished high poll standings.

But subtle signs of erosion were evident at the recent National Federation of Independent Business convention in Washington. While hounding him for autographs, the businessmen agreed Reagan lacked the punch of two earlier speakers: Rep. Jack Kemp — and, more significantly, Connally.

One businessman attending the convention is an active Republican politician and met privately with Reagan. Impressed by Reagan's dignity and good manners, the businessman had one comment afterward totally unrelated to the issues: "He looked awfully pale; maybe he could use some suntan oil." Rep. Walker's modest suggestion for a one-term declaration is intended to remove Reagan's candidacy from the realm of cosmetology.

Editors' note: Theodore R. Mann, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations, said after his recent talks in Israel that President Carter would sooner or later change his position that new settlements on the West Bank are "an obstacle to peace" (not that Carter would decide new settlements are legal).

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠74 ♠A73 ♦AKJ54 ♣J62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have 13 HCPs and a balanced hand opposite a partner who opened the bidding and who has also shown a balanced hand, so don't waste any time. Bid three no trump. Your only plausible game is in no trump, and if the opponents happen to beat you in the spade suit, that's simply a risk you must take.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠642 ♠A94 ♦AKJ54 ♣Q6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—This is simply a matter of arithmetic. Partner has shown a balanced hand of 19-20 points and you have 14 points and a five-card suit. You have enough for a grand slam. Bid six no trump.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ93 ♠7 ♦AQ52 ♣763
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With your unbalanced hand you naturally would prefer a suit contract, so introduce your second suit. This is far more important than rebidding spades to show a good five-card major because partner might have a very definite preference for diamonds. If you fail to show your diamonds now, you will have excluded partner from this decision-making process.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♠763 ♦QJ4 ♣AJ9432
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Take care. This hand has all the earmarks of a misfit. Partner is marked with at least nine cards in the major suits and is quite possibly short in clubs. Pass before you get into trouble. Any other bid could present the opponents with an opportunity to extract a lucrative penalty.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K64 ♠J7 ♦Q104 ♣AQ975
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner does not have a minimum hand, for he would not have shown his spade suit at the three-level unless he was willing to accept your game try and force you to take a preference at the four-level. Since your diamond stopper is tenuous, you have no choice except to support his first-bid suit. Bid four hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠975 ♠AKQ4 ♦AJ106 ♣65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
4 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—This is not a question of making a slam, but whether or not you have enough for a grand slam. That is something you can't judge. All you can do for the moment is raise to six spades, and hope that partner will bid seven if his black suits are solid.

♠K542 ♠Q104 ♦Q6 ♣Q632
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Dbie. Pass 1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner's takeout double followed by a one no trump rebid shows a hand that was too strong to overcall one no trump originally. Since partner must have at least 19 points and you have 8, you have enough for game. Bid three no trump.

Q.8—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J4 ♠K104 ♦J965 ♣QJ72
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—With five picture cards and fair intermediates, your hand is actually better than its point count might indicate. Since you are vulnerable, and the rewards for bidding and making a game are so enormous, we would push on to three no trump.

Tobacco Farmers Facing Summer Labor Problems

By The Associated Press
As the opening date for the flue-cured tobacco markets approaches, labor problems are troubling some North Carolina tobacco farmers.

The farmers say they can't find enough local workers to harvest their crops. And they claim that their requests to the state Employment Security Commission for help in finding laborers have gone largely unheeded.

"I'm between a rock and a hard place," said Robert M. Rowland, who farms 55 acres near Oxford. "I don't know what I'm going to do."

Last year, Rowland used some migrant labor, but he says that's too risky. Growers have learned they run a sizable risk of employing illegal aliens, usually Mexicans, who may be arrested at any time.

"How can I afford to gamble with a $70,000 crop with labor that is subject to being picked up?" he said.

Rowland said that last year he paid a crew leader $800 to provide four migrant workers for his farm. "Five days later, that crew leader came back here and took those workers away," he said.

Besides that, Rowland said he later found out the migrants were illegally in the country. "They wrote to me from Mexico" to see if they should return this year, he said, "so I know they're illegal."

In Person County, Herbert Overby said he also employed migrants for last year's harvest. As a result, he said, he was subpoenaed to San Antonio, Texas, to testify in a federal trial against a man who allegedly brought illegal aliens into the United States.

"I learned my lesson. I don't care who they (the workers) are, as long as they're legal," Overby said.

James Wells, the employment commission's supervisor of rural manpower, confirmed that his agency was referring more migrant labor to farmers to make up for the shrinking local farm workforce. Migrants referred by the commission are supposed to be in the country legally, but Wells admitted there is little his agency can do to ensure the migrants are, in fact, legal, U.S. citizens.

About 25,000 migrants are expected to work in the fields this year, he said. However, federal officials have said that as many as 55,000 illegal alien migrants worked in North Carolina last year. About 500 were picked up.

Some farmers are trying to bring migrant labor from Mexico in legally under a temporary farm-work visa program.

Wells contends, however, that the employment agency can fill the farmers' needs with local manpower or with domestic workers, including migrants, from other parts of the country.

A Smokers Market Paradise

MOYOCK, N.C. (AP) — The Southland Trade store near here is a cigarette smoker's paradise, so to speak — especially for smokers from states that impose hefty cigarette taxes.

A Virginia man walked from the store with 10 cartons of cigarettes, a smile on his face and the $15 he had saved in his pocket.

He climbed into his car, drove 100 yards and he was back in Virginia, where each carton of cigarettes costs $1.50 more than he had just paid.

He is just one of the hundreds of Virginians who daily make the trip to the small white wooden building nearly hidden by the big "cigarettes" signs.

The store must be viewed as an oasis in a desert of cigarette taxes by travelers from New Jersey, New York, Florida and other high-tax states.

Most are traveling to and from the North Carolina beaches, but for many Tidewater residents, the trip across the state line has just one mission — to save money while indulging their craving for cigarettes. They are breaking the law. They are smuggling cigarettes.

The taxes that drive so many Virginians across the state line amount to 2.5 cents a pack from the state and another 10 cents in the Tidewater localities.

The only levy on cigarettes in North Carolina is a 2-cent state tax.

Merchants and customers said they have heard of few incidents where police have interfered with people buying cartons for personal use.

In Chesapeake, Va., Commonwealth's Attorney Robert W. Kowalsky said police don't have the manpower to track people across the state line and are more interested in stopping black marketeers trafficking in large quantities for resale in the Northeast.

Cartons sell for $3.60 to $3.80, and some come with illuminated lighters and gift coupons. Endless brands stretch from floor to ceiling, row after row.

In the Norfolk, Va., area, where cigarette sales are saddled with state and local taxes, smokers pay about $5 a carton.

Herbert Alexander, a Chesapeake resident, said he comes to North Carolina about once a month to buy cigarettes.

"In a year's time you can save a lot of money, and I've been doing this for 10 or 12 years," he said. "Everyone I know comes down here to buy cigarettes. I only buy at home in emergencies."

Russell Hastings, manager of the Southland outlet, said he gets 700 to 1,000 customers a day on weekends. He said the average customer buys three or four cartons, but sales of 10 to 15 cartons are not unusual.

Danny Minton, 18, who sells cigarettes from an old Dare County Library Bookmobile on U.S. 17 near South Mills, said he sees from 400 to 600 customers on a summer weekend.

She Ought to Split Or Get Off the Pot

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: We have a problem in our office building that no one knows how to handle.

Ours is a rather small building; only three floors and maybe 24 tenants, so nearly everybody in the building knows each other.

There is a ladies' room on each floor, but one young woman who works on the third floor comes down to two to smoke pot in our restroom on her lunch hour. The smell is terrible and clings to our clothes if we're in there for very long. Also, she ties up the stall for quite a long time, and during the lunch hour a lot of women want to use the facilities.

Apparently no one has made any attempt to put a stop to this because they don't want to get her in trouble. It's bad enough that she smokes the stuff, but why can't she use the restroom on her own floor?

If you have any idea how we can solve this problem, please let us know.

INCONVENIENCED

DEAR IN: Your complaint is valid, so tell the girl flat out to please use the restroom on HER floor... and, furthermore, remind her that smoking pot is illegal, and she's asking for trouble if she doesn't stay off the grass!

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I had a couple to my home for dinner. The man works with my husband. Yesterday I discovered that a silver and turquoise ring was missing. It's not valuable, but it has sentimental value because my grandmother gave it to me.

I suspect the woman took it. It was in the jewelry box on my dressing table, and she lay down in my bedroom for a while. I couldn't have lost or mislaid it—I never wear it. (The band is almost worn through.)

I don't know what to do about it. I don't want to ruin our friendship, but I really want the ring back.

I can't avoid meeting this woman. Our husbands work together and we see each other at business functions. What should I do?

STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: One thing you should not do is accuse the woman of taking your ring. (Regardless of how strongly you suspect her, you could be wrong.) If I were you, I would forget it.

Abounds In Darkness

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marine biologists have found to their surprise that a variety of sealife abounds in the winter darkness beneath the Arctic ice near Prudhoe Bay, Alaska.

The scientists, working for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, say crustaceans, mollusks, starfish and fish were found under the Arctic ice where it had been thought little or no life could exist in winter.

He said because of the huge demand for the shellfish, pressure on existing beds is large. He estimated that 75 percent of the available oysters, including those that have been replanted, are harvested each year.

As a result, he said the success of the harvest depends on the amount of replanting done.

If the state could spend $150,000 a year on year-round replanting, Godwin estimated that oystering could become a $1-million-a-year industry in Onslow, Pender, Brunswick and

Expected To Post Limits This Week

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — About 1 percent of North Carolina's service stations are expected to post dollar or gallon limits on their sales this week as they try to stretch the remainder of their June allocation of gasoline, according to a Carolina Motor Club spokesman.

Quentin Anderson, the club's public relations director, said Sunday the figure was down from the 3 percent estimate of last week.

He said about 4 percent of the state's service stations are expected to have run out of one or more types of gasoline before the week is out.

Many stations throughout the state have been limiting operating hours for some time. Current limiting of sales is more prevalent in Fayetteville than in any other area in the state, Anderson said. He said the limits mainly were $8 or $10 per sale.

Some sales limits also have been reported elsewhere around the state, especially on the Outer Banks where a Kill Devil Texaco station operator had a $5 limit Sunday. "That's all I have to spare," said station manager Joe Brazzale.

A spokesman for a Gulf station at Nags Head said a $5 limit would go into effect today for all but regular customers.

Anderson said some spot shortages were reported in the Charlotte and Durham areas.

Rose High Students Attended Conference

at North Carolina State University's School of Engineering recently were: Susan Lalik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lalik, 111 Prince Road; Elizabeth Leigh Ito, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Takeru Ito, 2008 Pinecrest Drive; and Dorothy Wang, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Wang, 203 King George Road.

The students were among 150 high school students to be selected for participation in the program aimed at exploring the many opportunities open to women in the engineering profession. Each student was chosen to attend the program on the basis of their interest in science and mathematics. During their stay on the NCSU campus, they attended sample classes and laboratories and toured major facilities in the engineering school.

Resume Search

CAROLINA BEACH, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard today resumed a search for a 33-foot fishing vessel that apparently sank Friday afternoon, 25 miles northeast of Cape Fear.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the vessel carried a crew of two. The names of the missing men were not made public.

The Coast Guard said someone on the vessel Sea Filly radioed at 2:20 p.m. Friday that the ship was taking on water and was in danger of sinking.

Coast Guard searchers reported finding an oil slick about 8.5 miles from the last known position of the Sea Filly. There was no trace of occupants of the Sea Filly. But searchers reported finding a white fishing box, gloves and wood in the search area.

The search area outlined today covered 2,400 square miles, centered on an area about 40 miles southeast of Cape Lookout.

The Sea Filly put out to sea from Morehead City Thursday.

Consequences Of SALT II Non-Ratification

MOSCOW (AP) — Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko declared today "it would be impossible to reopen negotiations" if the U.S. Senate refuses to ratify the just-signed SALT II arms limitation treaty. But he also said the pact can be verified, that the Soviets will abide by it and urged doubting senators to support it.

At a news conference, Gromyko switched from Russian to English to underscore his point for Americans. It was the first flat statement by the Soviets that they would not return to the bargaining table if the treaty is not ratified.

"I tell you frankly it is impossible to resume negotiations," he said, his voice rising. "It would be end of negotiations — end."

"No matter what amendments would be made, it would be impossible to reopen negotiations. Fantastic situation." Addressing one issue that especially troubles the U.S. Senate as it prepares to debate the treaty, Gromyko said the pact is adequately verifiable, and that in any case the Soviet Union will not violate its terms.

"It is not our habit to violate international treaties and agreements," he said, again speaking in Russian.

"The sides have agreed in principle ... that the verification must be carried out by national means. Each side has enough of these, and the American side knows this well."

"If some in America are not sure of this, we can suggest they go to knowledgeable sources in the administration and they will learn, yes, the United States has enough national means of verification."

Gromyko called the recent Vienna summit between Presidents Carter and Leonid I. Brezhnev "more saturated with political content of great importance" than perhaps any other summit between any two powers.

Gromyko urged senators who are opposed to the treaty or who are undecided to "be guided by their consciences and political judgment ... It will be seen that the treaty equally answers the interests of the United States and the Soviet Union."

The public is invited to attend the seminar. For more information, contact Sylvia Wheless, 758-2830, or Susan Nobles, 752-4101.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 26, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have a real chance to get ahead in important ventures by putting more energy and resourcefulness into them. By encouraging those about you with the incentive of praise, you make considerable headway with them, too.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get your special skills to work on a more elevated plane and become more successful. Cooperate more with loved ones and have greater happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Iron out any wrinkles in any new projects you are engaged in and they will work more efficiently. Do whatever will improve conditions at home and with kin. Be thoughtful and kind.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You need more money at this time and can easily find the right outlets to gain it. Seek out an expert who can give you good advice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can gain fine benefits if you understand what it is that a bigwig expects of you. Handling tasks wisely is the keynote now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study personal desires well and then go after the best of such. A new outlet that fascinates you should be investigated. Show affection for friends who have been loyal to you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Gain the favor of one who admires you and who has fine advice to give you now. The evening can be a happy one with those you love.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Look to a generous friend for the assistance you need now. Evening is fine for group affairs. Take no risks with your reputation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get in touch with an influential person you know for backing for your projects. Getting involved in community work can be helpful to you. Avoid one who annoys you no end.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to study whatever most activates you and get fine knowledge. Follow a hunch that proves out your finest views. Screen your friends carefully.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Good day to improve credit by handling debits and credits wisely. Come to a finer understanding with loved ones.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to better terms with one who will be in your life in some capacity in the future. Make your position in public more tenable, too.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad loss today as Wall Street awaited a decision on prices from the oil-exporting nations.

Losers took a 2-1 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 4.77 to 844.33 at noon.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries was preparing to meet Tuesday in Geneva to decide on pricing and production policies for the months ahead.

The cartel was expected to raise oil prices, but the likely size of the increase remained an open question.

Currently the official price is $14.50 a barrel, as set by OPEC three months ago. With the exception of Saudi Arabia, however, OPEC members have since imposed large "surcharges," pushing the price up to as much as $21 in the case of Libyan, Algerian and Nigerian high-grade oils.

Charter Co. fell 7 to 27 1/2 and Charter warrants dropped 6 1/2 to 24 1/2. A Wall Street Journal article noted that Charter's plans to assume an interest in a Bahamian refinery faced a potential threat in the form of a competing bid from Venezuelan interests.

Both the stock and the warrants, which give their holders the right to buy the stock for $10 a share, posted spectacular gains this spring.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index dropped .31 to 57.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .51 at 199.74.

Volume on the Big Board came to 14.13 million shares at noon, down from 15.55 million at the same point Friday.

blocking them anymore because they're out of fuel." The Levittown protest began Saturday as truckers and 1,000 motorists angered by the closing of a gas station blocked an intersection. The violence flared again Sunday as teenagers swelled the ranks of protesters who moved from one intersection to another.

Police moved in Sunday with dogs and billy clubs to clear blocked streets. One man was believed to have been shot in his arm, but authorities said later he suffered a puncture wound. Storefront windows were smashed and two service stations were vandalized.

Reportedly Injured

Phillip Silas Burnworth of Route 1, Grifton, was reported injured when the car he was driving went out of control after hitting a puddle of water on Evans Street and ran off the roadway.

Police, who investigated the 4:10 p.m. mishap, 125 feet North of the Red Banks Road intersection, said Burnworth struck the puddle of water after passing another vehicle.

Damage to the Burnworth car was estimated at $2,500 and officers charged him with improper passing.

Gold High, Dollar Dips

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold hit record trading highs this morning in London and Zurich. The dollar fell against the major currencies.

The top London bullion dealers fixed the gold price at $284.50 an ounce this morning, up $2.25 on Friday's $282.25 close. Another fix was due this afternoon.

In Zurich, gold was being traded at just below the London price, $284.375 an ounce, up from $283.875 Friday, which was a record European closing high price.

Bullion dealers said buying and selling was moderately heavy as the financial world anxiously awaited a new increase in world oil prices at Tuesday's meeting in Geneva of the oil producing countries, OPEC. Forecasts were that oil will rise to between $18 and $20 a barrel from the current OPEC base price of $14.55.

Services Set

Gay Parades Quiet, Festive

By The Associated Press
 There were some somber moments and a few minor confrontations, but most parades and rallies commemorating the 10th anniversary of the beginning of the national gay rights movement were marked by a festive mood.

In New York, where the "Stonewall Riot" unofficially spawned the national crusade for homosexual rights 10 years ago, about 100,000 gay rights advocates marched up Fifth Avenue Sunday to a rally in Central Park.

The parade was led by members of the original 13 arrested at the Stonewall Inn, a club with a predominantly homosexual clientele.

Police raided the club June 28, 1969, for allegedly serving liquor without a license. The evicted patrons and a sympathetic crowd outside resisted arrest, started a fire and pelted police with rocks, bottles and an uprooted parking meter. The episode became a symbol for gay rights advocates.

Only a few marchers were costumed Sunday, but one heavyweight man in an evening gown and a Mae West wig displayed a sign announcing, "Not every boy wants to grow up to be a Marine."

The nation's largest Gay Freedom Parade was held in San Francisco, where about 200,000 gay rights supporters surged along Market Street to a rally at Civic Center Plaza in front of City Hall.

The mood was upbeat, in contrast to the violence five weeks ago when angry protesters clashed with police over the voluntary manslaughter conviction of former Supervisor Dan White. Gays claimed the charge was not severe enough for the November shooting deaths of Mayor George Moscone and homosexual Supervisor Harvey Milk.

Many believe the episode heightened tension between gays and police, some of whom resented Chief Charles Gain's demand for police restraint in the clash.

In Miami, about 2,000 marchers clogged an 11-block route through the downtown area. Police said the group doubled from about 1,000 after television crews left.

Carter...

peror's banquet in the evening. Carter said the economic summit starting Thursday, which will be dominated by discussion of the price and scarcity of oil, "might very well be the most important economic summit conference ever held."

Carter is expected to seek agreements by the seven nations to curb their oil imports, cease running up oil prices by bidding against each other on spot markets, and develop alternative energy sources such as synthetic fuels and solar power.

Hirohito, 78 and stooped, met with Carter and Rosalynn at the Akasaka palace, an ornate government guest house patterned after Versailles. It will be the site of the summit talks Thursday and Friday.

Carter grasped the emperor's outstretched hand with both of his and said, "I'm very honored to meet you," adding that he brought greetings from the people of the United States.

The two men then walked into a vast cobbled courtyard laced with red carpets to hear their national anthems and review a white-uniformed honor guard.

There were no speeches, just handshakes with dignitaries while children in school uniforms and older invited guests waved paper flags and fanned themselves in the humid heat.

Carter jogged Sunday night and today in the U.S. embassy compound, where he is staying, and took a morning swim there.

The Kyodo news agency reported that Japanese police vetoed as too risky a Carter request to jog around the imperial palace grounds in downtown Tokyo, a crowded local jogging route.

Almost overshadowing Carter's official visit were security precautions that seemed certain to limit his contact with the Japanese citizenry. He travels everywhere on closed streets encased in a formidable security cocoon — one that some U.S. officials say they find oppressive.

At the luncheon, Ohira said no two nations so different had ever enjoyed "an interchange of so great scope and substance" as the United States and Japan.

In his toast Carter echoed that, saying "I doubt that there has ever been two countries so different...but still bound so closely together."

Search For Kidnappers

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. — Kings Mountain Police and the State Bureau of Investigation searched today for three persons who held up a convenience store, kidnapped the attendant and took him to South Carolina.

Police said two men and a woman held up the employee, Lee Perkins, at 3:15 a.m. Perkins told police the assailants entered into a car and drove him across the border on Interstate 85 before releasing him unharmed in Cherokee County, S.C.

Appointed Delegate

Rusty Duke of Farmville, has been appointed a permanent delegate to the Judicial Conference of the Fourth Circuit upon recommendation of Senior U.S. District Judge John D. Larkins Jr.

Duke, a Farmville attorney, was appointed to the judicial conference, which will meet this year in Hot Springs, Va., on June 29 and 30, by Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., chief judge of the U.S. Fourth Circuit of Appeals.

Duke, a former law clerk of Judge Larkins', is one of only 18 appointees to the conference recommended by the judge since he became a U.S. District Judge in 1961.

Tobacco Pride Kick-Off Set

A kick-off meeting for a "Pride in Tobacco" campaign for 1979 will be held Friday, June 29, 6:30 p.m., at Dorton Arena in Raleigh.

John Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, has urged tobacco growers throughout the state to attend the dinner meeting. Growers interested in attending the rally should contact their county Farm Bureau offices, which will be responsible for coordinating attendance plans.

"It is now time for growers to demonstrate their strong support for their industry by participating in this event," said Sledge. "We need to let the people know how important tobacco is to the entire state of North Carolina."

Rainy days aren't the only days worth saving for.

These days it makes just as much sense, maybe more, to save for a sunny day.

That exotic vacation in sun country. A new car or boat that makes you feel like a million.

Here's a practical approach to saving that can guarantee the money's there when you need it. Instead of keeping all your savings tied up in accounts with rigid maturity dates, keep part of it in a regular savings account at Planters. We can even help you set up an automatic savings plan that transfers a set amount from your checking account to your savings account every month.

That way your money's earning a big 5% daily interest, from day of deposit to day of withdrawal which yields 5.13%. But more important, you'll know it's there when you need it. Anytime, rain or shine.

Spinks TKO'd In First

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Gerrie Coetzee, a 24-year-old South African who prayed for help with his punches, has won a shot at a share of the world heavyweight title by flooring Leon Spinks three times in two minutes and three seconds of the first round. Spinks, 25, a product of the St. Louis ghetto and former world and Olympic champion, answered the opening bell Sunday night with a furious barrage of punches and then wound up bouncing on the canvas, the victim of a vicious right-hand attack. A series of terrific overhand rights by the South African surprised and stunned Spinks as he was still trying to show he was unaffected and unfringed by his opponent's hammer-like punches. "I asked the Lord to help me in this fight, and I want to thank him," Coetzee said. "I must tell the people the Lord answered my prayers." Spinks' defeat by a first-round technical knockout could mean a long period of inactivity and little money. But Coetzee's convincing win made him the fourth South African fighter to get a world championship fight and, possibly, the first ever to gain a heavyweight title.

Coetzee will fight John Tate of the United States in September for the World Boxing Association crown expected to be abandoned by Muhammad Ali. The fight will probably be in South Africa, according to promoter Bob Arum. Tate, who came here to see who his next opponent would be, said he was unimpressed by the South African blitz. However, he was one of the few not impressed by the awesome power of Coetzee, who got a big boost from reports that the championship fight could be staged in South Africa before a crowd of 100,000 and a purse certainly higher than the $105-

000 he won in Monte Carlo. "I was in good shape, but I really did not expect this," the victor said. "I thank Spinks for having proved to myself and to the world how good I am." After the fight, Spinks went to his corner and started crying. He locked himself in his dressing room and refused any interviews. Leaving the dressing room, he declined to answer any questions, saying only: "I got beaten. What else can I say." He added that all he remembered of the final seconds of the fight was an overhand right. Coetzee, little known internationally because he fought all his previous bouts at home, remained a mystery because of his short performance here. He has 15 knockouts in 22 professional fights, all victories. Coetzee also looked somewhat dispassionate in the dressing room while 500 South Africans, who had chanted the national anthem before the fight, went crazy over his victory. "I am now thinking of Tate," Coetzee said. "It would be another difficult engagement. I will train hard as usual and again will pray to the Lord to help me."

Trevino Overcomes Struggling Watson

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino, a $2 million winner with his Canadian Open victory over struggling Tom Watson, now has another goal.

"Yeah, I knew a win would put me past $2 million (in career earnings)," Trevino said after Watson's collapse had opened the gates for Lee's drive to his third Canadian national title. "Now I'm going for $3 million. There's always a goal, always something else to try for," he said.

"I'll play hard, full-time, for another four or five years and then slack off," said Trevino, 39, who joined Jack Nicklaus as the only men in the game to go past $2 million in official winnings. The $63,000 he collected from the total purse of $350,000 pushed his career total to $2,024,563.

The victory, his first of the season and 22nd of his career, didn't come as a surprise to Trevino. But the way he won it was a surprise.

"Never in my wildest dreams did I think I could win it shooting a round of par 71," Trevino said.

But Watson's ragged play — including a triple bogey and a later string of three consecutive bogeys — set it up for him.

"That's what it took for me to win," said Trevino, who started the final round 3 shots back and won by that margin with a 281 total, 3-under-par on the 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"I didn't exactly burn up the course," said Trevino, who now has won at least one title in each of the last 12 seasons. "But a win's a win. I'll take it."

"The win's are coming fewer and further between now. I'll take 'em any way I can get 'em. I can't say I'm sorry Tom shot a bad round. It took him making triple bogey and three bogeys in a row for me to win. But that's the way it is with this game."

And the wheels came off for Watson this sunny, windy day. He blew his 3-stroke lead with a triple-bogey 6 from the water on the third hole and then settled the issue with the three consecutive bogeys beginning when he missed the green on the 12th and ending with a three-putt on the 14th.

The man who has dominated golf for the past 2½ seasons finally got home with a fat 78 and third at 285. It was small consolation to Watson, who appeared poised to gain his fifth title of the year, that he broke his own single-season money-winning record. The third-place check, $23,800, gave him $377,674 for the year. He set the old record last season at $362,429.

Ben Crenshaw, who really wasn't in the title chase, birdied two of the last three holes for a 71 that lifted him into second at 284.

Bob Gilder was fourth at 286 after a closing 70. Tied at 287 were defending champion Bruce Lietzke, Howard Twitty and David Graham. Graham had a 71, Lietzke 70 and Twitty 69.

U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin was 75-291. And Jack Nicklaus' frustrations continued with a 77 that put him far back in the pack at 293.

Lopez Wins Present

Hershey, Pa. (AP) — Nancy Lopez gave her husband, Tim Lopez, an anniversary present Sunday.

Lopez, the LPGA tour's leading money-winner, won the $100,000 Lady Keystone LPGA Open by two shots at Hershey Country Club's West Course. The victory came one year and one day after the couple's first date during the 1978 Lady Keystone.

Lopez scored a two-shot triumph over Sally Little and veteran Kathy Whitworth. Lopez shot an even par-72 in the final round and finished with a 54-hole total of 212, four under par on the demanding 6,398-yard layout.

Lopez' victory did not come without challenge. Amy Alcott and Betsy King along with Whitworth were deadlocked with Lopez midway through the final round.

The victory was Lopez' 15th in her brief career.

Sugar Ray Shows Power

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard feels he may have proved a big point with his impressive win over Tony Chiaverini in a nationally televised super welterweight contest — he not only has one of the fastest punches around today, it's a pretty powerful one too.

"People can underestimate my punching ability," Leonard said Sunday after the 10-round fight at Caesars Palace. "I'm pretty sure it's been proved different today."

Leonard, one of the hottest properties in boxing, took command of the fight from the first bell and never let up on Chiaverini, the World Boxing Council's sixth-ranked contender. Chiaverini, after a brutal beating in the fourth round, didn't answer the bell for the fifth and the win went to Leonard as a TKO.

"I hit him with some tremendous left jabs," Leonard said. "I figured the punches I hit him with would discourage him."

They didn't, though. Chiaverini, while virtually defenseless against Leonard's sizzling jab, still made offensive moves and in the third round scored two good hooks to Leonard's head.

But Leonard said Chiaverini didn't cause any serious damage.

"He didn't hit me with any scoring shots," he said. "But I felt his punching power when he hit me in the arms."

Leonard opened a cut under Chiaverini's right eye in the fourth round with one of dozens of head shots he took against the hapless 26-year-old.

Chiaverini's eyes glazed over just before the bell and he stumbled back to the corner, not to come out again.

"I'm a little disappointed that I couldn't stay in longer," Chiaverini said after the fight. "I wanted to (answer the bell) in the fifth round, but my trainer said no. My corner didn't want me to get hurt any more."

Leonard, who meets Wilfredo Benitez of Puerto Rico for the WBC's welterweight title on Dec. 1, also said he was looking forward to a fight with Roberto Duran, another extremely fast and very powerful puncher.

Duran, who gave up the lightweight title to campaign in the welterweight division, defeated former champion Carlos Palomino at Madison Square Garden on Friday night.

"I hope to see that fight become a reality," Leonard said. Leonard, 23, of Palmer Park, Md., weighed in at 151, while Chiaverini tipped the scales at 153. Both fighters had agreed to a 154-pound weight limit.

The win brings Leonard's pro record to 23-1 with 14 knockouts. A 1976 gold medal winner at the Montreal Olympics, he had a 40-0 amateur record before he turned pro.

Leonard, whose contract is held by ABC, received $140,000 from Caesars Palace for the fight, plus whatever he earned from the network. Chiaverini, from Kansas City, Mo., earned $61,000 and is now 30-4-1 with 21 knockouts.

Weaver Proved He Belongs

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Promoter Don King's hair stands straight up all the time, so that was wasn't the tipoff of the turmoil burning through his P.T. Barnum-tuned brain. But the frown on his usually smiling face spoke volumes.

King was worried as he stood at ringside, watching a million dollar Earnie Shavers-Larry Holmes September gate slip away under the pounding punches that unknown Mike Weaver was landing.

You remember Mike Weaver. Even his charming nickname — "Hercules" — couldn't convince the high-powered television network that he was a worthy opponent for the heavyweight championship. King tried to sell them Weaver-Holmes and they laughed him off. With their vast knowledge of boxing, the TV bigwigs decided that Mike Weaver didn't belong. But with a shower of lefts and rights, the ex-Marine from Los Angeles proved he certainly did.

Weaver was a real-life Rocky — the improbable underdog who was doing a number on the heavyweight champion of the world — or, at least, the World Boxing Council's world. Muhammad Ali — all of him — is the World Boxing Association champ and you can bet your bankroll that if Ali were the other half of the billing, the networks would have bought Mike Weaver in no time.

But Larry Holmes lacks the Ali charisma and even if he is undefeated and even if he does own the championship belt, he needed a stronger name than Mike Weaver to sell this bout to television.

Now Earnie Shavers, there's a name television can buy. King sold Shavers-Holmes to ABC for September, getting some fancy numbers for the deal. It's not an Ali-type, multi-million dollar contract, but that's understandable.

The heavyweight division, after all, will never be quite the same without Muhammad. Forget those title fights in faraway places with strange sounding names. Without Ali, boxing will have to be content with conventional sites for its big bouts. After all, if ABC, CBS and NBC wouldn't buy Weaver-Holmes, why should Kuala Lumpur or Zaire?

Larry Holmes bought Weaver as a keep-busy fight. The champion wanted some action and the rest of the division has been devastated. Ken Norton and Jimmy Young have eliminated themselves. Shavers is for September. John Tate is a possibility, but they may be rushing him a bit. You saw what happened to Leon Spinks, another rush job who looked like a yo-yo Sunday against Gerrie Coetzee.

Weaver seemed a safe fight for Holmes but he was not.

Fighters sometimes like to show their disdain for opponents by refusing to sit down in their corners between rounds. It's as if to say the opponent isn't causing enough damage to force the rest. For three rounds, Holmes stood in his corner. After the fourth round, he began sitting down.

Weaver will never be mistaken for a clever, classic boxer. His style is straight-ahead, slug-it-out, and he and Holmes did some number on each other. For 10 rounds, the fight was close and a lot of people at ringside had the champion losing — not by much to be sure, but losing, nevertheless.

Snow Hill Tops Wilson

WILSON — Snow Hill scored five runs in the eighth inning Saturday night to break a 3-3 tie and defeat Wilson 8-3 in American Legion baseball.

Snow Hill scored a run in the first when Philip Gordon singled in Jimbo Fulghum and two in the third when Gordon hit a two-run homer with Al Murray on base. But Wilson tied the game in the seventh inning with three runs, forcing Snow Hill to take command in the eighth.

Murray started off the eighth with a single, but was thrown out after a base hit by Gordon. Donald Shaw singled in Gordon and Allen Moore got a base hit. Shaw scored on a single by Walt Tyndall and Jeff Scott walked.

Collyn Beaman squeezed Moore in and Tyndall followed on a throwing error. Billy McLawhorn walked and Fulghum got a base on balls to push Scott in.

After Sunday's loss to Pitt County, Snow Hill is now 6-5 and hosts Washington tonight.

No matter what anyone does, all sports events are going to be governed by human judgement. There is nothing anyone can do to stop it. Machines, instant replays, will just turn the games into a travesty.

Unfortunately, some fans cannot accept the fact that human umpires and referees make mistakes. Generally, they feel that they have been "robbed" by the crooked ref. This does happen, unfortunately, but the instances of it are few and far between, thank goodness.

Most of the time, the disgruntled fan simply boos the official or yells from the stands. He paid his money to get in, and that gives him his right, I suppose.

But there are times when it goes further than that. The other night, for instance, at an American Legion game, a fan came onto the field after the contest ended, to give the officials a tongue-lashing for "stealing" the game. Oddly enough, he was not complaining about the call of balls or strikes, the usual complaint, but about a balk call.

For the most part, few fans are that familiar with the rules. Few players and coaches are. But if the coach or players complain, some fans feel that they are automatically in the right.

For a fan to come on the field, however, is totally improper, despite the fact that the game is over.

In years past, we have seen a coach follow an umpire all the way to his automobile, complaining loudly about how the game was "stolen," and that umpires should set a "better example for these young kids."

We wondered about the example he was given to his players.

In every game, except a few where rules provide for ties, there are winners and losers. Losing is difficult many times, but has to be accepted. Generally, it is accepted better by those playing the game than by those watching from the stands.

It is difficult not to complain, naturally. We understand this. We have been through the ranks of the "Little League Parent," and the like. But the grumbling should be confined to the stands.

These days, it seems like more and more disgruntled fans are taking losses on the athletic field to court.

Recently one court tossed the case out, saying that it didn't have time for such foolishness. We applaud those justices.

The fan can sit in the stands and cheer or boo, according to his will. But when the game is over, he, like the players, must accept what comes, and not take his frustrations on the field—or into the courtroom.

Yankee Soap Opera Revived

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It has taken less than a week for the New York Yankees to once again become a real-live soap opera, something approximating the so-called Bronx Zoo that existed from Reggie Jackson's arrival in 1977 to Billy Martin's departure last July.

Martin, cowboy boots and all, is back in the saddle, having replaced Bob Lemon — the man who replaced him. With the Yankees, it couldn't be any other way: already the two-time world champions are cloaked in controversy.

—Are the Yankees trying to trade Reggie?

—Has Reggie asked to be traded?

—Can Reggie and Billy ever co-exist?

—Is George riding to the rescue?

—Will the morrow bring the final parting, peace at last or just one more in the never-ending series of events that would make the most turbulent soap opera seem dull by comparison?

Taking the questions in order, the answers are maybe, maybe, maybe, maybe and stay tuned.

Both Jackson and Yankee officials declined to comment Sunday on reports that the sidelined slugger has asked to be traded. And General Manager Cedric Tallis said that "no players have been mentioned in any trades at this point."

Meanwhile, Martin continued to make it a point to praise

Jackson, saying the Yankees "need Reggie's bat because Reggie's a great player." But Jackson, obviously choosing his words carefully, seemed down in the dumps.

Asked if Jackson had requested a trade, Tallis said, "Anything of that nature is for Reggie to answer."

Asked if he would trade himself if he were general manager, Jackson said, "With all the unrest and discomfort, I would have to analyze what's best for the club. Does that get me off the hook?"

Later, Jackson added: "People say I'm not involved, but I am. I can't help being involved. I'll always be involved. As long as I'm here, I'll be involved. The only way I cannot be involved is if I go someplace else."

The Yankees did confirm that Jackson's name, along with six others, appeared on the American League waiver list last Tuesday. That was the day Martin returned from 11 months in exile to resume the managerial position he vacated almost a year ago after calling Jackson "a born liar" and owner George Steinbrenner "convicted" for illegal campaign contributions.

The Associated Press learned the other Yankees on whom waivers were asked were center fielder Mickey Rivers, veteran pitcher Catfish Hunter and Jim Kaat, long-time outfielder Roy White, utility infielder Fred Stanley and rookie outfielder Darryl Jones.

Pitt County Sweeps Weekend Games

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team won a pair of games this weekend, taking a 2-1 pitcher's duel over Rocky Mount Saturday night and then defeating Snow Hill Sunday in a 15-7 slugfest.

The victories leave the Post 39 squad with a 9-2 record and in at least a tie for the league lead.

Ben Wilson went the distance Saturday night, picking up his second win against no losses. Skip Topping and Bob Hemingway shared the mound duties for Pitt County on Sunday. Topping lasted only one inning, while Hemingway won his first game in two decisions.

Rocky Mount scored first in the Saturday game with a run in the first inning. David Wells singled with one away and moved to second on Bill Merrifield's infield out. He moved to third on a passed ball and scored on a base hit by Jeff Newsome.

Wilson helped his own effort by scoring Pitt's first run in the third. He singled, moved to third on base hits by Topping and Spencer and scored on Mark Douglas's sacrifice fly.

The winning run came across in the fourth. Mike Campbell led off with a double, went to third on Junior Neal's infield out and scored on Will Barrett's single.

Topping and Spencer had two hits each on Saturday. Will Barrett came out with both barrels blazing Sunday afternoon to lead Pitt County to a 15-7 victory over Snow Hill. The big right fielder went 3-5 at the plate, including two home runs, and knocked in a total of eight runners, as well as scoring three times himself.

Barrett wasn't the only hot bat for Pitt County, however. Shank, Douglas and Spencer had two hits each. Spencer's hits were both doubles.

Pitt County got on the scoreboard first in the game with a single run in the first. Shank led off with a double, was sacrificed to third by Douglas and scored on a two-base hit by Barrett that was later nullified when he was called out on appeal for missing first base. Snow Hill put three runs across in the bottom of the inning. Billy McLawhorn walked and Al Murray singled before a triple by Phillip Gordon cleared the base paths. Gordon came in on a base hit by Allen Moore.

Snow Hill added two more runs in the second when McLawhorn walked and Murray hit a home run.

In the top of the third, Pitt County put the game away when it exploded for eight runs. Shank and Douglas singled and Barrett was hit by a pitch. Hemingway doubled in Shank and Douglas scored on the throw. Curtis

Spencer walked and Micah Dixon singled in Barrett. Will Sanderson doubled to score Spencer and Campbell got a base on balls, along with Junior Neal. Shank and Douglas walked and Barrett singled to make it 9-5.

In the fifth, Barrett hit a three-run homer, scoring Shank and Douglas, and Dixon also came across in the frame to make it 13-5. Phillip Gordon scored for Snow Hill in the seventh and ninth, rounding out the home team scoring.

Pitt County added two more in the eighth as Shank walked and Barrett homered. Murray, Gordon, Donald Shaw and Moore each had two hits for Snow Hill.

Foyt Easily Wins Music 500

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — "Let's face it — me, all the guys I've been racin' with since the 1960s — we're darn sure all on our way out," A.J. Foyt explained. "We'd better be looking for some good young drivers to come up and replace us."

But not quite yet. The seemingly ageless Foyt, now 44, is admittedly out of shape, but "I ain't ready for no wheelchair," as his almost effortless victory Sunday in the $375,000 Music 500 at Pocono International Raceway proved conclusively.

"I'm not in as good as shape as I should be; I'm about 15 pounds too fat," Foyt said generously. "But I haven't lost any desire. That checkered flag looks just as good to me now as it did in 1960. Each time it's just like having a brand new, fresh woman. If someone tells you I feel any different, that's just a big lie."

"These kids like Rick Mears and Danny Ongais and Howdy Holmes, they're good drivers," Foyt said. "A couple of them came up and blowed me off, no questions asked, and went about their business. I sure didn't let 'em by me. They just drove by."

However, for the most part, it was Foyt's race. There were 17 lead changes among seven drivers, but Foyt led 127 of the 200 circuits around Pocono International Raceway's 2½-mile trioval.

Foyt admitted he had a higher gear in his car, to use in case the competition got close, that he really didn't have to use.

"I just kept up my same old pace all day long," Foyt said. "I pulled back there at the end considerably."

Still his victory margin over 50-year-old Jim McElreath was about seven miles, two laps plus about 40 seconds. Larry Dickson, who had been a competitive second most of the race, ran out of fuel three laps from the end and settled for third.

Jerry Sneva, nearly 24 miles behind, was fourth, followed by Dick Simon.

Foyt averaged 134.995 mph, slowed considerably by seven caution periods for a total of 39 laps. He earned $78,562.

The final 150 miles, Foyt had the track almost to himself. Only six of the 25 starters were running at the checkered flag.

Ongais dropped out after 148 laps with a broken engine after challenging for the lead through most of the early stages. Johnny Parsons, another early leader, parked after 35 laps. Of the other leaders, including Dickson, Tom Bigelow stopped near the end with a broken radiator, Howdy Holmes lost 11 laps while an oil line was repaired and Roger McCluskey crashed. He was not injured.

Gary Bettenhausen also crashed in a separate incident, as did Jerry Karl and Phil Threshie. Eldon Rasmussen, an added starter who did not qualify, crashed on his 59th lap and suffered broken ribs and a broken leg.

Texas, KC Find Success In California

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Horace Greeley would be proud of the Texas Rangers and Kansas City Royals. Both teams followed Greeley's advice to "Go West, young man," and wound up right in the middle of a pennant race.

The Rangers captured a double-header in Oakland Sunday 5-1 and 7-2 to move within two games of first-place California in the American League West. Which is exactly where the Royals are after sweeping three games from the Angels, the last one Sunday by a 5-2 score.

Just one game behind the Royals and Rangers are the Minnesota Twins, who stayed in the Midwest to sweep four games in Chicago. Minnesota took a pair from the White Sox Sunday, 4-3 and 7-1.

Texas got solid pitching from former A's John Henry Johnson, acquired earlier this month, and Doc Medich, in subduing Oakland. Johnson, 4-8, won his second straight game for the Rangers, throwing seven strong innings in the opener.

Oakland's Matt Keough has been coming away with nothing all season. He lost his ninth in a row this season and is 2-20 since making the All-Star team last year.

Medich gave up six hits in seven innings in the nightcap before Sparky Lyle and Jim Kern relieved. John Ellis hit a three-run homer for Texas in the opener and Pat Putnam did the same in the second game.

Royals 5, Angels 2
Kansas City rode the three-hit pitching of Dennis Leonard and a two-run homer by George Brett to the victory that tightened the AL West even further. Leonard, 5-4, had missed five starts with an inflamed elbow. He was in control throughout except for a two-run homer by Willie Aikens.

Twins 4-7, White Sox 3-1
Minnesota got stellar pitching from reliever Mike Bacsik in the first game and starter Jerry Koonsman in the nightcap. Dave Edwards' run-scoring single in the seventh inning of the opener provided the decisive run and Roy Smalley had three doubles to pace the Twins second-game attack.

Bacsik hurled 41-3 perfect innings in relief of Darrell Jackson.

Marshall got in his work in the second game, replacing Koonsman in the ninth after the veteran left-hander held Chicago to seven hits and struck out seven. Koonsman, 8-6, broke a six-game personal losing streak.

Tigers 6, Orioles 4

The Tigers snapped Dennis Martinez' 10-game winning streak as well as the Orioles nine-game string. Rusty Staub had a solo homer as well as an RBI triple that broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth. Rich Dauer had a two-run homer for Baltimore.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 4
Carl Yastrzemski and Fred Lynn had homers and Mike Torrez pitched a five-hitter as Boston finished a three-game sweep of Toronto.

Yankees 8, Indians 2
Lou Piniella drove in two runs, stole a base to set up another and threw out a base runner (catcher Ron Hassey) for the fourth time in five games for New York, which swept three games from Cleveland.

Brewers 7, Mariners 4
Paul Molitor's 12th-inning single drove home Charlie Moore with the winning run. Milwaukee went ahead 4-2 on shortstop Mario Mendoza's throwing error in the top of the ninth. But Seattle came back with a pair in the bottom of the inning on RBI groundouts by Willie Horton and Leon Roberts.

Dan Meyer extended his hitting streak to 16 games with a solo home run in the second.

Phillies' Christenson Hits, Hurts Victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The way Larry Christenson has been pitching this year, he'd rather talk about his hitting.

Actually, he's been doing more than just talking about it. One of baseball's hardest-hitting hurlers, Christenson belted a home run and two doubles Sunday to help the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 5-2.

"I've been going into a game thinking about my hitting to keep from embarrassing myself," said Christenson, off to an inauspicious start.

Christenson's batting average currently is .474 and includes a home run, triple and three doubles this year. Those are glittering figures compared to his pitching statistics, which include a 2-5 record and 4.25 earned run average in his injury-plagued season.

The victory, by the way, spelled the first time that the Phillies had beaten the high-flying Expos in nine tries this season.

In other National League games, the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 4-1; the New York Mets defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2; the Cincinnati Reds trimmed the San Francisco Giants 8-7; the Chicago Cubs blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and the Atlanta Braves defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-2.

The Expos nicked Christenson for a fourth-inning run on Tommy Hutton's RBI single and another in the sixth on a run-scoring double by Larry Parrish. The right-hander yielded eight hits in six innings before getting relief help from Tug McGraw.

"It's as close to a 'must' win as you can get in the month of July," said Philadelphia shortstop Larry Bowa, whose defending NL East champions are currently floundering in fourth place, just three games over .500 and 5½ games behind the Expos.

Astros 4, Padres 1
Joaquin Andujar scattered seven hits and contributed a sacrifice fly as Houston defeated San Diego. Andujar's sacrifice fly capped a two-run second inning that gave the Astros a 3-0 lead and all the runs they needed.

Andujar, 8-4, survived a shaky second inning and retired nine of the next 11 batters before losing his shutout in the sixth on an RBI single by Dan Briggs.

Mets 6, Cardinals 2

gained his first National League victory with relief help from Dale Murray as New York beat St. Louis. Hassler, acquired by the Mets from the Boston Red Sox on June 15, gave up five hits, walked four and struck out two in 6-2-3 innings. Loser Bob Forsch, 3-7, departed in the seventh after surrendering eight of the 11 New York hits.

The Mets sewed up the game with a four-run seventh capped by Lee Mazzilli's RBI single.

Reds 8, Giants 7
Ken Griffey drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning, leading Cincinnati over San Francisco. The Reds had tied the score at 7 with a four-run seventh. Dave Concepcion's double drove in the first run, two more scored on a single by Johnny Bench and Dan Driessen knocked in the final run of the frame.

Doug Bair, 4-3, was the winner in relief while San Francisco reliever Dave Roberts, 0-2, took the loss.

Cubs 5, Pirates 0
Bill Buckner and Jerry Martin hit home runs to back the five-hit pitching of Rick Reuschel, 6-5, as Chicago defeated Pittsburgh.

Buckner's solo home run in the first inning, his eighth of the season, came off losing pitcher Bruce Kison, 3-4. Chicago added four runs in the eighth inning on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Murcer off reliever Grant Jackson and Martin's three-run homer off Enrique Romo.

Braves 4, Dodgers 2
A four-run fourth inning, sparked by seven straight singles, led Atlanta over Los Angeles. Joe Nolan's two-run hit keyed the Braves' game-breaking inning.

Rick Matula, 5-5, scattered seven hits and struck out seven in recording the victory for the Braves. Burt Hooton, 7-4, was the loser.

Senior Babe Ruth

Winterville 11,

Ayden-Grifton 0

WINTERVILLE — Winterville romped to an 11-0 victory over Ayden-Grifton Saturday night in the Senior Babe Ruth League.

Sammy Tucker threw a no-hitter at Ayden-Grifton in a game called after four and a half innings.

Tucker struck out eight and walked four along the way.

Winterville got all it needed in the first, scoring once. Tucker walked, as did Mike Edens. A single by Gary Brock brought in Tucker.

Winterville added seven in the third and three in the fourth.

Brock and Troy Perkins each had a single and a double to lead the Winterville hitting.

Winterville is now 7-1 in the league, while Ayden-Grifton is 1-7.

Local Runners Qualify

RALEIGH — Twelve local runners qualified for the Region III Junior Olympics Championships at the State Junior Olympics meet held in Raleigh Saturday.

Two state records were also broken by Greenville performers in the meet. Jennifer Newton set a new mark in the 880 for girls nine and under when she won in 2:44.2. She was also first in the mile in 6:08.

Abner Clark took the triple jump with a leap 47-3/4 in the 14-15 age group, also a new standard for N.C.

Kenny Smith won the 14-15 group mile run in 4:35, just a half-second off the state record, and Chris McLawhorn was first in the 440 in the 14-15 group.

The top three places in each event qualified for the regional meet to be held in Atlanta July 13-14.

Summary:

Girls' Results

MOTORISTS ROBBED BY GAS THIEF

Motorists are being robbed by a sly thief who steals gas while they drive. The culprit is a dirty carburetor, which wastes precious fuel and causes poor engine performance. Now you can restore efficiency thanks to WYNN'S Carburetor Cleaner. This special spray formula works without disassembling to instantly remove gum and varnish, curb rough idling and stalling, as it increases mileage. So for happier motoring, get WYNN'S Carburetor Cleaner today.

Kids Prize TV Show A Refreshing Hodgepodge

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Forty or 50 years ago kids sat around the family radio in the hour just before dinner and listened to the adventures of "Little Orphan Annie" and "Jack Armstrong, The All-American Boy."

They supplemented their entertainment hours with Big-Little Books — hard-cover versions of popular comics of the day, "Tarzan" and "Buck Rogers."

It was the era before comic books. There were penny dreadfuls and western pulps to fill in the reading gaps.

Record players, most of which were hand cranked, were relatively rare. There wasn't enough money for a kid to buy phonograph records — 35 cents — and the choice was severely limited in any case.

In daylight hours boys played kick-the-can, spun tops and played marbles. Girls jumped rope, played hopscotch and jacks and made beanbags.

On rainy days the girls had their dolls and the boys played Parchesi, Lotto and other board games. Tinker Toys, Lincoln Logs and Erector Sets were big, too.

City kids and rural Tom Sawyers enjoyed seasonal preoccupations after school — kite-flying, orange crate coasters on roller skates and rubber-gun wars.

Clubhouses were built and star chamber meetings held in those innocent days. Cap pistols were a major item. Saturday matinees provided flickering western serials. Admission: one dime.

But the fun was mainly in the doing. Getting out with the neighborhood gang.

The kids who thrilled to the few available 15-minute radio adventure tales are today's parents and grandparents.

Their progeny watch scores of hours of cartoons, rooted like automatons in front of television sets. They live with "Sesame Street," "The Road Runner" and "The Flintstones." Watching instead of doing.

In growing numbers they are also tuning in "Kids Are People, Too," which won an Emmy recently for the most outstanding children's entertainment show of 1978-79.

The Pied Piper of the 90-minute Sunday morning show (ABC) show is Michael Young, a 27-year-old version of Johnny Carson who conducts interviews, banter with the studio audience of 300 youngsters and introduces guests.

Emcee Young says today's pre-teens and teen-agers are a sophisticated generation, hip to the uses of the media. While they are the backbone of the record industry, today's kids are also well informed in a variety of areas.

"This is a very bright, aware generation," said Young, an Air Force brat who attended eight schools in six European and Asian countries. A graduate of Auburn who majored in political science and mass communications, Young believes he is attuned to today's adolescents.

"I'm not too far removed from their age bracket," he said. "Kids today aren't rebellious like the youngsters of the '60s. They have a strong drive to succeed and make a lot of money."

"They're concerned with the ecology, politics and economics. They seem to know what they want early in life and figure they have the right to go for their goals."

"Drugs aren't an obsession as they were with my generation. So many adults are into drugs it's no longer cool for kids. The intrigue is gone. What fun is sneaking off to smoke a joint when their parents to it at home?"

"I don't have all the answers, but it seems peer group

Raleigh's Marijuana

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The cannabis caper has become a Capitol case with the discovery of a marijuana plant right outside the front door of the Capitol.

"It was in one of those (flower) beds right in front of the Capitol," said John T. Talton, assistant secretary of administration for government operations. "I wouldn't have known what it was had I not seen what Harold Ritter found the other day."

Ritter, supervisor of state grounds, and his crews have been busy this week weeding marijuana plants out of the flower beds in the state government complex in downtown Raleigh.

Reruns Set For Summer

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — I never thought I'd remember this past television season with nostalgic longing, but this summer's TV fare has me wishing for "Supertrain II."

Consider the network schedule for this week, Sunday-Friday — of 67 combined hours of prime-time programming, all but 11½ hours are reruns. Much of the 11½ hours of original stuff is comprised of failed pilots.

The networks will tell you that they fill the summer with junk because people watch less TV in the summer. No wonder.

I think there should be a summer season, featuring nothing but shows produced just for the summer. In fact, I'll even offer some of my best programming ideas:

"The Killer Bees Variety Hour" — Our hard-working little friend, the bee, has been much maligned, I think. The only time bees ever get a shot at prime time is in some phony-baloney TV movies, in which swarms of the little critters attack the Super Dome and little old ladies. But bees have an admirable social order, they make a sweet nectar, and when we're young, they teach us about sex. And unlike most variety show hosts, bees won't try to sing and dance.

"The Terrorists Who Couldn't Shoot Straight" — A sitcom about a wild and wacky gang of former Army dentists who drop out of society and become revolutionaries. They try such rollicking schemes as piping laughing gas into Jack Lord's house. He still doesn't laugh.

"The Adults" — A sitcom with a twist. All the grown-ups in this show are intelligent, some even wise, and none of them stammers. And, unlike regular-season sitcoms, the kids are the dolts here. The adults teach their kids little moral lessons, instead of the other way around.

"Jiggle" — A show about three young lovelies who are not detectives, stewardesses or cheerleaders. They're just professional TV jigglers. In the first episode, they are called to Bermuda on a mysterious assignment. There, they don string bikinis and prance up and down the beach — some-times even joggling.

"The Quack" — Limited series about a trendy cosmetic surgery clinic in Beverly Hills. Off-center noses and crooked eyebrows are all the rage until someone discovers that the clinic is run by a failed insurance man from Toledo.

"Greed" — A no-holds-barred prime-time game show aimed at determining just how far game-show contestants will go for prize money. Among the contests: "Family Frameup," in which contestants are urged to plant phony criminal evidence on their relatives for cash and prizes.

"Berserk!" — Limited series about a TV columnist and his search for subject material during the summer.

Latecomer Chris Rea Debut Album A Success

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Chris Rea grew up in northern England, less than 100 miles from the home of the Beatles, but it took an American rocker named Joe Walsh to get him interested in music at the relatively advanced age of 20.

"I was going out with a guy for a couple of drinks, and he was just getting ready and he just had this album, and he put it on," Rea recalls, a sense of reverence still evident. "And it was the first time ever in my life that I was sort of really aware of music."

The record was one of Walsh's efforts with the James Gang, and the very next day Rea ran to buy it at his local record store.

"That was the first album I'd ever bought," he said. "I played it until I almost wore holes in it. And I just got into it after that, went out and bought a guitar and got started."

From such little acorns do mighty rock careers grow. Today, the friend that played the Walsh album is a bass player in Rea's band. As for Rea himself — well, a debut album that sells half a million copies and earns a Grammy nomination for best new artist of 1978 isn't bad for a late bloomer.

There was certainly little enough in Rea's pre-Walsh past to foretell a musical future. Reared in Cleveland, a British steel town 25 minutes from the Scotland border, he was an avid soccer player and motorbike buff who got booted out of secondary school for "playin' with motorbikes instead of playin' with me pen."

"I used to spend half me time in the car park, just gettin' me bike to go faster and stuff," he says ruefully in his thick Yorkshire accent. "I'm not proud of the fact that I got kicked out."

Between his ignominious departure from academe and his first record contract a year and a half ago, Rea had plenty of exposure to blue-collarism.

"I used to be a bricklayer," says the compact but husky-looking 27-year-old. "I've had all sorts of different jobs. Me father's from Italian descent and he started a little ice cream shop and I used to work in there. I can tell you everything there is to know about ice cream."

Unlike many rock stars, however, Rea has declined to shuck his past lifestyle as quickly as it takes to put a down payment on a Mercedes.

He still lives in Cleveland, for one thing. "I wouldn't move," he says. "I don't like London at all. It's too fashionable, too fickle."

DIES — Walter "Pee Wee" Hunt, 72, died Friday. His recording of "The 12th Street Rag" is the biggest-selling ragtime record ever. (AP Laserphoto)

New Casino

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — Resorts International, with a monopoly on East Coast casino gambling for more than a year, is getting company.

But the company won't be staying at the Resorts International hotel. Caesars World, Inc. opens its $100 million Boardwalk Regency casino Tuesday. Resorts International took a $60 million gamble when it opened in May 1978, but the bet has paid off. The casino took in $20.2 million in its first year. Although Caesars officials say federal law prevents them from revealing their win projections, one executive said privately the casino could average $1 million a day.

There is a beautiful family room with an impressive fireplace and built-in bookshelves. Adjacent to the family room is a cheerful and bright hobby room with a built-in desk where he can do his work completely undisturbed and she can do her sewing and take advantage of the wonderful outdoor sunlight. A spacious utility room with its own cabinets, counter and sink is immediately adjacent to this lovely hobby room.

The living room is sufficiently large to accommodate the most gracious formal entertaining. The formal dining room is next to the living room and features sliding glass doors to the outside wood deck. The breakfast nook is conveniently located in a corner of the kitchen. The wood deck is perfectly located off the dining room and is ideal for those summer evenings. The front and rear yards are large and just right for children to play. The three bedrooms and 2 1/2 baths complete this perfect home.

Currituck Outer Banks Road Battle Continues

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
COROLLA, N.C. (AP) —
The road along the Currituck Outer Banks stops here.

The banks, isolated and wild, start south of Virginia Beach and continue to Duck, in Dare County. Corolla lies about midway in the 23 miles and 20,000 acres that lie on the North Carolina side.

North of the tiny hamlet — a room-sized post office, a few houses and not much else — lie beach-front lots that sell for as much as $60,000 for an 100-foot lot.

But there is almost no way to get to them. And the problem is growing worse.
The people who live along here and others who have bought lots want a way to get to their homes.

Others, including the U.S.
Fish and Wildlife Service and conservationist groups, want to cut off access almost entirely.

Says Norris Austin, postmaster of Corolla, "We know exactly how the Indians felt at Wounded Knee."

The area has attracted attention since at least the late 1800s, when wealthy hunters attracted by the numerous waterfowl that wintered along the banks started hunting clubs. Some clubs are still in use.

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, developers started taking an interest in the area.
Two Virginia Beach companies
— Kabler & Riggs and Coastland — started developing much of the land.
They and other, smaller, developers have almost 8,000 homesites planned, and most are sold.

But it was about that time that conservationists also started showing a keen interest in the area. By 1978, the Nature Conservancy and the Audubon Society, two national groups, owned huge tracts along the banks.

And the federal government also got into the act. It owns Back Bay Wildlife Refuge in Virginia south of Virginia Beach. By 1971, a federal study showed that almost 350,000 offroad vehicles used its land each year. That, said the wildlife service, was far too many,
and it cut off access to its land from both sides. Now, only persons who owned developed land on Currituck

before 1976 can travel through the refuge to get to their homes. Others must travel the overland route from the north to Duck, then up the beach road to Corolla.
If their houses lie farther north, they must travel over the beach by off-the-road vehicles.

Last year, the wildlife service proposed increasing its ownership of the banks, possibly as far south of Duck, more than 25 miles south of Back Bay. The land is worth an estimated $117 million.

The announcement was greeted with furor among the few residents of the banks and by the Currituck County commissioners. It has also drawn the disapproval of the entire North Carolina congressional delegation and both state governments.

But no one seems to know what to do.

Last week, Howard Lee, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, travelled to the area.

After a jouncing ride up the poor road from Duck, privately owned and much of it sandy dirt, Lee got out at Corolla. He walked the few hundred feet from the town to the beach and saw what has interested so many people in the area — nothing. Not a car, not a sunbather, not a single house. He looked amazed.

But he also saw the tracks of beach vehicles and, in a later flight over the area, saw how developers want to change the character of the banks.

And he heard the anger of residents and those from the north who want to be able to use their land.

"I know that some of you came here with a sense of frustration, a lack of confidence, thinking this was another exercise in nothingness," Lee told a group of about 100 persons at a public meeting on the mainland part of Currituck after his tour.

"I cannot say to you that we have instant answers," he said.

The people told him they want access to their land.
They also told him, in no uncertain terms, that they oppose any federal land purchases along the banks.

Virginia officials also attended the meeting. Maurice Rowe, Virginia secretary of commerce and resources, echoed Lee when he said that Virginia is committed to access to the area and opposed to more federal land control.

However, Rowe also made it clear that Virginia will continue to negotiate with the wildlife service to trade land it owns at False Cape State Park, just north of the state border, with Back Bay land.
That, he indicated, would virtually end Virginia's interest in the access problem to the lower banks. Virginia and North Carolina have a task force working on the problem of access.

The people told Lee they want either a road and bridge to cross Knotts Island, which sits between mainland Currituck and the banks; a ferry across Currituck Sound or a road stretching the entire length of the banks.

The also said they wanted answers very soon. The wildlife service plans to stop traffic entirely through Back Bay at the end of the year.
For those who live on the banks near the Virginia line, that would mean a grueling 100-plus mile ride to Virginia — down the banks and over to the mainland, then turning north.

Penny Stevens, a Bank Bay resident, told Lee the Back Bay problem was as bad as the Berlin Wall. She termed the procedures demanded by the wildlife service for crossing the refuge demeaning.

Other residents spoke of harassment by the wildlife service when they want to cross the refuge. They need permits and are checked in and out whenever they cross.
Their trips are limited to two a day if they are permanent residents; 30 a year if they are part-time residents.

The wildlife service and conservationists say the problem is more long term.
They say that several endangered species, including the bald eagle, populate the banks. Fifteen percent of the waterfowl that fly the Atlantic Flyway use the area.
Development would endanger those birds and other wildlife, they say.

They also say the federal government wants to get out of the business of insuring so much barrier-island land.
The government says the potential, flood insurance liability, if the banks are fully developed, tops $1 billion.

Gov. Jim Hunt said recently, though, "We have adequate public ownership of the Outer Banks now."

As one beach resident put it, the federal government appears "dedicated to protecting the land for the people by removing the people from the land."

But, said David Owens, chief of planning and technical services for the state office of coastal management, the banks problem is "a perfect example of a very difficult situation with no good answers or even achievable answers."

Where The Condors Fly

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer
PARACAS, Peru (AP) —
This is where the condors fly.
Their 10-foot wingspreads casting flashing, black shadows across the sand dunes of the Paracas Peninsula.

They hunt for carrion, dead fish or birds or the placenta of newborn seals.

The peninsula, South America's first marine reserve, is teeming with life and death, a rich source of food for the giant birds.

The condors and their prey caught the eye of Felipe Benavides, Peru's 61-year-old controversial guardian of wildlife, more than 25 years ago.

"I discovered that lots of people were going to Paracas on weekends to shoot condors," Benavides said in an interview.
"They were shooting two or three a day and they went out in hunting parties to kill seals."

It took until four years ago for Benavides, as president of the local affiliate of the World

Wildlife Fund, to complete a successful campaign establishing the peninsula as a national reserve, the home of 16 endangered species.

The desolate, sandy peninsula juts out into some of the richest ocean waters in the world.

The reserve was intended to save the endangered animals and birds from extinction and to provide a safe haven for millions of birds migrating between the Arctic and the An-tartic.

But today tourists dine on turtle meat in nearby hotels.
Poachers seeking the skins of southern fur seals snorkel to their dens on the peninsula.
Fishermen dynamite fish from the sea, killing sea lions and other sealife in the process.

"Conservation is tough in Peru," Benavides said. "It's taken 25 years to do what we've done with Paracas and it will take another 25 years to save it."

"There's a tremendous pressure for seal skins," he said.

"The furriers in other countries, especially West Germany, will pay fabulous prices. The hunters are prepared to kill anything — even their own grandmothers."

Benavides won the J. Paul Getty conservation award in 1974 for his work in promoting national parks and reserves. He wants to establish a research institute on the peninsula "not only to study the area, but also to guard it."

Benavides used part of the $50,000 Getty prize money to buy an institute headquarters, the summer home of a former Peruvian president at the entrance to the reserve.

The reserve's abundance of life contrasts sharply with surrounding areas of the peninsula, some 40 miles long by 20 miles wide.

The endangered species here include two types of sea lions, one of otter, three of reptiles,
three of fish and seven of birds.

The skies are filled with cormorants, boobies, alcatraz birds and up to 350 other species, including 50 North American migrants. Flamingos from the Andes spend the summers on the bay.

The rich wildlife results from the cold, anchovy-rich Humboldt Current, which moves along the coasts of Chile and Peru, creating surface waters averaging 60 degrees, almost 20 degrees below what could be expected this close to the equator.

The cold water laps against the Atacama desert, the driest in the world. During the last quarter century at Paracas, the most rain recorded in a single year was less than half an inch.

Despite the designation of a reserve, Benavides said, all the wildlife is threatened for lack of protection. "Peru doesn't have the money to protect its natural reserves," he said. "So we do it ourselves. We have forestry guards with motorcycles but no gas, no money for tires or maintenance.

"This is conservation in Peru," he said.

Benavides suggested that organizations like the Audubon Society in the United States could help preserve the birds at Paracas.

"They spend a lot of money in the States on conservation of birds," he said. "Perhaps they should consider their birds like children and protect them when they go abroad. They might be shot on their way to South America and back."

Benavides said the declining number of birds at Paracas is discouraging.

"We cannot recover something we have destroyed," he said.

ENDANGERED SPECIES — A South American condor spreads its wings, which can cover a 10-foot wide span, at a zoo. The giant birds are soaring over the dunes of Peru's Paracas Peninsula, South America's first
