Somber Carter Maps Energy Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — In one of the most somber peacetime speeches by any president, Jimmy Carter linked his political fortunes to achievement of an energy plan he says will combat a "crisis of the American spirit."

Although Carter never referred to his assumed quest for re-election in 1980, the president is known to hope his nationally televised address Sunday night from the Oval Office will prove to be a turning point for his troubled presidency.

"I need your help," Carter said as he conceded past shortcomings in his national leadership.

He pledged to "continue to travel the country. ... I will listen. And I will act."

"I will do my best," he said, "but I will not do it alone."

Even before Carter spelled out additional details of his proposals in another nationally broadcast speech today to the National Association of Counties in Kansas City, Mo., his Sunday night address brought pledges of swift congressional action on energy legislation.

"I am confident the American people will respond with the necessary sacrifices and that Congress will pull together in this time of crisis," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

Former Texas Gov. John Connally, a Republican seeking Carter's job, said the crisis in confidence the president spoke of "has been brought about by the president's own inaction."

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., who was among those who met with Carter during his Camp David domestic summit, said: "The president made a forceful speech that must now be followed by equally strong and specific actions."

The president's Sunday night speech came one day after he returned from Camp David, where he held 10 days of secretive meetings with a variety of American leaders.

He ended the summit by flying to Carnegie, Pa., and Martinsburg, W.Va., to meet with small groups of "average Americans."

Instead of the bombshell some had expected in his speech, the president spoke of an erosion of confidence "threatening to destroy the social and political fabric of America."

He coupled that with an appeal for a "rebirth of the American spirit."

Carter originally was scheduled to address the nation July 5. He said Sunday night he canceled that speech because:

"I began to ask myself the same question that I know has been troubling many of you: Why have we not been able to get together as a nation to resolve our serious energy problem?"

"It is clear that the true problems of our nation are much deeper — deeper than gasoline lines or energy shortages, deeper even than inflation or recession. And I realized — more than ever — that, as president, I need your help."

Carter saw solving the energy crisis as a way to

$140 Billion Outlay Seen For U.S. Energy Security

KANSAS CITY, MO. (AP) — President Carter said today that in an unparalleled peacetime commitment, the United States will spend $140 billion on his new energy security program "so that never again will our nation be hostage to foreign oil."

That outlay would come over the next decade, and Carter said the money must come from his windfall profits tax on the oil industry.

than it ever was that Congress swiftly pass a strong, permanent windfall profits tax," he told the National Association of Counties.

He asked all Americans to put pressure on Congress for action on that levy.

In a campaign-style followup to his somber Sunday night address to the nation, Carter said American confidence and unity can and will be restored as the nation works to battle its energy woes.

While Carter did not mention nuclear power in his Sunday night address, he said today that nuclear energy "must play an important role in the United States to insure our energy future."

After announcing the $140 billion price tag, Carter itemized once again the specific measures in his new energy plan:

—An Energy Security Corporation, "outside the federal bureaucracy," free to use independent business judgment to curb oil imports by developing alternative sources of energy.

—An energy mobilization board to cut red tape and obstacles to increased energy production.

—A shift from oil to coal by U.S. utilities, plus low cost utility company loans to customers to finance conservation improvements.

—Improved mass transportation programs and research on more efficient automobiles, at a cost of $16.5 billion over 10 years.

$331,500 Allocated To Pitt Secondary Roads

The North Carolina Board of Transportation, Friday, allocated $331,500 for secondary road improvements in Pitt County for the coming year, and awarded a contract to widen Mumford Road in Greenville.

the State Highway Bond funds.

Pitt, in January, had 510 miles of paved secondary roads and 268 miles of unpaved roads.

In addition to the allocation for Pitt County, the Transportation Board last week allocated $99,000 to Greene County ($60,648 from bond funds in January, with 281 miles of paved secondary roads and 80 miles of unpaved roads), and $174, 810 for Martin County ($109,795 in January with 249 miles of paved and 141 miles of unpaved secondary roads).

The contract for widening Mumford Road was awarded to L. A. Reynolds Co. of Winston-Salem, which bid $138,410 for the project.

The contract calls for the widening of the existing pavement from 24 feet to 44 feet, from Pitt Street to Powell Street.

Work on the four-tenths-of-a-mile project is scheduled to begin in August and is expected to be completed in December.

Transportation Board member George Harper of Kinston said, "the widening of Mumford Road will be financed with 1977 highway bond issue funds for urban projects."

Gov. Hunt Appoints 7 Superior Court Judges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Dave DeRamus, D-Forsyth, and Republican Donald Smith of Raleigh were among seven special Superior Court judges appointed Sunday by Gov. Jim Hunt.

A statement from Hunt's office said the reappointment of Smith, who was named as a special superior court judge by former Gov. Jim Holshouser, had been urged by attorneys and law enforcement officers throughout the state.

The six new judges are: John Jolly, a Rocky Mount attorney; Samuel E. Britt of Lumberton, chief district judge for the 16th Judicial District; DeRamus; Fayetteville attorney Arthur Lane, a county commissioner; Charles Lamm, a Boone attorney and Preston Cornelius of Iredell County, district court judge in the 22nd District.

Cornelius is the only judge who will not take office around Aug. 1. Hunt said he had been informed by Superior Court Judge H.L. Riddle, whom Cornelius replaces, that Riddle plans to retire shortly. Hunt said Cornelius' appointment will take effect when Riddle retires.

Hunt did not name a replacement for Judge Robert L. Gavin of Pinehurst, the Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1960 and 1964. Gavin is eligible for retirement on Jan. 1, 1980. Hunt said he will name a replacement then.

The appointments were made from a list of 27 nominees submitted to Hunt by the Judicial Nominating Commission under a merit-selection system Hunt put into effect by executive order in 1977.

"The quality of these nominees is evidence of the value of this non-partisan merit system," Hunt said in a prepared statement. "I interviewed the 27 nominees personally, spending at least a half hour with each, and I was tremendously impressed by their outstanding qualifications."

STAMP MACHINE COMPLAINTS

For the past month the stamp machines at Greenville's Main Post Office have been out of order, making it impossible to buy stamps after working hours. In addition, when buying stamps at the post office on Tenth Street, the machine there gives two five-cent stamps and five one-cent stamps. Considering the fact that 13 cent stamps are no longer used, the issuance of the five one-cent stamps is unnecessary. Can something be done about these machines? T.B.

According to H. Lloyd Mills, Greenville Postmaster, all stamp machines are currently operating. Only one stamp machine at the main post office was out of order during a three-hour period Monday, however, it has been repaired, he said.

Mills said, however, that the self-service machine's dollar validator has been out of order but is soon expected to be in operation again.

Concerning the stamp machine at the Tenth Street office, Mills said a new, much larger machine (able to issue three five-cent stamps instead of five one-cent stamps) has been ordered.

The new machine, like the larger machine in use now at the main post office which issues three five-cent stamps, is expected to arrive around the beginning of the upcoming fiscal year (October).

"80 percent of our problems have been caused by bent or wrong-sized coins or slugs (false coins)," Mills pointed out.

Gunman Robs A Griffon Store

GRIFTON — Local police and Pitt deputies are investigating an early morning armed robbery at a convenience store here that resulted in the theft of an undisclosed amount of cash.

Police Chief Linwood Outlaw said that the incident took place around 2 a.m. today at the Stop-N-Go located at the corner of Highland Avenue and Queen Street.

Outlaw said that the store clerk on duty told officers he was in the back of the store when a young man entered the facility and walked over to the magazine rack. When the clerk went to the cash register to wait on the man, it was pointed out, the subject picked up a magazine and walked to the register, holding a small hand gun in one hand.

The police chief said that the man demanded all of the cash from the register and cash drawer and after receiving the money, instructed the clerk to lie face down on the floor. The clerk told officers that the man then walked out of the store and apparently fled on foot.

The clerk, who was the only person in the store when the man entered, it was noted.

Outlaw said that the clerk identified the subject as a "young white male." He added that a composite drawing of the suspect was being prepared this morning for use in the investigation.

Another Mass 'Beaching'

POINT AU GAUL, Newfoundland (AP) — About 135 pothead whales, many weighing as much as a ton apiece, swam ashore and died this weekend on a Newfoundland beach.

The mass beaching and death of whale herds has been reported from time to time, but marine experts were baffled by the local incident since whales are seldom seen in the area.

Fishermen first spotted the whales swimming toward shore early Saturday and with their boats tried to herd them back to sea. About 60 were turned back but the others, most of them females, came ashore.

Congressman Walter Jones announced approval by the Office of Education HEW of the application of the Greenville City Schools for federal assistance for current expenditures under Title I of public law 874 as amended which provides financial assistance for schools in federally affected areas.

The PLO disavowed the attack although it apparently was intended as a protest against the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty. But an Israeli official in Jerusalem said all Palestinian terrorist actions abroad are "carried out by PLO branches with fictitious names."

Egypt initially said the PLO and "all its factions" would be held responsible for the attack. But on Sunday a source said: "At this point there is no intention to take harsh measures against the Palestinians."

State Highway Patrolman Spencer Padgett said Moore was dead at the scene of the 8 a. m. accident. He quoted witnesses as saying that Moore, who had reportedly just finished picking sweet corn on the Howard Nanny farm, brought his truck to a stop in his own lane of traffic about three miles east of Farmville on the Stanfordsburg Road (State Road 1200). Then the vehicle, which had been traveling eastward, accelerated suddenly, witnesses said, crossed into the opposite lane and hit the driveway bridge across the ditch in front of the Leland Bagley home.

Medical Examiner Dr. T. H. Patterson said the case has been turned over to pathologists to determine whether Moore died of a medical problem which may have caused him to lose control of the vehicle or whether the cause of death was injuries sustained at the time of impact.

Whimsy In The Afghan

EASY-TO-MAKE CROCHETED SQUARES... can be combined to form this afghan with a cross-stitched flower motif.

Whimsical flower shapes are cross-stitched on afghan stitch squares to make a stunning afghan to complement any decorating scheme. Each square is crocheted separately then edged in white and joined to the other squares, making it an ideal summertime project. The finished afghan measures a generous 48 by 67 inches. Four-ply worsted weight yarn is used.

To obtain directions for making the floral afghan, send your request for Leaflet B-894 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Specify your choice of earth tones (brown and rust shades) or pastels (blue, pink, lavender shades). Price includes shipping charges.

A quick peek at the fashion forecast for fall and winter tells us that we'll be seeing lots of braids, pipings and other knit and crochet trims on the newest clothes. Here are a few ideas that will help you spice up your wardrobe with such trims.

The crochet braid trim which follows can be used with almost any yarn, but I suggest that you try it first with a smooth yarn. With sports weight yarn and a size F or G crochet hook, chain stitches to practice.

Make one double crochet in the fourth chain from the hook and in each stitch along the chain. When you reach the end, chain three stitches but do not turn work to the reverse side as usual. Instead, turn it upside down so that you can work a picot edge along the foundation chain.

Now make one slip stitch in the first stitch of the foundation chain. Chain four stitches, then make another slip stitch in the same stitch where the last one was made. You have now made one picot.

Continue across the row as follows: (Make a slip stitch in each of the next two stitches, chain 4 and make another slip stitch in same stitch where the last one was made.) Keep repeating the steps within the parentheses until you reach the end of the row, ending with a picot in the last stitch of the chain.

Make a slip stitch in each stitch of the chain-3 edge and in the top of the first double crochet stitch. Now, work another picot row on the edge of your work which is opposite the first picot row. End with a slip stitch in the last double crochet and fasten off.

Another versatile crochet trim is made by alternating single crochets over double crochets and doubles over singles. To do this, chain 5, work a single crochet in second chain from hook, a double crochet in next chain, a single crochet in next chain and a double crochet in last chain. Chain 1 and turn.

For the next row, work a single crochet in top of the double crochet of previous row, then work a double crochet in top of single crochet of previous row. Repeat this once more (or as often as necessary if you are working on more than four stitches). Chain 1 and turn.

Repeat this one row over and over for desired length. This can be worked over any even number of stitches and, when worked no more than an inch in width, it will work quite well as a "bias" trim, as it turns corners or follows curves quite readily.

Sometimes the simplest of ideas can be the most effective. Make a crocheted cord by making a chain of the desired length, and then working either a single crochet or a slip stitch in each chain.

The cord can be used to make "frog" closures for a suit or sweater or it can be swirled to form interesting designs or even monograms in script. Just make a few cords and let your imagination go.

In a future column, I'll give you some ideas for knitted trims. Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Repairing Leak At Nuke Plant

HADDAM, Conn. (AP) — Repairs are underway to fix a leaking seal on a reactor cooling pump at the Connecticut Yankee nuclear power plant. The leak has caused electricity production to be cut back by 25 percent, plant officials said.

Gary Doughty, a spokesman for Northeast Utilities, said Sunday there was no danger of radiation being released because of the malfunction. He said there were two back-up seals. A steam generator was shut down after officials discovered the seal had failed Saturday, Doughty said. He said repairs began Sunday and the generator would probably be back in service by Tuesday night.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am not of the Jewish faith, but I am engaged to marry a Jewish girl. I have agreed to convert to Judaism, but I was told that in order to convert I must be circumcised.

Abby, I am 44 years old and really not too eager to go through something like that at my age. Can you please tell me if it's absolutely necessary?

NEEDS TO KNOW IN NEVADA

DEAR NEEDS: All Orthodox and Conservative rabbis adhere to the ancient Jewish law which demands that the man be circumcised in order to convert to Judaism. But here's a suggestion: Some Reformed rabbis are more lenient than others, and do not insist on circumcision. Find a liberal Reformed rabbi if you prefer to remain intact.

DEAR ABBY: My father, who is 87, is very well-off financially as well as physically. Is there a gracious way to bring to his attention that he could make monthly or annual monetary gifts to his children tax free?

None of us "needs" anything, but extra cash would be very helpful to improve our homes, take trips, and make life more comfortable generally.

It also upsets me to think that if Father just leaves us his money after he dies, a huge slice will go for inheritance taxes.

How much better it would be for all concerned if Father could give his money away while he is alive and able to see us enjoy the fruits of his labor. He has amassed a small fortune.

We love him and see him often, but none of us can think of a way to tell him the above. We are all between 50 and 60, but sign this

DEAR ONE: I know of no "gracious" way to ask anyone for anything. It's inconceivable that one who has amassed a small fortune lacks competent up-to-date advice from lawyers, accountants and financial advisers. It's entirely possible that Father prefers to give the fruits of his labor to his Uncle (Sam) rather than to "the kids."

DEAR ABBY: There's a girl in our office who's been single ever since the death of her husband about two years ago. The boss lost his wife last year and these two have been very chummy ever since. They've even taken out-of-town trips together just like married folks. They're recently announced (to the surprise of no one) that they are engaged to be married.

A large wedding is planned, and I have heard that all of us in the office will be invited. How can I tactfully turn down this wedding invitation? I don't care to attend the wedding of people who have lived in sin for a year.

OMIT MY SIGNATURE

DEAR OMIT: Simply decline. You need not give a reason. (P.S. You could be wrong about this "sin" charge, you know. Are you "indignant" enough to quit working for this "sinner"? And if not, why not?)

Monaco's Royalty Plan Visit To S.C.

LANCASTER, S.C. (AP) — The couple that reigns over the tiny European nation of Monaco, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, will visit South Carolina this week, a local newspaper reports.

The destination is Springs Mills textile plants in Lancaster and Chester, according to the Lancaster News.

A company spokesman said the visit by Princess Grace and her husband is in connection with floral designs she made for Springs Mills sheets.

The sheets have been marketed at the company's employees' store in Lancaster since April, the spokesman said.

"One of Princess Grace's hobbies is making flower collages," said the spokesman.

A Springs representative saw some of the princess collages that were being sold at a recent charity auction in Paris and asked her to design a pattern for the Lancaster-based textile company, the spokesman said.

The visit by Princess Grace, formerly an American actress who appeared under the name Grace Kelly, will be similar to one made last year by Bill Blass, who also designs for Springs Mills, the spokesman said.

Arrival and departure times and other details of the plant tours will be announced, he said.

Family Impact Due Gas Shortage Seen

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — A High Point College sociology professor says the gas shortage could cause the break-up of unstable families and bring close-knit families closer together.

William Cope, head of the school's sociology department, says basic adjustments are necessary for families used to "almost unencumbered movement."

"We find two situations when an internal crisis threatens," he said. "In the first, there is a greater sense of togetherness among family members.

"On the other hand, if the members are on the brink of conflict and are forced to spend more time with each other due to reduced mobility, the conflict intensifies," he said.

The intensified conflict can result in physical and verbal abuse, he said.

"What is happening cannot be measured only in gallons of gasoline not purchased or simply a shortage of available money for the family to spend as it pleases," he said.

Families no longer have the ability to move around, he said, and "this amounts to a loss of freedom for families that have been accustomed to almost unencumbered movement."

Cope said closely-knit families have a sense of togetherness that is usually enhanced by an outside crisis.

"They will do things together they probably could have done earlier, like going for walks or bicycle rides," he said.

But a conflict-ridden family is "basically self-centered and the members need other activities to keep together," he said.

Cope said past crisis situations, such as World War II,

Crash Of Small Plane Kills 4

BOILING SPRINGS, Pa. (AP) — Four persons died when a small rented plane crashed into the side of a mountain and exploded about 4 1/2 miles from this south-central Pennsylvania community, authorities said.

The crash occurred Sunday in a rocky area several hundred yards from the top of the mountain during heavy ground fog and overcast weather conditions, Gary Sayers, a spokesman for the state bureau of aviation, said. The bureau identified the pilot as John Keeler, about 50, of Wyalusing, and the passengers as James L. Eaton and his teen-age son, John, both of Wyalusing, and Nigel Ely of London, England, whose family was visiting the Keelers.

Miss Brown, Mr. Beddard Wed

Deborah Elaine Brown and Lindsey Victor Beddard were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. L. Patrick.

A program of music was presented by Louise Wainright, pianist, Judy Bowen, organist and soloist, sang, "Whither Thou Goest," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie M. Brown of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Garland L. Beddard of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of white qiana over white peau de soie designed with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk floral Venise lace that extended in appliques beaded with pearls, down over the empire bodice. The long bishop sleeves featured motifs of the floral lace, with the cuffs edged in scalloped lace. Matching floral lace encircled the waistline from which fell the knife pleated skirt that extended to a chapel length attached train. Both the skirt and train were trimmed at the hemline with the floral silk Venise lace. She wore a tiered illusion veil held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in lace. She carried a bouquet of cascading white roses and yellow daisies with baby's breath.

Bonnie E. Brown of Raleigh, sister of the bride, served as honor attendant. She chose a formal gown of chalk maize chifone over maize taffeta designed with a portrait neckline edged in piping and featuring miniature tie bows at the shoulders. The blouson bodice was styled with short split sleeves. The waistline was encircled with a rolled tie belt, from which fell the flared skirt. She carried a mixed nosegay of yellow, white, lavender, pink and blue pom poms and daisies.

Bridesmaids were Marcy Sudor of Greensboro, Carolyn Hodges of Greenville and Mrs. Sue Hamn of Farmville. They were dressed the same as the honor attendant and each carried a nosegay of yellow daisies and white pom poms.

Tracy Cannon, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a formal length gown of white organza over taffeta designed with a high neckline edged in ruffled miniature chantilly lace. The empire bodice featured a pleated yoke centered with pearl buttons and outlined in scalloped chantilly lace. The long full sleeves had ruffled lace at the cuffs. Someday A Different Story Skylab fell and no one was injured. The space agency felt that that is the way it would be, and so did we.

The debris from Skylab is tiny, indeed, when considered in relation to the vastness of the earth.

The falling remnants of Skylab created some spectacular fireworks over Australia, then burned up or fell into the ocean or to the sea.

But because there was no harm done by Skylab's demise, we shouldn't conclude that some falling satellite someday won't do earthly damage.

In fact, the odds are that if we put enough objects in orbit around the earth one day something will come back to cause damage or injury, even death.

What it comes down to is that all nations now must become responsible for the things they shoot up into space.

Any future Skylabs must be equipped with devices which will push them into space, or at least allow ground control as to when they will come down.

There theoretically is no limit to the size of the Skylabs, or space factories or whatever that can be built in orbit around our planet. They seem harmless out there, but Skylab has proven they can be pushed back into the atmosphere, and we must guard against that.

We'll Avoid The General Rush In Fall

Tearing up thoroughfare streets nearly always makes a nightmare of 5 p.m. traffic.

Evans Street from Fifth to Tenth is currently in that state, with paving scheduled to begin today.

It's a headache for motorists.

At the same time we think some appreciation is due to city officials who are getting the work done prior to tobacco market opening, ECU's opening and the general fall rush.

By doing it now a far superior thoroughfare will be waiting for the heavy traffic later on.

Prof Says Tests Too Easy

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The competency test required for high school graduation is entirely too easy, and will not produce lasting change in the way North Carolina schools teach the basics, a professor at Appalachian State University has charged.

Instead of designing a tough test to challenge students and teachers to perform better, says William E. Blanton, the state has produced a test designed to protect itself.

Blanton believes that the test is more a response to critics who want some measure of public school output, and parents who have threatened action against public schools which failed to teach their children than it is a committed effort to improve education.

"The competency test can be very valuable, or it can be just a handful of sand," says the professor of reading at Appalachian. "Right now in North Carolina we have a handful of rocks."

Too Easy

A nationally recognized expert in testing, Blanton says he definitely favors competency testing. "But North Carolina's competency test is too easy. Period."

He sees a major problem in the fact that no one really knows what "passing" ought to be. "No one knows how the criteria for passing was determined. No one has shared with the public how those standards were set."

There has been a hot debate about whether the passing score is too high, or too low. But no convincing data, Blanton says.

Society should determine the standards: continue to flunk another one percent of the lowest scores on the test each year until society stops complaining that the schools are graduating incompetent seniors, the professor suggests.

By Blanton's definition, the society which would determine the standard for a high school diploma would be white, middle class, and achievement-oriented within the business world.

BILL

NOBLITT

Obviously there would be strong protest to that position, but Blanton insists that whether pleasant or not, it is a fact of life in this country that ability to function in white, middle class, work-oriented society is crucial to success.

"There has been from the beginning an issue of bias raised about the state's competency testing," Blanton recalls.

"Is it true....Is the test biased against black people or against poor white people?" "No, it is not," Blanton thinks.

Failures

The test is supposed to determine who has or has not reached a certain level of performance. "The failure of blacks or poor whites is not a function of the test. It is a function of their schooling," Blanton maintains.

Reform, then must come in what and how the schools teach so that a student "shouldn't get out of the school system with a diploma or any other kind of certificate until he can prove himself competent."

Unless the test leads to changes in basic education to produce that result, then it is a "worthless and indefensible expenditure" of public money, Blanton argues.

So far, he adds, "I do not hear teachers or students saying that things are happening in the classroom because of the competency tests." That is evidence enough to suggest that the test was proposed, authorized by the General Assembly, and installed in the school system for reasons other than improving education.

Now A Panda Syndrome

BEIJING — As long as I was in China, I saw no harm in going over to the Beijing Zoo and talking to an expert on pandas, concerning the problem we were having at the National Zoo in Washington. I explained to her that Hsing-Hsing, the male panda, given to us by the Chinese after President Nixon's visit, was not making it with Ling-Ling, the female panda. So they were preventing the United States from having an heir to the American Panda Dynasty.

The lady we talked to was Madame Ye, probably the foremost expert on panda breeding in Asia. Madame Ye said, in so many Chinese words, that judging from what I had told her about Hsing-Hsing's press in the United States, he was getting a bad rap.

It seems that while female pandas can get adjusted to having sexual relations in captivity, male pandas are much more reluctant to play around in a zoo.

Other Editors Say Sharpening Focus

(Winston-Salem Journal)

Despite a last-minute attempt to bar its removal from the state port at Morehead City, a controversial container cargo crane is now on its way to Wilmington. In recent years, the Morehead City crane had become a symbol of the long-running rivalry between the state's two ports. The decision to move the crane was sound and represented a sharpened focusing of the state's ports policy.

Why such sharpening was needed was clearly stated by Thomas F. Taft, chairman of the state Ports Authority, in an interview earlier this year. "We try to promote both ports," said Taft, "but we do what's best for the state. That's where we've gotten in trouble in the past, saying each port deserves equal treatment. Each port deserves fair treatment."

The desire to treat both ports equally led to the problem of the Morehead City crane. Earlier in the decade, the need for a container crane at Wilmington became apparent. In the interest of equality, state officials decided to put a container crane in Morehead City as well. But Morehead City did not have the container traffic to justify the presence of the crane. The crane sat idle, incurring heavy costs in maintenance, depreciation and insurance. So the state Ports Authority decided to transfer the crane to Wilmington after studies indicated that Morehead City would not gain an appreciable amount of container traffic in the near future. Some Morehead City residents claimed that the decision represented an example of the state showing favoritism toward Wilmington.

The decision represented no such thing. Instead, the crane's transfer to Wilmington reflects an awareness of the importance of making the best use of available resources. Two ports, handling different types of traffic, do not require the same type of facilities. The expanding container trade at Wilmington justifies the presence of two container cranes at that port. Morehead City without much container traffic, has different needs. Operations at that port which handles bulk traffic could be better enhanced by improving inland transportation links than by keeping a little-used crane in place.

The emphasis on treating both ports equally rather than focusing on their individual needs hampered ports operations in the past. Unnecessary duplication of facilities added to the expense of running the ports. The Morehead City crane was a symbol of both unnecessary duplication and of an equally unnecessary rivalry between the state's two ports. Now that the crane is on its way to Wilmington, the state Ports Authority should continue to sharpen its focus on the individual needs of the ports in order to promote "what's best for the state."

There are exceptions to the rule, Madame Ye told us. The Beijing Zoo brought in a panda from the Shanghai Zoo named Du-Du, who is a real swinger, and a legend in his own time. When Du-Du is around, there isn't a female panda safe within 20 feet of him. He thrives on green bamboo shoots and vitamins and is raring to produce baby pandas whenever given the opportunity. He fathered two by a female named Fang-Fang and another with Yuan-Yuan, which makes Hsing-Hsing's productivity record look sick.

Why Du-Du does and Hsing-Hsing doesn't was a question Madame Ye could not answer.

She felt possibly Hsing-Hsing is being too well fed on an American diet, and rather than indulge in any mating, prefers to sleep off his meals.

She knows from correspondence with the National Zoo in Washington that Ling-Ling has not only been waiting in her boudoir for a knock on the door, but at times has even shown anger at being ignored.

Madame Ye, who said she could not interfere in the internal sexual affairs of a foreign zoo, offered the opinion that Hsing-Hsing needed a lot more exercise and a lot less sleep before he got the message that there was more to life than just eating bamboo hearts and taking long naps.

At the same time, you don't

Poles Are No 'Joke'

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
WARSAW (AP) — Friends, the next time you laugh at a Polish joke, laugh a little at yourself and at all of us for our profound ignorance of this remarkable people.

And spare a tear for a brave, long-suffering people who have none left to shed from the shockingly sad times they have seen.

By official count, 6,128,000 Poles died in World War II. This was one-fifth of the population. Half the total were Jews, most of them murdered in the Nazi extermination centers or worked to death in the concentration camps.

Warsaw has risen from the rubble of its wartime devastation, but the prematurely old middle-aged men sitting at the outdoor cafes in the restored old city remember the ruins they have come to resemble. They recall how one greeted old friends in the shattered streets when the dawn finally came after one of history's darkest nights:

"So, you are still alive." And they remember the signs sticking up from the wreckage of the bombed out buildings: "Come, Claim Your Dead."

The war began when Britain and France decided to fight for a free Poland after Hitler swept through Austria and Czechoslovakia unopposed. It ended with Polish freedom crassly consigned to the Soviet bloc in the codicils of Tehran and Yalta.

The next time you snicker about the three men with the light bulb, remember that Frederic Chopin was a Pole. His heart is buried in a pillar of Warsaw's Holy Cross church. Joseph Korzeniowski, a Polish freighter captain, wrote some of the finest novels in the English language under the name of Joseph Conrad. Another Polish novelist, Henryk Sienkiewicz, won the Nobel Prize for literature. "Quo Vadis," his classic about Nero's Rome, has fostered dozens of movie versions

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Versus 'People'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's altered view of Americans, posing new pitfalls for his administration, were revealed when he opened one Camp David meeting with members of Congress by complaining about People magazine.

The lawmakers, prepared for a serious energy discussion, were baffled by presidential pique over the amiable picture magazine. He tied People's alleged irreverence for marriage with a decline in national spirit on which he blamed the country's woes. While the congressmen wanted to modify the Clean Air Act, President Carter wanted to cleanse the national spirit.

This abandoned his old credo that Americans deserved a government as good as themselves. Whatever its greater accuracy, the president's critical new view of his fellow citizens contains dangerous potential for rationalizing and minimizing his administration's shortcomings.

That potential was exposed at Camp David when the president opened group discussions with each new contingent of distinguished visitors by warning of a "malaise" in the land, sapping public morale and enthusiasm. The assassinations of great national leaders and "ignominious defeat" in Vietnam had sapped national resolve.

In a morning session with

Senate and House experts on energy, the president took off from that point to lament public disrespect for institutions. Congress, he noted, had a favorable rating of 18 or 19 percent. The institution of marriage had declined. Why, Carter went on, just pick up a copy of People magazine and it never depicts wives or husbands but shows so-and-so's playmate or roommate. "He was really upset about this," one senator told us.

The reaction was one of confusion. "I couldn't get over the idea of the president reading People magazine," one Democratic senator confessed, "and so, maybe I missed the point." One suspicious Republican senator thought Carter was sniping at his challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination, Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who has been featured in the magazine with his girlfriend, singer Linda Ronstadt.

But most of those present were literal-minded Democratic lawmakers, their briefcases stuffed with proposals. Having come to the mountain to talk about legislation, they were in no mood for a sermon. "The president was only commenting in passing on marriage and stuff like that," one Democratic leader assured us in a viewpoint widespread among his colleagues. "Don't take it too seriously."

Widespread, but wrong. What practical congressmen thought was an insubstantial appetizer was in fact intended by the evangelical president as the main course. Unlike congressional leaders who put their faith in legislation, the president feels there is no long-term solution short of national revival.

Accurate or not, that viewpoint downgraded cabinet suggestions that Carter revive his presidency with dramatic substantive proposals. Carter rejected proposals by Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal to decontrol gasoline, partly

Strength For Today

CONSCIENCE
A little boy, when asked to define conscience, replied, "Conscience is something inside us which tells us when other people are doing wrong."

A good many people act as if they think that this is the correct definition of conscience. They are quick to point out the wrongs done by other people and are very slow to recognize the wrongs done by themselves. Jesus condemned this attitude with some of the strongest imagery in the gospels. He commanded men to pull the beam out of their own eyes before they presumed to pull the mote out of their brothers' eyes. The point is that as long as we have a beam in our own eye we certainly cannot see clearly enough to improve the vision or understanding of anyone else.

Harsh judgments which we might use against others will ultimately be used against ourselves. Since we cannot see clearly, these judgments of ours will be vitiated by self-interest and prejudice. Before we can make things right for our brother we must make things right for ourselves.

A Language They Understood

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — While

Americans probably will debate whether the President was seeking in his speech a born again political image or the rebirth of a nation, he did speak a language they understood.

He expressed what he knew was bothering people: feelings of being isolated from government, that they wanted and needed action, that their confidence had been tested, that their spirit was low.

He twanged their conscience: Americans worshipped consumption, they measured success in "piling up material goods," they have abandoned old and trusted values and formed their goals around self interest.

Anyone familiar with the message of religions, and Americans are as familiar as anyone, know the consequences of such behavior. President Carter didn't use the word, but the message was clear: cynicism.

The American soul, he seemed to say, has lost sight of its destiny. And so it had lost its sense of resolve, of discipline, of confidence, of sacrifice. It lives for the present rather than the future.

What has it done to the nation? Productivity, which America taught to the world, is down. Savings, the symbol of storing away for a better future, are among the lowest of all the industrialized world.

And how will it be resolved? President Carter seemed to say or hope that this "crisis of the spirit" might be elevated, and that the human energy so released might transcend material problems too.

And now for the hard questions: Is it too much of a challenge to cut in half by 1990 our dependency on foreign oil? Can synthetic fuels be developed commercially at a price that won't bankrupt the society?

Can those lost values be restored while the nation cuts back on energy usage? Isn't America based on cheap energy, and isn't that fundamental American belief, that the poor can get rich, a consequence of that?

Regardless, doubts always challenge action, but no longer will they be permitted to bog down the country in a morass of indecision. "I will act," said the President. The energy problem will be our strength.

The growth of foreign oil dependence will be "stopped dead in its tracks." An Energy Mobilization Board will be established to cut red tape. An Energy Security Corp., in which the public can invest through $5 billion of bonds, will help finance domestic energy development.

"Ambitious" was mentioned often in early reactions, including those from business people and economists. And that leads to the question: Too ambitious for a nation of low confidence, of questioned leadership?

President Carter's answer, or hope, is that the very problem becomes the answer to the problem of confidence, and that his own firm action, if belated, will be the answer to the question of leadership.

Galifianakis Trying Get Perjury Case Thrown Out

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Nick Galifianakis, D-N.C., who is accused of perjury in denying he received $10,000 from South Korean rice-dealer Tongsun Park, is trying to get the case thrown out on numerous technical grounds.
U.S. District Judge Charles

R. Richey is expected to schedule pretrial hearings in a few weeks on motions by Galifianakis and his lawyers to dismiss the charges.
Barring any new indictments, the case is the last pending prosecution in the government's investigation of the Korean influence-buying scandal.
Former Rep. Otto E. Pas-

man, D-La., was acquitted on bribery-related charges and former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., was sentenced to six months to 30 months in jail on fraud charges.
Galifianakis, 50, a lawyer from Durham, N.C., served three terms in Congress ending in 1972, when he ran for the Senate and lost to Republican Jesse Helms.

Galifianakis is accused of lying about a campaign contribution he allegedly received from Park to help his 1972 campaign.
A former secretary to Galifianakis, Barbara Moore Fletcher, told the House Ethics Committee she picked up $10,000 from Park's home in the Georgetown section of Washington.

On March 22, 1978, Galifianakis was questioned by Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., a member of the committee, which investigated the Korean affair, and David Belkin, a lawyer for the panel.
Galifianakis denied any knowledge of the $10,000 contribution.

Among the points that will be argued before Judge Richey are whether Mrs. Fenwick had sufficient authority to take the sworn statements in a closed-door session from the former congressman and whether the ethics committee violated Galifianakis' rights to due process.
Barry Levine, a Washington lawyer for Galifianakis, also is prepared to argue that the committee had no jurisdiction to refer the charges against Galifianakis for prosecution without specific approval by the full House of Representatives.

In legal papers seeking dismissal of the indictment, Levine said the procedure followed in the Galifianakis case amounted to basing a federal prosecution on "an unauthorized telephone call to the Department of Justice" by a congressional staff aide.

"The rules permitting Congress to safeguard the confidentiality of its investigations (by taking testimony behind closed doors) will be readily nullified if a disgruntled or vindictive staff member or the minority members of a congressional committee can generate a prosecution by circumventing House consideration of the referral," the court motion said.
Levine also said that, for an individual to commit perjury, he must lie before "a competent tribunal."
He contends that Galifianakis' appearance before Rep. Fenwick and a committee staff lawyer does not qualify as testimony before a competent tribunal, and that at least one other member of the committee would have had to be present for there to be a quorum.
Furthermore, Levine said the committee violated Galifianakis' constitutionally protected due-process rights by not giving him a transcript of his testimony.

In an answering legal brief, the government contends that Mrs. Fenwick was authorized by the ethics committee and by a resolution of the full House to take a deposition under oath from the former congressman.
"In taking the defendant's deposition with Congresswoman Fenwick present, the ethics committee engaged in no arbitrary, unguided frolic," the government said.
The Justice Department also argued that if Galifianakis believed the procedure for taking his statement was illegal or unconstitutional, he should have refused to appear rather than testifying voluntarily.

The government brief said that, if Galifianakis had refused to answer questions, he might have been indicted for contempt of Congress rather than perjury. He then could have challenged the indictment on constitutional grounds.
"His only avenue of attack was to refuse to testify. Having chosen to testify, he must testify truthfully," the government said.

As for the transcript, the government said that Galifianakis and his lawyers were allowed to review the transcript of his testimony two weeks after his appearance. The government contends that was adequate protection of his rights, even though he was not given his own copy.

Animal Lover Has Bad Luck

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS, Ill. (UPI) — Arlene Montalbano just recovered from "cat scratch fever." She recently had plastic surgery to hide facial scars from a dog bite that required 40 stitches. Now she has skunks under her porch.
Still, Mrs. Montalbano proclaims, she is an animal lover and will not tolerate the use of violence against the malodorous squatters — despite health officials' warnings that skunks are potential rabies carriers.
She insists the critters be taken alive. So far, the capture efforts have yielded only a pregnant raccoon.

Sleepless nights, the odor of skunk — the animals spray when the family gets visitors or the family dogs bark.
But fear of letting the family's two dogs and two cats run loose are only some of the Montalbanos' woes. Mrs. Montalbano said skunk holes are causing their sidewalk to sink.
Mrs. Montalbano, 46, has had a bad run of luck with animals lately. In February, she was attacked by a dog and bitten on the face. The wound required 40 stitches and it took plastic surgery to hide the scars.
She is just getting over cat scratch fever, contracted nine months ago from a cat at an animal shelter. She had to have surgery for removal of a gland because of the disease.
Mrs. Montalbano returned home a week ago from Michigan, where she was recuperating, to learn three baby skunks had taken up residence under the porch of her family's two-story, colonial home in Chicago's northwest suburbs.
While she was gone, the family had discovered eight baby skunks in a window well of the house.
A public health officer called to eradicate the skunks pulled three of them out with a rake but they scurried for the shelter of the porch. He quickly changed tactics and dispatched their five siblings with a board.
Catching the three survivors have become a project for the Montalbanos.
The family set a trap but ended up with a pregnant, 35-pound raccoon instead of the skunks. The Montalbanos threw mothballs under the porch to drive away the skunks. The skunks threw the mothballs back.
The family's most recent attempt to evict the skunks came Friday.
"My son put some tuna on some string under the porch and when he pulled the string out, the tuna was gone," Mrs. Montalbano said.
"We really don't want to kill them. I don't like the idea of disposing of them. I wish they would leave on their own. But I think they probably like it too much under there. I guess as long as we keep feeding them tuna, they'll stick around. I just don't want to hurt them."

because he doubted such action attacks the "malaise." For the same reason, he has seen no need for one cabinet member's recommendation to suspend the Clean Air Act, permitting big increases in coal use.
More ominous is the fear, shared by some Carter supporters, that the president may travel the melancholy path blazed 60 years ago by Woodrow Wilson in blaming the nation for mistakes of government. Certainly, private and public administration statements in recent weeks have judged how the ordinary citizen, not his leader, responds to crisis.
But throughout the first two years of his presidency, Carter had nothing to say about a national "malaise" or of the cumulative impact of assassinations and the then unmentioned "ignominious defeat" in Vietnam. Not until his own ratings tumbled was there such intense concern with public morality.
Indeed, the fact Carter felt constrained to use Camp David for his meetings is in itself evidence of change. "The president just feels more comfortable at Camp David than in the White House," one senior aide explained. But this was not the case through most of 1978, when Carter enjoyed living and working in the Executive Mansion.

Soliciting Air Coupons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A consumer group wants air passengers to send in their half-fare coupons so the group can sell them and raise money to promote air safety.
The Aviation Consumer Action Project is appealing to consumers to "let your airline coupons work for airline safety."
ACAP describes itself as a non-profit consumer organization formed in 1971 to work for aviation safety and airline passenger rights. The group's advisory board is headed by Ralph Nader.
Two of the big U.S. airlines — United and American — distributed 4 million coupons good until Dec. 15. Persons holding the coupons turn them in for their discounts when they pay for their tickets.
"Passengers who are concerned about air safety have an easy way to put their coupons to work on upgrading safety standards," said Mimi Cutler, ACAP's director. "If people send their coupons to ACAP, we will sell the coupons to companies and frequent travelers — and use the proceeds to further our work in air safety."
Ms. Cutler said the nation's worst air accident at Chicago's O'Hare Airport in which 273 people died "is a tragic reminder of just how much work must be done to make the skies safer. That's what ACAP is all about — and why we need coupons to continue our work to make the (Federal Aviation Administration) an agency which puts passenger safety first."

The group said it was basing its pitch on estimates that many of the half-fare coupons will not be used.

But, as they say in China, it's a shot in the dark, and no one can deny that Hsing-Hsing had his chance to do it while he was awake.
I asked Madame Ye if there was any way of trading Hsing-Hsing with the Shanghai Zoo for Du-Du. I told her we'd also throw in a Redskin linebacker and three draft choices. Fuel Spill From Tanker Truck

PETERSBURG, Va. (AP) — Police said about 5,000 gallons of diesel fuel leaked from a tanker truck this morning when it overturned on U.S. 460 south of here.
Police described the spill as a "mess."
State Water Control Board officials were called in to advise on cleaning up the fuel spilled in the 6:30 a.m. accident.
There apparently was no danger of water being contaminated.
The truck driver, James McElveen, 46, of Richmond, was pinned in the wreckage after the crash but was freed by rescuers and taken to Petersburg General Hospital. He was listed in satisfactory condition.
The accident tied up traffic for several hours.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

County Extension Chairman Excluding double-cropped soybeans, most of the soybeans in Pitt County will be planted very shortly. Therefore, most decisions relative to herbicides applied at planting have been made. Thus, the farmers' attack on annual grasses and small-seeded broadleaf weeds has begun. Now is the time to survey the situation and plan to attack another group of weeds — large-seeded broad leaf weeds.

Large-seeded broad leaf weeds including cocklebur, smartweed, jimsonweed, and morning glory have the ability to emerge from deep in the soil below the treated zone for preplant incorporated and pre-emergence herbicides. Even where herbicides are applied at planting and are very effective in controlling those seeds germinating within the treated zone, other deeper seeds from these large-seeded broad leaf weeds germinate, grow through the treated zone and emerge to cause problems in soybeans.

Two weeks after planting, soybean fields should be systematically surveyed for the presence of these large-seeded broad leaf weeds. This scouting may only confirm what fall scouting indicated or it may in fact identify problems that were unnoticed last fall. It is important that the scouting be done early to identify weeds present while they are still small. Later in the season the weeds will be larger and more difficult to kill. Therefore, cost of control will be greater, if control is possible at all.

Additionally, weeds removed later in the season reduce yields prior to their removal. If these large-seeded broad leaf weeds are present in the row and cannot be removed by cultivation, prepare to apply a post-emergence herbicide and cultivate within ten to 14 days later.

Grain Market Experts Await Satellite Link

ST. LOUIS — Agricultural leaders on four continents will be linked by satellite to discuss soybean production and utilization in a unique closed circuit television broadcast planned for the 1979 National Convention of the American Soybean Association in Atlanta, August 12-15.

"The 1979 ASA convention has something everyone can enjoy and learn from," says North Carolina Soybean Producers Association president, Thurman Burleson. "There's no better chance for North Carolina soybean growers to meet people from other parts of the country, and world, and talk over their common interest, growing and marketing soybeans profitably."

The first World Soybean Report, a 60-minute telecast will link experts in Europe, Asia, Brazil and the United States on Monday, August 13. Sponsored by Ciba-Geigy Corporation, World Soybean Report will be a television milestone — the first time four continents are linked simultaneously via satellite for a live broadcast.

Speakers for the hour-long exchange will be Dr. H. H. Wachter, director of the Directorate General of Agriculture for the European Economic Community, representing the European market; Paulo Vianna, executive director, Commission of Financing Production, representing Brazil; Dr. Hiroshi Nakamura, director of raw materials department, Hohen Oil Company, representing Asia and Merlyn Groot, president of the American Soybeans Association, representing U. S. farmers. During the first half hour of the program, each representative will provide up to the minute status reports and their assessments of the soybean market for the coming year. The second half hour will be open to questions posed by their counterparts and the ASA audience. Orion Samuelson, farm broadcaster of WGN, Chicago, will moderate the program.

Continuing a world soybean outlook, ASA country directors Gill Griffith of Asia, Gil Harrison of Latin America and Ed Quinones of the Middle East, Spain and North Africa will describe rapidly growing demand for American soybeans and ASA's role in these growing markets.

Tuesday morning, Siegfried Mielke, editor of Europe's "Oil World" weekly, will analyze competition facing soybeans from other oilseeds on the world market.

Market-oriented UPDATE breakfasts Monday and Wednesday mornings offer growers a chance to hear about soybean marketing plans, hedging for profits and the outlook for the 1980's. Growers can select between research or market development discussions for Tuesday's luncheon.

Transportation Not Keeping Up

RALEIGH — "Transportation is not keeping pace with agriculture's need," a spokesman for the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation told a national Rural Transportation Advisory Task Force at a Thursday hearing here.

The newly-created panel, co-chaired by the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of Transportation, is holding similar hearings throughout the country to study rural transportation needs.

Gray Faulkner, a vice president of Farm Bureau, pointed out that the availability, cost and quality of transportation are becoming serious limiting factors in the U. S.'s ability to produce and market the volume of food and fiber needed to satisfy domestic needs and expanding exports.

Faulkner said that if the U. S.'s transportation system is to meet the challenge of the future, problems must be identified so that necessary legislative and regulatory steps can be taken to alleviate them.

The Farm Bureau spokesman noted three areas where corrective action would bring improvement in the trucking industry and enhance the movement of agricultural commodities: a uniform minimum weight of 80,000 pounds and length of 65 feet so as to permit the operation of twin trailers throughout the interstate system; additional exemptions for farmer-owned cooperatives and agricultural motor carriers which would permit backhaul authority for unregulated truckers; and the elimination of "under the table" fees, particularly at receiving points.

In turning to the nation's railroad system, Faulkner said that regulatory reform is needed, rather than total deregulation. He noted that deregulation would do nothing to solve problems "such as the monopolistic practices of the many rail unions."

Connally Sells 213 Cattle

FLORESVILLE, Texas (AP) — An auction of 213 Santa Gertrudis breed cattle brought presidential hopeful John Connally $530,000.

The top price for one head was $25,000 at Saturday's auction at Connally's Picos Ranch. Connally said the money would be used to pay off some debts.

Campaign spokesman Julian Read added that Connally would be too busy campaigning in the next several months to properly tend the herd.

Bumper N.C. Peach Crop

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With the harvest in the Sandhills at its peak, North Carolina growers are producing a bumper crop of good quality peaches, says Melvin H. Kolbe, N.C. State University extension peach specialist.

"July is peach month," said Kolbe. "We have an excellent crop of peaches this year."

Because of good quality, he added, prices are expected to run slightly above average. "I've seen lots of pick-your-own places where you supply your own basket, where peaches were going for $8 a bushel," he said. "But some places they're running $12 a bushel."

Although the harvest runs from late May to mid-August, July is the time when the top quality begins to come in, he said. "Now we're starting to see a lot of freestone peaches, good quality peaches — good for canning or freezing, or just for eating."

According to the state-federal Crop Reporting Service, North Carolina's peach harvest is expected to total 48 million pounds, up 7 percent from last year's 45 million.

"The weather has generally been excellent for peaches," Kolbe said. "But the cool, cloudy weather didn't help us very much, and it's getting pretty dry now. A few places are being irrigated."

Most of North Carolina's peaches are produced on 4,000 acres of orchards in the Sandhills region of Moore, Richmond and Montgomery counties.

4-H Session This Month

Some 1,000 4-H members, adult leaders and extension agents from across the state will gather in Raleigh July 23-27 for the 1979 North Carolina 4-H Congress.

Dr. Donald Stormer, state 4-H leader at North Carolina State University, said the congress climaxes another year of 4-H work for the delegates. The delegates will participate in a tight schedule of contests, discussions, recreation, fellowship and election of state 4-H council officers.

Activities are scheduled at North Carolina State University's McKimmon Center and the State Fairgrounds. Delegates will reside in NCSU dormitories. The event officially opens Monday night with the Honor Club taping. Tuesday, some 30 contests will be held to pick state winners during the day and a "fun carnival" is set for the evening's entertainment.

Governor James B. Hunt will address the delegates at a Wednesday morning assembly in the McKimmon Center. The afternoon will be open for various activities, with a Fashion Revue that night.

Thursday, seminars will be held in the morning, with election of state officers in the afternoon. The evening will feature a banquet, talent show and farewell dance.

Price Of Ground Meat Going Up Faster Than Other Choices

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer Consumers who've switched to hamburger in an effort to balance the budget without giving up beef are finding that the price of ground meat is going up even faster than the price of other cuts.

Figures compiled by the National Cattlemen's Association show that from 1977 to 1978 the average retail price of a pound of choice beef went from $1.48 to $1.82, a rise of 23 percent. During the same period, the average price of a pound of ground beef went up 37 percent — from 81 cents to $1.11.

The pattern is continuing this year and it is due largely to the fact that the drop in the supply of hamburger will be sharper than the drop in the supply of other kinds of beef. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated 10 to 12 percent less beef will be produced this year than last year. Hamburger production, however, is expected to drop by 16 percent.

According to industry and government estimates, there will be 17.2 pounds of hamburger produced this year for every person in the country. In 1978, there was 20.5 pounds of hamburger per capita; in 1976, there was a record 23.9 pounds per capita.

The reasons behind the increasing prices and declining supplies lie in the basic nature of the cattle business.

Steaks and roasts generally come from steers that have been fattened on grain; relatively little grain-fed beef winds up as hamburger. The animals that are used for processed meats and hamburger are the older cows, the bulls, and the steers and heifers that have been fed on grass. When ranchers decide to trim their herds — as they did in 1975 — it is the less-desirable animals that are sold first. That creates a

Tobacco Crop

Decrease Noted

According to the first major crop production report based on July 1 conditions, there is a 16 percent decrease in North Carolina's flue-cured tobacco crop.

The report, compiled by the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, forecasts the flue-cured tobacco crop at 692 million pounds, 136 million pounds less than the 1978 crop. Approximately 345,000 acres will be harvested this season, 12 percent less than last year.

As of July 1, production of corn for grain is estimated at 133 million bushels, up nine percent from the 1978 crop. The yield forecast of 78 bushels per acre is two bushels more than last year's average yield.

temporary boost in the less-expensive cuts of meat.

In 1975, 45 percent of all the beef produced was classified as manufacturing grade, up from 38 percent the year before. The average price of a pound of hamburger was about 55 percent of the average price of all types of choice beef.

By 1978, however, the ranchers had finished trimming their herds. The supply of beef in general and hamburger in particular shrank. Manufacturing beef represented only 39 percent of total beef production in 1978. The price of a pound of hamburger, which had declined 13 cents from 1974 to 1977, jumped 30 cents in the following year. By 1978, the average pound of hamburger cost about 61 percent as much as the average pound of choice beef.

As beef prices have risen, ranchers have started expanding their herds again. It has become profitable to raise calves, feed them on grain and sell them as full-grown steers. The ranchers are keeping and fattening animals which, in less-profitable days, they might have sold as manufacturing beef. In the long run, that will mean more steaks and roasts. In the short run, it means even less hamburger and even higher prices.

The government has said that the increases in retail meat prices — particularly the most recent ones — are not all due to the increase in prices being paid to farmers. A USDA study conducted during the spring found that middlemen — packers and retailers — boosted their margins on pork and beef above the amount justified by rising costs. The middlemen deny the charge.

Private Rites Held For Slain Mobster; No Funeral Mass

By MARIA PALLAIS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A Roman Catholic priest led friends and relatives in prayer for Mafia leader Carmine Galante, but the Archdiocese of New York said it would not permit a requiem Mass today for the slain mobster because of his reputation as the "boss of bosses."

Galante, 69, gunned down last week while dining at a Brooklyn restaurant, was to be buried after a private graveside service at noon today.

The Rev. Feliciano Napoli said he would lead the graveside prayers at St. John's Cemetery in Queens. But a spokesman at a funeral home where a memorial service was held refused to say where the burial would be, except that it would be "somewhere on Long Island."

Galante was denied the funeral Mass by Cardinal Terence

Cooke, archbishop of New York.

Cardinal Cooke extended "sympathy to his family" in a statement, but added, "We are not able to grant a liturgical service in the church because of the scandal that would ensue."

A spokesman for the archdiocese who asked not to be identified said that under church law the "liturgical farewell of the church" must be denied to "a person who has not led a Catholic life or has been involved in a public life not in keeping with the teachings of the Church."

He said the decision was "not a judgment on the state of the man's soul or the state of his relations with God; we can't judge that."

In the past, crime bosses have been buried with full church rites, including Joseph Colombo last year. However, Colombo led the Italian-American League and its fight for civil rights in his later years.

The church's ban on a requiem Mass for Galante was "exceptional," according to a spokesman for the archbishop.

No one could recall a similar occurrence since a church funeral was denied Albert "The Executioner" Anastasia of Murder Inc., fame after he was slain in a barber's chair in 1957.

The Sunday memorial service at a Lower East Side mortuary apparently did not attract the mob leaders and flower-laden limousines that marked many a mob figure's funeral in years past.

Authorities have said Galante was killed because he was try-

State Grain Economist Says Gasohol Wasteful

RALEIGH — Gasohol production using present production methods "wastes scarce energy sources rather than adding to them," says Dr. T. Everett Nichols Jr., extension economist in grain marketing, North Carolina State University.

"To make gasohol competitive with gasoline, a cheaper source of raw material than corn must be used," he said.

Nichols has spent time recently studying the feasibility of producing alcohol from grain and using it in a ten percent mixture or blend with gasoline as a motor fuel.

Essentially any grain can be used, but the best in terms of alcohol yield are corn and wheat, said Dr. Nichols.

A bushel of corn will produce 2.7 gallons of 200 proof ethyl alcohol and 18.36 pounds of distillers' dried grains and solubles that can be used for livestock feed. The gluten content of wheat creates some foaming problems when the mash is fermented.

Any carbohydrate material can be a source of ethyl alcohol or ethanol. Not only the carbohydrate in grain but cellulosic materials such as wood, crop residues, and fiber crops can be converted to ethanol.

For grain, the conversion is done by fermentation. Most industrial ethanol is produced from petroleum and natural gas by chemical synthesis.

Nichols said fermentation requires much more energy for evaporating off alcohol from the water that is used than the alcohol contains. For every BTU of fossil fuel energy that goes into making alcohol from corn, between .43 and .64 BTU's are obtained.

"Producing ethanol by fermentation of corn does not produce energy, it uses it," said Dr. Nichols. "And this process, if used on a large scale, could worsen the U. S. energy situation."

How does gasohol perform as a motor fuel? It expands the mixture slightly and results in more volume, increases the octane number and lowers carbon monoxide emissions.

But, said Nichols, alcohol as a fuel has disadvantages. It contains less energy per gallon than gasoline. Adding alcohol to fuel creates other potential problems, which include harder starts, poor warm up, engine corrosion and vapor lock.

"In short, gasohol cannot be recommended as superior to gasoline based on fuel properties," noted Nichols.

The cost of producing ethanol varies with plant size and cost of inputs. The initial investment for a plant with 20 million gallon annual capacity (6.2 million bushels of corn) would total about $30 million. For such a plant, the direct cost of producing alcohol, excluding cost of grain, would be approximately 87.4 cents per gallon, said Nichols.

"With corn priced at $2.80 per bushel and distillers' dried grain solubles valued at 46 cents per gallon, the resultant alcohol cost is $1.65 per gallon," Nichols noted. "From these data, it is apparent that the price of alcohol is considerably higher than the price of gasoline."

In June, no-lead gasoline was selling at retail for about 90.9 cents per gallon. Nichols said the estimated retail cost of gasohol at that time was slightly above $1.01 per gallon.

Will gasohol become more feasible as the price of gasoline rises? Only to a limited extent, said Nichols, since as gasoline rises, the cost of other forms of energy and other inputs used to produce ethanol will probably also increase.

"Making gasohol competitive with gasoline would require very large subsidies," stated Nichols. "If gasohol were made exempt from taxation, the revenue lost to highway funds would have to be raised elsewhere by taxes if highways are to be maintained."

Widespread diversion of food and feedgrain could be disruptive to U. S. livestock production, he said. Furthermore, U. S. dependence on food and feedgrain for energy production would limit this country's ability to help meet grain shortages in other parts of the world.

Despite the apparent problems with gasohol that stem from an adverse energy balance and a break-even price substantially higher than gasoline, some development of this alternative fuel is occurring.

In Raleigh, a company offering gasohol at 92.9 cents a gallon and unleaded gas at 90.9 cents reported that it was selling 20 gallons of gasohol to every gallon of unleaded gas.

"In its desire to reduce its dependence on imported oil, the United States may simply choose to produce gasohol and ignore the energy-wasting aspects of gasohol production," said Nichols. "To adopt such a policy, however, is more of an illusion than a solution to the current gasoline problem."

Three ways you can slow it down this summer.

Summer, when all the air conditioners are humming, is the time when our customers use more power than at any other time of year. To meet the demand this summer, you can be sure that we'll be doing everything we can to provide you with all the power you need. We'll be using our available units to capacity, and if necessary, we'll be buying power from our neighboring utilities.

If you pitch in by following the steps below, you can help us make it through the summer.

1. Don't overcool your home. Set your home air conditioner's thermostat at 78° or higher, or not more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside, whichever is the higher setting. For every degree cooler than 78°, your air conditioner uses about 5% more energy. So a 73° setting means you're using 25% more energy than you would at a 78° setting. By watching your thermostat, you'll save energy at a time when it's most important.

And you'll save money, too.

2. Do the big jobs early. Or late. We call it Hot Watch. The hours between 10 A.M. and 10 P.M. are the "peak load" hours, when the most electricity is being used and the chance of shortages is greatest. So try to restrict your use of major appliances and hot water during these hours. Do your baking and laundry before 10 A.M. Turn on the dishwasher just before you go to bed. Shower before 10 A.M. or after 10 P.M.

You won't be using less energy, but you'll be using it when we have power to spare. And that will reduce our need to build costly power plants. 3. Give your water heater a rest. It will save money and energy. With the exception of heating and cooling systems, the water heater is the biggest energy user in your home. Use your dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads. Wash clothes in cool or warm water instead of hot. With your help we can save energy and make it through the summer. And that's important to all of us.

RECORD SHRIMP — Claude Hart displays a 10-inch shrimp weighing almost a quarter of a pound, brought aboard the trawler (Sea Fari) near Rockville, South Carolina. The wonder of it is that this has not been a good year for white shrimp catches off the S.C. coast. Hart preserved the shrimp in alcohol. He has been in the shrimp business 30 years and has never seen anything like it. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — Energy stocks moved to the spotlight in the wake of President Carter's energy initiatives. But the overall market turned in a cautious showing in fairly light trading today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down by more than 2 points in the early going, gradually recovered some of that. It was off just .94 at 832.59 by noon. Gainers outnumbered losers by a 6-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume was 11.03 million shares, down substantially from midday volume Friday of 14.59 million.

Analysts said President Carter's energy initiative to reduce dependence on imported oil had received a mixed reaction early this morning. But the market showed signs of strengthening as more details of the energy program were released by the White House and unveiled in a Kansas City speech by Carter late in the morning.

On the American Stock Exchange, Dynallect jumped 1 1/2 to 15 1/2 as the most actively traded issue. The company has a process for converting coal to oil.

Diversified oil company stocks were generally higher. Occidental Petroleum, which is involved in technology to process oil from shale, rose 1/2 to 24 1/2 in active trading. Conoco, another diversified energy company with coal holdings, rose 3/4 to 39 1/2; Exxon was up 1/2 to 53 1/2 and Phillips Petroleum gained 1/2 to 39 1/2.

Burlington Northern, with interests in natural gas and coal as well as rail transport, jumped 2 1/2 to 68 1/2. But Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates, a coal mining and transportation company, was unchanged at 22 1/2. Pittston, also a coal resource company rose 3/4 to 25 1/2.

Chemicals, which depend on oil for their basic feed stock, were mixed. Allied Chemical slipped 1/4 to 35 1/2 and DuPont fell 3/4 to 40 but Union Carbide gained 1/2 to 39 1/2.

The NYSE composite index rose .07 to 58.24. The Amex market value index gained .44 to 196.53.

Bicyclists Asked Try Proposed Route

The Citizens Bikeway Committee is asking local bicyclists to travel a proposed 9.4 mile recreational loop around the city and then evaluate the route.

Dr. Jim Hix, chairman of the committee, said that the CBC hopes that family riders as well as accomplished cyclists will ride the recreational route and complete an evaluation that will be used in rating the safety, usability, and overall potential of the bike loop.

According to Hix, the committee is urging bicyclists to make the ride and evaluation prior to July 20, when a tour is scheduled involving various city officials to give them a first hand look at the possible recreational corridor.

The committee chairman said that the route generally follows a format that connects most of the local schools and recreational areas.

The route, picking a random starting point at First and Elm Streets, follows Elm to Fifth, out Fifth to Tenth, out Tenth to Cedar Lane, down Cedar Lane to 14th Street, out 14th to Red Banks Road, out Red Banks to Arlington, along Arlington to Hooker Road, up Hooker to Dickinson and then down Dickinson to Line Avenue, along Line to Fifth Street, down Fifth to Nash Street, up Nash to Fourth Street, along Fourth to Pitt Street, up Pitt to First and then down First to the Elm Street starting point.

Hix said that the proposed route will not be marked except along the designated bike path on Arlington Boulevard from Evans Street to Hooker Road.

The bikeway committee is attempting to identify routes used by local bicycle traffic and to make the routes as safe as possible, he mentioned. In promoting the safety of bicyclists, steps will be taken to install signs on bike routes, dedicate bike lanes where possible, identify and minimize bike hazards, and undertake an educational effort for both cyclists and motorists.

Noting that more than 10,000 bikes are in operation here, Hix said that the vehicles offer "excellent potential for recreation-transportation" opportunities.

"Although our emphasis is on commuter links for energy conservation-health," Hix added, "our priority one recommendation is implementation of a recreation-commuter loop around Greenville."

He said the next steps would involve the filling in of the "spokes of the wheel" with other bike commuter links as resources and time permit. The commuter links would branch off from the outside loop to provide a network of accessible corridors.

Recommendations will be made to the city following the committee study of the route possibilities. Hix said that the committee wants to identify problem areas before signs are recommended.

Maps of the proposed recreational loop and evaluation forms are available at various bike shops here and at the Recreation and Parks Department offices on Cedar Lane.

Somber Carter....

 "help us conquer the crisis of the spirit in our country. It can rekindle our sense of confidence in the future, and give us a new sense of purpose."

To win on the "battlefield of energy," the president:

—Promised that "growth in our dependence on foreign oil will be stopped in its tracks, right now." He announced an import quota of 8.2 million barrels a day and a goal of cutting imports in half by the end of the next decade.

—Proposed an Energy Security Corporation to lead an effort to develop alternative fuels and issue $5 billion of small-denomination Energy Bonds.

—Asked Congress to require utilities to have their use of oil by 1980 through conversion to coal and other fuels.

—Called on Congress to create an Energy Mobilization Board, like the War Production Board of World War II, "to cut through the red tape, the delays and the endless roadblocks to completing key energy projects."

—Proposed an extra $10 billion over 10 years for public transport and asked Congress "to give me authority for mandatory conservation, and for standby gasoline rationing."

Carter also pledged to "increase aid to needy

Americans to cope with rising energy prices."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was critical of Carter for not mentioning how much the country will or will not rely on nuclear power.

"I have a hunch that lurking in all that rhetoric there is an attempt to expand nuclear power," Brown said, adding that he thinks Carter "should have taken a very firm stand in opposition" to nuclear power.

Deputy White House press secretary Rex Granum later would not comment on why the president made no mention of nuclear power nor say if the subject would be included in the Kansas City speech.

The bulk of Carter's Sunday address dealt with what he sees as the nation's woes — and with shortcomings attributed to himself and his administration. For example, he quoted some of the 150 persons he met with during his adventure in domestic summery.

"Mr. President, you're not leading this nation — you're just managing the government. ... You don't see the people enough any more. ... Some of your Cabinet members don't seem loyal."

Carter himself said a crisis of the American spirit is "even more serious than energy or inflation" and represents "a fundamental threat to American democracy."

Hunt Praises Carter Speech

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Sunday night praised President Carter for a package of energy proposals the president announced in a nationally televised speech from Washington.

Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary, said Hunt called Carter's proposal "a declaration of energy independence" and said he would support the President's efforts.

Hunt described Carter's proposals as "a powerful attack against our dangerous dependence on imported oil. It amounts to a declaration of energy independence — if Congress will enact it."

Carter's called for an import quota of 8.2 million barrels of oil a day, and a goal of cutting imports in half by 1980. He also called for a variety of projects to encourage individuals and businesses to switch from oil to other fuels.

"Having been with him at Camp David, I know how hard he worked on this strong and comprehensive program," the governor said.

"I enthusiastically welcome the establishment of the Energy Mobilization Board," Hunt said, "and we in North Carolina will support his efforts to cut through the red tape that ties us down. I also strongly support his proposals for an Energy Security Corp. to develop alternative fuels for energy bonds, for a solar bank and for bold conservation programs."

Promoted To Sergeant

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said today that Ptl. Douglas A. Jackson has been promoted to the rank of sergeant. The promotion, he noted, was effective last Thursday.

Jackson, a Winterville native, graduated from Winterville High School in 1954 and attended East Carolina University.

For 8 1/2 years, while employed with Fieldcrest Mills and Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co. here, Jackson was a reserve officer with the department. He resigned that post in 1972 when he moved to Roanoke, Va.

Jackson returned to Greenville, and was employed full-time as a uniformed officer in December 1974. The following year, he was placed in charge of the Department's Crime Prevention Bureau.

In announcing the promotion, Cannon said Jackson will continue to head the crime prevention program.

Jackson is married to the former Martha Cartwright of Camden.

Peete Gets 1st Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) - A typical member of the new wave on the Professional Golfers Association tour is a blond, bronzed young golfer who learned the game as a teenager at a country club and honed his game at a university in the South or West.

Then there is Calvin Peete. Black and not that young — he will be 36 Wednesday — Peete grew up in poverty on a Florida farm, ninth of 19 children his father had in two marriages. He quit school after eighth grade to help out by selling clothes and trinkets to migrant workers, and never played golf until he was 23.

That's why Peete felt a special feeling of accomplishment as he strode the 18th fairway at Tuckaway Country Club Sunday. He was to birdie the hole, capping a 7-under-par final round 65 for a five-stroke victory in the $200,000 Milwaukee Open Golf Tournament.

"I knew that after a long, hard struggle, I had finally made it to the top," Peete said of his first tour victory. "If I couldn't make it in golf, it would have been a hard road to make a living."

Peete recorded the lowest final round by a tour winner this year as he finished at 19-under par 269 for 72 holes. That bettered the previous record for this tournament of 270 by Dave Hill in 1976.

Peete, who had never won more than $20,525 in any of his four previous years on the tour, boosted his 1979 earnings to $81,584. He became the second black ever to qualify for the Masters when he tied for 11th in the U.S. Open last month.

Victor Regalado, who had started the final round tied for the lead with Ed Dougherty, a stroke ahead of Peete, Lee Trevino and Mike Reid, finished in a second place tie at 274 with Jim Simons and Trevino.

Regalado shot a 71, Trevino a 70 and Simons a 67 Sunday, while Dougherty had a 72 and tied John Lister at 275.

Peete, who taught himself to play golf and studies film of himself to find flaws in his game, credits vastly improved putting for his development this year.

"I'm not considered a long hitter; maybe average or a little below," the 5-foot-10, 165 pound Peete said. "But I'm a pretty good wedge player and my putting was the key this week."

Peete sank birdie putts of 12, 10, and 20 feet, respectively, on his second, third and fifth holes, then tapped in a 2½-foot putt after a brilliant approach on No. 9.

"To be frank, I never thought of winning the tournament until after the ninth hole when I birdied to go four under for the round and 16 under for the tournament," he said.

Peete played his first round of golf in 1966 in Rochester, N.Y., with friends he met on a trinket-selling trip.

"All I remember about the round was getting a par on a par 3 hole on my first round of golf. I was hooked."

Peete joined the tour in 1975 and played in his first tournament here. He was 5-under par after 26 holes, then took a 9 on his 27th and missed the cut. He earned $30.46 here in 1977 and missed the cut here last year.

What A Difference For Star Managers

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — What a difference a few months make. Especially in baseball.

Bob Lemon managed the New York Yankees to a victory in the World Series in six games last fall over the Los Angeles Dodgers, piloted by Tommy Lasorda.

So now comes Tuesday's 50th All-Star game and Lemon is managing the American League and Lasorda heads the Nationals.

That's in keeping with tradition, but much has changed since the two said goodbye to each other after the Series.

Lemon was fired as manager of the World Champion Yankees on June 19, replaced by Billy Martin. And Lasorda's Dodgers have the worst record among all the National League teams and he might be fired.

The two All-Star managers were slated to name their starting pitchers today and paradoxically, the only 1978 Dodger in contention was Tommy John, the left-hander who played out his option with the National League champions and switched to the Yankees.

Lasorda didn't name a single Dodger pitcher to his list but has first baseman Steve Garvey and second baseman Davey Lopes on the starting eight named in fan balloting.

The site of the game, the Kingdome, is a hitter's delight. It's 316 feet down the foul lines, and 365 to the power alleys in left and right-center. The nationally televised game is being played indoors for only the second time in its half-century history.

Locally there has been speculation that as many as a dozen homers could be struck. The All-Star home run record is six, set in Detroit back in 1951 and matched in Cleveland in 1954 and Detroit in 1971.

The Nationals lost the 1971 homer derby but have won each of the succeeding games and hold a 30-18-1 advantage, winning 15 of the last 16 games. Nolan Ryan, the California Angels' right-hander who has four no-hitters to his credit, commented, "I'm glad to contribute. I like to be a part of the All-Star game even though it's at the Kingdome."

Ryan was named to the squad by Lemon even though two years ago he refused a late invitation by Martin to take the place of his injured California teammate, Frank Tanana.

One advantage for the Nationals will be at first base where they have .300 hitter Garvey, the Game's Most Valuable Player in both 1974 and 1978. Rod Carew of the Angels, seven times the American League's leading batter, proved the biggest vote-getter of all players, but the American League first baseman will be forced to skip the game because of an injured right thumb.

Cincinnati shortstop Dave Concepcion and catcher Johnny Bench pulled out of the game complaining of injuries.

Win For Waltrip

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Just before climbing into the cockpit of his 1977 Chevrolet Monte Carlo and cranking up for Saturday night's Nashville 420 Grand National stock car race, Darrell Waltrip told a track official he was going to win.

Two hours, 42 minutes and $14,000 later, Waltrip had snared his fifth race of the season before a hometown crowd. The 32-year-old driver, from suburban Franklin, Tenn., brought his crippled car — running on seven of eight cylinders — across the finish line one lap and two seconds ahead of Cale Yarborough who had won the three previous NASCAR races on the ½-mile Nashville oval.

"This is the first time I've won a Grand National race here in a year and one-half," Waltrip told reporters. "I don't like to be that confident, but when I got into the car, I felt I was going to win. The car felt good to me."

Waltrip started from the pole position and led for all but five laps of the 250-mile event. His winning speed was 92.227 mph.

In the battle for third, rookie driver Dale Earnhardt, from Kannapolis, N.C., took the checkered flag just ahead of Benny Parsons from Ellerbe, N.C. Both finished three laps down.

With 18 of 31 Grand National aces run thus far this season, Waltrip is the circuit's leading points and money winner. His weekend's work lifted him 203 points above Bobby Allison in the chase for driver-of-the-year honors, and boosted his earnings to an unofficial $325,000.

"I said once this year if I can get 200 points ahead I'd be comfortable — but I'm not," Waltrip said.

Waltrip now is the winningest driver on the 1979 circuit, one contest up on Allison who has captured four first-place finishes. Waltrip, who appeared to have driven to an easy victory, admitted he had some anxious moments during the last 20 laps of the race when an engine valve blew.

"I heard the valve go — I heard it on the pipes," Waltrip said. "I was heartbroken. The car was missing, it was firing on seven cylinders, but it was still going. The gauges were OK. Nobody was catching me so I kept going. Luckily, so did the car."

Exhausted

J.A.'s Wins

WILLIAMSTON — J.A.'s Uniforms won a 16-team softball tournament here this weekend, defeating Ye Olde Fish Market 12-11 and 5-2 in the finals.

J.A.'s posted a 5-0 record in the event and team member Cloyce Wilson was named most valuable player.

'Bridesmaid' Finally Bride

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — This year's "bridesmaid" on the women's pro golf tour finally got to throw the bouquet as a winner Sunday at the U.S. Women's Open.

Jerilyn Britz, who led but failed to win the LPGA Championship and the Mayflower Classic in the past five weeks, captured the most prestigious event on the tour with a determined confidence.

After making up a three-stroke deficit and taking the lead during the final round, she withstood a late charge by Debbie Massey, posting a 2-under-par 69 for a four-day total of 284, even par at the Brooklawn Country Club. It was the first victory in her 5½ years on the pro tour for the 36-year-old former college teacher who said her last tournament win came as an amateur in New Mexico.

Britz was among the leaders throughout the Open, firing three below-par rounds. But it took a steady round Sunday to overcome Massey's three-stroke advantage at the start of the final 18 holes and win the $19,000 top prize.

A 30-foot putt to save par on the eighth hole "was one of the turning points," she said. She then proceeded to birdie two of the next three holes.

Meanwhile, Massey, a third-year pro, was scrambling as she did throughout the tourney. She double-bogeyed the sixth and seventh holes to fall off the pace, before rushing back with birdies on the 12th, 15th, 16th and 17th to tie Britz.

But her drive off the 18th ended in someone else's divot and she was unable to get it on the green. Her chip went by the pin and a do-or-die putt missed. She ended the day with a 74 and a 72-hole total of 286, tied for second with former Open champion Sandra Palmer. They each took home $9,200.

Britz's recent record of letting victories slip away didn't cross her mind on the final holes, she said.

"I told my caddy on the 18th (tee), 'We have nothing to worry about.' I placed my faith in the Lord and let Him take care of the worrying."

The former New Mexico State instructor, who is a leader of the Bible studies group on the tour, said she has learned to remain "calm, peaceful internally" through her faith in the past few weeks.

Sally Little, who held the lead with nine holes to play Sunday, finished fourth at 287.

Defending champion Hollis Stacy, who was trying for an unprecedented third Open title, finished at 293. Pre-tourney favorite Nancy Lopez fired four rounds of 73 and tied for 11th.

All-Star Break Comes At Good Time

Homecoming

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

For the front-running Montreal Expos and Houston Astros ... and the staggering Los Angeles Dodgers, too ... the All-Star break couldn't have come at a more opportune time.

The Expos, with a threegame lead over Chicago and Philadelphia in the National League East, got a two-run homer from Ellis Valentine and two solo shots from Andre Dawson to beat San Diego 4-0 Sunday for their second victory in six games.

The Astros, with a 5½-game edge over Cincinnati in the NL West, were beaten 3-1 by St. Louis, absorbing their eighth loss in nine games.

In the rest of the league, Philadelphia mauled Los Angeles 10-3, Cincinnati beat Chicago 7-1, San Francisco shut out New York 4-0 and, in a night game, it was Pittsburgh 7, Atlanta 3.

"This game is a big lift for us going into the All-Star break," said Montreal Manager Dick Williams after the power of Valentine and Dawson backed the combined five-hit pitching of Scott Sanderson and Elias Sosa.

Cards 3, Astros 1

"I don't know if, with three days off, we'll score more runs when we come back or not, but we do need a rest," Houston Manager Bill Virdon said.

The Astros have managed just 14 runs in nine games and have been shut out three times in that span. The Cardinals got five-hit pitching from rookie John Fulgham, who lost his shutout on a ninth-inning homer by Jose Cruz. Mike Phillips' single drove home the Cards' winning run in the seventh.

Phils 10, Dodgers 3

"This may be what we all need," Tom Lasorda, manager of Los Angeles and the National League All-Stars, said of the three-day break. It'll give the Dodgers a chance to mull over Philadelphia's eight-run third inning that dropped them 21 games under .500.

Bob Boone and Del Unser drove home two runs apiece for the Phillies. The Dodgers' runs came on homers by Steve Yeager and Steve Garvey.

Reds 3, Cubs 1

Cincinnati Shortstop Dave Concepcion, who had begged out of the All-Star Game because of leg miseries — he says he has a turned ankle and a groin pull — drove in four runs with a homer and a sacrifice fly to help Tom Seaver win his seventh straight game.

The Reds got three runs off Chicago's Rick Reuschel in the first inning, two on Ray Knight's double, Concepcion hit a three-run homer in the fourth and added his sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Giants 4, Mets 0

Mike Ivie and Marc Hill homered while Ed Whitson, Phil Nastu and Pedro Borbon combined on an eight-hitter for San Francisco to halt the Mets' five-game winning streak, their longest of the year. Ivie also doubled home a San Francisco run.

Pirates 7, Braves 3

Willie Stargell and Bill Robinson hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning, the eighth time this season the Pirates have managed the feat. Four Pirate hurlers combined on a three-hitter, with Jim Bibby getting the victory.

Dibbs Takes Invitational

NEW YORK (AP) — It was supposed to be a battle, the sort of drawn-out affair you'd expect from two guys who love the baseline. People were taking bets on how long it would carry on.

But Eddie Dibbs needed just over 1½ hours Sunday to wipe out his old pal Harold Solomon 7-6, 6-1 in the final of the Forest Hills Invitational.

He had help. Solomon folded in the heat and humidity, and Dibbs won the biggest tournament paycheck of his career — $100,000. Solomon had beaten Dibbs in the very first match of the round-robin tournament, for the first time in five years. The two are frequently compared. They're both little — Dibbs 5-foot-7 and Solomon 5-6. And they're both from the Miami area. And they both like clay courts.

But Dibbs is the more athletic. He is more aggressive and a better server. Solomon is more patient. Both are criticized sometimes by those who don't like long rallies. Actually, both volleyed more this week than usual.

Both served well. Dibbs got in 78.5 percent of his first serves, Solomon 69.7 percent.

What really mattered though was the heat. Dibbs was able to pass. And Solomon kept overhitting. "About every other point I couldn't be concerned with what was going on on court. I just had to be concerned with breathing," he said. His cramps began when he was leading 6-5, 30-0 on serve in the first set. Then the right hand started to go, and before long it was both feet and his right leg.

He lost the first-set tiebreaker 0-7. But he kept playing. The match was delayed briefly at a changeover at 4-1 in the second set. A trainer and doctor were summoned. But Solomon insisted he could play.

"There was never a thought of stopping the match, not a $140,000 match," said Paul Cohen, Solomon's coach. Solomon's runner-up share was $40,000.

"I was tired, too," Dibbs said. "It's hot as hell out there. I just got a second wind."

The final sold 5,715 tickets for a total attendance of 44,252 in the week-long tournament. That's well below what the 12,000-seat stadium could have held and lower than last year's total of 69,000.

Lamar Hunt, director of the sponsoring World Championship Tennis, announced a new format for the tournament, dropping the round-robin concept and broadening the field. The tournament will remain at the West Side Tennis Club, though. The Club was for 60 years the home of the U.S. Open, which moved last year to a new facility with courts that favor America's fast, hard-court players.

Dibbs got in his vote for the clay court lovers Sunday. "I don't know why they moved the Open to Flushing Meadow," he told the small appreciative crowd. "It was much better here."

Home Court Makes Ilie Nastase Nervous

By The Associated Press
Bjorn Borg knows about the home court advantage and how, at times, it can be a disadvantage. Sunday was one of those times for his opponent, Romanian Ilie Nastase.

Borg beat Nastase 6-3, 6-0, 6-0 in Bucharest, Romania, during Sunday's opening reverse singles match to lead the Swedes to victory over Romania in their best-of-five European Zone Group B Davis Cup semifinal series.

"Nastase can play much better than today, but when he plays in front of his own crowd he always seems nervous, like myself in Sweden," Borg explained.

The Wimbledon champion required only one hour to finish off Nastase, who wilted after the opening set. He may have still been feeling the effects of his exhausting 4½-hour match Friday against Sweden's No. 2 player, Stefan Simonsson, who lost Sunday to Romania's Dumitru Haradau 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 in the final singles match.

Borg, whose countrymen took a 2-1 lead into Sunday's play, by virtue of a singles split on Friday and a doubles victory Saturday, said, "We are happy to have won. Before we came we expected a very tough clash."

The Swedes' 3-2 series win advanced them to the final against Czechoslovakia, which split its last two singles matches Sunday with France, whom they defeated 4-1 in their semifinal series in Paris.

Yannick Noah prevented a Czech sweep by winning the last match of the meet at Roland Garros Stadium as he beat Tomas Smid 7-5, 6-1, 6-2. That followed a 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 victory by Ivan Lendl over France's Gilles Moretton.

Britain defeated Spain by the same 4-1 margin, splitting Sunday's final singles matches and will move on to the European Zone Group A final against Italy Sept. 14-16 in Rome.

In the final two matches at Eastbourne, England, Jose Higueras of Spain defeated John Lloyd of Britain 6-3, 6-0, 6-4, while Britain's Mark Cox beat Spain's Antonio Munoz 6-1, 6-3, 6-2. Both players were replacements for their respective top seeds. Britain's Buster Mottram didn't play Sunday, saying that he was unfit, as did Manuel Orantes of Spain.

The Italians won their home-court series by a 3-2 margin over Hungary, after dividing their singles matches Sunday. Corrado Barazzutti beat Peter Szoke of Hungary 6-4, 6-1, 6-1 to clinch the semifinal before Hungary's Balazs Taroczy defeated Italian Tonino Zugarelli 6-4, 6-3.

Clark Sets Mark

ATLANTA — Abner Clark of Greenville broke the national age group record for 14-15-year olds in the triple jump this weekend at the Region III Junior Olympic meet here.

Clark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clark, took first place in the event with a jump of 48-7. The feat qualifies him for the national Junior Olympic championship meet in Lincoln, Neb.

In other events, Mike Owens, Sam Summrell, Ken Hardy and Wade Corbett were fourth in the 12-13-year-old mile relay in 3:55.5, while Leanne Wiseman was sixth in the 12-13 girls' long jump at 15-8.

Scott Lewis was second in the 880 in 2:24 and third in the mile in 5:27 among 10-11 boys, while Jeff Joyner was fourth in the long jump at 16-1 in the same age bracket. Among nine and under girls, Jennifer Newton was second in the mile in 6:12 and third in the 880 in 2:49.8.

Bamberger Threat Spurs Milwaukee

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger believes that behind his team's recent success is a wife — or 25 wives in the Brewers' case.

Last week Bamberger told his team that if it didn't improve, he would hold practices during the All-Star break, depriving players of the three-day holiday they normally would spend with their families.

Sunday, triples by Sal Bando and Robin Yount, and doubles by Buck Martinez and Ben Oglivie highlighted a seven-run second inning that powered Milwaukee to a 10-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

That gave the Brewers a 54-38 record and a five-game winning streak.

Milwaukee pitcher Lary Sorensen, 11-9, got the victory but needed relief help in the ninth inning from Bob Galasso.

Red Sox 3, A's 2

Boston scored two runs in the ninth inning on only one hit, a leadoff single by Jim Rice, to come from behind and edge Oakland. It was the A's 20th loss in 23 games.

Rice led off with a single and Carl Yastrzemski hit a grounder to third. A's shortstop Dave Chalk then bobbled a grounder, loading the bases, and Carlton Fisk's forceout sent home the tying run.

Butch Hobson grounded to third, but Jim Essian, attempting a force play, threw wide of the plate, allowing pinch-runner Jim Dwyer to score the winning run.

Orioles 6, Mariners 1

Ken Singleton drove in three runs with a double and a two-run homer and Dennis Martinez threw a four-hitter to give Baltimore its victory over Seattle.

Angels 4, Yankees 3

Bobby Grich slammed a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning to boost California over New York.

It was the second straight game in which California came from behind in the final inning to beat the Yankees. New York had taken a 4-0 lead with two-run homers by Chris Chambliss in the first inning and Jim Spencer in the second.

Royals 4, Rangers 3

Run-scoring doubles by Todd Cruz and George Scott backed Paul Splittorff's five-hitter as Kansas City edged Texas.

The victory snapped the Royals' seven-game losing streak and was only the second in Kansas City's last 15 games.

Twins 9, Blue Jays 4

A grand slam home run by Dave Edwards and John Castino's three-run double powered Minnesota over Toronto. The Twins also got a solo homer from Butch Wynegar, his sixth of the year.

Castino's double came in the fifth inning off reliever Balor Moore.

Tigers 14, White Sox 5

Steve Kemp rapped out five hits and Lance Parrish added four of Detroit's 20 hits to lead Detroit over Chicago.

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Tom Cornelia of Hilton Head Island, S.C., let a four-hole lead slip to just two in the final nine holes but recovered to a 3 and 2 victory over Columbia's Larry Boswell to win the 65th annual Carolinas Golf Association Amateur Championship.

It was just Cornelia, 19, in his first CGA appearance, and 36-year-old Boswell, a high school golf coach, in the marathon 36-hole final round of match play Sunday at the Dunes Golf and Beach Club.

The prospects of East Carolina University's getting into a conference look much brighter right now. It appears that only the final steps will be needed before six schools get together to form a new league, centered around basketball.

To be recognized by the NCAA, the new league would have to participate in at least six sports, and this should create no problem for the six schools.

Football would not be a part of the league, since two of the schools do not now play, Old Dominion and James Madison. However, the close ties that would result from the formation of a conference for other sports could lead to future football scheduling.

And getting the Naval Academy on the football schedule would be a great thing for East Carolina. It would lend a "name" team to the schedule, and the prospects for a home-and-home situation would be good.

East Carolina, of course, already has William & Mary and Richmond, the other two schools in the proposed league, on its football schedule.

Certainly the new league is needed by East Carolina, if not the other schools. It would be a fairly compact league, extending from Greenville northward to Annapolis, and northwestward to Harrisonburg, Va., just north of Lexington, home of former Southern Conference rival VMI.

Officials are also looking at other schools which might become future members of the league. There have been discussions among the six, we understand, but nothing definite has come from those as yet. More than likely, with four already in Virginia, there would be efforts to attract another North Carolina school, plus another one from Maryland, or the District of Columbia area. UNC Charlotte, currently a member of the Sun Belt Conference, has been mentioned as a possibility from North Carolina.

It was at first hoped that things would move along rapidly enough for the schools to begin a single round robin in basketball this winter, concluding with a tournament. East Carolina, despite being on probation this year, would be eligible for that event, but could not go further.

Officials fear, however, that the league will not be able to be formed in time for this season's sports, but instead are shooting for a 1980-81 start, including a double round robin in basketball.

What the other five sports would be hasn't been decided, but they could include baseball, wrestling, soccer, swimming, tennis, golf, or track.

At any rate, it is a welcome challenge for those working to put the league together. And it is a league that should be a good one, both for East Carolina and the other schools.

Future Pan Am Games To Be Harder

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The United States set a dangerous precedence of excellence in the VIII Pan American Games, which ended Sunday.

Regardless of the accomplishments of future American athletes or the overall strength and improvement in the U.S. amateur athletic programs, their achievements in Pan American Games yet to come always will be measured against the overwhelming, record-shattering U.S. victory in this edition of the hemispheric Olympics.

It's like bring home a straight-A report card; now people will expect A's all the time.

But future Pan American Games will be harder, not easier, for the United States.

Emphasis on athletic competition is increasing at a furious rate through the entire Western Hemisphere. That fact showed greatly in the increased level of proficiency of all 5,000 athletes from 34 countries participating in these Games.

Viewed in that context, the United States' performance this year, can only be categorized as outstanding, according to U.S. Olympic Committee President Bob Kane.

"This is by far the best U.S. delegation ever assembled for the Pan Am Games," Kane said. "This is a fine hour for U.S. amateur athletic programs. The long hours of training and hard work are paying their dividends now."

The United States totalled a whopping 264 medals, and that total could have gone higher except for a Pan Am rule that no country may place more than two medal winners in any category. The previous record total was 247, set by the U.S. in 1975 at Mexico City.

The U.S. haul of 127 gold medals was just short of the all-time mark of 128, also set by the U.S., back in 1967 at Winnipeg, in the days when the Games were little more than exercises for the Americans. But since then, the Canadians have come on, and Cuba's international competition program was born. The Cubans finished second for the second consecutive time, with a total of 65 golds and 146 overall. Canada was third with a 24-136 gold-total count. There was a big dropoff to fourth-place Brazil at 9-40.

But obviously, it was another Star Spangled Banner production.

Consider some of these American accomplishments: —Swimmers and divers won 32 of 33 gold medals, setting Games record in 27 swimming events, and three world records.

—Although nine National AAU champions were missing, the track and field teams won golds in 25 of 39 events, including a record 11 for the women.

—The freestyle wrestling team swept all 10 golds, even though its coach predicted only seven.

—Archers won all four events, in a new Pan Am sport.

—The tennis teams won four of five events.
 —Pistol, rifle and shotgun marksmen gained 12 golds and set one world record.

Garvey Recalls All-Star Game

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent SEATTLE (AP) — Steve Garvey will never forget the first All-Star Game in which he played. He's been in the last five and No.6 comes up Tuesday in the Kingdome.

This one — baseball's 50th — must have special meaning for the cornerstone of the Los Angeles Dodgers, "the man who beat out the great Pete Rose for first base." But can it compare with his debut?

"It was a night game in Pittsburgh," Garvey recalls. "I was a write-in pick for the team, getting more than a million votes. Five days before the game, my face started swelling and I felt miserable."

"The doctors didn't know what was the matter with me at first. Then, after exhaustive tests, they hit on the answer. I had the mumps."

For five days Garvey was confined. He didn't pick up a bat. He didn't touch a glove. "That'll be all right," Steve told himself. "An hour's warm-up and some hitting practice before the game and I'll be good as new."

Steve went to the park early. It rained. No warmup.

Weak from the ailment and lack of work, he put on his uniform.

Yogi Berra, manager of the National League team, looked at him and almost swooned in the dugout.

"You look awful," Berra said. "You're pale. Are you sick? Do you think you can play?"

"Sure, I'll be okay," the Dodger first baseman replied. "If a million people thought enough of me to write me on the ballot, I'm not going to disappoint them."

Garvey will always remember the first time he came to bat. "Luis Tiant was pitching. You know all those funny motions of his. I swung on the first pitch and almost fell down. I thought I was going to panic. I prayed. I said, 'Please God, let me get a hit.'"

"On the next pitch, I lashed a single to center. Yogi said he would take me out and give me so some rest in the fifth inning. But he pinch-hit Tony Perez and had nobody else to play first."

"Can you make it?" Yogi asked me. "Sure," I said. I went 2-for-4, scored a run and batted in a run. I was voted the Most Valuable Player. It was one of the great moments of my life."

Garvey also was voted Most Valuable Player last year, singling over two runs to tie and then hitting a triple in the eighth to spark a four-run rally in the National League's 7-3 victory at San Diego.

In five All-Star games to date, he has a .500 batting average (8-for-16) with three singles, a double, two triples and two home runs.

Garvey became the only player in the half-century of the All-Star Game to earn two MVPs. He tied Charlie Gehringer for the highest batting average of players who have competed in at least five games.

He is the first Dodger to have

Saturday's Cryptoquip — SWIRLED WHITE STRAW BONENT BECAME THE COMELY LADY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals L.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A1097 ♥K76 ♦K95 ♠643

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—A difficult hand. You have 10 high card points, all primes, but the hand is flawed because of its flat shape. If you respond one spade, you will almost certainly have no satisfactory rebid at your next turn. It is wiser to make a forward-going raise to two hearts now, which will allow partner to reappraise his holding. If he takes any further action, you have enough to go on to game.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A1076 ♥6 ♦AK94 ♦KJ105

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ 1 ♦ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's response has done nothing to improve the offensive potential of your hand, but it has enhanced its defensive prospects. We suggest a penalty double. This will alert partner to your heart shortness, while advising him about your better-than-minimum opening bid. As with all low-level penalty doubles, partner may remove if his hand is unsuited for defense.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A10 ♥KQJ93 ♦1076 ♠964

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You should bid again, but your hand isn't worth a jump to three hearts, and a two-heart rebid is much too regressive and implies a dislike for diamonds. Two no trump cannot be considered with no club stopper, so your only choice is to raise to three diamonds. Partner can still raise hearts if he had three-card support.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A10 ♥KQJ93 ♦1076 ♠964

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your good five-card suit makes your hand worth more than its 10 HCP, so, again, it merits one move toward game. Since partner has shown a balanced hand, the only sensible action is to raise to two no trump. Take a demerit if you rebid hearts at any level, for two hearts is a weak bid, and three hearts overstates your values.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦5432 ♥K983 ♦K ♠KQ104

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is just a little too weak to jump raise to three hearts, especially since you don't know how valuable your singleton king of diamonds will be. So make a temporary bid of two clubs with the intention of raising hearts at your next turn.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦5432 ♥K983 ♦K ♠KQ104

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East Pass Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The fact that you are a passed hand changes the cir-

A Lesson From Elvis; Do Not Become A Star

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Linda Thompson says the four years she spent with Elvis Presley at his Graceland Mansion in Memphis showed her what it takes to be a star.

From 1972 to 1976, Miss Thompson lived with Presley. Except for Presley's six-year marriage, his relationship with Miss Thompson was his longest. Insiders say he and Miss Thompson were very close.

"I believe my experiences with Elvis taught me not to be a star," Miss Thompson said in an interview. "I don't want to sacrifice my private life and live the reclusive existence he did."

"You can make so much money that after a while it doesn't mean anything any more," she said.

This fall will mark Miss Thompson's third year on the syndicated television show "Hee Haw." She'll be given more airtime this year, appearing in a new segment as a "farmer's daughter." Kenny Price plays her father.

Speaking to a reporter be-

LINDA THOMPSON remembers Elvis Presley "as a good human soul," but says his reclusive existence strained their relations. (AP Laserphoto)

tween takes on the "Hee Haw" set, she said she remembers Presley "as a good human soul." "When you live with someone that long, he's not just a name on a marquee," she said. "He was special, with a good heart and a good soul. And he had a sense of humor."

Presley abused sleeping pills, she said, because he was an insomniac.

"But in no way was he a drug addict," she said. "He never used cocaine and everybody uses it."

Presley was offered the male lead in the movie "A Star is Born" opposite Barbra Streisand, Miss Thompson said, but the role was rejected by Presley's long-time manager, Col. Tom Parker. Kris Kristofferson got it.

"He wanted to prove himself as an actor," she recalled. "He used to laugh at the scripts he got where he sang to cows and things. He did the best he could with the roles he got."

She said they discussed marriage. "We aired it out but decided we were comfortable being together as we were."

Reason To Wonder If Some Designed To Fail

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

Twenty or so new network shows will roll out of the TV factories this fall, their wheels greased with plenty of hope and hype. Most, as usual, will fail.

The astounding thing about this ritual is not that so many new series fail, but that most of the failures will have met a deserved fate. You wonder, sometimes, if some TV shows are made to be lousy.

Meet William Blinn, a writer and producer who has made some fine television and a couple of awfuls as well. Blinn is at work right now on his new hopeful, a medical show for ABC called "The Lazarus Syndrome."

Blinn's show is about a private hospital that is run by a doctor and a former newspaperman-patient. Sounds like a perfect candidate for the scrap heap. But Blinn, who won honors for a "Roots" script two years ago, doesn't seem the sort who'd easily settle for junk.

He reminds that quality is a relative term, and that networks aren't necessarily art buyers.

"They don't try anything new, or they don't try an old idea executed in a new way, because most of the people who buy television programs are corporately timid," Blinn says. "And that's catching. Plus, most of the people who offer television programs for sale to the networks are going in with what they think will please them."

"Therefore, it's like holding one mirror on one side and another mirror on the other, and they reflect emptiness."

Okay. But Blinn's show is already sold. He knows the difference between junk and good. Good was his "Roots" work. Junk was his "Fast Lane Blues," which ABC tried to hide by airing it Christmas Eve.

This medical show of his — good, or junk?

"Well, the show is a switch on the standard medical show, and I think if we can execute it properly, it will not just be a retreat of all the other TV medical shows.

"I have wanted for a long time to do a medical series in which the layman is represented — not just as a guest star every other week, but in a situation where there's a guy saying, 'Wait a minute. What's going on? Why does it have to be this way? Why do you have to wake a guy up at 6 in the morning to take a sleeping pill?'"

"Okay, in some story areas, we're going to touch on topics that have been done. We're doing a story on malpractice, and I'm sure 'Ben Casey' got sued for malpractice. But we're also doing a lot more of the ethical questions in medicine as opposed to just curing specific diseases."

I especially liked Blinn's idea of what he'd like "Lazarus Syndrome" to be.

"A show that makes you think, and makes you enjoy. If we can avoid the unreality of the happy endings of most shows...I mean, there are real human triumphs, and they are wonderful to see. It's a question of whether we can be creative and inventive enough to avoid the bull. That's what it comes down to."

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Joan Baez says she never was a left winger and some of her old companions in protests are off base in calling her a traitor.

The woman who sang in Hanoi while American bombs fell on the city has a new cause: the boat people fleeing Vietnam.

She is attacking the government of Vietnam, whose cause she espoused when it was at war with the United States.

Vietnam is forcing the boat people — the thousands who can no longer stand to stay in their own country, into the sea, the folksinger said.

The United States laid the groundwork with a war which "corrupted" Vietnam, she said. But now, she said, the militarists who run Vietnam must share a lot of the responsibility.

For saying such, the firebrand of the protests of the 1960s has come under a lot of fire.

No less than Academy Award winner Jane Fonda vehemently objected when they met on a television talk show. Lawyer William M. Kunstler, an advocate of civil rights causes, called Miss Baez an agent of the CIA and said, "I don't believe in criticizing socialist governments publicly, even if there are human rights violations."

Miss Baez retorted in a Chicago interview, a stopover on a 22-city concert tour.

Asked if her stand was a retreat from her old convictions, she said, "Not at all. If I were, in fact, a leftist there would be some kind of conflict, contradiction. I know it's difficult for the American public to understand that because I directed some of my energies in the 1960s to what this country did in Vietnam."

Grants To 8 Groups

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has announced the awarding of grants to eight communities to aid victims of domestic violence. Hunt said Saturday that $70,724 in state funds will go to community programs to fund emergency services as well as training for volunteers to work with the victims.

The eight organizations receiving the grants include Caldwell County Shelter Home, Wake County Women's Aid, Winston-Salem Battered Women's Services, New Hanover Task Force Against Family Violence, Asheville Community Relations Council, Greensboro Women's Aid, Jackson County REACH Inc. and Durham-Orange Coalition for Battered Women.

"This is the second year the state has been able to award these grants to community-based organizations for the purpose of helping battered women," Hunt said. "Last year, the council awarded similar grants totaling just over $71,000 to eight community organizations."

The funds are made available by the Division of Social Services through the N.C. Council on the Status of Women.

Twenty-one community groups submitted requests this year for the funds.

Advice To Negotiators: Learn Chess Strategy

By JIM ANDERSON WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA has some advice for those who negotiate with the Soviets: Bone up on chess strategy. Be ready for the "whipsaw" and the "foot-drag." Keep your eye on the interpreter.

The intelligence agency has put out these tips in an exhaustive study of Soviet strategy and tactics in economic and commercial negotiations. But the same principles apply to other kinds of negotiations.

The study said the Russians prepare meticulously for their talks with Americans.

"The result of this advance work closely resembles a chess strategy in its step-by-step program for negotiating success," it said.

The usual Soviet group is a tightly disciplined team of veteran negotiators, backed up by young technicians. It is trained to operate on the assumption that the U.S. team will regard compromise as desirable and inevitable and will be deeply frustrated when quick agreement does not emerge.

The Soviets, on the other hand, "pride themselves on being great 'sitters' and they believe that this induces major concessions" from the impatient Americans.

The CIA study lists some familiar Soviet plays:

"The shopping list." They will open with highly exaggerated demands. Eventually, they concede on the extraneous points and insist the U.S. side "even up the tally" with some concessions.

"The padded list." The initial Soviet proposals make the same point in several redundant sections. Thus, they can ostensibly give away some points without really sacrificing anything.

"The foot dragger." One Soviet negotiator plays the role of the "heavy," refusing all compromise. Finally, the team chief intercedes as "benevolent mediator," offering compromise. The tactic appears to be a variation of the "good-cop, bad-cop" routine used in criminal interrogations.

The Soviets will often try to play one U.S. firm against another by dealing with both simultaneously, meanwhile letting negotiations drag on for years. Moscow's men assume time works in their favor.

The CIA study said the Russians often use social occasions to size up personality weaknesses among the Americans.

The Soviet interpreters, it said, are an integral part of the negotiating team. They often have long experience with Americans, alerting the Soviet team leader to any changes in the U.S. positions and feeding back information gleaned during recesses and social occasions.

Generally, the study said, the Soviets prefer a loosely worded agreement so that it can be construed to their advantage.

It also said Americans can assume some of the "silent extras" in Moscow's delegation are KGB secret policemen, there to keep an eye on the Soviets — especially in negotiations conducted abroad.

Nixon Hosts Astronauts

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon's last hurrah at his Casa Pacifica estate was a tribute to 15 astronauts that celebrated the 10th anniversary of man's first walk on the moon.

During an informal 10-minute talk to the astronauts and 300 guests gathered at the seaside estate Sunday, Nixon did not mention the gathering would be the last such occasion at the former Western White House, which has been sold.

Instead, Nixon told the astronauts they had "contributed to the spirit of this country."

Serenaded by a Mexican mariachi band, guests ate guacamole and bean dip, filled their plates with Mexican food at a buffet and drank "lots of margaritas," said one guest.

Nixon associates seen entering the estate included former White House Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman, who served a prison term for obstruction of justice and perjury in connection with the Watergate scandal that led to Nixon's resignation from office.

Before arriving here, the astronauts attended a four-day Las Vegas celebration of the moonwalk anniversary. Neil Armstrong, the first moonwalker July 20, 1969, did not take part in the Las Vegas gathering. His moonwalk companion, Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, was on hand.

Report 14 Die In N.C. Traffic

By The Associated Press

The North Carolina Highway Patrol reported 14 persons were killed in traffic accidents during the weekend, which included three accidents involving multiple fatalities.

The toll this year climbed to 760 dead, compared to 742 during the like period last year.

Three persons were killed Saturday when their car, traveling at high speed, ran off N. C. 42 and wrecked 10 miles east of Kinston, the patrol said. The victims were identified as Allen Ray Johnson, 31, and Ornhile Albert Byers, 28, both of Sanford and Grover Allen Patterson, 30, of Broadway.

Two persons were killed Saturday in a head-on collision on a rural road six miles north of Oak City in Martin County. The patrol identified the victims as Charles Millard Stewart, 19, of Tarboro, and Joseph Wiley Tillery, 17, of Scotland Neck.

Two persons also were killed in a one-car accident Friday night six miles east of Raeford. Jill Jackson Davis, 29, and Bobby Jefferson Davis, 33, both of Lumber Ridge, were killed when their car ran off the road and struck a tree.

The patrol said David Ranson Holmes, 36, of Lexington, lost control of his car Sunday on a rural road 7 miles south of Lexington in Davidson County and hit a tree.

Dennis Roy Elliott, 20, of Concord, was killed Saturday at the intersection of two rural roads 4 1/2 miles north of Concord in Cabarrus County when he ran a stop sign and collided with another car.

Jimmy Andrew Mabes, 30, of Eden was killed Saturday when the car he was driving ran off a rural road one mile west of Eden in Rockingham County and hit a tree.

Robert Alan Boyle, 24, of Virginia Beach, Va., was killed early Saturday morning on Highway 17 near Elizabeth City when his car ran off the road and overturned.

James F. Harper, 30, of Albemarle, was killed Saturday morning near Kinston when his motorcycle struck a car head-on.

BIG AIR SHOW

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Air Fair '79, largest air show and exposition in the United States, will be held July 19 through July 22 at Dayton's International Airport and the Convention Center. The fair will commemorate the 10th anniversary of the U.S. landing on the moon.

Cosmonauts In Longest Flight

MOSCOW (AP) — After 139 days, 14 hours and 48 minutes in space, two Soviet cosmonauts can claim the longest space flight in history.

Commander Vladimir Lyakhov, 37, and flight engineer Valery Ryumin, 39, passed the old mark early Sunday aboard their Salyut 6 space station. The two men were launched into space Feb 25.

The old 139-day record was set by Vladimir Kovalenok and Alexander Ivanchenkov last Nov. 2. They also were aboard the Salyut 6 craft.

Dynamite Next To Gas Depot

SUSCON, Pa. (AP) — Pittston Township police said they found 150 pounds of dynamite in an outhouse located next to a gasoline depot.

Police said the dynamite was discovered behind an unoccupied summer cottage Sunday by the cottage's owner, who notified police. A police spokesman said the dynamite was in three boxes and included three 1,000-foot rolls of primer cord. Authorities speculated the dynamite was probably taken from a construction site. The explosives will be turned over to the state fire marshal today.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Hopeful News in Medicine

Dramatic results in the treatment of herniated discs of the spine have been reported with the use of the drug, colchicine, normally used in the treatment for gout.

A pilot study was conducted of 50 patients with disc problems who were treated in this manner by Dr. Michael Rask. He reported his findings at a recent meeting of the Academy of Neurological Orthopedic Surgeons. In some instances, patients with acute problems were given relief with a single treatment. Dr. Rask said, "The response was so dramatic, it is miraculous. I believe every patient with acute and chronic disc syndrome deserves a four to six week trial with colchicine."

Undoubtedly, these studies which have been so enthusiastically received will be further pursued by other physicians working in the same field. Certainly, the preliminary work, a radical departure from traditional methods of treatment, will be a great contribution to sufferers of this painful and debilitating condition.

The popularity of unsupervised high protein crash diets is recognized as being fraught with danger. An additional study of interest shows that some patients with excessive protein in their diet may develop a severe calcium loss which leads to the deposit of stones in the kidney.

Dr. Helen Linkswiler, at the University of Wisconsin, said, "Our data shows that high protein diets can be devastating to the bones."

There is a considerable amount of ongoing research in this area that tends to emphasize the potential hazards of the high protein crash diet. Before embarking on such a program, dieters are advised to consult with their own doctors, who can best weigh the advantages and the disadvantages for each patient.

A new test for the early recognition of multiple sclerosis has recently been reported. Dr. John W. Angers, director of the Human Immunology Foundation in New York City, and his co-workers, have reported excellent results in a large series of patients. They feel that, by a complex process, they can reduce the time it takes to establish the diagnosis.

Further trials are continuing to confirm the validity of these experimental studies. When once confirmed, the tests will be added to the many that are being accumulated by researchers in all parts of the world.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... When patients really understand their illnesses, they are known to conscientiously follow instructions about dietary regimes and medications. A patient must thoroughly discuss every aspect of his condition if confusion is to be avoided.

Americans Listen, And Also Speak Their Minds

By The Associated Press
President Carter spent 10 days at Camp David formulating a plan to handle the nation's energy and inflation problems. "And then I left Camp David to listen to other Americans ...," he said in his nationally televised speech.

America listened ...
A farmer in Missouri, a retired couple in Miami Beach, a coal miner in West Virginia, an oil company executive in Los Angeles, a Baptist theologian in Massachusetts, a representative of gasoline dealers in Connecticut, and an independent truck driver in Birmingham, Ala.

And they spoke their minds.
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — John Brigman, an independent truck driver, was looking for a solution to problems within the trucking industry.

"He didn't seem like to me he's come up with a solution," the 41-year-old trucker said of President Carter. "He sounded like a Baptist preacher wanting us all to get together."

Brigman said: "I wanted to hear that there'd be more fuel available and this thing would level off. I don't think that's in the future."

"He didn't say anything about inflation," he remarked. Brigman's wife, JoAnn, said, "I don't think he's going to get people's cooperation by saying cut down on as small a thing as your fuel in your home and park your car one day a week."

"That's the type of thing people are going to ignore. Do you think anybody's going to get up in the morning and cancel their vacation?"

"I don't think it took that many days at Camp David to come up with that speech," said Mrs. Brigman. She added that the "crisis of confidence" was in the president himself.

CHESAPEAKE, W.Va. — Coal miner Grant McGuire

says President Carter's plan to place strict limits on imported foreign oil should be good news for the nation's coal industry.

"I would have liked to have seen coal pushed up (in priority)," said McGuire, 52, who has been a miner for 33 years. "But if he is limiting imports of foreign oil, the nation will have to use more coal."

McGuire, a Democrat, said he voted for Carter, but added that his confidence in the president had diminished.

McGuire said he was encouraged by the president's words, but he stopped short of saying that his faith in Carter had been restored. He said whether Carter can translate his words into action would be a key factor in his decision.

"We'd better just wait and see," he said.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — "In the first part of the speech he was back to his 'born again' whatever he is," said Marriott Nadler, 69, who retired here from New Jersey in 1975 after selling his small chain of dry cleaning stores.

But once Carter got down to specifics, Nadler approved: "I think it's the best speech that Mr. Carter has ever made. I believe that he gave us a program that I could go along with."

Nadler and his wife Jean, who live on their savings and Social Security, said they support most specifics of Carter's planned assault on the energy crisis.

But Nadler objected to two things:

He said Carter failed to mention nuclear energy, which Nadler attributed to the political sensitivity of the issue.

And Nadler said Carter's call for massive government spending upset him.

"He doesn't say he's going to let the industrial people of this country — who've given us the greatest form of living this world has ever seen — do it," Nadler said. "The government is going to do it."

WEST HARTFORD, Conn. — "He has given his usual missionary talk," said Charles Matties, past president of the National Congress of Petroleum Retailers.

"I don't think he came across as the leader the nation is looking for," said Matties, a Republican member of the Connecticut House of Representatives. Matties also is a member of the Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association's board of directors and a director of the petroleum congress' executive committee.

Although he approved of Carter's proposed import quota on foreign oil, Matties said such a concept was not new and that his own organizations had favored such a move.

"It wasn't innovative at all as far as the imports go, but I'm happy to see that he's doing it," Matties said.

After listening to the president's speech, Matties shook his head and shaded his eyes.

"Who the hell does he think has been running the country for the past two-one half years," he asked, adding, "It sounds as if he spent the last ten days at Camp David learning to be president."

OSAGE CITY, Mo. — Missouri farmer Jim Hofmann says President Carter may have given the nation what it needs — a new cause.

Surrounded by his wife Marilyn and their two children, the 37-year-old farmer, listened intently to the president's call for national unity on the energy issue. "And I wasn't disappointed," Hofmann said.

But Hofmann, who raises cattle, corn, milo and alfalfa on about 500 acres among the rolling hills of Osage County in central Missouri, said the nation's farmers might face more problems than the other Americans in handling the energy crunch. Urban workers can join carpools or use mass transit to get to their jobs, but farmers have to have gasoline and diesel fuel to do theirs, he noted. "The tractors have to run," Hofmann said.

LOS ANGELES — "I expected more specifics," said David Button, manager of economic planning and policy, for the Getty Oil Co.

Button was critical of the creation of another layer of governmental bureaucracy, referring to the energy security corporation, the solar bank and energy mobilization board mentioned by Carter.

"It's incredible that you have to create a whole new bureaucracy just to sweep up after the old one."

Button felt Carter missed opportunity by not immediately deregulating gasoline prices, a move he felt would have encouraged conservation, greater use of public transportation and would also eliminate gasoline lines.

He thought speech seemed to indicate more government speech, and needed saying. "He also was trying to tell us we have a tough road ahead. But I'd have preferred he told us a little more directly that we have to change our way of living and lifestyle. That was implied, but he didn't say it directly."

American Baptist theologian at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, said Carter "sounded like a philosopher and preacher, talking about our sins, our faith and our faults."

Charged In 2 Stabbings

SNEADS FERRY, N.C. (AP) — Onslow County authorities say a Camp Lejeune marine has been charged with murder in the stabbing deaths of a Sneads Ferry woman and her 12-year-old son early Sunday.

Deputies would not release the names of the victims, saying the next of kin, the woman's husband, is stationed overseas with the U.S. Marine Corps and has not been notified yet.

They said the woman's 7-year-old daughter escaped unharmed after crawling under a bed in the trailer where the family lived and later fleeing from the home.

Deputies said the woman staggered outside the trailer and collapsed, and neighbors called the sheriff's department. The incident happened about 1 a.m. Sunday.

Charged was John D. Doran, 33, of Escondido, Calif., authorities said. He was being held without bond at the Onslow County Jail.

Authorities said the daughter identified the suspect by name and told deputies the man was a family acquaintance.
