Much Border Leaf To Stabilization

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — It was described as a case of "opening-day jitters" by tobacco officials who predicted that Wednesday's low opening day prices at the Border Belt tobacco markets in North Carolina would improve.

The day's sales were generally described as disappointing by industry officials and growers alike, with gains in some types of tobacco and losses in others over last year's record prices.

Many growers were so disappointed, in fact, that they refused to sell their tobacco at the prices offered by the buyers and were "turning the tickets," or holding the tobacco until a later auction.

"We're not getting much above support," said Jim Britt of Lumberton, who with his father manages a sizeable tobacco operation. He had 10,000 pounds on the auction floor at Hedgepeth Warehouse Wednesday, about 50 percent of which he held back or turned the tickets on because of low prices.

"I'll wait until tomorrow," he said. "I don't know what's wrong. I just hope it's because it's opening day."

Another grower at the same warehouse held back 80 percent of his tobacco because of the low prices.

General average prices ranged from $123 to $142 per hundred pounds with most falling between $123 and $133 per hundred pounds, according to the Federal State Market News Service.

The average price support paid by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. is $129 per hundred pounds.

"DISGUSTING"

I think that the new billboards that they're putting up around Greenville are disgusting. I haven't seen a lot of them in this area until recently. I think it's a shame for the whole city to look like one big advertisement. I'd like to see our city kept looking sharp. M. C.

Outdoor advertising signs, according to the Greenville City Inspections Department, from which permits for them are obtained, can be placed in three zoning areas of the city. These are commercial highway, inoffensive industrial, and industrial. Setback distances are 50 feet in the commercial highway zones and 25 feet in the industrial zones. Special use permits (public hearing called for) may be sought for residential agricultural zones. They may not be placed closer to one another than 300 feet and may not be closer than 100 feet to a residence.

There are regulations, too, Chief Inspector Alton Warren said concerning the looks and maintenance of these signs. Backs of the structures must, by ordinance, be painted in a neutral color "to blend with the surrounding area" and the area surrounding the bases of all signs must, by ordinance, be maintained free of unsightly debris.

CONSUMER PROTECTION MEASURE

The N. C. General Assembly has enacted a consumer protection measure effective, July 1, to limit the interest out-of-state loan companies may charge North Carolina residents. A few states allow lenders to charge rates far in excess of what North Carolina allows. By mailing their sales pitches from these states, lenders have, in the past, been able to exact big extra profits. No more, N. C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said.

Califano Said First To Go In Carter 'Hit List'

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN and JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writers
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has decided to accept the resignation of HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano and to replace him with Housing and Urban Development Secretary Patricia Harris, several sources reported today.

The outspoken, liberal secretary of Health, Education and Welfare became the first casualty of Carter's Cabinet shakeup. Califano abruptly canceled a congressional appearance and called a news conference later today at which sources said he was expected to announce his departure.

Other sources said that Mrs. Harris had accepted another post in the government and that it would be HEW.

There was no formal confirmation from the White House.

Meanwhile, Hamilton Jordan, taking over as White House chief of staff, ordered an evaluation of top officials throughout the government while President Carter's Cabinet members waited today to learn whether their resignations would be accepted.

The only formal announcement Wednesday from the White House revealed Jordan's promotion.

It was unclear whether Carter would announce today or Friday which resignations he would accept among the 30 outstanding ones submitted earlier by his Cabinet and top White House staff.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said today the president "is well on the track of concluding those decisions, certainly within the next few days."

Asked on the CBS-TV "Morning News" how widespread the shakeup would be, Powell replied: "There is no goal or target for shifting people around." He added that officials in top policy-making posts "ought to go through a process of evaluation. Certainly that's something that happens in any successful institution in the private sector."

Continuing uncertainty about the shakeup has helped depress the dollar on international money markets. But Powell said this should not "bar a president from taking action that he needs to take in order to set his administration in the proper shape to deal with the priorities that he feels are important to the country."

Mrs. Harris was the center of speculation Wednesday. Sources who declined to be named said she met with Carter and Jordan at the White House, first at 10 a.m. and again at 4 p.m.

She refused to discuss the substance of the talks with even her closest associates.

Nevertheless, they were convinced that she would not be fired and, indeed, had been offered another post, probably a more desirable one.

Speculation also focused on the futures of Joseph A. Califano Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare; Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal; Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger; and Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

Califano was believed to be high on Carter's hit list, according to knowledgeable

Vacation Given Priority

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is almost certain to begin its month-long recess Aug. 3 without enacting much of the energy legislation President Carter is seeking, according to House and Senate members and key aides.

Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger and the president's top domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, went over legislative details with two groups of congressmen Wednesday as leaders of both houses of Congress pledged cooperation to the White House.

But lawmakers and their aides pointed out that the time remaining until the recess is insufficient to get the bills through both houses and then resolve the differences between the House and Senate which are certain to arise on such complex legislation.

And, in the case of bills to set up a "national mobilization board" and to promote development of synthetic fuels, Senate leaders have decided to postpone consideration until after the recess.

The delay will give a special five-member Senate Budget Committee task force, to be headed by Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., time to consider the longterm economic consequences of a huge synthetic fuels program. The House already has passed a synthetic fuels bill.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, W-Va., and House officials agree the bill most likely to reach Carter's desk before the recess is one giving him standby authority to ration gasoline. The Senate approved such a proposal earlier this year, and the House, after rejecting the idea in May, is expected to add its approval next week.

It appears unlikely Congress will enact the windfall profits tax Carter is asking for in the next two weeks, despite a presidential plea earlier this week for swift action.

The bill already has cleared the House, but Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which must consider the measure, has not yet set a date for that panel to act.

In a third important area, legislation is pending in the Senate to promote development of synthetic fuel and establish the national mobilization board Carter has asking for.

But Hart said in an interview Wednesday he suggested establishment of the Budget Committee task force because "we really didn't understand the economic implications of the legislation."

Sandinistas Moving Into Managua; Guard Runs

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The peal of church bells proclaimed a Sandinista guerrilla takeover in much of Managua this morning as hundreds of fearful national guardsmen tossed their uniforms aside and scattered.

Gunfire broke out in the main military headquarters in central Managua after dawn. Some soldiers said guerrillas and guardsmen were battling in the compound, but others said it was guardsmen firing at deserters.

Guard commanders were reported trying to arrange a peaceful and bloodless surrender to the Sandinistas, who triumphed over the Somoza dictatorship earlier this week after a seven-week civil war.

The Sandinista junta was prepared to move into Managua later today or Friday.

Francisco Urcuyo, named caretaker president by President Anastasio Somoza when he resigned and left Nicaragua Tuesday, resigned himself Wednesday evening and sped to the airport.

The Sandinistas reported he flew by helicopter to a "point somewhere in Guatemala," but this could not be confirmed. Other Somoza men who had not escaped earlier fled to the airport, too.

Guerrilla columns had been reported headed toward Managua late Wednesday from rebel held Leon, and few if any guard checkpoints were reported still along the highway.

Late Wednesday and early today firefights crackled in areas ringing central Managua. The gunfire died down at about 4 a.m., and just before dawn church bells in outlying districts began ringing in what over the past few days has become the signal of guerrilla victory.

Explains Carter Order On Temperature Curbs

Reese Helms of Greenville Utilities Commission's Office of Energy Conservation & Management mentioned several key elements of the president's newly ordered Emergency Building Temperature Restrictions (EBTR).

Helms said that the presidential order, effective July 16, places a mandatory restriction of building space and water heating temperatures to certain levels in all non-residential buildings.

According to Helms, all non-residential buildings, public and private, are covered by EBTR with the exception of hotels or other lodging facilities, hospitals and health care facilities, elementary schools (grades K through six), nursery schools and day care centers, and such other buildings as the Secretary of Energy may determine.

Regarding temperature restrictions, the spokesman said that buildings may not be cooled below 78 degrees or heated above 65 degrees. Auxiliary space heaters may not be used to raise room temperatures above 65 degrees. In addition, Helms said that domestic hot water may not be heated to above 105 degrees, or the lowest possible temperature setting, whichever is the highest.

According to Helms, the president's plan contains numerous provisions for exemptions and exceptions in cases where critical temperatures must be maintained for health, industrial process, equipment operation or other reasons.

By Aug. 15, according to the GUC spokesman, the owner or operator of a building must post in a prominent location within the structure a "Certificate of Building Compliance," which certifies compliance with the EBTR requirements. In addition, by Aug. 15, the owner or operator must file with the Department of Energy a "Building Compliance Information Form."

Failure to comply with EBTR, the executive order stipulated, carries a civil penalty of a $5,000-per-day fine or a criminal penalty of a $10,000-per-day fine. The enforcement mechanism has not yet been finalized, Helms pointed out.

Helms said that an EBTR "Information Hotline" has been established: 1-800-424-9122.

He noted that GUCO, through its energy office, will make available copies of EBTR upon request. Additionally, he mentioned, the local office has requested a quantity of the necessary compliance certificates and forms, and will make them available to building owners or operators who do not receive the material in the mail in a timely fashion.

Rep. Preyer Now Convinced Of A Second Gun

GREENSBORO, N. C. (AP) — Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., who chaired a subcommittee which investigated the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, said he didn't want to believe there was a second gunman firing at the same time Lee Harvey Oswald shot the late president on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Texas. "I approached it with skepticism and tried every way I could not to believe it but was compelled by the evidence to acknowledge the presence of that second gunman," Preyer said in an interview.

He said the scientific evidence "was like finding a fingerprint at the scene of the crime."

Preyer said scientific measurement of sounds of bullets echoing from 22 buildings in the plaza where Kennedy was shot pinpointed the sites where Oswald and the other gunman did their shooting.

"Acoustics is such a new science, but it only required a simple application of high school physics," Preyer said. "It was like measuring the echoes of rifle shots resounding in a canyon. You can pinpoint where the rifleman was standing."

Preyer said a diagram of the sounds and where they came from left the committee puzzled by the difference in loudness between the first three shots and the fourth. He said this was explained by an experiment showing the deflection of sound by a police motorcycle windshield.

"The acoustical evidence and other evidence present a whole series of circumstances which would be the most extraordinary coincidence. They match up exactly like a fingerprint," said Preyer.

All of the evidence, he said, is conclusive that "a second gunman fired from behind the grassy knoll."

The shot fired by the unknown second gunman, located on a grassy knoll in the plaza area, was almost simultaneous with Oswald's third shot from an upstairs window of the School Book Depository.

While Oswald's shot struck the president's head, the gunman on the grassy knoll saw Kennedy fall and thought his shot was the one that felled him, according to the committee report.

Industry To Launch A Warning Campaign

By MICHAEL J. CONLON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — With encouragement from government officials, the alcoholic beverage industry is about to launch a major public education campaign on the dangers drinking poses to unborn children.

The message the industry wants to deliver to an estimated 40 million American women is this:

"You owe it to yourself and your unborn child to be informed about drinking during pregnancy and to avoid excessive or abusive drinking. In addition, all who are pregnant or considering having a baby should follow their physician's advice on drinking, nutrition and other health factors."

This theme has been endorsed informally by Richard Davis, assistant Treasury secretary for enforcement and operations.

The campaign will range from public service advertising to educational material directed at health professionals and teachers. It is the latest attempt to address a problem that has been recognized only in recent years — fetal alcohol syndrome.

In its worst form — caused by a pregnant woman drinking heavily — it can result in a child with central nervous system dysfunctions, growth deficiencies, facial abnormalities and other problems.

Experts disagree, however, on how much a pregnant woman can safely drink. One researcher for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said more research is needed to determine the impact on the child of a woman who, for instance, drinks two or three glasses of wine with dinner and a cocktail beforehand.

The Food and Drug Administration has said the syndrome could be a problem even for a woman who drinks moderately but occasionally has more than two drinks a day during pregnancy.

The industry educational campaign is the result of a decision by the federal bureau not to require a warning label on liquor bottles to address the fetal alcohol syndrome problem.

Early this year the bureau said it would use government resources to educate Americans, and asked the industry to do the same. The government effort really hasn't started, but the industry is set to go.

The bureau has not entirely dropped the warning label idea. A spokesman said it may be revived if the educational effort falls flat. In addition, legislation has been introduced in both houses of Congress — as it has been for several years now — that would require warning labels on bottles of hard liquor.

Ten industry groups are involved in the campaign. Officials said it is the first time all have cooperated on one project. The groups banded together as the Beverage Alcohol Information Council are the Association of American Vintners, the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States, the Independent Whiskey Association, the National Association of Beverage Importers, the National Beer Wholesalers' Association of America, the National Licensed Beverage Association, the National Liquor Stores Association, the U.S. Brewers Association, the Wine and Spirits Wholesalers of America and the Wine Institute.

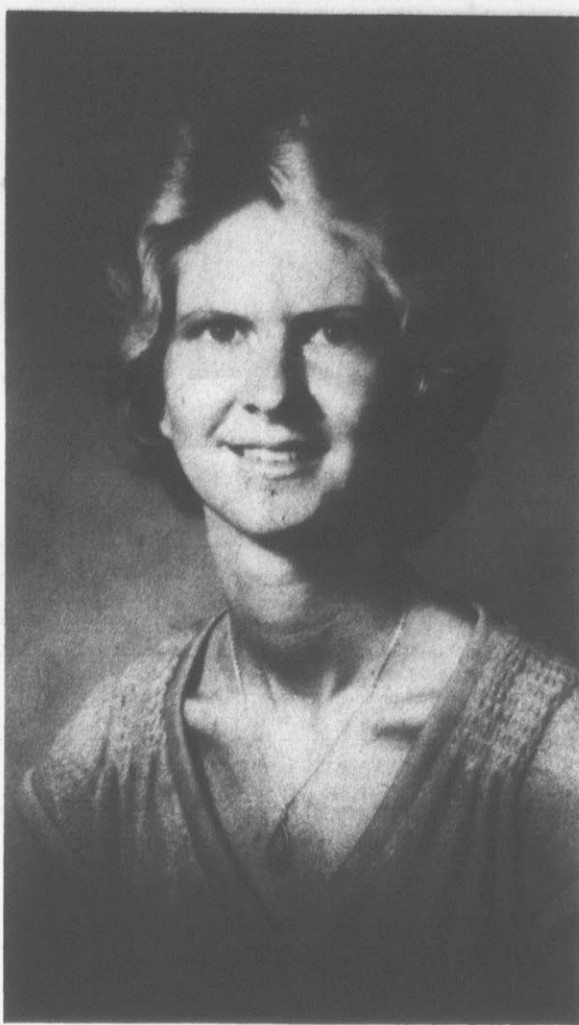

Council chairman Sam Chilcote said the industry believes the warning label approach wouldn't work as well as education.

"I don't care if a bottle is wrapped in warning labels," Chilcote said, feeling that someone who wants a drink will take it anyway. He added the industry hopes to educate drinkers to make a responsible decisions.

The campaign will try to spread its message through clinics, health professionals, teachers, magazines and other avenues likely to be open to pregnant women, including teens and those at the poverty level.

Chilcote said it will be "a people intensive effort."

It could even include pamphlets on the counters of neighborhood liquor stores, and perhaps even discreet signs on tables in cocktail lounges.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Some of the most creative fiction being written today in this country is never published.

Its authors never appear on talk shows, give magazine interviews, or make big deals with the paperback people.

Their work is confined to a small postcard sent from their vacation to the folks back home.

I have never read a postcard where the people were not having the most wonderful time of their lives and were sick that you were not there to share in their ecstasy. The front of the card may bear a picture of a hotel room that is too depressing to commit suicide in, or a lake that features raw waste, but you flip it over and the writer says, "Having a marvelous time. Weather perfect. Food fantastic. Never want to come home. Tomorrow, we tour Paperclip Factory. Love..."

And who has not received cards they pray their postman has been too busy to examine? We always get at least one from a friend who sends a topless native with arrows and a note saying, "Does this remind you of Bernice after two martinis?"

I am not a postcard writer, but I married one. This man, who has not written to his only sister in 20 years, will pore over racks of postcards for hours. Then, ignoring hanging gardens, majestic canyons, prehistoric burial grounds, spacious skies and amber waves of grain, he will continue to shuffle through his cards, matching up the belly dancer to the office bachelor, ruins to one of the kids' bedrooms, a statue with one arm missing to his accountant.

I once tugged at his arm and begged him to watch a child being cured in a miracle bath in South America and he pulled away and whispered, "How do you spell Walter Cronkite's last name?"

Once he gets started the literary juices flow. They spill right out in tiny illegible script on the message side to the address side with arrows pointing over to the front and continuing in a circular movement.

My favorite card was one I picked off the rack. Across the front of the card was emblazoned, "RAISING HELL IN AT-WATER." There was a picture of a 1937 car parked in front of the courthouse, plastic flowers around the war monument, a man pitching horseshoes, and a dog at the bus station waiting for something to leave. I didn't send it. I didn't want anyone to know I was there.

Remembered, But Not In Time

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My younger sister passed away last month and I found a yellowed clipping of your column in her Bible. Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: Will you please remind your readers to look after their parents who are too old to look after themselves? Old parents need all their children. It's not always easy to cope with aging parents, but we weren't easy to cope with when they were raising US, either. We OWE it to them. I just wish someone had reminded ME of these things when Mama was still alive. It's too late now, and I haven't had a decent night's sleep since she died three months ago.

"I knew she had a good home with my sister, so that was that. Why didn't I take her for a few weeks, or even for Sunday dinner, or for a little drive? I never had time for her, yet I had time for others and anything else I wanted to do. A change of scenery or even a meal at my home would have meant so much to her, but I was too busy. Oh, I had plenty of excuses.

"I suppose the only one in our large family who is sleeping is my sister who took Mama to live with her. I've tried to ease my conscience by telling myself that I wasn't really ashamed of Mama like my brothers were. Or that I wasn't cheap, like another sister. I DID buy her things (which she never really needed or enjoyed much.) But it's too late now. I hope Mama forgives me.

CAN'T SLEEP"

Abby, CAN'T SLEEP was my sister. I'm the one Mama went to live with.

It's too late for me to tell my sister that Mama did forgive her. Mothers always do. But I hope you will print this again for those for whom it's not yet too late.

THE OLDEST

DEAR OLDEST: Consider it done. It's always later than we think.

DEAR ABBY: Your reply to HAD IT, who said she didn't have a dime to call her own after working alongside her tight-fisted husband in a family business for 30 years, was WRONG. You said she not only deserved a few dollars to do with as she pleased, but she was ENTITLED to it. Legally, in all 42 of the separate-property states, she's not entitled to one dime for herself!

MAD IN MADISON

DEAR MAD: You're right. I was wrong. I should have said that the wife was morally entitled to her fair share of the profits. Thanks for reminding us that we DO need an Equal Rights Amendment.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Disposing Of His Liabilities

The submission of resignations by all of President Carter's cabinet and some staff created shock both domestically and around the world.

The surprising announcement of the mass resignations came Tuesday. It was certainly apart of the Carter plan to create the image of a new beginning for his administration, and it comes with little more than a year left in his term. The primaries, Democratic National Convention and 1980 election are just ahead.

Of course the fact that the resignations have been requested and tendered does not mean that all of the high officials will be leaving. At such levels of the administration the resignations in effect, are always on the president's desk and the officials can be removed at any time.

At this point, however, Carter knows that public opinion polls show him at a low ebb. He must turn things around quickly or decide not to seek a second term.

The mass resignations are a dramatic way to demonstrate to the public that the president intends to make changes necessary to get things under control.

Unfortunately the initial reaction worldwide seems to have been that the resignations indicate something is drastically wrong in America. The gold and dollar markets quickly reflected this.

When the dust settles it is likely to turn out that the move is merely a diplomatic way of getting rid of some high officials who have become a liability to the president. It won't be long before the public knows which ones.

Early Market Report Unenthusiastic

Early reports on the opening of the South Carolina-Border Belt tobacco markets yesterday didn't exactly carry an air of enthusiasm.

It was generally a slow opening with Stabilization getting a good share of the offering.

Things were said to have picked up later the day, however.

There is still every reason to believe that top quality tobacco will bring good prices this year.

THIS AFTERNOON

N. C. Will Stick To Cars

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Given the pattern in which North Carolina has developed over the years — and the way in which the state's Balanced Growth Policy will shape future growth — individual motor vehicles will continue to be the most realistic method of travel for a long, long while.

This state prides itself on its rural and smalltown composition, with no overwhelming concentration of people in a major urban center.

Homes and small farms dot the countryside miles from the nearest shopping center. Even the cities are developed in sprawling subdivision communities where large lots, winding streets, provide a much desired feeling of spaciousness and country living.

So the transportation picture of the future becomes a major trade-off: change this attractive lifestyle, or continue to rely on the private auto rather than mass transit.

Realistic

Actually the option to stick with cars isn't all that bad, say experts in state government. A car carrying two or more people is both efficient and realistic. It goes when and where the individuals need to go.

Matching that performance at anywhere near a reasonable cost by providing public transit is out of the question. Even where concentrations of population are sufficient to justify public transit, studies reveal that it is totally unrealistic to expect the transit system to make a profit ... or even to break even.

A study committee which has spent the last several months probing rural transportation alternatives for North Carolina has necessarily turned its attention to the poor and the elderly who have a difficult time getting about because they either can't drive or don't own a car.

The time may come when added to that list of people without wheels can be added working families which can no longer afford to operate a private vehicle.

An alternative is already in place, that committee found: about 1,500 vans and buses are operating in North Carolina under sponsorship of various public and private agencies whose mission is to help the underprivileged — Head Start, elderly programs, job training programs, etc. Routes often criss-cross, and there is no cooperation or communication across agency lines.

BILL

NOBLITT

If a system could be built from the pieces which are available, a lot of people could get to work, to shops, to the doctor's office. Given the distances involved, however, it is unrealistic to expect a system operating on a regular schedule. A demand system is most likely.

No System

Another study group last year took a look at mass transit alternatives for the state's small towns and more urban areas. That report toes hand-in-glove with the more recent one on rural transit.

The conclusion: this state is far from being ready for mass transit either connecting urban areas within the state, or in the cities themselves.

"It has become apparent that many communities and citizens are not served by mass transit nor are many of them likely to receive such service in the foreseeable future. The cost of providing such service would be too high — both to the provider and to the customer," that report stated.

The alternative is a "public transit system" as opposed to "mass transit" with principal reliance on carpools, small buses, vans and such.

The message from both study reports is clear: transit systems will have to be tailored to meet community needs in a state with such diverse communities.

Gold's Price Worry

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — As the price of gold raced past $300 an ounce this week, some jewelers worried the yellow metal's lofty stature on world money markets may put it out of reach of most consumers.

Jewelers, who are the major manufacturing consumers of gold, say small buyers will likely change their habits if the $302.40-an-ounce record price reached in bullion markets Wednesday holds.

"People who buy gold jewelry buy it for the same reason they buy any type of jewelry ... for its aesthetic value, not as an investment," said Robert S. Kennedy, president of the Speidel division of Textron and president of the Jewelers and Silversmiths of America.

"But obviously at some point, it is going to price itself out of the market. People will buy lighter-weight materials, gold of lesser carat or gold-filled jewelry," he said.

Not everyone, however, is certain whether the squeeze will also take a toll on small investors who have increasingly turned to gold as a hedge against inflation.

At Citibank, a New York bank that last April started selling $1,000 gold certificates aimed at small investors, reaction to the $302-an-ounce price was mixed.

"Some people have redeemed all or part of their certificates, thinking they will take it and run. We've also had people who are holding on to wait and see what happens. Some people are buying, saying they want to get in on the bandwagon now," said Citibank spokesman Lester Miller.

Investors are charged a premium for gold coins and certificates. The price of a South African kruggerand, the most popular gold coin sold in the United States, was $316 each in retail stores Wednesday, up from $312 the previous day. Certificates usually entail bro-

The Inequitable Treaty

By STEVEN D. SYMMS

There are several critically defective imbalances — all favoring the Soviets — in SALT II. The new treaty permits the USSR to achieve firststrike, war-winning capability. It gives the Soviets a 600 percent missile throw-weight advantage over the U.S. It allows the Soviets to continue building the Backfire Bomber and not count it as the long-range launcher it is. SALT II does count the B-1 which Carter has abandoned. It was to be the American counterpart to the Backfire.

America's ability to verify Soviet compliance with SALT II is seriously handicapped by the loss of our bases in Iran. Gen. Daniel Graham, former chief of our Defense Intelligence Agency has recently stated that we cannot even Verify SALT I, let alone SALT II without our Iranian bases.

Let's examine some of the other major loopholes of the treaty. There is a popular belief, for example, that the SALT II Treaty limits actual numbers of ballistic missiles. It does not. It limits only ballistic missile launchers such as land-based silos and submarine launch tubes. There is absolutely no restriction on the number of missiles that either side could manufacture. The problem that this presents becomes evident when we consider the fact that Soviet SS-17 and SS-18 silos are reloadable. What's more, there is no technical reason why missiles have to be launched from silos; they could just as easily be launched from aboveground, movable launchers which would be very difficult to detect. Thus, it is possible that the U.S. could be faced with a much larger Soviet missile force than expected, one that would not be verifiable by "national technical means of verification", meaning, of course, satellite surveillance.

Also, the treaty attempts to restrict improvements on present ICBM systems, but these restrictions do not apply to submarine-launched missiles. Thus, improvements in guidance and propulsion technology could be tested on these submarine missiles, then transferred to land-launched ICBM systems. Again, technology changes such as these are not possible to detect by satellite surveillance.

Furthermore, in considering the SALT II Treaty, I think it important to give some attention to force capability and strategic doctrine of both the U.S. and the

40 Years Ago Today

July 19, 1939

Indications that Greenville is more solidly behind the tobacco market, its biggest and best industry, more than ever before were in evidence at a meeting last night of the Tobacco Market Committee, composed of various business and commercial organizations and civic clubs of this city.

The meeting was called to continue efforts started at the tobacco dinner held at the college some time ago, and a general air of optimism prevailed throughout the session.

The committee was formed for the purpose of coordinating efforts of every business and professional man in Greenville on behalf of the market.

Representatives of the various civic clubs will report back to their respective organizations on last night's meeting, and each is expected to have its own "tobacco market night."

Other organizations also are planning some program to support the market. From now on, one committee member stated that an intensive campaign will be waged to have every citizen to "talk for the local mart."

THE GALLUP POLL

Esteem For Kennedy Up

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — Public esteem for Sen. Edward Kennedy is currently at the highest point recorded in the 10 years since Chappaquiddick, with three in four giving him an overall favorable rating and 38 percent a "highly favorable" rating.

At the same time, however, Sen. Kennedy has not regained the public appeal he once enjoyed. In a survey conducted prior to the accident of July 18, 1969, in which Mary Jo Kopechne was killed, Kennedy's overall favorable rating stood at 85 percent and his "highly favorable" rating was 49 percent.

In a comparable survey conducted immediately after the accident, the senator's overall rating fell 11 points to 74 percent, while his highly favorable rating dropped 15 points to 34 percent.

Kennedy's ratings declined still further during the ensuing months as debate over Chappaquiddick continued, and his highly favorable rating had declined to 28 percent by November 1969. Then, as now, many Americans felt there were many unanswered questions regarding the accident, among them the question of why it went unreported for more than 10 hours.

Gallup measurements over the next decade showed Kennedy's highly favorable rating remaining within five percent tage points of the November 1969 rating.

A special scaling device called the Stapel Scalometer is used to measure the personal appeal of individuals. The Scalometer consists of 10 numbered squares which range from plus five to minus 5. The top two positions (plus 5 and plus 4) on the 10-point scale are combined to provide a "highly favorable" rating while the bottom two are combined to provide a "highly unfavorable" rating.

This measurement provides an indication of the appeal of the man himself, apart from his relative political appeal as shown in nomination showdown tests against persons in his own party or in trial heats against persons in the opposition party.

Thus it is clear that Kennedy has an impressive degree of popularity in his own right and not merely in terms of being relatively popular when matched against President Carter, whose popularity has slipped to nearly the lowest recorded for a president during the last four decades. Gallup surveys completed prior to President Carter's recent speech show Kennedy preferred over Carter for the Democratic nomination by more than 2-to-1.

How Does Kennedy Compare With Other Political Figures?

Further indication of Kennedy's current personal appeal can be seen in a comparison of his highly favorable rating of 38 percent with those of Gerald Ford (20 percent) and Carter (14 percent).

Impact Of Chappaquiddick

Today's results suggest that while Chappaquiddick is to some degree a negative factor in Kennedy's status with the electorate, the political damage at this point does not appear great.

A recent Gallup Poll gives further evidence that the pact of Chappaquiddick is not particularly strong at present. Among the reasons Democratic voters in the survey gave for prefer-

Strength For Today

THE ART OF UNDERSTANDING

It has been said that to know all is to forgive all.

This expression simply means that no one is in a position to judge the motives of another person. We may decidedly dislike certain things which people do, but we will probably never know for certain exactly why they did them.

All of us do certain things because of who we are. Perhaps some little event in our childhood turned the course of our lives in a direction against which we strove later with great difficulty.

Discipline which was too firm or not firm enough, distinctions between children, the withholding of love — all of these make channels in our lives over which in later years our energy will flow in certain predetermined courses.

If we think about these things, our judgments of others should be softened. If we knew all, we could understand and forgive all.

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — With both the man in the White House and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board conceding that recession is already here or about to arrive, the question of degree now becomes the debate.

Many forecasters expect economic problems over the next year to be worse than foreseen by the White House, and that apparently includes G. William Miller, a Carter appointee who heads the Fed.

Miller told the House Banking Committee this week that he foresees a "moderate" recession, with the 1979 economy shrinking 0.5 percent to 2 percent.

His forecast also anticipates price increases of as much as 11 percent this year and 8.5 percent to 10.5 percent next year, and unemployment hitting 6.25 percent to 7 percent by late this year and 6.9 percent in 1980.

The White House forecast is for a 1979 decline in output of 0.5 percent, a rise in unemployment to 6.6 percent by the final quarter, and inflation of 9.8 percent this year and 8.1 percent in 1980.

Compared with the experience over the past decade, both reports describe a dismal picture, a deeply damaged economy, particularly since inflation is seen as persisting at an unacceptably high rate.

It wasn't more than a few years ago, you'll recall, that recession was viewed as a remedy — a painful one — for inflation. It was said that they opposed each other, countered each other. Or so it was believed.

Other beliefs also have been trampled in recent weeks, notably the administration's view that the economy would luck through, despite the near-consensus among private forecasters that a recession was due.

Many economists still challenge the White House estimates as being too optimistic. Citibank's newsletter, Economic Week, comments this week that it has become more pessimistic than many forecasters.

While "the White House is telling the country that this recession will be mild," it states, "slow moving cash registers are telling a very different story."

Since December, it observes, retail sales have dropped roughly 6.5 percent, or more deeply than in many full recessions.

"And if we hit a streak of bad luck," it concludes, "this recession could vie with the last one (1973-1975) for the dubious distinction of being the deepest since World War Two."

Soviet Union. Our policy has generally been one of deterrence and "mutual assured destruction" — M.A.D. for short. Under the M.A.D. policy, American and Soviet populations were supposed to have no safe shelter and hence be a targeted hostage. Soviet doctrine is one of counterforce, war-fighting, war-winning capabilities. They have made it clear that they intend to survive and win a nuclear war, should one occur. Their emphasis on first-strike weapons, on active mainland defense, on civil defense is clear evidence of this. They have repeatedly emphasized their belief in the political and diplomatic utility of nuclear superiority, while we renounce the utility of nuclear superiority.

This has very definitely been reflected in the attitude of both governments toward the SALT negotiations over the years. It has been said that SALT is really an American show — that there are no U.S.-Soviet negotiations — that the only negotiations are among U.S. officials over what margin of Soviet superiority is acceptable to the U.S. Senate.

This American SALT negotiating attitude is also reflected in the U.S. Senate by such persons as Senator Frank Church, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. He recently stated, "Disarmament is essential to our survival." Such statements by a high-ranking U.S. official can only undermine our posture with the Soviets in negotiating for arms limitation.

We must reject the present SALT II treaty and, instead negotiate a genuine arms control agreement that is completely equitable and that protects the security of the American people.

Motel Fire At Chimney Rock

CHIMNEY ROCK, N. C. (AP) — Fire heavily damaged the roof and upper portions of the Stagecoach Inn motel early today before being brought under control by firemen, Ken Nelon, assistant chief of the Chimney Rock Volunteer Fire Department, said.

Nelon estimated the damage at $75,000 and speculated that the fire started in the area of a neon sign. He said he understood the fire was reported shortly after 6 a.m. by a man who was the sole guest at the time.

Nelon said the motel, a two-story structure with about a dozen units, was owned by Lemuel Oates of nearby Bat Cave. The motel is situated between Chimney Rock and Lake Lure.

Fire units from Lake Lure and Bat Cave assisted Chimney Rock firemen and they brought the fire under control in about an hour, Nelon said.

Prepare Plan Of Evacuation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A new state evacuation plan for nuclear-power facilities will go into effect July 31, Herbert L. Hyde, state secretary of crime control and public safety, told the state Utilities Commission Wednesday.

Hyde said the state has an evacuation plan for Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant near Southport — North Carolina's only operating nuclear plant. That plan covers a five-mile radius around the site, he said.

According to Hyde, the plan that become effective this month will outline general procedures and will contain specific plans for the Brunswick plant. Plans for other plants also will be prepared.

Hyde made the remarks during commission hearings on anticipated energy demands in North Carolina for the next 20 years. Three weeks of hearings are scheduled.

"We just don't have a good evacuation plan for the Brunswick plant," he told the commission. "There were no real plans for mass feeding, shelter, re-entry into the area. There was some confusion about who would handle what." During the Wednesday session, several opponents of nuclear power testified, including two Pennsylvania residents from areas near the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Harrisburg.

A panel of six Public Staff officials also spoke at the hearing.

Eddie R. Mayberry, director of research for the Public Staff, disputed testimony given Tuesday by two Duke University economists. The economists said the Public Staff had overestimated the demand for power in the state through the 1990s.

However, Mayberry said the studies the economists used to back their argument applied to other regions of the nation.

"Our own forecasts were done by our engineering section and it involved quite a bit of study," Mayberry said.

Charge Driver After Chase

Greenville police early today charged Dwight Robert Carter, 19 of Charlotte, with careless and reckless driving, failing to stop for stop signs, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, and speeding to elude arrest, following a chase that led officers along First, Cotanche, Avery, Jarvis and Fifth Streets.

Investigators reported the Carter car failed to stop for 10 stop signs.

The Carter vehicle, officers reported, finally stopped on Fifth Street, 20 feet from the Summit Street intersection after striking a tree at the intersection of Fifth and Jarvis Streets.

Burglar Just Got Sandwich

CLARKSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — A burglar who used Alker Tire & Supply's acetylene torches to try to open a safe apparently left emptyhanded, but not hungry.

Company president P.K. Acker said he found a note on his desk the day after the break-in saying, "The next time leave safe open."

Acker said the cement-encased safe was not opened, but a sandwich was taken from a refrigerator in Alker's office.

"The fellow sat there and ate that," Alker complained.

Hosts Town's Angriest People

KEEPS LETTERS COMING — Ron Dillman charts the course of the Commercial-News as editor of the newspaper in Danville, Ill. He keeps readers interested in the letters-to-the-editor column with a yearly banquet for the writers. (AP Laserphoto)

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Well, Ron Dillman somehow pulled it off again.

He threw his annual bash, a dinner for the town's 100 angriest, most outspoken, most critical citizens, all collected in one room. Dicey. Yet not a single fist fight broke out, not even a respectable shouting match.

The event was his yearly Letters-to-the-Editor banquet.

"It never crossed my mind that anything untoward might happen," Dillman said. "This was our 16th banquet. Every one has been a pleasant, stimulating occasion. Don't forget, these are thoughtful, concerned people."

My, yes. They are the ones who remind us to pray, feed the birds, be temperate and fly the flag on the Fourth.

But they are also the rare ones in this impersonal society who are willing to discipline their thoughts, write them down, sign their names, take the heat and be involved.

In an age of letter-writing machines and recorded phone answers, real human beings who actually take pen in hand fall in the category of an endangered species.

Ron Dillman is the addressee. He is editor of the Commercial-News, the target of the thoughtful, concerned messages that appear daily under the heading "Your Views."

A sampling: "Your readers may be uninformed but are not as dumb as you think." So began Dan Brown's letter. Dan was at the party.

"Where do you get off?" wrote Sandra Purdy. "How can you tell people how to live? Who do you think you are?" Ms. Purdy was at the party, too.

Obviously, Editor Dillman admires plain speaking.

Those are the sort of letters, out of about 899 his paper receives each year, that earn their authors a chance to eat beef (appropriately) with Dillman and his staff.

The idea of throwing a party for the 100 "best" letters was that of a former editorial-page editor, Bob Wright, since retired. Ron Dillman went for it in a hurry.

"We're serious about involving ourselves with our readers, finding out what they expect of us," he said.

"Every two or three months, we pick about 50 citizens at random, sometimes just take names out of the phone book. We invite them to a restaurant and ask them to tell us what we are doing right and what we are doing wrong. We call these meetings accountability sessions. Sometimes they get downright nasty."

The Letters-to-the-Editor dinner was far from nasty.

It was fun. And with such a guest list, conversation was bound to sparkle. Dillman had a reporter stationed at every table, listening.

"You bet we listen," Dillman said. He pointed out one of his dinner guests, Arthur Wade.

Reader Wade had addressed Dillman's "unforgivable sin" of replacing "Our Boarding House" with "Marmaduke" on the comics page and suggested he poll his readers.

Dillman polled his readers. Major Hoople returned.

Senate Office Bldg. Cost Up

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sam Karides, who runs the signature machine in Sen. J. Bennett Johnston's office, does his work at a desk behind a filing cabinet in a converted bathroom.

Johnston, a Louisiana Democrat who heads the Senate Office Building Commission, often describes Karides' working conditions as he argues for more Senate office space.

Other Senate staffers, he claims, are even worse off — 1,700 of them jammed into "substandard and sometimes dangerous" buildings converted from apartments to offices.

Johnston almost lost the argument Wednesday when the Senate, by a tie vote of 47-47, rejected a proposal to continue work on the Philip A. Hart Office Building.

The vote was later reversed and the Senate agreed 49-46 to add $37.5 million to the appropriation for the building, boosting the total estimated price to $142.6 million.

That is almost three times the $48 million estimate used when the structure was authorized in 1972.

The matter of more money

now goes to the House, which last year refused to go along with further funds for the project.

"Maybe they will do it again this year," said Johnston.

The nine-story building, scheduled for occupancy early in 1983, is designed to house 50 senators and their staffs. Each senator's suite will take up part of two floors. The senator's own office will have a 16-foot ceiling. In the remainder of the suite there will be office space for staff, on two levels connected by a stairway.

An Enduring Farmer: 98

GUINEA, Ohio (AP) — Charlie Potts drinks a quart of beer each morning and goes through two pouches of chewing tobacco a day.

His teeth are gone, he uses a stick to help him get around and he sometimes has short dizzy spells. But he tends his 80-acre farm.

Potts, 98, was honored recently as Ohio's oldest farmer.

He dug up a basket of potatoes Wednesday morning.

"Once in a while I feel a little tired," confessed Potts, who still lives on the Clermont County farm east of Cincinnati where he was born Sept. 2, 1880. "But I go. Oh, I go. I get on my tractor and feel a little better."

Potts has the indomitable farmer spirit. During the day, he hates sitting in his 160-year home. When he wants to relax, rain or shine, he sits in his favorite chair and watches over his land.

"I only missed three days I didn't get out last winter," he says.

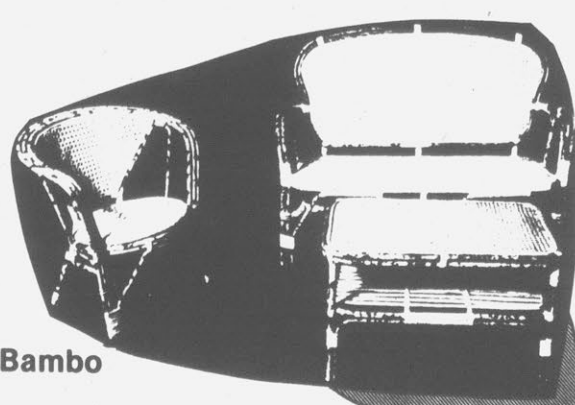

"Sam (his son) says I ain't got nothing to do. I always got something to do. I'm weeding, planting, raking. I've done more raking than anybody in Clermont County."

General Joins Airborne Jump

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Leading his staff, three other generals and several other officers through the doors of a C-130 Hercules aircraft over a drop zone, Lt. Gen. Volney F. Warner participated in one of his final exercises at Fort Bragg Wednesday.

Warner said later a survey was made while the jumpers were putting on parachutes, and it was determined their total experience amounted to more than 10,000 jumps. The jump as part of an airborne demonstration put on by the post for members of the Reserve Officer Training Corps now at summer camp at Fort Bragg.

An announcer explaining parachute operations to the crowd in the bleachers at the edge of the drop zone described Warner's jump as the last one he will make with the troops before reassignment next month.

But following the jump Warner discounted that statement. "I wouldn't say it's my last (jump). I have at least two more scheduled here at Fort Bragg before my departure."

Warner is scheduled to be promoted to four-star rank, the Army's highest. He will then take over new duties as commander-in-chief of the U.S. Readiness Command at Mac-

Dill Air Force Base, Fla. ROTC cadets and other guests saw various airborne demonstrations by Army and Air Force professionals. Included was a low-altitude parachute extraction of a Sheridan armored vehicle as it was pulled by chute from the rear of a C-130 flown by a crew from the 317th Tactical Airlift Wing at Pope Air Force Base.

Cadets also watched helicopter exhibitions and two mass parachute jumps by members of the 82nd division. Later the group watched live-fire demonstrations of weapons manned by division soldiers.

Wrecked In Early Hours

Two early-morning collisions today resulted in an estimated $6,900 property damage, according to Greenville Police Department investigators. Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 1:25 a.m. mishap on Willow Street, 38 feet East of the Elm Street intersection involving a car driven by Larry Keith McLawhon of Bethel, and a parked car owned by Bill Haddock Chrysler Plymouth.

Police, who charged McLawhon with exceeding a safe speed, set damage at $4,000 to the McLawhon car and $500 to the parked vehicle.

A 1:37 a.m. collision at the intersection of Ashe and Willow Streets involved a car driven by Patrick Kevin Speckman of 206 Ashe St., and a parked car owned by John Marshall Cox of Route 2, Behhaven.

Investigators estimated damage at $1,000 to the Speckman car and $1,400 to the Cox auto.

Speckman was charged with careless and reckless driving in connection with the mishap.

'Miracle Baby' In Chapel Hill Birth

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Doctors are calling David Lee Patterson a "miracle baby." David, who weighed six pounds, four ounces, was developed outside his mother's womb. Doctors at North Carolina Memorial Hospital say the live birth of such a baby is "too rare to estimate scientifically." The baby was born Wednesday to Charles and Shirley Patterson of Burlington. The mother and child were reported doing well. It was the second such birth in the United States in less than three months. Doctors attending the first mother said only about 50 births outside the womb have been recorded in medical literature. Dr. Linn Hatley, chief resident of obstetrics and gynecology at the Chapel Hill hospital, said Mrs. Patterson, 32, was transferred there from a Burlington hospital Tuesday night, suffering prenatal complications. "The abdomen felt unusual,"

Ms. Hatley said. "We couldn't outline the uterus, but we thought we could feel parts of the baby, better than we usually can." She said tests confirmed what she suspected — the baby was not in the uterus. Doctors decided on immediate surgery. "When we opened the abdomen, the first thing we saw was the placenta," Ms. Hatley. "Then I found the baby's feet, and the baby started kicking and screaming." On April 25, Miracle Stacy Sickles was delivered by Caesarian section in St. Mary's Hospital at Grand Junction, Colo., after developing in her mother's abdomen. Born 12 weeks premature, Miracle has since gone home and is doing well.

There will be a $5 charge, and all women are asked to wear white in celebration of Women's Day services.

Grand Jury To Hear Evidence

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — District Attorney Dan K. Edwards says he will seek indictments in the wake of an investigation of the vice squad of the Durham Police Department. The State Bureau of Investigation conducted a probe of the vice squad, and Edwards said evidence will be presented to a grand jury on Aug. 6. He also said the SBI investigation produced information that will be sent to the police department "for whatever administrative action they want to take." The evidence might warrant some "administrative change" in the department, he said.

Clifton Kreps Termed 'Stable'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Clifton H. Kreps Jr., husband of U.S. Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, remained in stable condition at Duke University Medical Center Wednesday, according to a hospital spokesman. Kreps has been hospitalized since June 29 for treatment of a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head. Kreps was on one-day leave from N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill when the shooting occurred. He had been receiving psychiatric counseling at the hospital.

The meeting is part of a campaign for volunteers being conducted by the Society to "help locate eye problems in young children and prevent blindness by early treatment." Society President Dorothy Talbot, who heads the Department of Public Health Nursing at the University of North Carolina, said, "If you wish to volunteer to help screen kindergarten, first- and second-grade children throughout North Carolina for signs of future blindness, we can use you. Please send your name and address to "Prevent Blindness, P. O. Box 3852, Durham, N. C. 27702."

Right-To-Life Chapter Sponsor Film Here

The local chapter of North Carolina Right to Life Inc. sponsored a film-showing at Pitt Community College Tuesday evening. The film, "I'd Love Her Back, Though," featured Dr. William Liley, "The Father of Fetology," who described human life before birth. By means of ultrasound pictures, he showed the lively activity of babies from nine to 20 weeks after conception. He said his research tells of the individuality of the preborn child's response and of his violent reaction to pain. He emphasized that the preborn child is not part of the mother's body, that cutting the cord at birth does not separate the baby from the mother, but from the placenta developed from his or her own cells. Another segment of the film featured a British woman doctor now practicing in New Zealand, who told how she has gradually decreased her justification for abortion to "the 'life of the mother' exception. She explained the various methods of abortion. Dr. Hilgers of the St. Louis Medical School gave evidence for the increased rate of prematurity, miscarriage, and stillbirths in pregnancies subsequent to abortion and of the incidence of sterility in women who have undergone abortion. Women who have faced stressful pregnancies were interviewed and told how they managed, with help. Prior to the film-showing, the educational function of the Right to Life organization was discussed. Part of a recording of a speech by Dr. C. Everett Koop, chief pediatric surgeon at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, was heard. He said infanticide is being practiced in our hospitals, euthanasia of an age group, homicide with the law of the land looking the other way. The increasing disrespect for human life was cited as the concern of all pro-life groups and evidence of the need to intensify educational efforts.

Whitfield On Speaker Bureau

Carl E. Whitfield, field representative of the Governor's Highway Safety Program, has been selected as a member of the Speakers Bureau of the North Carolina Operation Life Saver program. The program will concentrate on Railroad crossings accident prevention. It is a program of the N.C. safety council in which William M. Garman is president and Governor James B. Hunt is Chairman of the advisory board. Whitfield will give talks and meet with groups in the eastern part of the state in an effort to reduce accidents at railroad crossings. Some 200 speakers will participate in the program for the entire state.

Gastonia Voters

Kill Bond Issue
GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Voters in Gastonia overwhelmingly rejected on Tuesday a utility bond issue of $5.2 million, but the City Council moved Wednesday to go ahead with some of the proposed work. With about 14 percent of the voters going to the polls, a sewer-bond proposal was defeated by 1,570 to 944 and an electricity-bond issue was defeated by 1,609 to 907. The city council directed its staff Wednesday to develop a plan to finance the sewer portion of the proposal through the sale of revenue bonds. Revenue bonds do not require voter approval, as those on the ballot Tuesday, and would be repaid through increased utility rates.

Truck And Car In Collision

A truck driven by David Michael Merritt of Route 1, Greenville, and a car driven by Johnnie Moses of 1304 Colonial Ave. collided about 6:08 p.m. yesterday at the intersection of 14th Street and Myrtle Avenue. Police Department investigators estimated damage from the collision at $500 to the truck and $200 to the car.

No Threat In Hepatitis Cases

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A rash of hepatitis in Craven County is an isolated local problem that poses no threat to public health, state and federal officials said Wednesday. So far, one man has died from the disease and three persons are in critical condition. Dr. John N. MacCormack, head of the state's communicable disease branch, said he didn't believe the disease would affect the eastern part of the state or even all of Craven County. He said the four men who were stricken by the disease were acquaintances.

Vote Study Of Coroner's Post

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — The Moore County Democratic Executive Committee has requested a study to determine if the office of coroner should be abolished.

The 27-member executive committee, meeting this week, unanimously recommended to the Moore County Board of Commissioners that the study be conducted before a replacement is named for former coroner James Andrews.

Andrews, a Democrat, two weeks ago abruptly resigned the post he has held since December, citing the commissioners' increase the coroner's fees and provide an office.

Under the law, the board has the authority to name a replacement to fill out the unexpired term after the executive committee formally recommends nominees to fill the seat.

Phillip Jackson, county Democratic chairman, said Wednesday that the committee will meet again Aug. 2. At that time, nominations will be voted on so a recommendation will be ready if the commissioners decide to appoint a new coroner immediately.

"If it (a coroner) is not needed, we don't want to spend the taxpayers' money," Jackson said.

"But it looks like we will have to appoint one to fill out the term," he said.

The only way the county can abolish the office is through legislation in the General Assembly or a countywide referendum.

The General Assembly will not meet again until next year.

ADDITIONAL HISTORIES
GETTYSBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Two hundred additional Civil War regimental histories are being added to the collection of 150 such histories already established at the Gettysburg National Military Park.

A referendum, which could be held earlier, was is too costly, Jackson said.

"You'd spend more money to hold an election than you would (spend) on the office itself," he said.

A study of the issue would concentrate on other counties that have abolished the coroner's job and also local voter attitudes, he said.

So far, 81 of the state's 100 counties, including Cumberland County, have abolished the office since the medical examiner system was instituted in North Carolina in the 1960s.

GOING DOWN THE ROAD — Ten-year-old Frank Powell heads home along a quiet street after his day's search through trash cans and refuse bins in Jacksonville, Florida.

TREASURE SEARCH — In the middle of a dumpster near the shipyards in Jacksonville, one can find Frank's head popping up and down. He's picking up and inspecting what others have discarded. Mostly he wants aluminum cans and copper wire.

THE SEARCH GOES ON — Nothing escapes Frank's watchful eye as he searches for discards he can sell. With the money he earns, Frank helps pay for food for his family.

Plan Expand ERA Ranks

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment have launched efforts to start new chapters and emphasize public education about ERA in time for the 1980 elections.

"People who have believed in ERA have assumed too much these past years," said Cynthia Drach, former state coordinator for the National Organization of Women and NOW coordinator for the Carolinas, Florida and Georgia. "Just saying ERA was our first priority without making the necessary sacrifices was not enough."

"We must make ERA as much of a national concern as inflation," she said. Jackie Frost, president of the NOW chapter in Charlotte, said politics should take priority over education in North Carolina, where ERA has failed four times to gain approval of the Legislature.

ERA backers killed the proposed Constitutional amendment in a Senate committee earlier this year after it became apparent that the proposal faced heavy opposition from the Senate. Ms. Frost said NOW members have been making visits to church groups and homes to gain support and political power for next year.

"We felt incredible pressure from ministers in rural areas that swayed some 'yes' votes we thought we had in the Senate in 1979," she said.

NOW members in Charlotte have started a fund-raising campaign featuring the use of plastic medicine containers bearing the label "Prescription for Equality."

MAN DIES — An accident about six miles west of Greenville yesterday involved the death of a Rt. 1, Hookerton man. Trooper Coy Taylor looks over the loaded dump truck after it overturned about 1:20 p.m. Taylor identified the man as Frank Howard Bowen. Bowen, according to Taylor, was traveling east on U.S. 264, when his truck slowed and ran off the right side of the road and overturned. Taylor said witnesses indicated the truck was almost stopped when it overturned on its side. Bowen was dead at the scene. An autopsy was performed this morning and the Medical Examiners' office reported the death certificate indicated coronary arrest as the cause of death. There were no other injuries reported. Members of the Winterville Rescue squad and the Red Oak fire department responded to the call. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Califano First To Go....

HEW source. The HEW secretary, who has close ties to traditional liberal Democrats, has feuded with Jordan from the administration's start. At HEW, sources who declined to be identified said Califano did not know whether he would be fired, but he expected the worst. Aides to Adams and Blumenthal also expressed fear their bosses' resignations would be accepted.

top. Carter's resistance to such a move reflected concern over abuses of power laid to former President Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

Press secretary Jody Powell said Carter told White House staff members that "they should no longer consider Mr. Jordan their peer and they, or we, should act on his decisions as if they were his (the president's) own."

Jordan, 34, summed up in a backhand way his change of status: "I am not the first among equals."

As one of his first steps in his new position, Jordan ordered an extensive review of the government's operations and the work of individual staff members, sending a two-page, 30-question form throughout the federal agencies, according to government sources.

Powell said the personnel review would cover the more than 50 White House employees earning at least $25,000 and every department employee with the rank of deputy assistant secretary or higher.

From the White House to Cabinet departments to public interest groups, a rumor made the rounds that Mrs. Harris was offered Califano's job, but it was reliably learned there was no factual basis for the gossip.

And a top Schlesinger aide, who asked not to be identified, told Associated Press Radio "it is inevitable that President Carter is going to accept Secretary Schlesinger's resignation." Schlesinger told reporters he had no idea about his fate.

It was learned that when the smoke clears from the White House staff and Cabinet shakeup, Carter hopes to become a "teaching president," freed from settling administration bickering to concentrate on long-range national problems.

That goal was reflected in Jordan's promotion to chief of staff, which for the first time in Carter's 30 months in office elevated one staff member above others at the

Border Belt Leaf

Last year, opening prices showed a gain of from $10 to $35 over the previous year in top-quality tobacco with the average registering at $122.42 per hundred pounds.

Despite the day's low prices, few would predict a disappointing tobacco season, saying Wednesday's sales were typical for an opening day. Prices began to pick up as auctions proceeded.

"The sale will begin to settle down," said Bill Williford, sales sponsor for the Lumberton Market. "It's gonna get better. We're gonna have a good year."

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham expressed the same sentiments, saying he was disappointed with the prices the good tobacco brought but pleased at the quality of the leaf on the auction floor.

"From being on the Border Belt tobacco market today and seeing the marked improvement in quality of tobacco hitting the market now, I am concerned and disappointed at the price being paid for the good tobacco," Graham said.

"The tobacco on the warehouse floor this year is much cleaner than that which came on the market early last year. It is the best I have seen on opening day in a long time," he said.

Thirteen of the 17 Border Belt markets in North Carolina and South Carolina held sales Wednesday. Seven of the markets are in North Carolina, including Chadbourn, Fair Bluff, Fairmont, Fayetteville, Lumberton, Tabor City and Whiteville.

Many of the types of tobacco brought only a few cents more than the price-support level Wednesday at the Lumberton auctions. The good quality Graham was referring to brought only 1 or 2 cents more than the price-support level. Last year that same kind of tobacco brought 5 cents more than the support price on opening day.

Several industry spokesmen said sales at the North Carolina markets would have fared better if markets had not opened at the same time in Georgia and Florida.

Usually, the North Carolina Border Belt markets open a week later than Georgia and Florida, an industry spokesman said Wednesday, which usually gives buyers time to get warmed up.

"I would have preferred to wait a week after Georgia and Florida," said Williford. "Anybody starting out has the jitters."

John Cyrus, chief of the state Agriculture Department's tobacco affairs section, said he expected improvement in tobacco sales as the auctions continued.

"I'm sure it will pick up. It takes several hours to really get the feel of it and start buying. These companies haven't bought any tobacco in a year."

Border Trend...

leaves at this time and Stabilization already has an oversupply of the leaf.

Wooten said he was afraid the trend on bottom tobacco would continue, in regard to the opening next Tuesday of the Eastern Belt markets. He added that "we were forewarned" several years ago about the lower leaf demand and "this is bearing out what we were warned about."

The grower said that he hoped the situation would improve when the buyers had had more time to look at the tobacco.

Wayne Stokes, who farms east of Greenville, saw cause for area growers to be alarmed as a result of the Border Belt situation.

He noted that, "The problem I hear was that a lot of the tobacco was good leaf" that brought disappointing prices. Saying that generally the best tobacco brought only $130 to $133 per hundred pounds, Stokes added, "We can't raise all upper stalk tobacco."

Stokes said that if the problem continues down on the Border markets and the market opens here with similar problems, "we will have a tough situation."

Winterville area grower Kenneth Dewes mentioned that very seldom does the market open the way farmers would like and he added, "We are paying so much more to produce...now...it is just frightening to farmers when the market opens poorly."

Pointing out that "prices are just not in line with what we have to have to produce tobacco," Dewes said that farmers are "real uneasy and will continue to be until the situation improves."

He said that he feels the buying companies are just getting an evaluation now of what tobacco is on the warehouse floors and he predicted things would settle down as market activity progresses.

Dewes said that the situation on the Border markets is "not a first down there."

He said there is a concern here on the part of farmers who have tobacco that was not affected by the Smith-Douglass contamination problem, in that those farmers feel "there might be some doubt in the minds of tobacco buyers as to whether some of the contaminated leaf is on the auction floors. Dewes said that farmers hope Smith-Douglass will "go on and clear up" the situation so there will be no doubt in the minds of the buyers.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, said that, "We are certainly disappointed in the (Border Belt) prices, based on the increase in costs in raising a crop of tobacco this year."

Bryan added, "I feel the prices should increase as the sales progress."

Louis Williams, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade sales supervisor, also said that he felt the situation would improve on the Border as auction activity progressed and the better grades of tobacco began to reach the markets.

Williams suggested that the break of tobacco in the Pitt area would be better than the Border's opening day offerings. He said that the average here should be good because of the percentage of lower leaves left in the field this year. Weather conditions also took care of some of the lower leaves of some farmers who did not sign up for the program, he contended.

"I'm still optimistic here in spite of the opening day figures on the Border Belt," he said.

Relief From Area Rain

Scattered showers across Pitt County Wednesday and Thursday brought welcome relief to thirsty croplands. According to the Water Plant of the Greenville Utilities Commission, .04 inches of rain was received Wednesday, with .08 inches received as of 10 a.m. Thursday.

Temperatures ranged from the mid-80's to the low 70's Wednesday, with the river level holding steady at 3.7 feet on the national scale.

Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent Gaylon Ambrose noted that rains had been "pretty scattered" throughout the county, with some areas receiving as much as three inches during a Sunday downpour. He commented that the rains were appreciated by area farmers.

"We've had plenty of rain, but not enough to hurt anything," said Ambrose.

Soaking Arabs

SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP) — Some Americans may feel they are being soaked at the gasoline pump by the Arabs, but a luxury bathroom equipment manufacturer says some Arabs are about to be soaked by some of his products.

Kohler Co. says it has shipped 32 giant bathtubs — each holding 140 gallons of water — to Saudi Arabia.

A company spokesman said the 5 feet by 7 feet tubs, each having two sets of spigots and two shower heads, were shipped to a distributor in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. He said the company does not know who the tubs were ordered for.

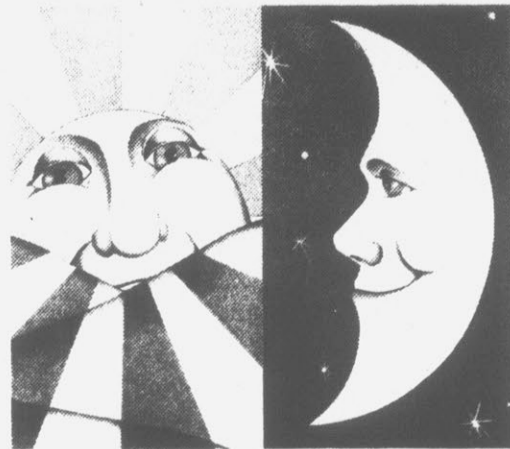

Space Shuttle To Be Quieter

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A sound suppression system for the space shuttle has passed its 10th and final test, placing the project one step closer to a 1980 launch.

The $8 million system is designed to dampen the sound of engines so that vibrations won't affect the cargo. "The test was successful," Howell Row, project director for the launch, said after Wednesday's test. "Everything worked properly in the system."

The system will not be tested again until a flight readiness firing, six weeks prior to launch. The last test of the sound system was on May 21 when a valve problem was discovered.

DO YOUR BIG ELECTRIC JOBS EARLY. OR LATE.

The weekday hours between 10 A.M. and 10 P.M. are the "peak load" hours for Vepco, when the most electricity is being used by our customers and the chance of shortages is greatest.

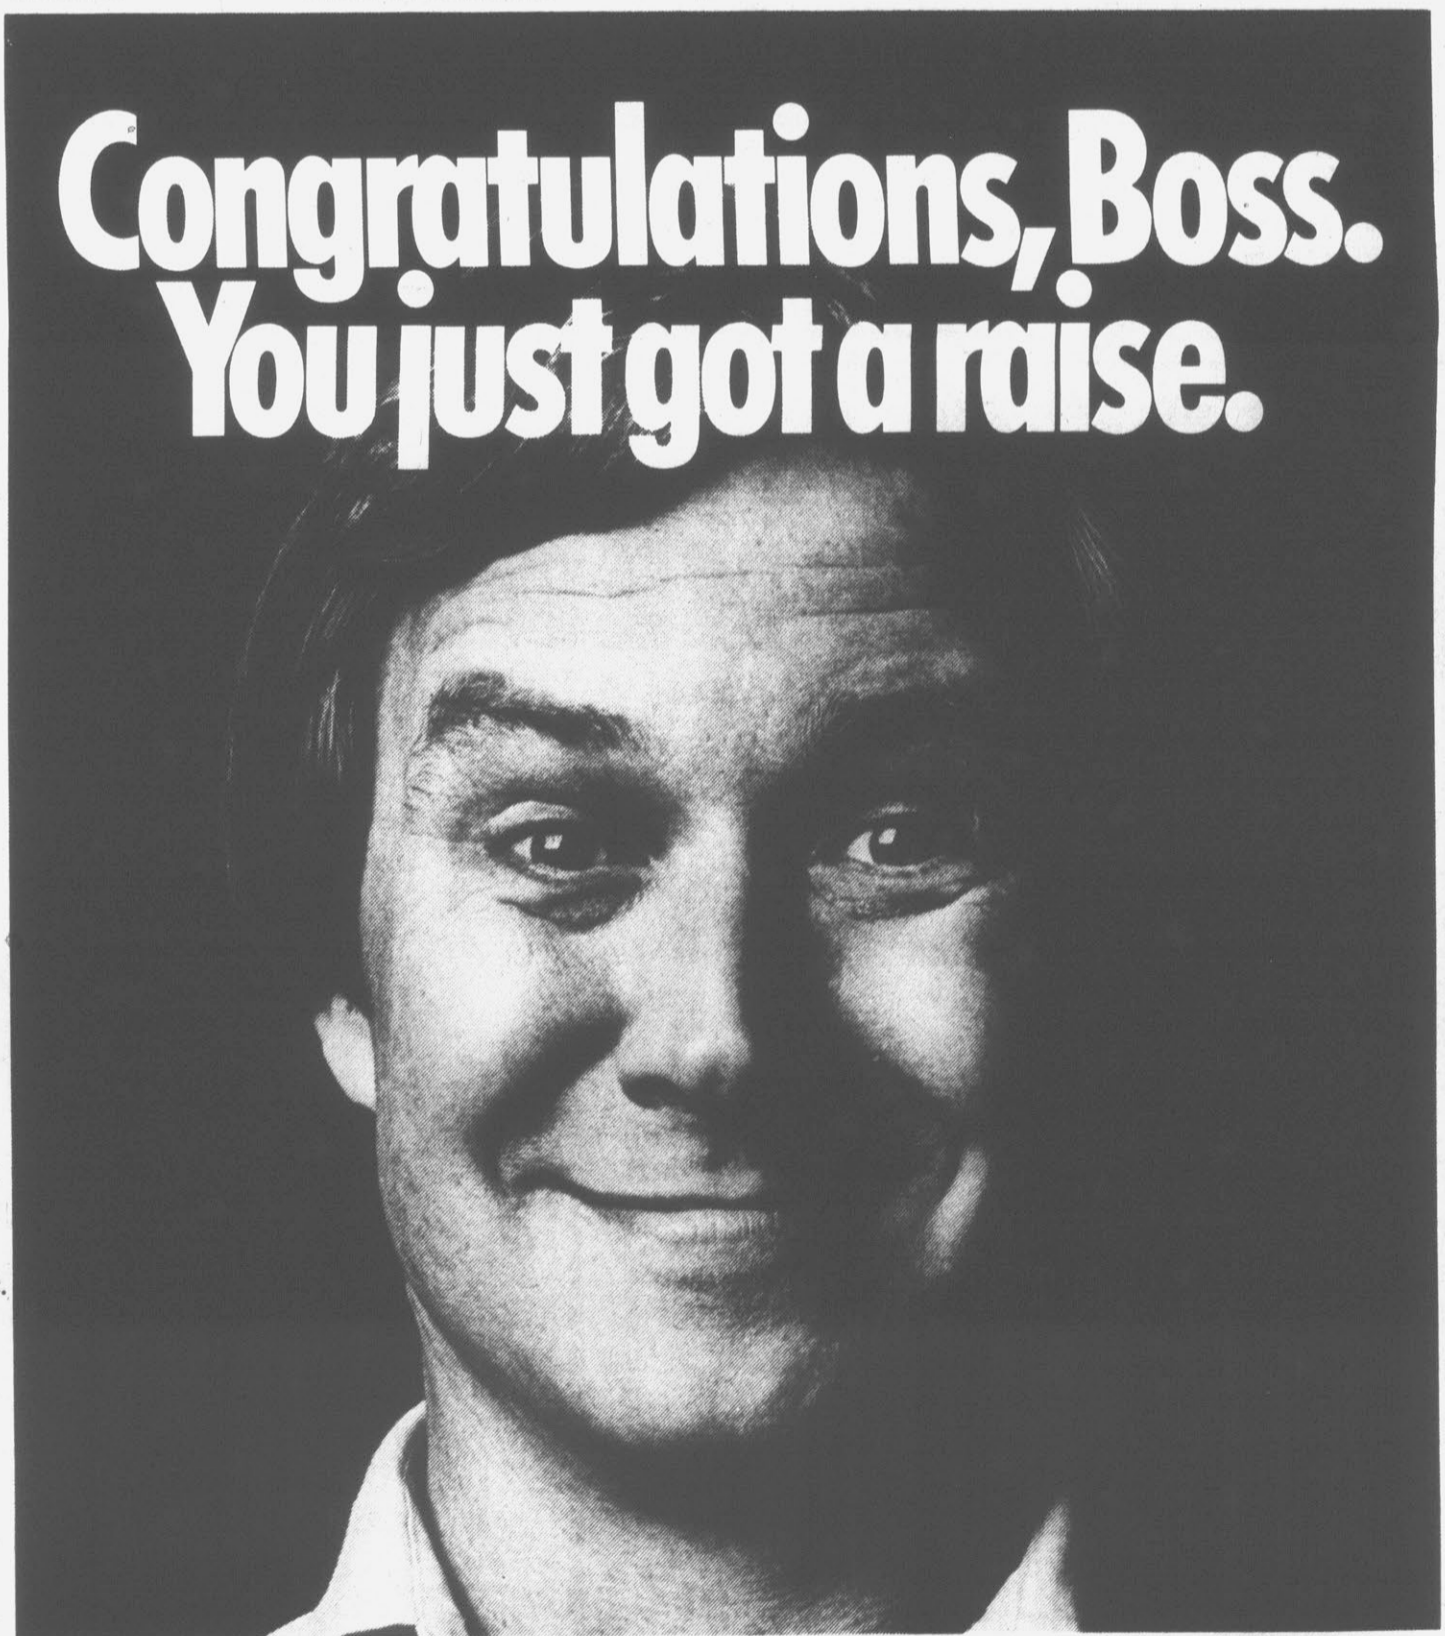

So try to restrict your use of major appliances and hot water during these hours. Do your baking and laundry before 10 A.M. Turn on the dishwasher just before you go to bed. Shower before 10 A.M.

or after 10 P.M. You won't be using less energy, but you'll be using it when Vepco has power to spare. And that will reduce the need to build costly power plants.

You can also take these two big energy-saving steps. First, set your home air conditioning at 78° or higher, or not more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside. Second, don't overwork your water heater. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads, and wash clothes in cool water instead of hot.

By following these tips, you'll be keeping your power bills down, and helping us all make it through the summer without power shortages.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today amid continuing apprehension over the shake-up of the Carter administration and further signals that the economy is slowing down.

 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was off 1.96 to 826.62 at noon.

But advances held a 4-3 edge over declines on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts reported continued worried about the resignations submitted by President Carter's cabinet and top aides. Those worries pushed the stock market down along a broad front Wednesday before a late rally erased most of the losses.

There also was disappointment in the personal income figures released by the government. The personal income of Americans rose a modest 0.5 percent in June, compared with a rise of 0.7 percent in May, according to the Commerce Department.

J. Ray McDermott topped the active list at noon, rising 3/4 to 20 1/4.

The NYSE composite index of the exchange's more than 1,500 listed common stocks was off .01 to 57.75 at noon.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .03 to 194.30.

Volume on the Big Board in the first two hours of trading was 12.50 million shares, compared to 17.45 million shares at the same time Wednesday.

Among other active issues, Exxon rose 3/4 to 53 1/2. Studebaker Worthington went up 1 1/4 to 39 3/4. IBM was unchanged at 69 1/2. Caesars World lost 3/4 to 25 3/4 and Bally fell 3/4 to 40.

Worried About How You'll Look With a Hearing Aid?

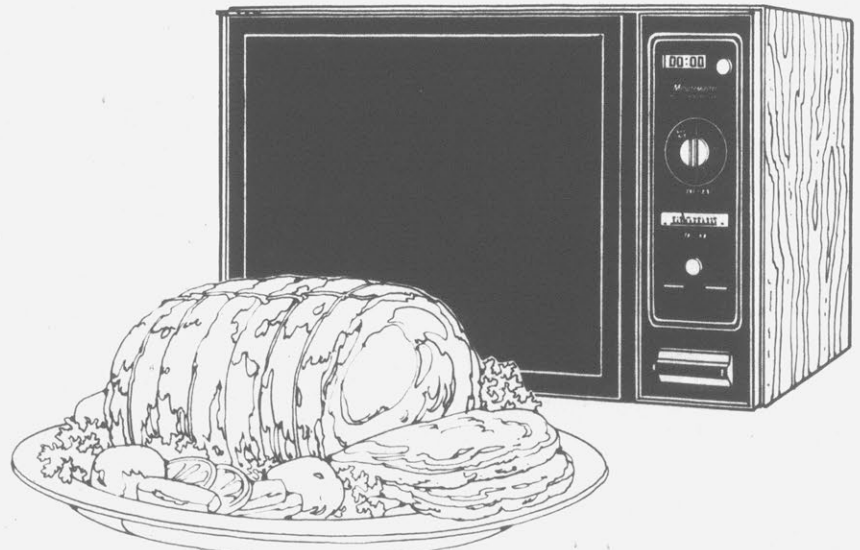

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone requesting it.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9848, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Unknown Longmuir Leads British Open

LYTHAM ST. ANNES, England (AP) — Bill Longmuir, serious contender for the British Open golf title, or one-day wonder? Longmuir, a 26-year-old Englishman, shot a record-equaling 65 in the first round Wednesday to lead a cadre of Americans into today's second round.

so broke he drove a truck to raise money to continue as a player. But the man with the unlikely pedigree hit eight birdies in the first 12 holes over the windy Lytham course to leave second-placed Hale Irwin, the U.S. Open champion, three shots back.

in the first round. It always helps." Pate also found the 25 mph winds troublesome. "The wind blew real good," he said. "It was much harder than it seemed. I have such a long, slow swing and when I get in winds I have a heck of a time."

Pitt Legion Team Drops Opener, 5-4

SMITHFIELD — Johnston County scored on a sacrifice fly with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning last night to nip Pitt County 5-4 in the first game of their eastern semifinal playoff series.

The win gives Johnston County a 1-0 advantage in the best-of-seven event, which continues tonight at Harrington Field at 8 p.m., weather permitting.

Pitt County led only once in the game, but the score was tied at 4-4 going into the bottom of the ninth. Greg Gibson led off with a single for Johnston County and was sacrificed to second by Stanley Adams. Richard Upton reached on a fielder's choice as Gibson held at second and both runners advanced on Pete Norris' bunt, which he beat out. That brought up Tim Barbour, who flew to right field to plate Gibson.

Ben Wilson went the distance on the mound for Pitt County, suffering his first loss of the season in six decisions. He gave up 11 hits and all five Johnston County runs were earned.

The home team used two pitchers. Starter Jimmy Mitchell lasted 6 1/2 frames and gave up seven hits and all four Pitt runs. He was relieved by Clyde Boyette, who went the rest of the way giving up only one hit and being credited with the win.

Johnston County scored first in the game with runs in the third and fourth innings. In the third, Gibson homered with one away. Norris led off the fourth with a single and moved to second on Tim Barbour's out. He went to third on David Bass' base hit and scored when Roger Hudson walked.

Pitt County finally got on the scoreboard in the top of the fifth when three runs came across. With one away, Wilson doubled. After a strikeout, Curtis Spencer walked. Mark Douglas walked and Mike Williams was hit by a pitch to push Wilson across. Spencer scored on a wild pitch and Douglas came in on a base hit by Will Sanderson.

Johnston County regained the lead in the bottom of the frame with a pair of runs. Adams reached on an error to lead off, but was thrown out when Richard Upton hit a fielder's choice. He was sacrificed to second by Norris and Barbour doubled him in. Barbour scored on a single by Roger Byrd.

Pitt County knotted the score in the seventh with a leadoff home run by Spencer, but could not push another run across. Pitt left a total of 12 runners on base.

Mark Shank and Douglas were both 2-4 for Pitt County, while Bass was 2-2 and Norris and Byrd both 2-4 for Johnston County.

Mike Williams is expected to start tonight's game on the mound for Pitt County.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Just two days before the Pan American Games were scheduled to end, U.S. basketball coach Bobby Knight considering withdrawing his team from the competition, according to North Carolina basketball star Mike O'Koren.

O'Koren, speaking at a news conference Wednesday, said that following Knight's arrest in San Juan, Puerto Rico, and the broken jaw suffered by Kyle Macy in a game against Cuba, the gold-medal winning U.S. team met to consider dropping out of the games.

"We would have left last Thursday but we had our hearts set on winning," O'Koren said. "Maybe if it was July 1 I would have have thought about getting out. But since it was Thursday, we already had the bronze and we wanted the gold."

Knight, who faces trial in San Juan Aug. 22, was arrested at a practice session for an altercation July 1 after a scuffle with a security guard.

O'Koren said at that point Knight said, "Maybe it would be better to leave the tournament."

He confirmed that Knight and the security guard did exchange shoves.

"Yeah, it was something that happened like that," he said. "They had six witnesses that said that Knight hit the guy with fists — which didn't happen."

Knight Is A Perfectionist

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bobby Knight has a reputation for driving his players. Hard. The final part of a three part series on Knight looks at his relationship with his players.

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Sports Writer

Whenever Curt Gowdy and Bobby Knight get together, as they did at the recent Pan American Games in Puerto Rico, Knight picks the broadcaster's brain on one subject — Ted Williams.

"Bobby can't hear enough about the man," said Gowdy, a long-time friend of Williams, who dedicated himself to becoming the best hitter in baseball. "He admired the way Williams conducted himself. Ted was his own man. He had a drive for greatness and a quest for perfection."

"In that way, Bobby reminds me a lot of Ted."

Striving for perfection is the essence of Bobby Knight. He demands it of himself and everybody around him. And he expects people to work as hard as possible to get the most out of their abilities.

"The woods are full of guys like you," Knight tells young players attending his summer basketball camp. "You've got to learn to give everything you've got all the time you're playing. The guy who can do that is the one who's going to succeed in the end."

The campers — ranging in age from fourth graders to seniors in high school — know that the experience is going to be fun, but also a lot of hard work.

The dictatorial Knight may be tough on his campers, but that's child's play compared to playing for him at Indiana University. His practices are like basic training in the Army, with Knight the drill sergeant. He has been called dehumanizing by some of his players.

"It was pure hell," said Rich Valavicius, who transferred to Auburn two years ago. "I left because I just didn't want to play in fear of the coach. Basketball wasn't fun anymore."

Valavicius says after he decided to leave, his teammate, Kent Benson, told "me it was the smartest decision I would ever make."

"One time I sat next to Benson in the lockerroom and he was so upset with Knight that his hands were shaking," Valavicius said. Benson was Knight's dominating center on the 1976 championship team. The next year, Benson was a senior, and Knight asked him to play a bigger role as the team leader on and off the court. A gentle man, active in the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Benson was somewhat uncomfortable in that role. He also became more sensitive to Knight's escalating verbal attacks, and the two had a falling out.

"Right now, that's all in the past," said Benson, who came to Indiana last month, at Knight's request, to take part in a scrimmage against Knight's Pan Am team. "We've gotten back together, and we're on speaking terms."

Knight has received much criticism in his eight years at Indiana because 12 of his 41 recruits have transferred to other schools.

Some players say it's because of Knight's brutal treatment of them.

"There was so much mental abuse, it was unbelievable," Valavicius said. "He's always cursing you out. He never hit me, but I've seen him grab a player (Wayne Radford) and throw him against a wall...I was so afraid of my next practice that I couldn't sleep at night."

Knight says most of the transfers leave because of a lack of playing time. "I really believe that all those kids, except two, would have stayed if they had been getting more playing time," he said. "How many times do you hear players in the pros or college say,

Rich Valavicius ...transferred from IU

Play me or trade me? And how many times do they say 'I just wasn't good enough? Now who's kidding who?'"

"You have to be a certain kind of individual to play for Bobby Knight," said Scott May of the Chicago Bulls, who led Indiana to the national championship in 1976. "You have to be a hard worker. But most high school kids are afraid of hard work. They've been babied all their lives. And to play for (him), you have to be able to take constructive criticism."

Some athletes and coaches are appalled at Knight's treatment of his players. He's a tyrant. He'll rant and rave at his players in public or in private. "There's never been a kid here who didn't know what was expected of him," Knight said.

"The older you got, the easier he was to play for," said Jim Crews, a part-time assistant at Indiana who was on the 1976 title team. "It's like your parents. They also get smarter as you get older."

Knight demands his players be intelligent on and off the court. Of the 20 Indiana players who reached their junior years, 19 have graduated. Bobby Wilkerson, the only exception, needs seen credit hours to get his diploma.

Hutchinson Remembered

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

SEATTLE (AP) — Baseball's 50th All-Star game, contested Tuesday in the tight, festooned Kingdom, left its traditional bevy of heroes and memories.

Who couldn't be impressed by the rare sight of Carl Hubbell, still a majestic figure despite silver hair and a halting step from a stroke in 1975 — the lefthander who struck out Babe Ruth, Lou Gehri, Jimmie Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin consecutively in the second All-Star game at New York's Polo grounds in 1934?

And who wouldn't be equally moved at the sight of the game's present day star, Rod

Carew of the California Angels, the all-time vote getter, idled by a thumb injury, telling a luncheon audience of baseball's great and near great:

"We are here not to live history but to make it."

Yet through all of the fun, fuss and fanfare of this parade of the game's finest talent, there was a somber shadow in the background.

His name: Fred Hutchinson.

Hutchinson was a good pitcher — never a great one — for the Detroit Tigers. He grew up in Seattle, son of a doctor. His brother, Bill, went to medical school. Freddie, a big, strong specimen of man of more than 6-feet, wanted to play baseball.

Freddie broke into the Pacific Coast League with Seattle at age 19. He graduated to the big leagues. He never set any marks to earn him a niche in Cooperstown's Hall of Fame.

But he was good pitcher and he had that heart of a lion. Teammates called him "The Bear" because of his size.

When his stout arm began to tire, he became a manager. He managed the Tigers and St. Louis Cardinals, but most people associate him with the Cincinnati Reds, a team he took over in 1960 and led to the National League pennant in 1961.

That entitled "Hutch" to manage the NL All-Stars in 1962 in Washington, D.C. Hutchinon inherited a pretty potent team. His coaches were Casey Stengel and John Keane. His players included Hank Aaron, Ernie Banks, Roberto Clemente, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale.

How are you going to beat guys like that? "Hutch's" NLers won 3-1. Fred Hutchinson was remembered here Tuesday — not for this All-Star game victory but for another achievement in which his was not a physical but an inspirational role.

You see, "Hutch" died in November, 1964, after a bitterly long battle with cancer.

Today a Cancer Research Center in Seattle bearing his name is leading the fight to whip the dread disease.

Game Coverage Similar

An AP TV Sports Column By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Sports Writer

When it comes to baseball, it's getting so you can't tell the networks without a scorecard. Or at least a TV Guide.

You used to be able to watch an inning of baseball and, without checking the dial or hearing the announcers, you knew whether the game was on ABC or NBC.

ABC would show the players without their hats, go for a tight shot of a batter's nose or scour the dugout for a bubble-gum blower — but then blow the big play of the game. NBC would wow you with game coverage, but put you to sleep between pitches.

"There's been a meeting in the middle. The coverages are now very similar," said Tom Villante, baseball's director of marketing and broadcasting. "The two networks are becoming more indistinguishable all the time."

ABC is broadcasting baseball on Monday night for the fourth year, gaining the needed experience to do the job well. Televising baseball is not like televising golf, gymnastics or "Superstars." It takes time for a director to think like a baseball player. If the situation calls for hitting the cutoff man, so should the appropriate camera.

NBC has been on the baseball beat much longer and has veteran director Harry Coyle on its team. The director makes the split-second choice of which camera can best pick up the action at any given moment, and Coyle is considered tops in his profession.

The producer orchestrates the broadcast, arranging for such things as taped interviews and head shots inserted on the screen throughout the game.

But at Tuesday night's All Star Game, NBC showed inserts of the batters coming up, photographing them without their caps, allowed Bob Boone's son to say hello to his mom and zered in on the well-endowed stripper, Morganna, as she ran on the field.

Family Tragedy Seemed To Mark Beaufort Native

By Dr. H. G. Jones
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — It was a beautiful afternoon on that Independence Day in 1879, and Appleton Oaksmith took two sons and four daughters on a small boat trip across Bogue Sound to Fort Macon. They decided to return by way of Beaufort, where festivities were to mark the celebration of July 4.

Halfway across the sound the sailboat suddenly became unmanageable and capsized. Of the seven, only the father could swim.

Miraculously, his son, Randolph, was able to save the younger boy, Stanly, by holding on to floating debris.

All four daughters were swept away. Three bodies were later recovered. The dead girls were Bessie, 21; Corinne, 19; Mildred, 9; and Pauline, 7. Their places of birth, respectively, were New York, Brooklyn, England, and the German sea, reflecting the itinerant nature of their father's earlier life.

Both Bessie and Corinne were accomplished poets, trained, no doubt, by their grandmother. The weekly Newbernian, which often carried their poetry in its columns, printed their last two poems in connection with their obituary on July 12.

The tragedy seemed to exemplify the sad life of Appleton Oaksmith whose 15-year residency in North Carolina left its imprint upon the state.

His real name wasn't Oaksmith. He was born Appleton Smith in Portland, Maine, on Feb. 14, 1827, the son of Seba Smith, who founded the first daily newspaper in Maine, and Elizabeth Oakes Prince Smith, a popular novelist, lecturer, and promoter of women's rights.

Though without formal schooling, the youngster learned four languages and other subjects from his mother, and even as a minor traveled widely. At the age of 20 he became a shipping agent in Panama; three years later he moved to San Francisco in a similar capacity.

Acquiring a ship through a lawsuit, Smith — who by then had taken the name "Oaksmith" — attempted to enter the slave trade, but in 1852 he returned to New York.

In 1856, he became involved in William Walker's ill-fated attempt to establish a republic in Nicaragua, and was given the title of minister plenipotentiary to the United States.

His efforts to raise funds to sustain Walker's filibuster government were not very successful.

Back in New York, Oaksmith was successively a magazine editor, railroad speculator, and paper mill owner. He also became involved with Tammany Hall politics.

Following the outbreak of the Civil War, Oaksmith went to England and captained a blockade runner between Liverpool and Galveston, Texas, furnishing the Confederacy with English goods in exchange for cotton.

Considered a traitor in the north, he remained for several years in England after the war, occupied as a sea captain, associate editor of the London Cosmopolitan, and as correspondent for the London Globe.

In June 1872, Appleton Oaksmith sailed his ship, the "Troubadour," into the Beaufort, N. C., harbor, and settled his family at "Hollywood" near Morehead City.

Oaksmith was a celebrity of sorts in Carteret County. His support of the Confederacy, his national reputation, his international notoriety, and his presumed wealth all were welcome in the defeated South.

At Beaufort he became general manager of a proposed Midland North Carolina Railroad Company which planned to connect Beaufort and Knoxville, Tenn., by rail. He failed.

In 1874, after only two years in the state, Oaksmith was elected as a Republican to the state House of Representatives. His service appears to have been undistinguished.

Among his interests were the dredging of the Beaufort harbor and the building of drydocks so that it could compete against Wilmington as a port.

Mrs. Oaksmith operated a small ships' store on Beaufort harbor.

Financial setbacks and recurring attacks of malaria troubled Oaksmith in the years following the tragedy that took the lives of four daughters. He died Oct. 29, 1887, in New York, still haunted by that July 4 afternoon eight years earlier.

Perhaps as death approached he recalled the ending of Corinne's poem written just before her drowning and published posthumously:

He garners them in his keeping,
However we faint and die,
And the end of earth's sorrow
and weeping,
Is immortality."

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

A new accessory is now available that extends the viewing systems of most popular SLR (single lens reflex) cameras by more than a foot above eye level.

Labeled "Spiratone Periscope Viewer," it literally lifts a photographer above a crowd for clear shooting.

Visualize a long, tube-like device which, incorporates a 10-element optical construction, with an adjustable dioptic eyepiece and rubber eyecup at the bottom, and an adjustable bracket to support the camera at the top. Custom fittings mate the eyepiece of the periscope to most camera viewfinders. And because it has been designed for rotating, it can be used for very low angle shooting as well as shooting around corners.

Still another unusual application is its use for shooting just under the water surface. In use, the camera and periscope attachment are enclosed in a long, clear plastic bag and held under water while leaving the eye-piece and plastic bag opening well above water level.

There must be many non-routine photographers seeking off-beat heights — above and below — in shooting, and one of them was inventive enough to originate this gadget as the solution.

For details, write: Spiratone, 135-06 Northern Blvd., Flushing, N.Y. 11354.

From the same source comes news of the Spiratone Motionmaker, a filter-like attachment which creates a streaking effect over almost half the subject.

With half of the picture sharp and clear and the rest blending off into a comet-like, blurred action finish, the effect is suitable for conveying the impression of a child's wagon or bicycle speeding, a runner jogging, a baseball being thrown or a football kicked.

The effect is produced by a cylindrical lens ground into slightly less than half of the face of the Motionmaker. Like a filter, it comes in screw-in sizes from 49mm to 67mm and in series VII and VIII. When attached to the lens, the effect is seen in the viewfinder and the mount is rotated to select the exact position of the subject which is to be shown "in motion."

When writing for further details (address above), send a stamped self-addressed envelope and include information about the type of cameras you have. For their latest catalog, send 50 cents for postage and handling.

The W. Eugene Smith Memorial Fund has just been established as a non-profit corporation to honor and perpetuate the memory of the late, great photojournalist. The fund will give recognition and support to photojournalists who seek to work in his tradition.

Gene Smith, widely recognized as one of the greatest of contemporary photographers, died last Oct. 15th in Tucson where he was teaching at the University of Arizona. His life's work has been turned over to the University's Center for Creative Photography. He was renowned for his pioneering photographic essays for LIFE magazine and for the combat coverage in World War II during which he was severely wounded.

A primary objective of the fund is to make a major annual grant for a contemplated photojournalistic project, or for a work in progress.

Evangelist Helps Kids With Jailed Parents

By EDGAR MILLER

Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)

— Behind the headlines of violent crime sometimes lies an untold story — the heart-rending tale of children left among the debris of their parents' crimes.

Ike Keyay calls them crime's forgotten children. Keyay knows. He heads what is believed to be the nation's only home devoted exclusively to caring for children of criminals.

The home is Bethel Bible School, on a peaceful 67-acre tract north of Chattanooga. The 48 children there represent some of the most tragic cases in recent Tennessee crime.

Many of the children have seen one parent murder the other. Some have been raped, otherwise sexually abused, or beaten.

Bethel was founded in 1954 by Floyd Hipp, a prison evangelist who was touched by the appeals of prisoners to do something about their children.

He found the six boys of one inmate living under a tree, digging roots for something to eat. Two Chattanooga women donated a house on Signal Mountain, a juvenile judge gave him $25 for groceries and Bethel was born. The original home burned down in 1956 and was replaced by a dormitory to house 57 children.

Keyay, born in Scotland, spent much of his childhood in children's homes after his father committed suicide and his mother was confined to a tuberculosis sanitarium. He came to Bethel in 1964.

"I realized the kids needed more individual attention," Keyay said in an interview. "The location on Signal Mountain was isolated and they needed more contact with the outside world."

In 1968, a 67-acre farm in the Hixson area was purchased and in April 1969 construction of five cottages began.

Today, there are six cottages housing eight children under the supervision of house-parents, a couple hired by Bethel to live in the cottage and make it as homelike as possible.

A seventh cottage is ready for occupancy, and Keyay is looking for a black couple as houseparents so black children can be brought to the school.

"This is our neighborhood," he says with a gesture toward the peaceful cottages. "We want blacks to care for black children because that's the way it would be in a normal situation."

It costs about $31,000 a month to operate Bethel, which hopes to double its capacity in the next few years.

Some of the money is raised by an annual celebrity golf and tennis tournament. Except for about $1,000 from Social Security, the rest comes from spontaneous contributions. The home, non-denominational, has no organized support from any church.

Keyay says contributions range from 10 cents a month from one elderly woman to a three-year pledge of $2,000 a month from a Chattanooga foundation.

THE REBEL ORIGINAL — General Augusto Sandino, who gave his name to the Sandinista rebels in Nicaragua, is shown in a 1934 file photo shortly before he was assassinated by Gen. Ga. Tobacco Growers Advised Keep Leaf Home

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Georgia farmers should keep their tobacco home until prices improve, Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said, blaming American buyers for the low prices that opened this year's selling season on the Georgia-Florida belt.

"I'm disappointed in the domestic companies," Irvin said after the season opened Wednesday with sales and prices well below last year's levels and far short of the record prices which had been predicted.

Some warehousemen cut off sales because of low prices. Many buyers' bids were rejected by farmers.

"I thought we were in a recession, I didn't know we had hit a depression," said Jerome Jackson, sales manager of Producers Warehouse in Tifton.

A total of 2,479,653 pounds of flue-cured tobacco sold at Georgia auctions for $3,061,218, or an average of $123.45 per hundredweight on Wednesday. Florida sales were 239,497 pounds for $290,172, or $121.16 per hundredweight.

Belt totals were 2,719,150 pounds for $3,351,390, or $123.25 per hundredweight, according to the Federal-State Marketing News Service.

That compares with total sales of 4,193,741 pounds at an average price of $129.15 per hundredweight on opening day last year.

Bill Martin of the market news service, said Wednesday's sales figures probably did not indicate actual prices offered because growers rejected "a pretty good percentage" of the offers from buyers.

Most of Wednesday's sales were to the warehousemen themselves, he said.

"We've tried to do everything they (American tobacco firms) have asked us to do and it's very obvious to me they've let the farmers down," Irvin said in an interview in Tifton.

A spokesman for one major American firm had no comment on Irvin's statement and representatives of others could not be reached by telephone Wednesday night.

Irvin said the tobacco companies said they did not want low quality sand lugs, and farmers are leaving those in the fields. He said company spokesmen had indicated they would need good, clean primings and lugs, low-stalk tobacco leaves, but now they're not buying "and when they are, they're not paying nothing for it."

Foreign buyers, he said, simply had not sent in their orders yet.

"It's very evident the orders are not here to establish the market," Irvin said. The record prices, including an average of $150 per hundred pounds, up from last year's record $142.36, were predicted because of comments by company representatives during this year's tobacco meetings, Irvin said.

Two of the warehouses at Blackshear, Ga., closed less than an hour after they opened. The U.S. Agriculture Department's Market News Service said other closings were reported in Douglas, Ga., and Live Oak, Fla.

"I closed the sales after buyers offered prices ranging from 90 cents a pound to $1.25 a pound, when last year the same superior quality of tobacco sold for $1.30 a pound and more," said Joe Boyette, operator of one of the Blackshear warehouses.

"If the picture doesn't change, I won't sell the first pile of tobacco," said Gilbert Stephenson, a warehouse operator in Waycross who was to begin sales today.

Prices for average grades on Valdosta markets ranged from $125 to $130 per hundred pounds, and some farmers complained that companies were buying very little tobacco on opening day.

"I think buyers haven't got the orders right now," said Tift County farm Derris Jones, who refused to let them bid on 18,000 pounds of his tobacco because prices were too low.

"I think orders will pick up," he said. After farmers reject the low prices for a few days, "the companies will start deciding what they have to pay and start paying it."

Locomotive Back Home

PATERSON, N.J. (UPI) — After 73 years and a little maneuvering, Engine No. 299 is back home in America's oldest industrial city.

The 62-ton locomotive, built in Paterson in its industrial heyday, was taken out of the Panama Canal Zone in February and reached here in May to be shown among monuments attesting to turn-of-the-century U.S. ingenuity and technology.

Paterson Mayor Lawrence Kramer was dubbed a latter-day Jesse James for his role in getting the 30-foot-long engine and its 27-foot-long, 20-ton coal car out of the Panama Canal Zone after the Panama Treaty was signed.

No. 299 is one of the last surviving locomotives used in the construction of the Panama Canal. It was among 100 built for the job at Paterson's Cooke Locomotive Works. In all, 144 of the 246 engines used to build the canal came from Paterson.

One of the locomotive mills in the district has been restored, according to Kramer, and a national industrial museum has been created in the area where the eight-wheeled, coal-black engine, stretching 14 feet from rail to smokestack, will be shown.

On learning one of the Paterson-made engines could be found in a museum in the canal zone city of Balboa, Kramer went to Balboa and negotiated the engine's return with the Panama Canal Co. and a committee of representatives from both governments.

The mayor accompanied No. 299 as it was shipped by barge through the canal. When it was safely loaded onto a ship bound for New Orleans, he flew home.

The removal, however, nearly touched off an international incident when a few days later the Panamanian government lodged a formal protest against what it called the theft of a part of history.

"It got to be a big issue for a week or so," says Kramer, recalling Panamanian officials suggested he consider the locomotive as technically "on loan from the people of Panama to the people of America."

However, the mayor would not have it that way, and at the time was quoted as saying: "They have the canal, and we have No. 299."

Opening lead: Seven of ♣.

How would the players of yesterday rank against today's stars? In the bidding, they would probably be at a distinct disadvantage, for there have been giant strides made in that direction. But they would not have to bow the knee to any in playing technique. This hand comes from the 1934 match between France, champions of Europe, and the Four Aces, the outstanding team in North America.

South's opening bid might be a whisker light by modern standards, but that had little influence on the outcome—the same contract would have been reached had South passed and North opened the bidding.

West, French star Pierre Albarran, was in the unhappy position of not being able to lead the unbid suit. His predicament was somewhat reminiscent of the elderly lady who was on lead with a holding of four kings and demanded a new deal because she never led from a king. He chose the seven of spades, through dummy's announced four-card suit.

Declarer played low from dummy and East won the queen. He shifted to a heart, won perforce in dummy. There was no apparent danger, so declarer ran the nine of clubs. At perfect tempo, Albarran allowed the nine of clubs to win!

Intoxicated by his success, declarer continued with another club—and the roof fell in. West peeled off four club tricks for a one-trick set.

We have little sympathy for the way declarer managed the hand, but the fact remains that Albarran employed a spectacular bit of deception. It was apparent to him that his partner held a singleton club and that, against normal defense, declarer would have an easy path to nine tricks. If he won the jack of clubs, he would have to cash the ace and king, or lose one of those tricks, and declarer would have taken the rest. So he tempted declarer with the lure of an overtrick, and found someone who swallowed the bait.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. A Night For Dreamers Of The Future

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Bradbury, dreamer, celebrates the day when the whole world stepped briefly into his element. On July 20, 1969, an earthing stood on the face of the moon. Ray Bradbury and his kind were proven right. The unknown was a wonderful place

Tough times for dreamers, and Bradbury's faraway fancies haven't headed any presidential priority lists lately.

Bradbury tells a story: "I was taking a cruise on the Queen Elizabeth 2 a while back, and I saw (Senator) George McGovern. I went up to him and asked him and his wife for dinner and cocktails. We spent a pleasant hour together that evening, but I came away thinking what 've come to feel about all politicians — they're nice people, but they don't have an idea in their heads. You talk space travel, and they smile at you condescendingly.

Bradbury will be joined tonight by fellow mind traveller and sci-fi writer, Isaac Asimov and futurist Alvin Toffler. They will look back at Apollo, but they will look forward, too.

By the end of this century, Bradbury says, "I think we could most certainly have laboratories in space ... telescopic labs where we could really take a good look at space and see clearly without smog and the atmospheric conditions of Earth.

"We could build bases on the moon and on Mars. We could really move out into the solar system."

Catch this hour tonight. The gas lines will still be there tomorrow. After all, as Bradbury asks, "What's the use of living in this universe if we don't look at the stars?"

Weisberg Proved Flute Goes With Rock Band

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tim Weisberg had any number of problems establishing himself in the rock music firmament, but intense competition wasn't one of them.

There just never has been a huge supply of lead flutists. Of course there hasn't been all that much of a demand either, which was the source of most of the problems he did encounter.

"Everybody told me that it was impossible to lead a rock 'n' roll band as a flute player and still not sing," recalls the rangy Southern California native. "But I decided that I wanted to try.

"So here I am now, about 10 years and 11 albums later — and it's not impossible."

Accomplishing the impossible must be good for your health. Weisberg is 36, but in the cut-offs and T-shirt he wore for a recent interview, he certainly didn't look it. He did look very cheerful, and with good reason.

His album with Dan Fogelberg, "Twin Sons of Different Mothers," has gone nearly double platinum, and his new solo album, "Night Rider," is doing better than any of his previous efforts. For the first time in his career, he's a headliner.

Best of all, he feels he's finally proven what he set out to prove when he turned professional 10 years ago: "That having a flute as a lead instrument is something that can appeal to a mass audience."

Today, that might not seem such an unusual thing. After all, if Jean-Luc Ponty can build an act with a violin, why not a flute?

SUCCESS AFTER TEN YEARS — Tim Weisberg says he struggled for ten years to prove a flutist could lead a rock 'n' roll band. For the first time in his career he is now a headliner. (AP Laserphoto)

But in the 1960s, things were different. Sure, the Beatles used full orchestras, and bands like the Moody Blues featured flute solos. But vocals were the mainstay of rock music, and the odd instrumental hit featured a guitar, piano or horn lead.

Flutists were expected to make their living playing jazz, classical music or John Philip Sousa. Most of them were girls anyway.

Weisberg knew all that when he took up the flute at age 13, but in those days he had no ambitions to play professionally, let alone play rock music.

In college, he got tired of staying on the sidelines while his friends played in rock bands. He dropped his studies and tried to land a record contract.

"I had no agent, no manager," he said. "Nobody's interested in a percentage of something that's not going to make it."

Nonetheless, he was playing steadily. "I had an itinerary that was better than a lot of acts that had albums out, even."

Armed with his list of dates and his determination, Weisberg got his contract, and has been churning out albums and respectable sales receipts ever since.

Retelling Story Of Donner Pass

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Robert Fuller will star as a pioneer desperately fighting to save his family in "Donner Pass: The Road to Survival," an NBC-TV movie dealing with the ill-fated Donner party wagon train crossing the Sierra.

Costarring in the two-hour story of the historic incident — in which cannibalism was a factor — will be Andrew Prine, Michael Callan and Diane McBain.

John Ducette portrays George Donner, leader of the group which lost more than half its members when the wagon train ran into heavy snow in the desolate mountain pass.

Lauren Bacall In Rockford Files

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lauren Bacall, a reluctant TV performer, will guest star with James Garner in a two-hour episode of "The Rockford Files" for the coming season.

Garner says, "We hit on the idea of casting Betty (Bacall) while we were working in the Bob Altman movie, 'Health,' in Florida this spring. Betty expressed interest in our show and I invited her to be my guest."

Bacall's most recent TV dramatic role was the 1977 movie, "The Perfect Gentleman."

Charge Two Sergeants

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Charges of assault have been lodged against two drill instructors who allegedly pushed and grabbed recruits at the Parris Island Marine Recruit Depot.

Gunnery Sgt. Kenneth J. Hibberd, 28, of Mobile, Ala., and Sgt. Edward J. Stengel, 24, of Pittsburgh, Pa., have been relieved of duty, a Parris Island spokesman said Wednesday.

Hibberd's court-martial is scheduled for July 26 and Stengel's for July 30.

Four recruits charged Stengel with assault. Seven recruits made the same accusation against Hibberd. The men were with the Third Recruit Training Battalion's Platoon 3027.

Marine regulations prohibit a drill instructor from touching a recruit except when the sergeant is demonstrating a training movement.

If convicted, they face maximum punishment of reduction to private, six years confinement, six years of forfeiture of two-thirds of monthly pay and bad conduct discharges.

Stengel is a six-year veteran who became a drill instructor in March 1977. Hibberd enlisted more than 10 years ago, and the platoon was his first assignment as a drill instructor.

Top Worry Not Energy

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Even faced with long lines at service stations and gasoline shortages, the top worry of Americans is the ever-rising cost of living — not energy. The Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

Energy remained the No. 2 concern of the public, the poll found.

Americans are slightly less pessimistic about the economic future, even though the cost of living has been jumping at double-digit rates in recent months. But the economic turmoil of the past year has taken its toll, with more and more Americans saying their families' financial picture has worsened.

Thirty-one percent of those questioned said the cost of living was the top problem facing the country today. Energy was cited by 28 percent. This is the same one-two ranking found in other AP-NBC News polls this year.

After inflation and energy came morality, 17 percent; unemployment, 10 percent; crime, 10 percent; loss of national purpose, 9 percent; drop in value of U.S. dollar abroad, 7 percent; taxes, 6 percent; foreign affairs, 4 percent; other issues, 5 percent; and not sure, 4 percent.

The figures do not add up to 100 percent because the respondents were allowed to name one or two major concerns.

The poll was conducted Monday and Tuesday by telephone. The results are based on interviews with 1,600 adults across the country.

Pessimism about the nation's economic future has declined slightly from the low point reached in May.

Fifty-six percent of those questioned said they expect the economy to worsen in the next 12 months, down from 59 percent at the first of May. Fourteen percent said they expect the economy to improve, and 27 percent said the economy won't change. Three percent were not sure.

The public is a bit less pessimistic about inflation now, even though the rise in the Consumer Price Index has not moderated.

Sixty-four percent expect the rate of inflation to worsen over the next year, while 8 percent expect it to get better. Twenty-six percent expect the cost of living to continue at its current rate. Two percent were not sure.

Turning to the effects of inflation on family budgets, the poll found the largest number of Americans in the past three years saying their financial situation has worsened in the past 12 months.

Nearly one-third — 32 percent — said their families are financially worse off now than a year ago, up from 29 percent in March. Twenty-two percent said their financial picture has improved, down from 26 percent four months ago.

Forty-five percent said there has been no change — same as in March. One percent was not sure this month.

As with any sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all American adults simply because of variations in the sample.

For results based on 1,600 interviews, the error margin due solely to chance variations in the sample is 3 percentage points. There is only one chance out of 20 that the results of this survey vary from the opinions of all adults by more than 3 percentage points.

Donkey Hide In Old Medicine

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associated Press Writer
SINGAPORE (AP) — Donkey hide cooked to mullage. Lizard minus the entrails. Human hair burned to charcoal. Fossil of rhinoceros and the three-toe horse.

Part of a recipe from the cookbook of a witch? Not at all. Each is an ingredient prized for some healing quality in traditional Chinese medicine.

Donkey hide reduced to mullage, known by the scientific term "equus asinus," can be used to treat coughs, nosebleeds and several other ailments.

Lizard is said to ease impotence, diabetes and coughing. Incinerated human hair (crinis carbonisatus) treats excessive bleeding. Rhino fossil can be used medicinally for anxiety, insomnia, ulcers, diarrhea and other problems.

These and more than 700 other herbal, mineral and organic items are in a special display at the National Museum. Director Christopher Hooi said it enabled the public "to see, to know and to examine at close quarters what the substances are which they take when they choose Chinese herbal medicine as a means to cure their illness or to lighten the degree of their discomfort."

Traditional medicine thrives alongside its Western counterpart in modern Singapore, where 76 percent of the 2.3 million people are ethnic Chinese.

Systematic Chinese medicine including herbology, acupuncture, massage and exercise therapy was well established by 400 B.C.

"Anything that has been going on for so long and accepted must be useful. But Chinese traditional medicine has developed away from science until it has become almost irreconcilable with the latter," said Western-trained Dr. Gwee ah Leng.

More than 700 shops here dispense Chinese medicine, some of it in direct response to requests from customers, some on prescription written by the more than 500 graduates of the Chinese Physicians Training School.

A Chinese physician diagnoses by first examining symptoms to determine whether the illness should be classed Yin or Yang. This philosophical concept dates to 5000 B.C. Yin originally meant cloudy and Yang sunny. They were believed to be the elements from which the universe evolved and responsible for the balance of life.

If the patient responds strongly to the illness, it is said to be Yang, but if the response is weak, the affliction is Yin, one expert explains.

After the Yin-Yang split is determined, the doctor tries to pin down whether it was internally or externally induced, whether it is a hot or cold syndrome, if it is a chronic weakness or due to virus attack.

"Chinese medicine seeks to look after the entire constitution of the persons because a broth contains 20 to 30 ingredients which strengthen the health of the patient besides curing him," said Chinese physician Lee Sek Khai.

"On the other hand, Western medicine will cure the afflicted part or organ, but it may have side effects that disturb the proper functioning of other organs.

"We advocate a combination of both Chinese and Western medicine so as to have the best of both worlds, such as using scientific tools to help diagnosis to remedy the deficiencies of the Chinese medical approach," Lee said.
