

Carter Begins Reshaping His White House Staff

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, whose reshaping of his White House staff is expected to consume less of his time than his Cabinet shakeup, is likely to return to work this week on energy issues.

"Now that the Cabinet-level changes have been made, there will be additional focusing of the president's attention on the Energy Mobilization Board and the Energy Security Corp.,"

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Sunday. Proposals to establish the board, intended to cut through red tape to speed up development of energy projects, and to create the energy corporation, to finance energy development, were sent to Congress last week. The Senate Energy Committee tentatively agreed Saturday to support the mobilization board.

While he has completed the firings that shook his Cabinet last week, the president is still looking for a new secretary of housing and urban development, a new Federal Reserve Board chairman and a new transportation secretary.

Some of the changes he is contemplating in his White House staff, although unlikely to add any new faces to the inner circle of advisers, may be revealed this week, Powell said.

And Hamilton Jordan, Carter's newly named chief of staff, said today that the president intends to widen "the circle of persons inside and outside government that will give him advice."

In an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" program, Jordan was questioned about the number of Georgians advising Carter.

"The shakeup is not over...." Jordan replied. "It is not an unusual thing for a president to have people in the White House around him from their home state."

He added that the "influence of the Georgians on the staff — myself included — has been greatly exaggerated. My new responsibilities as chief of staff have been greatly exaggerated."

Massacre Story Related By Boat People Survivors

By WILLIAM C. MANN
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Eight Vietnamese refugees say Vietnamese troops massacred 85 other refugees when their crowded boat ran aground on a reef off Spratly Island in the South China Sea.

Parola Island, where they were rescued by Philippine marines.

The attack reportedly occurred on June 20-21 but did not become public knowledge until The Associated Press obtained a copy of a report by the survivors. Diplomatic sources confirmed there was an attack, but the Vietnamese Embassy claimed it had no knowledge of it.

Spratly Island, only 500 yards long by 300 yards wide, is part of a tiny island group claimed by Vietnam, China and the Philippines. It is about 400 miles east of Vietnam and nearly the same distance west of the Philippine island of Palawan.

The survivors included two 15-year-old boys, two former members of the South Vietnamese air force, two fishermen, a mechanic and the owner of the boat. They reported 20 men, 20 women and 45 children were killed or drowned when they tried to escape.

The survivors said they swam about three miles to where the Vietnamese survivors are being cared for.

The survivors gave the following account in their report:

On June 18, 93 Vietnamese boarded a fishing boat from an island off Nha Trang, in southern Vietnam, to flee their country. Their voyage was uneventful until shortly after dusk on June 20 when the boat hit a reef about 150 yards off Spratly Island.

Four men with a life preserver were sent to the island along with two sick children.

One of the four men swam back to the boat and said that men speaking Vietnamese had ordered the group to come closer and then opened fire, killing the other three refugees.

Attempts to float the boat failed and at dawn "the island appeared in front of us as a small one, dotted with some coconut trees. At this point, the communists did not make any move and we innocently thought that we could come in and ask for help."

A man and his ailing mother started for shore with a life preserver but when they were halfway there the men on the island opened fire again, and "the two died in front of our eyes."

"Suddenly, one mortar shell fell right on the front part of our boat, killing 20 persons instantly and injuring many. There was panic on the boat."

"A group of communist soldiers then got out of the bunkers and lined up along the shoreline, using their AK-47 rifles to gun us down one after the other."

About 20 refugees jumped into the sea and began swimming away from the soldiers. When they were several hundred yards from shore, they saw another island they believed to be about three miles away. They headed for the island, which was Parola, but only eight made it and were met by marines from a Philippine garrison there.

Big Oil Threat Easing

BON ACCORD, Tobago (AP) — The immediate threat of pollution to Tobago's beaches from the collision of the supertankers Atlantic Empress and Aegean Captain four nights ago appeared to be over today.

Currents and winds broke up the oil slick and carried it away from the island. There was no longer any significant leakage from the Aegean Captain, and the other 1,000-foot ship was towed out into the Atlantic to let the fire aboard burn itself out. Then the crude oil still aboard was to be transferred to other tankers.

The $45-million, Greek-owned Atlantic Empress was reported a "total loss," 27 of the two ships' 75 Greek crew members were missing and feared dead, and five of the 48 survivors were injured.

The total amount of oil lost could not be determined yet, but it appeared to be less than half the record 54 million gallons spilled when the tanker Amoco Cadiz was wrecked just off the French coast last year.

The two supertankers were reported carrying about 70 million gallons each. The Aegean Captain, which was damaged in the bow, reportedly lost about 4 million gallons. A spokesman for the Mobil Oil Co., the owner of the oil aboard the Atlantic Empress, estimated the maximum spillage from that ship at 20 million gallons, "and much of that was burned away," he said.

A Trinidad-Tobago official said an inquest would begin this week to determine the cause of the collision late Thursday in the open Atlantic 20 miles off the northeast tip of Tobago.

Greenville Market Opening Tuesday

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Greenville will join 13 other Eastern Belt markets Tuesday in launching tobacco sales for the 1979 auction season.

Sales here tomorrow mark the 89th opening of the Greenville Market, which recorded the highest season average in the history of the market during 1978.

In contrast to last year's opening day when area farmers and warehousemen were hoping that high prices being paid on the neighboring Border Belt would carry over here, tobacco people this year hope that Border Belt sales do not influence local results. Border prices and poundage have been down so far this year from 1978.

Tobacco producers in the area have suffered through what has been termed a "trying growing season" this year with weather conditions less than favorable and a damaging outbreak of tobacco disease.

Still, officials are hopeful that Tuesday's first day activity will follow the 1978 opening day trend when auctions set a record figure for the Greenville Market. Local warehouses opened last year with a mark of $119.56 per hundred pounds, up some $33.23 per hundred pounds over the 1977 season opener.

Sales activity here, which is expected to attract tobacco officials from various levels and also state dignitaries, will begin a half hour later tomorrow at 9 a.m. in view of the first day ceremonies.

Gov. Jim Hunt is scheduled to be on hand for the opening day sales activity.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade, said that first sales, with two sets of buyers on hand, will be at Cannon's Warehouse (Set 1 of buyers) and at Farmers Warehouse (Set 2).
Bryan reported that the first set of buyers will be at New Carolina for the second sale Tuesday, at Star-Planters Warehouse for the third sale, at Hudson's for the fourth sale, and at New Independent for the fifth sale. New Greenville Warehouse will have the second sale for the second set of buyers, he added, with Keel's having the third sale, Growers the fourth, and Raynor-Forbes & Clark the fifth.

Lives Salvaged

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — The West German ships Josefurm and Philippturnt picked up 371 Vietnamese refugees in the South China Sea off the southeast coast of Malaysia, the West German Embassy reported today.

The embassy's information officer, Fritz Diehm, said Malaysian immigration officials let the refugees land because they will be resettled in West Germany. He said his government will take in any refugee picked up by West German ships.

West German states have agreed to resettle 5,400 Indochinese refugees from camps in Malaysia and other Southeast Asian countries in the next few months, bringing the total number in West Germany to 10,000, Diehm said.

According to Bryan, the local market will operate with two sets of buyers for the first seven sales days with a total allocation of 5,865,888 pounds. First day allocation has been set at 837,984 pounds, he said.

The tobacco official commented, "With price support up 8.3 cents for 1979, buying companies will be more conscious of tobacco presented for sale." Area farmers were urged to, "Be sure to take the necessary steps to provide a product free of sand, dirt and other foreign matter."

Bryan noted that price support this year has been set at $129 per hundred pounds, compared with last year's price support of $121 per hundred pounds.

"Every warehouse firm in Greenville will have a sale every day during the season," he mentioned. "Under the designation program farmers have designated the warehouse of their choice on the Greenville Market. I would like to urge any farmers who have not already scheduled their sales to please contact the warehouse where their tobacco is designated for sale in order to set up a schedule of sales for the 1979 season."

Gaylon Ambrose, assistant Pitt Extension agent, said that the 1979 growing season was hampered by wet weather and cold early temperatures. Growers also experienced unusual disease problems with blue mold and contaminated fertilizer affected isolated farm acreage.

Ambrose noted that while the contamination problem

WEIGHT LOSING CLUBS

I'm trying to locate a weight-losing club like Weight Watchers or TOPS. They're supposed to be right big organizations. J.M.

Hotline talked to Kay Woolard, Weight Watcher counselor; Carolyn Parsley, TOPS' (Take Off Pounds Sensibly) president; and Lou Whichard, founder of "Overeaters Anonymous."

According to Woolard, Weight Watchers has three classes meeting at 9:30 a.m. and 7 p.m. every Monday at Memorial Baptist Church and 7 p.m. every Tuesday at Oakmont Baptist Church. However, persons planning to join must exceed their weight goal by at least 10 pounds or have a prescription from a doctor verifying that they need to lose weight.

Also, Woolard said the local Weight Watcher's organization offers lifetime memberships after members attend 16 weeks of meetings and after they have attained their weight goal. She said persons joining must be at least 10 years old and added that membership costs $9.

Parsley said TOPS meets at 6 p.m. every Monday in the basement meeting room of Planter's National Bank. She added that persons may attend three meetings free before having to pay a $5.20 membership fee. She further added that an annual $9 subscription fee entitles members to a monthly TOPS' magazine.

According to Parsley, persons joining TOPS must be at least seven years old and also have a prescription from a doctor prior to joining. In the prescription, the doctor must set the individual's weight loss goal.

Whichard said "Overeaters" meets every Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. at Arlington Street Baptist Church. Membership is free, and the club stresses "being honest with yourself." She pointed out that the club is supported entirely through donations of its members. Whichard said persons interested in joining may call her at 758-1419 or Mrs. O'Donnell at 758-5004.

Persons interested in joining either of the three clubs may obtain further information by attending any of the three clubs' weekly classes.

Bitterness Over Tax Revaluation

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — People are so upset over taxes in Burke County that county officials have been the object of threats and insults as well as a few rocks and eggs from angry mobs.

The tax revolt in Burke County was touched off by a property revaluation that saw some property valuations jump as much as 200 percent to 300 percent.

John W. Ervin Jr., nephew of former U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. and an attorney who acts as spokesman for tax protesters, said, "There's just no uniformity in this thing." He cited examples of vacant lots being given a higher valuation than developed property.

Protests over the revaluation prompted the county commissioners to set up a special committee to audit the project by making random checks of land values.

Part of the dissatisfaction resulted from use of computers in conducting the revaluation. However, County Manager Ken Thompson said that "every parcel of land was appraised by a professional appraiser, not by a computer."

But while the revaluation sparked the protests, part of Burke County's troubles result from the fact it is the only county in the state that does not use a 1 percent local sales tax. As a result, Burke County relies more heavily on the property tax than other counties.

Revaluation opponents have hired Keith Snyder, former western district U.S. attorney, to study the possibility of bringing a suit against the county, and Snyder says a suit likely will be filed.

"My clients insist the revaluation was not done properly and that increases (in property values) are extreme," Snyder said.

The county commissioners already have been the object of much abuse. On the night they adopted the 1979-80 budget, a crowd waited outside to hurl rocks at the officials when they left the meeting. Wayne Whisnant, county budget director, was struck in the chest. He was not seriously injured.

Last week, when the commissioners went into executive session, doors, walls and windows outside the meeting room were pelted with eggs.

Farmville Tobacco Market Begins 75th Season

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market begins its 75th auction season tomorrow at 9 a.m.

Warehousemen and growers say they are expecting a good season. Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Louis Williams said. He said pounds will be light compared with last year, but that the price should be higher because of an increase of approximately $9 per 100 pounds in the support price system. He believes growers in North Carolina will have another billion-dollar crop.

The growing season has been short and growers have experienced an excessive amount of rain that has had an adverse effect for some.

Nevertheless, the tobacco crop as a whole is good, he said. He estimated that growers have left about 60 percent of the lower leaves in the fields and this, if any, was the portion affected by too much moisture early in the growing season. The middle and upper stalk tobacco should be very good, he said.

The buying companies say, he said, that demand and price should be good, especially on quality grades. To get top dollar, he reminded, growers must market clean tobacco, free of excess sand, suckers, black leaves and foreign matter. Grades will be penalized approximately 10 percent for excess sand, he said.

There will be seven warehouse firms operating on the Farmville Market this season, 10 buying companies and no speculators. There will be one and two sets of buyers, alternating.

Warehouses include Bell's, Pierce, Planters, Farmers, Tucker, New Blue and Worthington.

Buying companies represented will be American, Austin Carolina, Carolina Leaf, Export Leaf, Imperial, Miller, Monk, Reynolds, J. P. Taylor, and Thorpe-Greenville.

The first sale will be at 9 a.m. tomorrow at Pierce Warehouse. For opening day, there will be one set of buyers' Williams said.

Huge Tree Is Stripped Of Limbs And Branches; Losing A Friend

TREE LIMBS SEVERED — Workmen were called to the old McLawhorn homeplace on the Snow Hill highway Friday to cut dead branches and limbs from what may well have been one of the largest willow oaks in existence. According to Roy Beck,

By REBECCA BUFFALOEE
Reflector Staff Writer

"It's just like losing an old friend," said Kenneth Dews as he watched what may very well have been one of the largest willow oaks in the world being stripped of its limbs and branches Friday afternoon.

The tree, located on the the old McLawhorn family homeplace on the Snow Hill Highway, had been estimated by forestry experts as possibly one of the largest willow oaks in existence, with the two largest specimens located in Maryland and Georgia. Its age was reckoned to be around 200 years old.

Thursday night, Mr. and Mrs. Dews, their daughter, Catherine, and Mrs. Dennis McLawhorn, Mrs. Dews' mother, heard the snapping of branches overhanging the front yard. When they opened the door, a branch was found, "as large as a regular tree," as Mrs. Dews described it.

Frightened that more branches would snap and crash into the house, the family moved in a local motel for the night. Friday morning, Dews called in tree experts to cut the overhanging limbs from the house.

The tree, which had anchored one end of the house since its 1948 building date, had served as a perfect play space for the Dews children. Large azaleas had been planted around its base, forming a picture-perfect setting. In fact, Mrs. McLawhorn had begun a painting of the tree and the house former district conservationist, willow oaks were popular plantings for small cities in eastern North Carolina during the early 1900's. (Reflector Staff Photo by Rebecca Buffaloee) prior to the Friday incident.

Roy Beck, former district conservationist with the Pitt County Soil Conservation Service, had taken an active interest in the tree during his employment, and had written the forestry agent at the state SCS office about the plant.

"It was such a large tree that I wrote our forester in Raleigh to see if he would check its diameter and so forth with the largest trees noted in the Social Registry of Big Trees," said Beck. "It was within a foot in diameter of rivaling the two largest trees."

Friday was a hectic day for the Dews as workmen drove up in the front yard to haul away the severed limbs. Many people just stopped by to see what was going on, and to chat with the family. And in the midst of the scene, Dews tried to ready his harvested tobacco for market opening Tuesday.

Saturday, a crane came from Wilson to cut the large branch overhanging the home itself, bringing a sigh of relief from the family. The tree trunk was left with a few sprouting branches, a pale imitation of the lordly oak it once had been.

No more, at least for a while, would the tree provide shade. As Dews said Friday, "It's just like losing family."

Puts The Blame On Specialists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans angry about the larger bite the Social Security tax is taking out of their pay checks can thank the small group of specialists who designed the program, says a new book.

The book, "Policymaking for Social Security," says the specialists won public support for the program, but created long-term problems by keeping the payroll tax rate artificially low. Author Martha Derthick, a political scientist, says "it would be a mistake now for Congress to take money from general revenues or a tax less visible than the payroll one to bolster the program. That, she argues, would perpetuate past mistakes when politicians and the public thought Social Security could be constantly expanded without high taxes.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of nine boys. Their father is dead. Rudy, 23, is my oldest. He married Agnes, a 15-year-old girl, because she said he got her pregnant. Their baby is 2 now and is the picture of the fellow Agnes went with before Rudy married her.

Their marriage is on the rocks because she is pregnant by a sailor she met when she went to visit her mother in Seattle. Rudy won't take her back because he's in love with a 21-year-old girl who has two babies and is expecting a third by a fellow who isn't her husband although she's still married.

Rudy gets unemployment. He runs all night and lies around my house all day. He acts real crazy. I never know if he's on drugs or just drunk. All right, so much for Rudy.

Jody is my 20-year-old. He got a 17-year-old girl pregnant but won't marry her because he says he's not ready to settle down yet.

Abby, I've been a church-going Christian woman and a good mother and I don't know how I could have turned out kids like these. If they hang around the younger boys, they will be a mess, too. Please help me.

A MOTHER WHO FAILED

DEAR MOTHER: Don't feel guilty. If you've been a good mother, you haven't failed, your kids have. Let the older boys know they can't lie around your house all day. Your problems are too heavy to carry alone. You need to talk to an understanding, supportive person. Your clergyman is ready when you are.

DEAR FORTY: When he (or she) climbs out of the bathtub and is glad to find the full-length mirror all steamed up!

DEAR ABBY: I have a lazy teen-age daughter who has to be reminded over and over again to write thank-you notes for gifts she receives at Christmas, her birthday and, more recently, for her high-school graduation. Now she has a new cop-out. She thanks people for their gifts by telephone. Her grandparents live 1,500 miles away and so do most of her aunts and uncles, so the calls aren't exactly free. She says she will pay for the calls herself, but so far I haven't seen a penny.

Her father was furious when she told us she was planning to thank everyone for her graduation gifts by phone, but we both agreed it would be better than not thanking them at all. Daughter argues that a phone call is much more personal and gives her a chance to ask how they are and to tell them what she is doing, how the family is, etc.

Do you think a telephoned thanks is proper?

MOTHER OF A TEEN

DEAR MOTHER: A written thanks is better. But a phone call is better than no thanks at all.

Avers Begin Should Recover

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin should recover completely from a clot that blocked the flow of blood to a small portion of his brain, doctors say.

Begin entered a Jerusalem hospital Thursday complaining of dizziness and vision trouble. Hospital director Dr. Assa Harel said he was confident the symptoms would disappear completely.

He said Begin would be hospitalized for another 10 days. Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin has taken charge of the government during Begin's illness.

Discover Plants In Antarctica

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have turned up an unusual find in the depths of Antarctica's permanently ice-covered lakes — tiny plants that require less light than any other known plants.

The National Science Foundation said Sunday that Virginia Tech University scientists found the pinkish-orange colored algae thriving in less than one-tenth of 1 percent of the sunlight hitting the surface of the lakes. Most algae don't grow where light is below 1 percent of surface levels, the NSF said. The plants were found in an area of Antarctica that is in darkness four months of each year and in a state of twilight another four months.

CASH PLANNING IMPORTANT

If you are considering the purchase of your first home, you should also consider taking a close look at your financial balance sheet so that your decision will be one of pleasure rather than pain.

Items to take into consideration are, first and foremost, the down payment, settlement fees and moving costs. These will make the biggest dent in your savings. You should have enough margin to draw on for such items as furniture, carpeting, storm windows, etc., if needed.

After figuring what your mortgage payments will be, don't forget to add on the cost of utilities and services that may be included in the rent you are now paying.

FHA and VA mortgages, if available, can be used to keep the down payment low. And don't be shy about asking your Realtor to spell out all the closing costs in advance — on paper. Financial surprises — you don't need!

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at: BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO. 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

DEAR ABBY: My son has a lot of friends, and lately they have been getting married one after the other. Here is my gripe. He has to lay out $48 every time he rents one of those fancy tuxedos the bridegroom has picked out for him to wear to the wedding.

I think if the bridegroom wants his attendants to wear tuxes, he should pick up the tab for the rental. What is your opinion?

PINE BLUFF, ARK., MOM

DEAR MOM: It would be nice if the bridegroom could afford it, but most cannot, so it's customary for each attendant to pay for the rental of his own tuxedo.

DEAR ABBY: I have been considering donating my organs for possible transplant at the time of my death. However, I have heard that the family of the deceased is charged for transportation to the special hospital where the organs are removed, and also for the surgery to remove the organs. Is this true?

If it is, I would rather not donate my organs since I do not wish to add to the expense of my funeral. Thank you. CHEAPSKATE DONOR IN OHIO

DEAR DONOR: There is no charge for transportation to hospitals for the removal of organs. Time is so important in their removal that a donor almost always has to be in the hospital at the time of death. (Corneas must be removed within four hours after death; kidneys within 20 minutes!)

There is no cost to the donor or the donor's family for the removal of organs.

However, when one donates his entire body to a medical school, the medical school bears the cost of transportation in some states. In others, the estate of the donor must pay for it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "BORN TO LOSE": Don't be discouraged by a failure. It can be a positive experience.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Opposition leaders on the Eastern Caribbean island of St. Vincent are appealing to Britain to stop plans for the island's independence Oct. 27.

The honorees received daisy wrist corsages and individual baskets in white and pink filled with summer flowers. The baskets were also a focal point in decorations throughout the ballroom of the country club.

Individual tables featured wicker baskets of summer flowers in pastel shades and brandy snifter containers with floating lighted candles. The bandstand and foyer were highlighted with white trellises entwined with ivy. Ivy in hanging baskets was also used throughout the ballroom.

Music for the evening was provided by John Baicy, who did a tape show, for the approximately 350 guests including debutantes, escorts and out-of-town guests.

Entertaining parents were Mr. and Mrs. James Theodore Cheatham, Dr. and Mrs. James Edwin Clement, Mr. and Mrs. Max Ray Joyner, Mr. and Mrs. James Conrad Lanier Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Sawyer Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lyman Ormond Jr., Mr. and Mrs. David Jordan Whichard II, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen White, Dr. and Mrs. John Gray Blount, Mr. and Mrs. John

Begins With Usual Problems

Tobacco.

The frequently maligned product still is magic in Eastern North Carolina. It is the money crop for our farmers, and the growing of a quality leaf probably takes more of the producer's efforts than any other crop.

Tobacco harvesting has been going on for some weeks. Much of it has gone to the bulk-curing barns and now is ready for sale.

The first day of sales, a festive one, is tomorrow as warehouses on the big Eastern Belt open.

Gov. Hunt will be in Pitt County for the first sales to observe the annual opening. It won't be long before it will be apparent whether tobacco producers are to receive prices that will provide them a profit for the year . . . and their profits will affect the general economy of our area.

The season opens with the usual problems. . . anti-tobacco campaigns, soft prices on the Border Belt, and varied weather during the growing season. Balanced against that is the fact that North Carolina growers work fiercely on quality, and turn out a tobacco that is known and in demand throughout the world.

Farmville's Efforts Are Recognized

Farmville is to receive the Governor's Community of Excellence Award which will be presented by the governor in November.

The award recognizes Farmville's efforts to become more competitive in recruiting industry.

Farmville's efforts in community improvement and attracting industry have been exceptional. The citizens of the community fully deserve this recognition.

THIS AFTERNOON

Assembly Needs A Tunnel

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It flies in the face of public opinion and prevailing wisdom to say so, but the North Carolina General Assembly really does need a tunnel.

What the state doesn't heed, but has nonetheless, is a Legislature growing all out of control toward a full-time, professional bureaucracy complete with hundreds of aides and clerks and analysts.

Given the one condition, then it logically follows that a tunnel connecting the two buildings in which legislative business will be conducted is required.

The tunnel has become a mere symbol: a highly visible hole in the ground into which half-a-million hard-earned tax dollars will be poured.

That is a one-time burial. Vastly more dollars than that are being committed right now to finance the expansion of the luxuries and trappings of legislative office; dollars which will be spent year after year, ever increasing, 'til they mount to a total which makes the tunnel a pittance.

Growing

'The big question is not why a tunnel is needed, but why legislators need so much staff and space as to require a new $8.5 million building when the State Legislative Building only 16 years old was designed to serve Tar Heels well into the 21st Century?

The need for a tunnel is obvious: the new building will be across the street, of course, but also separated by expanses of lawn and landscaping. Tons of paper (research reports, mail, committee proceedings, bill drafts, internal memoranda, etc.) are the energy which fuel the legislative machinery.

Conferences, committee meetings, homework, and office routine will demand a steady flow of paper; a literal train coming and going between the two buildings as shopping buggies and wheeled carts and armloads scurry back and forth. Gov. Jim Hunt's facetious "let them buy rain coats" comment notwithstanding, the tunnel is critical to the flow of bodies and materials.

What happened to bring about this situation? Time was when legislators had no offices at all, in the historic State Capitol. The new Legislative Building deliberately provided a cubbyhole office for each lawmaker large enough to hold only one person. A telephone message center was installed to handle calls; and a typing pool to handle correspondence. Only committee chairmen were given offices large enough to house a lawmaker and a secretary on the premise that committee proceedings required additional help.

BILL NOBLITT

Then, senior legislators pushed through a measure to get a full-time secretary for each. At the same time, a staff of legal and fiscal research analysts was being built . . . tucked away in basement cubbyholes.

Growing

Many freshmen legislators complained that they had even more phone calls and correspondence than many senior representatives and demanded equal treatment, and got it. The staff grew some more. Then, frustrated with using outside expertise (the Attorney General's office) to draft legislative proposals, the lawmakers set up their own Bill Drafting Shop. The staff overflowed to another nearby building.

Now there are 154 Senate employees; 312 House employees; 62 in administrative slots; six bill drafters, 17 general researchers; 25 fiscal researchers; 39 building maintainers; and 29 food service employees (that's 644 employees to 170 lawmakers).

The tunnel will cost half a million. In fiscal 1977-78, the total legislative budget was $3.8 million. In 1981 when the new $8.5 million building is completed, the total legislative budget will be $8.5 million — and growing.

THERAPY TIME-OUT

Helped By Quiet Room

By CHRIS ANGELO

Associated Press Writer MILWAUKEE (AP) — Six-year-old Jimmy is regularly confined in an empty wooden box. It's helping to make him better.

The "quiet room," about the size of a small closet, is being used to treat some severely emotionally disturbed or retarded children.

Jimmy, which is not his real name, had a quiet room at the mental health institute where he spent a year. Now he has two — in his bedroom at home and in his classroom at a public school in Wisconsin.

He sometimes still has to spend a few minutes there, like when he flies into a tantrum instead of obeying his mother. He is always first given a chance to take a "time out," which means sitting quietly on the floor for one minute wherever his mother points.

Sometimes he just cannot or will not do that, not even for one minute. That's when he must go to the wooden chamber for two minutes.

Jimmy's quiet room at home, built to specifications of the Mendota Mental Health Institute at Madison, is six feet tall and about three feet by four feet square. It has an opening in the top for air and light but no lock. There's a clock nearby, which his mother watches.

Forcing a child into isolation in confined quarters is a procedure used across the nation in institutions and by parents and teachers of exceptional children. It strikes many people as cruel.

"Unless it's explained, (it) has the greatest potential to be misunderstood," says James Haessly, head of programs for the emotionally disturbed in Milwaukee Public Schools.

Quiet rooms should be used only in extreme cases, specialists say: children who have frequent temper tantrums when they can hurt themselves or damage things, children who are highly aggressive, hitting and biting other people, or children who are disobedient, rarely if ever following instructions.

Parents with severely-disturbed children support its use, said David Mikuleky, who has taught autistic children and does diagnostic work in the Milwaukee schools autistic program. "They're usually so desperate they are ready to try anything," he said. "The next step is to take the child out of the home."

That was the situation with Jimmy, said his mother, who asked not to be identified.

Before he went to Mendota, Jimmy was uncontrollable. At the age of 4, he did not understand language, banged his head against the wall and showed no affection. Under observation, he had 180 temper tantrums in four hours. He was diagnosed as

Really Is Not So Hot

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Whew! Millions of Americans are searching for ways to keep cool this summer as energy conservation measures boost temperatures in offices and other buildings.

Medical and meteorological experts say there are certain basic rules to follow: Wear loose clothing, for example. Drink plenty of water. Try to slow down.

But the experts also say that keeping comfortable is a psychological as well as a physical problem.

"Seventy-eight degrees (the level required in most non-residential buildings) is not all that hot," said Frank Chappell of the American Medical Association. "You might be a little uncomfortable, but most of the discomfort is going to be in your mind."

There are arguments about who feels worse — men or women. Do iced drinks make you feel cooler than hot ones? Should you take a cold shower or a steaming bath?

"I don't think sex has much to do with it," said Chappell. Lifestyle is more important than gender. You will be less affected by an increase in temperature if you are used to working outside in hot weather than if you spend your days in an air-conditioned office.

Chappell also said it "doesn't make a bit of difference" whether you drink your coffee iced or hot. The main thing is to replace your body fluids.

You will feel better if you sweat — as long as the sweat evaporates. That's because evaporation requires energy, in the form of heat. Too much sweating can be bad, however, because your body can lose necessary salt, creating a chemical imbalance. Salt tablets are generally recommended, however, only for athletes or others who cannot avoid the exertion that brings on heavy sweating. They should be avoided by anyone

Thatcher Clash Warning

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

LONDON — News traveled fast to Washington from No. 10 Downing Street that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, a Conservative with the wit to know her own mind, is not going to be pushed around by President Carter's liberal activists in the State Department.

That knowledge, relayed to Foggy Bottom as Thatcher was deciding to move faster than the Labor government toward terminating sanctions against Rhodesia, poses this word of caution for Jimmy Carter: the power shift to the tough-minded, self-confident Tory now running affairs here could spell trouble between the U.S. and its closest ally. The likeliest source of trouble lies in conflicting policies over Zimbabwe-Rhodesia — but it will not be restricted to that.

Former Prime Minister James Callaghan, one of the shrewdest foreign leaders in understanding the free-wheeling ways of some of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's top aides, smelled the trouble at once. In a telephone conversation with President Carter just after losing the May 3 election to the Conservatives, Callaghan gently but pointedly warned Carter that he would now be dealing with a different cup of tea in Margaret Thatcher ("Attila the Hen" she is called by some subordinates and bureaucrats in awe of her tart tongue and sharp mind).

Be generous, Callaghan admonished Carter, be understanding; there are rough waters ahead, but they can be negotiated and the alliance can take the pressure. What Callaghan was correctly predicting was a clash of wills and policies when Thatcher's Tory ideology collides with McGovernite influences still dominant in key bureaus of Vance's State Department.

The strains will go beyond political disagreements over sanctions and recognition for Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. For example, even though Thatcher gave a quick, public nod to the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II), she has raised far tougher questions than did the Labor government over highly controversial "non-circumvention" clauses of the treaty affecting U.S. weapons and technology support for Europe.

One British official who privately congratulated Carter after Thatcher publicly supported SALT II was surprised at Carter's heated response. Yes, said the president, but I wish she were saying the same thing in private.

Likewise, Thatcher is taking a stand on the Middle East far more sympathetic to the Palestinians' demand for a homeland on the West Bank than the Labor government and many U.S. politicians. This puts her in the generally pro-Arab European camp, adding to world pressure on Carter to start bearing down on Israel.

But the Rhodesian tangle marks the greatest contradiction between Thatcher and Carter's African experts, led by United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young. Thatcher rejected post-election pressures originating not in Carter's White House but in Young's office and the State Department's African bureau. These pressures sought to preserve the discredited "Anglo-American plan" authored by the Labor government.

Indeed, there was anger not only at 10 Downing Street but in the British foreign office — more disciplined and less ideological — over Carter's technically accurate but highly misleading statement

TORTURE OF SEPARATION

The Bible describes hell as being a place of fire and brimstone. Some people accept this literally; others consider that the language is figurative and symbolic. Whichever way you look at it, hell is a thing, or a condition, or a place, of suffering and terror.

But perhaps the most appalling aspect of hell is that it brings about a separation of man from God and man from man. It is the terrifying experience of being forever alone. Sometimes when people throng about us a bit too much we get the idea that we would like to be alone; but we quickly realize that we would not want this situation for long. Eternal loneliness is too dreadful to confront.

But no one needs to experience this unless he chooses to do so. Heaven is God's free gift to our souls. God desires all men to be saved, and to come to a knowledge of the truth. If people go to hell it is their own fault. It is God's intention that they go to heaven.

About Administrative Anxiety

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As the person who defined "administrative anxiety," a debilitating affliction of corporate chief executives, Professor Eugene Jennings was asked this week to explain the condition in detail.

"It is a terrible fear that one has lost control and cannot regain it in time to master events that are tumbling before him," he replied. "It is a loss of confidence bordering on breakdown," he said.

Jennings, confidential adviser to corporate chief executives for 22 years, and author of "The Executive in Crisis," a study of executives who broke down in office, knows the symptoms well.

They flay wildly at people or events they think cause their problems, he said. They blame others, both close associates and distant figures. They react impulsively and uncharacteristically to unforeseen events.

"If the executive remains in power," said Jennings, a psychologist and professor of business management at Michigan State, "his actions lead to massive changes in the personnel reporting directly to him."

"It has been my experience," he said, "that when a chief loses confidence he loses the ability to handle competent people, and the reshuffling brings in less than competent replacements."

He emphasized that "it takes a lot of confidence to have strong, competent people around you." But the chief who feels he has lost control doesn't have it, he said. He is trapped in himself.

The telltale sign of this problem, said Jennings, is that the chief always accuses others of lacking confidence. He is unaware that "it is a projection of his own feelings."

It is not uncommon for chiefs most vulnerable to this anxiety — the dreadful fear of loss of power, control and self-esteem — to centralize authority, Jennings said. "This is one thing they almost all do."

The consequences of such actions, such as rewarding intimates whose own incompetence has helped put events beyond control, reverberates through the corporate bureaucracy. The problems become worse.

"If he centralizes power in the hands of incompetent people, then others below their level will be poorly managed," Jennings observed. The troubled chief executive, he said, is the last to understand this.

If such executives were capable of relying on competent people to bolster performance, the professor indicated, they might improve their lot. But among other things, he said, they are unable to delegate.

What hope is there for the troubled chief? Jennings was asked. He replied:

"I have seen some clients get turned around by fortuitous events that gave them a breathing spell. In the absence of confidence, what is needed is a lot of good luck. I have seen it happen."

Luck, and Jennings suggested, an extended time away from the job — to play, reflect, read, be counseled. Better that, he said, than to bore deeper into the problem.

But, he conceded, there are some jobs in which that is impossible.

Harvest Fuel In Is Not Assured

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As a result of what state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham called an "eleventh hour" change in federal policy, farmers may not have enough fuel to harvest their crops this year, according to state agriculture officials.

Beginning Aug. 1, farmers no longer will be guaranteed as much gasoline as they need to make it through the season. Instead, they'll be allotted the same amount they received last summer.

Deputy Agriculture Commissioner Willie Parham cited pressure from truckers and special-interest groups as the reason the U.S. Department of Energy changed allocation regulations.

Graham said in a statement released Saturday, "Farmers have planted and cultivated their crops with the expectation that they would be getting 100 percent of their current requirements, and now, in the eleventh hour, DOE is telling us that they will be limited to what they used last year.

"A few weeks ago, the special rule giving farmers priority on diesel fuel and kerosene was rescinded, and now this," he added.

Parham said Saturday that the department is "cautiously optimistic" that farmers will have enough fuel to harvest crops and cut tobacco.

Gasoline is used mainly in the operation of small farms, Parham said, while diesel fuel is used to operate heavy machinery on larger farms. Kerosene and No. 2 fuel oil are used in curing tobacco.

Larham said agriculture uses only 3 percent of the nation's petroleum.

was on a relatively small scale compared with several neighboring counties, there were a few instances where the fertilizer hampered production efforts in Pitt County.

The Extension spokesman mentioned that while growers look for a deeply rooted tobacco plant, this season's wet conditions and cooler temperatures have resulted in a stalk that is "not quite as deeply rooted as we would like." Subsequently, Ambrose said, tobacco might be a "little on the light side in weight."

He said, however, that "in general tobacco has been curing up pretty good" and "we are very optimistic to see what will happen tomorrow" on opening day.

Ambrose termed the blue mold outbreak "pretty widespread" across the state and suggested that the fungus disease problem was the worst in history for leaf growers.

They Smoke Less, But Americans Chew More

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Health-conscious Americans are smoking less tobacco these days but chewing more of it, according to figures released by the federal government.

Per capita use of chewing tobacco in the United States has climbed by 20 percent since 1967, while individual cigarette consumption has declined 5 percent. Per capita pipe and cigar smoking has declined even more — about 50 percent.

Last year, more than 6 million Americans bought $2.2 million pounds of chewing tobacco, the most since 1948.

Tobacco industry officials say the increased popularity of chewing tobacco is due to increased outdoor activities. Tobacco chewers are by necessity tobacco-juice spitters, and spitting tobacco juice is something done outside.

"Now, if I'm on my farm in the middle of a field or around a barn, I like to chew, and I like to spit," said state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

"You chew where you can spit. Some folks can conceal it pretty good (indoors) but I've got to have a place to spit.

"It's a custom that's coming back...It gives me a very good contentment," Graham said. "There's a time and place for everything, and I always like to have the time and place for a good chew."

Loose-leaf chewing tobacco — the damp stringy variety that is stored in a foil-lined pouch — accounts for two-thirds of all chewing-tobacco sales, 63 million pounds last year.

Despite the upward trend, chewing tobacco and snuff — the so-called "smokeless" tobacco products — still make up a small part of the domestic tobacco industry.

Smokeless products accounted for only 4.5 percent of the 1.38 billion pounds of tobacco that went into tobacco products purchased by Americans in 1968. By 1978, that figure climbed to 6 percent of the 1.28 billion pounds of leaf in American tobacco products.

Heat brings danger as well as discomfort. According to the weather service, nearly 200 persons die from summer heat and too much sun in a normal year. The death toll in years where there are heat waves rises sharply. In 1952, for example, 1,401 persons died as a result of what is officially listed as "excessive heat."

There is no formal definition of a heat wave. "You get a heat wave when temperatures are above normal for an extended period of time — three, five, seven days or more," said Mike Mogil of the National Weather Service.

Like comfort, however, heat waves are relative. "If you go to Arizona, they'll run temperatures in the 100s, but those people are used to extended periods like that during the summer. If the temperature in New York City were to get 10 degrees above normal for three days, literally, the world would come to an end. The mortality rate would go up..."

With the shift from diversified to specialized farming comes an inherent need for improved pest control.

Despite this increased potential for crop losses, farmers must also operate within a cost-price squeeze, and can no longer afford to apply pesticides on a set schedule, as a preventive measure for continuing pest outbreaks.

The solution for many farmers has been a reliance upon field scouting under an integrated pest management program to provide the best information to base decisions on whether a pesticide application is needed.

Using this information, and scientifically established economic thresholds, farmers can sometimes decrease the number of pesticide applications over the course of a growing season while still maintaining excellent pest control.

In the first years of integrated pest management, even before this term was adopted, many things needed to be ironed out. Some farmers were still skeptical when insects were present at levels below economic thresholds and no control measures were recommended. At the end of that time, however, farmers were well prepared for the infestations. Information and data from experiment stations, entomologists and county extension agents were presented to farmers. Most farmers were confident they could recognize problems and control them as a result of scouting training sessions the previous year.

Uncertainty In Peru's Outlook

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — The military government's refusal to put Peru's new constitution into effect immediately has created a climate of uncertainty in this Andean nation.

A constitutional assembly on July 12 approved the constitution, the 18th in Peru's history, and recommended a set of interim resolutions on human rights be adopted immediately.

But President Francisco Morales Bermudez' military government rejected the resolutions and said it would not allow the constitution to take effect until July 1980.

Some politicians fear the government's action reflects a reluctance to return the nation to democratic rule.

With the recent illness of Victor Raul Haya de la Torre, leader of the centerist APRA Party, the nation is left without the only presidential candidate acceptable to the armed forces.

4-H Delegation Attend Session

A delegation of seven 4-H members and two adult leaders are representing Pitt County at North Carolina 4-H Congress in Raleigh this week.

The Pitt County delegates are among some 1,000 4-H members, leaders and extension agents participating in the annual event. The Congress began Monday with registration on the North Carolina State University campus where delegates are residing. Activities are scheduled for the State Fairgrounds and the Jane S. McKimmon Continuing Education Center.

The program consists of recreation, discussions, competition, election of state officers and fellowship.

"North Carolina 4-H Congress offers an excellent opportunity for personal growth and development," comments Dr. Donald Stormer, state 4-H leader. "It is an event that 4-H'ers look forward to each year with great anticipation."

During the week state winners are determined in some 35 demonstration programs and various judging activities.

Among the events in which Pitt County 4-H'ers are participating are Sr. Archery Competition, Electric Demonstration, Beef Char-Grill and St. Talent Show.

Members of the Pitt County delegation attending are Brenda Roberson, Cynthia Lilley, Amy Tyson, Gloria Hinson, Guy Dixon, Jeff Johnson and Timmy Jognson.

Leading the delegation are John Ward and Mrs. Gladys Avery and 4-H coordinator, Dale Panaro.

autistic.

"This little boy was in his own little world, period, and he did not want to be interrupted," said his mother.

Now Jimmy is different, his mother says.

"He eats with a spoon and fork and does not dump things and does not throw his plate. He recognizes colors and numbers. He can put three-word sentences together. He can say 'I want something.'"

He's also affectionate and on a good day he may have only one or two temper tantrums in a four-hour period, she said.

He usually takes his time out, something she and other mothers say they use at the grocery store, church or anywhere, and doesn't often use the quiet room anymore.

Time out, short for "time out from positive reinforcement," or a situation the child likes, is used as a last resort, said Richard Fox, associate professor in exceptional education at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

It's the reverse of the attention an upset adult often gives a child for improper behavior, inadvertently rewarding him.

The quiet-room part of the method is phased out as the child improves, specialists say. Quick and consistent rewards for appropriate behavior are an essential part of the procedure.

Those who use time out warn about its potential for abuse.

"Unfortunately, some practitioners see time out as the magic bullet. They use it for everything," said Fox.

Among incidents of abuse was the case of two tearhairs in Butte, Mont., who were fired when a parent learned his asthmatic child had been placed in a small, poorly ventilated box. They were reinstated after a subsequent show of parental support.

A child in a Chicago school was left, forgotten by his teacher, in a locked closet for 23 hours.

Some teachers, such as Milwaukee's Peggy Holtman, prefer physically holding the child for his time out rather than depending on a quiet room.

"We're trying to develop a behavioral procedure that could be used anywhere," she said.

Variation Of Chuck Roast

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Take one beaver, dressed and cleaned, drop it in a slow cooker with a little apple juice, cook until well done and, voila — a new variation of chuck roast.

They're tasty little critters, says Carl Mason of Sturgis, Miss., director of the Beaver Cooperative Association — especially spiced with the soaring price of beef.

"People are eating more beavers because they're good and they're free for the taking," he said. "People are interested in getting back to nature. And it's hard to beat free meat."

The association and the state Wildlife Department conducted a study that showed 17,000 beavers were taken in 1976 in Mississippi. Potentially, 100,000 beavers could be taken each year, each a splendid source of lean meat and protein, Mason said.

The aquatic animals are considered pests in Mississippi, where their population has increased tremendously in the past 10 years. Mason said the Wildlife Department study showed 70,000 acres are under water behind beaver dams, up more than 300 percent from 1967, and the loss in flooded timber amounts to $12 million.

about the vote that approved the new Rhodesian constitution. Carter, taking the lead from his African advisers, said on June 7 that "only 60 percent" of the whites "supported the new constitution." That formulation — "only 60 percent" — sought to minimize support for the constitution and Bishop Muzorewa's victory in the widely-hailed April general election.

In fact, the constitutional balloting, with only whites eligible to vote, produced a "yes" vote of 85 percent (in a turnout of more than 71 percent). Carter's aides ratcheted that 85 percent down to 60 percent by adding the entire 29 percent who did not vote onto the negative column, a device that would give Carter himself only 27 percent of the vote in 1976. "Can't they do simple arithmetic in the White House?" one top-level Thatcher official complained to us.

It was not a matter of simple arithmetic, but an American propaganda effort that backfired at 10 Downing Street. Thatcher has now used conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms to convey to President Carter her refusal to extend sanctions beyond their November expiration date. She spent 50 minutes with Helms in an unpublicized July 4 meeting in London; Helms never got close to a Labor government.

Carter understands what has happened at 10 Downing Street. He is likely to follow Thatcher's lead in the former British colony. Whether he does or not, Thatcher is one woman not interested in the woman's prerogative to change her mind.

UN Conference Sees Pledges For Refugees

By PAUL CHUTKOW
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The U.N. conference on Indochinese refugees has ended after producing pledges of asylum for 260,000 of the 400,000 refugees in Southeast Asian nations, $190 million for the relief program, new transit centers and a Vietnamese promise to cut off the exodus temporarily.

"The conference in many ways was a success," said U.S. Ambassador Dick Clark, President Carter's special envoy for the refugee problem, "but all the promises, pledges and initiatives now have to be followed up. Actions will have to do the talking."

That was the thinking, too, of the Southeast Asian nations of

Vandals Face Tape Recorder

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Vincent's family knew he wasn't a bad boy despite his arrest for breaking into and vandalizing a neighbor's home. So Vincent is seeing a shrink.

That's not an uncommon sequence, except that Vincent is a dog — a pure-bred Vizsla with all the intelligence and sensitivity associated with those Hungarian hunting dogs.

Unfortunately, Vincent is particularly sensitive to thunder, and his owner has spent many a sleepless, stormy night soothing and restraining him.

The depth of his problem became evident recently when the 75-pound animal broke from his chain-link runway and careened around the neighborhood, frantically seeking shelter from a storm.

He found it in a nearby home, where he tore through an outside screen, crashed through the glass behind it and rampaged through the house.

Police found the house a shambles and the culprit cowering in a bathtub.

His owner was fined and Vincent was signed up for sessions with Dr. Ceile Washington at the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School's "Companion Animal Clinic."

Dr. Washington decided on a "desensitization" program using a tape recording of a storm. Vincent, who begins to shiver and hide before humans even hear the distant rumble of thunder, is being forced to face his phobia.

"We will first have the sound barely audible and have the owner pat the dog. Then we will turn it up slowly. When the dog shows anxiety, we will turn it down again," she explained. "Vincent will be rewarded with petting as long as he is calm. As soon as he shows anxiety, the 'reward' is removed."

"first asylum" — Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines and Singapore which, with Hong Kong, have been flooded with those who have fled from Vietnam and Cambodia. These governments brought the refugee problem to a crisis by refusing to accept any more.

The conference's pledges were "altogether encouraging," said Malaysian Home Minister Ghazalie Shafie, but there must now be "some dramatic development to make the deeds match the words."

Despite Vietnam's promise to try to stop what it called the "illegal departures," the other Southeast Asian countries still refused to comply with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's appeal that they lift their blockade against further refugee boats. Refugee officials in Malaysia said 400 Vietnamese who landed there a month ago were towed out to sea Saturday, the last day of the two-day Geneva conference.

Other reports from Southeast Asia said there had been a big drop in the number of refugees landing on the coasts and islands of Indonesia and Malaysia. Vietnamese Deputy Foreign Minister Phan Hien assured delegates and journalists this was a demonstration of Hanoi's "good will." He said it was the result of increased coastal surveillance.

But many of the Western and Southeast Asian delegates were skeptical. Some said the decrease was a "negotiating tactic." Others said the start of the monsoon rains in the South China Sea probably were discouraging would-be refugees from attempting the dangerous voyage.

Singapore Foreign Minister S. Rajaratnam said the drop disproved Vietnam's claim that it has no control over the exodus.

"If they can turn off the flow for a few days, they can turn it off permanently," he said.

Florida Judge Overrides Test

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Gary finished high school this past spring. But instead of a high-school diploma, he earned only a "certificate of completion" because he was one of 5,300 Florida teen-agers who flunked the state's competency test.

However, 10 days ago in a ruling that could bolster legal cases against North Carolina's new competency-testing program, a federal judge in Tampa, Fla., ordered Florida officials to give diplomas to Gary and the other seniors who failed the competency test.

U.S. District Judge George Carr also postponed use of the test as a graduation requirement for four years. Florida officials are considering an appeal.

Meanwhile, North Carolina critics of the competency test are awaiting copies of Carr's decision.

"We feel it is a landmark decision and we can use it as a standard for our position," said Richard Mizelle, chairman of the N.C. Black Caucus's Education Committee.

That committee is studying its chances of defeating the North Carolina test in court, Mizelle said. The test, which high school seniors must pass to get their diplomas beginning next year, is also under scrutiny by a state NAACP task force.

North Carolina officials, including Gov. Jim Hunt, say this state's test will stand up in court.

"I'm confident our competency test is going to withstand legal tests because ours is better," Hunt said last week after learning of the Florida decision. "It's been done better and it's fairer."

North Carolina's competency-test law has already been challenged in court once. The suit was dismissed last May because the plaintiff, an Edgecombe County student, turned out to be a sophomore, not a junior or senior.

Severe Storms In Section Of State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A severe thunderstorm packing torrential rain, hail and lightning flooded highways, damaged crops and set a house afire in northeastern Wake County Sunday evening.

Flooding stalled dozens of cars on portions of U.S. 401 and Jonesville Road near Rolesville as streams and ponds overflowed.

Water 1½ feet deep made the intersection at Wake Crossroads eight miles north of Raleigh impassable.

There were no reports of serious highway accidents. "It was a terrific storm," said Frank Pearce Jr. of the Rolesville Rural Fire Department. "I've never seen anything like it."

The National Weather Service issued a tornado warning for adjoining Franklin County after Wake County deputy sheriffs spotted a funnel cloud near the county line.

Franklin County deputies said lightning set a utility pole afire in Louisburg, but no substantial damage was reported in the county.

Lynn Woodlief said four inches of rain were recorded on a gauge at her family's farm near Rolesville. Pearce and Miss Woodlief said tobacco and corn crops were blown over on a number of farms.

Delays Decision On Resignation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leonel J. Castillo is putting off making a decision on whether to resign as head of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Castillo, the agency's first Hispanic commissioner, says he is delaying his decision for a couple of weeks because of President Carter's recent Cabinet shakeup. "I'm going to just let the dust settle before I decide," he said in a recent interview. If he steps down, Castillo said he will go back to Texas, possibly to run for political office. He has held the INS post since 1977.

Summer, when all the air conditioners are humming, is the time when our customers use more power than at any other time of year. To meet the demand this summer, you can be sure that we'll be doing everything we can to provide you with all the power you need. We'll be using our available units to capacity, and if necessary, we'll be buying power from our neighboring utilities.

If you pitch in by following the steps below, you can help us make it through the summer.

1 Don't overcool your home. Set your home air conditioner's thermostat at 78° or higher, or not more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside, whichever is the higher setting.

For every degree cooler than 78°, your air conditioner uses about 5% more energy. So a 73° setting means you're using 25% more energy than you would at a 78° setting.

By watching your thermostat, you'll save energy at a time when it's most important.

And you'll save money, too.

2 Do the big jobs early. Or late. We call it Hot Watch. The hours between 10 A.M. and 10 P.M. are the "peak load" hours, when the most electricity is being used and the chance of shortages is greatest.

So try to restrict your use of major appliances and hot water during these hours.

Do your baking and laundry before 10 A.M. Turn on the dishwasher just before you go to bed. Shower before 10 A.M. or after 10 P.M.

You won't be using less energy, but you'll be using it when we have power to spare. And that will reduce our need to build costly power plants.

3 Give your water heater a rest. It will save money and energy. With the exception of heating and cooling systems, the water heater is the biggest energy user in your home.

Use your dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads. Wash clothes in cool or warm water instead of hot.

With your help we can save energy and make it through the summer. And that's important to all of us.

NEW YORK (AP) — Fears about the dollar's slide in foreign exchange trading pushed stock prices down today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 4.52 to 823.55 at noon.

Advances led declines by a 7-4 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Last week, the decline of the dollar prompted the Federal Reserve to increase the discount rate, putting more pressure on interest rates. Analysts say they are concerned that the continued fall of the dollar may cause the Fed to further tighten credit.

The dollar continued to slip in foreign exchange trading today while the price of gold, a traditional refuge for investors in times of monetary uncertainty, rocketed to a new high in Zurich of $304.125 an ounce before falling slightly at the close.

Arizona Public Service Co. topped the active list at noon, falling 1/4 to 19 1/4 with a 190,000-share block trading at that price.

The NYSE composite average of more than 1,500 common stocks was off 27 to 57.62 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell .36 to 195.01.

Volume on the Big Board in the first two hours of trading was a moderate 10.79 million shares, compared to 11.18 million in the same period of Friday's session.

Among NYSE volume leaders, IBM fell 1 1/4 to 68 3/4, Collins & Aikman dropped 3/4 to 9 1/4. Kaiser Aluminum was off 1/4 to 18 1/4. Heublein was unchanged at 25 1/4. Studebaker Worthington rose 2 1/4 to 44 and Charter Co. rose 3/4 to 36 1/4.

Exxon, which reported earnings lower than those anticipated by many analysts, fell 1/2 to 52.

Claudette Is Stronger

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Claudette, once downgraded to a tropical depression, was reborn today when it regained strength while moving northwestward through the Gulf of Mexico, said forecasters at the National Hurricane Center.

The storm's top winds were at 40 mph — just over the 39-mph threshold at which tropical depressions become named storms. It was expected to get even stronger as the day passed but had not done so by noon, forecasters said.

At noon, the broad center of Claudette was near latitude 27.5 north, longitude 92.8 west, or about 200 miles south of Lake Charles, La.

It was moving to the northwest at 12 miles per hour and was expected to turn more to the north and pick up forward speed later today, forecasters said.

Center director Neal Frank said Claudette was a minimal tropical storm, mainly a concern to marine interests.

Some Fighting At Klan Rally

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — Emotional supporters and opponents of the Ku Klux Klan were separated at times only by a lawman's nightstick when more than 1,000 people gathered for a Klan membership rally.

At one point Sunday evening, the 100 law enforcement officials who were called to Dixie Heights Park were unable to keep apart Klan supporters and about 50 demonstrators who had gathered against them.

With police ranks stretched thin, both sides stood nearly face-to-face, heckling each other and waving sticks in the second confrontation of the day.

As beer bottles and eggs flew through the air, two antagonists began fighting with their sticks. Their fighting sparked several hundred Klan supporters to turn and chase their opponents to the edge of the park.

"It was a touchy situation," said Middletown Police Chief Russell Dwyer.

Officials reported one arrest for concealing a weapon. No injuries were reported.

Colombia Jails Hold 2 Jesuits

BOGOTÁ, Colombia (UPI) — Relations between the church and state in Colombia are being tested by the arrest of two Jesuit priests by army investigators.

The priests, Luis Alberto Restrepo and Jorge Arango, were picked up recently in the investigation of the assassination of a former interior minister by leftist guerrillas.

Colombia's Vatican concordat does not provide for the trying of priests by military authorities. But the case of the two priests was heard by military judges and they were jailed at the main Bogota army base.

The priests' only known connection to the case is that they had close ties to the prime suspect in the killing, whom they had employed at a church-sponsored center for social studies.

Third Death In Hepatitis Cases

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A third person died Sunday from an outbreak of hepatitis here, and three possible new cases have been reported, health officials said today.

Two others are in critical condition in the intensive care unit at the Craven County Hospital and one remains in stable condition.

Bobby Cates, 21, of New Bern died early Sunday. Two others, Craig Gaskins, 19, of the Bridgeton area, and John C. Davis, 18, died last week.

Still reported in critical condition are Jerry Whitford, 21 and Kimberly Fulcher, 18, who was admitted with the disease Friday. Jeffery Richert is listed in stable condition.

In addition to those six, officials of the Atlanta Center for Disease Control investigating the outbreak, said today three others could have the disease.

"In searching contacts of these cases an additional three mild cases have been tentatively identified. Laboratory confirmation of this is awaited before they will be reported as cases," a CDC news release said.

According to the CDC, a total of 98 persons who have had either close or casual contacts with the severe cases had been screened by blood and urine testing as of last Friday.

This morning the CDC doctors "reaffirmed the opinion that people outside the group of contacts are not at risk for infection," according to the news release.

Forest Service Probing Crash

SUPERIOR, Mont. (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service is investigating the weekend crash of a B-17 bomber that had been converted for use in fighting forest fires. Two men aboard the aircraft died.

The plane went down Saturday night in the Lolo National Forest while en route to drop a load of flame-retardant chemical on a forest fire burning in mountainous terrain, said Forest Service spokesman Dick Guth.

Killed were Jerome G. LeRoux of Corvallis, Mont., the pilot, and Robert B. Masters of Prescott, Ariz. Radio dispatcher Vernon Schwartz said he lost contact with the plane, but was told by a helicopter pilot that it appeared LeRoux was flying too low.

Jumbo Jet Had Engine Failure

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — Officials say engine failure aboard a United Airlines DC-10 caused the Chicago-bound jumbo to return to Baltimore-Washington International Airport about 10 minutes after takeoff.

United spokesman Jim Linse said a fan blade in the aircraft's right engine "failed and was ingested into the engine." He said the plane's crew immediately shut down the engine and returned to the airport, where 160 passengers were transferred to other Sunday flights. The malfunction came just nine days after the domestic DC-10 fleet returned to service. The fleet was grounded for 37 days following the May 25 Chicago crash of a DC-10 that killed 273 people.

By "group of contacts," CDC investigator Dr. Carl Armstrong said he means "friends associated with the six cases." When asked how close the contact would have had to be, he said close enough for blood exposure. He said that theoretically saliva has been known to have hepatitis virus in it, but he added that no one has ever shown that anyone has ever contracted the disease from saliva. He said the contact would have had to touch the contaminated blood in some way, "not necessarily through needles," to contract the disease.

Investigators appeared to be narrowing the possibilities for the cause of the outbreak which has been identified as type B, or serum hepatitis. They noted that all cases diagnosed have had onset between July 4 and 16.

They also continued to investigate the possibility that the three who have died were killed by hepatitis B in addition to some unknown chemical.

Doctors said it would take about a week to get laboratory results from various substances submitted for analysis. These substances include cocaine purchased locally from illegal drug dealers.

The State Bureau of Investigation has begun a probe to determine if illegal drugs are involved in the outbreak, according to an SBI spokesman.

Nicaragua Plans Seek Extradition Of Somoza

By GORDON MOTT
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaragua's revolutionary government is going to request the extradition of dictator Anastasio Somoza to face trial for war crimes, but it says there will be no wholesale execution of his supporters like those after the revolution in Iran.

There will be "no death penalty in Nicaragua and no executions ordered by the courts," the new chief justice of the Supreme Court, Roberto Arguelo Hurtado told reporters Sunday.

"It is possible there may be excesses including executions before we can get regular courts organized," said Arguelo. "But they will only be personal vendettas or just plain hate between people and any executions will not be authorized."

The chief justice said his court would appoint new judges for the lower courts as soon as possible. Until that is done, he said, justice is being administered by three-member military-civilian tribunals authorized to maintain public order and try persons accused of civil and war crimes.

"Later each of their sentences will be reviewed to determine if they should stand or go to a higher court," Arguelo said.

One of the five members of the junta heading the government, Sergio Ramirez Mercado, told a news conference the government was going to ask the United States for Somoza's extradition and was preparing the charges against him.

He said the ousted dictator, who fled to an estate he owns in Miami Beach and is now yachting in the Caribbean, was "responsible for the destruction and the deaths of thousands of Nicaraguans." He also accused the deposed president and his associates of taking "every last cent out of the national bank reserves." And he said Somoza is plotting to return to Nicaragua with an army.

The chief justice said members of the national guard who have taken refuge in Red Cross centers would be given safe conduct out of the country if they are cleared of war crimes charges.

"Each case will be reviewed to determine if any are guilty of war crimes," he said.

Would Amend Information Act

NEW YORK (AP) — FBI Director William Webster says the Freedom of Information Act should be amended to allow information dealing with criminal investigations to be withheld from public scrutiny for seven years.

Speaking on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation" Sunday, Webster said care also should be exercised in providing names of informants to Congress. "The informant ... is the single most important tool we have," Webster said. "If his name is made available through the Freedom of Information Act, he is not going to supply information."

Hearing Loss Is Not A Sign Of Old Age

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

Send for this model, put it on and wear it in the privacy of your own home. While many people with a hearing loss will not receive any significant benefit from any hearing aid, this free model will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It is not a real hearing aid, and it's yours to keep, free. The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 9850, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria St., Chicago, Illinois 60646.

U.S. Sprint Strength Falters In Spartacade

MOSCOW (AP) — "We used to have sprinters that the world feared," said U.S. men's track coach Jimmy Carnes Sunday. "We don't have that anymore. We're looking for someone to break out of the pack between now and 1980," Carnes added.

"We can pick any three of 20 sprinters in the United States and come up with three good ones and place two in the finals here. But nobody dominates. We need that someone for the Olympics."

Carnes made his comments before the 100-meter dash at the Spartacade Games at Lenin Stadium.

"Maybe Houston can be the one," Carnes said, referring to Houston McTear, the one-time Florida schoolboy sensation who tied a world record for the 100-yard dash in 1975.

But McTear failed to withstand a closing rush by Cuba's Silvio Leonard in Sunday's 100 and was nipped at the wire. Leonard, a double gold medalist at the recent Pan American Games, was timed in 10.30 seconds while McTear registered 10.39.

Osvaldo Lara, another Cuban ran third in 10.41 and Rich Edwards of the University of Houston was fourth in 10.43.

"Leonard may be the world's fastest human," said Carnes, who added that he had expected a faster time for the 100.

McTear, who attended two junior colleges and now lives in Santa Monica, Calif., has been bothered by pulled leg muscles in the past, which cost him an Olympic berth in 1976.

"Everybody has always expected a lot of me," said McTear. "I'm not a machine but I'm always trying my best. This season really isn't important to me. Next year means a lot because I missed 1976."

Again Sunday, McTear showed his ability to get off to a quick start but failed to sustain it, giving way to Leonard's powerful kick over the last 30 meters and barely holding on for second.

"All sprinters have a fear of pulling (muscles)," said Carnes before the race, "and that could be McTear's problem. He's strong in the 60 and 100 yards indoors and then something's missing when he increases it to 100 meters."

Carnes, who will coach the U.S. men's track team at the Moscow Olympics, said his top sprint prospects for next year could come from among Harvey Glance, James Sanford and Steve Williams, who has been out of action for more than a year with a leg injury.

Soviet Dress Rehearsal For Olympics Of 1980

MOSCOW (AP) — In the morning, a breeze skittles down out of the Lenin hills above the city and ruffles the fir trees along the Moscow River. The men and women are out early, cleaning the streets, sweeping sidewalks, picking up every scrap of yesterday.

They polish the windows and open the shops of this historic old city, where in 1917 the world was rocked by the revolution that was to produce a new culture and divide the world into two ways of thinking about life.

Next summer, after one more inevitable, unyielding Russian winter, they will show the world what they have wrought. The world will come to Moscow on the neutral field of sport for the 22nd summer Olympics.

This week, the city is holding its dress rehearsal during its seventh Soviet sports festival. For the first time, athletes from other nations have been invited to participate in the games that start at the school and club level all across this massive land of 263.4 million people and culminate in a show of unmatched athletic force and pride.

In the Soviet Union, the ideal role is that of an integral part of a group rather than that of an individual standing out as unique among his peers. That philosophy stunned Western observers when it was graphically demonstrated Saturday in the precision with which thousands of Soviets of all ages participated in the opening ceremony of the Spartacade Games.

Almost no marchers were out of step. No flag bearer allowed his standard to droop. No member of the 6,000-strong card section in Lenin Stadium was a second off in flipping the cards that, collectively, produced vast murals of Misha, the cuddly Russian Olympic bear; the male and female sprinters who adorn the Spartacade symbol, and finally Lenin himself — Lenin, who started it all.

But Westerners have difficulty understanding why this same precision is not carried over to the area of everyday amenities. The Soviets explain that their priorities are different, but it is impossible to explain why a waiter says there is no hot food while hot meals are being delivered at the next table. Or why the visa process for visiting newsmen dragged until last minute, or why you can't easily call a taxi.

At the same time, there are pleasant surprises. One Western visitor discovered that in changing money at a hotel, he had not received the proper amount of rubles. He returned the next day, explained the problem, and the money was promptly handed over.

Everywhere one goes in Moscow he is reminded that it is the city of the 1980 Olympics. There are Olympic signs in the Cyrillic alphabet, souvenirs such as miniature samovar pots with the Olympic symbol, and everywhere the smiling face of the Olympic mascot, Misha.

Two weeks ago today, the Pittsburgh Pirates were tied for fourth place in the National League East, seven games behind the Montreal Expos. But they put together a four-game winning streak, lost one to Atlanta's Phil Niekro and then won eight in a row. Montreal still is in first, but with a double-header sweep of the Atlanta Braves on Sunday, the Pirates moved to within one-half game of the Expos.

The Pirates won the opener 5-4 on pinch-hitter Mike Easler's two-run single in the sixth inning after nearly four hours of rain delays.

In the nightcap, right-hander Jim Bibby smacked a two-run homer, the second of his major league career, and handcuffed Atlanta on five hits through eight innings for a 3-2 win.

In all, the double-header took about 10 hours to play.

"Hey, the day is short when you win," Bibby said. "It was a short day at the ballpark today."

York Mets 4-3; Philadelphia whipped San Diego 5-2, and Houston got by St. Louis 7-6.

Giants 8-5, Expos 6-15

San Francisco left-hander Vida Blue turned in a strong performance until tiring in the ninth to pick up his 150th career victory in the opener. Bill North drove in three runs for the Giants, one with a home run.

Sipping on a beer in the locker room, Bibby then asked: "What are we in the standings?"

"Half a game back," replied pitcher John Candelaria.

"No, we're tied, aren't we?" Bibby asked.

Somebody then informed him that Montreal had split a double-header with San Francisco.

Had Montreal lost both games of the twinbill, the Pirates could have moved into a tie for first place for the first time this season. After losing the opener 8-6, however, the Expos collected 18 hits and won the nightcap 15-5.

"By the middle of next week, we'll be two up and lookin' back," Candelaria said.

"First place. That's what we want," Bibby added. "First place is a good place to be."

"We're known as a second-half ballclub. Look what we did last year," Bibby said. "But we weren't as far back at the All-Star break as we were last year, and I think the big incentive is to get to first place now and not wait until late in the season."

Pirates right-hander Kent Tekulve preserved both victories, going three scoreless innings in the first game and one in the second. He now has 16 saves.

Elsewhere in the NL, Cincinnati and Chicago split, the Reds winning the opener 12-1 and the Cubs winning the second game 8-4; Los Angeles edged the New York Mets 4-3; Philadelphia whipped San Diego 5-2, and Houston got by St. Louis 7-6.

Giants 8-5, Expos 6-15

San Francisco left-hander Vida Blue turned in a strong performance until tiring in the ninth to pick up his 150th career victory in the opener. Bill North drove in three runs for the Giants, one with a home run.

Reds 12-4, Cubs 1-8

Dave Concepcion hit his second grand slam home run of the season, capping Cincinnati's five-run eighth inning, and drove in five runs to power the Reds over the Cubs in the opener. Junior Kennedy also had a two-run shot in the opener, his first major league homer.

Dodgers 4, Mets 3

Dave Lopes pushed a perfect squeeze bunt down the first base line with one out in the ninth, scoring Steve Yeager, to give the Dodgers their win over New York.

Phils 5, Padres 2

Mike Schmidt, the major league leader, slammed his 33rd home run of the season and Greg Gross drove in two runs with a single to give Philadelphia right-hander Nino Espinosa his fourth consecutive victory.

Astros 7, Cards 6

Jose Cruz bounced an infield single toward second base with two out in the ninth inning to drive in the winning run and snap Houston's five-game losing streak.

| SOUTH CAROLINA SEPTEMBER 8What a way to open the season! This battle of the "Carolinians" has been sold out for six months. Tickets available through season ticket purchase only. Coach Jim Carlen calls this year's South Carolina team "the best" in his four years at Columbia. The Gamecocks feature a powerful ground game with All-America candidate George Rogers at running back. Much is expected from quarterback Garry Hargis who had a great spring. The Gamecocks also boast one of the best receiving cores in the nation. Eight starters return on defense which will make the Gamecocks tough when their opponents have the ball.  | PITTSBURGH SEPTEMBER 22Highly rated Pittsburgh invades Kenan Stadium for a game that should prove to be one of the most challenging for the Tar Heels in 1979. Coach Jackie Sherrill's powerful Panthers have been high in the national polls during the past three years going 29-6-1 during that stretch, winning a national championship and going to an important bowl during all three seasons. And listen to this, Pitt will return no less than 44 lettermen, 13 of which were starters last season. That's a combination of tradition and talent from which top ten teams are made. "Standing Room Only" expected for this national attraction.            | EAST CAROLINA OCTOBER 27We'd be arrested for printing the adjectives that would adequately describe the ferocious intensity of the Carolina-East Carolina rivalry and Pat Dye's Pirates should be strong in '79—ECU won eight of their last nine games, including a 35-13 Independence Bowl victory over Louisiana Tech. Fullback Theodore Sutton, and quarterback Leander Green will have to be reckoned with out of the wishbone. Billy Ray Washington is solid at tight end and linebacker Mike Brewington heads up a good defense. Without a season ticket, your best bet for this game is to catch the action over your favorite Tar Heel Network Station. |
| CLEMSON NOVEMBER 10"HOMECOMING"—and the defending ACC Champion Tigers will be roaring into Kenan with what they feel is "a better idea" in new Head Coach Danny Ford. If you think Clemson was tough last year, the Tigers claim they've had their best recruiting year in the history of the school. All-ACC players Jim Stuckey and Bubba Brown will lead a stingy defense. Clemson beat Ohio State in the Gator Bowl last year and may well be favored to repeat as ACC Champions in '79. Season tickets only! The Blue-White basketball game is scheduled for Carmichael later that day, followed by the traditional festivities of homecoming. | CINCINNATI OCTOBER 6Cincinnati is another team with a strong returning cast. The Bearcats will have 43 lettermen back in '79 including seven offensive and seven defensive starters from last year's team which won four of its last five games. Offensive fireworks are expected from All-America candidate Allen Harvin, a super tailback who was the leading freshman ground gainer in the nation last year. Harvin galloped for 1,283 yards on 233 attempts for a 5.5 yards per carry average and six touchdowns. Defensive end Farley Bell is another All-America candidate. The Bearcats had a great spring practice and can't wait to start the '79 season. | WAKE FOREST OCTOBER 13The Tar Heels begin their battle for ACC honors with one of their arch rivals on October 13 and if last year's "down to the wire" thriller with the Demon Deacons was any indication of things to come, Carolina could have its hands full again. Look for an exciting aerial show as Coach John Mackovic isn't shy about putting the ball in the air through the passing antics of quarterback David Weber. Weber will be backed up by one of the nation's top recruits, Brent Offenbacher. Ohio's 1978 High School Player of the Year. This game is expected to be sold out by the time this ad is printed.                             |

Herbert Hyde Dislikes Sharing His Authority

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Herbert Hyde, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, admits there is truth to his reputation as an independent operator who doesn't like to share his authority.

"Now, I've been a lawyer, handling my own cases, and as a lawyer you keep your strategy to yourself, even when you know maybe you ought to let somebody else in on it," he said.

Many of the people in Hyde's department say they have little knowledge of his actions. He keeps his decisions mostly to himself and frequently doesn't let anybody know what he's doing or where he's going. "I like Herb a lot," said a friend of his who works in the Department of Administration, "but I don't know what he's doing over there. It's like he doesn't trust any of his staff to do anything. He can do it all himself."

Others say Hyde walked into a situation that was ripe for discontent. The 53-year-old Asheville native took over a department that had been created by his predecessor and a staff that was picked by his predecessor, who delegated much of the authority for running the new department to the staff.

"Look, he came into a bad situation, where another guy picked all the staff, said a colleague of Hyde's from Asheville, who is now in Raleigh. "He got the PCB mess dumped on him from the start and the legislature was beginning. Herb just didn't know which ones he could depend on."

Department staff members who don't want to be identified say there is no direction in the department, and they don't feel Hyde has confidence in their work.

But none were able to give specific examples of where Hyde has fallen down on the job.

One staff member has turned to reading as department responsibilities dwindle. "I got in 100 pages today," the person said one day last week.

Hyde said Carlton had to delegate authority because he was faced with the time-consuming tasks of revamping the Highway Patrol manual, holding 37 hearings across the state and writing a massive crime control agenda.

"But when I came in I wanted to learn everything about this department, so I'd know it inside out," Hyde said.

His learning process includes personally examining every purchase order and handling every request for sick leave and official travel.

"They may not like it," he said of the staff, "but they know I'm checking everything, they know I'm interested and we're saving all kinds of money."

Hyde said he was reluctant to take the job because it meant leaving the mountains, but he accepted because "the governor flattered me."

Says Report Is A 'Hoax'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Instead of answering questions, the House Assassinations Committee's recent report on the murders of President Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was a "hoax," according to the committee's former chief counsel, Richard Sprague.

"All they did was evolve another conspiracy theory," Sprague said in an interview published in The Sunday Bulletin.

The former assistant district attorney served as the committee's chief counsel for six months in 1976-77 before resigning in a dispute with the panel's leaders.

The committee's 686-page report, released last week, concluded that "it was possible ... that an individual organized crime leader, or a small combination of leaders, might have participated in a conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy."

The committee also concluded that there was a "95 percent" chance that more than one gunman fired at Kennedy and that the brothers of James Earl Ray "probably" assisted his flight after the murder of King.

MEETING TONIGHT

There will be a emergency meeting Monday, July 23, 8 p.m., at St. Matthew F. W. B. Church, sponsored by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of Pitt County and the Concerned Women for Justice. The public is invited to attend this meeting.

Face Task Of Searching Ten Square Miles For 6 Bodies

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

MARION, N.C. (AP) — McDowell County authorities face the awesome task of combing an estimated 10 square miles of rugged mountain land in search of six bodies reportedly buried there, if a suspect in the case does not cooperate by pointing out the gravesites.

Danny Parton, 29, was scheduled for a bond hearing today on two charges of first-degree murder which stemmed from Parton's tale of having killed eight women and buried them in shallow graves.

The two murder charges were filed Friday after Parton, a resident of the tiny North Cove community in northern McDowell County, led deputies directly to the isolated, three-foot-deep graves of two women. He embellished his story by saying, "There are six more." But after conferring with a lawyer on Saturday, Parton told authorities there were no more bodies and he refused to cooperate any further.

A steady rain all weekend prevented searchers from going into the area where Parton had indicated more bodies might be buried.

McDowell County Sheriff Bobby Haynes said although Parton had recanted on his story of six more bodies, searchers would wade into the heavily-wooded area as soon as weather permitted, and he believed more bodies may indeed be buried there.

Parton has not backed off his confession of killing the two women whose bodies were found Friday.

One of those victims remained unidentified today. But the other was Cathy Mosley, of Gaston County, who had lived with Parton for more than two years.

Parton's mother, Viola Burnette of Gastonia, visited her son at the McDowell County Jail on Saturday. Later, as authorities searched the tin-roofed, four-room house where Parton lived, she talked about her son.

"Naturally, I'm his mother and I don't want to think he did it," Mrs. Burnette, a stocky 46-year-old with her blonde hair swept high on her head, declared as she stood on the wooden back porch of Parton's house.

"But if he did it, I'm glad he told that he did it," she said.

Mrs. Burnette said her son and Ms. Mosley had lived together and had moved into the house together after Danny's step-grandfather froze to death there last winter.

Ms. Mosley moved out and moved back to Gaston County in May, Mrs. Burnette said.

A missing person report was filed on Ms. Mosley later in May, and Parton was questioned about her disappearance. But he denied knowing of her whereabouts.

During subsequent questioning about her disappearance, Parton volunteered to take deputies to the two gravesites uncovered Friday.

Parton, a curly-haired, mustachioed, unemployed man, waited in jail all weekend while authorities wondered if his story of more bodies was true and if he would aid them in their search.

Without Parton's help, Haynes said, looking for graves in the mountains "is like looking for a needle in a haystack."

Persons who lived near Parton in North Cove described him as a quiet young man who "piddled" with cars, worked at cleaning up the property and spent much of his time with Ms. Mosley. Ms. Mosley, according to one neighbor, claimed to be Parton's wife. But authorities said there was no indication the two were ever married.

Parton's case drew a squad of reporters from across the state to Marion and tiny North Cove, and North Cove residents suddenly remembered things that had not been so mysterious before Friday.

"I seen the (basement) light in that house several times — something I never did see (before Parton moved in)," said Horace McKinney, who lives just around the bend from Parton.

"Maybe something is buried down there."

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦93 ♦AKQJ105 ♦KQJ107

What is your opening bid?

A.—Even though you are virtually assured of ten tricks in hearts, this hand does not merit a demand bid of two hearts. That action carries with it certain high-card requirements which this hand does not meet. An opening bid of one heart, followed by a jump shift in diamonds describes your hand accurately. Don't worry about one heart being passed out. With your distribution, that is most unlikely to happen.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A92 ♦AJ ♦AKJ53 ♦Q106

The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—You have already indicated that you wish to play the hand at no trump, so don't repeat the story. Partner's rebid of three diamonds says either that he feels his hand is unsuited to game at no trump, or that he is interested in slam. Either way, a delayed raise to three spades will give partner the opportunity to express his intentions without wasting bidding space unnecessarily.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
4 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—You have a reasonably sound opening bid opposite a partner who not only opened, but jump rebid his own suit. In addition, your two honors in partner's suit represent considerable assets that have not yet been revealed. We cannot think of a hand partner could have for his bidding that would not offer excellent play for slam, so don't waste time. Bid what you think you can make—six hearts.

The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
3 ♦ Pass 3 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Partner's responses have done nothing to enhance your hand. For our money, we would bid three no trump. Nine tricks in no trump should be easier to make than eleven in clubs. If there is slam in the cards, partner must be able to bid again.

The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♥ 1 ♦ 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass 4 ♦ Pass
4 ♥ Pass 5 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—From the auction, it sounds as if you have the wrong ace. It is all too likely that partner is void in spades and has a couple of fast club losers—after all, he did take the trouble to cue-bid diamonds, but not clubs, on the way to five hearts. So it seems right to pass.

What action do you take?

A.—From the auction, it sounds as if you have the wrong ace. It is all too likely that partner is void in spades and has a couple of fast club losers—after all, he did take the trouble to cue-bid diamonds, but not clubs, on the way to five hearts. So it seems right to pass.

What do you bid now?

A.—With excellent intermediates and a secondary fit for partner's club suit, your hand is just too strong for an invitational raise to two no trump, despite the potentially fatal weakness in spades. Take the strain off partner by bidding the no trump game yourself.

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's responses have done nothing to enhance your hand. For our money, we would bid three no trump. Nine tricks in no trump should be easier to make than eleven in clubs. If there is slam in the cards, partner must be able to bid again.

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's censors have made a movie for theaters ... sort of. Actually, they've caused a movie to be made.

It happened this way: NBC wanted a way to keep audience momentum going during the summer for its popular "Saturday Night Live" series. The network asked "Saturday Night" producer Lorne Michaels to do eight late-night specials, featuring many of the "Saturday Night" crew and carrying a "Saturday Night" flavor, to be aired during the summer.

The first few went just fine. Then Michaels was attracted to an idea by Michael O'Donoghue, "Saturday Night" writer and sometimes performer.

O'Donoghue's idea was to do a TV parody of the verite "Mondo" movies of the '60s. O'Donoghue's piece was called "Mr. Mike's Mondo Video," featured Bill Murray and Dan Aykroyd, and was, by all accounts, wonderfully deranged.

NBC's censors step in. O'Donoghue's 90-minute special, they found, was "unacceptable to network broadcast standards." The network would not air the show.

But a bit of good luck saved O'Donoghue's work. Paul Klein, who stepped down as NBC's chief programmer just six months ago, had seen "Mondo Video," and loved it.

"I thought it was most brilliant TV," Klein says. "After I left NBC and heard they weren't going to air it, I said (to O'Donoghue), 'If NBC doesn't want to play it, let's buy it back from them and release it theatrically.'"

NBC's "holders of TV mores," as Klein refers to the network broadcast standards departments, had handed Klein a hot property.

On tape, and with space for commercials, "Mondo Video" wasn't quite ready for theatrical release. "So, we added some stuff to it and we're going to transfer it to 35 millimeter film."

It will be ready for release in early September.

"It's a hot thing," Klein says. "Bill Murray, who's hot now with 'Meatballs,' and Dan Aykroyd, plus Gilda Radner makes an appearance. It has a great piece with the late Sid Vicious (bass player for the Sex Pistols). It's very avant-garde."

NBC would only say that "Mondo Video" did not meet broadcast standards. Klein seems puzzled at this. "They felt it was too tough, too raunchy, I guess. Though, to me, it's less raunchy than some of the 'Saturday Night Live' skits. I think it will get a 'PG' rating. It has some nudity in it, but much less than the National Geographic, much less than 'Roots,' much less, in fact, than 'Three's Company.'"

O'Donoghue and Klein have such faith in "Mondo Video" that they've entered it at the New York Film Festival. "We'll try to win that," Klein says, "it really is a work of art."

At your local theater soon, brought to you (sort of) by NBC's Broadcast and Standards Dept.

Sees Disappointments In Recovered Monitor

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — After all those years of searching to find the Civil War ironclad Monitor, an underwater archaeologist says most people would be disappointed with its appearance if it could be recovered.

Archaeologist Richard Lawrence said the vessel is lying upside down and its famed turret, which earned it the nickname, "cheesebox on a raft," has fallen off.

"Archaeology is a destructive process," Lawrence said. "It often requires taking things apart and moving them and unless their exact location is determined, it would be impossible to reassemble them correctly later."

Scientists and state officials have been trying to come up with a plan to recover the Monitor since it was discovered off the North Carolina coast five years ago. Some have proposed leaving the vessel where it is rather than taking a chance on destroying it in recovery operations.

Lawrence said a month-long expedition will begin Aug. 1 to examine the wreck more closely. The vessel is lying in 220 feet of water about 15 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras.

About half of the hull has collapsed, Lawrence said, possibly because depth charges were dropped near the ship during World War II. The Coast Guard routinely exploded depth charges near old wrecks to flush out German submarines.

The Monitor is prized as a historical relic because it was the forerunner of modern battleships, using steam power, screw propellers, a revolving gun turret and iron armor. The ship is believed to be the first to incorporate all four details.

The vessel sank in a gale with 16 crewmen aboard on Dec. 31, 1862, while being towed south to join a Union Navy blockade at Beaufort, S.C.

The objectives of the August expedition are to establish fixed reference points along both sides of the ship and to excavate a small area near the bow, Lawrence said.

Representatives of the state Department of Cultural Resources, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Harbor Branch Foundation of Fort Pierce, Fla., will participate in the expedition.

AIRLINE TRAFFIC
WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline traffic — domestic and internationally scheduled — increased 16.2 percent during the first five months of 1979 over the same 1978 period, the Air Transport Association says.

Poodle Baffles The Solicitors

SEATTLE (AP) — Herminey Hazington is David Harrington's secret weapon in his fight against telephone solicitors.

Three years ago, Harrington changed the name on his telephone listing to Herminey Hazington. Herminey is his female Poodle-terrier.

Since Harrington's friends know his telephone number or have been told to look under Hazington, he figures a caller who asks for Mrs. Hazington is selling something.

He explained his two-pronged strategy:

"I usually say, 'I'm sorry but Mrs. Hazington isn't home. She's in Olympia lobbying for a bill to impose criminal penalties on anyone soliciting by telephone.' Then I hang up."

If Harrington is feeling especially mean, he cuts the solicitor short with, "Oh, isn't that too bad. She died yesterday."

Investigate Two Killings

ELKIN, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating two slayings that occurred in Wilkes County during the past 24 hours, Wilkes County Sheriff Kyle Gentry said today.

Gentry said Mark Anthony Vance, 17, of Elkin was shot as he slept early this morning. Kyle said someone apparently fired several shots from a passing truck into a mobile home where Vance was sleeping. Vance's wife and her mother and father, who were also in the trailer, were not injured.

On Sunday morning, 16-year-old Robin Darlene Griffin of North Wilkesboro was fatally shot as she and two other persons were getting out of a car at a trailer park, Gentry said.

Gary Perry, 24, was shot in the face in the incident and was taken to Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. He is listed in serious condition. Henry Minton, 24, was shot in the head and was treated and released at a North Wilkesboro hospital. Gentry said the shootings were similar but not believed to be related. He said no arrests have been made in the incidents.

The State Bureau of Investigation has been called in assist Wilkes County authorities in the probe.

Prison Term For Best-Seller

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (UPI) — It cost him 20 days in prison, but Gen. Hugo Abreu's book, "The Other Side of Power," is firmly atop the list of Brazil's best-sellers.

In a country where 5,000 copies of a book is considered respectable, there already are 65,000 copies of Abreu's work in print and it has topped the nonfiction list for two months.

In the book, the ex-paratrooper commander and former minister charges that an unscrupulous clique has taken charge of the country. Abreu also gives an insider's view of the government of President Ernesto Geisel, who ruled from 1974 to 1978.

The army arrested Abreu for 20 days for breaking military discipline by publishing the book.

BACK TO THE CIRCUIT

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Beginning Joggers Must Start Slowly

I've resisted the jogging fever for a long time. Now my friends have cornered me and I think I'm going to yield to their pressure. Are there any special precautions I should take? I'm 32, and used to be a pretty good athlete. For the past 10 years, however, I've done very little exercise. — Mr. D.V., N.J.

Dear Mr. V.: Yours is but one of many letters that ask questions about this exercise phenomenon that has captured the imagination of people of all ages.

There is no denying that jogging is an excellent exercise for people in good health. However, the simple process of buying a pair of fortified running shoes, an attractive pair of shorts and a headband are not the only requirements for embarking on a strenuous program of jogging.

Running too fast, running too soon and running too long are producing a staggering amount of injuries to the muscles, tendons and ligaments of the feet and legs. Injuries to the bones of the feet, the knees and the pelvic bones have been reported among those who have entered the jogging program with too much diligence.

I believe that a good physical examination is essential before starting your jogging, in order to make sure that there are no underlying reasons why the jogging should be limited in any degree.

The jogger who is beginning and the jogger who is experienced should know that many physiological changes occur in the body during the process of running. The heart works faster and the entire vascular system is put under special pressures. The rate of metabolism of the body and the utilization of fats, carbohydrates and proteins is entirely changed by the new activity.

You've always impressed upon your readers the need for peace and tranquility at the dinner table. After a busy day, my husband and I occasionally enjoy a quiet dinner in front of the television. Can you help us do anything about the annoyance of television commercials that seem to be diabolically scheduled to blare their sales pitches about constipation, diarrhea, hemorrhoids and cockroaches during dinner time? And now comes the newest invader. A woman carrying a plateful of food that is "accidentally" slopped all over her chest in a disgusting mess. As a doctor, you must admit all of this cannot contribute to good digestion. — Mrs. L.R., N.Y.

Dear Mrs. R.: I agree. I agree. I agree. I suppose that all we can do is to appeal to the good taste and good judgment of the manufacturers and advertisers and hope that they will recognize how disinterested and "turned off" television viewers can be with their poorly-timed, invasive commercials of such products at meal times.

Questions, Answers About The Gasoline Shortage

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer

Many Americans have been stuck in gasoline lines this summer for a bewildering array of reasons, most complex, some contradictory. Here are some answers to often-asked questions about it all.

Q. Is there really a shortage of gasoline?

A. Yes. Several factors have cut supplies in recent months to about 90 percent of what they were a year ago. Combined with an anticipated rise in demand of about 4 percent, that leaves a gap of as much as 14 percent between gasoline available and what motorists want to buy.

Q. What factors cut supplies?

A. The most publicized was the revolution in Iran, which halted that nation's oil production and deprived the world of about 10 percent of its oil supply last winter. Partial production has resumed in Iran.

While oil imports were dropping, so was the amount of oil being produced at home. Domestic oil production slumped significantly last winter, at the same time Iran's production was cut. So far, the oil industry has been unable to fully explain this drop in domestic production — which amounted to almost as much as the Iranian loss — or explain why it was never made public.

Q. So it was the loss of oil from Iran and domestic wells that caused the crisis?

A. Not entirely. The United States might have experienced a gas shortage this summer even if those events hadn't taken place. After several years of moderate growth in gasoline demand following the 1973-74 energy crisis demand began soaring again last year, severely straining the ability of oil companies to meet demand.

Q. What about the build-up in oil and gasoline inventories we've heard so much about? Weren't the oil companies withholding some petroleum from the market?

A. Yes, they were, but with the government's blessing. The amount involved was not much — a couple of days' supply, which the industry likes to keep on hand to cover emergencies, such as supply disruptions or refinery breakdowns. When supplies ran short last winter, the companies used up most of these reserve inventories. Over the past couple of months, they've built them back up.

Q. If the actual cutback in the amount of gasoline available was only about 15 percent, why are oil companies in many cases giving their dealers only 70 percent of the gas they got last year?

A. Because federal rules on how companies must distribute — or allocate — their gas tended to magnify the shortage. Companies must estimate how much gas they will have available in a given month. From that supply, they must give to certain priority users — agriculture, the military and public-safety services, to name a few — the same amount of gas they got a year ago.

What's left over is divided among the company's dealers. So while a company may have 90 percent of the gas it had a year ago, its dealers could get a significantly smaller fraction.

Q. Why are there lines in some states but not in others?

A. The allocation program tends to favor stations in low-growth areas. A station that is doing less business than a year ago is not going to be hurt nearly as much as one whose business has doubled. For this reason, lines have appeared in high-growth areas, such as California.

Q. But if a station is getting 70 percent of what it got a year ago, why should it cut its hours so drastically? Why should it close at noon instead of midnight, as it once did?

A. This is a complex question. With less gasoline to sell, most dealers begin limiting operating hours — first, closing on weekends and in the evening, the times they'd rather not work. Then, many dealers divide what gas they get in a month by the days in the month and set a daily quota on sales, attempting to spread supplies evenly through the month. When the daily quota is sold out, they close.

Many customers began arriving earlier and earlier to get gas before stations closed. Instead of spreading sales throughout the day, this concentrated them into the morning hours, compressing what might be a normal business day with no gas lines into a couple of hours with huge lines.

In addition, many motorists, fearing they would not be able to find gas, began topping off their tanks at every opportunity, buying two or three gallons at a time. The lines grew.

Q. Why are lines longer on some days than others? Why is it easier to find gasoline earlier in the month than later?

A. Two factors. One is the large number of stations closed on weekends. That causes many motorists to race to buy gas Thursday and Friday because they know it will be much more difficult to find on Saturday and Sunday. So lines increase late in the week.

The reason for the end-of-the-month lines is the monthly allocation system. Although a gas station gets several deliveries of gasoline throughout the month, once it uses up its monthly allotment, that's it. There's no more until the beginning of next month — unless a dealer is able to get gas from his allocation for the next month, which complicates the next month's situation. As a result, many stations close in the last few days of the month, further limiting the amount of gas available and, again, compressing an unchanging amount of demand into a much smaller amount of supply.

Q. What about prices? Why have they gone up so much this year?

A. The major reason is that the price of crude oil has nearly doubled this year because the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has found that customers are willing to pay top dollar. As oil prices go up, gasoline prices go up.

And the government has modified several of its gasoline price-control regulations in recent months, adding a few more pennies to the price of a gallon of gas.

Prices have also gone up because of the short supply of gasoline in the United States. Earlier this year, most of the nation's gasoline dealers were selling for a few cents a gallon price goes up, or of unusually full holding tanks.

The government has accused some companies of overcharging on some crude oil sales in recent years, but the amounts involved were fairly small.

Q. What about the future? What's the outlook?

A. Gasoline supplies will likely remain fairly tight for the remainder of the year, although the situation has been considerably improved by a steep drop in gasoline demand this summer as the result of conservation efforts and simple lack of supply.

There are some questions about whether there will be enough heating oil available next winter — an issue of particular interest to politicians who have to campaign in the New Hampshire primary. The government has implored the oil industry to step up production of heating oil, supplies of which are now at unusually low levels. And government and industry analysts now believe that there will be little or no problem with heating oil supply this winter.

Two Americans Investigate Origin Of 'Miracle' Painting

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Two Americans are trying to authenticate the reputed miraculous origin of Our Lady of Guadalupe, a centuries-old Mexican painting which tradition says appeared on the garment of an Aztec Indian.

The painting of the Virgin Mary is one of the most venerated and visited shrines of the Roman Catholic Church and is considered a national treasure by Mexico, which used it as a standard during its war of independence with Spain in 1810.

"What are we trying to prove? That it may be a miracle, as tradition says it is," explained Jody Smith, president of the U.S. Guadalupe Research Project.

"We can never prove that it is (a miracle), but we may progressively eliminate natural explanations — the known causes — and we may in fact wind up with the unknown," said Smith, a philosophy instructor in Pensacola, Fla.

According to tradition, the Virgin Mary appeared to Juan Diego on Dec. 9, 1531, and told him to ask a bishop to build a cathedral in her honor on a hill near Mexico City.

When the bishop demanded proof, the vision again appeared to Diego and told him to take the bishop a bunch of roses. The tradition says that when Diego opened his apron-like tilma to remove the roses, the painting appeared on the garment, which resembles a cape.

Legend aside, two factors considered peculiar about the painting are that it hasn't rotted and remains brightly colored after nearly 450 years.

Other paintings are as old, but the Guadalupe image is on a rough cactus fiber which would normally rot in about 20 years, according to Smith.

Also, the cloth is not sized, which means the holes in the fabric were not filled with a material to keep the paint from filling the pores and causing rot, Smith said in an interview in Atlanta.

Smith and Philip Callahan, a Gainesville, Fla., research biophysicist, had a four-hour, infrared-photography session with the painting at the Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico City in early May. They hope the photos will answer some questions about the image's origin.

The study is complicated because the image may have been applied in more than one medium — for example, oil and water-based paints — Callahan said.

Callahan said he would try to determine whether there was an underdrawing or sketch to guide the painter's strokes.

"If there wasn't an underdrawing, the picture becomes very mysterious," Callahan said.

"We are attempting to find out if it's a painting that can't be explained," Callahan said.

"If it can't be explained, either you have a miracle, or you have to admit that people back in the 16th century knew something we don't."

Smith said he was acquainted with the research team investigating the Shroud of Turin, a relic which — according to tradition — was used to wrap the body of Christ.

Smith said the team, analyzing an image on the shroud which legend says is a likeness of Christ, had agreed to let him use its equipment for a computer analysis of the Guadalupe photographs.

"If with Our Lady of Guadalupe and the Shroud of Turin we may be given any indication that the world is greater than we know, certainly that would be good," Smith said.

"Although we are looking at this in a scientific and disinterested fashion," he said, "that doesn't mean that science and religion have to be kept in watertight compartments."

"We want to show that it is perfectly safe and reasonable to believe in an unseen world."

The first cookout on Greenville Villa's new barbecue, installed by the Pitt County Board of Realtors, was held recently with the committee from the Board of Realtors on hand as invited guests.

All of the Greenville Villa residents and employees were also guests for the cookout.

The barbecue facility was part of the Board of Realtors' project of landscaping the courtyard at Greenville Villa, located on Stantonburg Road.

Get A Dollar For 80 Cents

GRETNA, La. (AP) — While some merchants are complaining that their clerks are mistaking the new Susan B. Anthony-dollar for quarters, a Louisiana bank has decided to make a bargain out of them. Eighty cents gets you a dollar.

"No disrespect to the soundness of the dollar is intended," said Russell F. Haas of Guaranty Bank & Trust Co. "Perhaps the psychological timing is bad, what with President Carter's current monetary problems, but it's an old Guaranty Bank custom to have a 'money sale' when we open a new branch."

Haas said an uncirculated Susan B. Anthony will be offered — one to a customer — for 80 cents at a new Gretna branch July 26 and 27.

"We feel the Susan B. Anthony coin is a great tribute to a great American woman and to all American women," Haas said.

One Injured In Sunday Mishap

An estimated $1,500 property damage resulted from a 4:25 p.m. collision here Sunday at the intersection of Howell and Perkins Streets.

Investigators identified the drivers involved as Charles Silverthorne Jr. of Chesapeake, Va., and James Lesley Johnson of Route 3, Tarboro.

Officers, who reported Johnson was injured in the mishap, estimated damage at $600 to the Silverthorne car and $900 to the Johnson car.

Four Drowned Over Weekend

By The Associated Press

Four persons drowned in accidents in the state over the weekend, including two Franklinville brothers who drowned after one brother attempted to rescue the other.

Police said Timothy Rich, 18, died trying to save his 22-year-old brother, Walter, who was stricken by cramps while swimming in a pond near Franklinville Sunday.

Police said a Ramseur girl told them she heard the older Rich's cries for help and watched him drown as his younger brother failed to reach him in time. She said shortly after that, Tim Rich disappeared below the surface of the pond.

The victim was identified as 25-year-old James Michael Paige. Police said preliminary reports indicated that Paige drowned.

The body was sent to the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill for autopsy.

A Fayetteville man drowned Friday night while swimming between two piers in White Lake, a White Lake Police Department spokesman said.

John Francis Plowman, 23, drowned about 9 p.m. after he and a friend tried to swim about 400 feet from one pier to another, the police spokesman said.
