Wholesale Prices Jump

By EILEEN ALT POWELL

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

After three months of moderation, wholesale prices shot up 1.1 percent in July, resuming the fast inflationary pace that prevailed at the start of the year, the government said today.

The Labor Department laid much of the blame on rapidly rising energy prices.

The wholesale price of home heating oil rose 9 percent from June to July. Continuation of that rate for a full year would more than double the price by mid-1980. Gasoline prices went up 3.9 percent in July.

The rapidly rising energy prices pushed up by 1.4 percent the cost of all non-food items in the department's compilation of wholesale prices.

This boost was not offset, as expected, by food prices, which showed no change last month after dropping in the three previous months.

Wholesale prices had risen a modest 0.5 percent in June.

July's 1.1 percent rate, which would produce an annual rate of more than 10 percent if continued for 12 months, was comparable to price increases of 1 percent or more from December 1978 through last March.

"Energy prices are still going quite strong," said John Early, chief of the Labor Department's division of industrial prices. "But finished goods other than energy and food were up 0.8 percent. The price increases were pervasive."

Changes in wholesale prices tend to be reflected after a month or two in higher or lower prices at the retail level.

Early said the effects of four months of moderation in wholesale food prices have begun to appear at grocery store checkout counters. The Carter administration, however, has opened a campaign to make sure that consumers — and not the profits of food processors and distributors — benefit from the slackening in food prices.

The Labor Department's wholesale figures reflect prices for food and other products ready for the retail market. The index, formally known as the Producer Price Index, also measures price changes for items with some processing and for items with no processing, such as raw materials.

The index for finished goods stood at 215.8 in July, 10.1 percent ahead of July 1978. The index figure means that goods that cost $100 in the 1967 base period cost $215.80 last month.

Goods at the intermediate level, those with some processing, rose 1.9 percent last month, the largest increase since October 1974, Early said. Higher-priced animal feeds pushed the food component up 6.7 percent in July.

At the same time, crude goods rose 1.8 percent. Rapid increases in animal feed costs again were blamed.

On Wednesday, the Council on Wage and Price Stability criticized food industry middlemen — processors, wholesalers and retailers — for large increases in their markups in the second quarter of this year.

The increases mean thousands of dollars to Americans, who pay for the markups. Consumers spend an estimated $170 billion on groceries a year.

The council, which oversees President Carter's voluntary wage and price guidelines, also said Wednesday it has notified 37 of the nation's 225 largest food companies that they may not be in compliance with the price standard. The companies were not identified.

Only a day earlier, the president had told a Baltimore audience middlemen and retailers were "profiting excessively."

Carter plans to meet with industry leaders to discuss the problem, according to Alfred E. Kahn, the president's chief inflation adviser. No meeting date has been set, the White House press office said.

Food industry officials say they are not particularly pleased with the administration's approach. They are, they say, as much the victim as the cause of inflation.

Robert O. Aders, president of the Washington-based Food Marketing Institute for wholesalers and retailers, said rising food prices "reflect government imposed costs and red tape along with outrageous fuel and other energy cost increases."

He added, "If the seasonal pattern holds, grocery prices will continue to ease off."

Bikeway Concept Has Commission Support

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission Wednesday night approved the concept of a Bikeway for the city of Greenville, and are indicating their support to the City Council on this subject.

Dr. Jim Hicks, president of the Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee presented proposed routes and plans for the bikeway. He was joined in the presentation by Charles Vincent of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. Vincent was assigned by the City Council to assist Bikeway Committee persons in their planning.

Vincent explained briefly that a separate bicycle lane along city streets was out of the question at this time, as the cost would run something like $50,000 a mile and would involve the complications of tree removal, sidewalk relocations and right of ways.

He noted that the current proposal by the Bikeway Committee would cost about $2,000 — the price of putting up 200 bicycle trail signs already on hand and in storage.

The map prepared by Hix, which would entail implementation in phases, recommends the first phase as the establishment of a "recreational loop." In this stage, signs would be posted on a loop that would cover the following streets — From the corner of Hooker Road and Arlington Blvd. east, across N.C. 43 to Red Banks Road; north at Hollow Drive, across Greenville Blvd, down Fourteenth Street for a short distance, then cut across to Cedar Lane; north on Cedar Lane to East Tenth Street, down Tenth to East Fifth, and west on East Fifth to Elm; north on Elm to East First Street, west on East First to Pitt Street; south on Pitt to West Fourth Street; west on West Fourth to Nash Street, south on Nash Street to Line Avenue; south on Line Avenue to Dickinson Avenue; from Dickinson hook into Hooker Road, then south on Hooker Road to the Arlington Street point.

The connecting spokes for the second phase would involve major north-south and east-west streets such as Fourteenth, Evans, Farmville Blvd., Charles Blvd., Elm Street, North Greene and Reade Circle.

In both phases, he explained, the primary emphasis would be placement of signs to indicate to motorists that the particular street was one subject to use by bicyclists, and to let bicyclists know this was part of the bikeway route. He stressed that anything to promote safety was paramount to any planning, and that hopefully in the future, new streets could be designed with separate space for bicyclists. He also stated that the bikeway concept would be publicized once it received city council sanction.

In another action, commission members approved the use of a softball field for the weekend of August 26 by the J. A.'s Uniform Softball Team for fund raising purposes.

The team will pay the full fee, and the variation to permit this long a usage is based on the fact that the team has been invited to the World Softball Tournament and wants to conduct a weekend long tournament as the means of raising money to attend the international event.

New Concern In Home Fuel

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation may be sweltering in August's heat and humidity, but authorities are looking ahead with new concern about how people will stay warm this winter.

One pessimistic report was issued Wednesday by House investigators. Another equally dim report by private surveyors was being released today.

The issue is home heating oil — its price and availability. Wednesday's House report concerned itself with availability. Previous reports on pricing have suggested the cost could jump at least 15 cents a gallon, approaching $1 a gallon in some areas.

The staff report of the House Small Business subcommittee on antitrust and restraint of trade said many heating oil distributors are behind schedule in filling customers' tanks.

The National Oil Jobbers Council has surveyed 6,500 independent oil dealers and was to release its report today.

The House report noted that staff members surveyed heating oil jobbers in Iowa and that "76 percent ... report their summer fill of home heating oil tanks is running behind where they normally would be at this time of the year."

"Most reported that they were substantially behind schedule, and few foresaw any prospect of catching up before the fall," said the report to Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa.

Oil Spill Troubling Texas Shrimp Fishers

By GREG THOMPSON

Associated Press Writer

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas

(AP) — A 40-mile-long tongue of runaway Mexican crude oil drifted ominously offshore of

Padre Island as pollution from the world's largest oil spill resumed its northward advance, troubling shrimpers already frightened by a meager harvest.

Gulf breezes that powered the huge spill from a blown-out

Mexican oil well toward the white resort beaches of the Texas Gulf Coast picked up

Wednesday. And forecasters said 10-knot winds would continue today.

"We knew the winds would kick up again, we just didn't know when," National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration spokesman Carl Posey said Wednesday night.

Though tar balls from the spill have already reached Texas beaches, the oil slick itself had halted its steady advance Tuesday when southeasterly winds diminished, setting up what Coast Guard officials called a "standoff" at best.

The progress of the giant slick, paralleling the island, 75 miles out into the Gulf, worried shrimpers who gathered in Brownsville to voice their apprehensions.

"We are not doomsdayist, but realistically, we are concerned," said Ralph Rayburn, executive director of the Texas Shrimp Association. "The shrimp industry has never been exposed to this type of threat."

Julius Collins, president of the association, said that shrimp harvests this year are running at about half the pace of last year's catch. He blamed a combination of environmental factors, including a cold winter and heavy spring and summer rains.

A Coast Guard reconnaissance flight detected "a tongue of sheen" 15 miles offshore and stretching 40 miles along Padre Island from Brownsville to 20 miles north of the Port Mansfield cut, Posey said.

He said the tongue ranged in width from about 20 miles to less than 10 miles, and contained several "pancakes and two ribbons of mousse," signifying heavier oil concentrations.

Tar balls carried by the surf continued to dot the high-water line along Padre Island beaches. Posey said the heaviest concentrations were on beaches near the Port Mansfield cut. But he said it was still nothing like the blackened beaches in Mexico.

Scientists studied currents in efforts to predict where the oil might wash ashore, but there were no indications that such predictions would be available before several days.

Slow Start For Klan's Ala. March

By SCOTT SHEPARD

SELMA, Ala. (AP) —

Several dozen robed Ku Klux

Klan members paraded across the Pettus Bridge today for the start of a Selma-to-Montgomery

"white rights" march—the route once taken by blacks

seeking voting rights in the South.

Some of the Klansmen carried Confederate and

To reach the bridge, the lined one side of the street.

Near the bridge, on the other

About a dozen Selma

policemen, a few of them

black, were on hand in the incident occurred as the

march across the bridge began.

It was on the Pettus Bridge that voting rights marchers

were clubbed by state

Selma to Montgomery.

Before beginning the

Selma Mayor Carl Morgan,

meanwhile, told reporters,

"We all deplore the actions of the Klan, black and

When the 9 a.m. starting

Market Advances

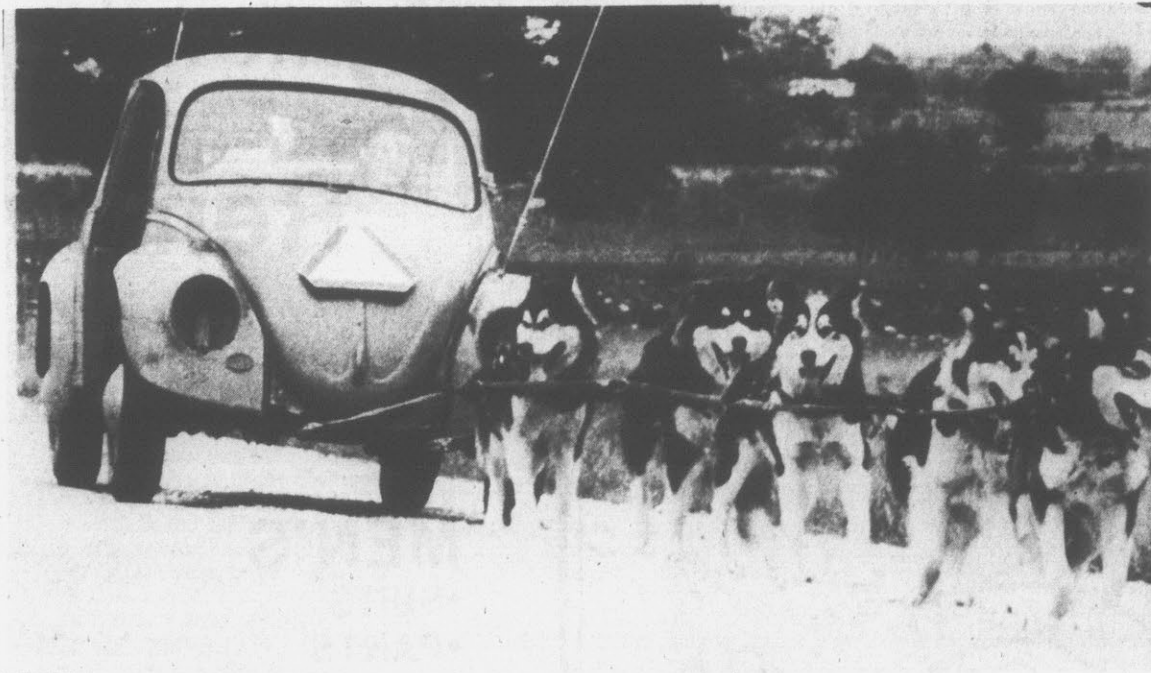

The daily average on the Greenville Tobacco Market continued to improve Wednesday as the market once again posted its best figures of the season.

J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor of the Tobacco Board of Trade here, said that the market recorded an average of $138.47 per hundred pounds yesterday, up from Tuesday's mark of $136.26 per hundred and topping Monday's record average of $136.98 per hundred.

Bryan said that Wednesday's sale saw an increase in the volume of leaf and cutters on the warehouse floors, while the amount of primings, lugs and non-descript decreased in volume.

Top practical price paid was $1.50 per pound, he said, with the buying companies taking some leaf for as much as $1.55 per pound.

Stabilization receipts declined to 9.96 percent of total sales. For the season, the market has sold 9,411,611 pounds for $12,284,965, an average of $130.53 per hundred pounds.

CP&L Customers Set New Peak Records With Wednesday Usage

By BOB THOMPSON

Associated Press Writer

Utility officials throughout the Carolinas are expecting to set more electrical usage records today, if the blistering heat of the past several days continues.

Between Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday afternoon, Carolina Power & Light Co. and Santee Cooper set all-time records for the peak amounts of power used.

Duke Power Co. and South Carolina Electric & Gas Co. had it somewhat easier. They both set seasonal records but fell short of all-time highs.

CP&L customers in North Carolina and South Carolina used 5,878 megawatts of electricity between 5:10 p.m. and 6 p.m. Wednesday, according to Ellison Clary, a spokesman in the utility's Raleigh headquarters.

Clary said Wednesday's peak demand topped the record of 5,667 megawatts, set only a week earlier. Tuesday's consumption was heading for a record before thundershowers cooled things off, he added.

The South Carolina Public Service Authority, or Santee Cooper, reported breaking its previous all-time record on Tuesday afternoon.

Santee Cooper, which serves 250,000 customers in coastal South Carolina, reported that its customers used 1,334 megawatts of electricity between 6 and 7 p.m.

Customers of the state-owned utility also set a record by consuming 24,920 megawatts of electricity during the 24-hour period ending Tuesday at midnight, said spokesman Wayne Morton in Moncks Corner.

Duke, which serves both states, was generating 9,829 megawatts late Wednesday afternoon, according to spokesman Dick Pierce in Charlotte.

Pierce said Duke's record of 9,844 megawatts was set last Jan. 4.

Another Duke spokesman, Alex Coffin, said, "barring unforeseen difficulties, we should be able to do okay" in meeting system-wide demands.

In Columbia, SCE&G's Bill Lide said the 2,233 megawatts consumed Tuesday at 6 p.m. was a record for 1979 but was short of the all-time peak of 2,271 megawatts, set on June 28, 1978.

CP&L's Clary said if weather conditions don't change by today, the utility will be looking for another record. "But nobody can say because the weather is so unpredictable," he said.

Adding discomfort for South Carolinians was a stagnant air mass which caused the National Weather Service to issue warnings Wednesday for the midlands and Piedmont.

Utility officials say the greatest strain on their generating capacities usually comes from 5 to 7 p.m., when consumers come home from work, turn on their air conditioners and prepare evening meals.

PARKING LOT MARKERS?

I'd like to go to Carolina East Mall, but wouldn't by myself because I know I'd never find my car. I wonder if the mall management has thought of marking the lanes of the parking lot (perhaps E-1, E-2, etc. on the east side, W-1, W-2, etc. on the west side) to help customers more easily keep track of their cars, once parked. Mrs. E. W.

Carolina East Mall Manager Barbara DeVoss said she appreciates your suggestion and may take it under advisement if she hears more comments and complaints about customers having difficulty locating their cars. She suggested, however, that a person take note of some landmark when he or she gets out of the car, such as an entrance, a corner of the building, etc. Then, she added, if there is a problem when you come out, don't hesitate to call on a security guard, at least one of whom is always stationed in the promenade area of the mall. He'll put you on an electric cart with him and search for your car till the two of you find it, she promised.

THE PARENTS' WAITING ROOM, in the Neonatal Nursery of the hospital is being decorated by the Greenville Junior Woman's Club.

Waiting Area Decorated By Junior Women

The Parents' Waiting Room of the Neonatal Unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital is being decorated by the Greenville Junior Woman's Club.

Draperies and carpet have been placed in the room by the club.

Pastel-striped draperies are used at windows on either side of the room which look into each of two sections of the nursery for viewing of the babies. Draw drapes are used on the nursery side of each, so nursery staff can have the window covered except when it's opened at the request of a particular family or family member. A valance and tiebacks that match the inner draperies are used in the waiting room itself.

Beige carpet covers the floor. "We are really pleased with what we've done so far, but the niceties are yet to be added — lamps, pictures, plants, and books," Junior Woman's Club Community Involvement Program Chairman Jane Moore said. "We would never have dreamed how difficult it was going to be to find just the right drapery fabric and carpeting — something that would meet all the federal safety standards, yet be pretty. Both the carpet and the draperies had to be fireproof and the draperies had to be made of material that can hold up to washing at least every 30 days, since they're to be used in the near-sterile neonatal care environment."

The project, so far, has cost the club approximately $500, with money having come from the club's general fund. More money is budgeted for additions and improvements next year. "We want the public to know that our project proceeds go back into the community," Junior Woman's Club President

Birthday Observed

Andrew Chused was honored at a tennis motif reception in celebration of his 30th birthday Tuesday at the Baywood Racquet Club.

Neighbors and friends attending included Dr. and Mrs. Richard Taft, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. James Moye, Dr. and Mrs. Randolph Williams, Mr. and Mrs. David Womack, Mr. and Mrs. G. Howard Powell, Dr. and Mrs. William Monroe, Dr. and Mrs. John Chapman and Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Lee.

Assisting at the refreshment table were Mrs. Moye and Mrs. Womack while Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Chused and Mrs. Chapman organized play. A prize for the "best improved double fault" went to Chused.

Dining tables were decorated with a white and yellow color scheme.

Good-byes were said by Mrs. Chused and Dr. and Mrs. Taft.

High Bacteria Count In Laundries

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Clothing washed at a self-service laundry can be less sanitary than when you put it in the machine, says Thelma Thompson, an extension clothing specialist. Bacteria from previous loads can survive in the tub and contaminate the next load.

Ms. Thompson says Iowa State University researchers found a high bacteria count in four different self-service laundries they tested. They also found the bacteria could be controlled by running a wash cycle with disinfectant, either quaternary ammonium, chlorine or phenolic.

Dog Owners: No Parking!

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am a volunteer with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. So far this summer we have had several cases of pets who were overcome by heat prostration after having been left in automobiles parked in the hot sun.

A few years ago you had a terrific piece in your column about this problem. I am enclosing it. Would you please consider a rerun?

EILEEN R. IN DOVER, DEL.

DEAR EILEEN: You're doggone right I will:

DEAR PET OWNERS: With summer here, please do not take your pet along for the ride and leave him locked in a parked car while you run errands and shop.

When the temperature is 85 degrees outside, the temperature inside a parked car (even with the windows slightly open) will reach 102 degrees within 10 minutes. And in 30 minutes it will reach 120 degrees!

The normal body temperature of a dog is approximately 102 degrees, and it can withstand approximately 108 degrees for a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage or death.

If you must leave your pet locked in a parked car — leave him home!

P.S. My pet consultant says, "NEVER park a car in the sun — even with the windows open — if a pet is inside."

DEAR ABBY: I have a strange problem. Should I be the matron of honor at my ex-husband's wedding?

I know the woman he's marrying (slightly) but we're really not all that close. I neither like nor dislike her. I still can't figure out why she asked me.

My husband has asked our two children, ages 5 and 9, to be in the wedding party, so, of course, they will be there. I am not carrying the torch for my ex, but I have no desire to attend this wedding.

How should I handle it? I don't want to make up any lies.

EX-WIFE WITH NO REGRETS
necessary to explain why.

DEAR ABBY: Did a letter in your column ever ring a bell with us!

Upon retiring and moving to San Diego several years ago, we started to hear from acquaintances from our home state. They said, "We've heard so much about San Diego — we'd love to come out and spend a week or so with you — seeing the sights and enjoying the weather."

Here's how we handled it: We'd write back saying, "We're so happy you're planning to come to San Diego. When you get here and get settled, be sure to give us a ring. We'd love to get together for a drink."

You'd be surprised at the number of people who wrote back to say, "We've changed our plans... we'll take a rain-check."

We enjoy guests, but not the type who invite themselves.

NO FREELoadERS IN S.D.

DEAR ABBY: How does one address mail to a husband and wife who are both doctors?

MRS. J.F.

DEAR MRS. F.: Address mail to Drs. John and Jane Doe.

DEAR ABBY: From time to time you print a letter from a woman asking if she should reveal to her fiance that she isn't a virgin. I say, take the risk and tell him. If he drops her, it will hurt, but she will be spared a difficult marriage. A man who is rigid on virginity is bound to have rigid attitudes about everything else. If he feels he must have a perfect bride, will he settle for less than a perfect wife?

I had an abortion at age 18. In subsequent years there were other boyfriends. The ones I wanted to marry, I told. It seemed I was always saying goodbye until finally a man came along who said, "Forget it. The past doesn't matter. As far as I'm concerned, our lives began the day we met."

This man was worth the wait. We've been married for 25 years and I have never known the fear of wondering what my husband would do when he found out I wasn't perfect; he's known all along.

Acceptance "as is" is the most beautiful compliment a man can give his wife. It's wonderful to know that one doesn't have to be perfect to be loved.

HAPPY "AS IS" IN BONITA, CALIF.

DEAR HAPPY: One who is loved has probably earned it. Congratulations.

Downtown Pitt Plaza

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have always been led to believe that if you lose a daughter or son to an apartment/dormitory/barracks, you gain a closet.

An extra closet is a big thing with parents. Sometimes it makes the difference between sleeping with a set of golf clubs or eating dinner every night with a box of sewing scraps on your lap.

When our children were younger, sometimes my husband and I would sneak into their bedrooms as they slept. We would gaze at their closet as I squeezed his hand and smiled. "Just think, dear... one day all of that will be yours."

We fantasized about the time each of us would have a rod of our own for clothes... a shelf without Christmas decorations... floor space without boxes marked, "RAINSOAKED HALLOWEEN MASKS" and "EXPIRED WARRANTIES."

When the first child peeled off, we waved goodbye and ran to her closet. We couldn't get the door open. When we did, we couldn't get it closed. There were dolls, animal-shaped pillows, old records "that would one day be classics," traffic signs, posters, and 15 or 20 boxes marked, "DO NOT TOUCH."

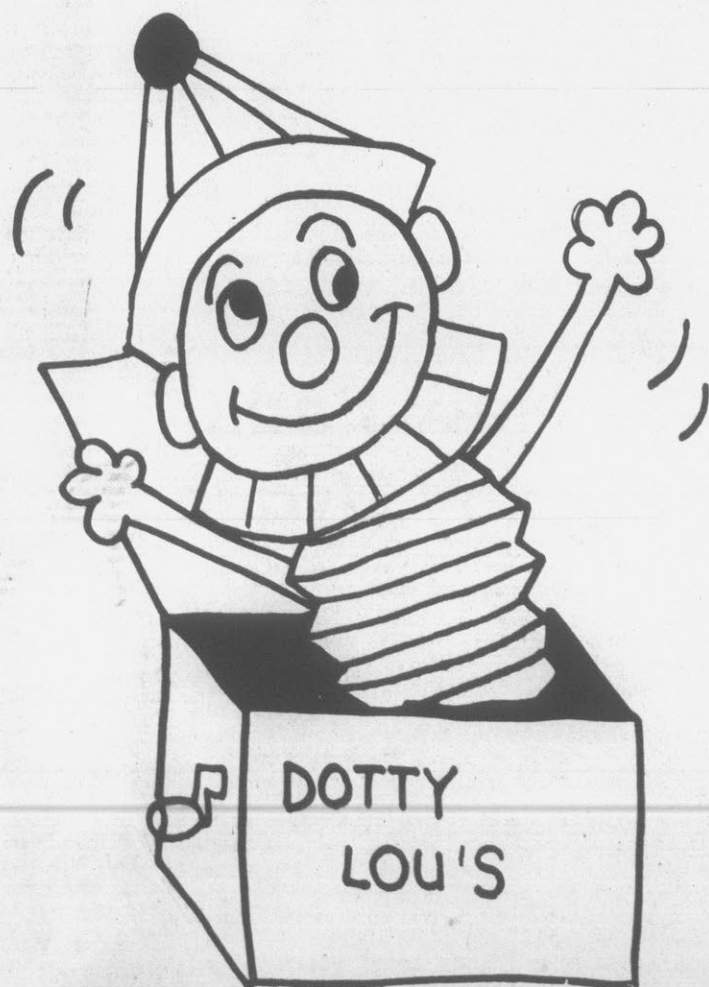

When the second child relocated, we spoke openly of the closet and what we would do when it was vacated. We soon lost hope when he wheeled a bicycle into our closet and said, "I don't have room to store it in my closet and if I leave it out in the garage, it'll get ripped off."

Today, I don't think anyone can touch us on closet occupancy. We've been running at capacity for nearly 30 years. We are storing composition books (lined and unlined), 2000 friendship pictures, fuzzy dogs, rubber worms, graduation tassels, rugs from Disneyland, pennants, fins, sand-filled cameras, basketballs, kites, dog-eared letters, college catalogues, tennis trophies and license plates.

All I know is I'm sick of the battle. I'm sick of wearing clothes that look like they've been laminated, sick of having children come back to visit their drums, sick of falling over tennis rackets without string and jackets that don't fit anyone. Let the word go out... when I go... if I don't have a closet of my own... I'm not going.

Hopeful News in Medicine

Every year almost a quarter of a million infants in this country are born with birth defects. It is estimated that there are more than a thousand different types of such problems. So vast are the variety of genetic disorders that it has been necessary to use highly sophisticated computers to keep track of them.

Dr. Lawrence R. Shapiro, of the Westchester County Medical Center in Valhalla, N.Y., is using the computer to help him in the diagnosis of such defects. The cause, the complications, the inheritance patterns and the treatment can be immediately evaluated by the new computer technique.

About 20 such centers have been established all over the United States. These are linked to the Center for Birth Defects Information Services at the Tufts-New England Medical Center in Boston. The National Foundation-March of Dimes has been one of the key sponsors for this important medical network.

Painstaking research of the medical literature that normally would take many days can now be done within minutes. Much valuable information is constantly being accumulated that will eventually spare parents the headache associated with birth defects.

A new concept in convalescence is being tried in many hospitals. At the Tel Aviv University Hospital, an innovative program has been started to speed psychological and physical recovery. Patients who suffer a heart attack or those who have had severe surgery and are almost ready to be discharged recuperate in a hotel room rather than in a hospital bed. At the New York University Medical Center, a similar program is being tried. Patients are sent to a convalescent building where they can adjust to the rapid change from the hospital to home. Complete supervision and training programs for the patients and their families make the transition easier. They learn how to cope with their special problems. They are given lectures and psychological support.

Patients are thus weaned away from the security of hospital beds and are more rapidly able to return to full activity when they return home. Of great value is the fact that this "half-way" program markedly reduces hospital costs and frees beds that are urgently needed for acute care.

Before long, this concept will undoubtedly be adopted by many other hospitals.

Nixon Era Was The Low Point

Richard M. Nixon left the White House five years ago — the first president to resign from office.

The resignation came only after the House Judiciary Committee had recommended impeachment proceedings against the president, for the Watergate coverup.

The former president lived in seclusion for 18 months and The Associated Press reports he still can't speak, travel or buy a home without stirring up protest.

His one warm reception was on a trip to China, where he is well regarded for improving relations between China and the United States.

In an interview with David Frost, Nixon said, "I let the American people down, and I have to carry that burden with me for the rest of my life." He said he never expected to serve in a political position again.

The Nixon era is long past, and all the coverups of Watergate are history. While no bitterness should be aimed at the former president, it must always be recognized his administration was perhaps the lowest point for the office of chief executive.

Lunch Increases Hurt Family Budget

Inflation is everywhere and families this fall will almost surely see its effects in the cost of student lunches.

Ralph W. Eaton, food services director for the N. C. Department of Public Instruction, says, "Just about everybody I've talked to said they would probably have to go up."

Average cost of lunches now stands at 40 to 70 cents.

That, of course, is a reasonable price for a meal, but still any increase will hit the budget of a family which is sending several children to school each day.

It will be another erosion of the family budget caused by inflation.

State Ports Serve State

By BILL NOBLITT
WILMINGTON — Unless you are in a business directly connected with imports and exports, it's difficult to realize that the North Carolina Ports mean a great deal to the economy of the entire state.

That is one of the most difficult messages which the State Ports Authority is trying to send to all Tar Heels, and even members of the General Assembly have a hard time getting the point.

In the past, the tendency has been to name residents of the immediate area around the two port cities of Wilmington and Morehead City to the governing board.

Now, the membership has been greatly expanded, and at a recent meeting of the authority, there were people from all across the state; both as members of the group, and as interested observers.

Busy
A tour of the sprawling Wilmington Port shows why Gov. Jim Hunt believes that the key to future success of the ports will be strong citizen support statewide.

Turkish tobacco destined for flavorful additions to Tar Heel cigarettes; Philippine hardwoods addressed to the furniture factories of the western Piedmont; chemicals and petroleum products which are the lifeblood of numerous industries in the state; hundreds of other goods jostle for space with North Carolina agricultural, forestland, and industrial products slated for shipment back across the seas.

"It is a matter of patriotism, for the ports create business, jobs, and economic activity not only on the coast, but in Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Charlotte, and Asheville," Gov. Hunt says.

"We are developing special marketing efforts to convince more of our industries that are now shipping out of our state to ship through the ports within this state. North Carolina leads the South in exports...a great part of its agricultural goods. Our ports benefit not just the regions they are in, but the entire state," the governor noted. Yet many firms continue to ship through ports at Norfolk, Charleston, and Savannah. Sometimes, that is because the news that the North Carolina ports have caught up in equipment and organization and can now handle the business well.

"Norfolk and Charleston are no longer going to get the slack we can't handle because now we can handle it. Those businesses that haven't checked out the Wilmington and Morehead City ports in the past two years should.

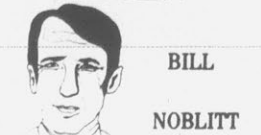

"They'll find new and improved services, expanded facilities, and a strong desire to be the best-run ports on the East Coast," Hunt commented.

During the visit to the ports, Gov. Hunt vigorously defended the move of a container crane from Morehead City to Wilmington; a decision which created a loud outcry in Morehead City. "In the first month, the crane has already been used more than it was in the nearly two years it was at Morehead City," he said.

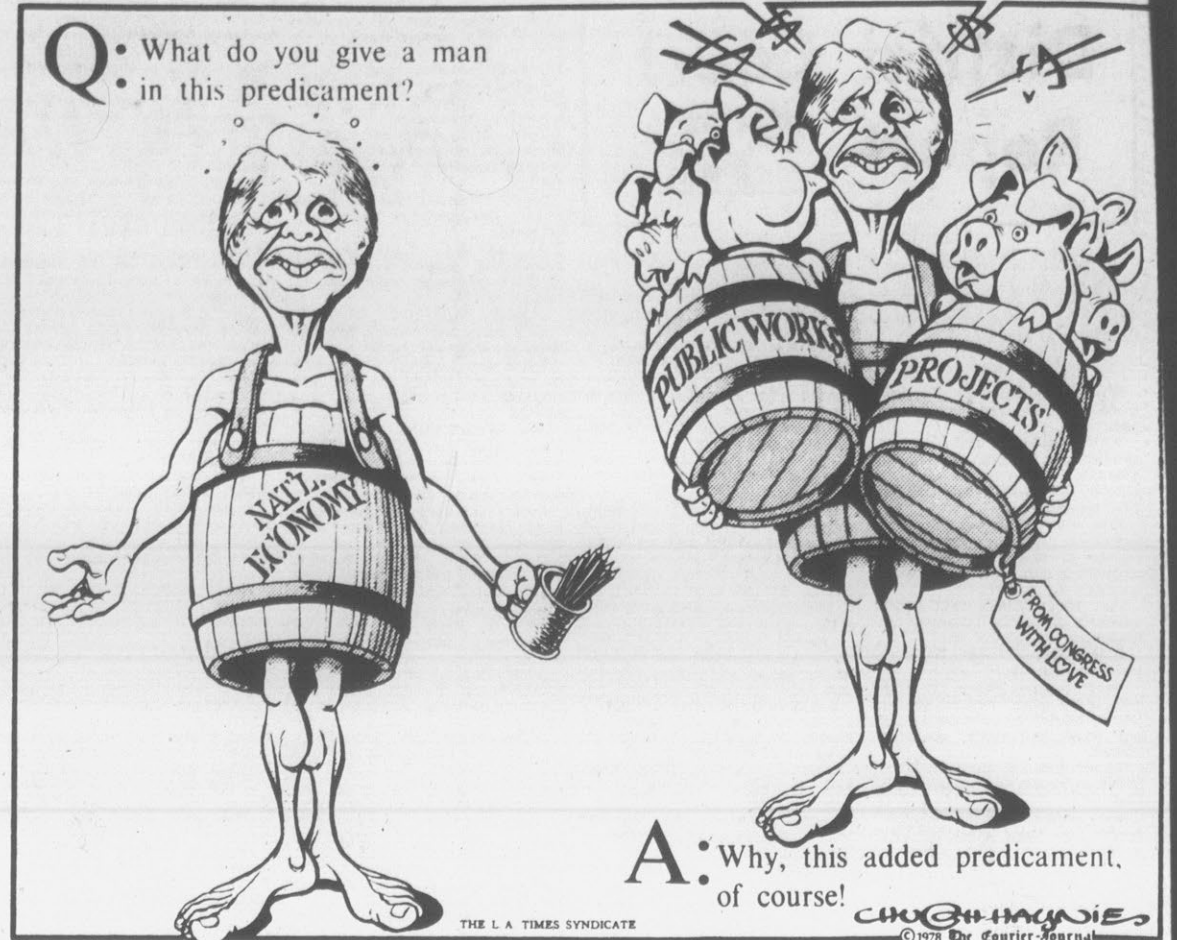

for businesses in North Carolina and the region to realize it is a "whole new ball game at North Carolina's State Ports. We are not the ports we were. We are better. We are North Carolina's new ports.

Tar Heel businessmen, says Hunt, need to take a second look at the ports. The record proves that the facilities are doing a much improved job. The subsidy of $150,000 per year from the taxpayers has been eliminated; a record profit was reported for the past year of better than half-a-million dollars — up from a $152,000 deficit last year and a 220 percent increase over the previous best year.

It is time, Gov. Hunt says,

Jerry Brown: Runner

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry Brown authorized the formation of a Brown-for-President committee the other day, thus elevating himself to the ranks of those candidates who are avowed but unannounced. This altogether predictable event set a train of thought in motion.

I am developing a theory about Jerry Brown. I think he is the left wing's answer to George Wallace. Far apart as the two statesmen may appear to be, the governor of California and the former governor of Alabama share a common and insatiable appetite: They feed on public attention.

Wallace is out of the picture now, the paralyzed victim of an assassination attempt, but in his prime he was something to cover. He lived and breathed politics. He ate and slept politics. To the best of my recollection, I never had a conversation with the governor that departed for even five minutes from political themes. I can hear him now, telling us for the 20th time how Maryland "recapitulated" his vote in the primary of 1964. He used to put a spitball spin on the verb, so that it slid out of that catfish mouth one slow syllable at a time.

For George Wallace, the race was the thing-nagging reporters, surging crowds, hands and faces, sweat running free. He loved the lights, cameras, microphones, the limousine that waited at a coliseum door. He dreamed of winning enough electoral votes to throw the presidential election into the House, and for 12 years he pursued that dream through the smoky haze of the campaign trail. Send 'em a message! In the eyes of a jaded press, Wallace was an ever-living doll.

Jerry Brown strikes me the same way. The governor of California makes news the way Mozart made melodies, for the fun of it. And just as Wallace was a product of the segregationist South, the red clay of Dixie forever in his hands, so Brown reflects the giddy ambience that makes California unique among the states. I know, I know, 90 percent of Californians are as sober, as conventional, as respectable as so many inhabitants of Iowa, but the wacko 10 percent create an atmosphere you find nowhere else.

This is Brown's life support. The thin air sustains him. In a world of go-go politics, he is a topless intellectual; he is having the time of his life.

Two or three weeks ago, in a typical caper, he appointed a fellow named Edison Miller to the Orange County Board of Supervisors. The appointment set off a marvelously satisfying explosion: Miller is a former prisoner of war who was accused of collaborating with the North Vietnamese. Conservatives understandably fell into apoplectic fits.

The Miller appointment was part of Brown's surge of renewed affection for actress Jane Fonda and her husband Tom Hayden. To publicize his esteem, Brown nominated La Fonda to the state Arts Council. The state Senate rejected the nomination by a stinging vote of five yeas and 28 nays. The lady howled that the spirit of McCarthyism was hovering over Sacramento. The governor added his own lamentations to hers, but the California Assembly was unmoved: Three times in three weeks the rebellious legislators overrode his vetoes. Democratic members took turns denouncing his "contempt" and his "hypocrisy." Brown denounced them back. Glorious!

The gorgeous eruptions continue, polluting this lambent land with brimstone. Brown asked the University of California Board of Regents to end its connection with two nuclear weapons laboratories. The regents refused, 15-7, whereupon Brown's youthful groupies lay down, blocking exits from the Extension Center where the regents met. A spokeswoman, name of Diane Thomas-Glass, said, "They will no longer administer the

Cancer Still Lingers

By DON MCLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The "cancer on the presidency" that led to Richard M. Nixon's resignation five years ago still lingers, in the opinion of the four men who fate charged with removing it.

Leon Jaworski, the special prosecutor who persuaded a grand jury not to indict Nixon, says the aftermath of Watergate has lingered much longer than he expected, and he blames the ex-president for it.

"I'm not saying it's the sole reason," Jaworski said, "But I think Nixon's own conduct has kept it alive, the fact that he's emerged publicly at times and has not shown any particular repentance, no particular remorse. I think this has kept people agitated."

Nixon announced on Aug. 8, 1974, that he would resign the following day. For the anniversary of the first presidential resignation of an American president, four leading figures in the Watergate drama were interviewed: Jaworski, who went to the Supreme Court and tried loose the White House tapes; former Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., head of the Senate Watergate Committee; Rep. Peter Rodino, D-N.J., who presided over the House Judiciary Committee that returned articles of impeachment, and John Sirica, the U.S. district judge who refused to let Watergate pass into history as a simple burglary.

"I think the people felt like that was a very unwise and a premature act," Ervin said, "that he ought to have waited until a grand jury had indicted President Nixon and he had been tried and convicted before he granted a pardon."

"I think that made the American people doubt whether President Ford had sufficient wisdom to exercise

THE INSIDE REPORT

White House Paranoia

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Twice since Jimmy Carter's domestic summit, White House aides have made clandestine efforts to veto John B. Connally, a Republican presidential candidate, as a speaker directly competing with the president and his men.

Although both efforts failed, the White House "suggestions" to both hosts — the National Assn. of County Officials (NACO) and the National Medical Assn. (NMA) — surprised veteran politicians.

Carter himself spoke before several hundred county officials in Kansas City July 16, one day after his dramatic Sunday night speech over national television. The not-so-subtle proposal that Connally appear on a day other than July 16 was coldly rebuffed.

On the other occasion, Stuart Eizenstat's domestic affairs office telephoned the black doctors' association and gently suggested a delay in Connally's July 31 speech in Detroit. He was to follow an address by Joseph Onak, Eizenstat's top assistant for health. The doctors, not so gently, ruled out any change.

Jimmy's S.O.S. To Henry
President Carter's S.O.S. to Henry Kissinger, a telephone call beseeching Kissinger's support for the SALT II treaty, flopped. Kissinger offered to support the strategic arms treaty only if it is twinned with massive new U.S. arms expenditures.

The telephone call, unreported until now, came July 29 to Kissinger's Georgetown house from the presidential retreat at Camp David. The former secretary of state, who has been steadfastly wooed for months by Carter men with special briefings and other inducements, was courteous — but immovable.

Unless the U.S. immediately corrects the declining strategic balance, Kissinger told Carter, he could not recommend Senate approval. A footnote: despite Kissinger's strong July 31 testimony to this effect, the fact is that the Nixon-Kissinger White House secretly opposed the B-1 bomber in 1970. They switched only after David Packard threatened to quit as deputy secretary of defense over the issue.

White House Nixed
Secretary of Energy-designate Charles Duncan, an unknown quantity in Washington even though he has served as deputy secretary of defense throughout the Carter administration, has served notice he will not be a puppet serving under White House-imposed subordinates.

The White House has been pushing top energy department posts for two staunch environmentalists who have been in the hair of James Schlesinger, Duncan's predecessor as energy secretary: Eliot Cutler of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and Katherine Schirmer of the White House domestic policy staff. Plans were for Cutler to be deputy secretary, Schirmer to be assistant secretary for policy.

But Duncan, a multi-billionaire Texas industrialist, has been miffed by Cutler's OMB directives setting forth the new order at Energy. Consequently, Duncan has passed the word he would like to retain the present Energy Department team, keeping Cutler and Schirmer where they are.

McGovern Boosts Connally
John B. Connally may not have welcomed it, but he recently received a quiet boost from none other than Sen. George McGovern.

When Connally announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination Jan. 24, McGovern televised a bitter blast at Connally's honesty, ethics and better about it.

On July 27, McGovern took the Senate floor and suggested his "personal passions had taken precedence over objective judgment" on Jan. 24, because of Connally's sharp attacks against him as 1972 Democratic presidential nominee. "I frankly overdid it," McGovern said. "John Connally is not as bad a candidate as I made him out to be."

As evidence, McGovern inserted in the record an interview with Connally in Politics Today by ex-McGovern aide Alan Baron. "I find much of what he says to be good common sense," McGovern noted.

Another Reagan Setback
The Third in a series of significant procedural setbacks has been suffered by Ronald Reagan's front-running Republican presidential candidacy, preventing a repeat of his 1976 Alabama clean sweep.

Over anguished protests of Alabama Reaganites, the state Republican committee voted, 71 to 37, to base results of the March 4 presidential primary on a proportional representation instead of winner-take-all. Behind the change were forces of Reagan rivals George Bush

To the editor:
I couldn't believe the audacity of The Tobacco Institute's advertisement in The Family Weekly section of The Daily Reflector.
They insinuate that we non-smokers as a rule don't mind choking on thoughtless smokers' smoke. Well, that just isn't so. I'll admit some of us are too insecure to stand up for our rights when we're being stifled, but we all suffer.
I was at a banquet in Morganton with my husband last night. The banquet was put on by the N. C. Lions Association for the Blind. I had been there for only a few minutes when I wondered if they were gathered together to help the blind or to make me blind. I had smokers on all sides of me — one a pipe smoker — and if I had not had the program to fan with, I'd have suffocated. When I awoke this a. m., my eyes were red and I had laryngitis, just as I always have when I'm forced to inhale second-hand smoke.
Am I the exception? No! Other people's smoke does hurt the non-smoker.
Come on, non-smokers, let The Tobacco Institute know how you really feel. Tell them what you tell other non-smokers when a smoker isn't around. The address is The Tobacco Institute, 1776 K St., NW, Washington, D. C. 20006. We are the majority, you know!

Knowing Limits Is The Start

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "Knowledge of our limitations seems to me to be the beginning of wisdom," said Paul Volcker as he took the oath of office as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.
The statement, made mainly in reference to the oppressive inflation rate, is most likely true. But it is true also that the problems exist to some extent because of our failure to acknowledge limitations.
Two reminders:
1. At the peak of one of the longest economic expansions in the nation's history, the Carter administration has run up some of the biggest budget deficits of all time. Budget deficits, which result essentially from trying to do more than can be afforded, generally are thought to be acceptable during times of recession. During expansions they are considered inflationary.
Washington wasn't the only administration guilty of seeking to exceed its limits. Many state and local governments did too.
2. Consumer installment credit in June reached $292.48 billion, 17.1 percent higher than in June 1978. The buying binge was so strong that some economists believe it prolonged the expansion by a year.
At the same time, the ability to take on more debt was declining. The worker's take-home pay was falling — by 0.4 percent in January, compared to a year earlier. By 0.8 in February, and 1.8 in March.
After a pause in April, the fall accelerated to 3.3 percent in May. By then, repayment of debt was taking 21 percent of disposable income, an alltime high. Savings had shrunk; debt was oppressively large.
Many Americans resorted to a well-known but once scorned technique for raising money: They let inflation finance them; they mortgaged their homes, and used the money so raised to buy consumer goods.
Morgan Guaranty Trust estimated this week that in each of the past two years homeowners have drawn out — borrowed — $50 billion in spendable cash from the rise in market values of their homes. And thus sharply raised their monthly mortgage bill.
The question now is whether, as Volcker suggested, the country has recognized it limits and is ready to trod the path of wisdom. There are indications it has.
—President Carter has restated his intention of using what he calls budget restraint to lessen the pressure on prices.
—The new head of the Federal Reserve Board, and G. William Miller, the new Secretary of the Treasury, have declared their intention of using their offices to check the demands that lead to inflation.
—Spending restrictions, some of them similar to the Proposition 13 limitations in California, have been enacted in several states — in as many as 20, depending upon the interpretation.

the awesome powers that belong to the presidency," Ervin said.

Jaworski, a Houston lawyer, also believes the pardon hurt Ford, but not the presidency as an institution.

"Ford was handicapped some because undoubtedly there were many people who took umbrage at the granting of the pardon," Jaworski said. "But I don't see how the present incumbent can use that as any excuse."

But Rodino says President Carter is suffering from Watergate's aftermath.

"Despite the fact that President Carter has been a very moral, decent man and there is no question about his honesty, nonetheless I think that what does remain is an uncertainty about all of our public officials and whether they are really to be trusted," Rodino said.

But all four of the men agree that their Watergate operation did succeed in at least one sense in removing what Nixon aide John Dean had called a "cancer on the presidency."

"I think it was a success because it proved that our institutions of government do work, and they worked without missing a beat," Rodino said. "And I think this is something that should give us pride."

Ervin added: "I think the fact that when the president proved faithless to his constitutional trust ... and Judge Sirica and the Supreme Court and the Senate committee and the House Judiciary Committee remained faithful to their constitutional trusts (it) convinced the people of the wisdom of the Founding Fathers in dividing the powers of government among the president, the Congress and the courts."

Sirica, now graduated to the semiretirement of a senior judge, is particularly proud of the performance of the courts.

"I think the general run of the public, the people, millions of people, have more respect, more confidence in the judicial system," Sirica said. "And many other things have happened as a result of it."

"We got a very good, strong new campaign election law, some accountability now. No longer can the big contributors more or less control an election. They have to account. I think that was a wonderful thing that happened as a result of Watergate."

Rodino also cited such Watergate-inspired reforms as regulation of lobbyists, government ethics rules and a new charter for the FBI.

And Congress has asserted itself as a co-equal branch of government, Rodino said, adding Congress was saying to the president: "You may be the president and we respect you as such and you have the powers that you do under the Constitution, but we have certain authority and we want to see that you don't abuse it."

weapons lab except over our bodies."

Brown swims in this milieu as easily as a shark in shoal water; his fin is always showing. Like Wallace, after two terms as a governor, he now seeks larger seas to swim in. He recalls his heady triumphs in the primaries of 1976, when he won Maryland on May 18, Nevada on May 25 and his own California by a landslide on June 8. He can no more stay away from the primaries of 1980 than a compulsive crap shooter can swear off the dice.

Brown has little chance of winning the Democratic nomination, none of winning the White House. His reputation as a flaky opportunist is too firmly fixed. But nothing in the rulebook says a flaky guy can't run, and Brown is running. Hallelujah! Hello, Gertrude, gimme rewrite! We've got us another ever-living doll.

That procedural change does not doom Reagan in Alabama, much less nationally. But it follows similar procedural defeats in Arkansas and Illinois — an odd pattern for a candidate far out in the lead.

Laitin's Future?

A powerful post is being held open for Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Joseph Laitin, the Carter Administration publicist most hated by the Georgia Mafia in the White House.

The job: administrative assistant to an influential Democratic member of the House from a major eastern state. The offer came after the sacking of Laitin's boss, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal. The congressman's rationale: since Laitin himself was getting some of the blame for Blumenthal's alleged disloyalty, Laitin obviously would not be allowed to remain in the Carter administration.

Laitin, 64, regarded as Washington's consummate public relations man, is considering the offer. Some politicians do not rule out the possibility that he might be kept on by Blumenthal's successor, G. William Miller, despite White House animosity.

At Old Age Of 14, McKinnon Is Over The Hill As Marble Champ

ROWLAND, N.C. (AP) — At age 14, Craig McKinnon will have to consider his marble-shooting days over. He's finally gone over the hill.

It doesn't matter that his shooting eye is as sharp as it ever was, that the small glass spheres fly off his hand with bullet speed or that he has the killer instinct that separates the winners from the also-rans. He can't shoot anymore because he's too old.

But age did not prevent Craig from reaching the top. Out of two million competitors, his steady hand and calm nerve prevailed to place him fifth in the nation in his specialty — marbles.

After four tense days of shooting game after game of marbles against the nation's 50 best, he literally shot himself into the finals, and took home the fifth-place trophy in the Big Blue Marble Tournament.

The tournament was sponsored by International Telephone and Telegraph Inc. in Wildwood, N.J., June 25-29.

Craig was not the only North Carolinian to place in the top ten in the tourney. Twelve-year-old Anthony Chavis of Maxton tied for eighth place in the tournament.

Craig and his champion category shooter returned to the little Robeson County town with a silver trophy which is half as tall as he is and a stack of shooter's tails from the Wildwood competition.

After his arrival home, he placed the shiny trophy on the television set along with three other marble trophies and hid behind a door.

"My mother like to have a fit when she saw I'd won. She took me all around the neighborhood showing me and the trophy off," Craig said, laughing.

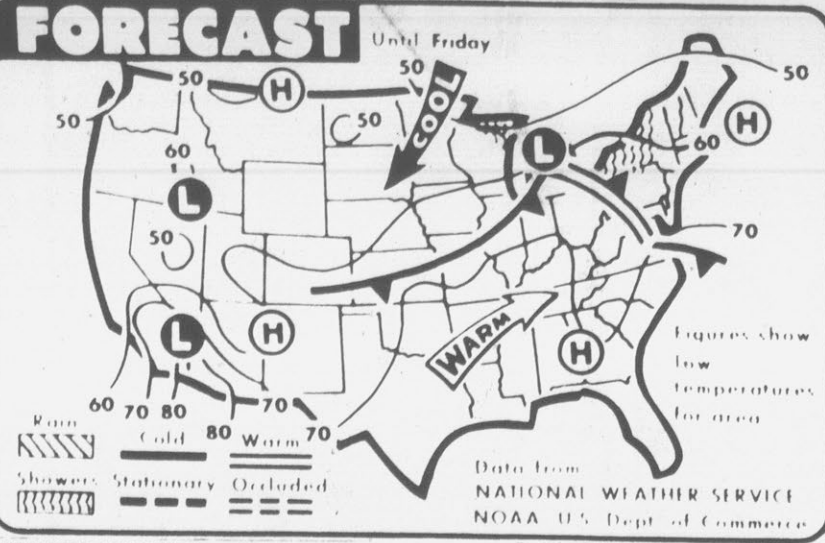

Craig is no Muhammad Ali when it comes to talking about his prowess in shooting marbles. But he does take some allowance from all that modesty. "I'm the best in Rowland," he said. That statement is backed up by the fact that no one challenged him for the town's championship.

He later won a regional shoot-out in Lumberton by beating only two other opponents to claim the crown.

"That weren't no competition," he said.

Craig could have been fazed by the fact that after years of beating friends on the dirt surfaces around his home, he had to switch to concrete for the national finals.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday, for most of the nation. Cooler readings are expected for the upper Great Lakes and the New England area. Showers are forecast for western New England. (AP Laserphoto)

Hail and at least one confirmed tornado injured thirteen persons and caused an estimated $250,000 damage in Ohio, while widely scattered thunderstorms elsewhere prompted flash flood warnings.

Thunderstorms were reported over the Gulf Coast states and from the central Rockies across the nation to Pennsylvania early today.

A flash flood watch was issued for Iowa, and tornado watches were issued for Virginia and West Virginia.

The Marion County, Ohio, sheriff's office said a tornado touched down in a housing complex south of Marion, destroying one house and heavily damaging nine others.

No injuries were reported, but the Red Cross, which arranged motel accommodations for homeless residents, estimated damage at $250,000.

Thirteen persons suffered minor injuries from flying debris when high winds struck the Marion County Fairgrounds, toppling some tents.

Among the injured treated at area hospitals were children who were in the "Moon Walk" on the midway when it became briefly airborne.

The storms, accompanied by high winds and hail in some areas, knocked out power to thousands of homes and left numerous roads blocked by felled trees and limbs.

The National Weather Service said funnel clouds were sighted in Guernsey, Erie, Seneca and Medina counties. Marble-size hail was reported in Massillon, and winds were clocked at 75 mph at East Sparta in Stark County.

Considerable storm damage was reported in Coshocton, Guernsey, Richland and Licking counties. Power outages and downed trees to a lesser degree also occurred in Delaware, Franklin, Morrow and Union counties.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 44 at Sawyer Air Force Base, near Marquette, Mich., to 93 at Blythe, Calif.

Men's Day Will Be Observed

Men's Day will be observed at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. The Rev. David Daniels will be the speaker.

At 3 p.m. there will be a talent program for St. Luke Free Will Baptist Church. At 7:30 p.m. there will be a musical program featuring the Rock Island Singers of Fountain. The public is invited to attend.

Charge Dentist In Assault Case

GARNER, N.C. (AP) — A Garner dentist was arrested Wednesday and charged with assaulting the 5-year-old daughter of Wake County Deputy Sheriff Sandy L. Johnson.
 Dr. Bobby L. Raynor, 38, was charged with assault on a minor child, a misdemeanor. He is accused of assaulting Crystal Lynette Johnson.
 Mrs. Johnson took her daughter to the dentist's office to have a cavity filled. She later filed the complaint after her daughter came out of the inner office.
 Raynor is specifically accused of "...grabbing the said child around the neck and choking her, causing several blood bruises."

FBI Expert Testifies That Holes May Match Up With Mrs. MacDonald's Wounds

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-one thrusts of an icpick could have made 48 holes in the pajama top found placed over Colette MacDonald's body, a former FBI laboratory expert testified Wednesday.

made of the ripped dark blue top, folded the way it was found on top of Mrs. MacDonald's body, Paul Stombaugh showed markers placed in the holes and how they conformed to the 21 wounds found on Mrs. MacDonald's chest.

Former Green Beret doctor Jeffrey MacDonald, 35, is charged with stabbing and bludgeoning to death Mrs. MacDonald, 26, and the couple's two children, Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, while stationed at Fort Bragg in February 1970.

He says he was wearing the top when attacked by at least four drug-crazed intruders, one of whom carried a candle and chanted, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pigs." He says he later placed it over his wife's inert body. The top had 48 puncture holes in it, Stombaugh testified. MacDonald had fewer than 10 puncture wounds.

Stombaugh's testimony and its credibility are crucial to the government's case against the Huntington Beach, Calif., emergency-room physician.

And defense attorney Bernard Segal honed in on Stombaugh's credentials during cross-examination.

Wednesday, he attacked Stombaugh's analysis of impressions left on a sheet found lying near Mrs. MacDonald's body. Stombaugh said one mark could have been made by a bare shoulder, two more by bloody hands and others by the pajama tops the MacDonalds were wearing.

Segal tried to show Stombaugh's testimony was based on observation, not on scientific analysis. Something that looked like a shoulder impression could have been any number of things, Segal maintained. Stombaugh agreed, but said his 16 years of FBI lab experience led to his conclusions.

"So far," Segal said later, "I think the jury understands that in so-called fabric impressions analysis, their view of it is as good as his view of it."

At one point Wednesday, Segal called Stombaugh a "pseudoscientist." Prosecution attorneys objected, and U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. ordered the jury to disregard the remark.

Blood on the sheet and on MacDonald's pajama top matched Mrs. MacDonald's type, previous witnesses have said. The sheet also bore imprints from MacDonald's top, and Stombaugh said he was able to match up blood stains on the top and the sheet.

Prosecutors are expected to argue MacDonald carried his wife into their bedroom in the sheet.

Stombaugh also testified that bloody impressions on a bathmat found draped over Mrs. MacDonald could have been made by a knife and icpick prosecutors say were the murder weapons.

The Army dropped its charges against MacDonald in 1970. A federal grand jury indicted him in 1975, after a reinvestigation that included the fabric impression analysis.

TESTIFIES AT MACDONALD TRIAL — Former FBI agent Paul Stombaugh leaves the Federal Building in Raleigh Tuesday after testifying in the murder trial of Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald. Stombaugh testified that 48 puncture holes were found in a pajama shirt that MacDonald claims he was wearing when his family was slain in 1970. (AP Laserphoto)

Doctors Found Society

Seek Men In Robbery

GOLDSTON, N.C. (AP) — Chatham County authorities and the state Highway Patrol are searching for two men who robbed a Goldston branch of The Carolina Bank Wednesday morning.

The manager of the bank was taken hostage after the two men robbed the bank. But Johnny Gaines, who was later released, engaged the robbers in a three-mile automobile chase. The car was last seen headed north on U.S. 421 toward Siler City.

Greenville ophthalmologists met last night at the residence of Dr. Charles T. Pace to found the Greenville Ophthalmological Society.

All local ophthalmologists were invited to be charter members of the scientific group, composed of medical doctors who specialize in surgery and diseases of the eye. Dr. Pace was elected president and Dr. David W. White was elected secretary. Dr. James Fix, neuro-anatomist and member of the Department of Anatomy of East Carolina University School of Medicine, was elected to honorary membership.

Regular scientific meetings will be held bimonthly beginning in September and ending in May.

Physicals Still Best Method

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Despite the development of special breast X-rays and other diagnostic tools, the best way to find breast cancer is still a yearly physical exam, a study shows.

However, the researchers conclude that as women become more adept at examining themselves for breast cancer, home screening for the disease may become as effective as an annual checkup by a doctor.

Other health experts have urged that women who run a high risk of developing breast cancer should have a yearly X-ray, called a mammography.

But the latest report concludes this method is so inaccurate it is probably not worth the added doses of radiation, which some critics have said may itself cause breast cancer.

Breast cancer is the most common form of cancer among women. In the United States, 35,000 women are expected to die from it this year. The disease strikes nearly one out of 13 women.

About 1,000 women participated in the six-year study, conducted at St. Michael's Hospital Breast Clinic in Toronto. The research was directed by Dr. Leo J. Mahoney and published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors found 30 new cases of breast cancer in the women, but only four of them were turned up by mammography. The rest were discovered when doctors or the women themselves found lumps in the patients' breasts.

The researchers noted that there is no evidence that early detection of breast cancer in a screening program leads to improved survival rates. Over the past 30 years, the frequency of death from breast cancer has remained virtually constant.

"If there is any advantage of early diagnosis of breast cancer, the most rewarding method of screening should be annual clinical breast examinations by physicians and less frequent mammographic examinations of women whose breasts remain clinically normal," they wrote.

Overall, the doctors discovered 128 new lumps in women's breasts, although most turned out to be benign. Of these, 66 percent were discovered by routine physical exam, 23 percent by breast self-examination and 10 percent accidentally by the patient.

However, during the last two years of the study, cancers in seven of 18 patients were identified by breast self-exams.

"It would appear that this screening method may become as useful as annual clinical breast examinations by physicians," the doctors wrote.

The women who participated in the study had a statistically higher than normal chance of developing breast cancer. They either had a previous breast cancer, a family history of the disease, a pregnancy after age 30 or a previous breast operation for a noncancerous disorder.

Fonda Backed By Celebrities

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some 300 entertainment celebrities have taken a full-page advertisement in the Los Angeles Times to denounce the rejection by the California Senate of actress Jane Fonda for a post on the state Arts Council.

In the advertisement which appeared Wednesday, Miss Fonda is pictured holding the Oscar she won for her performance in "Coming Home."

"The California State Senate has said Jane Fonda is not a qualified representative of the arts," the advertisement read. "The entertainment industry disagrees."

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. had appointed Miss Fonda to the post, but the Senate recently rejected her, with some members referring to her as a "traitor" because of her role as an opponent of the Vietnam war.

The celebrities accused the Senate of refusing to judge Miss Fonda "on her artistic merit, and instead chose to deny her appointment because of the strength of her conviction against the Vietnam war."

Among the entertainment figures endorsing the advertisement were Alan Alda, Woody Allen, Ed Asner, Mel Brooks, Cher, Francis Coppola, Henry Fonda, Peter and Portia

Science Campers

A total of 111 junior high school students from 27 North Carolina counties have completed a week-long Science Camp at East Carolina University.

The camp, sponsored by the ECU Department of Science Education for gifted and talented students in grades 7-9, involved intensive learning sessions, recreational activities and residence in campus dormitories.

Each camper was allowed to select from the following areas of study: solar energy, astronomy, analytical chemistry, microbiology, and anthropology.

Instructional staff included Dr. Floyd Mattheis, science education; Drs. Carl Adler and Edward Seykora, physics; Dr. Caroline Ayers, chemistry; Dr. Charles Bland, biology; and Dr. David Phelps, anthropology.

All are members of the ECU faculty.

Campers were selected on the basis of recommendations of their teachers and school administrative personnel.

Names of the Science Camp participants include: GREENE COUNTY, Hookerton—Lori Wingate; Snow Hill—David Charles Harrison, Debra Mae Hunter and David Hance. PITT COUNTY, Ayden—Jennifer Rae Rose; Farmville—Charles McKennan Ledbetter and Karen Deneen Liverman; Greenville—Maya Ajmera, Grayson Bray Morris, Dianne Renee Oakley, Virginia Peck, Michael Wade Worthington; Grifton—Michelle Leigh Harker and Angela Dawn Lingerfelt.

Department Accredited

The Department of Social Work and Correctional Services at East Carolina University has been re-accredited for a seven-year period.

Announcement of the re-accreditation was made by the National Council on Social Work Education.

According to Dr. John Ball, department chairman, ECU's program was one of the first in the nation to receive accreditation. Since its inception in 1968, the department has graduated more than 900 students and has offered courses and programs of continuing education to approximately 1,500 off-campus students.

In addition, the department was recently accredited by the N.C. Dept. of Public Instruction for certifying school social workers. This part of the ECU curriculum was accredited in 1974 as a program-in-planning and was the first university program of this type to receive accreditation from the state department.

Ball also noted that the department is at present conducting a feasibility study in order to launch a graduate curriculum in social work and corrections.

Funding Totals

A total of $4,323,961 in outside funding was awarded for research, training, development and other special projects at East Carolina University during the fiscal year 1978-79.

The funds, originating from federal and state government agencies and private foundations, went to the support of 95 programs at ECU.

The total was announced by the ECU Office of Sponsored Programs, a campus agency responsible for assisting faculty members in development and submission of proposals seeking financial support for programs not funded by the state budget.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market slipped today following release of figures showing a larger-than-expected rise in July's producer prices.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was off 1.88 to 861.26 at noon.

Declining issues led advances by a 6-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

As the market opened, the Labor Department announced that producer prices for finished goods had risen a seasonally adjusted 1.1 percent in July, an annual rate of 13.2 percent.

The rise was almost double what many analysts had expected, and was a big jump from the 0.5 percent rise in June and the 0.4 percent increase in May.

IBM topped the most-active list at noon, showing a 1/8-point loss at 69 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of its more than 1,500 listed common stocks was off .11 to 60.25 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .58 at 200.78.

Big Board volume in the first two hours of trading was 15.6 million shares, compared to 21.05 million shares in the same period on Wednesday.

Among nighttime prices, BankAmerica fell 1/2 to 30 1/4, Southland Corp. lost 1/2 to 30 1/4.

Second Big Day
FARMVILLE — The Farmville Tobacco Market had its second consecutive million dollar sale day Wednesday, according to Louis N. Williams, sales supervisor for the Farmville Tobacco Market Board of Trade.

Lugs and cutters accounted for most of Wednesday's sales, with a few sheets of leaf grade on the floor. Prices for the most part remained steady, with demand for quality grades increasing and most low primings receiving the same money as on the opening day.

The market sold 733,944 pounds for $1,025,182, for an average of $139.68 per 100 pounds. To date, the market has sold 5,717,472 pounds for $7,511,472, an average of $131.38.

The Wednesday average was $9 higher per 100 pounds than on the same sale day last year. The season average as of Wednesday was $7 higher than after the same number of selling days last year, Williams said.

Cyrus McCormick patented his first reaper in 1834.

Firefighters Get Break In The Battle

By QUANE KENYON
Associated Press Writer

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Battle-weary firefighters in six Western states have gotten their first break from searing weather that has turned forests into giant stands of kindling, but a new fire in Idaho has burned two homes and forced 50 families to flee.

Temperatures dropped and humidity rose Wednesday, allowing 6,000 firefighters — half of the nation's federal fire-fighting force — to gain some ground on more than a dozen fires raging out of control in the West.

"We had a real good day today," John Gumert, information officer at the Boise Inter-agency Fire Center, said Wednesday. "We didn't lose any ground on any major fire."

The National Weather Service, however, is predicting more fair skies over the fire areas today. And Bob Bjornsen, Forest Service director for the fire center, said the outlook "is very grim" for the next 10 days.

A new fire that broke out just after noon Wednesday in northern Idaho burned at least two homes near Bonners Ferry, a town of 1,900, and forced the evacuation of 50 families.

By nightfall, flames were within 2 miles of city limits, but a state official said the fire wasn't expected to reach the city because the heavy timber doesn't stretch that far.

There were no immediate reports of injury from the fire, which was estimated to cover 600 acres.

Fire bosses at the federal command and supply center in Boise reported 13 major blazes covering about 136,000 acres in Idaho, Montana, California, Oregon and Nevada.

The hardest hit is Idaho, where more than 125,000 acres in what Gov. John Evans called "probably the worst fire conditions in (the state's) history," Evans, who flew over the fires Wednesday, said so much smoke fills mountain areas it is hard to spot new blazes.

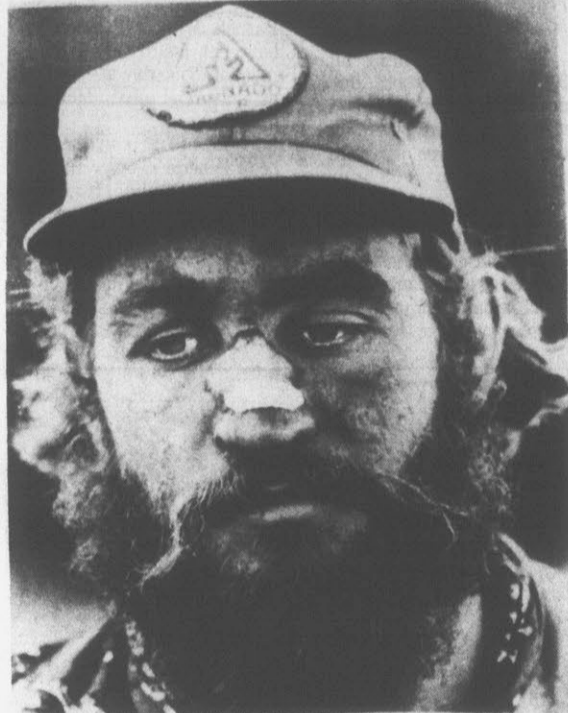

The fire center said four fires, covering 3,340 acres, were controlled Wednesday and six others, covering 6,000 acres, were contained, meaning that although the fires continue to burn, they are ringed by fire lines.

With temperatures in the low 90s, and 40 to 45 percent humidity, about 3,000 firefighters working in Idaho concentrated on "hot spots" and the flanks of the major blazes.

In Wyoming, firefighters said a 1,000-acre fire on the Wind River Indian Reservation was controlled Wednesday afternoon and the 550-acre Fan Creek Fire in Yellowstone National Park was controlled about an hour later.

However, the state's largest fire — the 7,000-acre Laramie Range blaze near Laramie Peak — continued to rage and was not expected to be controlled until Friday.

Fire bosses in Montana said they expected to contain the Cabin Creek blaze near Lincoln by tonight. But fire officials reported fires still burning southwest of Pyramid Lake in western Nevada, on the north-facing slopes of the San Bernardino Mountains in California, and in Oregon's Umatilla National Forest, where erratic winds and swarms of stinging bees hampered firefighters Wednesday night.

WEARY FIREFIGHTER — Squad boss Jim Howes shows the effects of days of fire-fighting in Idaho mountains. Howes suffered a broken nose and came from the fire line to base camp when this shot was taken. He's with the "Catalina Hot Shots" fire crew from Tucson, Ariz. (AP Laserphoto)

Southerners Join In Western Effort

ATLANTA (AP) — A U.S. Forest Service spokesman said today that 200 more firefighters have been recruited in Southern states to battle forest fires in the west, principally in Idaho.

"We're sending 10 crews or 200 people out west today. This will bring the total to 35 crews or 700 people assigned from the South," said Russ Daley.

Daley said six crews, made up of volunteers from North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, would leave from Atlanta today, and four other crews from Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas would embark from Shreveport, La.

"Some of these crews will go straight to a fire, others will go to Boise, Idaho, to await assignment to a fire," said Daley.

The forest service spokesman said some of the volunteers are U.S. Forest Service crews. Others are from state forestry organizations, National Park Service teams and Job Corps camps.

Pittsburgh Pirates Defeat Chicago Cubs 5-2

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The question puzzled Houston's J.R. Richard as much as he had puzzled Los Angeles batters: "Can you name a reason why you've beaten the Dodgers 10 times in a row?"

"If I knew what I was doing to beat L.A., I'd use it to beat other clubs," he replied. "I wouldn't have 11 losses."

One explanation was pure power pitching, which was what Richard used to beat the Dodgers 4-1 Wednesday night. He allowed just six hits, struck out 12 to improve his major league-leading total to 209, and walked just two while squaring his record at 11-11.

In the other National League games Wednesday, the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Chicago Cubs 5-2 in 10 innings, the Cincinnati Reds trimmed the Atlanta Braves 3-1, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 8-4, the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos 4-3 and the San Francisco Giants held off the San Diego Padres, 10-7.

Pirates 5, Cubs 2
Phil Garner's three-run homer off Dick Tidrow in the 10th inning carried the Pirates past the Cubs for their sixth triumph in seven games. A fifth-inning homer by Bill Madlock and a seventh-inning shot by John Milner had given the Pirates a 2-1 lead, but Chicago tied it against Kent Tekulve in the ninth when Barry Foote's single scored Jerry Martin from second.

Reds 3, Braves 1
Bill Bonham, relegated to the Cincinnati bullpen in recent weeks, needed just 101 pitches to hurl a two-hitter and help the Reds beat the Braves.

One of those hits was an RBI double by Barry Bonnell in the Atlanta fifth, but Cincinnati went ahead in the sixth on a two-run homer by Dave Concepcion and got insurance on Cesar Geronimo's homer in the seventh.

Cardinals 8, Mets 4
Pete Vuckovich pitched a complete game, thanks to Ken Reitz' three-run homer in the St. Louis second inning. Reitz' homer brought St. Louis within 4-3 and removed the possibility that Manager Ken Boyer would pinch-hit for Vuckovich when his pitcher's turn came to bat.

Phillies 4, Expos 3
Montreal first baseman Tony Perez fumbled a bases-loaded grounder by Bake McBride with two out in the ninth inning, allowing Larry Bowa to score the run that carried the Phillies past the Expos.

Invitational Softball Tourney Is Set

The Invitational Class "C" Softball tournament, sponsored by the Winterville Recreation Commission, will be held August 17-19 at A.G. Cox School, Winterville.

Entry costs $45. All softball teams and their players who have qualified for the world tournament will not be allowed to enter into this tournament. For more information, call Cathey Barber at 756-7085 or 756-5807.

Bowa beat out a bunt to open the inning and stole second before Pete Rose walked. One out later Mike Schmidt was walked intentionally to load the bases for McBride.

Giants 10, Padres 7
Left-hander John Curtis knocked in three runs with a pair of singles and Mike Ivie added two home runs for San Francisco, which built an 8-0 lead, then survived a late San Diego rally.

A LITTLE DISAGREEMENT — Pittsburgh Pirates' John Milner argues with second base umpire Dutch Rennert after Rennert called him out trying to steal second base in first inning Wednesday in Chicago. Throw from

Indians 6-8, Red Sox 4-2

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

What do you do with a pitcher who is still looking for his first victory this late in the baseball season? Oakland Manager Jim Marshall is finally doing something — he's sending Matt Keough to the bullpen.

"This has really become a strain on him," said Marshall. "Maybe he's a little bit afraid of losing now and that only compounds his problems."

Keough's problems include the longest losing streak in major league baseball, which reached 18 Wednesday with an 8-1 loss to the California Angels.

Don Baylor was one of Keough's biggest problems Wednesday, pacing a 21-hit attack with four hits and three runs batted in. Baylor raised his RBI total to 101.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians swept a day-night double-header from the Boston Red Sox 6-4 and 8-2; the Texas Rangers beat the Detroit Tigers 16-9 in the first game of a double-header before losing the second game 10-4; the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 8-4; the New York Yankees whipped the Chicago White Sox 4-3 and the Minnesota Twins turned back the Seattle Mariners 3-1.

Indians 6-8, Red Sox 4-2
Bobby Bonds and Toby Harrah smashed three hits apiece to help Cleveland beat Boston in their afternoon game. Rick Wise allowed 11 hits but picked up his ninth victory in the last 10 decisions with four innings of relief help from Sid Monge.

Rangers 16-4, Tigers 9-10
Eric Soderholm drove in six runs with a pair of homers and a single to power Texas over Detroit in the first game of their double-header.

John Wockenfuss drove in five runs with a grand slam homer and a solo shot and rookie Bruce Robbins pitched no-hit ball through six innings as the Tigers defeated the Rangers in the second game.

Brewers 8, Orioles 4
Gorman Thomas snapped a ninth-inning tie with a sacrifice fly and Sixto Lezcano added a two-run double, as Milwaukee defeated Baltimore, handing the Orioles their fourth straight loss.

Yankees 4, White Sox 3
Chris Chambliss' three-run, eighth-inning homer capped a four-run rally that led Luis Tiant and New York past Chicago. Detroit's Steve Trout had given up only five hits through seven innings, but Willie Randolph and Bobby Murcer opened the Yankee eighth with singles. They moved up on a wild pitch and Lou Piniella singled Randolph home before Chambliss slammed his 14th homer one out later.

Twins 3, Mariners 1
Ken Landreaux drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single and relief star Mike Marshall notched his 24th save of the season as Minnesota beat Seattle.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A tired Chris Evert Lloyd, still weakened by the flu, is praying the steamy weather will cool down a bit before tonight's quarterfinals in the U.S. Clay Court tennis tournament.

Lloyd, a four-time winner and seeded No. 1, survived her third-round match in 90-plus degree heat on Tuesday, but she was forced to go to three sets for just the second time in 23 matches here since 1972.

"I feel a little better than I did last night," she said after the 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory over Czechoslovakia's Renata Tomanova. "The virus is still hitting me. It's just going to take a couple days. In the meantime, I'm still in the tourney and if I lose, I lose."

The 24-year-old Lloyd has won 46 of 48 sets in the U.S. Clay Court tourney. She won the singles championship from 1972 through 1975 but bypassed the tourney the past three years to play on the now-defunct World Team Tennis circuit.

"The first set I felt tired and she was just moving me around the court," Lloyd said of her match with Tomanova.

"I just hung in there and got the ball back. I didn't do anything specific. In the second set, I thought if she moved me around the way she did in first set she would win. That's what takes the steam out of me and makes me tired. I felt better in second and third set, which I don't understand."

Lloyd's second-round victory Tuesday night over Wendy White also was a struggle. She won the first set 6-2 but was taken to 7-5 in the second set.

"That was the closest I've ever come to defaulting," Lloyd said. "If she had won the second set, I probably would have quit the match."

The only other time she was forced to go three sets here was in the 1975 semifinals against Nancy Richey Gunter.

Lloyd will play Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec tonight in the feature match on the 10,000-seat stadium court at the new Indianapolis Sports Center. Jausovec, who has lost all six previous times she has played Lloyd, advanced with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Sherry Acker.

Other women's quarterfinal matches today pitted third-seeded Evonne Goolagong Cawley of Australia, the runner-up to Lloyd in 1972, against Anne Smith; No. 4 seed Virginia Ruzici of Rumania against Renee Richards, and No. 5 seed Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia against Jeanne DuVall.

DuVall advanced by default Wednesday when second-seeded Kerry Reid withdrew because of a leg injury she suffered Tuesday.

All of the men's top seeds still in contention advanced to today's third round.

Top-seeded Jimmy Connors, the defending men's champion who has won here every even-numbered year since 1974, handled Czechoslovakia's Pavel Slozil 6-3, 6-2 to earn a spot

Falcons, Cardinals To Meet In Preseason Game

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Heat wave playing conditions, moreso than blitzing defenses, may throw obstacles into the paths of the Atlanta Falcons and St. Louis Cardinals tonight.

Temperatures, which have soared to near 100 in recent days, may be at the 90-degree mark for the kickoff of their preseason National Football League game. And, on the field, it will be worse.

"I'd say it's 10 to 15 degrees warmer," Cardinals owner Bill Bidwill said of the artificial Busch Stadium turf on which the teams will bang helmets and knock pads.

"The worst problem is the heat on the feet," said Bidwill. "We use charcoal-type pads inside shoes, just like baseball teams do. How much good it will do, I really can't say."

Atlanta and St. Louis, each coming off a defeat in a preseason opener, will try to use the exhibition as a means for sharpening an attack on the ground.

"We would like Atlanta not to be running blitz patterns so that we can get our running game into the kind of shape we would like to see at this stage," said Jim Sweeney, the Cards' backfield coach.

"When you talk about facing a blitzing defense, you're talking about a defense which takes away your ability to run on the corner and jams up every gap inside," Sweeney explained.

Leeman Bennett, the Falcons' head coach, promised to oblige Sweeney's wish and also expressed the hope St. Louis' defenses can reciprocate.

Bennett had mixed emotions after Atlanta ran and passed for 256 yards against the New England Patriots but lost 37-14. "I think we saw a lot of progress," he said of the Falcons' running.

Rookie running talent includes Atlanta's William Andrews and James Mayberry, who last week combined to gain 97 yards on 14 carries. The Cards' top new hope, meanwhile, is O. J. Anderson.

Jim Otis, Wayne Morris and Willard Harrell are the St. Louis backfield veterans to accompany Anderson and Bobby Trudeau, another rookie. But two who will miss the contest are injured first-year running backs Theotis Brown and Thomas Lott.

"If we had all our running backs healthy, we would be an outstanding running team," Sweeney conjectured. "This (injuries) is hampering their development more than anything."

Quarterbacks at the start of a game expected to be watched by 44,000 will be St. Louis' Jim Hart and the Falcons' Steve Bartkowski. In the second half, Hart will be spelled by Steve Pisarkiewicz and Bartkowski by June Jones.

The last time the two teams met, Hart pitched three touchdown passes and ran for two more as the Cards beat Atlanta 42-21 in the 1978 NFL regular season finale.

"Preseason games are very frustrating," said St. Louis Coach Bud Wilkinson. "You want to win the game ... but everyone is going to play. We'll play everyone on our squad, and so will Atlanta."

No Resentment Of Nancy Lopez

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Is there resentment among members of the Ladies Professional Golfers Association because of Nancy Lopez's leadership of the new breed of women golfers?

Not as far as Donna Caponi Young is concerned. As a matter of fact, the 15-year veteran of the tour is all for Lopez, currently the LPGA's leading money-winner with $156,200.

"It took me 15 years to win a major title (LPGA Championship two months ago)," said the 34-year-old Young Wednesday after performing in the pro-am for the $100,000 WUI Classic that got underway today on the par-73, 6,430-yard Meadow Brook Club course.

"Anytime you win a major title it's a great accomplishment. However, I'm not stopping there. At least I hope not. I'd like to win a few more this year."

"However, it's getting tougher and tougher because of all the young girls on the tour. It's a great tribute to them. They learned plenty of golf in high school, college and amateur tournaments such as the Curtis Cup."

Young was never as fortunate as she went right from high school to the pros.

"I was never allowed to play high school golf," recalled the 5-foot-5 blonde from Los Angeles, who earned seven varsity letters in other sports.

Lloyd To Play...

Taroczy, who lost to John McEnroe in the third round last year, stopped Warren Maher of Australia 6-2, 6-4.

McEnroe, seeded second, wore down India's Ramesh Krishnan 6-4, 6-1 and will now face Ecuador's Ricardo Ycaza.

Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, seeded third, stopped Van Winitsky 7-5, 6-3 Wednesday night. Vilas was matched against 12th-seeded Tomaz Smid of Czechoslovakia in today's round.

Jose Higueras of Spain, runner-up to Connors last year and seeded fourth this time, was paired against 16th-seeded Peter McNamara of Australia today. Higueras beat another Australian, Paul McNamee, 6-0 in Wednesday's first set and was leading 3-0 when McNamee retired in the second set.

Fifth-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina topped Nick Saviano 6-3, 7-5 to move to the third round against ninth-seeded Eliot Teltscher, a 6-2, 6-4 winner over Australia's Kim Warwick.

Poland's Wojtek Fibak, runner-up to Connors in 1976 and No. 7 seed, beat John Lloyd, Chris's husband, 6-4, 6-4, to advance against 11th-seeded Corrado Barazzutti of Italy, a 6-3, 6-0 winner over Czechoslovakia's Jiri Hrebec.

Eighth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, a three-time champion who has alternated with Connors every year since 1973, topped Mike Grant 6-2, 6-3. Orantes' scheduled opponent today was Andres Gomez of Ecuador, who beat Chris Lewis 6-3, 6-2.

HARD WORK — Second-seeded John McEnroe for a slam shot from India's Ramesh Krishnan at the beginning of the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis championships in Indianapolis Wednesday but missed the point. McEnroe became sharper as the match progressed. He won, 6-4, 6-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Refugee Problem Is Key Issue Arrested For Trespass Wearing Legalizer

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — A U.S. congressional delegation hopes to meet with acting Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and other senior Vietnamese officials today to discuss the refugee problem, U.S.-Vietnamese ties, the conflict in Cambodia and other issues.

"We hope our visit will give the Vietnamese a reflection of the various attitudes of the American people," delegation leader Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said Wednesday shortly before his group arrived in Hanoi from Malaysia.

He said the refugee problem in Vietnam and Cambodia could be solved only through "a political solution," and that normalization of relations between the United States and Vietnam was "inevitable and a good thing for the long term."

The congressmen arrived to a low-key welcome after Vietnam lifted a ban on their trip, imposed because one of the lawmakers, Rep. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., accused Hanoi of massive human rights violations in connection with the expulsion of tens of thousands of Vietnamese, most of them ethnic Chinese.

Vietnam reinstated the invitation Tuesday, one day after it was dropped, following a message from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. Details were not disclosed, but Rosenthal said, "It would have been lousy if we couldn't have come" and that the Vietnamese "reversed themselves rather gracefully."

The legislators' main concern is whether Vietnam will keep its pledge to stem the exodus of refugees or reopen the flood gates which have already sent tens of thousands of exiles pouring into the South China Sea in leaky boats in search of asylum.

Propose Center

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A proposal for a downtown convention center has been described by a consultant as "very economically tight, very fiscally conservative," rather than a highly speculative gamble.

Ralph Basile's assessment summarized an 88-page feasibility study he delivered to city hall Wednesday. The study was prepared for the city by Zuchelli, Hunter and Associates of Annapolis, Md.

The study was emphatic in noting that Greensboro could support, and should have, a downtown convention center if it is adjoined by a privately financed, major hotel.

The study says the convention center, in conjunction with a "high quality" hotel, would boost efforts to revive downtown Greensboro. In the process it would generate business and create jobs, the study says.

It also says the publicly built and owned center would run a deficit when bonded indebtedness is taken into account, but predicts that by 1985, the center would generate a small operating surplus.

The deficit level, says the study, compares favorably with the deficits being incurred by other North Carolina convention centers.

Mayor Jim Melvin has proposed that the city hold an $8.5 million bond referendum on Oct. 9, in conjunction with the municipal primary election.

If the bonds are approved, $7.5 million would be used to build the convention center and $1 million would be used to finance improvements to the Greensboro Coliseum.

Lorance has testified that he "didn't feel like I was wanted. I felt they were pushing. Every time I said I was going to leave, one or two of them would say, 'Go ahead and leave.'"

The defendant said she and Lorance "didn't get along."

Miss Cox, asked why she took a share of the $2,000 stolen from the motel, replied, "I needed clothes and food. It was wrong to take it."

Arrested For Trespass Wearing Legalizer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — As if Warren Brooks hadn't caused enough trouble wearing his "legalizer" in sight of his neighbors, he was arrested again Tuesday for trespassing while wearing the skimpy garment.

Brooks has upset neighbors by appearing in his yard wearing nothing but the device because it conceals his private areas and allows him to appear in public without being charged with indecent exposure. Buttocks are not covered by the state's indecent-exposure statute.

So nothing else could possibly go wrong, he put on his pants before being taken to Winston-Salem for booking.

"They couldn't make indecent exposure stick, so they trumped up this trespassing charge," he said.

Deputy J. L. Burton, who arrested Brooks, said he read the warrant as Brooks stood "almost naked" in his front yard.

The 55-year old Brooks was released on $300 bond posted by his wife, and his case was scheduled for Aug. 15 in Forsyth County District Court.

If convicted of the trespassing charges, Brooks faces a maximum sentence of two years in prison or a fine at the discretion of the judge.

The indecent exposure charge previously filed against him was dropped by the district attorney.

The trespassing warrant was sworn out by Robert L. Howard, who is building houses in the area and with whom Brooks has feuded over diversion of drainage water.

According to Brooks, the problem started on Sunday while prospective house buyers were touring the neighborhood. Brooks said he put on his legalizer and went out in his yard.

"I made up my mind to show them what they were in for if they moved into this neighborhood," he said. "So I put on my legalizer and went out in my front yard and walked around all afternoon so they could see. It's a symbol."

The warrant charges Brooks with trespassing on Howard's property on Monday.

When Brooks was charged earlier with indecent exposure, the district attorney's office took a voluntary dismissal after deciding that bare buttocks are not considered indecent under state law.

Some residents of Brooks' neighborhood now are considering petitioning the Forsyth County delegation to the General Assembly to expand the law to include bare buttocks.

Girl Points Out Co-Defendant As One Who Killed Innkeeper

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — A 16-year-old girl says she didn't murder or rob a Gwynn's Island motel manager, but she pointed to a co-defendant as the man who committed the crimes.

Deana Marie Cox of Anderson, S.C., testified in her own defense Wednesday during her trial on charges that she participated in the robbery of Swain Harland Graham, a Chesapeake Bay motel night manager who was killed March 5.

She and three companions were charged with murder, robbery, using a firearm in the commission of a felony and defrauding an innkeeper.

A circuit court jury was expected to begin deliberating today on the murder and robbery charges.

Judge Robert T. Armistead dismissed the firearm charge for lack of evidence. He said he will rule on the fraud charge himself.

Lorance and McDonald were convicted of the charges last month and are to be sentenced Sept. 17. Miss Davis' trial is scheduled to begin next week.

Miss Cox said Lanny Thomas Lorance, 24, of Belmont, N.C., fired the gun. Although she didn't see the actual killing, she testified, she saw Lorance run from the motel office with a knife in his hand.

Medical evidence showed that Graham, 65, died of a stab wound in the back. He was not shot.

Miss Cox, who was 15 when the crime occurred, said Lorance, David Harold McDonald, 23, and Carrie Patricia Davis, 17, both of Anderson, had been staying at the motel.

Lorance testified that McDonald stabbed Graham

while he robbed the safe.

Miss Cox said Wednesday that Lorance suggested that the four rob the motel, but they did not believe he was serious because "he talked so many times about robbing and never did it."

She said the night of the murder she went to the motel office to buy a candy bar and Lorance went with her to talk to Graham about the motel bill, which was more than $400.

Lorance and Graham walked into a back room and then she heard a gun shot and saw Lorance standing in the doorway, she said.

She said she ran to the car and a short time later Lorance came running across the parking lot with two boxes under his arm and a knife in his left hand. He got in the car and they fled, she said.

Islander Motel and Restaurant employees testified that Miss Cox registered as Mrs. Lanny Lorance and the Davis girl as Mrs. David McDonald.

The four shared one room, although testimony has indicated that the three Anderson residents treated Lorance as an outsider.

Lorance has testified that he "didn't feel like I was wanted. I felt they were pushing. Every time I said I was going to leave, one or two of them would say, 'Go ahead and leave.'"

The defendant said she and Lorance "didn't get along."

Miss Cox, asked why she took a share of the $2,000 stolen from the motel, replied, "I needed clothes and food. It was wrong to take it."

Seek Suspect In Shooting

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — With the sixth suspect in a Myrtle Beach slaying in custody, Horry County authorities say they will intensify their search for the person who set up the alleged murder for hire scheme.

Bill Bryant, 41, was transferred Wednesday from Shelby, N.C., to Horry County, where he is being held without bond.

Bryant of Casar, N.C., is accused of paying Johnny Eugene Hamilton, 30, of Mooresville, N.C., $4,000 to shoot businessman Roy Lowry as he drove to work May 11.

Police say they have not determined a motive for Lowry's shooting.

Hamilton is charged with murder. Bryant and four other North Carolina residents are charged with being an accessory to Lowry's murder.

Solicitor Jim Dunn said Wednesday he intends to seek the death penalty against Bryant.

Bryant had been fighting extradition from North Carolina since his arrest June 15. He was being held in the Cleveland County, N.C., jail on $150,000 bond.

The legal staff for North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt ruled out a special extradition hearing for Bryant, and Hunt sent a warrant for Bryant's extradition to the Cleveland County jail Tuesday.

Bryant's attorney, Bob Powell of Lincolnton, N.C., said he had planned to file a writ of habeas corpus Wednesday to argue the merits of the charge against his client.

But Horry County Police and State Law Enforcement Division officers were in Shelby when the warrant arrived Wednesday morning. They had Bryant over the state line before Powell became aware of the situation.

Powell charged that the move violated North Carolina state law.

Prepsters In ECU Program

Fourteen North Carolina high school students will begin their senior year this fall having received college credit for courses they completed this summer at East Carolina University.

The students were participants in a special pre-college program during the second summer session at ECU June 27-Aug. 2. They were allowed to take up to two courses for which they received regular college credits.

All had SAT/PSAT scores of 900 or higher and all ranked in the top 15 per cent of their class academically. They were invited on the recommendations by their high school counselors and principals.

"The purpose of the program," according to Walter M. Bortz, director of admissions, "is to offer an academic challenge to superior students while simultaneously providing a true college living experience."

The names, hometowns, parents and subjects taken by students attending the Pre-College Program at ECU includes:

Letting Fire Do Nature's Work

BY JOHN M. WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) —

While "fire" is the most dreaded word in the thick green forests of the Pacific Northwest, flames also are being used by the National Forest Service as nature's tool.

In contrast to the thousands of firefighters battling raging flames in the forests of Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon this summer, rangers are sitting back and watching one fire burn on Smith Mountain in Idaho — albeit watching very closely.

The idea, according to the Forest Service's Dan Bailey, is to let fire do the work it would have done before man trod through the forests — clearing out underbrush, helping certain plants to sprout and, at the same time, allowing many trees to survive unscathed.

Located about 10 air miles southwest of Troy, Mont., the Smith Mountain fire has been burning in the Kootenai National Forest across the border in Idaho since it was started by lightning June 12.

Bailey said it is the first "managed" fire in a national forest outside a wilderness area. "It's kind of a test district," he said.

The fire had blackened about 480 acres of rugged terrain by last week and is expected to burn itself out, helped by rains, later this month or in early September, says Bailey, the Troy Ranger District's fire management officer.

Two monitors watch the fire closely to make sure it doesn't get out of hand or move into areas where the flames are not wanted. They also make projections on which way and how far the flames will travel.

On the average, the low-intensity fire covers three to 10 acres per day, but Bailey says it doesn't move at all some days. One day it may not give off any smoke, and the next a column might be visible miles away, he said in a telephone interview from the ranger station.

Back on June 12, Bailey said the district's management fire committee met and decided the Smith Mountain fire fell within the guidelines of a fire that could be beneficial.

The area where the fire is burning is roadless and is classified as a primitive recreation area. It is at a higher elevation, still has a lot of snow patches and is not as dry as other forest areas.

Bailey explained that the Forest Service, from 1935 through early 1978, observed a policy of attacking and suppressing every forest fire — the so-called "10 a.m. policy" — meaning all efforts would be made to control or contain a fire within the first work period, or 10 a.m. the morning after the fire was discovered.

"Well, each fire was suppressed regardless of burning conditions or land management objectives, and what has happened is there's a lot of fires, especially in the higher elevations that burn at fairly low intensities, that are doing more good to that piece of ground than detrimental effects," Bailey explained.

In February 1978, the Forest Service revised its policy to include fire management.

Where life and property are involved, the suppression policy still is in effect. And Bailey emphasized that the new guidelines are not simply a "let burn" policy. He noted that fire crews moved into the Smith Mountain fire once when winds reached 45 miles per hour to keep the flames away from a timber management area.

Formula Firm Object Of Suit

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The California manufacturer of a milk-free infant formula suspected of causing a chemical imbalance in babies is being sued for damages that could reach $2 billion.

A class-action lawsuit, filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court on behalf of three infants, contends Syntex Laboratories Inc. of Palo Alto, Calif., was negligent in distributing Neo-Mull-Soy, a formula used as a substitute for babies allergic to milk.

The firm voluntarily recalled the product Aug. 2 after Dr. Shane Roy, a pediatrician at LeBonheur Children's Medical Center in Memphis, diagnosed a chemical imbalance known as metabolic alkalosis in three infants.

The lawsuit was filed on behalf of infants Douglas A. Hill and Casandra Dawn Merryman of Memphis and Jill Sanger Sheehan of Hickman, Ky.

An attorney representing the infants, Jerry F. Taylor of Memphis, said the suit asks for medical expenses for the parents of all infants who may have been injured by use of the formula and for compensatory damages "in excess of $100,000 per injured infant."

Taylor said Syntex estimates as many as 20,000 infants across the country use the formula. If all the users suffered damages, the total damage award would be $2 billion.

The suit seeks an addition $5 million in punitive damages for the plaintiffs.

The three infant plaintiffs, the suit says, were placed on the formula soon after they were born. "Soon thereafter, (they) experienced lack of weight gain, failure to thrive, listlessness, refusal to take solid foods and constipation," the suit says.

Roy said his research indicated the infants had a chloride deficiency or metabolic alkalosis, a chemical disturbance of the acid base balance in the blood.

Held For 12 Hours

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Three Americans and 14 other foreigners who work for a U.S. construction firm were held hostage for 12 hours by Iranian workers then released unharmed, Western diplomatic sources reported today.

The sources said the foreigners, employees of the Morrison-Knudson engineering company, were held at a road construction campsite 25 miles west of Tehran on Wednesday.

The sources said the dispute was over severance pay, which was solved, that the foreigners were released without "any physical violence whatsoever" and were resting at a guest house at an undisclosed location.

The sources said they couldn't provide the names of those involved, but one of them was known to be Frederick Burnett, an Australian.

None Hurt In Wreck

No injuries were reported as a result of a 12:09 p.m. traffic mishap Wednesday at the intersection of Reade Circle and Cotanche Street.

Investigating officers reported that Samuel Wallace Winstead of Box 161, Nashville, was charged with a safe movement violation following the accident.

According to the officers, the wreck involved vehicles driven by Winstead and Joan Vickers Nobels of Rt. 1, Winterville.

Damage to the Winstead vehicle was estimated at $400, it was reported, while damage to the Nobels car was set at $40.

All Cub Scouts and their families are invited to attend the annual activities.

End Near In McDowell Investigation

MAKION, N.C. (AP) — In the weeks that have passed since Danny Parton admitted he buried the bodies of eight women in wooded McDowell County, authorities thought they had the case wrapped up on three separate occasions.

Each time, a new development was revealed which made closing the case that much tougher. But this time, Sheriff Bobby Haynes says his men are near a solution in the mysteries surrounding the deaths of Cathy Mosley, 24, and Mary Katherine Carnes, 23. They also think they know why Parton was able to point out where their bodies were crudely buried.

"We've got one more person to interview, and then we'll have it, I hope," said an investigator who asked that his name not be used.

"Of course, I've thought that before," the investigator added. "We thought it was a matter of digging up the bodies and collecting the evidence," the investigator noted. Then Parton stopped talking and later changed his story altogether saying there were no more bodies.

McDowell authorities now doubt Parton's original claim that six more bodies have been buried in the rugged terrain of the county. They have, however, hired a photographer to take infra-red prints of two areas in the event more graves appear.

They also now believe that Parton had help before he murdered the two women and when he buried them. Haynes said he believes there was a motive for the killings, but refused elaboration for fear of damaging the state's case against Parton.

Parton is still in jail charged with three counts with rape and one count of conspiracy to commit rape. The alleged rapes do not involve the women he is charged with murdering. Bail has not been set.

Last week, authorities charged Kay Frances Wright, 21, of Kings Mountain with two counts of accessory before the fact of murder. They also charged Henry Guy Burnette, 20, of McDowell County with two counts of accessory after the fact of murder.

"They've got about half of McDowell County locked up," said Frank Goldsmith, Parton's court-appointed lawyer. Parton is scheduled for a preliminary hearing Aug. 16 on his murder charges.

Chinese End Sit-In Protest

PEKING (AP) — About 150 tattered protesters who sat-in on the Chinese government's doorstep left peacefully and some were taken to a shelter and given food, a government worker said today.

The protesters, many from distant provinces, had vowed to stay until someone listened to their varied complaints about unemployment and persecution dating back to the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution.

A self-styled spokesman estimated that 400 had gathered Wednesday morning at the red gates of Chungnanhai, where the government sits. The number dwindled into the night to about 150.

It was believed to be the largest such protest since December when about 150 unemployed and disgruntled people from the mountains of Shandong (Shantung) province came to the red gates.

An office worker said this morning that many had departed after 10 p.m. Wednesday and "several dozen" were taken to the government's central reception center.

There was no official comment on the demonstration or the problems of the protesters. The reception center is not open to foreign reporters.

The reception center receives visitors from outside of Peking and is intended to help them with their problems, like a travelers' aid bureau. The center also interviews people about their grievances and can investigate their cases.

In the gentle art of false-carding, playing smoothly is a necessary ingredient. You can't fiddle about for two or three minutes, act frightened and still expect people to believe you. And you must take care which card you play to have any hope that your falsecard will succeed.

We endorse West's take-out double, but cannot say the same for North's decision to pass. While his hand was not good enough for a redouble, he should certainly have raised to two diamonds. South's decision to leap to game after he had received delayed support from his partner is rather rash, especially since South had already shown extra values with his competitive bid of two diamonds; but we have seen worse. East naturally increased the stakes on the strength of his sure trump trick.

West led the king of hearts and, as you can see, the contract is unmakeable—declarer has to lose a heart, a club and a trump. That is, unless West can be convinced to continue hearts. Declarer must offer his opponent every inducement to do so, and this is no time to go into a brown study.

To the first trick East contributed the six of hearts, and had declarer followed with the two of hearts, it would have been obvious to West that his partner's six was his lowest heart and therefore he was discouraging a heart continuation. So declarer quickly followed suit with the seven, concealing the deuce. It now appeared to West that his partner had begun an encouraging signal, so he led another heart into declarer's ace-jack. Dummy's club loser disappeared on declarer's second heart winner and the contract rolled home.

A bit of analysis on West's part would have made it clear that it was not necessary to continue hearts to defeat the contract even if East held the ace. Since East presumably has four spades for his bid, declarer can have no more than one, so a spade shift had to be safe. If declarer had heart losers, there was nowhere to put them. However, opponents are not always perfect analysts and South's subtle falsecard merits a word of praise.

Not Healthy To Be TV Criminal In San Francisco Or Hawaii

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If I were a TV criminal, I'd be guided by two rules of operation: Never get in a high-speed chase in San Francisco and never, never do evil in the State of Hawaii.

Nobody ever survives high-speed chases in San Francisco; even if you could get away, the trauma would be worse than prison.

As for Hawaii, well, that placid place, seemingly ripe for criminal plunder, has the Jaw — Steve McGarrett, the least sympathetic cop on TV.

Committing TV crimes in Hawaii holds a certain attraction: Clear skies, the blue Pacific and all. But getting busted by "Hawaii Five-0" just isn't fun. McGarrett is always serious, always nicely coiffed. He has no sense of humor, none of that sense of mutual respect Sherlock Holmes held for the diabolical Prof. Moriarty.

McGarrett, stoneface he, only cracks those tight lips into a slight shadow of a smile when the crook is nabbed or dead. And then it's a smug sort of a smile that seems to say, "I am a great crimestopper, and I have triumphed again."

Even the most elegant of island crooks are subjected to this contempt. There is no dignity in defeat.

Well, soon enough, Hawaii will again be safe for TV crimes. McGarrett will be back jaw and all. "Hawaii Five-0" is in its last season. Crooks can vacation in Honolulu once more.

After 12 seasons of keeping his hair and his island rigidly controlled, McGarrett is through, CBS says. Suspecting a ruse, I requested confirmation from McGarrett himself, Jack Lord.

Even on the telephone, even first thing Sunday morning, Jack Lord's jaw juts. Though he is polite and gracious, I get the feeling I have done something wrong, and will soon be breaking rocks on Maui.

Yes, he says, "Hawaii Five-0" is definitely in its last season. "Twelve years, that's a lifetime."

He recounts the problems the show had when first name to Hawaii, the absence of production facilities, the expense of being thousands of miles from Hollywood, the reluctance among the Islanders to have a crime show filmed on their pretty beaches.

"It was dreadful," he says. "We were working out of an abandoned warehouse, working 100-hour weeks. We were shooting 85-90 hours of film to get a one-hour episode. At one point, we were $810,000 over budget, and you can imagine how the network felt about that."

But things smoothed out eventually, and Hawaii began to appreciate Lord. He was a chamber of commerce's delight. The show may not have been Shakespearean in its dramatic dimensions, but it always had plenty of lovely scenery shots.

"They've always been very good about doing their filming right in the islands, getting first-class footage of the Hawaiian beauty and scenery," says Jerry Panzo of the Hawaiian Visitors Bureau. "I've met people from Germany here, and the first thing they say is, 'Gee, it's just like 'Hawaii Five-0.' I'm sure we'll miss it.'"

Well, I guess it's true. McGarrett really is packing out. Still, I'd recommend caution to television mobsters — there are always reruns.

Vacation A Splash

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Pope John Paul II may or may not have made his first dive into the papal swimming pool, but his vacation has already caused a splash.

Vatican officials used to be relieved when his predecessors went into two months of "summer retreat" at the sprawling estate here in the Alban Hills a half-hour drive from Rome. Now they must contend with photographers in low-flying helicopters looking for shots of the 59-year-old pope trekking through the woods in tennis sneakers, picnicking with friends or doing the backstroke.

The weekly newspaper Domenica del Corriere, in what it billed as a "world exclusive," published photographs of the glass and concrete covered pool deep in the gardens behind the papal palace. According to the magazine, the complex includes not only an Olympic-sized pool but a gym, solarium and sauna.

Officially, the Vatican refrains from comment about the private life of the pope, who was a skier, rower and mountain climber in his native Poland and while cardinal of Krakow was photographed in shorts at a picnic with young people.

The Rev. Fiorangelo Puzzi, parish priest here, expressed surprise at all the fuss being made about a vacationing pope. "I think that since there is this swimming pool no doubt the pope does go and swim in it," he said.

Four-fifths of the world's earthquakes and most volcanic eruptions occur along a belt of faults in the earth's crust that edges the continents bordering the Pacific Ocean and also curves into the mountains north of India.

OUR ACTION WARRANTY.™ WHAT WE SAY, WE DO.

Our Action Warranty™ is your assurance that we do what we say. When you say we'll furnish you with a written estimate of your home's value, select only qualified buyers to view your home, then give you a progress report at least every other week, we do exactly that.

And we make you seven other professional promises and put them in writing. This is another reason why more people buy and sell through a Neighborhood Professional™ than any other real estate sales organization in the world.

Call your Neighborhood Professional for your Action Warranty today.
