

Klan Resumes March, No Incidents

SELMA, Ala. (AP)—Ku Klux Klan members began the second leg of their Selma-to-Montgomery "white power" march today, a parade now nearing the spot where a civil rights worker was slain by Klan night riders in 1965.

State troopers reported no incidents as the several dozen Klansmen returned to U.S. Highway 80.

About 50 Klansmen set out Thursday on the 50-mile march retracing the route taken in 1965 during the historic voting rights march led by the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The marchers dwindled to about 30 after an early rest stop Thursday, with the remainder riding a bus to the night's campsite and cross burning rally 15 miles from Selma.

Today's schedule called for the Klansmen to march another 15 miles along U.S. 80, bringing them near the spot where Viola Liuzzo, a Detroit, Mich., housewife, was killed on the night of the last day of King's 1965 march.

No one has been convicted for that murder, although three Ku Klux Klansmen were found guilty of federal charges of violating Mrs. Liuzzo's civil rights.

The fourth man in the car from which the fatal shots were fired at Mrs. Liuzzo — former FBI informant Gary Thomas Rowe Jr. — was indicted for murder last year by a state grand jury.

Rowe, who now lives under an assumed name in Savannah, Ga., has been fighting extradition to Alabama to stand trial for the Liuzzo murder. Local prosecutors say they expect to win the battle to extradite Rowe, placing him on trial possibly as early as this fall.

The Klan marchers began Thursday wearing full white robes with pointed white hats stretching more than a foot above their heads. But after walking five miles in near 100-degree heat, most of them shed their costumes.

When they reached Thursday's campsite, march organizer Bill Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., talked with reporters about the purpose of the demonstrations.

"We want to show the country it's time to do away with forced busing, affirmative action programs and anything that gives preferential treatment to niggers," he said.

"We want a free enterprise, where the best man wins. And we know who that is — the white man."

Although Klan leaders had said prior to the march that they would have front and rear guard "security" forces "armed with all types of weapons," none were visible Thursday.

Klan leaders using bullhorns advised marchers before they started to obey a new state law that prohibits the possession of firearms within 1,000 feet of a public demonstration.

One Klansman, however, was arrested for violating that law. He was identified as 32-year-old Jerry Edward Banks of Selma.

In place of guns, many of the Klansmen carried sticks with signs attached saying, "Save this land, join the Klan." Jeering blacks along the parade route in Selma shouted back, "Get out of the land, you damn Klan."

Meteor Shower Glows In Sky

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Though the heavens have produced some notable displays in the last few years, there have been some big disappointments, namely Kohoutek and Skylab, though Skylab got close enough for some first-hand viewing.

Officials at the Morehead Planetarium at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill say another light show is due for North Carolina in the next several evenings. The Perseid Meteor Shower may begin its fiery exhibition Friday night, weather permitting.

Planetarium director Anthony Jenzano says if skies remain clear through the weekend, the shower will pick up in intensity, reaching its glowing peak on Sunday and Monday.

Assistant planetarium director James Manning said the best time to view the display is between nightfall and midnight.

The best time to view the Perseids is usually after midnight. But because of the rise of the crescent moon at 11:30 p.m., viewing then will be hampered.

The Perseids, caused by dustlike particles burning up as they enter the atmosphere, light up the sky every August when the earth plows through the dust and debris strewn along the path of a comet named Swift-Tuttle.

The Perseids are named for the constellation Perseus, from which the shower appears to originate as they streak across the sky.

That comet was last seen in 1862 and is due to return to the earth's vicinity between 1980 and 1982, according to Jenzano.

Jenzano said the mixture of yellow, green, orange and red hues should be sufficient enough for color photography.

The National Weather Service said Thursday that the haze lingering over the Triangle area for the past few days should diminish enough during the weekend to make for better viewing conditions.

Vepco: Rates Due To Oil Cost

By GEORGE W. WILBUR
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. says its dependence on oil leads to the high rates in northeastern North Carolina that have raised the hackles of the state's governor.

But, it says, when more of its oil-fired units are converted back to coal and more nuclear units are brought on line, it again will compete favorably with Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co.

Vepco, based in Richmond, serves parts of 22 of North Carolina's 100 counties.

Its admittedly stiffer rates were sharply criticized Aug. 2 by North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt, who blamed them in part on Vepco management, which he said "has not performed well."

Three days earlier, the North Carolina Utilities Commission had ordered Vepco to refund to customers $1.6 million in what it called excessive charges and to reduce rates by $4.1 million annually.

Hunt said Vepco's high rates were inhibiting industrial development in the North Carolina counties it serves, and suggested that Carolina Power & Light buy out its service system in the state.

Vepco officials called that suggestion "ridiculous," and Vepco board chairman T. Justin Moore said in Richmond the utility "has no interest" in selling its North Carolina service system to anyone.

But while denying its rates have retarded industrial development in the areas it serves, Vepco readily concedes they are markedly higher than those charged by Duke Power and Carolina Power & Light.

"We know our rates are higher now and we're doing something about it," said Randy McIver, vice president in charge of Vepco's Southern Division in Roanoke Rapids.

McIver, echoing Moore's earlier statement, said Vepco is unequivocally not interested in any proposal to sell its service network.

"We've been in North Carolina 50 years and we value our customers here highly," he said.

Over that time span, McIver said, Vepco has had both higher and lower rates than its competitors.

In some extreme cases, Vepco's North Carolina rates are now as much as $15 a month higher than those charged by Duke Power or CP&L.

The reason, McIver said, was Vepco's conversion of a number of coal-fired units to oil in the late 1960s and early 1970s, when oil was the cheapest fuel available.

"The North Carolina Utilities Commission told us at that time that our judgment was sound," he said.

But after oil prices began to soar in the mid 1970s, he added, Vepco found itself at an increasing disadvantage with its North Carolina competitors, who still rely primarily on coal.

McIver said Vepco now has converted its two largest oil-fired units back to coal and is awaiting federal approval to begin three additional conversions.

By 1983 or 1984, he said, Vepco should have these conversions completed, four nuclear units on line, and its $1 billion Bath County, Va., pump storage project in operation.

"When we accomplish all these things, our rates should be right back in line with Duke Power and CP&L," he said.

Other factors in the rate competition, McIver said, include fewer customers per mile and lower electricity usage in Vepco's North Carolina service area than in Virginia, where 95 percent of its customers live.

"We simply have fewer customers per mile to divvy up the cost of service," he said.

McIver noted Duke Power has 38 percent and CP&L 27 percent more customers per mile than Vepco.

"That enables them to spread their operational costs out more evenly," he said.

In addition, he said, Duke Power customers use 21.3 percent more electricity per year than those in Vepco's territory while CP&L has an 18.7 percent advantage.

McIver disputed anew Hunt's assertion that higher utility rates have inhibited industrial growth in northeastern North Carolina.

To the contrary, he said, new industrial development and new job opportunities in that area far outstripped the rest of the state from 1970 through 1977.

Acknowledging that Vepco has been hit hard by the oil crisis, McIver added:

"We are in the process of building one of the most modern and efficient systems in the nation. When it is completed, all our customers are going to benefit."

"RIGHT PLACES"?

After having and breast-feeding my third child, I feel the need to tone up some. I would like for you to check out the product, "Right Places," for me. Its advertisement says it's a "nutritionally-designed high-protein, low-fat supplement specially formulated to help build up fat tissue in your breasts. When combined with our Right Places exercise program, it increases bust size while firming the supporting muscles." Just mix in your favorite fruit, milk, honey and an egg to create a frothy Right Places shake and follow a simple daily exercise program." You order it for $9.95 for a one-pound can from a post office box in Atlanta, J. S.

Mary Ann Barnes, dietician with Pitt Internal and Renal Medicine Associates Ltd. here, wrote to the company for material at our request. After receiving and thoroughly reviewing it, she commented, "The powder protein substance is temporary, expensive and unnecessary. A synthetic product cannot take the place of good, healthy eating habits. It is also important to note that the product endorses exercising. Since the literature states it will help people who are thin to gain weight, the effect could be potentially adverse for the person who was already overweight, but trying to firm breast tissue. Good nutrition, with real food, along with a moderate exercise program, is the only way to achieve a normal body weight and keep muscles throughout the body firm and toned. The milk and egg and honey could serve just as well without the $10-a-pound powder, said by the company to last only two weeks when used as directed."

Herbert Hyde Quits Crime Control Post

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Herbert Hyde, secretary of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety for less than a year, has submitted his resignation to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce confirmed today that Hyde turned in a handwritten letter of resignation to the governor, and said a successor would be announced in about a week.

Administration sources told The Associated Press that Hunt would name Appeals Court Judge Burley B. Mitchell Jr. of Raleigh to the cabinet post.

Pearce said no date has been set for Hyde's resignation to become effective. He said the date would be announced with the successor.

Hyde, 53, was widely known to be discontented with the cabinet job, which he took over in January.

Administration sources said that discontent, and a desire to return to his Asheville law practice and pay off an old campaign debt, led to Hyde's resignation. Hyde still owes $20,000 from his 1976 campaign for lieutenant governor, and recently organized a committee to raise money to retire the debt.

Neither Mitchell nor Hyde would comment on the developments.

During Hyde's tenure, many in his department complained openly that they often had little knowledge of his actions, that he kept his decisions mostly to himself and frequently did not let anyone know what he was doing.

Hyde's defenders said he could not be blamed, because he took over a situation obviously ripe for discontent. The department was filled with staff members appointed by his predecessor, J. Phil Carlton, a close friend of Hunt's from college days.

Carlton had delegated much of the authority for running the new department to his staff, and administration sources said Hyde was not comfortable delegating authority to remaining Carlton loyalists.

Carlton was named by Hunt to a seat on the state Court of Appeals, and was promoted to the state Supreme Court this month.

Hunt's office refused official comment on the resignation Thursday evening. But Hunt, arriving late for a Davie County Masonic Picnic in Mocksville Thursday, told the gathering he had held up because he was making changes in the crime control program.

tion after hearing evidence in an affirmed testimony proceeding.

In making its findings of fact following the hearing, the Council concluded by a four to two vote that, in conflict with requirements of the City Ordinance, the proposed use would "affect adversely the health and safety of residents and workers in the city."

In addition, the Council concluded four to two that the ordinance requirements would not be satisfied in that the proposed use would "constitute a nuisance, or hazard because of the number of persons who will attend or use such facility, of the vehicular movement, of noise or fumes or of the type of physical activity."

In both conclusions, Councilmen Charles Vincent and Clarence Gray said that they felt the requirements of the ordinance could be met by Robbins if certain restrictions were imposed upon the applicant. Both Vincent and Gray voted in opposition to the findings of fact found to be in conflict with the ordinance, while Council members Mildred McGrath, John Howard, Joe Taft Jr., and Judy Greene voted in favor.

Mickey Herrin, an attorney who represented Robbins in the matter, gave notice of appeal on behalf of Robbins to Superior Court.

During the hearing, in response to questions by Herrin, Robbins explained that he had lost money during the operation of the facility, located approximately 500 yards from the Green Street intersection, as a private club and had made improvements in the physical nature of the structure in order to operate a disco.

A group of residents who live in the area of Robbins' club appeared at last month's meeting and objected to the operation of the facility due to excessive noise, litter in adjoining yards, and outside activity by club patrons. Part of the neighborhood contingent was on hand again last night to oppose the permit application.

Robbins said in his testimony that he would be able to control the noise at his club and would have more help to handle the operation. Robbins maintained that the large crowd that attended his club this past July 4th caught him by surprise and he said that he did not expect to have that many people on hand during normal operations.

It was pointed out that the residents had not complained to Robbins about the operation of his club and Herrin contended that now that Robbins had been confronted with the complaints, he should have the opportunity to correct the problems.

Mrs. Esther Roberts, who said that she lives across the road from the club, urged the Council not to issue the permit.

Mayor Percy Cox said that the Council felt that Robbins could not physically control the noise at the facility. Cox said that unless Robbins fenced his facility in, he questioned how the owner would control the customers "spilling over into the residential neighborhood."

In denying the application, the Council concluded that all requirements for the special use permit had not been met.

In another matter, an application for a special use permit by Bill Meacham and Michael Martin for a nightclub at 400 W. Fifth Street was withdrawn.

Meacham said that he and Martin hoped to operate a nightclub in the former Presbyterian Church building and would admit only customers 21 years of age and older. He said that the partners were also considering the operation of a restaurant in the facility at a future date.

Council members questioned Meacham's provisions for parking at the facility. In addition, Martin was not on hand for the meeting and Cox said that he felt the Council could not hear the matter without Martin being available to answer questions.

Herrin, who represented the applicants, requested that the matter be tabled for 30 days but Cox said a lot of people "who have done their homework" were at last night's meeting to presumably oppose the application. The mayor said he did not feel it was fair to those people to table the matter.

Herrin said that the request would be withdrawn.

In other business, the Council approved a request by Greenville Cable TV Inc. for expanded programming to the cable system and for the establishment of a rate schedule for the expanded system.

David Smith, vice president of the firm, said that Greenville Cable TV was asking for an amendment to the cable ordinance that would allow the company to add new channels to the existing service.

Smith said that in addition to the basic cable service and Showtime Home Theatre service now available here, an expanded cable service would be offered to customers that would provide additional channels. The new service channels would include an independent station from San Francisco, an entertainment-sports pro-

Trial Revives Manson Specter

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The specter of the Charles Manson family cult killings 10 years ago this week were expected to be raised today as government attorneys wind up their triple-murder case against Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald.

The former Green Beret doctor, now 35 and practicing emergency medicine in California, is charged with stabbing and bludgeoning to death his pregnant wife Colette, 26, and daughters Kimberly, 5, and Kristen, 2, while stationed at Fort Bragg in February 1970.

MacDonald told Army officials of waking up to find four people gathered around him, one carrying a candle and chanting, "Acid is groovy. Kill the pig." The word "pig" was found scrawled in blood on the headboard in the MacDonald's bedroom. The blood matched Mrs. MacDonald's type.

A blood-stained copy of an Esquire magazine carrying accounts of the Manson cult was found in the house.

Prosecutors contend MacDonald's version of what happened "may have been inspired by his knowledge of drug-using cults such as the Manson family and the ritualistic murders they committed."

The statement was filed in court papers after defense attorneys objected to having the articles introduced, contending they would serve only to inflame the jury and constituted "the most vicious sort of innuendo."

U.S. District Court Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. ruled the articles would be permitted. Actress Sharon Tate, three friends and a caretaker were found stabbed and shot Aug. 9, 1969. The following night, 19 years ago today, two more people were found butchered.

The Esquire magazine articles on the cult leader and his devoted followers refer to "groovy acid," the use of candles as part of the ritual and the word "pig" smeared on Miss Tate's wall in her blood.

Meanwhile, defense attorney Bernard Segal continued his efforts Thursday to discredit testimony on a comparison made between holes found in the pajama top MacDonald says he was wearing when attacked and wounds on his wife's body.

MacDonald says he put the top over his wife after he found her body.

Shirley Green, an FBI laboratory assistant, underwent extensive cross-examination about tests she performed on the torn blood-stained dark-blue top.

Miss Green said she was able to fold the top, using pictures of the way it was found lying on Mrs. MacDonald's body, to show 21 punctures on top and the other 27 holes lined up underneath. The holes match the wounds on Mrs. MacDonald's chest, she said.

Segal said the results depended on what she was asked to do. He and others on the defense team have said they think the evidence was manipulated to fit the government's theories.

MacDonald, in an interview last week, called it the "great lie technique."

The Army dropped its charges against MacDonald in late 1970. He was indicted in 1975 by a federal grand jury after a reinvestigation.

Break-Ins Checked

Two break-ins occurred in Greenville during Friday night. In one, at the National Printing Company on Albemarle Avenue, Police Chief Glenn Cannon notes that investigation reveals nothing apparently was taken from the premises.

"Entry was made through the roof of the plant," Cannon noted, "and obviously the burglar alarm system must have frightened the intruders off, as it's one that sounds off a few seconds after entry."

Cannon said the break-in that occurred at a residence on East Twelfth Street is being investigated this morning.

Spill Not As Deadly

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Tests indicate the world's largest oil spill, diluted and broken down during its two-month advance on the Texas shores, is less deadly than first feared for the lush, delicate ecology of the Gulf Coast, scientists say.

"The results are pretty encouraging. We did not find that the oil was significantly toxic," Dr. Patrick Parker, head of the University of Texas Aransas Pass Marine Laboratory, said Thursday. "This oil has changed drastically. What we tested is much less toxic."

Meanwhile, the leading edge of the oil from a runaway Mexican offshore well 500 miles south of Texas continued its erratic drift several miles off the white resort beaches of southern Texas.

So far, those beaches have had only light spotting by small globs of tar carried in by the surf.

More than 60 million gallons have spilled from the Ixtoc I well, 50 miles off the Yucatan Peninsula, and some Mexican beaches have been blackened by thick crude.

"I would have expected a little more impact by now," said Dr. John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. "The impact has been very light — unexpectedly light."

"It's not as bad as I expected," said task force commander Capt. Roger Madson, who added that he is optimistic the beaches will not become much more soiled.

Madson said the spill had been broken up by Gulf currents and partially disintegrated in the salt water.

Shots Needed By Students

The new state immunization law that went into effect July 1 is designed to eliminate serious outbreaks of childhood diseases among school populations, according to Robert F. Ehinger, M.D., Pitt Co. Health Director.

"We are looking at perhaps 200,000 students in all grades across the state who are not fully protected against polio, measles, German measles, diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus," he said.

"Beginning students for years have been required to get this protection. Measles vaccine, however, was not required until 1971 and rubella (German measles) until 1977, so there are many junior and senior high school students moving up through the grades without full protection," he indicated.

"Since 1973 elementary schools have demanded immunization records of all kindergartens and first grade youngsters, so, except for transfers, our lower grades are in good shape. Many times school records from other states do not arrive with immunization records attached."

The new law says that all students must present proof of immunization against all six diseases to school officials on or before the start of school for the 1980-81 year, or be expelled. Parents should receive notification this fall if their child needs one or more shots.

Immunizations may be obtained either from the family doctor or free of charge at the health department, Dr. Ehinger reminded.

Nixon Still Unpopular, But Carter Drops Too

NEW YORK (AP) — Five years after Watergate, former President Richard Nixon is still unpopular, and President Carter has become unpopular among a large segment of the people who put him in office, according to two separate polls.

The latest findings on Carter came in an ABC News-Harris poll released Thursday, the same day that the network released its own ABC News 20-20 poll on Nixon.

The poll on Carter showed 52 percent of Democrats who voted for the president in 1976 say they would advise him not to seek re-election in 1980.

Lou Harris said that what was most startling about the survey was Carter's loss of popularity among voters of his political base: Southerners, big-city dwellers, blacks, white Protestants and union members.

As for Nixon, a Republican, 74 percent of Americans surveyed said they would never vote for him for any state or national office.

Eighty-one percent said they think the former president was guilty of wrongdoing in the Watergate affair, and 75 percent said they feel the office of the president lost prestige as a result of his actions.

However, 53 percent said the humiliation of having to resign because of Watergate was sufficient punishment for Nixon.

In the poll on Carter, 59 percent of Democrats said they did not think Carter could win re-nomination from their party, and 30 percent said he could.

And by a larger margin, 66-22 percent, Democrats said Carter could not win re-election even if he were nominated. Among all voters, including Republicans and independents, the margin was 71-19 percent.

Carter's popularity has plunged even lower than in June, when 46 percent of Democrats thought he would not be renominated and 47 percent thought he would lose the election.

The ABC News poll on Aug. 7 on Nixon involved a cross section of 856 voters nationwide who were contacted by telephone. It noted that because of rounding, not all of its percentages added up to 100.

The Carter poll is subject to a 3 percent margin of error either way and the Nixon poll to a 3.5 percent, according to the pollsters.

Agents' Slayer 'Died For Cause'

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — When James A. Maloney walked into the local FBI office and killed two agents before turning a gun on himself, it was his way of dying for a cause, one of his friends believes.

Maloney gunned down the two agents in the FBI's El Centro office Thursday morning. A third agent was killed in Cleveland, Ohio, when authorities attempted to arrest a man wanted on a fugitive warrant.

Maloney, 30, was a pacifist who had been active in causes such as Vietnam War protests and support for the United Farm Workers labor group, said friend Lyn Lesicka.

"I believe he was making a statement. ... He had definite political beliefs. He felt a number of people were being oppressed and he felt the FBI were a good portion of the oppressors," she said.

Robert Young, head of the San Diego FBI office, said Maloney went to the FBI office to talk to agents Charles Elmore and Robert Porter about obtaining files under the Freedom of Information Act.

Young said Maloney had been investigated in the early 1970s for associating with radical groups, but nothing came of the investigation.

Young said Maloney shot Porter with a 12-gauge shotgun at the door of the office. The shotgun jammed, Young said, but Maloney was able to fire six shots at the agents with a .38-caliber pistol before shooting himself in the mouth.

Porter, 44, was married and had five children. Elmore, 34, was single. Both had been at the El Centro office about a year.

Young said Maloney left two notes saying he planned to take his own life and "take others with him."

The notes, furnished by an unidentified "cooperative witness," indicated Maloney "was opposed to the capitalistic system and this was his way of striking back," said Young.

Meanwhile, more than 400 law enforcement officials in Ohio searched for a 19-year-old man the FBI alleges shot and killed Special Agent Johnnie L. Oliver, 35.

FBI spokesman Anthony T. Riggio identified the wanted man as Melvin Bay Guyon, also known as Tyrone Little.

Greenville Mart Best Of Season

The Greenville Tobacco Market posted its best average of the season Thursday, with $139.45 topping Wednesday's high average of $138.47, ac-ording to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor, Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade.

The market sold 1,127,632 pounds for $1,572,462 Thursday, with 14.41 percent in stabilization receipts. To date, the market has sold 10,539,243 pounds for $13,857,157, an average of $134.48 per 100 pounds.

According to Bryan, the volume of cutters and leaf grades increased on the market floor Thursday, with volume of primings, lugs, and non-descript grades decreasing.

MacHale is currently starring in ABC TV's "One Life to Live" and also appears in numerous TV commercials.

Locally, more than 50 talent acts are scheduled to appear on the telethon. One Greenville performer, Raine Sullivan, singer and guitarist, is slated to make an appearance. Other area talent is from Beaufort, Havelock, Hubert, Jacksonville, Kinston, New Bern, Newport, Richlands, Swansboro, Swan Quarter and Trenton.

Telethon chairman Zoot Saunders notes that more than $26,000 was raised during last year's telethon. These funds are used for research, care, education and community services to help youngsters suffering with cystic fibrosis, asthma, emphysema, and other related diseases.

Couple Exchanges Vows In Afternoon Ceremony

MRS. GEORGE P. HADDOCK JR.

TARBORO — The First Pentecostal Holiness Church here was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Marsha G. Beach and George P. Haddock Jr. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Jack Phillips of New Bern at 5 p.m.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Gurganus of Tarboro, and Mr. and Mrs. George P. Haddock Sr. of Grimesland.

The bride was given in marriage by her son, Christopher Todd Beach. Steven P. Haddock of Grimesland, son of the bridegroom, served as best man. The honor attendant was Sharon L. Haddock of Grimesland, daughter of the bridegroom.

Ushers included Robbie Gurganus of Tarboro, and Douglas Gurganus of Fayetteville, brothers of the bride, Gray Lancaster of Vanceboro, and Kenneth Harris of Tarboro.

Glenda Thompson, sister of the bride, was organist, and Mary Ann Harris was soloist. Both are of Tarboro.

The bride wore a floor length white dress of batiste styled with a fitted bodice, trimmed with pink flowers and ruffled sleeves. Two ties accented the waistline and bodice. Her cascade bouquet was centered with a white orchid with pink roses, white carnations, baby's breath and streamers.

The honor attendant's gown was styled identically to the bride's in pink eyelet, which was made by the bride. She carried a long-stemmed white mum with pink streamers.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church educational building.

Mrs. Sally Howard of Kinston, aunt of the bride, served the three-tiered wedding cake. Mrs. Alma Carpenter of Wilson, aunt of the bride, poured punch. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Shirley Whitley, sister of the bride, Mrs. Robbie Gurganus, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Mary O'Neal, Mrs. Kenneth Harris and Mrs. Glenda Thompson, sister of the bride, all of Tarboro.

Mrs. Betty Jo Hendricks of Wake Forest directed the wedding and presided at the bride's table.

Neapolitan Peppers Are For Today

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

We were lucky enough to acquire an authentic Neapolitan recipe from Mrs. Lucy Capone to pass along to you. It's right in tune with the times. Those long and rather narrow light-green Italian frying peppers are given a bread stuffing made piquant with stuffed green olives and anchovies; then they're fried in a skillet. No meat needed for the stuffing. You don't have to turn on the oven.

Mrs. Capone loves to cook and has an appreciative family. Her husband and her mother, who lives with them, enjoy her daily offerings. Her three children and six grandchildren — to say nothing of sisters, cousins and aunts — all look forward to coming to her house for meals.

Interestingly enough, she is as skillful at improvising as she is at preparing traditional Italian recipes. As a young woman she came to the United States from Italy, married an Italian-American and began helping out in her mother-in-law's restaurant. There she learned to cook both elaborate and short-order Italian dishes.

Leftovers never faze her. For example, she said she would probably use the anchovies and some of the capers left from the Neapolitan pepper recipe in a simple fresh tomato sauce for spaghetti.

MRS. LUCY CAPONE'S NEAPOLITAN PEPPERS
7 to 8-ounce loaf (about 14 inches long) Italian bread (with sesame seeds on top and bottom)
1 tablespoon olive oil
2 cloves garlic (1 halved and 1 minced)
16-ounce can whole peeled tomatoes, undrained and partly crushed
¼ teaspoon dried crushed basil
¼ teaspoon dried crushed oregano
Ground black pepper to taste

½ cup pimiento-stuffed green olives, chopped medium-fine
2 tablespoons capers
6 flat anchovy fillets, cut up small (from a 2-ounce can)
10 light-green Italian frying peppers, each about 5 inches long (about 1½ pounds)
1½ cups salad oil

Cut bread in half lengthwise. Cut out or pull out all the soft part (leaving the 2 long crusts intact) and crumb soft bread coarsely — there should be 4 scant cups, loosely packed. Spread crumbs and let dry at room temperature. (Or dry in a preheated 250-degree oven — takes about 15 minutes.) From the crusts cut out 10 rounds wide enough to fit the top openings of the peppers. (You can use a small round cookie cutter to mark the crusts, then with a small sharp knife cut around the markings.) Tightly wrap bread rounds in saran and refrigerate so they won't dry out. (Use leftover crust in some other dish.)

In a 10-inch skillet gently heat olive oil with the halved garlic clove for about 5 minutes; discard garlic. Add minced garlic to the skillet and over low heat brown lightly. Add tomatoes, basil, oregano and ground pepper; simmer, uncovered, for 30 minutes. Add olives, capers and anchovies; simmer, uncovered, for 30 minutes longer. Add crumbs and mix well with your fingers.

Cut a thin slice from the stem end of each pepper; seed, wash and dry with paper towels. (Use cutaway slices in some other dish.) Fill the top half (or more) of each pepper with ¼ cup of the bread mixture; the end parts of the peppers will be empty. Fit the bread rounds, sesame seed sides out, into the pepper openings to hold in the stuffing, but do not press in the bread rounds too far or they won't crisp during the frying.

In a 10-inch skillet heat the salad oil until medium-hot. Add 5 of the peppers and fry slowly, turning often until browned on all sides and the bread rounds are brown and crisp — 10 to 12 minutes. Drain on paper towels. Add remaining peppers to oil in skillet and fry the same way. Some of the bread rounds may start to pop out during the frying; if they do, just push them back in place with a long-handled fork. Best served shortly after frying when the bread rounds are deliciously crisp.

Makes 10 appetizer or side-dish servings.

Too Many Mates On Her Dreamboat

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am 30, attractive, desirable, live in Seattle and could pretty much have my pick of men.

I recently met the man of my dreams in a little town called Townsend. He's handsome, slightly younger, is built like a million dollars, drives a Porsche and is the world's greatest lover. More than that, he's so kind, considerate and fun to be with that the first night I was with him I thought I had died and gone to heaven!

Sounds perfect, doesn't it? Well, it's not — a dozen other women feel the same way about him.

Abby, how do I capture such a perfect man with so much competition around?

Please don't tell me to look for someone who's more available. In 30 years, and after one unsuccessful marriage, I know he is "Mr. Right."

HEAVEN CAN'T WAIT

DEAR HEAVEN: It won't be easy, but try the cool, laid-back approach. With so many women drooling over him, he's sure to notice the one woman who presents a challenge. If that doesn't work, get in line. Your chances are still 1 in 12.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 80, is getting married to a gentleman who is 82.

They will be married in a church and want to send out about 50 invitations and have a reception afterwards!

Do you think this is proper for people their age? Frankly, I don't.

I think they should get married quietly, with just the wedding party (six people) going somewhere for dinner afterwards. Then they should go away for a few days.

I would like your opinion.

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Age has nothing to do with it. If anything, I think their ages would enhance the beauty of the occasion.

Encourage your mother to have the kind of wedding and reception she wants. Do whatever makes her happy and, I promise, you'll look back on her wedding with no regrets.

DEAR ABBY: I have a married granddaughter I'll call Shelly. Last night, Shelly's husband, Harry, arrived home at 10 o'clock. He had driven 150 miles to get there after being away from home all week.

When we heard Harry's car in the driveway, Shelly's mother asked her if she wasn't going to the door to greet him. (Shelly was sitting, reading.) Her reply was, "Oh, it's only Harry."

Abby, that set me thinking. "Only Harry." Not long ago, Shelly thought Harry was very special. Of course he is still special, and Shelly would realize it fast enough if he didn't arrive home one night.

A traveling salesman's work is not easy. Sleeping in a strange motel room every night isn't fun either. But that's what Harry does because it's the way he can best provide for his wife and children. He is a loving, caring husband and father. He is something special, and I hope Shelly doesn't wait until after he's gone to appreciate him.

WIDOWED GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: How true. The saddest thing in the world is a kind word left unsaid. Please see that Shelly sees this.

DEAR ABBY: I have just started going steady with a guy I've been dating for a year.

What I want to know is, just how far is a girl expected to go when she is going steady?

I mean, how much do guys in general expect from this kind of relationship?

CONFIDENTIAL, PLEASE

DEAR CON: What "guys in general" expect is not relevant. What your guy expects is. Ask him.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WANTS FRIENDS": There are two kinds of people in the world, those who come into a room and say, "Here I am!" and those who come into a room and say, "There you are!"

What kind are you? Think about it.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Her 13-State Region Includes Some 85,000 Sears Employees

Sears Employee Communications Director Donna Cole Peterman, headquartered in Atlanta, Ga., estimates she spends one-third of her time on the job.

From Atlanta to Greenville, to Orlando and Miami, Fla., and New Orleans, La., are definite places she will be spending time in during the next few weeks. She was here last week prior to and during the opening of the new Sears, Roebuck and Co. in the new Carolina East Mall. The next store opening project on her agenda is Florence, S. C.

"Whoever handles public relations for a Sears store opening has the responsibility to create a program that's going to give the public the most positive impression possible of the new facility and company in general.

"We recognize the fact that Sears enjoys a good reputation across the nation and we work hard to make sure nothing diminishes that regard," said Ms. Peterman.

Ms. Peterman is responsible for developing, budgeting, implementing and evaluating an extensive print communications program consisting of "Sears South News," a monthly tabloid newspaper in two editions which is distributed to all southern territory employees and a monthly newsletter, "Super News," for approximately 7,800 timecard supervisors, as well as the "Management Newsletter," a bi-weekly Kiplinger-style publication for 3,100 "checklist" or salaried personnel. She also handles external media for the opening of new retail facilities and serves as an executive speech writer.

"I think my journalism background gives me a better handle on being able to judge the newsworthiness and interest value of articles about Sears from a media person's viewpoint," she added.

She is an honor graduate of the University of Missouri School of Journalism.

She has worked in advertising copy writing for ad agencies, has done free lance writing and was part of the original staff of a business publication in Saint Louis, Mo. She is interested in politics and has worked during numerous campaigns, locally and statewide both in Georgia and Missouri. Prior to joining Sears in 1975, she worked as a media relations assistant to the governor of Missouri.

An accredited member of the International Association of Business Communicators, Ms. Peterman is serving her second term as president of the 145-member IABC-Atlanta Chapter. She has won numerous awards at the local and district level for interpretive reporting, feature writing, color photography, tabloid newspapers, newsletters and four-color magazines.

She has served on various Atlanta Chamber of Commerce committees and this year was selected as one of a class of 60 young men and women out of 350 nominations for the 1978-79 class of Leadership Atlanta.

As an outgrowth of the Leadership Atlanta, Ms. Peterman is a board member of The Bridge, a family counseling center and Morningside-Lenox Park Civic Association.

Agreement Be Reached?

Patricia R. Harris took office as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare news reports indicated she might follow a more reasonable course in cases such as the one involving the University of North Carolina system.

United Press International quoted sources concerning a "heated" meeting with David S. Tatel, chief of the Office for Civil Rights.

The reports indicated Mrs. Harris told Tatel to keep political considerations in mind in pursuing controversial cases.

Tatel had virtually free reign under Sec. Califano to make what were often conflicting demands in the UNC desegregation matter.

It also reportedly came out in the meeting that Tatel will be leaving the office Dec. 1, although not because of the conversation.

The meeting will be open to many interpretations with civil rights militants seeing it as a softening of HEW's all-out campaign against several southern higher education systems.

We hope it is an indication of a willingness on the part of the new HEW secretary to look for common grounds to settle the issues involved.

A long court fight between HEW and UNC is not going to be of benefit to anyone, nor is any imposed plan which will rip part the various campuses of the UNC system.

As in all controversies there is a middle ground for all parties. Perhaps Sec. Harris is indicating that she intends to find it.

Political Trial Balloons Go Up

Sen I. Beverly Lake, Jr. has indicated he may run for governor.

Now a Democratic State senator, Lake is considering an appeal to become a Republican and take on the Democratic candidate.

Lake is also considering runs for U. S. senate or attorney general as a Democrat.

Lake's is one of several trial balloons currently being sent up in anticipation of next year's state elections. The reaction they get will determine the course of action.

Change Shipping Methods

By Bill Noblitt

WILMINGTON — A new breed of ships, and a new dockside system of loading and unloading them, is revolutionizing the import-export business.

North Carolina has been a leader in this revolution. Malcolm McLean is a former Winston-Salem trucking magnate who is now credited as the creator of the container cargo system. McLean, once retired and then active in creating Sealand which he sold to Reynolds for untold millions, is now creating another empire, having brought U.S. Lines.

The container ships are awesome. Long and lean afloat, they have a low profile with vast expanses of clear space across the beam amidship. A towering superstructure near the stern elevates the bridge for vision across the bulky container boxes stacked on deck four-stories tall and 10 wide.

A tiny hold below decks hold the estimated 30 percent of modern cargoes which can't be moved in containers.

Lift

Machinery specially designed for the purposes are used at docksides. Steel beams swung from a crane have automatic locking pins which drop into holes at each corner of the container; untouched by human hands hold it tight and lift it through the air to be stacked on the dock.

Placed directly on a truck or rail car, the goods are ready to roll inland for delivery to the final destination, the containers serving as the boxcar or truck trailer.

What does all this mean to the economy?

First, a ship can carry enough containers to make up a good-sized freight train; or a line of 250 trucks. Imagine the fuel savings moving that many goods on the highway 100 miles compared to 100 miles of ocean where the cost is counted in pennies rather than dollars.

Next, it used to take hundreds of strong backs and arms to unload a ship, and that meant days in port. Now, it means just hours in port.

And then the trucks come to pick up the goods. That

Last year the Wilmington terminal handles 19,000 containers, and so far this year has handled over 10,000 and will top last year by a good percentage by year's end. In its first month at Wilmington, the transported crane worked more than it had in a full year at Morehead City.

Yet it seems strange that such debate should surround just one container crane when it is clear that the port has a long way to go to become competitive in this new shipping era. Already there are more than 60 container cranes at East Coast ports; 20 in the Newark, New Jersey port alone.

But those who keep close watch on this activity flatly predict that the Sunbelt economic boom will mean that South Atlantic ports are the ports of the future, serving the fast growing population and industries of the Southeast, and the rapidly developing nations of South American, Africa, and the Middle East as well as the Orient by way of the Panama.

BILL NOBLITT

Finally, pilferage is sharply reduced by the sealed containers with the labels outside giving instructions and the goods inside protected from prying eyes and hands.

Cargo container shipment is without doubt the wave of the future say the experts, and 70 percent of the world's goods are already moving that way, except for liquids and grains.

Remember all the furor over the container crane at Morehead City?

Crane

It was hard to understand all the furor stirred by moving it to Wilmington to join another already in operation there, and why the Morehead area resisted and Wilmington

How To Handle Bags

Many air travelers have noticed that their luggage has been getting more of a bashing recently than it has in the past. This is no accident. Most airline luggage handlers must now go to school before an airline will allow them to touch a piece of baggage.

I was fortunate to visit the Dent Airline Luggage and Freight Handlers School in St. Louis last week. The Dent school trains most of the airline baggage handlers in the United States. Dent, the founder and president of the school, took me out on a large playing field the size of a football gridiron. Several classes were in session. The teachers all wore baseball caps and sweat shirts, and had whistles around their necks. The pupils were dressed in white coveralls. The first class we stopped to watch were throwing pieces of luggage to each other.

"All right, let's throw them a little harder," the coach yelled. "What are you guys, a bunch of cream puffs? You there, Pitowsky. You're not supposed to catch every bag. Drop a few."

Pitowsky dropped the next one, and it broke open, scattering clothes all over the field.

"Beautiful," the coach yelled. "Now you've got it."

"We use real luggage," Dent said proudly. "We simulate every possible situation a luggage handler will face."

"Ryan, you're catching the bags with two hands," the coach yelled. "You'll never break any that way. How many times have I told you to use only one hand when trying to catch a piece of luggage?"

We walked down the field and came to a 16-foot tower. Several men were on the tower, dropping boxes marked FRAGILE to the ground.

"The object of this exercise," said Dent, "is for the

40 Years Ago Today

August 10, 1939

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, county health officer, said today that reduced personnel of the United States Public Health Service for material control had caused the local health department to assign more of the work to local sanitation workers.

He explained that in an effort to control malaria, a disease he described as acting as a blight upon many communities, the State Board of Health had set up certain regulations governing the control of impounded water supplies. He added that regulations require all persons to first secure a permit from the State Board of Health before constructing a dam or reservoir.

"The State Highway Commission is giving excellent cooperation to the malarial control program by draining all pits which result in the matter of road building," he declared.

Dr. Ennett again called attention to the fact that much can be done by the individual householder to protect himself against malaria by either screening his house or eliminating all standing water on his premises or using a larvacide spray.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Retailing George Bush

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
LANCASTER, N.H. — George Bush rose at 6 a.m. to jog more than three miles down Route 115 in weather unusually humid for New Hampshire's North Country, an exertion that embodies two components of his strategy to come from nowhere in this state to win the Republican presidential nomination.

Component No. 1 is the unavoidable comparison between Bush, still athletic (6-foot-3, 190 pounds) at age 55, and Ronald Reagan, the 68-year-old Republican front-runner. "I'd like to see Reagan doing this," said ex-Gov. Hugh Gregg, Bush's

New Hampshire chairman. "We couldn't even get him up this early."

Gregg, who managed Reagan's campaign in 1976, is component No. 2. His unsurpassed personal contacts and unmatched vitality are building a statewide organization from scratch. Gregg ceaselessly travels the state in his weathered station wagon, contacting those same party workers he talked into backing Reagan four years ago. Now he wants them for Bush.

Without Gregg, there would be little chance for dark horse Bush. Even with Gregg, the candidate must impress himself on Gregg's legions of friends. This is time-consuming, retail politics. Contrasted with Reagan's wholesale politics of monster rallies and massive television, it is deliberate, one-at-a-time courtship requiring immense patience and time.

Bush has plenty of both. What's more, he knows that retailing is his only chance. Although he is becoming the Averell Harriman of the Republican party in accumulating high public jobs (five so far, climaxed by CIA director), Bush is unknown to the public. He needs a strong showing in Iowa's Jan. 21 caucuses and New Hampshire's Feb. 26 primary to break the anonymity barrier.

To accomplish this, he has visited New Hampshire a dozen times so far in 1979 and will be here another dozen times before the year ends. While John B. Connally rushed into the New Hampshire legislature for a quick speech early this year, when Bush went to Concord it was for a whole day chatting with lawmakers. If native Texan Connally is a little too big for this state, transplanted Texan Bush is the native New Englander who fits right in.

Besides his understated style, Bush seems correct for the state ideologically. His remarks are conservative (marginally more so than Connally's and no less so than Reagan's on economics and national security) but seem more moderate. Although he has enlivened his speaking style, it still lacks Connally's dynamism or Reagan's elegance.

Bush's profligate expenditure of time on minute numbers of people was evident in his three-mile jog, embodying both components of his New Hampshire strategy. Gregg asked John Harrigan, a young weekly newspaper editor and a jogger himself, to run along. Afterward, Harrigan was invited for breakfast (prepared by Mrs. Gregg) at Gregg's country home in Jefferson.

To the editor:

Cystic fibrosis, an inherited lung-damaging disease, is not as rare as once thought, approximately one in every 1,600 children are born with the disease.

Because CF is hard to detect in infants, it is believed that many children may be undiagnosed. Some children with CF may be misdiagnosed, as the symptoms of other lung-damaging diseases can mimic those of CF.

There is one sign unique to the possible presence of cystic fibrosis to which all parents can be alerted. CF affects the exocrine (outward secreting) glands, and the sweat of children who have the disease is often unusually salty.

During "Kiss Your Baby" week Aug. 19-25, all parents are being asked to kiss their children with very special attention. If you detect a taste of salt when kissing your child's skin, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation advises seeing a doctor. A child whose skin tastes salty should be tested for cystic fibrosis.

The possibility that your child has CF is slight, but if so, early diagnosis and thorough medical care are essential.

The signs of cystic fibrosis and other lung-damaging diseases are: recurrent wheezing, excessive appetite but poor weight gain, and clubbing (enlargement of the fingertips). Additional signs are persistent coughing with excessive mucus.

Other signs of cystic fibrosis may include: persistent bulky diarrhea, a salty taste to the skin and nasal polyps.

MAN THE MASTER?

The testimony of history is against Swinburne. Little by little, man does make progress, but adverse circumstances may cause individuals and groups to revert to primitive practice and passions. Our civilization is little more than a thin veneer.

To say this is not to take a hopeless view of life, for mankind was a Savior, and very decidedly that Savior is not a mere man. Man's involvement in his own evil is so great and his capacity for dealing with it so little, that the hand of God has reached down to support mankind in his weakness.

So it ever remains, "Glory to God in the highest." No poet on earth can alter these words and make the statement true.

It's Hard To Identify A Mommy

By GAIL MICHAELS

During the week before Mother's Day, Meg's preschool teachers compiled a list of what each of the children liked best about his or her mother.

Several said, "She buys me presents." One little girl said that her mother wore pretty nightgowns.

Meg demonstrated her contempt for the entire adult population. "What I like best about my mommy," she said, "is that she lets more children than big people come to my birthday parties."

Not one mother who hugged, read books, or hung her own wallpaper appeared on the list. And I realized that those romantics among us who believe in the importance of setting a good example for our small children might as well be ice fishing in Tahiti. As far as preschoolers are concerned, parents are incapable of doing anything constructive.

That includes holding down two jobs. Meg was incredulous when I told her that a mother of one of her friends was a nurse.

"She is not," she argued. "She's a mommy."

"She's both," I explained. "She goes to work every morning at the hospital."

"You mean, she's a nurse during the day, and then she comes home and changes into a mommy at night?"

"She's a mommy all the time," I said. It's just that she spends some of her day being a nurse, too."

Meg still didn't seem to understand, so the next time her friend visited, I asked her to tell Meg what her mother did during the day.

"She gets sore feet," she said.

This particular blind spot can be devastating to a parent. My dental hygienist recently told me that her young son had come home from preschool several days earlier in a state of intense excitement.

"Guess what, mom!" he said. "A dental hygienist visited our school today!"

She and her husband, a dental student, could only listen in dumfounded silence as their son, who had been besieged with dental propaganda since the appearance of his first tooth, stood there and rattled off the details of preventive dentistry as if he had heard them that day for the first time ever.

Then he breezed out of the room with these parting words: "If you're smart, you'll come with me and brush out Mr. Plaque."

I think my own child summed up the preschool attitude toward parents best. Her father came home one day and found her playing quietly in her room.

"What are you doing?" he asked.

"I'm playing Mommy."

"Well, it sure looks like you're working hard."

prescribed by doctors, the tranquilizer Valium, is among those most often abused.

In the 16 years it's been marketed, Valium's therapeutic benefits have been compromised by a growing list of problems related to its use.

More than any other social group, white middle-class women have made the trouble with Valium their own.

Observers of the drug-abuse problem in Winston-Salem say women dependent on Valium and other tranquilizers typically "doctor shop" for drugs, spinning from physician to physician to support their habits.

Dr. Stephen Hebert, a psychiatrist and medical director of the Council on Drug Abuse, said extended Valium use can bring on general depression, reduce energy levels and disrupt sleep patterns. Though not as disruptive or addictive as barbiturates, Hebert said, Valium use can result in physical dependency, a fact not recognized when the drug first came on the market.

Sandy Sosnik, who is active in drug-abuse prevention programs, said many of her own friends, unable to cope with everyday problems, have slid into a life fogged by Valium. Watching it hasn't been pleasant.

"It's scary when it's a friend, somebody you're close to, and you know they're in trouble with drug abuse," she said.

Women with a long, hard tranquilizer habit, she said, "walk through life in a cloud. I have to feel they miss out on so much... little corny things."

Mrs. Sosnik, a member of the drug-abuse council's board, said she visited a friend last spring whom she suspected of abusing tranquilizers. "We were walking, outside, and I said, 'Isn't it great to see the flowers blooming?'" She slowly turned to me and said, "Oh...What?" She had no idea what was going on around her," Mrs. Sosnik said.

In recent years, Valium has followed only alcohol, nicotine and aspirin on the federal list of most abused drugs. It's estimated that one out of six Americans uses some form of tranquilizers regularly.

"The majority of Valium prescriptions are used in an appropriate manner for the short-term relief of anxiety," Hebert said. "But generally any use past three or four weeks is questionable. It isn't meant for problems that won't be resolved within a couple of weeks."

Long-term use of any drug can lead to carelessness. People lose track of how much they've taken and when they took it. The practice is especially dangerous when alcohol enters the picture.

The effects of Valium and alcohol on the body chemistry are quite similar. But the two compound each other's intoxicating effects — taken together they are much more dangerous than equal amounts of one or the other.

Brief, personal crises that will blow over — loss of a job, a death in the family — are the most appropriate circumstances for prescribing Valium and other tranquilizers, Hebert said. Once the crisis is over, doctors should stop prescribing it, he said.

When that happens, however, women sometimes seems to be in good physical shape, which he says is pretty important when one contemplates traveling tens of thousands of miles.

How successful Gregg has been in weaning friends from Reagan is something the flinty former governor keeps very close. But despite Gregg's efforts at temporary concealment, successes popped up along Bush's North Country campaign trail. William Ingram, a Lancaster lawyer active in Reagan's 1976 campaign, met Bush for the first time a few hours after his morning jog but had already agreed to be his local chairman.

Why did Ingram embrace Bush sight unseen? The answer embodies Bush's hopes here: "I was disappointed in Reagan last time, and think he's getting a little old. I'm not sure I want that much power for Loeb (William Loeb, the Manchester Newspaper publisher who ardently backs Reagan). And, of course, I'll go a long way with Hugh Gregg."

Gregg without Bush was not enough to sign up Bob Morrell, an amusement park owner in Glen, N.H., who backed Reagan in 1976. But after showing Bush through his "Heritage New Hampshire" (an automated historical museum), Morrell told us he thought Reagan was too old. He was torn between Bush and Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois but felt Crane's campaign was too disorganized "and Gregg makes things happen."

During the 24 hours that we followed Bush, it is doubtful he was seen by more than 100 registered Republican voters. Yet, he probably pinned down a half-dozen local county leaders. That's retail politics, which could set the foundation for an upset transforming Republican politics in 1980.

shop for doctors to resupply them.

"If a well-dressed, middle-class woman comes into their (a doctor's) office, they're not going to check to see if she has a history of drug abuse," Mrs. Sosnik said.

"Some of these women are very crafty. They're going to Greensboro or Charlotte. I know of one woman who has physicians in two or three cities," she said.

But she said that even when there are no medical reasons for continuing a prescription, it isn't always a cut-and-dried case of bad medical care.

"It must be difficult to cut a woman off when you know that something drastic could happen as a consequence," she said. "Doctors have to make value judgements on what's best for people they don't even know. I wouldn't want that kind of responsibility."

Foreign Spies Operated Freely

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department "actively discouraged" investigations of foreign intelligence services that subjected certain U.S. residents to harassment, intimidation and perhaps even murder, according to a Senate report.

The FBI has been ordered to investigate the leaking of the top secret draft report, which was prepared by the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and circulated to several federal agencies for comment.

The preliminary report says

the intelligence services of Chile, Iran, the Philippines, Taiwan and Yugoslavia operated freely in the United States to counter or neutralize criticism aimed at their governments by emigres, exiled dissenters or other critics, some of them American citizens.

It concludes that the State Department "has actively discouraged the FBI" from pursuing investigations into likely violations of U.S. law by foreign intelligence agents.

And it states that former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and certain State Department spokesmen "made incorrect and misleading statements concerning the extent of the U.S. government's knowledge of the activities of the Iranian (intelligence) services in the United States."

Although it acknowledged that the United States may have a direct interest in maintaining good relations with certain nations with authoritarian regimes, it said that "should not entail any abridgement of the rights and protections guaranteed by the Constitution to residents of the United States."

Copies were obtained by columnist Jack Anderson and The Washington Post. Both printed details from it. The Associated Press subsequently obtained access to a copy.

The report said that although the Soviet Union has numerous intelligence operative on U.S. soil, few if any have tried to stifle anti-Soviet activities. It said the Iranians and the Taiwanese made extensive efforts to penetrate student political circles in the United States to monitor activities of students from their nations.

In a more sinister vein, it said there are indications Yugoslav agents were responsible for 10 to 15 political assassinations in Western Europe and may have used murder as a tool to silence dissidents in the United States.

It pointed to the June 1977 shootings in Chicago in which Dragista Kashikovich and a 10-year old girl, possibly a witness, were murdered. The murders have not been solved, but the report quoted unnamed FBI officials as saying the method the killers used to execute Kashikovich — one bullet in the head and one on the heart — was "the trademark of Yugoslav agents."

The report dealt extensively with the operation of Chilean secret agents and of the activities of Operation Condor, described as a consortium of intelligence services from Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay.

Kamikaze Dog Plot Foiled

By LARRY KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaking of a secret Senate staff report has blown the cover on a kamikaze dog, a Nazi farm in Chile and a secret State Department communications line, called "the Roger Channel."

The dog was a vital element in a thwarted 1971 plan by Taiwan intelligence agents to assassinate the late Chou En-lai, premier of the People's Republic of China, while on a visit to Paris.

The trained dog was to run up to the Chinese official during his visit, allowing agents to detonate a bomb carried on the dog's back.

The report said a National Chinese agent had arrived in Switzerland ready to pay off Neo-Fascists from Milan, Italy, who it said were ready to carry out the plot.

But Chou's trip was canceled because of a flareup in internal politics, and the plan was dropped — in part, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff report said — because Taiwanese officials feared it would trigger an attack from China against Taiwan.

The report also quoted "CIA sources" as saying former officers of the German Luftwaffe control a commune in the Chilean province of Linares, known as "La Dignidad."

It said 250 men, women and children live under military discipline on 3,000 acres of farmland with income derived from a dairy herd, general farm crops and mining.

"The Roger Channel" is described as a "double encrypted" communications line between the State Department in Washington and U.S. embassies abroad intended to keep conversations away from the American Central Intelligence Agency.

Will Agreement Be Reached?

As Patricia R. Harris took office as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare news reports indicated she might follow a more reasonable course in cases such as the one involving the University of North Carolina system.

United Press International quoted sources concerning a "heated" meeting with David S. Tatel, chief of the Office for Civil Rights.

The reports indicated Mrs. Harris told Tatel to keep political considerations in mind in pursuing controversial cases.

Tatel had virtually free reign under Sec. Califano to make what were often conflicting demands in the UNC desegregation matter.

It also reportedly came out in the meeting that Tatel will be leaving the office Dec. 1, although not because of the conversation.

The meeting will be open to many interpretations with civil rights militants seeing it as a softening of HEW's all-out campaign against several southern higher education systems.

We hope it is an indication of a willingness on the part of the new HEW secretary to look for common grounds to settle the issues involved.

A long court fight between HEW and UNC is not going to be of benefit to anyone, nor is any imposed plan which will rip part the various campuses of the UNC system.

As in all controversies there is a middle ground for all parties. Perhaps Sec. Harris is indicating that she intends to find it.

Political Trial Balloons Go Up

Sen I. Beverly Lake, Jr. has indicated he may run for governor.

Now a Democratic State senator, Lake is considering an appeal to become a Republican and take on the Democratic candidate.

Lake is also considering runs for U. S. senate or attorney general as a Democrat.

Lake's is one of several trial balloons currently being sent up in anticipation of next year's state elections. The reaction they get will determine the course of action.

Change Shipping Methods

By Bill Noblitt

WILMINGTON — A new breed of ships, and a new dockside system of loading and unloading them, is revolutionizing the import-export business.

North Carolina has been a leader in this revolution. Malcolm McLean is a former Winston-Salem trucking magnate who is now credited as the creator of the container cargo system. McLean, once retired and then active in creating SeaLand which he sold to Reynolds for untold millions, is now creating another empire, having brought U.S. Lines.

The container ships are awesome, Long and lean afloat, they have a low profile with vast expanses of clear space across the beam amidship. A towering superstructure near the stern elevates the bridge for vision across the bulky container boxes stacked on deck four-stories tall and 10 wide.

A tiny hold below decks hold the estimated 90 percent of modern cargoes which can't be moved in containers.

Machinery specially designed for the purposes are used at dockside. Steel beams swung from a crane have automatic locking pins which drop into holes at each corner of the container; untouched by human hands hold it tight and lift it through the air to be stacked on the dock.

Placed directly on a truck or rail car, the goods are ready to roll inland for delivery to the final destination, the containers serving as the boxcar or truck trailer.

What does all this mean to the economy?

First, a ship can carry enough containers to make up a good-sized freight train; or a line of 250 trucks. Imagine the fuel savings moving that many goods on the highway 100 miles compared to 100 miles of ocean where the cost is counted in pennies rather than dollars.

Next, it used to take hundreds of strong backs and arms to unload a ship, and that meant days in port. Now, it means just hours in port.

And then the trucks come to pick up the goods. That meant more loading and waiting. Now, at the Wilmington Port, a truck can enter the gate and leave 11 minutes later with the shipment.

BILL NOBLITT

Finally, pilferage is sharply reduced by the sealed containers with the labels outside giving instructions and the goods inside protected from prying eyes and hands.

Cargo container shipment is without doubt the wave of the future say the experts, and 70 percent of the world's goods are already moving that way, except for liquids and grains.

Remember all the furor over the container crane at Morehead City?

Crane

It was hard to understand all the furor stirred by moving it to Wilmington to join another already in operation there, and why the Morehead area resisted and Wilmington insisted so hard.

Last year the Wilmington terminal handles 19,000 containers, and so far this year has handled over 10,000 and will top last year by a good percentage by year's end. In its first month at Wilmington, the transported crane worked more than it had in a full year at Morehead City.

Yet it seems strange that such debate should surround just one container crane when it is clear that the port has a long way to go to become competitive in this new shipping era. Already there are more than 60 container cranes at East Coast ports; 20 in the Newark, New Jersey port alone.

But those who keep close watch on this activity flatly predict that the Sunbelt economic boom will mean that South Atlantic ports are the ports of the future, serving the fast growing population and industries of the Southeast, and the rapidly developing nations of South American, Africa, and the Middle East as well as the Orient by way of the Panama.

How To Handle Bags

By ART BUCHWALD

(Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.—Editor)

Many air travelers have noticed that their luggage has been getting more of a bashing recently than it has in the past. This is no accident. Most airline luggage handlers must now go to school before an airline will allow them to touch a piece of baggage.

I was fortunate to visit the Dent Airline Luggage and Freight Handlers School in St. Louis last week. The Dent school trains most of the airline baggage handlers in the United States. Dent, the founder and president of the school, took me out on a large playing field the size of a football gridiron. Several classes were in session. The teachers all wore baseball caps and sweat shirts, and had whistles around their necks. The pupils were dressed in white coveralls. The first class we stopped to watch were throwing pieces of luggage to each other.

"All right, let's throw them a little harder," the coach yelled. "What are you guys, a bunch of cream puffs? You there, Pitowsky. You're not supposed to catch every bag. Drop a few."

Pitowsky dropped the next one, and it broke open, scattering clothes all over the field.

"Beautiful," the coach yelled. "Now you've got it."

"We use real luggage," Dent said proudly. "We simulate every possible situation a luggage handler will face."

"Ryan, you're catching the bags with two hands," the coach yelled. "You'll never break any that way. How many times have I told you to use only one hand when trying to catch a piece of luggage?"

We walked down the field and came to a 16-foot tower. Several men were on the tower, dropping boxes marked FRAGILE to the ground.

"The object of this exercise," said Dent, "is for the

Other Drug Abuse

40 Years Ago Today

August 10, 1939

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, county health officer, said today that reduced personnel of the United States Public Health Service for material control had caused the local health department to assign more of the work to local sanitation workers.

He explained that in an effort to control malaria, a disease he described as acting as a blight upon many communities, the State Board of Health had set up certain regulations governing the control of impounded water supplies. He added that regulations require all persons to first secure a permit from the State Board of Health before constructing a dam or reservoir.

"The State Highway Commission is giving excellent cooperation to the malarial control program by draining all pits which result in the matter of road building," he declared.

Dr. Ennett again called attention to the fact that much can be done by the individual householder to protect himself against malaria by either screening his house or eliminating all standing water on his premises or using a larvacide spray.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Retailing George Bush

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
LANCASTER, N.H. —

George Bush rose at 6 a.m. to jog more than three miles down Route 115 in weather unusually humid for New Hampshire's North Country, an exertion that embodies two components of his strategy to come from nowhere in this state to win the Republican presidential nomination.

Component No. 1 is the unavoidable comparison between Bush, still athletic (6-foot-3, 190 pounds) at age 55, and Ronald Reagan, the 68-year-old Republican front-runner. "I'd like to see Reagan doing this," said ex-Gov. Hugh Gregg, Bush's

New Hampshire chairman. "We couldn't even get him up this early."

Gregg, who managed Reagan's campaign in 1976, is component No. 2. His unsurpassed personal contacts and unmatched vitality are building a statewide organization from scratch. Gregg ceaselessly travels the state in his weathered station wagon, contacting those same party workers he talked into backing Reagan four years ago. Now he wants them for Bush.

Without Gregg, there would be little chance for dark horse Bush. Even with Gregg, the candidate must impress himself on Gregg's legions of friends. This is time-consuming, retail politics. Contrasted with Reagan's wholesale politics of monster rallies and massive television, it is deliberate, one-at-a-time courtship requiring immense patience and time.

Bush has plenty of both. What's more, he knows that retailing is his only chance. Although he is becoming the Averell Harriman of the Republican party in accumulating high public jobs (five so far, climaxed by CIA director), Bush is unknown to the public. He needs a strong showing in Iowa's Jan. 21 caucuses and New Hampshire's Feb. 26 primary to break the anonymity barrier.

To accomplish this, he has visited New Hampshire a dozen times so far in 1979 and will be here another dozen times before the year ends. While John B. Connally rushed into the New Hampshire legislature for a quick speech early this year, when Bush went to Concord it was for a whole day chatting with lawmakers. If native Texan Connally is a little too big for this state, transplanted Texan Bush is the native New Englander who fits right in.

Besides his understated style, Bush seems correct for the state ideologically. His remarks are conservative (marginally more so than Connally's and no less so than Reagan's on economics and national security) but seem more moderate. Although he has enlivened his speaking style, it still lacks Connally's dynamism or Reagan's elegance.

Bush's profligate expenditure of time on minute numbers of people was evident in his three-mile jog, embodying both components of his New Hampshire strategy. Gregg asked John Harrigan, a young weekly newspaper editor and a jogger himself, to run along. Afterward, Harrigan was invited for breakfast (prepared by Mrs. Gregg) at Gregg's country home in Jefferson.

All told, Bush spent nearly two hours with Harrigan. A day later, the Coos County newspaper showed a photo of Bush jogging and this comment in Harrigan's story: "For the record, Mr. Bush

To the editor:

Cystic fibrosis, an inherited lung-damaging disease, is not as rare as once thought, approximately one in every 1,600 children are born with the disease.

Because CF is hard to detect in infants, it is believed that many children may be undiagnosed. Some children with CF may be misdiagnosed, as the symptoms of other lung-damaging diseases can mimic those of CF.

There is one sign unique to the possible presence of cystic fibrosis to which all parents can be alerted. CF affects the exocrine (outward secreting) glands, and the sweat of children who have the disease is often unusually salty.

During "Kiss Your Baby" week Aug. 19-25, all parents are being asked to kiss their children with very special attention. If you detect a taste of salt when kissing your child's skin, the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation advises seeing a doctor. A child whose skin tastes salty should be tested for cystic fibrosis.

The possibility that your child has CF is slight, but if so, early diagnosis and thorough medical care are essential.

The signs of cystic fibrosis and other lung-damaging diseases are: recurrent wheezing, excessive appetite but poor weight gain, and clubbing (enlargement of the fingertips). Additional signs are persistent coughing with excessive mucus.

Other signs of cystic fibrosis may include: persistent bulky diarrhea, a salty taste to the skin and nasal polyps.

MAN THE MASTER?

The testimony of history is against Swinburne. Little by little, man does make progress, but adverse circumstances may cause individuals and groups to revert to primitive practice and passions. Our civilization is little more than a thin veneer.

To say this is not to take a hopeless view of life, for mankind has a Savior, and very decidedly that Savior is not a mere man. Man's involvement in his own evil is so great and his capacity for dealing with it so little, that the hand of God has reached down to support mankind in his weakness.

So it ever remains, "Glory to God in the highest." No poet on earth can alter these words and make the statement true.

It's Hard To Identify A Mommy

By GAIL MICHAELS

During the week before Mother's Day, Meg's preschool teachers compiled a list of what each of the children liked best about his or her mother.

Several said, "She buys me presents." One little girl said that her mother wore pretty nightgowns.

Meg demonstrated her contempt for the entire adult population. "What I like best about my mommy," she said, "is that she lets more children than big people come to my birthday parties."

Not one mother who hugged, read books, or hung her own wallpaper appeared on the list. And I realized that those romantics among us who believe in the importance of setting a good example for our small children might as well be ice fishing in Tahiti. As far as preschoolers are concerned, parents are incapable of doing anything constructive.

That includes holding down two jobs. Meg was incredulous when I told her that a mother of one of her friends was a nurse.

"She is not," she argued. "She's a mommy."

"She's both," I explained. "She goes to work every morning at the hospital."

"You mean, she's a nurse during the day, and then she comes home and changes into a mommy at night?"

"She's a mommy all the time," I said. It's just that she spends some of her day being a nurse, too."

Meg still didn't seem to understand, so the next time her friend visited, I asked her to tell Meg what her mother did during the day.

"She gets sore feet," she said.

This particular blind spot can be devastating to a parent. My dental hygienist recently told me that her young son had come home from preschool several days earlier in a state of intense excitement.

"Guess what, mom!" he said. "A dental hygienist visited our school today!"

She and her husband, a dental student, could only listen in dumfounded silence as their son, who had been besieged with dental propaganda since the appearance of his first tooth, stood there and rattled off the details of preventive dentistry as if he had heard them that day for the first time ever.

Then he breezed out of the room with these parting words: "If you're smart, you'll come with me and brush out Mr. Plaque."

I think my own child summed up the preschool attitude toward parents best. Her father came home one day and found her playing quietly in her room.

"What are you doing?" he asked.

"I'm playing Mommy."

"Well, it sure looks like you're working hard."

prescribed by doctors, the tranquilizer Valium, is among those most often abused.

In the 16 years it's been marketed, Valium's therapeutic benefits have been compromised by a growing list of problems related to its use.

More than any other social group, white middle-class women have made the trouble with Valium their own.

Observers of the drug-abuse problem in Winston-Salem say women dependent on Valium and other tranquilizers typically "doctor shop" for drugs, spinning from physician to physician to support their habits.

Dr. Stephen Hebert, a psychiatrist and medical director of the Council on Drug Abuse, said extended Valium use can bring on general depression, reduce energy levels and disrupt sleep patterns. Though not as disruptive or addictive as barbiturates, Hebert said, Valium use can result in physical dependency, a fact not recognized when the drug first came on the market.

Sandy Sosnik, who is active in drug-abuse prevention programs, said many of her own friends, unable to cope with everyday problems, have slid into a life fogged by Valium. Watching it hasn't been pleasant.

"It's scary when it's a friend, somebody you're close to, and you know they're in trouble with drug abuse," she said.

Women with a long, hard tranquilizer habit, she said, "walk through life in a cloud. I have to feel they miss out on so much... little corny things."

Mrs. Sosnik, a member of the drug-abuse council's board, said she visited a friend last spring whom she suspected of abusing tranquilizers. "We were walking, outside, and I said, 'Isn't it great to see the flowers blooming?' She slowly turned to me and said, 'Oh...What?' She had no idea what was going on around her," Mrs. Sosnik said.

In recent years, Valium has followed only alcohol, nicotine and aspirin on the federal list of most abused drugs. It's estimated that one out of six Americans uses some form of tranquilizers regularly.

"The majority of Valium prescriptions are used in an appropriate manner for the short-term relief of anxiety," Hebert said. "But generally any use past three or four weeks is questionable. It isn't meant for problems that won't be resolved within a couple of weeks."

Long-term use of any drug can lead to carelessness. People lose track of how much they've taken and when they took it. The practice is especially dangerous when alcohol enters the picture.

The effects of Valium and alcohol on the body chemistry are quite similar. But the two compound each other's intoxicating effects — taken together they are much more dangerous than equal amounts of one or the other.

Brief, personal crises that will blow over — loss of a job, a death in the family — are the most appropriate circumstances for prescribing Valium and other tranquilizers, Hebert said. Once the crisis is over, doctors should stop prescribing it, he said.

When that happens, however, women sometimes

seems to be in good physical shape, which he says is pretty important when one contemplates traveling tens of thousands of miles...

How successful Gregg has been in weaning friends from Reagan is something the flinty former governor keeps very close. But despite Gregg's efforts at temporary concealment, successes popped up along Bush's North Country campaign trail. William Ingram, a Lancaster lawyer active in Reagan's 1976 campaign, met Bush for the first time a few hours after his morning jog but had already agreed to be his local chairman.

Why did Ingram embrace Bush sight unseen? The answer embodies Bush's hopes here: "I was disappointed in Reagan last time, and think he's getting a little old. I'm not sure I want that much power for Loeb (William Loeb, the Manchester Newspaper publisher who ardently backs Reagan). And, of course, I'll go a long way with Hugh Gregg."

Gregg without Bush was not enough to sign up Bob Morrell, an amusement park owner in Glen, N.H., who backed Reagan in 1976. But after showing Bush through his "Heritage New Hampshire" (an automated historical museum), Morrell told us he thought Reagan was too old. He was torn between Bush and Rep. Philip Crane of Illinois but felt Crane's campaign was too disorganized "and Gregg makes things happen."

During the 24 hours that he followed Bush, it is doubtful he was seen by more than 100 registered Republican voters. Yet, he probably pinned down a half-dozen local county leaders. That's retail politics, which could set the foundation for an upset transforming Republican politics in 1980.

shop for doctors to resupply them.

"If a well-dressed, middle-class woman comes into their (a doctor's) office, they're not going to check to see if she has a history of drug abuse," Mrs. Sosnik said.

"Some of these women are very crafty. They're going to Greensboro or Charlotte. I know of one woman who has physicians in two or three cities," she said.

But she said that even when there are no medical reasons for continuing a prescription, it isn't always a cut-and-dried case of bad medical care.

"It must be difficult to cut a woman off when you know that something drastic could happen as a consequence," she said. "Doctors have to make value judgements on what's best for people they don't even know. I wouldn't want that kind of responsibility."

Foreign Spies Operated Freely

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department "actively discouraged" investigations of foreign intelligence services that subjected certain U.S. residents to harassment, intimidation and perhaps even murder, according to a Senate report.

The FBI has been ordered to investigate the leaking of the top secret draft report, which was prepared by the staff of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and circulated to several federal agencies for comment.

The preliminary report says

the intelligence services of Chile, Iran, the Philippines, Taiwan and Yugoslavia operated freely in the United States to counter or neutralize criticism aimed at their governments by emigres, exiled dissenters or other critics, some of them American citizens.

It concludes that the State Department "has actively discouraged the FBI" from pursuing investigations into likely violations of U.S. law by foreign intelligence agents.

And it states that former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and certain State Department spokesmen "made incorrect and misleading statements concerning the extent of the U.S. government's knowledge of the activities of the Iranian (intelligence) services in the United States."

Although it acknowledged that the United States may have a direct interest in maintaining good relations with certain nations with authoritarian regimes, it said that "should not entail any abridgement of the rights and protections guaranteed by the Constitution to residents of the United States."

Copies were obtained by columnist Jack Anderson and The Washington Post. Both printed details from it. The Associated Press subsequently obtained access to a copy.

The report said that although the Soviet Union has numerous intelligence operative on U.S. soil, few if any have tried to stifle anti-Soviet activities. It said the Iranians and the Taiwanese made extensive efforts to penetrate student political circles in the United States to monitor activities of students from their nations.

In a more sinister vein, it said there are indications Yugoslav agents were responsible for 10 to 15 political assassinations in Western Europe and may have used murder as a tool to silence dissidents in the United States.

It pointed to the June 1977 shootings in Chicago in which Dragista Kashikovich and a 10-year old girl, possibly a witness, were murdered. The murders have not been solved, but the report quoted unnamed FBI officials as saying the method the killers used to execute Kashikovich — one bullet in the head and one on the heart — was "the trademark of Yugoslav agents."

The report dealt extensively with the operation of Chilean secret agents and of the activities of Operation Condor, described as a consortium of intelligence services from Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service predicts for Friday, showers in a band from Maine to Missouri. (AP Laser-photo)

The Nation's Weather By The Associated Press
Thundershowers were scattered along the Gulf Coast and North Atlantic Coast states today with rain also reported in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

Skies were cloudy over parts of the Northeast while much of the remainder of the nation was clear or partly cloudy.

Temperatures were cool in some areas, with readings in the 70s and 80s over the Northern Plains and the Upper Mississippi Valley, and in the 50s and 60s in parts of New England. Temperatures in parts of the Southwest were expected to top the 100-degree mark.

Temperatures around the nation at 3 a.m. EDT ranged from 40 at Houlton, Maine, to 96 at Blythe, Calif.

Kamikaze Dog Plot Foiled

By LARRY KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The leaking of a secret Senate staff report has blown the cover on a kamikaze dog, a Nazi farm in Chile and a secret State Department communications line, called "the Roger Channel."

The dog was a vital element in a thwarted 1971 plan by Taiwan intelligence agents to assassinate the late Chou En-lai, premier of the People's Republic of China, while on a visit to Paris.

The trained dog was to run up to the Chinese official during his visit, allowing agents to detonate a bomb carried on the dog's back.

The report said a National Chinese agent had arrived in Switzerland ready to pay off Neo-Fascists from Milan, Italy, who it said were ready to carry out the plot.

But Chou's trip was canceled because of a flareup in internal politics, and the plan was dropped — in part, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee staff report said — because Taiwanese officials feared it would trigger an attack from China against Taiwan.

The report also quoted "CIA sources" as saying former officers of the German Luftwaffe control a commune in the Chilean province of Linares, known as "La Dignidad."

It said 250 men, women and children live under military discipline on 3,000 acres of farmland with income derived from a dairy herd, general farm crops and mining.

"The Roger Channel" is described as a "double encrypted" communications line between the State Department in Washington and U.S. embassies abroad intended to keep conversations away from the American Central Intelligence Agency.

OUR DOCTRINAL STANDARDS—Our first and final rule for all doctrine, faith and practice is God's Holy Word, the Bible. We believe the Bible is the written Word of God, without error in the original manuscripts, and of infallible and divine authority in all matters of faith and practice. Therefore, all of our teaching and preaching is from the Bible.

OUR CHURCH'S VISION—All of our teaching and preaching is centered in the Bible. We believe God's Word provides the answers to today's situation, just as it did 2000 years ago. Just as man breaking God's laws disrupts the ecological balance, so man breaking God's spiritual laws upsets man's relationship with other men and God. Submission to God's Word, the Bible, is the key to resolving these problems.

Why?

A butterfly is a fragile thing, so light that it doesn't even ruffle the petals of a flower when it alights. Its life span is short, but its beauty is total. And, butterflies have memories or, at least, such strong instincts that, for example, thousands of Monarchs make an annual pilgrimage back to a single bush on the Monterey Peninsula in California.

What makes these insects continue their strange safaris year after year, through generation after generation of their kind? Scientists discover the answers to some of the endless questions life poses, but we can never know it all. We were never meant to know it all. That's where faith comes in; faith in God, His works, His creatures.

If you've been wondering just what life is all about, why not turn to the Church? It's the first step toward finding out.

OUR DOCTRINAL STANDARDS—Our first and final rule for all doctrine, faith and practice is God's Holy Word, the Bible. We believe the Bible is the written Word of God, without error in the original manuscripts, and of infallible and divine authority in all matters of faith and practice. Therefore, all of our teaching and preaching is from the Bible.

OUR CHURCH'S VISION—All of our teaching and preaching is centered in the Bible. We believe God's Word provides the answers to today's situation, just as it did 2000 years ago. Just as man breaking God's laws disrupts the ecological balance, so man breaking God's spiritual laws upsets man's relationship with other men and God. Submission to God's Word, the Bible, is the key to resolving these problems.

Why?

A butterfly is a fragile thing, so light that it doesn't even ruffle the petals of a flower when it alights. Its life span is short, but its beauty is total. And, butterflies have memories or, at least, such strong instincts that, for example, thousands of Monarchs make an annual pilgrimage back to a single bush on the Monterey Peninsula in California.

What makes these insects continue their strange safaris year after year, through generation after generation of their kind? Scientists discover the answers to some of the endless questions life poses, but we can never know it all. We were never meant to know it all. That's where faith comes in; faith in God, His works, His creatures.

If you've been wondering just what life is all about, why not turn to the Church? It's the first step toward finding out.

NEW CAR UNVEILED—Reporters and photographers look over a $30,000 energy-efficient prototype automobile that was unveiled Thursday by Duke University in Durham. Known as the Devil, the car, a three-wheel, box-type machine, is expected to get 70 to 80 miles per gallon at highway speeds and 60 mpg in city driving. The automobile will be entered next week in competition against similar autos from across the nation. (AP Laserphoto)

Duke Students, Professors Put Together A Devil Of An Auto

DURHAM N.C. (AP) — The DEVIL has kept the minds of students and teachers at Duke University's School of Engineering for the past 18 months. But the time has not been spent in mischief. Instead, the students have spent the time, as well as $30,000 designing and building a car they hope will get 60 miles per gallon in the city.

Two-thirds of the money for the project came from manufacturers and industries.

But if they could only get the car to run.

The Duke Efficient Vehicle for Innovative Learning, or DEVIL as its makers call it, has given its designers a devil of a time, and Thursday's official unveiling was no exception. Noise from the car's two-cylinder, 20-horsepower gasoline engine is interfering with the car's mini-computer, causing it to deliver the wrong orders to the engine at the wrong time. The computer monitors the car's speed and the driver's actions to control the engine.

"It works fine when the engine is off," said Bob Banta, the electrical engineering student who installed the computer. "It just doesn't work so well when the engine is running."

The students hope to work out the car's problems in time for the national competition at a General Motors testing ground in Michigan. The car was designed specifically for

Girl, 16, Gets 25 Years In Slaying

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — A 16-year-old Anderson, S.C., girl has been convicted of first degree murder and robbery by a jury that recommended she be sent to prison for 25 years.

Deana Marie Cox on Thursday became the third person convicted in the March 5 murder of Swain Harlan Graham, 65, the night manager of the Islander Motel and Restaurant in Mathews County.

The jury set her sentence at 20 years for murder and five for robbery, the minimum possible under the law. The maximum punishment is life on each conviction.

Williamsburg Circuit Court Judge Robert T. Armistead postponed sentencing for the girl after her attorney, William R. Curdts, asked for time to file a motion that the verdict be side.

Armistead said he would sentence the girl, who was 15 at the time of the murder, on Sept. 26. In the meantime, he said, a presentence report could be completed.

Armistead also agreed to delay a decision on a charge of defrauding an innkeeper. That charge was heard without a jury after he had dismissed a charge of using a firearm in the commission of a felony.

Lanny Thomas Lorraine, 24, of Belmont, N.C. and David Harold McDonald, 23, of Anderson, were convicted last month in Mathews County Circuit Court of murder, robbery, and the firearm and fraud counts. They are to be sentenced Sept. 17.

A fourth defendant, Carrie Patricia Davis, 17, also of Anderson, will be tried on the four charges here Wednesday.

The trials of the two girls were transferred here after their attorneys said pretrial publicity resulting from the murder and the trials of the two men made it impossible to select an impartial jury.

F. Paul Blanock, Mathews County Commonwealth's attorney, in his arguments to the jury Thursday, said Miss Cox was connected to the crime "from the beginning to the end. I don't say she had her hand on the knife or gun, but everyone knew what was going on. She could have voted with her feet to leave at any time."

Blanock said despite testimony that there was no intention to kill Graham, he did die in a robbery and his death was so connected in time, place and cause that it was part of the robbery.

He cited the discovery in the defendants' car after their capture in North Carolina of a card which was identified as having been in the motel safe.

when she entered the office with him.

Curdts speculated Lorraine implicated the others in hopes of getting a lighter sentence.

The jury began its deliberations at 2:30 p.m. and rendered its verdict at 4:50 p.m.

When the clerk read the verdict of the defendant's mother, who was seated behind her, began sobbing and sat with her hands covering her face during most of the rest of the proceedings.

The defendant was composed but several times during the reading of the verdict wiped tears from her eyes. When court was adjourned, she knelt by her mother and talked earnestly as the spectators left the courtroom.

Vietnam Will Okay Airlift Of Refugees, But Will Halt Boats

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam is willing to discuss airlifting refugees directly out of the country on American planes, but it has vowed to stop illegal exits by sea, U.S. congressional sources say.

Acting Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach told a congressional delegation Thursday that fleeing refugees have stolen half the nation's fishing fleet and that some who were captured had been executed.

About 4,000 would-be escapees have been arrested, Thach said, and 1 million ethnic Chinese are waiting to get out of Vietnam. Some 400,000 refugees are already jamming camps in Southeast Asia.

The sources were among a nine-member delegation headed by Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., who met Thursday with Thach and Deputy Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son, before leaving for Hong Kong en route home. Another delegation, led by Rep. Lester L. Wolff, D-N.Y., arrives today.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said in addition to the American airlift that Thach said his government was willing to accept three consular officers in Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, to process refugees under U.N. auspices.

Thach said the officers could be American. In Washington Thursday, the State Department said it was sending two consular officers to Thailand and hoped to have them go to Vietnam to process refugees.

Thach also said Vietnam had dropped its demand for reconstruction aid as a condition for normalizing relations with the United States, the sources said, and Rosenthal later told reporters as Thach stood alongside the congressman that Vietnam was "very, very anxious for relations with the United States."

Thach told reporters earlier the United States backed down on a pledge to normalize relations last fall because of the refugee problem and Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia eight months ago to oust the pro-Chinese government there and install a pro-Hanoi one.

But Rosenthal said after his talks Thursday that the two sides had moved closer together on the refugee issue and that there had been a "narrowing of viewpoints" toward the goal of achieving an orderly emigration of refugees from Vietnam.

Rosenthal said, and Thach nodded in agreement, that Vietnam's moratorium on the unauthorized exodus of refugees by sea was "a permanent policy that would go on forever," and that Thach had informed the delegation that 4,000 people were awaiting prosecution, half the fishing fleet of Vietnam had been stolen by refugees and some would-be escapees had been executed.

Rosenthal said Thach also told the congressmen that Vietnam was still working on the issue of Americans listed as missing in action and had found "some things," but did not elaborate. The delegation left the meeting in an optimistic mood, and Rosenthal said he would move with "greater speed" toward getting relations normalized with Vietnam.

Activists Are Ousted

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Nearly 100 Mexican riot police swept into the Swiss Embassy here early today and cleared out 27 political activists who occupied the embassy offices seven days ago to press their demands that the government free alleged political prisoners.

Chanting "Freedom for Political Prisoners," the demonstrators — more than half of them women and children — marched out of the embassy and were herded into a bus. Several had bound themselves together with cloth banners.

A number of demonstrators said they were beaten and gassed on the bus. Mexican authorities said there was no violence.

The demonstrators moved into the embassy, located in a downtown office building, on Aug. 3. They demanded the release of 153 alleged political prisoners and information on the whereabouts of 553 people who they claim disappeared while in government custody over the past 10 years.

School Funds Could Be Hit By Ruling

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit filed on behalf of two Greensboro children has shaken a long-standing tradition in North Carolina education, and may soon dry up the source of an estimated $15 million received annually by local school systems.

public school students small instructional and supply fees. A Superior Court judge ruled the fees unconstitutional in Greensboro last year, and school administrators across the state are now awaiting a ruling on the appeal to the state Supreme Court.

A decision is expected sometime during the court's fall session, and school officials are concerned that if Guilford Superior Court Judge Charles Kivett's ruling is upheld, its effect will be felt in nearly every school district in the state.

"I would suspect," says William Peek, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, "that most boards of education are cutting back on fees as far as they can this year because they may not be able to charge any next year."

Ed Dunlap of the N.C. School Board Association, said his group has advised local districts "to be particularly careful and not to institute any new fees."

Just how much the fees mean to the state's 144 school systems is not certain, but Peek estimates that the total is around $15 million a year.

That is the amount collected by school systems five years ago, when the last study was made, he said. Different financial reporting and accounting practices in varying school districts prevent the state from providing accurate figures on collections in more recent years.

But it is known that most school systems rely on fees. During the past school year, fees of some type were charged students in all but seven school districts — Alamance, Durham, Durham City, Hoke, Mitchell, Chapel Hill-Carrboro and Albemarle — according to state education department records.

Many of the districts charged fees only for elective courses.

But 95 school districts required that fees be paid by students in at least some grades.

In most cases, the fees are small. Some districts collect what they call instructional fees amounting to several dollars a semester from each student. More common are supply and special subject fees, which are used to pay for items such as lockers, library use, identification cards, towels and other physical education materials, band instrument rental and supplies consumed in elective courses such as shop, typing, science, art and music.

Fees are less than one dollar in some districts, but range as high as $20 a semester in others, such as Alleghany and Jackson counties. And if a student takes several elective courses with fees, the charges can mount.

The suit was filed by the Greensboro Legal Aid Society on behalf of three families, and the Superior Court ruling suspended the charging of fees in that school district. Only one family is still named the case — Mrs. Janifar Williamson, on behalf of her children, Willie Farrar and Angela Farrar.

In arguments filed with the Supreme Court, they contend the fees violate the North Carolina Constitution, which assures the state shall provide "a general and uniform system of free public schools."

"The dollars may not sound like a lot to you," said Richard Greene, lawyer for Mrs. Williamson. "But when you're talking about a lady on welfare with one child, getting $159 a month, the fees can be a sizeable amount."

Although many districts do not require payment by indigent families, Green said the fees can be humiliating for children whose parents cannot afford to pay. And, in the suit, he contends the Greensboro system denied report cards and even diplomas to some students who did not pay.

There is sympathy for the suit among some education officials.

"I don't think fees are consistent with a free public education," acknowledged Peek.

And deputy state attorney general Andrew Vanore, who will defend before the court a state law authorizing the collection of fees, acknowledged that a majority of cases in other states have gone against allowing fees.

But if the fees are struck down, school systems around the state will be faced with a tough choice — either find more money from local taxes, or cut back on courses and programs.

"You've either got to have the money or cut the services," said William Caffrey, attorney for Greensboro schools. "If it (the constitution) means free, it's still not free. Somebody's got to pay for it."

Rules Out Run For Governor

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has apparently set his sights on retaining his present job in 1980 instead of seeking out higher office.

Green said in an interview Thursday that he has ruled out a bid for the Democratic nomination for governor next year and will seek a second term as lieutenant.

Green said he will probably make a formal announcement of his intentions in the near future. His decision could leave the field open for Gov. Jim Hunt to receive the nomination for top spot in the May 6 primaries.

Green's supporters in the western part of the state have conceded the strength of the Hunt campaign machinery. Although the governor has not made a formal statement he has hinted often during the past weeks that he will take advantage of the succession amendment he sponsored.

The decision by Green could also set the stage for a heated battle between Green and House Speaker Carl J. Stewart Jr.

Already, verbal pot shots have been fired. Stewart was quoted Wednesday as saying the $40,000 annual salary of the lieutenant governor isn't justified because the job doesn't involve enough duties. Green reacted sharply Thursday.

"It's obvious he doesn't know what the job involves," Green said.

Green counter-charged that Stewart is using his staff and position as speaker of the House for campaign purposes, and said the lieutenant governor's office is kept active with requests from people who are seeking out agencies in state government for various kinds of assistance.

Chrysler Head Encouraged By Administration's Loan Support

By GLENN RITT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's likely support of loan guarantees to Chrysler Corp. falls far short of the automaker's ball-out request, but the company's chairman says he's "extremely encouraged."

Less encouraging was union rejection on Thursday of a two-year wage freeze Chrysler proposed as one way to battle the deteriorating auto sales, costly federal regulations and waning investor confidence that threaten the No. 3 automaker's survival.

The union rejection came as Chrysler continued to roll back 1980 production schedules and lay off more workers. The nation's 10th largest industrial corporation placed 4,600 hourly employees on indefinite leave Thursday, bringing the total number on such layoffs to 23,800, according to company spokesmen.

At full employment, Chrysler has slightly more than 130,000 workers.

The company, which suffered a $207.1 million loss in the second quarter, was seeking $1 billion in federal tax credits over two years, but Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said Thursday the administration would consider only loan guarantees "considerably less" than $1 billion.

A government official working on the Chrysler project said the company will need at least $500 million in loan guarantees to see it through the next nine months to 12 months.

Miller, at a press conference, said, "The administration will explore conditions under which it might recommend, subject to congressional approval, financial assistance to Chrysler in the form of, or equivalent to, loan guarantees."

He said the Treasury Department will work with Chrysler to develop a proposal Congress could consider after it returns from its summer recess on Sept. 5.

The federal aid, said Miller, would be "limited in time, amount and risk to American taxpayers." It likely would resemble the loan guarantee package to Lockheed in the early 1970s.

Chrysler Chairman John Riccardo called Miller's stand a "strong expression of support."

"While a great deal of work remains to be done, this ... is good news for the employees of Chrysler, our dealers and the hundreds of thousands of workers who depend for their employment on Chrysler Corp.," he said in a statement.

Riccardo also is seeking a two-year delay in meeting federal air-pollution standards, but Miller said federal aid would not be related to "expenditures for compliance with generally applicable environmental, fuel efficiency or safety standards."

Miller added, however, that government agencies would consider various Chrysler applications for relief "in the context of its present situation."

That situation was called a "near-crisis" in a Transportation Department report completed last November, but never released.

Youths Rampage In N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Mobs of Roman Catholic youths went on a rampage in Belfast and Londonderry in the worst rioting in years, and more than 30,000 troops and police were placed on alert for more violence this weekend.

Some 20 buses and cars were hijacked and set afire, British troops were bombarded with stones, bricks and paint, and there were several gun battles between soldiers and hidden terrorists.

But security forces said the trouble was contained, and after more than 24 hours of violence beginning Wednesday night, there were eight injuries and five arrests.

"We haven't had a lot of rioting lately, not honest-to-goodness rioting like this," a police spokesman said. "It's really going back to seven or eight years ago when we used to have regular hand-to-hand combat."

The spokesman said most of Thursday's trouble came from gangs of youths, ranging in number from 15 to 80.

They launched about 10 attacks on police and troops, including an incident in Catholic West Belfast in which two armored vehicles on patrol were ambushed and three soldiers injured.

In Londonderry's Catholic Bogside district, demonstrators put up barricades similar to those erected in 1969 when the Bogside was a "No-Go" area, and protesters marched to demand withdrawal of British troops from the province.

Other rioters in both Londonderry and Belfast, some wearing hoods, hijacked buses and cars and used them to block roads before setting them alight.

Four bombs went off, causing minor property damage, and army explosives experts were called in to defuse a nail-filled bomb thrown at troops.

At the end of the day, five soldiers, one policeman and two civilians had been injured, including a boy found unconscious with head wounds in Belfast's New Lodge area.

Lou Grant Tops Emmy Nominees

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You can read it in today's Tribune: City Editor "Lou Grant" and his newsroom crew trounce opposition in 31st annual Emmy nominations.

The CBS series received 14 nominations, more than twice its nearest dramatic series rival. In the writing and directing categories, it took nearly every nomination.

Nominations for the prime-time Emmys were announced Thursday, with CBS also the big winner with 79. ABC got 66, NBC 52 and PBS 19. Three of the five nominations for syndicated shows went to the Oscar-winning documentary "Scared Straight."

The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences will award the Emmys in a telecast Sunday, Sept. 9, on ABC.

Other big winners were "Backstairs at the White House," an NBC miniseries offering a servants' eyeview of the first families, with 11 nominations; "M-A-S-H," CBS' irreverent comedy of doctors vs. the Korean War, with 10; ABC's "Friendly Fire," CBS' "All in the Family" and ABC's "Roots: The Next Generations," with seven each, and ABC's "Taxi" and NBC's "The Rockford Files," with six each.

Edward Asner, the irascible Los Angeles Tribune city editor of "Lou Grant," is going for his second Emmy in the role. He also won three Emmys in the comedy category for the same character on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show."

The show also was nominated as best drama series, and supporting performance nominations went to Linda Kelsey, Nancy Marchand, Mason Adams and Robert Walden.

"Backstairs at the White House," which surpassed "Roots II" and NBC's "Centennial," which got only two mentions, were nominated for best limited series. Olivia Cole and Louis Gossett Jr. were nominated for best lead actress and actor. Supporting nominations went to Eileen Heckart, Celeste Holm, Ed Flanders and Robert Vaughn.

"M-A-S-H," which dominated the comedy categories, was nominated for best comedy series. Alan Alda got nominations for best acting, writing and directing. Nominations for supporting actress and actors went to Loretta Swit, Gary Burghoff and Harry Morgan. It also received additional nominations for writing and directing.

"Roots II," a continuation of the saga of Alex Haley's family from slavery to modern times, was nominated as best limited series. Nominated in the supporting categories were Ruby Dee, Al Freeman Jr., Paul Winfield, and Marlon Brando, who made his television debut as American Nazi leader George Lincoln Rockwell.

Carol Burnett and Ned Beatty, playing a Midwest farm couple who became peace activists after their son was killed by American fire in Vietnam, were nominated for best actress and actor for "Friendly Fire." The film was also nominated for best dramatic special and for writing and directing.

Newcomer Robin Williams was nominated as best actor in a comedy, and his show, "Mork and Mindy," was nominated as best comedy.

"The Rockford Files" was nominated as best drama series, with James Garner picked for best lead actor. Noah Beery, Stuart Margolin and Joe Santos were nominated as best supporting actor.

Carter To Take Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter plans to spend a week floating 650 miles down the Mississippi River starting next Friday, vacationing and stumping along the way for his energy program.

Carter, wife Rosalynn and daughter Amy will board the famed paddle-wheeler "Delta Queen" in St. Paul, Minn., and travel six days and seven nights to St. Louis with four stops along the way.

Carter, who spent his vacation last year on a rubber raft floating through the Idaho wilderness, plans to make this vacation a sort of waterborne whistle-stop campaign for his energy proposals, especially the tax he wants to put on domestic oil revenues.

Program Rescheduled

A WRAL-TV program featuring Greenville gospel singer Barbara Rodgers has been rescheduled for Saturday at 7:30 p. m.

The "Aware" program will be an interview by Wallye Rasulala with Miss Rodgers, done at the Comprehensive Cancer Care Center at Duke Hospital, where Miss Rodgers is an outpatient. In addition to the interview, singing by Miss Rodgers will be featured.

Organ Recital

Mickey Terry, the organist of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, will be playing the Great Organ of National Cathedral in Washington, D.C. in an informal recital from 4:30-6:00 p.m. Monday.

Terry is a graduate history student at ECU and a former pupil of Dr. Robert E. Irwin and Dr. Foster. A Greenville recital will be presented by Terry later this fall.

Graham Angered

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A recently-published book on the life of Billy Graham has been attacked, not only by critics but by the subject himself, saying the book was "filled with inaccuracies."

Marshall Frady, an author who has published one previous book on George Wallace, interviewed Graham for the new book, "Billy Graham: A Parable of American Righteousness."

"I was sorry to find there are many, many inaccuracies in Mr. Frady's book," Graham said in a telephone interview in Milwaukee, where he is conducting a crusade.

"Unfortunately, some of his major conclusions seem to be based on these inaccuracies."

Graham says he has been called by persons who also have been upset at the book, primarily because they, too, have been misquoted by Frady.

Frady has also written articles for "Newsweek," "Esquire," "Life" and was a reporter for the "Greenville (S.C.) News" and the "Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle and Herald."

Many magazines have attacked the book. The review in "New York" magazine describes Graham as "a man of shallow training, meager talent, narrow imagination, petty judgment of mankind, and a fearful view of the world." The book was reportedly not quoted for the description of the evangelist.

"The things that gripes me is the magazines say this is the most thoroughly documented biography, thoroughly researched," said Dr. John Akers, a special consultant to Graham. "That is just not true."

Orioles End Losing Streak, Defeat Brewers 3-2

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer
The Baltimore Orioles ended a four-game losing streak, and 15-game winner Mike Flanagan had some thoughts about responsibility. "I started the losing streak; I thought I might as well finish it," he said. Flanagan struck out 10, scattered six hits and worked out of a jam in the ninth inning for a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Thursday night.

In other AL games, the Boston Red Sox edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2, the Detroit Tigers nipped the Texas Rangers 3-2, the Chicago White Sox defeated the New York Yankees 5-1 and the Kansas City Royals clobbered the Toronto Blue Jays 10-3.

of Boston's three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly.

Eckersley, who has lost five, got out of several jams via three Boston double plays. He struck out five and walked three.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2
Steve Kemp clubbed an RBI double to snap a 2-2 tie in the fifth inning, backing Mike Chris, 2-0, and Detroit over Texas. Chris lasted five innings, and Tigers reliever Aurelio Lopez got his 11th save of the season.

"My bullpen is about used up after five games in three days, but it helps ease the pain knowing that we took four out of five," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said. Champ Summers led off the Detroit fourth with a home run, his 12th, tying the game 2-2. Eric Soderholm had homered for Texas in the second.

White Sox 2, Yankees 1
Rich Wortham tossed a two-hitter — giving up the only Yanks' run on a homer by Lou Piniella, his 11th — to subdue New York. Wortham, 12-11, who brought a 5.08 earned run average into the game, struck out three and walked two.

The other hit he surrendered was Lenny Randle's infield single.

Mike Squires and Chet Lemon each had three hits for Chicago.

Royals 10, Blue Jays 3
Amos Otis and Al Cowens hit consecutive home runs in the eighth inning, and Larry Gura, 8-8, went the distance for Kansas City, allowing 10 hits and striking out four. It was Gura's fourth complete game.

Otis' homer was a two-run shot, his 13th of the season, and he had a sacrifice fly in the second inning.

Cubs Route Pirates, 11-3

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer
Chicago's Steve Dillard could only shake his head in wonder and surprise at what he had done.

After three hits, two of them homers, and four runs batted in against the Pittsburgh Pirates Thursday, all Dillard could say was: "I don't know what it is. I'm just hitting the ball well."

When the smoke had cleared, and the Cubs had routed the Pirates 11-3, Dillard found himself batting .323 (a mere 72 points above his lifetime average) with three home runs this season — one more than he tallied for the first 233 games of his major league career.

"I just happened to hit it solidly today," said the 28-year-old utility infielder. "Hitting two in a game is something I thought I'd never do in the big leagues."

In the other NL games Thursday, the San Diego Padres blanked the San Francisco Giants 4-0, the Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the Montreal Expos 6-4, the Los Angeles Dodgers edged the Houston Astros 4-3, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the New York Mets 4-0 and the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-2.

Padres 4, Giants 0
The shutout for D'Acquisto, 8-9, was his first since he came to the Padres in 1974. The complete game also was the first this season for the right-hander.

Phillies 6, Expos 4
Manny Trillo and Bob Boone cracked two-run singles around an RBI double by Mike Schmidt as Philadelphia scored five unearned runs in the fifth inning to complete a three-game sweep of Montreal.

The Expos led 2-0 when a miscue by third baseman Larry Parrish opened the gates. Parrish fumbled a grounder by Garry Maddox, and after a force play, Larry Bowa singled.

Dodgers 4, Astros 3
Dusty Baker's two-run double in the fifth snapped a 2-2 tie and helped rookie Rick Sutcliffe to his 10th victory — tied for tops on the Dodger staff with Burt Hooton.

After the game it was disclosed that Dodgers reliever Terry Forster would undergo elbow surgery for the second time in a year. The operation, scheduled next week, will be to remove a bone spur.

Cardinals 4, Mets 0
John Denny pitched a two-hitter and Jerry Mumphrey hit a two-run single as St. Louis completed a four-game sweep of New York.

Mumphrey, 11-for-17 over his last four games, singled to make it 3-0 in the Cardinals' three-run sixth.

Lou Brock went 0-for-5 in the contest and remained eight hits short of 3,000 for his career.

Reds 5, Braves 2
Heity Cruz hit a two-run, inside-the-park homer in Cincinnati's three-run eighth inning, carrying the Reds past the Braves.

Atlanta's Charlie Spikes grabbed Cruz' drive just before crashing into the left field wall. Spikes crumpled to the ground and the ball fell out of his glove as Cruz and Dave Collins — who had doubled — scored to snap a 2-2 tie.

Red Sox 3, Indians 2
Boston right-hander Dennis Eckersley joined Flanagan and John as the league's only 15-game winners, allowing nine hits in his seventh consecutive complete-game victory.

Eckersley got most of his offensive support from Carl Yastrzemski, who drove in two

Walter O'Malley Dies

BOB RAST
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Those who felt the impact of powerful, professional Walter Francis O'Malley, who pioneered the westward expansion of American sports and made Los Angeles a big league town, are mourning his loss today.

"The passing of Walter O'Malley in many ways leaves the ship without a rudder," said Detroit Tigers owner John E. Fetzer. "He was a tower of strength and his leadership constantly led to important decision-making that gave baseball a true sense of direction."

It was O'Malley, a lawyer-engineer, who masterminded the 1958 move that brought the Dodger franchise here from a crumbling Brooklyn neighborhood. It gave the West Coast its first taste of major league baseball. Other sports — basketball and hockey — soon followed.

O'Malley died of heart failure Thursday at Methodist Hospital in Rochester, Minn., four weeks after the death of his wife, Kay. He had been hospitalized since June 28.

But Thursday at Dodger Stadium, you might not have known the great man was gone. There were no black bands of mourning on the arms of his Dodgers and only a moment's silence at the beginning of the game to mark the passing of the baseball titan.

"The only guys who really knew him as a man were his son and Billy (Russell), who came up to the club in '69," said second baseman Davey Lopes. "Other than that, I don't think many of the folks on the club really knew him."

Los Angeles remembers Walter O'Malley, though. Flags were ordered flown at half staff at City Hall and the city council adjourned in his honor at the end of the day's business.

"We shall miss the man," said Mayor Tom Bradley. "But we are grateful for his legacy. The world of baseball has lost one of its giants. Los Angeles has lost one of its finest citizens."

Bob Lurie, owner of the San Francisco Giants, who moved west at the same time the Dodgers did, said he was 'deeply saddened by Walter's death.

"He was a good friend, a close friend and he taught me a lot about how to run the organization of baseball. He was a brilliant man, a visionary in this game," Lurie said. "He was responsible for the design of Dodger Stadium, for the first extensive TV and radio contracts in the game ... What more can you say?"

"Walter O'Malley was as great an executive talent as I have seen or think I am apt to see," said Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn. "While baseball was his medium, his skills would have flourished in any walk of life. He was unfailing in his support of the commissioner's office and a powerful ally for the good of the game."

Tickets Sold Out

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Oct. 20 gridiron meeting of North Carolina and North Carolina State has been sold out, Wolfpack Athletic Director Willis Casey announced Thursday.

This year's clash will take place in Carter Stadium. "We are enjoying our best football advance ticket sales in history," Casey said.

He said the Wolfpack has averaged more than 43,500 fans for its home games during the past two seasons.

Fran's Records

NEW YORK (AP) — The computer that keeps the National Football League passing records will be stabilized for a while, now that Fran Tarkenton of the Minnesota Vikings has retired.

Fran holds a flock of NFL passing marks. He had the most yards gained in the air, 47,003; most passes completed, 3,686; most consecutive seasons passing for 2,000 or more yards, 16; most passes thrown,

6,467; and most touchdown aeri-als, 342. His former coach, Bud Grant, said: "Tarkenton will go down as the greatest quarterback in history."

"Thar's Gold In"

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Jim Strong, proprietor of a golf repair shop here, received some unusual instructions before going to work on a club.

"There's about an ounce of gold under the soleplate of that driver," Ralph Netzer, the pro at the Little River Inn Country Club told Strong. "Be sure to remove it and return it."

The gold had been placed there by Vic Mueller, a dentist and four-handicap player at Little River. "It was a chunk of dental gold and part of a bridge," Mueller explained. "I wanted some weight in the clubhead and this was the handiest thing I had."

Although Brooks Robinson, the all-time great third baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, led the American League in fielding 11 times, in 1971 he made three errors in one inning.

Cardinals Defeat Falcons In Preseason Game

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Steve Pisarkiewicz, a hometown athlete who established passing marks in college, may be ready to show why the St. Louis Cardinals drafted him No. 1 in 1977.

The rifle-armed quarterback, given a lead to work with, exploited it to the hilt Thursday night by heaving four touchdown passes and leading his team to a 42-17 preseason National Football League triumph over the Atlanta Falcons.

"It's about time," rejoined Pisarkiewicz following his dazzling aerial display in the second half.

"All I have done before when I'd get in there was get an interception or throw a bad ball. I think this kind of instilled confidence in everybody. There were always doubts whether I could really do the job."

Pisarkiewicz, who played none as a rookie and only briefly last fall, took over for the Cardinals after Jim Hart nicked up St. Louis from a 10-0 early deficit.

Hart steered the Cards to a 14-10 lead, with Wayne Morris twice plunging for touchdowns. Then Pisarkiewicz, with 39,705 looking on, entered to do his thing.

Eason Ramson was on the receiving end of a 6-yard scoring aerial late in the third quarter. And in the closing stages, with an Atlanta interception and fumble aiding the cause, Pisarkiewicz' bullseyes landed in the hands of receivers Dave Stief, Mark Bell and Willard Harrell.

Pisarkiewicz, a former Missouri standout whose nickname is "Zark," labeled his 9-for-11 passing performance for 104 yards his best as a pro "by far."

"I've got to start getting it going a little bit," the 24-year-old quarterback admitted. "As a third-year player, I've got to start putting it together."

"It'll help him a great deal," said Hart, the St. Louis regular since 1969. "He's learning. He works really hard. He got protection tonight. It will do wonders for his confidence."

Hart, a 14th season NFL performer, found holes in the Falcons' pass defense after Tim Mazzetti's 47-yard field goal and a 32-yard pass play from Steve Bartkowski to Ricky Patton put Atlanta on top.

Morris capped an 80-yard drive by climbing 3 yards over right guard to make it 10-7. Then, after rookie Jerome King swiped a Bartkowski pass, the Cards went ahead to stay.

The outcome boosted St. Louis to 1-1 in preseason play and left Falcons Coach Leeman Bennett pondering the weaknesses he has observed in his team's 0-2 start.

"We played well early. I don't know if we felt like we could win the football game or what," Bennett mused. "I was impressed. I don't have anything but good things to say about the Cardinals."

Cadle Sets Record With 9-Under-Par, 62

By SCOTT M. BUSHNELL
AP Sports Writer
WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — George Cadle doesn't look or sound like a "front runner."

The 5-foot-11, 230-pound native of Pineville, Ky., is where he was three weeks ago — in the lead at the end of the first round of a golf tournament.

Cadle's 9-under-par 62 at the $300,000 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open Thursday set a tourney record for the first round and gives him a 3-stroke lead with 54 holes to play.

Three weeks ago, Cadle fired a course record to lead the Quad Cities Open after the first 18 holes. He faded quickly, though, ending in a nine-way tie for 15th.

"Golf is a streaky game. One day you are on top and the next you're down," the five-year tour pro said. "Everybody is different. I just hope everything works out tomorrow."

Cadle, whose performance has fallen steadily since 1977 when he won $40,000, said he knew he had a chance to be the leader "when I got off to a birdie-eagle-birdie start."

Cadle, who has only won $8,200 in 20 tournaments this year, called his round at the 6,534-yard par-71 Wethersfield County Club course "freakish."

"It's about as good as I can shoot," he said.

In second place are J.C. Snead and Jay Haas with 6-under-par 68s. Both players downplayed their scores.

"I didn't do anything spectacular," said Snead, who was twice runner-up in the GHO. "I could care less that someone's 9-under now. This is just the first round. We're all jockeying for position."

Haas, who finished in a tie for seventh in last week's PGA Championship, said he "expected the field to shoot low, but no 9-under. I just told myself to be patient."

A total of 74 players — or 48 percent of the field — broke par in Thursday's opening round. Tied for fourth at 66 were Mark Hayes, Keith Ferguson and Pat McGowan. Ten players were at 4-under-par 67 and 15 more at 68.

Defending champion Rod Funseth shot a 69 as did the second-leading money winner on the PGA tour, Larry Nelson.

Several of the better known players on the PGA tour didn't enter the GHO, including PGA champion David Graham, runner-up Ben Crenshaw and top money-winner Tom Watson.

TOUCHDOWN CATCH — St. Louis Cardinals Mark Bell (81) goes high to bring down a pass for a touchdown during the 4th quarter Thursday night at St. Louis against the Atlanta Falcons. The pass was for 18 yards from quarterback Steve Pisarkiewicz. Bell is a rookie in NFL. He played his college football for Colorado State. St. Louis won the preseason game 42-17. (AP Laserphoto)

A BIRD FOR CADLE — George Cadle reacts as he dropped a putt for a birdie-4 on the 16th green at Wethersfield Country Club golf course in Wethersfield Thursday during the first round of the Greater Hartford Open golf tourney. Cadle finished his round at 9-under-par 62 to take the early first round lead. (AP Laserphoto)

Tournament Held At Putt-Putt

Allen Elder moved past five opponents in the last round to win the Pitt Championship at the Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

With the ten under par on the last round, Elder finished with a 24 under total of 120 for the 72 hole event.

Junior Knox, with a 122, was second and Carol White beat Tim Manning in a sudden death for third after tying with 123's.

Connors Rallies To Defeat Taroczy 9-7

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Jimmy Connors just received a big dose of self-confidence, but the man who almost dethroned the three-time U.S. Clay Court champion claims Connors can and will be beaten.

"I should have beaten him," said Hungary's Balazs Taroczy, who led Connors 5-2 in the third set before the seemingly tireless court wizard rallied for a 9-7 victory on Thursday.

"I still don't know what happened. Maybe I should have come in a little more. I don't know," said Taroczy, the No. 10 seed who stopped Connors 7-5 in the first set and lost 6-1 in the second.

"I think if someone has enough patience and is strong enough, he can beat him off his forehand. I didn't beat him, but I think someone will beat him this week," said Taroczy, who predicted Connors could fall to fourth-seeded Jose Higueras of Spain in Saturday's semifinals. Connors beat Higueras in the title match last year.

"I'm sure if Higueras gets to him in the semis, Higueras will beat him," Taroczy said. "He's not so confident with his forehand, sometimes he's rushing it. He is beatable now."

Connors just can't quite agree.

"I don't know," Connors said. "I'm not gonna tell. It's not gonna be by him (Taroczy), that's for sure."

As far as confidence, Connors said the near-defeat actually helped him.

"You always hate to get in a position like that (down 5-2)," he said. "But when you guts it out like that and bring out everything you ever knew about tennis and then win ... my confidence just skyrocketed."

Taroczy, aided by numerous errors by the top-seeded Connors, seemingly had the match in control after breaking Connors' serve in the fourth game and holding his own serve for a 4-1 lead.

The two players each held serve then, but Connors pulled to 5-3 with an ace, closed to 5-4 on a service break and finally tied the marathon contest at 5-all after Taroczy had him at match point.

Connors broke service again on the 15th game for an 8-7 lead and won the match on the next game after Taroczy took him to duce.

"I'm not surprised," Connors said of the struggle against the Hungarian player. "He's always tough. He's a good, sound clay court player. I was tired, but I also thought he was getting tired. He was starting to hit the ball a lot shorter. I just tried to keep the ball in play. And from 2-5 I played excellent tennis."

Connors was paired against 13th-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia in the quarterfinals today. Lendl advanced with a 6-2, 7-5 victory over Chile's Jaime Fillol. Higueras advanced with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Peter McNamara of Australia.

"I was sure I was going to win," Taroczy said. "I felt I was really in better shape than he was. At 5-2 and love-30, everything was going fine. But after that he didn't make the mistakes he was making before."

Connors said the pressure at that point was on Taroczy.

"I'm down and have nothing to lose, so I'm going to go all out," he said. "I started attacking more. I've got to have confidence in myself."

Second-seeded John McEnroe also advanced with an easy 6-1, 6-1 victory over Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador. He was matched against eighth-seeded Manuel Orantes of Spain, a three-time champion who downed Ecuador's Andres Gomez. Orantes was leading 4-2 in the first set when Gomez was forced to default.

Third-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina stopped Czechoslovakia's Tomaz Smid, the No. 12 seed, 6-1, 6-4, to advance against fellow countryman Jose-Luis Clerc, a 6-3, 6-2 winner over Eliot Teltscher. And in a late match that lasted almost three hours, Corrado Barazzutti of Italy defeated seventh-seeded Wojtek Fibak of Poland 6-2, 6-7, 6-4.

A major upset in women's play was turned in earlier by unseeded Renee Richards, who dropped fourth-seeded Virginia Ruzici 7-5, 6-1 to advance to the semifinals today against four-time champion Chris Evert Lloyd.

Richards, in the semifinals of a major tournament for the first time, said the prospect of playing the top-seeded Lloyd was exciting but not over-intimidating.

"I'm not afraid of her, by any means," said Richards, more than 20 years older than Lloyd. "But it would be foolish to say she's not the best player in the world, because she is."

As far as playing Lloyd, the 44-year-old Richards said she would "just go into it the same way I would any match. It's a privilege to play her, but I have everything to win and nothing to lose."

Lloyd, who won here in 1972-75, advanced with a 6-7, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec Thursday night.

Third-seeded Evonne Goolagong Cawley, runner-up to Lloyd in 1972, reached the semifinals with a 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Anne Smith. She was matched today against fifth-seeded Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia, a 6-2, 6-3 winner over Jeanne DuVall.

2nd Annual 50-Mile Race For NASCAR Winners Will Be Sponsored In 1980

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — There will be a 50-mile race for this season's NASCAR Grand National pole position winners in 1980, according to the sponsor of the race.

And there will not be a break between driver Cale Yarborough and carbuilder Junior Johnson, the Winston Cup circuit's top team the past 3 seasons.

These were the major developments at a Thursday news conference held by Busch Beer at Charlotte's City Club.

For some time there have been rumors there would not be a second annual "Busch Clash" and that Yarborough and Johnson would split.

Monty Roberts, an auto racing enthusiast and marketing director for Busch, which sponsors the race and the Yarborough-Johnson team, buried the speculation. "The Clash will be back," he said of the $150,000 race. "And so will the Cale-Johnson combo."

The race, won last February by Charlottean Buddy Baker, again will be staged following the first round of qualifying for the Daytona 500 (Feb. 10 next year).

Twenty races into the 31-event NASCAR Grand National season, 10 drivers already have qualified — Baker, Darrell Waltrip, Neil Bonnett, Bobby Allison, David Pearson, Benny Parsons, Donnie Allison, Joe Millikan, Dale Earnhardt and Harry Gant.

Conspicuously absent is Cale Yarborough, who took a lot of kidding Thursday because his Busch-backed car isn't yet in the Busch-backed clash.

Baker, who dominated the first Clash in an Olds fielded by the Harrisburg-headquartered W-I-N Team, took $50,000 from the inaugural.

Busch also announced during the news conference it will continue in 1980 its sponsorship of pole position runs and award a $25,000 postseason bonus to the team taking the most No. 1 starting spots. Baker currently heads the '79 chase for that cash with 5 poles, followed by NASCAR Grand National points leader Waltrip with 4 and Neil Bonnett with 3.

"It's good for the sport," said Baker. "It creates a lot of interest and gets fans more involved. Now we've got two important races a week for them to follow instead of just one."

Lynn Swann Rejoins Steelers

By The Associated Press
Lynn Swann rejoins the Pittsburgh Steelers today and his decision to return to football was greeted in a strange way by Coach Chuck Noll.

"I only talk about players who are in camp," said Noll when asked if he was looking forward to the arrival of his All-Pro wide receiver, who temporarily retired last week while testifying in a San Francisco trial. "I haven't seen him in camp yet."

Steelers President Art Rooney was more cheerful that Swann was back in the fold.

Asked whether Swann will be fined for missing three weeks of training, Rooney replied: "That's not the important issue. The important issue is that we're happy he's back."

Swann, two brothers and a cousin are suing the City of San Francisco for $2 million, alleging violation of their civil rights in a 1974 incident. The suit claims the four were beaten by San Francisco police after being stopped for allegedly running a red light.

Swann was not expected to play in Pittsburgh's exhibition game with the New York Giants Saturday.

In Thursday's National Football League preseason games, St. Louis bombed Atlanta 42-17 and Kansas City edged Philadelphia 24-21.

The Cardinals rode the passing of backup quarterback

Steve Pisarkiewicz to victory. The third-year QB threw four touchdown passes in the second half, completing nine of 11 tosses for 104 yards.

Pisarkiewicz hit Dave Stief from 17 yards, Eason Ramson from six, Mark Bell from 18 yards and Willard Harrell from four, all for scores.

Wayne Morris plunged across for two touchdowns for the Cardinals. Atlanta scored on Tim Mazzetti's 47-yard field goal and a pair of touchdown passes: Steve Bartkowski to Ricky Patton for 32 yards and June Jones to Jimmy Bryant for nine.

Kansas City recovered two fourth-period fumbles by the Eagles to storm from behind. Arnold Morgado dove in from the 1 for a touchdown and Jan Stenerud had a 33-yard field goal after the costly turnovers.

Clark Catches Runner-Up Spot

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Judy Clark, who started playing golf when she was 9 years old and who gave it up when she was 16 — 13 years ago — has resolved her doubts enough to capture the runnerup spot after the opening round of the $100,000 WUI Classic.

Kathy Aern, who has not won on the Ladies Professional Golf Association circuit since 1972, was the only player who outscored Clark, shooting a 2-under-par 71 on the 6,460-yard Meadow Brook Club course.

"I quit playing golf when I was in high school," said Clark, who was 1 stroke behind Aern at 72. "I just couldn't stand it any longer. Then I decided to get into church work and I studied that at Glassboro State (N.J.) College.

"That wasn't for me, either. Then I started working on a maintenance crew ... in the post office as a mail carrier. Little by little I got back into golf. My husband and myself played at night after we were finished work.

"At long last I finally got my card in the LPGA. I always wanted to go on tour and finally I decided to give it a try."

Clark has been in 16 tournaments and has collected less than $13,441. A fourth-place finish in Montreal two weeks ago is her best finish thus far.

"I did everything to get back into golf," continued Clark, who only placed 83rd last year as a rookie with $5,330. "I was a waitress in the club at Bridgeton (N.J., her hometown). "I also learned how to run the grass cutter.

"Being on the tour is exciting. I like being able to see the country. I've gotten to meet a lot of nice people since I usually stay in private homes.

"As for golf itself, I've learned that you have to concentrate on each shot. If you get a bogey, then you have to come back with a birdie. You can't let it throw you. Hopefully one of these weeks I'll be able to put it together and get a win."

Two shots back after opening-round 73s were LPGA titlist Donna Caponi Young, Jane Blacklock and Beth Daniel. Ten more golfers were at 74, including U.S. Open champion Jerilyn Britz.

Defending champion Judy Rankin shot a 3-over-par 76.

The tournament is sponsored by Western Union International.

True Story Will Be Shown

The true-life story of Corrie ten Boom, a former Nazi prisoner, will be presented through the motion picture, "The Hiding Place" on Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Bethel Baptist Church.

The story of tragedy and victory shares the experiences of a family who was willing to risk everything for others. The ten Booms became involved in the Dutch Underground during the German occupation of World War II by hiding Jews in a secret room built in their house, thereby aiding them in their escape from the Nazis.

As a result of a raid by soldiers, Corrie's family was taken prisoner and Corrie was sent to the dreaded concentration camp, "Ravensbruck."

"The Hiding Place" portrays the de-humanizing agonies of a concentration camp, the personal confusion and conflicts of both victors and vanquished, the confrontation of military might and gently ministry, and the costs of caring for others.

An estimated one million persons, perhaps the largest crowd to witness a single event in history, watched the blastoff of the Apollo 11 spacecraft that helped put men on the moon 10 years ago, according to National Geographic.

By PETER J. BOYER
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Had Providence equipped Samuel Clemens with a microphone instead of a pen, he would have joined CBS News and gone "On The Road." Instead, we got Charles Kuralt, and I'm not sure we're any the poorer for it.

Kuralt sees America through special eyes. His is the vision of children and wise old grandfathers, a view that always finds small wonders in its focus.

"Among the very few poets in 'electronic journalism,'" Eric Sevareid says, "there is, first and foremost, Charles Kuralt." Yes. In 1972 Kuralt, while doing

"On The Road" segments for CBS TV, began filing weekend reports for CBS Radio, weaving for radio listeners some of the yarns he'd picked up here and there. "Dateline America," it was called, and it became the friend of weekend travellers across the land.

"Dateline America" is now a book, comprised of the best of Kuralt's weekend tales. They were written, Kuralt tells us, "at my rattling desk on the bus I travel around in, or under 60-watt bulbs in motel rooms, or, willy-nilly, at the locations of stories."

"I have an idea," he cautions in the forward, "that literature is not composed or transmitted in this manner, and I certify that the wary reader will find no literature lurking in these pages."

It is an obligatory disclaimer, and I'll remind that Mark Twain dismissed "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" as children's fantasies.

When you read this book, Kuralt asks, "I would appreciate it if you would supply your own background sounds — the gabble of geese at Tule Lake, the clip-clop of the horse that pulls our carriage up the hill on Mackinac Island, the murmur of the breeze in the St. Martinville oaks." And imagine, while reading, the voice of Charles Kuralt, booming surprise and wonder at every turn in the road.

There is vintage Kuralt here. Among my favorites is Kuralt's lament for the vanishing rumpled American male. "The streets of Kansas City," he moans, "are all a-strut with drip-dry Dacron-polyester peacocks in red pants and white shoes. They all feel natty. Male nattiness is puzzling and alarming." Kuralt reminds that the greatest America men were rumpled American men — Abe

Lincoln, Clarence Darrow, Irvin S. Cobb and Wendell Wilkie. "Beware the tidy dresser," he cautions. "Neatness marks a man whose emphasis is on all the wrong things. The political season will soon be upon us. I am looking at the candidates' clothes, not their voting records, and hoping for a wrinkled Lincoln."

And Kuralt's farewell to winter, prompted by his sighting of a kids' sandlot baseball game. "At last it is baseball time again. Sweetness and sanity return, and the earth renews itself..."

The only problem with Kuralt's radio poetry is that it's there and gone, leaving you no chance to savor it. Here's your opportunity.

Education Dialogue Has Been Scheduled

A dialogue among educators of adults has been scheduled to be held at Willis Building, First and Reade Streets, from 2 to 4 p.m. on August 21. The event, under the auspices of the North Carolina Adult Education Association with the aid of a grant from the N.C. Humanities Committee, will feature Dr.

Elizabeth Sewell, philosopher, poetess, and lecturer, along with local education and community leaders.

Similar meetings are taking place this summer in several North Carolina cities — Asheville, Boone, Cullowee, Charlotte, the Triangle Area, Fayetteville, Lumberton, Wilmington, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem in addition to the Greenville meeting.

Dr. Leonard D. Lillery, Jr. Coordinator of Adult Education at East Carolina University, is chairing the program committee for the Greenville meeting. Co-chairpersons are Mrs. Janice Faulkner and Dr. Connie Tindel. Committee members are Herman Phelps, Ms. Terry Shank, Dr. Pat Dunn, Mrs. Kathy Sprau, and Ms. Joyce Pettis.

The purpose of the program is to gather information and to encourage discussion about adult development and unused human potential in North Carolina.

The guest speaker, Dr. Sewell, is an internationally known scholar in modern languages. She holds the B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. degrees from Cambridge University, and since 1951 has held numerous professorships in the U.S.

During 1960-61 she was a visiting professor of English at Bennett College in Greensboro, and in 1974 lectured at UNC-Charlotte and was Rosenthal Professor of Humanities at UNC-Greensboro.

She is also the author of a dozen books and numerous articles, poems, and short stories. The University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, has published two volumes of her poetry — "Poems 1947-61" and "Signs and Cities." She has also had three novels published — "The Dividing of Time," "The Singular Hope," and "Now Bless Thyself."

Named As Consultant

Richard S. Farris Sr. of Greenville has been selected as one of 138 persons from all over the United States to form a Technical Assistance Corps of specialists on understanding of and complying with the laws on access for the handicapped.

Farris is Assistant Personnel Director for Employee Relations and Associate Director of Equal Opportunity Programs at East Carolina University. He was one of three North Carolinians selected.

The 138 recently participated in training sessions on handicapped access at Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C. Members of TAC are available for on-site consultations for which the negotiating institution has identified a specific area of issue or concern. They are available to do a maximum of three free consultations in their regions and, after these three, a modest fee may be charged.

Ingram To Miss Meet

N. C. Insurance Commissioner John Ingram says he is going to have to miss a possible third championship in as many years for state rescue squads this weekend because of the tobacco contamination problem.

Ingram said that, due to the meeting with tobacco farmers scheduled for Friday at 1 p. m. at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh, he is canceling his plans to accompany the Greenville Fire and Rescue Team to the International Competition in Columbus, Ohio.

Ingram and Director of Consumer Services Kenn Brown were scheduled to take part in the activities in Columbus involving members of the Fire and Rescue Division of the Commissioner's Office.

Ingram said that, if at all possible, he will try to get to Ohio before the weekend is over.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

When a play has nothing to lose and everything to gain, it should appeal to the sense of economy of every right-thinking citizen. But we were amazed to see how many declarers failed to find the winning line on this hand from a recent tournament.

The auction was straightforward, despite the fact that his hand was perfectly balanced, North was correct to raise spades with only three-card support — the two high honors in partner's suit were too valuable to suppress for even a moment.

The opening lead of the queen of clubs was ducked all round. West continued with the jack of clubs and declarer ruffed. Dummy was entered with the queen of trumps and the diamond finesse succeeded. A spade to the king provided the entry for a second winning diamond finesse.

At this point most of the declarers, fearing a third-round diamond ruff, drew the last trump and then cashed the ace of diamonds. When that suit failed to break, declarer had to hope that West held the king of hearts for the contract to succeed. When East turned up with the king, declarer lost two hearts, a diamond and a club — down one.

There was no way that drawing the last trump could gain. It is an optical illusion to worry about the diamond being ruffed. If the diamond is ruffed, you can use the long trump in dummy to ruff the fourth diamond, which will still hold your diamond losers to one.

Correct technique is to lay down the ace of diamonds first. If both defenders follow, declarer can draw the last trump and claim his contract even though the king of hearts is with East. The advantage of this line is that if the defender with a doubleton diamond does not have the last trump, declarer can still make the contract. Then the ace of diamonds will live and declarer can ruff his fourth diamond with dummy's last trump. Everyone will surely agree that two chances are better than one.

TRUE OR FALSE!!

Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs??

Basically the main and in most cases the only reason for an individual's purchase of a small or compact car is for fuel economy. IN MOST CASES IF WE COMPARE A COMPARABLY EQUIPPED FOREIGN COMPACT CAR TO A LARGER CAR OF COMPARABLE EQUIPMENT the government estimated gas mileage will vary very little.

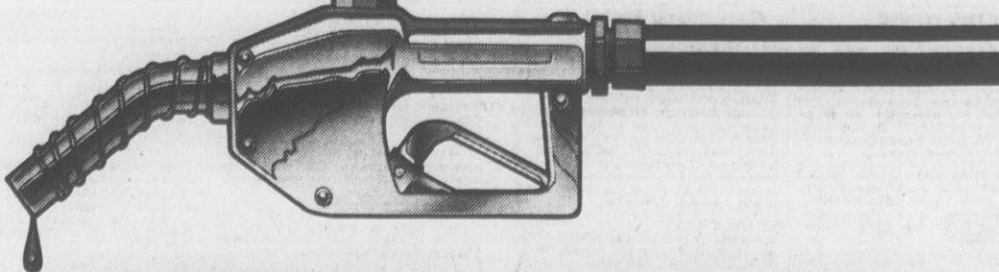

Let's consider some valid reasons for buying a larger car versus a smaller one:

1. Big cars generally are more durable and last longer.
2. In many instances foreign car repairs are more costly than domestic larger cars.
3. Parts for foreign small cars are sometimes very difficult to get.
4. Big cars are safer in case of an accident. One out of every five cars will be in an accident in any one year period.
5. Big cars are generally more comfortable.
6. The larger car meets a much wider range of total needs than a small car.
7. In many cases if we compare the price of a small luxury car to a larger luxury car the price of the small car will be higher with much less equipment.
8. By purchasing American made cars, the American dollars stay here and improve our economy.

The American public has been so used to bargain prices for fuel for so many years they have taken low fuel prices for granted. To be realistic in this regard, we need to compare today's gas prices with those in the past. Gas is approximately 90 cents or $1.00 a gallon, as compared to 40 or 50 years ago when it was 25 or 30 cents per gallon. Today's prices for gas are about three times more than they were back then. During this same period of time, the costs of other items have gone up five to ten times, in some cases even more. Stop and think back to 1974 when there were gas lines and many people went out and purchased compact cars, only to realize a few months later, when things seemed to return to normal, that they had made a poor decision.

I am not saying that your decision would be wrong to purchase a small car. All I am trying to do is to place the facts before you and you decide "Does A Small Car Really Meet Your Family's Needs?".
