

Utilities Move To Accept N.C. Grant

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer
The Greenville Utilities Commission adopted a resolution Tuesday night accepting a $1,754,044 state grant allocated under the Clean Water Bond Act.

The grant will aid in the construction of the $12,395,300 water supply facility project currently underway in Greenville.

Also last night, the commission revised its water and sewer extension policy, adding a one-time sewer outfall acreage fee, effective August 15 at $700 per acre, to compensate for sewer outfall costs.

According to the policy, the fee will be paid by all property owners requesting sewer service on or after that date. However, owners having already paid the full cost of such an extension will not be required to pay the fee.

The revision also eliminates the difference between "in-city" and "out-of-city" property. "We simply have eliminated any difference for in-city and out-of-city extensions," Charles O'H. Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, explained. "We used to have one set of rules for 'in-city' and one set of rules for 'out-of-city'."

Horne last night also explained July's fuel adjustment charge as follows: VEPCO last month charged Greenville Utilities a rate of 7.8 mills with Greenville buying 60,730,000 kilowatt hours.

However, he pointed out that Greenville Utilities sold 41,441,000 kilowatt hours at a rate of nine mills accounting for a $64,303 deficit for July.

Differences in Greenville Utilities' revenue and expenses in July also accounted for a $4,356.84 deficit in last month's gas fund.

"Both deficits will be later compensated for when the lag in billing is collected," Horne said. "The commission's policy is to charge our customers only the cost that we pay VEPCO for the fuel adjustment charge."

"Over a 12-month period, the fuel adjustment charge will work out to be equal between what we pay VEPCO and charge our customers," he added.

Furthermore, the commission agreed Tuesday night that a residential customer with a "good" pay history on the commission's system for the previous 24 month period (12 months before last night's revision) in a rented dwelling or otherwise, will be exempt from having to pay the initial deposit.

The purpose of the deposit is to prevent loss to the commission from non-payment of utility bills from transitory customers.

"To be sure a transit customer is a good customer, the customer will be required to make a deposit before the cutting-on of service," Horne explained.

Concerning load management switches installed during July, a report by Reese Helms, energy conservation manager, last night revealed that 2,397 such switches have been installed since March 1978, making a total of 7,300 installations.

About the E-300 Program Helms' report stated that during last month an additional 16 new homes were evaluated according to E-300 standards bringing this year's total to 80.

The report further stated that the original program goal of 100 E-300 homes in two years will probably be achieved in only one year.

Bids awarded Tuesday night were: $10,450 to Rigby Electric Supply Company for 10-100 KVA Padmount Transformers; $29,946 to Eastern Electric Supply Company for 40,000 feet of conducting wire; $1,800 to Pump and Lighting Company for 10-6 inches Mechanical Joint Valves; and $3,344 to Pyco Supply Company for 8-5/4 Fire Hydrants.

Also, a work progress report on the 115-KV Power Plant Conversion stated that during July a station ground grid was completed at the site.

Pitt United Fund Budget Approved

The United Fund Board of Directors approved a budget totaling $351,477.08 Tuesday night, topping last year's budget of $312,269.12.

The approved budget reflected a $14,805 change from requests totaling $366,282.08. Budget subcommittee members were Col. Charles R. Blake, Dr. Thomas Brewer, Etsil Gordon, Robert Griffin, R. Donald Parrott, Jerry Powell, Paul G. Taddiken, and E. Andy Warren.

Agencies to receive funds and the amount recommended by the Board of Directors are as follows: Pitt County Association for the Blind, $3,250; Mental Health Association in Pitt County, $21,378.92; The Salvation Army, $44,396; 4-H Council, $5,100; Girl Scouts of Coastal Carolina, $19,800; Boy Scouts, East Carolina Council, $48,483.60; Pitt County Retarded Citizens, $11,200; Pitt County Chapter, American Red Cross, $38,835; Boys' Club of Pitt County, $54,000; Real Crisis Center, $13,500; Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, $6,000; N. C. United Fund, $17,533.56.

Jerry Powell, who presided in absence of UF President Robert Griffin, introduced 1979-80 Chairman Dr. Thomas Brewer, who reported that all division chairmen had been secured for the annual campaign. He noted that East Carolina University is making a movie about the county United Fund to be shown to various civic organizations.

Downgrade Press Estimates

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Officials of Gujarat state said today that press estimates that as many as 25,000 people may have died in the Machu River dam disaster appear to be grossly exaggerated.

Chief Minister Babubhai Patel said after a flight over the stricken area he would not estimate the toll at more than 1,000 dead, the figure most often used by officials.

He reported all 7,000 inhabitants of one village isolated by the flood, Maliya, were safe.

Agriculture Minister Keshubhai Patel pointed out that the high press estimates had been based on press reports of homes destroyed when the flooded river broke through an earth dam late Saturday night and sent an 18-foot-deep deluge of water and mud down on the city of Morvi and neighboring villages. Patel said in several villages where large numbers of homes were destroyed, everyone survived.

About 500 bodies have been collected, but it will be days before the toll is known, officials said, because access to much of the area is still limited.

Communications lines and the main road and railway bridges to Morvi were washed out. Officials and relief teams entered the stricken city in convoys of jeeps and other military vehicles through water more than three feet deep. Mud was reported to be 19 feet deep in some areas.

Spy Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The indictment of a Navy enlisted man on charges of espionage and theft of top-secret government documents has prompted a review of security safeguards at the Pentagon.

Yeoman 3rd Class Lee Eugene Madsen, 24, was accused by a federal grand jury Tuesday of stealing the documents and selling them to an FBI informer and an undercover agent.

Madsen was employed as a special security officer by the Strategic Warning Staff, part of the National Military Intelligence Center at the Pentagon. The staff is responsible for warning of impending hostile action against the United States or its allies.

An intelligence official, who asked not to be named, said Madsen's arrest had set off a review of Pentagon security.

Welfare Errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flaws in a complicated computer system have resulted in $25 million in overpayments to Supplemental Security Income recipients, congressional auditors charge.

The General Accounting Office said Tuesday internal weaknesses in the system allowed auditors to "resurrect a deceased case" and order monthly benefits of $189 for the dead person.

In its report to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris, the GAO said auditors also were able to override the system's automated controls and compute individual benefits of up to $2,000 a month, far above legal levels.

More than 4 million low-income Americans, 60 percent of them elderly, receive monthly benefits under the SSI welfare program financed jointly by the federal and state governments.

The agency estimated there have been $20 million in erroneous SSI payments since 1974 because of inadequate crosschecks with the regular Social Security program.

An additional $5.4 million was overpaid because of lax controls over situations in which benefits were figured by hand, the GAO said. These cases, called "forced payments," usually involve a death in the recipient's family.

N.C. State To Study Acid Rain

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State University will receive a $500,000 federal grant to coordinate a multi-state investigation of acid rain which President Carter has branded a "global environmental threat."

The grant is part of a $900,000 research effort being launched by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Cross-Country Flight By Motorized Hang Glider

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — It has been 76 years since the Wright brothers flew their simple airplane 120 feet into the history books.

Now two men plan to travel 160 miles from Jacksonville to Kitty Hawk to complete the final leg of a coast-to-coast trip they hope will earn them a spot in the hearts of aviation buffs everywhere.

As of Tuesday night all had gone well for Jack Peterson, Dan White and a motorized hang glider they've christened the "Pterodactyl Fledgling." Apparently they not only have beaten three other teams in a race that began July 9 in Long Beach, Calif., but have done so without mishap.

Peterson, the pilot, has been accompanied by White, developer of the craft. White has stayed on the ground to check Peterson's progress, armed with enough spare parts to construct a separate plane if necessary.

But from Long Beach to Jacksonville White's spare parts have maintained their status quo. On Thursday they hope to touch down at the site of the Wright Brothers Memorial at Kitty Hawk.

"Everybody was laughing at us when we left, and thought we were crazy," said Peterson before leaving Jacksonville Tuesday. "It's hard to believe we've done it. Man that's a long way. But it's the only way to fly."

An odd-looking craft, "The Fledgling" is driven by a toy propeller and a snowmobile engine. From it hangs a triangleshaped frame that has carried the 27-year-old Peterson 200 to 300 miles per day.

It has a top speed of 45 knots and a fuel capacity of 2 1/2 gallons. It was manufactured by Manta Products of Oakland, Cal. After traveling a short distance, Peterson thought he would make the venture more interesting by challenging others to see who could cross the country first. He last heard from them in Texas.

The entire flight was not so easy, however. At times the men found themselves without food or lodging. But Peterson figured out a way to make friends.

"Whenever we needed help I would just circle until people saw me, then I would land nearby on a field or a road," he said.

Smugglers Must Pay To Schools

SWAN QUARTER, N.C. (AP) — The last school budget to be defeated in Hyde County went down in 1969, but school officials are less concerned now than ever before about a repeat performance.

The reason is a court ruling calling for five defendants in a marijuana-smuggling case to make payments totaling $520,000 to the school system. That exceeds by $106,000 the county's portion of its school budget.

Early Morning Blaze Damages Restaurant

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

An early-morning fire today heavily damaged Sherlock's Restaurant at 118 East Fifth St., just around the corner in the same block from the Pitt Theater on Evans Street, which was destroyed by fire Sunday night.

The blaze, discovered by a patrolling police officer and reported to the Fire Department at 2:08 a.m., caused heavy fire and smoke damage to the building and light water damage, fire officers reported.

Investigators said the fire apparently started among some rags in the kitchen from spontaneous combustion, and spread to the rest of the kitchen, its contents, and the roof.

Unlike the fire in the theater building, which ate its way to inaccessible areas that firefighters could not reach, the Sherlock's blaze was quickly extinguished.

Estimates of the damage to the business were unavailable from the owners this morning.

However, according to records of the Pitt County Tax Department, the building, listed to Peggy Rose Smith Corbitt, executor, and built around 1925, was valued at about $30,900.

Couple Weds Sunday In Outdoor Ceremony

TARBORO — The Tarboro Town Commons was the scene of the Sunday afternoon wedding ceremony of Christie Lynn Thomas and Thomas Elbridge Hodgkin. The double ring ceremony was conducted at three o'clock by the Rev. Julian Cleveland of Tarboro.

John Thomas, uncle of the bride, was guitarist and soloist for the ceremony.

Cheryl A. Thomas of Raleigh, sister of the bride, was the honor attendant and Dacia V. Harrell of Fayetteville was bridesmaid. Honorary bridesmaids included Marcia Mears Bosch of Tarboro, Christine Louise Fisher of Greenville, Katharine Sharp of Greenville, S. C., and Deborah Hodgkin of Goldsboro, cousins of the bridegroom.

The flower girl was Jennah Bosch of Tarboro.

Robert Hodgkin of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man while the usher was Scott Hardaway of Newport News, Va.

The bride's parents are Mrs. Marilyn V. Thomas and Mr. Rudolph M. Thomas, both of Tarboro. Dr. Katharine W. Hodgkin of Greenville is the bridegroom's mother.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of ivory giana styled with a scooped neckline worn off-the-shoulder with a ruffle collar. The full sleeves were gathered at the elbow with a ruffle. The fitted bodice was low-waisted with a full gathered skirt and a chapel length hemline ruffle. The bride created her dress. She carried a lace fan, adorned with a cascade of plum colored silk roses, designed and created by Mrs. Dean Whitley of Tarboro.

The honor attendant wore a plum colored linen dress designed after the style of the bride's. The dress was sleeveless with a gathered floor length skirt. She carried a lace fan adorned with silk peonies complementary to the color of her dress. The bridesmaid wore a rose colored dress designed like the honor attendant's and carried a similar fan.

The honorary bridesmaids all wore long dresses in pastel colors and carried a rose. The flower girl wore a plum colored floor length sun dress and carried a fan.

The reception, given by the bride's mother, was held at the

MRS. THOMAS ELBRIDGE HODGIN

E. L. Roberson Center. Guests were greeted by Dr. and Mrs. H. V. Vick of Tarboro and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Croom of Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Sexton presided at the bride's table.

The cake was served by Mrs. Patsy Jones and Mrs. Donna Cooper. Punch was poured by Mrs. Nora Mears and Mrs. Marcia Bosch.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Wood of Tarboro.

Mrs. Bettie Ann Godfrey directed the wedding and Mrs. Rose Ann Madalozza directed the reception.

The couple will be living in Lakeland, Fla., where the bridegroom is a geologist with Agrico Chemical Co. He graduated from ECU with a degree in geology. The bride attended ECU and is a professional seamstress.

The bride and bridegroom were honored at a Sunday morning brunch held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph M. Thomas, Tarboro. Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hodges were assisting host and hostess.

A pig pickin' was given for the couple Saturday evening at the American Legion Building, Greenville, by the mother of the bridegroom and his relatives and friends, Bob Hodgkin, Mr. and Mrs. George Hodgkin, Mr. and Mrs. Ballard Gay, Dr. and Mrs. David Jackson, Mrs. Hascall Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. James Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Wyatt Jr., William G. Wyatt Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Charles Croom, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Dudley, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Willard Wilson.

The bride was honored at a bridesmaids luncheon at the home of Mrs. Pat Ward of Tarboro. Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Nancy Morris and Mrs. Grace Ward were hostesses for the Saturday event.

Be Honest About 'Two' Mistakes

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: After two unsuccessful marriages in six years, I have finally met someone with whom I am very much in love and know I could be happy.

He is from a socially prominent and well-to-do family. I have never told him about my previous marriages since both were shortlived, each lasting less than a year.

His family wants us to have a gala wedding with all the frills, including my wearing his grandmother's wedding gown. There is nothing I would like more than to have this very special wedding, but what kind of wedding may a divorced woman have under the circumstances?

Is it necessary that I disclose my previous mistakes?
KEEPING MY MOUTH SHUT

DEAR KEEPING: Times have changed, and so have the rules about what kind of wedding a divorced woman may have. However, the rules of honest and aboveboard conduct remain the same; if you continue to keep your mouth shut about your two "mistakes," you will have made a third.

DEAR ABBY: What would you say if a guy you were dating rang you up and said, "Hey, if I asked you to marry me last night, forget it. I must have been bombed."
RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: I'd had replied, "If I said 'yes,' forget it. I must have been crazy."

DEAR ABBY: My husband is in the hospital and will be there for about three more weeks. Although he is restricted to bed, there are still SOME things he is capable of.

We are practically newlyweds and, since he does have a private room, we feel that what we do behind closed doors is OUR business. But it seems that the nurses want to run our lives. Every time we are alone they find some excuse to come in and interrupt us. We used to be embarrassed, but now we are just plain mad! We spoke to the supervisor, who said it was a hospital room, not a hotel room. For $98 a day, we disagree. What do you think?
FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I think if prisoners in some states are permitted "conjugal visits," hospital patients who are physically able should be allowed the same. Talk to your husband's doctor. He could issue "doctor's orders." Lotsa luck.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DEPRESSED IN DURHAM": Don't sit around feeling sorry for yourself. If nobody calls you—call someone. Get out of the house and find someone who needs a lift more than you do. You won't have to look far.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Homemaker's Haven By Evelyn L. Spangler

Homemakers Haven UNDERLINING SKIRTS

Many of the younger generation of home sewers have never underlined a garment before. But, according to Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Home Economics Extension Agent, with the return of wools and other woven fabrics, underlining is a must.

Mrs. Spangler states that there are several reasons for underlining—it helps thin, soft or loosely woven fabric keep its shape; it helps prevent raveling, wrinkling, and scratching; and it helps cushion darts, seam edges, and hemlines so they won't show through. Another plus for underlining is that it eliminates the need for a slip. Nothing ruins the looks of a slit skirt quicker than a slip showing through!

Here's a fast method of not only underlining your skirt but also binding the edges at the same time.

1. Select an appropriate lining fabric for the fashion fabric (outside of the garment) that you're using. Prepare the lining fabric by getting it on grain and by either pre-washing or dry-cleaning, whichever method you plan to use for the finished garment.

It is most frustrating for the lining of the finished garment to shrink. The fashion fabric should also be pre-washed or dry-cleaned before cutting.

2. Use the front and back pattern pieces to cut the underlining adding 5/8" to each vertical seam edge.

3. Match the pin side edges together with the right side of the fashion fabric next to the underlining. Stitch 1/4" seams.

4. With the seam allowances still in the stitching position, press the stitching line. Turn the fashion fabric right side out. On a flat surface, carefully smooth out the two layers so that the seam allowances are enclosed by the underlining. Press the bound edges flat.

5. Pin, then staystitch the waistline edges together. Machine baste through the center of the dart layers.

6. Sew and press seams and darts as usual. Remove dart bastings.

7. After pressing up the hem cut off the underlining at the hem fold so the underlining is not doubled in the hem. Finish fashion fabric hem edge. Hand-stitch the hem to the underlining only, except about every 4" take one stitch into the back of the fashion fabric to make the layers hang better when wearing.

Modernization Can Aid Value

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

A home owner who redesigns the kitchen and installs new appliances and equipment can recover from 40 to 100 percent of the costs when the house is sold, says Charles L. Osenbaugh, president of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

The actual amount depends on where you live, according to a recent spot survey by the trade group.

Osenbaugh, a Houston real estate appraiser, says even kitchen modernization, a largely cosmetic effort, can lead to recovery of 25 to 75 percent of the cost.

Kitchen dealer Ray W. Afflerbach takes a more conservative view. Afflerbach says the amount spent on remodeling should be based on your plans for your home. If you intend to stay put, he says, it's worth going all out to create a showcase kitchen to work in and show off to your friends.

But if resale is your reason, the executive director of the American Institute of Kitchen dealers cautions against over-spending.

Afflerbach says it's a mistake to plow $8,000 into the project if your house is already valued at $40,000 in a neighborhood of $40,000 houses. You might not find a buyer who likes the changes.

Instead, he recommends medium-priced changes such as good quality stock cabinets instead of custom cabinets, maybe new countertops and new appliances.

Afflerbach also says you may not get an extra profit margin if the remodeling simply brings the value of your home to the same level as others in the neighborhood.

The appraisers' survey in five major cities found the highest recovery rate for redesigning was 80-100 percent in Seattle, and the lowest, 40-60 percent in Houston. New York City, St. Louis and Miami were in between.

Kitchen modernization includes such things as new wallpaper and new tiles but no tearing out of walls or installing a new stove, sink or other equipment.

Even so, Osenbaugh says, the survey found the cost recovery rate when the house is sold runs from 25-75 percent in Houston to 60-75 percent in Miami, 50-75 percent in Seattle, 40-60 percent in St. Louis and 30 percent in New York City.

Anyone considering remodeling will find dozens of good ideas in a 1969 extension service booklet recently reissued by Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., until the author, Prof. Rose E. Steidl, can complete a revision. In a telephone interview, the professor said the updated booklet will add information about energy economy and appliances such as microwave ovens, food processors and other small tabletop units coming into ever wider usage.

All the material in the current edition is still applicable, Ms. Steidl added.

Functional Kitchens tells how to plan at least five work centers for specific chores and individual lifestyles — "Simplify your work by storing supplies and utensils where you use them first," it says.

—If dried or canned soups that need to have water added are stored at the sink center, you don't have to stop work to look for them in another area.

—Foods that need boiling water as the first cooking step — macaroni products, for example — should be stored at the range center, along with tea, coffee and beverages prepared the same way, and canned vegetables that simply need reheating.

—Keep ready-to-eat foods such as cookies, crackers, pickles, olives, bread spreads and table condiments where you store china, glasses, silverware, napkins and other serving utensils.

Grilling Duck, Using Special Sauce

OUTDOOR FARE—Grill duck over charcoal briquets and serve it with a dipping sauce.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

My friend Lucy Wing, superb outdoor cook, did me a great favor that I am happy to pass along to you. She showed me her special method of grilling a duck over charcoal so it would be as tender as possible and have a very crisp skin. But one word of warning: ducks vary in their quality; do your best to find one that has been well brought up.

LUCY WING'S GRILLED DUCK

- 5-pound fresh duckling
- 1 bunch scallions, cut into 3-inch lengths
- ¾ cup water
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon dry sherry
- Minced fresh ginger to taste
- 1 chicken bouillon cube

Place duck, minus giblets, on a large sheet of heavy-duty aluminum foil. Reserve about six of the 3-inch scallion lengths; place remaining scallion lengths in the cavity of the duck. Tie legs together with string. Wrap duck securely in heavy-duty aluminum foil.

Prepare outdoor grill with charcoal briquets on one half and a foil drip pan on the other half. Place wrapped duck on grill about 6 inches above medium-hot coals. (To judge the temperature, cautiously hold your hand at cooking height, palm side down. If you can keep it in position for 4 seconds, the coals will be medium-hot.) Grill duck for ½ hour.

Meanwhile in a small saucepan stir together water, soy sauce, sherry, ginger and bouillon cube; heat on grill, stirring to dissolve bouillon cube, to boiling.

Carefully cut reserved scallion lengths at ends to make ¾-inch long fringes; drop scallions into cold water so fringes will curl — about 1 hour.

After ½ hour of grilling duck, remove it to a cookie sheet; unwrap and remove from foil; discard fat in foil. Place unwrapped duck on grill over foil drip pan. Cover grill; grill duck until golden brown — 45 minutes. Brush with hot sauce mixture. Move duck directly over coals and grill, turning often, until skin is very crisp — several minutes. Garnish with scallion curls and serve with the hot sauce as a dip.

Makes 4 servings.

too high or too low, the muscular force you must exert for chopping food, rolling piecrust or even serving food and organizing dishes can strain your shoulders, Ms. Steidl said.

—The sink rim should be 2-3 inches below elbow height when you're standing.

—Three inches below elbow height is also recommended for the range surface — unless you often stir sauces or hold an electric mixer for mashing potatoes and the like — in which case 6-7 inches is best.

Research for the first edition of the bulletin was done at Cornell with the cooperation of seven homemakers. To determine where sink, range, mix, refrigerator and china centers would be best located, the homemakers prepared, served and cleaned up more than 100 meals. The cleanup was all by hand, using dish drainers for dishes and utensils to air-dry as much as time permitted.

N.C. Could Expand Markets

Northeastern North Carolina a major exporting area?

Rachael Pittman, formerly a Wake Forest economics professor, thinks it can be done.

Our state is eighth in exports of agricultural products, but tobacco accounts for about half of the $970 million annual figure.

Mrs. Pittman anticipates that exports of corn and sweet potatoes may reflect an increase soon. She works for Alliance for Progress, Inc. an organization of six northeastern counties.

If studies justify it, the consortium hopes to set up a corporation to bring farmers and overseas buyers together. Western Europe is the first goal.

We have no doubt that it can be done. United States farmers are the envy of the world in their production methods. Some farm products are heavily marketed overseas, but there must further be potential demand for peanuts, soybeans, sweet potatoes and other products.

With proper selling methods and promotion, North Carolina farm products can find new untapped markets around the world.

All of us will benefit.

Green's Decision May Pose Difficulty

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has decided against a run for the governorship next year.

He had been considered a major possibility to make the run against Gov. Hunt.

Instead Green will seek re-election as lieutenant governor. But that might put him in a fight with House Speaker Carl J. Stewart.

Since Green and Stewart are both highly respected that race would put most North Carolina Democrats in the position of making a difficult choice.

Attitudes Affect Courts

By BILL NOBLITT (2nd of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — The state's Speedy Trial Law in less than a year of operation has demonstrated that it can provide an effective means to guarantee both the public and the defendant prompt disposition of criminal charges.

But there are some loose ends which, if not knit up, can bring rejection of the policy by both court officials and the public.

judges and prosecutors and clerks will be required? A public outcry would follow, concludes Andrew S. Lasine, and justifiably so.

Lasine is the author of a study of the state's Speedy Trial Law during its early months of operation. He is a student at Duke University's Institute of Policy Sciences and Public Affairs.

A careful study of the Durham County Superior Court caseload and disposition pattern in one month before the law took effect, and the same month a year later provides the foundation for Lasine's conclusions.

charges against 42 percent (per defendant) and 36 percent (per case) of its caseload unless immediate action was taken... one might speculate that at this point the district attorney was forced to offer concessions to these defendants in order to avoid the dismissal sanction of the speedy trial law.

"This calls into question the validity of the district attorney's efforts in meeting the requirements of the speedy trial law", Lasine states.

problem unless there is a change of attitude on the part of court personnel, particularly the district attorneys.

Lasine feels that the most positive benefit of the Speedy Trial Law is in forcing "those individuals who are responsible to re-evaluate the organization and procedures which cause excessive pretrial delay in order to formulate a more coherent response to the extreme demands of today's criminal caseload.

Lasine, in his report, spells out several suggested changes in the law designed to make the system more effective: centralized calendar management instead of letting the district attorneys schedule the cases; calendaring by priority of the charge instead of the date charges were lodged; a screening system to eliminate unwarranted cases from the courts; a required meeting between prosecution and defense to go over all evidence; and an early deadline for plea bargaining, after which no pleas or reduction of charges can be considered are among those.

BILL NOBLITT

Resistance

Given court resistance to the new law and the propensity of prosecutors to delay until the deadline approaches, Lasine warns that defendants will begin deliberately appealing and clogging the system to serve their own interests. He also warns that additional court resources will not effectively tackle the Already some courts have dismissed charges against defendants not brought to trial within the current 120-day time limit, and both judges and district attorneys are beginning to complain publicly about the difficulty of meeting the law's demands.

In October, 1979, that limit is cut to 90 days, and the pressure will intensify. Under the law, the prosecutor must be ready for trial within the time limit or the judge can dismiss charges.

After World War III

(Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.—Editor)

Anyone who doubts that the federal government is prepared for World War III just doesn't know how organized Washington really is. A short time ago someone who works for the Treasury Department received his instructions in writing on what he has to do in case of enemy attack.

They read as follows, and I haven't made a word of it up: "...all National Office Employees with or without emergency assignments should follow this procedure. If you are prevented from going to your regular place of work because of an enemy attack, keep this instruction in mind: GO TO THE NEAREST POST OFFICE, ASK THE POSTMASTER FOR A FEDERAL EMPLOYEE REGISTRATION CARD (sample shown on reverse side), FILL IT OUT AND RETURN IT TO HIM. He will see that it is forwarded to the office of the Civil Service Commission which will maintain the registration file for your area. When the Civil Service Commission receives your card, we will be notified. We can then decide where and when you should report for work.... You should obtain and complete your registration card as soon after enemy attack as possible, but not until you are reasonably sure where you will be staying for a few days...."

Nobody believes it will ever happen, but let us suppose that Robert Smiley (a fictitious person working for the Treasury Department) has just crawled out of the rubble after an enemy attack, and remembers the instructions concerning civil defense for federal employees.

Invents To Fill Needs

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — The way to pick a lock is to stick two straight pickers in the keyhole and pick away. Jacob Rabinow can do it with a pair of straightened paper clips.

So if you want to invent a pickproof lock, invent one that requires a crooked key. That's what Jacob Rabinow did.

"I'm not going to say flatly that my lock can't be picked," he said. "I know I can't pick it. I've given it to the best lock experts I know and they can't pick it either."

The key, as it were, is the key.

It is a razor-thin strip of wavy sheet metal that snakes its way into the keyhole. A straight tool, a pick, won't go in. The only thing that will go in is something just that thin with just the right combination of waves. A radically different key.

"That's what an inventor works," Rabinow said. "You see what the problem is and design something to solve it.

"Sometimes it requires a radical change. If so, even if your invention is beautiful, logical and works perfectly, it will probably fail. People don't like radical changes in things they're used to."

Jacob Rabinow should know. His lock and key were his 211th and 212th inventions patented in the United States. He owns 215 American patents and more than 100 patents in foreign countries.

That might not come close to Thomas Edison's 1,093 patents, the most awarded to any American, but it does make Jacob Rabinow one of the better known names around the U.S. Patent Office. "He's quite an ingenious man," a Patent Office worker said.

Quite. Framed citations to his ingenuity paper a whole wall of his office in the basement of

Connally's Populist Push

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

flatly opposed to any constitutional amendment dealing with abortion.

This coincides with the announcement of support for Connally by premier right-wing fund raiser Richard Viguerie, an ardent foe of abortion. While there is no sign Viguerie's support was conditional on Connally softening his abortion position, Connally's courtship of the "New Right" cannot help but encourage the old complaint that Big John is an opportunist who will go wherever the votes are.

There was certainly no doubt where Connally stood on abortion March 19 when he was interviewed for Politics Today magazine by Alan Baron, a former aide to Sen. George McGovern: "I am against federal funding of abortions. I'm also against any constitutional amendment relating to the subject in one way or another."

The trouble with that was Connally's inadequate power base. While a lion among the Fortune "500" (who care not at all about abortion), he was of no account among the "New Right" populists (who care deeply about it). Connally campaign manager Eddie Mahe, eager to soften Connally's stand, asked his candidate: since a president is left out of the amendment process constitutionally, why not just say you are "not opposing it?" Connally saw nothing wrong with that.

Inexplicably, however, Connally did not follow that formula when he met privately with "New Right" leaders on Capitol Hill June 28. After first agreeing to give us the record of the meeting, Connally's staff later reneged. After we heard a tape recording, the Connally camp's desire for secrecy became understandable.

The session was a disaster. New Right leaders were displeased with Connally's answers on SALT, Lyndon Johnson's Great Society, labor relations, and — most important from the standpoint of the militant Christians present — ERA and abortion. It was still no on the "human life" amendment, "LBJ with charisma," snorted one New Rightist.

About this time, the issue of Politics Today containing the Connally interview was published. McGovern himself was so pleasantly surprised by Connally's liberalism that he took the Senate floor to apologize for past attacks on Connally. Nor were Connally's managers upset by the article, expressing interest in getting reprints for mass distribution.

Simultaneously, Connally was negotiating with Viguerie, a fellow Texan and long-time admirer. During their conversations, Connally used the formulation earlier suggested by campaign manager Mahe, saying he neither supported nor opposed a constitutional amendment. Viguerie passed that word on to New Right friends who had pleaded with him not to join Connally.

(Greensboro Daily News)

It bothers us not a whit that Jimmy Carter, trumpeter of government merit selection, has nudged aside his principles and decided to give 1980 census-taking jobs to political patronage appointments.

The decision, we suspect, did not come lightly. It came, in fact, only months after Carter waged a hard-fought struggle for congressional passage of his civil service act. That law, you will recall, precludes patronage appointments for most government jobs. But buried in the fine print of the civil service act is the prerogative for a president to waive the law for reasons of "good administration." Carter chose to apply the waiver.

Whether "Good administration" was at the core of the President's decision or pure old-fashioned politics, we can't be sure. The scales seem to tilt more heavily on the side of earning political brownie points.

But aside from the politics of the thing, there is something to be said on the side of "good administration." Most of the census-taking jobs are of short duration, usually just a few weeks, and it would be inordinately cumbersome to subject these jobs to the time-consuming tangle of merit examinations and all the other red tape that civil service jobs demand. And by giving himself a flexible hand with these appointments, Carter has promised to hire more blacks and Hispanics — minorities which have complained that the poor have been "undercounted" in past censuses.

So mark one up for Carter on the side of bending principles a bit. For our money, it won't damage good government one whit.

In an effort to relieve traffic congestions on Evans Street and Dickinson Avenue caused by trucks parking double or on the wrong side of the street during loading and unloading operations, the Board of Aldermen last night passed an ordinance setting aside certain zones for such purposes.

The ordinance, effective upon its ratification last night, also makes it against the law for a person to park in the designated zones for any purpose other than loading and unloading.

The system was worked out by Chief of Police G.A. Clark, who has been studying various plans to relieve the congested situation in the business sections of the city.

Chief Clark also announced that he was going to crack down on the one-hour parking limit in the main business section.

Chief of Police George Clark last night was instructed to investigate the "stray dog" situation in Greenville when the Board of Aldermen disclosed that the situation was getting worse throughout the city.

WALKING A TIGHTROPE
Tightrope walkers usually give a thrilling and hair-raising performance for those who watch them. But thrilling as this spectacle is when viewed on a stage or at the circus, it is a miserable procedure when people employ it in the realm of moral decision-making.

Some people never make clean-cut decisions on moral issues. They straddle, compromise, evade, and put on a performance as notable in its way as that of the tightrope walker. They have none of the tightrope walker's appeal, however.

No one evokes contempt more quickly than the person who has no fixed or solid ideals, who is always ambivalent, who responds only to the impulses of comfort, desire, and appetite.

Making moral decisions is never easy. Moreover, sometimes with the best of intentions, we make the wrong decisions. But at least, once we have made them, our feet are on the ground. We are no longer on the tightrope.

Optimism, Cynicism Teamed

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Would you agree with this statement: "We never know what tomorrow will bring, so it is important to enjoy life today, even if it's necessary to incur some debts to do so?"

A sampling of American youth, said to be a cross-section of those in the 14-to-25-year age bracket, did agree. Seventy-one percent of them, in fact, compared with 66 percent in 1976 and 63 percent in 1974.

Call the results what you will — irresponsibility, expectation of annihilation from the bomb, or a financial permissiveness that bespeaks the times. There's probably more than one simple explanation.

It is your own fault, however, if you jump to the conclusion that it represents a growing liberalism, because the rest of the survey shows youth is growing conservative.

Conducted every two years by the American Council of Life Insurance, the survey, everything considered, revealed this much, according to the researcher, Robert O'Connor: "Young Americans today are becoming noticeably more conservative in their basic attitudes toward life styles. Sixty-five percent say they would like to adopt a traditional life style, a good job, a satisfying family life, a pleasant neighborhood and a role in the community."

They believe that it is important to save regularly and that each individual is responsible for her or his own financial well-being. Hard work, they believe overwhelmingly, almost always pays off.

They believe people should try to live more simply and get along with fewer material possessions, that religious belief is important, that education should get back to the basics, and that grown children should be responsible for their parents and not depend on government aid.

To a great extent the results seem consistent with the wrap provided by O'Connor, that youth recognizes and adheres to the basic values, and doesn't feel burdened by the responsibility of taking care of itself.

But what about that attitude toward debt that seems so inconsistent with the pattern. Youth believes in saving; but it believes in blowing money on a good time too.

There's always the chance that the question influences the answer, and in this instance the chance is probably higher than usual. Confusingly phrased in three different persons, it read: "WE never know what tomorrow will bring, so I think it is important to enjoy life today, even if YOU have to incur some debts to do it."

But there's also the likelihood that the answer represents the true feeling of young people. It isn't unreasonable to assume that amidst all their optimism for the future there is a grain of cynicism too.

It is probably expressed in the attitude that it is foolish to save if inflation steals it; that you can get more enjoyment for the dollar by spending before it shrinks; that you can repay in cheaper dollars.

When there is a two-way finesse for a queen, many players make it a practice to play as though the queen were over the jack. Barring any knowledge to the contrary, this theory will produce the desired result half the time. But when the location of the queen can be determined beyond the shadow of a doubt, declarer is remiss indeed if he fails to "pick her up."

The auction requires little comment. North might have been content to raise to only three diamonds at his second turn. Though this would have been a simple preference, the fact that he had initially responded at the two-level in a suit higher-ranking than opener's already marked him for a good hand. That would have permitted South to bid three no trump if he had a spade stopper. However, the final contract would have been the same.

West led the king of spades and East followed with the deuce. Note that the play of the queen would have been incorrect—that is not the start of an echo with a doubleton, but specifically shows a queen-jack combination, which allows partner to underlead the ace if he wishes to put you on lead. That would not have worked out well in this case.

For want of anything better to do, West continued with the ace of spades and then a third round. Declarer ruffed high in dummy and drew trumps in two rounds. The contract now hinged on locating the queen of clubs, so declarer played West for the queen—"over the jack, partner." This was not a reassuring success, and the contract was down one.

Since West was known to have started with six spades, East rated to have longer clubs and therefore, was more likely to hold the queen. But declarer could have found out for sure by simply taking pains to cash the high hearts and then ruffing the other two hearts.

He would have ascertained that West held six spades, four hearts and two diamonds, and thus only one club. So declarer could lead a club to the king and, when West followed with the nine, return a club to his jack in the sure knowledge that the finesse had to succeed.

The citations, however, don't tell how Rabinow's ingenuity has affected the daily lives of Americans. For instance:

He invented a machine that would read print; he invented a magnetic disc file to store data for computers; he invented a card-sorting machine for the Census Bureau.

Put them all together. Behold: the machine that sorts the mail at the post office.

"When I invented the mail-sorting machine, they didn't want it at first. They said, 'What the hell is some longhair at the Bureau of Standards doing trying to tell us how to run the post office.'"

"That was back when the post office was still a big patronage operation. The mail-sorting machine meant fewer jobs for politicians to pass around. That's what I mean about making radical changes in peoples' lives. It takes a while."

nally met with evangelical leaders (including some who attended the disastrous June 28 meeting in Washington). Connally's aides are reticent to reveal what was said or even say who was in the group.

One conservative who attended both the June 28 and Aug. 2 meetings was Ed McAteer, national field director of the Conservative Caucus. Reached by telephone in Taiwan, he told us Connally said that if convinced of "a biblical basis" for the anti-abortion cause, he would "take another look" at the amendment.

Connally similarly asked the clergymen for biblical citations that might alter his previous support of the ERA, which had been reaffirmed in the Politics Today interview and the June 28 meeting. The visitors left the ranch with a considerably elevated opinion of Connally. Robert Billings, head of the National Christian Action Coalition, told us Connally "had done his homework this time and knew where we were coming from."

But what should Connally do now? His managers don't want to publicize a change on abortion so soon after publication of a markedly different position. Furthermore, the anti-abortion movement will never embrace Connally unless he actually endorses their amendment (as Ronald Reagan has). Connally, therefore, has failed to follow the only safe course on abortion: take a clear position quickly, then shut up and don't change it.

Overall, Connally's flirtation with right-wing populism is flopping. Viguere on board has worried Connally's moderates without bringing along the New Right, including one leader who told us: "Figuratively speaking, Connally wants to sleep in every bed. He cannot be everything to everybody." Even if that was untrue in the Democratic party when Connally helped lead it, its validity in today's Republican party is undeniable.

Smiley staggers out into the road and starts walking again. Four hundred miles up the highway he finds another post office. After catching his breath, he takes the card shakingly to the counter and starts to fill it out. But the pen won't work. He informs the postmaster of this, and the postmaster replies, "We know it, but there's nothing we can do about it. There's a war on."

"But I've got to register," says Smiley. "or the Civil Service Commission won't know where I am in case the United States Treasury wants to start up again. Couldn't I borrow your pen?"

"What? And ruin the point? Listen, why don't you go over to the Smithtown post office. I hear their pens are still in working order."

Clutching the card, Smiley walks 60 miles to Smithtown, where he fills it out. He mails it that very day.

Years later, Smiley is still waiting for a reply. For in his haste and fatigue, Smiley had forgotten to write down his return ZIP code.

Sally-Jane Provided A Pleasing 2-Act Show

The vicissitudes of the liberated woman in American society today gets dazzling reportage in word and song from that inimitable woman on the scene, Sally-Jane Heit.

As was true in the first two Summer Theater productions, "It's Not My Fault (The Heit Report)" is a case of the small-scale Fletcher Recital Hall being a perfect showcase for Edgar Loessin's production. Best of all, it gives the viewer the chance to see at close range the lovely, expressive face—in action, a delightful cross between the facial mobility of Judy Canova and the beauty of Ginger Rogers.

Act One is the finer half of the two act show. In a quick paced series of brief monologues interwoven with songs, Ms. Heit succinctly nails down in illuminating flashes of wit and intelligence the absurdities, loneliness, longings and confusions underlying the great put-on the American liberated woman must withstand.

The obsession for communicating, for being "with it," for being fulfilled—all get a perceptive analysis worthy of the insight of the late Will Rogers.

A matching duo, "Miss America," and later in the act (20 years later), "Mrs. America" together form a splendid parody of the inanities of that cherished American female spectacle, the beauty contest. In the "Miss America" bit Sally-Jane is a hilariously funny southern belle whose talent is making a salad concocted of a lettuce leaf, a banana and Post-Toasties. Twenty years later, as "Mrs. America" the same dumb blonde tells how she is a saved again person, led by the Lord from salad to sermon.

Among lots of good things in this act are songs of different times, and mores, including a favorite old chestnut, "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now," a today song, "Disco Bar Lady," a musical tribute to all the artificial ingredients in foods—"Fast Food Waltz," and one that reveals the full range of Ms. Heit's singing talent, "Somebody's Wrong."

Act II is by ordinary standards entertaining, but it does not have the saucy, leaping, breathless luster of Act I. Somewhat a compacted miniature soap opera, it suffers mostly from being a repeat version of many situations dealt with so entertainingly in the first Act. Nonetheless, there are some highly redeeming things here too, especially the song "Where Is Mummy's Valium?"

tributions to the pleasures of Ms. Heit's report.

It's good to have Sally-Jane Heit back with us, and, the passing years have done nothing to diminish the charm of this lovable woman who also happens to be a talented entertainer. "It's Not My Fault (The Heit Report)" is showing nightly at 8:15 through Saturday night. Ticket can be reserved by calling 757-6390.

Prime-Time For Johnny

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, hoping to continue being the network that says "Here's Johnny!," is reportedly offering late-night talk-show host Johnny Carson a prime-time spot for his 17th anniversary show. ABC has reportedly been offering a three-year $15 million deal to the comedian, who said recently he wanted to quit the nightly grind.

The New York Daily News said in today's editions that NBC offered the "Tonight" star the 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. slot on Oct. 1. Previous Carson anniversary shows have been presented at his regular 11:30 p.m. starting time.

More than $14,300 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police here yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 10:50 p.m. mishap at 1408 East Wright Road.

Investigators said a car driven by Elmer Bruce Whitehurst of 1910 East Fourth St. first struck a car parked on East Wright Road, then continued on and crashed into a car, owned by John Andrew Kovalchick of 1408 East Wright Rd. which was parked in the yard of the dwelling.

The force of the impact with the first Kovalchick vehicle sent that car crashing into two other vehicles owned by Kovalchick, one of which then crashed through Kovalchick's garage door, damaging the door, a lawnmower and other items inside the structure.

Police, who are continuing their investigation and estimate of damage from the mishap, said damage to the five vehicles involved would total some $5,000.

Whitehurst was charged with driving under the influence and careless and reckless driving in connection with the incident.

A 12:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greene Street and Mumford Road, saw vehicles driven by Allen Oliver Spain of Route 6, Greenville, and James Cecil Chapman of 1404 Allen St. collide, injuring Spain and a passenger in his truck as well as Chapman.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $4,000 to the Spain truck and $800 to the Chapman car.

Cars driven by Thomas Benjamin Brown of 316 Rutledge Rd. and Judy Diane Boyd of Route 1, Pinetown, collided about 5:17 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard.

Police, who reported Ms. Boyd was injured in the collision, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Brown car and $2,000 to the Boyd auto.

Brown was charged with failing to yield the right of way in connection with the incident.

DaVanzo Named To State Board

RALEIGH — Dr. John P. DaVanzo of Greenville, a professor of pharmacology in the School of Medicine, East Carolina University, has been appointed to a two-year term on the North Carolina Board of Science and Technology, according to Governor James Hunt.

DeVanzo joins 11 other persons from across the state on the board, formerly called the Science and Technology Committee.

Couple Won 1979 Award

MORRISON AWARD—Foster and Marion Fitz-Simons were joint recipients of the 1979 Morrison Award for 1979 at a ceremony held recently at "The Lost Colony" Theater in Manteo. Both have appeared intermittently in the outdoor drama between 1939 and 1976. (Photo by J. Foster Scott, Dare County Tourist Bureau)

MANTEO—A man-and-wife team who have had prominent careers in theater and in theater education are the recipients of the Morrison Award for 1979.

Foster and Marions Fitz-Simons are the joint recipients and were awarded the honor recently at "The Lost Colony" Waterside Theater in Manteo.

The award, created by the people of Dare County, is given to a person "who has demonstrated, through the highest standards of excellence, significant achievement and creative accomplishment in writing, producing, directing, and performance in drama, music, the dance and other aspects of the Performing Arts." The award is named for Mr. and Mrs. Morrison of Washington, D.C.

Previous recipients include Paul Green, Andy Griffith, Sidney Blackmer and Edwing Gill, among others.

A 1934 graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill, Foster Fitz-Simons was an instructor in the Dramatic Arts Dept. from 1942 until his retirement. For four years he danced with the Ted Shawn Dancers, then for four years was in dance partnership with Miriam Winslow. He was an instructor in Modern Dance at Jacob's Pillow. In 1949, his novel, "Bright Leaf" was published and was later made into a movie starring Gary Cooper.

Foster Fitz-Simons has been choreographer both at "The Lost Colony" and "Unto These Hills."

Marion Fitz-Simons has played the roles of Jane Jones, Dame Coleman and Queen Elizabeth at "The Lost Colony." At "Unto These Hills," she was a costumer and taught silver jewelry crafting.

After graduating from UNC-Chapel Hill, Marion Fitz-Simons toured with a company doing the plays of Ibsen, performed in a New England Stock company, and taught and directed plays at Hood College and at UNC-Greensboro.

In 1965 she became Assistant Academic Dean of the N. C. School of the Arts, where she taught English, writing, and theater history. Still active with Carolina Playmakers, one of her recent roles was in "Native Son," at the Paul Green Theater in Chapel Hill.

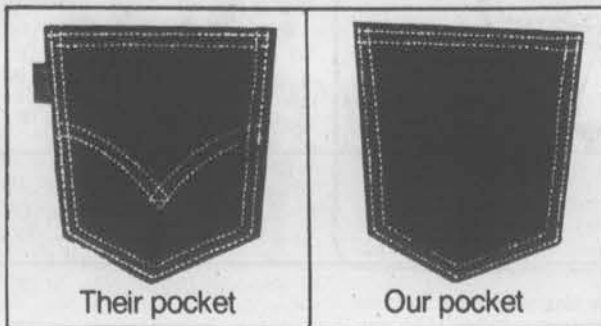

Throughout their careers, the Fitz-Simons have maintained residence in Chapel Hill, Winston-Salem and Nags Head. They have four sons — the youngest, Haskell, is currently working with "The Lost Colony."

Jewelry Likely Underinsured

NEW YORK (UPI)—If your jewelry is worth more than $500, the chances are good you are underinsured in these days of rising prices for gold and precious stones, says The Insurance Information Institute, a trade association.

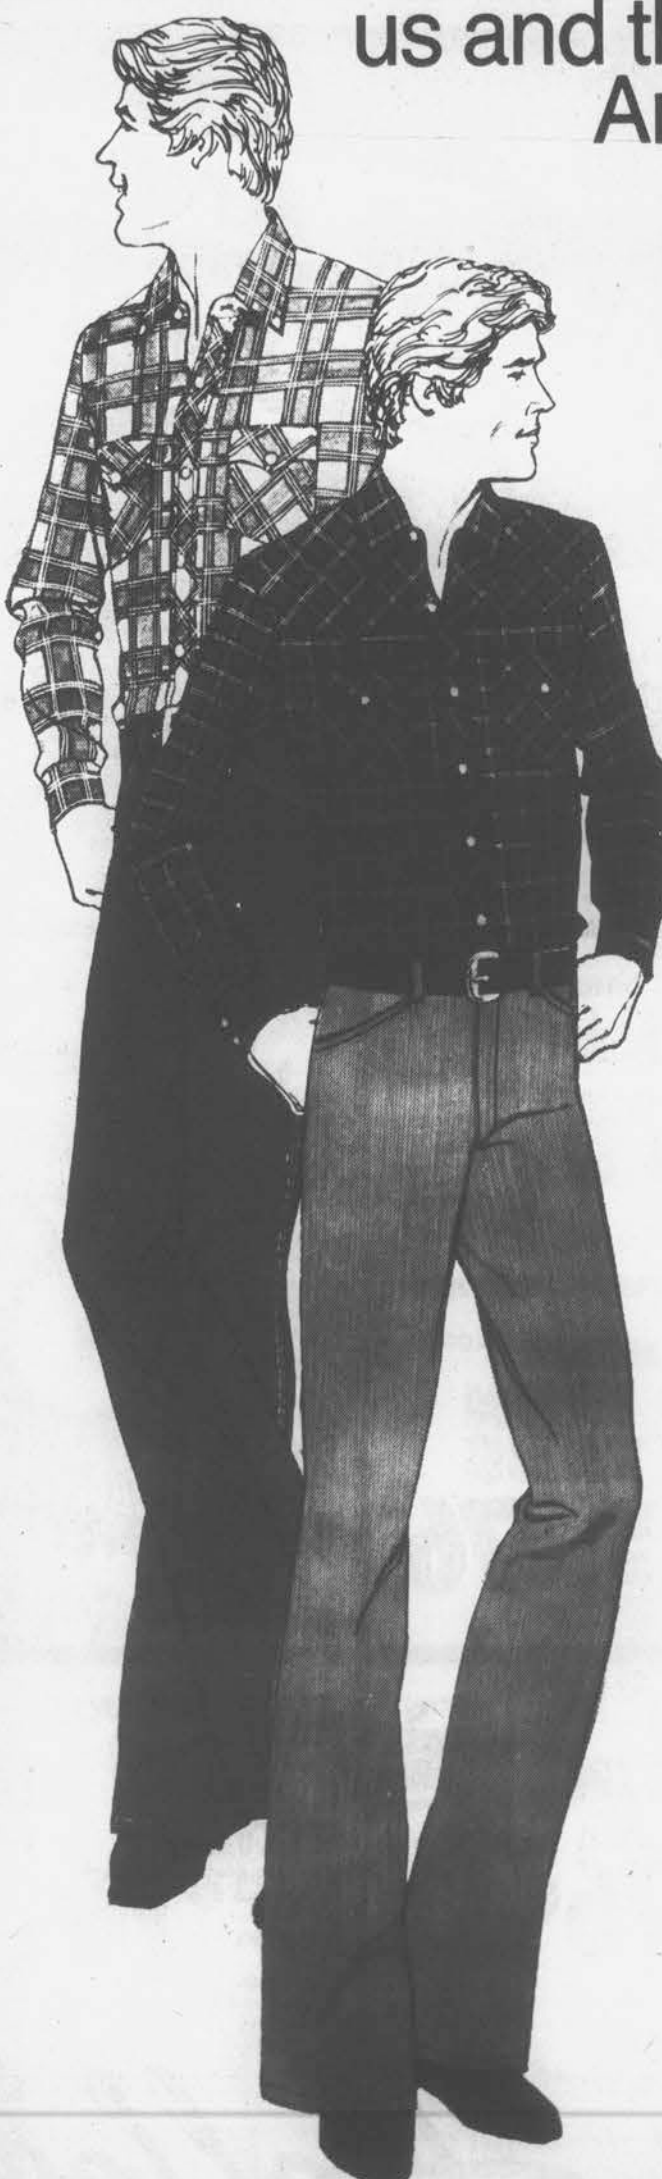

Most homeowner policies cover theft losses only up to $500 per incident for all stolen jewelry — including precious and semi-precious stones, necklaces, bracelets, rings, gold and platinum, the group says. It recommends added coverage, either an extension of your homeowner policy or a personal articles floater.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cooler weather is expected in the period until Thursday morning for most of the eastern half of the nation. Warm weather is forecast for the West. Showers are expected for New Mexico-Colorado and from the Plains to the Mississippi Valley. (AP Laser-photo Map)

A cold front was moving southward from Canada and New England today, circulating cooler air and cloudiness through North Carolina. Skies should clear tonight and cooler temperatures were expected to be felt by this afternoon.

The forecast called for high temperatures today to hold in the 70s in the mountains and the 80s elsewhere while low readings tonight will drop to the upper 40s in the mountains and range to the 60s in the southeast.

Thursday is expected to be sunny with highs from near 80 in the northeast to the low to mid 80s elsewhere except the mountains, where the 70s will prevail.

Little or no rain is expected from the new front passing through the state. Rain has been scarce so far this month with the last falling in some areas last Sunday.

Temperatures were some warmer Tuesday than they were Monday, reaching the high 80s in some areas. Fayetteville was one of the warmest spots with a high of 89 degrees.

Most Could Do Murder

UNIVERSITY, Ala. (UPI) — Given the right circumstances, most people could probably commit murder, says Dr. Richard Parlour, an associate professor of psychiatry at the College of Community Health Sciences.

Under enough stress and in certain situations, most people are capable of violent acts, even murder, says Parlour, who has worked extensively in criminal behavior. He adds that it's almost impossible to predict who will commit a violent crime or when.

Parlour says signs such as the following may indicate a need to seek professional help "before you do something you know to be wrong and dangerous to yourself and others:

- Living by impulse instead of with a plan;
- Emotional decontrol or the loss of control of emotionality;
- Excessive use of drugs and alcohol;
- Loss of morals or loss of desire for self-improvement.

Parlour says "tranquilizing drugs and sessions with a psychiatrist or psychologist may help you forget your problems or allow you to blow off steam, but they may not necessarily help you to become a better person."

What's needed, he adds, is therapy that helps you learn new skills, new satisfactions and new understandings that you won't lose and that cannot be taken away.

PAROLES PLANNED

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Park Chung-hee's government says it will parole 53 more political prisoners in honor of independence day. Since President Carter's visit, 139 prisoners have been released. More than 300 more are said still held for political dissent.

Inmates Slash Their Wrists

WALPOLE, Mass. (AP) — Walpole State Prison authorities stepped up surveillance today of rebel inmates who have slashed their wrists twice in the last two days, but they haven't taken away the men's razors.

The rebels, all in the maximum security prison's protective custody block, remained locked in their cells around the clock for the third day at the 23-year-old white-walled prison. "A doctor is on call and we're keeping more of an eye on them," Larry Parnell, Correction Department spokesman, said Tuesday. "But there has been no determination about taking away their razor blades, as far as I know. They are all allowed to have toilet articles."

"The problem is that when you start taking away their property, even if it is razor blades, you can create more of a problem than you solve."

Five inmates slashed their wrists Tuesday, Parnell said. Those five and two others had cut themselves Monday. They are among nine inmates involved in a protest last month in which five persons were held hostage. Parnell said he believes the wrist-slashing is a coordinated protest against the assignment of certain guards.

He acknowledged that the men used razor blades to cut their wrists both days. He said that taking the blades away "certainly is a possibility but it has not come to that yet."

None of the inmates was injured seriously Tuesday. They were treated at the prison infirmary and returned to their cells, Parnell said.

Authorities also made a psychiatrist available to the inmates, but they refused to see one, Parnell said. He said "a lot of things are being considered" to remedy the situation. "I really couldn't go into it. Obviously we're concerned that they're continuing to injure themselves."

The lockup, which began because of alleged harassment of prison guards, continued Tuesday because the "problems had not diminished," Parnell said. Under such conditions, prisoners are allowed out only to see visitors and to take showers.

'Full-Speed-Ahead' On Shetleymobile Engine

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Mike Shetley is driving full-speed-ahead with plans to mass produce what he maintains will be the country's first fuel-conscious car, but a number of variables could brake his ambition or at least shift it down a gear or two.

Those variables might affect the opening of Shetley's Life Style Cars Inc. in Gastonia, a plant which he has said will employ 200 workers and turn out 10,000 cars before the end of this year.

First, Shetley must receive Environmental Protection Agency approval to sell his engine in the U.S. On the subject of when and how he plans to accomplish that goal, Shetley has been optimistic, but vague.

The former Gastonian, who now lives and tests his highly publicized Shetleymobile in Brevard County, Fla., voices no worry that he'll meet EPA's emission control standards and prove his engine gets 80 or more miles to the gallon under highway conditions. He has been saying for the past week or so that approval will be secured following trials next week in California, after he visits Gastonia on Aug. 20.

But EPA knows of no such timetable. Dick Harrington, EPA emissions control division engineer at Shetley's first test 2½ weeks ago in Ann Arbor, Mich., says California approval will mean only that the engine can be sold in California. To legally market Shetleymobiles in the other 49 states, Harrington says, will require passing marks at the only official EPA car emission testing lab in the U.S. — Ann Arbor.

Shetley flunked those tests on first go-round. Harrington says the California Air Resources Board (CARB) uses the same equipment as EPA and employs the same test procedures. California, the only state to set emission control standards additional to federal regulations, makes different demands than EPA.

Some standards are higher, says Harrington, but others are lower — hence qualifying in the Golden State doesn't turn on Uncle Sam's green light.

Neither is CARB aware of Shetley's plans, according to Norm Kyne in the California engineering lab. "We've heard of the engine," he said. "But it's not on the schedule for testing."

Pressed for specific dates of CARB testing, Shetley conceded Monday that the paperwork hasn't been completed but should be ready in time for testing "sometime after" he brings his modified Mercury Capri to Gastonia next week. Both men have said they anticipate production getting under way next month.

The Capri is the car Henderson Belk of Charlotte drove last week in Daytona Beach to come home ecstatic about getting 85.1 miles to the gallon under highway conditions. Belk subsequently agreed to help finance Shetley's Gastonia assembly plant but said the agreement hinged on EPA approval and indicated it probably would be forthcoming in a

Orville Held Long Grudge

By PATRICK J. KILLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Smithsonian was essential. Abbot expressed regrets for certain early statements made by Smithsonian officials about the Wrights and Langley, and directed that the label on the Langley plane be changed to read: "The original Samuel Langley Flying Machine of 1903, restored."

Documents show the long delay was caused in part by Orville Wright's sharp differences with the Smithsonian Institution and by World War II.

The famous plane, made mostly of spruce and unbleached muslin, now hangs "in the highest place of honor" just inside the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum north entrance.

But in the early years of the century it was displayed only briefly in the United States before Orville lent the plane to England's South Kensington museum in 1928. Orville died in 1948 and the plane was returned the same year to the United States at his request.

The Wright brothers made their first four flights in the plane on Dec. 17, 1903. Earlier that year, another flight pioneer, Samuel Pierpont Langley, the Smithsonian secretary, tried and failed twice to catapult his own piloted plane into flight.

In 1914, the Langley plane was reconstructed, slightly modified and flown by Glenn Curtiss, the defendant in a patent suit brought by the Wrights.

Subsequently, the Langley plane was placed in the Smithsonian and labeled "the first man-carrying aeroplane in the history of the world capable of sustained free flight."

Orville Wright objected to the label.

Charles G. Abbot, who became Smithsonian secretary in 1928, wrote reports that year and again in 1942 dealing with the Langley-Wright controversy and Orville's contention "a correction of history by the Smithsonian was essential." Abbot expressed regrets for certain early statements made by Smithsonian officials about the Wrights and Langley, and directed that the label on the Langley plane be changed to read: "The original Samuel Langley Flying Machine of 1903, restored."

"If the publication of this paper should clear the way for Dr. Wright to bring back to America the Kitty Hawk machine to which all the world awards first place, it will be a source of profound and enduring gratification to his countrymen everywhere. Should he decide to deposit the plane in the United States National Museum, it would be given the highest place of honor, which is its due," Abbot wrote.

That appeal, contained in the 1942 report, satisfied Orville but travel across the Atlantic was hazardous during World War II and it was six years before the Kitty Hawk Flyer finally returned. It came in the original boxes the Wright brothers sent the plane from their bicycle shop in Dayton, Ohio, to the North Carolina beach.

Paul Garber, the Air and Space Museum's historian emeritus, recalled recently that he was sent to New York to receive the plane. But when he got there he learned the ship had been rerouted because of an impending dock strike and he finally took possession of the plane in Halifax, N.S.

Faced with a transportation problem, Garber said he called his World War II Navy flag officer, Adm. Melvin Pride.

"This is Commander Garber," he said. "I'm in Halifax with the Wright brothers' Kitty Hawk Flyer and I don't even have a wheelbarrow. Could you have someone come and get me?"

"Good God, Garber, you think of the damndest things," the admiral replied.

"If I lived near you I'd have a great place to get the Great Eyeglass Guarantee."

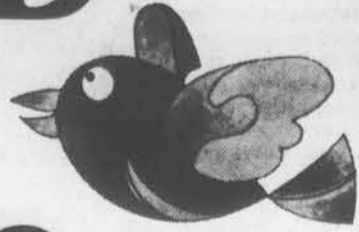

Some big stars get their glasses at PEARLE Vision Center. One reason is, our Great Eyeglass Guarantee. It says for one year from purchase we'll fix or replace broken frames and lenses at no charge. True To Form

WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest misadventure in the diplomatic career of Andrew Young puts him in the middle of the kind of furor that has characterized his tenure as ambassador to the United Nations.

Young's meeting last month with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization, covered up by him and then acknowledged Tuesday by the State Department, is almost certain to arouse more calls for his ouster.

And it will do nothing to enhance what supporters say is his real contribution to American policy: a greater appreciation of and sensitivity toward the ideas and aspirations of Third World countries, particularly in Africa.

Young's gaffes began shortly after he took office. He accused former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger of abandoning Great Britain in its efforts to achieve black majority rule in what is now Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

Least the British feel smug, he told the British Broadcasting Corp. the British "almost invented racism" and were "a little chicken" about facing up to it.

That prompted a British demand for an apology, which Young tendered. In a short while, however, he had accused four former presidents, the Soviet Union and Sweden of racism.

Young made headlines in another area when he said the Cuban troops in Angola were a "stabilizing influence," despite U.S. policy calling for their removal.

He predicted the Ayatollah Khomeini would be considered a saint someday. He said the executions in Iran did not seem much different to him than the execution of a murderer in Florida. And when the Soviets were trying political prisoners like Anatoly Sheharansky, Young said he thought there were political prisoners in the United States as well.

Amb. Young Admits Violating Policy

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young says he didn't exactly tell the truth about his meeting last month with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

But, rebuked by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, he defends his talk with the PLO official as in the best interest of the United States.

"I acted as an intelligent ambassador dealing with a difficult situation," Young said in New York Tuesday.

The session was in apparent violation of longstanding U.S. policy to steer clear of substantive discussions with the PLO until it accepts Israel's right to exist.

Based on Young's first and evidently misleading account, the State Department on Monday dismissed his July 23 meeting with Zehdi Labib Terzi, the PLO observer at the United Nations, as involving only "social amenities."

Young had brought his 6-year-old son, Andrew Jr., to the home of Abdala Yacoub Bishara, the Kuwaiti ambassador, and when Terzi appeared, the U.S. envoy left as quickly as he could, spokesman Thomas Reston had told reporters.

On Tuesday, an embarrassed Reston distributed a statement saying Young and Terzi had discussed the question of postponing a Security Council vote on the Palestinian issue.

At the time of the meeting, Young and other U.S. officials were openly pressing for delay of a new pro-Palestinian resolution — to be offered by Kuwait — in hopes of gaining time for a compromise acceptable to the PLO and Israel.

Debate on that resolution and related issues subsequently was postponed until Aug. 23.

Vance and other department officials, reporters were told, first learned of the meeting last Saturday — more than two weeks after it happened.

"In holding this discussion with Mr. Terzi, Ambassador Young acted on his own initiative and without authorization," the department said in a statement.

President Carter endorsed the statement, Reston said, and Vance "expressed his displeasure with the incident and the way it was handled" to Young on the telephone.

Later, in an interview with Israeli television, Young said he had informed the department that his meeting with Terzi was inadvertent.

"That was not quite true," Young said. But the ambassador also told reporters: "I did what I thought was in the best interests of my country."

Young's action drew a sharp protest from Israel and support from the PLO.

Ephraim Evron, the Israeli ambassador, telephoned Vance to protest the meeting. Evron told Vance it violated U.S. policy against negotiating with the PLO.

But Hatan I. Hussaini, director of the PLO information office, said if U.S. officials are punished for talking to Palestinian leaders "this will further damage the American image abroad and in the Arab world."

Compiled War Encyclopedia

By GEORGE W. HACKETT
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Got a question about World War II? Thomas Parrish has the answer at his fingertips.

He can tell you what went into those K-rations, which some GIs swore were secret weapons invented by the enemy.

He knows how the Jeep, the spine-snapping workhorse of the war, got its name.

He's aware of the unflattering but deadly accurate description given the LST. If you were a sailor or an infantryman sweating out a trip ashore on a flat-bottomed boat of this type, it was a "Large, Slow Target."

These facts, and more than 4,500 others, are found in the seven-pound, 767-page "Encyclopedia of World War II."

"It's a book that invites you inside, invites you to read," said Parrish, who worked more than six years compiling information by mail and telephone from his home in Berea, Ky.

"I dealt with 55 consultants around the globe, people with knowledge of one battle or another. They contributed ideas and manuscripts."

The five-page section on the Battle of the Bulge was written by Col. Charles MacDonald and the late Gen. S.L.A. Marshall. Their account was cross-checked by Hasso Von Manteuffel, the German general on the other side.

"There's no room for error in an encyclopedia," said Parrish. "My previous experience taught me that."

After graduation from Richmond Model High School in 1945, he did a hitch in the Army, obtained a degree from the University of Chicago, and worked for publishing houses in Chicago and New York City.

Returning to Kentucky, he joined the Council of the Southern Mountains as an editor but continued researching World War II.

"Many people feel that war is the most significant time in their lives and are interested in it. An interest in war certainly is no endorsement of it."

As a student of history, he has concluded that Pearl Harbor was "a series of goofs. But if you set out to pinpoint the guilt, where would you go?"

"Our culture trapped us. We didn't expect an attack from the Japanese. We thought they would move elsewhere. They, unfortunately, didn't look at it with American logic."

The idea for an encyclopedia was so simple that Parrish believed it had been done in the past.

"My friends kept telling me they had seen such a book somewhere. It didn't exist and that made it easy for me to find a publisher."

All reviews have been excellent and Parrish's finished product could become the standard reference work on the war. The American Library Association recently selected the text as one of the three outstanding books of the year in the historical field.

Despite brisk sales, Parrish isn't making any predictions. He guessed wrong years ago while employed by a publishing house that handled "The Family of Man."

Artist Claims Tangled Roots

By MARC LIFSHER
CUZCO, Peru (UPI) — "You're Jewish aren't you?" Peruvian artist Amilcar Salomon Zorrilla asks visiting tourists in his Cuzco studio.

The query seems strange coming from a man whose Inca Indian blood inspired him to create four sets of giant oil canvases portraying Peru's 14 Inca emperors.

"I'm Jewish too," the artist says. "My grandfather was a Chinese Jew whose ancestors fled the Spanish Inquisition to Shanghai, and my mother's family traces Jewish blood. I'm very proud of it and I'm also proud that my mother is descended from Inca royalty."

Salomon, the most widely exhibited modern Peruvian artist, has shown his work in 21 countries including Israel, which he considers one of his three spiritual homelands along with Peru and China.

"My father was very proud of his mixed-up background and told me we came from the famous Salomon family of Jewish-Chinese artists in Canton," said the 54-year-old artist, recalling his youth in the Andes mountain city of Ayacucho. "He was not a professional artist but he taught me how to draw."

Salomon joined the Peruvian navy at age 17 and became an engineering officer on a submarine. The art emerged when patriotic zeal inspired him to paint his first large oil, a detailed historical representation of the Peruvian-Chilean naval battle of Angamos in the 1879 War of the Pacific.

An impressed commander granted Salomon special permission to combine submarine work with study at the National School of Fine Arts. At graduation seven years later, the artist won out over the sailor and Salomon resigned from the navy.

Holding-The-Line May Prove To Be Flexible

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Carter and his new economic team are arguing for a hold-the-line approach to the nation's economy, don't expect them to follow that line out the window if things really get bad.
If it looks like unemployment will climb much above 7 percent, there is widespread agreement — even within the administration — that Carter will have a tough time resisting a tax cut. Indeed, he has said as much.

For the time being, the administration is crossing its collective fingers that the recession most experts agree is here will not be a bad one. The administration's official forecast is for a jobless rate of 6.9 percent, up from 5.7 percent currently.
However, a new unofficial assessment by top administration economists says unemployment could hit 8.2 percent, a level that would mean the hoped-for mild recession had become serious.
Carter's stated preference, in such circumstances, would be to cut payroll taxes, which for the most part are Social Security taxes. The reductions would be for both business and individuals.

Congressional Republicans have their own tax cut plan, which includes a 10 percent, or $28 billion, reduction in personal income taxes this year. For the moment, there is little support in the administration for cutting income taxes, although nothing can be ruled out in an election year, especially if the economy is going rapidly downhill.
The reason Miller, Carter and the new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Paul A. Volcker, want to keep a firm hand on the tiller of the economic ship of state stems from worry over inflation, still soaring at an annual rate of more than 13 percent.

"Inflation is a clear and present danger," said Miller at his swearing-in ceremony the other day. "It has struck at our nation's vitality. If it is not checked, then it will threaten our democratic system itself."
Volcker, who Carter named to replace Miller at the Fed, is independent of the White House and not technically a member of the Carter economic team. However, he has declared his intention to work closely with the White House, as they have common goals.

It is felt by these three, as they have indicated in their recent public statements, that relaxing economic policy, through a tax cut or otherwise, could worsen the inflation outlook. More money in consumers' hands means more buying, which means more upward pressure on prices — so the argument goes.
There is no basic difference between Miller and his predecessor, W. Michael Blumenthal, on this point. Blumenthal recently told a congressional committee that workers who have seen their incomes eroded by inflation in the last year must suffer the loss because to try to recover the lost buying power will only worsen inflation.

But a deteriorating economy, coupled with high inflation, could pinch Americans so much that the government will have to lower taxes to avoid widespread economic hardship.
Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps said the economic statistics during the next few months will probably decide the issue. "Whether we have a tax cut or not depends a lot on what the numbers will look like in the third quarter," she said in an interview.

While she agrees a cut in payroll taxes would be the best option for 1980, she said that raises the question of where the money to pay Social Security benefits would come from. "We've pushed that question aside for a long time."
"There's a possibility of some new thinking on that," she added. "One thing we can't do is cut Social Security benefits."

A Would-Be President

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — His administration would offer a spirit of forgiveness, Shirley Temple Black as vice president and a cabinet of God-fearing people.
That briefly sums up the aspirations of former Republican gubernatorial candidate Donald Badgley. The ex-state representative says he plans to combine those attributes in a run for the White House in 1980.
Propelled by a vision he had in 1968, Badgley, now a resident of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., said most laws would be abolished and the separation of church and state would end under his presidency.
"We only need one law, that of forgiveness," the former Guilford College community resident said in a recent interview.
He would not, however, be a human rights advocate. "I'm against human rights," he says.
For a running mate he wants Mrs. Black, but has not yet asked her if she will join his campaign. For his cabinet, he would gather around him "not leaders, but strong, God-fearing people of the kind I have met on the bus."
Badgley has been traveling through the nation by bus — 35 states already — in his campaign for the GOP nomination.

Consumers May Be Victimized
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some consumers might end up victimized by a government program requiring utilities to offer "energy audits" showing where money can be saved on energy bills, the Federal Trade Commission says.
The National Energy Conservation Policy Act allows each state to draw up its own plan for the program. But the FTC says the Energy Department's proposed regulation in this area is inadequate and does not adequately say what constitutes participation in a state program. The commission suggests the department spell out that criteria exactly. The program is to start in the fall of 1980.

Electric Car Is 'Too Quiet'
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gov. Ella Grasso buzzed around the state Capitol building for a few minutes in a shiny new all-electric car, then remarked: "There's only one problem, it's too quiet."
"I turned on the engine and expected something to happen," Mrs. Grasso joked Tuesday after demonstrating the car, which was provided by the General Electric Co.
She will have use of the "The Centennial Electric" for a week. It's powered by 18 six-volt, lead-acid batteries and can be recharged in six to eight hours from a 220-volt outlet.
GE, with headquarters in Fairfield, says the car has a range of about 75 miles on the highway. The company hopes to interest other companies in building the cars with GE parts.

CHARGES PAKISTAN
NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Charan Singh charged today that Pakistan is building an atomic bomb. He said if it continues, his government will have to reconsider the pledge by his predecessor Morarji Desai that India would neither make nor possess nuclear weapons.

'Big Daddy Rat' Pride Of Motorcycle Clique

BALTIMORE (AP) — When Charlie Chisholm takes Big Daddy Rat out for a night ride, a thousand lights detonate 3,500 tiny rhinestone explosions, dazzling awestruck pedestrians and fulfilling a 40-year dream.

"You pass this motorcycle at night, you don't know what it is," Chisholm boasted. "I mean, you turn on 300, 400 of these lights, it looks like a meteor coming at you. A lot of people, they go crazy over it."

The 1962 Harley Davidson, proudly dubbed Big Daddy Rat, almost never loses a "best dress" motorcycle competition — and small wonder.

Sandwiched between two chromed wheels, Chisholm has lovingly installed a radio-tape player, a CB radio, and 1,450 lights — all of it outlined in a blaze of rhinestones and red and white tassels.

The bike is a regular at civic parades, county fairs and shopping center openings and the 52-year-old West Baltimore bartender says it is about to be listed in the Guinness Book of Records as "the world's most unusually lighted street motorcycle."

But Chisholm has bigger things in mind, like the recent trip to Cologne, Germany, courtesy of a motorcycle magazine. Some of the tours, he hopes will be for profit. Other will be for charity.

Charlie Chisholm hasn't forgotten his humble beginnings. "When I was a kid, we were very poor people. My daddy always promised me a bicycle, but I never got a bicycle, but I got a motorcycle." Chisholm said, explaining that a cousin's motorcycle sparked his own interest in cycles.

"He had a few things here and there, and I thought it was a tremendous bike and I said that if I ever got large enough, I'd get one of my own."

"I left home at 15 and when I finally got the money, I put it down on a motorcycle. My wife took one look at it. She said, 'You gotta get rid of that motorcycle, or get rid of me.' So I kept the bike."

On a whim, he attached 50 lights. That attracted attention, so he added another hundred, and another, and another.

"I just kept adding. After I got up around 300, everybody was really amazed and I decided to really go for it."

See Unrest Due To Economy

By J. LEE CARRIER
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The re-emergence of Ku Klux Klan activity stems from the nation's economic problems, says the president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

But the Klan can exist only when it is tolerated by white society, the Rev. Joseph Lowery told a news conference at the first day of the SCLC's 22nd annual convention Tuesday.

"We are experiencing a re-surfacing of racism in this country brought on by an economic crisis," Lowery said. "The Klan situation represents the most ugly form of racism."

"I really haven't heard a strong reaction from the white community against the Klan... We think the Klan will disappear when white America decides the Klan doesn't represent white folks."

The four-day convention, plagued by reports of a split between moderates and activists and a possible confrontation with the dissidents, will hear tonight from U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, himself a figure of controversy.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance rebuked Young Tuesday for meeting with representatives to the Palestine Liberation Organization in violation of U.S. policy.

Lowery, who also is scheduled to address the conference today, said Tuesday the SCLC was "reserving judgment at this time on whether to support President Carter if he is the Democratic nominee."

Carter had ardently wooed and won black support in 1976, but the nation's black leaders have become disenchanted with him.

"Mr. Carter certainly has disappointed the black community, but this administration is not over yet. What he does in the next year will determine whether we support him again," Lowery said.

"We don't know yet who the candidates will be, and it is too early to voice support for Mr. Carter or withhold it."

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Tex., who spoke at the SCLC's Board of Directors luncheon Tuesday, ripped into both Congress and the Texas legislature.

Leland replaced Barbara Jordan in a Houston congressional district after serving five years in the Texas House of Representatives. He has served six months in the U.S. House.

"When I was elected to Congress, I came to Washington with my bags and thought, 'Man, now I can really do something for my people.' But I haven't done much because I ran up against a monster called the U.S. Congress," Leland said.

The Rev. Hosea Williams, fired in March as the SCLC's executive director, threatened recently to "bring thousands" to Norfolk for a counter-convention.

But chances of such a demonstration appeared small Tuesday.

Williams, who contends his firing is part of a plan to rid the SCLC of activists, was reported in Georgia with comedian-activist Dick Gregory.

Gregory and Williams' son, Hosea Jr., were arrested recently for protesting the Georgia death penalty.

Lowery said Tuesday Williams was fired simply because he was not doing his job properly, and the SCLC president said any split in the organization's ranks "is in the mind of the media."

Ship-Seizure No Violation

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard did not violate international maritime law two years ago when it searched and seized a Bahamian ship carrying six tons of marijuana, says a federal appeals court.

A panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Tuesday the service had arranged with the Commonwealth of the Bahamas for permission to board the vessel off the North Carolina Coast.

In upholding the Coast Guard's jurisdiction, the appeals court affirmed the convictions of five men in connection with the 1977 attempt to smuggle marijuana into the U.S.

Authorities were alerted to the smuggling operation by a Wrightsville Beach, N.C., informant who had been asked to take part in it by one of the 18 people eventually arrested.

Five of those convicted appealed to the 4th Circuit Court. All their arguments were rejected.

The court dismissed contentions from Noll Alexander, captain of the seized vessel, that the Coast Guard lacked a proper search warrant and jurisdiction to seize his vessel.

The ship's attempt to steam away from the approaching Coast Guard vessel was reason enough to believe it "was part of an ongoing conspiracy to smuggle contraband into the country," the court said.

The court also rejected the defendants' arguments that there was insufficient evidence to sustain convictions and errors in the trial.

Revival Series Begins Monday

Revival services will begin Monday, August 20, at York Memorial A. M. E. Zion Church, with services through Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Kenneth Greene will be the featured speaker.

Greene, the son of Mrs. Allie Greene of Greenville and Walter Greene of Delaware, is a graduate of C. M. Eppes High School. He received his bachelor degrees from the University of Maryland and Crozer Theological Seminary. He earned his master's degree from the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School.

Pastor of Christ Methodist Church, Baltimore, Md., the Rev. Greene is married to the former Sondra Sullivan. They have two children.

The public is invited to attend the revival services.

GreenvilleMart Prices Steady

Prices remained steady on the Greenville Tobacco Market Tuesday, according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor, Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade.

The market sold 1,175,695 pounds for $ 1,702,052, an average of $144.78. Stabilization receipts accounted for 6.65 percent of the day's sales.

Top practical price remained at $1.55 per pound. Bryan noted that Tuesday's floor showed an increase of leaf and cutters with primings, lugs and non-descript grades decreasing in volume.

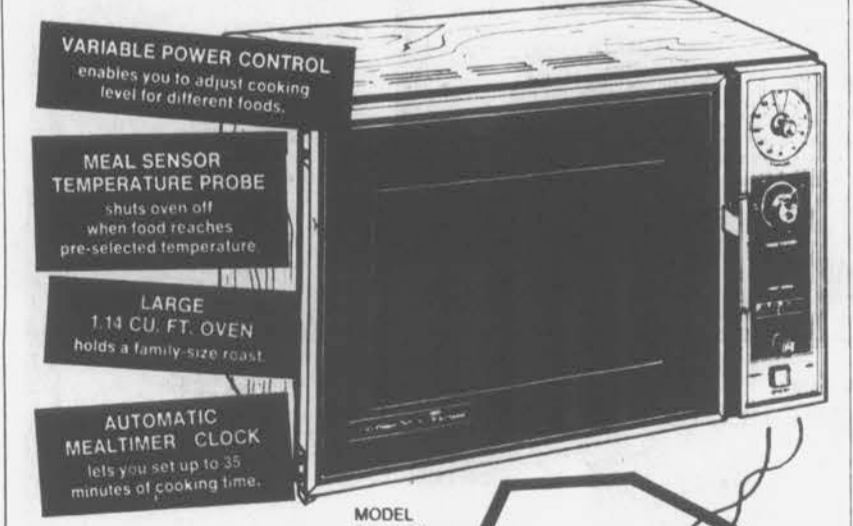

To date, the market has sold 12,540,224 pounds for $16,759,881, for an average of $133.65 per 100 pounds.

Griffin Bell Hails Success In Appointing Judges

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Griffin B. Bell says the Carter administration's program to increase the proportion of black and female federal judges has been so successful it can soon be ended.

"I think we have a very fine record," Bell said in an interview as he prepared to turn over the reins of office to Deputy Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, who will be sworn in Thursday.

Bell said he suspects "that by the time we have finished this batch of judges, we will be in shape to end affirmative action."

Bell said President Carter has given at least tentative approval to nominees for all but 14 of 152 new federal judgeships created by Congress last year.

Counting normal turnover, Carter is expected to have named about one-third of the 648 district and circuit judges who will be serving when the new positions are filled.

Bell said 31 blacks have been appointed to the bench by Carter or are under consideration, which would more than double the 19 who were serving as judges when Carter took office in 1977.

He said Carter has appointed or is considering 34 women. Five were on duty as federal judges when he took office. Bell said 15 Hispanics have been named or are under consideration, triple the number who were on the bench when Carter became president.

"I think we have done a lot better than I thought we could to begin with," Bell said.

He said the administration would come "pretty close" to its objective of having blacks on the federal bench in all southern states.

Blacks have been appointed or given preliminary approval by the president for judgeships in Texas, Louisiana, Florida, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, Bell noted.

He also said there was an "excellent chance" black judges would be appointed in Tennessee and North Carolina and a "reasonable chance" blacks would be named in Arkansas and Virginia.

Nomination of a black for one of the Virginia judgeships could set up a confrontation with Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., over the traditional power of home-state senators to block judicial appointments.

Byrd named merit selection commissions, as senators in about half the states have done at Carter's suggestion. Byrd's commissions, one for each of the state's judicial districts, produced the names of 10 lawyers — all white males — for four positions.

Carter has nominated two men from the list, but has not said what he would do about the other judgeships. Byrd says he feels bound to support his commissions' choices.

If a standoff should occur, it would be up to the Senate Judiciary Committee to resolve it. Its chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., has said that if a senator objected to a presidential appointment, he would ask the committee to vote on whether to consider the appointment for confirmation.

Bell said Mississippi is the only southern state with no prospect whatsoever of immediately getting any black federal judges. The state has no blacks serving on the bench, did not receive any new judgeships and has no vacancies.

Bell said Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., "has promised to have an open mind on the matter" if a vacancy arises.

Overall, Bell said blacks will make up 7 percent of the nation's federal judges, compared with 2.6 percent of its lawyers, when the round of federal appointments is completed.

Women, he said, will make up slightly more than 6 percent of the judges. This is well under their 9.4 percent representation among lawyers, but Bell said: "It is a well-known fact that a lot of these women have gone to law school in recent years and have not had much experience."

Bell also said he has "serious doubts" about the use of merit selection commissions as an alternative to the traditional political patronage method of picking judges.

He said some commission members have tried to select potential nominees who shared their opinions and others have manipulated the selection process in an effort to secure nomination of their choices.

He said he thought the choices made so far were better "by a slight degree" than they would have been without the merit plan, but added: "It remains to be seen whether in the end we are going to get a better product."

In another interview Tuesday, Bell was quoted as saying Carter has tended to "trivialize" the presidency by working on too many small issues and trying at times "to act like he wasn't president."

In that interview, as reported by The New York Times, Bell said Carter has "acted like one of the boys. The American people want the president to act like the president." He added, "I would have had a lot more discipline if I was president."

Combats Young Voter Apathy

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Saying the state has embarked on an effort to reverse an apathetic trend among young voters, Gov. William Milliken signed a law permitting voter registration at high schools.

It marked the first victory in an drive by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to get young voters to take part in elections.

In signing the legislation Tuesday, Milliken said the state was trying to "involve a new generation of voters in the political process."

Similar bills are under consideration in 23 other states, officials of the NAACP say, as part of the organization's drive to boost sagging participation by blacks in the voting process.

Georgia is the only other state with similar legislation. In March 1971, then-Gov. Jimmy Carter signed a law authorizing high school administrators to serve as deputy registrars. The Georgia law inspired the current NAACP campaign.

The Michigan law, sponsored by State Sen. Jackie Vaughn, a Detroit Democrat, could lay the groundwork for the registration of more than 130,000 high school students, said Frances Hooks, wife of NAACP Director Benjamin Hooks.

"These youngsters ... will serve as a beacon in a national sea of voter apathy and issue ignorance," she said.

Crowded His Way To Top

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — George doesn't do much, but what he does, he does well.

The 22-ounce, black Old English Bantam crowed his way to a championship title Tuesday at the Illinois State Fair, where he sounded off 63 times in a half-hour to beat seven other finalists.

"He just loves to crow. He doesn't do anything special. He just runs around the farm and crows," said Alvin Bender, George's owner. "From night to morning he crows, even during the night."

Marion Nash, the fair's superintendent of poultry, said roosters crow to attract hens and "to establish their masculinity and all that garbage. They want to tell the gang: 'I'm the boss or want to be the boss,' or something."

"He's got a few hens at home," said Bender, 53, of Humphrey, Neb. "When he gets home to see them, he'll get his reward."

Owners of the contestants urged their entrants on with bribes of corn, by blowing on their feathers and by clucking in sensual barnyard tones.

"Come George, let's go George, hey, wake up George, you can do it again," Bender's wife, Boots, pleaded quietly, as the row of penned roosters squawked, clucked and — in the only sound that counted — crowed.

George had scored 57 crows in the preliminary half-hour for a total of 120 crows in the period of an hour. The runner-up, a black-breasted red, Old English Game Bantam named Begin, scored 109 crows.

Joe E. Madison of Detroit, national director of the NAACP voter education program, said during Tuesday's signing ceremonies that blacks between the ages of 18 and 24 had the worst voter participation record of any eligible group in the nation.

The program's aim is to add 3.4 million new black voters to registration lists around the nation in time for the 1980 election.

"It's somewhat easy to register people in the South because they've been denied the right for so long. But voter apathy is rampant in both the black and white community now," Madison said.

Dr. Nasty A Specialist

MANCHESTER, Conn. (AP) — When anger or frustration make effective vituperation difficult, why not call Dr. Nasty?

For $10, (no house calls, please), the doctor will dash off 250 well chosen words of complaint ranging from simple aggravation to tongue-tying rage.

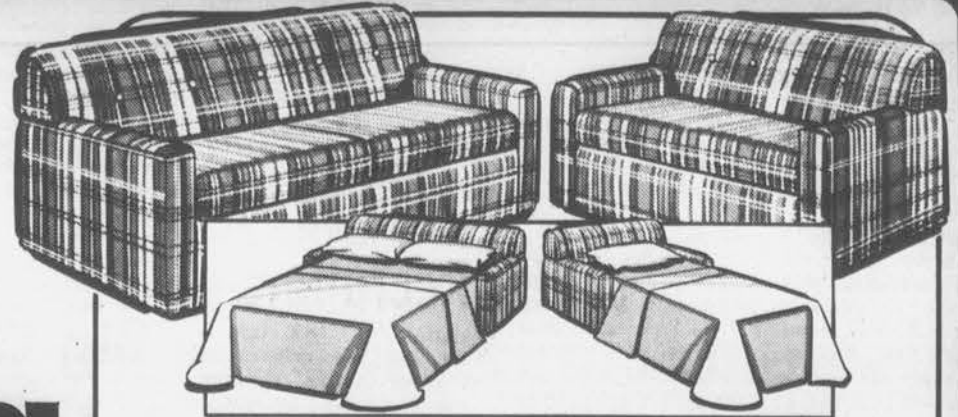

Dr. Nasty resolves more than 90 percent of the consumer complaints he handles, says Thomas Winer of Gerber and Winer Professional Management Services.

"All Dr. Nasty wants to do is write the letters," adds Winer, whose firm handles the administrative details of the business.

Although the doctor specializes in consumer complaints, he will also deal with other annoyances, such as inconsiderate neighbors playing loud music in the early morning hours, Winer said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices fell in early trading today following a modest gain in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stock lost 2.14 to 874.57 in the first half hour of trading.

Losing issues outnumbered gainers by a slight margin in the broader tally of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said profit-taking sales continued in the face of price gains in recent sessions. The stock market has risen in six out of the last seven sessions.

In addition, some suggested that worries over interest rate trends and economic data showing slowing business sales may act as a trading restraint.

Early prices of actively traded issues included Southern California Edison, up 1/2 to 26 1/2; Great Western Financial off 1/2 to 27 1/2; Chrysler up 1/2 to 8 1/2.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones industrial average closed with a modest gain of 1.45 points at 876.71.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a 4-3 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume came to 40.91 million shares against 41.98 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .08 to 61.26.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .68 at 204.22.

Fireman's Day Planned

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board of Commissioners adopted a resolution to declare Saturday, September 15, as "Fireman's Day" in Grifton, and decided to block off Pitt Street from Queen to McCrae Streets for the annual parade.

North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram is slated to appear at the Saturday festivities.

The board voted to adopt the assessment role for curb and guttering on Dupont Avenue, Quinerly Street and Underwood Street. The board also voted to rezone a tract of land east of Pitt Street to RA-6-2 to allow the use of a mobile trailer.

Tom Maples and Verna Little, two Grifton Utilities employees, were awarded honors for money saving suggestions in their department. The board also discussed details for awarding employees who go at least six months without serious injury.

Charges For Recruiters

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Army has relieved the Charlotte district recruiting chief of command and brought court-martial charges against three recruiting sergeants as part of a national investigation of recruiting malpractice.

Lt. Col. Edward Walker, 40, was relieved of command as district recruiting chief Monday, an Army spokesman said in Washington Tuesday.

The Army had been investigating allegations that Army recruiters illegally coached applicants for entrance examinations, furnished bootleg exam copies to enlistees and doctored education, criminal, birth and Social Security records.

Walker earlier brought court-martial charges against Sgt. 1st Class Marshall Jackson, Sgt. 1st Class Clyde Waltman and Sgt. 1st Class Harvey Lloyd. They all have been relieved of duty pending further investigation.

The three were charged with conspiracy to effect unlawful enlistments and unauthorized possession of test materials, the Army spokesman said.

Jackson and Lloyd were also charged with extortion for allegedly pressuring subordinates to use illegal material.

Big Oil Tide Up To Wind

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Miles of glistening white South Texas beaches could be coated with thick, gummy Mexican crude oil if unpredictable coastal winds don't cooperate, scientists fighting the world's largest oil spill have warned.

Patches of the muck, one 25 feet square and 6 inches deep, soiled parts of Padre and Mustang islands Tuesday and scientists expect more assaults from small drifting patches in the next few days.

"I don't see any relief from it. There's nothing in the foreseeable future to change the situation we have," said John Robinson of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, scientific coordinator of the government's oil spill task force.

Scientists aren't even trying to keep track of countless smaller patches lurking off the coast. It's the big seaborne globs, some several miles long, that worry them the most.

offshore well is 360 miles east of Corpus Christi.

That puts it some 100 miles south of Louisiana's Terrebonne Bay, more than 60 miles southwest of New Orleans. But Coast Guard spokesman Jim McGranahan said the oil isn't expected to hit that coast in the near future, if at all.

$146.08 Day On Farmville Mart

FARMVILLE — The average on the Farmville Tobacco Market continues to increase as more quality grades of tobacco are being marketed, according to Louis Williams, sales supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Lugs and cutters accounted for approximately half of sales yesterday, he said. Leaf grades are appearing in larger volume and accounting for most of the increase in prices paid. Volume of nondescript grades continues small. There were more priming grades on the floor yesterday than on Monday. Stabilization receipts were the lowest of the season. The market sold 754,488 pounds for $1,102,144 for an average of $146.08 per hundred. To date the market has sold 7,932,390 pounds for $1,073,854 for an average of $135.29.

Collided Above Ukraine

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet jetliners collided over the Ukraine, a Soviet civil aviation official said today, and informed sources said a Soviet soccer team aboard one of the planes was wiped out.

The planes, both twin-engine Aeroflot Tu-134 jets, collided and crashed at about 2 p.m. Sunday near the Ukrainian city of Dneprodzerzhinsk, a secretary to the chief of Soviet Byelorussia's Department of Civil Aviation in Minsk said.

The spokeswoman, reached by telephone from Moscow, confirmed that one of the airliners had been carrying the Pakhtakor soccer team from Tashkent, capital of Uzbekistan in Soviet Central Asia.

She gave no specific casualty figures and declined to say what officials think might have caused the crash.

The Tu-134 normally carries a maximum of about 72 passengers and crew members. It is used by Aeroflot, the Soviet airline, on many domestic runs.

Informed sources reported that the Tashkent soccer squad, en route from the Uzbek capital to play a match in Minsk, had been wiped out in the crash.

The last reported crash of a Soviet airliner occurred March 17 when a Tu-104 jet went down in the vicinity of Moscow's Vnukovo Airport. The official Soviet news agency Tass said only that the crash caused "casualties."

Fully Participating In A Neighborhood Watch

FARMVILLE — Westwood Neighborhood has become the first neighborhood here to participate 100 percent in the Farmville Police Department's Neighborhood Watch program.

Every household in the neighborhood has agreed to take part in the program, which will include monthly meetings to keep abreast of crime prevention measures and to watch out for each other's property in every way possible, Farmville Crime Prevention Officer Ken Godwin said.

Charles Joyner is chairman of the Westwood program. Yesterday afternoon at 5:30 p. m. a sign was erected at the entrance of the neighborhood, letting it be known that it is a Neighborhood Watch participant.

An engraver is being passed from household to household for every one of them to mark valuables with identifying driver's license numbers. Stickers will be posted on doors and windows of all homes making it clear that valuables are marked for law enforcement identification.

Officer Godwin said he'd be delighted for every neighborhood in Farmville to enter into the same kind of program. Signs for the two entrances to the neighborhood adjacent to the Farmville Golf and Country Club are now being ordered, he indicated and the program there is underway.

Freak Storm Turns Race Into Chaos

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Ships, lifeboats and helicopters searched the Atlantic off southwest England today for bodies and survivors of yachting's worst disaster. An American resident of London, Frank Ferris, was among 13 yachtsmen reported killed, and by midday, 21 yachts worth an estimated $4.5 million were reported sunk or abandoned in a freak summer storm Tuesday that lashed more than 300 yachts in the international Fastnet Race with 70-mile winds and mountainous seas. Rescuers pulled more than 125 survivors from the wreckage of their yachts. Ferris was skipping his yacht Ariadne with a British crew. He was picked up, badly injured, by a Dutch destroyer and died aboard it. Four of his crew also were reported dead.

The other eight confirmed fatalities were also British. Earlier reports said there were 336 boats in the race when the storm hit, but today the Royal Ocean Yacht Club reduced the field to 306. The club said 221 of these were accounted for — still racing, reached port, abandoned or sunk — and 85 were still to be heard from.

A spokeswoman said many of these did not have radios, and it might be many hours before the fate of all of them was known. Among those unaccounted for were six American boats. Three American entries — Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner's Tenacious, Californian Jim Kilroy's Kialoa and Stephen Colgate's 54-foot Sleuth, from the New York Yacht Club — finished the race safely although Kilroy broke some ribs in the storm. The other deaths were two British crewmen from the Royal Air Force's Grimalkin, two from the Trophy, two from the Flashlight and one each from the Gunslinger and the Festina Tertia.

Three other American entries were reported sighted and safe: Alliance, from the U.S. Naval Academy with 14 men aboard; Imp, owned and skippered by David Allen of Belvedere, Calif., and Aries, owned and sailed by Mike Swerdlow of New York. Among those reported safe was former Prime Minister Edward Heath, whose boat Morning Cloud was first reported under tow with a broken rudder. Later he reported by radio that he was still in the race, was making good progress and had not lost his rudder.

Yachts Unready For Such Storms

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Sailors who set out in ocean races have the best equipment money can buy, yachting experts say, but when storms whip up 70 mph winds and 30-foot waves, all the equipment in the world can't guarantee survival. At least 10 sailors were known dead and scores unaccounted for when winds at near hurricane force slashed through yachts racing in the Admiral's Cup off the southwest coast of England on Tuesday. "These boats are the cream of the crop," said Thomas F.

Ehman Jr., staff director of the U.S. Yacht Racing Union in Newport. "But if you drop a boat off a 20- or 30-foot wave over and over again, nothing's going to hold up. They are all built to take bad weather," he added. "This is the worst kind of encounter we've had." The boats in the race ranged in size from 40 to 80 feet. They are made of wood, fiberglass or aluminum, and many are custom designed for racing. Their crews number five to a dozen or more.

Turner's 'Tenacious' Unofficial Winner

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Ted Turner, the dapper sportsman and television station owner from Atlanta made light today of the horrendous seas in the Atlantic after his yacht Tenacious had taken tentative first place in the tragedy-strewn Fastnet yacht race.

at the end of the 605 miles, four-day race. His sleek yacht Tenacious was unofficially ranked first on handicap. After a night's sleep, Turner returned to his boat and greeted members of his 19-man crew by saying, "OK, how does it feel to win one of the toughest races there ever was?"

He shrugged off suggestions that he might have been afraid, but recalled: "We did take one wave pretty hard — everything flew down below." Turner won the Fastnet race in 1971 in his yacht American Eagle in record time. He is also a trans-atlantic sailing veteran. Asked why he did it, he said: "For the same reason guys climb Mount Everest, because it's there. Also, I like the sea. It's a real challenge facing a storm like that and coming through."

"This was the greatest sailing accomplishment in a long time," he said. "But we weren't really concerned with the conditions, we were concerned with winning." Turner and his crew rested unharmed after their ordeal. Elsewhere 10 yachtsmen were known to be dead, three more presumed dead, and 22 yachts sunk or abandoned. Of the 306 yachts which started the race, 85 were still unaccounted for. Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves and Hawks, as well as Channel 17 in Atlanta, crossed the finish line fifth Tuesday evening

"The only real damage we had is a bent steering wheel," Turner said. "Of course, during the worst of the storm we could see only spray and waves and other yachts coming at us." "There was a chance we could have run into another boat, but in racing you have to have luck too." Turner's 16-year-old son Teddy Turner, Jr., also took the adventure lightly.

Turner's 1971 record was broken Tuesday by the big 77-foot Bermudan ketch Condor, skippered by Bob Bell, which was the first yacht to cross the finish line at Plymouth. But on handicap Tenacious moved above Condor to take first place. Results were subject to official confirmation.

Farlow, Top Golf Pro, Dies

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro, died Tuesday evening at Moses Cone Hospital after an extended illness. He was for many years one of the leading golf professionals in the Carolinas.

For many years Farlow was the host professional for the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament. And in 1978, he was named Carolina's Section Golf Professional of the year. The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at West Market Street United Methodist Church in Greensboro. Burial will follow in Burlington.

He is survived by his wife, one daughter and one sister. For more than half a century, Farlow was a Class-A member of the Professional Golfers' Association. He also was a teacher of many of the area's leading golfers and also trained a number of club professionals. For 20 years Farlow was the pro at Greensboro's Starmount Forest Country Club. He qualified for the U.S. Open eight times and made the cut four times.

Dye Eyes Old Hurts At Drills

Several players who were injured during the spring got close looks from East Carolina head football coach Pat Dye yesterday during the second day of fall practice. Dye wanted to make sure that those injured were back at full speed as the three-day conditioning drills continued into their second day. "We had a lot of players hurt last spring who will be a key to our season," Dye said. "And as far as I can tell, all of them are moving well in the drills and in good condition to play in September."

The group included several defensive players, ends John Morris and Clifford Williams, linebacker Jeffrey Warren, and backs Wayne Perry, Willie Holley and Ruffin McNeill. All of the group are currently listed as starters for the Pirates. They now appear fully recovered from their injuries and are ready to play. Thomas McLaurin, who earned the free safety position during the spring, came down with a pulled hamstring during workouts Tuesday, and is not able to go at full speed. Today will be the final three-day conditioning session, and the Pirates will move into pads Thursday, beginning two-a-day drills which will continue until August 28, when school begins. East Carolina opens the season in Ficklen Stadium on September 1 against Western Carolina.

Orioles Win To Hold Off Hot Red Sox As Boston Rips Twins

AP Sports Writer
Fred Lynn is probably the best hitter in the American League this season. Dennis Eckersley is probably the best pitcher in the league. Together, they've led the Boston Red Sox to ... second place? On a night when all East Division teams were defeating West Division rivals, Boston's 12-1 annihilation of Minnesota was the most impressive. Despite Lynn's two home runs and double and six runs batted in and Eckersley's 16th victory — tying him with Houston Joe Niekro for most in the majors — the Red Sox couldn't gain ground on the first-place Baltimore Orioles Tuesday.

Baltimore edged Chicago 2-1 in 12 innings, even though the Orioles managed just three hits in the game, to maintain a five-game lead in the East. The other East winners were the Yankees, who beat Texas 6-5; Milwaukee, which topped Kansas City 5-2; Detroit, a 6-3 victor over California; Toronto, which stopped Oakland 6-2, and Cleveland, which beat Seattle 7-4. Orioles 2, White Sox 1 (12) Al Bumby was the late-game hero for Baltimore this time, singling with the bases loaded to score Pat Kelly. Eddie Murray's eighth-inning homer and Lee May's single in the second were the only other Orioles hits. Baltimore had filled the bases on walks in the 12th, with Kelly, Kiko Garcia and Ken Singleton getting the free passes.

Yankees 6, Rangers 5 Two home runs by Bobby Murcer, including a two-run shot that provided the decisive runs in the eighth inning, paced the Yankees. "Gradually, I'm coming around," said Murcer, who left the Yankees after the 1974 season. "The last three years or so I let myself get into some bad attitudes. I did a lot of bad things at the plate. "Here, I've found a new life. I've got the momentum and that's what hitting is all about." Brewers 5, Royals 2 Gorman Thomas and Ben Oglive each slammed two-run homers to help Mike Caldwell to victory. George Brett homered for Kansas City. Caldwell, 12-5, was making his first appearance since July 27, when he was involved in a scuffle with Reggie Jackson. Tigers 6, Angels 3 Jason Thompson had a two-run home run and three RBI overall and Lance Parrish contributed a solo shot as rookie Bruce Robbins and Jack Billingham combined to top the Angels. Blue Jays 6, A's 2 Phil Huffman threw his first complete game as a major leaguer, a six-hitter, and broke a personal six-game losing streak. Craig Kusick's homer, the first for Toronto in eight games, led the attack. "It's always nice to beat the club that traded you," said Huffman, who went to Toronto a year ago today. Indians 7, Mariners 4 A two-run triple by Toby Harrah and some solid relief pitching by Victor Cruz and Sid Monge, who picked up his 16th save by protecting Rick Waits 12th win, paced the Indians. Danny Meyer homered for Seattle.

Vendors To Meet

Boys and girls, ages 11 and up, interested in selling concessions in the stands at Ficklen Stadium during the up-coming East Carolina football season, are asked to meet Friday. The meeting will be held in the scoreboard area of Ficklen Stadium between 5 and 6 p.m.

Contenders Outnumber East Also-Rans

By DICK BRAUDE
AP Sports Writer

There's Super Bowl talk by more than one team in the National Football League's rugged American Conference Eastern Division, where contenders outnumber also-rans.

The AFC East includes two playoff teams from 1978, the New England Patriots and Miami Dolphins; a potentially powerful squad on the rebound, the Baltimore Colts; a young team perhaps ready to blossom, the New York Jets; and the Buffalo Bills, possibly last — but far from least — in a division rich with talent.

"If you're afraid to talk about the Super Bowl, you don't deserve to get there," says Ron Erhardt, the veteran Patriots assistant who has his head coaching chance after succeeding Chuck Fairbanks.

"Our hope in the last year of the 70s is to win our third Super Bowl," says Miami Coach Don Shula, the NFL's winningest active coach with a 175-63-5 record.

Both teams finished with 11-5 records in 1978 and both made the playoffs, although the Patriots were credited with their first divisional title since the merger of the NFL with the old American Football League.

The Jets, under three different coaches, endured three straight 3-11 seasons but bounced to 8-8 last year with Walt Michaels and a booming attack that rolled up 359 points, third best in the NFL.

With quarterback Bert Jones sidelined for 13 games, the Colts tumbled to 5-11, but Coach Ted Marchibroda says: "We have the talent to be a Super Bowl contender ... one of the best teams in the NFL." Jones is back, as is Miami's Bob Griese who, despite missing the opening five games last year, led NFL passers with 63 percent passing accuracy.

And the Jets will have signal-caller Richard Todd in harness after he missed much of the 1978 season with a broken collarbone. Now Todd has to compete with his erstwhile substitute, Matt Robinson, for No. 1 ranking.

The Bills, under Chuck Knox, were 5-11 last season and are fully expecting improvement, despite the defection of their No. 1 draft pick, linebacker Tom Cousineau, to the Canadian Football League. The Buffalo defense — which has switched to a three-man front — is rated much improved.

And even if the Bills start slowly, they'll play a major role in the playoff race. Late in the season, Buffalo meets four 1978 playoff teams — New England, Denver, Minnesota and the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers. The season opener Sept. 2 at Buffalo may represent the Bills' biggest challenge, however. They play the Dolphins, a team that has beaten Buffalo 18 consecutive times since 1970, the NFL's longest alltime streak.

Patriots Coach Erhardt, a happy warrior compared to the taciturn Fairbanks — now at the University of Colorado — plans to open up an attack that established an NFL record with 3,165 yards passing.

No. 1 quarterback Steve Grogan will call his own plays and backups Tom Owen and Matt Cavanaugh have been promised that they won't rust on the sidelines.

New England's running attack is deep in all-around players like Sam Cunningham, Andy Johnson and Horace Ivory who also can catch passes. Grogan had post-season knee surgery but he seems ready to continue his league-leading string of starting 49 consecutive regular season games.

The Dolphins have welcomed back wayward fullback Larry Csonka, who led the Super Bowl VII and VIII teams. He'll join an offensive unit that scored 372 points last year, the most in the AFC. And the defense led the NFL with three shutouts and 32 pass interceptions.

Miami again will count heavily on star runner Del Williams, a prize pickup in last year's trade with San Francisco and veteran receivers Nat Moore — if his ailing back responds to pre-season rest — Durriel Harris and Jimmy Cefalo, along with tight end Andre Tillman.

The Jets, the youngest NFL team a year ago, were playoff contenders until late in the season. New York hasn't been in postseason competition in a decade.

The Todd-Robinson-led offense, aided by kicker Pat Leahy — the AFC's leading scorer with 107 points — may have to make the most of its chances because the Jets' defense allowed 364 points.

New York picked six defenders in the first five rounds of the college draft.

The Baltimore defense was even more generous — 421 points, as the "Sack Pack" turned Sad Sack. But on offense, Jones leads a potentially productive unit.

The Colts are looking for a punter — David Lee retired after 12 seasons — but veteran Greg Landry has been acquired to backup Jones. Buffalo will miss Cousineau, but the Bills did get defensive help in the draft. It will be up to quarterback Joe Ferguson, a starter since 1973, to lead the offense that showed a significantly improved running attack last year — moving from No. 18 in the NFL in 1977 to No. 10 in 1978.

Knox, who used to win divisional titles with the Los Angeles Rams, expects the Bills to win the close games that got away last year. But in the AFC East, with eight games against the Patriots, Dolphins, Colts and Jets, it won't be easy.

Andujar Really Didn't Mean To Hit Homer, But It Won Game

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

Of course, the ball had no business going where it did; everyone knew that. After all, this was the Astrodome, and players wearing Houston uniforms do not — as a rule — hit home runs there.

Oh, Jose Cruz hit one, Houston's 12th hometown homer this season. But that was on July 15, and no Astros player had hit one since, much less a pitcher who brought a .044 batting average into Tuesday night's 2-1 victory over the Montreal Expos.

The guy who hit a homer for the Astros Tuesday night was pitcher Joaquin Andujar, who was trying, quite simply, for a hit that would move Art Howe from first base into scoring position in the second inning.

Touching the plate with his arms upraised, Andujar scored the winning run and went on to pitch a four-inning game in as many lifetime decisions against them.

In the other NL games, the Cincinnati Reds edged the Philadelphia Phillies 2-1 in 10 innings; the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the San Diego Padres 7-1; the Los Angeles Dodgers bombed the St. Louis Cardinals 9-0; the New York Mets throttled the Atlanta Braves 18-5, and the San Francisco Giants trounced the Chicago Cubs, 8-2.

Reds 2, Phillies 1
Pinch-hitter Vic Correll hit a 10th-inning double — only the Reds' fourth hit of the game off Steve Carlton — to score Ray Knight and give Cincinnati its victory over Philadelphia.

Pirates 7, Padres 1
Willie Stargell and Ed Ott drove in two runs each to back the six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and carry Pittsburgh past San Diego.

Dodgers 9, Cardinals 0
Bill Russell and Joe Ferguson had two-run singles and Gary Thomason added a two-run homer as Los Angeles scored nine times in the last three innings to support the two-hit pitching of Burt Hooton.

Hooton, pitching his fourth career two-hitter, helped the Dodgers to their 17th victory in the last 25 games.

Mets 18, Braves 5
New York's Lee Mazzilli hit a two-run homer and a triple and scored five times to lead the Mets' rout of the Braves.

Mets starter Dock Ellis, presented with a 10-2 lead, left with the score 10-5 in the third after Bob Horner's second homer of the game — a three-run shot — in the third.

Giants 8, Cubs 2
Greg Johnston, who got into the game after San Francisco's Bill North was ejected for arguing an "out" call on his attempted steal of second base, drove in two runs with his first two major league hits to help the Giants beat the Cubs.

Both of Johnston's hits were RBI singles, and both came in San Francisco's seven-run fifth inning.

South Carolina Gets Invite From Metro-7

By ED ROWLAND
 Associated Press Writer
 COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) —

University of South Carolina President James B. Holderman says he doesn't know whether he'll recommend the school drop its athletic independent status and join the Metro 7 Conference.

Holderman met for almost an hour Tuesday with Metro 7 Commissioner Larry Albus, who said the next step is up to the university. Albus noted that a news conference he thinks it would be "mutually beneficial" for USC to join the league.

The proposal has been referred to a trustee committee, which is expected to report to the full board next month. Albus said while there is no deadline on the part of the conference, a delay past September would probably mean South Carolina couldn't participate in post-season tournaments in the eight sports governed by the Metro 7.

Football is not included. South Carolina basketball Coach Frank McGuire favors conference affiliation. But athletic director and football Coach Jim Carlen is cool to the idea.

Albus observed, "The timing is right (for South Carolina) to do something now" without closing the door on a later agreement. He also indicated conference acceptance of the school would be almost a sure thing.

The Metro 7 official said the league wants to add one or two schools with strong basketball traditions and geographic locations within the conference area. He declined to name other schools he said are interested, though he pointed out only South Carolina is being contacted at this time.

The four-year-old conference names champions after playoffs in eight sports: basketball, baseball, indoor and outdoor track, cross country, tennis, golf and swimming. Albus pointed out that all members fielding football teams would have to agree in order for the conference to add that sport to the list.

Albus said if South Carolina joins this year, he would designate basketball games it has on the 1979-80 schedule as conference games to determine seeding in the post-season tournament at Louisville.

Members are Florida State, Virginia Tech, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Memphis State, Tulane and Louisville. Georgia Tech had been a member but moved to the ACC last year.

Moral Re-Armament Movement

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — Moral Re-Armament, the ideological movement that flourished before and after World War II, is making a comeback.

"There's more initiative than there's ever been," says Gordon Wise, an Australian who is a spokesman for the British wing of MRA. "MRA is quietly but steadily expanding."

Under such leaders as Dr. Frank Buchman and Peter Howard, MRA enjoyed vast media coverage and was one of the most admired, misunderstood and controversial ideological movements of the 20th century.

Buchman died in 1961, however, and Howard died in 1965.

The deaths were traumatic for MRA and resulted in a lower profile for the organization.

MRA groups continue their efforts to transform men and governments in many parts of the globe, loosely cooperating with one another through bonds of common commitment and by means of international assemblies.

MRA in the United States sponsors community programs, keeps in contact with congressmen and State Department officials, sells books and distributes films.

Its New York headquarters reported a 50 percent increase in the number of individuals contributing to MRA in 1978.

but it did not disclose the actual number of contributors. Total U.S. contributions were $145,000, an increase of 20 percent over 1977.

Buchman's centenary was celebrated in 1978, the 40th anniversary of the formation of the Moral Re-Armament movement. In London, the million dollar Westminster Memorial Trust was set up to commemorate it.

Buchman was born in Pennsylvania, Pa. — Pennsylvania declared June 4, 1978, Dr. Frank Buchman Day — and raised in Allentown. He prepared for the Lutheran ministry but resigned in 1908. The next year he had what his followers describe as "a spiritual experience" while listening to a sermon in a small church at Keswick in the lake district of Britain.

As Garth Lean, another member of the British MRA council puts it, "He began to help other men, not from a position of rectitude but from the experience of his own sin met by grace."

As a result of the "experience," Buchman accepted four "absolutes" as a summary of the Sermon on the Mount — honesty, purity, unselfishness and love. Armed with these, he set about trying to change human nature, initially not by mass evangelism but by quiet person to person work. His aim, said Lean, was nothing less than "the remaking of the world."

So Buchman, meeting kings and presidents, became a familiar figure in newspapers, newsreels and on television. He was credited with winning the appreciation of Presidents Roosevelt and Truman for his work in strengthening Allied morale in World War II, with helping improve relations between Japan and her former enemies, with aiding the coming of independence in Morocco and many other intercessions in world affairs.

Buchman did not discuss his own role in events; other participants did. His message struck a chord in pre-war days. More than 100,000 attended a meeting at Utrecht, the Netherlands, in 1937.

Buchman did make one serious misjudgment that plagued MRA for years. In an interview with a New York newspaper in 1936 he was quoted as "thanking heaven" for Adolf Hitler's "front-line defense against the anti-Christ of communism." The next paragraph qualified this with the need for the German dictator to change, but the harm was done and the label pro-Nazi stuck. MRA considers the judgement unfair since thousands in MRA fought for the Allies.

In Buchman's last years, the movement had become influential enough to attract statesmen, industrialists and other important personages to its gatherings at various headquarters — Mackinac Island in Michigan, what had been the Caux Palace hotel in Caux, Switzerland, and elsewhere. Mackinac has been sold but MRA still has the Caux center.

After Buchman's death, Howard, long prepared for the role, smoothly continued the work. But his own death left MRA without an obvious leader.

Garth Lean said strong personalities in several important countries then took the movement off at tangents from Buchman's precise goals, in the process resisting efforts to form a collective leadership.

"Various newspapers issued premature obituaries," he said. "Slowly, meanwhile, and without pain, an informal international leadership has evolved which has not only been able to reestablish firm bases in the countries affected, but to consolidate elsewhere and to carry forward initiatives in such crisis points as India, southern Africa, the Sudan and Northern Ireland."

Emphasis of MRA's work is often in the areas of racial and labor-management reconciliation. The British wing believes that among its good points the new leadership has encouraged those who depended too deeply on a single dominant personality — Buchman — to turn instead completely to God.

"It remains basically a Christian message," said Wise, the son of a former West Australian premier.

As evidence of its continued appeal, Wise cited the many international MRA conferences of the centennial year: in Brisbane, Australia, in South Africa, in Panchgani, India, where then-Prime Minister Moraji Desai opened the gathering, at Hakone and Tokyo in Japan, at Freudenstadt in Germany where Buchman died.

Lean and MRA leaders were invited by U.S. congressmen to a national prayer breakfast in Washington, D.C., at which President Carter spoke. The Cardinal Primate of Brazil welcomed the conference at Salvador, Brazil.

An international conference has been announced for Sydney, Australia, in 1980.

Though the British wing's annual report lists assets of $3.4 million, Wise stressed that "there is still plenty of scope for faith and prayer." There is a gap between investment income and expenditure of about $185,000 a year at the moment.

Specialized Course For Police Chiefs

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A police chief's lot is not a happy one — especially when he has to present a budget to the town board or handle touchy public relations chores, says Lee Smith of Syracuse University, who is coordinating a program to help small and mid-size police departments function more efficiently.

"Police training in this country is normally geared to the larger metropolitan police departments and the small department chiefs have felt left out in the cold," says Smith, assistant dean of University College.

University College, the continuing education arm of Syracuse University, is working with chiefs of police from 24 small communities in central New York State in a training program that could develop into a nationwide model.

The Criminal Justice Management Institute, believed to be the only program of its kind in the United States, is in its second year, through a grant from the State Division of Criminal Justice Services.

"We feel our program begins to answer the need for direction and training for police departments ranging from one-man units to those with 10, 20 or even 30 officers," says Smith who believes the program, with modification, can be made to serve similar departments in other regions of the country.

In larger police departments, Smith says, management jobs such as personnel hiring and firing, budgeting and public relations are usually turned over to specialists. Small departments have neither the funds nor training to present themselves with effectiveness and so needs may go unanswered, he says.

The University College program, now in its second year, brings police chiefs together with reporters, legislators, defense attorneys, judges, district attorneys and corrections officials.

A sampling of the institute's sessions includes "The Art of Communication," "The Management of Time," "Budgets: the Soft Preparation and the Hard Sell," "The Common Sense Use of Statistics" and "Obligations of Freedom of Information Legislation."

Plea In Line With MRA

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Carter's recent appeal to the nation for a rebirth of self-confidence is in line with the teachings of Moral Re-Armament, according to an MRA leader.

"Carter is calling for a moral and spiritual re-armament which can deal with any kind of ills including the energy shortage," said The Rev. Harry J. Almond, executive director of MRA's headquarters here. "MRA deals with changing people's motivations and that is what Carter is asking for."

Almond said Carter asked the MRA for "input" but there was no way of knowing whether MRA's views had gotten through to him. Almond said the MRA "most certainly has friends in the halls of Congress and in certain areas of the State Department."

One of Almond's colleagues, Dr. Laurence Vogel, added that years of experience as the MRA's chief in Brazil had convinced him that Carter's emphasis on human rights as an aspect of foreign policy has had an important impact in South America.

"No president since Kennedy has raised so much hope in South America," Vogel said.

As Garth Lean, another member of the British MRA council puts it, "He began to help other men, not from a position of rectitude but from the experience of his own sin met by grace."

As a result of the "experience," Buchman accepted four "absolutes" as a summary of the Sermon on the Mount — honesty, purity, unselfishness and love. Helms' Strategists Map Vice Presidential Bid

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Political strategists for Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, one of the most conservative members of Congress, are planning a national campaign to promote him for the 1980 GOP vice presidential nomination.

The movement, which has Helms' tacit approval, also is aimed at pushing the Republican platform to the right during the 1980 convention, and will employ national television promotion.

A committee to promote

Helms for the Republican ticket will be formed within the next few weeks, Helms' chief political strategist, Raleigh lawyer Thomas F. Ellis, said Tuesday. Helms, who raised more than $7 million from national mail solicitations during his 1978 reelection campaign, said Tuesday that he was not actively seeking the nomination but had agreed to allow the committee's formation.

"We'll just see how the ball bounces," Helms said. The television programming is to begin this fall through a group called the Coalition for Freedom, which Helms described as a "tent for conservative causes." It will purchase air time on local stations around the country, and perhaps on networks if it raises enough money, Ellis said. The television programs will feature Helms prominently, and include other well-known conservatives in Congress and elsewhere. The coalition has an informal agreement to use — and pay for — production facilities at the new, sophisticated studios of the Christian Broadcasting Network in Norfolk, Va., Ellis said.

Ellis said he hoped the television coalition and the vice presidential committee would enable Helms to carry a sizeable block of delegates to the 1980 GOP convention for his use on both nomination selections and platform battles. "I think Jesse's a realist," Ellis said. "Whoever is the presidential nominee is going to select his own nominee. But that doesn't mean it isn't possible." Helms supported Ronald Reagan for the GOP presidential nomination in 1976, helping Reagan to win the North Carolina primary. Helms is officially uncommitted this time, but has remained close contacts with Reagan.

Ultimately, Ellis said he and other backers of the television project — whom he declined to name — want it to continue after the 1980 elections and become a television network promoting conservative causes, patterned after successful

Christian-broadcasting systems. He said it would begin by producing 30-minute programs and short, 5-minute to 60-second spots, concentrating on one issue each, such as the SALT II treaty.

"We would feel it would be an alternative to what you'd get from the major networks," Ellis said, adding that he found the major networks' news to be uniformly slanted against conservative positions. Helms, who was a conservative editorialist on a Raleigh TV station before election to the Senate in 1972, said he has not encouraged efforts to push him for the vice presidency. But in an interview with The Associated Press, Helms said he believed the office could be "immensely powerful" if the vice president chose to be more independent of the president and become more active in Senate affairs than any have been in the past 30 years.

"That sort of scenario would have some appeal for me, but no more so than being a senator," Helms said. He was urged to seek the vice presidency earlier this summer by a vote of the state Republican Central Committee, and said he has received a number of letters encouraging him to seek it.

Capt. Calamai Couldn't Believe His Ship Sinking

By WARREN TALBOT
BOSTON (UPI) — She was a beautiful ship, perhaps the most lovely sea-going vessel of her day. Inside her plush ballrooms and cabins, passengers were enjoying the last night of their trans-Atlantic sea voyage. There was singing, dancing, good food and drink.

As captain of the Italian passenger liner Andrea Doria, Piero Calamai was charged with the safety and well-being of more than 1,700 people. He was confident. After all his ship was unsinkable. So what if it was foggy. He was experienced, he had a good crew, and he had traveled this same path many, many times before.

But the path Calamai had chosen was taking his ship on a collision course with the sleek Swedish liner Stockholm and a night of cold terror in which the courage of men, women and children from all walks of life would be tested to the ultimate.

At 11:10 p.m. on the night of July 25, 1956, off the coast of Nantucket Island the Stockholm rammed into the side of the Andrea Doria, leaving a huge, cavernous hole.

There was no time to scream. About 40 passengers aboard the Italian luxury liner were killed upon impact either in their sleep or while getting ready for bed. Some of their bodies simply disappeared into the black sea.

The Andrea Doria, enroute from Europe and scheduled to dock in New York the next day, began to fill with water. She was listing badly. The "unsinkable" ship was sinking. But Captain Calamai either couldn't or didn't want to believe it.

In 10 hours she would be at the bottom of the sea.

How more than 1,600 passengers were rescued is the subject of a book by author William Hoffer. The book, "Saved: The Story of the Andrea Doria and the Greatest Sea Rescue in History" was published on the 23rd anniversary of the sinking.

Hoffer's chronicle is not so much about how and why the sinking occurred, but about the passengers who for 10 terrifying hours fought fate and sometimes each other to survive.

"It's got to be one of the truly great adventures of our contemporary era," Hoffer said in an interview. "It was without a doubt the greatest sea rescue in history. Everybody on that ship that night had an incredible story to tell."

Hoffer, 36, whose most previous work was as co-author of "Midnight Express" which was made into a hit movie, interviewed more than 100 survivors of the accident and read thousands of pages of reports and investigations on the accident.

He started tracking down the survivors through old newspaper accounts. "Everybody I talked to could remember vividly what happened to them that night. Of course, they were all facing death and many fought hard to live," Hoffer said. "Everybody wonders what they would do when faced with death. Some will tell you what they would do, but no one can really be sure until that time comes."

Hoffer said there were people who admitted they turned cowardly and there were heroes who just shrugged off their actions.

For years after the accident many passengers spoke heatedly about Italian crewmembers abandoning ship before the passengers. Many others were critical of the way Captain Calamai handled the situation. "The chips were down. They thought they were going to die ... There were men who pushed in front of women and children ... There were people who fought each other for life jackets," Hoffer said.

The Andrea Doria had enough lifeboats to accommodate all the passengers, but because of the severe listing of the vessel, all the lifeboats on one side were inoperable.

Calamai sent out a SOS which was picked up by several vessels in the area. One of those ships was the French luxury liner Ile de France. She was far away from the scene and her captain Baron Raoul de Beaudan had a choice. Either turn back or proceed to Europe.

"He was literally on the edge of responsibility. It was entirely within his discretion not to turn around. He knew there were other ships closer to the scene," Hoffer said.

As it turned out the Baron's decision to turn around was a savior. His ship had enough lifeboats to send to the stricken wounded Italian ship. Hundreds of passengers were brought to safety by Ile de France crewmen who risked their lives in lifeboats dwarfed by the Italian liner.

At any moment the Andrea Doria could capsize, crushing the Ile de France lifeboats, taking the passengers and rescuers to the bottom of the ocean.

Calamai had decided he was going to go down with his ship, but he was talked out of it.

After the accident Calamai lived 12 more years never returning to sea and retiring in his hometown of Genoa, Italy.

Hoffer went to Italy to interview some of the sea captain's relatives. One of them, Calamai's daughter Marina, said her father never mentioned the sinking.

That silence was broken on his deathbed.

Rare Bird In N.Y. Zoo

NEW YORK (AP) — After a long pregnancy, a concave-casqued hornbill at the Bronx zoo has given birth to a chick — the first of its species ever born in this country.

The sex of the newcomer is yet to be determined. But it has white eyes like its mother. So, unless they turn to red like the father's, it is assumed the chick is a female.

A communique trilling news of the singular birth said that the only other zoo in the world known to have reared a chick of the species is in Singapore.

Concave-casqued hornbills are native to the forests of India, Malaysia and Sumatra. Their plumage is black, white and yellow, and they have enormous pale orange bills, leaving them among the more unfortunate-looking flying species.

The male hornbill initiates courtship by presenting gifts of food to a prospective mate. After she enters a nest cavity in a tree, it is walled up with fruit and mud, except for a small hole through which the expectant male passes food to the mother-to-be.

The female remains inside the nest for three to four months, during which the male feeds her and, later, the chick as well. On the fifth month, presumably, the old man rests.

Taste a Triumph. Surprising satisfaction at only 3 mg. tar.

With new Flavor-Intensified[™] Triumph, the taste comes through abundantly, the smoke reaches you smoothly, pack after pack.

If you've tried one of the very low tar cigarettes, and found you just couldn't stay with it, you'll understand why Triumph is quite an achievement. The first cigarette that gives you satisfying taste at only 3 mg. tar.

Smooth, easy draw.

With Triumph, even the draw is a surprise. There's none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph. The pleasure is effortless.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists decided to take a more sensible tack.

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology further than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw. That tiny "vents" in the rim of the filter work to smooth the taste. That lower-leaf tobaccos tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

Taste you can stay with.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, gives you a taste so satisfying, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.

TRIUMPH[®]

One of the lowest tar cigarettes you can smoke. The one with taste enough to stay with.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

3 mg. tar, 0.4 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

High Adventure Learning To Sail In One Week

By FRED FERGUSON
CHESTERTOWN, Md. (UPI)
—“Ready about. Hard alee!”
Or maybe it's, “Prepare to jibe. Jibe Ho!”
Whatever.
Oh boy, are we nautical, Sue, Terry and Gloria; Denny, Herb and me.
Adventure there was in a week learning to sail in serene waters on Chesapeake Bay.
And terror, too!
There's something about going aground the first time that does it. There are fearful moments, not to mention the exasperation that unravels nerves between skipper and mate. Like being referred to as Capt. Queeg. “I'm going to buy you a pair of marbles,” she said, recalling the Caine Mutiny.

And the embarrassment, such as when the little girl upon the shore said: “Daddy, I don't think they're going to make it.”
“Oh sure they will,” said he, just as the boat grounded on a shoal.

We'll not identify that crew since we all soon duplicated the feat while attempting to navigate the narrow channel from Fairlee Creek into the bay.

But once you've run aground several times, you feel you can handle almost anything. The confidence grounding imparts wipes out the chagrin of having made polite and patient powerboat skippers and sailing yachtsmen wait.

Only one was neither polite nor patient. He became known among us as skipper of the Golden Scumbucket.

And now, we really do know which of those commands are for tacking — “Ready about. Hard alee!” And which are for jibing, as distinguished from a jib, which is a sail, you know.

There are hundreds of sailing schools along the inland and coastal waters of the United States and more abroad. We chose one that crams a lot of basic sailing into a single vacation week but starts weeks earlier with a manual in the mail to study. It advises first off to wade on through its pages.

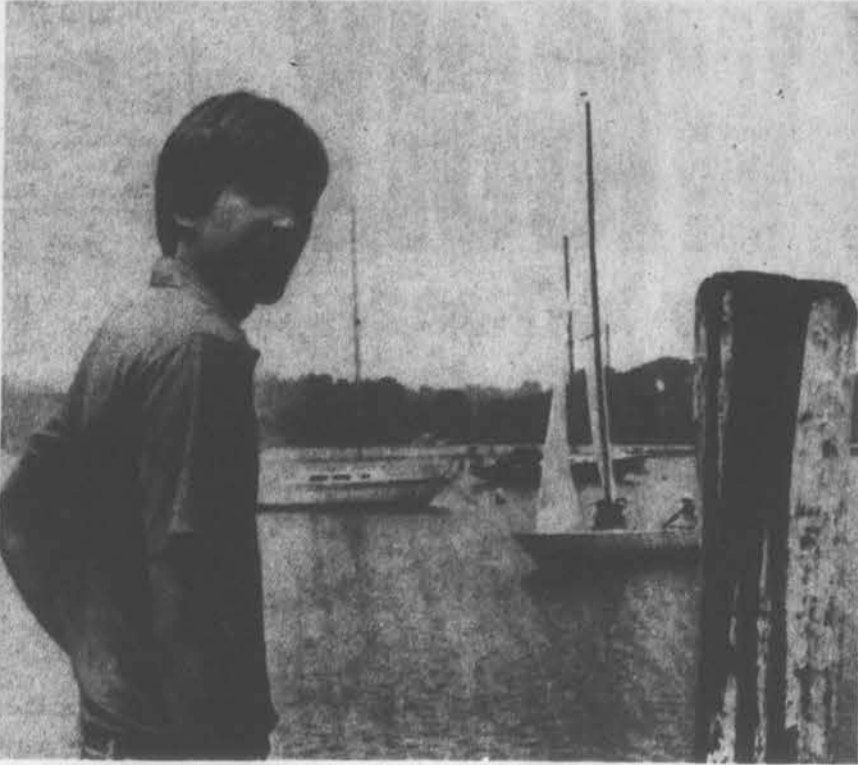

“Don't be overwhelmed by it,” writes Steve Colgate, who has sailed America's and Admiral's cup races and in the Olympics. Operator of this and other Offshore Sailing Schools at East Coast and Caribbean resorts, he advises, “Most readers won't get it all the first time.”

“I don't understand a word of it,” said Gloria. “Just keep reading,” said I, who didn't understand it either.

If we looked on our sailing course as a lark then, our arrival at the Great Oak resort here was a jolt. We were a few minutes late due to traffic. Class — that's right, class! — was in full swing with slide and film presentations and our first lecture.

We got one of those long cool looks from our instructor, Tom Dobroth, just 18. And us, all in our late 30s, or even later 40s!

But Tom, a sophomore at MIT who hails from Concord, Mass., sails either his Laser or with his parents on their Catalina 27 out of Marblehead. He found time here to crew on the Chesapeake's “log boats,” 19th century workboats that skippers raced to be first to Baltimore for top prices for their seafood. Today, these large sloops are raced spectacularly with all manner of sail crammed on.

TOM DEBROTH, just 18, is an instructor at a school that crams a lot of basic sailing into a single vacation week. Tom has been sailing since age 8, hails from Concord, Mass. (UPI Photo)

Tom has been sailing since age 8 and almost that long competitively in the 27-foot Olympic class Solings on which we learned. His architect father had one with which they competed on the Great Lakes when they lived in Glenview, Ill. He got his first teaching job three years ago after they won about all the waterborn championships, beating the man who hired him. He had tales to tell of ocean racing in summer, frostbite sailing in winter.

Each day for us, there was a half day's sailing, which is about all the waterborn instruction anyone can absorb. It was followed on four nights by two-hour lectures in which the basics covered in the manual began to make some sense.

Young Dobroth's serious approach soon rubbed off on his students. And we did need help. There was the time we were executing a man overboard drill. A life preserver is tossed in the drink. The “rescue” is effected by turning and stopping at the preserver to pick it up — easy enough in a powerboat, tricky under sail.

You must fall off or head up, tack or jibe, to bring the boat into the wind so that it loses way as it approaches the preserver. There's a good deal of judgment and decision making in a short time.

There was a student who tacked and jibed and tacked again, executing beautiful circles.

“What do you want to do now?” asked Tom, keeping it cool. “Let me think,” she said.

But we all got it — eventually. We soon learned to do much the same thing in picking up our mooring or, even more tricky, arriving at the dock.

Most sailboats, these days, operate under auxiliary power when doing these things. But there is always the time when the motor conks out. We at least feel we could handle it although a lot more experience will help. We also learned what may be the primary evil of boating today.

“One thing,” said Tom. “Go into sailing understanding that anyone can operate a pleasure boat without any training and that is the trouble, so far as I personally am concerned.”

“All you need to buy and run one of these powerboats is money. So occasionally you get wild men at the helm. You have to watch out for them.”

During the week, we talked a lot about this; how the sport has been successful in policing itself through such organizations as the U.S. Power Squadrons, the Coast Guard Auxiliary and various sailing groups.

Then came “free sailing,” when you venture forth in your sloop without benefit of instructor aboard.

We were returning to port when the skipper of that Golden Scumbucket, a cruising sloop and not a powerboat, it turned out, tired of waiting for a slow moving boat under sail.

Violating the rules of the road and with a party of revelers aboard, he powered up and passed to starboard in a narrow channel. In the process, he ignored warnings from those aboard his own boat and endangered not only us and his own boat, but two outbound cabin cruisers, forcing them out of the channel.

While “free sailing” taught us about such hazards of boating today, it also provided humble lessons.

The “Capt. Queeg” reference occurred when we ran aground while sailing out of the channel.

This would-be skipper had said something perfectly reasonable about shutting up while he considered how to get us out of this fix. Whiplashed with the unfair comparison to the unbalanced Quigg, he then struggled manfully to free the boat, following such prescribed procedures as rocking the boat.

Of course Gloria, when she eventually agreed we were aground, simply paddled us free. Such tales of waterborn woe make for great dinner table conversation when you have other couples — pardon the pun — in the same boat.

Our group, all with little sailing experience at the start, talked of plans to capitalize on our achievement, represented by a diploma presented at week's end.

Sue Fegan, who had always wanted to sail, and her husband, Denny, from King of Prussia, Pa., set out for the nearest marina to start looking at boats with an eye to buying a small one.

Terry Timm from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and Herb Weber from LaGrangeville, N.Y., who had sailed his canoe on lakes and rivers, now considered a charter to cruise the Caribbean under sail.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day and evening for you to contact persons you would like to be allied with in the future. Be sure to be as cheerful as possible when in the company of friends and relatives.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You are able to get routines operating on a more efficient basis now by applying yourself to them seriously. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put your affairs in better shape and find improved ways of adding to present income. Steer clear of unwanted temptations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Go after whatever you desire in a most positive way and attain it. The social side of life should not be neglected now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Concentrating on how to gain personal aims will bring you good ideas now. Express your finest talents.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Contact many friends who can be helpful with good ideas for your advancement. Show more cooperation with associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Bring your talents to the attention of higher-ups who can help you commercialize on them. Think along more constructive lines.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Find a more fascinating outlet through which to express your talents. Sidestep one who is doubtful of you without due cause.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure that you keep any promises you have made to others and maintain their goodwill. Seek happiness with loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to please associates more and come to a fine understanding. Take steps to improve your health and appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Acting too hastily on a project without proper preparation could result in failure. Think and act constructively.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Some particular talent you have can be expressed more effectively at this time. Strive for increased security.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make the changes necessary at home that will improve conditions there. Much happiness can be yours tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can coordinate mind and hands remarkably well, and will be most inventive, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can so that the most can be made of the brilliant ideas here.

Bob Hope Recalls Joke About Passaic Censored By Chinese

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — If

you're an American comic touring China, there are a couple of subjects you might want to omit from your routine. Gags about Chairman Mao, for example, aren't likely to fly, nor are jokes about Vietnam or cultural revolutions or Passaic, N.J.

Passaic, N.J.? "Yeah," says Bob Hope. "Passaic, N.J."

Hope learned of this peculiar Sino sensitivity in Peking a few weeks ago, while taping a routine for a three-hour NBC special. They were at Democracy Wall, where Chinese citizens plaster posters containing complaints about their government.

Hope, playing a curious tourist, encounters a Chinese man busily plastering posters on the wall complaining of pollution, urban crime, housing shortages and hunger.

"Gee, you have all those problems here in China?" Hope asks.

"No," the man replies. "In Passaic, N.J."

The Chinese censors asked Hope to excise the bit from his show.

"They were very polite, but they requested that we didn't add that to the show," Hope says. "They made me sign a paper saying I wouldn't use the Democracy Wall with the (Passaic) jokes. They wanted to make sure they weren't on. You have to go along with it. I didn't want to get in a beef with them."

China, it seems, was concerned that running down Passaic would be in violation of an agreement with Hope's people that the Chinese comedians in the show wouldn't interfere with America's internal affairs, and vice-versa. China didn't want Passaic to be offended.

"They didn't understand that we do that kind of thing all the time," says Hope.

Hope had other troubles. While rehearsing for an evening gala, he asked that his monologue be taped. "You never know when you might find something good in rehearsal," he says.

"Well, I gave 'em jokes, they didn't give me any laughs. I thought the audience would be at least 50-50 Chinese and American. I walked on and started doing my monologue, and I bombed. Boom. I had a poundcake on my hands."

"I looked out and saw that it was at least 90 percent Chinese. I yelled for an interpreter, and started over. I'd tell the jokes, and he'd get the laughs."

The censors, Hope said, "were very concerned about a lot of things. I satirize almost everything, all the bicycles, ping pong, the traffic, the hotel, the food, the drink Mao-Pi. I said the drink was so strong, one drink and your head goes through a cultural revolution."

"Between that and the regular show, the guy came to me and said, 'Please don't use that joke.' So, I changed it. I said, 'One drink and your head feels like the Gang of Four.'"

Gang of Four jokes are big in China this season. "The Chinese comedians do so much about them, everything is the Gang of Four, everything detrimental."

Hope's special, "The Road to China," airs Sept. 16. I don't know what it will do in the ratings, but they'll love it in Peking. And Passaic.

Newsmagazines Lose To Reruns

NEW YORK (AP) — Television-watchers who might have preferred something new on the tube had sports and the networks' newsmagazines to choose from during the week ending Aug. 12. They apparently preferred reruns, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

ABC's "20/20" finished 24th in the ratings, and "Prime Time Sunday" on NBC tied for 37th place, with a repeat of CBS' "White Shadow."

CBS' "60 Minutes," on the other hand, did comparably better with repeat segments — a tie for 16th place. CBS grabbed the first five places in the networks' prime-time ratings race with repeats, including "The Jeffersons" in first place and "Alice" in second.

ABC, meanwhile, listed 10 of the next 15 programs ranked, and won the networks' competition for the third week in a row.

The rating for the No. 1 show was 24.7. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, nearly a quarter saw the program.

ABC's strength through the middle and lack of shows at the bottom paid off in a rating for the week of 15.9. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 15.9 percent of the homes in the country with television were watching ABC.

CBS was second at 14.7, and NBC third at 11.8.

CBS listed three of the week's five least-watched programs, including a movie, "Mixed Company," in 59th place, "Stockard Channing in Just Friends" in 62nd and a previously broadcast "CBS Reports" documentary on mental health in 63rd. NBC's "Project U.F.O." was No. 60, and "Hardy Boys Mysteries" on ABC was No. 61.

Stage Debut By Joe Namath

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — "Broadway Joe" Namath opened in the Pulitzer Prize-winning play "Picnic" far off Broadway to a warm and sentimental response.

About 2,500 people were in the audience Tuesday night as the former New York Jets quarterback made his stage debut in the Kenley Players production of the William Inge play at E.J. Thomas Performing Arts Hall at the University of Akron.

Namath, 36, appeared tailored for the role as Hal, a former college football star and a drifter.

The play runs one week each in Akron, Columbus and Dayton.

TWJDHV OJHV LWQTRDB

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — PHOTOGRAPHER'S GIRL FRIDAY DEFLATED SILLY LADY.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Fabled Ship Of Blockade

By Dr. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — The recent reproduction of Edward James's watercolor "A. D. Vance" in a national magazine should not have gone unnoticed by North Carolinians. The watercolor, painted during the Civil War by an amateur who spied on Confederate ships in St. George's, Bermuda, depicts one of North Carolina's most exciting enterprises.

The "A. D. Vance" was really the "Ad-Vance," a steam packet purchased in Scotland by the state of North Carolina and named for Gov. Zebulon B. Vance.

Adjutant General James G. Martin, concerned over the difficulty of obtaining clothing and other supplies for North Carolina's troops during the Union blockade of the coast, originated the idea and Vance carried it out.

In 1863, the governor sent John White, a Warrenton merchant, to Great Britain for the purpose of selling warrants for cotton which the state agreed to deliver to any Southern port for pickup by British vessels.

White was remarkably successful, for the Britons eagerly sought North Carolina cotton. With money from the sales and with loans the state purchased for about 100,000 pounds sterling the steamer "Lord Clyde" which had been carrying passengers and mail between Dublin and Glasgow.

Outfitted as a blockade runner capable of 17 knots, the side-wheeler rechristened the "Ad-Vance" was loaded with 250 tons of merchandise, and placed under the command of Thomas M. Crossan and the captaincy of a Scot named Wylie.

Arrival of the "Ad-Vance" at Wilmington, after slipping through the blockade, provided a great boost in morale at a crucial point in the war.

Even more important, the fabled steamer provided an export market for North Carolina cotton which was taken to Bermuda and reloaded on British vessels.

On the return trips, the "Ad-Vance" was loaded with merchandise — blankets, leather, shoes, clothing, foodstuffs, tools, and even arms.

North Carolina was the only state in the Confederacy to insist upon clothing its own troops, and the "Ad-Vance" helped build up a surplus of some items.

From June, 1863, until September of the following year, the "Ad-Vance" made 11 round-trips through the blockade to Bermuda. The success was so great that the state purchased part interest in three other steamers — the "Don," "Hansa," and "Annie."

Blockade running became a colorful but dangerous habit for the state's ships. The Navy Department estimated that in all the "Ad-Vance" completed 20 voyages and survived at least 40 "hairbreadth escapes" from Union ships patrolling the coast.

President Jefferson Davis and his cabinet were jealous over the success of Vance's "navy" and gave orders that all "private" ships were to reserve a portion of their space for cargo for the Confederate government.

Vance argued to no avail that state-owned ships were not "private." He assailed the illegality of the Confederate order, saying that the port of Wilmington was more effectively blockaded by the policies of the Davis government than by enemy ships.

The state eventually allowed Power, Lord and Co. of Wilmington to acquire half interest in the "Ad-Vance" after the vessel made a trip to Liverpool for overhauling.

In September 1864, the "Ad-Vance" prepared for a run through the blockade to Halifax, Nova Scotia. When the crew took on coal at Wilmington, they learned that the Confederate government had requisitioned all of the smokeless anthracite coal for its own ships, leaving for the "Ad-Vance" only inferior croppings from the Egypt Coal Mine in Chatham County.

At night on Sept. 9, the steamer slipped through the Union blockade and the following morning was in the clear, heading northeasterly. From the smokestacks, however, poured heavy smoke that could be seen for miles.

As the day progressed, a speck on the horizon became larger and larger — sure sign that a Union ship was in pursuit of the smoking vessel. Nightfall did not come early enough, for in the late afternoon shells from the USS "Santiago de Cuba" forced Capt. Wylie to surrender the steamer to avoid its destruction.

All the North Carolinians aboard claimed to be British citizens. Their pronunciation of "Home" as "ome" was so persuasive that they were allowed to go to Nova Scotia and thence to England.

The Union navy rechristened the captured vessel the USS "Frolic" and sent it back to the mouth of the Cape Fear where it took part in the second bombardment of Fort Fisher.

Thus the steamer was turned upon the state for which it had given brilliant service for a period of 15 months.

Spotty Impact By Recession

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP. Most economists believe we are in the much-heralded recession, but the visible effects are very spotty so far. And the feeling is that some areas of the country will continue to fare better than others as the downturn continues.

In a very general sense, all parts of the country are experiencing lower retail sales, and that slump was heightened by the recent gasoline shortage and higher prices. Tourism has suffered as gasoline lines were widely publicized. Residential construction has softened in most parts of the country, with the notable exceptions of Georgia and Florida.

There are some weak spots in specific areas of the country. Declining auto sales are hurting the Midwest, and the effects are trickling down to suppliers as well. Southern textile and furniture companies have experienced some weakening.

Strong spots include high technology in the Northeast, petrochemicals and agriculture in the Southwest, and aircraft manufacturers in the West.

Economists do not expect a repeat of the 1974 bust for a number of reasons. First, there has not been a build-up of excessive inventories, the trigger of the last recession. Inventories are heavy in autos, but retailers and other manufacturers have run their businesses cautiously in the last several years.

Second, while housing has softened in some parts of the country, there has not been a great deal of speculative building. Mortgage money is still available, although rates are quite high. Demand for housing is expected to remain at a fairly high level due to needs of the post war baby boom.

Finally, capital goods spending is expected to remain strong, as businessmen are looking at more than just immediate needs.

It must be added, however, that the projection if a mild recession is based on two things — personal and business tax cuts early in 1980, and the avoidance of external events such as a monetary crisis or problems in OPEC which would affect the availability and the price of foreign oil.

Growing Cache Of Marijuana

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — While Warren County police are busy confiscating marijuana caches, other county officials are trying to get rid of one. The marijuana evidence stashed in the old county courthouse for the past five years keeps getting bigger all the time.

The cache was begun five years ago when 220 pounds were confiscated in a drug case. Now, court officials are adding to the stash with evidence from new drug cases as they come in.

Judge William Young has signed orders almost yearly for the marijuana to be burned. But each time he does, the county has to apply to the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency for an open burning permit. So far, the state has denied each application.

"Frankly, I'm surprised some of it hasn't disappeared over the years," said a county official who asked not to be identified.

Fall Armyworms Are Showing Up

According to Mike Regans, Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent, fall armyworms are beginning to show up in some parts of the state. Although it is unusually early for the pests, moths have been detected in almost all traps that are being monitored, said the agricultural agent.

Farmers should scout their pastures and hay fields now to detect any possible damage. Lanate is now labeled for use on bermuda grass, with rates of application from one half to three-fourths pounds active ingredient per acre, with the lowest rate used for ground application for worms less than one-half inches in length.

For more information, call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, 758-1196.

Safer Than A Motorcycle

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Moped is safer than a motorcycle, says the UNC Highway Safety Research Center.

Statistics show that Moped riders have 1.2 fatalities per 100 accidents compared to 2.25 per 100 for motorcycle riders.

Program manager Bill Hunter says the difference in the statistics is speed. The top legal speed for a Moped in North Carolina is 20 miles per hour. Hunter says motorcycles are usually going faster when they are hit or hit something.

New Reason Why Johnny Can't Read

By HOWARD APPLIGATE
PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Two professors have offered a new reason why Johnny can't read as well as he ought to.

They say it's the books they've been giving him in the 4th, 5th and 6th grades.

The Oregon State University professors and other educators call the problem the "middle grade slump."

Gwyneth Britton and Margaret Lumpkin, both professors of education at OSU, have developed a computerized readability analysis program. It can measure how easy it is to read of almost anything. That includes income taxes — a project they took on to help the state simplify and clarify its forms.

In their own field of education they have found that reading books for children in grades 1 through 3 are on target as far as reading ease or difficulty is concerned but it is a different story with reading books for grades 4, 5, and 6.

"Seventy percent or more of the middle grade stories were written above the publisher's designated reading grade level — and considerably above the reading abilities of the students assigned to read them," report Profs. Britton and Lumpkin.

"It is inconceivable," the professors report in a national journal devoted to the teaching of reading, "that hundreds of thousands of dollars in federal and state dollars are being spent on reading instruction and reading materials without adequate verification of reading level."

As a result, they say "many children who have demonstrated average and above average ability in reading during the primary grades encounter great difficulty with the reading materials in grades 4 through 6."

Diverse factors ranging from teachers to TV have been blamed. But they say "few critics have examined or questioned whether the accuracy of the grade level labeling could be contributing to this problem."

The two Oregon State professors pose these questions:

—What percent of the stories should be written at the published grade level rating of a text? If 70 percent of the stories in a 4th grade text are written at the 6th, 7th and 8th grade reading levels, should it be labeled and sold as a 4th grade text?

—Why can't teachers be provided with precisely labeled reading textbooks independently verified by textbook commissions? Or a national textbook standards agency?

—How can we expect teachers to give individual studies for students when the texts are mislabeled in terms of reading grade level?

—How can children be gradually challenged by increasingly more difficult stories in a text when the "easy, then more difficult" sequencing does not exist, either within a book, or within a series?

—Why aren't teachers or textbook committees provided with readability documentation prior to textbook selection so that the best series for the needs of their student populations can be purchased?

"The tools for accurate readability labeling are available but are not being used accurately or effectively," they say. "Most publishers who submit textbook briefs stating that they have calculated reading levels are using hand calculations on too few samples with only one or two readability formulas."

The Britton-Lumpkin computerized analysis includes the use of the "five best researched and most commonly used" readability formulas. The five are brought together in computer programs that provide a quick readability readout.

"The unfortunate part," they say, "falls on the unsuspecting student, who suffers the sting of failure. And parents also feel the defeat and trauma their children experience for this reading frustration and are quick to blame the schools."

Choir Marking Its Anniversary

GRIMESLAND — The Senior Choir of St. Monica Missionary Baptist Church here will observe its anniversary Sunday at 4 p. m. at the church.

Thousands Of Computers Invading Citizen Privacy

By H.D. QUIGG
UPI Senior Editor

Once there was a Duchess who told Alice: "Tis love that makes the world go round!" Alice said no. "It's done," she said, "by everybody minding their own business!" Alice had her own Wonderland. I have mine.

On or about 2:30 p.m., July 18, I stepped into it. My bank. I presented a savings withdrawal slip for $10,000 to a teller.

"That's a lot of money," he said. "Get an O.K."

I stood in line and in 20 minutes reached a young woman who looked at my passbook and withdrawal slip. She looked long and severely. She frowned. Merciful heavens, she thought passed my mind, she's going to ask why I want the money. She's going to ask...

"What are you going to do with it?" she asked sternly. "Put it in a better bank," I replied, groping aghast.

"There is no better bank," she said.

The ensuing palaver took a lot out of me. I thought of saying I was going to give it to Richard M. Nixon for past favors or I was going to change it into Susan B. Anthony dollars and sprinkle it... never mind. The clerk went to higher authority. She returned with an O.K.

She showed the documents to the clerk next to her and said: "He says he's going to put it in a better bank." A shaken man, I finally got a cashier's check and left, feeling maybe a great machine in the bank's bowels might now have me filed as "that man who says he's going to..."

The clerk's question was a minor assault on one man's privacy — tiny indeed compared to what's been going on in past years in public and private institutions. Granted, the question was crudely engineered, a passing irritant. Nevertheless, where do they get off asking me peremptorily "what are you going to do" with my own property?

But the major assault on American personal privacy — a supreme irritant — lies in what one critic has called the trend toward a Dossier Society.

President Carter has reported (it is not recorded whether he gulped when he first heard of this) that "the federal government holds almost four billion (4,000,000,000!) records on individuals, most of them stored in thousands (!) of computers; federally funded projects have substantial additional files." The government is said to maintain more than 8,000 data systems.

The exclamation points are mine. The foregoing statistics are only a foothill to the mountain of computerized record-keeping systems kept by banks, credit bureaus, insurance firms, utilities, medical facilities, mail junkies, investigating outfits, and what have you.

Carter pointed out that the federal records are needed to run its hundreds of undertakings and then said: "Modern technology, however, makes it possible to turn this storage into a dangerous surveillance system."

Sixty-three percent of the American public couldn't agree more. That is the Harris-poll finding on Americans who believe the use of digital computers should be sharply restricted in the future to preserve personal privacy.

Once an item of info enters the computer's dossier, most often it is there in perpetuity. Larking? Well, let us see.

Death by computer

In upstate New York, Charles Weldner, 43, says he is still dead. Doornail dead he's been for a year. Consigned to eternity by errant megabits in a digital bog. Waiting to come alive by the grace of a computer that now has to be fed a lie in a government wheedle to resurrect him.

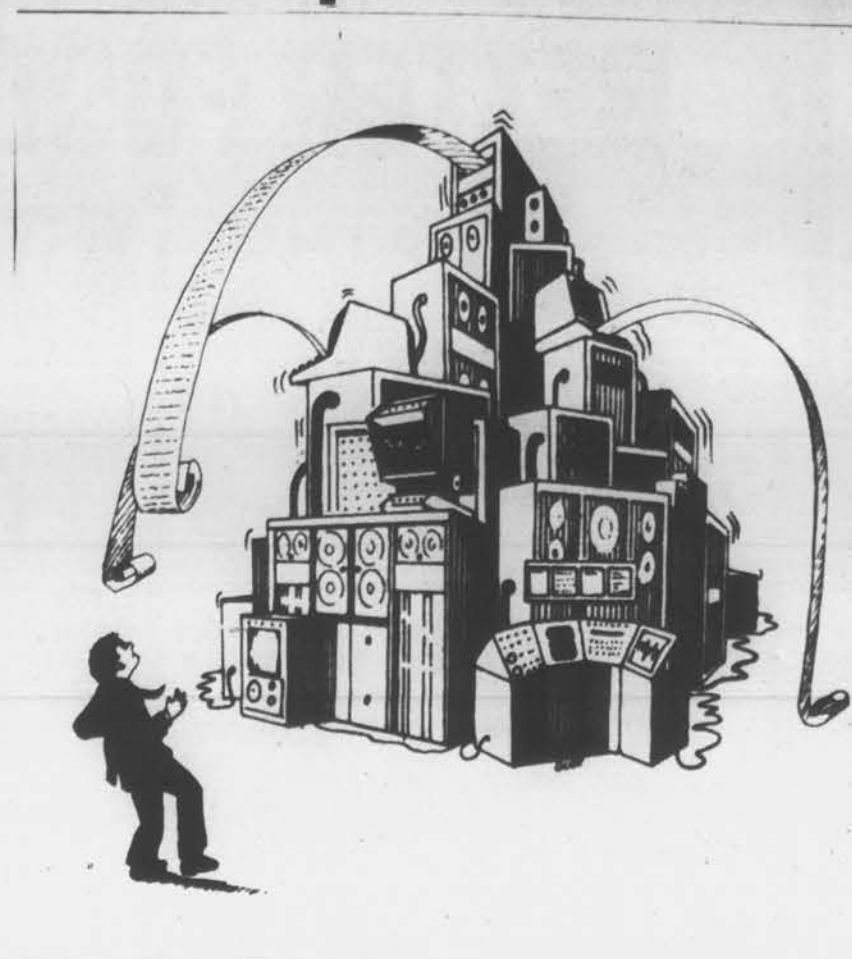

"They told my lawyer that they have to lie to the computer to get me back alive," Weldner said when I phoned him in late July. "They have to feed a lie into it. They are supposedly straightening my case out, but as far as I'm concerned it's not straightened out."

Weldner lives in Dryden, N.Y., has a wife and eight children, and a Social Security computer insists he drew his last breath Aug. 8, 1978. He laughed when his monthly disability payments for a 1963 accident began coming under his wife's name. Then, 10 days before Christmas, his wife was notified she was a beneficiary in his death.

Then his Social Security benefits stopped. The Weldners stopped laughing. He was shunted from one Social Security office to another, and was told that a typist probably sent the wrong code, computer language for "deceased" instead of, say, an address change. Word of his dossier death got out when he phoned the UPI bureau in Rochester, N.Y.:

"I'm gone. I don't exist anymore. I have to prove I'm alive."

He hired a lawyer, Anthony Dentino of Rochester, who found that the fail-safe computer system was programmed "so that if someone's dead, it's hard to start the checks up again." When I queried Dentino as to what gives in this "lie" feeding, he said: "In essence they have to defraud the computer. They said they have to 'beat the system.' I'm praying it's straightened out."

Some things never get straightened out, cradle to grave. And even if they're straight, where do government and private institutions get off putting them on file and swapping them around? That's what has the public steamed up, according to recent surveys.

People don't want their privacy invaded. But they insist on their right to know what's going on inside government, a right that entails invading a lot of other people's privacy. People want crime stamped out. But how can law enforcement agencies operate with informants who have stopped informing because criminals have the right to get the files that show who informed on them? The proper balance is a stumper.

Atrocious dataveillance slips
Still, the polls show that most people want action now to stop what they consider a slide from sly surveillance to dotty dataveillance on the part of government, banks, insurance companies, employers, schools, and other aspects of Big Brotherism inputting its foot in it. There are plenty of slips atrocious. The novelist Kay Boyle in San Francisco confirms that her government law-enforcement files, which she got under the Freedom of Information Act, contained a notation that she'd had an amorous affair with the poet Ezra Pound before the first World War. She says she was 10 years old at the time (1913), never met Pound until many years later, and didn't like him then.

There is the case of Edward I. Koch, now mayor of New York, who in 1946 was rejected for life insurance because a neighbor in a spiteful and absolute lie told an investigator that Koch had had leukemia 10 years before. That turned Koch into a vigorous espouser of privacy legislation. It led to his co-sponsoring when he was a Congressman — along with Rep. Barry M. Goldwater Jr. — of the Privacy Act of 1974, the major privacy law.

Arthur R. Miller of Harvard, a law professor and privacy expert, tells about a talented young woman who had a galling time getting a job when she got out of college. Employers were suspicious, it came out later, because of an entry in her university file: "Melinda's mother is emotionally unstable." The comment had been made by the girl's sixth-grade teacher, who had met the mother only casually. That damaging remark had followed the girl for 15 years without challenge to its reliability or relevance.

"That is a real story," Miller says. "It is now impossible because of law. It goes back to the era when academic bosses could drop anything they wanted into a student's file."

"But your story about Weldner, the man who claims he's alive, is a sign of the times; once the great information machine starts getting cranked up, there's no stopping it. You're not talking about a little piece of information put away in a manila folder — you're talking about a system."

"You're talking about a high-technology, mechanized system that has a life of its own. And indeed the words that Weldner used are absolutely typical of this phenomenon. He said the computer doesn't know I'm alive. Well, the computer doesn't know anything; it's people running the computer. "And it's this tendency to treat these information systems as if they were living, breathing animals that we owe respect to and we owe deference to, and in a sense we owe our futures to, that to me in a deep psychological sense is one of the most distressing aspects of computerized information."

"And I happen to be a lover of computers and a believer that they provide the administrative tools for executing a policy like social security. We couldn't have a social security system without that technology. Hiding behind the computer

"But the notion that it's a living, breathing, functioning, and controlling system is crazy. We owe it no deference. Our lives should not depend on it. We should be able to look it in the teeth and say: You've got wrong data — you've got improper data — you're talking to the wrong people. "Everybody hides behind it. It's marvelous — that guy in Social Security is hiding behind the computer. It's not the computer that's wrong, it's people."

Miller recalled the case of a bar association screening committee holding up the admission of a completely qualified applicant because their inquiry showed a signature on a left-wing petition. It developed that the petition had been put together when the applicant was two years old.

"So it obviously wasn't the same signature. But you get this constant name confusion, data irrelevancy, recorded gossip. And very often the irony is that the agency doesn't even use its own information sources to check the accuracy.

"In the Kay Boyle case, and the law applicant, a simple minded individual who could count would have figured out the age. Or in the case of a false arrest down in Texas, the police, had they simply used the procedures available for checking fingerprints, could have realized they had the wrong information in two hours; instead, they kept the man in jail for eight days."

phony story told to an investigator, there are 4,700 insurance companies touching the lives of Americans. The commission report observes a "long-standing practice" of reporting about a person's health by agents "in part on the basis of interviews with neighbors and associates."

The insurance industry is among society's largest gatherers and users of information about individuals. Insurers frequently collect marketing and actuarial information. "Some life insurance agents," the report says, "have more comprehensive knowledge about a client's financial affairs than perhaps anyone else."

One medical information bureau maintains records on 11 million people and is subscribed to by nearly 700 U.S. and Canadian life insurers. One inspection bureau engaged in investigative reporting, mainly in insurance underwriting, prepares over 15 million reports each year.

 that often the field worker who sees neighbors gets low pay, has a modest education, and is under pressure to produce.
 The Harris poll finds that 63 percent of Americans want the types of information used about insurance applicants determined by law. And 55 percent of state insurance commissioners agree.
 Overall in the poll, three out of four Americans now believe "the right to privacy" should be akin to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. A big 72 percent feel that most organizations ask for more sensitive information than is necessary.

The privacy invaders
 In that respect, the foremost privacy-invaders they accused were, in the order of onus: Private sector — finance companies, credit bureaus, insurance, credit cards, media. Public sector — internal revenue, CIA, FBI, welfare, census bureau.

Faced with results of its own poll that showed a general fear that privacy is "being needlessly, even surreptitiously, violated," Citibank in New York recently issued a booklet explaining what it needs to know from its customers and

why. "We won't give your personal financial records to the government or to anyone else unless a legal order compels us to."
 That "anyone else" may clang a gong in the skull of those who wonder how in tarnation the whole world of junk mails found little them. It's simple. Anytime you answer any kind of come-on, you're shoved dead-duck onto the permanent floating lists. Each week the U.S. Postal Service delivers 2.3 pieces of unsolicited mail to the average home.

The mailer's trick is to winnow from millions of list-names the ones most likely to buy a product, vote for a candidate, or give to a fund. Is this invasion? Well, the commission devotes a whole chapter to it in the 1977 report, "Personal Privacy in an Information Society."

Nice title. Some authorities call our time the Information Age.

In that age, 1980 is the Year of the Census. One of the top national experts on privacy, Dr. Alan F. Westin, professor of public law and government at Columbia University, believes next year's "could very well be the worst or weakest census that we've had in the 20th century."

 Westin, author of six books on privacy and consultant to Sen. Sam Ervin in drafting the privacy act, developed the Harris privacy poll.
 "The Census Bureau is going to have to do a major job of convincing segments of the American public that no personally identified information will ever be released to anyone — the FBI, the welfare department, the immigration department," he says. "The federal statute is ironclad; they can only make statistical use of the information."
 "But there have been so many examples recently of Social Security being used to locate deserting fathers, that kind of thing, that today the poll shows 43 percent of the public do not believe that census information would be refused to another agency. That's a warning for 1980."

The census bureau estimates that 3.5 million people, 2.5 percent of the population, were not counted in the 1970 census. The undercount rate has run about 8 percent for blacks and 2 percent for whites in both 1970 and 1960.
 "There's a tremendous pressure in government to bring together a unified file or databank approach to all the kinds of welfare programs," Westin says. "If you want the information to be trustworthy, people have to feel that it's not going to be used against them by law enforcement or by regulatory welfare-type agencies."

 "In the field of employment privacy, one thing that has really shocked me is that in many, many places I've found that people are not putting in claims for psychiatric treatment that they're entitled to under their employment health programs. They're convinced that if they do, word will get back to their employer and be a basis for job discrimination."

Six states now have laws, all passed in the last four years, that give an employee of a private company the right to see what is in his personal record — Maine, California, Oregon, Michigan, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut. Experts feel that within two more years most of the large industrial states will pass laws similar to Michigan's.
 That "employee right to know" act says an employer may not file anything relating to associations and memberships in the community without the written consent of the employee.

Access to data
 On the federal level, the 1966 Freedom of Information Act got its present bite and scope in 1974 amendments that took wing from Watergate. That same year, 1974, also saw passage of the Federal Privacy Act.
 The FOI Act gives the citizen access to government data. The Privacy Act prevents access to data about citizens that is held by the government. They are sort of opposite sides of the same coin. FOIA allows us to watch our government. PA protects us against government data misuse.
 And they come into collision. A lot of the government data to which we need access to watch our government is about other people. Thus many government officials and agencies face a tough balancing act.

Historian Allen Weinstein recalls the Senate committee testimony of an organized crime loan shark and confessed killer who boasted that files he got through FOIA while he was in prison enabled him to identify the informant who had put a friend in jail. Asked what had become of the informant, he replied: "I don't expect him to be living anymore."

 FOIA has been invaluable as an investigative tool. However, three out of five FOIA requests now are filed by the business community, and a big percentage of requests to law-enforcement agencies comes from convicted felons or people under criminal investigation.

Apparently nobody anticipated the cost of the sister statutes, FOIA and PA. One survey reports the total federal government cost of complying with them at $42 million a year. The FBI alone has 309 people working full time on requests, which arrive at a rate of 60 a day.

FBI compliance cost in 1978 was $9.6 million. From June, 1973, to June, 1979, it handled 73,000 requests. It takes four to six months to respond to requests. Sixteen percent of requests in the last few months were from prisoners.

"Probably the most serious problem we have," says an FBI official in its FOI branch, "is being able to protect our informants and to protect classified information. It requires line-by-line reading."
 "People want their privacy respected but at the same time I believe they also want to see the kidnapers put in jail, the bank robbers and the spies caught. So somewhere there's got to be a balance between how much you respect privacy and how much law enforcement there's supposed to be."

Balance is key
 Quinlan J. Shea Jr., director of the Justice Department's Office of Privacy and Information Appeals, says: "Society should at least know the judgment that's being made trying to avoid getting ground up in the fights between the absolutists. The privacy freaks think personal privacy is the only thing. The law enforcement freaks think anything that gets in the way of putting bad people in the slammer is bad."
 "And then you've got the openness freaks who say anything that keeps everybody from knowing everything about

Firewood Is 'In Season'

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — August is a good time to lay in a supply of firewood for winter use, says Dennis Adams, a district extension forester in Nebraska.

Adams says green wood needs at least six months to air dry to the optimum moisture level for fireplace use.

Properly dried wood burns more efficiently and cleanly, he adds. The moisture in green wood ranges from 50 to 200 percent of the weight of dry wood, and can cause smoking and smoldering.

Wood for drying should be cut in short lengths. Any pieces with a diameter greater than 6 inches should be split to expose the maximum surface for drying, says the University of Nebraska-Lincoln specialist.

Then, it should be stacked a few inches off the ground in a sunny, well-ventilated area. Cover the woodpile with weighted tar paper, plywood or a tarpaulin, or stack it in a pole shed to protect it from rain.

Adams says clear plastic covering will trap solar energy and speed drying, but the plastic should be framed away from the woodpile to keep condensed moisture from falling back on it.

CRISIS MEASURES
 KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — Facing a grave economic crisis and a serious threat to his 10-year hold on the Sudanese government, President Gaafar Nimeiri announced he will cancel a 50 percent increase in the price of gasoline and make major changes in his government.

TO UNDERLINE POLICY
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is under new orders to take whatever reasonable steps are necessary to make sure other countries understand that the United States does not recognize territorial waters beyond the three-mile limit.

TESTING — This machine utilizes gameboard-like targets to test the spread pattern and covering power of spray paints. The one-of-a-kind device, designed by technicians at Woolworth's Quality Assurance Laboratory in New York, electronically triggers the spray for a controlled amount of time. Data obtained from the paint covered targets are used to evaluate products being considered for sale...or for monitoring the quality of products already on the shelf. (AP Laserphoto)

Falls Result In Most Injuries

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most playground injuries occur when children fall from equipment. Researchers at the National Bureau of Standards have found less severe injuries occur if the ground under swings and jungle gyms is surfaced with such loose materials as sand and shredded hardwood bark. The researchers said such surfaces are particularly effective against head injuries.

Inventions Produced On Demand

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) —
The people who invented five-minute cream of wheat also take credit for teaching hospitals in Brazil, refrigerators on spaceships and the world's first plastic pencil.

These and a stupefying collection of other gadgets, ideas and innovations are turned out steadily by Arthur D. Little Inc., probably the biggest profit-making consulting firm anywhere.

For a fee, these people will invent, analyze, add up or think through practically anything.

These are the technicians who make sure all Anheuser-Busch breweries make beer that tastes exactly the same. In the same breath, they mention that they helped Owens-Corning invent Fiberglas and created the stills used by submarines to turn salt water to fresh.

They invented Cap'n Crunch cereal and the first bottled bloody mary mix. Not to mention the charcoal briquet. Or no-knock gasoline.

And they say there are plenty of other foods, gizmos and whatnots that everyone has heard of but that the clients want the world to think resulted from their own creativity.

Companies come to Little and other consulting firms when they have problems too big, technical or unusual to solve themselves. They range from testing drugs and creating flavors to designing machine parts and figuring out whether the world is ready for new products.

The engineers here seem to enjoy sniffing out new ways to solve old problems. This is why president John Magee likes to talk about the plastic pencil.

It looks ordinary enough; it writes and sharpens like the standard wooden variety. But unlike any before it, this one is plastic.

"What's spectacular is not the social impact but the fact that we take a traditional product and employ modern technology and make it in a new way that is more economical, conserving of resources and efficient," Magee says.

Empire Pencil Co. turns them out by the millions.

Little is one of a group of consulting firms loosely lumped together as "think tanks." Though Magee cringes at this label — "It conveys an image of isolation," he says. "We're out in the real world." — these are companies that trade in brain power.

Other big ones include the non-profit Batelle Memorial Institute and Stanford Research Institute as well as profit-making Booz Allen & Hamilton Inc.

Most of Little's thinking is done in eight drab brick buildings next door to a bowling alley on the industrial fringe of Cambridge. About 1,000 professionals, almost half of whom hold advanced degrees, work in a maze of 153 laboratories and offices.

The place looks like a small college campus, and the tweedy atmosphere is more like a college campus than a company that earned revenues last year of $120.9 million and profits of $5.3 million.

Unlike many other big consulting firms, less than a quarter of Little's work is for the federal government. Almost half the customers are private American businesses, and the rest are state government agencies and clients in foreign countries.

The company was founded in 1886, when Arthur D. himself set up a chemical testing lab in downtown Boston.

In a demonstration in 1921 of the power of chemistry, Little made a synthetic silk purse from a bunch of sows' ears. The small Victorian-style handbag is now in the Smithsonian Institution in Washington.

After World War II, Little expanded into management consulting and other kinds of product development. In the 1950s, for instance, it took on the problem of Puerto Rican rum. The liquor being sold in the United States did not appeal to American tastes, so Little developed the light variety that is now the standard Puerto Rican product.

In the 1960s, it took a similar hand in helping the Irish distill a whiskey light enough for Americans to appreciate.

Little's work changes with the times, and now a large part is concentrated on helping clients save energy and prevent pollution.

Each year, Little takes on about 1,000 new projects. Magee says it is possible for Little to do a job for $1,000, but most of the fees fall in the $50,000 to $100,000 range.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
 WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the days before the current recess began.

HOUSE
RECESS — The House voted, 338 for and 70 against, the stand in recess from Aug. 3 to Sept. 5. There was no debate on the issue. Members voting "yea" wanted to take the 32-day recess. Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea." Rep. Stephen Neal, D-5, voted "nay." Rep. James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

CHILD WELFARE — The House voted 204 for and 199 against, to require that federal outlays for certain child welfare programs be made available to states only through the normal appropriations channel of Congress. The vote killed a proposal to provide the money in the form of entitlements, that is, guaranteed payments which bypass the appropriations process.

The money in question is part of legislation (HR 3434) authorizing certain welfare programs under the Social Security Act. At issue on this vote was not the merits of child welfare but the question of which funding method Congress should employ — appropriations or entitlement. Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., a supporter of keeping child welfare funding in the appropriations channel, said too much of the federal budget already is "uncontrollable" by Congress because it has been excluded from "the annual oversight and review provided by the appropriating process." Rep. James Corman, D-Calif., who favored the entitlement procedure, said federal efforts to get children out of foster homes and into adoptive homes will succeed only if "state know how much money they are going to get and when they are going to get it...." He said the appropriations process generates uncertainty.

Members voting "nay" wanted to switch certain child-welfare funding to the entitlement process.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea." Neal, Preyer and Rose voted "nay."

SENATE
ETHICS — The Senate adopted, 50 for and 29 against, a resolution (S Res 220) that relaxes its ethics rules. House concurrence was not required, and the measure took effect immediately.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea." ANTI-RECESSION AID — The Senate passed, 69 for and 23 against, a bill (S 566) designed to help government blunt the recession which many economists say is now in effect. The bill, sent to the House, would provide federal grants to cities, counties and states, to be used to shore up government services and provide public-sector jobs and job-training.

The bill would provide $40 million in "countercyclical aid" to cities having jobless rates of six per cent or higher, effective with the Oct. 1 beginning of fiscal 1980. Also, it would make available up to $1 billion in aid to other urban areas if the national unemployment rate (now at 5.7 per cent) hits 6.5 per cent.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., a supporter, said: "This is the best anti-recession program yet devised. It works. It scarcely takes the time of three persons in Washington to administer. It goes directly to where it is needed. It is used by people who are in the best position to know what ought to be done with it."

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., an opponent, said: "We are now having inflation at about 13.2 per cent...Most members of Congress eagerly condemn inflation, (yet) while condemning the monster we vote to feed it and make its devastation worse."

Senators voting "Yea" favored a massive outlay to blunt recession at the risk of fueling inflation.

Pet Food Tasters A Pampered Crew

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN
 Associated Press Writer
 ST. ANNE, Ill. (AP) — On a shady knoll in the rolling countryside south of Chicago, some of the world's most pampered pooches work for a living by eating.

These chow hounds — 550 of them — live in immaculate kennels, and spend their lives testing dog food.

The dogs, 20 different breeds from Great Danes to tiny terriers, make up tasting panels at the Gaines Nutrition Center here, nestled on 195 acres.

Will they prefer a competitor's dog food over Gaines? Will they like a new formula being tested for market? Will they become ill and lose weight on certain diets? Will they gain too much weight on others? What do they go for the most — canned, dry or soft and moist foods?

Food preferences and health assessments are the basis for intensive analysis and study at the center. The dogs get complete physical examinations every six months.

Manager William Vollink says dogs are like people; they are what they eat.

At the center, their food is closely monitored. It is weighed, placed in identical stainless steel bowls each morning and put in the dog's "apartments," which have fenced-in outside runs.

Later, the leftover food is picked up and weighed again and data fed into a computer. A computer tape for a 5-year-old dog, for instance, may contain 3,500 observations.

Just by turning their heads to select food from a certain bowl, the dogs determine what flavors and textures of dog food are most acceptable. Some dogs get hooked on one type of food and will turn up their noses at any other. Some are right-footed or left-footed and will always chose the bowl on one side. All this has to be taken into account for accurate assessments.

Vollink says it takes his staff six to eight months to verify the claims for just one product. "Some dogs like cheese, some don't," said Vollink. "There is more of a variation of tastes within a single breed than between different breeds."

"Basic flavors are beef, egg, liver, chicken, bacon and egg. It may surprise you to know that nine times out of 10 a dog will select bacon and egg," he said. "Color co-ordination in the meal doesn't mean anything to a dog, they are somewhat color blind."

Vollink said, "Purebreds are used because they have predictable growth and weight. The breed, size and age spectrum is maintained to duplicate as much as possible kinds of dogs Gaines' customers are apt to own."

Some dogs suffer weight problems and lose their places on the taste testing panel. They then become ideal subjects for tests of low-calorie dog food.

The kennels are full of happy tail-wagging dogs barking welcome to strangers. They are bred at the center and generations of them are monitored from puppyhood through old age.

Some are fed only one product throughout their lives and are not aware of any other kind of food, said Vollink.

"Our oldest dog now is 16, but the tests continue after they pass into old age," said Vollink. "We have an old age home where they get special attention and monitoring of food made especially for aging dogs."

"One thing we do add is love. Each dog has a name. He periodically gets a bath, teeth cleaning and nail clipping. Each dog has three to five pairs of eyes on him every day and the staff always is alert for signs of trouble."

Farm Horsepower, Not Horse Power

By MICHAEL B. LAFFERTY
 Associated Press Writer
 COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — No matter what the price of fuel, farmers are stuck using fossil fuels to produce the nation's food and fiber, says an Ohio State University agricultural economist.

There's not much chance for Ohio farms to return to the romantic pre-World War I agriculture in which animals powered the farm.

Sam Huber, of Ohio State University, says there isn't enough land to grow feed for the horses, nor are there enough people living in the country to operate the number of teams needed to grow food for 200 million Americans.

"You're talking about 50 teams of horses to replace one 100-horsepower tractor. It would take 50 men to run the teams so you just wouldn't have the manpower," Huber said.

"Since agricultural labor has been absorbed into new industries, the labor would not be available unless you took everyone in the auto industry and farm tractor industry and shifted them back into agriculture. Of course, they'd probably be making buggies."

Huber said the Civil War and the two world wars hastened the mechanization of American agriculture. Before World War II, he said, there were slightly fewer than 100,000 tractors in the state, while after the war there were more than 150,000 tractors.

He said the increase was necessary to compensate for the loss of manpower to the military. However, when the shooting stopped, many farm jobs no longer existed.

Huber says agriculture economists aren't seriously contemplating agriculture without fossil fuels. He says hydrogen-fueled machinery is a possibility. However, he says, "It's more likely we'll have fuels similar to the ones we have now, such as gasoline made from coal."

Huber says in any future energy crunch, farmers will have to be assured of fuel to power their machinery. He says the amount that farmers could save would be minuscule since agriculture fuel use amounts to about 3 percent of the total used in the nation.

Museum Houses Vintage Cars

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The Henry Ford Museum here has one of the most comprehensive collections of automotive vehicles in the world.

Included in the collection is America's first automobile offered for public sale, an 1896 Duryea motor wagon; Henry Ford's first vehicle, the 1896 quadricycle; personal cars of J.P. Morgan, Water P. Chrysler, Charles A. Lindbergh and Thomas A. Edison, plus the 1902 Ford "999" driven by Barney Oldfield.

Tiny Planes Big Business For Builders

By MARGY McCAY
Associated Press Writer
MONTEZUMA, Iowa (AP) — They don't worry about mechanics' strikes or faulty engine mounts or black market half-fare coupons at Sig Field. That's because most of the planes have a 55-inch wingspan, no passengers and a "pilot" who keeps both feet on the ground.

Sig Field is host each year to the Sig Championships, a competition for model airplane builders and fliers sponsored by — who else? — Sig Manufacturing Co.

Sig, owned by Glen and Hazel Sigafoose, is an international manufacturer and distributor of model airplane kits and supplies. What began as a basement business in 1951 is now the largest employer in this Poweshiek County town of 1,350.

"I'd always been a model builder," said Sigafoose, stroking one of three cats that wander through his office in the sprawling, eight-building plant.

"We decided to get into the resale balsa wood business, and my idea was to fill the gap for the isolated model builder.

"We got the balsa from the sawmill and then cut it into sheets and rods. We were in a unique position because there was nobody else in the business. We sold about $5,000 the first year," he said.

The next year the Sigafooses began packaging a few hardware items and the third year began distributing other companies' products.

"Then, about 12 years ago, we began manufacturing kits."

Sig's 125 employees include three designers who have developed 65 model kits — everything from an 89-cent rubber-band-powered flier to the top of the line: a $79.95 radio-controlled scale model of a Ryan STA with a 72-inch wingspan.

"We're probably the largest company in terms of wooden flying model plane kits," said Sigafoose. "There are bigger companies, but they make plastic, ready-to-fly models."

Sig is virtually a farrow-to-finish operation — everything from balsa to paint, fuel to molded plastic parts are cut, mixed, manufactured or packaged here.

"We make everything for the kits except the metal screws," said Sigafoose, a former printer and linotype operator who prints his own catalogs and kit boxes. And if he can't find a machine to do a certain job, he creates one himself.

"You'd pay an engineer $15,000 to design one of these," he said, demonstrating how one of his inventions works. "I built this for, oh, maybe $3,000."

The Sigafooses don't just own and run the business — they live it. Both are licensed pilots: Hazel has more than 5,000 hours in the air and Glen has 3,700. Their full-size planes — models of which dot the pages of their catalog — comprise a "mini air force" based at Sig Field.

They began the Sig Championships five years ago. Sigafoose estimated there are 150,000 to 200,000 serious modelers in the country, about 80 percent of whom fly radio-controlled planes.

"Fifteen years ago our average customer was a teen-ager with a short attention span.

"Now, he's 35 or 40 years old, and once we get them, we never lose them. They build in the winter and fly in the summer."

Sig, whose annual sales are "in the $4 million to $5 million range," is currently enjoying a boom period — just when many companies are feeling the economic pinch.

"We go counter to the economy," Sigafoose said. "When the economy's booming, our customers are out buying houses and new cars. But when it slows down and they have just a little money, they buy model airplanes."

Silversmith's New Collection

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A sterling-vermell jewelry collection has just been introduced by a major American silversmith. A dozen different designs are available as pins or pendants on gold-filled chains ranging in length from 15 to 24 inches. The jewelry is made of sterling textured with 22-karat gold electroplate and hand-scrubbed. The designs include oriental birds, a Pennsylvania Dutch oval, a butterfly, a flower, a fan and a heart. Installation Credit Terms

Your credit must be satisfactory. Lowe's Cash Price doesn't include sales tax. Deferred Payment Price includes sales tax at 4%. If sales tax in your area differs, Deferred Payment Price & Monthly Payment will vary slightly. Life Insurance is available, but not required or included in our figures. Delivery charges, if any, not included. Annual Percentage Rate for Pa. stores is 15%, so payment's a bit lower. (Installment terms above are separate from our Credit Card Account terms.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy

If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. (Except on any products marked "Limited Quantities.") Our Raincheck Policy is just one more way we serve our customers' interests. Our largest stores have most advertised items in stock. Our smaller stores may not. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
