'David' Gently Bumping Along The Florida Coast

By RICK SPRATLING

Associated Press Writer

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

Hurricane David, losing some of its punch after carving one of the century's deadliest storm tracks through the Caribbean, bumped along Florida's coast this morning. But damage was surprisingly light and forecasters said the storm could swing north to threaten the Carolinas.

"We think it's going to parallel the coast and continue north and be a threat somewhere in the Carolinas sometime in the next 48 hours," said Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center here.

Hurricane-force winds slammed the wealthy playground of Palm Beach after the hurricane's eye skipped past Miami and Fort Lauderdale, hovering just offshore.

"When it gets by Palm Beach, the coast drops back," Frank said. "If it follows a more northerly course, it'll get farther away. It could go north or north-northwest. It's going to be moving up the coastline today....I don't have the expertise to say how closely."

During the night the storm appeared headed for the densely populated Miami-Fort Lauderdale area, then shifted course to take a more northerly track.

The small shift in direction wouldn't have been significant far out at sea, Frank said. "But when you put eight million people in its path, it becomes very significant," he added.

At least five hurricane-related deaths were reported in Florida. Two men suffered heart attacks as they strained to put up storm protection on their homes and another was electrocuted when his car hit a power pole. A driver was killed when his car overturned on a wet road and a woman was killed by a car as she hurried toward an evacuation center.

But property damage appeared moderate.

"A flop," said Arthur St. Amand, civil defense director in Broward County which includes Fort Lauderdale.

David, once a monster that killed at least 640 persons in its march through vulnerable island republics of the Caribbean, slipped to a relatively mild 90 mph as it neared the Miami shoreline shortly before dawn.

The storm's eye and fiercest winds, however, stayed just offshore, drifting northward past populous Fort Lauderdale and the mansions of Palm Beach. At 10 a.m. the storm's eye was just off Palm Beach at latitude 26.5 and longitude 79.6.

Forecaster Joe Pelletier said there was no reasonable explanation of why David weakened.

"There's nothing in the atmosphere or the Gulf Stream to have weakened the storm," he said. "Normally when it's out over water, it builds up. We're really surprised."

Frank predicted the storm would strike land about 80 miles north of Miami, near West Palm Beach, which had started to feel the effects of the storm.

High winds downed power lines in Palm Beach County, causing some blackouts and several small bush fires, authorities said. Police ordered motorists to stay off the highways because power lines were stretched across some roads.

Winds gusting to 70 mph were reported in Miami.

Some 2.5 million persons live in the area where David was expected to hit. As many as 80 percent had never been through a hurricane, Frank said. The last one to strike the area was Besty in 1965.

In South Florida, oceanside residents deserted plush condominiums, crowding into emergency shelters or heading north on clogged Interstate 95, the main artery out of the area.

The storm skipped north of the lower keys. In Key West, the Florida Highway Patrol reported high tides but no flooding.

"It's pleasant out. It's almost disarmingly calm," said dispatcher Pepper Lawless.

Thousands of evacuees sought refuge in emergency shelters. The famed Fontainebleau Hotel on Miami Beach took in all comers. "We are housing people whether they are guests of the hotel or just off the street," said assistant manager Larry Zanas. He said about 1,200 people were in the hotel, many dozing in the lobby.

Frederick's Path Unsure

By STEVE WILSON

Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Veering north of the path blazed by David, Hurricane Frederic swirled toward the Leeward Islands today and forecasters were unsure whether the storm might follow its older brother to the U.S. coastline.

"If you just take the motion right now and draw a straight line, it would go to South Florida," forecaster Miles Lawrence of the National Hurricane Center said.

"But that is an incredibly naive practice to guess that far ahead."

At 3 a.m. EDT, Frederic's center was near latitude north 17.7, longitude 61.8 west, about 50 miles north-northeast of Antigua.

Lawrence said Frederic was moving at about 15 mph and had sustained winds of 75 mph.

Frederic was expected to reach the northern Leewards about 60 miles north of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, this afternoon and 100 miles north of San Juan, Puerto Rico tonight.

Forecaster Ron White also would not rule out the possibility Frederic would follow David to the Gold Coast, a populous area of 2.5 million persons centering around Miami.

"It's still too early to say, but Frederic has a chance of going further north up the coast," he said. "Frederic is more or less on the line of least resistance."

"One low pressure system is pulling the other one along. Frederic might start following David abl the way, but Frederic is further north."

A hurricane watch was in effect today for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the Leewards, a chain of island separating the Caribbean from the South Atlantic.

"It could strengthen but it would have to do it really quickly to do any significant damage to the islands in its path," Lawrence said.

David, which roared through the Caribbean with 150 mph winds, struck the northern Windward and southern Leeward Islands, killing more than 600 persons on the way.

Jamison warned a slight shift in currents could threaten other islands.

"Strange things can happen," he said. "You can't assume these things are on railroad tracks that zip it on its way. They can do anything."

Surrenders In Shooting Spree

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) —

A Hartford man has been charged with first-degree assault for allegedly shooting at seven persons who were trying to lift his car off a young bicyclist, police say.

Alonzo Davis, 21, of Hartford surrendered to police Saturday evening in connection with the incident last Tuesday. Police said Davis' car struck the bicyclist, and when the boy's mother and others tried to lift the car to free the boy, Davis began shooting at them. They theorized that the driver panicked. Davis denied he fired the shots.

The boy who was hit by the car, Todd Joiner, 12, of Hartford was hospitalized in stable condition Sunday.

Hundreds Of Dead

Santo Domingo Is Digging Out

By NAT CARNES

Associated Press Writer

SANTO DOMINGO,

Dominican Republic (AP) —

Rocks filled main streets and rooftops jutted from the flooded Ozama River as the Dominican people dug out hundreds of bodies and began to clean up some of the

David.

Power poles were broken off at their bases, major hotels were damaged and restaurants were no longer recognizable in the wake of the storm, which killed at least 600 Dominicans and left 150,000 homeless, 90,000 of them in the Santo Domingo area, officials said.

The hurricane left 22 dead Wednesday in the tiny eastern Caribbean island of Dominica and another 16 in Puerto Rico, then swept into the Dominican Republic late Friday, ripping chunks of concrete from sidewalks and crushing cars waiting on a dock like toys.

Palm trees were uprooted and tossed about like straws, a large cargo plane was tossed upside down onto the top of a building at the airport. The long concrete walkway along Santo Domingo's George Washington Avenue was shredded, its remains hurled across the street by the storm.

Waves then pounded directly into the hotel fronts, smashing in glass walls and windows and sweeping through the buildings. Foreign businessmen and tourists staying in the hotels had been evacuated to public buildings on higher ground and no casualties were reported among them.

But in the tiny town of Ocoa, 75 miles southwest of Santo Domingo, 400 Dominicans huddled in a church and a school were killed when flood waters from the rain-swollen Yaque River swept through the buildings, civil defense officials said.

"The waters kept rising and rising until everything was flooded and dozens of persons drowned. The few who saved themselves had to climb to the top of the church steeple," a local official said.

Fifteen others were killed when high winds knocked down a concrete block church in the city of San Cristobal, 12 miles west of Santo Domingo.

The government said there will be no electricity for at least three weeks. David also destroyed a storage tank with thousands of gallons of fuel, and the power shortage will delay resumption of refinery operations.

All commercial and private flights were cancelled because of a damaged runway at the airport.

Authorities estimated 90 percent of the nation's crops were destroyed by David. Civil Defense Director Pedro Justiniano Polanco said damage to crops and buildings could be between $600 million and $1 billion.

President Antonio Guzman, who viewed the damage from a helicopter Sunday, declared a state of disaster and asked for aid from the Organization of American States, the United Nations, the United States and Venezuela.

The OAS secretary-general, Alejandro Orfila, reportedly assured Guzman that aid was forthcoming. CARE, the United States' international relief agency, sent word from New York that it was organizing an aid shipment, officials said.

Refuses Permit Pursuit

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) —

Prime Minister Jack Lynch said he will not allow British troops to pursue IRA gunmen into the Irish Republic, setting a collision course with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at their meeting this week.

"I don't think it is known in any country where soldiers can go into the sovereign territory of another state and carry out military operations....It could well be dangerous for those soldiers or policemen," Lynch told a Dublin radio interviewer Sunday night.

Britain's minister for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins, said in a BBC interview Sunday that Britain wants to send its troops in Northern Ireland across the border into the Irish Republic in "hot pursuit" of Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

Lynch also rejected two other proposals British sources said Mrs. Thatcher will make at their meeting in London Wednesday after the funeral of Earl Mountbatten.

They are that police in Northern Ireland be allowed to sit in on questioning of IRA suspects in the Irish Republic, and that "proper communication links" be established between the Irish army and commanders of the 13,500 British troops in Northern Ireland.

Lynch made clear he would press for a political solution to the long years of Catholic-Protestant conflict in British-controlled Northern Ireland, but stopped short of the official position of his party, Fianna Fail, which demands that Britain free Northern Ireland.

food Sunday. Homes throughout the area were completely destroyed by Hurricane David with an estimated 150,000 people left homeless and a death toll put at around 600. (AP Laserphoto)

Marijuana Cargo

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Customs officials seized a 75-foot fishing boat loaded with 10 to 15 tons of marijuana and some explosives Sunday night near Stonewall in Pamlico County.

Nine persons, including four women, were arrested during the raid on the Theresa Ann, said Gil Payette, customs service patrol director.

The boat was boarded near the Bay River Seafood Co., he said, after a customs vessel followed it from Ocracoke Inlet. Payette said law officers noticed a number of out-of-state cars in the area and increased boat traffic at the seafood company.

It wasn't known whether any seafood company employees were involved.

The names of those arrested and the registry of the boat were not available this morning. Payette said the boat wasn't registered locally.

Payette said customs officers found blasting caps on the boat and some black suitcases containing detonation devices. He said the state bomb squad was on the scene this morning.

Stonewall is located about 17 miles east of New Bern.

DEAR ABBY: I don't have a problem, but my friend suggested I write for a consultation on what she thinks is a most unusual situation. She couldn't believe it when I told her that my husband and I have been happily married for nine years and have never consummated our marriage.

I am a physician who prefers to practice in the United States, and my husband is a career officer in a foreign military service, based abroad, 3,000 miles away. We are both in our 30s. We see each other only three times a year for a week at a time. We knew how little time we would have together, but married anyway because we truly love each other.

We express our love by hugging and kissing, but always stop short of completing the act of love because we agree it's easier to live in total abstinence than open ourselves up to insufferable frustrations during our long separations.

We are a well-adjusted, heterosexual couple without organic dysfunctions or psychological hang-ups. We are living proof that a sexless marriage can be fulfilling. Some may think we're weird. Perhaps you do.

My friend insisted that I get a prescription from Dear Abby. However, I don't think there's anything wrong that needs fixing. What is your opinion?

DOING FINE WITHOUT

DEAR DOING FINE: Yours is a most unusual case, doctor. But if you and your husband are totally fulfilled in a sexless marriage, I agree—there's nothing that needs fixing. I can only wish you continued abstinence, because if you ever find out what you've been missing, you may kill yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are fit to be tied! Our son is also angry. My sister says we are making something out of nothing. Here is the situation:

My sister's daughter will be married soon. It will be a semi-large affair. Our older son (30) and his wife received an invitation to attend the wedding.

Our youngest son (26) is unmarried and presently living with us. He did not receive a separate invitation. Instead, my husband and I received an invitation addressed to MR. AND MRS. JOHN SMITH AND SON.

My son also feels that he should be allowed to bring a date. Who is right and who is wrong?

J.S.

DEAR J.S.: As an adult, your son should have been sent a separate invitation. However, unless he has a steady girlfriend, he should not dig up a "date" for the occasion.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a suggestion for CAN'T SLEEP, whose conscience is bothering her over the neglect of her elderly motherly, recently deceased.

Go to the nearest nursing home and "adopt" a "mother." Do for her what you wish you had done for your own mother. What enormous pleasure a drive in the country, a small gift, or even a few fresh flowers would mean to an elderly "forgotten-by-family" resident in a nursing home. If you can't take her out, you can go and visit with her and let her reminisce awhile. You will gain a lot. I know. I've tried it and it works. Sign me...

151 Hours Of Tossing

OCEAN SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — After one week of pitching horseshoes toward a world's record and charity drive, Jim Robertson says he has the first recorded case of horseshoe shoulder.

"It's just completely worn out," he said Sunday, as he and five other members of the Ocean Springs Elk's Lodge wrapped up almost 151 consecutive hours of tossing iron in rain and high temperatures.

"That doesn't count all the strained muscles and nerves after that — it's all ours," Robertson said.

The Guinness Book of World Records listed the old record as 120 consecutive hours. The six men were attempting to raise money for a planned facility in Greenville, Miss., to treat burn victims.

Congress Returns To Work This Week

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress returns to work this week, after a month of political pulse-taking, faced with important decisions on President Carter's energy legislation and federal spending.

On another issue, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will resume its hearings on the SALT II arms treaty with Russia, although floor debate is not expected until October.

The House and Senate return to work Wednesday for the first time since Aug. 2. Most members of Congress used the long recess to meet with constituents in their home states.

More than two dozen lawmakers interviewed at the end of the recess agreed the public seems most concerned about energy and the economy — issues that will occupy much of Congress' time between now and the end of the year.

In the Senate, a special Budget Committee task force is scheduling hearings for Wednesday and Thursday to hear testimony on the impact a massive synthetic fuels industry would have on the economy.

The Senate Energy Committee, meanwhile, intends to resume work Thursday on a bill setting up an Energy Mobilization Board. The administration-backed proposal is designed to speed the development of high priority energy projects.

The full House Commerce Committee is expected to resume debate on a similar bill, with a tough fight expected over what powers the board would have to override environmental rules and regulations. Yet a third version of the same proposal already has been approved by the House Interior Committee.

Also in the House, a commerce subcommittee has scheduled a hearing Wednesday on the Carter administration's decision to sell 2 million barrels of kerosene and diesel fuel to oil-rich Iran.

Another important energy bill, one giving Carter standby authority to ration gasoline, is in a conference committee after earlier passing both houses.

On economic issues, the House and Senate both will devote part of September to establishing binding spending limits for the next fiscal year's budget.

The first item of business for the Senate when it returns to work will be a measure appropriating money for the Postal Service and the Treasury Department.

The first bill on the House floor this week will be the $7.9 billion foreign aid measure.

Both houses have several major money bills left to deal with, including one for the Defense Department that is expected to spark debate over the proposed multi-billion-dollar MX missile system designed to shield American warheads from Soviet attack.

Another major bit of unfinished business is the administration's proposal to impose mandatory controls on hospital expenses in 1980 if hospitals costs are not held down voluntarily this year.

The House Commerce Committee's subcommittee on health has scheduled a hearing Thursday on the hospital cost containment measure.

Also pending are the final two appointments Carter made to his new Cabinet.

Farm Scene

By GAYLON AMBROSE
Associate Agricultural Extension Agent

Tobacco stalk and root destruction, followed by burying crop refuse beneath the soil and seeding a cover crop is what R-9-P is all about. A three-fold goal has been set for 1979 including early participation (stalks cut, roots disked or plowed out the day harvest is complete), total coverage (not one field left with stalks standing in "Tobacoland, U. S. A.") and a quality job (where stalks are cut into small pieces, root system killed and all crop refuse buried beneath the soil.)

Reaching these goals should be the desire of every tobacco grower simply because total participation could add $75 to $80 million extra income to their "hip pocket" in future crops by way of pest reduction.

The simple job of tobacco stalk and root destruction reduces loss to about nine pests and cuts down on control costs, contributes to effectiveness of all available control methods and improves leaf quality. Results from Extension-Research on Wheels tests suggest that early participation with a quality job should add about $212 per acre to income of future crops and here is why.

Root-knot is reduced by R-9-P. This disease is caused by tiny ell-like worms called nematodes that multiply even faster than flies. One root-knot nematode female has the capacity of depositing 400 to 500 eggs and only 20 to 25 days are required to complete the life cycle. Destroying roots early kills nematodes in the root system and in exposed soil. It also destroys the food supply and breeding grounds resulting in a carryover population.

Mosaic is caused by a virus that is highly contagious and spreads by mere contact. This virus does not exist free in the soil but is carried over in undecayed crop refuse. That is why R-9-P is a valuable practice in reducing damage from this disease in future crops. Growers are encouraged to cut stalks in small pieces and bury crop beneath the soil early as to encourage the rotting and decaying process.

Brown spot is caused by a microscopic plant, a fungus that causes spots to form on the leaves. This fungus is carried over from one crop to the next since it is attached to tobacco stalks. Destroying the old stalks reduces carryover of the pest.

Hornworms, budworms, and flea beetles feed on sucker growth of the old crop. Allowing stalks to stand provides a home and food supply and gives these pests a chance to prepare for the winter months ahead. R-9-P reduces all three pests and is most effective on hornworms.

Veinbanding is caused by a virus that is spread by aphids or plant lice. A live tobacco root system serves as a reservoir for this virus. That is why it is so important to completely kill the root system. Early field clean up, including destroying weeds around the edges of the field, and complete kill of old root systems reduces the chance of carryover.

Weeds and grasses are also reduced by the after harvest operation. Cutting stalks and disking fields early, before weeds and grasses set seed, should reduce carryover. The operation may be a simple one, but is most valuable in overall disease and insect control. Let's all work together and reach a high goal of early tobacco stalk and root destruction with a quality job in 1979.

Car Dealers Draw Fines

By The Associated Press
Fines ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 have been levied against 13 automobile dealers in South Carolina and four in North Carolina for alleged tampering with odometer readings or failure to keep mileage records.

The fines, totaling $50,000, stem from an investigation begun last fall by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Staff attorney Catherine Demeter said offending dealers would be identified only if they were charged with rolling back auto mileage and only after the fines are paid. Only three of the 17 were charged with that offense, she said.

The fines are the first prosecutions in the two states under the federal Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act of 1972.

Most of the fines in South Carolina were against dealers in Columbia, Hartsville and Myrtle Beach. Dealers in Manning, North Augusta and Laurens also were cited.

In North Carolina, fines were levied against dealers in Rocky Mount, Winston-Salem, Forest City and Bailey.

Plan Parade For Festival

William B. Glenn, chairman of the Board of the Second Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, announced today that a Tobacco Festival Parade will be a new added event of the festival's activities.

The parade, scheduled for Saturday, November 17, 10:30 a.m., downtown Greenville will be directed by Burke Barbee.

Barbee is a native of Maysville and a 1966 graduate of North Carolina State University with a degree in Agricultural Economics.

He is currently the regional personnel director for Wachovia Bank and Trust Company in Greenville. He has worked with Wachovia since 1967.

Upon accepting the position of chairman of the Tobacco Festival Parade, Barbee said, "We are planning for this to be one of the best parades ever conducted in Greenville."

"The parade will have at least 100 units including bands, floats, historical entries, and special entries for children," he added.

Barbee is a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. He and his wife, Betty, have three children, Laura, Martin and Gretchen.

For more information about the parade, contact Barbee at 757-7000, or the Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival office, 752-4101.

Potato Salad With Pears - Try It! Make Cap, Scarf, Coat With Big Needles, Double Yarn

Pat's Pointers
By Pat Trexler

Big needles and double strands of yarn add up to speedy knitting — and a quick way to put yourself in the forefront of the fashion scene this fall! First, try your hand at knitting a jaunty cap and lacy scarf, then go on to greater lengths with a striking coat.

The full-length coat is worked from the neck down on circular needles, so you can make it in any length that pleases you. Perhaps you would prefer the fingertip length, predicted to be a favorite this season. Knitting worsted weight yarn is used and you can choose an acrylic tweed, a combination of a dark strand and a light strand or two strands of a solid color.

To obtain directions for knitting cap, scarf and coat, send your request for Leaflet No. 703 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-703, containing the instruction leaflet and acrylic tweed yarn sufficient to make cap, scarf and coat, from Pat Trexler at the same address. Send check or money order for $27.00 for small size, $29.00 for medium size, or $31.00 for large size. If fingertip length is preferred, deduct $3.00 from price given for your size. Specify your choice of Cinnamon (rust, brown), Autumn Maze (beige, brown), Autumn Tweed (rust, black) or Smoke (gray, black).

Some time ago, I asked you to let me know which of the needlecrafts you liked best. What fun I had reading all the replies that poured in!

From a statistical standpoint, knitting still leads the way, with 39 percent of those replying saying that this was their favorite.

Crochet came next with 36 percent, while embroidery (including needlepoint) accounted for 25 percent. There was a smattering of other crafts mentioned also.

Most of you, though, are "multi-crafters" like me — that is, you are mad about more than one craft. Your reasons for enjoying needlework make me feel an even closer bond to you.

Linda F. of Kannapolis, N.C., wrote, "You asked why I enjoy needlecrafts and the first reaction was — well, just because. That's no answer, so I dug deeper and decided that I crochet, embroider and sew because I like to see a part of myself go into something creative and attractive."

"This means that when I give my creations as gifts, I also give a part of myself. When my daughters wear something I make for them, they are wearing something I put time, talent and love into. That's something nothing bought in a store can ever measure up to."

Mary Ellen of Evansville, Ind., said, "Knitting is so relaxing — and a lot cheaper than tranquilizers!" And, I might add, safer, too.

Esther S. of Palmyra, Pa., wrote, "Raw materials — yard, thread, needles, hooks — converted to wearable, usable clothes, square dance costumes, afghans and pillows, seem to 'soothe the savage beast' in me. The satisfaction of taking that last stitch makes me hurry each item to an end. Also, knowing that my handwork awaits me, I finish my household chores quickly but thoroughly so that I can reward myself with some stitching."

Clara D., of New Castle, Pa., took the time to write a long and chatty letter. She says she learned to knit and crochet 10 years ago when she was looking for relief from the depression she was in after losing a loved one.

"I find it very good therapy, most calming and very, very self-satisfying. I am especially gratified with the many compliments on things I make for myself and others," she wrote.

She closed by saying, "I never meant to rattle on so, but I might say that you asked for it! With me, knitting and crocheting have become more than a hobby; I sometimes think it is more like a disease I can't get rid of. But oh, how I do love it, and bless the dear teacher who put me on this road to happiness when I so badly needed help."

"I thought of retying this and correcting errors and straightening out some rambling sentences, but the sweater I am crocheting for a birthday gift is waiting, and I must take advantage of the time I'll save by letting you have this as is."

Still In Preliminary Stages

ECU and Greenville city schools officials have decided to continue studies of possible acquisition of J. H. Rose High School property for university use.

The city school board and ECU officials met in executive session last week to consider the matter and a joint statement was issued following the meeting.

The first step in the negotiations will be an appraisal of the Rose, Elmhurst Elementary and Wahl-Coates properties. At the same time the city schools will be studying possible sites for a new high school.

It has to be emphasized that the talks are preliminary at this stage. Obviously unless the transfer will work to the advantage of both the university and the city schools the move will not be made.

The Rose High and Elmhurst properties are adjacent to the university campus, and the grounds and buildings could quickly be put to good use in the university programs.

Rose High is in need of more campus space, particularly if an athletic area is to be developed. A move to an entirely new site could be the most feasible route.

The city school board will have to obtain enough funds from such a sale to make the construction of a new high school facility possible.

There is adequate merit to the transfer plan to make continuation of the studies the desirable route to follow. By all means the negotiations should continue.

More Difficult Case Hard To Imagine

The trial of Dr. Jeffery MacDonald has ended with his conviction in the deaths of his wife and two children nine years ago.

The case has been intermittently a matter of public attention from the day that the deaths occurred. No doubt there will continue to be appeals of the convictions, and properly so.

We cannot imagine a case more difficult to hear and decide for 12 jurors than this one, and the North Carolina citizens whose job it fell to consider the evidence have performed the highest civic duty.

THIS AFTERNOON For Troubled Youngsters

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Communities across North Carolina are responding well to the need for alternative treatment programs for troubled youngsters, state officials maintain.

The figures compiled during the brief history of Community Based Alternatives in this state bear out that contention, and other states are beginning to take notice of the Tar Heel experiment.

The road has been rocky in the three year effort to reverse directions in dealing with juveniles who run afoul of the law, or are about to do so. And some hard places obviously remain ahead.

In all, though, the law which bans juvenile training schools as punishment for youngsters involved in non-criminal training schools as punishment for youngsters involved in non-criminal offenses such as truancy, running away (status offenses), and requires community treatment and rehabilitation programs is winning public acceptance.

Negative

The negative aspects have been prominently spotlighted over the months:

—Local residents fighting residential treatment programs, opposing wilderness camps in their neighborhood, urging that local dollars not be spent on such approaches.

—Juvenile court officials maintaining the threat of training school is needed to keep some recalcitrant youngsters in harness; and at least one (Judge Zoro Guice of Hendersonville) using the contempt element of the law to jail juveniles anyway while rejecting the new law.

—Other court officials sympathetic with the new law decrying the lack of community response to need for treatment programs and proposing that it may be necessary to bring suit against county commissioners in order to progress.

“I don’t want to sound like a knee-jerk bureaucrat, but I do believe that the community-based efforts in North Carolina can honestly be characterized somewhat more favorably,” says Ken Foster, assistant director of the Division of Youth Services in the Department of Human Resources.

There has been encourag-

ing local response even in the face of tightened local budgets and the “proposition 13” sentiment, Foster believes. “I do not mean to suggest that our program has met with total acceptance. It was, and to some degree remains, controversial; especially among a great many juvenile court judges. I am sure that some communities are still less than enthusiastic. But the program is ... significantly successful,” Foster says.

Funding

The last four sessions of the General Assembly have appropriated $10.250 million (through 1981) for community-based programs, and so far more than $3.2 million has been spent for new or expanded programs. At the end of March there were 202 programs in 97 counties with total budgets in excess of $5 million.

THE GALLUP POLL Energy Crisis Admitted

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Nearly 2 and one-half years after President Jimmy Carter characterized the energy crisis as the “moral equivalent of war,” the public appears to be getting the administration’s message on the seriousness of the energy situation.

Today, nearly half the American people (47 percent) consider the energy situation in the U.S. to be “very serious.” This represents a 10-point jump since early June when 37 percent held this view.

The growth in concern between June and today has been most pronounced among persons with a college background. In the earlier survey, 45 percent of college-educated persons said the energy situation was “very serious,” while today a solid majority (60 percent) does so.

Many Seen Reducing Use Of Energy

Further evidence that the energy crisis has finally struck home to many is seen in the steps being taken by Americans to reduce their use of energy:

About half of Americans (51 percent) now say they are reducing the amount they drive; the comparable figure was 33 percent in February. Others are turning off electric lights (19 percent), making minimum use of air conditioners (19 percent), while still others have purchased gas-saving cars or motorcycles and are riding bicycles or walking. Only one American in nine (11 percent) says he or she is doing nothing to reduce the use of electricity.

Here is the first question asked:

“How serious would you say the energy situation is in the U. S. — very serious, fairly serious, or not at all serious?”

As the trend shows, little change in opinion was recorded between April 1977 and June of the current year:

Seriousness Of Energy Situation

Strength For Today

BELIEF IS NOT ENOUGH

“Yes, I believe in God,” the young man said, and shrugged his shoulders as much as to say, “So what?”

The mere observation that we believe in God has no more significance than an observation about the weather. The vital question is whether we are doing anything about our belief. A shrug of the shoulders and a “so what” renders the belief in god a trivial detail. Another vital consideration is the kind of God in which we believe. Is our God merely an impersonal cosmic force, or is he the great power in the universe who nevertheless loves each one of us as his children?

Philosophy talks about God as an abstraction, but religion cannot do this. Religion has to answer all the questions which arise once we say that there is a God. And religion also demands a deep commitment, not merely lip service. It calls for action, not mere intellectual assent.

By ART BUCHWALD Quiet Summer In Brief

WASHINGTON — Some people read the newspaper this summer, and some people didn’t. Hammacher, who was up in Maine, didn’t, so I had to help him catch up on what went on.

“What did I miss?” he wanted to know as he unpacked his rubber raft and outdoor cooking utensils from the trunk of his car.

“It was a very quiet summer,” I assured him. “President Carter came back from Vienna and Japan and announced he had a major speech on energy. Then he went to Camp David and decided to go fishing instead.”

“Did he catch anything?”

“No, but a lot of people came up to Camp David to tell him he was a lousy President.”

“I’ll bet he didn’t like that,” Hammacher said.

“On the contrary, he seemed to enjoy it. When he finally came down from the mountain he went on television and told us what everyone said he was doing wrong. Then he revealed the energy crisis was real and he was going to take strong measures to do something about it.”

“What did he do?”

“He fired Califano, the secretary of health, education and welfare.”

“I didn’t know Califano had anything to do with energy.”

“Neither did anyone else. It caused quite a stir. The President also shook up the White House. He made Ham Jordan American people instead of those who work for him in Washington. It was a real shot in the arm for the people in Kansas City.”

“What about his energy program?” Hammacher wanted to know.

“Well, Congress had to go home on vacation, so the President said there was no hurry and he’d deal with the urgent energy crisis when they came back.”

“That was good of him. What did he do next?”

“He booked himself and Rosalynn and Amy on the Delta Queen, a paddle wheeler, and took a 10-day ride down the Mississippi.”

“That was a good idea, especially since there wasn’t anything going on in Washington.”

“Right. But while he was jogging around the deck of the Delta Queen, U.N. Ambassador Andy Young met secretly with the PLO in the Kuwaiti ambassador’s apartment. When the State Department found out about it, Andy didn’t tell them what had happened, so State got miffed and called the President and said Young had to go. Andy resigned and all the black leaders in the United States got mad at Israel.”

“You’re making all this up.”

To the editor:

The Hippocratic Oath of 500 B. C. has long served to separate the role of the witch doctor from that of the physician. Unlike the witch doctor, physicians who take the Oath dedicate themselves solely to the protection and preservation of human life. The Oath specifically states, “I will give no deadly medicine to anyone if asked, nor suggest such counsel, and in like manner I will not give to a woman a pessary to produce abortion.”

Following the Nuremberg trials, the World Medical Association introduced a modern form of the Hippocratic Oath aimed at preventing a recurrence of those Nazi atrocities which were initiated by a small core of German doctors. It states, in part, “I will maintain the utmost respect for human life from the time of conception.”

For obvious reasons, many medical schools no longer require their graduates to take the Hippocratic Oath, in either its ancient or modern form. People can’t help but anxiously consider this fact when they put their lives or the lives of their loved ones in a doctor’s hands.

Those doctors who still hold to the high principles of their calling deserve our warmest regard. Those doctors who carry out or condone the wanton killing of the most helpless members of the human family need our prayers. Pray that they will ponder whether the fashionable and deadly whim of abortion is worth the breaking of a 2500-year-old bond of trust between physician and patient.

Be Prepared For Illness Costs

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

A sudden illness can cripple the budget, particularly for retired people on fixed incomes, and advance planning is a key to cushioning the shock of medical bills.

More than 95 percent of all Americans over 65 are protected by Medicare, the national health insurance program for the elderly, but there are gaps in the coverage.

A booklet prepared by the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association explores the gaps and looks at ways for individuals to fill them. The 24-page guide, “Medicare and Health Insurance for Older People,” is available, at no charge, from NRTA-AARP, Dept. M-H, P.O. Box 2400, Long Beach, Calif., 90801.

When you are confined to a hospital, Part A of the Medicare package will cover semiprivate room and board, operating and recovery room, intensive care unit, general nursing service, lab tests, X-rays and other radiology services, drugs provided by the hospital, medical supplies, rehabilitation services and some equipment like wheelchairs. Most of these services also are covered when you receive treatment in a skilled-nursing facility.

Part B of the Medicare program — the part that helps pay doctors’ bills — covers medical and surgical treatments, diagnostic tests and procedures, drugs administered by professionals, most medical supplies, physical and speech therapy and, where necessary, ambulance services.

Medicare does not pay all the bills — even for covered items. According to the retirees’ groups, the latest available statistics show that Medicare pays an average of

A Deep Hatred Exists

By SAJID RIZVI

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — The last shot in the Kurdish rebellion raging in Iran probably will not be fired for some time. Old hatreds run deep.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini’s Islamic regime has executed nearly 80 Kurds as rebels in recent weeks and scores more tribesmen have died in fighting across the ruggedly mountainous Kurdish territory, home to 3.5 million Kurds.

The scale of conflict worries Iran’s neighbors Iraq and Turkey. Both nations are burdened with restive Kurdish minorities ready to draw inspiration from any Kurdish success in Iran. Although less exposed, both Syria and the Soviet Union also have Kurdish minorities certain to be stirred while the battle in Iran goes on.

A Kurdish revolt of some kind has preoccupied the nations of the Near East for most of this century. The once nomadic Kurds, spread over 74,000 square miles of land across the five countries, first revolted against Turkey’s Ottoman empire.

At the 1919 Paris peace conference, the Kurds put forward their plan for an independent Kurdistan. But the Turkish army dealt them two heavy blows in 1925 and 1930.

The Kurds made another unsuccessful bid for independence in 1946 when they tried to set up a Soviet-backed Kurdish Republic at Mahabad, where the current standoff between the Kurds and Iranian government is taking place.

And in 1975, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein made a joint bid to contain their Kurdish minorities and signed a pact ending Iran’s cross-border military support to the Kurds.

Despite those costly reversals, the Kurds were the first to demand autonomy when the shah was overthrown. Kurds and government troops clashed less than a month after

GREAT BRITAIN DECLARES WAR

Great Britain declared war on Germany today, and France had said she would follow automatically.

The announcement was made by British Prime Minister Chamberlain in an address to the nation by radio. It came at 10 a.m. Greenwich mean time — 5 a.m. EST, at the expiration of a British ultimatum to Germany to call her armies out from Poland.

Chamberlain himself read the proclamation and ended with the prayer, “May God bless you all, and may He defend the right.”

The Prime Minister assured his people that Britain had done her utmost to the end to arrange for a peaceful and honorable settlement. But “Hitler would not have it.”

“Consequently, we are at war with Germany,” he said. “peace,” he said, “by Germany’s ruler could be trusted and no people or country could end — Stuart Morgan

"There's more. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference decided to take over the negotiations in the Middle East. The President was very upset about this because he had sent Bob Strauss to the Middle East to see if he could get Egypt and Israel to agree on a U.N. Resolution.

"Strauss thought he was in charge of the Middle East, but the President passed word from the Delta Queen that Vice President Mondale was in charge. Secretary of State Vance got mad at this, so Jody Powell, the President's press secretary, said there was a mistake and Vance was in charge. Strauss then said he wanted to be an unpaid ambassador to the Middle East so he could practice law on the side. Mondale decided he wanted to visit China, and the Rev. Jesse Jackson has offered to meet with Yasser Arafat of the PLO when he comes to New York."

"Isn't there any good news that happened this summer?" Hammacher wanted to know.

"Yes, Carter told his Bible class a few weeks ago that when he went to South Korea in late June he tried to make President Park a Christian."

"Now I know you're pulling my leg," Hammacher said. I looked at him sadly. "Believe me, I wish I were."

quite stable enough.

But the ascendancy of the Shiite Moslem clergy in Iran gave a new dimension to the problem: historically the Kurds, most of whom are Sunni Moslems, distrust the Shiites.

The problem grew as Shiite revolutionary guards headed by Shiite clergymen in new political positions were dispatched to Kurdistan with official authority.

Innumerable incidents later, little love is lost between the autonomy-seeking Kurds and the guards. The Kurds maintain they would much rather have the army than the guards. They have a point.

Iran's army, used by the shah for nearly a year as a riot-control force, still retains a dislike for internal involvement despite heavy purges and executions of scores of its officers.

The army, therefore, is considered "weak" as compared with the deeply committed Khomeini guards. It participated recently in campaigns against Kurdish rebels, but always in the company of the guards. An Islamic court last week executed seven military men who would not even do so.

By DONAL O'HIGGINS

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — The murder of Lord Mountbatten and the almost simultaneous slaughter of 18 British soldiers in Northern Ireland by the outlawed Irish Republican Army this week were intended to demonstrate dramatically the group's terror potential.

The attacks coincided with the completion of an overhaul of the IRA's fighting machinery, along lines blueprinted by its chiefs at a secret meeting in the Irish Republic more than a year ago.

They aimed to lift the flagging campaign of violence in Northern Ireland on to the front pages of the world press and to show off their strength against the British army.

The IRA, one of the oldest underground movements in the world, sees the present conflict in Northern Ireland as the final chapter in its fight to reunify Ireland.

To achieve this, it must force the British out of the six northeastern counties and unite them with the 26 counties of the Irish Republic in the south.

"This is the final phase," said Sean MacStiofain, once the chief of staff of the IRA, but now pushed aside in its leadership struggle. "If we don't win now we will not have the chance again."

IRA leaders believe they would find it virtually impossible ever again to mount such a sustained struggle or to win any backing from Northern Ireland Catholics.

If it were to achieve its goal, it would mean forcing Northern Ireland's one million Protestants into a union with the predominately Roman Catholic south — a move they are prepared to resist with guns.

Outlawed and hunted at home and abroad, the IRA today bears little resemblance to the fighting men who first proclaimed it 60 years ago.

On Jan. 21, 1919, Irish political leaders met in Dublin to form the first Dail Eireann (parliament) and to issue a declaration of independence from British rule.

It declared the ratification of the Irish Republic embracing the whole 32 counties of Ireland. Its fighting force, known as the Irish Volunteers, became the Irish Republican Army.

That declaration signaled the start of the Anglo-Irish war in which 3,000 men pitted themselves against a British force numbering 60,000 troops and 15,000 armed police.

The IRA fought a hit-and-run war of sudden ambushes, booby-trapped roads and sniper fire. It struck quickly, then faded into the hills. Its campaign of guerrilla warfare became a model for other independence struggles.

On July 11, 1921, a truce was declared and on Dec. 6, 1922, Britain gave independence to 26 Irish counties, maintaining its rule on the other six, which got their own Parliament and remained part of the United Kingdom.

In a general election to test the backing for the treaty, an overwhelming majority supported it. But a minority held out against it. Civil war quickly followed.

The anti-treaty group was defeated. Many of them laid down their arms and fought the settlement on a political level. But a small group went underground. It continued to proclaim itself the Irish Republican Army and determined to continue the struggle until a 32-county republic was established.

Successive Irish governments outlawed it. Except for sporadic raids across the border and bomb attacks, it proved ineffective and lacked virtually any support north or south of the Irish border.

Then came the civil rights campaign in Northern Ireland, when the one-third Roman Catholic population took to the streets in protest against alleged discrimination in housing, employment and voting rights.

Bloody sectarian rioting followed. The IRA stepped out from the shadows and proclaimed itself "defenders" of the Roman Catholic minority against the ruling Protestant majority with its para-military police force.

For 10 years the blood-letting has continued. The IRA, at first with strong backing from Northern Roman Catholics, gradually molded itself into a disciplined force run on traditional army lines, with an unbroken chain of command.

As its campaign intensified, its support from the Catholics dwindled, too many innocent persons had been killed or maimed in the three-way struggle among Protestant militants, the British army and the IRA.

The British government abolished the local Protestant-run parliament and ruled the province directly from London. It introduced many reforms, including an attempt to set up a government in which Catholics were included for the first time. But the venture failed under the opposition of Protestant extremists who organized a general strike, forcing the power-sharing cabinet to quit.

The IRA stepped up its campaign of violence. It funded itself with dollars from Irish-American sympathizers and widespread bank raids north and south. Its agents smuggled in arms and explosives from Europe and elsewhere.

Today the IRA is a compact, well-equipped force using sophisticated modern weapons, its organization restructured along the classic "cell system" which prevents infiltration by British agents and minimizes the danger of those arrested being able to give useful information.

The British government has declared it will pull out of Northern Ireland only when a majority there wishes it to do so. With a two-to-one Protestant majority such an event seems unlikely.

The IRA has pledged itself to continue its campaign of violence until the British withdraw.

Such is the dilemma in Northern Ireland today.

YOUR NEXT HOME NOW!!!

If you knew interest rates would drop 1% in one year would it pay you to wait a year to buy a home? No!! Why?

Suppose you buy a $70,000 home and get a 30 year, 10 1/2% mortgage, with 20% (or $14,000) down. Your monthly payment comes to $512.40 for principal and interest.

Assume that after one year, interest rates drop down to 9 1/2% and you want to refinance. Even though your home will probably appreciate in value - by say 15% to $80,500 - you are refinancing based upon your original $56,000 mortgage. The appreciation on the home is gravy. Assuming a prepayment penalty of $2,500, your new principal balance would be $58,218. (Some states have no prepayment penalties.) At 9 1/2% your monthly payments would then be $489.61.

If, however, you elect to wait a year to buy the same home with a 9 1/2% mortgage, you first of all need a larger down payment - $16,100 instead of $14,000. Your mortgage will now be $64,400 which at 9 1/2% boils down to $541.60 per month - an annual increase of $350.40. The moral is - it's the cost of the house, not the interest rate, that makes the biggest impact on monthly payments.

Geologists Find Oil, Natural Gas In Scenic Belt

SUNDAY STROLL—President Jimmy Carter and Mrs. Carter (left) wave to sight-seers along the three block route they walked from the First Baptist Church to the First Methodist Church in Plains, Sunday. The Carters were accompanied by a throng of fellow churchgoers, media, staff, and policemen. (AP Laserphoto)

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP)—Geologists say a mass of jumbled and deformed rocks called the Overthrust Belt—stretching from Alaska to Mexico—may lie over billions of barrels of oil and enough natural gas to supply the United States for five years.

But what's on the surface is rugged mountain scenery that environmentalists say is worth more than the oil, setting up a classic confrontation between oilmen and defenders of the environment.

The battle began in 1975 with the first oil strike in Utah's Pineview Field. Since then, 13 oil and gas fields have been developed in sagebrush and jack-rabbit country south of here along the Utah-Wyoming border.

More holes are being drilled into the Overthrust Belt this summer and a promising gas strike has been made in northern Montana.

Six of the 13 new fields are what geologists call "giant fields" each with reserves of more than 100 million barrels of "light" oil, which is easy to refine into gasoline.

But the area is also one of huge ranches and big game animals like elk, moose and deer. In the midst of all this is Jackson Hole, the playground of millions of tourists who, like President Carter last summer, visit the majestic Grand Teton Mountain Range.

Needless to say, many in this area don't share the oilmen's enthusiasms for their finds. Howie Wolk of the Wyoming Wilderness Coalition says, for example, "We are talking about giving up known significant natural resources for a two months' supply of oil."

In contrast, Alan Ver Ploeg of the Wyoming State Geologist's Office says of the Overthrust Belt: "It's the hottest new oil and gas province in North America."

The belt area was formed by faulting and folding 135 million years ago that left oil and natural gas trapped in pockets as deep as three miles below the surface. It passes through Alaska, Montana, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho and Arizona.

The area "presents our best exploration prospects in the lower 48 states, offshore or onshore," says Gene Richards, an Atlantic Richfield Co. geologist. R.B. Powers, who heads the U.S. Geological Survey's resources appraisal division, says

"There is always the possibility the Overthrust could contain bigger reserves than Alaska's North Slope. These are very big fields."

Alaska's Prudhoe Bay has recovered reserves estimated at 25 trillion cubic feet of natural gas and 9.6 billion barrels of oil.

The Overthrust Belt has undiscovered natural gas supplies pegged at 100 trillion cubic feet by a committee sponsored by the American Gas Association. This is a five-year supply based on annual U.S. consumption of about 20 trillion cubic feet.

The U.S. uses 6.5 billion barrels of oil a year, and estimates of the Overthrust Belt's petroleum reserves range from 3-17 billion barrels.

"The things we have found to date don't cover a great deal of ground. But there are more major discoveries being made now than in the rest of the United States combined," says David Work of the Amoco Production Co., which has spent $40 million drilling into the Overthrust Belt.

How much oil is in the area also is the subject of disagreement between oilmen and environmentalists.

Phil Hocker of Jackson, chairman of the Wyoming chapter of the Sierra Club said the pockets may contain less oil and gas than the oilmen think. "There are opinions from people more qualified than me that some of the mountainous areas are so faulted and jumbled that anything in the traps has leaked out," says Hocker. What is known is that the Pineview Field now produces 15,000 barrels of oil a day from reserves estimated at 150 million barrels. And plans are being made for a pipeline to ship natural gas from the Overthrust.

The cost is staggering, oilmen say. "This is squeezed, compressed and tortured rock. It's hard on drilling bits," says

FUEL SUPPLY?—Map Locates so-called Overthrust Belt, that may hold billions of barrels of oil and a large natural gas supply (AP Laserphoto)

Richards. Such bits may cost $5,000. Added to this is an unfriendly climate and steep terrain that may run costs of deep wells to $8 million.

Faced with natural challenges, oilmen bristle at federal regulations and criticism from environmentalists. They are especially irked at the Forest Service's wilderness studies.

Paul Driessen, a public lands specialist for the association, says exploration rigs take up very little acreage, and he shows photographs of deer grazing near drilling camps. Driessen talks about starting dialogues with the environmentalists.

"All their oilmen's talk about starting a dialogue is a public relations gimmick so they can roll right over you," says the Wilderness Coalition's Wolk. Wolk and other coalition members were shocked when the Carter administration decided last January to open most of the wilderness areas along the Overthrust Belt to oil exploration.

Hocker says one consolation for the Sierra Club is that much of the wilderness area now opened to oil and gas exploration is so rugged that "to some extent it will defend itself."

He says the Sierra Club and other environmental groups are not trying to block oil exploration altogether, "but in some areas there has been some exploration that is not responsible."

Amoco's Work says there won't be any refineries polluting the air of Jackson Hole. "The Environmental Protection Agency will keep them out," he said. "And if folks are bothered about drilling crews being housed in Jackson, we couldn't afford the high housing rates."

N.C. Rural Leadership Is Found Young, Educated And 'Flexible'

By TOM BYRD
NCSU Agricultural Information
Leaders in North Carolina's rural counties tend to be old and poorly educated with roots in their community going back for generations.

Right? Wrong.
Try this. Over 80 percent of the leaders have attained some education beyond high school and 28 percent have a graduate degree. About half the leaders are under 49, and nearly seven percent are under 29. Only 20 percent are over 60.

Nearly a fourth of the leaders have lived in their present county less than 10 years. On the other hand, 65 percent have been around for 21 years or more.

This profile of leaders emerges from interviews with 2,413 persons who represent a cross section of the leadership in 40 rural counties in North Carolina. The interviews were conducted by North Carolina Agricultural Extension agents and selected community volunteers. The leaders who were interviewed were selected by a standardized, scientific selection process. They held positions in business, agriculture, government, education, religion, civic affairs and all other aspects of county life.

Dr. Maurice Voland, an extension sociology specialist at North Carolina State University, says he is confident that the sample is representative of the leaders in the state's non-metropolitan counties.

"Some of the things we learned knock your socks off," said Voland. "Many of the old wives tales that we have heard about rural leaders just aren't true."

For example, the leaders were given a standardized national test to determine their degree of flexibility-rigidity. North Carolina leaders averaged scoring 37 on the test compared to an expected average of 30.

Voland said that the score means that "Far Heels tend to be more flexible than their national counterparts.

"They are more likely to say, 'Give me the facts and I'll evaluate and act accordingly,' instead of saying, 'If it was good enough for grandpa, then it's good enough for me.'"

On the other hand, the interviews showed the North Carolina leaders were slightly more "localite" in orientation than their national counterparts.

This means, says Voland, that they like their home town more strongly than they like bigger towns. They think highly of the place they live, and support the local value structure.

When asked to categorize their political philosophy, 41 percent called themselves "middle of the road," and 40 percent said they were conservative. Another 15 percent said they were liberal.

As for their primary occupation, 34 percent of the leaders said they were in business. Another 14 percent were in education, with those in government and agriculture totaling nine percent each. Many of the respondents reported a secondary interest in agriculture even though it was not their chief occupation.

Leaders were even asked about their leisure activities. The majority dine out, read, attend movies, swim, garden, fish and visit parks and scenic places. Only about one third play golf hunt or hike. A fourth of those canvassed play tennis or camp, with only 16 percent interested in bowling.

Hit Walls In Celebrity Race

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP)—Television actors Parker Stevenson and Robert Pine smashed their cars into the walls of the Ontario Motor Speedway during a celebrity race preceding the California 500 auto race.

Stevenson, of the former "Hardy Boys" series, suffered only bruises as his car bumped the outside wall on Turn 4. Pine, of the "CHiPs" series, hit the inside wall as he swerved to avoid hitting Stevenson's car. He was unhurt.

Another star of "CHiPs," Erik Estrada, was seriously injured in a motorcycle accident last month.

The race in which celebrities teamed with Indy-car drivers was won by actor Jan-Michael Vincent and professional driver Johnny Rutherford, with Vincent driving the first and last five-lap legs of the 15-lap race.

Call For Soviet Pullback Note

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Three North Carolina congressmen said Saturday that President Carter should tell the Soviet Union to withdraw its troops from Cuba.

Reps. Charles O. Whitley, Ike F. Andrews and Lamar Gudger called for the troops' withdrawal.

Whitley said the United States shouldn't tolerate the presence of the troops. But, he said, "We need to be very careful we give the right type of response."

"It is easy to overreact, but it is very important to insist on the principles that have been our policy for a long time," he said.

But Klein said he isn't interested in the courses the department now offers, and that courses at the University of North Carolina have been filled. The only thing Duke could offer by way of compensation was a return ticket to Germany.

Klein planned to re-enroll at Berlin Free University and begin classes next month.

Turnaround By German Student

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)—Ferdinand Klein of Germany arrived at Duke University two weeks ago from Berlin Free University to begin graduate work at the Center for Urban and Regional Development Policy, only to learn that it no longer exists. It was phased out at the end of the 1978 academic year.

Hugh Hall, former director of graduate studies, who reviewed Klein's application, said the department probably didn't realize Klein's interests were so specific.

But Klein said he isn't interested in the courses the department now offers, and that courses at the University of North Carolina have been filled. The only thing Duke could offer by way of compensation was a return ticket to Germany.

Klein planned to re-enroll at Berlin Free University and begin classes next month.

78° IS COOL.

For every degree cooler than 78°, your air conditioner uses about 5% more electricity. And in the summer, when the most electricity is used, that can make a big difference.

So please, set your home air conditioner at 78° or higher, or no more than 15° cooler than the temperature outside (whichever is the higher setting.) You can also take these two important energy management steps. First, restrict your weekday use of major appliances during the "peak load" hours of 10 A.M. to 10 P.M. Second, don't overwork your water heater. Use the dishwasher and washing machine only for full loads, and wash clothes in cool water instead of hot.

By following these tips, you'll be keeping your electric bills down, and helping us all make it through the summer without power shortages.

Iranian Armor Rumbles Into Kurdish Stronghold

MAHABAD, Iran (AP) — An Iranian armored column rumbled into the northern outskirts of this Kurdish rebel stronghold today under cover of fierce air force rocketing, while a second government force fought the insurgents south of the city, witnesses said. Casualty figures were unavailable.

Rebel troops, still in control of the city, began withdrawing heavy guns into the hills surrounding Mahabad while hundreds of civilians carrying their belongings streamed out of the city.

Iran's oil chief warned in Tehran, meanwhile, the government might seek to revise contracts for selling crude oil to the United States if U.S. congressmen continue criticizing the U.S. sale of kerosene and heating oil to Iran.

Rebels said the army column that moved in from the north had taken control of the suburb of Mudkan with a force that included 14 tanks, a half-dozen armored personnel carriers and a large number of jeeps and trucks.

However, Kurdish rebels still swarmed in and around Mahabad and the volume of gunfire indicated they were still resisting. A second government force moved towards the city about 12 miles to the south, according to rebel reports trickling into Mahabad.

Kurdish soldiers said 100 rebel reinforcements had been sent to the south and that they had signed their wills and said prayers for their deaths before leaving.

"We are willing and ready to defend Mahabad to the last man," said Karimi Hesami, a member of the central committee of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party.

On Sunday, the rebels drove back an armored column of 400 troops advancing on Mahabad, but Radio Tehran reported that government forces took control of two towns in the Mahabad area.

Witnesses said the government column driven back included light tanks, armored personnel carriers and artillery. They said the Kurds opened up from mountain positions on each side of the road, pinning the troops down for about eight hours before they retreated to the army staging base at Miandoab, about 25 miles northeast of Mahabad.

"We had to come back because the Kurds were hitting us very hard and the going got really rough," said one of the soldiers.

Military sources said five troops were wounded. There was no word of rebel casualties.

But an army spokesman quoted by Radio Tehran said the army "victoriously" entered the town of Piranshahr, 12 miles from Mahabad, after pounding the city with artillery. One soldier was killed, several wounded and "heavy casualties were inflicted on the rebels," the broadcast said. The government also said it "eliminated all resistance" in Bukan, 30 miles southeast of Mahabad.

For the past week, the government had been ferrying men and supplies to the staging area for a march on the rebel stronghold, where an estimated 20,000 Kurds have been preparing for the "battle of their destiny."

The 4 million Kurds in northwest Iran are the country's biggest ethnic minority and are demanding autonomous home rule. Iran's Islamic strongman, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has vowed to crush their rebellion, fearing that autonomy would be the prelude to the independence of the Kurds of Iran, Iraq, Turkey and the Soviet Union have sought for centuries and that a Kurdish victory would inspire other ethnic minorities in southern and north-eastern Iran.

Nets, Big Catch Lost Due A Trapped Whale

LUBEC, Maine (AP) — Herring fisherman Carlton Leighton was philosophical about losing $14,000 worth of fish as fishermen and divers struggled in chilly waters to free a 30-foot whale trapped in his nets.

"This was the first time I ever had a whale by the tail," he said.

The young whale was weakened from its long struggle when the last confining webs were cut away, but it gained strength as it headed out to sea, leaving Leighton's nets behind.

"That goes along with fishing," the fisherman said. "That stuff happens, and you can't control it."

The whale apparently got tangled in the herring seine at the entrance to Carrying Place Cove late Saturday or early Sunday. The humpback calf's plight was first noticed Sunday morning by Marshall Stone, managing editor of the Bangor Daily News, who said the whale, caught primarily by its tail, was able to surface frequently for air.

Fishermen hurried to the cove and pulled away as much of the netting as possible. Working "eyeball to eyeball," diver Hank Stence cut the netting from around its fins and mouth.

"His eyeball was six inches in diameter," said Stence. "When I was working around his fins underneath him, it was like working in a cave with that big body above me. He kept his fins pretty close to his sides."

"The whale acted as if he knew we were trying to help," he said. "But later, when I had his tail free and the netting fell off from most of his body, he got feisty and it was harder to work around him."

Threatening phone calls and anonymous letters are not new in Hallsboro.

"This has gone on for 10 or 11 years," Batten said. "There's a small group of people who want to tell you every move to make. But they can't drive the board to do anything."

Since the SBI investigation was ordered, Batten said, "it's been as quiet here as I've ever seen." School officials have promised the school opening will be orderly Tuesday for the 850 students at the high school.

But the threats are still very much on most residents' minds.

"We're disgusted and ashamed of this," Hallsboro merchant Ben Wyche said recently as he stood behind the counter at his general store. Wyche said most local people didn't think the callers were serious about the threats.

"But nobody thought they'd be serious enough to call in the first place, either," he said.

Dwyer was hired on Aug. 3 to replace Linwood Hedgepeth, a successful coach at Hallsboro who left for a better coaching job at Whiteville High School. The calls began soon after that.

Three days after he took the job, Dwyer said he received a letter saying that he would not be welcome in Hallsboro and that people there did not think he would be a good coach. It was signed "Hallsboro Athletic Supporters," although there is apparently no such organization.

Dwyer said he would not have accepted the job if he had known he would be threatened for doing so. Although the calls did not scare him, he said, they influenced his decision to resign.

"We're disgusted and ashamed of this," Hallsboro merchant Ben Wyche said recently as he stood behind the counter at his general store. Wyche said most local people didn't think the callers were serious about the threats.

"But nobody thought they'd be serious enough to call in the first place, either," he said.

Dwyer was hired on Aug. 3 to replace Linwood Hedgepeth, a successful coach at Hallsboro who left for a better coaching job at Whiteville High School. The calls began soon after that.

Three days after he took the job, Dwyer said he received a letter saying that he would not be welcome in Hallsboro and that people there did not think he would be a good coach. It was signed "Hallsboro Athletic Supporters," although there is apparently no such organization.

Dwyer said he would not have accepted the job if he had known he would be threatened for doing so. Although the calls did not scare him, he said, they influenced his decision to resign.

On his first dive, which lasted 20 minutes, Stence managed to cut free the whale's tail. On the second, he was able to cut almost all the remaining netting and buoys.

"A couple of feet remained on one side of its mouth, with two buoys attached," Stence said. "On the other side was a short length with no buoys, but he might have had one or two in his mouth."

Phoned Threats Nothing New

HALLSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The anonymous calls to Columbus County school officials usually came very late, long after darkness had fallen.

"We'll burn your house down," said the men who called. "Maybe you'll come home one night and all your dogs'll be dead. We'll whup your ass."

The calls were apparently triggered by the hiring of a new high school baseball coach in this small, sports-minded community. They have stopped since the State Bureau of Investigation was asked to investigate the incidents last week.

The SBI will try to find out who has communicated threats of arson or assault to Walter C. Batten, chairman of the Columbus County school board; Floyd H. Wilson, soon to resign as high school principal; and Larry A. Dwyer, who resigned as head baseball coach at Hallsboro after only a week on the job.

Threatening phone calls and anonymous letters are not new in Hallsboro.

"This has gone on for 10 or 11 years," Batten said. "There's a small group of people who want to tell you every move to make. But they can't drive the board to do anything."

Since the SBI investigation was ordered, Batten said, "it's been as quiet here as I've ever seen." School officials have promised the school opening will be orderly Tuesday for the 850 students at the high school.

But the threats are still very much on most residents' minds.

A Holiday for Workers

Today is Labor Day, honoring our nation's working people. The idea of celebrating a worker's holiday in the United States began in the late 1800s. Two labor organizers with similar last names are credited with proposing the holiday. One was a New Jersey machinist named Matthew Maguire. The other was Peter J. McGuire, a carpenter in New York City. Both helped organize the first Labor Day parade in New York City in 1882. Five years later Oregon became the first state to make Labor Day a legal holiday. President Grover Cleveland signed a bill making the day a national holiday in 1894.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the youngest age at which a person may be included in the labor force?

Arrested About 30 At Concert

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Craven County deputies arrested about 30 youths Sunday afternoon before a VFW-sponsored rock concert.

A fight broke out after deputies arrived, according to persons at the outdoor concert. Several deputies were said to be injured.

A New Bern Sun-Journal photographer, Charlie Hall, said he was hit twice with a flashlight by an Alcohol Law Enforcement officer while trying to take photographs. Hall said he was not injured.

It wasn't known this morning why deputies went to the scene. Sheriff C.W. "Pete" Bland could not be reached for comment.

The concert resumed after being moved inside. About 1,000 persons were at the VFW grounds on the Neuse River, where the concert had been scheduled.

Steelers Meet Pats

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
FOXBORO, MASS. (AP) — Quarterback Terry Bradshaw and his Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers meet the bowl-minded New England Patriots tonight in an opening-game showdown between two National Football League powers.

Bradshaw, who passed for 28 touchdowns last season and then set Super Bowl records by tossing for four TDs and 318 yards, is expected to test New England's secondary early in the nationally televised game at Schaefer Stadium.

A crowd of 61,297 is expected for the 9 p.m. kickoff. The sellout assured regional television coverage, including the Boston area.

The Steelers, who were 14-2 last season before winning three playoff games and capturing a third Super Bowl championship in five years, invade New England with an eight-game winning streak.

They were 3-1 in preseason exhibition games, but Coach Chuck Noll was not too happy with the running game. Franco Harris, the fifth leading rusher in NFL history with 7,377 yards in just seven seasons, is ready to go.

However, veteran running mate Rocky Bleier has been plagued by a knee injury through the preseason and may see only limited action.

The Patriots, the American Conference East champions with an 11-5 record, boast a tough defense against the run. That means Bradshaw can be expected to go to the air, trying to pick apart a veteran secondary that allowed 21 touchdowns by passing last year.

Beaten by Houston in the playoffs last New Year's Eve during a period of turbulence as Coach Chuck Fairbanks was defecting to the University of Colorado, the Patriots are keyed up for the Steelers.

Most New England players still are smarting from the loss to Houston, which cost them a shot at Pittsburgh for the AFC title.

The Patriots figure to go out early and test their awesome running game against Mean Joe Greene, L.C. Greenwood, Jack Ham, Jack Lambert and company early.

Quarterback Steve Grogan, who complements passing with his halfback-style running, is healthy after being forced to the sidelines against Houston and then undergoing knee surgery.

Grogan ran or 539 yards last season while directing an offense that led the NFL with 5,965 in total yards. When not passing, or running, he hands off to three 500-yard plus gainers — Sam Cunningham (768), Horace Ivory (693) and Andy Johnson (675).

Roenicke's HR Leads Birds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
Opportunity knocked all day for Gary Roenicke, but it wasn't until the fourth time that he knocked back.

"I had so many opportunities," said the Baltimore outfielder, shaking his head. "I was fortunate to get another chance."

He filed out twice with two men on, grounded into a double play.

Then came the eighth inning, and Roenicke finally came through with a two-run homer that provided the American League East leaders with a 3-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Roenicke's 23rd homer made a winner of Scott McGregor, who hurled five-hit ball to improve his record to 11-4. He walked none and has allowed just 20 walks in 146 innings this season, including six in his last 99-13 innings.

The victory kept Baltimore's lead at a substantial eight games over second-place Milwaukee.

Rangers 7, Red Sox 6
Willie Montanez's home run leading off the 11th inning powered Texas over Boston. Montanez, capping a four-homer barrage by the Rangers, drilled reliever Dick Drago's first pitch over the right field fence at Fenway Park to end a close struggle. The Rangers also got home runs from Richie Zisk, Eric Soderholm and John Ellis.

Jim Kern, 12-4, the third Texas pitcher who came on in the ninth, earned the victory. Drago, 9-5, the fifth Boston pitcher, took his second loss within 24 hours.

Yankees 6, Royals 5
Graig Nettles' two-run homer capped a game-tying, three-run rally in the bottom of the ninth inning and Oscar Gamble walked a solo shot in the 10th, rallying New York over Kansas City. The victory went to Rich Gossage, 3-2, the fifth New York pitcher.

Angels 5, Indians 2
Dave Frost and Mark Clear combined on a five-hitter and Don Baylor drove in two runs with a single and his 31st homer as California defeated Cleveland. Frost, 14-9, gave up four of the Indians' hits before needing eighth-inning relief help from Clear, who posted his 14th save.

Brewers 7, White Sox 2
Gorman Thomas smashed his 37th home run to take over the AL leadership and Sixto Lezcano added his 26th, a two-run shot in the fifth inning, to lead Milwaukee over Chicago.

Lezcano's homer off loser Ken Kravec, 11-13, followed a single by Cecil Cooper and gave right-hander Moose Haas, 10-8, a 5-1 lead. The two-run blast improved Lezcano's season RBI total to 93.

A's 5, Tigers 4
Right-hander Rick Langford survived 10 hits and Dave Revere triggered three rallies with a single and two walks, scoring each time, as Oakland beat Detroit.

Langford's mistakes included Steve Kemp's solo homer in the sixth inning and Alan Trammell's three-run blast in the ninth. The Oakland pitcher won his 11th game against 13 defeats.

Blue Jays 8, Mariners 5
Roy Howell drove in four runs with three hits, including a three-run homer in the fourth inning, to lead Toronto over Seattle.

Rookie right-hander Dave Stieb, 6-5, was the winner with late-inning relief help from Jesse Jefferson, who earned his first save of the year after pitching out of a bases-loaded situation in the eighth.

John Mayberry had a run-scoring single for Toronto to set a club record of 71 RBI.

40 Of Racing's Best Face Darlington Today

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Forty of stock car racing's finest take on one of the trickiest ovals on the NASCAR circuit for the running of the 30th annual Southern 500 today.

Leading the field at the pole position for the Labor Day classic is Bobby Allison, who turned in a record qualifying time of 154.881 mph around 1.366-mile Darlington International Raceway.

Brother Donnie placed second with 154.506 mph.

But one of the best stories of today's race may be back in the sixth row, where veteran Cale Yarborough is paired with rookie Joe Millikan.

Yarborough made history at last year's Southern 500 by claiming his fourth career victory in the event. Meanwhile, Millikan, 29, of Randleman, N.C., is leading the race for the Grand National Rookie of the Year, with 248 points.

And he's looking for his first NASCAR win.

Millikan regained the point lead after his friend and fellow-rookie Dale Earnhardt suffered broken collarbones a month ago at Pocono, Pa.

Earnhardt, 28, of Kannapolis, N.C., has had to sit on the side-ers faltered on the last hole.

Twitty and Purtzer both live in Phoenix, Ariz., and Twitty said he had mixed feelings seeing Purtzer lose his lead.

"That's the tough part about winning," said Twitty. "But he'll win a lot of tournaments."

Twitty said he felt no pressure teeing off on the last hole, and did not realize he had the lead until he reached the 18th green. His shot off the tee went into the rough and Twitty managed to chip within four feet of the cup to set up his dramatic putt.

Twitty said he was not especially pleased with his performance Sunday.

"It seemed like I was struggling a great deal," Twitty said.

Twitty shot a 2-under par 69 in the opening round to trail Curtis Strange by 5 strokes Thursday. He came back with a 70 Friday to trail the second-round leader by 7 strokes and entered the final round 1 stroke behind.

Twitty Wins As Others Falter

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Howard Twitty had all but conceded the $275,000 B.C. Open championship to his friend Tom Purtzer, but after the 18th hole at the EnJoie Golf Club course knocked off two leaders the $49,500 winner's purse was all Twitty's.

He sank a four-foot par putt on the 18th hole after Purtzer lost his lead there with a bogey and Doug Tewell blew his chance to win the PGA event when he made a double bogey.

"I was starting to think the tournament was just about over and I was really playing for second place. Then I birdied the 15th," said Twitty after his first victory in four years on the pro golf tour.

Twitty finished with a 4-under par 67 in the final round and a 270 total that was 14 strokes under par and 1 stroke ahead of Purtzer.

Tewell, of Edmond, Okla., had entered the final round sharing the lead with Brad Bryant of Amarillo, Texas, with Twitty trailing by 1 stroke.

The competition was intense the final day, with the 20 leading golfers entering Sunday's round within 5 strokes of each other. With six holes left to play, 10 golfers were still within 2 strokes of the lead.

Purtzer eagled the 12th hole to move into the lead, but Twitty stayed close behind with two birdies in the last three holes that put him in position to take the championship when the others faltered on the last hole.

Twitty said he was not especially pleased with his performance Sunday.

"It seemed like I was struggling a great deal," Twitty said.

Twitty shot a 2-under par 69 in the opening round to trail Curtis Strange by 5 strokes Thursday. He came back with a 70 Friday to trail the second-round leader by 7 strokes and entered the final round 1 stroke behind.

Farmville Central Comfortable Being Team To Beat In Race

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — Farmville Central football coach Gene Brewer is not at all uncomfortable with his Jaguars' being picked as the team to beat in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

In fact, Brewer probably would have been agast had conference coaches not picked his team to win the conference title, a title the Jaguars have owned for the last three seasons.

"No, it doesn't bother me (to be picked No. 1). Not really," Brewer said. "We've worked hard to be in that position. It takes a lot of responsibility to stay there."

"But I would rather be picked number one than last anytime," he added.

Being picked last is something Brewer won't have to worry about anytime soon, especially if he keeps coming up with players like the Reid brothers.

Last year as juniors both Donald and Ronald Reid were named to the first team All-East, Donald (6'0", 200) at tailback and Ronald (5'11", 200) at linebacker.

Donald, who also plays linebacker for Brewer, raced for 1,112 yards a year ago while brother Ronald, also an offensive tackle, made over a 100 tackles last season.

"They're as good a pair of football players around here when they're right," Brewer said of the two three-year starters.

Lost from last year's 11-2 squad, however, was a third first team All-East performer, quarterback Donald Freeman. Freeman, who completed over 60 percent of his passes last season, is now playing for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Replacing Freeman will be senior Eugene Joyner.

Joyner (5'10", 143) and the Jaguars will be tested early in the season, opening with powerful Clinton, a team the Jaguars have played three straight years in the playoffs but have never met during the regular season.

Starting in the backfield for the Jaguars along with Reid and Joyner is running back senior David Dunn (5'11", 183). Dunn will also do the punting and place kicking for Farmville Central.

At flanker for the Jaguars will be Mike Horne (5'9", 145), while at split end will be senior Jeffrey Tyson (6'3", 161), a three-year starter for the Jaguars. Senior Tony Eason will start at tight end for Brewer.

"Offensively, we have only four starters back, but the other people we have playing all have game experience, so it doesn't look that bleak," Brewer said.

Up front for the Jaguars will be either Jeff Joyner (5'8", 162) or Jackie Norris (5'11", 162) at center, Reid and Mike King (5'10", 164), who will also play defensive tackle, at guards and Johnny Grimsley (5'10", 185) and Ronnie Locust, the only junior on the starting offensive line, at tackles. Locust will also start at defensive tackle.

Defensively for the Jaguars, Danny Dunn (5'8", 146) and Roger Joyner (5'6", 159), a varsity performer for three years, will start at defensive ends while Morris Wilkes (5'9", 156) will play middle guard.

The two Reid brothers will start at the linebackers, while in the secondary Eason, Horne and Tyson will start, backed up by senior Mike Baker, who will also see action at defensive end.

Brewer said he felt one of the team's strengths would be its defense, which returns 10 players from last year's squad.

"I wasn't all that pleased at our scrimmage (two weeks ago) with our defense. Some of our experienced players just didn't hit like I thought they should have," Brewer said.

"Usually, we have some pretty good hitters. In the second half, we did come out and hit pretty well in spots," he added.

"I think our main weakness may be that we don't have the experienced depth in our second group of guys," Brewer said.

Farmville Central opens its season at home Friday night against Clinton.

Falcons Win In Overtime

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

This will come as no great consolation to New Orleans Saints fans today, but the fact is that their National Football League team is gaining on the Atlanta Falcons.

After suffering heart-breaking losses in the final seconds of both 1978 meetings with the Falcons, the Saints forced Atlanta into overtime Sunday — and then suffered another heartbreaking loss.

This time it was 40-34 in a shootout decided when rookie kicker Russell Erxleben tried to salvage a wild snap on a punt with a desperation pass that was intercepted by James Mayberry and returned 6 yards for the deciding touchdown.

Cleveland's Don Cockcroft forced another overtime by kicking a 35-yard field goal with four seconds left in regulation time and then lifted the Browns to a 25-22 victory over the Jets with another field goal, this one from 27 yards with 15 seconds left in the extra period. Elsewhere, Tommy Kramer awoke Minnesota's slumbering offense by throwing four touchdown passes to Ahmad Rashad, the last one a controversial 25-yarder with 17 seconds to play in the Vikings' 28-22 decision over San Francisco.

Pittsburgh's defending Super Bowl champions play at New England tonight, completing the first week's games.

Falcons 40, Saints 34
This offensive show was settled by the bad center snap on the overtime punt.

The Saints had lined up on the 32 when the snap soared over Erxleben's head. He caught up with the ball at the 5-yard line and tried a two-handed pass that wound up in the hands of Mayberry.

Browns 25, Jets 22
Cockcroft's third field goal of the game forced the Jets into overtime and then his fourth won it for the Browns. Ironically, both he and New York kicker Pat Leahy, who had three field goals, missed extra points following touchdowns.

Vikings 28, 49ers 22
Kramer, replacing retired Fran Tarkenton, fired TD passes of 52, 32, 8 and 25 yards to Rashad. It appeared for a moment at least that Rashad had fumbled the last one before reaching the end zone but the officials ruled that he had already scored before losing the ball.

Oilers 29, Redskins 27
Defending NFL rushing champion Earl Campbell rolled up 166 yards and scored two TDs, including the game-winner with under two minutes to play as Houston overtook Washington.

Trailing 27-13, Houston rallied with 16 fourth-quarter points for the victory. Campbell's decisive score came one play after he had slipped on a fourth-and-one and stumbled to a 5-yard gain, setting up his TD.

Dolphins 9, Bills 7
Larry Csonka, returning to the Dolphins after four years, scored Miami's lone touchdown and gained the important yards in the winning drive, finishing with 87 yards for the game. Tom Dempsey had a chance to win it for Buffalo, but missed a 34-yard field goal try as time ran out.

Eagles 23, Giants 17
Philadelphia crammed all of its scoring in the second period with Ron Jaworski rifling two TD passes to Harold Carmichael. The catches extended Carmichael's streak of at least one catch per game to 97, second on the all-time NFL list.

The Giants staged a second half rally to move within a TD, but fell short when the Eagle defense stopped them, first at the 26 and then at the 18 in the game's final seven minutes.

Bears 6, Packers 3
Bob Thomas kicked field goals of 25 and 19 yards, both in the second quarter, and Chicago made them stand up for the victory over Green Bay. Chester Marcol accounted for the lone Packer points with a 28-yard field goal.

Walter Payton gained 125 yards in 36 carries for the Bears.
Cowboys 22, Cardinals 21
Rafael Septien kicked a 27-yard field goal with 76 seconds left to play, lifting Dallas past St. Louis and spoiling a 193-yard opening day performance by St. Louis rookie Ottis Anderson.

Broncos 10, Bengals 0
Norris Weese hit Rick Upchurch with a 47-yard pass, setting up the game's only TD, a 6-yard pitch to Dave Preston, as Denver blanked Cincinnati. Jim Turner added a 37-yard field goal for the Broncos and Denver's goal line stand stopped the Bengals at the 1-yard line midway through the fourth quarter.

Chiefs 14, Colts 0
Ted McKnight scored both Kansas City touchdowns, one on a 70-yard sprint, as the Chiefs blanked Baltimore.

It was the third straight game — including the last two preseason contests — in which Kansas City's defense has not surrendered a TD.

Raiders 24, Rams 17
Ken Stabler hurled three TD passes, leading Oakland past Los Angeles. The opportunistic Raiders intercepted LA quarterback Pat Haden three times, recovered a fumble and blocked two punts.

Chargers 33, Seahawks 16
Four field goals by Rolf Benirschke helped San Diego whip Seattle as the Chargers forced the Seahawks into six turnovers, five by quarterback Jim Zorn. Benirschke connected on kicks of 31, 42, 22 and 23 yards and Clarence Williams ran for two TDs.

Bucs 31, Lions 16
Tampa Bay rookie Jerry Eckwood rushed for a club record 121 yards as the Bucs thoroughly dominated Detroit in their game Saturday night.

East Carolina University's victory over Western Carolina Saturday night won't hurt the ticket sales for this Saturday's game in Carter Stadium against N.C. State.

As usual, it looks like another record-setting crowd for the annual confrontation between the two schools.

The Pirates had a lot of fun in the 31-6 win over the Catamounts, but it was not a true indication of their ability. Western has the potential to be a good team, but they were overpowered early and never got a chance to get into the game.

Saturday's action against N.C. State will be a true test, however. The Wolfpack is rated as a solid favorite to win the ACC title, and is picked by many as a Top Twenty team this year. A victory by East Carolina in that game would certainly put the Pirates on the right track.

Saturday night, the offense worked almost flawlessly. Even the passing, while not hitting the percentage that might have been hoped for, was good. The Pirates hit on just six of 14 tries, but in most cases, was on target with the throws.

Leader Green continues to work his way up through the top ten career total offense leaders as he opens his senior year. The Jacksonville speedster ran his total offense over the past three years to 2,034 yards, surpassing the old number ten man, Billy Wightman, who had 1,927. Next up is Eddie Hicks, just 67 yards ahead of Green, while Ken Strayhorn is another 54 ahead. Green could pass both by picking up 122 yards against the Wolfpack.

In rushing, Theodore Sutton is just 14 yards shy of number ten Billy Wightman, with 1,439 yards. He needs another 46 to catch number nine, Billy Wallace, or 61 against State to pass both.

Billy Ray Washington, with 84 yards in receptions Saturday, passed number eight Bob Grant's 641 and now has 696. He needs just 25 yard more to move up to number seven Vic Wilfore. Again, it's possible against State.

There was one record set in the game against Western. Green's 70 yard non-scoring pass to Washington was the longest of its category by a Pirate.

One thing that will have to be done during the week is to erase the penalties the Pirates got against them in the Western game. To have such penalties against State would probably be fatal.

But at the same time, Coach Pat Dye was extremely pleased with the fact that the Pirates fumbled only twice and did not turn the ball over a single time.

Western was a good beginning. It showed that the Pirates have the potential. Putting all that together against State would bring that potential to the fore.

Sportswriters Tab Wolfpack

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — With all the pre-season polls by sports writers in the Atlantic Coast Conference in, North Carolina State is the odds-on favorite to win the 1979 ACC football title.

The latest group to tab Coach Bo Rein's club as the favorite is Operation Football, a tour of all eight ACC football practice fields by sports writers and sportscasters from the conference area.

The Wolfpack was selected earlier in a mid-season poll by the news media. A few weeks back, the eight league coaches endorsed N.C. State as the likely successor to Clemson, which captured the title last year.

Twenty sports writers on Operation Football participated in the voting, and they gave N.C.

State 136 points out of a possible 140. North Carolina came next with 110 points, while Clemson received 96, Maryland 92, Duke 51, Virginia 44½ and Wake Forest 30½.

Points were awarded on the basis of seven for first place, six for second and so on down the line.

The Wolfpack was selected as the top finisher by 16 voters, while two others picked it to tie for the crown. Another tabbed it for a third place finish.

North Carolina and Maryland each got an outright vote for first and each was picked to tie for the championship with N.C. State.

In last year's voting, participants in Operation Football picked Clemson to win with North Carolina second, N.C. State third, Maryland fourth, Duke fifth, Wake Forest sixth and Virginia seventh. The only change in the final standings was that Maryland finished second and North Carolina, fourth.

NEW YORK (AP) — He was a finalist at Wimbledon. He is seeded fifth in the U.S. Open. Then why is Roscoe Tanner always playing before relatively small crowds on the outside courts of the National Tennis Center?

On a day when all but one seeded player — Gene Mayer, rated 13th, who lost in straight sets to Pat DuPre — was advancing to the fourth round, Tanner was making the most noise.

The hard-serving left-hander defeated Nick Saviano 6-4, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 on Court 16 Sunday, then wondered why he has played just once in two years on the stadium court that will be the site of the semifinals and final.

"It's really unfair to the guys who play on the outside, get to the round of 16 or the quarterfinals and find they're playing inside or in the grandstand," noted Tanner, who lost to Bjorn Borg in a five-set final at Wimbledon in July.

Today's feature men's matches — on the stadium and grandstand courts — paired Vitas Gerulaitis, seeded fourth, against No. 10 Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina; top-seeded Bjorn Borg against unranked Dick Stockton; No. 6 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina versus No. 9 Eddie Dibbs; and unseeded Yannick Noah of France against South African Johan Kriek, also unseeded.

Among the women, No. 9 Billie Jean King met Kathy May Teacher, No. 2 Martina Navratilova faced 10th-ranked Greer Stevens, fourth-seeded Virginia Wade of Britain met Regina Masikova of Czechoslovakia and Evonne Goolagong, seeded fifth, was paired against Jeanne DuVal.

The hardcourt surface being used for the Open perfectly fits the game of defending champion Jimmy Connors, who celebrated his 27th birthday by demolishing Bruce Manson 6-3, 6-0, 6-3. Also happy with the surface was DuPre, who lost to Tanner in the semifinals at Wimbledon.

DuPre's next opponent, seventh-seeded Harold Solomon, was in total control in ousting Ray Moore of South Africa 6-3, 6-0, 7-5. Other seeds advancing Sunday included N. 3 John McEnroe, who won by default over John Lloyd of Britain; No. 9 Eddie Dibbs, a 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 winner over Bernie Mitton of South Africa, and No. 11 Brian Gottfried, who stormed from behind for a 6-7, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 triumph over Vic Amaya.

Unseeded Tom Gorman also qualified for the fourth round with a 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-4 victory over Hank Pfister.

There were no upsets among the women, with top-seeded Chris Evert Lloyd, seeking her fifth consecutive U.S. Open title, easing past Renee Richards 6-2, 6-1. Tracy Austin, No. 3 seed, beat Kate Latham 6-3, 6-0; No. 6 Dianne Fromholtz of Australia was extended to three sets before beating Leslie Allen 6-7, 6-3, 6-2; No. 8 Kerry Reid stopped Mary Lou Piatek 4-6, 6-3, 6-4; No. 10 Greer Stevens of South Africa defeated Terry Holladay 6-4, 6-0, and 11th-seeded Kathy Jordan beat Wendy White 6-2, 6-1.

Unseeded Anne Smith reached the fourth round with a 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Barbara Potter.

Two Tied In LPGA
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Carole Jo Skala and Sylvia Bertolaccini were tied for the lead entering the final round today in the $100,000 LPGA Rail Charity Golf Classic.

Skala, from Fair Oaks, Calif., tied Bertolaccini with a 54-hole total of 207, 9-under-par, by making a birdie on the 18th hole Sunday. After three rounds of play, 19 women had sub-par totals over the Rail Golf Course, and eight players are within four shots of the co-leaders.

Bertolaccini, who was one of three leaders after second-round play, managed to stay atop the pack by carding a 1-under-par 71 on Sunday.

"I would like to have had more birdies, but I'll take the round," said Bertolaccini, a native of Argentina who plays out of Dallas. "I was happy with the way I hit the ball, but the putts just didn't go in."

At 208, one shot off the pace, are Jo Ann Washam and Betsy King. King carded a 70. Washam, who shot 68 Sunday, closed spectacularly with an eagle on the par-4, 18th hole by hitting a wedge shot 120 yards into the cup.

It was the second eagle of the day on the finishing hole. Earlier, Cynthia Hill holed out from 130 yards with a 7 iron.

Cathy Thompson and Shelley Hamlin finished the day with 7-under-par totals of 209, two strokes back.

The low round Sunday was scored by veteran Vivian Brownlee, who fired a 5-under-par 31 on the back nine to record a 66.

South Africa defeated Terry Holladay 6-4, 6-0, and 11th-seeded Kathy Jordan beat Wendy White 6-2, 6-1.

Unseeded Anne Smith reached the fourth round with a 3-6, 6-4, 6-4 victory over Barbara Potter.

Expos Beat Reds, 13-1, Sweep Series

By MARV SCHNEIDER
AP Sports Writer

The Montreal Expos were leading the Cincinnati Reds 10-0 after two innings and were worried.

Not about the Reds. The Expos, having scored six runs in the first inning and four in the second, were looking anxiously up at the threatening skies over Olympic Stadium.

"We were kind of concerned about the possibility of rain catching up with us," winning pitcher Steve Rogers said Sunday after he had coasted to a 13-1 victory and limited Cincinnati to four hits.

"We were sort of in a hurry-up situation with that lead," Rogers explained.

Montreal's hurrying batters apparently didn't intend to wait around for any walks, and they didn't get a single one. Their enthusiastic swinging resulted in 21 hits, nine in the first inning, tying a club record.

The victory gave the Expos a sweep of the three-game series, and kept second-place Montreal 3½ games behind the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League East. The Pirates beat the San Francisco Giants 5-3.

The Reds lost an opportunity to regain the lead in the NL West. The Houston Astros remained half a game in front despite losing 5-4 to the New York Mets.

In other NL games, Philadelphia edged Atlanta 2-1 in 10 innings, St. Louis beat San Diego 2-1, and Los Angeles rallied for a 6-2 victory over Chicago.

Pirates 5, Giants 3

Two doubles by Steve Nicosia keyed Pittsburgh's offense. One drove in two runs and the second led to another score. John Candelaria, 13-8, struck out 10 and walked only one. The Pirates victory, their 17th in 22 games, gave them a 6-0 season sweep in Candlestick Park, the first team to do that in San Francisco since the Giants moved west in 1958.

Mets 5, Astros 4

Rookie relief pitcher Neil Allen choked off a last-inning Astros threat after one run scored, with the tying run in scoring position, and relished the idea of the Mets being spoilers. John Stearns drove in two runs for New York and center fielder Jeff Leonard's error on a fly ball set up what proved to be the winning run breaking a nine-game Mets losing streak.

Phillies 2, Braves 1

Tilden Beat Connors?

NEW YORK (AP) — Old George Lott is duly impressed but not overawed by the hard-socking, leaping, grunting, two-fisted racket swinging breed of modern tennis players.

"If Jimmy Connors used that two-handed stuff on Bill Tilden, he'd be lucky to get two games a set," the venerable doubles star of the late 1920s and early 1930s commented as he watched the 98-year-old American championships unfold in the glistening, almost antiseptic

"It's not going to last forever but it's certainly fun right now," said Dallas Green, unbeaten in three games as Philadelphia's interim manager since replacing Danny Ozark. "I'm laughing now."

Latest to tickle Green's funny bone was a run-scoring double by Greg Luzinski in the 10th, scoring Bake McBride who opened the inning with a single.

Cardinals 2, Padres 1

St. Louis moved into third place in the NL East, one game ahead of Chicago, by completing a three-game sweep and winning for the 12th time in 15 games. Bob Forsch scattered five hits for his eighth victory in 18 decisions. Tony Scott scored the winning run in the ninth on Ken Oberkell's sacrifice fly.

Dodgers 6, Cubs 2

Davey Lopes belted a bases-loaded homer with two out in the bottom of the ninth to cap a five-run inning, and off Bruce Sutter, no less.

Sutter had allowed only two other homers all year, and went into the game with a 1.30 ERA and 35 saves.

Included in the Dodgers' earlier offense was a major league record 145th career pinch hit by Manny Mota. It came off starter Lynn McGlothen, and lifted Mota out of a tie with Smokey Burgess.

He is not one to insist that the present-day practitioners don't compare with the old-timers and that when Tilden died they lost the mold. On the contrary, he is bug-eyed over the tremendous advances made by the game since it went open 11 years ago.

"It is foolish to compare men who played in different periods of time," he said, "but my feeling is that the game today is far superior in the second, third, fourth and lower plateaus. There are many more good players. At the very top, players are no better and no worse than they were in the old days."

Phillip Henry Niekro Sr. is a retired coal miner and mill worker who always had time to have a catch with his sons in the back yard no matter how tired he was after a hard day's work.

"We'd be waiting on the steps when he came home from the coal mine," Joe remembers. "He'd put his lunch bucket on the steps and play with us until it was dark."

"He taught us the aspects of winning and losing. He taught us to keep our heads up. He loved his kids and we love him back very dearly. He's not in the best of health now and it would be a great Christmas present if we could both win 20."

It is not beyond the realm of possibility for the Niekro brothers to face each other during the final month of the season. They hope it doesn't happen.

Ranked Teams Begin Season This Week

By The Associated Press

The preliminaries are over and the stage is set for the stars of the college football season to swing into action.

With little fanfare, 21 of the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division I-A teams — none of them in The Associated Press Top Twenty — got the season under way Saturday. Next weekend, the teams with numbers before their names take over.

No. 1-ranked Southern California, the preseason choice to capture the national championship, opens at Texas Tech while runner-up Alabama, the defending national champion, travels to Georgia Tech to kick off ABC's 1979 television package.

Oklahoma, Texas, Penn State, Nebraska and Notre Dame, the preseason 3-4-5-6-7 teams, are idle while sixth-ranked Purdue entertains Wisconsin, No. 7 Michigan hosts Northwestern and No. 10 Michigan State is at home against Illinois.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Georgia, No. 17 Pitt and No. 20 Arkansas aren't scheduled but No. 12 Missouri entertains San Diego State, No. 13 Stanford is at Tulane, No. 14 Texas A&M meets Brigham Young in Houston, Wyoming is at No. 15 Washington, No. 16 Houston at UCLA, California at No. 18 Arizona State and Southern Mississippi at No. 19 Florida State.

On the small-scale opening weekend the spotlight belonged to Hubert Oliver, who rushed for 196 yards on 25 carries as Arizona whipped Colorado State 33-17. Richard Hersey added 120 yards on 15 rushes while Jim Krohn ran for two touchdowns and passed to Oliver for one.

To get things off on the right foot there were even a couple of upsets. Tulsa bowed to McNeese State 6-3 on second-half field goals of 47 and 40 yards by Don Stump while West Texas State blanked Southern Illinois 14-0 in a Missouri Valley Conference game as halfback-quarterback Clint Plant scampered 85 yards for one touchdown and engineered a 67-yard drive for the other.

The MVC was the only conference with league games. New Mexico State trimmed Wichita State 23-13 as Howard Greathouse rushed for 134 yards and Ray Locklin added 115 and Indiana State downed Drake 19-12 despite Mark Mendenhall's MVC-record four field goals.

Del Rodgers galloped 60 yards for a first-period score and Mark Anderson returned an interception for a 20-yard touchdown 44 seconds later as Utah whipped Long Beach State 34-10. Brad Wright completed 16 of 22 passes for 171 yards to lead New Mexico past Louisiana Tech 34-0.

Two of the nation's winningest independent teams were easy victors. Bernard Jackson scored on runs of 13 and 18 yards and rushed for 127 overall as North Texas State pounded Texas-El Paso 35-0 and Theodore Sutton gained 112 yards on just 12 carries, two of them for touchdowns, to pace East Carolina over Western Carolina 31-6.

Hal King passed 19 yards to Kevin Sigue with just over a minute remaining to lift Southwestern Louisiana past Northeast Louisiana 17-13. Eastern Michigan was the only other Division I-A team in action. The Hurons defeated Division II Northern Michigan 21-7.

Knuckling Niekros Continue Winning

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

How far does brotherly love go between the knuckling Niekros as they bid to become the first pitching brothers to win 20 games in the same year? Well, blood may be thicker than water, but it's not as thick as pennant fever.

"We're very close and we always have been," says 40-year-old Phil Niekro of the Atlanta Braves. "We're probably as close as two brothers can be."

That's about as close as the pennant race in the National League West, which finds 34-year-old Joe Niekro's Houston Astros in a battle with the Cincinnati Reds. Phil's Braves, on the other hand, are struggling to escape the cellar but have a chance to be spoilers since their last six games are with the Astros and Reds.

"I don't mind being his brother because he's a great pitcher and a great man," says Joe. "But if it gets down to the nitty-gritty and he's got 19 wins and we've got a chance to win the division, there's no way I can root for him."

"I hope it doesn't come down to that situation because I'd really like to see them win it, but if it's my turn I'll pitch and I'll do my best. It's always been that way and Joe knows it. I don't like to lose any more than anyone else does. But the last series in Cincinnati — that's where I'd really like to do something."

Not only are highly successful brother combinations few and far between on the major league pitching rolls, but what makes the Niekros even more unusual is the fact that they are both knuckleballers, throwing the fluttering pitch 80-85 percent of the time.

The Niekros would like to win 20 games apiece — Phil did it in 1969 and 1974 but Joe has

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K954 ♥65 ♦K1072 ♠A93
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—Your hand is too strong for a simple raise to two spades but a bit underweight for a jump to three spades. Make a waiting bid of two diamonds, then raise spades at your next turn.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦42 ♥KQJ1075 ♦A742 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ 2 ♣ Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Our tendency is to respect partner's penalty doubles, but not with this holding. Our hand is offensively oriented, with a self-sufficient suit and little in the way of defense. We would bid two hearts. Any other action earns a fat demerit.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦4 ♥QJ8763 ♦AK5 ♠J76
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ 2 ♣ Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—As we remarked above, we do not pull partner's doubles except on rare occasions. Here we have two sound defensive tricks, three cards in the opponent's trump suit and a singleton, so there is every reason to expect a juicy penalty, and none to suppose that we have any better spot. Another factor in favor of this decision is the likelihood that partner is short in hearts, which makes a retreat to two hearts less appetizing.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦QJ74 ♥532 ♦A1094 ♠62
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 NT 2 ♣ ?

What action do you take?
A.—Strike while the iron is hot. Since your side can probably make no more than a partial, double and collect what should be at least a 300-point penalty, and what could easily be 700 or more.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦A965 ♥52 ♦KQ75 ♠632
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ 2 ♥ 2 ♣ 3 ♥

4 ♣ 5 ♥ ?
What action do you take?
A.—With full values for your first bid, your hand is suited to both offense and defense, but you don't know which to choose. Therefore, pass! That doesn't mean that you are frightened of further competition. You are simply giving partner the courtesy of the road. Whether he elects to bid on or double, you will abide by his decision. With a weaker, less offensively-oriented hand, you should double to warn partner that your hand is not suitable for five spades.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦A74 ♥AK1095 ♦AQ107 ♠5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Even though partner made a mild response at his first turn, there is still a possibility of slam. Partner liked your diamonds enough to jump to game, so the hands appear to fit well. Since eleven tricks should be safe, we would make a slam try by cue-bidding four spades.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦KJ94 ♥AKQ94 ♦AJ7 ♠5
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Dble. Pass 2 ♣ ?

What action do you take?
A.—A competitive bid of two hearts not only does not do your hand justice. It also rules out two other perfectly playable suits. The correct action is to double. Since partner has not yet spoken, this double is for takeout, while allowing partner the option of passing for penalties. The fact that West made a takeout double doesn't prevent you from taking similar action.

Q.8—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦104 ♥1097 ♦KQ9 ♠AJ642
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♣ 2 ♥ ?

What action do you take?
A.—If partner has a minimum opening bid, game is doubtful for your side. However, on defense against a diamond contract, your hand should produce at least three tricks, so the odds are that you will be able to defeat the contract. Double; you could net up to 800 points—more if East is a free spirit. But even if the contract is fulfilled, no major harm will have been done.

Bette Would Like To Turn Into Adult

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
Bette Midler has started writing songs, which she describes as "innocent, with a touch of dementia."
She says, "I don't write by myself because I'm not an instrument player. But I've started to write again with Randy Kerber, a keyboards player."
"My songs always come out off-the-wall. They're rarely straight-ahead love songs. They're mostly whimsical, childlike songs. I guess that's what my view of the world is. Innocent with a touch of dementia."

"I'd like to grow up one of these days. I'd like to kick off this childhood. I want to be able to deal with the world."
She is told that she looks mature, at 34, in a black dress, stylish unconstructed purple blazer and her hair tight to her head, in rolls at the back. "This is my Heidi imitation. It means nothing in terms of maturity. Beneath this exterior is the heart of a child."
"I like being childlike. I don't like being childish. One eventually has to take responsibility for one's life, one's career. That's what I'm trying to do."

Six months ago, Miss Midler decided to be her own manager. It's a lot of work but she calls herself a workaholic. "It's great, not having a manager. It might not always be. For the time being it is wonderful. When it isn't pleasant any more I'll find someone else."
This summer she finished a new album, her sixth for Atlantic, "Thighs and Whispers." It'll be released in November. "It's pretty jolly," she says. "It's got a good deal of disco music on it. The form lends itself to lot of theatricality and big arrangements and Arif Mardin is a brilliant arranger. There are songs on it that caught my ear a few months ago, some ballads, mostly rhythm 'n' blues ballads. There's James Taylor's song 'Mill Worker.' There is the 1930s song, 'Big Noise from Winnetka.' Arif had Bob Haggart, who was one of the writers of that song, play bass. It turned out great."

"I used to do songs of that period a lot. They kept shoving me into that, and I didn't want to go. Now I'm back to loving songs of the period again. I was getting stuck in this nostalgia act business, and I didn't want to do that. I'm well out of worrying about it now. I figure as long as it's good music, who cares?"

Miss Midler's recent hit single, "Married Men," will be on the new album. So will "Hurricane," a disco song she wrote with Kerber. "I think this is a good album," she says, "the best I've made in a long time. I'm happy with the way it sounds and the way I sound. I love the charts. It's very light-hearted and giddy. I don't think I've ever been happier with a record."

Her best selling LP was "The Divine Miss M," when her image was vivacious camp, dressing like the 1930s and '40s, singing songs of those decades, in her live appearances including some brash "dishing" in her monologues. Then the public gaze moved away from the young performer who described herself "trash with flash."

"When I got to the third album, I was in a pretty bad way," Miss Midler says. "I was fairly depressed about the whole thing. I went off in a different direction. I think I'm back on the right track now. "Actually, that album, 'Songs for the New Depression,' had some wonderful songs on it. It was a gentle, whimsical, rather than camp album. I didn't want to be screaming and high camp, so I calmed myself down a bit on the third album."

"I thought everybody would understand what I was doing. Unfortunately, I was terrifiedly mistaken."

All careers have their peaks and valleys, Miss Midler says, and what you do about that is keep working. "At present I'm in a very good frame of mind, looking forward to the '80s. I don't think I've ever been happier."

"I've kind of made my peace with my camp image," she says. "It bothered me for a long time. I didn't want to get thrown into a corner marked camp, so I fought against it."

"But now I see that it has a certain value. There are camp things on the new album. Camp doesn't embarrass me now. If people like it, well, we should all enjoy ourselves."

Last summer Miss Midler finished shooting the leading role in "The Rose," a film about a rock star which will be released in November. "Originally it was a fictionalized biography of Janis Joplin," she said, "and I wasn't interested. I didn't think I could impersonate Janis, and I didn't think there was anybody around who could."

"Still, I liked the idea of singing rock 'n' roll and the idea of the range of emotions the character was allowed to play. They kept redrafting the script and it got less and less Janis and I thought it got better. My manager at the time said I should do it."

Now, will Miss Midler make a lot of films? "I think I'm going to start making a lot of albums and never make another film," she predicts. "It's seven years since the first album; I figure after seven years of lean it's time for the fat to come rolling in."

"I wouldn't say they were beating down my door with movie scripts. There are people who are interested in working with me. But they're not beating a path exactly. They're treading quietly."

BETTE MIDLER

For her live appearances, which have been hugely attended throughout her career, Miss Midler likes a big production—sets, costumes, elaborate lights. It's expensive and more difficult than standing to sing with a microphone.

"I do it because I like it," she says. "I always tended to end up in theater. A big production makes me feel comfortable. It feeds my fantasy life."

Miss Midler is also writing a book, to come out in February, called "A View from A Broad," which she describes as Auntie Mame-like. She says, "It doesn't have a lot of root in reality. It's amusing." Someday, she'll write a serious autobiography. "I haven't lived quite enough yet," she says.

James Gregory Landed Role For Earlier Part

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — James Gregory landed the role of Inspector Luger on ABC's "Barney Miller" because of a detective he played in an earlier series.

"Danny had me in mind when he visualized the character," said Gregory, referring to Danny Arnold, producer and co-creator of the popular detective comedy series.

"He thought I had some of the characteristics of Barney Ruditsky, a famous New York rackets cop during Prohibition. Danny was a friend of the real Ruditsky. He borrowed Barney's first name for 'Barney Miller.'"

In the late 1950s and early '60s, Gregory played Barney Ruditsky for three years in the NBC series "The Lawless Years."

Gregory can't seem to get away from detectives in his TV roles. He starred in "Detective School," a summer filler that got such high ratings ABC may bring it back as a regular series at midseason.

He shrugged at the suggestion. "Most every actor has played a lot of policemen," he said. "It's whatever's in vogue."

Gregory also used his time away from "Barney Miller" to play a leading role in the movie "Main Event," and to star with John Ritter in the ABC film "The New Season." In "Main Event," with Barbara Streisand and Ryan O'Neal, he plays a fight promoter. In the television picture he's a coach.

He has a distinctive rasping voice and a craggy lined face. He wouldn't tell his age, but laughed and said, "As long as I can keep on playing guys in their 50s, I'll be happy."

Gregory was born in the Bronx with show business in his blood, so to speak. His father was a railroad engineer, but his grandfather had been chief prop man and special effects man for movie pioneer D.W. Griffith. "He came from Sweden and got a job with the Gish sisters at the studio in Marmonet," Gregory said of his grandfather. "Maybe some of his genes came back in me."

He made his stage debut in "Key Largo," with Paul Muni, playing a sheriff's deputy. After Pearl Harbor, he found himself "doing four seasons" in the Navy and Marine Corps, and since then, he's been in more than 25 stage plays, such as "The Desperate Hours," "All My Sons" and "Death of a Salesman," and 50 movies, including "The Manchurian Candidate" and "Captain Newman, M.D."

New Director Is Optimistic

DR. ERIC S. ZAHARIA... the new Director of Caswell Center in Kinston, has outlined basic goals to upgrade the Center so that it can meet federal certification standards.

KINSTON — Dr. Eric S. Zaharia, who has finished six weeks as the new Director of Caswell Center, expresses optimism and enthusiasm about the future of the Center.

One of four institutions for mentally retarded individuals in North Carolina, the Kinston facility serves 32 eastern counties of the state.

Until Zaharia's appointment in July, the Center had been without a full-time director since the resignation of the former director in February.

A native of Pomona, California, the 31-year old director brings to Caswell experience gained in all levels of care. In college years at Pomona College, he worked with parents of handicapped children, and during summers worked with the J. F. Kennedy Child Study Center.

He earned his Master's Degree from the University of Arizona — and during those study years, worked as a health care staff member at a facility in Tucson, where he became Assistant Resident Director.

In Tennessee, he was Deputy Assistant Director for Mental Health/Mental Retardation Services for the state, and also earned his doctorate at George Peabody College in Nashville. His position at Caswell is one that entails facing a wide range of old problems — especially the condition of the physical plant; staff utilization; and program management.

Zaharia said his goals include ones "to renovate our buildings as rapidly as possible" — and to move completely out of buildings no longer appropriate for residential living.

One of his first actions in staff utilization has been to maintain an open-door policy to talk with staff and discuss with them their concerns about the Center.

Zaharia's plans include those of getting the facility in shape within the next year or 18 months to meet federal certification standards. The certification, he explains, means more dollars, more staff and better programs for residents.

Immediate plans include establishing, by early September, a Resident's Council. The council will constitute "a formal mechanism for resident input," Zaharia notes.

He is also urging parents and organizations to work toward a common purpose of making Caswell "a worthwhile place to live if you're a retarded person."

NEW YORK (UPI) — The man we're looking for is wearing a Herbert Hoover collar. If you don't know what that is, you may never have heard of Judge Crater — or care that on Labor Day the most famous disappearance in the annals of American police enters its 50th year.

Anyhow, if he's alive (and who's to say for certain?) he is 90 years old and the collar that graced his long, slim neck in those police missing-person circulars of 49 years ago is in a state of considerable wilt. If he is dead, he may lie under the rubble of a torn-down brewery.

The brewery theory holds that the New York State Supreme Court justice was done in by a pathological killer and notorious gangster of prohibition days, Legs Diamond. It is advanced by Gary Levine of Kingston, N.Y., who has published a biography of Legs, "Anatomy of a Gangster."

The good judge, known as "Goodtime Joe" along Broadway during the days he pursued Ziegfeld chorines, was last seen boarding a taxi at 9:15 p.m. in midtown New York on Aug. 6, 1930, but nobody — certainly not his wife at their summer place in Maine — figured him as missing.

Not until a month later. Then his fellow jurists became alarmed at his benchy hooky and reported it. New York police took the case on Sept. 3, 1930. Hence the Labor Day anniversary. The Crater caper has been called "the most tantalizing mystery of our times." He's been reported seen in every state, most foreign countries and ships at sea.

Certainly, in terms of long notoriety, his case stands at the head of the troika of famed missing in this century: Joseph Force Crater, Amelia Earhart Putnam, and James Riddle Hoffa, in order of vanishment. Crater was deeply involved in Tammany Hall politics, and there is some evidence that he may have paid them $22,500 (a year's salary) for his judgeship. He disappeared at first sizzle of the investigatory pot that boiled into the political scandal that booted Mayor James J. Walker.

Also, he was involved in a real-estate deal that later proved rather shady. Also, there was some talk of blackmail by a divorcee he had been supporting. When Crater left their Maine farm after a call from New York on Aug. 3, his wife heard him mutter, "I've got to straighten those fellows out."

Author Levine, an associate professor at Columbia-Greene Community College, Hudson, N.Y., says that in researching the cold-blooded-murder life of Legs Diamond, he heard a number of times that associates of Diamond mentioned Crater's name in connection with the Barman brewery in Kingston in the month the judge disappeared.

"Rumors persisted with several of the Barman drivers (of illegal beer trucks)," he said in an interview. "The story cropped up in a local tavern that two or three of the drivers were there in the brewery when someone was brought in, and he later was believed to be Crater."

The brewery was long ago defamed and dismantled, but the story persists that Crater was killed and buried in the brewery basement and reposes there under the rubble.

So Far, Accidents Claim

By The Associated Press
Five persons were killed in a highway collision in Yadkin County Friday night in one of a number of accidents that have caused 16 traffic deaths during the Labor Day weekend in North Carolina.

This year's traffic toll stood at 985 today, 43 more than had been killed in the comparable period last year.

The Highway Patrol said five members of a family from Thomasville were traveling west on U.S. 421 when their car apparently swerved across the center line and collided head-on with a tractor-trailer truck, killing four members of the family and the truck driver. The patrol said the accident occurred about 10:20 p.m. two miles east of Yadkinville.

The dead were identified as Kenneth Parrish, 46; his wife, Mary Lou Lytton Parrish, 39; her children by a previous marriage, Wendy Lynn Lytton, 7, and Eric Scott Lytton, 10; and the truck driver, James K. Freeman, 27, of Kernersville.

The fifth member of the family, 5-year-old Katie Lee Lytton, was in satisfactory condition today at Forsyth Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem.

The patrol said William Edwin Estes, 61, of Baltimore, Md., was killed Sunday when the car he was driving ran off U.S. 701 north of Newton Grove in Johnston County and overturned.

Juanita Lee Lucas, 51, of Philadelphia, Pa., was killed Sunday as she stepped into the path of a vehicle on Interstate 85 south of Lexington in Davidson County.

William Arthur Davis, 15, of Godwin was killed Sunday on U.S. 301 south of Godwin in Cumberland County when a car struck the motorcycle on which he was traveling.

Johnny Franklin Fagg, 14, of Troy was killed Sunday when the motorcycle he was riding ran off a state road south of Denton in Davidson County and overturned.

The patrol said 83-year-old David Morris McNeill of Red Springs was killed Saturday in a one-vehicle accident in Robeson County.

Gadly Price Boyd, 70, of Kannapolis, was killed Saturday in an accident in Cabarrus County, six miles north of Concord, the patrol said.

An Albemarle woman, Tamar Annette Sehorn, 18, was killed Saturday when the car in which she was riding ran off the road and struck a culvert near Albemarle.

William Edwin West, 16, of Wilmington was killed Saturday when the small truck he was driving flipped over on U.S. 74 in Wrightsville Beach in New Hanover County.

Also killed Saturday was Christine Greene, 22, of Forest City. The patrol said she was a passenger in a vehicle that ran into four parked cars while traveling at a high rate of speed.

Michael Anthony Joyner, 21, of Rt. 3, Nashville, was killed Sunday on a rural road in Nash County. The patrol said his car, traveling at high speed, ran off the road and hit a utility pole.

Ray Wood Cole, 44, of Virginia Beach, Va., was killed Sunday on N.C. 41 in Jones County, 13 miles west of Trenton, when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and struck a tree.

Group Homes For N.C. Retarded Face Fears

By The Associated Press
Residents of several North Carolina neighborhoods where group homes for mentally retarded adults have been proposed are so opposed to the idea that none of the homes have been established yet.

Mental health officials have attempted to set up homes in Madison, Raleigh, Burlington and northern Chatham County. Two of the projects have been withdrawn. Two others are proceeding but awaiting a court ruling.

"The thing is, people don't want to admit they are frightened to live next door to a retarded person. They divert the real issue to something else entirely," said Bonnie Nelson, executive director of the Rockingham County Council on Mental Retardation.

"The whole purpose is to get these people out of the institutions and locate them in decent neighborhoods," said Jim Kirkpatrick, area director for the Wake County Mental Health Service. "But in the most desirable areas, you'll naturally run into opposition. People are just naturally afraid."

The arguments against the group homes have carried common themes, and fear is reflected in all of them. Fears that neighborhood property values would drop after the group home moved in and that the safety of the other residents of the neighborhood would be threatened were standard.

Opponents have also argued that their neighborhoods aren't suitable for group homes and living in communities where they weren't wanted would be detrimental to the mentally retarded residents.

Richard Parker, adult services specialist for the state Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse, said 76 group homes are now operating in the state and another 10 are being developed. An additional 11 are being operated or developed for children.

The biggest job, Parker said, is informing the public about the "myths of mental retardation."

According to a report by the President's Commission on Employment of the Handicapped, a two-year study of 105 group homes involving about 2,000 persons "showed that fewer than 1 percent had ever run afoul of the law."

Another study showed opposition decreased after the homes opened, he said.

He said 50,000 conversions occurred nationally in 1977, and more than 100,000 in 1978, while projections for 1979 are as high as 250,000.

"This spiraling rush toward conversion could well mean the virtual disappearance of private rental housing in the United States," he said. "What these figures demonstrate is a dangerous national increase in 'condomania.'"

In condominiums, individual buyers own their own units and share ownership of common areas such as hallways or recreation rooms; in cooperatives, all members jointly own and are responsible for all the property.

"Conversion forces the displacement of thousands upon thousands of elderly, low and moderate income families from their apartments, and it severely reduces the availability of rental housing in metropolitan areas, pushing rents in existing buildings to record highs," Rosenthal said.

Seeks Curb Condomania

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said Saturday he hopes to stem "condomania" by introducing legislation this week that would prohibit the conversion of rental apartments into condominiums for three years.

Rosenthal said condominium and cooperative conversions have become a serious national housing problem, comprising close to 50 percent of house sales in southern California, Chicago and Washington, and more in southern Florida and San Francisco.

He said 50,000 conversions occurred nationally in 1977, and more than 100,000 in 1978, while projections for 1979 are as high as 250,000.

Smoked Pot In A Police Car

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—The back seat of a police car might not be the place most folks would pick to smoke marijuana.

Police Officer Brad Grady said he arrested Vanz Conrad Trees for allegedly pouring sugar into a motorist's gas tank and put Trees in the back of his patrol car.

When Grady returned to the car, Trees was lying in the back seat puffing on a marijuana cigarette, the officer said. Grady said Trees told him it was his last and he wanted to smoke it before Grady could confiscate it.
