David Loses Punch Before N.C. Entry

By The Associated Press
The remnants of Hurricane David, once a killer storm that diminished in strength after coming ashore in Georgia Tuesday afternoon, howled into North Carolina today with 60 mph winds and heavy rain.

Residents of the North Carolina coast and the scenic Outer Banks, a sandy strip of barrier islands, braced for the storm on Tuesday as it rumbled up the coasts of Florida and Georgia before moving inland near Savannah.

southeast of Charlotte. Accompanied by winds up to 60 mph in squalls, the storm was moving to the north at about 10 mph, and forecasters said they expected it to turn toward the north-northeast later in the day.

Even though coastal areas were spared a frontal attack by David, high tides and heavy winds pounded the beaches, washing away protective sand dunes and causing some property damage. The erosion of the sand dunes left some beachfront houses exposed to the high tides and vulnerable to water damage.

N.C. 54 on Hatteras Island was covered with water during heavy thunderstorms this morning, and tides washed across roads in the Topsail Beach area, where sand dunes eroded.

The wind and surf caused the ends of fishing piers at Atlantic Beach and Long Beach to collapse and heavily damaged a pier at Wrightsville Beach.

Withdraws

Mayor Cox Won't Seek Re-Election

Mayor Percy R. Cox announced today that he will not be a candidate for re-election in the Oct. 9 municipal elections.

Cox, in a statement issued this morning, said that, "I have decided not to seek re-election as mayor of Greenville. It has been a very difficult decision, in as much as I have enjoyed being a part of Greenville's government since 1964."

The mayor added, "I would like to express my appreciation for the support and cooperation that each citizen of Greenville has given me during my tenure as mayor. It has been a challenging experience and even though I will not be an active leader of city government for the next term, I will continue to be very interested in all phases of the city's growth and undertakings."

The veteran city leader was first appointed to the Council in 1964 to fill the term vacated by Hartwell Campbell. After serving on the Council for three years, Cox was elected mayor pro-tem and held that position for eight years before being elected mayor in October of 1975.

Cox is completing his second two-year term as mayor.

He recalled this morning that in his 15 years of service in city government, he never missed a regular City Council session.

Seek Extra Pitt Funds

The Pitt County Board of Education directed its chairman, Mark Owens, and its superintendent, Ott Alford, to request approximately $20,000 from the Pitt County Board of Commissioners for construction of additional doors for the gymnasium areas at Ayden-Gritton and Farmville Central High Schools.

According to Associate Superintendent Tom Craft, enforcement of fire regulations now allow only 1,800 persons to be seated in the two gymnasiums. With construction of additional double doors both inside and outside the gymnasium areas, the gymnasiums could hold 2,400, as is the case at North Pitt and D. H. Conley High Schools.

Board members questioned why the doors were not installed by the architect at the time of construction.

Superintendent Alford noted that the additional seating would allow more persons to be seated during such events such as country and western shows.

"This is a legitimate request, but on the other hand, we have so many other needs," said Alford.

Associate Superintendent Craft was directed to work with various contractors in getting estimates on the doors and their installation, so that figures may be presented to the county board of commissioners.

Transportation Supervisor Rodney Bullock informed the board that new state regulations allow a maximum of one minute for school bus stops, with stops to be no closer together than two-tenths of a mile. The board gave its approval to enforcement of these regulations.

Superintendent Alford noted that parents and school

'Good Time' On High-Rise Work

By TOM BAINES

Progress continues on the foundation phase of the mid-rise housing complex for the elderly off E. Third Street but today's severe rains will not help the overall construction schedule.

Joe Laney, executive director of the Housing Authority, reported Tuesday night that the general contractor has been making "good time" recently on the project but construction remains approximately three weeks behind schedule.

Laney said that while the contractor has not been able to make up the lost time, it is felt that once the ground work phase is over and above ground construction is underway, the lost time will be made up.

The critical pile driving phase of the project has been completed, he pointed out, and some 50 percent of the grade beams are in place

'David' Soaks City

Pitt County residents last night and this morning were receiving the effects of tropical storm David — mainly a lot of rainfall — although no major problems were reported due to the former hurricane.

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported that 1.22 inches of rain fell during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today. However, they said another 2.5 inches of rain fell between 8 a.m. and 9:15 this morning, for a total rainfall of 3.72 inches.

Yesterday's high temperature was 79 degrees, while yesterday's low was 73 degrees. The temperature at 8 a.m. today stood at 77 degrees.

The GUC weather station reported the Tar River was rising slowly. At 8 a.m. today, the river stood at 5.0 feet, up from the 4.1 foot level recorded at 8 a.m. Tuesday.

Both the Greenville Public Works Department and the North Carolina Department

Registration Is Heavy Tuesday At Pitt CC

Freshman registered Tuesday at Pitt Community College in record numbers. According to Edgar Boyd, Dean of Students, the school expects this session's enrollment to be the largest of the institution's history.

Although figures will not be finalized until next week, a total of 2,500 full time equivalent students are expected to enroll at PCC.

PCC president Dr. William E. Fulford addressed the faculty yesterday, reviewing the progress of the past academic year and praising the faculty for its dedication and contributions to the growth of the college.

"Your mission and purpose is of the highest order," said Fulford. "You do not work with things, but with people, who under your guidance and influence can become more productive and contributing citizens."

Eye Preserving Sheppard's Pond

By STUART SAVAGE

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday afternoon agreed to appoint a committee to study the preservation of Sheppard's Mill Pond near Stokes as a recreation facility or historic site.

Dr. Earl Trevathan of Greenville told the board that the 150-acre pond is, "an ideal area for some county participation and conservation," and noted that the privately-owned facility could be used for sightseeing, canoeing and nature-study activities.

Charles Alfred Forbes, who owns the pond, said it, "has become a liability, unless I turn the water out of it and cut the timber."

Forbes noted, "I'm willing to maintain the pond or sell it to the State...if they develop it," adding that the pond, "has been there over 200 years."

Commissioners yesterday also agreed to appoint a committee to study a request to enact a "no wake" ordinance regulating boat speeds on the Tar River in the vicinity of the bridge near Grimesland.

Ben Weaver, a resident of the area, made the request on behalf of several families that live along the river near the bridge.

Weaver told the board that boats speeding along the river are endangering other boaters, are creating a lot of noise, and said waves created by passing speed boats are eroding the river bank.

A committee was also named to study a request by Seaboard Container Service for an adjustment in fees paid by the county for pulling solid waste containers from various sites to the county landfill.

The firm has requested an 18 per cent increase in the charge.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

WHO PAINTS TRAILERS?

Who paints trailers (mobile homes)? I'd like an opinion as to whether it's a good idea and also a reference. Mine needs painting. D. C.

Glenn Worthington of Glenn's Mobile Home Repair said he does not do the painting himself, but thinks it can enhance the appearance and thus, the value of a mobile home if it's well done. It should be done with priming and spray painting similarly to the way an automobile is painted, he said. He suggested you talk to a painting contractor, be specific as to how you want it done, and get an estimate in writing. Only you could be the judge of whether the price would make it a good idea, he said.

Farmville Board Votes Rescind Annexation Plan

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Farmville commissioners voted last night to rescind its resolution of intent to consider the annexation of the A. C. Monk plant and adjacent property on Highway 264 West.

The board was honoring a recommendation from the Planning Board and a resolution from the Farmville Economic Council, both of which were against annexation at this time. The board had begun preparing for this consideration last year, based on information that the new construction of the plant was dated from 1970 and with the intention of honoring the 1969 board's commitment to defer annexation for 10 years. It now appears to them, they indicated, that the new construction was completed in 1973 and they thus feel that annexation should be postponed. It was decided to rescind only, not to put a date on when the matter should be considered again, thus declining to bind future boards.

Mid-East Commission Director Daneel leRoux

brought greetings to the board and expressed a desire to have the Commission do all it can for Farmville and to hear all complaints that Farmville might have about the workings of the Commission.

It was pointed out that about 10 renovations are completed in the Community Development housing rehabilitation project now underway, that three are in progress, that seven have construction contracts signed, that six are out on bid and that five will be bid soon. Two dilapidated units are being demolished, and two new houses have been built by private interests.

Mrs. Douglas Faison, speaking for the black community of Farmville, expressed appreciation for the Community Development work done and hope for a future project that commissioners talked about. She also expressed thanks for street improvement projects being considered for South Farmville and need for more sidewalks in the area.

The board had earlier in-dedicated it would be in favor of applying to HUD late this year for more housing improvement funds and also for funds for a more comprehensive CD project.

The Board had obtained a 90-day option for the buying of property from Mark Owens for a well site near U. S. 258 north of town. Water line extensions for this area have been contemplated.

It was reported that negotiations with North Carolina Natural Gas continue. A revised franchise renewal ordinance incorporating the board's wishes to require a plan for extension of the gas system and also a better basis for insuring extensions in new developments has been presented the company. The company has not readily accepted these terms and another negotiating session will be needed, the board was told.

Consideration of selecting a site for a pistol range and possible meeting hall for the Police Department was tabled. The board indicated it

FOCUS

Historic "Compromise"

The nation's 100 senators and 435 representatives are back in the nation's capital today, as Congress reconvenes. Congress wasn't always divided into two houses, as it is today. The Continental Congress, which governed during the Revolutionary War, was a unicameral, or one-house legislature. Representatives meeting at a Constitutional Convention in 1787 devised the current bicameral, or two-house system, to provide fair representation for both large and small states. Under this system, each state has two senators, while the number of representatives a state has in the House is determined by its population. This plan became known as the "Connecticut Compromise."

would like to explore the possibility of using the back portion of the new wastewater treatment plant site.

It was decided that liability coverage for public officers and employees of the town would be purchased through the N. C. Public Officers and Employees Liability Insurance program, rather than from Unimark-McDonald, as it has been in the past. The new program would cost only about $500 more per year and would include police personnel.

Commissioner John Turner Walston a member of the Public Works Committee, suggested that the town consider departing from its policy of paving only with curb and gutter and do more areas for the money. It was pointed out that where curbing and guttering is not needed, the work, at present prices, could be done for about $23 a running foot, instead of $36 a running foot. The board agreed.

Commissioner Walston also suggested and gained agreement that, in some cases, sidewalks should extend to the curb lines rather than having the grassed utility section between sidewalk and street. When this is contemplated, the board suggested that the Public Works Committee and the property owners adjacent be consulted.

The committee and Town Administrator were given the go-ahead to set priorities for street paving and resurfacing up to $40,000. The streets to be considered by paving are E. Moore from Main to Contentnea; E. Cotton from Main to Greene; West Lang from Walnut to the athletic park; Thorne Street from Main to Williams; the connector between E. Church Street and Moye Drive; Darden from Cameron to Main; E. Perry from Main to Crestwood; Mandarin from Church to Pine; S. Davis from Church to railroad; Blalock; Baldree, and N. Railroad which is presently closed; plus S. Railroad from Walnut to George and Zeno from Cotton to the railroad, the last two of which are Community Development project possibilities.

To be considered for resurfacing are S. Walnut from W. Church to the railroad; S. George from Wallace to Hines; Lee to its intersection at Wilson; Moye; N. Waverly from Horne to Contentnea; Hillcrest; May from Pine to Belcher; N. Fields from Wilson to Belcher; Gregg; Park from Belcher to May, and the 500 block of E. Church (curb and gutter).

The board authorized the same committee to prioritize drainage projects to amount to $30,000. To be considered are projects for Fields and Church Street, Fields and Pine Streets, W. Moore and Barrett Streets, W. Cotton St. southward; Contentnea and E. Wilson, Cotton and George, Sunset and Dale, Pitt Street's west side, the industrial-railroad ditch from Mandarin to 264, and E. Lang northward.

Changes to bring the town hall in line with the facade ideas promoted by the town were talked about. It was pointed out that the brick work under the present metal covering is not pretty and perhaps even deteriorating. No action was taken, but Thomas and Commissioner Jack Farrior were asked to explore the idea.

A bid for the purchase of a 1978 Toyota truck for the downtown maintenance crew was turned down. The board indicated it would prefer to buy a new truck for virtually the same amount of money — $3,921.57 plus tax.

Dedication dates for the downtown revitalization project, the wastewater treatment plant, and the athletic park were talked about, but no definite action was taken.

Moses Moye appeared on behalf of the Christian Church. The board agreed to his proposal that the town foot the bill for extension of brick paving of the sidewalk adjacent to the church on S. Main Street from its seven-foot right of way to the church steps in exchange for the church's paying for the brick paving of the portion of W. Church Street adjacent to the church.

Estimate $600 Million Storm Damage

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

The first estimates show Hurricane David's taunting dash through Florida caused more than $60 million damage.

The storm left many Floridians tearful and depressed, but their most often-heard words were: "It could have been worse." As they turned to mopping up the remains, state officials began looking for federal disaster aid.

Left behind along the state's central Atlantic Coast was a trail of roofless homes, destroyed furniture, ruined citrus crops and confusion where power lines and utility poles were down.

As the deadly storm continued to amble along the Eastern Seaboard today, Gov. Bob Graham planned to inspect a the devastation around Melbourne and helicopter to Palm Beach to meet civil defense authorities. He'd wind up the day discussing disorganized evacuation efforts with elderly Miami Beach residents.

While Graham looked things over, state assessment teams continued to record the damage. Ron Book, an aide to the governor, said the state wants a firm damage figure to present to President Carter when asking for federal help.

"I have talked with President Carter concerning these damages and have been assured that the federal government will act quickly and decisively to help those Floridians qualified to receive federal aid," Graham said.

Local officials in the central coastal area where David surged inland released their own preliminary estimates Tuesday evening.

In Palm Beach County, site of David's first U.S. landfall, officials put property damage at $1 million and sugar growers in the western part of the county reported $19 million in ruined crops.

But the growers — perhaps thinking of the Caribbean islanders whose entire fields were destroyed by David last week — weren't complaining.

"Growers were very happy to get away with such a little bit of damage," said Clayton Hutcheson, Palm Beach agricultural extension agent.

In Martin, the next to the north, the only major property damage reported was $500,000 at the General Development Corp. in Stuart. Grapefruit growers said they 20 to 30 percent of their crop was blown off trees just two weeks before picking time.

"It'll mean a loss of $800,000 in picking wages for the city and county," said John Moose, president of Hobe Groves.

Indian River and St. Lucie officials gave an early estimate of more than $20 million. In Brevard, where David's eye jogged back off the coastline, Deputy Public Safety Director Howard Bennett put the wreckage at nearly $23 million.

Some of the Brevard damage resulted from a David-spawned tornado that ripped through Melbourne Beach, authorities said.

Meanwhile, overworked National Hurricane Center employees were still on duty, though their neighbors in southern Florida, spared the storm's worst, were taking down hurricane shutters and plywood window covers.

The weather outside their Coral Gables offices was warm and sunny, but forecasters were still tracking the courses of David and weakening Tropical Storm Frederic.

They still weren't sure why David failed to intensify as it passed over warm Gulf Stream waters on its way to Florida.

"There was no reason for it not to pick up strength. It just didn't," said Dr. Neil Frank, director of the center. "We were lucky."

While the David death toll in the Caribbean continued to rise

R. Whitfield, Pactolus, and W. H. Robinson were all experiencing some form of "growing pains."

He also pointed out that five activity buses, bought with Title One funds some 12 or 13 years ago, will need to be replaced in the near future, as more mileage is logged with additional requests for cultural arts programs.

In other business, the board accepted low bids on milk and bread. The board approved the easement for sewer lines to be constructed on Bethel Elementary School property.

The board will meet Tuesday, October 9, instead of October 2, in order for Superintendent Alford to attend the North Carolina High Schools Athletic Association meeting.

the board to Greenville City's three, saying that county children comprise two-thirds of the total school age population.

The board members made no indication to change the representation. Superintendent Alford was instructed to work with Greenville City Superintendent Glenn Cox in setting up another meeting September 12.

The board voted to allow a small piece of land owned by the county school system to be annexed into the city of Greenville. The land adjoins the new road beside Carolina East Mall, known as Mall Road. The annexation of the road and land will allow the road and adjoining area to be maintained by the city.

Associate Superintendent Tom Craft reported on various construction projects conducted this summer, with most all ready for children to come for the first full day today.

Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis reported on meetings held this summer with elementary school principals. Board members approved a request made by Lewis for an honors gifted and talented pilot program at A. G. Cox School.

Superintendent Alford addressed the problem of space at various schools, noting that Sam Bundy, Chicod, G.

Battered Wife Needs Advice

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I will try to make this short, but I have so much to tell that I could write a book.

I've been married 11 years. We have three wonderful kids. My husband has beaten me several times. Sometimes I had it coming, but most of the time I didn't.

The first time, he blacked my eyes and busted my jaw, which kept me home from work. I got out a warrant for his arrest, so he quit messing up my face. Then he started in on my stomach and breasts where the bruises wouldn't show.

Once he twisted my arm so hard that he broke it.

Finally, I filed for divorce. Then you never saw a sweeter guy. He begged and pleaded and laid his paycheck at my feet, so I took him back. He was so nice I was beginning to love him all over again.

Two weeks later he was accusing me of seeing other men. He pulled me all over the house by my hair trying to get me to confess. I had nothing to confess, but I yelled so loud the neighbors called the police, and now he's in the slammer again.

Should I let him rot there? His people tell me that my kids need a father, that Jesus forgave seven times seven and all that jazz, but I can't take any more of this. What should I do?

HAD IT IN DALLAS

DEAR HAD IT: Your children may need a father, but they also need a living mother. If there is no hotline for battered wives, call your Family Service Association and ask where a battered wife and her children can get shelter and counseling. And please write again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: You stated in your column that in order for a man to convert to Judaism without circumcision he should find a "reformed" rabbi.

Abby, correction, please. We are not "reformed" rabbis. We are known as "Reform Rabbis". We in no way had to be reformed. OK?

RABBI YAVITZ IN L.A.

DEAR RABBI: OK. Oy veh! I stand corrected, which makes me a reformed columnist.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is between my husband (I'll call him Harold) and my father. Harold is 29 and Dad is 70.

Six weeks ago they got into a heated argument over politics. A lot of angry words were exchanged and Dad told Harold never to set foot in his house again. (I'm sure Dad didn't mean it, but he's too proud to apologize.)

Dad is very bull-headed, and I can't see him calling Harold. Harold is very stubborn, and he won't make the first move either.

My mother and I are both heartsick over this but we don't know how to get the two of them together. Any suggestions?

ME AND MOM

DEAR ME: Tell Harold that out of respect for your father's age, the younger man should give in.

And ask your mother to keep working on your father, telling him that since HE told Harold never to set foot in his house again it's up to HIM to tell him he didn't mean it. And may the bigger man extend his hand first.

Additive-Free Recipes Given In New Books

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

One couple in the Berkshire Hills of western Massachusetts and two working women in New York City have figured out ways to make their own additive-free convenience and specialty foods.

Among the recipes Joan and Don German have come up with are:

Homemade versions of American cheese and bottled cheese spread that can be made in either a blender or a food processor;

A delicious food processor yogurt bread that takes less than an hour to make and bake;

A vegetable pan coating that can be brushed on instead of sprayed and is about half the price of commercial aerosol sprays;

A bread spread that tastes like butter but contains 20 calories less per ounce than either butter or regular margarine and is lower in saturated fats and higher in polyunsaturates than either. Unlike some soft or diet margarines, it can even be used for pan-frying because liquid lecithin, a soybean product, keeps its water content from separating out when heated.

All these are from the Germans' first cookbook, Make Your Own Convenience Foods (Macmillan $14.95 hardcover, $6.95 paperback).

In Better Than Store-Bought (Harper & Row $12.95), Helen Witty and Elizabeth Schneider Colchie speak to the same issue, but many of their recipes are fancier fare. Although they do provide recipes for simple baking mixes and some dairy products, preserves, pickles, jams and jellies, they also have developed many specialty yeast breads, preserved duck or goose (the French confit), country-style and ethnic sausages, Chinese-style plum sauce, syrup for home-style ginger ale, crystallized violets, flavored vinegars and mustards, liqueurs, homemade cream cheese and flavored cream cheeses, and corned or pickled meats without saltpeter, a chemical that has been found to be carcinogenic in laboratory animals.

In a telephone interview, the Germans estimated they saved about 40 percent of the retail price of foods they costed out for the book.

They had three criteria, German said: ease and speed in preparation, no harmful chemicals and economy.

"We didn't try to duplicate the taste of commercial products," Mrs. German said, "because we thought we wouldn't like them anyway."

She is a marketing expert. Her husband was a Philadelphia banker for about 20 years and an advertising agency creative director before they moved to Cheshire, Mass., to become writers specializing in personal finance and retail banking.

The Germans also include many useful household hints, safety and economy tips, dog and cat food recipes and a chart documenting the savings on 15 common convenience foods made at home. The savings range from a high of 80 percent for melba toast to a low of 11 percent for cheese spread. Some other big savers are saucepan stuffing mix, 70 percent, meat spread, 68 percent and french fries, 65 percent.

The Witty-Colchie team had quality and additive-free food as their aim, not economy, although many of their recipes do represent savings over store-bought products, and many are for specialty foods not easily found outside of major city markets.

Mrs. Witty is an associate editor and Ms. Colchie, a consulting editor, of a prestigious food and wine magazine.

In a telephone interview, Ms. Colchie said her interest in additive-free food predates their book by at least 10 years, the age of her daughter, Daisy.

"Somehow the presence of a living, breathing child makes it all very clear," she said. "It's like giving up smoking"—something you do for your child's health as well as your own.

Supper Club: Easy, Thrifty And Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Months after Diane Metz Cline and her husband moved to a new community, they didn't have any social life. Both were extremely busy at full-time jobs and one night a week Diane worked for a post-graduate degree. Diane enjoys cooking and entertaining and she missed having guests.

Then Diane's mother came for a visit. When she read in the town newspaper that the local YWCA had a number of groups for newcomers, she urged Diane and her husband to join one for "gourmets."

The Clines did just that. The group turned out to be so congenial that after the "Y" sessions were over, they formed a supper club of their own. A dozen couples in all, they take turns having an informal party once a month to which each couple brings a dish or two or some beverages.

For one of these gatherings at the Cline house not long ago, Diane cooked bratwurst in beer. Several kinds of mustard, spinach salad with hot bacon dressing, potato salad and hard rolls went along. For dessert, Diane baked two Linzer Torten.

LINZER TORTE

1 1/4 cups sliced natural (unblanched) almonds
1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
Grated rind of half a lemon
Two 1/4-pound sticks butter, cut in 1-inch pats

2 egg yolks (from large eggs)
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves
1 cup raspberry jam

In a food processor, with metal blade, finely grind almonds. Add flour and lemon rind; process until well mixed. Distribute butter over mixture; process until coarse crumbs form. Add yolks, sugar and cloves; process until well mixed. On wax paper flatten 3/4 cup of the dough into a small rectangle and wrap tightly. Tightly wrap remaining dough. Chill both packages for at least 2 hours.

Fit flat bottom of a 4-piece quiche-flan pan into fluted sidewall. Press large portion of dough over bottom of pan and 1/2 inch up sidewall. Spread jam over dough, leaving a 1/2-inch edge. Chill, uncovered.

Place small portion of dough between 2 sheets of wax paper. With a rolling pin, roll into an 8-by 3-inch rectangle; chill again. With a sharp knife cut into six 8-inch long strips. Remove jam-spread dough from refrigerator. Place 2 strips of dough across center of jam to form an X. With remaining strips, form an X on each side of the center X. Push down ends of strips into sidewall, then press around sidewall again.

Bake on rack below center in a preheated 375-degree oven until well browned — about 45 minutes. Cool completely on wire rack. Remove fluted sidewall.

Most Pathetic And Senseless

Of all the vexing world trouble spots perhaps the situation in Northern Ireland is the most pathetic and senseless.

There people of the same backgrounds, excluding religion, seem bent on blowing each other up and making their points with mad terrorist acts.

The recent death of Earl Mountbatten in a boat explosion brings all the futility of it into focus.

British troops have been there for years in an attempt to establish some order. The Irish Republic recently turned down a British request to allow pursuit of IRA terrorists into the Irish Republic territory.

While the situation is deplored worldwide it is not the kind of thing that super powers get involved in since it does not threaten their spheres of interests.

Yet somehow some sense of reason needs to be brought to the situation in North Ireland.

We don't have the answers. A victory by the IRA could lead to the kind of bloodshed that we have seen following revolutions in Cuba, Vietnam and Iran. On the other side the IRA appears so fanatical that only its annihilation would appear to end the terrorism, an unacceptable solution.

The bloodlines of many Americans can be traced back to both Protestant and Catholic Irish beginnings, so we can feel a kinship for these people.

On balance, however, there is probably little that we in this country can do, other than offer an example of peaceful negotiation of differences.

Tool For Our Teachers And Students

"The Daily Reflector" has begun the Visual Education Consultants News Program in area schools.

The program has proven highly successful in other area in that it encourages newspaper readership among students and gives teachers a current events teaching tool.

The program, which includes daily and weekly news "Focus" and quizzes, is offered without charge to the participating schools.

We hope the program will prove to be of great educational value.

Metropolitan Complexes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Five "metropolitan complexes" have been labeled in North Carolina as prime market and investment areas with population and resources exceeding much better-known cities elsewhere in the nation.

A research report from the industrial development division of the N.C. Department of Commerce suggests that this state can "offer metropolitan amenities and a variety of urban living arrangements without the negative aspects of living often associated with the industrial Northeast."

Commuting times, for example, may take hours to cover just a few miles in more congested areas. In North Carolina "it is not unusual to have as little as a 15 to 30 minute commute from even relatively isolated residential areas and satellite rural communities.

Jack Hill, director of industrial development activities, sent the research report to industrial development professionals across the state for their use in wooing prospects.

No City

While the state does not have a statewide dominant city (such as Atlanta is to Georgia), there are 10 cities of more than 50,000 population which can be grouped with another 24 communities with more than 15,000 people in a series of five metropolitan complexes.

Hill finds the five areas are "generally physically linked by interstate or U.S. highway systems and are socio-economically linked by patterns of commutation, communication and economic activity.

So even though most residents and outsiders as well generally think of North Carolina as a largely rural state — a perception which the figures support — the state does contain areas which are urban in character while maintaining rural settings even within the metropolitan complex.

Descriptions of each complex, and a "name" based upon geography are provided. Four are presented without "editorial comment", but the research group singled out one area as "a form" formidable contender for industrial growth potential" because of a combination of highway development, small city patterns within a 30-mile radius, a large labor force, and a strategic location on Interstate-95.

This "East Central Complex" has a population of 428,000, but no city exceeding 50,000, and is composed of Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, Kinston, and Greenville.

The Urban Piedmont "Golden Crescent" centers around a complex from Charlotte-Gastonia, through the Greensboro-Winston-High Point area and into Raleigh-Durham.

Others

Four satellite centers on the edges and greatly influenced by the metro area are identified as Shelby, Eden, Asheboro and Sanford. In all, the area has seven of the state's 10 cities of more than 50,000, four large airports, 35 percent of the state's population and 39 percent of the labor force. Total population is nearly two million.

The "Mountain Corridor" runs from Asheville at one end, and a string of cities in the furniture belt: Hickory, Morganton, Lenoir, and Statesville. Population is nearly 600,000.

The "Southern Interstate-95" complex stretches from Fayetteville to Lumberton, including Laurinburg and Maxton and represents "the beginnings of a southern corridor between Wilmington and Charlotte along U.S. 74". Population is 354,600.

The "State Ports-Coastal" region includes Wilmington, Jacksonville and New Bern where two ports, major military installations and coastal tourist areas are recognized. Population is 383,000.

The Piedmont Urban Crescent rivals Baltimore and exceeds Atlanta, San Diego and Seattle. The other Tar Heel complexes exceed such cities as Charleston, Newport News and Corpus Christi.

Wanted: An Apartment

WASHINGTON — I don't know how other people have been reacting, but I've been very disturbed all summer that former President Richard Nixon couldn't find an apartment in New York City.

It's not as if he didn't have the money to buy one, or the wherewithal to keep up the monthly payments. But there seemed to be a conspiracy amongst Manhattan apartment owners to keep him out of the neighborhood.

If anyone had a case of being discriminated against it was Mr. Nixon and if it had been me I would have gone to my nearest Fair Housing Commission office and made a complaint.

"Hello, my name is Richard Nixon and I wish to lodge a complaint because no one in Manhattan will sell me a place to live."

"Please sit down. I'd like to get some information. What is your occupation?"

"I'm retired. I used to be President of the United States."

"Any criminal record?"

"No. Here's my pardon. It was signed by President Ford. I have never been convicted of any crimes, nor can I be in the future."

"Do you know anyone who has been convicted of any crimes?"

"A number of my staff were, but they're all out now."

"Do you consort with any of them?"

"Very few. Most of them don't talk to me any more."

"Could you give me the name of three references who will attest to your good character?"

"My wife Pat and my daughters Julie and Tricia."

"We would prefer people who aren't related."

"Let's see. Mao Tse-tung. He always spoke highly of me."

"Could you give me the name of someone who is still alive?"

"Uh, uh, let me think. John Dean? No, you better not call him. John Ehrlichman? I don't think so. Haldeman? No. Do I have to give you the references now?"

"No, you can go home and think about it. Now according to your complaint you say no one will sell or rent you an apartment in Manhattan. Do you have any reason to suspect why they won't?"

"I know what they think of me and they have a right to think that way if they want to. But let me just say this. I made mistakes, but they were of the heart. I should have been tougher. I just trusted too many people and they gave me the sword."

Other Editors Say Faltering Notions

(Elizabeth City Daily Advance)

If preliminary findings are correct, some long-held notions about desegregation in the nation's public schools may soon be crumbling, and with them the idea that forced busing is shattering the educational system from coast to coast.

Surprisingly enough, the results are coming from the Institute for Policy Science and Public Affairs based right here in North Carolina at Duke University.

But the finished report, due out in the weeks ahead, may be felt in every state as it lays the groundwork supporting the federal government's contention that busing to achieve desegregation is a worthwhile undertaking.

Among other things, the center's research shows that white children "almost never experience declining performance on standardized achievement tests as a result of desegregation."

And their findings show that black students show higher gains in achievement testing if they are sent to desegregated schools in their early grades than if they are sent there in later years.

Evidence is also beginning to support the idea that students who attend desegregated schools are more likely to get higher status jobs than those from segregated schools.

All of this suggests that school desegregation — and court-ordered busing to accomplish the program — seems to be working despite its unpopularity.

If that's true, the public's attitude toward busing and integrated schools should begin to change and accept the court-ordered program which appears to be making headway.

"I'm sorry, but I don't seem to be following you. Who is 'they'?"

"It's all in my book. I'll send you an autographed copy."

"That would help."

"After you read it will you find me an apartment?"

"There seems to be a problem here. You apparently have not been discriminated against because of your race."

"I am from California."

"Or your religion?"

"A lot of people in New York don't like Quakers."

"Or your sex. It seems the only reason they won't rent to you is because you are a former President of the United States. We've never had this type of case before. I think the best thing for you to

Tell It To The Rabbit

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — It turns out that even your nice, quiet, typical Georgia rabbit can do extraordinary things when threatened.

Like swim.
Rabbits are always turning up in fables, and perhaps that's the moral in the tale of the Georgia president and the swimming hare.

A good many politicians are writing off Carter as a one-term president, figuring that he can't rebuild confidence in his leadership before the balloting starts on presidential nominees six months from now.

It may be a bit early for that. Incumbent presidents are not easily put aside.

The one-term theory goes that Carter will suffer defeats in some of the early primary elections, perhaps to write-in votes for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, perhaps to California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., and then will step aside.

Tell that to the rabbit.
Carter's people insist that no matter what happens in the early going, he will not drop from the competition for the 1980 Democratic nomination.

And while the first round of primaries is in Kennedy's New England territory, the second set is in the South, where Carter's standing has not eroded as badly as in other regions.

And if the current odds aren't good, they aren't as bad as the ones Carter faced four years ago, when he was an obscure politician with the far-fetched idea that he could win the presidency.

In those days, Carter could have paddled off an armada of rabbits and nobody would have paid much attention.

Still, when you look at the problems the president faces,

Dr. C.F. Keuzenkamp was the principal speaker at a regular meeting of the Greenville Rotary Club last night. Dr. Keuzenkamp painted a world picture of general conditions in Europe as he saw them a year ago, which helped the Rotarians correlate conditions then with those of today.

The Rev. T. McM. Grant, pastor of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church and a member of the local Rotary Club, presided at the meeting in the absence of Dr. Carl Adams, president, and S.G. Wilkerson, vice-president.

T.Y. Walker was in charge of last night's program.

President Roosevelt proclaimed American neutrality today. He signed and Secretary Hull countersigned a proclamation of over 4,000 words establishing an extensive list of regulations designed to keep Americans from projecting the United States into the European war.

Another proclamation, to be issued under the 1937 neutrality act, was scheduled for consideration at a White House conference later in the afternoon. It will put into operation an embargo on export of arms, ammunition and implements of war to the combatant nations.

THE INSIDE REPORT

High-Risk Vote Strategy

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

WEBSTER CITY, Iowa — Sen. John Culver is using a risky reelection strategy, trumpeting opposition to "reckless" defense spending and parading support for free-choice abortion while fellow endangered liberals in neighboring midwest states dilute their ideology.

The risk in Culver's reelection strategy: it is a high-decibel replica of the campaign in this moderately conservative state that sent fellow liberal Democratic senator, Dick Clark, to humiliating defeat last fall. Clark's most publicized service to Iowa was hamstrung the U.S. in blocking the Soviet African offensive. Iowans were not impressed.

But tough-talking Culver, who is sharper and infinitely more effective than soft-spoken Clark, is now embarked on a suspiciously similar course. He is going all-out asking Iowans to back him as a leader of the Senate's peace bloc holding down defense spending and pushing the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II). In a major race critical to control of the Senate, Culver is flying his true colors.

An early exhibit of Culver's style was on display at a well-attended dinner of the Hamilton County Democratic Finance Committee in Webster City. Striking the podium with the flat of his hand, the pugnacious former Harvard fullback hit the line: "Reckless, excessive, unnecessary defense spending" is demanded by defense-oriented senators in return for SALT II.

Promoters of bigger strategic-nuclear programs to minimize a growing first-strike Soviet margin could "mislead" the Russians about U.S. power and "invite the holocaust."

Culver appears to believe his own rhetoric. Nevertheless, some in the audience were surprised at his vehemence. "SALT isn't an issue here, at least not yet," a leading Iowa Democrat told us. As Clark before him came back to Iowa revving up right-wing fury by playing master of the Carter administration's discredited African policy and lost to conservative Republican Roger Jepsen, Culver risks similar rough treatment in 1980, because of national security questions.

Culver carries many of the same burdens that weighed down Clark. Like Clark, Culver seeks to set a precedent as the first Iowa Democrat ever elected to two successive Senate terms. Like Clark, Culver is vulnerable to attack from a well-organized, well-financed single-issue constituency that helped beat Clark: the anti-abortion lobby.

Culver is on the 1980 hit list of the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), along with four other liberal Democratic

Strength For Today

FRANKLIN ON PRAYER
Benjamin Franklin, the deist and purported skeptic, made an interesting little speech at the Constitutional Convention of 1787. He said:

I have lived a long time, and the longer I live the more convincing proofs I see of this truth — that God governs the affairs of men. And if a sparrow cannot fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable that an empire can rise without His aid? We have been assured in the sacred writings that "Except the Lord build the house they labor in vain who build it." I firmly believe this, and I also believe that without His conquering aid, we shall succeed in this political building no better than the builders of Babel.

Franklin thereupon suggested that each session of the Convention be opened with prayer. Although the motion failed, for technical reasons, it sobered the delegates at a critical moment when the Convention was in danger of dissolution. Thenceforth the members made progress toward our Constitution.

senators: George McGovern, Alan Cranston, Frank Church and Birch Bayh. But unlike Culver, the others on the receiving end of a special $700,000 NCPAC execution fund are trying to dilute some liberal positions.

McGovern and Church, for example, both strayed from the liberal path last April in Senate votes on the school-prayer issue. Besides hedging on SALT, Church has also gone the conservative route on votes to limit the federal budget deficit. Not so Culver.

"I am not running for reelection to walk away from a 15-year record," he told the Webster City dinner, then fired a broadside at NCPAC and "the fear-brokers peddling their wares." Two days later, addressing the Iowa Federation of Labor, Culver contrasted his strategy of parading his liberal voting record and attacking the right wing to what he called the "half-hearted effort" of liberals defeated in 1978 and their strategy of "hunkering down in the foxholes."

Culver is betting everything that his combative style and personality, with a cutting edge far sharper than Dick Clark's, will overpower the Republicans (whether conservative Rep. Charles Grassley or moderate Des Moines businessman Tom Stoner is the nominee).

That may be his best bet, but polls show that Culver has not developed a clear political personality during five years in the Senate and 10 in the House. A Des Moines Register poll last spring (that gave Culver only a 38 percent approval rating) shocked politicians by showing that 51 percent of all voters could not say whether they approved or disapproved of his Senate record.

That prompts the Republican attack on him:

too close to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (dating back to Harvard); tied to big labor; eastern oriented; not in touch with the voters of Iowa.

In response, to offset his attack on defense spending, Culver cites his record of 39 months in the Marine Corps — then adds the throwaway line: "I never bumped into Tommy Stoner or Chuck Grassley in the Marines."

That is vintage Culver, making the point that neither potential Republican opponent served in uniform. Like his basic attack strategy, it is high-risk politics capable of backfire.

the rabbit probably got off easy.

It doesn't have to run in 33 presidential primary elections next year, with the polls bleak and the economy slumping.

Besides, as Carter tells the story, it was all splash and no bash.

Originally, as Carter aides recounted the fishing story he told them, the rabbit, teeth bared, attacked while the president was fishing near Plains last April 20, and he repelled it with a canoe paddle. When the rabbit tale surfaced, Carter seemed amused by the fuss, and described the beast as "a quiet, typical Georgia rabbit."

But as the yarn got out of hand, he recounted a somewhat less dramatic version of the encounter, saying that it really didn't attack.

But maybe he'd better keep the paddle handy. Come primary time, there will be some Democrats trying to take over the whole boat and push him out.

"Does that mean I'd have to testify under oath?"

Three Still 'At Large'

MARION, N. C. (AP) — Three escaped prisoners remained at large today as law enforcement officers captured one more of the nine inmates who made their getaway early Tuesday from the McDowell County prison unit.

The Rutherford County Communications Center reported that Melvin Berry was taken into custody early today in a wooded area near the Rutherford County line north of Rutherfordton.

The breakout occurred about 12:30 a.m. Tuesday as Berry and eight other inmates overpowered a guard, took him and two others hostage and shot one of them, authorities said. Three inmates were captured shortly after the escape and two others were caught that afternoon.

Law-enforcement officers were using bloodhounds to search a wide area around the prison, five miles south of Marion.

Wounded in the escape attempt was Sgt. Bill McCurry, 33, who underwent surgery Tuesday and was in fair condition at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville today.

The escape unfolded after an inmate appeared at the bars of a dormitory and asked to be removed, saying it was too noisy for him to sleep.

A state Correction Department spokesman said that when McCurry went in to remove him, Berry pulled a .38-caliber pistol and took McCurry and guards John Pinkerton and Ronnie Harvey hostages.

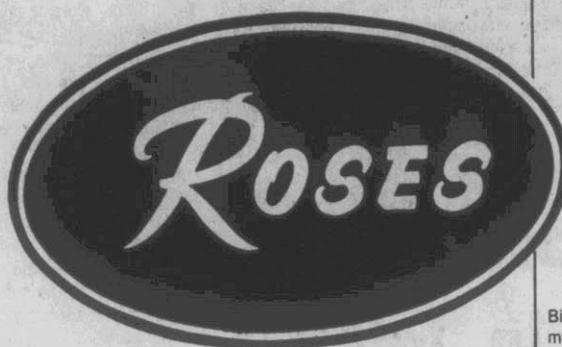

Berry, of Gaston County, is serving 23 to 30 years for second-degree murder.

The nine inmates took McCurry outside the dorm and demanded a guard in a tower throw down his weapon. When he refused, McCurry was shot.

The inmates still at large were William Anderson of Hickory, serving 28 to 40 years for second-degree murder; Lawrence Jacob Helms of Charlotte, 10 years for common-law robbery; and Ronald Johnson of Raleigh, life for rape.

ROSES STRENGTHENS MARKET POSITION AND PRICING STRUCTURE TO COMBAT INFLATION

Mr. L. H. Harvin, Jr., President and Chief Executive Officer of Rose's Stores, Inc., today announced that Rose's has joined the battle against higher inflation and increased living costs by instituting a stronger pricing policy in the company's Rose's Stores. Mr. Harvin stated that the increasing pressure on all consumers caused by the high cost of food, gasoline, heating oil, utilities, transportation, and the rising cost of living in general demands that Rose's take immediate and vigorous action in lowering its pricing structure. "For years it has been our policy not to be undersold in our everyday prices by our competitors," Harvin said, "but our extensive geographical territory and seemingly infinite competition has made it virtually impossible to establish prices centrally that are always lower than all of our competitors." Beginning immediately, Rose's will review its prices with renewed determination and vigor to insure that all its pricing structure is unmatched in the general merchandise retail industry. Fashion and quality will not be compromised. Low, discount store prices can be compatible with department store standards of quality, fashion, cleanliness and integrity, and at Rose's, they will be! Harvin emphasized.

Mr. Harvin outlined several steps that will be used to implement the company's new direction in marketing plans. - Rose's buyers have been instructed to work closely with the vendors and manufacturers to purchase as much merchandise as possible at special deal prices and to pass on these savings to Rose's customers. - Selected advertised specials offered by Rose's previously for limited periods will become Rose's everyday low prices.

- Nationally known, name brand merchandise historically carried by Rose's will be offered to its customers at prices below the manufacturer's premarked retail price.

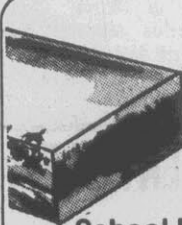

- Buyers have been instructed to scour their markets for famous maker merchandise offered by vendors as closeouts, overruns, specials, etc., so that Rose's can offer its customers exceptional quality, famous name items at sale prices impossible for department stores to meet.

- Price indexes of Rose's everyday low prices will be published so that Rose's customers and competitors can be confident that Rose's everyday low prices really are low.

Flight Passengers Sensed Something Was Amiss

By TAD BOGGS
Morganton News-Herald
Member Exchange Feature
With Laserphoto
MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Even before they were sure that Eastern Airlines Flight 980 had a problem, passengers Larry and Patty Johnson sensed something amiss.

Stewardesses on the Guatemala City-to-Miami flight were jumpy, and the captain failed to give his routine "welcome-aboard" message.

Then came an unexpected "slight right turn," Johnson said later. The Aug. 16 flight was being hijacked. Allah Roland Kagan, 24, a recently released mental patient from Holyoke, Mass., told the plane's crew that his oversized tape player contained a bomb, and that he wished to be flown to Cuba.

"You start thinking, 'Am I ready to die?'" Johnson said. But the shot didn't stop Johnson, an amateur photographer, from snapping pictures of the struggle in which the hijacker was overpowered and bound in passengers' ties and belts and gauze bandages from a first-aid kit.

And the Johnsons, who live in the Salem community near Morganton, wound up disappointed that Flight 980 didn't make the unscheduled Havana stop. The plane's captain talked the hijacker into settling for Key West as a destination, and after the man was captured, the plane landed in Miami after all.

"I still wanted to see Cuba," Mrs. Johnson, an operating room nurse at Valdeze General Hospital, lamented this week.

The Johnsons, members of Burkemont Baptist Church near Morganton, had been visiting a church-sponsored Baptist missionary for eight days in the high northwest mountains of Guatemala, located just south of Mexico in Central America.

They anticipated an uneventful flight to the United States. But soon after takeoff, they realized something was wrong.

A flight from Guatemala to Miami normally follows a northeasterly course. Johnson, 37, office manager of Morganton's B and L Seed Co., had flown enough to know that planes make course corrections. "But this was too much of a course correction," he said. "I said, 'Well, we're going to Africa.'"

Then the voice of the captain came over the intercom. "I guess you know by now that we have a slight problem," the captain said. "We'll be landing in Havana in a few minutes."

"I looked over the my wife and I said, 'Hijacked,'" Johnson recalled. "She said 'No,' and I said 'Yes, the only reason you go to Havana is that you're hijacked.'" Moments later, a flight steward confirmed their fears.

The plane was approaching Havana when the captain came out of the cabin and began talking with the hijacker, who sat in the first-class section with a finger on the button of his tape player. He said he could detonate a bomb in the tape player by pushing the button.

"The wheel point couldn't have been more than 20 feet off the ground," Johnson said. "Then the captain talked the guy into Key West. The captain hollered, 'Pull out, pull out,' and the plane started to climb. I was disappointed."

The Johnsons figured that a landing at Havana airport would permit them a glimpse of a nation closed to most Americans for the past 20 years.

After turning away from Cuba, the Johnsons, seated in the rear of the plane, didn't know what to expect next.

"We knew that there was a hijacker, but we still didn't know that there was a bomb," Johnson said. "The focal point at that time was him (the hijacker)."

As the plane leveled off again, the hijacker momentarily took his finger off the button, and the captain grabbed him.

"That's when the scuffle broke out," Johnson said. "It went on for three or four minutes, but it seemed like hours."

When the captain grabbed the hijacker low, a passenger seated behind Kagan quickly looped his loosened necktie around Kagan's neck. Another passenger, Eastern employee James Westendorf of Hollywood, Fla., grabbed the man high with a wrestling hold while others tied him up with anything they could get their hands on.

For the passengers in the rear of the plane, waiting to see who would emerge victorious was agonizing.

"What really scared me was that everybody in the plane was panicking," Mrs. Johnson said. "The word came back through the plane that he had a bomb, he had a gun (he apparently had no gun, but was carrying a knife). I wanted everybody to stay in their seat. It was havoc."

Finally, the hijacker was subdued. The captain tried to address the passengers, "but everybody gave him a standing ovation," Johnson said. "When we landed in Miami, the whole roof came off the plane."

The Johnsons, parents of three children, credit their faith in God for their relative calm during the ordeal. "We knew He was there, so we just decided to enjoy it," Johnson said. "If you know you've got faith — I guess that's why we really weren't that concerned. We were ready to die. We were together."

Traffic Violator Sues Over Torture In Jail

By PAULINE JELINEK
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Thomas Wilson says he will never forget the night he spent in jail on speeding and drunken driving charges. His body will always show the brutal scars he says he received in the ordeal.

In a $1.5 million lawsuit, Wilson claims fellow inmates at the Cook County Jail used cigarettes to burn large pieces of flesh out of his chest, stomach and back.

"They were laughing and talking to each other as they burned me," Wilson said. "I thought, 'I am just in here for a traffic violation.'"

In the suit filed Tuesday in Cook County Circuit Court, Wilson, 29, charged that the county was negligent because no guards came to his aid although he screamed and cried throughout the June 9 ordeal.

Bob Goltz, assistant director of corrections, called the charges "bizarre."

"It is next to impossible" that a prisoner could have screamed for three hours without being heard by someone, Goltz said.

"If it was something that happened in five minutes, maybe....But to hold him down for several hours? We are not at all convinced that this happened in the dormitory," Goltz said.

Wilson had been arrested that night on charges of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol. He was placed in a dormitory of the jail complex and waited for a friend to come with $100 bail.

John J. Burns, Wilson's attorney, said that when his client went to a washroom, several inmates came up from behind, threw a sheet over his head and tried to rape him. The suit alleges the men punished Wilson's resistance with what they called the "test of fire."

Wilson's comments were published Tuesday by the Chicago Tribune. Burns said Wilson is receiving psychiatric treatment in a Chicago-area hospital and could not be interviewed again.

Tuna War In Capitals And Canadian Court

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The tuna war between the United States and Canada has shifted from the waters of British Columbia to a courtroom in Vancouver and the capitals of both nations.

The skippers of 11 American tuna boats seized off the British Columbia coast appeared in court Tuesday and were ordered to stand trial Nov. 20 on charges of illegal fishing and unlawful entry into Canadian waters. No pleas were entered.

Each skipper also was ordered by a provincial court to post $5,000 bond for the release of his vessel.

Canadian patrol vessels have seized 19 American boats during the past 11 days, since the U.S. skippers followed a school of albacore tuna into British Columbia waters.

Canada claims jurisdiction over all fish within 200 miles of its shores, but the United States does not recognize Canada's authority over highly migratory fish, such as tuna. The United States does not restrict albacore fishing beyond 12 miles from its shores.

Meanwhile, in Washington D.C., the U.S. government on Tuesday accused Canada of "exacerbating the conflict" over tuna fishing in the Pacific Northwest and threatened to expand its tuna import ban to other fish from its northern neighbor.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter, responding to the seizures, said Canada's "precipitous action...can only have the effect of exacerbating the conflict between us regarding fishery jurisdiction over highly migratory species."

"The tuna import prohibition is now in place," Carter said. "We are going to continue to pursue the matter."

He said that under the law a broader import prohibition is possible. "We will be examining that alternative," Carter said.

But in Ottawa, Canadian Fisheries Minister James McGrath said Canada will not buckle to U.S. pressure.

Ceramics Class For Children

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, has announced a series of six lessons in ceramics for children ages 8 and older to be held over a two week period.

The classes, to be taught by Maggie Noss, will be held Monday, Thursday and Friday September 10, 13 and 14 and September 17, 20 and 21 from 4 to 5 p.m. on each of the six days.

Fee for the course is $12, which includes cost of materials and use of a kiln.

Registration is limited, and will be taken in person only at the Art Center, 802 Evans Street. Art Center hours are 9 to 5 p.m. daily Monday through Friday.

Librarian In Hospital Care

FAYETTEVILLE — Miss Elizabeth Copeland, director of Greenville City Libraries, is a patient in Cape Fear Valley Hospital in Fayetteville.

Miss Copeland was hospitalized as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident on Thursday, August 30. She was returning from a library meeting in Southern Pines when the accident occurred.

Expectations are for Miss Copeland's release from the hospital within a week's time.

Evacuees Waited Out Storm In Safety; An Orderly Procedure

Six Collisions Here Tuesday

An estimated $9,250 property damage resulted from a series of six traffic collisions investigated here yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 3:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of Oak and Willow Streets, involving vehicles driven by Christopher Grafflin Browning Jr. of 1202 Oakview Dr., Carter Tate Holbrook III of 315 Pinewood Rd., and a parked car owned by Hal Henschen of Fayetteville.

Officers, who estimated damage at $2,200 to the Browning car, $2,000 to the Henschen vehicle, and $300 to the Holbrook truck, charged Browning with failing to stop for a stop sign and reckless driving.

Browning and two passengers in his car were reported injured in the mishap.

Cars driven by Rodney Haswell of Durham and Parvin Jafati of 201 Ash St. collided about 3:11 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets, resulting in an estimated $1,500 damage to the Haswell car and $400 damage to the Jafati car.

Investigators reported Jafati was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of the collision.

A 1:40 p.m. collision at the intersection of Reade and Cotanche Streets involved cars driven by Eddie Dean Leggett of Route 2, Winterville, and Richard John Barron of Route 1, Newport, police said.

Officers estimated damage at $1,000 to the Leggett car. They said no damage resulted to the Barron vehicle, although reporting that Barron was charged with exceeding a safe speed in connection with the incident.

A 4:50 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greene and First Streets involved cars driven by Kimberly Rose Britton of Robertsonville and James Daniel Nicholson of Bethel, and a truck driven by Leon Madison Morris of Greenville, officers said.

Damage from the collision was set at $400 each to the Morris and Nicholson vehicles and $50 to the Britton car.

Cars operated by Deborah Susan Cleek of 805 Johnston St., and Robert Emmett Jones III of Bell Arthur, collided about 4:40 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 250 feet East of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, resulting in an estimated $150 damage to the Cleek car and $400 damage to the Jones auto.

Police reported Paul David Glasden of 713 Mumford Rd. was injured when the motorcycle he was riding skidded on Charles Street South of the Red Banks Road intersection about 5:02 p.m.

Damage to the motorcycle was estimated at $450.

SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — While rain flooded roads and winds gusted up to an unofficial 40 mph Tuesday, nearly 300 people crowded the South Brunswick High School cafeteria to wait out the fringes of Hurricane David.

Armed with blankets, books, pillows, and baby cribs, they filled the rows of tables and lined the walls where maps had been brought in from the gym. The elderly were allotted the 60 cots.

Most of the evacuees had arrived around 5 p.m., 90 minutes after they were ordered to leave the nearby beaches, mobile homes and low-lying areas. An hour earlier, Hurricane David slammed into Savannah Beach, Georgia and weathercasters predicted it would veer inland, taking the brunt away from the North Carolina coast.

"This is not my idea of a hurricane party," said George Mason, who was vacationing at Ocean Isle with his wife and two babies. "I've been through three of these things when I lived in Florida, but I never had to go to a shelter until now."

"We've been undecided about leaving since 4 a.m. when we heard our neighbors leave. We got up, got dressed and then went back to bed, dressed. The hardest part about all this was being so undecided about what to do."

Connie Mersbach, who owns a home at Ocean Isle and lives in Columbia, S.C., said she left her home when the surf toppled over a dune that usually protects the house.

"It wasn't even high tide," she said, "I left everything except what I needed here. It's so sad. I think I would have left even if they hadn't issued an evacuation. Lord, you don't cope with that ocean."

"My husband and I saw pictures of Palm Beach during the hurricane on TV, and we both think this was worse."

Most of the people said they had little difficulty traveling swamped roads to the school. Lieut. William Hankings of the Charlotte Police Department said earlier volunteer evacuations had caused bumper-to-bumper traffic in the town. He recalled Hurricane Hazel, which devastated this area in 1954.

"That was our first big storm, and nobody was ready for it. These people today did much better at getting out than they did then. It was pretty orderly."

Tar Heel Jurist's Role Learned After His Death

By Dr. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — As often happens within a family, the name of Augustin

Daly overshadowed that of his brother, Joseph Francis Daly. That was because the former was prominent in the entertainment world, while his brother lived more quietly as a jurist.

Still, when Joseph Francis Daly died in 1916, his papers revealed that he had been a partner in the success of his playwright brother. Indeed, Joseph's pen had contributed a great deal of the literary work that passed under Augustin's by-line.

It was, nevertheless, as a lawyer and judge that Joseph Francis Daly gained entry into the biographical dictionaries.

He was born in Plymouth, N. C., on Dec. 3, 1840, the son of Denis and Elizabeth Duffey Daly. He was only a year old when his father died, and a few years later his mother took him and Augustin to Norfolk, Va. He was about 10 when they moved to New York and took up residence at 447 Grand Street.

Like his older brother, Joseph received little schooling. Instead, at the age of 12 he went to work as an office boy for a wool broker.

Shortly afterward, he took a similar job in the law office of the uncles of Theodore Roosevelt — Robert B. and Silar Weir Roosevelt.

During the next 18 years he methodically worked his way up in the firm — from office boy to managing clerk and eventually to successorship in the renamed firm of Daly, Henry & Olin.

This was a remarkable climb for a young attorney with only a few years of schooling.

In 1870, Joseph Daly was elected a justice of the New York Court of Common Pleas. He remained on the court for 25 years, becoming chief justice in 1890. A new state constitution merged the Court of Common Pleas with the Supreme Court in 1895, and Daly was made a justice of the higher court.

Defeated for re-election to the Supreme Court in 1898, Daly returned to a lucrative law practice in New York City. However, Gov. Theodore Roosevelt appointed him a member of the

New York Committee on Revision of the Education Law, and he served as chairman of the Federal Commission to Revise the Laws of Puerto Rico.

Because of his reputation, Judge Daly's membership was sought by both governmental committees and private organizations, and he was awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws from both Fordham and Villanova universities.

He, like his brother, was a devout Catholic, and much of his spare time was devoted to St. Vincent Ferrer's Parish, to the work of the Dominican Fathers, and to other church-related activities.

For a long time he was counsel for the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum in New York.

In recognition of his service, Daly was made a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Gregory by Pope Benedict XV. After he died on Aug. 6, 1916, Joseph's massive and almost finished manuscript biography of his brother was discovered. It was published by Macmillan the following year under the title "The Life of Augustin Daly." The book described in great detail Augustin's rise to fame; and for the first time the close collaboration between the two brothers, beginning in childhood and continuing until the playwright's death in 1899, was told.

Judge Daly in 1873 married Emma Robinson Barker, and they had three children — Elizabeth, Edward Hamilton, and Wilfrid Daly. Upon his first wife's death, he married Mary Louise Smith who survived him.

Tunnel Hearing Set Next Week

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The controversial tunnel proposed to connect a new office building and the Legislative Building will be the subject of a public hearing next week before the subcommittee of the Advisory Budget Commission.

Legislators were informed of the hearing by letters from the commission, which called the meeting Aug. 14.

In July, the commission approved spending $315,000 to build the tunnel but political pressure and legislative opposition prompted the hearing.

State Sen. I. Beverly Lake and six other legislators filed suit against the tunnel last month.

Some members of the budget commission have said privately they believe the tunnel is dead but an overhead walkway between the two buildings is a possibility.

The hearing will be at 10 a.m. Wednesday in the press conference room in the Administration Building. Persons who wish to testify on the tunnel should contact the State Budget Office.

History Changed By Some Hurricanes Of The Past

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Mangled bodies, smashed homes and ruined crops are the products of Hurricane David, now clawing at the Atlantic Coast. But it is only the latest chapter in a chronicle of violent storms that have altered American history.

The United States has been relatively lucky so far this year, but in the past the tragedy visited on the Dominican Republic by David has been equaled or eclipsed in this country. The worst occurred on Sept. 9, 1900, when waters from the Gulf of Mexico, driven by a hurricane, swept over the city of Galveston, Texas, taking an estimated 6,000 lives.

That storm reduced Galveston to "a city of wrecked homes and streets choked with debris sandwiched with six thousand corpses, a city...with the slime of the ocean on every spot and in every house," according to Clarence Ousley of the Galveston Tribune.

The hurricane that swept away much of that gracious southern city, like David and others, originated over the Atlantic, swept through the Caribbean then, unlike David, turned west to Texas instead of north.

That doesn't mean Florida is immune from the deadly storms, as 1928 was to show. That year an early September hurricane swept out of the Atlantic, turned north and crashed into Florida northwest of Palm Beach.

The National Weather Service says 1,836 Americans died in the Lake Okeechobee hurricane as it was christened in the days before such storms were given the names of women and men — and throughout the Caribbean the death toll has been estimated as high as 5,000.

A decade later, New England lost 600 lives as a hurricane swept north. Other hurricanes have taken a heavy toll throughout the eastern United States.

Indeed, Don Sarreals, a weather service meteorologist in Washington, expressed fear Tuesday that residents of the Appalachian mountains may not be sufficiently wary of David.

While coastal residents have heeded warnings and taken shelter, he said, David will also bring heavy rains and possible flash flooding along the Appalachian chain and a severe hazard may exist there.

The effects of hurricanes, nature's greatest storms, have reached beyond their immediate tragedy in the past.

For example, a hurricane in 1766 crushed the farms on the Caribbean island of Martinique, ruining the once-wealthy planter Joseph-Gaspard Tascher. His daughter returned to France to seek her fortune and met and married an ambitious young military officer.

So a hurricane led one young woman to leave colonial life and become Empress Josephine, wife of Napoleon Bonaparte.

It was also a hurricane that brought Alexander Hamilton into history. His description of such a storm in a letter to his father so impressed local planters in the Caribbean that they collected money to send the young man to America for an education.

And in the late 1770s and early 1780s a series of storms devastated British warships operating along the coast of the rebellious colonies. Some historians have suggested the final British surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown was in part due to British navy's reluctance to engage the French fleet off Yorktown during the fall hurricane season.

It was a hurricane in 1837 that led Congress to pass a law requiring that passenger ships carry a life preserver for each person aboard. A storm had demolished the steamer Home off Cape Hatteras, and there were only two life preservers aboard. Ninety persons died.

At least one other case of benefit can be traced to the tragedy of a hurricane: a storm that kept the United States out of a war.

In 1888, Germany was trying to establish a protectorate over Samoa in the Pacific and in the fighting some American property was damaged.

American warships sped to the scene and battle fleets from the two nations faced each other over loaded guns when a savage hurricane swept down upon them.

Ships were sunk, wrecked or driven aground and more than 150 sailors died. But in the face of the tragedy, the survivors from both nations struggled to help one another and the differences were resolved. A treaty settled matters without gunfire.

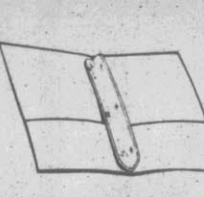

In that area of the Pacific, incidentally, the storms are called hurricanes, as they are in the United States. In the Western Pacific, however, they are called typhoons, and in Australia they are known as willy-nillies.

Committee For Scott

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A campaign office for former Gov. Bob Scott, who is pondering an attempt at a political comeback, has been established in Raleigh by the Friends of Bob Scott Committee.

But Scott said today he has still not reached a decision on whether to run for statewide office in 1980.

The three-room office is located in a building housing doctors' offices, the Medical Arts Building on Old Wake Forest Road, and will be run by committee coordinator Susan H. King of Raleigh.

"He's going to run for something, I think," said Charles Bradshaw, a Raleigh realtor who is chairman of the Scott campaign committee and was a cabinet secretary when Scott was governor.

Scott has said he is considering whether to run for governor in the Democratic primary, and the committee was formed to raise money and begin an organization.

Scott, at his farm in Haw River, said the opening of an office did not mean he would definitely run. "They've just said they needed some space, a place to put the files, a contact point and a place to work out of mainly," Scott said.

Scott said he did not know how much money the committee has raised so far. "I guess they've got enough to pay the rent — they better have," he said.

The office, Scott said, shows "there is definite interest, and it's such that it warrants further sampling of opinion."

Scott said he is still planning to conduct a scientific survey to assess his chances, but has not yet done so.

Those Disco Dollars Mean Billions To Business

By FRED FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Disco is no fad anymore. It is, according to a man charged with monitoring it, a large industry. How big it is depends on whether only discos or all the related aspects are counted. Bill Wardlow says the disco clubs alone turn over between $6 and $8 billion a year in the United States. He estimates the number of clubs at close to 20,000. He adds in another $1 billion for overall hardware and software. But that, in his view, is only for starters in this country, not to mention overseas.

"Internationally, I have no idea what the dollar figures are. But disco is growing in South America, Asia, Europe, England, Canada, Australia. He didn't say Africa, but it's growing there too. He did say China, where he was headed next to help promote a deal for a disco in a Shanghai hotel, possibly several more in other major cities.

Yes, he said, the Chinese are interested, although apparently solely to accommodate their foreign guests — the increasing numbers of businessmen and tourists passing through.

Wardlow, associate publisher of Billboard magazine, the music industry trade journal, has become a sort of evangelist of the disco business through his role as entrepreneur of disco forums the magazine has been running since 1974. He said these trade shows are "good business for us in that anything that makes the music industry grow and helps us keep close to its newest developments pays off."

Although the clubs are the mainstay of the disco business, Wardlow extends its marketplace to include:

—Software which he terms liquor, soft drinks, food, records, tapes, anything consumed in the disco.

—Hardware, such as sound systems, lighting, and interior decoration.

—Franchising of such disco names as 2,001 Clubs and Uncle Sams.

—Peripheral industries such as club promotion and management.

—Consulting on everything from the disco's location and design to its sound and lighting, even the selection of its disc jockey.

—Production and licensing of records and tapes.

Some of these areas haven't really caught hold yet. For example, disco music makes up about 10 percent of record sales. He sees growth here as soon as record firms get over what he calls "their reticence about going into disco."

"The same thing happened in the '50s. The labels didn't want to depart from easy listening."

Despite this, disco music has edged up to garner about a third of Billboard's Hot 100 Chart. Wardlow gives it a little more than a year to reach the 50 percent mark.

Franchising has been around but only recently has it taken hold. And disco consultants are a relatively new field since there was no one expert enough to be a consultant until now.

"I feel certain that the disco boom will go all through the '80s," he says.

"For one thing, the music is changing from that heavy beat to a treatment of rock, samba, ballad, all forms.

"And it's going across the age groups it didn't hit before. In the early '70s, it was 18 to 34. Now you have the youth and kiddie discos that operate in the daytime for the 5 to 19 age group.

"At the very top, you have places like Regines and membership clubs. You'll see more of that. Younger people can't afford them. But older people are becoming involved through their children."

He says the lighting is turning down from the garish and the booming speakers are being softened as the music gets more melodic, attracting a more mature audience.

All this turns over dollars for more businesses. He lists a few:

—Fashions. "They are a way to identify but not a cult as in the old days of zoot suits. Instead, they are free flowing, keyed to tie in with the dancing." Now there are disco hairstyles and cosmetics.

—Dancing schools. "It's meant a whole revival for many that were practically going out of business."

—Restaurant chains, cafes. "They've found out live talent is not as reliable and it's much cheaper to put in a turntable. The dinner crowd is followed after 10 by the disco crowd, extending their hours, increasing their take."

—Hotels. "It's a way to increase occupancy and keep the customer in the hotel for dinner and drinks."

—Roller discos. They are a whole new ballgame. Of the 2,200 roller rinks in the United States, he estimates about 70 percent are already into disco. Although relatively few discos have converted to roller, other establishments are beginning to. A number of bowling alleys have done so in the past year.

But the disco scene, however rosy the lighting, has been slow to catch on. Wardlow says there are still obstacles.

It has had few stars although there now are Donna Summer, the Village People, Gloria Gaynor, Linda Clifford, Peaches and Herb, Michael Zager, Grace Jones, to name a few.

"There was a proliferation of bad shows on TV just as there was bad disco in the beginning.

There is a crop of disco stars now but visibility has to be created by good TV and radio."

Wardlow contends radio stations have been cautious toward disco for a number of reasons. He says many have older music directors who still are not into disco and therefore avoid it, preferring old formulas that were successful a decade ago.

"They're misleading the public about what is really selling by making up their own formats," he feels.

He says disco records and tapes don't get a fair showing in many outlets because dealers, one stops and rack jobbers often lack knowledge of the music market.

This particularly applies, he feels, to the one stops which handle displays of a number of dealers and the rack jobbers such as department stores, supermarkets, drug chains, even car washes and filling stations, which show only a limited selection.

But that picture is changing. The movie "Saturday Night Fever," grossing $130 million, gave discos a big boost although it tended to show the seamy side of one kind of disco, one he says doesn't apply to most of them.

Wardlow believes his International Disco Forums, and other industry trade shows, help overcome such problems. They provide a medium for training in disco operation, for an exchange of ideas and, most important, he says, "they crystalize record industry attention on the importance of discos."

And, he says, they, too, are part of the disco business. There were more than 130 booths at one of several forums Billboard runs annually. "One guy took a booth for $350, and wrote $500,000 in business."

Is it all for the good? He admits he is prejudiced, but says, "Well, you're taking people with a lot of energy who otherwise might dissipate it in destructive ways and they're working it off dancing."

"What's more, it's healthy. To me, it makes more sense than jogging. And you get just as much of a workout."

Little Told On Avoiding Loss

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Hundreds of books have been written on how to make money buying stocks. Very little is written on how to avoid losses or when to sell stocks.

Whether or not you own stocks which show a paper loss, you still need to know when to sell. You may need to raise cash for personal reasons, or you may simply wish to preserve your capital or put it to better use.

Or, with a recession brewing, perhaps you wish to invest more conservatively or defensively. A few guidelines can help you determine whether or not to sell a given stock.

The high level of merger/takeover activity over the last year has resulted in strong moves by many stock groups. In many cases, a stock's price may move up to a level unjustified by fundamental prospects simply because of a merger involving another company in the same industry.

Don't be afraid to take profits; if no merger materializes, your stock could return to previous price levels.

If the fundamentals on which you based your stock purchase don't pan out, sell it. Holding on, waiting for a stock to come back, could take years. In the meantime, your funds could be put to work elsewhere.

If you still like the stock, you will probably have another opportunity to purchase it under more favorable fundamental conditions and perhaps at a better price.

A stock may come to your attention that offers greater appreciation potential than a stock you already own. Good buying opportunities seldom come along when you have investable funds, so after investigation, a switch might be in order.

Few people seem willing to observe "cut your losses" rule. When stocks are weak, it may be general market weaknesses or trouble may be brewing at the company. If the evidence is not good enough to support buying of the stock, or if any doubt persists to why the stock is weak, sell it.

You should learn patience in order to overcome fear of loss. Short term fluctuations in stock prices will always occur and you will be influenced by them, as well as by the actions of others. Don't sell stocks just because everyone else is — that is probably the best time to buy stocks.

Don't be afraid to take profits or fear that taxes will wipe out your gain. You buy stocks with the expectation of making profits and when you reach that goal, you should take profits.

Stock prices do not rise forever, and if you wait for the last point up, you may not be able to sell at all. Greed does not produce profits.

More than anything else, pride causes losses in the stock market. If you have made a mistake, admit it. Just because you bought a stock once, does not mean you have to own it forever.

"A minister can easily spend 25 to 60 percent of the day in counseling sessions," said Plunk.

Such counseling sessions can lead to malpractice lawsuits similar to those brought against psychologists or counselors.

"The suits frequently involve other family members," said Plunk. "In some cases it might be an alienation of affections suit after a minister recommends a temporary separation in husband and wife situations."

But the Preferred Risk coverage, and that of other companies as well, excludes actual or alleged sexual conduct between the minister and a person being counseled. Besides alienation of affections, a suit might claim that a minister should have recommended that a person he is working with enter a drug or alcohol treatment program or seek more professional counseling.

Offer Protection In Counseling Role

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Ministers whose expanding roles have taken them outside the pulpit are finding that they need protection in case they end up in court, according to a Des Moines-based insurance company.

Preferred Risk Mutual of Des Moines began offering malpractice protection to ministers on July 1 and company vice president Robert Plunk says the initial response has been good.

"A lot of inquiries have been coming in since the announcement," said Plunk. "They've been coming in from all over the country. It seems to be the type of thing many ministers are concerned about."

In the past, he said, ministers were primarily involved with Sunday services and choir practices. Now most ministers oversee community, recreational and social programs, and counsel parishioners on personal and family problems, finance, marital difficulties, vocational

Ancient Persian Invention Adds Hope For Future

By DAVID L. KINGFORD
Associated Press Writer

A seventh-century Persian invention, taken to China by Genghis Khan and adopted across Europe by the returning Crusaders will enable a group of Navajo children in Arizona to attend school in their own community this year for the first time.

By the year 2,000, it is expected to provide this country with about 1.7 quadrillion British thermal units of energy a year. That would be less than 2 percent of the nation's total energy consumption, but with today's oil prices every little bit helps.

The ancient windmill thus provides some hope for the future.

"The windmills did a good job and still do a good job," said W.W. Ditsman, secretary of agriculture in Kansas, where for years the machines have been pumping water for livestock and now new ones are being built to generate electricity.

The federal government budgeted $60 million for windmill research this year — as compared with only $1 million just five years ago — and a number of private companies are involved in multi-million-dollar projects of their own.

Perched 4,420 feet high on Howard's Knob near Boone, N.C., is the Goliath of the world's operating wind turbines, a $3.5 million, 350-ton machine with blades 100 feet long. Dedicated in July, it was built by the General Electric Space Division for the U.S. Department of Energy and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Expected to supply enough energy for 300 to 500 homes when it goes into full operation this fall — that's 10 times the peak power of any existing windmill — it is controlled by NASA computers 35 miles away in Lenoir, N.C., collecting data for the Department of Energy.

With the Boone mill still in its testing stage, authorities still don't know whether it will generate as much power as expected.

"This time of year winds are slack, but that is about as we expected," said Bud Ayers, a spokesman for Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp. "But I don't know of any particular problem that has caused us deep concern."

Whether it works or not, the giant windmill is such an oddity that tourists come from all over to look at it. Watkuaga County plans to build a 54-acre park at the site.

When the 1,500 Navajos of the remote Birdsprings reservation 60 miles east of Flagstaff, Ariz., decided to build a school for their children, the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs insisted it must have electrical power. But the Indians discovered it would cost about $100,000 to bring in electricity from the outside and that was beyond the reach of a community dependent on sheep herding and farming.

So with the Indians supplying free labor, they built a wind system. Two windmills revolve on twin 50-foot-high towers, charging batteries that will last three to four days if necessary. It cost $20,000.

This fall the Navajo children, many of whom were sent to schools as far as 250 miles away, will attend classes at the Little Singer School, named for a medicine man who before his death made Indian leaders promise to build their own school.

Clayton, N.M., population 2,978, claimed to be the country's first community partly powered by wind in January 1977, when a two-bladed windmill hooked into the city-owned utility system. The mill spins enough electricity for about 30 homes and is a source of community pride. A restaurant changed its name to "The Windmill Cafe" and had a mural of the mill painted on its wall.

Louis Divone, chief of the Department of Energy's Wind

System Branch, said it presently costs three times more to generate electricity by wind systems than with conventional systems, mainly because of the expense of building the mills. But with mass production of mills and the rising fuel costs, wind power is expected to become cost-competitive with other systems by the mid-1980s.

But the efficiency of windmills depends on the velocity of winds and that varies from place to place.

Atop the roof of its Miami Beach test lab on the McArthur Causeway, Florida Power and Light Co. operates a 2,500-watt experimental windmill called Mariah. But over a one-year period, the windmill produced only $63 worth of electricity, figured at 4 cents per kilowatt hour.

In California, there are two state agencies dealing with windmills, the Wind Energy Office, promoting big projects, and the Office of Appropriate Technology, involved in individual requests for assistance.

John Nichols, manager of wind energy, said the State Legislature has set a goal of "10 percent of electrical energy from wind power by the year 2000."

"We are mapping and surveying and determining the proper sites for windmill farms," Nichols said. "We're supposed to get hundreds of sites here in California."

But Arthur Blake, supervisor of load management projects at Southern California Edison, doesn't foresee much impact from wind power until windmills come down in cost.

"A fellow pays $180,000 for a unit to generate 10 kilowatts," he said. "If his electric bill is $100 a month and he cuts it to $50 a month by generating half his energy, you see what the pay-back is. Two or three hundred years?"

Nonetheless, Blake said Edison has had "hundreds of inquiries" about a program to buy excess power from "backyard" windmills.

And Edison is building a $2 million wind plant of its own at San Geronio Pass near Palm Springs. The 190-foot-tall windmill, with three blades in a diameter of 165 feet, is expected to generate enough electricity to supply 800 to 1,000 customers.

Pigeons Help Coast Guard

NEW YORK (AP) — Some pigeons are roosting pretty high these days because the U.S. Coast Guard recently found they have a talent for spotting the bright orange used on life-jackets.

The pigeons ride in special hammocks rigged in the bubble compartments underneath search helicopters. When the birds spot the emergency orange in the water below they peck on a signal bar, actuating a subminiature switch made by Honeywell. The signal alerts the pilot, who promptly sends a succulent reward down a tube to the feathered lookout.

The Coast Guard says the pigeons are twice as quick and three times as reliable as human spotters.

Eight hundred persons were killed in 1917 when the British steamer Vanguard exploded in Scapa Flow.

Retired Engineer Recalls Thirty-Five-Year Career

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer

"I've never tried to explain it before," Albert Page Haverty said, attempting to describe what he termed the "romance" of the steam-driven train. "But, it was the satisfaction of the work — seeing all that power transposed to the wheels, that big train move at such power and speed and the beauty of the sound of exhaust and whistles.

"Freedom Train was the last of the major runs of the old major steam engines," claimed Haverty, now 56, who retired in February, ending a 35-year career with the railroad service. "Powered by a Reading T-1 type steam engine weighing 400 tons, the coal burner ran from April 4, 1975 to December 31, 1976," Haverty said. "Starting in Wilmington, Del., and ending up in Miami, Fla., it pulled 26 cars to 138 major cities around the U.S."

Between Oct. 20 and Nov. 1, 1976, Freedom train made stops in Guilford, Charlotte and Raleigh. Painted red, white and blue, the train with 10 exhibit cars documenting this nation's heritage, served as a focal point for local participation during the Bicentennial.

Helped Donate Train

In a ceremony held Monday in Baltimore, Md., Haverty and his wife for 36 years, May, helped donate the special train to the Baltimore and Ohio Transportation Museum.

With most of all today's train engineers qualified on electric and diesel engines, Haverty was one of only a few men qualified as a steam engineer at the time of the Bicentennial. As a result, he was given the honor of beginning and ending the train's epic tour.

"I started it out on the tour from Washington, Del., and took it to Albany, N.Y., — a distance of about 250 miles," Haverty said. "I met it in Newark, N.J., as it was returning from Miami, Fla., and took it to Lebanon, N.J., for storage.

"I thought it was wonderful for the train to tour like that," Haverty said. "Especially for the kids. Most of them had never seen a steam engine before.

"I think the steam engine was built in the beginning of the 1940's — it was about 30 years old," he added. "It would eat coal — I'll tell you that — about 14 tons of coal a day and about 30,000 gallons of water in a 14 to 15 hour run."

Haverty's Career

"My family and I lived next to the Norfolk and Southern Railroad, and I would often get on it and fire-it-up — throw coal in the steam engine's fire box — while the crew was working in my locality when I was 16 years old," Haverty said.

"All my life I had been wanting to work on the railroads." As a result, Haverty said he began his railroad career on Feb. 2, 1943 when he started working as a fireman on the Pennsylvania Railroad which operated lines along the east coast of the U.S.

About seven years later and after working as a fireman instructor for a year, Haverty was promoted to engineman. By 1955, he was working as assistant road foreman of engines in Damar, Del.

In 1957, he was transferred to Washington, D.C. where until 1959 he again held the same position he held in Damar. In that same year, he was transferred to Ridgeway, Penn., and promoted to train master/assistant road foreman.

A year later, he returned to Washington, D.C., where he was promoted to terminal road foreman of engines at the Washington Terminal Company.

"On March, 1969, I went back to the Pennsylvania Railroad, then known as the Penn Central, as train master in Washington," Haverty explained. "As train master, I was responsible for assembling and dispatching trains on time."

Four years later, Haverty became train master in New York City's Penn Station. With each promotion during Haverty's career, his responsibility increased steadily.

But, about two years after Amtrak and Conrail took over in April, 1976, Haverty's manpower responsibility quickly doubled — from 700 personnel to 1400.

Career Ends

"That was the straw that broke the camel's back," Haverty claimed. "On Feb. 8, 1978, my doctor took me out of service because of heart trouble.

However, since undergoing heart surgery performed by a local doctor whom his daughter, Mrs. Barbara Walker, met through a girlfriend, the doctor's secretary, Haverty and his wife have been living in Greenville.

Barbara, 25, who operates the Village Groomer shop, has been living here with her husband since 1972. Haverty's 31-year-old son, Robert, is currently employed in Brazil with Alco Aluminum of Maryland.

In Retrospect

"It was hard and dirty work," Haverty said concerning his career with the railroads. In addition, the working hours were long. With duty seven days a week, an average work day consisted of Haverty's leaving each morning at 6 and returning around 6 p.m.

Furthermore, he was subject to emergency calls 24 hours a day which he described as "very frequent."

"The first legal holiday I had off in 35 years was on Easter in 1978," Haverty said. However, when asked if he missed the railroad service, he quickly replied, "Of course I miss it — after all of those years.

Not surprisingly, Haverty who began his career on the railroads 36 years ago with the coal-burning steam engines, strongly supports the use of coal over oil and gas.

"It's just a shame the way they're wasting oil and gas, these big power plants," Haverty said. "It's a crying shame. They could be using coal instead — absolutely."

"The sulfur content wouldn't hurt a thing — they used it through the 30's and 40's..."

Indict Sampson County Sheriff

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Sampson County Sheriff W. Cranford Fann was indicted Tuesday by a Sampson County Grand Jury on charges that he violated election laws.

Indicted along with the Republican sheriff were his daughter, Lynn Fann; Republican County Commissioner Jesse Lindsay and his wife; and Dewey Jackson, a Republican and former member of the county board of elections.

Fann said he had not been officially notified of the charges and declined to comment on them.

The charges stem from allegations of illegal voter registration before last year's general election. Each offense is a felony carrying a maximum sentence of 10 years imprisonment.

During a state Board of Elections hearing in Clinton on March 19, nine witnesses testified that Fann registered them to vote prior to the general election last November and that he was not accompanied by a county board of elections official.

Fann defeated Democratic Sheriff Graham Butler in last November's election by about 500 votes.

One witness testified that Fann told him if anyone asked about his registration he should tell them Republican elections board member Dewey Jackson was present when the card was filled out.

Jackson, 81, submitted his resignation to the Board Elections a month before hearings.

The state board presented 28 witnesses during the Clinton hearing. All of them said their registration cards were signed by Jackson, but most said Jackson was not there when they filled out their registration cards.

State law requires that an elections official be present when registration cards are completed and signed.

During last fall's elections, Lindsay defeated incumbent commissioner Shelton Warren by five votes. Warren first requested a recount, then conceded the election to Lindsay.

Debbie Shook Suing Jaycees

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Debbie Shook, who was stripped of her crown as Miss North Carolina following a dispute with several Jaycee organizations, will file suit today seeking restoration of her title and more than $85,000 in damages, her attorney said Tuesday.

The suit will be filed in Wake Superior Court and will name three state Jaycee organizations: the Winston-Salem Jaycees, the Raleigh Jaycees and the North Carolina Jaycees, according to attorney William Potter Jr.

Two business managers who were appointed by the Jaycees for Miss Shook during her reign, Ray Snider of Winston-Salem and Judy Cross of Elizabethtown, are also named in the suit, her lawyer said.

Miss Shook, who is from Spruce Pine, was crowned Miss North Carolina last year when the pageant was run by the Winston-Salem Jaycees. She was stripped of her crown one day before she was to crown a new Miss North Carolina in May at the state pageant, this year run by the Raleigh Jaycees.

Jaycee officials deposed Miss Shook after she complained to newspaper reporters that she had not received all the prizes promised her when she won the title.

The suit seeks $75,000 in damages for Miss Shook's "wrongful dismissal," Potter said, as well as $7,000 to $10,000 in full prizes, including a $5,000 wardrobe which was promised but never received.

In addition, the suit seeks approximately $5,000 for "wrongful handling of financial transactions" on behalf of Miss Shook during her reign, Potter said.

The suit asks the court to order that Miss Shook's title be restored, returning her to full status as a former Miss North Carolina, he said.

Oil Distributors Tighten Credit

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — People will not only have to pay more for their home heating oil this winter, they'll have to pay sooner, as oil distributors tighten up credit.

"Everybody is going to tighten up," said Joe H. McBane, president of McBane-Brown Oil Co. Inc. "They've got to."

Credit has tightened up for a number of reasons, oil dealers say. Oil has gone from about 48 cents a gallon this time last year to about 78 cents a gallon now, so dealers stand to lose more on unpaid bills.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has cut the time it gives oil companies to pay for crude oil. So now many oil companies require dealers to pay their bills faster. And the prime interest rate is now at a record 12 1/4 percent, which means dealers themselves are paying record interest rates on money they borrow to buy oil.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Scattered showers across the state Friday, fair in the eastern portions Saturday and Sunday. Highs in the low to middle 80s except for 70s in the mountains. Lows will be 60s except for 50s in the mountains.

Solar Tips Useful To Homeowner

By LINDA THIELKE
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) —
A Utah Department of Energy official has some tips on how to obtain the benefits of a solar home both simply and inexpensively.

"In this day and age, with our technology, we have neglected the simple techniques that could really help us," said Kerry Faigle.

Faigle said some of the most efficiently designed solar homes were built by ancient Indians in the southwestern deserts of the United States.

Rock-dwelling Indians always chose homes facing south to take maximum advantage of winter sunshine, Faigle said.
During the summer, when the sun is higher in the sky, rock overhangs kept sunlight out and the homes cool. He said it was the perfect year-round home.

Faigle said these techniques are still available to homeowners at little expense.

"Without adding substantial costs, you can eliminate 50 to 70 percent of your cooling and heating costs," he said.

Passive solar home design is best done while a home is still in the planning stages, but even an existing home can be made more energy efficient. During the design stage, Faigle said homebuilders should follow these guidelines:

—Put as much of the home as possible in the ground. Faigle said underground areas retain heat and cold much better. He said views and a feeling of openness don't have to be sacrificed, if the home is thought out carefully. Faigle suggests putting bedrooms and bathrooms in the basement, since comfortable temperatures are more important to those rooms than is a view.

—Placement of windows is extremely important. Faigle said windows on the north side of a house should be kept to a minimum or eliminated, because they never receive direct sun and are a constant source of heat loss.

Southern windows should be large and placed so the top of the window begins where the sun will hit the side of the house in the winter, and the bottom should be just above the angle of the summer sun.

—Roof overhangs should be extended to cut off the summer sun, but still allow winter sun to come into the house.

—A circular or square floor plan is best, because it minimizes the exposed space and less exposed space will cut down on heat loss and gain. He said the floor plan should also be zoned, so that different areas of the house can be closed off when not in use.

—The thicker the walls the better. Also, it is important to have a moisture barrier next to the insulation, because wet insulation can lose heat rapidly.

—The right kind of landscaping can have a dramatic impact on a home's energy efficiency. Placing deciduous trees — ones that lose their leaves in the fall — on the south side will provide shade in the summer and let sunlight in during the winter. He said it is also wise to plant trees or shrubs to serve as a windbreak.
Cold winter winds rob a home of heat.

"These are simple things that every house should have," said Faigle. "It takes minimal effort and expense, but these things would have a real significant impact."

Existing homes can adapt many of the same suggestions, he said. Things to check in a home already built are:

—Fireplaces can be "disasters," said Faigle. He said homeowners should seriously think about bricking up their fireplaces to save energy.
Conventional fireplaces suck in heated room air for combustion and send it out the flue. The area right around the fireplace may be warm, but other areas of the house will cool off. He said there are special fireplaces that burn only on outside air, but it is expensive to convert conventional, existing fireplaces.

—All doors and windows should be weatherstripped to reduce heat loss.

—If roof overhangs are not extended far enough to shade windows, awnings should be installed.

—Heavy drapes or venetian blinds can trap warmth in the winter and keep the sun out in the summer. But Faigle said ideally the coverings should go on the outside of the house. He said once heat goes past the window glass, it is there to stay.

Stock And Market Reports

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — Tuesday, fell another 5.80 to 866.81 in the first half hour today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by an 8-1 margin in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The sharp downturn after a six-week summer rally has been blamed in part on expectations of a substantial further rise in interest rates.

The Federal Reserve was widely presumed to have pushed open-market money rates a step higher Tuesday. And the bank prime lending rate, already at a record 12 1/4 percent, was expected to go still higher before long.

Another depressant has been a new surge in gold prices. The bullion price climbed more than $4 an ounce to $329.25 at the morning fixing in London today.

Today's early volume leaders included Tenneco, off 1/4 at 38 3/4; Deere & Co., down 3/4 at 39, and American Telephone & Telegraph, off 1/4 at 56 1/2.

The Dow Jones industrial average's loss Tuesday was its largest since it tumbled 17.84 points last Dec. 18.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than a 4-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 33.35 million shares against 26.37 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index lost 1.05 to 61.35.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.88 at 214.73.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — N.C. hens: market steady to lower for heavy-type hens. Supply fully adequate. Demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm 10 12 cents.

Taft is a former member of the Greenville Jaycees and he served on the board of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce. A Rotarian, he has served on the board of the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation Center.

The candidate has been the Council's representative on the Greenville Recreation Commission for the past four years.

Taft and his wife, the former Camilla Henderson of Greenville, have four children and are members of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Crash Kills 4

PINNACLE, N.C. (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company heir Zack Reynolds and three companions were killed Tuesday night when their single-engine airplane crashed in a wooded area of Stokes County, authorities said.

Sheriff William F. Southern Jr. identified the other victims as William H. Roberts, Gary Scott Cernak and Glenn Cernak. All were residents of the Winston-Salem area.

The Cessna Skyhawk crashed about 100 yards from U.S. 52. Officials said wreckage was strewn over a 100-yard area.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration said the airplane left Smith-Reynolds Airport in Winston-Salem between 6:15 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. on a flight to Mount Airy. The plane crashed about 6:50 p.m.

The airplane was registered to Zack Reynolds.

A spokesman for the FAA flight service in Hickory said skies were overcast when the crash occurred.

NOTE OF THANKS:

My sincere thanks to our many friends in Greenville, Winterville and Pitt County for your concern while I was a recent patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Your cards, telephone calls and visits were most welcome. But mostly your prayers, love and concern for my family and for me made me thankful that we had returned to Greenville for my hospitalization.

Also my sincere thanks to my Doctors, my Private Duty Nurses, the Nursing Staff and the entire Personnel of Pitt Memorial for the fine services given me.

Pitt County should be justly proud of its' fine Hospital and its' excellent staff.

May God bless each of you as he has blessed me.

Most Sincerely,
Claude D. Ward, Sr.

Babies Arrive With Hurricane

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane David may be part of the answer when children born this month are old enough to ask, "Mommy, how did I get here?"

Hundreds of expectant women, fearing the low barometric pressure from the hurricane would send them into labor, filled hospitals before the storm hit.

One West Palm Beach hospital recorded 20 births when David swept nearby — double the number at Miami's enormous Jackson Memorial Hospital, which was never closer than 50 miles to the storm's center.

of Transportation said some problems from high water on streets and roads was being experienced at mid-morning, although no major problems were noted.

Likewise, the Greenville Utilities Commission and Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. said they had experienced no unusual problems because of the heavy rains.

Both the Greenville City School system and the Pitt County school administrative unit reported no changes in their normal schedules.

City School Superintendent Glenn Cox said some buses might be rerouted to miss areas of high water on local streets, but said no other changes were expected.

Ott Alford, superintendent of the county school system said county buses might experience more problems tomorrow than today, as rainfall moves into and down creeks in the county.

Agricultural Extension Service chairman Leroy James said, "it's hard to say how much damage we'll get," from David.

"I'm sure it will affect peanuts some...it will damage peanuts more than anything else."

"If it dries off," he said, farmers can, "go ahead and get their corn out of the field," explaining that the major damage to corn would come if high winds blew the stalks down, making it hard to harvest.

"Soybeans, in a lot of cases, it will help them...especially late blooming soybeans," James theorized.

He added that the rainfall is, "real good for small grains that have just been planted...especially in terms of germination."

with another 25 percent poured. The foundation is some 50 percent complete, he added.

Laney said last night that "coming out of the ground is the worst part of any project" and he expressed the hope that "we don't get a lot of rain in the next couple of weeks."

The contractor hopes to finish the 60-unit, five-story complex in 12 months but the schedule allows for 13 months if needed.

In other business last night, Laney informed commissioners that Greenville Utilities has asked the Authority for a utility easement involving a section of the Moyewood property. Laney said that the 100-foot easement, which would involve some 2.2 acres on the river side of the Authority's property, would be in the flood plain and would be located adjacent to and north of a Vepco easement.

The executive director said that GUC needs the easement in order to set up an electrical loop around that section of the city.

Commissioners voted to grant the easement to Greenville Utilities at no charge.

A proposal submitted by the Lloyd R. Moody accounting firm for a Housing Authority audit was approved by the board. Moody offered a proposal of $2,570 for the housing audit, while the John C. Proctor & Co. offered a proposal of $2,740.

All but one of the 642 housing units operated by the Authority were occupied at the end of August, according to Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs.

Mrs. Streeter said that average rents in the six housing areas included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $68.87; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $76.76; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $76.33; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $70.03; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $58.34; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $76.92, for an overall average of $72.25.

Dr. Fulford shared with the faculty general goals for the college, stating that the college could become more responsible and responsive to the students, as well as the general public. Also, Dr. Fulford noted that PCC will address local, state and national priorities, and mentioned that the college will work with farm producers in the production of gasoline via a new energy technology program.

Other possible curricula to be offered by PCC will include solar energy, forestry and geology, said Fulford, all of which could offer opportunities for local students.

Fulford pointed out that PCC must emphasize personal achievement, not only with students, but with everyone in the college.

Koosman Feels Bad, But Royals Feel Worse As Twins Win, 5-1

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
Veteran Jerry Koosman didn't feel too good warming up prior to the game. The Kansas City Royals didn't feel good at all afterwards.

"It's funny, when I warmed up I was wild and my rhythm was really off," Koosman said Tuesday night. "I told (outfielder) Glenn Adams when I got to the dugout that this was the worst I've felt in a long time."

"But I just started concentrating, and after the last hitter in the third inning, I found my fast ball and things fell into place after that."

Koosman gave up only two hits as he hurled the Minnesota Twins to a 5-1 victory over the Royals and raised his record to 18-11.

In other AL games Tuesday night, Cleveland downed Detroit 5-3, New York nipped Boston 3-2, Texas stopped Seattle 5-2 and Chicago clipped California 10-7.

"As I was warming up, I thought, 'How am I ever going to get through this game,'" Koosman said.

The 35-year-old left-hander then set down the first 16 batters he faced before John Wathan hit his second home run of the season with one out in the sixth. Koosman also gave up a single to Willie Wilson in the ninth.

"I knew he had a worried look when he came to the bench before the game," Twins Manager Gene Mauch said of Koosman. "But after the third inning, he had great rhythm. In his mind he could throw that curve ball over any time he wanted."

Even the Royals were impressed.

"After the second inning, I said, 'Uh, oh, we're in trouble. He's got it tonight,'" said Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog.

Koosman, who was 3-15 last season with the New York Mets before being obtained by the Twins in an off-season trade, struck out seven and walked none.

"Now I'm gonna go out and try and win 19 and not worry about No. 20," Koosman said. "You've got to keep your mind on what's at hand."

A two-run single by rookie Dave Edwards in the first inning and Ron Jackson's solo home run against loser Larry Gura, 10-10, gave Koosman all the offensive support he needed.

Yankees 3, Red Sox 2
Willie Randolph raced home from second on an error by Boston second baseman Ted Sizemore to give New York its victory over the Red Sox.

With Randolph on second and Oscar Gamble on first, Reggie Jackson sliced a grounder to shortstop Rick Burleson. Burleson threw to Sizemore at second, forcing Gamble, but Sizemore's relay to first was in the dirt and Randolph streaked home when first baseman Bob Watson couldn't come up with the ball.

Chris Chambliss slammed a two-run homer for the Yankees and Butch Hobson had a solo shot for Boston.

Indians 5, Tigers 3
Bobby Bonds chased home four runs with a home run and a single and Sid Monge hurled 21-3 innings of scoreless relief to lead Cleveland to its victory and hand Detroit its fifth straight loss.

Bonds slammed a three-run homer in the first inning, then increased the Indians' lead to 5-0 in the second when he singled home Mike Hargrove.

White Sox 10, Angels 7
Greg Pryor's run-scoring single in the eighth inning snapped a 7-7 tie and Chet Lemon added a two-run homer in the ninth to give Chicago its victory over California.

Lemon's 17th homer of the season came with Mike Squires on base.

Frank Tanana, making his first appearance since tendinitis in his left shoulder forced him out of a June 10th start against Detroit, pitched the first four innings for California. He gave up six hits, one walk and two runs while striking out two.

Tanana left the game with a 7-2 lead but Chicago got to reliever Don Aase for five runs in the sixth inning to tie the score.

Rangers 5, Mariners 2
Buddy Bell drove in three runs with two singles as Texas downed Seattle. Bell ripped a two-run single in the first inning and added a run-scoring hit in the seventh to back Ranger right-hander Steve Comer, 14-10.

Comer scattered four hits, including Willie Horton's two-run triple in the fifth. He retired the final 13 Mariners in a row after Horton's triple. The right hander struck out three and walked three in notching his fifth complete game.

Chargers, Vikings Open Campaign

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
Of the area high schools, only Ayden-Grifton and D.H. Conley opened their football seasons this past week, with the remaining schools scheduled to inaugurate their 1979 campaigns Friday night.

Last Friday night the Ayden-Grifton Chargers lost to the Williamston Tigers, 20-0, while on Monday D.H. Conley nipped West Craven, 19-12.

In other games this past week, Greene Central ripped South Lenior, 20-7, and Roanoke rolled over Belhaven, 34-8.

This week Ayden-Grifton travels to Roanoke, Williamston hosts Gaston, Greene Central travels to Beddingfield and Jamesville opens its season at Columbia.

North Pitt and Farmville Central are also scheduled to open their seasons this week, with North Pitt hosting Enfield and Farmville Central taking on arch-rival Clinton at home.

D.H. Conley
Following Monday's 19-12 win over West Craven, D.H. Conley Coach Jimbo Walker, in his first year with the school, said he felt lucky to have won.

The Vikings spotted the Eagles a 12 point lead before rallying late in the second quarter to take a 13-12 lead into halftime.

Tuesday afternoon, after having a night to think about the game, Walker said he felt even luckier than he had Monday about running.

"We're just lucky to have won that one. We could have lost it very easily," Walker said.

Against the Eagles, the Vikings were led by running back Curtis Joyner, who gained 97 yards on 17 carries. Offensively, the Vikings looked sparatic and at one point called two consecutive time outs. "We just paniced. I panicked," Walker said.

The Vikings have this week off and Walker is looking forward to catching up on some 1st practice time.

"We didn't have the two-a-days (other schools had), but we're going to work all week and get some more offenses and defenses in for next week's game (against Washington)," he said.

"We still have a long way to go. 'I haven't looked at the films, but I know we have got some work to do.'"

Farmville Central
Farmville Central and Clinton will find out early what kind of teams they have, as the two meet for the first time in the regular season Friday night in Farmville.

The two teams have met the last three years in the playoffs, with Clinton holding a 2-1 lead, although the Vikings ripped the Dark Horses last year, 32-0.

The Dark Horses may be coming to Farmville Friday

The Dark Horses may be coming to Farmville Friday with revenge on their mind. "I'm sure they've mentioned it (last year's game) during practice," Farmville Coach Gene Brewer said.

Brewer looks for the match to be a hard-hitting, tight struggle. "What kind of game we play depends on how our offense and defense performs.

"It's a typical Clinton team, well-coached and well-disciplined," Brewer said. Clinton runs out of a straight T backfield and plays a 5-2 defense.

"We're looking forward to playing them, the kids know they're good competition," he added.

Dye Opens Sports Club Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina football coach Pat Dye talked about his Pirates, their first game, their next one, and a couple of his former players in his annual kickoff address to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

The club, beginning its fifth year, has made an annual practice of having Dye as the opening speaker for the season.

Dye's Pirates opened the season Saturday with a 31-6 win over Western Carolina and will meet N.C. State this Saturday night in Raleigh's Carter Stadium, with an overflow crowd expected.

During the meeting it was pointed out that Rose High School, along with E.B. Aycock Junior High, is in the midst of a fund drive, and Dye complimented those behind the drive on their effort.

"Too many times there is not enough emphasis put on a high school program," he said. "It's difficult for a high school when they are in the same town as a college team, but it is also possible for that school to have an outstanding program too."

Dye pointed out that five former Rose players have key roles on this year's ECU team, reserve defensive end Rocky Butler, starting tackle Joe Godette, starting center Jeff Hagans, backup quarterback Henry Trevathan, and starting linebacker Mike Brewington, an All-America candidate. "They are very important to us, and they have all worked hard to become the players they have because they are playing in their own home town."

Turning to last week's Pirate outing, Dye said that he felt his team's kicking game was only adequate, and that poor judgement was used in fielding a couple of punts. "A couple of penalties on kicks hurt us too, but I think our overall coverage was better."

The coach also wasn't fully pleased with the defense, saying it didn't play like it could have. "We only forced one turnover, and we've got to make more happen on defense," he added that the defense played a lot of people, and he hoped to continue doing this. "We want to play a lot of people and have fun and keep fresh," Dye said. He noted that the starters graded well, and singled out freshman Freddie Jones as a top prospect in the defensive secondary. "He was in on 11 plays and earned 25 bonus points, and also got the big lick of the week. He's going to be an exciting player."

Offensively, Dye said he was pleased. "We got to play three teams on offense, and our first line blocked quite well. Our backs also blocked well, probably the best they've blocked since our Carolina game in 1975. The only thing that worried me was the number of penalties we got."

Dye then brought up this week's opponent, the Wolfpack. "John Hallow (nose guard) has been getting a lot of media attention and attention from our fans because he's got to go up against Jim Ritcher, who's probably the best center in the country. I told him the other day that he had to let it all go over his head or he'd be so mentally tired by Saturday, he wouldn't be able to play. I told him I know what he's going through, and I think he'll do all right."

As far as the game goes, Dye said that there are five things you have to consider about playing anyone. "You think of where you're going to play, about their offense, their defense, and their kicking game and the officials."

"Well, we're going to play in their stadium. Their offense is loaded with huge people. They've got nine starters back on defense. They've got (Nathan) Ritter and (John) Isley doing their kicking. And the officials are all from the Atlantic Coast Conference. "That's a hell of a lot of odds against us to start with," Dye concluded.

Dye praised State as having an outstanding team, one of the best offensive units the Pirates have ever played. "But I feel their defense is their strong point. They will intimidate you. They only lost their two linebackers and they probably have better people there now."

Dye added that he figures the Pirates are ten points down to start with.

Dye was also asked his feelings about two of his former players, Zack Valentine and Eddie Hicks making the pro ranks this season. "It doesn't surprise me," Dye said. "It's a compliment to them and to our program, too. But I can tell you this, I don't think they'd have made it without the character they have. They are solid citizens that impress ball clubs."

Dye added that he expects several players from this year's team to be drafted, and listed the likely prospects as Brewington, Sam Harrell, Mitchell Johnston, and Billy Ray Washington.

The speaker for the next meeting of the club, on Tuesday, September 18, will be former basketball official Lou Bello.

Cy Young Winner

San Diego pitcher Gaylord Perry, shown here pitching for the Padres, walked out yesterday, saying he wanted to be closer to his Williamston, N.C. home. Perry said he would like to be traded to the Texas Rangers, where he has played before. (AP Laserphoto)

Padres Suspicious Of Perry's Walkout

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Put Gaylord Perry's quest for 300 victories on hold — for the moment.

The ageless righthander, who informed the San Diego Padres 10 days ago that he wanted out, has walked out — vowing to retire if the club doesn't trade him.

"They said it takes time. I don't think they believed me," said Perry, 40, baseball's winningest active pitcher with 279 victories.

Perry announced Tuesday he was returning to his North Carolina home immediately and would give up baseball unless he was traded — preferably to the Texas Rangers.

Padres' officials, still stinging from a $100,000 fine for tampering, said they will ask Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to investigate the walkout.

"It's all a little suspicious," said Padres' General Manager Ballard Smith.

Perry, the only pitcher to win the Cy Young Award in both leagues, dropped the bombshell at a news conference prior to the Padres' game against the San Francisco Giants.

His ultimatum, he said, was based on a desire "to get closer to home." Under questioning, he told reporters he would "like to get back to Texas" where he has been offered a front office position.

The development came a few days after Rangers' owner Brad Corbett reportedly stated on a radio talk show that he was "putting the wheels in motion" to obtain the veteran righthander. Corbett reportedly said he "could get Perry cheap," according to a Padre spokesman.

"If he said that," Smith said, "it's tampering, no question about it. And he's not going to get Gaylord cheap. They've already offered us a second line player, but we turned it down. The offer was unacceptable."

Connors To Meet Unseeded Dupre

NEW YORK (AP) — Anyone who thinks defending champion Jimmy Connors has an easy match today in the U.S. Open quarterfinals because he's playing unseeded Pat DuPre hasn't seen DuPre play lately.

Last year at the Open, Connors eliminated DuPre in a tough third-round match. That loss was a confidence-booster for the 24-year-old from Anniston, Ala., who went on to the semifinals at Wimbledon. DuPre came into this year's U.S. Open with one purpose — winning it all.

"If you don't come here to win but just to play well, you might as well not come," said DuPre, who outlasted seventh-seeded Harold Solomon 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 Tuesday. It was DuPre's second straight upset. He beat No. 13 seed Gene Mayer on Sunday.

Today's other feature matches include top-seed Bjorn Borg of Sweden against No. 5 Roscoe Tanner in a rematch of their Wimbledon final last July; women's top-seed Chris Evert Lloyd, gunning for her fifth consecutive Open title, against No. 5 Evonne Goolagong Cawley and fourth-seed Virginia Wade of Britain against Billie Jean King, who is ranked ninth.

DuPre has no fears of Connors, who whipped Brian Gottfried 6-2, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

"We've played four or five times and every match was close," said DuPre, who has never beaten Connors. "I have nothing to lose against Connors. There's no question the pressure is on him."

Pressure is something Connors, the No. 2 seed, responds to marvelously. In the fourth set of his match Tuesday, Gottfried was serving for the set at 5-4. But Connors, slamming winners from his backhand and forehand, won the next three games with ease for the victory.

Tanner had no trouble with No. 14 seed Tim Gullikson, sweeping to a 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 triumph. John McEnroe, the third seed, easily disposed of unranked Tom Gorman 6-2, 6-4, 6-1. McEnroe, who last played against Ilie Nastase last Thursday in a raucous atmosphere, was unaffected by the layoff and the crowd, so rowdy in the Nastase match, rarely got closely involved in this one.

Lloyd, the top seed among the women, dropped a set in the Open for the first time in four years before rallying past unseeded Sherry Acker 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Acker lost that formula, however, and Lloyd moved on to meet Cawley, the last woman to win a set from Lloyd in the Open, in 1975.

Third-seeded Tracy Austin was extended to the very limit to defeat No. 11 Kathy Jordan 4-6, 6-1, 7-6. Austin won the tiebreaker 7-5.

Unranked Sylvia Hanika of West Germany upset No. 6 Dianne Fromholtz of Australia 6-7, 6-4, 6-4 and No. 8 Kerry Reid of Australia squeaked by Anne Smith 4-6, 7-5, 7-6. Reid won the tiebreaker 7-4.

Reid faces Navratilova, and Austin plays Hanika in the quarterfinals.

Cardinals Closing On Pirates

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

If the National League East is going to become a three-team race, the next two days will tell the story.

The St. Louis Cardinals, winners of five games in a row and 14 of their last 17, have a chance to horn in on what seems to be a two-way scrap between the Pittsburgh Pirates and Montreal Expos. They open a two-game series with the Pirates in St. Louis tonight, trailing by seven games — six in the loss column — following Tuesday's 6-4 victory over the reeling Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates, who were idle Tuesday, have won 24 of their last 33 games.

"We're two hot teams," said Cardinals Manager Ken Boyer. "When two hot teams meet head-to-head, something's got to happen. Right now, with our winning streak, I'd have to say I couldn't feel better going into the series."

The Expos, meanwhile, defeated the New York Mets 5-1 to pull within two games of Pittsburgh and take a club record-tying eight-game winning streak to Chicago for a pair of games with the fourth-place Cubs, who have dropped five in a row and are 10 games out.

Elsewhere, the NL West is only a two-team battle — but what a seesaw battle. The Houston Astros defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 9-4 and recaptured first place from the Cincinnati Reds, who lost to the Atlanta Braves 7-6. The Astros and Reds have swapped positions four times in the last week. In the only other NL game, the San Francisco Giants ended a five-game losing streak by defeating the San Diego Padres 3-1 while the Philadelphia Phillies, along with Pittsburgh, were not scheduled.

Pete Vuckovich fired an eight-hitter for a career-high 13th victory and the Cardinals scored four unearned runs to defeat the Cubs. Jerry Humphrey singled home a run in the first inning and the Cardinals broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the sixth, the runs crossing on George Hendrick's bases-loaded grounder and a wild pitch. Two runs scored in the seventh on an error by Chicago catcher Barry Foote and Keith Hernandez delivered an RBI single in the ninth.

Dave Kingman and Mike Vail homered for the Cubs. Kingman's was his 43rd, breaking a tie with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the major league lead.

"When you get consistent pitching and make the type of contact we make at the plate, it's pretty tough to lose," said Vuckovich, who held the Cubs to one run until the ninth.

"Pitching is always the key," echoed Boyer. "We've been hitting the ball well all year long, but the pitching has been outstanding for the last six weeks. Pitching has made us one of the hottest clubs in the National League and pitching is what will keep us hot if we keep getting consistent performances."

Expos 5, Mets 1

Montreal broke a scoreless game with three runs in the fifth inning on Larry Parrish's double, Chris Speier's single and Dave Cash's sacrifice fly. Rusty Staub added a two-run pinch single in the seventh while Rudy May, Dale Murray and Bill Atkinson held the Mets to six hits.

Astros 9, Dodgers 4

Luis Pujols, just recalled from the minors last week, led a 16-hit attack with a double, triple and two RBIs as Houston moved back into first place in the NL West. The Astros, who hadn't scored nine runs since May 26, erupted for four runs on five consecutive hits — four singles and Pujols' triple — in the third inning.

Braves 7, Reds 6

Bob Horner keyed a three-run seventh inning with a two-run double as the Braves broke a five-game losing streak. Atlanta trailed by a run when Eddie Miller and Gary Matthews opened the seventh with singles against Doug Bair and Horner doubled them home. Horner took third on the throw to the plate and scored the eventual winning run on a sacrifice fly by Dale Murphy. Mike Lum homered for Atlanta, Joe Morgan for Cincinnati, which led 4-2 after 4½ innings.

"You don't figure anything is a cinch in Atlanta," said Cincinnati's Johnny Bench. "They've got some people who can do the job."

Giants 3, Padres 1

Rob Andrews' tie-breaking two-run single in the seventh inning enabled San Francisco to snap a five-game losing streak. John Curtis allowed four hits, struck out eight and retired 16 batters in a row at one stretch before needing relief following a leadoff single in the bottom of the ninth.

What magic does Earl Weaver weave that makes him the best manager in all baseball? "He has good talent to work with but he does a hell of a job manipulating it," concedes Yogi Berra, senior Yankee coach who has managed teams in both the American and National leagues. "He seems always to make the right moves."

"Earl gets more out of his players than anybody I've ever known," adds Reggie Jackson. "He's a fun guy to be around. He's got a steel-trap mind but he manages to keep you loose."

Reggie, who played in three World Series at Oakland under Dick Williams, now at Montreal, declined to identify the other manager in his private "Big Two." Chances are it isn't the New York Yankees' volatile Billy Martin.

This was the year that was supposed to produce another dogfight between the Yanks and Boston Red Sox for the American League East title, and look what happens. Weaver takes an Oriole team rated no better than fourth in the pre-season prognostications and proceeds to run away with the race.

He has picked the pockets of the Red Sox and Yankees. Leaving the Labor Day barrier for the stretch run, the Orioles had the winningest record in either league — 90 victories — with an 8½-game lead over the Milwaukee Brewers, 11 over the Red Sox, 15 over the Yankees.

"You can't say Earl hasn't had injuries like the rest of us," Don Zimmer, the bulbous skipper of the Red Sox, acknowledged. "His best pitcher, Jim Palmer, missed 15 starts.

(Tim) Stoddard was out a long while and so was (Scott) McGregor.

"But Tippy Martinez has been sensational coming out of the bullpen and Earl is getting good performances from guys like Stoddard and (Don) Stanhouse."

One of Weaver's main attributes, in addition to his faculty for inspiring top effort from his players, is patience. Blessed with remarkable baseball instincts, he stays with players when others have soured on them.

Earlier, this year, there was pressure to take Steve Stone out of rotation. Weaver held firm. Stone came through. A similar situation arose a year ago with left-hander Mike Flanagan, who finished 19-15 in 1978 and has just won his 20th this year, first to reach that plateau.

In 11 years as Baltimore manager, longest with the same club of any current skipper, he has won five Eastern Division titles, three American League pennants and one World Series.

During the height of his success, 1969-1974 when he had three straight seasons of 100 victories and over and led the division five out of six times, he was repeatedly passed over for Manager of the Year honors in the AL. The award finally came to him in 1977 when the Orioles tied for second behind the Yankees.

Through 1978, he ranked fourth on the all-time list of major league managers in win-loss percentage. As a major league manager he has never been lower than fourth — that only once, last season — and has not had a losing season since his first year as a manager in 1967 — 22 years straight now above .500 in minors and majors.

"The man is fantastic," says Reggie Jackson. "He has great rapport with the players without diluting any of his authority. The guys love it when he rushes out on the field to confront an umpire. He has a way of really putting on a show."

"He can get sore at a player and chew him out. The next day it's all forgotten. He solves problems head-to-head. He doesn't have as tough a personality as Dick Williams had but he combines firmness with humanness. Guys put out for him. I admire him very much."

In 1960, the Cleveland Indians and Detroit Tigers traded managers, Joe Gordon going from Cleveland to Detroit and Jimmy Dykes going in the other direction.

Long Lived Manager

Earl Weaver has managed the Baltimore Orioles for 11 years, longer than any current manager has been with the same club. He has won five Eastern Division titles, three American League pennants and one World Series in that time. (AP Laser-photo)

'Boom-Boom' Returns To Coach Canadians

MONTREAL (AP) — It took 14 years, but former Montreal Canadiens right wing Bernie "Boom-Boom" Geoffrion has finally come home.

"I am realizing the biggest dream of my life today," said Geoffrion after signing a three-year contract Tuesday to coach the National Hockey League team for which he scored 371 of his 393 career goals.

The Canadiens also announced that Claude Ruel, who served as assistant coach under Scotty Bowman last season, will fill a similar capacity in the 1979-80 campaign.

Even after leaving Montreal at the end of the 1965-66 season to complete the final two years of his illustrious career with the New York Rangers, Geoffrion admitted that he yearned "to finish my life and career with the Canadiens."

His name had been mentioned frequently, along with a handful of other candidates, as a possible successor to Bowman, who resigned last June to join Buffalo Sabres as coach and general manager. But it was not until last weekend that Irving Grundman, managing director of the Canadiens, decided to choose Geoffrion.

"I'm confident we have the right man for the job," said Grundman, of his selection.

Pant-HERS Return 5 Of 6 Spikers

BETHEL — The North Pitt volleyball team returns five of its six starters from last year's squad and, according to Coach Gail Stanfield, will be challengers for the conference crown this year.

"I would like to think North Pitt has a good chance of winning the conference title this year," Stanfield said. "I think D. H. Conley will be another of the top teams, but I think we have a good chance."

"You never can tell, though. It could go to anybody," said Stanfield, who is in her third year at North Pitt.

Returning for the Pant-HERS are Tammy Purvis, Starla Singleton, Debbie Sue Briley, Renaye Vernelson and Connie Dupree all of whom will be playing volleyball for their fourth year.

"Beyond my starters most of my players are very inexperienced," Stanfield noted. "Very few of them have had much experience playing volleyball and we're not going to have a lot of depth because of that."

North Pitt opens its season on September 25 at Ayden-Grifton.

Extra Security Accorded Earl Mountbatten Rites

PROCESSION — The scene from high over London's Admiralty today as the funeral procession for Earl Mountbatten winds its way down the Mall en route to Westminster Abbey for services. The Union Jack draped coffin, born on a Naval gun carriage was drawn by ratings and officers from ships and establishments from throughout Great Britain. (AP Laser-photo)

New Hanover Rejects Bonds

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — New Hanover County voters turned down $32 million in two separate water bond referendums Tuesday.

Wilmington residents turned down a $12 million bond issue offered by the city that would have paid to double its water-treatment capacity. The city bond issue was defeated 2,496-2,263.

New Hanover County voters rejected a $20 million bond issue to pay for a countywide water distribution system that would have fed off the city's treatment plant. The bond issue was rejected 10,885-4,046.

Approval of the bonds was necessary for the Lower Cape Fear Water and Sewer Authority to receive about $10.5 million in federal funding for a proposed regional water pipeline.

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard mounted extraordinary security precautions against Irish terrorist attacks today as foreign delegations and the greatest assemblage of royalty in 27 years gathered for the funeral of Earl Mountbatten.

Police with dogs trained to sniff out bombs combed Westminster Abbey. Security men checked sewers along the route of the funeral procession, and police sharpshooters were posted on buildings along the way.

Armed agents of Scotland Yard's Special Branch guarded the six kings, three queens, nine princes and princesses, Luxembourg's Grand Duke Jean and government leaders from 14 nations who were present. It was the biggest royal gathering since the death in 1952 of King George VI, father of Queen Elizabeth II.

The U.S. delegation was headed by elder statesman W.

Averell Harriman, a personal friend of Mountbatten for 50 years.

No invitation for the funeral was sent to the Japanese government, whose forces in Southeast Asia surrendered in 1945 to Mountbatten as supreme allied commander in that theater. He shunned the Japanese after the war, and Buckingham Palace indicated that he left them off the list he drew up when he planned his funeral several years ago.

The flag-draped coffin of the 79-year-old soldier-statesman and cousin of the queen was to be borne on a gun carriage drawn by 131 Royal Navy officers and enlisted men from St. James's Palace, where it lay in state, to the historic abbey near the Houses of Parliament.

Hundreds of armed detectives were posted along the route as people began gathering behind barricades before dawn. Normal traffic in the heart of the capital was stopped.

The security men were on the lookout for two numbered passes for the abbey area that were missing and possibly stolen. One, for the abbey, had been issued to a construction firm renovating the ancient building. The second, for parking on the Horse Guard's Parade 250 yards from the abbey, was taken from a car that was stolen and abandoned.

Members of the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, fighting a guerrilla war to unite Northern Ireland with the Irish Republic, blew up Mountbatten's fishing boat in Donegal Bay Aug. 27 and a few hours later killed 18 British soldiers with bombs just inside the border of Northern Ireland.

One of Mountbatten's 14-year-old grandsons, his daughter's mother-in-law and a 15-year-old boat boy also were killed.

Irish Prime Minister Jack

Lynch and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher were to meet after the funeral to discuss operations against the IRA, but Lynch has already announced that he would reject Mrs. Thatcher's requests for permission for British troops to cross the Irish border in pursuit of IRA men and for British security men to be present for the questioning of IRA suspects arrested in the republic.

The Irish police have arrested two IRA members and charged them with planting the bomb that killed Mountbatten, and at least four others are being gunned.

Those who DON'T read have no advantage over those who CAN'T.

This is just one of the reasons THE DAILY REFLECTOR is providing a comprehensive Newspaper in Education program to 15 area schools this school year. We feel that students will want to read if they are reading the most up-to-date information possible: the daily newspaper.

The current events program is designed by Visual Education Consultant of Madison, Wis., and is currently used by over 12,000 schools in the U.S. and Canada. THE DAILY REFLECTOR has contracted with VEC to provide weekly current affairs filmstrips free-of-charge to the schools.

Each week, VEC's staff of skilled editors and educators capsule the most important and interesting news. The result is a filmstrip presenting news photos and narrative guides that discuss leading people and events on different vocabulary and concept levels. The materials arrive each week with a complete lesson, including an illustrated 4-page teacher's guide.

In sponsoring this service, THE DAILY REFLECTOR hopes to build an informed reading habit among the young people of this area, teach students varied uses and appeals of the newspaper, show teachers the value of the newspaper as a teaching tool, and help develop young people to become intelligent readers and citizens.

McKinney Is Sentenced

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Former beauty queen Joyce McKinney, involved in an international sex scandal in England last year, received a two-year suspended sentence, three years probation and a $2,000 fine for using a false name to obtain a passport.

Miss McKinney pleaded guilty to the charge in U.S. District Court Tuesday.

Her co-defendant, Keith May of Los Angeles, pleaded guilty to the same charges and was given an indefinite suspended sentence, a three-year probation and a $2,000 fine.

Miss McKinney and May jumped bail last year while they were awaiting trial on allegations by her boyfriend, Mormon missionary Kirk Anderson, that the two abducted him and she forced him to have sex with her after she shackled him to a bed with fur-lined handcuffs.

Miss McKinney, 29, of Minneapolis, N.C., a former Miss Wyoming-USA, said in July she planned to enter a guilty plea. She waived a preliminary hearing and asked to be tried in Asheville instead of Seattle, Wash.

Buckley Sees Reagan Winner

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Political columnist William F. Buckley Jr. says he believes former California Gov. Ronald Reagan will win the 1980 presidential election, defeating Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

"My personal feeling is that Sen. Kennedy is going to run and that he will be beaten," Buckley told an audience of 2,500 at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro Tuesday. "On the other hand, I am always the eternal optimist."

"Quite apart from the fact that I happen to be very fond of Mr. Reagan personally, it is not easy for me to say anything in opposition to someone who says he became a conservative as a result of reading one of my books," Buckley said.

An indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Seattle said Miss McKinney applied for a passport in Seattle two years ago using the name Cathy Vaughn.

'Non-Aligned' Continue To Flay U.S.

Opposes VEPCO Using Projected Fuel Costs

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The State Corporation Commission's staff says any increase in Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s fuel factor should not be more than about $30 million — the amount of actual, not projected, costs.

Veeco asked for a $91 million increase, to cover both the $30.3 million more it spent for fuel than it recovered between January and July and the extra amount it expects to spend by the end of the year.

The SCC will take up Veeco's request at a hearing Friday.

SCC General Counsel Richard Rogers Jr. said in the staff report issued Tuesday it was too hard to judge what the utility's future fuel costs to include them in the fuel factor adjustment.

"The conditions which have affected both the company's actual and projected expenses are extremely unusual, and the magnitude of future expenses continues to be uncertain."

One of the problems in anticipating Veeco's fuel costs is the difficulty in figuring out how much power the utility will be able to generate at its nuclear plants.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission orders shut down two units earlier this year, forcing a switch to more expensive coal and oil generation. And a second nuclear unit at North Anna is expected to go on line sometime toward the end of the year.

The utility suggested two plans to collect the requested $91 million.

One would tack on the whole amount to customers' bills over the last three months of the year. That would raise the average residential monthly bill of 1,000 kilowatt hours from $56.75 in September to $64.47 in October.

The other would spread out the recovery over the last three months of this year and the first six months of 1980.

The SCC staff also recommended Friday's hearing be limited to a review of the fuel factor and not include Veeco's request for a general rate increase totaling $109 million.

The $109 million includes a request for an $18 million increase to begin Oct. 1 to recover a shortfall Veeco said it experienced and a $46 million hike to become effective Dec. 1 to cover startup costs for North Anna Unit 2.

It also covers a request for a basic revenue-generating increase of $45 million to start July 1, 1980.

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
HAVANA, Cuba (AP) — U.S. charges that the Kremlin controls Fidel Castro's foreign policy and that he is trying to extend this control to the Non-Aligned Movement are generating heated debate at the movement's sixth summit meeting.

Mozambique's Marxist president, Samora Michel, ridiculed the notion that the Cuban president is not his own man in a speech Tuesday. Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley also defended Castro, the movement's president for the next three years, and attacked the United States.

Addressing the Cuban leader directly as he sat nearby in the Palace of Congresses, Manley said:

"Those among the developed countries who seek to malign you and your country as a surrogate acting upon foreign orders mistake the Cuban revolution, mistake the Non-Aligned Movement and mistake the man Fidel Castro."

His speech amounted to a rebuttal of the Carter Administration's concerted effort to improve U.S. relations with Jamaica.

"No other area of the world has had more extended exposure to, experience with and more proximity to imperialism than Latin America and the Caribbean," said Manley.

Meanwhile, 87-year-old President Josip Broz Tito of Yugoslavia, the last surviving founder of the Non-Aligned Movement, made a veiled attack on the draft declaration Cuba is sponsoring to condemn the United States on numerous counts and align the movement with Soviet foreign policy.

"We have never consented to be anyone's rubber stamp or preserve, as this is incompatible with the essence of non-alignment," said Tito in a speech filled with innuendo and nuance.

"We have never taken sides with any bloc. We have from the outset been consistently opposed to bloc policies and foreign domination, to all forms of political and economic hegemony, and in favor of the right of each and every country to freedom, independence and autonomous development."

Tito was applauded only occasionally, in contrast to the frequent, enthusiastic bursts that punctuated Castro's anti-

American keynote speech that opened the summit meeting Monday.

Most of the other speakers during the 11 hours of sessions Tuesday were concerned with Middle East problems. Arab leaders intensified their attacks on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat but stopped short of leading him out of the movement.

Embroidery Workshop

A workshop for embroidery teachers will be offered by Pitt Community College Thursday and Friday, September 6 and 7, with registration Thursday at 9 a.m., Room 103, Humber Building. Registration fee will be $5.

Participants in the workshop will study course planning, the use of audiovisual equipment for teaching, and techniques for making printed material more attractive.

Classes will begin at Smith Ceramics September 11-13, with classes meeting for 14 weeks from 7-10:30 p.m.

An off campus sewing class will be sponsored by PCC, beginning September 6, 8:30 a.m. Classes will meet each Tuesday and Thursday from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m.

For more information on these classes, contact the Office of Continuing Education, Pitt Community College, 756-3130.

Jury Duty Phone-In-A Time-Saver

By RANDALL V. BERLAGE
WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI)
— At 5:30 p.m., a Larchmont housewife picks up the telephone, dials a number in White Plains, and then begins making plans for the next day.

An IBM executive in Dutchess County is conducting business as usual, even though he may get a call from that same White Plains phone number any time later in the day.

Both persons are participating in the "Juror Phone-In System" put into full use earlier this year in New York State's 9th Judicial District. Officials say the system has saved thousands of dollars for the state, as well as countless hours normally wasted by people assigned to jury duty.

"It's been a tremendous success and adds a new dimension and vitality to the administration of justice," says Joseph Gagliardi, administrative judge of the 9th judicial district, which is made up of five suburban and rural counties north of New York City.

The system, which is beginning to be used in other areas of the country, is simple.

All people assigned to jury duty report on the first day of their two-week term and are given a number between 1 and 999. That night they call a special telephone number and a voice rattles off a series of numbers of veniremen who will be required to report the following day.

"The following jurors will report to the central grand jury room at 9 a.m.: 16, 22, 64, 112, 114, 120 ..."

The process is then repeated daily, with jurors chosen at random from a rotating barrel inside the office of the Commissioner of Jurors.

A variation on the basic system is the One-Hour Notification Plan, under which prospective jurors must provide a phone number where they can be reached if more than the expected number of cases go to trial.

"The reaction to the system has been overwhelming," Gagliardi said. "We find we're not wasting the jurors' time as we did before. Those who show up are assigned for voir dire — pre-trial jury screening — and we're saving money because we don't have to pay jurors their daily $8 fee or the 15 cents for mileage if they don't report."

In July, 31 juries were picked in Westchester County at a cost of $40,361. One year earlier, only 16 juries were selected, but the cost to the state was $46,367.

"As you can see from the July figures, in that month we got nearly twice as many juries picked and into trials for $6,000 less," says Nicholas Federici, Gagliardi's administrative assistant and one of those credited with spearheading the system.

Before the district switched to the system, Federici says the process of calling an adequate number of jurors was a "hit and miss" proposition.

"The Commissioner of Jurors must send jury-duty notification letters out 28 days in advance. It's very hard to predict that far ahead how many jurors you're going to need. Some cases get settled and others are postponed."

"The result was you had a lot of people sitting around for hours or days doing nothing and really resenting jury duty. We had a 65 percent utilization rate before the phone-in system."

"Now we're up over 90 percent and we're getting letters from jurors complimenting the system and thanking us for letting them be a part of the judicial system."

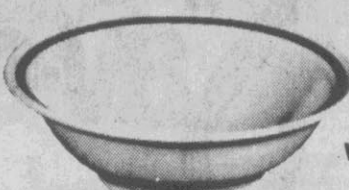

Westchester needs between 250-400 jurors on a given week, but they are not each needed on a given day. "For example, very few trials start on a Friday. Some do, so we may need some people, but most we can tell by the phone-in system not to bother to show up," Federici says.

About 20 percent of jurors in Westchester choose to go on one-hour alert. "These are mostly housewives or business executives who live or work somewhat near White Plains," Federici says. "It's harder with people who work in the city (New York) or Connecticut."

"In Dutchess County, since many more people work there, 67 percent of jurors choose the one-hour notification."

'Foggy Bottom' Has No Known Links To State Dept.

By ELIZABETH WHARTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It used to be said of my neighborhood, during its ethnic phase, "if you picked a fight with an Irishman at 17th street you'd have to fight every other Irishman down to the river at 27th."

I live in an alley in Foggy Bottom, a wedge of a neighborhood in the heart of Washington. It runs from the White House on the east to Georgetown on the west, with the Potomac River and Rock Creek forming a wandering hypotenuse. Within that invisible boundary are such landmarks as the massive headquarters of the State Department, the box-like Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, the Corcoran Gallery and School of Art, George Washington University and — not least — the Watergate complex where the Democratic National Committee offices in 1972 suffered a "third rate" burglary that brought down a president. The residents make for a heterogeneous mixture of government workers and artists, wealthy retirees and working students, and a solid core of upper middle class singles and childless couples.

The neighborhood has been called Foggy Bottom for decades. The miasma from the river and from the gas works which for years occupied the tract where the Watergate now stands, may have given the low-lying area its name. Nobody seems sure, and there are those who believe it refers to the area's notorious past.

But the name can't be traced — as some have tried — to the environment created by the State Department. The diplomats didn't move in until the 1950's, 100 years or so after the name was indelibly inscribed in the city's plat books.

Foggy Bottom today is one of the quietest, safest, most convenient — (the neighborhood has its own subway stop) — and most expensive neighborhoods in the nation's capital. It was not always so.

Foggy Bottom originally consisted of a few sparsely populated acres with one tiny township — Hamburg — and two plantations named "Mexico" and "Widow's Mite." All were incorporated into the new City of Washington in 1791. The area's early growth was even slower. In 1816 it cost 25 cents — a considerable sum in those days — to cross Foggy Bottom by horse-drawn vehicle from Georgetown to the President's House. The distance was all of two miles.

Today, Foggy Bottom is densely populated, its tiny brick row houses almost eclipsed by high-rise apartments with swimming pools or penthouses on their roofs.

In 1800, according to a thesis written by George Washington University student Suzanne Berry Sherwood, Foggy Bottom's residents consisted of a carpenter, an architect, a pump borer, a stone cutter, a Negro family and a family of German immigrants.

Gradually the growth of wharves and industries along the river drew workers' families and the tract became a solid middle-class neighborhood. It was almost evenly divided between Irish and German families on the street fronts: the saying was that the Irish would fight and the Germans would clean up after them — and blacks in the alleys.

Those alleys. In some cities, the interiors of city blocks are deliberately designed as "mews" — cul de sacs with houses bunched around a single entrance from the street.

That's not the way it happened in Washington, or in other cities rimming the South. Here the alley houses — almost always small brick rowhouses — were built mostly to house the freed or escaped slaves who found haven in the federal city around the time of the Civil War.

The District calls them Alley Dwellings. It tried for years to do away with them altogether, and did manage, before the developers took over, to reduce their numbers from 2,000 or more around the turn of the century to probably less than 200 now.

Georgetown was the first to recognize the appeal of the little houses — developers bought them for next to nothing or at tax sales, gutted and redid them with luxurious fittings. They sold at huge profits.

Foggy Bottom and Capitol Hill were next. My alley — Snow's Court — was developed in the early 1950s by a young medical student and his wife, Jonas and Jean Robitscher, with the aid of one of Washington's best known contractors, Russell Eldridge.

My house is 12 feet wide and 26 feet long, with a postage-stamp-sized patio. It has two bedrooms and a bath upstairs, a living room with fireplace and a tiny kitchen on the first floor, and a basement fit only for storage and for the air conditioning, heating and laundry equipment.

A friend claims a retired policeman who had spent some time on foot patrol in Foggy Bottom once told him he was literally afraid to enter Snow's Court.

There are seven houses in my row, and sixteen others in the court. There were nearly 40 when the Robitschers took their big gamble in 1952-53.

I was the first to buy one of their houses and move into what was then regarded as one of the most notorious slums in Washington.

It was not as crowded as most city slums, nor as rundown. But for many years it had been a staging area for crime in the city's heart and its notoriety lingered. Most of the crime rings had been broken up and scattered long before I moved in, but for the first five years almost every other taxicab driver I encountered would flatly refuse to take me to Snow's Court.

During the years between the early 1920s and the early 1950s drug traffic, prostitution and gambling flourished openly and danger lurked in every shadow.

A friend claims a retired policeman who had spent some time on foot patrol in Foggy Bottom once told him he was literally afraid to enter Snow's Court.

"I would stand at the entrance to the alley and holler, 'Anybody want a cop? If anybody did, I'd call the station house for help.'"

You'd never know it now. All of the houses in the neighborhood have been either refinished or torn down and built from scratch, and they're sandwiched between high-rise luxury apartments, condominiums and hotels fanning out from the Kennedy Center and the Watergate.

It's more comfortable living there now, I guess. But it was a lot more fun to watch — and have a hand in — the transformation.

Opening lead: Ace of ♣.

If you were to conduct a poll to determine the greatest American bridge player of all time, the odds are that Howard Schenken, who died earlier this year, would emerge the winner. However, we remember the time he fell victim to a clever falsecard by Helen Sobel, a regular on the Goren team, in the finals of the Vanderbilt Cup which accounted for almost half the Goren team's winning margin.

There was nothing unusual about the auction, and the same contract was reached in both rooms. The early play also took the same course.

West led the ace of clubs and continued the suit. Dummy's king won, and at both tables declarer took a long time to plan the play, since there were several lines available. Each declarer came up with the same line of play — to discard one spade on the king of clubs and to ruff the other two, trying to limit the losses to one club and two trump tricks.

After shuffling a spade, Silodor, for the Goren team, continued with a spade to the ace and a spade ruff. He cashed the ace and king of diamonds, everyone following with low diamonds, and then guessed to return to his hand with a diamond to ruff his last spade. He was thus able to hold his losers to one trump trick to East and a club overruff to West.

In the other room, when Schenken cashed the ace and king of diamonds, Helen followed suit with the eight and the queen, concealing the six! Schenken now had to decide which minor suit to ruff to get back to his hand. He chose to believe his opponent's diamond plays, so he tried ruffing a club with the six of trumps. Helen overruffed with the eight and return a trump. Declarer had to lose a trump trick to East, and in addition, he was still stranded with a spade loser for down one.

The Goren team scored 620 points in one room and 100 in the other, thanks to Helen's brilliant play.

Have you been running into double trouble? Let Charles Goren help you find your way through the maze of DOUBLES for penalties and for takeout. For a copy of his DOUBLES booklet, send $1.85 to "Goren-Doubles," c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS.

Orson's Voice May Be Biggest Thing On The Tube

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The voice of Orson on "Mork and Mindy," ABC's top-rated comedy, may be the biggest sound on television. Its owner, Ralph James, a one-time stevedore, has the build for it.

He rumbles when he whispers.

Orson, a god-like presence on the faraway planet Ork, listens to Mork's report at the end of each weekly show and comments, often bemusedly, sometimes crossly, from across distant space.

Orson is never seen. But the voice can vibrate your TV set, two lamps and a sofa 10 feet away.

In a restaurant interview over lunch, an interchange in normal voices, James' Orsonian tones suddenly stopped other conversation and paralyzed several persons not used to celestial dictum with lunch.

It was just a sample, however. He continued in people-like tones.

"The show's producers were looking for a big voice and I developed the character with a associate producer Jim O'Keefe. He worked with me to get the right feel," James said in a conversational tone.

"Orson is supposed to be a very large person and, although emotionless, he at times gets involved but tries not to.

"Mork can show emotions, though. He's sort of an Orkan Tom Sawyer, so he was sent to Earth to study humans."

James is thoughtful in answering questions about Orson and interjects Orkan lore not heard on the show — the supporting fantasy that helps the actor become the character.

"I don't know if Orson is great in a religious sense, a sense of omnipotence. But he is a potent force. Mork is the only person who doesn't march to his drumbeat.

"Ork, you know, is very advanced in technology in the universe," he said.

At the end of the show, the interchange between Mork and Orson often ends with the Orkan sprite referring to the celestial voice as "Your Blimpness."

"The script probably said, 'Your Immenseness.' Don't forget, Mork is a test tube creation. Something could have gone biochemically awry at his birth."

James developed the voice in radio and on the stage of the Globe Theater in San Diego, after five years as a stevedore in his native San Pedro, the harbor district of Los Angeles.

He went back to the docks for a while after a stint as a medical corpsman with a Marine unit during World War II, then decided to study with a professional radio school in Hollywood.

His first on-the-air job was in a station in Bastrup, La.

"It was a small place near the Arkansas line, as desolate a place as you could imagine," he said.

"Radio in those days was like being in the minor leagues in baseball. You refined your talents until you reached bigger markets."

The bigger markets, from his launching pad in Bastrup, were Lake Charles, La., to Harlingen, Texas, to Fresno, Calif.

He was fired from his all-night disc jockey position in Fresno for letting kids come in the studio and dance to the music.

He was working as a disc jockey in San Diego in the late 1950s. "One day I woke up and decided I didn't want to be a 40-year-old disc jockey."

He went on the news of the station, KCBQ, and the announcer's position eventually landed him a job at the ABC-owned station in Los Angeles.

In 1964 he started free-lancing as an actor, a job that's landed him in 10 movies, 41 television shows and about 5,000 voice-over commercials in radio and television, many of them in different voices and dialects.

James is married for the

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's Full Moon brings considerable activity in many areas but is best where sudden, surprising opportunities arise. Do nothing that is not worthwhile. Accept changes taking place by accepting new conditions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Stop worrying about what you can do little about and make your life more interesting by meeting new personalities and getting into new activities.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A good friend could be of assistance in gaining a special aim you have. Rising above disappointment is easy now. Relax and rest tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Use your intellect and improve home condition and the position you have within your community. Show that you are alert to everything around you. Take no risks with reputation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) adopt more worthwhile principles so that your life becomes more ideal, happy and prosperous. Do something kind for friends and gain their goodwill.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Find the best method for handling monetary and property matters. Add to present assets. Take no risks in driving.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on how best to gain personal aims and follow through with best ideas. Join with congenial persons and have a good time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get together with experts and gain the expertise you need to make your work more efficient and profitable. Be more understanding of kin.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to improve the relationship between your mate and close ties. Perfect some talent you possess that will give you added prestige.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 11 to Dec. 21) Bring your finest talents to the attention of higher-ups you know and gain their support. Get involved in community work that could help you succeed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Off to new places early and meet those who can help to make your future brighter and more enviable. You get ideas from the most unexpected sources. Follow the best of these.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) With the Full Moon you are now able to handle responsibilities well. Make sure your activity with loved ones is in the right direction.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Contact the right associates for any plan you have in mind, whether of a personal or a business nature. Show you get along well with everyone.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will forge right ahead at work needed for any project. Give the benefit of healthful sports to build up the body. Some musical talent here, also, that should be trained.

'Breaking Up' Adds Up To A Fair Soap Opera

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Breaking Up Is Hard To Do," ABC's first major event of the new season, is about six men who "gain new insight into what ... loving and being a man is all about." Or so its publicity purports.

What being a man is all about, according to this four-hour movie (tonight and Friday), is alcoholism, woman hating and beating up the guy whose beach house hospitality made possible this summer of insight. Oh, yeah, and tears; tears at every chance (and there are many), tears to show that men aren't really just macho automatons.

Oh, the anguish of being male. Oh, how fragile the masculine condition. Oh, baloney.

Disasters rain from the sky in torrents — cancer, automobile accidents, abortions, sexual inadequacy, near-drownings ... even a gang fight. Then after each little tragedy, the victim gathers his pals and cries — this is insight and sensitivity.

But, the thing is well-acted and there are plenty of familiar faces; those elements, mixed with all the tragedy, comprise a failsafe formula, and, if you go for that sort of thing, good entertainment. This will draw big Nielsen numbers.

The central character is aging macho-man Frank Scapa (Robert Conrad), a bitter and angry Hollywood agent who makes a religion of his newly imposed bachelorhood. His temple is a lent beach house at Malibu, where he chases pretty bikini-clad beachthings and pretends to have a good time.

He somehow sells this life to his five pals, also movie folk of various occupation and also recently divorced or separated from their wives (hereafter known as "The Barracudas"). The fellas call themselves the "Split Ends" and agree to meet every weekend at Frank's place for fun, frivolity and, of course, the baring of souls.

Ted Bessell has cancer and realizes he used it to get out of a dead marriage. Tony Musante is a sex-hungry Italian who falls in love with a young woman who doesn't want a commitment.

Good-looking Jeff Conaway ("Taxi") plays a talent agency

"house stud" who (oh, the irony of it) "gets off on power" rather than sex. He gets to utter lines like, "I'm not the bloody-taloned stud you seem to

Affirms Church Schools Lack Absolute Freedom

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's fundamentalist Christian churches do not have "absolute freedom of religion" Appeals Court Judge Richard Erwin said in upholding the decision of a lower court Tuesday.

The state Court of Appeals upheld the state's authority to require that church-operated day care centers for children obtain health and safety licenses. The case involved 11 fundamentalist Christian churches.

The church-affiliated centers have opposed state licensing. Erwin wrote the decision which ordered them to obtain licenses from the N.C. Child Day-Care Licensing Commission or close.

The churches contended that licensing requirements by the state were unconstitutional violations of their freedom of religion. State Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr., attorney for the churches, said they would probably appeal the decision.

A unanimous three-judge panel said the state standards are aimed at only minimal health and safety requirements and do not interfere with religious freedom.

"The license in question does not relate to defendants' ministry in any manner, but to the condition of the physical facility," the ruling said.

"While their freedom to believe remains inviolate, their freedom to act is subject to reasonable regulation for the protection of society," Erwin wrote in his opinion.

The churches were sued by the state last October in the licensing dispute. The church-run day-care centers refused to renew their licenses or turned in their licenses.

The schools did make available, however, information that they were complying with local fire, health and safety regulations.

Wake County Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith heard the original trial last December. He denied the church's request that the state's suit be dismissed, and granted the state's request for a preliminary injunction prohibiting the churches from operating any day care facility without a valid license.

No Comment On Cutback Rumor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An official of Textile Industries Inc. of Greensboro refused Tuesday to confirm or deny reports that the company is planning to cut back 10 percent of its work force.

Glenn Grandin, Textile financial vice president, said the company is making an across-the-board cut in its work force. But he said the company has "tried to stay away from giving specific figures."

Textile, which makes double-knits and textured polyester, employed 3,500 people before it started the cutback. The company's headquarters are in Greensboro and it has offices in New York and plants in New Bern, Asheboro, Goldsboro, Rocky Mount, Fayetteville, Kinston, Liberty and Swepsonville.

Justice Also Is A Writer

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Edwin Torres does a lot of his novel writing while driving to his job as an Acting Justice of the New York Supreme Court.

"I carry pieces of yellow paper in my pocket," the 48-year-old Torres explains with a smile. "I'll be driving along and all of a sudden I'll hear voices in my head, dialogue. So, when I stop for a traffic light, I write it down and then drive on when the light changes."

"When I get home in the evening, I'll take what I've written on those slips and work it into my manuscript."

Torres has written three novels. His latest is "After Hours," a tough, realistic story of crime, corruption and violence.

A slender, easy-spoken man, Torres, who lives in New York City with his wife and their four daughters, came late to writing.

"I was about 44 when I wrote my first novel, 'Carlito's Way,'" he says. "For years I'd been complaining about scenes I'd see on television or in the movies or read in books. I kept telling my wife that I didn't think they were authentic, that the people shown didn't really act or talk that way."

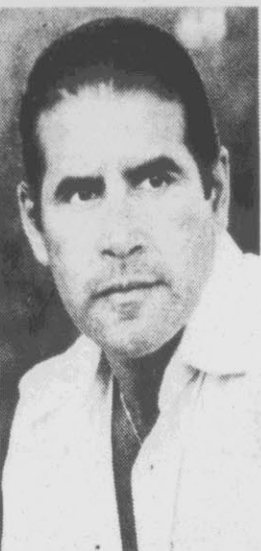

"Finally, she got tired of listening to me and said, 'If you can do it better, do it.' I said, 'I will.' I sat down, wrote my novel, and, lo and behold, it was published."

"The whole thing was quite a surprise. You see, I hate to write. When I was serving in the Navy I hated to write letters."

Returning home to New York from the service, Torres says, "I had no idea of what to do with myself. My father, who came to this country from Puerto Rico as did my mother, told me there was a dearth of people of Puerto Rican background in the law. My dad was a kind of frustrated lawyer. He spoke English and at times he would go to court and speak for neighbors of ours who didn't have English. He pushed me. He kept telling me to get schooling, and I did."

After graduation from Brooklyn Law School, which he helped put himself through "doing a lot of mental stuff — waiter, delivery boy" — Torres first worked in the district attorney's office, then went into private law practice.

He did that for about 16 years, working often as a defense attorney. "That experience helped me in my writing," Torres says. "Compared to a prosecutor or a judge, a defense attorney gets much wider exposure. Dealing with literally thousands of criminal cases, I handled everything — rape, murder — and this gave me an endless variety of experiences to draw on."

"Add to that the fact that I've served as a New York City Criminal Court Judge and am now with the Supreme Court and you see that I've covered all aspects of the criminal-justice system."

Torres says he currently has no book going, partly because of his job demands and partly "because it's warm out."

"My muse," he says with a laugh, "is a cold-weather muse. It's a strange thing, but I have to be more or less locked in before I can write."

"During warm weather, I walk around a total blank as far as writing is concerned. But when it gets cold outdoors, usually in January, the muse arrives. Characters appear to me and I hear voices in my head. It's like I have secret tapes in me."

"Then I can't get it down fast enough. I'll sit down about midnight and write most of the night. I'll sleep a couple of hours and then get up and go to work. Obviously, I can't keep up this sort of pace for too long so I write my books in about five weeks."

"And the first thing I write is the best. I do very little rewriting. I may not be the world's best writer but I've got to be one of the fastest."

("After Hours" is published by Dial Press.)

Kansans Bid For Another State Image

By PAUL STEVENS
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Ever since L. Frank Baum told how a tornado lifted Dorothy Gale from her Kansas farm home and carried her to the Land of Oz, some Kansans have cringed at the image his classic story gave the state.

To generations who read "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" or saw the movie starring Judy Garland, the mention of Kansas conjured up thoughts of tornadoes, flat land, dust and drabness.

Now Kansas officials have set out to dispel such somber impressions created by the 1900 book and the 1939 movie. Employing the adage "When life gives you lemons, make lemonade," Kansas is unashamedly becoming "The Land of Ah's."

That pun is the promotional slogan adopted this year by the Kansas Department of Economic Development to attract tourists.

The 1976 national tourism figures show Kansas 33rd among the 50 states with travel-generated expenditures of $975.5 million.

Harriet Lange, director of the KDED's travel and tourism division, is counting on the mythical Dorothy, her dog Toto and traveling companions Scarecrow, Tin Woodsman and Cowardly Lion to lead Kansans up the yellow brick road to greater tourism.

And some other Kansans are following suit.

The city of Liberal and the Seward County Historical Society are remodeling a farm home into a replica of the house depicted in Baum's book and the movie. Wichita officials are using the book's characters in promotional advertisements that say, "Here's the Land You Heard Of." Topeka officials plan to use the Oz theme for a children's festival in October.

Kansas gets some sympathy from Allen Pearson, director of the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Forecast Center and a tornado expert.

"It's a delightful story (the book) but a little unfair," says Pearson, noting that Texas, Oklahoma and Florida rank ahead of Kansas in frequency of tornadoes.

Baum described Kansas as "gray" numerous times in his 1900 book. The movie in 1939 further heightened the impression by presenting Kansas scenes in black and white, then switching to full color when Dorothy arrived in the Land of Oz.

Some Kansans take umbrage, saying the sky is nearly always clear and free of the pollution of more populous areas. They say Baum never visited Kansas and probably was describing the prairie land of South Dakota, where he edited a small newspaper in the late 1890s.

Feelings toward the promotion are not all favorable, however.

After receiving the package and a bumper sticker in the mail, Robert Wellington, publisher of the Ottawa (Kan.) Herald, wrote in a column that when he showed the sticker to his advertising staff "three members laughed and one member threatened to throw up ... Our hope is the sticker doesn't get wide distribution."

Officials at some of the state's largest tourist attractions believe the promotional program will help their business.

"It's got to help in the sense of just drawing attention to what we have in Kansas," said Jim Sherer, executive director of Boot Hill, a re-creation of Dodge City's gun-slinger days.

Sights in Kansas that state officials believe will draw "ahs" from visitors are the rolling Flint Hills, one of the world's finest cattle-grazing areas; the Dyche Museum of Natural History at the University of Kansas; the town of Lindsborg, "Little Sweden USA"; even the golden wheat fields at harvest time.

Return Mice To Lost & Found

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Ten laboratory mice were recently turned in at the Prague Central Lost and Found Office.

Mice are unusual among the finds turned in to the office. Most frequent are bags, coats, sweaters and umbrellas. The office has also received soccer balls and auto tires.

Panic, Pa. Is False Name Adopted By Community

ONLY THE WEEDS — Mr. and Mrs. Howard North of Panic, Pa., are the profusion of weeds that attack their garden. (UPI Photo)

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter
PANIC, Pa. (UPI) — Mr. and Mrs. Howard North are trying to recall when Panic had woe. "I guess it'd have to have been the time we had the tall fellow," said Mrs. North, 73. Her knitting dropped to her lap. "Or maybe it was the tornado," said her husband, 75. "But I guess the tornado did Panic a good turn."

Nearby towns are named Paradise and Desire. They appeared a century ago on the maps of the lands northeast of Pittsburgh and their coal fueled the steel mills and the snow came neck-high each winter. The world rumbled beyond the hills but Panic was never stricken.

"Trouble ain't our way," North said. The retired state highway official sat in a small living room he paneled himself, forming something of still another wall against the world beyond Panic.

"The tall man was not outside trouble," his wife said. "Poor man was born here. He was young but too tall. He had to stoop to come through that door." She gestured a knitting needle at the kitchen door.

"He was over seven feet," her husband said. "Gland trouble. His name was Lynn and his folks were poor. They didn't have a bed big enough for Lynn so each night he laid down on a line of chairs set side by side."

"We knew he was dying. He was only 27 but he was dying and Lynn had no bed to die in," Mrs. North said.

"A man needs a bed to die in," her husband said. "So we did the country thing. Panic takes care of its own. A bunch of the fellows and me went hunting up in attics and we found two unused beds and fitted them together."

"And Lynn, he was so happy, he could lie down in a bed and die."

Mrs. North resumed her knitting. "That was more than 50 years ago," she said.

Like most of the 50 or so residents of Panic, the Norths were born here. "People don't move in. They move out," North said.

West on the town's one road Terry Jacobson, 20, agreed. "It does little here but snow."

"But there ain't no panic here," said her young man caller, Bill Clements of Punxutawney.

"We have no grocery store, no gas station, no bar, no cafe, no post office, nothing but a car body shop," she said.

"And no panic," Clements said, moving closer to Miss Jacobson on the porch railing. "I guess the biggest thing in Panic is leaving," Miss Jacobson said.

"That's no panic," Clements said.

"I think that when I'm old, though, I'd like to move back here and live," she said.

"Panic," said Clements.

The Norths' house sits on a manicured green lawn, backed by a garage as neat as a child's new playhouse and a one-room shop North built from remnants of his father's barn. The flowers and the weeping willows and the green grass are the summer's dessert after a winter menu of snow.

"Folks do move away," North said. "Our daughter's gone to Portage. You know, I don't think a congressman's been in Panic for 20 years." He smiled. "Wouldn't know by what you read in the Pittsburgh newspapers."

"Panic is a false name, really. This was really named Shamokin, an Indian name. But when they were putting in the post office we once had, the Post Office said there already was a Pennsylvania town named Shamokin."

"Well, there was a panic, or depression, on at the moment. So we got named Panic."

His wife smiled. "Nearest I came to panic I didn't realize it. I was out on the back porch two years ago and the sky was black with clouds and I called to Howard that in the back yard was this white cloud. Like a big white V. And it was twisting and moving."

North nodded. "I told her to come on in. That was a tornado."

"The tornado did some good. It gave Panic its first forest walk. The tornado cut a long, long swatch through the forest and gave us a walk. We take the woodland walk sometimes."

Mrs. North frowned. "Not me anymore. Saw one of those three black bears taking the walk, too. I prefer not to stroll with wild bears."

They laughed.

"Some call it Panic. We call it home," she said.

Her husband nodded. "We think that sometimes the rest of the world is Panic, not us here."

They laughed.

"Some call it Panic. We call it home," she said.

Her husband nodded. "We think that sometimes the rest of the world is Panic, not us here."

Resident Artist Goes To Prison

By RICK VAN SANT
MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (UPI) — "Get me into a prison," said classical pianist Lorin Hollander to Sondra Ross, who arranged his unusual five-day "residency" in this city of 50,000.

Mrs. Ross arranged for Hollander to perform in a prison — and in a paraplegic center, a day care center, a senior citizens center, a shopping center, an elementary school, a middle school and a high school, not to mention a number of scheduled concerts, a teaching session for piano teachers and a speech to officials from surrounding cities.

For Middletown, in southwestern Ohio, the five-day "Lorin Hollander Residency" is an arts dream come true.

Mrs. Ross, 40, a mother of three, was the prime mover in bringing Hollander — an artist sought after by symphony orchestras around the world — to Middletown.

"We negotiated with Lorin's agent, but we're not getting a cut rate," said Mrs. Ross during Hollander's stay here in April. "We're paying top dollar. Just how much we're paying is a very delicate question, but it is in five figures."

Mrs. Ross and a crew of fund-raisers finally convinced area businesses, groups and individuals that bringing an artist such as Hollander into the city for five days was worth the price.

"We had to educate people that the arts are not free," she said. "Lorin is making a good amount from this, but he's earning every penny. Quality artists don't come cheap. We hope to make an artists' residency in Middletown an annual event."

Hollander, a child prodigy at age 3 who has been playing and teaching classical music for more than 20 of his 35 years, considered it another opportunity to pursue his dream — take classical music and his "classical" philosophy to people who have not yet found it.

Hollander has previously played concerts in the streets of Harlem and for Philadelphia youth gangs. He said he was overjoyed to play classical music for the inmates in the gymnasium of nearby Lebanon Correctional Institute, a medium-security state prison.

"I believe I have a responsibility to share my gift with more than just people who are looking for it — those who come to the concert halls," he said. "I find it an interesting possibility to bring music to those who have not yet found it, maybe weren't looking for it, perhaps didn't even know it was there."

"Often," Hollander said, "there are gifted people who did not have an outlet for their creativeness and started to use these forces in destructive ways. And we find vandalism, cruelty and greed as the victors."

"I find that classical music can deal with the struggle of good and evil in every person. And if prisoners can see one human being balancing these forces at a piano, then it's a shared experience of emotional value."

Hollander said prison officials have told him that his prison performances have sometimes prompted inmate "loners" to start reading, drawing and participating in school programs.

The Aimless Driver Feels Fuel Crunch

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR
ATLANTA (UPI) — The gasoline shortage, already changing the lifestyle of millions of Americans, affects thousands of people with a little known psychological problem. They are called "night riders." "Night riders," as defined by Dr. Alfred Messer, an Atlanta psychologist, are people who encounter emotional problems when they come home at night from work. Unable to handle family squabbles and problems, they jump into their cars and drive aimlessly for hours until they "cool off," Messer said. Messer said the "night riders" are simply wasting gas. "Instead of going to a service station they should go to a psychiatrist's station," he said. Based on the experience of his own practice and what his colleagues tell him, Messer estimates there are thousands of emotionally-disturbed people who view their cars as a way to isolate themselves from the world and their problems. The "night riders" will be among the first to be affected by the short gasoline supplies, Messer said.

"These are people who try to solve their conflicts, anxieties and tensions by using the traditional American idea of mobility, control, power and isolation," he said. "They get in their cars, roll up the windows and turn on the air conditioner and radio. They feel that they are the masters of their own fate. They can travel in any direction they want to for as long as they want to." Messer, a psychoanalyst who specializes in family practice, said obsessive, compulsive, paranoid people encounter many of their problems at night when they go home. He cited the case of a father unable to get along with his three children. "He would jump into his Porsche and drive 100 miles an hour. After about two hours he would cool off. Also, by that time, the children had cooled off."

"When he got into his Porsche and drove furiously off into the night, he was in command of all those horses and it gave him a sense of power," Messer said.

Many "night riders" are loners. They are of all ages and they include women as well as men," Messer said, relating the case of a woman patient living with her parents who would drive her car for hours following an argument at home. Messer said the car affords a form of what he called "splendid isolation" and that automobile names, such as Wildcat, Cougar and Fury impart a sense of power.

Messer said he once suggested that car manufacturers change to such names as "marigold" and "canary" but it didn't go over very well.

"What I foresee is that as the president evolves his energy program, our whole lifestyle has to change, including people who use cars in a way to resolve interpersonal problems that could be resolved in other ways. They will become the first who will have to change their ways. People who do this must realize it's possible to handle this in a more satisfactory way."

"Not only is the method they use self-defeating, it defeats all of us and it defeats them, too," Messer said. "Driving aimlessly at night is at best only a temporary solution."

He urged "night riders" to seek counseling at community mental health centers, where there is no charge or only a minimal fee, or go to a private psychiatrist, where "the fee is pretty well geared to the income of that individual."

Timers Help

Conserve Energy

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Washington University is saving energy with automatic timers on the lights in the first-floor book-stacks in Olin Library.

The lights are turned on manually from switches on the shelves, and go out automatically after 30 minutes. They must be turned on again by hand for another 30-minute cycle.

The university said it believes the new system will cut the time the lights are on by half for a savings of about $20,000 a year.

BAN IMITATIONS

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The Saudi Arabian government has banned import of non-alcoholic imitations of beer, the newspaper Arab news reports.
