Hurricane Frederic Aims Big Blow At Gulf Coast

By JOE MAGRUDER
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Frederic, described as "extremely dangerous," roared toward the Gulf Coast today with winds of 130 mph and at least 170,000 persons were ordered evacuated in four states.

Forecasters warned it could become the most vicious hurricane to hit the area since Camille caused widespread death and destruction a decade ago ago.

Civil defense officials said about 100,000 persons were being evacuated along the Mississippi Gulf Coast where Camille left 250 dead and millions of dollars in damage in 1969.

In neighboring Alabama, another 70,000 were ordered to leave and urged to go to one of about 40 emergency shelters set up at schools and National Guard armories in Mobile and Baldwin County.

The National Guard was called out in the Florida Panhandle and schools were closed in three states.

One man was killed and another was reported missing as 2,500 offshore oilfield workers were leaving rigs in the path of the storm.

At 8 a.m. EDT, Frederic, packing winds of 130 mph, was located about 180 miles south of Pensacola, Fla., and about 245 miles southeast of New Orleans, near latitude 27.6 north, longitude 87.3 west. The storm was moving northwest at 12 mph and was expected to remain on that course most of the day.

Hurricane warnings were posted from Panama City, Fla., to Grand Isle, La. Forecasters said the storm was "extremely dangerous."

The National Hurricane Center in Miami said Frederic was "one of the most intense hurricanes to threaten the central Gulf Coast during this century."

The storm, picking up strength, was approaching No. 4 on the National Hurricane Center's 1-5 rating scale. Camille, one of the two strongest U.S. storms this century, was a No. 5, a "catastrophic" hurricane. It took 256 lives.

In Mobile, Ala., Civil Defense Director Norman Davis said residents were ordered to evacuate coastal areas, house trailers and flood-prone areas along the rivers and roadways. Emergency shelters were set up at high schools.

Frederic was expected to kick up tides 5 to 15 feet above normal.

Residents in low-lying areas of Plaquemines Parish, La., were ordered to evacuate this morning. Those remaining on Grand Isle were packing up.

Detect Heavy Tremor

HONOLULU (AP)—U.S. seismologists reported the most powerful earthquake recorded in two years occurred this afternoon in the south Pacific off Papua New Guinea, but there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage on land.

The U.S. Geological Survey at Golden, Colo., said the quake at 2:30 p.m. New Guinea time, or 1:30 a.m. EDT, measured 8.0 on the Richter Scale. A spokesman said it was the most powerful quake recorded since another 8.0 tremor on Aug. 19, 1977, to the west of New Guinea killed more than 100 persons on the Indonesian island of Sum-bawe.

The Pacific Tsunami Information Center in Honolulu registered the quake today at 7.8 on the Richter scale. A spokesman said although no tsunami, or tidal wave, was detected, there was a strong possibility that one did occur and various stations in the Pacific were alerted.

It was the second quake recorded in the South Pacific area in less than 24 hours. A "fairly strong" tremor shook parts of the southern Philippines Tuesday night, blacking out the Mindanao Island city of Cagayan de Oro and sending residents into the streets in panic.

APARTMENTS FOR THE ELDERLY

I'd like some information on this new housing project for the elderly between Third and Fourth Streets. Who can I contact to find out on how to apply? Also, is there a building for the handicapped in Greenville? Who can I contact about that? L. H.

Hotline talked with Joe Laney, executive director of the Greenville Housing Authority. According to Laney, the 60-unit building should be ready by late summer, 1980. Although the contractor is about three weeks behind on the schedule, Laney believes the project will be brought in on time.

Preliminary applications for the new building, dubbed "University Towers," are now being taken at 301 Roundtree Dr., from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Laney asks that interested persons make these applications after the first five working days of the month, since the office is busy handling rent collections. Questions about the pre-applications should be directed to Mrs. Sallye Streeter, Director of Tenant Affairs. Her telephone number is 752-3121.

Laney noted that persons making the pre-applications should have ready such necessary data as date of birth and income figures when coming to the office. Only persons aged 62 years or older will be accepted as tenants for "University Towers." Maximum allowable income will be $7,600 for single persons and $8,700 for couples. Rent will average approximately 25 percent of the incomes, with utilities included in the rent.

The new facility will feature a multi-purpose room on the basement floor, as well as a laundry. Each apartment will have a living room, dining area, kitchen, bathroom and bedroom, as well as a balcony. The ground floor will offer six apartments for the disabled, and the building will have both stairs and a elevator.

According to Laney, apartment buildings built within the last eight to 10 years must have 10 percent of its units built with specifications for handicapped persons, if in any way funded by federal monies. He pointed out as an example Hopkins Park's 12 buildings, all designed for the handicapped. Federal law mandates that buildings constructed by some form of federal dollars within the past ten or so years must have the handicap feature in 10 percent of its units.

Hanging Not For A Village Elder

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Four Hindu men were hanged today for murdering 12 girls and a young woman for a village elder who believed a witch doctor's advice that offering the victims' blood to a local god would bring fertility to his mistress and make him wealthy, the United News of India reported.

However, the Indian news agency said the village elder and his mistress were acquitted of the murders, committed between 1972 and 1974 in Manwat, about 220 miles east of Bombay. No explanation of the ruling was immediately available.

Resounding 'No'

WASHINGTON — More than 3,200 Beaufort County voters turned out Tuesday to give a resounding "no" to the $5 million water bond referendum proposed to provide a water system in phases to residents of the county.

The unofficial tabulation shows that 2,461 opposed the referendum, with 806 voters saying yes. Not a single precinct from among Beaufort County's 30 precincts gave approval to the water bond issue. The closest vote was one of 19 against and 15 for in one of the least populated precincts.

The $5 million water bond referendum for the county was part of a larger $11 million package. Additional funds would have come from various federal and state sources if the bond issue had been approved by Beaufort County residents.

Orders Report From Judges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph Branch said Tuesday he has asked district attorneys and chief superior court judges in all 30 judicial districts to report on whether they are having trouble trying cases within the 120-day time limit set by the state's speedy trials act.

Last week it was announced investigators would travel to three counties where a number of cases have been dismissed because they were not tried by the deadline set in the 1977 law. They may visit all 30 districts, Branch said Tuesday.

Guilty Plea To Embezzling

Mary Ruth Staton, charged in connection with the embezzlement of almost $100,000 from the Eastern Tar River Credit Union, pled guilty to four embezzlement counts yesterday in Pitt County Superior Court.

She, along with Dr. Andrew Best of Greenville, Marvin Stephenson of Route 3, Greenville, and Willie Taft of 509 Church St. were indicted by a Pitt County Grand Jury in connection with the case on June 4.

In a plea bargaining agreement yesterday, Mrs. Staton, a 44-year-old Rose High School teacher and former credit union clerk, pled guilty to four counts of embezzlement, involving some $30,000. According to records on file with the Pitt County Clerk of Court, the terms and conditions of the plea include, "that the defendant will testify truthfully to all matters before the court involving embezzlement of funds..." from the credit union.

All other indictments against the defendant — including 20 other embezzlement charges, nine counts of conspiracy and one charge of falsifying records — "will be dismissed at the time of entry of final judgment," in the case, according to court records.

Judge Henry L. Stevens III, delayed sentencing Mrs. Staton until charges against the other defendants in the case are disposed of.

She could receive a maximum of 10 years in prison.

Dr. Best, a member of the Board of Trustees of East Carolina University who served on the credit union's board of directors, is charged with embezzlement and conspiracy in four cases and conspiracy in another, involving some $24,000.

Stevenson is charged with three counts of embezzlement and conspiracy, involving some $18,250, while Taft is charged with two counts of conspiracy and embezzlement involving some $10,050.

The incidents for which the charges were brought range from April 1973 to March 1977, when an investigation by the Special Investigations Division of the North Carolina Department of Justice began.

New Substation Said Ready In Mid-October

By STUART MORGAN
Reflector Staff Writer

Construction of the 115 KV power plant substation on West Third Street should be completed by Oct. 15, Malcolm A. Green, electric department superintendent, announced during Tuesday night's monthly meeting of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

"The main station itself was completed this past week," Green said. "The station is operational now, but we are in the process now of recalibrating all protective devices."

"The protective devices protect everything in the station during power shortages and storms," he added. "It will take about a week to tie the station into the main computer in the operation center on Mumford Road."

"Then, we'll have an outside engineer double-check our calibrations to certify that the station is ready to be put in service."

Also, the commission last night adjusted the firm natural gas rate 2.3 cents per hundred cubic feet (a five percent increase) and the interruptible natural gas rate 14 cents per thousand cubic feet.

The firm gas rate was increased from 40.3 cents to 42.6 cents per hundred cubic feet. In addition, the interruptible gas rate was increased from $2.96 to $3.10 per thousand cubic feet.

Effective Sept. 1, both rate adjustments were approved by the commission to track recent increases made by North Carolina Natural Gas.

The commission last night reviewed its 1978-79 budget. The audit report was presented by Don Parrott of John C. Proctor and Company.

"The most important aspect of the report is that investments decreased approximately $1,200,000 and the working capital decreased approximately $450,000."

Parrott said. "These decreases are attributable to the large capital outlays and the decrease in the earnings of the electric fund of Greenville Utilities."

Concerning the report, Curtis Howell, business manager, said: "For fiscal year 1979, sales decreased five million kilowatt-hours." He added "Had sales continued to grow as in previous fiscal years, the kilowatt-hours sold would have increased by approximately 50 million kilowatt-hours."

According to Howell, that would have generated about $490,000 in additional earnings which would have placed this fiscal year's earnings at the same level.

"In addition, wholesale rates have not been settled with VEPCO," Howell said. "Based on information from R.W. Beck and Associates, a settlement with VEPCO could have reduced cost of

Texasgulf Airs $130 Million Expansion Plan

RALEIGH — The headquarters office of Texasgulf, Inc. Chemical Division in Raleigh announced Tuesday that the Lee Creek phosphate operations of Texasgulf Chemical Company will be expanded by 50 per cent at an estimated cost of $130 million.

The expansion will add about 275 permanent employees to the Lee Creek staff. Presently, the Lee Creek operations at Aurora employ 1,280 people.

Mel Preslar, a spokesman from the operation's personnel division in Aurora, said that the new positions would be listed with the Employment Security Commission (ESC) in Washington — and in turn would be provided to the Greenville ESC office by the Washington office. Preslar added that some Pitt County people are among the more than 1,200 employees employees at the Aurora site.

Another Aurora spokesman, Warren Smith, said that the date for beginning of construction for the planned expansion has not been firm, but that bids for contracts would be let sometime this fall.

The expansion, according to the Raleigh headquarters, will increase phosphate fertilizer production capacity in stages, from 680,000 tons at present to 780,000 tons in 1980, to 850,000 tons in 1981, and on to 1,020,000 tons in early 1982.

The expanded facility will also be able to produce 745,000 tons of diammonium phosphate, 345,000 tons of granular triple superphosphate, and still have slightly more than one

Open Letter To Workers

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: This letter is for the two boys who thought it was useless to work, since their father made them put half of all their income in the bank.

I am an 18-year-old who has been working steadily for two years. Last summer I held two jobs. Now I'm ready to move out of my parents' house, buy a car and go to a one-year school.

The problem? I have only $8 in my wallet, and $20 in my bank account.

My parents never made me save, so I frittered away my money. Right now, I'm waiting for a loan so I can go to school. A car and apartment are totally out of the question.

I am the most dependent 18-year-old I know. Please learn from my mistakes and be thankful that your parents forced you to save. I wish my parents had been more like yours.

FRITTERED AWAY

DEAR ABBY: My wife, a grandmother, plays golf every day. Yesterday she said to me, "Honey, I think I know why I've been playing such rotten golf lately. I'm not getting enough loving." She explained that her putting and chipping were way off because she was tense and uptight instead of relaxed.

Well, I didn't want to let her down so I mustered some strength hoping to improve her golf game.

This afternoon she handed me her golf scorecard as she came off the course. It was seven strokes less than yesterday's!

"See, I told you!" she said. "I knew I was right!"

Abby, I still think one thing has nothing to do with the other. What do you think?

GOLFING GRANDPA IN S. CALIFORNIA

DEAR GRANDPA: There's only one way to find out. Continue mustering enough strength to follow through daily. If her score goes DOWN, I hope your strength holds UP!

DEAR ABBY: We speak for countless others who, after having spent a lifetime working to get a place of retirement, find that we have been "had" by friends and relatives who come out of the woodwork because we have a place on the lake.

My husband and I built our summer place with our own hands—clearing land, felling trees, digging wells and building our home. In the land of 10,000 lakes, ours seems to be the only lake with fish in it, and of course there's a free boat which is usually left dirty, plus dead fish here and there.

When we're not here, they take over as if the place were their own, bringing friends who pass the word about the fantastic fishing.

We had planned on leaving this lovely place to our children and grandchildren, but we are ready to sell—boat and all.

We hope they take time out from fishing to read this. Sign me...

An Example For Non-Aligned

The non-aligned summit meeting has ended in Cuba, and, as host country, Cuba will preside over the affiliation until the next conference in 1982.

This has to be embarrassing to the majority of the nations, which by definition do not owe allegiance to either the Soviet or Western blocs.

And yet Fidel Castro, who as leader of Cuba becomes spokesman for the group, is clearly in the Soviet camp. That is not strong enough. Castro's Cuba, the victim of its leader's disastrous economic policies, is virtually owned by the Soviets. Without huge amounts of Soviet economic aid it would collapse in days.

This is the spokesman for nations who are attempting to seek their own destiny in today's complex world? No matter. The conference's final declaration was to reaffirm the "validity of the principles of non-alignment."

As long as there are strong leaders such as Yugoslav President Tito in the movement there is no danger of Castro exerting any great leadership. In fact, despite years of heavy Soviet backing, Castro has yet to make any real inroads in either South America or Africa.

The Castro regime, so strongly backed by the Soviet Union, represents economic failure of a governmental system. It is there for all the Third World nations to see, and should be a superb example to them of how to fail.

Kennedy-Carter Contest Shaping Up

Sen. Edward Kennedy, while still disavowing candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination, now says the objections of his wife and mother to his running have been removed.

That's enough to pique the interest of any political observer, and for his strongest supporters is a virtual announcement that he will seek the nomination.

The final decision obviously hasn't been made, but a Kennedy-Carter fight at the Democratic convention is becoming a near certainty.

Growth Law Has A Chance

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has the best of all possible chances to succeed with his solid support of Balanced Growth for North Carolina despite criticism and controversy being aimed at the program from some quarters.

First, Hunt has simply committed to paper and won legislative endorsement for that which several of his predecessors also worked hard to attain more industrial development and jobs for rural and small-town Tar Heels.

Second, this very trend has already become established as individuals as well as firms seek out the niceties of less congested areas, yet close enough by reason of Interstate-type highways to the educational, cultural, entertainment, health and transit opportunities of the bigger cities.

Third, Hunt's Balanced Growth Act avoided the pitfall of state government dictating to local communities or industrial prospects what they must do and where they must locate, choosing instead the flexibility of helping those communities which decide they want to do the things necessary to attract growth.

Bypassed

Fourth, the Balanced Growth Act bypasses the controversial regional planning organizations (Councils of Government) in favor of a statewide council dominated by locally elected officials, and pulls the fangs from statewide land use planning by establishing the need for local planning efforts as one criteria to a community's willingness to prepare for growth but without the state demanding such planning programs.

The North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research has become the most vocal critics of the Balanced Growth Act, and in a research document labels it "Balance and Baloney", concluding that the law doesn't define the issues, doesn't mandate planning, gives the governor too much control over funds for communities preparing for growth, allows discrimination in favor of less populated areas at the expense of the cities, and "To the extent that it is vague and indistinct, it is no policy at all."

To proponents of the Balanced Growth Act, what critics see as "vague and indistinct" is flexibility. The shift away from state-mandated land use management in favor of local mechanisms is warmly received across the state. Abandonment of emphasis on regional planning greatly pleases most local officials. Funding decisions are being put in the hands of local officials, along with the designation of growth centers, and local desires and willingness are given considerable weight. Whether funds for roads, water-sewer lines, better schools and health services, etc., will be taken from big cities to enhance the smaller is not yet proven, but there is considerable sentiment in favor of boosting less wealthy communities while big-city "wealth machines" use their more sophisticated mechanisms, existing attractions, bigger tax bases and already sizable resources to continue their development unabated.

Growth

Meanwhile, the way things happen in the real world will largely determine whether Balanced Growth will succeed or fail. It is well known that dispersal is taking place whether or not conscious efforts to cause that are used. Firms locate where they are wanted and accepted, so communities which adopt that stance will do better than those which don't.

Industry hunters confide that most (up to 90 percent) of prospects want to get into operation as cheaply as possible. That calls for flat land, existing buildings, utilities in place, etc. Communities which want growth and will provide the operating needs will get growth.

Above all else, a firm makes its own decision about where to locate and all sorts of governmental regulations, policies, traditions and restrictions fall by the way when a highly desirable company wants to locate in a particular place.

In the end, insiders agree that balanced growth will take place because of all these natural forces at work. Gov. Hunt will reap political reward as the "author" of this trend.

By ART BUCHWALD
WASHINGTON — By now most people know the story about the President and the rabbit. For those who don't, it seems the President of the United States was out in a fishing boat alone and was attacked by a ferocious rabbit. The President splashed his oar at the rabbit and drove it away.

When he got back to shore he told his White House staff about the incident but they wouldn't believe him.

Now if this was just the story of a President and a bunny it would be none of the public's business. But the tale does have political implications and it says quite a bit about Mr. Carter's way of running the White House.

In previous administrations it is hard to imagine anybody on the President's staff doubting the word of his boss.

If Presidents Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, or even Nixon had said they had been attacked by a rabbit on a pond a staffer's reaction would have been "Thank God you're safe, Mr. President."

Or in the case of President Johnson, Jack Valenti or Joe Califano would have said, "Please tell us about it, sir, and don't leave out one detail."

Even Gerry Ford's staff would have taken the Chief Executive at his word.

But such was not the case with President Carter. When he got back to shore with what he thought was a good tale to recount, his people refused to believe him.

To the editor:

The Status Force Agreement which the U. S. made with Japan, effective Jan. 19, 1960, states that Japanese authorities have the primary right to exercise jurisdiction over U. S. military personnel when they break the law in Japan, whether on base or in town. They have the right to arrest military personnel in their homes just on hearsay evidence. They do not have to give bail. They do not have to have evidence to convict.

Our military and our government have no right to question what the Japanese do. Our military police can't arrest Japanese civilians that break the law on base. But if our military police arrest a member of the U. S. military, they have to turn him or her over to the Japanese police.

This agreement also says that, when the Japanese punish you for a crime, if the military wants to, they can punish you again for the same crime. But first they would have to get permission from the Japanese police. The Status Force Agreement says you can be punished twice for the same crime.

If you do not want your child to go under this law when he or she joins the military, you had better write your Congressmen and get it changed before it is too late. There are 83 Americans in the military doing time in Japanese prisons on drug possession or just hearsay evidence. We don't know how many more are in prison for other hearsay crimes. Yet, our government says this is fair for our military.

If you want to do something about this and get our military out of these foreign prisons, write: Congressman Ken Holland, 511 Cannon Building, Washington, D. C. 10510 or Congressman James Broyhill, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. 20510 (N.C. Congressman).

Also, write to the President of the U. S. to help free our son from a Japanese prison. He is Pfc. David E. Messer. If you have anyone in the military serving time in a Japanese prison or any other foreign prison, please contact me.

As far as it could be learned not one person said, "Well done, Mr. President. That rabbit will think twice next time before he attacks the leader of the most powerful country in the world" or "If this doesn't show you can row and hit a rabbit at the same time, nothing will."

Instead he found nothing but skepticism when he related the story amongst his advisors and friends. Some insisted that rabbits could not swim; others doubted that, even if they could swim, they would attack a person holding an oar in his hand. Still others showed by their silence just how far morale in the Administration had declined.

It is rumored that Ham Jordan had even considered giving everyone who worked for Mr. Carter a loyalty test to find out who believed the President's bunny story and who didn't.

President Carter, who never shows his emotions, was crestfallen. The credibility of the Presidency had reached such a low point that, even when Mr. Carter said he had been attacked by a swimming rabbit, no one

Logic Behind Tactics

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — In politics as in show business, the real professional always leaves the audience wanting more. And Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is a political pro.

That's one of the reasons his 1980 campaign plans are unfolding bit by bit — a tantalizing hint here, a poker face disclaimer there.

That way, the momentum keeps building in one of the most active non-campaigns ever waged. There now are draft-Kennedy movements in at least 19 states, and while the Massachusetts senator has told their leaders he is not a candidate, he's never said never.

There is, after all, the small matter of an incumbent Democratic president in the way. President Carter has given no signals that he is anything but a candidate for re-election.

By all accounts, Kennedy is becoming convinced that Carter's political troubles are chronic and cannot be healed in time for next year's election.

At an Aug. 9 meeting with Gov. Hugh Carey and Sen. Daniel P. Moynihan of New York, Kennedy expressed concern that Carter might lose to a conservative Republican.

He also is said to have told them he was worried that a Carter-led Democratic ticket might suffer wholesale defeats, particularly in the Senate. There will be 34 Senate elections next year, and 24 of them are for seats now held by Democratic senators.

Kennedy was quoted as telling the two New York Democrats that "by Thanksgiving I'll have a pretty good idea" as to whether he will run in 1980.

What Kennedy already has going amounts to a national campaign without a national headquarters.

INSIDE REPORT

Legacy Of Andrew Young

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Carter's dilemma in limiting damage of the Andrew Young affair was revealed when he rejected advice from Jewish leaders to depict Young's departure from the U.N. as "an act of his own volition," not the result of Israeli or Jewish pressures.

The advice came from several sources, including a confidential memo to Carter from Stuart Eizenstat, the president's chief domestic aide. It was rejected by the president essentially because he cannot stomach the loss of Jewish support resulting from his bold Mideast policies without losing black support. Having been led to expect their advice would be followed, the Jewish leaders were aghast when the language was omitted from Carter's Aug. 30 speech in Atlanta.

At stake is whether the Andrew Young affair, both his firing and events leading up to it, will cost Carter unacceptable losses of Jewish or black votes in 1980. In 1976, if the strongly pro-Carter Jewish vote had split evenly in five key states, Gerald Ford would have had an electoral college landslide.

Without his 95 percent of the black vote, Carter would have lost the South — and the election.

Eizenstat's memo went to the president two days before his Aug. 30 speech at Emory University in Young's hometown of Atlanta. Eizenstat was backed by Edward Sanders, chief adviser on Jewish affairs inside the Carter administration.

His memo was based on pleas which had been feeding into the White House from top Jewish leaders across the country ever since Young's ouster.

They warned that black fury over Young's ouster was exploding in a way that threatened a dangerous outbreak of anti-semitism. The Jewish community felt it was being made the scapegoat of the Young affair, with the Carter administration in complicity. So, Jewish leaders wanted the president to make clear that Young was the victim of his own conduct.

Carter was advised to tell his Emory University audience that neither Israel nor American Jews caused Young's "resignation"; that Young had wanted more freedom to speak out on his own without official restraints (a bit hard to swallow considering Young's unlicensed verbosity); that he left the U.N., as one presidential aide put it, "as an act of his own volition" (also less than credible, since Secretary of State Cyrus Vance demanded Young's head).

Even if what Carter was urged to say at Emory was not exactly accurate, liberties with the truth are unavoidable in any damage-limiting operation. Besides, the reason for Young's departure really was Vance's refusal to retain an official who had not told him the whole truth about his meeting with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) delegate.

Consequently, Carter's re-

Ma Bell Is A Major Retailer

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — When you think of retailing, the mental image produced is probably that of Sears Roebuck, the biggest general merchandiser, or Safeway, the biggest food chain, or K Mart or Penney's or A&P.

But not the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., or its operating subsidiaries, such as Southern Bell or Pacific Telephone & Telegraph. To many people, these are impersonal, barely defined entities.

But Ma Bell now has 1,921 retail outlets, 150 more than A&P's Ann Page, where a growing list of products, including 120 variations of the ordinary telephone, are sold like canned goods or other shelf items.

The transition surprises a lot of people, but AT&T is deadly serious about its PhoneCenter stores. It has been installing them in shopping malls and other areas where people congregate. It wants to meet people.

There are a hundred reasons these days why a big corporation should be so motivated, not the least of them being the goodwill generated by being available, by appearing in person, by helping with problems.

This is very important for AT&T, because 20 percent of its 57 million customers move each year and must seek a new phone. By meeting them in person, and displaying products, it hopes to sell them more items.

Such as: the automatically installed phone that the customer plugs in himself, saving money for himself and the company; or the phone that holds incoming calls if the line is busy; or the unit that allows for three-way conversations; or the precoded automatic dialer.

Such products are difficult to sell over the telephone, concedes Jeffrey N. McCollum, manager-distribution planning. By displaying them, he says, "the customer can see, touch and feel them."

In years to come, these senses will play an even larger role in the company's merchandising, because some products will defy description.

"We perceive our business as home telecommunications," McCollum said. Try visualizing that. And how without displaying the product do you explain that "the telephone of the future won't be a telephone."

The latter phrase was used recently by D.C. Staley, the company's residence vice president, in an article in the Bell Telephone Magazine. Rather than a telephone, he said, we'll see a console terminal.

The console, he continues, will provide for such things as "remote appliance control, emergency services, home information programs, banking capabilities, all sorts of things." People want them, he said.

Another AT&T executive recently speculated that the "telephone" might evolve to include a keyboard, television receiver, electronic printer, video-audio tape recorder, computer and facsimile machine.

"Our biggest challenge in the future will be distribution," said McCollum. And what better way to aid distribution, he suggested, than to meet the people to whom you are trying to distribute your products.

Strength For Today

MORE THAN AN ADVISORY CAPACITY

A young man addressing a religious convention recently brought down the house when he suggested that many people in effect, if not literally, offer up the following prayer: "Lord, I am willing to do whatever thou wouldst have me do, but thou knowest I work best in an advisory capacity."

It is easy to advise people about their problems, but it takes real work and sacrifice to labor with them step by step to solve these problems.

As far as the advisory capacity is concerned, we have all seen people who love committee meetings. As long as problems are being discussed on an abstract and hypothetical level, they take a prominent part. But when questions suddenly become concrete, when plans mean ringing doorbells and climbing stairs, signing checks and working long hours, they suddenly become absentees.

Jesus appeared to be talking about these two types of people when he said, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them."

jection of the advice of two inside advisers (including the highly regarded Eizenstat) and outside Jewish leaders resulted probably less from regard for the truth than from his concern over further alienation of the black vote. "My feeling was very strong that anything the president said, no matter how carefully he said it, would risk worsening the situation, not helping it," confided one White House aide who disagreed with Eizenstat.

For one thing, putting the blame wholly on Young would not please black political leaders. For another, they would not believe it. They had read both headlines and fine print of Jewish demands for Young's ouster. The whole first page of the Aug. 16 issue of the authoritative Jewish Telegraphic Agency's daily news bulletin was devoted to such demands.

"Only the dismissal of Ambassador Young can restore confidence in your administration," Rabbi Joseph Sternstein, president of the American Zionist Federation, wired Carter. Bertram Gold, executive vice president of the American Jewish Committee, issued a statement that if Young "indeed did talk with the PLO on his own, he should be fired."

Such heat-of-the-moment demands played no part in Vance's refusal to keep Young at the U.N. But for the president to exonerate both Israel and anti-Young Jewish leaders would risk a new political storm against him by the blacks. Unfortunately for Carter, however, word had leaked to Jewish leaders that at Emory University he would do just that.

His speech was eloquent, warning that "differing political views...must not become the occasion for deep and damaging divisions between groups of citizens in our society." But it contained no word to calm black suspicions. "I was sure the president would get the blame off our backs," a foremost Jewish leader told us. "But he must have decided he could not risk the political backlash of the blacks."

In truth, there is no easy way for the president to reconcile Jewish and black interests in the emotionalized issue of Palestinians vs. Israel. He is trapped in political currents beyond his control that threaten Mideast policy, his own re-election and national civility.

Buchwald Col. . . .

would take him at his word. Mr. Carter chalked it up to the malaise in the country that had now infected even his own staff.

Fortunately for Mr. Carter, a White House photographer, who was on a bluff overlooking the pond, had taken a picture of the battle. Carter showed the photo to his staff who studied it, but they were still skeptical. Someone said, "It's an animal but how do we know it is a rabbit?"

For the first time since he took office Mr. Carter stopped smiling. He ordered Jody Powell to blow up the part of the photo which highlighted the thing in the water. Then he called in the staff again. "Well, is it a rabbit or isn't it?"

They finally decided by a vote of 5 to 4 that it was a rabbit. Jody Powell, who voted with the majority, went ahead and released the story.

Thus the country was assured that a President who had promised Americans when he took office that he would never lie to them had once again kept his word.

But the real question that goes begging is: "Why wouldn't Mr. Carter's people believe him in the first place?"

Woman Friend Is Beneficiary

NEW YORK (AP) — James Farrell, author of the "Studs Lonigan" trilogy, named a woman friend instead of his wife as primary beneficiary in a will filed in Manhattan's Surrogate Court.

Farrell, who died Aug. 22 at the age of 75, also named Cleo Paturis, described only as "my friend," as the executor of the will filed Tuesday. Farrell's third wife, Dorothy Butler Farrell, is to receive a portion of the estate, which a lawyer described as mostly the author's manuscripts and worth about $10,000. She and Farrell were married in 1955 and separated in 1958.

Tobacco Official Raps Non-Smoker Life Policy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State insurance officials say they will review policies that offer discounts to non-smokers to determine if they are unfairly discriminatory in a state with an agriculture industry based on tobacco.

The review is in response to criticism from tobacco industry officials Tuesday of a plan by Allstate Insurance Co. to offer as much as a 5 percent discount on whole life insurance policies to non-smokers.

Billy Yeargin, managing director of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee Inc., said premium discounts for non-smokers undermines a pillar of North Carolina's economy. The committee speaks for tobacco farmers, processors and cigarette manufacturers.

Tobacco accounts for about one third of the state's $3 billion agriculture industry.

W. Kenneth Brown, deputy commissioner of insurance, said Tuesday he would review the so-called "good health" life insurance policies sold by 31 companies in the state to determine whether they discriminate or could be detrimental to the state's economy.

The review could result in public hearings concerning the possible discrimination against smokers and whether the sale of such policies should be continued.

Brown said he was not sure whether policies with special rates were in the best interest of the customer. Such policies were approved by the insurance department, Brown said, because they offered benefits consistent with their rates. He said the department had not considered them non-smoker policies.

Allstate is a subsidiary of Sear, Roebuck and Co., and Yeargin says he plans to fight its non-smoker plan by passing by Sears stores from now on.

"I will tell you I will not patronize Sears and it is my opinion that once the tobacco farmers find out what Sears is doing, they will also choose to spend their money elsewhere.

"Sears is the largest department store and mail-order house and it was born thanks to the patronage of farmers, especially in the Southeast," Yeargin said.

"Now their insurance company is discriminating against farmers who grow tobacco."

But a spokesman for Allstate's regional office in Charlotte says that isn't the company's intent.

"There is no intent on our part to discriminate against tobacco smokers," said William Russell. "Probably a good portion of tobacco farmers themselves are non-smokers."

Allstate's plan would allow policy holders to smoke pipes or cigars, he said. It is limited to persons who have stopped smoking for at least one year. It would offer as much as 5 percent discount to persons 21 to 75 years old who do not smoke and whose height and weight are within the limits for preferred risk.

Yeargin said the non-smoker rates are based on scientific studies of questionable merit. He said the rates are part of a

Urges Grant For Sewage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt asked the federal government Tuesday to approve a $926,000 grant to Warren County for sewage plant construction. He made the request in a hand-delivered letter to President Carter.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development offered last week to give Warren County the grant under several conditions. One is that the county take over certain responsibilities from Soul City and the other is that the state of North Carolina consider taking over portions of the foundering "new town."

Hunt said at the White House that the state had not decided whether to accept its condition of the proposal. He said he wants the sewage plant grant approved on its own merits because "we are deeply committed to the economic development" of Warren County.

Hunt said Howard Lee, state secretary of natural resources and community development, was evaluating HUD's proposal on the sewage plant grant. The HUD grant is critical to the county's plans because other federal aid would be provided for the $4.6 million, 2 million-gallon-per-day facility if HUD made the grant.

Walkout Ended At Boston U.

BOSTON (AP) — Clerical and technical workers at Boston University have ratified a new contract, ending a strike that began with the start of classes last week, the university said.

Members of Local 65 of Distributive Workers of America, which claims to represent 860 university employees, ratified the agreement by a show of hands at a meeting Tuesday night, said Peggy Amaral, a spokeswoman for the nation's fifth-largest private university. Classes continued despite picketing by union members.

impetus when he chose to tell the world that his mother and his wife have said they wouldn't object if he ran in 1980.

Kennedy followed that up by saying he still is not a candidate, and had no particular time frame for deciding when to become one.

He didn't repeat what had been his standard line: that he expected Carter to be the nominee and intended to support him.

The uproar that generated is what sets the last of the Kennedy brothers apart from any other political figure. It was a response Kennedy surely anticipated. It was read by some Democrats as the functional equivalent of a declaration of candidacy. The draft-Kennedy people rejoiced, and said it would be a big help in their efforts to organize and raise funds.

Anyone else would have been laughed out of the running for announcing that he had his mother's permission to run for president. But for Kennedy, last son of a family that has suffered two political assassinations, it seemed natural.

Labeling Ice Cream

Each year, Americans consume more than 800 million gallons of ice cream in more than 400 different flavors. That's almost 15 quarts for every person in the country. Earlier this summer, a new government regulation took effect, requiring all packaged ice cream being shipped from one state to another to be labeled with a list of its ingredients. The ingredients must be listed in order, starting with the largest. This ruling, along with others like it, have come about because consumers want to know what is in the food they are eating. The new regulation does not apply to ice cream cones, which usually don't have labels.

DO YOU KNOW — What government agency administers food labeling laws?

million tons of phosphoric acids left for sale. The expansion will provide flexibility in product mix to meet the changing market conditions.

In addition to these increases, the mine and mill capacity will be increased to five million tons of phosphate rock per year — of which 800,000 tons will be available for sale.

Facilities in the expanded program will be designed to meet all environmental requirements.

The decision to expand is based on the fact that demand for Texasgulf phosphate fertilizer products has exceeded production capacity for the past 18 months, and the market outlook is excellent.

Major elements in the expansion plans include the addition of a 30-inch dredge for use in mining, modification of the present four phosphoric acid plants, additional ammonium phosphate and superphosphoric acid capacity, and new rail equipment.

Also, the plans call for additional ammonia storage at Lee Creek and liquid sulphur storage both at Lee Creek and at Morehead City. Another element will be the construction of a 3,100 ton-per-day sulphuric acid plant in North Carolina.

Postal Exam

The United States Postal Service announces an examination for a clerk-carrier at the Falkland Post Office.

The examination will be given in Rocky Mount. The opening date for accepting applications is Thursday and the closing date is Wednesday, Sept. 26.

All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, religion, color, national origin, sex, political affiliations or any other non-merit factor.

Interested persons should apply at the Falkland Post Office.

Seniors Club Fears Refugees Had Guests Strain Budgets

Seventy-five members of the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club attended the Thursday meeting, heading by Mrs. Sarah Ashton, president. The Rev. Adrian Brown gave the opening prayers.

Guests included Mr. and Mrs. John Oakley of Florida, Mrs. Lilia Reves of Raleigh and Mrs. Maybelle Strafford. Members Mrs. Nannie Combs and Mrs. Pearl McCombs were welcomed back.

The members voted to donate $25 to the Prisoners' Pre-Release and After Care Center. Memorial donations will be made to St. Paul's Episcopal Church in the memory of Bibb Jones and to the American Cancer Society in memory of Lillie Carter.

Mrs. Ashton announced that swimming lessons are available to senior citizens from the Memorial Gym at East Carolina University, on Mondays from 10:30-11:30 a.m., and Fridays, from 2-3 p.m.

Plans for a trip to Charlotte to see the Southern Living Christmas Show are being made. Members planning to go must make reservations at the next meeting, according to Mrs. Ashton.

Members were invited to attend a birthday reception honoring Mrs. Lillie McLawhorn, Sept. 16, 2:30 to 5:30 p.m., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Helen Lawrence, Rt. 1, Winterville.

Refreshments were served by Eula Andrews, Pearl McCombs, the Rev. and Mrs. Adrian Brown, Richard Turner, Nettie Purser and Bernice Clark. The birthday luncheon will be held Oct. 4, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

American culture," he said. "They (the refugees) need to pick up the English language so they can function academically."

Bilingual-education programs in Greensboro and Winston-Salem programs will offer assistance to schools in Ashe, Davidson and Randolph counties and in Asheboro and Lexington.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Toussaint, bilingual education director for the state Department of Public Instruction, says he fears the influx of Indo-Chinese "boat people" will tax North Carolina school systems' finances.

Few schools are prepared to meet the needs of the estimated 2,000 Southeast Asia refugee children expected to enter the state's schools by next year.

Toussaint said he is concerned about how the schools will cope with the non-English speaking refugees without more money for teachers and educational materials.

Estimates are between $1,400 and $1,800 is spent per child.

Last year, the Cumberland County school system provided bilingual education for 120 students, not all Asian, at a cost of $150,000.

School systems in several counties with bilingual programs are offering assistance to other systems that have refugee children but no program.

Seven school systems have existing bilingual-education programs and they have set up an information exchange program with the approximate 11 systems that have refugee children but no bilingual-education programs.

"The effort that is being made is directed mainly in the areas of English language and power by $400,000 to $500,000 dollars, which would have put earnings up over the previous year."

Howell said that when both factors are taken into consideration, the earnings of the electric fund remain at last year's level or above.

Copies of the 1978-79 audit report will be forwarded to members of the city council and the city clerk. In addition, a condensed edition of the report will be published within the next 10 days.

Afterwards, based on this year's electric fund, the commission approved a $21,783.79 city turnover in addition to $915,000 already approved at the beginning of this fiscal year.

In addition, the commission authorized Charles O'H. Horne, Jr., director of Greenville Utilities, to file an application on behalf of the commission with the state of North Carolina for a grant to aid in the construction of the water extension project along White Road.

The grant, if approved, would fund up to 25 percent of the estimated cost of the project. The North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act of 1977 provides such grants.

Horne also revealed last night a reduced deficit of $104,317 in fuel charge accounting since July. He pointed out that in August, VEPCO charged $505,434, whereas the commission collected $642,649. The reduction resulted when the commission gained $137,215 during August.

Also, after receiving a report on a transformer failure at the Eastside Substation at the corner of Fourteenth Street and 264 Bypass, which revealed a manufacturing deficiency in the unit, the commission agreed to return the defective transformer back to its manufacturer for repairs.

During the next 10 days, the process of moving the transformer should be completed.

Offering Prize For New Hymns

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Finding good material is never a problem for the heavenly choir, but for the earthly congregations of one Protestant church the pickings have gotten pretty slim.

That has prompted the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), with its world headquarters here, to launch a sacred music composition contest, complete with a $200 cash prize.

Why would an established church — with 1.4 million members — feel the need for new sacred songs when the old ones have served it well?

"I suppose there are two or three reasons," said Dr. Thomas E. Wood, executive secretary of the church's department of ministry. "The first one is very mundane. We are a 178-year-old denomination and as far as we can tell, we've never been involved in the process of developing sacred music. We have quite a few musicians in our church and we thought it would be good to stimulate them to do some sacred music because its not part of our tradition."

Another reason is that some of the hymns have been used so much that they've become overworked, he said.

"We have a weekly communion service and when you have a service like we do 52 Sundays a year, you exhaust the material very quickly," Wood explained.

The contest is open to mem-

Best Of Season

FARMVILLE — Quality of tobacco sold here yesterday was the best of the season, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

One sheet of wrapper grade sold for $3.31 a pound and was a company purchase, he said. Several sheets of choice tobacco sold for $1.60 a pound.

Stabilization receipts accounted for only .78 percent of gross sales. The market sold 355,589 pounds for $537,660, for an average of $151.20 per hundred pounds, the highest of this season. To date, the market has sold 16,405,066 pounds for $23,253,056, for a season's average of $141.74.

bers of the church's Association of Disciple Musicians and other members and employees of the church and its congregations. The entry deadline is next June 1. Wood said the judging by a panel of church musicians should be complete by mid July.

Relatively Peaceful Era To Ex-Premier

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — despite their negligible military value. I refused as always," Wilson said.

Wilson had sharp words for the U.S. policy on China. "Many westerners, particularly Americans, take Chinese expansionism too lightly," he said. "What bothers me is that people use the 'goodies' and 'baddies' formula. If the Russians are the 'baddies', then the Chinese must be the 'goodies'."

"World politics are not simple as that. The Russians and the Chinese are both Communists, highly competitive and struggling to expand. The Russians, unlike the Chinese, are economically vulnerable."

Wilson said he believes "Western powers must press the Soviets — without nagging them — to tell us what they have accomplished for human rights."

Trigger-Happy Demonstrators

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist demonstrations in El Salvador's capital are increasing in size but the military government is standing back in an apparent attempt to keep the situation from exploding.

Some 800 marched Monday, 4,000 demonstrated Tuesday and President Carlos Humberto Romero's regime expects as many as 30,000 Saturday as El Salvador celebrates 138 years of independence from Spain.

The leftists say they have no faith in government pledges to hold free congressional and mayoral elections in March, but Romero's regime has vowed not to be provoked into turning the demonstrations into violent showdowns.

About 2,500 masked, chanting demonstrators, many of them armed, poured through the streets of San Salvador Tuesday afternoon demanding an end to Romero's government.

Another 1,500 left the University of El Salvador campus Tuesday evening on what was to have been a torchlight parade to the American Embassy. But a pouring rain drenched the marchers half way, and by the time they finished the 30-minute trek to the embassy their flaming torches were reduced to bundles of smoldering rags on sticks.

Several firebombs were hurled into one intersection to stop traffic but there were no other incidents and no injuries.

The daytime march started in the eastern industrial suburb of Soyapango and wound into the city, stopping first at the Labor Ministry.

The march ended at the National Cathedral, which had been occupied for the past 2½ weeks by members of the leftist Popular Unified Action Front.

As the marchers arrived, the Front announced an end to the occupation, claiming a victory on the basis of the release of one of its members from government detention.

It was not immediately clear why the prisoner was released or why he had been detained in the first place.

However, most of the other churches in the country remained occupied, mostly by the peasant-labor Popular Revolutionary Bloc. El Salvador's other major activist organization.

Four months ago government forces opened fire on Salvadoreans bringing food to Bloc demonstrators occupying the National Cathedral, killing 25 and wounding about 60.

Sporadic violence has continued since then. On Thursday, the president's brother, Jose Javier Romero, was shot to death by guerrillas who broke into his house in Apopo, 15 miles north of El Salvador.

Over the weekend, seven leftist students were killed in an ambush in eastern El Salvador and four policemen were slain by leftist guerrillas in two separate attacks.

FALSE ALARM — A leftist with drawn pistol drops to the ground attempting to shelter behind a curb after word that El Salvadoran police were approaching spread through a crowd of demonstrators. The rumor proved false, but more than 50 demonstrators whipped out guns when they heard the report. (AP Laserphoto)

At A Standstill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Serious Senate consideration of the SALT II treaty is virtually at a standstill pending the outcome of high-level Carter administration talks with the Soviet Union over the presence of a Russian combat brigade in Cuba.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Tuesday that his talks with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin on the troops issue were "not hopeless." He did not elaborate.

The two discussed the issue for the first time Monday. A second session was scheduled today, said State Department spokeswoman Maryann Bader.

Vance also was scheduled to go before a private Senate Foreign Relations Committee session today to discuss the strategic arms limitation agreement.

Selling Records

By John Paul II

NEW YORK (AP) — Pope John Paul II isn't likely to make the Top 40, but recordings of his Masses in three different languages will go on sale during his upcoming visit to the United States, a recording company spokesman says.

The recording will be sold for $10, mostly through parish churches and direct mail.

"It is the Vatican's desire that people throughout the world be able to experience the pope's own voice and messages," said Joel Carlini of Bryn Mawr Productions, Ltd., a Chicago company with exclusive rights to the records in North America, Canada and Mexico.

Carlini said his company is working with the Vatican to do a "tasteful, credible job" and said he hopes the Vatican will later approve more records of papal speeches and special Masses.

The first three recordings are of Masses said in Spanish during the pope's trip to Mexico, in English at a school in Rome, and in Polish at the Sistine Chapel, Carlini said.

A Gathering Place For Teens Being Petitioned

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Saying kids today don't have anything to do, a Gastonia man has begun a drive to re-open a downtown city-owned parking lot that has been a gathering place for teen-agers at night.

Al Philyaw, 37, turned over a petition with 300 signatures to in to City Manager Gary Hicks Tuesday, calling for the re-opening of the municipal lot the council designated last summer as a hangout for kids.

But last week, the city council approved an ordinance closing the lot along with a broader one paving the way for future closings of other lots. The ordinances are the result of complaints from Gastonia residents about the nuisance they say the lots have become because of beer drinking, loud noise and other goings on.

Philyaw, a worker at a local trucking company, said he is spearheading the drive out of concern for the kids.

"I know a lot of them on the streets and I hate to see the city closing the lots down. I've been here since 1961, and we had a lot to do when we were young. We used to have a drive-in called the Beacon, but today the kids don't have anything," he said.

What really concerns Philyaw is that "some of them are going to drink and lately they've been racing again and somebody's going to get killed. I think it's better to keep them in one spot."

Three Gastonia councilmen said Tuesday they are willing to listen to a delegation of youngsters and to help them find recreation. But two of the three councilmen flatly said they would not vote to reopen the lot as a teen gathering place.

"They were given the parking lot and they abused it," said Councilman Doug Mincey. "I'm sure all of them weren't guilty, but the others were creating an eyesore."

"I'm not opposed to them having a place to gather and sit," Mincey said, "it's just the way they've been going about it."

But Councilman John Bridgeman said, "There is definitely no way that I would vote to open that lot again. I've had too many calls about indecent exposure, smoke bombs and such."

"I am in sympathy with them, I know they don't really have a place to go, and I used to travel these streets too. But there's one thing: When we did drink beer, we didn't throw the bottles everywhere and we didn't holler all night so that people had to call the police on us."

Bridgeman did say that he wouldn't be opposed to finding a place for the youths to congregate, "if it were somewhere that wouldn't keep people up all night."

Appeal Filed By MacDonald

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The triple-murder conviction of former Green Beret Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald has been appealed to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

MacDonald's attorneys filed the appeal in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, N.C., Friday. It arrived at the appeals court in Richmond Tuesday, a court clerk said.

On Aug. 29, a federal jury in Raleigh found MacDonald, 35, of Huntington Beach, Calif., guilty of one count of first-degree murder and two counts of second-degree murder in the 1970 stabbing and bludgeoning deaths of his pregnant wife and two young daughters.

MacDonald, who was stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C. then, was sentenced to three consecutive life prison terms. He is currently being transferred to the federal prison at Terminal Island near his California home on a prison bus, a trip expected to take several weeks.

His attorneys are also working to get MacDonald freed on bond pending appeal. U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. denied their original request but later took the matter under advisement. A decision is expected some time this week.

An appeal is expected if Dupree denies the bail request. The notice of appeal for the conviction does not outline the grounds, but it is expected the attorneys will argue that MacDonald was denied a speedy trial and that the trial judge improperly limited testimony.

MacDonald was charged with murder by the Army but the charges were later dropped. His in-laws, the Alfred Kassabs of Cranbury, N.J., pushed for a reinvestigation. MacDonald was indicted by a federal grand jury in 1975 but pre-trial appeals delayed the start of the trial until July of this year.

Find Crop Residues Good Feed

Feed costs for maintaining beef cow herds have increased steadily in recent years, according to Mike Regans, Pitt associate agricultural extension service agent. As a result, beef producers have sought readily available and more economical sources for nutrients for feeding beef cows. Crop residues such as corn, soybean, and milo stovers represent a large source of nutrients for beef cattle.

Much of the grain produced in North Carolina is a cash crop and little value has been given to plant residues. In cash crop enterprises, energy yield per acre may be increased up to 35 percent, provided the residue is harvested and utilized as feed for beef cattle. According to Regans, Tar Heel farmers in 1975 harvested 1.5 million acres of corn, 1.4 million acres of soybeans, and 80,000 acres of sorghum for grain. Residues from these three crops would have provided sufficient total digestible nutrients to feed a half million non-lactating beef cows for 100 days for over eight years.

The least costly method of utilizing corn residue is to graze the stover, the dry material left after the grain is combined and includes mostly stalks and leaves. An acre of stover (100 bushel grain yield) will provide 40 to 50 days of grazing per dry cow.

Since cows will consume the more palatable portions of the plant first, reducing field size with temporary fences may prevent selective grazing and increase the amount of used residue.

For lactating cows, stalks can be grazed selectively for 30 days with only protein supplemental energy and protein. Two to three acres of stalks per lactating cow should be provided. Generally, grazing of stalk fields should be limited to Jan. 15 or earlier since nutritive value of the residue is markedly reduced by this time.

Grazing corn stalks may be incorporated into forage systems which rely on accumulated grasses or small grain pastures for winter grazing. Crop residues may be grazed for several weeks in the fall until small grain pastures or accumulated grasses are sufficient for grazing. Cows may also be allowed limited access to small grain pastures to supplement the crop residues.

Crop residues alone don't contain enough nutrients to maintain a cow herd for the entire year, says Regans, but most residues with some supplementation can supply the nutrients needed during early to mid-gestation when nutrient requirements are at a minimum.

Delays Setting Indians' Trial

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — A federal judge has further delayed setting a trial date over claims by Maine Indians that land was taken from them in violation of a 1790 federal law.

U.S. District Judge Edward T. Gignoux extended a current stay order to Sept. 28 to give him time to meet with attorneys for the Indians, the federal government and the state, a spokesman for the judge said Tuesday. A six-month extension was requested by Justice Department lawyers, who indicated an out-of-court settlement of the 1972 suit was possible.

Woodsman Thinks Energy Crisis May Be Blessing

By GENE SCHROEDER
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The energy crisis could be a blessing in disguise for America's forests, says a pioneer Michigan woodsman who believes the solution to the fuel shortage can be found in wood power.

"I'm not talking about using more fireplaces or wood stoves for heating homes," said Norval Morey, president of a firm that manufactures wood-harvesting equipment. "I'm talking about using waste wood in industrial boilers."

The harvesting of this wood, a vast and virtually untapped source of energy, could eliminate the need to import oil into the United States, claims Morey.

At the same time, he added, the thinning of the forests would eliminate tons of dead and rotting trees, promote the growth of healthy woods and provide a more widespread habitat for wildlife.

Proper management "has always required that we clean up and remove the diseased, over-mature and overcrowded trees from our forests," Morey, president of Morbark Industries Inc., said in an interview in New York.

And, he added, the use of waste wood as fuel could supply the power for generating more than 100 percent of the nation's electrical consumption, freeing up oil and natural gas now used for that purpose.

Morey said some 40 billion tons of wood was going to waste and rotting in our forests each year, and about 5 billion tons could be removed for conversion into chips for fuel.

"This is the equivalent of 8.5 billion barrels of oil," explained Morey, a one-time lumberjack who grew up in the small Michigan town of Winn, where his company is headquartered.

"It's a 'ready-now' source of industrial fuel that could be implemented immediately in large proportions for use in the more than 200,000 industrial boilers in the nation."

The nation's oil consumption now ranges between 5 and 6 billion barrels a year, about 3 1/2 billion of which are imported.

Morey's firm is involved now with two utilities in building at Hersey, Mich., what is believed to be the nation's first privately funded, wood-fueled generating plant.

The $31 million facility, scheduled for completion in 1983, will generate enough electricity to supply more than 25,000 persons, he said.

According to Morey, wood can be burned in steam boilers for half the cost of oil. Most boilers now operating on gas or oil, he said, can be converted easily to burn wood. Or the wood itself can be gasified.

Until a few years ago, he said, the technology had not been available to economically clear out from the forests the dead, dying or diseased timber. But with the price of oil soaring on the world market, wood energy is now a practical alternative.

In fact, he said, oil would have to drop in price to $7.50 a barrel to compete with wood.

Morey would like to see the federal government undertake a program to spur the development of wood power, for which he says the technology is available now.

"This is something that cannot be said for more popularized and publicized energy alternatives, such as nuclear fusion, solar, wind, geothermal, tidal and the like," he said.

Morey advocates a crash program to build hundreds of 10-50-megawatt wood-energy plants across the nation. Ultimately, he said, a network of these plants could feed into a national electrical grid system which would eliminate the possibility of brownouts.

Some of the opposition to the idea of wood power, he says, stems from the mistaken idea that it would deplete the nation's forests, leaving the land barren in the wake of gathering wood for fuel.

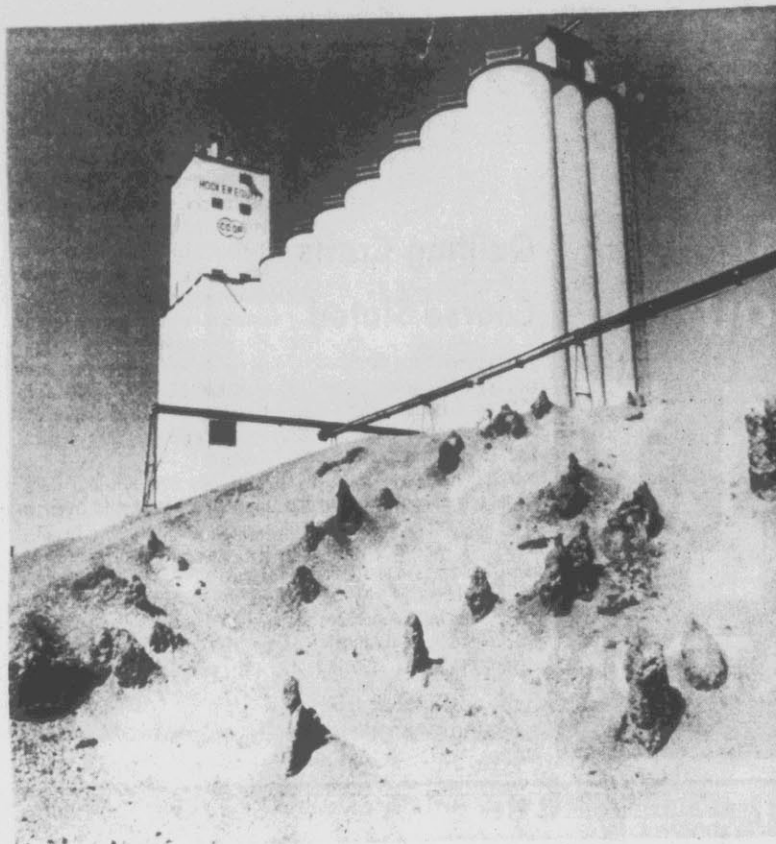

But what he advocates, Morey says, is just the opposite of conventional harvesting.

"We propose environmental thinning," he explained, "taking only those trees which are detrimental to the best forest environment. This concept promotes vibrant, healthy forests which provide increased forest production, with less fire hazard and more healthy regrowth."

His company has developed and marketed a giant, mobile machine — called a Chiparvester — which in a matter of seconds can chip up whole trees at the forest site and blow wafer-like chips the size of a Susan B. Anthony dollar into waiting van-trailers.

The vans then take their load to a centralized location ready for use by industrial sources. According to Morey, the wood chipper has helped boost the daily maximum wood-fiber production per worker from 6-7 tons to about 50 tons, thus making wood cheaper than oil.

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

2nd Grader Has Cancer

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Niki Anderson is a pert second grader who recently captured the Little Miss Tri-County crown. She is also a 6-year-old fighting cancer.

The blonde-haired, brown-eyed child swept three out of the four trophies awarded in the contest. Besides the winner's trophy, she walked away with the talent award for a mime and disco routine and the congeniality award.

The child's mother, Bonnie McDowell, said she wanted her to compete because of the cancer.

"Why I wanted to do it for sure," said Ms. McDowell, "is because she was born with cancer. She's going to have problems with her legs as she gets older."

One of Niki's legs is already a half-inch shorter than the other, and the foot on that leg is two-and-a-half sizes smaller than the other.

The cancer has been arrested after more than three years of chemotherapy, her mother said. Periodic visits to Children's Hospital in Washington are required, though. Doctors say there is a 50-50 chance the disease won't come back.

Judging in the Little Miss contest was based on talent, fashion and beauty. Niki had to sell advertisements for the pageant's program as did the other contestants. She Niki earned $270 through the sales.

Winning the contest brought her the crown, of course, trophies, flowers and a $150 scholarship. She also got a trip to Atlanta's Six Flags and Stone Mountain.

Although Niki said she thought the pageant was fun, she has decided she wants to be a veterinarian when she grows up.

Chicago Casino Plan Pondered

CHICAGO (AP) — The possibility of establishing a gambling casino in Chicago is being examined by Mayor Jane Byrne, who says it could help balance the city budget and increase tourism.

Talking to reporters outside her office Tuesday, Mrs. Byrne said she already has met with some legislators to find out what would be necessary to establish a casino for games of chance, including cards, dice, roulette and other devices.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Hurricane Frederic is strengthening in the Gulf of Mexico and was expected to hit the central Gulf coast this evening. Heavy rain is forecast over the Southeast. Another band of showers and rain is expected from east Texas to the upper Great Lakes. Cool weather is due in the north-central Plains but most of the country will be warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
High pressure over the mid-Atlantic and northeast states heralded another fine day in North Carolina, but ominous conditions are building to the southwest with the approach of Hurricane Frederic toward the Gulf coast.

High clouds will be building from the south and rains from the storm, combined with a cold front moving east from the Great Plains states, may play a significant role in North Carolina's weather Thursday and on into Friday.

If Frederic does decide to swing north into the Gulf states today, it could produce very heavy rains in the southern Appalachian Mountains late Thursday and Friday.

Persons in western sections of the state should stay abreast of latest forecasts and advisories concerning possible heavy rains from Frederic.

Meanwhile, with weak high pressure in control, North Carolina had fair skies during the night, some early morning fog in places, and comfortably cool overnight temperatures. The mercury had dropped this morning to around 50 in many mountain sections, ranging up to around 70 on the coast.

Temperatures by this afternoon were expected to range generally in the 70s and 80s. Highs Tuesday ranged up to 86 at New Bern.

Cloudiness will be on the increase tonight and rain is likely in the mountains Thursday with scattered showers spreading into central and southeastern sections. By Thursday night, some of the rain could become heavy in the west.

Hospitalized

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kennedy family is arranging to place David Kennedy in a metropolitan area hospital for "long-term treatment" of his drug addiction problem, the New York Daily News reported today.

The News said Kennedy, the 24-year-old son of the late Robert F. Kennedy, returned to the family compound at Hyannis Port, Mass., on Tuesday after fleeing for about 36 hours.

Kennedy's drug problem was revealed last week after he apparently was mugged at a Harlem hotel frequented by drug users. Police said he went there to buy cocaine.

The News said the Kennedy family would formally announce David's hospitalization today in an effort "to hold down all the rumors."

Price Of Gold Slightly Eases

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices eased from record levels today in Europe, and the U.S. dollar firmed against most major currencies.

Bullion was traded in Zurich at $336.50 an ounce, down from Tuesday's close of $340.25 and the record $341.75 hit on Sept. 6.

The regular morning meeting of leading London gold dealers fixed the price at $336.95, down from Tuesday's closing of $339.625.

The dollar firmed against all major European currencies except the Swiss franc, after closing higher in Tokyo at 222.35 yen during active trading, up from 221.10 Tuesday.

First Meet By Elmhurst PTA

The Elmhurst Elementary P.T.A. will hold its first meeting of the year on Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The guest speakers for the meeting, Charles Ross, director of elementary education for Greenville City Schools, and Betsy Register and Sarah Allen, reading resource teachers at Elmhurst, will discuss the S.T.A.R. program and its significance for the K-6 parent.

Other discussion will involve the P.T.A. membership drive, and budget adoption.

The general public and all parents are invited to attend.

Feting Poet For Century

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Centenarians are usually honored on their birthdays with a picture in the local paper. But James Larkin Pearson will be feted at a 100th birthday party at Wilkes Community College Sunday in tribute to his service as North Carolina's poet laureate.

Pearson, who turns 100 Thursday, has held that honorary position since 1953.

Hailed as a "self-taught bard of the North Carolina hills," the poet has published six books, five of which were printed on his own press.

Pearson says he does little writing now, except to friends.

He was born in a log cabin atop Berry's Mountain in Wilkes County. When he was 24, he went to Washington to cover Theodore Roosevelt's administration for "The Yellow Jacket," a then-famous political journal published in Moravian Falls and distributed nationally. He has also served as an editor, though he had less than 20 months of formal education.

Pearson will talk with the public and answer questions at the community college gathering. Dr. David Daniel, president of the college, will speak.

College officials had hoped that construction of a new library to be named in Pearson's honor would be under way by now, but it has been delayed because bids for the work were higher than expected. The college has raised $134,000 for construction, about $45,000 short of the lowest bid, and officials hope to have construction going by next summer.

Pearson's manuscripts, his personal library of more than 4,000 volumes and his printing press will be housed in the library. The items have been valued at $113,000.

Teachers 'Out' In 14 States

By BARRY HANSON
Associated Press Writer
High school football players in Pasco, Wash., say they want their coaches back after suffering a humiliating shutout and a judge has threatened to jail strikers in Anchorage, Alaska, as nearly 50,000 teachers carry picket signs today in 14 states.

An Associated Press survey showed that more than 860,000 pupils are affected by teacher walkouts.

The opening of classes was canceled for 60,000 pupils today in San Francisco after the city's 3,800 teachers voted by a 2-to-1 margin to strike.

"Public education in this country is in real trouble," said Superintendent Robert Alioto as he announced Tuesday that the city's 120 schools would be shut down at least until Monday.

The teachers are demanding a 15.7 percent pay increase over two years. They also want reinstatement of 1,200 regular teachers laid off last year for budgetary reasons.

Jackson Plans Meet Arafat

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson says he plans to meet soon with PLO leader Yasser Arafat "to contribute as a private citizen" to help resolve the Middle East conflict. Jackson, national president of Operation PUSH, said Tuesday in a statement he would set a time and place for the meeting as soon as he receives a written invitation from the Palestine Liberation Organization.

'Growth Stocks' Look Like Trying Comeback

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Growth stocks, once known as the "Nifty-Fifty," the "Top Tier," or simply "Glamours," might be getting ready for a comeback. These stocks are characterized by above-average growth, high research and development expenditures, aggressive merchandising, and strong balance sheets. The industries they represent are considered to be among the fastest growing in the country.

With this profile, it might seem surprising that most growth stocks have been in a downtrend since the early 1970's. Stock prices are sharply below the peaks reached five years ago. Price/earnings multiples have fallen from the lofty heights of 30-80X earnings to a more reasonable 10-12X earnings. Dividends of some growth companies provide yields of four percent or more.

In terms of earnings and dividends, growth stocks performed about as they were expected to. Their price decline stemmed from a shift in interest by Wall Street from growth to total return (appreciation and yield), with most of the emphasis on high current yield. Since growth stocks provided very low dividend yields and sometimes astronomical price-earnings multiples, they were especially vulnerable to selling pressures. Buying interest was centered around the cyclical stocks, which were selling at low price/earnings multiples and relatively high yields.

Many people believe the glamours may be ready for a comeback. First, they reason that the value of consistent earnings gains will eventually be recognized and the growth stocks will then begin outperforming the market. Second, they doubt that companies will continue to let their stocks lag the market when all they have to do is raise the dividend.

The value theory appears to have merit. Earnings of cyclical companies improve sharply early in an economic recovery. Earnings increases become progressively smaller as the recovery matures and earnings typically decline during recessions. In the first stages of a recovery, sharp earnings increases of the cyclical companies compare very favorably with the 10-12 percent earnings growth of the glamours. Later in the cycle and into a recessionary period, earnings gains of the growth stocks are in recession-resistant industries. They can report higher earnings even during a recession.

We appear to be headed for at least a slowdown in economic activity and earnings of a number of cyclical are losing momentum.

As for dividends, many growth companies already have records of regular dividend increases. Since dividends are paid from earnings and earnings have risen consistently, dividend increases seem likely. Payout ratios remain low, since at least part of the growth of these companies is internally financed. Some companies reportedly are considering increasing their payout ratios, but they are likely to remain low enough to maintain regular dividend increases.

Will the growth stocks stage a market recovery? Only time will tell, but with P/E multiples around 10-12X and yields near four percent, growth stocks make more sense now than they did five years ago.

No. 3's $49.53; 60-70 1-2's, $51.23. No. 3's, $42.37; 70-80 pound 1-2's, $45.99. No. 3's, $41.55.

Acting Chief Opposes Draft Sign-Up

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — At 11 on a Tuesday morning, a receptionist is sealing envelopes, a whistling mail clerk wheels his cart by, somewhere a type-writer is slowly tapping out a letter. The phones rarely ring.

Selective Service headquarters is hardly the hustling place it must have been when the late Gen. Lewis B. Hershey oversaw the registration during World War II of 40 million men and the induction of 10 million of them.

These days the Selective Service System, on deep standby and subsisting on an annual budget of $7.8 million, drafts nothing but plans for what to do if the draft is revived.

It has been more than six years since a young man in America has reached into his mailbox and pulled out a summons to serve his country. The last draftee was inducted in Oakland, Calif., in June 1973.

And no young man has had to register for the draft since March 31, 1975, leaving Selective Service with little to do.

But Congress now is considering reinstating registration as

Cite Lower Energy-Use

According to figures released by Pitt County Schools Energy Control Officer George Laws, the four county schools reduced their total energy consumption for 1979 by 12.4 percent over the previous year, reflecting a savings of $28,602.49.

Wellcome Middle, H. B. Sugg, W. H. Robinson and G. R. Whitfield Schools showed increases in energy consumption, with cost increases at Stokes, G. R. Whitfield, W. H. Robinson, Wellcome Middle, H. B. Sugg, Ayden Middle and A. G. Cox. Laws pointed out that these schools all foster community schools programs, with some having building additions in the past school year.

For July, the four high schools reduced their electrical use by 35.5 percent, for a savings of $1,948.91. Although W. H. Robinson showed the only increase in electrical use, costs were up at A. G. Cox, W. H. Robinson, H. B. Sugg, Pactolus, and Ayden Elementary.

a first reluctant step toward reinstating the draft.

The House is expected to vote this week or next on resuming registration. Resuming the draft itself — a far more controversial proposition — would take a separate act of Congress not now likely.

Advocates of registering young men say the all-voluntary military isn't working. They argue that in a war, having men registered would make it possible to raise an army faster than starting the process from scratch.

The Pentagon is divided on the issue, but the administration opposes registration and hints President Carter would veto such a bill.

And Robert E. Shuck, of all people, also opposes a new draft registration. Shuck, from Kokomo, Ind., has been acting director of Selective Service for two years and will go back to his old job as deputy director once the Senate confirms President Carter's choice of Pentagon manpower expert Bernard B. Rostker for the top spot.

Shuck says that under a plan he's drawn up, the country could raise a huge civilian army in a hurry if it had to.

He says he needs $2 million more than Congress has been willing to appropriate to develop his plan for a "quick registration system" under which four million men would register on a single day. He opposes drafting women, incidentally, "until men develop the capability to have babies."

The $2 million would go for finding and training citizens in every county who would serve as unpaid members of local draft boards.

Their job would be to classify registrants and hear appeals from those who felt they were misclassified — men, for example, arguing they were needed at home as the sole support of mothers and sisters and brothers.

But there would be fewer deferments and exemptions than there were during the Vietnam War, when enrolling in college was a way to avoid the draft — and a source of irritation for those who were drafted.

Shuck believes the one-day registration could be carried out by local officials, who are accustomed to registering large numbers of people.

He says the first draftee would register within 10 days of a presidential proclamation of a national emergency, receive his induction notice — greetings delivered by Mailgram — 10 days later and be in uniform 10 days after that.

"Within 180 days, Selective Service would deliver 650,000 men," he says.

Turn Off Sign To Conserve

BOSTON (AP) — The 40-foot-by-80-foot Citgo sign in Kenmore Square, a neon landmark on Boston's nighttime skyline for 39 years, has been turned off as a symbol of energy conservation.
"It's a good way to start the ball rolling on sign curtailment," said state Energy Director Joseph S. Fitzpatrick. The colorful sign was turned off last week, marking the start of the state's campaign to reduce commercial lighting and dramatize the energy crunch.

Many Dial Zero, Mistaken For O

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The new Indianapolis Checkers of the Central Hockey League are reporting some confusion with their office telephone number.
The correct number, set up "to be something memorable, fun and exciting," is 638-GOAL. But it seems many fans are dialing zero instead of the letter O, and "there is a patient and understanding family on the verge of a nervous breakdown," the hockey team said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground today, faced with new evidence of possible trouble ahead for the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.50 to 866.21 in the first half hour. Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Late Tuesday the government reported that business inventories in June posted their largest monthly increase in nearly five years, a 1.9 percent rise.

Expanding inventories, at a time when business is slowing, can act as a drag on the economy by encouraging production cutbacks.

At the same time, high interest rates tend to aggravate the situation because many companies borrow money to finance their inventories. The bank prime lending rate, currently at 12 1/4 percent at most banks and 12 1/2 at some others, is expected to reach 13 percent before long.

Today's early volume leaders included Gulf Oil, down 3/4 at 33; Exxon, off 1/8 at 56 3/8; and UAL, down 1/4 at 25 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 7.17 to 869.71.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 42.53 million shares against 32.98 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index lost .40 to 61.29.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.94 at 221.48.

Seek Twice As Much U.S. Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing rising costs of weapons and oil, Israel says it needs nearly twice as much U.S. aid in fiscal year 1981 as it is getting in 1980. But U.S. officials indicate chances for such a hefty increase are poor.

Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron presented a memo Tuesday to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on his country's $3.45 billion "requirement" for 1981.

He said the additional money is needed to help Israel cope with the rising cost of oil imports, which are attributed to the OPEC price increase and to Israel's return of the Sinai oil fields to Egypt.

Israel also must pay for weapons which the United States has determined that it needs, Evron said.

The State Department had no official comment on the aid request. But officials privately expressed doubt Israel would receive what it requested. The White House is being very tough on foreign aid in the 1981 budget formulation process, they said.

Threatening To Sue

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union here has joined its Boston counterpart in threatening to sue if the city uses public money to pay for the altar Pope John Paul II uses to celebrate Mass during his upcoming U.S. visit.

Frank Rizzo, Philadelphia's Roman Catholic mayor, announced Tuesday the city would finance construction of a 27-foot-high altar for the papal Mass on Oct. 3.

"The Church offered to pay for it, but I think it's our responsibility," Rizzo said in a television interview.

Shortly after the mayor's announcement on the Joel Spivak Show, a local talk program, ACLU officials announced the group would file suit against the city if public money is spent on the project.

ACLU Executive Director Hilda Silverman called the proposal an "egregious violation" of the U.S. Constitution's separation of church and state, said the group received calls within minutes of Rizzo's announcement.

A similar protest by the Massachusetts ACLU has been raised in Boston, the first of several U.S. cities the pontiff will visit.

Eggs And Chickens Destroyed By Fear

FRANKLIN, Idaho (AP) — More than 360,000 eggs and 79,000 chickens were destroyed by Ritewood Egg Co., a major egg producer for Idaho, Utah and California, after it was learned some chickens were contaminated with a chemical suspected of causing cancer.

"Ritewood is temporarily out of the egg production business," Marlow Woodward, a co-owner of the Franklin firm, said Tuesday.

Paul Woodward, another owner, said the firm also voluntarily ended further shipments of eggs after the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food and Safety Division found more than 15 parts per million of polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) in hens the firm was shipping to Utah.

Marlow Woodward said the company would have to destroy more chickens, but he did not know how many. He said the firm is staying in business by obtaining eggs from other ranches to fill current orders.

He said the source of the contamination is not yet known, but that Food and Drug Administration and Environmental Protection Agency officials have ruled out water and air as possible sources. He said if the origin turns out to be the chickens' feed, other egg producers might be affected.

Hold Regional Workshop Here

A regional training workshop will be held Wednesday, September 12, 6 p.m., at Wellcome Middle School for representatives from Pitt, Beaufort, Craven, Edgecombe, Halifax, Hyde, Lenoir, Pamlico and Wilson Counties.

Members of the Pitt County Involvement Council will meet with other county representatives, as well as staff members from the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs, Department of Human Resources, Volunteer Services Office, and the CARE-LINE program.

The workshop will be one of ten such affairs across the state whereby county civic leaders can meet with staffs of certain state agencies.

EARLY ELECTION

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The Portuguese will elect a new National Assembly a year early, on Dec. 2. President Antonio Ramalho Eanes dissolved the parliament Tuesday and set the election date after 14 months of political deadlock.

County Refuses Responsibility

LILLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Agrippa Hymes was born with vocal cord paralysis. At birth, doctors fitted him with a plastic breathing tube.

He is five years old and a kindergarten student at Gentry School in Lillington. But school officials say they don't want to accept the responsibility for him.

He requires medical care during the day — his breathing tube must be suctioned regularly to get rid of accumulated mucus.

The case has caused a dispute between his parents and Harnett County officials. It was discussed at a public hearing Tuesday by the Harnett County Board of Education.

Eunice and Alvin Hymes originally took their case to the federal courts, but it was delayed pending action on the local level by the school board.

Harnett County officials have indicated that they will oppose accepting the responsibility of providing medical attention for Agrippa.

Mr. and Mrs. Hymes, represented by attorney Louis L. Lesesne of Charlotte, claim their child is entitled to public school education and to have his handicap needs attended to by the school.

The Hymes base their claims on state and federal education-to-the-handicapped laws and on handicap funds the school receives from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Gentry School officials, represented by attorney Robert H. Jones of Lillington, are willing to admit the child to school, but claim they lack the financial and professional capability to provide routine medical services. They also claim they are not legally bound to care for the child.

Lesesne said after the hearing the Hymes would decide whether to bring their suit to trial after the board renders a decision.

Dr. John East To Be Speaker

Dr. John East, an East Carolina University political science professor, will be the guest speaker at the 1979 Enforcement Appreciation Dinner sponsored by the Law Enforcement Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

The third annual Law Enforcement Appreciation Dinner will be held September 18 at the Ramada Inn at 7 p.m.

The purpose of the dinner is not only to honor and to show appreciation for local law enforcement officers, but also to provide an opportunity for members of the chamber to meet the lawmen.

Chamber members wishing to make reservations for the dinner may call 752-4101 by September 14.

Farmville, North Pitt Win Openers

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Farmville Central and North Pitt opened their 1979 football seasons Friday night with impressive wins, while Ayden-Grifton, evened its slate with a come-from-behind victory.

Farmville Central, picked to win the Eastern Carolina Conference for the fourth consecutive season, blanked Clinton 19-0, while North Pitt rolled past Enfield, 27-0.

Ayden-Grifton, down 20-6 at the half to Roanoke, came back in the second half to beat the Redskins, 21-20, and even its record at 1-1. Roanoke, 1-1, opened its season with a 34-8 victory over Behaven.

In other games last week, Greene Central was upset by Beddingfield, 42-22. Jamesville beat Columbia, 24-13, and Williamston won its second game in a row, beating Gaston, 24-24.

The schedule this week is heavy with conference match ups. Farmville Central begins its quest for a fourth league crown Friday night, hosting conference foe C.B. Aycock, while Ayden-Grifton entertains Southwest Edgecombe, North Pitt travels to North Lenior and Greene Central goes to Southern Nash.

Other games scheduled this week include D.H. Conley at Washington, Jamesville at home against Chocowinity and Williamston at Currituck.

Ayden-Grifton

Coach Dixon Sauls said earlier this week he felt "very fortunate" to have beaten Roanoke last Friday night.

"We played hard enough to win," Sauls said of his team's 21-20 come-from-behind victory. "but they (Roanoke) came up with three big plays in the first half to get that big lead (20-6 at the half)."

The Chargers came back in the second half, scoring first on a seven-yard run by quarterback Bernard Ricciarelli and then on a one-yard plunge by halfback Calvin Ellison.

A-G's Calvin Ellison

Timmy Edwards ran for two points following the first touchdown and then, with the score tied 20-20 with less than five minutes left, Perry Dixon kicked the winning extra point.

"In the first half we tackled poorly and missed some assignments. But in the second half our kids came out and scrapped with them and were able to win," Sauls said.

"Our defense played real well. The biggest thing about our offense was we only scored three of the seven times we got down inside their 10 yard line," Sauls said. "We need to improve on that."

"Hopefully, though, this is a game we can build our season on. I think, even though we're young, we're going to have a good season."

This week the Chargers host conference foe Southwest Edgecombe. SW Edgecombe beat North Edgecombe in its opening game, 13-6.

Starting linebacker Cleveland Coley injured his shoulder against Roanoke and will not play this week.

D.H. Conley will be without its starting quarter-back this week when it travels to Washington. No. Curtis Spencer isn't hurt. Late last week he told first-year coach Jimbo Walker he would not be playing anymore. He was quitting.

"That hurt," Walker said. "We'll be starting either Anthony Carmon or Doug McRoy this week. This hurts us."

Two weeks ago, against West Craven, Spencer completed four of nine passes for 70 yards and two touchdowns, directing his team to a come-from-behind win over the Eagles, 19-12.

Spencer did not give a reason for quitting, Walker said.

This week the Vikings take on the Pam Pack, 0-2, who lost to Rose, 36-0 last week.

DHC's Tommy Joyner

"We've been working on our timing and our kicking game this week," Walker said. D. H. Conley had an off-date last Friday and has had two weeks to prepare for Washington.

"Washington has a pretty good ball club. It's just that Rose has a great ball club," he said. "They have a good quarterback and two good running backs."

Farmville Central

Despite beating Clinton 19-0 last Friday night, Jaguar Coach Gene Brewer is far from satisfied with his team's play.

"I still don't think our defense played as well as they can," Brewer said earlier this week.

"Our offense was a surprise to me, especially since it was the first ballgame. We threw the ball pretty well and our pass blocking was excellent."

"I don't think they forced Eugene (Joyner) out of the pocket one time. Of course they were only sending three or four people on the rush," Brewer said.

"But our offense played well. Our receivers caught the ball well and Eugene threw it well," Brewer said. Joyner completed six of 15 passes for 114 yards and two touchdowns.

This week the Jaguars open their conference schedule at home against C. B. Aycock.

"I don't particularly like it (opening the conference schedule so early), but there's not a whole lot you can do about it," Brewer said.

"C.B. Aycock has a pretty good nucleus back from last year's team," he added. "They have changed from a split backfield to a straight-I and on defense run a six-front."

Farmville will be without halfback David Dunn, who injured an ankle against Clinton. Dunn caught two passes for 36 yards and one touchdown before going out in the first half.

North Pitt

Only three days before North Pitt was scheduled to play host to Enfield, Panther Coach Pat Smith said his team was not ready to play football. They were not practicing together and they were not executing well.

But something happened between Smith's pessimistic pronouncement and Friday's game, as the Panthers surprised Smith, beating Enfield, 27-0.

"They played a lot better than we would play as well as they did."

FC's Eugene Joyner

"We hadn't been able to kick an extra point in practice in a week and a half and then we go and kick three out of four against Enfield," Smith said.

"Sometimes it makes you wonder how good they could be if they all came to practice at the same time."

In defeating Enfield, the Panthers were led by halfback Terry Moore, who rushed for 114 yards and three touchdowns, and wide receiver Gordon Dunn and quarterback Greg Langley. Langley, in his first start, threw completed five of eight passes for 43 yards and a 14-yard scoring toss to Dunn.

"Our whole defense, as a unit, played real well, too. They helped us get a couple of easy breaks and helped us get the lead early."

"They were doing what we've been trying to teach them. Our linemen don't get a lot of tackles, but they were keeping the offensive linemen off our linebackers, who are supposed to make a lot of tackles," Smith said.

This week North Pitt opens its conference schedule traveling to North Lenior, which has beaten the Panthers the last three years.

"North Lenior is always big and physical," Smith said. "They usually throw a lot of different defenses at us and that makes it harder for us to block them."

"We've to to get better," Smith said. "The next four games we play are against teams we lost to last year. We were 6-4 a year ago and the next four teams we play are the four who beat us."

"We're going to find out real fast how good we really are," Smith said.

Yaz Still Chasing 3,000th Hit

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Carl Yastrzemski will get his 3,000th major league hit today ... or Thursday ... or the day after ... but he will get it.

"I never thought one hit would be so hard to get," the Boston slugger said Tuesday night after failing for the second straight game to become the first player in American League history to have 3,000 hits and 400 home runs.

But Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees isn't worried.

"You know as well as I do he's going to get his 3,000th hit as sure as the sun's going to come up," Jackson said of Yastrzemski. "As long as he doesn't get upset and start pushing."

Yastrzemski went hitless in three official at-bats against former teammate Luis Tiant and relievers Ron Davis and Rich Gossage as the Yankees defeated the Boston Red Sox 8-3. He walked — his first base on balls since Aug. 13, 45 games ago — popped to second baseman Willie Randolph in shallow center field, flied to right and fouled to catcher Jerry Narron.

"The law of percentages is on my side," Yaz said. "I'm not being given a chance to think of anything else. I've had very few hitter's pitches to hit. I've been getting pitcher's pitches. I want to get it over with."

Even the Yankee starter, Tiant, is pulling for the Red Sox veteran.

"I want him to get it but not against me," Tiant said. "He deserves it, but I'm not going to give it to him. I like him as a player, as a human, as a friend. I'm proud of the man."

Brewers 5, A's 0

Cecil Cooper smashed his 22nd homer and added a sacrifice fly to lead Milwaukee over Oakland, 14-8, scattered five hits for the Brewers, who broke a four-game losing streak.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 1

Tom Underwood scattered nine hits and Rico Carty cracked his 10th home run of the season as the Blue Jays defeated Baltimore, snapping Toronto's 15-game winless streak against the Orioles.

White Sox 8, Angels 7

Jim Morrison slammed a pair of solo home runs and Alan Bannister singled home the tie-breaking run to lift Chicago over California.

Tigers 14, Indians 1

Jason Thompson doubled home three runs as Detroit exploded for eight runs in the first inning, then slammed an eighth-inning homer to lead the Tigers over Cleveland.

Twins 3, Royals 1

Danny Gooden had two hits, including his fourth homer of the year, and scored twice to lead Minnesota past Kansas City. Geoff Zahn, 11-6, snapped a personal three-game losing streak in getting the victory, although he needed ninth-inning help from Mike Marshall.

Rangers 5, Mariners 2

Texas spoiled the major league debut of pitcher Roy Branch as rookie Billy Sample drove in two runs with a double and a single and Mickey Rivers homered to power Texas over Seattle.

Rams' Malavasi Shows Temper

Blazers Offer To Buy Walton

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Portland Trail Blazers have put a value of more than $20 million on the services of center Bill Walton, and also have offered to buy him back from the San Diego Clippers for $1 million if compensation cannot be worked out, according to published reports.

Representatives of the two teams met for three hours Tuesday in New York before National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien, who heard two days of final arguments in the compensation case. O'Brien said he would await complete transcripts of the hearing before making his decision.

A report on a San Diego radio station on what the Blazers seek came from Jerry Gross, a veteran NBA network announcer. He said the key to a settlement is Clippers' forward Kermit Washington, although Washington already has asked the commissioner to allow him to stay in San Diego.

The New York Post reported in their Tuesday editions that Walton's contract also stipulates that $700,000 of his contract is guaranteed. The contract also says that if Walton doesn't play 65 games in any one year he will be cut to $700,000. And if the Clippers don't draw more than 310,000 fans in any one season he will also be cut to $700,000.

Gross said that if O'Brien awards Washington to Portland, the Trail Blazers have already agreed to a trade with the Chicago Bulls that would replace Walton with 7-foot-1 center Artis Gilmore. In exchange Portland would send the Bulls guard Lionel Hollins, forward Maurice Lucas and center Tom Owens. Gross said on his KCBQ sports show.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Coach Ray Malavasi showed a little Italian temper when asked about possible game-breakers on his Los Angeles Rams.

"We have several," he answered when asked why the Rams appear to be the grind-it-out variety of team without the so called "home run hitter."

"We've got Preston Dennard, Wendell Tyler, Willie Miller and Lawrence McCutcheon," replied Malavasi. "And Ron Jessie has the ability to make the great catch. He hasn't done it for a little while, but we still see it in practice."

Questioned why Dennard and Tyler didn't play more, Malavasi showed his anger, saying,

"There are a lot more things involved. Cullen Bryant is probably the most underrated back in the league and we're going to use him a lot. So our rotation is not 50-50. We're trying to build the experience of the younger players and then they'll get more playing time."

"We hope to get more points against San Francisco. The 49ers were one of the weaker teams last year but playing better football this year."

The 49ers are 0-2, having lost to Minnesota and Dallas while the Rams stand 1-1 with a loss to Oakland and a victory over Denver.

Most of the problems for the 49ers this year have been in the defensive secondary.

THE SAVING PLACE

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

Giants, Jets Sell Memories Not Hopes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

We are barely out of August, just past Labor Day. The first leaves of autumn have yet to fall and already, the professional football season in New York might just as well be over.

Between them, the Jets and Giants have played four games and the next victory either one of them gets will be the first. They are depressing.

Down and out teams sell hope. The Jets and Giants sell memories.

People jam Giants Stadium because it's a great place to watch football and because the home team once had players named Conerly and Gifford, Grier and Huff. Now, 20 years later, management is still cashing in on the excitement those players produced.

The fans come early for the tailgate parties and stay late for the postgame parties. The day is rudely interrupted by the game that invariably includes the spectre of a poor soul named Joe Pisarcik being slammed to the ground time after time by large and angry opposing players.

Pisarcik has been sacked 14 times in two games. Bob Pollard of the St. Louis Cardinals, who turned him into a yo-yo four times last Sunday, vaguely recalled hearing the Giant quarterback groan. It might, however, have been the crowd.

There was solace for Giant fans, though, because up in New England, the inspired Jets held the Patriots to 56 points while scoring three of their own. The gamblers who took New York and 54 points came out winners.

The Jets spent the exhibition season trying to decide who would be their quarterback, Richard Todd or Matt Robinson. Neither will be mistaken for Joe Namath, on whose Super Bowl memory the Jet fans still revel. The training camp competition did little more than create confusion in the offensive unit that hardly needed that commodity.

The Jets might better have spent the preseason wondering who would be in their secondary. Passers' eyes light up when they see the imposters disguised as New York's safeties and cornerbacks.

Losing 56-3 the way the Jets did last Sunday is embarrassing and they know it.

Blowing a 14-0 lead to lose 27-14 in your own building the way the Giants did last Sunday is embarrassing and they know it, too.

The question now is: What do the coaches do about it?

Ray Perkins, the freshman coach of the Giants, challenged his club after Sunday's loss to the Cardinals. He said the players were not willing to pay the price necessary to win and that he would weed out the losers.

But who's to blame? Is it the players, caught in a revolving-door roster, or a management that picks up other clubs' rejects on waivers and puts them in the starting lineup three days after they get to town?

That's what happened to Gus Coppins and Tom Neville — both rushed into a patchwork offensive line that has allowed Pisarcik to be turned into a punching bag for aggressive defenders.

Perhaps the ultimate commentary on the Giants' sad situation came when Neville committed two separate infractions — offsides and holding — on the same play, only to have St. Louis reject the penalties because Pisarcik had been savagely sacked anyway.

Despite Crowd, U.S. Winning At Games

By BOB GREEN
AP Sports Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — It was a hostile crowd, jeering, hooting, howling and whistling at the Americans.

It was an unhappily familiar experience for Carol Blazejowski and Tara Heiss, an experience that prompted memories of the recent Pan American Games.

"I knew in Puerto Rico we let the crowd get to us," Blazejowski said, "and this time I knew there was no way."

There wasn't.

No way.

The American girls were poised and confident, responding coolly and efficiently to adversity despite the resounding jeers and whistles of the wildly pro-Cuban crowd. They won the World University Games gold medal in women's basketball Tuesday night with a convincing 73-60 victory over the Cubans, the team that beat the United States in the Pan Am Games two months ago.

Blazejowski and Heiss, both members of that losing Pan Am team, were among the American girls who stood with their heads down and their faces stained with tears, to accept their silver medals in Puerto Rico.

This time, at the buzzer, they singled out each other, searching through the milling players, then grabbed one another in a happy, hugging, dancing embrace.

The basketball gold medal, that avenged the stinging upset defeat by Cuba in Pan Am Games, was one of two acquired by the United States Tuesday.

An angry Willie Banks, upset at an official's ruling, soared 56 feet, 61-4 inches through a misty curtain of steady rain on his final effort, wiped out a Russian lead and won the triple jump with a Games-record effort.

His anger was aroused by foot-fault calls made by a young Mexican official on his first two jumps. Banks complained bitterly to the official and to American coaches, asking them to lodge an official protest.

"I've never had a fault called in an international meet," Banks said. "Usually, my first two jumps are my best."

Those two triumphs put the Americans' medal count at 17 golds and 45 overall, surpassing the previous high of 43 medals won in 1977 in Bulgaria, the only other time the United States sent a full delegation to biennial, multiple-sport festival.

And they'll get more before the Games end Thursday. The American men's basketball team, the defending champions, beat Mexico 75-67 in a semifinal game and will play Yugoslavia, 69-64 winners over Cuba, in the gold medal game tonight.

But, with the Games nearing an end, they have no chance of overtaking the Russians, overall defending champions in the competition that drew college age athletes from 95 nations.

Banks Goes High For Games Record

Contenders To Face Each Other

By The Associated Press

Three of the four pennant races in the two leagues still remain very much in doubt with less than 20 days left in the 1979 baseball season.

Only Baltimore in the American League East is running away with its division, while the AL West and both divisions in the National League remain close. And it looks like direct confrontations between the pennant contenders in each of those divisions could decide it.

After Tuesday night's action, Baltimore held an 11-game lead over Milwaukee in the AL East, but the California Angels led the Kansas City Royals by only four games in the West.

In the National League, Montreal led Pittsburgh by less than one one-hundredth of a percentage point in the East since the Expos have two fewer losses, and the Cincinnati Reds led Houston by a half game in the West.

The Reds and Astros have traded that lead five times since Aug. 28.

Milwaukee is in the odd position of not having a single division game left, and the Brewers must rely on other East Division teams to slow down the torrid pace of the Orioles.

The Orioles, who sport the best record in baseball, have won 14 of their last 19 games. They have not lost more than four in a row since July 7 when they ended their longest losing streak of the season at five games.

The Orioles have three games left against the Boston Red Sox, who trail by 13½ games, Sept. 14-16 in Baltimore, and finish up with home-and-away series against Cleveland and Detroit. Milwaukee finishes up against Oakland, California, Minnesota and Seattle.

The Angels and Kansas City, meanwhile, play seven games with each other down the stretch — three in California Sept. 24-26 and four in Kansas City Sept. 17-20.

The Royals play 12 of their last 18 games at home, while California has only six home games the rest of the season.

California is finished this season with the Minnesota Twins, who trail by 5½ games in the AL West, while the Royals finish up a three-game series at home against the Twins today.

In the National League East, Pittsburgh and the surprising Expos are locked in battle that could well be settled by the six games left between the two clubs.

The Pirates play two games in Montreal Sept. 17-18, then play four at home against Montreal Sept. 24-26, including a two-night double-header on the 24th.

The Astros, who led by 10 games back on the Fourth of July before losing 12 of 13, may have the toughest row to hoe down the stretch. Houston has only five home games remaining this season, while they play 13 on the road — eight on the West Coast — and finish up the season in Atlanta and Los Angeles.

The Astros and Reds have five games left between them, one more in Cincinnati today and three in Houston Sept. 21-23.

How Tar Heel Senators, Representatives Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes conducted on their return from the month-long summer recess.

SENATE
CARTER WAREHOUSE — The Senate killed, 61 for and 29 against, an amendment requiring the Federal Election Commission (FEC) to investigate loans made by the National Bank of Georgia in 1975 and 1976 to the Carter family peanut warehouse in Plains, Ga. The bank was then run by Bert Lance, and there have been suggestions that the loans fueled Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign.

The vote came during debate on an appropriations bill (HR 4393) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., a supporter of killing the amendment, said: "My understanding is that the FEC has concluded the audit of the Carter campaign. They have also concluded and published their findings on the audit of (Gerald) Rafeeshon and his dealings. So I do not see why it is necessary" to pass this amendment.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., an opponent of killing the amendment, which he had sponsored, said: "Since these allegations (about the warehouse loans) have been made, there has been a massive silence in Washington. Nobody is asking: 'What did Jimmy Carter know and when did he know it?' Yet, if these allegations are true, Jimmy Carter violated federal election laws."

Senators voting "nay" wanted an additional FEC probe into any connection between the bank loans and the Carter presidential campaign. Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea." Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

UNPAID STUDENT LOANS — The senate voted, 52 for and 38 against, to block a plan for collecting some of the $2 billion now owed the government in defaulted student loans. The vote came during consideration of HR 4393 (see vote above).

Under the plan, the Internal Revenue Service would withhold income tax refunds requested by individuals who failed to repay government loans for their education. The recovery program was to have been experimental, employing 30 IRS workers and costing $1 million.

Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., a supporter of blocking the plan, said it was of questionable legality and fraught with civil-libertarian concerns. "Even in the case where an individual is guilty of defaulting on a loan, that individual has the right to due process," he said.

Sen. James Sasser, Tenn., who wanted to implement the program, said it is "manitory...to collect the enormous amount of debt owing the honest taxpayers of this country from other citizens who are not conscientious about paying their just debts."

Senators voting "nay" favored the IRS debt-collection plan.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

PRIVATE SCHOOLS — By a vote of 31 for and 54 against, the Senate refused to support a proposed Internal Revenue Service regulation aimed at private schools which discriminate on the basis of race. The vote came during debate on HR 4393 (see votes above).

In part, the regulations apparently quashed by this vote would have made it easier for the IRS to deny tax-exempt status to church-related schools which discriminate. Under court rulings, the separation of church and state is no obstacle to the IRS moving against such schools. The IRS wanted this regulation to bolster its interpretation of court decisions on the subject.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said it "borders on the immoral" for the IRS to be denied the authority it seeks to move against such schools.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said that to give the IRS the authority would sanction "an unreasonable entanglement by the state in the internal workings of churches."

Senators voting "yea" supported the IRS regulation for denying tax-exempt status to certain church-related schools.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

HOUSE
PANAMA — The House adopted, 247 for and 128 against, an amendment to eliminate most foreign aid scheduled for Panama in fiscal 1980. The amendment, attached to an appropriations bill (HR 4473) later passed and sent to the Senate, allowed U.S. food and medical assistance to Panama but banned all other aid.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., the sponsor, said that Panama is undeserving of U.S. aid at a time when it is getting, in the Panama Canal, "a multi-billion dollar capital improvement paid for by the American taxpayers...."

Rep. Clarence Long, Md., an opponent, called Panama "a democracy, at least for Latin America," and said that U.S. aid to the country "is aimed at attacking poverty that prevails among rural and urban poor whose annual per capita income is less than $450."

Members voting "nay" opposed cutting Panama's foreign aid. Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudgeon, D-11, voted "yea."

Love For Theater A Part Of Cecil B. DeMille's Heritage

By Dr. H. G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — Nearly a century ago Henry Churchill DeMille won acclaim as "one of the most talented contemporary playwrights."

That accolade by the Chicago Tribune in 1891 marked the high point in the career of the son of William Edward DeMille — a prosperous merchant in North Carolina's Beaufort County and owner of the steamer "Pamlico," — and his wife, the former Margaret Blount Hoyt.

Born in Little Washington on Sept. 17, 1853, the youngster saw his father go off to war with the Confederate army and his home partially burned in a battle for the town.

The war over, the 13-year-old Henry took part in a locally produced play, "Nan the Good for Nothing." His son, Cecil B. DeMille, later commented that this experience "inoculated father with love of the theater."

Despite the economic distress occasioned by the war, William DeMille was able to send Henry the next year to Brooklyn, N. Y., where he attended Adelphi Academy.

Four years later he was given a scholarship to Columbia College where he was graduated in 1875 with a bachelor's degree. Four years later he had earned a master's degree.

Henry DeMille fully intended to become an Episcopal minister, but he became captivated by the performances that he watched at Barnum's Museum and the Academy of Music.

He also was captivated by a pretty young English actress, Tilly (or more formally Matilda Beatrice) Samuel. They were married in 1876 and spent their honeymoon at Henry's birthplace on Bridge Street in Little Washington.

The couple returned to Brooklyn and continued teaching at Lockwood's Academy until 1878 when they moved to Manhattan and Henry took a position with Columbia Grammar School at $900 per year. He also was a private tutor.

Henry already had begun writing — having sold for $400 an 18-part serial to Leslie's Weekly. But he still intended to become a minister.

However, there were counter forces in Henry's life — his dedication to the church and his attraction to acting. It was Beatrice who resolved the conflict.

As a playwright, Henry could reach far greater audiences than from the pulpit. By incorporating his concern for the human condition into his scripts, he could "preach" through the theater.

In 1881, Henry wrote his first play, "Roberto Acklen," under the name Churchill Demille. The Mallory brothers, owners of the Madison Square Theatre, declined to buy his play, but they did give him a job as playwright at a salary of $1,500 plus $1,000 for any play written by him that survived 200 performances.

Henry DeMille had found his place. While reading hundreds of manuscripts submitted to the theater, he finished his own play, "John Delmer's Daughter." Margaret Hoyt DeMille came from North Carolina for the opening.

It was a bust; it ran only six nights.

When his contract with Madison Square Theatre ended in 1885, Henry and Beatrice — now the parents of two sons — spent a season in the west acting in "Young Mrs. Winthrop."

His star rose again upon their return when Henry began a highly successful four-year collaboration with David Belasco, the stage manager at the Lyceum. At Henry's 18th Century house at Echo Lake across the Hudson, the two men penned such hits as "The Wife," which ran for 239 performances, "Lord Chumley," and "Charity Ball."

When the DeMille-Belasco partnership was amicably dissolved, Henry wrote "The Lost Paradise," based upon Ludwig Fulda's German play. It won rave notices in Chicago and capped his career.

Now, with a steady income, Henry DeMille built a Victorian house at Pompton, N. J., and named it for the Pamlico River near his birthplace.

He was at work on "The Promised Land" — a drama of the working man inspired by the Homestead strike — and teaching at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts when he contracted typhoid fever. He died at Pamlico on Feb. 10, 1893.

Of Henry's legacies to his young sons, William Churchill and Cecil Blount DeMille, the most impressionable one was his philosophy that the dramatist is a camera, and his photography of life must be true if he would reach men's hearts.

'Wild Horse Lady' Locates Homes For Mustangs

BY TOM UHLENBROCK
FREEBURG, ILL. (UPI) — Barbara Stanley stood in the corral behind her house and the wild mustangs nuzzled her affectionately as if they knew she had saved them from starvation.

"I've often wondered what they're thinking," said Mrs. Stanley. "I think sometimes they miss their freedom. That's the sad part. But here they're watered and well fed and taken care of."

"When I first saw some of them, they looked like walking death."

Mrs. Stanley, who has five children, learned of the plight of the mustangs from a television special in 1977. Since then, she has personally found homes for 96 of them and is now known as the "Wild Horse Lady" in her community.

"I go out to Nevada and pick them out, arrange for transportation and come back with them," she said. "I brought back 31 my first trip and 33 my second. I just got back this week with 32 more."

She says the problem arose from the government's restriction on the slaughter of the wild horses which roam 10 Western states. In 1971, laws were passed making it illegal to gather the horses to be sold for dog food.

"The mustangers would use helicopters to run the horses until they dropped and then drag them into trucks," Mrs. Stanley said. "I've seen films of illegal roundups in which the horses, legs were shot off. Colts were hatched over the head and left because they weren't big enough to sell for dog food."

"Sometimes they would run them over a cliff to cripple them. Some of the horses were shipped overseas and sold in Europe

HER MUSTANGS — Mrs. Barbara Stanley is surrounded by some of the mustangs she saved from almost certain death by starvation. She personally where horsemeat is considered a delicacy."

When the government stopped the mass slaughters, the mustangs began multiplying until now there are an estimated 60,000 horses roaming the ranges. Nevada, which can accommodate about 20,000, is said to have 45,000 of the mustangs. Federal officials estimate 1,000 horses die of starvation every year in Nevada.

The Bureau of Land Management began an "Adopt-a-Horse" program in 1974 at four Western sites and Mrs. Stanley has become the program's distributor in the Midwest. She gets no pay, but says the program has become her "Life's work."

"The people tell me what they want as far as sex, age, color and type and I choose the best horse that I can find for them," Mrs. Stanley explained. "They pay the transportation costs and initial veterinary fees, which amounted to a total of $179 this year."

"I always worry that I'll bring back a horse somebody doesn't want but that hasn't happened yet. I meet the people personally and show them pictures of what the horses are going to look like. The people are well aware of what they're going to have to do to train the horse."

Mrs. Stanley says the mustangs have better endurance than domestic horses and seem to be smarter.

"They learn easier and they're more trusting once they get to know you," she said. "The older the horse, the tougher it is to train them though."

A pair of 16-day-old colts were among last year's new arrivals.

"They were orphaned and dying and I had to get special permission to bring them back," she said. "One of them was sickly and we lost him after three months, but the other is in the corral out there and will be 2 years old in October."

Mrs. Stanley now has 11 horses at her 3-acre residence, including three new births. She says she has been offered $350 for each of two stud colts and $450 for a filly, but is balking at parting with them.

"We're trying to sell our house now because we need more acreage for the horses," Mrs. Stanley said. "Also, when I was in Nevada last time, I placed 45 horses in Texas."

"The Bureau of Land Management offered me a job placing horses out there and offered my husband a job as a wrangler," she added. "He has experience with horses so we're considering it."

Both the Stanleys work at the Olin Corp. in East Alton.

"But if we could get the extra acreage, I'd like to start an adoption center here in Illinois. I wasn't planning to go back until this time next year. But I already have orders for 15 horses, and if I get 15 more, I'll probably go back before the first of November."

First Meet For Charter Chapter

The Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association held its monthly meeting recently at Western Sizzlin.

Regina Falkowski presented a program on "Silk Flowers" and spoke to the members about her silk flowers business in Kinston. Mrs. Falkowski also demonstrated how the flowers are made.

The next ABWA meeting will be held on Sept. 17 at 7 p.m. at the First Federal Building on Greenville Boulevard. Persons seeking more information regarding the meeting, which will be the chapter's enrollment event night, should contact Lynn Powell, president, at 756-5718.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Herpes Infections and Promiscuity

Both my wife and I have a herpes infection of the genital region. We are being actively treated by our doctors. Neither one of us have had any extramarital affairs. We resent the fact that this condition is called a "venereal" disease. — Mr. G.B. Okla.

Dear Mr. B.:

"Genital herpes" is now being seen with greater frequency than before. The virus that causes it is known as "herpes simplex, Type No. 2." Because it is transmitted by sexual contact it is referred to as a venereal disease. Yet it does not have the same connotation as does syphilis or gonorrhea, both of which are contagious and are transmitted by sexual intimacy.

When the doctor refers to this condition as a "venereal disease" he does not mean that it reflects on either one of you with a suggestion that this might be due to an extramarital affair.

When people are exposed to the herpes type 2 virus, symptoms may appear four to eight days after sexual contact. The diagnosis can be established only by taking some of the fluid from the tiny blisters that appear in the genital area and culturing it by a complicated technique.

In a relationship such as yours, it is almost impossible to determine how the first of the two partners acquired this infection.

Unfortunately, there is no specific antibiotic that will cure this recurring type of infection. Extensive studies are at work at the present time to find a vaccine against this surprisingly common problem. Although this does not apply to you, there is no doubt that modern promiscuity is responsible for the prevalence of herpes of the genital area.

We live in a community that is extremely interested in family and health problems. We would like to initiate a program of teaching and films. We hope eventually, to have adolescents and even children become involved in these problems. — Mrs. F.F., Tenn.

Dear Mrs. F.:

I firmly believe that such projects are of extreme value in the ultimate prevention of disease. There probably is nothing more fascinating than the workings of the body in health and disease.

Children, adolescents and adults are captivated by the wonders of the body and can be given a greater comprehension of the treasures of health that are too often taken for granted.

There are now more than 300 16mm films that are available from the American Medical Association in Chicago. These fascinating films, when supplemented by informal talks by the family physician and specialists in the community, can enrich the program that you are contemplating.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You could easily advance in your chosen field at this time if you earnestly apply yourself. Avoid arguments and confrontations. Take advantage of all opportunities coming your way.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have many fine and creative ideas that can be put in operation at this time provided you are precise and unassuming.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to plan that new project better before you enter into it. Plan to spend more time with family members.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A time to share your duties with others and gain mutual benefits. Obtain the data you need from the right sources.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Talk over with experts whatever concerns you of a monetary and property nature and get fine advice.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study all aspects of a problem and use fine judgment in handling it. Talk over new plans of expansion with trusted friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact an influential person who can be instrumental in helping you get ahead in career affairs. Be sure to budget wisely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Detailed plans for the future should be discussed with higher-ups if you expect to get the backing you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Good day to make needed changes so that your life will run more smoothly in the future. Strive for more happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Put those ideas to work that will bring you greater success and happiness in the future. Show that you have character and wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) By using more modern methods, you please those who count much in your life. Forget little discomforts for the time being.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Talk over with a dynamic partner how to make the future brighter for both of you. Submit ideas to higher-ups.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to economize more so you won't be caught in a financial pinch in the days ahead. Give compliments to others if merited.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who will have excellent judgment but needs to mull things over carefully before coming to the right decision. Give as much education as you can and direct it in the professional field for best results.

Aver Mugabe Guerrilla Movement Badly Split

By NICHOLAS HANKS
Associated Press Writer
LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Robert Mugabe's branch of the Zimbabwe guerrilla movement is badly split, many have been killed in party purges and nearly 100 political and military leaders are imprisoned in Mozambique, according to a document attributed to four of the jailed men.

"Differences of opinion ... are dealt with by summary methods (including) brutalization, incarceration for indefinite periods, and, in some cases, physical elimination of many leading cadres," said the 11-page document which purportedly was written by Rugare Gumbo, Matuku Hamadziripi, Crispin Mandizvidza and Ray Musikavanhu, all former central committee members of Mugabe's Zimbabwe African National Union.

The statement, which reportedly was smuggled out of a Mozambique prison, also highlights the possibility of civil war with Joshua Nkomo's branch of the Patriotic Front if the guerrillas take power in Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

It says the ZANU central committee voted in 1977 to unite politically with Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union, or ZAPU, but the ZANU executive committee decided in October of that year "never to unite with ZAPU."

"The failure to merge the two organizations politically ... centers largely on the desire to preserve personal power," the document said. "People took a definite stand of 'no unity with ZAPU.'"

"Unity between ZAPU and ZANU would eliminate the seeds of civil war and increase material and diplomatic support from the international

China Visit

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon is embarking today on a 10-day trip to China — his second visit since the historic 1972 presidential trip in which Nixon reopened U.S. China ties after 20 years of cold war animosity.

The former president will stop in Hawaii and Hong Kong en route to China, spokesman Jack Brennan said Tuesday.

Chinese leaders originally extended the invitation to Nixon a year and a half ago, but the visit was postponed due to conflicts with President Carter's announcement that the United States and China had normalized relations.

Nixon's most recent visit was in February 1976, when he arrived in Peking as an official guest of the Chinese people aboard a Chinese government jet.

N.C. To Host State Depts.

RALEIGH — The 61st annual convention of the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture will be held in Winston-Salem September 23-26, with the theme "Agriculture: The Promise of Today and All Our Tomorrows."

According to Jim Graham, state Agriculture Commissioner and president of the association, Jim Williams, deputy secretary of agriculture in Washington, will be the guest speaker.

community."

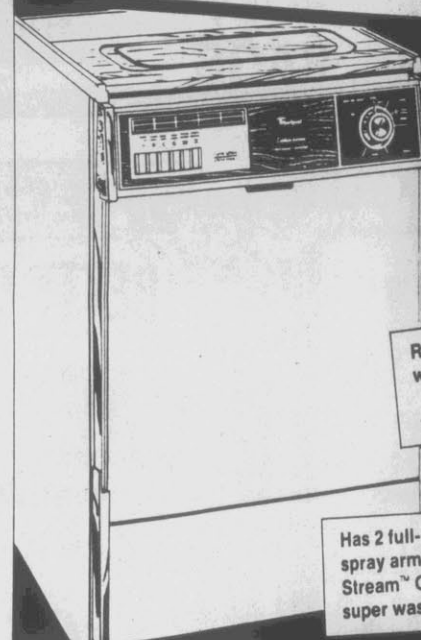

The document was made available to foreign correspondents as Mugabe and Nkomo attended British-sponsored peace talks in London aimed at ending the seven-year-old war in what is now Zimbabwe Rhodesia against the white regime of Prime Minister Ian Smith and its successor, the biracial government of black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa. ZANU is based in Mozambique, Zimbabwe Rhodesia's eastern neighbor, while ZAPU is based in Zambia, northwest of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

DOCUMENT DELUGE
LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. industry today has an estimated 265 billion documents in storage and is creating new documents at a rate of 30 billion each year, according to AM International, a business-machine manufacturer.

'Strike Out' In Hunting Youth

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Authorities have struck out in their search for a missing Michigan State University student who may have disappeared while acting out a medieval fantasy game.

Police theorized that Egbert may have been in hot steam tunnels under the campus while playing a real-life version of a game called Dungeons and Dragons.

MSU Police Capt. Ferman Badgley said Tuesday that no more daily news briefings would be held without further developments in the hunt for James Dallas Egbert III, a 16-year-old computer science whiz from Dayton, Ohio, who was last seen Aug. 15.

SAYS AID PROMISED
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Ugandan President Godfrey Binaisa says the United States and the United Nations have promised his devastated African country emergency and long-term aid.

A SHADOW OF FORMER SELF — Mrs. Diana Fung proudly stands next to her life-size photograph taken one year ago on her honeymoon. Now Diana has shed 78 of her former 226 pounds to become "Weight Watcher of 1979". She was in London Monday to receive the award. (AP Laserphoto)

The bidding:
East South West North
Pass Pass Pass 1 ♦
Pass 1 ♦ Pass 4 ♦
Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Five of ♡.

Pay attention to the bidding—or the lack of it. On occasion, you will need no other clue to the winning line.

There was nothing noteworthy about the auction, except that, by our standards, North's leap to four spades was rather aggressive. We would have been content with a raise to three spades. However, South might have passed a jump raise in which case this column would never have appeared in print.

West led the five of hearts. East won the king and shifted to the queen of diamonds. Declarer won in dummy and drew trumps in three rounds, ending in his hand. The contract now hinged on declarer being able to hold his club losers to one.

The normal play to accomplish that would have been to lead a club to dummy's ten, hoping to find West with the jack. Before pursuing that line, declarer carefully reviewed the sequence of plays to this point—and the opponents' silence in the auction.

East's play to the first trick marked him with the ace-king of hearts. His shift to the queen of diamonds at trick two also marked him with the queen-jack in the suit. Therefore, West had to have the ace of clubs. If East had that card he would have opened the bidding.

There was also evidence to suggest that West held six hearts. If East had five hearts to the ace-king, he would have overcalled at the one-level when given the chance. Since West had shown up with three spades and had not led a minor suit, which he might have done with a singleton, it appeared that his distribution was 3-6-2-2.

These clues convinced declarer to reject the "normal" play. Instead he led a club to the king and returned a club, ducking in hand. When West produced the ace "on air," the contract was home.

To a spectator, it might seem that West had tipped off his holding. However, declarer simply drew the right conclusion from the available facts.

Interrupted By A Bomb Threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Kennedy Center charity benefit featuring comedian Bob Hope was interrupted by a bomb threat and delayed for two hours while a bomb squad searched for explosives. The show resumed when no explosives were found.

The Tuesday night benefit was sponsored by Migration and Refugee Services to help the "boat people" refugees of Southeast Asia.

Those evacuated after the telephoned bomb threat included Hope, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., House Speaker Thomas O'Neill and several hundred other theater-goers.

MARKS HIS 25th — Bob Keeshan, who is perhaps better known to television viewers as "Captain Kangaroo" bites into jelly doughnut Tuesday evening at a party marking the beginnings of the 25th season of the children's TV series on the CBS network. Party was held at Tavern-on-the-Green in New York's Central Park. Doughnut was part of a special doughnut topped anniversary cake for Keeshan, who is fond of jelly doughnuts. (AP Laserphoto)

Allow Judge Decide On Carson Contract

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After months of negotiation, NBC and its biggest star, Johnny Carson, have agreed to let a judge decide when Carson's contract as "The Tonight Show" host actually expires.

Ratings-troubled NBC was shaken last spring when Carson announced he wanted out of his duties as host of the late-night talk show at the end of the year.

NBC responded that Carson, who has been "The Tonight Show" star for 17 years, would be expected to honor his contract that runs through the spring of 1981. Lawyers took over from there.

On Tuesday, NBC issued a statement saying: "NBC and Johnny Carson have entered into an agreement to obtain a determination of a legal question concerning the present contractual arrangement between Carson and NBC."

The statement did not explain what the legal question was, but an NBC memo written by an unidentified network spokesman explained the matter this way:

"Carson maintains that his contract expired in April of this year. He bases that on a 1972 contract which he claims expired in April under a California law which, in essence, precludes personal services contracts for more than seven years.

"NBC maintains that since then, there have been at least three new and independent agreements, the last of which was entered into in 1977."

The statement said, "NBC is confident that our contract with Carson, which runs through April 1981, will be upheld."

Carson's lawyer, Henry Bushkin, said Tuesday that Carson would continue his duties as host of "The Tonight Show" and that he has no present intention of leaving.

Carson could not be reached for comment. The stipulated agreement will be worked out with retired Superior Court Judge Parks Stillwell at an undisclosed future date, the network said.

Carson, who is paid a reported $3 million annually by NBC, said last spring that he'd had enough after 17 years as host.

In addition, there have been reports this summer that ratings-leader ABC is interested in luring Carson, and is willing to pay him $5 million a year for services, including movies and specials.

Partly to keep Carson happy and partly to boost its low prime-time ratings, NBC has announced that Carson's 17th anniversary show will take the form of a two-hour prime-time special next month. Earlier anniversary shows have been aired in Carson's regular late-night spot.

Bandsman Wins $125,000

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A former guitarist in Jerry Lee Lewis' band has won $125,000 in damages from Lewis and his estranged wife Jaren for injuries he received in a 1976 shooting at the Lewis' home.

A federal jury Tuesday awarded Norman "Butch" Owens of Clarkston, Ga., $50,000 in compensatory damages and $25,000 in punitive damages against Mrs. Lewis.

U.S. District Judge Robert McRae then ordered Lewis to pay Owens $50,000 in compensatory damages and $50,000 in punitive damages. Owens can collect only one $50,000 award for compensatory damages since both Lewis and his wife are jointly liable for that amount.

Owens and his wife Jacqueline sued the Lewises for $400,000 after Owens was wounded by fragments of a bullet when Lewis fired a .357 magnum revolver at a soft drink bottle three feet from Owens.

The lawsuit accused Mrs. Lewis of negligence in failing to prevent her husband from brandishing the gun at their Collierville, Tenn., home. Her trial began Monday.

'Real People' Found Comedy Has Little Need For Scripts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Craziness being this world's prime commodity, it is a wonder that television has to go to so much trouble for laughs. I mean, writing scripts, hassling with stars, memorizing lines, inventing gags...

Waste of time. Real people are funnier than TV people. Which is why "Real People" is funnier than most sitcoms.

The other night I stopped by my neighborhood tavern to watch the first half of the Rams-Broncos game. I went there partly because my color set was in the repair shop, but mainly because Crazy Leo always watches Monday Night Football there and Crazy Leo makes folks laugh.

Leo does a great Howard Cosell imitation, and this night he was in fine form. He'd bought a Howard Cosell wig and was much more amusing than Howard himself. The rug was of better quality, too.

Crazy Leo is real people. George Schlatter, who makes NBC's "Real People," appreciates people like Leo. They can be much more interesting than actors uttering tired lines.

In fact, the major weakness of Schlatter's show is the segment done by TV people — the part when Sarah Purcell and John Barbour and the others sit around and yuck it up. Not to belittle the talents of those entertainers, but the best part of the show is indisputably the real people.

Like the lady evangelist on last week's show who braves her way into a tough bikers' bar — the kind of place where guys stick knives into their wooden legs to shock visitors — to win a few souls. Sure enough, one of the toughs converts, and we see him in a church service praising the Lord. His testimony had to be bleeped.

Or the ongoing "Real People" segment about the TV viewing habits of Nielsen families — real families named Nielsen. Tonight's show features a reunion of 500 descendants of one Lars Nielsen, the majority of whom strongly disagree with the TV program choices of those other Niensens (the A.C. variety).

Real people do weird things, like sticking so much gum on an alley wall that it becomes a tourist attraction. So, "Real People" visits Gum Alley in San Luis Obispo, Calif., where folks have been sticking chewed gum on the wall for 10 years.

Real people are disgusting, amusing, hostile, friendly and generally entertaining. And they are better at all of these things than most make-believe TV people.

"Real People," I think, will become NBC's biggest hit this season. It has to. Crazy Leo loves it.

Find New Time Slots Dubious Aid To Show

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, in an effort to tighten its grip on first place in the networks' prime-time ratings race, shifted some of its most successful programs to new time slots for the upcoming 1979-80 season.

The schedule changes can hardly be declared successful, though, by the same yardstick, they can't be proclaimed unsuccessful, either.

Some examples:

— "Mork and Mindy," which had an average rating of 28.5 on Thursday nights in the last season, compiled a rating of 22.7 in its new Sunday night slot in the week ending Sept. 9.

— "Laverne and Shirley," which averaged 30.6 on Tuesday nights in the 1978-79 season, rated 18.6 last Thursday night.

— "Fantasy Island," with a 20.8 average on Saturday nights, pulled a 12.7 rating in its new Friday night time slot in the latest check by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

Indeed, it's difficult to say what effect, if any, the schedule shifts will have in the new season, which ABC began Monday night. The ratings, in any instance, are substantial for the three programs, regardless of position in the schedule.

Nielsen says the rating of 22.7 for "Mork and Mindy" means of all the homes in the country with television, 22.7 percent saw at least part of the show.

ABC, a strong No. 1 in the ratings entering the new season, repositioned the programs to provide lead-in strength for new or comparatively weak existing programs. So the long-range effect may be a boost for ABC, rather than aid for the competition.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows: "31st Emmy Awards Show," with a rating of 27.3 representing 20.3 million homes, and "Three's Company," 26.1 or 19.4 million, both ABC; "Miss America Pageant," 25.2 or 18.8 million, NBC; "The Lazarus Syndrome," 23.1 or 17.2 million, "Mork and Mindy," 22.7 or 16.9 million, and "Breaking Up is Hard to Do," Part I, 22.5 or 16.8 million, all ABC; "M-A-S-H," 22.4 or 16.7 million, CBS;

"NFL Monday Night Football," 20.7 or 15.4 million, and "Taxi," 20.2 or 15.1 million, both ABC, and "WKRP in Cincinnati," 20.1 or 15 million, CBS.

The next 10 shows:

"Eight is Enough" and "Happy Days," both ABC; Movie: "The High and the Mighty," CBS; "Breaking Up is Hard to Do," Part II, ABC; Movie: "Speedtrap," CBS; Movie: "Ghost of Flight 401," NBC; "Laverne and Shirley," "240 Robert," and "Monday Night Football," Thursday edition, all ABC, and "Lou Grant," CBS.

Parents Try Break Kids' TV Habit

By WILLIAM SILBERG
BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (UPI) — A group of parents in this affluent Detroit suburb set out 18 months ago to wean their children from television by coaxing rather than dragging them away from the tube.

They say their efforts appear to be working.

The Birmingham school district's "Alternatives to Television" program has been well received by parents, teachers and children since its inception in early 1978, program officials say.

With a goal of cutting in half the time youngsters spent watching TV, the program seeks to encourage reading, sports, hobbies and other activities that can be enjoyed by children alone or with their families.

Catherine Burns, president of the district's Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, said informal indications point to an average 25 to 30 percent drop in TV viewing in some households.

Although specific figures are unavailable, Mrs. Burns said feedback from parents and teachers indicates the program's 50 percent goal likely has been achieved in some households.

"I think in many areas it is close to it," she said. "But if we can get a household to cut down even 10 or 20 percent, it's that much more time to socially, mentally and physically develop."

"Our intention was really to inform parents that they do have a right to say no or yes to what their children watch and that there were many alternatives many people seem to have forgotten about," she said.

The program lists five areas in which children can concentrate their free time rather than spending it in front of the TV — sports, hobbies, family relations, academic pursuits and social development.

"We want to make people aware there are numerous kinds of sports activities you can get into," Mrs. Burns said. "There are numerous kinds of hobbies you can get into, either individually as a child or as a family."

"Our feeling was that when you get a child and/or a family involved in doing a sporting activity or hobby they will become more interested in it and take up more of their time."

Apparently after school activities have become more popular since the inception of the program, said Mrs. Burns, the mother of 4th and 7th grade boys who "really don't have a great deal of time to watch TV."

District officials have agreed to add afternoon bus runs during the coming school year at all four local junior highs to accommodate youngsters staying late for sports, clubs and other activities.

Other indications of the program's apparent success come from parents such as Marge Herrmann, the mother of three boys, including a 14-year-old she described as "pretty much addicted" to television at one point.

"He has lots of interests and hobbies so we've tried to stimulate these," she said. "Since the TV program came up I think mostly we've tried to encourage his interests more."

"My family always has done things pretty much together. But now we're more conscious of it," Mrs. Herrmann said her son's overall TV viewing has been "far less" since the program began.

Parents, teachers and school officials began working on the "Alternatives to Television" program in January 1978, spurred by national studies indicating the average child was watching 40 hours of TV a week.

A brochure on the program later was mailed to parents of children attending Birmingham's 21 public schools.

In addition to suggesting alternatives to television, the program suggest parents and children become "critical" viewers. It did not call for junking the TV set.

"We don't try to tell you to cut out TV 100 percent because there's good in television," Mrs. Burns said. "If parents can sit and watch with the child, discuss with the child, that's where you can get the benefit. TV viewing can be fine, it's used in balance."

The program received extensive publicity at its outset, prompting requests for information from interested school officials and parents across the United States.

Another outgrowth of the effort has been "parenting programs," which have gone beyond dealing with TV habits and have taken on the general parent-child relationship.

Healthier Americans Find New Hazards In Living

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Americans are living longer and healthier than ever before. Yet, every minute of their fruitful lives, some expert or another finds a new hazard in their wonderful world.

A constant chorus warns them of poisons in every pleasure, risks in every convenience, peril in every pastime.

Ominous statistics abound. People are told to beware of nitrites in bacon, saccharine in soft drinks, and lately cancer, perhaps, in the daily ration of Scotch.

What to make of it all? How does one measure risks in a practical way? When does benefit outweigh hazard? How protective should government be?

The trouble with these rational questions is that they're all but unanswerable.

Harvard University physics professor Richard Wilson tallied up some risk statistics to put them in perspective. Each of the following is equal, increasing your chance of death by one-millionth:

Smoking 1.4 cigarettes. Drinking 1/2 liter of wine. Spending three hours in a coal mine. Living two days in New York or Boston. Drinking Miami tap water for one year. Traveling six minutes by canoe, or ten miles by bicycle, or 300 miles by car, or 1,000 miles by jet.

Or eating 40 tablespoons of peanut butter. Or drinking 30 12-ounce cans of diet soda.

Cigarettes, of course, are associated with cancer and heart disease. Drinking, cirrhosis of the liver. The coal mine, black lung disease and physical injury. It's air pollution in Boston and New York. Accidents by any means of locomotion. And it's cancer from the aflatoxin in peanut butter and the saccharine in diet soda.

More and more, experts are looking at the growing catalog of risks, looking for a rational compromise between a daredevil life and one in which people are wrapped in cotton, boxed in cardboard, stamped fragile and told which end is up.

Wilson created his list of risks to help himself put risks in some perspective. How much is a millionth of your life worth? And shouldn't you have some choice?

At Purdue University, bioelectronics professor Paul Zeimer seriously measures radiation, but even he has to smile at some of the ironies conjured up by millirems and rads.

Take radioactive potassium 40. It exists in nature. It's absorbed into muscle with ordinary potassium because the body can't tell the difference. And the more muscle you have, the more radioactive you are.

Dr. Zeimer's implicit advice to women on campus: Stay away from men, or at least choose a 97-pound weakling. No football players. No crowded elevators.

Risk statistics are fragile. But risk measurement — relative risk — is a serious problem, and a growing number of people are paying attention to it.

Senior Circuit Judge David L. Bazelon of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington put it succinctly in a recent article in the journal "Science."

"Ironically, scientific progress not only creates new risks, but also uncovers previously unknown risks. As our understanding of the world grows exponentially, we are constantly learning that old activities, once thought safe, in fact pose substantial risks. The question is not whether we will have risk at all, but how much risk and from what source. Perhaps even more important, the question is who will decide."

One must measure the cost of avoiding certain risks. One must measure environmental considerations like cleaner air and water against energy shortages, and the balance sheet keeps changing.

Most Americans accept the risks involved in driving automobiles. And some experts who measure those risks are quick to point out that the root of accidents is in human error, the failing attention span.

Highway safety Prof. Harold Michael of Purdue says, "Most of the problems that result in traffic accidents are associated with the absence of human capacity. We can minimize it by education, by training, by scare. But most of it is still human error."

Recently, Dr. William Barclay, editor of the American Medical Association Journal, cited inequities in the measurement of everything from artificial sweeteners to nuclear plants.

"Tests that form the basis of these reports are often conducted with dosages that exceed any to which man could be exposed, are administered for periods that equal the natural life span of the test animals, and are given by inappropriate routes, and are finally evaluated by persons of questionable expertise..."

It is the job of Dr. Joseph Rodricks of the Food and Drug Administration to deal with risk. In the past two decades, he says, we have become more sensitive to risks. That was prompted by the tremendous spread of synthetic chemicals, especially since World War II. Of course those chemicals protect against bugs, package food, color hair and in other minor ways enhance life. But they are new in our environment.

So, the question arose: Are these chemicals which we come in daily contact with through food, air, water, responsible for human disease?

There are several ways of testing risky chemicals. First, it is fairly easy to discover if chemicals injure cells or parts of cells including the genetic material. Second, there are occupational data, not always easy to come by, which may indicate that workers exposed to chemicals are hurt in the long run. Then there are animals.

The most useful animal models are the rodents because of their biological similarities to humans. But animals don't live as long as humans, and they are exposed to chemicals in ways humans might not encounter them.

In typical animal experiments, rats are tested at about three dosage levels. The highest dosage is just short of toxic. If a chemical produces cancer in five percent of the animals above what normally occurs in a control group, it is considered fairly damning evidence that the chemical will cause cancer in humans.

There are about 30 chemical substances that appear to cause cancer in humans and do cause cancer in animals.

In the Delaney amendment, Congress made a policy decision that can be roughly stated this way: Since we don't know how to find a zero risk level for any chemical that causes cancer in animals, then we will ban any chemical that does, only in the convenience area of food additives, such as food colors, preservatives, stabilizers, including nitrites and saccharine.

Few people object to a food color being banned, but when it came down to nitrites and saccharine, there was considerable uproar.

Many other alien substances are found in food — natural toxins, pesticide residues, contaminants. The absolutist Delaney amendment does not apply to these, and therefore the FDA can establish tolerance levels, limiting the amount that reaches the public.

In the case of corn and peanuts, there is a toxin called aflatoxin, the product of a common mold, which is a proven and strong cause of liver cancer.

The fact is that poisons occur naturally in everyday food.

"If we look at foods the way we look at some of the things we intentionally add to them, we are going to find a lot of substances that look dangerous," Rodricks says.

And in fact they do. The National Academy of Sciences has published a book discussing naturally occurring poisons in food. Potatoes and spinach contain a natural chemical that denies calcium to the bones. Cabbage, cauliflower, mustard and collard greens, brussel sprouts deny the thyroid iodine, and can produce goiters. There are traces of cancer-causing chemicals in cabbage, lettuce, spinach, leeks and tea. There are chemicals relative to cyanide in lima beans, sweet potatoes, yams, peas, cherries and apricots.

But in natural chemicals, control is far more difficult. Rodricks wonders what would happen if something was found in coffee or some other American favorite.

The thrust of control is aimed at synthetic chemicals, the reasoning being that we've lived long enough with the others, and we're still healthy, but the synthetics are new.

An article in "Science" charged that federal agencies are slow to control even the synthetics. It said that, of 1,500 ingredients in registered pesticides, one-third are toxic, one-fourth are cancer-causing. While the Environmental Protection Agency has established pesticide limits in food, only five have been restricted specifically, the article said.

But the very numbers are overwhelming. The article also said 20 percent of the 70,000 chemicals in commercial use examined by EPA are suspected carcinogens. It added that of 28,000 chemicals listed as toxic by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, 2,200 were suspected carcinogens.

Few had been seriously restricted, which could indicate the questionability of such labels, or the political pressure brought against restrictions. Scientists, legislators, regulators, even the courts ponder the dichotomy between risk-taking and avoidance.

Judge Bazelon notes that scientists question leaving such questions to the public, which tolerates 50,000 automobile deaths a year, yet worries about suspected cancer-causing agents.

"It is certainly true that the public's reaction to risk is not always in proportion to the seriousness of the threatened harm discounted by its probability. But the public's fears are real," Bazelon says.

The public, he says, can be better informed.

Richard Wilson, in compiling his list of risks, found that it was equally hazardous to have one chest X-ray, live two months with a cigarette smoker, eat 100 charcoal broiled steaks, live 20 years near a polyvinyl chloride plant or live 150 years within 20 miles of a nuclear power plant.

"I find these comparisons help me evaluate risks, and I imagine that they may help others as well," Wilson says. "But the important use of these comparisons must be to help the decisions we make, as a nation, to improve our health and reduce our accident rate."

To give yet another measure of risk, Bernard L. Cohen and I-Sing Lee of the University of Pittsburgh translated various states of risk into the number of days of life expectancy lost.

By far the riskiest condition, they found, was being an unmarried male which costs a person 3,500 days of life expectancy. Although they didn't say why, it is presumed that unmarried males are generally excessive in their lifestyles.

Second on the list — male cigarette smoking. Cost, 2,250 days. Third — heart disease. Cost, 2,100 days.

Being 30 percent overweight costs 1,300 days. Being a coal

Woodsman Life Appeals To Scout Camp Ranger

ALL-AROUND MAN—Storyteller, handyman, nature lover, child psychologist—John Hankins is a versatile ranger at the Peninsula Boy Scout reservation, Camp Chickahominy, in Virginia.

By CYNTHIA SKOVE
Newport News
Daily Press
LIGHTFOOT, Va. (AP) — Six feet, 5 inches, black-bearded and brawny, he stopped to lift a 400-pound log out of a pickup truck at a Boy Scout camp here recently without so much as a grunt.
"Paul Bunyan himself," marveled an admiring Scoutmaster, idly watching in a deserted campsite where John Hankins was dropping off logs to serve as benches around a campfire.
Hankins is the ranger of the Peninsula Boy Scout reservation, Camp Chickahominy. At 26, he's one of the youngest rangers in the 600 or so Boy Scout camps scattered across the country.
Hankins is something of a throwback to America's past. He is a towering man who has sawed and cooked and hammered his way across the continent, living in lumber camps and teepees.
He's settled at last in the woods here, having found a job that suited him and a 24-year-old wife, Diane.
"He's a refreshing new type of individual," said Lew Jordan of Newport News, Scout executive for the Peninsula Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Hankins himself says, "I'm a kind of novelty, I guess. I've broken a lot of traditions of rangers."
The traditional Scout ranger, Jordan said, has been an older man, retired from business or the military, who could do small, odd jobs — a sort of caretaker and little else.
Not Hankins.
He taught the archery instructor to shoot, and helped the nature director teach novice birdwatchers the difference between a chirrup and a cheep — and which belongs to which bird.
He knows how to pick up rattlesnakes. He keeps some at his house, and somewhere the Scouts can watch. He knows that ants are edible, and how to make an arrow, and how to cut a tree so it falls exactly where he wants, and how to build a split-rail fence.
He also knows how to talk to a 13-year-old boy.
"I have an ability to respond to kids, I guess, that a lot of people don't have," Hankins said.
"I know the name of every kid in this camp. Or if I don't know it now, I'll know it by the end of a week. And they know me — they know me by name."
The name they know him by is "Crazy John" — earned for, among other things, his habit of walking up to a campfire late at night with loud voice and wild eye, wearing a backwoods costume of sorts and telling tales of gunfights and grizzly bears.
Hankins was reared near the mountains of Charlottesville — born into a family whose members are the real-life counterparts of the family in the television series, "The Waltons."
He grew up wanting to be a forest ranger, and by the time he was 18 was helping teach biology classes in his high school, where teachers knew plants and insects in textbooks but not those actually found in the forests.
And he was a Boy Scout, of course, working his way to Eagle Scout and spending nearly seven summers in a Scout camp.
When he finished high school, he left for Alaska, partly because he'd never been there and partly to study the Arctic at the University of Alaska.
But in two years he quit college, failing to find jobs to pay for his schooling, and for the next five years he crisscrossed the country taking any and every job he found.
And then one summer he met Diane. By summer's end, he was married and decided she would probably like a rather more stable life than he had been living.
So when Jordan, who had heard of Hankins from marveling Scouts, called one day about the ranger job, he accepted.

He spends his days dashing from one end of the camp to the other in a pickup truck, welding showers, installing toilets, fixing broken dishwashers, turning on and turning off water systems, chopping down trees, sawing wood, hauling railroad ties to campfires and logs to campsites.

He cut down vandalizing in the camp area by organizing a Boy Scout troop of poor children in the area. "I felt if they had a part in it all, they wouldn't come in and vandalize the place. It worked out pretty well," he said.

Church Role In Hurricane Aid

NEW YORK (AP) — Several religious organizations sent aid and relief workers into areas hit by Hurricane David.
Catholic Relief Services allocated $50,000 for immediate help to victims on the island of Dominica and in the Dominican Republic, where it flew in 32,000 pounds of food and other supplies in a chartered plane.
The Salvation Army dispatched emergency-disaster teams, opening feeding centers for those left homeless in Dominica and Puerto Rico.
Mission Aviation Fellowship arranged for aircraft to transport medicine, food and supplies to Dominica and the south coast of Haiti, setting up communication by radio with missionary workers in the areas.

Big Suits By Rail Workers

STURGEON, Mo. (AP) — Three Norfolk and Western Railroad employees have each filed $20 million damage suits in connection with a January chemical spill near here.
John Clark of Moberly, Richard Lowe of Sturgeon and Harold Buck of Holliday allege they were exposed to dangerous chemicals while working Jan. 12 at the site of a tank car derailment.
Named as defendants were the railroad, Monsanto Chemical Co., Dresser Industries and GATX Corp. Suits in connection with the spill total some $410 million.

Plan Salvage Sunken Silver

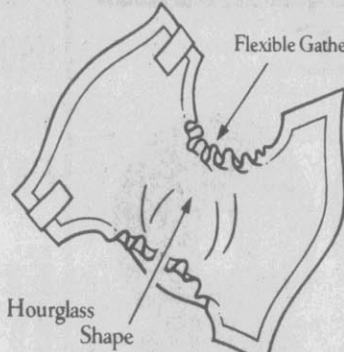

SEATTLE (AP) — A salvage firm hopes to use a pipe to pump millions of dollars in silver ore from a wooden tug that sank more than 20 years ago off the coast of Alaska.
Divers from Alpac Underseas Inc. said last week the load of 495 tons of the silver-lead concentrate aboard the 154-foot tug Chelan may be worth an estimated $1 million to $5 million.

Living Hazards...

miner costs 1,100 days. Serving in the Army in Vietnam cost 400 days. Motor vehicle accidents cost 207 days. Average alcohol intake costs 130 days. Home accidents cost 95 days. Drinking coffee costs six days and taking oral contraceptives costs five.
But you can make up for the bad news. Having a PAP test adds four days to your life expectancy. Mobile coronary care units add 125, and all safety improvements from 1966 to 1976 add 110.
Why did Cohen and Lee perform this mathematical exercise?
"The public is constantly harangued about all sorts of risks," they wrote in "Health Physics" journal, "and its perception of risks plays an important role in governmental decision making. The risks of radiation have especially been emphasized in the popular press. This creates a very serious problem since the public does not understand risk. It gets highly excited about radiation risks which are almost never fatal, whereas it largely ignores other risks which claim thousands of lives every year."
Very little in the risk game is absolute.
Even people who work with risks find a gap between their professional responsibilities and their personal behavior. Dr. Rodricks worries about nitrates in bacon and hot dogs professionally, but personally:

"I appreciate the risks in cigarettes very well. I know absolutely. There's no question. One of the few certainties of our times. But I still smoke occasionally. I know it's wrong in a health sense, but obviously it gives me some other satisfaction. I know I take other kinds of risks when I drive or do a little mountain climbing...
"What I don't like is the hidden risks. When I know there is a risk, I have a choice. I'm not a zero risk person. Hell, why avoid all risks anyway? You can't."

Prescribe Relaxation To Students

NORTHFIELD, Minn. (AP) — The pressure to excel, to compete for professional schools or good-paying jobs, has produced a curious prescription for college students suffering the strain: relax.

And learning to relax is only part of a counseling program at Carleton College here that teaches even top-notch students such seemingly elementary skills as how to budget time, take a test, outline a book or take notes in class.

In one year of operation, the counseling program has dealt with 600 students face-to-face and another 200 by telephone — nearly half the 1,675 enrollment. They included a chemistry major behind in every subject, a French major who had trouble completing routine quizzes, and a freshman failing his rhetoric course.

These were bright students; each had graduated near the top of his high school class. The counseling program is not a remedial course for deficient students. In fact, 60 percent of the student body graduated in the top one-tenth of their high school classes. That in itself puts them into an unfamiliar kind of competition.

Winston Minor, the educational psychologist who runs the program, typically will meet with a student for two or three one-hour sessions. The first topic is relaxation.

"No matter what the pressure, if you take the time to rest your body and your brain, to turn off the internal dialogue and concentrate on your breathing, you can relax in a few minutes," Minor says. "You can do this anywhere, any time, without anyone noticing."

He suggests to students that they try this for up to three minutes just before taking a test. If they can learn to relax, he thinks, they can avoid bigger problems.

"Tension and anxiety are obstacles to learning," Minor says. "No matter how smart you are, if you can't relax you won't achieve your goal. Being able to relax is as important to attaining knowledge as your ability to read."

"If you're not relaxed, chances are you are also having trouble remembering things you've read, goofing up on quizzes, or not getting assignments done on time. One problem breeds another and the next thing you know, it's as if your whole life is falling apart and you're failing everywhere."

Beyond this, Minor suggests that students map out their schedule day by day, making time for friends and recreation as well as study. He prescribes evening seminars on outlining, memory skills and reading. For the student who lets feelings get bottled up inside, or who feels intimidated by a professor or peers, he recommends books on assertiveness training. For those who are interested, he suggests Yoga meditation or readings on other cultures.

Students come in with complaints ranging from too little time for too much work to anxiety about career choices and confusing goals.

Dr. David Maitland, a religion professor who recently taught a course entitled "Success and the American Dream," says students at the college are repelled by the traditional success story, the person who puts money and power above everything else.

"The students in the class seem to totally and vehemently reject this concept of success as a goal," he says. "Yet, when asked what they feared most, nearly all the students said 'failure.'"

"It is ironic that their damning connotation of success does not interfere with their desire to do well at college and to be leaders in their fields."

Some pressures come from parents, as was the case with John, a sophomore typical of those who come to see Minor. His parents' desire that he do well enough at Carleton to get into medical school convinced him that he would have to give up all his friends, Minor says.

It became apparent that John was behind in most of his classes and was doing poorly on chemistry tests, although he had graduated from high school with top honors.

Minor began by training John to improve his memory and to relax before tests. And he was told to buy a calendar and carry it everywhere to plan one day at a time.

"Before John started time scheduling, he would let things go in one ear and out the other because he felt too harried to deal with anything besides his classes," Minor says.

Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia...Vol. 1 only

With $5 food purchase

We're Trying To Keep The Cost of a Good Education Down!

If you've been wanting a good encyclopedia, but figured you'd have to lay out hundreds of dollars for it, we've got a surprise for you.

The Funk & Wagnalls New Encyclopedia.

This week, we're offering Volume 1 for the incredibly low price of 9¢. Which is our way of introducing you to an encyclopedia that covers 193,000 subjects (more than some encyclopedias costing hundreds of dollars). And features over 10,000 maps, photos and illustrations, many of them in full color.

When you and your family have examined Volume 1 at your leisure (without some high-pressure salesman trying to sell you the whole set), we think you'll want Volumes 2 through 27.

You can complete your set as you shop each week for $2.89 a volume.

In no time at all, you'll have what you've always wanted: a home reference library that contains a wealth of information. But hasn't cost a fortune.

FREE DICTIONARY

Get Funk & Wagnalls 2-volume Standard Desk Dictionary free when you purchase Vols. 2 and 3 of the Encyclopedia.
