House Demos Vote Heating Oil Control

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, concerned about soaring prices of home heating oil, voted today in favor of reinstating price controls on the fuel.

The action came as congressional leaders were predicting House and Senate passage of a standby gasoline rationing compromise reached Tuesday night. And the Senate Energy Committee was poised to approve President Carter's proposal for an Energy Mobilization Board to speed action on priority energy projects.

By voice vote, the House Democratic caucus adopted a resolution asserting "it shall be Democratic policy in the House that mandatory allocation controls for (heating oil and diesel fuel) be re-established."

The resolution carries no force of law and is not binding on the 276 Democratic members of the House. But sponsors said it would send a clear message to other legislators and the White House that something must be done to curb rising fuel prices.

Prices of heating oil have climbed 60 percent since last winter, to about 80 cents a gallon. Controls on heating oil and other "middle distillate" fuels like diesel fuel and kerosene were lifted in 1976 by President Gerald R. Ford.

Rep. Peter H. Kostmayer, DPa., the sponsor of the House resolution, told colleagues that "the astronomical increases in prices in the past eight months alone justify the establishment of price controls."

Later, in an interview, Kostmayer said the purpose of the resolution was to pressure Carter into using authority he already has to reimpose heating oil price controls. "He can do it right now," Kostmayer said. "And I think he will."

Several months ago, the Democratic caucus went on record favoring reimposition of price controls on crude oil, which are being lifted gradually by President Carter.

Meanwhile, the Carter administration indicated it would accept the compromise reached late Tuesday by House-Senate conferees on a mechanism to allow the president to ration gasoline during a severe petroleum shortage.

The compromise would give Congress two shots at blocking such a move — first when the rationing plan is drafted and then again if the president attempts to impose it.

Bed Tower Bids Are Due Oct. 2

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Bids for the 166-bed tower for Pitt County Memorial Hospital will be received Tuesday, Oct. 2, at 2 p. m. in the hospital auditorium, hospital trustees were reminded last night.

Ex-officio board member, Commissioner Charles Gaskins said a pre-bid conference will be held with the architects Monday, Sept. 24. "We need for the bids to come in within the money so we can get started right away," Board Chairman Harry Leslie said. "Our high census indicates that."

All beds in the present hospital building are now open and as many as 403 patients have been housed there in a day. Last year the average patient load per day was 255; this year, it's 325, Hospital Director Jack Richardson pointed out.

Hospital Chief of Staff Dr. William Bost commented on the funding by the board of equipment for an 11th operating room to be opened at PCMH. "We had only four in 1977," he said, "and fewer at the old hospital. Within the present building, there is potential for 12."

The medical and nursing staffs continue to grow. Richardson said there are now 191 doctors and dentists on the staff and 57 residents. He quoted Nursing Director Jean Owens as saying there are about 260 registered nurses.

Approved for full medical staff membership were Dr. Paul H. Strausbauch in pathology; Dr. Charles Ravaris in psychiatry; Dr. Gerald Moriarty in psychiatry; Pamela C. Hardy, RN as a family nurse practitioner; and Jennifer M. Lang, RN as nurse practitioner.

Given provisional active staff privileges were Dr. Patricia E. Penovich in neurology; Dr. Robert Hanraham Jr. in clinical pathology and blood banking; Dr. C. Tate Holbrook in pediatrics and hematology-oncology; Dr. John A. Voss in family practice; Dr. L. Jarrett Barnhill in psychiatry and child psychiatry; Dr. Irene E. Malesic in pediatrics and neonatology; Dr. Lynn H. Orr in internal medicine and cardiology; Dr. Peter B. Campbell in internal medicine and infectious disease; Dr. Richard S. Marx in internal medicine; and Dr. Stephen C. Engelke in pediatrics and neonatology.

Changed from active to consulting staff privileges due to place of residence were Dr. Fred Ozawa, Dr. William MacNew, Dr. Thomas Hetrick, Dr. Fred Girton, Dr. William West and Dr. Charles Larkins, all in emergency medicine; and Dr. Naheed Khan in

Addition To City Transit System

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

At a time when the city is experiencing an extremely tight budget situation, the Greenville Area Transit System (GREAT) has found a way to add to its bus fleet at a price any town could afford.

GREAT unveiled this week the new addition, a 1965 GMC 35-passenger city coach, purchased from the Greater Roanoke Transit Co. of Roanoke, Va. for $250.

Mayo Allen, director of the Public Works Department here, said that the city of Roanoke bus system had recently overhauled and modernized the 35-foot vehicle as part of a federal transit grant at a cost of over $10,000.

When Roanoke received additional federal money for transit replacement vehicles, the 1965 model bus was declared surplus, Allen explained. The Greenville Transit System, a division of the Public Works Department, was able to purchase the diesel-powered vehicle for the nominal fee.

Fred Haley Jr., transit manager for GREAT, pointed out that the "new" bus is red and white with gold trim on the exterior, and has a red and white interior. He added that the vehicle is in "very good running condition."

According to Haley, the bus will be put on regular service on the heaviest ridership route and will also be used for special services when needed. The coach has been used on Route Three this week, he said.

Allen noted that the new vehicle actually replaces a GREAT bus that was destroyed by fire here several weeks ago. The vehicle was completely covered by insurance, the director said.

Haley pointed out that the "bus purchase is another part of the city of Greenville's effort to provide better transit service for its citizens." He observed that the larger size bus is necessary to carry more of the passengers riding on the GREAT system.

Ridership has increased 20 percent during the last year, it was mentioned, with average weekday ridership amounting to 807 persons in August for the three bus routes.

Looking To The 1980's

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administration planners intend to build a new "rapid deployment" military force to face the possibility of aggressive moves by a new generation of Soviet leaders.

"We mean to build up slowly to be ready for the problems of the 1980s and 1990s," said one administration official. "I don't see it as a crash program."

This official, who asked to remain anonymous, said the United States should have the capability to send "significant forces" swifty into areas where the United States does not maintain a continuing military presence.

Looking beyond aging Soviet Premier Leonid Brezhnev and his generation of Russian leaders, administration planners say they are concerned that Brezhnev's successors may be inclined to follow a bolder policy in projecting Soviet influence and power around the world.

One of the strongest supporters of the "rapid deployment force" concept is Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser.

Brzezinski told reporters Tuesday that "we need to compete with the Soviets assertively in those parts of the world wherever the Soviets impose on us such a competition either directly or indirectly."

Brzezinski is concerned by what he perceives to be an increasing tendency by the Soviets to exert their power in the Middle East, Africa, and the Caribbean area, using Cubans as proxies.

Acting on Carter's orders, Pentagon staff officers have been developing plans for a force of up to 100,000 troops which could, in emergencies, be airlifted from the United States to regions such as the oil-producing Persian Gulf.

Prime Rate Up

NEW YORK (AP) — Chemical Bank, acting a day after the Federal Reserve moved to tighten credit, today raised its prime lending rate to a record 13¼percent.

The increase from 13 percent came after the Federal Reserve Board raised the discount rate — the rate commercial banks pay on funds borrowed from the Federal Reserve — to 11 percent from 10½ percent.

Quarters Spill Over Highway

FERNLEY, Nev. (AP) — Interstate 80 wasn't paved with gold, but it was covered with quarters for one-fourth of a mile after a truck from the U.S. Mint in Denver spilled part of its load.

The Nevada Highway Patrol said William F. David, 46, was hauling $800,000 worth of quarters to the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco when he fell asleep Tuesday morning. His trailer rig clipped a parked truck, ripping open the side of the trailer.

Sanitarian Of The Year Award Presented Pate

Willie M. Pate, Sanitarian Supervisor for the Pitt County Public Health Department, is the recipient of the "Sanitarian of The Year" award for the state of North Carolina.

The award was presented to Pate at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Public Health Association held in Asheville last week.

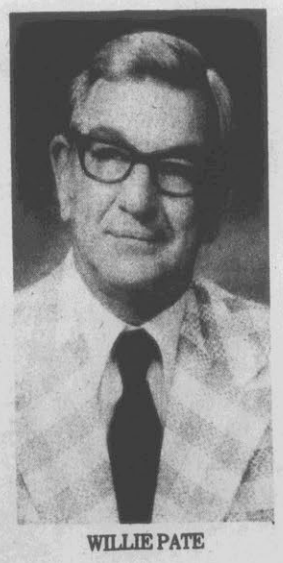
Pate was cited for his work in a new and innovative training program for food-service workers, for the inauguration of a Mobile Home Park Inspection Program, and for renewed emphasis on a solid waste disposal system.

A native of Greene County, Pate is a graduate of the Snow Hill High School and attended Edwards Military Institute during 1941-42 on a football scholarship.

From early 1943 until April 1946 he served as a Marine in World War II, and saw duty in the Caribbean with the U.S. submarine patrol.

After his discharge, he accepted employment with the Greene County Health Department and worked there until 1950.

In August, 1950, Pate accepted a position as Senior Sanitarian with the Pitt County Health Department. In 1958 he left to accept employment with Ralston-Purina Feed Company, but returned to the Pitt County Health Department in July, 1967. On July 1, 1975 he was promoted to Sanitarian Supervisor II.



WILLIE PATE

Pate and his wife, Grace, are the parents of four children. He is active in professional and civic groups. He has served as president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer of the Environmental Health Section, N. C. Public Health Association, and as a member of numerous committees. He also is chairman of Pitt Community College's Environmental Science Advisory Committee.

An elder and member of the Board of Trustees of Red Oak Christian Church, Pate teaches Sunday School and INSTALLMENTS?

I have just learned that in order to hook into the city water main that has been installed by Greenville Utilities between the Farmville Highway and the Stantonsburg Road on the Allen Road, we must pay a main fee of $185, plus $4 per foot of road frontage. This brings my total fee to $665. GUCO requires payment in full in advance of any work.

The road frontage fee used to be $3.50 per foot, but was recently increased to $4 — after the pipes had already been installed. Our neighboring community water system, Bell Arthur, does not charge the road frontage fee. Other community water systems charge $125 for a main fee, yet GUCO's is $185. Everyone at GUCO I've talked to has been nice, but has stated policy which is not to ease the burden for the customer by arranging for payments in installments. A. H.

Hotline has been told by Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne that he is going to ask the GUCO board within the next 30 to 60 days to consider allowing installment payment for assessments such as yours. He said it has always been the Commission's policy not to accept installment payments. "We just didn't feel we wanted to be in the loan business," he said. He added, however, that in the light of increasing charges to customers, he is seeing the need for presenting a plan for such a policy to the board.

He said the charges are set so that those who directly benefit will pay the costs, not customers of the entire GUCO syetem. He agreed that they are high and probably burdensome to many individuals and families.

5 Merit Scholarship Semifinalists In County

Seven Pitt County seniors — five from Rose High and two from D. H. Conley High School, have qualified and been named as Semifinalists in the 1980 Merit Scholarship competition.

Nationally, about 15,000 of the nation's top students have qualified for the 1980 program of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation of Evanston, Illinois.

The next step for the 15,000 semifinalists is advancing to finalists. Approximately 4,300 Merit Scholarships for finalists will be announced and awarded in the spring of 1980.

Semifinalists are the highest scorers among 1.1 million students who took the 1978 qualifying tests. They represent the top scorers in each state, named from the top half of one percent of the state's senior class in numbers proportional to each state's percentage of the nation's graduating seniors.

The five from Rose High achieving semifinalist status are:

— Thomas Bolt. Now a student at Delaware University, Newark, Del., Bolt was a junior at Rose High during the 1978-79 school year. He attended Governor's School this past summer in the field of chorus music, and has lived at several locations in the U.S. and abroad. His interests include soccer, ping pong, and romance languages, which he has indicated he may major in.

— Margaret Cain. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cain, she would like to attend Duke University and plans a career in journalism. Margaret attended Governor's School last summer, and has been active in drama — at Rose High and with the Ayden Theater Workshop. She is a member of the National Honor Society and is associate editor of "Rampant Lines," the school's newspaper. Among her major interests are creative writing and drama.

— Mark Grossnickle is the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Grossnickle. Active in many school groups, he is president of the Math Club, vice-president of the Chess Club, and belongs to the Science-Ecology, French, Key and Wildlife Clubs. He is also on the Inter-Club Council.

Learning For Adults Is Not Confined Only To Classroom

NEW YORK (AP) — Business and industry, the military, volunteer service programs, museums, libraries, civic and community agencies, trade and professional associations, labor unions, learning networks and free universities — all offer adults a chance to continue their education.

Newspapers, radio and television programs and cassettes can be used on your own or in conjunction with other studies.

"More adult learning activity in our country takes place outside the classroom than in it," says Ronald H. Miller, assistant director of the College Board's Future Directions for a Learning Society. "Almost every community has these additional learning resources."

If you work, your employer may provide in-service training. In recent years, colleges have found that many of these programs are worthy of college credit. Check with your employer to see if training programs you have taken have been examined for award of college credit by the American Council on Education, the New York State Education Department, the Consortium of the California State Universities and Colleges, or the Pennsylvania Department of Education.

If you're in the military, the Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Education Support (DANTES) offers a testing program through which college credit may be earned. Contact the nearest base education officer to learn if the tests are available.

If you are a veteran, check to see if the program you wish to enter under your GI Bill of Rights is approved by the Veterans Administration.

Volunteer service can help develop learning skills and demonstrate accomplishments that interest employers. Field work and internships, a growing part of academic curricula, can be fulfilled through these programs.

Museums, zoos and botanical gardens offer adults such services as lecture series, free admission on certain days for senior citizens, music series, and non-credit courses. Some museums have affiliated schools in the area of fine arts.

Libraries can tap resources that are otherwise difficult to reach. Through the card catalog you can find books, periodicals and records on almost any subject.

A growing number of libraries are now providing special services for adults. Many of these relate to independent study in external degree or other programs that grant substantial credit for successful performance on proficiency examinations. Reading and study guides for proficiency examinations such as the College-Level Examination Program are available, as are catalogs of local education opportunities and announcements of special learning projects.

Specially trained librarians are often available to help you define your needs and goals, plan a learning program and obtain needed materials.

Civic and community agencies such as Ys offer a wide spectrum of educational programs. Topics include environmental and international issues, personal development and family relationships.

Churches, synagogues and other houses of worship frequently provide religious and community programs of interest. Courses in adult basic education, arts and crafts, home and family relationships and personal development are often available.

Trade and professional associations (for example, the American Management Associations) offer training for members, but also in some cases for non-members.

If you belong to a union, check to see if it offers vocational or personal development programs.

Learning networks and free universities are two emerging community organizations to consider. Networks such as The Learning Exchange in the greater Chicago area serve as brokers, allowing people to indicate what they want to learn, what they can teach, and what they would like to discuss.

Free universities offer non-credit courses but do not have the restrictions found in traditional colleges and universities. Students establish what their needs and goals are, and study activities are outlined for them to follow.

Newspapers provide both current material on subjects you may be interested in pursuing and tips on local learning resources through news and feature stories and advertisements. Look for special education supplements in August and September, January, and May or June for information on the fall, winter and summer programs.

In some locations you can earn college credit and even a degree by taking courses offered on television or radio. Check with your local colleges, television and radio stations, and public libraries for information.

Both video and audio cassette tapes have become important learning tools. Many libraries now have these valuable aids and can advise you on how to use them to your maximum advantage.

For more information and a list of resources and directories on learning opportunities, send a business-size stamped, self-addressed envelope to Future Directions for a Learning Society, The College Board, 888 Seventh Ave., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Tobacco Festival Is Program Topic

The purpose of the Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival was discussed at the meeting of the Junior Woman's Club held last week.

Ed Walker, of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, was speaker and gave salesmanship pointers to members, who are responsible for selling ads in the Tobacco Festival Magazine to area merchants. Ways and Means Chairman Earlene Lawrence introduced the speaker and reported on sales progress. She reminded members that Oct. 1 is the deadline for sales.

President Maggie Smith conducted the meeting and welcomed members and guests including Cindy Grey, Jana Gurganus, Brenda Bunn, Elaine Denton and Janet Faust and club advisor, Mrs. Joyce Hastings.

Reports were heard from club departments and special committees. Notes were read from Pitt Memorial Hospital and the ECU Medical School thanking the club for their efforts in furnishing the parents' waiting room of the Neonatal Unit at the hospital. The project is in the final stages of completion.

The fall district meeting will be held in Oak City Oct. 10. The next board meeting will be Wednesday.

A plant exchange was held by members.

Language Needs Unisex Pronoun

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Don't back down! You were not wrong when you advised your readers to "consult a lawyer, and pay him for what he knows." He and him become personal pronouns when referring to both sexes.

Please inform Mandy Stellman of Milwaukee and Ms. Perlman of St. Paul, who should not object to being known as Mandy Stell—and Ms. Perl—after removing the "man" from their names, that the old rule still holds.

So don't apologize, Abby. We appreciate the fine lawyers, doctors, clergy and those in other vocations who are of the fairer sex, but let's not bend over backwards to distinguish whether he has acquired a 5 o'clock shadow, or a shiny nose just before dinner. It is HIS vocational performance that counts.

GEORGE WASHINGTON BOWEN

DEAR GEORGE: I cannot tell a lie. I find it a nuisance to write "he/she" and "him/her." And I abhor that new style journalism that refers to women by their last names. I find myself backing up to re-read entire paragraphs in order to find out if the "Fonda" is JANE or HENRY!

DEAR ABBY: I am being married in six weeks, and everything would be perfect if it weren't for the way my mother feels about my fiance. She keeps telling me it's still not too late to change my mind even though she knows how much I love Ron. (He's 26 and I'm 24.)

He's a wonderful person and I have never loved anyone the way I love him, but Mom thinks I deserve a better-looking man. Can you believe it, Abby? I've gone with some gorgeous men, but they were all so in love with themselves that they couldn't love anyone else.

True, Ron is short and he doesn't have a very good complexion, but he has the most beautiful, honest eyes I've ever seen, and to me he is handsome!

I am no beauty, but my mother thinks I am. I am happy with what I have, but my mother is making me miserable. I can't take much more of her hassling. What should I do?

UNHAPPY BRIDE

DEAR UNHAPPY: Tune mother out when she puts down Ron. She's wrong, of course. Handsome is as handsome does.

DEAR ABBY: Someone who had worked in a government agency for 15 years wrote to say that the average person is an "idiot." To support that statement the writer explained that a woman was given an employment form to fill out. One of the routine questions was "SEX?" In response to that question, she wrote, "I don't care for it much anymore."

Well, I'd like to offer a similar experience. I am a room clerk in a first-class hotel. On our hotel registry is the question, "FIRM?"

After one very attractive young woman had registered, I carefully read the form she had filled out. In the space following "FIRM?" she had written, "VERY!"

IT HAPPENED IN BOULDER, COLO.

DEAR ABBY: I caught a cold in my back, but instead of going to my regular acupuncturist, who is a noted lecturer and author, I went to another acupuncturist who stuck 40 gold needles in my back.

Then I went back to my regular acupuncturist who told me I should get a lawyer and sue the man who put 40 needles in my back because he broke every rule of acupuncture.

Then I went to Kaiser Hospital and they said trying to remove those needles would be like going on a fishing expedition, and I would be better off leaving them in.

Abby, I've had these needles in my back for two and a half years, and I'd like to get them out. They are playing havoc with my system.

NEEDLED IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR NEEDLED: Get another opinion. And a third if necessary. But stick with qualified, conventional, medical doctors—unless you don't mind being stuck again.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B. IN BEACON HILL: Tell your friend that giving birth to a child does not make a woman a "mother" in the truest sense of the word. But taking a motherless child into one's home (and heart) and raising that child with love, patience and understanding spells out the real meaning of motherhood.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Vows Solemnized Sunday In Afternoon Service

GRIFTON — Miss Georgia Pamela McLawhorn and Robert Richard Labusohr were united in marriage in a ceremony at 4:30 p.m. Sunday at the Grifton United Methodist Church. The Rev. Robert F. Moore officiated at the double ring service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Willard McLawhorn of Grifton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Robert Labushor of Jackson Heights, N. Y.

The church altar had a single arrangement of white gladioli, carnations and snapdragons with twin candlesticks holding white candles. In the chancel, palms, flower baskets and candelabra were used as well as a unity candelabra and prie-dieu.

Mrs. Troy Jackson, organist, and Mrs. John Gray, vocalist, rendered a program of nuptial music including "The Song of Ruth" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Mrs. Paul Bradley directed the wedding and Miss Jan O'-Quinn of Raleigh presided at the bridal register.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white silesta chiffon over peau de soie designed with high neckline encircled with silk floral Venise lace. The bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke of English net stitched in embroidery motifs. The long fitted sleeves repeated the lace at the cuffs. Self-covered buttons accented the back closure from the neckline to the waistline which was encircled with floral lace from which fell the sunburst pleated skirt and attached chapel train. Her tiered veil of illusin was edged with lace and held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace and beaded with seed pearls. She carried a white lace covered prayerbook centered with a bouquet of white bridal roses showered with ribbons.

Mrs. Tommy Fisher of Raleigh, honor attendant, wore a long gown fashioned of apricot silesta featuring a blouson bodice with slit butterfly sleeves and portrait neckline with rolled bows at the shoulders and waistline. She wore a bandeau of silk flowers in apricot and carried a bouquet of apricot silk roses with touches of fern and ribbons.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Norman Reizen of Glenieg, Md., sister of the bridegroom, cousins of the bride, Mrs. David Wilhelm of Richmond, Va., Miss Mary Ellen Anderson of Chapel Hill, Miss Debra Smith of Vanceboro, Miss Marilyn Heavner and Miss Carol Tant of Raleigh. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant.

Paul Reizen, nephew of the bridegroon, ring bearer, carried the rings on a white embroidered pillow made by the bride's mother. The bridegroom's father served as best man and ushers were brother of the bride, Frank McLawhorn, Norman Reizen, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Glenieg, Md., Jimmy Powell, uncle of the bride of Vanceboro, Rick Bennett, Rodney Warner of Raleigh, and David Wilhelm of Richmond, Va.

MRS. ROBERT RICHARD LABUSOHR

The mother of the bride wore a full length gown of shrimp chiffon with a scoop neckline with an overlay of chiffon. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of powder blue silesta with a V-neckline and beaded cummerbund. Both wore orchid corsages.

The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Franklin Powell and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Sadie McLawhorn, were given white carnation corsages.

The bride is a graduate of Grifton High School and the N. C. Baptist School of Nursing, Winston-Salem. She is presently employed at Wake County Medical Center, Raleigh. The bridegroom graduated from Wake Forest University and the School of Dentistry at UNC-CH. He is now practicing denistry in Wendell, where the couple will be living after a wedding trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the bride's parents. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Dain Riley and Mrs. Scott Allen.

Aunts of the bride Mrs. Gene Gilland, Mrs. Clarence Anderson and Mrs. Ronald Smith assisted in serving.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents Saturday night at the Captain's Table for the wedding Party and families.

Mrs. Gene Gilland entertained at the Holiday Inn at a bridesmaids luncheon Saturday. The bride's parents and Mr. and Mrs. James Daniels gave a pig pickin' Friday evening.

Homemaker's Haven

By Sue B. May

Pitt Home Agent

Recently we have had numerous calls relating to the prevention and removal of mildew in the home. The high humidity in our area makes our homes havens for this thin, often whitish, growth produced on many kinds of surfaces by molds. Though always present in the air, molds that cause mildew need moisture and certain temperatures in order to grow. They commonly develop in muggy summer weather, especially in houses that are closed.

Molds that cause mildew flourish wherever it is damp, warm, poorly aired, poorly lighted—in cellars, in crawl spaces of houses without basements, in clothing closets, on shower curtains, on damp clothes rolled up for ironing. These molds are also likely to grow in a newly-built house because of moisture in the building materials. Four mil plastic can be placed under a house to prevent ground moisture from rising through the floors and walls. Covering 50 percent of the ground will generally take care of the situation. If excessive drying or floor cracking should occur, adjust the plastic to expose more ground.

To prevent mildew, keep things clean and dry. This means that the cause of dampness must be found and corrected. For example, if your clothes dryer is equipped with a vent, have it exhausted to the outside to prevent condensation of moisture.

Cool air holds less moisture than warm air. Properly installed air-conditioning systems remove moisture from the air by taking up warm air, cooling it, and circulating the cool air back into the room. In non-air-conditioned homes, mechanical dehumidifiers are useful. A humidistat can be attached to the unit to control the humidity in a room. When using air conditioners or dehumidifiers, keep windows and doors closed.

To dry the air in closets and other small areas, an electric light may be burned continuously. The heat will be sufficient to prevent mildew if the space is not too large. Be sure to place the light bulb at a sufficient distance from clothing to avoid the danger of fire.

Chemicals that absorb moisture; such as, silica gel and activated alumina may be used to absorb moisture from the air. They are sold in department stores, drugstores, and by building-supply dealers, sometimes under various trade names. Be sure to keep chemicals out of the reach of children.

Silica gel and activated alumina remain dry feeling even when saturated—they hold half their weight of water. To use, hang cloth bags of the chemical in clothing closets, or place an open container of it in the closet—on a shelf preferably, or on the floor. Keep closet doors closed so that moisture from outside air will not get in. You may scatter the dry granules through layers of clothing and other articles that are to be stored in tightly closed chests or trunks.

Both silica gel and activated alumina can be used over and over, if dried between times. To dry, simply place moist granules in a vented oven at 300°F. for several hours. Then put in an airtight box and cool before reusing. Silica gel specially treated with a color indicator is pink when full of moisture, blue when dry.

Musty odors, which indicate mold growth, are sometimes noticeable in such placess shower stalls. Musty odors usually disappear if the area is well heated and dried. If the odors remain, scrub with a solution of ½ to 1 cup of liquid household bleach to a gallon of water. Rinse with clear water and wipe as dry as possible. Keep windows open until walls and floors are thoroughly dry. Pre-caution: Work quickly and carefully on plastic and asphalt tile to avoid spotting the surface. Aerosol sprays for cleaning and sanitizing bathroom walls are also available. Leather goods may be protected against mildew by applying a good wax dressing.

If mildew does form on clothing and household fabrics, remove spots as soon as they are discovered. Brush off any surface growth outdoors to prevent scattering the mildew spores in the house. Sun and air fabrics thoroughly. Dryclean non-washable articles.

Laundry washable articles at once with soap or detergent and water. Rinse well and dry in the sun. If any stain remains, bleach with lemon juice and salt or use an appropriate bleach. Test colored fabrics for colorfastness to the bleach.

Remove loose mold from outer coverage of upholstered articles, mattresses, rugs, and carpets by brushing with a broom. Do this outdoors if possible to prevent scattering mildew spores in the house.

Run a vacuum cleaner attachment over the surface of the article to draw out more of the mold. Remember that the mold spores are being drawn into the bag of the vacuum cleaner. If the appliance has a disposable bag, remove and dispose of it immediately. If not, empty the bag carefully (preferably outdoors).

If mildew remains on upholstered articles or mattresses, sponge lightly with thick suds of soap or detergent, and wipe with a clean, damp cloth. Another way to remove mildew on upholstered furniture is to wipe it with a cloth wrung out of a solution consisting of 1 cup denatured or rubbing alcohol and 1 cup water. Dry the article thoroughly. One part denatured alcohol and 1 part water may also be used on affected leather goods.

Thoroughly clean mildewed floors, woodwork, and other wooden parts of structures by scrubbing them with a mild alkali, such as washing soda or trisodium phosphate (4 to 6 tablespoons) and 1 cup household chlorine bleach to a gallon of water.

Remove any dry, loose mold from paper with a clean soft cloth. Spread pages of books out fanwise to air. If the books are very damp, sprinkle cornstarch or talcum powder between the leaves to take up the moisture. Leave starch or powder on for several hours, then brush off.

Nightmare Of Errors Made

Obviously no one relishes the thought of having the secrets of how to build a hydrogen bomb available to the world.

Nevertheless, it is extremely doubtful that the Justice Department should ever have made a freedom of the press issue out of the matter.

The department obtained injunctions preventing "The Progressive" magazine and "The Daily Californian", student paper of University of California at Berkeley, from publishing the material.

The information finally showed up in the 11,000 circulation "Press Connection" in Madison, Wis. and the Justice Department abandoned its fight.

The "Press Connection" merely published a letter from Charles Hansen, a California computer programmer, who says the information is freely available from public sources.

What it boils down to is that the hydrogen bomb is far too complicated for any crazed individual to build, and that the published information could easily have been obtained by any competent private or governmental espionage agency.

Frankly the prospects of small governments or groups being able to build a hydrogen bomb scares us to death. We wish the information were still secret. It is obvious to us, though, that the material's secrecy was lost some time ago. What these publications have done is allow the public to know that the information has been available.

Gas Sales Pushing Us Into Metrics

An Enfield service station now has 25 cent gasoline.

Don't go there looking for a bargain, however. What is being sold is gasoline by the liter, the metric measurement.

The nation has been working toward the metric system for some time, with considerable public resistance. Now gasoline pumps which register only up to 99.9 cents per gallon may push us to metrics sooner than we anticipated.

Of course total confusion reigns when the switch is made on customers who have been dealing in gallons all their lives.

It's really not all that complicated, however. What actually counts these days is the cost in dollars of filling up the tank.

THE PUSHER!

Center Like A Magnet

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a presidential campaign, the political center is like a magnet, drawing candidates from the left and from the right toward the middle, where the votes are.

That's why most candidates — at least the successful ones — resist the labels of conservative or liberal, and insist that they look for solutions to fit the problem, not some preconceived ideology.

And that is what Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is doing now. It is not a matter of shifting positions, but of emphasis. Kennedy says he is no big-spending liberal, wedded to the solutions of the 1960s. Nor, he says, is he less concerned than the Carter administration about deficits and inflation.

That doesn't undo his past criticism of a federal budget he said shortchanged social spending. But he is not stressing that theme these days, as he considers a challenge to President Carter for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

"We cannot accept a policy that cuts spending to the bone in areas like jobs and health, but allows billions of dollars in wasteful spending for tax subsidies and adds even greater fat and waste through inflationary spending for defense," he told Democrats at their mid-term convention last Dec. 9.

Kennedy still doesn't agree with the administration's spending priorities. But curiously, as he comes closer to presidential candidacy, he seems more cautious in his

Central Job Data Hoped

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The world of work is complex and confusing enough to those accustomed to it. For the newcomer, it is boggling.

What license might be needed for a certain job? What are the apprenticeship requirements? Is there a school in North Carolina teaching a particular skill course? Is a special skill likely to still be needed 10 years from now? Where can one get help?

Given the variety of school courses, community colleges, technical institutes, campuses public and private; and the host of state and federal agencies involved in job counseling it's enough to make even the most expert school guidance counselor tremble.

What, then, of a youngster with no preparation to deal with such a scattered array of information. As J. B. Archer, chairman of the state's Employment Security Commission, explains: "most young people do not have effective job-seeking skills... in plainer words, they don't know how to properly apply for a job and thus their chances of landing one are lessened."

No Preparation

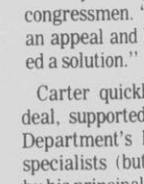
Archer says he is not talking just about young people from poor or minority homes, but about "the great majority of them...are disadvantaged because we are not providing them-in or out of school — the preparation they need for successfully entering the difficult and complex world of work."

Statistics describe the situation: the jobless rate for those between 16 and 19 years of age is more than 13 percent. The overall unemployment rate is 4.3 percent. For minority youth, the jobless scene is even more grim — 26.6 percent and that is "more than five times the rate for the civilian labor force as a whole. And this situation ought to be considered intolerable," Archer commented at a recent meeting of the AFL-CIO.

"We are not talking about cold statistics or somebody else's problem....we are talking about our children, yours and mine. They are the most precious resource we have and the destiny of our state and nation will one day be in their hands," Archer said.

A new statewide computer system is now being designed to go into use next year which would help pull together some of the scattered and complex information. Involved in design of the network is the State Occupational Information Coordinating Committee with representatives from the Employment Security Commission, the public schools, community colleges, Human Resources, and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.



BILL NOBLITT

Information about nundreds of occupations, the employment outlook for those jobs, career ladders, educational requirements, licensing requirements, apprenticeship information, and wage and salary data will be on file.

One Place

Detailed information about vocational trade schools, community colleges and technical institutes, colleges and universities, and manpower and training programs will also be on the record.

"For the first time, this and a wealth of similar job information will be available to young people and others in the work force...in one place," Archer explained. Counselors will be able to help people determine their interests and abilities and provide guidance on training and preparing for a job.

Computer terminals will tap the system from job offices, schools and colleges, manpower training offices, and vocational rehabilitation offices.

Further, Archer said federal legislation now in the works would put counseling and testing programs to work in the public schools and open the door to consultation with private employers about the kind of school programs needed to prepare youth for work.

Radicals Join 'System'

NEW YORK CITY — Where have all the radicals of the late Sixties and Seventies gone? Well, those who aren't working for IBM and for Chase Manhattan Bank are in retailing. You can walk down the main street of any large city now and see hundreds of outdoor stands set up where this generation of merchant princes are selling leather belts, carnations, jewelry, towels, art work and pressure cookers. They have not only joined the capitalistic system but have learned to beat it.

I was walking past Saks Fifth Avenue the other day and stopped in front of a stand with a sign tacked on the card table: "Max's Fifth Avenue — Established Since June 1978."

Max was selling T-shirts for $4 apiece. He was doing a good business and I had to wait a long time before I could have a word with him.

Finally, his girlfriend took over for him and we could chat.

"What does the fall look like?" I asked him.

"I'm optimistic in spite of the recession," Max said. "Our inventories are down and I believe the consumer is in a buying mood. Volume-wise we're ahead of spring, but profit-wise we're being squeezed by the high cost of card tables and pushcarts."

"Well, you certainly have a good location."

ART BUCHWALD

"Yes, we did a survey of the various sidewalks in Manhattan and decided that Fifth Avenue and 50th Street had a class clientele.

"We were first attracted by Saks Fifth Avenue's alluring window displays. They also have an excellent advertising department. We looked over Bloomingdale's but discovered that Alexander's, which is located next door, was underselling us.

"For a while we were set up on 34th Street, but we decided to upgrade our merchandise and appeal to the more affluent shopper. My girlfriend wanted us to put up our stand in front of Bergdorf Goodman, but I like to be in the shadow of St. Patrick's Cathedral."

"How does Saks Fifth Avenue feel about you selling T-shirts right outside their front door?"

"They haven't welcomed us with the enthusiasm you'd expect. Every hour Mr. Saks

Other Editors Say New Tax Burden

(The Wilson Times)

A national retail sales tax? Well, not exactly, says Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee. He contends his still-hazy proposal for a levy on the increased value of goods at each stage of production would be a "wholesale tax".

Known as a value-added tax, or VAT, this source of government revenue is popular in some European countries. Although analysts generally conclude that the VAT is a form of sales tax ultimately paid by consumers, Rep. Ullman told a conference sponsored by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce that his "Americanized" version of the VAT would not be a retail sales levy.

Rep. Ullman said a 10 percent VAT would raise $120 billion to $150 billion, enough to allow Congress to cut income and Social Security payroll taxes, hike business tax deductions for depreciation, and end "double taxation" of corporate earnings and again as dividends to stockholders.

The Oregon congressman received sustained applause from an audience of 300 lawyers, accountants, lobbyists and business executives. But, if Rep. Ullman's version of the VAT is not a retail sales tax to be paid by consumers' who would absorb it? Certainly the groups represented at the conference do not expect to get stung, or they would not have been so enthusiastic. Let's face it. Such a tax would be paid by middle- and low-income wage earners.

Because a VAT takes a bigger bite from the resources of low-income families, critics contend it would be "regressive". Proponents say this objection can be removed. How? One way to offset the tax would be to expand the present system of "earned income credit" now received by the working poor.

If high-income and poor families receive a major portion of the proposed tax relief, then the VAT would strike hardest at the middle class, who are already paying disproportionately high taxes.

We do not question Rep. Ullman's estimate of VAT revenue, but — based on past federal performance — strongly suspect Congress would renege in tax-cut promises.

By removing inequities in the existing tax structure and eliminating wasteful federal spending, Congress could implement most of the reforms Rep. Ullman claims imposition of a VAT would allow.

An open forum and a summarization by the Rev. R.A. Young, D.D., of Charlotte on the permanent values of the gathering concluded the second pre-synod home mission conference 4 p.m. today of the Presbyterians in North Carolina.

Featuring the morning program was an address by the Rev. Henry W. McLaughlin, D.D., of Richmond, Va. The Rev. C.E. Hodgin, D.D., of Greensboro, superintendent of Home Missions of the Orange Presbytery, was in charge of the morning program.

Dr. McLaughlin pointed to Mussolini, Stalin, Hitler and Deladier, declaring that they had risen from a background of comparative poverty.

"The first three of these men," said McLauchlin, "were reared in countries where the dominant church had allied itself with the privileged classes and where the poor are neglected.

"These boys learned to hate the church and the things for which the church stands. They are now motivated by a gospel of hate and a philosophy that might makes right. How different would be the condition of the world if these three boys had been taught the real message of the gospel of Christ — a message of the love and a philosophy of altruism."

INSIDE REPORT

Boosted Castro's Stock

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's release of four Puerto Rican terrorists boosted Fidel Castro's prestige in the Third. World just as he emerged as its dominant pro-Soviet voice, with the Cuban dictator spicing his triumph by violating one commitment to Washington and going slow on another.

Castro privately offered early this year to swap four Americans jailed in Cuba in return for the four Puerto Ricans held in U.S. jails, promising not to publicly claim credit. The Americans were still in jail five days after the nationalists were released. Castro immediately broke his promise of discretion, in effect proclaiming himself the hero of Puerto Rico.

So, the commander of Soviet surrogate troops in Africa and leader of spreading Marxist revolution in the Caribbean and Central America is lionized in the Third World thanks to U.S. policies. This turn of events is strange even in the wonderworld of Carter administration foreign policy. How did it happen?

The president's decision stemmed not only from a simplistic commitment to "human rights" but also from the desire of some State Department officials to head off further diatribes against the U.S. At the Castro-dominated "non-aligned" conference in Havana (which denounced Yankee imperialism anyway). And there is strong evidence Carter was thinking in terms of his own domestic political interests as well.

Although the administration denies any tit-for-tat deal, the original proposal came from Castro himself early this year when a congressional delegation went to Havana to seek release of the Americans. "There need be no negotiations or publicity," Castro privately informed the congressmen. "You've made an appeal and I have proposed a solution."

Carter quickly bought the deal, supported by the State Department's human rights specialists (but amid doubts by his principal foreign policy aides.)

The doubts were quickly confirmed. Despite Castro's implicit pledge of silence, this headline appeared in the controlled Havana press only hours after the release of the terrorists: "Carter forced to release Puerto Ricans." That raised well-founded suspicions that the wily Castro had always intended to parade his conquest over Washington during the non-aligned conference.

Nor was Castro in any rush to fulfill his end of the bargain. At this writing, Washington still expects the release of the Americans, but there has been no move from Havana.

The certainty that releasing the four terrorists would add further glitter to Castro as revolutionary leader prompted a warning to Carter earlier this year from Puerto Rico's Gov. Carlos Romero-Barcelo.

"Adversaries of the U.S.," he said, referring obliquely to Castro, "will interpret the gesture as a tacit admission by the U.S. that...Puerto Rico's role as a part of the United States is both invalid and intolerable." Unless the

Strength For Today

FIX YOUR MOUTH

A teacher stood before a group of boys and girls and showed them, in succession, a number of crude sketches of the human face. One was a picture of a man whose mouth turned up at the corners in a jolly laugh. Another was the picture of a man the corners of whose mouth were turned down. "What's wrong with this latter picture?" asked the teacher. A little girl sang out, "His mouth is upside down."

There are some people whose hearts appear to be literally bursting with chuckles, whose faces are radiant with smiles as bright as the morning sun and as natural as the greenery of the landscape in spring. These are the people whose mouths naturally turn up. They may not be the salt of the earth, but certainly they are the sugar of the earth, keeping life sweet amid its manifold complexities.

For many a person the word of counsel should be, "Brother, stand before a mirror and fix your mouth; it's upside down."

Housing Prices Only Bubble?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Among certain securities analysts, a very popular topic these days is the "upcoming deflation of the real estate bubble."

Some are so convinced it will occur that each fortnight in the past two years they have so reminded their clients, betting that while the message might bore some it will give encouragement to others.

Stock market averages, it should be remembered, have gone nowhere in about 15 years, despite the best efforts of promoters. Meanwhile, investors in homes, it is popularly believed, have made a fortune.

Statistics seem to document the claim. The median sale price of existing single-family homes in 1973 was $29,900, according to records of the National Association of Realtors. So far in 1979 it is $57,900.

Home buying, in fact, has to some extent served as a substitute for stock market investing. It is not merely coincidence, they say, that individual participation in stocks fell as interest in housing rose.

And, they continue, as the bloom fades from housing, some of those prodigal investors will return. Some, it is said, might come back laden with housing profits and an inclination toward stocks.

At any rate, say these wizened observers of trends, what goes up comes down. Bubbles burst, whether in housing, stocks or tulips.

There's a big question, however, about what constitutes a bubble. Has a house whose price rose from $29,900 in 1973 to $57,900 bubbled? Or, in terms of buying power, has it merely risen with inflation?

Prices of some houses have indeed soared, even tripled, during the past six or seven years. Those who own them have bragged about their new role as capitalists. Millions more set out to reach that status.

What a marvelous new game.

That became a general perception, but not the correct one. The median price of existing single-family houses hasn't risen any faster than prices in general.

Much of the attention seems due to the fact that houses are the biggest purchases made by families. Relative to other items, the price of a house is enormous. And when it grows, it grows more enormous.

It is also durable. The price of pork might double but there's nothing left after you use it. In contrast, a house can be sold, which explains why so many people cheered housing inflation and damned food inflation.

Regardless, that appreciation in housing isn't all there to be used, such as for investing in stocks. Why? Because many families already have refinanced their homes and used the money for other things.

That, of course, would reduce the amount potentially available for stocks, and for housing too. And a recession quite likely will hurt some sellers of homes who have notions of getting top dollar.

But if you talk about a bubble in housing prices, a bubble that might burst, then in order to be consistent you also consider viewing this entire economy of ours as one vast, fragile bubble.

"Nobody likes co etition," I said.

So now we're part of the system and it's driving them up the wall. I've even offered to give Saks a discount on my T-shirts, but this only gets him madder. # Draft-Kennedy Effort Is Shaping Up In N.C.

By The Associated Press

The chairman of the state Democrats and other Democratic leaders say they still support President Carter, but a draft-Kennedy movement appears to be taking shape in the state.

Sen. Russell Walker of Asheboro has criticized Carter, but, he said, "right now, as party chairman, I'm supporting Carter."

And he said he thinks that even if Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., meet in the state's presidential party in May, Carter would win mainly because "Gov. (Jim) Hunt has tremendous strength in this state" and Hunt supports Carter.

The first stirrings of a draft-Kennedy movement in the state began cropping up recently, first with the visit of a Washington staff member of a national Kennedy organization to the state and then with the start of a state group by Tony Adams, a young Wake County political activist.

Kennedy has denied that he is actively seeking the Democratic nomination, although organizations supporting him are active in several primary states.

Adams and the Washington staff member couldn't be reached for comment. It wasn't known whether they are working together.

Hunt is Carter's most visible supporter in the state and is expected to keep supporting him. But even Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce, admitted some of Hunt's supporters are getting nervous about Carter's dropping popularity and the effect it could have on Hunt's expected re-election bid.

"The governor can't go wrong by supporting an incumbent president. If Kennedy should win the nomination, he'll need the support of Southerners and Carter people in the general election," Pearce said.

Walker said he believes Carter needs to strengthen his image, and quickly, but still thinks he is stronger than Kennedy in North Carolina. Kennedy's politics are generally far more liberal than Carter's.

Walker said he and state party executive director David Price recently met with some of Carter's staff and gave their opinions about Carter's strength.

"But I told them there is a need to shore up that support here," Walker said.

Walker added that he recently met with 15 western county party chairmen and that support for Carter was pretty firm.

Other expected Carter supporters include Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., former Gov. Bob Scott, and Democratic National Committeewoman Jane Patterson, deputy secretary of the state Administration Department.

Evans-Novak . . .

four terrorists admit their guilt, the governor added, their release will justify charges that they have been held all these years as "political" prisoners.

Castro has been trumpeting exactly that. The terrorists were "political prisoners" and Puerto Rico, like prerevolutionary Nicaragua, is a captive of the "colonial" power of the U.S.

When the four Puerto Ricans walked out of jail, they threatened to repeat the criminal acts that put them there following the assassination attempt on President Truman and the shoot-out in the House of Representatives. Back in San Juan, they were received as heroes, then went on an islandwide tour reviling the U.S. and praising Castro.

Simultaneously, on Sept. 13 at a Washington dinner for several hundred leaders of the Hispanic community in this country, Carter claimed political credit for the release of the Puerto Ricans. But it is doubtful that that will gain him the support of any Hispanic Americans.

As of now, not even native Puerto Ricans want independence. In repeated votes, the Independence Party has received negligible support. That might change, however, with Castro able to claim U.S. recognition as unofficial bargaining agent for Puerto Rican independence.

This performance, coming while Washington seems powerless to push Soviet combat troops off Cuba, suggests the perils of playing to the applause of the Third World in shaping U.S. foreign policy. Those perils are deepened when combined with understandable efforts of an unpopular president to save himself politically.

Mears Col. ...

criticism of the man from whom he would have to wrest the nomination.

"I'm generally reluctant to get into critical positions on the adminstration," he said the other day. He didn't seem so reluctant when he was denouncing Carter's budget priorities, or accusing the administration of surrender to the oil lobby, or calling the proposed windfall profits tax "a transparent fig leaf."

He says he wants to cooperate with the Democratic White House. "I would like to work with them, as I indicated to the president, shaping the energy program, also in coming to grips with some of these issues of the economy," he said.

Kennedy said he is doing so now, as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and in other areas as well. He said "we have strong workings now" with the administration on a new FBI charter and an overhaul of the criminal code.

"We're still working with HEW on most of the legislation .. . " he said. "I think we're linked up in the energy area, on energy productivity and conservation."

He also mentioned his support of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union.

"I think those lines are continuing and on-going, and I want to keep those efforts moving," he said.

That points to a campaign in which Kennedy's side of the Democratic debate would center less on specific program differences than on the broader question of leadership. That's the point on which he faults Carter most harshly, questioning whether the people have confidence that the president can deal with national problems.

Miners Wistfully Eye Gold Prices

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LEAD, S.D. (AP) — The price of gold is surging to record highs, and union members at the Homestake Mine wish they had seen its dizzying ascent coming.

Employees at the 103-year-old gold mine, the largest in the Northern Hemisphere, receive a wage bonus based on the price of gold. In June, the union agreed to a three-year contract that based the bonus ceiling on a price of $330 an ounce.

But gold closed in New York on Tuesday at $376 an ounce, yet another record in its climb, and union leaders were shaking their heads.

They were surprised that gold had ever reached the $330-an-ounce level, let alone such higher record levels less than four months after the contract was signed.

"Hindsight's always better..." said Gordon Renner, spokesman for the 1,250-member United Steelworkers of America union local. "Homestake will get fat and we'll get skinny."

Homestake produced about 20 percent of the gold mined in the United States last year — a volume worth more than $105 million at Tuesday's prices.

The union settlement, reached in the final hours of negotiation with the Homestake Mining Co., set up a bonus plan triggered when gold hit $275 an ounce. That price was reached almost immediately after the contract was signed.

Under the plan, all the mine's 1,600 employees receive an hourly bonus of seven cents for each $5 increase in the gold market, up to maximum of 80 cents an hour, which was reached at the $330 level.

The bonus, along with other contract bonuses, are added to the employee's regular salary — $7.55 an hour for a top miner.

The fast rise in gold prices also surprised officials at Homestake, the only major underground gold mine in the United States.

"No, we certainly didn't have any idea it would reach this high this fast," said Ralph Tibble, assistant general manager of the mine, which last year produced 285,000 ounces of gold.

"We're wondering what's going to happen. It could go down in price just as fast as it's gone up. We don't know where it will settle," he said.

Renner said the union tried to negotiate an open-ended gold bonus, but finally settled on the $330-an-ounce ceiling, thinking it was "a pretty good range."

Under an open-ended plan using the existing criteria for determining bonus increments, the employees' bonus today would be more than 50 cents higher.

Union members, who have watched the gold market closely since their first gold bonus went into effect in the late 1960s, are disgruntled with their lack of foresight and may try to re-open negotiations, Renner said.

"I think it's nearly impossible, but we'll try," he said.

Tibble said Homestake management doesn't anticipate any changes in the contract.

Ask Data On Peat Impact

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State agencies want more information on possible environmental effects before ruling on a mining permit for harvesting peat from 32,000 acres in Northeastern North Carolina.

First Colony Farms Inc. applied for the permit earlier this year. It wants to harvest peat for use as fuel.

The company, based in Creswell, was asked recently to provide information about effects of the mining on surrounding coastal waters, on groundwater and on wildlife. In addition, the company will be required to prepare an environmental assessment that will consider long-range plans for mining on 146,000 acres of peat bogs the company owns in Hyde, Washington and Tyrell counties.

Environmental assessment statements aren't required under mining regulations, and no permit is needed from the Coastal Resources Commission.

But the CRC said an assessment would be required because the operation was considered a major energy facility.

James D. Simons of the state division of land resources said the state mining commission would be required to act within 60 days afterr the complete application, including the answers to the additional questions, was submitted.

He said officials are seeking a ruling from the state attorney general on whether the permit can be withhld until the environmental assessment is complete.

First Colony is a multi-county farming operation.

Set Workshop On Ride-Sharing

Linda Hix, coordinator of the Greenville Energy Program, reminded employers in the Greenville-Pitt County area that the two-hour workshop on ride sharing options will be held Thursday at the Willis Building.

Ms. Hix noted that the local Energy Program and the N.C. Department of Transportation are sponsoring the workshop to inform employers of benefits to employees, businesses and the general community by encouraging car pools and van pools among workers.

The workshop is being offered free of charge, according to Ms. Hix, who said that persons seeking more information should contact her at 752-7166, Ext. 254.

Advises N.C. Piedmont Port

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A consultant told the State Ports Authority Tuesday that it should open an "inland port" in the Piedmont to be used as a terminal for shipments through the Wilmington port.

The inland port would be a terminal or holding area where shipping containers would be brought by truck and then shipped by rail to Wilmington.

Tom Coleman of Lockwood Greene Inc. of South Carolina said the inland port would help overcome two problems at Wilmington — the lack of an interstate highway connection with the rest of the state and the long distance from exporting companies.

He said the inland port would allow the state to capture about 50 percent of the container-freight business in North Carolina. The state's ports now handle about 30 percent of North Carolina cargo.

The authority didn't take action on the recommendation Tuesday.

FOCUS

Deadly Coincidence

James A. Garfield was elected to the presidency nearly a century ago. But he wasn't president for long. He died on this day in 1881, just six and a half months after taking office. Although Garfield had little time to accomplish anything as president, his death contributed to a strange and deadly coincidence involving the presidency. For the last 140 years, every president elected in a year ending in zero has died in office. The elections of 1840, 1920, and 1940 produced presidents who died of natural causes. The elections of 1860, 1880, 1900, and 1960 produced presidents who, like Mr. Garfield, were assassinated.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the most recent U.S. president to die in office?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Queen Elizabeth II is the monarch of Great Britain.

Lake And John East Said To Be 'All But Decided'

DIRECTS STAFF — Kit Dobelle, former chief of protocol, is staff director for Rosalynn Carter, a new position created last month. The job carries the same salary, $56,000, that is paid to White House chief of staff Hamilton Jordan. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic state Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr. and Republican National Committeeman John East have all but officially decided to run on the GOP ticket for governor and the U.S. Senate respectively, a Greensboro newspaper reported today.

Each has been the subject of considerable speculation on the races, and both have previously acknowleged their interest in the posts.

The Greensboro Daily News reported in today's editions that if the two do run, they will do so with the help of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms', R-N.C., political organization.

Lake, a Raleigh lawyer, and East, an East Carolina University professor from Greenville, will make final decisions after reading the results of a poll of 600 Tar Heel voters paid for by the N.C. Congressional Club, which organized and ran Helms' successful $7-million campaign for re-election last year.

The poll, conducted by Arthur Finklestein of New York, who has sampled opinion for Helms in the past, will cost the Congressional Club about $10,000, said Helms campaign strategist Tom Ellis.

The decision also will come after a joint meeting of Lake and East with a number of leaders of the club, a bipartisan group whose members are devotees of a number of conservative causes, the newspaper reported.

East, who teaches political science, and Lake, son of the former Demo-cratic gubernatorial candidate and state Supreme Court justice, said in separate interviews Tuesday they had received encouragement from acquaintances and party leaders across the state to run for the offices. East 46, who ran unsuccessfully for Congress in 1966 and for Secretary of State in 1968, said he was "leaning very, very heavily toward running" but had not made a final decision to get into the race against Democratic incumbent Sen. Robert Morgan.

Lake, 45, said that responses from Republicans and Democrats had been so favorable that "naturally, you'd be prone to go for it," and added he hasn't "seen anything yet that really indicates strongly that I ought not to run."

If Lake does jump parties, he would be following in Helms' footsteps. Helms was once a Democrat.

Both East and Lake are longtime friends of Helms. East joined Helms as one of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan's strongest supporters at the 1976 Republican National Convention.

Both men have been promised financial and organizational support by the Congressional Club, but how much money they could count on is unclear. If the club acts as a contributing committee, the money would be limited, but if it associates closely with the campaigns, the amount could be substantial.

Ellis, club treasurer, said no decision has been made whether to be come, in effect, the campaign committee for both or either of the men.

The Tar Heel corn crop is forecast at 130.9 million bushels, down four percent from the August 1 report, but up eight percent from 1978. Acreage for grain is up six percent from last year.

Soybean production is forecast at a record high 42.6 million bushels, 14 percent more than 1978. Average yield per acre is predicted to be 23 bushels, down one bushel from August. Acreage for harvest at 1.85 million acres is up 19 percent from last year.

Sake Is Losing Favor In Japan

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese have been drinking sake for 2,000 years — since the "Time of the Gods." But nowadays, a businessman returning home from work is likely to pass up the rice wine for a bottle of Japanese-made whiskey or a glass of beer.

Still the traditional beverage at weddings, election victories and other ceremonial occasions, sake has been losing out for years to the other drinks, especially among the young.

"My grandfather drinks sake but I don't really care for it because of the taste. It's also more trouble to prepare," said Jun Koike, 24, a medical student.

Sake usually is warmed and sipped from tiny procelain cups. Customarily it is served with Japanese foods like raw fish — sashimi — and skewered meats and vegetables — yakitori.

But many in today's faster-paced Japan appear to believe, as does Koike, that whiskey complements most any meal, helping to make Japan the world's second-largest whiskey-consuming nation after the United States.

Sake still is drunk extensively, as a random visit to the tiny bars around any major railway station will attest. But the beverage industry says overall consumption of sake has not changed appreciably for years, while whiskey and beer sales steadily increase.

"We've been slow to market our product among young people," Teichiki Uchida, a spokesman for the Japan Sake Makers Association, said in an interview. "However, people born after the war grew up on beer and whiskey, and they're just not all that familiar with sake."

Japanese beverage makers, whether turning out alcoholic or soft drinks, have recognized the country's fascination — especially among the younger generation — with things foreign, and use European and American celebrities in their advertising.

Suntory Ltd., which claims to be the world's third-largest distillery, employs entertainer Sammy Davis Jr. in whiskey ads on television. The rival Nikka firm features actor Orson Welles. The ads are similar to American TV ads in which the same two plug U.S.-made wines with one difference: Here they are actually seen drinking the product.

Uchida said sake manufacturers can't easily afford that kind of costly advertising. Even so, they've made the attempt, with a campaign to promote sake as a summertime drink.

In one ad, it's the American singing group, the Carpenters; in another, British rock star Suzie Quatro in her zippered leather jumpsuit, urging young television viewers to try sake "on the rocks."

Nobody knows exactly when the rice wine first became Japan's national beverage, but it generally is agreed that it arrived with the cultivation of rice more than 2,000 years ago. The Kojiki — Book of Myths — noted in 712 A.D. that the gods were fond of the brew.

Last year, the Japanese quaffed an average of 36 liters of beer per capita, compared with 14 liters of sake and 2.6 liters of whiskey. Sake, which is made somewhat like beer, has an alcohol content of 16 to 18 percent, depending on the brand. Japanese-made whiskey is 43 percent alcohol — 86 proof — and Japanese beer a mere 4.5 percent.

Sake is colorless and has a taste that is somewhat bland compared to whiskey, and it is suggested that once opened, the bottle be emptied fairly quickly, as sake — unlike whiskey and some wines — does not improve with age.

Sake also is cheaper than whiskey, despite government price controls that have put the cost of rice at about five times higher than in any other country.

A giant 1.8-liter bottle of sake goes for anywhere from $4.70 to $11.30. Suntory's line of 13 whiskey brands also varies widely in price, the most expensive being "Za Uisuki" — the whiskey — at the equivalent of $225 a bottle.

According to the National Tax Agency, the average worker makes about $990 a month.

Official Policy

DENVER (AP) — A recommendation that no practicing homosexual be ordained in the Episcopal Church has been made an official policy of the 3-million member denomination.

After hours of debate, parliamentary maneuvering and vote counting, the church's 66th General Convention completed passage of the controversial resolution Tuesday, clearing the way for conclusion of the triennial policy-setting meeting.

The 904-member House of Deputies approved the resolution Tuesday containing a sentence saying it is "not appropriate" for the church to ordain a homosexual "or any person who is engaged in heterosexual relations outside of marriage."

That sentence was in the resolution when the bicameral convention's other chamber, the House of Bishops, passed it Monday, but was removed by a committee of deputies at a closed meeting Monday night. The House of Deputies restored the controversial language before passing the resolution.

The convention, which started work on Sept. 9, faces a Thursday adjournment deadline. In other action Tuesday, delegates rejected moves to withdraw the 1982 meeting from New Orleans.

Expanding N.C. Day Care Role

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Some day-care centers will have to close because of a state formula for payments to county-operated centers, officials say.

But a state official says the change was necessary if day-care services are to be expanded and more children served.

The state Social Services Commission made the revision Tuesday. The local centers will be reimbursed $151 per month per child older than 3 years starting Dec. 31, instead of by actual cost of care, as is done now.

Robert Fitzgerald, assistant director of the division of plans and operations of the Human Resources Department, said the state wants to expand services in the east and must therefore spread available money more thinly.

Fitzgerald says he believes any centers closed due to the new formula will likely be those located in small cities. "Our aim is to reduce cost and to serve more kids and more families. We were given $3.8 million by the Legislature this year and $6.9 million for next year. This is the first time the state has appropriated money for day care like this," he said.

Several day-care center operators protested the decision.

Ed Chapin, head of the Mecklenburg County Department of Social Services, told the commission that many of his county's nine centers, serving 378 children, will have to close if the new reimbursment rate stands.

"We have cut our centers from 12 to nine and have taken every measure we could to cut costs," he said.

Carl Staley, director of the United Day Care Center of Greensboro, said he has juggled his budget, and thinks he can make it to Jan. 1. The federal government picks up most of the cost at his center, he said.

Chapin and Staley said centers such as theirs serving lower-income groups would not be able to cover expenses at the new reimbursement rate, even though parents of children at the centers are charged fees based on income.

Staley also was upset that the commission deferred action on a proposal to raise the maximum monthly reimbursement for children under 3 years of age to $200, from $168.

Death ' Of Equities Is Debatable

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Business Week's August 13 cover story, "The Death of Equities" concluded that "the U. S. economy probably has to regard the death of equities as a near-permanent condition — reversible some day, but not soon." That story has attracted an equal number of proponents and critics.

Briefly, their case rests on three points. First, they believe the ruling that pension funds can invest other in things than stocks and bonds (futures, real estate, gold, diamonds, etc.) will result in institutional money leaving the stock markets. Institutional investors dominate the market and the number of individual investors continues to decline.

Second, they indicate that inflation has sharply reduced the return on common stocks in recent years and believe it will continue to do so. Therefore, individual investors are buying tangible assets (art, real estate) or putting their money in interest bearing securities. Finally, they do not see brokerage firms pushing equity investments since stocks are not as profitable to sell as alternate investments.

There is evidence some of this may be true. The price of gold has reached record levels, indicating that a number of investors are worried about the long term direction of our economy. But there is also evidence that equities are not yet dead, as Business Week believes.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average has not shown much progress in the last four years, but other indices have done better. The Over-The-Counter index is up 94 percent and the American Stock Exchange Index is up 161 percent.

While we are not quite ready to proclaim the beginning of a new bull market, there are a number of trends which, if continued, are definitely favorable. Washington's attitude seems to be shifting toward stimulation of investment, beginning with the Revenue Act of 1978. The appointment of Mr. Volcker as chairman of the FRB is negative to interest rates short term, but leads to optimism in the fight against inflation longer term.

Other positive factors for the stock markets include the beliefs that interest rates are near a peak and that the coming recession, but the prices of many stocks have been in a long decline, putting them at very reasonable valuation levels. The Dow Jones Industrial Average is selling below book value, as are many individual stocks,and corporations are recognizing this through tender offers and mergers.

Stock prices remain cheap relative to alternate investments. For instance, in the twelve months ended June, the price of silver rose 63 percent, gold 55 percent, art 22 percent, and housing 14 percent. In contrast, the S&P Composite was up 5.3 percent. Some of the estimated $65 billion now in money market funds and other short term instruments is likely to go into equities at some point in the future as alternative investments get more excessive.

Maintenance Is Commended

Dennis W. Tripp, Codes Enforcement Supervisor for the City of Greenville, has commended the maintenance people of the Greenville City Schools for a job well done.

"Looking back through the records since June 12, 1974 and comparing them with the inspection of May 15, 1979, I can see where the Maintenance and Mr. Bob Stewart have done outstanding work," Tripp wrote. "In looking at the schools and comparing them to what they were, these people really deserve a good pat on the back for a job well done."

The letter followed a late August inspection made by Tripp of all the schools in the city system using the inspection sheet of May 15, 1979, which noted a number of discrepancies.

Pitt County's Law Enforcers Honored At Dinner

LAW ENFORCEMENT DINNER ... Dr. John Tinglestad, vice-chairman of the Community Development Council of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce and Ian Smith, chairman of the Law Enforcement Appreciation dinner talk with Dr. John East, who spoke at last night's chamber-sponsored appreciation banquet for local area officers.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Officers from 17 law enforcement agencies in Pitt County were honored last night by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce at the third annual Law Enforcement Appreciation Dinner.

More than 125 enforcement officers and 60 chamber members attended the dinner, headed by the Chamber's Law Enforcement Committee.

Dr. John East, political science professor at East Carolina University was the principal speaker for the event.

East told the lawmen, "I am increasingly in admiration," of law enforcement officers, "because of the increasing difficulty of their jobs.

"I hold law enforcement personnel in great admiration for their willingness to grapple," with the ifficult situations they must work under.

The speaker cited low priority spending by governments and poor attitudes on the part of the public as conditions that contribute to the difficult task facing law enforcement officers.

"There are full-time law enforcement personnel in North Carolina making $7,600 per year. That's scandelous," East emphasized.

Law enforcement should be a, "top priority item," with governments, East said, "...good law and order along with national defense," are essential.

East added that there is a feeling of, "no accountability" on the part of the public for their actions. There is an idea, he suggested, that, "people are not responsible for their personal conduct...no moral accountability for their personal conduct'" tending instead to blame society or the school system or other reasons for their actions.

And, East said, there is, "misplaced sentimentalism when it comes to punishment for crime."

He said "common sense," should dictate punishment for law violations.

"Common sense tells me there are certain types of crime in which capital punishment can be a deterrent. I think you ought to keep it."

East suggested that capital punishment for the killing of a kidnap victim or death for a prison inmate serving a life sentence when a prisoner or prison guard is killed would serve as a deterrent.

"Fundimental justice," is needed, East emphasized. "If I do something wrong, then I have to pay the price for it."

East also said that another factor that makes law enforcement work more difficult is the idea of, "the perfect trial," rather than a fair trial.

East said the framers of our constitution had the idea of a fair trial in mind, rather than a perfect trial, as some Supreme Court decisions seem to suggest.

"There isn't anywhere in human activity that you can find perfection," East said. The idea of a perfect trial is, "hobbling law enforcement."

People, the speaker continued, seem, "obsessed with their rights, as opposed to their duty, obligation and responsibility as citizens.

"There is something to be said for duty and responsibility, rathar that just rights," East said. When a society loses sight of its duty and responsibility, it, "sows the seeds of its own distruction."

East concluded by saying' "there are a lot of people very sympathetic to your problems. Things will get better.

"They must get better."

John Tinglestad, vice-chairman of the chamber's Com-Wunity Development Council, under which the Law Enforcement committee operates, told the officers that the business and professional community, "is delighted to share its deep appreciation," for the law enforcement officers, "who are dedicated to the protection of all our lives and property."

Lower Quality Leaf On Mart

FARMVILLE — Due to an increase in low-grade primings and nondescript grades, the average on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday was slightly lower than that of Monday, Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade, said.

More low-quality grades were on the floors than in the past two weeks. There was a small volume of quality leaf and cutter grades that sold for as high as $1.60 a pound. Stabilization receipts amounted to 5.44 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 674,040 pounds for $986,366, for an average of $146.34 per hundred. To date the market has sold 19,084,840 pounds for $27,192,657, for a season's average of $142.48.

rehabilitation medicine.

Provisional active privileges in family practice were accorded Dr. Harry McLean, who previously had held courtesy privileges.

Provisional consulting staff privileges were given Dr. Dennis P. Kimbleton, Dr. John P. Michel and Dr. Paul E. Horton, all in emergency medicine.

Ben Weaver, business manager of the ECU School of Medicine, appeared on behalf of the dean and talked about the money provided the hospital through the medical school.

Trustees were reminded of a long-range planning workshop to be held Sept. 27 at 5 p. m. at the Holiday Inn, Greenville, with John Larson, the long-range planner retained by the hospital.

Finance Committee Chairman Norfleet Sugg said the feasibility of hooking into a Blue Cross-Blue Shield computer system is being looked into. Such a hookup would enable the hospital to know whether and to what degree a potential patient is covered by Blue Cross in advance of services rendered.

M. E. Gilstrap, associate director of the hospital, was authorized to co-sign checks from the general fund for up to $2,500.

Sugg said consideration is being given to retaining professional assistance in setting depreciation allowances on hospital property.

Retirement Committee Chairman J. B. Kittrell said a report from a firm which audited the hospital's retirement program seems to indicate that the system is "in good shape." He said money will be needed within the next year to increase funding for the system.

Insurance and Risk Management Committee Chairman James Cheatham said the hospital is considering entering into a program that would make the workman's compensation premium dependent on the actual losses incurred due to injuries on the job. Had this program been in effect in the two previous years, the hospital could have saved $11,000 in premiums, he said, based on low accident rates. There is a chance, however, he said, that the premium could run more than than previous rate, if the accident rate were to go up. The most it could run, he said, would be $61,000 and the present flat rate is approaching $50,000. Workmans' Comp premiums are based on annual payroll, which, for the hospital, is now running about $14 million a year. His proposal was approved.

Richardson and Leslie reported on the formation of a Pitt County Memorial Hospital Foundation Inc., which will accept gifts on behalf of the hospital. The formation was begun June 20, they indicated, and will be complete when it is approved by the Internal Revenue Service, probably within the year. Attorney Bill Watson gave his services for the formation, they said, and Ferrell Blount, Leslie and Henry Oglesby were named to trustees. Kenneth Dews is the chairman of the hospital gifts committee which continues to operate until the foundation is a reality.

Preparing Tax Referendum

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Burke County commissioners are preparing for a sales-tax referendum in an effort to reduce property taxes.

Burke is the only county in the state that doesn't levy a 1 percent sales tax in addition to the 3 percent state sales tax.

The commissioners asked County Manager Ken Thompson on Tuesday to prepare for the referendum. The extra penny tax per dollar would bring an estimated $1.5 million into the county coffers.

It is hoped that if the referendum passes, property taxes could be lowered. A recent revaluation of property for taxes upset some people so much that officials became the object of threats and insults, as well as targets for rocks and eggs.

Indicate Heart, Not Pneumonia

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A preliminary autopsy report indicates a man who died less than 12 hours after being refused admission to a hospital died of a heart condition, not pneumonia.

Dr. C. Saliba, who is heading the investigation into the death of Walter E. Hart, 22, said the autopsy showed no evidence of pneumonia. It showed endocarditis, a heart infection.

Hart was diagnosed as having a slight case of pneumonia at Cape Fear Valley Hospital's emergency room, said John Moulton, director of the county hospital system. The doctor there, David Jones, "did not feel it was of such severity as to admit him," Moulton said.

Hardee's Reopens After Remodeling

The reopening of Hardee's E. Tenth Street restaurant following complete remodeling was held this morning.

The remodeling, which took place as part of a Hardee's program that will see virtually all of the company's eating facility's in North Carolina undergoing refurbishing, took some four months to complete.

Mark Bulluck, vice president of area two for Hardee's, pointed out that that the local effort involved adding a new interior decor package, including some new equipment.

The facility's exterior also underwent complete remodeling, Bulluck said, utilizing a design created exclusively for Hardee's by the firm of Lippincott & Margolise.

The remodeling, which provides more seating capacity for customers, also involved the addition of a drive-thru window for customer convenience, it was noted.

Farmville To Meet Greene Central

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Two of three area high schools opened Eastern Carolina Conference play with wins last Friday night, while D.H. Conley, playing outside the league, was tied.

Halfback Calvin Ellison scored on a 34-yard scamper early in the fourth period and Anthony Chapman added a nine-yard score later to lift Ayden-Grifton past Southwest Edgecombe, 14-0, in a conference opener for both squads.

NP's Melvin Simmons

Ayden-Grifton is 2-1, while SW Edgecombe fell to 1-1.

Farmville Central, seeking its fourth consecutive league championship, thumped Charles B. Aycock, 35-0, last week. The Jaguars, 2-0, were led by the running of halfbacks Donald Reid (130 yards) and Roger Joyner (116 yards.) Aycock is 1-1.

North Lenior, led by halfback Michael White, scored 13 fourth quarter points to down North Pitt, 25-9. White rushed for 153 yards and scored three touchdowns in the win, which left North Lenior 2-0. North Pitt dropped to 1-1.

D.H. Conley, the only area school playing outside the conference last week, wound up tying Washington, 6-6. The Vikings' lone score came on a 43-yard run by halfback Anthony Carmon.

In other games last week, Southern Nash nipped Greene Central, 8-7, Jamesville beat Chocowinity, 22-14, and Gaston held off Roanoke, 26-20.

The schedule this week includes a number of key ECC matchups, highlighted by Farmville Central at Greene Central.

In other conference action this week, Ayden-Grifton travels to C.B. Aycock, Southern Nash hosts North Pitt and D. H. Conley opens its conference schedule at home against North Lenior.

Also this week, Jamesville travels to Belhaven. Roanoke and Williamston have off dates this Friday.

North Pitt

As a result of last Friday night's loss to North Lenior, the Panthers will be without the services of 11 players this week. Of those 11, four have been suspended for the rest of the football season, while the other seven will be out only this week.

"We had some players who were not physically or mentally prepared to play a football game (last Friday night) because they disobeyed training rules," Panther Coach Pat Smith said earlier this week.

"As a result, four players have been dismisssed from the football team for the season and seven others have been suspended this week and will not play Friday night.

"The mental attitude and all led to 17 penalties last week, when we had some 130 yards in penalties," Smith said. "We fumbled five times, and lost it four times."

Because of the housecleaning, Smith said the junior varsity game this week would be cancelled and some of the JV players called up to the varsity.

"We have 17 players left on the varsity, but we'll add some from the junior varsity for Friday's game," Smith said.

Smith said that the numerous penalties and fumbles the Panthers had resulted in the team losing.

"We gave them three of their four touchdowns," Smith said. "We went up their with the attitude we were going to win and we could have had we not suffered all ofthose penalties and fumbles.

"We were leading, 7-6, when they punted to the six-inch line. On the first play we had a bad exchange and they recovered. It's not too hard to score from six inches out," Smith said.

This week the Panthers take on Souther Nash, a team Smith said is one of the better ones in the conference.

"They've won three in a row, all by one point. That shows you something about their squad," Smith said. "It's going to be an awfully tough game. We'll just have to do the best we can."

Ayden-Grifton

Ayden-Grifton's young Chargers are beginning to gain needed game experience and, according to Coach Dixon Sauls, are becoming more confident about themselves with every ballgame they play.

DHC's Jeffrey Cooper

"The game experience we're getting for the young kids is helping us. They're beginning to have a little confidence in themselves," Sauls said.

"I think that's only natural, though. Hopefully, we can continue to improve. Hopefully, we've made some strides since the beginning of the season, and can continue to do so."

Last Friday night, Ayden-Grifton and SW Edgecombe went into the fourth period knotted at 0-0. Early in the quarter, however, halfback Calvin Ellison rambled 34 yards, along the way breaking a number of tackles, to put the Chargers ahead.

"That was the turning point in the ballgame," Sauls said. "But I guess that's obvious." Later in the period Anthony Chapman sealed the win with a nine-yard

Walton Rocked By Stiffest Compensation Award Ever

SAN DIEGO (AP) — "I have this empty feeling in my stomach," said Bill Walton, rocked by the stiffest compensation award in pro sports history.

"I don't think it was fair," Walton said after San Diego Clipper teammates Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert, Randy Smith and a 1980 first-round draft pick were awarded to the Portland Trail Blazers Tuesday.

Ending a two-month tug-of-war, National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien ruled that Washington, one of the league's prized power forwards, and Kunnert, a 7-foot reserve center, must go to Portland as payment for the loss of Walton.

The 6-foot-11, All-Pro center played out his option with the Trail Blazers and signed with the Clippers May 12, reportedly for the largest sports salary ever — a five-year contract calling for $900,000 per year.

If the year-old Clippers choose to keep Smith, a starting guard who averaged 18 points per game last year, they must pay Portland $350,000 and their 1982 first-round draft choice.

"It's a real setback," said Walton. "We were very close to a championship team. Indirectly, I'm somewhat responsible for that."

Walton's "durability" was the central question, O'Brien said. He said he took into account that Walton's contract "reflects a clear recognition by both San Diego and Walton that his past medical history created legitimate concerns about his ability to fully perform in the future."

After signing as the NBA's top draft choice of 1974, Walton, 26, was sidelined for half of the Trail Blazers' games. He sat out all of the 1977-78 season with a stress fracture in his foot, a year after winning MVP honors for leading Portland to the NBA championship.

"If Walton in his first five years had proven as durable as (Wilt) Chamberlain, (Bill) Russell and (Kareem) Abdul-Jabbar, it would be virtually impossible to calculate his value or to compensate Portland for his lose," said O'Brien, after reviewing written submissions and testimony from the two clubs.

O'Brien noted that Walton's contract with the Clippers included "unique terms for salary reductions in the event he is unable to play a specified number of games."

"Therefore," ruled O'Brien, "I do not agree with Portland's arguments that San Diego's contractual agreement to Walton demonstrates that his 'durability' is no longer a risk and that his value must be judged solely on the basis of his skills."

Washington is 28, Kunnert 27 and Smith 30. Washington, in his sixth pro season, nearly surpassed his career high last year when he averaged 11.3 points per game. He led the club in rebounding with a 9.8 average.

Portland Coach Jack Ramsay said the addition of Washington and Kunnert "really solidifies our club."

The Clippers have until 5 p.m., EDT Thursday to decide whether they will keep Smith or send Portland the $350,000.

RoseRunner Sets Record

Rose High School opened its home cross-country season yesterday with a 15-50 victory over D.H. Conley, setting a new course record in the process.

Rose swept the first seven places in the event, with all five of the top runners bettering their own previous top times for the 2.7 mile course.

Harry Williams captured first place in the event with a course record time of 14:50, bettering by 1:08 the old mark. Second place also went to a Rampant sophomore, Kenny Smith, who finished in 14:59, 59 seconds ahead of the old mark.

Third was Dan Mayo in 16:21, followed by Blair Srith in 16:37, and Ted Gartman in 16:43.

The second five consisted of Chip Little, 16:49; Vincent Murphy 17:11; Conley's Stoney Speller, 17:39; Larry Talbert, 17:52; and Michael Davis in 17:59.

The second ten were: Sammy Tucker (C) 18:01; Robert Stancil (R) 18:12; Mark Dixon (C) 18:21; Skip Hill (R) 18:42; Dan Scharf (R) 19:02; Glen Branch (C) 19:10; Mike Joyner (C) 20:57; Lawrence Green (C) 21:24; Ogden Wiggins (C) 21:25; and Dennis Carney (C) 21:35.

Rose travels to Northern Nash to open its Division I competition on Thursday.

ECU Ties Wesleyan

ROCKY MOUNT — East Carolina and North Carolina Wesleyan battled to a 4-4 tie in soccer Tuesday night with each team scoring in overtime.

The Pirates, now 1-2-1, gained the lead in the first overtime on an unassisted goal by Phil Martin, his second of the game, but Ken Jordan tied the score in the second overtime on a pass from Jeff Rogers.

The Bishops, now 1-1-1, used two goals by Junior Garber and a third by Eric Matylwich to never trail during regulation. The Pirates tied the score each time on goals by Brad Winchell, Chip Baker and Martin. Martin's goal that brought the 3-3 tie came on a penalty kick with 2:08 remaining in the game.

The Pirates play Sunday at Catawba at 2 p.m.

Waterlogged Pirates Beat Expos, 5-3

By The Associated Press

Willie Stargell and the rest of the Pittsburgh Pirates put a damper on the evening for the Montreal Expos.

On a night when swimsuits and scuba gear might have made more sense than the standard baseball garb, the Pirates spent six waterlogged hours and 14 minutes beating the Expos 5-3 in 11 innings.

Pirates Reassess Goals

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In the attempt to regroup after two defeats, the East Carolina Pirates have gone to the Bible for a rallying cry, according to assistant coach Dick Kupec.

Kupec, speaking to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday, reviewed the first three games of the year, and looked ahead to the next contest against Wake Forest University.

"We're hurting and sick," Kuoec said. "So we've tried to come up with a theme for this week. We went to the Bible, and found where the sick and hurt came to Jesus for help. He told them to 'take up your bed and walk.' We've adopted that as our theme for this week."

Kupec said that in the opening game against Western Carolina, both the offense and defense performed well. "We hit right on the head what to expect from Western, and everything fell right into place. We executed very well on offense and made very few mistakes in totaling up over 500 yards in total offense. We also got to play a lot of people."

Against N.C. State, however, the Pirates had problems. "We knew State was an outstanding team. We did some things differently on offense: the unbalanced line, the motion, and we had some things totally different in our blocking and it qave State problems. They were confused in the first half and we were able to execute well.

"But in the second half, we lost (guard Joe) Godette on the kickoff, then had both Theodore Sutton and Anthony Collins get hurt. And we just got outphysicaled by Slate. The injuries hurt our execution, and the two bad plays (bad pitch and interception) got us to a mental low. We did get the ball back in great field position, but couldn't do anything with it."

On defense against State, the Pirates had trouble with their assignments, and State's unbalanced shift gave them more problems.

In the Duke game, the plan was to be physical on offense and to control the ball, keeping the defense off the field as much as possible.

"In the first half, Duke didn't stop us. We got to the 12 and fumbled. Then, in the second quarter, we fumbled at the two. We got only six points in the half, and we should have had 21. In the second half, we were still able to move the ball, but our defense never stopped them. Once we got down 28-14, we had to leave our game plan and play catch up, and our passing game isn't that good yet."

Kupec added that at State, the Pirates were beaten by a better team, but that at Duke, they weren't.

"Wake Forest has a fine football team. Their victory over Georgia was no fluke. Thev beat them soundly.

"But we don't feel that we're down and out. We opened up the same way last year and came back, and we can do it again. It won't be easy. This is a tough game; a critical game."

Kupec said that the team has to pick itself up and start over again. "We're worried about the team, about the attitude, the morale, the desire and the ability to carry out assignments. We hope to get some of these problems solved this week."

Kupec said that some of the assignments had been simplified, and that lineup changes could take place that would help others.

"We have the makings of an outstanding football team. We're not that sick and crippled that we can't be healed. We just have to pick up our beds and walk.

"We've had to change our goals, too. We can't go undefeated and it doesn't look like we can win the 'state championship.' But we can still have a shot at a bowl game if we do well from here on out.

"Right now, we have only one goal. That's to beat Wake Forest this weekend."

The speaker for the next Sports Club program, on October 2, is Wake Forest basketball coach Carl Tacy.

Farmville.....

run. Freshman Warren Agee kicked both extra points.

This week Ayden-Grifton travels to Pikeville to take on Charles B. Aycock.

"C.B. Aycock is a lot better than what they showed against Farmville last week," Sauls said. "After looking at them, they are not that bad.

"They're a large team, a well-coached team. They have an excellant trapping game also.

"They're going to be tough," Sauls said. I think we'll know a little more about ourselves after this game."

D.H. Conley

D.H. Conley had its chance. Late in the fourth quarter, the Vikings had the ball on the Washington 20-yard line with the score tied, 6-6. But they could not push it across, and the game wound up tied.

"That hurt. We had it there and couldn't get it in for the score," Coach Jimbo Walker said.

Although the offense couldn't get moving Friday night, Walker's defensive team made up for that, limiting the Pam Pack to only one score while forcing three fumbles and coming up with three interceptions.

"Our whole defense played well, they really played well," Walker said. "We hit real well and our defensive secondary, which had been a question mark early in the season, came up with three interceptions.

"I was pleased with the effort. We did have trouble (on offense) executing at times. We just couldn't any more points on the board."

This week the Vikings open their conference schedule at home against North Lenior.

"Defensively, North Lenior shows a lot of different fronts. They're 2-0 and are looking pretty good. They run the same offense as we do," Walker said.

"We play them at home. It'll be good to be back," he said.

Farmville Central

In what may the most important early season ECC matchup, the Farmville Central Jaguars travel to Snow Hill Friday night to take on the Greene Central Rams.

The Jaguars, coming off a 35-0 stomping of C.B. Aycock, will be looking to solidify their position in the conference race while the Rams, who have suffered two narrow defeats following an opening season victory, will be seeking to rebound.

"Greene Cental is one of the stronger teams in the conference," Jaguar Coach Gene Brewer said. "In fact, they have almost everybody back from last year.

"They're one of the teams I feel are going to be strong in the conference. They've lost two in a row, though, after opening up with a win, and we have to go there. It'll be tough."

Brewer said it would be "a typical Farmville Central-Greene Central game, meaning there will be a lot of hard hitting and tough defense.

Following last week's win over Aycock, Brewer said he was not as pleased as he would have liked to have been about his offense's play.

"We're going to be working a lot of the little things this week. Pass blocking will be one of these," Brewer said. "We'll also be trying to eliminate the offsides penalties we suffered last week. We had a lot of penalties last week, but many of them were the aggressive kind of penalties. We just didn't use good judgment a few times. I can live with those, but not with the offsides-type penalties," Brewer said.

Farmville Central Picked No. 1

By The Associated Press

Three teams that earned berths in the state playoffs last season are the leaders in the first Associated Press poll on North Carolina's high school football teams.

Rocky Mount was a clear-cut leader in Class 4A over runner-up Scotland County, polling 70 points to Scotland's 63. Points are assigned on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, nine for second, eight for third, and so on.

Scotland is one point ahead of third-place Northern Durham. Rounding out the Top 10 are Hickory, Kannapolis, North Mecklenburg and Person County tied for sixth, Goldsboro, East Mecklenburg and Raleigh Broughton.

State Beats ECU In Volleyball

East Carolina's women's volleyball team fell prey to powerhouse N.C. State in its season opener at Minges Coliseum Tuesday night. The Pirates couldn't seem to get on track as the Wolfpack went on top early and won the best-of-five match, 16-3, 15-4, 14-16, and 15-9.

The Wolfpack entered the contest with a 4-0 record having won all four times in straight sets. In the third game, however, the Pirates handed the Wolfpack its first defeat, but it proved to be too little, too late.

Wolfpack coach Pat Hielscher commented, "Of course, we were disappointed at losing our first game. I think that we had a few individuals that were a little frustrated and consequently made some key errors."

Pirate mentor Alita Dillon had praise for the serving of Sharon Perry, the defense offered by Joy Forbes, and the well-placed spikes of Yvette Lewis.

"We opened up with one of the toughest teams in the state," she said, "and, of course, there was some pressure playing the defending state champions."

N.C. State is now 5-0 and East Carolina is 0-1. The Pirates play Saturday at William & Mary in a five-team round robin.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Angels' Fregosi Not Nervous, Especially After Beating K.C.

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Jim Fregosi doesn't think he has anything to be nervous about. With a few more performances like the one his California Angels turned in Tuesday night, whatever worries Fregosi have should disappaear.

After losing five of their last six and being bombed 16-4 in the opener of the four-game series with Kansas City Monday night, dropping their American League West lead to two games over the Royals, the Angels seemed ripe for a fall. Instead they erupted for four runs in the first inning off Royals starter Rich Gale, who lasted all of 24 pitches, and held on for a 6-4 victory. With Minnesota losing 1-0 in 10 innings to Chicago and dropping four games back, it was a profitable night for Fregosi.

It was a balanced effort for the Angels, who got solid pitching from Dave Frost, 15-9.

Kansas City, which stole five bases, got its first run when George Brett singled, stole second and came all the way around when Brian Downing's throw trying to nail him on the steal deflected into shallow right field off Anderson's glove.

The Baltimore Orioles didn't get what they needed Tuesday, dropping a 2-1 decision to Detroit and leaving their magic number at three. Milwaukee, the only team still with a chance to catch Baltimore, nipped Seattle 7-6. Boston beat Toronto 8-3, Cleveland mauled New York 16-3 and Texas defeated Oakland 9-5.

White Sox 1, Twins 0

Ken Kravec pitched seven innings of no-hit ball and wound up with a three-hitter. The lone run scored when Kevin Bell, Mike Squires and Thad Bosley hit consecutive singles with none out in the 10th for Chicago.

Ron Jackson's leadoff double in the eighth broke up Kravec's no-hit bid.

Tigers 2, Orioles 1

Dan Petry and Aurelio Lopez combined on a four-hitter and Ron LeFlore had a solo homer and an RBI grounder for the Detroit runs. Doug DeCinces homered for Baltimore.

Brewers 7, Mariners 6

Paul Molitor's single scored Sixto Lezcano, who had doubled, for the Brewers' decisive run in the eighth. Milwaukee overcame a 6-2 Seattle lead built mostly with a five-run second that included Bruce Bochte's two-run homer. Jim Gantner had a two-run shot for Milwaukee.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 3

Mike Torrez, who broke a personal three-game losing slide, threw a seven-hitter and Dwight Evans contributed a home run for the Red Sox.

Indians 16, Yankees 3

Former Yankee Cliff Johnson had two homers and five RBI and Toby Harrah slammed a pair of home runs and four RBI in a 16-hit attack. Ted Cox added a solo shot for Cleveland and Oscar Gamble homered for the Yankees, who lost their fifth game in a row.

Rangers 9, A's 5

Al Oliver had four hits and knocked in three runs, raising his batting average to .330 in a game played before only 750 fans, the second smallest crowd at Oakland this season. A game with Seattle on April 17 drew 653.

Products Field: Things Are Seldom As They Seem

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Soap companies sell food. Food companies sell clothing. And super-conglomerates? Well, they sell just about everything.

You never know who is responsible for what these days.

Advertising Age, a trade publication, provided some clues recently with its annual report on the 100 biggest U.S. advertisers. The magazine says these companies spent more than $10 billion on national advertising in 1978, an increase of 17 percent over 1977.

If you read the fine print, you'll find some interesting corporate bedfellows. The bacon on your table and the bus you take to town, for example. The toys for your kids and the food for your dog.

Here, in alphabetical order, is a random selection of companies and some of the things they produce:

—The Campbell Soup Co. of Camden, N.J., goes from soup to, er, pickles. Vlasic pickles in particular.

—Chesebrough-Pond's of Greenwich, Conn., maker of Pond's cold cream, also has Vaseline petroleum jelly and Ragu spaghetti sauce.

—The Colgate-Palmolive Co. of New York is behind Hebrew National kosher frankfurters.

—Consolidated Foods Corp. of Chicago tempts your tastebuds with Sara Lee bakery products. If you drop some crumbs, call the company's Fuller Brush man. Consolidated Foods also markets hosiery, L'eggs.

—Esmark Inc. of Chicago, the folks who bring you Butterball turkeys, sponsor Playtex bras, too.

—General Foods of White Plains, N.Y., tells you to stretch your at-home food dollar with Shake 'n Bake coating mix and urges you out of the kitchen and into a Burger Chef.

—Greyhound Corp. of Phoenix, Ariz., takes you places with its buses and feeds you Armour Star bacon when you get there.

—Gulf & Western Industries of New York offers fantasy with television shows like "Laverne & Shirley," but its view of panty hose is No-Nonsense, which it also owns.

—International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. of New York brings you Wonder bread, Sheraton hotels and the stag from the Hartford Insurance Group.

—The Liggett Group Inc. of Montvale, N.J., provides L&M cigarettes, Alpo dog food and Izmira, a Turkish vodka made from white beets.

—Mattel Inc. of Hawthorne, Calif., bring you the Barbie doll. They also bring you Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

—Miles Laboratories of Elkhart, Inc., sells Morningstar Farms textured vegetable protein meat substitute. And S.O.S. scouring pads. And Alka-Seltzer.

—Nabisco Inc. of East Hanover, N.J., offers cookies, biscuits and Rose Milk skin products.

—Norton Simon Inc. of New York may be the champion. While its name is not necessarily a household word, you probably know the names of its divisions: Hunts tomato products, Avis rental cars, Max Factor cosmetics, Canada Dry beverages, Johnnie Walker scotch, Halston Enterprises and McCall Patterns, to name a few.

—Noxell Corp. of Baltimore cleans your skin with Noxzema and your floors with Lestoil.

—Pepsi Co. Inc. of Purchase, N.Y., makes you work up a thirst with golf clubs from Wilson Sporting Goods and snacks from Frito-Lay.

—Procter & Gamble Co. of Cincinnati, the biggest national advertiser, keeps you clean — not only with Ivory, but with Tide and Cheer as well. P&G also includes Sure and Secret deodorants, Folgers coffee, Duncan Hines cake mixes and squeezable Charmin.

—Quaker Oats Co. of Chicago makes your pets happy with Ken-L Ration and your kids happy with Fisher-Price toys like the Miss Piggy doll.

—R.J. Reynolds Industries of Winston-Salem, N.C., has the No. 2 cigarette in the nation — Winston — and the No. 1 brand of canned Chinese food, Chun King.

—Unilever U.S. Inc. includes All detergent and Aim toothpaste from Lever Bros. of New York. It also sells you tea from Thomas J. Lipton Inc. of Englewood, N.J.

Last on this abbreviated list — and 25th among advertisers — is the U.S. government. What does the government have to advertise? How about the Defense Department's recruiting posters, the Agriculture Department's nutrition campaigns, the Energy Department's drive for conservation or the Postal Service and Amtrak?

PRODUCTS — Seldom what they seem.

Epileptic's Plea to Passers-By

I am an epileptic. I bought a bracelet stating that I'm an epileptic and that others should leave me alone if I have a seizure on the streets. Instead, they call an ambulance and have me taken to the hospital. A week later I get a bill for the ambulance and the hospital. They don't help me much because I gradually come out of it anyway. I'm sure that there are other epileptics who feel the same way and do not know what to do about it. Would you please, please print this letter so that others can read it and know that not all people with epilepsy need an ambulance or a hospital to recover. — A Reader, Ind.

Dear Reader:

If I can contribute to you and to other epileptics who have a similar problem, I am delighted to help. Epileptics deserve the admiration of people who surround them. We are all aware of your courage and how well you handle an occasional convulsive seizure. You must not be distressed by the understandable anxiety of people who witness such a frightening spell. Remember, not all of them are doctors and not all of them are trained in the exact technique of making an epileptic more comfortable and reassured when they are lying on the ground.

In their anxiety to do something to help, almost invariably the solicitous and wise person will call the police and summon an ambulance. Their anxiety level, in fact, is so high that they frequently fail to examine the wrist for a bracelet or the pockets for any special identification or instruction.

Everyone who witnesses a convulsive seizure is greatly relieved when an ambulance with paramedics arrives and assures them that the victim is safe.

Paramedics are trained to look for bracelets or other identifying evidence of an existing problem. They can often offer help at the site and may not even have to take the patient to the hospital.

Now, about being billed for the hospital and ambulance. It has always been my understanding that all communities have emergency services for which the patient is not billed. I, too, believe that this is a community obligation and one that should not be imposed on you financially. You are already burdened enough by your problem. You deserve this added consideration.

Is there any advantage of using benzoin or camomile tea in steam inhalations? — Mrs. K.R., Wis.

Dear Mrs. R.:

Steam inhalations are extremely valuable and are often used in respiratory conditions. Benzoin, camomile tea, aromatic herbs or flower concentrates are frequently used in the steam kettle. They are very pleasant to smell and give a medicinal aroma which may have some psychological value. However, the real advantage comes from the steam itself.

Superior Year For Vintners

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — California winemakers, well into the season's grape harvest, are saying this crop may be the best of the decade after a helpful heat wave last week capped a nearly ideal growing season.

"I think the harvest is going to be great," said Rod Strong, winemaker at the 1,600-acre Sonoma Vineyards in Northern California. "The sugars are really perfect, it's just a lovely balance." More than 300 wineries in California produced $1 billion worth of wine last year.

Organizational Meet For Cubs

An organizational meeting for Cub Scout Pack 205 will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, September 20, at Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Memorial Boulevard.

Packmaster Gus Andrews urges all members from last year and persons interested in the pack to attend. Also, he asks that cubs and their parents both attend this meeting.

Property Tax Revolt Defeated

By RICK SPRATLING
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The residents of Dade County, Fla., have voted down a chance to wipe out virtually all their county property taxes, but a leader of the tax revolt movement says the fight to put a lid on government spending isn't over.

"I think our next move would be something like a limit on budgets or a limit on appropriations," said Al Hanson, a key supporter of the referendum defeated in a special election Tuesday.

The final count, with all voting precincts reporting, showed 165,140 votes against the tax cut and 89,200 in favor of it. About 37 percent of the county's 715,000 registered voters turned out, fewer than expected after months of emotional campaign rhetoric.

The referendum would have cut an average homeowner's bill for countywide services from $300 to 16 cents.

Tax rebel Harry L. Wilson, whose Dade Tax Revolt Committee pushed for passage, saw victory in defeat.

"With about 40 percent of the people voting for what they were told was a tax wipeout, we have a strong protest against runaway ... taxation," he said in a statement.

Flawed by botched wording that boosted the proposed tax cut from 50 percent to 99.5 percent, Wilson's referendum had united the Miami area's civic and business community in opposition.

The one-sided defeat suggested that even hard-pressed taxpayers weren't willing to risk what officials called catastrophic breakdowns in life-and-death services.

Based on the total of taxes billed to an average homowner, Wilson's proposal would have meant a savings of 25 percent to 43 percent, since many taxes for city functions, bond payment, libraries and flood control would have remained intact.

But County Manager Merrett Stierheim had warned of cuts in government that would jolt lifestyles from the austere retirement centers of Miami Beach to the lavish Spanish villas of Coral Gables.

He said the $200 million lost through the referendum would have eliminated most of the "real operating budget" for the services that touch people daily.

But even though the tax slash was defeated, Stierheim said it carried a message for government.

"I think we have a job to do — be austere and cut back," he said. "It doesn't mean we don't have problems. It's been a painful election. There's a message for all of us."

Already, Stierheim has outlined a county budget that would reduce property taxes 6½ percent for the coming fiscal year.

Wilson, a 58-year-old retired businessman, called himself "just a poor taxpayer" who wanted a 50 percent rollback in taxes. Somehow, he ended up with petition language that used "mills" instead of "dollars" — increasing the cut to 99.95 percent.

The goof wasn't discovered until 15,000 petition signatures were obtained to place the issue on the ballot. When courts refused to alter the wording, Wilson went ahead with a campaign for the deeper cut.

Judge 'Is Off Court Duty

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Cumberland County District Court judge has been taken off court duty following his indictment Tuesday on charges of misconduct and embezzlement.

Judge Charles Lee Guy was indicted following an investigation by the State Bureau of Investigation requested last week by District Attorney Ed Grannis.

Chief District Court Judge Derb Carter said Guy will not be assigned to any court duty until the matter has been resolved.

Grannis and Carter declined to discuss the case.

The Fayetteville Observer reported the charges stem from a drunken-driving case in which a Fayetteville Fire Department captain, George Hall, was the defendant. Grannis ordered the case record sealed Monday and it wasn't available to the public.

The newspaper reported the case may involve passing of money from Hall to Guy through J.D. Edge, identified as a fire department mechanic. Subpoenas for the three and others were issued Monday afternoon.

Guy, one-time solicitor of Dunn's recorders court, was first elected a District Court judge in 1966. He had been practicing law since 1953, moving to Fayetteville in 1961.

He has been mentioned several times in the past year as a possible candidate for appointment as a special Superior Court judge.

Guy has been active in eastern North Carolina politics for many years. He served as a member of the Harnett County Democratic Executive Committee for 12 years and is a former president of the Harnett County Young Democrats.

The 12th Judicial District in which Guy serves is made up of Cumberland and Hoke counties.

Wood Stove Display Set

The Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service will sponsor a wood stove display and information booth at Carolina East Mall this weekend.

"There is an awful lot of interest in wood stoves these days," said Sam Uzzell, Pitt County Agricultural Extension agent. "People seem to really want to know more about wood-burning appliances than ever before. We will have some useful information and a model stove on hand to illustrate the workings of a wood stove."

There will be a slide/tape presentation and informative literature available at the display. The display will be on the Mall from 10 a.m. Friday, Sept. 21, to 6 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 22.

Gold Bargain

PARIS (AP) — The leftist newspaper Liberation tweaked the nose of the gold-crazed financial world today by coming out with a gold-colored masthead and urging readers to buy as many copies as they could.

It claimed each gold-hued "Liberation" contained 0.4 grams of the precious metal, and that every copy bought at the street price of 59 cents was actually worth $4.80.

Preserves Dying Art Of Sweetgrass Baskets

By ROBIN NOTOR
The Concord Tribune

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Using a worn spoon handle and supplied with sweetgrass, strips of palmetto and pine needles from South Carolina's Low Country, Bea Coaxum works at preserving the dying art of sweetgrass African basket weaving.

"This craft is America's oldest African handicraft," the Mount Pleasant, S.C., woman explained. She talked about her work at the recent Cabarrus County Agricultural Fair.

Roots of the craft have been traced to West Africa, and in America the art has survived both slavery and the machine age. In plantation communities on the South Carolina coast during slavery, black slaves wove baskets for both agricultural and household use.

Today, the coiled baskets, with straw, green and brown hues, are purchased by collectors throughout the world, and their value increases with age as the supply of materials and the number of weavers dwindle. The craft remains an important part of everyday life only in Charleston County.

Sweetgrass basket weaving is a family art, passed down from one generation to the next. Mrs. Coaxum learned the art from her mother and now teaches it to her two daughters.

But due to the time-consuming nature of the work and the relatively little money reaped from sales, many of the younger people aren't seriously interested in the craft, she said.

Mrs. Coaxum, however, takes pride in her weaving skill. In 1977, her artistry earned her an invitation to visit the home of Vice President Walter Mondale in Washington, where a number of her woven ornaments hung on the Mondale's Christmas tree.

Found Weapons-Grade Uranium Missing At Plant

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

ERWIN, Tenn. (AP) — The government has closed down a plant which makes nuclear fuel for the Navy's submarines after officials reported at least 19.8 pounds of weapons-grade uranium missing.

Officials for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and workers at the Nuclear Fuel Services Inc. plant in this remote mountain town said Tuesday there may have been only a paper or computer accounting error.

Frank Ingram, an NRC spokeseman, said officials however have not ruled out the possibility that the uranium was stolen, somehow trapped in the plant's equipment or released accidentally without anyone's knowledge.

The NRC ordered the shutdown for a re-inventory Tuesday, one day after the firm reported the loss of the "high-enriched" uranium at the 500-employee plant near the Tennessee-North Carolina border.

Frank Gillespie, chief of the nuclear materials accounting branch in the NRC's Atlanta regional office, said the plant does not fabricate uranium for weapons but that the missing material "could be turned into a weapon with appropriate knowledge."

Ingram said the apparent loss surfaced in an inventory completed Aug. 14, just 10 days after 270 union workers ended a four-month strike and eight days after the plant accidentally released 300 grams of uranium hexaflouride gas into the atmosphere. The inventory results were reported Monday, and an immediate shutdown was ordered.

Such inventories at nuclear facilities are required every two months. If a discrepancy of 9 kilograms or more is found, the plant is required to shut down within 72 hours. A kilogram is equal to 2.2 pounds.

Ingram said similar incidents have occurred in the past but he would not explain why the immediate shutdown was ordered instead of giving the company the normal 72 hours grace. He said only that the NRC's staff considered the shutdown "a prudent action."

William Dircks, director of the NRC's nuclear materials safeguards office, said "the plant will likely be shut down for at least 45 days while a new inventory is taken under the NRC's supervision.

Steve Sass, a spokesman at Nuclear Fuel Services' headquarters in Rockville, Md., said only that the company is investigating the cause of the apparent loss.

The NRC has closed the plant at least once before—for three weeks in 1975—because the amount of nuclear material in its inventory did not match what it was supposed to have on hand.

In that instance, computer and accounting errors were blamed because there was more uranium than there was supposed to be in one area of the plant. The government later levied a $53,000 fine against Nuclear Fuel Services, a subsidiary of Getty Oil Co., for what it termed violations of security against sabotage and theft.

Lonnie Tolley, president of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union local at the plant, said he thinks the loss reported Monday is a paper error only.

"I don't think this is a real loss because it's happened...three or four more times before this," Tolley said. "When it all comes out, they always find it in the paperwork. Of course they have to shut down either way and account for it."

During the strike beginning May 14, however, the union charged that the company was keeping the plant operating at a risk to the public by using untrained management personnel. Nearly all of the strikers were arrested in July for violating a judge's antipicketing order but none was held in jail overnight.

Gillespie said the missing uranium is is unirradiated in its present form and poses no radiation danger to the public.

"If it was under your bed you wouldn't have to worry about it," he said. "Our concern for the material is from a safeguards point of view rather than a radiological one."

Gillespie refused to specify the amount of nuclear material missing, saying the exact amount is classified data for at least six months for national security reasons.

The NRC also refused to say how highly enriched—the percentage concentration of fissionable elements in uranium—the missing material at Erwin is.

"High-enriched" uranium has at least a 20 percent concentration of fissionable material. The more highly enriched, the less amount needed to produce a weapon.

Some losses of uranium are routine in the enrichment and fuel fabrication processes. They may be due to a margin of error in weighing the material or some uranium may escape undetected or be trapped in equipment, officials said.

Security measures were tightened after the inventory discrepancies were found at the Erwin plant in 1975. At one point the investigation then focused on charges that a few workers were stockpiling uranium in order to cover a shortfall that might occur from an accidental leakage.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Wide-spread rain and showers are expected in the forecast period until Thursday morning, from Texas to Florida and north to Minnesota. Cooler temperatures are forecast for most of the East and for the northern Plains. Warm weather is due in the West. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

North Carolina is in store for cooler weather due to a cold front that will pass through the state later today, followed by rain from the southwest that will hit the state late Thursday and continue Friday.

Today's forecast called for partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures. Due to the cold front, low readings tonight should range from the 40s in the northwest mountains to the 50s elsewhere with some readings in the 60s along the coast.

Temperatures will drop Thursday and Thursday night with highs generally expected to be in the 70s. No rain is expected with the cold front.

However, a low pressure front developing off the southeast coast of Texas should reach North Carolina late Thursday bringing rain to the mountains and spreading over the rest of the state Friday.

Some of the rain will be heavy over the western half of the state on Friday and may continue into Saturday.

Tuesday, North Carolina's weather was marked by cloudy skies and mild daytime temperatures. Highs were mostly in the upper 70s to low 80s. The highest reading was 84 at the Raleigh Durham Aiport, which has been the warmest spot in the state for the past three days.

The only thing nicer than our gentle white lining is our cold hard cash.

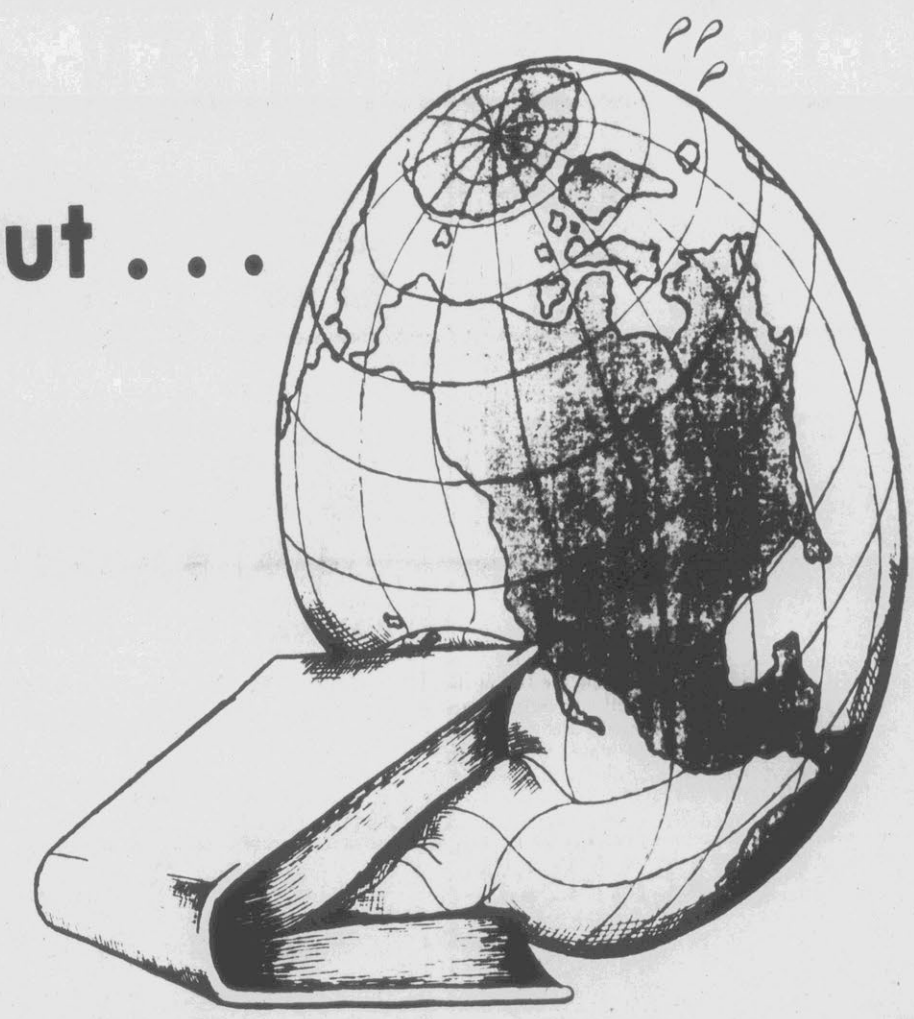
It's A Great Big Beautiful World

but . . .



...it just won't fit in a textbook.

A textbook can go just so far in providing your children with timely information about current events that are shaping their future today. So much happens every day that school textbooks would have to be updated continuously to keep up with the newspaper.

This is just one of the many reasons why THE DAILY REFLECTOR is giving students in 15 local schools the opportunity to experience and learn from the finest current events school program available, at no extra charge to the schools.

There are now more than 320 newspapers offering the Visual Education Consultant (VEC) News Program to more than 13,000 schools throughout the U.S.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR and the schools of this community are, in many ways, partners in education. We believe we have a responsibility to help educate future voters and leaders.

Students in the schools of our community are a part of THE DAILY REFLECTOR'S future audience and we recognize the need to stimulate young people to become involved with the news.

You, as parents, will be interested to know that your children will be working with the latest, most up-to-date current events materials available anywhere - THE DAILY REFLECTOR, weekly filmstrips, discussion material, background booklets and quizzes.

What this means is that students just don't hear about the news, they become involved with it. They discuss it. They analyze it. They apply it to their lives and see what effect it has on their world. They do this because the news of their community, the state, the nation and the world is presented in a way that relates to their own experience.

And you can share this program with your children. You have the opportunity to participate and even complete with your children in a study of the events which shape history. A weekly "Quiz" will be published in THE DAILY REFLECTOR throughout the year. The Quiz is a challenging family project and can serve as a bridge between the home and school, allowing students and parents to test their knowledge of current events.

In addition, there's a daily "Focus" column that challenges your knowledge of today's news and provides readers an opportunity to learn more about the newsmakers.

|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 ◇ | Pass |
| 2 NT | Pass | 3 NT | Pass |

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

You cannot conduct the defense of a hand by precept alone. Such stray bits of advice as "cover an honor with an honor," "second hand low," "third hand high," etc., have application to a large number of cases, but they are not golden rules. Defense is not a matter of handling certain combinations of cards—a particular play should always be considered as part of a campaign, and the hand must be viewed as a whole.

The bidding of this hand requires no comment, as it is strictly in accord with current practices. West's opening lead of the five of spades—fourth best from his longest and strongest suit—was normal, and East's conduct at the very first trick controlled the fate of the deal.

Declarer played the ten from dummy, and in an effort to prevent that card from winning the trick, a vast number of players would automatically produce the queen. A quick analysis should suffice to show that such action under the circumstances, could not gain.

South's opening bid and subsequent jump to two no trump make it certain that he holds either the ace or king of spades. Thus, it will be impossible to prevent declarer from winning two tricks in that suit. The more important consideration, however, is to make certain that one of these two spade tricks cannot be won in dummy later in the play when it could serve as an entry to the diamond suit.

East's plan was to prevent, if possible, the running of dummy's diamonds. He could achieve that goal only if declarer had two diamonds. The first part of the defense involved permitting dummy's ten of spades to win the first trick! Declarer crossed to his hand with a heart to run the queen of diamonds, which East ducked. Declarer continued the suit, finessing the table's nine, and East decided that it would not be prudent to test his luck any further. He exited with the queen of spades, and try as he might, declarer was faced with a hopeless prospect. With the help of two tricks in clubs, he managed to bring his total to seven, but that was all.

Tonight: Made-For-TV Movie Exhibit

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's a sort of "made-for-TV-movie" exhibit tonight, displaying the form both in its usual state of mediocrity and as the mature entertainment it sometimes is.

First, the definitive TV movie, "Sex and the Single Parent," on CBS. This is two hours of divorced adults worrying about, talking about, laughing about sex while trying to cope with their kids. Same old surface conflicts and emotions that are the chief ingredients of the common made-for-TV-movie.

This may be a first run, but you've seen this TV movie before. And you'll see it again. Different titles, different networks and different actors, but it'll show up again. It's like junk mail, cluttering the airwaves instead of your mailbox.

Susan St. James and Mike Farrell are the names and faces in this one, divorced and good-looking both, and each a parent. In the first part of the movie, they spend time proving that the singles scene in Los Angeles is less fun than dysentery.

Anyway, these two homebodies-at-heart meet, fall in love and battle with their kids. Farrell and St. James are likeable enough to make the whole thing tolerable, but not worthwhile.

At the other end of the exhibit is "Mrs. R's Daughter" on NBC, a sober-minded, highly potent account of a mother's efforts to bring her daughter's rapist to justice. Cloris Leachman's performance as the mother and Dan Curtis's skillful direction — each artfully restrained — carry this true story beyond the ranks of the standard hell-bent-for-vengeance yarns.

The storyline itself is not new — the justice system as accomplice in rape. The sluggish bureaucracy, with its delays and loopholes and overworked prosecutors and plea bargains, is the antagonist.

The skill is in presenting the individual prosecutors and cops involved in the case as sympathetic people who stand against our heroine only in that they are part of an immovable indifference.

No sooner has one prosecutor learned the case and won the confidence of the victim (Season Hubley), than he is taken off the case. Countless prosecutors and judges trample through before a trial ever takes place.

But Leachman is a woman possessed, her quest for justice fired by each frustration, every new dead-end. When she realizes that police don't consider her daughter's case top-priority, she finds the criminal herself.

When prosecutors warn her of the low percentage of rape convictions, she forges on. She wins her case b sheer force of will, an effort so single-minded that her daughter is moved to protest, "Mom, I'm the one who was raped."

Two examples of the great American made-for-TV movie. "Mrs. R's Daughter" is first-rate drama with something to say. "Sex and the Single Parent" is...well, a made-for-TV movie.

Nielsen Data Poses Some Doubt About New ABC Network Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC kicked off its 1979-80 prime-time season a week ahead of the competition, and the early start — though a strong one — left some doubts about the front-running network's new shows.

Of ABC's premiering programs in the week ending Sept. 16, only "Benson," was among the 10 highest-rated, No. 6, while "Detective School" finished 30th, "240-Robert" 32nd, "The Lazarus Syndrome" 34th and "Out of the Blue" 57th.

On the other hand, it was hardly a bad week for last season's No. 1 network. ABC listed 10 of the first 11 shows ranked by the A.C. Nielsen Co., with "Charlie's Angels" No. 1 followed by "Love Boat" and "Three's Company."

NBC and CBS began their fall programming, officially, the night of Sept 17, but both sought to counter ABC's early start with some formidable shows.

For NBC, the effort was something of a disappointment. The network's three-hour "Bob Hope on the Road to China" extravaganza was third in the ratings in its slot Sunday night, 26th over-all. And the rerun of "Holocaust," the prominent four-part miniseries of last season, was only moderately successful in the ratings — Part I in the repeat was No. 31 in the ratings.

CBS did well, however, with a Sunday night made-for-television movie, "The Tenth Month," starring Carol Burnett. It finished the week 16th, ahead of NBC's Hope special and the first network broadcast of Woody Allen's film, "Annie Hall," on ABC.

ABC, overall, registered a rating for the week of 20.9, with CBS at 16.4 and NBC 15.4. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 20.4 percent of the TV homes in the country were tuned to ABC.

The rating for No. 1 "Charlie's Angels" was 28. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 28 percent saw at least part of the show.

And it was a good week for newsmagazines — ABC's "20-20" was fourth in the ratings, while CBS' "60 Minutes" was the only non-ABC show in the Top 10, ninth.

In addition to ABC's "Out of the Blue," No. 57 for the week, the bottom five included "Bender" on CBS, No. 53, followed by "New Kind of Family" on ABC, and two CBS shows, "Working Stiffs" and "The Bad News Bears." "Working Stiffs" is a new show this season.

Here are the week's highest-rated programs:

"Charlie's Angels," with a rating of 28 representing 21.4 million homes, "Love Boat," 27.3 or 20.8 million, "Three's Company," 27.2 or 20.7 million, "20-20," 25.7 or 16.9 million, "Mork and Mindy," 25.4 or 19.4 million, "Benson," 25.2 or 19.2 million, "Angie," 25 or 19.1 million, and "Barney Miller," 24.3 or 18.6 million, all ABC; "60 Minutes," 24.2 or 18.5 million, CBS, and "Soap" and "Taxi," both 23.6 or 17.6 million.

The remainder of the Top 20: "M-A-S-H," CBS; "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," both ABC, tie; "WKRP in Cincinnati" and Movie-"The Tenth Month," both CBS; "Eight is Enough," ABC; "Lou Grant" and "The Dukes of Hazzard," CBS, and Movie-"Annie Hall," ABC.

MTM Again Tries Stage

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Tyler Moore, whose last Broadway effort pooped before its premiere, is trying Broadway again — for at least two months on her back, in bed and in a role orginally written for a man.

The Emmy-winning CBS star will appear next February in "Whose Life Is It Anyway," which author Brian Clark will extensively rewrite, a spokesman for the hit British comedy said Tuesday.

The play is about a young British sculptor — now played by England's Tom Conti — who, after a car crash, lies totally paralyzed in a London hospital bed, pleading for the right to die.

The new version has Miss Moore as an American woman in the same plight. She'll appear in the show here for eight to 10 weeks, then possibly reprise the role in Los Angeles and San Francisco, the spokesman said.

Miss Moore hasn't appeared on Broadway since 1966, when she was in a musical version of Truman Capote's "Breakfast at Tiffany's." It never officially opened, closing after four preview performances.

Willow Mats Deter Erosion

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A new method of firming the banks of local rivers has been developed in the town of Ostrava.

Willow rods are bound by a machine into long mats which are then unrolled on the river banks and covered with soil. The willow branches quickly sprout and send out roots which help prevent the erosion of the river banks.

Fresh Are More Pessimistic

NEW YORK (UPI) — A national survey of 17,000 high school seniors showed college freshmen this year are much more Pessimistic about America's future than their counterparts last year.

But they remain optimistic in personal expectations, say Jerald G. Bachman and Lloyd D. Johnston of the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research.

Reporting on the study in Psychology Today magazine, they said 60 percent of the college freshmen expect things to become worse for the United States during the next five years, compared with 40 percent holding that view in 1978.

War-time Eisenhower Diary Found

HOUSTON (AP) — A secret war-time diary that the late Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower ordered destroyed in 1945 has turned up in a Kansas library, the Houston Chronicle reports in two copyright articles.

The 22-page typescript, in which Eisenhower was often critical of the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Adm. Ernest King, was discovered by Francis Loewenheim, historian at Rice University. He found it in a Columbia University manila envelope in the Eisenhower Library at Abilene, Kan., the newspaper said.

The Chronicle ran its articles in the Sunday and Monday editions.

Loewenheim said the envelope was among the voluminous personal papers the library received after the 1969 death of the former president and former head of Columbia University.

The historian wrote there is little doubt the sentiments Eisenhower recorded and later sought to suppress did represent his deep-seated feelings, particularly about such military figures as MacArthur and King.

"What we have here, in effect, is the real Ike," Loewenheim wrote.

The diary entries were written in the early days of the war, from the time Eisenhower was in the War Department's operations division to the early days as commanding general of the European theater.

Entries made in February and March 1942 were said to have described Eisenhower's mixed views of King, who had become commander in chief of the U.S. fleet in December 1941.

The Feb. 23 entry said King "... is an arbitrary, stubborn type, with too much brains and a tendancy toward bullying his juniors! But I think he wants to fight, which is vastly encouraging ..."

Then followed this March 10 entry: "One thing that might help win this war is to get someone to shoot King. He's the antithesis of cooperation — a deliberately rude person — which means he's a mental bully."

Loewenheim wrote that the relations between MacArthur and Eisenhower cooled noticeably while Eisenhower served as a top MacArthur assistant in the Philippines before the war.

While he was head of the Pacific and Far East section of the War Plans Division, Eisenhower made another reference to MacArthur on Jan. 13, 1942, with a comment that "... I've got my fingers crossed."

"I still think he might have made a better showing at the beaches and passes, and certainly he should have saved his planes on Dec. 8 — but he's still the hero!!!" the entry added.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Sept. 6 through Sept. 12.

HOUSE

DRAFT REGISTRATION — The House defeated, 163 for and 252 against, a move requiring 18-year-old males to register for possible draft into the military.

The effect of the vote was to remove draft-registration language from a Defense Department authorization bill (HR 4040), later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Samuel S. Stratton, D-N.Y., a supporter, stressed that the bill did not re-institute the draft. He said it would provide nothing more than "a mechanism for rapid mobilization in the event of a serious national emergency."

Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., an opponent, said registration would "save us only 13 days in the event of a mobilization," and asked: "What right do we have to reach into and disrupt the lives of every single 18-year-old male in the country when we are at peace?"

Members voting "yea" wanted 18-year-old males to be required to register with their local draft boards, beginning in 1981.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, and Richardson, D-6, did not vote.

POST OFFICE — The House rejected, 125 for and 242 against, an amendment fo freeze the taxpayer subsidy of the U.S. Postal Service at its current $920 million level for the next five years. The vote left standing language to gradually hike the subsidy to $1.3 billion in fiscal 1982. It came during debate on a post office bill (HR 79), passed and sent to the Senate. Although the Postal Service expects a profit of $180 million in the current fiscal year, it says it may return to the red ink in subsequent years.

Rep. Jim Courter, R-N.J., the sponsor, said raising the postal subsidy "provides neither the answer to the underlying problems of rising postal costs nor any incentive for the U.S. Postal Service to increase efficiency."

Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., an opponent, said "the gut question" of the amendment is "do we want to increase postal rates beyond 15 cents or do we want to...modestly increase the subsidy?"

Members voting "nay" wanted to hike the taxpayer subsidy of the U.S. Postal Service.

Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay."

EXPORT LICENSING — The House rejected, 201 for and 206 against, an amendment to curb the sale of "sensitive" U.S. goods and technologies abroad.

The amendment was supported by national-security advocates. It was opposed by business interests which claimed that Commerce Department red tape often deprives them of foreign sales of products no longer sensitive from a national security standpoint. The vote came during debate on the Export Administration Act (HR 4034), later passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., a supporter, cited U. S. computers as a sensitive technology whose export the government should limit. He said: 'Let us not fool around with computers where we certainly have a lead over the Soviet Union. This is the only place that we have the lead."

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said that by allowing the Commerce Department to easily prune its export-control list, the bill helps to alleviate "the competitive disadvantage under which many high technology industries have been trying to operate for many years."

Members voting "yea" supported the national-security argument.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Andrews, Neal and Preyer voted "nay."

SENATE

STRIP MINING — The Senate passed, 68 for and 26 against, a bill (S 1403) softening the landmark strip-mining law enacted in 1977. The bill gives states more time to comply with the law and more autonomy in developing environmental and reclamation standards within the federal framework. The bill, which was sent to the House, puts in abeyance proposed Interior Department regulations for implementing the law.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., a supporter, said "the states want the right to develop their own (strip-mining regulation) program based on what they think is in the best interests of their respective states."

Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., an opponent, said the bill would "undercut and postpone implementation of the strip-mining law. We waited ten years to get this milestone legislation passed. We should not have to wait longer to get it implemented."

Senators voting "yea" wanted to soften the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

Sens. Jesse Helms, R, and Robert, Morgan, D, voted "yea."

REGULATIONS — The Senate refused to kill, 27 for and 51 against, language to curb the power of federal regulation-writers. The vote upheld a provision that would make the multitude of regulations issued by federal agencies more vulnerable to court challenges. The language is considered of landmark potential, for if it becomes law it will put the burden of proof on the regulators to show that a given regulation is valid. Now the burden is on the regulated to prove a regulation invalid. The vote came during debate on a courts bill (S 1477), later passed and sent to the House.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., said the language would prove to be a "device in the hands of large corporations to block or slow the promulgation of regulations which affect their interests."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., said: "The cards have been hopelessly stacked against the regulated people in this country."

Senators voting "nay" want executive branch agencies to be required to prove the validity of their regulations when challenged in court.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

CROP INSURANCE — The Senate passed, 64 for and 27 against, a bill establishing a broad federal insurance program to protect producers of all major crops against losses from natural disaster. After crop year 1981, the insurance set up will replace the existing program under which the government awards after-the-disaster relief grants to farmers suffering losses. The bill (S 1125) was sent to the House.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a supporter, said the bill "will make all-risk crop insurance available to our nation's farmers at affordable rates, thereby giving farmers protection against disasters at a minimum cost to taxpayers."

Many opponents objected to the inclusion of fire and hail insurance in the federal program. Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., said the bill "will truly virtually wipe out the private sector's ability" to write fire and hail policies.

Senators voting "yea" favored the bill.

Morgan voted "yea."

Helms voted "nay."

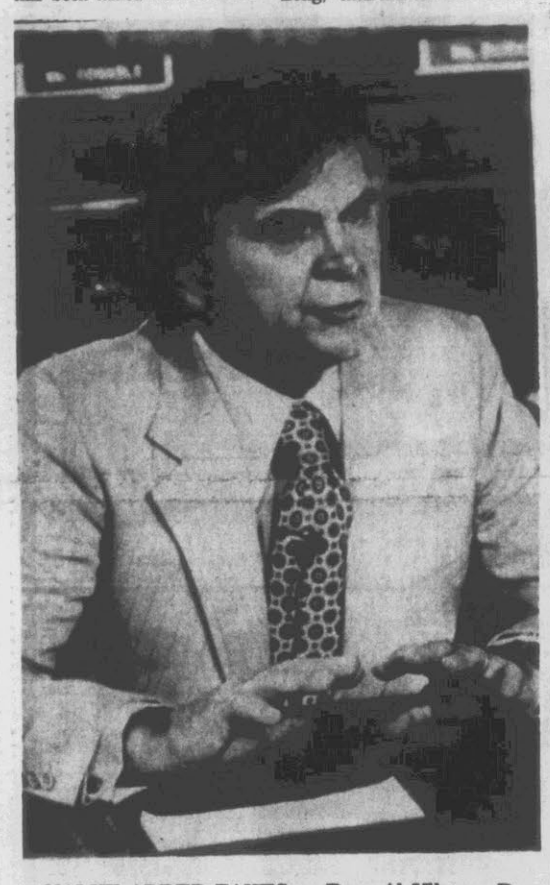
Value Added Tax An Old Idea Back In Spotlight

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

An old idea for a new tax is back in the spotlight.

The levy is VAT — the acronym for value added tax. It has been talked about for decades. It was adopted by France in 1954. And it is being promoted here by U.S. Rep. Al Ullman, the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and U.S. Sen. Russell Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.



VALUE ADDED TAXES — Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, believes the proposed value added tax (or VAT) will be accepted by taxpayers only if it is tied to reductions in income taxes and Social Security payroll taxes. (AP Laserphoto)

The tax gets added to goods and services as they move from the producer to the consumer. Some people describe VAT as a national sales tax — a description supporters don't like.

Ullman, a Democrat from Oregon, says Americans could be paying VAT by 1981. He wants Congress to enact the new tax to replace some existing taxes. No one, says Ullman, should end up paying any more taxes than he or she does now.

Ullman has indicated he is thinking of a VAT in the neighborhood of 10 percent. He wants to reduce Social Security taxes byy 25 percent and cut some other existing levies as well. Long, who is also a Democrat and is from Louisiana, wants Social Security taxes to be eliminated.

Donald Lubick of the Treasury Department said earlier this year that it would take a VAT of 13 percent to completely replace the payroll tax as a source of financing for Social Security.

The Tax Foundation Inc., a research group based in Washington, D.C., calculated that in 1978, each one percentage point of VAT would produce $11 billion in revenue. Social insurance taxes — basically, Social Security — are expected to raise a little more than $140 billion in the current fiscal year.

VAT is a tax on the value that is added to a product on its way to market. It is based on the difference between each manufacturer's buying price and selling price.

How To Buy and Prepare Meat . . .

NEW KROGER FILM FOR CLUBS AND CLASSES

A new consumer information film, "Learning More About Meat," has been prepared by the Kroger Sav-on Consumer Affairs Department, and will be available for showings during the 1979-80 club and school year. The 20-minute, sound and color film on how to shop for and prepare meat, fish and poultry to save money and get the most nutrition is being offered to clubs, classes and other groups and organizations free of charge.

Your Kroger Sav-on store manager or Kroger Sav-on office can make arrangements to schedule a showing of the film for your group. A Kroger Sav-on meat expert is available (on a limited basis) to accompany the film for further discussion and information.

The film answers such consumer questions as quality points to look for when shopping for meat . . . how proper cooking can help you get more eating enjoyment and more nutrition for your meat dollar . . . and how to buy and prepare meat, fish and poultry to reduce fat and calories, but not essential protein.

(The new film, "Learning More About Meat," is a part of Kroger Sav-on's continuing consumer information efforts to assist customers to shop more wisely and get full value for their food dollar. Also available is a film showing how to shop for fresh fruits and vegetables. Arrangements for a showing of "Enjoying Fresh Fruits and Vegetables" may be made in the same manner as the meat film.) Call 704-527-5830 or write Kroger Sav-on, 5435 Seventy-Seven Center Drive, Charlotte, N.C. 28210.
