DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago, when I was 16, I began a pen-pal relationship with a boy (my age) in Liverpool, England. We corresponded faithfully, exchanged pictures, and you might say we "fell in love" through our letters.

Derek's letters indicated that he was intelligent, well-read and romantic, and I couldn't wait to meet him.

Last week he came to visit me. Abby, I can't believe he is the same person who wrote those letters. Although he LOOKS like his pictures, he is like a stranger to me. He's painfully shy, hardly ever looks me in the eye, and when he talks he stammers. I did my best to make him feel comfortable and open up, but it was useless.

Last night he said he is in love with me and wants a physical relationship. Although I expressed my love for him in my letters, I have absolutely no romantic feelings for him in person. I just can't have a physical relationship with him, Abby.

How can a person who writes so eloquently be so totally inarticulate and unappealing in person? Please tell me how to handle this. I hate to hurt him.

LET DOWN IN CONN.

DEAR LET DOWN: Be gentle but honest. Tell Derek that the chemistry is not right for a physical relationship. He will be hurt, but he'll be hurt more if you give him false hope.

Many shy people can't cope with social situations, so they retreat into solitary activities such as reading and writing. Consequently they never develop the art of verbal communication. Don't totally reject Derek because you have no romantic interest in him. He desperately needs your friendship and understanding.

DEAR ABBY: Carla, our 15-year old daughter, is our problem. She's boy crazy. She's very mature (physically) for her age and has been wearing a 38 bra since she was 14.

Last semester she failed two subjects so we sent her to summer school to make them up. Well, she had such a busy social life with the boys that she failed both subjects again!

This year we have laid down the law. Instead of letting her stay out until 11 p.m. on school nights and 1 a.m. on weekends, we told her she has to be in the house by 10 p.m. on school nights and 12:30 on weekends. Now she has her dates pick her up at 6:30. Isn't this too early for a girl to be going out? Carla says since she has to be in by 11 she has to get an early start! What is your opinion?

CARLA'S MOM

DEAR MOM: I think Carla is getting an "early start" for an earlier finish. In my opinion, a 15-year-old girl with failing grades should not date at all on school nights, and midnight should be curfew on weekends.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Jewish New Year

This Sunday, September 23, is the first day of autumn in the Northern Hemisphere. But for millions of Jews around the world, this weekend means more than the start of a new season. It's the start of a new year. The Jewish New Year festival is called Rosh Hashanah. Jews consider it a day of judgment. It signals the start of a 10-day period called the High Holy Days, a time for people to pray, reflect on their past actions, and repent their sins. As Jews gather to observe Rosh Hashanah this Saturday, they will be celebrating the start of the new Jewish year 5740.

DO YOU KNOW — What Jewish holiday marks the end of the High Holy Days?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — John F. Kennedy was the most recent president to die in office.

Options Exist To Cut Cost

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the fifth of six articles on learning opportunities for adults, written for The Associated Press by the College Board, a non-profit association concerned with education for students of all ages. This article deals with examining costs.

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're like most people who are interested in undertaking further education or training, paying for it is a major concern.

Whether it is $20 for a four-session course in art appreciation at the local museum or several thousand dollars in pursuit of a college degree, you are making a consumer purchase and you should shop carefully, advises Kathleen Brouder, of the College Board's College Scholarship Service.

"If you've estimated the costs of the particular course, program or experience that interests you, have reviewed your finances and come up short, you have basically two choices," she says. "You can either cut down the costs until they equal the money you have or supplement the money you have by tapping outside sources."

Many students cut their costs by cutting the amount of time they spend earning their degree or certificate through passing exams that demonstrate their competence in particular fields.

Some colleges sponsor their own tests and exempt students who do well from taking certain courses. Many institutions grant academic credit or advanced placement to those who score satisfactorily on tests they develop for this purpose or on examinations administered under the College-Level Examination Program (CLEP) of the College Board.

CLEP general and subject examinations are offered monthly at about 1,000 testing centers around the country. To find out whether the college you're considering will give you credit on the basis of CLEP scores, contact the college or consult "College Placement and Credit by Examination," published by the College Board and available in many high school and college libraries.

For a pamphlet on CLEP, write to CLEP, Box 1902, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Some colleges also grant academic credit on the basis of prior learning and life experience. Discuss this with counselors or continuing education staff at the colleges you're considering.

Another way to cut costs is, obviously, to select less expensive programs or institutions. In 1979, education expenses (direct expenses such as tuition and fees plus living expenses) will average about $2,500 for a full-time community college student who commutes, $3,200 for a full-time student at a state college or university, and $5,500 for a full-time student at a private or independent institution.

But before you rule out any college you like simply because of costs, determine whether you qualify for financial aid. If you do, you could end up paying no more at a high-cost independent college than you would have at the local community college.

You may be able to supplement your personal finances in a variety of ways:

—If you're currently employed, find out from your personnel office whether you have access to any education benefits as part of your fringe benefit package. If you're a union member, talk with your steward.

Employee benefits for education constitute one of the biggest untapped sources of aid in the country: an estimated $10 billion is available, but only a fraction of eligible employees (under 5 percent) ever use these dollars.

—Find out if you can qualify for any financial help because a member of your immediate family has such a fringe benefit plan.

—If you're interested in a course or workshop in a non-collegiate setting, such as the Y, the local museum or library, a free university or learning network, find out whether you can trade goods or services for a reduction or waiver of fees.

If you have skills that somebody else wants, you might be able to swap your time and talents — as a carpenter, typist, canvasser, driver, cook, writer, artist, teacher, mechanic or whatever — for the tuition.

—If you're not currently employed, you might qualify for education or training assistance under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 (CETA). Most programs are strongly skills-oriented, and usually full time in nature, but some are open to part-time students.

Check with your county manpower training unit for details. You might also check with your county or state social services department to see if any other education or training assistance is available in your area for unemployed or underemployed persons.

—If you're a veteran or the dependent of a veteran, you might qualify for education benefits. Check with your local Veterans Administration office for details.

—If you are physically handicapped or disabled, you might qualify for special help. Contact your state department of social services or vocational rehabilitation.

—Finally, if you're pursuing a certificate or degree at an accredited college, university or vocational-technical school, you could qualify for public or private financial aid.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The first time I became aware of how intimidating elevators really are was back in 1952. I had been to the doctor's office (sixth floor) and my husband was pacing the hallway.

"What did he say?" he asked. "The doctor said I was going to have a..." The elevator door opened and we both got on and mechanically faced the front without expression. We rode six floors in complete silence. The doors opened in the lobby. We walked off and I said, "..."

Somewhere it is written that no one talks on elevators. It has nothing to do with being around strangers. We talk to one another at football games, stores, and banks. But the moment several people enter a little cubicle and the doors close, we all stand there facing the same direction with our eyes glued to the light panel like we are awaiting the second coming.

I feel people want to change, but no one has the guts. I sense that more and more people are beginning to look at one another on the elevator, but as soon as they are caught they assume the old monk-at-prayer stance.

Somewhere it is written that if indeed someone talks on an elevator, it must be in a whisper, and only ONE PERSON AT A TIME. The others must stand around and pretend they can't hear him or wait for an opening. Because elevators are basically boring, I've been tempted to provide teasers as I enter, like "What Andrew Young really said was..." tell you later." Or, "And he's selling gasoline for 75 cents a gallon... UNLEADED." My favorite is, "You eat and drink everything and lose six pounds a week."

It's ridiculous when you think about it. Here we all are thrown together, our bodies touching one another (I once asked a man draped over my shoulder what his favorite silver pattern was), and the only exchange we have is when the door opens and someone shouts, "Coming out, please."

Last week I entered an elevator and it was the same old story until a man got on with a lighted cigar.

A voice came from the corner. "There's no smoking on elevators."

"Who said?" growled the cigar smoker.

"I said," came the voice. "I'll thank you not to exhale."

"I'll thank you to mind your own business."

"How would you like me to make an ashtray out of your face?"

The entire elevator came alive with controversy as each one chose up a side.

You see? All elevators need is an "ice breaker."

Basically, A Humane Decision

Four Americans have been freed by Fidel Castro, and we are among those who rejoice that these citizens have returned home.

There was a price for the freedom of the four who were jailed on espionage and political charges in Cuba. Castro had publicly announced that the four would be set free if four Puerto Ricans in U. S. jails for assassination attempts were also released.

Recently President Carter reduced the sentence of the Puerto Ricans, who were convicted of an attempt on President Truman's life, and firing on the U. S. House.

United States' authorities denied that there was any deal or any connection between the freeing of the Puerto Ricans and the return of the four Americans.

Whether or not there was any agreement, we can be certain that Fidel Castro will use the matter to his best advantage in South America and in Third World nations.

He will claim that it was through his intervention that the Puerto Ricans were set free. While in Puerto Rico itself the tides of public opinion run against the independence cause the four represent, they will be regarded as heroes in some underdeveloped countries. Castro is well aware of this, and he will use the matter to his advantage in every way possible.

But to put it in perspective, the issue is only a nuisance thing to the United States, the release of both the Americans and the Puerto Ricans was the humane thing to do. Likely it is all worth it.

Oil Price Outlook Continues Serious

Nigeria has announced an increase in oil prices by $3 per barrel.

The increase will only affect gasoline prices by about a half cent in the United States, but the move could signal still another round in oil price increases by OPEC nations.

It can mean worsening inflation for the United States and the western nations. The outlook for oil prices is not good, but there is nothing new in that.

THIS AFTERNOON

Employees Seeking Clout

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — In 1972, North Carolina state government had 135,705 teachers and state employees. This year the total approaches 175,000, and the budget adopted by the General Assembly calls for 180,000 by next year.

In less than 10 years the state bureaucracy will have expanded by 45,000.

Is state government on the verge of allowing state employees to choose their own bosses by becoming so politically strong that an election can be controlled, as some critics have charged? If unified, that many state employees, plus family votes they could influence directly, could swing an election.

Some members of the General Assembly see this condition becoming possible in the not-too-distant future; and some complain that the time is already here at least for some of their colleagues.

The Wake County delegation, for example, represents the county in which the largest number of state employees are concentrated. It is well known in legislative circles that on matters of personnel interest such as salaries and fringe benefits, the Wake delegation serves as a mouthpiece for the three most powerful state employee organizations.

Power

In other legislative districts where state employment is concentrated, their strength is recognized as well; and many lawmakers privately grumble that efforts to control personnel growth, salaries and benefits in this most expensive phase of government spending has become politically impossible.

In recent weeks, two of the employee groups took steps to increase political muscle, but stopped short of the ultimate maneuver: outright endorsement of candidates for office.

The State Government Employees Association represents some 12,500 employees in the departments of Transportation and Correction. The State Employees Association has some 25,000 members in other state agencies. The Association of Educators represents some 45,000 teachers.

The educators have made outright endorsements in the past. The other two groups talked about doing the same, but decided instead to mount voter registration drives and send information about elections and candidates to the membership.

BILL NOBLITT

Don Jones, president of the State Employees Assn, put it this way: "We'll talk to political candidates and pass what we learn along to our members. But let's not put the association in the position of endorsing a candidate — just make sure the membership is informed on personalities and issues."

To some, this posture of the employee associations may appear more moderate than endorsement. But knowledgeable insiders say it actually gives the employee association leadership more bargaining power rather than less.

Action

To endorse would require formation of a political action committee separate from the parent organization (as the educators have done). Endorsements would come from that smaller body, and in practice such a technique has often split the membership of a sponsoring group rather than unifying it. Thus, the employee organizations face the prospect of not being able to deliver the votes, and that would diminish rather than strengthen their political clout.

Instead, leaders can negotiate with various candidates and "inform" members of those who promise the most — or at least — without staking their ability to deliver votes in the process.

So long as employee groups remain splintered and unable to agree on uniform goals (the groups battle regularly over whether teachers should be making more than other state employees) there is little danger of the workers choosing their own bosses, say the experts.

The Dam And The Fish

WASHINGTON — Hard cases, they say, make bad law; and the recent battle over the Tellico dam and the snail darter suggests that the maxim applies not only to the halls of justice but to the chambers of Congress also. Both House and Senate now have voted to complete this misbegotten Tennessee dam. On balance — on very close balance — I think their decision is regrettable but right.

The background is well known. In 1966 Congress authorized a dam and reservoir project on the Little Tennessee River at the Tellico site. This was to be a multipurpose dam, providing a relatively minute amount of hydroelectric power to the vast TVA system, plus modest recreational, industrial and flood control benefits. The government proceeded to spend $80 million acquiring and clearing 38,000 acres of land, and another $30 million, more or less, on the dam and associated canals. By June of last year, the project was 95 percent complete.

Meanwhile, as the whole world knows, a University of Tennessee ichthyologist, ex-

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

Recently all employees of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company received a bulletin from United Systems which we are a part of. The bulletin dealt with the high inflation and President Carter's guideline.

Following is a quote from the Company and what they intend to do.

"Recognizing the impact of greater than projected increases in the cost of living, and in the absence of the Real Wage Insurance Plan proposed by President Carter, the United System adjustment for certain non-union represented employees.

In keeping with the United decision, both Carolina Tel and Norfolk Carolina will grant a one-time voluntary wage adjustment, approximating two percent of present pay rates to non-bargaining unit employees covered by the wage and hour laws." End of quote.

To better explain to our customers, Carolina Telephone has four major departments: Traffic (operators), Plant (repairmen and installation), Engineering (designs facilities), and Commercial (business office). Of these four departments, traffic and plant are unionized. We usually bargain for a contract every two to three years. At this time the Company and Union officials agree to a percent of wage increase we will receive. At the same time, the other two departments get the same increase and most of the time the Company gives them a higher increase.

Past history of wages paid by the Company before being unionized clearly shows the Company's intent, to keep two departments non-union. Unions work for the good of workers as well as employers. If North Carolina had more organized union labor, we would not rank as one of the lowest in paid wages and one of the highest in cost of living.

Bessie M. Reveal
Rt. 4, Greenville

ploring the Little Tennessee in the summer of 1973, had discovered a new species of the snail darter. It was hardly a discovery to make history; roughly 130 species of the darter are known, and new ones are discovered all the time. But this discovery did make history.

Under the Endangered Species Act, any federal expenditure that might jeopardize a species of animal, fish or plant life is flatly forbidden. It appeared that this new darter might be wiped out. The Supreme Court, speaking through Chief Justice Burger, found the language of the law explicit, and a few months ago ordered the project halted in its tracks.

On the face of it, the decision seemed absurd. After all, what is one darter more or less? The dam was virtually complete. Justice Powell, dissenting, pleaded for "a modicum of common sense and the public weal." Congress responded by emphatically reviving the project this year. The House voted 258-156 to complete the job, and a few days ago the Senate reluctantly concurred, 48-44.

I would have voted aye, but not without some serious misgivings. The time to have halted this project was in 1966, when it first was authorized. There never was any valid justification for flooding thousands of acres of productive farmland in the first place. A 30-mile reservoir may provide some additional recreational opportunities, but abundant lakes already exist in the area. The prospect of new industry in Blount, Loudon and Monroe Counties is mostly speculative pie in the sky.

But the dam is now built, and what has been done cannot well be undone. The 350 displaced families cannot readily be returned, nor fences, roads, bridges, trees and buildings restored to their original condition. The dam would provide

THE LONGEST CASE

Uncle Sam Versus IBM

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It is a battle of leviathans, the federal government versus International Business Machines Corp., the seventh largest corporation in America.

It is lasting longer and costing more than any government antitrust suit in history. More than 10 years and close to $20 million so far, and they're still in round one.

The government argues that IBM holds an illegal monopoly over the computer industry and must be split into smaller companies. IBM, not surprisingly, frowns on that notion.

The case could go a full three rounds, through the trial court, the appellate court and the Supreme Court, with perhaps another decade of incredibly complex arguments twisting through the stratosphere of computer technology, high finance and economic theory.

"There was no way we could have imagined it lasting this long," says Ramsey Clark who filed the government suit on Jan. 17, 1969, in virtually his last act as the Johnson administration's attorney general.

Six more attorneys general have come and gone since then, and the current one, Benjamin Civiletti, promises to push the case aggressively.

But the key figure — the man who pulls the switches in the legal process and who must ultimately rule for the government or for IBM — is David Edelstein, the strong-willed, 70-year-old chief judge of the U.S. District Court in New York.

Edelstein himself has become the latest issue.

IBM attorneys are accusing the judge of bias and trying to remove him from the case. Edelstein last week denied the IBM request that he disqualify himself.

But IBM appealed, and the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals during a hearing last Friday scheduled the question for argument Oct. 16.

Remarkably that the trial is "lasting longer than World War II," Circuit Judge William Mulligan suggested that the two sides ought to talk about a compromise settlement. IBM attorney Thomas Barr said he would seek a meeting with Civiletti.

Although both sides say they're willing to consider a compromise, serious talks have never gotten off the ground. "There have been a couple of approaches in the past...but we were never on the same wavelength," said a government source who requested anonymity.

Government attorneys, who themselves have chafed under some of Edelstein's rulings, were stunned by the IBM attack on the judge. Generally, they give him high marks.

"He's taking God's own sweet time to do everything," remarked a government lawyer who asked that he not be named. "He is crossing all the t's and dotting all the i's. But he knows that to the extent he doesn't do it, it will come back to bite him."

Nevertheless, this attorney and other sources say mistakes of management and judgment made by the court, the government and IBM have prolonged the battle.

"I think the Nixon administration didn't really prosecute it. It lay dormant in the Justice Department for

Loves Labor In Lace

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
NORTHVALE, N.J. (AP) — Her hands move quickly but the work goes ever so slowly. No matter. Finishing in a hurry is not Mrs. Gunvor Jorgensen's purpose.

She explained: "It's like reading a good book. You get completely absorbed in it and are anxious to know how it comes out, but it's so enjoyable you hate for it to end."

"Besides," she said, "I don't do it to sell it. I do it because I love it, and to preserve an honorable art."

Mrs. Gunvor Jorgensen is a lacemaker.

Honorable, yes, and more. It is an art as ancient as a pharaoh's tomb, as precise as a spider's web, as romantic as a bridal veil, as innocent as a crib coverlet, and Mrs. Jorgensen, a gift to America from Denmark, is one of its most respected practitioners.

She is also quick to point out to crossword puzzle fans that, no, she does not tat.

"I do some tatting," she said. "I do some embroidery. I do crocheted lace and knitted lace. I do all the different types of lace. But what I do best, and enjoy most, is bobbin lace."

Tatting, she explained, with admirable patience, is done with a single thread and a shuttle.

Bobbin lace is done with dozens of threads, hundreds, and is done with — bobbins: thin spindles about four inches long with thread wound around the top and a bulb at the bottom as a grip.

Some bobbins are simple, functional tools; others are finely carved in wood, or ivory. "The custom in Denmark," she said, "was for the young men to carve the bobbins for their sweethearts. The fancier the bobbin, the more welcome the gift."

40 Years Ago Today

Sept. 20, 1939

Chief of Police George Clark and members of the State Highway Patrol today were making an effort to apprehend a man and woman who passed two counterfeit half-dollars at the filling station of Woodrow Haddock near Winterville last night.

Clark said the couple, both well-dressed, went to the filling station and purchased five gallons of gasoline, giving the attendant the counterfeit money in payment of the fuel.

Haddock did not detect the bogus money until after the couple had left the station, but rushed to Greenville and furnished the police with a good description of the couple and left the money with Chief Clark.

Clark said he intended turning the money over to secret service agents. Both coins were described by Clark as "very good imitations of money minted by the government."

Strength For Today

SET OF THE SAILS

The earliest sailing ships were completely at the mercy of the wind. Mariners were always forced to wait for winds blowing in the direction they wanted to go. Later, seamen learned that by setting the sails at different angles they could tack into the wind, and so had many options regarding the directions in which they desired to sail. It was the same wind, but the sailors had learned to make the best of it.

Some of feel as helpless in our daily lives as were the early mariners on the seas. We feel completely controlled by outside circumstances — our jobs, our education, the places we live, the amounts of money we have.

Perhaps we cannot change the conditions, but we can make the best of them instead of letting them make the worst of us. The same old jobs, towns, and people can be interesting — if we bring into them a new interest. It is not the gales, but the set of the sails which determines our direction in life.

Uncle Sam Is Losing Gold Bet

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — It has made men wealthy and it has made them fools, and if you want to see how it works you'll probably get your chance over the next few weeks. Perhaps you might even be an exhibit.

You would have company. Uncle Sam decided some time ago to auction government supplies of the metal because, among other things, he sought to depress the price by increasing the supply.

That goal seemed logical for many reasons.

First off, the sales would benefit the dollar, whose value had been moving inversely to that of gold. Uncle Sam wanted to promote the notion that his paper money was just as good, even better, than gold.

He also wanted to help attract foreign funds in order to help correct to some small degree his imbalance of international payments. He figured that many of the buyers would be foreigners, maybe Arabs.

It didn't work out as planned. Gold buyers bid prices to record highs, indicating demand far exceeded supply, regardless of how much the U.S. Government put up for sale. Auction prices reached $378 this week.

When you match that price against those of less than two months ago, when the inert yellow commodity sold for less than $300 an ounce, you realize the extent of Uncle Sam's miscalculation.

True, he made profits and he attracted foreign funds, but he didn't help the dollar much. As few events have, the auctions told the world how much people preferred an ounce of gold to a U.S. dollar bill.

Uncle Sam's experience notwithstanding, you too might have notions about gold that you cannot suppress. Be advised that it is available, but that it can bring you anxiety as well as the security you seek.

You can buy coins. The South African kruggerand, a pure troy ounce, can be obtained from coin dealers at a minimum premium of about 5 percent over bulk prices. You may have to pay a state sales tax too.

You can buy in larger quantities as well. Bullion in 400-ounce ingots can be had at wholesale prices if five are purchased together, but that might cost you more than $750,000, plus a sales tax in some states.

More to your style might be a 10-ounce bar, which the investment house of Bache Halsey Stuart Shields sells at a relatively small premium plus, in some states, that sales tax.

Why do people buy? Because they distrust paper money, which is to say they distrust the condition of the world's economies, the U.S. economy in particular. That's why Uncle Sam's ideas didn't pan out.

In contrast, gold buyers believe it retains value.

And why? Because it is in limited supply and universally acceptable in exchange for goods and services. It is, therefore, considered to be protection against inflation, deflation and other economic ailments.

years," Clark said in an interview.

A government antitrust official during the Nixon years said there were delays but not because of department reluctance.

"Judge Edelstein was quite annoyed at the Nixon administration because they hadn't filled a number of vacancies on the court in New York," this source recalled.

"So he refused to appoint a judge to handle all IBM proceedings until the administration filled those vacancies."

Finally, Edelstein appointed himself to the case in 1972.

Three more years passed, largely consumed by what lawyers call "discovery." That means that each side demands reams of documents from the other, hoping the information will prove incriminating.

But what was being discovered was that this lawsuit was becoming so unmanageable that people began comparing it to Jarnidye vs. Jarnidye, the estate case in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House" that became so protracted and expensive that lawyers' fees used up the estate.

Department officials say the government has spent around $8 million on the case. IBM won't say what it has spent, but its lawyers earn more than government attorneys so it undoubtedly exceeds $8 million. The cost to both sides, plus court expenses, approaches $20 million.

Finally, after six years of maneuvering, the trial began with the government presenting its side. After three years, 52 witnesses and 71,857 pages of transcript, a department attorney intoned, "The government rests."

IBM's lawyers — "they're all big hitters," says one observer — quickly launched into the defense case. That was in April 1978, and the IBM team is still going strong. Then the government gets another turn in rebuttal.

Why, one wonders, do they keep at it?

Both sides say the case is an immensely important test of the power of the law and the government to restructure a major industry, a test with broad and unknown consequences for the future of the economy.

Meantime, government antitrust lawyers are taking steps to speed their handling of this and other cases. They're using a new computer system — with computers made by IBM.

Car With Two Women Rose On Drawbridge

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — They call those tense moments cliff-hangers, but for two Portsmouth women a better word is bridge-hanger.

Mittie Goldman, 56, and neighbor Hazel Scott were crossing the Jordan Bridge over the Elizabeth River Wednesday when the drawbridge starting opening — with their car on it.

"She hollered 'Jump, Mittie, jump,' but I was frozen and couldn't move. It was like I had gone into shock," Mrs. Goldman said, still shaking but only slightly bruised just hours after the accident.

One minute they were riding over the bridge, "and the next thing I knew we were rising in the air," said Mrs. Scott, 47.

"The front of the car was going down, and the tail was going up. All I could think of was to open the door and jump, and I told Mittie to jump out. She didn't move, and a man came from a car behind and dragged her out."

Moments later, Mrs. Scott's car was crushed between the rising span and the top of the bridge.

Jordan Bridge Supt. E. L. Hall said the lift span was 35 feet in the air when Mrs. Scott's car was crushed. The 288-foot span was being raised to make way for a tugboat on the Southern Branch of the Elizabeth River.

Three other cars on the span were trapped on the span, but no one was injured.

Bridge tender J.E. Carlson, who has been working the bridge for six months, was relieved of his duties late Wednesday and transferred to the toll booth.

Carlson "possibly didn't wait long enough for the cars to clear," Hall said. He saw a tug and barge approaching "and he had to get the span up real quick."

Hall said Carlson did not know four cars still were on the span "because there's some 40 feet that's a blind spot. Those cars were on that 40 feet and the bridge tender couldn't see them."

The Chesapeake Public Works Department has said it will investigate the incident.

Carlson claimed he put the flashing gates down on the Portsmouth side, "but the gate to the Chesapeake side must have gotten stuck."

He said he always can see both gates clearly from his station, but gave no explanation why he lifted the span before both gates were down Wednesday.

Both women had heard the bells ringing and the lights flashing as they passed over the lift span about 8 a.m. on their way to work, but "we didn't think anything about it. The Chesapeake gate hadn't gone down, and there were three cars still behind us," Mrs. Scott said.

She disappeared upstairs and returned with a lacing pillow, a lacemaker's workbench.

It is a round pillow with a hole in the center where the work-in-progress is held on a rotating drum. Bobbins, several dozen of them, dangled like jewels from an unfinished strip of lace on white linen thread as fine as baby hair.

"These are from Denmark," she said. "They're quite old." Mrs. Jorgensen grew up in Tonder, Denmark, a town historically known for lacemaking and which, in fact, gave its name to a particularly intricate style of lace, Tonder lace.

She learned lacemaking at her mother's knee when she was a girl of eight, and learned as well the lore of the craft.

"The women of Tonder worked in cellars where the dampness kept the thread pliable. Merchants supplied the thread in exchange for the lace. They got rich. Not the women; the merchants. The women died young."

After World War II, when she was in her twenties, she came to America and married a Danish sea captain, Ernst Jorgensen, who has since died. Making lace occupied her during his long absences.

As her reputation spread among the nation's relatively small group of lacemakers, and lace experts, she was increasingly sought after as a teacher. Now she has about a dozen pupils.

Cocaine Spreads In Eastern N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Cocaine is beginning to rival marijuana in popularity as a weekend "high" in Eastern North Carolina, according to law-enforcement officials and drug counselors.

Cocaine is often known as the "rich man's drug," typically costing about $100 a gram.

"People are not only spending more money on gasoline these days, they are also spending more to buy drugs, specifically cocaine," said Ashley Moore, director of the drug-counseling service Access Inc. in Chapel Hill.

Marijuana is reported to be in short supply. And "coke" has acquired a somewhat glamorous image through its association with the disco scene, experts say.

"We've seen a definite increase in cocaine in Eastern North Carolina," said Donald Young, agent in charge of the Wilmington office of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

"In the past 12 months, we've made seizures totalling about five pounds...I don't know what percentage of the coke traffic that represents, but I'm sure it is small," Young said. "It looks like cocaine will continue to grow in this area."

Chester Gleit, a North Carolina State University chemistry professor and former consultant to several drug counseling services, said cocaine was showing up in large amounts in the Triangle area.

"Cocaine was a real novelty several years ago, but now it is readily available almost anywhere you would get it," he said.

What is the drug's appeal? "It makes you feel powerful; it creates a feeling of euphoria," said Worth Bolton, coordinator of the New Hanover Drug Abuse Committee. "...There are probably a lot of people who'd use it more often if they could afford it."

"Because of its price, coke remains an elitist drug," he said. "We don't see the hardcore unemployed using it. It's well-paid blue-collar and white-collar workers who try it."

Unconvinced On 'Kudzu Cuisine'

ATLANTA (AP) — There's haute cuisine, nouvelle cuisine, and now — kudzu cuisine, if you can believe the "King of Kudzu."

The crawling kudzu vine that chokes trees, drives farmers right up their barns and resists the onslaughts of backyard gardeners, is edible, according to Jack Tinga, a University of Georgia horticulturist, whose colleagues gave him the nickname because of his research into the plant.

Tinga says the vine, brought over from Japan, is used frequently in Oriental cuisine and is high in fiber and low in calories, cholesterol and sodium.

Kudzu may be useful, Tinga says, but even he's not convinced it tastes good.

"I haven't cooked it," he said. "I'm not that hungry."

At Least 16 Blazes In Calif. Brush, Timber

By The Associated Press

A 16,000-acre fire singed the city limits of Ventura as hundreds of firefighters battling hot weather and erratic winds struggled to quell at least 16 blazes consuming 90,000 acres of California brush and timber.

Since Saturday, 44 homes have been destroyed by the fires.

"My people have just about had it," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Dave Blaine of the firefighters who have come from as far as Maine to help control the flames.

"Some of them have been at it now for two weeks and they're in as much danger from heat stroke or heart attack as they are from the fires," he said.

Hundreds of people in the Ventura area fled their homes Wednesday when that blaze, which began Tuesday, came within two miles of the city limits. Fire department officials said later the city of 64,800 was in no danger and only a barn was destroyed before fire fighters beat back the blaze.

"It was quite a sight to see — the fire coming up toward the town," said Ventura County Fire Capt. Dick Perry. "It was like a wall of flames."

Meanwhile, a half-dozen houses were in ashes near Goleta, in Santa Barbara County 100 miles northwest of Los Angeles, after a 4,000-acre fire roared through Eagle Canyon and into the Los Padres National Forest.

Fires also burned across 40,000 acres in the Angeles National Forest above Los Angeles, including 3,000 acres north of Claremont in eastern Los Angeles County.

In Northern California, 8,200 acres of forest burned near Placerville, 50 miles northeast of Sacramento, and 3,000 acres went up in flames in Plumas County, 100 miles northeast of Sacramento.

The Claremont blaze, which began Wednesday, spread rapidly and for a time threatened about 50 cabins in Palmer Canyon.

Los Angeles County Fire Department spokeswoman Faye Nagy said that 350 firefighters backed by helicopters laden with chemicals battled through brush up to 25 feet high to save structures.

"Helicopters were dropping their loads right on top of homes," she said.

Meantime, the California Division of Forestry was battling its biggest fire of the year in San Diego County as erratic winds sent flames racing across more than 5,500 acres of brush in rural Dulzura, 30 miles east of San Diego.

In the Angeles National Forest 20 miles north of Los Angeles, firemen reported Wednesday that the end was in sight for the mammoth Sage Fire, which had charred 31,000 acres of brushland.

Forest Service spokesman Lee Redding said that a critical fire line on the northeast shoulder of the fire near Mt. Pacifico held late Wednesday, allowing for an estimated 70 percent containment on the big blaze.

Redding placed the cost for fighting the fire at $2.6 million to $2.8 million. Watershed damages should run upwards of $24 million, he said.

Skeptical Of Price Pledge

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texaco's announced plans to hold the line on heating oil prices are being scrutinized by a skeptical House energy subcommittee.

Texaco officials were going before the panel today after being threatened with a possible subpoena for not showing up Monday.

The oil company's announced freeze on heating oil prices for the rest of the year won the public commendation of President Carter, who urged the rest of the industry to follow Texaco's lead.

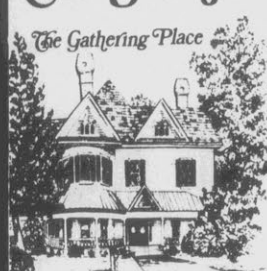

However, when Texaco failed to show up at a Monday hearing by the Government Operations subcommittee on energy, Chairman Toby Moffett, D-Conn., threatened to compel the firm's appearance with a subpoena.

Texaco said it was all a misunderstanding — and Moffett dropped plans to ask the full committee to issue the subpoena in exchange for Texaco's pledge to testify voluntarily.

Meanwhile, House Democrats have declared their support for clamping federal price controls back on home heating oil and similar fuels.

The voice vote Tuesday is not binding. But sponsors said it was a gesture of congressional frustration over the fact that heating oil prices have soared by 60 percent since last winter, to more than 80 cents a gallon.

Beer Cans, Ice Chests Save 2 Adrift In Ocean

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A Michelob beer can and fiber-glass ice chests saved the lives of two Florida men who were adrift for two days after their fishing boat sank Sunday off the Bahamas.

"Yeah, Michelob," 37-year-old Robert C. Rice said Wednesday afternoon just before a checkup at the U.S. Public Health Service hospital.

He and David Federico, 26, both of the West Palm Beach area, used the beer can to reflect sun rays to signal the Japanese container ship Rokako, which docked at the Portsmouth Marine Terminals Wednesday. They used the chests as life rafts.

"The Japanese are the greatest people in the whole world," said the badly sunburned Federico.

They stayed afloat for hours in 10-foot seas in the two heavy-duty ice chests. Federico kept his bleeding, cut foot inside the chest so it would not attract sharks, he said.

Federico, a self-employed mechanic, and Rice, a carpet salesman, left West Palm Beach in a 23-foot fiber-glass boat about 7:30 a.m. Sunday. "We checked the weather and the forecast - sounded good," Federico said.

But after they had cruised eastward towards the rich Gulf

Stream fishing grounds, they noticed water in the cabin area in the bow of the boat and the weather was getting rougher.

The men stopped the boat and discovered a 2½-foot by one-half-inch crack up forward near the bow.

"We called for the Coast Guard and then we tried every channel on the radio," Federico said, but eventually, water short-circuited the radio and they had to abandon ship.

Wearing life jackets, the men freed two heavy-duty ice chests to use as life boats, steadying them with bunk cushions.

"Those Pompanette ice chests were great. They saved us. I've fished in that area before and I remembered that one night I saw 75 sharks. I didn't want to have my foot in the water because it was bleeding from the cut," Federico said.

Rice said they saw one shark during their time in the water. "I turned away. I wanted to ignore it so I wouldn't think about it," Federico said.

Rice said the chests proved very seaworthy, especially with a sea anchor rigged up by lassoing a chair from the boat and tying to the chests. The chair sank beneath the water and

Winding Down

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Final sales were held at Baxley and Statesboro, Ga., and Live Oak, Fla., on Wednesday as the Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco belt season began to draw to a close, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reported.

Only six sets of buyers will operate in the belt today, and a final "cleanup" sales may be held on Monday, according to a spokesman for the USDA's Federal-State Market News Service.

Gross sales on Tuesday totaled 3,025,942 pounds and averaged $139.68 per hundred pounds. The average represented a decline of $1.54 from Monday, the news service said. Season marketings rose to 132,243,585 pounds averaging $140.13.

Receipts of the Stabilization Corp. on Tuesday amounted to 6.1 percent of gross sales. The season percentage through Tuesday stands at 4.8 percent.

tightened the line so the ice chests pointed into the wind.

"We could ride the waves better that way," Rice said.

"We used a beer can to reflect the sun's rays. After a while, it turned toward us," Federico said of attracting the Rokako.

Hoping For Big Tourism

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Tourism officials are hoping a lot of autumn leaves will be drifting by tourists' car windows this fall in the North Carolina mountains.

Historically, October is the biggest tourism month of the year as the fall leaves display their spectacular colors. This year, officials are hoping for huge numbers of leaf-watchers to make up for an otherwise lackluster tourist year.

State officials said tourism, which brought a record $2 billion in 1978, is running 10 percent behind that this year. The mountain area has been especially hard hit.

"This year it's been a lot worse than it has been — at least 20 percent different for me," said Ricky McGuire, who runs a honey, cider and molasses stand on U.S. 221 between Linville and Blowing Rock.

Both early-summer gas shortages and cool, rainy weather contributed to the problem. Most mountain spots had slow seasons in May and June, with business improving in mid-July and trade about normal in August.

To lure tourists to the mountains, the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce mounted a $30,000 advertising campaign.

"We expect October to be out-of-sight, weather permitting," said Harris Prevost of Grandfather Mountain, near Linville.

But leaf experts don't know yet whether the colors this year will be outstanding.

"A lot of it depends on the frost we get," said District Ranger Ken Kelley of the state Forest Service, "and we haven't approached that (time) yet."

BLOOD SAMPLING — Dr. Peter Drotman of the Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga., draws a blood sample from a Franklin, Idaho resident Sue Hawkes. WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A blood test used by doctors to match organ donors with potential recipients has found a new use — proving or disproving paternity.

The test, called the human leukocyte antigen, or HLA test, this week helped prosecutors decide not to retry a case involving kidnapping charges.

The results of court-ordered blood tests on Marion Martin, charged with kidnapping two children from their mothers last March, showed with almost 100 percent certainty that Martin fathered one of the children and couldn't have fathered the other. He testified he was the father of both.

Under both state and federal law, a parent cannot be charged with kidnapping his own child. The jury couldn't agree on a verdict, and a mistrial was declared. Prosecutors say the blood-test results "pretty well rule out" a second trial.

Dr. Eugene R. Helse, director of the Medical Immunology Laboratory at Bowman Gray Medical School, said in an interview this week that the test involves identifying and comparing "genetic markers" called antigens. Antigens, found on white blood cells, are examined from the child, the mother and the alleged father.

Helse said the number of matching antigens are added and used to calculate the chances that the man is the biological father. The higher the number of matches, the greater the chance is that the man is the real father.

The test was developed in the 1960s for organ-transplant work. Doctors found the better the match between antigens found in the donor and recipient, the better the chances were for a successful transplant.

The test works the same way in determining motherhood and is used in cases of mixups of babies in hospital nurseries.

Helse said the HLA test can exonerate more than 95 percent of men falsely accused on fathering a child. He called the HLA test "the single most powerful genetic-marker test available at the present time."

Before the HLA case came into use recently in paternity cases, a simple blood-type test was used. That test deals with the four broad blood groups — A, AB, O and B. In about 60 percent of the cases, the simple test can disprove paternity. But Helse said it can't be used to help a man who wants to prove he is the father.

The General Assembly revised the state statute on disputed parentage in June to allow admission of HLA test results in cases of disputed parentage.

Wastewater Aids In Corn Production

TUNIS, N.C. (AP) — Wastewater blamed for huge algae blooms and fish kills on the Chowan River can be used to increase corn production, according to researchers.

Hertford County Extension Chairman E.W. Rogister said that the nitrogen-rich wastewater from CF Industries plant at Tunis was applied to plots on a farm near Como last spring.

Rogister said the applications on farmer Ed Griffith's land helped produce from 122 to 136 bushels of corn per acre. Test plots treated with commercially available nitrogen solution averaged 100 bushels per acre.

Rogister and Dr. Frank Humenik, N.C. Agriculture Extension Service specialist in agricultural and biological engineering, started the test last spring to determine whether the water could be used in place of commercial nitrogen solutions.

"We have shown that this wastewater can be used on cropland without any adverse effects," Rogister said Wednesday.

However, the men pointed out that 574 gallons of wastewater was needed to equal the nitrogen in 30 gallons of conventional solution, increasing a farmer's transportation and application costs. It wasn't known how the costs of the wastewater and the commercial fertilizer themselves compared.

CF Industries was fined $15,000 by state environmental agencies after its wastewater was blamed for huge algae blooms on the Chowan River in 1976.

Little Progress In Resolving Teacher Walkouts

By The Associated Press
Parents rallied in Indianapolis and singing teachers gathered in San Francisco to support strikers, but there was little progress in resolving walkouts by more than 32,000 teachers nationwide.

San Francisco officials try to open the city's 72 elementary schools today for pupils in kindergarten through grade five, but the union vowed Wednesday to keep them closed with pickets. School Superintendent Robert F. Alioto said $90-a-day substitutes would fill in for teachers, who have been on strike for nine days in a dispute over rehiring 1,200 teachers laid off last year.

In Michigan, the hotbed of school labor unrest this year with more than 16,000 teachers on the picket lines, tentative settlements were reached

Wednesday in three districts but two more strikes began.

Altogether some 655,000 pupils are having their fall school routine disrupted by teacher strikes in 11 states.

About 300 parents staged a demonstration Wednesday night at the City-County Building to show support for a 17-day walkout by more than 1,000 teachers in Indianapolis.

Contract talks continued behind closed doors under orders of Circuit Court Judge Frank P. Huse, who on Wednesday suspended $25 fines levied against 28 strikers for violating an anti-picketing order.

Indiana Education Association spokesman Stanley I. Irwin said the strike "obviously is going to continue to grow" with immediate removal of the threat of fines. "Teachers have a basic commitment to the strike, but a long strike has great financial impact," he said.

About 400 striking San Francisco teachers and classroom aides, waving picket signs and singing, rallied outside the school district headquarters Wednesday. Meanwhile, a marathon negotiating session called by Mayor Dianne Feinstein continued in an effort to end the strike by 3,800 teachers.

Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards met with leaders of a parent's organization Wednesday, but refused to pledge state money for pay raises to end a month-long strike by 2,000 teachers in Jefferson Parish in suburban New Orleans. Only about half of the system's 64,000 pupils have been showing up for classes.

Talks between 12,000 striking Detroit teachers and the school board were at an impasse, but tentative settlements were reported in Saginaw, Mich., where 19,000 students have been out of class, and in the Montague and White Pigeon districts. However, more than 150 teachers and other school employees struck Wednesday in the Baldwin and Van Buren Intermediate districts.

Elsewhere, teacher strikes continued in public schools in Spokane, Wash., and in scattered districts in Alabama, Illinois, New Jersey, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Communists Aver Rights 'Violated'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Members of a communist group say their rights are being violated by city authorities, who they claim are waging a campaign to prevent the group from distributing a party newspaper.

Tim Hopkins of the Revolutionary Communist Party said Wednesday that he and another party worker were arrested in August for selling the newspaper "Revolutionary Worker" without a permit. Hopkins said he is appealing his 29-day sentence for soliciting without a permit.

Hopkins said authorities are trying to ban the paper.

"The city right now is scrambling to try and figure out what

Pitt Chairman Guest Speaker

Robert L. Martin, Chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, was the guest speaker of the Monday meeting of the Pitt County Chapter of CATFA (Citizens Against Tax-Funded Abortions.)

Martin addressed the group on the moral and political aspects of abortions, noting that legislators who voted for abortion funding did so by abandoning traditional values.

The group was called upon to work from the grassroots levels to influence the 1980 elections. A discussion followed Martin's speech.

kind of permit they can give us because they have never had to give a permit before or said that they want to give a permit to a political newspaper."

Jesse Warren, the city attorney, said a city ordinance requires all newspaper distributors to be licensed.

Hopkins, in a news conference Wednesday, linked his arrest to the party's recent activity in black housing projects, particularly Hampton Homes. As part of his sentence, Hopkins said he has been banned from the Hampton Homes area for two years, "which I think further demonstrates this lack of freedom."

"Here in Greensboro," Hopkins said, "the authorities have told us flat out that 'you don't have the right to exist in this city. We're going to stop you.' We're supposed to have free speech in this country. I think it's been proven again that we haven't these freedoms."

With a bundle of the bilingual, tabloid newspapers under his arm, Hopkins said he will refuse to purchase the $25 license "because that fee is an infringement upon our right to free speech."

The 33-year-old Greensboro man vowed to continue distributing the paper.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today as more banks raised their prime lending rate and the dollar sank to its lowest value of the year against major European currencies.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 1.11 to 877.56 in the first two hours of trading, but losers outnumbered gainers by a 3-2 margin in New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The dollar slipped below 1.80 West German marks for the first time in 11 months and reached its lowest value of the year against the Swiss franc. Gold resumed its upward push, rising to $380 an ounce in afternoon London trading.

Henry Wallich, one of the Federal Reserve members who voted to boost the discount rate to 11 percent, said in a New York speech rates may not yet be high enough to fight inflation. Chase Manhattan Bank and Morgan Guaranty Trust joined in the latest prime rate boost, to 13 3/4 percent.

American Telephone & Telegraph led the NYSE active list and was down 3/4 at $5 after the Federal Communications Commission proposed an overhaul of AT&T's private line charges.

Chrysler was unchanged at 7 3/4 after Lee Iacocca was named chairman and chief executive officer of the troubled automaker. McDonnell Douglas, facing checks of its DC-9 aircraft, managed a gain of 1 to 26.

Trans World Corp. rose 1/2 to 26 1/2 despite another denial that its airline subsidiary was for sale. Texas International Airlines says it wants to buy the airline.

The NYSE's composite common stock average rose .10 to 61.86. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.71 to 225.58.

Big Board volume came to 16.22 million shares in the first two hours of trading, up from 15.34 million at the same point in the previous session.

Pitt County Democrats will launch fund-raising and voter registration drives prior to the 1980 elections, according to Pitt Democratic chairman George Saleeby of Grifton.

Saleeby, who announced the plans at a meeting of the county executive committee Monday, emphasized the goal of full participation in party affairs and stressed the importance of voter-registration.

As of July 19, 29,773 persons were registered to vote in the county, including 24,541 Democrats and 4,207 Republicans.

Mrs. Betty Speir, vice-chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Party, announced that Sen. Robert Morgan will be a guest at the January 29 "men's night" meeting of the Pitt County Democratic Women.

Further information about party events may be had by calling George Saleeby in Grifton, Betty Speir in Bethel, or executive committee secretary Judy Donally in Greenville.

Single Parents Found Lonely

NEW YORK (AP) — Single parents say they are generally happy and consider themselves interesting people, but also would like to remarry someday, according to a new survey.

On one hand, the single parents say they like having the freedom to run their own lives, but some also said they are lonely and lack adult companionship. The survey of more than 760 single parents was commissioned by Time Out Institute, a group founded two years ago by Kentucky Fried Chicken to study the changing role of American women.

Checking Nuke Fuel Plant's Security

ERWIN, Tenn. (AP) — Federal investigators are checking security systems at a nuclear fuel fabricating plant where more than 19.8 pounds of weapons-grade uranium has been reported missing.

Robert Burnett, director of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's nuclear safeguards division, said Wednesday his 10-member team has uncovered nothing to indicate that the high-enriched uranium was stolen or removed from Nuclear Fuel Services Inc.'s plant in this remote mountain town.

Burnett ordered the plant to shut down within a half hour after the company reported on Monday that at least 9 kilograms of the material was missing in its latest inventory. A kilogram is 2.2 pounds.

"We have not discovered any deficiencies that would lead us to believe there was a diversion," he said. "But at the same time we have not resolved the issue so we cannot rule out a diversion."

Steve Sass, a spokesman at Nuclear Fuel Services' headquarters in Rockville, Md., said the company is satisfied after completing its own review of security procedures that there was no breach.

"It still could be an error in the accounting system, simply a double-entry so-to-speak, the same mistake you might make in your checkbook," Burnett said.

Burnett said the plant's 400 employees were working Wednesday to put the process line into a condition so that a new inventory could begin next week. He said the inventory will take 30 days.

NRC experts, meanwhile, were concentrating their efforts on the major two components of the plant's security system.

One is the physical security system to prevent unauthorized access to or removal of nuclear material. The other is a material control accounting system similar to that in a bank to keep track of uranium as it goes through the fabricating process.

The missing uranium gives off no dangerous rays and poses no radiological threat to the public, officials said.

Other areas being investigated include an accidental release of 300 grams of gaseous uranium on Aug. 6 and a four-month strike by the plant's 250 hourly production workers that ended Aug. 4., Burnett said. The material turned up missing in an inventory completed Monday for the period of June 18 through Aug. 14.

During the strike, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union charged that using unskilled management personnel to keep the plant in operation posed a safety threat to the public.

A Nuclear Emergency Search

Team from the Department of Energy is flying over the facility and surrounding countryside to monitor for any trace quantities of uranium in the atmosphere.

Nuclear Fuel Services, a subsidiary of Getty Oil Co., opened the Erwin plant in 1956. The plant fabricates fuel for use in reactors powering Navy submarines.

The NRC closed the plant for three weeks in 1975 because of a difference in an inventory and the uranium that was supposed to be there. An investigation then determined that the difference was due to an accounting error.

Rose Returns To Action Against Enloe

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

After a week away from the gridiron, Rose High School's Rampants return to the field Friday night, traveling to Raleigh to face the Enloe Eagles.

Rose had an off date this past Friday, after downing Washington, 36-0, the week before. Rose takes a 1-1 record into the contest, set to start at 8 p.m. in Enloe Stadium.

The Eagles come in with a dismal 0-2 mark, having been shut out by both opponents. They lost their opener two weeks ago to Northern Durham, 35-0, and then fell to Durham this past Friday, 21-0.

"I thought that this week off would give us a chance to get over some of our bumps and bruises," Rose Coach Dave Bumgarner said yesterday. "But the opposite has been true. Ron Butler (starting tight end and inside linebacker) has been hampered by a slight ankle injury, and there are a few others with various aches and pains," Bumgarner said.

The only Rampant slated to miss the game, however, is defensive end Don McGlohon, who is out with a shoulder injury. "He'll miss this game, and there is a possibility that he may miss the next," Bumgarner said.

During the off-week, the coach feels that the Rampants have made progress. "We've worked on a lot of things. We had a couple of days off, too, and we had a real good practice Tuesday.

"Morale is good now. We are beginning to realize that we're playing ball again. Several of our players saw last week's Enloe game, and they realize that they can be just as good as anyone."

Bumgarner said that the two weeks however, have produced no changes in the lineup, except for the fact that Curtis Spell will probably start in McGlohon's place. "Ted King is getting the cast off his wrist this week, and will probably see more action at the tight end position, too," Bumgarner said.

Of this week's opponent, Bumgarner admitted that on paper, the Rampants would be heavy favorites. "But Enloe is not that bad of a ball club. What's hurt them has been getting behind early by big scores, and that's deflated them.

"They have a few big people and they have very good running backs. They throw the ball a lot, but that could be due to the nature of the games they've been in."

The Eagles run from the I formation most of the time, and use a straight 5-2 defensive alignment.

"I don't really anticipate that they'll make any changes for our game," Bumgarner said.

But the game is an important one to Rose. "Against Washington, we found that we could win. Now we have to continue our momentum and build some more confidence in our team. We certainly can't afford to take Enloe lightly.

"We are going to have to be very intense. This game has got to serve as a stepping stone toward our first conference game," the coach said. That game comes up next Friday, against Northern Nash.

Rose's offense has been led by fullback-halfback Mark Shank, who has rushed for 130 yards in two games, with a 6.5 per carry average. Next closest is halfback Calvin Whichard with 97 yards and a 4.9 average, while fullback Todd Tyson has rushed for 88 yards with a 5.9 yard average.

The top per carry average belongs to Kenny Wilson, who had a 7.2 average, but only six lugs.

As a team, Rose has rushed for 189.0 yards a game, passed for 28.5, with a total of 217.5 per game. They have allowed just 70 per game rushing, 25 per game passing, or a total of 95.0 yards a contest in total offense.

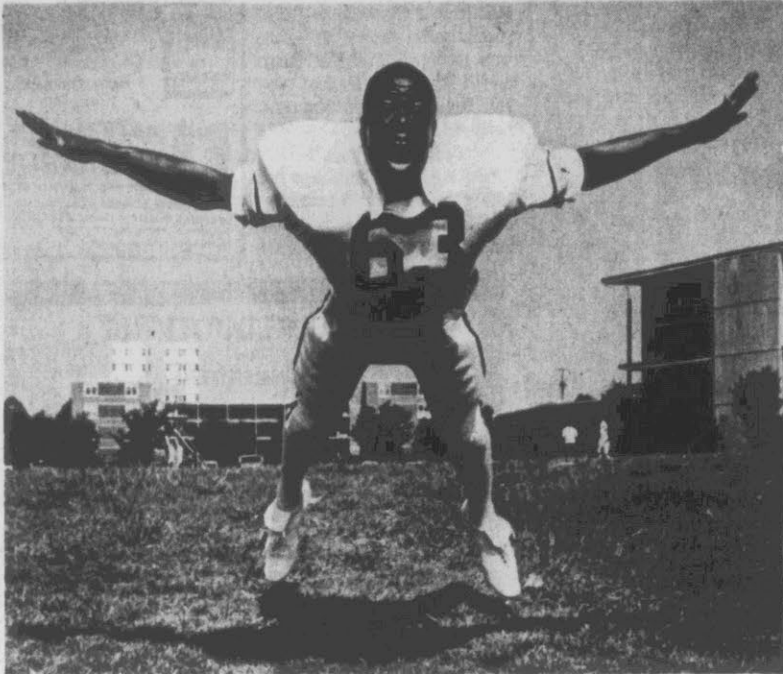

The game is the final non-conference affair for the Rampants, whose final seven games are all against Division I teams.

Elsewhere in the league, Beddingfield visits West Carteret, unbeaten Bertie is at Edenton, winless Hunt visits Southwest Edcombe, Ahoskie is at unbeaten Northeastern; Tarboro visits Northern Nash; and unbeaten Goldsboro meets top-ranked 4-A leader Rocky Mount on the Gryphon field. Fike has an open date.

Dye Looking For New Approach From Team

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When you are the coach of a team that has just been upset by another squad and you have to go up against an unbeaten team that has pulled off one of the top early-season upsets, what do you do?

If you're Pat Dye of East Carolina, you express concern. And that's just what Dye did yesterday at his weekly press conference.

"It's kind of frustrating to be at this point with the group of seniors that we have," Dye said. "I'm not ready to give up on them, however, but we didn't get the type of leadership we should have against Duke."

The Pirates are coming off a 28-14 defeat at the hands of the Duke Blue Devils, a team the Pirates were solidly favored over. This week, in Winston-Salem's Groves Stadium, the Pirates take on Wake Forest, which is fresh from an upset win over Georgia, 22-21.

"You don't have excuses for not being prepared and for not being as good as you are supposed to be," Dye said in reference to the Duke game. "We were in the awkward position again of having to play three opening games, but that too is no excuse. It may be a plus for the other teams, since they have all that much time to prepare for us, but it's not that much of a minus for us. In fact, it should be somewhat of a plus since we've had the chance to assess our players."

Last week, Dye referred to Duke as a mystery team.

This week, it was his own Pirates. "I'm in the dark about them," he candidly admitted. "But I haven't lost faith in them. If we've got the same kind of a team we've had in the past, we'll respond to this and come back. I have faith in our players, our staff, our program and our plan. We'll be a football team sometime before this year is over."

But, Dye is hoping that it will come sooner than that. "It may be this week," he added.

"We're not a good team now. We are playing as a group of individuals. Maybe what's happened to us will bring us together. For sure, one individual can't do it all. It takes 11 disciplined players to do it."

Saying the Pirates were not ready to play mentally, Dye said he felt the Pirates did have a good game plan.

"We just broke down on some of our defensive assignments. Although it was not as obvious as it was against State, since we didn't get hurt as bad. But we didn't play hard like a winning football team."

"I really can't imagine playing anyone and not trying to win," Dye added, "but we had some people doing this."

Offensively, Dye felt that the Pirates went at one speed. "We executed and gained yards. But we didn't make any more out of a play than it was designed to do. We didn't make second, third and fourth efforts to make the big play."

Greene Central Coach Stewart Smith is painfully aware of the importance of his team's game tomorrow night against Farmville Central.

"This is our season in a nutshell," Smith said. "It's going to be tough coming off a loss, but we've been improving."

Picked during the preseason as one of the teams with a chance to unseat Farmville Central as the Eastern Carolina Conference champion, Greene Central has yet to impress anyone.

Following an opening season 20-7 win over South Lenior, the Rams were defeated by Beddingfield, 42-22, and then, last Friday night, were beaten by conference foe Southern Nash, 8-7.

"We blew some assignments and reads in that game there," Smith said. Following a late touchdown score by the Firebirds, which narrowed the Ram's lead to one, 7-6, a Ram player was spotted offside on the extra point kick. Nash, eschewing the kick, punched the ball over for two and won.

Despite the loss, Smith was encouraged by his team's play.

"I'm high on our team," Smith said. We've been improving each week and we're looking forward to playing Farmville.

"We're looking forward to playing a team that hasn't lost a conference game in, what, three years," Smith added.

Over the years, the game has become an intense rivalry, both Smith and Farmville Coach Gene Brewer agreed.

"It's definitely a rival-type game. There's definitely no love lost between the two schools," Smith said. "A lot of kids live close to the (school district) border, and they know each other fairly well." this year won't be a repeat of last season.

A year ago, Farmville beat the Rams, 46-7, on its way to a third consecutive conference title and an undefeated conference slate.

Unlike last year, when his team limped into the game, Smith said the Rams are "a 100 percent healthy."

Not only that, but it's a home game. "It feels good to be back home after two games on the road," Smith said.

And Smith has some special if basic, plans for stopping Farmville?

"We're going to try to do something a lot of teams don't try to do. We're going to try to block the two Reid boys. We're going to try to keep some bodies on them all night, so maybe we can gain some yards," Smith said.

"I don't want to take anything away from them."

U.S. Is Sending 666

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Some 528 athletes and another 138 staff members will comprise the United States entourage to the 1980 Summer Olympic Games in Moscow, a U.S. Olympic Committee spokesman says.

The cost of sending those 666 persons is estimated at $2.4 million, which includes transportation, processing and housing.

"We'll be able to cover that cost through our fund-raising efforts," Mike Moran, assistant director of communications for the USOC, said Wednesday.

Moran said the USOC quadrennial fund-raising campaign for the period from 1976-80 had reached $20.2 million by the end of August, and another $9 million was expected from corporate participation. Donations generally aren't earmarked for a specific event or Olympic function.

The USOC has a total budget of $25,750,000 for the four-year period, which includes the cost of the Moscow Games and an estimated $950,000 for the Winter Games in Lake Placid. Not included in that budget figure is the cost of staging the National Sports Festival and operating the USOC training centers.

"Our main concerns now are in paying for the Festival and the training centers," Moran said. "All our other expenses appear to be covered."

Moran explained that the 138 staffers who will go to Moscow include coaches, managers, team physicians and "a very few U.S. Olympic House people — maybe a half dozen from the headquarters here in Colorado Springs."

He emphasized that all non-athletes will serve in some administrative capacity, such as coordinating press services, transportation, housing, tickets or food.

the Cincinnati Reds a 3-2 victory over the San Diego Padres and boosted their lead in the National League West to 2½ games over Houston, which lost to Atlanta 6-5.

"I don't know how he could play any better, unless he got a hit every time up," said Reds Manager John McNamara of his star catcher, who is hitting .282 with 22 home runs and 75 RBI and has been the team's hottest hitter down the stretch.

"He's had a very good year, especially since the All-Star break, when he's hit over .300. And he's done some job catching."

Bench, whose torrid second half of the season places him among the favorites for the NL's most valuable player award, isn't exactly enjoying the grind.

"I'm going to be 50 years old before this thing is over," he said. "It's wears you out. I'm tired mentally and physically. Not many people expected the Astros to remain close for so long. Bench was asked if Houston, which entertains the Reds for three games this weekend, can win the division with a rookie catcher — Bruce Bochy.

"Not unless his name is Johnny Bench," he said with a smile.

Elsewhere, Pittsburgh's lead over Montreal in the NL East was reduced to one game when the Pirates split a two-night double-header in Philadelphia, winning 9-6 and losing 6-5, while the Expos took a pair from the Mets, 3-1 and 4-1. St. Louis and Chicago split their twinbill, with the Cards victorious 6-3, then falling 3-2 in 10 innings. Los Angeles beat San Francisco 7-2.

Braves 6, Astros 5

Glenn Hubbard slammed a three-run homer and Bob Horner had a two-run shot to pace the Braves, who had another hero in Gary Matthews.

With the tying run on second and two out in the ninth, Art Howe belted a long drive to right field which Matthews caught over his shoulder while tumbling to the ground.

Pirates 9-5, Phillies 6-6

The Pirates rallied from a 6-1 deficit with eight runs in the last two innings of the first game, then were given a dose of the same medicine by the Phillies in the nightcap. Philadelphia was down 5-1 but took the second contest when rookie Keith Moreland singled in the tying run in the sixth and pinch-hitter Pete Mackanin's fielder's choice delivered the winning tally.

In the first game, Manny Sanguillen's pinch-hit triple broke a 6-6 tie in the ninth. Philadelphia had jumped in front mostly thanks to a grand slam homer by Mike Schmidt in the seventh. The Pirates got three in the eighth on four singles and an error.

It was the 40th time the Pirates have come from behind to win this season.

Expos 3-4, Mets 1-1

After tough losses to the Pirates Monday and Tuesday, Montreal might have seemed ready to collapse. But strong pitching by Rudy May, who threw a six-hitter in the nightcap, and Ross Grimsley, who won his first game since June 26, boosted the Expos within a game of the East lead.

The Expos won the second game despite a first-inning collision that saw second baseman Dave Cash get cut on the head and right fielder Ellis Valentine bruise his jaw. Both players had to leave the game.

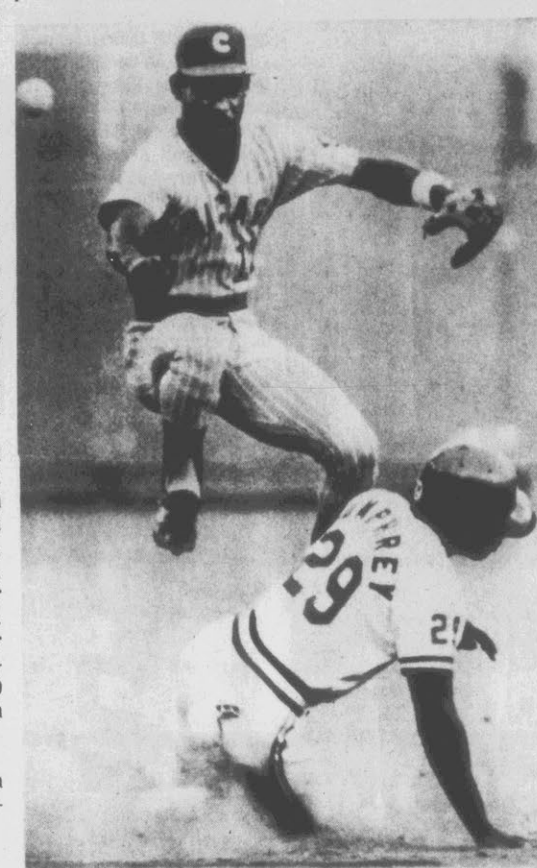

Substitute shortstop Speier and Cash each homered in the nightcap. In the opener, Tony Perez knocked in two runs and scored the other for Montreal.

Cardinals 6-2, Cubs 3-3

Dave Kingman had two home runs to increase his major-league leading total to 47 but it was a 10th-inning shot by Jerry Martin that clinched the Cubs' second-game victory. St. Louis won the opener as Ken Reitz and Keith Hernandez had two-run triples and Ted Simmons homered.

Dodgers 7, Giants 2

Rookie Rick Sutcliffe won his 16th game — he's lost nine — and Ron Cey had a three-run homer for the Dodgers.

Judge Rules Webster Award Was Too Large

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Lonnie Shelton and Vinnie Johnson are professional basketball players without a team.
A federal judge has voided a National Basketball Association compensation award given to the Seattle SuperSonics last year for the loss of center Marvin Webster.

Judge Robert L. Carter of the Southern District of New York ruled that NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien was excessive in his compensation to the Sonics in the New York Knicks' signing of Webster.

O'Brien said he was "appalled" at Judge Carter's ruling and announced that he has directed the league's counsel "to determine the NBA's right of appeal."

Larry Fleisher, head of the NBA Players Association, which took the matter to court, said, in his opinion, Shelton would be returned to the Knicks along with the $450,000 and "Vinnie Johnson, the player Seattle drafted with the draft choice it was awarded."

"I'm not going to waste my time thinking about what could happen," Shelton said. "I have no control over the situation. I'm going to continue to work out."

"I hope they (the Knicks and Sonics) can settle the difference with money and not have to bother with the personal life of the players."

Clippers To Defy Order

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Clippers Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert and Randy Smith, part of a record compensation awarded to the Portland Trail Blazers, plan to defy a ruling by National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien, a San Diego newspaper reported today.

According to The San Diego Union, the players were informed by the NBA Players' Association there is "more than a chance" that the union will test the decision in court.

The three were awarded to Portland Tuesday as compensation for the loss of All-Pro center Bill Walton, who signed with San Diego as a free agent last spring.

Washington and Kunnert were to join the Trail Blazers tonight in Minnesota for an exhibition game. Meantime, the Clippers had until 5 p.m. EST today to inform O'Brien's office whether they would keep Smith, a veteran guard, or pay Portland $350,000 as well as turn over their 1982 first round draft choice.

Attorneys for the three players told the newspaper they anticipate pursuit of a temporary restraining order against execution of the compensation award.

They're good. And in order to beat Farmville, you've got to beat their strongest players," Smith said.

Then, after a pause, Smith continued: "This week, we've worked our tails off. Our kids are really looking forward to this game. A lot of us have reassessed ourselves and we're ready to play."

KC's Object: To Win

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

"The object," said Kansas City's Hal McRae, "is to win this thing — not run away with it." The subject was the American League's West Division title.

McRae and the second-place Royals beat the division-leading California Angels 6-4 Wednesday night, winning for the second time in the three games of this series but remaining exactly where they were when the set began — two games behind. "I looked up at the scoreboard and suddenly it occurred to me: We're going to play 162 games and we're going to end up in a tie," said Kansas City third baseman George Brett, who had two hits and drove in a run. "I really think there's a chance it will happen."

It happened last year in the East, when the New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox decided divisional honors in a one-game playoff. And, since the Royals and Angels meet four times more this season, Brett's prophecy may be realized.

"The only thing that will matter," said McRae, "is who's best in October. If we get into the playoffs, this thing will be history."

Darrell Porter drove in three runs while Larry Gura and two relievers combined on a six-hitter to defeat the Angels.

Meanwhile, the Chicago White Sox shut out the Minnesota Twins 6-0, the Detroit Tigers upended the Baltimore Orioles 5-0, the Boston Red Sox blasted the Toronto Blue Jays 8-0, the New York Yankees trimmed the Cleveland Indians 2-0, the Texas Rangers beat the Oakland A's 9-4 and the Milwaukee Brewers bombed the Seattle Mariners, 12-1.

White Sox 6, Twins 0
Twins Manager Gene Mauch admits he's playing favorites in the battle for the West top spot: he wants Minnesota to win it. But the Twins were shut out a second consecutive time by the lowly White Sox.

The Twins managed just four hits off Ross Baumgarten and now haven't scored in 18 innings. Chet Lemon and Jim Morrison hit two-run singles for the winners.

Tigers 5, Orioles 0
Steve Kemp scored one run and drove in another, backing the four-hit pitching of Jack Morris and carrying the Tigers past the Orioles.

The loss, coupled with Milwaukee's rout of Seattle, left at three Baltimore's magic number for clinching the East Division crown.

Red Sox 8, Blue Jays 0
Butch Hobson cracked a pair of doubles and drove in three runs, backing Bob Stanley's three-hitter and powering Boston past Toronto.

Yankees 2, Indians 0
Tommy John picked up his 19th victory with 82-3 innings of three-hit pitching and Reggie Jackson hit his 26th homer of the season to boost NNew York over Cleveland.

Rangers 9, A's 4
Mickey Rivers' two-run single highlighted the six-run third inning that helped Texas beat Oakland. Jim Sundberg walked twice in the outburst, the second time with the bases loaded.

Brewers 12, Mariners 1
Home runs by Buck Martinez, Ben Oglivie and Sixto Lezcano paced the Brewers' 19-hit attack and kept Milwaukee mathematically alive in the East race.

In 1932, the Chicago Bears played six ties in National Football League action.

Who Pays, VEPCO Or Public?

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The State Corporation Commission has to decide whether Virginia Electric & Power Co. or its Virginia customers will pay for $37.1 million dollars in unrecovered fuel costs.

The SCC took under advisement Wednesday Veeco's request for a $37.1 million adjustment in its fuel factor to pay back the additional fuel costs incurred through August.

Veeco Executive Vice President William Berry said Veeco is not to blame for the unanticipated expenses because it was the victim of unforeseen circumstances.

But Assistant Attorney General Tony Gambrell raised the issue of responsibility, claiming Veeco's inefficiency contributed to the extra costs and customers shouldn't be asked to pay for the utility's mistakes.

If the entire award is granted, a residential bill for 1,000 kilowatt hours a month would increase about 10 percent — from $50.39 to $55.89.

Gambrell said Veeco is dragging its feet at converting some oil-fired generators to burn less costly coal because it knows it can ask the SCC to make the customers pay the extra costs.

But Berry blamed the federal bureaucracy and its slowness in acting on Veeco's conversion request for the delays.

He said it would be unwise to spend money to convert plants when the U.S. government had not indicated it would allow them to be used.

"Veeco has converted more fuel oil units to coal than any other utility in the country. And we have applied to the SCC to convert more," Berry said.

State Sen. Clive DuVall, D-Fairfax, who has intervened on behalf of consumers, asked why there has been so much delay in getting Veeco's out-of-service nuclear reactors back on line.

Berry again blamed much of the problem on the federal government.

When nuclear units are down, Veeco must replace the lost nuclear-produced power with more expensive coal and oil-generated electricity.

Veeco shut down Surry Unit 2 in February for steam generator repairs and the following month the Nuclear Regulatory Commission ordered Surry No.

1 off line for stress tests. Both are still out of service.

That leaves only North Anna Unit 1 working, and it is scheduled for refueling.

Berry said the prospects of getting Surry 1 back in service by Oct. 1, as first expected, "have dimmed because of Nuclear Regulatory Commission" delays.

Surry 2 won't be back in operation until early next year, he said.

The start-up of North Anna Unit 2 has been delayed because of federal investigations of licensing requirements in the wake of the Three Mile Island accident.

When Veeco estimated 1979 fuel costs in December, it counted on Surry 2 being out of service only from February through August and didn't make allowances for the shut down of Surry 1 or OPEC oil price increases.

Veeco has said it also wants to collect $84 million in anticipated extra fuel costs for the last four months of this year but decided to try to recover that amount in 1980.

U.S. Role As Peace Monitor

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — American civilian technicians will remain in the Sinai Desert up to three years and U.S. reconnaissance flights will be stepped up to monitor the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

The formula, announced Wednesday by Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, hinges on congressional approval.

But serious opposition is considered unlikely given the U.S. stake in supporting the peace treaty signed March 26 on the White House lawn.

The initial idea, to use a U.N. Emergency Force, was aborted under threat of a Soviet veto.

Vance, flanked by Egyptian and Israeli officials, made clear his displeasure with the Russians. "If the U.N. force had been able to stay there, the problem never would have arisen," he said.

The solution, reached in two days of intensive negotiations, was to give Egypt and Israel the primary responsibility for monitoring the treaty.

Mixed patrols, supplemented by up to 200 American civilians and stepped-up U.S. reconnaissance flights, will supervise Israel's withdrawal over a three-year period.

This is the same number of civilians assigned to monitoring stations in the Sinai under a 1975 agreement that provided for a partial Israeli pullback.

Vance said he saw the new formula "merely as an extension of the role which the Sinai field mission has been playing in the past."

But other U.S. officials said privately the Americans will have a broader role than in the past, moving beyond the monitoring stations to verify or dismiss claims of treaty violations.

Initially, the American surveillance operation was supposed to close down, with the U.N. Emergency Force taking on the job.

"We are going to work together," Dayan said.

Egyptian Defense Minister Kemal Hasan Ali smiled his approval.

Dayan said the formula was "a practical one, the best that could be reached under the circumstances."

Vance stressed that the arrangement is an interim one — to last up to three years, and that the United States will pay only for its share of the operation.

After the Soviets threatened a veto, the Carter administration tried to persuade Israel to accept, as a substitute, unarmed U.N. truce observers.

Israel objected, partly because such observers would be under the control of Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Tensions rose as U.S. officials disputed Israel's understanding that President Carter was committed to raising a multinational force for the Sinai.

As a stopgap, Egypt and Israel decided on joint patrols — an approach that now will be extended with some modifications enhancing the U.S. surveillance role.

Dollar Dips As Gold Up

LONDON (AP) — The dollar declined sharply on the world's money markets today as the price of gold took off again to reach record highs in European bullion centers.

In Tokyo, the U.S. currency plunged more than a yen in heavy trading, closing at 222.35 yen, down from 223.675 Wednesday.

"The dollar is in trouble again, and it seems the rising interest rates have not been sufficient to prop it up," a Tokyo trader said.

"When the Federal Reserve Board let the dollar slip against European currencies Wednesday people became worried about having too many greenbacks on hand."

The dollar's downturn continued when European foreign exchanges opened, and dealers said they expected a hectic day of trading.

In Frankfurt, the dollar fell below 1.80 West German marks for the first time in 11 months. The dollar's mid-morning price of 1.7748 marks on the Frankfurt exchange was the lowest since Oct. 26 when the U.S. currency dipped to 1.7645 marks.

Dealers said further uncertainty about the U.S. economy, inflation and the political climate in the United States probably all contributed to the slide.

Gold, meanwhile, recovered sharply from Wednesday's losses and was trading again at record highs in London and Zurich. The metal was quoted in morning trading at $378.50 a Troy ounce in Zurich and at $377.75 in London.

Charged With Violations Of Fair Labor Act

NEW BERN — R. M. "Reggie" Fountain Jr., of Greenville, individually and doing business as Carriage House, Kingston, and Eastbrook and Village Green Apartments, Greenville, has been named defendant in a Fair Labor Standards Act suit filed in U.S. District Court here by the U.S. Labor Department.

The complaint against Fountain alleges he is in violation of the minimum-wage, overtime-pay and recordkeeping provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The suit seeks a judgment permanently enjoining the alleged violations, and payment of back wages plus an equal amount as damages, found by the court to be due employees.

The court action resulted from investigations made by the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division office in Raleigh.

Allosaurus For State Fossil

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The 40-foot-long, meat-eating allosaurus has edged the woolly mammoth in a poll to choose Utah's state fossil.

In recent voting sponsored by the Utah Historical Society at the Utah State Fair, the allosaurus got 111 votes to 108 for the mammoth. Now the nomination goes to the Utah Legislature for confirmation hearings.

The allosaurus overcame the disadvantage of not having lived in the area for about 150 million years. Other candidates in the race included a stegosaurus, a giant bear, a trilobite and a plant called cycadeoidea.

SBC Reports Registration 'Errors'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention says about 10 percent of the 16,000 delegates attending a convention in June in Houston were wrongfully or improperly registered.

Suspected Illegal Votes Were Cast

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — J. Marse Grant said when he attended the Southern Baptist Convention in Houston in June he thought some illegal votes might have been cast for the group's president. After an investigator reported Wednesday that 284 illegal votes had been cast for Tennessee pastor Dr. Adrian Rogers as president of the convention, Grant said, "That's just not the way we do things in the Baptist Church." Grant is editor of the Biblical Recorder, the state's Southern Baptist newspaper.

"We see it in political life in some of our states, and to have it come into a Christian body itself certainly is disillusioning," he said, continuing that the incident casts a shadow over Rogers' presidency. "I did not believe in June that it was this extensive," he said. "These, presumably, were Christian people to whom honor and integrity are important. There were more irregularities (reported) than any of us dreamed of when we left Houston in June."

The southern convention represents 13 million Baptists. Delegates, called messengers, voted for the president.

Grant said he suspected something was wrong because of the high number of votes Rogers received. Rogers won by 3,368 votes.

But the church said Wednesday its investigation revealed no evidence that the irregularities could be tied to churches or persons of a particular religious or particular persuasion. Questions had been raised about the election of the convention's president at the gathering. Some liberal delegates - also called messengers - alleged the election of the conservative Rev. Adrian P. Rogers of Memphis as convention president was the product of secular, professional campaign techniques. Such techniques are not forbidden but are disapproved.

Rogers, pastor of Bellevue Baptist Church, collected 6,129 of 11,975 votes and won election in the six-way race on the first ballot. The convention president serves as the chief executive of the denomination.

The church's investigation showed that 284 delegates registered in flagrant violation of bylaws and 1,360 more registered improperly.

Registration secretary Lee Porter conducted the inquiry at the direction of the convention's executive committee. In a news release summing up his findings, the convention, which is based in Nashville, said it "did not reveal massive wrongdoing." It said those improperly registered "were across-the-board Southern Baptist types," and not of any particular persuasion.

Conservative Southern Baptists are committed to the idea that the Bible is never in error. Liberals adopt a more interpretive stance.

There is some evidence, Porter said, that 200 churches in the Houston area conducted a get out the vote campaign and sent as many as 10 messengers on election day.

Messengers are supposed to be elected by their churches. But 284 persons registered though the church was already represented by its allowed number, or registered twice, were children or otherwise registered illegally.

The bulk of the improper registrations are attributed to misunderstandings about messenger qualifications, Porter found. Thirty-nine churches were represented by unelected messengers.

Rev. Rogers, a proponent of inerrancy, found Porter's work even handed, fair and said it affirmed his view that questions about his election were insubstantial.

Sickle Cell Week For City

Mayor Percy Cox announced that the period through Sept. 22 has been proclaimed as Sickle Cell Awareness Week in Greenville.

Cox, noting that September has been designated as National Sickle Cell Awareness Month, observed that "sickle cell disease is a serious, inherited condition that affects the red blood cells of an individual and has no cure."

The mayor pointed out that the disease affects approximately one in 500 black Americans and some Caucasians and he added, "the community of Greenville joins the nation in recognizing this problem and the need for awareness of the disease."

Those who DON'T read have no advantage over those who CAN'T.

This is just one of the reasons THE DAILY REFLECTOR is providing a comprehensive Newspaper in Education program to 15 area schools this school year. We feel that students will want to read if they are reading the most up-to-date information possible: the daily newspaper.

The current events program is designed by Visual Education Consultant of Madison, Wis., and is currently used by over 12,000 schools in the U.S. and Canada. THE DAILY REFLECTOR has contracted with VEC to provide weekly current affairs filmstrips free-of-charge to the schools.

Each week, VEC's staff of skilled editors and educators capsulize the most important and interesting news. The result is a filmstrip presenting news photos and narrative guides that discuss leading people and events on different vocabulary and concept levels. The materials arrive each week with a complete lesson, including an illustrated 4-page teacher's guide.

In sponsoring this service, THE DAILY REFLECTOR hopes to build an informed reading habit among the young people of this area, teach students varied uses and appeals of the newspaper, show teachers the value of the newspaper as a teaching tool, and help develop young people to become intelligent readers and citizens.

Congressional Pay Raise Is 'On', 'Off', 'Maybe'

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

Firm Agrees To Clean-Up

RAMSEUR, N.C. (AP) — The head of the Randolph County Health Department says a Charlotte company has agreed to clean up chemicals it is said to have dumped on a farm.

The gelatin-like mass, which includes water-soluble formaldehyde, was found dumped 18 inches deep over a 15-by-25-foot plot. Health officials said it posed no immediate threat to humans or animals since it is located in an isolated area near Ramseur.

County health director George Elliot said the company, Chematron Inc., has agreed to clean up the dump.

Officials also said action was being taken to keep the chemicals from spreading into the Deep River.

"This is the most blatant kind of illegal dumping, and the state has demanded that the company responsible pick up the chemicals immediately and contain it," said Jim Martin, supervising sanitarian of the health department.

Martin said the state division of solid waste and vector control is considering bringing charges, "but, right now our primary concern is to get this mess cleaned up before it can run off and get into the Deep River water supply."

Elliott said the chemicals posed no threat to water supplies in Randolph County, but if the chemicals reach the Deep River they would flow into the Cape Fear River basin, the source of water for a number of towns and cities in Eastern North Carolina.

The chemicals were apparently dumped Friday or Saturday, Martin said, and health officials learned of the incident through an anonymous telephone call Monday.

Martin said laboratory test results received Wednesday showed the dump contained water-soluble formaldehyde, and "some other chemicals that the lab is still trying to identify."

Scholarship For Rose High Grad

RALEIGH — Miss Janette Perry of Greenville has been awarded the George C. Moore Scholarship for study in North Carolina State University's School of Textiles.

Perry, daughter of Mrs. Queenie B. Perry, 1801-A West Third St., Greenville, is a 1979 graduate of J. H. Rose High School.

A NCSU student pursuing a major in textile chemistry, Miss Perry received the award from the Moore Company, a Rhode Island-based company with a plant in Edenton.

While at J. H. Rose, Miss Perry served as a marshal and member of the National Honor Society.

Ministers To Confer Monday

There will be a call meeting of the Black Pastors' and Ministers' Conference Monday at 7:45 p.m.

Ministers of Greenville and Pitt County are urged to attend to discuss business of importance. The meeting is to be held at Philippi Christian Church, 1610 Farmville Boulevard.

$57,500 congressmen now get — remained technically alive on the House floor and could be brought up again today if supporters want.

There was no indication supporters would attempt to reverse the vote. But the possibility existed until tonight's House adjournment.

To get the bill brought up again, supporters must find one opponent willing to ask that the vote be reconsidered, a request likely to bring that congressman under fire from his constituents.

And then the supporters must either:

—Find enough new supporters

ers willing to go on record in favor of a pay raise to overturn the defeat.

—Or, find opponents who secretly want the pay raise but fear political repercussions if they vote for it. Then, they must persuade those congressmen that Wednesday's vote put them on record as opposing the pay raise and persuade them to stay away from the floor if the bill is brought up again.

The reason the bill remained alive is that no one asked that a motion to reconsider the vote be prohibited, normally a routine request. As a result, a motion to reconsider was allowed until the close of business today.

The House rejected the salary increase on a roll call vote on the legislation to which the pay raise was attached.

Earlier, the House had approved, on an unrecorded 156-64 vote, an amendment that would give a 7 percent raise to congressmen and senators and to all federal judges and bureaucrats making at least $47,500 a year.

It was the second time this year the House approved a raise only to kill it at the last minute. In June, it accepted an amendment to increase its pay by 5.5 percent but then killed the bill to which the raise was attached.

Wednesday's rejection killed not only the raise, but also a resolution needed to provide emergency money for a variety of federal departments after Oct. 1. The House has not approved the regular legislation needed to finance those departments after that date, the start of the 1980 fiscal year.

The pay raise amendment would have appropriated money to fund an already scheduled salary increase.

A 1975 law authorizes a cost-of-living hike of up to 12.9 percent this year for legislators and top bureaucrats. But no raise can go into effect unless Congress appropriates the money to pay for it. Also the size of any pay increase depends on the amount Congress provides.

NOSERVICE

Services will not be held at Simpson Chapel F.W.B. Church Sunday due to conference which will be held at Oak Grove F.W.B. Church, Durham. The Rev. Z. D. Harris is moderator and the vice moderator is the Rev. Matthew Best.

Remembers Wetzel As Escape Mastermind

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The retired warden of Central Prison says he remembers Frank Wetzel as the mastermind of a well-planned breakout at the maximum-security unit in 1960. And transferring Wetzel, the convicted murderer of two Highway Patrolmen, to a unit with less security may be dangerous, said K.B. Bailey, the retired warden.

He said the October 1960 escape attempt would probably have succeeded had it not been for a tip from an inmate who had been included in the planning.

Wetzel has filed a federal suit asking that prison officials be forced to transfer him to a lesser-security unit. He said his due-process right is being violated because he can't be paroled from Central. He is serving a life sentence.

The state attorney general's office has cited the escape attempt as part of its objections to Wetzel's request.

Assistant Attorney General Jim Smith said that the state will, if necessary, appeal its case against Wetzel's transfer to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

A few days ago, federal Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. delayed for 30 days his order, signed in late July, that would have resulted in Wetzel's transfer from Central.

Smith said he thinks it likely that Wetzel will again try to escape if he is moved to a medium-security unit and not given a definite parole date.

Bailey, who retired about two years ago as a colonel in the prison system, first met Wetzel in the late 1950s, after Wetzel was convicted in the Nov. 15, 1957 slayings of troopers J.T. Brown and W.L. Reece. The trial was held in 1958.

The former warden remembers Wetzel as "smarter than the average inmate — I know he is — he was always planning, planning; he didn't think about next week or the next couple of weeks, he was planning two, three, five years ahead. He was plotting all the time."

Bailey left the warden's post in 1965 and was assigned to other duties until retiring. He says he has not seen Wetzel in 10 years "and I don't know what he is like now, but in the time I knew him, it would have been the wrong thing to do to put him in medium security. Some people change. I don't know if he has or not."

Amtrak Criteria Is Nearing Final Stage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The criteria for determining which Amtrak passenger trains will stay in operation and which will be dropped are nearing final congressional approval.

House and Senate conferees reached agreement Wednesday on a bill that allocates $912.7 million for Amtrak in 1980 and sets down ridership and financial standards for continued operation of passenger trains.

The House and Senate are expected to approve the compromise.

Amtrak announced last month that six trains will be eliminated Oct. 1 under the standards, which were awaiting congressional approval at the time.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the commerce transportation subcommittee, said Amtrak's latest data indicates the six trains targeted for elimination last month still fall short of the standards and will be terminated.

The six are the National Limited from New York and Washington to Kansas City, Mo.; the North Coast Hiawatha from Chicago to Seattle; the Lone Star from Chicago to Houston; the Hilltopper from Washington to Catlettsburg, Ky.; the San Joaquin from Oakland to Bakersfield, Calif.; and the Floridian from Chicago to Miami and St. Petersburg, Fla.

To stay in operation, a train must average 150 passengers per mile and lose no more than seven cents a mile.

The final bill directs Amtrak to set up a program of reduced fares for the elderly and the handicapped, but leaves it up to Amtrak to decide how large the discount should be.

No Challenge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Sen. John T. Henley of Fayetteville says he won't challenge Secretary of State Thad Eure in the Democratic primary.

Henley never officially entered the race, but had talked about it frequently.

He said he has written to Eure to tell him of his decision.

Even if Eure, 79, steps down at the last minute, Henley said he doubts he would be a candidate.

Eure has held the post since 1936. At a Democratic gathering at Emerald Isle last weekend, Eure made a point of telling people that he was fit and running for another term.

He is expected to be opposed in the primary by Rep. George Breece, also of Fayetteville.

2. Has the same vapor pressure.
3. Doesn't wear out engine components (cylinders) or parts (spark plugs) any faster than unleaded.
4. Gives better over-all engine performance in all types of weather.
5. Gets 5% better mileage per gallon than unleaded.
6. Reduces carbon monoxide emissions by 30%.
7. Reduces over-all emissions slightly.

9. Gasohol can burn in any internal combustion engine, regardless of age, without carburetor modification.
10. Gasohol helps eliminate "dieseling" in many cars.
11. Consumers have purchased millions of gallons of Gasohol in Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Virginia, and other states. Consumer acceptance concludes that a successful market for Gasohol exists.
12. The alcohol in Gasohol is produced from renewable agricultural resources. The use of agricultural alcohol provides a new energy market for the farmer's energy products beyond the customary food and feed energy produce.

Pay Too Low For TV Role

RANDLEMAN, N.C. (AP) — Stock-car champion Richard Petty says he has nothing against "the good old boys," but an offer to star on CBS-TV's "The Duke of Hazzard" didn't provide enough good old money.

"It's not that I've got something against good old boys or anything like that," Petty said. "I guess I'm still sort of one myself."

"Their people (series representatives) contacted us, and they wanted me to be in an episode, in fact build an episode around me, but we couldn't get together on the money..."

Petty thinks the series gives a slanted view of the South. He regards it as merely a "fun show."

"You couldn't do a show like that about people from the North, because they don't seem to have as much fun as people down South."

Bridge is a game of communications. It is as important to disrupt enemy communication as it is to maintain transportation between declarer and dummy. Study this hand.

South had a difficult bid to make after East opened the bidding. A jump to two hearts these days is preemptive. A double followed by a bid in hearts would express the value of the hand, but might lead to problems later in the auction. And a simple overall of one heart might get passed out. In view of South's playing strength, the jump to four hearts was a sensible compromise. West did not want to bid four spades on such a moth-eaten suit, so he doubled on the strength of his two sure trump tricks and partner's opening bid.

Committee To Select A Play

GRIFTON — Persons who wish to be part of a Reading Committee to select a play for the second production of the Grifton Community Players are urged to contact Mrs. Fay Edwards, 524-5538, or Mrs. Justine Thorne, 524-5214 as soon as possible. The play will be produced under the Town of Grifton Arts Program.

down one. The defense was very capable, but South could have spiked his opponents' guns with a neat, though simple, piece of strategy. He should have realized that if West could be prevented from obtaining a ruff, the contract was almost sure to succeed. If West held the ace of trumps, as was likely, he can obtain a ruff only if he can reach his partner's hand. The only means of communication is in diamonds. Therefore, declarer's first task should have been to sever the link between the defenders' hands. That could have been accomplished by leading a diamond after winning the first club. Declarer can then go about drawing trumps. Since East cannot obtain the lead to give his partner a ruff, the contract will be unbeatable. What if West's lead had been a singleton? In that case, no power on earth could make the hand. There must be a better way to spend your time than worrying about something you cannot prevent.

Zanuck And Brown-Gamble And Win

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Richard Zanuck and David Brown, Hollywood's most successful independent filmmakers, are a pair of riverboat gamblers who play for stakes in the hundreds of millions without putting up a dime of their own.

It was Zanuck-Brown who produced "The Sting" and "Jaws," both of which rank among the top 10 money-makers of all time.

They've produced nine other films at Universal Pictures in the past eight years, including "MacArthur" and "Sugarland Express" for which the studio provided the cash. Zanuck-Brown provided the scripts, stars and director.

The partners held a meeting at the Bel Air Hotel the other day to accommodate Brown whose home is in New York. The hotel is closer to Los Angeles International Airport than their plush offices at Universal.

Zanuck, the son of film pioneer Darryl Zanuck, is short, muscular and aggressive. Brown is tall, elegant and urbane. Zanuck wore blue jeans. Brown was dressed in a suit and necktie.

The dissimilar pair were celebrating the final day of production of "The Island," based on Peter Benchley's novel and screenplay. "Jaws" was also a Benchley best-seller on which they gambled $20 million of Universal's money.

"The Island," which cost a mere $12 million, is as risky a project as "Jaws" which earned $400 million at the boxoffice.

Zanuck-Brown were on tenterhooks for more than a year, not knowing if the mechanical shark in "Jaws" would be laughed off the screen or accepted as terrifying reality. Happily the shark was a shocker.

They are faced with the same credibility gap in "The Island," asking movie-goers to believe an enclave of 18th century pirates still exists on a Caribbean Island stronghold in the modern world.

Said Brown, "We've taken an enormous creative gamble, asking audiences to go along with a truly bizarre premise."

"We know we have a picture people will want to see," Zanuck said, "but we won't know until the first public screening if audiences will accept our pirates. That's how it was with 'Jaws.'"

"Gambling is what movies are all about," Brown added. "You can't play it safe. Unless a film presents something new you can't impress audiences. The safest thing you can do is take a chance. The least safe thing is chasing a trend."

Zanuck-Brown reduced the odds against "The Island" by having Benchley write the screenplay. They hired Michael Ritchie, who often utilizes documentary techniques, as director.

All four men devoted endless weeks to collaboration sessions based on exhaustive research to bring credibility to their Caribbean pirates.

Brown said they found islands far from shipping lanes and air routes where descendants of the bully boys of the Spanish Main might indeed have survived. They unearthed authentic wardrobe, language and customs of 18th century buccaneers.

English and Australian character actors were cast in the pirate roles for scenes played on locations in Antigua and the Bahamas.

"The success or failure of 'The Island' depends entirely on credibility of the pirates," Zanuck admitted. "We've done everything possible to make them believable. We're keeping photographs of our pirates under wraps until the movie is released."

Universal Pictures has faith in Zanuck-Brown's ability to deliver believable buccaneers despite the fact Z-B will depart the studio next year.

The partners will move their operations to 20th Century-Fox in 1980, allowing that studio to bankroll future movies. The move is being made to improve Zanuck-Brown profit participation.

Why, they were asked, don't they raise their own financing and thereby insure total independence from studio policy and administration?

"When we formed our company, an investment banker wanted to loan us capital to make pictures," Brown explained, laughing. "The banker asked four questions which explains why we prefer to work through a studio."

"How do I know you can make successful pictures?"

"Answer: 'You don't.'"

"Would I be able to read the scripts?"

"Answer: 'No.'"

"How much can I lose?"

"Answer: 'Everything.'"

"Could my son be associated with your company?"

"Answer: 'No.'"

"He didn't understand the complete insanity of film-making. It's better to get professional money for professional movies. Venture capital from outside the industry is nervous money."

Zanuck said, "The stakes are very high. Profits can be astronomical. That's why there's fresh money available for producers with a track record like ours. But there are no guarantees."

"Not, at least, until audiences let us know if we've got a bonanza."
