Extensive Damages Caused By Haw River Floodwaters

Americans Kidnapped

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Government troops beat back leftist guerrilla attacks on two guard posts early Saturday, killing six of the attackers hours after unidentified gunmen kidnaped two American businessmen and killed their driver.

Deputies evacuated about 500 persons Saturday afternoon after officials of Copland Fabric Co. feared propane tanks would break away and explode because of the surging flood waters that crept up on the tanks. The company closed its No. 2 and No. 3 plants Saturday afternoon. The plants are on the banks of the river.

Officials were also watching a dam near the town on City Lake because of erosion and the threat of collapse.

In Yanceyville, erosion around a small dam on Old N.C. 62 caused some concern. In Greensboro, Cone Mills shut down two of its plants on the banks of the flooding North Buffalo Creek. Meanwhile, scattered showers were expected to continue through Monday over most parts of the state, hindering clean-up efforts in areas where rain Friday and Saturday flooded rivers, washed out roads and bridges and forced some other evacuations.

Flash flood watches were still in effect for northern and central parts of the state Saturday.

The state Highway Patrol said there had been no reports of deaths directly related to the rainy weather. More than 100 residents of a Mount Airy nursing home remained in a National Guard armory Saturday where they were evacuated due to flooding.

The entire Surry County town Saturday remained closed to incoming traffic and residents were asked to stay at home. Several propane gas tanks were washed away by high waters. Officials said some of the gas leaked into streams, causing some residents to leave due to the smell.

Alleghany County also was hit hard. Officials said the storm, which dropped more than 5 inches on the area, was the county's worst in five years. There were at least 17 bridges reported out and roads received extensive damage. Many are still closed or only partially open.

An oil tank truck was partially submerged Friday night on a rural road in a low-lying area of the county.

A number of cars were stranded on roads in Rockingham County where minor flooding created problems. Some residents in Reidsville and Madison had to be evacuated due to high waters. The Mayo River was continuing to rise late Saturday.

Mud slides blocked highways in Alleghany, Wilkes and Ashe counties.

Bokassa, Aides Wait At French Military Airbase

By ROBERT KAYLOR
 PARIS (UPI) — French troops and police ringed the uninvited private jetliner of deposed Central African Emperor Jean-Bedel Bokassa I Saturday and authorities tried to persuade him to leave France.

In the Central African Republic capital of Bangui, President David Dacko, who toppled Bokassa in a coup Friday, conceded that France and several African nations carefully planned the coup that overthrew the "French-speaking Idi Amin."

At the Evreux military airbase west of Paris, Bokassa and 26 aides and relatives sat quarantined inside his private jetliner, which arrived unannounced and uninvited Friday night in a bid by the deposed monarch for political asylum. Military officials in the airfield's control tower negotiated by radio with Bokassa in an effort to get him to leave France and return to Libya, where he was when the coup was launched ending his bloody rule in the impoverished African nation.

Government spokesmen described Bokassa's attempt to come to France for asylum as "inopportune." Sources said Bokassa, holder of a French passport and dual nationality, was being denied permission to enter the country. They said he first agreed to depart but then stalled in apparent hopes authorities might relent.

involving members of Bokassa's "imperial bodyguard," who resisted the overthrow of the "president-for-life" and emperor.

Dacko, 49, a cousin from whom Bokassa seized power in 1966, said the army and police had "spontaneously" supported him and that the imperial guard had fled. But he later acknowledged the coup had been carefully planned for weeks with help from France and other African states.

Fair Opens Tomorrow

The Pitt County American Legion Agricultural Fair will officially open Monday, Sept. 25, 6 p.m., with more rides and attractions than last year, according to Sam Winchester, county fair recording secretary.

chester. "We have added a very fine livestock arena, as well as several items to the Village of Yesteryear, the finest display of its kind in the southeastern United States."

The fair will also feature four new concession stands, sponsored respectively by the American Legion Post, the Breakfast Lions Club, the Host Lions Club and the Pitt County Boys Club.

Monday night, ladies will be admitted free. Tuesday night, school age children will be let in free until 7 p.m. A hog market show will be held at 7 p.m., sponsored by the Pitt County Livestock Association.

Wednesday, senior citizens will be admitted free from 9:30 to 11 a.m. with school age children admitted free until 7 p.m. Thursday will be preschoolers day, with children admitted free from 9:30 to 11 a.m., with school age children given free admission until 7 p.m. Friday, handicapped persons in Pitt County may attend the fair free of charge from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

As always, judging of items from field crops to floral displays will be held. All judging will take place Tuesday.

Parking at the fairgrounds is free, with general admission $2 for adults and $1 for children. The fair is sponsored by the American Legion Posts in Greenville, Farmville and Ayden.

Search Carried Out For Missing Uranium

By JOEY LEDFORD
 ERWIN, Tenn. (UPI) — Inspectors using hand-held radiation detectors probed every nook and cranny of a shuttered nuclear plant Saturday, searching for a missing batch of enriched uranium that could be fashioned into an atom bomb.

"I'm talking about everything inside this fence," said Morris Howard, director of the Safeguards Division of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. "That includes restrooms, personnel lockers — everything."

A van with similar detection equipment roamed the highways and side roads in the lush little east Tennessee mountain valley outside the plant.

At least 20 pounds of the uranium was discovered missing during a routine inventory at the Nuclear Fuel Services Inc. plant, where a total of 245 pounds of the substance — or enough to make six atom bombs — has disappeared since 1968.

The plant, which employs about 450 workers, processes fuel for the nation's nuclear submarines.

Search planes equipped with radiation detection gear made 40 sweeps over the 21-acre plant site Friday without turning up any trace of the missing substance.

They were in the air again Saturday, and officials said their sophisticated equipment should detect any uranium that might be stashed inside the plant, but the ground search was conducted just to be doubly sure nothing was missed.

Officials said they have found no reason to believe either the most recent batch or the previous 245 pounds of bomb-grade uranium had been stolen, but they have not ruled out that possibility.

The exact amount of the most recent loss has not been revealed but the plant's operating license specifies it will be shut down if more than 19.8 pounds of the substance is lost from inventory.

NRC spokesman Robert Burnett has said the uranium may be lost in processing, but said he could not explain the process for security reasons. Nor has it been explained where the radioactive substance would go if it were lost. Search planes have found no trace of it in the surrounding woodlands, air or streams.

While the chief fear is the uranium could fall into the hands of terrorists, NRC officials said the chances of the 265-plus pounds of uranium being cached in one place at one time is slim.

"Just because over a cumulative period of time there's a certain amount of material out, that doesn't mean that the material has been accumulated in one location Howard said.

In Memory Of A Friend

FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN — Glenn Hayden, 21, of Absecon, New Jersey, brought his bike to touch the Atlantic Ocean Thursday in what was the end of a 5,000 mile, 90 day ride across the country from Portland, Oregon to Atlantic City. Hayden's trek was in memory of a former classmate and to raise money for the Luekemia Fund. (AP Laserphoto).

34,500 Figure For Greenville

The Office of State Budget and Management has released the 1978 permanent resident population for Greenville, which is estimated at 34,500.

The estimate represents the population within the corporate limits as of July 1, 1978 and will serve as the basis for distributing state-shared revenues until October of 1980.

Usually, it was pointed out, a variety of sources are used in updating the 1970 census count to produce new population estimates. However, Greenville was among a small number of cities that conducted a special population survey to more accurately reflect the true population. In these cases, the survey results were also used to arrive at the 1978 estimate.

The survey results for Greenville showed an estimated population of 34,529 which is slightly under the 1978 estimate due to additional institutional population present in 1978.

Over the past two years, the estimated population for the city has been revised downward, it was mentioned. The current estimate reverses this trend and shows an increase of 989 persons over last year's estimate and an increase of 5,487 over the 1970 census count of 29,063. This represents a growth rate of approximately 18.9 percent.

 MARION, N.C. (AP) — The same jury that Friday convicted James W. Hutchins in the deaths of three law enforcement officers now must decide whether he will be sentenced to the gas chamber or to life in prison.
- The 50-year-old Hutchins sat quietly, his eyes brimming with tears, as the eight men and four women on the jury stood one by one Friday afternoon and declared him guilty of two counts of first degree murder and one count of second degree murder in the shootings of the three officers last May 31.

- Lee ordered the contract freeze and asked for the audit after his department discovered numerous problems in its contract with Hobby's Precision Graphics Inc.
- Not Doing A Good Job
 RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Auditor Henry L. Bridges says someone at Fayetteville State University is "just not doing the job they're supposed to. They're just inefficient."
- An auditor's report on the university released Wednesday found financial mismanagement, inaccurate bookkeeping and improper use of state funds during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1978.
- Bridges sent a 15-page letter to Chancellor Charles "A" Lyons dated June 8, 1979, listing 12 areas in which auditors found improper, incorrect or inadequate procedures.
- Lyons himself, the letter said, was in a "possible conflict of interest" by serving as chairman of the board of directors of a Fayetteville bank where some FSU funds were stored. He has since resigned from the bank board.

Dangerous Fragrances

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — That "new car smell" may be yet another source of cancer, according to a new study by three chemists at the New England Institute for Life Sciences.

Released at a scientific conference here this week, the study said research on new cars revealed significant amounts of nitrosamines, chemicals found to be carcinogenic in tests on animals.

According to a story in today's editions of the Philadelphia Inquirer, the authors of the report, Drs. D.P. Roubenher, J. Reisch and D.H. Fine say whiffing new car interiors probably packs more carcinogenic punch than bacon and the same as beer, two items in which nitrosamines also have been found.

Nursing Exam Results Called 'Distressing'

ORPHANS OF WAR — Cambodian orphans sit on metal and straw bed at a hospital in the southwest Cambodian town of Kampong Speu recently. While governments and aid agencies debate the politics and fine print of the problem, relief officials and diplomats say hundreds, if not thousands, may already be dying in Cambodia every day of hunger and starvation. Photo was taken last week by a visiting group from the American Friends Service Committee. (AP Laserphoto)

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The results of the 1979 state nursing license examination at three schools in the University of North Carolina system were "very distressing," university officials said Friday.

The results from most of the others schools were disappointing, according to Raymond Dawson, UNC's vice president for academic affairs.

The exams were given in February and July by the N.C. Board of Nursing. The results were released this week.

The number of nursing school graduates who passed the exam on the first try sharply declined this year at UNC-Chapel Hill, A&T State University and North Carolina Central University at Durham. Several other schools had smaller declines.

Only UNC-Greensboro, Winston-Salem State University and East Carolina University among the eight state-supported baccalaureate-degree nursing schools had a higher percentage of graduates passing the exam this year than last. Of those, Winston-Salem State showed the most dramatic increase.

It was the second straight year UNC-Chapel Hill had a decrease in the number of its graduates passing the exam on the first try. This year 82 percent passed, down from 90 percent in 1978.

At predominantly black A&T and N.C. Central, 74 percent of the nursing school graduates failed. The failure rate at A&T was up 21 percent and at N.C. Central it was up 12 percent.

The state's three predominantly black nursing schools have been under pressure from the UNC Board of Governors to increase the number of graduates who pass the exam on the first try.

The board has said that by 1981, at least two-thirds of each graduating class must pass and by 1983, the requirement increases to three-fourths of each class. Programs that do not meet these standards could be shut down.

The drop at A&T and N.C. Central made it "obvious there are some very serious problems that will have to be dealt with," Dawson said.

A&T Chancellor Lewis C. Dowdy said a number of steps have been taken to strengthen the nursing program. But these would not be expected "to be visible until the first nursing class admitted under the new measures," is tested in 1981, he said.

Dowdy said those efforts included increasing admission standards, lowering of student-faculty ratio, revising the curriculum, adding a review seminar, and upgrading the school's clinical facilities.

A&T School of Nursing Dean Naomi Wynn was not immediately available for comment.

Winston-Salem State University, the system's third predominantly black nursing school, saw its passing rate increase from 31 percent in 1978 to 63 percent this year.

UNC-Greensboro jumped 8 percent, from 79 percent to 87 percent. At East Carolina, 79 percent of the graduates passed, up from 76 percent last year.

Hawaii Quake

HONOLULU (AP) — A late night earthquake measuring 5.6 on the Richter scale jolted the big island of Hawaii, but there were no immediate reports of serious damage or injury.

The Friday quake shook the island for 30 seconds at 10:00 p.m., Hawaiian Standard Time, said Robert Decker, scientist in charge of the Volcano Observatory on Hawaii, the largest of the islands.

Decker said the tremor was centered five miles west of Kalapana at a depth of six miles. The last time a quake of that magnitude was felt on the big island, he said, was in November 1975.

The quake apparently did not generate a tidal wave, scientists said.

Police in Hilo, the island's major city, 30 miles west of Kalapana, said they received calls from residents who said their walls shook, chandeliers rattled and glasses shattered.

Police expected more damage reports when businesses opened today.

Police in Kona, the island's popular resort village, said the tremor was felt there but no damage reported. Police on the neighboring island of Maui said it failed to register on their seismographs. No calls concerning the quake were reported at the Honolulu police station.

"We don't usually get damage as heavily as they do on the mainland," Decker said. "The shocks don't seem to pass through the ground as quickly here."

Aftershocks Rock Italy

ROME (UPI) — Aftershocks rocked beleaguered central Italy for the third straight day Saturday as troops worked through wind and rain to erect tent cities for more than 10,000 homeless survivors from Thursday's earthquake.

Seismologists at the Monteporzio Geophysical Observatory measured 20 earth tremors in the Marche region, the strongest peaking at 3.8 on the Richter scale.

They said more than 800 aftershocks had been recorded since the quake Wednesday night. Italy's worst in three years. National police officials said as many as 25 villages, some with fewer than 100 inhabitants, were leveled by the quake.

Monks Complete Bowing Journey

TALMADGE, Calif. (UPI) — Two American Buddhist monks, bowing to the ground in full prostration every three steps of the way, Saturday approached the end of an 800-mile journey.

Heng Sure, 29, and Heng Chau, 32, have been making their way north from Los Angeles to the City of 10,000 Buddhas monastery in Mendocino County since May 7, 1977.

Sure has maintained a vow of silence since the journey's start, and Chau acts as spokesman.

"We bow to get rid of our own greed, anger and stupidity, and work to prevent disasters, wars and suffering of all kinds," Chau said.

He said his companion got the inspiration for the trip while making many bows in San Francisco's Gold Mountain Monastery.

"He had a vision of disasters, calamities and suffering and wanted to do something about it," Chau said.

Chau, who went along as Sure's "protector," drives their 1956 station wagon a half mile ahead, returns and joins his partner. They cover a mile a day.

"It's a big job," Chau said. "We do our work every day, and the job isn't done until all living beings, including animals and even mosquitoes, find the peace and happiness they are seeking." For 16 hours a day, the pair bows every 35 seconds. The two monks have vowed to sleep only four hours a day — and only sitting bolt upright in the Lotus position.

"It keeps your head clear," Chau says. "Like the bowing, it's difficult for the first few months, but you get used to it."

Another vow is a promise not to get angry. Chau said, "That's our contribution to world peace."

Sure and Chau exist on one vegetarian meal a day, usually apples, tea and a bit of cheese. To complete their journey, they have 30 miles to go, which should take a month.

Both the monks were raised in Christian families and graduated from midwestern universities before joining the Gold Mountain Monastery.

Over $700,000 For Tax-Exempt Foundation

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the tax-exempt foundations set up by aides to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., took in more than $700,000 over a three-year period, according to Helms aide John E. Carbaugh Jr.

Carbaugh said Friday that the Institute of American Relations, one of four tax-exempt foundations he and other Helms aides have organized, received about $600,000 in 1978, $100,000 in 1977 and $60,000 in 1976 through direct mail requests. The foundations were set up to combat "liberal think tanks."

The institute paid for a trip by Carbaugh and another Helms aide, James P. Lucier, to London last week to observe the Zimbabwe-Rhodesia peace talks. The British government complained after the trip that the two meddled in the talks. The institute also paid for other trips they took abroad, Carbaugh and Lucier said.

Of the other organizations set up with Helms' approval, Carbaugh said one, the Centre for a Free Society, has taken in $75,000 "since its inception in November 1978."

Carbaugh said the American Family Institute, incorporated in October 1978, has received tax-exempt status from the Internal Revenue Service "only recently" and has raised "to my recollection, $75,000 this year."

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A bomb hidden in a trash can exploded less than 100 yards from the site of a controversial platform where Pope John Paul II will celebrate a Mass, police say.

Kills Her 3 Children

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP) — The principal of the local middle school described Patricia Dueweke as "a very pleasant, very nice woman."

"If I needed a parent volunteer for some project, she would be among the first persons I called," said Ron Johnson, principal of L'Anse Creuse Middle School.

On Friday, Mrs. Dueweke, 42, stood mute at her arraignment on three counts of first-degree murder in connection with the shooting deaths of her three teen-age children — Mark, 17, Cynthia, 16, and Karl, 13. Police said the youngsters apparently had been shot Thursday afternoon. However, they said they were unaware of the slayings until the father, Ralph Dueweke, 44, called them early Friday. The Duewekes were divorced last month. After her arraignment, Mrs. Dueweke was held without bond in the Macomb County Jail

Shocked By Impostor

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Retired Navy physician Jesse F. Adams, whose identity allegedly was assumed by a man employed as the chief doctor for the Tennessee Department of Corrections for more than a year, says he's "amazed and shocked" at the scheme.

"It reminds you of the things the Great Impostor pulled off," Adams said Saturday from his home in Olga, Wash.

The Davidson County Grand Jury Friday charged George E. Allen, 59, a former Chapel Hill, N.C., flying service operator, with six counts of impersonating a doctor and practicing medicine without a license. Allen, who was paid $36,000 a year, was held under $50,000 bond.

"We had been friends in each other's homes (in Chapel Hill)," Adams said.

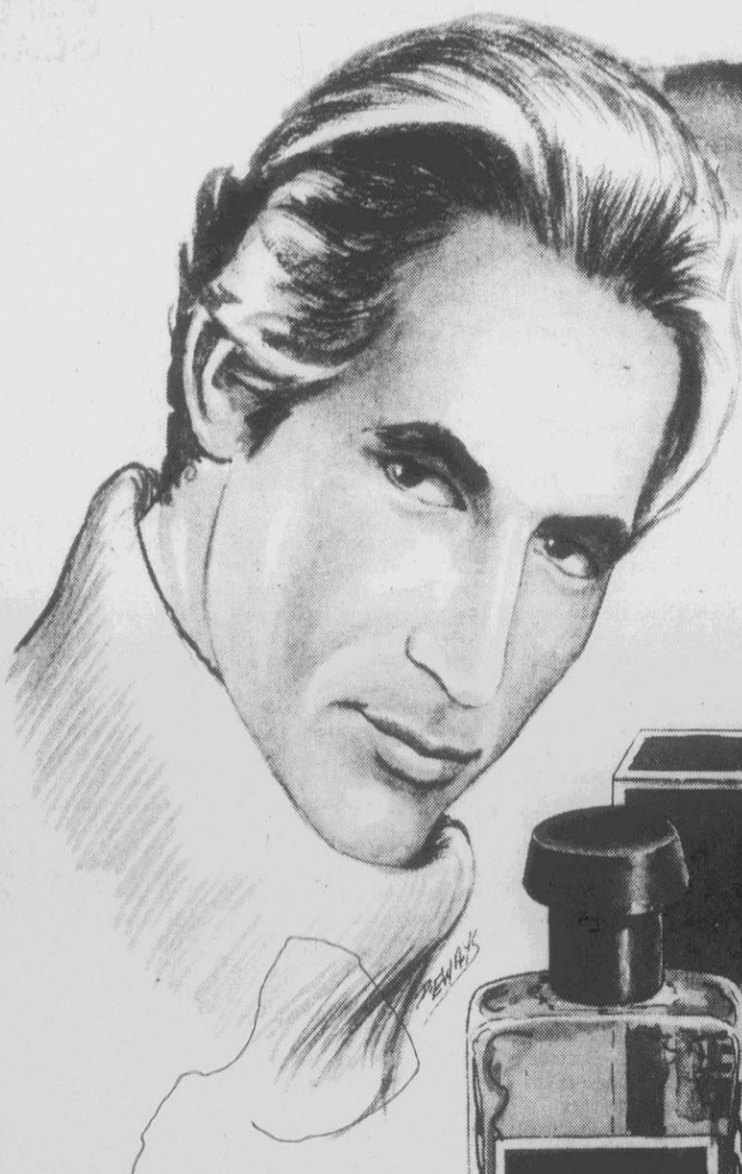

"I really can't speculate on how he gained access," said Adams, who added that he was "amazed at the completeness of the scheme. There were one or two dates wrong but that's about all."

Adams would not speculate on how Allen obtained documents and information he allegedly used to land his job

The Money Will Be Big Allure

The prospect of former governor Robert Scott challenging Gov. Jim Hunt for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination next year appears to be at least a possibility.

Former governor Scott is letting it be known that such a race is being considered. As always, money and backing by important groups will be fateful in any final decision.

Hunt, of course, has much going for him in that he currently holds the governor's seat. He has a lot of political power simply by virtue of holding the office, but he also will need backing.

Both men have been highly popular in the eastern section of the state. Hunt is an easterner from Wilson County. Scott has a heritage of eastern popularity that extends back to his father's upset victory to become governor.

Perhaps both men owe their election to the governorship to the dissatisfaction in the east, and the west, with the iron fisted control a power structure held over North Carolina government. The power bloc was de-railed during the 1960s and 1970s as eastern and western dissatisfaction was interpreted into protest votes.

Both Hunt and Scott will be looking to the east, the west and the rural Piedmont for their support in the event they face each other in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, but each will face a powerful pull in new directions.

The traditional power bloc will be looking to gain ground and to restore its control in a confrontation between these two highly popular figures in North Carolina politics. Its huge financial backing will go to the candidate who carries its favor.

The majority of us — east, west and rural Piedmont — must do all we can to avoid losing ground in the months ahead.

Up To Us To Assure An Early Success

The formal kick-off for the 1979-80 United Way campaign was held with a breakfast last week.

United Way President Robert Griffin told the group, "Our job is a tough one, we need help to help our agencies this year."

And Chairman Thomas Brewer said, "We will succeed this year because you feel deeply, you are concerned about Pitt County people."

The agencies sponsored through United Way giving are important to our community.

It is imperative that all of us pledge promptly and see this drive to a quick and successful conclusion.

THIS AFTERNOON

Offbeat Govm't Stories

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — From time to time the Governor's Office sends out an item called "Newsips ..." with suggestions for positive news media reports on activities in some of the agencies.

How else would we learn of such as:

It takes a ton of sugar every day to make Kool-aid for prison inmates. It takes 7,500 pounds of chicken to whip up a chicken dinner and the daily grocery bill to feed 14,000 inmates and the staff runs $25,000.

The Highways Division is testing a "glare-tamer" on an expressway interchange. The polyester mesh screen can be seen through during daylight, but at night the headlines of approaching cars are diffused.

Modified horse trailers full of water are making the rounds of prison units. They are portable baptistries for use when full-immersion baptisms are in order and the prisons don't have access to such facilities.

School Bonds
How can the state's political leadership best "sell" the general public on the need for a statewide school bond issue?

That is the dilemma now under discussion by the State Board of Education and legislative leaders. A study commission of the General Assembly will be organized to document school construction and renovation needs and determine whether or not a vote will be held — and if so, when. State Schools Supt. A. Craig Phillips is pushing a $600 million issue within the next year or two.

A survey by Phillips' agency produced a "want list" from local systems in excess of $1.3 billion ... but those involved concede that not all of that is essential work.

The key pitch will not be for new school construction, since most people are now aware that school enrollment is on the decline.

Instead, emphasis will be on renovating buildings which are getting old ... and especially on energy-saving renovations.

Bond money would be distributed to local school districts on the basis of enrollment, with local units generally matching each state dollar with three local dollars.

Over the past 10 years there have been 88 bond elections locally, with 49 of them successful. Recent months tell of a decline in voter approval, however. In 1979, four of nine elections have been successful.

Final Step
"Scared Straight" was the title of a controversial television production in which prison inmates talked humanly and toughly with youngsters about the horrors of life behind the walls: gang rapes, violence, murder and such.

North Carolina Correction Secretary Amos Reed said such an approach is not effective, but Gov. Jim Hunt suggested the idea be pursued.
The result: five prisons in the state will have a two-hour program every two weeks at which inmates and youngsters talk together about prison life. The units are Polk, Harnett, Western Correctional Center, Cameron-Morrison, and the Women's Prison.
The programs will be far different from "Scared Straight", however. Emphasis will be on inmates "selected to participate ... based on their ability to present in a meaningful way just what prison life is like; i.e., loss of freedom, loss of employment, loss of educational opportunities, reduced contact with family and friends, the requirement to live by the rules and regulations of an institution, etc.", says an announcement from the Department of Correction.

So began a story by the Associated Press. The suit against the magazine had been dropped not because the government had decided publication of the secret information would no longer be dangerous to the national security but because the issue had become moot.

While the suits to ban publication in the Progressive and in the student newspaper at the University of California in Berkeley were pending, a Madison, Wis. newspaper published the classified information.

The stories gave details on how to make a hydrogen bomb.

The United States government maintained that release of the information classified as "secret" jeopardized the national security.

Publication of the details was not an exercise of the First Amendment guaranteeing a free press but was, instead, a gross and irresponsible abuse of that freedom.

The Soviet Union, of course, has the "secrets" to the H-bomb. But publication of those secrets delivers now to terrorists around the world the capacity to destroy major cities and wipe out millions of people. Indeed, it invites the possibility of such groups or banana republic dictators becoming the hit men for major powers — unleashing hydrogen holocausts on the U.S. or other targets while those behind the project enjoy the immunity of pretended innocence.

Publication of the secret material invites, perhaps demands, something else.

Such an abuse brings into focus the need for the news media and the public at large to take a serious second look at this thing we call "freedom of the press."

Just as freedom of speech does not include one's right to shout "fire" in a crowded theater, freedom of the press does not include the unrestrained right to subject millions of people to peril at the hands of lunatics.

The champagne toast of the irresponsible editors of the Progressive magazine to the First Amendment was, in fact a toast to its inevitable compromise.

INSIDE REPORT

Kennedy To The Center?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says the biggest problem with President Carter's anti-inflation program is that "people don't know whether it is Mr. Kahn's or the president's," he is tipping a presidential campaign tactic to protect his own greatest weakness.

Kennedy told us voluntary guidelines are failing because the public perceives them as the creation of anti-inflation czar Alfred Kahn, rather than Jimmy Carter. Since the failure then becomes one of leadership and not policy, Kennedy has no need to embrace the radical alternative proposed by many of his most fervent supporters: wage-price controls.

In an hour-long interview with us, Kennedy shied away from attacking Carter on economic, energy and foreign policies. The harsh anti-Carter rhetoric of last winter had melted into wordy generalities about leadership. The White House and the Republicans, poised to attack Kennedy as a doctrinaire liberal out of touch with the times, will find Ted Kennedy is no George McGovern.

What's more, even the most emotionally liberal Kennedy backers are willing to excuse centrist deviationism. That he can maintain hard-core activists while appealing to the great center bolsters his heavy advantages against Carter. While the White House insists the prospective race is closer than the press suggests, in fact it is probably more one-sided.

Kennedy's personal political assessment was made in chats with associates this past summer. He confided that his overriding political problem was neither Chappaquiddick nor personal problems that face his wife, but his liberal positions that conflict with the current mood. This week's Boston Globe poll, showing a decline in Kennedy's massive New Hampshire strength when he is identified as a big spender, confirms his assessment.

Kennedy's remedy to avoid being McGovernized is clear from the way he sidesteps the wage-price controls that many of his boosters (especially in the labor movement) had expected. Under our questioning, he steered away from firm policy stands. While Ronald Reagan attacked President Gerald Ford only after challenging him, Kennedy's approach to Carter is exactly the opposite.

On Jan. 13, Kennedy accused the president of a "seriously defective" approach to the federal budget that favors the rich over the poor. Last week he told us he basically favors Carter's relatively stringent fiscal policy ("though with some priorities revised").

DO CREEDS COUNT?
Throughout history bloody wars have been fought over differences in religious belief. These religious wars have been the cruellest of all conflicts because under these conditions men can more easily forget every charitable human impulse in warfare over material objectives.

Yet differences of opinion in religious matters are not necessarily evil and can be very constructive, but we all ought to stick to our own beliefs. That person has precious little conviction who maintains that one creed is as good as another and that it makes no difference what a person believes. Actually, it makes a great deal of difference.

But of this we can certainly be also sure, that if every person lived up to the creed he or she has, this world of ours would be a much happier place to live in. It is vitally important that we live up to our creeds and stop condemning others because they have creeds with which we cannot agree.

Sunday Morning Notes

Unmasking the Lone Ranger was tried hundreds of times on radio and in the movies by all sorts of bad men.

In the end, though, the mask was intact as he rode off with a "Hi yo, Silver."

It took a court order to unmask Clayton Moore who, since radio days has been making the rounds as the Lone Ranger, complete with mask. Plans are in the works for a new Lone Ranger movie and ownership was ruled as belonging elsewhere.

The Lone Ranger unmasked? It recalls the lines from a Jim Croce number: "You don't tug on Superman's cape."

And the "Goldsboro News-Argus" tells the story about the hunter who had great good luck on the opening day of dove season and hit his limit of 12... or maybe more.

Unfortunately a game warden walked up. "How many have you taken?," he asked.

The hunter replied that he had shot 12.

"Better let me count 'em," the warden said.

The hunter pulled the birds out of his game bag one at a time. One he pulled out of the bag apparently had only been grazed. It perceived freedom and flew away.

Not counting the dove that flew off, there was an even dozen left.

"That dove that flew away just saved you from getting a ticket," the warden said.

A Bald Head Is Neat

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — "The only thing that will stop falling hair is the floor."

So advises John T. Capps III, who is bald and proud of it.

"Bald is beautiful," he proclaims, along with about 5,500 members of Bald Headed Men of America, which includes three women. They range in age from 11 to 95 years.

And medical authorities agree: so far, it is not possible to do anything to stop hair from falling out. Once it has, the baldies have the option of buying something to cover it up or — in some cases — having a hair transplant.

Otherwise, the nostrums advertised in magazines and newspapers as baldness cures do nothing except enrich the seller, they say.

Capps, 38, of Dunn, N.C., founded Bald Headed Men of America in 1973. Why? "I felt like bald headed men needed a little moral support," he says.

"One thing about baldness is, it's neat," says Capps, who apparently has the agreement of some well known public figures, such as actors Yul Brynner of "The King and I" and Telly Savalas of television's "Kojak" fame.

The list also includes singer-composer Isaac Hayes, comedian Don Rickles and football players Y.A. Tittle, formerly of the New York Giants, and Otis Sistrunk of the Oakland Raiders.

Members of Capps' organization include former President Gerald Ford, Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., and sports-caster Joe Garagiola. They're in the tradition of Julius Caesar, Socrates and Shakespeare, among other great onionheads of history.

And it's getting to be chic among some high-fashion men to have a chrome dome to go with their disco duds.

Capps said that for years advertisers had projected an image of how they wanted people to look and people had followed their line.

Steadily Rising Debt To You

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If someone owed you $600 you probably would want to know how long it had been owed, how likely the debtor was to pay, and who the debtor was, wouldn't you?

Well in effect, someone does owe you $600.

And you can't get those answers.

The money is due you — through your federal government.

More than $140 billion was owed at the end of the last fiscal year by farmers, foreign governments, delinquent taxpayers, state and local governments, businesses, college students and others.

But as President Carter's management specialists have discovered, the government has relatively little information about who owes the money, and how much of it is likely to go unpaid.

"We never have attempted to manage this centrally," said Wayne Granquist, a top official in Carter's Office of Management and Budget. "We just don't manage our portfolio."

Granquist is aiming to collect some information that will allow OMB — which is supposed to oversee the spending and functioning of the government's executive branch — to tighten lending and collection procedures.

A large portion of the debt seems on the surface to be quite sound. For example, $2.7 billion of the $140 billion total is loaned to farmers and backed up by commodities such as grain.

But a lot of Uncle Sam's loans have clearly gone bad. The student loan program, for example, has now seen more than 1 million U.S. students fail to make their payments. The sour student loans now total more than $1 billion.

The default rate on student loans is conservatively estimated at 8.7 percent for federally insured loans made by private lending institutions and 17.4 percent for loans made directly by the government.

Howard Messner, a Granquist lieutenant, figures that would be enough to send sink a bank or savings and loan company into receivership.

"They'd drop like a rock," Messner said.

Jerry Bridges, who will direct a special "debt collection project" for Granquist and Messner, predicted the study will take a year and a staff of about 15 persons, plus assistance from the agencies that lend the money.

Bridges is asking how much is owed, by whom, for how long, at what cost to the government. He wants to know, most importantly, how many defaults are likely and what can be done to prevent them or to collect bad debts.

The debt collection problem is seen by OMB as an increasingly important one, because the government is lending more and more money.

In 1975 the total lent was $77.6 billion, but last year the total had grown more than 80 percent, to $140.6 billion.

To the editor:

It has been much too long since agricultural education has been given the emphasis it deserves in the public schools of Pitt County. After 1971, vocational agriculture and the Future Farmers of America (FFA) has been made to take a back seat in support and funding by county school officials who do not realize the vast importance this type of instruction is to the people of Pitt County.

As a former member of the Chicod FFA, I remember the great pains that my agriculture teacher took in the classroom and shop to see to it that I developed essential skills needed to find employment in a vocation. I remember the many times he visited my simple farm projects in the summer to encourage me in the world of work.

Today not one vo-ag teacher in the county has a shop that he can call his own. Only one vo-ag teacher in the county has a full-time 12 month position. And to top it all off, with Pitt County serving as one of the state's ten most leading agricultural counties, there are only four vo-ag teachers remaining to guide our future farm leaders.

I must however commend the selection of Jesse Smith as vo-ag instructor at North Pitt High School. It is hoped that he receives the cooperation, funding and support that he will need to help build back vocational agriculture in this county. It is also hoped that he will receive full 12-month employment to provide him with the necessary time and opportunities to guide our young people in agricultural production skills.

To the editor:

It's becoming obvious that no one else is going to say this, so I will.

Many of us are very much opposed to abortion, legal or otherwise. Perhaps all of us are against infanticide. Yet, both of these odious practices have grown out of certain attitudes that most of us hold.

When a female decides to either terminate a pregnancy or to destroy an infant, that decision can be traced directly to one of two sources or both — economics or religion.

At the same time that a little girl becomes aware of the fact that she will probably eventually become pregnant and have children, she also begins to become conscious of certain attitudes that prevail in the community in connection with pregnancy and bearing children. Foremost among those sentiments is the almost universally held view that to engage in sex, become pregnant and have a child before marriage is a sin.

That moral absolute provides the basis for other less defensible objections to sex and childbearing. From there, it's easy to go on and say that the unwed mother creates an unnecessary burden on her parent. Or that she has disgraced them. Or that her lifestyle is increasing the welfare rolls if she and her parents are poor.

And on it goes, until now we have relatively families and individuals rationalizing abortion on the grounds that a child would be an intolerable financial drain, or it would interfere with their plans for the future.

So, inadvertently or not, we've created an atmosphere that makes casual murder and child abandonment inevitable.

It may be that everyone has his own idea of what constitutes sin. To me, there is no greater sin than complicity in the killing of the silent unborn and the helpless newly born.

Joe Anderson Jr.

To the editor:

I was appalled to read in the editorial on Sunday, Sept. 16, that the writer thought school merger would cut school costs. This is false.

Dr. Lacy Presnell from the Division of School Planning, N. C. Department of Education, stated in November of 1977 at a League of Women Voters' open forum that school merger did not lower expenses. This is one of the disadvantages of merger. People think it will lower expenses, and it does not.

The following information from the Statistical Profiles, N. C. Public Schools, back up Dr. Presnell. The year after the Raleigh-Wake County merger, Wake County paid $2,814,571 MORE in Current Expenses from LOCAL FUNDS than they had the previous year. Closer to home is the merger of Wilson City, Elm City and Wilson County. The year after they merged (1976-9177) $123,656 MORE was paid from local funds for Current Expenses.

School merger might help on school district lines, but it is not going to keep down expenses. This merger plan needs to be studied in depth with all the pros and cons presented to the voters of Greenville and Pitt County.

On May 12, Kennedy called the president's oil price decontrol "incredible," asking, "Is it fair to ask the poor elderly citizens . . . to shift to eat food so they can afford to pay their heating bills?" Now, while still pushing his own energy package, he has shelved the crusade against oil decontrol.

On Jan. 21, he accused the Carter administration of juggling figures to shield excessive defense spending. Last week he told us he generally favors Carter's claimed 3 percent rise in real defense spending. While on Jan. 21 he charged Carter's proposed new MX missile could "increase the threat of nuclear war," he told us last week he favors "development but not deployment" of the MX.

On foreign policy, Kennedy told us he had only "tactical" differences with Carter. On tax policy, he opposed personal income tax cuts and the proposed value added (sales) tax but said "at a later date" he might support tax incentives for capital formation and suspension of social security tax increases — a policy identical to the president's.

Does Kennedy's bland new ideology turn off such early supporters as New York State Atty. Gen. Robert Abrams and his political lieutenant, Ethan Geto, originally attracted by Kennedy's support for an "urban agenda"? Not at all, even though they are among the nation's most advanced liberals.

"We're willing to accept the senator moving toward moderate positions," Geto told us. Similarly, one prominent Midwestern liberal who will back Kennedy told us: "I don't think doctrine is what people are looking for. They're looking for leadership."

Lt. Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York, one of the nation's most ardent Carter loyalists, is saying there's not a dime's worth of difference doctrinally between Carter and Kennedy, adding: "Who do (the people) want as a new leader — Kennedy, Connally or Benito Mussolini?"

However, the president's men are going in precisely the opposite direction, labeling Kennedy a wild spender who would not win a state south of Kentucky. That is indeed the only chance to stop Kennedy in any early primaries, but he is making it difficult by quickly turning toward the center.

But, "skin is in," says Capps, a marketing specialist, political campaign advertiser and publisher of "The Donkey Tale Newsletter."

He comforts those who lament their plate pates with, "The Lord is just, the Lord is fair. He gave some brains and others hair."

But it would seem that millions of others have a problem coping with their depleted pellets.

The Department of Commerce reports that $48 million worth of "hair goods" were imported in 1976. And that was before markup — which may run as high as 400 percent. An additional $3 million worth — wholesale — is being produced annually in the United States.

A Conservative View

Shop Talk And A Question Of Secret Trials

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court decided the case of Gannett Company vs. DePasquale on the morning of July 2. It was not the court's finest hour.

The case is of primary concern to those of us in the news business, but it goes to the heart of everyone's interest in knowing what goes on in our public institutions. What the court held, by the most confusing of 5-4 margins, is that in certain circumstances, trial judges may conduct pretrial hearings in secret. We of the press have been yelling bloody murder ever since the opinion came down.

The case arose in the summer of 1976, when two young men were arrested in Michigan for a murder in upstate New York. One of them reportedly led police to the fatal revolver. The two defendants were returned to New York by extradition. At a pretrial hearing, defense counsel indicated that motions would be made having to do with suppression of evidence of the weapon. The defense moved to exclude the press and public.

Judge Daniel A. DePasquale said that in his view, the press had a constitutional right of access to the hearing; nevertheless, he granted the defense motion (to which the prosecutor did not object), and ordered a reporter from the Rochester News & Chronicle to leave. In the course of time the newspaper appealed. The case wound its way through the state courts and came on for Supreme Court decision in July.

Justice Stewart wrote the majority opinion. It was the last day of the term, and perhaps this usually able jurist was tired. Anyhow, he couldn't even get the question straight. As he defined it, the question was "whether members of the public have an independent constitutional right to insist upon access to a pretrial judicial proceeding." If he had paused over that sentence, Justice Stewart would have realized that members of the public have a right "to insist" till the cows come home. The issue actually presented was whether the press has a right of access to pretrial proceedings in a criminal case.

We of the press (most of us, anyhow) believe that we do have such a right of access — not an absolute right, perhaps, but certainly a right that trial judges should respect and protect. In the Gannett case, four members of the court (Blackmun, Brennan, White and Marshall) agreed. Justice Powell acknowledged the right but felt it didn't apply in this case. So we lost.

If the Rochester papers had sensationalized this murder case, a reasonable argument might have been raised that full coverage of the pretrial hearing would jeopardize the rights of the accused to an impartial jury later on. But there had been no sensationalism. For 90 days preceding the pretrial hearing, there had been no publicity at all. In his dissenting opinion, Justice Blackmun described the newspaper coverage as placid, routine, innocuous, straightforward, brief and factual. This wasn't a Sam Sheppard or Billie Sol Estes affair.

Throughout his majority opinion, Justice Stewart appeared to be emphasizing that he was talking not about closed trials, but only about closed pretrial proceedings. Part III of his opinion makes the point crystal clear. Repeatedly he bore down on the nature of a "pretrial suppression hearing." In a concurring opinion, Chief Justice Burger said he had joined the majority only because the issue dealt solely with pretrial motions.

The ink had not dried on the Stewart opinion before trial court judges around the country began closed-door motions right and left — motions to close not only pretrial proceedings but actual trials as well. In unusual public statements, the Chief Justice and Justice Powell have been saying that this was never intended, but it will take a further formal pronouncement from the court to set things straight.

At the bottom of this whole legal tangle is an important public interest. How are the people to know what goes on in their criminal courts if the press is forbidden to provide timely reports? The answer is, no way. Pretrial proceedings can be more significant than actual trials themselves. Here deals can be cut, pleas bargained and truthful evidence ruled inadmissible. There is a real possibility, said Justice Blackmun, that at a closed hearing a judge, a prosecutor and a defendant, all of the same political party, could engage in connivance. We of the press must have a right of access all along the way. It is immaterial whether the right is a First Amendment right or a Sixth Amendment right. Whenever a court convenes, we have to be there.

Ideal Family Profile Is Just Another Myth

We are all familiar with the standard psychological profile of the ideal family: the two loving parents, gentle but firm, and the happy, well-regulated children. We all strive to achieve this ideal, and we all fail.

There's good reason for this failure; the ideal is a myth. I'm willing to bet that there isn't one healthy family in America in which the parents have control. Even if a parent read every psychology book in print, she still wouldn't be prepared to cope with her children.

Why? Because most parents are reluctant to admit what every child instinctively knows, that family life is not a cooperative venture. It's a battleground.

It's not easy to admit that your kid has it in for you simply because you are there. But contrary to current psychological opinion, children do not have to have a reason for being obnoxious. They are not statistics. They are anarchists, terrorists, and masters at psychological warfare. Above all, they are unpredictable. Their major goal in life is to catch their parents off guard.

In such a climate, all a parent can hope for is an occasional pyrrhic victory, like that of the mother who used behavior modification to teach her son to clean up his room. Now when she asks him to do something, he answers, "What are you gonna give me for it?"

Meg is an expert at sabotaging her opponent's success. For instance, the other morning she decided that she didn't want to go to preschool. She knew she had no choice. In my two step program for maintaining sanity, preschool ranks right above nap. Her knowledge, however, didn't dampen her thirst for combat.

"Going to school today will hurt my feelings," she announced at breakfast. "I'll stay home and play with you."

"You need to play with other children, not with me." "But I don't have anyone to play with — any more because yesterday Michelle told me that Alexis didn't want me to be her best friend any more. So I'm going to stay home where someone loves me best of all." She added an appealing little whimper at the end.

I felt sorry for her but not enough to be conned. "Out of 18 children, I'm sure you'll find someone to play with today." Time did not alter my resolve. It didn't alter hers either. When I pulled her out of her chair at 8:55 and turned off the television, her screams could be heard throughout the neighborhood.

"You made me miss Captain Kangaroo!" she whined as we pulled out of the driveway.

"It was over, Meg. You were looking at a Fruit Loops commercial." "You made me miss the Fruit Loops commercial! I just love the Fruit Loops commercial! You always let me look at it before."

This cheerful morning banter continued until we got to school, where she changed her tactics. She grabbed me by the skirt with both hands and said, "You can't make me stay. I'll hold on to your dress till my hands fall off."

When I tried to remove her, she started to howl. "Ouch! You're breaking my arm!" At this point her teacher intervened. "Won't you come help us stir the chocolate pudding?" she asked.

Meg released me immediately and flounced across the room to the table. "I sure am glad to get here," she sighed. "All this fussing makes me nervous."

So why was I the one with the headache?

Facing South

Roots Get So Deep One Has To Stay And Fight

LAFAYETTE, Ala. — "I grieved and cursed and prayed myself into politics," says Dot Allen, the first and only woman elected to the Chambers County Board of Education.

Mrs. Allen is also a florist, and as she talks to visitors in her shop her hands are busily snipping off flower stems or arranging pieces of greenery around a styrofoam block to make a wreath or a floral blanket for a casket. She talks and works and when she gets excited she punctuates her words with a wave of a flower. When she talks about the school board and how she came to be on it, the flowers start to fly.

Mrs. Allen's four children were all in the public schools in LaFayette, but when desegregation arrived in the late Sixties, she and her husband Ed came under pressure to do like most other white parents and enroll their children in a hastily created private academy.

"We were approached about the private school in the very beginning. But our initial reaction was just that we weren't interested. I had no objection to the integration. When you have lived in a community all your life, you know the people and I didn't foresee any problems," says Mrs. Allen.

There were some personal problems, however. People Dot Allen had known all her life began to avoid here. Comments were made about possible boycotts of her business. There were a few anonymous, aggravating letters.

"I had never been uncomfortable in church in my life, but all of a sudden the church was split just like the school. You were either public or private and that's the way you were. It got so bad and I worried over it so that I believe I had been younger I might have moved away," she says. "But you know, your roots get so deep in a place that you just can't leave."

So Dot and Ed Allen stayed with the idea of running for election to the County Board of Education.

"I looked and none of the people on the school board had any children in public school. So I thought I could contribute something in a first-hand kind of way. But at first I didn't even tell Ed I was planning to run."

The seat that was up for election in 1973 was held by Glenn McClendon, the wealthy owner of McClendon Trucking Company, a major LaFayette employer and one of the South's largest motor haulers. McClendon served on the county school board, but he sent his children to private schools.

"I called Glenn up one morning and told him it was nothing personal but that I was going to qualify," Mrs. Allen said. "Then I told Ed. He said, 'Well, what does it cost to qualify?' I'll pay the fee for you." I said, "Nope. I'm not going to be obligated to you or anybody else, I'll pay my own fee." So I qualified and then Glenn decided not to run for re-election, so I had no opposition.

She has since been re-elected, and she works to rebuild faith in public education. "I wish we had had somebody who knew what I know now and who could have called a big old town meeting where the whole community could have talked about what we were about to be going through. The community leaders at that time thought it was best not to talk about it and that was a mistake. But you can't point a finger at anyone, because it was just something so different from what any of us knew."

But she acknowledges that winning whites back to the public schools in LaFayette is a slow process. "I don't know

THE GALLUP POLL

Majority Of Voters Know Few GOP Hopefuls

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The latest Gallup Poll test of candidate awareness shows that only six of 18 Republicans mentioned as candidates for the GOP nomination for president in 1980 are known to a majority of the nation's voters.

Leading the list are Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, known to 94 percent and 91 percent of the electorate, respectively, followed by John Connally (76 percent), Robert Dole (60 percent), Howard Baker (58 percent) and Charles Percy (51 percent).

In the next group, known to between 30 percent and 50 percent of the American public, are Alexander Haig (44 percent), Harold Stassen (42 percent), George Bush (38 percent), Elliot Richardson (36 percent) and William Simon (31 percent).

The seven other men on the list are known to fewer than 30 percent of the public.

This question was asked to determine name recognition: "Will you please look over this list (survey respondents were handed a card with 18 names listed) and tell me which of these men you have heard something about."

And here are the results in tabular form, based on the total sample:

GOP Name Awareness (Based on total sample)
Gerald Ford	94%
Ronald Reagan	91
John Connally	76
Robert Dole	60
Howard Baker	58

Charles Percy	51
Alexander Haig	44
Harold Stassen	42
George Bush	38
Elliot Richardson	36
William Simon	31
Jesse Helms	28
John Anderson	22
Philip Crane	21
Jack Kemp	18
James Thompson	16
Robert Ray	13
Ben Fernandez	9

Name Recognition A Key Factor
The large number of prospective GOP nominees — including both those who have openly declared their candidacy as well as those whose availability is largely speculative at present — suggests that many of these men have learned from Jimmy Carter's rise to the presidency the value of early, intensive campaigning at the grassroots level to make themselves known among the rank and file of the electorate as well as to party leaders.

Two years before the 1976 primaries Jimmy Carter was known to few people outside his native Georgia. In fact, it was not until mid-1975 that as many as one Democrat in four had heard of Carter — and even at that point he was the choice of merely 1 percent of Democrats as their party's standard-bearer for the 1976 presidential race.

Nomination Choices Of Republicans, Independents
The importance of name awareness at this early stage in the race is also demonstrated by the fact that when Republican and independent voters are asked to name their No. 1 choice for the GOP presidential nomination in 1980, the top five contenders, including all those who receive 4 percent or better of the vote, have name recognition scores of 50 percent or above.

Choices For GOP Nomination (Based on Republicans and independents)
Reagan	29%
Ford	21
Baker	10
Connally	8
Percy	4
Bush	3
Haig	3
Richardson	3
All others	5
Don't know	14

On the other hand, name recognition alone is no guarantor of political favor. Robert Dole, comparatively well-known to prospective voters, at 60 percent name awareness, is the nomination choice of only 2 percent of Republicans and independents. And Harold Stassen, known to 42 percent of the public, gets less than 1 percent of the vote.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 334 Republicans and 505 independents out of a total sample of 1,555 adults, 18 and older. The interviews were conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period August 17-20.

- Outraged - Draft Kennedy Movement Grows

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top black American civil rights leader said Saturday on his return from the Middle East he was "outraged" when he saw "undisputable evidence" of the use of American arms by Israeli forces in Lebanon.

In a speech to a cheering audience of Palestinian-Americans, the Rev. Joseph Lowery said that during a tour of southern Lebanon he and other civil rights leaders saw what Israel's "savage and destructive bombing" has done to that region.

"And to our outrage," he added, "we saw undisputable evidence of the use of American weapons on non-military targets."

The use by Israel of American-made weapons in southern Lebanon is one of the irritants in U.S.-Israeli relations. The State Department told Congress in August Israel may have violated a 1952 agreement by using American arms in Lebanon.

Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, returned early Saturday from a trip to the Middle East at the head of a 10-member mission by American black civil rights leaders.

The group was warmly received in Beirut by Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yassir Arafat but snubbed by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. "We didn't exactly get a warm, red-carpet invitation," he said about Israel.

Lowery defended the SCLC's mission as "successful" and dismissed as "racist nonsense" allegations by critics that the nation's black community is being "used" by the PLO.

"I know they say we are being used, but that's what they have always said ... they said we were being used by the communists, then by the Jews and now by the PLO."

"I regret that racist nonsense, I deny the allegations and I defy" those who made the allegations, he said.

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The movement to draft Sen. Edward M. Kennedy as a presidential candidate has grown by at least 50 percent in the week since the Massachusetts Democrat indicated he might seek the nation's highest office.

An Associated Press survey turned up one or more Kennedy efforts in at least 29 states and the District of Columbia, about equal to the number where there is organized re-election activity for President Carter.

But because of the spontaneous and sudden growth of the Kennedy groups and the complexities of election law, it may be hard to convert all this support into a campaign organization.

"That's obviously a matter of complexity and sensitivity," Kennedy acknowledged. "I'm sure there will be situations which will be especially complicated."

As required by law, Kennedy has formally disavowed any connection with the draft committees. And all insist they are working independently.

But this means a lot of people are staking claims for themselves as Kennedy's representatives in their states. If Kennedy runs, he may be forced to accept the de facto committees as his own or risk their wrath if he displaces them with new ones.

Kennedy hopes that the spirit which is motivating these supporters would also smooth over any transition necessary to form an official campaign.

"It all will go to Sen. Kennedy as soon as he enters the race," offered Bill Garrett who organized the Ready for Teddy movement in Oregon and is sponsoring chapters in other states.

"We're doing the resource identification so he can use it when he gets in," said Garrett.

In Iowa, where one of the first candidate tests will come in January caucuses, Iowans for Kennedy Chairman Matt Wanning, said if Kennedy runs, naming the official team "is entirely up to him."

"I would imagine that the senator would want to bring in people from outside the state to coordinate his activities once he announces," agreed Richard Williamson, Kansas coordinator for a Kennedy draft.

"We don't know what our roles would be in his campaign," said Mike McGrath, assistant attorney general of Montana and member of a Kennedy draft in that state.

But a Kennedy candidacy would face other problems with these groups. The question of converting a draft committee to a campaign committee has never been addressed by the Federal Election Commission and is not precisely spelled out in the law.

of any problem in the schools now except that we don't have enough whites. And you see that makes the problem even worse because it was the influential white people who pulled out. That left the black community and a very few whites to try to do something about the schools here. We have done something, I frankly think my child is getting as good an education where he is as he would get at the Academy. And I think it's healthier. They're trying to prolong something over there which doesn't exist any more."

Will Enter Canal October 1

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — President Aristides Royo says "the people of Panama will enter the Canal Zone on Oct. 1 with or without implementing legislation."
The Panamanian president reacted to the House of Representatives' refusal Thursday to pass a law implementing the Panama Canal treaties. He spoke Friday at the inauguration of a public works project outside Panama City.
Earlier Friday, a Panamanian government spokesman said he was sure Congress would reconsider and pass the enabling bill, which already has been approved by the Senate.
Under terms of the treaties, signed in 1977, Panama takes control of the Canal Zone from the U.S. administration on Oct. 1. The canal itself becomes Panamanian property at noon on Dec. 31, 1999.

Claims Little Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new agreement to buy $1 billion a day of natural gas from Mexico at above-market prices will have little impact on consumer prices, U.S. officials say.
After President Carter announced the agreement Friday, Assistant Secretary of State Julius Katz said the higher price for Mexican gas would be "hardly noticeable" because it will represent only one-half of 1 percent of U.S. consumption.
Carter told reporters the accord, which came after two years of negotiations, was "a significant step toward providing a new energy source for our country."
He also said it represents a "breakthrough" in the development of a "deeper and broader relationship" with Mexico.

Chrysler To Try Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. is going to try again to get government aid in overcoming its financial troubles.
Lee A. Iacocca, the new chairman of the nation's No. 3 automaker, said Friday that the company will submit a revised proposal to the government for financial help.
Last Saturday, the company presented a plan asking for $1.2 billion in loan guarantees. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller rejected the proposal, saying it was "way out of line."
But since then, Chrysler has shifted its top command.

Former State Senator Indicted

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP) — Former state Sen. Robert Vance Somers, R-Salisbury, was indicted Friday on two charges of conspiring to murder a former business associate.
Somers was taken into custody by Salisbury police Friday afternoon at an airport near the city after a Rowan County grand jury, sitting in special session, returned a bill of indictment charging him with one count of soliciting to murder and a second count of conspiring to murder.
Somers was released Friday under $100,000 secured bond and has been unavailable for comment since.

Unfair Practices Charged

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for the state Insurance Department said Friday that the state will attempt to prove there were several instances of unfair practices in settling insurance claims against Smith-Douglass Co.
Staff attorney Dan Nelson said Friday that the insurer for Smith-Douglass went about settling claims of farmers whose tobacco crop was damaged by a contaminated fertilizer in a "high-handed, capricious way."

Union Carbide Rejects Unionizing

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — For the third time, production and maintenance workers at two Union Carbide flashlight and lantern-battery plants have rejected affiliation with Teamsters Local 391.
The two-day union election ended Friday with the vote 804-422 against the Teamsters.
None of Union Carbide's nine battery-producing plants is unionized.

Men's Workout

October 1 is the beginning date of a workout program for men to be conducted by Harold Srocynski. The eight week program, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, will run from October 1 through November 23 at Elm Street Gymnasium.

Based on the well known fitness program developed by Dick Voit in Chicago, the workout routine is designed to help men of all ages keep in good physical condition with systematic daily exercises geared to their ability.

"Workout Class for Men" has been scheduled so that four different hours daily are available to those taking part in the program.

The daily schedule is from noon to 1 p.m., 1 to 2 p.m., and the early evening hours of 6 to 7 p.m. and 7 to 8 p.m.

Srocynski said "scheduling classes at these hours should give men wanting to be in the program a chance to work this in with their working hours."

Fee for eight weeks is $20, with participants given the option of signing up for the first four weeks at $10 to determine if they want to continue for the full program.

For more information, interested persons are to contact Nancy Evans at the Elm Street Gym.

A Chicago native, Srocynski is a currently a free-lance writer living in Greenville. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps from January 1971 to July 1976. During his military career he served in Southeast Asia. After his military career he was with the Peace Corps, first in Africa, then in Korea. He is a graduate of Illinois State University and Arizona State University.

Major Art Scandal Involves Young Dealer

BOSTON (AP) — A major art scandal has erupted over the bankruptcy proceedings of a young dealer who allegedly persuaded at least one major gallery to buy paintings that did not exist.

A Los Angeles gallery contends the dealer, Steven Straw of Newburyport, owes it $7 million, and several others also have six-and seven-figure claims against him.

Art dealers said they were shocked when Straw, 28, the son of a prominent New Hampshire real estate dealer, filed for reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws July 18. Straw listed $16.2 million in debts and $1.7 million in assets.

American Collector magazine described the case "one of the most sensational scandals ever to hit the gentlemanly art world."

"The Straw massacre, that's what I call it," said Mark Hoffman, president of Maxwell Galleries in San Francisco. Hoffman says Straw owes his gallery $600,000 for two bad checks.

Dong-Ding Instead Of Ding-Dong

LONDON (AP) — Engineers hurried to Big Ben Saturday when the famous clock tower over Westminster struck a wrong chord and lost its first note. It chimed "dong-ding-dong," instead of "ding-dong-ding-dong."

The strange sound was noticed in the quarter-hour chimes preceding the 11 a.m. signal.

"We don't know the explanation yet and otherwise the clock is going normally," said one official.

The Big Ben bell was named after Sir Benjamin Hall, commissioner of works when the clock was made in 1858.

'The Marriage-Go-Round' Is First Dinner Theater Event

MARRIAGE-GO-ROUND... a comedy based on an improbable genetic situation, is being presented by Alpha-Omega Players of Texas as the first dinner theater attraction of the 1979-80 season on the ECU campus. Tickets are priced at $9 and must be purchased 36 hours in advance. Friday and Saturday, October 5 and 6, are the two performance dates.

"The Marriage-Go-Round," Leslie Stevens' play about an experiment in eugenics, is being presented by the Alpha-Omega Players, the performing arm of the Repertory Theater of America, at Mendenhall Student Center theater on Friday and Saturday, October 5 and 6.

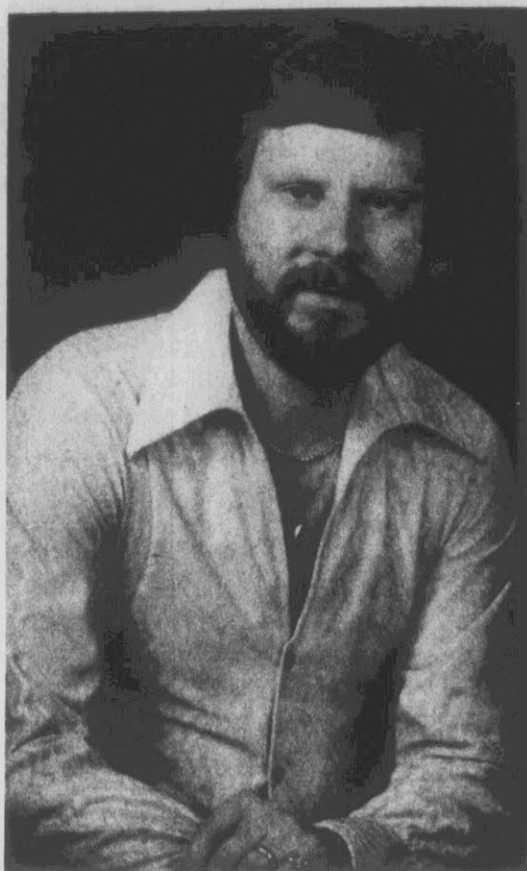

Sponsored by the ECU Student Union and Mendenhall Student Center, this is the first dinner theater event for the 1979-80 season. Tickets are priced at $9 and must be purchased at least 36 hours in advance from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center. The phone number is 757-6611.

"The Marriage-Go-Round," a clever charade, played for over 16 months in New York. It is the retelling of a story — possibly apocryphal — about intellectual George Bernard Shaw and dancer Isadora Duncan. The celebrated dancer proposed that Shaw father a child of hers, saying that a child with his brain and her body would be the superman. Shaw was always writing about. Shaw supposedly declined, fearful that the child might inherit his body and Duncan's brains.

John Payne as Paul Delville and Vicki Hughes as Katrin Sveg will enact the Shaw/Duncan roles, with Jean Kay Sifford as Content Lowell, and Kent Johnson as Ross Barnett.

The comedy will be presented following a buffet catered by the ECU School of Home Economics — featuring turkey tetrazzini, roast beef au jus, buttered lima beans, squash casserole, baked broccoli with cheese, tossed salad, carrot cake with cream cheese icing, and tea or coffee.

Mo Bandy's Concert Thursday

MO BANDY... king of Honky-Tonk music, will be in concert at the Carolina Opry House on Thursday, September 27. Tickets are priced at $7 and reservations can be made by calling 758-3943.

The king of Honky-Tonk music, Mo Bandy, is next on the roster of entertainers to appear at Greenville's Carolina Opry House. He will be in concert Thursday, September 27.

Bandy, whose current record, "Just Good Ole Boys," in collaboration with Joe Stampley, is number four in this week's Top Ten Country list, is a Mississippi native with a West Texas style and sound in music.

His music reflects the music of the 40's and 50's that prevailed before double-knit suits and hot-comb cowboys changed the face of country music in the 1960's.

Bandy's music has been described as the kind that "touches hearts and empties beer glasses." One New York critic even dubbed him "the Jesus Christ of Country Music."

Born into a family who loved music, by the time Bandy's family moved to Texas when he was six, he was already familiar with the music of Jimmie Rodgers and Hank Williams.

Among Bandy's hit songs have been "Soft Lights and Hard Country Music," "Don't Anyone Make Home At Home Anymore?," "Cowboys Ain't Supposed to Cry," and "I Just Started Hatin' Cheatin' Songs Today."

Advanced tickets are priced at $7. Ticket reservations can be made by calling the Opry House, 758-3943. Bandy's performance will begin at about 10:30 p.m.

ECU's Annual Faculty Show

WALL CONTAINER . . . In wood, by Terry Smith, on view in the annual ECU Faculty Exhibition at Gray Gallery on the ECU campus.

Every year about this time faculty members of the School of Art, East Carolina University get a chance to collectively show the public what they have achieved as artists within the past year.

Since the size of the faculty continues to grow, this means that each participant is limited in space available — an unfortunate circumstance for those who have achieved a lot, and obviously a blessing to lesser achievers.

The 1979 show now on view at Gray Gallery on campus is a broad cross-section of familiar names, plus several more recent additions to the faculty.

Real surprises are few, but there are considerable assurances that the rigors of teaching have not deadened the challenge to search out new approaches in creativity.

In sculpture, Norman Keller shows a quartette of mixed media small pieces effective in their scale and use of material. Bob Edmisten's newer metal constructions make use of granite wedged between heavy, bright-painted beams.

Ed Reep has gone from large, simplified paintings to smaller, more detailed paintings. Those he show have as a central theme fragments of maps supplemented by areas of geographic greens and blues. Marilyn Gordley continues her trend toward paintings composed of multiple compartmented areas, and Tran Gordley seems to now favor organic forms in preference to his past concentration on fruits and vegetables as subject matter.

John Satterfield and Janet Fischer continue to delight with fine examples of handcrafted jewelry, and a newer faculty member, Tom Evans, displays a superb necklace of silver and stones.

Viewers partial to art in wood will find pleasure in musical instruments, wall hangings, furniture and incidental pieces created by Terry Smith. Not to be overlooked are small pieces in a glass case fashioned from New Guinea rosewood birch in which he makes splendid use of defects in the wood.

The gallery's new director, Randolph Osman, shows examples of heavy, pale colored ceramics; and Clarence Morgan has several large canvases of many colors interspersed with squares.

Bob Rasch and Elizabeth Ross each display works that are notable for sensitive, poetic use of subject and the media they use. George Danhires brings the art of people in paintings to the show with several of his studies of women in rooms.

Donald Sexauer has gone biographical, with prints based on himself and his family. These are done in his familiar style of sectioning prints into three or four related components.

Retired faculty members are represented — Francis Speight, Emily Farnham, Warren Chamberlain, Francis Neel. It's a fine gesture on the part of organizers to have these old hands included.

One fun-piece, near the gallery's entry door can easily be overlooked. Entitled "The Laing Knee-Bender," it is an athletic device in ceramic, wood and cloth straps designed for athletes with time to do something athletic only every 15 years.

The Gray Gallery is open daily during regular hours of the School of Art. No admission is required, and the public is invited to view the show.

One Man's Vision Of Beauty

For the greater part of his working life, North Carolina artist Hobson Pittman painted pictures that possess an underlying characteristic of delicacy. Whether his subjects are flowers, interior scenes, or landscapes, peopled or unpeopled, his work bears the personal stamp of his vision of order, beauty and restraint.

The courage of the man as artist in devoting his talent to his vision did not result in the stagnation of sameness. Rather, like a finely balanced piece of music, his work encompasses refreshing variations on a theme.

A collection of about two dozen of Pittman's small-scaled works are now on view at the Greenville Art Center. These are from the bequest to the N.C. Museum of Art at the time of his death in the spring of 1972.

Within this show are representative pieces showing light, spring-like colors in transparent, barely sketched in watercolors as well as more detailed paintings of a Matisse-like complexity of design and color, such as the painting, "Two Figures" painted in 1969.

The most intriguing pieces in this collection are paintings with cryptic notations Pittman penciled in — obviously as guides to later works to be based on these initial, illuminating drawings.

Two early works, both dated in the late 1920's, suffice to reveal the bolder approach Pittman employed as a youthful artist, an approach he turned from as he matured to the style that eventually became characteristic of his later years.

Much has been written about Pittman's mastery presentation of interiors, but this show affirms he is equally exciting as a painter of the outdoors — landscapes and flowers.

Pittman's early years, from the age of six to 18, were spent in Tarboro. Before 1920 he moved to Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania and lived there for more than 50 years before his death. In his lifetime, Pittman was honored with recognition. In 1934 he was invited to show in the Venice Biennial. In 1945 his work was shown in the Armory Show, and at London's Tate Gallery in 1945.

He received an award in 1936 at the San Francisco World Fair, and in 1963 the N. C. Museum of Art held a retrospective show of his work.

This collection of Pittman's paintings offers viewers not familiar with his work an opportunity to encounter one man's vision of ultimate beauty.

AN EARLY WORK . . . by Hobson Pittman, "Ulster County, N. Y.," dated 1929 provides a study in contrasts to the better known more delicate paintings by Pittman in his mature years.

Court Halts 'Scarlett Fever'

ATLANTA (AP) — An Atlanta theater company's plans to present a spoof of Margaret Mitchell's famous novel may soon be gone with the wind. Owners of the rights to "Gone With The Wind" obtained a court order Friday halting the opening of "Scarlett Fever," a musical parody of the story of Scarlett O'Hara, Rhett Butler and the fall of the Old South.

Subtitled "The Comic Retelling of a Southern Legend," the play was to have opened Friday night at the Showcase Cabaret in a north Atlanta shopping center.

Attorneys representing Miss Mitchell's estate and Metro-Goldwin-Mayer Inc., which made a major film from her best-selling novel in 1939, filed suit in federal court Friday saying the play violates copyright laws.

Judge Orinda Evans issued a temporary restraining order and set an evidentiary hearing in the case for Oct. 1.

The suit contends that "the unauthorized production of 'Scarlett Fever' contains the substantial plot, story line, development of the story, sequence of events, characters, dialogue, setting, time period, locale and other copyrighted features of the literary work and film."

"Our defense is the same it has always been, that a parody or satire is a legitimate art form and should be allowed to exist," said Chris McIntyre, executive producer of Plump Bess Productions, which put together the show.

Underhill Testimony Read

ROME, Ga. (AP) — Roger Dean Underhill couldn't bring himself to shoot James Mayes in the back, Underhill said in testimony read in the federal racketeering trial of pornographer Michael Thevis.

So Underhill hired two men who killed Mayes, an Atlanta peep show operator, by planting a bomb in his van, according to testimony.

Portions of the transcript from Underhill's appearance before a grand jury were read Friday in court, over defense objections, because the one-time Thevis henchman was shot to death last year.

Alligator Delicacies, Anyone?

MIAMI (AP) — Alligator file, anyone?

Before long, Florida restaurants may serve such unusual delicacies as 'Gator Wellington, or maybe Surf 'n Swamp, under new rules that allow the sale of alligator meat for the first time in years.

Restaurants and canneries with the proper permit will be allowed to make limited purchases from commercial alligator farms and trappers who eliminate nuisance alligators for the state.

Dr. Allan Egbert, assistant director of the Division of Wildlife, says some 'gator raters claim the meat tastes like scallops.

"On the other hand, I've had people say they can take it or leave it . . . It's going to start slowly, I suspect, if it even starts at all," Egbert said.

Ten years ago, the reptile, hunted for its valuable hide, joined other creatures on the federal endangered species list. But the population has since bounced back. Residents complain about uninvited 'gators in backyard ponds and canals.

Birthday

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Natural History Society, along with the Museum of Natural History, is sponsoring the first public open house in honor of the Museum's 100th birthday.

The open house will be held Sunday, October 14 from 2 to 5 p.m. Featured activities will include "behind the scenes" trips to learn how exhibits are made, to see the collections, and to visit the scientific research area. Refreshments will be served and the public is invited to attend.

Speakers and panelists will include Robert Buttel, Denis Donoghue, J. Hillis Miller, Robert Pack, Peter Brazeau, Frank Doggett, and Marie Borroff.

Holly Stevens, the poet's daughter, will speak at 2 p.m. Friday.

Stevens was born October 2, 1879 in Reading, Pa. He is perhaps best known for his first volume of poetry, "Harmonium," which includes many of the poems best loved by his admirers — "Sunday Morning," "The Emperor of Ice Cream,"

"Peter Cat" and "The Cavalier." He was a "Thirteen Ways of Looking at a Blackbird."

Stevens attended Harvard University and the New York Law School. He was a reporter for the "New York Tribune" before joining the staff of Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co., an insurance firm. In 1932 he became the firm's vice-president.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Margaret Clark

John Crosby, known to thousands as America's wittiest television critic, can't help but be amusing. His new novel, PARTY OF THE YEAR, is a thoroughly entertaining story of sophisticated suspense that features two very delightful characters. A beautiful faded American Princess hires Horatio Cassidy, an equally faded ex-CIA officer, to both tutor and protect her twelve-year-old daughter Lucia. They live expensively in an almost impregnable highrise in New York. Very soon Cassidy develops an uncommon affection for his precocious young charge. Then he discovers that Lucia's life is threatened by people who have resolved not only to kidnap and possibly kill her, but have the means of doing so. Education and security progress up to the Princess's extravagant party of the year, an agglomeration of jet settlers, and to a blissfully outrageous solution.

THE ROBBER BARONESS by William Kendall Clarke is a fictional portrait of an independent-minded woman of the 1850's and 1860's. Capable of ordering her own life, Hetty Robinson refused to be confined by a male-dominated society. Venturing into the securities market, she gets a seat on the Stock Exchange and earns the name "robber baroness." She shows little concern for humanity when it interferes with making a profit; money is power and she uses it for personal revenge. Her independence costs her a fiancé and estranges her from her father. Though she eventually marries, her absorption with her career causes problems. Hetty Green is remembered today as "The Witch of Wall Street,"—a woman detested, feared and maligned by her peers.

Other new novels are: ERROR OF JUDGMENT by Henry Denker, an exciting medical novel about a young doctor who risks his career and future to prove a patient's hysterectomy was unnecessary, callous, and psychologically damaging; JAMES BRADY'S NIELSEN'S CHILDREN is an intriguing drama about the fascinating world of network television, convincingly set in the chic apartments and bars of Manhattan; and the love between a young Irish girl and a highborn Indian prince is the theme of Katherine Gordon's THE EMERALD PEACOCK.

September 25th Showing For Artifacts Found In Halifax Well

HALIFAX — A 200-year-old well might not be the best place to find fresh water, but it's turned out to be the source of a stream of artifacts for archaeologists winding up a major dig at Halifax.

The well, its contents and the remains of a house believed to be the home of the first Provincial Grand Marshal of the Masons in North America will be featured during a special "celebration" scheduled for Tuesday, September 25 in Halifax.

The end of this dig marks the culmination of a project that began in 1974 with the discovery of the ruins of a home historians believe belonged to Joseph Marshall of the Masons in North America and first County Clerk of Halifax.

Lack of funds prevented intensive digging until this year, when matching state and federal funds were approved from the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources and the Heritage, Conservation and Recreation Service.

Archaeologists have uncovered the foundations and basement of a large, rather ornate house they estimate dates from the 1760s. A fire sometime in the 1860s apparently destroyed much of the structure, but enough remains to indicate it was a large house with ornate details on the site. Archaeologists have found post holes and other evidence of a fenced garden.

Digging at the house also yielded a silver Virginia half-penny, sunken storage barrels, an unusual white clay pipe with the initials "T.D." and four whole wine bottles, complete with dried fruit pits.

The well near the house apparently served a common function of dried-up water supplies—it became a hiding place for broken china, glass and other household goods. As the well was discovered near the end of the dig, archaeologists can only guess at what might result from its excavation.

For more information on the Halifax celebration on September 25, contact Gerald Butler, Historic Halifax, N.C., phone 583-7191.

Deacons Hand ECU Third Straight Loss, 23-20

Tar Heels Beat Pitt As Defense Forces Seven Turnovers

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Matt Kupec believes the Atlantic Coast Conference is being shortchanged in the national collegiate football rankings and said early last week that a victory over 13th-ranked Pittsburgh would help remedy that somewhat.

So the North Carolina quarterback, who later broke Danny Talbott's school record with his 17th career completion, got the Tar Heels rolling toward their second straight victory with a 43-yard touchdown pass to Phil Farris on North Carolina's third offensive play.

This was the catalyst that led Dick Crum's Tar Heels to a well-deserved 17-7 upset of Jackie Sherrill's Panthers.

But the day belonged not to Kupec, nor to Tar Heel tailback Amos Lawrence, the nation's 10th-leading rusher.

The man of the hour was linebacker Buddy Curry, who led a relentless North Carolina defense that contained Pitt's Randy McMillan, the nation's 9th-leading rusher. Curry intercepted two passes, made seven solo tackles and assisted on four others.

The North Carolina defense, which has surrendered just seven points in two games, overshadowed a respectable showing by the Panther defenders.

Pitt entered the game as the nation's 8th-ranked defensive team. The Panthers were first against the rush.

But they were unable to overcome the Tar Heel defense, which forced them into seven turnovers.

After the touchdown pass to Farris, Kupec capped a 14-yard drive that followed Lee Shaffer's first-period fumble recovery with a one-yard sneak.

Pitt converted one of North Carolina's rare mistakes into its lone score in the third period. Rick Trocano passed 13 yards to Kenny Bowles.

Jeff Hayes closed out the scoring for North Carolina with a 43-yard field goal in the fourth period.

North Carolina immediately put Pitt deep in its own end.

Hayes' kickoff to start the game was taken a yard into the end zone by Terry White. He ran into an official near the goal line and was tackled at the six.

That set the tone for the first half. The Panthers, thanks to deep kickoffs by Hayes and punts by Steve Streater, took possession of the ball at their own 6, -21, -19, -14, 22, -23 and 15-yard lines.

Finally, Pitt reached Tar Heel territory when Carlton Williamson intercepted Kupec and returned the ball 28 yards to the North Carolina 38 late in the second period. But the Tar Heel defense, which earlier negated McMillan, held its ground against the passes of backup quarterback Daniel Marino.

While Sherrill pulled starter Trocano, who was forced into several poor throws by the drops of Curry and a tight secondary led by Ricky Barden, Kupec had a relatively easy first half.

His backs remained fresh because Crum was able to substitute freshman Kelvin Bryant for Lawrence and Walter Sturdivant for fullback Doug Paschal.

Crum sent Bryant into the game with the Tar Heels camped on the Panther five, third down and a yard to go. He promptly ran for four, and Kupec scored on the next play.

Pitt's inability to move the ball forced Sherrill to change quarterbacks and go to air. The Tar Heels picked off three passes in the first half and recovered two Pitt fumbles.

Gamecocks Smother Blue Devils, 35-0

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Blue Devils' 36 and punched over a second score early in the second period. Dorsey got the score on a gallop off tackle.

Rogers scored a touchdown in the third quarter and again in the early moments of the fourth period — both set up by turnovers forced by the tenacious Gamecock defense.

The Gamecocks took the game's opening kickoff and rolled 71 yards for a score and were never headed in posting their second victory in three starts. Duke is now 1-1.

Rogers bulled his way through and around the out-classed Blue Devils, scoring on runs of one and two yards. The 210-pound junior moved into fifth place among all-time Gamecock rushers with his performance.

The Gamecocks also scored on quarterback Garry Harper's 4-yard run. Tom Dorsey's 2-yard plunge and Perry Reeves' 2-yard scamper.

The Blue Devils had only one scoring opportunity, a first-quarter drive which was stopped at the South Carolina one. Duke collected only four first downs in the first half and none in the third quarter.

Runs of 14 and 10 yards by Rogers sparked the Gamecocks' first scoring drive, which was climaxed by Harper's run around right end. Eddie Leopold added the first of his five extra points.

Minutes later, South Carolina recovered a Duke fumble at the

Deacs Win Third Straight As Venuto Sets Passing Marks

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Staff Writer

WINSTON-SALEM — Paced by the pin-point, record-setting passing of quarterback Jay Venuto, Wake Forest won its third straight game of the year, downing East Carolina University, 23-20.

It was the third straight setback for the Pirates, a feat not matched during the Pat Dye era. It was last in 1971 that the Pirates dropped three straight, as Sonny Randle opened his career as the ECU coach.

The Deacons scored only two touchdowns in the game, a one-yarder by tailback James McDougald and a 27-yard Venuto pass to Wayne Baumgardner, but the dart-like passing of the quarterback helped to set up three field goals, two by Phil Denfield, of 42 and 40 yards, plus a 30-yarder by Frank Harnisch, who also kicked both PATS.

All three of the Pirate touchdowns were scored by Anthony Collins, on runs of 1, 7 and 72 yards. Bill Lam kicked two PATS, while another was spoiled by a bad snap.

For Wake, the 3-0 start was their best opening since 1951.

Venuto, on target nearly every time, hit on 28 of 33 passes for 334 yards. Both the completions and the yardage were Deacon and ACC records. The previous Wake marks were 24 completions, first set by Freddie Summers in 1968, and 308 yards, also by Summers.

The 1-3 start is also the worst for Coach Dye, in his sixth year at the helm of the Pirate team.

The win also avenged the 1963 loss suffered by the Deacons in the only other meeting between the two schools ECU won that one, 20-10.

Pat Dye still had praise for his team, despite the loss. "Nobody quit on either team. I can accept this loss easier than the one last week (to Duke). Our kids came back and fought for this one."

Dye said the Pirates ran into "a guy with a hot hand" in Venuto. "I knew they (Wake) had a good football team, but I'm proud of them. They have nothing to be ashamed of. Wake Forest can compete with anyone," he added.

The coach pointed out that it was difficult to get to Venuto, something the Pirates succeeded in only once.

"We gave him too much time to pass, and he was able to dump off to the backs when we covered the deep receivers."

Dye said that one long pass hurt especially, setting up one of the Deacons touchdowns. Venuto later said the play had been put into the play book after the Duke game. "It was the same play Duke used against them," he said.

ECU's Charlie Carter, commenting on the Wake offense, said that Venuto's movement in the backfield caused a lot of problems, giving the receivers a chance to get away from the defenders. "He's the best I've seen. He's better than (Tom) Rozantz (former William & Mary quarterback). We also had some problems with our (defensive) calls in the secondary."

The first half looked like a horse race up and down the field, with the Deacons enjoying the edge, despite the 13-13 halftime tie.

Only once were the Pirates really able to stop the Deacs, who scored one touchdown and two field goals, and just missed on another late in the half.

East Carolina crossed midfield on its first possession, but that drive died at the 44, and Wake started its first scoring drive from the 13.

Lye Takes Lead With 67

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Mark Lye delivered a 5-under-par 67 for a large, loud gallery of hometown fans Saturday and tied Lon Hinkle for the third-round lead in Napa's $300,000 pro golf tournament.

Lye, a 26-year-old graduate of Napa High School, began the day four strokes off the lead and hooked his first tee shot badly. But he recovered for a par on the first hole and went without a bogey in posting the score which put him in contention for his first title in three years as a player on the PGA tour.

"I duck-hooked that first shot but then hit about an 80-yard wedge to within 10 feet of the pin. I got my par, birdied the next hole and was on my way," said Lye.

He was in the lead until Hinkle, one of his playing partners on the Silverado Country Club North course, birdied the final hole for a 70 and a three-round total matching Lye's 205.

Lou Graham, the second-round leader, was one stroke behind Lye and Hinkle after taking a 72 Saturday.

There were nine other golfers within five strokes of the lead as the tournament, the Anheuser-Busch Classic, headed into its final day.

Bob Gilder had a 70 Saturday for a 207 total. Tim Simpson matched Lye's 67, the best score of the round, and was at 208 with Buick Open champ John Fought and Buddy Gardner.

Bobby Wadkins, who shared the first-round lead with Lye, was at 209 with Napa resident Rod Funseth. Three men were tied at 210.

The 6,807-yard course seemed to be playing tougher than on the previous rounds despite ideal weather, with the temperature about 80.

"The greens were twice as hard as they played the first two days," said Lye, who admitted his 13 years of playing the course were helping his chances.

"But you could know every blade of grass, and if you weren't playing well, it wouldn't help that much," he added.

Rebuilt Birds Defy Forecasts, Win 1st East Title Since 1974

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles, rebuilt by the front office and rejuvenated by frenzied fans, are American League East champions again after a four-year drought.

Picked by many forecasters to finish fourth in the division behind New York, Boston and Milwaukee, the Orioles got off to a 3-8 start before settling down.

Despite the losing the services for a month or more of pitchers Jim Palmer and Scott McGregor, who combined for 36 victories in 1978, and third baseman Doug DeCinces, the club's home run leader with 28 last season, Baltimore was not to be denied.

Known in the past for their September stretch drives, the Orioles this time posted a 23-6 record in June while putting together a nine-game winning streak.

After losing five straight in July, which reduced their lead to 1½ games, they reeled over seven victories in a row — and matched that streak again in early September.

Only three players — Palmer, center fielder Al Bumbry and shortstop Mark Belanger — remain from the 1974 Baltimore team which won its fifth division title in six years.

Shortly thereafter, they suffered heavy losses in the re-entry draft, including Reggie Jackson, Bobby Grich, Wayne Garland, Ross Grimsley and Dick Drago.

But they still managed to average 91 victories a year over the next four seasons, while infusing the roster with talented farm system youngsters and veterans acquired in trades.

Three of this season's outstanding performers, outfielders Ken Singleton and Gary Roenicke, and relief pitcher Don Stanhouse, came to Baltimore in two separate deals with the Montreal Expos.

Singleton, voted the most valuable Oriole in two of his four previous years with the club, made a bid to be the league's Most Valuable Player as he set career highs with 35 homers and 110 RBIs.

Roenicke, who had only 148 major league at bats, was generally overlooked when Baltimore searched for outfield talent last winter. But he hit 25 homers, far exceeding his best minor league total, while pushing second baseman Rich Dauer, designated hitter Lee May and first baseman Eddie Murray for most game-winning hits.

Stanhouse, an off-the-field flake who turns serious on the mound, posted a 7-3 record with 20 saves. He headed a bullpen which was strengthened considerably when the Orioles failed in efforts to trade lefty Tippy Martinez, 10-2.

Mike Flanagan took up the slack for Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner who missed at least 14 starts because of various ailments, and loomed as the next Cy Young winner with a 22-8 record.

Dennis Martinez, the league leader in innings pitched and complete games, won 15 games. McGregor recovered from his arm miseries to win 12, and Steve Stone, acquired through the re-entry draft, won 11.

First baseman Eddie Murray, the only player other than Singleton to appear in every game, continued his consistency as he closed in on the 27 homers he had hit in each of two previous major league seasons.

The Orioles also got clutch hitting from Dauer, May, and part-time outfielders John Lowenstein and Pat Kelly, and fine receiving by catchers Rick Dempsey and Dave Skaggs.

Crimson Tide Races Past Baylor, 45-0

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Second-ranked Alabama let Baylor cross midfield just once in the first three periods while Steadman Shelly and Major Ogilvie keyed a 431-yard ground assault as the Crimson Tide cruised to a 45-0 victory Saturday night.

Alabama's super-quick defense, led by end E.J. Junior, limited the Bears to 74 yards in total offense until the fourth quarter while intercepting five passes, recovering two fumbles and blocking a punt to set up the first of Alan McElroy's three field goals.

Shelly bolted 54 yards to set up Ogilvie's 1-yard touchdown run early in the second period for a 14-0 halftime lead and second-string quarterback Don Jacobs took the Tide on drives of 56 and 61 yards in the second half, with sophomore Mark Nix scoring on runs of 2 and 4 yards just three minutes apart.

Alabama broke the game open with four touchdowns in the final period. The last two came on a 1-yard run by Joe Jones after the fifth interception and a 10-yard smash by John Hill with just 22 seconds to play. Alan Gray, the Tide's No. 3 quarterback, was at the controls for the last two touchdowns.

The triumph enabled Alabama to retain a share of the nation's longest college football winning streak. The Crimson Tide and top-rated Southern California have won 11 consecutive games.

Alabama is 2-0 this season while Baylor dropped to 2-1 after winning its first two games for the first time in 14 years. The Bears have not been 3-0 since 1960.

Orioles Clinch, Angels Widen Lead

By The Associated Press
The Baltimore Orioles clinched the American League East Division title Saturday when the second-place Milwaukee Brewers lost a 6-3 decision to the Minnesota Twins. The Brewers are now 10½ games behind the Orioles with eight games to play. Baltimore has 11 games left, including Saturday night's double-header against the Cleveland Indians. The California Angels, meanwhile, opened ground in the AL West by beating the Texas Rangers 3-1 while the Kansas City Royals were losing 2-0 to the Oakland A's. The results left the pace-setting Angels three games in front of the Royals. Hosken Powell and Rob Wilfong each knocked in two runs in Minnesota's second straight victory over the Brewers. Mike Marshall saved Roger Erickson's third victory with his 32nd save of the season.

Bobby Grich led off the seventh inning with his 29th home run and Chris Knapp hurled a five-hitter to pace California's victory. Matt Keough scattered seven hits to lead Oakland past Kansas City. The victory was only the second of the season for Keough, who had lost 14 straight games at one point.

The Pirates opened the scoring with a run in the second inning off George Riley, 0-1, who made his first major-league start. Bill Madlock led off with a single, went to third on an infield hit by Steve Nicosia and scored when Garner bunted and Riley threw late to the plate. They chased Riley in the fifth when they scored two more runs. Garner started the inning with a single off Riley's leg and moved up on Kison's sacrifice bunt. After Omar Moreno was hit by a pitch, Tim Foli's single scored Garner and sent Moreno to second. Dave Geisel relieved Riley and got Dave Parker to ground to shortstop Ivan DeJesus. He threw to second baseman Mick Kelleher for the force out, but the relay to first went wild and Moreno scored on the error. Madlock connected for his 14th home run, a solo shot off Dick Tidrow in the ninth. Bill Buckner's 14th homer of the season leading off the seventh broke Kison's shutout and Tekulve came on after Kelleher's two-out double later in the inning. Pinch hitter Ken Henderson grounded out to end the threat. Until then, the only hits off Kison, 11-7, were a one-out single by Kelleher in the third and a single by Larry Bittner in the fourth when Chicago loaded the bases but couldn't score.

Young Leads By 3

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (UPI) — Donna Caponi Young's third consecutive sub-par round, a 3-under-par 70, enabled her to open a three-stroke lead Saturday over rookie Cathy Sherk and veteran Sandra Post at the conclusion of the third round of the $100,000 Kansas City LPGA Classic.

Young, bidding to win her first tournament since the LPGA Championship and $4,000 short of becoming the eighth player on the tour to surpass $100,000 in winnings this year, saw a chance for a four-shot lead disappear when she three-putted the 18th hole from 15 feet for the only bogie of her round.

"I hit a good putt," said Young. "There was just no way it could stay out. It rolled all the way around the hole."

Young's 70, following an opening-round 72 and a secondround 69 that gave her a share of the lead at 5-under-par, broke the deadlock with Sherk and Barbara Moxness, who struggled to a 2-over-par 75 to drop five shots off the pace.

"I was pleased with today's round," said Young. "I felt this year that I played as well or better than years when I've won three of four tournaments. But I just haven't won."

The 34-year-old veteran, who has won 14 tournaments in her 14 years on the tour, moved into the lead by herself with birdies on the third, seventh, 11th and 12th holes.

TORONTO (AP) — Oscar Gamble hit a pair of homers, Jerry Narron powered a three-run shot and Reggie Jackson added a solo homer, leading the New York Yankees to a 7-4 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

Luis Tiant, 12-8, pitched six innings of three-hit ball for the victory. Rich Gossage picked up his 16th save, coming on the seventh inning with the tying run at the plate and no out and retiring the side.

Southern Cal Blitzes Gophers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern Cal tailback Charles White ran for 153 yards and two touchdowns early in the game Saturday as the Trojans lived up to their No. 1 national college football ranking with a 48-14 rout of Minnesota.

White, like most of the USC starters, played only the first quarter and only a few minutes of the second as the Trojans ran up a 21-0 lead in the opening period, then extended it to 35-0 early in the second.

Playing for the first time since he went out with a shoulder injury against Texas Tech two weeks ago, White carried just 10 times during his brief stint against the Gophers and scored on one spectacular 68-yard jaunt and a 10-yard dash as USC, 3-0, tallied five of the first six times it had possession.

The Trojans, who amassed 335 yards in the first half, got their first score when fullback Marcus Allen capped an 82-yard march with the opening kickoff by running four yards.

Quarterback Paul McDonald hit tight end Hoby Brenner with a 17-yard scoring strike later in the quarter, then White unleashed his long run, cutting back across the grain before outracing a host of Minnesota defenders.

Florida's touchdown on an interception and Lance Skelton setting up Tech's score with a blocked punt.

With 13 seconds left in the game, a 39-yard field goal try by Florida's Brian Clark was partially blocked by Lawrence Lowe and fell short to the right.

Golden romped 49 yards untouched in the first quarter after picking off a pass by Mike Kelley.

Skelton covered Bill Conover's punt at the Florida 8 yard line. Two plays later, Freshman Ronny Cone burst off right tackle for a four-yard touchdown run early in the third period.

and Walker picked it off and rambled untouched 33 yards for the score. But Butch Stocking's extra point try was wide.

Texas Tech 14 Arizona 14

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Texas Tech cornerback Willie Stephens intercepted an Arizona pass with three seconds on the clock to stop a final drive as the Red Raiders tied the Aggies 14-14 in college football Saturday.

Both teams were hampered offensively in the second half by penalties and turnovers after the game was tied early in the third quarter when Tech quarterback Ron Reeves passed to split end Howie Lewis for a 23-yard scoring play.

Arizona defender Mar Streeter almost intercepted the ball but it bounced into Lewis' hands and he ran in for the touchdown.

Smith Leads Wolfpack Past West Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Quarterback Scott Smith scored three second-half touchdowns on short runs to break open a close game and lead 19th-ranked North Carolina State to a 38-14 victory Saturday over West Virginia.

The 6-foot, 180-pound senior kept alive two of those scoring drives with three critical third down passes, including a 22-yard completion to wide receiver Mike Quick late in the third quarter.

For the day, Smith completed 12 of 20 passes for 120 yards. West Virginia, which lost its third consecutive game of the season and 17th in its last 20 starts, had played the Wolfpack to a standstill in the first half, trailing 17-14.

But State, with workhorse running back Dwight Sullivan pounding out yardage, made a hasty turnaround. Smith scored a third-quarter touchdown from three yards out and then added scoring runs of 4 yards and 1 yard early in the fourth period. The Wolfpack, winning its third straight game without a loss, broke out to a 14-0 lead in the first nine minutes of the game.

Running back Billy Ray Vickers ran untouched up the middle for a 21-yard score following an eight-play, 68-yard drive after the opening kickoff. The second N.C. State touchdown came after WVU junior Robert Alexander fumbled on the Mountaineers second possession. State took over on WVU's 31-yard line and, four plays later, Sullivan went over from 4 yards out.

gia quarterback Buck Belue raced 21 yards with nine seconds to play to avoid a shutout.

Maryland 35 Miss. St. 14

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Dale Castro kicked five field goals, one off the NCAA record, and Charlie Wysocki ran for two touchdowns, one a 73-yard dash on the third play of the third quarter, leading unbeaten Maryland to a 35-14 victory over Mississippi State Saturday.

Castro booted a 45-yarder after Mississippi State, 0-2, won the toss and elected to kick off, then added kicks of 29, 18 and 32 during a 3:40 span of the second period when the Bulldogs fumbled and lost two consecutive kicks. The four field goals tied an NCAA record for consecutive field goals.

A 42-yarder by Castro late in the fourth quarter set a Maryland one-game record and gave the junior 10 in a row this season, one shy of the NCAA's record for consecutive field goals.

Wysocki, who scored a 10-yard run late in the second quarter, left the game after his long TD jaunt. He gained 139 yards on 20 carries, giving him 478 yards in Maryland's three victories this season.

The other score for the Terps came on a 42-yard run by Lyle Peck late in the third period. It was the first collegiate carry for Peck after one season at linebacker.

Mississippi State, which fumbled four kickoffs and had two players collide on another attempt, scored on a one-yard run by Donald Ray King midway through the final period and a 92-yard kickoff return by James Jones with 68 seconds remaining.

Virginia 19 VMI 0

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Spectacular scoring runs by junior running back Greg Taylor and sophomore safety Pat Chester sparked Virginia's Cavaliers to a 19-0 football victory Saturday over Virginia Military's Keydets.

With the game barely more than a minute old, Taylor took a pitchout, hit off right tackle and raced 72 yards for his fifth touchdown of the season. Then, with 5:58 left in the half, Chester — aided by Bryan Shumock's key block — returned a punt 56 yards for a score.

Those touchdowns gave Virginia a 14-0 halftime advantage, and the Cavaliers added five points in the third quarter as they upped their record to 2-1 and beat VMI for the first time in four years.

Both victories have been shutouts, the first time since 1968 Virginia has blanked two opponents in the same season and the first time since 1952 it has held two foes scoreless at home in the same season.

Spikers Win 1, Lose 2

WILLIAMSBURG — The East Carolina volleyball team won one match and lost two others in a round robin tournament held at William and Mary yesterday.

The Pirates defeated the Indians 5-15, 15-13 before losing to N.C. State, 15-9, 15-9 and Virginia Commonwealth, 15-10, 15-9.

East Carolina is now 1-3.

Clemson 12 Georgia 7

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Lester Brown slammed a half-yard for a touchdown for the Clemson Tigers, who spilled Georgia 12-7, in a bruising interconference football game Saturday.

Brown carried the ball the last four plays that picked up the final 10 yards of a 70-yard drive midway through the third period. The assault was entirely on the ground with fullback senior Tracy Perry picking up the largest chunk with a 23-yard jaunt.

Clemson's Obed Ariri booted a 24-yard field goal and the Tiger defense spilled Bulldog quarterback Jeff Pyburn in the end zone for a safety, both in the fourth period.

The victory was the 400th for the Tigers of the Atlantic Coast Conference since they fielded a football team in the 19th century and pushed their record to 2-1. Georgia of the Southeast Conference dropped to 0-2.

Clemson pounded the Georgia line throughout the second half and early in the fourth period drove 79 yards to the Bulldog 1. Brown's dive for the touchdown was stopped short, however.

Two plays later the stonewall Clemson defense dropped Pyburn behind the goal line. Georgia

Purdue Rallies To Beat Notre Dame, 28-22

WEST LFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Mark Herrmann passed for two touchdowns and Wally Jones ran for two more Saturday to lead around Purdue to a 28-22 victory over fifth-ranked Notre Dame.

Purdue rallied from a two-touchdown deficit to score its first home victory over the Irish in this classic intrastate game in 10 years and its first since 1974, before the largest crowd ever to see a football game in Indiana.

With 70,567 fans looking on, Purdue grabbed a 21-20 lead at the end of the third period on Jones' second touchdown, a 2-yard run, and John Seibel's conversion and the Boilermakers added an insurance touchdown on a 6-yard pass from Herrmann to Bart Burrell midway through the final period.

Herrmann, who also passed for Purdue's first touchdown, a 15-yard strike to Dave Young, completed 14 of 20 aerials for 158 yards. He was intercepted once.

Jones capped an 80-yard drive in the third period with a 1-yard touchdown run set up by Herrmann passes. Jones' second tally was set up by Marcus McKinnie, who intercepted a Tim Koegel pass, returning the ball 27 yards to the Notre Dame 8.

Notre Dame, which whipped Michigan in its opener last week, used three quarterbacks in place of the injured Rusty Lisch.

Koegel started and passed four yards to Nick Vehr for Notre Dame's second touchdown in the third period, giving the Irish a 20-7 lead. In the first stanza, the Irish converted a fake field goal attempt into a 17-yard touchdown toss from Greg Knafele to Dean Masztaf. Also for Notre Dame, Chuck Male booted two second-period field goals from 40 and 32 yards.

The Purdue defense became so aroused following McKinnie's pass interception in the third period that the only Irish points thereafter were scored on a safety when Purdue kicker Joe Linville was tackled in the Purdue end zone after failing to field a high snap from center.

Nebraska 24 Iowa 21

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — Nebraska's Dean Sukup booted a 30-yard field goal with 5:53 left in the fourth period Saturday to give the seventh-ranked Cornhuskers an error-plagued 24-21 non-conference victory over Iowa. The Cornhuskers had six fumbles and lost five, three of them by premier running back I.M. Hipp. Hipp totaled 74 yards in the game on 16 carries. Teammate Jarvis Redwine was the game's leading rusher with 89 yards on 12 carries.

Iowa, 0-3, was an 18-point underdog but almost upset Nebraska. The score was 7-7 at halftime and Iowa led 21-14 in the third quarter. But, the Hawkeyes ran out of gas.

Iowa defensive end Bryan Skradis recovered Hipp's first fumble on Nebraska's initial possession to setup the Hawkeyes' first score as Dean McKillup ran three yards for the touchdown.

Hipp fumbled again on the Cornhuskers' next possession and former Nebraska prep Jim Molni recovered, setting up Iowa's next scoring attempt. But, the Hawkeyes were forced to try for a 50-yard field goal by Waterloo freshman Reggie Roby, which he missed.

Iowa ended the first quarter with a 7-0 lead and Nebraska was unable to score until late in the second quarter. Quarterback Jeff Quinn broke through the Hawkeyes' defensive line after two previous attempts from the 1-yard line for a touchdown with 2:12 left in the half.

Mich. St. 24 Miami (0) 21

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Quarterback Bert Vaughn's 6-yard pass to tight end Mark Brammer with 1:25 to go in the game Saturday allowed eighth-ranked Michigan State to pull out a 24-21 victory over surprising Miami of Ohio.

The game-winning touchdown followed a dramatic 27-yard run by tailback Derek Hughes, who was stopped on the 1-yard line by a tough Miami defense.

The Redskins had taken the lead, 21-17, early in the final period when halfback Mark Hunter scored from three yards out.

The Spartans took a 17-0 lead at the half, then sat back as the Redskins charged for three touchdowns in the final two periods.

Both teams were scoreless in the first quarter. MSU scored early in the second period on tailback Steve Smith's 14-yard touchdown run with 4:25 seconds gone.

Kicker Rich Schario, who muffed his first two attempts, added a field goal at 7:58 of the period to make it 10-0 for the Spartans.

Fullback Lonnie Middleton booted 1 yard up the middle at 14:17 for Michigan State's second touchdown of the

Indiana 18 Kentucky 10

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana grabbed a 15-0 halftime lead Saturday in a non-conference football game with Kentucky, then managed to hang on for an 18-10 win over the Wildcats.

The Hoosiers, under Coach Lee Corso, dominated all major statistics in picking up their third straight victory. They outdistanced Kentucky in the air 122 yards to 33 and on the ground 199-149.

IU's two touchdowns came in the second quarter, one on a 10-yard pass to Bill Fischel from junior quarterback Tim Clifford and the other on a 43-yard run down the left side by wingback Al Darring, Clifford, who completed 12 of 17 pass attempts, also nailed Brett DeVault for the two-point conversion after Darring's touchdown.

Kentucky tried to come back in the second half because of the intense rivalry in the series, which dates back to 1893. The best it could manage was a 43-yard fieldgoal by Rick Strein, but in the opening minutes of the final period, Shawn Donigan plunged over from the one for the Wildcats' only touchdown.

Strein's kick made the game 15-10, but the Hoosier defense was able to hold the Wildcats the rest of the game and Steve Straub kicked a 27-yard fieldgoal to put the game out of reach in the final minutes, 18-10.

Starting quarterback J.C. Watts ran 26 yards for the Sooners' first touchdown, reserve fullback Stanley Wilson scored on a 12-yard run, backup left halfback Jaz McKim ran three yards for a touchdown.

Reserve quarterback Kelly Phelps scored with a 4-yard run late in the final period, and freshman fullback Weldon Ledbetter went across from the 1-yard line as the final gun sounded.

A Lane Stadium crowd of 36,800 watched in sunny weather as Tech used a powerful rushing attack to roll up its third straight triumph. It was the first time the Gobblers have started a year 3-0 since 1967.

Lawrence, a freshman, gained 103 yards on 20 carries while scoring twice. Lewis finished with 108 yards on 13 carries. Lewis, a senior, had all but 2 yards of his total in the first half before being slightly shaken up on a tackle.

Indiana 18 Kentucky 10

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana grabbed a 15-0 halftime lead Saturday in a non-conference football game with Kentucky, then managed to hang on for an 18-10 win over the Wildcats.

The Hoosiers, under Coach Lee Corso, dominated all major statistics in picking up their third straight victory. They outdistanced Kentucky in the air 122 yards to 33 and on the ground 199-149.

IU's two touchdowns came in the second quarter, one on a 10-yard pass to Bill Fischel from junior quarterback Tim Clifford and the other on a 43-yard run down the left side by wingback Al Darring, Clifford, who completed 12 of 17 pass attempts, also nailed Brett DeVault for the two-point conversion after Darring's touchdown.

Kentucky tried to come back in the second half because of the intense rivalry in the series, which dates back to 1893. The best it could manage was a 43-yard fieldgoal by Rick Strein, but in the opening minutes of the final period, Shawn Donigan plunged over from the one for the Wildcats' only touchdown.

Strein's kick made the game 15-10, but the Hoosier defense was able to hold the Wildcats the rest of the game and Steve Straub kicked a 27-yard fieldgoal to put the game out of reach in the final minutes, 18-10.

Starting quarterback J.C. Watts ran 26 yards for the Sooners' first touchdown, reserve fullback Stanley Wilson scored on a 12-yard run, backup left halfback Jaz McKim ran three yards for a touchdown.

Reserve quarterback Kelly Phelps scored with a 4-yard run late in the final period, and freshman fullback Weldon Ledbetter went across from the 1-yard line as the final gun sounded.

Tenn. Chat. 45 Furman 14

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Joe Burke raced 88 yards for a gamebreaker touchdown in the third quarter as the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga stomped Furman 45-14 in a Southern Conference football contest Saturday.

Burke caught a Steve Woods pass with 5:51 left in the third quarter to put the game out of reach 31-14 for the Paladins.

The Moccasins' effort was aided by 11 Furman turnovers, which tied a league and school record. The Paladins were guilty of seven fumbles and four interceptions.

Gwain Durden rushed 163 yards and scored two touchdowns for the Moccasins on two 32-yard runs. His first score gave Tennessee a lead it never relinquished.

Furman pulled within three late in the first half on a 10-yard run by backup quarterback Tim Sorrels, making it 10-7. But two Moccasin touchdowns in 15 seconds pushed the score to 24-7.

UCLA 37 Wisconsin 12

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — Reserve running back Anthony Edgar ran 39 times for 168 yards and a touchdown Saturday to lead UCLA to a 37-12 victory over Wisconsin.

Bruin kicker Peter Boermeester kicked field goals of 27, 32 and 37 yards to set a UCLA career record of 25 in helping the Bruins to their second victory in three games.

The Badgers fell to 1-2 before 78,883 fans, a sellout at Camp Randall.

Edgar, playing for Freeman McNeil who was out with a groin injury and the flu, set a school rushing attempt record when the Bruins scored early in the fourth quarter on a 63-yard drive capped by a 1-yard touchdown run by quarterback Rick Bashore with 9:03 left in the game.

Edgar ran six times for 22 yards on the drive, which also included a 40-yard pass from

Missouri 33 Ole Miss 7

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Quarterback Phil Bradley passed for one touchdown and scored another at he revived ninth-ranked Missouri in the second half as the Tigers demolished Mississippi's Rebels 33-7 in a regionally televised college football battle Saturday.

Missouri, trailing 7-3 at intermission after two flat quarters, caught fire after recovering a Rebel fumble on the Ole Miss 26-yard line as the third period opened.

They went on to register three touchdowns before Mississippi could recover.

That fumble recovery by defensive back Eric Wright may have been the turning point because the Tigers never let up after that.

Running back Gerry Ellis smashed the final 11 yards for the first Missouri touchdown. Four minutes later running back James Wilder swept right end on a 14-yard scoring burst, and it was over for Ole Miss.

The Rebels, with the heroics of quarterback John Fourcade, dominated the first half, keeping Missouri off balance and forcing the Tiger defense to respect him on every play.

However, those two quick scorat the opening of the third quarter smothered the Rebel offensive spark and Mississippi struggled the rest of the way.

Bradley hit end Ken Blair on a 69-yard touchdown pass play before the third quarter ended, putting the game beyond the hopes of the most ardent Rebel fans.

Bradley added a nine-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, and kicking specialist Jeff Brockhaus, who had a 40-yard field goal the first period, added a 27-yarder in the fourth.

Syracuse 54 N.Western 21

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Bill Hurley, accounting for 248 yards, scored two touchdowns and passed for another Saturday to lead Syracuse to a 54-21 victory over Northwestern in an inter-sectional football game.

Hurley rushed for 156 yards in 25 carries and completed five of 13 passes for 92 yards before leaving the game in the third quarter with Syracuse leading 40-13.

Michigan 28 Kansas 7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan tailback Stan Edwards scored on touchdown runs of 3 and 2 yards as the 11th-ranked Wolverines claimed a 28-7 nonconference college football victory over stubborn Kansas Saturday.

Michigan, coming off last week's 12-10 upset loss to Notre Dame, was sluggish in the early going and the crowd of 103,698 — largest ever to see Kansas perform — was stunned 1:29 into the second quarter when Kansas tied the heavily favored Wolverines 7-7.

Michigan was leading 7-0 on Edwards' first-period touchdown when Kansas safety Leroy Irvin gathered in a Bryan Virgil punt on his own 40, cut right and raced untouched down the sideline for the touchdown.

ed downfield, finally getting a first down on the 18. Venuto passes accounted for 62 of the 69 yards. But the Pirate defense firmed at the 18, and on fourth down, Harnisch kicked a 30-yard field goal for a 3-0 lead with 6:46 left in the first period.

After forcing a Pirate punt, Wake again drove, starting at its own 44. Again Venuto was the key, hitting passes for 29 yards as the Deacs reached the 25 and were again forced to try a field goal. Denfield, missing his first try, made it good from 42 yards out with 2:30 left. Wake then led, 6-0.

The Pirates finally got cranked up, moving 72 yards in 11 plays for the tying score. Leander Green hit Vern Davenport for 14 yards for a first down at the ECU 40, and went to Billy Ray Washington for 16 to the Wake 42. Finally, from the 37, Sam Harrell broke up the middle, slipped a tackle and sprinted down to the one before George Ervin pushed him out of bounds. Collins went over from there on the second play, following a lead by Theodore Sutton, for the score.

But on the PAT try, a bad snap forced Green to run for it, and he failed to get away a pass attempt, leaving it tied at 6-6 with 12:43 left in the half.

Wake again drove the field, moving from its own 32 to score its only touchdown of the first half. Again it was Venuto's passing that moved them along, as he passed for 36 yards. Then, on third and one from the 13, McDougald passed to Michael Mullen, who fell down, recovered and made the catch at the one. McDougald cracked over on the second play, and Harnisch's kick made it 13-6 with 7:29 left.

After being forced to punt, the Pirates got a brake when Ervin fumbled and James Freeman recovered at the 33. Stalled at the 24, Green kept for 12 yards on fourth down to keep the drive alive. Two plays later, from the seven, Collins took a quick pitch around the right end for the score. Lamm's kick knotted it at 13-13 with 3:38 left.

For the only time in the half, Wake was forced to punt on the next series, only to get it back on a Pirate punt with 31 seconds left. Wake drove from its own 37 to the Pirate 29 on four Venuto passes, where, with eight seconds left, Denfield was wide right on his 46-yard attempt.

While both teams had the ball across midfield in the third period, it was Wake again taking the lead late in the period.

The Pirates, after losing a fumble at their 24, held on fourth and inches at the 15, then Rodney Allen booted a career best 77-yard punt to the Wake end zone.

But on the first play, Venuto hit Kenny Duckett over the middle all alone for a 53-yard gain to the 27 of the Pirates. Both teams picked up five-yard penalties before Venuto again went to the air, finding Baumgardner all alone in the end zone for the score. Harnisch's kick upped the lead to 20-13 with 1:44 left in the quarter.

Midway through the final period, the Pirates provided their own brand of fireworks, scoring in just two plays from 35 yards out. After a Wake punt, the Pirates were penalized back to the 15, but Greene got them out of the hole to the 28 on a keeper to the right.

On the next play, Greene executed a perfect option pass around the right side, and Collins raced down the sidelines, getting a final block from Washington to go 72 yards for the score. Lamm's kick knotted it once more with 3:40 left, 20-20.

Wake came right back with the clinching drive, moving for a 40-yard Denfield field goal with 6:03 left. Venuto helped the drive, which started at the 13, with three completions for 34 yards plus a 15-yard pass for roughing the kicker. The drive stalled inside the ECU 23, and Denfield's kick made it 23-20.

The Pirates held McDougald to only 63 yards, but with Venuto's passing, lot of running wasn't necessary. Collins led the Pirates with 132 yards rushing on just eight carries. Green finished hitting 10 of 14 passes for 108 yards.

Shavers To Meet Holms For Title

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Earnie Shavers reached his 35th birthday recently while training in for another "last chance" against Larry Holmes next Friday night in this desert oasis for gamblers.

"In the heavyweight picture all you need is one good fight," said Shavers, whose career as a contender looked like it was finished on several occasions. "One good fight and you're back the picture."

But it is doubtful that Sha-vers can get back into the picture if he loses to Holmes in his bid for the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship. The card that also features a WBC super bantamweight title defense by Wilfredo Gomez and appearances by welterweight stars Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran.

The show at Caesars Palace will be televised live by ABC from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m., EDT.

Shavers, who lost a title decision to the now-retired Muhammad Ali Sept. 29, 1977, earned a second championship shot by knocking out Ken Norton in the first round last March 23. Should he win, he would be the second oldest heavyweight champion ever. Jersey Joe Walcott was 37 when he knocked out Ezzard Charles to win the title in his fifth try July 18, 1951.

"I'll knock him out," said Shavers, who says he is finally free of managerial problems. He is now managed by Frank Luca, who said Shavers bought out ex-manager Blackie Genaro for $40,000 after the Norton fight. Another ex-manager is Don King, who is promoting Shavers' second championship chance.

Shavers says he knows he won't be fighting the same Larry Holmes who looked unimpressive in stopping unheralded Mike Weaver in 12 rounds last June 22. But he also says Holmes won't be fighting the same Shavers he easily outpointed in 12 rounds March 25, 1978. That fight earned Holmes his split-decision, title-winning shot against Norton. This time, said Shavers, he is in top conditions physically and mentally.

The 29-year-old unbeaten Holmes, who has been training here for five weeks, agrees that Shavers will see a different Holmes. But he expects the same Shavers he fought before. "Once you are molded, it's hard to break the mold," said Holmes, adding that Shavers is being deceived by his easy victory over Norton.

"Earnie has to realize Ken Norton was finished after he fought me," said Holmes, who won the title from Norton after 15 tough rounds in Las Vegas June 9, 1978. Since then, Holmes has defended with easy seventh-round knockouts over Alfredo Evangelista and Ossie Ocasio and a tough 12th-round knockout of Weaver.

"Let me tell you, Weaver is a better fighter than Shavers," said Holmes, admitting he didn't take Weaver seriously. "Weaver pulls away from you, he bobs and weaves. Shavers don't pull away. He's a face fighter. He gets hit with jabs, hooks and uppercuts.

"I'm still a boxer, I don't feel anyone on this planet can take me out."

Shavers has scored 56 knockouts in posting a 58-7-1 record. But Holmes has never been down in an all-winning pro career of 31 fights. And 22 of his opponents failed to go the distance although he is not the power-puncher Shavers is, especially in the early rounds.

"Earnie will receive in excess of $300,000," said Lucas. Shavers' purse for the Ali fight was $300,000.

Holmes said he is guaranteed $2.5 million. He fought Weaver for a percentage of all revenues, and now says "Don King paid me $450,000."

The 22-year-old Gomez, of Puerto Rico, will fight Carlos Mendoza of Panama in his ninth defense of the super bantamweight champions. The former world amateur champion, who turned pro with a six-round draw in 1974 and has knocked out all 25 opponents since, won the 122-pound class title by knocking out Dong Kyun-Yum of South Korea in 12 rounds May 21, 1977. He would like to challenge Danny "Little Red" Lopez for the WBC featherweight (126 pounds) title.

Mendoza has a 56-11-2 pro record dating back to 1968. He knocked out Dong in the fifth round Nov. 6, 1977 but has lost to most of the "big name" fighters he has met.

The 23-year-old Leonard, already signed to fight for the WBC 147-pound title against Wilfredo Gomez in Las Vegas, Dec. 1, will fight world-rated Andy Price. Duran, 28, the WBC's No. 1-ranked welterweight who dominated the lightweight (135-pound) division from 1972 until he gave up the title this year, will fight Zefirino Gonzalez.

Leonard, of Palmer Park, Md., has won all 24 of his fights, 15 by knockout, since turning pro in 1977 after winning the light welterweight gold medal in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

Price, 25, of Los Angeles is the WBC's No. 7 contender. He has a 32-5-3 record, with his biggest wins being 10-round decisions over Pipino Cuevas before he won the World Boxing Association welterweight title and Carlos Palomino before he became WBC welter champ. But he is not puncher, having 10 knockouts, and he fought only once in 1978 and just three times last year.

Duran is coming off a one-sided 10-round decision over former champion Palomino on the Holmes-Weaver Card. That was his 66th win, 53 of them by knockout, against one loss.

The 23-year-old Gonzalez, of Los Angeles, an extremely tall welterweight at 6-feet, has won eight straight fights and has a 19-2-1 record, with five knockouts.

In a scheduled 10-round heavyweight bout, Jimmy Young, 29, of Philadelphia, the No. 6 WBC challenger, will meet Michale "Dynamite" Dokes, 21, of Akron, Ohio, 14-0-0, with knockouts.

Davidson 16 Lafayette 13

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson scored with 2:45 to play on a 2-yard run by half-back Alvin Atkinson to defeat Lafayette 16-13 in a battle of unbeaten teams Saturday.

Atkinson's run kept a 45-yard drive that pushed Davidson's record to 3-0, the Wildcats best start since 1969.

Texas A&M Shocks Penn St., 27-14

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Senior Curtis Dickey gained 184 yards on 31 carries and ran for touchdowns of 69, 11 and 21 yards as winless Texas A&M upset sixth-ranked Penn State 27-14 Saturday in an intercollegiate college football game.

Penn State, which opened its season last week with a 45-10 triumph over Rutgers, took a 7-0 lead two minutes and 36 seconds into the first period on a 3-yard run by tailback Booker Moore.

But after that, the Aggies, who had lost by one point to Brigham Young and 17-7 to Baylor, took command.

Just one minute and 20 seconds later, A&M moved 80 yards on two plays to tie the game. Dickey ran for 10 and then took a pitch-out and raced 69 yards into the end zone. Freshman barefoot placekicker David Hardy converted.

After Penn State had moved from its 44 to a first down at the A&M 17 and Herb Menhardt missed a 37-yard field goal, the Texans went ahead on Dickey's 11-yard touchdown run.

The underrated A&M defense shut down the Penn State offense and carried a 14-7 lead into the dressing room at halftime.

In the third period, Texas A&M boosted its margin to 21-7 on a six-play, 56-yard drive, capped by Dickey's 21-yard romp into the end zone.

And in the final quarter, Dickey raced 33 yards to a first down at the two, from where David Brothers carried three times, finally diving into the end zone from the one for a touchdown. Hardy missed his only conversion and it was 27-7.

Penn State came back 66 yards on eight plays including five pass completions by quarterback Dayle Tate, the final eight yards to Matt Suhey for a touchdown.

Farmville Wrecks Greene Central, 40-7

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
SNOW HILL — Halfback Donald Reid rambled for four touchdowns and Farmville Central overcame nearly 200 yards in penalties to whip Greene Central Friday night, 40-7, in a key Eastern Carolina Conference matchup.

Greene Central, picked during the preseason to challenge Farmville for the conference crown, saw its chance for victory slip away when Farmville 26 first-half points, two of which were set up by Ram fumbles.

"They got ahead early," a disappointed Ram Coach Stewart Smith said. "We just couldn't overcome that."

The Jaguars, in running their record to 3-0, 2-0 in the conference, amassed over 450 yards total offense, mostly on the passing of quarterback Eugene Joyner and the running of three halfbacks, Donald Reid, Roger Joyner and Wesley Locust.

Joyner completed nine of 13 passes for 171 yards and two touchdowns, one of which was a 25 yarder to Reid. The other scoring toss was a four yarder to split end Jeffrey Tyson.

Reid scored three other touchdowns rushing and gained 78 yards on the ground, mostly on short three or four yard bursts.

Reid's running mate, Roger Joyner, rushed for 77 yards while Wesley Locust, playing mostly in the second half, led the Jaguars in rushing with 80 yards.

Despite the offensive show — Greene Central had 235 yards total offense — both coaches were shaking their heads afterwards over the officiating.

"I'm not a complainer, but the officials let it get out of hand here tonight," Smith said. "It got to the point where it was obvious and the kids were having a hard time, they were frustrated."

"I'm not taking anything away from Farmville. They've got a good ball club, but I'd like to have the game played over and have it called the way its suppose to be called," said Smith, whose team was penalized 95 yards.

"The way they called the game had a tremendous effect on the way we played," he said. "Heck, they threw him (Jeff Scott) out after they said he threw an elbow."

"That Reid kid was throwing elbows and they threw two or three 15 yarders at him, but they didn't throw him out of the game. When they're feeding you you're lunch out there, it gets old after while," Smith said.

Farmville Coach Gene Brewer, whose team was assessed 192 yards in penalties, was also perturbed over the officiating.

After a lengthy discussion by the officials, during which they went to both benches to try to explain the play, the ball was given to Farmville on the Ram 37.

Eugene Joyner hit Reid with a 36-yard toss over the middle for 36 yards, down to the one. Reid scored on the next play and Farmville led, 26-0.

Farmville threatened again midway through the quarter, one-yard, and Farmville led, 13-0, at the end of the period.

Greene Central, appearing a bit jittery following the ensuing kickoff, fumbled a handoff on its second play and Farmville recovered on the Ram 28.

Five plays later the Jaguars built their lead to 19-0 on a four-yard pass from Joyner to Tyson.

Farmville, kicking off from the Ram 45 following a personal foul on the point after, tried an inside kick, which appeared not to have traveled the necessary 10 yards before Tyson picked it up.

The Vikings only score in their first conference game of the season was a six-yard pass from quarterback Anthony Carmon to wide receiver Chris McDaniels in the first period.

From that point on the game evolved into a defensive struggle, with the Vikings being led by Daniels, who had 12 tackles, and Cooper, who added 10.

Jeff Gould and Robert Sutton were in on eight tackles while Carmon, playing corner back, was in on five individual tackles. Halfback Curtis Joyner led the driving down to the Ram one-yard line, where they fumbled to end drive.

On the first play after the recovery, Greene Central halfback Harrell Smith sprinted off left tackle, eluded two Farmville tacklers, and raced 82 yards, down to the Farmville 16.

Three plays later, wide receiver Greg Holmes hit Jerry Edwards with a 31-yard pass for the touchdown, the first of the year against Farmville. Jabo Fulghum added the point after and the Jaguars led, 26-7, at the half.

Following an exchange of fumbles early in the second half, it took Farmville just to score for the Ram 34, scoring on a 25-yard pass from Joyner to Reid.

The Jaguars' final touchdown came midway through the final period when reserved defensive back Mike Baker intercepted a Ken Johnson pass and returned it 47 yards.

The loss was the third straight for Greene Central, which is 1-3, 0-2 in the conference.

"We've got to reassess ourselves," Smith said. "We've got to get a win under our belts. Next week we play Ayden-Grifton. Last year, they beat us, 62-14, when we let the game get out of hand."

"Once we get that win, it'll be better."

Farmville Central hosts ECC foe North Pitt this Friday night.

Kickers Kicking Around In The NFL

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Nick and Steve Mike-Mayer can't kick ... about where they'll be this Sunday.

Last week at this time the Hungarian-born brothers were merely out-of-work placekickers. Now they're back in uniform — Nick with Buffalo and Steve with Baltimore. Nick will be trying to win one for the Bills Sunday against the visiting New York Jets while Steve will be trying to turn things around for the Colts when they play the Steelers in Pittsburgh.

In Sunday's other National Football League games it's Atlanta at Detroit, Green Bay at Minnesota, Houston at Cincinnati, San Diego at New England, Washington at St. Louis, Oakland at Kansas City, Chicago at Miami, Los Angeles at Tampa Bay, New Orleans at San Francisco, Philadelphia at the New York Giants and Seattle at Denver. Monday night's game is Dallas at Cleveland.

Both Tom Dempsey and Toni Linhart kicked themselves out of jobs. Dempsey, who led the Bills in scoring in 1978 with 66 points, missed a 34-yard field goal with four seconds to play against Miami and Buffalo was saddened with a 9-7 loss. He was cut on Wednesday.

Dempsey, perhaps best known for having set the NFL field goal record of 63 yards when he was with New Orleans, also has played for Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Houston in his 11-year career.

Linhart, a native of Austria whose 8-of-17 success rate in field goals last year was the worst in the league and the poorest of his six years in the league, missed three of four relatively routine field goals last Sunday, one of them an 18-yard chip shot, another a 28-yarder with one second left that enabled Cleveland to hold on to a 13-10 victory.

Despite that performance, Linhart was greeted in the locker room by club owner

Robert Irsay, who promised him a $10,000 raise "for effort," and said he expected Linhart to blossom into a much better kicker.

On Thursday, though, Coach Ted Marchibroda ignored his boss' protests and waived Linhart. Irsay remembered a dispute he had with Marchibroda three years ago, in which the coach quit and the players sided with him (the coach was rehired two days later). And with that in mind, Irsay did not overrule the coach.

Steve Mike-Mayer was San Francisco's third-round draft choice in 1975 and played with the 49ers until 1977 when he joined Detroit. In 1978 he played with New Orleans.

The Colts are one of six winless teams trying to get rid of that fat zero in the win column. The others are Detroit, New Orleans, San Francisco, Cincinnati and the New York Giants. The six unbeaten teams are Pittsburgh, Miami, Tampa Bay, Cleveland and Dallas.

While the Browns and Cowboys take their perfect records against each other on Monday night, the Saints and 49ers try to keep each other winless on Sunday. New Orleans, coached by former 49ers Coach Dick Nolan, swept last year's season series 14-7 and 24-13 after San Francisco had taken the previous eight in a row.

Chicago's Walter Payton will be trying to pad his league-leading rushing total of 441 yards at Miami's expense while rookies Ottis Anderson of St. Louis and William Andrews of Atlanta, who rushed for more than 100 yards apiece in each of their first two games, will be trying to get untracked after being held under 50 apiece last Sunday.

Ayden-Grifton Beats C.B. Aycock In OT

PIKEVILLE — Quarterback Benard Ricciarelli hit split end Timmy Edwards with a seven-yard pass in overtime to lead the Ayden-Grifton Chargers past the C.B. Aycock Golden Falcons, 13-6, in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

With the score tied 6-6 at the end of regulation, the Chargers got the first try to score, and did, when Ricciarelli hit Edwards.

The game was not over, though, until C.B. Aycock had its chance to score. Their attempt was thwarted when Edwards intercepted a desperation pass.

For three quarters the game was a defensive struggle. Neither team was able to score until the fourth period, when Ayden-Grifton's Bill Holland capped an 18-play drive with a five-yard scoring run.

C.B. Aycock came right back to knot the score, driving 67 yards on eight plays. Dave Thomas tied the game with his two-yard plunge.

In the overtime, Aycock was hit with a personal foul penalty on Ayden-Grifton's scoring pass and had to start their drive from the 25-yard line, instead of the 10. On the first play, Edwards intercepted the pass, sealing the win for the Chargers, who are now 3-1, 2-0 in the conference.

C.B. Aycock fell to 1-2, 0-2 in the league.

This week, Ayden-Grifton plays host to Greene Central while C.B. Aycock travels to Southwest Edgecombe.

Southern Nash Rolls Past North Pitt, 34-0

Halfback Kenneth Morgan rushed for 93 yards and two touchdowns as Southern Nash defeated a depleted North Pitt football team, 34-0.

Southern Nash scored its first touchdown late in the first period on a one-yard run by Anthony Crumel. Early in the second period the Firebirds added to their lead on a 26-yard run by Morgan, and led, 14-0 at the half.

Midway through the third quarter Nash scored again, this time on an 11-yard pass from Paul Morgan to George Harrison.

The Firebirds added two more scores in the final quarter, on a four-yard run by David Pope and a three-yard run by Morgan.

North Pitt, playing without 11 players who were suspended from the team this week, drops to 1-2, 0-2 in the conference. Southern Nash is 4-0, 2-0 in the league.

North Pitt travels to Farmville this Friday to take on the Jaguars while Southern Nash entertains D.H. Conley.

Waltrip On Pole At O.D. 500

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Chevrolet driver Darrell Waltrip of Franklin, Tenn., will head a group of record-breakers into Sunday's $122,000 24th annual Old Dominion 500 Grand National stock car race.

Waltrip, who leads the Grand National point standings by 83 points over Richard Petty of Randleman, N.C., earned the pole position for Sunday's 12:30 p.m., EDT, race with a record-breaking qualifying speed of 88.265 mph over the .525-mile track Friday.

The outside pole was won in a Mercury at 87.920 mph by Neil Bonnett of Hueytown, Ala., who set the previous Old Dominion 500 qualifying mark of 87.545 mph two years ago.

Four other drivers, including Petty, had speeds that were better than the record set by Bonnett as the first 20 spots in Sunday's 30-car field were filled.

Weather permitting, the last 10 spots were to be decided today in advance of the $16,000 Autumn 150, a National Championship Late Model Sportsman race.

8-Point Buck

Randy Doughtie has a reason to smile after killing this eight-point buck this past week on Swift Creek Hunting Club land. Doughtie, 22, shot the buck with a bow and arrow, which, he says, he has been using for some years. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

More from Mattamuskeet

Hunters participating in the Mattamuskeet hunts should be at the old Mattamuskeet lodge two hours before legal shooting time starts on the first day of their hunting period. There will be a short orientation by refuge personnel. Following this, the hunters will be taken to their blinds.

There will be a lottery held each morning to fill any vacant blinds if hunters fail to show up. This special lottery is open to anyone on hand, even if they didn't originally apply for a blind.

There will be a $10 fee per day per blind, which entitles the hunting party to the exclusive use of that blind and two dozen decoys, provided by the refuge.

The first North Carolina Duck Calling Championship will be held at Rankin Lake in Gastonia, Saturday, October 13.

The event, sponsored by the Gastonia Chapter of Ducks Unlimited and the Gastonia Gazette, is open to persons 14 and older. Only residents of North Carolina are eligible.

There is a $5 entry fee and trophies will be awarded for first, second and third places. A $100 certificate will also be given to the winner.

For more information, contact George Mason, 213 South Columbia St., Gastonia, N.C. 28052, or call at (704) 992-4475 or 867-4471.

The $40,000 U.S. Open King Mackerel Tournament will be held as scheduled, October 4, 5 and 6, at Southport and Oak Island, despite damage to two of the area's fishing piers.

The tournament offers a first prize of $10,000 for the largest king caught during competition. Second prize is a Jeep CJ5 Renegade and third prize is a McKee Craft boat with motor and trailer.

The entry fee is $100 per boat, with a maximum of six crew members allowed on board. There is no limit on boat size. Deadline for entry fees is September 30 at 5 p.m.

Complete information is available by writing the Chamber of Commerce, Southport, N.C., 28461, or by calling the Chamber at (919) 457-6964.

Richards Vs. Seaver: A Classic Matchup

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

It was a classic matchup of pitchers in series that probably will help determine one of the combatants in the National League playoffs.

J.R. Richards, Houston's right-handed strikeout artist, vs. Tom Seaver of Cincinnati, still one of pitching's top technicians even after losing some speed to age.

In the end, though, neither really won.

The 29-year-old Richards toiled through 11 innings. He escaped a couple of early jams, yielded just seven hits and struck out 15, equalling his career high. The Reds scored two runs off him.

Seaver, now 34, went nine innings. He scattered eight hits and allowed two runs, one unearned. He fanned five.

Neither, however, was around in the 13th inning when Bruce Bochy, who came in for Houston to catch in the ninth, slapped a run-scoring single that gave the Astros a 3-2 victory. The Astros thus closed to within 1½ games of Cincinnati in the National League West.

In the other divisional contest, Montreal picked up another half game on Pittsburgh by default. The Expos' game at Philadelphia was rained out and will be played as part of a doubleheader today. The Pirates, meanwhile, lost 2-0 to the Chicago Cubs and now trail Montreal by a full game. The Pirates and Montreal begin a four-game series Monday in Pittsburgh.

In the only other NL game Friday night, San Diego whipped Los Angeles 3-1. St. Louis at New York was rained out.

Cubs 2, Pirates 0
Lynn McGlothen, who has not signed a new contract and could become a free agent at the end of the season, tossed a four-hitter for Chicago. He limited the Pirates to three singles and a double by Dave Parker.

Rookie Scot Thompson drove in both of the Cubs' runs with a single in the fifth inning off Don Robinson, 8-7.

Padres 3, Dodgers 1
Dave Winfield drove in all three of San Diego's runs with two singles. Winfield now leads the league with 113 RBI, which broke the Padres' club record.
The home run was Winfield's 32nd.

Billy Clifton, of Box 2066, Greenville, will be awarded a citation in the North Carolina Saltwater Fishing Tournament for a white marlin weighing 58 pounds. Clifton caught the fish off Oregon Inlet on August 28.

Entry deadline is December 1, 1979. Only one entry per person and there are separate categories for professional and amateur writers. Professional writers must indicate their status for they will be judged separately.

Entries should include name, address, phone number. Mail entries to: Gladding Fishing Tall Tales Contest, P.O. Box 586, Back Bay Annex, Boston, Ma. 02117.

Royals Belt A's, 13-4, Behind Washington

By KEN RAPPOPORT

U.L. Washington was hitting home runs left and right against the Oakland A's. Literally.

Getting his first major league homers at a most opportune time for the Kansas City Royals, Washington first belted a three-run shot from the left side of the plate, then jolted another three-blast from the right.

Washington's wallops were among a bunch of big hits that helped Kansas City rout Oakland 13-4 Friday night and stay in serious contention in the American League West race.

The Royals moved to within two games of the pace-setting California Angels, who dropped a 3-1 decision to the Texas Rangers.

Meanwhile, the Baltimore

Orioles were idled by rain against Cleveland but still managed to clinch a tie for the AL East title when the second-place Milwaukee Brewers lost 3-2 to the Minnesota Twins.

The Orioles can clinch the divisional crown with one victory today or another loss by Milwaukee.

"This is definitely the biggest thrill of my major league career," said Washington after his big night. "I was surprised to hit two homers but after I got those I was going for three. I knew I had tied the RBI record. (The six runs batted in equalled the Kansas City record for one game.)"

In other AL action, Toronto defeated New York 3-2, Boston stopped Detroit 4-1 and Chicago outscored Seattle 7-4.

Rangers 3, Angels 1
Buddy Bell's two-run double in the seventh inning led Texas over California. The game was delayed a little more than an hour with two out in the top of the fourth when the outfield lights at Anaheim Stadium blacked out. The remainder of the game was played with only the light banks in center field and right field working.

Doc Medich, 10-7, was the winner with late relief help from Jim Kern, who recorded his 28th save.

Twins 3, Brewers 2
Ken Landreaux hit a two-run homer with one out in the Minnesota ninth and Butch Wynegar followed with a bases-empty shot, rallying the Twins over Milwaukee.

Moose Haas carried a four-hitter and a 2-0 lead into the ninth, but Roy Smalley walked leading off the inning. After Glenn Adams popped up, Landreaux hit his 15th homer to tie the game 2-2 before Wynegar followed with his seventh.

Blue Jays 3, Yankees 2
Tom Underwood and Tom Buskey combined on an eight-hitter to help Toronto beat New York. Underwood scattered six hits in working seven innings while Buskey earned his seventh save pitching the last two innings.

Toronto scored all its runs in the first when Rick Bosetti singled with the bases loaded and New York center fielder Bobby Brown committed two errors. New York scored a run in the fourth on Lou Piniella's run-scoring double and added a run in the sixth on an RBI grounder by Reggie Jackson.

Red Sox 4, Tigers 1
Carl Yastrzemski drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the first inning, triggering Boston over Detroit. Rookie John Tudor allowed only six hits and one unearned run in becoming the first Boston left-handed starter to win a game at Fenway Park since Bill Lee did it on July 15, 1978. It was Tudor's first major league victory against two losses since being called up from the minors on Aug. 10.

White Sox 7, Mariners 4
Chet Lemon's three-run double keyed a five-run third inning that helped Chicago beat Seattle. The uprising enabled rookie left-hander Steve Trout to improve his record to 10-8.

Jorge Orta hit his 11th homer of the season off Mike Parrott, 13-11, for another Chicago run in the eighth inning and the White Sox added one more in the ninth on Rusty Torres' homer.

Job Trends Studied

MONTREAL (AP) — If you're a tax accountant — go north, young man. And if you're a woman the best thing to be in Canada is a personnel director.
These are the job candidates in greatest demand in Canada today, according to a recent survey about Canadian employment trends. Also among the conclusions gathered:
One in five employed Canadian managers has a resume circulating. This is a surprisingly high figure to most employers, yet not as high as in the United States, where 29 percent of managers are considering a change of jobs. The study also concludes that when managers leave their jobs their action comes as a complete surprise to three out of five employers.

HOME SAVINGS' ARLINGTON BRANCH.

There's really no better place to save than right here at Home.

When it comes to saving money, there's no better place to save than Home Savings' Arlington Branch. Not just because of the friendly people. Or because the Arlington Branch, like our branches in Plymouth and Bethel, offer all of the services of the main office in downtown Greenville.

The real reason that Home Savings' Arlington Branch is a better place to save is because it's closer to Lyndale, Forrest Hills, Brook Valley, Club Pines, Cherry Oaks and most of the neighborhoods on the south side of town. It's right on Greenville's cross-town boulevard, and it's convenient to major shopping areas.

So why save anyplace else? No one offers more service. And no place is more convenient to Greenville's newest neighborhoods.

Home Savings. Since 1906, it's always been a more convenient place to save.

Postal Protection Week

American consumers lost more than $489 million to mail fraud and misrepresentation by post over the last five years, Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills said Friday.

September 24-29 has been designated the fourth annual Postal Consumer Protection Week by Postmaster General

William F. Bolger to heighten public awareness of the problem.

Mills emphasized that the majority of companies who are a part of the $60 billion mail order industry are honest and dedicated to customer satisfaction. But a few operators are out to bilk the public, as in many other industries.

The Postal Inspection Service actively investigates mail fraud and false representation by mail, and assists with mail-order and service problems.

Typical examples of mail frauds and false representations by mail include a variety of investment offers, phony franchises, miraculous "cures" for a variety of illnesses, weight reducing with no proven medical value, and work-at-home-schemes.

Mills reminded customers that whenever they have a problem with their mail service, to fill out a postal Consumer Service Card, available at post offices and from letter carriers.

A survey listing topics for energy conservation concerning small businesses was distributed this week by the Energy Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

According to Charles Schwidde, chairman of the task force, the purpose of the survey is to allow small businesses as well as all chamber members to select topics for potential energy conservation workshops to be sponsored by the chamber.

Solar Heat Saves — Energy And Money

THE WATER STORAGE TANK... at a demonstration solar-heated home in New Bern is checked out by Jack Trabucco (on ladder), a New Bern solar heating equipment dealer, as Keith Bishton (foreground), Greenville solar heating equipment dealer, looks on.

The glint of sunlight on a solar collector is the glimmer of gold in ones pocket, say Keith Bishton and T. R. Jones, local solar heating equipment dealers.

The two have been saying for some time that the sun as a direct energy source for water and space heating is economically feasible for homes and businesses alike. The truth of their assertions becomes more apparent all the time, they say, as fossil fuel costs continue to increase.

The two are competitors. Bishton is the operator of The Solar Shop, located at 2725 E. Tenth Street in the Colonial Heights Shopping Center here. Jones operates Eastern Solar Systems Inc. at Ernest and Knott Glass Company, 816 Clark Street just off Dickinson Avenue.

Both say their solar heating systems are VA, HUD-, and FHA-approved. This means, of course, that homes having these systems can be purchased with funds borrowed through these agencies. Both of their systems can be used for energy conservation tax writeoffs.

All the merits aside, these writeoffs are what make their systems so attractive, Bishton said. "Any solar heat improvement you make to your place of residence can be written off up to 55 percent. North Carolinians are especially fortunate because this state is one of the few that has generous tax incentives.

Jones points out that solar equipment is best used in conjunction with effective insulation and wise placement of windows and doors. He recommends, on new construction, that a home be oriented so that most of its windows and doors face toward the south and that the north side have as few openings as possible. It's now possible to get a federal tax credit of 15 percent of the first $2,000 invested in insulation. This can include caulking, weatherstripping, storm or thermal doors and windows, and modified flue openings.

Owners of condominiums and cooperatives, as well as owners of single-family dwellings can benefit, as long as the unit is the principal place of residence. Vacation homes are excluded.

Using a hypothetical utility rate of 4.5 cents per kilowatt hour (Greenville's was 6.7 this past summer, Bishton supplied a chart which seems to show what a wise investment a solar system for combination water-space heating can be.

"Put $5,400 in a savings account," he suggested, "and draw 9.5 percent on it, if you can get such a good rate. Pay 35 percent combined federal and state income tax on it — that's $180. Your net income at the end of a year will be $333 or 6.2 percent. At the end of eight years, having paid $2,664 in federal and state income taxes (at 35 percent), your percent of investment will be 49 percent, your net income, $2,664.

"Put that same $5,400 in a solar system. Accept your $1,280 federal solar tax credit. Save $410 on utilities. Pay your $97 for insurance, property tax and incidentals. Your net income at the end of the year will be $1,593; your percent of investment, 30 percent. At the end of eight years, having saved $5,623 in utilities costs and having paid $778 in insurance, property tax and incidentals, your net income will be $6,125, your percent of investment, 113 percent."

Anyone who has any amount of sunlight falling directly on his house or business place or yard can use a solar collector, the two say. North Carolina is ideally located to receive a maximal amount of sunlight year-round. Some local television weather reports

INITIAL AND OPERATING COSTS... of various methods of heating and cooling a home or other building are contrasted by Greenville solar heating equipment dealer, T. R. Jones.

Text And Photos By Carol Tyer

now include "solar indexes" — the percentage of rays available during a given day for use by collectors.

Collectors are, of course, ideally faced toward the south at an angle equal to or near the degree of latitude of the location.

Bishton represents Solar Unlimited Ltd. of Huntsville, Ala.; Jones, Virginia Solar Components. The systems of both store heat in water. Bishton's uses silicone oil as the medium that is run through coils in the collector to absorb radiant energy; Jones' uses water. Silicone oil is, of course, more expensive initially, but Bishton maintains it's largely what make his system maintenance-free.

Both have plans for combining their solar heat systems with wood furnaces or wood space heaters, with heat pumps, or other conventional heat sources for backup heating during periods of several cloudy days. Both can work out various plans for providing water heating only, water heating plus partial space heating, or water heating plus total space heating.

Jack Trabucco, who owns the Solar Unlimited Ltd. franchise for Eastern N. C. and has a store similar to Bishton's in New Bern, says, "The technology for solar water- and space-heating is here now." He has an FHA-approved house for display in New Bern which proves the point.

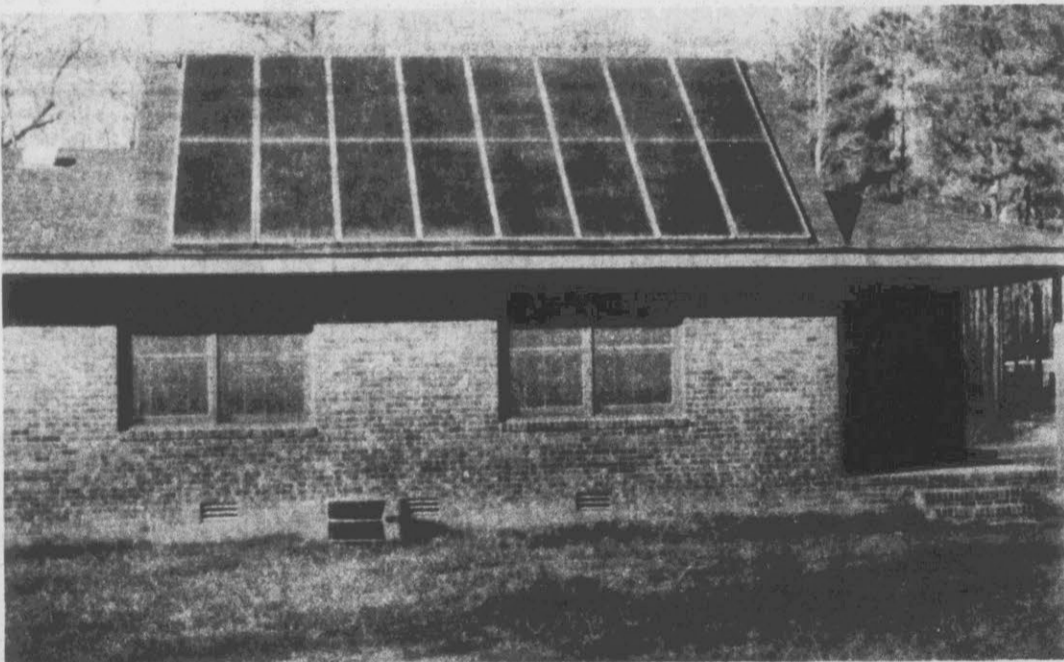

"There'll be a few advances," he said. "Air conditioning's yet to be improved. But the government is selling the public down the river when all possible dispatch is not used to encourage its use.

What is saved using it in publicly-owned buildings would be of direct savings to taxpayers, and all that could be done in the private sector would save fossil fuel for use by us and our children and grandchildren in the future.

"Use of solar power is the only utility inflation insurance there is that makes any substantial difference. The building and banking industries are going to be realizing this more and more. Forward-thinking investors in building are seeing it already. It's getting more and more common for individuals and families to lose their home because their utility bills outstrip their abilities to make their house payments. That's why our bankers need to wake up and give advantages to builders who'll use solar and thus decrease or keep at a par homeowners' energy costs.

An open house will be held at The Solar Shop next Saturday from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. and Sunday from 1 to 5 p. m.

THIS SOLAR-HEATED HOUSE... was built in New Bern by Jack Trabucco for demonstration purposes. Collectors, mounted on the back roof, for southern exposure, are not visible from the street.

Gloria Vanderbilt Chose Workhorse Life

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Senior Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Gloria Vanderbilt, born to wealth, is a workhorse although if she chose she could be one of the idle rich.

The great-great granddaughter of "Commodore" Vanderbilt works, and works hard, in such a variety of creative fields that some refer to her as "the Renaissance woman."

"Do I have to work?," said the woman who came into an inheritance estimated at $4.785 million when she reached 21. "Did van Gogh have to paint?"

Miss Vanderbilt, at 55, draws the comparison with the Dutch artist, who actually was poor as a church mouse, to illustrate the drive of imaginative people.

"I wanted to make something of myself," said the mother of four boys. "It took a long time...a series of stages. Maybe the drive is in my genes."

Could be.

At any rate, Miss Vanderbilt's latest project carries a lifetime contract. It's with Murjani, an international apparel firm, to do Vanderbilt-labelled jeans, coordinated tops and skirts for adults, juniors and children. Soon to be added are sportswear separates.

To miss the Vanderbilt push for her latest label, you'd have to be a hermit. She's doing personal appearances at stores and benefits around the country, television commercials, and further promotion fuel comes from newspaper and magazine advertising.

"We're projecting a $200-million volume for the calendar year 1980," said Warren Hirsh, Murjani president.

That volume represents sales primarily in America, but he said Murjani has contracted with the designer to "sub-license for the world." Already in the works are outlets in the Caribbean and a vast department store chain in the United Kingdom.

Murjani is owned by a family originally from India. It has 10 manufacturing plants in Hong Kong, where the Vanderbilt designs also are produced.

Just how much the contract means in money to Miss Vanderbilt isn't revealed. It is for clothing only. The designer will continue to free lance in other fields, particularly in home furnishings where she had one of her first big successes.

Miss Vanderbilt talks of stages in her career but they all overlap except perhaps that of actress.

She had a fling at the movies and did quite well on stage and in television plays. But she quit.

"I didn't pursue acting," she said, "because it was painful to me. It became alien to what I wanted to do with my life. But I was succeeding..."

Gloria Vanderbilt succeeds at everything she undertakes—unless it would be the first three of her four marriages.

Her first marriage, when she was 17, was to Pat DeCicco, a Hollywood agent. That ended in divorce. So did her next marriage to maestro Leopold Stokowski, who was some 40 years her senior. She fought and won a bitter custody battle for the couple's two children, Stanislas, now 29 and a jazz drummer, and Christopher, 27, musician-composer.

Her marriage to Sidney Lumet, movie and television director, also ended in divorce.

Her fourth husband was Wyatt Emory Cooper, the Mississippi-born writer, who died of a heart attack in January 1978. The couple had two sons, Carter, 14, and Anderson, 12.

The drive in the Vanderbilt genes derives from both sides of her family.

The Vanderbilts, who came to America in the 1600s, began their cycle of wealth with Cornelius ("the Commodore") Vanderbilt, who started from scratch to amass a fortune in shipping and railroads. When he died in 1877, he left an estate estimated at $105 million. This was before the eras of high taxes and inflation.

His son, William Henry, piled on the fortune and became known as the richest man in the world. He also was one of the most despised by some, according to one saga of the family by V.S. Pritchett, writing in "Great American Families" (W.W. Norton). The son supposedly was more interested in the money than in the welfare of labor.

Gloria's father, Reginald, raised champion horses and was founder and president of the American Horse Show Association.

Said Gloria, "My maternal ancestors didn't do badly either."

Her great grandfather was Gen. Judson Kilpatrick, who distinguished himself as a Union cavalry general in the Civil War and as minister to Chile. Succeeding generations, the Morgans, were plantation owners, judges and diplomats. Gloria Vanderbilt's commercial ventures began in the 1960s when she appeared on the Johnny Carson show to display some of her paintings (she has been painting since age 10) and collages.

As a result, Hallmark asked her to do some greeting cards and other paper products.

A series of home furnishings collections evolved — fabrics, sheets, towels, pillows, china, glassware, place mats, napkins, bath accessories, wallpapers, needlecraft kits, then scarves, watches, eyeglasses and clothes. Patchwork, which she used in her own homes even to varnished floor coverings, became a Vanderbilt trademark.

Miss Vanderbilt also writes. Her "Love Poems", a book on collage, and one on designs for the home have been published. Her latest work is "Woman to Woman" (Doubleday), which she talks about as she tours to promote the Vanderbilt apparel.

The book provides insight into this complicated woman, although she said, "It is not an autobiography, not a biography, not the story of a life — but how I learned to see, feel and think on my own, how I became an artist and a person."

The book is full of photographs from her babyhood to the present and pictures how the "poor rich girl" who grew up in New York, Paris, on the Riviera, Newport, R.I., Old Westbury, N.Y., and other fashionable spots evolved into an assured beauty with wide smile, milky skin, black hair and tall, lithe figure. She wears a size 8.

The book, in a section called "a few biographical facts", gives a brief, reprise to the famous custody battle for her between Gloria's mother and her aunt. It is a reprint from one of the New York newspapers at the time, 1934.

"Society is still rocking with the sensation of the week — the revelation that 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, pawn in a desperate custody battle, stated in court she preferred living with her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. It was a tremendous blow to the mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, whose income is largely derived from the child's millions..."

"Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew...had previously announced that his decision would be largely determined by Gloria..."

"Little Gloria wanted it understood that she did not dislike her mother. It was simply, she explained, that she hadn't seen much of her. And when she was in her mother's care, they travelled so much, all over Europe...she was sure they jumped around a great deal, so much so that she never had any steady playmates."

The judge ruled for Mrs. Whitney, born a Vanderbilt, who was a sculptor and founder of the Whitney Museum of American Art. Gloria said the other day in an interview that later "Aunt Gertrude was not supportive of me" as an artist.

"She was no longer sculpting." No doubt, however, the custody headlines affected the future.

"I wanted order out of chaos," she said. "I had a chaotic childhood. My life is not chaotic now. I am in charge."

"Hard knocks helped me find myself."

She is self-taught in art and design, except "for a couple of weeks or so at the Art Students League when I was 18."

"But I didn't like working in a group. I was better alone."

She had studied previously at fashionable Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., and the Mary Wheeler School in Providence, R.I.

"My painting is light and bright," she said of her style. "It's an absolute antidote for pain. I want to make things joyful."

Avenue in the garment center. Her two youngest sons live with her and attend day school.

"The boys are my best friends...so protective of me," she said. "Wyatt and I had 16 extraordinary years. It was good that after he died I had to plunge back into work...by nature of what I do I have to work hard. There are commitments. Work is totally absorbing. I also have extraordinary friends. That helps."

"It's hard...the finality of death...the knowledge that you never again will see that person alive...sometimes I expect him to walk through the door. I break up."

"I find it very hard to imagine remarriage. But I'm told one goes through stages (of grief). I'm not afraid of being alone...I'm not lonely. I'd rather be alone than be with someone I don't enjoy. In all fairness, I'm not living alone. I have my two close sons."

Hirsh of Murjani said he sought out Miss Vanderbilt because of her designer status and "we were interested in a name in this country that had been around for years. The name meant much to me personally."

Miss Vanderbilt said the firm got a designer — "that's how I think of myself; I don't think of myself as a businesswoman."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I've just read a magazine article about the "abused parent" who jumps every time her child cracks a whip. It read like my biography.

It all fits. I'm the mother who, the moment her child comes in late for dinner, jumps to her feet like someone just turned on the current in her underwear, runs to the kitchen and begins cooking. I'm the mother who goes into her children's bedrooms after they've left for school and remakes their beds so they will pass the coin-bouncing test.

I'm the mother who sits up at 3:00 in the morning hemming a dress for my daughter who works two hours after school each day and is "tired."

I was raised to believe a good mother returned library books for her children because it made them good citizens... cleared the table after them and rinsed off their plates because it set a good example... put their toys in boxes and dressed their naked dolls because it instilled a feeling of order. I held their hot sweaters on my lap at picnics so they wouldn't lose them... picked them up at school when they got caught without boots.

What I have succeeded in doing is bringing back serfdom. If you're wondering whether or not you're an "abused parent," here are a few questions worth addressing yourself to:

When you ask your child to get you a glass of water, does he or she ask directions to the kitchen? Does he ask, "What is a kitchen?"

If you hid your handbag for a week, would your teenager face the wall in his bedroom in a fetal position and not be able to function?

Has your child ever seen unsliced bread? The inside of a washer? Can he make ice cubes? Set an alarm clock? Write a thank-you note?

The article really moved me. It got through to me so much that I posted a sign on the back door for all to see. It read: "THIS HOUSE IS BEING CONVERTED TO SELF-SERVICE. THIS INCLUDES STOVES, WASHERS, DRYERS, BATHROOMS, AND TRANSPORTATION. IF YOU NEED ASSISTANCE, FORGET IT."

My daughter read it and took a deep sigh. "Too bad," she said to her brother. "Just when we were going to give Mom a cost-of-living hike in her allowance."

Leeches Inspired Her Poetry

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I've read many letters in your column from people who don't know what to do about uninvited guests. We have a nice little house at the beach which inspired the following:

June is past, so is July,
August is ended—likewise I.
The pattering feet of summer and sun
Are over, complete, exhausted, done!
I've fed the young as well as the old,
I've cooled the warm, I've warmed the cold,
The wounded and weeping I have consoled,
The tender and touchy I have cajoled.
I have steeled the scared, I have scared the bold,
I have bit my tongue till it was controlled.
I've broiled the steak, I have casseroleed
And the grocer thinks I am made of gold.
(The other bills I have pigeon-holed.)
And frankly, friends, I am ready to fold!
Next time I live I'll make the most
Of being the guest not the host.

TIRED

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a man who has never cared much for the company of men, but he sure likes the ladies! Whenever we are with a group of friends or relatives and the men congregate in one room and the women in another, you can always find Herman with the women.

He also has a cute way of turning the conversation to the subject of sex, or something risqué. He's 55 and not going through any kind of change. He's always been this way.

My women friends are always telling me how "lucky" I am to have such an entertaining husband. Believe me, he's not all that entertaining when he's alone with me. (All talk, no action, if you get my drift.)

If you've ever heard of behavior like this before, I wish you'd explain it.

HERMAN'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Herman is a classic example of a man whose masculine ego needs constant stroking, so he seeks out social situations where he's sure to have a receptive audience and no competition.

As for this habit of talking about sex so much, those who can, DO, and those who can't, talk about it.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old boy. My sister who is 15 is adopted, so we are not blood relatives, right?

We have always been very close, but now our relationship seems to be headed in another direction. We have done a lot of wrestling, touching and fondling, but so far nothing more.

We have talked about this and have come to the conclusion that because we are technically sister and brother, we should not have any physical feelings for each other. Yet we can't help how we feel.

What is morally right in this case? We are not blood relatives, so maybe if we let our feelings go, we could marry each other some day.

What do you think?

DEAR BROTHERLY: Although you aren't blood relatives, you are LEGALLY brother and sister. That could create a problem should you want to marry later on.

Cool the wrestling, touching and fondling. Physical contact could lead to a physical relationship which would be morally wrong at your ages. You both need to talk to a trusted adult about your feelings. I would hope you could discuss this with your parents. If not, then a clergyman, physician or counselor. You ask some intelligent questions and deserve some honest answers.

MRS. WALTER LEE CLARK JR.

Tammie Butts, Mr. Clark Marry

Tammie Denis Butts and Walter Lee Clark Jr. were married Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at Calvary Pentecostal Holiness Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Revs. Linwood Butts and Lassiter Jerrett.

The bride's parents are the Rev. and Mrs. Linwood Butts of Rt. 2, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lee Clark Sr of Simpson.

A program of music was presented by Mrs. Leary Landcaster, organist, and Mrs. Earlene Stocks, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a formal white gown of polyester organza and Venise lace. The gown featured a fitted bodice applied with lace and pearls and a neckline trimmed with Venise lace intertwined with white satin ribbon. Matching lace and ribbon encircled the fitted waistline. Lace details were repeated on the cuffs of the long Gibson Girl sleeves. The skirt flowed into an attached chapel train. Her tiered veil of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a capulet of Venise lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of burgundy and white roses with miniature white carnations.

Mrs. Timothy Dickerson of Greenville, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was attired in a long gown of burgundy polyester with a short veil and carried a colonial bouquet of pink and white carnations and gypsophila with pink streamers. Miss Vicki Coward and Miss Teresa Harris of Greenville, Miss Sharon Crowder of Raleigh, and cousin of the bride, Mrs. Jim Cox of Tarboro were bridesmaids. They wore the same attire and carried identical bouquets as the matron of honor. Angie Cannon of Winterville was flower girl and wore the same outfit as the bridesmaids.

Buster Hardee, Dennis Hardee, Greg Vainright, Cecil Adams, and Mike Best were ushers all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride selected a blue floor-length gown with matching accessories and carried a double corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore an apricot floor length gown with matching accessories and carried a double corsage of white carnations.

An after-rehearsal party was given at the bride's parents' house for a cake cutting.

The church sanctuary was arranged with an arched candelabra and 15 spiral candelabra on either side holding white cathedral candles. They were intertwined with pink gladioli, white chrysanthemums and pink carnations. Potted palms were used on each side of the church and white satin bows marked the pews.

The bride is employed at Carolina Sales Corporation and a graduate of New Bern High School. The bridegroom, an employee of Lakewood Builders of New Bern, graduated from D. H. Conley High School.

For a wedding trip, the couple took a trip to the mountains.

Coffman's Into Carolina East

Coffman's, the men's clothier that specializes in quality clothing for men and boys, has formally opened a new outlet at Carolina East Mall. The new facility has about 2,800 square feet.

George Coffman is owner and proprietor of two downtown stores and the new store at Carolina East Mall.

Currently, the Coffman stores are Coffman's Men Wear and Coffman's 10-20 Shop, both located on the downtown Mall and Coffman's Clothes Horse, on East Fifth Street.

The addition of a new store in Carolina East Mall comes at a time that marks the 23rd anniversary since George Coffman first opened a store in Greenville.

"I opened up on July 28, 1956, in the Proctor's Hotel, and moved to my present site in 1968," Coffman explained. "From the beginning," he added, "quality and service have been our standards."

More Informal

"Our store at the new shopping center will be less formal than the downtown store," Coffman remarked. "We have attempted to achieve a country down-east atmosphere, using fixtures stained in driftwood blue gray, combined with old brick, including petitions of old brick.

"The floor," Coffman continued, "will be a combination of tile and dark blue rug, and beams will be used throughout the store to add a rustic look. There will also be a fireplace in the back."

Coffman noted that whereas the merchandise in his downtown store has been more oriented toward men's dressy clothing, "we will be able in the mall store to carry and better display a larger line of sportswear. We have designed the store with that idea in mind."

Manager

Doug Williams, who has been with Coffman for several years, will be the manager of Coffman's Men Wear at Carolina East Mall.

A native of Kinston, Williams attended East Carolina University and was formerly a member of the local MP unit of the National Guard. He is married to the former Nancy Winn and the couple has two sons, Paul and Brad.

"We are really pleased with the design and the outlay of our new store," Coffman said, "and we think it is going to be a very attractive place to shop in."

Merchandise for boys in the ten-year-old through teen-age years, formerly carried in Coffman's 10-20 Shop, will be sold at the Mall Store and will comprise a fuller line of youth sportswear.

Coffman's Clothes Horse, located on East Fifth Street, will continue to operate as a store oriented to collegiate type wear for young men.

contends the enjoyment makes the expense worthwhile. "I'd never commercialize it. I don't want to spoil it in any way."

Children aren't the only ones attracted to his stories. Sometimes when patients at St. Catherine Hospital in Garden City need a boost, nurses dial the number for them.

Wishon's two granddaughters, Shiela, 6, and Dena, 4, are among his most avid listeners.

"They listen to granddad all the time," Wishon said. "In fact, if I go a little too long with one story, they call me at home and say it's time to change the story."

City Farm Center. "When people I know introduce me to their children, you can just see the admiration beaming in their faces. It makes it all worthwhile."

Every other day, Wishon's wife, Opal, prepares a story for him to read from their library of family favorites and newly acquired stories. They try to pick a story with a message, something that may also be seasonal.

Holidays are a particularly busy time for his service, Wishon said, "especially Christmas. We put a lot of little Christmas stories on it."

Wishon got the idea for the story time in 1971 when the farm center discontinued its call-in weather service. He thought the dial-a-story concept would be a good community service project "which would bring sunshine into people's lives."

The first day the line was open, the center recorded 600 calls. The line has been busy since, so much so that sometimes children will call him at home and ask him to read a story.

Wishon said the phone line and recording equipment cost him about $80 a month, but he GARDEN CITY, Kan. (AP) — Bud Wishon has been taking children to the land of peppermint seas and chewing-gum trees and other fantasyland places for nearly seven years. His trips are available day and night, seven days a week, at no charge.

Wishon, a 48-year-old grandfather, operates "dial-a-story," a service in which children can dial a phone number and listen Wishon estimates the system handles an average of 300 calls a day. Spread over the years it has operated, that comes to nearly a million calls from all over Kansas and sometimes from outside the state.

"I love kids and if I can make people happy, that's what I like to do," said Wishon, general manager of the Garden

Compulsive Gambler Seeking A Quick Payoff

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
"To this day I cannot understand myself, and it has floated by like a dream — even my passion — it was violent and sincere, but ... what has become of it now? It is true that sometimes the thought flashes through my brain: 'Wasn't I out of my mind then, and wasn't I all that time somewhere in a madhouse and perhaps I'm there now.'" —

From "The Gambler" by Dostoevsky.
RENO, Nev. (AP) — James McGee remembers gambling at 12, winning big at 14 and starting to borrow and steal to finance his addiction in high school.
He wrote bad checks, robbed his mother, his family and his wife, McGee's lawyer told a jury, and he lost his jobs and marriage to the lure of gambling. Twice, he was "smacked around" by loan sharks.

In July 1978 he went to Las Vegas.
To save money, McGee "slept briefly in a downtown bus station," says attorney Brent Adams. When awake, he "spent all his time gambling, neglecting food and rest."
Soon, McGee ran out of money. For several hours he stood around a plush casino watching the cards, the wheels and the dice.
On the back of a check, with his correct name and address on it, McGee wrote out a demand for money, Adams says. The gambler handed it to a teller and told her he had a gun. He received more than $2,000, and was arrested almost immediately. He left behind the check and his Social Security card. He had no gun.

"James McGee is not guilty," Adams told a Las Vegas jury. "He's sick."

Growing numbers of psychiatrists agree with Adams. As proposals for legalized casino gambling spread, the problem of pathological gambling is gaining greater attention.
It was recently recognized as a mental disorder by the American Psychiatric Association, which included the illness in its new "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual."

That official action may "increase awareness and will stimulate treatment and research just like it did when alcoholism was recognized in 1957," according to Veterans' Administration psychiatrist Dr. Robert Custer of Washington, D.C. Custer says he has treated about 300 pathological gamblers.

The recognition may also help extreme cases — like McGee — find help. Although Custer said he has testified for the defense in about a dozen cases, McGee's was the only one which didn't result in a conviction. The jury was hung, but McGee pleaded guilty rather than face a second trial.
Instead of a prison term, Judge Roger Foley put the New York man on probation and ordered him to have psychiatric counseling and to attend meetings of Gambler's Anonymous, a group modeled on Alcoholics' Anonymous.

An estimated 1.1 million Americans share McGee's addiction to gambling, according to the National Gambling Commission's 1976 report. Another 3.3 million may be potential compulsive gamblers.
The odds are almost always against the gambler. And addicts tempt the odds until they've lost everything — and more. Custer said he'd treated people who had lost $600,000.

Custer said compulsive gamblers' hunger often drove them to loan sharks or "shylocks" who charged exorbitant interest rates and threaten violence if they weren't paid. Bad checks, embezzlement or — as in McGee's case — robbery are the crimes they tend to commit.

"They never commit violent crimes," Custer said, "and they always intend to repay it. They say, 'All I have to do is win.'"
The real victims, Custer said, are the gambler's family and community.
The compulsive gambler's dreams are likely to be of casino games, sports betting or horse racing. Custer says those seem to be more addictive than slot machines, lotteries and dog racing.

Pathological gamblers tend to like games of skill with quick payoffs, he explains.
When the jackpots don't come often enough, many become suicidal, Custer says. Those he has seen had a suicide attempt rate of 20 percent, a pace 180 times normal. Many also drink excessively, the psychiatrist says.

Studies by Custer and other researchers indicate compulsive gamblers usually win big early, many as teenagers. The amount is often "pretty close to an annual salary for that individual for that day," Custer said. And the winner asks, "What am I doing working?"
That compulsion can help drag pathological gamblers back from the depths, and Custer encourages patients to work — "I don't mind their having two or three jobs" — and to pay off their debts.

"It improves their self-esteem," Custer says. Some workaholic gamblers have repaid hundreds of thousands of dollars in debts, he added.

The psychiatrist discourages jailing psychopathic gamblers. "It tends to be another bail-out," he said. "They don't have to pay the money back."

Why Buy A Second Oven? Because It Will Become Your First

WHAT CAN A MAXIM CONVECTION OVEN DO FOR YOU? IT WILL SAVE YOU TIME

Maxim cooks your meals through a hot-air-in-motion system that professional chefs and bakers discovered some time ago. The same foods will be thoroughly cooked (without microwaves) in 1/4 less time (and at a lower temperature) than those prepared in an ordinary oven.

IT WILL CONSERVE YOUR ENERGY

Now consider, if you cook at a lower temperature for less time, it stands to reason your utility costs will be lower, as well. And that's a big consideration today.

IT WILL KEEP YOUR KITCHEN COOLER

The total heat given off is less than half that of an ordinary oven. Not matter if you bake, broil, roast or slow cook.

IT WILL COOK FOODS UNIFORMLY

Maxim works like a rotisserie in reverse—turns the heat and not the meat. A silent fan causes the heat to surround the food, cooking it from all sides at once. The result—perfect roast...a delicious loaf of bread.

IT WILL SEAL IN NATURAL JUICES

A nutritionalist's dream. And a meat connoisseur's answer. Vitamins are preserved and flavor enhanced because the convection oven doesn't dry foods as it cooks them. Bake, broil, roast or slow-cook and get fantastic results consistently.

Free Demonstration
 Sat. Sept. 29
 2:00 P.M.

"We can gladly recommend the Maxim convection oven. We've found the results astounding for breads and roasts. A loaf is an achievement, beautifully baked and crusty. A roast has a brown crustiness outside, and a delicious juiciness inside."

Jimmy, Meet The Roughneck Family

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

"In a nation that was proud of hard work, strong families, close-knit communities and our faith in God, too many of us now tend to worship self-indulgence and consumption. Human identity is no longer defined by what one does, but what one owns."

Shannon, 14, wants to join his dad and brothers in the oil fields. Roger, 12, and David, 7, don't think much about the future yet.

Kenny Sr., 42, realized a dream this summer when Kenny Jr., Darrell and Galen went to work with him. Pop is foreman, and the four Roaches constitute an entire crew for a local drilling firm.

"We freeze in the winter and burn up in the summer, nurse smashed fingers, and get so filthy we just take our clothes home and change the oil in 'em once a week," says Darrell. "We get one day off a month, two weeks in the summer and three days at Christmas. But we're all working together and the money's good."

"With this oil crisis," says Kenny Jr., "it looks like we'll have a job for a long, long time."

Kenny Sr. earns $7.35 an hour, his boys a dollar less. They work from 6:45 a.m. till 2:45 p.m., "but usually it's more than that, often a 16-hour day when somebody on the other crew can't make it."

Drilling goes on around the clock because rock formations could fall in on the pipe and collapse the well if the rig stopped.

Last year the company that employs the Roach crew bored about 45 new wells around Great Bend. It has contracts through 1981, and the Roach crew is booked a year in advance. Most contracts come from small oil companies searching for crude under wheat, corn and alfalfa fields.

"People are as hungry for oil as they are for food," says Mrs. Roach. "The government will have to keep us and the farmers going. We're the boat and the farmers are the oars of this country."

But the Roaches say even though they work seven days a week in a business that's booming, they can't keep ahead of inflation.

"I give $500 a month to the government, but I can't see that it's giving me anything back for it," says Kenny Sr., who quit school in the eighth grade to work on a rig. "I can't afford life insurance and we haven't got a retirement plan. All Reba and I will have in our old age is Social Security, and it looks like it'll go bankrupt before we get any."

For the first time in an hour, the room fell quiet. Even the little ones were quiet as Reba talked about making ends meet in 1979.

"I got rid of the water heater, I keep the lights turned off, we've insulated the whole house, and this year we stayed home on vacation instead of driving to Colorado, like we always have," she says. "I had to go into the hospital for 21 days last year, and without medical insurance we would have been paying off the bill for the next 20 years."

"It just breaks your heart to think you'll work all your life, get your kids raised right, and then have nothing left over to enjoy yourself in your old age."

Like millions of Americans, the Roaches gathered in front of their television set July 15 to hear President Carter's energy speech. They think everybody should sacrifice to conserve energy, but can't think of anything else they can give up to help the cause.

"I guess we'll just go along doing the best we can until something else happens," said Mrs. Roach. "Like my momma always said, 'Don't trouble yourself with trouble until trouble-troubles you.'"

"... We can spend until we empty our treasuries and we may solve all the wonders of science, but we can succeed only if we tap our greatest resources: America's people, America's values, and America's confidence. I have seen the strength of America in the inexhaustible resources of our people."

Wounds From A Textbook War Are Slow To Heal

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Time has brought a healing of sorts to this community that five years ago showed the nation the power of the printed word to stir emotion, even violence.

The issue — textbooks used in public schools — is settled for now. Traditional themes, proper language, the basics, have returned. The chief worry now seems to be alcohol and drug abuse among students. But beneath the surface calm linger the scars left when neighbor rises against neighbor.

The protagonists are still in place. One, a minister, jogs the roads near his home daily, no longer fearing physical harm. Another, an itinerant preacher, is out of prison and driving a truck. Both are writing books about the textbook fracas. A third has had a fifth child and was re-elected to the school board.

At the height of the controversy during the fall of 1974, elementary schools were bombed and windows were shattered. School buses were shot at. Parents who sent their children to school were threatened. Demonstrators, some waving Bibles, preaching and singing, blocked driveways to the schools, picketed bus garages and marched before school board offices. At one meeting, school board members were shoved and punched.

The battle started over charges that the schools' textbooks contained dirty language, were anti-Christian and taught the idea that there are no absolute values — that it may be all right to lie, cheat or steal depending on the circumstances.

The books included the works of Gwendolyn Brooks, e.e. cummings, Eldridge Cleaver, LeRoi Jones, T.S. Eliot and Mark Twain. One contains a poem that says it must be lonely to be God because "nobody loves a master." A poem contains the line: "I like my body when it is with your body."

The Rev. James Lewis had been pastor of St. John's Episcopal Church for only a month when the textbook dispute erupted. He had just published his own book of short stories and was repulsed by the idea of taking good writers away from the children.

Today, at 43, he has yet to shake the trauma of that period.

twice we moved out of our home. The hardest pill to swallow was Alice Moore being elected to the school board again."

The Rev. Lewis wrote most of his book about the period in longhand earlier this year while he was a Proctor Fellow at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass.

It is a first-person account, including the time the Ku Klux Klan threatened him. He draws from his diary and letters to the newspaper editor. A few characters are given fictitious names to protect them.

The Rev. Marvin Horan, a 40-year-old fundamentalist preacher, now travels the countryside preaching. His old church has a new pastor.

He is writing his book with a collaborator from Indianapolis and will publish it himself and sell it on his preaching tours.

"People want the book," he says. "It tells how the protest started, how I got involved, why I got involved. It gives details of the protest, my indictment, my trial, my appeals and my incarceration."

A federal jury convicted him of conspiring to bomb two elementary schools. He maintains his innocence. "Two years, 11 days" in jail made him realize "just how great the need is for people to have a personal relationship with God."

Alice Moore, 38, wife of a Church of Christ minister, was a leader with the Rev. Horan in the crusade against the textbooks. She has since had her fifth child and drew more votes than anyone else in the school-board elections. She is also on the board of a private school but sends her three school-age children to public schools.

"There is no question that we made many changes in the school system," she says. "We've had four superintendents in 10 years. I think the point has been well made. The 1974 protest was a very emotional and angry reaction from parents to something they had not realized was happening."

Robert Kittle, who took over as superintendent of Kanawha County public schools a year ago, says new textbooks are being introduced in this fall's term for the first time since the 1974 protest. The controversial books are out. The new books include more than 100 basics in English literature, composition, grammar, writing and speech.

"The texts have changed about 75 percent in the content of literature," Kittle says. "They have been cleaned up. The controversial books of 1974 dealt with crime and contained four-letter words and street language."

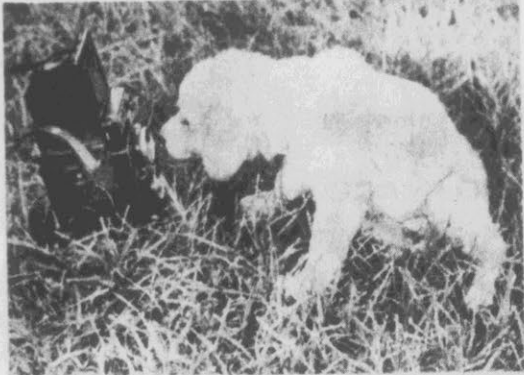

people moving from the county in search of jobs as to controversial textbooks.

The new books were chosen from 6,000 screened by textbook committees made up of parents and teachers. The new English textbooks went through five separate screenings and were put on display around the county for public scrutiny before the board voted on them.

To cope with the drug and alcohol-abuse problem, the school board has a new policy — students caught with drugs or alcohol the first time are suspended; the second offense could lead to expulsion. Educational programs on drugs have been set up for both students and their parents. Parents now sit on advisory councils on curriculum and student behavior.

"Emphasis on the academics has been greater than ever before," Kittle says. "This is something the parents wanted. They wanted us to teach reading, writing and arithmetic."

Old Maps Show Highway Plans

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writers
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — For years, Robert Mote has traveled the highways of America, following hundreds of thousands of miles of asphalt and concrete behind the wheel of a tractor-trailer rig.

And Mote, 44, an Indiana native, has another interest that spans miles of highways — some that have never been built.

Mote has a collection of maps from 60 to 64 years old detailing plans of the National Highways Association for building a nationwide system of roads.

The ex-truck driver claims a number of national museums are interested in his seven maps, and he says the collection has been appraised at $180,000.

Mote says the Smithsonian Institution has nine of the maps made by the old NHA, but does not have the ones he owns.

Value aside, the maps, found in the cellar of an old house in California, certainly are an interesting footnote to the country's transportation history.

One map, for instance, details a proposed coast-to-coast road called "The Indian Trail." The map, dated 1916, shows a road from Los Angeles, Calif., to Columbia, S.C., with branches from there to Charleston, S.C., and Wilmington, N.C.

The map includes details about the National Highways Administration, which Mote says is defunct. He says he's found few people who have even heard of the organization.

At the bottom of the "Indian Trail" map are two squares dealing with two early 20th-century issues in the news today — national defense and the Panama Canal.

One box, on the map printed just before America's entry into World War I, reads "PREPAREDNESS. We are for it. Some for War! Some for Defense!! Some for Peace!!! There can be no real Preparedness for War, for Defense or for Peace without NATIONAL HIGHWAYS AND GOOD ROADS EVERYWHERE."

The Panama Canal box reads, "NATIONAL HIGHWAYS vs PANAMA CANAL. You built and own the second. Do you want to own the first? They cost the same. How many people does the second serve? The first will serve 99 percent of our people. This includes 98.3 percent of our rural (country) population. FREE SEAS. You have from the Atlantic to Pacific, Gulf to Lakes. You must also have FREE ROADS."

Another interesting map, especially to Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas residents, is the 1919 map of the proposed Albert Pike Highway. It stretches diagonally across Oklahoma "following the path of the Arkansas River" from Kansas into Arkansas.

Pike was a well-known Masonic leader of the era and the construction of the highway was proposed by Masons. The Albert Pike Highway was another road never constructed.

The Drama Club held auditions last week to select new members. Anyone trying out had to sing, dance or recite a monologue.

The membership is limited to 30 people and initiation for new members will be held Thursday. They must dress up as any famous character and recite lines, pertaining to their character, to the teachers.

Last year members did the play "A Christmas Carol" by Charles Dickens and sponsored and participated in the school play "Rock-n-Roll."

Drama Club officers are Robin Jones, president, Susan Laik, vice president, Robin Muzarelli, secretary, and Kim Hargett, treasurer. Mrs. Betty Topper is their advisor.

The Rose High Marching Band selected a band council with members from each of the classes. The council will make decisions regarding band trips, uniforms' parades and contests.

Members are Mike Pollard, president, Mike Wallace, vice president, Kim Shiley, secretary, and Sonya Morris, treasurer. Representatives include Chip Davis, senior, Anne Joyner, junior, and Karen Hendrix, sophomore. Mike Brohwan and Jim Bearden, drum majors, are also on the council.

The Anchors met Tuesday night to install new members and decide on initiation. The following day the members were "initiated" by having to wear oversized clothes and a blue anchor painted on their faces.

Homecoming Week was the main topic discussed in the SGA meeting Wednesday morning. Twenty-one suggestions for the theme of the week were submitted. These were then narrowed to: World of Fantasy; Greek Mythology; the 1950's; Halloween; and Hurray for Hollywood. Everyone will have a chance to vote for his or her favorite theme. Representatives also voted to change the homecoming route to Fifth Street and Cotanche.

Yearly, the SGA sponsors a candy sale to raise money for various school projects. Students are encouraged to sell candy bars and special recognition is given to the one who sells the highest number. This year's sale will be held Oct. 26-Nov. 12.

Larry Ward was guest speaker at a Council for Christ Club meeting Thursday. He is assistant minister and youth director at the Tabernacle Victory Church. The group decided to get together once a week after school in addition to their morning meetings. This time will be primarily for guest speakers.

Kucinich Thrives In His Troubled City

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland is in default and going deeper into debt. Yet Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich — whose two years in office have been marked by controversy and who survived a 1978 recall attempt by a mere 236 votes — is a strong candidate for re-election this fall.

A nonpartisan primary is scheduled Oct. 2, with the top two vote-getters to compete for the $50,000-a-year post Nov. 6. Local Republican and Democratic party leaders agree that the young Kucinich has a good chance of surviving the primary.

Making determined challenges are Republican Lt. Gov.

George V. Voinovich and Democrats Basil M. Russo, the majority leader of the City Council, and State Sen. Charles L. Butts.

Bread-and-butter issues of neighborhood improvements and safe streets are being raised, but much more frequently there is talk of maturity of leadership, abrasiveness in government and divisiveness.

Kucinich, a Democrat who won election without party support in 1977, will turn 33 on Oct. 8. His outspoken style of government, running wars with the City Council, skirmishes with big business and constant questions on the integrity of his opponents have led to many of his problems. But they also have been a factor in his success.

"I'd rather be unpopular than unprincipled... I don't look for the easy way to do things," is the way Kucinich sizes himself up.

And Cuyahoga County Republican Party Chairman Robert E. Hughes said "Kucinich makes an appeal that he is a friend of the man in the street and that he is fighting the battle with utilities and banks, and that's got some appeal."

But both Hughes and County Democratic Chairman Timothy F. Hagan say Kucinich has been running a low-key campaign, refraining from bitter forays to present less of a target to his challengers.

"He's gone underground, playing smart politics," said Hagan.

Kucinich claims his accomplishments have been overlooked because of contrived turmoil and inherited fiscal problems. He has been a harsh critic of the local media, saying it, "thrives on confrontation."

Hughes is predicting Voinovich will outpoll Kucinich in the primary, but that both will advance to the general election. Hagan said, "I don't think it will be Butts and Russo in the general election, but I cannot say categorically that it will be Kucinich and Voinovich."

In 1977, incumbent Republican Mayor Ralph J. Perk was eliminated in the primary.

Cleveland, Ohio's largest city, is beset by problems. Its population has dropped to an estimated 600,000 — from 750,000 in 1970 — as many in the middle class fled to the suburbs of the industrialized city.

As the tax base declined, municipal services suffered and many day-to-day expenses of government were met by financial sleight of hand, long before Kucinich took office.

On Dec. 15, 1978, the city defaulted on $14 million in notes held by six local banks and more than $1 million in loans from its own coffers when Kucinich and the City Council could not agree on a course for solvency.

In a development this week, the 8th Ohio District Court of Appeals refused to order Kucinich to obey a City Council directive to use city income tax revenues to pay off the defaulted loans.

The default climaxed a year of struggle for Kucinich, whose firing of a popular police chief and his abrasive style led to a bitter recall attempt. He was sidelined for five weeks last fall because of an ulcer and was ordered to slow down his 18-hour daily pace.

At the same time, a judge stripped the city of its waterworks — Cleveland's largest asset — citing in part the diversion of its funds by Kucinich for other city purposes. The ruling is being appealed.

Kucinich fought pressure from Russo and a majority of the City Council to sell Cleveland's Municipal Electric Light System, even when it appeared he could avert default by doing so. In February, city voters overwhelmingly sided with Kucinich to retain the utility, and also agreed to increase municipal payroll taxes by 50 percent.

Kucinich has focused on the electric system as a campaign issue. The city's school busing plan, implemented earlier this month without incident, has been an issue — though not a major one — with the major candidates opposed to busing.

Cleveland defaulted in August on $3.3 million owed its waterworks contingency fund and is faced with a threat of default Oct. 6 on $14.1 million owed to its waterworks construction fund and airport surplus fund.

Kucinich claims the City Council has blocked his bailout plan in an attempt to embarrass him politically. Council leaders have called his refinancing proposals illegal. Voinovich, 48, whose slogan is "Together we can do it," has said that the city's survival is at stake in the election and that a united effort is needed to solve its problems.

Kucinich has made Voinovich his main target, claiming the lieutenant governor would use the mayoralty as a stepping stone for higher office and would surrender the city to corporate "fat cats."

Russo, 32, with the support of black leaders like Council President George L. Forbes, is trying to forge a black-Italian alliance. He has attacked Kucinich for "a philosophy of divisiveness and hatred."

Butts, 37, is campaigning on the theme that the city deserves better management. "Let's end the war and clean the streets," he says.

Butts pleaded guilty in 1970 to a charge of destroying public records following a scandal involving allegations of tampering with police promotion exams. He maintained the accusation was politically motivated. The incident has not been a campaign issue.

GREENVILLE TV & APPLIANCE
200 GREENVILLE BLVD. MALCOLM C. WILLIAMS, JR., VICE PRES.

TWO PRIZED ITEMS . . . A 40-saw cotton gin, dating about 1856, is shown in three sections (at left). At the right is a corn and feed grinding mill of the early 1900s.

Next in line is a corn crib, then a hen house and smoke house. Behind this group, three other buildings are located, a tobacco barn, a milk house and an outdoor necessary.

Eagles Homestead Reveals Our Local Heritage

The abundance of forests helped shape the living patterns of early settlers in North Carolina — a fact that is manifest in the collection of home and farm furnishings of past decades and centuries now displayed at the Connor Eagles Homestead at the Pitt County Fairgrounds.

Native woods — long lasting cypress, smooth pine and poplar, sturdy oak — predominate in the items that have been assembled for this permanent collection. Within a fenced-in enclosure in the fairgrounds, ten buildings have been constructed. Most of the buildings are of log construction, and several are original buildings that have been donated and moved to the Eagles Homestead site where they have been faithfully reconstructed.

The only major concession made to contemporary necessity has been the use of tin roofs to cover the buildings. Funds are not available to cover the costs of more desirable hand-crafted wood shingles. The small log house and chapel are patterned after authentic plans using materials salvaged from old Pitt County houses and buildings marked for demolition.

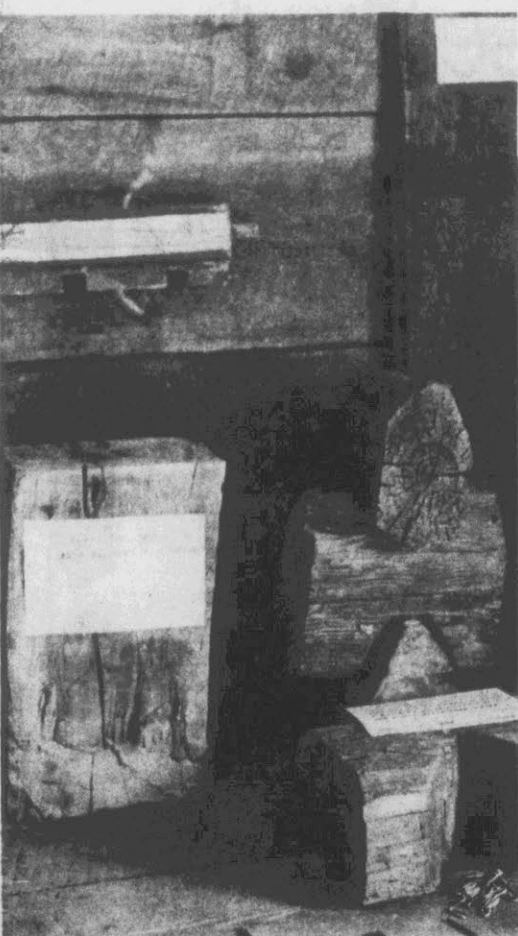

Other log buildings at the site include a mule stable, a corn crib, a hen house, smoke house, and a tobacco barn complete with shelter. The plank water tower, powered by a gasoline engine, is typical early 20th century. The small wood milk house is an original. Long an advocate of preserving the best from the past, W. Connor Eagles is seeing a dream fulfilled as this collection and the means of housing it grows. Another local man,

Les Turnage, has been instrumental in locating desirable items, and in raising funds for relocation and restoration. A number of donors, too numerous to mention in this brief article, have provided buildings, materials and artifacts. Items in the collection, a truly varied representation of home and farm life in Pitt County for the past 250 years, include buggies and ox-carts, wagons and ploughs, corn and peanut planters, tools for a farm shop and the gear used to harness a mule or horse to farm implements. There's also a spinning wheel and butter churns, a huge salt tray for curing meat and a wooden watering trough for animals. Kitchen utensils and household furniture reveal the manner in which families lived, and occasional decorative pieces attest to the instinctive desire to have beauty even in the humblest surroundings. Some visitors may be perplexed that many of the farm implements are painted bright Chinese red. This, however, is an authentic touch, as red has long been the preferred color used by manufacturers of farm equipment.

One note of caution. Since today's generation is considerably taller than people of past generations, visitors should beware low pitched corners on buildings. Admission to the Connor Eagles Homestead is included in the price of admission to the fair. Additionally, Eagles and Turnage have expressed a willingness to conduct groups on tours after the fair closes. Interested persons are to call Eagles at 752-4468 or Turnage at 752-2715 to make arrangements.

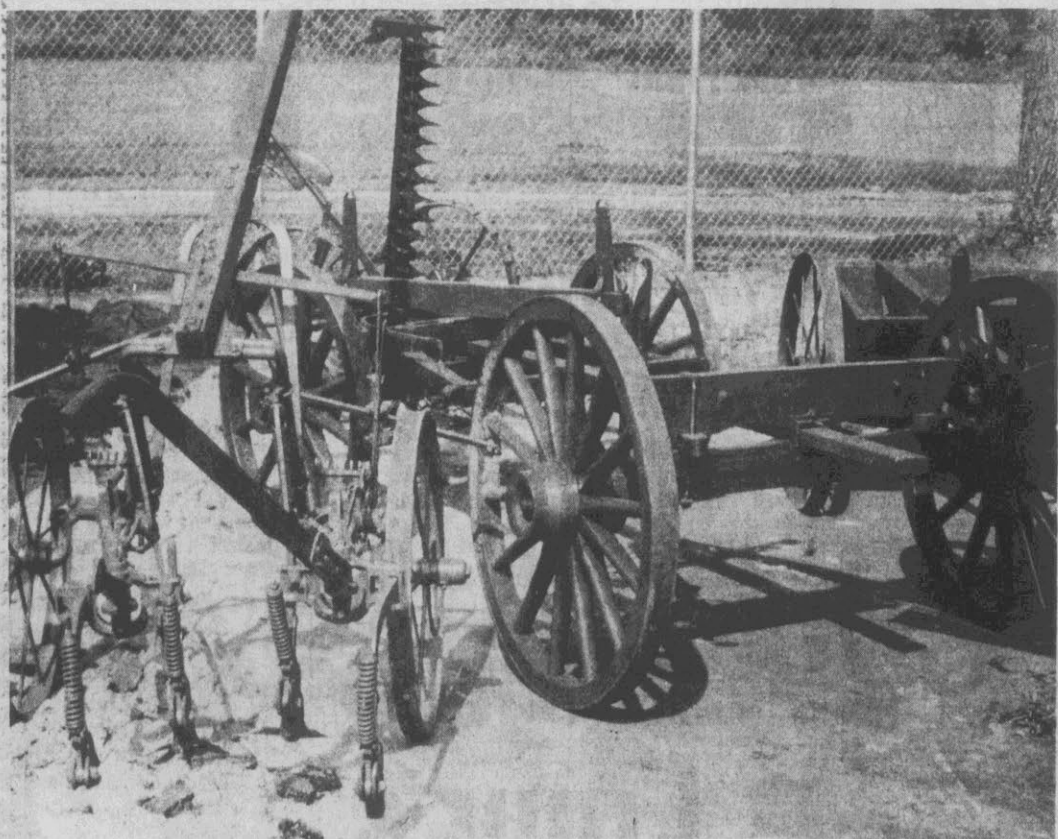

DETAILS OF CRAFTSMANSHIP . . . in working with wood are detailed in an exhibit contained in the homestead's corn barn. Hewn cuts, wainscoting, dentil decorations and scrollwork are among examples displayed.

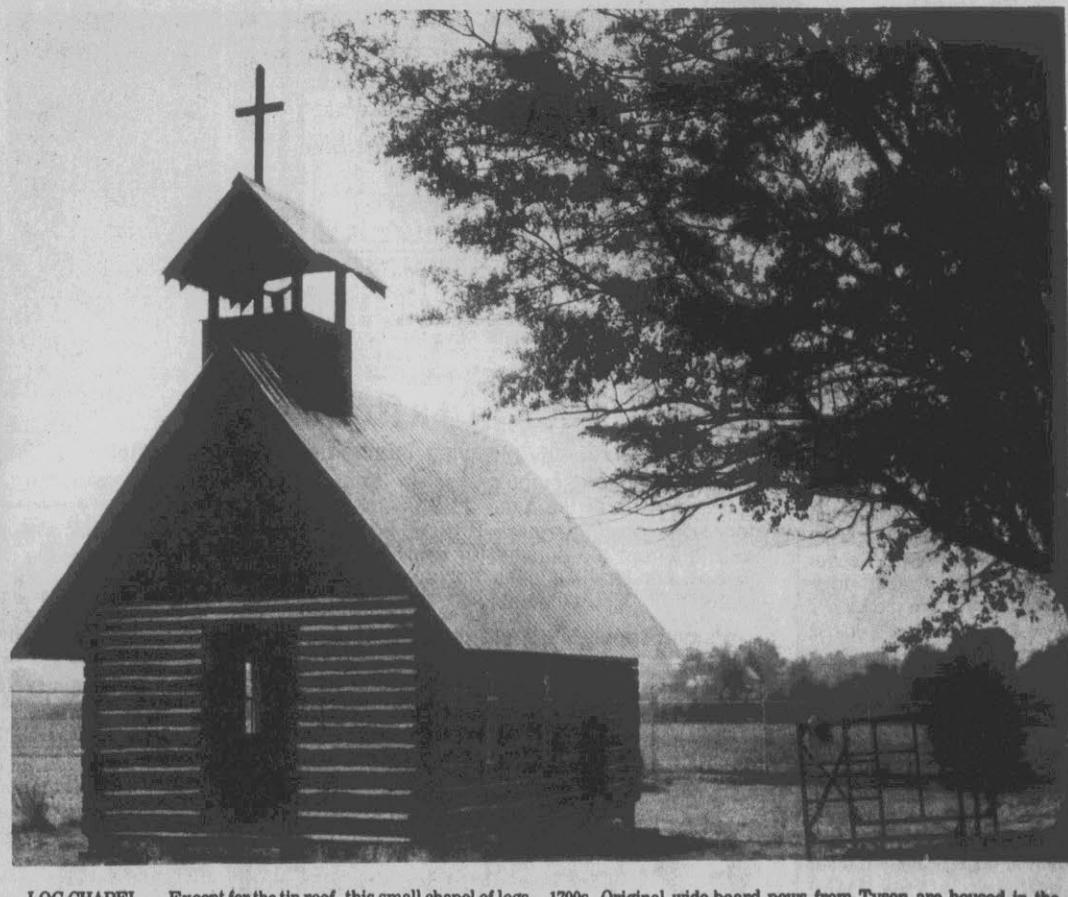

SIMPLE TREASURES . . . of early Pitt County homes are shown in the family room of a two-room house with a sleeping loft. The hand-pressed bricks of the fireplace and outer chimney, floors and beams, as well as the fine mantel, date from about 1800 and are from the old Moses Turnage homestead at Lang's Crossroads.

A WELL CURBING . . . made from a three-foot diameter cypress tree is one of only three known still extant in Pitt County. It was created by charring and scraping the inner log, leaving the circular shell.

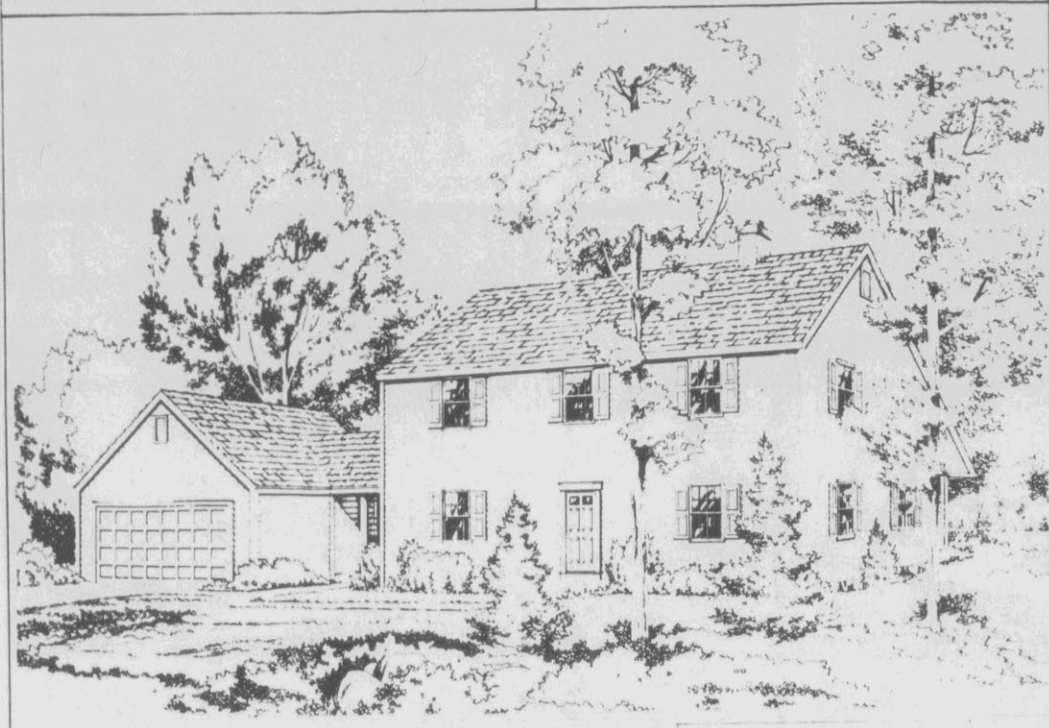

HEAVYWEIGHT RELIABLES . . . Typical of heavy duty farm machinery used widely before mechanization are cultivators and the chassis of a sturdy two-horse wagon, a product of the noted Hackney firm of Wilson.

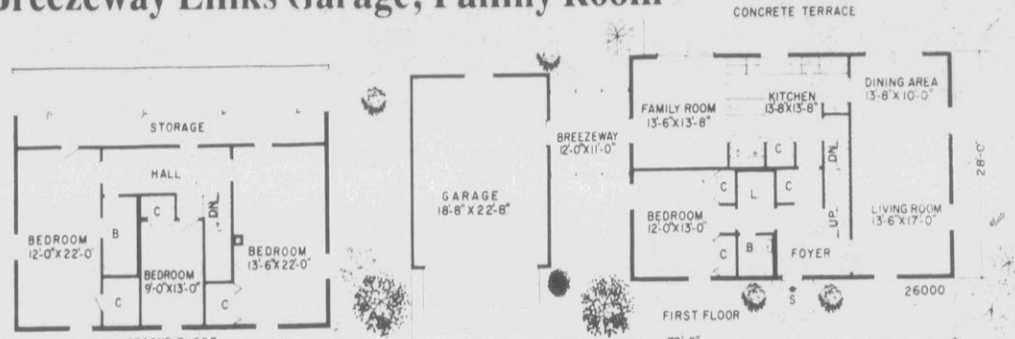

LOG CHAPEL . . . Except for the tin roof, this small chapel of logs and hand-hewn boards is a replica of Tyson Primitive Baptist Church, Pitt County's oldest church building, dating from the late 1700s. Original wide-board pews from Tyson are housed in the chapel.

PLAN FOR HOME

The Wrencote

Breezeway Links Garage, Family Room

By Jerry Bishop

Open planning predominates in the Wrencote, a two-story traditional where family room and kitchen form an airy space that extends outward via the breezeway. Four bedrooms and two full baths are outlined, as well as a roomy living dining area and expansive concrete terrace.

Shutters and small-paned windows add to the traditional warmth of the exterior, while the interior floor plan puts an up-to-date emphasis on space and zoning.

Entry is into a gracious foyer, where stairs ahead lead to the upper level. At right is the impressive living and dining room. Extending the entire width of the home, this area allows ample space for entertaining and features sliding glass doors to the terrace.

For family activities, the sizable island kitchen and family room are merged, with laundry niche, pantry, and storage closet shown. Sliding glass doors lead to the terrace, and another door opens to the breezeway, a natural spot for playroom or added dining space.

Conveniently situated next to the foyer, the downstairs bath is compartmented and adjoins the first floor bedroom.

Upstairs, plans call for two 22-ft bedrooms, a full bath, and a smaller central bedroom. The long storage area under the eaves can be reached from two of the bedrooms, and the basement promises additional storage space.

Making A Good Choice In Carpets Begins Earlier

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

The consumer who wants to make the best possible choice in carpeting should begin the process of selection before going to the store, say carpet manufacturers.

It is wise to mull over before leaving home such factors as the amount and hardness of expected wear and the length of time the carpet must last.

Carpet durability and looks are influenced by three factors: density, fiber and texture. Density is most important, since, regardless of texture or fiber, the more pile packed into a carpet's surface, the better it will wear.

The fiber chosen influences the carpet's resistance to soil, wear and crushing and determines its ease of cleaning.

Texture is primarily a question of looks. Most textures are satisfactory, provided the carpet is dense enough. Some textures, however, require more care than others.

Since most purchases are trade-offs between what can be afforded and is practical compared to what is most appealing or best, consumers are likely to have some hard choices to make.

In general, one should choose the heaviest density one can afford, even if it means going to a less expensive fiber.

Wool, which has long been considered the fiber of choice in terms of looks, is now too expensive to be acceptable to many. However, manmade fibers such as nylon, polyester and acrylic have been substantially improved recently. Consequently, consumers may now choose these formerly less desired fibers with more confidence than in the past.

Nylon is the most widely used fiber in carpets today. Its outstanding characteristic is its ability to resist abrasion or wear. As a result, nylon carpeting offers durability over a long period of time. Nylon takes dye well and is reasonably resistant to stains.

Drawbacks include the build-up of static electricity and a tendency toward pilling, which occurs when tiny, fuzzy balls of fiber become wedged between the carpet tufts.

Improved nylons which resist pilling and static-electricity build-up, are now being marketed under a variety of trade names.

Acrylic carpet, usually more expensive than nylon, resembles wool in appearance, texture and performance. Acrylic also resists soil, is resilient and is durable.

Polyester fibers, relative newcomers to the carpet field, are valued for their softness and luxurious looks.

Problems, as with nylon, include pilling and static electricity.

Polypropylene or olefin fiber is used extensively as a backing material in carpet. In addition, polypropylene is used to produce indoor-outdoor carpet.

While fiber considerations are based on cost and durability, texture choice is often a question of style.

At present, plush, a velvet-like, smooth-looking carpet texture, is highly popular. Plush carpets feel good underfoot and are available in most fibers in a wide range of prices.

Some people object to the shading which occurs when plush carpets are stepped on and the pile leans in different directions. For them, the new Saxony plush texture which lessens the degree of shading would be preferable.

Twist textures which were once known as "friezes" are gaining popularity again because of their ability to conceal tracking and shading. By combining slightly twisted yarns with bulkier ones, designers working with twist textures have been able to create interesting style and pattern effects. Other types of textures include looped-pile designs, a dense, tight construction very useful in high-traffic areas, and cut and loop textures.

Besides evaluating the carpet sample, consumers should also look into the reputation of the retailer from whom they contemplate buying. Beware the retailer whose price is substantially below everyone else's.

Also watch out for extra charges at delivery. Carpet bills should clearly state what is included in the price and whether removal of the old carpet, and installation of metal threshold stripping at doorways and padding are included.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A recent article in this space about a warranty protecting the quality of the construction of new homes has brought a flood of mail from readers, most of the letter writers using an "it's about time" theme.

To answer one recurring question, the Home Owners Warranty Corp., known as HOW, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders but is a separate business concern whose own carrier does the insuring.

To answer another, yes, there is at least one state — New Jersey — which has a new home-warranty program that stipulates definite standards of workmanship and materials. The law requires all builders of one- or two-family houses, condominiums and cooperatives to register with the Department of Community Affairs or face a $2,000 fine for each home sold during the period the builder is not registered. Builders may enter into the state warranty plan or choose a private plan approved by the department.

When claims by homeowners arise, they may be settled in one of three ways. One is via private settlements between the parties concerned. If the parties cannot agree, the homeowner can request conciliation and arbitration service. If the parties do not wish to arbitrate, a hearing is to be held before a state administrative judge.

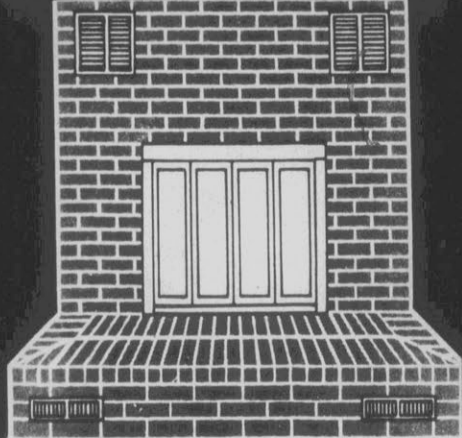

The program covers three basic coverage groups, similar to those of HOW. During the first year, coverage includes defective systems, workmanship and materials, including all plumbing, electrical and mechanical systems and appliances. During the second year, major mechanical, electrical and plumbing systems continue to be covered until the end of the year. However, carpentry, masonry, concrete and other items included in quality standards are not covered. During years 3 through 10, only major structural defects are covered.

Who is responsible under the warranty? The builder is responsible for all defects covered under the first two years of the warranty. When a builder fails or refuses to correct such defects, the warranty security plan becomes effective. In such event, the registration of the builder is then revoked. The builder is also responsible for major construction defects occurring in years 3 through 10 of the warranty.

All warranty plans of this nature mean that the so-called "law" of "let the buyer beware" has been repealed in the home building industry just as it has been with most other consumer products.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

The Brick-O-Lator distributes heated air to all parts of the room through floor-level forced air grills. It draws fresh air from the outside for combustion and draft. It does not pull heated room air up the chimney. The Brick-O-Lator works so efficiently the main heating system may be turned down, or even off, in fall and late winter. Glass fire doors will make the system even more efficient.

We can supply the materials and equipment.

- Special Equipment Kit containing:
 - 1 set of plans for the Brick-O-Lator,
 - 2 blower boxes with fans (265 C.F.M.),
 - 2 blower grills with on-off switches,
 - 1 thermostat (wall mounted),
 - 2 warm air registers (2 1/4" x 10"),
 - 1 Combust-Air adjustable vent.
- Fire brick as well as heat baffle and decorative brick.
- Dampers, ash dumps, clean-out doors.

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Miami-based Associated Press photographer Hal Moore, an old hand at Latin-American coverage, covered the war in Nicaragua. I asked him to tell us something about being a war photographer. Here is his report:

WAR PHOTOGRAPHER—Hal Moore, posing with National Guardsmen at Penas Blancas on the border of Nicaragua and Costa Rica. An advance firebase, this position was overrun by Sandanistas one week after this photo was taken and everyone in the picture, except Moore, was killed.

First thing you do every morning is put on your bulletproof vest. Then you lace up the Vietnam jungle boots, making sure to tie a double knot in the laces so they won't come untied and trip you up if you have to run for cover.

Then you put on the light-weight, poplin, military-style shirt with epaulets and big pockets. Pants are denim or cotton khaki with roomy pockets. A bush hat and two soft cotton bandanas complete the uniform.

Next you check out the survival gear. In a small canvas fishing bag you make sure you have: beef jerky, canteen of water, purification pills, antibiotics, flashlight, wound dressing, compass, maps, waterproof matches, freeze-dried rations for two days, heat tabs, light-weight poncho, insect repellent and toilet articles.

So began my daily routine while on assignment for the AP during the Nicaraguan civil war.

Veteran correspondents who have covered shooting conflicts all over the world agree that Nicaragua was one of most dangerous. Unlike most wars, newsmen were allowed to go almost anywhere they wanted during the fighting.

This meant crossing battle lines several times a day — National Guard checkpoints like the one where Bill Stewart of ABC was executed; Sandinista-rebel roadblocks like the one where AP photo stringer Richard Cross had his rental car riddled by machine-gun fire. It meant the helpless terror of being pinned down by aerial strafing or mortar and rocket fire; ambushes and danger almost every day in order to produce photos of a nation torn apart by civil war.

Over the years, photographers covering the violence in Nicaragua developed special needs and preferences in equipment. One never knew when one would have to spend the night trapped behind a Sandinista barricade or in a house during a mortar or air attack. It paid to be prepared.

In camera gear the emphasis was on lightness and durability. Most news photographers carried two motor-drive, single-lens reflex cameras loaded with black and white film and a third body for color. One full-size thyristor strobe and a pocket-size backup took care of the lighting. Both cameras and strobes should accept rechargeable as well as regular batteries.

Oddly enough, the longer telephoto lenses are rarely needed in combat. The action is usually too close to you. I carry one camera without a motor on a short strap with either an 18mm or 24mm wide angle lens. This is a quick-reaction camera.

A motor-driven camera goes on a long chest strap with lenses ranging from 35mm to 105mm, depending on the situation. A second motor-drive camera goes on a long shoulder strap with a 180mm telephoto lens. I prefer to carry a 2X doubler for the 180 rather than a heavier 300mm lens. This equipment, plus a 55mm macro lens with extension tube, all fits into a canvas camera bag with backpack-conversion capability. Also in the bag are: gaffer tape, emergency-repair tools and spare parts, marker pens, penlight flashlight, and my passport and press credentials. I also carry plenty of ziplock plastic bags to cope with the tropical rains of Central America.

When the situation allows I carry a third shoulder bag with a 500mm telephoto lens, table-top tripod, extra film, food and water, a changing bag, several towels, a change of clothes and a portable tape recorder.

The idea is to keep the absolutely essential photographic needs in one bag which stayed with me all the time. The survival kit and backup equipment could be cached and picked up later if the situation called for a hasty retreat.

I always carry a reasonable amount of local currency in my wallet plus several hundred dollars in U.S. currency hidden away. It was never a good idea to wear watches or expensive jewelry into combat and I avoided bright-colored clothing without looking too military. Our cars were all taped with AP-PRESS in gaffer tape.

One final item I shouldn't forget, a large, white flag that one of the maids at the Intercontinental Hotel in Managua sewed for me one night out of an old pillow case. Indispensable asset, that flag. It drew fire like a magnet!

Young Offenders Have Alternative

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Faced with an overcrowded, aging juvenile hall facility, officials here decided to seek an alternative to incarcerating youthful offenders.

They developed a work program that has won national and state awards and the compliments of juvenile-justice officials and parents. Brad Brown, the program's director, estimates it has saved Stanislaus County about $700,000 since it started a little over two years ago.

"It costs $36 a day to keep a kid in juvenile hall where 69 percent of the costs are never reimbursed to the county," Brown said. "Take the same kid, put him on a work program, and it only costs $2.50 a day and you have the benefit of his labor."

While those involved in serious crimes are still incarcerated, many guilty of such first-time offenses as burglary or bicycle theft are punished by a stint in the work detail, which involves about 100 separate projects.

Currently, about 200 youngsters are doing grounds keeping at county facilities, old cemeteries and local parks. Others are refinishing furniture and building a nursery that will grow the county's shrubbery, Brown said in a telephone interview.

A garden project furnishes fresh produce for the jail, local hospitals and the needy. Several youths have told Brown how much they enjoy working in the garden, and he believes the work has a calming effect on them.

"It used to be the county sold its old wood furniture at an auction, but since the youngsters have been refinishing the stuff, almost every county agency is asking for the old chairs and desks that they like better than newer products," Brown said.

He said the county had saved about $51,000 in six months by using refinished furniture.

THE BIG COVER-UP — These 180-foot towers on manmade Grissom Island, off Long Beach, California, look like luxury housing. Actually they are housing servicing equipment for oil wells drilled on a slant to oil fields located directly under the town of

Bill's Bill Of Fare Attracts Army Of Railroad Workers

BILL, Wyo. (AP) — Ask a hungry railroad construction worker between Douglas and Gillette, Wyo., where to go for lunch, and chances are he'll recommend dining in Bill.

Bill doesn't boast a gourmet restaurant or even a truck-stop cafe. But for years this one-store, two-gas pump, three-resident town was the only stop on the 117-mile stretch between the two larger communities in Wyoming's Powder River Basin.

Today the new town of Wright competes with Bill for the lunch trade on highway 59. However, a full third of Bill's residents — Dean Munkres — says he isn't worried about a possible decrease in market share.

Thanks to the rapid growth of low-sulfur Western coal as an alternative energy source, business in Bill is thriving as never before. Most of the new clientele are construction crews laying the longest stretch of railroad built in the United States since 1931. Burlington Northern's 116-mile Wyoming connection that will serve mines in the coal-rich basin.

Track and bridge builders who go to work at 5 a.m. develop hearty appetites by noon, much to the delight of the Munkres clan.

"This store hasn't produced much revenue for 40 years.

With the railroad construction, I sell $4,000 a month in candy bars alone," says Dean's son Dave, who lives outside Bill's mile-wide city limits.

"I've sat here a lot of years when you might count a half dozen cars," Dean confirms as he lounges against the old picnic table on the store's front porch. "Now it ain't safe to cross the highway."

Both of the senior Munkres' fellow townspeople live in trailers within Bill city limits: Lois Tranas, who runs Day Creek School for ranchers' children and teaches grades 1 through 8, lives in a trailer supplied by the school district.

The other resident is William

Roberts, project manager for the Neosho Construction Co., which specializes in roads and bridges and is helping Burlington Northern construct the rail line.

As long as the growth doesn't prevent him from pursuing a lifestyle as unique as the house specialty, jerky rounds labeled "beefaloe," Dean isn't complaining.

The senior Munkres bought the unincorporated town in 1953 and promptly appointed himself mayor, fire chief, police chief, city clerk and, last but not least powerful, received the title of postmaster from the federal government.

Restoring Grandeur Of Old Hotel

By BRUCE DALLAS
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP)—

Dust rises around the marble columns in the lobby as construction crews restore the grandness of a bygone era. Other workers modernize 565 rooms in preparation for the reopening this fall of one of Philadelphia's finest luxury hotels.

The Bellevue-Stratford opened in Victorian splendor in 1904. It closed on Nov. 18, 1976, four months after the Pennsylvania American Legion convention there. Nearly 150 people associated with that convention took ill with the mysterious malady that came to be known as Legionnaires' disease. Twenty-nine of them died and the name Bellevue-Stratford seemed scarred forever.

When the hotel reopens this month, it will be known as the Fairmont, part of a chain that includes the luxurious San Francisco hotel of the same name. But it will harbor ghosts of the Bellevue, which for 72 years drew royalty, every president from Woodrow Wilson to Richard Nixon, generals and entertainers.

The Bellevue was built at a cost of $8 million by George C. Boldt, who entered the hotel business in 1881. Boldt, later president of the Waldorf Astoria in New York, demanded the Bellevue's ballroom "be the most magnificent in the United States, if not the world, no matter what the cost." On opening day, the hotel served 4,200 meals and poured 7,000 drinks.

Once a jewel robbed disguised as a cripple stole $10,000 in diamonds from a salesman in a 7th-floor room. In 1926, Tex Rickard promoted the first heavyweight championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney from his 6th-floor suite. In 1956, a society matron tried to slide down a banister of the ballroom stairs and was killed.

But after the first report of deaths at the Pennsylvania Legionnaires convention, on Aug. 2, 1976, manager William Chadwick predicted: "This story could mutilate the good name of the Bellevue-Stratford."

The hotel closed 101 days later, its occupancy rate fallen to 3 percent. Mayor Frank Rizzo suggested razing it and building a hotel not contaminated by the tragedy. But the Bellevue was too grand, too ornate, too historically significant — too much a lady to be knocked down by a crane and hauled away in dump trucks.

Purchased by Rubin Associates, the "Grand Dame of Broad Street," as the Bellevue was often called, underwent a complete overhaul.

It was entered on the National Register of Historic Places, qualifying for tax breaks and federal restoration funds. The Fairmont Hotel Co., based in San Francisco, agreed to manage it and pumped $20 million into the restoration and modernization.

Manager Herman Weiner says that when the hotel reopens only the architecture will remain the same.

High ceilings, marble floors and columns and carved moldings remain. All bathroom fixtures have been replaced, with Portuguese marble used for sinks and dresser tops in the rooms. New air-conditioning and electrical systems have been installed.

A room will cost between $55 and $75 a night, suites more. And when the president comes to town, a 14th-floor suite stretching the full-block length of the hotel will be ready.

The Fairmont will employ 700 workers. Capable of serving 4,000 meals at a time, it will have a supper club with a 10-piece orchestra, a gourmet restaurant, a 24-hour restaurant in the lower level and 18 meeting rooms. Guests will be able to sip drinks in the lobby's lounge around the marble columns.

O.K. A FEW CARS ARE EQUAL TO OUR VOLVO. BUT THEIR PRICES FAR SURPASS IT.

If you want a car that offers quality, comfort, safety and performance, you don't have to buy a Volvo. But among the handful of above-average cars capable of offering this combination, you may find the only one within the capabilities of your budget is our Volvo.

Volvos offer many of the benefits and features of more expensive cars for less than you would expect. Like our responsive overhead cam fuel-injected engine. A superior four-wheel disc brake system. Plus improved steering and suspension systems that make our Volvo one of the best handling and performing cars available today.

So to find superior value in a new car, stop in at our Volvo showroom. Because while you may find comparable cars elsewhere, you may never find them at comparable prices. VOLVO 1979 VOLVO OF AMERICA CORPORATION. LEASING AVAILABLE.

ATTEND THE 1st ANNUAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
"FUN FESTIVAL"
Tuesday-October 2

PAST GLORIES—Dan Ledden of Oakland, Md., says he doesn't have the money to buy the proper equipment, but he uses what he has to restore turn-of-the-century sleighs and carriages to their original state. Among the vehicles he has worked on are surreys, a swayback sleigh, a Canadian taxi sleigh, a road wagon and a city park carriage. Most are vehicles he has bought.

Restores Old Sleights To Original Splendor

By JIM WANNAMAHER
Associated Press Writer
OAKLAND, Md. (AP) — Dan Ledden dreams of restoring turn-of-the-century sleighs to their original glories — classic lines, smart upholstery, glossy colors, bright designs and delicate pinstripping.

In pursuing that dream, the 25-year-old Garrett County man has worked in near-freezing conditions in a borrowed shop with primitive tools and limited funds, often walking the 15 miles from his family's home.

His reputation has spread locally and among carriage enthusiasts, which helps him locate restoration jobs or old vehicles for sale. He also traces the origin of sleighs and carriages.

Ledden has seven sleighs of his own and likes to ride a different one each day during the 2½ months a year that there's enough snow — 6 to 8 inches.

"I like to use a sleigh a day because they're all different designs," he said. "When I restore a vehicle, I restore it so it can be used. It's in the same condition as when it was new."

Ledden's interest in horse-drawn vehicles started in West

Chester, Pa., when he was 12 years old.

"Everybody else had horses and rode and I wanted to be different," he said. "To get a vehicle, I had to restore one." He found a two-wheel road cart with completely rotted upholstery and top, and restored it.

It was 11 years before he restored another vehicle, but the seed had been planted.

His family moved several times and Ledden spent three years as a professional modified-snowmobile racer in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan and New York. "I loved every minute of it but lost lots of money," the slender, mustachioed young man said.

After a spell as a department-store manager in Oakland, he returned to the sleighs and carriages, working in a partially heated building south of Redhouse near the West Virginia line.

He wears sweaters and gloves to compensate for the 45-degree temperatures but they make fine-sanding work more difficult.

"I don't have the money to go out and buy equipment, so I just have to get by with what I have," Ledden said. That's a hammer, screwdrivers, pliers, sanders and spray-painting equipment.

A restoration starts with taking pictures of what's left of the original finish, detail work and upholstery, which is usually wool. Then the wood is sanded bare and the painstaking process of re-etching the pinstripping begins. The pinstripping on a single wheel takes 1½ hours.

"I'm not an artist. I have no conception of how to do a straight line," said Ledden, who also learned to do the upholstery work. "It's a lot of trial and error, mostly error, but it comes."

He charges about $700 for restoring a two-seat surrey, replacing the upholstery and repainting it. The cost for other vehicles depends on their condition and ornamentation.

He calls on the Amish for new wheels. "I don't do wheels because that's a whole different field. I just don't have the equipment," Ledden said. "Mostly I do painting and varnishing."

DAVID JANSSEN IS part of an all-star cast in "S.O.S. Titanic," a three-hour motion picture-for-television, premiering on the "ABC Sunday Night Movie," at 9 p.m.,

Greatest Sea Tragedy

The courage and the horror that accompanied the sinking of the "unsinkable" Titanic in history's most awesome sea disaster are dramatically recreated in meticulous detail in "S.O.S. Titanic," the first movie to tell the complete story exactly as it happened.

The new three-hour film, with an all-star cast which includes David Janssen, Cloris Leachman, Susan Saint James and David Warner, will be presented as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," September 23 (9 p.m.).

James Costigan, who also wrote the scripts for "Eleanor and Franklin" and "Love Among the Ruins," has based this new version (the first to involve only characters who actually existed) on eyewitness accounts recorded at the time, faithfully recreating the life on shipboard before the crash, the sinking and the rescue, and the private dramas of the real people who experienced the nightmare.

Just 703 people — primarily women and children — survived out of a total of 2,206 when the 45,000-ton ship — four city blocks long and as tall as an 11 story building — hit an iceberg during its maiden voyage.

The screenplay, while dramatizing the terror of the sinking, also provides for the first time a rich look at life in all the carefully restricted areas of this greatest ocean liner of its time. Life in First Class — with a passenger list including celebrated names of business and society — is detailed in contrast to the more modest comforts of Second Class and the overcrowded economies of Third Class.

Even at sea, the human dramas and personal problems of the passengers are paramount. John Jacob Astor (Janssen) is haunted by the open snubs of his former friends, who have not forgiven him for divorcing his wife to marry a girl half his age (Beverly Ross). Schoolteachers Laurence Beesley (Warner) and Leigh Goodwin (Saint James) meet and almost fall in love, remaining separated by the caution that inhibits both their lives. Molly Brown (Leachman) delights in spending her husband's millions while she quietly mourns her solitary nights.

Myrer's 'Last Convertible'

Anton Myrer's bittersweet romantic novel, "The Last Convertible," the story of five Harvard College roommates, comes to television as a six-hour miniseries.

The story traces the lives of the "Five Fusiliers of F Entry," the effect of World War II upon their lives, and their relationships with the girls they met, loved and, in several instances, married.

Published in 1978, "The Last Convertible," which has been on the best-selling lists for months, recently came out in paperback. It is replete in the ambiance of the Big Band era, the manners and mores of the Ivy League colleges in the prewar era, and the shift in values which occurred after their lives were disrupted by the war.

Starring as the 'Fusiliers' are: Perry King as Russ Currier, a handsome socialite; Bruce Boxleitner as George Virdon, a serious scholarship student; John Shea as second generation Irish-American Terry Garrigan; Edward Albert as ambitious Ron 'Dal' Dalrymple; and Michael Nouri as French war refugee Jean des Barres.

Starring as Radcliffe student Chris Farris, whose love affair with Currier has a far-reaching effect on the five roommates, is Deborah Raffin.

The 'Fusiliers' enter Harvard in September, 1940, and their youthful exuberance and naivete is apparent in the pleasure they derive from Jean's luxurious sophomore year, then word of Packard convertible, dubbed "the Empress." Hysteria follows the outbreak of war during their sophomores year, then word of the death of Jean brings home the war with cruel realism.

Trapper John Is Back

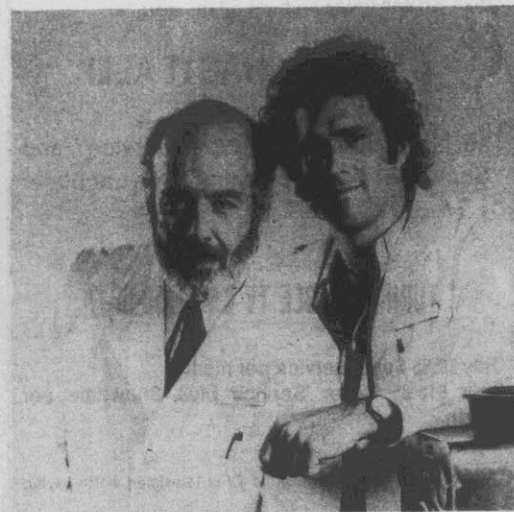

It's 28 years after Korea, and Dr. John McIntyre — the legendary Trapper John of "M*A*S*H" fame — now a noticeably older and more sedate civilian, is finally learning what it's like to be on the receiving end when he's faced with a carbon copy of what he used to be like — an impetuous, rebellious wisecracker of a young surgeon.

Pernell Roberts stars in the title role of "Trapper John, M.D.," premiering Sunday, September 23 (10 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Jack Gilford and Roddy McDowall guest star as a couple of disaster-victim patients who figure prominently in the developing relationship between Trapper and Gonzo.

Trapper's days of sewing up and cutting up with the 4077th Mobile Army Surgical Hospital are far in his past, and he is now the chief surgeon at the mammoth San Francisco Memorial Hospital.

PERNELL ROBERTS and GREGORY HARRISON star as Trapper John and Dr. Gonzo Gates, in "Trapper John, M.D.," to have its premiere Sunday, September 23 at 10 p.m. on CBS.

VW Is Best Co-Star

Most actors tactfully refuse to name their favorite co-star. Not Dean Jones. Even with 23 film credits featuring such actresses as Jane Fonda, Suzanne Pleshette, Michele Lee, Sandy Duncan and Connie Stevens, Jones is unafraid to name the prime recipient of his affection.

"My favorite co-star is Herbie. My favorite leading lady," he added with a grin, "is a different matter."

Herbie is the humanized 1963 Volkswagen beetle with a world-wide fan following and cement tireprints in the forecourt of Hollywood's famous Chinese Theatre. Jones and Herbie first teamed in "The Love Bug," a popular comedy which makes its television premiere on "Disney's Wonderful World" Sunday, September 23 (7 p.m.).

"I know that VW backward and forward, and sometimes it really does seem almost human," Jones said. "There was one shot in 'Herbie Goes to Monte Carlo' where we had to speed across the Place d'Irena. I thought the other cars were being driven by stunt drivers, so I stepped on the gas. Herbie flashed in and out of traffic, missing cars by inches.

"I found out later there wasn't a stunt driver around. We had screeched and skidded our way across three lanes of frightened Parisian motorists."

Jones was enthusiastic about the film from the beginning of production and was not surprised by the immense popularity of "The Love Bug."

"I was into auto racing when I met Herbie, so from my point of view it was perfect casting.

"Herbie had a souped-up motor and could do 150 miles an hour. I liked to drive fast and it was fun to race Herbie around the track, but co-star Buddy Hackett turned white as a sheet when he was with us."

"The Love Bug" was one of ten movies Jones has made on the Disney lot. Other films are "That Darn Cat," "The Shaggy D.A.," "Blackbeard's Ghost," "$1,000,000 Duck" and "The Ugly Dachshund."

Jones has recently taken to playing more serious roles and portrayed Charles Colson in last year's "Born Again," the film version of the best-selling book.

The Teen Scene

MELISSA SUE ANDERSON, of "LITTLE HOUSE ON THE PRAIRIE," received a very painful cut and bruise on her shoulder while filming an upcoming segment of the series. Melissa, an extremely dedicated actress, insists on doing her own stunts whenever possible.

"THREE'S COMPANY" star SUZANNE SOMERS was spotted in a high-priced boutique adding a few accessories to her wardrobe — 12 belts that cost $300 each!

'John-Boy' returns to "THE WALTONS" this year — but don't look for RICHARD THOMAS. The role will be filled by a young actor whose name is ROBERT WIGHTMAN.

ROBERT EVANS, producer of JOHN TRAVOLTA's new movie entitled "URBAN COWBOY," reports "that's what John did for disco in "SATURDAY NIGHT FEVER" is nothing compared to what he's going to do for country." The set, on location in Texas at GILLEY's, the largest country-western bar in the world, has been kept closed and the dances performed by Travolta are 'top secret.'

In spite of the fact that "STARSKY & HUTCH" was cancelled, DAVID SOUL is a busy man. He's just filmed a TV movie and will fly to Israel soon to emcee a TV show. Next is a Christmas special which he'll tape in Oklahoma, then David heads to Japan for a concert tour.

America's Heritage

Burl Ives, America's music superstar and Academy Award nominee for one of his many movies, acts as host of "Burl Ives' America," a serious — yet witty — examination of the men and women who built America. It will air Tuesday, Sept. 25 at (10 p.m.) on PBS.

"There has been a trend toward innovation in program forms," say producers John Barrett and Glen Duncan, "... you might call "Burl Ives' America" a tongue-in-cheek narrative with music."

The humor which bubbles beneath gives the viewer a different perspective on our American heritage. "We are a nation with a sense of humor," says Duncan, "at the conclusion of the show, Ives points out that such humor often formed the basis of our folk legends and songs."

"The humor," adds Barrett, "is real... even if it is invented. This story-telling ability of Americans prodates the world famous Mark Twain."

Ives takes us to the 1800s — actually a painstakingly restored mountain village called 'Silver Dollar City' — and shows us the people of the era. The wagon-maker, the blacksmith, the gunsmith, and even a glib rainmaker who is as surprised as anyone when his pitch actually works.

As the show progresses, we meet the local 'inventor.' Not only were the 1880s full of inventors, but, says Ives, "they were often a better show than the rainmaker." A big-city attorney arrives to assist the inventor in obtaining a patent. The attorney also succeeds in stealing the affection of a local lovely, Sarie Ellen McCoy. The invention is a leaky submarine and, says Ives, "it's hard to tell which will get the lawyer first — the submarine or Sarie Ellen's boyfriend."

In addition to humor, the program contains a liberal dash of music from America's past — everything from a rip-roaring saloon number to the quiet reflections of the host as he performs in a beautifully restored log church built in the 1860s.

WHEN RICHARDSON (Christopher Blake, r) takes lovely Lydia Aspen (Mel Martin) skating, he unwittingly touches off a chain reaction of tempestuous first love. Also smitten by "Love For Lydia" are, top to bottom: Alex Sanderson (Jeremy Irons), Tom Holland (Peter Davison) and Blackie Johnson (Ralph Arliss), in the 12-episode story which premieres on Masterpiece Theatre on PBS Sunday evening, September 23 at 9.

'Love For Lydia'

Bob-haired beauties with Cupid's bow lips. Gin and jazz and making whoopee in topless touring cars with running boards. Black bottom, the Charleston and hand-cranked phonographs grinding out tinny tunes like "Ain't We Got Fun?"

America had no monopoly on the gaudy post-war flapper era, as Masterpiece Theatre viewers will see when "Love for Lydia" debuts Sunday evening, September 23, (9 p.m.) on PBS.

As F. Scott Fitzgerald was the biographer of U.S. flaming youth, H.E. Bates painted the portrait of its British equivalent in his novel on which this 12-episode Mobil-funded PBS series is based.

Set in the English countryside, 'Lydia' depicts the coming of age of a beautiful child-woman heiress (Mel Martin) driven by a passion for experience.

On four young men, bewitched by 'Love for Lydia,' the willful heiress bestows a legacy of traumatic, tragic first love. Lydia's swains represent all walks of life — a young reporter (Christopher Blake); his two friends who become his rivals for Lydia's attentions, one a well-to-do young man about town (Jeremy Irons), the other a farmer (Peter Davison) whose sister (Sherrie Hewson) loves the reporter; and a mechanic-chauffeur (Ralph Arliss) named Blackie who's party to some of Lydia's darkest hours.

Representing the older generation, the relatives into whose genteel keeping Lydia is thrust when her father dies, are veteran British stars Beatrix Lehmann, Rachel Kempson and Michael Aldridge.

When "Love for Lydia" aired on the BBC, British critics applauded the "haunting series" for its "revelation of how people change, interrelate, love and destroy each other." They hailed "Bates in an incandescent vein," a cast "of remarkable all-round strength" and "a visual attraction which may rarely be exceeded."

The premiere episode of the series will run 90 minutes; the remaining 11 will be presented in one-hour segments through December 9.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Isn't the actress who is now playing Kelly on "All My Children" the same one who played Kitty a while ago? J. HOLCOMB, GREENVILLE, S.C.

A: Yes. And isn't it confusing, especially since poor Kitty died such a tragic death about a year ago? The actress' name is Francesca James, and she's had an on-going relationship with AMC co-star Peter White (Linc Tyler) for several years.

Q: What other shows has Erin Moran, 'Joanie' on "Happy Days," been on? What is her address? B. McMILLAN, SUPPLY, N.C.

A: Erin has grown from a cute little kid into a striking young lady in the six years that she's been the youngest member of the Cunningham family on "Happy Days." She is now being recognized as something other than a child actress, having landed roles in the "Heroes of the Bible" and "Sweepstakes" series. Write to her c/o ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Q: Do contestants who win all that money on game shows have to pay taxes on it? G. WISELY, SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: Absolutely!

Q: Tell me about the young actor who plays Albert on "Little House on the Prairie." M. GARDNER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: His name is Matthew Laborteaux, and it's hard to believe, but he was an autistic child who didn't speak until he was past his fifth birthday! An extremely talented 14-year-old, he received an Emmy nomination for his role in a "Special Treat" presentation entitled "Poppa and Me."

Q: Was Natalie Wood in the premiere segment of "Hart to Hart"? J. DUNAVAN, PEMBROKE, N.C.

A: Yes, but only briefly. Incidentally, Natalie and her hubby, Robert Wagner, are very involved with the series. Not only does Wagner co-star, but the couple's company, Rona II, is producing the series, in conjunction with Spelling-Goldberg.

Q: Who played the role of the policewoman who lost her partner (Desi Arnaz, Jr.) in "To Kill A Cop"? Is it the same actress who plays Mrs. Columbo? T. PRICE, SEVEN SPRINGS, N.C.

A: Christine Belford co-starred as Agnes Cusack in the film. Perhaps you remember her from her portrayal of Carlie Kirkland on the "Banacek" series. The actress who is cast as Mrs. Columbo is Kate Mulgrew.

TWENTY YEARS LATER — Michael Landon, who is now the executive producer and star of NBC-TV's "Little House on the Prairie," began his career as a leading American television star twenty years ago, as Little Joe Cartwright (l) on NBC-TV's "Bonanza." He says there have been major changes in television during those twenty years.

Landon Notes Changes

"Television has changed a lot in the past 20 years — but so have I," says Michael Landon, star and executive producer of "Little House on the Prairie," who is celebrating his 20th year as a leading star of American television.

It was in September, 1959, that viewers first saw him in the role of Little Joe Cartwright in "Bonanza." When it started he was barely old enough to vote, and his only interest was in acting. When the show left the air 14 years later, he was known around the world, and had also become a respected writer and director as well.

"Sure there have been major changes over the years. For instance, most of those early 'Bonanza' segments were nothing more than gun-fights, fist-fights, and wild chases on horseback," says Landon. "We couldn't get involved on character studies — stories about people. TV was all action then. The stories we're doing today on 'Little House' never would have made it as 'Bonanza' scripts.

Landon points out that another major change in the past 20 years is the cost of television production.

"When we started with 'Bonanza,' it was the most expensive show on television. We shot them all in color, while most other shows were still shooting black-and-white film. We went on locations to get a good look to our show. I was shocked when I learned that we had spent $100,000 on that first hour.

"Today that's peanuts. The average hour of television today costs $500,000!"

"Most people are surprised to learn that the famous Cartwright ranch was nothing but a false front which was located inside a stage. We had painted sky and fake trees around it. You can't do stuff like that today. We spend millions and millions each year to get a good authentic look to 'Little House.' We travel from Northern California's gold rush country to Arizona to get the proper locations now," he says.

CLINT EASTWOOD (r) STARS as a farmer searching for the gang that killed his wife and son, and Chief Dan George portrays an Indian he meets during his quest, in "The Outlaw Josey Wales," a western drama on "The Sunday Night Big Event" September 23 (9-11:30 p.m.) on NBC.

be, he still manages to gun down adversaries like someone swatting flies.

Eastwood manages some exceptional directorial flourishes, topped by the tense, teasing confrontation with Fletcher. He also supplied Josey Wales with an affection for spitting, a feat which the actor reportedly practiced for months prior to shooting. Months of practice paid off, and his mastery of salivary sharpshooting is repeatedly documented.

Bruce Surtees' cinematography, as in two other Eastwood-directed films — "Play Misty for Me" and "High Plains Drifter" — again effortlessly captures the beauty of the dusty locales as well as the violence that erupts.

As expected, bullets fly with unerring accuracy from any gun that Eastwood picks up in the film. Also, no matter how outrageously out-numbered he may

'Which Mother Is Mine?'

A teenage girl is torn between her 'natural' mother and the foster parents who have given her a loving home for six years in "Which Mother Is Mine?," a poignant drama airing on the "ABC Afterschool Specials" series, Wednesday, September 26 (4:30 to 5:30 p.m.).

The program gives viewers a beautifully sensitive story powerfully played by an exceptional cast. The girl's life is about to be changed by a decision which is not legally hers to make — a Supreme Court ruling says a minor does not have the right to choose which parent he or she lives with — and, as too often happens, the adults underestimate the teenager's awareness of her own feelings. She is prohibited from making the final decision, but she discovers the strength to stand up for herself and make her voice heard anyway, and that is all-important.

Melissa Sue Anderson stars as Alexandria (Alex) Benton, who has lived as a foster child since age nine with Lila and Tom Dennis and their two children. After six years of loving and caring for the girl, the Dennises have started adoption proceedings, but the girl's natural mother — who left her ten years earlier — calls to announce that she is coming to visit and to challenge the adoption.

Angry and confused, Alex resists feeling anything for her mother, Jill Benton, but as the two spent time together Alex begins to recognize the problems which drove her mother away, and to feel the warmth of the woman's love for her. Torn between loyalty and love for her foster parents and her growing feelings for Jill, Alex runs away from the situation, hiding out until her understanding boyfriend reminds her of her late father's belief that "sometimes a person has to stand up and fight for what's right for them."

Others in the cast are Lee Kessler as Jill Benton, Marion Ross as Lila Dennis, Bruce Kirby as Tom Dennis, Shannon Terhune as Debbie Dennis, Tye Mitchell as Peter Dennis and Eric Scott as Brian Matthews. Also starring are Jean Le Bouvier as Mrs. Cornell, Virginia Capers as Judge Atherton, Nomi Mitty as Susan Levy, Woody Eney as Ben Tiggs, Dorothy Sinclair as Carla Benedek and Gus Corrado as the waiter.

The teleplay was written by Durrell Royce Crays from a book by Joan Oppenheimer.

Espy Is Coming Back!

Hang on to your heartstrings, gals, because William Gray Espy is coming back to the daytime 'soap.'

You don't remember him? For shame! Espy, a tall, handsome southern guy with blue eyes, became daytime TV's 'hottest property' back in 1973 when he originated the role of Snapper Foster on "The Young and the Restless." Within a year, Espy's portrayal of the moody, sexy Snapper had put him at the top of popularity lists in all the fan magazines, and had thousands of screaming fans banging on the stage doors of "TYATR." Of course, there had been many such daytime idols before Espy came on the scene, but there's not been one since his departure to generate this kind of excitement.

Three years ago, at the height of his popularity, Espy, split, saying he'd lost his identity and privacy. He traveled around the world, reportedly spent some time in a monastery, toured with a play, but spent most of his time enjoying the anonymity of street life in such cities as New York, Atlanta and Nashville. Offers from daytime shows continued to pour in, but they fell on deaf ears.

Then, Paul Rauch, producer of NBC-TV's "Another World," heard that Espy was staying with friends in Nashville. Rauch got in touch with him and hit the jackpot. "After all these years," says Rauch, "Espy has agreed to join our show."

Bill Espy will debut on 'AW' at the end of September, playing a mysterious stranger who will become involved in the Mac-Rachel-Janice tangle.

Why did he decide to come out of seclusion and return to the ranks of the daytime 'soaps'? Who knows? One can only assume that the young man has grown up. Also, there's the matter of bills that must be paid — whether one works or not.

Anyway, welcome back, William Gray Espy. It's been a long time, and we've all missed you. It will be good to see that handsome face of yours once again.

David Campaigns

David Hartman, host of ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," has once again been named National Campaign Chairman for the American Heart Association. Hartman is now serving in the same capacity for the 1979 fundraising drive expected to exceed $80 million, a record. He will continue as head of the 1980 drive.

"California Fever" is CBS-TV's new quick-moving, light-hearted series about several Southern California teen-agers whose world revolves around cars, girls, music and hanging out — and that usually means the beach.

Starring in the series, which premieres Tuesday, September 25 (8 p.m.), are Jimmy McNichol and Marc McClure as Vince Butler and Ross Whitman. The two guys are best friends whose concerns and adventures are those of all teen-agers — cars, dating, peer approval, pocket money, part-time jobs, parents and school. Lorenzo Adams also stars as Rick, an older and more worldly friend.

With adulthood not far off, the present becomes intensely meaningful — a time to share experiences, to test oneself, to have a ball while learning about living.

In the premiere segment, Vince succeeds in landing rock star Rex Smith for a live spot on his underground (3-watt) radio station, just as the F.C.C. prepares to pull his plug.

Smith, whose hit singles, "You Take My Breath Away" and "Sooner or Later," have ridden high on the charts all summer, guest stars as himself. Vince is a disc jockey everybody calls "The Ghost of the Coast," on a small radio station he operates out of the backroom of Rick's Place, a snackshop and skate rental emporium owned by Rick. Vince has managed to persuade Rex Smith to stop by for an interview, and the excitement and anticipation among the kids at Sunset Beach is feverish.

At that moment, a Federal Communications Commission investigator, acting on the complaint of Hyena Harry, a fatuous top-40 D.J. on a 50,000 watt station, steps into the picture. But the F.C.C.'s Mr. Riley can't shut Vince down until he can find the transmitter.

Vince gets a little help from his friends, Ross, a hyperkinetic super-mechanic, and Laurie (Michele Tobin). They offer to lead Riley to the transmitter, but their route is roundabout enough to give Vince time to host a Rex Smith mini-concert for the Sunset Beach crowd.

Disaster!

The inaugural flight of America's first supersonic transport is launched with a celebrity-studded passenger list, but the plane may never land in "SST Disaster in the Sky," an enthralling as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" September 25 (12-midnight).

The all-star cast includes Lorne Greene, Bert Convy, Martin Milner, Doug McClure, Burgess Meredith, Peter Graves, Tina Louise, Season Hubley, Robert Reed, Susan Strasberg, Brock Peters, George Maharis, Barbara Anderson and Misty Rowe.

The invitational flight of "Maiden One" is launched with fanfare from New York with Paris as its destination. At the controls is Captain Walsh, played by Reed.

Agreeable?

David Janssen isn't a doctor, a detective, or any of the other characters he's portrayed in a long career, during which he has starred in four television series and countless movies.

"The thing is, I'm a professional actor," he says.

But he did play a role he really knows about in "Mayday at 40,000 Feet," because one of the things he is, when he isn't working, is a pilot.

In the suspense drama, to be broadcast as "The CBS Late Night Movie" Tuesday, September 25 (12:30 a.m.), Janssen stars as Capt. Pete Douglas, pilot of a transcontinental flight. Also starring are Don Meredith, Christopher George, Ray Milland, Broderick Crawford and Jane Powell.

"I never went to college. I have no degree in anything," says Janssen. "I may have played a doctor for four years in 'The Fugitive,' but I could never be one. Anyway, I don't think people expect anything from an actor but a good acting job. Audiences have become too sophisticated to identify an actor with the role he plays."

Audiences can certainly identify Janssen as a successful actor now, although there were years when he thought success was beyond his reach. In those days, his idea of success was being able to buy two suits at a time,

Suspense-Filled Drama

A maniac on the Los Angeles freeways is methodically attacking lone women drivers by pushing them off of the road with his powerful van, and a television reporter, out to prove her independence and skill, is determined to find him, in "Death Car on the Freeway." The suspenseful drama, starring Shelley Hack and George Hamilton, will air on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" September 25 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Hack stars as Janette Clausen, an ambitious but inexperienced television reporter. Her estranged husband, Ray Jeffries (Hamilton), is the anchorman for a rival television news program and he's convinced that his wife cannot succeed professionally without him.

When a woman swears a man tried to run her off the road, and several other women report similar accidents, Jan theorizes that one deranged driver is responsible. But the police, headed by Lt. Haller (Peter Graves), at first discount her theory and when they can no longer deny the presence of the 'Freeway Fiddler,' they insist they'll solve the mystery on their own.

With no support from her husband and with the police antagonized by her relentless pursuit of the case, Jan puts her career on the line and endangers her life as she doggedly searches for the mystery man.

Other stars besides Graves who will be featured in cameo roles are Frank Gorshin, Harriet Nelson, Barbara Rush, Dinah Shore, Abe Vigoda and Alfie Wise.

Shelley Hack is currently starring in "Charlie's Angels." She made her acting debut in the motion picture "If I Ever See you Again." Her face is known to millions due to her success as a newspaper, magazine and television model.

Carol Visits 'Mad'

Everybody around the offices of "Mad Magazine" in New York City were thrown into a state of shock recently when Carol Burnett and daughter Jody paid them an unscheduled visit.

Life Story

Martin Sheen and Sissy Spacek star in "Badlands," a chilling American true-to-life story about the intertwining of teenage romance and thrill-killing, to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Night Movie" Friday, September 28 (12:30 a.m.).

Kit (Sheen), a menial laborer from South Dakota in his mid-20s, becomes involved with 15-year-old Holly (Spacek). When her father opposes Kit, he and Holly murder him and run away through the Badlands towards escape in the mountains. As law-enforcement officers and bounty hunters track them down, the two misfits, living in a dream world of pulp-fiction romance and picturing themselves as adventurous rebels, continue to kill whoever else stands in their way until they achieve their ultimately self-destructive goal of notoriety.

Warren Oates plays Holly's father, and other cast members are Ramon Bieri, Alan Vint and Gary Littlejohn.

The film is based on the true story of the Charles Starkweather-Carol Fugate murder spree of the 1950s in which they killed 11 persons.

Cast Recollections

The filming of "S.O.S. Titanic" is over, and the drama of the sea disaster will air as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," September 23 (9 p.m.). But the stars will long remember the characters they portrayed.

When David Janssen was signed to play John Jacob Astor, the producer sent him a copy of Walter Lord's book, "A Night to Remember." "I was riveted by it," says David, "so I read every book on the subject. I knew very little about it until then."

"There is a moving scene in the movie when Astor stands with another millionaire of the day — Benjamin Guggenheim — watching the last of the lifeboats row away. In effect, it says that money has not brought either of them happiness — Guggenheim was not happily married, but he couldn't face the scandal of divorce. And now their combined fortunes can't save them from life's ultimate fate — death.

"I was so fascinated by the man that I think there could be an entire film in the Astor story."

"I once appeared in the title role of a show called 'The Indomitable Molly Brown,' so I knew my character very well," says Cloris Leachman.

"Molly was rough, tough and ready for life. She was a self-made woman who came from a poor family but grew up into a colorful character. She took big bites out of life.

"She always wanted to be respected and accepted, but she found it a struggle even when her husband struck it rich with a vein of silver ore. She once gave a party for 300 and nobody came. Then she tried being an actress. She worshipped the rich and respected them afar, much as a movie fan would worship an idol today.

"James Costigan has caught the many facets of her character in the film. When the ship began to sink she dressed herself to the 'nines,' donned all her jewelry and then set about doing all she could to help. At one point she had a verbal battle with a crew member in her lifeboat who refused to turn back for more survivors for their already overcrowded craft. She became a minor heroine."

Ian Holm found that portraying J. Bruce Ismay, the Ship's Captain, was a difficult undertaking. "His cowardly act of leaving the sinking ship was one of the most difficult scenes I have ever had to play. I could find nothing that conveyed his thoughts about it afterwards.

"He epided his days a complete recluse. He never recovered and lived a hermit-like existence."

'Betsy' Has All-Star Cast

Laurence Olivier heads an all-star cast in "The Betsy," a drama of intrigue and power set against a backdrop of the high-stakes world of the auto industry, to be presented for the first time on television, on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," September 26 (9 to 11:15 p.m.).

Robert Duvall, Katharine Ross, Tommy Lee Jones, Jane Alexander, Lesley-Anne Down, Joseph Wiseman, Kathleen Beller, Edward Herrmann and Paul Rudd also star in the film, based on the best-selling novel written by Harold Robbins.

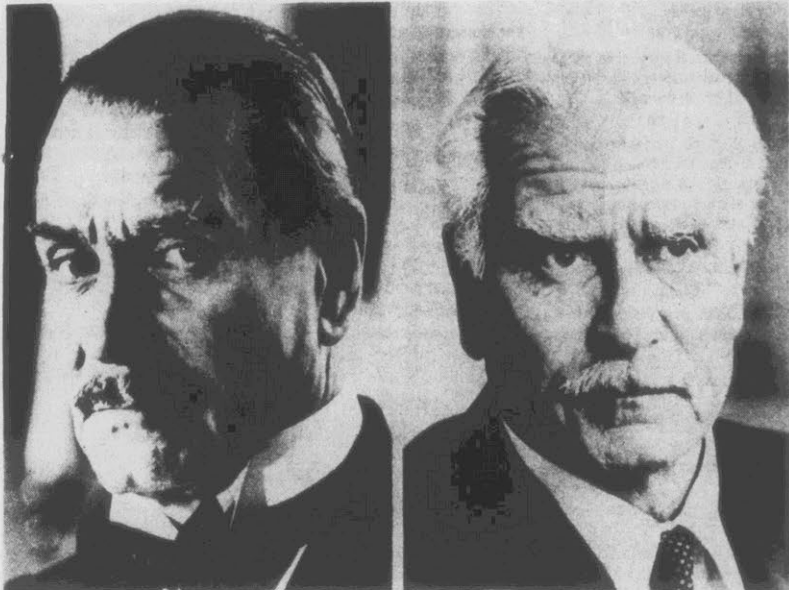

Olivier stars as Loren Hardeman Sr., powerful patriarch and founder of the immense Bethlehem Motor Corporation, now run by his grandson, Loren Hardeman III (Duvall). Hardeman III's hatred for the old man has festered since childhood, when he witnessed his grandfather seducing his mother. He channels that hatred into a corporate power play, tearing apart the giant corporation and the Hardeman family.

Although Hardeman III runs the company, Hardeman Sr. still wields considerable influence. He hires race car driver Angelo Perino (Jones) to design an innovative new automobile, the Betsy, named after his great-granddaughter. Hardeman III is against the plan, forcing a confrontation between the two iron-willed men.

Hardeman III loses this confrontation, but driven by his hatred, he sabotages the Betsy. Perino has his own ideas about his future in Bethlehem Motors, and regardless of the outcome of the Betsy, tries to stake his claim in the company by exercising influence over the Hardeman women — Hardeman III's wife, daughter and mistress.

LAURENCE OLIVIER, starring as the founder of a large automobile company, ages from his 40s (l) to his 90s, in "The Betsy," to be presented on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," September 26 (9-11:15 p.m.) on CBS.

One In Every Crowd

There's one in every crowd... a bumbler with two left feet, someone who is nothing more than a real slob.

In CBS-TV's new comedy series, "The Last Resort" (seen Wednesdays, 8:30 to 9 p.m.), the character named Zach Comstock is your 'perfect' klutz. If a tray is dropped, Zach dropped it. When a guest in the dining room is served an omelet instead of a waffle for breakfast — blame it on Zach. And... girls, beware! He's the macho man who puts the 'make' on every female creature he sees!

Walter Olkewicz plays Zach, and he's really not a bad guy. In fact, he's kind of nice. True, he's overweight, but his forte is comedy, and extra pounds somehow seem to enhance a comic's ability to perform effectively.

Walter is a native of Bayonne, N.J., where he lived until a quest for a higher education led him to St. Mary of the Plains in Dodge City, Kans., and Colorado State University.

He says he's always wanted to be a performer and, after appearing in a number of high school productions, his interest was solidified.

Walter's comedic abilities began to come into existence while he was attending Colorado State, and he subsequently was one of the founders of an improvisational group named Satire-Day Bath, which proved to be very popular and successful. So much so that when the troupe toured colleges outside Colorado, it received standing ovations.

The robust actor's talents have not been confined solely to comedy, however. He has appeared as Macduff in "Macbeth," and in two contemporary classics — "Of Mice and Men" as Lennie and "A Streetcar Named Desire," in which he played Stanley.

Walter's television appearances include episodes of "The Rockford Files" and "All in the Family." He also appeared in a number of feature films, including the current box-office hit, "Love at First Bite." He recently completed a comedic turn in Steven Spielberg's "1941."

Although his name isn't listed in the Guinness Book of World Records, Danny Lee has crashed more cars than anyone — and he isn't even a race driver.

success of every motion picture," says Lee, "especially in a Disney film where effects usually play an important role."

Lee is the special effects craftsman responsible for the chaotic collisions and boisterous blow-outs in "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," "The Great Race," "The Ambushers" and "Bonnie and Clyde."

He was also responsible for the special effects in "The Love Bug," airing on "Disney's Wonderful World" Sunday, September 23 (7 to 9 p.m.).

"Special effects are vital to the

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
 PFA Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — ROBIN STRASSER, who plays Dorian Lord on "ONE LIFE TO LIVE," has separated from her husband, actor LAWRENCE LUCKINBILL.

Look for Steve Guttenberg, star of the CBS series "BILLY" to appear in more "Gleem" commercials — on advice from NANCY WALKER, who is beginning her ninth year with Bounty kitchen paper towels.

LINDA BLAIR was put on three years' probation when she pleaded guilty to conspiring to possess cocaine on condition that she make one public appearance each of the three years to inform youth groups about the consequences of drug abuse.

LAWRENCE WELK is swinging into his 25th year on TV, a record no other individual can approach. That's the same Welk once signed by ABC for a 13-week tryout. Then, after 16 years, the network let him go after deciding that his 'one-two-three' flavor had 'had' it.

DONNA SUMMER's television special being taped this month boasts an $800,000 budget. That's the largest ever for a one-hour show.

MELINDA NAUD, who played Lieut. Crandall on "OPERATION PETTICOAT," has asked for and received her release from Universal. Melinda has been signed to guest-star in a segment of "THE YOUNG MAVERICK."

SALLY STRUTHERS — who is not interested in having any more children — confesses that she gained 43 pounds during her pregnancy.

Look for FRANK SINATRA JR. and PATRICK WAYNE in the Halloween segment of "THE LOVE BOAT."

BURT REYNOLDS' Dinner Theatre in Jupiter, Fla., was pressed into service as an evacuation center for hurricane victims of that area.

CBS is planning a spin-off of POLLY HOLLIDAY's character, Flo, from its "ALICE" series. The series, to be called "FLO," will call for the talkative waitress to leave Mel's diner in an hour-long special segment of "Alice" which will be telecast later this season.

In another 'first' in his distinguished career as actor, producer, director, playwright, author and educator, JOHN HOUSEMAN, star of "PAPER CHASE," has formed his own independent production company.

Bobby's New Partner

An intensive search by Lawrence Welk's dancing star, Bobby Burgess, to find a dancing partner, sent him flying cross-country to meet, talk and dance with a total of 36 comely lasses recommended by a score of Bob's dancing friends in cities throughout the nation.

Three were invited to fly to Los Angeles for individual audition-TV appearances, and one of the three was beautiful Elaine Niverson, discovered in Houston, Texas.

"Elaine was the most outstanding of all," says Bobby. "I was sure it would turn out that way, but I didn't want to make a snap decision on something as important as this, so I followed up on every single recommendation!"

Welk and Bob finally agreed Elaine was perfect for the important spot, and she joined the musical family when the Welk troupe flew to Lake Tahoe for its 17th annual three-week Harrah's Club engagement. Subsequently, she and Bobby flew to a dozen cities for 'break-in' appearances.

Now Elaine will be introduced to the troupe's legion of TV fans on "The Lawrence Welk Show" this Saturday, Sept. 29th (7p.m. on Channel 7).

Welk will present a show featuring the music of Richard Rodgers, and the two terpsichoreans will be dancing a Bolero-type routine to the "South Pacific" favorite, "Bali Hai."

Other well-known compositions by Rodgers include "It's a Grand Night for Dancing," "Isn't It Romantic" and "Falling In Love With Love."

Tom Netherton will sing "If I Loved You," Ken Delo's solo is "The Simple Life" and the entire ensemble will present a medley of hits from "Sound of Music."

JIM HART helped the Saint Louis Cardinals stage a strong comeback in the latter stages of the 1978 NFL season, but this time, he hopes to lead his team into the playoffs. The Cards face the Washington Redskins in a key NFC East matchup Sunday, September 23 on CBS starting at 2 p.m.

Coming On Stronger!

The folks around the offices of the St. Louis Cardinals call their 1978 football season, "A tale of two seasons." What they are referring to is the miserable 0-8 start which turned around in the second half when the Cards captured six of their last eight games. This year, St. Louis hopes the end of the '78 campaign is a sign of things to come, and if the first few games of this season can be taken at face-value, the Bud-Wilkinson-coached squad may emerge as a surprise contender in the tough NFC East.

Now the Cards have a golden chance to improve their standing in their division when they challenge the Washington Redskins in an NFL Regional telecast on CBS Sunday, September 23 (2 p.m.).

One of the areas where the Cardinals remained consistent throughout last season was the passing attack, with quarterback Jim Hart, a proven veteran who enjoyed his finest year in '78.

Hart was rewarded at the end of the season as the club's Most Valuable Player, and considering his stats, it's no wonder. The strong-armed right-hander completed a Cardinal-record 240 passes in 476 attempts, another club mark.

He threw for 3,121 yards and moved up to 10th on the all-time NFL list in two categories; most passes attempted (3,901) and most passes completed (1,965).

DREW PEARSON, the man the Dallas Cowboys call on for crucial catches, is considered by experts to be the most feared wide receiver in the NFL. The Cowboys challenge the Cleveland Browns when the two rivals clash on ABC's Monday Night Football September 24 starting at 9 p.m.

Pearson, Most Feared

You may see him streaking down field like a young deer. Or you may see him run a curl pattern, leaving his defender helpless to stop another reception.

No matter how Drew Pearson catches his passes, the Dallas Cowboys are certainly glad to have this 27-year-old who was once an unknown free agent rookie from Tulsa.

Pearson and the Cowboys take on the Cleveland Browns in a key intra-conference matchup, to be featured on ABC Sports' "Monday Night Football," September 24 (9 p.m.).

If there is an overriding pride in the Cowboys' publicity department, it is the number of free agents who have not only made the club, but have also gone on to achieve either All-Pro or Pro Bowl status.

And Pearson is the proudest of them all. Some still consider the fleet receiver the most dangerous in his profession in the NFL.

Last season, Tony Hill, another talented pass-catcher, stole some of the glory from his teammate, but Pearson is still acknowledged as the man to go to in clutch situations.

"Tony really came into his own quickly for us," says Dallas coach Tom Landry, "but Drew was used as a decoy a lot and is still our prime receiver in crucial situations."

Hill caught 46 passes and Pearson 46, but the latter showed his true worth in the playoffs, when he nabbed two crucial touchdown passes. He ended up with three on the year.

"Drew has probably made more big catches in big ball games for the Cowboys than any receiver we've ever had," says Dallas offensive coordinator Dan Reeves.

And of course, Pearson's most famous catch was the 50-yard

"Hail Mary" reception from Staubach against the Vikings in the 1975 playoffs that turned still another apparent loss into a victory.

The Cowboys used the boost to go on to Super Bowl X.

"I like to think I don't just make the big plays to win games, but also on crucial third-down plays," says Pearson. "I have a great deal of confidence that I'll end up with the ball."

I KNOW I want the ball more than anybody, more than those defensive backs," concluded Pearson.

Don's Quik Quip

Don Johnson, who'll co-star in NBC-TV's series, "From Here to Eternity," responded with this quip when asked why he became an actor: "I'm too lazy to work and too scared to steal!"

Crabbe On 'Buck Rogers'

Former swimming champ Buster Crabbe, who portrayed Buck Rogers in motion pictures, meets Gil Gerard, the new Buck Rogers of television, as guest star in a special two-hour presentation of NBC-TV's new series "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century," to be presented Thursday, September 27 (8 to 10 p.m.).

Others in the all-star guest cast are Jack Palance, Roddy McDowall, David Groh, Macdonald Carey and Brianne Leary. In the episode, entitled "Planet of the Slave Girls," Crabbe portrays Brigadier Gordon, a former fighter pilot who comes out of retirement to help save Earth. Returning to active duty, he joins Buck Rogers in a space battle when a mysterious disease strikes down Earth's fighter pilots.

When Dr. Huer (Tim O'Connor) suspects that poison in Earth's food supply is responsible for a disease felling the pilots, he dispatches Rogers and Col. Wilma Deering (Erin Gray) to Vistula, an agricultural world which grows most of the vegetable protein consumed on Earth.

Despite the hospitality of Governor Saroyan (McDowall), Buck is suspicious when he learns that inhabitants of the planet's Sea of Stone are sold as slaves. He befriends one of the slave girls, Ryma (Leary), who tells him that a sorcerer named Kaleel (Palance) has control over the slaves, and is responsible for the death of her brother, who had discovered something suspicious taking place in the food processing plants.

Traveling to the Sea of Stone to confront the mysterious Kaleel, Buck discovers a massive fleet poised to attack Earth — a defenseless world without its fighter pilots!

Buster Crabbe beat champion swimmers from Japan and France in the Olympics 47 years ago to set a record in the men's 400-meter freestyle, winning a Gold Medal with a time of 4:48.4.

He parlayed this swimming success into a hot movie career that included the starring role in the 1939 motion picture serial, "Buck Rogers."

His first movie role was the Lion Man in "King of the Jungle," which he landed three days after his Olympic triumph. He went on to star, not only as Buck Rogers, but also as Tarzan and Flash Gordon.

'Columbo' Segment Airs

Patrick McGoohan guest stars as a homicide suspect whose devious answers are prompted by his hidden identity as a top spy in "Identity Crisis," a two-hour "Columbo" drama — also directed by McGoohan — to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Movie" Thursday, September 27 (11:30 p.m.). Peter Falk stars as Lt. Columbo.

Advertising consultant Nelson Brenner, who leads a double life as a top domestic spy, sends his former partner on an assignment to recover micro film from a foreign agent. But he actually sets up his ex-partner, code name Geronimo, for a homicide that he covers up as a mugging. When Columbo investigates the crime, his clues lead him through a series of mysterious identities and a maze of domestic intrigue.

"Columbo" was one of the three original rotating elements of "The NBC Mystery Movie," the other two being "McMillan and Wife" and "McCloud." It was by far the most popular of the elements and would have become a separate series in its own right.

But a 60- or 90-minute movie every week was too much for one actor to carry, not to mention the dangers of being typecast in such a distinctive role. Toward the end of the program's run, Falk was said to be making more than a quarter of a million dollars per episode, but even at that he refused to do more than a few per year. He continued to film an occasional new episode until October, 1976.

SPOTLIGHT

From Brunette To Blonde

Until two years ago, Loni Anderson was just another brunette actress pounding the streets of Hollywood in search of a job. Then she decided to bleach her hair.

"I had played a lot of blondes in wigs," she explains, "and I just felt so warm and soft playing them that I decided to switch. Let's face it, it's the American Dream to be a voluptuous blonde."

At first, it was rough-going. "Being pretty really wasn't 'in' at the time on TV," she explains.

Then came an audition for a show about a radio station — CBS-TV's "WKRP in Cincinnati."

One look at Loni and she was hired as the sexy, curvaceous Jennifer Marlowe, who turns heads and raises blood pressure levels of every man she passes in the WKRP studios.

Jennifer may appear to be dumb, but she's not. In fact, she gets away with murder. Will she take a letter? "I'm sorry," she purrs, "I don't take dictation." Nor will she get her boss a cup of coffee. "I'm sorry," she says sweetly, "I just don't go for coffee."

But actress Loni Anderson and receptionist Jennifer Marlowe are opposites. Once filming for

"WKRP" has ended for the day, Loni trades those clinging dresses and scanty bikinis in for the clothes any other devoted wife and mother would wear around the house.

In real life, Loni is married to actor Ross Bickell and is the mother of a 14-year-old daughter, Deidra. The Bickells live in a modest home in suburban North Hollywood, where Ross has had to take over most of the cooking since his wife has less time at home.

In spite of her busy schedule, however, Loni insists that she still has her priorities where they should be. "Without my husband and my daughter, I don't see anything as being that important in my life."

Although Loni enjoys playing a sex symbol, she hopes eventually to go on to something else. "I'm going to take advantage of this sex symbol bit while it's here, then go on when it's ended," she candidly remarks.

'Hollywood Baloney'

When Eddie Egan was a policeman, he spent a lot of time trying to look like something else. Now that he's an actor, he's enjoying another successful career because people think he looks so much like a cop.

"It's another of life's little ironies," says the legendary New York City detective and real-life hero of "The French Connection." "But I was always acting as an undercover narcotics agent. I was always wearing disguises or role-playing to hide my true identity."

In another of a string of police roles since he retired from the NYPD in 1975, Egan is co-starring with Joe Don Baker in "Eischied," NBC-TV's police drama. The series' two-part premiere presentation concludes Friday, September 28 (10 to 11 p.m.).

"I'm also serving as technical adviser on 'Eischied,'" Egan points out, "so I can guarantee this'll be one cop show without a lot of Hollywood baloney."

As a former policeman, Egan is quick to notice — and react — to the way television often portrays law enforcement people. He doesn't know whether to laugh or get angry.

A Star In His Own Right

Most champion sports teams — especially when it comes to football — usually have a big crop of unsung heroes whose names get buried on the very back of the statistic sheet.

Such is the case with the Pittsburgh Steelers, who are beginning to look like the closest thing to a dynasty in the NFL since the Miami Dolphins of the mid-70s.

One such unknown hero — at least by fan standards — is Steeler defensive lineman John Banaszak, who emerged as a bonafide defensive star in 1978.

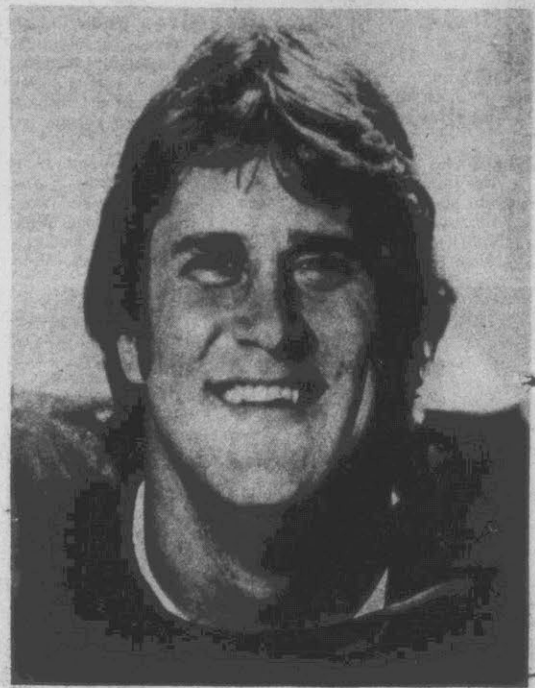

The Steelers hope to take one more giant step towards another AFC Central crown when they clash with the Baltimore Colts Sunday, September 23. NBC will telecast the game (1 p.m.) from Pittsburgh's Three Rivers Stadium.

Everyone knows about Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris and wide receivers John Stallworth and Lynn Swann, and also the Steel Curtain defense.

But, through retirement or trades, some of the personnel behind the curtain has changed over the past couple of years. One of the most drastic alterations occurred when Ernie Holmes was traded.

Banaszak, a 1975 free agent from Eastern Michigan, never really had the chance to prove himself, but he got that chance when Holmes left. The defensive lineman moved into the right end spot, opposite Dwight White, having patiently occupied a position on the Steeler bench for the better part of four years.

An injury to starting defensive right tackle Steve Furness posed a problem until Banaszak agreed to step in. He played in every one of the Steelers' games last season, including all the playoff tilts. He alternated with White in the end position during a portion of the championship games, and therein lies the value of the EMU

JOHN BANASZAK, one of the Pittsburgh Steelers who hasn't gotten the notoriety of a Franco Harris or Terry Bradshaw, is still a star in his own right. The Steelers take on the Baltimore Colts when NBC broadcasts an NFL Regional telecast Sunday, September 23 beginning at 1 p.m.

LARRY HOLMES will be defending his world Heavyweight title in a bout with top contender Earnie Shavers Friday, September 23. ABC Sports will televise the action, live, from Las Vegas, Nev. (8 to 11 p.m.).

Holmes-Shavers Bout

ABC Sports will telecast the year's most outstanding fight — the 15-round WBC World Heavyweight Championship battle between defending champion Larry Holmes and number one-ranked contender Earnie Shavers Friday, September 28 (8 to 11 p.m.). But that is only the main event in this exceptional prime time fight card.

In another featured bout, unbeaten Sugar Ray Leonard, the charismatic welterweight whose appeal with the fans rival that of Muhammad Ali, will face Andy Price in a 12-round battle for Leonard's North American Boxing Federation championship. In addition, the amazing Roberto Duran, the former lightweight champion of the world, will take on Zeferino Gonzales. Also, the Wilfredo Gomez-Carlos Mendoza 15-round WBC Super Batamweight Championship fight will be telecast on a time-permitting basis.

The retirement of Muhammad

Ali from the ring adds to the importance of the Holmes-Shavers title match. Holmes is undefeated (31-0), with 22 victories by knockouts. He has defended his title three times, stopping Alfredo Evangelista of Spain in seven rounds, Ossie Ocasio of San Juan, Puerto Rico, in seven and Mike Weaver of Los Angeles in eleven. His last outing as champion figured to be his easiest; it was his toughest. Weaver, unheralded, gave the champion from Easton Pennsylvania, all he could handle in the ring.

Holmes first won the title by a 15-round decision over Ken Norton in June, 1978.

Sugar Ray Leonard first captured the world's attention by winning a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics. He will be fighting his 25th professional bout when he steps into the ring to face Andy Price, the first fight to be telecast on the boxing card. Leonard has compiled a perfect professional record of 24-0 with 15 knockouts.

Andy Price, 25, ranked number seven by the WBC, scored 10-round decisions over Carlos Palomino in August, 1974, and Pipino Cuevas in June, 1976. Palomino went on to become WBC welterweight champion and Cuevas later became WBA champion, and Price has the distinction of being the only fighter to have beaten them both. "The Hawk," as Price is known, is from Los Angeles, a smooth, clever boxer, and his record, according to the promoter, stands at 26-6-3.

Duran has one of the most impressive records in boxing — 70 wins, 55 by knockouts, against only one loss, sustained against Esteban DeJesus in 1962. Duran has since avenged that defeat by knocking out DeJesus twice. He vacated his lightweight championship last year to seek the welterweight title, taking a big step this year by outpointing Carlos Palomino, at the time ranked as the number one contender by the WBC.

Earl Gets Record

In 1978, the Houston Oilers' Earl Campbell rushed for 100 yards on seven different occasions, thereby breaking the century mark. Three other players — Tony Dorsett, Walter Payton and Wilbert Montgomery — also broke the record by running six times each during the season.

Giant 'Get Well'

Even the people on the massive Goodyear blimp are concerned about the well-being of Erik Estrada, who is convalescing from injuries sustained while filming a segment of "CHIPS."

The blimp was hovering over Estrada's house the other day flashing the message. "We're glad you're better!"

BJ McKay organizes seven beautiful female truckers into the Piston Packin' Mamas after ruthless competitors and a corrupt lawman successfully force them off the road, in Part One of "Snow White and the Seven Lady Truckers," the season premiere of NBC-TV's adventure-drama series "BJ and the Bear," Saturday, September 29 (9 to 10 p.m.). The conclusion will be broadcast October 6.

FOR DEAN DONALD A. HENDERSON, School of Hygiene and Public Health, The Johns Hopkins University

After heading a U.N. drive that successfully wiped out smallpox, on what will you focus now? And how much did it cost the U.N. to conquer the disease? — D.R., Matamoras, Pa.

● The next step is to make available to children throughout the world the excellent vaccines which we now have for prevention of other diseases — poliomyelitis, measles, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and tuberculosis. The World Health Organization has begun just such a program. Malaria would probably now be classified by most health workers as the most serious disease problem. Although there is presently no satisfactory vaccine against malaria, recent research suggests that one may soon become available. The global eradication of smallpox cost $100 million.

Goal: global eradication of disease.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I just saw Roger Moore in Moonraker and can't believe he's 55. How does he keep himself so young and so thin? And will he make any more James Bond movies? —P.L., Council Bluffs, Iowa

● First of all, he's not 55. He's 52. Ask Moore how he holds onto his youthful appearance and chances are he'll say "by living a clean, wholesome life." Then he'll add: "And I make sure I never drink out of a dirty glass." He starts off each day with 20 minutes of calisthenics, something he has been doing for 30 years. Nevertheless, a few years ago, he found he was 15 pounds overweight ("I drank too much and ate too much, from boredom") and got rid of that by calorie-counting. The one dish he finds hard to give up is fish and chips, doused with ketchup. As to his future, Moore doesn't know if he'll do a fifth Bond movie because, so far, he has not been asked.

007: Down to the last Bond?

FOR JAMES F. FIXX, author of The Complete Book of Running

What's the lowest temperature one can run in without danger of lung injury? —Mark McManimon, Rushford, Minn.

● Runners are constantly warned that if they go out when it's too cold they'll burn their lungs. That's nothing but an old wives' tale, invented by people looking for an excuse not to go running. Medical authorities say that in the U.S. there's no weather you can't run in, so long as you dress properly.

FOR ANNE MEARA, actress

You said that when you redecorated your apartment you managed to be under budget on two items. What were they? —N.W., Dushore, Pa.

● Blinds and carpeting. We had our hearts set on vertical blinds, until we realized how much they cost; then our hearts got upset. So we settled for roll-up bamboo shades. We chose industrial carpeting because it's more durable as well as being less expensive, but there's a catch: We find it's harder to keep clean.

FOR DEBORAH RAFFIN, star of NBC-TV's The Last Convertible

Would you have turned out differently had you gone to school in the 40's? —H.B., Burlington, Vt.

● Probably. There are so many opportunities for career women today than there were in that period. I researched the 40's before I took the role of Chris, and there are so many things I love about that time. Although it was harder for women to get ahead, there was a sense of romance that does not exist today.

FOR TANYA TUCKER, country singer

What made you decide to team up with Mich and Bud, a brother act? —W.N., Fort Collins, Colo.

● Are you kidding? You must be! They're dolphins. In July, when they opened at a theater in Florida, I had the idea of going into the water and swimming with them. Show-business people should stick together, and I figured if I joined them, it would be good for my career, as well as theirs. Seriously, though, I'm terribly concerned about the sad plight of seals and such, and I'm trying to stress their intelligence.

FOR MEREDITH BAXTER-BIRNEY, star of ABC-TV's Family

How soon should children be told they're adopted? —J.A., Van Nuys, Calif.

● I'm all for telling as soon as possible. Obviously it's not possible at one year, but I believe five — the popular age for dropping this kind of bombshell — is too late. I believe in honesty; a child must know. There is no sensible or logical way to rationalize not telling. If the child hears it first from someone else, the results could be disastrous.

FOR JOHN G. FULLER, author of The Airmen Who Would Not Die

Is it possible for the average person to have knowledge of life after death? —G.A., Dover, Del.

● There is a theory which seems to have some foundation that everyone is psychic. But some have more psychic talents than others. The popularity of TM and other meditation techniques should enable more persons to relate to their innate psychic ability and thus increase their capacity to get greater insights into life after death.

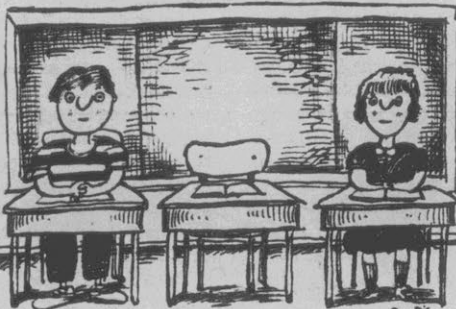

PRO Paul D. Collins, President, National Assn. of Elementary School Principals

Yes. School aid must be based on enrollment, not attendance. The mission of the public school is to educate all children. We must be prepared by hiring enough teachers. Staff salaries comprise almost 80 percent of our total budget. Attendance fluctuates — expenses are constant. We teach classes even when some students are absent. We heat buildings even when some students are absent. Our school buses run even when some students are absent. Attendance-based formulas make advance planning impossible. They increase government red tape. Money is spent on paper work, not instruction. Attendance-based formulas make it more difficult to provide the best education for all children.

PRO AND CON

Should School Aid Based On Attendance Be Abolished?

CON Ludwig H. Koepke, director of Business & Finance, Oak Park Elementary Schools

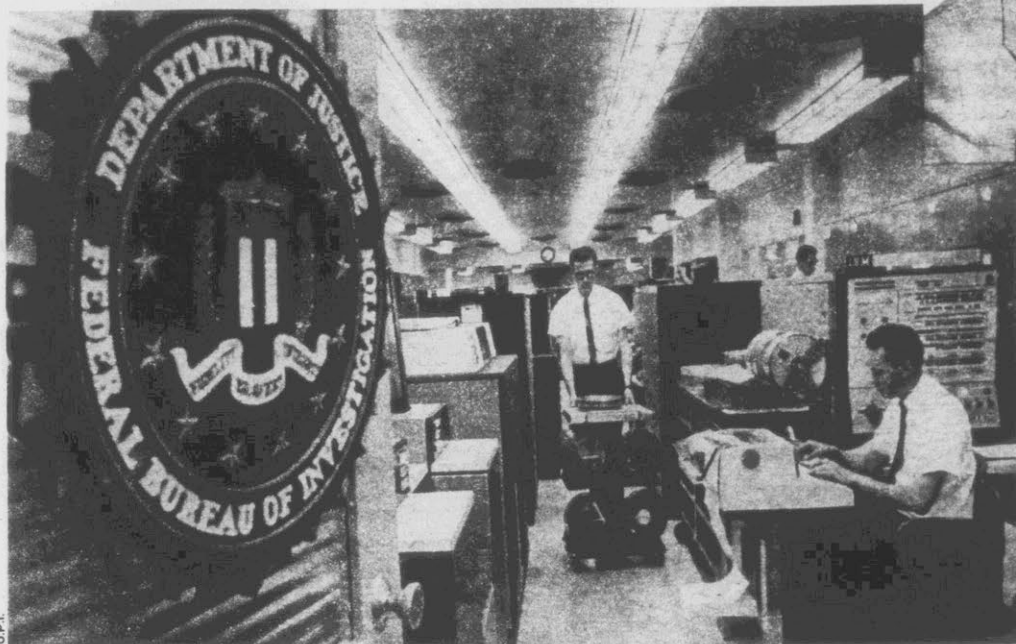

School aid based upon attendance rather than enrollment does reward districts which maintain high levels of attendance. Absence generally relates in direct proportion to a person's perception of the task. Poor educational programs and environment equate directly to poor achievement and attendance. Excellent schools give incentive for students to be present and to excel. State aid based upon attendance is like a carrot on a string. A rabbit will jump to get the carrot. Likewise, school boards and school administrators have a monetary incentive to excel when school aid is based upon attendance rather than on enrollment. I say, "Let us continue paying state aid on the basis of attendance."

The F.B.I.'s Most Calculating Agent Is Its Supercomputer

At left, the F.B.I.'s National Crime Information Center (NCIC). F.B.I. man Raymond Young (above) says the NCIC computer "is invaluable as a tool in the war on crime."

wise probably wouldn't have been recovered, and it leads to the apprehension of a great number of suspects who previously wouldn't have been caught."

The only concern about the system involves the computerization of criminal history files. Young says a Congressional study is currently considering this process, and although such police-blotter arrest information is public, when it is gathered at a central point and computerized, it is, understandably, subject to strict dissemination requirements. "But from our point of view, there has not been a problem in maintaining the confidentiality of the records," he says.

As to the future, Young sees the need for streamlining NCIC equipment throughout the country. "We need to improve our equipment so we can provide NCIC on an uninterrupted 24-hour basis." Presently, the system is in unrestricted operation more than 95 percent of the time. Even so, Young points out, if an officer on the street somewhere makes an inquiry and does not get an answer within seconds, it can be a frustrating experience.

Young says that citizen cooperation is very important to the ultimate success of the program. People can assist police by being observant of various activities, especially in their own neighborhood.

"If, for example, a person is suspicious about an automobile, all he or she has to do is pick up the telephone and call the nearest police station or sheriff's office. An NCIC check can then be made immediately to determine if the vehicle has been stolen."

Young also says it is important for people to write up an inventory of their personal property — cars, TV sets, stereos, cameras, major appliances. The inventory should include the manufacturer's name, model information and serial number of each item. Then, in the event of a theft, the data can be promptly entered into NCIC, improving the chances of recovery.

"We're very proud of the system," states Young. "Its record speaks for itself. With the cooperation of the public we can make it even more effective in combating crime."

By L.B. Taylor Jr.

Recently, in Pocatello, Idaho, an alert policeman noticed a car parked in front of a pawnshop in a suspicious manner. It was positioned in such a way that the shop employees could not observe the car either enter or leave an adjacent parking lot. One man was sitting inside on the passenger side.

If a situation like this had occurred a number of years ago, the policeman would have had to approach the car to investigate what was going on. But fortunately, the officer in Idaho didn't have to put himself in possible jeopardy. From his patrol car, he called in a query to the National Crime Information Center (NCIC), a nationwide computerized data system run by the F.B.I. that contains prodigious amounts of information on wanted persons and stolen property. It responds to specific questions within seconds.

The officer's query of the car's license-plate number resulted in a "hit." The vehicle had been listed as stolen by police in Colorado. A backup police unit was called in. Upon arrival the officers questioned the driver inside the pawnshop, ran his name and birth date through NCIC, and discovered that he had escaped from a Federal penitentiary. The two men were arrested, and police found 21 firearms stashed in the car.

Not all NCIC inquiries result in such dramatic successes. But in the 12½ years the system has been in operation law-enforcement officers across the country have hailed it as the greatest crime-fighting weapon since the development of fingerprint identification.

"As a tool in the war on crime, it is invaluable," says Raymond J. Young, assistant section chief of NCIC, headquartered in Washington. "By giving almost instant information on wanted persons and stolen property, it is literally a life saver to the men on the streets. Armed with such information, they can approach suspects — such as the two men in Idaho — with appropriate precaution. With NCIC, there is much less danger of officers walking blindly into a potentially dangerous confrontation."

Each day more than a quarter-million transactions are entered into NCIC. From these mostly routine checks, an average of 1,000 to 1,500 hits are made, resulting in the recovery of millions of dollars in stolen property. The system is responsible for the apprehension of thousands of wanted criminals who are initially stopped for minor offenses or suspicious actions. Without NCIC, the police would not always be aware that these persons were being sought for serious crimes.

The National Crime Information Center became operational in 1967. Today it serves as the nucleus of a vast communications network which includes nearly 7,000 local, state and Federal criminal-justice agencies in all 50 states, Canada and Puerto Rico. The Center is designed to complement metropolitan and statewide information systems.

The computer equipment at F.B.I. headquarters includes rapid access storage or "memory" units. Stored information can be retrieved and dispatched within seconds through the telecommunications network to connecting terminals in police departments, sheriff's offices, state police facilities and Federal law-enforcement agencies.

NCIC's statistics are staggering. There are nearly 7.5 million active records in the system. These include listings of approximately 150,000 wanted persons, 21,500 missing persons, 1 million stolen vehicles and stolen-vehicle parts, 1 million stolen items — including TV sets, radios, stereo equipment and household appliances — and 1.5 million criminal profile histories.

The success stories of NCIC over the past few years are legendary. A Georgia state trooper recently stopped a man for speeding. Checks were made on the car license plates and the man's driver's license through the state's data system and NCIC. Response to the trooper's inquiries included a 10-foot-long computer printout stating that the car was stolen and the driver was wanted by authorities in 13 states and two Federal agencies for a number of car thefts and burglaries.

Last year, when a man was robbed at a roadside rest stop in Vermont, police entered the license-plate number of a suspect's car into NCIC. The stored information revealed that the car had been stolen in Arkansas and that its owner had been murdered during the theft. The Vermont state police apprehended the suspect, and he was extradited to Arkansas.

Scores of such stories are repeated daily. "The system," says Young, "results in the return of stolen goods that other-

A "Scorecard" Won't Help Your Marriage

Bob and Linda are having their same old fight. "I knock myself out at work bringing money into this house, I fix things around here, and now you want me to help with the baby. What do you do for me?" As usual Linda is bewildered. The "I've done this for you; now what have you done for me?" arguments always surprise her. She often wonders why Bob insists on keeping a mental record of such things.

Why some people keep score and others don't, say psychologists, lies in people's basic attitudes. Some never think of turning daily life into an even exchange of favors. But many other men and women are "emotional bookkeepers" who feel that all human relations — even those with loved ones — should be on a reciprocal exchange basis. Dr. Bernard Murstein, a psychologist who specializes in research into what makes loves and friendship work, points out that this is not a practical viewpoint with people you love: "If you 'keep score,' you always end up thinking you have done more than the other person. This is because most individuals are sensitive to what they do for others, but less aware of what others do for them."

Moreover, if you think about it, you see you can't measure what you do for your family as compared to what they do for you. For example, when a wife cooks her husband's favorite dinner, does that equal his washing the car? Or is dinner worth two points and carwash only one? Or vice versa? Ultimately it becomes ridiculous. Dr. Murstein's research indicates that if you or your spouse are emotional bookkeepers, you'll raise the happiness level of your marriage if you throw away your "scorecard."

A Well-Planned Vacation Will Help A Lot

"How was your vacation?" everyone asks when you return. You probably smile and murmur, "Great. Just great." If people could read your thoughts, would the scene really play like that? Or more like this: "Terrible! The whole family fought and got on each other's nerves so much that I'm really wondering if my marriage will last."

Right after Labor Day family-counseling agencies are accustomed to receiving a flood of "We need help" phone calls produced by too much family "togetherness" on vacation. For example, the largest of Minnesota's family agencies says it receives its heaviest demand for family-counseling early in September.

As the experts have analyzed it, vacations put extraordinary strains on a family. Work, school, errands, obligations of all kinds operate all year to create privacy islands that give you time away from each other. A family vacation forces you to be together constantly. You're compelled to agree on group decisions about what you'll do, where you'll eat and when you'll engage in each activity. Professor Paul Rosenblatt of the Department of Family Social Science of the University of Minnesota suggests you can minimize problems in the following ways:

Restrict your vacations to your immediate family. Studies have indicated that tensions increase even further as soon as you add friends or older parents.

Agree on plans, tasks and schedules before the vacation begins.

If yours is a quick-tempered family, spend your vacations in a single place. It limits the number of necessary daily decisions and allows family members to develop their own private vacation orbits.

If nothing helps and your marriage works reasonably well during the rest of the year, save it from excess strain by taking separate vacations.

President Carter Discusses His Policies, His Family and the Nation's Future

In the Oval Office of the White House, President-Publisher Morton Frank and Executive Editor Arthur Cooper of FAMILY WEEKLY recently interviewed President Jimmy Carter. The President discussed the issues of interest to all of us — life in the White House, inflation, unemployment, the energy crisis, national security, the likelihood of a military draft, the international situation, and what Mr. Carter has described as the "malaise" crippling the national purpose.

A visit with the President is something special. Frank and Cooper were escorted from the old Executive Office Building (formerly the U.S. Department of State building) by Assistant Press Secretary Patricia Bario to the White House Press Office, thence by her and Press Secretary Jody Powell to the Oval Office. They were greeted by the President, who was wearing a gray-plaid suit, white shirt, blue tie with white polka dots, and brightly shined cordovan shoes. During the interview, the President was seated in a comfortable armchair from which he could keep watch on a nearby grandfather-style wall clock. For 30 minutes he answered questions and discussed his policies. Here is what the President had to say:

Karl Schumacher

President Carter remains trim by jogging regularly around the White House.

Cooper: Mr. President, it is well known you are a devoted family man. Given the enormous pressures of the Office, what impact has the Presidency had on your relationship with your wife and your family?

President: It's been a fairly simple extension from our relationship that we had when I was Governor. Amy was only three years old when I was elected Governor. We lived in a large mansion — were a very close-knit family — as we do here. I don't know of anything that can bind a family together more than to share an experience, particularly one that is intense and important and personal. Rosalynn and I operated Carter's Warehouse together. We ran for Governor together. She served with me as Governor in a very close-knit way. We campaigned and shared the campaign together. And now we live together here.

I would say that the life that we live here at the White House, just a few steps from the Oval Office, is one that is conducive to a close-knit family relationship.

Public Malaise

Frank: How do you think the public malaise, as I think you called it in one of your addresses, or the lack of an uplift spirit, can be revised by Mr. and Mrs. John Doe? What should Mr. or Mrs. Doe do or feel or think?

President: Never in history have we had such a rapid decrease in the confidence of people in themselves, in their present and future financial circumstances — confidence in institutions of all kinds, churches and schools, government, public officials. Yet at the same time that this decreasing confidence is evident, our nation is as strong or stronger than it ever was — economically, politically, militarily. We are the strongest nation on earth.

Our system of democratic government has survived the most severe test in history — with the exception of the War Between the States — successfully. Our free enterprise system has accommodated shocks, massive changes in supply of oil and the price of oil — and the people are prosperous, live an equally good life, materially speaking, with the other nations on earth. So we have been tested and found to be sound.

I think the future of our country is bright: we are at peace. Our relationship with foreign countries is as good as it has ever been in the history of our nation. Any measure of the practical aspects of existence would show a very high score, but still the people are doubtful about the future.

I think part of it is the rapid change taking place in life, technologically and otherwise. Their acknowledgement that natural resources are limited, particularly oil, and the feeling of mobility and the fragmentation of the family on average, the high divorce rate, the breadth or diversity of interest and involvement of different members of the family, are so much in contrast to what it was when you and I were young.

My own hope is we can let the American people know this is happening, know that our country is strong, know that we do have material challenges like in energy, but that they can be resolved — and then prove they can be resolved. I think this will restore the confidence of our country. I think it will also restore the respect of the people in their Government, indicate that the Government can be successful in working with the private sector. I think it would, at the same time, let people, through their own actions, participate.

Our going to the moon was a great achievement. But the only thing we did individually was to pay taxes (to help make it possible). In solving the energy question, every person can do a lot of things personally to achieve energy independence — which is a test of American will, a test of American leadership, a test of the strength of our country.

Re-election Campaign

Cooper: It is generally assumed that you will seek re-election next year. Are there any circumstances under which you will not seek re-election? And the second part of the question: if you do run again, will Vice President Mondale be your running mate?

President: Let me wait until later to answer the first question. I am not ready to announce yes or no. If I run again, I will have Vice President Mondale as my running mate.

One Six-Year Term?

Frank: Do you believe, in view of your experience, that you might prefer, for the country's good, that the President serve a six-year one-time term, or a two-time, four-year term?

President: My opinion has changed about that since I have been in office. I used to think the two four-year terms were valid. I have thought about it, not in depth, but I now believe that the best arrangement would be a one six-year term. It worked well in other countries, and I think will work well here.

It will be long enough for a person to achieve a legitimate program, and it wouldn't be interrupted by almost a two-year period preceding the general election and the taking on of a new Administration, when political motivation is ascribed to a President no matter what the subject is. If it was well-known that the President was not and could not run for re-election, that every decision was made without regard to politics, I think it would add both more confidence in the President and perhaps more consistent influence on the President.

Frank: Do you think you would maybe feel a little less inhibited, in case you ever do feel inhibited, about pushing for something you advocated, got and earned — "I've got six years, this is my term, I want to legislate what I believe in, and I'm going to do my job?"

President: I try not to avoid controversial issues because of adverse political consequences. There are no votes in striving for an energy policy or energy legislation, as we have for the last two-and-a-half years. There are no votes in working for a Panama Canal Treaty, there are no votes in trying to remove the arms embargo against Turkey. There are very few votes in trying to shake up the Federal bureaucracy and put in a new Civil Service.

Frank: There are votes needed for SALT II.

President: Yes, I think there possibly are in SALT II. That has not yet been achieved.

I would hope I have not let any sort of political threats interfere in my doing what was best for the country. When I served as Governor of Georgia, at that time the Constitution only permitted one four-year term. And I felt complete freedom in putting forward controversial programs, but no more so than I try to maintain now.

I think one four-year term for the President will be inadequate because toward the end of the term — based on my experience as Governor during that last year — the knowledge that you cannot serve any further obviously lessens your influence.

Tenure of Presidents

Cooper: Since 1960, we have not had a President who has served two full terms. In your view, what if anything does this say about the Presidency or about the country?

President: I think that's a series of both unprecedented circumstances and ones that don't set a precedent for the future. The assassination of John Kennedy, the decision by Johnson not to run because of strong aversions to the Vietnam war, Nixon's impeachment, I think, were circumstances unique in themselves.

But it's very difficult to be President and to do a good job and to maintain popularity unless you deliberately avoid the controversial issues.

An easy issue is decided by an individual American or within a family home or at a country courthouse or city hall, mostly in the state legislature.

The problems that get into the Oval Office are the ones that are so difficult and so controversial and so far-reaching in their impact that none of those other entities can solve them. This is where the hard problems come, and no matter which way you make a decision, you are bound to aggravate a large number of constituency groups who feel very deeply about a question.

So I think that any person in this office who has any controversial issues is bound to suffer politically.

At election times, however, there will be an assessment, and the American people will balance the overall achievement of the incumbent against a potential service of the challengers.

I think we have a superb achievement record in domestic and also in foreign affairs. I think if this Administration is assessed in an election, that the people will approve of what we are doing.

Health and Education

Frank: In the basic interests of people are always health and education.

President: Yes.

Frank: Aside from food, water, shelter and heat.

President: Right.

Frank: What do you think the Federal Government should do, if anything, beyond what it is doing, in the individual lives of people's health and education?

President: I think the new Department of Education will be very good. It will actually reduce the bureaucracy. It will reduce the number of Federal employees. It will highly escalate the interest of American people and Government officials in the problems and challenges of education. It will have an identifiable leader who can communicate better with both private schools and the public and state schools at all levels.

I think it will resolve through that consultation process questions that now are ultimately resolved in the Federal courts with lawsuits and withholding of funds, and so forth. I think it will minimize the paperwork and, above all, I think it will let the local and state officials with Government support have a higher degree of autonomy in managing the school systems under their purview.

In the field of health, we need a nationwide health program. It ought to be phased in gradually. It ought to consist, first of all, of getting the Federal bureaucracy straightened out, responsibilities clarified. There ought to be heavy interest on controlling runaway costs, with hospital cost containments. There ought to be a heavy emphasis on prevention of disease, which is the most inexpensive way to guarantee people better health. And then we ought to expand the coverage of a nationwide health program to an increasing number of Americans over a period of years as the Federal budget can afford it.

I would like to have a strong role to be played by the private sector, both private hospitals and also private insurers, a maximum degree of uniformity of coverage for the American people, and give the earliest phases of treatment to those who need it most — the pregnant mothers, the children, both pre-natal and post-natal — and then to increase this to other members of working families who are presently not covered by Medicaid or by Medicare or by the welfare programs.

I think the ultimate cost of this kind of program, if done carefully, methodically phased, would not be as great as the present inefficient program from which so many people are excluded.

Social Security

Frank: When I asked different departments at FAMILY WEEKLY's offices to meet in the last several days, I said, "What would you like to ask the President? What do you want to hear about? What are your greatest concerns?" For example, as one suggestion from our staffers: several of them, including a couple of the younger people, asked, "How can we know the money we pay to Social Security isn't being spent for other things?" Is there an answer for that?

President: Yes. There is no way that can happen. That money goes into a reserve fund. The amount of income to that reserved fund, with the new legislation passed since I have been in office, will guarantee adequate reserve of financing for Social Security through 2025.

Carter's Issues...

Energy: Mr. Carter has advocated greater use of coal. He has also proposed a 10-year, $142.2 billion program which would, among other projects, fund synthetic fuel development and provide assistance to low-income households unable to meet rising fuel costs. The program's money would come mainly from taxing oil companies' profits.

Taxes: "If the unemployment rate starts getting too high, then I will take action. But that action will not be to raise taxes, it would be to lower taxes and if we lower them, my first preference would be to lower the payroll tax."

GOP Opposition: In a recent interview, Mr. Carter said he expected the Republicans to nominate former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, though he him-

Inflation: "When we set the voluntary wage and price guidelines [8 percent] was a reasonable figure, and as the inflation rate built up, different labor organizations negotiated different kinds of contracts...I don't have any authority to tear up a contract; I don't have any authority to revise what has been negotiated. In the fall, with the new rise in inflation that has been brought about by a doubling almost of the price of oil, we will have to accommodate the new circumstances."

Very low tar Triumph. 3 mg. tar and taste. Together!

Read how new Flavor-Intensified™ Triumph gives you taste good enough to stay with at only 3 mg. tar... one of the lowest tar levels in cigarettes.

Triumph. The first and only cigarette that delivers good taste with only 3 mg. tar.

If you've ever been disappointed by one of the very low tar cigarettes, you will understand why Triumph is quite an achievement.

Even the draw is a surprise.

The smoke comes through abundantly. The taste reaches you smoothly. Effortlessly. With none of the struggle you may have experienced in other very low tar brands. You don't have to pull—you just puff on Triumph.

No gimmicks, no miracles.

No less remarkable than Triumph itself, is the technology that enabled us to build it.

The crux of it: Instead of searching for some yet unimagined answer, Lorillard scientists took a more sensible tack.

Why not, they said, take everything we've learned about cigarettes, and push that technology farther than we've ever pushed it before.

Delivering taste, limiting tar.

We found, for example, that combining two types of filter fiber produces the best combination of taste and draw.

That tiny "vents" in the filter-rim smooth the taste.

That lower-leaf tobaccos (shaded from the heat of the sun) tend to be milder and lower in tar than those at the top of the plant.

In short, everything we could find that might intensify flavor at 3 mg. tar, was built into Triumph.

Taste you won't get tired of.

What it all comes down to is this: Triumph is not one of those ultra low tars that spoil your pleasure by short-changing you on taste.

Triumph, at only 3 mg. tar, is a cigarette with a taste you can stay with. So good, we believe you'll never want to go back to your old cigarette.

Family Weekly Interviews President Carter

Cooper: This far into your term, what have been your greatest accomplishments, and what have been your greatest disappointments?

President: I would say the greatest accomplishment is the enhanced security of our Nation, strengthened alliances, stronger NATO, and so forth. We have worked for world peace, and our country has been at peace. Not a single person has lost his life in combat since I have been in office, and I pray this will be the case when I go out of office.

We have helped to bring peace to others. I think the Mideast Peace Agreement between Israel and Egypt is a historical development. We have seen the human rights policy have beneficial results.

If and when the SALT treaty is ratified, that will be another good achievement.

Domestically, the major problem that I faced when I was running for election was extremely high unemployment, over 8 percent unemployment.

We have added a net increase of more than seven million new jobs in our country. We have cut the unemployment rate down more than 25 percent. We have had success in major tax reductions. We have remodeled our Civil Service System.

We have begun to forge for the first time in history a comprehensive and an adequate energy policy, when the Congress finally acts. We have had the highest degree of support for education of any administration, including the halcyon days of Lyndon Johnson's service.

Since eight or nine months ago, I have had 192 vacancies among Federal judges to fill, and I think they are being filled with quality people. We have magnified greatly the number of women and minority groups who are represented in Government. I think we have enhanced equal employment opportunities and the standards for it.

So I believe there are many things. But we have not been able yet to get our welfare system reformed. We have not yet been able to get a comprehensive health program into effect. And we have not yet completed our movement toward the final energy policy. Those have been three disappointments that concern me.

Frank: Do you see the possibility, or maybe a probability, of a return to the draft or universal conscription, either to counter unemployment if it develops further, or for military needs?

President: I don't see that as a prospect. I have the authority to register people for the draft without additional legislation, and I monitor the situation. With the lowest unemployment rates we have had in years, the last three or four months have shown a very good response to our recruitment programs. It fluctuates up and down to some degree, and we were fearful earlier that with the rapid drop in unemployment and a great increase in jobs available that we might have a severe shortage of military recruits, but that has not been the case.

Cooper: If the draft were to be reinstated, do you have visions of drafting women?

President: Yes, I think it ought to be universal in nature. The Congress will have to decide, working with me, what limits, if any, to place on the type of service for women. But I would never go back, for instance, to the Vietnam-type draft when the rich children were excluded if they could go to college, and the poor kids were the major ones subject to involuntary draft.

And I think that women have increasingly come to the point where they want equality of treatment. There would obviously be some kind of service that they might not want to fulfill.

Frank: Between your and Mrs. Carter's interests, do you think that if there is a vacancy during your Presidency, the next Supreme Court Justice will be female?

President: My wife and I both share that interest. I won't make a promise, but we share that interest.

KIDNAPPED!

Parents Who Steal Their Own Children

By Joseph N. Bell

A few weeks before last Christmas, Ruth Livingston locked herself in the bathroom of a friend's apartment in Long Beach, Calif., and went crazy. Screaming, she beat her head against the wall, smashed bottles and might very well have destroyed herself had not her friends — who had been sitting quietly with her in the living room a few moments earlier — broken down the bathroom door and dragged her out.

Ruth doesn't remember much about that evening, except that she had finally released all the anger and frustration of a year without her children — Jimmy, age 5, and Sally, 3. There had been tears and anger and mild hysterics before, but on this night, she let it all out. It was the low point of the 18 months that Ruth Livingston had spent not knowing where her children were, or even if they were alive.

Ruth was a victim of what has been, up until recently, a "crimeless crime." Her children had been kidnapped by their father, Ruth's estranged husband. Parental kidnapping (or child-snatching) is growing enormously in the United States with the rapid increase in divorce and the fracturing of traditional family ties. Although no official records exist, an organization called Children's Rights, Inc. — formed in Washington, D.C., to lobby for legislation on parental kidnapping — estimates that more than 100,000 such kidnappings take place in this country every year. What makes Ruth's case unique is that, even though she lacked funds to hire a private detective, she got her children back.

Ruth, now 27, had been married for six years when her husband, Larry, went through what she now calls a "personality change." He quit his job and showed no interest in getting another. When Ruth went to work as a school bus driver to support the family, he refused to care for their children. Once an easygoing man, he argued violently when Ruth tried to reason with him. Pushed to the wall, she finally left him.

For several months, the separation was reasonably amicable. Then Ruth began seeing other men. One night Larry waited for her to come home from a date and then beat her up. Frightened, she moved in with a woman friend who had small children and agreed to look after Ruth's children while she was at work. A month later, Larry found where Ruth was hiding, forced his way in behind two friends who posed as police officers and took the children. By the time the frightened baby-sitter had located Ruth, Larry had a two-

Thus began an 18-month nightmare for Ruth Livingston. She had filed for divorce and legal custody of the children, but the case dragged because Larry couldn't be found for service of the legal papers. Consequently, the police showed little interest in the matter, saying that no crime had been committed since the children were with their father. Her husband's parents insisted they had not heard from their son and had no knowledge of his whereabouts. The private detectives she consulted wanted $2,000 in advance and promised nothing. Ruth's schoolteacher parents were willing to withdraw their savings to pay an investigator, but Ruth kept hoping — a little more forlornly each month — that she wouldn't have to agree to their offer. She spent most of her days off trying to track down Larry and the children.

Then, when things seemed most hopeless, Ruth applied for a loan to pay her legal fees and hire a private investigator. A routine credit check by the loan company turned up an unexpected roadblock; the joint account she had once shared with her husband had been overdrawn by $800. Ruth hurried to the bank where an official dropped an unexpected — and precious — gift in her lap: the bank's investigation had turned up the whereabouts of her husband. Would she like to know where he was?

In shock, Ruth heard that her husband and children were in a city in Texas. By checking the city's telephone information, she got a phone number, dialed it, heard Larry's voice and hung up. The next day her divorce was granted, along with custody of the children. The day after that,

Ruth and her father, who took a quick leave from his job, drove to Texas. There, neither the local District Attorney's office nor the police would help, but they also said they wouldn't hinder. So, after 24 hours of stomach-clutching sleuthing, planning and — finally — confrontation, Ruth and her father headed home with the children, who were at first bewildered, but then overjoyed.

Ruth Livingston's happy ending is unique; the agony that preceded it isn't. Often the aftermath of parental kidnapping includes violence, suffering and traumatized children. And as the divorce rate climbs, so does the number of child-snatchings.

The bad guy isn't always the father, either. In more and more cases, it's the mother who steals the children. Traditionally in divorce cases, custody has gone almost automatically to the mother if she wanted the child (less than 10 percent of the children of divorced parents live with their fathers). But today not only are many judges ruling in favor of joint custody (in which parents legally share a child), fathers are often aggressively fighting for their rights in custody cases. Outraged mothers are now fleeing with their children almost as often as fathers.

Typical is the case of a Midwestern mother who disappeared with her 2-year-old daughter in 1977 after custody was taken from her because she denied her husband legal visitation rights. After two years, the husband finally got a felony warrant issued against his wife on a legal technicality, but law-enforcement officials showed no interest in helping him. (One woman deputy sheriff told him that since he hadn't gone through labor and delivery, he couldn't understand a mother's love for her child.) So he hired a private detective, found his ex-wife in a neighboring state, frightened her with the warrant and brought the child back.

Such stories can be multiplied by the hundreds. As so often happens, the victims are far ahead of the laws in recognizing a growing social problem. Under existing Federal laws, the F.B.I. can help a divorced wife retrieve the car her ex-husband drives without permission across a state line, but not their child — even if she has legal custody. (Because of a legal loophole in the Federal kidnapping statute of 1934 — which exempts natural parents from penalty — the F.B.I. and other Federal law-enforcement agencies have no jurisdiction in parental child-snatching cases.) The states have made more progress than the Federal Government in passing legislation dealing with child-snatching. Forty-four states have now declared child-snatching a felony, with punishment ranging from a slap-on-the-wrist fine to six months in jail; and more than half the states have passed the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (which means that out-of-state custody decrees are enforced in the same manner as decrees issued by in-state courts).

But what is urgently needed is a Federal law. A number of bills designed to make child-snatching a crime have been introduced in Congress, only to die in committee. One amendment to last year's omnibus criminal-code reform bill that would have made child-snatching a Federal crime passed the Senate but failed in the House, partly because the Justice Department says that such problems should be the responsibility of local authorities, rather than the overburdened F.B.I. Two similar bills that get around some of the F.B.I. objections have now been introduced, but there is no visible feeling of urgency about getting the legislation out of committee.

What this means is that until specific legislation is passed, the victims — denied the use of the F.B.I.'s enormously efficient computers and information network — must rely on their own devices. This has led inevitably to reverse kidnapping and the growth of a group of private investigators of often-dubious ethics.

A more effective avenue may have been opened up in a New York court last year when a mother named Olyvia Kajtzi sued her estranged husband for civil damages in the abduction of their 3-year-old son and won a judgment of $181,430. U.S. District Court Judge Jacob Mishler ruled that Mrs. Kajtzi could recover on three separate counts: child abduction; false imprisonment, on behalf of the child; and punitive damages, on behalf of both mother and child.

So while attorneys maneuver and lawmakers debate, the victims of child-snatching must work with the limited resources available in an attempt to make the nightmare end. Even for the few, like Ruth Livingston, who have recovered their children, there is an ever-constant fear of further violence.

Too Busy Earning a Living To Make Any Money?

You think you've got problems?

Well, I remember when a bank turned me down for a $200 loan. Now I lend money to the bank — Certificates of Deposit at $100,000 a crack.

I remember the day a car dealer got a little nervous because I was a couple of months behind in my payments — and repossessed my car. Now I own a Rolls Royce. I paid $43,000 for it — cash.

I remember the day my wife phoned me, crying, because the landlord had shown up at the house, demanding his rent — and we didn't have the money to pay it.

Now we own five homes. Two are on the oceanfront in California (I use one as my office). One is a lakefront "cabin" in Washington, (that's where we spend the whole summer — loafing, fishing, swimming, and sailing.) One is a condominium on a sunny beach in Mexico. And one is snuggled right on the best beach of the best island in Hawaii — Maui.

Right now I could sell all this property, pay off the mortgages, — and — without touching any of my other investments — walk away with over $750,000 in cash. But I don't want to sell, because I don't think of my homes as "investments." I've got other real estate — and stocks, bonds, and cash in the bank — for that.

I remember when I lost my job. Because I was head over heels in debt, my lawyer told me the only thing I could do was declare bankruptcy. He was wrong. I paid off every dime.

Now, I have a million dollar line of credit; but I still don't have a job. Instead, I get up every weekday morning and decide whether I want to go to work or not. Sometimes I do — for 5 or 6 hours. But about half the time, I decide to read, go for a walk, sail my boat, swim, or ride my bike.

I know what it's like to be broke. And I know what it's like to have everything you want. And I know that you — like me — can decide which one it's going to be. It's really as easy as that. That's why I call it "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches."

So I'm going to ask you to send me something I don't need: money. Ten dollars to be exact. Why? Because I want you to pay attention. And I figure that if you've got $10 invested, you'll look over what I send you and decide whether to send it back... or keep it. And I don't want you to keep it unless you agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested.

Is the material "worth" $10? No — if you think of it as paper and ink. But that's not what I'm selling. What I am selling is information. More information than I give when I'm paid $1000 as a guest speaker. More information than I give in a one-hour consultation for $300.

But you're really not risking anything. Because I won't cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material. That's the deal. Return it in 31 days — and I'll send back your check or money order — uncashed.

How do you know I'll do it? Well, if you really want to be on the safe side, post-date your check for a month from today — plus 2 additional weeks. That'll give you plenty of time to receive it, look it over, try it out.

I know what you're thinking: "He got rich telling people how to get rich." The truth is — and this is very important — the year before I shared "The Lazy Man's Way to Riches," my net income was $216,646. And what I'll send you tells just how I made that kind of money... working a few hours a day... about 8 months out of the year.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." Remember I was up to my neck in debt when I started.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share. But I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better. I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that — nothing more, nothing less — the results will be hard to believe. Remember — I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again — I guarantee it.

I know you're skeptical. Well, here are some comments from other people. (Initials have been used to protect the writer's privacy. The originals are in my files.) I'm sure that, like you, these people didn't believe me either when they clipped the coupon. Guess they figured that, since I wasn't going to deposit their check for at least 31 days, they had nothing to lose.

They were right. And here's what they gained:

'Rich beyond my expectations'
"At the time I read it I was feeling guilty for spending the $10... I was broke, my husband was in prison, my car was broken down. I had $7 to my name, and we were $25,000 in debt — possibly more... It is now 18 months later. I am not a millionaire yet, but I am rich beyond my expectations. I have my own little business... and have received offers beyond my wildest dreams — including national and international distribution."
B.A.

Made enough to retire at 41
"Now, thanks to you and the 'Lazy Man's' program, I have made enough money (at age 41) to retire in style. Let me assure you that I have not 'come into' any money by inheritance or marriage or by any other means except through the practicing of your program..."
R.A., Huntington Beach, Calif.

'Thought it was just another ad'

"I want you to know just how great I think it is. My only regret is that I held off ordering it so long because I thought it was just another ad."
W.B., Hamilton Ontario, Canada

'I can't handle all the business'

"Last May... I was fired from my $60,000 a year job as president because business was so bad... I then started my own firm despite everyone's assertion that I was 'nuts.' Results:
1. Smallest month - $ 7,000 net!
2. Largest month - $31,000 net!
3. Average month - $19,000 net!
But where does the lazy come in? I can't handle all the business!"
R.B., Dallas, Texas

$260,000 in eleven months

"Two years ago, I mailed you ten dollars in sheer desperation for a better life... One year ago, just out of the blue sky, a man called and offered me a partnership... I grossed over $260,000 cash business in eleven months. You are a God sent miracle to me."
B.F., Pascagoula, Miss.

Made $16,901.92 first time out

"The third day I applied myself totally to what you had shown me. I made $16,901.92. That's great results for my first time out."
J.J.M., Watertown, N.Y.

Banking deposits from zero to thousands

"Since December, until the present time, I have built my business from zero up to where some days, my banking deposits are in excess of the thousands."
D.J.A., Westminster, Calif.

'Getting everything we want'

"We can't keep this to ourselves anymore — you were right! We're on the road to getting all (everything) we want in this world! We sold the $17,000 home we had and got another one... It's worth $65,000. We have a paid-for Ford pick-up, paid-for 17 ft. boat, we bought a Cadillac, we have a paid-for Grand Prix..."
Mr. & Mrs. M.L.P. Del Rio, Texas

'I'm a half-millionaire'

"Thanks to your method, I'm a half-millionaire... would you believe last year at this time I was a slave working for peanuts?"
G.C., Toronto, Canada

$7,000 in five days

"Last Monday I used what I learned on page 83 to make $7,000. It took me all week to do it, but that's not bad for five day's work."
M.D., Topeka, Kansas

What I'm saying is probably contrary to what you've heard from your friends, your family, your teachers, and maybe everyone else you know.

I can only ask you one question.

How many of them are millionaires?

So it's up to you.

A month from today, you can be nothing more than 30 days older — or you can be on your way to getting rich. You decide.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Allergies: Why We Sneeze, Sniffle and Wheeze

By Paula Dranov

Some 14 million Americans dread this time of year. For them, late summer and early fall are the seasons when hay fever — which has nothing to do with either hay or fever — makes life miserable. In this country, it's the most common allergy, and the actual culprit is ragweed pollen. Right now there are gusts of it blowing over most of the United States, tormenting one in 15 people with sneezing, stuffy and runny noses, itchy and swollen eyes and scratchy throats.

How is it that grains of pollen measuring only about 1/25,000-inch in diameter can cause so much trouble? What is so threatening about pollen, or, for that matter, dust, strawberries or a wonder drug like penicillin, which also cause allergic reactions in some people? Why do they make so many of us sneeze, itch, break out in rashes and gasp for breath?

The answers aren't all in yet. No one knows how allergies develop or why some people have them and others don't. Thirty-five million Americans suffer from allergies. Severe cases can turn into asthma and conditions ranging from nasal bleeding to infections. Violent allergic reactions can even be fatal: About 40 people die annually from insect stings, and some food and drug reactions cause death as well.

For all the complexities surrounding it, an allergy is simply an abnormal reaction of the body to an ordinarily harmless substance. The allergy-provoking agent (allergen) — whether it's pollen, dust or a type of food or drug — is inhaled, eaten or touched and eventually reaches the bloodstream. There it stimulates production of antibodies, protective substances which ordinarily help the body combat unwanted viruses and bacteria. But the antibodies that arise when an allergy is present react with the allergen to bring on the sneezing, itching or other symptoms.

Diagnosis. Some allergies are very easy to figure out. If strawberries make you sick or if you break out in a rash after you eat them, you're probably allergic to them. Treatment for this type of case is easy, too — just don't eat strawberries!

When symptoms don't appear immediately after contact with an allergen, diagnosis is more complicated. Some food allergies, for instance, cause migraine headaches, asthma, runny noses or skin reactions such as hives and eczema — none of which may appear to be connected to something you ate. Ordinary house dust is a common cause of allergic reaction, but it can be difficult to identify the specific allergen from among all the different types of particles that constitute dust: fibers, lint, mold, food particles, pet hair.

The techniques most often used in diagnosis are skin tests (injecting extracts of various allergens just under the skin) and scratch tests (applying the extracts to a scratched area of skin). If an allergy is present, a raised red welt, known as a wheal and flare reaction, develops within 15 to 20 minutes.

Treatment. Since allergies can't be cured, the best method of treatment is to stay away from whatever it is that causes the reaction. That's easy enough when, as noted above, the troublemaker is strawberries, but what about such things as ragweed pollen and house dust, which are in the air and therefore difficult to avoid? Luckily, hay fever is seasonal so its victims have to put up with it for only a few weeks each year. You can escape some suffering by steering clear of fields and wooded areas and, if possible, by sleeping in an air-conditioned room. House dust is a more complicated problem, although an antidust campaign along with plastic coverings for mattresses and pillows can help.

But what's the answer when there's no way to hide from the allergen? A certain amount of relief can be provided by drugs known as antihistamines. Some are sold without a prescription in drugstores and they can help reduce sneezing, itching and stuffy noses. In severe cases, however, even the most powerful antihistamines don't work. As a last resort the sufferer can turn to allergy shots, a treatment designed to increase tolerance to the allergen.

Unfortunately, these injections — known as immunotherapy or hyposensitization therapy — are expensive, and they can take months or years. Once the specific substance causing the trouble has been identified by skin or scratch tests, a series of shots is given, beginning with very small doses of the allergen extract. Gradually, the dosage is increased until it brings about a reduction of the symptoms. But not all allergies can be treated this way.

New Approaches. In 1966 researchers discovered the antibody immunoglobulin E (IgE). Using new, highly sensitive laboratory equipment, doctors can now determine whether the blood serum sample contains IgE, the presence of which confirms that a patient's symptoms are allergy-related. Further tests must then be given to identify the particular allergen. This involves exposing a blood sample to a suspected allergen and then measuring the amount of IgE produced in response. Eventually, this technique — known as the radioimmunoassay technique or RAST test — may be used to calculate effective dosages for allergy shots. Dr. Alvin Katz, a New York City ear, nose and throat specialist, contends that a physician using RAST measurements can determine the exact amount of a solution to inject into a patient to achieve tolerance to the allergen. Thus, patients can get relief faster than the weeks or months it now takes to establish the correct dosage level.

There is, however, some medical controversy over the RAST test, and though it has been available since 1975, it is not used routinely. One problem is the expense. RAST tests cost about $500 for a complete series, compared to $150 for skin tests. Also, many doctors are waiting for more conclusive studies to determine whether RAST measurements really enable doctors to calculate shot dosages better.

In the meantime, basic research is continuing to focus on such puzzlers as why allergies develop in the first place and what can be done to head them off. For this year, though, about all hay fever sufferers can be optimistic about is the fact that the season doesn't last forever. FW

Baseball's Golden Oldies Shine in Their Twilight

Red Sox slugger Carl Yastrzemski, left, and Yankee junkballer Luis Tiant are both enjoying excellent seasons late in their athletic careers.

Photos: U.P.I.

By Tony Scherman

The 1979 baseball season will be remembered as the year a few graying men sneered in the face of time and strode onto diamonds all across the country to show those younger guys how the game should be played. Old folks' ball is nothing new: One hears stories of Cy Young mowing down batters despite a burgeoning paunch that made it tricky for him to field bunts, or of Ty Cobb hitting, spiking and generally ornery-ing his way past 40. But never have so many ballplayers mounted such an assault on age in a single season: Carl Yastrzemski, Willie McCovey, Gaylord Perry, Phil Niekro, Luis Tiant, Willie Stargell, Lou Brock, Pete Rose and others have been giving their best to the game at a time when their baseball contemporaries are, settling down with a beer and a scrapbook. And as the season draws to a close, an older man's thoughts turn to spring: Will he give it another shot?

Among the returnees will be Yastrzemski; the rotund New York Yankee pitcher, Luis Tiant; and the San Francisco Giants' Willie McCovey.

"People have been asking about me and my age for a long time now," says Willie McCovey, who turns 42 in January. A proud man who has unloaded over 500 career home runs, McCovey had to fight his way back onto the Giants two years ago when he was given non-roster status in spring training. He made the team and was the club leader that year in home runs and runs batted in. In 1980 McCovey will join a tiny group of players that have performed in four decades of major league ball.

Doughty Carl Yastrzemski turned 40 on August 22, a few weeks after hitting his 400th career home run. "I'll be back," he says. "I plan to play until I can't get in there every day and perform up to my capacity."

Devoted to fitness, Yastrzemski moved to Florida four years ago and stays in training during the off-season. "When the Red Sox season ends I take two weeks off. Then I start up again, having my own little spring training in October. I work out with the kids on my son's high-school baseball team." The year-round conditioning program and a few stylistic adjustments — a new batting stance and a bigger bat — have helped him stay in baseball.

Luis Tiant, 38, also plans to return next year. "It took me too long to get where I am for me to quit now," says the right-hander, who's won over 200 games in his 16-year career. "But I have to prove myself every year.

"I don't have anything against the younger pitchers," Tiant says, "but I can do everything they can. Well, maybe I don't have the fastball anymore. But I make up for it with precision. Control's all I got now. When I was as young as Ron Guidry I threw hard, too, but I wish I had the control then that I have now." Tiant's longevity has a precedent in his own family: His father pitched in Latin America and the Negro League until he was 47. "I don't think I could top him," says his son.

Nobody really knows why so many older ballplayers have done so well this year. Yastrzemski offers one answer: "Look at the individuals — you'll see that they're no ordinary ballplayers. You're talking about exceptional athletes." Another explanation is given by Jim Bouton, the sportscaster, author and ex-pitcher who gave major league ball a final fling last year at the age of 39: "There's more respect for age now; people are taking another look at the older guy. I could have had a part in that. The spectacle of a broken-down guy who hadn't played for eight years coming back — well, it may have inspired people to give the older players one more chance to prove themselves. And they have."

Tony Scherman was 5 years old when Willie McCovey broke into the major leagues.

What's Your Purse-onality?

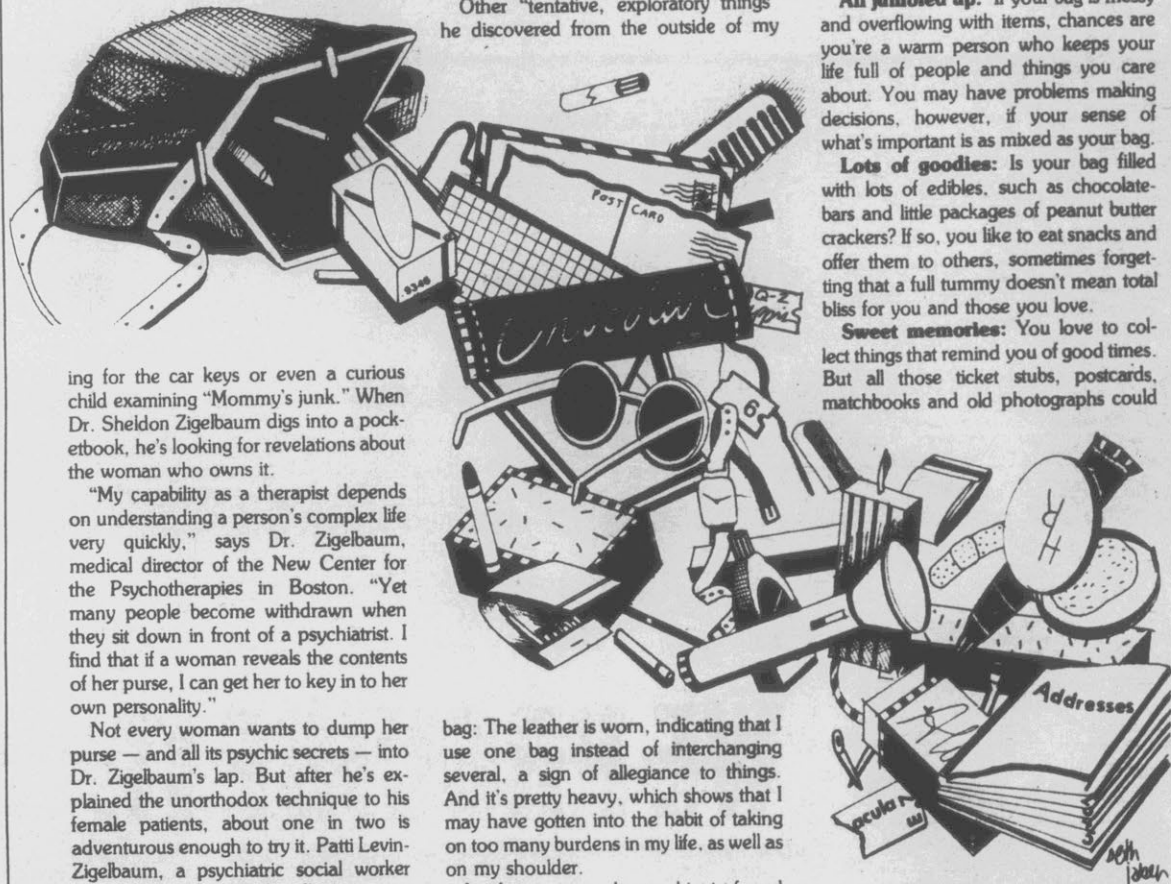

By Susan Lapinski

When he reaches into a woman's purse, everything comes out: mirrors, matchbooks, pacifiers, food coupons, wallets, lipsticks and lollipops. But he isn't a purse-snatcher searching for an easy $10-spot, an irate husband grop-opening Pandora's purse when, for research on this article, I somewhat timidly passed my brown leather shoulder bag into the waiting hands of Dr. Zigelbaum.

He first scanned its undistinguished leather. "Not a designer bag," he noted. "That can be significant. A woman carrying a purse with a designer's name on it may be trying hard to find identity or security through material things."

Other "tentative, exploratory things" he discovered from the outside of my ing for the car keys or even a curious child examining "Mommy's junk." When Dr. Sheldon Zigelbaum digs into a pocketbook, he's looking for revelations about the woman who owns it.

"My capability as a therapist depends on understanding a person's complex life very quickly," says Dr. Zigelbaum, medical director of the New Center for the Psychotherapies in Boston. "Yet many people become withdrawn when they sit down in front of a psychiatrist. I find that if a woman reveals the contents of her purse, I can get her to key in to her own personality."

Not every woman wants to dump her purse — and all its psychic secrets — into Dr. Zigelbaum's lap. But after he's explained the unorthodox technique to his female patients, about one in two is adventurous enough to try it. Patti Levin-Zigelbaum, a psychiatric social worker and one of her husband's nine co-workers, points out: "By going through women's purses, we can often achieve more in therapy, because we're using concrete, everyday things which the patients can relate to easily."

The Zigelbaums believe that purse-probing is useful not only in therapy situations but as a self-help technique which women can try at home. And they say men can use the technique, too, by doing their searching in briefcases or clothes pockets that haven't been cleaned for a while. This kind of purse- or pocket-probing can be insightful as well as fun, and the Zigelbaums have found that people will get very involved in it.

I know I did.

For years I've carried around pocketbooks as heavy as cannonballs, packed with the flotsam and jetsam of my life as a woman, wife and writer. So I knew I was bag: The leather is worn, indicating that I use one bag instead of interchanging several, a sign of allegiance to things. And it's pretty heavy, which shows that I may have gotten into the habit of taking on too many burdens in my life, as well as on my shoulder.

Susan Lapinski specializes in writing about subjects of interest to women.

Inside my purse, the psychiatrist found more revelations. A full address book tipped off "a strong orientation towards people"; photos of my family's log cabin vacation retreat indicated "a grounding in earthy things"; the coins rolling around at the bottom of my purse were a sign that I might have "a possible problem with handling money."

In normal therapy situations, Dr. Zigelbaum will use what he learns in his pocketbook search to zero in on specific areas of conflict or confusion in a woman's life. He'll go over the revelations in subsequent sessions with her. Though it's important not to overgeneralize or make snap judgments, any woman can use the same basic technique at home to get to know herself a little better, and even change behavior she dislikes about herself.

The best way to begin, Patti Levin-Zigelbaum says, is to find a quiet place to sit down in for at least 10 to 15 minutes with your pocketbook. Look at the outside first: What kind of bag is it, and what is it made of? How old or new? How heavy? Next, go inside, looking at each item one at a time: Do any kinds of items predominate? Are they orderly or messy? Are there old things you'd forgotten were even there?

Based on the Zigelbaums' work with women and their pocketbooks, here are some examples of what purses can reveal about different personalities. See if one of them is your bag.

Neat-as-a-pin. If your bag is well-organized, then your life may be, too. It can reflect a well-balanced sense of self and of priorities. But a neat purse can also signal a lack of spontaneity or difficulty dealing with chaotic or pressure-filled situations.

All jumbled up: If your bag is messy and overflowing with items, chances are you're a warm person who keeps your life full of people and things you care about. You may have problems making decisions, however, if your sense of what's important is as mixed as your bag.

Lots of goodies: Is your bag filled with lots of edibles, such as chocolate bars and little packages of peanut butter crackers? If so, you like to eat snacks and offer them to others, sometimes forgetting that a full tummy doesn't mean total bliss for you and those you love.

Sweet memories: You love to collect things that remind you of good times. But all those ticket stubs, postcards, matchbooks and old photographs could mean you're not dealing with the present as much as you should be.

Ever-ready: If you tote around things like adhesive bandages, safety pins and a miniature flashlight, you show a readiness for all situations, as well as a real concern for the plight of others. But are you too much of a pessimist at times?

Beauty-in-the-bag: If your purse clinks with compacts, lipsticks, blushers and lots of other cosmetics, you enjoy living life with a flair. But you may also fear that you're liked more for your looks than you are for your intelligence and personality.

Desk-away-from-the-office: Do you carry your job around with you, in the form of office supplies and memos from your boss? If your job is important to you and is part of a well-integrated lifestyle, that's O.K. Ask yourself, though, if you may be compensating for a personal life that isn't as fulfilling as your work and your career. FW

Terrific Tin-Can Treasures

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Cans from the grocery store do much more than hold soup. They can be turned into unique mirror frames or handsome wall sconces. They can be used to make beautiful flowers or hammered metal plaques. The tools for accomplishing the transformations are readily available: a can opener, kitchen scissors, a needle-nosed pliers and a hammer and nail. With these, and a little time, you can turn out a host of "canned" treasures.

Stack a bunch of economy-sized cans (with bottoms removed) and use them for holding everything from the kids' dismantled train sets to leftover gift-wrapping paper, or turn into an umbrella stand. Put one unit in the bathroom to hold a four-pack of bathroom tissue.

A decorative mirrored frame can be constructed from two tuna fish or cat food cans. After flattening and strip-cutting the cans, they are stacked and glued and a mirror is added. A gold chain from a hardware store circles the mirror, and a pull-top tab holds it on the wall. Or, to make a dramatic wall sconce, a candle holder is added to the same frame.

For an activity that the entire family can enjoy, try making hammered metal plaques. Nailed to a wood backing they can be left in their natural state or colored with felt-tipped pens in brilliant shades. Our instructions tell you exactly how to do it. The plaques can be made useful as well as decorative. By adding a row of cup hooks; they serve as key holders. These plaques can be made from the lighter weight soft-drink cans. For making larger plaques use tennis ball cans.

To make flowers that will last through all seasons, the tops and bottoms of a variety of cans are used. The flowers can be painted with either opaque or transparent paint.

Cans might seem like toss-out items once their contents have been used, but for the imaginative, that's only the beginning. Send for Family Weekly's special booklet and learn how to turn these throwaways into treasures.

The Smart Shopper's Guide to Handling Salespeople

By Linda Konner

As most of us know, shopping can be a hassle at times. And one reason for this is pushy salespeople. Of course, there are plenty of helpful, knowledgeable sales personnel who will give you the kind of answers and assistance you need. But sometimes a salesperson — particularly one working on commission — will swoop down like a vulture the minute you walk in the store and try to pressure you into buying something you don't really want.

But it doesn't have to be that way, according to Joe Vallerini, who runs Big Apple Errands in New York City. Joe shops for a living, hiring himself out to people too busy to do it themselves. Because he spends so much time dealing with a variety of salespeople, he has put together a list of tips for working with them — and getting them to work for you.

• Act confident. It's best to go into a store with a fairly good idea of what you're looking for. For instance, if you're buying a camera or a stereo or kitchen equipment, read up on what merchandise is available and decide on some smart questions to ask.

"The 'victim,'" points out Vallerini, "is the man or woman whose appearance sends out clues to the salesperson that say 'I'm not sure what I'm looking for.' It makes it easier for the salesperson to sell you something you don't really need." Wearing a confused expression on your face or moving aimlessly from rack to rack makes you a target for a pushy salesperson. If you don't know exactly what you want, you can ask for help, but do so in a confident manner.

• Don't let yourself be intimidated. Salespeople sometimes use pressure tactics. They may try to flatter you ("That skirt looks wonderful on you"), offer advice ("You won't find that blender cheaper anywhere else") or rush you into making a decision ("The store will be closing soon"). Take your time and remind yourself of what you want.

• Speak up. If you've been pleasant and polite with a salesperson and he or she has not responded in kind, it's your responsibility to make your feelings known. Is the salesperson chatting with another store employee when you obviously need assistance? Don't be afraid to say, "Excuse me, but I'd like some help now." Is he or she using pressure tactics? Vallerini suggests that you "tell the salesperson (nicely) that you'd like to be left alone to make up your own mind."

If the person has been extremely rude or uncooperative, Vallerini urges you to report the behavior to the department supervisor or the store owner.

• Beware of "bait and switch." This technique, though illegal in many states, is used by some salespeople. Here's how it works: You see an item — such as a mattress or sewing machine — on sale in an ad or store window and you go into the store to inquire about it.

The salesperson shows you the product, then directs you to another model with additional or "better" features. Unfortunately this one is $20 more than the other, but the salesperson assures you that it's worth the extra money. If this is done to you, firmly say, "No, I'm interested in the product on sale."

• Treat salespeople considerately. Store personnel are not your personal servants, so don't treat them as such. A patronizing or condescending attitude on your part will put the salesperson on the defensive, discouraging him or her from giving you the help and respect you want. A smile and a friendly manner go a long way.

"... I'm a lawyer myself — and I may be cutting my own throat — but I'm going to tell you the truth."

Using a Lawyer may be Dangerous to your Wealth

My name is Charles Abbott. I'm a lawyer myself — and I may be cutting my own throat — but I'm going to tell you the truth:

The bulk of what most lawyers do could be done by someone who had never seen the inside of a law school — and usually is.

Lawyers secretaries do most of the work on wills, divorces (as well as annulments and legal separations), bankruptcies and creditor plans, simple contracts, real estate deals (buying, selling, and leasing), run-of-the-mill personal injury cases, adoptions, filing homesteads, insurance claims, minor criminal cases... and the list goes on and on.

And what do these Legal Secretaries do? They follow directions and fill in the blanks on forms. That's all. It's as simple as that.

That's why I think you may be ready to try being your own lawyer — and save a 'ton' of money.

But before you decide, answer these two questions: (1) Can you follow simple directions — no more complicated than assembling a Christmas toy or reading a cook book? (2) Do you have the few cents necessary to buy the correct forms at a Legal Stationery Store?

If your answer to both of those questions is "yes," you're ready. Well, almost ready. There are just two more things you should know:

(1) You don't necessarily have to have "the few cents necessary to buy the correct form at a Legal Stationery Store." Because I'll tell you how and where to get many of these forms free.

(2) You'll need my book. It's called "Do Your Own Legal Work." (And you can do your own legal work — no matter which State you live in!)

The book took more than a year to write. Based on what I've actually been earning in my law practice, that represents more than $100,000 worth of advice.

I mention that, not to brag, but so you'll know that I'm not some kid, fresh out of law school, and hungry for a few bucks. Along that line, you should know that I have a juris doctor degree in law, that I've been practicing for 13 years, and that I've written the book about the legal problems I work with, day in and day out.

Some other things you might want to know: I've published technical legal articles that explain the law — to lawyers. I've served as a research assistant to a Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. In addition, my biography appears in the prestigious Marquis' "Who's Who in American Law."

What will it cost you to "hire" a lawyer with those qualifications? Ten dollars. Just about what I—and lots of other lawyers—would charge you for 10 minutes of legal advice.

Why so cheap? Because I hope to sell a million copies—or at least enough so I can take some time off and enjoy life with my family.

That's what's in it for me.

And here's just a sample of what's in it for you (including complete directions and sample forms you can practice with):

How to find and use forms... page 7

How to draft your own will... page 36

How to handle your own criminal case... page 72

How to settle your own accident or personal injury case... page 82

How to handle an adoption... page 99

How to dissolve your marriage... page 113

How to solve debt problems — from consumer-credit counseling to bankruptcy... page 127

How to draft a contract... page 209

How you can use a Law Library—free—to avoid probate!... save taxes!... form a corporation!... and handle hundreds of other matters!... page 25

Now I'm not saying that you're never going to need a lawyer. I am saying that if you do need to see one, you'll be ready and be able to handle a lot of the simple, clerical work yourself. You'll save his time.

Here's an example of how my book will cut down on those precious minutes: For an attorney to draw up a simple contract might cost you $400 if he had to start from scratch. It could cost you $30 if he had to take only a half hour to review the work you'd already done — and can do, using my book.

Lawyers get $60 for husband-wife wills; I'll show you how to do your own in less than an hour. Lawyers charge $450 for a simple divorce which may take less than two hours of their time. Lawyers get between $3,000 and $4,500 for obtaining a $9,000 personal injury settlement. I'll show you how to do as well, or better, by yourself. Lawyers get $150 for an adoption, but their secretaries do the work — and so can you.

You still may be a little skeptical, so let me share just a few comments from other people:

"Valuable information and answers"

E.G., Los Angeles, California
Followed easy instructions and saved $300.00

B.P., Benton Harbor, Michigan
"It is well worth its price"

"I have purchased your book entitled 'Do Your Own Legal Work,' and found it quite interesting and enlightening. It is well worth its price."

M.C., Wampum, Pennsylvania
"Save our members thousands of dollars in legal fees"
"I have found your book to be most helpful. I have completed my trust and wills... with savings of over $200.00 in attorney's fees."

We have a movement pending through our credit union to save our members Thousands of Dollars in legal fees through the use of your book."

C.D.M., Nine Miles Falls, Washington

Your best guarantee that my book is everything I say it is, is this: My fellow lawyers will be watching me like a hawk. I wouldn't dare mis-step or mislead you. It could cost me my license.

What's more, I'm so sure you'll find my book immediately profitable — that I'll let you read it without paying for it!

Here's how you can read my book without any risk at all. Go ahead and order my book by mail. Keep it 30 days and read and check it out. Feel free to show it to a lawyer or anyone else you want. Then if you are not 100% satisfied, send it back and my publishing company will return your entire payment to you quietly and without question.

If you want to play it extra safe, you can post date your check or money order by 30 days. If you do that I personally guarantee that my publishing company will not deposit your money for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the book, the company will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked.

There's no way you can lose. Your book will be sent promptly by return mail. If you have any questions, you can telephone (801) 224-6508. Checks and money orders should be made payable to the Advocate Publishers. It is not a good idea to mail cash.

Prove it to me. Show me how I can hire a $100,000-a-year lawyer for 10 dollars. I've enclosed my check or money order — but don't deposit it until the date shown on the check. If I return your book within 30 days, send my payment back. I understand my order will be processed the day it's received.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is an individual life insurance policy. Colonial Penn guarantees to accept every man and woman between 50 and 80 who applies during the Guaranteed-Acceptance Period—regardless of any other insurance carried.

Best Company, the most highly respected and impartial insurance statistical and financial reporting organization in the nation.

An Important Opportunity for Every Older Person!

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS is a remarkable concept of life insurance, achieved as a result of the efforts Colonial Penn has devoted to meeting the insurance needs of mature people.

Our goal has been a life insurance policy we can make available to all mature people—a policy whose cost is reasonable and whose benefits are worthwhile.

Here's How PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS Can Do This For You: There is a two-year limited benefit period.

During the first two years that your policy is in effect, your coverage is reduced. If you should die during the first policy year, the benefit paid to your beneficiary is $100 instead of the full face amount of the policy. If death occurs during the second policy year, your beneficiary receives $250 instead of the full face amount of the policy. Once two years have passed, you are covered for the full face amount of the policy.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS enables the older person to obtain worthwhile benefits for his insurance dollar—and, at the same time, guarantees acceptance for all applicants.

PRIME LIFE 50 PLUS also provides increasing cash values which begin in the first or second year, depending on your age.

The cost? $6.95 A MONTH!

No matter what your age, your sex, or the condition of your health, you pay $6.95 a month. The amount of coverage you receive is based on your sex and age. However, once you are insured the amount of your insurance will never go down, and your payments will never go up!

Act Now—You Have Nothing To Lose!

Lauren Tewes Steams Toward Stardom

By Isobel Silden

The most controversial thing about Love Boat's Julie McCoy is her name in real life: Lauren Tewes. It's pronounced tweez, and Lauren refused to change it to something more dramatic just because she's an actress.

So there you are. Lauren Tewes is a new breed of Hollywood star: pretty in the old-fashioned tradition, determined as today's woman. She is very soft-spoken, but there is something about that perfect profile which indicates a lot of strength. Some might call it stubbornness.

There are also touselles of blond curls, green eyes that see everything very clearly, flawless skin and a terrific figure.

Lauren is ideal for the role of the cruise director for the Love Boat, but she admits she had never been on a cruise before being signed for the series. That situation has changed: She has been to Mexico and Alaska doing location footage. She regards the trips as part of her job. Sea spray is not in her blood.

She is a dedicated actress, who has made all the right moves along the way. She was born in Braddock, Pa., a suburb of Pittsburgh, moved with her parents (her mother is now deceased), two brothers and sister to Downey, Calif. They then moved on to Whittier, where she grew up. Her father, a wood-pattern maker, still lives there.

Becoming an actress was a logical offshoot of her high-school activities. She was in the band and class plays, and won best-actress honors three years out of four. Since Whittier is a bedroom community of Los Angeles, the next move was to prepare herself for a professional acting career.

Lauren enrolled in the theater department of Rio Hondo Junior College in Whittier and won the first statewide acting scholarship to be given by the University of California at Riverside. Upon graduation from college, she traveled the 60 miles from Riverside to not-yet-magical-for-her Hollywood and continued working to make her dream come true. She waited tables at restaurants near Warner Bros. and NBC. She studied with the prestigious Charles Conrad and was ready when her first break came.

That was in a commercial, and Lauren doesn't laugh about it. "That's where the big bucks are," she reminds you. She made lots of commercials and hung up her restaurant tray forever.

She also really likes commercials because that's how she met her husband.

"I went on an audition for a commercial which he was directing. He's John Wassel and he didn't pick me for a big part in it. I just got to do the 'lip-syncing,'" she says ruefully. But he did select her for the big jaunt through life. The couple met in February 1977, and got married the following November. He is the most important person and factor in her life. She makes that very clear. All else is secondary, including work.

She did not, however, come to her Love Boat role straight from commercials. There were guest spots on episodes of Charlie's Angels, Police Story, Family and Starsky and Hutch. The last was the one that did it.

"The producers remembered I'd played a meaty bad guy, an assistant district attorney out to get Starsky and Hutch," she says. "It was a good part. I play bad people very well, and it's a lot easier than smiling all the time. So I auditioned for the part of Julie the day before they started shooting, got the part and here I am."

Although her husband comes before work, she has definite ambitions. "I have two more years to go on my Love Boat contract, and by that time I want to be as knowledgeable as possible about film. I'm on the set all the time, asking everybody questions. I want to act and produce, with and without my husband.

"I've never done a movie, and I want to. What kind? Oh, the kind that wins Academy Awards, of course," she says, smiling.

Until then, Love Boat is not a bad life. And she rather likes Julie McCoy.

"Julie enjoys her work, and the ship motivates her. I've talked with a lot of cruise directors, so I understand the character. I like being recognized, but not being mobbed. Most of all, I love the opportunity of working with all our guest stars." Ruth Gordon and Ethel Merman are among the hundreds of top names who have made guest appearances.

So now it's business as usual on the Love Boat, with 12-hour workdays either on location on the actual Princess or it's perfect imitation on a 20th Century-Fox sound stage.

She knows two things for certain: Julie will continue to fall in love, most of the time not wisely. And Lauren will never, but never, spend her vacation on a cruise.

"I'll stay home and eat my husband's great cooking," she sighs with deep satisfaction.

UNDER MY EYES, TOO

Not much at saving money (Our effort somehow lags).
We save, though, something funny—
We save our paper bags.

Sometimes a bag is needed.
More often it is not.
Our pile of bags exceeded
Some time ago, a lot.

We hear of hunters bagging
With well-aimed shots their prey.
Compared with us, they're lagging—
We bag more bags each day.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Animal Life

The latest thing in eyewear seems to be contact lenses for chickens. The chickens don't wear the lenses to improve their eyesight, however. "On the contrary, the lenses make the chickens' eyesight worse," explains Dr. Darral Clarke, a professor of business management at Brigham Young University.

"Wearing the lenses helps prevent the chicken fights and death that happen so often on chicken farms," says Clarke. Chickens battle to determine who's dominant and who's submissive. The dominant chickens establish territories which they declare off-limits and which they fight to defend. The contact lenses blur the chickens' vision and prevent them from seeing the crowns of their neighbors; the crowns distinguish the top chicken from the underdog. "If the chickens can't tell one from the other, they have a difficult time establishing a pecking order," Clarke points out. "The lenses also reduce the chicken's depth of visual acuity to about six inches. In order to find food, the chickens have to walk around with bent heads, another sign of a submissive chicken." Now peace reigns in the chicken coop.

Your Net Worth

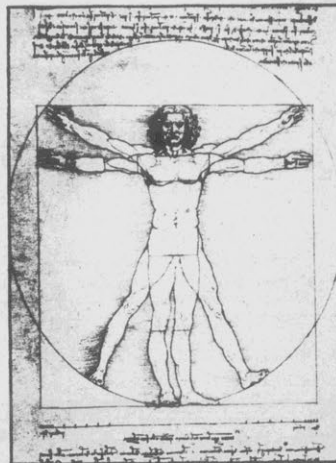

Life may be worth a million dollars, but unfortunately your body is not. In fact, about all you could get for the chemicals in your body is the colossal sum of $7.28.

Dr. Harry Monsen, a professor of anatomy at the University of Illinois' College of Medicine says that "since roughly 95 percent of the body is made up of water, there's not much left that's valuable." In a 160-pound person, there are about 5 pounds of calcium, 9 ounces of potassium, 1½ pounds of phosphates, a trifling amount of magnesium and traces of a number of other minerals. However, Dr. Monsen, who noted that "10 years ago a person was worth about 89 cents," feels that this is no reason to undervalue yourself. "The body," he says, "would probably be worth a lot more if you counted the enzymes, the hormones, all those sorts of things. Then it might be worth in the thousands." Feel better?

Reclaiming The Land

In the struggle to slow down the amount of imported oil we use each day, President Carter has called on coal to help fill the gap between energy supply and demand. But there are problems involved with the mining and use of coal, not the least of which is the wasted land strip mining leaves behind. However, at Lincoln Memorial University in Harrogate, Tenn., a degree program has been turning out graduates trained in restoring mined land to productive use.

"Strip mining means stripping down a mountain, layer by layer, and extracting the coal," explains Dr. Frank Welch, Lincoln Memorial's president. "Although regulations vary from state to state, basically strip miners must replace that mountain. This is very difficult, expensive and there are other uses that the land could be put to. Our students learn about the fertilization needs of strip-mined soil, what kinds of vegetation will grow there and even about the water requirements for raising fish if a lake seems like a good solution for the area. One company planted clover and began raising bees." Now that's a sweet solution.

Lifestyles

Jobs. Work-related stress is often not the cause of job dissatisfaction, notes an American Academy of Family Physicians report on Lifestyles/Personal Health Care in Different Occupations. While four-fifths of the executives questioned, along with two-thirds of the physicians, secretaries and teachers, said that their work environment is usually or always stressful, 85 percent or more of each group also said they usually or always liked their work.

Women. Making it in a man's world is easier for a woman who speaks up for herself, at least if her colleagues are male, reports a study by Dr. Florence L. Denmark, president elect of the American Psychological Association. Dr. Denmark found that being outspoken or abrasive are traits men respect, whether they occur in men or women. Women, on the other hand, tend to feel that an outspoken member of their own sex is unattractive.

Television. Beginning Sept. 23, the Public Broadcasting Service will present a 12-part series called "Love for Lydia." The story of a young Englishwoman, this Masterpiece Theater production follows Lydia Aspen's life as she progresses from sheltered orphan to the mysterious beauty so many men come to love. Merit Taste Key To Success!

'Enriched Flavor' cigarette sparks whole new taste era in low tar smoking.

A few years ago, most smokers agreed: low tar meant low taste.

Then along came MERIT and a whole new taste idea called 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And the "low tar, low taste" theory was exploded. Exploded with proven taste in a new low tar cigarette.

No other new cigarette in the last 20 years has attracted so many smokers as quickly as MERIT!

It's clear: MERIT taste is changing attitudes towards low tar smoking.
