

Hunt Orders More Fund-Saving Steps

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said at his press conference today that a freeze on hiring new state government workers is needed to insure the state will have enough money next year to continue essential programs and provide a fair pay raise for teachers and state employees.

Hunt ordered the freeze effective today. The State Budget Office will make exceptions to the hiring freeze only for essential positions, emergencies and to implement programs mandated by the General Assembly.

In addition, Hunt said he had ordered the following steps be taken to save state government money:

- Limit in-state and out-of-state travel to only essential trips by state employees.
- Freeze purchases of new equipment unless specifically approved by the state budget office.
- Limit spending on printing to "absolutely essential" government items.

Hunt said the steps were needed because North Carolina's economy is heading into a downturn.

"Inflation is now running at 13 percent and our tax revenues in state government are expected to grow by only 10 percent this year," Hunt said.

"We must cut spending now to insure that we can fund the program requirements of the current budget and have enough money next spring to provide both essential services and a fair pay raise for teachers and state employees," he added.

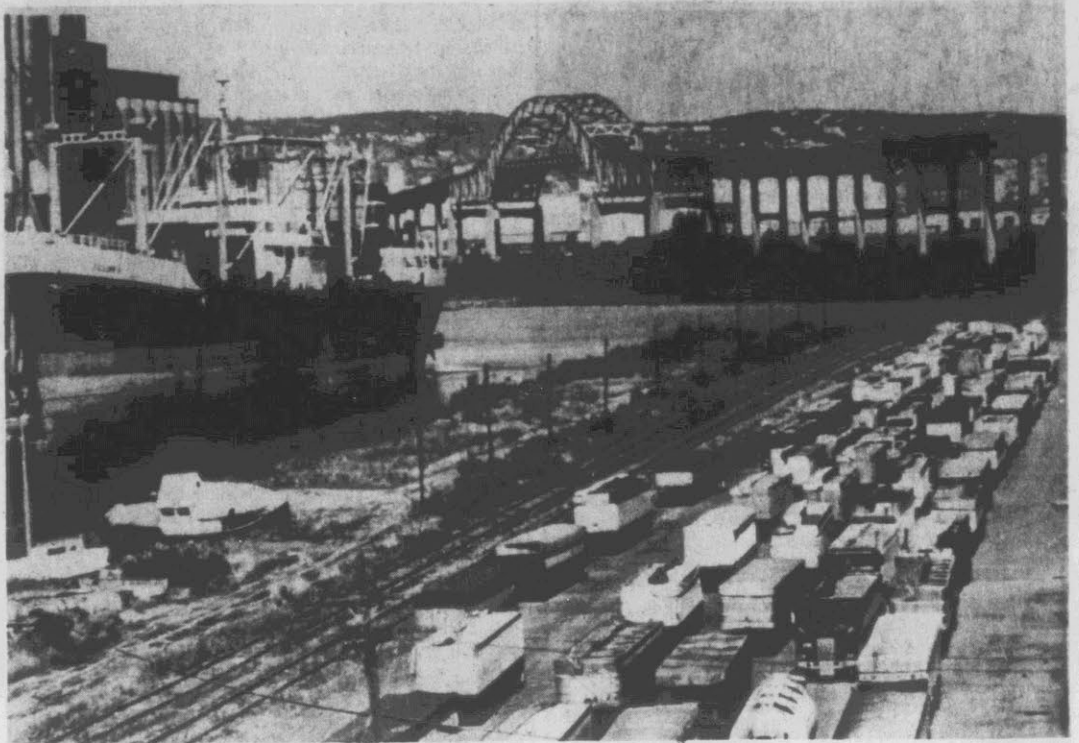

Hunt has said he supports a pay raise for state workers and teachers next year of close to the increased cost of living.

Hunt said he did not know how much money the state would save with the moves or even how much it needs to save.

The governor said jobs that would not be included in the freeze include law enforcement officers and "positions essential in the custody and care of persons for whom the state is responsible."

There are currently about 5,400 vacant jobs in state government. Hunt said only about 2,400 will be affected by the freeze.

Hunt said he did not know how long the freeze would last. But he said if the economic downturn lasts through the end of the fiscal year next June the hiring freeze might also last that long.

One Barrier After Another

AND NOW, THE WAIT — The 12-week old grain millers' strike ended Tuesday and with the continuation of operations at Midwestern grain elevators were hundreds of grain trucks waiting to unload. Over 50 trucks were parked under the high bridge which connects Superior, Wis. with Duluth, Minn., and a ship waited to load at Superior's nearby GTA terminal Wednesday. It has been estimated the strike has cost the area in terms of billions of dollars. (AP Laserphoto)

Moye Tract Re-Zoning Is Recommended By Board

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
A request by the J. R. Moye heirs for rezoning some eight acres at the southeast corner of NC-43 and Moye Boulevard from Medical Arts zoning designation to Office and Institutional was recommended to the City Council for approval by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

The planning board's action last night on the rezoning matter took place despite the expressed objections of several doctors who have offices in the medical community and the East Carolina University Medical School.

In voting to recommend that the Council rezone the Moye tract, planning board members were not in total agreement as a three to one vote resulted. Prior to the recommendation vote, a motion to table the matter for 30 days died for lack of a second.

Dr. John Leonard, a surgeon who is associated with Doctors Ira M. Hardy II and Robert L. Timmons at 125 Moye Boulevard, expressed strong opposition to the move to change the medical arts zoning, saying that it was not in the best interest of health care.

Leonard said that "you only have to go to Durham and Chapel Hill" to see the need for medical arts land. He said that the question of how the area will be affected in the future by the zoning action should be addressed.

The doctor, noting that multi-family housing development is allowed in Office and Institutional, asserted that putting multi-family housing on the tract rather than medical care facilities is not in the best interest of the community.

Attorney Fred Mattox, representing the Moye family, contended that when the uses that are permitted under Office and Institutional are considered, the only use that could be viewed as offensive to medical arts would be multi-family.

Mattox said that basically, the only things not allowed in Office and Institutional zoning are drug stores, nursing homes, and retail sale of medical supplies. The attorney said that if apartments will not hurt the medical community on the west side, as previously approved, why would rezoning the Moye tract hurt it on the east side.

Mattox pointed out that the eight-acre tract in question is "an island isolated to itself." He recalled that the old hospital property now owned by the county was rezoned for Office and Institutional use and he said he feels the Moyes should be treated the same way.

Saying that he doubted multi-family development would ever exist on the Moye tract, Mattox said that it is a type of spot zoning to leave the medical arts parcel as it is in view of the surrounding zones.

Letters from Hardy and Timmons stating their objections to the rezoning were read and Ben Weaver, associate dean of the medical school, said that Dr. William Laupus, medical school dean,

Congress Pay Boost Far From Scuttled In Senate

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee's unanimous decision to reject a $3,200 a year pay raise for congressmen has not killed the issue, but probably has only moved the spectacle to a smaller arena.

The only clear result of the action Wednesday by the Appropriations Committee is that the Senate likely will be able to debate an emergency bill today to pay for government operations without having to worry about the politically volatile pay issue.

The committee's decision also improved the chances that some 22,000 top-level federal employees and judges will get a 5.5 percent pay raise since their proposed increase was left intact in the bill.

If the Senate passes the emergency bill in the form recommended by its appropriations committee, two controversial issues — the pay raise and federal funding for abortions — would be decided by a small band of House-Senate conferees assigned to work out differences between the two houses.

In that event, the question of whether a pay raise is included in the final compromise would depend on which group of negotiators — those from the House or those from the Senate — was more adamant in its position.

Compromises recommended by House-Senate conferences are not subject to amendment when they are brought back for a final vote; it is a simple yes or no vote. Since the emergency funding bill must be passed before the new fiscal year begins next Monday, neither opponents nor supporters would be likely to try to overturn a conference report that went against their position.

Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., who voted with 21 other appropriations committee members to delete any pay raise for congressmen from the emergency funding bill, said the committee's vote

"does not indicate that the pay raise is finally dead."

"There is a real possibility that in conference the increase will be restored," he said.

And Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who offered the motion to delete the pay raise for congressmen, said his move was purely tactical and was aimed at avoiding a lengthy battle on the Senate floor over the pay issue. Stevens noted he had previously supported pay increases for Congress.

The 5.5 percent pay raise passed by the House would increase the salary of congressmen from the current $57,500 to $60,700 on Oct. 1. Congress' last pay raise was a 29 percent increase in February 1977.

The abortion language also could prove troublesome in a conference. The committee voted 14-13 to delete the strong House-passed language on abortion — language the Senate already has rejected four times this year.

The House language would prohibit using federal funds to pay for abortions unless the life of the mother was directly threatened.

Tighten Grip

TOKYO (AP) — A U.S. intelligence report says the Soviet Union now has a division-size force of 10,000 to 12,000 troops on four islands claimed by Japan 40 miles off the northern Japanese coast, Defense Agency officials reported today.

Foreign Ministry sources said Japan would file a formal protest with the Soviets if the report is confirmed.

According to the U.S. information, up to 2,000 additional Soviet troops have arrived on the island of Shikotan, bringing to 10,000 to 12,000 the total force on the four islands, which have been held by the Soviets since the closing days of World War II, the Japanese defense officials said.

Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira said today the report had not been verified, but he said "appropriate" diplomatic steps would be taken if it is confirmed. He spoke to reporters during an election campaign appearance.

Japanese Foreign Ministry sources said these steps would amount to a formal protest to the Soviet Union.

Japan lodged earlier protests when the Soviets placed troops or military facilities on the contested "northern territories" islands off Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island.

Agents Grilled For 'Facts' On Cuba Situation

By LEE GOULD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For hours, the seven men grilled CIA agents and analyzed secret data on the situation in Cuba. Their mission: "Get all the facts" and help President Carter decide what to do about the armored Soviet brigade 90 miles off American shores.

Heading the elite group was former Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford, who said the session lasted "eight, nine hours" at CIA headquarters in nearby Langley, Va.

All were there at the request of the president.

"The president wanted to get a group of very experienced men to explore fully all the facts regarding the Cuban situation," Clifford said from his Bethesda, Md., home Wednesday night.

The seven experts "went out to the CIA on Monday and we spent all afternoon and a good part of the evening there — eight or nine hours," Clifford said. "We got a briefing and were permitted to ask questions."

The meeting was held to give members of the group a "chance to talk the whole thing over among themselves; then see him (Carter) and see if we couldn't be of assistance in solving the problem." Monday's session was "very thorough. We talked it all out."

The group has not prepared a written report. Indeed, it has not even tried to reach a consensus. "It was not that kind of a group," Clifford explained.

The men, he said, would give their advice to Carter when summoned.

"We were all very experienced," in intelligence and national security, Clifford added, although he declined, as did the White House, to name the other six.

Clifford said he didn't know when the group would discuss its analysis with Carter. The president, however, said in New York City Tuesday that he probably will report to the nation on the situation within a week.

PUT OFF

Believe it or not, I have called this evening both the Greenville Police Department and the Pitt County Sheriff Department to try to give them specific information about drug traffic, names and everything. The person I talked to each place put me off — "so-and-so's on vacation, can't handle it now, wait till tomorrow." I have children, which is why I'm so down on the drug culture and willing to stick my neck out this way. Who do I give this information to if the law enforcement agencies of the area I live in don't want it?

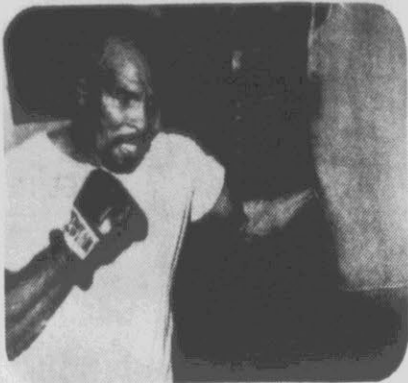

The chiefs of both these law enforcement agencies say they do want the information you're offering. Hotline did not give your name to either of them, but called you back to say that both Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon and Sheriff Ralph Tyson ask that you call each of them personally. Both said that the person answering the phone should have listened to and taken down every word you had to say and referred the information immediately. They could not explain why it happened as you related. Both said the matter will be discussed in each respective department. Sheriff Tyson commented that the Sheriff Department once had a telephone line manned all the time for the express purpose of accepting tips such as yours. There were not enough calls received to warrant the extra expense, he said, but the main line into the Sheriff Department is supposed to serve the same purpose. "We appreciate tips from citizens any time," he said, "and very often solve cases and protect the public because of them. I don't know how this happened, but please tell this person to call back. Any information given us will be acted upon and the source will be kept confidential."

Earnie's Second Chance

Tomorrow night in Las Vegas, Earnie Shavers will get his second chance to fight for the world heavyweight boxing title. The first time, in September, 1977, Shavers lost a 15-round decision to Muhammad Ali. "A man has to be crazy to enjoy getting hit on the side of the head," says Shavers, who usually makes things much less enjoyable for his opponents than for himself. He has fought 66 professional bouts, and has won 58 of them, scoring 56 knockouts. "I'm a natural puncher and can take out any opponent," Shavers says. He earned tomorrow night's title shot by knocking out Ken Norton in one round last March.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is Shavers' opponent in tomorrow night's title bout?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — During the Middle Ages, the falcon was often used for hunting.

Nursing Home Is Barricaded

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — More than 50 employees of the Sarah Allen Nursing Home have barricaded themselves inside the bankrupt institution, refusing to release 140 elderly patients for relocation, authorities say.

The employees, who have worked for six weeks without pay and brought food for the patients when the home's funds were withheld, shouted: "We want our paychecks before the state gets its patients."

The employees, members of Local 119 C of the Hospital Workers Union, took the action

Wednesday after hearing that the state was going to transfer the patients, most of whom are bedridden and from the Philadelphia area, to a home near Harrisburg.

"We won't abandon them," said nurse Marcia Deal. "They don't want to be moved."

State Welfare Commissioner Helen O'Bannon said the state had been forced to take the action to ensure the safety of the patients.

However, David F. Phifer, an assistant attorney general with the state Health Department, said in a telephone interview Sept. 14 that the patients would be relocated in the Philadelphia area and there was no rush.

Employees continued to care for the patients and allowed relatives brief visits with patients Wednesday before barricading the doors. Ms. Deal said the state would help move the patients when the pay issue was settled.

Approximately 120 employees, including 80 nurses, work at the home.

Violation Turns Into A Profit

CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — For Bill Hahn of Rockport, Mass., a traffic violation in Conway last summer turned into a $172.50 profit.

Hahn, 65, was stopped in July for a yellow line violation by patrolman Robert Kolbe, badge number 708.

This week, the Conway District Court received a letter from Hahn with a check for $27.50 to cover the fine and a "thank you."

It seems that on his way back to Massachusetts, Hahn stopped at the state liquor store in Portsmouth and bought a lottery ticket.

"I ... played the arresting officer's badge number in your New Hampshire Daily Numbers Game," he wrote. "Sure enough, the next day I was most happy to find I had won $200."

Hundreds Gather To Bury A Friend

INEZ, N.C. (AP) — Back during the Depression, Kearney Thompson gave food and credit to folks who traded at his country store.

"There's not a person in this community that Kearney hadn't helped at one time or another," said Carl Langlois, owner of a small market near Thompson Gro.

Wednesday, hundreds gathered at little Shady Grove United Methodist Church to bury Thompson, 78, the victim of a robber who slipped into his store Monday morning and shattered his head with a 50-pound block of salt.

At the store, on N.C. 58 about 12 miles southeast of Warren-ton, a white ribbon bow of mourning adorned the paint-chipped door.

Mourners at the funeral gathered around Warren County Sheriff Clarence Davis to ask if he had caught "the one that done it."

"No," Davis replied sadly. A suspect had been identified, he said, but deputies had not been able to track him down.

"It's the worst thing that ever happened here," said Catherine Brown, a neighbor who helped out at the store in recent years as Thompson grew more feeble. "And it happened to the best man who ever lived here."

"He never turned anybody down, night or day. If he had been the kind of man who made enemies, maybe you could understand it, but this ..."

Glenn "Smokey" Coleman Jr., a sawmill owner and operator who was loading logs 100 yards away, found Thompson's body. "I saw one of his shoes, lying there on the floor between the stove and the feed room," Coleman said.

Thompson operated the store for almost 50 years, taking over from his mother who opened the store in 1926.

"In many ways, we have lost part of a way of life," said the Rev. John Bowman, Thompson's minister.

Warning From 'Woolly Bear'

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — If you believe the "Woolly Bear," a fat caterpillar whose fur coat portends the winter weather ahead, better be braced for a rough one.

"A lot of misery with very little letup," is the way Herbert B. Krone, king of the Woolly Bear fur readers, summed it up Wednesday from a hospital bed in the living room of his home here.

Krone, 85, has been bed-ridden for more than a year. So his wife, Martha, and some relatives living nearby fetched him a plate of the hairy wigglers to study.

"These Woolly Bears," said Krone, "are as black as your hat from one end to the other. I don't believe I've ever seen them that black. That kind of color means wind, cold, sleet, snow."

He said there's no trick to reading a Woolly Bear's fur. "It goes strictly by color," he said. "If the coat is black like this year, look out. If it is a nice light brown, you don't even have to think about packing up and going to Florida."

Program To Aid Poor, Elderly

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A $3.8-million program to secure homes for low income and elderly citizens and protect them from the weather has been announced by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Hunt said the project, to be completed by Dec. 31, is designed to "minimize the effects of inflation and cold weather on the poor and elderly."

The U.S. Department of Energy provides the funds for the 4,000 homes, and local community action agencies administer the program.

Business Women Give Security High Priority

NEW YORK (AP) — The rapidly growing number of women who travel for business have the same general concerns as do their male counterparts, but in some specific areas their requirements are different, a recent survey shows.

Security is a much higher priority for women than for men, the research by a hotel-management company revealed, with 60 percent of the women preferring downtown locations, as opposed to only 43 percent of the men.

This may indicate a feeling of greater safety in having controlled access through a lobby and elevators, rather than having a room door opening directly to the outside as in a motel, the report notes.

In the study just completed by Western International Hotels, 53 percent of the group of women who travel regularly in connection with their work indicated their needs were "somewhat" or "very" different from those of men.

Limousine service from airports was mentioned as a requirement by the women, since most said they tended to fly, rather than drive or rent a car, so that getting from the airport to the hotel with luggage easily is essential.

Among the special needs mentioned was room lighting, especially good lighting near a mirror — preferably in the bathroom — and desk lighting, since 75 percent said they worked in their rooms in the evenings.

Women also considered the availability of room service important, since many said they liked to get the day off to an unhurried start by ordering breakfast in their rooms.

Although some women mentioned tipping as a major stumbling block, most of the women surveyed said entertaining men at business meals in restaurants was not a major problem. But they suggested that making reservations and making it clear before being seated that they were the hostess helped eliminate difficulties.

Having an after-work drink alone was still an uncomfortable experience, many of the women surveyed noted, but 90 percent said they had used a hotel bar.

The typical traveling woman, says the report, is 38 years old, compared with 44 for a man; 71 percent are in "business," though sales, administration and personnel are major areas of concentration. She takes 10-12 trips per year, each averaging seven nights. Men take more trips — up to 19 annually, but stay fewer nights on each.

CPS Program Given Secretaries Monday

The Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association met Monday at the Ramada Inn. Mrs. Etta Creech, CPS, executive assistant to the president of the Wake County Hospital System, Inc., spoke on the Certified Professional Secretary Program, emphasizing that motivation, involvement and enthusiasm are keys toward attaining any goals people set for themselves.

President Betty Thompson welcomed Kathy Staton and Judy Purvis, guests for the meeting, and Anne Harrington, who was welcomed into the chapter as a regular member.

Brenda Wilson reported that Dr. John R. Miller, director of Kent Institute of Motivation, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio, will conduct the chapter's annual workshop, to be held Feb. 2 at the Greenville Country Club.

Helen Rollins reported that the CPS review courses currently being held at Pitt Community College have had very good attendance and encouraged all to attend.

Gloria Bazemore, Linda Windham, Linda Langley, Debbie Donaldson and Ollie Mewborn were accepted by the chapter as new members.

President Thompson announced that the southeastern district meeting will be held in Atlanta, Ga. Oct. 26-28. Also, Betty Sauls, CPS, North Carolina Division president, will be the luncheon speaker at a workshop Oct. 20, sponsored by the Washington chapter.

Pilot Members Hear Speaker

The Pilot Club of Greenville held its dinner meeting Monday at the Ramada Inn. Gary Taylor, N. C. Lung Association executive board member, was guest speaker.

The Let's Run for Better Lungs competition will be held here as well as other major locations in the state Nov. 3 at 10 a.m.

Margaret Register, Pitt County Board of Elections, urged members to keep abreast of current issues and to exercise the privilege of voting in any coming elections.

Division reports were given by coordinators Lib LeConte, Rose Howell and Trudie Blessing. The club's fund-raising project, the sale of community birthday calendars, has been completed and they will be distributed to sponsoring firms in early December.

Grand opening for another Pilot project, the Greenville Exercise Trail, will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at Green Springs Park. Gift certificates will be awarded to winners according to age groups.

Louise Downing reported on the fall council meeting held in Asheville Sept. 15-16. Emily Johnston was named Pilot Spoke of the Month. The group's founder's day will be observed at a covered-dish supper Oct. 8 at 6 p.m. at Immanuel Baptist Church.

The meeting was conducted by President Irene Prewett.

She Won't Stand For Seat-Covers

DEAR ABBY: The practice of "saving seats" needs some guidelines much like the guidelines for tipping. I recently attended a graduation exercise where two people arrived early and "saved" 20 seats in the front row for the rest of the family who arrived one minute before the activities started!

At least 500 people walked down to the front row during that time, thinking those seats were available.

Because no guidelines exist with regard to this practice, all persons honored the "Sorry, these seats are taken," explanation.

May I suggest a rule? One person may save ONE SEAT ONLY in public places.

Because this situation occurs frequently, your comments would be greatly appreciated.

NO SEATS IN LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR SEATS: Your suggestion makes a lot of sense. But a trend has to start somewhere; I'm willing. How about you? Readers!

DEAR ABBY: I am married to a very affectionate man. Don't get me wrong. I'm not complaining; I'm lucky, but I think there's a time and place for everything. My problem is that Henry will pinch me on the behind, or make a grab for me in front of the kids, and it makes me very uncomfortable.

I don't mind being patted and pawed when Henry and I are alone, but I get embarrassed when he does it in front of the kids. When I tell him how I feel about this, he says it's good for the kids to see this kind of thing at home, and it's nothing to be ashamed of.

I agree, kids should witness love and affection between parents, but isn't there a limit? And if so, where is it?

THE OBJECT OF HIS AFFECTIONS

DEAR OBJECT: Love and affection are indeed beautiful. And children who witness it at home are blessed. But the limit is reached when you begin to feel uncomfortable.

DEAR ABBY: You told AMERICA FIRST, who objected to our taking in the boat people:

"Unless you are a direct descendant of the American Indian, you wouldn't be here if your forebears hadn't sought refuge from another country."

Am I to assume that you do not recognize over 20 million blacks in this country who are NOT descendants of American Indians?

OFFENDED IN VALLEJO

DEAR OFFENDED: You are right. I apologize for having overlooked the fact that YOUR ancestors were brought here in chains—to the everlasting shame of those who were guilty of such outrageously inhumane conduct.

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine who lives in Hollywood says there is a cologne called "Entice" that is going over big out there, and— are you ready for this—it smells like "sweaty ballplayers!"

Will you please check it out for me?

CAN'T BELIEVE IT IN OHIO

DEAR CANT: I did, and there is!

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the young mother whose 20-month-old child screamed and trembled every time a vacuum cleaner was turned on brought back memories.

I went through the same thing with my son, John, now 21. When John was an infant he not only screamed whenever I used the vacuum cleaner, he would double up in pain. He reacted the same way to power tools and other high pitched noises.

The doctor said he probably would outgrow it and I should try to get him used to it. It didn't work. Sometimes the noise would make Johnny physically sick and the poor kid would throw up. I finally put away the vacuum cleaner and used a carpet sweeper instead.

I raised four kids, and Johnny was the only one with this problem.

DEAR E.T.: I heard from several ear specialists that some children are born with an extremely high sensitivity to loud noises. They suffer severe pain when subjected to them and should not be forced to "get used to it." (Some outgrow this sensitivity and some do not.)

A child who reacts violently to loud noises should be examined by an ear specialist.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

As I sat in the dental chair having stitches put into my mouth, the dentist said, "You're not going to do a funny column about this, are you?"

My teeth came dangerously close to his hand and I wanted to say, "Of course I am . . . just as soon as I get the light piece I'm doing on World War II out of the typewriter."

I have no sense of humor whatsoever when it comes to my own pain. I'm really funny that way. The more it hurts, the less I laugh.

The less I laugh, the funnier everyone around me becomes. I guess I never realized before how sadistic a family can be. Here I am — my mouth struck down in its prime — and they're dancing around like they're auditioning for The Comedy Store.

"Hey, look at you. You're in stitches and I haven't even told the joke yet."

"Look at all the weight you're going to lose by not being able to eat. Already you look $300 thinner."

"I knew a woman who had her jaws wired shut. She choked to death on orange juice."

"Sit down and let me tell you what I feel about life."

"Mom can't come to the phone now, she's hitting the bottle." (This when I was coaxing syrup into the blender.)

"Hey, Mom . . . do your impersonation for Ralph. Come on. Listen to this. Say, 'You help me and together we'll solve our problems.' Smile at the same time. Who do you think it is? Give up? Jimmy Carter?"

As I painfully wrapped my parched lips around a straw my husband said, "You want to go out to dinner or something?"

My eyes widened in shock as I shook my head no.

"Isn't that just like a woman?" he said. "They bug you every day of the week to take you out to eat and the moment someone suggests it they back down. I was going to take you to that expensive French restaurant. We went there back when you had an impacted wisdom tooth, remember?"

Just then, the kids came in with a couple of large pizzas. "How about some of the soft parts?" they offered. (My eyes welled with tears.) "Don't get too choked up about it. The soft part is the part that didn't get done."

And people wonder why some mothers are becoming registered terrorists for Planned Parenthood.

'Coffee Talk' Basically Good

Fifteen candidates for Greenville mayor and City Council appeared at a coffee talk sponsored by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Tuesday morning.

There was only a short time for meeting the candidates, of course, but the idea of the coffee talk where the candidates can meet business and civic leaders is basically a good one.

More often than not there are large fields of candidates for municipal offices and their ideas are not always known to the general public. Because of the large field of candidates only limited time could be allotted to each to present his other thoughts. At least, though, local citizens could meet them and get some indications of their ideas on local issues.

Candidates for local offices owe it to the public to be as accessible as possible in the time remaining before the Oct. 9 election.

Obviously campaigns for council can't be as highly organized as, say one for governor and consequently, one-to-one contact with the public is desirable for the municipal candidates.

'Meddling' Has A 2-Way Connotation

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A Gromyko wants the United States to stop "meddling" in Soviet affairs.

Specifically he was speaking about the Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Meddling? Maybe Gromyko would want to apply that to the Soviet-backed Castro troops in Africa.

LIGHT OF HISTORY

The Tar Heel In Spirit

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — "It was intended that I should be born in the same bed in the same room in which my grandfather, my father and my brother William had been born. I upset the family plans, however, by arriving ahead of time."

That was Cecil Blount DeMille's explanation of why he wasn't a genuine Tar Heel. But he was one in spirit, and he took delight in autographing pictures, "Greetings from one 'Tar Heel' to another."

His father, Henry Churchill DeMille, had every intention of carrying Matilda Beatrice Samuel DeMille to the family home on Bridge Street in Washington, N.C., for the birth of their second child, but the boy caught him off-guard while they were vacationing at Mrs. Bronson's boarding house in Ashfield, Mass., on Aug. 12, 1881.

Still, the youngster became a familiar visitor in the home of his grandmother, Margaret Hoyt DeMille, who ran a little school in Washington. Apparently Cecil as a child sat in on some of the classes, and he became acquainted with a whole passel of cousins.

He later wrote that on his last visit to Washington in 1940 "... most of those who turned out were cousins of mine in the Carolinian sense, for the blood of the Blounts, Bragaws, DeMilles, Harbings, Hoyts and many others is all intermingled in that sturdy stock."

Commenting on "the warmth with which little Washington embraced a faraway, but not forgetful, son," he recalled with a chuckle that the marquee of the local theater, which was featuring a motion picture on the notorious outlaw, read, "The Return of Frank James and Cecil B. DeMille."

For a decade after 1902 Cecil collaborated with his brother and David Belasco in writing and producing plays for the New York stage. Then he joined Samuel Goldfish (later called Goldwyn), Arthur Friend and Jesse Lasky in a small company for the production of motion pictures.

They intended to make their first movie in Flagstaff, Ariz., but the weather was so bad that the DeMille went to Los Angeles and found a barn in the middle of what is now Hollywood.

There he directed the world's first feature-length motion picture, "The Squaw Man." Cecil B. DeMille's name for nearly half a century was to be almost synonymous with Hollywood.

The partners had gambled $25,000 on the film. The return was ten-fold, and feature-length films became the wave of the future.

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, with DeMille as director-general, grew into the Paramount Pictures Corp., but along the way DeMille flirted with other ventures. In 1924, for instance, he organized the DeMille Pictures Corp., then joined Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as producer-director for a while. But it was again with Paramount that he had his greatest successes.

DeMille's contributions to motion pictures were far greater than the number of films that he directed — 70 in all. He was an innovator. He pioneered in lighting, in sound, in cameras, in spectaculars.

He introduced more stars than anyone in the business; he popularized sound movies and color films. In "Reap the Wild Wind" he ordered red oil in the lamps; when his technical advisors argued that oil was not red, DeMille remembered that the oil in his Aunt Betty Hoyt's lamps in Washington was red. So dye was added to the kerosene for the movie.

Perhaps DeMille's movies about the Bible will be best remembered by future generations. "The Ten Commandments" (the 1923 and 1956 versions), "The Crusades" (1935) and "Samson and Delilah" (1949) were immense successes.

Oddly, DeMille never won an Oscar for directing. "The Greatest Show on Earth," however, was named the best picture of 1952. He was proud of the fact that "The King of Kings" had been shown somewhere from the day it was released in 1927 until the director's death 32 years later.

DeMille's marriage in 1902 to Constance Adams, an actress, lasted 57 years. They had one daughter, Cecilia Hoyt (Mrs. Joseph Harper), and they adopted three other children — Katherine Lester (who married Anthony Quinn), John Blount and Richard DeMille.

In 1954 DeMille offered to give half the purchase price to save his ancestral home. A news release from the National Trust for Historic Preservation told the result:

"Failure of the citizens of Washington to raise half the purchase price to save the

What Next Inside Cuba?

By PHILIP C. CLARKE

Despite Soviet denials and attempted cover-ups by the Carter Administration, it's now as plain as the red star on a MIG warplane that the Russians are up to no good in Cuba.

The discovery or the belated disclosure by U.S. intelligence that the Soviets now have a brigade of combat troops on the Communist island obviously is only the tip of the iceberg. And, while it is also obvious that some 3,000 Russian soldiers and 40 tanks pose no direct threat of attack against the U.S., their very presence in Cuba raises questions of crucial importance.

If the Soviet brigade is not going to attack the U.S., and is not there to protect Fidel Castro from invasion, what is its purpose? Lt. General Daniel Graham, former Defense Intelligence Agency director, offers this suggestion based on past experience: "The only other time we detected a Soviet brigade in Cuba," says Graham, "was during the Cuban missile crisis of 1962. It soon became painfully clear that those Russian troops were there to guard the Soviet nuclear missiles that were being shipped into Cuba by Nikita Khrushchev."

"We must now ask ourselves whether this latest Soviet combat force has been introduced to again provide security for some new kind of secret Russian military installation."

Graham rejects speculation that the Soviets might have deployed in Cuba a high-intensity "beam" weapon or a similar type of exotic device directed at U.S. targets. But he does not discount the possibility that the Soviets have erected a highly sensitive military installation that could pose a threat to U.S. security. According to reliable U.S. intelligence sources, the Russians already are greatly expanding their naval facilities at the Cuban port of Cienfuegos in apparent preparation for the visit of larger and more modern Soviet warships and submarines.

The addition of a combat brigade to the 6,000 to 8,000 Soviet military training personnel already in Cuba is seen as a continuing across the board buildup of Russia's presence. This buildup now includes a squadron or more of Soviet MIG-23's capable of delivering tactical nuclear weapons at targets in the eastern one-third of the U.S.

Recent intelligence reports say these supersonic fighter-bombers are being augmented by even later model MIG-27s. There is no accurate estimate of how many Soviet pilots are now in Cuba, but it is known that some of them are flying routine patrol missions for the Cuban air force.

The question must be asked, what's next? Will the remainder of Central America succumb to Soviet-armed and Cuban-trained guerrillas as in Nicaragua?

Will the Soviets continue escalating their military buildup in Cuba with still more troops and weapons? And, if so, will the time come when we are again threatened again by Soviet bases in Cuba as we were in 1962?

In 1962, President Kennedy, though waiting until the Soviet missiles were literally aimed down our throats, did finally demand their withdrawal. Terms of the U.S. Soviet agreement ending that crisis are still secret, although efforts are-and

Strength For Today

SEASON OF JOY

Joy and harmony go together; sorrow and disharmony also go together. We raise our eyes to the heavens and there behold harmony in the movement of the spheres. We look through a microscope and behold there a similar harmony in the smallest particles of the universe. Grief is something which comes about through men's imperfections and sins.

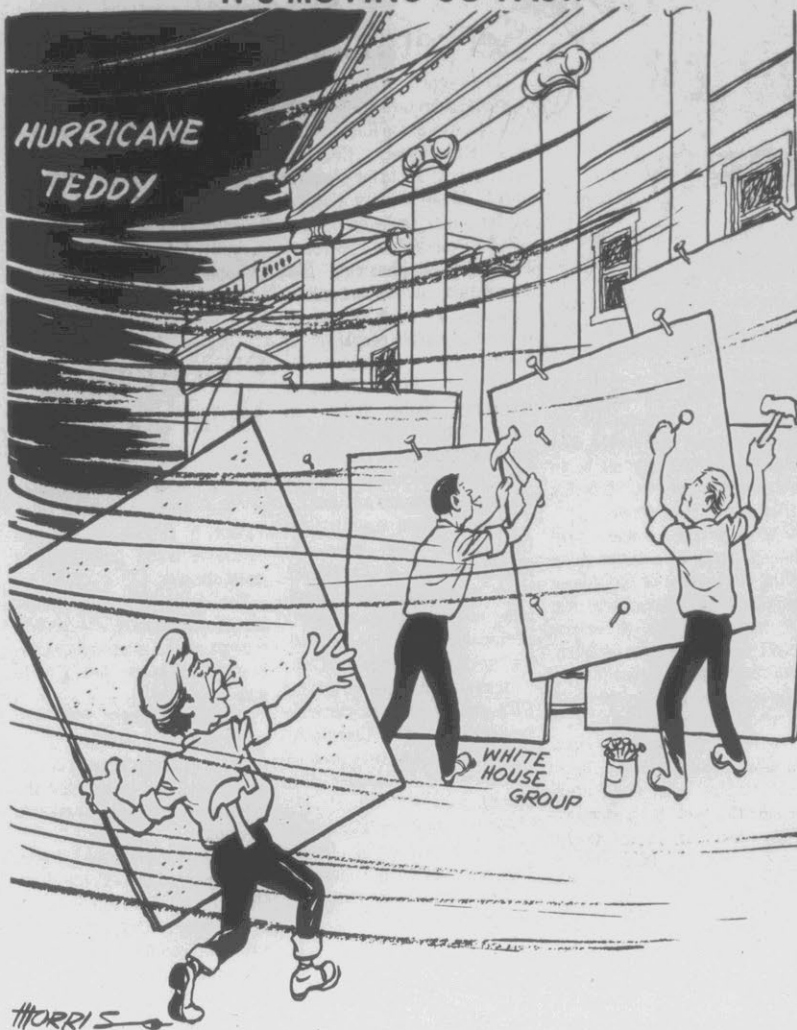

Therefore it is not surprising that the Bible pictures heaven as a place of joy. It would be utterly impossible for anything else but joy to reign in a realm where righteousness and harmony prevail.

Many people believe that joy is the result of having possessions or of dominating people or events. But actually joy has no relation to these things, and we can have it without possessions or position. All we need to do is to harmonize ourselves with God and His creation, and then joy will descend upon us as an inevitable result.

IT'S MOVING SO FAST!

Papal Armed Guard

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — An elite anti-terrorist unit carrying submachine guns will escort Pope John Paul II everywhere on his three-day visit to Ireland starting Saturday, and they will be backed by 12,000 troops and policemen in Ireland's biggest security operation since its founding 58 years ago.

The special "flying squad" of Special Branch agents, beefed up by army marksmen, will fly in three helicopters that will flank John Paul's special craft as he flies around the country on the first papal visit ever to this Roman Catholic nation, police sources said.

"Security will be so tight that even the president will have to carry a special identification card with his photo to get near the Pope," one informant said. "So will government ministers and the bishops. We're taking absolutely no chances at all on this."

The sources said this includes countering possible terrorist attacks by skindivers from the River Liffey as the papal motorcade passes over Dublin's O'Connell Bridge.

Police Superintendent Peter McGing told reporters the nationwide operation is "the biggest of its kind" since the Irish Republic was founded in 1921.

He said even the hundreds of invalids in wheelchairs who will be given special places close to the pope on his stops will have to carry official accreditation and will be searched before they get near the pontiff.

All army and police leave will be canceled from tonight until the pope leaves Shannon airport next Monday for Boston aboard a jumbo jet for a five-day tour of the United States.

Officials said the security plan, which will cost $3.2 million dollars, will involve 7,000 police officers and 5,000 troops

40 Years Ago Today

Sept. 27, 1939

The city street and sanitary departments are preparing to move into their new quarters on Third Street. The transfer will be made as soon as the curb and gutter of the driveway are completed.

It had been planned to start work on the curb and gutter today, but the weather interfered. Hopefully, work will resume in the new quarters within a week.

The yard will not have a gasoline tank for the present time. The ones that was purchased were so large that they would have had to be placed below the water level.

The one bought has been sold and another probably will be purchased at a later date. E.G. Lynch, street department superintendent, will have offices at the new headquarters where a garage, etc., also will be maintained.

To the editor:

The south part of San Francisco bay is dead. It only took a week and a half to kill it. Many of us will cry out in anguish. Even more of us will just sigh and say "It's one more on a growing list. What is next? It's too much for us to handle." Indeed — it is too much for us to handle individually. But even now, collectively, is it already too late?

The State of Michigan, the most heavily polluted state in the United States has flatly stated that there is no way it can take on the financial burden of cleaning up their mess. The overwhelming problem of pollution is not just confined to "other" parts of the country. It is here — around us, surrounding us and choking the life out of us all. The list is endless. It's not just a list of just dirty air either, and that in itself is a major problem. Besides the air, it's a list of dead bays, dead lakes, oily seas, a dying bayou, radiation contaminated water spilling into major rivers (the same water that finds its way onto our supper tables) chemicals bubbling up into basements and playrooms of families.

Cancer now strikes one out of three people. It is not a mystery disease anymore. It is the chemicals that we eat and drink and breathe; chemicals that were never meant for the human or animal body to deal with, much less the plant life that supports us. Why do technocrats insist on extolling such a high price? What will happen to a society that publishes front page headlines about politics and prints the searing news of a dying planet on the back page or sometimes leaves it out all together?

What exactly is it that is worth the very earth we walk on?

presidency, or even an Openly Avowed Candidate, his staggering lead in the polls over Jimmy Carter will fade; second, that Mr. Kennedy, the flaming Liberal, will soon be heard making the harrumphing noises of Mr. Kennedy, the born-again Conservative. It will be the most remarkable conversion since Saul of Tarsus set out for Damascus.

Both predictions seem to me sound, but my concern at the moment is for the second proposition. Until the past couple of weeks, Mr. Kennedy has basked in the soft morning mists of the Camelot tradition — his name, his family, his charisma, his magnetic attraction, all of the above. In this gentle light, the senator's record on the issues has been obscured. Once he gets out in the noonday sun, it will be a vastly different matter.

Several years ago, in advance of the 1976 presidential campaign, Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) performed a useful service. The ADA worked up a 10-year study of a dozen Democrats in Congress who might be presidential candidates. Among them was Mr. Kennedy.

The study embraced 202 roll-call votes in the Senate between 1965 and 1974. From these data the ADA computed "Liberal Quotients" for each of the prospects. The quotients represented the percentage of votes cast in support of liberal policies as defined by the ADA.

How fared Mr. Kennedy? He missed 10 of the 202 votes. On the remaining 192, over the 10-year period, he voted "wrong" in the ADA's view only six times. He wound up with an overall Liberal Quotient of 97, the most liberal Liberal of them all. Such certified big spenders and bleeding hearts as Muskie, McGovern, Humphrey, Bayh and Church trailed in the Kennedy wake.

On 60 issues in the area of foreign and military affairs, Mr. Kennedy's Liberal Quotient was 95. He was for every spending proposal in foreign economic aid and against every proposal for foreign military aid. He voted to delay the anti-ballistic missile, to reduce funds for bombers, to cut funds for the Trident submarine.

On 14 issues having to do with consumer and environmental questions, the senator rang up a lovely 100. He was for no-fault auto in-

Youngstown Found 'Stability'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — One impact of the loss of 4,100 jobs when Youngstown Sheet & Tube closed its Campbell works two years ago is that there is greater stability in the entire Mahoning Valley, said Frank Lesaganich.

An unexpected statement, you might think, for the director, District 26, United Steelworkers of America, AFL-CIO. Lesaganich cannot forget the personal tragedies but, weighing his thoughts, he says:

"What happened in the meantime, taking the minus and the plus, we're heavy on the plus side. I'm happy with what I see other industries doing in the valley. There's been a hell of a lot of stabilizing."

What ensued, in the view of Lesaganich, elected 11 years ago from the mill that closed, is that cooperation, including that between labor and management, has helped bring more jobs to the Youngstown area.

"We communicate better," he said of relations with management. "We don't always agree, but we talk. They know our problems and I think we understand theirs better than before. We're adversaries, not enemies."

Hardship helped bring them closer, and unemployment is lower now than then. The jobless rate in Youngstown-Warren, 11.4 percent in 1975, fell to 10.1 percent in 1976, to 8.1 percent in 1977 and to 7.5 last year.

Monthly rates for the first half of 1979 were consistently lower than in 1978, but layoffs because of recession-induced inventory adjustments are expected to interrupt that trend, with an August rate of around 8.

While these numbers are above national averages, officials here boast of household buying income being higher than in Cleveland or Pittsburgh.

The future also looks less grim than was first thought. The Mahoning Valley Economic Development Corp. cites a survey in which two-thirds of 136 valley manufacturers said they would expand within five years.

While some officials insist the negative effects of the Campbell works closing were overstated, the scare did provoke action, particularly in compelling segments to work and plan together.

The development corporation, formed this year, coordinates the goals of communities within the two-county area. Board seats are held by business and labor, and by public officials and community leaders.

Professionals were hired. Executive director Ken Fry, an urban planner wise to Washington's ways, directs long-range development strategy. Associate director Laird Eckman, a former Chamber of Commerce official, concentrates on attracting new businesses and keeping old ones.

"Youngstown was caught off guard because no response mechanism was set up," says Mayor G. Phillip Richley, an engineer who was campaigning when the Campbell works announcement came.

Based on his experience, he advises leaders of other industrial communities to "try to get the leaders to recognize the symptoms of decay in the economy, in industry, before the decay takes place."

Ex-Recruiters Sue Officers

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Two former Army recruiters have filed charges accusing three senior officers of dereliction of duty, conduct unbecoming an officer and conspiracy in connection with Army recruiting practices.

The two were among several Army sergeants relieved of duty recently as the result of an Army investigation into recruiting practices. Both are charged with offenses that could lead to courts-martial.

Sgt. Lillie B. Clay of Winston-Salem and Marshall B. Jackson of Charlotte swore out the complaints before an Air Force officer and mailed them Wednesday to Maj. Gen. William L. Mundie, commanding general of the Army Recruiting Command at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Mark Waple, a Fayetteville attorney who said he represents 23 recruiters in the Southeast, said the two filed the complaints because they doubted the Army would take any action against the officers.

The group held a news conference Wednesday to announce the action.

Waple said the complaints name Brig. Gen. F. Cecil Adams, former deputy commanding general for recruiting in the East and now of Fort Bragg; Col. Benjamin Beasley and Col. Thomas McBride, both of Atlanta, of conspiracy, dereliction of duty and conduct unbecoming an officer.

Beasley is commander of the Army's East recruiting region and McBride is deputy commander of the region.

Waple said the charges were made under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The code should be made to declassify those secrets. It is clear, however, that Khrushchev agreed not to reintroduce "offensive" strategic weapons into Cuba, albeit in return for our dismantling of U.S. missiles in Turkey and Italy and our promise to prevent anti-Castro freedom fighters from trying any new "Bay of Pigs" invasion of Cuba.

By contrast, the present Administration in Washington has expressed only "concern" to the Soviets while reassuring Americans that the Soviet brigade in Cuba is "nothing to worry about". However, a growing number of Senators, sensing the public's alarm and anxious to avoid appearing "soft on the Soviets" during next year's election campaign, have called for the rejection of the SALT-II arms pact with Russia unless it withdraws its forces from Cuba.

Indeed, some members of Congress are demanding to know how the Administration can be so confident of monitoring Soviet compliance with SALT-II when for months or even years our intelligence services failed to detect the full extent of Russia's military buildup in Cuba, only 90 miles away. Among other questions congress should ask is why the Carter Administration cancelled the regular U-2 reconnaissance flights over Cuba. Obviously the substitution of high altitude satellite photography has proved less than satisfactory.

Certainly, as the Monroe Doctrine and the Inter-American Defense Treaty of 1947 are tossed aside, the Soviets will be tempted into new acts of aggression and adventurism whenever and wherever they feel they can get away with them. The crucial question now is: How long will Washington continue to give in to Russia's penetration of the hemisphere without drawing the line?

— nearly all the Irish Republic's security forces.

Officials said the huge open air masses the Pope will celebrate, including one in Dublin's Phoenix Park Saturday before an expected 1 million Catholics are "a security nightmare."

They said plainclothesmen will mingle with the crowds and random searches will be made among the estimated 2 million persons who will attend the string of services.

The massive security plan was launched amid fears that Protestant terrorists from Northern Ireland will launch attacks to avenge the Aug. 27 assassination in the Republic of Earl Mountbatten, a cousin of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, by Irish Republican Army guerrillas.

The mainly Catholic IRA is fighting to end British rule in the north and reunite the Protestant-dominated province with the overwhelmingly Catholic republic.

No Regrets On Gasohol Switch

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Last week, Marie Moore stopped selling premium gasoline and switched to gasohol at her service station just south of the North Carolina-South Carolina border. It was a move she has not regretted.

"Sales have been wonderful," Mrs. Moore said. "People try it and come back. They come in and say their engines are running better and they're getting better gas mileage."

Gasohol, a mixture of 90 percent unleaded gasoline and 10 percent corn-based alcohol, has proven a success in South Carolina, where 85 stations are now selling the fuel. The same cannot be said for North Carolina.

Only 20 stations in North Carolina sell gasohol, with a station in Raleigh being the first to pump it on May 17.

Hank Finch, a Fayetteville distributor and a believer in gasohol, said if he has to choose between his faith in the fuel and making a profit, gasohol may lose out.

"The price of alcohol is so high that without a state tax exemption, you can't sell gasohol at a competitive price and make a sufficient profit," Finch said.

"We lose money every time we sell a gallon of gasohol, and you can't continue that for an extended period. That would be a stupid business decision."

North Carolina presently levies a 9 cents-per-gallon tax on gasohol and gasoline, while South Carolina levies a 10-cent tax on gasoline and a 6-cent tax on gasohol.

surance, for a Consumer Protection Agency, against nuclear testing, for a more powerful Federal Trade Commission.

The ADA study examined 26 votes on the economy and tax reform. Mr. Kennedy's Liberal Quotient in this area was 92. He voted, in effect, to abolish state right-to-work laws, to accelerate increases in the minimum wage, to prohibit sub-minimum wages for youngsters and to provide food stamps for strikers.

The senator scored 100 on social services, civil rights, civil liberties and miscellaneous issues. He voted for rent subsidies, gun control, open housing and racial quotas for hiring. Seen through the rose-tinted glasses of the ADA, his record was practically perfect.

The pattern of 1965-74 has continued without significant change in the 95th and 96th Congresses. Now and then Mr. Kennedy draws a mildly conservative breath — he is tough on crime, though he opposes the death penalty for such offenses as treason and kidnapping, and he has promoted deregulation in the name of competition — but these lapses are few.

On 19 key votes last year, the senator hit 19 for 19 with the ADA. On 30 key votes tabulated by the opposing American Conservative Union, not surprisingly, he scored a lousy 3. Mr. Kennedy is for national health insurance, high welfare payments and racial balance busing. He is against exempting small employers from the harassments of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration; he is against lifting Rhodesian sanctions. And so on, ad infinitum.

This is the Kennedy record. Maybe it will take him to the White House, but a still, small voice says: Maybe it won't.

"We're selling gasohol at the same price as unleaded, and I don't say we're making any money at it," Cason said. "We're in a promotions stage. We're going to run it all the way out to the end and see if it will work."

Cason said a state tax exemption would help gasohol

Confrontation Over Schools' Use Of North Carolina Funds

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Differences over legislation providing money for high school athletic trainers has sparked a confrontation between a state representative and the Department of Public Instruction.

State Rep. David Diamond, D-Pilot Mountain, told department officials Wednesday they were "grossly neglecting their duties" by proposing regulations that prevent the money from being used as salary supplements to sports trainers.

Department officials want the money used only to train teachers in sports medicine. They contend providing money as direct salary supplements would violate a long-standing practice of equal state pay to teachers, regardless of their after-school duties.

Diamond, however, said the salary supplements were intended by the Legislature. And he threatened to return to the General Assembly for help if the regulations are not changed.

"You either go by the original intent of the legislation, or somebody, namely me, will rewrite, or try to rewrite, the legislation to close the loopholes," Diamond said in a hearing on the regulations. "Or, somebody will take your money away from it."

The bill was passed by the General Assembly this year, providing $50,000 to promote a sports-medicine program and another $10,000 for training this year. It provides $75,000 for the program and $20,000 for the training next year.

Diamond, who is football coach at East Surry High School, said the Legislature intended to have the larger amounts used to pay $500 salary supplements to teachers who serve as trainers in 100 of the state's public high schools this year. The program is to expand to include all 338 high schools with football teams by 1984.

But the department maintains that the legislation does not require what Diamond, its sponsor, says it does.

"We do not think the intent was for it to be a salary supplement for teachers," said department spokesman Tom I. Davis. "We don't interpret it that way."

"It sets a precedent. If we're going to pay supplements to teachers who work beyond the call, what about the teacher that helps with the school play, or the student newspaper?" he added.

Regulations tentatively adopted by the state Board of Education call for the money to be used only to reimburse trainers for expenses in taking courses on first aid, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and sports medicine. They would leave it up to local school systems to pay trainers if they want to.

"It is the philosophy of the agency not to provide salaries for that kind of activity," said Al Proctor, director of the department's division of sports medicine. "We've just never done it before. It opens the barn door."

The legislation itself is unclear, saying the $50,000 is to be allocated with not more than $500 going to any school "as supplemental funds to provide sports medicine and paramedical emergency life services as approved by the state Board of Education."

The department's regulations are subject to a final vote at the board's November meeting.

Someday?

NEW YORK (AP) — A leading proponent of nuclear energy admitted today he believes that "that someday, somewhere" a nuclear disaster will occur.

But Bill Lee, president of Duke Power Co. added, "If it does happen I would expect the consequences will be lower than we feel they would be."

Lee, interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America" program, was responding to a prediction by U.S. Deputy Secretary of Energy John O'Leary that "sooner or later a major disaster will occur at a nuclear generating facility."

Lee, a member of the nuclear industry's national Oversight Committee, defended nuclear energy by maintaining that since the Three Mile Island mishap last April, utilities have taken several voluntary measures to decrease the risk involved in power plants.

Senator Charges Dirty Trick By State Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department tried "to pull a dirty trick" by spreading a story last week that the behavior of two aides to Sen. Jesse Helms prompted complaints by the British government, Helms said Wednesday.

Helms aide John E. Carbaugh Jr. was accused of urging former Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith not to yield in negotiations on a new Zimbabwe Rhodesia constitution. In an interview Wednesday, Helms, R-N.C., said he agreed with a Wall Street Journal editorial Monday that concluded the State Department leaked the story about a British protest because it wanted to sabotage an amendment passed by the Senate that would lift economic sanctions against Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

"Since Sen. Helms was one of its principal backers, embarrassing him on the Rhodesia issue is one way to lobby against the amendment," the editorial said.

The amendment must still be considered by the House members of a House-Senate conference committee.

Helms said the State Department was "trying to pull a dirty trick and got caught in the act."

The British government later denied that it had protested his aides' involvement in the London talks, Helms said.

Helms made a statement on the Senate floor last Thursday, the day reports of the incident were first published, in which he said he had spoken by telephone to Richard Luce, the British undersecretary for foreign affairs.

Luce said the British Foreign Office was "not aware of any protest or complaint that had been made" by Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Helms said.

A State Department official said Wednesday, "It was not a formal complaint in the sense that they did not write something on a note and hand it to our embassy. An official of the British Foreign Office discussed with an American Embassy official on Sept. 19 the situation in the Rhodesia conference."

A spokesman for the British Embassy in Washington, asked whether the British had informally protested Helms' aides' activities, responded, "To our knowledge, no."

Four Permits For Soliciting

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced the approval of four requests for solicitation permits.

Wyatt said the requests were submitted by: the Veterans of Foreign Wars and Ladies Auxiliary for permission to conduct the annual poppy sale on Oct. 12 and 13; Temple Free Will Baptist Church for permission to conduct a door-to-door solicitation from Sept. 24 to Oct. 20;

The Salvation Army to place Christmas Kettles at Carolina East Mall, Evans Mall, Roses, King's and K-Mart from Nov. 23 until Dec. 24 to raise funds; and by the Whitehead Fund for permission to conduct a yard sale and bake sale in order to raise funds for a needy family on Sept. 29.

TVA Wastes No Time After Tellico Dam's Okay

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority wasted no time in starting on the final touches needed to close the gates of the Tellico Dam and create a 16,000-acre lake in East Tennessee.

Within hours after President Carter signed a law exempting the controversial dam from laws delaying its completion the past three years, bulldozers were on the site moving earth.

The courts had blocked completion of the dam because it threatened the only known natural habitat of the snail darter, a three-inch minnow protected by the Endangered Species Act until Carter exempted the project.

"Tellico has been an open wound festering in TVA for the past 10 years," one official said Wednesday. "It's still going to take some time to heal but it finally looks like we're going to get it behind us."

The massive land-use project was first proposed in 1936 and was funded by Congress in 1942 only to be dropped months later because the money was needed for World War II.

Tellico was taken off the shelf in the early 1960s with the purpose of converting rich but unused farmland in three impoverished counties into job-producing, shoreline industrial sites with barge terminals and all of the other required tools of commerce.

TVA Chairman S. David Freeman said Tellico got caught in the middle of rapidly changing values. By the time the dam was completed, industrial development no longer was looked upon as a cure-all and farmland became something to be preserved.

"I think the long, tortuous debate on Tellico is over," Freeman said Wednesday. "The lake will be filled. TVA will move swiftly to carry out the will of Congress as expressed in the bill signed by the President."

Dam opponents who won court orders in January 1977 forbidding TVA from closing the project's gates vowed Wednesday to continue their fight but acknowledged they had little firepower left. Their last weapon, the snail darter, a rare fish discovered in 1973, was disarmed with the President's signature Tuesday night. Freeman said, however, TVA will work to save the snail darter.

"We've been too right, too long," said Chattanooga lawyer Hank Hill, the original plaintiff in the snail darter case that turned Tellico from a local dispute into a national cause celebre for environmentalists. "We haven't given up at this point. But our chances look slim."

Hill made the comments in front of TVA's headquarters where nine tractors driven by former landowners displaced by the 38,000-acre project gathered Wednesday as a protest.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in 1977 that the dam, though 95 percent completed, could not be closed to impound a lake because the 1973 Endangered Species Act protected the snail darter and its river home.

The Supreme agreed in June 1978 and said if Congress wanted the dam, it would have to specifically exempt Tellico from the law. Congress did just that, the House in June and the Senate on Sept. 10.

George Kimmons, TVA's engineering chief, said Wednesday the work needed to close the dam's gates can be finished in four weeks. Freeman said the lake will be filled to its capacity before next summer.

A 1,000-foot canal joining Tellico Lake with Ft. Loudoun Lake still has to be completed. While some bulldozers worked on it Wednesday, others were clearing a path to the dam's foot so that a crane can be erected to begin removing three years of accumulated debris.

Kimmons said $1.4 million in unspent funds earmarked for Tellico in TVA's 1979 budget is enough to close the gates but another $13 million to $15 million will be required to complete the project.

Officials said, however, as much as $30 million more might be needed if an additional spillway capacity has to be built to meet new government safety standards implemented after the Teton Dam collapse.

Saudis Won't Cut Oil Flow

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia says it won't cut oil production for the rest of 1979, a move the Carter administration says will permit full restoration of oil inventories and help stabilize oil prices.

"I hope no one will take this news as a signal to relax the effort that each citizen must make to ease our demand on a limited world supply of oil," President Carter said Wednesday after the Saudi announcement.

The Saudi action will "relieve concern about the adequacy of oil supplies this winter," the White House press office said in a statement.

Saudi Arabia, which provides 20 percent of U.S. oil imports, said it would continue to pump out 9.5 million barrels of crude oil a day, 1 million barrels above its "official" production ceiling. A barrel contains 42 gallons.

The largest member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries boosted production above the ceiling in July, to compensate in part for tight world oil supplies caused by Iranian production curtail-ments since the overthrow of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

According to a report from Jidda by the government press agency, Crown Prince Fahd said, "Saudi Arabia will extend the period of increased production by three more months to help stabilize the petroleum situation and allow the consumers to stock up for the winter."

"We hope the consumer states will take this opportunity to reduce consumption and put an end to waste," he said, adding the Saudi decision to keep output high was due in part to concerns for the world's economic health.

The Saudi move means "there will be less pressure on prices than there otherwise would have been" in December, when OPEC oil ministers meet in Venezuela, said analyst Gary Ross of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation.

Avers Firm Accountable

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A company that operated a federal job-training program for Buncombe County in 1975 should be held accountable for $143,700 of misappropriated money, a Buncombe County commissioner has said.

J.W. Oglesby made the statement at a commission meeting last week.

He said the program, which was paid for with federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds and was operated by Western Carolina Industries, "was very good."

But, he said, "I contend we have a misappropriation of funds ... The county should not be held accountable."

Oglesby said Harry Clarke, president of the company, the company itself and Dan Grindstaff, who directed the CETA program, should be held accountable for the money.

State auditors also have questioned the spending of $143,700 of a $500,000 state grant used for the program.

Clarke said auditors told him no money was missing and the only problem was that the company did not have a contract with the county to operate the program.

Bit Off End Of Wife's Nose

NEW YORK (AP) — A part-time sociology instructor has pleaded guilty to biting off the end of his estranged wife's nose during a heated quarrel over custody of their two small daughters.

Supreme Court Justice Irving Aronin said Wednesday he intended to sentence the man, Marco Mason, 36, to two months in prison and the remainder of a five-year term on probation.

A divorce suit is pending between Mason and his wife, Katherine. The fleshy part of Mrs. Mason's nose was sewn back on in an eight-hour operation, and only a small scar is visible.

$600,000 RANSOM

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (AP) — After 82 days in captivity, kidnappers have freed the 15-year-old daughter of a Milan industrialist who paid a $600,000 ransom to obtain the release of the girl and her mother. The mother had been freed earlier on payment of part of the ransom.

Carter Disclaims Any 'Reference'

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In his own hand, President Carter has told Sen. Edward M. Kennedy he meant no reference to Chappaquiddick when he said he himself could handle a crisis without panic.

Edward M. Kennedy says he appreciates the gesture.
But the fencing goes on.
Kennedy, appearing at a $1,000-a-plate party fund-raising dinner hours after a presidential aide delivered Carter's note Wednesday, said he "was glad to get it."

Kennedy said he did not consider the note an apology.
Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said the note was an "explanation" following what the president called "grossly exaggerated" press accounts of the remark, made Tuesday night at a "town meeting" in New York City.

A participant at the meeting had mentioned Kennedy and then asked Carter how he intended to "inspire" voters. Carter replied:

"We've had some crises where it required a steady hand, a careful and deliberate decision to be made. I don't think I panicked."

Kennedy, at a reception before the dinner, said he considers presidential leadership a legitimate issue and intends to make it, not Chappaquiddick, one of the major issues of the campaign — if he runs.

"Were I to be a candidate," Kennedy said, "I'd be talking about the issues which are most in the minds of the American people and I think that's also what he'd want."

In the past, the White House has said that if Kennedy challenges Carter, the president would not make an issue of Kennedy's reaction to the crisis conditions when the senator drove a car off a bridge at Chappaquiddick, Mass., in 1969, resulting in the death of Mary Jo Kopechne.

Carter followed Kennedy's appearance at a poolside reception with a dinner speech laced with appeals for party unity.

Carter said the party had carried the country through a depression, two world wars and a commitment to help the poor in the 1960s "united."

"Now we must face the challenge of 1980 as a united Democratic Party," he said. "With selfish divisions among ourselves, our voice is fractured and cannot be clearly heard."
As for his leadership, the

Wood Fuel Risk To The Mountain Air

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The state's relatively pure mountain air could be threatened if the use of wood as fuel, especially for home heating, increases, according to a report by an energy consulting firm.

Integrated Energy Systems has calculated that small wood stoves used in home heating emit up to twice the carbon monoxide per energy unit of fuel as do gasoline-driven automobiles.

The report predicted that during the next decade, enough homes will convert to wood-stove heat to raise carbon monoxide emissions in Burke County alone from 871 tons a year to 13,000 tons.

The report was prepared for the Center for Improvement of Mountain Living at Western Carolina University, which is investigating the environmental and economic impact of increased wood-energy use. The research is supported by the state Division of Energy.

According to an energy division official, the greatest use of wood for home heating occurs in 21 western counties.

Robert L. Powell, chief of the division's technical section, took issue Wednesday with the basis for the firm's prediction that wood use in the region could be expected to increase from 1 million tons a year to 5 million tons a year by 1990.

He said the division's calculations show the cost of converting existing systems to wood would limit the increase to 2 million tons a year.

The report also says increased use of wood fuel in industry and commerce would add to the pollution load, but not as dramatically. Businesses could afford, and perhaps would be required, to use anti-pollution devices, said Werner R. Martin, the firm's environmental engineer.

POWER RELIANCE

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea will rely heavily on nuclear and coal-fired generators under a plan to boost the nation's electricity capacity from 7.23 million kilowatts to 30 million kilowatts by 1991, the Ministry of Energy and Resources said today.

FALL FISHING — Fishing piers along North Carolina's coast are reporting record catches of spot, as well as mullet, flounder and mackerel. Yesterday's Cryptoquip — DESPISED BIG-WIG WANTED TO BE TOP BANANA.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Break-In Charge

Three persons have been charged by Pitt deputies with breaking, entering and larceny at a Rt. 2, Ayden home.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that deputies arrested Robert Lee Harris, 21, Rt. 2, Box 96, Ayden, Greg Scott Davis, 20, 1509 W. 12th Street, Greenville, and Cynthia Elaine Sheppard, 19, of Rt. 2, Box 616, Grifton, and charged them with breaking into the home of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Holden.

Sheriff Tyson said that his office received a call regarding the break-in at 9:58 p.m. Tuesday. Mrs. Kathy Holden told deputies that she arrived home and saw someone fleeing from the house.

The sheriff said that the intruders allegedly loaded property valued at $2,500 from the Holden residence into a station wagon and fled. Mrs. Holden told deputies she went to a neighbor's house after the incident and called the Sheriff's Department.

Taken in the break-in were a color television set, black and white television set, speakers, turntables, and a reel-to-reel tape recorder. All of the items except the color television and two speakers were recovered, he said.

Mrs. Holden was able to get the license number of the fleeing vehicle, the sheriff reported. The Holden home is located some two miles east of Ayden.

Bond for each person charged was set at $2,000 with first appearance hearings set for Sept. 27 in District Court here.

Recall Unprecedented Visit 34 Years Ago Today

THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AGO — Gen. Douglas MacArthur poses with Emperor Hirohito during Hirohito's visit to the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo on Sept. 27, 1945. Hirohito broke all precedents when he visited the American general. (AP Laser-photo)

By KAY TATEISHI
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — On Sept. 27, 1945, the procession of four old-fashioned black Daimlers left the moat-surrounded Imperial Palace and headed for the U.S. Embassy. On the one-mile trip across bomb-scarred Tokyo, it had no official escort and it obeyed the traffic signals.

Several days earlier, the Japanese Foreign Office had sounded out newly installed U.S. occupation authorities on the prospects for a meeting between Emperor Hirohito and Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The answer came back affirmative. But the Japanese leader, traditionally regarded as a deity, would have to break all precedent and go to see the general.

Nearly three weeks had passed since the occupation began in this prostrate country. Sixteen days earlier, MacArthur's headquarters had ordered the arrest of 39 Japanese wartime leaders as war criminals — including former Prime Minister Hideki Tojo, who had bungled a suicide attempt.

Where the emperor was concerned, MacArthur had a different strategy.

On one hand, he intended to reduce Hirohito to an ordinary mortal in Japanese eyes. On the other — and against the advice of some aides — he was determined to treat the emperor with respect.

To do otherwise, MacArthur reasoned, would unnecessarily offend the already beaten Japa-

Considering A Challenge

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A lawyer says he hopes to put together a coalition of environmentalists, blue-collar workers and teachers in a possible challenge of Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C.

William Pfefferkorn, 42, said he is seriously thinking about challenging Morgan in the 1980 Democratic primary for the Senate seat.

"That's a group I think realizes that they have been pretty well unrepresented in the Senate," Pfefferkorn said of the possible coalition.

Pfefferkorn has been active in labor law, recently representing Teamsters Local 391 in its attempts to organize Winston-Salem city employees.

Pfefferkorn said it may be several weeks before he makes a definite decision about running.

"I think a lot of people are very unhappy with the kind of representation we've been getting in the Senate. I've been talking to a lot of people about running, and there's been a very strong, unanimous response so far," he said.

Pfefferkorn was an unsuccessful candidate for mayor in Winston-Salem in 1977, his only bid for political office.

Morgan hasn't announced his plans yet, but it is believed he is almost certain to run again.

Pfefferkorn mentioned as possible issues in the campaign Morgan's difficulty in recommending a judge for the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and what he termed Morgan's anti-labor and anti-teacher image.

Both the state AFL-CIO and the North Carolina Association of Educators have been critical of Morgan's performance.

nese and risk casting Hirohito as a martyr.

"I shall wait and in time the emperor will voluntarily come to see me," MacArthur had predicted. "In this case, the patience of the East rather than the haste of the West will best serve our purpose."

Hirohito, dressed in a cut-away coat and striped pants, with wing collar, button shoes and top hat, arrived at the Embassy at 10:15 a.m. Immediately he was ushered to the second floor, accompanied by his grand chamberlain, Hisanori Fujita; his personal physician, Koji Murayama; and an interpreter, Katsuzo Okumura.

Gen. Bonner Fellers, an aide to MacArthur, took pity on the nervous monarch. Smiling, he extended his hand and said, "Welcome, Sir."

Hirohito found MacArthur dressed in a rumpled khaki uniform, tieless and without decorations or campaign ribbons.

The general immediately sought to put his visitor at ease by recalling that he had met Hirohito's father, Emperor Taisho, after the Russo-Japanese war. Then all but the interpreter and Hirohito were excused.

Seated before an open fire, MacArthur offered Hirohito an American cigarette. Hirohito's hands trembled slightly as MacArthur lit it.

The 38-minute discussion was a secret, but reports leaked out that Hirohito had thanked MacArthur for occupying Japan peacefully, and the general replied that it was wholly due to the emperor's cooperation.

Japanese sources said MacArthur at no time addressed Hirohito as "Your Majesty," but spoke to the interpreter, saying, "Tell the emperor..."

According to MacArthur's memoirs, "Reminiscences," Hirohito said he had not come to plead innocence of war crimes, but to "offer myself to the judgment of the powers you represent as the one to bear sole responsibility for every political and military decision made and action taken by my people in the conduct of war."

MacArthur was surprised by the show of courage, saying later that "I was moved...to the very marrow of my bones." He noted that Hirohito was "an emperor by birth, but in that instant I knew I faced the first gentleman of Japan in his own right."

Reporters had learned about the meeting but were barred except for a U.S. Army photographer. A report on the meeting was held up by Japanese officials for two days and then only a brief announcement appeared.

The photograph did not appear with it. Japanese Home Office officials, still in charge of censorship, called it insulting and lacking in etiquette where the emperor was concerned.

At Domei, the official news agency which still was operating, a photo editor rushed to my desk, appealing for help in getting the photo made public.

We went to MacArthur's press section, where Col. Donald Hoover fumed over the Home Office action. "Who is censoring whom?" he demanded. Then he called the Home Office and had the order revoked.

The photo appeared on Sept. 30, three days later. It stunned the Japanese. Some thought it was a fake: a towering MacArthur, was in summer uniform, hands hooked casually into his hip pockets; next to him was the tiny, fragile-looking Hirohito in his slightly ridiculous formal attire.

The next day, the Home Ministry was disbanded and control over the Japanese press passed formally to the U.S. military.

Hirohito and MacArthur met 11 times and became warm friends. When MacArthur left Japan in April 1951, many Japanese wept.

Almost three decades later, the durable Hirohito posed with another American — Gerald Ford, the first U.S. president to visit Japan while in office. The emperor, this time neat and crisp in his western suit, inspected the honor guard with the American president. Ford was dressed in formal wear. His striped trousers were too short and his socks were showing.

Special Attention To Unauthorized Parking

ECU News Bureau

Motor vehicles not properly registered and authorized to park in designated areas on campus are to be the target of special attention by East Carolina University's traffic and security officers because of increasing parking problems.

As many as 60 to 70 unregistered vehicles are being ticketed daily, according to Joseph H. Calder, director of Security and Traffic. Most of these vehicles are student owned or operated, Calder said.

Calder issued a reminder to students, faculty and staff that all vehicles authorized to park in designated areas on campus must be registered with the Traffic and Security Office. If violations continue, he said, regulations providing for towing of offending vehicles will be enforced more stringently.

ECU campus regulations require the towing of vehicles on which more than three unpaid parking tickets have accumulated. "In excess of three unpaid tickets, the towing policy will be enforced," Calder said.

At the same time, Calder and the other ECU officials urged cooperation and strict compliance with campus parking rules. Officials said towing of vehicles would be resorted to as an extreme measure and done only on recommendation of appropriate campus authorities.

However, further deterrent action may be taken, according to Dr. Elmer E. Meyer, Jr., Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

"It may be that we will have no choice but to turn over to the associate dean for student life the names of those students who fail to comply with the university's regulations, for judicial action," Meyer said. Also, non-compliers with the unpaid parking tickets and a repeated history of violations may not be allowed to re-register.

ECU Traffic and Security officers said "critical" parking problems are occurring in the classroom areas of the main campus, particularly around Brewster Building, the Nursing Home Economics buildings, and Speight, Austin and Rawl buildings. Calder said there will be special attention given to these areas to discourage unauthorized and illegal parking.

Calder said that a scarcity of parking space occurs on the main campus each year, but that improvements in the situation are planned. Until the situation is alleviated, however, cooperation and compliance by students, faculty and staff is requested.

A new parking lot is now available between Fourth and Fifth Streets on Reade Street and students and staff are urged to make use of it, especially now that lots around Mendenhall Student Center are being constructed, Calder said.

Fords Buying New Home Site

DENVER (AP) — Residents of the exclusive Beaver Creek resort near Vail have a new neighbor — former President Gerald Ford.

An aide said Wednesday that the Fords had agreed to buy a one-acre lot for a home in the $300 million development. Ford, an avid ski enthusiast, already owns a condominium at Vail.

Bob Barrett, Ford's executive assistant told Denver Post that the former chief executive agreed to the deal at a price of "no more than $300,000." However, he said the family does not plan to start building on the property for at least a year.

Port Taxes Are Claimed

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — Brunswick County officials are trying to claim $19,000 in back taxes they believe the State Ports Authority owes on a Bolivia marina.

Debate centers on the state-owned Southport Marina, leased to William M. Arnold Jr. of Sanford since 1976.

State officials contend the marina is public property and according to state law, such property is exempt from taxation.

County officials counter that the marina lost its tax-exempt status when it was leased to someone for a commercial enterprise.

Brunswick Tax Supervisor Paul L. Crump said Arnold has made a profit on the marina since he leased it in 1976 for $14,000 a year.

"I know of no precedent, anywhere, for taxing state property," said William M.A. Greene, executive director of the SPA. "It's a most unusual assessment of taxes."

Crump said the marina's lease states that the state will pay any ad valorem taxes due. Arnold would be liable for taxes on improvements made to the property, he said.

The $19,000 tax bill includes nearly $4,000 in penalties for failing to list the property.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Clear, warm weather is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for most of the nation. Cooler weather is expected for the western Great Lakes. Small areas of showers are predicted for the Southwest, Southeast and upper Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The gray skies and damp weather which have lingered over North Carolina for most of this week are expected to stay for a few more days, with more heavy rains forecast for the mountains.

High pressure still influences the state's weather, as a system persists to the north, causing a northeasterly flow of moist air from the Atlantic Ocean. This has been responsible for the clouds and occasional light rain and drizzle in the state since last Sunday. Unsettled weather is expected to continue for the next several days, but the high should move east over the Atlantic. But in its place a wave of low pressure will sweep into the Carolinas from northern Florida. This will increase chances of rain, especially in the western sections. The rains could be heavy at times in the mountains late today and tonight.

With the passage of the low pressure wave on Friday, winds should turn to a more southerly direction. Daytime temperatures are expected to increase Friday and Saturday and some sun will filter through variably cloudy skies. But the air will also be very humid, keeping the threat of showers over North Carolina into the weekend.

Overnight, more rain moved into the western sections from the south and is expected to continue through today.

Wet weather will hinder outdoor activities today and Friday. Expect periods of rain with heaviest amounts most likely in western parts of the state. Highs today will range from around 70 in the mountains to near 80 along the coast. On Friday, temperatures will warm up slightly, with an increase in humidity also expected.

Karen Quinlan Center Started

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The Karen Ann Quinlan Center of Hope, a facility for the terminally ill, is a fitting tribute to the comatose young woman, her mother says.

"You must always have hope," Julia Quinlan said Wednesday.

The center is being established as a hospice-type program in Sussex County. Mrs. Quinlan said she and her husband, Joseph, have often discussed the idea for such a center since April 1975, when Karen lapsed into a coma after taking a combination of drugs and alcohol.

The first $50,000 "seed money" for the facility comes from the proceeds of a book and a made-for-television movie. "In the Matter of Karen Ann Quinlan," said Mrs. Quinlan. Specific plans and programs will be announced at the center during a Friday news conference.

Karen, now 25, remains in a coma at a Morristown nursing home after her parents won a state Supreme Court decision in November 1975 to take her off life-support systems.

Planning Zoning...

and Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of ECU, had asked him to state that they felt it would be in the best interest of all if the land remained zoned for medical arts usage.

Planning Director Bobby Roberson acknowledged that rezoning the county property had opened the door for more requests. Roberson said that the property is in a transitional stage and he urged the board members to table the matter so that talks could take place with the medical school and the Moyes.

Mayor Percy Cox questioned what the board would gain in tabling the matter, saying that the feelings of the medical school were known regarding the matter.

Roberson noted that the effort to develop the medical community zoning took several years and he said he did not feel comfortable with any action on the matter without researching what has taken place in other towns.

Commissioner Wes Hanks said that the decisions on the county property and last night's request had "serious implications." He said that the commissioners should consider tabling the item before a decision was made that could be irrevocable. Hanks' motion to table the item for 30 days did not gain a second.

Board member Sis East asserted that it was unfortunate that there was "no meeting of the minds" prior to the session last night. She said, however, that the community had to have faith in the developers and confidence in the Moye family not to put something on the property that would deter from the area.

The Moye tract is located between the medical school and the old hospital property now owned by the county. Moye Boulevard was formerly known as Nursing Home Road.

In voting on William Gibbs' motion to recommend the request to the Council as submitted, commissioners East and William Mitchum concurred and Hanks offered a dissenting vote.

In other business on a long agenda, the board voted to withdraw a request initiated by the Planning Commission to study the feasibility of rezoning property at 2701-2705 S. Memorial Drive from R-6 (residential) to Office and Institutional.

John Fasciano of 2705 S. Memorial Drive voiced his objections last night to having his property rezoned and said that he has never indicated a desire to change his property's zoning designation.

Planner Skip Browder explained that one of the property owners in the 2700 block had expressed a desire to have land rezoned to Office and Institutional and the property owner said he would go along with the desires of the neighborhood.

Roberson explained that a petition had been received for rezoning a tract in the neighborhood to Highway Commercial and in lieu of having a strip zone, it was recommended that Office and Institutional be considered as a buffer to the residential property. Office and Institutional was offered as an alternative to Highway Commercial. In view of the objections, however, Roberson said that the staff would not seek the rezoning.

Mrs. East said that the point to consider was that the residents were not interested in rezoning and she noted that a fine line existed between "what is feasible and what is practical."

Other action included: — Adoption of a recommendation to the Council that the request by J. T. Williams for rezoning 24,500 square feet on the south side of Tenth Street between Cedar Lane and Greenville Boulevard from Highway Commercial to Shopping Center be approved.

— Tabling for 30 days consideration of a change in the name of Railroad Street from Howell Street northward to 14th Street to the proposed name of Beatty Street or Beatty Drive.

— Acceptance of the preliminary and final plats of Section III of Sharon Subdivision, located on the south side of Howell Street between Perkins and Skinner Streets.

— Acceptance of the revised preliminary and revised final plats of John's Court Subdivision, located on the west side of McClellan Street some 800 feet south of Howell Street.

— Acceptance of the revised preliminary and final plats of Section II of Bryton Hill Subdivision, located between River Bluff Drive and Rivergate Shopping Center; and — Acceptance of the preliminary plat and also the sedimentation and erosion control plans of Baytree Subdivision, located south of R-6 Banks Road and W. 14th Street Extension.

The Joint City-County Planning Commission voted to accept the final plat of Section V of Camelot Subdivision, located in Camelot north of State Road 1725, on the condition that lots shown on the preliminary plat as designated for recreational development be available. The Recreation Department can exercise options to purchase the designated lots.

Boyd Lee, director of the city's Recreation and Parks Department, indicated in a letter to Roberson that the subdivision was one of several reviewed by the Recreation and Parks Commission and it was agreed that no recreation area would be requested of the developer.

Mrs. East pointed out that the Recreation Commission does not have the funds to purchase the recreational tracts. She said that it was not a case of the Recreation Commission not wanting recreational land in the subdivisions, but a matter of funding.

A spokesman for the developers of Camelot said that the lots are available for recreational designation but no options have been exercised by the city.

Cox said that some arrangements needed to be made for developers to provide some neighborhood parks. He suggested that the final plats for the subdivision section could be approved subject to the lots that appeared in the preliminary plats as recreational areas being made available.

Approval was given to the final plat of S & S Mobile Home Park, located on the Belvoir Highway in the vicinity of State Road 1440. City Engineer Ron Sewell said that the recreational area provided by the developer met and exceeded the requirements of the city ordinance.

Lee indicated concern by the recreation board "that some open space be provided" in the mobile home park. Lee noted that the developer has set aside a recreational area "but it is not easily accessible to all the residents nor is it large enough for much activity."

Mitchum offered a motion that a study be initiated of recreational areas in mobile home parks from the standpoint of total family units rather than recreational requirements based on square footage.

Commissioners approved the final plat of the Lewis W. Evans Subdivision, located on the proposed Arlington Boulevard south of Courtney Square.

Action was tabled on a request by J. Bryant Kittrell III and others for rezoning 15.16 acres at the northwest intersection of State Road 1203 and Stantonsburg Highway from RA-20 to Highway Commercial.

Commissioners also tabled action on a request by BCF-JKMW for rezoning 34 acres north of NC 43 across from the medical school from Flood Plain to R-6.

Prior to the regular business session last night, three student interns who worked with the planning sec-

Detroit Teachers End Walkout

By BARRY HANSON
Associated Press Writer

The nation's largest teacher strike this year is over as classes open today for 189,000 pupils in Detroit. But negotiations seeking to end the nation's longest strike in a suburb of New Orleans reached an impasse.

In San Francisco, classes were conducted Wednesday in kindergarten through the eighth grades despite a 16-day strike by 1,400 teachers. About 75 percent of the students enrolled showed up for classes.

Walkouts ended in Michigan, Illinois and Spokane, Wash., but there were still about 18,000 teachers on strike in 10 states. The strikes affected some 292,000 pupils.

The 3-week-old Spokane dispute was apparently settled early today when negotiators reached a tentative contract agreement. Leona Dater, spokeswoman for Spokane Education Association, said 1,400 teachers would vote on the new pact later today. Neither side released details of the contract.

Classes began Monday, but attendance has averaged only 50 percent.

The 12,000-member Detroit Federation of Teachers voted Wednesday to end their 17-day walkout pending ratification of a proposed three-year settlement.

Union president Mary Ellen Riordan told the crowd of teachers at Olympia Stadium that the proposed contract was "the best contract that will be available to us."

Detroit officials opened classes Sept. 5, but closed the district's 303 schools two days later when teachers rejected a tentative pact by a 612-vote margin.

In the Jefferson Parish district in suburban New Orleans, a negotiator for 2,000 striking teachers said early today the union had rejected what the board said was its final offer.

Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards spent 13 hours during two days shuttling between the two camps trying to find a proposal acceptable to both.

The teachers rejected an offer calling for a 10 percent pay raise this year and a 5.4

Psychologist Helps To Track Down Criminals

By DAVID HURLBERT

PHOENIX (UPI) — As escaped killers Gary Tison and Randy Greenawalt spread terror throughout Arizona during a crime spree a year ago, law officers turned to Bernard Barber for help in tracking them down.

For Barber, it was just another task in his work as a police psychologist, a field he helped pioneer.

"During the time they were loose we were called in to use hypnosis on two witnesses," Barber said as he recalled his work on the Tison case. "It was a way to make sure we had our information down and to see if the witnesses could remember additional information."

"We also did some profiles ... on what we could anticipate about their activities. We got as much material as we could and tried to draw up some kind of profile. In fact, we suggested that they probably would return to the area they were familiar with and that's exactly where we caught them."

The pursuit of Tison, Greenawalt and Tison's three sons, who aided them in their escape from the Arizona State Prison, ended in a gun battle not far from the prison. But before the end came, the gang — believed to have been responsible for up to six killings — had traveled as far away as Colorado during their 11-day crime spree.

Work on such criminal cases is just one facet of Barber's job as a psychologist for the state Department of Public Safety. His probable title, Barber said, would be a "clinical social police criminal psychologist."

His work, financed by federal matching funds, deals with such wide-ranging matters as hostage situations, marital counseling, evaluations of new recruits, job stress, research and consultations with local law enforcement agencies.

Barber's methods are as varied as the problems he deals with. At times he will help a patient through self-hypnosis and in other cases he will use a biofeedback program. Or, he will work with patients to achieve "enhancement of communication patterns within their families."

Stress is one of the problem Barber deals with most, but the cause of that stress surprisingly is not the danger involved in police work. It is caused by shift changes, he said. The No. 2 reason for stress, he said, is "society's expectation of the policeman to be above mortal."

"He's not allowed the digressions that most persons would be allowed," he said.

Education at the University of Southern California and the University of Stockholm in Sweden, Barber first touched on police psychology work in 1954 when he worked briefly with the Los Angeles County sheriff's department as a rehabilitation officer.

When he accepted his present job two years ago, Arizona was only the second state to have a statewide psychologist, with Washington being the first. Some of Barber's clients are DPS employees referred by their superiors because of departmental violations that may require discipline. In those cases, Barber makes reports to the proper DPS authorities. In all other cases, however, the clients receive the same "privilege and confidential" rights that would be accorded a patient seeing a private psychologist.

Why Buy A Second Oven? Because It Will Become Your First

WHAT CAN A MAXIM CONVECTION OVEN DO FOR YOU?

IT WILL SAVE YOU TIME

Maxim cooks your meals through a hot-air-in-motion system that professional chefs and bakers discovered some time ago. The same foods will be thoroughly cooked (without microwaves) in 1/4 less time (and at a lower temperature) than those prepared in an ordinary oven.

IT WILL CONSERVE YOUR ENERGY

Now consider, if you cook at a lower temperature for less time, it stands to reason your utility costs will be lower, as well. And that's a big consideration today.

IT WILL KEEP YOUR KITCHEN COOLER

The total heat given off is less than half that of an ordinary oven. Not matter if you bake, broil, roast or slow cook.

IT WILL COOK FOODS UNIFORMLY

Maxim works like a rotisserie in reverse—turns the heat and not the meat. A silent fan causes the heat to surround the food, cooking it from all sides at once. The result—a perfect roast...a delicious loaf of bread.

IT WILL SEAL IN NATURAL JUICES

A nutritionalist's dream. And a meat connoisseur's answer. Vitamins are preserved and flavor enhanced because the convection oven doesn't dry foods as it cooks them. Bake, broil, roast or slow-cook and get fantastic results consistently.

Quality Leaf Demand Strong

FARMVILLE — Demand on the Farmville Tobacco Market yesterday was strong only for quality grades of tobacco, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

Several sheets of leaf grades sold for $1.72 to $1.83 a pound and were company purchases. Quality of tobacco as a whole was better, but drops in prices were responsible for a decline in average. Stabilization receipts were approximately the same as those of the previous day. The market sold 684,275 pounds for $965,612, for an average of $141.11. To date, it has sold 22,157,844 pounds for $31,640,434 for a season average of $142.80.

Plan Test 'Nuclear Plant Accident'

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Preparing for a nuclear plant accident they hope will never occur, the state and Tennessee Valley Authority have agreed to simulate one at TVA's Sequoyah facility.

Gov. Lamar Alexander and TVA board Chairman S. David Freeman said staff members at the plant will trigger a crisis of their choosing to test the ability of the state, TVA and federal government to react. They said neither state nor TVA officials will be told in advance when the "crisis" will occur.

They made the announcement Wednesday to wind up an afternoon guided tour at the two-reactor nuclear plant. Freeman, TVA director Bob Clement and other agency officials joined Alexander, Lt. Gov. John Wilder and other state officials in viewing a reactor building, Sequoyah's control room and a $20 million facility where TVA trains its nuclear plant operators.

Freeman and Alexander told reporters in a crowded conference room the "drill" is needed to determine how well state and federal governments can work together if a nuclear crisis hits.

"We don't know what kind of accident the staff is going to come up with," Freeman said. "The real test is how we react to it."

The governor said the state won't actually evacuate residents from their homes in the drill, but will send National Guardsmen to knock on doors and bring helicopters and school buses into the area. He said current state plans call for evacuating within a three-mile radius of the plant, less than 20 miles north of Chattanooga, in an emergency. Freeman said federal officials will also be notified in the drill.

Alexander, who met with the TVA board in July to discuss nuclear safety, said he wants to be assured the state has a reliable emergency evacuation plan ready.

Sequoyah plant superintendent Jere M. Ballentine toured the state and TVA officials, followed by reporters, around the plant and fielded their questions.

One stop was in the reactor building that will house Unit 1, planned to be the first put into operation. The visitors stood on a refueling floor and looked down nearly 100 feet where the reactor vessel will operate under water, to shield workers above from radiation.

Ballentine explained nuclear fuel rod assemblies will be lowered from the dock into the reactor. He told the governor that spent fuel will be stored underwater in a pool at the plant. "It's like a great big swimming pool," he said.

TVA is awaiting Nuclear Regulatory Commission approval of an operating license for Sequoyah's Unit 1 reactor. The license is required before TVA can begin loading fuel into the unit, which it hopes to start by mid-November if approval is given. Allowing an estimated six weeks for testing, it will probably be early next year before TVA begins operation at full generating capacity. TVA plans to seek licensing for the second reactor next year.

The government utility serves 2.7 million customers in seven states. It is making the nation's largest commitment to nuclear power by building six nuclear generating plants and operating one, Browns Ferry in northern Alabama.

Delays due to revised and more stringent NRC regulations and late arrivals of construction equipment have pushed Sequoyah years behind schedule. TVA began construction in 1969 and hoped to have the plant operating in 1973.

Freeman said Wednesday that, in response to one of the governor's suggestions at the July meeting, TVA has put in writing with nuclear experts at Oak Ridge the emergency cooperation they can expect. Experts from the East Tennessee city, a nucleus of atomic expertise, went to Three Mile Island to help monitor conditions after the March 28 accident.

Alexander said lack of communications between state and federal officials at Three Mile Island was a major hitch.

Freeman presented Alexander with a $16.7 million check to pay TVA's last in a series of monthly payments in lieu of taxes for fiscal 1979. TVA, the largest taxpayer in Tennessee, made total fiscal 1979 payments to the state of $62.49 million.

TVA sends the money to several states under a formula contained in the 1933 TVA Act and said this year's payments totaled $100 million.

City Counts 3 Accidents

An estimated $7,875 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from an 8:35 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Airport Road, involving trucks driven by John Wiley Dunn of 2907 Rose St., and Leroy Limehouse of Summerville, S.C., investigators reported.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $5,000 to the truck driven by Dunn, and $1,000 to the other vehicle.

Cars driven by Michael Joseph Sharkshnas of Ayden and Deborah Roebuck of 2602 Jackson Dr., collided about 8:20 a.m. on Tenth Street, 150 feet West of the Brownlea Drive intersection, causing an estimated $550 damage to the Sharkshnas car and $500 damage to the Roebuck auto.

Officers said the third collision occurred about 4:57 p.m. at the intersection of Tenth and Evans Streets and involved cars driven by Ronald Richard Bunzey of 1120 Hooker Rd., and Leo Smith of 418 Tyson St.

Police, who charged Bunzey with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $25 to the Bunzey car and $800 to the Smith vehicle.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, resisting pressure from rising gold prices and a falling dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up 1.11 to 887.46 at noon.

But declining issues led advances by a slight margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The dollar fell sharply in foreign exchange trading while gold rose. Analysts said traders were worried that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would take some action against the dollar at the cartel's meeting in Vienna.

There were also mixed feelings about the prospects for the Hibernia 0-15 oil well in Newfoundland. On Wednesday, the market, led by oil issues, rose sharply when the well's operator, Chevron Standard, said it had found additional oil there. But some analysts said it was too early to tell how important the find was.

Mobil Corp. led the noon most-active list, up 3/4 to 52 1/4. The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .08 to 62.65 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .44 to 226.97.

Big Board volume was 14.82 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 16.76 million in the same period Wednesday.

Copper-producing issues were up strongly as copper prices zoomed over $1 a pound. Kennecott Copper rose 1/4 to 30.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, resisting pressure from rising gold prices and a falling dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up 1.11 to 887.46 at noon.

But declining issues led advances by a slight margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The dollar fell sharply in foreign exchange trading while gold rose. Analysts said traders were worried that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would take some action against the dollar at the cartel's meeting in Vienna.

There were also mixed feelings about the prospects for the Hibernia 0-15 oil well in Newfoundland. On Wednesday, the market, led by oil issues, rose sharply when the well's operator, Chevron Standard, said it had found additional oil there. But some analysts said it was too early to tell how important the find was.

Mobil Corp. led the noon most-active list, up 3/4 to 52 1/4. The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .08 to 62.65 at noon. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .44 to 226.97.

Big Board volume was 14.82 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 16.76 million in the same period Wednesday.

Copper-producing issues were up strongly as copper prices zoomed over $1 a pound. Kennecott Copper rose 1/4 to 30.

Test Blast For Nuclear Device

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A weapons-related nuclear device with a yield equivalent between 20,000 and 150,000 tons of high explosive was exploded deep beneath the Nevada desert, authorities said.

The explosion, the 13th announced test this year, went off at 8 a.m. PDT Wednesday at Pahute Mesa on the Nevada Test Site 115 miles northwest of here, said Department of Energy spokesman Dave Jackson.

Anti-Nuke Protestors Plan Depart For S.C.

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — A Virginia group of anti-nuclear protesters was to leave for Aiken, S.C., today after spending the night in a campground near here.

The group is hauling an eight-foot simulated spent fuel cask along Interstate 95, the route along which Transnuclear Inc. ships nuclear waste from Portsmouth, Va., to its Savannah River plant. The group hopes to ban nuclear shipments from the Virginia port.

The Southeastern-Virginia Sunshine Alliance Committee on Nuclear Waste Transportation arrived in Rocky Mount an hour behind schedule Wednesday after being detained by police in Portsmouth.

Group spokesman Mike Adams said the protesters were detained for unnecessary license and registration checks. Police said they were only carrying out a routine field investigation.

When the protesters reached Rocky Mount, police escorted them out of the city limits because they did not have a demonstration permit. Once outside the city, they held a rally, but drew only 10 or 15 newsmen.

"We want to emphasize to areas along this route that they should try to pass ordinances to protect themselves from these shipments," said protestor Merrily Johnstone.

Bridges Wants His Deputy Successor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Auditor Henry L. Bridges has considered resigning if Gov. Jim Hunt would appoint his deputy, John Buchan, to replace him, a Raleigh newspaper reported in its Thursday editions.

Bridges approached Hunt aides with the question during the summer.

"We don't want any part of that," an administration source told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "It would have the effect of involving us in that race, and we've already got plenty to say grace over without getting into that."

Bridges could not be reached for comment Wednesday. Buchan did confirm that Bridges had approached Hunt aides about the matter in June.

"I know he talked to John A. (Williams) and Joe Pell," Buchan said. Williams is Hunt's executive assistant and Pell is the governor's patronage chief.

Bridges, 72, is expected to retire next year instead of seeking re-election. Sen. Edward Renfrow, D-Smithfield, has announced he is a candidate for auditor in the Democratic primary.

If Bridges would resign and let Buchan take the job, he would give his deputy the advantage and exposure of an incumbent, two important elements in a low-profile race such as state auditor.

Buchan said the matter was dropped as far as he was concerned. "I don't know what happened," he said. "But later, we decided it just wouldn't work. You know the auditor is supposed to be independent, and he wouldn't want to be obligated."

He said he didn't know if he would run for the office if Bridges retires. "I probably wouldn't, but I really don't know," he said.

$17.5 Million Budget Offered

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The General Board of the Baptist State Convention has recommended a $17.5 million budget for next year that includes more than $1 million for Wake Forest University.

The budget recommendation will be considered at the convention's annual meeting Nov. 12 in Winston-Salem.

The budget, which earmarks $1,057,479 for Wake Forest, will be the last to include funds for the school. In the past the school has received money from the Baptist Cooperative Program, which pools contributions from the state's Baptist churches and allocates funds according to a budget adopted by the convention.

Under a new plan, each church has the option of sending 6.04 percent of its contribution to the cooperative program to Wake Forest.

Disability Pay For Neurosis

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — A laboratory employee who contended he developed anxiety neurosis from working 30 years with radioactive materials is entitled to disability pay, the New Mexico Supreme Court has ruled.

The ruling Wednesday reversed an appeals court decision that said Ramon J. Martinez, an employee at Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory, was not entitled to benefits under state law.

Chief Justice Dan Sosa Jr. said the Supreme Court determined in earlier decisions that anxiety neurosis can be a work-connected disease, compensable under the state Workmen's Compensation Act.

Employment Up In Urban Areas

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Unemployment dropped in all major North Carolina urban areas between July and August, but figures remained higher than a year ago.

The Employment Security Commission reported the statistics Wednesday. The ESC said jobless rates dropped by larger margins in the state's smaller and rural counties in August.

Of a total labor force of 1,272,400, there were 1,217,840 persons employed. The number of unemployed in the state's seven metropolitan statistical areas fell from 65,860 in July to 54,560 in August.

Rose, Knights Open Division I Play

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

While most football coaches would have their attention more

Quarterback Kenny Barnes

on their next opponent. Rose High School's Dave Bumgarner might be excused if he keeps at least a part of his attention elsewhere. Where else? On the weather. The Rampants have played only three games this year so far, and two of them have been rained out and rescheduled for Monday nights.

This Friday, the Rampants are scheduled to open their Division I schedule against Northern Nash at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, but if the weather makes much of a treat, the problem of cancellation by Ficklen's owner, East Carolina University, may become the biggest foe of the Rampants.

"My first analysis is that Monday night is not the time to play high school football," Bumgarner said. "It's not good for the youngsters to get all ready to play on Friday night, then get cancelled and have to lay around for two days over the weekend. The State allows only brief Saturday workouts, and none at all on Sunday, so a good deal of the edge is lost."

Bumgarner said. "And it's not just us. I think it hurts both teams. So you've got to know that I'm going to be praying for the sun to do a lot of shining on Thursday and Friday," he added.

Bumgarner felt that having to wait to play on Monday night against Raleigh's Enloe High School was one of the factors in the game that made it as close as it was, 26-6.

"We had too many penalties. Several of them were big ones. We had two roughing the kicker penalties, one for pass interference and one for clipping. That's 60 yards right there. Three of those kept Enloe drives alive and the other hurt us. Without so many penalties, I think we could have won it by a much handier score."

Bumgarner praised the play of Kenny Wilson at running back in the game, and added that Kenny Barnes did a fine job in directing the team at quarterback. "Wallace Brown and Jerry Daniels, along with Don Johnson, blocked well in the line, and Tyrone Tucker did a good job of getting open, then running with the ball on the long pass." That was a 70-yarder that set up the first Rose score of the second half.

"On defense, (Curtis) Spell has to stand out after having five tackles behind the line of scrimmage. He's done an excellent job in coming in to fill in for Don McGlohon, and is going to make it tough for Don to regain his position when he gets back." Bumgarner also had praise for Willie Short and Ron Butler on defense, but noted that Butler sat out most of the second half after an injury.

As far as the injury situation is concerned, McGlohon, recovering from a shoulder injury, is the only one likely to miss the Friday night game. Butler, on the sidelines for practice, is expected to be ready to play by Friday night.

Northern Nash brings in a team with a record just the opposite of Rose's 2-1 mark. They lost to Southern Nash, 15-14, in their opener, downed Vance by 13-6, then were bombed by Tarboro, 26-0.

"They are at least a couple of touchdowns better than Enloe," Bumgarner said. "They have a good quarterback who likes to run the ball a lot. They also have good running backs who carry the ball well. They have a pretty good defense, too. Although Tarboro was able to run up the score on them, they got all of it in the second half."

And while the Knights might appear to be one of the weaker teams on the schedule, Bumgarner isn't looking at them lightly.

"This is our first conference game. To win this one is very important, because it gets you off on the right foot in the conference. And with Rocky Mount next, we can't afford to be lax in looking at Northern. We have to win as many as we can to have a chance at the playoffs, and it's not too soon to start winning."

To win, the coach feels, the Rampants must do what they did on Monday against Enloe, control the ball. "That, and our ability to run the ball on offense will be key factors. I don't know how much playing on Monday night is going to hurt us. I just hope that we'll be playing this Friday instead of next Monday."

So far the Rampant defense has been the toughest part of the Rose game. In the three contests so far, Rose has allowed only 240 yards in total offense, an average of just 80 yards a game.

They are allowing less than two yards per play. In scoring, Rose is giving up only 6.7 points a game through the first three.

Defensive play was the strong point last season, however, and it wasn't enough. This year, Bumgarner hopes that the offense can generate enough scoring to make the difference in the conference.

Lady Rams Take Two

SNOW HILL — Greene Central fought back from behind to gain a sweep in its opening volleyball match with Southwest Edgecombe yesterday.

In the first match, the Lady Rams took it in straight games, winning the first 15-1, and taking the second in straight games, winning the first 15-9, and taking the second 15-11.

Southwest Edgecombe came back to romp in the opening game of the second match, 15-1, but the Rams took the second game, 15-10, to even things up. In the third match, the Lady Cougars ran out to a 12-1 lead before the Rams stormed back behind eight straight serves by Annette Bright to take the momentum and go on to a 15-12 win.

The Rams travel to Farmville Central for a doubleheader today.

In early 1977 East Carolina's soccer program was removed from the varsity ranks and dropped to a club sport.

A few months later, following an outcry by supporters of the program, soccer was returned to its former status as a varsity sport.

Since then, ECU has begun to gradually rebuild its soccer team, attempting to grow not in one giant leap, but in small, solid steps.

"During that period there was no real recruiting done," third-year soccer coach Brad Smith recalled. "When I came in we had to begin from scratch, really."

"That first year, we looked all around on campus for anyone who wanted to play," Smith said. That year, the Pirates were 2-10. Needless to say, ECU was anxious for the future to fast become the present.

Last year, the Pirates improved some, finishing 3-11-2, including a 7-0 blitzing by powerful South Carolina.

This year, the Pirates already have won three games, while losing only two and tying one. It's the first time they have been over .500 since 1974.

Tomorrow, at 4 p.m., the Pirates take on South Carolina and have a chance to not only avenge last season's 7-0 loss, but also to give their soccer program a tremendous boost with an upset over the Gamecocks.

In only its second season, the USC soccer team has lost only one game and is ranked 8th in the south.

"Actually, when you say they're only in their second year it's a bit misleading," Smith said. "When they first had their program they put $85,000 in the budget and they used that to recruit seven players from Meramec Junior College (in Missouri), which won the junior college championship that year."

"They've got a good team, there's no doubt about that," he said. "Last year we went up there expecting to get beat and we did. This year, I think it's going to be a better game."

"We stack up with them better this year," said Smith, who played soccer at ECU for four years after being an All-State performer in New Jersey. "We're an older team this year, we're a team with more confidence."

"Right now, we believe we can beat anyone."

Phil Niekro is one guy who doesn't like to give his younger brother a beating.

He especially felt bad about it Wednesday night.

"I'm not proud of what I've done," Phil said after out-dueling his brother Joe in what amounted to a family affair.

The result was a 9-4 victory for Phil Niekro's Atlanta Braves over Houston, dampening the Astros' hopes for the National League West title.

The defeat left the Astros 2½ games behind the Cincinnati Reds, who defeated the San Diego Padres 4-3. The combination reduced Cincinnati's "magic number" for clinching the West crown to merely two games.

The triumph provided Phil with his third 20-victory season. Joe Niekro, already a 20-game winner, was visibly crushed by the defeat.

In another big game Wednesday night, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped Montreal 10-1 and took a 1½-game lead over the Expos in the NL East.

Elsewhere, the Philadelphia Phillies trimmed the St. Louis

Cardinals 11-5, the New York Mets defeated the Chicago Cubs 8-3 and the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 8-4.

Phil Niekro gave up eight hits, walked one and fanned six, moving into a tie with Sandy Koufax on baseball's all-time strikeout list with 2,396.

Reds 4, Padres 3

Dave Collins' RBI single capped a two-run rally in the eighth inning as Cincinnati defeated San Diego. Collins' single came after doubles by Ray Knight and Heity Cruz had tied the game off loser Randy Jones, 11-12. Tom Seaver, 16-6, pitched eight innings for the victory before leaving the game for a pinch hitter. Tom Hume finished for Cincinnati to earn his 17th save.

Pirates 10, Expos 1

Phil Garner and Tim Lincecum drove in three runs each and Bruce Kison scattered seven hits to lead Pittsburgh over Montreal. The victory reduced Pittsburgh's number for clinching the East to four games.

It was the last regular season meeting between the two teams. The Pirates won 11 of 18 games and they won't meet the Expos again unless the division race ends in a tie.

Kison, a clutch stretch-run pitcher in his nine-year Pirate career, raised his lifetime September record to 22-6.

Phillies 11, Cardinals 5

Philadelphia scored seven unearned runs in the third inning, including a three-run homer by Tim McCarver, en route to a home season-ending victory over St. Louis.

Pete Rose's 23-game hitting streak, longest in the majors this year, was stopped when the Phillies' star went hitless in five appearances.

Winner Steve Carlton, 17-11, worked seven innings while Silvio Martinez, 15-8, took the loss.

Mets 8, Cubs 3

Richie Hebner drove in four runs with a homer and a double to lead New York over Chicago. Hebner, who extended his hitting streak to nine games, hit his 10th homer of the season in the first inning after Donnie Moore walked Lee Mazzilli. The Mets chased Moore in the fifth with four runs, two of them on Hebner's double.

Dodgers 8, Giants 4

Run-scoring singles by Dave Lopes and Bill Russell in the fourth inning led Los Angeles over San Francisco. The Dodgers entered the fourth trailing 3-2. Then Von Joshua started the winning rally with a single and stole second. After pinch-hitter Vic Davalillo beat out an infield single, Lopes' hit produced a tie and Russell's single sent the Dodgers ahead to stay.

Dye Affirms That Bucs Played Hard Saturday

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The passage of several days and a chance to look at the game films hasn't changed Pat Dye's opinion of last Saturday night's game against Wake Forest.

"I thought we played hard in the game then, and after seeing the films, I still think we played hard," he said at his weekly press conference yesterday.

The Pirates dropped the game, 23-20, on a late field goal by the Deacons, after coming from behind twice to tie the score on the Deacs. A late 54-yard field goal try by Vern Davenport on the last play of the game fell short.

"We had the chance to win all night long, although, in hindsight, we would probably change some things. We'd probably try to be simpler and sounder," Dye said.

The Pirates were unable to get to Wake quarterback Jay Venuto, who passed for over 300 yards, hitting 28 of 33 attempts, both new Wake and Atlantic Coast Conference records.

"We weren't getting a rush on Venuto. And when we did manage to put pressure on him, he was able to get the ball off to a back coming out of the backfield and turn it into a good play. He's a very, very intelligent quarterback, and I think he'll be able to move the ball against anyone."

But, Dye pointed out, even with the great night he had, the Deacons were able to score but two touchdowns out of it.

"And one of those came on a couple of passes we shouldn't have allowed. On one of them, we missed an assignment, and on the other, well, we simply got beat. Both went for long yardage, and they hurt us."

"But even so, I think our defense played hard all night and never gave up," he said.

While saying that he felt the Pirates were still not a good defensive team, Dye added that the defense is pressing now. "I think the coaches are pressing too and we've got to stop that and quit being frustrated. We've got to be more basic, get people in the right places and hoped the effort will tell and bring us along."

"I still feel that we can be a good defensive football team, but we're not one now. We're giving up around a hundred yards more per game, we're not forcing turnovers like we did last year, and we haven't made things happen with our kicking game," Dye said.

"We can still turn it around, and I think we will."

Turning to the offense, Dye feels that the Pirates may have the best team they've ever had. "We've averaged over 377 yards a game so far, and I think we've played against three pretty good defensive teams in Western Carolina, N.C. State and Wake Forest, and we've been able to move the ball against all of them. We stopped ourselves against Duke with the three turnovers that were costly to us."

The coach said he feels that quarterback Leander Green is having an outstanding year. "The only problems he's had all year was when we were down late and it was obvious he had to pass. But when we dictate whether we run or pass, he is doing an excellent job. And we haven't had all that good field position either."

Dye also praised the blocking and running of backs Sam Harrell, Anthony Collins and Mike Hawkins, and the inside running of Theodore Sutton and Marvin Cobb.

"Our offensive line is doing a fine job, too, even though we've got two freshmen, Gary Gambrell and Oscar Tyson, playing in there (for the injured Joe Godette)."

"All of them are executing well, and I think we can get even better."

The Pirates, after three long weeks on the road, return home Saturday night to face Virginia Military Institute in a 7 p.m. game in Ficklen Stadium.

Soccer Match Is Back On

Greenville Christian Academy's home opener in soccer will be played Friday at 4 p.m. against Goldsboro Christian, it was announced yesterday afternoon.

The game had been switched to a later date earlier, but was then returned to the original date. It is the home and season opener for the Knights.

Olympics Go High

By BRIAN R. BLAND
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC will deliver 200 hours of 1984 Summer Olympics viewing at a record cost to the network of more than $1 million an hour under an agreement for the exclusive U.S. rights to cover the Games here.

In announcing the award Wednesday, the International Olympic Committee and the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee said ABC agreed to pay $225 million in cash, build an Olympics broadcast center and provide a worldwide broadcast signal.

"We believe this to be the largest single television agreement ever negotiated," the IOC and LAOOC said in a joint statement.

Industry sources had outlined the plan to The Associated Press on Monday, but formal announcement came at a Wednesday news conference held by Monique Berlioux, IOC executive director, and Peter V. Ueberroth, managing director of the LAOOC.

The IOC executive board, chaired by Lord Killanin, must approve the agreement, but that is expected Oct. 25 when the board meets in Nagoya, Japan, they said.

In 1976, ABC's telecast of the Summer Games helped propel the network from its longtime third-place spot behind CBS and NBC in prime time to a position of dominance in that area.

Shavers Won't Be Same Fighter

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes will not see the same Earnie Shavers he easily beat last year when he defends the World Boxing Council heavyweight championship Friday night, says the 35-year-old Shavers.

"When the horse gets so old, you can't teach that horse new tricks," the 29-year-old Holmes said Wednesday.

In their first fight, Holmes won a one-sided 12-round decision that earned him his title-winning shot against Ken Norton.

"I hurt him in the second round with one punch," said Shavers, who contends he was bothered by managerial problems and was not in top condition for the first fight. "If I had thrown combinations, it would have been over. This time I will. I will knock him out in five rounds."

"I don't really believe Shavers has the punching power he says he has," said Holmes, who also feels he will win inside the 15-round limit.

Rice On Verge Of Making History

By BERT ROSENTHAL

AP Sports Writer
Boston slugger Jim Rice thought that when he collected his 200th hit of the season, making him only the 17th major league player in history to accomplish that feat three times in a row, his goals for the year were over. He was wrong.

"I wanted the 200," Rice said Wednesday night after rapping a run-scoring single in the first inning, helping the Red Sox beat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-4. "I don't normally set goals, but it was the only thing left to shoot for after we were knocked out of the (American League East) race."

But Rice had a surprise waiting for him. He then was informed that he needed only one more home run to become the fifth player in the history of the majors to hit 40 home runs and have 200 hits in two consecutive years.

The last player to do it was Jimmy Foxx of the Philadelphia A's in 1932-33. The others were Babe Ruth of the New York Yankees in 1923-24, Chuck Klein of the Philadelphia Phillies in 1929-30 and Lou Gehrig of the Yankees in 1930-31.

Very exclusive company. Ruth, Gehrig and Foxx all are members of baseball's Hall of Fame and Klein is acknowledged as one of the game's outstanding hitters.

Rice has four games left to hit his 40th homer of the season and match those all-time greats. The Red Sox play home against Toronto tonight and are at Detroit over the weekend for three games.

"Now, I've got something more to shoot for," said Rice, who last year became the first American League to amass more than 400 total bases since Joe DiMaggio of the Yankees did it in 1938.

Rice, the AL's Most Valuable Player in 1978, finished the year with 406 total bases as he won the league's slugging title with a .600 percentage.

In addition to the on-field heroics by Rice and Lynn, the Red Sox made some news off the field as Manager Don Zimmer was given solid support by General Manager Hayward Sulivan, spiking persistent rumors that Zimmer would be fired.

Orioles 13, Tigers 2

"That's really something, wins No.1,000 and 1,100 in the same season," exalted Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver after the Orioles had won their 101st game of the year.

The East Division champions gave Weaver his 1,000th victory on opening day in April. They gave him No.1,100 against the Tigers with the help of homers by Eddie Murray, Benny Ayala and Doug DeCinces.

Royals 4, Angels 0

Frank White smashed a two-run homer, a triple, a double and a single while Dennis Leonard pitched a five-hitter and struck out eight as the Royals defeated California's West Division champions.

Although the game was meaningless in the standings, a sellout crowd of 40,365 was at Anaheim Stadium, increasing the Angels' home attendance to 2,523,575. The 1948 Cleveland Indians were the only other AL club to draw more than 2.5 million in a season.

Yankees 6, Indians 3

Ron Guidry earned his 12th victory in his last 13 decisions and his 18th of the season with a seven-hit, 11-strikeout performance against Cleveland.

Mariners 8, Brewers 1

Bruce Bochte knocked in five runs with his first career grand slam homer and a sacrifice fly as the Mariners capitalized on the most of their opportunities. Seattle collected only five hits, while the Brewers had 11 off Mike Parrott, who went the distance in winning his 14th game.

Rangers 5, A's 2

Texas scored all its runs in the seventh inning, the last two on Mickey Rivers' ninth homer of the season. Steve Comar limited the A's to five hits, including homers by Wayne Gross and Jeff Newman, in winning his 17th game.

White Sox 6, Twins 5

Jim Morrison walked leading off the 10th inning, stole second, moved to third on a fly ball and scored the winning run on a balk by Minnesota reliever

Mike Marshall. his 89th of the season, an Marshall's appearance was American League record.

CUBS-PHILS SLUG

CHICAGO (AP) — When the Cubs and the Phillies are swinging where the pitchers are throwing, anything can happen and often does.

On May 17, the Phils beat the Cubs, 23-22, in 10 innings, the winning run being a home run by Mike Schmidt. No major league records were set, not even the total of 45 runs in one game.

That belonged to the Cubs and Phillies of another era. Back in 1922 the Cubs slugged their way to a 26-23 victory over Philadelphia and set the major league mark of 49 runs by both teams in a game.

Stan Musial of the St. Louis Cardinals played better than 1,000 games at first base and did the same thing in the outfield, working all three positions.

Southernmost Village Offers Quiet Life

By BRUCE DUNFORD
Associated Press Writer

NAALEHU, Hawaii (AP) — This small, quiet village resting between the world's largest active volcano and the sea is marking its 20th anniversary this year as the "Southernmost Community in the U.S.A." Hawaii was admitted to the Union on Aug. 21, 1959.

Naalehu (Nah-ah-lay-who) is a picturesque oasis of green in the seemingly endless miles of jagged, black, lava-rock terrain in the southern half of Hawaii Island.

The town, with huge monkey-pod trees shading the main drag, once thrived as the community center for the some 3,000 residents of the Ka'u District. It has lost much of its vitality to Pahala, a sugar mill town 13 miles up the road.

"If you like the quiet, you'll like it here," said Zachary DeBernardi, a onetime Benedictine monk who now runs an arts and crafts training center at an abandoned sugar mill on the outskirts of town.

"This is a place where some will never want to leave and others can't wait to get out," DeBernardi said.

Roni Arlos, 15, agrees. "It's pretty quiet here and there's not much to do," she said.

"They closed down our theater," she said, adding that most of the functions for young people take place at the Ka'u High School, located in Pahala.

Jobs in the area are scarce, with the work force at the Ka'u Sugar Co. plantation fixed at about 425, mostly filled by recent immigrants from the Philippines.

Also providing jobs are macadamia nut orchard operations, a dairy and ranching.

"Not too many of the young people want jobs at the plantation, and feel they can do better by going to the city," said DeBernardi.

One resident said that of 66 classmates in the class of '49 at Ka'u high school, only six remained in the area.

Faced with strict federal and state environmental protection regulations, C. Brewer and Co. Ltd. closed its Hutchinson Mill just outside Naalehu six years ago instead of making the costly improvements.

Sugar cane grown on the lower slopes of the 13,680-foot-high Mauna Loa volcano above Naalehu is now trucked to Pahala where C. Brewer's sugar mill is located. Many workers also made the move to company homes at Pahala.

This has caused the economic focus of the Ka'u District to shift to Pahala, where there is a new high school, a new shopping center, a new hospital and a new fire station.

Reflecting this shift was the closing of the movie theater in Naalehu in 1977 at about the time cable television was finally brought to the community.

The bright light on the horizon for Naalehu may be tourism, as visitors at the newly developed luxury resorts along the Kona Coast pass through the Mamalahoa Highway en route to Kilauea volcano, which stages spectacular eruptions every few years.

One effort to attract some of that tourist trade was the resort development at nearly Punaluu. That project is only now getting back on track after having been heavily damaged by an earthquake-spawned tidal wave in 1975.

It's A Great Big Beautiful World

but . . .

...it just won't fit in a textbook.

A textbook can go just so far in providing your children with timely information about current events that are shaping their future today. So much happens every day that school textbooks would have to be updated continuously to keep up with the newspaper.

This is just one of the many reasons why THE DAILY REFLECTOR is giving students in 15 local schools the opportunity to experience and learn from the finest current events school program available, at no extra charge to the schools.

There are now more than 320 newspapers offering the Visual Education Consultant (VEC) News Program to more than 13,000 schools throughout the U.S.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR and the schools of this community are, in many ways, partners in education. We believe we have a responsibility to help educate future voters and leaders.

Students in the schools of our community are a part of THE DAILY REFLECTOR'S future audience and we recognize the need to stimulate young people to become involved with the news.

You, as parents, will be interested to know that your children will be working with the latest, most up-to-date current events materials available anywhere - THE DAILY REFLECTOR, weekly filmstrips, discussion material, background booklets and quizzes.

What this means is that students just don't hear about the news, they become involved with it. They discuss it. They analyze it. They apply it to their lives and see what effect it has on their world. They do this because the news of their community, the state, the nation and the world is presented in a way that relates to their own experience.

And you can share this program with your children. You have the opportunity to participate and even complete with your children in a study of the events which shape history. A weekly "Quiz" will be published in THE DAILY REFLECTOR throughout the year. The Quiz is a challenging family project and can serve as a bridge between the home and school, allowing students and parents to test their knowledge of current events.

In addition, there's a daily "Focus" column that challenges your knowledge of today's news and provides readers an opportunity to learn more about the newsmakers.

WE COULD TELL YOU MUCH MORE ABOUT THE DAILY REFLECTOR-VEC NEWS PROGRAM, BUT MAYBE WE SHOULD LET YOUR KIDS TELL YOU.

Piecing Together An Imposter's Past

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee investigators are trying to piece together the mysterious past of the man who called himself Dr. Jesse Adams — an acquaintance and former Navy surgeon.

The man who served as Tennessee's director of prison medical services until Sept. 21 and is charged with impersonating a doctor and practicing medicine without a license refuses to talk to investigators.

They say, however, that during the last 25 years he has done the same thing elsewhere that he is accused of doing in Tennessee.

His real name is George E. Allen and he is being held in the Metro Nashville jail in lieu of $50,000 bail on charges of impersonating a doctor and practicing medicine without a license. No arraignment date has been set.

No charges have been filed against his wife, Dorothy, who resigned her $15,600-a-year state job Monday. A Mental Health Department official said Mrs. Allen told her supervisor she did not have the Duke University degree she said she did when hired as an accountant.

State investigators say Allen's record of convictions for pretending to be someone else goes back to 1954 when he served a year in a federal prison at El Reno, Okla. for impersonating an Air Force officer. He later received five years probation in Mississippi for a false pretense charge and was sentenced to three years in Durham, N.C. in 1975 for portraying a doctor.

After being released, he and his new bride, Dorothy, moved from Durham to Jacksonville, N.C., where he operated a flying service and she worked as his bookkeeper. There he met the real Dr. Adams, who is now a retired Navy surgeon living in the remote island community of Olga, Wash.

Mrs. Adams said Wednesday in a telephone interview that she and her husband rented a house from Allen while stationed in Jacksonville and invited the Allens to dinner several times, despite rumors around the Camp Lejeune community that he had a criminal record.

"We always treated George with a lot of caution, but we never suspected anything of him," Mrs. Adams said.

She said the only thing peculiar she ever noticed about Allen was when she paid for work he performed on her husband's airplane. Sometimes Mrs. Allen wanted the checks made out to George C. Allen and other times to George E. Allen, Mrs. Adams said.

Mrs. Adams said Allen may have found enough information to portray her husband when they moved from the rented house and left some family papers behind.

Adams is 59 and authorities believe Allen is three years younger. Mrs. Adams said both are six feet tall and have blue eyes and graying hair. She said Allen is slimmer than her 200-pound husband.

While in Durham, Allen ran a bar and taught physics and chemistry temporarily at Coastal Carolina Community College. Some people who knew him say he had a masters degree in chemistry. Others say it was a doctorate in zoology. College President James Leroy Henderson said Allen was well-liked and did "a heck of a job teaching for us."

Tennessee Deputy Correction

Commissioner Robert Morford had praise for Allen. "I thought he was every bit a doctor," Morford said. "He was very considerate of the program and was also quick to take defense of his doctors."

Morford said Allen did not operate on any inmates during his 14 months on the job, but a team of doctors is going through cases he may have treated.

Some inmate patients are not taking Allen's arrest lightly. "I'm going to get me the best lawyer I can find and file me a sure enough lawsuit now," inmate Early Hamilton said. "They're not going to treat me with a phony doctor," the tuberculosis patient said.

While state officials recover from the surprise of Allen's arrest, state Inspector General John Rodgers has begun a probe to see if the use of incorrect credentials by state government employees is widespread.

As investigators check Allen's past and look at other workers' credentials, they get one laugh out of Allen's tangled story. He used his real name as a reference.

Pocahontas Hosted Official Visitor

Silver Stream Council No. 48, degree of Pocahontas assembled in the Redmen hall for a regular meeting and official visit of the Great Pocahontas of North Carolina, Louise Copeland Thursday. The hall was decorated with red and white candles and red, green and gold ribbons.

Lillian McDaniel, Pocahontas, presided with 13 visitors and 17 members present. A roll call of all charter members, with the following five present: Marion Vincent, Reppie Buck, Minnie Hines, Myrtle Corey and Fostine Briley. Each were remembered with a bow of purple and white ribbons. The council jewels were worn by all presiding chiefs. Each one present wore a name tag in shape of a hatchet.

Recognition and welcome was extended to the Great Pocahontas, Great Chiefs, Past Greats, visitors and members. The Great Pocahontas was remembered with a silk corsage and arrangement of fall flowers. Program chairman Lillie McLawhorn took Ms. Copeland on an imaginary journey around the teepee and presented her with miniature gifts. Talks were heard from the Great Pocahontas, visitors and members. Lillian McDaniel remembered all present with a miniature umbrella.

Refreshments were served after the meeting, with music by the Winterville Chargers.

The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth and centered with a large white scented candle, enclosed with a green and white magnolia candle ring.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Last week we talked about what kind of camera to buy. This week we'll continue but get into the higher-priced, more professional equipment.

It's always toughest for me to advise friends about what equipment to buy for their high-school or college-age child who has an interest in photography.

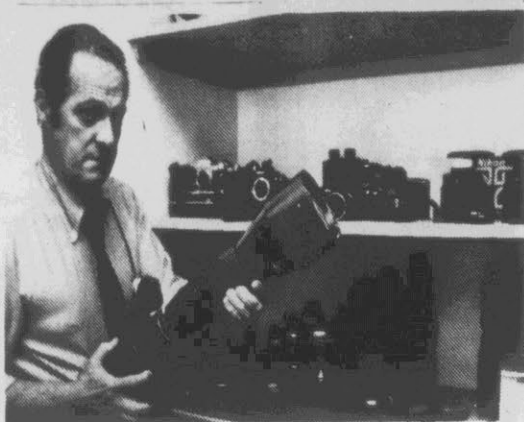

I ask them to try to determine just how serious the youngster is about making his or her living in photography.

If the answer is a mild "maybe" and the youngster is only going to shoot one, two or three rolls of film a week on the average, I'll recommend any number of mid-range cameras and off-brand lenses that cost only a fraction of the name-brand variety.

If it's a more serious "maybe," I'll recommend starting with one of the less expensive top-name cameras — something like the Nikon EM, FE or FM or Canon AE1, AT1 or AV1 and off-brand lenses that fit these cameras.

If it is a definite "yes," and the youngster wants to go pro, then I recommend starting with one of the cameras named above and slowly adding brand-name lenses. I can't recommend one over the other. The decision must be made on personal preference.

Start with the camera and one lens, usually a 50mm or 55mm macro. I would personally opt for the macro over a lens with more f stops — the HEAVY INVESTMENT: AP's director of photography Colton holding a 35mm Hulcher camera capable of taking up to 20 frames per second and a 300mm f2.8 Topcor lens modified to fit a Nikon. In the background just a few of the other cameras and lenses available on loan to AP photographers.

55mm f3.5 macro, for example, over the 50mm f1.4.

The important thing is compatibility. Build up a set of lenses that you won't have to trade in later should a newer and better camera come along.

Lenses are going to be your biggest investment. You can start out with a relatively inexpensive camera and later step up to one of the more proven models — something like the Nikon F2T or the Canon F1, that will take two or three or more rolls of film a day being run through it on the average without falling apart in a month or two.

Buy one lens at a time and familiarize yourself completely with it before you move on to the next. You should, for example, be able to focus the lens without looking through the viewfinder by knowing how much of a turn it takes to move from infinity to any given distance you need, or how to select a given f-stop, again without looking, merely by counting off the clicks from left to right or vice versa.

When you've mastered that first lens get the second. If you're into portraiture go for a medium-long telephoto like the 85mm or 100mm f2. If you prefer scenic or candid photography get a wide-angle like a 28mm or 35mm f2. These three lenses, the wide-angle, normal and medium-telephoto make up a good basic kit.

Now it gets really tough. It would be almost impossible for any of my friends to come up with the money needed for a reasonably complete professional camera kit. I know of some working professionals who have more than $100,000 invested in their photographic equipment.

Let me give you an example of just some of the things required. Each Associated Press photographer today carries close to $5,000 worth of equipment and has ready access to additional equipment worth thousands of dollars more.

A basic AP kit includes one or two motorized Nikon F2 cameras with automatic-rewind backs, nicad batteries and charger, a 24mm f2 or 28mm f2 lens, 35mm f2 lens, 50mm f1.4 or 55mm f3.5 macro, and 85mm or 105mm f2 lens, a 135mm or 180mm f2 or 2.8 lens and a 300mm f4.5 lens. It also includes at least two strobe units (one with a slave for remote operation), tripod, bag, a variety of filters, light meter and, sometimes, a third, metered, automatic camera for color work.

Each photographer also has access to a variety of additional lenses ranging from 8mm fisheye on up to a 2,000mm f11 lens, a variety of zoom lenses and large-aperture, long-focus lenses like the 300mm f2.8 which can cost more than $2,000 each.

Then there's radio-control and infra-red remote equipment, studio strobes, various special brackets for tandem work, large format cameras, high-speed cameras, panoramic cameras, underwater cameras, medium-format cameras like the 120 Hasselblads with lenses, perspective-control lenses, Polaroid backs, tripods, monopods and high hats — the list seems endless.

It is possible to rent some of the more expensive equipment or buy less expensive brands of the more sophisticated lenses like the 300mm f2.8 and have it modified to fit your camera.

Just build slowly, one step at a time. Rent when you can, consider used equipment or off-brands if necessary, modified to fit your camera.

When you come right down to the final common denominator, it's the photographer, not the equipment, that's most important.

Town Lost Its General Store

DREWSEY, Ore. (AP) — A trash fire that got out of control recently touched off a blaze that has left Drewsey's 23 residents without a general store.

With the nearest fire truck in Burns, 50 miles west, there was little hope as the flames spread quickly. Within 90 minutes, the roof collapsed and there was no hope of saving anything.

It's not the first time it's happened. In 1952, flames spread from a burning home to the original general store, destroying it. That building was constructed in 1885 with stones from nearby hills and adobe mud.

The second store was built on the same spot. And the third one will be, too.

"I want to build another one," says Sam Burt, poking his cowboy hat farther back on his head. "We're waiting for the insurance people to get done with the paperwork."

Since 1953, the 74-year-old Burt and his partner, 91-year-old Castolia "Cassie" Drinkwater, have operated their "supermarket," which also served 300 ranch families tucked among the hills along the north fork of the Malheur River.

With no store nearby, residents have begun communal shopping of sorts.

"If someone is going into Burns or Ontario, they make the rounds and see what everybody needs," explains Dee Clair. "Everybody's been real good about that."

Mrs. Clair, who along with her husband, Ken, operates the Dry Gulch Tavern and Cafe, misses the store.

"That store had a little of everything," she recalls. "The place was packed wall-to-wall. You could hardly get down the aisle."

The inventory included everything from livestock salt and feed to bolts, paint and gate hinges.

"I tried to have a store that ranchers could use — all the things they need," says Burt, who moved to Drewsey in 1934. Burt says he's never thought of moving out.

"I never had a lot of money out of it (the store), but I lived," he muses. "And that's all you need."

Burt says he's turned down two offers to sell the business since the fire.

"I won't sell," he says. "Not yet. I don't think I'm ready to quit yet."

The store is likely to be missed this fall by the many hunters who take to the surrounding sagebrush hills in search of deer, antelope and elk.

Aside from fires and hunting seasons, Drewsey remains a quiet town, a skinny survivor of richer days in the late 1800s when the population exceeded 300.

The town was originally called Gouge Eye because of supposedly vicious fights that erupted to settle disputes. The federal government told the residents to select a less colorful name if they wanted a post office.

Wild brawls are a thing of the past, Mrs. Clair says.

"Now everybody does their battling in court and they come into the tavern, share a beer and are firends," she says.

Once a month, local cowboys slip into town for a weekend to test one another's roping skills. Residents say it's not really a rodeo — just a little fun.

Mrs. Clair, the cowboys and the rest have volunteered to help Burt rebuild. For now, he's operating a necessities-only grocery shed next to his mobile home.

Church Offers Liability Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — What amounts to "clergy malpractice insurance" is being offered by the Lutheran Church in America to its pastors.

Called "professional liability insurance," it is being offered by the church to protect pastors against claims or suits "alleging actionable wrongs in the performance of pastoral counseling."

"It represents a trend of the times to have to provide for this type of insurance," says James J. Bryson, an official of the church's administration and finance office, noting that pastors potentially can be sued because of advice given troubled members.

He said he knew of none of the church's pastors being brought to court in such cases.

FLY-IN

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — More than 300 civilian aircraft owners from the southeastern states are expected to participate in a general aviation fly-in Saturday at Pope Air Force Base.

Seeing Conflict With Religion

NEW YORK (AP) — Several women speakers told the American Psychological Association's annual convention that women's liberation and organized religion are in growing conflict.

Manhattan psychotherapist Aphrodite Clamar said the "rise of the women's movement poses a direct challenge" to churches and synagogues traditionally dominated by men with women in subordinate roles.

"Women no longer are willing to be subservient...or to be satisfied with inferior status," she said. "Churches and synagogues will have to change their traditions or more and more women will walk out."

Journalist Seeks To Illustrate The 'Eventual Fruits' On PBS

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — The invention of the plow led eventually to the technology whose failure produced the 1965 power blackout of the northeastern United States.

It should not be a surprise that an invention involving money was the root of a scientific line that eventually bore the poisonous fruit of the mushroom cloud and introduced the atomic age.

It is the interdependence of seemingly unrelated inventions, developments and happenings that have brought us to where we are — and this is what journalist James Burke has tried to show in the 10-part series he created for the BBC,

Mamie Said More Alert

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mamie Eisenhower is increasingly alert after a stroke that affected her right side, but Army doctors say she is unable to move her right arm and her right leg also is impaired.

"She is more alert to her surroundings. She cannot speak clearly, but she is trying to form sentences," said a statement issued Wednesday by Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Doctors for the 82-year-old Mrs. Eisenhower said they were not yet able to tell whether damage from the stroke would be permanent. It also was not known how long she would remain at the hospital.

The widow of President Dwight D. Eisenhower was rushed to the medical center after suffering the stroke at her Gettysburg, Pa., farm Tuesday, officials said. Her first night at the facility was described as quiet and uneventful.

Mrs. Eisenhower has been bedridden for the last several months. Julie Nixon Eisenhower, who is married to Mrs. Eisenhower's grandson, David, said in a telephone interview that the former first lady has been in frail health for some time.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — Singer Olivia Newton-John gets ready to blow out the candle on her birthday cake Wednesday on the set of her TV series "Xanadu". She was surprised with the cake for her 29th birthday by members of the cast and crew. (AP Laserphoto)

Allman Band Suing Company

NEW YORK (AP) — The Allman Brothers Band has sued to stop Capricorn Records from distributing the group's "greatest hits" album, tentatively titled "Decade."

Members of the Georgia-based group charged in papers filed in Manhattan Supreme Court Wednesday that Capricorn "has defrauded (them) out of literally millions of dollars in royalties."

The album is "of poor quality" and Capricorn could not effectively promote it because the company "is on the verge of declaring bankruptcy," the band complained.

ANNUAL BARBECUE

The Clarks Neck Volunteer Fire Department will hold its second annual barbecue Saturday, Sept. 29. Plates will be $2.50 each, with a choice of barbecue or chicken. The public is invited to attend.

and which he hosts on PBS starting Sept. 30, 8-9 p.m., Eastern time (check local listings).

"I wanted to relate science and technology to people's lives," Burke said in an interview. "We live in an era in which you have to recognize that if you understand something today, it's already obsolete. Why do we live with this enormous rate of change? What are the things that cause change to happen?"

Those were questions Burke set out to answer in his series, and the results present what he calls "an alternate view of change."

The program itself has triggered change in educational establishment.

Courses by Newspaper, funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities and distributed by United Press International, has enrolled more than 300 colleges and universities in a "Connections"-based technology course now being carried in more than 400 newspapers. By reading the "Courses" material and taking college-supplied examinations, newspaper readers receive college credits.

(Courses by Newspaper has produced several previous educational series, which were also distributed by UPI, for college credit, but the "Connections" series is the first to have a TV series going along).

In addition, the series' underwriter, AT&T, is providing educational material to junior and senior high schools and colleges throughout the country.

Despite all this educational attention, the television program Burke has created and hosts is clever, he is witty, and his mind takes surprising turns. He is quick to point out in an interview that the series was created for BBC 1, the mass audience channel, as opposed to BBC 2, the less well-attended intellectual channel.

"The idea was to seduce people away from Westerns and cops and robbers," Burke said. "That's how I came to use a structure like a detective story to show how things happened."

The first show, called "The Trigger Effect," starts out with Burke holding a black box-like artifact. It's a relay switch from a power station — like the one that snapped shut in Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Nov. 9, 1965 to start the great northeast blackout that stretched from Boston to New York and environs.

Burke makes his audience realize how unthinkingly dependent we are on technology — every time we step into an elevator, for example, whose workings we understand not at all.

On the night of the blackout, as "Connections" shows, there were people stuck in elevators, 800,000 passengers trapped underground in the New York City subway system (they held a birthday party on one train). A woman was giving birth to twins at a hospital, the United Nations General Assembly was in session, and — most terrifying — an SAS airliner was preparing to land, with the help of radar and landing lights, at New York's JFK airport. Blackout!

What would you do if you were permanently deprived of the civilization that "wraps us in a warm blanket of technology?" Presuming you could get out of your city, knew how far away to go in what direction to find safety, discovered shelter and a working farm, what then?

Most farms today are run by technology, from milking machines to tractors. Could you find or build a plow — and use it? And so Burke takes us back in history to the invention of the plow and the vast changes it wrought.

Burke's eccentric and fascinating adventures into the past lead to a final installment in which he discusses the future — the point of the whole series.

"We live in world of 21st century technology and 19th century politicians," Burke contends. "People have to learn to ask the right questions. Then perhaps the politicians will be forced into sensible answers."

As Burke outlines the world's alternatives for the future, there are four avenues open.

"We could do nothing," he said. "Proceed with business as usual, on the theory that we have the best of everything, and ignore the problems. The second alternative is to go back to living off the country, taking up the simple life. The third would be to assess scientific and technological research strictly in terms of social worth and necessity and dump the rest. Finally, we could just decide we have enough inventions and just stop."

"Each course means trouble. The environmental problems mitigate against the first solution, there are too many people on earth to keep alive to return to the simple life. If we are going to choose what is necessary and what is not, who gets to do the choosing? And if we stop, how do we tell people there is no more?"

Burke fears that what we will end up with is a benevolent Big Brother society of leashed serfs — and believes the only hope lies with informed questions and intelligent use of information.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, SEPT. 28, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An opportunity for advancement in your chosen field could come your way early in the day so be on the lookout. Control your ambitious nature and be more considerate of associates.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Made practical plans for expansion in your line of endeavor, but avoid extravagance. Strive for more happiness with your mate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make plans to have greater abundance in the days ahead. Take no chances with one who has done you harm in the past.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to handle communications well today and follow your good judgment for best results. Slow down pace at work.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You need to be more thrifty if you wish to gain your aims in the future. Some of your desires can now be realized.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You have good judgment now and can easily solve difficult problems. Strive for more harmony with family members. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An influential person of your acquaintance can help you become more successful. Your hunches are accurate at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show a good friend that you are devoted and strengthen the relationship. The evening is fine for the social side of life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact higher-ups and get the support you need for any new talents you want to express. Find extra happiness with mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doing something thoughtful for your friends brings you added goodwill now. Be careful in the handling of money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be sure to follow any rules and regulations that apply to you. Influential persons can be instrumental in your getting ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Come to a better understanding with associates by showing you respect them. Don't go off on any tangents now.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your agreements with associates and be sure to keep your promises. Make plans to entertain at home this weekend.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can advance quickly because of the fine ideas and the ability to express them. Much success and prestige can come later in life. There could be a fine musician here. Much happiness in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

U.S. Tour By Moscow Symphony Is Cancelled

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A planned tour of the United States by the Moscow Symphony Orchestra "will not take place" as scheduled, Soviet official sources said today.

Soviet authorities had been reported earlier to be having second thoughts about the tour following the defection of five prominent Soviet artists in the past month. The tour was scheduled for Oct. 3 through Nov. 4.

The Soviet sources said there was some possibility that the tour would be rescheduled at a later date, but declined to be more specific. The U.S. Embassy in Moscow issued visas for the group on Tuesday.

The sources also refused to comment on the reason for the cancellation.

Diplomatic sources had expected that some Soviet cultural programs abroad would be reduced or delayed following the recent defections. But the Soviet Union, which is strongly committed to cultural exchange as a building-block of detente, is expected to continue its exchange program in some form.

The Moscow Symphony was scheduled to open in New York's Carnegie Hall next Wednesday and then travel to some two dozen cities along the East Coast and in the South, winding up the tour in early November. Thousands of tickets were sold in advance.

Columbia Artists Management, a New York-based booking agent, received a cable Tuesday saying the tour was off, company president Ronald Wilford told a reporter Wednesday.

But Wilford said a cable received Wednesday from Gorkon, the Soviet ambassador in the United States and of a husband-wife skating team in Switzerland last week.

Moscow observers say it is possible that the latest defections — although embarrassing — are still not enough to provoke the Kremlin into strong action. They note that there are probably fewer than 20 or 30 Soviet defections a year out of an annual total of about one million trips by Soviets to non-socialist countries.

"We don't want the tour to be cancelled, and we assume they don't want to either," he said at the time.

Word of the cancellations surfaced following the defections of three Bolshoi Ballet dancers in the United States and of a husband-wife skating team in Switzerland last week.

Moscow observers say it is possible that the latest defections — although embarrassing — are still not enough to pro-

Playboy Enterprises Plans Move Into Television

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hugh Hefner's Playboy Enterprises, bouncing back from hard times, is making a major move into the television business. Hefner says his corporation will supply networks and pay TV with movies, specials, a monthly magazine and possibly even children's programs.

"It seems a natural extension of the business we're in," Hefner says. "It's all really a matter of communications and entertainment."

The linchpin of Hefner's TV venture will be a monthly series tentatively titled "Electronic Playboy," a television version of the girlie magazine that became an American institution.

"It's a very exciting notion,"

Hefner said. "a television show that will draw its attitude, personality and contents from the magazine, something that now we can do on cable and couldn't do on network television, at least at this point. (because) it will include some nudity."

"One can imagine in the not distant future having a TV version of the magazine that will be a monthly purchase in video tape or video disc, the way you'd buy the magazine."

Playboy Productions is casting "Electronic Playboy" now, and the show may begin production late this year. It will be distributed through cable systems in 1980.

Other projects are in the works, including a TV disaster movie for ABC (airing in October) and a Playboy anniversary series for cable distribution. This last matter is one of Hefner's pet projects, because it includes a reunion of Playmates from the past 25 years.

Playboy's television venture follows a rather dramatic turnaround for the company, which had slumped badly in the mid-'70s because of overextension, competition from other men's magazines and, says Hefner, some goofing off at the top.

"Yes, there was a period when I was goofing off, and that's when we got into trouble," Hefner says. "It was during the early '70s, when I was going with Barbie (Benton, Hefner's Playmate-turned-girlfriend-turned-country singer). I left all the day-by-day details to others. But I've been more actively involved in the last three to four years, and there's been ... a dramatic turnaround."

Indeed, after selling a couple of hotels, dropping a losing record label and tightening up elsewhere, Playboy Enterprises regained its health. The company reported a 45.2 percent earnings increase in annual earnings this year over last year's figure.

Now, says Hefner, the company will concentrate on its casino holdings, the magazine and television.

Hefner says he intends to make Playboy Enterprises a major supplier of TV programs, and that his products will not be limited to Playboy-related themes. Playboy may even make some kiddie shows.

My Mom's not going to like that.

Dear Charlie:

Since I last saw you the film industry has been most demanding, but I have found time to squeeze in an odd game or two. I'm sure you will enjoy this hand from Deauville, even though it cost me dearly.

Sitting North-South were two very distinguished ladies, whose bridge did not match their regal bearing. When they reached a no trump slam on the auction shown, I was rather delighted—my hand, East, seemed admirably suited for defense and I was looking forward to an excellent score. As you can see, even with the spade lead, declarer had only ten top tricks.

Declarer won the queen of spades in hand and cashed four club tricks. I discarded two hearts and a diamond, and this was now the position with dummy on lead:

Declarer thought hard as she tried to remember whether the fifth club was high. Eventually, she shrugged her shoulders and led dummy's last club. My partner, to declarer's dismay, won the trick, but I was ruined—I had no safe discard. I finally parted with a diamond, as did declarer.

Partner continued spades and my jack forced the ace. Declarer cashed the ace-king of diamonds and then started to think again. Eventually she led the two of diamonds, which was now high. I had to find another discard, and no matter what card I let go, declarer would make the rest of the tricks.

This is not the first time I have been squeezed, but never before did it happen when declarer tried to cash a trick she thought was a winner, but which was not.

As ever,
Omar

Just A Telephone Call Away From Stardom

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Ten-year-old David Barnhill is just a phone call and a crossed finger away from a starring role in a television movie.

A nationwide talent hunt sponsored by Norman Lear and Alex Haley, producers for the movie, and TAT Communications in Los Angeles was launched several months ago to find two young boys — one white, one black — who will star in the CBS movie, tentatively titled "Tumblin' Buddies." The movie, about two boys who bring their feuding families together, will serve as a pilot for a weekly television series.

When the talent scouts descended on Raleigh last month,

Barnhill was there. He read for the part, was invited to Hollywood for a screen test and returned last week knowing that the role of Booker T. will either be his or that of a young black professional actor from Los Angeles. The telephone call is expected within the next few days.

The youngest of four children, David has had little dramatic experience. His brother, Don, who took him to the Raleigh audition, performed in several productions while a student at North Carolina Central University. David appeared in two of them, "Antigone" and "A Raisin in the Sun."

Was he nervous? "Yes, but agreeable," David said of the audition.

The trip to Hollywood earlier this month featured trips to Disneyland and Beverly Hills, as well as drama coaching and academic tutoring. David met Haley, the author of the book "Roots," during the six-day visit.

"I was a bit surprised. It was the first time seeing a rich person — that rich," David said.

Rehearsals are scheduled to begin Monday in Tennessee with taping to begin in mid-October.

Paul Simon In Movie-Making

CLEVELAND (AP) — Singer-songwriter Paul Simon is venturing into the world of movie-making and has chosen Cleveland as the primary location.

A Warner Bros. production crew has already established offices here and is preparing to begin filming the untitled movie on Oct. 9.

Simon wrote the script and the music. He will also star in the film. Cleveland was written into the screenplay by Simon ostensibly because of its reputation nationally as a testing ground for ambitious rock musicians.

"He has been working on this for the past few years," said Warner Bros. spokeswoman Joanna Ney. She said the film is about "a realistic" look at the life of a rock musician, but added that the script is not Simon's autobiography.

PRIMETIME CARSON
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — For the first time since his affiliation with "The Tonight Show", Johnny Carson will host his program in primetime Oct. 1 to celebrate his 17th anniversary with the late night show.

tober. If David gets the part, he will have to move to the West Coast for at least nine months since he would also star in the weekly series.

"That's my baby," said his mother. "Black people have had it so hard. If he can make it, I won't stand in his way. If he can make it, God bless."

WOODWARD DIRECTS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Joanne Woodward will make her television directorial debut at the helm of an episode of the "Family" series which will air on Nov. 29, on ABC-TV.

Problems Also Offer Opportunity

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

As we approach the decade of the 1980's we are surrounded by problems, but with each of those problems comes an opportunity for the long term investor.

The key to any progress we make as a country in the '80's is energy, its cost and availability. Generally speaking, the supply is sufficient, but some of it is hard to get to, costs a lot, hurts the environment, or is held by the wrong people.

Another problem we face is a growing population. The content of the work force is shifting, family formations are increasing, and that should lead to an increase in births. We must support increased population and protect the environment at the same time.

New technologies and products should be a major feature of the next decade. We can expect breakthroughs in the medical field, in electronics, and hopefully on the energy front.

Each of these difficulties is matched with an opportunity. The performance of individual stock groups is likely to be as mixed in the '80's as in the past, but the changes expected in our life styles provide some insight.

Energy is likely to remain a prime investment area. The search for alternative fuels will continue and natural gas use is likely to become more widespread. Many utilities will probably switch from expensive oil to coal. The supply/demand characteristics and decontrol of oil make that an attractive area.

The growing and changing population has widespread implications. Family formations create demand for housing and home furnishings. The need to grow more food should lead to increased demand for farm machinery and fertilizers. A greater percentage of the population will be under age 45. They will have more money and leisure time, and this increases the attraction of entertainment companies. The aging of our population has further implications for the hospital nursing home industry. Health care and hospital supply companies with strong research and development programs should also benefit.

The area of technology should be in the forefront. Advances in communications and office equipment are likely to continue at a rapid pace. Instrumentation companies and those involved in productivity-increasing technology are also important.

History tells us that the best time to buy stocks is when things look bad, and we have to concede that the economy is not exactly flourishing right now. But those individuals willing to buck the trend against stocks now could come out ahead in the long run.

Confirmation 9 Years Late

DENVER (AP) — Frank Rozich has received a letter confirming a motel reservation he made nearly nine years ago.

Rozich recalled that he stayed in the Portland, Ore., motel anyway nine years ago, despite not receiving confirmation of his reservation.

What interested him was the price of the room at the Sheraton Motor Inn: $14 per night. These days, the room costs $27 per night.

Denver Postmaster Gary Packer says he thinks the letter may have languished for years in the bottom of someone's drawer or file basket. When the letter was discovered, someone just dropped it back into the mail, Packer said.

The notice confirming Rozich's room reservation was mailed with a 6-cent stamp. The same letter would require a 15-cent stamp now.

LIMIT ABANDONED WASHINGTON (AP) —

The FCC has dropped a rule limiting subscription television stations to one per market. The action applies to stations that broadcast a scrambled signal and rent decoders to subscribers.

Young Rachel Sweet Picked Her Path To Stardom

By MARY CAMPBELL, AP Newsfeatures Writer

Rachel Sweet's mother, in Akron, knew that if her little show-off daughter was going to have a show-business career, she'd have to pursue it. And Miss Sweet, now 16, early to cussed her own clear eyes on what would work for herself.

Her conversation contains explanations of going into country music at 11 because she didn't see any preteen rock stars and later staying off rock-lad band-wagons because she didn't want to be regarded as out of date before she was 20.

RACHEL SWEET

Miss Sweet's first album is "Fool Around," on Stiff-Columbia, on the best-selling charts through July and August. The single from it is "I Go To Pieces."

But it isn't Miss Sweet's debut in show business. She had that, at 5, when her journalist grandfather urged her to enter the talent contest at the Akron Beacon Journal's annual picnic. She did and won. In the next couple of years, she went from amateur-talent TV shows to summer theater productions to making commercials.

"I'm the baby of the family and the show-off of the family," Miss Sweet says. "I used to entertain all the relatives, doing imitations. And I used to run around the house and mimic everybody who sold soap flakes on TV."

"My mother realized I'd actually have to pursue it if I wanted to be successful as an entertainer, and I'd have to start at an early age."

"My mother had all the Elvis Presley records and he was my biggest early influence. I had an aunt 10 years younger than mother who introduced me to Janis Joplin records. Barbra Streisand right now is my favorite singer. I've seen "Funny Girl" nine times. So far. And Bruce Springsteen is my idol right now."

Taking her memory back again to age 6, Miss Sweet recalls:

"My parents brought me to the Big Apple and signed me with a child manager and four agents — who got different accounts — and I went on commercial calls for four years. They thought I could do commercials as well as the people who were doing them."

"I used to come to New York twice a month I'd fly in with my Dad at 8 in the morning and then stick in as many commercial calls as were out for 7-year-old girls with brown hair and smart mouths. I'd miss two days of school a month and it didn't take too much out of me."

That ended at 10, when Miss Sweet went from private school to a public junior high which thought she should be there every day. So she decided to be a recording star.

"I got interested in a field that would accept me. Country. Tanya Tucker was doing it. I didn't see any rock 'n' roll that were 12 or 13."

She went to Nashville and cut some demonstration records and tried to get heard. "I was recording at Columbia Records studios and nobody was interested in me at all. I'd follow Tammy Wynette into the studio and nobody was interested."

"I got on a minor label from Texas, Derrick Records. I had a single in the Billboard country charts and thought I was going to be a country music artist. I did country fairs about three years with moderate success and I was locally known, but never on the level of Tanya. I thought, 'Is it never going to happen?'"

Miss Sweet decided she might as well aim toward becoming a lawyer, started studying hard in school and joined school clubs and activities.

Then, Liam Sternberg, whose father is a lawyer and friend of Rachel Sweet's father, asked her to sing on some demo records of songs he'd written and wanted to send to Stiff Records in England.

"Liam was intent on selling his 'Akron compilation.' He sold the idea to Stiff and he sold them the demo tapes. Stiff put out an album with a lot of Akron musical artists on it."

"The next thing I knew I was getting reviews for an album I didn't know I was on."

Then Miss Sweet and her sister, a year older, went to London last fall and she cut the album which Columbia Records later bought and has released. It has songs by Liam Sternberg and three from the 1960s. "I Go to Pieces," a Peter and Gordon song, "B-A-B-Y," a Carla Thomas song, and "Stay Awake," a Dusty Springfield song.

"You get into a lot of trouble covering '60s songs," Miss Sweet says. "The press says that is all you do, cover old songs. Five years from now I'll only be 21. I can't cover old songs all my life. On the next album, there won't be any at all."

Most of the Stiff artists were punk rock. "I wasn't," Miss Sweet says. "I figured it is going to fade out in two years and I'll be 18 and have nothing else to do, so I didn't want the label of punk. Also, punk is not suited to a singer; it's more for a shouter. I was always a melody singer."

Miss Sweet's next album, she says, will be basic rock 'n' roll.

"There'll be a few songs of my own. I've already written the next album's ballad. It's more or less in the vein of 'Who Does Lisa Like?'. She likes the most popular boy at Firestone High School. We use his first name, so he's not sure if it's him or not. The songs will be a bit younger oriented, toward a sort of young public, people I can identify with."

She doesn't know whether Liam Sternberg, whose father is now her lawyer, will have time to produce this one, since he's working with Jane Ayre now. "I'd like to work with him again. We argue a lot but have a good time. I'm more of a personality person. If a producer can have fun, okay, but if he's just humorless and down to business, I'm not going to be at my best."

The day she was interviewed, Miss Sweet met with movie producer Robert Stigwood. "No matter how many records I sold, movies would be exciting," she says. "Rock 'n' roll is more earthy."

"That would be glamorous."

Preparing Them For Retirement

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Many people who long for retirement find themselves psychologically unprepared for the change and too often suffer from an increase in mental depression and health disorders, says the head of a company retirement program.

Feelings of idleness and uselessness are most commonly the problem, says William Hayes, manager of the Pitney Bowes Retirement Administration here.

In an effort to prepare their employees for retirement, the company provides seminars on health care, financial management, legal planning and attitude adjustment.

Parents Prefer To Teach Kids

NEW YORK (AP) — A great majority — 84 percent — of parents still want to be the main source of birth-control information for their teen-age children. This is among the findings of The General Mills American Family Report 1978-79: Family Health in an Era of Stress.

The study, conducted by the research firm of Yankelovich, Skelly and White, showed that only a small minority — 7 percent — are ready to see the schools take over the responsibility, while 6 percent were willing to have teen-agers receive the information from doctors.
