A HOTLINE APPEAL

WRECK VICTIM

21-year old Richard Carter was critically injured in an automobile accident May 12. He has been in the hospital and in the rehabilitation center here ever since. For three weeks, the Richlands area resident was in a coma, but now he is relearning walking, talking and the like. He's was married only shortly before his accident and his wife and mother spend much of their time here with him.

His uncle, Floyd Tyson's church, Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness, has asked Hotline to invite the public to assist Carter and his family with their astronomical medical expenses. Tax-deductible donations to the Richard Carter Fund may be sent to Meadowbrook Pentecostal Holiness Church, c/o Katie B. Clark, Secretary-treasurer, Box 227, Greenville, N. C. 27834. Inquiries may be made of Mrs. Clark by calling her between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. at 756-2750.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

RESPONSE TO "PUT OFF" ITEM

David Nichols, Chief of Communications of the Pitt County Sheriff Department, has played back for a Hotline staff member recordings of three conversations had with the person who complained to Hotline yesterday about having been put off when she attempted to give drug information by phone to the Sheriff Department on a recent evening. "It appears," Nichols said, "that the two different men who talked to her were courteous and indicated willingness to take the information offered. The woman was put on hold two times because three separate reports were being taken in the office at the same time. The longest time she spent on hold, according to exact timing of the recording, was one minute, 20 seconds. She was told that the one specific deputy she asked for initially was on vacation, which was true, but she was not told that her information could not be handled at that time, nor that she should wait till tomorrow. She was specifically asked at one point to relate her information, and she refused to do so. We do not know the identity of the woman and do not want to know. The sheriff has indicated his willingness to talk to her directly."

All calls made on the main line into the Sheriff Department, 752-3312, are routinely recorded. A beep on the line indicates this, Nichols pointed out.

Inlet Funds

MANTEO, N. C. (AP) — Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N. C., said, "I feel as if we scored the winning home run after the game was over and it counted."

That was his reaction to President Carter's signing into law this week the 1980 Water Projects Appropriations measure, which includes $2 million in start-up money for the Manteo-Shallowbag Bay project, involving stabilization of Oregon Inlet.

Jones said this will allow development of the state's seafood processing plant at Wanchese.

Jones, noting that the Oregon Inlet project had not been included in Carter's 1980 budget, said it was "most unusual" to get the start-up funds added.

The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers estimated two years ago that the cost of the Oregon Inlet project would be $48 million. Its estimate now is $61.5 million which includes dredging, stabilization and navigation improvements.

Plans call for construction of rock jetties and enlarging the channel. The existing channel carries a control depth of 14 feet and a width of 120 feet. It would be deepened to 20 feet and widened to 400 feet.

Rushing For Souvenirs

BALBOA, Canal Zone (AP)

— Souvenir hunters are snapping up mementos ranging from railroad spikes to postage stamps in the final frenzied days before the Panama Canal Zone leaves U.S. control on Monday.

"People have gone nuts. We've had 100 people waiting in line 40 minutes to buy stamps and one-cent money orders," said Assistant Postmaster Peter Toranzo, a 17-year resident of the Zone. "We've run out of some stamps. They're buying everything just for souvenirs."

The stamps, money orders, spikes and matches feature designs unique to the Canal Zone, most of which will pass from U.S. to Panamanian jurisdiction Monday under the Panama Canal treaties.

The treaties cede full control of the waterway and the Canal Zone to Panama by the end of the century, and transfer most Panama Canal Co. operations to the Panama Canal Commission starting Monday.

Memento hunters have even grabbed license plates.

Canal Zone Gov. Harold Parfitt, who is out of a job Monday, said someone made off with his plates: Canal Zone No. 1.

Bargain hunters were clearing the shelves of the canal company's Balboa commissary, which imports and sells merchandise at prices generally below the rest of Panama.

"People are really stocking up. We've had to ration some things," said the assistant commissary manager, Huey Sigur. "It's one box to a customer for detergents."

President Carter on Thursday signed a bill to implement the canal treaties after more than a year of pushing the legislation through Congress.

Returning 69 Illegal Aliens

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP)

— Sixty-nine illegal aliens are on their way back to Mexico after being arrested by immigration officers at two apple orchards and a poultry processing plant.

Russell Parry, an officer of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said the pre-dawn raids Thursday brought a hostile reaction from the orchard owners employing the aliens.

The Commerce Department said four of the components in the leading indicators index were down in August — liquid assets, sensitive prices, stock prices and building permits. But the declines were offset by increases in six categories: average work week, lower layoff rate, sales performance, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, money supply and new orders.

Many economists say the nation's seventh postwar recession began in the second quarter this year and that the downturn will persist into 1980, even if third quarter output figures show improvement.

Although a recession could help dampen inflation, currently running at an annual rate of more than 13 percent, it also would throw many people out of work.

The department also released its so-called Composite Index of Coincident Indicators, which is supposed to gauge the economy's current performance. This index fell 0.9 percent in August, the largest drop since a 1 percent decline in May.

The coincident index hit its peak in March before beginning a tumble.

Reception For Senator Morgan Is Held Here

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Between 250 and 300 people attended a fund-raising reception honoring U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan at the Greenville Golf and Country Club last night.

Morgan, seeking re-election next year said, "so far, we've been real pleased," with the support shown. "We've had good crowds all around the state."

Morgan said, "Any opposition is serious, but I would hope to win," when asked if he thought Republican John East would pose a serious threat if the East Carolina University political science professor decides to enter the race.

East, a Republican National Committeeman, is considered a prime candidate for the Republican nomination to oppose Morgan in the 1981 general election.

Morgan, a Democrat, is an ECU graduate and former chairman of the Board of Trustees of the university. He served in the North Carolina General Assembly and as North Carolina Attorney General before being elected to the U.S. Senate in 1974.

W. M. "Booger" Scales, who served as chairman of the fund-raising event, said tickets to the reception were sold for $25 each. "We wanted to give Sen. Morgan's supporters a little back for their money," rather than just ask for donations, Scales noted.

In addition to Scales, other sponsors of the reception included Reynolds May, Jack Minges, Dave Whichard, Tom Taft, Weighty Scales and A. B. Whitley of Greenville; Charles McLawhorn and Ross Persinger of Ayden; Sparky McCaskill of Winterville; Wiley Gaskins of Grifton; Bob Martin and Bob Whitehurst of Bethel, Jack Lewis of Farmville, William Francis Tyson of Stokes, and Bruce Beasley Sr. of Fountain.

President And Nat'l Security Panel Confer

By BARRY SCHWEID

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met with his National Security Council for the second time in less than 24 hours today as the United States tried to keep alive negotiations with the Soviet Union over a Russian combat brigade in Cuba.

The breakfast meeting at the White House followed Thursday night's hour-long NSC briefing by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance on his negotiations with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, which apparently failed to resolve the dispute at least for the time being.

Carter's meeting with his top security advisers lasted about one hour. None of the participants were available afterward for comment.

American officials did not rule out the possibility of further U.S.-Soviet talks, although none were planned for the first time in three weeks.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, meeting reporters after Vance's NSC briefing, said, "We would not characterize this as a crisis. It was a discussion."

Another official, requesting anonymity, said that, while there was no crisis atmosphere, "there is a problem."

Members of the NSC called to the White House included

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, CIA Director Stansfield Turner, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and presidential national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

Powell refused to divulge specifics of what Vance told the NSC in a one-hour briefing that followed a private 30-minute meeting with the president in the White House living quarters.

Carter said Tuesday that he would report to the nation, probably within a week, on the negotiations. In a speech Thursday, Vance assured Latin American diplomats the administration, "at an appropriate time," would release a full report to buttress its stand on the troops.

But, at this point, he added, "the best thing that can be done is to keep the negotiations private."

Neither Vance nor Gromyko, meeting the press after their 3½-hour session, would go beyond describing the talks as "serious." The mood was clearly gloomy, however, as the men descended from Vance's 37th floor hotel suite overlooking the United Nations.

Gromyko planned to return to Moscow today, precluding what had been seen as a possible meeting with Carter this weekend if progress resulted from the New York talks.

Officials had said a decision by Carter on whether to take part in the talks hinged on the outcome of the last Vance-Gromyko meeting.

Administration sources said there remained a possibility Vance would hold further talks with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

Such a meeting, however, was said to depend on some indication from Moscow that it is prepared to accept and do something about the U.S. position on the detachment.

Yet State Department spokesman Huddell Carter said he would not rule out some unspecified U.S. effort to keep the delicate discussions alive. "I'm really trying not to rule out any possibility," he told reporters in New York.

In the talks, the United States has sought to impress on the Russians the Carter administration's feeling that, without a prompt settlement of the dispute, there is little prospect the Senate will ratify the strategic arms limitation treaty by the end of the year.

The United States maintains the detachment of approximately 2,500 Soviet troops in Cuba is a combat brigade. President Carter has said that is an unacceptable state of affairs and said the troops' combat capability must be ended.

Super Chicken - First Of A New Strain Seen

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) —

WB 2988 doesn't have an "S" emblazoned on her white breast feathers, but she's a super chicken nonetheless, one her developer hopes will be the first of a strain of egg-a-day layers.

The leghorn hen with a number instead of a name laid 371 eggs in the past year, a point of pride for Harold Biellier, a poultry husbandry professor at the University of Missouri who developed her.

"As far as we know, that's a record," says Biellier, who hopes to select hens like WB 2988 to begin a strain of chickens that will lay eggs day after day, without taking a day off. "We've been trying to get hens like this for 10 years and now have the technique for selecting these better birds."

Unlike Biellier's super chick, an average hen lays one egg about every 25 hours for four or five days, then skips a day, making average production about 270 eggs a year.

"Your average hen gets about 90 days off each year," says Biellier. "That's a lot more than I get. If I have my way, the super laying chicken of the future will never have a day off."

The key to the selection process is shortening the bird's day to as little as 22 hours during part of the laying cycle, using lights hooked up to automatic timers in the indoor coops.

"Once we've identified them and bred a strain of egg-a-day producers, poultrymen would be able to get production that good under normal 24-hour-day conditions."

Chickens generally start laying at five months and produce for 12 to 14 months with periodic breaks in the cycle. Occasionally, the birds are rested after the first 12 to 14 months, allowed to molt and brought back for another year of production.

Biellier says he's not sure his super-bird will be challenged to go through another year of producing an egg a day. "She deserves a long vacation."

Low Bidders On School Phase

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Barnhill Contracting Co. of Tarboro entered the lowest of six bids opened Thursday for the second phase of North Carolina State University's new Veterinary Medicine School.

Edwin F. Harris, director of facilities planning at the university, said Barnhill's bid for the foundation and structural work for the main building was $2,829,800.

The school is scheduled to open in 1981. Bids for completion of the main building will be opened early next year, Harris said.

The General Assembly appropriated $22.3 million this year for the school.

Late Hours At Fair Tonight

The Pitt County Agricultural Fair will hold a "Midnight Madness" session tonight, with all persons, children and adults, to be admitted free of charge after 11 p.m.

According to Sam Winchester, fair manager, those who purchase a $5 arm band will be able to ride all the rides on the fairgrounds free of charge, as many times as they want, from 11 p.m. to 2 a.m.

"This will allow those people who attend tonight's football game and others to come enjoy the fair," said Winchester. The fair operates through Saturday.

FOCUS

The First Americans

More than 20,000 years ago, people from Asia followed the animals they were hunting across a narrow strip of land that connected Siberia and Alaska, and began to settle in the Western Hemisphere. By 6000 B.C., they had spread out over two continents, from Alaska and Canada to the tip of South America. They discovered foods the rest of the world had never heard of: peanuts, corn, potatoes, peppers, tomatoes, and squash. Some of them built great cities, and invented their own systems of counting, writing, and measuring time. Today is a good time to appreciate the accomplishments of the first Americans. Today is Native American Day.

Girl Injured In Traffic Mishap

A ten-year-old girl was reported injured Thursday when the bicycle she was operating was involved in a collision with an automobile around 5:45 p.m. Greenville Police said that Shawna Monique Parker of 603-B, McKinley Avenue, was injured in the mishap, which occurred at the intersection of Roosevelt and Douglas Avenues.

Officers, who preferred no charges following investigation of the accident, said that the automobile was operated by Majoyce Council Brown of P.O. Box 1022, Winterville.

Damage to the bicycle was estimated at $200, according to the police.

The 416 Hudson Street residence of Martha Robinson received damages estimated at $400 Thursday when the porch area of the house was struck by a vehicle, police reported.

Investigating officers said that a car operated by Marjorie Ree Clemons of 1900-B, West Third Street jumped the curb in the 5:02 p.m. accident and struck the porch. The driver said that the car's engine cut off and the power brakes failed as she was attempting to stop at the corner of Hudson and Fifth Streets.

None of the six occupants in the car were injured and damage was estimated at $100 to the vehicle. Damage at the house included porch poles, porch structure, plants, and flowers, it was noted.

No charges were preferred.

Seek Debby For Kickoff

HAVELOCK, N.C. (AP) — Members of the Havelock-Cherry Point Jaycees chapter are trying to locate Debby Shook to kick off — literally — a new non-beauty pageant.

Miss Shook, of Spruce Pine, had the Miss North Carolina title taken from her in June after she complained publicly that she did not receive all her benefits. A day later, in protest, she kicked her crown on stage during preliminary contests for a new Miss North Carolina.

Darryl E. Nixon, spokesman for the Jaycees chapter, said his group is planning a "Miss Havelock North Carolina Crown Kicking" contest to commemorate Miss Shook's action. Contestants will line up to see who can place-kick a beauty queen's crown the farthest.

"We would like her to kick off the event by kicking out the first crown ... kind of like throwing out the first ball of the season," Nixon said.

The state Jaycees sponsor the Miss North Carolina contest, but the Havelock-Cherry Point chapter doesn't sent a representative to it, Nixon said.

Farmville Dedicating New Downtown

FARMVILLE — Farmville merchants were beginning this morning to put American flags out at curbsides in front of their businesses.

And they're putting out the welcome mats today, tomorrow and from then on, inviting townspeople and area residents alike to come view their spanking neat downtown.

Formal dedication of the $1-million-plus downtown improvements will be held tomorrow at 10:15 a. m. in front of the Bank of North Carolina building at 200 S. Main Street.

The project was financed largely with local funds, but also with $300,000 assistance from the Department of Transportation and $16,000 from State Clean Water funds. It included placing electrical and telephone lines underground, reconstructing portions of Main and Wilson streets' installing brick sidewalks, replacing water lines and repairing old sewer lines, installing decorative high-pressure sodium street lights, and constructing beautiful landscape islands along the street.

Years in the planning, the project took over a year to complete and caused local citizenry to complain of "living in Dodge City," and to go so far as to plant a vegetable garden in the center of Main Street. An earlier phases of the downtown revitalization effort resulted in the construction of landscaped off-street parking areas.

Efforts are continuing to encourage restoration of the downtown area's historic commercial buildings to their original "turn-of-the-century" facades.

The dedication ceremony will be preceded by musical entertainment by the Farmville Central High School Band the singing of several composed-for-the-occasion songs by local Brownies. Mayor Sara H. Albritton will greet those attending and will recognize guests who made special contributions to the success of the project. A brief address on the history and the meaning of the project will be given by T. Eli Joyner, chairman of the Downtown Improvements Committee. A response by Commissioner Jack A. Farrior will follow.

The Recreation Department, Library and the FCHS Keywanettes will sponsor special activities for children three to 10 years old on the old Methodist Church lot across from the library, so that parents may attend the dedication and shop downtown. Live musical entertainment will be provided downtown. Merchants will be conducting special sales promotions, and several community organizations are planning special sales and other activities downtown.

Fear Americans Among Vienna Fire's Victims

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — An intense, choking fire roared through a Vienna hotel before dawn today, killing 27 persons and injuring 13, officials said. Members of a tour group from Maine were feared to be among the victims.

The fire at the Am Gartener Hotel broke out at about 5 a.m. near the reception desk and roared through elevator shafts to the upper floors of the four-story building. Witnesses said 14 guests awakened by the wail of approaching fire engines tried to jump from windows but firemen reached them first with high-rise ladders.

Most of the victims were overcome by smoke in their sleep, authorities said. The 120 firemen and 30 trucks that responded had the blaze under control an hour after they arrived, but the heat was so intense it bent some of the steel rails in the elevator shafts.

Police said the guest lists were lost in the blaze, making it impossible to verify names and hometowns immediately. But a tour operator in Bath,

Two Protesting Kinston Vote

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Two candidates who lost in Tuesday's Democratic primary for City Council seats have filed protests over the election.

The candidates contend the Lenoir County Board of Elections changed the polling place of Precinct No. 1 too close to the election date.

Joseph Askew and Annie P. Whitehead said the change should have been publicized 60 days before the vote.

A hearing will be held on the protests. Mary Jeffress, Lenoir elections supervisor, said the board believed ample notice was given for the change.

She said the board was informed Aug. 14 that the usual polling place had been leased to the county tax revaluation department for two years.

She said the board advertised the polling place change in a local newspaper on Sept. 17, 19 and 21.

Sees A Crisis

Of Confidence

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Former Ambassador Shirley Temple Black says the "crisis of confidence" President Carter claims has swept over America is a "crisis of self-confidence in the White House."

Speaking at Yale University Thursday night, Mrs. Black said she doesn't expect to return to government work under the Carter administration, but hopes a GOP president would appoint her to a diplomatic post with a "developing country."

She was placed on the United Nations delegation by President Richard M. Nixon. President Gerald Ford sent her to Ghana, then made her U.S. chief of protocol. She held that post briefly into the Carter administration, she said, until "they noticed me and sent me home."

Why Buy A Second Oven?

Because It Will Become Your First

WHAT CAN A MAXIM CONVECTION OVEN DO FOR YOU?

IT WILL SAVE YOU TIME

Maxim cooks your meals through a hot-air-in-motion system that professional chefs and bakers discovered some time ago. The same foods will be thoroughly cooked (without microwaves) in 1/4 less time (and at a lower temperature) than those prepared in an ordinary oven.

IT WILL CONSERVE YOUR ENERGY
Now consider, if you cook at a lower temperature for less time, it stands to reason your utility costs will be lower, as well. And that's a big consideration today.

IT WILL KEEP YOUR KITCHEN COOLER
The total heat given off is less than half that of an ordinary oven. Not matter if you bake, broil, roast or slow cook.

IT WILL COOK FOODS UNIFORMLY
Maxim works like a rotisserie in reverse—turns the heat and not the meat. A silent fan causes the heat to surround the food, cooking it from all sides at once. The result—a perfect roast...a delicious loaf of bread.

IT WILL SEAL IN NATURAL JUICES
A nutritionalist's dream. And a meat connoisseur's answer. Vitamins are preserved and flavor enhanced because the convection oven doesn't dry foods as it cooks them. Bake, broil, roast or slow-cook and get fantastic results consistently.

Readers Complain About Organ Music

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A reader in St. Augustine, Fla., said he quit going to church because the organist played too loudly. Well, I've been an organist since 1934, and the problem is probably not the organist, but the organ. Over the years, churches replace worn-out organs with rebuilt theater organs or parts of several organs, and the resulting sounds are disastrous!

The church is the only corporate body I know of in which each member is an expert concerning what should and should not be played for the service. It is also the only corporate body which pays its most qualified employees, i.e., the minister and the organist, salaries which bear no relationship to the cost in time and money spent to acquire professional status.

To all critics who think the organ music is too loud in church, I say the music in the service should run the gamut of soft to loud, depending on the occasion. Too many Christians today declare their faith sotto voce instead of fortissimo, and expect their organist to do likewise. I play for the joy of it, not for the pay, and God knows I sometimes pull out all the stops. Hallelujah and Amen!

LOUISE M. CHILDS IN S.F.
DEAR LOUISE: Let's hear a slightly different tune from another reader:

DEAR ABBY: This is for the St. Augustine reader who quit attending church because of the organ music: I, too, had the same problem, but I asked God to show me the way, and He pointed me toward the Church of Christ.

The Church of Christ doesn't believe in instrumental music, and believe me, it is heavenly to go to church and not have to hear all that loud instrumental music. For true salvation in a quiet and spiritual atmosphere, try the Church of Christ.

True, Bigness Gets Attention

A mayor from New Jersey has complained that small town needs are being ignored in Washington.

Mayor Larry Anzovino of Dunellen, N. J. whose town has a population of 7,200, wants a national organization to make the needs of small towns and cities better known in Washington. The big city mayors can meet with the president and they have their own organization to lobby for their needs.

Mayor Anzovino is on the right track.

Bigness gets the attention of both federal and state governments. Indeed, while smaller cities take advantage of some government programs, they are basically designed to meet the particular needs of large cities.

Industrial placement is very much involved with state agencies. Most states have industrial recruitment divisions and they make the first contact with industries seeking sites within a given state.

Large metropolitan areas are quick to remind governors and legislators that they control big blocs of votes. Consequently they get the attention of those who guide industrial prospects to building sites.

Smaller communities don't always want to grow into metropolitan areas but they do want healthy economic growth. They need to share in financial and other services which state and federal governments offer. The only way they can is to gather enough political force so as to compete with larger cities.

Trying To Save Both Their Mistakes

The Susan B. Anthony dollar coins have been all but snubbed by the public. So has the Treasury's efforts to revive the $2 bill.

So the government thinkers have come up with a proposal to save both their projects. What is proposed is the elimination of the one dollar bill.

Of course, the paper dollar bill is widely accepted by the public. But then what does the public know?

Mother Of Good Roads

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Today's liberated lady in North Carolina will be much surprised to learn that this state has a "Mother of Good Roads in North Carolina".

Men have won the titles of "Good Roads Governor" and as "Fathers" of many modern systems and techniques. But long before the Equal Rights Amendment or Fem-Lib, Harriet M. (Hattie) Berry led the fight for improved roads in North Carolina and won — by will and persistence, and over the objections of powerful political figures — the statewide highway system we enjoy today.

A bronze plaque honoring Miss Berry resides in the foyer of the State Highway Building in Raleigh, naming her "The mother of Good Roads in North Carolina. She was never away by the obstacles in her path or by the individuals who put them there. She moved with equal ease at the country crossroads and in the halls of the General Assembly", an article in the 50th Anniversary Issue of Tarheel Wheels, published by the N.C. Motor Carriers Association, notes.

Out of Place

Highlighting the beginnings of the fight for good roads which started in 1902, the article is entitled "A Woman Out of Place."

Miss Berry was from Hillsborough and graduated from State Normal and Industrial College which was to become the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She taught school briefly then, in 1901, joined the staff of the N.C. Geological and Economic Survey.

The state's transportation system was plagued by lack of direction, shortage of funds, bitter east-west rivalries and a mixture of rail, waterway, forest trails, and rapidly deteriorating plank roads.

Immediate needs determined and financed locally were the order of the day, and state policy was to urge individual counties to meet their own needs.

Hattie Berry was in a small group which envisioned a statewide system, and was involved in formation of the North Carolina Good Roads Association in 1902 where she pushed establishment of a State Highway Commission, and in 1915 helped draft the legislation setting up that body. In 1917 Miss Berry took charge of both the Geological Survey and the Good Roads Association and in 1919 she drafted proposed legislation for the state to establish and maintain the entire highway system. Critics called the suggestion too idealistic and the "most drastic piece of legislation ... ever... attempted."

She took the message to 89 counties, organizing women and adding members to the Good Roads Association.

BILL NOBLITT

Weak?

It was suggested that a man take over the campaign, to which Miss Berry responded: "The weak shoulders of a woman have, for the past 15 years, carried this proposition, and I propose that the weak shoulders of a woman continue to carry it." She did.

Gov. Cam Morrison took office, suggesting that individual counties pay half the cost of building and maintaining roads, and Miss Berry forced the governor to live by the promise already adopted in the Democratic Party platform. She had written the pledge herself, and "If it hadn't been for that waspish woman, I could have had my way," Morrison complained publicly.

By 1921, the General Assembly was ready to adopt the statewide highway system proposal, and did so as Miss Berry sat beside the Speaker of the House ready to handle any problems or questions.

That same year, she lost her job because of her activities for roads, and later helped organize credit unions and savings and loan associations across the state. She retired in 1937 and died in 1940.

A Campaign Strategy

WASHINGTON — Many congressmen and senators who have to run for office next year are in serious trouble. Their constituents are unhappy and they feel that somehow Congress is to blame for a lot of their woes.

Therefore, we may see them campaigning on foreign issues rather than domestic ones. This could be a dangerous time for Americans and the world. In order to win an election many sane legislators are willing to get the voters riled up about different parts of the world which only seem to be a threat to our national security during an election year.

I attended the strategy meeting of Congressman Larry Bilge and his campaign staff the other day and it was enlightening.

"Larry," his manager said, "the poll results just came in and the people in your district are sore as hell about energy, inflation, and unemployment, not to mention the price of coffee. We got problems."

"Don't tell me," Bilge said. "I was home last weekend and my own mother told me she doesn't think I should have a raise. And I support her."

The manager said, "The thing we have to do is avoid the issues that are bugging the voters and bring up new ones that they haven't thought of."

"Give me the scenario," Bilge said.

"Okay, you're going to a town meeting in Daisy County next week. The first thing they're going to ask you is why they have to pay 90 cents a gallon for heating oil."

"What's my answer?"

ART BUCHWALD

"You can't do anything about heating oil until the United States gets the Soviet troops out of Cuba."

"Do I want to go to war with Cuba?" Bilge asked.

His press secretary replied, "That decision is up to the President, but the time has come to stand up to the Soviets and say, 'No withdrawal — no SALT.'"

"I got it. Now what happens when they ask me what Congress intends to do about inflation?"

"Tell them," his speechwriter said, "that the real danger to this country is not inflation but the Panama Canal Treaty, which you voted against. Say that you are not going to allow a two-bit dictator in a banana republic to push this country around. The time has come to fish or cut bait."

"I like that phrase," Bilge said. "Let me write it down."

The campaign manager referred to his yellow pad. "Okay, now we have a large unemployment problem in the district ever since the Cannibal Radio Co. pulled out and moved to the Sun Belt. Some wise guy is probably going to ask you what you intend to do about jobs."

"There's one in every crowd," Bilge said.

"You tell him the reason they don't have jobs is because we have a missile gap with the Soviet Union."

40 Years Ago Today

Sept. 28, 1939

Twenty-three football players and Coaches O.A. Hankner and Gordon Gilbert of East Carolina Teachers College will leave Greenville Friday morning at 6:30 for Kutztown Teachers College, Kutztown, Pa., where they will open their 1939 season Saturday afternoon.

Friday's trip will take the boys over 400 miles. They plan to stop in Washington, D.C., on their return trip. The Pirates will open their home schedule Saturday week with Campbell College.

Campbell defeated ECTC, 19-6, last season but this year's team is far superior to that of the previous season.

The Senate Foreign Relations committee approved today the administration's bill to permit the sale of American armaments to belligerent nations. Senate debate on the measure is scheduled to begin Monday.

Senator Borah of Idaho, ranking Republican member of the committee, announced the vote as 16 to seven. He said several of those voting for the measure did so to get it to the Senate floor for debate. They reserve the right to oppose it later.

INSIDE REPORT

Pentagon's Secret Voice

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A secret memorandum that the Pentagon brass refused to give the Senate reveals that the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) a year ago set specific conditions for U.S.-Soviet negotiations on SALT II, then endorsed a treaty that failed to meet their requirements.

JCSM-321-78, sent on Oct. 12 to Defense Secretary Harold Brown for forwarding to President Carter, delivered a broadside against what is now the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II). "These issues require satisfactory and unambiguous resolution before the SALT II negotiations can be considered adequately completed," the memo said. Yet, the JCS now endorses the treaty even though no "resolution" was achieved.

No wonder the administration stone walls defense-oriented senators who have been demanding this and other JCS memos. While the public voice of the JCS endorses SALT II with some equivocation, the secret voice of JCSM-321-78 is so antagonistic that it would be lethal propaganda against the treaty.

Moreover, statements in the memo directly contradict the chiefs' own testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee in July. The Gen. David Jones who as JCS chairman signed the memo seems a man apart from the Gen. David Jones who led the pro-SALT JCS testimony.

In that testimony, Jones listed as a "significant" concession Moscow's agreement, apart from the treaty, not to increase production of the Backfire bomber. But the memo warned that failure to include the Backfire problem in the treaty could lead to a Soviet "breakout" — that is, secret preparation for a major post-treaty military advantage.

"We regret the decision," it said, "not to insist on counting the intercontinentally capable Backfire system within the...limit. No Soviet assurances can compensate for the fact that Backfire will remain an effective intercontinental weapon within the total Soviet arsenal for waging nuclear war. Moreover, Backfire production and development provide a significant Soviet breakout potential, an option we would be hard pressed to match in the near term."

In July, Jones sloughed off suggestions that SALT II leaves the U.S. — with no bargaining position for SALT III. In October, Jones warned SALT II "will significantly reduce U.S. negotiating leverage for a SALT III outcome."

In July, the chiefs said Moscow would have to destroy strategic weapons to reach SALT II limits. In October, they had painted this picture: "On the Soviet side, many 'reductions' will actually be conversions to strategically significant non-counters (for example, Bison bombers to tankers and SSBNs (missile-firing submarines) to SSNs (attack submarines), and SS-20 (missile) deployments will free ICBMS currently committed to PRC (Chinese) targets."

Jones told the senators "there is nothing inconsistent" between the memos they could not read and his testimony, arguing that

Strength For Today

LOOK UP AND LIVE

Some people commit moral and emotional suicide by stabbing themselves to death with the wrong kind of thoughts. Sometimes physical suicides come about in this way also.

Science tells us that cosmic rays are continually going through our bodies. No one is sure what these rays do to us, but we can be absolutely certain of the effect caused by mental rays in the form of anger, resentment, evil fantasies, jealousy and lust.

Sometimes in our happier moments we look back upon the hours spent in the grip of these evil thoughts with surprise and regret and wonder how we could have allowed ourselves to come under the power of such sinister thinking.

Medical evidence is continually accumulating which shows that there is an intimate connection between our mental attitudes and our physical condition. Wrong thinking can tear us apart if we allow it to do so. To look down is to sink into poor health; to look up is to live.

The Continuity In Marriage

By GAIL MICHAELS

Marriage has received plenty of criticism since the Sixties, but one thing has to be said for it: it does provide continuity in a rapidly changing world.

Married life is predictable. When you're married, you can be secure in the knowledge that no one in your house except you will ever put a new roll of toilet tissue on an empty spool.

You can be sure that if your razor is better than your husband's, he will borrow it. Six months later he'll threaten divorce if you move it from one side of the medicine cabinet to the other.

If you have a child, you can expect that the day you change her bed, she'll wet it.

You are never surprised when she picks the raisin eyes out of the gingerbread men that you've made in a sudden frenzy of domestic inspiration and grumbles. "I'd rather have chocolate chip."

And on the morning that you put a clean, ironed tablecloth on the table, you don't have to ask what she wants for break-fast. She wants oatmeal.

Even the conversation in a marriage is predictable. A recent study found that happily married couples spend an average of 29 minutes a week talking to each other.

These findings do not mean that married couples aren't communicating. They indicate that married couples know each other so well that they feel free to take conversational shortcuts. During a typical dinner table conversation, a husband and wife can sum up the day's activities in two minutes.

The husband starts by saying something like, "Did you pick up the mail today?"

"Your magazine wasn't in it."

"Did you...?"

"Yes, and I picked up the cleaning, too. I saw Bill there."

"What did he say about...?"

"He didn't like it at all."

"He really looks at a problem from all angles."

"That reminds me, Jimmy needs help on his geometry tonight."

The longest conversation Phillip and I have had in months took place one morning last week. I walked into the bath-room and shouted, "Phillip! The elves visited us during the night!"

"What are you talking about?"

"Pixies! Fat fairies dressed in green! That's what I'm talking about!"

"Will you stop babbling and try to make some sense?"

"They've come to do my homework. My prayers have been answered," I sighed. "And to think that I didn't believe. I'm sorry, Tinkerbell."

"Gail, I have never professed to understand how your mind works, but at least I usually have some inkling. Right now, however, I'm at a total loss."

"Someone came in the middle of the night, and put a new roll..."

"...of toilet tissue. I put it there."

I was crushed. If you can't count on marriage, what can you count on?

Apt Point By The Dalai Lama

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

To most questions put to him by reporters about pragmatic issues, the Dalai Lama from Tibet keeps returning to his main theme — the need for overcoming selfish ego by selfless compassion for others.

"The good of all is the good of one," he says. "Only in the happiness of the many does one have happiness."

It seemed an apt point for modern American society, plunged into what many scholars term a self-obsessed tide of narcissism, and the point came from a man shaped by another "world."

That "world," a remote Buddhist kingdom which had been regarded by some historians as a last living link with mystic civilizations of the past, had existed for more than 1,000 years high in the Himalayan mountains of Tibet.

There, in the world's oldest, most stable theocracy, with its lovely ceremonies and ancient ways, the Dalai Lama had ruled for two decades both in temporal and spiritual affairs, until forced into exile when communist China overran Tibet in 1959.

"It was a stunning, fascinating place, unlike anywhere in the world," says old-time broadcaster Lowell Thomas, 88, who had visited there both before and after the Chinese takeover. It had been a domain of handicrafts, festivals and yak-carts, without motor vehicles of any kind.

But now, "it looks like a suburb of Shanghai," Thomas says, adding that the communist authorities "have done about everything they could to ruin it. In my view they've destroyed most of the charm of its traditions. The lovely temple and palace are still there, but only as museums. Loudspeakers boom propaganda day and night."

The Dalai Lama, now 44, a youngish-looking, maroon-robed man with a black "burr" haircut and a ready chuckle, is on a six-week tour in this country, his first since his exile 20 years ago to India.

"Your holiness," his followers call him, but his easygoing charm and frequent twitting of himself contrasts with the exalting salutation. "Sometimes I am a bit shy to speak in this broken English," he remarked at one news conference. "Do you permit? Okay?"

He is the 14th Dalai Lama, a Mongolian title meaning "Ocean of Wisdom," chosen for the office at the age of 2 by lamas (wise ones) of Tibet according to various mystical signs, tests and qualifications. He is considered the reincarnation of predecessors.

THE STEEPLEJACK

Look closely . . . in this picture a man is risking his life!

An old and respected trade is his. It had its beginning centuries ago when Christianity first began to express its devotion in unique forms of architecture. How could Christians proclaim constantly their faith in Christ? How could they lift the eyes of others to behold the Lord of Life?

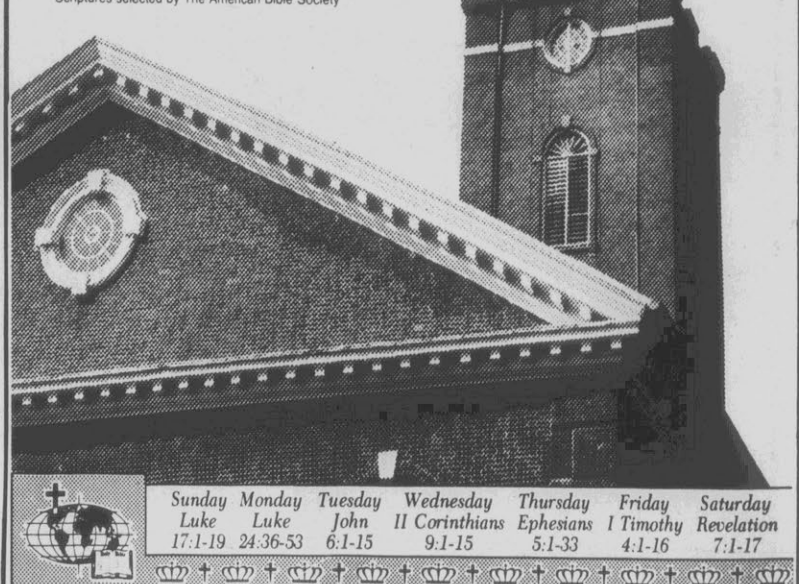

Soon, over gabled village roofs rose gleaming spires. And men who tilled the fields, and men who trod the lanes, rejoiced to behold the symbol of Faith.

Then one day cities replaced villages . . . skyscrapers dwarfed the spires of God. And so, on the day this picture was taken, ten thousand people passed by and never raised their eyes. Only a few looked upward and thought in mild surprise, "Why, isn't that a man way up there on the steeple?"

Yes, A MAN. One of hundreds of millions whose skill and courage continue to be needed as the Church fulfills its mission.

Maybe your church doesn't have a steeple. But it has a task to challenge your skills . . . your courage.

negotiations had changed things. "Obviously," the general testified, "we were addressing a moving train." But when the demands of JCSM-321-78 are stacked up against the final result of SALT II, the train had not moved far.

Concerning verification, the memo demanded that "national technical means must be augmented, where necessary, by cooperative measures." It contended that "we should not only preserve our option, but publicly state our intent, to share cruise missile and related technology with our allies as necessary." No more was done to resolve the chiefs' doubts on these issues than on the Backfire.

Similarly, the memo argued "it is essential that any agreement preserve the U.S. option" for a mobile missile. Yet, the SALT II verification requirements forced a mobile basing mode for the proposed MX that is by no means the chiefs' first choice.

In overall description of arms control, the October generals do not resemble the July generals who saw little danger in the treaty. "Some may conclude," said Jones in October, "that the treaty, by itself, will arrest the very dangerous adverse trends in Soviet strategic forces, including current and projected forces...this is simply not the case...the focus on constraining what the Soviets could do without a SALT agreement has obscured...what they have done, are doing and can do within the SALT framework."

Under SALT I, warned the chiefs, the Soviets have reached "at least parity with U.S. strategic nuclear forces, and the SALT II agreement being negotiated provides neither incentive nor requirement to restrict substantially the pace of their current programs."

JCSM-321-78 eloquently mourned the "recurring theme in U.S. history" of seeking security in treaties. "Despite repeated disappointments on this score throughout the 20th century," it said, the SALT process "contains the seeds of exaggerated expectations and serious public misunderstandings about the adequacy of our strategic position and programs."

Gen. Jones did indeed repeat those words in his public statement in July. Unfortunately, the heart of his testimony ignored that timely warning.

Responding to a recent column, President Carter has informed us (through press secretary Jody Powell) that during last summer's Cabinet shakeup, nobody suggested removing Juanita Kreps as secretary of commerce and he had no thought of removing her.

Trans-U.S. Balloon Is Flying Over Wyoming

By DENNIS E. CURRAN
Associated Press Writer
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — A 100-foot-high balloon floated gently over Wyoming today, its four occupants trusting the winds to carry them to the Atlantic Coast.

Forecasters on the ground had predicted the DaVinci Trans-America balloon would be near Cheyenne at daybreak today. They revised their forecast, however, when the balloon appeared to slow down north of Rock Springs, in western Wyoming.

Jim Serna of Weather Services Corp. of Bedford, Mass., the ground support team for what organizers hope will be the first nonstop balloon crossing of the country, said the balloon may have run into a high pressure system and should pick up speed again.

The balloon's passengers took turns keeping watch and huddling in sleeping bags to ward off temperatures of less than 10 degrees as the balloon crossed Wyoming's desolate Red Desert at 17,000 feet above sea level.

They crossed Oregon and parts of Idaho and Montana after being launched Wednesday from Tillamook, Ore., and they hope to cross the country in 6½ days. So far the only reported problems have been a balky radio and cold temperatures at night.

The occupants of the two level gondola are pilots Rudolf Engelmann of Boulder, Colo., Vera Simons of McLean, Va., and Fred Hude of Kansas City, Kan., and NBC cameraman Randy Birch.

Weather Services Corp. meteorologists plotted the successful trans-Atlantic crossing of the Double Eagle balloon last summer and guided it to a near perfect touchdown near Paris.

But they say they'll be happy with anything on the East Coast.

"I'll take anything between Key West and Caribou," said Bob Rice, calling predictions of a landing near Norfolk, Va., more "press agency" than scientific prediction.

Balloons drift with the wind and can't be steered like an airplane, but balloonists can control their direction somewhat by increasing or decreasing altitude to find currents going different directions, Leavitt said.

The trans-American project is sponsored by soft drink company, a camera company, a balloon-making firm and others.

Begin Revival Series Monday

Revival services will begin at Pleasant Hill F.W.B. Church Monday at 7:45 p.m. and continue throughout the week. Rev. Francis Garner, pastor of Free Union Church, Pinetown, will be the guest speaker. There will be singing each night, and the Rev. Robert Rollins invites the public. Pleasant Hill Church is located on Highway 43.

Candidates' Forum

In anticipation of the Oct. 9 Greenville municipal election, the League of Women Voters will hold a candidates' forum in the Elm Street Gymnasium Thursday at 7:30 p. m.

The forum is part of the League's function of providing citizens of the community with voting information. League is non-partisan, endorsing no candidate.

Starting with the three mayoral candidates and followed by the 13 candidates for the six-seat City Council, each will be allotted four minutes in which to make a statement of his aspirations and goals for local government. Immediately following each statement, there will be a four-minute period allowed for questions from the audience.

Each candidate has been sent a questionnaire, which will be published, with the answers of each, in the Sunday, Sept. 30 issue of "The Daily Reflector."

The general public is invited to attend and question the candidates on the issues.

Tipton Heads N.C. Builders

MARK TIPTON

RALEIGH — Mark Tipton of Greenville, 29, has been elected to lead the 4,500 members of the North Carolina Home Builders Association. He will be installed as president during Dec. 5 ceremonies in Greenville.

Tipton, who served as a vice president of the association for the past two years, will succeed Sherrill Faw of North Wilkesboro.

The NCHBA president was born in Wilson, but has spent most of his life in Greenville. He is the recipient of two degrees from East Carolina University in history and urban and regional planning. He has also studied political history at Oxford University.

Tipton, who serves as vice president of Tipton Builders, Greenville, has been active in the Greenville Home Builders chapter, serving as a director, vice president, president and chairman of several committees.

He is also active as a member of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, the Realtors Association, the American Society of Planning Officials and the ECU Pirate Club. He and his wife, Barbara, reside in Greenville.

Jesse Childers of Greenville has also been elected to serve as a regional vice president with Tipton next year.

Faulty Valve In Ammonia Leak

ROSEMOUNT, Minn. (AP) — A faulty safety valve apparently caused ammonia to leak from a Mississippi River barge, killing a young U.S. Coast Guardsman and injuring 15 others, authorities said.

The leak occurred Thursday at CF Industries. Plant employees and some residents of the area southeast of Minneapolis were evacuated.

Police identified the victim as Henry Dale Hillier, 23, recently transferred to St. Paul from Collinsville, Ill. He had been making a routine observation of shipping operations.

Sir Robert Walpole believed that soap was a cure for bladder stones and daily took one ounce of soap dissolved in three pints of lime water.

What are you actually getting for all those insurance premiums?

If You're Not Sure, Take This ONE-MINUTE QUIZ

- Are you getting, through your present agency, the protection of a national company like Aetna Life & Casualty, a company that can provide protection for all your insurance needs: individual, family, home, car and business?
- Are you getting the satisfaction of being protected by an independent insurance agency, one that is both able and willing to recommend the right protection at the right price?
- Are you getting personal service — the kind of service that comes only from an agent that lives near you, knows you, and really wants to help you?

If you answered "no" to even one of these questions, you're getting less than you deserve. But cheer up! You can call us! Then all your answers will be positive.

Orders Inquiry On Cannibalism

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press Writer

BANGUI, Central African Republic (AP) — President David Dacko has ordered a judicial inquiry into cannibalism charges against deposed dictator Jean Badel Bokassa following discovery of mutilated human bodies in the refrigerator of the self-proclaimed emperor's villa on the banks of the Oubangui River.

Bokassa also has been accused of ordering widespread executions during his 14-year reign, including the massacre of 100 schoolchildren in April, and these charges and allegations of other atrocities will also be covered by Dacko's investigation.

Dacko staged a bloodless coup last Thursday while Bokassa, 58, was in Libya seeking financial aid. Bokassa, a former sergeant in the French colonial army who holds dual French and Central African citizenship, was denied political asylum by France and given sanctuary Monday by the Ivory Coast.

In a radio broadcast Thursday, Dacko, said all those guilty of "crimes against the nation" — atrocities or abuses of power — would receive just punishment. However, Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouët-Boigny has denied Dacko's request to extradite Bokassa.

The 49-year-old Dacko, the Central African Republic's first elected president who was ousted and jailed by Bokassa in 1965, also announced a new Cabinet retaining most of the former dictator's ministers.

Meanwhile, the 200,000 residents of Bangui, the capital, appeared to be doing their best to erase all visible signs of Bokassa's dictatorship.

Virtually every car owner has painted over the letter "E" that stood for Empire on license plates issued after 1976, when Bokassa redesignated the Central African Republic an Empire. Dacko restored the name Republic immediately after the coup, and promised elections in the near future.

University students, who actively protested Bokassa's rule, busied themselves obliterating the word Empire from public signs. Workmen were removing crowns, eagles and other imperial symbols.

Crowds of joyous Central Africans pulled down statues of Bokassa and hacked them to pieces soon after the coup, but triumphal arches erected by the former dictator are still standing.

One former Bokassa aide not retained in Dacko's new government was former Interior Minister Maurice Albert Zana, who was taken to the notorious Ngara Prison, where the 100 schoolchildren were said to have been slaughtered.

Bokassa denied any role in the slaying, but a team of African jurists concluded the dictator ordered the execution and probably took part himself. Witnesses said the children were killed after they protested a government order requiring them to buy expensive school uniforms from one of Bokassa's relatives.

Arrest Three In Student Fight

WELLESLEY, Mass. (AP) — A high school cafeteria fight between blacks and whites in this affluent Boston suburb led to the arrest of three students, police said.

Associate School Superintendent Ted Rokicki said rumors that black students had been seen tampering with lockers contributed to increased tensions that boiled over Thursday. He said the rumors had been disproved.

Two black students were arrested after they allegedly walked into a cafeteria swinging a baseball bat and tire iron. A white youth was arrested outside the school, police said. Black students attend the school under a voluntary busing program.

Must Still Wait For 'Skylark'

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Don't expect any quick change in the current half-year waiting period for individual orders of the most popular of General Motors Corp.'s new front-wheel-drive "X-cars," the Skylark.

Jack Duffy, sales manager for GM's Buick division, said Thursday the waiting period for the compact car should be "about the same" three months from now, despite increased supply with the addition of a second shift at an Oklahoma City assembly plant.

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The Irish air force warned it will shoot down any unauthorized planes that fly into air corridors reserved for Pope John Paul II's flights around Ireland during his three-day visit starting Saturday.

"We're prepared to fire on any planes that do not move out when we make warning signals," Commandant John O'Brien, fighter wing commander at Casement air base near Dublin, said Thursday.

Lt. Col. Barney McMahon, his aide, told reporters: "Armed Marchetti fighters will check the routes taken by the pope's aircraft to make sure no lunatics are flying around."

"We'd have very little option to open fire if, for instance, a plane was hijacked and being flown toward the pope's plane."

McMahon said airlines, flying clubs and other aviation organizations have been advised of the flight restrictions during the papal visit. He stressed that warning shots should be enough to scare off any pilot who flies into the corridors.

He noted that the air force's main task in the massive Irish security operation will be to "prevent any unauthorized aircraft interfering with the pope's flights."

The tiny Irish Air Corps has never been involved in a dog-fight or shot down a plane but it has 16 combat aircraft highly capable of protecting the pope, he said.

The pontiff is scheduled to fly in to Dublin airport from Rome Saturday morning in the Boeing 747 flagship of Aer Lingus, the Irish Republic's flag carrier. Four Irish Air Corps Fouga Magister fighters will escort the jumbo jet, St. Patrick, when it enters Irish air space off the County Wicklow coast south of Dublin.

The Polish pope will travel around Ireland by helicopter amid fears that Protestant terrorists from British-ruled Northern Ireland plan to attack him to avenge the assassination of Earl Mountbatten in Donegal Bay Aug. 27 by guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army. The killing was part of the mainly Catholic IRA's campaign to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and unite it with the Catholic Irish Republic.

Despite the massive security precautions and fears overshadowing the papal visit, religious excitement mounted as the pope's arrival neared.

Dublin authorities put the finishing touches to a massive and unprecedented cleanup of the capital.

Work crews swept the streets and cleared away unsightly junk such as abandoned cars, while special teams on 24-hour call scrubbed graffiti off walls along the routes the pope will take when he arrives and later drives around the city.

Government buildings were spruced up and grimy railings painted. Yellow and white flags bearing the papal crest were strung from apartment and office buildings. Color posters of the 59-year-old pontiff were plastered on thousands of windows across the capital.

Ireland's 3.5 Million Catholics paid more than $3.24 million earlier this month to pay for the pope's trip, the first papal visit to Ireland, after the Catholic Church here appealed for funds.

Hunt Expecting Federal Help

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday that he expects a significant amount of federal financial support for the new state science and mathematics high school to develop over the next two to three years.

At a news conference, Hunt said his failure to get a commitment this week from federal officials doesn't mean the school won't get federal funds.

Hunt declined to say how much the school could expect to receive. "I don't even want to use a percentage on that. It will probably develop over a period of time," Hunt said.

Church Groups Defeat Rules Of Labor Dept.

LOS ANGELES (APK) — A federal judge has ruled that California cannot collect unemployment insurance or disability taxes from 100 church-sponsored private schools. Attorneys for the churches said Thursday that the decision by U.S. District Judge Mariana Pfaelzer was the first time a federal judge has ruled in favor of church groups in the ongoing battle over U.S. Department of Labor regulations. The ruling in Los Angeles suit affects 85 schools run by the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and 15 other church-sponsored private schools. Assistant U.S. Attorney Stephen O'Neil, who represented the federal government in the hearings, could not be reached for comment. At issue is a Labor Department interpretation of a 1978 amendment to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. That interpretation extended unemployment compensation coverage to employees of primary and secondary religious schools. Exemptions were granted only to individuals who perform "strictly church duties" during more than 50 percent of their working time. Church groups across the country have argued that Labor Secretary Ray Marshall's interpretation violates the doctrine of separation of church and state by requiring auditors to determine what tasks fall under definition of "church duties." Judge Pfaelzer's decision siding with the church groups was disclosed Thursday — six days after it was filed. Under her interpretation of the amendment, Judge Pfaelzer stated that Congress intended the taxes be applied to the "services of employees of separately incorporated organizations, but not to church operations run directly by the church with its own employees." Don Daucher, attorney for the Southern California Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, said the states must comply with standards set by federal statutes before they can obtain certain benefits. Daucher said six states have risked decertification by the Labor Department by refusing to collect such taxes from church-sponsored schools. Administrative law judges in Washington, D.C., are currently hearing those cases. Another six states have been sued in separate state or federal actions over the dispute, Daucher said, and the Pfaelzer ruling could affect the outcome of all cases. "There is a groundswell of resistance to the secretary of labor's interpretation on this issue," he said. The chief counsel for the California Employment Development Department said Thursday that a directive ordering a halt to all contact with church-sponsored schools has gone out to all branch offices pending a review of Judge Pfaelzer's decision.

Plans for the world's longest run were announced recently at a news conference held in Greenville. Bob Boal, a 67-year old champion runner and the new State Christmas Seal Chairman for the American Lung Association, revealed that on Saturday, November 3, at 10 a.m., runners will start out from starting lines in ten North Carolina cities in the most massive, coordinated "fun run" and 10,000 meter run of all time. Thousands of runners are expected to taking part in the early November giant run, which will be open to all who will sign up and pay the registration fee. Fees announced are $4 for the "fun run," through October 19 and $5 per entry after that date. The fee for the 10,000 meter run is $5 through October 19 and after that it is $6. All registrants will receive racing T-shirts. At an early date, the sponsoring agent, the American Lung Association of North Carolina, will inform the public how and when they can register and get race packets. A total of 24 medallions will be presented to the top three winners in each of the male and four female categories. Runs will start at the same time in Greenville, Asheville, Charlotte, Fayetteville, Greensboro, Hickory, Raleigh, Rocky Mount, Rockingham and Winston-Salem.

A'Seven Seal' Rally Sunday

Arrest 4 In Baccy Theft

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — State Bureau of Investigation agents have arrested four men in connection with an alleged conspiracy to steal 39,000 pounds of tobacco. The tobacco was being transported from Mullins, S.C., to Henderson. Law-enforcement officials said the arrests were made after an SBI agent posing as a truck driver was offered $5,000 to divert a shipment of tobacco to a Randolph County farm.

Arrested were Benjamin Hoover Foust, 46, of Staley, and William Powell, 44, and Henry Butler, 39, both of Lumberton. Fifteen officers made the arrests Sept. 20 on the farm near Staley as the tobacco, owned by J.P. Taylor Tobacco Co. of Lumberton, was being unloaded. Investigations were completed this week with the arrest of Boyd Burgess, 41, identified by authorities as the operator of the farm where the arrests were made. An SBI spokesman said the men were charged with conspiracy to commit larceny of tobacco. They have been released on bond pending trial Oct. 5 in Robeson County Superior Court at Lumberton. The spokesman said tobacco farmers and companies in the southeastern part of the state have been bothered by tobacco thefts. He said the SBI undercover agent took the truck containing the tobacco at Lumberton and drove it to the farm where he was met by the three men.

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — First it was "Tar Baby" T-shirts. Now the world's largest oil spill has inspired a record. Local singer and songwriter Amy Quates said she and three musicians, billed as "Slick Chic and the Tar Babies," recorded the "Mexican Oil Slick Blues" after the song enjoyed such a good reception at the hotel dining room where she performs.

Accompanied by marimbas and other south-of-the-border sounds, she sings: "I've got the Mexican oil slick blues This black crud all over my shoes If only somebody wiser put that hole in the ground We'd have more oil in the pumps and less crude floating around." Adverse weather has prevented capping the blown-out well in the Bay of Campeche about 500 miles south of here. Tarballs and patches of sticky oil from the spill washed up on Texas beaches last month. The 26-year-old singer said she was encouraged to write the song to capture the frustration of hotel and restaurant employees, whose business dropped off when the dirty beaches caused tourists to leave the area.

A Review... Theater Workshop Again A Winner

Once again, the Ayden Theater Workshop comes up with a winning production in "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown." Director Kim Dale and the six-member cast have pulled together for a very believable performance of Clark Gesner's script and score.

Based on Charles Schulz' comic strip, "Peanuts," the production relies on black-out style sequences and upbeat tunes to keep the audience enthused. The formula works, with many of the songs, such as "Supper-time," "The Book Report," and "My Blanket and Me" getting lots of applause.

Tim Devinney, a former ECU drama student, plays Charlie Brown to the hilt, with his innocent face and "why me" attitude. His attempts to keep a kite in the air, to win a baseball game, and the ever-present struggle to talk to that little red-headed girl remind everyone of some awkward time in their childhood.

Jennifer Owens, who plays Lucy, is definitely "the biggest queen of them all," as she sings to the audience. A junior at Ayden-Grifton High School, Miss Owens gives the role her bratty best. Only when she conducts her crabby survey, does the audience see that Lucy just wants to be liked, to be one of the crowd.

Linus, Lucy's little brother, is played by Mike McDermott, an Ayden-Grifton junior. McDermott, who played "Og" in the Ayden Theater Workshop production of "Finnian's Rainbow," has some fine moments as the philosophical young boy, who upstages Lucy with a "little fast action and some smooth talking." Linus' blanket shields him from a hard cruel world, and McDermott plays the character with this thought in mind.

Al Boswell, who's performed in several area productions in both Ayden and Grifton, fits well in his role as Schroeder, Beethoven's biggest fan. Unflappable, Schroeder is able to elude Lucy's connivings, while keeping his own peace of mind.

Peppermint Patty, played by Kathryn Dixon, is a goodnatured little girl, able to blend in well with the more vocal characters. Miss Dixon, who's performed in every Ayden Theater Workshop production, shows her experience in her performance as the little tomboy.

There's an old vaudeville joke about "the dog gets all the best lines," which fits Mitchell Riggs' portrayal as Snoopy. "Supper-time," one of the show's best songs, is given the flourish it needs with Mitchell's inspired dance around the stage. Mitchell, an eighth grader, shows experience beyond his years with his performance.

Musical director Barbara Plummer, pianist Janipat Worthington, and percussionist Russell Rhodes have done a fine job with the show's songs. All the songs, while simple in melody, are sung and performed with zest.

Two more performances, one Saturday afternoon at 3, and the other Saturday night at 8, are left for the public's viewing enjoyment. For $1 dollar admission, one can't beat the entertainment value of the Ayden Theater Workshop's performance of "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown." A cooperative effort of the Pitt County Community Schools Program, the Ayden Recreation Department, and a grant from the North Carolina Arts Council, Ayden Theater Workshop strives to give a first-class, quality performance, and succeeds.

Cashier Shot

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 22-year-old man was killed Thursday by robbers during his third night on the job at an all-night convenience store, police said.

James Perry Ebron, of Belhaven, was found at a Stop-N-Go convenience store by a customer about 2 a.m., police said. He had been shot once in the head. Ebron was still alive when found but was pronounced dead at Beaufort Memorial Hospital. An autopsy will be performed.

Capt. Harry J. Stokes of the Washington Police Department said it was not known how many robbers were involved or what kind of gun was used. The amount of money missing was not disclosed, but Rupert Tart, Stop-N-Go supervisor, said "it wasn't worth talking about."

Stokes said, "We don't have much to go on. There were absolutely no witnesses. Hopefully, we'll come up with something."

Death Wish In A Killer's File

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Joseph Giarratano was convicted of two murders. He was sure he would kill himself or someone else if put behind bars for life. So he wrote to the judge and asked for death.

Two days later on Aug. 17 — the letter unread — Norfolk Circuit Court Judge Thomas McNamara sentenced Giarratano to die in the electric chair.

"Sooner or later, there would be trouble. Someone will kill me or I them, and prison would not help me. If anything, it would make me worse," Giarratano said in his articulate and neatly written letter.

"I do not believe I can live a good life in society now or 20 years from now," he said.

Giarratano was convicted of murdering 35-year-old Barbara Kline and her 15-year-old daughter Michelle last January in their Norfolk apartment.

Michelle was raped and strangled in her bed. Her mother was stabbed to death with a kitchen knife when she returned home.

"The crime I committed I know was beyond excusable," wrote Giarratano, a 22-year-old fisherman.

"I sincerely hope the death penalty is given to me. It is the only right thing to do," he said.

He saw the electric chair, he wrote, as a way to "end my pain."

His defense lawyer, Albert Alberi, however, said Giarratano, now on Virginia's death row waiting for the automatic appeal to Virginia Supreme Court of his conviction, has changed his mind several times about his desire to die.

"Right now, he wants to appeal. He is such an unusual person," Alberi said.

Giarratano swore in his letter he would take the secret of his motive for the slayings to the grave.

The judge said he opened the letter because he thought it might contain an urgent request, but read only "the first few lines" and stopped before he reached the death request. He asked the prosecutor and defense lawyer to read the letter, he said, but did not read it himself.

Then he ordered the letter sealed and placed in the defendant's file. He allowed it to be opened Thursday at the request of the Norfolk Ledger-Star.

He confessed to the killings to the psychiatrists and to police in Norfolk and in Florida, where he surrendered. He gave different versions of the killings in every confession. In the one Judge McNamara said he believed, Giarratano said he raped the teen-age girl when she refused to have sex with him and killed her when she refused to stop screaming. He said he killed the mother when she returned home to keep her from talking. In a statement delivered in his chambers the day of sentencing, McNamara said he received a letter the previous day. He said, he already had decided to impose the death penalty.

1,200-Mile Trip To Fight Back In Life

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — Bob E. Young says his decision to drive 1,200 miles to fight a $37 traffic ticket stems from his desire to fight back in life just once.

The 54-year-old locksmith from Waterloo says it will cost him $300 to make the trip to North Carolina to fight the ticket.

"I really can't afford it, but along the line in life, we keep getting bugged by all sorts of things. At some point, at least once in a lifetime, one should just stand up to it. At least you'd get the thrill of knowing what it's like," Young said.

He says he got the ticket Aug. 13 when he was stopped by a North Carolina state trooper for driving 70 miles an hour in a 55 mile an hour zone.

Young admits he was driving 70 but says he still should be found innocent because all the other cars on Interstate 85 were going much faster.

"I've always figured that traffic laws were for one purpose — to protect the safety of drivers and their passengers. If I had slowed down to 55, it would have endangered all the others who were driving 70," he said.

Young, whose court appearance is Monday, said he will sleep in his car to cut costs of the trip, but he says if he's found guilty he'll spend another $300 to drive down to appeal the case.

Banks Raising Prime Rates

NEW YORK (AP) — Citibank raised its prime lending rate today to a record 13½ percent.

The increase by the nation's second largest bank was promptly matched by Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York, and other banks were expected to join in the increase.

The increase was the seventh boost for the rate in the last two months. The rate, charged by banks to their most credit-worthy corporate customers, was at 11¾ percent in August and has risen rapidly since then.

The Federal Reserve has been pushing up short-term interest rates in recent weeks in an effort to slow inflation, which has been galloping along at an annual rate of more than 13 percent, as measured by the consumer price index.

Set Record In Farm Receipts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Cash receipts from farm marketings in North Carolina during 1978 reached a record total of just under $3.24 billion, according to figures released by the N. C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Dr. R. C. Wells, specialist in charge of economics and business for the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, said relatively favorable prices for most crops and livestock, and higher acreage and yields in most cases, helped push the cash farm receipts to the new high.

The $3.24 billion figure represents an increase of $616 million — 23 percent — over receipts for 1977. Severe drought hurt crop production that year and some major commodities were bringing low prices.

Until last year, 1976 had held the record with total cash farm receipts of $2.83 billion. This figure was exceeded last year by $414 million, or 14.6 percent.

Some highlights of the 1978 production year included a tobacco crop which sold for $1.1 billion, marking the first time any state has produced a billion dollar leaf crop.

Also last year, a record soybean crop of 37 million bushels brought producers $179 million. North Carolina passed California as the No. 2 turkey producing state in the nation as marketing receipts reached $139 million.

Wells said hogs and pigs emerged as the third largest source of farm income, bringing $305 million. Poultry and eggs, the second ranking source of farm income, climbed to $693 million last year, up 13 percent from the previous year.

Cash receipts from marketings of cattle and calves also rose, climbing from $63 million in 1977 to $117 million last year. Declines were noted in wheat, cotton, Irish potatoes and apples.

Wells noted that the increase in cash farm receipts has been offset to a considerable extent by higher production costs.

Another Record In Gold

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold cracked the $400-ounce level for the first time in history in Hong Kong today and neared the $400 mark in Europe.

But the battered dollar gained moderately on foreign currency exchanges.

Gold, which has soared an astounding $74 a troy ounce since Sept. 1, touched a peak of $400.20 during morning trading in Hong Kong before settling back to close at $396.25. After the Hong Kong market's close, gold moved up to a record $399 an ounce in London following the morning "fixing" price of $397 set by the city's big five bullion dealers. The price was up from $394 the night before and topped the previous London high of $395.50 at the Thursday afternoon fixing.

In Zurich, bullion sold for $398 at noon after touching a record $398.50 in late morning. Thursday's closing price, the previous Zurich high, was $395.50.

In Paris, where the bullion price is inflated by a government tax, gold topped $400 for the first time, reaching $401.28 at the morning fixing. In Frankfurt, dealers fixed the price at $398.53.

After taking a beating on world money markets Thursday, the dollar was firmer this morning, with dealers reporting heavy support from the West German central bank. End-of-month settling of accounts, a technical factor in foreign exchange dealing, was also cited.

In Tokyo, the dollar gained slightly to close at 223.45 Japanese yen, up from Thursday's 222.75. A dealer said, "It's not that the dollar is strong. The yen is even weaker than the dollar."

Although the Federal Reserve said Thursday that the nation's basic money supply measure had fallen $1 billion in the latest reporting week, perhaps an indication that the Fed's credit-tightening measures were working, several major banks — including second-ranked Citibank — today boosted their prime lending rates by a quarter-point to a record 13 1/2 percent.

Louisiana Land & Exploration was the NYSE's most-active issue at noon, off 1/4 at 44 1/2. The Hunt family denied rumors that it sought to buy the diversified resources firm.

Big Board volume came to 14.11 million shares in the first two hours of trading, compared to 14.82 million in the same period of the previous session.

Among issues on the NYSE's most-active list, Pan Am was up 1/2 to 7 1/2. Westinghouse was off 3/4 to 20 3/4. Curtiss-Wright rose 1/4 to 20. Mobil lost 1/2 to 52. Asarco was down 3/4 to 30 1/4 and Exxon went up 1/8 to 59 1/2.

Argue Terms Of Pay Boost Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House delegation packed with pay raise supporters is taking on a Senate delegation of uncertain persuasion in what appears on paper to be the biggest mismatch of the year.

At stake is a 5.5 percent pay raise for congressmen and senators — a proposal that would add $3,200 a year to their current salaries of $57,500.

No matter which way the conference goes, more than 22,000 top-level bureaucrats and federal judges appeared assured of a pay hike.

Both the House and Senate bills contained money for a 5.5 percent hike for bureaucrats and judges making at least $47,500 a year.

Quick congressional action was necessary because the bill to which the pay provisions were attached provides emergency money to keep the government operating after Monday.

All 10 House negotiators voted with the majority Tuesday when the House passed on a 208-203 vote the bill containing the pay hike.

In contrast, it was impossible to determine just how the Senate delegation lined up, although two of its negotiators previously indicated they might support a pay hike.

The Senate avoided a vote on the pay issue by not including it in the bill which it passed on a 76-11 vote Thursday. This maneuver avoided putting any senator on record as supporting or opposing a hike and left the decision up to the conference committee.

Bucs, VMI Renew Rivalry

Split End Vern Davenport

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University has won the last four games against VMI, and has lost only once in seven previous meetings with the Keydets, but past history has taught the Pirates to be wary of the former Southern Conference foe.

Saturday night, these two teams hook up again, with a 7 p.m. kickoff set for Ficklen Stadium. East Carolina will be trying to break a three-game losing streak, its longest since 1971, while VMI comes in with a 2-1 record.

East Carolina opened with a 31-6 win over Western Carolina, but has since dropped close contests to N.C. State, Duke and Wake Forest of the Atlantic Coast Conference. VMI opened with a 7-3 win over William & Mary, then beat Richmond, 17-7, before losing to ACC member Virginia, 19-0, last week.

VMI's defense has been one of its mainstays for far this year. Through the air, the Keydets have allowed but 73.7 yards a game, 14th best in the country. Overall, they are allowing 237.7 a contest.

"They play a tough, physical game," ECU aide Henry Trevathan said. "They'll be well prepared, too, and catching us at the end of a three-game losing stand."

Trevathan pointed out that in the first three games, VMI has allowed only one touchdown on defense. They have given up three altogether, two of them on kick returns. The rest of the scoring has been through field goals.

"They are a typical VMI team on defense. They run a 5-2 and shift it to make it a guessing game," Trevathan said. "They have a senior unit, with only one sophomore and one junior starting. They rely on their excellent scheme and their techniques to beat you."

Middle guard Jeff Morgan, 6-1, 225, is rated by Trevathan as one of the top defensive players, along with free safety Walt Bellamy, 6-0, 194.

"They are conservative, with adequate speed, but they get the job done," he added.

Turning to the offense, ECU assistant Cary Godette said that the Keydets are physical on that side of the line also.

"They have two solid tailbacks in Jeff Washington (5-10, 183) and Floyd Allen. They don't have great speed, but have real good quickness. They are not fancy, but just line up and run it right at you."

If there is a problem for the Keydets it is that they have an inexperienced quarterback in senior Larry Hupertz. However, sophomore Frank Brown saw a lot of action last week, and could become a factor against the Pirates.

Allen is the top rusher with 191 yards, while Washington has rushed for 158. Fullback Butch Hostetter is the only other runner with more than 100 yards, with 145.

Hupertz, in his passing, has hit 11 of 29 for 84 yards, but has had three intercepted.

Godette pointed out that VMI has had troubles with its defensive kicking game, having had one kickoff and one punt returned for touchdowns. But when they go on the offense with the specialty game, VMI is a good team. Robert Savage has a 13.0 punt return average, while Washington has averaged 43.0 yards per kickoff return.

And field goal kicker Craig Jones is one of the nation's best, hitting three of five this year. His two misses have both been from over 40 yards, and one was from over 50.

"Back in 1976, when we had an outstanding team," head coach Pat Dye recalled, "they had us struggling to win (17-3). In 1977, they outplayed us the whole night and lost 14-13. Last year, with less than a minute to go we were ahead 12-6 and they are still in the game." The Pirates scored in the closing seconds of that game for a 19-6 victory.

"VMI is a well-coached team, and is going to be fully prepared for us. If we're not ready too, then we'll be in trouble," Dye added.

The Pirates will be led by quarterback Leander Green, who has rushed for 114 yards and hit 28 of 67 passes for 371 yards with four picked off. His total offense of 458 is tops on the team.

But when it comes to carrying the ball, Anthony Collins is tops. With 411 yards and a 102.7 average, Collins ranks 23rd in the country in rushing, and is seventh in all-purpose rushing with 162.0 per game.

Fullback Theodore Sutton is second to Collins with 245 yards, followed by Sam Harrell with 148.

Green's chief targets have been Vern Davenport with ten catches and Billy Ray Washington with seven.

The Pirates are rushing for 281 yards a game, while allowing 169.5. They are passing for 96.3, while giving up 163.5. VMI's offensive figures show 165.7 yards a game rushing and 30.3 passing.

Following this game, the Pirates take a week off prior to facing The Citadel on October 13 for Homecoming.

More Records For Rampants

Sophomores Harry Williams, who finished first with a time of 15:11, and Kenny Smith, who finished second with a time of 15:30, both broke the old course record at Northeastern.

In third was Vincent Murphy, 16:45, and in fourth was Chip Little, 16:47, both of whom are Rose sophomores.

Rounding out the top ten were Keith Morhard of Northeastern

Davenport Still Has Not Reached His Goal

Cards Pose Problem In Pittsburgh Drive

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In the closing seconds of last Saturday night's game, former Ayden-Grifton star Vern Davenport, now a senior at East Carolina, came in to attempt what many would have called an impossibility—a 54-yard field goal.

Davenport's attempt did fall short, but it wasn't for lack of effort or ability.

"I was awfully tired by then," he said. "And I had hurt my side getting hit on a pass reception earlier. But I had faith that I could do it. I've kicked that far in practice, in fact, I did it before the game."

"I just hope I get another chance," he added.

The 6-3, 200-pounder from Grifton, came to East Carolina following a successful high school career, as a walk-on. And like many others of his kind, he earned a grant before long.

"It was tough, though. There were times I felt like quitting. But I've never quit on anything I've done. I really came because I thought that I could kick. The only reason I went out for wide receiver was because I thought that by playing two positions I'd have a better chance to make the team," he said.

Currently, after four games, Davenport is the leading target for quarterback Leander Green, picking up ten for 140 yards in the split end position.

Last year, he played behind speedster Terry Gallaher and didn't get much playing time. But this year's he's getting just a lot of it as a starter.

If Davenport has any liabilities, it's in his speed. The standard saying is that "Vern's speed is deceptive. He's slower than he looks."

But, in Vern's point of view, it could be an asset.

"The opposition has been so worried about Billy Ray Washington's speed at tight end that they've been double-covering him, and that's helped me to get so open. I guess they just figure his speed is too great to leave unguarded. Next year, after he's gone, I don't know what kind of year I'll have. It could be terrible."

Although listed as a senior, Davenport still has a year remaining, should he choose to exercise it. "I really haven't made up my mind yet," he said of the future.

Davenport said he had originally thought of going to North Carolina, but when he saw that they had signed a kicker, he changed his mind.

"Kicking is what I really like. I really want to kick a field goal for East Carolina. That's my one goal—to kick that field goal."

Willie McCovey made four hits in his first major-league game for the San Francisco Giants in 1959.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Pirates' magic number is still four, and it's not so magic anymore.

"I think we'll bounce back. We have to," Phil Garner said

Thursday after Pittsburgh was beaten 9-5 by the St. Louis Cardinals, trimming the Pirates' lead to one game in the National League East.

The Montreal Expos, crushed 10-1 here Wednesday night in the biggest Pirate win of the season, could have moved back into a tie for first with a Thursday night sweep of a double-header in Atlanta. But the twin-bill was rained out.

Meanwhile, it rained St. Louis basehits, 17 of them, at Three Rivers Stadium as the Cardinals clinched third place with their makeup game victory.

"This meant something to us. You have some dignity, you want to do well," said Cardinal catcher Ted Simmons. "We didn't come in here to lose and get it over with."

Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner shuttled an assortment of pitchers, starters and relievers, to the mound.

He did it because of injuries and because he didn't want to disrupt his starting rotation for three weekend games here with the Chicago Cubs, a series which ends Pittsburgh's regular season.

Starter Dave Roberts was followed by John Candelaria, who has an ailing rib cage, and Don Robinson, who has a sore shoulder. Then came Dock Ellis, Kent Tekulve and Enrique Romo.

"We saw everybody and we hit everybody except Dock Ellis," said Simmons. "That's the way it goes some times."

George Hendrick led the Cardinals with five hits in five at-bats, including a solo homer. Tony Scott had four hits.

Division Races May Be Over, But The Heroics Still Go On

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The division races may be over in the American League, but not the late-inning heroics.

"Everybody likes to be the hero once in a while," said Jim Morrison of Chicago, who got his chance Thursday night. Morrison belted a two-run homer in the 10th inning to give the White Sox a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"It was just my turn," added Morrison. "It happens to all of us every now and then."

It also happened to Oscar Gamble, Carlton Fisk and Buck Martinez.

Gamble came up as a pinch-hitter with two-out in the ninth inning and smacked a three-run homer, his fifth home run in five days, to give the New York Yankees a 5-2 decision over the Cleveland Indians.

Fisk, leading off the ninth inning, drilled a 3-1 pitch from Tom Buskey into the screen atop the left-field wall at Fenway Park to give the Boston Red Sox a 6-5 triumph over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Martinez singled home Dick Davis in the 11th inning to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 7-6 decision over the Seattle Mariners.

In the only other American League game, the Texas Rangers trimmed the Oakland A's 4-3.

White Sox 4, Twins 2

It was Morrison who scored on Mike Marshall's balk to win the game for Chicago Wednesday night, and Morrison who did most of the damage again Thursday as the White Sox beat the Twins for the fifth straight time and completed a three-game series sweep.

Yanks 5, Indians 2

New York trailed 2-1 going into the ninth but tied the score on a single by George Scott, walks to Reggie Jackson and Juan Beniquez and a sacrifice fly by Roy White. Gamble followed with his 19th home run of the season, into the right-center field bleachers.

Ex-Yankee Cliff Johnson's run-scoring double in the ninth inning had put the Indians in front.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 5

Fisk had two singles in the game prior to his winning homer.

Toronto had gone ahead 5-3 with four runs in the eighth, including a two-run homer by Rick Bosetti, but Boston tied it in the bottom of the eighth on a two-run homer by Fred Lynn, his 39th of the season.

Brewers 7, Mariners 6

Seattle took a 6-4 run by scoring three runs in the fourth inning and three more in the fifth, but Milwaukee tied the game on Paul Molitor's two-run double in the bottom of the fifth. That was all the scoring till the 11th, when Martinez got his game-winning hit off Byron McLaughlin to clinch second place in the AL East for Milwaukee.

Rangers 4, A's 3

Jim Sundberg's RBI-single capped a three-run sixth inning for the Rangers and gained the victory for Larry McCall, 1-0, who was making his first start for the Rangers.

Joe Wallis hit a two-run homer for the A's while Richie Zisk hit a solo shot for Texas.

This is the second week of our "mayorial" race, allowing the three candidates running for mayor of Greenville to get their chance to see how good they can do with predictions.

This week's guest is Millie McGrath, while next week we will have the final candidate, Elizabeth Savage.

Last week's guest, Don McGlohon posted a fine 9-2 record, which may press the ladies to beat. But we will see.

Currently, Rick Scoppe of the sports department, still holds the lead with a 27-8 record. He's comfortably ahead of second place Tom Baines, who posts a 24-11 mark, while Joe Jenkins, the defending champ is next at 23-12. This writer, our guests and Etha Allen find ourselves deadlocked for fourth with 22-13 records.

In our high school predictions, we came over with a 4-1 week last time out, which brings our record to 16-8 on the year. This is a busy week, with six games on the slate, along with the Rose High School contest.

In the county, North Pitt visits Farmville Central, Greene Central is at Ayden-Grifton, and Conley at Southern Nash. Elsewhere, Ahoskie is at Roanoke, Bath is at Jamesville, and Roanoke Rapids will be at Williamston.

Farmville Central's Jaguars are roaring now, and North Pitt is still trying to recover from internal problems on the team. Unless Farmville is looking somewhere else, the outcome could only be a Jaguar victory.

Greene Central's visit to Ayden-Grifton could, however, prompt fireworks. The Chargers are tied, along with Southern Nash, for the league lead with Farmville, while Greene Central has been struggling. This will be the chance for the Charger team to show whether it has championship potential or not. This is a tough one to choose, but A-G has the momentum, and we'll go with them.

Conley travels to hot Southern Nash in another game that could tell a lot. The Vikings are coming off a nice win over North Lenoir, but the Firebirds pack a little more whallop. This will test the Vikes' strength, and that of the Firebirds, too. We'll go with Southern in this one.

In the other area games, we'll pick Ahoskie over Roanoke; Jamesville over Bath, and Williamston over Roanoke Rapids.

Turning to the panel, the two games of local interest of course are Rose and East Carolina.

The Rampants will be venturing into Division I play for the first time to meet Northern Nash. This is a critical game for the Rampants, even though it's the first league contest of the year. Rose needs to win to uphold its claim as a contender for the title this year. Our panel likes the way the Rampant claim looks, and goes with Rose solidly, 6-0.

East Carolina, after three straight losses on the road, returns home to face always tough VMI. The Keydets always give the Pirates trouble, and this year will probably prove no different. Our panel believes in keeping the faith, however, and goes with the Pirates. It's not a solid vote, however, only 5-1.

Our other concensus picks include: Georgia Tech over William & Mary; North Carolina over Army; Appalachian over The Citadel; Georgia over South Carolina; Texas over Missouri; Virginia over Duke; Maryland over Kentucky; N.C. State over Wake Forest; Notre Dame over Michigan State; and Southern Mississippi over Mississippi.

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Big Andy Bean has had his difficulties in finding a driver to replace the club he shattered a couple of months ago.

Right now, it bothers him not a bit.

"I can do without a driver if I can keep on shooting 64s," Bean grinned after his magnificent, 6-under-par effort, one shot off the course record, had staked him to a 2-shot lead Thursday in the first round of the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

And, almost incredibly on the vast, sprawling length of the famed Firestone Country Club course — at 7,180 yards and only a par 70, one of the longest courses the touring pros ever see — Bean did it with his driver in the bag.

He used a 3-wood — or less — off the tee on all but four holes. He used the driver only on the two par-5 holes, the 469-yard sixth and the first.

"I put it in a fairway bunker on the first and that's when the driver went back in the bag," Bean said. He said he'd shattered the driver during a practice round at the PGA national championship and hasn't been able to find "a replacement that I'm really confident with."

"But I'm very, very confident with the 3-wood, and I'm really not sacrificing that much," said the man who ranks among the game's hardest hitters. "I was hitting it about 250 yards today, and I'm very, very confident with the 3-wood in my hands. To score on this golf course, it's very important to get the ball in the fairway, and that's what I was doing."

He also chipped in once, didn't make a bogey and birdied the last three holes to open up a lead over J.C. Snead and Australian Graham Marsh, tied for second at 66.

Tom Kite, Lee Trevino and Lon Hinkle were another stroke behind at 67, while Tom Watson, Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson were at 68.

"I'm pleased with the score," said Watson, a 5-time winner this season and a heavy favorite for the $100,000 first prize here. "I didn't make many mistakes. Any time you shoot under 70 on Firestone, you have to be pleased with it."

Howard Twitty, U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin, Masters titleholder Fuzzy Zoeller and Bill Rogers shot 69s, placing 12th of the elite, international field of 38 under par.

It stayed at 6-0 until the third period, when the Squires scored their only time, on a 15-yard pass. Their kicked point-after hit the cross-bar and bounced across giving them the eventual win.

Two other Rose touchdowns were called back because of penalties.

The loss left Rose with an 0-1 league record and a 3-1 overall mark.

They play host to Rocky Mount next Thursday.

LITTLEFIELD — Greene Central's junior varsity football team roared to a 21-8 victory over Ayden-Grifton last night, taking advantage of Charger Colt errors.

The Baby Rams scored twice in the second period on A-G mistakes. The first came on a 21-yard interception return, and the other came on a 10-yard run, following a Charger fumble. The other Ram score came in the final period on a 21-yard run.

Ayden-Grifton's only score came in the final period, on a 10-yard pass from Jesse Stewart to Art Rouse. Stewart passed to Tyrone Gay for the PAT.

Now 1-1-1, Ayden-Grifton will play host to North Pitt next Thursday.

SLEEPING BEAUTY — When Walt Disney released "Sleeping Beauty" 20 years ago, it bothered some followers of the art. The characters were not all lovable, comedy was scant, and some people didn't leave the theater with the warm feeling associated with Disney cartoons, such as "Bambi". (AP Laser-photo, Copyright 1958, Walt Disney Prods.)

Hope To Vindicate The Art In A Disney Movie

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — When "Sleeping Beauty" was released 20 years ago, it was greeted with perplexity by the followers of the art of Walt Disney.

The animated feature was impressive artistically, they conceded, but was too, well, different from previous Disney classics. The characters were not all that lovable, the comedy was scant. Moviegoers weren't left with the warm feeling that followed most Disney cartoons.

Theater receipts reflected the public's disappointment. The 1959 wide-screen release collected $6.2 million in rentals from the United States and Canada, unimpressive considering the film's $6 million cost. A 1970 reissue in conventional 35mm size provided only $3.8 million.

The Disney forces hope that "Sleeping Beauty" will vindicate itself this fall. It is being released in 750 theaters, 50 of them in the 70mm, four-track-stereo form of the original.

"I think the picture may prove itself, just as 'Fantasia' did after 20 years," commented Wolfgang Reitherman, who has been working in Disney animation since "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

"Young adults are appreciative of good filmmaking today. They have experts' eyes and can spot cheap, phony effects on television or in movies. Today's discriminating audience will recognize the artistry and effort that went into 'Sleeping Beauty.'"

Woolie Reitherman is one of the legendary "nine old men," Disney animators who arrived at the studio in the booming 1930s and created the enduring Disney features. Reitherman is the last of the nine to remain active in production.

He recalled the history of "Sleeping Beauty," which required six years to complete. "I think that Walt, having made 'Snow White' and 'Cinderella,' wanted a different kind of picture. In my opinion, he had tried to do something different with 'Fantasia' by the use of art, and by doing so, he made it turn out a big cut above the 'cartoon.' In his search for something different for 'Sleeping Beauty' he hit upon the idea of making use of the 'Sleeping Beauty Ballet' music by Tchaikovsky."

To Discuss Bardot Critical Of Client Role Sexual Revolution

Sandra D. Stokes, Coordinator of Partial Hospitalization at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p. m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCN-Radio.

Stokes will talk about services for clients who require transition from full-time hospitalization and those needing treatment to prevent full-time institutionalization. According to Stokes, individual goal oriented activities, supportive group therapy, leisure time activities, medication checks, and group activities are offered by the Partial Hospitalization staff.

Stokes will discuss, also, a new venture for clients. The Phoenix Club for interested clients and former clients of the Center, will meet for the first time Wednesday, Oct. 3, from 7 to 8 p. m. in the Partial Hospitalization Activity Area. There will be regularly scheduled meetings each Monday evening thereafter.

"The purpose of this club is to provide an opportunity for social involvement and activity in a non-therapeutic environment in conjunction with the Mental Health Association," she explained. Persons desiring more information about the Phoenix Club may call Stokes at 752-7151, Ext. 48.

Still Attracted To Cary Grant

NEW YORK (AP) — When a woman pressed herself against Cary Grant and told him how wonderful he looked, he smiled, shook her hand, and said: "You must need glasses."

The 75-year-old actor is no longer making movies, but he proved Thursday that his drawing power is as strong as ever when he appeared at a Fifth Avenue department store to promote a perfume.

Grant, tanned and trim in a grey suit, was introducing Faberge's new $90-an-ounce fragrance, Partage, but the 100 or so admirers appeared more interested in gawking than buying.

Grant said he now spends his time on the boards of Faberge and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He said he has no intention of making another movie, but added with a smile: "You think it can be arranged?"

PARIS (AP) — Brigitte Bardot, the sex kitten of the '60s, turned 45 today with an admission that "it's better to be old than dead" and a blast at the sexual revolution she helped to launch when she first appeared nude in a film nearly a quarter-century ago.

"It's true I helped liberalize morals," Miss Bardot said in a two-hour French radio interview broadcast Thursday on the eve of her birthday.

"I was one of the first to appear nude in a scene. But it was in the script, and it was natural...Today, it has gone too far. I'm not a prude, but all this showing of human flesh on the beaches isn't beautiful."

Miss Bardot, who starred in her last film, "The Woman Grabber," in 1973, said she was not concerned by her advancing age.

"After all, it's better to be old than dead," she said.

"What's important is to do the things you want to do, without saying 'I'm too old,'" she said. "Age, after all, is part of life like everything else."

She said she planned a quiet birthday celebration Saturday at her Mediterranean home at St. Tropez, where she has lived for the past five years with sculptor Morozlav Brozeck.

Miss Bardot devotes much of her time today to promoting a line of sunglasses and suntan lotion that bear the name of her villa, La Madrague. She also is writing her memoirs, contributing time and money to the protection of endangered animals and providing financial and moral support for lonely elderly women.

A 'Teddy' Song Makes Scene

NEW YORK (AP) — It was bound to happen — a song named "Teddy" that could easily be taken as a presidential hype for Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"Teddy," as sung by Teresa Brewer, starts: "Teddy, Teddy, I will follow you. Lead the way and we will see it through." It ends: "My favorite guy...If you say you're ready to fly, Teddy, you'll be No. 1."

Kennedy has been sounding like a candidate for several weeks now, but has not formally announced his intentions.

Flair Added To Rockford Files

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ah, yes, he's back. Street tough and parlor charming, the lovable knight-errant of Malibu Beach: James Rockford, private eye.

The return of "The Rockford Files" to NBC may be the most welcome event of the new TV season; certainly, it's the best thing to happen to Friday night (on television, anyway). James Garner had wanted to pack it in after last season, but NBC, which could ill afford the loss of class, talked Garner into a sixth season.

This season probably really will be "Rockford's" last, and NBC is giving the show the attention it deserves. Lauren Bacall makes a guest appearance later this season, and tonight's premiere features Mariette Hartley, Garner's "wife" on those snappy camera commercials.

Garner and Hartley transude charisma, and they work it like a couple of classy cons.

In tonight's show, Rockford — he of the good intentions and bad luck — is faced with liquidation because an unfriendly neighbor has won a hefty settlement from him after an auto accident.

Miss Hartley plays a court-appointed receiver, who's there to make sure Rockford pays off. Of course, she falls for Rockford and gets involved in a typical Rockford caper, involving a loony bin, gold and the nasty neighbor who sued him.

Along to prove that Rockford's choice of companions is worse than his luck is Angel, the cowardly con who'd sell his pal Jimmy in a minute to save his own skin, half a minute for a buck.

And Noah Beery is back as that wonderful old innocent, Rocky, who copes with his son's risky doings by worrying about breakfast.

So, Friday Night Pizza and "Rockford" Society, you've got another year of happy routine.

Vision Of Future Library Use Unfolded At Symposium Here

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Intriguing visions on the use of libraries in the near future were unfolded on Thursday as Frederick G. Kilgour outlined in brief form a "significant aspect of new library technology, the marriage of technology and communications" being pioneered in today's library sciences.

Kilgour, president and executive director of OCLC, Inc., is one of six keynote speakers in Greenville for the second annual symposium of East Carolina University's Friends of the Library which opened yesterday and continues today.

OCLC, an acronym which Kilgour says was chosen as a convenient short title, denotes a major organization based in Columbus, Ohio, one pioneering in updating the science of cataloging and making readily available to the using public the burgeoning resources of printed information.

Equating the basics of OCLC system with the mechanics of Edison's light bulb, Kilgour said the computer equates to the generator, the telephone lines to the conductor, and the terminal (or library itself) equates to the electric lamp.

"In the immediate future," Kilgour said, "we can expect new things in new ways." An example he cited is that of videotext, "a system pioneered largely by the British Post Office, which is also being put into use by other European countries."

A simplified explanation of the way in which the British system, known as Presstel, works is that a person dials a telephone which is hooked up to a computer. An acoustic coupler links this to a TV set, which is equipped with a screen. The desired information is projected on the screen, selected from Presstel's 176,000 pages of information.

"This type of on-line remote cataloging system is one that OCLC is exploring with vigor," Kilgour commented. "It is a home delivery service. We have a proposal to run an experiment for an on-line catalogue at the Columbus public library. In addition, we have a computerized encyclopedia available."

Kilgour added this is "the first time OCLC has been involved in textual transmissions." As the prospect for videotext grows, Kilgour said it "will be immediate in its impact. As the engineering becomes more radical, it will have more impact on libraries and library use."

"For the past 18 months there have been so many developments, so many dramatic ones coming so rapidly that it's overpowering. There's too many alternatives, but we will have to pick the right answers."

The primary responsibility of all those faced with decisions on library cataloging, and other library services, Kilgour remarked, "is in making choices to achieve four objectives."

Objectives enumerated by Kilgour are:

- To improve the economic viability of libraries;
- To increase the availability of information resources to those who use libraries;
- To make resources available when and where needed; and
- To re-personalize libraries to emphasize humanization and personalization of library activities.

Kilgour noted that "I hope by the 1990s, with remote access to information, librarians can brag about how few people have to come to their libraries."

Other speakers at the two day symposium are Millicent D. Abell of San Diego, California; Edward G. Holley of UNC-Chapel Hill; David Kaser of Indiana University, Bloomington, Indiana; Beverly P. Lynch, of the University of Illinois, Chicago; and Barbara Evans Markuson of the Indiana University.

Helms Afraid Nukes In Cuba

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Some of the same sources that tipped Senate members to the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba also say there may be nuclear-armed MIG-23s and submarines there, Sen. Jesse Helms said this week in an interview with The Winston-Salem Journal.

Helms, R-N.C., said he has asked the director of the Central Intelligence Agency to give "some (yes) or (no) answers" in a letter he sent last week asking about Soviet nuclear weapons in Cuba, the newspaper reported Wednesday.

He also said he plans to ask the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is a member, to ask CIA director Stansfield Turner to testify.

The Soviets agreed in 1962 after the missile crisis not to station offensive weapons on the island. Tom Reston, a State Department spokesman, said that the department had no evidence of nuclear arms being in Cuba.

Helms told a reporter for the newspaper's Washington bureau that his information comes from several of the same sources that warned Senate members in July of the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba.

"As you will recall," Helms wrote Turner, "the administration denied the validity of this information at that time ... Predicted on the additional information, I have equal concerns" in other areas.

The United States, he wrote, "has never firmly established that all the Soviet ballistic missiles were, in fact removed from Cuba." Is the U.S. "absolutely certain that the MIG-23s based in Cuba are not nuclear delivery capable" and if they are not, how easily could they be converted, Helms asked.

Helms said his sources believe that the answers to some of his questions are "yes," the newspaper reported.

"I think the Foreign Relations Committee ought to be made privy to unequivocal answers to all of the questions," Helms told The Journal.

Commission To Meet Monday

The Pitt County Sediment and Erosion Control Commission will meet Monday night at 7:30 in the county manager's office at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of a sediment and erosion control play for Huntingridge Subdivision, and consideration of a procedural amendment which would allow notices of ordinance violations to be sent certified mail rather than registered mail.

Camp Camelot Draws Girls Who Seek A Summer Of Weight-Loss

By NAOMI KAUFMAN
Associated Press Writer
WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) —

The young girls' massive hips swiveled as tinny Arabic music blared from a small tape recorder.

"Come on girls, move like this," the belly-dance instructor said, circling her own slim hips.

Watching intently, the girls tried to approximate her motions.

The girls range from pleasingly plump to grossly obese, and the belly-dance class was no idle pastime. It was part of their quest to lose weight, lots of it, over the next few weeks.

The class was part of Camp Camelot, one of dozens of weight-loss camps that have sprung up around the country in the past few years. This summer, 77 girls, most of them in their teens, gathered at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, one of six sites where Camelot operates each summer.

"Seven weeks can shift a girl into a complete new gear," said Ben Feldman, who along with his wife, Linda, runs the Wilmington branch. The two are teachers in the Bronx during the school year.

The girls come from around the country, but most at the Wilmington camp were from the South. The camp started in early July and ended late last month with the girls' total weight loss running in the hundreds of pounds. During the first week alone, the campers lost a total of 360 pounds.

"I wanted to surprise my friends," said one of the girls of her reason for coming to the camp. Her pretty smile was masked by plump cheeks.

When asked what her reason was for coming, another replied simply, "Boys."

Most of the girls said they learned of Camelot through magazine ads or from friends.

The camp operates on a principle of support in numbers — and pounds.

"These are girls who can come here and put on a pair of shorts and feel a lot more confident," Feldman said. "They can be comfortable participating in activities they wouldn't take part in otherwise."

"It's a re-education process," said Mrs. Feldman.

Seven weeks can also shift a girl's, or her parents', pocket-book into a complete new gear. Along with discipline, weight loss at Camelot takes money.

The cost for the full seven-week program is $1,795, plus transportation and $100 canteen money. Four weeks costs $1,250.

For the price, the girls get a daily diet of 1,200 calories, geared to real-world foods, the Feldmans say. They learn how to fit foods such as hamburgers into their diets once they get home.

They also get almost constant exercise, something few can have once they return home. That way, the Feldmans say, they don't have time to feel hungry.

The morning starts out with jogging for some, then calisthenics for all. After breakfast — typically fruit juice, cereal and skim milk — it's on to the real work. The girls play tennis, swim, dance, go to the beach and walk, walk, walk.

"We try to design as many activities as possible that will keep them moving," Mrs. Feldman said.

The regimen appears to work. The average weight loss is 30 pounds, and many appear to have lost even more because of the trimming the almost constant exercise gives them.

Some of the campers are back for a second summer. One, a 14-year-old from Greensboro, dropped from 155 pounds to 135 pounds last year and came back this summer at 128 pounds to try to lose another 15.

The girls also get nutrition and grooming lessons and a splurge at the end of the summer — not ice cream sodas, but a shopping trip to buy new clothes. "You should see their faces," Mrs. Feldman said.

Declarer led a diamond, and no matter what West elected to do, the defenders' trump trick had vanished.

Dumbovich played the hand with great skill, but East had two chances to break up the coup. On the third and fourth rounds of clubs, East could have sluffed diamonds while retaining all of his hearts, which would have led to a different end position. Or, when the last club was led from the table, East could have ruffed with the jack, which would have prevented declarer from picking up West's trumps.

The "Devil's Coup" is one of the rarest plays in bridge. Suddenly, however, it seems to be cropping up all over the place. We reported one a short while ago. Here's another from Hungary's match against Britain in the recent European Championships.

Both teams reached four spades on this hand. The British declarer played the hand routinely after a diamond lead and a heart shift, and lost a trick in each suit. The result seemed normal, but watch what happened when Miklos Dumbovich was at the helm.

Here, too, the lead was a diamond, won by the ace, and the shift was to a heart. Declarer ducked and the king won. West cashed the ace of clubs and then reverted to hearts, and the defenders sat back to wait for their trump trick. For all we know, they are still waiting.

Declarer won the heart in dummy and cashed the king-queen of clubs. East discarded a heart on the second club and declarer parted with the heart ace. Declarer ruffed a

Byrd Says Salt Is in Very Deep Trouble

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The SALT II treaty is in deeper trouble than anyone thought possible weeks ago and it may take help from the Soviet Union to save it.

"I'm not saying it looks rosy," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd this week. "But I'm not saying the treaty is ready for an obituary yet."

What has become increasingly likely is that the arms control agreement will end up in cold storage.

The biggest obstacle holding up the Senate's ratification of SALT is the Soviet combat brigade in Cuba and the unwillingness of Moscow to make any gesture that might lower the emotional level of the debate.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, addressing the United Nations on Tuesday, dismissed U.S. concerns by saying "this propaganda is totally without foundation and is indeed based on falsehoods."

Gromyko's speech was viewed on Capitol Hill as yet another example of Moscow's lack of understanding of U.S. domestic politics.

It gave strength to those who argue that the treaty ought to be shelved until the troops issue is settled and possibly until after the 1980 presidential election.

But what could prove equally damaging to the prospects for SALT is the way the administration handled the disclosure of the Cuban situation and the perception on Capitol Hill that it was yet another example of President Carter's lack of understanding of congressional politics.

What may have been buried by subsequent developments is the fact that the first public hint something was awry in Cuba came from allegations by Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Stone's charges that there were Soviet combat troops in Cuba prompted a closed-door briefing for the committee by Defense Secretary Harold Brown.

After that briefing, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the committee chairman, and Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, the senior Republican, issued a statement that they had been assured by Brown that apart from a military group that had been advising Cuban forces for 15 years, "our intelligence does not warrant the conclusion that there are any other significant military forces in Cuba."

That was on July 27. Soon afterward, Stone released a letter from Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance making similar claims.

A month later, the roof fell in when the administration said it had received new information that a Soviet combat brigade indeed was in Cuba.

President Carter continues to promise a satisfactory resolution of the situation.

But unless the mood in the Senate changes, anything short of withdrawal of the Soviet combat troops will leave the prospects for approval of SALT severely undermined.

State Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr., D-Wake, filed a suit to stop the commission from authorizing the tunnel.

The tunnel had been recommended by Ballard, McKim and Sawyer, the Wilmington architects who designed the $8.5-million legislative office building to be built across Lane Street from the Legislative Building.

The state advisory budget commission reversed its earlier decision Thursday and voted without dissent to drop the two controversial plans.

The commission's original approval of the $452,000 tunnel stirred up a storm of protest. Money quietly had been included in the state budget for the tunnel although the Legislature never directly voted on the issue. Gov. Jim Hunt publicly had opposed the tunnel.

The group voted to reconsider the issue, and almost unanimous opposition was voiced at a public hearing earlier this month.

"It's obvious there was a great deal of sentiment by legislators opposing it," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, who initially backed the tunnel plans. "We just changed our minds."

THE GREENVILLE HOME BUILDERS
ASSOCIATION

SUPPLEMENT TO THE DAILY REFLECTOR

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

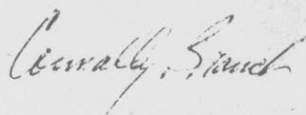

Welcome to the fifth annual Parade of Homes sponsored by the Greenville Home Builders Association.

Because of your interest and enthusiasm we have a statewide parade this weekend which should be our best yet. I am proud to extend to you and your families a cordial invitation from all our members to visit and explore these outstanding homes on parade.

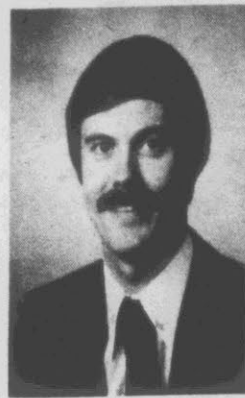

Economists have said the best inflation hedge a family should make is buying a home, and what better investment than a new home from local craftsmen to fit your individual needs and tastes. We are fortunate to be in an economic environment that rewards sound investment in real estate. Our broad based economy predicates steady growth that enables us protection of our home investment. Consider a new home this weekend or in the near future; it might very well be the best move you ever made.

I hope you will visit all the homes in the Parade this weekend. Our members take pride in their work and can be identified by the NAHB seal. They subscribe to the code of ethics of the National Association of Home Builders of which we are a member.

I sincerely wish you an enjoyable parade tour.

NORTH CAROLINA HOME BUILDERS ASSOCIATION-PRESIDENT ELECT

MARK ELLIS TIPTON

The Greenville Home Builders Association is proud of Mark Tipton and his accomplishments and we congratulate him on his election to PRESIDENT OF The North Carolina Home Builders Association.

CONTEMPORARY STYLE

The Evans Company of Greenville, Inc. has been a home builder, land developer, and REALTOR in the Greenville and Pitt County area for many years. The company has been involved in developing many of Greenville's finest subdivisions such as: Oakmont, Forest Hills, Brook Valley, and Greenbrier. Currently under development are: Tucker Estates, Singletree, and North River Estates. David A. Evans, Jr. is president of the company; Kenneth Lilley, secretary and manager; Max Pollard, construction superintendent; Delphia Barrington, secretary; Faye Bowen and Winnie Evans, REALTORS. Mr. Evans is currently president of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS, and is former president of the Greenville Home Builders Association.

This lovely home is built for the young sophisticate who needs a new home for less than $49,000. Our energy efficient entry of approximately 1,300 square feet featuring three bedrooms, two full baths, a great room with a fireplace, air conditioning, range, dishwasher, disposal, and contemporary styling is the answer. While the price is low, this custom home is built to the same quality specifications as larger, more expensive models, featuring amenities usually not found in homes of this price. This home would likewise be ideal for an older couple, who wish to step down to a smaller, more energy efficient newer home.

HOW TO FIND OUT YOURSELF IF WINDOW IMPROVEMENT WILL PAY

You suspect your windows are a major cause of heating and cooling energy waste. But, how can you tell how much you're wasting? How much of this might be conserved by adding storm windows? Or by installing new windows?

A new window energy use survey, devised by Season-All Industries of Indiana, Pa., identifies Energy Use Index (E.U.I.) numbers for more than 200 existing and energy improved window conditions.

It also identifies possible condensation situations you can expect from various improvement options.

With these numbers, it's easy to calculate the approximate percentage of energy efficiency improvement that is possible with different window energy conservation measures.

For example, non-weather-stripped, single glass, double-hung (operate up and down) wood windows could have an E.U.I. of something like 125.

If these windows were fitted with good storm windows, the E.U.I. might reduce to about 75, which is 60% of the 125, or a 40% improvement.

If the old windows were replaced with new "thermalized" windows, the E.U.I. might be as low as 50. This is a 60% improvement.

Knowing the window improvement, you can estimate the reduction this could make in overall heating fuel and cooling power consumption.

Existing windows in average condition probably account for about 15% of the space comfort conditioning costs in an average home. A 40% window improvement therefore, would save 40% of this 15% (or 6%) of the total bills.

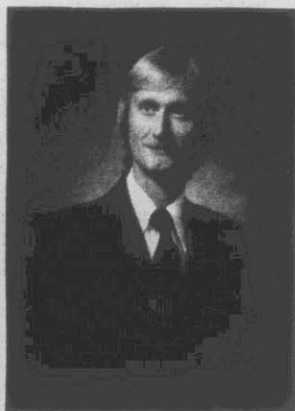

By dividing the cost of window modification by the annual estimated energy and maintenance savings, you can find the number of years it should take for your savings to repay your investment.

Generally, a window energy improvement investment is a good investment. If your payback period is twenty years, your investment is earning 5% a year.

A ten-year payback means you are earning 10% a year on your investment. And you keep on earning for as long as your own your home.

RANCH HOME WITH MANY CONVENIENCES

Donnie Spain, a Greenville native, is a licensed Building Contractor and member of the Home Builders Association who has been exposed to the building business since he was five years old, having worked with his father, a local building contractor, from a child up. After graduating from Rose High School, Donnie attended college in Georgia and returned to Greenville to live. His speciality is single family dwellings and he strives to please the buyer in quality and workmanship.

Efficient, practical, energy-saving, and convenient are just a few words that could be used to describe this quality built home located at 105 Ripley Road in the Club Pines Subdivision. The story and a half home utilizes every possible foot to the advantage of the homeowner, as there is a minium of wasted space.

The house has three bedrooms, three full baths, great room, office, formal dining room, breakfast nook, kitchen, utility room, play room, front and back foyer, double garage, deck, and lots of storage space.

The simplicity of the large sunken great room with cathedral ceiling is complimented by the unique diagonal patterned fireplace.

The formal dining room has a dark stained floor laid at 45 degree angle to emphasize the beauty of the oak flooring.

The kitchen features a dishwasher, garbage disposal, Dacor stove with built-in grill and rotisserie, and self-cleaning oven, a work island and bar combination, and custom built cabinets.

The breakfast area is completely surrounded by windows and opens onto a spacious deck.

The large utility room offers washer-dryer hookups, built-in ironing board, and floor to ceiling pantry.

The master bedroom has an adjoining dressing area, bath and oversize walk-in closet with built-in shelves. The other two bedrooms also features large walk-in closets.

The office has built-in cabinets and desk and is located off the back foyer for privacy.

A game room with built-in bookshelves, a bath and three large storage areas are located upstairs.

Energy saving features include thermopane windows, insulated doors, and the E-300 insulation package which includes R-30 ceilings and R-15 walls and floors, and the house is heated with one of the most efficient and cleanest heating systems on the market, a hot water boiler.

For further information contact Donnie Spain at 756-8283.

U.S. HOUSING AND CONSTRUCTION OUTLOOK

With strong emphasis on the timely subject of energy, the recent NAHB/NCHI Residential Construction Forecast Conference at the National Housing Center took on a slightly different slant from previous conferences.

Clark Bullock, Department of Energy, said that more emphasis should be put on energy conservation by homeowners by providing an incentive for homeowners to practice conservation.

Spiraling energy costs have added about $400 to the cost of each new house built this year, Ralph Johnson, president of the NAHB Research Foundation, estimated.

The average U.S. family spends approximately 10 percent of total income on energy, compared with 3.5 percent in 1972, according to Colin Carter, a Chase Manhattan vice president.

The expected 1979 housing decline was reinforced by the panelists, with general consensus being about 1.7 million starts for the year; about 70 percent single family and townhouse.

The brightest forecast was put forth by former home builder Jay Janis, now undersecretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Janis is expecting starts to range from 1,650,000 to 1.8 million, with 1,750,000 being the most likely figure.

THE FARMHOUSE

Elegant lines of distinction are the hallmark of homes constructed under the supervision of Jim Rice, builder, developer, and general contractor of Rice Construction Company, Inc. Residential and commercial building are the specialists of the firm with an emphasis on total coordination between the client, builder, structure, and site.

Nestled on a wooded lot in Club Pines, this charming farmhouse blends beautifully with its surroundings.

Hardwood floors in the formal areas are complimented by lush green carpeting throughout the remainder of the house.

French doors in the dining room and family room, which also has a fireplace, open onto a deck which runs the full length of the house.

A custom designed kitchen and a half bath complete the downstairs.

The upstairs, with three bedrooms and two baths has the advantage of having the laundry area where it is most convenient. This is truly a house designed for convenience, comfort, and charm.

WALLCOVERINGS CELEBRATE COLOR!

Wallcoverings offer an excellent solution to color questions in decorating, suggests the Wallcovering Information Bureau. If you are unsure of the colors to use in a room, take a cue from the hues used in a favorite multi-colored wallcovering. It can be any style - traditional, contemporary, or nostalgic - or in any design from striped to floral or geometric.

Collections are constantly updated to include new colors that reflect fashion trends in home decorating. Professional artists and designers have put their talent into choosing colors that work well together.

This spring, you will find earthtones reminiscent of natural materials - wood, bamboo, canvas - and soft metallics such as pewter and bronze. Rich tones in red, navy, and russet, watercolor pastels, and softer, dusty colors also will abound.

To assure a successful color choice, carry a swatch of upholstery and carpet fabric with you for perfect color matching without guessing.

The Wallcovering Information Bureau advises to eliminate unwanted surprises, remember to check the wallcovering colors with your swatches in several types of light - natural daylight, incandescent and fluorescent - whichever type of light dominates in the room you are decorating, the Bureau recommends.

Let the function of the room and the traffic guide you in your selection of materials. You may choose from strippable, peelable, pretrimmed, pre-pasted, scrubable and washable wallcoverings.

To determine how a wallcovering will look on your wall, the Wallcovering Information Bureau offers these tips:

- * Prop the wallcovering book open and stand six to ten feet away from the sample.

- * Imagine how the design will look throughout the room.

- * Look at the photographs of room settings to get an idea of how the wallcovering looks in "real life" and note clever decorating ideas you might wish to use.

- * Ask the store manager to loan the wallcovering book to you for a day or two or obtain a sample from the manufacturer.

Decorating with wallcoverings offers an infinite number of choices. To help you begin, you may write for a free color selector and room analysis chart. Address your request to: Wallcovering Information Bureau, Department S79, 66 Morris Avenue, Springfield NJ 07081

NATURE'S GIFT

Landscaping to develop a "microclimate" in and around a house saves money on utility bills as well as saving energy.

Trees, shrubs, evergreens, and other green plantings help reduce temperatures in summer and make for pleasant summer enjoyment.

SPACE AND UNIQUENESS

Bowser Construction Company, Inc. is a leader in quality-constructed energy efficient homes. Although Bowser Construction Company has been operating for just over one year, Merle Bowser, President, has been building homes and apartments for over eight years with one of Richmond, Virginia's leading home builders. Mr. Bowser's vast experience gives him an insight into consumers desires and needs in today's housing market. With this in mind Bowser Construction Company has built an exciting two story home on Hearthside Drive.

The kitchen is specifically designed for efficiency but yet gives plenty of cabinet and counter top space, including an area with a built-in desk. The spacious eating nook has a large window overlooking the heavily treed yard. Adjoining the kitchen at the entrance out to the two car garage is a utility room for the washer-dryer that includes more cabinet storage. The sunken great room is certainly great! Measuring 15x26 it affords plenty of room for entertaining. An open look is created with the adjoining dining room by separating this area with a rustic railing instead of the traditional wall with door opening. French doors lead from the dining room to a concrete patio enclosed by a split rail cedar fence. Completing the downstairs layout is a spacious foyer with a centrally located 1/2 bath. Going upstairs the hallway is plenty wide for moving furniture. The rustic railing surrounding the stairwell adds to the openness of the area.

Included are four bedrooms with three of the bedrooms being above average size. The master bedroom is approximately 19 feet long which affords plenty of room for furniture. Adjoining the master bedroom is the master bath which has two vanities making convenient for a working family. The home also includes a spacious two car garage, entering from the side street, that could be easily converted to a large playroom.

There is 2106 square feet of heated area that is serviced by two GE heat pumps for maximum comfort and efficiency. The ceiling is insulated to R-30 and storm windows are included. Mr. Bowser is also concerned with consumer satisfaction. Therefore he has enrolled this home, along with all his new homes, in the Home Owners Warranty Program (H.O.W.), which gives the homeowner a ten year warranty.

If space and uniqueness is what you desire, please make this a necessary stop on your "Parade

SOLAR INDEX TELLS DAILY POTENTIAL OF ENERGY SOURCE

Local newspapers, radio and television stations in 70 cities now broadcast a daily measurement of solar heat. The "solar index" measures the amount of solar heat that could have been used on any given weekday in specific locations.

The index rating is designed to help show consumers the potential of solar as an energy source. A rating of 75, for instance, means that the sun supplied 75 percent of the heat needed to provide hot water to the average household in that locality.

The Department of Energy, which supplies the information, says that the index also helps show consumers that the sun can help provide a portion of their heating needs even on cloudy days.

Data is collected daily by National Weather Service in each area and fed into a computer system developed for DOE. The free information is now supplied to about 125 media organizations nationwide.

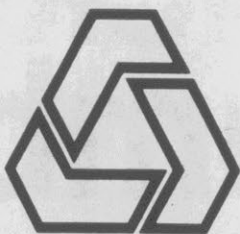

For more information and a list of participating newspapers and broadcast stations, write: Solar Group, 1424 K Street, NW, Third Floor, Washington DC 20005, Attention: Andrea Brown.

CONTEMPORARY RANCH

Bill Clark has built hundreds of homes in and around Greenville over the past eight years. Prior to entering the building business he was associated with Wachovia Mortgage for three years.

His knowledge of financing and development has created many neighborhoods of which he is proud and brought innovative ideas into the building industry. Building single and multi-family homes for speculation and custom work has proven his dedication as a professional builder. He exemplifies the highest standards in quality and workmanship.

This contemporary ranch with colonial interior appeal should arouse your imagination. With over seventeen hundred square feet of living area plus deck, it is a quality built home. The great or "Florida" room exemplifies contemporary design for convenient living. Spacious dining areas for family gatherings lead onto exterior decking visually extending the room and its use. Bedrooms are convenient with walk-in closets in the master, which also includes a separate powder room. Our kitchen comes complete with all modern appliances plus a pantry. Let's not forget the foyer opens to the great room and is very inviting - won't you come in!

HOW DO YOU KNOW WHEN IT'S TIME FOR REPAINTING?

The exteriors of most houses need repainting every five to six years. The climate, the condition of the surface, surface preparation and the quality of the paint used on a house may add or subtract a few years from this figure.

A thorough annual inspection of the outside of your house is the best way to determine if it needs repainting, says the National Paint and Coatings Association.

Annual inspections enable you to accurately judge how the paint is weathering. Start your inspection with the areas where moisture collects and those subject to heavy wear. It is in these areas that the first signs of wear usually appear. Sometimes spot painting in these areas is all your home needs.

Preparation counts

Wash any areas that need painting with soapy water, rinse, sand smooth, and repaint. Check the condition of the siding, especially at the corners of your house where moisture can get behind the siding and cause premature paint failure. If some of the siding needs to be replaced now is the time.

While you are at it, check the condition of gutters, downspouts and caulk, too. After exposure to harsh winter weather they may need cleaning, replacing or repainting. All repairs should be made before you paint.

Take time now

Overall appearance is the key to judging if a house needs a complete repainting. If the paint is faded or has weathered sufficiently over most of the surface, it is time to repaint. When the wood grain is visible through the paint, sufficient weathering has taken place for repainting.

If you repaint before the old paint has weathered enough, the paint film will become too thick and won't adhere to the house properly. A dull appearance can sometimes be improved merely by washing exterior surfaces.

Procrastinating when it's time to repaint can increase costs and labor later when you want to take on the job. When you wait, the old paint becomes so worn that you will need both a primer and topcoat. Also, it may be necessary to replace unprotected wood siding that has rotted as result of exposure to excessive moisture.

CONGRESS TO FIGHT VARIABLE MORTGAGE RATES FOR FED-BACKED THRIFTS

Congress received President Carter's proposals for "comprehensive financial reform legislation" with mixed emotions. Lawmakers, by and large, are in sympathy with the idea of allowing higher interest rates payable on savings deposits. But they remain, for the most part, bitterly opposed to the devices suggested that would assure solvency for thrifts with the higher deposit rates and the "gradual" elimination of the Regulation Q differential. Both Senate Banking Committee Chairman William Proxmire (D-Wis.) and House Banking Subcommittee Chairman Fernand St. Germain (D-R.I.) made it immediately clear they would oppose the FHLBB's order permitting federally-chartered thrifts to begin offering variable rate mortgages as of July 1. Congress also is expected to disagree on the president's proposal to allow thrifts to divert up to 10 percent of their assets to consumer (non-housing) loans.

TRADITIONAL NEW ENGLAND STYLE

The firm of Watson Associates has two licensed contractors: Dillon Watson and Etsil Gordon. Both have been involved in the construction industry for a number of years.

Etsil Gordon is one of the few women contractors in North Carolina. She is also a licensed broker and a member of the Home Builders Association. Ms. Gordon teaches a course in Basic Construction through ECU Continuing Education Department. She is actively involved in community concerns through the Pitt County Boys' Club, Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, United Fund, and Memorial Baptist Church.

As a firm, Watson Associates have built homes, townhouses, apartments, duplexes, offices, and done renovation work, as well as, land development projects. It is a young firm with plenty of experience and innovative ideas.

A Colonial Salt Box built in the traditional New England style with the additional authenticity of being finished in clapboard siding of Vermont Weatherboard. A twelve year guarantee on siding adds to this homes value and maintenance free ease. The chippendale rail on the porch carries you into the foyer with a formal livingroom on the left and a formal dining room on the right. Chair-rail and crown molding beautifully trim the entire first floor. The paneled doors in the living room open into a warm and private family area in the rear of the home. This includes a large paneled den with built-ins, fireplace, and wood box. Sliding glass doors take you to a lovely private patio. Breakfast nook that overlooks the patio leads to an efficient kitchen with quality built-in appliances. A half bath, separate utility room and many storage closets complete the first floor. At the top of the formal staircase you'll find a large master suite with three closets, bath, and dressing area. Two large bedrooms with double or walk-in closets, linen closet and full bath finish off the second floor. Two GE Weathertron Heat Pumps, heavy insulation and thermopane windows, this home is also energy efficient. A lovely New England Salt Box home and it is situated on a wooded lot in a gracious neighborhood.

SHOP WISELY FOR WINDOWS

With new home prices steadily rising and existing homes changing ownership at a rate about double that of sales of new homes, its no wonder home remodeling and modernization activity is so hectic.

Since many home improvement projects involve the replacement or installation of windows, homeowners are wise to keep energy conservation to mind when shopping for windows.

And the same care should be devoted to the selection of windows as to other factors in an energy-efficient house.

Like other energy-conservation measures such as adding wall, attic and under-floor insulation, windows should be choiced for their ability to provide insulation.

Double-pane insulating glass for example-standard in Andersen Corporation's Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors-sharply reduces expensive heat loss through the glass.

Perma-Shield windows and gliding doors also have factory-installed weatherstripping to reduce heat robbing air infiltration. In fact, this weatherstripping is twice as weathertight as accepted industry standards for allowable air infiltration.

And the sash and frame have a preservative-treated wood core that is sheathed in rigid vinyl for long-lasting low-maintenance protection.

Perma-Shield windows also are available with triple glazing for added energy conservation in areas that experience unusually harsh winters.

FARMHOUSE WITH CHARM

Located at 106 Clayborne Court in Belvedere Subdivision, this rustic farm house is full of charm. At a glance it may appear small, but not so. As you enter the foyer you are aware that this house has plenty of room for any size family.

It features on the first floor a great room with a large fireplace and a large master bedroom with its own full bath. The accent point of the first floor is the sunken kitchen with three steps that take you to the kitchen area.

An open stairway provides access to the second floor area where you will find three bedrooms and one full bath. roomy is the word as this house features four bedrooms total.

Featured on the exterior is eight inch western cedar siding that brings forth the rustic look of the old farmhouse. This house was built by Tar River Realty & Construction Company of Bethel, NC. Mr. R.J. Whitehurst, Jr. is the man to see about this house, call him today at 825-8381 or 825-3561.

MAKE THE LAUNDRY ROOM A 'LAUDABLE' HOME ASSET

Coming out from hidden nooks and basement crannies, today's modern, streamlined laundry appliances are taking their place in bright, decorative areas located conveniently for the modern, hurried-up homemaker.

Serving as an integral part of the household, the modern laundry room works in tandem with fast-paced lifestyles to meet the needs of overflowing hampers and rising demands of home laundry care.

With some 80 percent of today's fabrics falling in the machine or hand-washable categories, home laundry facilities are being positioned for easy access and are often in full view of family and friends.

With the trend toward home laundry centers coming "out of the closets" laundry specialists at McGraw-Edison Co., makers of Speed Queen Appliances, suggest these decorating tips to help homemakers win laurels for the laundry room:

- *Color coordinate in bright combinations to give the room and the chore of laundering a needed lift.

- * Store bleach, detergent, softener and other laundry aids in various size canisters covered with contact paper or glued with gaily printed fabrics.

- * Hang plants in pretty pots to bring new dimensions to the laundry room.

- * Select appliances in colors ranging from soft almond to bright harvest gold to enhance the laundry room or area. The new Speed Queen line of automatic washers and dryers is attractively designed with a jet black control panel contrasted with easy-to-read settings in warm tones of yellow and gold to blend in with any decor from traditional to modern.

- * Install shelving to hold laundry products and folded items that have been sorted into piles for each family member. Encourage children to pick up their laundry to save you steps.

- * Allow ample room for sorting and folding. What's lacking in counter space can be made up for with a small folding table that can be stored out of sight between the appliances and the wall when not in use.

- * Create a sewing area to allow you to follow the "stitch in times saves nine" principle. Keep sewing basket, thread, needles and scissors close by to quickly mend tears, darn holes, and relieve a falling hemline before clothes take the plunge.

SAY 'WELCOME' WITH FLOWERS

Starting at the front door, flowers in your home are synonymous with hospitality and a generous spirit toward welcoming friends to your home. To say nothing of the pleasure they give every member of the family.

There's nothing that says flowers should be arranged according to any formal rules. In fact, the most important consideration is that however modest or grand a bouquet, it reflects the lifestyle enjoyed at your house.

The kinds of containers can set the mood. Baskets of all kinds can be called into service for large and small arrangements that are natural and easy. Country crocks, even teapots, have lots of possibilities. And what is more glorious than a graceful arrangement of roses in a gleaming silver bowl?

Over the next few months chrysanthemums will bring their special kind of sunshine to any corner of your home. Why not put that sunny glow into your entrance hall as the first "hello."

"THE NOW, NATURAL"

Stanley Peaden is a licensed contractor & Realtor who specializes in single family (quality) dwellings. He has been in the construction business since 1972 and he is a member of Home Builders Association and is a Group 10, Inc. Realtor. Stanley is also an active member of Temple Free Will Baptist Church.

"Now," is the time to go "natural." This spacious home, custom built by Stanley Peaden, Inc. is packed with looks you will love. The interior is animated by an appropriately modern mix of style and clean lines. A home so versatile, it has succeeded in establishing a metaphor of complete design, suggesting in one approach the richness of colonial charm and the thrust of a contemporary surrounding.

As large as it is, the arrangement still has a comforting quality. In most cases, an environment must be created; however with this home, little must one do to achieve the comfort of a home well planned. Even the creative landscaping accentuates what is to come, a most attractive and "natural" setting, so planned for the active families of today.

This house is suitable for most any size family. With 2560 square feet of beautiful living, this home offers 4 bedrooms, 3 full baths, formal living and dining room with a spacious family room.

Close attention was placed on the areas that count; therm-pane windows, energy efficient fireplace (yes, even the master bedroom is accentuated by this beautiful extra), custom designed oak cabinets to co-ordinated the attractive natural oak parquet flooring throughout the majority of the downstairs, intercom with

AM/FM stereo, dual heat pumps, even the rough-ins for a central vacuum system.

Attention, lady of the house, in the kitchen you will find a Jenn-Aire range - another added extra. And to park the cars or store your "outside furniture" you have all the spare of a double garage. When it comes time to entertain or just relax you can retreat to your large wood deck.

Extra care and planning was obviously directed towards the use of fine carpets and wallcoverings. Quality workmanship is exemplified throughout.

A firm sense of control gives this home a sturdy character of its own; the character of today - "the now, natural."

WESTERN STYLES ARE NEW WESTERN FAVORITES

Whether attributable to political trends or other factors, oriental decorative motifs and shapes, always among the most enduring and favored styles for furniture and accessories, are attaining new heights of popularity.

Either adapted as the theme for furnishing a full room or as an accent, the designs are pleasing to live with, blending with almost every period and type of furnishings.

The Far Eastern love of nature, attention to detailing and classic form have inspired the unusual elegance and variety of forms exemplified by this multitude of home furnishings from exhibitors at the New York Merchandise Mart. Evident in them is the manner in which designers through the ages have reinterpreted picturesque oriental studies of flora and fauna to suit western tastes.

The gentle shapes and softly curving silhouettes of ginger jars, ceremonial tea cups and bamboo styling reflect these cultures. Colors are clear, with deep jewel tones providing depth and pastels imparting tranquility.

Manufacturers focusing on these forms now offer an enormous selection of Eastern-influences merchandise that can add their refined nature and decorative character to the home. Any of these pieces would make a pleasing addition to the mood of a room. These latest definitions of this trend can be seen in stores everywhere.

A HAMMER IS NOT JUST A HAMMER: USE IT CORRECTLY AND HANDLE WITH CARE

The hammer - one of the most common tools around the house - may also be the most abused when it comes to both safety and usage.

According to the Hand Tools Institute, much of this danger and misuse is caused by the dangerous misconception that "a hammer is a hammer," and can be used for any job around the house.

The Institute, whose members include manufacturers of hammers and other striking and struck tools, points out that the average American owns only one hammer-usually a nail or claw hammer. In actual operation this popular hammer may be used in many ways it was never intended for.

For instance, that popular nail and claw hammer is designed for driving common nails and finishing nails which are relatively soft.

The claw hammer should never be used for striking cold chisels or hammering metal. When used for the wrong purpose the nail hammer face could chip and cause eye or body injury.

HTI recommends that, in addition to the claw hammer, every home handyman also should have a light ball pein hammer and a heavy ball pein, blacksmith's or hand drilling hammer.

The heavier hammers are used for striking cold chisels and for straightening or shaping metal. The lighter ball pein can be used on punches and in light metal working operations.

Other types of hammers include riveting hammers used by machinists, tinners for driving rivets and setting hammers for various steel metal operations.

There are also chipping hammers for chipping welds, rust and paint from metal, and bricklayers' hammers for setting and cutting bricks, masonry tile and concrete blocks and for chipping mortar from bricks.

For striking blows where steel hammers would mar the tool or the surface being struck, there is the soft face hammer.

Also, there are magnetic hammers for holding and driving tacks, body and fender hammers for bumping the repair of automobile bodies, blacksmiths' or engineers' hammers, and sledges for striking wood and metal.

Additional types include stone sledges for breaking stone and spalling hammers for cutting and shaping stone and concrete. Hand drilling or mash hammers are used with cold chisels and bush hammers for roughing and chipping concrete.

In addition to selecting the proper hammer, HTI also recommends the observance of proper safety rules and precaution on the part of the user.

FLOORING SUNBURNS!

So you think that only people can get sun-burned? So can your curtains, your upholstery, your furniture, and even your floor!

But here's an easy and attractive way to add protection from the sun's destructive ultraviolet rays - hang decorative shades at the windows.

It naturally follows that they will also help cut heat loss in winter and heat gain in summer.

UNIQUE THREE STORY DESIGN

Blount & Ball Realty was formed in 1971 by W.G. Blount and Lee F. Ball. Their concept was, as it is today, to provide the most comprehensive service to clients and customers in the lines of buying, selling, or building a home. This has allowed the prospective home buyer to receive "one stop" service whether his interest lies in existing resale homes or new custom construction.

Lee Ball, in addition to supervising construction at Blount & Ball, has been very active through the years in local and state construction related organizations and committees. A charter member of the Greenville Home Builders Association, he has served on the Board of Directors and is a past President of the Association. Currently serves on the Builders Council and the Nominating Committee, and in 1978 was appointed by Governor Hunt to serve on the North Carolina Code Officials Qualifications Board. Also very active in the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS, Lee is a past President and former member of the Board of Directors of that organization and is now Chairman of the Membership Committee.

Other than his duties at Blount & Ball, Bill Blount is also President of Lynndale Development Company. He, too, is a past President and former member of the Board of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of REALTORS. A graduate of the North Carolina REALTORS Institute (G.R.I.), he recently obtained the designation of C.R.S. (Certified Residential Specialist) from the REALTORS, National Marketing Institute.

Bill holds offices and directorships of several local businesses and organizations, including Home Builders Supply Company, Eastern Lumber & Supply Company, Blount-Harvey Company, North State Savings & Loan, Branch Banking & Trust Company, and Carolina Country Day (formerly Pace Academy).

Blount & Ball, whose offices are located at 201 East Arlington Blvd, builds homes for people who appreciate quality, graciousness and beauty in design.

Blount & Ball's '79 Parade entry combines a unique and distinctive three story design with the roominess and charm of a country farmhouse. On the exterior, oil stained lap cedar boards cover the three story frame structure. "Shakewood" type extended life brown shingles blend with cedar siding to provide the classic rustic appearance.

The interior living area is comprised of 2,160 square feet. To the left of the entrance foyer is the family "gathering" room which is equipped with a floor-level masonry fireplace and a wet bar. A private study is accessible from the family room and can be used as a guest room when the need arises. To the right of the foyer lies the formal dining room with the adjoining L-shaped kitchen to the rear. The kitchen features an abundance of hand-made cabinets and plenty of work area including an island. Additional dining space is offered by the kitchen breakfast nook. A large, completely enclosed utility room with added cabinets and a centrally located powder room complete the first floor arrangement.

Going upstairs, the second floor centerpiece, namely the master bedroom, surrounds the dwellers with uncompromising space and functional amenities. Over twenty feet long, ample floor space remains after placement of traditional furniture components for a cozy sitting room. Twin double walk-in closets, a ceramic bath with dressing/vanity areas with a working masonry fireplace surrounded by picture frame mouldings make this bedroom suite unsurpassed. Remaining on the second floor are two other full size bedrooms (both with walk-in closets) and a full ceramic bath to service them.

Access to the third story is gained by an enclosed staircase originating in the second floor hallway. Plans now are for this section to remain unfinished except for flooring and electrical plumbing and climate control. Imagination though could transform this additional 432 square feet into a rumpus room, extra bedroom and bath space, or a large library, all with complete privacy.

Final details to note while touring this Parade entry include intricate crown and wall mouldings, oak hardwood flooring in formal areas, and expansive porches, both open and screened, which provide many possibilities for entertaining or relaxing.

THE PINewood

For those who appreciate the fine exterior designs of the past, and the conveniences of today, will discover in this construction, a "house with many moods." Viewing quickly, one can associate the Gothic and Victorian designs which swept from Maine to California during the 19th century. The appeal remains with the stunning high pitched roofs and intricate styling. It captures the spirit of an era of American architecture when the rein of these creations came into being.

The freedom of space is no accident. Prior to construction, plans were reviewed at great length to assure the most functional of living patterns. The home is well suited for most any family; offering four bedrooms, three and a half baths, storage and playroom areas and extras too involved to list. Its rooms are spacious, well proportioned and inviting.

Among the most interesting features is the private enclosed solarium, acting as a continuation of the living room. Double skylights accentuate the delight found in this addition.

Eclecticism reigns in this home, so rich in historical associations. And color; so carefully selected and subtly done as to escape immediate notice, still it dominates the versatile overall scheme.

Soon to be totally complete - the quality of construction can best be observed at the stages prior to its completion. We invite you to visit with us for an observation of a home you will enjoy.

It surpasses the standards set by the E-300 Energy Efficient homes. It is ideal for the large family that loves open living, as it contains 3,950 square feet of heated space with a 400 square foot garage. Dual heat pumps provide the heating and cooling for this home and it is placed on a corner wooded lot in a very attractive location. THE SPARKLING NEWS ABOUT WATER FILTERS

A water softener produces water that's best for laundering, dishwashing, and bathing. For water that's best for drinking or cooking, you need a water filter.

Over 99 percent of the water produced by a community waterworks is used for such things as sprinkling lawns, fighting fires, and flushing away wastes. Less than 1 percent is used for drinking or cooking.

That's why it doesn't make economic sense for your waterworks to treat all water to drinking water quality, and why filtering is best done in the home.

An activated carbon filter is everyone's choice for removing tastes and odors, including chlorine. You'll save money by combining it with a "pre-filter." The pre-filter removes sediment that otherwise might quickly clog the carbon.

A carbon filter that attaches to a faucet has limited capacity. Better is a larger unit, like the Culligan Super-Gard. It's installed under the sink, or in an adjacent space, and offers efficiency, durability and all the water you need. You can even hook it up to supply your automatic ice maker.

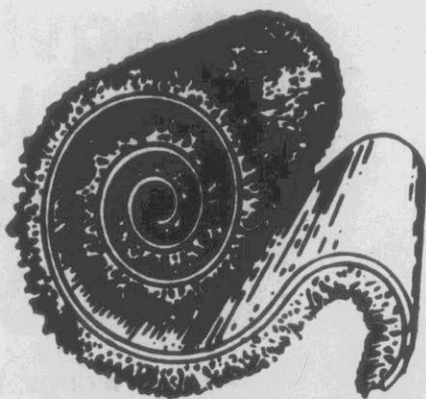

U.S. Government and state authorities recommend carbon filtration, but few community systems are equipped to provide it. If you want this water improvement you must provide it yourself.

SEAL UP YOUR HOUSE TO CUT LEAKAGE OF MONEY!

A hole in your house is like a hole in your pocket: it leaks money!

Federal government figures say that as much as 55 per cent of the normal heating load on your house comes from 'air infiltration.'

That's heat lost through open doors and other leaks. Some 15 per cent to 30 per cent of the load is heat lost through cracks around closed doors and windows.

many things create cracks around doors, windows and other openings: wood shrinks, putty cracks, foundations settle, seals wear, doors warp.

The end result is usually a little crack here, a crack there.

Put them all together and the cracks in an average house equal a hole half the size of a card table! You can throw a lot of money through a hole that size!

And, of course, it works both ways: wasted heat in winter is the same as lost cooling in summer when you have air conditioning.

Stop leaks

The most cost-effective way to cut loss of heating and cooling energy around doors and windows is to caulk and install professional weatherseals.

Homeowners, for the first time, can obtain professional weatherseals from the nation's largest producer: Schlegel Corporation of Rochester, NY.

Two kinds of weatherseals do the job: "Polyflex" door seals and foam window seals. Each comes with self-adhesive backing for easy mounting.

Weatherseal for doors

Polyflex brand is a plastic strip that fits between door and jamb. Old metal weatherstripping need not be removed.

When the door is closed, it presses against the strip, creating a tight seal that is invisible when the door is closed.

Polyflex weatherseal will last for many years without shrinking, cracking, fading, or rotting.

Tax credits

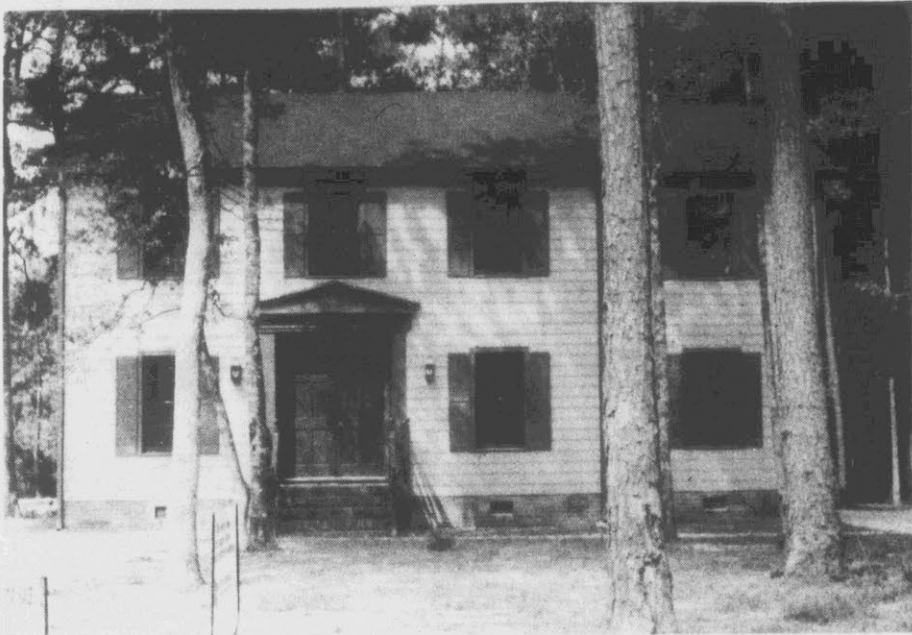

Now that President Carter's energy bill has passed, consumers can obtain income tax credits for installing weatherseals and other energy-saving measures.

Caulking or weatherseal materials qualify for tax credits when used for exterior doors and windows.

The material cost alone qualify, not labor charges if you hire someone to put it in.

The important thing about these tax credits is they are subtracted from the bottom line.

In other words Uncle Sam will give back, dollar for dollar, 15 per cent of what you pay for weatherseals and other approved measures.

INSTALLING FOAMBOARD INSIDE KEEPS VAPOR BARRIER IN, NOISE OUT

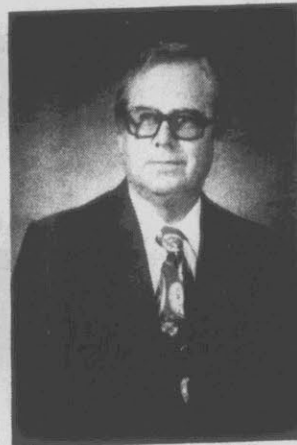

As part of its energy-saving package of special features, Northern Homes of Pennsylvania in Chambersburg is providing an unusual exterior wall construction. A layer of three-quarter-inch-thick urethane foamboard is placed on the inside faces of wall studs followed by application of conventional half-inch thick gypsum drywall board.

According to Northern Homes' President Joseph R. Carusone, the use of foamboard on the inside, along with the insulating sheathing board eliminates the "obvious disadvantage of having a vapor barrier on the outside of the wall as with standard urethane or styrene foam sheathing systems."

Carusone has found that the method also results in a reduction of the home's interior noise level.

FIBER GLASS INSULATION FOR YEAR-ROUND SAVINGS

With all that has been said about energy crisis and with homeowners experiencing the reality of rising fuel costs, may homeowners are taking the necessary steps to insulate their homes as well as they possibly can. Still, there are some who put off doing what they know to be important.

Possibly many homeowners feel that insulation proves itself most effective in keeping a house warm in winter, thereby helping control heating bills. They should realize that insulation is equally important in hot weather.

Proper insulation will cut the energy used for air conditioning. Insulation helps keeps homes consistently comfortable and this comfort factor also applies to homes that are not air conditioned.

"When it comes to insulation, most people are aware of the fact that the preferred material is fiber glass," says Joseph D. Murphy, General Merchandise Manager of Johns-Manville.

"The reason for this is that fiber glass insulation, exclusive of facings, is fire resistant, impervious to moisture and rot and, once it is properly installed, will not 'settle' as do some insulations."

Fiber glass insulation is available in batts or blankets (meaning pre-cut or in rolls) and is easily installed in accessible open areas either by a contractor or do-it-yourselfer.

The attic area is a prime target for re-insulation in many older homes. If there is no insulation in the attic, fiber glass faced with kraft paper or foil is recommended. If there is some insulation already in the attic, unfaced batts or rolls should be laid on top of the existing insulation.

"The contractor or building supply dealer can tell you what you need to do the job," continues Murphy. "Insulation comes in various thicknesses from R-11 to R-30. It is important to buy insulation by R-value, not by inches. The higher the R-value, the better the insulation."

"One of the important facts about fiber glass batts and rolls," concludes Johns-Manville's Murphy, "is that these products are quality-controlled at the factory. This gives them advantages over blowing wool or foam type insulations. And, when properly installed, they will work for the homeowner both summer and winter virtually indefinitely."

Can You Afford A New Home?

The average income family has been priced out of the new home market by rising costs and inflationary factors? Not so at all, according to Walter S. Pollard, Jr., president of Pollard Construction Company, Inc.

Pollard a recognized housing expert, speaks with the authority of a man who has spent more than seventeen years studying and working in all phases of the homebuilding business - from member of the national, state, and local HBA to Director of Region II North Carolina Parade Of Homes.

"The so called affordability gap for the average income homebuyer is a myth," Pollard said.

As a case in point, Pollard cites figures compiled from statistics supplied by the National Association Of Home Builders and the Census Bureau. "When great, great grandfather bought his home in 1895, the average price of a new home was $4,500, but his average yearly income was only 4462. The ratio of the price of his home to his income was almost 10 per cent. We're selling a completely modern, three bedroom home in the Greenville area for $40,080, or a ratio price to current median income of $13,500, at approximately 3 per cent. What this all boils down to, is that today's middle income homebuyer can afford his new luxury home much better than his great, great grandfather could afford his four walls and a roof."

Pollard said that over the last 10 years, the average price of all new homes in this country have risen 100.4 per cent. And, in the same period of time, average income as risen 101.8 per cent, which bears out his contention that income is keeping pace with the inflationary factors that have a bearing on the price of a new home.

One of the side benefits to the current inflationary factor's effect on the housing market is that escalating costs have brought about a revolutionary improvement in construction techniques. To keep the cost per square foot within reason, new and better technology, along with new and better materials have been developed to utilize every square inch of space.

"With our energy situation becoming more critical every day," Pollard said, "nobody can afford a loosely put together home that leaks air and wastes fuel. That's one of the reasons Pollard Construction uses the most efficient insulation available. The windows and doors, all of the framing members are cut to such exact tolerances that you just don't get any air leaks."

Pollard contends that a modern home will be a much better home than great, great grandfather ever dreamed would be possible. For one thing, it will be a better insulated home. Because of the critical energy situation, the homebuilding industry has had to respond with better building methods to prevent air leaks, and the addition of full thick insulation in floors, walls and ceilings has become a standard construction feature for any quality builder.

"You see," Pollard explained, "it's no longer only original price and the mortgage payments that represent the major cost concerns of families. Energy costs have also come to be of great importance, and as they continue to climb, we can see them becoming the single most expensive element in the family budget. A new, well-insulated home, can literally save thousands of dollars on heating and cooling costs, and when you take that savings into consideration, it's much more economical to buy a new home than to continue to maintain an older, less energy-efficient home."

The homebuilding industry has come of age in the past few years, and great, great grandfather would be amazed if he could witness the technology at work in the construction of a modern home.

As Pollard put it, "For affordability, sound construction, availability of financing and energy-conserving insulation factors that make dollars and sense - the good ole days of home ownership are now - right now."

UNIQUE CONTEMPORARY DESIGN ENERGY EFFICIENT HOME

207 Joseph Street

This 1979 entry in the Greenville Parade of Homes for P & B Enterprises of Greenville is a unique contemporary home, custom built for Dr. and Mrs. John D. Longhill. The home was designed by Architect James C. Posey from Greensboro, North Carolina.

Located on a large, sloping, heavily wooded lot at 207 Joseph Street in Cherry Oaks Subdivision, the home was designed to take maximum advantage of its lovely surroundings. Window placement and arrangement of decks and balconies provide the owners with an excellent view while still affording their privacy. The use of cypress planking on the exterior creates a subtle blend with the environment while providing the structure with durability and natural, wood-tone beauty.

The two-bedroom floorplan with study, encompassing approximately 2000 square feet of heated space, was designed to suit the needs of the owners. The kitchen-great room combination, with balcony playroom above, visually expands the living areas. The use of earth-tones in the carpet, quarry tile and cabinetry, along with the repetition of the Cypress planking on the interior, further create a feeling of unity of the home and its environment. The Master bedroom features a spacious bath with privacy windows above the tub area, and a large walk-in closet. The custom built cabinets throughout the house were planned by Ariane-Clark Custom Kitchens, and the light fixtures were selected from Lighting Designs.

The contemporary design and quality of materials used provided P & B Enterprises with another opportunity to demonstrate its quality workmanship. Phil Privette, President of P & B Enterprises of Greenville expresses thanks to Dr. and Mrs. Longhill for making their home available for the public to see, and takes great pride in its construction.

Lot 5 Lake Glenwood

Engineered and designed specifically for both today's and tomorrow's increasingly energy-conscious environment, this 3 bedroom 2 1/2 bath home on State Road 1728, Lake Glenwood, marries the very practical style and arrangement of the colonial Massachusetts Bay design with "State-of-the-Art" technology in insulation, construction, and mechanical systems.

Conrad Sharpe, Greenville resident, teamed with Daniel Cockran, a Washington architect, for a design which fully exploits all elements and techniques currently available for energy efficiency, while retaining the fully-livable features of its classic model. P & B Enterprises of Greenville completed the collaboration as the General Contractor.

For easy, practical living, the house arrangement features a large Great Room and dining area, plus formal tiled entryway and adjacent powder room, central utility compartment, and spacious kitchen on the first floor; the 2nd floor includes 3 bedrooms, and 2 full tub-shower baths. The master bedroom contains two closets plus a separate dressing area.

Sliding glass doors midway in the Great Room open to an expansive deck, and the home is secluded from the street on an oversize, heavily-wooded lot. The large 2-car garage features direct entry to the kitchen and utility areas.

The design won strong commendations when evaluated by Greenville Utilities Commission for the E-300 rating, since it exceeded the E-300 score requirements by almost 300 o/o, far exceeding all other designs submitted to date.

NEW FLOORING COMBINES BEAUTY OF WOOD WITH VINYL'S DURABILITY

In building or remodeling, now many of us consider the warm glow of genuine hardwood to be truly practical in today's cost-efficient home? Let's look again.

A unique concept in vinyl-bonded natural wood flooring is currently being introduced to the home installation market, after achieving widespread acceptance in some of the nation's most distinctive department stores, shopping malls, hotels, banks, restaurants, and office buildings.

GenuWood II wood flooring, under a variety of heavy foot-traffic conditions, has proven itself to be as ruggedly durable as it is beautiful. According to its manufacturer, PermaGrain Products Inc. of Media, PA., GenuWood II presents a whole new approach to modern flooring designed to answer a real need.

It offers all the advantages of conventional hardwood floors. It also means that highly desirable woods, such as walnut, cherry, and rosewood, can no be installed in the home easily, quickly, permanently, in a variety of patterns - at a reasonable cost. Often, these were previously considered impractical for flooring. However, GenuWood II will not show the wear and abrasion commonly associated with conventionally finished wood floors.

The glowing visual appeal of the floor projects from its genuine hardwood veneer. Its durability results from its unique vinyl construction.

Permanently protecting the hardwood surface is a layer of 20-mil. pure vinyl. Beneath the wood layer is a layer of core vinyl with a fiberglass screen sandwiched between. The specially designed laminated constructed protects the hardwood from direct contact with moisture from above...and below.

Not only is this wood flooring fully practical for use in the living room, dining room, hall, and bedroom, but in the playroom and kitchen as well.

For sheer toughness, dimensional stability and resistance to abrasion, it compares favorably with vinyl tile, vinyl asbestos, and wood parquet. The floor surface also offers a superior non-slip characteristic.

Because this resilient flooring is made of real wood, nature asserts its own artistry in design with each piece... varying the color, tone, and grain configuration.

It is available in squares, pickets, and plank strips to from eight different standard patterns, from the rustic "Random Plank" to the classic "Jeffersonian" parquet. The selection of luxurious wood includes oak, teak, black walnut, and English brown oak, in addition to walnut, cherry, rosewood and limed oak.

For do-it-yourselfers as well as professional installers, GenuWood II is easy to install directly on sound, smooth, and dry concrete, plywood or hardboard.

Maintenance is minimal - dust and dirt are quickly removed with damp mopping, due to the pure vinyl surface. Where a high gloss finish is desired, a good quality floor polish may be applied.

GenuWood II is available nationally at leading home centers and flooring outlets. Additional information is available from PermaGrain Products, Inc. 22 West State Street, Suite 302, Media, PA 19063.
