Carter Sees No Threat By Russians In Caribbean

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter ordered an increased U.S. military presence in the Caribbean primarily to reassure other nations in the region that they are safe from any Soviet-Cuban military threat, say senior U.S. officials.

The officials, who spoke to reporters Monday night on condition they not be named, said they still are not certain why the Soviet Union gave combat equipment and training to the 2,600-soldier brigade in Cuba.

But a top defense official said the existence of the Soviet detachment "could raise real questions in the minds of other countries in the region" about possible Soviet-Cuban intervention.

The administration had been worried that the brigade might be used against neighboring countries in Latin America, where the revolution in Nicaragua and unrest in El Salvador and elsewhere have led to heightened concern about possible Cuban intervention.

The defense official said Carter's actions are not designed to increase U.S. strength, which he said is already overwhelming in the Caribbean. "They do serve to remind people" of U.S. strength there, he said.

U.S. forces are "as a giant to an ant" when compared with the Soviet brigade, said the official. "We can deploy forces in that area that would swamp those forces."

Carter, in his speech to the nation, revealed that he has ordered:

—Stepped-up military maneuvers in the Caribbean, including stationing about 1,500 Marines to the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, temporarily as part of a reinforcement exercise.

—The creation of a new military headquarters unit in Key West, Fla.

Made up of 60 Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps personnel, the unit will be functioning within a week and could be expanded to 100 persons. On occasion, the headquarters unit will be given control of operating forces in the Caribbean area, such as a Marine battalion or a large naval task force, the official said.

Carter also announced that he will seek increased economic aid to meet "human needs," and to "ensure the ability of troubled peoples to resist social turmoil and possible Communist domination."

A senior diplomatic official said the administration would be asking for additional aid money from Congress in the "very near future."

Carter said he is ordering increased intelligence to insure that the Soviets live by their pledge — which administration officials said came at least in part from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev himself — not to change the status of their brigade or to allow it to become a threat to the United States or any other nation.

But the Carter speech did little to sway critics of the administration's foreign policy, many of whom complained that the president failed to keep his pledge to change the status quo in Cuba by negotiating withdrawal or dismantling of the brigade.

"No, we are not going to push forward with SALT until the Soviet troop question is resolved," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., one of several GOP presidential contenders who commented.

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., referring to the administration's early handling of the Cuban flap, said the president spent most of the speech "trying to deal with a self-inflicted wound."

Review Future School Plans

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Four agenda items, each involving long-range continuing action, were subjects of extensive discussions at the information meeting of the Greenville School Board Monday night.

On the matter of grouping patterns, with particular reference to elementary schools, Director of Education Charles Ross first outlined basic patterns of classes and groups within classes at the different schools.

"All homerooms in elementary schools are basically heterogeneous, composed of both sexes, different races, and all levels of abilities," Ross commented.

"In the first through third grades there are different arrangements used, depending on the preference of principals and teachers. In some instances they are self-contained, in others sub-grouping is used within self-contained classes, for example, in reading groups."

"Other schools," Ross continued, "exchange classes at the grade level, or use a variation such as having two classes of a grade exchange classes while a third class may be self-contained."

In patterns of groupings for grades four through six, Ross noted that "throughout the city, all classes in these grades exchange for language arts and math, with grouping within these classes to meet levels of achievements and abilities."

Board chairman Ed Carter expressed a belief that "more definitive data is needed on grouping so that parents could know whether or not their child has been misplaced."

Ross replied that "we have state test results, individual tests, the STAR reading program, the observation of teachers, meetings with counselors and when needed, the school psychologist in determining at what level to place a child."

"We have no definitive formula to pro-rate a child's level, but it is a joint decision by all who work with a student," Ross added.

Mrs. Nancy Middleton wanted to know "if students are locked into a program once they are assigned to it."

Ross answered this was not the case, that "all the programs are flexible."

Donovan Phillips expressed concern that being placed in a certain class "labels a child, identifies him. A child realizes what is happening to him, that he's in a smart group, a not so smart group, or a dumb group. We have to think about what this is doing to him. Once labeled dumb, he's going to be labeled that for the rest of his school career."

Phillips also wanted to know if "groups could be arranged so that a student, or a parent would not know if a child was placed in a dumb group."

Ross emphasized that working with each student "is a continuing cycle. We're always trying to get the best answer for each child's need through counseling, by working with children."

At this point Carter opted for "preparing an established criteria with a certain percentage rate that each factor should have, a definitive criteria." He enumerated what he termed known factors, tests and the STAR program, and what he termed unknown factors, teachers and counselors evaluation, then said "we should have a definitive criteria, even if it's arbitrary so that we can better determine a child's placement."

Carter added this would prevent situations where "influential parents go to the schools and bulldoze them in-

New Mid-Rise Housing Work 'On Schedule'

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Work is on schedule this month on the Housing Authority's new mid-rise housing complex for the elderly, under construction off E. Third Street.

A revision in the overall schedule has placed the housing project "in good shape" as the early construction continues, it was reported by Joe Laney, executive director.

Laney told Housing commissioners last night that things are going "quite well," with the basement columns practically finished and the contractor preparing to pour the facility's basement floor next Monday.

A new system of installing floor sections on the proposed five-story complex is expected to save a great deal of time in the project timetable, Laney pointed out.

Commissioners gave their approval to a new schedule of income limits that will apply to the eligibility of persons seeking admission to a housing development operated by the Authority.

Laney explained that the last time the income limits were changed was in April of 1978 and since that time Section Eight limits have changed to reflect inflation and cost of living increases.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has recommended that a schedule be adopted amounting to 80-90 percent of the Section Eight income limits, the executive director explained. The income limits considered last night represent some 80 percent of the Section Eight schedule.

By changing the income limit for eligibility, Laney said that the Authority is assuring that admission priority will go to citizens in the low income ranges.

Until last night's revision, a single person applying for occupancy could have an income of no more than $5,500 in order to be eligible. Under

'Dreads' Merger

Rose High teacher Anne Nelson asked for and was granted permission to comment on a non-agenda item at the information meeting of the school board Monday night.

"Ever since talk about merger of the city and county schools began," Ms. Nelson said, "I've been keeping a file of newspaper accounts on the subject."

"I dread merger," she stated, "and it seems to me nobody in the public ever gets up and say 'I'm worried about the Greenville City Schools.' Well, I for one, am worried," she said.

Ms. Nelson, a long-time teacher at Rose, added "I am not castigating or in any way putting down other schools, but we have worked hard to make Rose an exceptional school, and I don't believe I'm the only one concerned about seeing that nothing happens that would affect our achievements at Rose."

New York Turns Out For Pontiff

By HENRIETTA LEITH
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — New Yorkers cheered the arrival of Pope John Paul II today with banners flying from the Bronx to the Battery and thousands lining the streets under gray skies, many in ethnic Polish costume.

The scoreboard at Yankee Stadium was lit up with a giant "Welcome." At Shea Stadium it was "Shalom." The top of the Empire State Building was ablaze with white and yellow lights, the Vatican colors.

"I'm really amazed at the passion this event has generated," said Marife Hernandez, chief of protocol for the United States in New York.

Thousands waving banners, pennants and balloons stood behind police barricades along city streets as the pontiff landed at LaGuardia Airport in "Shepherd I," his specially marked TWA 727, and drove to the United Nations for an historic address. Mayor Edward Koch had promised a "bigger and better" reception than the pope received in his native Poland.

Mary Jo Mullally, who saw the pontiff at the beginning of his pilgrimage in her home of Dublin, flew here with a cousin to see him again.

"We shook his hand. We follow him just like people follow Elvis," she said, referring to the late rock 'n' roll star Elvis Presley.

"There are so many sinners in the world, that when you see a holy man you want as much of him as you can," said her cousin, Suzanne.

Others on hand for the welcoming ceremony, along with Mayor Koch, included Govs. Hugh Carey of New York and Brendan Byrne of New Jersey, Cardinal Terence Cooke of the New York Archdiocese and Bishops Francis J. Mugavero of the Brooklyn Diocese.

At United Nations headquarters in mid-Manhattan, diplomats had assembled impressive guest lists for two receptions and Pope John Paul's major speech to the General Assembly.

The guests ranged from Jacqueline Onassis and her daughter, Caroline Kennedy, to the presidents of Cyprus and Gabon and the prime ministers of Portugal and Mauritius.

"I can hardly wait," said Mayor Edward Koch, who intends to trail the 59-year-old pope through most of his tightly packed New York schedule.

Koch's joyful anticipation was not dampened by the cost of deploying more than 11,000 policemen — half the city force — for $2.5 million in overtime.

Police estimated 5 million people would turn out along the pope's route, whatever the weather — and rain was forecast.

That figure would rival the crowd that gathered under sunny July skies for the tall ships of the Bicentennial "Op Sail" celebration.

An estimated 70,000 persons were expected to jam into Yankee Stadium tonight as the pope celebrates Mass with Cardinal Terence Cooke, archbishop of New York, and Catholic bishops of the area.

JOGGER FRIGHT

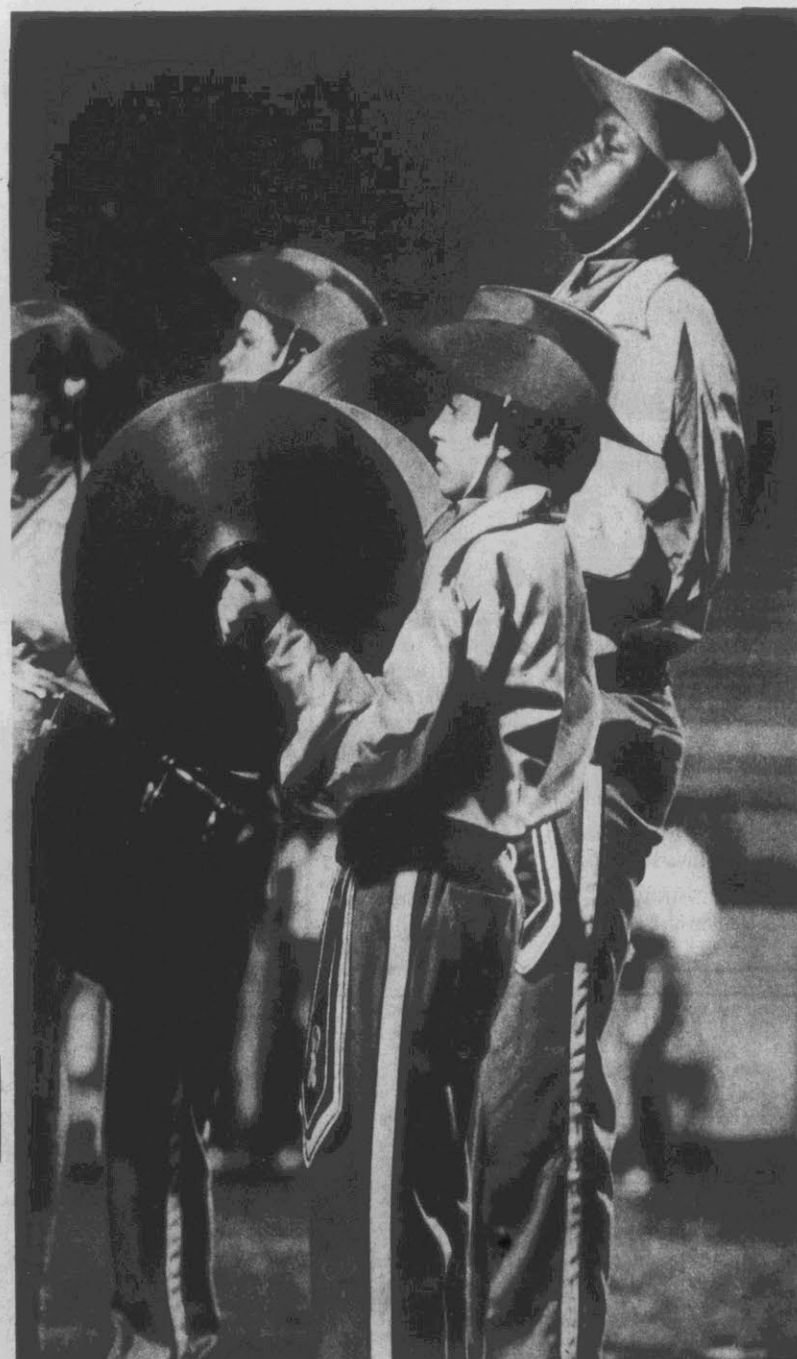

Last night I was riding down Red Banks Road, nearing the stoplight, when I almost ran over a man who was out jogging. It was about 7:30, I was meeting traffic, it was drizzling rain, and he was wearing dark trunks. I was right on top of him before I saw him and had to swerve to miss him. It scared me out of my wits. I would like to get it across to our joggers to wear clothes that show up in the dark if they run after after or near dark. M. H.

"It's a give-and-take proposition," according to Highway Patrol Sgt. R. B. Miller. Joggers, "should wear light-colored clothing and jog facing traffic, and should watch out for motor vehicles," just as drivers should watch out for them, he said.

Bob Morrison, president of the Coastal Carolina Track Club agrees. "Joggers should wear clothes that are visible in the dark. That's one thing that appears in most of the running publications... emphasis that if you do running in the dark, wear clothing that's visible, even some reflective material."

Morrison added, "any time a runner is competing for space" on a roadway, "even though he may be in the right, he still needs to take the responsibility to avoid an accident." Runners, "need to take the necessary precautions to protect themselves."

Morrison explained, "Unfortunately, the best place to run is in the streets," because "tracks are really unsuitable for long distance training." Generally track surfaces are too hard and it takes 80 times around a track for a 20-mile run, he commented.

Greenville Native's Formula For Perfection 'Up To Me'

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

William G. "Griff" Garner is a glowing success story in scholastic achievement at the age of 22, and his formula is quite simple, "it's up to you."

"It's deciding what you want to do, and then how much work you want to do to accomplish your goals," says the Greenville-born young man who made straight A's through high school here, and was graduated from East Carolina University last spring with a perfect 4.0 grade point average.

He majored in business administration with a concentration in accounting in ECU's School of Business and his career objective is to go into business management.

"It isn't all books and studying," Garner says. "I also worked part time, and found time for other activities." But in achieving scholastically, he advises other college students to set priorities on study and learning.

"It's there for you to get," he said. "It's strictly up to you."

Garner took the nationwide Certified Public Accountant (CPA) exam last May and scored highest among 1,100 candidates in the state of North Carolina. For this he has received the N.C. Association of CPA's gold medal.

In addition, of 54,000 candidates nationwide, Garner scored second in the country and will be awarded the Elijah Watts Sells silver medal at the national CPA convention Oct. 14-16 in New Orleans.

WILLIAM G. GARNER

He is only the third person in North Carolina to win a national CPA scholastic achievement medal, and only the second to rank as high.

Garner is working now as an accountant and a manager with his father's merchandising firm in Greenville but has plans to continue his education. He will apply to a prestigious graduate school of business, probably Harvard, and work toward a master's degree in business administration.

His brother, Leslie H. Garner Jr., also a Harvard grad, is a teacher and director of the Governmental Executives Institute at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. A sister, Mrs. Elaine Garner Denton, is a business education graduate of ECU and teaches at Pitt Community College in Greenville.

It will require two years of work experience in addition to the examination for the young scholar to attain Certified Public Accountant (CPA) status.

Garner, valedictorian at Rose High School, Greenville, in 1975, felt that he could achieve his scholastic goals as well at ECU's School of Business as at any school in the country. "With my high school record, I could have been admitted anywhere, but I know East Carolina and the very high caliber of its School of Business and its faculty and departments. It is all there and I needed only personal determination," he says.

He was nominated for a coveted, four-year Morehead Scholarship at UNC-Chapel Hill but opted instead for ECU.

As his college career progressed, honors came. He was named outstanding senior for 1978-79 in Phi Kappa Phi's local chapter and was the 1979 winner of the Most Outstanding Senior Award of Beta Gamma Sigma honor society in business.

"I set goals for myself," Garner says. "I feel that scholastic achievement is up to the individual. It's there if anybody wants to do it."

"You must make sacrifices, but I didn't sacrifice that much."

Bloodmobile To Visit Schools

The first of five Bloodmobile visits to high schools in Greenville and Pitt County will be held Wednesday, Oct. 3 at D. H. Conley High School.

Pitt Blood chairman Ott Alford said that the Conley visit is scheduled for 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. under a general sponsorship by the high school.

Following the Conley blood drive, Bloodmobile visits are scheduled for Nov. 1 at North Pitt High School, Dec. 10 at Farmville Central High School, Feb. 5 at Ayden-Gritton High School, and March 4 at J. H. Rose High School.

This year, according to Alford, a recognition program involving the presentation of a plaque to the school with the highest donor percentage will continue. The plaque presentation was initiated last year.

In addition, a "chicken" trophy will be presented to the school with the lowest donor percentage. Alford said that Bob Caraway, principal at Conley, is anxious to relinquish the "chicken" trophy the school received in 1978.

The trophies will be presented at the blood program's annual recognition luncheon in May.

Alford mentioned that the school visits are being held for faculty and student donations and are not open to the general public.

Senate Passes Emergency Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate passage of an emergency bill that would enable the government to pay its bills while at the same time revoking a whopping pay raise for congressmen and top bureaucrats has put vacationing House members on a hot seat.

But House officials, saying they have been assured no harm is being done the government, are standing fast by their decision that the lower body will not yield to Senate pressure to cut short its week-long recess.

There was no word on whether the House would pass the bill even when it does show up. The House wants stronger language on federal financing of abortions than is in the Senate bill.

Another irritant could be the Senate's decision Monday to rescind a 12.9 percent cost of living pay raise — which automatically went into effect at midnight Sunday — so congressmen would get nothing.

The House had wanted a 5.5 percent pay raise — an increase of $3,200 a year on the current congressional salaries of $57,500.

Only a handful of congressmen were expected to show up today for a House session scheduled earlier as a formality. No substantive business can be acted on in the 435-member House unless at least half of its members are present.

Moreover, House leaders said no business would be transacted even if enough members were present to make a quorum.

The emergency bill is needed because Congress has not funded some of the nation's biggest government agencies — including the departments of Defense; Housing and Urban Development; Health, Education and Welfare; Transportation; Agriculture; and Labor. Those agencies technically ran out of authority to fund their programs at midnight Sunday, when the new fiscal year began.

For now, the departments are getting by on money left over from the just-expired fiscal year.

Hines, a lifelong resident of Winterville, has served on the board since 1960 and is presently mayor pro tem. He has worked for the past 32 years as a mechanic in the Pitt County School Bus Garage.

Hines is a member of the Winterville F. W. B. Church, the Red Men Lodge and the Messengers' Quartet. He is married to the former Edna Adams, and has three children and six grandchildren.

Officers Installed By Civitan Club

New officers were installed and Mrs. John B. Spilman was honored at the annual Installation Banquet and Ladies Night of the Greenville Civitan Club last Thursday.

Officers installed for the 1979-80 year are: Harold Jones, president; William Troutman, president-elect; Ron Sessions, vice president; Herbert Smith, secretary; and Julian Rawls, treasurer.

The installation ceremony was conducted by Rev. Bill Hewett, chaplain, Civitan International, of New Bern.

Mrs. Spilman was honored as "Citizen of the Year," with presentation of the award made by Julian Rawls, Awards Chairman.

A native of North Carolina and a resident of Greenville since 1915, Mrs. Spilman was cited for noteworthy accomplishments which have included service as vice chairperson of Pitt County Democrats; State Democratic vice chairperson; as a Commissioner of the N. C. Unemployment Compensation Commission (now the Employment Security Commission); and as executive director of the North Carolina Mental Health Association.

Mrs. Spilman is an active member of Memorial Baptist Church, where she has previously served on the diaconate and presently is a Sunday School teacher.

She was educated at Elm Grove Academy, at Franklin Institute in Franklin, Va., and at Strayer's Business College, Baltimore, Md.

The club's outgoing president, Hugh Wease, was also recognized for his work, and received the Civitan of the Year Award.

Feels Blessed

BOSTON (AP) — Toothless, jobless, penniless and hungry, Paul Ring, who scavenges for his survival, gave thanks for the visit of Pope John Paul II.

"I was blessed," he said Monday as he rummaged through heaps of garbage left behind by the thousands who thronged the Boston Common for a papal Mass.

"Look at the good luck I've had, the wonderful food I've found," said Ring as he scooped up bags of potato chips, unopened soda cans and packets of chewing gum.

"You just don't get a day like this every day of the week," he said as a half-eaten egg salad sandwich went in the mouth of the small, shaggy dog with him.

Soaked from his brown-woolen cap to his tattered, brown shoes, Ring, 50 and a Catholic, said the pope's visit made him happy, "especially when he told the young folks to follow Christ."

"I felt good all day long. I was just so sorry it rained."

Ring said he lost his job as a messenger when his "old ticker" slowed him down. He said he lives in a $40-a-month, cold-water flat in South Boston and depends on the leftovers of others for his daily meals. His nourishment often consists of "a can of beans and cup of tea," he says, so the littered common was a windfall after the Mass.

"You wouldn't believe all the things people throw away," he said. "There's no one like the American people. They're so wasteful. They don't know there's people like us in the world."

Ordinance Adopted By Winterville Bd.

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board of Aldermen approved a citywide Fair Housing Ordinance during its Monday meeting.

A citizen participation plan was also adopted in order to satisfy the national Department of Housing and Urban Development's preapplication requirements for a community block grant. The town is presently engaged in making a pre-application for a 1980 community block grant.

The board approved the resurfacing of Gail, Rosewood and Lynn Loop Streets in the Shamrock Terrace subdivision. The board also agreed on paving Northwest Railroad Street from Depot to Tyson Street. Low bidder for the work was Barrus Construction, with a bid of $23,245.06. The board approved the bid and voted to allow Mayor Walter Dail sign the contract.

Jimmy Mills was appointed to the Winterville Recreation Commission as requested by recreation chairman Ronald Carroll. In other business, the board agreed to let the Winterville F. W. B. Church use the town facilities behind the town hall for a car wash.

Miss Tina Raye Stancill Weds Frankie R. Smith

KINSTON — Miss Tina Raye Stancill and Frankie Ray Smith were married Sunday afternoon at New Hope Baptist Church here.

The Rev. Benny Alford performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with palms, candelabra and arrangements of white and yellow daisies.

Mrs. Pat Hussey, organist, presented a program of wedding music. Lynn Harrell and Mary Sue Leggett sang "Evergreen" and "The Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Herman Stancill Jr. of Wilmington. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. C. Norman Smith of Kinston.

The bride wore her sister's wedding gown, a formal dress of white silk organza over taffeta. The gown was trimmed with appliques and borders of lace and seed pearls and featured a scoop neckline, long bouffant sleeves with lace cuffs and an empire waist gathered at the back. Her headpiece, a mantilla of bridal illusion, was trimmed in matching lace and flowed into a full train. She wore her great grandmother's pearl necklace and her mother's pearl earrings. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, white daisies and baby's breath.

Cheryl Underwood of Suffolk, Va., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Jacqueline Brown of Greenville, sister of the bride, Miss Nanny Sue Smith of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, Penny Stancill of Kinston and Patricia Lyles of Carbondale, Ill., cousins of the bride, and Mrs. Tammy Stevens of Virginia Beach, Va.

The attendants wore identical dresses of dusty Panama blue silesta. The dresses featured an empire waist, blouson bodice and open-split sleeveless design with shoulder bows. The full length skirt was accented with crystal pleats. The attendants wore matching headpieces of violet clusters with satin ribbon streamers and carried nosegays of yellow and white daisies.

The mothers of the bridal couple were remembered with white daisy corsages and grandmothers were honored with corsages of white carnations.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were C. Norman Smith Jr. of Greensboro, brother of the bridegroom, Benjamin H. Stancill of Wilmington, brother of the After wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina, the couple will reside in Kinston.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at an after-rehearsal dinner and dance Friday evening at King's Restaurant, Kinston. Invited guests included family and friends of the wedding party.

Newest Suit Fashions Are Suitable For Any Occasion

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the year of the suit, and this year's suits can take women from the executive suite to a Broadway opening and still look fresh and appropriate at nightcap time.

By investing in one or two of these new-style suits, the careful shopper can create dozens of fashion looks to carry her through the busiest day, into the most glamorous evening.

The variety of styles this season is extensive, and fashion experts at the Fiber Information Center offer some hints on what to look for before suiting up.

When shopping for a suit, think shape and versatility. Because there is such a variety of shapes, it's best to try on several different looks to find the one most flattering to your figure type.

Some of the newest suit combinations include wrapped and peplum jackets over pleated or softly gathered skirts, classic blazer styles over straight skirts with kick-pleats or slits, and waist-cropped jackets over button-front or accordion-pleated skirts.

The most important aspect of owning a suit this season is its versatility. The jackets can be worn over trousers, dresses and other skirts. The skirts can mix with other jackets or go it alone with the new rich-textured acrylic sweaters or silky shirts available in a range of easy-care fabric blends.

Norris, fifth; Mrs. Sidney Skinner and Mrs. Stuart Page, sixth.

Wednesday afternoon winners included: Mrs. Mavis Smith and Dave Proctor, first with a .637 percent game; Mrs. Lacy Harrell and Mr. J. W. H. Roberts, second; Mrs. J. S. Rhodes Jr. and Mrs. Roger Critcher Jr., third; Claude Goodman and George Martin, fourth; Mrs. J. M. Horton and Mrs. William Parvin, fifth.

Saturday afternoon winners at First Federal were:

North-South: Mrs. Harold Forbes and Mrs. J. W. H. Roberts, first with a .562 percent game; Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Lewis Newsome, second; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. William Parvin, third; Mrs. Marilyn Bongard and Bill Bowden, fourth.

East-West: Mrs. William McConnell and George Martin, first with a .615 percent game; Mrs. Effie Williams and Claude Goodman, second; Mrs. Eloise Owens and Mrs. Mavis Smith, third; Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Smiley, fourth.

Look for accessories such as belts, scarves and vests to add to your suit's versatility with a minimum expense.

If your schedule often requires you to socialize after a full day at the office, look for a fabric-blend suit to keep you looking fresh, the center suggests.

Many of the popular knitted suits will be made completely of man-made fibers in blend combinations of polyester, rayon, acrylic or nylon. These fibers offer a variety of textured looks including boucles, jersey, pointelle and rib knits. As an added plus, they're washable and retain their shape.

For after-five looks, suits take on a great new style. Look for body-hugging silhouettes with straight skirts that end in a trumpet ruffle, deep slits, or rows of swinging pleats. A polyester blend will help hold in those pleats, the information center points out.

Jackets are glamorous. They can be wrapped tightly around the waist with a gleaming belt or a luxe, glitter-spandex camisole can be worn underneath. Shoulders are padded and often accented with iridescent yarn embroidery or beading.

Fabrics are luxurious: plush rayon velvets, rich-looking, silk-like polyesters, shimmering taffetas and satins of acetate and triacetate.

Jewel tones and black are the most elegant colors to choose in this season's dazzling evening suits.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Thank goodness, kids are finally getting their feelings out in the open.

In a recent poll, teenagers admitted they were dissatisfied with their parents and would replace them if they could.

I know what you're thinking. You're probably imagining they opted for someone ridiculous and unrealistic. Not true. The boys said they would prefer a mother who looks like Cheryl Ladd or Jaclyn Smith, while the girls preferred a father who looked like Burt Reynolds.

Granted, these choices could get their minds off their bad grades (they might have to step up cold showers), but what these kids don't realize is that most of their parents started out life looking like sex symbols. Parenthood has a devastating effect on people.

I was only five years into motherhood when I won first place in a Marty Feldman look-alike contest. It has been downhill ever since.

Also unknown to teenagers is that a closet poll was conducted a few years ago among parents and these are the results:

Of two million parents polled, 97 percent said they were not happy with their children and would replace them if they could. An overwhelming number of mothers headed their list with Paul Newman, while fathers voted for the NFL.

Two percent were undecided and one percent was under sedation and unable to comment.

The main reasons for the dissatisfaction with their children were in order of irritability:

Nagging. Children always wanted to know where their parents were going and what time they would be home.

Lack of privacy. Every time a parent closed a door, a kid from the other side would yell, "What are you doing in there with the door closed?"

Criticism of their friends. Even though some of the teenagers had never met their parents' friends, they made statements like, "You hang around with her and the next thing you know you'll be going to singles bars."

Bossiness. Parents were constantly being ordered to "Pick me up after ball practice. And don't be late!" "Hang up. I have an important phone call to make." "When are you going to stop procrastinating and get to the hand-washables?"

According to the poll, teenagers even with their unhappiness with parents voted 95 percent to get married and have children.

It would serve them right.

Abby Advises: Take A Second Look

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am engaged to a guy who enjoys playing cards. He plays for money—just to make it "interesting." Personally, I don't care much for cards, but I can play a fairly decent game if I have to.

All of Larry's relatives play cards night and day. They think it's terrible that I don't go crazy over cards the way they do.

Abby, I love this guy, and I have really tried to like cards, but there is no use fooling myself. It's boring. Besides, some of Larry's "interesting" evenings have cost him more than he can afford to lose.

Now I am being told (by Larry's relatives), "If you intend to marry Larry, you had better learn to like cards."

Don't misunderstand me. I think it's all right to play once in a while. But all weekend, and every night?

LARRY'S GAL

DEAR GAL: You mention Larry's relatives, but how does Larry feel about it? Gambling can become an addiction as serious as liquor, tobacco and other undesirable habits. Take a second look at Larry just to be sure your joker isn't too wild.

DEAR ABBY: To get right to the point, my dad is having an affair. It's not just my imagination. I'm sure of it.

Dad works nights and Mom works days, and I work five days a week.

When I'm home on my day off, Dad turns the radio on real loud, takes the phone into the bathroom, closes the door and calls someone. He talks real low during these conversations.

I put my ear to the door yesterday and heard him say, "Don't worry, Honey, I will tell her, but you've got to give me more time." Then he said, "I love you, too. Goodbye."

Abby, I don't know what to do. I can't stand by and let Dad do this to Mom. If she catches him, and finds out that I knew all along, she'll hate me for not telling her. But if I tell her, Dad could deny it, and I would be the cause of a lot of trouble. So, you see, I'm stuck in the middle. Mom has always been a faithful, hardworking wife, and I will never forgive my father for being such a rat.

I'm not a stupid little kid. I'm 18. Tell me what to do, but don't use my right name or mention my town.

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: I realize that what you have learned has placed a heavy burden on you, but my advice is to say nothing. In the meantime, don't judge your father. As the French say, "To know everything is to forgive everything."

DEAR ABBY: I wish you would print this so other housewives won't get stuck the way I did.

It began with a telephone call from a lady who said, "Congratulations! You have just won a free carpet cleaning! Don't move any furniture, our men will do everything. We will be out at 6 this evening to clean your carpet like new—with absolutely no cost or obligation to you."

Well, at 6 o'clock, one man came with a vacuum cleaner and a shampoo attachment. He talked to me for two solid hours trying to sell me the vacuum cleaner. I told him I couldn't afford to buy anything, and meanwhile he didn't make one move to clean my carpet. I was home alone, and kept telling him I wasn't in the market to BUY anything, but he kept right on talking and trying to sell this thing, Abby. I finally got rid of him at ELEVEN o'clock, and I didn't get my carpet cleaned.

I was so nervous and angry by the time he left I could have screamed. Have you any suggestion besides a 7-foot watchdog and an unlisted telephone number to prevent such practices?

MRS. K. SALT LAKE CITY

DEAR MRS. K.: Yes. If anyone calls you to "congratulate" you on having "won" something, say "thank you but, I don't want anything for nothing." And don't let anyone in your home without first checking them out with the Better Business Bureau.

TABLETOPS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brighter colored merchandise with the emphasis on solids, and fewer style are the wave of the future in tabletop products, say home furnishings designer Bob Van Allen and merchant Bernard Olsoff.

Speaking at an industry seminar, Van Allen said the domestics and ready-to-wear industries set trends in concert, and that contemporary designs tend to involve simple shapes and materials that mix and match easily. He said many contemporary tabletop designs are so simple they "blend with grandmother's china."

What Do Gold-Buyers Know?

Gold.

Over the centuries the love of gold has raced men's blood and drove them to kill.

It has had little real value to man, other than ornamental, but it has served as the coins and medium of exchange for many societies.

In theory modern governments have replaced gold with dollars and other paper currencies.

Still the fascination remains, and now on the world markets gold has sky rocketed to above $400 per ounce.

That has little effect on the American wage earner directly, but those who follow gold have to wonder what the world buyers know that the rest of us don't.

Are world currencies near collapse? Will oil producing nations move swiftly to squeeze the western nations to death economically?

Anything is possible, but it is well to remember that the holders of wealth around the world are great gamblers. They constantly bet to obtain more wealth, which must come at the expense of others.

They go where the action is. Sometimes it is stocks, sometimes other things. When they get in, what they are buying has little relation to basic value. The idea is to run it up and then sell at a handsome profit.

Right now, the action is in precious metals, most particularly gold. The price of gold will go where it will go, but somewhere along the way the profits will be taken and the speculation will move on to some other area.

Such 'Extras' Only Rile The Taxpayer

The State Advisory Budget Commission voted to end consideration of a $425,000 tunnel connecting a state office building to the Legislative building in Raleigh.

One member suggested the tunnel would be built in the next decade — and it would cost far more.

Maybe . . . but we would suggest the project be left a dead issue. It's not a necessary expenditure, and it is such frills that get up the dander of the taxpayers.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Lane Duck's Burden

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Remember when the General Assembly adjourned back in June, the impression was left that business was pretty well taken care of except for a short budget session in 1980?

The Legislature really is supposed to meet only every two years. But when the recession caused economic uncertainties, members decided to hold a "continuation" session in an off-year. They've done that ever since; and gradually the door is being opened for the so-called "budget continuation" to be a regular session and the assembly becomes in fact an annual one rather than a biennial one.

The adjournment resolution this year calls for reconvening at high noon on Thursday, June 5, 1980, for "review of the budget for fiscal year 1980-81 and for consideration of certain other bills."

Other Bills

The legislative computer has now come up with some details on those "certain other bills"

There are at least 135 "certain other bills", plus the door is wide open for more because of the adjournment resolution specifically allowing bills implementing reports of the Governmental Evaluation Commission (popularly known as Sunset Commission), and any local bills which are filed within the first five days of the 1980 session, providing those local proposals are noncontroversial, do not require public hearings, and are approved by the local delegations affected.

There is no way to tell, now, how many additional proposals will be generated by those two provisions. The other 135 measures, however, were things left over when the 1979 session adjourned. Bills which passed either the House or Senate and are still pending, are eligible for continued action.

Meanwhile, of course, all proposals "directly affecting the State budget for fiscal year 1980-81" will be up for action.

Many a twist in legal language is already being constructed by numerous special interest groups, state agencies, and lawmakers themselves in, order to somehow or another slip through the language "directly affecting the state budget."

Whatever the final tally, it will be sufficient to keep the 1980 continuation of the 1979 session of the General Assembly occupied for some time.

And even more intriguing will be the timing of the session, coming as it does on June 5, 1980.

BILL NOBLITT

Commitments

Suppose that you, as a private citizen, state employee, or member of a special interest group, wished to nail your local representative or senator down on a particular matter coming before the 1980 General Assembly. Election time is the right time to get a firm promise.

Candidates for the Legislature must file between noon January 7, 1980 and noon February 4, 1980. The primary election will be held (for all races including governor, statewide, presidential, and legislative) on May 6, 1980. The general election will be held November 4, 1980.

When the 1980 Legislature convenes, its membership will consist of 170 individuals. Many may have already decided not to run for another term; a number may have been defeated in the primary just finished; many will have just been nominated to another term without opposition from the other party and thus don't really care about election promises; and a number no doubt will be facing opposition in the general election and must consider that contest in their deliberations.

Very One-Sided Show

WASHINGTON — No doubt about it, that was an impressive demonstration in New York the other day. An estimated 200,000 demonstrators turned out to protest nuclear power and to hear speeches from Jane Fonda, Tom Hayden, Bella Abzug and Ralph Nader: No more nukes! They put on a helluva show.

But in the nature of things, it was a wholly one-sided show. The millions of Americans who benefit from electric power from nuclear plants are not organized. No pressure group exists to stage a little show biz to offset the show biz. You are not likely to find any major national magazine carrying an essay responding to the Henny-Penny piece by Howard Morland in the October issue of Harper's. If there is to be a rational debate on an important question of public policy, someone must take the affirmative side of the question.

Mr. Nader's remarkable idea is to stop nuclear power here and now. At once! This very instant! The idea is remarkable chiefly for its lunacy. Nuclear plants now provide about 9 percent of total generating capacity. On any given day they are pro-

To the editor:

Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? "And Jesus called a little child unto him. . ." Matthew 18:12.

It is not easy to be a youngster today. We are moved to compassion when we see a hungry child, but most of our youngsters have enough of the necessities of life. Their chief lack arises from not being given a happy, wholesome emotional environment in which to grow and develop. Some are denied any kind of understanding by parents. Others receive no spiritual foundations, even from church-going parents. Some learn from prejudiced and bigoted parents. Others have lost respect for themselves and their abilities because of domineering and ambitious parents, who want them to succeed for selfish reasons.

Many youngsters have had dreams and hopes, only to lose them because there was no encouragement from parents, and others have been denied any form of discipline or guide lines for making decisions. I can readily understand what one youngster meant when he said, "I wish father would come home and make me behave." Are our homes disorganized confusions?

Parents, let's never forget that a good example is better than many words, for so much of life is caught — taught by what we do rather than what we say.

Encouragement! Remember Abraham Lincoln's mother's dying words to her son. "Abe, be somebody!" This should be our prayer for our youngsters, and please parents, send us more youngsters to school who are self-disciplined, respectful and concerned about learning, for there are many excellent, dedicated teachers who are really concerned about the lives of students.

Beatrice C. Maye
Greenville

Other speakers in New York demanded that work be halted on 90 nuclear plants now under construction, that planning be suspended on another 35 plants and that the existing 69 plants be swiftly phased out in favor of coal. The opponents' objection, of course, is that nuclear facilities are so dangerous that every hour of their continued operation gravely risks the lives of thousands of persons and the health of plants, animals and people for many years to come.

This is the theme of the essay by Mr. Morland in Harper's. He is the gentleman, you will recall, who has been struggling for the right to tell the world how to build hydrogen bombs in The Progressive, a magazine dedicated to the non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. In Harper's, he tells us that "we have Providence to thank" for preventing disaster at Three Mile Island. Otherwise thousands "might have" died and vast land areas "might have been" contaminated.

Never Such A Day

By HUGH MULLIGAN

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Common has seen some uncommon sights since Parson William Blackstone kept his brindled cow on these 50 acres, but hundreds of thousands of umbrellas bobbing in genuflection to Pope John Paul II on a high outdoor altar has got to rank with the uncommonest.

Despite a steady drizzle that turned to a heavy downpour as the papal motorcade made its way along the stately brick buildings of Beacon Hill, the citizens of this "gateway city" — as the pope called it — proved steadfast in their loyalty and oblivious of the elements throughout the impressive ceremony.

In the ghostly ground fog that hid three-quarters of the glass-sheeted, 60-story Hancock building looming over the common, the triple canopied altar, with its lights turned on early and a fringe of yellow chrysanthemums, shone with a silvery sheen in the fast-gathering dusk. Bishops and cardinals in their rich robes seemed to be moving about in a Medieval religious drama.

The same fog must have made the pope's arrival in the United States a sticky business for Aer Lingus pilot Aidan Quigley. Those of us aboard the papal jumbo jet got our first sight of Boston when the runway lights of Logan Airport suddenly appeared at wheel level as we descended from the mists.

The 59-year-old pope, unmindful of the mist, a broad-brimmed red hat upon his head, traveled in an open car for the motorcade through the city.

40 Years Ago Today

Colonel H.A. Wells, infantry, the U.S. Army recruiting officer for North and South Carolina, announced today that he had just received authority to enlist a large number of qualified young men for assignment to various arms of service at Fort Bragg.

Any information as to the qualifications for the vacancies may be obtained at the U.S. Army recruiting station in Greenville.

Sergeant Stonewall Jackson, substation commander for the regular army, urges all young men between the ages of 18 and 35 years, who have been considering enlisting in the regular army to call at the recruiting office for information concerning the vacancies that now exist.

Corporal L.L. Jackson of the State Highway Patrol, who has been located in Greenville for the past several years and who had charge of the military training at the Hendersonville camp for recruits this summer, has been transferred to Martin County and will be stationed in Robersonville.

Personnel of the Greenville office now is composed of Lieutenant Lester Jones, commanding officer of Troop B; Patrolmen C.R. Williams, W.W. Massengill and T.L. Teague; License Inspector M.J. McLeod and Miss Thelma Exum, office deputy.

INSIDE REPORT

Tough -Guy Role Hurting

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Sen. Frank Church's sudden transformation to hard-line, anti-Soviet tough guy over troops in Cuba, now that he faces a difficult re-election campaign in conservative Idaho, has not only diminished his stature with old liberal friends but — more surprisingly — with conservative enemies as well.

Far worse, the administration complains, President Carter's negotiating flexibility with Moscow shrunk when the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee took it upon himself to set the terms: The new strategic arms treaty (SALT II) was dead, he trumpeted, "while Soviet combat troops remain in Cuba." Whatever the shrinkage of Carter's flexibility, Church has very nearly ruined chances for treaty ratification.

Thus, by taking the confidential tip from Under Secretary of State David Newsom Aug. 30 and converting it into what one Senate colleague calls "Church's big issue," he has reached a fateful point in his quarter-century Senate career.

Having finally achieved his youthful goal of the chairmanship once held by Tom Connally, Arthur Vandenberg and Walter George, he has removed himself from the SALT II playing field for the sake of Idaho politics. He is now irrelevant to the treaty debate. Instead of praise and prestige enjoyed by those titans of the previous generation, Church is ridiculed behind his back in the Senate and administration.

On the Senate floor, Majority Leader Robert Byrd recently spoke to Sen. George McGovern in a voice overheard by several other senators: "You made great good sense in what you said about SALT and the Russian troops being two separate issues."

While publicly uncommitted on SALT, Byrd is expected to wind up supporting it and obviously resents Church's defection. While there are compelling reasons to link SALT with overall Soviet policy, Byrd has privately pressed several Democratic senators — one of whom opposes the treaty — to speak out against Church's SALT-troops linkage. Byrd has told Carter that SALT may be a good or bad treaty but should be judged on its own merit, not as a campaign issue tied to Cuba.

At lunch in Secretary of State Cyrus Vance's private State Department dining room, Byrd's point was driven home. "I am sorry that the situation of the Soviet troops has become so politicized by certain people," a key congressman said. "It is too serious to politicize." There was no need to name names, including Frank Church's; Vance said he completely agreed.

But Church's transformation to protector of the West from the Soviet menace has not endeared him to serious politicians of the right who have watched the Soviets

Strength For Today

BEYOND OUR VISION

It is seldom useful to compare physical and spiritual realities, and particularly futile to attempt to show a definite relationship between them. But most people of religious faith believe in an invisible world. Round about us, or perhaps in realms far distant, an order of life different from our own physical life certainly appears to exist. We cannot prove the presence of such an order of life as we prove scientific facts in a material world. But millions of people are confident that the invisible world is real.

To believe this is not necessarily to accept spiritualism. Belief in an invisible world is a part of both Old and New Testament religion and is shared by the devout of many theological persuasions.

Perhaps the strongest evidence to support the reality of the invisible world is Christ himself. When He returned from the dead He assured his followers that He would always be with them, and devout Christians have literally felt His presence from that day to this.

The Mail-Order Evangelists

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a consistent theme in the messages of those "how to beat inflation" or "how to make a million" advertisements that tease the economically weary, wayworn wanderer.

It is: Stop wandering. Instead, the ads inform, seize control of events and beat inflation. Don't accept 5.5 percent; reach instead for 55 by owning gold or art or antiques, or by becoming a landlord.

You don't need money. The great fortunes of America were financed by other peoples' money, by OPM as they say. But once you get it protect it; learn how to pay no taxes. Borrow, buy, speculate and shelter.

Dozens of entrepreneurs are promoting the notion, offering to sell you their techniques if you just fill out the enclosed coupon and mail it with your check.

You see their ads in some of America's finest publications. Why not — they're legitimate.

They espouse their beliefs with religious conviction, and they spread the word with evangelical zeal. Save yourself from financial despair; get on the side of truth.

As such they broadcast the instability of personal economics today, in which to save is to lose, to borrow is to gain, to speculate is often to be rewarded and to be smart is to manage legally to avoid taxes.

Why borrow? Simple. With family expenses consuming so much of your income, and with inflation eroding savings, you'll never be able to get ahead. To get ahead you need a bundle of investment capital. Borrow it.

Sure, it will cost you money, but don't forget: Uncle Sam is your partner. It means that all the interest you pay back is tax-deductible. And you pay back in cheaper dollars too; inflation sees to that.

Why buy? Because, say the entrepreneurs who sell their techniques, many purchases actually rise in value at rates faster than inflation. They're more economically desirable than paper money. Like gold.

Or, to name another, like houses. Houses have been outpacing inflation for many years.

Is this speculation or investing?

It difficult to draw a line that separates buying, investing and speculating. Perhaps the risk-reward ratio is the best determinant. Buying now involves limited risk, investing more, speculation a lot.

Why shelter? Because, say the mail-order advisers, Uncle Sam will otherwise take too much of your rewards.

By so doing you have effectively delayed payment of taxes. And when you finally do pay them, on selling the property, you will be charged at the lower, capital-gains taxation rate.

Even then, the mail order evangelists point out, you can escape taxes by trading for a property of similar value, which you then can begin upgrading. And on and on.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning for the Atlantic coast and Northeast. Showers are also indicated for the Midwest, Great Lakes and northern Plains, the Southwest and central Pacific coast. Cooler temperatures are forecast across the northern tier of states. Rest of the nation will be sunny and warm. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A fast moving cold front that was located this morning in eastern Tennessee promised more rain for North Carolina. The forecast called for showers and thundershowers over the western part of the state today and in the eastern sections late in the day as the front moved toward the coast. Eastern portions of the state could get some isolated severe thundershowers.

The cold front was expected to reach the coast by late today and pose only a threat of showers on Wednesday. Some thundershowers broke out early today in the northeast Piedmont and Coastal Plain. Temperatures today were expected to range from the 70s in the west to the 80s in the east. Low readings this morning waving as cheering well-wishers greeted him with unfurled banners, flags and flowers. "Viva il papa!" they chanted in the Italian-American North End. "Witamy" — Polish for Welcome — read a few placards elsewhere.

And everywhere there was the roar of thousands of joyful voices, the tuneful notes of bands and bagpipes, songs that gave way to the refrain of "God Bless America" as the pope neared the common.

Despite the heavy weather, which seemed more suitable to the Irish portion of the pope's pilgrimage of peace and love, the turnout on Boston Comm'n, officially estimated at 410,000, was twice the record set by an October 1969 peace rally.

More came to Boston's historic downtown pastureland on this single rainy day than used to show up all during the Christmas season when reindeer grazed in the shadow of Boston's skyscrapers.

Parson Blackstone, an Anglican clergyman who gave his pasture to the city in 1684, certainly would never have recognized the place.

"Christian Love," and "Ban Nuclear Power" banners and placards blended with signs in many languages welcoming the pope. In an ecumenical gesture, followers of the Rev. Sung Myung Moon filled the windows of the headquarters building looking down on the outdoor Mass, and allowed NBC to put a camera crew on the roof.

turn Cuba into a worldwide enforcer of Soviet-style communism, and a budding military power. One defense-oriented Democratic senator complained that Church has "trivialized" the U.S.-Soviet struggle by his "simplistic" demand for the brigade's withdrawal.

Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, another pro-defense Democrat with an increasingly important voice on U.S. security, did not refer to Church but told us that the real Soviet-Cuban problem transcends the Soviet brigade in Cuba. Nunn and other SALT-skeptic Democrats insist on linking SALT with the Kremlin's conduct, but they have more in mind than just one brigade.

"I see it in terms of Roman numerals," Nunn told us. "And I do not even list the Soviet brigade under Roman numeral I. The real issue is Castro subsidized by Moscow to send Soviet surrogate troops around the world. The brigade issue comes under Roman numeral II, but even there it must be listed below the Soviet MIG 23s and Soviet submarines now assigned to Cuba."

Church's credibility as a liberal genuinely worried about the Soviet-Cuban menace is not helped by the effusive praise he heaped on Castro after his 1977 visit to Havana. Such doubts were reinforced by his performance in the Senate last week on an amendment by Sen. Robert Dole.

The Dole amendment would have cut off U.S. payments for operating the Panama Canal if Soviet or Cuban troops "are stationed in Panama." The amendment failed, 50 to 45, and Church voted against it. When we asked why, Church told us the matter was dealt with separately in one of the Panama Canal treaties and that the Dole amendment was "unnecessary and a political gimmick."

Political gimmickry is what Church is accused of practicing in setting the troop withdrawal as the price Carter must extract for his SALT treaty — gimmickry making him an election-year tough guy telling Moscow where to go.

Some politicians think it could boomerang in Idaho, but it has already left him a loser in the Senate. The fresh-faced young lawyer from Boise who came here in 1957 determined to follow Idaho's William Borah as a senator molding his nation's foreign policy is far from that goal today.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — There are 11 inmates currently awaiting the death penalty in North Carolina's gas chamber, but it is possible that years may pass before the sentences are carried out if they are carried out at all. Although the legislature reinstated the death penalty in North Carolina more than two years ago, state Supreme Court sources say years may elapse before their appeals make their way through state and federal courts.

Thus far, the state's highest court has upheld none of the five cases it has heard under the new death penalty law the General Assembly wrote in 1977. The new law gave new trials to two of the condemned persons, called for new sentencing hearings for another pair and even granted a new hearing to one defendant who had pleaded guilty to first degree murder.

The 11 inmates on Death Row include two white women, five white men and four black men. They range in age from 23 to 50 and were convicted in courts across the state. Three are from Robeson County.

One of the first persons convicted under the new law, Daniel R. Webster, is dead. He committed suicide in his Central Prison cell in November 1977. He was convicted in Davie County of murdering his wife.

The most recent addition to Death Row is James W. Hutchins who was convicted recently in McDowell County for the slaying of two Rutherford County deputy sheriffs and a highway patrolman.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has called for carrying out the death penalty in the Hutchins case "very, very quickly." Edmisten said it was "a serious mistake to have people on Death Row lingering for years and not use the statute. The hypocrisy of that is pointed out by the fact that we once had over 100 people on Death Row, and it's a joke on society to pass the death penalty and then not use it. If we don't intend to use the thing, then we ought to abolish it."

The attorney general was referring to the fact that the 115 persons on Death Row when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down the old North Carolina death penalty statute were given life terms and that no one has been executed in the state since Theodore Boykin died in the Central Prison gas chamber in 1961.

The state Supreme Court has not yet scheduled arguments in the eight remaining death sentences that have been imposed but not heard on appeal. Even if the court upholds any of those convictions during its spring term next year, it could require two years or more for the cases to get through federal courts.

Accountable

MADISON, N.C. (AP) — Superintendent George Evans of the Madison-Mayodan City Schools thought the courts had overlooked vandalism in schools, so he took his case to the school board Monday night. He came away with a restitution policy for vandals.

The new policy will require the parents of a student caught vandalizing school property to pay the costs of repair, or else the student will have to work off the repair costs at minimum wage rates.

If the student or parents refuse, the matter will be referred to juvenile court and the student will be suspended.

Evans told the board that in one instance recently, damage to windows amounted to $2,400. He added that this year alone the schools have paid out more than $5,000 for damaged windows.

Evans estimated that vandalism has cost the school system more than $20,000 per year.

"Persons caught defacing, destroying or vandalizing property will be held accountable for the full costs," the new policy states.

Ford Expected Accept Terms

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Both labor and management say Ford Motor Co.'s current cash bind will not stand in the way of a contract matching one the United Auto Workers union won from General Motors Corp.

Ford on Monday presented its economic offer, one modeled on the GM settlement. UAW President Douglas A. Fraser said it seemed to offer a basis for settling the economic differences, though Vice President Ken Bannon warned that "special problems remain" before the Thursday midnight strike deadline.

Ford indicated there was none of what union negotiators traditionally call icing on the cake — little extras they can use to convince the members they did better than their counterparts.

Fraser was asked about the chances of concessions to Ford. He already has done everything but state flatly that Chrysler Corp. will get concessions because of its sad financial state.

"I'm not in the mood nor did

Mr. McKenna ask for any special consideration," Fraser said.

Sidney F. McKenna, Ford's vice president for industrial relations, said, "There's no indication that they are willing and nothing in what we presented them today to suggest that we're seeking that."

Ford's U.S. car sales this year are down about the same as Chrysler's, though Ford's larger size and overseas profit fountain have kept it, in contrast to Chrysler, out of financial trouble.

Among the "special problems" cited by Bannon were issues pertaining to parts warehouses, skilled tradesmen, the order of temporary layoffs and protection of jobs from new technology.

Fraser said there were "variances" from the GM settlement in the Ford offer but he hoped to find no "sharp differences." Union analysts will complete their scrutiny of the proposal today, he said.

Repeated Vows In Card Room

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The groom excused himself from a poker table just minutes before the ceremony. The bride had left a bit earlier to put on a long beige gown and veil.

But many others remained at the gaming tables as Ruth Willson and John Talisman were married Monday in the Sahara-Reno hotel-casino's poker room.

"As far as I could see, nobody even stopped playing poker," said Rev. Frank Murtha, who married the couple. "They just kept playing as if nothing was going on."

Mr. and Mrs. Morton Talisman, the groom's parents from Pasadena, Calif., got up from a nearby blackjack table to witness the ceremony.

"We both love to play cards and we've spent many enjoyable hours here," said Talisman, a professional gambler. Miss Willson is a San Francisco Bay Area card room dealer. "We didn't want to get married some place we'd never been before and would never be again," Talisman said. "We knew all the folks here and it just seemed like a nice thing."

Hunt Appoints District Judge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has named Thomas Bowen of Lincolnton as District Court Judge for Judicial District 27-B (Cleveland and Lincoln counties). The judicial seat was created by the General Assembly.

Bowen, 36, is an assistant district attorney for the district. He was previously in private practice for three years in Gastonia.

Bowen's term expires on Dec. 1, 1980.

Good, honest sausage and liver pudding. Just like Granddaddy used to make.

More than fifty years ago, we founded a whole business on two of our grandfather's recipes.

For the country sausage, he used the leanest cuts of ham, bacon, shoulder and loin, seasoned with a secret combination of garden spices. (For 10 years, only Grandma knew the secret). To the liver pudding, he added pork cuts for extra flavor and texture. And all over Guilford County, people said Neese could make both taste better than "home made".

In all the years, we've never taken anything out of those original recipes. And we're not going to add anything, either. For example, while most other packers add preservatives and fillers, we don't. (As our package plainly states). And while most other packers ship all over the nation, we ship only to nearby towns and country stores. Which means our products are always fresh. Naturally.

We can't tell you our product recipes, but we would like to tell you 77 others. For everything from Sausage Loaf to Liver Pudding en Casserole. Write for your free—and fascinating—copy of our recipe book. Neese. Good, honest liver pudding and completely natural country sausage. Just like Granddaddy used to make.

Liver Pudding Custard? I'll have to taste it to believe it. Please send the recipe book—for free.

Governors Rap 'Regulators'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Southern governors are using their annual conference to trumpet irritation over energy policy which they say is hobbled by unreasonable environmental rules and federal regulations.

"Almost every electric power plant in the country should be converted to burn coal by now but nothing is being done," said Kentucky Gov. Julian Carroll.

Critical broadsides, including a move to propose that the Department of Energy be abolished, led to an last-minute decision by Secretary of Energy Charles Duncan to fly in today for lunch.

Gov. Edwin Edwards said Duncan requested that his talk with the governors attending the 45th annual conference be private.

Both the Department of Energy, known as the DOE, and the Environmental Protection Agency came under attack during Monday's session on energy.

"If you really want to get their attention, get a resolution through here calling for the abolishment of the Department of Energy," Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards said.

Edwards, who opposed the creation of the DOE, contends it has spent over a billion dollars and accomplished nothing except to impede fuel production.

Thunder Storm Downed Balloonists

ADVENTURE'S END — Four balloonists attempting a transcontinental flight were forced down early this morning by a thunderstorm over Ohio. One crewmember, a woman, suffered a broken leg. (AP Laser-photo)

SPENCERVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Severe thunderstorms and swirling snow forced four adventurers to abandon their transcontinental balloon journey and descend to earth while being buffeted by thunder and lightning, the balloon's command post says.

"It wasn't a case of anything being wrong," Randy Birch, an NBC-TV cameraman and crew member, said early today. "It was a case of the weather having closed in around us."

There was "lightning at all sides and snow coming down," said Rudolph Engelmann of Boulder, Colo. "It just didn't look good. There were a lot of mixed reactions about what ought to be done. Common sense prevailed."

The four crew members were taken to St. Rita's Medical Center in nearby Lima where Vera Simons, the only woman aboard, was treated for a broken leg. She was listed in fair condition. The three other members, including Fred Hyde of Prairie Village, Kan., were not injured, authorities said.

The crew descended early today near this western Ohio city inside the 100-foot high balloon's gondola.

The balloon, named the DaVinci Trans-America, lifted off Wednesday from Tillamook, Ore., in hopes of reaching the East Coast after the first transcontinental balloon flight.

"Everyone is fine. One of the people here spoke with one of the crew members," said Lesley Edwards of Weather Service Corp., the command post in Bedford, Mass.

"He (the crew member) walked to a farmhouse to call us (at 1:04 a.m. EDT) — about an hour after the crew decided to land."

"He was mostly just trying to say 'Hey, get in touch with our families and tell them we're all right.'"

Earlier, the DaVinci's flight command post in Bedford, Mass., said it was believed the balloon had gone down northwest of Spencerville, near Van Wert.

Birch said they had been having weather problems all day. Federal Aviation Administration officials in Ohio and Indiana said a fast moving cold front was overtaking the balloon as it crossed into Ohio with thunderheads as high as 40,000 feet.

The crew, hoping to reach the East Coast somewhere in Virginia, had dipped lower to the ground to try to escape the front.

The DaVinci was at about 16,000 feet, with snow falling, said Birch. "And the weight of snow started bringing the whole thing down. We started ballasting and took ourselves back up and realized the fact that we had nothing to get ourselves back down again other than emptying the helium out of the balloon."

"We got within 1,000 feet (of the ground) and the thunder and lightning became very heavy," he said. "It was obvious we had to set down."

Birch said the landing "was quite smooth in comparison to what it could have been."

Birch added that the crew plans to take the balloon back to the West Coast and start the trip over. No timetable has been set yet for the second try, he said.

Dole Hunts Organizer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The presidential campaign of Kansas Republican Sen. Bob Dole apparently is getting off to a slow start, as he is presently looking for someone to run his North Carolina campaign.

But despite the appearance of organizational problems, Dole's wife Elizabeth said in Greensboro Monday things are going well.

"The campaign is moving forward all the time," she said. Enough money has been raised in North Carolina to qualify for matching federal funds, she said.

Mrs. Dole, a Salisbury native, told the Central Carolina Better Business Bureau that her husband's campaign will be leveled against over-regulation of business by government and federal spending.

Greensboro Republican Bob Shaw was the first to head the North Carolina effort for Dole. A former chairman of the North Carolina Republican party, he quit the campaign post early last summer because Bill Russo, whom Shaw once helped fire as director of the state Republican organization, had been named national campaign director for Dole.

Now Russo, who was named to coordinate the North Carolina campaign after Shaw quit, is out of that position and assigned to consultation. So the search is on again.

Political observers say the fact that Dole is having so much trouble in his wife's home state is an indication of the hard times his campaign faces.

No Real Reply To Peace Plea

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Pope John Paul's appeals for peace in Northern Ireland produced a Protestant cease-fire proposal. But it came from a guerrilla group that hasn't been fighting for months, and it was coupled with a political proposal that the Roman Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army are certain to reject.

The Ulster Volunteer Force, one of the biggest of the Protestant guerrilla armies, said if the IRA's Provisional wing declared a cease-fire, the UVF would "immediately reciprocate by standing down all active military personnel."

The statement, issued Monday night, said the UVF feels "that the climate is right for a new political initiative such as devolved administration and hopes that the British government would respond to a cessation of violence by endeavoring to arrive at some political settlement."

"Devolved administration" means an end to the British government's direct rule of war-torn Northern Ireland and a return to local parliamentary government. With Protestants outnumbering the Catholics 2-to-1 in the province and the Protestant political forces dominated by hard-line opponents of sharing power with the Catholics, this would mean a return to the Protestant domination of the provincial government that was one of the chief causes of the 10-year-old war.

The various Protestant guerrilla groups have stayed on the sidelines of the war this year, leaving the fighting to the IRA Provisionals, the British army and the police. But periodically they threaten to return to the attack if the British do not crush the IRA.

The Provisionals are expected to make their response to the pope's appeals after a meeting of their 12-man army council later this week. But a spokesman for Sinn Fein, the Provisionals' political front, said on Sunday that the IRA is fighting a "war of liberation" and its "campaign will continue" until Northern Ireland is united with the overwhelmingly Catholic Irish Republic.

Supreme Court Points To Rights Of Suspects

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is beefing up that portion of its 1979-80 agenda dealing with the rights of persons suspected or accused of committing crimes.

Sifting through more than 800 cases in their first day back on the bench after a three-month recess, the justices agreed to decide four controversies that could yield significant criminal justice rules.

The questions to be answered include:

— May federal agents stationed in airports stop, question and search persons whose behavior and "characteristics" fit the mold of a drug courier?

In deciding a case from Detroit earlier this year, a federal appeals court said such tactics, used in the government's extensive airport surveillance program, unreasonably violate individuals' privacy rights. Government lawyers argued that the surveillance program is an important, successful tool in curtailing drug trafficking.

— Can a "voluntary" confession be made by a suspect under the influence of drugs?

The court will study an appeal by law enforcement officials in Massachusetts who contend their state's highest court was wrong when it overturned a Boston man's murder conviction because the evidence used at his trial included a confession he made while "intoxicated" on tranquilizers and beer.

— May a trial judge impose a stiffer sentence on a convicted criminal defendant because he or she did not cooperate with prosecutors?

That's what happened to a Washington, D.C., man convicted in a heroin-related crime. A judge increased the punishment because the man refused to tell prosecutors the names of some drug suppliers.

— When a criminal defendant is jailed before trial, can police pay his cellmate to act as an informant and then use the evidence obtained at trial?

The Justice Department is asking the court to overturn a federal appeals court ruling last December in a Norfolk, Va., case in which such tactics were declared unconstitutional.

All four cases are to be decided before next July, along with several other criminal justice issues already before the court.

In other matters Monday, the justices took these actions:

— Refused to delay any longer the gas chamber execution of confessed Nevada murderer Jesse Bishop, a man who says he is ready to die for his crime. A state prison official in Carson City said Monday that Bishop could be executed as early as Oct. 18.

— Agreed to decide, in a case that could affect millions of Americans, whether workers have a right, free from an employer's retaliation, to refuse work they feel is too hazardous.

Burn Their Rock 'n' Roll

NORTH BELMONT, N.C. (AP) — To get their point across about the detriment of rock 'n' roll music to teenagers, parishioners at Goshen Free Will Baptist Church set ablaze more than $1,000 worth of records Saturday night.

Rev. Benny Turner, 41, asked young people of the church to bring their rock records to a fellowship camp meeting on the church grounds. Almost 200 persons showed up for the preaching, gospel music and bonfire in which the records, laced with references to sex and drug use, went up in smoke and flames.

"We see that rock 'n' roll is very much detrimental to the lives of young people," said Turner. "I've yet to see a Bible Christian really involved 100 percent with rock 'n' roll. All this is a menace, really, to the youth."

Rock 'n' roll wasn't the only category to draw Turner's ire. Country and western and any recordings that suggested illicit sex were added to the flaming protest.

"It's time the Christian really stood up and burned such trash as this," Deacon Henry Scarborough said. "I hope later we have a burning 10 times as big as we just had."

Turner hopes that in the next record-burning session, sex-oriented magazines and Ouija Boards will go into the pile.

Tobacco Prices A Bit Stronger

FARMVILLE — Grade for grade, prices on the Farmville Tobacco Market were a little stronger yesterday than on Thursday of last week, according to Louis Williams, Sales Supervisor of the Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade.

There were more sheets that sold for $1.60 a pound than on any day this season. Top practical price continues at $1.55 a pound. Demand was stronger on more grades of tobacco than on Thursday. Stabilization receipts accounted for 7.99 percent of gross sales.

The market sold 695,821 pounds for $998,319 for an average of $143.47 per hundred; to date, 23,484,673 pounds for $33,521,081, for a season average of $142.74.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

Selecting the winning lead at bridge is not an exact science—inevitably a certain amount of guesswork will be involved. For the next few days we will discuss some of the principles in choosing an opening lead. There are certain fundamentals which, if observed, will help you enter a score on the right side of the ledger on those occasions when you must defend against an opposing contract.

In today's hand, West chose the safe opening lead of the queen of clubs. Declarer won, then lost the spade finesse. Whether East returned a club or a diamond, declarer had ten running tricks.

We agree with the doctrine that leads from tenaces are unappetizing, even at no trump contracts. That is especially true if you hold only a four-card suit. Such suits as A-Q-6-2 or K-J-5-3 should usually not be chosen for the opening lead unless the auction dictates otherwise. On those hands where you have more than one such sequence, it is often wise to lead top-of-nothing in some other suit to suggest to partner that leads from your strong suits were too dangerous.

Nevertheless, West overlooked a more important principle on this hand. When defending against a no trump contract, the lead should be made from a long suit. The six of diamonds was a very inviting choice here, even though it would present declarer with a trick he

Derailment

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Amtrak's Southwest Limited passenger train derailed this morning, injuring at least five people and scattering wreckage over several blocks on the eastern edge of downtown Lawrence, authorities said.

Amtrak officials in Kansas City said about 125 passengers were aboard the train, which derailed shortly after 6 a.m. The train was en route from Los Angeles to Chicago and was scheduled to arrive in Kansas City at 6:20 a.m.

Authorities said five or six people had been hospitalized and estimated about 30 people were treated for minor injuries at the scene. There were no known fatalities.

First reports from the scene said 10 cars of the 18-car train left the tracks.

Authorities said the engine and a crew car had struck a house but no one in the house was injured.

There was no immediate comment on the cause of the derailment.

Ingrid Bergman Daughter Wed

ROME (AP) — American film director Martin Scorsese and Isabella Rossellini, the 24-year-old daughter of actress Ingrid Bergman, have been married in a civil ceremony in the small nearby town of Bracciano.

Friends reported Monday that the private ceremony was held Sunday in the city hall on the Bracciano lake. Among the small group of relatives and friends attending were Miss Bergman, the bride's twin sister, Isotta, and her brother, Robertino.

Scorsese, 37, has directed such films as "Taxi Driver," "Mean Streets" and "The Last Waltz." Miss Rossellini made her movie debut in the leading role of a recent Italian film, "Il Prato" ("The Meadow").

Seize Opium In Grain Shipment

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Customs officials confiscated 6,000 pounds of opium from a truck en route to Afghanistan with wheat from the United States.

Customs officials said the opium was packed in 400 bags and was worth about $30 million on the street. They believed it was to have been sent from Afghanistan to Europe. The wheat was being sent under the auspices of the World Food Program, the officials said.

might not otherwise be able to make. The reason is clear. The auction makes it obvious that West cannot expect his partner to have more than one entry. If East has no entry, it is unlikely that the contract can be defeated. Similarly, if East has only one diamond, the same is probably true.

Therefore, West should be delighted to present declarer with a diamond trick. If East can gain the lead and return a diamond, there is an excellent chance that West will be able to run four diamond tricks to defeat the hand.

It is the fact that West has a five-card suit that makes the lead from a broken sequence appealing.

Silverman Ploy 'Paying Off'

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC had a plan. The plan worked. That is news.

For the first time since Fred Silverman moved in, NBC has successfully conceived and executed a programming strategy.

For the first two weeks of the new season, NBC's programs defeated or held their own against ABC and CBS.

It's only the beginning of the new season, true; and there were some mitigating factors in NBC's upset victory in the first week's ratings. But beyond all qualifications, the fact remains: NBC did something that worked.

The opening week of competition between the three networks "was soundly won by NBC," to use the phrase employed by ABC's publicists, who are more accustomed to sounding their own triumphs.

CBS, which finished third, and ABC are quick to point out that NBC's early strength relied largely on what TV folk call "front-loading" — filling your early season lineup with big programs. This NBC did do, airing such movies as "Coming Home," "Semi-Tough," "The Love Bug" and Clint Eastwood's "The Outlaw Josey Wales." NBC also presented three of its regular series as two-hour movie specials — "Eisched," "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" and "CHiPs."

In fact, NBC carried its regular schedule on only two nights. But gimmicking is the name of the game in network competition; it's only sniffed at when the other guy has beaten you with it.

ABC, for example, used a programming gimmick by starting its new season a week early, thereby giving it shows the advantage of early exposure against rerun competition.

And while NBC did employ some heavy-duty films, the other networks chose movies designed to grab opening week audiences too. CBS pulled out a couple of sexy made-for-TV jobs, "Sex and the Single Parent" and "Diary of a Teenage Hitchhiker," and ABC aired the most expensive TV movie of all time, the $7 million "SOS Titanic."

It was no NBC gimmick that sunk "Titanic," which finished an embarrassing 51st in the ratings.

Don't expect NBC to stay on top for long; it won't. But Silverman and his programming team established in these early days of the first full Silverman season at NBC that they can mount a successful assault on ABC, a feat that may expose the first crack in that seemingly impenetrable ABC fortress.

The last time NBC won a week was last October, and that was because it was NBC's turn to air the World Series. The significance of this victory is that NBC won with NBC programs — movies that NBC purchased on an open market and special versions of its regular series.

Sex-Crazed Image False

NEW YORK (AP) — Teenagers are not as sex-crazed as some people might think and rate having sex as less important than having friends, doing well in school or participating in athletics, a University of California psychologist says.

In his new book, "Teenage Sexuality," Aaron Hass, reports on a study of 625 high school students who were asked, among other things, whether they had had sex and then asked to rank its importance in their lives.

Among 15- and 16-year-olds, he found that 43 percent of the boys and 31 percent of the girls had engaged in sexual intercourse. Among 17- and 18-year-olds, 42 percent of the boys and 41 percent of the girls said they had had intercourse by the time they were 16.

But in ranking various teenage activities, Hass found that "Having sex with someone" was put in first place less often than "having friendships with members of your same sex," "doing well in school," "having friendships with members of the opposite sex," "being very romantically involved with someone" and "athletics."

Sex out-ranked romantic involvement only among 15- to 16-year-old boys. For all girls and the older boys, sex was last.

Suits Filed By Benson Ford

DETROIT (AP) — Benson Ford Jr., with two lawsuits against Ford family interests pending, has filed a $37 million libel and slander suit against two family attorneys and a former business partner.

The suit, which seeks $12 million in general damages and $25 million in punitive damages, was filed last week and was disclosed Monday, the Detroit Free Press reported in today's editions.

Charges of libel, slander, defamation, breach of trust and breach of fiduciary duty are alleged in the suit.

Benson Ford Jr. accuses longtime Ford family lawyer Pierre Hettler of Detroit of conspiring against him. The document claims that Hettler and his alleged co-conspirators swayed the opinions of his father Benson Ford Sr. against his son's California lifestyle and business associates.

Palance Name On Stage, Too

NEW YORK (AP) — Holly Palance is following in the footsteps of her famous father, actor Jack Palance.

Ms. Palance has moved back to the United States from London and is in rehearsals for Bernard Slade's new play, "Romantic Comedy."

"I see dad every once in a while," the 29-year-old actress said, adding that she expects her father to be in the audience Nov. 8 when the play opens on Broadway.

"Romantic Comedy" stars Mia Farrow and Tony Perkins.

Fonda Sees Self As A Patriot

NEW BRITAIN, Conn. (AP) — Actress Jane Fonda and her political activist husband, Tom Hayden, overcame football, President Carter, and Pope John Paul II to pack an auditorium for a lecture here.

Mayor William McNamara and local veterans' organizations blasted Ms. Fonda and Hayden for their political opinions and for the actress' visit to Hanoi in 1972. But nearly 2,000 persons jammed Welles Auditorium at Central Connecticut State College to hear them.

The sentiment among many in the audience was that McNamara, seeking re-election, was using the appearance as a vote-getting ploy.

Ms. Fonda appeared concerned about her image with veterans, particularly Vietnam era veterans, but defended her right to dissent.

"I consider myself a patriot...I have a right to criticize," she said earlier on the campus of Wesleyan University in Middletown.

to putting their child in the top group, while other, near genius students, are put in the lower group."

Members Sue Zadeits and Nancy Middleton both took exception to Carter's remarks.

"I can't accept hearsay," Mrs. Middleton said. "If you can come up with documentation, that's different, but we need to be careful of such statements."

Mrs. Zadeits said "I feel if you want to direct the board to come up with a criteria for placement, I personally don't think we'd be on the right foot."

Carter responded by saying his was a suggestion, proposal, not a matter of directing the board.

Phillips added "these things, telephone calls and conversations on the street, you cannot document."

"These are black people I'm talking about. They're scared of white people. There's a lot of confusion in the community, lots of problems. Their kids might be doing well, but parents have no idea what it's all about. They don't know what TMR, EMR, Phase I means. I'm constantly having to defend the board, the administration."

Terry Shank remarked that she realized this is a continuing communications problem, and noted "the only way to solve it is a one-to-one relationship, with the teacher visiting the home. But that would mean more people, more time, more money, none of which we have."

Phillips said one of the real problems is that a parent wants honestly to know "is my child a slow learner? They simply don't understand talk about Phase I, II, or III. They want to know something they can understand."

Mrs. Bettie Sue Forrest, principal at South Greenville School, assured the board that "placement of children in a group is not a hit and miss sort of thing. No one should feel a child is locked in. We have what we call staffing, that is, the teacher, principal, counselor all getting together, considering all factors including math and English grades as indicating what level a child should be placed in."

Sadie Sautter principal Mrs. Margaret White asked board members "to encourage parents to come to see us, to see for themselves the way classes are taught, how grouping is done. We write letters, notes, call on the telephone, but if they will come to see us, let us know what their concerns are, we can explain what we're doing in ways they will understand."

Terry Shank suggested that consideration be given to having the schools open one night a month for the purpose of having parents come in to talk to teachers about any doubts or questions they might have about their child's placement.

Athletic Budgets

Cox, in a report presented by Cox, he noted: "At an earlier meeting with people in the junior and senior high schools, it was revealed that athletic programs involve a total of 24 teams in grades seven through 12, in varsity and junior varsity sports."

"The projected budget for these teams in all the games they are participating in is $32,566," Cox noted. "Costs are going up, and we anticipate only about $23 to $25 thousand income this year."

"Inflation has hit," Cox commented, expenses are going up all the time and there's the added problem of people wanting to add more activities. One of the more serious problems is not being able to find people willing to coach. This is a common problem throughout the state. For example, a teacher of math who is also a coach gets tenure, then having achieved tenure, decides he does not want to continue coaching."

Cox said that as a result of this, "we're now in a situation unless we can find someone, we will have to drop the swimming program. Last year we were able to get a swim coach not on the school staff, but that was a one-year shot, and we've been unsuccessful in finding someone this year."

What may be another factor affecting the sports program, Cox said, "is that Title I guidelines calling for more participation by women in sports may make it necessary to cut some varsity sports."

Referring to the swim program again, Cox said "it is a program not in the conference. We have to play outside the conference and travel to Norfolk, Greensboro, Wilmington, which makes it expensive."

Cox concluded by saying "we have to make some real hard decisions soon. In the past we have not put money into athletic programs other than salary supplements, but we may need to see this as an item in the budget request."

Energy Program

In a brief report on the Energy Management Policy which is being required by the state, Cox noted that "there will necessarily be lots of rules and regulations, with many things to be considered."

Among considerations he touched on are using buildings that can be partially heated for the forthcoming community programs in evening hours, installing thermostats where not already in existence, modifying the boiler at Rose so that when water is heated the heat does not come on, and cutting the heat systems off at night. Another consideration is that of no heat in gymnasiums. "We'll let the crowds generate heat," Cox said.

On energy for transportation, Cox said "we're not sure where we're going to end up. Statewide, the rule is to cut back by 20 percent on the number of gallons being used."

The program will also involve a statewide energy audit, with a print out to show energy use by schools and activities.

Attendance Zones Criteria

With December set as the target date for the staff to have ready to present the board alternatives for redistricting, Cox distributed the criteria sheet with 13 points used as a basis for formulating the 1977 Redistricting Plan. This will be a general guideline used by the staff in putting together new redistricting plans.

Among comments touched on that will affect a new redistricting plan was the serious consideration of holding down extra busing due to the energy shortage and the expense of gas.

Donovan Phillips noted he'd "like to see an economic balance as well as a racial balance represented."

"If you consider that," Cox replied, "you will be adding a whole new dimension to an already complex problem."

Actions Taken

Two matters were acted on at the Monday night meeting. One was setting October 8 as the date for a hearing on a pupil; and the second was approval of declaring an old mobile unit surplus and to sell it to the Pitt County schools.

A number of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. employees continued picketing company facilities here today after walking off their jobs when contracts between the company and the Communications Workers of America expired at midnight Sunday.

The local workers were among several hundred employees of Carolina Telephone and the Norfolk Carolina Telephone Co. — both subsidiaries of United Telecommunications Inc. of Kansas City, Mo. — who refused to work without a contract.

Norfolk Carolina is expected to merge into Carolina Telephone at the end of the year. Carolina Telephone has already assumed management responsibilities for Norfolk Carolina.

Carolina Telephone officials in Tarboro said this morning that the walkout reflected the union leadership's thoughts of a proposed three-year contract offered during several weeks of bargaining.

Company officials noted that the CWA was offered a contract worth over $15 million in increased pay and benefits to affected Carolina employees over the three-year contract period.

Some of the major items included in the company offer were: wage increases of 10 per cent the first year, 9 per cent the second year, and 9 per cent the third year; increase the company's contribution for hospitalization insurance costs from 70 per cent to 90 per cent over the three years; pay 60 per cent of the premium costs of a dental insurance plan to be introduced during the second year of the contract; give employees one additional holiday per year for a total of 11 days; pay double-time wage rates for time worked over 60 hours per week; and pay a larger portion of life and health insurance premiums.

The company refused to agree to a cost of living wage adjustment which the union proposed in addition to the offered fixed wage increases, spokesmen noted.

The union bargaining committee rejected the proposed contract, company officials said, without submitting it to the general membership for a vote.

R. I. Flye, commercial and marketing manager in Greenville, said supervisory and nonunion employees have been assigned to various jobs vacated by the striking workers.

Flye said, "We regret that part of our telephone team has elected to stop working, but we will do everything possible to maintain adequate service."

He continued, "customers are encouraged to use direct distance dialing to complete their long distance calls," adding that repair service calls will be answered as promptly as possible.

Flye added that new telephone installations will be made on an emergency basis only.

Greenville Team Again Will Fly To Competition

ASHVILLE — Greenville rescue unit teams placed first in heavy-duty rescue and third in first aid in competitions sponsored by the North Carolina State Association of Rescue Squads here Saturday.

The awards were announced at a Saturday night banquet ending the 23rd annual convention of the association.

The second place award in heavy-duty rescue went to the Mount Olive Rescue Squad, while third place was taken by the Shelby Rescue Squad.

In the first aid competition, the Goldsboro Rescue Squad took first place, followed by second-place Orange County.

North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram told the more than 700 persons attending the banquet at The Inn on the Plaza, that the Greenville team would be flown, at State expense, to New Orleans next year to represent North Carolina in international competition.

For the past three years — since the Department of Insurance has arranged transportation for the State's championship team — Greenville teams have been flown by the state to participate in the international contest.

Greenville took the international championship trophy in St. Louis in 1977 and in Houston in 1978, and placed fourth in Columbus, Ohio last month.

Historically, teams from Greenville have been leaders in both state and international rescue and first aid competition, winning 13 international trophies — including three international championships — since 1961, and 30 awards (including the two received Saturday) — 16 of them first place awards — in state competition during the same period.

State association commander, Howard A. "Buddy" Shaw of Goldsboro, praised the Greenville squad for its competitive spirit and sportsmanship, and challenged other squads to match Greenville's competition record.

Members of Saturday's rescue competition team included: captain Tony Brannon, co-captain Stuart Savage, Joe Burris, Ervin Hardee, Brent Stocks, Robert O'Neal, Gary Robertson and Jimmy Wagstaff. First aid team members Saturday included: captain Joe Burris, co-captain Stuart Savage, Brent Stocks, Jimmy Wagstaff, and Gary Robertson.

Rampants Rally To Squeeze Past Nash

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School gave away two touchdowns on mistakes in the third period last night, then stormed back to score a touchdown and a field goal to nip Northern Nash, 18-17.

The contest was the first Division I meeting of the year for the Rampants. It was originally scheduled for Friday night, but was postponed by weather.

The Rampants scored on their initial drive in the game, moving 62 yards with Mark Shank going over from the two. It stayed that way until late in the half when James Jones kicked a 36-yard field goal for the Knights to reduce the lead to 7-3.

In the third period, however, Rose had its trouble, having a blocked punt turned into a 33-yard touchdown, and a fumble became an 82-yard scoring run. But Rose came back with a six-yard run by Kenny Wilson, who also added a two-point conversion, and then Ted King, who kicked the first PAT, added a 36-yard field goal to provide Rose with the victory.

"I'm very, very proud of our team for coming back like they did," Coach Dave Bumgarner said. "It was a great effort on the part of both our offense and defense."

"We told the defense to go out and get the ball for us in good field position, and that's just what they did (in the late stages of the game)." Curtis Spell put on a great hit on Jones to jar loose the ball and set up our winning field goal.

"It says a lot about our team to fall behind like this and then come back and pull out the victory," he said.

"But this Monday night stuff has got to quit," Bumgarner added.

The Monday night game was the third time in four games this fall that Rose was forced to delay its game from Friday until Monday.

The Rose defense again did an outstanding job, holding Northern Nash in check most of the night. Northern finished the game with just 75 yards in total offense, 50 on the ground and 25 through the air. During the second half, Rose held the Knights to minus eight yards in total offense.

Rose got the ball for the first time on their own 38 following a Knight punt. On the first play, Calvin Whichard picked up 13 yards on the option to the Knight 49. The Rampants continued to grind out yardage, moving to the two in nine more plays.

Finally, Shank took the ball up the middle for the final two yards, and King's kick made it 7-0 with 3:38 left.

Northern got off its first threat of the evening on the following series, driving from its 29 to the Rose 24, before Ron Butler broke through to sack quarterback David Wells for 13 yards, forcing a punt.

But on the next series, the Knights got on the scoreboard. They forced Rose to punt after four plays and got the ball at their own 41. At one point, the Rampants appeared to have them bottled up, with a second and 15 at the Rose 37, but George Battle, after being hit behind the line of scrimmage, pulled away and raced to the 32 before he was pulled down. Rose was penalized 15 yards for face masking on the tackle, putting the ball at the 17.

But on the next three plays, the Knights lost two yards and settled for a seemingly-effortless 36-yard field goal by Jones with 3:33 left. That cut it to 7-3.

Rose came back quickly, helped along by a 24-yard pass from Kenny Barnes to Tyrone Tucker, down to the Knight 28, but a fumble ended that chance.

In the third period, Northern Nash ran but three offensive plays, and scored 14 points prior to running those.

They got their first score after less than two minutes when the Rampants were forced to punt. A heavy rush on King succeeded in blocking the punt, with Ray Manning getting it. The ball rolled inside the ten yard line where Linwood Harper picked it up and went the rest of the way for the score. The PAT kick was wide, and Northern moved ahead, 9-7.

Rose snapped back from that adversity and drove down the field, seemingly for the go-ahead score. From their own 24, the Rampants steadily ate up yardage, finally getting a first down inside the 15. But on second down, a fumble left the ball rolling on the ground, and Jones scooped it up at the 18 and went 82 yards for the score untouched. Wells rolled out, as if to pass, then ran into the corner of the end zone for the two-point conversion, making it 17-7 with 4:58 left in the third period.

On the final play of the period, Rose forced the Knights to punt from their own 27, and a short kick gave the ball to the Rampants at the midfield stripe.

On the first play, Whichard cut through the line and raced down to the 25 yard line, just missing getting away for the score. Wilson added five yards, and after a two-yard loss, picked up 11 more for a first down at the 11. Two more plays added five yards, and on third down, Barnes headed right, then pitched to Wilson, who went the final six into the end zone.

The Rampants went for two, with Wilson taking the ball into the left corner on a sweep. With 9:17 left, that cut the margin to 17-15.

On the first play following the kickoff, Spell hit Jones at the 23, knocking the ball loose, and Charles Gunther fell on it at the 21.

The Rampants managed only three yards on the first three plays, and then, from the right hash mark, King kicked his 36-yard field goal that won it, giving Rose an 18-17 lead with 7:54 left.

Another short punt gave Rose excellent field position once more, at the Northern 49, but another fumble, at the 25 turned it over. Rose held, got it back and ran out the clock after that.

The victory was the third straight for the Rampants after an opening game loss. Northern Nash fell to 2-3 on the year.

The Rampants travel to Rocky Mount to meet the defending champion Gryphons, who are also this year's favorites to repeat as champs, on Friday.

High For A Catch

Rose High School's Tyrone Tucker (86) goes high to make a reception of a Kenny Barnes pass last night against Northern Nash, as Reginald Manning (7) and an unidentified teammate move in for the top. The play came late in the first half, but a fumble on the next play halted the drive deep in Knight territory. Rose pulled out an 18-17 win in the game. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Seaver, Candelaria Go In First Meeting

CINCINNATI (AP) — Playoff veterans Tom Seaver and John Candelaria, throwing hard after being hampered by mysterious ailments earlier this season, will be the starting pitchers in tonight's opening game of the National League championship series.

Seaver, 16-6, will open for the Cincinnati Reds and Candelaria, 14-9, will start for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said Candelaria "is fit, 100 percent" after being bothered by a recurring ache in his side.

"He says he's ready to pitch," Tanner said. "When he's pitching well, there's nobody any better."

Seaver, out a month with back trouble, came back to win 11 straight and now says he feels "fine."

"I've pitched fewer innings this year than I ever have in the big leagues," Seaver said. "Being injured early in the year cost me about five starts."

Before Tanner announced Monday that Candelaria would start the first game and Jim Bibby, 12-4, the second, Candelaria refused to admit he would get the nod.

"I know, but I'll never tell," he said. "Who would you start?"

Seaver, meanwhile, talked pensively about the playoff series and how his perspective has changed.

"Right now, I get more enjoyment out of seeing guys like Fish (pitching coach Bill Fischer) and Humie (pitcher Tom Hume) enjoy it than in me winning," Seaver said.

He admitted that the clubhouse celebration after the Reds had clinched the West Division title brought back memories of his first league championship with the New York Mets.

"The way they were running around, I could see myself 10 years ago," Seaver said. "I acted the same way in 1969. The excitement manifests itself in different ways now."

He said the thing that hasn't changed is the motivation.

"I love to pitch. I love it more now than ever. It's the same difference if it's June 1 and there's 2,000 people in the stands or if it's October and it's on national television," Seaver said. "I never predicate my effort or the importance of the game on external circumstances."

Living the experience of major league competition has become more important to Seaver as he sees his playing days dwindling. "The experience itself is more fun than the post-game celebration," he said. "When I was younger, I thought 'That's the ultimate experience, the post-game clubhouse celebration.'"

"I learned I was wrong. The ultimate joy is right out there, on the field. I enjoy it more out there than in here—or when I go off by myself."

Ironically, Cincinnati's starter in the second game will be rookie Frank Pastore, 6-7, a fireballer who reminds observers of the younger Tom Seaver.

Harry Brewer of 1006 E. Second St., Ayden, is the winner of last week's "Daily Reflector" Football Contest.

Brewer correctly picked the winners in 26 of the 32 games listed in last Tuesday's paper. His victory, however, was insured by his point total guess. He had a guess of 72, and 77 points were actually scored in Syracuse's 52-25 victory over Washington State.

Second place went to Allen Malloy, of Rt. 2, Robersonville, who also picked 26 correct. He was further off on his point total with a guess of 71.

Four other people also picked 26 games correctly, but were further off on their point total guesses.

Packers Upset Pats, 27-14

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers had been 1-3. Their unique fans, while still fiercely loyal, had taken to booing of late.

Coach Bart Starr and quarterback David Whitehurst had been severely criticized all last week.

In other words, Packer safety Johnnie Gray said, the team had everything going for it.

"We were under no pressure tonight because nobody gave us a chance," Gray said after Monday night's 27-14 National Football League upset of the New England Patriots.

"Everybody was fired up," he said. "Part of it was the Monday night thing — the national TV exposure. But there was a lot of personal pride at stake, too, because of all the things that were written and said."

The Packers vented their frustrations on the heavily favored Patriots with Whitehurst passing 15 yards to Aundra Thompson for one touchdown and running for another.

The Green Bay defense set up three touchdowns with interceptions of Steve Grogan passes, and tackled New England's scrambling quarterback five times for 31 yards in losses.

The manner in which the Packers upset the team which had ranked third in the NFL on offense and second on defense was almost as startling as the upset itself.

Deluged with criticism after playing conservatively for a tie in regulation, only to lose in overtime at Minnesota eight days earlier, the Packers this time held nothing back.

They surprised New England with a 3-4 defensive alignment. They blitzed — a rarity for them. They passed from their own end zone. They ran — unsuccessfully — on fourth-and-1.

They threw on first down. Receiver James Lofton tried a forward pass. They ran plays without a huddle and holder David Beverly even tried to pass to kicker Chester Marcol on a fake field goal play.

If the wide-open play was in any way intended as a response to the past week's censure, Starr would not admit it.

But he couldn't mask his elation.

"That was as inspirational, as emotional a victory as I have ever been a part of," he said. "New England has one heck of a team. We were grateful just to be on national TV against them. To win is a huge bonus for us."

"I think we had to open it up, to have a chance against them. We felt that, in order to prepare properly for a team of their caliber, we couldn't hold anything back."

"We had to use everything at our disposal," Starr said. "We just felt we had to let it all hang out."

Coach Ron Erhardt, whose Patriots, 3-2, muffed a chance to tie Miami for the AFC East lead, said he had warned his team that the Packers might be at an emotional peak.

"It is Monday night. They had a 1-3 record and they are trying to come back," Erhardt said. "We alerted our squad to all of that. I don't think we took the Packers lightly."

"But we had a couple of interceptions that hurt us, and they blitzed a lot. That surprised us more than anything."

Two of the Packers' sacks of Grogan were accomplished by reserve defensive end Robert Barber, who played in place of the injured Ezra Johnson.

Whitehurst's touchdown pass to Thompson with 9:03 left in the first half gave Green Bay the lead to stay at 14-7. A 28-yard gain on a pass from Whitehurst to Lofton sparked the 74-yard, nine-play drive.

Two plays later, safety Steve Luke picked off a Grogan pass and returned 10 yards to the Patriot 10-yard line, setting up a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Terrell Middleton as the Packers led 20-7.

Tim Fox blocked Marcol's extra point try. The Patriots then had an 83-yard drive, culminated by a 6-yard touchdown pass from Grogan to Russ Francis 1:01 before halftime. However, cornerback Mike McCoy intercepted a Grogan throw intended for Francis at the Packer 38 on the fifth scrimmage play of the second half.

Whitehurst passed 21 yards to Lofton on the next play, then scored on a 4-yard rollout as Green Bay led 27-14.

The Patriots scored in the first quarter on a 27-yard pass from Grogan to Francis. The Packers tied it 7-7 later in the first on a 1-yard run by Barty Smith. Graves' interception at the Patriot 45 led to the score.

North Carolina Joins State In Top Twenty

By The Associated Press

Southern California, Alabama Oklahoma and Texas held onto the top four spots, while the Nebraska Cornhuskers jumped from sixth to fifth in The Associated Press college football rankings this week.

The unbeaten Cornhuskers scored a lopsided 42-17 victory over Penn State Saturday and received 999 points in balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The loss, meanwhile, knocked previously 18th-ranked Penn State out of the Top Twenty.

Southern Cal, which needed a touchdown with 32 seconds left to edge Louisiana State 17-12, received 47 first-place votes and 1,222 of a possible 1,240 points. LSU's near miss also benefited the Tigers, enabling them to jump from 20th to 17th.

The defending national champs from Alabama clobbered Vanderbilt 66-3 for 14 first-place votes and 1,180 points, while No. 3 Oklahoma clobbered Rice 63-21, and earned 1,080 points.

The other first-place vote went to Texas, a 21-0 winner over Missouri, which fell from fifth to 15th. The Longhorns received 1,053 points.

After Nebraska came No. 6 Houston with 838, No. 7 Washington with 777, No. 8 Ohio State with 683, No. 9 Florida State with 662 and No. 10 Notre Dame with 656.

Houston jumped from eighth to sixth by routing West Texas State 49-10, Washington climbed from ninth to seventh by downing Fresno State 49-10, Ohio State moved from 14th to eighth by downing UCLA 17-13, Florida State defeated Virginia Tech 17-10 and went from 12th to ninth and Notre Dame's 27-3 drubbing of Michigan State lifted the Fighting Irish from 15th to 10th.

The Second Ten consisted of Michigan, Purdue, Arkansas, North Carolina State, Missouri, Michigan State, LSU, North Carolina, Tennessee and Brigham Young.

Last week it was Michigan, Florida State, Arkansas, Ohio State, Notre Dame, N.C. State, UCLA, Penn State, Southern Methodist and LSU.

North Carolina, Tennessee and Brigham Young made the Top Twenty for the first time this season. Carolina crushed Army 41-3, Tennessee trounced Auburn 35-17 and BYU defeated Texas-El Paso 31-7.

Besides Penn State, a long-time regular in the Top Twenty, and UCLA, SMU also dropped out by losing to Tulane 24-17.

BALTIMORE (AP) — California Manager Jim Fregosi says it's not a life-or-death situation for the Angels in the opener of the American League playoffs against Baltimore, and the Orioles' most recent post-season performances bear him out.

"I don't feel we have to win the first game," Fregosi said of the Wednesday night start in the best-of-five series. "It's a very big advantage to win the first one, but if you lose it's not over."

The Angels, winners of the AL West Division title for the first time, will be meeting a team that is in the playoffs for the sixth time in 11 years and holds a 12-6 record in league championship play.

But the Orioles, East Division winners with the major leagues' best record of 102-57, have lost six of their last eight playoff games and have dropped both of their last two series — each time after winning the opener.

Jim Palmer, sidelined with arm trouble much of the season, will start for the Orioles against another veteran right-hander, Nolan Ryan.

Palmer, who finished 10-6, was picked over 23-game winner Mike Flanagan to start the opener because Manager Earl Weaver wanted the benefit of his experience under playoff pressure. The three-time Cy Young Award winner is 7-2 in post-season competition and says his arm "feels great. It feels just like it used to feel."

Flanagan, scheduled to pitch Game Two here Thursday, heads a staff that led the league with a 3.27 earned run average and maintains Baltimore's tradition of strong pitching.

In the Angels, the Orioles' pitchers will be challenged by a group of heavy hitters who averaged 281 as a team with 164 home runs.

"There's no doubt that our strongest point is our hitting and the Orioles' is their pitching," Fregosi said Monday after rain washed out a scheduled practice here.

"We've never really been a high-hitting team until this year," he said. "Pitching and defense were always the Angels' strong points before. We made up for it this year, though."

The Orioles, who won the season series from the Angels 9-3, go into the playoffs in good physical shape except for outfielder Gary Roenicke. Roenicke was struck on the left elbow by a thrown ball during batting practice Sunday and may be sidelined for the playoff opener.

"Except for Roenicke, we're

Nuclear Plant's Switch Jammed, Says VEPCO

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A valve switch blocked with a pencil and paper clip may have contributed to the release of a small amount of radioactive gas at the North Anna nuclear power station last week, the Virginia Electric & Power Co. says.

W.L. Proffitt, Vepco senior vice president for power, said Monday the Nuclear Regulatory Commission had been notified of the apparent improper switch setting.

James P. O'Reilly, director of the NRC's Region II Office of Inspection and Enforcement in Atlanta, said two inspectors had been sent to the plant to investigate the matter.

Proffitt said North Anna employees used the pencil and a paper clip to defeat a spring-operated switch located in the control room on the volume control tank system.

The system is used to control the volume of water going into the primary cooling system.

The position of the switch prevented the automatic system from diverting reactor coolant to recovery tanks, resulting in overfilling of the volume control tank and the lifting of a relief valve, Proffitt said.

A slight amount of radioactive gas, mostly xenon, was released Sept. 25 to the plant's auxiliary building, which houses non-nuclear equipment. The gas was diluted by air when released to the environment, and no radiation readings above normal were recorded outside the plant.

Five Vepco employees were exposed to small amounts of radiation.

The release of the gas after a leaking heat exchanger tube triggered a series of events ultimately led to a cold shutdown of the reactor — the only one operational at the North Anna plant.

Proffitt said the valve was blocked by station personnel because, at its normal setting, the valve was allowing some water to be diverted to another system. This diversion was not wanted during normal operation, he said.

The Vepco executive said the company was in the process of identifying the personnel responsible for the switch setting. "They're due an opportunity to explain," he said.

A Vepco official appeared before the Louisa County Board of Supervisors Monday to explain why local officials weren't notified of the radiation leak and reactor shutdown until 10 hours after it happened.

Ashby Baum, Vepco's executive manager for quality assurance, said the utility never considered the situation "a serious incident." But he conceded after the meeting that officials in Louisa County, where the plant is located, probably should have been notified.

The radioactive gas was released shortly after 6 a.m. last Tuesday. County Administrator Ed Kube was told of the situation about 4:30 p.m. that day.

Baum said Vepco would have notified Louisa officials if it had known the NRC was going to inform the news media of the incident.

The county sheriff and supervisors' chairman have complained that they learned of the incident from reporters. "It was a very embarrassing situation for me," said Chairman A.G. Johnson.

"There was no requirement that we notify any off-site officials because there was no release" of radiation at measurable levels, he said.

U.S. Refuses To Pay, So Mexico Won't Pay

By KEVIN M. KELLEGHAN
Associated Press Writer

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Citing U.S. refusal to pay Mexico for the salting of the Mexicali Valley, President Jose Lopez Portillo says Mexico "will pay nothing" for the damage to the Texas coast from the runaway Ixtoc I oil well in the Gulf of Mexico.

Saline water from the Colorado River caused salt beds to form years ago in the Mexicali Valley below the California and Arizona borders, making crop lands virtually useless. In 1972, President Luis Echeverria during a visit to Washington told a joint session of the U.S. Congress the issue was "the most delicate bilateral problem" between the two countries.

Lopez Portillo spoke to an estimated 100,000 Mexicans in downtown Mexico City on his return from the United States and Panama. He met in Washington last week with President Carter, addressed the U.N. General Assembly and was the keynote speaker Monday at ceremonies marking the transfer of the Panama Canal Zone to Panamanian control.

The Foreign Ministry denied a report in the New York Times that Lopez Portillo in his meeting with Carter agreed their governments would discuss Mexican payment for damages caused by the oil well spill. The Mexican president said he and Carter discussed negotiating an agreement to prevent future damage to the environment.

"The future yes, the past no," said Lopez Portillo.

The Foreign Ministry said references to the payment of damages were deliberately excluded from the talks in Washington.

About 110 million gallons of crude has spilled from the Ixtoc 1 offshore well in the Bay of Campeche, 500 miles south of the Texas border. The well blew out June 3, spewing up 1.25 million gallons of oil a day. Officials of PEMEX, the state-owned oil monopoly, say the flow has been reduced to about 420,000 gallons a day and they hope the well can be capped by the middle of this month.

Much of the lower Texas Gulf Coast was coated in black globs of oil from the runaway well, seriously affecting the usually lucrative tourist season there.

Scout-O-Rama Set Nov. 10

Some 1,800 to 2,500 scouts are expected to participate in an East Carolina Council Scout-O-Rama scheduled for Nov. 10 in Greenville.

Local scout executive Richard Kelly said that the Council-wide event will hopefully attract from 4,000 to 8,000 visitors.

Scouts from Pitt, Greene, Nash, Caswell, Edgecombe, Halifax, Beaufort and Hyde Counties will be on hand for the one-day Scout-O-Rama at McGowan's Warehouse on Charles Boulevard.

Kelly pointed out that approximately 100 Cub, Boy Scout and Explorer units will have individual booths set up during the exposition, demonstrating a wide variety of scouting activities and skills, including among others camping, the scout religious award program, field sports, and conservation.

Hours for the event will be from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Kelly said.

Area scouts have begun the sale of tickets, he pointed out, for admission to the Scout-O-Rama. Tickets will be available for $1 per family and Kelly explained that the family ticket will also admit one person to the East Carolina University-Richmond football game that night.

dividual booths set up during the exposition, demonstrating a wide variety of scouting activities and skills, including among others camping, the scout religious award program, field sports, and conservation.

Vast Odds Against Being The Winner

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Don't bet on winning the new Cadillac and 25,000 Susan B. Anthony dollars offered by a Boardwalk casino hotel this weekend.

Officials at Caesars' Boardwalk Regency admit that the chances of your winning the publicity gimmick are a billion to one and of anyone winning at all are about four to one or worse.

The casino hotel has parked the new car, with sparkling dollar coins in its trunk, in its gambling hall and promises to give it all away Sunday night when a celebrity chooses nine numbers from a gigantic pop-corn machine.

The winner will be the person whose Social Security number matches the winning number. If the winner is present at the drawing, he will get $100,000 and the car.

But the selection of a nine-digit number makes it a billion-to-one shot that any individual's Social Security number will be picked.

In addition, federal officials say that only about 265 million Social Security numbers have been issued since the 1930s — and that doesn't include cardholders who have died.

"We know people would recognize that this is a tremendous longshot, but it could be you," casino spokesman William Carlos said Monday. "We're not trying to kid anybody that the odds are great against any individual winning. But there is an exciting feeling, a sense of anticipation."

To continue the hype, Caesars on Monday placed a million Susan B. Anthony dollars in a plexiglass triangle in the casino. Caesars is calling the coins "Suzie B's."

Charity has the best chance of winning the $25,000. Caesars says it will turn it over to an unidentified charity if no one claims the money by Nov. 7.

Sticky Issue For State's Educators

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Educators in North Carolina are facing the sticky issue of how to improve the quality of teaching in the state without eliminating large numbers of minority applicants who have historically had troubles with the standardized National Teacher Examination.

In 1976, South Carolina raised the minimum passing score on the test from 975 to 1,178. The result was that half of the state's graduates have failed the exam, and in some black colleges the failure rate has reached 100 percent.

The N.C. Board of Education has implemented a Quality Assurance Plan, presently under study by the Department of Public Instruction. The plan would revamp the entire process of teacher certification in North Carolina.

As part of the proposal, minimum scores on the NTE would rise from 950 to approximately 1,050 in most of the exam's 22 subject areas. The increase would be phased in next year, beginning in July.

Under the current system, about 30 percent of the black students taking the exam fail it, as compared to a failure rate for whites of about 1.5 percent.

Officials in the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County schools have confirmed that the NTE often poses problems to the hiring of minority candidates who are otherwise eminently qualified to teach.

System officials say they would like to have a teaching force that is one-third black, in proportion to minority representation as a whole in the county.

Presently, about 27 percent of the teachers in the system are black, though the level drops to 21 percent of the teachers at the secondary level.

Officials in Winston-Salem-Forsyth also say that following in South Carolina's footsteps could make it even more difficult to hire minority applicants.

"If we took the NTE by itself and didn't do anything else, I think it would happen here," said J. Arthur Taylor, director of the state's division of teacher certification. "But we're not looking at the simple imposition of a higher score."

There have been protests from black educators about the minimum score, but most recently, administrators from Winston-Salem State University say they will attack the problem, but not by criticism of the exam.

"The exam is the state-legislated certifying instrument," said Dr. Randolph A. Tobias, director of the school's teacher education division. "It would be like beating a straw man."

Officials from the Educational Testing Service and from the University of North Carolina's central office have visited Winston-Salem State to offer advice. Students will probably be coached in test-taking skills, and admission requirements to the teacher-education program will probably be stiffened.

Expanding Erosion For Ocean Isle Residents

OCEAN ISLE BEACH, N.C. (AP) — In 1974, Earl Benton's beach house was 50 feet from the shore at Ocean Isle Beach. Today, it wobbles on a sharp cliff that marks the high-tide line.

Every year, wave action washes away 3 feet to 5 feet off the island beach. Combined with the recent devastation brought on by Hurricane David, Benton's home is now dangerously close to falling into the ocean.

But Benton thinks he may have found a way to beat the ocean. He is planning to spend more than $5,000 to build a seawall in front of his home. He sees the day when a seawall stretches the length of Ocean Isle. He thinks it will be paid for and maintained by ocean front residents.

Other residents aren't as optimistic. "For Sale" signs are common sights on the northern end of the island, where erosion has taken the heaviest toll.

Some owners have sold their homes and lots to a Charlotte corporation that will relocate the houses.

In the wake of the storms spawned by David, the island's main street collapsed, and pieces of asphalt, telephone poles and homes can be found half-buried on the beach.

The northern end of Ocean Isle and Wrightsville Beach suffered the worst erosion in the state during David. But whole chunks were washed away from several other North Carolina beaches, including Long, Holden and Topsail.

Beachfront residents have few alternatives to combat beach erosion. The state does not encourage construction of seawalls — called bulkheading — because scientists say such construction causes faster erosion on adjacent property.

Residents of other state beaches, such as Wrightsville and Atlantic, have pooled resources to build lengthy seawalls. At most of them, the scientists' beliefs have been evidenced: the sea is cutting channels at the end of the bulkheads, and the homes with seawalls are in danger of becoming peninsulas or islands.

Benton started last week on his wall of concrete and pilings drilled 10 feet into the ground. He said he hoped other beach residents would see his wall was effective and build their own, despite the $100-a-foot cost.

Benton admits that his seawall presents drawbacks, but argues that those drawbacks would disappear if everyone put up a wall.

"If you can't get people together, it won't work," he said. "But right now, you can hold off your place and hope that other people will too."

To Will: The Redevelopment Commission is planning a study of the area. The study will include a survey of the area and a report on the feasibility of a seawall. The study will be completed by the end of the year.

Mental Health Board Hears Advisory Data

Pitt County Area Mental Health Board heard reports recently from members of the center's Professional Advisory Board.

Center executives and quality assurance committees make up the Professional Board.

Dr. Robert Ratcliffe, Center Medical Director, gave a summary of activities, plans and problems from the professional group. According to Ratcliffe, the Professional Advisory Board advises the Area Director and Area Board on concerns and accomplishments of center programs. He said that the Advisory Board would update the Area Board every six months. He stated that the Quality Assurance Committee checks the quality of services which consumers receive and he discussed five functions of the group.

Also reporting to the Area Board were representatives of center service areas.

Chicod PAC To Be Organizing

The Chicod School PAC will hold its organizational meeting Wednesday, Oct. 3, 2 p.m., in the school library.

Bernard Haselrig, county director of Title One programs, will be the guest speaker. Teachers will also give an overview of new programs initiated in county schools this year. Mrs. Geraldine Smith, PAC president, invites each parent to be present.

College Integration Study Is Ordered By Baptist Leaders

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — The executive committee of the Baptist State Convention has directed its higher education committee to look into the apparent lack of progress in integration of the state's seven Baptist colleges.

Gastonia Baptist Harrill Jones made the report to the committee last week. Jones said he conducted the study to determine how well the Baptist colleges had complied with a 1977 resolution of the Southern Baptist Convention calling for affirmative action in integration and human rights.

Among Jones' findings:

- Chowan College has no nonwhite instructors, although 25 percent of its students are nonwhite.
- Only four of Wake Forest's 227 faculty members are nonwhite — 1.8 percent. Only 140 of the 4,630 students — 3 percent — are nonwhite.
- Campbell College has no nonwhite faculty members and only 80 of its 2,540 students — 3 percent — are nonwhite.
- The seven schools have only 11 nonwhite faculty members, but 480 of 2,270 employees working in housekeeping, maintenance and other support jobs in the colleges are nonwhite.

- Only two nonwhites have been named to college advisory committees, which have a total of 399 members.
- Only one black, Howard Lee of Chapel Hill, has ever served as trustee of a Baptist-sponsored college. He was on the Wake Forest board.

The institutions surveyed included Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, Mars Hill College in Mars Hill, Campbell

College in Buies Creek, Chowan College in Murfreesboro, Wingate College in Wingate, Gardner-Webb College in Boiling Springs and Meredith College in Raleigh.

Jones told the committee that the convention appoints the college trustees and noted that they must be North Carolinians who belong to churches affiliated with the State Baptist Convention.

"About 99 percent of those churches are white," Jones said. "The state's predominantly black churches belong to the General Baptist Convention."

On previous occasions Jones has upset Baptist leaders by questioning convention activities and challenging editorial policies of the Biblical Recorder, the state Baptist newspaper. But Convention Executive Secretary Cecil Ray said the report was well received by the executive committee.

"I think most committee members had piecemeal knowledge of integration in the Baptist colleges. No one had put together a report like Mr. Jones presented," Ray said.

Justice Information System Study Slated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and Gov. Jim Hunt have come to terms on the implementation of a comprehensive criminal justice information system in North Carolina.

After consulting with Secretary Burley Mitchell of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety and with Chief Justice Joseph Branch, Hunt and Edmisten agreed to set up within the next two weeks a blue-ribbon panel to study the subject.

The panel's responsibility will be to recommend to the General Assembly a means of establishing a criminal justice network that would protect an individual's right to privacy and at the same time give the public the right to know about his criminal record.

Crime statistics are currently compiled by the Police Information Network, which is operated by the Justice Department. The Department of Corrections is responsible for data on imprisonment and the Department of Motor Vehicles maintains information on driving offenses.

But unless a work-up has been done by the State Bureau of Investigation, a judge has no way of obtaining complete information on a criminal's record when he has to pass sentence. During the 1979 legislature, Edmisten opposed efforts by the Hunt administration to consolidate an expanded criminal justice information system, including the Justice Department's network, under the Department of Crime Control or the Department of Administration.

"I frankly have fought this program for six years," said Edmisten. "I was afraid we would be creating a monster that would be Big Brother to everybody." But Edmisten said a recent meeting with Hunt helped change his mind.

"For the first time since I've been attorney general, the governor in office has sat down and talked with me about this very complex problem," Edmisten said. "The governor and I have have basically the same ideas on (the information system)."

"It would not be controlled by any one department, but would have a shared responsibility through the governor, the attorney general's office and the courts through the office of the chief justice."

Accept Plan On Payments

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tentative approval was given Monday to a plan to provide payments to farmers with tobacco damaged by a contaminated Smith-Douglass Co. fertilizer by Lloyds Underwriters of London.

The plan is actually a modified version of one submitted by Lloyds, the representative of seven insurance companies that provide secondary insurance coverage for Smith-Douglass.

The state Insurance Department is holding hearings on whether Smith-Douglass' primary insurer, Affiliated Factory Mutual Insurance Co., should lose its North Carolina license for unfair practices in settling claims with farmers whose tobacco was damaged. Formal investigation into the charges has begun, state officials said Monday.

The settlement plan that won tentative approval Monday has been sent to Lloyds' headquarters in London to be approved before taking effect.

State officials said a meeting between Lloyds executives and state officials to discuss the plan will probably be held Thursday. Representatives of the farmers are also being allowed to participate.

W. Kenneth Brown, deputy insurance commissioner, said the plan was "a much more flexible plan than Affiliated's. It's also more in tune with what the farmers want."

"I think Lloyds is taking a new attitude that farmers should have input into what is going on," Brown said.

State insurance officials called a hearing on the practices used by Affiliated FM after receiving numerous complaints from the farmers involved.

Named To Fill Senate Seat

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt Monday named R.P. "Bo" Thomas of Hendersonville to fill the Senate seat vacated by Cecil J. Hill of Brevard.

Hill was recently named by Hunt to the North Carolina Court of Appeals. He served his third term in the Senate starting in 1978.

Thomas, 47, is a partner in Bo Thomas and Company, a produce firm. He will have to run for re-election in November 1980 if he wishes to keep the 27th District seat.

Thomas was nominated for the seat by the district executive committee.

By JOHN WINN MILLER
Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There's one in Russia on a peace mission. Another is a lobbyist in the Colorado Legislature. Still another works on an Indian reservation. And together they're taking on one of the largest coal companies in the South.

Like the Gulf Oil Corp. before it, the Blue Diamond Coal Co. of Knoxville, Tenn., is finding out that the Sisters of Loretto mean business.

The Sisters of Loretto, an order of nuns founded 167 years ago in Kentucky, want the coal company to be more "socially responsible" in mine safety, labor relations and pollution control. To that end, they filed suit Sept. 19 at Chancery Court in Wilmington, Del., where Blue Diamond is chartered.

More than a year ago, the Sisters quietly began buying what few shares were available in the privately-held company. But Blue Diamond refused to list them as stockholders-of-record. It also asked the Sisters to sign affidavits stating that they were not participating in a conspiracy against the company.

In the suit, the order and 13 other stock-holding religious groups and social activists are seeking to be listed as Blue Diamond stockholders and to have the affidavit declared illegal.

For Blue Diamond, the stakes are high. Should the company lose the suit, there is a possibility that it would have to open up its books to public scrutiny for the first time in its 64-year history.

For the 735 Sisters of Loretto it's just one more in a long history of battles.

In 1812, three frontier teachers founded the order in the middle of Kentucky. It was the first order without ties to Europe established in America.

The name, originally Friends of Mary, was changed to honor a famous shrine in Loretto, Italy. And, as the frontier moved west, so did the Sisters of Loretto.

Today they can be found working as teachers, nurses, social workers and activists in more than 20 states.

Although the headquarters was moved to Denver in 1970, the Mother House — the spiritual headquarters — is still in tiny Nerinx, Ky., about 50 miles south of Louisville.

About 110 of the sisters, mostly retired, live there surrounded by 300 acres of wooded farmland and 19th century buildings.

"Our order isn't very structured," said Sister Cecily Jones, communications director. "The everyday routine is left up to the individual. Most of the sisters live in ordinary houses and wear ordinary clothes, rather than habits."

The Sisters of Loretto were reorganized in 1970 along democratic lines. They elect a president every four years and hold annual assemblies.

"Our history has given us a greater need to change," said Sister Mary Swain, the order's finance director. "It's part of the frontier tradition."

That frontier spirit has also motivated the order to seek changes in society.

One of their weapons is money.

The Sisters give all the money they earn to the order, which gives them living expenses and invests the rest in a retirement fund.

"We are not speculators, so the investments have to give a good return," Sister Swain explained. "But we also feel that we have to be socially responsible."

To be socially responsible means promoting reforms in a company by introducing resolutions at annual stockholder meetings.

They have used that method on several companies, but the most successful effort involved Gulf Oil Corp. In 1976, they introduced a resolution calling for Gulf to stop all political contributions to South Korea.

After meeting with the sisters, Gulf agreed to forbid the contributions.

The order hasn't been able to use the same method against Blue Diamond because the company refuses to register them as stockholders, even though they own 81 shares.

Under federal law, corporations with 500 or more registered stockholders must open their books and policies to public scrutiny.

Blue Diamond, whose stock is largely controlled by its founding family — the Bonnymans of Knoxville, Tenn. — has never officially gone over the 500-stockholder limit.

But the sisters and their allies believe that they have indirect evidence to prove differently.

In January 1978, Blue Diamond sent out a letter to stockholders offering to buy all their stock at an 11 percent premium. The letter noted that the company had 513 stockholders as of September 1977.

Ralph Dye, vice president and corporate secretary, said he wouldn't comment on the merits of the nuns' suit.

"I don't know what they want, except to harass us and make a nuisance out of themselves," Dye said in a telephone interview.

In a statement issued to Forbes Magazine, Dye accused the Sisters of Loretto of trying to punish the company for its successful resistance to efforts by the United Mine Workers union to organize miners at its Justus mine at Stearns, Ky.

"Our decision to sue didn't have anything to do with the union," Sister Swain said. "Our concern is with the safety of the miners, but we are not working with the UMW in any way."

With more than $75 million in assets, Blue Diamond is one of the largest coal producers in Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia. Its mines produce more than 2 million tons of coal a year.

It also has one of the worst safety records in the industry, with more than 4,600 federal violations since 1970. Twenty-six men were killed at its Scotia, Ky., mine in two explosions in March 1976.

By becoming shareholders-of-record, say the sisters, they hope to force Blue Diamond to improve that record.

COULD REDUCE OIL USE

WASHINGTON (AP) — An annual savings of 140 million barrels of oil could be realized if the nation's existing small dams were modified to generate electricity, an administration official says.

This woman is taking your money.

Just as though she were reaching in your pocket. Because she's a shoplifter. Every shopping day, thousands of shoplifters like her cost stores literally millions of dollars in merchandise. Then, in order to stay in business, stores are forced to raise their prices. And you wind up paying more money. Because of shoplifters.

Of course, this is unfair to honest shoppers. So, the stores are getting tougher on shoplifters. And now, with the most modern electronic equipment, and additional security personnel, more and more shoplifters are getting caught.

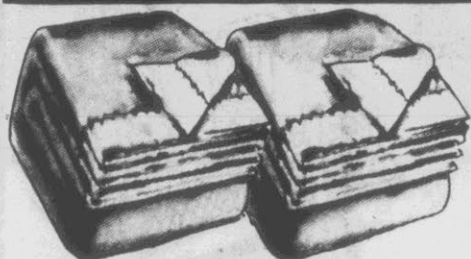

If you know a shoplifter, pass the word. That shoplifters pay fines. That shoplifters go to jail. And most important—that shoplifters are really stealing from you.
