

Marines Go Ashore At Guantanamo Bay

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — Marines swarmed ashore by helicopter and amphibious craft in a practice landing today on the beaches of the only U.S. military base on communist soil. A Soviet surveillance ship stood offshore and Cuban reservists in the area were called to duty.

"So far as we know, there were no problems" in the 8 a.m. landing, said Cmdr. Howard Matson, a spokesman at Atlantic Fleet headquarters in Norfolk, Va.

Three Navy warships had carried the Marines close to the shore at dawn in the show-the-flag exercise, hastily arranged by the Carter administration as a flexing of military muscle in response to the presence in Cuba of a Soviet brigade, about 500 miles west of Guantanamo.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said there was no overt action by the Cubans.

About 2,200 Marines have been involved in the landing exercise, which is a practice reinforcement at Guantanamo Bay, which is on the eastern tip of Cuba 500 miles from Havana.

Today's landing was hastily arranged by the Carter administration as a flexing of military muscle in the face of Russian troops on Cuba.

Military officials insisted the exercise was routine and although they made extreme efforts to accommodate nearly 80 newsmen covering the landing, they denied reports that the exercise was merely a media event.

Military planners downplayed the importance of the landing as an event in itself.

"It's no big deal," said Marine Col. Mark Fennessy, commander of the 420

Marines permanently based at Guantanamo Bay.

For most of the nearly 6,000 servicemen, their families, and civilians on the 45-square-mile base, life went on as usual during the planning of the landing.

"My wife has a ceramics class scheduled in the morning," Fennessy said at a briefing Tuesday night.

Fennessy said there have been no reports of Russian ships or surveillance teams in the area. But confirmed reports that Cuban soldiers, who monitor the base from the other side of a 17-mile perimeter, have been more active in recent days.

"I'm sure that they are going to be in their observation areas watching this," Fennessy said of the Cubans.

Hearing Held On Annexation Plans

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council conducted a public hearing on the annexation of the Red Oak, Oakdale and Baker Heights Subdivisions, and adjacent properties, and scheduled action on the annexation for Nov. 5.

Meeting in a special call session last night, the Council heard a presentation on the proposed annexation by the city staff and voted to consider approval at the Nov. 5 call session.

Staff Planner Wade Pitt explained that the city conducted feasibility studies on four areas for possible annexation consideration; Brook Valley, the Mumford Road-Pactolus Highway area, Oakgrove Subdivision, and the Red Oak-Oakdale area.

Pitt said that the studies indicate that local growth appears to be in a westerly direction and the Red Oak and Oakdale Subdivision areas would offer the best alternative of the four areas based on the growth trends.

The planner explained that the proposed section meets the various annexation requirements, including land contiguous to the corporate limits. Studies indicate that some 255 homes are located in the proposed area and the estimated resident population is 754.

Pitt noted that the city has the authority to annex without consent of the residents if annexation requirements are met. Residents opposing the annexation must prove that the city did not fulfill requirements of the annexation laws in order to block the city action.

The proposed area is located in the Greenville and Winterville townships south of Hardee's Run-Forbes Mill Run, west of the present corporate limit, north of Carolina East Mall property, Langston property, Ange heirs property, Dan Morgan property, and east of the John F. Moyer property.

Prior to the public hearing, Mayor Percy Cox noted that an annexation program was undertaken in the late 1960's. He said that the Council saw the need for additional annexation some four years ago and work has been underway to get the program accomplished.

Cox contended that annexation offers the only means for a city to grow and he pointed to the various services that the city has to offer fringe areas.

Mrs. Nesa Ann Worthington, who said that she owns farm property between Red Oak and Oakdale, said that she did not see how she could pay city taxes and farm her land "and make anything." Mrs. Worthington said that she was not opposed to city growth but she felt something should be done regarding farm land.

City tax official Floyd Little said that he thought the property could be designated for a deferred status and be a lot cheaper, tax-wise, for the owner.

The Rev. J. M. Bragg, pastor of Peoples Baptist Temple, said that as a resident of Red Oak he was "very much in favor" of the proposed annexation. Bragg cited improvements in police and fire protection as a result of the move and he urged the Council to move ahead with the annexation.

J. T. Manning Jr., a resident and property owner in the proposed area, also offered his endorsement, saying the annexation would be an asset to residents living in the area.

Doug Jackson asked the Council if the proposed area would remain in the present school district if annexation is approved. Cox said that the area would remain in the Winterville school district since district lines do not follow corporate limits.

Cox commended the city manager, Utilities personnel and local staff for "doing their job" in working on the annexation program.

In other business on the call agenda, a public hearing was conducted on Articles I, II and III of the proposed Subdivision Regulations. Hearings have been scheduled for Articles IV and V at the Nov. 5 special meeting.

Articles I, II and III deal with general provisions, procedures for preliminary and final plat approval and design standards. Planning Director Bobby Roberson explained that the proposed articles have gone through the Codes Review Committee, Planning and Zoning Commission and

Tidal Wave

NICE, France (AP) — Police closed beaches along the eastern end of the French Riviera today following a freak tidal wave that swept 13 persons in Nice and Antibes and did damage estimated at $10 million.

Officials said there was no indication of a repetition of the disaster Tuesday, but people were told to staff off the beaches as a precautionary measure.

Weather and marine experts said there was no record of a similar tidal wave on the Riviera. They said it was due to more than a week of torrential rain that flooded the Var River. The river carried millions of tons of mud, sand and debris into Antibes Bay, and this caused a massive underwater landslide.

The slide pulled the waterline away from the shore more than 300 yards, and the damage was done by the rush back of the returning sea.

The wave was felt for 60 miles along the famed resort coast, from the Italian border to Cannes. But the bathing season ended weeks ago, and the tens of thousands of midsummer holidaymakers were gone, leaving the beaches virtually deserted.

Eight of the dead were construction men working on a new breakwater off the Nice airport, and three were missing. They were swept into the sea with their trucks, cranes and bulldozers when the wave crashed into the breakwater.

Two other persons were washed off the beach at Antibes and apparently drowned. The wave thundered across streets near Antibes harbor, overturning cars and temporarily flooding many buildings.

Approve Paying Hospital With Credit Cards

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Hospital bills can now be paid with Master Charge and VISA credit cards, according to a resolution passed by the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees last night.

This credit will be handled by Planters Bank, with which the hospital has an account, and there will be a two percent charge.

The board approved expenditures of up to $250,000 over a three-year period for the equipping of the hospital bed tower to be added soon. The budget provides only for the building itself, being built with state funds channeled through the East Carolina University Medical School.

Also approved were expenditures of $45,405.50 for beds and other furnishings for 50 rooms ($908.11 per room) and for an IBM typewriter at $792. The furniture money, it is hoped, will come from the PCMH Gift Fund.

W. R. Duke, new PCMH Foundation chairman, was present. Other officers of the foundation, it was announced, are Jack Minges, vice chairman; Betty Speir, secretary; Kenneth Dews, treasurer; and William Watson. Duke and Dews are both former Hospital Board Chairmen.

Former trustee Helen Moseley Gant was presented a service award. She served on the hospital board from March, 1975 to May, 1979. Mrs. Gant, now living in Burlington, was accompanied by her husband, Chet Gant.

Present were Georgette Hedrick and Doug Hinson of the public information staff of the ECU Medical School. They will be attending board meetings from now on, it was pointed out, as the hospital is now sharing the services of the public information staff of the med school.

Approval was given for Associate Director for Finance Warren McRoy to hire a firm to appraise the hospital plant for depreciation. It is looking attractive fiscally to get the life of the building down to 20 to 25 years, instead of the 40 first agreed upon. The amount to be paid the firm was set at not more than $15,000.

Building Committee chairman, County Commissioner Charles Gaskins, reported that all bids on work on the new hospital bed tower are "in under the money," except the electrical ones. Only two electrical contracting firms entered bids, he said, and at least three are needed. New bid-taking for electrical work will be done Oct. 24, he indicated.

Full accreditation of the hospital has been received by the Joint Committee Accreditation of Hospitals, it was announced by Hospital General Director Jack Richardson. He said there are "a few things to take care of," but that all can be done fairly quickly and easily.

Hospital Executive Director Rick Gilstrap and Chief of the Medical Staff Dr. William Bost reported on a Quality Assurance Plan encouraged by the JCAH and being undertaken by the hospital. It's a systematic method of evaluating the quality of care being provided at the hospital on an on-going basis, they indicated.

Associate Director for Nursing Services Jean Owens reported that 58 registered nurses have been added to the staff of PCMH in the past year. Of these, she said, 53 were to open new areas of service. There are now 15 Canadian nurses on the staff, she said, and it's expected that about 10 more are coming.

Peace Prize For Woman

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Mother Teresa, Calcutta's "saint of the gutters," was awarded the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize today for her work among the poor of India.

The Yugoslavia-born Roman Catholic nun is the sixth woman to win the prize and the first since Mairead Corrigan and Betty Williams of Northern Ireland won in 1976.

President Carter had been among the 56 individuals and organizations nominated for this year's prize. Other nominees had reportedly included South African black leader Steven Biko, who died while in prison; Soviet dissenter Yuri Orlov; Archbishop Oscar Romero of El Salvador and Adolfo Perez Esquivel of Argentina, head of a Latin American Christian services group.

The five-member Norwegian Nobel Committee said Mother Teresa was given the prize "in recognition of her work in bringing help to suffering humanity."

The prize this year is worth $190,000.

A door-to-door solicitor came to my house last week. After I refused to let him in, he kicked my dog and later the dog had convulsions and had to be treated at considerable expense by our veterinarian. A. R.

According to the Greenville Police Department, no one using the name of the group you told us of has applied for a solicitation permit from the Greenville Police Department. (We have chosen not to print the name of the group, since we cannot verify that this individual actually worked for the group named.) "Always ask a door-to-door salesperson or canvasser of any type to see a police permit," Lt. John Kerr said. "If you don't see one that has a picture on it and looks legitimate, call the police immediately. This woman who had her dog attacked definitely should have called us immediately. Chances are good that we could have stopped the guy before he was too far away."

HOTLINE APPEALS

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Mrs. Brenda H. Teel, Juvenile Court Volunteer Coordinator, has asked Hotline to appeal for persons interested in relating to juvenile court offenders on a one-to-one basis.

Because most of the youthful offenders of this county are male, there is a desperate need for male volunteers, Mrs. Teel said. Further, she said, the Juvenile Court Volunteer Programs provide volunteers for other social agencies in the area.

For further information, Mrs. Teel may be contacted at 752-1811.

Hotline has been asked to appeal to the woman who witnessed a 5:15 p. m. Monday automobile accident at the intersection of Highway 11 and the Jim Jones Road (State Road 1130) near Winterville to please call 758-2255 during the day or 746-3870 at night.

She was driving a bungundy Buick, other witnesses indicated.

Industrial Park Study Grant For County Area

Bruce Beasley Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission, announced the receipt of a $30,000 Coastal Plains Regional Commission grant to conduct an industrial park feasibility study in the Ayden-Grifton area.

Beasley said that the grant is for 13 months beginning Oct. 1, 1979 and will be used in selecting and identifying potential industrial development sites on the NC 11 corridor in the Ayden-Grifton area.

"From a group of ten to 12 sites it is hoped at least three from each community will be reviewed more closely," he said. "Once these are selected, then the soil boring, aerial photography, topographical and other work can be initiated."

Beasley said that in conjunction with the physical characteristics of the sites, a detailed economic profile of the area will be conducted so that labor, utility, livability and other industry-related data can be accumulated.

He explained, "When completed, this study will allow our staff and the officials of Ayden-Grifton to be able to place in an industrial prospect's hands the important material needed to finalize an industrial location decision and without any initial cost to the prospect."

Beasley mentioned that Data General, a Westboro, Mass. based computer company, optioned property in the Ayden area in the spring of 1976 "only to abandon plans based in information that there were potential building foundation problems with the prime site. It is hoped this will not be allowed to happen in the future by having more conclusive information to attract and to aid prospects as they investigate the Ayden-Grifton area."

According to the commission spokesman, contracts have been completed with the consulting firm which will conduct the feasibility study.

Contracts Awarded On New Office Building

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Contracts totaling $7.6 million were awarded Tuesday by the state for construction of a new legislative office building in Raleigh.

The contracts did not include $450,000 for a controversial tunnel that had been proposed to connect the new building with the existing Legislative Building across the street.

The tunnel was eliminated last month by the Advisory Budget Commission, which earlier approved the tunnel project.

Barnhill Contracting Co. Inc. of Tarboro was awarded the general construction contract by the state Capital Building Authority. The company submitted a low bid of $5.76 million.

Mike Davis, Department of Administration spokesman, said it will cost $8.33 million for the three-story, granite-faced building, including architects' fees and furnishings.

The building will contain offices for about half the legislators, allowing offices in the existing building to be doubled in size. It will also contain committee rooms and house the secretary of state and state auditor's offices.

The General Assembly appropriated money for the 173,000-square-foot structure in 1978. It will cost approximately $45 per square foot.

The Capital Building Authority also approved:

—A contract with Grier-Fripp Associates of Charlotte to design a $20.3-million medium-security prison unit in Montgomery County.

—A contract with O'Brien-Atkins Associates of Chapel Hill to design a $1.5 million aviary project at the N.C. Zoo near Asheboro.

Costa Rican Coed Finds Contrasts

By MARGARET BUNCH
Ana Sanchez is a bright, happy person who laughs frequently when she talks, especially if she has to hesitate for an English word to complete a sentence. Even though she has had only two and one half years of formal English training, she is attending East Carolina University, studying English literature and linguistics and getting along very well to be a "stranger in a strange land."

Ana is one of the students who have come to East Carolina to study as a result of a cooperative program between ECU and the Universidad Nacional in Costa Rica. The Universidad is about the same size as ECU, having 11,000 students. The exchange program is not the classic exchange with students being traded for students, but a trade of facilities at the Universidad Nacional for three assistantships at East Carolina for Costa Rican students.

Ana, an undergraduate senior, works in the Spanish language lab six hours per week and teaches Spanish four hours per week in the fifth grade at Wahl-Coates School. Another Costa Rican student, Miguel Gutierrez, is working on the graduate level in the School of Education at ECU.

Asseri, a small town about the size of Greenville, is Ana's home town and she describes it as being very much like Greenville with its own Hardee's, McDonald's and Pizza Hut. She is impressed by the friendliness of the people in Greenville, likes the movies very much, enjoys the ECU band at football games, but is not impressed by the discos which have not reached her home town in Costa Rica as yet. She attended the Pitt county fair and has been to Atlantic Beach, both new experiences for her. Ana would like very much to see California, but says that she "does not know why" as she pronounces every syllable in "California" distinctly in a Spanish accent.

The Universidad Nacional and East Carolina are very different in the way that personal relationships are developed, according to Ana. Classes at the Costa Rican University are arranged so that same students attend the same classes together and warm friendships develop between the students and between the students and professors. Ana said that she does not get to know the students in her classes here at ECU "so much" because they scatter immediately after the bell, so friends are made in the dorm and other places where more leisurely contact may be made.

The area around Asseri is mountainous, much like the western North Carolina area. Dr. Robert Cramer, director of the Costa Rican program, explained, and the chief crop is coffee which Ana has helped to harvest. The flatness of eastern North Carolina is strange to Ana and she remarks about the novelty of seeing the moon come over the horizon very early instead of seeing it only overhead in the high elevation (4,500 feet) of her home town.

When Ana returns to Costa Rica, she will finish her Bachelor of English degree in education and be prepared to teach English on the high school level. The educational system in Costa Rica is similar to that in the U.S., but Costa Ricans spend only 11 years in the elementary and secondary schools. After that they are prepared for university work and if the student is worthy — meaning capable — he or she will attend the university with all expenses paid by the government if they cannot pay for themselves.

Drying Food Is Safe

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

You read a lot these days about drying food as an alternative to canning or freezing.

How safe and economical is it?

Very safe, if done correctly, say cooperative extension experts.

Economical, too, because properly dried foods don't require extra energy for storage as frozen foods do. That's their major advantage, says Katherine J.T. Humphrey, co-author with Prof. Ruth N. Klippstein of a Cornell University extension bulletin, Home Drying of Foods.

In telephone interviews, both talked about renewed interest in the world's oldest method of food preservation.

In the beginning, food was sun-dried on trays or racks or held together with strings that could hang indoors or out. Trays were left outdoors by day and brought indoors at night and in rainy weather. This method still works but it is not recommended except in climates where daytime temperatures are 90-100 degrees F. That automatically eliminates most of the 50 states.

Today's options include home-made portable electric dehydrators, a non-electric unit designed for use outdoors or in gas or electric ovens, tabletop electric units in varying sizes and convection ovens. The latter are particularly effective because air circulation is steady, thanks to a fan inside the oven.

One manufacturer of a 1,500-watt portable convection oven says the unit uses only one hour's worth of electricity during 12 hours of dehydrating at 140 degrees F. Total fuel cost for that period would be 15 cents, based on a local utility rate of 10 cents per kilowatt hour, said Mrs. Kathy Cripps, director of product information for the company.

A 140-degree setting yields the best quality, Prof. Klippstein said. She said vitamin loss may be slightly higher at 140 than at the 120 degrees recommended by a California manufacturer of a non-electric, indoor-outdoor dehydrator.

"Lower temperatures for some thinner, tender foods are not a bad idea," she said, adding that "125 degrees F is much more satisfactory than 110."

But food dried too slowly may start to ferment and can mold and spoil, she said. Food dried too fast crusts over and is hard to rehydrate.

Drying is a good alternative to canning for home cooks afraid that botulism may develop in low acid foods. Unlike molds, botulin toxin is invisible, colorless and odorless.

"There's no way you would have botulism in dried foods," Mrs. Humphrey said.

Mold, of course, is both visible and smelly. One food dryer manufacturer recommends removing surface mold by wiping it with a solution of sodium metabisulfite and water, then re-sterilizing and re-packing the food.

Not safe, Prof. Klippstein said.

Only laboratory testing can determine which molds are a public health hazard and which are not, she said. Removing visible mold is no guarantee of safety because these plants have octopus-like tentacles that can reach down invisibly into food.

Both she and Mrs. Humphrey find fresh summer fruits good candidates for drying, especially with prices very high now on commercially dried fruit.

They disagree on one point: sulfuring, a process widely used by commercial packers to preserve fruit quality and color. Fumes created by burning powdered sulfur do the job.

Mrs. Klippstein sees sulfuring as a trade off.

"I don't like the flavor, texture, odor and color of unsulfured fruit," she said. Besides, sulfur fumes protect against loss of vitamins C and A although they destroy some thiamine, a B vitamin, she said. But since most people get their B vitamins largely from meat and cereal products, she's not concerned about the loss in dried fruit.

Sulfur fumes also destroy any insect larvae in the fruit, she said.

Fruit can also be sulfured by dipping it in a solution of sodium metabisulfite and water, a better choice for apartment dwellers, since treating with sulfur fumes must be done outdoors.

Purists consider both forms of the chemical an additive. Yet, sulfur occurs naturally in many foods, including eggs and all meats, the professor said. Fruit treated with it smells sulphurous when first dried, she added, but the odor quickly dissipates.

Mrs. Humphrey prefers other pre-treatments such as steaming, blanching or dipping in an ascorbic acid (vitamin C) mixture.

Points they agree on include: —Dried food should be packed in small containers. Otherwise, moisture and contaminants from the air can enter each time you open and close the container and spoilage can occur.

—Never taste any food that appears moldy. Destroy it in such a way that neither humans nor animals can get at it.

—Cool, dark, dry storage is best.

"The cooler the temperature, the longer food will keep," Mrs. Humphrey said. "I think the amount of time you're going to keep something should determine the pre-treatment."

"Apples don't stay around my house long enough to bother with pre-treatment. We use them in three to six months. If you're not going to use them until next summer on a camping trip, I would recommend steaming (before drying)."

In Mrs. Humphrey's opinion, the best foods for home drying are apples and corn, all fruit leathers made with canned purees and with canned applesauce if you can get a bargain.

"Corn keeps indefinitely if it is properly dried. You could dry it today and eat it 10 years from now. Apples and fruit leathers keep 3 to 12 months, depending on storage conditions."

(Editors: Government guides to home drying of foods are available from at least three sources: Cornell University, the University of California at Davis and the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Single copies of the state bulletins are available from County Cooperative Extension Agents in New York and California. Cornell's Home Drying of Food, Information Bulletin 120, can also be ordered for 40 cents per copy (quantity discounts available), from Mailing Room, Building 7, Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853. Curtain Call For Courtesy

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: The other evening I saw an outstanding ballet company perform. At the end, the audience responded with enthusiastic applause, but as the dancers took their first curtain call a large percentage of the audience rushed out of the theater, no doubt hurrying to get to their cars first.

These people were not only being rude to the performers but to others in the audience by obstructing their view of the stage.

As an actress, I have felt anger and resentment after having given my all in a performance only to be deprived of my few moments of glory because some people didn't want to stick around for an extra five minutes.

The curtain call is important to performers. It's the only opportunity we have to step out of our roles and express our gratitude to an audience that rewards us with their applause.

Please print this, Abby, to remind audiences that performers need those few precious moments of appreciation. Withhold my name and sign me ...

ACTRESS

DEAR ACTRESS: Name withheld (but I'm saving your letter). Take another bow for a beautiful letter on behalf of all performers.

DEAR ABBY: My wife has this long-time girlfriend I'll call Muriel. She's my wife's age (30), divorced, fairly attractive, but doesn't have a steady man. Muriel fancies herself to be some kind of femme fatale and has given me the come-on several times, but I've never given her any encouragement.

A couple of months ago, after I had taken my wife and Muriel to a disco, my wife told me that Muriel told her that I had made a pass at her! That was a total lie, and I told my wife I was.

Last weekend we were at a party and Muriel was there. I was very cool to her, and hardly spoke, but the next evening, my wife told me Muriel had called her at work and said that I had propositioned her!

Abby, I don't know what Muriel's game is, but I am fed up with her. I have never fooled around, but if I decided to start, it wouldn't be with Muriel. I have the feeling my wife isn't convinced that I am totally innocent. How should I handle this?

NOT GUILTY

DEAR NOT: Ask your wife to invite Muriel over. In the presence of both you and your wife confront her about her accusations. If your wife is really a good friend, she will encourage Muriel to get professional help. The poor girl could be less malicious than disturbed.

Dr. Moore Is Parents DAR Speaker Weekend Held

Saturday

FARMVILLE — The Major Benjamin May Chapter DAR held its meeting Saturday at the chapter house here. Dr. Claude Hunter Moore, professor of history, Mount Olive College, was guest speaker.

Introduced by Mrs. C. Reynolds Kernan, Dr. Moore is a native of Turkey and still lives in a house called "The Old Place." He maintains a cabin museum located across from his home. He spoke on the life of General Lafayette and his interest in the American cause during the Revolution and after the war.

The meeting was conducted by Regent Mrs. Rhoderick Williams, who welcomed guests including Dr. and Mrs. Dan Heizer, Dr. Moore and Mrs. Leonard Crawford of Greenville.

Miss Elizabeth Lang presented a book "Washington Landmark" to Dr. and Mrs. Heizer in recognition of their interest in the chapter house.

Meeting hostesses were Miss Lang, Mrs. W. Leroy Bass, Mrs. Arch J. Flanagan and Mrs. Joe Kue.

A contribution was made to Crossnore in memory of Mrs. Susan Wilcox. Mrs. Charles Carr reported on plans for the chapter house grounds and shrubbery dedication in honor of three charter members. She also announced 13 papers are being processed in Washington, D. C., for the Children of American Revolution Society.

State Regent Mrs. Robert S. Hudgins will be a guest at the meeting in November.

RALEIGH — Parents of Peace College students attended the 14th annual Parents Weekend last week.

Among those attending were Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Akin of Greenville. Their daughter, Debbie, is a sophomore at Peace.

Weekend activities included mini classes, a powder puff football game, variety show, Sunday morning worship service and president's breakfast.

Singer Judy Garland died in London in 1969.

Reliable Buses Are Necessary

A Rose High activities bus broke down last weekend in Oak City.

The result was a long and fruitless wait by the young people involved, and the major disappointment of missing the planned competition in the Indian River High School band marching festival at Chesapeake, Va.

There were complaints from many people interested in the schools about the poor condition of the activities buses.

We have no way of knowing how well the equipment is kept up, but no school group should ever leave in a bus or any other vehicle which is not in sound operating condition. A burned out clutch is an inconvenience, but some other defect could result in a disaster.

We are told that some members of the band spent hours and their own money calling in an attempt to find alternate transportation. It was too late to make it to Chesapeake, and the group was only able to make it back home when Mayor Percy Cox dispatched a municipal bus.

Somehow we have to find ways to make certain that adequate activities buses are maintained for our schools.

If we are going to ask our young people to train, as the Rose High band has done, for competitive events, then the least the system can do is provide reliable transportation.

Not Easy To Abandon Nuclear Power

Virginia Electric & Power Co. has announced it is considering converting two generating units, planned for nuclear power, to coal.

The final decision will hinge on a study of several months, but officials feel that the national climate is not right for further nuclear expansion.

It is not easy to turn away from nuclear power which once offered the hope of reliable and cheap electricity. Coal prices can soar and a major strike could interrupt the supply.

Still with the concern and increasing costs of building nuclear plants, coal fired plants may be the most inexpensive solution to increasing generating capacity.

Priority List For Action

By BILL NOBLITT
(2nd of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — Two North Carolina institutions are on the priority list for action by the Fundamentalists Christians who are banded together informally around the structure of the N.C. Association of Christian Schools: the General Assembly, and the public schools.

"Eventually we will retire quite a few legislators, and we will try to replace them with something better", says the Rev. Daniel Carr who has taken a full-time job representing the movement in Raleigh.

"Teachers are change agents, and many embrace the Humanist Manifesto. We are coming after them. It will be slow ... but sure," Carr stated.

The Humanist Manifesto is at the heart of the awakening movement which has been characterized as the Christian Reformation in this state and elsewhere in the nation.

Carr explains that a number of teachers have deliberately entered the schools to capture young minds and bring them up to despise their parents and other authority, to rebel against God and Country, to regard Man as nothing more than another animal without Divine direction.

Sex Education

Sex education in the schools is a major target. Carr says they are not opposed to teaching the biological facts of sex as a gift from God, but rather to teaching sex as a "natural fling with no restraints ... and abortion to remove the consequences."

Most parents of children in the public schools are unaware of what is being taught by the Humanists, Carr says, but are puzzled over the breakdown in communications, discipline problems, drugs and other manifestations.

Of the General Assembly, Carr says two major reasons exist for change. First, legislators have taken to rubber-stamping complex proposals and programs, many of which come down from Humanists in Washington or from Humanists within state agencies.

Secondly, the court battles to end state regulation of the Christian schools proved expensive. "It cost $150,000. In the General Assembly we can get results for 10 cents on the dollar. We can change the law and make the law and get the elephant off our toes," Carr said. The courts are too slow and unsure and expensive, he feels.

How big is the movement? There are no membership rolls, elected leaders, grass-roots organization. But the abortion issue, Carr says, has resulted in from 50,000 to 60,000 messages from Fundamentalists to Gov. Jim Hunt.

Without organization and structure, how can Fundamentalists wield power? "You are thinking in traditional terms. We are concentrating on research to prove our positions. We have the confidence of our people. The message goes forth and we respond."

"We communicate from a place of mutual trust and confidence in one another. We are not formalized ... and the average politician doesn't understand this. But they shall see it in action," Carr is convinced.

BILL NOBLITT

No Limit
Carr says the movement is not limiting itself to any specific issues but will look at anything affecting the family, the home and the church. "Government has imposed upon us the Humanist views ... we want to impose upon government the sanctity of the family and the importance of individual rights."

On the list of concerns are abortions, the schools, day care regulations, and a host of programs in the New Generation program which are seen as eroding family authority and injecting Humanist views. Carr also sees a need to challenge continual assaults upon religion under the guise of a Constitutional prohibition. Separation of church and state means the government shall not establish a religion. It does not mean religion shall be banished. "It is a fallacy to assume politics and religion are separate," he says, recalling that those who founded the country placed great emphasis on religion.

As the state and national reform movement begins to take shape, Carr says Fundamentalists "have found a great friendship with Senator Jesse Helms and the Congressional Club."

The Innuendo Reporter

WASHINGTON — There ought to be a Pulitzer Prize for "innuendo reporting." Innuendo reporting is an offshoot of investigative reporting — the main difference being that the innuendo reporter has failed to get any facts to back up his story and therefore must resort to allegations that could or could not be true. We're seeing more and more of this kind of journalism in the newspapers and on television so the public believes it's easy to do. Wrong. Innuendo reporting is the toughest type of writing and requires a great deal of imagination.

Let me give you an example of what I mean.

Sources at the Justice Department revealed today they are investigating Halabird Gritts, Amy Carter's appointments secretary, for sniffing glue in the basement of FAO Schwarz toy store in New York City.

The sources said the case has been turned over to the FBI, which hopes to complete its investigation within the next six months.

The key witness is Miss Lalla Pigeon, former wife of punk rock singer Sydney Gravestone, who was sentenced to five years for the hatchet murder of his cat Yo-Yo during a concert at Shea Stadium.

Miss Pigeon, who is hoping to start up her singing career again, said that she was in the Barbie Doll department of FAO Schwarz, which is located only three blocks from the barber shop where Albert Anastasia, the notorious mob leader, was gunned down while he was getting a shave.

She saw Gritts come in with three friends who apparently had been drinking wine with lunch at the Pierre Hotel, scene of one of the greatest safe deposit box robberies in the history of New York City.

She said Gritts came up to her and asked if she knew where he could buy some airplane glue. She said she had a friend in the hobby department in the basement at Schwarz and would take him there.

On the way to the hobby department Gritts and his friends raucously played the pinball machines, and two of them tried on ski masks, a favorite ploy of stickup artists in the city's recent plague of bank robberies.

When they got to the hobby department, Gritts inquired of the clerk if he had any glue. The clerk asked if he wanted glue for model boats or model planes, and Lalla said Gritts replied, "What's the difference?"

ART

The clerk said it was in the smell and he offered to let Gritts sniff the two kinds. Lalla, in a sworn statement, revealed that Gritts sniffed both the boat and airplane glue in her presence. Then he asked her if she wanted to go to Studio 54, whose owners are now being investigated for IRS violations.

Gritts denied, through the President's press secretary, that he had gone anywhere near the glue department and had only come into Schwarz to buy Amy a "Star Wars" game.

In the meantime Lalla's lawyer said that she had changed her story and now maintains that she did not actually see Gritts sniff the glue. She said after Gritts bought the glue, he disappeared into the washroom with his friends, and when they came out they started dunking basketballs into the net set up in the sports department. The manager became enraged and asked them to leave.

The President's press secretary produced an affidavit from a clerk who said the only thing Gritts did while he was in FAO Schwarz was

Hints Future Effort

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Heinz is a politician in training, a man who appears to be preparing to seek the presidency.

He's definitely not running next year. There already are 11 candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, and you won't find the little-known, immensely rich senator from Pennsylvania among them.

But in 1984 perhaps, or more likely in 1988, Heinz would like to go for the roses. He is grooming himself now, developing attractive legislation, working in key committee assignments and honing an imaginative public relations machine, all in an effort to master the fine points of politics and law-making on Capitol Hill.

By focusing his energies on his day-to-day work in the Senate, Heinz "training" is decidedly different from that of Sen. Larry Pressler, another freshman senator who is vying for the 1980 GOP presidential nomination even though he is little known.

Unlike Pressler, Heinz isn't trumpeting his ambitions.

Asked about presidential aspirations, Heinz replies with a coy smile and a stock phrase: "I'll cross that bridge when I come to it."

Heinz is best known for spending $2.5 million in his 1976 Senate race. That isn't much of a calling card, so he is working hard to build his stature and expand his influence.

The tall, handsome heir to the Heinz food fortune is beginning to catch the attention of Senate colleagues in the wood-paneled world where freshman Republicans are sometimes seen but seldom heard.

Earlier this year, the 40-year-old multimillionaire was elected chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee. In that post, Heinz is chief fund-raiser for all GOP Senate campaigns and thus a confidant of many of his 40 Republican Senate colleagues.

Heinz is also seeking visibility through his committee assignments. He is the third-ranking Republican on the Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee and ranking GOP

INSIDE REPORT

No 'Training' Of Cubans

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's insistence that the combat brigade it keeps in Fidel Castro's Cuba is really a training unit to help sharpen Castro's forces is contradicted by evidence available to U.S. intelligence.

"We have never seen one bit of evidence in pictures or otherwise that the Soviet brigade has ever had any contact whatsoever with the Cuban military," one intelligence specialist told us.

What that means is that the Soviet troops have their own, distinctively non-training mission: either to protect Castro from any possibility of anti-Castro revolt in the Cuban army or by the people; or, to provide some guarantee against the possibility — however remote — of U.S. military action against Cuba.

A footnote: U.S. intelligence in Cuba had reached an alarming nadir before it was stepped up somewhat because of the Soviet brigade question. It is still marginal at best only a tiny fraction of its cost in the late '60s and early '70s.

Angry Republicans

Crying foul, several top Republican foreign policy experts were furious at President Carter for claiming their full support in his handling of the Soviet brigade issue.

According to at least three of the "wisemen" summoned by Carter for help on the Soviet-Cuban question, there never was anything close to unanimity or even consensus in two days of secret White House talks with Carter.

They are former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, Lt. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, who was President Ford's national security director, and John J. McCloy, a top foreign policy operative in many Republican administrations. They could not believe it when they read stories that the wisemen "wound up in remarkable accord" about what to do. Those reports came from a single high-level source: Jimmy Carter.

The Republicans wanted much stronger U.S. action than Carter accepted, including a firm statement that the U.S. would not pursue detente so long as Moscow continues to subsidize worldwide Cuban intervention.

Teddy's Tax Turn

Champion for years of tax reform that would end the "three-martini lunch" and similar tax breaks for businessmen, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy has confided to economic aides he is giving up the battle.

In any future Kennedy tax-reform program, "reform" will be centered not on such small-time items as the deductible ("three-martini")

Strength For Today

TAKING RESPONSIBILITY

On the last night of his life Jesus declared that one of his apostles would betray him. Immediately they all began asking him the same question, "Lord, is it I?"

It is important to note that they did not point to one another and ask, "Is it he?" They were a weak, fallible group of men destined within a few hours to enact a disgraceful scene of mass cowardice. But a divine ferment had begun to work in their lives. Or, to change the figure, something of surprising beauty had sprung up and was beginning to grow. They had come to the place where they recognized themselves as sinners. It was not the other man's sin which made an impression on them, but their own sin.

One of the measures of Christian character is the ability of Christians to transcend the disposition to blame others and instead cultivate a willingness to accept moral responsibility for their own actions.

business lunch but on substantial items such as stimulation of capital formation.

This is just part of the senator's effort to move toward the center as he nears his announcement of presidential candidacy. The three-martini lunch is one victim, to the joy of many Americans who do legitimate business over lunch.

Reagan's Moderate Hunt
Campaign manager John Sears' tireless quest for a prominent moderate Republican to take a high position in Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign nearly succeeded when the widely-respected Gov. Robert Ray nearly accepted but finally decided not to.

Ray, who is on close personal terms with Sears, was offered a front-row seat on the Reagan bandwagon (possibly national co-chairman with Rep. Jack Kemp of New York). Insiders report he was sorely tempted to accept a position of leverage inside the front-runner's campaign before saying no. He has not closed the door to another candidate — most likely Sen. Howard Baker or George Bush.

A footnote: Former Gov. Louie Nunn of Kentucky, one of the few big Republican names to back Reagan in 1976, won't do it this time. He won't announce his plans until after the Nov. 6 Kentucky election for governor (Nunn vs. Democrat John Y. Brown), but he leans toward John B. Connally. If Nunn upsets Brown, that endorsement could make a big difference in Kentucky's May 23 presidential primary.

Troops In Mufti
For the first time, Soviet military units disguised in mufti have been identified in Afghanistan, where Soviet repression is being fiercely contested by anti-communist Moslem tribesmen.

How large these units are is not known. Their presence in the capital city of Kabul, however, indicates that Moscow fears its puppet Afghan government may come under uncontrollable military pressure from the dissidents. But the Kremlin apparently fears world anger if it sends organized troops in to Afghanistan to join the thousands of Soviet military technicians and advisers already there.

So, to avoid disclosure, the organized units are moving quietly in as plain old civilians — with arms, uniforms and orders ready when needed. "It was either that," one U.S. official told us, "or it would have to be the Cubans again, and maybe the Cubans aren't ready for Afghanistan yet."

member on its international finance subcommittee.

Heinz hasn't always commanded respect, however. In June, Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., brought a Senate session to a halt when he called Heinz "an idiot" and "devious" during a debate on a proposed steel loan to Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.

The outburst came after Heinz suggested that Weicker opposed the loan because it might jeopardize the interests of a Connecticut company.

"When a member substitutes innuendo for fact or the persuasion of logic, ... he is either an idiot or devious, and the senator from Pennsylvania qualifies in both ways," Weicker shot back angrily.

Minutes later, Heinz apologized and both men's remarks were stricken from the record.

A newspaper in Greensboro, North Carolina, investigates changes in a black community 25 years after school desegregation. In Peru, Indiana, a paper looks into the quality of local education. El Salvador's New Govm't Cracks Down On Public

By
EDUARDO VAZQUEZ
BECKER
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR. El Salvador (AP) — Troops and police cracked down on demonstrators protesting El Salvador's new military government despite the colonels' promise to free political prisoners, redistribute the wealth and give Central America's smallest and most densely populated country moderate democracy.
Demonstrators threw up barricades, seized suburban government buildings and police stations, daubed slogans on university walls and rallied in parks and town squares.

An unconfirmed report said four persons were killed when troops routed a crowd in a San Salvador suburb with machine-gun fire. Police fired into the air to break up a demonstration in downtown San Salvador, but no casualties were reported.
Troops also evicted strikers from four factories in a San Salvador industrial park, ending a two-month-old sit-in for wage increases. The strikers set three of the factories afire, but the fires were put out, and the troops forced the strikers to hand over hostages they were holding.

Cols. Adolfo Arnoldo Majano and Jaime Abdul Gutierrez, the leaders of the military coup that ousted President Carlos Humberto Romero on Monday, suspended constitutional guarantees for 30 days and imposed a 10 p.m.-to-5 a.m. curfew and martial law. Their decree banned public gatherings of more than three persons and spoken or written criticism of the new government.

Armed soldiers were stationed at the capital's major intersections and government buildings. Patrols of soldiers armed with .50 caliber machine guns traveled through the streets. Radio stations played martial music between the junta's announcements.

The colonels also began to clean out the remnants of the old regime. They dissolved the legislature, which was dominated by Romero and his military and civilian allies, said they fired all generals in the government.
They promised to end corruption and redistribute the nation's wealth, announced a general amnesty for all political prisoners, estimated at more than 550, guaranteed freedom of action for political parties and said they would seek an end to differences with neighboring Honduras, a decade-old problem.

"The government is moderate left and seeks a return to democratic order," Majano told reporters. He said he and Gutierrez met with leading political foes of the previous military regime and an engineer, Ramon Mayorga Quiroz, had agreed to join the junta.
Two more civilians were being sought to complete the

Reliable sources said the new government has no visible ties to the small, wealthy oligarchy that for 47 years has controlled El Salvador through a series of military governments. Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero, a constant critic of the old regime, issued a statement backing the junta, and the U.S. government said: "So far, the direction the new authorities have said they will follow is encouraging in the sense of seeking a resolution of the political and social tensions that have disturbed that country."

OVERHEARD

"This vase is Sevres. Gretchen has one almost like it. She keeps it on her mantel."
"They say that Gretchen keeps almost everything on her mantel. Why is that?"
"To avoid breakage, I guess. Gretchen falls down a lot, you know."
"Oh? Now look at this embroidered—sleeve I think they call it. Chinese. Isn't it beautiful? Feel that gold."
"I know. I saw an identical one in Richmond last week. Twenty dollars."
"This says fourteen."
"Well, in Richmond it's twenty."
"Maybe because of the distance."
"Distance from where? What's that noise? Did you hear that noise? Like something fell down at the back of the shop?"
"Oh, dear! You don't think Gretchen?"

Dog's Life Not All Bad

CHICAGO (AP) — Thumper, a 200-pound Saint Bernard, has found that a dog's life can be great.

He was chauffeured around Chicago in a limousine Tuesday and pampered in a suite at the posh Whitehall Hotel.
Accompanied by his owners, Carl and Betsy Bodie of Lockport, N.Y., and their two children, Benjamin, 4, and Nathaniel, 8, Thumper was flown to Chicago by Ken-L Ration to receive its "Dog Hero of the Year" award. Thumper rode in a special traveling cage in the baggage compartment.

He drew stares as he made the rounds with his huge head sticking out of the limousine window before being honored at an evening banquet at another swank hotel, the Ritz-Carlton.

Thumper, not quite 2 years old, beat out other courageous canines to get the 26th annual award—a gold medal, a $1,000 U.S. savings bond, a gold-plated leash and collar and a year's supply of dog food.

Last year, Thumper stayed by Benjamin's side when the youngster wandered from home and was lost 12 hours in an area dotted with farm ponds. Thumper kept Benjamin away from harm until rescuers were attracted by the dog's barking.

"We've got a two-bedroom suite at the Whitehall and Thumper sleeps on the floor in our room," said Carl Bodie, a carpet installer.

"Some of the drawers are filled with dog food. He eats about four pounds a day," said Bodie.

Plan Discuss Conversions

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A study on converting nuclear plants under construction to coal may be discussed by the N.C. Utilities Commission next summer.

Virginia Electric and Power Co. announced Monday that it would study the feasibility of converting two units under construction at its North Anna nuclear plant to coal.

Company officials cited uncertainty in the nation's commitment to nuclear power and a "changing regulatory environment" as reasons for the study.

Veeco said it may take six months to a year to complete the study, which will examine the cost of producing electricity with coal.

Spokesmen for Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. said Tuesday that those utilities are not contemplating similar studies.

"I think it's good that a company is prepared to study such options," said Robert Fischbach, director of the commission's Public Staff.

Veeco's North Anna units are scheduled to come on line in 1986 and 1987, but the study will look at the possibility that regulatory changes may delay completion.

Unit 1 is in use and unit 2 is awaiting its federal operating license. About $485 million has been spent on units 3 and 4, but some of the facilities already built could be used for coal plants, said a Veeco official.

Andy W. Williams, director of the Public Staff's electric division, said the staff stands by its 1979 forecast that concluded nuclear power would continue to be the most economical means of generating power.

"A coal plant probably can still be built faster than a nuclear plant, but the coal-plant picture is not as clear today as it was two or three years ago," Williams said.

Veeco also announced Monday that it will study selling its 2,100-megawatt Bath County hydroelectric plant to American Electric Power Co.

Irish Were Called Pigs By Princess Margaret

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Princess Margaret referred to the Irish as "pigs" during a dinner party conversation with Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, who is of Irish descent, a Chicago Sun-Times columnist reports.

Irv Kupcinet said Tuesday the two women were sitting at the same table when Mrs. Byrne remarked that she had attended the funeral of Margaret's cousin, Lord Louis Mountbatten in London. Mountbatten was killed last month by a bomb planted by Irish Republican Army assassins.

"The Irish," Princess Margaret was quoted as saying, "they're pigs."

Then, she told the mayor, "Oh, oh, you're Irish," Kupcinet reported. Mrs. Byrne left the party as soon as possible, he wrote.

"She (the mayor) was very incensed," Kupcinet said late Tuesday night. "She's very, very Irish, you know."

"I didn't want to cause an international feud," said the columnist. But since the column's publication, Kupcinet said, he has been overwhelmed with media inquiries from around the world, including London, Dublin and Australian newspapers.

"I've gotten 20 calls from the British press" alone, he said. "They are playing it on page one in London."

He said a member of Princess Margaret's staff had called to deny the alleged statement.

"Lord somebody called to say Princess Margaret denies it and the mayor was cordial when they left. Well, of course she was," he said.

Kupcinet acknowledged he was not at the party, but said he got the story from someone "who was seated right next to the mayor." He would not reveal the source's name.

The columnist also said he checked out the story with someone else who was at the Saturday party, which was being held in Margaret's honor. The princess is on an American tour to raise money for London's Royal Opera House.

Mayor Byrne would not comment on the story to him, Kupcinet said, but he said his sources told him she "kept her anger under control."

"She left (the party) early, giving the excuse that the president (Carter) was coming on Monday night and she had to work on that," he said.

Princess Margaret could not be reached for comment.

Michael Sneed, a spokeswoman for the mayor, said

Tuesday night, "I haven't been able to talk to the mayor about it (the report) yet. I don't think that it was anything anybody heard. I think it was just between the princess and the mayor."

Abandoned DC-7 Has Pot Cargo

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Eight to 10 tons of "pretty good" Colombian marijuana was found aboard a four-engine DC-7 cargo plane abandoned at Pueblo Memorial Airport with its engines running, police said.

The Pueblo airport was closed when the large turbo-prop plane landed in the pre-dawn darkness Tuesday. Police said the pilot probably landed because of mechanical problems.

The crew had fled, leaving the lights and engines on, by the time a guard arrived, police said.

Two suspects later were taken into custody, said Sgt. Ed Arriaga, information officer of the Pueblo Police Department.

One of the suspects subsequently was arrested for investigation of possession of dangerous drugs and possession of drugs for sale. He was identified as Richard Wellman, 41, of Miami Lake, Fla. The second person still was being detained for questioning, but had not been booked, police said.

A search of the prairies east and north of the airport by officers on foot and in vehicles was called off late Tuesday, but police said other suspects still were being sought.

Police estimates of the value of the cargo ranged from $1 million to $6 million.

The marijuana in the plane was in large sacks each containing 75 to 80 pounds of the weed. "There looks to be 400 to 500 of them," said Arriaga.

"They (narcotics officers) say it is pretty good Colombian marijuana," said Arriaga.

Arriaga said the plane would be guarded and the marijuana kept aboard until a decision is made about what to do with it.

Another DC-7 believed to have been used in marijuana smuggling landed early in April on a mesa in southeastern Colorado and was abandoned after it became stuck in deep mud. Local ranchers reported hearing trucks in the area after the plane landed. By the time police got to it the next morning, only one small canister of marijuana was found on the plane.

FORECAST

Mother, Father Slain In Oklahoma Slaughter

OKARCHE, Okla. (AP) — Police are widening their search for the killers of a Baptist minister and his wife, seeking two drifters the couple's two wounded children said may have taken the family car, officers said.

The bullet-riddled bodies of Rev. Richard B. Douglass, 43, and his wife, Marilyn, 36, were found Monday night in their home about five miles south-east of Okarche.

Leslie Don Douglass, 13, and Richard Brooks Douglass Jr., 16, were listed in stable condition in an Oklahoma City hospital late Tuesday.

A hospital spokesman said police were keeping a 24-hour vigil near their hospital rooms. Hospital personnel said the girl was shot at least once and the boy was wounded "several times."

"Whoever did this was trying to kill the whole family," said Canadian County Undersheriff Jerry Russell. "It's the worst thing I've ever seen."

Russell said all four had been tied up and apparently shot with a medium-caliber handgun. He said robbery was the only motive being considered thus far by investigators.

After the shootings, the children wriggled free, hopped in a car and drove to the home of Dr. Jack Berry, an Okarche physician.

"It's a miracle itself that the kids made it to the hospital," said Russell. "They were just barely alive, from what I understand," he said.

Limke said the children had reported that a man knocked on their door before 10 p.m. Monday "on the premise of using the telephone," said Tim Limke, OSBI agent coordinating the investigation.

Once inside, another man bullied his way into the living room, and both men held the family at gunpoint before binding and gagging them, he said.

Douglass, minister of Putnam City Baptist Church, and his wife were both shot in the back at close range. Their bodies were discovered in the living room of the two-story home. The children were bound and shot in a bedroom.

Canadian County officers said drawers and cabinets in the home had been opened, but investigators had not determined what, if anything, was stolen.

About 10 Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation Agents have been called into the case, Limke said.

Unit Awarded Legion Citation

The Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation Center is the recipient of The American Legion Citation for Exemplary Service in Employment of the Handicapped.

Dr. Marshall Helms, current Commander of American Legion, Post 39 in Greenville, presented the award to Howard Dawkins, executive director, who accepted it on behalf of the Sheltered Workshop, at a presentation ceremony held Tuesday night.

Each year, the American Legion, in conjunction with the Employment Security Commission (ESC) nominates an employer who favors the employment and retention of handicapped workers, especially disabled war veterans.

Statewide, five other similar awards are being given in addition to the one presented to the East Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Vocational School Center.

The local Sheltered Workshop currently employs 140 employees, and of this number, 77 are handicapped and 11 are veterans. James Hannan, manager of the local ESC office, notes that the Sheltered Workshop works closely with the ESC in Greenville in the employment of qualified applicants.

The American Legion Award presented last night cites the Sheltered Workshop "for loyal, dedicated service toward, and an outstanding record of, employment of the handicapped, especially our nation's war veterans."

Reports Shortage Of Woolly Worms

BLOWING ROCK, N. C. (AP) — Stafford Hartley, 75, a veteran mountaineer who has been forecasting winter weather for 20 years, is some worried. The woolly worms which guide his forecasts are in short supply.

He blames the rainy, cool summer for their scarcity this year, saying he has found only four of the fuzzy caterpillars whose red and black stripes are favored as weather gauges. His four are scrawney, at that. But relying on the most robust one, he has made his forecast.

"If this woolly worm is fully developed, we'll have an early winter — probably a month of it. The rest of it will be mild down to the end. And watch out for the end — the last two weeks there might be some early fruit killed."

At Appalachian State University in nearby Boone, Dr. Sandra Glover, a biologist, agrees that woolly worms are in short supply this year.

She has studied the worms scientifically since 1975, but says conclusive findings on whether the woolly worms really predict weather won't be available for years.

"My general premise is there are probably a lot of natural weather indications," says Dr. Glover. "But as far as scientific support, there is none."

Test System To Breakup PCB

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Researchers believe they may have found a way to break down toxic PCBs into harmless — and possibly reusable — wastes.

This week, engineers at Resource Recovery Corp. will test the system in which oil laced with PCBs (polychlorinated biphenyls) is burned in an airtight steel vessel. Temperatures inside the container reach 2,160 degrees Fahrenheit, 1,200 degrees Celsius.

Witnesses To Fayetteville

Jehovah's Witnesses from the Pitt County area will join other Witnesses from Virginia, North and South Carolina at a Jehovah's Witnesses convention Oct. 20-21 in Fayetteville.

The theme of the convention will be "Be Filled With Righteous Fruit." According to Charles Corey, local spokesman for the Witnesses, area members have just returned from summer conventions in Hampton, Va. and Greensboro.

According to Corey, Curtis Whitehurst, an area Witness has been assigned by convention officials to serve as chairman of the Sunday program. Corey said that much of the program will deal with "Discipline from Jehovah God."

A main event of the convention will be a Sunday talk for the public, "Whose Disciple Are You?" Local Witnesses invited the public to attend.

Brown said the process breaks PCBs down into three substances — methane or natural gas; hydrogen chloride that can be recombined into a harmless salt; and a sooty carbon that can be made into a fuel or possibly used by industry in carbon filtering systems.

He said the system is not capable of disposing of PCBs dumped on the ground, like the PCB-laced oil dumped alongside 200 miles of state rural roads in the summer of 1978.

Brown said the system might prevent the future deliberate disposal of PCBs.

Turning Anger Into Action Over Energy Prices

By The Associated Press

The organizers of today's Campaign For Lower Energy Prices are trying to turn anger into action, urging Americans to let the oil industry and the government know they are fed up with rising costs.

The agenda for the day included the usual rallies, demonstrations, marches and teach-ins.

The sponsors included the Gray Panthers, Consumers Opposed to Inflation in Necessities, the Episcopal Urban Bishop's Conference, the Americans for Democratic Action and a variety of unions.

A major effort was the distribution of millions of red, white and blue postcards headed: "Big oil discredit cards." The cards urge Congress to put a lid on oil and gas prices, appoint a special prosecutor to investigate the oil industry and create a publicly owned energy corporation.

Oil company offices were targets of demonstrations even before the official day of protest. About 30 people picketed the headquarters of the Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) on Tuesday, chanting slogans like: "Sohio, stop pumping us dry."

The company, which closed off the entrances to the building and stationed guards nearby, said in a prepared statement, that it understood the frustrations that lead to demonstrations. "But fundamental answers on solving inflation are needed, not looking for scapegoats," the statement said.

In St. Louis, Don Owens, the head of research and public relations for District 9 of the International Association of Machinists, one of the sponsors of a mid-day demonstration, said: "We're holding this rally because we're sick and tired of a national energy policy that robs the workingman and gives to the multi-national oil corporations."

William Wimpisinger, president of the International Association of Machinists and the chairman of the coalition coordinating the events, described the protest as a "national grassroots organizing effort."

Wimpisinger also is also heading an effort to draft Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination. He broke with President Carter last year over the issue of whether to decontrol energy prices. Congress already has approved the phasing out of controls on natural gas and is considering an end to controls on petroleum. Price controls on heating oil and diesel fuel were ended during the Ford Administration.

Carter's re-election headquarters in Concord, N.H., was the focus of a planned afternoon march. Sponsors said they would try to telephone their demands to Carter; if they get no response, they said, they will urge everyone driving by to honk horns in protest.

An Associated Press spot check indicated support for the protest seemed strongest in states where winter heating bills are expected to be a serious problem.

"Here in Connecticut, the rally will focus on low and middle-income families already affected by cash-on-demand payments for heating oil," said Lou Kiefer, labor co-chairman of the coalition sponsoring today's demonstrations.

The protest follows on the heels of announcements of price increases by Libya and Iran, two of the world's major oil exporters. Carter has blamed price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries for the high rate of inflation in the United States. The oil industry says its price hikes are due to the OPEC boosts.

Figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics show that from December 1978 through August 1979, the heating oil component of the Consumer Price Index went up 46 percent, the gasoline section went up 42 percent and the natural gas part went up 12 percent. In the same period, the overall index rose 9 percent.

Another aspect of energy will be in the spotlight on Thursday. Nuclear Energy Women, a group founded by women who work in the nuclear industry, has organized informal discussions and special events which, it says, are designed to educate the public about nuclear energy. NEW is sponsored by the Atomic Industrial Forum, Inc.

Milk Price In N.C. Still Low

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Current North Carolina milk prices have increased 12 percent during the last year, but the increase and present price of milk are lower than in any neighboring state except Virginia.

Increases scheduled for Nov. 1 and Dec. 1 will bring the farm price of milk in North Carolina to $13.93 per 100 pounds, 15.3 percent more than the October 1978 price.

Only Virginia has a lower price — $13.58 per 100 pounds — than North Carolina, a U.S. Department of Agriculture spokesman said. In that state, prices have climbed 10 percent during the last year.

But the Virginia price will increase to $13.78 next month, said C.H. Coleman, administrator of the Virginia State Milk Commission.

During the same period, prices climbed 16 percent to $14.08 in South Carolina; 15.5 percent to $14.55 in Georgia, and 15 percent, to $14.25 in Tennessee.

Spokesmen in those states did not know what increases would come in November and December, but they predicted that prices would continue to rise with the inflation rate.

The North Carolina increase for the year that ended in August, 11.5 percent, was also .5 percentage points less than the national rate.

The price will continue to rise, said Grady Cooper, executive secretary of the N.C. Milk Commission, unless there is a decline in economic indicators used by the commission to calculate prices.

Those indicators include the consumer price index, weekly earnings paid by state manufacturing plants, prices paid by farmers for production items, the cost of dry protein feed and the wholesale price index.

Approve Grant To Guerrillas

GENEVA, Switz. (AP) — The executive committee of the World Council of Churches has approved a $34,600 grant to the Patriotic Front delegation to offset its expenses at negotiations in London.

The Front is the guerrilla group opposing the settlement in Zimbabwe Rhodesia with a mixed black and white government led by a black president, former United Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

Hardships In Return To City

By JAMES LAWRENCE
DENVER (UPI) — The revitalization of the nation's inner-city neighborhoods by young white professionals is creating hardships by displacing the poor, predominantly made up of minority groups, and the elderly.

That's the conclusion of a number of authorities concerned with the problem. They say the back to the city movement, tagged "gentrification" by social scientists, unquestionably is economically upgrading blighted neighborhoods, but it also is creating hardships for the communities' residents, who typically are the poor and minority.

"The problem is substantial," said Rep. King Trimble, a black Colorado state lawmaker. "I have mixed feelings."

"On one hand neighborhoods are being upgraded because of the movement back to the city. But on the other hand, there is a social cost because traditional residents are being displaced."

Displacement is characterized by increased rents which force out low income tenants; demolition of poorly maintained or dangerous structures, and the conversion of low or moderate rent apartments to condominiums at higher prices ill-affordable to tenants.

Dr. Jules Mondschein, a Denver University social work professor, said that, in considering ways to handle the problem, "I'm going crazy trying to figure out a way to be a decent human being. People are being hurt."

A recent report by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development said gentrification was sweeping the country with renovation projects occurring in 60 percent of the major cities in the South, 53 percent in the Northeast, 43 percent in north central areas, and 25 percent in the West.

The activity was strongest in such cities as Washington, D.C., New Orleans, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago and Denver.

John Michener, former executive director of human resources for the state of Maryland, describes the owners of rehabilitated housing as "urban pioneers," who are primarily young white professionals with good earning potential.

He said many are single or married with no children, and have incomes ranging from $10,000 to $30,000 annually.

Michener also told the National Neighbors' Conference here that the urban pioneers, unlike many of their parents who moved to the suburbs 20 years ago, were at ease with diversity, both racial and economic.

"We're just taking back what our parents gave away," said a deputy state attorney general, who is a resident of one of Denver's neighborhoods undergoing a face-lift. "It's as simple as that."

Caldwell said the downtown Denver area was experiencing a boom in development and as a result new jobs were being created, accompanied by a demand for conveniently located housing.

"There is a serious problem and it's going to get worse especially for the elderly and the poor," Caldwell said. "We're going to have to provide some type of subsidized housing for those people."

Michener, however, views the gentrification process as a rare opportunity to reduce residential separation along social and economic lines.

But he admits that if uncontrolled, the back to the city movement will create middle class neighborhoods having the homogeneity of suburbia.

"The crux of the problem has become not one of how reinvestment and displacement can be prevented, but of how they can be controlled in such a way to permit their beneficial effects while protecting the interest of previous residents," he said.

Michener said the inner city renaissance could be linked to the energy crunch which made people more conscious of the cost of commuting, skyrocketing suburban housing and cultural amenities of city life.

"These people also find the architectural style of the central city housing stock appealing and the quality of central city structures is reasonably sound," he said.

Lanee Fedee, a realtor who lives in a predominately hispanic Denver neighborhood, said she was pleased with the change her neighborhood was undergoing.

"I like diversity," she said. "But I don't like the displacement of people. It's too bad that's a side-effect."

Thank You

For your support in the recent election. Please continue to work for good government in Greenville by giving full support to Mayor McGlohon and the council.

East Germans Offer An Olive Branch

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
BONN, West Germany (AP) — While the Soviet Union warns Western Europe against U.S. nuclear missiles on their territory, the East Germans are quietly offering the olive branch to West Germany in a major diplomatic initiative.

The Communist government in East Berlin has offered to negotiate a range of issues with Bonn, including improvements in the situation in West Berlin, reductions in transit fees for travel to the divided city, greater opportunities for travel between the two Germans and disarmament.

Informed sources say the East Germans hope the overtures will open the way to a summit meeting between West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and East Germany's Communist Party chief, Erich Honecker.

Some observers think the East German initiative is a Soviet Bloc attempt to take advantage of current strains between the United States and West Germany to try to wean West Germany away from its strong support of NATO and the United States.

East Germany's overtures contrast sharply with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's warnings on Oct. 6 and again Tuesday that West Germany and other West European nations face grave risks if they agree to U.S. proposals to station 572 Pershing II and cruise missiles on their soil.

Schmidt has said West Germany will accept the missiles if at least one other NATO member on the Continent takes them. But Belgium and the Netherlands, the likeliest prospects, are wavering.

Honecker launched the East German initiative and Brezhnev issued his first warning simultaneously, in speeches at the celebration of the 30th anniversary of the East German Republic. Honecker was overshadowed because Brezhnev at the same time announced he was withdrawing up to 20,000 troops and 1,000 tanks from East Germany and offered to negotiate a reduction in the Soviet medium-range missiles that threaten Western Europe.

The East German leader offered to enter negotiations with West Germany and said: "We see the possibility of clarifying a series of issues which could contribute to the securing of peace and disarmament. Above all, the two German states could cooperate on the question of disarmament."

In a gesture of good faith, his government released a number of prisoners. They included dissident economist Rudolf Bahro and anti-militarist Nico Huebner, who in West Germany are symbols of resistance to tyranny. The East Germans also let it be known that they would be allowed to leave the country if they wished.

A flurry of diplomatic activity followed, including meetings last week between Honecker and Guenter Gaus, the West German representative in East Berlin.

My sincere thanks to the citizens of Greenville who supported my candidacy for the Greenville City Council.

Rolling Out Red Carpet At Furniture Market

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — When the fall Southern Furniture Market opens Thursday, international buyers will get red carpet treatment.

Market officials say manufacturers will offer foreign buyers a warm reception in an effort to boost this year's international furniture sales and possibly ease the pinch of the current recession.

To make the international buyers feel at home, an International Buyers Information Centre has been set up in the Southern Market Center.

For the foreign buyer, who often comes to the market without preregistering, the center will offer help in finding manufacturers who export furniture, orientation to the market, translation and language help, currency exchange assistance and information needed on how to get goods from the U.S. to other countries.

High Point chamber, said the growing number of export buyers offers a way to increase furniture sales at a time when the number of domestic buyers is leveling off.

"This area is definitely full of growth potential and one manufacturer should realize as a large factor in future sales," he said.

Technical personnel helping buyers at the center include representatives of the N.C. State Ports Authority, the U.S. Department of Commerce, the Embassy of the U.S. in London and the International Trade Center.

Car Buyer's Consultant

BROOKLYN PARK, Minn. (AP) — Mike Fitzgibbons, a former car salesman, says he lacked the killer instinct some auto dealers seek in their salesman. That's why he started an automotive consulting service to help match buyers with the right buggies.

"What I try to do is get a deal where the dealer makes a fair profit, the salesman gets a fair commission and the buyer gets the car he wants for a fair price," he said.

Fitzgibbons, 39, says his recently established Automotive Consulting Service charges 10 percent of whatever it can save a car or truck buyer.

The minimum fee is $25 and the maximum is $100 — but Fitzgibbons says he scales down the charge for a retiree "who already has paid his dues and is trying to live on a fixed income. If I don't save him anything, I don't charge anything."

When a prospective buyer comes to him, Fitzgibbons first counsels on what car to buy. Many people know only what they want — not what they need, he says. They also discuss the options the car should have, and what the client's trade-in vehicle should bring.

The customer then goes shopping and returns to Fitzgibbons to report on the "best deal" he found. Fitzgibbons then tries to better the deal.

Participants In Youth Involvement

Four area youth participated in activities last Wednesday during Youth Involvement Day events, sponsored by the North Carolina State Youth Council.

Area students and their occupations were as follows:

— Susan Peele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woody Peele of Greenville, served as deputy director of the State Health Services. She is a senior at J. H. Rose High School.

— Michael Brohawn, son of Mr. Reginald Brohawn and Mrs. Nadine Brohawn of Greenville, worked as an economic advisor to the governor. He is also a student at J.H. Rose High School.

— Loretta Grantham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl R. Grantham of Greenville, was an administrative advocate. She is a student at D. H. Conley High School.

— Janet Davenport, daughter of Ed and Martha Davenport of Farmville, worked as State Highway Administrator for a day. She is a student at Farmville Central High School.

Following a breakfast speech by Gov. Jim Hunt, some 120 students worked in state positions, with help from regular directors and administrators.

The event was the sixth Youth Involvement Day. The event is open to all youths in the state, ages 14-19, and is designed to teach students how government works, as well as working toward keeping government officials in touch with today's youth.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced moderately today, launching another effort to halt the slide of the past week and a half.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.35 to 833.87 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 5-3 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Aside from a decline in the price of gold, analysts said there wasn't much in the news to account for the upswing.

Instead, they attributed it to "bargain hunting" by traders attracted by the sharply lower prices of many issues after the market's recent slide.

Stock prices made a couple of false starts in an upward direction Tuesday before settling back again.

Today's early volume leaders included Houston Industries, off 1/4 at 27 3/4; Virginia Electric & Power, off 1/4 at 11 1/4; and National Semiconductor, up 1/4 at 33 1/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 1.54 to 829.52, extending its loss over the last seven sessions to 68.09 points.

Declines outnumbered advances by a 4-3 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 33.77 million shares against 34.85 million the day before.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index lost .10 to 58.50.

of the Greenville Martinsborough Lions (Luncheon) Club.

He served a two-year tour of duty with the Army, from 1961-1963, and was stationed at Fort McClellan, Alabama. Commenting on his appointment, which is also his first public office, Smith said "I am glad of this opportunity to have input into our school system, which is so vital to the community. Since I have three children in the city schools, I have a personal as well as a professional interest in the schools. I hope to be able to contribute something worthwhile as a board member."

ing here to take jobs. All are here because of a "highly successful" nurse recruiting effort in Canada last winter, she indicated.

She said a large part of the rehabilitation center staff has been trained as rehabilitation technicians and that all trained last summer are still on the job. "It shows" she said, "the more you help people to upgrade themselves, the greater the pride they take in their work."

About 10 nurses from Pitt Memorial and Lenoir Memorial Hospital are now being trained as cardiopulmonary resuscitation trainers, she said, and hopefully, by the end of the year, all PCMH nurses will have received the CPR training.

Associate Director for Rehabilitation and Staff Services Dave McRae reported that the rehab center is experiencing 80 percent and better occupancy. Methods for better follow up of rehab clients are being developed all the time, he said.

Dr. Bost reported that new programs for pre-planning and pre-scheduling elective hospital stays are being developed.

Prior to the meeting, Mrs. Josephine Twilley, Emergency Room supervisor, gave a slide presentation and report on emergency room activity.

various engineering firms and comments from all parties have been incorporated into the ordinance.

Some concern was expressed during the public hearing about a proposed reduction in street widths regarding "marginal" corridors. The proposal to narrow marginal streets to 28 feet was questioned by Dr. Jim Hix, chairman of the Citizens Bikeway Committee, who pointed to the safety element involved in taking eight feet off with no restrictions on parking.

Roberson explained that on streets classed as marginal, access would be limited to a specified number of residences on the street.

City Engineer Ron Sewell said that with the cost of construction and other factors climbing, he felt that some type of compromise had to be explored regarding street construction. He said that he feels the city can live with the reduced width although it was "not the ultimate" situation.

Cox expressed concern that in approving narrow street widths, the city will "end up where we started." The mayor said that the overall picture should be looked at so that the city does not end up with the narrow streets it used to have.

Sewell said that he feels the situation will work by limiting the number of residences that can be served by a street classed as marginal. He said the proposal calls for no more than 20 units to be located on a dead-end corridor.

Phil Dickerson of the local engineering firm of Dickerson-Adams and Associates PA said that he feels the streets will be sufficient.

He said that Sewell has "done a good job" of coming up with criteria for the street provisions.

Sewell, saying that one of the mayor expenses here is street maintenance, said that he has developed a manual of standards that will guarantee that streets developed will last a minimum of 15 years. He added that the "standards are tough" and will add from 40 to 100 percent to the cost of paving for developers but he said the measure was necessary to insure that proper streets would be built.

Council member Mildred McGrath said that she felt a trade of width for higher streets standards was "worth it."

Fire Chief Jenness Allen said that narrow streets to a point were all right unless fire vehicles were faced with situations where they had to turn around. He noted that fire vehicles are wider than automobiles.

Pat Dunn of the League of Women voters urged the development of the ordinance in the "soundest way possible," noting that what might be cheap and expedient in appearance may cost more in the long run when corrections are necessary.

The review procedure for preliminary and final subdivision plats was also discussed and Roberson said that it has been suggested that the review of preliminary plats be made an

Briggs

CARTHAGE — Mrs. Annie Badgett Briggs, 79, died Tuesday in Chippendale Hospital in Richmond, Va.

The funeral service will be held Friday at 2 p.m. in the Carthage United Methodist Church by the Rev. Douglas Jesse. Burial will be in the Rocky Fork Christian Church Cemetery.

Mrs. Briggs was a Surry County native and was the widow of administrative procedure.

The Council approved a motion directing the city manager to prepare the 1980-81 city budget to include additional funds in the mayor and council's budget to increase the salaries of elected officials.

The board recommended that the new salaries be raised from $100 to $200 per month for Council members, from $125 to $225 for the mayor pro-tem, and from $250 to $300 for the mayor. It was pointed out that the salary was last changed in 1969.

A substitute motion by Mrs. McGrath to increase the council member salary to $150, the pro-tem salary to $200, and the mayoral salary to $300 died for lack of a second.

Councilman Charles Vincent said that raising the salaries "once every ten years is not too much." Vincent, who did not seek reelection this year, said that there are expenses and financial sacrifices involved for Council members. He added that "no body runs for the office for the money."

It was pointed out that the new Council, which takes office in December, will have to act on the 1980-81 budget and the Council's action last night was only a recommendation.

Other action included: — Adoption of a resolution authorizing the execution of an agreement with the Department of Transportation for a planning study, with the state providing 90 percent or $9,000 and the city providing ten percent or $1,000;

— Approval of a request by the East Carolina Road Club for a waiver of the privilege license requirements of the City Code to sell concessions at a race to be held on Oct. 21 in downtown Greenville;

— Scheduling of a public hearing for Nov. 5 on proposed amendments to the Sign Ordinance;

— Approval of the acceptance of Arlington Boulevard, from Red Banks Road to the southerly right-of-way line of Merry Lane, and Merry Lane from the westerly right-of-way line of Arlington Boulevard approximately 830 feet westerly along Merry Lane; and — Approval of the payment of $500 to the city of Roanoke, Va. at the end of the lease period for a second bus obtained from Roanoke for the transit system here.

Jaguars Meet Firebirds For Conference Title

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The Eastern Carolina Conference championship will be decided earlier than usual this season. The verdict is scheduled to be rendered late Friday night in Stanhope, where Farmville Central confronts Southern Nash to determine who will represent the ECC in the state high school football playoffs.

The Jaguars, who beat North Lenoir 48-0 Friday night, lead the ECC with a 5-0 mark, or half-game ahead of Southern Nash, which had an off-date last week. The Firebirds are 4-0 in the ECC. Both squads are 6-0 overall.

Although there remains four weeks left in the season, the winner of Friday night's contest will all but assure itself of a spot in the playoffs.

If Farmville Central wins, it would have to lose both its remaining conference games — against Ayden-Grifton and Southwest Edgecombe — to fall from the top.

If Southern Nash wins, it would have to lose two of its last three league outings — against Ayden-Grifton, Southwest Edgecombe and C.B. Aycock — to drop from the top spot.

While Farmville Central is battling Southern Nash, the rest of the league will be trying to move up in the ECC.

D.H. Conley, improving every week, defeated Ayden-Grifton for the first time ever, 27-12, last week. The Vikings play host to Southwest Edgecombe this Friday.

North Pitt, 27-22 losers to the Cougars last week, plays host to C.B. Aycock, which was walloped last week by Greene Central, 35-7. The Rams have an off-date this week.

Williamston, which knocked off Tarboro Friday night, 28-12, takes on Ahoskie this Friday in a game that could decide the Northeastern Conference race. Both teams are undefeated in the league with 3-0 marks.

Roanoke, 19-16 losers to Washington last week, travels to Roanoke Rapids, while Jamesville, which remained as the only unbeaten 1-A team in the state with a 35-2 win over Mattamuskeet last week, travels to Manteo Friday.

D.H. Conley With each week that passes, D.H. Conley's Vikings seem to improve, according to Coach Jimbo Walker.

"I feel the players are getting better every week. The players are taking more pride in the way they play and what they do good," Walker said.

This past Friday the Vikings had plenty to be proud of, as they recorded their first win ever over Ayden-Grifton, 27-12. The win upped Conley's record to 2-2 in the league and 3-2-1 overall.

"We just lined up and went after them," Walker said of the win. The Vikings gained 311 yards rushing against the theater Conference race. Both teams are undefeated in the league with 3-0 marks.

BALTIMORE (AP) — John Candelaria stood in the Pittsburgh Pirates' dressing room after practice Monday and held aloft a crumpled ticket for the seventh game of the World Series.

"After tomorrow night this will be worth a lot of money," shouted Candelaria, who usually hasn't too much to say.

Candelaria went out Tuesday night and put his arm where his mouth was and made that last-chance ticket worth the asking price. He combined with reliever Kent Tekulve for their fourth tandem shutout of the season.

The National League champion Pirates scored four late-inning runs and beat the American League champion Baltimore Orioles 4-0 to tie the Series at 3-3.

Pittsburgh now is within one game of becoming the fourth team in history to come back to win baseball's showpiece from a 3-1 deficit in a best-of-seven World Series.

Jim Bibby, the starter in Game 4 who was not involved in the Pittsburgh loss, has the assignment for tonight's seventh game. He'll be opposed by Baltimore's Scott McGregor, the winner of Game 3.

The 25-year-old Candelaria went six pain-racked innings, gave up just six hits and no runs. Tekulve followed, allowing only one hit in three innings for his second save of the series.

"He (Candelaria) pitched through pain tonight (Tuesday)," said Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner.

Tanner explained that his star left-hander went out despite an aching side. Candelaria has been bothered with a rib cage injury for more than a month.

"He's a money pitcher, one of the best in the game," gushed Tanner, who has to be living with mixed emotions. He needs one victory to gain his first Series triumph.

And win or lose, when it's over, he has to go home to New Castle, Pa., and attend the funeral of his mother, Anne, 70, who died Sunday morning.

Tanner had a pitcher warming up from the first pitch.

"We were concerned about his side all the way," Tanner explained. "If there was any indication he wasn't throwing right, I was going to go out and get him. I know it hurt him."

Candelaria, who struck out two and walked none, admitted that it hurt when he pitched.

"It hurt then and it hurts now," said the pitcher after he emerged from the shower.

"The Pirates' pitcher said that he worked without a pain shot. He also said there was nothing wrong with his shoulder."

"It's my side and back," he explained.

Why did he start to leave the field after warming up in the sixth?

"I saw Chuck coming out and thought he was coming to get me," Candelaria said.

The winning runs came in the seventh inning when, with one out, Omar Moreno singled. Moreno reached second on an infield hit by Tim Lincecum and scored on Dave Parker's single.

Foli, who reached third on Parker's hit, then raced home on Willie Stargell's sacrifice fly. That's all the Pirates needed to hang the loss on Baltimore's Jim Palmer, who went eight innings and gave up all four Pittsburgh runs.

The Pirates wrapped it up with two more in the eighth. Ed Ott singled with one out and irreplaceable Phil Garner followed with a ground rule double, the ball bouncing over the left field fence, sending Ott to third.

Bill Robinson delivered one run with a sacrifice fly and Omar Moreno's third hit of the night scored another.

Tekulve, meanwhile, came on in the seventh and faced just 10 batters in the final three innings. Pinch-hitter Billy Smith singled with two out in the seventh for the only hit off the reliever.

Tekulve, who was banged around in the fourth game, fanned pinch-hitter John Lowenstein to end the seventh, one of the pitcher's four strikeouts.

The Pirates appear to have put their defensive act back together, playing errorless ball. Second baseman Garner and third baseman Bill Madlock made fine plays.

Garner was in the middle of one double play, increasing his World Series total to nine and breaking the record of eight by Washington's Bucky Harris in 1924.

Garner also has 11 hits for 21 at bats in the six games for a .524 average, highest in the Series, with five RBI. Garner, however, would make no prediction on tonight's seventh game.

"It's a totally different situation," said Garner. "We go up against the left-hander, Scott McGregor...I'm not going to predict an all-out win tomorrow (Wednesday)."

Now that the Pirates are even, has the outlook changed?

"I don't think it's changed at all," said Garner. "We had a job to do. Now we have to win one more or it's all for naught."

The Orioles have scored just one run in the last 19 innings and Manager Earl Weaver said he couldn't put his finger on why.

Bibby said that he takes pressure off himself by going over the hitters.

"I reminisce in my mind what guys can hit and the way I want to pitch them, and then I fall asleep," Bibby said.

McGregor said he would pitch the same as he did in any other game.

"I'm going to try and give up as little runs as possible," he said.

McGregor said he didn't think the Orioles were emotionally affected about losing two straight and being forced to a seventh game.

"I don't think you can let them (the losses) affect anything. You have to bounce back...Losing two in a row is no big deal. We still have to play the biggest one tomorrow (Wednesday)."

He was reminded that on occasional he had guaranteed his team a victory. Would he do that today?

"I've only done that a few times," McGregor said. "And then the press got hold of it and blew it out of proportion...I'm just going out and do the best I can and if I win I'll say I guaranteed it."

Baseball: A Piece Of Americana

PITTSBURGH (AP) — "Take me out to the ballgame, take me out with the crowd, buy me some peanuts and crack-jacks, I don't care if I never get back"

Recall the first time you heard this. The opening verse of that song? It's probably been sung more times than the national anthem. You may have learned the words before "Row, row, row your boat." It's part of the mystique of baseball, in particular the World Series.

Why does the Series, now unfolding its 76th edition in Baltimore and Pittsburgh, continue this seemingly unending fascination for sports fans young and old, male or female?

It's not an easy question to answer. You have to go back generations, looking for the reasons.

The bottom line could be that it's simply a piece of Americana — like ham and eggs, apple pie a la mode. Try to buy that in Moscow.

It begins especially when you're a tot, and dad comes home with a baseball glove bigger than you are. Mom thinks the old man is crazy. But his father did it and so did his father's father.

Even there you find a hidden element. Mom finds herself with at least a small interest in the game, because her husband likes it, and now he's passing it to their son.

Gee, this game has to be important. The president of the United States has thrown out the first ball at a number of Series, starting with William Howard Taft.

Football, of course, is gaining in popularity with the masses. But remember it's a one-game-a-week sport, with a single magic few hours—the Super Bowl.

Baseball starts with spring training in March and maintains the spotlight until the cold of October.

Then, when you think about it, there have been stage shows and motion pictures about baseball that appealed to both sexes.

Remember "Damn Yankees"? The story of a middle-aged man who sold his soul to the devil in exchange for one shot at his youth and playing big league baseball? And there was the motion picture "Angels in the Outfield," featuring former major league infielder John Berardino, now a soap opera star on "General Hospital."

There even is a poker game named after baseball. In it, three are wild, akin to three outs, three strikes, three bases (not counting home plate) and if you divide nine innings by three you get three.

Almost every youngster at one time or another played some sort of baseball, sandlot, throwing the ball against the wall and simulating a game. Most have some Walter Mitty in them — dreamers. The big dream is to be a ballplayer, to play in the World Series, whether it's legal or not, million gamble on the outcome of the Series. From a milkshake or a hat to big money. And it's not just a single game — such as the Super Bowl — buy a minimum of four and possibly as many as seven.

There have been so many outstanding plays in the Series that people recall and talk about long after the characters involved are gone.

How many times have you related Willie Mays' great catch on Vic Wertz in a Series. Remember Al Gionfriddo's catch on Joe DiMaggio, and the legend of Babe Ruth pointing at the center field fence and then hitting the ball over the center field wall.

Even off the field, there are things that live in memory.

Such as Charlie Finley firing Mike Andrews after the second baseman made two errors in a Series game.

Sure, there are more, and probably you are thinking of them as you watch the 1979 Series. After all, baseball goes back to before the turn of the century. It's become a product of the mass media. And now there is television, which pays million for the rights to beam the games into homes all over the world. Take the fourth game of the Series Saturday. It was watched in Nicaragua, because Baltimore's starting pitcher, Dennis Martinez, comes from that country.

In days gone by, people stood on street corners in front of newspaper buildings and watched electric news signs flash the progress of the Series. People have listened on radio since the days of the crystal set.

The game has crossed the boundary of the sexes. There are girls' softball and hardball teams, leagues, vigorous competition. Mom now in many cases knows as much about the game as Dad.

The kids bring home baseball cards and trade them with friends. It's a family game, too. And don't forget, baseball still is the cheapest major sports attraction.

What's more American than a father and son at the ballgame?

My grandfather took me when I was a kid. I know a lot more about the 1929, '30 and '31 champion Philadelphia Athletics and the halcyon days of Babe Ruth than I do about inflation and wars. The ballpark is a place to forget your troubles, scream at the umpire, boo, cheer, eat hotdogs and drinks sodas. It's a dream world, which might be the bottom line.

People choose sides and root. Kids play hooky from school to listen or watch reports of the game. More than 50,000 people turn out on bitter cold, rainy nights to watch guys in knickerbockers try to hit a round ball thrown at 90 mph and more, with a round bat.

Why? As we said at the beginning, it's a piece of Americana.

Paterno: Penn St. Not A Good Team

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The question Joe Paterno has heard most often this fall is, "What's wrong with Penn State?"

That's what happens when you win more than 80 percent of your games but start a season by losing two of your first three. After beating Rutgers, the Nittany Lions were trounced by Texas A&M 27-14 and manhandled by Nebraska 42-17.

"The only thing wrong is that we're not a very good football team," Paterno says. "We started the season with a completely inexperienced secondary and then we had some injuries there. We also had an inexperienced kicking game, inexperience at quarterback and only one returning wide receiver."

"The defensive down linemen and a couple of linebackers were the only thing we had going for us. Too many people had to play themselves into being players."

Since that dismal start, though, Penn State has defeated Maryland 27-7 and Army 24-3. Nothing sensational, but possibly the start of something good.

"We're getting a little better each week," Paterno says. "We're a better football team right now than at any time this year."

Paterno made a key move two weeks when he switched All-American defensive tackle Bruce Clark to nose guard alongside Matt Millen, the Lions' other star tackle. Opponents can't waste four people trying to double-team both of them.

"It gives people some blocking problems and it's made us a better team," says Paterno. The coach also sheds his customary low-key attitude where Clark is concerned.

"Clark is a super player, and you can underline that six times," he says. "He's the best football player, the most dominant player we've ever had. We've never had a player who was so much better than anyone else. The only one close would be Lenny Moore."

Syracuse Coach Frank Malone, who must find a way to neutralize Clark, calls Clark and Millen "the best two defensive linemen I've ever seen on one team. It's ridiculous to let the Football Writers Association vote on the Outland Trophy this year. Just lock Clark and Millen in a room and whoever comes out will be the winner."

Buc Ladies Fall To UNC

North Carolina continued its domination of NCAA Division I volleyball with a 15-3, 9-15, 15-13 win over East Carolina here Tuesday night.

The Tar Heels took advantage of the Pirates' inconsistent performance in the first game but had trouble with the motivated squad in the second game.

After coasting to a third game victory, North Carolina had to stave off a Pirate rally to win in four games of the best of five match.

The Pirates are now 4-14 heading into this weekend's East Carolina Invitational Tournament which begins Friday at 4 p.m. and continues Saturday at 9 a.m.

UNC is 26-7 for the season.

Then, Maloney casts a vote for Clark.

"He's the finest defensive lineman I've seen since I've been coaching."

Saturday's Division III contest between Pace and Hofstra is being billed as "The Battle of the Training Camps." The New York Giants hold their preseason camp at Pace University in Pleasantville, N.Y., while the New York Jets have their year-round practice field and headquarters at Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y.

Vagas Ferguson should become Notre Dame's all-time rushing king this weekend against Southern Cal. He needs only 21 yards to break Jerome Heavens' mark of 2,682 after gaining 84 against Air Force last Saturday.

"I took him out at the half because I didn't want to run up the score," said Coach Dan Devine. "He might have gained 400 yards the way he was running."

Ferguson wasn't upset, since he now figures to break the record at home.

Hayes Adjusting To Prison

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Bob Hayes, former Olympian and star Dallas Cowboy receiver, says it's tough behind bars, but he is very satisfied with the way he has adjusted to prison life.

Hayes, convicted earlier this year in Dallas of delivering cocaine to an undercover agent, is serving a maximum five-year term at the Ferguson Unit of the state prison at Huntsville.

"If you're strong...you can adjust to anything," Hayes told "Dallas Cowboys Weekly" television show producer Lee Martin in the first interview granted since his imprisonment.

"This is a lesson for me. Deep down I'm very satisfied with the way I have adjusted," Hayes said in the program aired Friday night.

Hayes won the 1964 Olympic gold medal in the 100-yard dash. The seventh-round 1965 draft choice made All-NFL his rookie year and during his career with the Cowboys set several team receiving records.

After his National Football League career ended, Hayes was generally away from the headlines until his 1978 indictment for alleged drug delivery.

Hayes pleaded for leniency after his conviction, but was assessed the prison term he started serving earlier this year.

"It's been tough," Hayes said. "I miss my family...my friends...freedom in general. You have friends feeling you're from the penthouse to rock-bottom. But I paid my price and now I'm ready to get out of here."

Like most inmates, Hayes has a regular prison job. He's a gym porter, which he said involves supervising athletic activities of other inmates.

"Supervision" — that the key word in the changing of Bob Hayes' works.

"Basically you're living a real good life," he said. "You've got a lot of money in your pocket, you're eating the best of food, and then all of a sudden you can't eat that food, you can't get on an airplane and ride first-class around the country."

"Now everything that I do there's supervision over me, folks that are looking at me. It's a complete turnaround from the top of the free world I was in, to a point now that I'm just locked up inside a penitentiary and I just don't have that freedom, that spirit, that I once did."

Hayes will be eligible to apply for parole in February and if it's granted, he already has plans for the day of his release.

"The first thing I want to do is grab my wife and hug and kiss her."

But after that, he's thinking about a book and possibly a television series or a movie, based on his life.

and was the team's high scorer with 27 points. Tuesday night, he played a game-high 43 minutes.

In other NBA action, Golden State defeated Denver 108-106, Indiana stopped New Jersey 113-100, Cleveland whipped Detroit 137-117, San Antonio edged Atlanta 118-116, Phoenix turned back Seattle 102-86, Portland trimmed San Diego 88-81 and Los Angeles beat Chicago 105-96.

Warriors 108, Nuggets 106
John Lucas and JoJo White ignited Golden State's fast break in the third period, triggering the Warriors past Denver. The two Golden State guards, who combined for 39 points, led the Warriors to a 29-point third period that wiped out a 60-54 halftime advantage for Denver.

Pacers 113, Nets 100
Indiana's Johnny Davis scored 26 points, including 12 in the third quarter when the Pacers built a 21-point lead and coasted past New Jersey. Alex English came off the bench with 22 points and Billy Knight added 20 as the Pacers, leading from the start, had little trouble against the Nets.

Cavaliers 137, Pistons 117
Randy Smith scored 23 points as Cleveland routed Detroit for Coach Stan Albeck's first victory in three outings. The Cavaliers took a 46-26 lead lead into the second period and collected a club record 79 points in the first half.

Spurs 118, Hawks 116
George Gervin, the defending NBA scoring champion, collected 30 points, including the game-winning basket with four seconds left, to lead San Antonio over Atlanta. The Spurs squandered a 22-point lead amassed in the first half to fall behind the Hawks in the third quarter before rallying behind the 6-foot-7 Gervin.

Suns 102, Sonics 86
Center Alvin Adams scored

26 points and Truck Robinson added 22 as Phoenix defeated Seattle. The game was the first between the two Western Division powers since the Sonics eliminated Phoenix in the conference finals last year.

Blazers 88, Clippers 81
T.R. Dunn pumped in 18 points and harassed San Diego's high-scoring guards all night to lead Portland over the Clippers. The victory was the third in as many games for the Blazers, who grabbed the lead for good at 38-36 on Dunn's 18-footer with 4:57 left in the first half.

Lakers 105, Bulls 96
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 21 points and collected 10 rebounds to lead Los Angeles past Chicago. Jamaal Wilkes added 20 points for the Lakers and rookie Magic Johnson and his backcourt mate, Norm Nixon, had 19 points apiece for Los Angeles, which was playing its home opener.

Garner Not Thinking MVP

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pittsburgh's little Phil Garner carries the hottest bat and flashiest glove into the seventh game of the World Series tonight, but he entertains no visions of driving home in a flashy new sports car.

"I never think about it. It's the farthest thing from my mind," insisted the sure-handed Pirate second baseman, son of a Tennessee preacher, when reminded that he is the leading candidate for the Most Valuable Player award.

"I'd be willing to go hitless and make 14 errors if we could only win the Series."

Garner rapped out his 10th and 11th hits to boost his series batting average to .524 and figured in his ninth double play, a record, in the Pirates' 4-0 victory Tuesday over the Baltimore Orioles, tying the Series at 3-3.

He was the most modest man in the locker room as the Pirates savored their comeback from what appeared to be hopeless odds after falling behind in games 1-3.

"One man can't take any credit for double plays," he said when told that he had erased a mark set by Bucky Harris in the seven-game Washington Senators-New York Giants series in 1924.

Knights Fall To Bethel

BETHEL — Bethel Christian scored in a shootout to defeat Greenville Christian Academy in soccer Tuesday, 2-1.

The Knights, now 1-4, scored first on Pat Langley's goal and lead 1-0 at the end of the first half. Bethel came back in the second period to knot the game at 1-1 on Jami Davis' goal.

Neither team scored again during regulation and the game went into overtime. Neither team scored in the first two five-minute overtimes, so a shootout was held.

The Knights did not score while Bethel did.

Greenville Christian's next match is Friday in New Bern against Calvary.

"The pitcher has to make the batter hit the ball on the ground. It has to bounce just right and then you have to count on two other guys — the shortstop for a relay and the first baseman to handle what may be a hurried and inaccurate throw."

"I can't tell you how many times Bill (Bill Madlock, Pirate third baseman) has kept me from getting my legs sawed off by the spike-flying runner."

By Pirate standards, Garner is just a wisp of a man — 5 feet, 10 inches tall and 177 pounds — with a wispy mustache and a molasses drawl he picked up in his native East Tennessee hill country.

Now 30 years old, he broke in with Charlie O. Finley's wild, feuding Oakland A's in 1973, the middle year of their three world championships, and remained there until he came to the Pirates in March 1977 in a six-for-three deal.

The only similarity in the champion A's and the current Pirates lies in the fierce fighting spirit of the two teams. The A's thrived on discord. The Pirates prevail on togetherness and mutual respect.

"We're a free-swinging team," Garner said. "We are aggressive even when we play cards and backgammon. But the bond among all of us is very strong."

Garner came to the defense of his Baltimore counterpart,

Rich Dauer, who misplayed Dave Parker's infield scorchers in the seventh inning, opening the door for the Pirates' first run and setting up the second.

"I looked at the spot when I took the field," he said. It looked like it took one hop and bounced off to the right."

The sparkling infielder expressed the highest respect for the Orioles and wasn't about to gloat.

"They're a tough ball club," he said. "They don't look awesome. But their pitchers throw strikes, their hitters hit and their runners run. They are patient. They never beat themselves. They are a typical Earl Weaver team."

Jaguars Meet Firebirds....

Chargers, while holding Ayden-Griffon to only 77 yards on the ground. "Defensively, we let them have some cheap touchdowns, but we played well overall."

This week, Conley plays host to Southwest Edgecombe, a team, Walker said that could be dangerous.

"They have the people to win, they have the coaches to win. They've just had some troubles this year."

"I think this is the first year for their coach and he's installed the wishbone, which is a hard offense to get down. I just think it'll take 'em some time to get it working," said Walker, who is in his first year with the Vikings.

Farmville Central

North Lenior did not complete a pass against Farmville Central in its 48-0 loss Friday night. The Bruins used two quarterbacks, but neither could find their receivers. It wasn't because they weren't open, however.

After Friday's game, Coach Gene Brewer indicated that his pass defense was not to blame for the Bruins inability to complete a pass, and that concerns Brewer.

"My biggest concern is with our pass blocking and with our pass defense," Brewer said earlier this week. "Southern Nash has a quarterback who throws the ball real well and they have a receiver who hurt us last year."

"They're a veteran football team with a little more speed than we have," he said.

Not only do the Firebirds have one of the best passing attacks in the league, they also have the league's second leading rusher, behind Farmville's Donald Reid, in Anthony Crumel. Unfortunately for Crumel, the Jaguars have the leading defense in the conference and have allowed only 13 points all season.

"The kids know this is for the conference championship. There's no other way you can look at it," Brewer said. "It all comes down to this game."

North Pitt

"We just got beat," Panther coach Pat Smith said of his team's 27-22 loss to Southwest Edgecombe last Friday night. The loss left the Panthers still without a win in the league and at the bottom of the heap in the ECC.

"We had too many mistakes and did not take advantage of some of our breaks," Smith said. We had a touchdown pass called back because of a penalty, we had first and goal from the one and didn't score (because of a penalty) and we had fourth and goal from the two and didn't get in."

"We just couldn't make the play when we needed to make it," he said. The loss dropped the Panthers to 0-5 in the conference and 1-5 overall.

This week, the Panthers are at home for their homecoming, against C.B. Aycock.

"They (Aycock) will just try to come out and run over us," Smith said when asked about the Falcons.

"But I'm not so much worried about them as I am about our team. We're just not playing football, we're not playing the kind of football that we're capable of."

"We don't have the enthusiasm it takes to win. We're not willing to sacrifice enough to win, to make the big plays when we need them to be made."

Smith, whose Panthers desperately need a win if they are to have any chance of getting out of the cellar, hopes for a big crowd Friday night. "Maybe it'll help the kids get up for the game."

Ayden-Griffon

Too little enthusiasm and too many mistakes plagued Ayden-Griffon Friday night in its loss to D.H. Conley, according to Coach Dixon Sauls.

"They executed well, especially on the outside sweeps. We tackled poorly and had some fumbles that hurt us," Sauls said of the Chargers' 27-12 loss to the Vikings.

"Their size controlled our running game and we had to try to pass. We didn't do that as well as we'd like, and they were able to control the ball and the game."

This week, Ayden-Griffon, now 3-2 in the ECC and 4-3 overall, travels to North Lenior to take on the Bruins, a team which Sauls said is similar to D.H. Conley.

"They're both big and strong. They (Lenior) have a strong quarterback in Kevin Battle and a good running attack," he said.

"For us to win, we need to tackle better, first. It's a good opportunity for us to win, if we show more enthusiasm than we did last week," he said.

"We started out the season with a young team and we made fairly good progress for a time. I was pleased with that. But now we need to progress some more if we're going to be a good football team," Sauls said.

"We hope to win. We need to win," Sauls said. "Right now, this week is the question mark of our season, I guess."

McGregor Primed

BALTIMORE (AP) — Scott McGregor is not ready to guarantee a victory in the seventh game of the World Series as he did in the pennant-clincher for the Baltimore Orioles. But he is primed for the biggest test of his career.

"This is the biggest game I could possibly pitch in my life," said the 25-year-old left-hander after Pittsburgh won 4-0 Tuesday night. "It's something I've always dreamed of. Now I've got to go out and do it."

"I really didn't want to see it come to this," said McGregor, who pitched an 8-4 complete-game victory in Game 3.

"But I started thinking about

McGregor, who missed the first month of the season with elbow tendinitis and didn't win his first game until June 11, won 13 of his last 14 decisions in the regular season.

After the Orioles blew a decision to the California Angels in the third game of the American League playoffs, McGregor stood up in the team bus after the game and guaranteed a victory the next day. He pitched an 8-0 shutout, giving Baltimore the pennant.

Asked by reporters if he would guarantee a victory over Pittsburgh, McGregor said: "No. You guys got ahold of that and ruined it. Now I've got to come up with something new. I'll have to think about it."

Although the Pirates are hitting .330 through the first six games, McGregor said: "I'm not going to tell you they're great hitters. I'm not going to build them up. I've got to get them out."

"I'm a groundball pitcher," McGregor said. "I've got to try to keep us in the game and give us a chance to win. I'll pitch to them the way Scott McGregor always pitches."

Recalling when he was hoping to recover from arm trouble last spring, McGregor said: "That was optimistic time then. Now it's down to reality. It's my turn to pitch and it's the seventh game."

Manager Earl Weaver said he didn't feel any tension, even though the Pirates had come back from a 3-1 deficit.

Farmville Keeps Top Spot In Poll

By The Associated Press

Virtually no names changed in this week's Associated Press poll of the top 30 North Carolina high school football teams after a winning week for all the teams.

Scotland County continues to lead the list of the top 10 teams in Class 4A, as ranked by a statewide panel of sports writers. Farmville Central and Jordan-Matthews also held their top spots.

The only change in Class 4A was a trade of places between Broughton and Rocky Mount, now sixth and seventh respectively.

The Scots, 6-0, totaled seven first-place votes and 111 points. Hickory followed by 18 points, with Northern Durham a close third. Rounding out the top 10 are North Mecklenburg, Jacksonville, Raleigh Broughton, Rocky Mount, Person County and Fayetteville E.E. Smith.

Farmville, 6-0, far outdistanced its competition in the 3A poll with nine first-place votes. In a close race for the No. 2 rank, Belmont South Point moved past Havelock. Boone Watauga and Western Guilford remained fourth and fifth.

North Carolina high school football ratings, with first-place votes in parentheses (points assigned on basis of 10 points for first place vote, then 9.7, etc.):

Volleyball Results

D.H. Conley 2 Ayden-Grifton 0

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Valkyries wrapped the 1979 regular season yesterday with a 2-0 sweep of Ayden-Grifton, capturing the Eastern Carolina Conference championship for the second straight year.

Conley won the first match, 15-4 and 15-1. Pam Manning opened the first game with eight straight serves for points, while Glenda Green later added five. Green also had nine spikes in the match, while Tilda Garris added four.

Manning added five more straight serves in the second game, while Lexanne Keeter had four.

Conley won the second match, 15-8, 15-3. Garris and Green each had four spikes in the match, while Keeter added three.

The Valkyries wound up the season with a 11-1 league mark and a 13-1 overall record. Ayden-Grifton finished with an 8-4 conference mark.

North Pitt 2 Greene Central 0

BETHEL — North Pitt's volleyball team ended its season yesterday by defeating Greene Central in two matches.

The Pant-HERS who finished with a 7-7 record, beat the Rams 15-8 in the first game of the first match. Greene Central came back to take the second game, 15-2, but the Pant-HERS took the third, 14-10.

Leading scorers for North Pitt were Renaye Bernelson with 11 and Connie Dupree with eight. In the second match, the Rams took the first game, 15-9, but North Pitt came back to take the last two, 15-5 and 15-8, lead by Dupree's 16 points and Tammy Purvis' 13.

Farmville 2 Rocky Mt. 0

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central closed out its 1979 volleyball season with a pair of victories over Rocky Mount.

After bowing to the Lady Gryphons, 15-10, in the first game, Farmville came back to capture 15-12 and 15-10 wins to take the best-of-three match.

Farmville then won the second match, 14-9 (time) and 15-8.

"We had a good team effort from everyone," Coach Mike Terrill said.

Farmville ends the season with an 8-8 record.

Voight Tells How Rookies Have It Rough In NFL

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Former University of North Carolina running back Mike Voight told the Greenville Sports Club that he almost came to East Carolina, and that the life of a National Football League rookie is not the greatest thing in the world.

Voight, who was drafted by Cincinnati in the NFL, then moved on to Houston, is still in the rehabilitation process following an automobile accident two years ago that may have ended his pro career. He suffered a fractured pelvis, but is optimistic about returning to the pro ranks next fall.

While Voight picked his alma mater to win this week's game over N.C. State by 14 points, he said that prior to the start of the season, he had picked Cinderella team Wake Forest to win the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. "People are going to have to watch out for Virginia in the future too. That's mainly because there has been a big chance in the recruiting patterns in the state," Voight said.

"He pointed out that in the past, Carolina had recruited heavily from North Carolina and Virginia, along with N.C. State, but both teams are concentrating more on Ohio now. 'The North Carolina and Virginia people are staying at home, going to East Carolina or Virginia.'"

Voight then revealed that East Carolina had been one of his final four choices when he was recruited. "I had narrowed by choices to Ohio State, Virginia Tech, East Carolina and North Carolina. One of the prime reasons I didn't come to East Carolina was because Carlester Crumpler and Les Strayhorn were here, too, and I really didn't think I could beat them out at the time."

Asked to recall his most exciting game, Voight had a quick answer: "When you carry the ball 35 times a game, none of them are boring." He added that the victory over Clemson in "Death Valley" probably was the most exciting.

Voight also recalled his rookie days in the NFL, saying, "I have some aspects of how a prisoner of war feels now." He said that after the first day of camp, he packed his bags to be ready when the knock came on his door to turn in his play book.

He also noted that in the pro ranks, you are expected to start hitting hard the first day, and that those who can't take the hard knocks are quickly weeded out.

Voight hopes to be able to join an East Coast NFL team next fall, resuming his career.

During the Sports Club meeting, several area high school coaches were honored as special guests. They included Dave Bumgarner of Rose, Nolan Respass of Roanoke, Dixon Sauls of Ayden-Grifton, Pat Smith of North Pitt, Gene Brewer of Farmville Central and Jim Henderson of Chocowinity.

The speaker for the next meeting, on November is another former UNC star, Charlie Justice, to be followed by new ECU basketball coach Dave Odom and UNC football coach Dick Crum.

Philadelphia Heiress: 'Meet My Friend Arafat'

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pamela de Maigret is a Philadelphia heiress who's mined diamonds in the Amazon jungle, searched for sunken Spanish treasure off Florida and once took off to Outer Mongolia on a whim.

She also introduces U.S. congressmen to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

"She's quite a lady," says Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill. — who met Arafat in 1977 and subsequently decided to take up the cause of the Palestinians on the House Mideast subcommittee.

Findley is now known on the Hill as Arafat's best friend in Congress.

Mrs. de Maigret, world traveler and wife of a French count, has introduced several members of Congress to the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"I see myself as a bridge," she says.

The first Findley-Arafat meeting was in Damascus. Findley, on a congressional junket, was accompanied by former Reps. Helen Meyner, D-N.J., and the late Leo Ryan, D-Calif. They met with Mrs. de Maigret, who then arranged to have Arafat fly in from his headquarters in Beirut.

Earlier, she had arranged similar meetings for Reps. David Obey, D-Wis., and Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Mideast subcommittee.

Only Findley came away determined to support the Palestinian cause. He says his main goal is to get the PLO into the Mideast peace talks.

Hamilton says his memories of his 1977 meeting with the PLO leader are vague.

"I met Arafat in Cairo. She (Mrs. de Maigret) was involved in working out that meeting, but it's a little foggy now. It's hard to remember the details," Hamilton said.

"Since then I've seen her two or three times. She's on the Hill. She's always here with her Palestinian friends, most recently with the mayor of a Palestinian community on the West Bank, I think.

"She brought him to meet me. I wouldn't say she's lobbying; she has never talked to me about a piece of legislation," he continued. "I see her as a woman who wants to help by facilitating contacts between congressmen and the Palestinians."

Mrs. de Maigret speaks cautiously about her ties with the Palestinians. She said she has known Arafat about 10 years and last saw him two months ago. She met him, she said, "through friends."

"Really, I don't think it is any of your business as to how I know people," she said in a telephone interview from her home outside Philadelphia.

"My life is entirely private."

She says her goal is not to help the PLO but to help bring peace to the Mideast. "I'm not pro-PLO or pro-Israeli. I'm pro-dialogue."

When asked what the State Department thought about her efforts on behalf of the Palestinians, spokesman Hodding Carter said: "We don't have any comment on the activities of a private citizen in dealing with other private citizens. That's her right."

Who is Pamela de Maigret and why is she serving as an informal bridge between Congress and the PLO?

To start with, she is a woman with the means to do pretty much what she wants. She was born into a California family whose Painter Mill near Pittsburgh was merged at the turn of the century into the American Steel Hoop Co., which in turn became part of U.S. Steel.

"It gave a certain economic base to our family," she says, "a certain financial facility."

By background, she is suited for the role of international intermediary — educated in European schools, a teen-age delegate to United Nations youth groups, a stint at the Sorbonne in Paris.

By profession, she is a geologist with a master's degree from UCLA.

Fresh out of college, she worked briefly as a researcher

for Time Inc. and in a Wall Street firm. Then she left for South America to mine gold and diamonds. She staked several claims but recently sold them.

Globetrotting is her way of life. Asked how she ended up in Mongolia, she said:

"I found I was expecting a baby...I wanted to get away. I was supposed to deliver a paper in Bulgaria anyway and then there was a chance to go to Russia and that led to Mongolia. Actually, going to Mongolia is like mountain climbing. You go because it's there."

She and her husband, Herve de Maigret, an engineer by profession and a French count by inheritance, have one son. Mrs. De Maigret refuses to reveal her age but Findley guesses she is in her late 30s or early 40s.

Even with her persistent efforts on behalf of the Palestinians, Mrs. de Maigret harbors no illusions about her influence.

"I know people in the State Department," she said. "I often talk with people in the State Department when I think I may have information they don't have."

"But I don't think anybody listens to me," she added, "more than to any other Philadelphia housewife."

Plastic Car An Energy -Saver

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — George Sharman says the adage, "if you build a better mousetrap people will beat a path to your door," may apply to mousetraps, but it has nothing to do with new automobile designs.

Sharman, 31, has come up with what he says is a car that will save gasoline as well as lives, but, apparently, nobody is interested enough to come across with money to start production of the vehicle.

After building a prototype and showing it around the country, Sharman asked for private money and then federal funds for production. "But," he says, "I've hit a brick wall."

The only whispers of interest came from Great Britain and Mexico.

"I want this to be an American car," Sharman says, "but I'll go where necessary to get the proper financing."

Joining Sharman in the design and construction of the auto were Anthony Buonauro, who works in the product development and technical service division of U.S. Steel Corp., and Raymond Earl Thomas, a researcher in reinforced plastics for Dow Chemical Co.

The four-seat sports model car is made of plastic, with foam blocks of varying densities sandwiched between the inner and outer skins, reinforced with graphite and directional glass.

That means, Sharman says, the car "is virtually crush-proof."

changes there until the 1990s. That longer-term planning won't solve the energy problem of today."

The sleek-looking red auto, called the Energy Efficient Vehicle (EEV), weighs only 1,900 pounds and because of the energy-absorbing foam, can take a hard lick without falling apart.

Sharman says the average American car weighs somewhere around 3,200 to 3,500 pounds, "and that's foolish, to have that heavy a car to carry a 175-pound driver."

The dashboard contains displays for speed, oil pressure, coolant temperature, manifold vacuum, oil temperature, battery current, fuel level and miles per gallon.

As Sharman explains, "Any display will blink once a second for any abnormal reading such as low fuel or overheating. The miles per gallon indicator will keep the driver aware of the efficiency of the vehicle."

He adds, "It must be emphasized that the EEV will not be revolutionary, but a natural evolution of technologies that have proven themselves in areas such as the space program. We just took it a step farther and have proven that a safe, economical automobile can be built."

Another big advantage of the EEV, Sharman says, is easy repairs for those cars banged up in accidents.

McGregor Primed

BALTIMORE (AP) — Scott McGregor is not ready to guarantee a victory in the seventh game of the World Series as he did in the pennant-clincher for the Baltimore Orioles. But he is primed for the biggest test of his career.

"This is the biggest game I could possibly pitch in my life," said the 25-year-old left-hander after Pittsburgh won 4-0 Tuesday night. "It's something I've always dreamed of. Now I've got to go out and do it."

"I really didn't want to see it come to this," said McGregor, who pitched an 8-4 complete-game victory in Game 3.

"But I started thinking about

McGregor, who missed the first month of the season with elbow tendinitis and didn't win his first game until June 11, won 13 of his last 14 decisions in the regular season.

After the Orioles blew a decision to the California Angels in the third game of the American League playoffs, McGregor stood up in the team bus after the game and guaranteed a victory the next day. He pitched an 8-0 shutout, giving Baltimore the pennant.

Asked by reporters if he would guarantee a victory over Pittsburgh, McGregor said: "No. You guys got ahold of that and ruined it. Now I've got to come up with something new. I'll have to think about it."

Although the Pirates are hitting .330 through the first six games, McGregor said: "I'm not going to tell you they're great hitters. I'm not going to build them up. I've got to get them out."

"I'm a groundball pitcher," McGregor said. "I've got to try to keep us in the game and give us a chance to win. I'll pitch to them the way Scott McGregor always pitches."

Recalling when he was hoping to recover from arm trouble last spring, McGregor said: "That was optimistic time then. Now it's down to reality. It's my turn to pitch and it's the seventh game."

Manager Earl Weaver said he didn't feel any tension, even though the Pirates had come back from a 3-1 deficit.

Farmville Keeps Top Spot In Poll

By The Associated Press

Virtually no names changed in this week's Associated Press poll of the top 30 North Carolina high school football teams after a winning week for all the teams.

Scotland County continues to lead the list of the top 10 teams in Class 4A, as ranked by a statewide panel of sports writers. Farmville Central and Jordan-Matthews also held their top spots.

The only change in Class 4-A was a trade of places between Broughton and Rocky Mount, now sixth and seventh respectively.

The Scots, 6-0, totaled seven first-place votes and 111 points. Hickory followed by 18 points, with Northern Durham a close third. Rounding out the top 10 are North Mecklenburg, Jacksonville, Raleigh Broughton, Rocky Mount, Person County and Fayetteville E.E. Smith.

Farmville, 6-0, far outdistanced its competition in the 3A poll with nine first-place votes. In a close race for the No. 2 rank, Belmont South Point moved past Havelock. Boone Watauga and Western Guilford remained fourth and fifth.

North Carolina high school football ratings, with first-place votes in parentheses (points assigned on basis of 10 points for first place vote, then 9, 8, 7, etc.):

Volleyball Results

D.H. Conley 2 Ayden-Grifton0

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Valkyries wrapped the 1979 regular season yesterday with a 2-0 sweep of Ayden-Grifton, capturing the Eastern Carolina Conference championship for the second straight year.

Conley won the first match, 15-4 and 15-1. Pam Manning opened the first game with eight straight serves for points, while Glenda Green later added five. Green also had nine spikes in the match, while Tilda Garris added four.

Manning added five more straight serves in the second game, while Lexanne Keeter had four.

Conley won the second match, 15-8, 15-3. Garris and Green each had four spikes in the match, while Keeter added three.

The Valkyries wound up the season with a 11-1 league mark and a 13-1 overall record. Ayden-Grifton finished with an 8-4 conference mark.

North Pitt 2 Greene Central 0

BETHEL — North Pitt's volleyball team ended its season yesterday by defeating Greene Central in two matches.

The Pant-HERS who finished with a 7-7 record, beat the Rams 15-8 in the first game of the first match. Greene Central came back to take the second game, 15-2, but the Pant-HERS took the third, 14-10.

Leading scorers for North Pitt were Renaye Bernelson with 11

and Connie Dupree with eight. In the second match, the Rams took the first game, 15-9, but North Pitt came back to take the last two, 15-5 and 15-8, lead by Dupree's 16 points and Tammy Purvis' 13.

Farmville 2 Rocky Mt. 0

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central closed out its 1979 volleyball season with a pair of victories over Rocky Mount.

After bowing to the Lady Gryphons, 15-10, in the first game, Farmville came back to capture 15-12 and 15-10 wins to take the best-of-three match.

Farmville then won the second match, 14-9 (time) and 15-8.

"We had a good team effort from everyone," Coach Mike Terrill said.

Farmville ends the season with an 8-8 record.

Voight Tells How Rookies Have It Rough In NFL

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Former University of North Carolina running back Mike Voight told the Greenville Sports Club that he almost came to East Carolina, and that the life of a National Football League rookie is not the greatest thing in the world.

Voight, who was drafted by Cincinnati in the NFL, then moved on to Houston, is still in the rehabilitation process following an automobile accident two years ago that may have ended his pro career. He suffered a fractured pelvis, but is optimistic about returning to the pro ranks next fall.

While Voight picked his alma mater to win this week's game over N.C. State by 14 points, he said that prior to the start of the season, he had picked Cinderella team Wake Forest to win the Atlantic Coast Conference championship. "People are going to have to watch out for Virginia in the future too. That's mainly because there has been a big chance in the recruiting patterns in the state," Voight said.

"He pointed out that in the past, Carolina had recruited heavily from North Carolina and Virginia, along with N.C. State, but both teams are concentrating more on Ohio now. "The North Carolina and Virginia people are staying at home, going to East Carolina or Virginia."

Voight then revealed that East Carolina had been one of his final four choices when he was recruited. "I had narrowed by choices to Ohio State, Virginia Tech, East Carolina and North Carolina. One of the prime reasons I didn't come to East Carolina was because Carlester Crumpler and Les Strayhorn were here, too, and I really didn't think I could beat them out at the time."

Asked to recall his most exciting game, Voight had a quick answer: "When you carry the ball 35 times a game, none of them are boring." He added that the victory over Clemson in "Death Valley" probably was the most exciting.

Voight also recalled his rookie days in the NFL, saying, "I have some aspects of how a prisoner of war feels now." He said that after the first day of camp, he packed his bags to be ready when the knock came on his door to turn in his play book.

He also noted that in the pro ranks, you are expected to start hitting hard the first day, and that those who can't take the hard knocks are quickly weeded out.

Voight hopes to be able to join an East Coast NFL team next fall, resuming his career.

During the Sports Club meeting, several area high school coaches were honored as special guests. They included Dave Bumgarner of Rose, Nolan Respass of Roanoke, Dixon Sauls of Ayden-Grifton, Pat Smith of North Pitt, Gene Brewer of Farmville Central and Jim Henderson of Chocowinity.

The speaker for the next meeting, on November is another former UNC star, Charlie Justice, to be followed by new ECU basketball coach Dave Odom and UNC football coach Dick Crum.

Philadelphia Heiress: 'Meet My Friend Arafat'

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pamela de Maigret is a Philadelphia heiress who's mined diamonds in the Amazon jungle, searched for sunken Spanish treasure off Florida and once took off to Outer Mongolia on a whim.
She also introduces U.S. congressmen to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.
"She's quite a lady," says Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill. — who met Arafat in 1977 and subsequently decided to take up the cause of the Palestinians on the House Mideast subcommittee.
Findley is now known on the Hill as Arafat's best friend in Congress.
Mrs. de Maigret, world traveler and wife of a French count, has introduced several members of Congress to the chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"I see myself as a bridge," she says.
The first Findley-Arafat meeting was in Damascus. Findley, on a congressional junket, was accompanied by former Reps. Helen Meyner, D-N.J., and the late Leo Ryan, D-Calif. They met with Mrs. de Maigret, who then arranged to have Arafat fly in from his headquarters in Beirut.
Earlier, she had arranged similar meetings for Reps. David Obey, D-Wis., and Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House Mideast subcommittee.
Only Findley came away determined to support the Palestinian cause. He says his main goal is to get the PLO into the Mideast peace talks.

Hamilton says his memories of his 1977 meeting with the PLO leader are vague.
"I met Arafat in Cairo. She (Mrs. de Maigret) was involved in working out that meeting, but it's a little foggy now. It's hard to remember the details," Hamilton said.
"Since then I've seen her two or three times. She's on the Hill. She's always here with her Palestinian friends, most recently with the mayor of a Palestinian community on the West Bank, I think.
"She brought him to meet me. I wouldn't say she's lobbying; she has never talked to me about a piece of legislation," he continued. "I see her as a woman who wants to help by facilitating contacts between congressmen and the Palestinians."

Mrs. de Maigret speaks cautiously about her ties with the Palestinians. She said she has known Arafat about 10 years and last saw him two months ago. She met him, she said, "through friends."
"Really, I don't think it is any of your business as to how I know people," she said in a telephone interview from her home outside Philadelphia.
"My life is entirely private."
She says her goal is not to help the PLO but to help bring peace to the Mideast. "I'm not pro-PLO or pro-Israeli. I'm pro-dialogue."

When asked what the State Department thought about her efforts on behalf of the Palestinians, spokesman Hodding Carter said: "We don't have any comment on the activities of a private citizen in dealing with other private citizens. That's her right."
Who is Pamela de Maigret and why is she serving as an informal bridge between Congress and the PLO?
To start with, she is a woman with the means to do pretty much what she wants. She was born into a California family whose Painter Mill near Pittsburgh was merged at the turn of the century into the American Steel Hoop Co., which in turn became part of U.S. Steel.

"It gave a certain economic base to our family," she says, "a certain financial facility."
By background, she is suited for the role of international intermediary — educated in European schools, a teen-age delegate to United Nations youth groups, a stint at the Sorbonne in Paris.
By profession, she is a geologist with a master's degree from UCLA.
Fresh out of college, she worked briefly as a researcher for Time Inc. and in a Wall Street firm. Then she left for South America to mine gold and diamonds. She staked several claims but recently sold them.

Globetrotting is her way of life. Asked how she ended up in Mongolia, she said:
"I found I was expecting a baby....I wanted to get away. I was supposed to deliver a paper in Bulgaria anyway and then there was a chance to go to Russia and that led to Mongolia. Actually, going to Mongolia is like mountain climbing. You go because it's there."
She and her husband, Herve de Maigret, an engineer by profession and a French count by inheritance, have one son. Mrs. De Maigret refuses to reveal her age but Findley guesses she is in her late 30s or early 40s.

Even with her persistent efforts on behalf of the Palestinians, Mrs. de Maigret harbors no illusions about her influence. "I know people in the State Department," she said. "I often talk with people in the State Department when I think I may have information they don't have."
"But I don't think anybody listens to me," she added, "more than to any other Philadelphia housewife."

Plastic Car An Energy -Saver

By ROB WOOD
Associated Press Writer
HOUSTON (AP) — George Sharman says the adage, "if you build a better mousetrap people will beat a path to your door," may apply to mousetraps, but it has nothing to do with new automobile designs.
Sharman, 31, has come up with what he says is a car that will save gasoline as well as lives, but, apparently, nobody is interested enough to come across with money to start production of the vehicle.
After building a prototype and showing it around the country, Sharman asked for private money and then federal funds for production. "But," he says, "I've hit a brick wall."
The only whispers of interest came from Great Britain and Mexico.
"I want this to be an American car," Sharman says, "but I'll go where necessary to get the proper financing."
Joining Sharman in the design and construction of the auto were Anthony Buonauro, who works in the product development and technical service division of U.S. Steel Corp., and Raymond Earl Thomas, a researcher in reinforced plastics for Dow Chemical Co.
The four-seat sports model car is made of plastic, with foam blocks of varying densities sandwiched between the inner and outer skins, reinforced with graphite and directional glass.
That means, Sharman says, the car "is virtually crush-proof."
The developer says the vehicle, powered by an 80 horsepower engine, can get at least 50 miles to the gallon.
The total cost to the customer — $8,500.
Sharman, a native of Houston and a graduate of Texas A&M University, says the big auto makers are financially welded to steel-based technology, "and you won't see any major changes there until the 1990s. That longer-term planning won't solve the energy problem of today."

The sleek-looking red auto, called the Energy Efficient Vehicle (EEV), weighs only 1,900 pounds and because of the energy-absorbing foam, can take a hard lick without falling apart.
Sharman says the average American car weighs somewhere around 3,200 to 3,500 pounds, "and that's foolish, to have that heavy a car to carry a 175-pound driver."
The dashboard contains displays for speed, oil pressure, coolant temperature, manifold vacuum, oil temperature, battery current, fuel level and miles per gallon.
As Sharman explains, "Any display will blink once a second for any abnormal reading such as low fuel or overheating. The miles per gallon indicator will keep the driver aware of the efficiency of the vehicle."
He adds, "It must be emphasized that the EEV will not be revolutionary, but a natural evolution of technologies that have proven themselves in areas such as the space program. We just took it a step farther and have proven that a safe, economical automobile can be built."
Another big advantage of the EEV, Sharman says, is easy repairs for those cars banged up in accidents.

Properly Handled, Forests A Good Energy Source

By CRAIG WEBB
United Press International
A century ago the United States counted on wood for much of its energy. Today, beset by spiraling fuel prices, a growing number of Americans are turning back to the forest.

Wood supplies America with 2 to 2.6 percent of its heat and energy — half as much as nuclear power — the U.S. Department of Energy says. Eventually timber could provide up to 10 percent of the nation's energy needs.

While the number of wood-burning stoves for homes increases every year (2 million were sold in 1978), industries and governments also are finding benefits from wood-burning.

In Burlington, Vt., the municipal electric plant converted a coal-fired boiler to wood two years ago and halved its production cost per kilowatt hour. Recently a second boiler was converted and there are plans to build a 50-megawatt wood-fired generator.

What intrigues foresters, consumers and even environmentalists is that so much heat and energy can be produced just by burning scrap — what loggers normally leave in timber stands or discard at the mills.

"I have become excited about the potential of sheer waste," said Jim Dollard, the Energy Department's acting resource manager for wood energy. "I'm talking about the use of sawdust for landfills, slabs left for burners. I've gone to logging areas where up to 60 percent of the wood is still there as a form of waste... I want to see that utilized."

Proponents add that clearing waste wood from lots will enable foresters to employ modern management techniques and replant the land with genetically engineered seedlings that are harder and faster-growing than anything in mother nature.

Promoters of wood fuel tout several other advantages:

—Most homes and industries don't need major capital investment to start burning wood. Oil, coal or gas-fired boilers require only minor adjustments or some additional equipment.

—Twenty million homes already have fireplaces and 40 percent of all new homes are being built with them.

—Emissions from wood fires are within pollution laws.

But Dollard and others studying wood energy see some potential problems, too. Wood's greatest asset is that it's renewable, but the forestry experts fear a craze for wood fuel might result in the wholesale teardown of forests without any planting for the future.

Forestry officials also fear the use of wood for fuel will squeeze future supplies of timber that are already expected to be tight. And environmentalists worry about whether forests they want set aside as wilderness areas will become fodder for fireboxes.

Centuries ago, schoolteachers used to say, America was so densely forested a squirrel could hop from treelimb to treelimb all the way from Maine to the Mississippi River.

Today, a third of the 2.27 billion acres in the United States is still classified as forest. Even the region from Washington to Boston, America's most densely populated stretch, is half forest.

Opinions vary widely as to who all that wood will help and by how much. The majority of the experts say that, considering the government predicts, no more than a 10 percent contribution ever from wood energy, only certain industries and regions of the country will reap more than minor benefits.

Northern New England is one example. Already 20 percent of the homes there burn wood as a primary heat source and another 30 percent use it as a supplement. In Burlington, Electric Department spokesman Timothy Cronin said the city's planned power plant will use a supply of nearby timber that officials predict will never run out. "The figures are astounding on what's out there," he said. Among industries, pulp and paper mills are the leaders. The burning of wood residues now provide 47 percent of the power for their operations.

In both instances the important thing is that the wood came from nearby. Experts say timber is a good substitute for other fuels only when it is abundantly available and can be trucked a short distance.

This means, for example, that utilities cannot economically build anything bigger than a 50-megawatt wood-burning power plant because it costs too much to bring in wood from far away. A 50-megawatt power generator is tiny compared to the 3,600-megawatt outputs of some planned nuclear facilities, so utilities wanting to replace nuclear with wood would have to build dozens of wood-burning plants instead of one mammoth facility.

"The whole nation is going to have to go through a change of philosophy, that instead of thinking bigger is better, small may be the most efficient," said Jack Hornick, the U.S. Forest Service's coordinator of the wood utilization and energy application program.

One might think Ron Bruner of the American Forest Institute says the industry is split on the benefits and potential of selling waste.

The key is whether wood energy becomes so popular people start using good wood rather than scraps, he said. The Forest Service predicts the public demand for pulp and paper products will double by the year 2020. Scientists are finding ways to extract chemicals from wood that now usually come from oil.

The industry is going to have enough trouble finding wood just to meet the demand for its traditional products, Bruner said. If people start chopping down good trees for energy rather than using waste wood there could be a shortage of timber.

H.V. Decker of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation used other terms to express his fears. The average wood firm supplying fuel will be a small operator and those businessmen will be out to get wood fuel quickly, he said in a recent magazine article.

"That does not mean stumbling around in the wake of a sawlog veneer operation," he wrote. "They will be looking for heavily stocked, straight-stemmed woodlots." In other words, the sort of wood that needs to be reserved for other purposes.

Both Dollard and Hornick said they are aware of the possibilities of using something other than forest wastes. Dollard said buyers of wood fuel must be like the owners of the Burlington power plant, which takes only wood chips that came from forests where good management is practiced.

Spokesmen for environmental groups also fear the effects of an uncontrolled move to wood energy.

"We're concerned that energy development not interfere with some stands that have been reserved for greater value," said John Hooper of the Wilderness Society. He added that so long as wastes are used and good management practiced, wood energy is a good thing.

At the Sierra Club, Associate Director John McComb said he wants to make sure timber cutting won't exceed the amount that can reasonably be expected to grow back within a given period. In 1976 the U.S. grew about 50 percent more than the 14.4 billion cubic feet of wood it cut, but demand is skyrocketing.

"My sense is that trees for energy are probably not a viable thing," he said. "If I were to define it as to how much it could decrease our imports of oil, it would not be important."

Tom Barlow of the Natural Resources Defense Council predicted the demand for wood fuel would force loggers to look for more stands of timber to cut and thin. That traditionally means they will look to the national forests rather than to the private landowner.

Even today the forest industry doesn't provide anywhere near all the nation's commercial timber from its own land. Two years ago, for example, the 14 percent of America's commercial forest land that it owns produced 37 percent of the softwood timber cut.

Since World War II the government, owner of 20 percent of the commercial

Wood Energy Source..... Build Estate While Young

Forest land, has made up for much of the difference by selling timber from its national forests.

Now the government's wood-pricing policies let loggers buy timber for a cheaper price from the forest service than they could from private landowners. He said this should be changed as demand for wood fuel grows.

"The forest service is going to have to reform its own selling strategy if the forest industry is to be pushed into courting the private salesman more aggressively," he said.

Hornick denied the claim on pricing. But he did agree with the environmentalist that the forest service is not doing its job. It's no coincidence that both Johnny Appleseed, the grower, and Paul Bunyan, the cutter, are folk heroes.

Forest experts say private lot owners need to become more aware of tree farming and other management techniques, but whether they want to be is another matter.

"The private landowner, the majority of them aren't interested in harvesting trees," Bruner said. "They want them because they are there."

He said the problem is that the average person can't imagine "farming" trees because it takes 25 to 50 years for a crop to come in. People can't afford to put out seed money when they won't live long enough to reap the benefits, he said.

The federal government spent $869,000 during the past fiscal year to help private owners meet the cost of preparing their stands and seeding them, but forestry experts say the government needs to increase that support.

Meanwhile, the forest industry is pushing to change several laws so that tree farmers would get the same kind of benefits and insurance protection other farmers receive.

As for the wood user, government officials said information programs are needed to keep people from improperly setting up wood stoves and causing fire hazards in their houses.

Dollard said those who do switch over to wood fuel usually have few regrets.

"They get the feeling that they beat the system," he said. "They didn't have to pay the power companies... They just brag about a $30 (heating) bill in the middle of winter."

That feeling of beating the system is what wood energy can do for some. But it will benefit only certain groups — and only if they don't burn themselves out of a good thing.

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

"The first half of life consists of the capacity to enjoy without the chance; the last half consists of the chance without the capacity." For the average family, Mark Twain's remark may be true. Despite the seeming reality of Mark Twain's remark, however, it is possible to build an estate while you are young for enjoyment in your later years.

The average family today probably consists of a man and his wife, perhaps around 30 years of age, and one or two children. Basic living expenses in the early years take most of their income, but in many cases, it is possible to accumulate some excess money. It may be $50 a month or more. These funds should be used first for savings, then for insurance to build an immediate estate, and finally for investments.

If you are in this situation, you should be building for the future. Your most productive years are ahead of you, and income and funds available for investment are likely to increase.

There are several methods of investing for you. Dollar-cost averaging in regular monthly or quarterly purchases is a good method to get started in a small way. You can also buy growth oriented mutual funds, which provide professional stock selection and management. Or, you can invest directly in odd or round lots. Investing directly could be the best method for minimizing commissions. Investment funds could be placed in a savings account to earn interest until enough has been accumulated to buy a round lot. On the other hand, dollar cost averaging could minimize the problem of proper timing.

You can assume a moderate degree of risk in your investments, but speculation should be avoided. Longer term growth should be your goal, not short term trading profits. Real estate and bonds should be ruled out, since your resources are limited.

High quality growth stocks would be suitable for you. Since current income is not a prerequisite, you might select stocks with dividend reinvestment plans. Chances are the portfolio will be built one stock at a time, so selection is very important. Keep in mind that it is possible to pay too much for any kind of stock, including growth stocks. Studies have shown that stocks selling at low price/earnings multiples typically outperform those with high multiples over the long term.

Building a portfolio of high quality growth stocks is suitable for a young family. Careful selection of stocks will lessen market and business risk and could provide a substantial total return over a number of years. One final reminder is that stocks should never be bought and forgotten. There are times to sell stocks just as there are times to buy them. Periodically review your holdings with your broker and ask his opinion.

World Food Needs Spur Phosphate Study

ECU News Bureau

Studies by a team of world scientists including an East Carolina University geologist, Dr. Stan Riggs, one of the U. S. representatives, has just completed phase two of a long-term program studying the phosphate deposits of the world.

One of the main objectives of the project is to help solve the serious food supply problems which exist in many parts of the world.

Phase Two consisted of a two-week study of the extensive phosphate rocks in the northern Rocky Mountain sections of Wyoming, Idaho, and Utah. These unique rocks, the Phosphoria Formation, about 250 million years old, were formed in an ancient ocean which had the anomalous environments necessary for the formation of thick and extensive beds of phosphate sediments.

The second part of the project involved a two-week workshop session at the East-West Resources Institute in Honolulu.

Hawaii. This part of the program considered the geologic potential for finding new deposits of phosphate and potash in the Pacific region and the Asian Countries.

Riggs, who also participated in Phase One of the program during the summer of 1978 in Australia, says the project "is concerned with the origin and distribution in time and space of two of the world's most important non-renewable resources — phosphate and potash — both basic ingredients for agricultural fertilizers."

The world has an exponentially increasing need and dependence upon high-intensity fertilizer agriculture to feed a rapidly expanding population.

Since the world's good agricultural soils are extremely limited, and actually decreasing, increased food production can only happen as a result of increased fertilization of the newer and poorer soils which are being brought into production.

Most of the developing nations of the world have the world's largest populations and growth rates and generally have no fertilizer resources.

The project team consisted of about forty geologists representing twenty different nations. In addition to the U. S. Working Group, which sponsored Phase Two, the project included geologists from India, China, Russia, Malaysia, Indonesia, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Thailand, Korea, Japan, Fiji, Great Britain, France, Australia, Canada, Poland, Israel and Syria.

Phase Three of the project is anticipated to take place in Moscow, Russia and Outer Mongolia during the summer of 1980.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to work out the details of plans that have already been placed in motion. You are able to come to a new rapport with other persons and improve relationships with them by evening.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Know what is expected of you by associates and talk over policy matters with them. Get together with friends but don't overspend.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make plans early that will help you express your talents more intelligently later. Take time to clarify matters with co-workers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Improve family matters early before meeting friends. Handle business affairs wisely. Daytime may be nerve-wracking.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take care of correspondence and bills before you consider recreational pursuits. Study every phase of any new enterprise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Tackle property repairs during daylight hours when light is good and better work can be done. Handle correspondence well, too.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Morning is best for pursuing personal aims. Don't neglect bookkeeping; be sure it is done correctly. Improve health where possible.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Do whatever will relieve you of a personal worry. Get suggestions from a trusted adviser. Be social in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Know what your goals are and then you can understand what is puzzling you. Talk a situation over with a friend and get good advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Handle civic affairs during the day. Be sure your credit is good, otherwise improve it. Take no risks with money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study plans well before you present them to a bigwig for backing. Follow hunches and get good results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of routine chores before you go out for enjoyment. Come to a better understanding with mate, loved one. Be firm.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Have a conference with associates and then do your share of any work for best results. Be more thoughtful of relatives.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will express self early and hit on the right course in life. Provide as happy a home life as you can and give good advice early. Be proud of your progeny.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Today's Cryptquip clue: M equals T

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

to his hand to take the heart finesse. When that lost, dummy's hearts would wither on the vine and declarer would be held to six tricks.

You might argue that the queen of hearts is a double-dummy play. Not so. If declarer has the jack of hearts, he is going to finesse anyway and bring in the suit. And in the unlikely event that South has three hearts, it makes no difference what West does; declarer will always be able to get to dummy. At worst, the play of the queen of hearts might cost a trick. At best, as we have seen, it stands to gain a small fortune. Those are the kind of odds we like.

Rock Concert

At Greensboro

The rock group "Foreigner" will appear in concert in Greensboro Coliseum at 8 p.m. Friday, October 19. Among hit songs by the group are "Feels Like The First Time," "Cold As Ice," and "Dirty White Boy."

Tickets are priced at $7 and $8. For ticket reservations call 294-2870.

Wood-Cutting Sites Sought

Anyone having sites suitable for public cutting of firewood is urged to contact Jim Kea, assistant area extension agent, Forest Resources, 792-1621.

Areas should be away from powerlines, buildings, fences and livestock. Kea notes that this will be a good time from people to clean out hedge rows, reduce land clearing costs, or to upgrade hardwood stands by removing crowded, non-top trees. Kea has offered his assistance in marking out two or three acres for thinning.

Savitch: Future Anchor?

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — One name you're likely to hear in any discussion on the future of NBC's "Nightly News" is that of Jessica Savitch.

"I try very hard not to think about it," says Ms. Savitch, a most likely prospect to become the first woman since Barbara Walters to anchor a network's evening news program on a regular basis. "The only time I do is when I'm asked, and I'm asked a great deal."

"I would probably welcome the challenge and the opportunity to do 'Nightly News,' and I have to say I'm flattered when I hear my name mentioned that way."

"But I'm only 31 years old, and there are a lot of things I'd like to do and learn."

Barbara Walters spent 12 years with NBC News before she was hired by ABC in the fall of 1976 to co-anchor that network's evening news with Harry Reasoner. Ms. Savitch has, however, covered a good deal of ground since joining NBC News in Washington barely two years ago.

She currently is principal reporter and anchor for weekend editions of "Nightly News," as well as "NBC News Update" reports on weekends, has substituted for Tom Brokaw and Jane Pauley on NBC's "Today" program, and recently sat in for Tom Snyder as host of the network's "Tomorrow" interview show.

A week or so ago, Ms. Savitch was assigned to NBC's struggling "Prime Time Sunday," joining Chris Wallace and Jack Perkins as a principal reporter for the weekly news-magazine. She'll continue to anchor "Nightly News" on weekends.

"What few people realize," she says, explaining her rather rapid ascent in the business, "is that I've worked half my life to be this overnight success."

"That doesn't mean I don't stop now and then and look around and say, 'Wow, it really is terrific.' To be biased about it is to not understand the situation."

Miss Savitch, a native of Kennett Square, Pa., began her career in broadcasting while in high school, and worked at radio station WBBF in Rochester, N.Y., while attending Ithaca College.

She worked at WCBS Newsradio in New York City in 1969, and spent two years, 1970-72, as a reporter and anchor for KHOU-TV in Houston. She joined NBC News after four years at Philadelphia's KYW-TV.

Chances are, "Nightly News" will have a new look before too long. David Brinkley recently was removed as Washington anchor for the program to provide periodic commentary on politics, and John Chancellor has said he'd like a similar role as correspondent and commentator.

Brinkley has anchored or co-anchored "Nightly News" off and on since 1956, and Chancellor took over as the program's principal anchor in New York in 1971.

MOST LIKELY PROSPECT — Jessica Savitch, above, is a most likely prospect to become the first woman since Barbara Walters to anchor a network's evening news program on a regular basis. (AP Laserphoto)

NBC Strong In Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC took another impressive run at first place in the networks' ratings race, but ABC scored with the first three games of baseball's World Series and finished No. 1 in the week ending Oct. 14 by a fair margin, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

The month-old season has, for ABC, been something of a struggle. Last season's runaway winner, predicted by many in the industry to repeat as No. 1 in 1979-80, listed only three shows in the first 10 for the week, all World Series games.

ABC's rating for the week was, nonetheless, 21, with NBC second at 18.8 and CBS third — for the fourth week in a row — at 17.9.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21 percent of the homes in the country with television were tuned to ABC.

NBC had four shows in the week's Top 10, including "The Miracle Worker," "CHiPs," "Little House on the Prairie" and a movie, "When Hell was in Session."

"The Miracle Worker," a new television version of the stage and screen hit of two decades ago, finished fourth in the ratings, behind the second game in the baseball championships between Baltimore and Pittsburgh, CBS' "M-A-S-H," and the series' first game.

The rating for the week's most-watched show, the second game of the series Thursday night, was 28.8. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 28.8 percent saw at least a part of the sports special.

NBC, which finished dead last in the ratings in the 1978-79 season, won the competition two of the first three weeks of the current season. The network's challenge to ABC in the week of Oct. 8-14 was damaged by poor ratings for two shows from the network's news department.

"Prime Time Sunday" finished 53rd and "Henry Kissinger: An Interview with David Frost," was 57th, or last. The Kissinger program apparently was damaged in the ratings by a controversy several days before the air date over editing of the interview.

CBS' "Paris" was No. 54 for the week, with "The Lazarus Syndrome" on ABC 55th and a movie, "Lifeguard," also on CBS, 56th.

Forester Is Opposed To Herbicides

By DENNIS PFAFF
 PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — A federal forester says the use of toxic herbicides can be eliminated in forest management.

Otis Lowry says he has come in for a good deal of "pressure" because of his beliefs. He says his theories will probably never be officially endorsed.

Lowry said the main controversy surrounding his work in the woods along Oregon's southern coast "is the fact that I don't use chemicals." He blames the entrenchment of old-line foresters coupled with the self-interest of the chemical industry with the opposition to his work.

"People have just been taught that you have to do this (use chemical herbicides)" even though, he said, "there's no hard data that shows chemicals are any good at all."

On about 2,000 acres of federally owned land in the Coos Bay area, Lowry is letting nature take its course.

According to Lowry, the best procedure to follow after an area is clear-cut is to thoroughly burn the site of slash and left-over debris.

Then the product crop, Douglas fir, should be planted in the ground in biodegradable seedling containers. While many foresters recommend containerized seedlings, the technique is not as effective as it could be Lowry says, because most containers have been made from plastic.

Lowry says he and others have developed a biodegradable seedling container that doesn't require removal after planting.

In another departure from prevailing practices, he believes hardwoods, primarily alder which grow thick and fast in Oregon forests, should be allowed to grow alongside the Douglas fir seedlings.

The common management philosophy, Lowry says, is based on "product management," meaning that everything which appears to be detrimental to the product crop, in this case Douglas fir, should be eliminated.

Lowry subscribes to "systems management" — that everything in the environmental system is there for a purpose and should be retained as much as possible.

The presence of the alder growth, which is the main target of herbicide spraying in the Northwest, adds nutrients to the soil, he says. Its most important benefit, according to his studies, is the alder's ability to fix nitrogen in the soil, in turn speeding the growth of trees.

Lowry says that spraying to remove the hardwoods — which is generally done to "release" the Douglas fir seedlings from the shadowy "canopy" of overhanging hardwood trees — can damage those conifer trees which have grown faster and overcome the canopy. And he says, the "release" is not really needed because the Douglas firs will eventually outstrip the alders.

After the fir trees grow above the alder, he says, they grow as fast or — because of the additional nutrients in the soil provided by the hardwoods — faster than other trees grown in more traditional ways.

"If you can just keep your hands off it for the first few years (when the fir trees appear to be doing poorly because they are under the canopy), you'll have a better crop in the long run," Lowry says.

Test Nutrition Education Ideas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — State education agencies in Iowa, Maine and California have received a total of $420,000 in federal grants to test new ideas for nutrition education.

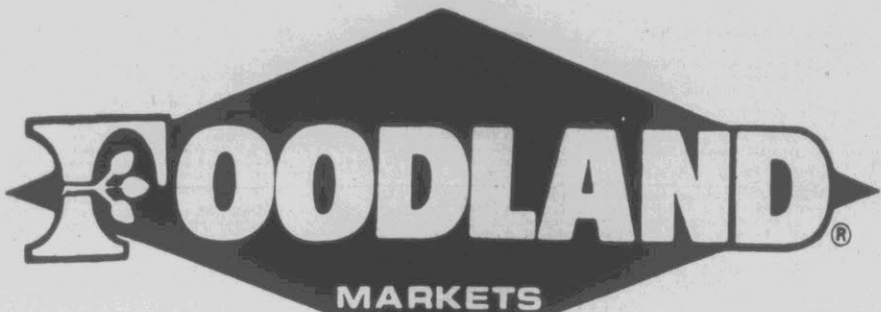

Iowa will use its grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for a day care center project using talk-with-me and activity books and reward stickers to change children's attitudes about food. The activities are designed to teach them to try new foods, eat a greater variety and fewer empty calories.

Maine public schools will use their grant for an intensive, two-week nutrition education workshop for parents, teachers, principals, cafeteria employees and students.

And California's grant will fund a child care center project to develop multi-media classroom activities.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 4 through Oct. 10.

HOUSE
VISTA VETOES — The House adopted, 229 for and 178 against, an amendment permitting local officials to keep federal Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) projects out of their areas. VISTA volunteers give economic, educational, health and social assistance to the poor.

The amendment, attached to a bill (HR 2859) authorizing domestic volunteer programs, was one of several offered to counter alleged political activism in VISTA. The bill was passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., the sponsor of the amendment, said Washington must realize it cannot "force down the throats of local communities those things that they are resistant to...."

Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., an opponent, said the amendment would politicize VISTA "by bringing politicians into a situation to engage in harassment tactics of poor people...."

Members voting "yea" favored the local veto.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Richardson Preyer, D-6, and Charles Rose, D-7, voted "nay."

Rep. James Martin, R-9, did not vote.

LEAA MONEY — The House rejected, 181 for and 224 against, an amendment to enable small police departments to get Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) grants for buying equipment. It was proposed to an LEAA bill (HR 2061) whose thrust was to direct federal crime-fighting grants away from equipment purchases and toward improving the criminal justice process. The bill was headed toward final passage and the Senate.

Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., the sponsor, said his amendment was needed because otherwise the bill prohibited small communities "from getting the actual things they need such as photographic equipment in order to take photographs...at the scene of a crime right after the crime has been committed."

Rep. Lamar Gudger, D-N.C., an opponent, said "the greatest criticism against the LEAA in recent history was the use by so many law enforcement agencies of federal dollars...to buy hardware...."

Members voting "nay" did not want LEAA grants to fund small equipment purchases by police and sheriff's departments.

Jones, Hefner and Martin voted "yea." Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

ABORTION — By a vote of 162 for and 234 against, the House refused to soften its hardline against federally-funded abortions.

The vote came on an amendment that would have continued current law, which permits subsidized abortions when pregnancy results from rape or incest, or when it will endanger the mother's life or long-term health. The House chose instead to allow taxpayer-financed abortions only when the mother's life is at stake. The amendment was offered to a bill (HJ Res 413) providing funds for the Department of HEW that was approved and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., a supporter of the softening amendment, said "we are voting on whether poor women are going to have the same rights" as those who can afford to pay for abortion without government help.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., an opponent, said: "When we talk compromise on this issue what we are asked to compromise is human life."

Members voting "yea" favored a more lenient abortion policy.

Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea." Fountain voted "nay."

Jones and Martin did not vote.

SENATE

ENERGY BOARD — The Senate approved, by a vote of 68 for and 25 against, a bill creating an Energy Mobilization Board to speed projects intended to reduce U.S. oil imports.

The measure (S 1308) would permit the board to override other federal agencies if they failed to act on designated "fast-track" projects. The board could also waive certain state and local regulations. The bill was sent to the House.

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., a supporter, said the bill would be the "centerpiece by which we really move in the field of energy."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said the bill's "unprecedented intrusions into state and local prerogatives to protect the health and safety of citizens" are objectionable.

Members voting "yea" favored the energy board.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

WORLD BANK — The Senate adopted, 50 for and 44 against, an amendment that killed House-passed language that would have prohibited U.S. contributions to the World Bank. Dozens of developed countries contribute to the bank, which in turn lends to Third World countries.

The vote came during debate on a foreign aid bill (HR 4473) later passed and sent to conference with the House. The language killed by this vote also sought to prevent World Bank loans to Cuba. In a separate vote, the Senate went on record as opposed to any U.S. foreign aid reaching Cuba.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., sponsor of the amendment, said the House-passed language must be killed because in the long run "it may mean the death" of the World Bank.

Sen. Harry Byrd, I-Va., an opponent of the amendment, said its message was "that we do not want to use tax funds directly to aid Cuba but it is all right to go in the back door and have tax funds used for that purpose."

Senators voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

Safety Caps Are Helpful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Accidental poisonings among preschoolers are down 51 percent since 1974, when safety caps were first required by law on oral prescription drugs, reports the Closure Committee of the Glass Packaging Institute.

The caps, designed to prevent youngsters 5 and under from ingesting poisonous substances, are used as closures on oral prescription drugs, some over-the-counter drugs and dangerous household products.

The Closure Committee, an association of major safety-cap manufacturers, points out that the elderly, and others without the strength to operate the caps, can request non-safety-capped medicines from their pharmacists.

Usually, this requires only a verbal request by the customer that the prescription be dispensed in packages that are not child-resistant. In some cases, the pharmacist may ask the customer to sign a written statement of the request but this is not required by federal law.

However, the association urges all adults, including the elderly, to use the safety caps in households where youngsters, whether grandchildren or other young visitors, may be in the home at any time.

Pioneer Women Convention Set

NEW YORK (AP) — Delegates to the 26th national biennial convention of Pioneer Women will view some of the results of their work when they assemble in Jerusalem, Israel, Nov. 11-21. They will visit some of the 1,500 installations which the women's Zionist organization maintains in Israel.

An initial gift of $25,000 will be presented by the Golda Meir Child Development Fund of Pioneer Women. This "living memorial," celebrating the International Year of the Child, will be used to train professionals in preschool education, and to upgrade the facilities and staff of child-care centers in distressed neighborhoods in Israel.

ABOARD THE YOUNG AMERICA (AP)—The onshore breeze is cool and the blue-green sea is strangely silent aboard the wide, open deck of this sailing vessel just a few miles off the boardwalk of Atlantic City, N.J.

"Stand by to raise the mainsail," barks First Mate Lou Buck from the foredeck as his young crew scurries among the 66 wide-eyed tourists sitting amidships.

"Raise the mainsail!" Buck commands, and the weathered canvas slowly unfurls in the breeze.

The mainsail, and the other sails, of this 130-foot brigantine are set twice daily on weekdays and three times daily on weekends for landlubbers who seek a three-hour taste of what it was like to sail the sea by the wind.

The Young America, the largest American-built square-rigger still sailing, as its crew proudly boasts, is a modern replica of an old-time sailing ship working the Atlantic for $10 a passenger off the New Jersey gambling resort.

And although she is only 4 years old, not 100, and her hull is reinforced concrete, not wood, the Young America plies the sea in the tradition of the great sailing ships of old.

"When you get out here and you shut the engine down, it's just peaceful and quiet," says Buck, 27, in an easy moment near the wheel. "It's as quiet as you can get. You're just moving along with the wind."

"There's no other place you can take a ride like this," he said. "We're not out here with a microphone and stuff like that."

The 96-ton brigantine was built in 1975 in Port Jefferson, N.Y., by a contractor who dreamed of running charters around Long Island Sound.

Last year the contractor, foiled by bankruptcy, sold the ship, then called The Enchantress, for $417,000 to the Oceanic Society's Mid-Atlantic Region and Historic Gardner's Basin maritime park in Atlantic City, the vessel's home port.

Her crew of a half-dozen young men and women sleeps and eats aboard the ship. It's not unusual to smell the appealing scent of the crew's dinner, perhaps clams and marinara sauce, mixed in with the salt air on an afternoon cruise.

Twice as long as Columbus' Santa Maria and about the size of the old New Bedford whaling ships, the Young America spends her falls in Long Island, hopping from port to port with maritime exhibits. She travels to Miami in the winter, sailing Atlantic and Caribbean waters as a trainer for young Scouts.

Although its charm is in the sails and the silence, the brigantine uses a 250-horsepower diesel engine to keep her moving on windless nights and in ticklish ports.

"I mean, she's an old sailing vessel to a point," says chief engineer Mike Murphy, 26, whose machinery is one of the ship's few concessions to the 20th century. "It would be pretty miserable on this ship without electricity."

Still, there are the purists. "I really don't think a large sailing vessel is just an object. It's part of our heritage," says Peter Vanadia, regional director of The Oceanic Society.

"I'd say that most of the people who sail with us know what it was like to sail 100 years ago," he said. "People start to get an appreciation of their maritime heritage."

By ALINE MOSBY
KUNMING, China (UPI) — Three Americans living in this remote city in southern China are a barometer of how the post-Mao thaw is progressing in China.

Elizabeth Booz and her son Patrick, 24, teach English and world history at Yunnan University while Stephen Thorpe, 28, handles the same subjects at Kunming Teachers' College nearby.

The trio flew into Kunming, a quiet city of 1.5 million 180 miles from the Vietnam border, in February during the brief, heady period following resumption of Sino-American relations. "The thaw was on, everybody was so excited, and then came the crackdown in March," said Mrs. Booz, referring to the sudden disappearance of anti-Mao Tse-tung posters in Peking and other cities, the suppression of youth rallies and official discouragement of contacts between Chinese and foreigners.

"Everybody seemed cut off from us. We did our classes and that was it, as if they wanted to sweep us foreigners into a closet."

"But by now the scene has become more relaxed and people are friendly again."

"We are invited to supper sometimes by students. At first the atmosphere is stilted but then things warm up, the dam breaks and we spend hours talking. They want to know what is available to buy in America and how much it costs, how much we make and so on."

The Booz family and Thorpe are among several American teachers and technicians now working in various areas under the new cultural and scientific exchanges between the two nations. American coal, mining, agriculture and oil experts live in other cities.

Mrs. Booz, a widowed teacher and writer from Glassboro, N.J., and Washington, D.C., was about to teach in Indonesia when she was asked by other educators to apply for China. Her son, just graduated in Asian studies from the University of Wisconsin, also applied. Thorpe, of Houston, Tex., heard "on the grapevine" that China wanted English teachers.

The three found that Kunming's university of 1,200 students and college of 1,400 both were woefully short of books in English and teaching materials for their world history and geography classes.

The books to teach English had been published in 1939 and included passages on mistreatment of blacks in America and phrases for attending a garden party at Buckingham Palace in London.

"We considered bringing in English language books from abroad, but so many teach phrases for talking on telephones, riding in cars and individual activities, things not done here, so we had to rule that out," Mrs. Booz said.

To build up a library of books in English for the students, Mrs. Booz appealed to friends in the United States and U.S. tourists passing through Kunming. Now students can borrow from the library more than 1,000 books, from Ernest Hemingway novels to encyclopedias.

The world history and geography class posed a problem since the university had no complete world maps. They did have one that "shows China in the center of the world and Europe some tiny appendage off to one side," said Mrs. Booz.

Friends in the United States shipped maps and a globe to the class. And Mrs. Booz, also an artist, draws on the blackboard a map of the entire world for her history-geography class which has 250 students, "including hangers-on and teachers."

"They are anxious, frantic, to learn about the world," she said. "Everything you drop on them they absorb like a sponge. And the more they learn the more they realize how little they know about the world. They are awfully ignorant about world history and geography."

Patrick added, "The students are dying to get their hands on books about China written abroad."

Mrs. Booz said Chinese students "learn by memory, this is how they have been educated. They learn political science as a sort of catechism. I have them recite in small groups, rather than individually, as they are used to being a collective."

English is the favored language course at both schools, as all over China. The Booz mother and son teach 200 students in several classes while Thorpe has 150. The university French classes draw 40 students, Russian 20.

Students in China have been told officially they can listen to Voice of America broadcasts to help their English. "When broadcast time comes you see antennas everywhere on the campus," Patrick said.

Films, work, school events and trips to the countryside keep the teachers busy. Bearded, slender Thorpe lives in the 1930's style Kunming Hotel. He hung a huge Texas flag on the wall of his book-filled room. Yunnan University gave Mrs. Booz and her son a simple house on the campus, rent free, in addition to paying them $366 monthly, 10 times the pay of a beginning teacher in China.

"They built us a bathroom with a handcrafted cement bathtub," Mrs. Booz said. "And we have the only flush toilet and indoor running water tap on the campus."

The house, with a homey

picket fence, has fluorescent light fixtures on the ceilings and a cement floor. It has five rooms, a luxury in housing-short China.

"We feel wasteful for having so much space to ourselves," Mrs. Booz said as she sat in her living room, furnished with Chinese modern, motel-like furniture.

Her students sleep six to eight in a dormitory room and use outdoor showers and latrines. They were astonished to learn from the Americans that a U.S. college dormitory room usually houses no more than two.

She Cleans Up On Job

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Don't ask Pat Kolodich if business is picking up.

"I get all sorts of cracks," said Miss Kolodich, a combination gumscraper, direction-giver and local trivia treasury who helps keep things rolling on the Portland Mall, for a salary of $15,000 per year.

Miss Kolodich, who has been on the job only a short time, is the first of the city's mall attendants. The 29-year-old explained that her work was part street cleaning, part public relations.

"For the most part, people have been really marvelous," she said, parking her two-wheeled, trash can-laden dolly near a hot falafel stand. "I think it freaks people out when I pop up and ask if I can help them."

A job attached to the city's Bureau of Public Works, the mall attendant's position created earlier this year spurred some uproar when several city employees objected to the salaries that would be paid.

"I was working as a janitor at the police station when an officer stuck the civil-service flier under my nose," said Miss Kolodich, the first of two attendants to take to the streets. "He said 'Look, you can make as much as we do.'"

The Newark, N.J., native's journey to Portland's street corners has taken some odd routes. She is an East Indian scholar and former clerk in the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C. She has also been a saleswoman and restaurant cook.

Miss Kolodich has visited India and says she likes to travel. Her job helps, taking her the length and breadth of the mall each day.

"I try to make the whole circuit each day, just to get a look at things," she said. "The dirtiest spots are at the bus stops on both sides of Meier and Franks, and around the Pioneer Courthouse — that's where we've got the most foot traffic."

CAN A TRASH BAG BE STRONG, ECONOMICAL AND DEGRADABLE?

It can if it's BES-PAK®.

At BES-PAK we expect a lot from our trash bags.

We expect them to be strong, Economical. And we expect them to help make a better environment. For you and for future generations.

You see, BES-PAK trash bags are specially treated. This treatment does not effect the strength of the plastic, until after the bags are used and placed outdoors.

Use the bags. Put them outdoors as usual.

When the plastic has been exposed to prolonged sunlight of sufficient intensity (in your yard or at the dump), a gradual chemical change will begin.

And a few weeks or months later, the plastic will break down and turn back into harmless natural elements. Even if it's buried in landfill.

Isn't it nice to know you can help save the environment for your children and at the same time, save some money for yourself?

A trash bag can be strong, economical and degradable.

YES. HERE'S 20¢ TO PROVE IT.

So you want to be a photo-journalist!

My advice is don't even consider it unless you want to live, eat and sleep photography for the rest of your life with no guarantee you'll ever succeed.

Taking pictures for fun is fine, and I encourage it. But if you want to make your living at it be prepared to work, study, experiment and work some more. Then pray for a lucky break.

Over my desk I have a Chinese character that translated roughly into our word "enthusiasm." I tell all young photographers who ask for advice on becoming a photojournalist that unless they have that — enthusiasm — forget it and become an accountant or something else.

Photography, at least news photography, is not an 8-to-5 job. Those photographers who get ahead and excel over others have one trait in common. I like to say that they chase firetrucks. They think photography all the time and are constantly experimenting, trying new things and new ways of doing something.

They develop an eye and see pictures that others miss even driving from one assignment to another. Some actually do chase firetrucks.

Many of the top photographers are terribly insecure. I've seen some spend hours trying to get a specific shot they have in mind. They'll use various lenses, bracket their exposures, change their position and then agonize over the results.

Almost always they're like the fisherman who complains about the one that got away. They almost always feel that they could have done better.

When a new gadget comes along — filter, lens, flash unit or whatever — they can't wait to take it home and play with it. Using the family as guinea pigs, they'll shoot and shoot until the new gadget is old hat and they understand all of its ramifications.

FISHEYE MONSTERS: These youngsters, clad in halloween makeup, were only inches from the lens when they posed for this photo. The fisheye lens, with which the picture was made, is ideal for this sort of shot.

Some time ago, when the fisheye lenses first came on the scene, there was a rash of round pictures. Photographers were using the lens to get as much into the picture as possible.

One of our young photographers asked to borrow the lens from our cabinet shortly after it arrived. He took it home and, using multiple flash and his children as models, came up with two of the best uses of this lens I've seen yet.

A lens like this has tremendous depth of field, meaning that a greater portion of the picture is in focus than a normal lens — from inches to infinity. It also distorts a lot.

Halloween was just a week away when this photographer borrowed the lens. He came back with two square photos, cropped out of the normal circle you get from a fisheye, just in time to move on the wire as a Halloween illustration.

In one photo he cut out the back of a pumpkin lantern for the lens to show the candle burning in the foreground and his children peering into it framed in the eyes, nose and mouth. The second photo, used as an illustration here, had the distorted images of the children grinning into the lens from inches away.

That was years ago. That young photographer was Eddie Adams and he's gone on to become one of the top photojournalists in the world. He still experiments.

Latin America Manufacture Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Manufacturing represents a steadily rising proportion of Latin America's gross domestic product, says the Inter-American Development Bank.

According to the bank's annual survey on economic and social progress in the region, the manufacturing share of the GDP rose from 23.2 percent in 1960-64 to 26.6 percent in 1979-74.

At the same time, agriculture has steadily declined, dropping from 16 percent in 1960-64 to 12.2 percent in 1970-74 and 11.1 percent in 1975-78, the bank reported.

Future Fringe: Legal Service

By BRIAN MOTTAY
SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — As far as two recent Gonzaga University Law School graduates are concerned, prepaid legal service for middle-class Americans is an idea whose time has come.

Attorney Richard Kayne and his partner, Alfred Kitching, have begun a plan to help those families who can't afford expensive lawyers, and who make too much money to qualify for free legal aid programs.

"What we're trying to do is come up with as comprehensive a plan as possible for the average person," Kayne said, noting that the prepaid legal service concept is starting to pop up all over the nation.

"There's been a federal push and by the American Bar Association to get some of these programs going," he said.

As proposed, participating families and individuals would pay an estimated $12 a month for a variety of legal services at no extra cost, including such things as wills, real estate transactions, consumer protection claims and uncontested divorces.

Should more intensive legal help be needed, such as defense of a criminal complaint, the client would then pay an additional fee.

"We're not trying to have assembly line services," Kayne said. "We're trying to cover the full gamut of legal problems."

Kayne said he and Kitching have already lined up several established law firms to participate in the program in addition to their regular caseloads, providing participants with a list of experienced attorneys from which to choose.

In the beginning, Kayne said the program will be aimed primarily at employee groups and others interested in establishing group-type plans.

"What we're going to do to get this started is set it up as a fringe benefit and offer it to employee groups," Kayne said. "It's the next fringe benefit. They've already got dental and they've got medical."

Besides providing inexpensive legal help, the two attorneys believe their program will also help people solve legal problems at an early stage before they grow into a crisis situation — the point at which most people finally decide to see an attorney.

Kayne and Kitching recently sent letters to all members of the Spokane County Bar Association to advise fellow attorneys of what they are trying to do and to invite contributions.

The two attorneys plan to put their program into operation the first of next year.

Oil Production From Old Tires

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Scrap automobile tires have been found to be a new source of oil at a pilot plant operated by a research group, according to an industry journal.

The Energy User News reports that the plant has been operating for some 18 months and company officials say it can produce between 80 and 100 gallons of oil per ton of tires, with the oil usable directly as a fuel in boilers.

By subjecting discarded rubber tires to intense high temperatures, the plant has found yields of oil, carbon char and hydrocarbon gases, the publication said.

Carbon char can be refined into carbon black and used to produce ink and carbon paper, it added. The by-product hydrocarbon gases are used to help fuel the plant.

Plans for a commercial facility with a 20-ton-a-day capacity are on the drawing board at the company, the Energy Research Group of Santa Monica.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT FOOD SHOPPING. It's the "Total" cost of your food bill that really counts. Some stores claim to be the cheapest on this or that; that is, they have super low prices on just enough grocery items to confuse the issue...then sock it to you on the meat prices. We don't claim to have the lowest prices on every item in our store, but we claim to be competitive on the "TOTAL COST" of your food bill-meaning that if you buy your total food order at Overton's we will be just as competitive as any other supermarket. We have no stamps, no games, or no gimmicks. These things cost money and can only add to the cost of your food bill. With gas at 90¢ a gallon or more, there is no need to run here or there. Overton's is the place to shop- "We are your food store." With Greenville's Best Meats, super fast service, friendly personnel, and competitive prices, Overton's is the place For You to shop. At Overton's it is the little things we do for you that makes us different and they are all free.

How To Buy and Prepare Meat ... NEW KROGER FILM FOR CLUBS AND CLASSES

A new consumer information film, "Learning More About Meat," has been prepared by the Kroger Sav-on Consumer Affairs Department, and will be available for showings during the 1979-80 club and school year. The 20-minute, sound and color film on how to shop for and prepare meat, fish and poultry to save money and get the most nutrition is being offered to clubs, classes and other groups and organizations free of charge.

Call 704-527-5830 or write Kroger Sav-on, 5435 Seventy-Seven Center Drive, Charlotte, N.C. 28210.

SERVING YOU COMES FIRST IN THE KROGER SAV-ON GARDEN

WE MOVE WITH THE CROPS TO BRING YOU THE CREAM!

From Michigan to California. From the Carolina's to Missouri. From New Jersey to Idaho. From planting to harvest our buyers travel to find the cream of each crop. They study the planting. They choose the growing region that promises the most abundant, high quality products. And finally, before buying, they inspect the crops personally. They bring you the best values throughout the year and remain as cost conscious as possible, too. That includes keeping their buying to the closest sales facilities so as to take advantage of the lowest freight costs. It takes constant movement. Dedicated attention to growth, conditions and product outcome. And it's all done with extreme care. So we can bring you high quality at the lowest cost ... all year. Kroger ... working to bring your lower prices.
