More Than 7,000 Guests On Hand For Event

JFK Library Dedicated

By LINDA WERFELMAN
BOSTON (UPI) — President Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is expected to try to take the presidency from him in 1980, joined Saturday to dedicate the $20.8 million cathedral-like John F. Kennedy Library.

More than 7,000 guests including Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, and numerous former members and friends of the slain president's New Frontier gathered for the ceremonies beneath hazy skies next to breezy Boston Harbor more than 16 years after Kennedy was killed in Dallas.

The late president's children, Caroline and John Jr., both college students, greeted the audience. John Jr. recited a poem in which he alluded to his father's "lovely ambition ... still touched with fire."

Sen. Kennedy delivered a solemn speech to the invited guests, many of whom wept when later listening to excerpts of the late president's most famous speeches played over loudspeakers.

"In that brief unfinished journey he filled America with pride and made this nation young again. The 1,000 days are like an evening gone, but they are not forgotten. Those whose lives he touched will never be the same. They responded to his call, devoting their own lives to this country."

The dedication was like a reunion for many of those who had worked with Kennedy. They took snapshots of each other using the white, concrete edifice as a backdrop.

"It reminded me of the start of the New Frontier. It was really great to see them all again. The whiz kids of the 60s are now eligible for social security," said David Powers, a former Kennedy aide now curator of the library's museum.

"What we tried to do here was capture the spirit and style and grace of the president ... President Kennedy would have been proud the way his mother and brother, and sisters and Jackie ... they took photographs off their walls and gave them to the library," Powers said.

In keeping with the late president's interest in young people a special seating section was set aside for dozens of invited youths.

"The majority of today's high school students had not yet been born when John F. Kennedy was president. To them he is a figure in the history books, but an inspiration none the less," said Kennedy brother-in-law Stephen Smith.

In his remarks, Carter praised John Kennedy for "the admirable accomplishments of his 1,000 days" and said he set the United States "on a path of excitement and hope."

Sen. Kennedy and Carter set their political differences aside for the day and greeted each other with a warm handshake. Before the outdoor ceremonies Kennedy led the president on a personal tour of the library.

But the senator's nephew, Joseph P. Kennedy III, son of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, delivered a fiery speech in which he came close to attacking the Carter administration.

The young Kennedy said he hoped his generation of Americans would have the "moral courage" to face up to the problems of inflation and he openly attacked the nation's oil companies.

"We all know that inflation bears down hardest on the poor. And now we are being told by the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board the standard of living of the average American has to decline if inflation is to be reduced.

"But what about the standard of living of the people on the boards of oil companies ... I hope the rest of us keep our eyes open during the 1980s unless we are picked bone clean."

The library on the University of Massachusetts Boston Harbor campus contains more than 28 million pages of presidential papers, thousands of photographs, and hundreds of memorabilia from the Kennedy White House years.

The concrete and glass building is located a few hundred yards away from the Columbia Point Housing Project, one of the bleakest in the city.

Originally the library was to have been at Harvard University where JFK said he would have his retirement office. But Cambridge residents complained it would draw too many tourists to the already congested Harvard Square neighborhood.

Rose Kennedy was scheduled to turn the key over to the General Services Administration which will own and maintain the library, but the Kennedy matriarch is still recuperating from a hernia operation several weeks ago. Instead the key was given by John F. Kennedy Jr.

"And now in dedicating this library to Jack we recall those years of grace, that time of hope," Sen. Kennedy said. "The spark still glows, the journey never ends. The dream shall never die."

Recession? Yes Or No?

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pay no attention to arguments over whether the United States is in a recession.

By the time an official answer comes, the recession — or whatever it is — may be nearly over.

More important is the fact that those who use this label, and those who don't, all are forecasting much the same thing for the next few quarters of the economy.

A typical forecast comes from Allen Gutheim, an economist with Wharton Economic Forecasting in Philadelphia. Wharton predicts:

—The economy, which shrank in the second quarter of this year and grew in the third, is likely to decline during the rest of this year and the first quarter of 1980, then begin a mild recovery.

—Unemployment, recently at 5.7 percent, is likely to rise to about 8 percent next year, an increase of more than 2 million unemployed persons.

—Inflation at the consumer level is expected to decline from its recent annual rate of 13 percent to about 10 percent in 1980.

—The income of most Americans after inflation and taxes, which has been declining, will continue to decline through the first quarter of 1980.

—The expected slowdown particularly will affect parts of the economy that depend on borrowing. Housing construction will decline. Consumer borrowing for automobiles, home furnishings and appliances will taper off. Business may forego some investment in new equipment.

The forecasts of these chief economists, both private and government, are similar to this, although they differ in degree.

While the two top economic spokesmen in the administration choose different labels for the current economic condition, they are not far apart on what they believe is actually happening. Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told Congress last week: "I still believe we're in a recession" while

Another Pled Guilty In Local Drug Trial

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Louise Johnston Whitehurst, 40 of Winterville, pled guilty to charges that she conspired to possess marijuana with the intent to sell and deliver, in Pitt County Superior Court early Friday afternoon.

Judge Henry Stevens delayed sentencing until the week of December 17.

Ms. Whitehurst was one of 11 defendants charged after Greenville police, agents of the State Bureau of Investigation, and federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents raided a mobile home just west of Greenville, on the morning of July 23, and confiscated 8,500 pounds of marijuana.

Six other defendants in the case — all from out-of-state — pled guilty to conspiracy or possession charges Thursday. Sentencing for those has been set for January 7, 1980 in Onslow County Superior Court.

Charges against Douglas H. Ross, a 21-year-veteran of the Greenville Police Department on whose property the marijuana was found, his wife Marga Ross, and Mrs. June Miller Edwards, are scheduled to be heard later in Superior Court.

Mrs. Whitehurst entered her plea after Judge Stevens denied a defense motion to suppress evidence gathered during a search of the premises where the $3.18 million worth of marijuana was found.

The judge said the search warrant, "in all respects is legal and valid," adding that even if there had been no warrant, the search would have been valid because officers had reason to believe a felony was being committed in their presence.

Testifying at the suppression hearing Friday, State

Bureau of Investigation special agent Malcolm McLeod said a surveillance was set up on July 20, after being advised by the Drug Enforcement Administration that, "a large quantity of marijuana was allegedly in the Greenville area," and would, "be stored here for a while." The agent added that the information indicated that "one Mr. (Armond Modesto) Abreu was in control of the marijuana," and that the marijuana would be, "stored at the residence of Doug Ross." (Abreu pled guilty to conspiracy charges in Superior Court Thursday and under a plea bargaining agreement is expected to receive a two-year prison term and be fined $10,000 when he appears in Onslow County Superior Court January 7, for sentencing.)

McLeod described the Ross premises as located 1 1/2 miles and 1979 Pitt County UW president Robert Griffin. Warner is du Pont UW chairman, Mrs. Branch is with du Pont's Employment Division, and Simpson serves as Pitt County UW plant chairman. (Reflector photo by Rebecca Buffalo)

KINSTON — United Way officials at the Kinston facility of the E.I. du Pont de Nemours Company presented over $47,000 in pledges, cash, payroll deductions and plant gifts to the Pitt County United Way Friday.

Du Pont United Way plant co-chairmen Jerry Henderson and G.H. Warner, along with Pitt County United Way plant chairman Woody Simpson, presented the funds to 1979 UW President Robert Griffin and 1979 Campaign Chairman Dr. Thomas Brewer, ECU Chancellor.

According to Dr. Brewer, over 1,000 pledges were received from Du Pont employees for the Pitt County fund. United Way monies also go to Lenoir, Craven and Wayne Counties from the Kinston facility employees.

Fifteen Du Pont employees from Pitt County were designated in the "200 Plus" division, Brewer indicated.

Contributions from the Kinston plant will go to the Pitt County 1979 goal of $351,477.08.

Inner Tubes With Drugs Found In Coastal Waters

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — State and local law enforcement officials continued to search the coastal area of Dare County late Saturday after inner tubes containing about $1.6 million worth of hashish were discovered floating near the shore.

Dare County deputies said no arrests had been made by Saturday afternoon. U.S. Coast Guard boats and aircraft along with state and county aircraft were used in the search that centered on a six-mile area near Manteo.

The State Bureau of Investigation was called in when the first inner tube was discovered by a research vessel Friday and turned over to the Coast Guard. SBI agents said they did not know how long the investigation would continue.

Don Young, resident agent with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration office in Wilmington, said probably as much as 1,000 pounds was taken Saturday morning. He put the value of the drugs at $1600 per pound.

However, Saturday afternoon SBI assistant director Cuyler Windham said the hashish could be worth as much $2500 a pound on the street.

Agents said they did not know how many inner tubes had been found, but Windham said it was probably "in the teens."

U.S. Coast Guard Chief Church Kern of Portsmouth, Va. said about 1,000 pounds of hashish had been recovered Saturday night. Kern said the Coast Guard was turning the search and the investigation over to Dare County and SBI officials.

Gil Payette, director of the U.S. Customs patrol division in Wilmington, said only one inner tube had been weighed Saturday morning, and it contained about 50 pounds of hashish.

Payette said the inner tubes had not been connected with any vessel, and it had not been determined if they had been dumped in the Albemarle Sound, abandoned on an island and then washed out into the sound or whether a vessel had gone down.

"There are lots of possibilities. It's obvious they came from a ship but whether they were on the ship when they became adrift, we don't know," he said.

Marines Burned In Mishap

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — A team of burn specialists is flying here from an Army hospital in Texas to examine 43 U.S. Marines who were trapped in flames when a fuel tank toppled and exploded in a typhoon and sent blazing gasoline cascading into their wooden barracks.

One Marine was killed in the freak explosion and flash fire Friday, and one Japanese, a woman employee, suffered minor burns.

The team of specialists was due to arrive this morning from the Brooke Army Hospital in San Antonio. Pioneering research and treatment of serious burn cases has been conducted for several years at the hospital's burn center.

"Many of the injured are in serious or critical condition. A final evaluation will be made by the burn center team," the U.S. Forces Tokyo office announced. It said it was likely that all of the injured would be evacuated to the United States for treatment. None of the victims was identified.

their probe today of the smoking ruins of the aged wooden quonset barracks at Camp Fuji, an installation at the base of 12,000-foot Mount Fuji, Japan's sacred extinct volcano 90 miles southwest of Tokyo.

The camp normally houses about 12,000 Marines plus a contingent of Japanese troops and is used by both groups for training exercises.

The cause of the blast and fire has not been officially established, but Japanese news reports, quoting local authorities, said it occurred when the fierce winds of Typhoon Tip, which passed through central Japan on Friday afternoon, knocked over a 10-foot enclosure holding the gasoline, igniting the fuel which flowed through the nearby barracks.

The Marines were from an Okinawa-based battalion landing team that was at Camp Fuji for special training.

Reports said the fire occurred during a period of high winds but no rain. Tokyo later was hit by the storm, disabling the city's rail transport system and stranding thousands of commuters in the Friday afternoon rush hour.

33 Deaths Reported In Japanese Storm

TOKYO (UPI) — The pounding winds and waves of Typhoon Tip capsized two fishing boats off the northern Japanese coast Saturday. Four crewmen were known dead and 38 others were missing.

The sinkings pushed the known death toll to 33 in Japan's worst typhoon in 13 years.

The two fishing boats, one Japanese and the other South Korean, capsized off Kushiro on the northern main island of Hokkaido.

The bodies of four members of the 37-member crew aboard the 98-ton South Korean vessel were recovered. A lone survivor, who swam to shore, was treated in a local hospital.

The other 32 were missing and feared drowned in the choppy and chilly seas, along with all six crewmen from the Japanese vessel.

Before the killer typhoon charged over Hokkaido, it claimed 29 lives, including two U.S. Marines, and left 247 people injured in Japan.

On Okinawa, towering waves whipped up by the typhoon swept two U.S. Marines into rocks along the shore. Norman Shultz, 21, was killed and Lawrence Soares, 21, was severely injured.

Friday Accidents

An estimated $4,200 in property damage resulted in four traffic collisions here Friday, according to Police investigations.

About 8 a.m., a vehicle driven by Tammy Jo Argenbright, Apt. 21 Village Green, collided on 10th St. with a car driven by David Nash Wilkins Love III, 108 Dogwood Dr. Estimated damage to each vehicle was $900.

Police investigations of a 12:20 p.m. collision on E. 10th St. reported a vehicle driven by Randy B. Ward, 1212 Red Banks Rd. collided with a vehicle driven by Curtis E. Stevens Jr., 2901 Wesleyan Ln., Winston-Salem. Estimated damage to the Ward vehicle was $135 and $465 to the Stevens vehicle.

About 5:15 p.m., a vehicle driven by Philip Nelson, 1211 E. Rock Spring Rd., collided in a parking lot on E. 10th St. with a vehicle driven by Wesley Ray Cannon, Rt. 2 Box 125-B, Ayden.

Estimated damages to the Nelson vehicle was $400 and $200 to the Cannon vehicle.

About 5:35 p.m., a vehicle driven by George Franklin Nelson, P.O. Box 1453, Winterville, collided on James Street with a parked vehicle. Estimated damages to the parked vehicle was $1,200.

Hookerton Man Killed

By The Associated Press
A pair of traffic deaths in separate accidents Friday night has pushed North Carolina's death toll for the year to 1,187 — 20 fatalities more than were recorded at the same time last year.

The Highway Patrol said Alfonso Speight, 21, of Rt. 1, Hookerton, was killed when his bicycle and an automobile collided on N.C. 123 about 6 miles north of Snow Hill.

UNC Must Provide Information To Nova

COLD KISS—This Salt Lake City, Utah couple found a way to make waiting for a bus on a rainy day a little more bearable. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The University of North Carolina must provide certain information to Nova University to help the Florida-based institution prepare for a trial on whether Nova can be banned from running degree-granting programs in the state.

UNC Attorneys said they would appeal the motion for discovery granted Friday in Wake County by Superior Court Judge Hamilton H. Hobgood of Louisburg.

Discovery lets one party in a lawsuit get documents, depositions or other materials from the other party involved before the trial begins.

In 1978 the UNC Board of Governors said Nova could not operate degree-granting programs in the state on the grounds that Nova lacked the necessary teaching expertise and library facilities.

A specialist in programs for teachers and others needing advanced degrees to meet state requirements or get better pay, Nova usually conducts its courses on weekends in rented rooms.

In reply Nova filed suit in federal and state courts, claiming North Carolina's Legislature didn't give the Board of Governors the power to license universities.

On Monday, Hobgood denied a Nova motion for a summary judgment that would have stopped the UNC governors from interfering in Nova's teaching activities. That means the case will have to go to trial.

Increase In Communist Troops In Third World

By JUAN J. WALTZ
WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of communist troops and military advisers in the Third World grew 60 percent last year to more than 51,000, primarily because of Cuba, the CIA said in a new report.

The intelligence agency said most of the increase was due to Cuba's military presence in Africa and the Middle East, which increased from 21,850 in 1977 to 38,650 in 1978.

In general, the CIA said in a report published last week, "The number of communist military related personnel in the less developed countries rose by 60 percent in 1978 to 51,400 (from 32,795 in 1977) largely because of a 16,000 increase of Cubans in sub-Saharan Africa."

The bulk of Cubans moved into Ethiopia before and during the spring 1978 Horn of Africa war against neighboring Somalia. The number of Cuban military men in Ethiopia increased from 100 in 1977 to 16,500 in 1978.

There also was a rise in the number of Cubans in Mozambique, from 100 in 1977 to 800 in 1978. In addition, the CIA said, there were 150 Cuban military advisers in Equatorial Guinea, 200 in Guinea, 140 in Guinea-Bissau, and 485 in other African nations.

The largest Cuban military contingent outside its borders is the 19,000 men in Angola.

Cuban military presence in the Middle East more than doubled from 500 in 1977 to 1,150 in 1978, with the sharpest rise in South Yemen — from 350 in 1977 to 1,000 last year.

The remainder of the Cuban military personnel in the Middle East, some 150, are in Iraq. The CIA report indicated they have been there since 1977.

Of the total 51,400 communist military personnel in Third World countries last year, 38,650 were Cubans, 12,070 Soviet or eastern European and 680 Chinese, the CIA said.

The countries they were in included Morocco, Mali, Guyana, Peru, North Yemen, Afghanistan, Bangladesh, India and Pakistan.

Scramble For Ford's Former Supporters

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential contenders are scrambling for the supporters freed by former President Gerald R. Ford's announcement that he's out of the race.

Ford announced in Washington on Friday that he has "made a firm decision not to become an active candidate for the nomination of my party."

He said he would reconsider only if the party felt it was essential for him to run or if unforeseen circumstances developed.

"I urge those who may have held back in order to ascertain my intentions to jump into the fray on behalf of the candidate of their choice," Ford said.

On the Democratic side, Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota came out in support of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the Democratic nomination next year, as did Maine Gov. Joseph E. Brennan.

Speaking to a high school audience in Kennedy's home state, McGovern said he has "urged Kennedy to run," and added that he will "be one of the first to endorse his candidacy." McGovern was the Democratic presidential nominee in 1972 and has been critical of President Carter in the past.

Candidates for the GOP nomination praised Ford's statement and some suggested it means new support for them.

One of the first reactions was from Ronald Reagan, who also was in Washington on Friday. "I think it's consistent with what he's been saying all along," the former California governor said. But Reagan said he didn't think Ford's decision necessarily would make things any easier for him. "There's still quite a battery of candidates," said Reagan.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., was more upbeat. "I'm elated," he said in Concord, N.H. "I'm delighted the president made that statement because it will have a big impact on the outcome of the election. I think that helps me because I think a lot of people who might otherwise have supported Howard Baker were holding back."

Former CIA Director and former U.N. Ambassador George Bush said in Wilmington, Del., that Ford's statement would clear the air and "I expect to pick up some support."

And former Texas Gov. John

Connally said in Atlanta he thinks the Ford statement "probably" improves his chances. "I think there are a number of people who have been holding back a bit, waiting for President Ford," said Connally. "I think most people felt that he wasn't going to run. We certainly proceeded on that assumption."

Plant Site Purchased

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — State officials have purchased a 4-acre site in Garner for a $1.4 million oil recycling plant.

The site cost $100,000. Oil Recycling Project Director Gilbert M. Holland said. The plant already has been built in Oklahoma and will be shipped to North Carolina.

At the plant, workers will recycle old crankcase oil from state vehicles and other sources in order to reduce the state's energy costs.

While the town's board of aldermen approved the site plan and Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. said he believe "a great, great major portion" of Garner residents support it, a group of black residents say they don't like the idea of the plant.

The group claims the plant would lower their property values and pollute the air — a claim plant officials deny.

MAILING COSTS

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — According to the Dartnell Institute of Business Administration, the cost of an average business letter has risen from $3.05 in 1970 to $5.59 in 1979.

Assistance To Quake Victims

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emergency federal assistance has been promised to victims of Monday's earthquake, which registered 6.5 on the Richter scale and caused more than $20 million in damage to the Imperial Valley.

After receiving a formal request from Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., President Carter signed a disaster declaration Friday that allowed the Federal Emergency Management Agency to designate Imperial County eligible for assistance.

"This aid includes temporary housing, disaster loans to homeowners and businesses, agricultural assistance, tax relief, grants to repair or replace vital public facilities and a wide variety of other programs," FEMA spokeswoman Linda del Castillo said Friday night in Washington, D.C.

Recommends No New Plants

NEW YORK (AP) — A presidential committee investigating the accident at Three Mile Island has voted to recommend that no new nuclear power plants be built until the committee's safety guidelines are adopted. The New York Times reported Saturday.

In a report from Washington, The Times said the President's Commission on the Accident at Three Mile Island voted tentatively early this week to recommend a moratorium to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission. The commission currently holds applications for 14 new reactors.

VN Center

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — The Charlotte-Mecklenburg school system will open a sixth bilingual education center early next month to serve the growing number of students who arrived recently from Indochina.

Most of the students are being transferred from another center and are Vietnamese refugees.

The new center, like the other five already operating, are designed to assist students whose native language is something other than English. Personnel at the center first try to learn what problems students may be having and then they work with the students until they become comfortable in classes learning lessons in their new tongue.

About 300 students, mostly in the elementary grades, are involved.

Will Give $196,000

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Textile Foundation will give a record $196,000 to North Carolina State University's textile school during the next academic year, the foundation said Saturday.

The money will be used for student scholarships, supplements to faculty salaries and other aid. It raises to more than $3 million the foundation has given the textile school since 1942.

West of the intersection of U.S. 13-U.S. 264, and including, "a single story brick dwelling house 200 to 300 feet from the south side of U.S. 264." Behind the house, he said, are several mobile homes, a horse stable and a storage building.

McLeod said several of the defendants were observed traveling to and from area motels, and to and from the "Ross property several times," before the arrests were made on July 23.

The officer also testified the surveillance team observed a rental truck parked at the London Inn on Saturday (July 21), saw one of the out-of-state defendants move the truck to "a different position," on the lot on Sunday, and observe the truck go to the Ross residence on Monday morning.

McLeod noted that when the truck went to the trailer near Ross' home Monday, he and another SBI agent, "took up a position in a wooded area 150 feet from the mobile home." After the truck backed up to the trailer about 9:45 a.m., the officer testified, he "observed four males and one female...loading burlap-wrapped bales into the trailer," from the truck.

McLeod concluded by saying that about 10:40, after seeing, "approximately 100 bales being unloaded," officers moved in to arrest the suspects.

James Wilson, another SBI special agent testified that he secured a search warrant for the Ross premises after receiving information from the surveillance team. He added that the premises were searched after the search warrant was served on Mrs. Ross, who was at her home. The search, he noted, began about 10:35 a.m.

Looking Ahead Is The Secret

East Carolina University's three new vice chancellors discussed plans for the future at an Area Chamber of Commerce Coffee Talk last week.

The three are Don Lemish, vice chancellor for institutional planning and advancement; Dr. Elmer Meyer, vice chancellor for student life and Dr. Robert Maier, vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Lemish stressed efforts to provide more private support for the institution. Endowments would be used to establish scholarships for outstanding students "to attract excellence."

The funds would also support faculty members, such as providing funds for attending scholarly meetings.

Lemish also saw an expanded alumni recognition program and further involvement of the alumni in campus activities.

Dr. Meyer said there would be better services to students ahead. "The future of student life at ECU has great potential," he said.

Dr. Maier described the objectives of the university as "the discovery... the transmission... the utilization of knowledge."

It is easy to look back on past accomplishments of East Carolina University, and to do so with justifiable pride. But for any institution which aspires to greatness, looking back is not the thing to be doing. Instead we must recognize that the base has been built for an outstanding university. ECU must look ahead to new challenges and new opportunities... even new controversy.

Very Aware A Political Year Is Ahead

There should be no question that the 1980 political campaign is already underway.

The North Tar River Fellowship Club met last week at the M.K. Blount Farms' River Road.

On hand were such political aspirants as Bob Scott (probable candidate for governor), Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and House speaker Carl Stewart (probable candidate for lieutenant governor).

Other state officials and legislators who will be seeking re-election were on hand.

The political talk was low key this early in the game, but everyone who attended was aware that an election year is ahead.

THIS AFTERNOON

Govm't Capitalist Idea

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — One technique long used by private business to spur employee interest in productivity, cost-savings and efficiency, is profit-sharing.

That means if the company makes more money, the owners share the increase with employees who helped make it possible.

Government, of course, can't make a profit; but it can cut costs and waste, operate more efficiently, and use more productive methods.

Why not, wondered State Senator Marshall Rauch of Gastonia several years ago, use a form of profit sharing to encourage state employees to do a better job. A successful businessman himself, Rauch has seen the fruits of such efforts.

He pushed through the General Assembly a pilot program of incentive pay as a reward for state employees who, through, innovative ideas, work habits, or otherwise, come up with savings as a result of cost-saving and time-saving suggestions.

Rauch proposed that the responsible employees get 25 percent of the savings.

The Central Equipment Depot in Wake County, and the Rowan County maintenance unit, both in the division of highways of the Department of Transportation, participated with a will.

The Central Depot produced savings of $117,289 without cutting the level of service, and the Rowan County facility cut costs nearly $60,000. More than 150 employees at the two units will get incentive pay rewards ranging from $250 to $285 each.

Dining Out

Four counties have now made it possible for older people to use their food stamps to eat in restaurants. The pilot program started October 1 and is designed to help elderly people, who because of health or inadequate cooking facilities have a hard time getting a hot, well-balanced meal.

Participating counties to date are Buncombe, Cumberland, Wake and New Hanover. Food stamps have previously been restricted to grocery purchases.

More Jobs

Adding manufacturing jobs is the backbone of North Carolina's economic growth effort. In August there were 3,500 new jobs in manufacturing employment across North Carolina, according to latest figures from the research office at the Employment Security Commission.

But also during August, government employment jumped by 3,600 jobs; up a full percent. Most of the increase is due to opening of state supported colleges for the fall semester.

Still, the figures show that over the past year government employment has fallen 1.3 percent at the federal level in North Carolina; has increased 2.4 percent in state government; and is up 1.9 percent for local governments.

BILL NOBLITT

Education usually leads in government job growth, and did at the local level where that category showed a 4.1 percent increase, bringing to more than 119,000 the number of locally employed people in education... out of a total of just under 223,000 total local employees. Education rose less rapidly at the state level.

The data shows 2.6 million Tar Heels working. Government employees total nearly 400,000, not including fulltime military. That means one of every six working in the state is on a government payroll.

"Look! I've found another way to get blood outa you... you poor ol' taxpaying turnip!"

Sunday Morning Notes Theory About Babies

At a recent Chamber Coffee talk, ECU's three new vice-chancellors presented their outlooks for the institution. The speakers were Dr. Elmer Meyer, vice-chancellor for student life; Dr. Robert Maier, vice-chancellor for academic affairs and Don Lemish, vice-chancellor for institutional planning and advancement. Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer introduced them.

"I think I should tell you we have all three of these people in our how-to-speak-North-Carolinian class," the chancellor said. Then with a twinkle in his eye, "I graduated last spring."

Dr. Meyer indicated he was working real hard (North Carolinaese?) on the new dialect.

He reported he got a call about the Coffee Talk and he was told "I could carry my wife to the meeting."

"I thought, 'What?,' he laughed.

Dr. Meyer reported, however, he had learned to say, "Yes sir."

Well, after all, East Carolina is in the education business.

The institution should be able to teach newcomers that "all" is something that you put in the crankcase of the auto engine. A "boot" is where you put the luggage and the spare tire.

All that, of course, is Chancellor Brewer explained that there is still a vice chancellor for academic affairs, currently occupied by Dr. Maier.

He assured the Chamber people that they need not worry, however. "We're only interested in the faculty."

Other Editors Say Gold In The Attic

(The Raleigh Times)
Now that some of the 60s' Barbie dolls have become collectors' items worth $20 to $150, everybody's attic has question marks and dollar signs hanging over it.

But how in the world does anyone know what to save? Brassy old Barbie, a ripoff at her original three bucks, certainly wouldn't have been our candidate for immortality among toys.

From Raleigh attics, though, an archeologist could put together a pretty accurate vignette of 1950-75 America.

Packed away with Barbie and Ken, not to mention Bob, Carol, Ted, Alice or whoever those other dolls were, are their foolish tiny clothes — always the epitome of whatever Seventh Avenue was trying to put-over on us at any given time, from Barb's white vinyl miniskirt with matching boots to Ken's astronaut suit.

But not all is vanity and passing fad in the attic. There are all those determinedly good-citizen little Playskool people with their stocky cylinder bodies, still grinning their painted cheery grins — along with their houses, delivery vans, fire trucks, school buses, stores, gas stations and an occasional whole village. Busy, Busy, Busy!

There are the Tonka-toy bulldozers and cranes and 18-wheeler trucks, and whole fleets of Matchbox cars, and farm sets complete with yards of plastic fence and herds of plastic cattle.

And the Teaching Toys — what will the attic archeologist or the future collector make of those expensive Creative Playthings sorting and nesting boxes, their smooth Scandinavian hardwood covered with dust? The talking toys whose ring, pulled, still starts a faint scratchy recording of numbers or animal noises? The moth-eaten Ernie and Bert and Big Bird hand puppets?

No one can tell which of these preserved fragments of civilization will be trash in 30 years or 300, which treasure. If you're gambling on tomorrow's collectible market, it's too risky. Better to dump them now.

But if you're gambling that one day you'll have grandchildren, and that's why you're saving the toys, we're with you all the way. The demographic odds may be against you, but if you win, you'll win big in their hearts.

The newly organized court observers group was meeting in the district court room of the Pitt Courthouse last week for a training session.

It was 10 o'clock before the meeting ended and members made their way downstairs only to find they were locked in.

There followed some wandering around the building until finally a door with a panic lock was located in the basement... then freedom.

"We were sequestered," one member laughed.

Quote

"A witty saying proves nothing." — Francois Voltaire.

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Edwin Paget, 78, a retired speech professor whose idea of a glorious summer vacation has been running up and down Pike's Peak 41 times, believes it is never too soon to improve body and mind.

His theories about oxygen stimulating human brain cells have never been scientifically verified. Nor has informal observation of college athletes provided much corroboration.

Nevertheless, a man has got to think about something during the long dashes to the summit, and this summer, in the course of making his 866th career ascent of the Colorado mountain, Paget got to thinking about the International Year of the Child.

In particular, he got to thinking about all those millions of infants lying there in their cribs, doing nothing much of anything except drooling on their bibs.

In his mind's eye, Paget could see their little brains deteriorating from inactivity. And that is when he hit upon the idea of promoting an exercise program for babies less than a year old.

"Soon after birth, the brain of the typical baby begins to decline in effectiveness," the peripatetic pedagogue tells interviewees, or anyone else who will listen.

"Vigorous exercise will correct this deficiency, and will usually increase the mental efficiency.

"If parents want full development of their children's brains, they should put them on some kind of exercise program."

Paget, who lives in Raleigh, N.C., when he isn't running up the Rockies, is now at home working out the details of the concept.

Reached there via telephone, he seemed a little vague as to how anyone who hadn't even learned to walk and talk, much less do push-ups, could be motivated for strenuous regimens. But he insisted there were "various things" parents could do to raise infant exertion levels.

"Cribs are much too small,"

INSIDE REPORT

Bayh's Slant On SALT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The Senate Intelligence Committee's supersecret report on SALT II verification problems, now under lock and key in a remote corner of Capitol Hill, contradicts the verbal summary delivered to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by intelligence committee Chairman Birch Bayh.

Sen. Bayh's two days of testimony behind closed doors, according to those present, was "highly selective." Ignoring the bad news and inflating the good, it differed in word and spirit from the 177-page report Bayh's committee prepared for the guidance of the foreign relations panel in considering the new arms limitation treaty (SALT II).

That report is stamped "secret codeword," a classification reserved for unusually sensitive intelligence matters. The few senators who have followed burdensome security regulations to read the report cannot take the Senate floor to dispute Bayh. With the Senate required to vote on matters removed from public discussion, the few senators who understand what is going on — including some supporters of the SALT process — are frustrated both by the system and what they consider Birch Bayh's manipulation of it.

Bayh's testimony did not make clear to listeners that the "secret codeword" report states unequivocally that the SALT II protocol (lasting to Dec. 31, 1981) cannot be verified. As for the treaty itself, the report downgrades Carter administration statements that monitoring Soviet weapons advances will be all that much easier with the treaty than without it.

"The Soviets could test a new ICBM system with a launch weight as much as 20 to 40 percent above the SS-39 with less than a 50 percent chance of detection," the report says. This would seem to threaten enforcement of the SALT II provision that the one "new" system permitted by the treaty cannot be larger than the Soviet SS-39.

Analyzing what Moscow could do secretly in an effort to "break out" of the treaty's limitations, the report states: "If a covert deployment were attempted, the Soviets could evade detection and identification of the activity for as long as three years during which some 200 missiles might become operational." So much for claimed monitoring advantages the U.S. would enjoy by ratifying the treaty; a block of 200 new missiles could change overnight the strategic balance of power.

The importance of Bayh's testimony lies in its impact on fellow senators. They tend to accept the chairman's statements at face value, without recognizing nuances, subtleties or fine print.

That tendency unites with problems of dealing with classified information to tie the hands and close the mouths of even the senators most skeptical about verification. The 177-page report is under 24-hour guard in an obscure chamber on the top floor of the Capitol. Admittance is restricted to the 100 senators themselves during normal working hours. No copies may be made; nor can notes on the report be taken out of the room.

Very few senators have read it, but an exception is Sen. John Glenn, a supporter of the SALT process but an informed skeptic on verification. He ripped Bayh's testimony apart in cross-examination during the foreign relations committee hearing. When we asked Glenn to confirm our int-source from which we came? Shall we carry the corruption of a misspent life, or shall we exhibit the growth which both denial and sorrow and seasons of joy have produced?

To grow spiritually means not to grow older but to grow younger. It means the revitalizing of all those inner graces which will gladden the heart of God when the course is run. This transformation will give us the only satisfaction which will persist throughout eternity.

Elisha Douglass

YOUNGER IN SPIRIT

It is a truism that every day we grow older. Yet if we were living in the most exalted sense of the term, we should grow younger every day. "I should be sorry," wrote the great German mystic, Eckhart, "if I am not younger tomorrow than I am today — that is, a step nearer the source from whence I came."

We came from God, and as the great circle of our existence progresses, we are every day being taken back to God again. And what shall we be like as we approach this avoid risk, he says, they are guaranteeing themselves a loss.

He explains his case: In these days of uncertainty, people look for security in relatively high-interest debt securities, such as short-term bonds and money market mutual funds.

Their avidness is understandable, Bernhard claims to have some understanding of practical economics, having established himself as a securities analyst and businessman during the Great Depression of the 1930s.

He has other credentials, too, including having founded the Value Line Investment Survey, the country's largest securities advisory firm, five mutual funds, and research and assets management operations.

earnings, their loss is even greater.

Some people rationalize the purchase by saying they have at least cut their losses while waiting for the stock market to become less risky. Bernhard doesn't buy it. "There's no way to avoid risk," he says.

By his careful calculations, the stock market could shift into a strong advance so quickly that it might be 40 percent higher before such people are ready to switch from debt securities.

Bernhard could be hurt somewhat by following his own advice, since his company operates a money market fund that could be seriously hurt. While that does concern him, it is not his primary concern.

"Yes, we have one, but I was reluctant to offer it," he said. "But if people want it you have to give it to them." He would much rather they be in stocks (the company offers a stock fund, too).

"Instead of a sure loss why not take a possible gain?" he argues. "Why stay with the surest loss in the securities market?" he asks, when the possibilities in stocks, in his view, are unique.

What's unique? By his estimates, a Dow Jones industrial average that doubles, and maybe goes much higher than that, in three to five years. That is what he foresees. He risks his 50-year reputation on it.

Gitmo Life Is Isolated

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba (AP) — The official military line is that life at "Gitmo," as the U.S. naval base on the tip of Cuba is called, is pretty much the same as life in any small town of 6,000 back in the states.

Although the 45-square-mile base is separated from Communist Cuba by only a high fence, guards and minefields, the military folk and civilians who live at Guantanamo Bay can listen to American music and news on the radio and watch American television programs on tapes flown in.

But the base, a strategic American outpost that is the only U.S. military base on Communist soil, is isolated geographically and politically. There are some things residents must learn to live with — such as the isolation and claustrophobic boundaries — and some things residents must learn to live without.

"Sometimes you just crave a Big Mac but all you can do is think about it," says Debbie Jensen, a 25-year-old Navy petty officer third class who has been at Guantanamo for two years.

The naval base has been like a scrubby cactus in Fidel Castro's backyard since Castro came to power. It is maintained under a 1934 treaty between the U.S. and Cuba, and although Castro would see the base shut down, the treaty can be dissolved only by mutual consent of both countries.

Guantanamo Bay has been in the headlines recently because President Carter, vowing to show American tenacity in the face of Russian troops on Cuba, ordered a widely publicized Marine landing exercise there last Wednesday.

There are about 2,300 military men and women at the base with the remainder of the population made up of their families, some American and Jamaican civilian workers and a few Cuban refugees.

Guantanamo Bay is no tropical paradise. Although trees and bushes were green last week because of recent rain, vegetation normally is varying shades of brown. The base is on lowlands, surrounded by Cuban-controlled mountains, and formation about the report, he declined but then put the problem in a nutshell:

"Nothing I have read or heard so far takes care of the verification problem, but I cannot even say why because of the high security classification that has been hung on this whole matter. What we have is euphoria based on official statements."

That euphoria might dissipate if every senator read the report, taking time out of tight schedules to cope with security limitations. They would learn that "the confidence with which we can detect tests of an ICBM with a mobile launcher (prohibited by the protocol) will be low at best."

Although cruise missiles with a ground-launched or sea-launched range of more than 600 kilometers are banned during the three-year protocol, the report warns that "monitoring small changes in air intake, horizontal and vertical stabilizers, antennae and warhead attachment points could be important SALT II monitoring tasks concerning cruise missile range... monitoring such changes would be extremely difficult."

The report says monitoring plusses from SALT II will be few and far between. As a strong treaty advocate, Bayh naturally dwelled on these. But he sped lightly over the damaging statement that the U.S. consistently has exaggerated its ability to "monitor Soviet production" of nuclear weapons.

Nobody can forecast the impact of SALT ratification even if every senator were fully aware of these facts. But to accept Bayh's clearly loaded testimony in favor of the treaty is tantamount to voting blind, a condition that some day could return to haunt the Senate.

warm Caribbean waters lap rugged, rock-strewn beaches.

Housing is always tight, and some barracks look like oversized tin cans.

Still, people frequently volunteer to spend a year or two at Guantanamo and many put in to extend their time.

"It's good duty because it rarely rains," said one sailor. "Everything you do, you do outdoors. You can go sailing or fishing, and when you get time off, you can go to Haiti or Jamaica to cut loose."

The military offers a gamut of recreational activities because residents spend all their time at the base except for a few days of leave a year.

There are outdoor movie theaters, with bleachers and chaire facing a miniature drive-in movie screen, and a popular social pastime is holding cookouts.

"There's very little crime here," said Lt. Dick Thompson, the base's 28-year-old public affairs officer.

"We had somebody try to steal a car a couple of months ago. Hell, how far can you go in Guantanamo Bay? The car was recovered," he said.

There are schools with civilian teachers for children of military families and much of the base social activity is geared toward families.

Gitmo duty used to be especially trying for single military men because of the lack of single women, but the first Navy enlisted woman was welcomed to Guantanamo Bay with open arms in 1973. There are now about 300 single women on the base.

One possible outgrowth of the isolation is that courtships frequently flower into marriages.

"My husband and I met each other down here and decided to stay," said Jensen, who is married to a civilian electrician.

The base is 500 miles from the Cuban capital of Havana. There is no obvious tension or paranoia among the residents, and the military men do not see themselves as cold warriors.

"If I had a family down here, I wouldn't be concerned about their safety," said Thompson.

"I'm convinced if we have a problem down here, we'll hear about it in plenty of time to do something about it. There are evacuation and reinforcement plans."

Marines man guard towers looking out of the base toward Cuba, and their Cuban counterparts observe the base from towers around the perimeter.

Guards on both sides of the fence frequently see each other, and sometimes waves and gestures are exchanged.

"We fight the same mosquitoes they fight and swat the same bugs," yaid Marine Pfc. David Overcash. "19."

too stationary," he said. "Babies are forced to spend most of their time in almost a comatose state. Everything is done to keep them as quiet as possible."

"The same is true of baby carriages. The way they are built it is nearly impossible for the occupants to move. At their most important age, babies are practically paralyzed."

Apart from more spacious accommodations, nothing is really firm, Paget admitted. One exercise device being considered is a "slightly charged electric blanket" that would stimulate kicking and arm-waving. However, he did not seem entirely sold on the idea.

Paget was asked if it might be feasible to attach elastic bands to a baby's arms so that when it sucked its thumb it also would be developing its biceps.

"That's certainly a possibility," he replied with notable lack of enthusiasm. "Once the public becomes aware of the need, all kinds of suggestions will start pouring in."

Well, then, might his proposal open the door to commercial exploitation, flooding the market with Adidas diapers, tiny warm-up suits, special kicking booties and the like?

Paget responded with what sounded like a snort of indignation.

A Conservative View

Hardheaded Guys Making Conservation Work

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

PORTLAND, ORE. — It sounds like one of those dizzy theories from the Blue Eagle School of Screwball Economics, but in the Pacific Power & Light Company some hardheaded guys are making it work: They are acquiring energy by not consuming it.

Let me run that by you again. The company is deeply committed to a program predicated upon not selling its own product. Every kilowatt hour saved, in its book, is a profit earned. Less is more. This is energy conservation put to practical work.

For the record, Pacific Power serves 600,000 customers in the great Northwest. At one time, 15 or 20 years ago, virtually all of its power was hydroelectric power, generated from the rivers that tumble out of the Cascade Mountains on their way to the sea. As the area has grown, steam plants have taken over 75 percent of the total load. For the foreseeable future new power needs must be met by new coal-burning plants — and new coal-burning plants cost a fortune.

The conventional approach to meeting power needs is to generate more power. The management of Pacific Power had a better idea: Reduce the need. A year ago the company won approval for an innovative Zero Interest Financing Program in Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho. District managers took aim on 104,000 homeowners with all-electric space heating. Typically, the individual homeowner was consuming 10,000 kilowatt hours a year to heat his house. Could that demand be reduced to 5,500 or 7,500 KWH?

In Oregon alone, company analysts found that 40,000 homes could benefit from floor insulation, 33,000 from ceiling insulation and 48,000 from the installation of storm windows and doors. Not all those prospects could be sold, of course, but if incentives could be devised to pull even 65 or 70 percent of them into the program, significant savings would result.

Pacific Power began to offer eligible homeowners a deal they could hardly refuse: loans with no interest and no repayment schedule. In the past year, 4,600 loans have been made, averaging $1,354. They become a lien on the property, to be repaid when the property is sold or inherited. As the program has gained momentum, completions have reached a level of 100 houses every week. Over the next five years the company realistically expects to see 60,000 homes insulated, weather-stripped or storm-windowed. At that point the company will not be generating and selling 300 million kilowatt hours a year that it otherwise might have sold.

And the company figures it will be much better off. By treating the loans as a resource, the loans become part of the company's rate base; the company is entitled to earn a reasonable return on the investment. It costs 14 mills to save a kilowatt hour by conservation; it costs 56 mills to generate a kilowatt hour in a new steam plant. The program isn't of sufficient magnitude to replace an actual plant, but it will postpone the time when new plants must be put on the line. Meanwhile, the participating consumers benefit and the company prospers.

Six other utilities in the Pacific Northwest are now offering similar programs. The Tennessee Valley Authority makes term loans for the same purposes. And while the specific approach won't work everywhere, it makes a certain crazy sense out here in the land of cheap power.

A few critics have voiced reservations. Non-participating customers are hard put to understand how the company's $1,300 loan to a neighbor could be part of a system-wide rate base. California and Wyoming commissions have refused to go along. Even though company engineers check completed jobs before payment is made to the insulation contractors, complaints have been heard of shoddy workmanship. On the whole, however, the program has gone modestly but well. For those who have been skeptical about "energy conservation," the Northwestern companies are providing a profitable answer: It works.

Little Harmonica Is The People's Instrument

By MARCIA ELLIOTT
The Fayetteville Observer

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln played it. Benjamin Franklin invented a version of it. Major league baseball players have passed the time with it. And when the astronauts landed on the moon, guess which musical instrument landed with them.

The harmonica.

The people's instrument is a little friend to many. It conjures images of a lone cowboy by the campfire at day's end playing "Home on the Range" or a soldier on some far-off field tuning up for "Red River Valley" or a prisoner in some cellblock churning out "On Top of Old Smokey."

The hip-pocket instrument is small enough to tote anywhere, easy enough to play and inexpensive enough for anybody to afford. Sometimes called the Depression instrument because one could be bought for 50 cents back then, the harmonica comes to us straight from vaudeville.

It never has been the legitimate child of the symphony orchestra. As a wind instrument it has been relegated to a back seat. In that back seat it has become the personal friend of the masses.

The harmonica made its big splash in vaudeville, according to Paul Baron and the Harmonica Rascals, perhaps the oldest harmonica group in the country. The group was formed by the late Borrah Minevitch during the Roaring '20s. Baron joined it in 1944. During the early 1900s, every town had a vaudeville theater and every theater had novelty acts, among them magicians, harmonica players, jugglers and tap dancers. Although vaudeville began its decline in 1927, vaudeville performers remained popular in nightclubs and radio and television variety shows. The instrument's heyday spanned the period from about the 1930s through the 1950s, according to Baron.

As the years passed and show biz became more sophisticated, singers and comedians took the lead. The harmonica hung in there, but it was no longer the star. Where once novelty groups were the rage, they had become warm-up acts for singers and comedians. In a few groups like Paul Baron's they are still the stars. For the oldtimers, their music opens the flood gates to memory lane, and for the young people, their music acquaints them with an era gone by.

Paul Baron and the Harmonica Rascals have played at the North Carolina State Fair, at high schools, lodges and civic clubs, at small towns and big towns throughout North Carolina. They have appeared on a number of talk shows and have toured with Bob Hope. During the Vietnam war, they performed for troops in Vietnam. They spend most of the year traveling throughout the country. Their homes are as scattered as their tour stops.

"Harmonicas are easy to play but difficult to play well," said Baron in an interview between acts at the North Carolina State Fair. The group combines fine harmonica playing with earthy comedy. Bob Stutz plays bass, Roy Rumpf plays the rhythm.

The bass harmonica provides the same range as a bass fiddle. The rhythm harmonica is the guitar, and the lead harmonica is the piano providing the melody.

The group's repertoire covers the gambit, with such selections as "Never On Sunday," "Beer Barrel Polka," an imitation of Scottish bagpipes and a difficult "Hora Staccato."

Harmonicas, said Baron, date back 3,000 or 4,000 years to the Chinese, who made a version of them from carved-out dehydrated pickles. Modern harmonicas, however, date back to the 1840s and 1850s when the Wheatstone Harmonica Co. of London produced them. The Germans began making them and started mass production of them. Today, the Hohner Co. has almost a monopoly on fine instruments.

Millions of harmonicas are sold, ranging in price from $4 to $400 and more. Few people make a career of them. Such experts as Larry Adler have played the harmonica with concerts and orchestras. Rock groups use them. Paul Baron and the Harmonica Rascals give the country a taste of the harmony. These are exceptions.

Many of them are sold to ordinary individuals, those who may carry them in a hip pocket or purse. They might pull them out during solitary times and relax with them. The tunes they send drifting may be doleful or cheery depending on the mood. Harmonicas are the personal friends of the people.

—Meg contemplates the dreary sky for a moment, then slammed her fist on the car and wailed, "God shouldn't have made the world like this!"

"But I didn't know it would rain."

"I hate rain. I wish big fish would jump up out of the ocean and eat all the clouds and we'd never, ever have rain again."

"Then the flowers would all die."

"No, they wouldn't," she said. "I'd water them from the sink."

"You wouldn't be able to for long. The sun would eventually dry up all the water, and we wouldn't even have any to drink."

Meg contemplated the dreary sky for a moment, then slammed her fist on the car and wailed, "God shouldn't have made the world like this!"

Two Face Charges In Hillside Strangler Murders

PLEADS GUILTY... Kenneth Bianchi sits in a courtroom in Bellingham, Washington, Friday where he pleaded guilty to murder charges in connection with the deaths of two Washington coeds. According to Prosecuting Attorney Dave McEachran, Bianchi will come to Los Angeles to plead guilty to five counts in connection with the "Hillside Strangler" case. (AP Laserphoto)

A Long Time Yet

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the North Carolina Association of Educators say they think it will be a long time before public employees win the right to collective bargaining. "Even with a great effort, the odds on a bill being passed in the next few years are still very low," Brack Townsend, a district director for the association, said Friday at a day-long NCAE conference at Enloe High School.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A 28-year-old security guard, who beat the gallows and gas chamber by confessing to a series of murders and implicating his cousin, faces arraignment Monday as the man who preyed on Los Angeles women as the Hillside Strangler.

Moments after Kenneth Bianchi tearfully admitted murdering two girls in Bellingham, Wash., he confessed to five of the 13 Los Angeles-area killings and agreed to testify against his cousin, Angelo Buono Jr., 44.

Within a half hour, Buono, 44, was arrested in Glendale, Calif., without resistance and charged in 10 of the 13 killings which occurred during late 1977 and early 1978.

Bianchi pleaded guilty in the Bellingham cases in exchange for a promise that Washington authorities would not seek the death penalty against him. He was sentenced to two consecutive life terms for those killings.

Los Angeles County District Attorney John Van de Kamp said California would not seek the death penalty if Bianchi appeared as a truthful witness for the state in Buono's trial.

Bianchi could have been sentenced to hang in Washington or to the gas chamber in California.

Van de Kamp said both men would be arraigned in Los Angeles Municipal Court Monday on a variety of felony counts in connection with the 10 strangling murders.

Bianchi, trembling and weeping, wore a bullet proof vest under a three-piece grey suit when he appeared before Judge Jack Kurtz Friday and changed his plea to guilty from one of innocent by reason of insanity.

"I can't find the words to express the sorrow for what I have done," he told the judge. "In no way can I take away the pain I have given to others and in no way can I expect forgiveness from mothers."

Buono had maintained he had no part in the killings and even has sued the Los Angeles Police Department for naming him as a suspect, but Bianchi claimed he was equally, if not more, involved in the Strangler slayings.

A complaint by the county district attorney's office detailed how Bianchi and Buono allegedly picked up the girls, took them to Buono's apartment in Glendale, strangled them and tossed their naked bodies onto the slopes of the Hollywood Hills.

Although Bianchi confessed to only five of those murders but men were named in the complaint in connection with 10 murders.

Police Chief Daryl Gates said he now considered the Strangler case closed.

Gates said an investigation would continue in the deaths of three other victims originally linked to the Strangler slayings and indicated he did not expect Bianchi or Buono to ever be charged in those killings.

The first victim named in the complaint against the two suspects, Yolanda Washington, 20, was last seen alive on a Hollywood street corner Oct. 17, 1977. Her body was found the next day near Griffith Park.

The last victim in the string of slayings was Cindy Lee Hudspeth, 20, who vanished

Feb. 16, 1978. Her body was found the next day in the trunk of her car at the bottom of a mountain ravine.

Bianchi moved to Bellingham later in 1978 and killed Western Washington University students Karen Mandic, 22, of Bellevue, Wash., and her roommate, Diane Wilder, 27, of Bremerton, Wash.

A total of 25 California counts were listed in the complaint against the two men, including rape, kidnapping, conspiracy to commit murder, sodomy, pimping and pandering, and extortion.

Washington authorities said that Bianchi fraudulently assumed the identity of an alter ego named Steve Walker while under hypnosis and Walker admitted five of the Strangler killings. It was also while under hypnosis that Bianchi first implicated his cousin.

But mental health experts said Bianchi was faking and the alter ego was bogus. They and two defense experts agreed that he was mentally competent to stand trial.

Funeral Held For Chad Green

By LESLIE LAROCHE
Associated Press Writer

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP) — Chad Green's parents, who fled the country to seek treatment for their leukemia-stricken son, buried the boy Saturday in the town where he was born just three years ago.

His mother, Diana Green, 26, left the gravesite clutching a fuzzy white teddy bear. She was joined by her husband, Gerald, 29, and a small group of family, friends and reporters.

The Rev. Nathan Wood, a Baptist minister from Scituate, Mass., where the Greens had lived for 18 months, officiated at the burial. He said, "Chad was not a symbol, Chad was not a cause, he was a unique creation of God."

Services were conducted under a sunny autumn sky. A brisk fall breeze rustled through the trees, pouring leaves over the site where the small white casket was lowered into its grave.

A small stone bearing Chad's name, an engraving of Christ holding a lamb and the words "From beginning to beginning" beneath the dates of his birth and death, will mark the tiny grave.

It was the close of another chapter in the saga that thrust the 3-year-old boy to national attention after his parents took him to Mexico so that his cancer could be treated with Laetrile. The parents say their legal battles over the treatment involved not just Laetrile but the principle of freedom of choice.

News Briefs

Problems With Hiring Freeze

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt may find his attempt to put a freeze on job hiring blunted by the hiring of essential personnel and of persons who had jobs promised to them before Hunt announced the freeze.

State budget officials said Friday that fulfilling promises of jobs made before Hunt ordered the freeze means that nearly a third of the 4,000 positions left vacant will be filled.

About 1,000 additional openings will be filled because they cover service jobs such as hospital workers and Highway Patrolmen, which Hunt has classified as essential.

Hunt said he was surprised at the number of jobs to be filled. The governor said he had remained quiet about the job freeze as long as possible to avoid a last-minute stampede of hiring.

Urges Bond Denial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Government prosecutors have urged the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals to deny bail for Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald, saying they believe he would flee rather than risk going to jail for the rest of his life on his triple murder conviction.

U.S. Justice Department lawyer Brian M. Murtagh urged the court to deny bond for MacDonald in briefs filed this week with the federal appeals court in Richmond, Va. He argued that chances are good MacDonald would flee the country if granted bond.

Expected To Lose Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Two vice presidents are expected to lose their jobs in a major shakeup of the state's Department of Community Colleges, a Raleigh newspaper reported in Saturday's editions.

J. Reid Parrott Jr., vice president for educational development, and Hugh E. Battle Jr., vice president for institutional services, are expected to lose their jobs in the shakeup, according to the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Program On Tuesday

The Alcohol and Drug Abuse Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce will sponsor an Employee Improvement Program Tuesday, Oct. 30, at the Greenville Country Club.

According to Dr. Bill Smith, of the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services who serves as task force chairman, a survey was recently conducted to identify employee problems and their relationship to job performance among Chamber of Commerce members' businesses.

Due to the impact of the information received from the results of the survey, the task force is offering employers a means to deal with problems that can affect an employee's job performance.

Speakers for the seminar include Lynne S. Siddall, occupational consultant of the Pitt County Mental Health Center; Edward LeCarpentier Jr., of the Center for Growth and Development and Instructional Design; and Dan Kelly, director of training of the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The seminar will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will include lunch and coffee breaks. Registration for the seminar is $10 for chamber members, their families and employees, and $20 for non-members. The deadline for registration is Oct. 26.

For more information, call the GACOC office, 752-4101.

Big Parade For Festival

The chant of left, right, left, right can be heard resounding over many practice fields right now as more than 14 bands, clowns, marching groups and other exhibitors practice for the first Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Parade which will be held in downtown Greenville Saturday, Nov. 17, 10:30 a.m.

According to Burke Barbee, chairman of the parade, the festival parade is expected to be the largest Greenville has ever had.

Barbee said that more than 120 units are expected to participate to celebrate the tobacco industry during the Tobacco Festival Week.

Parade participants include nine Hanna Barbera characters from Kings Dominion, including "Scooby Doo." Twelve marching bands, marching units, clowns, the Tobacco Festival queen and her court, tobacco industry representatives, agricultural equipment, Silly Sally (the official tobacco festival clown), horses and a historical display of farm equipment will join regular parade entries of floats and dignitaries.

Anyone interested in participating in the parade or wanting more information, may contact Barbee at 757-7111, or the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival office, 752-4101.

Cherokee Indians Demonstrate At Ancient Capital Of Chota

VONORE, Tenn. (UPI) — The ancient Cherokee capital of Chota, long abandoned but not forgotten by the Indians, was alive with bluegrass music, campfires, and tents Saturday as more than 500 demonstrators gathered to protest the Tellico Dam.

The former Cherokee village bustled with activity. Vans, buses, trucks and cars parked next to the sparkling Little Tennessee River in a revival-styled meeting protesting the controversial TVA project.

The Cherokees, who have filed suit to block completion of the project, came by bus in what was billed as possibly the last chance for them to view "their sacred homeland."

"This is where our people were created. This is where it all started for us," Cherokee Gilliam Jackson said under a steaming autumn sun. "This is a sacred area."

Speeches explaining the law suit and complaining about the dam spiced activities held in a large river bottom area.

The activities were part of a three-day campout in protest of the dam, recently given the go-ahead after being halted for two years by legal maneuvering over the tiny snail darter.

The festivities started Friday afternoon in a lush valley decorated with fall colors.

The Tellico Dam, when gates are closed, will flood the campsite and thousands of Cherokee graves. The Indians say the area is a religious center and the TVA's action infringes on their constitutional rights.

"This day gives a lot of people the opportunity to be a part of the fight against Tellico. Everyone can't argue the case in court and this is one way they can do something," Robert Stivers, an attorney for the Cherokees' said.

TVA has already spent $119 million on the project and indicated the flood gates can be closed within weeks. The government agency said the Tellico will bring jobs to the area and give a boost to the economy.

"Economically, this project is a turkey and TVA knows it," Zyg Plater, chief counsel in the snail darter case, said while fly fishing for trout in clear river waters.

A giant circus-type bigtop housed various Tellico trinkets booths dispensing snail darter shirts and bumper stickers that read "Don't bury my heart at the Little T."

Fiddlers, banjo players and singers donned yellow shirts which read "Dam TVA save the Little T."

The crowd lounged under small tents, played Frisbee and paddled canoes during the day. A large trailer was setup for the music and a host of television crews recorded the activities.

One couple, Randy and Susan Sappington, used the camp meeting for their honeymoon. The Knoxville couple, married on Friday, decided to "do something we'll remember."

"We've got to support the Indians. There are enough dams. We don't need to ruin the beautiful valley," Sappington said.

Some daring campers also plunged into the cool waters for swims and, in many cases, the numerous dogs at the campsite followed.

One woman paraded her goat around the site with a sign reading, "This dam gets my goat."

Says Seminar Was Success

Over 200 Greenville area women attended the "Look and Feel of Success" seminar Oct. 16, sponsored by the Business Seminar Task Force of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

According to Charles Whitener, chairman of the seminar task force, the program was a success.

Rita Parks, an instructor of fashion merchandising and marketing, was the guest speaker. Ms. Parks discussed how women can look, sound, move and feel better.

Attended A Piano Seminar

W. Frank Wintsch Jr. of Rt. 2, Snow Hill recently attended a four-day advanced piano technology course in Conway, Ark.

Wintsch, who serves as an independent piano technician consulting with Cha-Rich Music, Greenville, was among 21 experienced piano technicians selected from around the country for advanced instruction under the direction of Willard Sims, piano services manager of the Baldwin Piano and Organ Company.

Wintsch is the regular technical consultant to Cha-Rich Music Company, Greenville, Baldwin piano dealer. He is a registered craftsman in the piano technician's association, affiliated with the New Pamlico Chapter.

Activities At Aycock

Recent activities at Aycock Junior High School include a visit by young Mormon Elders Price and Johnson to discuss with students the Mormon's role in the settlement of the West.

On Tuesday, two retired teachers, Mrs. Vivian D. Selby and Mrs. Flora P. Joyner, will be in the library to display handicrafts.

Other future events scheduled include a visit by Bob Karl's art class students to the Piedmont Crafts Fair to be held in Winston-Salem in early November, and observation of National Book Week, November 11-17.

NAACP Seeks Local Support

A current campaign to get support is being undertaken by the Pitt County local branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Churches, civic and social organizations and labor groups are being invited to consider joining the chapter. Interested persons or representatives of agencies are asked to contact Claudette Wilkins at 758-0058.

Outstanding

Miss Sylvia H. Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moore, Rt. 8, Greenville, has been named as one of the outstanding young women of America for 1979.

Miss Moore is a graduate of Peters Business College and American University, Washington, D. C. She presently serves as assistance director of Housing and Community Development, Washington, D. C.

Search On For Con-Man Who Tied Up Colorado Property

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
DENVER (AP) — Police are searching for a man who has tied up the property of Coloradans ranging from a bank secretary to Denver's mayor, police chief and district attorney by filing liens against the property demanding at least $154.5 billion.

Some of the liens were filed against banks who say Winchell owes them money. The liens protest income taxes and water laws and accuse one of four banks named of violating Winchell's constitutional rights.

Winchell is described by former associates as "a land owner and general entrepreneur." A bench warrant has been issued for his arrest by Denver County Judge George Maneribino. Denver and Breckenridge police and sheriff's deputies in Summit and Eagle counties have also taken up the search.

"It's certainly a new twist," said one lien target, who asked not to be identified. "You don't often hear of somebody who owes money filing liens. It's usually the other way around."

Winchell has left behind nearly 100 liens which claim damages ranging from $2 million to $950 million and put scores of pieces of personal and corporate real estate in legal limbo. A lien is a legal document claiming some interest in a piece of property, usually a debt. It may be filed without showing cause and, even if it is without basis in fact, it stops any sale, transfer or re-mortgage of the property until it is lifted.

Although liens only cost $2 a page to file, fighting them can run into hundreds of dollars in attorneys' fees and title company fees.

Other liens name bank directors and officers. Some of the targets of the liens said Friday they are angered by the ease with which the title to their property was clouded and the trouble facing them before they can clear those titles.

"I don't have any personal money," said Cathy Donohue of the City Council, whose house was targeted. "Legal fees ... for me, that's a big worry."

Bank of Breckenridge president Dale Boyd said Friday the lien he received accuses his bank of being "petty-fogging shysters ... operating outside the law and violating man's god-given rights," and of "outrageous conduct, misfeasance, malfeasance and nonfeasance."

Tenants Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fledgling tenants rights movement is pushing for national recognition of the plight of renters who are being forced out of their apartments by condominium conversions.

A rally to protest the conversions was being held here today by tenants associations in the District of Columbia and the suburbs of Maryland and Virginia.

"This is going to be the birth of the national tenants rights movement," said Jeanne-Marie Weber of Chevy Chase, Md., who is coordinating the rally.

"We are screaming and shouting for the right to rent where we choose," she said. Ms. Weber's apartment building is going condo with two-bedroom units selling for up to $100,000.

Complaining renters are beginning to attract political attention with some cities already acting to slow the conversions of rental units.

The District of Columbia has had a moratorium on conversions for five months, although on Friday a judge ruled the legislation used to create it was illegal.

In Los Angeles, conversions are barred whenever the vacancy rate of apartments drops below 5 percent.

"Many local governments have become concerned with the loss of rental stock and have imposed restrictions," said a new report by the National Association of Home Builders.

Conversions mean apartments are changed from being units for which tenants pay monthly rent to units bought by buyers who make monthly mortgage and maintenance payments.

Renters argue that the conversions particularly hurt the young and the old, who are often unable to afford a substantial down payment and unable to carry a high-interest mortgage.

Rental housing accounted for 45 percent of all U.S. housing in 1950 but dropped to 37 percent in 1970, said the home builders' report. It predicted rental housing would fall as low as 30 percent by 1990.

Experts say the trend toward conversions stems from the inability of rent increases to keep pace with the costs of operating rental units and the demand for homeownership as a tax benefit and a hedge against inflation.

Honors Sunday School Teachers

Governor James B. Hunt has proclaimed the week of Nov. 18-24 as "Honor Sunday School Teachers Week" in North Carolina.

The Governor's proclamation marks the 12th straight year that the special week has been observed in the state. North Carolina was the first state to begin the observance to honor its teachers in church schools and Sunday Schools.

In College

BUENA VISTA, VA. — Julia Joyner, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max R. Joyner of Greenville, is among approximately 230 students attending the 113th session of Southern Seminary Junior College.

Miss Joyner, a senior, began classes Sept. 11.

Will Attend Briefing

W. M. Scales III of Greenville will be among a group to be briefed on the SALT II treaty at the White House Wednesday.

The briefing, in the East Room of the White House, will be conducted by Pres. Carter and Zbigniew Brzezinski, assistant to the president for National Security Affairs.

Mandarin Court Theme Of The Fine Arts Ball

"In the Court of the Mandarin" was the theme of the eighth annual Fine Arts Ball held Saturday evening at the Greenville Country Club. An oriental atmosphere greeted the 320 guests as they entered a driveway lighted by black torches and Chinese silk lanterns. Stepping into the foyer banked with potted greenery resembled entering a Mandarin courtyard. The walls reflected hand painted Chinese characters and countryside scenes. A Chinese gateway marked the entrance into the main ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Howard, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Rob, and Mrs. Edith Walker greeted guests. Mrs. Howard served as the overall ball chairman. Mrs. Walker is the director of the Greenville Art Center.

The oriental theme continued in the main ballroom as a four-foot Chinese Mandarin painted on a large wooden panel hung beside some of the artworks to be auctioned later in the evening. An antique rosewood altar and black lacquered Chinese screen, featuring embroidered panels, also displayed artwork from contributing artists.

Buffet tables were decorated with large black bowls, featuring Bonsai tree arrangements with red flowers and wading birds. Black bowls with low branches and white silk flowers accented the dining tables.

The bandstand, a replica of a Chinese pagoda, was flanked by Chinese silk lanterns. White columns supported the pagoda roof. Art patrons danced to the music of The Keith Bridges Band.

An auction of numerous pieces of art was a highlight of the ball. Contributing artists and their works are as follows: Mrs. Rachel Sturz, black and white prints of Bath; Robert Pittman, watercolors entitled "Regatta," "Bath Point One" and "Bath Point Two;" David Grafton, a pastel, "Island Beach;" Joseph Dudasik, watercolor, "3 Barnscape;" Dr. Walter Poirer, a two-piece contemporary acrylic; William Johnson, a sculpture, "The Honourable Junk;" Ms. Maggie Noss, a ceramic pottery bowl; Wes Crawley, an untitled sketch; Johathan Quinn, a graphite drawing, untitled. Mrs. Rob, Mrs. William Reading and Mrs. Caroline Rob Zalewsky contributed works from their private collections.

Assisting Mrs. Howard were the following committee chairpersons: Mrs. Jasper Lewis, treasurer; Mrs. Dick McKee, invitations; Mrs. Randy Williams and Mrs. Richard Taft, reservations; Mrs. Ed Clement, table reservations; Mrs. Charles Vincent, menu; Mrs. Jim Moye, publicity; Mrs. Leon Moore, special activities; Mrs. Charles Rob and Mrs. Al Ferguson, art acquisitions; Mrs. Ben Shapley, programs; Mrs. William Blount, decorations, assisted by Mrs. Jo Betts Barringer, Miss Ione Maxwell, Mrs. Dan Morgan, Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst, Mrs. Donald Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Glenn and Mrs. William Johnson.

Proceeds from the ball benefit the Greenville Art Center. Current officers are Mrs. William Monroe, president; Mrs. Jack Koontz, first vice president; Mrs. Rufus Knott, recording secretary; Mrs. Phillip Burks, corresponding secretary; Frank Wooten, treasurer; immediate past president, Mrs. Cliff Everett Jr.

Pre-Eminent In Wyeth Art

GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI) — In only seven months, philanthropists Arthur and Holy Magill have turned the Greenville County Museum of Art into the pre-eminent repository for the works of famed American artist Andrew Wyeth. Having shocked the art world with a $4.5 million purchase of movie magnate Joseph E. Levine's collection of 26 Wyeth paintings last spring, the Magills pulled another cultural coup last week by buying 260 works from the painter's personal collection. The retired textile executive is not saying what he paid for the latest acquisition, but estimates by art experts range from $3 million to $5 million. "The value is certainly of equal magnitude" to the previous purchase, Frank Fowler of Lookout Mountain, Tenn., Wyeth's southern dealer, said Saturday.

"To me, it's the most definitive collection of his major works," he said. "From an educational point of view, it has everything."

"Here are the guts, sinew and bone of 30 years of a man's career in Maine." The collection includes about 190 drawings, 67 watercolors, some pre-studies and about a dozen dry brush works on paper.

One feature of the collection is all of the preliminary work done by Wyeth for his most famous painting, "Christina's World," including drawings and dry brushes.

"That in itself is something you could not place a value on," Fowler said.

Individually, Wyeth's drawings have sold for $5,000 to $15,000; watercolors, $25,000 to $45,000; and the dry brushes, $75,000 to $125,000.

EPA Suspending Products Containing DBCP

NEARING DEATH — Condemned killer Jesse Bishop takes a pensive puff from his cigar during an interview in the Nevada State Prison only a few feet from the gas chamber where he is scheduled to be executed early Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARY BETH FRANKLIN WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency announced Saturday it is temporarily suspending the use of all products containing the pesticide DBCP, a popular fruit tree spray blamed for sterilizing male workers in California.

The 115-page decision by Administrative Law Judge Gerald Harwood is subject to the approval of EPA Administrator Douglas Costle. Costle will decide by Oct. 29 whether to accept or reject the recommendation in part or in full.

DBCPC or dibromochloropropane can cause sterility in male workers handling the chemical and is a potential cause of cancer, according to the judge's decision.

DCPB is used mainly on citrus crops and other tree fruits. The chemical formerly was used on about 20 different vegetables, but that use was suspended more than a year ago when high DCPB residue levels were found in the surrounding soil and water, according to Edwin Johnson, EPA deputy assistant administrator for pesticides.

Residue of the chemical also has been found in fruit from trees treated with DBCP, "but the levels are not high enough for people to worry about," Johnson said.

Interested parties have until Oct. 29 to file comments on the administrative law judge's recommendation.

Currently, there are no known substitutes for DBCP use on fruit trees, Johnson said. However, orchards and citrus groves only spray every few years, usually in the spring, so the suspension may not affect growers immediately.

If Costle accepts the suspension, then the long-term cancellation process, which would remove DBCP from production permanently, begins. "The suspension process is an immediate remedy, like a temporary restraining order," Johnson said.

California Rural Legal Assistance, one of nine parties involved in the suspension case, has been trying to get DBCP banned for years.

"In August 1977, a number of workers manufacturing DBCP at Occidental Chemical Co. in Lathrop, Calif., were found to have been sterilized," said Ralph Lightstone, attorney for Rural Legal Assistance. "The chemical was immediately banned in California, and we began petitioning the EPA," he said.

The chemical has also been found to cause severe reproductive damage in laboratory animals at the University of California in San Francisco, Lightstone said. "DBCPC has turned up in drinking water, it's turned up in fruit residues, and it has turned up persistently in the soil for at least up to two years after its use," he said.

"We're very pleased with the decision," Lightstone said. But it's "later than it ought to have been. People are going to be exposed to DBCP in food and the future. We don't know how long it's going to be around," he said.

Change Views On Cuba

NEW YORK (AP) — Discovery of a Soviet combat brigade in Cuba has caused many Americans to change their view that the United States should establish diplomatic relations with the Cuban government, a new poll shows.

The prevailing view now is against establishing such relations.

However, the same Associated Press-NBC News poll that disclosed the shift on relations with Cuba indicates the furor over the Soviet brigade has served only to increase interest in the new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now before the U.S. Senate.

But the split of opinion on the merits of the treaty remains stable.

White Commander Sentenced

BULAWAYO, Zimbabwe Rhodesia (AP) — A white army commander has been sentenced to 14 years imprisonment for his role in a New Year's Eve orgy of rape and bloodshed at a black tribal village in Zimbabwe Rhodesia, a Bulawayo newspaper reported Saturday.

The Chronicle said David Price, 24, was sentenced Thursday after a court convicted him of 19 charges of rape, one of public violence and one of cattle rustling.

Price pleaded guilty to the charge of public violence, but denied the other allegations, the Chronicle said.

According to the paper, Price commanded a unit of 11 black troopers during the incident at a government-protected village in southern Zimbabwe Rhodesia. It said the 11 black soldiers drew prison terms of up to 10½ years at trials earlier this year.

Opposes Proposal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Hundreds of opticians turned out Friday to protest the state Sunset Commission's proposal to drop state regulations on the sale of eyeglasses — a move the commission says would save consumers millions of dollars a year.

Connally's Viewpoint

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John Connally's recent Middle East peace proposal called down upon him the wrath of America's Jewish community and could prove the factor that will make or abort his presidential campaign.

But it was no mistake or slip of the tongue of the kind that got Ronald Reagan off to a rocky start in 1976, bedeviled George McGovern in 1972 or doomed Barry Goldwater in 1964.

Connally, former governor of Texas and treasury secretary under Richard Nixon, planned carefully to separate himself from the pack of 10 other GOP contenders, and all the Democrats.

Slenczynska Concert Thursday

FORMER CHILD PRODIGY... Ruth Slenczynska, noted for her interpretations of 19th century Romantic music, will be in concert at Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. Wednesday, October 25. Her appearance is sponsored by the Friends of the ECU Library, and tickets at priced at $3, available at Joyner Library offices or the ECU Music Library.

Ruth Slenczynska, former child prodigy who has matured into a noted pianist, will perform in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday, October 25 in Wright Auditorium.

Her performance is sponsored by Friends of the ECU Library, and tickets for the concert, priced at $3 each, are available from members of the Friends or at the offices of Joyner Library and the ECU Music Library at the A. J. Fletcher building.

Born in California in 1925, her father, Josef Slenczynski, a former violinist who suffered an arm wound in World War I that put an end to his performance career, was her first teacher, who began letting her play a toy piano at the age of two.

By the time she was four, Ruth Slenczynska was playing Bach inventions and practicing eight hours a day — by the time she was 12, she had performed before thousands in Europe and the U.S.

Unlike many child prodigies, Ms. Slenczynska has fulfilled her early promise and continues to win worldwide acclaim for her performances in concert and on recordings.

Some of her interpretations of 19th century Romantic music have been released on more than 100 Decca and Musical Heritage Society recordings.

The story of her early years as a child genius relentlessly and rigorously trained by a demanding father has been recounted in her book, "Forbidden Childhood."

Among numerous honors accorded Ms. Slenczynska have been the Polish Cross of Merit, a fellowship in the International Academy of Arts and Letters at Geneva, and two awards from the National Music Teachers Association.

For her ECU concert, compositions she will play include Liszt's "Etude after Paganini, No. 1 in G Minor," Beethoven's "Sonata in F Major," Rachmaninoff's "Etude-Tableau in D Major" and several of the composer's preludes; and four Chopin Ballades.

Stout To Preform On Monday

MARIMBA PLAYER... Gordon Stout will be a guest recitalist in at 8:15 p.m. Monday, Oct. 22 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. He will be accompanied by ECU faculty pianist Donna Coleman. The recital is without charge and the public is invited.

Marimba player Gordon Stout will appear in a guest recital at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus at 8:15 p.m. Monday, October 22.

There is no admission, and the public is invited to attend on a first-come, first-seated basis. Stout will be accompanied on two works by Donna Coleman, pianist and a member of the ECU keyboard faculty.

Currently a resident of Ann Arbor, Michigan, Stout offers private instruction and performs in recitals, concerts and clinics throughout the nation.

A composer as well as performer, Stout's best-known works include "Elegy and Reverie for marimba," "Etudes for Marimba, Book I and II," "Two Mexican Dances for Marimba," and "Ode for Marimba."

Stout is a founding member of the Eastman Marimba Band, with which he has recorded. He has also performed extensively with the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra, the Eastman Wind Ensemble, and Music Mova groups.

His recital here is being sponsored jointly by the Festival and Special Concerts Committee of the School of Music and J. C. Deagan, Inc.

Hospitality House Today

Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing today on WITN-TV, 12 noon to 12:30 p.m., will feature Dr. Harry Stine of North Shores Hospital, Manhasset, N. Y., with a demonstration and interview concerning the CAT scanner.

American scientist Allan McLeod Cormack and British researcher Godfrey Newbold Hounsfield were awarded a Nobel Prize last week for their work with the CAT scanner. According to the "N. Y. Times," the CAT scanner "is probably the most important advance in medical diagnosis after the original discovery of x-ray." The interview with Dr. Stine was filmed in Atlanta, Ga., with the demonstration of the CAT scanner filmed in New York.

'Colored Girls' Opening Set

"For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide/When the Rainbow is Enuff," Ntozake Shange's long-running hit play, will open at the East Carolina Playhouse on Wednesday, October 31.

The play will run through November 3, and again from November 5 through 7, and will be on stage in the Studio Theater at ECU. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $2.50, and reservations may be made by calling 757-6390 between 10 and 4 daily Monday through Friday.

Edgar R. Loessin, Chairman of ECU's Drama Department, directs "Colored Girls..." which is a collection of narrative pieces, some in prose, some in free verse, expressing the inner feeling of today's black woman.

Guest choreographer is Alfred Gallman, who has recently returned from working with the national touring company of the Broadway musical, "The Wiz."

Cast for "Colored Girls..." includes Mrs. Charla L. Davis of the ECU Psychology faculty as the Lady in Brown; Gloria Brewington of Greenville as the Lady in Blue; Deborah Arlena Hall, of the Pitt County School system, as the Lady in Red; Penelope Alford, a junior from Fayetteville as the Lady in Yellow;

Cary junior Debra Zumbach as the Lady in Purple; Crystal Barnes, a senior from Washington, D. C., as the Lady in Orange; and Renee DuLaney, a senior from Montgomery, West Virginia, as the Lady in Green.

Members of the musical ensemble are Vernon Jones, Pamela Henry, Melinda Richardson, Earlie M. Washington, Tony Becton, and Tony Joyner.

Michael L. Banks is production stage manager, and Tim White is assistant stage manager.

Auditions Scheduled

Auditions for Lillian Hellman's award-winning drama, "The Children's Hour," will be held on two dates, Monday and Tuesday, October 22 and 23.

Auditions will be conducted in Room 214 of ECU's Drama Building. The schedule is from 3 to 5 and 7 to 10 p.m. on Monday, and from 7 to 10 p.m. on Tuesday.

"The Children's Hour" contains roles for 14 women and two men. Auditions are open to persons at the university and in the Greenville community at large. The play is scheduled to open November 28 and run through December 8 in the Studio Theater at ECU.

The play will be directed by Travis Lockhart of the ECU Drama faculty. His credits include work with several professional theaters, including Tyrone Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis, as well as at major universities.

Joins Staff

CHAPEL HILL — Lynne Weatherman has joined the staff of the Carolina Regional Theater as the audience development director.

General Manager John Blizzard says Ms. Weatherman will be in charge of promotion, subscription sales, group and package sales, and public relations for the theater.

A 1977 graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill, Ms. Weatherman has served in administrative positions with "Unto These Hills" in Cherokee and with a firm in Greensboro. She is a native of Fayetteville.

Two Events Set For The Coliseum

GREENSBORO — Two entertainments are scheduled for the Greensboro Coliseum during the coming week. Ticket information and reservations on both are available by calling 294-2140.

At 8:15 p.m. Monday, October 22, the Tom Mallow-James Janet production of "Eubie" will be presented at the Coliseum.

"Eubie" is based on the music of 96-year old composer Eubie Blake, who has achieved a success in his lifetime equaled by few black Americans, equal to the best white composers of the American musical stage.

Blake's songs include "I'm Just Wild About Harry," "Memories Of You," and "In Honeysuckle Time," all favorites of 50 years and more ago.

Tickets for the performance are priced at $10 and $9.

At 8 p.m. on Saturday, October 27, the music group "Kansas" will be in concert. Their special guest will be "Sniff 'n' The Tears." Among their hits are "Dust in the Wind" and "People of the South Wind."

Tickets for this concert are priced at $8 and $7.

To Mark Anniversary

RALEIGH — The La Verne Players, Inc., a performing arts company of Raleigh, will be celebrating its fourth anniversary with a dinner-performance from 7 to 10 p.m. on Sunday, October 28.

The event will take place at Gillie's Restaurant, 126 E. Cabarrus Street in Raleigh. Attractions will include Ronald Dixon, a mime artist; the St. Augustine Jazz Band; and two special guests, Elmer Gibson, jazz pianist and Abdel Salaam, assistant artistic director of the Chuck Davis Dance Company of New York.

Also, in an open house being held at the Players performing site, 222 Smithfield Street, a collection of African art work from Nigeria will be on view.

For information and reservations, interested persons are to call 821-3953.

Musical Groups To Be On PBS

CHAPEL HILL — Two musical groups — The Modern Jazz Quartet in contemporary jazz, and the Juilliard String Quartet in classical music — will perform together in a rare musical event on Thursday, October 25.

The broadcast will be at 9:30 p.m. Thursday on Channel 25, Greenville, and is a Camera Three presentation.

Claude Frank To Play Beethoven Works

Noted pianist Claude Frank will perform works by Beethoven in a concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday, October 30, in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center. Tickets for the performance, which is part of the ECU Artist Series, are priced at $5 each, available from the campus Central Ticket Office, or at the door prior to performance.

Since his debut with Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic, Frank has played extensively with orchestras such as the Berlin Philharmonic, the New York Philharmonic, Chicago Symphony, the Boston Symphony, and the Royal Philharmonic of London. Appearances with chamber groups have included ones with the Guarneri Quartet, the Juilliard Quartet and many others.

A milestone in Frank's career was the RCA release of his performance of the 32 Beethoven sonatas. "Time Magazine" called it one of the year's "ten best" recordings, and both "High Fidelity" and "Stereo Review" highly recommend it.

A Sao Paul, Brazil music reviewer, following a performance during Frank's fifth tour of Latin America, called him "one of the greatest Beethoven players of international calibre."

Ticket information and reservations can be made by calling 757-6611.

Ailey Dancers To Dance On Tuesday

RALEIGH — A dance performance by members of the Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble will be presented at 8 p.m. Tuesday, October 23 in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium.

Part of the Dance Series of Stewart Theater, N. C. State University, the young dancers, under the aegis of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, will later join the parent company.

In addition to the evening performance, the Repertory Ensemble will give a mini-concert at noon Monday, October 22, on the Fayetteville Street Mall in downtown Raleigh. This event is free to the public.

Other appearances by the ensemble include master classes on stage at St. Augustine's College Fine Arts Building, and a Monday evening master class on the Stewart Theater stage. Each of these events is free and open to the public. For ticket information on the Tuesday evening dance performance, call 737-3105.

Jewelry Fair

BALTIMORE, MD. — A four day special exhibition of jewelry encompassing three days of sales, is being held at the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore Wednesday through Saturday, October 24-27.

The benefit event is being sponsored by The Women's Committee of the Gallery.

A preview is being held from 5:30-8:30 p.m. Wednesday, with sale times from noon to 8 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday.

DEFECTORS DANCE — Leonid and Valentina Koglov are shown in their first performance since defecting from the Bolshoi Ballet last month while the company was in Los Angeles.

The couple was greeted with bravos and lively applause during a recent appearance with the Ballet Galaxie '79. (AP Laserphoto)

Camera Rule Of 'Thirds'

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

With today's automated cameras anyone can take a picture. Here are a few tricks to help you make better pictures.

One of my favorites, especially when shooting scenic, is the rule of thirds.

Basically it's nothing more than dividing your picture up into thirds, both vertically and horizontally, as in the illustration.

Now, imagine that you're shooting a wheat field with a combine working way back on the horizon.

Depending upon what you want to emphasize, place the horizon line on either the upper or lower horizontal thirds line. If you have a fluffy sky, emphasize the sky by placing the horizon on the lower third line so that the sky takes up two thirds of the picture. If it's the wheat field you want to emphasize, place the horizon on the upper third line so that the field takes up two thirds of the lower part of the picture.

Now, move the camera right or left so that the combine in the background sits at one of the four intersections of the thirds-lines. Just make sure that it is moving towards the center of the picture and not out of it.

You can use this same technique placing a barn, house or tree, rather than a combine, at one of those intersections. The point is, don't divide your picture in half either vertically or horizontally — use two thirds for one part and one third for the other.

Here's another trick that will help you improve your pictures. Frame your subject whenever you can. Use an arched doorway, tree branches or whatever. Imagine, for example, that you're shooting a picture of your home. Rather than just a shot of the house by itself, try to get a trunk of a tree to one side and a branch spreading out against the sky over the top of the house.

Certain shapes and forms have a psychological effect on us and these shapes can make up the composition of your pictures. An S, for example, has a peaceful effect. Imagine here a lazy river flowing off in an S curve towards the horizon.

A triangle gives the impression of strength.

N.C. Dancers On Tour

WINSTON-SALEM — Members of the North Carolina Dance Theater are now well into their 1979-80 tour season, in travels that include performances and residencies in several states.

In this tenth anniversary season, the N.C. Dance Theater anticipates traveling over 17,000 miles, and is starting the season without a deficit.

Earlier this month, the dancers had a two-day residency at Western Carolina University, a three-day residency at Daytona Beach (Florida) Community College, and performed in Charlotte on October 16.

From October 24-26 they will be in residency at William Woods College, Fulton, Missouri and a performance; will perform at Sioux Falls, South Dakota October 30, and be in residency at South Dakota State University, Brookings where they also perform.

Sculpture Show Opens At NCMA Today

SECCA Exhibitions

DREAM . . . a 1977 sculpture in bronze by young Spanish sculptor Xavier Medina-Campeny, is a large work in which an arm carrying a pillow rises from the surface of the work. An exhibition of Medina-Campeny's work opens today at the N. C. Museum of Art, Raleigh. The artist will be on hand to meet the public. There is no admission charged. (Photo courtesy N. C. Museum of Art)

N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — An exhibition of work by Spanish sculptor Xavier Medina-Campeny opens today in the Mary Duke Biddle Gallery of the N. C. Museum of Art. The sculpture seems alive. Under gallery lights the bronze, shaped to resemble human or animal flesh, is warm. The huge head of a horse shows panic as it drowns in the piece "Crossing the Red Sea."

It is the touch of sculpture as much as its visual aspect that is important in the Biddle Gallery, one of the nation's first art galleries for the blind. And this special exhibition of work by the young Spanish sculptor is particularly appropriate here, for its line and surfaces, its surprises, are as easily appreciated through the sense of touch as that of sight.

Medina-Campeny regards blind people as important members of his audience. In a recent interview he said: "I receive so much pleasure from seeing the reaction of people confronted by my work, especially the blind, for they find so much in it themselves. They project images into space — my work is about the projection of images into space."

Altogether, there are 20 pieces of sculpture and four etchings in the show. The artist will be present for the opening in the Biddle Gallery at 4 p.m. The show will be on view through November 25. The Mary Duke Biddle Gallery is on the third floor of the museum, which is located at 107 E. Morgan Street in Raleigh. Hours are 10-5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 2-6 on Sundays. Admission is free.

Greenville Artists Represented In The Springs Mills Show

In addition to the top $2,000 prize won by East Carolina University art professor Paul Hartley in the 21st Springs Mills Art Show, Lancaster, S. C., several other Greenville ECU and Greenville artists had work chosen to be in the annual show.

Those whose work was chosen, and the category of the work, are:

- Easel paintings — "Autumn Forest Tree House," Bill Byers; "Surface 54389," Clarence Morgan; "Mixed Fruit," Tran Gordley; "Day Window," Ella Mallenbaum; "Untitled," Robert T. Dick; "At the Beach," Marilyn Gordley; "Spring Glacier," Anthony T. Eder; "Partial Eclipse," Elizabeth Sanford; "Self-Portrait W/Hankey," George Danhires; and "Mark," Phil Phillips.
- Mixed Media — "Venetian

Blind," Betsy Kurzinger; "Linear III," Sara Edmiston; "Untitled," Jill Powell; and "Shrine To the Veils of Louis," James Rouse.

— Sculpture — "Hang-Over," Jack Gresko; "Untitled No. 9 Upright Motive," Arthur Shirer; "Untitled," Charles Britt; and "Head Study," Robert Edmiston.

— Paintings and drawings on paper — "Seated Nude," Robert E. Daniel; "Sighting," Elizabeth Ross; "Tahitian Carrots," Joan Mansfield; and "Melody in Blues," Arlene Morgan.

Danhires' work, "Self-Portrait W/Hankey" is one of the 40 pieces from among the show chosen to be included in a traveling exhibit which will be shown at locations in several states during a six-month period.

WINSTON-SALEM — The Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) will open its Annual Craft Show, in conjunction with several other new exhibitions on Sunday, October 27. The craft show will be on view through November 25.

Now in its 12th year, this major regional exhibition will include examples of crafts being produced in the southeast. On display will be the work of 37 craftsmen from ten of the southeastern states plus Iowa and Arkansas. Each craftsman will be represented by up to four pieces executed in clay, fiber, handmade papers, glass, metal or wood.

Mackey Bane, SECCA Curator, in describing the show, says, "This exhibition is organized with the intent of showing the work of southeastern craftspeople who are professionally committed to the production of quality work with emphasis on innovation and refinement."

One of five artists chosen to exhibit metalwork in the show is jeweler John Satterfield, a faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

— Also opening on October 27 is an exhibition of four pattern pieces, paintings and watercolors, by Jane Couch of New York City. Ms. Couch is artist-in-residence for the Wake Forest, SECCA, N. C. School of the Arts program funded by the Rockefeller Foundation. Her exhibition, accompanied by a catalog, will be on view through November 25.

— Another SECCA exhibition (open until November 18) is the "Realist Annual: Landscape," an exhibition of two works each from 12 southeastern artists who depict landscape in a traditional mode of expression.

— Also on view at this time is a solo exhibition of sculpture by Wayne Hall of Chapel Hill, in the Open Air Gallery, and a solo exhibition of drawings by Paul Harcharik of Charlotte, showing in Gallery B.

SECCA is located at 750 Marguerite Drive and is open to the public, free of charge. Hours are 10-5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and 2-5 on Sundays. SECCA will be closed Thursday, November 22, for the Thanksgiving holiday.

Sculpture Competition

WILMINGTON — A sculpture competition open to all artists currently residing in North Carolina has been announced by St. John's Art Gallery. "The Landing Sculpture Competition" carries an award of $5,000 to be given to the winner upon completion of the sculpture. Entry deadline is November 20.

Artists may submit more than one entry, and existing pieces of sculpture are eligible for consideration. Each entry is to be a two-dimensional black and white representation of the artist's concept, no larger than 24 by 30 inches. Representation may be in the form of a photograph.

Jurors for the competition will be Jen Wilson, Curator at the N.C. Museum of Art; Jay de Chesere, AIA, architect for The Landing, and Alan Aiches, director of St. John's Gallery.

Full details may be obtained from Aiches at: St. John's Art Gallery, 114 Orange Street, Wilmington, N. C., 28401 or by phone, 763-0281.

The competition is being held to choose a piece of sculpture to be placed in The Landing, a new office retail center located at Wrightsville Beach, near Wilmington.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe Stines

Louise Fitzhugh is best known for her novels — HARRIET THE SPY and THE LONG SECRET, which have been acclaimed as milestones in the world of children's literature. Known for their wry details and lively drawings, the two books have become international bestsellers. Now comes SPORT (Delacorte Press, 1979) which completes the trilogy. It's the story of Harriet's best friend, Sport, whom young readers will remember as the kid who lived with his father, ran the house, and managed the money.

In the first book of the trilogy the reader meets Harriet M. Welsch, aged eleven, an exceptional child, although the bracing comments of her friend Simon Rocque (Sport) would keep her from realizing this if she were not already busy straining to become exceptional. Sport, who only wants to be a ball-player, and who is fully occupied in tending an absent-minded writer father, alternately admires and scorns Harriet's flights of fancy.

Over and through the pages of HARRIET THE SPY and THE LONG SECRET, Sport's character develops, not so much with age as with spunk. Suddenly, at the age of eleven, Sport inherits over twenty million dollars. But he and his father don't even have a chance to pay their bills before Sport's mother reappears in their lives, determined to get her hands on the money. She'll stop at nothing — even kidnapping!

In a head-spinning chain of events, Sport is held prisoner at the Plaza Hotel, abducted on the street by a moving limousine, and almost arrested in a brush with the law.

How his friends come to the rescue and how Sport's mother gets her just deserts make a wild farce that will hold readers breathless.

With just the right comic touch Louise Fitzhugh makes her villainous characters larger than life. And every reader will cheer the triumph of loyalty and friendship over blind greed in this exciting return engagement of Harriet, Sport, and all their friends — SPORT!

Beverly Cleary has a new book — RAMONA AND HER MOTHER (Morrow Books, 1979). Thus far in her series, Ms. Cleary has given books to each member of the Quimby household except Mrs. Quimby. Now she gets her turn at last in a story that hits the high and low points of a working mother's life as seen from Ramona's seven-and-a-half-year-old viewpoint.

Ramona Geraldine Quimby lives in an American town with her parents and her sister Beezus (Beatrice) who is five years older. Young readers who have followed Ramona since preschool will remember her as a professional pest and loud-mouth extraordinaire (Beezus and Ramona 1955), maturing but yet pesty kindergarten (Ramona the Pest, 1968); trying hard during first grade to mend her brattish ways but still haughty enough for readers to be speculating in her second grade shenanigans (Ramona the Brave, 1975) and bravely assisting her family in coping with her father's unemployment during second grade (Ramona and Her Father, 1978).

Now at seven-and-a-half, Ramona feels unloved and takes to twitching her nose as a nervous release. She's wrong, of course, and readers will rejoice with her when she discovers the wonderful truth. Few writers are as skilled as Ms. Cleary at showing families in the round with compassion and humor, and here she is at the peak of her powers. RAMONA AND HER MOTHER presents a memorable cast of characters who have the ability to touch hearts as well as funny bones.

Details On Print Show

CHARLOTTE — Details on the forthcoming Third Annual Print Exhibition have been announced.

The exhibition is open to all artists east of the Mississippi. Works should be ones completed within the past two years and entries are limited to woodcuts, wood engravings, etchings, lithographs, serigraphs, linocuts, and collographs in black and white or color (no photos or offset reproductions). Size is not to exceed 36 inches in any dimension of the print and artists are limited to three prints suitably matted or mounted.

Entry fees are $7 for hand delivered and $10 for shipped-in entries.

Purchase awards of more than $2,500 will be made available by North Carolina National Bank, Knight Publishing Company, Engraph Inc., Rexham Inc., The Charlotte Printmakers Society, and Copland House Galleries of Davidson.

The exhibition is sponsored in part by the N. C. Arts Council and the National Endowment of the Arts.

For entry forms and more detailed information contact: Charlotte Printmakers Society, c/o Paul J. Harcharik, 110 East 7th Street, Charlotte, N. C. 28202. Deadline for entries and fees is no later than November 1. Prints may be delivered by November 8 to Spirit Square, Charlotte.

An Evening Of Radiant Entertainment

"The Streets of New York," the musical now playing at the Studio Theater nightly on the East Carolina University campus, is a brimming cup of entertainment.

If this opener for the Playhouse season is a barometer of what is to come, this will be a memorable season in local theater.

Barry Graef's books and lyrics, with Richard B. Chodosh's music, is a loving and lovable adaptation of an old favorite, Dion Boucicault's classic play of the same name.

The adapters have retained the atmosphere of melodrama, while adding the zing of superb music and nice touches of satire and even gentle bits of caricature of the play itself, with the end result being a rousing, all too-short two hours plus of pleasure.

"The Streets of New York" provides another fine showcase for talented performers now in ECU's Drama Department, and this musical the whole cast is, in one word, radiant. Alan Oatley is impressive as Gideon Bloodgood, the man whose eyes and heart light up whenever the opportunity to rob others arise. As Alida Bloodgood, Shauna Holmes is splendidly saucy as the spoiled brat who enjoys being rich while pouting about not being accepted into top-drawer society.

Lucy Fairweather, the "good" girl whose life and fortunes are thwarted by the Bloodgoods, is totally winsome as portrayed by Cynthia Frances Sanford — and she has a voice of spun gold.

Loren Watkins in the role of Mark Livingstone, the bewildered young man longed for by both the "rich" and the "poor" girl, brings into play an amazing facial dexterity that clinches his constant state of indecision.

Denny Wright, who has been so good in several past roles, adds his elfish luster to his interpretation of Badger, the office accountant who returns after a 20-year absence hoping to milk Bloodgood of a goodly sum through blackmail — and instead winds up as the instrument of salvation of all the good people who have been wronged.

All of the cast — Butch White as the down and out Mr. Puffy; Sally Nell Clodfelter as Mrs. Puffy; and all the others, many of them playing several different roles, are in top form every minute.

The play, the performances, the sometimes liting, sometimes sad songs all add up to a production that will long be remembered for its endearing charms.

Del Lewis directs, the scenery is designed by Gregory Buch, with lighting by David F. Downing. Peggy Anton is responsible for the marvelous period costumes, and Julia Moore did the vocal coaching.

"The Streets of New York" remains on stage at the Studio Theater for five more performances — at 8:15 p.m. Monday through Saturday this coming week. Tickets are priced at $3.50 and can be had by calling 757-3690 between 10 and 4 daily, or purchased at the box office in Room 108 of the Drama Building.

It's very likely word of mouth will result in sell-outs, so it might be wise to make early plans to take in this exciting evening of entertainment.

--Stamp News--

By SYD KRONISH

Aviation pioneer Wiley Post, who was killed in a 1935 plane crash with humorist Will Rogers, is honored with a pair of 25-cent international airmail stamps scheduled for issuance Nov. 20. First-day site will be Oklahoma City, Okla.

Post received worldwide acclaim for making record flights, for scientific research and for his design of a pressure suit with helmet for high-altitude flights.

The double stamps are vertical. Both designs feature likenesses of Post and views of his famous plane, the "Winnie May." The lower stamp shows Post wearing the altitude suit and holding the helmet he had designed. In three lines of blue type at the top of each stamp is "Wiley Post Aviation Pioneer." Across the bottom in one line is "US Airmail 25 cents."

The new stamps are the third issue in a Pioneer Aviation Series of international airmail stamps which began with the Wright Brothers set of 1978 and continued with the Octave Chanute pair this year.

Wiley Post was born Nov. 22, 1898, in Grand Saline, Texas, but moved to Maysville, Okla., in 1907 and considered that as his hometown. He lost the sight of his left eye as a young man working in the oil fields of Oklahoma, but was determined to fly and strengthened his right eye to meet the flying requirements.

He achieved national prominence by winning the Los Angeles to Chicago Air Derby in 1930, flying the "Winnie May." The following year he flew around the world with Harold Gatty. In 1934 he successfully penetrated the stratosphere, wearing a pressure suit he had designed which has been called "the world's first practical pressurized suit — an important step on the road to outer space."

On Aug. 6, 1935, Post and his friend, Will Rogers, flew from Seattle to Fairbanks, Alaska. From Fairbanks they headed for Point Barrow and were only 15 miles from their destination when the accident occurred which killed both on Aug. 15. Collectors may order their first-day covers by following the usual two procedures.

You may purchase the stamps from your local post office and affix them to your own envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed and peelable, return-address labels are recommended. No remittance is required. Forward your envelope to: "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73125." It must be postmarked no later than Dec. 5.

Should you prefer the USPS to affix the stamps, follow the same method but enclose a remittance in the form of a money order of 25 cents per stamp. Address the outer envelope to: "Wiley Post Stamps, Postmaster, Oklahoma City, Okla., 73215" prior to Dec. 5.

Last week we mentioned the U.S. pair of Christmas stamps soon to be released. On this Yule note, the International Stamp Collectors Society has prepared a special Christmas-souvenir card. Appearing on the card will be the two new 1979 Christmas issues, the first of this country's Christmas stamps (1962), the 1969 Currier and Ives stamps plus six foreign Christmas adhesives. Each of the new USPS 15-cent Christmas stamps will carry a first day of issue cancellation, dated Oct. 18. The cards measure 6 by 9 inches. They are available at $4.95 each from: "Christmas, International Stamp Collectors Society, 6253 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Writers To Meet

The second meeting for October of the Greenville Writers Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, October 23 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Oral Parks, 1609 Oaklawn Drive.

Anyone interested in any form of creative writing is invited to attend. There is no fee involved in attending.

You Can Have A Party, If...

DOWNEY, Idaho (AP) — Marsh Valley Junior High principal Ron Jolley has a system that gives students an alternative to vandalism — a party.

Jolley says that when vandalism at the school began to get out of hand he told students at the start of the next school year he was putting $300 into a fund.

Vandalism to school property was to be repaired from the fund, and any money left at the end of the school year would be used for a party.

Last spring, students had nearly $150 for their party.

Home Savings Introduces Home Action Mortgage. The alternative to the high cost of home ownership.

If you don't know about Home Savings & Loan's new Home Action mortgage, you could be looking at the wrong house. That's why you need to read this ad before you purchase a home. Because, if you qualify for Home Action, you just might be able to afford the house you want now — instead of years from now.

Home Action can move you into your dream house.

Home Action is a graduated payment mortgage plan. Here's how it works.

For the first five years, Home Action cuts your monthly principal and interest payments so you can afford to buy a better home.

Let's say you're trying to buy a $45,000 home with a 10% downpayment and a 30-year mortgage. Normally, to do this, you would have to make $22,500 annually.

Thanks to Home Action, your payments, for the first five years, would be reduced. So, you can qualify for the same home and make $19,200 a year.

With a traditional 90% loan, the mortgage would be $385.69. But, with the Home Action loan, the monthly payment would be only $319.84.

Year	Traditional Loan	vs	Home Action
1	$385.69		$319.84
2	385.69		339.01
3	385.69		358.18
4	385.69		377.35
5	385.69		396.52
6-30	385.69		415.69

Payments based on a 90% loan on a $45,000 house.
* Assuming typical taxes, insurance, other new housing expenses, and a five-year supplementary period. Interest figured at 11% with 11.605 A.P.R.

That's a big difference. A difference of $65.85 a month during the first year. And, a difference like that can help you and your family move into the home you want today.

What makes Home Action work?

A savings account makes Home Action work. With Home Action, you take the money that you would normally use for a downpayment and put it in a savings account at Home Savings.

Then, each month for 5 years, we withdraw some of this money to supplement your monthly payments. For example, on a $45,000 home, the full mortgage payment would be $415.69. But, with Home Action, you'd pay only $319.84 a month. And we'd make up the difference from your savings.

After 5 years, when your downpayment savings account is used up, your monthly payments which have gradually increased, would remain at $415.69 for the rest of the mortgage.

During these first five years of mortgage, your income will have grown, you'll be able to afford the payments, and you'll be in the home you wanted all along.

Get In on the Home Action at Home Savings.

We've only told you the basics about our new Home Action mortgage plan. So, you're bound to have lots of questions.

Give us a call and ask about our new, affordable mortgage plan. Or, come by any of our offices and talk to a loan officer yourself. Ask for your free Home Action mortgage brochure.

After all, why wait on that dream house you and your family want. You can move in now with Home Action.

Home Action. Another good idea from the people who make you feel at Home. Home Savings.

Paschal, Kupec Lead Heels Past NCS

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
RALEIGH — The UNC Tar Heels discovered another tailback in their arsenal Saturday.

The Tar Heels, with Amos Lawrence on the bench most of the game with a groin injury, raced to a 28-7 halftime lead behind the running of newly found tailback Doug Paschal and the passing of quarterback Matt Kupec and then held on in the second half to defeat the N.C. State Wolfpack, 35-21.

Paschal, voted the Chevrolet Most Valuable Player Award along with State's Scott Smith, rambled for 117 yards from tailback in 32 carries and scored three times while Kupec completed seven of 11 passes and two touchdowns to lead the Tar Heels to their fifth win in six starts. The decision to start Paschal came on Thursday, according to Coach Dick Crum. "Amos was still ouchy at practice Thursday. He worked out, but was still having trouble running."

"I wanted the rest of our offense to know who the tailback was going to be. So I told the team yesterday that Doug would start the game," Crum said.

After building a 21-point cushion in the first half, on touchdown runs of two and one yards by Paschal and TD passes of 43 and seven yards from Kupec to Wayne Tucker, the Tar Heels saw their lead melt to only seven quickly in the third period.

After an exchange of punts early in the third quarter, State drove 89 yards in nine plays to score on a four-yard run by halfback Dwight Sullivan to narrow the margin to 28-14.

Less than three minutes later, State scored again, this time on a 43-yard pass from Smith to wide receiver Mike Quick, and suddenly the Tar Heel's 21-point lead was down to seven, 28-21.

"At halftime, we told the kids about State's ability to come back," Crum said. "I think when you get a lead like that you have a tendency to get conservative. And we didn't have real good field position there in the second half."

"But if you continue to play steady ball, you're bound to get a break somewhere. And we did with that fumble there near the end."

With State on its own 12, Smith was hit by Lawrence Taylor just as he appeared to set up to throw. The officials, however, ruled it was a fumble and UNC's Jeff Pierce recovered.

Five plays later, the Tar Heels scored, on a one-yard plunge by Paschal, to seal the victory. The loss drops State to 5-2 overall and 3-1 in the ACC, while the Tar Heels even their conference record at 1-1.

Against a backdrop of a brilliant Carolina blue sky, the Tar Heels came out storming in the opening half.

After stopping N.C. State on its first series, the Tar Heels drove 65 yards on 10 plays, scoring on a two-yard run by Paschal.

State tied the score on the first play of the second quarter on an 11-yard pass from Smith to tight end Lin Dawson. With Kupec completing two crucial third down passes of 13 and 37 yards, the Tar Heels marched 80 yards to retake the ad at 14-7. Paschal ran over from the one for the TD.

Carolina halted a Wolfpack drive on the UNC 28 moments later when Smith failed to get a first down on fourth and one.

Less than two minutes later, UNC scored again, on a 43-yard

Venuto, McDougald Star As Deacons Dump Maryland, 25-17

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest quarterback Jay Venuto passed for two touchdowns, and running back James McDougald added a third, as Wake Forest downed Maryland, 25-17, in an Atlantic Coast Conference football game Saturday.

Down 25-9 late in the fourth quarter, Maryland scored on a 52-yard pass play from quarterback Mike Tice to wingback Mike Lewis, and a two-point conversion added Maryland's final points with 4:17 left to play.

All of Maryland's other points were scored by kicker Dale Castro, and his third field goal of the day put the score at 11-9 late in the third quarter.

But McDougald blasted up the middle for a 5-yard scoring run a few plays later and Venuto found Bill Ruffner in the end zone in the final period to give Wake Forest the edge.

The win boosted the Deacons to a 6-1 record overall and 3-1 in the ACC. Maryland dropped to 3-4 overall and 1-2 in the ACC.

Castro hit field goals of 42, 46 and 22 yards for Maryland, and his first score gave Maryland a 3-0 lead in the opening quarter. Wake Forest's Phil Denfield tied in minutes later with a 40-yard field goal and Maryland never led again.

Maryland was hurt by penalties, including a pass-interference call which set up the Venuto-to-Ruffner touchdown pass in the fourth quarter.

With Wake Forest leading 18-9 and the Deacons on the Maryland 35, Venuto threw to Wayne Bumgardner on second down and the officials ruled that a defender interfered six yards out from the goal.

Wake Forest scored its final touchdown two plays later.

Wake Forest's fans flaunted their post-season bowl hopes by symbolically tossing oranges and tangerines onto the field during the game.

Wake Forest's passing game — crucial to the Deacons so far this season — was off early in the game.

Venuto was forced to keep the ball twice and missed his receiver twice on his first four passing attempts. Maryland, meanwhile, scored on its first possession with a 42-yard field goal by Castro with 6:47 left to play in the first quarter.

Later in the first period, Wake Forest running back James McDougald bulldozed up the middle for a gain of 18. Venuto made his first completion of the day on a 20-yard connection to Wayne Baumgardner and he followed with a 13-yard pass to Mike Mullen.

Wake Forest had the ball on a second-down play 17 yards from the goal but McDougald fumbled and the Deacons lost six yards.

Denfield took over and hit a 40-yard attempt with 38 seconds left in the first quarter to tie the score at 3-3.

Venuto's passes set up Wake Forest's touchdown late in the first half. The Deacons moved from their own 40 to the Maryland 12 in seven plays, including yardage gained on a penalty against Maryland for roughing the passer.

Venuto tried unsuccessfully twice to hit Kenny Duckett in the end zone but his third attempt, this time to Bumgardner, was on the mark for a touchdown with 1:13 left in the first half.

A two-point conversion gave the Deacons a lead of 11-3 but Maryland, using strategic timeouts and a crucial one-yard run by Wayne Wingfield, set up a 46-yard fieldgoal by Castro with seconds left in the half to put the score at 11-6.

Vols Force Alabama To Rally To Victory

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Major Ogilvie raced for two third-period touchdowns as top-ranked Alabama, stymied early by four lost fumbles, overcame a 17-0 deficit and defeated No. 18 Tennessee 27-17 Saturday in a Southeastern Conference football game.

It was the 15th consecutive victory for the defending national champions, but it did not come easy.

Tennessee struck for two touchdowns and a field goal on three straight possessions to shock the Crimson Tide with an early 17-0 lead.

The total came against the nation's No. 1 defense against scoring, one that had allowed only nine points through five games.

Ogilvie's first touchdown, a one-yard plunge with 9:40 left in the third quarter, came after Ricky Tucker intercepted a Jimmy Streater pass at the Tennessee 30. Ogilvie had raced 16 yards on the play before his touchdown that cut Tennessee's lead to 17-14.

Kevin Meisel: A Study In Courage

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It was the sunset of the 1978-79 school year. On a day filled with activities for sophomore swimmer Kevin Meisel of East Carolina University, there had been only good things.

But it was also the sunset of Meisel's competitive swimming career. As he and some of his fellow teammates headed back to the dorms following their annual team softball game, tragedy awaited him.

It was an accident that nearly cost him an arm—and still may have long-reaching consequences.

Now, instead of having to battle against other swimmers, the Winter Park, Fla. youth faces the toughest contest of his life.

He is, he admits, lucky to be alive after the accident that nearly claimed his right arm. And it may be at least another year before it is certain that reimplantation operations will be successful. He has already been told that one of the fingers of his right hand may have to be removed.

Leaving the intramural fields where the team had played its softball game, Meisel and his friends headed for the dorms to prepare for that night's team awards dinner, where he would be among those honored for his distance freestyle achievements of the year. They found a train blocking their path, however, and the slow-moving boxcars proved too much of a temptation. The group began "hopping" the ladders, riding for a few feet, then dropping off to hitch another ride.

The train finally stopped, and the youths climbed to the top of the boxcars, walking toward the rear of the three-mile long string of cars. As it began to move again, they grew more cautious as they moved from car to car.

For Kevin, the caution wasn't enough.

"I was a little nervous about it anyway," he recalls. "I sat down on the edge of the car and extended my legs to help me cross the gap. But when I moved to go over, my foot hit the brake wheel, which turned. I dropped down between the cars and landed between the tracks on my stomach."

What happened then is uncertain. Meisel only knows that he did not lose consciousness. Somehow, however, his right arm was struck by one of the passing wheels, pinching it between the track and the wheel.

The bone in his upper arm was shattered and the muscle and tissue torn and shredded. "I didn't know what had happened," Kevin said. "I knew my arm was hurting, but I was afraid to look."

When he did look, he saw that his arm had been twisted almost 90 degrees, and amputation was nearly complete.

"When I realized what had happened, I shouted, and my friends heard me," Kevin said. "One of them ran all the way to Scott Dorm (passing the nearer Belk Dorm). I guess he panicked a little since there were closer phones. But the rescue squad arrived about five minutes after it happened."

Meisel's first thoughts were of death and wanting to die, but these were only passing ones. "Mostly I thought about swimming, my arm, my scholarship, my schooling and what my parents' reaction would be.

"Then, I remembered that I had an uncle who had lost an arm and he was able to function all right. And by some twist of fate, I had written a paper on the psychological aspects of amputation a couple of weeks earlier for a class. I think that gave me a perspective that a lot of other people might not have had."

Kevin had time to think, too. Nearly a third of the long train had to pass over him before he could be rescued.

"I never really panicked," he said. "I did keep raising my head, but my friends, and another man who had come along, kept telling me to stay down."

Kevin Meisel

Finally he was rushed to Pitt Memorial Hospital for emergency treatment, then on to Duke University where reimplantation surgery was done.

"I never really knew that they could do something like that. But there was a doctor at Pitt who had been in Vietnam and was familiar with the surgery. He contacted Duke and got things started," Meisel said.

nerves were transplanted from his lower leg to his arm. Two others were for skin grafts.

"For a while, the arm swelled to three times its normal size, and they cut it open from the palm of my hand to the arm pit to relieve this," Meisel said.

Since the accident, some feeling has returned to the lower side of his arm below the elbow. He has also experienced some slight movement in his middle and ring finger.

"This latest surgery was to try and return feeling to my hand. If that works, then it is possible that I can have a good deal of function return. But it is going to be a step-by-step thing. Elbow flexion is going to be a big part of it."

While Kevin has almost full use of his shoulder joint, he's undergone therapy on his elbow, wrist and finger joints to prevent them from atrophying.

While he has passed up this semester, he plans to re-enroll at East Carolina in January.

What bothers him most about being out of school is not being able to compete with his teammates, who are now practicing for the upcoming season. "Having to be on the sidelines has been one of the tough things. Also having to learn to use my left hand and to do things for myself with only one hand has been tough."

It is easy to see, however, that Kevin has a bright outlook for his future. "I think a lot of it comes from my swimming. It has shown me that things can be accomplished."

"I've also always been a church-going person, and my faith has helped me a lot too. When I look back on it, and realize that I could have been killed, I guess somebody just didn't want me to die yet."

But it's having to work without the constant support of his teammates that bothers Kevin too. "I have to do things on my own. I don't have a coach or teammates to cheer me on."

Ray Scharf, Kevin's coach, isn't sure that that is a correct statement, however. "We're all behind him. And we believe that Kevin is going to swim competitively again some day. This accident has brought us much closer together as a team. And Kevin is definitely still a part of the team and will be always."

It hasn't always been easy, however. Kevin has had his times when he felt down on his luck, but he admits that these periods have been short ones.

"Getting back in the water for the first time was one of my high points, and being able to swim with just one arm means a lot to me too. Then, getting some movement in those fingers means a great deal."

While the days of competitive swimming most likely are over, Kevin wants to stay close to the sport. His father is a swim coach and he's grown up in it. "I'm in accounting, but I never want to be far from swimming," he says.

When Kevin first got back into the water, he'd been on his back for three weeks. "I'd lost some weight too, and it was hard. But after a few days, I managed to swim a lap. That gave me a great sense of accomplishment."

Scharf says that just having Kevin around the team provides a great deal of inspiration for them. It also provides a lot of inspiration for Kevin: "I've heard every one-armed joke in the book."

"We realize it was a foolish thing that happened," Scharf said, "but you can't turn back the clock. You have to go on living and that's what Kevin is doing. We're glad he's here."

"You know, you hear about coaches and athletes talking about someone showing courage in a game or meet or whatever, and I guess it means a lot," Scharf continued.

"But these past few months, Kevin has shown us what true courage is all about."

Strange Rips Pensacola Field

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Curtis Strange, a non-winner in four years on the pro golf tour, did something that Hurricane Frederic couldn't — he dismantled the 7,133-yard Perdido Bay course Saturday with a 10-under-par 62.

Strange, seven shots off the lead entering the day, bettered the course record by two shots to open today's final round with a 202 total, 14-under par.

The 1974 NCAA champion from Wake Forest, who has earned $100,000 on the tour this year despite not winning, is leading by a shot over veteran Orville Moody (who had a 66 Saturday) and by two shots over first-round co-leader Bill Kratzert, John Mahaffey, Mike Nicolette and Dan Pohl.

Morris Halatsky, who was tied for the first-day lead and alone at the top after two rounds, shot an even-par 72 Saturday for a 205 total, three shots back. Don January is also at 205, with Keith Fergus and Bob Proben at 206.

Strange, 24, stayed atop the leaderboard most of the day after birdying the first three holes. He didn't feel his third round differed much from his first two.

"I think the course owed it to me," he said. "I played the same way the first two days, but was only 4-under. The difference today was that my putts fell."

It was Strange's best round ever on the tour. He followed birdies on the first three holes with more on the seventh, eighth and ninth.

His longest putts to that point were 15 feet on No. 1) and 20 feet on No. 9). He added four birdies on the back side with the longest putt 15 feet at No. 14.

"I'm playing so well," Strange said. "Playing consistently well is more of a thrill than making the birdies."

The second-best score of the day was Nicolette's 64, which on any other day would have tied the course record. Nicolette, who birdied three of the first five holes and got an eagle on the par-5, 638-yard 15th, is a rookie who graduated from the PGA Spring Qualifying School.

Nicolette said he doesn't feel any extra pressure to win.

"I'm a Christian and I believe that when it is God's will for me to win, I'll win," he said. "My part is just to do my best."

Moody, who is looking for his first victory since the 1969 U.S. Open, feels good about his game.

"I'm confident and, if I get a good start in the final round, I could win," he said.

Pohl is making his second attempt to stick on the tour after having his PGA card pulled in 1978 after a dismal yearly earning total of $2,606.

Tech Hits Spiders

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech quarterbacks Steve Casey and Jeff Bolton passed for 172 yards and tailback Kenny Lewis ran 18 carries for 105 more Saturday to lead the Gobblers to a 34-0 football victory over Richmond's Spiders.

The triumph boosted the Gobblers' record to 4-3 and ended a three-game losing streak. It was the seventh straight defeat for the Spiders. It was the Gobblers' first shutout since 1975 when they beat Virginia Military 35-0.

Casey completed 5 of 6 passes for 98 yards and second-stringer Bolton hit 3 of 8 for 74.

The Gobblers opened the rout before a homecoming crowd of 39,600 with a 3-yard scoring run by freshman tailback Cyrus Lawrence at the end of a 15-play, 80-yard drive in which Tech held the ball half the first quarter.

pass from Kupec to Tucker, to take a 21-7 lead.

The Tar Heels' final tally of the first half came after linebacker Buddy Curry intercepted a Smith pass on the Wolfpack 47 and returned it 12 yards to the 35.

It took the Tar Heels seven plays to score, with Kupec passing seven yards to Tucker, who was able to get one foot down in the right corner of the end zone.

Afterwards, N.C. State coach Bo Rein had nothing but praise for both teams.

"We were defeated by a fine football team," Rein said. "But we proved you've got to play 60 minutes."

"In the second half, unlike some of our other games (between these two teams), we came back and just ran out of gas."

The Crimson Tide came right back with a 70-yard drive that required 14 plays and 7½ minutes to take the lead with only five seconds left in the quarter on a six-yard run by Ogilvie, who rushed for more than 100 yards on the hot, muggy afternoon.

The Tide put the game on ice with an 80-yard march early in the fourth quarter, which ended on Don Jacobs' 13-yard keeper with just over six minutes to play.

Tennessee, 4-2 overall and 1-2 in the SEC, opened the scoring on Streater's 11-yard pass to Phil Ingram after a fumble recovery at the Alabama 16.

Streater then capped a 63-yard drive with a three-yard touchdown run on Tennessee's next possession, and the Vols stretched the lead to 17-0 early in the third quarter on a 45-yard field goal by Alan Duncan.

What Paschal Does Is His Very Best

RALEIGH — Doug Paschal knows his limitations.

"I'm not as fast as Amos, and I probably don't have the moves he does. But where I'm needed, I'll step in and do my best," Paschal said.

Saturday afternoon against the N.C. State Wolfpack, Paschal's best was definitely vintage quality, as the fullback-turned-tailback scampered for 117 yards and three scores in the Tar Heels' 35-21 whipping of the Wolfpack.

Time after time, Paschal, who was subbing for the injured Amos Lawrence, was called on to churn out the tough yards inside against the Pack.

And nearly every time, Paschal responded, especially in the first half, when he ran for 91 yards and two touchdowns.

"This was a really satisfying day for me and for the team. We showed we can bounce back and I hope we won't have to bounce back again this year."

"It was satisfying because it was a win, not because of the opponent. If we would have won against a little high school team I'd be satisfied, because it was a win.

"I really don't think we approached them (State) any differently from any other team. And I think that's why we were able to win."

Paschal, always the team man, was quick to give credit to his offensive line and fullback Billy Johnson.

"I just can't say enough about Billy. He's a great athlete. I told him during the week I was going to follow him, and that's what I did. He and the offensive line opened up the holes and I ran through them."

Paschal was given the starting nod Thursday by Crum. Lawrence, who pulled a groin muscle against Wake Forest, practiced only one day last week, but said Saturday he was ready to play.

"I told the coaches before the game I felt good. I guess they decided that they'd rather keep me out of this game and get me well," Lawrence said.

"I'm very happy for Paschal, though. He played very well. I'm glad Doug can play like he did today and he was able to break loose."

"I guess everybody depends on me to help the team win. I'm glad to see Doug have a good game. I knew he could do it. I had full confidence in him," Amos added.

As for Paschal, he was happy with the win, but he said UNC must now turn its attention to East Carolina, the Tar Heels' opponent this coming Saturday.

"It's gonna be an exciting game for me, it's sort of a homecoming. I know a lot of the guys on the team."

"We can't celebrate this win too long, or we'll be in for a long afternoon Saturday. We've got to be ready for them." — RICK SCOPPE

Bucs, VCU Tie

RICHMOND — Virginia Commonwealth and East Carolina battled to a 2-2 tie in a soccer match yesterday.

East Carolina scored both of its goals in the first half with Phil Martin and Brad Winchell both scoring off assists by Jeff Karpovich. VCU's two scores came in the second half, with Chris Brown and Mike Chandler scoring.

Neither team could score in the two overtimes.

Auburn Rolls Past Georgia Tech, 38-14

By TOM SALADINO AP Sports Writer ATLANTA (AP) — Elusive James Brooks raced 175 yards and scored two touchdowns Saturday, including a 68-yard scoring scamper on Auburn's first play from scrimmage, to power the 14th-ranked Tigers to a 38-14 college football victory over Georgia Tech.

Joe Cribbs, the other half of Auburn's potent running attack, added a 1-yard TD run, while Tigers' quarterback Charlie Trotman passed for a pair of touchdowns.

Willie Huntley added a 5-yard run in the closing seconds and Jorge Portela got a 30-yard field goal for the winners, 5-1.

Tech, 1-4-1, trailing 21-0 at halftime, scored twice within 11 seconds late in the third period by converting a pair of Auburn fumbles into touchdowns.

After Brooks got Auburn quickly ahead, the Tigers scored again late in the opening period when Cribbs, who gained 72 yards on the ground, capped a 59-yard drive with his scoring run. A key play in the drive was a faked field goal in which holder Foster Christy passed 4 yards to Huntley for a first down on Tech's 3-yard line.

Trotman then closed out the first-half scoring with his 13-yard touchdown strike to Mark Robbins.

Tech, however, got back into it late in the third period when Brooks' fumble was recovered by Henry Johnson. Leon Chadwick scored eight plays later from the 5 to make it 21-7.

Cribbs then fumbled following the kickoff and Yellow Jacket quarterback Mike Kelley, who completed 19 of 31 passes for 259 yards, hit Marion Heggs with a 22-yard scoring pass on the next play.

Portela gave Auburn some breathing room when he booted his 30-yard field goal early in the final period after Marvin Williams intercepted Kelley on Tech's 43. Brooks raced 25 yards in two carries to set up the three-pointer.

On the Tigers' next possession, running back George Peoples set up Trotman's 1-yard TD flick to Brooks by running 35 yards in three carries.

Huntley closed out the scoring with only 1:47 remaining when he raced 5 yards into the end zone.

Huskers In Romp

By JOHN THOMPSON STILLWATER, Okla. (UPI) — Junior 1-back Jarvis Redwine rushed for 104 yards, including touchdown runs of 20 and 6 yards, and Kenny Brown gained 110 yards, the most ever by a Nebraska wingback, in the third-ranked Cornhuskers' 36-0 victory against Oklahoma State Saturday.

I.M. Hipp ran 23 yards on the first play of the fourth quarter to give him 54 yards on 12 carries for the day and the Nebraska career rushing record of 2,719 yards.

Nebraska also scored on 5-yard runs by fullback Jim Kotera and wingback Anthony Steels and a 42-yard pass by quarterback Tim Hager to split end Tim Smith. Dean Sukup kicked a 23-yard field goal and three extra points.

Citadel Rolls, 37-6

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Tailback Stump Mitchell rushed for a career-high 188 yards Saturday to help The Citadel whip Virginia Military Institute 37-6 in the military classic of the South.

The victory put the Bulldogs atop the Southern Conference standings with a 3-0 record and lifted their overall mark to 4-3. It was the first conference loss in three starts for the Keydets, whose overall record fell to 4-3.

Mitchell registered the Citadel's first touchdown on a 26-yard run in the first quarter, and then dashed 46 yards to the VMI 21 to set up a 5-yard touchdown run by quarterback Tim Russell.

Russell also threw a 14-yard touchdown pass to Mark Hunt and completed two passes for 30 yards to set up Wilford Alston's 1-yard plunge for another.

White, Trojans Win Scoring Duel

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — All-American Charles White rushed for a career-high 261 yards Saturday and decided one of college football's greatest individual ground-gaining duels with four short second-half touchdown runs that sparked fourth-ranked Southern California to a wild 42-23 victory over Notre Dame and record-setting Vagas Ferguson.

White surged past Terry Miller of Oklahoma State. Ted Brown of North Carolina State and Ed Marinaro of Cornell into third place on the all-time rushing charts with 4,796 yards. He carried 44 times, most ever for a running back against Notre Dame.

The 185-pound senior tailback who trails second-place Archie Griffin of Ohio State by 381 yards, scored on runs of 3 yards and 1 yard in the third quarter and put the game out of reach on a pair of 1-yard plunges in the final period.

White's third touchdown capped a furious 7½-minute stretch, in which the Trojans outscored ninth-ranked Notre Dame 21-3, as the two long-time intersectional powers combined for more than a combined 1,000 offensive yards.

White's heroics overshadowed a 185-yard performance by Ferguson, who became Notre Dame's career rushing leader with a total of 2,847 yards.

Ferguson gained all his yardage in the first three periods and scored Notre Dame's first two touchdowns on runs of 1 yard and 21 yards.

Paul McDonald, Southern

Cal's cool-hand quarterback, accounted for the Trojans' other touchdowns with 12-yard passes to Dan Garcia in the second period and Kevin Williams in the final quarter.

After a scoreless first period and a 7-7 halftime struggle, these two gridiron goliaths staged another memorable encounter in their classic series, which the Irish leads 27-20-4.

The game was witnessed by a sellout crowd of 59,075 in Notre Dame Stadium, plus a national television audience.

Notre Dame threatened another in its history of miracle comebacks when Jim Stone's 2-yard run with 12 minutes left narrowed the margin to 23-20.

But White scored for the third time barely two minutes later, and the best Notre Dame could manage after that was Chuck Male's 42-yard field goal with 9:14 to play.

White's final touchdown came with 28 seconds left.

White started out slowly but picked up steam as Southern Cal, 6-0-1 with a 15-game unbeaten streak, began a 99-yard touchdown drive with 4:40 left in the opening period. He carried seven times for 56 yards before McDonald connected with Garcia to give the Trojans a 7-0 lead 23 seconds into the second period.

That five-minute march came after the Irish failed to convert a golden opportunity following Ferguson's 79-yard gallop to the 9-yard line. Three carries by Stone picked up 8 yards and the Irish then disdained a point-blank field goal attempt.

Instead, Ferguson took a pitchout, raised his arm to bluff a pass, but lost control of the ball and it rolled away for what was called an incomplete pass.

However, the Irish — who suffered their second setback in six games — tied the score with a 56-yard strike during which Ferguson matched the school record of 10 career 100-yard efforts shared by Jerome Heavens and George Gipp. The 194-pound senior carried 25 times.

Ferguson outrushed White in the first half, 133-110. But the Notre Dame star's numbers suffered when the Irish were forced to throw the ball in a final-period catchup effort. Meanwhile, White reeled off runs of 13 and 18 yards and MacDonald completed three consecutive passes for 46 more as the Trojans stormed from their 20 to the Irish 3-yard line. White took a pitch out through the left side and put Southern Cal in front to stay 14-7 at 8:36 of the third period.

He scored again four minutes later to cap a 65-yard drive after Ty Sperling recovered a fumble by Notre Dame quarterback Rusty Lisch at the USC 35.

McDonald, who completed 21 of 32 passes for 311 yards, zipped a 12-yarder to Williams at 1:20 of the final period as the two-team point barrage continued. White's third tally made it 35-20, the most points even against Notre Dame in Dan Devine's five years as head coach.

The game, played in unseasonably mild 75-degree weather, was filled with emotion and rugged hitting as Notre Dame sought to avenge last year's last-second loss to the Trojans in Los Angeles.

Hundreds of students formed a human tunnel as the team took the field before the game and Devine and his players actually had to push through their frenzied fans to reach their bench.

Furman Outlasts Appalachian

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Tailbacks Mike Glenn and Brothel Cole combined for 225 yards and four touchdowns as Furman defeated Appalachian State 31-17 Saturday in a Southern Conference football game.

In a game in which the lead changed hands five times, the Paladins rushed for 411 yards, their best effort on the ground this season. Furman's defense held the Mountaineers to their lowest point total of the season.

Furman, winning its second straight game after five losses, evened its conference record at 2-2. Appalachian is 1-6 overall and 1-4 in league play.

The Mountaineers got on the scoreboard first as kicker Mark French booted a 38-yard field goal in the first minute of play.

Furman came back six minutes later as Glenn went in from five yards out. Keith Potter's extra point kick made it 7-3.

With 22 seconds remaining in the first quarter Appalachian's Steve Brown hit his favorite target, Rick Beasley, on a 76-yard pass play for a touchdown that put the Mountaineers ahead 10-7.

On Furman's first series in the second quarter Cole raced 22 yards to put the Paladins back on top 14-10.

With 53 seconds left in the first half, Brown hit receiver Alvin Ray on a 16-yard strike to give Appalachian a 17-14 lead at intermission. It was the last time the Mountaineers scored.

Glenn ran for two more touchdowns and Potter added a 32-yard field goal for Furman in the second half. Glenn gained 112 yards on 24 carries, with his longest run a 9-yarder. It was the third consecutive 100-yard-plus game for Cole, who gained 113 yards on 11 carries.

Last year's Southern Conference co-player of the year, Furman quarterback David Henderson, did not play because of bruised ribs.

Late Navy Score Lets Midshipmen Nip Cavs

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

ANNAPOLIS (AP) — Quarterback Bob Powers capped an 80-yard drive with a 6-yard scoring run with 1:12 to play Saturday to lead unbeaten Navy to a 17-10 victory over Virginia.

The touchdown broke a 10-10 deadlock established less than three minutes earlier when the Cavaliers' Wayne Morrison kicked a 50-yard field goal, two yards better than the school record set in 1973 by Joe Jenkins.

Navy, 6-0, trailed 7-3 at halftime but opened the third period with a 64-yard drive on the ground against Virginia, now 4-3. The drive ended in a 28-yard TD run by third string tailback Duane Flowers, making his first collegiate start because of injuries to Navy's two leading runners.

The Middies opened the scoring in the first half on a 17-yard field goal by Steve Fehr. It was set up after Virginia's Pat Chester fumbled a punt he was trying to fair catch. Navy's Chris Boblitt recovered on the Cavalier 29.

Virginia quarterback Todd Kirtley then connected on four passes for 74 yards, the last one a 10-yard scoring toss to split end Louis Collins to give the Cavaliers a 7-3 lead with 24 seconds remaining in the half.

Virginia's only other long drive came after Navy's winning TD. Kirtley took to the air again at his 21 and passed the team to the Navy 33. His fourth down pass with nine seconds left, however, was intercepted by backup reserve linebacker Ted Dumbauld.

Kirtley had his best passing day of the season, completing 13 to 21 for 199 yards. But except for the drives at the end of both halves, Navy's fourth-ranked defense contained the Cavaliers.

The Middle defenders gave the Cavaliers only 117 yards on the ground, holding runners Tom Vigorito and Greg Taylor to 109 yards. They entered the game with a combined average of 223.

In the second half, Navy drove over to the Virginia 11 and later to the Cavalier 15. A deflected pass ended the first and Fehr missed a 31-yard field goal on the second.

The first 25 minutes of the game were a combination of tough defense by both teams, Navy penalties and the inability of either Kirtley or Powers to get the ball to open receivers. Navy did not get its initial first down until the second period during a 27-yard drive to the Virginia 27.

Perry, McSwain Pace Clemson Win

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Clemson tailbacks Tracy Perry and Chuck McSwain combined for four touchdowns and a 28-10 win over Duke Saturday but Coach Danny Ford was a little disappointed in the way his Tigers sat on their lead.

"We got a little bit sluggish after we got that 28th point, and it was my fault that we went to the bench too early," Ford said after the victory.

"Hopefully, I learned something from going to the bench too early. But we got to play a lot of people. Any time you come up into North Carolina and win, you've got to be happy," Ford added.

Perry and McSwain each scored two touchdowns and fullback Marvin Sims added rushing support as the Tigers went without starting tailback Lester Brown, who was out with a rib injury.

"Tracy ran the ball well from tailback, and McSwain ran well for a freshman," Ford said. "Our offensive line has to be doing something right."

Duke Coach Red Wilson found little to cheer about except a shotgun offense that he unveiled in the second half. It was the Blue Devils' only display of offensive punch.

"I was kind of the Lone Ranger — none of the other coaches wanted to put it in," said Wilson, who is in his first season.

"It will help us a lot, and it is an exciting offense," he added. "It will give the teams against us something to worry about and to prepare against. The shotgun is at Duke to stay," Wilson said.

McSwain scored on runs of 14 and 12 yards in the first half while Perry scored on a pair of one-yard runs in the second and third quarters.

The Blue Devils held a brief first-quarter lead on the basis of Scott McKinney's 33-yard field goal and scored the only touchdown in the fourth quarter. Greg Rhett scored for the Blue Devils on a one-yard plunge. The Duke score came after Clemson's reserve quarterback, Homer Jordan, was intercepted by Duke linebacker Glen Barner at the Clemson 23.

Duke's offense was puny through most of the game in the face of the Tigers' swarming defense. Duke quarterback Stanley Driskell was intercepted twice and reserve quarterback Craig Browning threw a third interception.

Duke had another chance to score with 4:23 remaining, when Sims fumbled at his own five yard line and Duke tackle Paul Heinsohn recovered. But the Blue Devils were unable to push the ball across in four tries and gave up the possession on downs at the one.

The win improved Clemson's record to 5-1 and 2-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Duke slipped to 2-3-1 and remained winless in the ACC after two losses.

McSwain was the leading rusher with 120 yards. Sims gained 93 yards rushing and Perry had 81.

The first half ended with Clemson ahead 21-3, following Perry's one-yard touchdown plunge with 22 seconds remaining in the half. His touchdown capped a slow, 60-yard drive.

Duke jumped ahead in the first quarter, capitalizing on a fumble by Clemson quarterback Billy Lott on the first play from scrimmage. The fumble was recovered for Duke by Heinsohn at the Clemson 43, and was followed by McKinney's field goal 10 plays later. Duke kept Clemson in a hole for half the first quarter until Rex Varn intercepted a Driskell pass the Clemson 30. The Tigers then marched 70 yards before McSwain scored the first touchdown on a 14-yard run.

McSwain's second touchdown came midway through the second period after Clemson's Hollis Hall intercepted a pass by Browning at midfield.

Twisted Tackle

Arkansas quarterback Kevin Scanlon (14) is twisted to the turf by Texas linebacker Chuck Holloway and Doug Shankle (behind) during the first quarter of Saturday's game in Little Rock. Scanlon picked up four yards on the third down keeper, not enough for the first down, but Arkansas upset the second ranked Longhorns, 17-14. (AP Laserphoto)

Chalking Up Yardage

Clemson University fullback Marvin Sims (31) cradles the football as he gallops through a hole in the Duke defense. Duke defender Eric Drescher reaches in vain for Sims. The Tigers defeated Duke, 28-10. (AP Laserphoto)

Third-Stringer Leads Rutgers By Indians

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Third-string tailback Albert Ray, called into action after an injury and another sub's ineffectiveness, rushed for 123 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as he led Rutgers' Scarlet Knights to a 24-0 football victory over William & Mary's Indians.

Ray entered the game after starter David Dorn hurt a knee and second-stringer Lester Johnson was unable to replace him efficiently.

His slashing off-tackle runs got the Rutgers offense moving in the second period and his touchdown runs of 4 and 3 yards staked the Scarlet Knights to a 14-0 halftime lead.

It was all Rutgers after intermission as the Scarlet Knights' defensive line continued to dominate the Indians' offensive unit, and Ray's running kept the winners' offense moving, setting up Kennan Startzell's 20-yard field goal.

Johnson, who replaced Ray late in the fourth quarter, got the other Rutgers touchdown on a 1-yard run.

The William & Mary offensive played giveaway most of the game, coughing the ball up twice on fumbles by quarterback Chris Garrity and on a Garrity interception in the first half.

Garrity was replaced by Alan Drewler in the second half, but Drewler threw two interceptions and never got the Indians moving.

Arkansas Stuns Texas In Battle Of Southwest Loop Unbeatens

By DENNE FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Tight end Darryl Mason's tumbling touchdown reception and Ish Ordonez's vital fourth-quarter field goal carried the aroused, 10th-ranked Arkansas Razorbacks to a pulsating 17-14 upset of second-ranked Texas Saturday in a Southwest Conference meeting of the unbeaten.

Mason's spectacular third-quarter catch of a 7-yard pass from Kevin Scanlon and Ordonez's 31-yard field goal gave Arkansas just enough room to escape the Longhorns. It was Ordonez's 15th consecutive field goal — an NCAA record. With 1:29 to play, Texas charged to the Arkansas 33, where barefoot sophomore John Goodson's 51-yard field goal attempt was short into a 24-mile-an-hour wind.

With Arkansas leading 17-7, Texas sophomore tight end Lawrence Sampleton somehow caught a tipped, 35-yard pass from Donnie Little to pull Texas within the final margin with 5:01 left.

The frustrated Razorbacks, who hadn't beaten the Longhorns since 1971, shook off an early 37-yard touchdown run by Texas' A.J. "Jam" Jones to dominate the second half and send the stadium record crowd of 55,838 at War Memorial Stadium into delirium.

Freshman Gary Anderson of Columbia, Mo., gave the Razorbacks heart just before halftime when he booted 28 yards for a touchdown to even the game 7-7.

The game-winner came after a critical Texas mistake when sophomore Ricky Richardson forced Little to fumble and another sophomore, Jeff Goff, covered it for Arkansas at the Horn 29.

Scanlon then passed 16 yards to Mason, who lost a shoe in the process. The Razorbacks worked the ball to the Texas 7. On third down, Scanlon found Mason all alone with a wobbly pass that Mason snagged at his shoetops as he rolled over in the end zone.

Then Arkansas iced the game against the second-best defense in the country by charging 66 yards in 16 clock-eating plays to set up Ordonez's 31-yard field goal with 8:25 to play.

Arkansas increased its overall record to 6-0 and the Razorbacks are 3-0 in SWC play. Previously unbeaten Texas dropped to 4-1 overall and is 1-1 in league play.

Tate Unanimous Victor Over Coetzee

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer
PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Big John Tate, cautious early, used short punching and his great strength in the second half of the fight to score a unanimous 15-round decision over Gerrie Coetzee and win the World Boxing Association heavyweight championship Saturday night.

Tate, who came in at 240 pounds but had no problem handling the weight, showed great patience in the early rounds, trying to finesse Coetzee into mistakes. Then, beginning in the seventh round, Tate began scoring heavily to the body and the head, and took control of the fight to become the successor to the retired Muhammad Ali.

The fight between Tate, a black from Knoxville, Tenn., and Coetzee, a white South African, drew a paid crowd of 81,000 to the Loftus Versfeld rugby stadium.

Tate gave the crowd little to cheer about over the final rounds.

The fight, which was critcized by American civil rights groups because of South African racial policies — about 25 persons picketed the NBC building in New York Saturday — was watched by an integrated audience. However, the crowd was predominately white, ticket prices ranging from about $345 down to $12. It was the first time blacks were permitted to attend any sporting event in the stadium.

The fight, called by the Rand Daily Mail of Johannesburg, the nation's largest white newspaper, the most prestigious sports event in the history of this nation which has been barred from many areas of international sport, ended with Big John smiling broadly and Coetzee's manager, Hal Tucker and his wife, Rina, in tears.

Referee Carlos Barrocal of Panama scored it 147-144 for the 24-year-old Tate. Judges Ken Morita of Japan saw it 147-142 and judge Carlos Martinez Casas of Argentina had it 148-145.

The Associated Press scored it for Tate 146-139.

Tate has singlehandedly taken care of South Africa's attempt to climb onto an important international sports platform — the heavyweight championship. The former migrant worker stopped South African Kallie Knoetze in eight rounds last June 2 and now has taken care of Coetzee to gain a share of the title.

The World Boxing Council recognizes Larry Holmes of Easton, Pa., as the champion.

Promoter Bob Arum said he thought it possible that Tate and Holmes could fight in the fall of 1980 for universal title recognition. Arum said Tate's first WBA title defense could come in February against Mike Weaver, Scott LeDoux, Earnie Shavers, Ron Lyle or possibly Leon Spinks.

Coetzee, who weighed 222, forced the tempo in the early rounds as Tate was content to circle and feint. Then, in the third round, the 24-year-old South African landed a right hand to Tate's jaw. It was the kind of right that floored Spinks three times in Coetzee's one-round victory last June 24.

Coetzee's right buckled Tate's knees, but the man with legs like oak tree trunks, would not go down.

Tate's strategy obviously was to save himself for the later rounds.

He did the job well. "I feel super, man," said Tate. "I feel like the champion of the world."

That championship began to come his way in the seventh round. He opened a slight cut over Coetzee's right eye and began to reach Coetzee's body. The pattern continued in the eighth, ninth and 10th rounds, with Tate beginning to use his strength and Coetzee beginning to tire.

Then, in the 11th round, Tate landed a good right to the head and followed with three more shots. He dominated the round, as he landed a hard right to the heart, two rights to the head, and followed a Coetzee hook with four blows to the body.

In the 12th round, Tate continued to land to the body and he had Coetzee in trouble with two rights to the head, followed by a right to the chin and a left-right to the head.

Tate was in complete control and it was a question of whether Coetzee could reach the end of the fight.

In the 14th round, Tate opened a cut under Coetzee's left eye, then drove him across the ring with a thundering right and staggered him with a short right to the jaw in Coetzee's corner at the bell.

At the end of the fight, Coetzee's sister, Gerda, ran weeping to Knoetze, who had fought earlier on the card and had helped in Tate's training camp.

"You're to blame for Gerrie losing," said Gerda.

Tate was to blame for Coetzee losing. He just had too much firepower and too much strength.

Cross-Country Champs

Rose High School's cross-country team won the Division I championships on Thursday behind the first-second place finish of Harry Williams and Kenny Smith. The Rampants will compete in the sectionals Thursday at Smithfield-Selma. From

Watts, Phelps Guide Sooners

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — Quarterbacks J.C. Watts and Kelly Phelps combined for 230 yards and four touchdowns to spark eighth-ranked Oklahoma to a 38-6 victory Saturday over Kansas State.

Oklahoma drove 80, 77, 80 and 51 yards for touchdowns on its first four possessions of the second half to erase a 6-3 halftime deficit en route to its fifth win in six games and ninth straight over the Wildcats. Kansas State fell to 2-4 with third straight loss.

Watts rushed for 118 yards and scored the first two Oklahoma touchdowns on runs of 1 and 18 yards. Phelps came on in the fourth quarter to rush for 112 yards in only eight carries and scored the final two touchdowns on runs of 14 and 36 yards.

Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims scored the middle touchdown for the Sooners on a 5-yard run. But Sims was held under 100 yards for the second straight week, gaining 67 yards in 16 carries.

Freshman fullback Stanley Wilson, in his first collegiate start, chipped in 75 yards in nine carries for the Sooners.

Oklahoma took its first possession of the game 38 yards in five plays to set up a 38-yard field by Mike Keeling — the first by the Sooners this season.

But Kansas State then mounted its most impressive drive of the season behind freshman quarterback Darrell Dickey, the son of Wildcat head coach Jim Dickey. Kansas State reeled off seven first downs in driving 80 yards for a 1-yard touchdown plunge by Darryl Black.

Dickey completed two passes for 23 yards and Keith Dearing rushed 34 yards in six carries to provide the Wildcats their first touchdown in 10 quarters.

But Butch Stocking's conversion kick sailed wide of the left upright, leaving Kansas State ahead 6-3.

Kansas State totally dominated the first half, running off 42 plays to just 26 for Oklahoma. The Wildcats led in first downs 10-4, pounded out 108 yards on the ground compared to 89 for the Sooners and also led in total yardage 157-113.

Elon Tops Catawba

BURLINGTON, N.C. (UPI) — Tailback Bobby Hedrick caught a pass for one touchdown and ran for two more Saturday to lead Elon to a 36-16 South Atlantic Conference win over Catawba.

Elon running back Vernon Morrison added two more touchdowns as the Fighting Christians raised their record to 3-3 overall and 1-2 in the SAC. Catawba fell to 1-6 overall and 1-3 in the league.

Hedrick, who rushed for 114 yards in 19 attempts, opened the scoring in the second quarter when he caught a 47-yard scoring pass from quarterback Mike Currin to cap a 16-play, 74-yard drive. After a 25-yard Catawba field goal by Rick Cockman, Morrison scored on a 12-yard run to give Elon a 14-3 halftime lead.

Hedrick added a 2-yard scoring run in the third quarter and a 13-yard touchdown run in the fourth quarter, while Morrison rounded out the Elon scoring with a one-yard run in the final period.

Phil Renn kicked four extra points for the Fighting Christians, while holder Phil Melton added a two-point conversion on the final touchdown.

Catawba's Danny Days scored touchdowns on a 2-yard run in the third quarter and a 6-yard pass from quarterback Mark Hess in the final period.

Rose Rallies, Tops Bertie, In First

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants gave away 13 points on their own mistakes, then stormed back in the second half to take a 23-13 win over Bertie Friday night.

The victory kept the Rampants in the chase for one of the two Division I playoff berths, and knocked Bertie off its perch as one of the league's unbeaten in conference play.

One of the Falcon touchdowns came on a 19-yard pass that followed a pass interception setting up the one-play score. The other came right after Rose had come back to take a 7-6 lead, on a 95-yard kickoff return.

Rose's scores came on two runs by Mark Shank, of 11 and five yards, and a one-yard sneak by Kenny Barnes. Ted King booted a 42-yard field goal and two of three PAT's.

King missed on field goals of 44 and 52 yards, having the distance on both, but was just off target. The other PAT was spoiled by a bad snap, and a pass attempt following was no good.

"I think both our offense and defense did a whale of a job," Coach Dave Bumgarner said afterwards. "We made a couple of mistakes that gave them both of their scores."

"On the pass interception," the coach continued, "they had been coming hard on first down all year, but they dropped back this time. We probably shouldn't have called that play."

On the kickoff, Bumgarner explained, one player missed his assignment, and it left the hole right up the middle the man ran through.

Aside from those two efforts, Bertie was held roughly in check.

In exception from its usual play, the Rampants had more yards passing than rushing. They had trouble getting their offense in gear because of the rush of the Bertie linebackers, but Barnes' passes kept them off balance enough to keep the offense in gear most of the time.

Barnes completed six of 12 passes for 147 yards, and although he had two picked off, most of the time he was right on target. Chris McLawhorn, a sophomore brought up from the junior varsity two weeks ago, was the target of two passes for a total of 73 yards.

Bertie got an early opportunity in the first half when Rose was assessed a 15-yard personal foul penalty down to its own 39 following a punt. But a fumble on third down turned it over.

Five plays later, Barnes had his first pass picked off and returned to the Rose 14. An illegal procedure penalty pushed it back to the 19, and on the next play, quarterback Stanley Pugh dropped back and hit Clarence Hayes over the middle in the end zone. Archie Wesson's PAT kick was wide, leaving it at 6-0 with 4:02 left in the period.

The Rampants came back to drive from their own 28 to the Bertie 24 before a holding penalty killed the drive and King's 44-yarder was wide.

But after holding the Falcons, Rose took over on the Falcon 41 after a punt and drove for their first score. Seven plays got them to the 24, where on fourth and six, King booted his 42-yarder with 3:56 left in the half, making it 6-3.

On the kickoff, Paul Spivey gathered in the ball at the five, headed straight up the middle and found an open pathway through the charging Rampants. Once in the clear, he outdistanced the Rose defenders on his 95-yard jaunt. This time, Wesson's kick was good, and with 3:42 left, Bertie led, 13-3.

Shank, returning the Bertie kickoff, nearly broke away, returning the ball to midfield.

After a pass fell incomplete, Kenny Wilson raced down the sidelines with a quick pitch, chewing up 39 yards to the 11. One charge up the middle netted nothing, but Shank then took the ball over left tackle and bulled his way into the end zone. King's kick cut it to 13-10 with 2:18 left.

Rose nearly tied it up at the half, as Barnes hit McLawhorn for 32 yards down to the Bertie 33, from where a 52-yarder by King was just to the left.

Rose blew its first chance of the second half, after recovering a fumble at the Bertie 34, failing to pick up a first down.

After getting the ball back on a punt, Rose got a quick move when Barnes hit Donald Johnson for 38 yards in a picture-perfect pass to the Bertie 33. Wilson picked up nine yards, then Bertie was penalized 12 yards for tripping McLawhorn as he went after another Barnes pass in the end zone. Shank picked up seven with a quick pitch, then went the final five over right tackle for the lead. After King's kick, it was 17-13 with 3:28 left in the period.

Another chance went by the boards on Rose's next possession, as the Rampants moved from their own 47 to the Bertie 31 before a busted play resulted in a loss that was not overcome.

Another Shank punt return put the Rampants in great field position at the Bertie 26, but a 20-yard clipping penalty pushed them back to midfield. A 41-yard pass from Barnes to McLawhorn got Rose back to the nine, but two plays later, he was picked off in the end zone.

David Holley cracked through to hit Pugh a couple of plays later, knocking the ball loose, and Garrett Young recovered on the Falcon 19. Rose was stalled, however, and a 36-yard field goal by King was good.

Bertie, however, roughed him, and Rose elected to take the penalty, getting a first down at the nine. Calvin Whichard reeled off six yards, then Barnes sneaked for two before finally getting the last yard for the insurance score.

Bertie, using the pass and its time outs well, moved the ball

Indians Top Bucs

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Rob Olson scored a pair of second half goals for William & Mary and boosted the Indians to a 2-0 soccer win over East Carolina Friday afternoon.

The Pirates, now 4-7-1, enjoyed superb play by sophomore goalie Brian Winchell of Atlanta who posted 13 saves, but couldn't generate sufficient offense to keep pressure off the talented netminder.

The host Indians outshot the Pirates, 32-4, during the game, while lifting their record to 7-4-1. William & Mary goalie Steve Gallop made three saves.

"We didn't move to the ball well on offense," said Pirate coach Brad Smith. "and generally had trouble sustaining anything on offense. They used an effective ride against us, too."

Smith also praised the play of stopper Duane DeGaetano, a freshman defender from Mendham, N.J.

Texas Tech Wins 30-7

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Ron Reeves staked Texas Tech to an early lead with two touchdown passes and later ran 11 yards for another score in a 30-7 Southwest Conference victory over Rice Saturday.

Fullback James Hadnot gained 202 yards in 34 carries for Tech to become the Red Raiders' second-leading rusher ever.

Farmville Slips Past Firebirds, 13-8

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
STANHOPE — By the end of the night, Southern Nash coach Ron Pinner had seen enough of Farmville Central's Donald and Ronald Reid. Still, Pinner couldn't tell them apart.

"Number 55 — I don't know if that's Ronald or Donald — whoever it was he controlled our running game all night. We couldn't get any one out there to block him," Pinner said.

Actually, Ronald Reid, who wears No. 55, had some help in erecting the stone wall into which Southern Nash's ground attack ran, including brother Donald and David Dunn, all three of whom are the Jaguars starting linebacker crew.

Farmville held Southern Nash to 40 yards on the ground, but it was barely enough as the Jaguars escaped with a 13-8 come-from-behind victory over a tough, scrappy Southern Nash squad.

"Our kids played super," Farmville coach Gene Brewer said afterwards. "But we have nothing but praise for Southern Nash. We made some mistakes tonight, but Southern Nash had a lot to do with that. They're the stiffest competition we've had all year."

The Jaguars entered the contest averaging over 300 yards a game rushing, but the Firebirds' eight and nine-man lines limited Farmville to 168 yards on the ground. Tailback Donald Reid led the Jaguars in rushing with 131 yards on 28 carries and one score.

Southern Nash, now 6-1 overall and 4-1 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, had two chances to win at the end, but it was not to be.

Trailing 13-8 with just over three and a half minutes left, the Firebirds recovered a fumble by Donald Reid on Farmville's 21-yard line.

After two running plays netted one yard, quarterback Paul Morgan threw what appeared would be a touchdown pass to wide receiver Wayne Grady, the ECC's leading pass receiver. At the last moment, defensive back Jeffrey Tyson came from nowhere to knock the pass away.

"I thought we had a touchdown there," Pinner said. "But their kid made a heck of a play."

On fourth down, Morgan again tried to reach Grady, but Mike Horne tipped the pass away, ending the threat.

Southern Nash stopped Farmville a foot short of a first down on third down with just under two minutes to go, forcing the Jaguars to punt.

Morgan scrambled for nine yards on first down, to the Jaguar 42. On second and one, Morgan pinpointed a pass to Grady, who grabbed four passes against Farmville for 88 yards, but Grady was unable to make the catch at the 15.

With less than a minute to go, Morgan again went back to pass but Horne intercepted his throw, sealing Farmville's seventh win without a defeat.

The win, Farmville's 29th straight ECC victory, ups the Jaguars' conference record to 6-0 and leaves them all but assured of a berth in the state high school playoffs. Farmville would have to lose to Ayden-Grifton and Southwest Edgecombe to drop from the top.

"We've still got to win one more, then we'll have it," Brewer said. "That's what we've been shooting for all year."

Behind for the first time this season at 8-7 at the half, Farmville came storming back. After holding Southern Nash without a first down on its initial series of the second half, the Jaguars got the ball back on their 44.

Twelve plays later, Farmville's Donald Reid, who carried for 35 yards on the drive, scored the go-ahead touchdown on a two-yard plunge and the Jaguars led, 13-8.

"We played well in the first half defensively, except for that one long pass," Brewer said. "But we just had our backs to the wall coming out in the second half."

"When this group of kids were sophomores (in their first varsity game) they were behind and drove 99 yards to score the winning touchdown.

"It (being behind for the first time) didn't really have any major effect on them. We had made some mistakes, but we were ready to get back on the field."

Early in the game, both teams appeared somewhat jittery. Neither team could put together a drive until late in the period.

Following a 17-yard punt return by Roger Joyner late in the first quarter, Farmville drove 53 yards in 12 plays for the first score of the game.

Quarterback Eugene Joyner, after faking up the middle to Reid, lofted a 15-yard pass to halfback David Dunn for the touchdown.

Twice Farmville kept the drive going when it converted fourths and one.

Following a Southern Nash punt, Farmville once again drove down the field, before being stopped on the Firebirds' 17 yards in total offense by the Vikings, pushed over their only score in the first quarter. Keith Johnson got the touchdown on a two-yard plunge, but the try for the PAT failed, leaving the Cougars with a 6-0 lead.

Conley came back in the second quarter to tie it up. Curtis Joyner got the score on a four-yard run, but, like the Cougars, the Vikings failed to convert.

They did come right back, however, and score again, taking the lead for good. Arnel Crede raced over from 23 yards out for the go-ahead tally and Doug McRoy kicked the extra point, giving Conley a 13-6 lead at the half.

Their other score came in the third period when Joyner scored again, from 19 away.

Joyner led the Conley attack with 112 yards on 11 carries. Crede added 103 on 20 tugs.

The victory raised the Conley record to 4-2-1 overall and 3-2 in the conference. Southwest fell to 2-5 overall and 1-4 in ECC play. Conley travels to Charles B.

Conley Vikings Rally To Top Southwest Edgecombe By 19-6

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings spotted Southwest Edgecombe a 6-0 lead in the first period, then came back to claim a 19-6 Eastern Carolina Conference victory Friday night.

Southwest, held to just over 150 yards in total offense by the Vikings, pushed over their only score in the first quarter. Keith Johnson got the touchdown on a two-yard plunge, but the try for the PAT failed, leaving the Cougars with a 6-0 lead.

Davidson Routs Hampton-Sydney

DAVIDSON, N.C. (UPI) — Quarterback Al Rhyme passed for two touchdowns and 102 yards Saturday and Davidson routed Hampden-Sydney 42-0 — the first shutout for the Wildcats in two years.

Rhyme's touchdown passes came late in the second and third quarters on 7-yard and 4-yard aerials to Gifford Piercy. He completed 10 of 13 passes for the afternoon.

Davidson, 5-2, possessed a slim 7-0 lead at the end of the first quarter after quarterback Brian Whitmire completed a 12-yard pass to Tom Trahey with 13:37 remaining and Wayne Paymer kicked his first of four successful extra points.

A 28-point scoring spree in the second quarter gave the Wildcats a 35-0 halftime advantage, putting the game out of reach for Hampden-Sydney.

Early in the second period, Alvin Atkinson scored on a 22-yard run and slightly over two minutes later Ray Sinclair plunged over from the one, remaining in the half.

Aaron Rollins also added a one-yard scoring run with 3:21 Davidson's offense rolled up 366 yards but Hampden-Sydney, 2-5, could manage only 147 yards against the Wildcat defense.

A&T Rips Howard

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Quarterback Roland Meyers passed for one touchdown and ran for another to lead North Carolina A&T State University to a 29-0 football victory over Howard University Saturday.

Charlie Sutton scored first for the Aggies from one-yard out in the first quarter. In the second quarter, Meyers ran for 52 yards for a touchdown and later in the same quarter, threw a 22-yard touchdown pass to Ollie Davis.

Freshman Keith James kicked three field goals for 37, 35 and 26 yards while Waymon Pitts led the rushing with 100 yards.

Howard's two attempts at field goals failed. They were held to five yards rushing and made no serious threat to score.

The overall records for both A&T and Howard are now 3-4.

North Pitt Comes Up With Win Over Aycock

BETHEL — North Pitt rallied for 14 points in the final period, then scored in the first overtime to nip Charles B. Aycock, 28-21, Friday night.

It was the first Eastern

Carolina Conference victory of the year for the Panthers, and brightened Homecoming for the fans. It was a struggle, however, to pull it out.

North Pitt scored first, with Terry Moore going over in the first period from a yard out. Marty Barber kicked the extra point.

Aycock came right back to tie it up, scoring on a five-yard run by Dave Thomas. Thomas also added the PAT to make it 7-7.

In the second period, Aycock recovered a fumble at midfield, and on the first play after that, Thomas broke loose to go 50 yards. His PAT made it 14-7 for the Falcons at halftime.

Aycock added another score in the third frame for a 21-7 lead. Ken Grantham went in from the four and again Thomas kicked.

North Pitt then came back with two fourth period scores to tie it up. Donald Andrews picked up a punt he had blocked and returned it 45 yards for the first score. Then, with 2:41 left, Moore went over from the one, and Bob Hemingway ran over the two-point conversion to knot it at 21-21.

In overtime, North Pitt elected to go on offense first, with Tony Pittman breaking away for 18 yards on the second play. The

Ahoskie Hands First Loss To Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — The bubble burst for the Williamston Tigers Friday night as they saw their six-game winning streak come to an end with a 34-0 drubbing by Ahoskie.

The Cougars established themselves as the team to beat in the Northeastern Conference with the win, raising their league record to 4-0 while Williamston's slipped to 3-1. Both teams are 6-1 overall.

Williamston was never able to get anything going against the Cougars, although they did threaten on a couple of occasions thanks to recovered fumbles. But the Tigers could grind out only 85 yards in total offense against the tough Ahoskie defense.

Ahoskie's first touchdown came following a Williamston fumble, one of five, at the 16. It took only four plays with Greg Watford going over from the four. Alvin Chamblee added the PAT kick for a 7-0 lead.

In the second period, Ahoskie got the ball on the Williamston 47 following a punt and drove for the second touchdown. That came on a one-yard plunge by Wayne Ellis. Chamblee's kick made it 14-0 at the half.

After a scoreless third period, Ahoskie added three more in the final quarter. After driving to the Williamston nine, the Cougars had a pass picked off, but on the next play, the Tigers tumbled it back on the three. Ellis went over from there.

Following an interception later on, quarterback Glenn Mitchell scrambled and raced 56 yards on the first play for the next Cougar score.

Ahoskie then drove 52 yards for its final score, with Gerald Mitchell going the final ten yards.

The first thing you notice about Jim Borawa is his steel-blue eyes. They appear cold, as if the past year he spent in Alaska has yet to completely relinquish its grip on him.

Borawa's eyes, however, belie his personality. And considering his job, a warm personality is conducive to his work.

Borawa, you see, is a fisheries biologist. He works for the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, in the Inland Fisheries Division. Although he works out of Kinston, he is responsible for 12 counties, including Pitt.

"We're definitely looking to get more contact with the local fisherman," Borawa said last week. "We want to listen to his problems and see if we can help."

But what exactly is a fisheries biologist and what does he do?

"That's hard to answer. We do practically everything. Mainly, though, we're concerned with fish management for better fisheries.

"We'll look into, say, why fishing has gone bad in some lake, and try to find out if we can do something about it. In a lot of cases, we can usually answer most of the questions we get."

A zoology graduate from N.C. State, Borawa received his masters from the University of Alaska at Fairbanks. While in Alaska he worked part-time with the Alaska Department of Game.

On the job since only July, Borawa has hustled from one county to another trying to, as he said, "get around and talk to the people, to let the people know I'm here to help them."

"I'm sure a lot of people don't even know there is a fisheries biologist in the area to help them," he said.

"We're here to help, and among the things we hope to do is tell people where the fishing is better."

Borawa can be reached at 423 Tyree Road, Kinston, N.C. His phone number is 523-2977.

The Ayden Field Trial Association will hold a fall fun trial run for dogs October 28 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The classes for the dogs are: Puppy (a dog whelped after June 1, 1978); Derby (a dog whelped after January 1, 1978) and Bird Dog (any age).

There is an $8 entry fee for the bird hunter and derby events and a $5 fee for the puppy event. Gold hat pins will be awarded for first, second, third and fourth places in all classes.

Bullets In Loss

MANTEO — Manteo rolled to a 25-6 victory over previously unbeaten Jamesville Friday night.

The defeat left the state without a Class 1-A unbeaten team as the Bullets were the last with an unblemished record.

Jamesville is now 6-1 in Tobacco Belt Conference play, while Manteo is 4-1. The Bullets play out of the conference next week, playing host to Scotland Neck.

Details of the game were unavailable.

Nine-Point Buck

H.B. Allen Jr. shot this nine-point buck this past Monday, the first day of deer season. Allen, a boating access technician with the U.C. N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, used a 30-06 rifle. The deer weighed 210 pounds and was shot in Pitt County. (Reflector Photo)

All National Park Service Campgrounds within Cape Hatteras National Seashore will be closed from December 15 to March 15, Superintendent Bill Harris has announced.

Harris says there are number of reasons for the decision, chief among them being the cost of operating the campground during the winter months when occupancy is only about 2 percent.

Run, Run, Run Is New Key To Success By Boston Celtics

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics are enjoying new success with an old formula — run, run and then run some more.

"The name of the game around the Celtics is run, run, run," said assistant coach K.C. Jones after Boston ran rings around the Washington Bullets for a 130-94 victory Friday night.

It was the unbeaten Celtics' fourth win of the National Basketball Association season. "We started out running as soon as we hit training camp, and we're not going to stop," said Jones.

"We're running so well we don't even have to set up on offense," said forward M.L. Carr, one of eight Boston players to score in double figures.

In other NBA games, the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Detroit Pistons 112-104, the Portland Trail Blazers downed the Los Angeles Lakers 99-82, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Phoenix Suns 95-94, the New York Knicks beat the New Jersey Nets 111-106, the Kansas City Kings clobbered the Denver Nuggets 107-84 and the Seattle SuperSonics topped the San Diego Clippers 106-98.

76ers 112, Pistons 104
Philadelphia kept pace with Boston, raising its record to 4-0 by defeating Detroit behind 36 points by Julius Erving. Two free throws by Henry Bibby put Philadelphia ahead 93-92 with 8:59 to play and the Sixers stretched the lead with scoring by Erving and Steve Mix.

Blazers 99, Lakers 82
Portland remained the league's only other unbeaten team as seven of nine players hit double figures, led by Ron Brewer, who scored 18 points. The Blazers, 5-0, put the game away with a 23-6 burst in the second half.

Bucks 95, Suns 94
Phoenix was knocked from the unbeaten ranks despite 20 points by Paul Westphal.

Milwaukee led 91-81 but the Suns reeled off eight points in a row before Harvey Catchings sank a short baseline jumper for Milwaukee with 1:47 to play, blunting the comeback. Two free throws by Quinn Buckner with 11 seconds left cemented the victory and offset two by Westphal in the closing seconds.

Knicks 111, Nets 106
Ray Williams scored 31 points as New York beat New Jersey in a game that had a wild finish.

With the Nets trailing by 2, The Nets' Ed Jordan missed a shot with two seconds left. Toby Knight got the rebound for New York and was fouled. Nets Coach Kevin Loughery stormed onto the court after officials Bob Rakel and Jack Nies and received his second technical foul.

Williams made the technical and Knight sank his two free throws to ice the victory in the metropolitan New York rivalry. Kings 107, Nuggets 84

Otis Birdsong scored 23 points and Phil Ford added 20 as Kansas City, leading from start to finish, handed winless Denver its fifth straight loss. Sonics 106, Clippers 98
Jack Sikma scored 10 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter as the Sonics pulled away from the Clippers. Sikma, rookie James Bailey and veteran Paul Silas dominated the boards in the fourth quarter for the Sonics, who made 16 of 22 shots in the period. Lloyd Free led San Diego with 41 points.

Ayden-Grifton Nips North Lenoir By 7-0

WHEAT SWAMP — Ayden-Grifton High School pushed over a third-period touchdown and made it hold up for a 7-0 victory over North Lenoir in Eastern Carolina Conference play Friday night.

The Chargers, in winning their fourth ECC outing in six starts, threatened twice more but were unable to put the ball into the end zone.

The lone score came after the Chargers took over at midfield following a North Lenoir punt. They drove down to the two in 11 plays, and Calvin Ellison cracked over from there. Billy Holland added the extra point for the 7-0 lead that stood.

Earlier, in the second period, Ayden-Grifton had driven to the seven yard line before turning the ball over on downs. Later in the second half, as the quarters changed, the Chargers again moved within striking distance, to the three before a fumble cost them another chance.

North Lenoir threatened only once, and never got inside the 15 then.

Ayden-Grifton is now 5-3 and plays host to Southern Nash next Friday in its final home game of the year. North Lenoir is 2-5 overall and 1-4 in the league. The Hawks travel to Southwest Edgecombe on Friday.

Calvary Tops GCA

NEW BERN — Calvary Christian Academy gained a 5-1 soccer victory over Greenville Christian Academy Friday afternoon.

Rock Gonzalez, Tommy Garrett and Bryan Rice each scored single goals for Calvary in the first half of the game, staking the host team to a 3-0 lead at intermission.

Larry Cox added two more in the second half for Calvary, while Greenville Christian's only goal came off a boot by Troy Hudson.

"We were playing with a few of our regulars out," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "We had a couple off on a trip and a few were out with grade trouble, so we went with a lot of younger kids. They played well, but the three first half goals kind of put it out of reach for us. Calvary is real good and improving all the time."

The Calvary team advanced its record to 5-1, while the Knights dropped to 1-5. Greenville travels to Bethel Academy on Tuesday.

Greenville 0 1-1
Calvary 3 2-5

SPORT LINE

To The Editor:

American boys are not hungry any more. They have everything given to them. They have the baseballs given to them; and the field fixed for them. They don't play the game because they love the game.

Jim Kyle said in his editorial that boys start in March to play baseball in high school. You said that the boys said that they were tired and didn't have any time for anything else at the end of the summer.

Why say this about American Legion baseball? How about Babe Ruth baseball? A boy who wants to play will not complain about being tired or wanting to do other things in the summer.

Do we want Mexico, Panama, Venezuela, Cuba, Puerto Rico and Santa Domingo to send all the baseball players to the major leagues?

Even though Smith is the most common name in America, there has never been a U.S. President, Vice-President, or U.S. Chief Justice named Smith.

The only nation in the world whose flag is not a rectangle or a square is Nepal, in Asia. Their flag is shaped like a triangle.

The original name of San Francisco was Yerba Buena.

Before the term "Uncle Sam" was used, America was called "Brother Jonathan".

The largest airport in the world-in Montreal-is bigger than the whole island of Manhattan on which New York City is located.

Roanoke Rapids Rallies To Nip Roanoke Redskins By 21-14

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Roanoke Rapids High School scored three times in the final half to pull out a 21-14 Northeastern Conference victory over Roanoke High School Friday night.

The Redskins twice held the lead in the game but each time, Roanoke Rapids rallied to tie it up, then pushed ahead in the final period to take the victory. Roanoke grabbed the lead in the opening period when Tony Whitfield went over on a 17-yard scamper. Glenn Cargile added a two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead. It remained that way the rest of the half.

In the third period, Roanoke Rapids tied it up. Eric Sigmon got the score on a three-yard toss from Chubby Butler. Sigmon then converted with a run, tying it at 8-8.

Roanoke regained the lead on a 29-yard pass from Cargile to Anthony Latham, but the PAT try failed, leaving the Redskins up 14-8.

The Yellow Jackets then put two scores together to take the lead. William Camp got the first on a 32-yard pass from Sigmon. Then, in the final quarter, Greg Haislip scored from four yards out with the winning score. Chuck Ward added the PAT.

The loss dropped the Redskins record to 2-5 on the year overall and 1-3 in Northeastern play. Roanoke Rapids is now 2-4-1 overall and 1-3 in the conference.

Roanoke plays host to Tarboro, while Roanoke Rapids travels to Plymouth on Friday.

Baltimore's Weaver Given Nod As American Manager Of Year

BALTIMORE (AP) — Earl Weaver accepted his latest award with pride, but he was willing to share the glory.

For the third time in seven years, the feisty leader of the Baltimore Orioles has been named the American League Manager of the Year in a nationwide vote conducted by The Associated Press.

Weaver polled 166 votes in a landslide victory. Jim Fregosi of the California Angels was second with 49 votes and Gene Mauch of the Minnesota Twins third with 41.

"What can I say, except that I'm happy," said Weaver, whose team won 102 games after being picked to finish fourth, and the AL championship before losing to the Pittsburgh Pirates in the seventh and deciding game of the World Series Wednesday.

"But I could never have been Manager of the Year without 25 guys doing their jobs. The last thing I would want to do is take credit for what they did. "What the award boils down to is a pat on the back to the Baltimore organization, including (general manager) Hank Peters, the scouts, the farm department and my staff in helping to select the guys to go out and do the job which makes Manager of the Year possible.

"It's a lot of people working together," Weaver said. "You can't forget the minor league managers, and four league titles in 11½ years as manager."

Weaver won the AP award in 1973, when the Orioles won the American League East but were beaten by Oakland in the playoffs, and in 1977 when the Orioles finished 2½ games behind the New York Yankees.

"Just one year, it would be great if I could win the award when we win the pennant, the World Series and everything," he said.

Weaver, whose 1,101 victories make him the winningest active manager, has guided Baltimore to six division championships and four league titles in 11½ years as manager.

Tale Of Rookie Quarterbacks

By The Associated Press The New York Giants vs. the Kansas City Chiefs. It's a tale of two rookie quarterbacks.

The Giants have Phil Simms, who in a few games has apparently entrenched himself as a starter. The Chiefs have Steve Fuller, who has lost his starting job for the time being.

The two National Football League teams, with their conferences' poorest offenses, meet Sunday in Kansas City.

Also today, it's Atlanta at San Francisco, Oakland at the New York Jets, San Diego at Los Angeles, Green Bay at Tampa Bay, Baltimore at Buffalo, Cincinnati at Cleveland, Philadelphia at Washington, Miami at New England, Chicago at Minnesota, Detroit at New Orleans, St. Louis at Dallas and Houston at Seattle. On Monday night it's Denver at Pittsburgh.

The Chiefs had won three straight games, primarily on the strength of their defense (35-7 over Oakland, 24-6 over Seattle and 10-7 over Seattle) before faltering last Sunday and losing 24-10 to Denver. Fuller, who had been starting since the third game of the year, was benched late in the third period in favor of veteran Mike Livingston. And Coach Marv Levy said earlier this week that Livingston would start against the Giants.

Simms, meanwhile, has started two games for the Giants and won them both. He directed a ball-control offense in his starting debut as the previously winless Giants beat the previously unbeaten Tampa Bay Buccaneers 17-14. Last week against still winless San Francisco the coaches unleashed him and he responded with completions on 17 of 32 passes for 300 yards and two touchdowns — both to fellow rookie Earnest Gray — in a 32-16 victory over the 49ers.

"It was important for Earnest's confidence," Simms said of the Giants' No. 2 draft choice, who had dropped numerous passes earlier this year. "It was important for him to have a big game, just like it was for me. It was important for me for my confidence and for everybody's confidence in me."

The 49ers, 0-7 and off to their worst start ever, will try to turn things around against the Falcons, who were battered 50-19 by Oakland a week ago, the second-worst beating they've ever absorbed (second only to a 59-0 demolition by Los Angeles in 1976).

The Raiders venture into New York, where the Jets, with the league's No.1 rushing attack, are coming off last Monday night's 14-7 victory over Minnesota.

Two Make Pro Ranks

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference's reputation as a basketball power was tarnished last spring when four of its teams were eliminated from tournaments on the same weekend.

Then the ACC went through what most college basketball experts felt was a mediocre recruiting year. The signing by Virginia of Ralph Sampson, the nation's most-sought-after high school player, was considered a saving grace.

What followed was the National Basketball Association draft in which few ACC players were chosen in the early rounds. And finally, when the NBA rosters were pared, only two rookies — Duke's Jim Spanarkel and North Carolina's Dudley Bradley — remained.

Spanarkel, a member of the Philadelphia 76ers, is the only former Duke player now active in the NBA. Bradley, who plays for the Indiana Pacers, is one of nine North Carolina players now active.

According to the ACC the other Tar Heels in the league are: Mitch Kupchak, Washington; Bobby Jones, Philadelphia; Bob McAdoo, Detroit; John Kuester, Indiana; Charlie Scott, Denver; Phil Ford, Kansas City; Walter Davis, Phoenix; and Tommy LaGarde, Seattle.

Maryland players active in the NBA are Tom McMillen, Atlanta; Brad Davis and Len Elmore, Indiana; and John Lucas, Golden State. From North Carolina State are David Thompson, Denver; Tommy Burleson, Kansas City; and Kenny Carr, Los Angeles. From Virginia are Gus Gerard, Kansas City; and Wally Walker, Seattle. The only player from Clemson is Wayne Rollins, Atlanta.

There are no Wake Forest players in the NBA.

PROGRAMS AVAILABLE

NCNB ExpressLink, a package of computer cash management programs, is now available from North Carolina National Bank, the firm announced.

NCNB said that ExpressLink is part of a worldwide computer network called the BankLink System, offered through several regional banks to organizations needing daily information about bank account activity and balances.

OPERATING RESULTS

James B. Powers, chairman and president of Planters National Bank in Rocky Mount, reported that third quarter income before securities transactions for the period ending Sept. 30 increased 23.6 percent to $874,000, compared to $706,000 a year ago.

Consolidated net income after securities transactions totaled $862,000, as compared to $701,000 in 1978, Powers pointed out.

PNB reported that consolidated income before securities transactions totaled $2,497,000 for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared to $1,961,000 earned during last year's comparable period.

Net income for the nine months after securities transactions totaled $2,449,000, compared to $1,936,000 last year.

FINANCIAL RECORDS

Stewart Sandwiches Inc., Norfolk-based sandwich chain, reported that net sales for fiscal 1979 rose to $47,573,039, up 15 percent from 1978 sales of $41,197,934.

The company said that net earnings improved to $1,411,278, almost doubling the 1978 net figure of $714,563. Per share earnings in 1979 reached 74 cents, compared with 38 cents in 1978.

Stewart operates a sales center in Greenville.

COMPLETED COURSE

Louis E. Clark and Associates, local real estate and appraisal firm, announced that Syd Bailey and Wilda Rhodes completed Course VIII of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers given recently at the University of North Carolina.

Course VIII is designed to give the student a foundation in single family residential appraising. Course content includes lectures, case study groups and report demonstrations.

A Greenville native, Bailey graduated from East Carolina University in 1974 with a B.S. degree in business administration, specializing in real estate. Bailey, who joined the Clark Agency in 1974, was awarded the G.R.I. (Graduate, Realtors Institute) designation in 1977.

An ECU graduate, Mrs. Rhodes has a B.S. degree in home economics education with an emphasis in housing and management. Her career experience includes interior decorating, real estate sales and appraising.

ELECTED TO BOARD

William C. Gidewell, executive vice president of First State Bank of Greenville, was elected a director of the North Carolina Automated Clearing House Association (NorCACHA) at the organization's annual meeting at Research Triangle Park.

NorCACHA is one of 33 automated clearing house organizations throughout the nation which provides electronic fund transfer services. The services include automatic payroll deposit, automatic deposit of Social Security and other government checks, and customer initiated bill payments.

The meeting attracted more than 100 executives of banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions from across the state.

INTERNATIONAL AWARD

H. L. Ormond Jr., president of Ormond Wholesale Co. Inc. of Greenville, received the International Honor Trophy at the Foodland-Clover Farm international convention recently in Las Vegas, Nev.

The award was made to Ormond Wholesale for its growth and development of the Foodland-Clover Farm international franchises. It was pointed out that there are 18 wholesale food distributors franchised by The Foodland International Corp. and of the group, Ormond Wholesale achieved the highest increase in sales of Foodland-Clover Farm, Mrs. Lanes, Glendale and Homebased products.

Ormond Wholesale presently supplies 20 Clover Farm and 12 Foodland super markets.

BOARD CITED

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors received a national award recently for its successful participation in a variety of community projects.

The award, given by the National Association of Realtors, named the board's community projects "the best by a large board" in the 1979 "Make America Better" competition.

The "Make America Better" competition, chaired in Greenville by Mavis Butts of Mavis Butts Realty, is held each year to encourage Realtors to initiate community improvement programs.

Controversial Parachute Used At Bragg

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A controversial "steerable" parachute has caught and held the fancy of airborne commanders and soldiers at Fort Bragg despite statistical data indicating it is potentially more dangerous than older, unmaneuverable chutes.

The MCI-1B, a parachute with air holes that allow jumpers to maneuver in the air, has been used extensively by the 82nd Airborne Division since 1973.

In that seven-year period the Army recorded 11 deaths in parachute training jumps at Fort Bragg, 10 of them by soldiers wearing versions of the MCI-1B. One fatality was recorded involving the older T-10 series of parachutes.

The MCI-1B, generally referred to by soldiers as the Dash-One, has shown a tendency to become involved in serious entanglements by jumpers. Five of the deaths by soldiers wearing the Dash-One occurred during the 26 last months, a period in which the Army has attempted to solve the entanglement program.

Commanders and jumpers advocating the use of the Dash-One contend it's maneuverability makes the chute safer than older models, but statistics compiled by the Army indicate soldiers were twice as likely to be injured in landings with the Dash-One than with the T-10 chute.

Details of the controversy were reported by The Fayetteville Observer in a series of news stories by reporter Rick Thames, who invoked the Freedom of Information Act to obtain Army statistics.

Maj. Gen. G. S. Meloy said he was not aware of some of the statistics. But Meloy said he remained convinced that, in a combat situation, "We'll get more soldiers up off the ground ready to fight with the MCI-1B than we will with the T-10."

The Dash-One and the full-canopied T-10B officially are standard chutes for the 82nd Division. Fort Bragg spokesmen say the Dash-One makes up 60 per cent to 70 per cent of the post's supply of chutes.

Unlike the T-10B, the Dash-One has about 100 square feet of cloth cut out of the rear of the chute. Movement of air through the hole propels the chute laterally at speeds of up to eight knots in windless conditions. To make a turn, a jumper pulls left or right "toggle" lines to close corresponding sides of the hole.

"If you come riding in with a 10 mile per hour wind, you are going to be coming in at about 16 miles per hour with a good chance of injury," Meloy said.

Meloy said he believed that such injuries have been drastically reduced by extensive training programs. The division stepped up training in the use of the MCI-1B earlier this year in an effort to reduce injuries.

"The safety record has improved. It's getting better with time," Meloy said.

The Dash-One was placed in use at Fort Bragg without being checked by a formal test agency. Official tests were made in 1977, resulting in a warning by the Army Airborne Board that the chute could be hazardous in mass drops because of the entanglement problem.

The board recommended that the Dash-One be barred from mass drops at Fort Bragg. Gen. Volney F. Warner, then post commander, rejected the recommendation.

However, since that warning the 82nd Division has conducted several experiments aimed at reducing the entanglement problem. Jumpers now go out the door at one-second intervals, jumping alternately from opposite sides of the plane.

"I'm more optimistic that this is as close to a final solution as we will ever get," Meloy said.

Meloy, then a colonel, participated in some testing of the Dash-One by the division in 1974. He said the chute was hailed as a modern-day breakthrough for the airborne.

"It opened up a new doctrine. We were in the 1970s and, in many ways, we were still doing things pretty much as we had in World War II," Meloy said.

Warner is now commander of the U.S. Readiness Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Florida.

Family's Life Style Detailed In Doll House

By MARGARET E. BUNCH
From the fertile, imaginative mind of the late Alvin Moore Craig, an inventive Connecticut Yankee, there sprang the idea of a perfect plaything for his three-year old granddaughter in far-off and isolated, backwoods coastal North Carolina.

A doll house — complete to windows and furnishings — a unique and unusual doll house — an exact scale model of his own home in civilized, enlightened New Haven — with dolls that were exact replicas of those who lived there.

So it was made, painstakingly crafted, then crated and shipped to the child in Swan Quarter in Hyde County, N.C. where it became a county-side curiosity. The doll house was a Christmas present. That was 64 years ago, Christmas, 1915.

The doll house has survived intact through years of child's play, through shipping on a train from New Haven to Swan Quarter — making the last part of the journey on horse and wagon — survived many years of being stored in a barn after the child grew up and was married. Finally, the doll house came to stay with Mrs. Alida Tyler again after her father died and her mother, Mrs. Walter Swindell, came to live next door. The doll house was unpacked and reassembled and now entertains Mrs. Tyler's grandchildren.

"People came from all over the county to see my doll house," says owner Alida Swindell Tyler. And the doll house is still a cause for wonder generations later, especially when Mrs. Tyler of Martin County tells about the making of such a rare and unusual toy, throwing in bits of information about relatives, reminiscing about events and recalling her ancestors who saved and cherished everything they ever owned.

The fascination of the doll house and its lifelike miniatures lies not only in the attention to detail and the effort that was made to be authentic, but in the three dimensional record of life as it was lived by a large and wealthy family of the late 1800's and 1900's. Each room is a miniature history lesson in the manners and mores of the time. The dolls, painted to represent the family members and bearing an uncanny resemblance to pictures owned by Mrs. Tyler, are placed in their rooms with copies of their personal possessions around them: the personalities of the family are even discernible from the doll faces, Mrs. Tyler says.

Mrs. Tyler's doll house reflects what must have been a life of comparative ease and gracious living. But the most astounding thought that comes from seeing the doll house — the thought that overwhelms the mind — is the attention to minute detail and the workmanship that built such small, detailed articles that were meant to last through many, many years of a child's play. Mrs. Tyler's face reflects the happy hours that she spent with the doll house "...changing furniture, undressing and dressing the dolls, visiting and cleaning house..." all the things that children do in their make-believe world of grown-up.

She has a story about each piece of furniture recalling the origins of the piece. She remembers the aunts and uncles as if it were yesterday and they were still living, breathing people instead of china dolls. One aunt was very warm and giving; becoming a substitute mother to all the nieces and nephews. She recalls that this one was a lawyer and a judge and reaches into a nearby book shelf and pulls out original volumes that he wrote on jurisprudence and the teaching of law. Another wrote novels in the flowery language of the era — she has copies of that set of books too. There are tales about Nora, the cook, and the maid, about grandmother and grandfather. The clothing on the dolls reminded her that her grandfather had always insisted that the girls be dressed well and fashionably, "because people measured the success of his business by how pretty the girls looked."

father Craig as a very handsome man, and patents and inventions attest to the cleverness of his mind — inventions including a Craig gear shift, a patented formula for solid silver which never wore off (evidence of that was in a few pieces of flatware still in Mrs. Tyler's family) improved guns used in World War II to shoot truer and farther, air brakes on trains which made smoother stops, and mince meat.

The doll house, which is approximately three feet high, three feet long and three feet wide, took a year to make and assemble. Gathering the furnishings from toy manufacturers in the United States and Europe or having them made by a toymaker took the better part of the year. The furnishings are replicas of the furnishings in the family house. Six inch dolls were handpainted with the facial expressions of the family members and dressed in copies of their clothes. The family dog and cat are also represented in the doll house as well as a rooster.

Grandfather Craig hired a cabinet maker to exactly duplicate the family home down to the last detail — the outside is done in scaled ship-lapped siding, the roof of miniature handmade shingles. The only deviation from the original house is the roof. The doll house roof was flattened, instead of the steeply pitched roof of the original, to make shipping easier. Every other part is an exact copy. The house was shipped in a huge crate made of wood which was used for a table on which the doll house now sits.

Mrs. Tyler's doll house is different in one very important aspect from the usual doll house which opens from the back and is one room deep with all the room arranged so that they are open to the outside. The Tyler doll house is opened from both sides so that the rooms are arranged just as they are in the house. The central halls cannot be seen or reached from the outside but they are spaced in the center of the house so that the dimensions are correct and there is no space distortion. The tiny bathroom on the first floor at the back of the house can be seen through a window but it is not open to the outside. It is, however, completely furnished with every little detail even to the minuscule bar of ivory soap on the miniature lavatory and His and Her towels on the racks.

The doll house was electrically lighted by lamps and ceiling fixtures that were exact handmade replicas of the originals and operated by a battery arrangement. The dual system of lighting that existed in the original house was religiously copied in the doll house with kerosene lamps, also handmade. Some of the furniture could be duplicated with the miniatures that were the vogue and have been revived in recent years. Household articles that were unique to the house all had to be copied by toy makers — some of them in Europe. The window boxes were purchased in Germany and all of the vases were handblown to order. Mirrors were cut and framed by hand in frames copied from those hanging in the house and all the paintings in the house were copied in watercolors and framed in duplicate handmade frames.

The house was a large one, 12 rooms plus bath, containing first and second floor sitting rooms, a game room, a nursery and, of course, the formal parlor and dining room. To our eyes the kitchen looks bleak and unfinished, used as we are to multiple appliances, electrical gadgets and a special tool for every operation. The kitchen was still a place of manual labor in that age and the furnishings reflect that.

A doll copy of the Swedish cook, Nora Anderson, stands in the Craig kitchen which was a very modern one for the day. It contains an ice box complete with champagne, eggs, milk, roast and ice made of mica. The range was the very latest thing — a Star range outfitted with copies of cooking utensils and in-door running water. A butter churn stands in a corner, the table contains tiny dishes with a cake, doughnuts and bread rising out of an ironstone bowl. In another corner the family cat drinks from a small dish of make-believe milk.

The formal dining room is perfect in every detail — cane bottomed chairs, a marble topped sideboard set with miniature handmade silver and the table set with silver flatware, silver napkin rings and serving pieces. A flour-and-salt turkey sits on the table waiting for Mr. Craig's carving knife. A china closet and a buffet are full of miniature silver serving pieces that are copies of the family silver.

Every bedroom is decorated as an exact copy of the ones occupied by the family members and, of course, reflect the personalities of their occupants. Mrs. Tyler's uncle, George, had a very masculine and business-like room with a single bed, a table and a roll-top desk. The ladies' bedrooms were more of a challenge to the toy makers who had to copy all the feminine fripperies — tiny books, one inch high vases of handmade flowers, inch and a half boudoir lamps and the smallest of 'dresser sets' — long since out of style, but still beautiful — matching silver hand mirrors, combs and brushes sometimes with matching perfume bottles and hair caskets meant to hold the hair that combed out in the brush to make 'rats' — the rolls of hair that were used to puff the curls and elaborate ahairdos of the times.

The bedrooms even contain miniatures of the "necessaries" and the washstand pitcher and basin that were standard in every bedroom.

Nothing was forgotten in the creation of the house. Replicas of the toys of the children stand in the playroom and the nursery — toys of toys — tricycles stand in the back yard waiting for the doll children to come take a ride. The nursery is furnished with a crib with a rosebud painted on the foot and a "youth" bed of brass. A diminutive rocking horse waits in the corner for a small rider.

Mrs. Tyler's bedroom, which she shared with the twins when she went for her visits which sometimes lasted for months in the summer, had beds with heart shaped headboards and a tiny medicine chest outfitted with pill bottles with cotton still intact.

One of Mrs. Tyler's aunts, also named Alida, had a parrot which had quite a swearing vocabulary and the parrot was duplicated in its cage and hangs in Aunt Alida's doll house bedroom silently swearing through time.

Grandfather and mantel clocks that were handmade copies of the ones in the house are in the appropriate rooms, hands stopped in timelessness. A telephone in the upstairs bedroom is a reminder that times had begun to change even that long ago. A radiator indicates that the house was steam heated, but the toy house also has the myriad ornate fireplaces of the original house. The centerpiece of the playroom is a felt covered billiards table with balls racked up for the break and tooth pick sized cue sticks hanging on the wall for the doll sized players.

Mrs. Tyler talks about the family, its history and the people who lived in that New Haven house as if it were yesterday — instead of 65 years ago — the doll house has helped to keep her memories lively and fresh. She has a three dimensional picture of her past to recall every detail. Her doll house is a glimpse into another time, another place and another philosophy.

FEMINE FRIPPERIES... tiny books, vases of handmade flowers, boudoir lamps and dresser sets, long since out of style, are some of the features in the bedrooms for the ladies of the house.

SIX-INCH CHINA DOLLS... were painted with the facial characteristics and expressions of the original family members. These two dolls in the ladies parlor represent the lady of the house and the upstairs maid. (Photos by Marianne Baines)

SECOND FLOOR PARLOR... is an example of the intricate work done to recreate the house exactly as it was furnished. The chandeliers, clocks and pictures were all handmade replicas of the original furnishings.

Couple Marries Friday In Evening Ceremony

Cheryl Lynn Forrest and David Allen Jones were united in a double ring ceremony Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Rose Hill

FWB Church of Winterville. The Rev. Dan Beaman officiated and a program of music was presented by cousin of the bride, Mrs. Debbie Mills, organist and Mrs. Barbara Wilson, soloist.

The chancel of the church held a brass heart shaped candelabra with nine branched candelabras filled with flowers on each side. The couple lit the unity candle. White satin ribbons marked the honor pews. The couple knelt on a white brass prie dieu for the benediction.

Escorted by her father, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Forrest of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Earl Jones of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over white taffeta designed with an open sabrina neckline outlined in white re-embroidered lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in panels of matching lace. Full bishop sleeves were finished in organza cuffs with calla points of lace motif. The modified A-line skirt and wattleau attached train were edged at the hemline with re-embroidered lace. Applied motifs were scattered over the front of the gown. She carried a full cascade bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath.

Linda Manning Harris of Winterville was matron of honor and Donna Shirley of Ayden was maid of honor. The maid of honor wore a blue dress of polyester organza fully lined in woven acetate with ruffled front and back V-neckline with bowtrim, capelet sleeves, set in waist, flared skirt with flounce hem. The matron of honor wore an identical peach dress. They carried mixed nosegays of daisies, carnations and pompons.

Karen Stocks of Ayden, sister of the bride, served as bridesmaid and wore a blue dress like those of the honor attendants. The honor attendants and bridesmaid carried a bouquet with mixed nosegays of daisies, carnations and pompons. Loretta Pierce of Ayden was flower girl and wore a formal length yellow dotted swiss overskirt which featured bodiced yoke with lace trim and semi-puffed sleeves with ruffled bottom. She carried a natural wicker basket.

The bridegroom's father served as best man and Greg Garris of Grifton was ring bearer. Ushers were Kenny Jones of Winterville and James Jones of

Miss O'Kelley, Mr. Holmes Say Vows

ASHEVILLE — Paula Carroll O'Kelley of Asheville and Lee Bourne Holmes Jr. of Fairfax Station, Va., were married Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in the Central United Methodist Church here.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. Embree Blackard of Asheville. A program of wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Edwin Easter of Asheville, organist, and soloist, Miss Beth Hintz, cousin of the bride.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas O'Kelley of Asheville, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Bourne Holmes of Fairfax Station, Va.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride's maid of honor was Beth Hintz, cousin of the bride of Asheville. Bridesmaids included Sue Ellen Gamble and Annette Lignon of Asheville, Ann Pennell of Black Mountain, Tish Hackney of Wilson, Jane Hutton of Winston-Salem, and Martha Garner of Albany, Ga.

Flower girls included Jennifer Holmes, sister of the bridegroom of Fairfax Station, and Tara O'Kelley, niece of the bride of Vienna, Va.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Jack Holmes, brother of the bridegroom of Fairfax Station, Charles O'Kelley, brother of the bride of Cary, Ken Taft of Charlotte, Bucky Priester of Durham, Doug Walton of Fairfax Station, Dave Hergenroeder of Lawton, Okla., Jim Lynch of Birmingham, Ala., Tom Daly of West Hartford, Conn., and Clay Rolfe of Woodbridge, Va.

The bride was dressed in a gown of white organza which was accented on the Queen Anne neckline, long fitted sleeves and chapel length train by beaded imported French re-embroidered alencon lace. Her full length veil was attached to a beaded Juliet cap of matching lace. She carried a cascade of white roses, baby's breath and English ivy.

The attendants wore long wine chiffon dresses with matching capes. They carried cascades of pink rubrum lilies, miniature white carnations and English ivy.

The flower girls wore pink batiste dresses accented on the bodice, sleeves and hem with embroidered lace. They carried baskets of white, pink and rose miniature carnations.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the Enka Lake Club, Enka.

The couple plan a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina and will be living in Carboro.

The bridegroom is the grandson of Mrs. Jack Spain of Greenville.

The bridegroom is a graduate of UNC-CH with a B.A. degree in American studies. He is currently serving in the U. S. Navy and is located in Pensacola Fla., attending flight school. The bride will graduate in May from UNC-CH with a B. A. degree in political science.

Following the reception, a dinner was given for the families of the couple at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Daniels of Asheville. On Saturday morning, a brunch was given for the bridal party and families at the Sheraton Motor Inn by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spain of Richmond, Va.

The rehearsal dinner was given Friday evening at the Asheville City Club by the bridegroom's parents. A bridesmaids luncheon was given for the bride and her attendants at the Enka Lake Club Friday by Mrs. Willard Hintz and Mrs. C. E. Siler.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A couple of college students in the East recently figured they could capitalize on guilt by writing ghost letters home for classmates who were too busy to do it themselves.

They placed an ad in the local paper topped by a plaintive, "WHEN WAS THE LAST TIME YOU WROTE YOUR MOTHER?" It went on to explain how for three bucks, they would write four letters home over a two-month period. By the end of the day, orders began rolling in.

As a mother and professional guilt pusher, I resent amateurs getting into the act. Besides, if my kid didn't misspell Mom, I'd be suspicious.

My point is two can play this game. I've never had trouble getting my kids to write to me. At no charge whatsoever, I offer you four letters guaranteed to get results immediately.

REPLY GUARANTEED IN THREE DAYS LETTER

Dear Son: "I'm feeling much better now. The tests aren't conclusive, but I am able to feed myself and to recognize your father."

"But now to the important news. We opened the letter containing your grades by mistake..."

REPLY GUARANTEED BY NIGHT LETTER

Dear Daughter: "It was nice to hear your voice last weekend when we called. Your roommate, Michelle, sounds interesting. She almost sounds like a man. I guess I've never known anyone who has had a cold since her freshman year. Dad and I thought we'd pay you a surprise visit this weekend...we are so anxious to meet Michelle..."

REPLY GUARANTEED BY PHONE WITHIN MINUTES

Dear Son: "What a shock! We had no idea you had gotten married until Pam arrived at our door and introduced herself. She is in your room until the baby comes..."

REPLY GUARANTEED IN PERSON

Dear Daughter: "Since we have heard nothing from you since school started, we assume you have everything you need. We are moving tomorrow morning and have closed out our accounts at the bank. Will give you new address when we hear from you."

Write your mother indeed!

Greenville, both cousins of the bridegroom.

A reception followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church. An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 3, Ayden.

The bride is a business communication specialist in Greenville and a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School. A graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and Pitt Community College, the bridegroom is employed at Ajax Corp. in Winterville.

On The Young Side

The Drama Club, under the leadership of Betty Topper, is putting on a series of plays for Christmas. The first play "The Christmas Miser" satirizes Charles Dickens' story "A Christmas Carol."

The lead part of Arthur Felding is played by Jeff Jones. Other characters are Mike Thurber as Richard Harvey, Mary Holloway as Elizabeth Melvin, Montro Streeter as Joe Slater and Robin Jones playing the part of Molly.

The cast also includes Virgil Jones playing Freddie Lowe, Daniel Farmer as Dorothy Dean, Lisa Sheppard as Mrs. Judd, Doris Williams as Sandra Mason, Beth Congleton as Emily and Veronica Outterbridge playing Mrs. Wood.

Jasper Dixon is the stage manager with Bill Dawson as student director.

The next production will be "The Interview Job" starring Eric Hause as Donald Brown, Susan Lalik playing Agnes Graphey and Allison Keel as Joyce Quigley. Andrew Harris is the student director.

The third play, a children's play, will be put on at several elementary schools in Greenville. "Christmas Windows" features Jeffrey Atkinson and Mary Kate Cunningham as readers one and two, respectively. Montro Streeter will be acting as stage manager in this production. These plays will be performed at Elmhurst Elementary School at 8 p.m. Dec. 7 and 8.

The rock group, Free Fare, from St. Augustine, Fla., performed for the student body in an assembly Tuesday. This group has been traveling throughout North Carolina and playing for schools in the area. The following night they held a concert in the gym and proceeds went to a fund for Laura Lauffer, an accident victim, who is a recent graduate of Rose.

Patricia Bath, a Rose senior, placed first in the N. C. Music Teachers' Association High School competition for string instruments. This is the second year that Bath, who plays the violin, has won. She will advance to the divisionals which will be held in February in Memphis, Tenn. For this competition, she will play one required piece and two other pieces of her choice.

The Juniorettes are sponsoring a helium balloon sale to be held next week. The sale is a competition between classes. Seniors are encouraged to buy blue balloons, juniors green and sophomores buy white. The class which buys the most balloons wins and appreciation day and some money for their class treasury.

Couple Exchanges Vows On Saturday Afternoon

Vickie Lynn Forrest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Forrest, and Michael Dwight Wiggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Wiggs, all of Greenville, were married Saturday afternoon at four o'clock.

Dr. Will Wallace performed the wedding vows and double ring ceremony in the First Christian Church. Miss Betty Holloman sang "We've Only Just Begun" accompanied by organist, Tom Hawley. The bride's uncle, the Rev. David Nobles, sang "The Wedding Prayer."

The wedding flowers in autumn hues were of silk and designed by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Ruth Nobles.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of white organza over peau de soie designed with a high neckline encircled with scalloped chantilly lace. The empire bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace and enhanced by a sheer yoke of English net outlined in scalloped lace with embroidered motifs and pearls. Matching scalloped chantilly lace edged the cuffs of the French chantilly bishop sleeves. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated by a ruffled flounce of French chantilly edged in the scalloped lace.

She wore a walking length veil of illusion accented with a border of rosepoint chantilly lace held in place by a bandeau overlaid with lace beaded with pearls. Her bouquet of white silk flowers were centered on her bridal Bible, a gift of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Nobles. The Bible was covered in sheered crepe and matching lace with bridal ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Linder Broome of Jacksonville and Loria Crawford of Greenville. They wore formal gowns of emerald with an empire waist and gathered bodice. The sheer sheepless jacket had an autumn print and was accented with matching lace. They carried fall silk flowers on braided wicker fans.

Steve Wiggs of Harrisburg,

MRS. MICHAEL DWIGHT WIGGS

Engagements Announced

How To Be A Survivor

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to SCARED, a woman in a rough neighborhood who has suffered numerous purse snatchings and indecent propositions, who is afraid of being raped, and who wonders about carrying a butcher knife, fell below your usual standard of helpfulness.

You suggested she check with her local law enforcement as to "what kind of weapon (if any) a citizen is permitted to carry in order to protect life, limb and pocketbook. The laws differ from state to state." That comment might imply that a weapon DOES offer some protection.

Not only is the carrying of concealed weapons unlawful in most places, but it is a bad, unsafe idea. A person who pulls a knife on an assailant is very likely to lose more than just a purse; he is likely to be seriously injured in a struggle which most probably would ensue. (SCARED herself was badly injured trying to protect her purse.)

For that reason, crime prevention specialists are virtually unanimous in strongly discouraging the general public from carrying deadly weapons, or even keeping them around the home. Many accidental injuries and deaths have resulted from having such weapons at home.

It would be a fine service to your many readers if you would print the following suggestions:

SLADE GORTON,
Attorney General; Olympia, Wash.

OUT ALONE

At night, try to stay on well-lighted streets; avoid doorways, shrubbery, dark shadows near buildings, alleys and other potential hiding places.

If possible, walk with a friend.

Better yet, take a bus. If there are few people on board, sit near the driver.

In a cab or friend's car, ask the driver to wait until you signal you are safely inside your house.

Don't hitchhike or accept rides from strangers.

Stay away from deserted laundromats or apartment house laundry rooms at night; be cautious even in the daytime.

Be alert in crowds, where pickpockets do their best work.

The safest place for a man to carry his wallet is in an inside or front pocket.

When you take out your wallet, be as discreet as possible in handling your cash. Remember that cash is a strong temptation to the potential robber, so try to avoid carrying it, especially in large amounts. Use checks or credit cards instead.

A woman should hold her handbag firmly and close to her body, preferably toward the front—never dangling at her side. In certain cases, it may be possible to avoid carrying a purse by concealing keys and a wallet in a pocket, for example. That is the best way to avoid having a purse snatched.

Don't leave your purse on a store counter or set it on the floor in restrooms, theaters, restaurants, or other public places.

IN YOUR CAR

Keep your doors locked and windows rolled up most of the way.

Don't pick up hitchhikers.

If someone tries to break into your car, honk your horn repeatedly.

If you are being followed, don't drive directly home. Drive to the nearest police or fire station, hospital emergency entrance, all-night restaurant or other safe place.

You should not travel at night when you know you have car trouble or are low on gas.

Look for a well-lighted parking place and lock up. If you must leave your key with a parking attendant, leave only your car key, never the keys to your house. These can be duplicated while you're gone.

Before getting into your car, check the back seat and floors for someone hiding there.

AT HOME

A woman living alone should use only her first initial and last name in the phone book and on the mailbox.

Be cautious around elevators; if you are at all suspicious of another passenger, wait for the next car.

When changing addresses, change your locks, too. Install a deadbolt lock with a one-inch "throw" and a wide-angle viewer so that you can see callers. (A chain guard is NOT adequate protection in case someone tries to force your door open.)

Always check the I.D. of any repairman, salesman or policeman who wishes to come inside.

Instruct children and baby-sitters not to give out any information about who is home, who is out and for how long.

If you suspect your home has been broken into, don't go in or call out. Call the police from a neighbor's.

Don't leave your keys hidden outside. They're too easily found.

Always lock your doors and windows, draw your shades at night and leave a few lights on.

IN TROUBLE

If a robber demands your valuables, give them up! Your money or your jewelry is not worth risking injury or your life.

Don't carry weapons such as guns and knives. They can easily be turned against you.

Be selective about new acquaintances; don't invite a forcible sexual encounter. But remember, not all rapists are strangers, and you can't tell by appearances.

If you are confronted by a rapist, try to stay calm and think before you react.

Screaming or blowing a whistle may scare him off. Screaming "Fire!" rather than "Help!" or "Rape!" might bring more assistance.

Escape is your best defense. If you are trapped, crying, fainting, becoming hysterical, claiming you have a venereal disease, or pretending you are going to be sick may discourage him.

If the attacker is unarmed, try to employ basic self-defense measures—kick, bite, punch or scratch. The throat, face, eyes, knees and groin are target areas. He may injure, rape or murder you, so don't worry about hurting him!

If your attacker is armed and threatens to harm you, your child or someone else, you may think twice about physically resisting or attacking him. Remember, though, no one can tell you how to react. You should do what you feel is best for you.

Write down everything you can remember about your assailant; call the police right away.

Do not change your clothing, bathe or apply any medication. Although this would be your natural reaction, don't do it. The physical evidence will be important in the prosecution of the attacker.

Teens Target Of Risk Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — A true-false test on the risks of drinking and driving, designed primarily for new drivers, has been prepared by the U.S. Brewers Association as part of its new Alcohol Awareness Program.

The test is included in the association's leaflet on drinking and driving, being distributed by motor vehicle bureaus, law enforcement officials, state highway departments and driver education classes.

"Even though the test is aimed generally at young persons, many adults cannot give all the right answers," says George Minshew, senior vice president of the association. He suggests that parents check and discuss with family teenagers the following test statements:

TRUE OR FALSE?

—1. All states prohibit driving under the influence of alcohol.

—2. A 16- or 17-year-old person who commits a moving traffic violation would be treated differently than an adult offender.

—3. By law, it is never possible for a person under 18 to be sentenced to prison.

—4. If, while driving, you are at fault injuring someone and drive away without stopping, you may have committed a criminal offense.

—5. If you are arrested as DWI (Driving While Intoxicated), you can lose your license and be subjected to a fine, but you cannot be imprisoned.

—6. The highest proportion of alcohol-related accidents occur in the 21-24 age group.

—7. If you cause an accident while driving, your car-insurance rates will not be affected.

—8. Under certain circumstances, one drink may affect a driver's judgment, resulting in such actions as running through a red light, passing on a curve, speeding.

—9. Consumption of alcohol by persons riding with you constitutes a public offense in many states.

—10. If you have been drinking at a party, coffee will sober you up quickly before you drive.

ANSWERS

—1. True.
—2. False. Some states provide that a minor shall be treated as an adult for motor vehicle offenses.

—3. False. A state juvenile court can determine that a minor shall be treated as an adult.

—4. True.

—5. False. You might be fined or imprisoned or both.
—6. True.
—7. False. Most insurance rates are directly and upwardly affected by an accident.
—8. True.
—9. True.
—10. False. Coffee can help keep you awake, but it won't improve your judgment or sharpen your reactions.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
© 1979 by Chicago Tribune

ASK OMAR

Q.—Despite the fact that I have a book in my library by the title, I am convinced that there is no "short cut to winning bridge"—it takes hard work to become a good bridge player. Can you give me a few precepts that you think are essential to good bridge?—F. Marcus, Miami Beach, Fla.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You are adopting a very sensible approach to the game. I can assure you from personal experience that the only way to improve your bridge is to play, read and learn all you can. If you are also blessed with a degree of card sense, this regimen must be helpful.

It is difficult to express more than a few principles that will help make you a better player in this short column, but here are some of those I consider most important:

1) In bidding, don't look for complicated methods to serve as a crutch. You will obtain far better results by playing something you understand well and master fully.

2) In the play of the hand, try not to expend your high cards until your opponents have committed their high cards to a trick. Card play technique has one thing in common with billiards—it is a game of position. It is a distinct advantage to play fourth to a trick, and the person who has to lead to a trick is usually under a handicap.

3) If you are in a virtually unbreakable contract, grasp at any straw that will enable you to get some (unless, of course, you are doubled and that line would result in a bloodbath if it doesn't come off. Similarly, on defense take whatever measures you feel are necessary, such as falsecards, if the contract appears to be impregnable. Conversely, if you are declaring a virtually "sure" contract, exercise the maximum amount of care. Consider possible distributions that might defeat you, then look for ways to foil the wiles of Dame Fortune.

4) Don't take a finesse simply because it's there. An alternative line might assure the contract without the need to resort to a finesse.

5) Trust partner! There is nothing more shattering to partnership confidence than to ignore partner's bid or signal, and then discover that had you heeded partner's directions, you would have defeated the contract. Besides, if you obey partner's suggestion and something goes wrong, you can always blame him. (I'm joking, of course.)

6) Don't lose your cool at the table. For instance, suppose an opposing preemptive bid deprives you of space you need to describe your hand—after all, that's what preempts were designed for, and from time to time, that goal will be achieved. Don't rashly enter the auction because you think you are being robbed—the money you could lose is not only your own; partner is responsible for an equal share of the damages.

7) Always remember to be courteous at the table. That might not improve your bridge, but it will certainly help your game. Partner will enjoy cutting you as a partner, and will therefore make every effort to play as well as he can, certain that if he makes an error, no spate of recriminations will follow. In the long run, playing the game in the right spirit is more important than playing the game as well as an expert!

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, OCT. 21, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have some very interesting and advanced ideas and can best obtain information you require that is very difficult to obtain. Don't be discouraged by any obstacles but persist in going after such data.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You understand your mate's desires better than he or she does and can, accordingly, get right results. Study your financial status.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Situations arise that give you a better insight where partners are concerned. Take no risks in credit matters. Relax in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your duties well and then handle them efficiently. Come to a better understanding with co-workers and increase production.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Showing appreciation to those who have done you big favors is wise. Later indulge in recreations that are to your liking.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be more understanding with kin and gain added cooperation. Entertain persons you like and admire, but stay within your budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Think over how best to deal with those around you so that the relationships will bring about better benefits. Good day for visiting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Think along more practical lines and add to present security. Talk over your ideas with an expert in finances and get good advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you change your attitude, you can now gain personal aims that have been difficult in the past. Don't be extravagant.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Have quiet talks with others so that you can make fine plans for the future. Don't permit others to hurt you in any way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you help good friends to gain their aims, you gain their goodwill and help for your own as well. Avoid one who is a hypocrite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Become more active in your community and gain more prestige. Plan how to improve your career. Confer with a family tie for advice.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are inspired today and can plan the future more wisely, become a more important person. Plan now for a trip you want to make soon.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will easily understand whatever is difficult for others to fathom, since the intuitive faculties are highly developed. Teach early the finest philosophy and tenets that will guide the whole lifetime in the right direction. A good sport here.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, OCT. 22, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can easily handle today's influences by remaining objective in your thinking in spite of whatever unusual conditions arise. Take a more positive outlook in all your dealings.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure not to spend too much money where something new is concerned, or you could regret it later. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are under pressure and could do something foolish if you are not very careful. Slow down, and think before you act.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to put in wise economical measures at your work and have more profit. Sidestep one who is wasting your time.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Avoid a foe who is only concerned with own views. You can advance very well via the social route at this time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't let an acquaintance take advantage of your good nature. Find a better way of being more productive in your line of endeavor.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study whatever has been puzzling you lately and come up with the right answer. Relax in the evening at your favorite recreation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Cut down on unnecessary expenses and start to build up your assets. Take no risks with your reputation at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Taking new treatments that can improve health and appearance is wise. Don't neglect to handle important business matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listen to the good advice of a trusted friend. Atmosphere on home front is on a high plane at this time. Begin new diet.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't argue with an associate and you can both accomplish a lot more. Avoid a tendency to spend too much money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to avert a possible quarrel with close ties over home improvements. Show that you are wise at business dealings.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) It's important to be extra careful in motion at all times today. Get in touch with good friends during spare time.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who has to be taught self-control early in life in order to handle important matters later. There is much ability here in investigative pursuits and the education should be directed along such lines.

Abe Carried Mail In Hat

NEW YORK (UPI) — The most famous postmaster in American history carried the mail in his hat.

When he was 24 years old, Abraham Lincoln was made postmaster in New Salem, Ill., a job which he later described as "too insignificant to make my politics an objection." The post office was located in Lincoln's store but he often put letters in his hat and delivered them to addressees, according to Alain de Cadenet, philatelic historian and consultant to the British Post Office. Lincoln often read the letters to the recipients who were unable to read.

Trade-In Furniture Suspected A Logical Wave Of The Future

By JEANNE LESEM
 UPI Family Editor

Imagine trading in used furniture the way you now do an old car.

To Harley F. Shuford, Jr., a North Carolina manufacturer, that "seems a logical development in the business."

With a trade-in market, Shuford says, "more people would be apt to change their home interiors. They would be less worried about buying a new piece of furniture with some assurance that it can be traded in for a reasonable value a few years later."

Shuford's suggestion was made in a speech prepared for delivery Oct. 19 at the start of the semi-annual Southern Furniture Market.

In a telephone interview, the Hickory, N.C., furniture maker said several retailers with whom he discussed the proposal "were not enthusiastic. They didn't want to take on the problems of dealing with consumers who don't understand retail markups."

Still, he predicts "a sizeable, legitimate, previously-owned furniture business" will develop nationwide within the next few years. Appraisers would estimate values of used furniture the way jewelry appraisers now do in their field.

Other manufacturers' predictions for the '80s include floor plans that hark back to the days of the "great room" — a large, all-purpose room for living, cooking and eating, plus small rooms or platform rooms for sleeping.

They also forecast:
 —Smaller scale furniture for the smaller rooms;
 —Continued steady growth of trends toward pillow and modular furniture, sleep sofas, multi-purpose storage units and wall systems, all easily movable in our increasingly mobile society;

—Less furniture per room, especially in homes and apartments of 25-30 year olds;
 —More furniture — including modular sofas — designed to double as room dividers in "great rooms."

The rapidly rising cost per square foot for housing, particularly in high-rise buildings, means fewer people will be able to afford large apartments, Ronald Meyers said in a telephone interview.

Meyers, a Chicagoan, is president of a company with factories in Ramseur, N.C., and Christiansburg, Va.

"I was on a house tour on the Near North Side of Chicago recently," he said. "We saw coach houses with the interior walls ripped out (to make 'great rooms'). They had been garages on private estates. They have very high ceilings, a very dramatic look, with platform bedrooms and environmental bathroom-steam rooms."

He and other manufacturers expect more furniture of the '80s to be finished on all four sides, for use as room dividers; tables whose height adjusts for living room or dining use; more casters, for easy mobility.

Another news conference speaker, Jerrold A. Wexler of Leominster, Mass., forecast fewer boxy-look modular pieces and more curved and angled ones, and more soft, squashy cushioning.

Natural materials such as rattan and cane and handloomed Indian upholstery fabrics will continue to be popular, he said, especially with 30-39 year olds who prefer a casual look.

Another speaker, J. Clyde Hooker, Jr. of Martinsville, Va., said 30-45 year olds will become the biggest buyers of home furnishings in the new decade.

Faced with energy and inflation problems, Hooker said, consumers may have less discretionary, spendable income and will be more inclined to buy furniture a piece at a time instead of the suites of yesteryear.

"They'll choose individual pieces for specific needs, he added, and will give priority to the public areas of their homes. "Finishes will be soft and warm, easy to care for," Hooker said.

"Real wood will be popular, but expensive. Pieces may have less ornamentation, but more wood and veneer interest — burlis, parquetry, etc."

Other trends manufacturers see:
 Brighter, livelier colors (excepting traditional designs, in which medium tones, weights and colors will prevail); for younger consumers, one major upholstered piece per room, with the rest of the space filled with trees, plants, floor pillows and rattan furniture; conversion of third bedrooms in existing homes to dens, as children grow up and leave home;

The old Murphy bed-in-a-wall (or cabinet) is already making a comeback, along with wall-unit tables, to save floor space

In New Brunswick, N.J., designer-manufacturer Bella Ross said an established European trend is spreading to the United States.

"People are buying the very best furniture they can afford, as a hedge against inflation. Europeans are much less fad-conscious than Americans," she added.

Auto Safety In U.S. Is Best

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States maintains the best automobile-safety record in the world — relative to miles driven — despite the fact that motor-vehicle accidents account for the largest number of accidental deaths each year.

The American Council of Life Insurance says the U.S. fatality rate of 3.4 deaths per 100 million vehicle-miles driven was the lowest among industrial nations in 1975-76, the latest year for which data were available.

The council says that "based on statistics from the United Nations and elsewhere, France led the world in the average number of automobile deaths per vehicle-miles driven, with 8.6 per 100 million miles. West Germany followed with 7.9 deaths; Italy, with 7.2; Finland, with 6.4, and the Netherlands, with 6.1."

A Diamond Is - A Card Suit, A Baseball Field, A Precious Gem

NEW YORK (AP) — In the first century, Pliny the Elder, Roman historian and philosopher, noted that diamonds were hard, rare and valuable, and only royalty wore them.

But the situation has changed, says the Jewelry Industry Council, which reports that 75 percent of first-time U.S. brides are given a diamond engagement ring and that the gem has achieved universal popularity.

For those who know little more about diamonds than that the most popular cut is the round shape, that the ideal stone is clear as a raindrop and that "fancy" refers to diamonds with a pronounced and attractive body color, the Council offers this quiz to rate your Diamond IQ:

1. The word diamond comes from: (a) "dia monte," the Latin word for heavenly fire; (b) the Old French "deumonde," meaning two worlds — ancient Gauls believed diamonds were the spiritual link between this world and the next; (c) the ancient Greek "adamas," meaning unconquerable; (d) "di monte," early Italian meaning a mountain of flame.

2. "Carat," the measure of diamond weight, is derived from: (a) the ancient Bessarian weight scale; (b) the caratjen, a Spanish coin worth roughly two gold doubloons; (c) the Greek "keration," the name for the uniform-in-weight carob seed.

3. The diamond given by actor Richard Burton to his former wife, Elizabeth Taylor, weighs approximately 69½ carats, equivalent to the size of: (a) a pea; (b) a grape; (c) a walnut.

4. Television star Arlene Francis' favorite piece of jewelry, a gift from her husband, which she always wears, is a: (a) diamond and sapphire pin; (b) diamond bracelet with her initials in diamonds; (c) diamond heart pendant; (d) diamond tiara.

5. One heavyweight boxing champion had his winning belt studded with 397 diamonds. This was: (a) Muhammad Ali; (b) John L. Sullivan; (c) Joe Louis; (d) Jack Dempsey.

6. This famous actress with a penchant for diamonds would turn over her receipts after each performance to her jeweler to pay for diamond jewelry: (a) Elizabeth Taylor; (b) the Divine Sarah Bernhardt; (c) Katherine Cornell; (d) Maria Ouspenskaya.

7. Diamond Jim Brady, whose diamond-studded accessories caused quite a stir, showered lady-friend Lillian Russell with extravagant gifts, among which was a: (a) diamond-studded bicycle; (b) diamond bracelet with her name in red diamonds; (c) diamond G-string; (d) pair of dancing slippers encrusted with diamonds.

8. The man who discovered how best to release the diamond's fiery brilliance from the unprepossessing rough gem was: (a) Vincent Peruzzi, a Venetian lapidary who lived in the 17th century; (b) Louis XIV, who designed a prototypical brilliant cut to enhance his own glittering presence; (c) an Egyptian lapidary whose brilliant cuts were hidden for nearly 2,000 years in a pharaoh's tomb; (d) Cecil Rhodes, diamond-mine owner.

9. Lorelei Lee's famed comment, "Diamonds are a girl's best friend," is a classic but "It is better to have old second-hand diamonds than none at all" was said by: (a) Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind"; (b) Anthony Leeson, curator of fine gems at the Parke-Bernet Galleries; (c) Mark Twain in "Puddin' Head Wilson's Calendar"; (d) Sir John Farthingill of the Bank of England.

10. The Hope diamond is a rare and famous example of a diamond with a deep body color. It is: (a) canary yellow; (b) deep blue; (c) blue-red; (d) lime-green.

11. In Arkansas, in the "Crater of Diamonds," a number of the gems have been mined. One, a little over six carats, was named for a famous television comedian. The diamond is: (a) the Garry Moore; (b) the Milton Berle; (c) the Red Skelton; (d) the Redd Foxx.

12. At first, only men of royalty or importance wore diamonds at court. The first woman to wear diamonds was: (a) Countess Irina of Danzig, at the Imperial Court of Russia; (b)

Agnes Sorel, mistress of King Charles VII; (c) Catherine the Great of Russia; (d) Empress Su Ming of the Second Dynasty in China.

ANSWERS: 1,c; 2,c; 3,b; 4,c; 5,b; 6,b; 7,a; 8,a; 9,c; 10,b; 11,a; 12,b.

If you had 8 or more correct answers, you're up on diamond lore; 5 to 7, you're above average; 4 or fewer, you may know your onions, but not your carats.

Whatever your score, the Jewelry Industry Council advises: if you don't know diamonds — know your jeweler!

Alice Ramsey Pioneer Driver

DEARBORN, Mich. (UPI) — When it comes to driving, race car driver Janet Guthrie has nothing on Alice H. Ramsey of Hackensack, N.J., who drove from New York to San Francisco in a 30-horsepower Maxwell. The Maxwell she drove, an example of which is on exhibit at the Henry Ford Museum, covered the distance in 58 days in 1909. She soon became president of the Women's Motoring Club of New York and traveled all over the world demonstrating the superiority of the automobile for women.

HOTLINE RESPONSE: Care In Textbook Choice

I have a son in the fourth grade. His spelling book does not seem to me to be a good way to teach spelling. It has phonetic spellings, which he has to spell into regular words. The book is "Basic Goals in Spelling," by Kottmyer and Clause. I'd like to know who approves these things. It reminds me of the thing a few years ago with the new math, which didn't ever work. I don't believe a college grad could work with this book without a dictionary, D. S.

D. S., though you may feel that phonetic spelling is not the best way to teach your child, rest assured that much study and concern is put forth in selecting your child's textbook. "Hotline" found that "Basic Goals in Spelling" is used in Pitt County schools, and directed its study to the county's textbook selection, although the Greenville city school system may employ a similar route.

Textbooks are selected on a statewide level by the State Textbook Committee, with members appointed by North Carolina governors. According to Sam D. Bundy Jr., assistant director of the textbook division, the committee is comprised of six elementary teachers, supervisors or principals, six high school teachers, supervisors or principals, and two lay people, with one having children in elementary school and the other having children in high school.

Chairperson of the group, says Bundy, is either a superintendent or assistant superintendent of the one of the state's school systems. Dr. Jimmy Martin, superintendent of the Stanly County school system, is present chairman.

Textbooks for grade levels are generally adopted for five years, with certain areas noted for textbook selection.

Myriam Harris, cultural arts director for Pitt County Schools, has served as a member of the State Textbook Committee for the past three years. She notes that this year, committee members are reviewing textbooks for reading from grades K-8, science in grades 1-12, and home economics for grades 9-12.

Bundy explained that committee members review books submitted from various publishing houses, and use "readers" from different areas to give their opinions on the books.

Ms. Harris says she looks for readers who can keep in mind what the needs of all the children are, and asks them if the books can meet those needs. She keeps her copies of review books on display at the media center near W. H. Robinson School, Winterville. However, as Bundy pointed out, the decision on the textbooks is ultimately left to Ms. Harris, who also reads all the materials.

The commission meets for a day, compiles its requests, and presents them to the State Board of Education.

"The State Board of Education then notifies publishers, who have 30 days to submit bids," said Bundy. These bids span five years of textbook buying for all the school districts in the state.

After bids are opened, the State Board makes the official adoptions of texts to be used for the school systems. The adoptions are then mailed to the various school systems for their approval.

Gibb Chauncey, director of textbooks and inventory control for Pitt County schools, noted that when the textbooks are received in the county, letters are sent to school principals, asking for their selection of members to serve on the county textbook committee. The county committee is backed by several individual school subcommittees, all taking input from teachers on their feelings for textbook series.

After all series have been studied, the county committee votes, and textbooks are selected in certain fields for the next five years, as on the state level.

Bundy pointed out that school systems are getting back to having books adopted unitwide, noting that some school units used to have a different textbook series in every school, causing much confusion when children merged in junior or senior high school.

As to your question on phonetic spelling as a teaching tool, Ms. Harris noted that educators are moving toward phonetic spelling as opposed to rhexus pictures.

According to Kathryn Lewis, assistant superintendent for Pitt County schools, your child may have been missing some of his/her dictation tests, which should be given on a regular basis.

"Some teachers may be using only the transcription method for spelling tests," said Mrs. Lewis. "If that is found to be true, it will be immediately stopped."

"Dictation of spelling words is the accepted method of testing for spelling in county schools, with transcription method as an additional practice," she continued.

Jean Averette, fourth and fifth grade supervisor for county schools, said that a recent meeting of county assistant principals and principals reinforced that idea, with dictation tests to be given on a weekly basis in grades 2-8. Transcription, or the "translation" of phonetics into regular words, is to be given as additional practice in grades 4-8.

Ms. Averette noted that if parents have further questions on school practices, they should call their respective schools or the county office.

Hairpieces Become Popular In Japan

By CHIKAKO YATABE
TOKYO (AP) — Hair on the heads of Japanese men may or may not be getting thinner, but the hairpiece business is doing well in modern Japan.

"I cannot declare that Japanese men have developed a tendency to have thinner hair," said Kazuhiko Ito, an executive in Art Nature, the country's biggest hairpiece manufacturer. "But compared with pre-war times, the number of youngsters afflicted with thinner hair has gained."

Ito said he thought this was a result of changes in diet and environment. "In other words," he said in an interview, "the Japanese turned to eating oily foods like butter and meat and this is believed to affect hair growth. They also live under great stress."

Supporting his views are sales figures showing the demand for hairpieces. Art Nature, founded in 1966, had sales of 3.5 billion yen (about $16 million) last year. Eight percent of the buyers were men in their 20s and 30s.

A 100 percent natural hairpiece sells here from 200,000 yen ($930) to 300,000 yen ($1,395). The company also sells lower-priced synthetic hairpieces. All are guaranteed for three years and designed individually under exacting examinations at company clinics.

Natural hair is imported from China and Southeast Asian countries.

"We need undamaged, straight, black hair," Ito said. "That of women in developing countries retains the best quality, fresh and strong, and in those areas the custom of selling hair continues."

Ito said a proper hairpiece has far-reaching results in many cases, often inspiring confidence in the wearer.

"We are just as happy as our clients when they acquire self confidence to propose marriage and hear it was successful," he said.

He added that all employees of his company who need a hairpiece use them.

"This helps show clients how it will look," he said.

Couple Recall Their First Food Stamps

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
BEARTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — Now that their 15 kids are grown, Chloe and Alderson Muncy have plenty of time to sit on the porch of their remote mountaintop home and watch the coal trucks roar past. And sometimes, between trucks, they recall their one brief fling with fame. "I don't know why they picked us," Chloe Muncy, a friendly, gray-haired woman, says. "We heard about the program and went down to Welch and signed up. Then, a few days later, they came around and started asking us questions."

"That's right," adds Alderson Muncy, known as "Poodle" to his friends. "I'd been cut off at the mine and we were getting commodities. After we signed up, they asked us if we'd be willing to come down to Welch for a celebration." The Muncys went to Welch on May 29, 1961. John Kennedy, stunned by the poverty he found while campaigning in southern West Virginia a year earlier, was the president of the United States. When the Muncys and their children — 13 of whom were still at home — arrived at Welch, they were greeted by Orville Freeman, Kennedy's secretary of agriculture, and a host of reporters. Freeman was in Welch to give a boost to a pilot food stamp program, one of eight such programs sponsored by the Kennedy Administration. The Muncys were the country's first food stamp recipients. "Since my husband wasn't working we got our stamps for free," recalls Mrs. Muncy. "After Mr. Freeman handed us our stamps, they took us over to a grocery. The reporters and television people went along and watched us spend them."

The Muncys still have vivid memories of that 1961 shopping trip. "We got $96 worth of stamps and I spent $20 even," says Chloe Muncy. "I can remember buying a gallon jar of apple butter for the kids." Mary Hale of nearby Darby also remembers. Mrs. Hale's family, which included her late husband, Elbert, and their eight children, were the nation's second food stamp recipients. And, they were the first family to pay for the stamps they received. Federal officials say the changes brought in some 3 million recipients, mostly aged or handicapped, while about 650,000 were weeded out. Congress this year authorized an additional $520 million to pay for the food stamp budget. One criticism often heard is that food stamps provide a "gravy train" for the shiftless. Chloe and Poodle Muncy, and Mary Hale, hardly fit that assumption. "We only got free stamps for a few months," says Mrs. Muncy, as she sits on the porch with her husband, now retired and in ill health. "We started paying for part of our stamps after my husband got a work relief job. Then, a few years later, he got a fulltime job with the state road department and we went off stamps altogether."

Mary Hale, whose husband died in 1964, says her family received the stamps for about a year. "After things got better and my husband went back to work, I wrote and said we didn't need the stamps anymore," she says. Mrs. Hale labored as a hospital seamstress and a store clerk after her husband's death. She now runs a small service station-carryout at Davy and has applied for a permit to accept food stamps at her store. "Personally, I would rather not have received food stamps," she says, "but they helped me feed my children during a time when there was no other choice. They helped us a lot, and they've helped lots of other people around here, too."

Mayor Also At Crossing

FARMERSVILLE, Calif. (AP) — The mayor of this small central California city has taken to the streets to help get children to school safely. No, he's not leading an initiative to put in sidewalks. He's a school crossing guard. Herb Jones, 66, a retired truck driver and mayor of Farmersville since 1974, puts in 1½ hours each school day at an intersection near city hall, helping children cross the street safely. The children come from their homes on both sides of the main street, Farmersville Boulevard. Some head east to an elementary school, while others attend the town's new junior high school. "Being retired, I haven't much to do and hang around city hall most of the day," Jones said. "So it's not much trouble for me."

Jones was among the first crossing guards hired by the district. He started work in January 1978. "It seemed to me like it was kind of hard for them to get anybody that wanted to work these few hours," Jones said. "It's kind of a pleasure for me to do it." It is not uncommon for the children to offer Jones flowers or candy on their way to school. There is no lobbying intended, just sheer friendliness, said Jones. "I meet these little guys on the streets during school vacations and it's a pleasure that they know me," he said. "You see a lot of people and it's never a lonesome job down there."

Called "grandpa" by some of the youngsters, Jones says he has them "pretty well trained" to wait for him before they cross the street and to keep within the crosswalk. "A few times someone won't stay between the lines, but I don't make a fuss about it," he said. "I always give them the benefit of the doubt."

City School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at Greenville elementary schools have been announced as follows:
Monday — Breakfast, pancakes, syrup, orange juice, milk; Lunch, chicken salad on lettuce, corn on the cob, green beans, sliced peaches, rolls, milk;
Tuesday — Breakfast, cereal, orange juice, milk; Lunch, hamburger, french fries, baked beans, milk;
Wednesday — Breakfast, bacon, toast and jelly, orange juice, milk; Lunch, chicken and pastry, steamed cabbage, sweet potatoes, rolls, milk;
Thursday — Breakfast, manager's choice; Lunch, battered-fried fish, french fries, cole slaw, cornbread, lemon pudding, milk;
Friday — Breakfast, orange juice, muffins, milk; Lunch, pizza, corn, tossed salad, milk.

Critics point to fraud and abuse over the years, and say the program has created a "welfare class" with no incentive to work. "The food stamp program was our ruin," says Rollo Taylor, Welch Daily News publisher. "I can't even get carriers these days." Others say food stamps have saved two generations of poor families. "I used to worry about children going hungry," says Grace Strain. "But I knew after we put in the food stamp program that no child would ever go to bed hungry in West Virginia." A recent study by the New York-based Field Foundation, which examines public policy, found food stamps had contributed to a significant reduction of malnutrition during the past 10 years. Under a complete revision of the food stamp law, effective early this year, stamps now are distributed free to eligible recipients and in many states they are mailed to the elderly, isolated, and people considered permanently impoverished. At the same time, the allotment of stamps to households with some income was slightly reduced, new limits on income were imposed and limits on assets like cars were tightened. And today all recipients who aren't handicapped or responsible for children under 12 — including college students or strikers — must actively seek work or lose their stamps. The changes were designed to meet long-standing complaints that the program wasn't reaching all the needy while millions were wasted on people with adequate incomes and ex-

Banks Are Slow To Save Energy

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of 290 banks has pointed up a lag in energy-saving programs, according to an industry publication. According to Energy User News, only 24 percent of the banks polled have launched formal plans to save energy, and another 13 percent have undertaken no energy conservation methods to date. The publication said only about 6 percent of the banks surveyed had reported having installed any kind of heat-recovery system. It reported the most popular low-cost, energy-saving measures included reduced illumination, conversion to low-wattage lamps, lowered hot-water heating temperatures and monitoring of ventilation systems.

On Thursdays, The Mayor Is Looking For Trouble

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer
EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — On Thursdays the mayor's office is empty. He's not hiding from trouble; he's out looking for it.

Carl Officer has turned the tables on mayoral tradition in order to meet the work-a-day people on their own turf. He plays troubleshooter — inspecting buildings, popping into shops or seeing to it that city police and fire crews are at their stations on time.

When he took office in May, Officer said it was the beginning of a new era for this blighted Mississippi River city where decades of political corruption, racial strife and wide-open crime have left it on the brink of collapse.

"This is the last shot at good government for the city," Officer says.

Occasionally, Officer will jump in a city police squad car and ride along on the graveyard shift, seeing first-hand the street crime that has made East St. Louis infamous.

When a band of citizens complained recently that some gas station operators were gouging them at the pumps, Officer went to see for himself. When he discovered station owners operating without business licenses, he closed them down and began a crackdown on unlicensed businesses.

Before Officer assumed the job, City Hall was so disorganized that no one bothered to collect license fees, or vending machine fees, or any of dozens of other fees.

"The city was $1.1 million behind just in sewer and refuse collection fees," an Officer aide says, noting the city has initiated a crackdown on the fees, including work-permit fees from city employees who live outside the city limits.

At 27, Officer is one of the nation's youngest mayors — too young to remember when East St. Louis was a bustling community of packing plants, smelters, rail yards, mills and prosperous businesses.

From its peak in the late 1950s, East St. Louis has fallen into virtual ruins; a city smothering in poverty, street violence and physical decay. It has become, by any standard, the epitome of urban disaster.

A predominantly black city of 50,000, with unemployment at about 60 percent, it has been something of a national bad joke for years. Officer says it's time: East St. Louis chucked its hellhole image and begin to rebuild.

In a switch from the past, when politicians promised citizens everything and delivered virtually nothing, Officer campaigned by promising very little except honesty and good management.

When he assumed the reigns of government, Officer inherited an estimated $15 million city debt — including two years of unpaid utility and telephone bills amounting to $2.7 million — and a disastrous public image.

Although he is a licensed undertaker, Officer doesn't plan to preside over a dying city.

He has no illusions of quick success. "You start at the beginning, with the basic essentials. No business in its right mind is going to move in here until we improve our police, fire and other services."

The new mayor has wasted no time. He began immediately by weeding out frivolous city jobs, such as that of a City Hall timekeeper who sat near the time clock and watched workers punch in and out.

By cutting 145 positions, he trimmed the biweekly payroll from about $400,000 to $235,000 during his first month in office.

For many years, political patronage was the city's "solution" to its monstrous unemployment problem. "The watchword was go to the mayor's office, you'll get whatever you want," Officer says.

He has resisted the temptation to pad the payroll. "We've got to get people back out into real jobs," he says. "They're so used to the old patronage system that they don't think they have to work."

Officer has long-range plans for restoring East St. Louis to its old position as one of the nation's vital rail hubs, but for now he's satisfied to concentrate on putting it back on its financial feet.

Perhaps the most convincing sign that he has made progress is the outrage he's caused among members of the old political regime.

But, Officer expected it and is prepared to defend himself. "You don't grow up in East St. Louis without being a street fighter," he says. "If they want to take me out in the alley, that won't bother me. I can handle myself."

Officer was raised in a prosperous family, natives of East St. Louis for many generations.

He worked at his father's funeral home and earned his mortuary science degree from Southern Illinois University at nearby Carbondale before graduating with a bachelor's degree in philosophy and political science from Miami University in Ohio.

After an unsuccessful bid for county coroner, he became an aide to Illinois Secretary of State Alan Dixon for two years.

Many who have studied the economic decline of this city say Officer's approach toward reconstruction — bolstering basic services and cutting out corruption — is the only realistic hope for saving it.

"How do you correct so many years of misuse of public funds? You have to start somewhere," says Robert Kassing, president of the First National Bank of East St. Louis, who is impressed by Officer's unusual work schedule and devotion. "A human being couldn't work any harder than he is."

Officer has instilled a new sense of optimism and confidence in the beleaguered business community, Kassing says. "Nothing here has changed materially, but there's a new attitude. It's optimism that I haven't felt before."

Despite the mountain of problems facing his city, Officer is quick to point out that it retains its natural advantage as a transportation center, with nine miles of riverfront and more interstate highway and rail access than any nearby city aside from sister city St. Louis, Mo.

Officer says the long-range key to rebuilding East St. Louis is to capitalize on those natural assets by stopping the outward flow of business and industry from the city. Without commerce in the area, the rail and waterway access is of limited value, he says.

A quick smile returns to Officer's face when he talks about the city's potential and the challenges he faces as its new mayor.

"It's fun," he says. "A challenge, sure. But, still fun. When it stops being fun, then I'll stop being mayor."

Scholarships Ease A Crunch

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite rising college costs — this year up 9 percent over 1978 — middle-income parents may find the burden of putting their children through college somewhat eased, says the head of an organization that tracks down sources of financial aid through a computer information bank.

"In addition to scholarships, some long-overdue relief is now provided by the passage of the Middle Income Assistance Act," says S. Robert Freede, president of Scholarship Search, which has been locating funds for students since 1972.

This marks the first time the federal government has offered economic aid to parents of college-bound youngsters where the parents' income does not exceed $25,000.

"It's a step that has been applauded by most student financial aid experts," agrees Mary Ann Maxin, financial aid director of the Student Assistance Council, a financial counseling group. "But the grant may not exceed $1,800 a year, an amount that doesn't cover half a year's tuition — even at state-supported colleges and universities where average tuition costs are up to $3,500 as opposed to $3,000 last year."

"Parents can make life easier on themselves," she advises, "by utilizing the new federal program along with a resource tool for locating scholarships."

More than 75 percent of the nation's college students are on some sort of financial aid package, according to Ms. Maxin. The typical package, she says, is one-third scholarship, one-third grant and one-third work-study.

Even so, Freede points out, much available scholarship money goes unclaimed.

"Last year a staggering total of $135 million in student financial aid went begging because parents didn't know where — or how — to look," says the previously retired businessman who founded Scholarship Search when he was confronted with the high cost of educating his own three college-age children.

"Today, when parents are hit with a nearly 10 percent increase per year in costs of a college education, that figure becomes even more alarming," he adds.

Most parents think that their children aren't bright enough — or poor enough — to qualify and consequently they just don't even bother to look for money, Freede explains. "But there's real gold there," he points out. "Scholarship are available for religious affiliation, union groups, major areas of study, professional associations."

While it does not guarantee that financial aid will be granted, the search group claims a success rate of 40 percent.

Food Field 'Rewarding'

BROTHER BAKER—Herman E. Zaccarelli, member of the Congregation of the Holy Cross, is director of Purdue University's Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management Institute. Brother Herman takes time out from his administrative duties to demonstrate how to turn out a batch of cookies in the cafeteria that provides on-the-job learning for students.

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Brother Herman E. Zaccarelli just might be described as a "heavenly chef."

The 48-year-old member of a religious order, the Congregation of the Holy Cross, is director of the Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management Institute at Purdue University.

The institute conducts seminars and training programs at Purdue and throughout the world for professionals in the hospitality-food service industry. "With the advancement of technology, it is important for personnel in these industries to constantly learn, unlearn and relearn every five years," says Brother Herman, who also works closely with undergraduates in the Purdue Department of Restaurant, Hotel and Institutional Management in the School of Consumer and Family Sciences.

"The explosive growth in the food-service industry means tremendous career opportunities," he points out. "Finding, training and motivating a whole new generation of skilled individuals in all areas of the business is a challenge the hospitality-food service industry faces today."

The director, who received the 1979 American Culinary Federation Award, has written numerous articles and books on food, including "Retirement Food and Nutritional Manual," prepared for older people and those on restricted diets. "We are doing some work with senior citizens, developing economical recipes for them using wine, which adds much to their nutrition," Brother Herman says. "As retirees, they have more time to prepare and enjoy food."

Brother Herman, who has been involved in cooking and other phases of food service since he was 13, likes working in the field, since it is "very creative work and you are dealing with people." He believes food is the symbol of the family.

A native of New Castle, Pa., he worked as a hotel bus boy while attending school and was later moved to the kitchen where, he says, he learned about food preparation. After finishing high school, he went to Washington, D.C., where he got a summer job in a restaurant. Then, in 1949, he joined the Congregation of the Holy Cross.

"I was motivated by the love of service to people and believed the congregation had the greatest service-oriented philosophy," he explains. "There is a greater emphasis on service to society, rather than to the institution."

"Members are more sensitive to the people by living in their style rather than in a monastery or special type of home. We live simply and the fruits of our labor are used toward human development. Our surplus salary is returned to the order and we can specify where we wish it to go."

Brother Herman is founder and former director of the International Food Research and Education Center in North Easton, Mass. He has served on the faculties of the University of Puerto Rico, Lansing College and, most recently, as visiting professor at the School of Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Management, University of Minnesota-Crookston.

He notes that today one out of three meals is eaten outside the home, and predicts that the trend will continue. He adds that the growing number of retirees will boost the hospitality industry, since they tend to travel more.

His own favorite foods are hamburger and spaghetti, even though he admits he has to watch his waistline. "When you prepare food, of course you taste once in a while," he says. "Any person who is involved in the culinary arts is conscious of his calorie intake. We try to prepare small amounts in the finest possible way to retain all of the food's basic nutrients."

With the increasing popularity of ethnic food, he foresees the establishment of more ethnic restaurants. At present he himself is taking a great interest in Chinese cooking, since the institute is planning two educational-cultural trips for hospitality and food-service personnel to the People's Republic of China in May and October 1980.

"We have a great deal to learn from the Chinese, who are culinary masters," he says. "And they will have the opportunity to learn from us."

"It is hoped that the trips will foster greater understanding and friendship between our peoples and nations, resulting in improved communications and an expanded exchange of knowledge."

Graveyard Yielding Evidence Of Ancient Past

By KEVIN MCKEAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In a desolate wasteland 70 miles north of Aswan in Egypt, dusty graveyards yield clues to how kings and commoners lived before the age of pharaohs.

Archaeologists say they have unearthed the oldest stone tomb in Egypt, with diggings near the ancient city of Hierakonpolis, capital of Egypt more than 5,000 years ago. The cemetery was first explored 44 years ago, but its importance was not appreciated.

The old cemetery had been looted over the centuries, and the first archaeologists to visit it found only pots and shards, mounds of gravel from grave robbers' shovels and a few human or animal bones.

Now, thanks to the work of a new Hierakonpolis expedition under archaeologists Walter Fairservis and Michael Hoffman, the significance of the site is beginning to come to light.

Archaeologists believe the cemetery was built around 3100 to 3200 B.C., before the dawn of the pharaohs. That would make the tomb, a rectangular pit cut 8½ feet into the sandstone bedrock, the earliest known example of Egyptian architecture in stone.

"According to all the texts, you're not supposed to have a rock-cut tomb this early. It's supposed to be mud brick. That's why this is important," says Thomas J. Logan, associate curator of Egyptian art at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Archaeologists also are exploring the possibility that another large grave in the cemetery, made from mud brick, may be that of Scorpion, an early ruler associated with irrigating the Nile Valley and forging the river into a vital spinal cord that would eventually unify Upper and Lower Egypt.

"Our interest in these early settlements led us back to the great looted graveyards. And it was in one of these cemeteries this year that we've identified what I believe is the prehistoric graveyard of the kings of Hierakonpolis," Logan says.

These kings were the direct antecedents of Menes, the legendary first pharaoh. According to Egyptian tradition, Menes, who came from Hierakonpolis, the capital of Upper Egypt, unified the country by conquering Lower Egypt and the Nile delta around 3100 B.C.

The early rulers who predated Menes were often little more than local chieftains. But they're of interest to archeologists because they laid the groundwork for the later Egyptian state.

But, says Hoffman, "The question remained, where were their tombs?"

He believes the answer lies among the 375 to 400 graves ranged along the bank of a dried riverbed near the ruins of Hierakonpolis.

The graveyard was first explored by Ambrose Lansing in 1935.

Lansing, sent to Egypt by the Met, was working only a decade after the spectacular finds of King Tut's tomb and the hidden tomb at Giza. But the Hierakonpolis cemetery yielded no treasures.

The Depression was raging then and archaeologists were under pressure to produce beautiful objects, such as Tut's. Lansing surveyed the barren landscape and wrote that further excavation might "wait until other more productive sites have been exhausted."

By 1969, Walter Fairservis of New York's American Museum of Natural History decided the time had come.

He and Hoffman surveyed the Hierakonpolis area, but political tensions kept them away until 1978 and 1979, when they returned with grants from the Smithsonian Institution, the Virginia Museum of Fine Art and Vassar College.

Hoffman says the stone-cut tomb was built when tombs were usually dug only to the depth of bedrock.

Instead, for the stone tomb, workers cut a 20-by-7-foot rectangle into the rock, and then hollowed out a yard-square inner chamber at the bottom, which may have contained some treasures. It was sealed with two great flat stones which remain in the tomb today.

"The shape of the tomb suggests later dynasties. It's the site itself that makes it seem early," says Logan. "Whoever was buried there was very important."

But, early grave robbers emptied the tomb thoroughly, and, unlike later tombs, it is not carved with the name of its builder. That's another evidence of its great age — it may predate writing.

Nevertheless, some evidence suggests another tomb in the cemetery was built by King Scorpion, known mainly from the "Scorpion macehead" which is pictured in many books on Egyptian prehistory.

The macehead, found by British archeologists at the turn of the century, shows a Hierakonpolis king in the ceremonial act of opening an irrigation canal. Near his head is the symbol of a scorpion.

Scholars believe it was the achievement of diverting the Nile that made possible intensive farming and the heavy settlement of the region. Although its exact age isn't known, the Scorpion macehead is believed to be the earliest evidence for this.

Scorpion's link to the cemetery comes from hieroglyphic graffiti in a cliff overlooking the cemetery. Most of the graffiti dates from a later period of Egyptian history known as the New Kingdom. But one of the marks is more crudely formed than the others, and Hoffman says scholars who have examined it agree it is much older.

The bottom half of the hieroglyph, Hoffman says, appears to represent a stylized palace facade, a traditional mark of royalty.

But the top half, though it has defied exact translation, has features remarkably like a scorpion, a possible link to the king.

The significance of the cemetery is that it shows the emerging concept of royalty, which the kings of Hierakonpolis were creating. The graves are laid out in order of wealth, with the richest persons nearest the king.

More excavation, Hoffman believes, should help show the origins of this social order, which formed the basis for later Egyptian society. He plans to return to Hierakonpolis next year to dig in the cemetery and in nearby settlements that should provide a picture of the life of commoners.

Meanwhile, Logan at the Met is preparing the records of the 1935 expedition for publication, a task Lansing never completed, and will visit the site in February.

"They've got a lot of virgin territory out there," says Logan. "A lot of it's been plundered, but there's a lot left to find."

Amphibious Planes Parked In A Desert

HEREFORD, Ariz. (AP) — Being hundreds of miles from any kind of water body, this town's airstrip would seem to be an unlikely place for a couple of obsolete, amphibious aircraft.

But that is exactly where two old Grumman Albatross SA-16 seaplanes are parked, with nothing to do except serve as strange, awkward-looking homes for desert creatures.

And the future of these giant planes — once used for military sea-rescue work — has been up in the air since their owner died several months ago.

Bob Bean had purchased the planes from the government's Military Aircraft Disbursal Center at Tucson's Davis-Monthan Air Force Base a few years ago. He had planned to sell them to the Antilles Flying Boat Corp. in the Bahamas.

Bean's death placed the ownership issue of the SA-16s in court, and left their reason for being in doubt.

But Bob Johnson, assistant director of the Pima Air Museum in Tucson, thinks the planes are worth fixing up, simply because they could still serve a foreign airline and are no longer in production.

For the planes to fly in the United States, Johnson says, numerous repairs and modifications would have to be made to bring them into compliance with Federal Aviation Administration rules.

Just sitting unused, the Albatrosses are rotting away, Johnson said. He added there was danger of each plane's pair of nine-cylinder engines freezing up, in addition to general decay of gaskets and rubber parts.

Terry Davis, Author Of 'Vision Quest'

A Young Writer Talks About His First Novel

Text And Photograph By Jerry Raynor

So often the joy of seeing one's work in print and on the bookstands of America follows a long stretch of waiting and hoping, after the hard work of writing is done.

This has been true for East Carolina University's Terry Davis, whose first novel, "Vision Quest," recently published by Viking Press in New York, is now appearing in book stores and on library shelves across the nation.

Important Skills

"I've learned from my experience with this novel that patience and tenacity are perhaps the most important of any skills in writing," Davis said in an interview this week.

Davis, who teaches creative writing in the English Department at East Carolina University, added "I've made a point of telling my students that good luck is something you have to work for. It doesn't just happen."

These are not the only skills a writer must develop. "Determination is important, that ability to keep at it, as well as a conviction that you must write."

Davis said it took him a long time to accept that "each writer must find his own voice, tell his own stories in his own way."

"It took me well over a year and a half to realize this, and knowing this is something I owe to a teacher I had at Iowa State University, Seymour Krum. He impressed on me that essentially you don't have to write like anyone else. That's when I woke up and found out that for me it was legitimate to write about the Northwest, about sports, cars, hunting, fishing, the things I knew best."

Before this awakening and getting himself on the right road to doing his own thing in writing, Davis acknowledges that his early writing efforts were "a terrible experience. In fact, I don't know how I managed to get into the Writer's Workshop there. The competition was terribly fierce, and what I produced was rightfully criticized as not being good writing."

Once Davis started writing about familiar things in his own voice, things began to happen. "I won a literary fellowship to Stanford University, which really surprised me."

First Successes

From this point Davis began achieving modest successes. "I had several things published in small magazines, mostly journalistic type work. Then I had an article accepted by 'Sports Illustrated,' which gave me a tremendous boost of confidence in myself."

With his formal education at Stanford behind him, Davis embarked on a teaching career. "When I was first out of college I taught at a school in Monroe, Washington, near the Cascade Mountains, teaching English and coaching wrestling."

Enjoys Teaching

This year marks the fourth year Davis has taught at

ECU. Like writing, he feels that teaching is in his blood. Even though he plans to take time off to finish a second book that is underway, Davis explained "I know I shall always want to teach, at least part time. To me it's unthinkable, a life without some teaching in it. Teaching inspires me, and I hope I inspire my students."

"One real satisfaction for me at ECU is that I sense many of my students have not been affected by the pretentiousness rampant in so much writing today. They have the ability to write well about things they are familiar with."

Davis mentioned two students whom he believes have excellent potential as young writers of regional promise. "Randy Stalls of Williamston is really a fine writer, and another student, Max Jarrell, from some town whose name I can't recall off hand, has written a superb biography of his mother. There are others too, and it makes me feel good to know they are in the mainstream of writing about things they are familiar with."

Background Used

Asked if the characters and scenes in "Vision Quest" were altogether fictional or based on known people and places, Davis said "it's a mixture of both. In real life my parent's aren't separated, and I'm definitely not Loudon of my book in one respect, I never had a live-in girl friend in the basement of my home. The geographic locales of the novel are very real, from my childhood. Instead of the once-only trip Loudon makes to his ancestral home in 'Vision Quest,' I spent every minute possible with my grandfather who lived on the Columbia River, and whose home and land was swallowed up in the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam. So that part is factual, not fictional, and its something I feel strongly about."

"My grandfather and I spent many times together hunting, fishing, or just roaming the land. Incidentally," Davis added, "all four of my grandparents are still alive and well. One of my grandmothers, at 81, still cooks for large groups of people."

Wrestling, a sport central to "Vision Quest" is also a natural for Davis as he wrestled during high school. "I was undefeated throughout my high school career, but," Davis qualified this achievement, "that was only because I was in a division in which I never had an opportunity to wrestle against state champions."

The Long Wait

When Davis finished "Vision Quest," he could not at the time fathom that a full five years would follow before the book finally made it to print.

"The first indication of interest was shown by Ted Solotaroff, who is now with Harper & Row," Davis remarked. "He's something of a Max Perkins of today. At that time he was with Bantam Books and bought the paperback rights. In fact, he bought books from three writers who were classmates of mine at Stanford."

The slow road toward publication received another boost from Pat Ryan. "Pat is now the editor of 'People's Magazine,' and she is the person responsible for first having excerpts from 'Vision Quest' published."

"It was Pat too who introduced me to my agent, Liz Darhansoff, who worked all those years for practically nothing trying to get 'Vision Quest' placed."

"Looking back," Davis added, "I realize the extent of faith and conviction these people had in my book. I can't say it was wasted time, because in the process of waiting I made lots of friends, and that's made it all worthwhile."

"The basic problem was that at that time those in book marketing wouldn't touch a book on wrestling, especially one by an unknown author."

Recent Developments

When agent Darhansoff placed the book with Viking, it was assigned to editor Elizabeth Sifton. "She's now editor-in-chief at Viking," Davis noted.

Now that "Vision Quest" has been published in hardback, momentum is being generated which seems to assure the book of exposure to a widening circle of readers.

"The Bantam paperback edition is scheduled to go into print in October, 1980," Davis revealed.

"In addition, plans are being made for a European edition in English to be published in Great Britain by Chatto and Windus, publishers who have a worldwide distribution, and there's also plans for publication in French by the Gallimard publishing house."

Davis also mentioned "I have been approached with a tentative offer for television or movie rights, but this is something I'm considering without making any decision yet."

Wife May Assist

In preparing a translation into French, Davis said "I'll probably collaborate with Mariette on this." Mariette is Davis' wife, the former Mariette Givoiset of Dijon, France. "We met in Iowa when we were both students there," Davis explained. "Our son, Pascal, named after his grandfather, is now 14 months old."

Mariette is also a writer, and a scholar in French. Currently, she is teaching at a college in Virginia.

Future Plans

"Mysterious Ways" is the tentative title Davis has given his second book, "which is quite different from 'Vision Quest.' Its a much more challenging book."

"Viking has already bought the book, and I want time to finish it. I also feel it time for me to get back to my roots in Spokane, (Washington) for a while. As I said earlier, I will never get away from teaching, but at this point I need time for the book and a temporary change."

This will mean Davis' departure from ECU at the end of this school year.

For the more distant days ahead, Davis expressed a desire perhaps fostered in the hearts of all writers. "I want to try to become a part of American literature. If I can do this, I know that I will have to go along with my one major strength in writing, and that is simplicity."

NOVELIST DAVIS . . . Terry Davis — complete name Terrance Albert Davis — is a 33-year old writer finishing his fourth year as a faculty member in the English Department at East Carolina University. Davis' first novel, "Vision Quest" has been published this month by Viking Press of New York.

A Review

A Hopeful Look At America

Vision Quest By Terry Davis. New York, Viking Press. 1979. 197 pages, $8.95.

"Vision Quest," a first novel by Terry Davis, takes place in the American Northwest of today. It is a hopeful look at America, that expresses the author's belief that "we can live liberately, we can fight to keep our bodies healthy, we can fight to acquire greater knowledge, we can fight to enlarge our capacity for compassion."

It is also a book by a born storyteller, who can create lovable and engaging characters and present their doings in a way that has both humor and insight.

Specifically it is the story of Loudon Swain of Spokane, Washington, 18 years old and nearing the end of his career as a champion high school wrestler. Loudon is, as Davis puts it, "at the edge of adulthood," wondering where he'll go next. Many authors have dealt with this figure — J. D. Salinger in "Catcher in the Rye" and Booth Tarkington in "Seventeen" are just two famous examples from the past. But Davis presents him convincingly as a person of the 1970's, which means different from the earlier versions.

Technically, Loudon has no innocence left to lose, as Salinger's and Tarkington's heroes did. Loudon has a live-in girl friend, Carla, who ran away from her family in Chicago. He has a night job at a hotel, which is an education in human oddity. He and his pals have been trying just about everything, ever since junior high school.

He is, however, youthful in the classic sense of slipping back and forth between adult perceptions and childish silliness of behavior every now and then. Loudon knows all about the "goofish aspects" in himself and his friends — like the fellow-wrestler Sausage who can at times be superb as a flutist in a dance combo and other times be what Loudon calls "just a dumb kid like the rest of us."

Loudon is also youthful in the eternal sense of not yet being seriously divided within himself, torn by conflicting desires and beliefs. He is totally devoted to his vision of being the best wrestler he can possibly be. He is utterly willing to pay the price of pain his goal demands. (Besides trophies on the shelf, Loudon has two cauliflower ears, a partial plate, and regular nosebleeds to show for his wrestling.) He starves himself down to a weight where he can take on the rival star wrestler of another school. Loudon knows he can win over the other if he only tries hard enough. Then when high school is past, he believes, he can go on to win in life the same way. Optimistically he says, "I thought that in a few months the greatest time of my life would be over and I'd have to go somewhere and become more responsible and make a new time the greatest of my life."

Loudon doesn't yet know exactly what that next stage of life will be. At the end of his high school days, his life is a search for something new to devote himself to, a kind of "vision quest." The book's title comes from American Indian lore, and refers to a rite of maturing, which Loudon's half-Indian friend Kuch undergoes. Throughout the novel, Loudon is just beginning to get hints of a new vision, of a life beyond high school — from his wide reading, from his writing of a high school thesis, and from observing the lives of older people in his family.

He gets some hints that the vision has its dark side. Loudon knows of his mother's years of illness and pain, then of his father's loss and change when a new doctor cured Loudon's mother and she went on to a new life and a new man. Above all, there is a symbol in the Northwestern landscape itself, the creation of Lake Roosevelt by damming the Columbia River. Loudon's grandparents lost their farm, and their way of life, when that "progress" was decreed from a far-off bureaucratic tower. He got to see the lost rich land and the rushing river once in childhood, when the lake was being drained. If there's anything in life that Loudon hates, it's the monumental pile of concrete that submerged the farm and river, the Grand Coulee Dam.

But Loudon is young enough to be unaware of the ultimate invincibility of Time and Change, these twin opponents who have to be wrestled as a team. He finds faith in himself and life constantly at hand. After seeing the movie "Jesus Christ Superstar," for which he has an adolescent's craze, he says in a key passage of the novel: "I began thinking about Mom and Dad and another year going by and all the possibilities. A person sure doesn't have to be a great athlete or doctor or artist or entrepreneur or performer of any type or degree of greatness to find challenge in life. About half the time I think it's a great victory just to be able to smile semiregularly, to keep your head up, to keep from giving in and getting mean. I'm not ashamed to admit I need regular transfusions of confidence to keep me going. I need some examples that remind me, by God, it can be done."

The book ends with Loudon going into his last great wrestling match feeling that "through me flows the power to blast Grand Coulee Dam to smithereens." So how can he lose?

The success of Terry Davis in "Vision Quest" is that he isolates and captures in words this one fluid moment of youth, with the strengths of maturity but not yet its defeats, with intensity and devotion uncompromised, a time when any goal seems attainable. The pleasure of the reader is to share this moment of youth and strength and vision with Loudon Swain.

'The Last Africans'

The Last Africans. By Gert Chesi. Rizzoli International. 240 Pages. $40.

Like an archaeologist digging for the remains of lost civilizations just ahead of the developer's bulldozers, Austrian photographer Gert Chesi set out to document the lives and rituals of a dozen or so African tribes before they became engulfed by modernization.

The culture and traditional life style of the Ashanti, Bororo and other tribes photographed by Chesi aren't dead yet, but their purity is threatened by the approach of so-called civilization, and Chesi's magnificent photographs may well become their epitaph.

Although the title of the book is "The Last Africans," Chesi has focused his efforts on somewhat less than the entire African continent, concentrating mainly on West Africa, but this in no way detracts from the richness of his material — or its poignancy.

For this is indeed a chronicle of the twilight of once-vibrant societies facing cultural annihilation in much the same way as the traditional Indian societies have disappeared from North America, and the Amerindian cultures of Amazonia are being destroyed by the relentless march of "development" and its twin brother, "national integration."

Unlike many of today's picture books, this one is not just a pleasure to look at, but also includes an interesting text explaining the cultural background of the rituals and architectural styles explored in the photographs.

But it's an irritation well worth putting up with if one wants to take what is probably a last look at these simple yet immensely complex civilizations.

The one irritant in this otherwise splendid book is the arrangement of the picture captions in bunches either before or after a group of photographs, so that the reader has to constantly refer back-and-forth from pictures to captions to understand what is before him. And to make things even worse, some of the photo pages are not numbered, while the captions refer to page numbers, forcing the reader to go back to the last numbered text-page, and then start counting through the picture pages.

Autograph Party Set

William Shires, Director of the East Carolina University News Bureau, has announced that an autograph party has been scheduled on campus honoring Terry Davis.

The event will take place between 2 and 4 p.m. on Wednesday, October 31 at the Student Supply Store in Wright Building.

The public is invited to attend and to meet Davis, whose first novel, "Vision Quest," has just recently been published by Viking Press. Copies of the book will be available for purchase.

Underground Home Cuts Energy Use

UNIQUE DESIGN SHOWS 3 BEDROOMS, 2 BATHS

By Jerry Bishop

Oriented to a southern exposure, the Quailbush, a three bedroom contemporary, enjoys an underground design with plenty of natural light. Its pre-stressed concrete roof is shielded by two feet of earth, a highly effective insulator that keeps winter cold out, warmth in. Walls on three sides are of 8" poured concrete, and chimneys are included for both fireplace and wood stove. Besides its desirably low energy consumption, however, the Quailbush also boasts an excellent floor plan that combines large rooms, open planning, and an efficient traffic pattern. Vertical siding and small-paned windows mark the south-facing facade. Entry is across the protected patio and through sliding glass doors to the family room.

enough to accommodate a variety of activities, the family room, living room, and kitchen form a sizable area of free-flowing space. A snack bar serves to tie the rooms together and adds informal dining space as well. Behind the kitchen, the large utility room shows space for laundry equipment and storage. Three bedrooms are included in this design. The front-facing master bedroom stretches more than 15 feet and boasts wardrobe closets, linen closet, and private bath. Closets are equally plentiful in the other bedrooms, and the second bath features double vanities. Also provided is a double garage with direct entry to the kitchen area for convenience.

Decorator Showhouse Is Unlikely To Shed Finery

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

A decorator showhouse is a bit like a short-running Broadway musical. A lot of people go to a great deal of expense and trouble. But after a brief public showing, all the finery has to come down. And the house goes dark. That's the way it usually is. But a showhouse with a difference has opened in New York City. This time when the public fund-raising ends Nov. 4, the house will not shed its decorative finery as usual.

Instead, most of the furnishings will remain and the house will open as a residence hotel for the parents of children being treated for cancer and related diseases in New York hospitals. All the proceeds from ticket sales during the public show will be turned over to the Children's Oncology Society of New York which will operate the house. More than 35 decorators have donated their time to convert an elderly, double brownstone building, which formerly housed a convent, into a cheerful, stylish setting that features 26 bedrooms, as well as a large kitchen and dining room, lounges, a playroom for children, and an outdoor garden and playground.

"We asked the designers to create a context that says, 'Come in; we love you. There are people here who care for your child,'" said Suzanne Jeffers, chairman of the Children's Oncology Society. The lovely setting is a distinct plus for the house. But, regardless of decor, the facility would be fully used. New York hospitals treat more than 900 children a year for cancer and leukemia and many of them come from far away. Parents who bring their children for treatment have had to sleep in hospital corridors or on chairs in a child's room and to eat out of vending machines. Many have not had access to costly hotel rooms in the city, said Ms. Jeffers.

colony Society, the existence of such houses makes it possible for some children to be treated on an outpatient basis instead of in the hospital. "These houses can change the way we provide compassionate care for families and children with cancer and other chronic diseases," he said. Parents who stay at the house will make arrangements through a participating hospital's social-service department and will be asked to pay $10 a day a family, if they can afford it. Each family will be able to use the large new kitchen to cook for itself. Credit for the idea of such a house goes to Fred Hill, a former football player with the Philadelphia Eagles. He observed the need for such a facility while his daughter was being treated for leukemia at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We had aluminum siding put on our house a few years ago. It has taken on a dirty appearance, probably because we live fairly near a utility company whose stacks are constantly emitting smoke of some kind. I have tried hosing it down. It took off some of the dirt, but there are still stains in some places. Someone told me to use a detergent, but I am afraid that it will take off the paint, which seems to be in good shape. What's the answer?

number of letters have come in asking for similar advice. The answer is that stains on marble, like stains on anything, are different and yield to different treatments. If you know what caused the stain, go to a marble dealer, tell him what the item was and ask for the proper cleaning compound. If you do not know what it was, either buy two or three types of cleaners or see if the dealer sells a marble-cleaning kit. Also, you must resign yourself to the fact that, with an especially stubborn stain, you might have to have the top repolished professionally. For you and for anyone else who has a table or anything made of marble: do yourself a favor and buy a paste wax suitable for use with that product. Wax the marble once or twice a year and then, if anything is spilled on it, the odds are that it can be wiped away easily.

A. — The information you got was correct. First try a mild detergent. If that doesn't do the job, get some trisodium phosphate and follow the directions on how to mix it. Scrub only as hard as necessary to remove the stains. The paint is not likely to be affected unless you have to repeat the chore every month or so. One way to avoid the use of a detergent and a scrubbing brush is to hose down the siding periodically before the grime has a chance to set.

Q. — We have a concrete patio at the back of our house. Some small cracks have developed in the floor over the past couple of years. They never bothered us until recently, when moss began to grow in the cracks. What causes this and what can we do about it?

The problem is not unique to New York. It has occurred in every city where there is a hospital providing special cancer care for children. In response to the situation, residences for use by parents have been established in a number of cities. Although the New York house is the first to be refurbished by decorators, it is the 10th such facility in the United States. All are located near hospitals that treat children who have cancer in the cities of Philadelphia, Chicago, Denver, Atlanta, Palo Alto, Calif.; Birmingham, Ala.; Pittsburgh, Boston and Cleveland.

Hill and the Eagles enlisted the aid of local McDonald's restaurateurs to help open the first house in 1974. The second was opened in Chicago. As information about the program spread, interest was fanned in other cities. Today, houses are existing or contemplated in 40 cities. Before such a house can become a reality, a hospital must support the program and an organization of unpaid volunteers must agree to take responsibility for operating the house.

Fire Hazard In Faulty Stoves

FAULTY WOOD-BURNING STOVES FIRE HAZARD
NEW YORK (AP) — Faulty wood-burning stoves that have been installed in many homes to provide heat and reduce fuel costs have been responsible for destructive fires, warns the Insurance Information Institute.

The U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission reports that improper installation and misuse of wood-burning stoves are contributing to a growing number of home fires, injuries and deaths. The commission, fire-prevention officials, stove manufacturers and the insurance industry agree that an overwhelming number of the fires occurring could be prevented if simple safety rules on installation and use were followed.

Q. What should I add to leaves to establish a compost pile? How long will it take for the leaves to decompose? (E.W., Raleigh)

Q. Hundreds of these gray bugs are crawling on my porch, and under and in my house. What can I do? (A.A. Greenville)

A. Your premises are infested with the boxelder bug, which develops on the seeds of boxelder, maple and ash trees. You can spray outside of your house with diazinon or malathion. Vacuum or sweep up the bugs indoors. Do you have a female boxelder tree in your yard? If so, and you have a boxelder bug problem year after year, you may want to remove the tree. (Jim Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. When should dahlia bulbs be dug and how should they be stored? (D.N., Cary)

A. The best time to dig dahlia bulbs is in the fall after the dahlias have stopped blooming and before the first frost. Cut off the main stalk one inch above ground level. Knock off the dirt and let the bulbs dry for a few hours. Then store the bulbs in a cool, dry place. The ideal temperature is between 35 and 40 degrees. The goal is to prevent the bulbs from drying out and at the same time to prevent them from staying so moist that disease and rot set in. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. Every year my tomato vines produce green fruit and then die. What is the problem? (P.K., Gibsonville)

A. I suspect bacterial wilt, but I'm only guessing. Take a dying plant to your county extension office for diagnosis. If your plants are all gone this year, plant the Venus or Saturn variety next year for part of your crop. They have resistance to bacterial wilt. (A.A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

The term "water resistant" is sometimes interpreted to mean waterproof. This deduction, completely erroneous, is most often made with adhesives.

When you read on an adhesive container that the product is water resistant, it means just that and nothing more. Anything that is water resistant resists water. It doesn't prevent the passage of water under certain conditions. When the label says waterproof, it means water cannot get through even if the glued item is placed in or left in water.

Perhaps the best known waterproof adhesive is resorcinol glue, used in the construction and repair of wooden objects exposed to the elements and most especially in the manufacture and renovation of boats. The glue comes in two parts — powder and liquid — which are mixed immediately before use. It is a very strong adhesive, most effective when applied in temperatures of 70 degrees Fahrenheit or higher.

The new "super glues" or cyanocrylates come close to being waterproof, but still fall into the water resistant category. They are, however, more water resistant than most other adhesives in that class. They must be used with great care and are most effective on non-porous materials, which makes them less than ideal for wood.

Epoxy adhesives are waterproof. Since they are available in different formulations affecting their hardening times, always read the label carefully to be sure you are buying what you want. They are mixed just before using and are strong, tough and versatile. Also waterproof are such adhesives as cellulose and acrylic and those used for caulking around the top of a bathtub, mending fiberglass and sealing masonry. The popular polyvinyl acetate glue, generally known as white glue, is excellent for many purposes around the house, but is not waterproof and generally not water resistant. If those qualities are not required — and in the majority of cases, they are not — it is an economical adhesive.

For Use Of Insignia, Seventy Firms Aid Olympics

"We outfit the Olympic athletes and we end up serving ourselves as well."

—John Houck, Levi Strauss & Co.

By MICHAEL SHALIN
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Big business has invaded amateur athletics in a big way. The merger is making the picture much brighter for United States Olympic athletes. The United States, unlike most nations, does not provide government subsidies to send its athletes to the Olympic Games every four years. U.S. teams for both the Winter and Summer Games depend on private funding and the contributions of major corporations to meet a heavy expense burden.

In addition to its general fund drive, the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) enters into agreements with certain major companies, trading the Olympic symbol (for advertising purposes) for the money the company will contribute to the cause.

"We offer the Olympic insignia to the corporations for specific products," says Bill Campbell, assistant to the director of corporate participation for the USOC. "There is only one product per category (the USOC will come to terms with one clothes company or one shoe company) and once the company is set it has exclusive advertising privileges through Dec. 31, 1980."

Campbell says the USOC offers a three-part plan to the individual company, with two parts of the plan going for $50,000 each and the third for $200,000. If a company decides to take all three, it would be in for $300,000, "but many are in much higher than that," Campbell says.

"The first option is a tax deductible contribution of $50,000 that entitles the company to the advertising identification," he adds. "The second is an additional $50,000 that allows for the corporate trade promotion and the third involves the consumer promotion and goes for $200,000."

"Certain companies, like Levi Strauss, Coca Cola and Toyota are in the million-dollar bracket — if not in products then in services rendered (Goodyear Tires for Olympic vehicles, etc.)."

Obviously, the companies involved in this program aren't in it merely because of an undying love for amateur athletics or the desire to see the Americans excel against the best of the world's athletes. The sincerity is no doubt there, but business is also business.

Toyota, which will supply the vehicles to both the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., (in February) and the Summer Games in Moscow (in July), ran a promotion last year during which a percentage of money from all cars sold went to the Olympic program. The promotion proved successful.

"My guess is that 150,000 people who would never have walked through the door came into our showrooms because of the offer to contribute to the U.S. Olympic team," says Paul Howell of Toyota.

And this type of thing is going on in more than 70 companies, double the total that contributed to the 1976 Olympic cause. The amount of money produced by these companies has gone from some $4 million in 1976 to a projected figure of over $9 million for 1980.

"We've been involved in the Olympics since 1928 and are in this for two reasons," says Frank Stansberry of Coca Cola. "It's an investment we make, No. 1, to support the Games and, No. 2, to acquire for the company the identification of such an internationally popular event."

"We have never denied that we are out for the Coca Cola Company. There is no doubt that our idea is to promote sales. But our involvement in the Olympics is a considerable one."

Coca Cola and its Fanta Orange soda will be the soft drinks sold at both the Winter and Summer Games. The company will also provide the soft drinks for officials, athletes and media.

"I think this an excellent way to merchandise our product," says Stansberry. "We realize the potential in being involved with such a program is great."

American athletes at both Games next year will be wearing Levi's. Levi Strauss & Co. is developing an entire line of Olympic Sportswear and will furnish each athlete at the Winter Games with a sheepskin coat to guard against the sub-zero climate of upstate New York.

"We are providing virtually everything the athletes will wear," says Levi spokesman John Houck. "From the time they (the athletes) leave home, to the opening ceremonies, to the victory stand. We are supplying jeans, luggage, socks, Western hats and other wearing apparel."

"We are also outfitting 23,000 Russians who will be working at the Games. They'll all be wearing Levi's Jeans."

Houck admits to the financial advantages that can be attained by the individual company in a situation like this. He also knows the company is leaving itself open for charges of corporate greed.

"We entered this thing knowing there was a huge potential for abusing it," says Houck. "But I really think it has gone well. We take this thing very seriously. We have worked with the athletes and are really going all out to outfit these kids. It's a challenge to our organization and everybody is doing their best work. We really do believe in the Olympics and in athletic excellence."

"We're also getting commercial benefits from the thing. The team looks great and we end up serving ourselves. We definitely have both in mind."

Houck says the Olympic program at Levi has mushroomed in the two years he's been involved. He says that the company will also outfit the Australian teams at both Games.

"The American teams in international competition have always been at a disadvantage," he says. "We have never had a national costume. We are trying to establish Levi's as America's national costume."

"But a program like this has all kinds of outgrowth. Everything gets into the Olympic kind of mold and connecting programs spring up all over the place."

Gillette has been with the Olympics since 1956. This time around the Gillette people are in for almost $9 million, over $300,000 directly to the team and the major cost in advertising and promotion campaigns. The company scoffs at any mention of corporate motives generating the interest.

"I suppose it's fashionable to be cynical when big companies run promotions like this," says Gillette spokesman Joe Marino, whose company will also give a razor to each athlete and member of the media. "But do we need the Olympics to sell the Atra razor? It's helpful but we don't need it. We don't have to try and grab onto a shirttail like the Olympics to sell our product."

"Our association with the Olympics goes back to 1956. That year we donated 10 cents from every razor sale to the U.S. team and the promotion helped us sell 1-1/2 million razors. It also raised $36,000 and helped charter a fourth plane which carried the team to Melbourne, Australia."

Marino says his company has spent (or is in the process of spending) in excess of $300,000 for the right to use the logo, $6 million for media coverage (prime time advertising runs about $100,000 per 30 seconds) and $2-1/2 million on promoting the whole thing.

"We are involved with the Olympics pretty heavily," he says.

Another company involved, but in a different way, is Burger King. The hamburger empire — which will not get official logo endorsement because McDonald's already has the fast-food endorsement — is donating $2 million to support the new Olympic training facilities in Squaw Valley, Calif., and Colorado Springs, Colo.

Burger King will sponsor various promotions over the coming months to raise monies for support of the centers. There will be sales of limited edition Olympic prints as well as an auction of Leroy Nieman Olympic paintings designed exclusively for the company.

"The Burger King involvement does not end with financial sponsorship," says E.C. Schoenleber, Burger King executive vice president and director of marketing. "We have created programs to build Olympic excitement and involvement by allowing everyone to become a part of the training centers' goal. Because our restaurants are a visible, working part of thousands of American communities, we have the capability and enthusiasm to make that goal a reality."

The list of Olympic supporters continues to grow as the Winter Games near. A company to provide for nearly every need of an Olympic team is on the roster.

There's Baskin-Robbins supplying the ice cream, Dannon the yogurt, Schlitz the "Lite" beer, U.S. Squibb the vitamins, Revlon the cosmetics, Lipton the soup. There's even Associated Mills supplying the showerheads and water messengers.

The program has grown beyond even the USOC's greatest expectations.

"We are trying to meet our goal of $9 million," says Campbell. "We are close to it and will attain it later this year. The whole thing is going well."

Rec. Dept. Classes Set

State Street A Mess: Being Turned Into A Mall

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor
CHICAGO (UPI) — Hardly anyone in Chicago would argue that State Street, their great street, is a mess.

That includes the merchant princes of State Street. They helped make it a mess. Only, they insist, to turn it back into a queen.

Along with real estate developers, the city's financial powers, and the clout of City Hall, they have conspired to turn one of the most celebrated shopping streets in America into a nine-block stretch of rubble.

The result, the conspirators say, will be broad and shady sidewalks, a street closed to traffic other than buses, sparkling new buildings, a pleasant mall and an end to the cacophony and junkiness of which State Street has become a victim.

But right now the street is a mess.

State Street is the main stem of what has been known as the Loop since the greater part of Chicago's financial and merchandising district was encircled by a loop of elevated train tracks early in the century.

The Loop is still the city's essential core. But it is struggling.

This was a walk down the east side of State Street on a rush hour evening:

—Wacker Drive: Sidewalks are cracked. People wait for buses seven to 10 deep.

—Lake Street to Randolph: There is a stretch of new parquetry walk, but most of the sidewalk is blocked off. Littered ditches along the side. Curbstones a shambles.

—Randolph to Washington: Sidewalk is pocked with empty caissons, waiting for trees. Packing boxes are stacked along the way. Marshall Field, the dominant department store on State, seems to be roped off. Mannequins stare from the windows onto empty pavements.

—Washington to Madison: You have to walk a wooden plank from Charles A. Stevens clothing store to Wieboldt's department store. Shoppers must totter across wooden bridges to get inside.

—Madison to Monroe: Gaping pits waiting for new openings to the subway.

—Monroe to Adams: The sidewalk used to seem 20 feet wide. Now it appears little more than 5 outside the venerable Palmer House hotel. One is tempted to walk in the street but is warned off by signs saying "watch out for buses."

—Adams to Jackson: Pigeons ramble with freedom where humans cannot go in fenced off areas.

—Jackson to Van Buren: Heavy yellow construction vehicles block the pavement. There is no way to get across Van Buren without a detour into the middle of State Street.

"The end justifies the means," said Charles Gardner, executive director of the State Street Council.

His boss qualified Gardner's ends and, perhaps, the means.

"Without the north Loop development and the south Loop development, the State Street mall isn't worth the powder to blow it to hell," Arthur Osborne said. "We must have affluent people at either end to make this work."

Osborne is chairman of the State Street Council and an executive vice president of Marshall Field. He must answer for a good deal of whatever happens, or will happen, to State Street.

The scheme will not work, he said, unless the Hilton Hotel Corp. goes through with its plans to build its flagship hotel on the Loop's north end and a planned development of condominiums takes off to the south.

The Hilton plan is to build a sprawling hotel and convention center starting on State and Wacker and stretching two blocks west. A lot of that depends on civic plans to tear down a seven square block area of the north Loop. Tearing up State Street is part of this.

And, on the South end of the Loop area is planned the Dearborn Park project, a condominium with units going for up to $135,000 apiece. Gardner said it appears already a success, with 80 percent of the units sold.

clean up the movie houses and the violence pictures they are presenting. We need to get legitimate theaters on this street.

"It is still that great street — the greatest merchandising street in the world. We want to make it a more pleasant place to shop in the inner city.

"We don't want it to become like Euclid Avenue in Cleveland or downtown Detroit."

Even before its face-lifting began a year ago last June, State Street was at best a desiccated beauty.

Certainly, Marshall Field still stood as the street's splendid anchor in the solid block between Randolph and Washington. Right down the street is Carson Pirie Scott & Co., the creation of famed architect Louis Sullivan and possibly the most beautiful department store in the world.

Walk on down and you will have Henry C. Lytton, Charles A. Stevens, Peacock's, Wieboldt's, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Baskin, Goldblatt's — all noble stores — and many more of the same.

Gardner boasted, "There is no competition for State Street because no one can today build anything that is anywhere near as architecturally significant as State Street.

"There is nowhere as large as State Street that can offer the services, the selection and the price that State Street offers. There are hundreds of thousands of persons who pour into the Loop every day and State Street primarily is their main shopping outlet. There's nothing like it, really."

among the Loop's skyscrapers have contributed to major competition for State Street.

Just north across the Chicago River is "The Magnificent Mile" — glossy, fashionable and spacious North Michigan Avenue.

Stores there represent some of the most famous and expensive merchandisers in the nation. Women dress up before going to North Michigan to shop. They do not wear babushkas, as they might on State Street.

And, outside of town in the suburbs, there are vast shopping malls where all the top names — Marshall Field, Carson Pirie and the rest — have outposts. They are far closer than State Street to the people with plenty of money to spend.

"Snob appeal," Gardner said. "It's like country music. People may say they don't like it but they still listen to it on the radio. The people still come to State Street.

"You've got to realize when you walk down State you're in a construction area. It's the largest single downtown revitalization program in America. When this thing is over, everybody around here will sit back and say, 'Phew!'

"If you get around to some of the other major cities where they have undertaken major revitalization projects you'll find that when they entered into them they already had lost most of their mass of shoppers downtown. It's sort of like locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen.

"Most times, in cities around the country, they had let the areas go. You should see parts of 42nd Street in New York. When they failed, it was bad management.

"Whereas State Street has 98 percent occupancy. We started out with a lot of things plus on our side. Our sales have not been generally off — about 1 percent as opposed to the first quarter last year. That is faced."

Perhaps it is like the song "On State Street, that great street, street, street."

"I just want to say: 'They do things they don't do on Broadway.'" other than buses, and have broad sidewalks and a pleasant mall. (UPI Photo)

Distilled Water Lacks Minerals

With all the impurities in the air and water, wouldn't it be best and safest to drink only distilled water? — Mr. G.T. Mo.

Dear Mr. T.:

Distilled water is pure water. When water is heated to boiling, the vapors are then collected and condensed back into water. By this process, bacteria and other contaminants are removed. Unfortunately, this distillation process also removes many of the valuable minerals that the body needs. For those people who want to use distilled water, supplemental minerals must be added to the diet to insure a proper mineral balance so essential to good health.

Unfortunately, the contamination of our streams and reservoirs has not been adequately handled by city, state and federal agencies. Whenever there is an outcry about the persistent contamination, legislators seem to be aroused just long enough to make a political speech, advocating great changes. If there is sufficient pressure, tentative plans are drawn up for the elimination of such contamination. We are promised cleaner air and cleaner water in the very near future. And that "near future" could be 10 years from now. It is inconceivable that the chemicals poured into our streams, rivers and lakes — and into our atmosphere — cannot be stopped now.

It is because of this neglect that all of us must seek water that is relatively pure.

Urban Living Interest Up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Life in the city may become more attractive than suburban living in the 1980s, a recent study indicates.

The prediction, made by William C. Lichtenfels, president of Emhart Industries, Inc., is based on a survey made for his company by seven experts in the fields of architecture, urban planning, sociology, economics, energy planning, electronics and attitude analysis.

The new interest in urban living was attributed mainly to energy, economics and demographics, he said.

Lichtenfels said that while 24 million people added to the population during the '80s would require, minimally, 20 million new homes, the cost of new homes, combined with smaller families, was making the three-bedroom suburban house obsolete.

With the cost of buying and maintaining a single-family home increasing twice as fast as the average family's ability to handle it, only one of four families will be able to buy a house.

Unmarried heads of households, plus the 29 million senior citizens in the '80s and the trend toward wives going to work also are strong forces accelerating the move to the city, he said.

During a recent examination it was found that I have a cyst in the left lung. The doctors do not feel that I should have it removed. I don't think they're telling me the truth. I think it's a cancerous growth and that they feel it's hopeless to operate on it. — Mr. B.E.W., Calif.

Dear Mr. W.:

Cysts in the lung are not cancerous. Usually they are considered birth abnormalities. Sometimes these cysts are acquired later in life. They rarely cause symptoms, unless they become so enlarged that they put pressure on the surrounding organs. When they do, surgical removal is safe and successful.

You should gain great assurance from the fact that your doctors do not want to perform surgery on you. Certainly, if they believed your condition was cancerous, some form of treatment would have been started. Surgery, X-ray therapy and chemotherapy would have been advised.

The fact that your doctors are not pursuing this should give you the assurance that you need. It is understandable that people are concerned about any kind of growth in the lung. But there comes a time when the doctor's reassurance must be accepted, and anxiety relieved.

Weaves His Long Novel

JOHN BARTH

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Writing fiction reminds novelist John Barth of knitting a pair of argyle socks. Barth, a tall, amiable man, slips at a glass of mineral water, then explains: "I like to tell stories. I'm a novelist by temperament, and I like elbow room. In doing fiction, like those socks, you have a lot of threads going and you have to weave them all together. That's the trick, weaving them all together." Barth's latest novel, "LETTERS," takes 772 pages for the threads to be woven into a whole. The 49-year-old Barth, who won a National Book Award in 1973 with "Chimera," a volume of novellas, smiles and says: "Generally, I like short novels. But, just as some countries are larger than others, so some objects demand to be long objects, and "LETTERS" demanded to be 772 pages long. In my opinion, it should not be one page longer or one page shorter." The author of five novels and two books of short fictions — one of which contains what Barth calls "the shortest short story, it's 10 words long" — Barth continues: "Novels are my long suit. The other pieces, the short ones, are done as diversions. They are a relief from my curse — and my blessing — which is extended narration." Barth, who lives with his wife in Baltimore and teaches at Johns Hopkins University, describes "LETTERS" as "an epistolary novel, a novel told in the form of letters. "It was a great pop-art genre, but it became so popular that it wore itself out. By the end of the 18th century, the epistolary novel had worked itself to death. "Since practically no one writes letters any more — they use the telephone — I thought it a pleasant notion to write a great, big, fat novel that was seven correspondents writing exactly 88 letters.

"I also wanted to see if I could breathe back new life and vigor into the form, to see if its heart still beat."

Barth says it took him seven years to write the book. "It didn't matter to me how long it took," he says. "That's one of the blessings of having a base salary, you don't have to keep turning out books that are commercially viable in order to keep your standard of living from jeopardy."

"The ability to commit myself to a project and see it through is my blessing also. You hope your book will have a lot of readers, but if it doesn't you can still pay the grocery bill and the rent."

Barth, who has taught "since I reached the age of reason," says he sees no particular reason not to keep on teaching.

"I used to say that if my books ever made enough money for me to stop teaching, I would continue to teach anyway," he said. "Well, that day came, and I decided I didn't want to stop teaching."

"Besides, if I quit I would have to think about whether my next project is going to be profitable, whether I will be able to pay the bills. I don't have to think about that the way things are."

Barth teaches writing and literature and enjoys both. The first because it allows him to "give a little advice" to aspiring writers, and the second because it allows him to deal with students who don't aspire to be writers "but historians, or scientists, or sociologists."

He teaches in the afternoon, devoting his mornings to writing. Currently he is working on a "hypothetical television play. I started out to write, I thought, a story, but now I find that I am doing what seems to be a TV play. This addresses itself to my imagination. When I've finished I plan to do another novel."

Five areas determine efficiency of kitchen

What its owner described as an "old, awful kitchen" was transformed by a Certified Kitchen Designer into a cheerful red, white and blue room with a good work triangle. Now as efficient as it is effective, the kitchen has plentiful storage that serves specific needs. Convenient built-ins include toaster and can opener. Smooth surface cooktop has grill/griddle option.

Designers consider triangle, layout, work flow in planning

Does your kitchen have a total of at least 42 inches of counter to the left and right of the sink?

Does the refrigerator open to "landing space" for groceries alongside?

Is there work light above the range, sink and counters? If not, your kitchen isn't as efficient as it should be, according to the American Institute of Kitchen Dealers, whose members spend their time thinking about problems like these and finding solutions.

To be efficient, a kitchen must qualify in five areas: storage, work space, appliances, ventilation and lighting. And it must have a good work triangle.

Develop work triangle

In analyzing either a new kitchen or a remodeling, one of the first things a professional planner does is to develop the work triangle, meaning the distance from the refrigerator to the sink and the range.

The most efficient triangle isn't necessarily the one with the least steps. The best layout for work flow is to have the refrigerator at one end, the range at the other, and the sink in the middle, with not more than 22 feet nor less than 12 between the three.

Obviously the physical structure of a kitchen will determine its layout, thus its efficiency. There are four basic layouts.

1. The one-wall kitchen. This has limited counter and cabinet space, and no true work triangle.

2. The two-wall or corridor kitchen. While relatively efficient, problems do result from the interaction of "function-related" and "general" traffic: people working in the kitchen and people passing through.

3. The U-shaped kitchen. With continuous counter space on three sides, this layout has a well balanced work triangle that traffic doesn't disturb.

4. The L-shaped kitchen. This has the same advantages as the U-shape, and also allows for a dining table, work island or other activity center.

Appliance choice

Physical layout is not the only thing that makes a kitchen work properly. Appliance choice is important, as is the amount and location of storage.

Most professionals prefer the wall oven to one located below counter level. As one kitchen planner puts it, "our body mechanics are such that it's easier to work with a wall oven."

Wall ovens are helpful, too, because split units mean you can store things more efficiently. Food and utensils should be stored relative to function, either at the first or last point of use. Storing pots and pans below a wall oven makes sense.

As for refrigerators, kitchen specialists generally are partial to built-ins for both esthetic and functional reasons. Because they are designed to take quarter-inch facing, they can be covered with the same material as cabinets or walls, thus blending into the design of the kitchen. And because they are the same depth as cabinets, they don't impede traffic.

Cabinet choice

Choice of cabinets is, a matter of taste: some like wood, others prefer laminates. The important thing is to make sure there is adequate storage, including such special conveniences as a food file, roll-out drawers, bread box, tray and cutlery dividers, lazy Susans.

Lighting and ventilation, while again matters of preference as to the styling of fixtures and range hood, are essential areas where it's wise to seek the counsel of experts.

Does it cost more to retain a professional to design a kitchen, supply the components and supervise the installation? No, says the AIKD. It is the conventional way of working with a kitchen planner, and the only route for one of the do-it-yourself school.

Once this bay wall was a straight wall with two tiny windows. Now it's a dining area with big windows to let in lots of sunshine and afford a view from the sink. Greenery and baskets add to the decorative scheme.

Double oven is built into storage wall for canned and packaged goods, cookwares, cleaning supplies.

Normally you pay the professional for his plans, and if he becomes your contractor, this amount (which varies with the location and scope of a remodeling) is absorbed in the over-all cost of your kitchen. Should you change your mind and decide to have someone else install your kitchen, or to do it yourself, you will simply have paid for the plans. This makes sense, since the kitchen specialist—particularly one who is a Certified Kitchen Designer—can be likened to an architect or interior designer, either of whom commands a fee.

Appliances make convenient kitchen

A conventional / microwave oven combination cooks five ways: microwave only, microwave / conventional, conventional, microwave / broil, conventional broil. Appliance is available as double (pictured) or single unit.

Cook-and-clean center takes care of the cooking and the cleaning up. It combines continuous-clean oven, exhaust system, four-burner cooktop and energy-saving dishwasher with soft food disposer—all in 30 inches!

The world of kitchens is full of wonderful things.

Take appliances, for instance. You probably know about self-cleaning and electronic ovens, and about smooth surface cooktops. They've been widely advertised.

Are you aware of these other current conveniences:

- the indoor grill with built-in exhaust system

- the refrigerator that serves ice or ice water without opening the door

- the built-in food center that incorporates blender, mixer, knife sharpener, ice crusher, fruit juicer, shredder-slicer and meat grinder

- the range with warming shelf

- the cook-and-clean center that combines vent hood, oven, cooktop and dishwasher in only 30 inches of space

- the built-in or countertop microwave oven with variable controls that will defrost as well as cook

- touchmatic controls on cooktop, oven and microwave; control knobs are no longer needed; just touch the glass where the number appears to set cooking time and temperature

- the combination conventional / microwave oven that performs functions separately or simultaneously

- solid state electrical ignition coils on gas ranges in place of a pilot light, conserving gas

- the trash compactor that is installed beneath the countertop to compress and bag trash, for ease of handling and disposing

- the thermal magnetic cooking top, built into the counter, that utilizes the cooking vessel as the heating element, promoting easy cleaning and endless decorating possibilities

- the portable dishwasher with a cutting board as its top

- the instant hot water unit that attaches to any conventional sink

Some of these ideas may not appeal to you. Some may not be suited to your kitchen needs. Still, you ought to know about all the "news" before you remodel.

One way to find out about them is to visit the showrooms of local kitchen dealers. Any firm identified by the American Institute of Kitchen Dealers (AIKD) emblem has at least two complete kitchens on display, for this is a requirement of membership in the national trade group.

Good living is better than ever in '79!

Beautiful living space makes for beautiful good living and, whatever you want, it can be yours in your own lovely home! Today there is a growing trend toward self-expression through the home environment, picking those furnishings and accessories which best mirror not only your lifestyle but your personality.

Whether you tend toward modern, sleek contemporary lines and an uncluttered look, or toward cozy, warm rusticity, it can be yours!

Function is more important than ever, and multi-functional items are increasingly popular, as they make the most of limited space. But now, style shares top billing. Designers are zeroing in on the charm of living, in all of its aspects.

Modular is in, because most people have less space in their homes than they used to, with rooms smaller in the newer houses and apartments. Bulky furniture just does not contribute its worth in terms of the space it takes up.

Comfort first

But sleeker, more pared-down furniture lines do not mean a compromise on comfort. Just the opposite! Comfort is of primary importance this year as much as function.

Ease of upkeep is becoming more and more important, too. As more women are going to work and abandoning housekeeping as a full-time occupation, housekeeping has had to be considerably simplified.

Easier workload

Appliances that make cleaning and cooking ever easier are favorites of the harried housekeeper, whether or not she is a career woman.

And, as men pitch in more and more with the chores, the demand for mechanisms that simplify the various procedures involved grows even more greatly.

At the same time, there is a recognition that convenience alone is not enough. Fast-foods that are low on nutrition and flavor are being abandoned in favor of food that is easy to prepare, but flavorful and high on value.

Value is key

In fact, with all the appliances, furnishings and decorative accessories available this spring, value is the key word!

An item that is functional, space-saving, attractive and easy to keep looking its best is worth its weight in gold!

And appliances that minimize the labor necessary to maintain that dream home are the stars of the year.

Bounty of best

So, whatever your idea of good living may be, this is the time to make the most of it. The stores are overflowing with the best merchandise in years—a bountiful harvest ripe for the picking!

Whether you're contemplating redecorating an entire house or apartment, or just a single room, or even investing in a few special pieces to update and enhance your present decor or make your day-to-day chores easier and more pleasant, you're sure to enrich your life.

Just sit back, and enjoy the very best living in years!

Pretty as well as practical bedrooms

A bedroom should combine the luxurious, the fashionable and the practical all in one.

This may seem like quite a challenge in a modern bedroom, with its standard square shape, lack of architectural detail and standard type windows.

But, through imagination and ingenious use of unusual colors, plus a bit of decorating advice, it is possible to achieve.

Flannel suit grey is growing in popularity as a color choice for decorating. Once you give it a little thought, you'll see why this color is becoming a fashion leader.

Grey is soothing, neutral, and works as an effective background for a wide range of colors and patterns.

The walls in this contemporary bedroom are painted a lacquer grey. Wall to wall carpet of the same color is used to complete the basic theme and to provide luxury underfoot.

A touch of luxury is added to the practical tone with a down filled satin comforter in a warm peach shade, and down filled pillows which are covered in peach satin shams to match.

The comforter and the pillows, neatly tucked away in shams, are not only luxurious looking, but they make bed-making easy in the morning and promise night after night of comfortable sleep.

THE CONTEMPORARY COLOR SCHEME, floral fabric, satin down comforter and pillows work together to create a luxurious mood that is coordinated and feminine, as well as practical.

System for home protection

HOME PROTECTION AT YOUR FINGERTIPS—Now you can have automatic control of your home lighting system with Vigilite, the microprocessor operated wall switch that serves as an effective burglar deterrent. Vigilite fits into any home wall switch socket and can control the on-off pattern of overhead lights in any specific room, such as the bathroom or kitchen. Hugh Pease, president of the Hutec Company, demonstrates the ease and efficiency of this home protection plan.

New lower cost home security fits needs

Safe at home. An idea whose time may have come and gone.

A Focus Group survey, conducted by ADT, one of the nation's leading security and fire protection organizations, showed a latent fear and top-of-the-mind awareness of susceptibility to crime, medical emergencies and fire in the home, among a cross-section of Americans, today.

An inner city problem? No. The survey, taken at Menlo Park, New Jersey, which included heads of households with young children, and middle aged and older men and women, indicated that fear and insecurity have penetrated the minds of people from the suburbs and rural areas, as well.

Major concerns of these Americans were burglary, emergency medical help and disastrous household fires.

Their reasons are understandable in view of the magnitude of the problem.

Every ten seconds a home is burglarized. Often, household burglaries are bold, daytime acts, up 36% according to the FBI's Crime Clock. Every minute about $2,000 worth of property is stolen.

Household accidents are responsible for 24,000 deaths each year. Most often, these accidents strike the very young and the elderly.

Fires result in 300,000 burn victims and over 6,000 fatalities yearly, according to the National Fire Protection Association.

Until recently, emergency, burglary and fire protection for the home was limited to the more affluent, with systems costing $2,000 or more.

With new, residential security and fire alarms, such as Safewatch, from ADT, the average homeowner can now afford an effective alarm system, including police or fire department emergency notification.

These systems employ the latest technology in smoke detection, differing from the smoke alarms available from many retail outlets in that their signal reaches fire fighting forces.

Police and, in some areas, medical response can be summoned quickly, at the push of a button. No need to call on the phone, no numbers to look up, wrong numbers, busy signals or misunderstood messages.

This new home security system uses an electronic communicator which connects to the home telephone system.

The smoke detectors and emergency alert devices are "wireless," making installation simple and keeping the cost down to under $400, installed.

Any family member, even children or older grandparents can easily and quickly signal for help from the emergency station in kitchen, bedroom or entrance hall.

The system also protects the home from fire, day or night, whether anyone's home or away.

Safewatch is available from ADT, a major security company for banks, stores and homes.

Summer without end

A SUMMER FANTASY starts with accessories—Syroco's trio of butterflies and whimsical wicker-framed mirror and plaques. The mood is built with a score of summer things—light and white furniture also from Syroco, plus a bamboo window shade, a flower garden, a cache of plants. The scene is painted in tropical hues—yellow and greens, brilliant as a July day. And suddenly, it is summer! Syroco is a division of Dart Industries Inc.

Undetectable wall safe

SAFE AND SOUND... "Socket-Away" is an ingenious mini wall safe that protects cash and small valuables. It looks exactly like an ordinary electrical double outlet and, in fact, its components are exactly that! You don't need a carpenter or an electrician. The unit is easily installed into any wallboard or paneling in your house or apartment. Since it cannot be used electrically, it's absolutely safe. The special plastic container that fits into the wall holds the money and valuables, and only you know which outlet it is! Absolutely safe and undetectable, it costs $8.98 post-paid. New Jersey residents are asked to add an additional 45 cents per unit for sales tax. Write to Marcam Corp., P.O. Box 355, Westwood, NJ 07675.

Unique "at home" salad bar

FAMILY AND GUESTS WILL CHEER when this unique at-home Salad Bar appears on the dining or patio table... everyone becomes a super-salad chef! A new concept in time-saving food preparation and service, Thermo-Serv has combined seven individual containers with airtight lids around a lettuce bowl on a revolving base. The "master chef" has filled each clear container hours before with a tasty salad ingredient and placed them covered with their lids in the refrigerator. At serving time, crisp lettuce goes into the bowl and the Salad Bar to the table with a fresh variety sure to please even the fussiest eater. Later it's back into the refrigerator with leftovers ready for tomorrow's self-chef fun. And it's not for salads only—you can create appetizing displays of chips, dips, nuts and you-name-it! Finally, the Thermo-Serv Salad Bar goes into the dishwasher, virtually unbreakable and top-rack safe. This convenience is available at your nearby housewares store.

CHANGE-ABOUT SEATING arrangements bring versatility to family room decor with Berkline's new "Monte Carlo" Liv-In-Room grouping. Sofa, love seat, Sleep-A-Bed and lounge chair are available with either left or right arms, no arms or two arms, giving the opportunity to create individual areas for TV-viewing, relaxing or sleeping. On the right in the reading corner is a matching recliner, Berkline's space-saving Wallaway. The grouping is designed with elegant golden oak trim in a choice of decorative fabrics, including vinyl.

Low-key beauty of Orientalia is in style

This year, Oriental is in, from the delicately blended flavors of wok cookery to the serene atmosphere imparted by Eastern-style furnishings. In whatever room of the home Orientalia rears its lovely head, the word is low-key! Subtlety is achieved through the use of flowing lines, images and patterns out of nature that bring the outdoors within walls. Delicately incised patterns of leaves and flowers characterize both pottery, ethereal vases and eminently practical dishware alike, and purely decorative wall-hangings, paintings and scrolls that bring a touch of the East to Western life... beautifully!

Stereo headphones to the rescue: they're great family 'harmonizer'!

Remember the 1950s and your folks' opinion of recording artists like Little Richard, Chuck Berry, Jerry Lee Lewis and Elvis?

The war cry of the '50s was "Turn that thing down!" Parents just didn't understand that you had to play rock & roll loud to enjoy it.

Little has changed today except the names of the musical groups. Volume and bass still dominate, driving those with older, more sensitive ears up the wall.

But there is an alternative to this situation. At a time when many sociologists place the "American Family" at the top of the endangered species list, teenage musical preferences no longer need contribute to family conflict.

In the '50s one had to grin and bear it, or leave the house to those rocking teens. Today, thanks to technology, we have stereo headphones to provide private listening pleasure and permit peaceful coexistence.

A few years ago headphones were considered "extras" in a home music system. Today, they're standard equipment, a necessity. They not only keep your music from offending those around you, but also serve to keep the outside world from impinging on your private enjoyment.

A cultural clash like Beethoven's Fifth Symphony and "Charlie's Angels" can occur in the same room, with no disturbance to either camp.

Today, most amplifiers and receivers have outlets for stereo headphones built in. In some cases plugging in the headphones automatically cuts off the speakers. Sometimes you have to turn a control knob. But, whatever the case, it's all quite simple.

Stereo headphones frequently provide equal if not better sound quality than conventional speaker systems. And for as little as $22.50, Sony's DR-2 headphones offer quality at an economic price.

Stereophones often work better than speakers, because big speakers have a big job to do. They must fill the entire room with sound.

Stereo headphones, which are really specially designed speakers in direct contact with your ears, have a small job. They only have to fill your head with sound. Compare the size of your head with the size of the living room and you get the point.

But the music system speakers are in big cabinets. Doesn't the cabinet have something to do with the quality of the sound? Indeed it does.

Stereo headphones have no cabinet, right? Wrong. Your head, between the headphone speakers, and your eardrums function like a cabinet. The listener becomes part of the headphone sound system.

Then there's the subject of music dispersion. Big speakers spray the music all over the room. That's fine if there are several people listening. Much of the sound bounces off the walls, the ceiling and even lamps and small objects. All these indirect routes distort the sound on its way to your ears.

Stereo headphones put all of the sound where you want it, and in proper left-right balance no matter where you sit. You can get the full impact of the music without turning the volume all the way up. Stereo perception through headphones is quite dramatic.

Now don't start feeling bad about the money invested in those mammoth speakers. The sound is big and beautiful, and if the family listens together it's the best way to enjoy your favorite music.

Convenient and nutritional cooking

With over half of the nation's homemakers now in the work force, "quick and convenient" best describes the requirements of today's family menu planning.

Busy schedules leave little time for sit-down meals and even less for preparation, resulting in a trend towards convenience foods that offer little nutrition.

But man cannot live by fast-food alone—and so he created the microwave.

Today's highly developed model goes far beyond its original hot-dog warming capacity to perform gourmet renditions of total meal planning, from soups and sauces to roasts, chops, chicken and potatoes.

According to Jane Baxter, home economist for the Kitchen Appliance Division of McGraw-Edison Company, 95 percent of all foods can be prepared in a microwave oven, with deep fat frying being the only process that cannot be duplicated.

Because they are adept at a variety of cooking techniques, today's microwaves can prepare a well-rounded, multiple-course meal in a matter of minutes.

For example, the new Cook 'N Hold Touch Control microwave from Modern Maid can cook soup, vegetables, roast and baked potatoes in less than thirty minutes, or three hours less than conventional oven cooking.

Next to convenience, economy seems to be a primary reason for the current popularity of microwave ovens, says Baxter.

In light of today's soaring food prices, consumers simply cannot afford to waste food, a problem eliminated by microwave cooking.

"People used to cook more than enough food with the idea of saving the extra for pot luck meals. Microwave cooking has changed all that by allowing people to prepare exactly what they need and eliminate the waste of uneaten leftovers.

"Thanks to the quick preparation time afforded by microwave cooking, there is no longer a need to 'cook ahead,'" says Baxter.

If you do decide to incorporate microwave speed and economy into your kitchen, Modern Maid suggests you check for these convenience features before making a purchase:

- Temperature probe—inserts into food to assure food cooked to desired doneness, from rare to well done, then switches to low power setting to keep food warm till the family is ready to eat, coordinating your schedule with theirs.
- Thaw setting—a lifesaver when you've forgotten to thaw food first. This feature defrosts and prepares food for microwave cooking, assuring that poor planning will never interfere with fine dining.

- Reheat—gives new tenderness and flavor to any leftovers, offering a well-rounded nutritious meal when there's simply no time to cook.

- Variable Power—lends a precision touch to microwave cooking by adjusting power to food requirements. Total (100%) power offers maximum speed for meals in minutes.

Medium settings heat food more slowly, requiring less stirring and rotating. Less expensive cuts of meat become more tender on medium power settings, and leftovers reheat without overcooking. Low power settings are ideal for simmering soups and for cooking breads and egg dishes.

MICROWAVE COOKING offers speed and convenience to complement any busy lifestyle. Before purchasing a microwave oven, the McGraw-Edison Kitchen Appliance Division, makers of the new Modern Maid Cook 'N Hold touch control microwave recommends the buyer check for these features. Variable power lends a precision touch to microwave cooking by adjusting power to food requirements. Total power prepares meals in minutes, while lower levels simmer or reheat food. Temperature probe cooks food to desired doneness, then switches to a lower power setting to keep food warm. Thaw setting quickly defrosts food, so forgetfulness will never interfere with fine dining.

Time in many frames

THIS WALL TELLS TIME in many frames, days, months and years, and what more appropriate focal point for a wall of "timely sayings" than this handsome Ridgeway schoolhouse clock which brings to the present happy memories of the past? Hung among maple solids and veneers, the "Baybrooke" clock is in perfect harmony with the warm mood of the furnishings, which include a period sewing machine. Plants in baskets, clay pots and Aztec glazed quarry tile floor bring further natural warmth. Ridgeway is a division of Gravelly Furniture Company.

Natural beauty, functional finish

SERVE HOT OR COLD DISHES WITHOUT CLUTTER. Modern homemakers look for furnishings that allow function without obscuring natural finish. "Why cover up beautiful wood with clumsy trivets so you can serve hot and cold dishes at the dinner table?" asks Judy George of Scandinavian Design. "This ceramic inlay table gives you both function (hot and cold dishes right on the inlay strip) and beauty of design and finish." Ceramic tiles prevent damage to table's oak finish and allow Judy to serve chilled champagne and cherries jubilee flambé without covering natural beauty of hardwood. The table, 43 1/2" by 58" closed, will seat eight comfortably with end drop-leaves expanded. For free mail order four-color booklet on Scandinavian furnishings, write Scandinavian Design, Dept. P, Natick, MA.

'Personal' computers are moving into home

If the idea of having a computer in your home sounds fascinating, here's some news that will interest you. The "personal" computer is no longer a science fiction item. It is available today. Thanks to modern technology, thousands of families, individuals, schools and businesses are now discovering the benefits of using their own computer. One of the most popular of the new "personal" computers is Radio Shack's TRS-80 Microcomputer System. With the TRS-80 you can begin with a basic system (about $600), which includes a computer/keyboard unit, 12" video monitor, cassette recorder and power supply. Later, more computing power (memory) and accessories such as printer, disk systems and telephone couplers can be added to increase the computer's capabilities. Programming (telling the TRS-80 what to do) is done via the keyboard with a simplified computer language called BASIC. The TRS-80 can be made to respond with words, numbers and graphics displayed on its video monitor. The cassette recorder is used for programming the microcomputer with pre-recorded "instructions" and for storing programs and data on cassette tapes.

BRING THE EXCITEMENT and convenience of "personal" computers into homes, schools and businesses everywhere with Radio Shack's famous TRS-80 Microcomputer System. Besides practical applications, such as bookkeeping, data storage and education, the TRS-80 can also be used to play an almost unlimited number of games for family fun and entertainment.

Pre-recorded program cassettes for a variety of business, educational and home applications are available, as well as many games, just for fun. Cassettes that teach BASIC language and computer programming, algebra and other subjects are also available.

In the future, "personal" computers like the TRS-80 may be used for automatic control of your home's lights, appliances, heating and cooling. Someday you may even do your "shopping" and banking

Decorative energy-saver

RECORD COLD WINTERS AND HIGHER FUEL COSTS find unique solution in new thermal decorative Window Quilt that chokes off heat lost through glass. "This new development can reduce home heating bills up to 50 percent," reports David May of Appropriate Technology. New Window Quilt, with roller bar sliding along a plastic track, operates as easily as a window shade. But, despite its simplicity, it solves heat-loss problems in a big way, eliminating 79 percent of heat loss through single-glazed windows and 66 percent of heat loss through double-paned windows. Window Quilt also blocks summer sun heat, frequently making air conditioning unnecessary. Developers invested three years of research in perfecting Window Quilt. Cost for a standard window-size (2 1/2-foot-by-4-foot) Window Quilt, including hardware and installation, is $40. It is available via local distributors or by mail. Write ATC, Dept. P, Box 975, Brattleboro, VT 05301.

Exercise in high style

AS AMERICA MOVES into an orbit of health, forsaking passivity for active participation, the family gym is fast replacing the family room as a new living center. Here are all the accoutrements of a health spa, from bath beautiful to body-shapers. Kassel's "Simply Chic" wall-covering dresses the lockers and main gym in trim style. Wallcovering is also used to dress the chaise frame, neatly topped with terry pads, a nifty do-it-yourself project. "Simply Chic" wallcovering is pre-trimmed, pre-pasted, peelable, washable and easy to hang.

Look of rich European velour

NEW CARPET FASHION beginning to appear on American floors is the European velour look. This very smooth, very thick velvet plush is Casa Madre by Burlington House Carpets. Velour is popular in France and West Germany for carpets and other home textiles as well as for apparel fabrics. The velvet texture makes an exciting foil for color. Casa Madre comes in 24 colors, including such not-seen-lately accents as chinchilla, hunter green, cobalt blue, rosewood, camel, peach and eucalyptus green.

Fireside story . . .

A look at Colonial cooks

In an age of microwave ovens, food processors and hundreds of other appliances which make housekeeping and cooking less of a chore and even a pleasure to many, it's difficult to imagine what life was like in previous centuries—without the various conveniences we've come to expect, without the push button precision and ease of operation that characterize our modern lifestyle.

Nowhere is progress more evident than in the kitchen. Cooking in the 19th century was a complex affair, a matter of not only making a fire, but of maintaining it at the proper temperature for a long period of time.

Equipment was likely to be heavy, formed for the most part of iron, and thus difficult to manage.

The fireplace with its adjacent oven was the cooking center until the introduction of the coal stove, but cooking was not limited to such simple processes as boiling or roasting.

The ingenuity displayed by the 19th century cook was impressive and, with what today would be considered limited means, she was able to perform all sorts of cooking processes, such as frying, stewing, fricasseeing and baking, the latter either in special ovens or even in iron kettles nestled in the hearth.

Mystic Seaport, Ct., is a perfect example of a 19th century community, a restoration village which may be visited both for the charm of its architecture and for the insights to be gained into the life led in the previous century.

A "Museum of American Maritime History," it offers a wide variety of courses and workshops on 19th century New England life, including ones on fireplace cooking for the adventuresome souls who wish to experience, first-hand, the 19th century "trilogy of 'good living,'" so radically different from ours.

We've come a long way from fireplaces to microwave ovens, from smokehouses to streamlined refrigerator-freezers complete with soda dispensers and ice cube makers.

What would our stalwart forebears say if they could see us now!

FIRESIDE COOKERY was an elaborate and time-consuming procedure as practiced by our ancestors in 19th century America. This kitchen, in the historic Buckingham House at Mystic Seaport, Connecticut, is presided over by staff member Sandra Oliver, here seen carefully rolling out pie crust. Enhance your outdoor dining with the easy-care beauty of new tabletop

TOP YOUR OLD PICNIC TABLE with an attractively patterned flooring for a new look that is practical too. To make the pattern, center the table upside down on a sheet of flooring and trace around the edge. Apply Elmer's Multi-purpose Flooring Adhesive to the table top with a sweeping motion. Place flooring over adhesive, being sure edges are flush with the table, and press down firmly. Voilà . . . an elegant table for your next patio party.

Entertaining al fresco can be especially festive, if the setting is especially inviting.

Food just plunked on a redwood table that has been exposed to dust, dirt, grime and the elements of an exposed patio is rather unappetizing.

But, after a few seasons, no amount of scrubbing or restaining will spruce up a wood tabletop and, let's face it, al fresco fun shouldn't include a tubful of laundry for the hostess after every meal.

Take heart. Instead of heading back inside, consider covering your redwood tabletop with beautifully patterned flooring.

In addition to being terrific looking, it's fantastically practical, especially with the new flooring that won't crack, chip or peel, and never needs waxing.

It's super easy to do, too. All you need are a few basic supplies, a few hours of your time and enough flooring material to cover the tabletop.

A rectangle, of course, would be a more simplified procedure. However, assuming you have a round table, purchase approximately 6' more of the flooring material than the diameter of the table, along with 1 quart of the new Elmer's Professional Clear Floor Tile Latex Adhesive.

Have on hand a pencil or colored chalk, a sharp utility knife or large scissors and a notched trowel.

1. The adhesive must be kept at 70° F. for at least 24 hours before it is applied. Work in an enclosed area at a temperature of at least 65°-70° F.

2. Be sure the tabletop is free of dust and dirt. If necessary, sand it to remove any loose particles and remove the powder with a damp cloth. Allow to dry thoroughly.

3. Place the flooring material on the floor, having the reverse side facing up. We've used a pattern by Mannington Mills.

4. Turn the table upside down, centering the top on the flooring material.

5. Use a pencil or chalk to trace around the edge of the tabletop as closely as possible.

6. Remove the table and, very carefully, use a knife or scissors to cut along the lines you have just drawn.

7. Stir the adhesive well, and apply with the trowel in a sweeping motion as if you were icing a cake. Allow to dry approximately 30-60 minutes until it no longer sticks to your finger when touched.

8. Place the circle of flooring over the adhesive and press firmly. Be certain the entire edge is flush with the edge of the table. If a small amount of adhesive oozes it can be cleaned with scouring powder and water.

To maintain an elegant look and weaver durability, it is advisable to cover your tabletop when not in use. Do not expose it for long periods to dampness or relentless sun.

Now there's a microwave oven that doesn't take up your counterspace

The General Electric Company has unveiled a new microwave oven designed to give the convenience of microwave cooking into virtually any home without loss of counterspace or extensive built-in installation.

The new oven installs over nearly any existing electric range, replacing the vent hood. Called the Spacemaker microwave oven, the new product combines the functions of a vent and light for the cooktop with a microwave oven in one space-saving product.

Previously, buyers of microwave ovens had to choose one of four options:

- Give up counterspace to the microwave oven.
- Put it on a special cart in or near the kitchen.
- Trade in their existing range and replace it with a microwave range.
- Do extensive remodeling to build-in the microwave oven.

Now all that's needed is to remove the hood over your electric range and replace it with the Spacemaker microwave oven.

If your existing hood is vented, the Spacemaker oven will tie into the venting system. If not, a special charcoal filter kit is available.

The Spacemaker oven can turn nearly any existing electric range and hood into a microwave cooking center. And very soon, GE says, it will have a unit for installation over gas ranges.

General Electric's initial offering in this whole new segment of the microwave business has three cooking power levels, controlled either by time or temperature.

A two-speed timer permits settings of up to 35 minutes while the temperature mode lets you cook foods to internal temperatures of from 90 to 200 degrees Fahrenheit, using the Micro Thermometer™ temperature control. GE said it expects to introduce additional models later in the year.

The Spacemaker oven's eye-level location and wide oven opening combine to help make it extra easy to put in and take out foods.

And since most microwave oven owners still use a combination of microwave and conventional cooking techniques to prepare complete meals, its location over the range is ideal. All the cooking goes on in one place.

IN TERMS OF COUNTERSPACE, cabinet space and floor space, these two kitchens are identical. But the kitchen on the right, with General Electric's Spacemaker™ microwave oven, has the added capability of microwave cooking. The Spacemaker microwave oven is cabinet mounted and has a built-in exhaust vent and cooktop light for the electric range below. It can cook with microwave speed by time or by temperature, has a wide, eye-level door and easy-to-operate controls.

Designer frees family kitchen

"WE WERE ALWAYS BUMPING INTO each other," said the owner of this kitchen. "It wasn't until designer Evan Frances remodeled the room to suit a family with four active children that I felt comfortable." Designer Frances began by creating extra wide traffic lanes. She planned the room to incorporate the family's favorite garden marigold colors. She built in a desk just for mother and made the area as maintenance-free as possible. Every surface is wipeable—from vinyl floors, to counter tops, to wooden cabinets, to the ming red Flexalum aluminum blinds. Overhead lighting gives a cleaner, more open look. The result is a warm, efficient kitchen which nearly always has several people working or even studying in it . . . and enjoying it.

Outdoor dining

SIMPLICITY AND INFORMALITY are the keys to this gracious table, proving elegant crystal and china can be used every day... in every way. Here Foster's stemware, napkin ring and candlesticks combine with bamboo to create a casual mood for patio dining. No patio? Your table setting is right at home on a city terrace, country porch or poolside!

Double-duty design

STRETCHING INCHES INTO FEET can create a problem in today's homes and apartments, especially with interior space shrinking each year. But one way to cope with the space squeeze is to select multi-purpose furniture. This gateleg table from Riverside Furniture Corporation's Great Hill Road collection, for example, will do more than just double duty. With both leaves down, it is only 14½" wide and, when placed against a wall, serves as a display area for collectibles, magazines or plants. But when an extra dining, game playing or writing surface is needed, the leaves can be raised to provide the additional space. And the table can be used in any room of the house—living room, bedroom, dining room or even in an entryway.

Tackle housework before it tackles you! Get organized

What makes housekeeping easier? Organization!

Knowing what needs to be done and then having the right equipment, when and where you want it, will give you a good head start.

Organization experts at Rubbermaid suggest the following tips for more hassle-free housekeeping.

- Make a periodic list of jobs to be done. Do the most important ones first when time allows, and try to avoid interruptions.

- List the supplies you'll need for each task. Then make a one-stop shopping trip so you'll be well prepared for a complete spring cleaning!

- Choose quality products. They'll almost always save you time and money. Some will perform more than one task. Read labels and follow directions for best results.

- Duplicate products if they're used often in different areas of the home. You may want to hide an extra spray polish and soft cloth in the living room for quick furniture touch-ups, for example.

- Store cleaning aids near where they will be used, but keep in mind they should be out of reach of small children. A closet shelf becomes practical with a storage turntable to swing cleaning supplies front and center. Always return these items to their storage area when you finish a job, too.

- Tackle one task or room at a time. Carry a caddy with all the cleaning supplies you'll need for the job, or wear an apron with pockets to transport supplies or to pick up misplaced items.

- Look for helpful shortcuts. Plastic liners should do just that—line refuse containers so the container stays clean and waste disposal is a cinch. A squeegee speeds window cleaning. A liquid kitchen wax helps protect countertops, cabinets and major appliances from stains and soil build-up.

- Get the family in on the action! Whether you live with a husband and children or a roommate, a meeting to discuss where you need help may take the hassle out of future work days. Assign tasks and a time to do them so everyone knows what is expected and can follow through, perhaps without even being asked. (Miracles can happen!)

- While you work, play music or hum a tune... maybe even whistle!

- Let work movements become exercise. Bend from the knees; really stretch when you must reach for something. Breathe deeply. Think healthy!

A little organization will go a long way. It can boost your morale, give you more free time, and help you keep a house you'll be proud of!

TWO PRACTICAL HELPERS FOR THE HOUSE... A 30-gallon Roughneck refuse container has latches to lock in contents and odors, and is designed for easy handling; the 12-quart Roughneck bucket has calibration marks inside, plus a secure metal handle and recessed grips for firm pouring. Both are by Rubbermaid.

VACUUM CLEANERS have seen some sweeping changes over the past 60 years. What's cleaning up today? The recently introduced Self-Propelled upright by Eureka (above) which glides across carpeting under its own power, guided by the fingertips.

A ROOMFUL OF SESAME STREET CHARACTERS is a joy to play in—and can be put together in a weekend by handy-parents. Delightful new Wall-Tex vinyl wallcovering that sets scene goes up easily with water. Do-it-yourself blocks in various sizes hold toys, stack to hold divider. Tree cut from plywood frames window, and wallcovering on shade complete picture. Even pumpkin pillow is "homemade!"

Graceful comfort of Louis XV style

FLOWING LINES AND GENTLE CURVES are two of the best known characteristics of furniture designed during the era of King Louis XV of France. Prior to his reign (1715-1774), chairs were stiff, straight and generally uncomfortable. But in the 18th century, chairs were designed to fit the human frame, symmetry was avoided and the recently introduced upholstered seat became widely used. The fauteuil, an armchair with upholstered sides, gained tremendous acceptance during Louis XV's reign and has continued to rise in popularity ever since. This reproduction, from Montgomery Furniture Company's French Connection collection, features many of the design elements associated with the Louis XV period.

Prescription for safety

A GREAT HOME AND TRAVEL COMPANION, Medisafe, looks just like an authentic prescription vial, yet contains a "secret" inner compartment that conceals cash and small valuables at home, and particularly when traveling. It comes complete with three "genuine" looking prescription labels and one blank label, should you wish to type in your own prescription. You use your own pills or just plain aspirin on the bottom, according to instructions, and you have a completely undetectable, perfectly safe hiding place. The cost of the complete unit is $2.98 postpaid. New Jersey residents are asked to include an additional 15 cents sales tax. Write to Marcam Corp., P.O. Box 353, Westwood, NJ 07675.

It's possible to decorate on a budget without compromising on high quality

Decorating can be fun to do. With creative thinking and a pair of handy hands, you can design and build a room inexpensively without compromising on quality fabrics.

This room, designed by Emy Leiser, illustrates the application of many do-it-yourself ideas.

The modular seating arrangement, made up of 17"x17" cubes, is constructed from plywood and then upholstered in a rich royal blue Belgian linen-faced velvet. The beauty of this drapery and upholstery fabric is that it possesses both a luscious plush look and practicality.

The advantages of Belgian linen are many: serviceability, durability and, since there is little static in linen, there is practically no dust build-up.

The pillows are sewn in choice sizes and shapes. Pillow colors of burnt orange, antique gold and lime highlight the colors of the easy-to-make linen window shade. The use of these bright, vivid colors creates an atmosphere that is cheerful, warm and bright.

Interest is maintained by the use of texture against texture. Plush linen-faced velvet juxtaposed against the coarse, grainy texture of the Belgian linen wallcovering adds dimension and visual interest. The neutral, natural shade of the linen wallcovering enables the use of lots of color and diverse furnishings without conflict.

Walls need not be prepared in any special manner, while cracked and bumpy walls are easily camouflaged. With Belgian linen wallcoverings, a room becomes acoustically sound and insulated against the weather.

Maintenance is minimal; just vacuum twice a year. Spots are removed by means of a damp sponge and mild detergent, while some stubborn stains are removable with a solvent cleaner.

Built in the corner of the wall is a shelf made of plywood, 17"x14"x5" deep. Covered in the same textured wallcovering, this shelf provides added space for accessories and can also be used as a cocktail table for hors d'oeuvres and drinks.

Personal touches are further expressed in the selection of art, plants, and accessories.

THE CUSTOM TOUCH in do-it-yourself decorating is in the choice of Belgian linen-faced velvets and wallcoverings. The natural linen wallcovering creates a perfect foil for a vivid color palette and diverse furnishings in this living room designed by Emy Leiser. Belgian linen wallcoverings, drapery and upholstery fabrics are architect and interior designer specified products and can be ordered through the interior design studio of a department store.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COVERING CUBES WITH BELGIAN LINEN

MATERIALS NEEDED FOR EACH CUBE

- 1/2 sheet of 4'x8' plywood paneling (1/2" thick)
- 2 yards of 54" Belgian linen fabric (leftover fabric for pillows)
- Foam for seat padding
- Nails
- Glue
- Staple gun
- Scissors
- Saw

- Each cube will require four pieces, 16 1/2"x17", and two side pieces, 16"x16".
- Arrange the various pieces as shown in diagram A1 and glue and nail as you go along.
- Cut the fabric into three sections, one measuring 21"x69" and the other two pieces, 18"x18".
- Glue the 17"x17" (1") foam padding on top of cube before wrapping the cube with the fabric.
- Hem the long strip of fabric on one side; wrap the cube on four sides as shown in diagram A2 bringing up the hemmed side to meet the overhang on top; glue and staple. There will be a 2" overhang on each side of the cube which you miter, then glue and staple.
- Hem the two side pieces so that they measure 17"x17"; finally, glue and staple.

Real cork flooring: practical alternative to carpet or tile

Anyone planning a home remodeling project should now be sure to consider cork. For the floor, that is.

Thanks to a new concept in flooring, real cork flooring is now practical for any room in the house, including kitchens, baths and children's rooms.

Cork-O-Plast™, combines the warmth, classic beauty and resilience of cork with the tough durability and carefree maintenance of pure vinyl.

The natural cork is permanently bonded between a vinyl, moisture-barrier backing and a high quality transparent vinyl wear surface. Then, to maximize water-resistance, each piece is specially edge-sealed.

The result is a beautiful ageless floor that meets the top quality-with-efficiency demands of today.

Its toughness is just as remarkable as its good looks. Laboratory test results have shown that Cork-O-Plast will withstand abrasion four times better than a standard vinyl tile.

This extra wear resistance is due to the high quality of the cork floor's vinyl wear surface.

And, Cork-O-Plast's toughness has been proven in action—in heavy-traffic commercial building and department store installations—prior to its introduction to the home-installation consumer market.

The naturally resilient cork resists indentation from furniture and heels, better than standard vinyl.

This resilience quality also makes Cork-O-Plast an unusually pleasant surface to walk on, and it's quiet.

Cork-O-Plast is available in eight different color and texture patterns, in square tiles and plank strips (up to 36") to give homemakers a variety of visual effects from which to choose.

The pure vinyl surface is resistant to most household chemicals, to temporary exposure to alcohol and to some petroleum products, alkalis and acids (diluted and concentrated).

It stands up beautifully against typical spills and grease in the kitchen.

Do-it-yourselfers will be pleased to learn that this floor can be installed on concrete, plywood, hardboard or other substrates where vinyl flooring can be used. Any person who can install a vinyl tile floor can install Cork-O-Plast.

Simplicity of maintenance is another plus for the homeowner. Dirt and dust are easily removed with a damp mopping since the pure vinyl surface is impervious to liquid penetration.

Where a gloss finish is desired a good quality floor polish may be applied.

The combination of the beauty of cork with its natural variations in coloring and its inherent resilience plus the hard-wearing characteristics of pure vinyl, makes cork an exciting new medium for the home planner and remodeler.

REAL CORK FLOORING is now a practical—and beautiful—alternative to wood, tile, or carpet for family rooms and kitchens, thanks to Cork-O-Plast™ from PermaGrain Products, Inc., Media, Pa. With natural cork permanently sealed between layers of wear-resistant vinyl, the flooring stands up to grease, spills, moisture and heavy traffic.

Copperfield Casts A Magical Spell

Masterful young magician David Copperfield and his guests will cast a spell on viewers and guide them into a world of illusion in "The Magic of David Copperfield." The special, which has a musical comedy format, will be broadcast Wednesday, Oct. 24 (8 to 9 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Loni Anderson, Valerie Bertinelli, Robert Stack, English escape artist Alan Alan, and guest host Bill Bixby join Copperfield.

The program is the result of a year of preparation and practice by the 22-year-old magician, who has been listed by the book "The World's Greatest Magic" as one of the top three illusionists. Also featured will be a series of baffling dramatic illusions which have never before been seen on television and rely on no camera tricks whatsoever.

Against striking, innovative sets, Copperfield employs elements of classic Hollywood films, as he performs illusions that are woven into dramatic vignettes. He will continue to demonstrate his own unique entertainment form as he weaves his magic through music and comedy.

Bixby teams with Copperfield in introducing the various segments of the show. Then Anderson assists him in an illusion featuring a floating mirror ball, and adds her own magic touch to a comedy skit with him.

Bertinelli is up to some new tricks as she joins Copperfield in a number demonstrating that magic can be romantic, as well as mystifying.

Stack is lured from the audience to be a willing accomplice in a segment which includes such mysteries as pushing a cigarette through a quarter and a ring illusion trick.

Locked in heavy chains and suspended aloft and upside-down by a flaming rope, Alan Alan demonstrates his renowned escape artistry as he attempts to get out of his predicament before the unobstructed gaze of the audience.

An Eerie Tale

"The CBS Library," a new series of specials introducing an innovative concept designed to stimulate the reading appetites of young viewers for quality literature, premieres Sunday, Oct. 21 (5 to 6 p.m.).

"We've developed a unique approach with this series with the hope that it will lure young viewers to much more meaningful reading experiences," says Faith Frenz-Heckman, of CBS Entertainment. "We believe that the excitement generated by these specials will send them to the library in search of further literary adventures."

Vincent Price stars in the first presentation, "Once Upon a Midnight Dreary," a suspense tale emanating from a bleak and dusty, and perhaps haunted, old mansion.

Rene Auberjonois, Severn Darden, Michael Brick, Christian Berrigan and Mary Betten also star in the fanciful drama.

Price portrays the mysterious and amusingly sinister host who welcomes the audience into the library of his eerie and opulent mansion for a visit to three famed tales of the supernatural: Richard Peck's "The Ghost Belonged to Me"; John Bellairs' "The House With a Clock in Its Walls"; and Washington Irving's classic, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

Auberjonois stars as Ichabod Crane in "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," which depicts what happens when a meek school teacher encounters what he believes to be the infamous Headless Horseman, who has terrorized the New England countryside. Also featured are Pamela Brown as Katrina, the object of Ichabod's affections, Guy Boyd as his rival, Brom Bones, and Robert Foster as the Horseman.

Severn Darden and Michael Brick star as Jonathan Barnavelt and his young nephew, Lewis, who live in an old Victorian house which hides a clock containing plans for the destruction of the world, in "The House With a Clock in Its Walls." Mary Betten portrays Selena, a spirit searching for the clock, and Pat Peterson is featured as Lewis's companion, Tary.

THE MASTERFUL young magician, David Copperfield, and his guest, "One Day at a Time" star Valerie Bertinelli, guide viewers into a world of illusion, in a musical comedy format, on "The Magic of David Copperfield," a special to be broadcast Wednesday, Oct. 24 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS.

 2 Think About Tomorrow

PHILADELPHIA linebacker Bill Bergey will be in the thick of it Sunday, Oct. 21, when the Eagles take on the Washington Redskins. Kick-off time is 1 p.m. on CBS.

Bill Bergey Injury Gives Terry Tautolo A Chance

Bill Bergey may be the best linebacker in pro football, but the shame of it is he may not be able to participate in the best Eagle season in his 11-year career with the club.

Against New Orleans earlier this season, Bergey suffered a knee injury that may lead to surgery and he may be lost for the season, a crippling blow to the Philadelphia Eagles.

But it also gives a youngster — Terry Tautolo — a chance to start, and he has already responded with the confidence and sixth sense of a seasoned veteran.

The Eagles face another roadblock in a possible NFC East championship season when they face a rematch with the Washington Redskins Sunday, Oct. 21 starting at 1 p.m., live from RFK Stadium in Washington on CBS.

The crucial tilt follows a 28-17 victory by the Eagles over the Redskins several weeks ago. The game marks the return of the Skins to the nation's capital after a four-week road trip.

Playing backup to Bergey is like being a standin for Lawrence Olivier on the London Theatre circuit. You may know you have talent, but chances are unless something happens to the star, you won't get to appear.

Tautolo, a 13th round draft choice out of UCLA's 1976 Rose Bowl Team, was immediately assigned duty behind Bergey and Frank LeMaster, but he finally got his chance against the Saints.

He responded by making four solo tackles and an assist on a sack of Saint quarterback Archie Manning.

"I think Terry did a heck of a job against the Saints and I feel pretty secure with him back there because he gets the job done," said defensive captain Carl Hairston.

"All week, I work with the other linebackers on what we're supposed to do against a particular opponent. It was a surprise when Bill went down," said the soft-spoken Tautolo.

"But then I told myself, 'Hey, take what you learned all week and use it.'"

The Eagles, after getting into the playoffs for the first time in 20 years last season, are in the thick of the race again this season, with a big victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers already on the ledger.

Bird Passes Exam

Boston Celtics' Larry Bird had to pass a doctor's exam before he could play basketball with his softball-injured finger. Bird mashed the point so badly that the finger will never be normal (he can't make a fist). But he has been assured that it won't affect his playing ability.

In his prime-time debut as host of an entertainment special, Emmy Award-winning broadcast journalist Phil Donahue will host "TV Guide — The First 25 Years," to be telecast on NBC Sunday, Oct. 21 (8 to 10 p.m.). The presentation is a comprehensive, entertaining and incisive look at 25 years of television — how it changed, and how it has changed us, as seen through the eyes of the editors of TV Guide.

"We are delighted to be able to look back at television through the eyes of this popular publication," says NBC's Mike Weinblatt. "More than any other, it grew with television and charted its development week after week, year in, year out becoming the undisputed leader in its field, serving millions of readers." The show will present some of TV's best moments, brightest stars, funniest and most moving performances and also its most memorable news and sports broadcasts. The stars, celebrities, newsmen and others reflecting on television today and yesterday will include Lucille Ball, Diahann Carroll, Bob Hope, Michael Landon, Carl Reiner, Lee Grant, Arthur Godfrey, Tom Smothers, Norman Lear, John Chancellor, Steve Allen, Peggy Charren, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Nicholas Johnson, Richard Salant and Aaron Spelling.

HOST PHIL DONAHUE (l) questions Arthur Godfrey about some of the old days of television during "TV Guide — The First 25 Years," an NBC Sunday Night Big Event, Oct. 21 (8-10 p.m.).

Jessica Savitch Joins 'Prime Time Sunday'

NBC News correspondent Jessica Savitch will be joining Jack Perkins and Chris Wallace as a principal reporter for "Prime Time Sunday." She is expected to be filing reports on the program within the next month.

Savitch has done many special reports on such topics as natural childbirth, political patronage, single life in the Delaware Valley, divorce, dieting, and rape. She has also covered politics extensively in Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey.

Senior Citizens

Renewed Involvement

Academy Award-winning actress Teresa Wright says she is a good example of a woman who practices what she preaches.

"I've always said that one way to keep yourself young is to keep working at the things you like," says Wright, who won an Oscar as Best Supporting Actress (1942) for "Mrs. Miniver." She was nominated that same year for her portrayal of Mrs. Lou Gehrig in "Pride of the Yankees," starring Gary Cooper.

So it's no surprise that she gave up a long-awaited vacation to star in "The Rocking Chair Rebellion," an NBC Special Treat presentation to be telecast Tuesday, Oct. 23 (4 to 5 p.m.).

"After appearing in a play for months, I was ready for a holiday," she explains, "but after reading the script for 'Rebellion' I knew I would postpone my plans."

The story focuses on a group of senior citizens in a nursing home who find, to their dismay, that "to rest is to rust." Using pooled money — and enthusiasm — and prodded by the fresh ideas of a teen-age girl, five residents of the Maple Ridge Home are able to buy a house of their own — and a new life.

TWO SENIOR CITIZENS, Simon Pepper and Jessica Sherman, played by Shepperd Strudwick and Teresa Wright plan a crafts fair to raise money to buy a place of their own and Opie Cross (Cheryl Arutt) is the teen-ager who helps them in "The Rocking Chair Rebellion," to be telecast on NBC's Special Treat, Tuesday, Oct. 23 (4 to 5 p.m.).

He Remembers

The Houston Oilers' kick returner and receiver, Richard Elender, remembers how he got off to a good start in football. "When I was in grammar school, I had an older brother in junior high and another brother in senior high. They both played football at school and needed a third person to work out. Don would throw, Ken would defend. They had me run the pass routes. I was the only sixth-grader in town who knew what a post pattern was."

"I've not had time to be bored in my own life," says Wright. "But I know that if anyone — at any age — sits idle for any length of time it can lead to disillusionment and despair."

She says that exercise has become an important part of her daily routine to keep herself physically agile. "Every morning I start out with a rigorous program of exercise. When I finish, I feel I'm ready for whatever the day brings. From a practical standpoint, you can't be an actress — arise early, work long hours, learn lines and look your best — unless you're physically fit.

"Working, exercise and interest in life is what keeps anyone youthful, so when I realized that 'The Rocking Chair Rebellion' was advocating a renewed involvement in life for senior citizens, I took much more than a passing interest."

Boy Faces A Big Dilemma

A junior high school boy faces the first big dilemma of his life in "A Special Gift," an "ABC After-school Specials" presentation airing Wednesday, Oct. 24 (4:30 to 5:30 p.m.).

Peter Harris is ecstatic when he's selected for a leading role in "The Nutcracker," but ballet rehearsal interferes with his school's first basketball game, and he must play or be dismissed from the team. He must also learn to deal with his father's and friends' disapproval because they think dancing is for sissies.

The four talented teenagers who play the leading roles in 'Special Gift' have an average of almost six years dancing experience behind them. And the oldest is barely 16.

Stephen Austin, 14, who stars as Peter Harris, lives in Montclair, N.J., and currently studies dance at the School of the American Ballet in New York City. He's been dancing for five years and also appears in non-dancing roles on shows including "One Life to Live" and "The Adams Chronicles." Baseball and wrestling are his other passions.

Dierdre Sheehan, 15, who plays Peter's sister, Elizabeth, has studied for six years and has already appeared with the Joffrey Ballet.

The Teen Scene

THE EAGLES embark on a nationwide concert tour beginning this week, right on the heels of the release of their newest LP, "The Long Run," for Elektra/Asylum Records. The group just returned from a tour of Japan and stopped over for one concert in Honolulu enroute back to the States.

GREGORY HARRISON of the new CBS show "Trapper John," may be best remembered by the tube's younger viewers as the star of "LOGAN'S RUN" a couple of seasons ago. A lot has happened to him since, including the necessity of moving after his apartment was gutted by flames from a fire started in another apartment.

SCOTT BAILO and LANCE KERWIN'S TV movie, "THE BOY WHO DRANK TOO MUCH," will air possibly as early as February without commercial interruption. The film on teen-age alcoholism was originally scheduled for this month, but XEROX CORPORATION was so impressed by it that the company purchased full sponsorship of the two hour movie and will not disturb the viewers with a lot of advertisements.

What does a young star of a new TV series do with the brand new fame and weekly paycheck? In the case of pixie-cute STEPHANIE FARACY who portrays Gail Collins on the brand new show, "The Last Resort," you buy your parents a brand new color television so they can truly see your show. Stephanie explains that a replacement for her folks' old TV was long overdue.

Which star of "CALIFORNIA FEVER" is gaining the most attention via fan mail? Would you believe MARC McCLURE? JIMMY McNICHOL gets his share, certainly, but after the first week of the new series, it was Marc whose mailbox was overflowing.

THE SORROWS OF GIN and other heartaches are contemplated by a lonesome father, played here by Emmy winner Edward Herrmann, and his equally lonely daughter (Mara Habel), on the GREAT PERFORMANCES presentation of "Three Cheever Stories," Wednesday, Oct. 24, 8 to 9 p.m. on PBS. NC is airing at 9 p.m.

Michele Will Tell

Q: What happened to that wonderful singer, Minnie Riperton? C. MATTHEWS, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: The talented Minnie Riperton died a few months ago after a long bout with cancer. She is survived by her husband and two young children.

Q: I want to know all about Mark Harmon. Also, how do I write him? M. HILDEBRAN, CONNELLY SPRINGS, N.C.

A: Mark is a former UCLA star quarterback who knows what he wants out of life and goes for it: "I think there's a big difference between actor and celebrity and I want to be an actor." Before his co-starring role in "240-Robert," Mark had garnered an impressive list of theatrical credits in such films as "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure" and "Comes a Horseman." His TV films include "Eleanor and Franklin: The White House Years," "Centennial," "Little Moe" and "Getting Married." Mark is single and lives in Studio City, Calif. Write to him c/o ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif., 90028.

Q: I just adore the guy who plays Joey Perrini on "Another World." Who is he and where do I write to him? T. HEWETT, SHALLOTTE, N.C.

A: The handsome guy is Ray Liotta. He hails from Union, N.J., and is a graduate of the University of Miami. To survive those lean days when theatrical parts were scarce, Ray had all sorts of odd jobs — from bartending to being a casket-bearer in cemeteries. Send your letter to NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y., 10020.

Q: What are the plans for "Carter Country" this year? L. SECRIST, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: There are no plans. "Carter Country" was cancelled last spring.

Q: Tell me something about the actress who plays Rita on "Guiding Light." What is her address? M. WILLIS, SPARTANBURG, S.C.

A: Lanore Kasdorf is the actress who has played Rita for a number of years. She's the daughter of a career Army officer and grew up all over the world. Lanore recently married actor Phil Peters, who occasionally is seen as Steve Farrell on "As the World Turns." Write to her c/o CBS-TV, 51 W. 52nd St., New York, N.Y.

Q: I recently saw a TV show named "Bender" and thought it was great! Was it a special or a series? J. COLEMAN, FLORENCE, S.C.

A: "Bender" was a pilot for CBS, and there are no plans at this time to develop it into a series. However, that could change overnight.

Cheever's Stories Come To PBS

The art of one of America's finest writers, John Cheever, comes to the home screen for the first time when Great Performances presents "Three Cheever Stories" on PBS. The original teleplays are based on material selected from the National Book Award-winning collection, "The Stories of John Cheever."

"The Sorrows of Gin" begins the trilogy on Wednesday, Oct. 24 (8 to 9 p.m.). One of the author's best known stories, this tale of life in suburban America centers on an eight-year-old girl's struggle to deal with the sophisticated pattern of her parents' lives in a sometimes comic, sometimes tragic way.

Mara Habel plays the role of the child, Amy Lawton. Starring as her parents are Edward Herrmann and Sigourney Weaver. Eileen Heckart and Rachel Roberts are cast as two of the unfortunates elected to babysit for young Amy.

Cheever did not become deeply involved in the adaptation of his stories for television. "Once I've written a story," he explains, "that's more or less it. I don't see any point in going over it again for another medium, although I think it's fine for somebody else to do it." (In this case, playwrights Wendy Wasserstein, A. R. Gurney, Jr. and Terrence McNally have written the scripts.)

"I wouldn't trust my own judgement in appraising the final product. Working on an adaptation is like a punch in the nose — you can't do anything with it. Do you think George Bernard Shaw would have been happy with 'My Fair Lady'?"

This is not Cheever's first experience with television. He was once asked to write a pilot for a series based on the "Life With Father" books, and would have been a co-producer if the collaboration hadn't soured. "My independence was taken from me," he reports. "So I left in the middle of a conference."

Independence is important to John Cheever when it comes to any creative endeavor. Which is why, presumably, he has turned to public television on this particular undertaking — the promise of independence and several hundred pieces of fan mail.

It was, in fact, following an interview on "The Dick Cavett Show" that Cheever, impressed with the "tremendous response from mature, well-informed men and women," decided to give television another try.

Look Out Below

Muhammad Ali sums up his prediction of former Dallas Cowboys Ed (Too Tall) Jones' prospects as a boxer with one word: "Timm-mm-berrrrr."

"The public television audience is a wonderful cross-section of the American public — intelligent, most exciting — the maturity of this audience is underestimated by the commercial stations.

Older Couple Are Parents Once More

A middle-aged couple with three grown children face a variety of emotional responses from family and friends when they discover they will soon be parents again, in "And Baby Makes Six," airing on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Oct. 22 (9 to 11 p.m.). Colleen Dewhurst and Warren Oates portray the couple. Maggie Cooper, Timothy Hutton and Al Corley are cast as their children; Mildred Dunnock plays the wife's mother.

Anna and Michael Cramer (Dewhurst and Oates) in their mid-40s, are enjoying the luxury of being financially independent and are about to depart on a European skiing holiday when Anna learns she is pregnant.

Michael, ready to work less and play more, is upset by the news; he feels the child will be a threat to their marriage and comfortable life style of travel and peaceful togetherness at home. To Anna's surprise, her mother sides with Michael and initially suggests that an abortion should be considered.

Daughter Elizabeth is fighting her own fears about childbirth and motherhood and eventually joins in the call for an abortion.

Nightmarish Search For Mass Murderer

A beautiful model's discovery that she has psychic powers leads her on a nightmarish search for a mass murderer, a search in which she becomes the hunted, in "Mind Over Murder." The drama will be presented on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" Oct. 23 (9 to 11 p.m.).

Deborah Raffin, Andrew Prine, David Ackroyd, Bruce Davison and Christopher Cary star.

Raffin portrays Suzy, a carefree model and dancer, who suddenly and unnervingly realizes that she can sense future events (precognition) and will objects to move (psychokinesis). Her boyfriend remains skeptical of her mysterious abilities, even after the tragic crash of a commercial airliner which she had foreseen. When he learns that the crash was not an accident, but was the result of a bomb planted on board, she uses her psychic powers to identify the killer, and thus becomes his next deadly target.

Prine plays Steven, the mysterious bald man to whom Suzy is drawn for a deathly rendezvous by horrifying forces she cannot control. Ackroyd portrays Ben, a Civil Aeronautic Board investigator, whose growing love for Suzy is clouded by his fear for her life. Davison plays Jason, Suzy's uncomprehending boyfriend, who cannot bridge the gap which the woman's psychic powers place between them. Cary plays John Povey, an expert in psychic research, who helps Suzy understand the forces that engulf her.

When Deborah Raffin filmed scenes for "Mind Over Murder" in which she was held prisoner by a mass murderer, she vividly recalled a time in her life when she actually had to deal with imprisonment.

"My husband and I were driving through Europe on vacation," she recounts. "We were in Budapest, Hungary, and I used the telephoto lens of my camera as binoculars. A military truck went by and I looked at it through the lens.

"The military personnel thought I had taken a picture of them, but I didn't," she recalls.

Swiftly, the couple was surrounded by police. Their passports and camera were confiscated, and they were hauled off to jail.

"The police didn't speak English, and we didn't speak Hungarian," she continues. "They tried questioning us, and we were kept at the jail for hours. Finally, after holding us all day and developing the film, we were allowed to return to our hotel."

Fortune eventually smiled on the couple, though. "We had a court session and the police decided not to hold us. It was just a crazy mistake, and a very frightening experience."

Film Depicts The Life Of The Late Marciano

The life and career of late heavyweight boxing champion, Rocky Marciano, comes to the small screen Oct. 21 as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" (9 to 11 p.m.). Tony LoBianco stars as Marciano.

TONY LO BIANCO stars in the true story of Rocky Marciano, the undefeated heavyweight champion who fought his way to the very top and then gave it all up for love. "Marciano" airs as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Oct. 21 (9-11 p.m.).

LoBianco, who has appeared in such films as "The French Connection," "F.I.S.T." and the recent "Bloodbrothers," is no stranger to the boxing ring, having fought in the Golden Gloves during his youth.

"I was more than just a little rusty, though," the personable actor says with a grin. To help him perfect Marciano's unorthodox style, Tony worked closely with boxer Jose Torres. He also gained ten pounds to actually appear on camera in the ring when some of Marciano's best-known fights were recreated for the film.

"I came away with bumps and bruises all over my arms and mid-section," Tony relates, "and I was just blocking the blows when I got them!"

"There is, of course, a lot about Marciano that time didn't allow us to show," explains LoBianco. "But I think we did do a good job of capturing the intensity of the man as for how he went about his job."

"You see, he grew up with nothing. His father worked in a shoe manufacturing shop and earned like $50 a week. Rocky decided to enter the ring professionally when he was offered $50 for just one fight!"

"Well, when he saw the opportunity to have a better life than his father had been able to gain, he went straight ahead into it, and that was his personality."

Walter Matthau Stars In Romantic Comedy

Walter Matthau stars as Dr. Charley Nichols, a widowed surgeon determined to take advantage of his new single status, in "House Calls," airing on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies" Oct. 24 (9 to 11 p.m.). Glenda Jackson co-stars in the role of Ann Atkinson, an attractive divorcee who holds more conservative views on love and marriage.

Art Carney is cast as Dr. Amos Willoughby, the hospital's chief of surgery, whose absent-minded behavior and outmoded medical techniques snowball into near disaster for everyone. Richard Benjamin portrays Dr. Norman Solomon, who enviously watches his friend, Charley, moving happily from one lady to the next.

When Charley meets Ann, his interest is more professional than romantic. He's having too good a time to get involved with a divorcee who has strong opinions about fidelity in love — whether or not there's a wedding ring on the finger.

What he doesn't figure on is that despite Ann's knack of upsetting him, and otherwise turning his life upside down, this stubborn, insufferable, hard-nosed woman has that special something and just might get her way after all.

Matthau received an Academy Award for his role in the motion picture, "The Fortune Cookie." Jackson received an Oscar as Best Actress for "A Touch of Class," and Carney was named Best Actor for his role in "Harvey and Tonto."

Very Strange Mixture!

The two plainclothes police officers teamed up in "Dog and Cat," the "Tuesday Movie of the Week" (Oct. 23, 12 a.m.), are equal but different. They're Jack Ramsey and J.Z. Kane.

For one thing, Jack is a rugged, streetwise veteran, and J.Z. is a country-bred Georgia peach. A product of the inner-city, Ramsey got through two years of junior college. The closest he ever gets to nature is when he makes his annual visit to the zoo. J.Z., fresh from the rural south, graduated from college at 19, and majored in zoology.

Ramsey likes the movies, a cold beer, the Top-40, and a little respect once in awhile. On the other hand, J.Z. drives a '66 VW (concealing a Porsche 912 engine), is a seasoned cop and expert marksman, likes country music, and resents having to earn respect over and over — just because she's a foxy lady! The guy is also a borderline chauvinist who isn't too keen on having a female partner, no matter how foxy she happens to be.

This doesn't bother J.Z. — she knows that some people take time to adjust to new ways. For her part, she's not too crazy about being the 'cat' in what cops term "dog and cat" — when partners of the opposite sex are working together.

The unlikely twosome do have some similarities, however. Both possess a solid sense of humor and are deadly serious about their jobs.

Cast as J.Z. is Kim Basinger, a blue-eyed honey blonde from Athens, Ga., who was one of the nation's top models before she headed for Hollywood and a dramatic career. She has been prominently featured in guest roles in several television series and has also starred in numerous movies.

'Saturday Night Live' Come To Prime Time

"Saturday Night Live," that phenomenal late-night hit comedy series, comes to prime time on a weekly basis Wednesday, Oct. 24 (10 to 11 p.m.), when "The Best of Saturday Night Live" joins the NBC-TV schedule.

Among the guest stars to appear as hosts are Buck Henry, Richard Pryor, Madeline Kahn and Jill Clayburgh.

Since the young adult comedy series became an overnight sensation five seasons ago — in the fall of 1975 — members of the show's repertory company have become stars in their own right. In addition, many of its comedy features have attracted an almost cult-like following.

Gilda Radner has just completed a summer-long run of her highly acclaimed one-woman show, "Gilda Radner Live From New York," which played at Broadway's Winter Garden Theatre before finishing in Boston with a one-week engagement.

Bill Murray delighted moviegoers during the summer of 1979 in the box-office success "Meatballs."

John Belushi, truly a legend in his own time, has starred in four films since joining the show in its premiere season: "Animal House," "Goin' South," "Old Boyfriends" and the soon-to-be-released "1941," in which he appears with fellow Not Ready For Prime Time repertory star Dan Aykroyd.

Last season, Belushi and Aykroyd introduced a musical act called The Blues Brothers on the series. The duo has since become one of the hottest musical acts in the country, complete with sold-out concert performances and an album, "Briefcase Full of Blues," which has sold over two million copies. The Brothers are currently completing a movie, "The Blues Brothers," which is Belushi's fifth feature and Aykroyd's second.

THAT ZANY "Saturday Night Live" cast will be coming your way at an earlier hour, beginning Wednesday, Oct. 24 (10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV), with "The Best of Saturday Night Live." Pictured above are John Belushi (l) and Dan Aykroyd members of the Not Ready For Prime Time Players.

Versatile Jane Curtin is completing "How To Beat the High Cost of Living," a feature film with Susan Saint James, and Laraine Newman has just begun a movie, "Holy Moses," with Dudley Moore.

Lena Horne Stars In First Broadway Role

Lena Horne and "My Fair Lady" came to Broadway at the same time but they are just catching up with each other now.

It was 1957 when Lena had her first starring role on Broadway in a musical by Harold Arlen and E. Y. Harburg called "Jamaica."

At the same time, a few blocks away, the classic musical adaptation of George Bernard Shaw's "Pygmalion" that Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe created as "My Fair Lady" was in the early months of a record-breaking run that would extend for more than four years. "My Fair Lady" might have been a descriptive phrase for Lena Horne. But, as the image she conveyed in "Jamaica" showed, she was scarcely the type to play the cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle, in the musical.

They went their separate ways then but their paths have finally crossed in "Song by Song," a series to be seen beginning Monday, Oct. 22 (8 p.m.) and continuing monthly on PBS. During the hour tribute to lyricist Lerner, Lena Horne sings one of the most celebrated "My Fair Lady" songs — "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face."

But she will not take on the guise of a cockney flower girl to do it. She will remain her own glamorous, slim and supple-figured self, giving the song — originally sung in the show by Rex Harrison a completely new point of view by changing it to "I've Grown Accustomed to His Face."

Ms. Horne will also draw on a couple of other Lerner-Loewe scores, singing "What Do the Simple Folk Do?" from "Camelot," while from the film "Gigi" she will do "I'm Glad I'm Not Young Any More," a song that Lerner developed from a remark by Maurice Chevalier.

David Brinkley Leaves His Washington Post

David Brinkley has left his Washington co-anchor post with NBC's "Nightly News" to devote time to coverage of the coming-presidential year. To accomplish this, he requested a change of assignment from his co-anchor duties to regularly scheduled commentary. John Chancellor will continue as the program's sole anchor.

William Small, President, NBC News, said Brinkley "believes 1980 will be one of the most 'decisive, political years of our lives,' and like all reporters of high caliber he wants to get out from behind that Washington desk and cover it."

Brinkley will co-anchor coverage of political conventions and elections, as well as documentaries. Instead of co-anchoring "Nightly News," he will provide commentary on the program at least three times a week.

Brinkley, who celebrated his 25th anniversary with the network this year, has co-anchored coverage of such important stories as the signing of the Egyptian-Israeli peace agreement at the White House, Watergate, the funerals of Presidents Eisenhower and Johnson, the moon-landing flight of Apollo 11, the voyage of Apollo 10, the national political conventions, elections and Presidential inaugurations from 1956 to '77.

He also participated in NBC's special coverage of the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon and reported on the events following the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Don't Talk About Pies

In more than 25 years as a TV propmaster, Jack Grant has handled thousands of props. But none has given him more trouble than the 36 pies he brought to Johnny Carson not too long ago. Grant, who began working with Carson when he originated his shows from Burbank early in the 1960s, was reminiscing backstage prior to a taping of the program: "I'm sick of pies. I hardly even eat them now."

There is a mysterious stranger out there somewhere in Hollywood who can take credit for helping Gil Gerard, star of NBC-TV's new series "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" (Thursdays, 8 to 9 p.m.), move into an acting career.

Successful as an industrial chemist in his native Arkansas, Gil had all the comforts of life — a nice house, membership in the country club, money in the bank — but he wasn't happy. Then he heard the song "Is That All There Is?" and realized it applied to him.

"So I moved to New York and enrolled in acting classes, and drove a cab at night to support myself," Gil recalls. "When I was working in chemistry, I felt like my life was out of focus, but once I began acting it was like fine tuning an image."

One warm evening in Manhattan — a night Gerard will never forget — he picked up a fare at 67th and Central Park West. "The man asked me to drive him to 59th and First Avenue. We were driving for a minute or so, and then he leaned forward and said, 'You're an actor, aren't you?'"

"I was surprised that he could read me so well and told him I was taking classes. Then he gave me an address and told me to go there the next morning to apply for work as an extra in the motion picture 'Love Story.'

"But he continued to give me advice, and he really helped my career get going. He only gave me one condition — I was never to reveal his identity to anyone."

"I found out years later he has helped other people as well, including Erik Estrada and the late Peter Deuel (cq). In fact, just the other day someone asked me if I knew how Carol Burnett got started. It seems there was this mysterious stranger who gave her advice in New York, but told her never to reveal his true identity..."

SPOTLIGHT

Unlikable Character

DANNY DE VITO

Danny De Vito is a thoroughly likable person who portrays one of the most unlikable characters ever to appear on network television — cab dispatcher Louie De Palma on ABC-TV's comedy series, "Taxi."

The character De Palma is a petty tyrant whose major delight is making life miserable for the drivers who inhabit and work for the Sunshine Cab Company in New York City.

"As Louie, I run the garage," says Danny. "I'm the boss, and I get my paycheck every week just like everyone else, but I still call the shots as I see them. I'm the anti hero in that respect because Louie has to keep a certain distance from the employees."

"See, it's like anyone in the role of a boss. You can be nice to them at certain times, but while they deal with their customers, Louie's got to answer to the people upstairs, the cab owners. Thus, he can't be just one of the guys.

"Like, he's always wanting to hit on the ladies, but he can't do that with Elaine (Marilyn Henner), because his job is really to make sure she fills her quota. Now, if he makes a pass at Elaine and she doesn't fill her quota, what's Louie going to say? The bottom line is, he's working for a boss and the drivers are working for him. Our relationship is work. It's a job that has to be done."

Danny De Vito is none of the above. Off camera he's a soft-spoken kind of a guy who finds diversion in playing the piano and violin. He's also very involved in several other theatrical projects.

He has produced two short motion pictures, "The Sound Sleeper" and "Minestrone," and is co-owner of a theater in New York. "There's a group of us who're forever scrounging to keep it going," he laughs.

"I just can't get enough of this business," Danny admits. "I go to movies constantly; I go see plays regularly because it's my life. I've done films and I intend to do more films, more stage, and more television. That's my business, my work, just like Louie's work is to make sure the cabbies bring in the dough."

Possible Subtitles

NBC-TV's President, Fred Silverman, wants Japan's hottest singing sensation, Pink Lady, to tape a pilot for a possible weekly variety series.

The group's manager, Paul Drew, explained to Silverman that of the two Japanese women who comprise Pink Lady, one speaks very little English and the other is only slightly better. Undaunted, Silverman replied that the show could possibly be the first subtitled primetime TV show in history.

Burton To Star

LeVar Burton has been signed for Paramount Pictures' "The Hunter." Production will begin in early 1980.

Dream Comes True

"Shirley," a one-hour comedy-drama series starring Academy Award winner Shirley Jones ("Elmer Gantry") premieres Friday, Oct. 26 (8 p.m.), on NBC-TV. She portrays a recently widowed mother who sets out to make her late husband's dream for the family come true by leaving New York City to start a new life in a small town on the shores of Lake Tahoe.

"The show is about a modern woman of today, suddenly widowed," says Shirley. "She has been left with three kids, a Victorian house and no money."

"Once she had been a school teacher but gave it up for marriage and babies. Now she's 40, alone again, and she must raise her children by herself."

"There are a lot of women like that today — many of my friends, even me. When I was divorced (from Jack Cassidy), my youngest was 10, the middle one 14. It wasn't easy. The only difference in my life and that of the character, is that I always worked. The children accepted it and became very self-reliant."

But there are other problems for the fictional Shirley, said the real one. "Shirley had to move from her familiar environment to a new one. From a huge city to a small town."

There are four off-spring in the Miller household, which suits Shirley Jones just fine. "Any show I do, in order for it to have longevity, has to be with kids. I work so well with them."

The oldest of Shirley Miller's children is high school senior Bill Miller (Peter Barton), her late husband's son by a previous marriage.

Shirley's first-born, Debra, 16 (Rosanna Arquette), is very unhappy about having been uprooted from her big city surroundings and her boyfriend.

Hemm Miller, 10 (Bret Shryer), is an adventurous lad, who sees Tahoe as a fun place to ski, swim and camp out.

Reserving judgement is Michelle, 8 (Tracey Gold), who has a wide vocabulary and is short on patience.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE
PFA Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — The newest rumor to hit the sound stage of "CHARLIE'S ANGELS" is that JACLYN SMITH is expecting a baby. Of course, Jackie's not said she's pregnant and thus far opportunity hasn't afforded anyone the chance to ask, but the gossip is mounting.

It's not been the least surprising that ABC's "BENSON" has started out of the new season gate high in the Nielsen ratings. But what has turned a fair number of heads is the fact that for the first couple of weeks at least, "TRAPPER JOHN" has been the second highest-rated new series of the Fall.

And by the way, in case it was overlooked, CARROLL O'CONNOR'S "ARCHIE BUNKER'S PLACE" out-poll "MORK & MINDY" during premiere week, which possibly explains the low rating of "OUT OF THE BLUE."

When JACKIE ZEMAN of daytime's "GENERAL HOSPITAL" separated from her husband, MURRAY KAUFMAN, there was every reason to believe that they'd reconcile in no time at all. However, now comes the report that pretty Jackie is being seen on the arm of a musical producer identified only as STASH, which certainly suggests that Jackie and Murray may not get back together at all!

TONY LO BIANCO, who portrays late heavyweight boxing champion ROCKY MARCIANO in this week's two-hour ABC Movie on the life of the champ, originally wanted to be a professional baseball player and actually had a try-out with the Dodgers. Ironically, Marciano's initial goal was to be a catcher and he almost made the Chicago Cubs baseball club.

In case pretty LOIS ARENO of "THE ROPERS" looks familiar to some viewers, it's probably because she's remembered as Nurse Vorster on daytime's "RYAN'S HOPE." Lois was on the soap for about a year before packing her bags and moving to the West Coast.

The next big news to come out of the sound stage of "CHiPs" is going to be the announcement that the show's newest cast member, pretty RANDI OAKES, is getting married. Randi and her boyfriend of the past two years, MICHAEL, will probably be tying the knot before year's end.

ABC-TV'S "WEEKEND SPECIALS" presents "The Puppy Who Wanted a Boy" on Saturday, Oct. 27 (noon to 12:30 p.m.). The animated special follows the plights of a puppy who goes in search of a stray boy to follow home.

Puppy Searches For His Home

'Read More'

CBS-TV and the Library of Congress have joined forces for "Read More About It," a project designed to encourage people to read books by supplying information about titles related to certain CBS programs.

At the end of several shows, there will be a brief announcement from a performer on the program, calling attention to several book titles on the subject of the program, as suggested by the Library of Congress. This will refer viewers to local libraries and bookstores for information on the book.

Roles are reversed when a puppy goes in search of a stray boy to be his best friend in "The Puppy Who Wanted a Boy." The animated adventure airs Saturday, Oct. 27 (12 to 12:30 p.m.), as an "ABC Weekend Specials" presentation.

There just aren't enough boys and girls to go around when a large litter of pups is born in a small town. So the one puppy who is left nameless and boyless goes off to the city to adopt a boy of his own.

The search for an available boy leads the puppy through a series of harrowing adventures, including a chase through a restaurant he accidentally wrecks. Then there are encounters with two street dogs who have no use for puppies or boys and a mysterious stranger who collects dogs for dark purposes.

Discouraged but undefeated, the puppy continues his search.

Guinness Tribute

Guinness Superlatives, publishers of the Guinness Book of Records, will pay tribute to Paul McCartney as the "most honored composer and performer in music," at a presentation ceremony in London, October 24.

Boone To Star In Variety Specials

Multiple-award winner Debby Boone, who rose to the top of the national record charts two years ago with one of the all-time hits of the recording industry, "You Light Up My Life," will headline two variety specials on NBC-TV.

The first is scheduled for February, and the second will be presented next fall.

"We are delighted to welcome Debby and offer her a chance to headline her own specials," said Bruce McKay, of NBC. "She is already a polished performer with a remarkable future ahead of her."

Following her overnight rise to singing stardom, Debby made her acting debut in an original 90-minute television adaptation of O. Henry's "Gift of the Magi" last December.

Baker Readies For Race At Grand National Circuit

Buddy Baker, a veteran on the NASCAR Grand National Circuit, only has one problem. He over-uses his brakes.

That causes him problems over the short tracks, and for a long time, he thought he would never win on the smaller tracks — like Martinsville.

The thing is, Baker survived several near-crashes a month ago and claimed the big Martinsville 500, nosing out the King, Richard Petty, for the title.

Baker will be one of 50 drivers vying for starting positions in the Napa 500, one of the richest races on the Grand National circuit. The $300,625 purse should be one of the highlights of the entire season.

Besides the feature 500-lap race, which will be televised on "SportsWorld" from Charlotte, N.C., Saturday, Oct. 27 at 4 p.m. on NBC, numerous celebrities will be featured in a special race.

Baker has adjusted his "breaking" ways and is currently nudging the $200,000 mark for the year. The Napa 500 checkered flag, before a capacity home town crowd, would be the feather in Baker's W.I.N. Inc. cap.

Two Winston Grand National race cars are being readied for him for 20th annual NAPA classic.

"If you don't think the Charlotte race is important to our team just look around," notes Baker. "We've got an Oldsmobile and a Chevy Monte Carlo ready. Right now, we're trying to decide which one we'll bring to the race."

Waddell Wilson, the W.I.N. team's engine builder and crew chief, and Baker have decided that the results of the current repaving project on the North turns of the 1.5 mile quad-oval will determine which car they will run in the 500.

"We're going to take a close look when they finish repaving the corners," Baker said. "If the track turns out to be as fast as they're predicting, then we'll probably bring the Oldsmobile."

"It stands the best chance of taking the Wood Brothers off the Charlotte pole for the first time in six years."

Baker currently leads all other Winston Cup driver in qualifying this season with five pole positions, and he's a definite threat to capture the $100,000 Busch top spot.

But right now he's more concerned about the championships and earning more points in the Winston Cup standings.

So, Magic Comes To The NBA

It isn't true that the NBA held a season last year and nobody came; it isn't true that NBA telecasts were pre-empted for reruns of the more popular "My Mother the Car," and it certainly isn't true that the winner of the championships last year were only able to relish their victory for about an hour before the next season began.

It only seemed that way. What has caused a fair amount of attention to be shifted to the NBA this year is the coming of the Magic Show in the personage of Magic Johnson — a Laker waker-upper.

With Johnson, and the newly signed Larry Bird of the Celtics, a new era of passing should find its way to the NBA.

Both players are known for their ability to give up the ball as for their ability to put it through the hoop.

ON "SPORTSWORLD" this week, see Part IV of the bowling miniseries and the NAPA 500 stockcar race from Charlotte, N.C. The program airs on Saturday, Oct. 27 (4 to 5:30 p.m.) on NBC.

New Career For Tarkenton

When Fran Tarkenton retired from pro football and became a commentator for ABC Sports, his coach with the Minnesota Vikings, Bud Grant, said: "Francis is the greatest quarterback ever to play the game. The fact that he can go out on top at age 39 is a testimonial to his great ability. A lot of players retire from the game going downhill." Not bad, considering the fact that Grant is not known for extravagant statements.

Tarkenton, holder of a most impressive array of career records, is now with Frank Gifford and Howard Cosell in the commentators booth for several telecasts of "ABC's NFL Monday Night Football," plus the post-season Pro Bowl in Honolulu.

You can see Fran in action, on the sending side of the microphone, this Monday night when the Denver Broncos take on the Pittsburgh Steelers. Game time is 9 p.m.

The transition from the playing field to television is not a new experience for Tarkenton. He was a commentator for three years on NBC pre-game telecasts, and he once hosted the "Saturday Night Live" comedy show.

As a pro quarterback for 18 seasons — 12 with the Vikings and five, in between, with the New York Giants — Tarkenton holds the most career QB records in the National Football League: Most yards passing, 47,003; most total passes, 6,467; most passes completed, 3,686; most touchdown passes, 342; most yards rushing by a quarterback, 3,674; most seasons passing for at least 2,000 yards, 16.

FRAN TARKENTON, who created a style of his own in 18 distinguished seasons as a National Football League quarterback, has joined ABC's "Monday Night Football" series. He'll be in the broadcast booth with Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford for at least six of the regular-season telecasts this year, as well as the coverage of the post-season Pro Bowl game.

Thoroughbred Racing, It's The Sport Of King

THE TURF CLASSIC, a $250,000 — added for 3-year-olds and up, will be shown Saturday, Oct. 27 at 4:30 p.m. on CBS-TV. Run on the Aqueduct Race Track in Queens, N.Y., the commentators for the mile-and-a-half race will be Jack Whitaker, Frank Wright, Charlie Cantey, and Marshall Cassidy.

The nuances and great traditions of thoroughbred racing make it one of the most unique and singularly excellent sports in all the world. The sport of kings has lived through wars between nations and terrible accidents involving those beautiful animals, sometimes resulting in tragic death.

The drama of the sport will be full-blown in the traditional Turf Classic, to be televised from Aqueduct Race Track in New York City Saturday, October 27 beginning at 4 p.m. on CBS.

More than 200 years ago, the tradition of wearing racing colors was established and survived to be developed for "human" sports like baseball, football and basketball.

The meeting of the Jockey Club in Newmarket, England that assigned racing colors for each horse was accomplished to help tell the horses apart. Colors were chosen by 19 sportsmen, only three of whom were commoners, and duly registered.

The first colors, or "silks," (that being what they were made of), were all solid shades, ranging from the Duke of Cumberland's purple to Jenison Shafro's pink. A black velvet huntsman's cap originally topped the silks but later was included in the color scheme.

JAMES HARRIS, the San Diego quarterback acquired from the Los Angeles Rams, goes against the Oakland Raiders in a special ABC telecast Thursday, Oct. 25 (9 p.m.).

Never Had It So Easy

James Larnell Harris has never had it easy. Since his high school days in Monroe, Louisiana, the San Diego quarterback has always had something to prove.

First, he had to show his coach that he had the ability to lead a team. He succeeded, but a lot of people thought the long-distance runner would instead become a track star.

But he was determined to quarterback on the college level. Harris was bypassed by all of the major universities, despite a brilliant high school career.

Harris may get his chance this week when the Chargers take on the Oakland Raiders during an ABC-TV special Thursday night game, Oct. 25 at 9 p.m.

He decided to attend Grambling, a powerhouse for decades in the black college ranks, and led the Maryland school to consecutive Southwestern Athletic Conference championships in 1967 and 1968.

But he still had problems being noticed by most of the professional teams when he graduated because of the foolish notion that a black quarterback couldn't cut it in the NFL.

Harris was finally chosen in the eighth round by the Buffalo Bills, who developed Joe Ferguson.

All-Important Decision

Cynthia Potter was a high school student when she was faced with a decision which would have an enormous impact on her future. An aspiring ballet dancer and competitive diver, she was forced to choose one activity over the other.

"I was dancing five days a week and taking part in diving competitions," Potter recalls. "Rather than devoting my time to one or the other, I tried to do both. But I knew that I needed to give more time to the one I was more serious about. I liked the competitive aspect of diving, so I chose it. I think I made the right decision, because I don't think I would have become a great professional dancer."

Potter has since become one of America's top women divers. She has won more National AAU diving titles than any other woman; is the 1979 U.S. Indoor Diving one-meter Champion; and is a strong candidate for her third Olympics in 1980.

As a youngster, she took swimming and diving lessons, but found diving more appealing. "It was more esthetically and artistically pleasing to me than swimming," says Potter. "I felt swimming was harder and that you had to spend more hours in the pool for something less rewarding. I'm also more suited to diving. I have the right kind of body for the difficult optional dives. I'm short, and I spin fast."

Potter entered the 1972 Olympics as a medal hopeful, but injured her ankle two days before the start of competition. The ankle was badly bruised and she was in a great deal of pain, but she decided to go ahead and compete.

"Considering the circumstances, I wasn't unhappy (she finished seventh in the springboard). But if it happened to me today, I wouldn't consider competing. I guess that's the result of maturity."

In 1973, Potter injured her back, and began to doubt that she had made the right choice back in high school. She decided to quit diving for a year and "take inventory." During that time she danced with a ballet company in Houston and worked as a substitute teacher. But in '74 she was ready to give diving another try, and went to Dallas to work with Southern Methodist University coach Bryan Robbins.

The Elegant Hideaway Has Everything For You

"Fantasy Island" has it all. For a small fee, fantasizers are flown in by seaplane and offered the most unusual weekend of their lives. Sometimes, though, these people find out that certain fantasies are best left unfulfilled. As the owner, Mr. Roarke, cautions his guests — "Be careful, your fantasies may come true." Guests pay what they can afford — maybe fifty thousand dollars for a wealthy person who wants to know of his roots, or fifty dollars from some kids who wish to see their divorced parents re-united.

This elegant, mystical hideaway isn't likely to be found in the tour ads of travel publications. But it does exist, and you can treat yourself to weekly visits each Saturday (10 to 11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

The show is pure escapism, often times laced with unexpected twists. It has been described by critics as being one bit beyond the furthest stretch of imagination. The unusual is always the usual on "Fantasy Island." Anything is possible.

Ricardo Montalban stars as the impeccably dressed, debonair, handsome and mild-mannered Mr. Roarke. Co-starring as Tattoo, his friend and aide, is Herve Villechaize, a French-born three-foot eleven-inch actor.

Montalban is a veteran stage, screen and television actor who brings a certain charm to all his roles. Some of his starring film credits include "Fiesta," "Latin Lovers," "Right Cross" and "Across the Wide Missouri." On television he has starred in "How the West Was Won" (for which he received an Emmy in 1978), "Captain Courageous," "Columbo" and "Executive Suite."

Doubleday has engaged author Bob Thomas to write a biography of Ricardo that will be published early in 1980.

Villechaize originally sought a career as an artist. After studying art for three years in Paris, his home, he came to New York to continue his studies.

Sweepstakes, Benson & Hedges style.

100 sweepstakes...and the stakes are yours to choose.

Will you go for 100 hours in Trānsylvania? 100 pairs of argyle socks? 100 inches of Ford Mustang Ghia? Maybe you have a taste for gold, 100 grams of it... or 100 gallons of sour cream. Or one of our 95 other prizes.

You can even change your mind at the last minute, and opt for 100 feet of dollar bills ($200) in exchange for any prize you win.

Enter as often as you want. Just remember, enter only one sweepstakes per envelope, with the number of that sweepstakes marked in the lower left corner.

This year's 100 sweepstakes has an especially winning look. It just might have you saying, "B&H, I like your style."

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave. New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

The guide dog: irreplaceable friend.

FOR L.E. APPLE, Executive Director, American Foundation for the Blind, Inc. What electronic devices are available to help the blind, and will they ever replace seeing-eye dogs? — B.R., Beachwood, N.J.

● Having the ability to communicate through the written word and to move from point to point safely and efficiently are probably the two most significant needs of a severely visually impaired or blind individual. Therefore, most of the developments of electronic devices have been in these areas, such as talking calculators and reading machines that scan printed material blind people can read by touch or by listening. In mobility, the major electronic device is the laser cane. I don't believe that electronic travel aids as we know them today will ever replace the guide dog for all the people who use them, just as the guide dog has not totally replaced the cane.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Natalie Wood thinking of adapting the mud used in her new film, Meteor, for a beauty product, because it worked such wonders on her skin? — G.D., Canton, Ohio

● Natalie can't imagine where you heard that one. She said the mud, known as Drillers Mud, lighter in texture than the regular kind (real stuff gets sticky and cakes when it dries), wreaked havoc, not worked wonders, on her complexion. When she and the cast came out of the freezing mud (those sequences took two weeks to film, and it seemed like two years), they all headed for hot coffee and hot showers. Because they took three or four showers a day, their bodies and faces got rather washed out from all that water, so that wasn't any good, either. "We still can't decide what we hated more," said Natalie. "The mud or the dust. We all got infections of some kind, and we had to wear earplugs."

Mud is murder she says.

FOR BETH HOWLAND, co-star of CBS-TV's Alice Since you play a waitress on the show, do you think waitresses have a hard or an easy life? — B.I., Oklahoma City, Okla.

● Hard. It's hard labor to deal with the public on a service level. Not all people are thoughtful or kind. Waitresses put up with more abuse than anyone except, perhaps, bus drivers. If the job has one recommendation it's that you are not always stuck with seeing the same group of people. You're not locked into an office. And, of course, there are tips.

FOR NICK NOLTE, star of North Dallas Forty

A sex symbol like you must have had a very exciting first date. Tell me about it. — M.L., Palm Springs, Calif.

● There isn't much to tell, since I can't remember too much about it. I know I was happy to start dating, which I did around 16, but the first time isn't a landmark memory for me. I guess I went to a drive-in (probably a John Wayne movie — he was my hero. I'm sure it wasn't a film dripping with romance. I used to get bored with all that kissin'), had a six-pack of beer — then woke up with a terrible hangover.

FOR DONNY OSMOND, television and recording star Are you really hung up on those purple socks you always wear? — Polly Adkins, Biloxi, Miss.

● It's true — I like purple socks. That's one way of making sure my brothers can't borrow them because I'm the only one who likes that color. It all started years ago when I said in an interview (joking, of course) that my favorite color was purple. Everything that was sent to me after that was purple. One Christmas, Mom and Marie found a whole counter full of purple socks — and bought the lot.

FOR TONI TENNILLE, recording artist

I heard your dog is temperamental and idiosyncratic. True? — L. Doslier, Westchester, N.Y.

● Brod is scared of the cello. Every time Daryl pulls it out, Brod throws a fit. No other instrument has that effect on him — maybe there's something about the pitch or tone that affects him. Otherwise, he loves music, and I must say he has excellent taste. When we practice the piano he goes into ecstasy. His favorite composers are Mozart, Haydn and Bach, of course.

FOR CURT GOWDY, host of ABC-TV's The American Sportsman

Has your work on the show ever put you in a really dangerous situation? — G.W., Savannah, Ga.

● Of course. For example: Around 1963, we decided to hold a world championship trout-fishing contest in Argentina. As we drove in our brand-new truck, the steering wheel came off in the driver's hands. The car careened into a gully. Had the incident occurred a mile down the road, we would have bounced off a 4,000-foot cliff.

FOR VIRGINIA KNAUER, consumer affairs consultant, Toy Manufacturers of America

What's your answer to reports that war-toy games and such are as harmful to youngsters as watching violent programs on TV? — M.T., Dubuque, Iowa

● There is no evidence that playing with toy guns and other "war" toys results in violent or aggressive behavior. No reports have come to my attention that compare playing with guns and watching "violent" programs on TV: I would be very surprised if there were any basis for such a comparison.

PRO Representative Carl D. Perkins (D.-Ky.)

America's whole economy depends upon energy, but over half of our oil is supplied by unfriendly or potentially hostile foreign countries. A temporary interruption would eliminate millions of jobs. The United States possesses sufficient coal to make us independent of foreign supplies within a few years. Within one year, over 60 utility plants can be converted to the burning of coal and save 400,000 barrels per day of imported oil. Technology exists today to convert coal into synthetic liquids and gas. Without a significant increase in coal use, we are mortgaging our nation's security, employment and freedom to foreign powers.

PRO AND CON

Should There Be a Significant Return to Coal to Meet the Nation's Energy Needs?

CON Carl Pope, asst. conservation director, The Sierra Club

We should not increase our reliance on coal very much. Coal is polluting. Its mining is dangerous to miners and destructive to the environment. And we have better alternatives. Studies have shown that conserving energy, moving to renewable resources and developing a wide variety of small-scale approaches to our energy needs would reduce our need for electricity so dramatically that we could do without both coal and nuclear. Coal can be burned more cleanly than in the past, but even when it does, tiny particles carrying dangerous heavy metals and other pollutants escape. Why use coal when we have safer, cheaper alternatives?

After Three Emmys, Don't Call These Lovable Taxi Drivers Hacks

In one Taxi episode Alex (Judd Hirsch, left) had a blind date with a woman (Suzanne Kent) who turned out to be literally more than he'd hoped for. His fellow cabbies showed up to check out the situation.

Tony Danza (above) is a boxer turned actor. His son Marc Anthony will be a guest on the series this fall.

By Suzy Kolter

Someone fixes you up on a date and the girl turns out to weigh about 150 pounds more than the girl of your dreams. Your father, whom you haven't seen in 30 years, is hospitalized and you go to his bedside for a reunion and confrontation. You've never won a fight in your entire boxing career and just after you take the big one you discover that your opponent was fighting on behalf of a little kid who really needs the bread.

Do these tales of misery and woe sound like the story lines of one of the country's top-rated situation comedies? You bet your tears of compassion and laughter they do. The producers of the Emmy award-winning Taxi are out to prove the lesson audiences have already learned from *M*A*S*H* — sensitive is in.

"Taxi," explains its director, Jim Burrows, "is not the kind of show that has jokes in it. We don't believe in set-ups and one-liners. What we're creating here is a story about real life and real people and, of course, life has plenty of funny moments. But you'll never catch us doing joke-joke-joke without any reason."

To further emphasize Taxi's difference from the run-of-the-mill, often mindless sitcom, the producers (who come from The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Rhoda and Phyllis) have structured the sets of the show so that story ideas can be expanded each week, allowing the characters to grow and develop as the show progresses. While most sitcoms have a standard number of sets that rarely change (did you ever see Mary Richards at the cleaners or the grocery store?), Taxi has only a few principal sets, and the rest are built specifically each week for the story, allowing everyone to have a tremendous amount of freedom.

"I think what makes the show great is the feeling we all have about each other," says Marilu Henner, who plays the Sunshine Cab Company's first female driver and the only woman in the cast. "We have such a good feeling for each other that it carries through on the air."

"We all knew from the beginning," explains Judd Hirsch, who's Alex Rieger, the papa bear of the little group of drivers, "that this had to be the kind of show where each person gets as well known as the others so there are no real stars. And I think that's what's been the make-up of a successful series. Each week the story rotates around another one of the characters so the audience gets to know him a little bit better. We all have diverse personalities, but as a unit we work great together."

Many of the cast members had worked together before Taxi, which may account in part for how well they get along. Hirsch and Danny De Vito, who plays Louie De Palma, the dispatcher (perhaps the meanest role currently on television) had appeared on stage before. Jeff Conaway (Bobby, the out-of-work actor), Tony Danza (Tony, the fighter who never wins a fight) and Marilu Henner (Elaine) all worked together in the Broadway production of Grease. Coincidence brought them together on the Taxi set and has molded them into one big happy family. "It's a family feeling, all right," admits Judd Hirsch. The cast goes roller-skating every Monday night, plays softball against such comers as the Happy Days team and parties each Friday night after the show is filmed.

For Henner, the family feeling is something she particularly enjoys. "We're the closest cast in town," she smiles, her green eyes lighting up. "We really care about each other and I think that shows in our work." Henner began her career at age four, working out in her mother's dance studio in Chicago. "I always knew I'd grow up to be a star," she concedes. "My mother told me so. She used to wake us up at 11:30 or 12 o'clock to see the late-night movies on television if one of the greats was on so we could study him."

Conaway discovered stardom a bit later in life — he was 10. Although he really wanted to grow up to be an astronaut, he gave up the wild blue yonder for the theater on his 10th birthday, when Arthur Penn signed him for an 11-month stint on Broadway in James Agee's All the Way Home. From there Conaway continued as a child actor and then a teen star, playing the hottest teen idol Broadway ever saw — Grease's Danny Zuko. After two years on Broadway, he went on the road, then returned to play Keinecke in the movie version of Grease.

At 27, Jeff Conaway is single but is very friendly with Rona Newton-John (Olivia's sister) whom he met while filming Grease. His part in Taxi is tailor-made for him: "The part is a dream for me. I not only get to interact with people as a taxi driver, but I am also showcased as an actor working in different productions." Jeff Conaway will probably never have to worry about getting work again.

Judd Hirsch comes to Taxi as the most serious actor of the clan — he had scorned weekly television (after playing the lead in Delvecchio, he turned down the lead in Waverly Wonders, which bombed with Joe Namath as the head coach, and a doctor show specifically created for him).

While Hirsch refrains from calling himself the star of the show, he is the pivotal character in terms of the stability of the plot. All the other cab drivers at Sunshine consider themselves in a type of purgatory — they are merely driving cabs until they can break into the jobs they really want. Though they might actually end up as cab drivers for the rest of their lives, they consider their work behind the big yellow machine as strictly temporary. Except for Alex Rieger, Judd's character: Alex may be the only cabbie in the world who knows he's a cabbie and accepts that fact as reality. He thinks it's less degrading than welfare, less demanding than unemployment and has a few rewards that can't be overlooked.

"I hope this show goes on forever," says Hirsch. "I'll just grow old in the part." If Hirsch is aging any faster than normal, it could be because he's working two jobs at once. Not only does he maintain his regular role as Alex, but he concurrently works in the theater. "You have to keep growing," he points out: "you can't get stale by doing one thing for the rest of your life."

If Alex is the understanding, reassuring father figure to the other drivers, his antithesis is 5-foot tall roly-poly (155 pounds) Louie De Palma (portrayed by Danny De Vito), the bullying tyrant dispatcher at Sunshine, who sits in his glass booth and rules the roost with a terrible hand. Although De Vito claims he loves his part, he's also able to point out that his real character isn't anything like Louie's. Everyone on the set, in fact, will vouch for the fact that Danny is a really nice guy.

Tony Danza, who plays Tony Banta, was a real professional fighter before he was discovered in a gym (honest) and asked to test for the part of the boxer in Taxi. He continues to spend his spare time training and fought several bouts while the show was on vacation between seasons. (He won them all.) Danza will win his first fight as Tony Banta on an upcoming show this fall in which his 7-year-old son makes his acting debut. In this story Banta fights a professional boxer and actually wins, only to find out that the fighter was giving the proceeds of the game to this needy 7-year-old — a story so sad it breaks Tony's heart and makes him give up his only victory.

When the story lines get this heavy, there's only one thing to do for comic relief: turn to Andy Kaufman, Taxi's Latka Gravas — the mechanic who doesn't speak English too well. Brilliant in his ability to make himself understood perfectly while speaking gibberish, Kaufman is one of those hot young comics recently graduated from the Comedy Store who is not only a hit on TV but is coming along fast as stand-up comic (he's sold out Carnegie Hall), movie star ("In God We Trust") and busboy. Busboy? Some actors pride themselves on their ability to get work on stage and screen, but Kaufman is pleased that since the closing of West Hollywood's Posh Bagel he's been able to get himself hired as a busboy at Jerry's Famous Deli in Studio City.

And chances are if you hang out at Jerry's long enough, not only will Andy Kaufman clear your table, but you might get a peek at Taxi's other cast members who try to patronize Kaufman's employers in their efforts to hang out together. FW

Helping Your Child Learn to Be a Better Reader

By Samuel J. Gulino

Years ago, parents and children would often read together after dinner. But nowadays that time is generally filled with TV-watching. According to a report from the New York State Senate Education Committee, "Children spend 5,000 hours watching TV before they reach first grade. Many high-school graduates have logged 15,000 hours of television but only 11,000 hours in the classroom."

Today many parents and educators are asking, "Why can't Johnny read?" And the answer has to do with the shift in the family activities at home. According to research, the best reading instruction in school can be virtually wasted without reading practice at home. And the child who starts school with little preparation at home is already playing "catch-up." Greta Kipnis, Director of Reading for the Commack, N.Y., schools, says, "We need parents to help children build a reading habit."

Kipnis and other reading experts advise parents to begin a "reading readiness" program at home — before the child even starts kindergarten. Educators in several states (New York, Idaho, Maryland, Massachusetts, Ohio and Pennsylvania) are now encouraging parents to spend 15 minutes a day reading with their child, whether from books, magazines or newspapers.

Setting Up Your Child's Reading Program

Even before your child is ready to read, you can be preparing him (or her) for the development of reading skills. You begin with conversation by encouraging your child to talk. Speak to your child one-to-one at the earliest possible age, and let him hear conversations. The first words your child reads will be those he has heard or spoken.

Once your child is ready for books, his reading should be based on real-life experiences and observations. Call your child's attention to the things you see together: rain, snow, clouds, animals, plants, cars, buses and trains. "Then, when children start to read about these things," says Dr. Arthur Kelly, a Long Island, N.Y., elementary-school principal, "they will do so with more interest because they will relate to the stories."

Start with picture books at first and encourage your child to tell stories about the pictures. Drawing and coloring pictures is helpful, too, but don't force it if your child is not interested. When your child progresses from pictures to written words, look up several a day with him in the dictionary (there are versions for children). Make a game of using the new words.

If you have several children and buying books becomes too costly, let the children select books from the library. Another good idea is to arrange temporary exchanges of books with friends or relatives.

James Donovan, Chairman of the New York State Senate Education Committee, reports that the new emphasis on reading at home has fostered improved reading skills and increased children's pleasure in reading. "You can participate without spending a cent," he said. "All you have to do is spend 15 minutes a day reading with your children." And this kind of activity also strengthens feelings of family togetherness. FW

Why Daydreaming Is Really Good for You

By Norman Lobsenz

Do you ever find yourself deep in a reverie about some past event? Or creating a fantasy about a future adventure or achievement? Or just relaxing by building a castle in the air? Chances are that when you snap yourself out of it, you feel a bit embarrassed or even guilty at the realization that you've been "wasting" your time daydreaming.

In a society like ours that puts a premium on practical action and realistic thinking, the daydreamer is usually labeled a woolgatherer — someone who lives too much in a private world to accomplish anything useful. Yet recent psychological findings reveal that daydreaming — more accurately called "creative imagining" — is not only a key factor in good mental health but that it can also be one of our most constructive mental activities.

Psychologist Jerome Singer, a leading authority on what he calls "the world of inner experience," believes that daydreaming is an important emotional and intellectual resource: "It should be prized and cultivated rather than disparaged." Singer has pointed out that the ability to "make believe" is a forerunner of broader creative abilities. It is said that Michelangelo once looked at a block of marble that had been spoiled in quarrying and "saw" its potential for beauty. He used the marble to carve his famous statue of David. Similarly, it was the process we call daydreaming that led Einstein to some of the intuitive mental leaps that helped him formulate his theories of relativity.

Because daydreaming covers such a wide range of mental activity it can best be defined, says Singer, as "an ongoing inner flow of thought that serves man's need for stimulation and adaptation." Studies show that more than nine out of 10 men and women engage in some form of daydream almost every day. According to psychologist Morton Wagman, men tend to imagine themselves as heroes of adventurous and dramatic situations while women have more gentle daydreams. A surprising proportion of women's fantasizing, Wagman found, concerned practical planning for the future — steps to be taken in connection with their work, families or homes.

Our capacity to daydream can have its price, however. When fantasies get out of hand — when they become obsessive or confused with reality — the daydreamer may behave inappropriately or he may allow daydreams to focus too strongly on negative images and emotions, to reveal faults, self-doubts or grandiose wishes. Here are some ways to use daydreaming constructively.

● Daydreaming can help you test future plans or choices by giving you the chance to visualize the possible results of your decisions. "In effect," says Santa Monica, Cal., counselor Hendrie Weisinger, "imagination permits a trial-and-error approach without assessing any penalty for error." In your mind's eyes you can rearrange a roomful of furniture without moving so much as a lamp. In your mind's ear you can test the effectiveness of something important you have to say to your spouse.

● Try using daydreams to vicariously satisfy desires that are for the moment out of reach. A woman who may not be able to afford a luxurious fur coat can get some satisfaction from trying coats on. A man who knows that he cannot think about buying a sailboat for a few more years can visit marinas and boat yards searching for the sloop he can at least dream of owning.

● When you are bored by a long car ride or airplane trip, cultivating pleasant fantasies will help keep you alert. When time hangs heavy during routine tasks, daydreams can entertain you. Biofeedback researchers have discovered that daydreaming tends to produce "alpha" type brain waves which are associated with a state of pleasantly relaxed awareness.

● You can use reverie to help you solve intellectual problems. When the brain is in an "alpha" state it is likely to be more receptive to flashes of insight and cross-connections among facts. Daydreaming can touch off "forgotten" knowledge which, when brought to consciousness, can provide the answers to seemingly insoluble problems.

● Use daydreaming as a form of "inner mental play" that enhances creativity and original thinking. A New England teen-ager, worried about his mother's illness, once spent part of a crisp fall day sitting high in a cherry tree, daydreaming of voyaging to Mars. Robert Goddard, America's pioneer rocket scientist, never let go of his daydream. He transferred his fancies to his work — studied physics and astronomy — and developed the first practical rockets. Thirty years after Goddard died, a rocket-powered space vehicle landed on Mars.

● Using your imagination to anticipate painful emotions can help you to cope more effectively with difficult situations. "By envisioning a stressful future," says Weisinger, "you can ease some of the anxiety or anger it may arouse." Hospital studies, for example, indicate that a patient who can envision what will happen during an operation, or how much discomfort he can expect to feel afterward, will have less pain and make a faster recovery. Management experts recommend mentally rehearsing what you are going to say in a job interview or in a confrontation with the boss.

● Daydreaming can be a way of renewing ties with the past, of tapping buried sources of strength to be used in new tasks. "When I get nervous about making a speech," says one businessman, "I recall how I overcame my nervousness in the past. I'm able to say to myself, I did it then, so I can do it now!"

● Fantasizing is a particularly important way for children to explore the real world vicariously. The ability to make-believe develops in a child by the age of two, when pots and pans and blocks can be whatever a youngster wants them to be. Of course if a child continues to be so deeply involved in fantasy that he or she becomes isolated from real life or has trouble coping with day-to-day events, daydreaming may be something to worry about. But for the most part, Jerome Singer says, make-believe play is what trains children to be learners and planners. As adults, they are better able to anticipate the future or to imagine themselves in someone else's place. Another significant value daydreaming has for children is that it gives them the chance to control their environment.

Can you increase your capacity to daydream? Yes, by doing the following: Tune out distracting signals in the environment by concentrating visually on one spot; learn to shift mentally into a neutral gear during routine tasks; and build coherent daydreams rather than allowing them to flicker on and off without continuity.

When daydreaming is truly creative, psychologist Robert Goldenson has said, "it renews our vitality and 'restores the soul.' Call it daydreaming, building castles in the air, starry-eyed fantasy or just plain unwinding — every child and every adult needs this kind of escape." FW

Big, B-a-a-a-d, Beautiful Harvey Martin

Now that Too Tall is Long Gone Jones, Harvey has become the enforcer of Dallas' Doomsday Defense. Meet Too Much Martin.

By Mark Goodman

When Phyllis George went down to Dallas some time back to interview the Cowboys' all-pro defensive end, Harvey Martin, the towering black athlete gave her a typically rapid-fire account of the merits of his home town and his team. Then he turned around and interviewed Phyllis for his program, The Beautiful Harvey Martin Show. It was an impromptu departure from his usual format — he generally interviews one of his own teammates during the week before a game with a National Football League rival — but it was the kind of winsome touch that Martin's Dallas listeners have come to delight in.

His opponents, however, aren't charmed when he takes to the field. Though off the gridiron Harvey Banks Martin, 28, is one of the most popular players in the game — a classic genial giant who wins friends easily — on the field he's a study in blue-and-silver terror with a knack for leveling rival quarterbacks. In 1977 his ferocious play as part of the rejuvenated Cowboy front four (nicknamed Doomsday II, after the old Doomsday line anchored by Bob Lilly and George Andrie) won him practically every award a defensive lineman could want: All-Pro, Pro-Bowl starter, N.F.L. Defensive Player of the Year.

Last year, dragging a right leg injured in two places, he still helped rouse the lethargic World Champion Cowboys from their early-season doldrums and lead them to their second-straight Super Bowl, where they lost a 35-31 heart-breaker to the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Harvey himself laughs off his "split personality" and lives with it easily. Sitting in his handsome house in North Dallas, a few miles and some light-years away from his boyhood home in South Oak Cliff, Texas, Harvey opens a can of beer and slips a few unsuspecting goldfish into the tank as dinner for his pet oscar (a mean tropical fish). "Oooohh, I feel sorry for the goldfish," he croons and then offers a simple self-examination: "Sometimes when I'm out on that field," he says, "I get this funny feeling inside me. I think I even get more intense than the rest of them."

"See, fans like roughhouse football. I like to think we're gladiators in the Colosseum. Fans don't pay their money to see pretty football. They want to see somebody hit or a fight. The guys who give them that are the ones they remember. And it's no fun if nobody knows who you are."

That is the voice of the professional, to be sure. Still, all of Harvey's devotion on the field isn't strictly a matter of business. In an era of big-money free agents, when the contract comes first and the team a distant second, Harvey Martin is wildly, singularly, unabashedly in love with the Dallas Cowboys. Adjusting his incongruous bifocals and sluicing down another can of beer, Martin muses, "I'm a lot different than anyone else on this team for one reason — I grew up in Dallas, and I was here when the team first came to Dallas. I rooted for Dandy Don (Meredith, the first Cowboy quarterback) and cried when they lost to Green Bay in the cold (in 1967). I've been a fan from the very beginning. And believe it or not, I'm still a fan."

Harvey's early days were no indication that he'd one day be a blue-chip pro prospect. As a boy he loathed the very idea of fighting and generally let his feisty sister handle the toe-to-toe combat. Later, at South Oak Cliff High School, he opted for basketball rather than football and didn't set cleat on field until late in his junior year. At the time, Harvey was just a gangling shell of his present 6-foot 5-inch, 252-pound self. He was a comic figure in a helmet and shoes that were much too small.

By his senior year a few major colleges were mildly interested, but Harvey chose little East Texas State, where, recruiters convinced him, he had a better chance for development than at the Oklahomas or Nebraskas. It proved a savvy choice. His sophomore year he roomed with a hulking senior defensive lineman named Dwight White, now a standout with the Steelers. Harvey learned a lot from White and from "Mean" Joe Greene, another fair country ballplayer from that neck of the woods. By the time he was a senior in 1972 he led East Texas to a NAIA Division I national championship.

The keen eye of the Cowboys' scouting computer caught him, and Harvey was drafted in the third round that year. His seasoning at the hands of White and Greene pulled him through the tribal rites of the Dallas training camp, but even then defensive line coach Ernie Stautner had to push him for his lack of aggression.

That changed with one season in the N.F.L. trenches. "I found myself getting meaner," he recalls, "and looking at the guy across from me as my enemy."

He wound up having an excellent rookie season but found himself the following year playing in the long shadow (6 feet 9 inches, to be precise) of the Cowboys' number-one draft pick, Ed "Too Tall" Jones, who strode right into the spotlight on the other end of the defensive line. The two became the friendliest of enemies.

Away from the game, Harvey was a boisterous tribute to the adage of playing as hard as one works. "Those first couple of years," he reflects, "I discoed myself to death and blew my money. Then I settled down a little, got involved in a sporting-goods store, bought into a barbecue place, started speaking around the state. Figured I'd better learn to talk."

No problem there. Harvey talked and talked, eventually talking his way into a regular radio feature. He also became a model of community service. Despite the staggering 16-game regular-season schedule (plus, for a Cowboy, the perennial postseason playoffs) Harvey has always found time for the Big Brothers, the Martin Luther King Foundation and for visiting the sick in hospitals. He eventually found, in fact, that he was spreading himself too thin and recently bowed out of a bar venture that was simply taking too much time.

"When you play football," he says, "you have to give it you. That's why, in the off-season, I bust my butt in these other projects, to get away from football, because, for six months, you're giving yourself to that and nothing else."

It's a good thing he developed such an attitude because responsibility found him swiftly — he was needed to help rebuild the Cowboy team. Says Dallas' shrewd general manager, Tex Schramm: "Harvey took to leadership instinctively here. He has that built-in feel for what is required in team relationships and relations with the public. A few years ago we had a team that was losing and, badly needed leadership and direction from within the ranks of the players. Harvey's the one who called the players together and outlined what they should be doing to unite and become Dallas Cowboys."

The burden is even heavier on Martin this year. Not only is he one of the team's acknowledged leaders (along with quarterback Roger Staubach) and part of the sturdiest defensive line combination in pro football (with tackle Randy White), he and White must compensate for the twin loss of tackle Jethro Pugh by retirement and the astonishing defection of "Too Tall" Jones to professional boxing.

As if to underscore this responsibility, the Cowboys suffered a quick string of potentially serious injuries during the early season, including quarterback-punter Danny White's fractured thumb and safety Charlie Water's torn knee ligaments, which will sideline him the entire season.

"Sometimes these things are good for a team," Harvey says. "There's always been this myth about the Cowboys — that no matter what happens, we have the guys to come off the bench and do the job. Now we'll see if it's true."

Harvey Martin trickles the last of the goldfish into the waiting jaws in the tank. "You watch," he says. "We're going to the Super Bowl again. And this time, we're gonna win it."

How To Strengthen Your Memory Power

By Mary Russ

One of Albert Einstein's biographers tells a story about an encounter between the physicist and a neighborhood girl that took place as he was walking through slush and snowdrifts on his way to teach a class at Princeton. After they had chatted for a while, the girl looked down at Einstein's moccasins, which were soaking wet. "Mr. Einstein, you've come out without your boots again," she said. Einstein laughed and pulled up his trousers to show his ankles. "And I forgot my socks," he confessed.

Although you probably don't have your head in the clouds of cosmological physics, you undoubtedly experience a fair share of forgetfulness: You are introduced to someone at a party and forget the name before the handshake is over; you walk away from a department-store counter, leaving your umbrella tilted against it; you reach for the car keys only to discover that you have no idea where you left them.

Why is it that our memory sometimes lets us down? To understand this breakdown, it's important first to have an idea of how the whole process works. Memory is a set of mental abilities, more wide-ranging than the one word would seem to imply. It involves the registration, storage and retrieval of information.

Though there is disagreement over how memory actually works, many scientists believe that a memory causes a "trace" in the brain — not a physical mark or groove but rather a chemical change. It also is believed that the function of memory is divided into the two categories of short-term and long-term memory. Short-term has a very low retention rate, usually less than 20 seconds. Long-term memory is relatively permanent and has virtually unlimited capacity.

The nerve changes that take place in the brain are different for each type of memory. In short-term, the processing of a fact or impression involves a speedy but complex chain of events. Suppose you look up the telephone number of the local pizzeria. As you see the number, there are chemical changes on the retina of the eye. This triggers impulses in the brain that persist for a brief time and then die out as they're replaced by other patterns of activity: new facts, sights and sounds that you experience. This dying out is the reason that you forget the number practically immediately after you've dialed it and started talking.

If you don't want the pattern to fade out — if you want the fact or impression to be part of long-term memory — it must in some way be selectively maintained and reestablished as a distinctive pattern.

This will happen if the impression is repeated enough or is made more vivid or important to you. For instance, you make yourself remember a good friend's telephone number by rehearsing it in your mind. As a long-term memory it is there for keeps, just waiting for the right cue to retrieve it.

Of course, some of us do a better job at remembering than others. One popular view is that certain people are simply born with better memories than others, but a number of psychologists doubt that heredity is the determining factor. Dr. Barbara Jones, a Massachusetts neuropsychologist, observes, "While heredity has something to do with it, it appears that there are certain personality styles that relate more specifically to memory. People who have more rigid personalities — who rely on routine, are well-organized, and aim toward gaining control of their lives — tend to have very good memories because they depend more on their knowledge of facts."

Is there a way to improve your memory? Can you make certain that essential information doesn't get dumped out of a short-term compartment in 20 seconds? The memory experts say yes.

"Association is the key," says Harry Lorayne, author of The Memory Book. You have to relate what you want to remember to something verbal or visual. Lorayne offers an example of how this works: Very few people can accurately remember the shape of foreign countries — except perhaps Italy. That's because most people have come to note that Italy is shaped like a boot. The shape of a boot is something already known and therefore hard to forget.

All human memory is associative. It involves connecting particular concepts, events, facts and principles and weaving them into systematic relation with each other. Enthusiasm, fear or anything which causes a heightening of perception can intensify this process of association. Your interest — or lack of it — in what you are seeing, hearing or learning can make all the difference.

Good organization can also assist your memory, just as an orderly street plan helps you to find your way to a particular corner in a city. Organization involves grouping items by categories and establishing a pattern to make remembering easier. For instance, if you start making a point of placing the car keys on the shelf near the door to the garage, you're not likely to lose track of them.

Failure to pay attention is frequently the real reason why we forget. We blame our memory for something that is really the fault of our concentration. At a party you may forget the names of people you met because during the introductions you were actually concentrating on the impression you were giving — and not the new names. Failure to pay attention is also the most common reason for absent-mindedness — you may "forget" where you put your car keys because you were not paying a bit of attention when you put them down.

Certain physiological states can interfere with memory function. Anyone who has ever had too much to drink knows that the morning after it may be difficult to recollect what happened the night before. "People who are drunk are not processing information," says Dr. Laird Cermak, a professor and research psychologist. Since alcohol depresses the brain and the nervous system, it's particularly difficult to learn anything when you've been drinking.

There are also memory disorders that result from accidents, strokes and serious psychological stress. Following a severe head injury that produces a concussion, a person may experience a loss of memory known as amnesia. Such loss can cover periods ranging from a few minutes prior to an accident, weeks or even years before the injury. The more serious the injury, the greater the periods of amnesia is likely to be. Occasionally amnesia is permanent, but usually the patient recovers most of the lost memories.

Perhaps the memory loss feared most by people is the one that begins to appear at the onset of old age. Psychologists agree that as we get older there is a very gradual loss of the ability to learn and to recall. As a person grows older, some brain cells die or are destroyed by minute injuries of various kinds. But the memory problems common among many older people should not be confused with senility, and it is dangerous to make general statements about the long-term functional changes which take place as a person ages. Professor Ian Hunter, author of Memory, says: "So much depends on the individual, his circumstances and interests, the sort of accomplishments he has acquired and whether he continues to use those accomplishments or not. Some people become old before their time while others continue to function at high levels of achievement into extreme old age."

Doctors are currently working on developing a drug that will help slow down or prevent memory loss due to age. Though there's no miracle pill yet, you can make your memory work better by using some of the techniques of association and organization mentioned above. Here are a few tricks to try:

● One of the most famous systems for remembering a list of errands or objects is called the "link" method. According to Lorayne, it works like this: You link together the objects by associating the first to the second, the second to the third, the third to the fourth and so on. You should make your associations as ridiculous or exaggerated as possible, so that you "see" them in your mind's eye. Let's say that one morning you want to remember to visit a sick friend at the hospital and pick up some postage stamps. Try picturing your friend lying under a giant stamp rather than a blanket. This image will be hard to forget.

● Another good trick that will help you remember tasks that must be done is to make a physical change in your environment. This acts as a cue. For instance, Lorayne suggests that if you're worried about burning dinner while you watch TV, put a frying pan on the set to remind you that dinner's in the oven.

● When you're introduced to lots of people at a party it can be hard to remember names. Make sure you hear the name when you're introduced. If you didn't get it, ask the person to repeat it. Then say the name over several times in your head. This repetition will help the name to stick.

LIVING SPACE

Sectional sofa in Herculon by Hiatt

A beautifully arranged room can be achieved even in today's shrinking interiors. One way is with a curvaceous sectional sofa which seats lots of people in a limited space.

Setting up a dining area in a small space takes some strategic planning. Small-scaled, glass-surfaced furniture, wall-hung counter and airy, light colors all contribute.

Dining room furniture by Chromcraft

AT HOME

Most of us live in homes that never seem to have enough space. But you can attack the problem head-on by becoming a "space detective."

The idea is to take a survey of each room to determine whether you're really utilizing all the space you have. Then consider these strategies.

Furniture Placement: Where you locate your major pieces of furniture can mean the difference between a cramped interior and one that's dynamic with well-spaced conversation and activity areas.

In a living room, turning the sofa so that it juts out into the room at a right angle, frees the wall space behind it. Two chairs or a small love seat placed opposite the sofa will create a comfortable seating area, with a coffee table in the center.

If your dining area is very small, utilize wall-hung pieces. One practical idea is to have a long shelf built and hinged to the wall so that it drops down when not in use.

In the bedroom, rules are meant to be broken, as in putting a bed in the middle of the room to free the space around it. Today's headboards with built-in reading lights or slide-out snack surfaces help eliminate the need for night tables. Where children or teen-agers have to share a bedroom, place a bed along each adjoining wall and separate the two with a large cube or table that fits into the corner.

Illusions of Space: Any small room can be made to seem larger than it really is by creating a look of airiness. Pale colors, which recede, help to push out the walls. The same floor covering running through a whole house or variations on the same color scheme can give an illusion of space because of the continuity.

Window shades in place of curtains will open up an area. Pictures hung on either side of a narrow foyer will seem to push walls out, as will painting the two side walls of a narrow room a light color and the wall that joins them a deeper color.

Mirrored walls will certainly expand the dimensions of a room, especially in a dark corner, an alcove, a recessed wall or between two tall windows. Contemporary see-through furniture of plexiglass, lucite or glass appears to take up no space at all. You may also consider lightly scaled furniture with slim, straight lines to create spaciousness in a small room.

Good Storage Planning: Storage space — or rather the lack of it — remains the number-one challenge of home dwellers. Kitchens are a magnet for counter-cluttering gadgets and appliances, so take to the walls and use shelving everywhere possible. Store rarely used china and glassware in wicker baskets on top of cabinets near the ceiling.

Most closets have one conventional rod for hanging clothes. By removing the rod and adding one at the top near the ceiling, another well below that, you will have double hanging space, ideal for separates like skirts, pants and blouses. Or you can build a shelf around the perimeter of the closet near the ceiling, storing clear plastic "window" boxes on it.

Dual-Purpose Furniture: A terrific way to "extend" your space is by using furniture that functions for more than one need. There are handsome trunks made of wood, metal and brass which can also serve as end tables. For the children, trundle beds and captain's beds (those with a storage drawer) are back in style. But the two most versatile dual-purpose furniture items are the sleep sofa and the slim-lined Parson's table which can double as a desk, display accessories or be used as a buffet-serving unit.

Design Tips from An Expert

Mastering the art of decorating is not as difficult as you might think. Family Weekly interviewed a leading interior designer and author, Emily Malino, who showed us how to cut through some of the problems people encounter.

Traffic Patterns. The basic goal in planning a room layout is to try to group furniture according to the function that it represents in your life. Seating furniture should be arranged so that people feel comfortable, and can relate to one another. A common mistake is to plaster furniture against the walls around a room. When you have to get through that room, to open a window or get from one room to another. It creates a disturbing traffic aisle down the center of the room. How do you arrange furniture in an attractive, functional way?

An easy, foolproof method is to measure the overall space and make a floor plan that's scaled down. Use quarter-inch graph paper, which has four squares to the inch, allowing one-half inch to equal a foot. First, measure the width and length of the room at floor-level. Then draw a rough outline of the room as it looks visually, indicating where the windows are, the doors, a closet. Then measure the exact dimensions of the walls. After measuring one wall, add up the figures to see if they correspond to the floor measurements. They shouldn't be off by more than an inch. You should also measure doors, windows and closets, including the trim. Once you have a floor plan and know the kind of furniture that will be in a room, measure your furniture pieces, then convert them into half-inch scale outlines on cardboard; label and cut out each piece.

Cluster furniture according to function and overall space of room (see illustration). Furniture has to be of the same scale as the room plan you've drawn or you might end up purchasing furniture twice as large as the space it's going in. Clearance between furniture pieces and adjacent walls is important. The edge of a dining table, for instance, should not be less than three feet from a wall. Remember to balance furniture. All large pieces shouldn't be clustered at one end of a room. Avoid positioning a piano and sofa directly adjacent to each other, for example.

Color. The biggest problem with color is that people are usually afraid to deal with it. Ask yourself: Is the room light? Is it dark? Is it a room I'll spend a lot of time in, like my bedroom? The basic guideline in determining a color scheme is that it be livable, beautiful and maintainable. The room with a northern exposure is fairly dark and should be treated in a light color. A bright and sunny room takes almost any color. The size of a room would also be a determinant. The smaller the room, the lighter it should be, the larger the room, the more dramatic the color should be that you punch in — this will help to pull it together. In a small room you would tend to use a monochromatic color scheme. You can go into a family of colors. Light blues and greens or pale peach and coral would be equally appropriate.

Those warm colors would be good in a room with northern exposure, the blues and greens in southern exposure. In general, in contemporary spaces, keep the ceiling an almost-white color because ceilings are usually low. As far as the floor is concerned, in line with your maintenance goal, it should be in a medium shade, especially in the living room where traffic is heavy. In the bedroom you might want to use an off-white rug. Then use a slightly darker shade for walls.

Lighting. The lighting in a room should be balanced. A common mistake is positioning lamps on either end of a sofa and letting the rest of the room disappear into the black hole of Calcutta. Look at your floor plan. The room has four corners, and groupings are arranged according to functions that have to be lighted. "Lamps" have a broad definition. They can take the form of ceiling track lights, a floor canister light (to illuminate a piece of furniture or plant from behind), wall washes that light paintings or a torch lamp that throws light toward the ceiling.

The room shouldn't be uniformly lit like an office. Proper lighting illuminates a room's color, the style of furniture, the accessories, (which give eye interest), the shapes, and the scale. When you light the periphery of a room, you make it larger. When you light inside a furniture grouping and leave the outer part darker, you enclose the room. Task-lighting, again, is determined by furniture arrangement. You know by your floor plan where you want a reading light or general illumination. If you're going to read, sew or study, you need direct lighting for that task. A lamp that rotates or swivels can direct its light in more than one direction. So explore all options.

Windows. Very few rooms have easy-to-treat windows. For the unusual-sized picture window you're almost obligated to have a soft look with draperies that can be pulled back on a track. Windows that don't match in size — because one may have an air conditioner under it — demand a treatment which will marry the walls to the windows, calling as little attention to them as possible. Ideal are shutters, shades or venetian blinds fitted into a frame you build from the top of the window to the floor, built out to encompass the depth of the air conditioner, as well as to conserve heat in winter.

How to Beat the Cost of Winter Heating By Tapping Energy from the Sun

By Peggy Brecht

Heating bills are rising so high that homeowners may one day have to abandon their homes because they can't afford the energy costs," predicts Robert Bennett, solar architect and engineer. "This catastrophe can be avoided if we begin to better take advantage of our most powerful natural energy resource — the sun."

To help families deal with the energy problem, Mr. Bennett has designed a house that uses solar energy. Unlike buildings with active solar heating systems, which require expensive solar collectors, electric controls, pumps and large storage tanks, Bennett's house is constructed so that it collects and stores solar energy and then converts it to usable heat. This "passive" solar house works because of its architectural design — it faces the sun and uses new combinations of some common building materials.

"The principles of passive solar design can be applied to new homes and also can be retrofitted on existing homes of any size," says Bennett. Illustrating these passive solar principles is the house Bennett designed for a family in suburban Philadelphia (see photograph).

"This design represents a new style and direction in architecture which I call heliocentric architecture," explains Bennett.

While unique in appearance, the house contains a standard living room, dining room, kitchen, family room, solarium and powder room on the first floor, with three bedrooms and two baths upstairs. It costs no more to build than a conventional house of the same size. The big difference is that the sun provides 75 percent of the energy for winter heating and thus reduces the heating costs by 75 percent.

The two-story high greenhouse-solarium, set between the family room wing and the living room wing, faces south in order to collect the maximum amount of solar energy throughout the winter. Once the sun's radiation passes through the glass wall of the solarium, it is absorbed by the dark brick inside walls and a black Pennsylvania slate floor. The trapped energy is then transferred to the inside of the house by two methods:

Heat moves by slow conduction through the 12-inch-thick brick wall to the living areas on the other side in about eight hours and is ready to radiate heat into the rooms when it is most needed — at night. There are also small fans, thermostatically controlled, which blow warmed air from the solarium directly into the living areas. Protective louvers on the fans prevent the escape of warm air from the living areas to the solarium at night.

Last winter, when the outside temperature was in the teens, the solarium was in the 80's, and the living areas in the 70's, without any auxiliary heating during the day. In addition to collecting and storing solar energy, a solarium-greenhouse can be a luxurious place in which to relax.

Many existing homes can be retrofitted with a solarium-greenhouse for collecting and storing solar energy. This requires space on the south side of the house for the addition — with sufficient setback from the property line to meet the zoning requirements. To determine which side of the house is south-facing (or closest to south-facing), use a compass or check which wall of the house receives the most sun at noon.

Another point to consider is that the sunlight must be able to enter the greenhouse without interference from trees or other buildings. Evergreen trees in the way may have to be removed but deciduous trees, which lose their leaves in winter, will allow the sun to penetrate when it is most needed and yet provide shade in the summer. To evaluate the potential for a solarium-greenhouse retrofit for your home, check for shadows on a winter day several hours before and after noon.

If you have the proper southern orientation, the next requirement is that your exterior wall be built with a material thick enough to absorb the energy. A dark brick, stone or concrete wall is best. Ideally, this wall should be uninsulated so that the solar heat is conducted into the living spaces with no obstruction. Vents or small fans at the top of the solarium wall are also used to carry this warm air into the house.

If a house does not have enough space for the addition of a solarium, a "Trombe wall" may still be a useful addition. The Trombe wall is made by constructing an insulated glass wall six to 12 inches in front of a 12-inch-thick dark brick, stone or concrete wall. Solar energy absorbed by the uninsulated masonry is conducted through the wall and radiates heat to the inside rooms. In addition, vents at the bottom of the masonry wall allow cool air from the room to pass into the space between the glass and brick. The air is heated by the warmed wall, rises to the top of the space and re-enters the room through vents near the ceiling. Small fans at the top increase the natural thermal convection of solar heat into the living areas.

Unshaded, south-facing masonry may be retrofitted similarly with exterior glass and vents at the top and bottom to become Trombe walls.

Live It Up With Luscious Lettuce

By Marilyn Hansen

Iceberg lettuce, the crisp firm-headed variety — is the most popular lettuce in this country. It is plentifully grown in states like Arizona and California. With its crisp leaves and long-keeping power, it is the lettuce most of us have known since childhood.

Many other greens are available today: Cos, of course, or more commonly called romaine lettuce, as well as Boston and leaf-lettuce.

LETTUCE NOODLE BOWL

- 1 cup fine noodles
- 2 cups water
- 2 bouillon cubes
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup diagonally sliced celery
- 1/2 cup green pepper strips
- 1/2 cup onion, sliced lengthwise
- 1 tablespoon silvered fresh ginger
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 3 tablespoons water
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 2 cups shredded lettuce: iceberg, romaine or leaf

1. In 2-qt. saucepan, cook noodles in 2 cups boiling water with 2 bouillon cubes. Cook 7 to 8 minutes or until just tender.
2. Drain noodles when cooked, saving the liquid.
3. In large skillet or wok, heat 2 tablespoons vegetable oil. Add celery, green pepper, onion; stir-fry 2 minutes.
4. Blend ginger, sugar, cornstarch, water and soy sauce. Add to skillet along with about 1 cup of the reserved noodle cooking liquid. Heat to boiling, stirring.
5. Add shredded lettuce and toss. Add additional liquid if necessary. Serve in bowls; use chopsticks or fork and spoon to eat.

Makes 4 servings

ICEBERG STIR-FRY

- 1 head iceberg lettuce
- 6 medium-sized carrots
- 1 medium-sized onion, sliced
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 chicken bouillon cube
- 1/2 cup water
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon cornstarch
- 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves, crumbled
- 1/4 teaspoon sugar
- 2 cups cooked turkey or ham strips

1. Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. Finely shred, using a sharp French knife, to measure 6 cups. Refrigerate shredded lettuce in a plastic bag or in a covered bowl while preparing remaining ingredients.
2. Pare carrots and cut in very thin julienne strips, to measure 3 1/2 cups.
3. Sauté carrot strips with onion and garlic in butter for 3 minutes, stirring.
4. Combine all remaining ingredients except meat; add to skillet.
5. Add the crisp shredded lettuce; toss lightly and serve at once.

Makes 4 servings

SALAD ADD-A-CRUNCH

- 2 cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
  - 1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
  - 1/3 cup grated Parmesan or Romano cheese
  - 1/4 teaspoon onion or garlic salt
1. In medium bowl combine all ingredients; mix well.
  2. Bake in ungreased 15 x 10-inch jelly roll pan at 350°F. for 18 to 20 minutes or until light-golden brown. Cool.
  3. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator up to 3 months.
  4. Sprinkle over tossed green salads, soups, casseroles or vegetables.

Makes about 3 cups

- Variations: 1. Add 1/3 cup wheat germ, unprocessed bran or chopped nuts.
2. Add 3 tablespoons sesame seed.
  3. Add 1 to 2 tablespoons oregano leaves, thyme leaves or chili powder.
  4. Add 2 teaspoons oregano leaves, thyme leaves or chili powder.
  5. Add 1/2 teaspoon curry powder or dry mustard.

LETTUCE ROLL-UPS

- 1 medium head iceberg lettuce
- 1/4 to 1/2 cup finely chopped mushrooms
- 1 green onion, finely chopped
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- 1 can (5 oz.) water chestnuts, drained and finely chopped
- 1 can (4 3/4 oz.) chicken spread
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder or 1/2 garlic clove, crushed
- 1/4 teaspoon ground ginger or 1/2 teaspoon finely chopped fresh gingerroot
- 1 can (8 oz.) tomato sauce
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame seeds, optional

1. Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. Chill in plastic bag or crisper.
2. In a small bowl, mix mushrooms, onion, lemon juice, 2 teaspoons soy sauce, water chestnuts and chicken spread; set aside.
3. In small saucepan, mix brown sugar, garlic powder and ginger. Stir in tomato sauce and soy sauce. Heat to boiling. Mix cornstarch with water; stir into tomato mixture. Heat, stirring until mixture thickens. Blend in vinegar.
4. At serving time, place head of lettuce, core-side down, on serving plate.
5. Heap chicken mixture in bowl. Each person will peel off his own lettuce leaves and spread leaves with chicken. Lettuce leaves are then rolled up, cigar-style. Dunk, if desired, in individual bowls of warm sweet-and-sour sauce.
6. Toasted sesame seeds may be sprinkled on top of the sauce for an attractive garnish.

Makes about 4 servings marketing Assn.

10850 Riverside Dr., Dept. 22-738 N. Hollywood, Ca. 91602

Now, for about the price of a round-trip ticket to the office, you can run your own "Desk Drawer" Railroad. You get super-compact, electric model railroad complete with six feet of 1/4" track, two switches, a tiny 3 1/2" steam locomotive, coal tender and caboose. Just put in a single penlite battery and watch it go... zipping around your telephone and chugging past your out box. The set sets up in less than 2 square feet of desk space.

Or, if your desk is really crowded, set up an 11" "underground railway" right in a desk drawer! Beautifully made of high-impact plastic, each car is intricately detailed in miniature scale. What a great tongue-in-cheek gift for any exec who fancies himself the 1970's answer to Commodore Vanderbilt! And what a marvelous gift for any little railroader, too. You'll want several sets at our low price—once you see this charming "Desk Drawer" Railroad, you won't want to part with it... even if you ordered it as a gift for your boss. Only $4.99—and your satisfaction is guaranteed. Order your set, today.

Dazzling Light Fountain

"Explodes" in a Cascade of Beautiful Colors!

Thanks to the space-age miracle of "fiber optics," this decorator's dream lamp explodes with a rippling, flickering, cascade dazzle of rainbow colors... a stunning "fountain of light" that becomes the focal point of any room! It's charming... it's romantic... it really sets the mood.

Hundreds of tiny optical fibres conduct light from a concealed bulb in the base, and glow with a dazzling array of blues, greens, golds, all the colors of the rainbow! Yet the fabulous spun-glass fibres always remain cool to the touch, completely safe, even for a baby's nursery.

Just plug this multi-colored Fountain of Light in. It becomes a spectacular centerpiece in any lighted or darkened room. Use it on your dining room table instead of candles, for a beautifully romantic dinner! And what a conversation piece when friends drop in for the evening! 14" tall, with a sweeping 15" spread. ## Gifts to Make For Christmas

For a young miss, a ruffle-framed mirror.

These high-bouncing eggheads are for tots, but adults find them just as fascinating.

A box-in-a-box kit features flaps that fold down for holding sewing accessories.

Give a flowering clipboard.

It's fun to receive handmade gifts. It's even more fun to make them. If you plan to give handmade gifts this year, the time to start them is now — Christmas somehow arrives sooner than expected.

An unusual, delightful item to make for any woman on your list is a box-in-a-box sewing kit, modeled after a Victorian sewing box. The outside box, covered in a pretty print or brightly colored adhesive-backed paper, is an attractive addition to any dresser or tabletop. A small box is inside. When the lid is removed all the sides fall down, revealing pins and needles, a thimble, scissors and mending items held in place with bands of velvet. It is a surprisingly easy and inexpensive item to make.

For the career girl on your list, a boutique clipboard — covered in a pretty fabric — would be a much-appreciated gift, and any difficult-to-buy-for teen-ager would be delighted with a real jeans pocketbook. Made from the pockets of a discarded pair of jeans, it is literally a "pocket" pocketbook.

For the tiny tots, exercising eggheads that bounce on elastic cords are great fun. The weight in the eggs and the length of the cord determine how high they bounce and for how long. Even grown-ups like this one.

What little girl wouldn't be pleased with her very own wall mirror framed with eyelet ruffles? It's very quick and easy to make, completed with a piece of cardboard and a stapler.

For a truly practical gift that is also pretty, make a super scrubber. Rows and rows of nylon net are stitched to a bleach bottle handle. It can't be beat for scrubbing everything from the bathtub to garden-dirty knees. You can make one in an hour.

For the men on your list, a handkerchief can be cleverly folded to look like a shirt. A real tie tack holds the miniature tie in place. It's two gifts in one.

This Christmas don't worry about last-minute shopping and what to get for whom. Make the gifts you give and know that they'll be right.

For complete step-by-step directions for all the items mentioned, plus photographs and illustrations, send for your copy of Family Weekly's booklet #325, "Gifts to Make for Christmas Giving." Send $1.00 to:

Family Weekly Magazine
P.O. Box 438, Dept. B

Be sure to include leaflet number and your name, address and zip code. (New York State residents, please add sales tax.)

What Catholics believe about Mary

No, Catholics do not believe that Mary is equal to God. They do not worship her. They do not adore her images. They do not consider her in any way as the rival of Christ, "the one Mediator between God and men."

What then do Catholics believe about Mary? They believe that all she is, she owes to the goodness of God. He chose her for a unique place in His plans for the redemption of the human race. And for her allotted vocation He endowed her with special graces. Among these were divine motherhood, perpetual virginity, sinlessness.

On her part, Mary, as a responsible human being, cooperated with God's grace. She responded so perfectly, in fact, to God's advances that she is a model of faith and obedience. In a word, Catholics believe that God's power on the one hand and Mary's cooperation on the other made her the kind of person whom all later generations would call "blessed."

For more on Catholic belief about Mary, we invite you to send for our free pamphlet, "The Mother of Jesus." No one will call on you.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

Our first-grader, Mandy, had talked excitedly about playing with her friend on the school's playground. I could not place him, so I asked her to describe the boy. "He has black hair; he's about so high," she said touching her forehead, "and he..." but Mandy was running out of description. "Oh, Mom, you know Timmy: he's the one with the periods at the end of his smile."

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

How Important Is Your Name?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People often make up their minds about the type of person you'll turn out to be before they meet you — just by the sound of your given name.
2. An unusual first name is a liability.
3. The way a person signs his name provides a clue to how easy he is to know.
4. A child's given name often reveals a great deal about his parents.
5. A person's name has been described as the second face he presents to the world, and if he doesn't like this second face he isn't likely to be on good terms with himself.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies conducted by a team of Ohio University behavioral scientists show that the relative harshness of the phonetic sounds making up a name, along with name associations,

"can contribute to the formation of stereotypes and behavior expectancies." It was found, for example, that names that were rated on a psychological scale as active, such as Bruno, Otto, Sargent, Baxter, Shepard, gave others the impression that their owners were action-minded, to-think-is-to-do types. On the other hand, names which were rated as passive, such as Aldwin, Winthrop, Alfred, Milton and Wendell suggested to others that the people who belonged to those names were similarly passive in temperament and attitude.

2. True. At least, this is so in some cases but false in others. It often depends on the individual's circumstances. In some instances an odd or out-of-the-ordinary first name is a liability, in others the opposite is true. A series of studies on the effects of unusual first names conducted at Guilford College (N.C.) has shown, for example, that unusual-named members of the upper class were more, not less, likely to be found in Who's Who, suggesting no impairment by reason of name. And in a further study, performed on data that had been gathered on 11,246 high-school students, "none showed consistent negative effects from having unusual names." The investigation showed, however, that an unusual first name does appear to be a deterrent to higher achievement in some cases, particularly with individuals of the underprivileged class.

3. True. The Guilford College studies summarize the results of research showing that "subjects who signed their names using a style employing initials for the first two names tended to be more conservative than those who wrote their first names out." And findings are cited which suggest that failure to reveal a given name indicates a lack of self-disclosure. This characteristic tends to make a person difficult to understand or establish a close friendship with — since revealing his innermost thoughts and feelings is something he very rarely does.

4. True. Extensive studies at the University of Toronto show that children's names become potential mines of information about the parents — and what they expect of their children. It is pointed out, for example, that "the given name, even when not implying a special attribute, such as Prudence, Constance, Frank, etc., can still, in a variety of ways, express the expectation parents have for this particular child." It is noted that a girl named Rose may be expected to be like a rose; a boy named Lionel, like a lion. Names such as Angela, Earl, Lance, Ruby and many more impute characteristics which are, presumably, desired for the child. A further finding: "Naming compulsively after oneself can be a measure of narcissism (self-love), as, for example, in the case of one subject in the study whose own name was Ruth and who named all her six children with names beginning with R. The implication is that naming after oneself is associated with heightened expectations of that child."

5. True. A West Virginia Wesleyan College study showed that individuals who dislike their names tend to have less positive attitudes toward themselves than those who like their names and that those who feel uncomfortable with their names tend to express general dissatisfaction with themselves. FW

birds, inaugurates the collection. Crafted in fine, hand-painted porcelain, it is both an impressive work of art and a model of ornithological accuracy. And it will be issued at the very modest price of $90 — which may itself be paid in three convenient monthly installments of $30 each.

This new and original work of art has been designed to the Society's commission by the internationally renowned wildlife artist Peter Barrett. The Goldfinch is portrayed clinging to the branch of an almond tree that's aburst with blossoms. The vivid scarlet, black and white of the head... the bright bars of yellow upon the wings... the delicate formation of the tail feathers... all are depicted with realism and accuracy, in authentic natural color.

Moreover, The European Goldfinch will be sculptured life size in this enchanting work of art, which will be created for the Society by Franklin Porcelain in Japan—home of some of the world's most gifted and experienced porcelain craftsmen.

In the tradition of classic works in fine porcelain, The European Goldfinch will be made available in a single, limited edition, reserved exclusively for those who order from the Society's first collection of international bird sculptures during 1979. When all valid orders from those individuals have been filled, the edition will be permanently closed. A Certificate of Authenticity bearing the signature of the Director of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds will accompany each sculpture.

The European Goldfinch, by Peter Barrett, will provide a fascinating focal point of beauty for your home. It will be a conversation piece of which you will never tire.
A treasured heirloom, to be deservedly passed along to future generations.

To reserve The European Goldfinch, you should act promptly. Indeed, your Reservation Application must be postmarked by the world-wide closing date of December 31, 1979 to be accepted.

Sculpture shown approximately actual size. The bird itself stands 4 1/2 inches (11cm) in height.

WHAT IS THE WORLD

There's Energy In Them Thar Cattails

The lowly cattail appears to have a promising future in the energy field. A group of University of Minnesota scientists is currently exploring ways of turning the prolific plant into usable fuels.

"The plant has a large amount of carbohydrate which is very easy to convert to alcohol," explains Dr. Douglas Pratt, head of the University's botany department. "And liquid fuels are what we need. However, the bulkiness of the cattail means that the conversion process would have to take place within 10 to 15 miles of where the plant is being harvested. Although we lack the specialized kinds of conversion machinery right now, eventually I could see small communities located near wetlands becoming energy self-sufficient."

Dr. Pratt noted that cattails grow in wetlands nationwide, and they use some pollutants as nutrients. Cattails planted around sewage treatment plants would further filter nitrogen and phosphorus from the effluent, creating purer water and usable energy at the same time. "And," says Dr. Pratt, "we already have 10 million acres of cattails in Minnesota. Two to three million are all we need to make an impact on this state's energy needs." Now that's a renewable resource.

Clowning Around

Clowns have a history that stretches back to Renaissance Europe, and that tradition is still going strong in the bozos of today. While many clowns continue to perform in circuses, others, such as those in the Comezzi Bozo Ensemble, are finding a rapt audience in the street.

Eric Trules is the founder of the ensemble, which he terms "New York City's resident clown troupe." A professional dancer and the former director of a clown

Kids Today

What do today's elementary school-age children consider their favorite subject? What's their favorite food? What books do they enjoy most? What television programs do they tune in to?

A survey of 2,500 elementary schoolchildren by Instructor, an education magazine for elementary schoolteachers nationwide, showed some surprising answers. "We have certain stereotypes about children," says Sally Reed, one of the survey's originators, "and while there's a great deal of information around about kids, very little of it actually comes from the children themselves." The questionnaire revealed that the best-loved subject in school is math (that's what they said), followed by reading. The majority of kids favor pizza over hamburgers and Mork and Mindy over other TV shows. Favorite books included Charlotte's Web, Stuart Little, A Wrinkle in Time and Little House on the Prairie.

National Education Association

"By and large, we found that kids are much more aware about what's going on in the world than most grown-ups give them credit for," says Reed. "You definitely can't put kids into neat categories."

troupe in Chicago, Trules, whose professional name is Gino Comezzi, has been teaching his particular brand of clowning for two years in New York. So far, he says, it's been a success, and the troupe is now on a European tour.

"Really, what I teach is an alternative kind of theater: we're off the stage and out in the midst of the public," explains Trules. "We don't do pantomime, nor do we do the standard circus stuff. We dress in the style of Charlie Chaplin, and we try to create comic encounters with the public. We're trying to break down defenses, and basically people react quite well. After all, we're free public laughs." And they haven't been asked to quit clowning around.

Easy Listenin'

Driving, cooking and cleaning are all chores that most of us must do, unpleasant as they may be. A growing number of people are unwilling to devote their precious time to just those tasks alone, however: they're tuning in to educational television or radio programs and learning something as they battle traffic or prepare dinner. Or they're buying or renting cassette tapes and finally getting around to Walden or French for Beginners.

"Cassettes give you an alternative to radio and to music tapes," says Duvall Hecht, whose company, Books on Tape, rents tapes of novels and nonfiction works. "Driving and household chores can take up a lot of time, time that you can be doing other things with."

Erma Dering, vice president of Automated Learning, Inc., a firm that sells cassettes that deal with self-improvement subjects, agrees. "Cassettes are a terrific way to learn. And you can't do much else while you're cooking or driving except listen, so why not use the time productively?" Why not indeed?

Lifestyles

Television. Three John Cheever stories, O Youth and Beauty, The Sorrows of Gin, and The Five-Forty-Eight, have been adapted for television and will be aired over PBS stations as part of the Great Performances series, beginning Oct. 24. Taken from the National Book Award-winning collection, The Stories of John Cheever, the hour-long weekly programs will feature such stars as Michael Murphy, Kathryn Walker and Rachel Roberts. Check local listings for the correct time in your area.

Exhibits. The world of Shakespeare and Elizabethan England is the focus of a multimedia exhibit currently on display in San Francisco. "Shakespeare: The Globe and the World" contains books, prints, paintings, costumes and playbills from the great Bard's time, and the exhibit will travel to Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Atlanta and New York during the next two years.

Bowling. The 16th annual international bowling tournament for amateurs gets underway this week in Bangkok, Thailand. In the tournament that is considered the Olympics of the sport, contestants from more than 40 countries around the world compete for the World Cup Bowling Championship.

FEATURING

Antron® III
NYLON

A GUIDE TO CONFIDENT CARPET BUYING FROM DUPONT

Fibers. A carpet well may be one of the most important purchases you'll ever make. It's something you'll want to live with for a long long time. So it can be very helpful to know a thing or two about what you're buying. And certainly, no factor is more important than the fiber.

Nylon. Here's the fiber that put luxury carpeting within reach of great numbers of people. Nylon offers so many desirable features, including durability, color fastness and stain resistance. At the same time, it adapts well to virtually any style or texture. All this at a reasonable price -- no wonder it's become the most popular of all carpet fibers. And DuPont produces more carpet nylon than anybody in the world.

Antron® III Nylon. Represents the state of the art in nylon carpeting today. The fact is, Dupont's Antron® III nylon is the most advanced nylon in the entire carpet industry. It's made to take anything the active family can dish out. Because of its unique construction, it is much more dirt resistant than ordinary carpet fiber. It resists crushing and matting—the pile bounces back, it withstands wear, and keeps its good looks for years. And to top it off, it also resists static shock!

Color and Texture.

On the surface, these are the two things that may first attract you to a carpet. But your initial reaction can sometimes lead you astray. Different textures are designed for different purposes. And color, too, must be evaluated from a number of points of views.

Texture. There are dozens of textures available on the market. These will vary from hard wearing, easy cleaning "practical" carpets ("level loop" or "level tip") to those that require more attention (Push or Shag) to keep the pile looking good. Ask your salesman to explain the properties of the carpet you're interested in.

Color. Before you decide on a color, there are a number of questions you should ask yourself. Is it one that you can be content to live with over the years? Will it show every bit of dirt? Do you want it to add excitement to a room or perhaps a touch of serenity? One, two or three colors? Once again, think carefully before you decide. So your new carpet will be sure to answer all your needs.

Quality. As in most things, the more you pay for a carpet, the better you can expect it to be. But since that isn't always the case, let us point to a few items worth looking for.

First of all, you're liable to get a lot of terms thrown at you all at once. These in and of themselves may be no indication whatsoever of superior quality. "Tufted", for instance, merely describes the equipment on which a carpet is made. "Broadloom" simply refers to the width of a carpet (all carpet 6 feet wide or more is Broadloom).

Instead of names like these, pay attention to such factors as resilience and density. The former refers to the ability of the pile to bounce back after being crushed. The latter relates to how close the tufts of yarn are to each other. (Generally speaking, the more tufts per square inch, the longer the carpet will last.)

And by the way, don't hesitate to use your fingers as well as your eyes to see how closely the tufts are packed. It's one good way to make sure you're getting what you pay for.

Care and Cleaning.

With the proper care, a medium priced carpet can sometimes outlive one costing a lot more money but getting a lot less attention. Carpets wear out due to a combination of foot traffic and dirt that works its way down to the "roots" of the pile and gradually abrades the fiber.

With regular vacuum cleaning, soil and grime will be eliminated before they can do their dirty work. We recommend a light once over daily and a more thorough once-a-week vacuuming. And don't rush things. Move the cleaner slowly enough to give it time to remove the embedded particles.

One more thing. No matter how diligently you vacuum your carpets, there are limits to what your equipment can do. It's a good idea to call in a professional once a year to really get your carpet back in tip-top shape.

A Final Word.

All of the carpets you'll see in the next few pages offer an abundance of beauty, value and wonderfully luxurious texture. Choosing the one that is right for you won't always be easy, but if you keep these few tips in mind, we're confident you'll find a carpet that will give you no end of pleasure for years to come.

CARPET CUSHION GUARANTEED FOR THE LIFE OF YOUR HOME.

Here's the ultimate carpet cushion guarantee. Made possible by a rubber carpet cushion so rugged, so durable that it will outlast any other cushion on the market today.

It's called NZX. And new as it is, it's already made its impact felt on the entire carpet industry.

Guaranteed for the life of your house.

Used to be, it was a pretty big deal to guarantee a cushion for the life of a carpet. Well, NZX goes far beyond that. It's guaranteed for the life of every carpet you ever own in your home.

Two carpets. Four carpets. Eight carpets. A dozen. It doesn't make a bit of difference. As long as you own your home, you'll have an NZX carpet cushion underneath. Guaranteed in writing. Pay for it just once. Enjoy it without any worry for all the years to come.

The very best, made even better.

The makers of NZX have been responsible for one innovation after another in carpet cushions.

They were the first with a bubble-shaped cushion. The first to introduce a larger bubble. And the originator of the Cushion-Aire design, still recognized overwhelmingly as the industry's standard of quality.

For over thirty years, rubber cushion has been a proven standard - recognized as a more supportive cushion that won't "bottom out" or disintegrate like cheaper prime or rebonded urethanes.

And NZX is the best rubber carpet cushion ever made. It's a new standard in luxury and durability. A cushion that gives any carpet the deep support and resilient feel of a more expensive carpet and the longest life a carpet ever had.

A new generation of carpet cushion.

NZX. It's finally here. The ultimate carpet cushion. Together with the ultimate guarantee. A guarantee unparalleled in the history of the carpet industry.

NZX. Suddenly, every other carpet cushion is obsolete.

YES, MA'AM, I'LL BE FIRST...

KEEP YOUR HEAD DOWN UNTIL I TELL YOU..

FOR "SHOW AND TELL" TODAY, I HAVE BROUGHT AN AUTHENTIC BIRD'S NEST!

AS A SPECIAL TREAT, I HAVE ALSO INVITED THE OWNER OF THE NEST

NOW, AS YOU MAY OR MAY NOT REALIZE, BIRD NESTS ARE VERY DIFFICULT TO BUILD...

THEREFORE, I HAVE ASKED THE OWNER HIMSELF TO EXPLAIN SOME OF THE PROBLEMS HE MIGHT HAVE HAD WITH THE CONSTRUCTION OF THIS BEAUTIFUL HOME

THAT'S INTERESTING...NOW TELL US WHAT HAPPENED AFTER YOUR BOUT WITH THE CITY PLANNING COMMISSION...

WATCH IT! IT GETS DEEP HERE!

DON'T STOP! KEEP UP THE MOMENTUM

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO WITH IT WHEN WE GET IT UP THERE, SARGE?

IT'S PART OF YOUR TRAINING

WHEN WE REACH THE TOP WE'LL JUST BRING IT DOWN AGAIN

WHAT'S HOLDING UP THE CURTAIN? WELL, THERE'S A ROD THROUGH THE TOP AND ROPES... IDIOT! THE AUDIENCE IS GETTING IMPATIENT! WHERE ARE THE PROPS? HOLDING UP THE SCENERY! ARE YOU TWO MADE UP? WE WEREN'T EVEN FIGHTING! ARCHIE IS THE FIRST ONE TO PRODUCE A FLOP BEFORE IT OPENS! OH, GREAT! THE AUDIENCE IS STILL IN ITS SEATS, AND ARCHIE IS STILL REHEARSING AND PAINTING THE SCENERY! HOLD THE CURTAIN!! WE'LL REHEARSE ACT TWO DURING INTERMISSION! JUGHEAD, SLAP SOME PAINT ON THAT DOOR!

I'LL USE MY BIG SIZING BRUSH! VERONICA, THIS IS THE DOOR YOU MAKE YOUR ENTRANCE THROUGH! TRY IT!

DO SOMETHING!!! WHAT?? YOU CAN CUT OUT THE PART WHERE I KISS HER!

VERONICA YOU'LL GET PAINT ON THE CURTAIN! IT'LL BE CURTAINS FOR YOU! DID SOMEONE SAY CURTAIN?

I HOPE THE REST IS AS EXCITING AS THE OPENING SCENE!

LET'S REALLY SURPRISE OUR WIVES TONIGHT!

THIS BOOKLET I BOUGHT TEACHES YOU EVERYTHING YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT DISCO DANCING

WE'LL LEARN TO DO THIS DISCO STUFF AND THEN TAKE OUR WIVES OUT DANCING

BOY, WILL THEY EVER BE SURPRISED!

I BORROWED SOME OF THE KIDS' RECORDS AND THEIR RECORD PLAYER

WE SHOULD HAVE PLENTY OF TIME BEFORE THE GIRLS GET BACK

OKAY, THE BOOK SAYS... 1-2-3... 1-2-3... TAP STEP

1-2-3... 1-2-3... TAP STEP

THE BOOK SAYS TO LEARN THE AMERICAN HUSTLE FIRST AND THEN GO RIGHT INTO THE SWING STEP

LET'S TRY THAT PEEKABOO STEP RIGHT AFTER THE DIP THIS TIME

YEAH, THIS IS EASY!

HERB AND I HAVE A GREAT BIG SURPRISE FOR YOU TONIGHT!

I CAN HARDLY WAIT TO FIND OUT WHAT THEIR SURPRISE IS!

ME TOO

YOU READY, HERB?

READY!

SEE--WE CAN DISCO!

YOU SHOULD LEARN, TOO... IT'S REALLY FUN

HAGAR THE HORRIBLE

by Dik Browne

HEY! THAT LOOKS LIKE MY KIND OF GUY!

TOUGH, MEAN, INTEMPERATE, CRUDE -- HE'S A NATURAL FOR THE HOT PLACE!

HE'S EVEN GOT HIS OWN HORNS!

OH, MY! A BUNNY IN TROUBLE!

UGH! AN ACT OF KINDNESS!

LET ME TAKE THAT THORN OUT

FEEL BETTER?

YUCK! A @!#! ANIMAL LOVER!

I NEVER HAVE ANY LUCK IN NORWAY

AIR FORCE INTELLIGENCE FEARS THAT HOSTILE INTERESTS USED SUMMER CANYON TO TEST THE TERRORIST DEVICE OF THE DISAPPEARANCE OF AGENTS' FAMILIES..

THE NAZIS COULDN'T DO IT... THE JAPANESE FAILED... THEN, ON AUGUST 25, IT HAPPENED! PHIL COCHRAN IS DEAD! -- WITH HIS BOOTS ON... RIDING WITH HIS HUNT CLUB! HE HAD NEARLY EVERY MEDAL IN THE BOOK-- EXCEPT THE PURPLE HEART!

SO FLIP CORKIN AND GENERAL PHILIE GO WITH HIM. I ONCE ASKED PHIL HOW HE HANDLED IT WHEN A GOOD FRIEND FAILED TO RETURN FROM A COMBAT MISSION. "WE ALWAYS CONTINUED TALKING ABOUT HIM AS IF HE HAD GONE ON TO ANOTHER ASSIGNMENT!" HANG IN, 'FEELEEP!' I'LL SEE YOU AROUND -- Milton

BUT NOT A CLUE HAS TURNED UP!

AND I SENSE A MOUNTING TENSION! A FEAR OF WHAT MIGHT HAVE HAPPENED TO ME!

HOW DOES YOUR HUSBAND TREAT YOU SINCE YOUR RETURN?

HE HAS BEEN GREAT...

...LOVING AND TENDER-- HE NEVER MENTIONS THE BLANK SPOT -- EXCEPT AS A JOKE

BUT I CAME BACK MINUS MY WEDDING RING!

... WITH ALL THE POSSIBILITIES THAT SUGGESTS

YOU MIGHT HAVE BEEN ROBBED!

THAT'S WHAT STEVE SAYS -- BUT A LITTLE TOO SLOWLY

DO YOU HAVE A FEELING OF GUILT?

NO! -- BUT I CAN'T GO THROUGH LIFE WALKING DOWN THE STREET -- LOOKING AT EVERY MAN I PASS....

THINKING THAT AT ANY MOMENT I MAY MEET MY OTHER HUSBAND... .. OR HUSBANDS!

BUT, GENERAL, MRS. CANYON DID NOT SEEM TO BE HIDING ANYTHING...

HMPH! NEITHER DID MATA HARI!
