PRICE 15 CENTS

Inflation Above 13 Percent

Purchasing Power Again Cut

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Pushed by higher prices for food, fuel and housing, consumer prices increased 1.1 percent in September as inflation continued above a 13 percent annual rate, the government said today.

At the same time, it reported that the purchasing power of workers' paychecks declined another 0.7 percent during the month and was down by 4.4 percent from a year earlier.

There was nothing in the September price report to indicate any improvement in the nation's highly disturbing rate of inflation. It matched August's 1.1 percent increase and was the ninth month this year that prices have increased by about 1 percent.

Overall food prices, including restaurant meals, climbed 0.9 percent during September, the biggest increase in five months, and grocery store prices were up 1.1 percent. Food prices had shown little or no increase in the previous three months.

Fuel prices rose sharply again during the month, with home heating oil up 5.6
percent and gasoline prices advancing 3.1 percent to a national average of 99.8 cents a gallon for all types.

The overall cost of housing rose another 1.2 percent, with home mortgage financing up 1.8 percent, partly the result of government efforts to slow the economy by increasing interest rates.

However, even larger increases in mortgage costs

probably lie ahead, because the latest actions by the Federal Reserve Board to push interest rates to record levels will not show up in the Consumer Price Index for another month or two, said
Patrick Jackman, a Labor Department analyst.

Jackman said consumer prices have increased at a 13.2 percent annual rate during the first nine months of 1979, meaning that if the same trend continues through December, that would be the total increase for the year.

It would be the highest inflation for any year since 1946, when prices were up 18.2 percent after the government lifted wartime price controls.

The Labor Department said its Consumer Price Index stood in September at 223.4 of the 1967 average of 100, meaning that goods and services priced at $100 in 1967 had risen in cost to $223.40 last month.

Prices had increased 12.1
percent in the 12-month period ending in September.

Jackman said the worsening of food prices again following four months of improvement clouds the outlook for an easing of inflation in coming months.

The Carter administration originally had forecast an easing of consumer prices to below a 10 percent rate by the end of the year.

"It's not a very pleasant forecast ... I don't see us getting worse, but it looks like we'll be staying right around where we are, with the highest rate of inflation since World War II," Jackman said.

Earlier in the week, Chas.
L. Schultz, the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, had said he expected the rate of inflation to be slightly under 13 percent.

Utilities Reveal Lengthy Talks Of CP&L Switch

The Greenville Utilities Commission, which purchases its electric power from the Virginia Electric & Power Co., has since June, been discussing the possibility of buying future power from Carolina Power & Light Company, GUC Director
Charles Horne revealed this morning.

"We have been seeking lower cost electric power for ten years and it now appears that another supplier may be interested in serving Greenville's system requirements," Horne explained.

Because of the confidentiality involved in the talks, Horne said, "we have not made a lot of public noise about these discussions. But in view of the continuous high fuel charges VEPCO keeps adding to its wholesale electric rates, the Commission felt that our customers should know that there is some possible relief in sight."

In addition to its individual talks with CP & L about future power purchases, Greenville is also involved in ongoing discussions between CP & L and the North Carolina Municipal Power Agency Number 2, Horne pointed out.

"Those discussions could lead to the joint ownership of generating facilities between the Power Agency member municipalities and CP & L," according to Horne, who explained that Power Agency members are municipalities which purchase wholesale electric power from VEPCO and distribute it to municipal electric customers.

"The two separate discussions with CP & L complement each other," Horne explained. "If Agency Number

2 can provide a joint ownership arrangement that will offer substantial savings to its member cities, Greenville will be very pleased.

"If that effort should not work for some reason," he continued, "Greenville has to be ready to move on its own to get out from under the burden from ever-rising VEPCO power costs."

According to Horne, a professional engineering study done for the commission indicates that because of the difference in rates charged by the two companies, it would be economically feasible for Greenville to switch from VEPCO to CP & L, even though Greenville would have to build, own and maintain transmission lines to CP & L connecting points.

Horne noted that the closest CP & L connecting points would be in the Grimesland and/or Farmville area. No estimate of the cost involved has been set, he added.

The earliest a switch of suppliers could be made is 1981, according to Horne, who noted if a switch is possible, it could be later than that.

"We have contractual obligations to VEPCO," which will have to be resolved,
"if and when," the commission receives a firm commitment from Carolina Power & Light, the GUC director explained.

"If the switch to CP & L could be made, Greenville would realize substantial savings in power costs the first and continuing years," Horne reported. "Until the final arrangements are completed, exact savings cannot be determined, but indications are that they would be very impressive."

Saying the possible switch in suppliers, "is an extremely complex situation," Horne said, "we are working very hard on it and have been for several months."

"Even though discussions have not been finalized, it is the Commission's continuing goal to provide an adequate supply of electric power at the lowest cost possible and we have every intention of doing just that," he added.

Greenville established an electric light system in 1905, which has evolved into a distribution system that now serves nearly 24,000 customers.

Beasley Invited Join Jim Hunt In Japan Tour

Bob Martin, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, announced that Bruce Beasley Jr., chairman of the Pitt Development Commission, has been invited to join Gov. Jim Hunt on the Industrial Mission to Japan
Oct. 29 through Nov. 10.

Beasley, one of 30 business and professional leaders in the state selected to join the governor, will represent the county in a round of business contacts with Japanese industry and trade associations.

"It is an honor for Mr.
Beasley to be chosen by Gov.
Hunt to represent the citizens of Pitt County to potential industrial development prospects in Japan," Martin commented.

Martin said the "12 day trip will also allow Mr. Beasley an opportunity to brief Department of Commerce officials on the employment needs of our area."

The schedule is highlighted by several contacts with trade associations in Japan which serve as initial agencies for assisting Japanese companies considering possible manufacturing plants out of the country.

Beasley observed, "This opportunity will permit resource data and information on the growth potential of the Pitt County area to be exposed to possible capital investors who otherwise might never have the chance to realize the benefits and the strong points of our community."

Shah Calm Over Cancer Report

NEW YORK (AP) — The deposed shah of Iran, marking his 60th birthday today, took "with style" the news that cancer is spreading through his body, say doctors who are recommending he stay in the United States for up to a year for treatment.

"There is some potential for recovery," said Dr.
Hibbard Williams, physician-in-charge at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, where Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is resting under guard in a $300-a-day room following removal of his gallbladder.

Doctors first diagnosed lymph cancer in the former Iranian ruler six years ago.

But the surgery Wednesday confirmed a different form of cancer that is spreading but does not involve other organs.

With chemotherapy, the shah should have a 60 percent to 70 percent chance of surviving several years or more, doctors said Thursday.

The shah will begin treatment with anti-cancer drugs in three weeks, when he has recovered from the gallbladder operation, doctors said.

"I would want this patient to be in the United States for six months, maybe a year," said Dr. Morton Coleman, the hospital's associate director of chemotherapy.

Students Go 'Berserk' In Hysterical Outburst

MIAMI (AP) — Police say it was hysteria brought on by a hypnosis demonstration.
Some students say it was demons. A school official calls it a political dirty trick.

Whatever it was, police say something sent students and teachers rampaging through a military school in Miami's Little Havana section Thursday, smashing windows, ripping a door from its frame and screaming they were possessed by spirits.

"The whole school went berserk," police officer
Harry Cunnill said.
"Teachers and students were running around tearing things up."

Fire Department spokesman Dan LeMay said
a number of students collapsed from hysteria and
"flaked out all over the place."

Police called to restore order at the school found
"people yelling and screaming they were possessed," Cunnill said. He said the events followed a 10th grade science demonstration of hypnosis, and students told firemen there had been a recent class on the supernatural.

Assailant Faces Murder Charge For Brain Death

"All I know is that she's not doing so good," said Ben Payton of his daughter, Helena. Miss Payton was stabbed Sept. 28 by a man who hid in her dormitory bathroom at St. Augustine College, Raleigh.

Since the stabbing incident,
Miss Payton has remained unconscious and in critical condition at Wake Medical Center. The twenty-three year old woman remains in a coma, maintained by a life support system.

According to Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley, the yet-uncaptured assailant will be charged with first degree murder if he is found, although Miss Payton remains alive.

Riley said he learned in conversations with lawyers for Wake Medical Center that Miss Payton's brain is dead.

In North Carolina, brain death may be used as the factor for determining that a person has died.

The 1979 General Assembly enacted a law under which brain death is defined as the irreversible end of total brain function, and may be used as the sole basis for determining that a person has died.

Miss Payton's case would be the first murder case involving brain death in Wake County since the law was passed, said Riley. He was not sure if there have been similar cases elsewhere in the state.

No death certificate will be filed unless the life support system is discontinued.
However, Riley said that he would file a murder charge if a suspect is brought to trial.

Gov. Jim Hunt has offered a $5,000 award for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the assailant.
Police have issued a composite sketch drawn from descriptions provided by students who saw the man flee the dorm.

Daisy Payton, Helena's

mother, is presently staying in Raleigh to be near her daughter. Her husband, Ben, stays in Winterville during the week with three of their six children, but the family visits Helena every weekend, according to Payton.

"As long as her heart is beating, we'll leave her on the respirator," said Mrs.
Payton.

Hospital Emphasizing Planning, Coordinating

Recent administrative changes at Pitt County Memorial Hospital will allow for greater long-range planning and more efficient and responsive daily operation of the hospital, according to Jack W. Richardson, general director.

Richardson said the changes, which took effect Oct. 1, reflect the growth of the medical center and the increasing activities and responsibilities of the administrative staff.

He said M.E. (Rick) Gilstrap, executive director, will be responsible for the supervision of general hospital operations. Richardson will assume an expanded role in planning activities and coordinating programs with the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

UAW Gives Chrysler Corp. A Break, Wins Seat On Board

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — The United Auto Workers union has given financially sick Chrysler Corp. a break at the bargaining table and its president is headed for the company's board room in return.

The UAW, in an unprecedented contract agreement, will defer raises and corporate pension payments and give up paid holidays to aid the company with a package of concessions worth $403 million, the union said Thursday.

In return, Chrysler said it would nominate UAW president Douglas A. Fraser for a seat on the board of directors and give the union a voice in pension fund decisions.

"We did break with 42 years of tradition and history," Fraser said in announcing the pact. Bargaining lasted more than 25 hours and more than three hours past a noon deadline, set up to speed negotiations.

The company's chief negotiator, William O'Brien, said he was "very pleased" with the contract.

Chrysler is seeking $750 million in federal loan guarantees. It estimates it will lose $1 billion in 1980, and will use the union concessions as a selling point to convince Congress it needs help.

In the tentative contract, the union agreed to defer $203 million in wages and benefits and, as announced previously, to defer for one year $200 million of this year's payment to the pension fund. Union members will get no paid days off other than vacation in the first year, compared with eight days for GM and Ford workers.

Fraser said Chrysler workers would return to parity with their counterparts at General Motors Corp. and Ford Motors Co. in the third year of the pact, which must be ratified over the next two weeks.

The union already has reached agreements with Ford and GM.

The pact also gives the union two long-sought social goals: the right to recommend investment policy for part of the pension fund, and the right to recommend investment sanctions against some companies it may designate for their South Africa policies.

In the most radical break with tradition, though not part of the contract, the company said in a statement that Chairman Lee A. Iacocca will submit Fraser's name to the board's nominating committee. Approval seemed assured at the May shareholder's meeting.

Organized labor has never taken a directorship in a major U.S. corporation, though it is required by law in some European countries.

Asked if he saw any conflict of interest in representing shareholders as well as workers, Fraser replied, "None at all. I'm going to represent the autoworkers on that board."

It is such a break with tradition that the preamble to the UAW constitution still says, "The worker does not seek to usurp management's functions or ask for a place on the board of directors of concerns where organized."

O'Brien, Chrysler's vice president for industrial relations, said the company was "delighted" about Fraser's directorship. He did not mention the company's stiff opposition to such an idea in the past.

The union also won the right to recommend to the trustees of the $850 million pension fund five companies each year whose securities would be banned from investment of new money coming into the fund.

Each cheerleading squad will be allowed to present one routine, one cheer and one spirit rouser. The squads will be judged on creativity, spirit, coordination and unity.

The East Carolina University cheerleaders will judge the contest. Following the contest, the ECU cheerleaders will provide a cheerleading demonstration and a brief cheerleading clinic.

Cheerleading contestants will be judged in two categories and prize money and trophies will be awarded.

FOCUS

Fall Back

Most Americans will be adjusting their clocks and watches this Sunday, as Daylight Savings Time (DST) ends. A handy way to remember which way to turn the dial is the formula "Spring forward; Fall back." By setting their clocks ahead one hour in April, people on DST get an extra hour of daylight late in the day. By setting them back in October, they return to standard time. Hoping to save energy, Congress passed a law in 1974, requiring DST all year long. But during winter's shorter daylight hours, DST forced many people to leave for their jobs and schools before dawn. The law was withdrawn later that year.

DO YOU KNOW — Which Cabinet department administers changes between daylight and standard time?

"The Everything Woman" Newest Victim Of Stress

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

"The everything woman" better watch out. You qualify for the title if you switch hats many times a day, juggling multiple roles — career, lover or wife, mother, community leader, good neighbor.

The everything woman made the American scene as a result of rapid cultural change giving her increased options and responsibilities.

She has control of her reproductive tract, a good education, goes to exercise class, PTA meetings, entertainers, and pushes herself ever upward in her career.

She strives to perform close to perfection when in the role that goes with the hat she's wearing at the moment.

"The everything woman" better watch out.

If she doesn't strike a balance, stress will topple her, says Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, psychiatrist on the Surgeon General's Advisory Committee on Stress.

Some women already are reeling from stress-related or stress-induced troubles. Insomnia, fatigue, heart attacks, muscle spasms, migraine headaches, circulation troubles.

"We are beginning to see women develop more disorders and diseases once primarily the domain of the male under pressure at work.

"As a result we expect more heart attacks in women.

"We know, too, stress is making women go to the doctor. Fifty percent of doctor visits are stress-related. And twice as many doctor visits are made by women."

Greenspan says the mind affects the body and the body affects the mind.

"It really does. And it becomes a vicious circle unless there's intervention. The important thing is to strike a balance."

Greenspan and his colleagues at Columbia's College of Physicians and Surgeons have proved this dramatically — getting some patients to develop collateral blood circulation in limbs with 60 percent of blood flow blocked by clots.

They used biofeedback — a technique in which the patient learns to lower his blood pressure and exert control over other body functions such as pulse and temperature.

A simple form of biofeedback might work like this:

Instruments show pulse and blood pressure and temperature readings. Patients practice relaxing and making the numbers change.

Patients had such diminished circulation that they could not walk more than a few blocks without severe pain. They came for biofeedback sessions three times a week for three months. They also were taught a version of the relaxation response developed by Dr. Herbert Benson, Harvard University professor, and told to practice it twice a day at home — once in the morning and once at night.

During the "response" a person closes eyes, gets everything off the mind and for 20 minutes breathes in and out very slowly and deeply, repeating a simple phrase.

Dr. Benson has reported little prayers work just fine and some persons lower their blood pressure by repeating something like "God have mercy" while working on the relaxation response.

Greenspan said by the time the patients put on biofeedback and relaxation response improved circulation to the point where only 20 percent was blocked.

The biofeedback and relaxation therapy did not break up the clot. It improved collateral circulation by making the veins work better. Arteries are like turnpikes in the blood pipeline. And veins are the by-ways.

The biofeedback approach to some patients with blocked blood pipelines was described by Greenspan and associates in a report in the journal "Psychosomatics."

The proof that the mind was able to change the matter includes 12 patients whose circulation still is improved — two years after biofeedback was stopped.

So why does reducing stress help develop collateral blood circulation?

"We think increased stress in their body work against them in two ways," Greenspan said.

"It does not allow collateral blood lines to function as they should."

"And then when a person with a blocked artery walks there is a stress reaction. Heart rate and blood pressure go up."

Just walking two blocks patients with disturbed circulation were stopped by a pulse going up to 80 to 110.

After biofeedback treatment opening up collateral circulation in the limb with a blocked blood supply, some patients could walk a mile with no trouble. And the pulse was 60 to 70. Greenspan said that's a quite good pulse.

Reports from other medical centers using biofeedback also show the mind can control the body and vice versa.

Greenspan said stress gums up the works by sending the mind messages to get ready for flight or fight — the primitive reaction to stress.

Muscles tighten. Blood flow increases.

But you don't see the enemy — stress. You don't do anything. Muscles, though, get the brain's message to do something. Then they spasm due to the fact you don't fight and don't flee.

Sometimes the reaction sets the scene for a migraine.

Early, milder signs the "everything woman" might have to stress: super irritability, constant fatigue, insomnia. Later, there may be sexual problems and as the stress-related wear and tear advance, there are cardiovascular disorders.

Greenspan said your body doesn't tell you right away stress is gnawing away at its innards. For one example, the pain of blocked circulation from a clot in an artery won't show up until blood flow's off 60 percent, usually.

The "everything woman" should understand that stress does not make people sick, Greenspan said.

Stress is a natural part of living. When an individual responds to it in a healthy, well-balanced way, it does no harm.

"What causes suffering and sometimes illness is discord among the biological, emotional and social components of an individual's adaptive capacities," Greenspan said.

"That's why balancing is so important."

Greenspan, directs Columbia University's Laboratory and Center for Stress-related Disorders.

He and others interested in helping the "everything woman" have called a conference for next weekend, Oct. 20-21 at the Columbia School of Physicians and Surgeons.

It is titled: "The Dynamics of Stress: Women and Other People."

Women's health issues will range from the effect of stress on sexual function to cardiovascular disease.

Greenspan hopes the conference will be the starting of a social network for women, one that enables them to trade information and techniques for dealing with stress so it doesn't hurt the body.

He believes such a network could start up something the way the Boston Women's Health Collective did — the pioneer group of women in many roles who met informally to learn more about their bodies and physical problems.

That resulted in "Our Bodies, Ourselves," a consumer's guide to medical services and information about every female

Choose Proper Time And Vent Feelings

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I spent two hours scrubbing our tile shower with a toothbrush, detergent and bleach. It sparkled. My husband's only comment: "You missed a spot by the door."

This is typical of his reaction to nearly everything I do. He is the most critical person in the world, from the way I dress to the side of the sink I wash the dishes in. No matter how hard I try, he always finds something to criticize. When I mentioned this to him, he told me that the trouble with me is that I have never learned how to take criticism.

Abby, my mother is the "West Coast Distributor for Criticism," and I have had plenty of it, so I think I know how to handle it, but the way my husband finds a flaw in everything I do is driving me up the wall!

We've been married only a year, and I can't see myself taking 20 to 30 more years of his petty faultfinding.

He never misses your column. I hope you print this and he sees it before it's too late, and my self-worth is completely destroyed.

HURT IN LONG BEACH

DEAR HURT: Don't rely on a few lines in my column to communicate the hurt, anger and frustration you feel. Choose the proper time to vent your feelings, and encourage your husband to vent his. "Every animal revenges his pains upon those who happen to be near" (Samuel Johnson). Chances are that your critical husband is hurting, too.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became engaged to a wonderful young man who lives in another city. I was very happy until he informed me that he had decided to share an apartment with a woman co-worker until we get married next year!

He assured me that the arrangement is strictly a financial one — that he prefers to live with a woman that he already knows is honest and reliable than to advertise for an unknown male.

Although I want to trust him, I can't help feeling resentful.

He tells me that when I come to visit, I will be convinced that there is no romantic involvement, but I don't know if I can reserve judgment until then.

I am debating between giving him an ultimatum and trusting him implicitly.

Abby, do you think it's possible to share living quarters with one of the opposite sex and have a platonic relationship? And what should I do?

FUMING

DEAR FUMING: Yes. But stop fuming and start rooming with a male friend and see how your fiancé takes it.

Political Aspect Of Tobacco

W.W. (Billy) Yeargin, managing director and executive secretary-treasurer of the Tobacco Growers Information Committee, says the tobacco issue has been used by politicians to gain votes. Speaking to the Farmville Rotary Club, Yeargin said that since the anti-tobacco program was begun by the U.S. surgeon general's ruling there have been many anti-tobacco bills introduced throughout the country. The result has been confusion on the issue and harm to tobacco. He said around 657 anti-tobacco bills have been introduced since the surgeon general's ruling.

Last year there were 119 bills introduced in state legislatures, as well as 20 federal bills. Depending on how many are passed, we could see harm to tobacco producing regions of the nation. If consumption dropped 30 percent, growers would lose $300 million annually. The loss in tax revenue to North Carolina would be $37 million annually. The importance of tobacco can't be overemphasized for North Carolina and the east in particular.

Change Is Only A Matter Of Time

Leonid I. Brezhnev made a public appearance last week, belying the rumors that he had died. Brezhnev, Soviet leader, made a public appearance to greet the leader of South Yemen, and it was obvious that Brezhnev was still functioning. It is also obvious that Brezhnev does have some health problems, however, and that portends a change in leadership for the Soviet Union in the foreseeable future. A leadership change will mean differences in the Soviet relations with the western world, and, for that matter, with neighboring China. Which way things will go only time will tell.

THIS AFTERNOON

Upper Grades Overhaul

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Satisfied that intensive "early intervention" efforts in the public schools are paying off, chief educators along with Gov. Jim Hunt are now turning their attention to major reform in the middle and high school programs. The State Board of Education at its November meeting will hear a comprehensive report from the staff on what is wrong, the results of that, and suggested steps for change. Conversation with specialists involved in preparation of that report point to two chief ingredients as central to success of the complicated recipe which will be presented: 1. A comprehensive high school must be responsive to all students, with the flexibility to provide not only the basic learning skills, and the sophisticated programs for those on a college track, but "real world" preparation for the thousands who will go straight from school into a job.

Middle School
2. The middle, or junior high, grades are where future high school successes or failures are molded, yet have been the most ignored segment of education. Emphasis must go to finding those who will have problems in high school and through intensive remedial work and individual counseling get them ready. "We have demonstrated that early intervention techniques such as the reading program, classroom aides, kindergarten, Headstart, are helping to prevent problems in later years. Test scores now show our children performing at or above national norms. "The payoff is good, and the promise for the future is great. But that is still not good enough, and we have got to turn our attention to the middle grades and high school years," says Jerry Beaver, deputy assistant state superintendent for secondary education in the Department of Public Instruction. Intensive remedial work with students in danger of failing the competency test has also demonstrated that given proper materials, closer student-teacher contact (one-on-one when needed), and identification of specific learning problems and the reason for that, educational achievement is possible for every student. Beaver feels. The key is educational achievement tailored to individual shortcomings, problems, desires, needs and abilities.

BILL NOBLITT
Revamping the secondary school program will not be easy, nor cheap. Sharply reduced student-teacher ratios will be proposed, and a major expansion of counseling services suggested. Schools now provide one counselor for each 400 students. Every child would have "day-to-day, week-to-week" counseling by a "friend and advocate" to help find problems and solutions. Price Tag The public school early intervention measures are now in place and funded regularly at an increase level involving close to $200 million yearly. No price tag has been fixed on the overhaul to secondary education, but knowledgeable people say it will cost that much or more, especially as it is increasingly realized that not only educators, but psychologists, physicians, family counselors and a host of other "outside" support programs become essential to helping individuals overcome obstacles and learn. The secondary school emphasis "is the number one priority in the upcoming budget proposals from the State Board of Education," Dr. Jerome Melton, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, said. "I think we can begin some things, and bring some things about which will be beneficial," he adds.

Non-Issue Underlined

WASHINGTON — The campaign manager and one of the presidential candidates were having a meeting. "The one thing I have no intention of bringing up if Teddy runs is Chappaquiddick," the candidate said. "You're absolutely right, sir," his manager said. "I think it would be a big mistake." "I believe we should put out a press release saying that I will not talk about Chappaquiddick because I consider it a personal matter that has no place in American politics." "A media release could get lost," the manager said. "I think you should hold a press conference and make a strong statement spelling out your reasons for not making Chappaquiddick an issue." "What about a TV commercial that we could play during the campaign? I could do it on Martha's Vineyard. I would talk about inflation, energy and SALT and then say at the end, the one thing I will not talk about is what happened here," the candidate suggested. "It's a good idea. By the way, I've been in touch with the other campaign

Tulsa Built A Mall

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Transforming dingy, decaying downtown streets into parklike pedestrian malls has proved to be the most unexpected delight from municipal government since New York Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia read the funny pages to the kids over the radio. Now the derelicts and the deadbeats can sip their muscatel in a pleasing, pollution-free environment of splashing fountains and floodlit trees, then sleep the morning away under weatherproof, gassed-in arcades on benches generously provided by the taxpayers. The hippies have a grassy oasis in the concrete jungle upon which to park their rucksacks and guru-garbed bones and light up smokeables not covered in the surgeon general's cautionary prose.

At noontime, when the office workers descend en masse from the skyscrapers upon the salad bars and hamburger emporia, the mall becomes a theater in the round for unreconstructed voyeurs who have yet to learn that those curvaceous creatures in the tight sweaters and slacks and thigh-high slit skirts are not mere sex objects but career-oriented achievers in quest of a role reversal between the powder room and the board room. Grifters, drifters and occasional wallet-lifters can float among the shoppers, buoyed by the thought that they only have to outrun a cop and not a squad car. Secure from traffic hazards, there is room here for baby carriages, skate boards, rampaging urchins and the shoplifter's free-form 100-meter dash. Downtown Tulsa has one of the nicest, most democratic malls this peripatetic picker at

Other Editors Say Food And Crude

(Jacksonville Daily News)
First it was a slogan, then a song, and now it may end up as a law. Remember the country western ballad that blurted out the gutsy notion that if they don't give us the crude, we should cut off their food? Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., has proposed a law that could provoke just such a confrontation. The Weaver bill is affectionately called "the bushes for barrels bill." It would give the United States, in league with major grain-producing nations, leverage when dealing with the international oil cartel. Supporters of the bill claim it could bring down the price of oil, bring up the price of wheat, or both. Less than 10 years ago a bushel of wheat sold on the international market for about the same price as a barrel of oil. That was back in the days when oil went for under $2 a barrel. Times have changed. Today a barrel of oil sells for more than $20, while the price of wheat hangs down around $5 a bushel. In the Midwest the question is being asked: "Isn't food as valuable a resource to the United States as oil is to the oil exporters?" Proponents of the Weaver bill say that what the oil exporters have is leverage, and the United States could have the same leverage. Four countries — the United States, Canada, Argentina, and Australia — produce 80 percent of the world's wheat. A grain cartel could give us the same kind of raw power now wielded by the OPEC. As attractive as the concept sounds, the Weaver bill is not the way to deal with energy costs. In order to accomplish its goal the Weaver bill would centralize control of agricultural exports in a new Washington bureaucracy. The right of our nation's farmers to buy and sell on the world market, once given to the government, would likely never be returned. In the decades when we exported oil, we could have formed an OPEC of our own and started sapping the lifeblood out of the rest of the world. It would have been wrong then. It is wrong today.

Unprepared For Grandparents

By GAIL MICHAELS
Expectant parents usually can prepare themselves mentally for the inevitable transition from a carefree life with once-a-week laundry duty to the world of babysitters, jam-covered chairs, and 3 a.m. wake-up calls. What they cannot prepare themselves for is the Jekyll-Hyde transformation of their own parents into grandparents. Young couples who think that their parents will be valuable resource persons because of their vast experience will be disillusioned quickly. All grandparents are in collusion with their grandchildren. Those who do not believe this should take note of how many grandparents become advocates of the permissive school of childrearing. People who ran their own homes like army training camps will assure their grown daughters and sons that medical science has now proved that flexible bedtimes (i.e., after Johnny Carson) and an unlimited diet of cartoons and candy are beneficial to grandchildren. Furthermore, once a grandchild enters the picture, the new parents are pushed out of it. Phillip and I once sat in the car for 20 minutes waiting for my parents to notice that we didn't go into the house with Meg. They never did. More aggravating than being ignored is the grandparent's sudden selective memory. Grandparents never remember what children play with. Phillip and I are indebted to our parents for such toyland hits as Alvin the Aardvark, Digger the Dog, and Milky the Marvelous Milking Cow. Digger hasn't seen the light of day since he first hit the toy box, and Alvin is nesting somewhere in the linen closet. Milky dried up after one day with her relentless master. Grandparents also do not remember how children play. I can watch without flinching

as Meg climbs 10 feet up a magnolia tree. Her grandmother gets dizzy when Meg walks around a brick patio wall. The wall is one foot high. But grandparents can be counted on to remember how children feel. I recall my own grandmother's reaction when my mother told me that the early teens were the most wonderful years of my life. My grandmother groaned. "You of all people would tell your child a lie like that? You, who cried throughout your entire puberty?" I appreciated my grandmother's remark at that time, but now I realize that this kind of tattletaling is the key element in the conspiracy between grandparents and grandchildren. Children should never know how their parents felt or acted when they were young. In fact, it would be better if children never knew that their parents were young at all. Once a grandparent starts feeding a kid stories about how naughty

WASHINGTON TODAY

Chinks In Kennedy Armor

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Strategists in the Carter presidential campaign are ready to mount an attack on Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's record for hiring minority workers. Sources close to the Carter campaign believe the president's record is so superior to Kennedy's that this issue could decide which man gets the traditional black vote that both camps consider crucial to winning the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination. But while there are opportunities, there are also pitfalls for the Carter camp in such a strategy, since blacks are hard to find among Carter's closest advisers. Further, Kennedy's aides dispute the case.

"You'd think that they could come up with better points to make," says Kennedy spokesman Tom Southwick. "I don't think anyone has a stronger civil rights record over the past 17 years than Kennedy." But one black Democrat, a state party official allied with Carter, argues that hiring records "will be a big issue in the black community." In his view, Carter and Kennedy are so close on issues of concern to blacks that black Democrats might decide between the two on the basis of hiring records. "Carter has a record on black appointments in top administration jobs that goes beyond rhetoric," says the Carter partisan, who declined to be identified. "Kennedy starts strong with blacks because of his family and the 1960s, but once the campaign begins, he's going to have to justify his horrible record on this over 17 years in the Senate." Another source, familiar with the thinking of Carter campaign strategists, said, "Kennedy has spoken all the right words, but he's never had a black in a position of any policy responsibility or among his brain trust of informal advisers." Southwick, Kennedy's spokesman, demurs. Of informal advisers, he said: "The senator is very close to Vernon Jordan of the Urban League. And right now, he's meeting with Mrs. (Coretta Scott) King and 'Daddy' King on legislation the senator is sponsoring that concerns them: the District of Columbia voting rights amendment, a measure to make Martin Luther King's birthday a national holiday and human services legislation." The day before, Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., father of the slain civil rights leader, had endorsed Carter. The Carter campaign plans to wave Kennedy's hiring record in the senator's face. "Kennedy controls over 100 jobs in the Senate among various committees, and he keeps one token black around, Peter Parham," said a source close to Carter strategists, who also asked not to be named.

Six Bogus Bill Arrests Made

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Six men from the Charlotte have been arrested in two separate incidents while trying to pass counterfeit bills totaling over $200,000, police and Secret Service agents said Thursday. Secret Service agent Bill Williamson of the Charlotte division said five of the men were arrested in Hickory and the sixth in Charlotte. They have been charged with possession and attempted distribution of counterfeit money.

Thomas and Towery were charged with passing and selling counterfeit bills and conspiracy to break federal counterfeiting laws. Hawkins was charged with one count of possessing and passing counterfeit money.

Williamson said the Charlotte arrest "involved the same counterfeit notes as the style of the ones taken in the Wednesday arrest, but we haven't tied him to the other five men."

The five were arrested in Hickory as they attempted to pass $208,000 in counterfeit bills to a team of undercover Secret Service agents.

The sixth man was arrested by Charlotte police after he allegedly attempted to pass a $20 bill at a local lounge.

The investigation is continuing, Williamson said, although no more arrests are expected immediately.

Investigators don't yet know where the phony money was printed, Williamson said. The plates used to print it have not been recovered.

Agent Earl Moore said most of the counterfeit money was printed in $100 bills while some was in the $20s.

Those arrested were identified as John Marshall Isaac, 32, of Conover; Terry Ray Miller, 23, of Taylorsville; J.C. Nicholson, 39, of Lincolnton; George Doran Thomas, 26, of Claremont; Edward Eugene Towery, 43, of Conover and Herbert Hoover Hawkins Jr., 26, of Huntersville. Isaacs, Miller, Nicholson, the portable Underwood has ever paused to picnic from a paper sack upon.

There is room upon the mall here for an infinite variety of human life: hard rock bands, street corner bible thumpers, leotarded lovelies shilling for a health clinic, shoppers scrimmaging over a bargain, lovers holding hands by a waterfall temporarily out of repair, old men storing up the noonday sun against the advance of winter.

And, girl-watchers timing the advance of a slashed skirt with the wind off the Arkansas River, kids playing hopscotch on the brick walk, convention delegates (like me) seeking success from the stifling air (note the avoidance of the pejorative "hot") in the meeting rooms of the nearby hotels and a few double-knit, three-piece financial types playing hookie from their aeries in the Sooner Federal building because they'd sooner look at the girls.

All in all, the mall cost about $3 million and has been open for strolling for slightly over a year and a half. It not only saved downtown Tulsa, but it regularly provides for free the best show in town: humanity in review.

"There is also the possibility that Carter could beat Kennedy for the nomination. We don't want to peak on refusing to discuss Chappaquiddick too early."

"We're covering all bases," the manager said. "Our advertising agency has reserved billboards in New Hampshire, Florida, Iowa, Pennsylvania and New York. It will have your picture on it and say, 'Vote for the man who kept Chappaquiddick out of his campaign.'"

"I wish I could do it more subtly. Maybe we could rent that big sign over Times Square, put my name up in lights and flash on and off: INFLATION SI — CHAPPAQUIDDICK NO."

"I'll check it out. Now let's talk about your speech tonight to Radar Trappers Union. We put in the paragraph you used last week in Detroit about not panicking in a crisis. The Kennedy people raised hell about it. Do you want to leave it in?"

"Sure, but add a line that when I'm speaking about panic I am certainly not referring to Chappaquiddick as that would be dirty pool."

Pens of Power

"Wow . . . what a story." "Now, there's a real article." So go our reactions to writing that stimulates. But, before a word is written, a good writer must first have something to say and know how best to say it.

Poe, Shakespeare and Margaret Mitchell . . . they had something in common . . . pens of power. They had the rare gift of being able to transport readers into another world of beauty, drama, or history itself. Passing years cannot dim the luster of their immortal works.

Yet, long before the days of these great authors, four other writers spoke to a needy world through their pens. They wrote about a man from Nazareth whose life changed the world. Divinely inspired, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John still testify today to the truth of the risen Savior.

Share the experience of the Holy Word of God this Sunday.

Announcement Sent Gold Price Down

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Treasury's surprise announcement that it will auction off $1.25 million ounces of gold on Nov. 1 sent the price of bullion plummeting by as much as $17.50 in Europe today. The dollar rose.

"People were expecting there wouldn't be any auctions for a while, and now we have more gold coming onto the market," said a dealer at Samuel Montagu Ltd., one of the big five London bullion merchants.

Gold opened in London at $374.50 an ounce, down $17.50 from $392.00 Thursday. In Zurich, the opening price was $376.50, down $15.50.

This compared with gold's all-time peak of $444.00 an ounce, hit in Zurich trading just 24 days ago.

Meanwhile, the dollar climbed.

Morning rates compared to late Thursday:

Frankfurt—1.8035 West German marks, up from 1.8015.

Zurich—1.6665 Swiss francs, up from 1.6567.

Paris—4.2268 French francs, up from 4.2240.

Amsterdam—2.0025 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0015.

Milan—830.10 Italian lire, up from 829.45.

Yesterday's Cryptquip - CUPID STALLS AT LADY'S CUPIDITY.

Today's Cryptquip clue: B equals P

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Mortgage Action Boosting Interest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration has moved on several fronts to ease the nationwide mortgage money crunch, but at the expense of further boosting record high interest rates.

A federal official who requested anonymity said Thursday's steps will make money available for a while, "especially so lenders can make good on commitments. But who is going to borrow at the rates they'll have to charge?"

The supply of mortgage money is expected to grow as a result of revised Federal Home Loan Bank Board regulations which:

—Lower the minimum amount of money thrift institutions must keep in reserve, thereby freeing up to $2.4 billion that can be made available for mortgages.

—Give savings and loan associations permission to greatly expand their borrowing from "outside sources," starting in 60 days. Those sources could include such things as commercial banks and mortgage-backed bonds.

In a related move, the maximum allowable interest on single-family home mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration was raised a full point to a record 11.5 percent. For multi-family dwellings, the ceiling was raised from 10 percent to 11 percent. Ceilings on Veterans Administration loans also rose 1 percent to 11.5 percent.

It was the second time interest ceilings on federally insured mortgages have been raised in the last month by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

High interest rates on non-federally insured mortgages, now at 14 percent in some states, may increase before turning around, said several housing analysts.

After the first of the year, one said, "I think we will start seeing interest rates coming down."

The actions by HUD and the bank board, which regulates the nation's 4,000 federal savings and loan associations, came as mortgage money has all but dried up.

Savings and loans are losing deposits, which they use to make mortgages, to other institutions and investments offering better returns, such as money-market mutual funds.

In addition, mortgage bankers, who write most government-backed mortgages, have had trouble finding investors for mortgages carrying interest rates lower than other available investments.

Some housing experts said the FHA ceiling increase should make it somewhat easier for mortgage bankers to sell mortgages to their investors.

Although the actions are designed to increase mortgage money availability, they will not do so in all cases.

One expert said mortgage lending will not pick up in the 20 or so states with mortgage interest ceilings, which are set at 12 percent or less.

And, even if mortgage is available, many people find it out of their reach: higher interest rates. Monthly payment on a $ mortgage with a 30-year carrying a 10.5 percent interest rate was $458. That payment the same loan with an interest rate of 11.5 percent interest goes to $496.

Hunting Site In N.C. For Radioactive Waste

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina produces 7 percent of the total amount of radioactive waste in the country, and two-thirds of that is produced in the Research Triangle Park area.

A task force of state officials, industry officials and researchers is now searching for a single temporary storage site to be used by all the facilities that produce the waste in North Carolina, according to Stephanie Bass, Gov. Jim Hunt's deputy press secretary.

"We're trying to do that," she said. "We're also looking for a long-range way of disposing of this. We've known for some time we were going to have to find a way to deal with it."

Quentin Lindsey, science adviser to Hunt and head of the task force, said a warehouse to store 55-gallon drums filled with the radioactive material is being sought. He said the temporary site would be for storage up to 18 months.

After that the state would have to find an out-of-state site to accept the waste for permanent storage or develop a permanent solution here, he said.

Possible long-range solutions here include finding a burial site, using new technology to burn the wastes or using technology being developed to recycle it.

John Ely, radiation safety officer at the Research Triangle Park, heads the task force's subcommittee searching for the long-term solution. That panel has narrowed its search for a burial site or disposal facility to areas in the Dan River and Big River basins in Piedmont North Carolina.

Sees Closed Meetings Basis Of Probe Action

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Rutherford County Commissioner Harvey Powell says he expects irregularities like closed meetings are the reason a county grand jury has recommended an investigation of the board's procedures.

The grand jury said it wanted to find out if the Board of County Commissioners had broken any laws, but District Attorney

Leonard Lowe declined to say Thursday whether his office would accept the recommendation for the probe. He says the jurors "need to be more specific."

Powell said if board members "would keep a clean nose we wouldn't have all this."

"I hated it," he said of the request for the probe. "It's a damn shame and a disgrace."

Powell said a grand juror called him Monday with a request that he appear before the jury. He said he thinks the request was prompted because the juror member had read "about me raising hell" with the other commissioners.

And he suggested that the recommendation resulted from "irregularities that have been going on, such things as behind-the-door closed meetings."

Powell said he refused to appear, however, and he says the call for the probe came as a surprise to him.

The other four members of the county board say they don't know what prompted the grand jury's action.

In making the recommendation Wednesday, the jury did not specify what procedures or laws it wanted investigated in connection with the board's actions. It asked, however, that Lowe or the state attorney general's office make the proposed investigation.

Deputy Attorney General James Wallace Jr. said in Raleigh his office would investigate if requested to do so by Lowe.

"We have been aware of the discontent ... and a suspicion of wrongdoing on the part of some people for some time," Wallace said. However, he would not elaborate.

Lowe and Superior Court officials say they did not know who instituted the grand-jury action.

Cite School Energy-Use

Although D.H. Conley High School showed the greatest decrease in electrical use over the other county high schools in September, its energy bill still rose $342.74 over last year's figures according to information released by George Laws, energy control officer for Pitt County Schools.

North Pitt reduced its use by 9.4 percent over last year, and had a $55.45 reduction in its bill. Farmville Central used 8.2 percent more electricity, and Ayden-Grifton reflected a 5.5 increase in its usage.

W.H. Robinson, Pactolus, Falkland and Belvoir Elementary showed increases in uses, with H.B. Sugg showing a 64 percent decrease. H.B. Sugg and Wellcome Middle were the only schools to show a decrease in energy costs for September.

Emergency Loans Are Now Available

Farmers in Pitt County are now eligible to apply for emergency loans through the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration (FmHA). Excessive rainfall from Jan. 1 through July 31, 1979 caused crop damage in Pitt County.

FmHA emergency loans are made to farmers who lack other sources of credit for loans to cover crop, property or equipment losses caused by designated natural disasters. Amounts of up to $250,000 offsetting actual production losses are available at a five percent interest rate. Amounts in excess of the loss to restore production or make major adjustments in farming operations are available at higher interest rates.

Farmers may apply for loans at the county FmHA office, 215 S. Evans St., Greenville. Applications for physical losses are authorized through July 16, 1980 and for production losses until Oct. 16, 1980.

Cool Temperatures A Health Factor

The lowering of home thermostats to the mid-60's this winter should make for healthier individuals, according to the North Carolina Medical Society. Heating homes and offices during the winter months removes a certain amount of moisture from the air. The higher the temperature is, the drier the air. Air with little moisture aggravates bronchial and other respiratory problems and also contributes to dry throat and nose, coughs, and dry, itchy skin.

Also the respiratory system does not always cope well with sudden changes in temperature. Moving from an overly heated room to the outside cold can be shocking, particularly to the lungs.

If dryness of the air persists, even with the lowered temperatures, a small humidifier may be the way to add a little moisture to inside air, the society indicated.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PUBLIC:

WILL YOUR NEXT CAR EXPIRE WITH THE WARRANTY?

A warranty is like a car. It's great while it lasts. But what happens when your warranty expires? The way some cars are built these days, it's not particularly unusual for the car to stop running the same day the warranty runs out. And that leaves you holding on to a piece of paper instead of a steering wheel. Granted, a car is a pretty complex piece of machinery. With those thousands of intricate parts twisting around, or rubbing against one another, it's not surprising if something eventually breaks down. But, with normal use, it shouldn't happen in twelve months — at least, not if the car is assembled properly.

WHITE-GLOVE TREATMENT.

How in the world can you maintain quality control during the assembly of such a complicated vehicle? At Toyota, they do it by putting the people who work on the assembly line in charge of quality control. In the Toyota factories, any worker who discovers a problem can stop the assembly line at any time by pushing a button. They even wear white gloves during assembly. But no belt buckles — that could scratch the paint. And they have an interesting slogan: "How can we do it better?" That's a nice slogan, but the real payoff is the finished product. We suggest you take a close look at any new Toyota — up close, from bumper to bumper, road to roof. You'll find the fit of the different sections, the evenness and gloss of the paint, the assembly of every part of the car to be meticulously done. Compare a Toyota with any other new car or truck — from America, or anywhere. You'll agree that quality is built into every Toyota by conscientious workers who really do want to do it better.

THE BUCK DOESN'T STOP HERE.

Once a Toyota leaves the factory, does the quality control stop? It does not. Every Toyota dealer goes over every Toyota with a fine comb before it's delivered to the buyer. We want to make sure that the Toyota you buy is as perfect as possible. That means extra hours and extra effort for our dealers. And they love it. Because in the long run we get that time and effort back in cars that look and run right, and customers who believe in us and in our cars. Maybe some of those big American automobile manufacturers who are about to expire should pay less attention to warranties, and more to the cars they build and sell. Toyota has a fine warranty, but it's not worth the paper it's printed on without a fine car or truck to back it up.

Sincerely,

Jim Moran

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a broad advance in early trading today, but most of the gains had evaporated by noon.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up almost 6 points in early trading, showed a .60 gain at 806.60 by noon.

Gainers held a 2-1 edge on losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, after leading by as much as 4 to 1 earlier.

Late Thursday the Federal Reserve announced a $3.7 billion downward revision in the estimates of the money supply it had reported for the first two weeks of this month.

The Fed said the original data, which had touched off sharp declines a week ago in the stock and bond markets, had been overstated as a result of a reporting error by an unidentified major bank.

Stock prices rallied strongly at the opening on that word. But then they settled back as the market absorbed news of continuing two-digit inflation rates last month and Citibank's decision to raise its prime lending rate to a record 15 1/4 percent.

The Citibank move topped an increase to 15 percent by many other leading banks on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The biggest loser on the active list was Data General, down 9 at 50 1/4 following the company's report Thursday of lower quarterly earnings.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .17 to 56.78. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index climbed 2.24 to 198.84.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 14.45 million shares after the first two hours, against 11.32 million at the same point Thursday.

Big Error In Money Supply

NEW YORK (AP) — The Federal Reserve says it made a massive error in calculating the money supply for the first two weeks of October, an error that apparently played a large role in the rapid rise of interest rates this month.

The admission came Thursday, as the Federal Reserve released figures showing the previous week's report of the basic money supply was $3 billion too high.

"The substantial cause of the revision was reporting errors by a large money center bank," a Federal Reserve spokesman said. He declined to give details.

In its efforts to control inflation, the Federal Reserve closely follows the money supply. A week ago, it reported the basic money supply rose a stunning $2.8 billion in the week ended Oct. 10. The same day, the Federal Reserve tightened credit, driving up interest rates.

But on Thursday, the Federal Reserve said the gain was actually only a modest $500 million for that week. It said the basic money supply for the week ended Oct. 17 declined $700 million, completely offsetting the previous week's gains.

The basic money supply, known as M1, includes cash and funds in checking accounts. In the week ended Oct. 17, that figure was at a seasonally-adjusted $379.5 billion, the Federal Reserve said.

The Federal Reserve also revised downward by $700 million its estimate of M1 in the week ended Oct. 3 and issued revisions for M2 data for both the Oct. 3 and Oct. 10 reporting weeks. M2 includes all elements of M1 plus money in most savings accounts.

Berserk....
 LeMay said rescuers were dispatched to the school after the fire department received a report of an unconscious child. "Some other kids said something supernatural had possessed him," he said.

"I saw three girls. They had fainted," said one young student. "There was some screaming about 'bloody Mary' and more screaming."

Authorities say none of the 300 students at Miami Aerospace Academy, some of them from South America, was seriously hurt. LeMay said one frenzied youngster was treated for cuts suffered when he shattered a window.

"It seems they were induced by the sight of others who became hysterical — it was like a domino effect," he said.

Academy owner and President Evaristo Marina, who is campaigning for a City Council seat, said the incident was intended to embarrass his campaign.

Marina vigorously denied police reports that the incident was sparked by a demonstration of hypnotism and discussions of the supernatural.

"We don't teach those things here," he said. "Somebody put the kids up to it. One week before the election and everybody is trying to get me."

Marina refused to allow reporters inside the pink Spanish-style school, where fire inspectors said they found several safety violations. He said the influx of reporters and city authorities aggravated the situation.

ECU Offense Challenges UNC Defense

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In the past, East Carolina Coach Pat Dye has tried to treat games against Big Four opponents as just another game. They've been no more important to the total Pirate schedule than any other.

But this year's meeting with North Carolina, set for 1 p.m. Saturday at Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill, is a little different.

The Pirates, playing against all four of the Big Four, have been beaten in three of those games. This is their final chance for a win over one of that quartet this year, and Dye would like nothing better than a win.

Not only would the victory pull off some face-saving for the Pirates, knocking off a nationally ranked team could put them back into the post-season picture if they could win big the rest of the season.

But, Dye acknowledges, it won't be easy. "We're going to have to play at our best. We can't make any mistakes and come away with a win. If we don't play just as good as we possibly can, it could be embarrassing."

East Carolina comes into the game following their second off-date in the past three weeks. According to Dye, it couldn't have come at a better time.

Last week, the Pirates prepared for the speedy running of Amos Lawrence, the top ground gainer for the Tar Heels. But Amos was benched last Saturday against N.C. State, and Doug Paschal, usually found at fullback, played in the Lawrence tailback spot. Billy (The Horse) Johnson, a bruising 250-pounder, filled in at tailback.

The results were such that Carolina coach Dick Crum has said the same duo will start this Saturday against the Pirates. "So we've worked all week this week to expect that. We should be ready for either of them," Dye said.

With Lawrence, who's rushed for 613 yards in six games, the Heels can get to the outside quickly to try and make the big play. With Paschal, who has 445 yards so far, the Heels can grind out yardage up the middle with their strong inside game.

Then, with Matt Kupec guiding the offense at quarterback, the pass is always a threat. Kupec has run for only eight yards net this fall, but has connected on 64 of 112 passes for 891 yards and ten touchdowns. He's had only three intercepted.

The Heels operate being an especially tough offensive line, anchored by tackle Steve Junkman and guard Ron Wooten. Overall, the Heel line averages about 30 pounds per man more than the Pirate defenders.

While generally going with only one tight end, the Heels used two a number of times against State, with both Shelton Robinson and Mike Chatham in. Chatham, along with Paschal, are the leading Heel receivers, both catching 16 passes. Chatham's have gone from 286 yards and three touchdowns, while Paschal's have accounted for 130 yards and no scores.

Defensively, the Heels may be at their strongest ever. "I thought at the start of the year, they might be weak at the defensive ends," Dye said. "But, as usual, what I hope doesn't come true."

Dye compares the Heel defense to N.C. State when the Wolfpack was healthy. "The biggest difference is in their linebackers," the coach said.

The Heels linebackers, led by Buddy Curry and Darrell Nicholson, have been the terrors of the defense, making tackles all over the field.

We can't do like we did last year, and leave the ball on the field," Dye said. "Fortunately, we've had only ten turnovers this year and five of them came against Duke."

Dye admitted that the game was a big one for the Pirates. "We have a chance to save a little face and that may put more significance on the game than it's had in the past. It would be a big plus for us, but nothing is going to erase those three losses."

"I hope the extra work we've had because of the off-week helps us," Dye continued. "I also hope that the ball bounces our way some. Up there, when it hit the field, it tends to come up wearing blue."

Joe Godette, veteran offensive tackle, out since the second half of the State game, is expected to be ready to play for the Pirates, but will not start. Noah Clark, another injured defensive lineman, also can play, but will not start for the Pirates.

The Pirates go into the game with the fourth best rushing average in the country, averaging 328 yards a contest. Carolina comes in with the 11th best defense against the rush, giving up only 113.8 yards a game.

"We've to be able to move the ball against them to do anything," Dye said. "Running the wishbone gives us a greater opportunity to do that. For one thing, we're the first wishbone team they've seen, so that should be to our advantage."

"Then, if we execute well... Well, we just have to play a perfect game. We can't line up personnel-wise against a team like Carolina. We've got to beat them with our speed and finesse."

Bridgeman Praised As Best 6th Man In NBA

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Off to a division-leading 7-1 start, the Milwaukee Bucks say their catalyst is on the bench when the game starts.

"He's the best sixth man in the league," said Coach Don Nelson, referring to 6-foot-5 guard Junior Bridgeman.

Trailing 61-53 at the half, the Bucks, behind Bridgeman's fourth quarter explosion, overtook the San Diego Clippers 118-115 for their seventh consecutive National Basketball Association victory Thursday night.

In Thursday night's only other NBA game, Pete Maravich scored 21 of his 31 points in the third quarter, including a pair of three-point goals, leading the Utah Jazz to a 113-105 victory over the Chicago Bulls.

Bridgeman scored 18 of his 22 points in Milwaukee's 39-point final quarter as the Bucks choked off high-scoring Lloyd Free down the stretch.

"We were having trouble putting points in early," said Bridgeman. "I didn't have a feel for the game until the fourth quarter. We got the momentum then and that was the difference."

"We played Free super," added Nelson. Free, who leads the NBA in scoring, led all scorers with 30 points, but only had four in the final period.

"We had him scouted pretty good," said Nelson. "If they were going to beat us, it would not be with Free."

Milwaukee went ahead 97-95 with 7:36 remaining in the fourth quarter and, after an exchange of two-pointers, took the lead for good at 4:48 on a basket by Brian Winters.

"Our problem was team defense. If we score 115 points, we should win," said Clippers Coach Gene Shue. "There were too many individual breakdowns."

Winters led the Bucks with 23 points as Milwaukee registered its fourth victory on the road.

"We're good, and we'll win our division," predicted Nelson. Last year, Milwaukee finished in a tie for third place in the Midwest Division with a 38-44 record, 10 games behind the Kansas City Kings.

Without Bill Walton's services for the eighth consecutive game, the Clippers got a 15-rebound effort from his backup, Swen Nater, and an 11-point, 13-rebound performance from Jerome Whitehead, Nater's backup.

Marques Johnson added 20 points for Milwaukee, 12 in the first quarter.

Guard Freeman Williams had 22 for San Diego and newly acquired forward Joe Bryant had a season-high of 19 as San Diego fell to 3-5.

Jazz 113, Bulls 105

Adrian Dantley led Utah with 35 points, but it was Maravich's third-period outburst which broke the game open.

The Jazz led 52-51 at halftime, but the 6-foot-5 guard scored 14 points in the first five minutes of the third period to put Utah in command. The Jazz led 91-79 going into the fourth quarter, and although the Bulls rallied to within six at 111-105 with 1:15 to go, they could not score after that.

Ricky Sobers led the Chicago with 33 points.

Quarterback Leander Green

Green Wants Win Over Heels

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"We have to win this one to have a successful season."

That's the way East Carolina quarterback Leander Green looks at Saturday's 1 p.m. meeting with the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill's Kenan Stadium.

"We got off to a slow start and wound up with three losses. We can't afford another loss."

"But we feel like we're back on the right track now. If we can win, it will be a big boost for us for the rest of the season. And I think that a win here and in the rest of the games could put us back in the bowl picture," Green added.

The Pirate quarterback is the total offense leader for the Pirates, rushing for 248 yards and passing for 587 for a total of 835. While his rushing isn't up to what it was two years ago, Green feels he has improved on his passing.

"That was one of my goals for the year," he said. "I wanted to do better with my passing." So far, he's connected on 39 of 85 for 45.9 percent. Oddly enough, he hasn't thrown for a touchdown all year, but has a 70-yard completion. "I'm not satisfied with it yet (the passing), but I do think I've improved."

This Saturday, Green will be going up against one of the toughest defenses he's seen in guiding the Pirates. "They're really a lot like State, but they have better linebackers and real good defensive ends. I don't think they'll play as many defensive schemes as State did against us. It's going to come down to how well our offensive line blocks, how well our backs block, and our overall execution."

Green thinks the Heels will be looking for him especially. "Whatever happens, I still think we can move the ball against us. I just don't know whether they'll respect our inside or outside game more."

Green has never been on an East Carolina team that brought home a victory from Chapel Hill. The lone win, 38-17, came in 1975, when Green was a senior at Jacksonville High. He'd like to leave with a win Saturday in his pocket.

Raiders Crush Chargers By 45-22

OAKLAND (AP) — The last time the San Diego Chargers beat the Oakland Raiders twice in a season was in 1965. It's liable to be a while longer if Thursday night's game is any indication.

The Chargers came into the Oakland Coliseum leading the National Football League's American Conference West. After a nationally televised 45-22 rout, they are still leading, but not by very much.

"You can't beat the Raiders in Oakland," said defensive back Lester Hayes, who picked off a crucial first-half interception and generally made life miserable for San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts.

Although Fouts threw for a record fourth straight 300 yards passing, his team trailed almost from the outset and on only two occasions seemed on the verge of getting back in the game.

The first time, with Oakland ahead 14-0, Fouts tossed the ball up for grabs in the end zone and Hayes picked it off. Oakland went on to raise its lead to 21-0 before San Diego could score.

"(John) Matuszak was sitting in Dan's face and he didn't see me," Hayes said of the first-quarter interception. "Dan just threw it and I was there."

Fouts did connect with John Jefferson for a 57-yard touchdown in the second quarter, but the Chargers still trailed 24-6 at halftime. They cut that to 24-15 early in the third quarter on a field goal and TD after an on-side kick, but then came Ira Matthews.

The rookie from Wisconsin appeared to have made a mistake when he took a kickoff four yards deep in his own end zone. But he came roaring up the right sideline, cut back against the grain and scored the longest kickoff return in team history.

The runback took the steam out of the Chargers and even though Fouts threw for more than 300 yards again, he was outplayed by Oakland's Ken Stabler.

"Kenny called his game," Oakland's Gene Upshaw said. "He didn't get into a passing duel with Fouts."

Stabler was 13 of 17 for 212 yards, one touchdown and no interceptions. Fouts was 21 of 37 for 303 with two interceptions and the same number of TDs.

Ironically, in two of the four games in which Fouts has thrown for more than 300 yards, his team has lost.

The loss left San Diego with a 6-3 mark, half a game ahead of Denver and a full game ahead of the Raiders in the AFC West.

Sunday's games are Kansas City at Denver, Dallas at Pittsburgh, Tampa Bay at Minnesota, New Orleans at Washington, the New York Jets at Houston, Buffalo at Detroit, Cleveland at St. Louis, New England at Baltimore, Chicago at San Francisco, Green Bay at Miami, the New York Giants at Los Angeles and Philadelphia at Cincinnati. Monday night's game is Seattle at Atlanta.

Kansas City, jolted by its 21-17 loss to the Giants, will try to rebound against the Broncos, battered 42-7 by Pittsburgh last Monday night. The Chiefs, 4-4, are also out to avenge the Broncos' 24-10 victory two weeks ago in Kansas City and halt Denver's seven-game winning streak against them.

Craig Morton, the AFC's No. 3 passer this year, regained his starting job for Denver that week after a troublesome knee sidelined Norris Weese, and he made the most of it with touchdown passes to Haven Moses and Rick Upchurch.

Mike Livingston, given back his starting job for the Chiefs last Sunday after they faltered with rookie Steve Fuller barking out the calls, nearly pulled out a last-minute victory after Giants' linebacker Harry Carson's 22-yard TD run with a fumble. Livingston's passes got Kansas City inside the New York 10-yard line before three end zone passes in the last 10 seconds were batted away.

The Cowboys, with the best record in the league at 7-1, head into Pittsburgh, 6-2, seeking to get even for their 35-31 Super Bowl XIII loss, their 21-17 Super Bowl X loss and their 28-13 regular-season loss in 1977, their most recent visit to Three Rivers Stadium.

If the Steelers win, the National Conference's East Division lead could be split three ways by sundown, what with Philadelphia and Washington each at 6-2. If Dallas wins, Houston and Cleveland, each at 5-3, could turn first place in the American Conference's Central Division into a three-way tie.

Tampa Bay, a warm-weather team in the predominantly cold-weather NFC Central loop, is bundling up for a trip to Minnesota, where the Vikings hope to cut into the Bucs' two-game lead. The Bucs won last year's game in Bloomington 16-10, the first of five victories that season. They've already got six this year.

Also seeking to retain a division lead is New England, 6-2 and a game ahead of Miami in the AFC East. In the NFC West, Los Angeles and New Orleans are sputtering along at 4-4, but tied for first.

Fezler, Ziegler Believe They Have The Key To Team Success

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Forrest Fezler and Larry Ziegler, a couple of long shots leading the $250,000 National Team Golf Classic by a single stroke, believe they've got the key to success.

"Drive straight and hit a lot of putts — that's our strategy," said Ziegler after he and his partner combined for 11 birdies and an 11-under-par 61 over Disney's 7,197-yard Magnolia course Thursday.

That was good for the first-round lead in the best-ball event, but Fezler and Ziegler had little breathing room, with three two-men teams a stroke behind and another four duos another stroke back in the quest for the $45,000 first prize in the last PGA event of the year. Eleven teams were at 8-under 64.

"It's easy for me when Larry hits the ball so well," said Fezler, who won only $11,427 for the year and is just getting over a bout with mononucleosis. Ziegler has done a bit better on the PGA tour, standing 98th with official winnings of $38,546.

Fezler made six birdies and Ziegler five enroute to their sparkling score in a tournament that features 104 teams and usually has been won by a pair of tour rabbits or unknowns.

Cubs Win Seventh

Rose High School's junior varsity rolled to a 26-7 victory over Wilson Fike High School yesterday.

Rose did all of its scoring in the first three periods, rolling up a 26-0 lead. Barry Smith got it started with a one-yard quarterback sneak in the first period, with Mike Thurber adding the extra point for a 7-0 lead.

Smith then hit Marty Tyson with a 40-yard touchdown pass in the second period. Robert Brown scored on a three-yard run later in the period for a 19-0 halftime advantage.

Brown came back with another three-yard scoring run, and Thurber kicked the PAT in the third period.

Fike's only score came on a one-yard plunge in the final period.

The win boosted the Rose record to 7-1 on the year. They travel to Wilson Hunt next Thursday.

Holtz Claims Saturday Foe Is Number One Grid Team

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

No matter what the rankings say, Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz believes he is playing the nation's No. 1 team Saturday. And the way the Houston Cougars have been playing lately, they may be.

"There's no doubt about it, they're the best team in the country right now," Holtz says. "But that doesn't mean they're going to win Saturday. I'm not conceding this to anyone."

"But they are the best team — offensively, defensively, kicking game, attitude-wise — that I've seen in this (Southwest) conference since I've been here."

Actually, Houston is No. 6 in The AP poll. Holtz's Razorbacks are tied for fourth with Ohio State after a 17-14 upset over powerful Texas last Saturday.

The Razorbacks ran right at Texas' highly rated defense in a second-half drive that produced their winning field goal. Holtz doesn't plan to do the same with Houston.

"There is no way in the world to take Houston and pound them," he said. "There is no way to beat this team running between the tackles."

Brilliant defense has played a big part in Houston's 6-0 record thus far. That's quite a change from the offense-oriented teams that Yeoman used to produce there.

"There is no question we're a little different," said Yeoman, now in his 18th year as Houston coach. "When we were independent, you go a lot on statistics. We used to fling the ball around all over the place and take some gambles that conceivably were not the percentages."

"I'm more restrained in my activity now that we're in the conference," added Yeoman. "I'm a little more considered in my calls. Not as wild and woolly."

Meanwhile, the nation's accredited No. 1 team, Alabama, will see action against Virginia Tech in another busy college weekend. Elsewhere, it's Colorado at No. 2 Nebraska; No. 3 Southern Cal at California; Michigan State at No. 4 Ohio State; Iowa State at No. 7 Oklahoma; No. 8 Florida State at LSU; No. 9 Texas at SMU; Indiana at No. 10 Michigan; New Mexico at No. 11 Brigham Young; No. 17 Navy at No. 12 Pitt; No. 13 Auburn at No. 18 Wake Forest; South Carolina at No. 14 Notre Dame; East Carolina at No. 15 North Carolina; Northwestern at No. 16 Purdue and No. 20 Washington at UCLA.

Bear Bryant is looking for his 200th victory since becoming coach at Alabama in 1958. He is not looking for an easy game, however.

"Virginia Tech always beats us but we always win," says Bryant.

The loss left the Lady Jaguars with a 5-5 record on the year. They next return to action in sectional play next week.

Frank McGuire Era Ending At South Carolina--At Year's End

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Frank McGuire accepted the end of his basketball coaching career at the University of South Carolina hoping "frustrations of the past will now be turned into victories for the university I love so much ...

"I've got a hard nose and a tough heart and I love basketball," McGuire said after Thursday's announcement that the upcoming season would be his last at South Carolina.

McGuire also said his 14 players agreed to accept an agreement between his attorneys and school officials that he would leave the university June 30, "as per terms agreed upon."

The team had threatened to quit en masse if the university's Board of Trustees had gone ahead with a purported plan to dismiss McGuire today. Instead, university President James B. Holderman and trustee chairman R. Markley Dennis Sr. said the 65-year-old McGuire would stay for the season.

But three of McGuire's players, including team captain Mike Doyle joined several hundred students early this morning in a protest march that attracted some 300 persons. Beginning about midnight, they chanted "Keep Frank McGuire," "Fire the board" and other statements supporting the coach.

The march ended about 1:15 a.m. at Holderman's campus home, where Doyle, who drafted the team letter threatening to walk out, told the group, "The administration doesn't give a damn what the students think ...

"Because of Coach McGuire's acceptance they think they have won over the students again," he said.

Teammates Jim Strickland and Mark Connaughton also spoke.

Strickland said, "I don't know much about political battles, but I would really like to have coach McGuire for my last season here at Carolina." Connaughton referred to persons who "want to fire (McGuire) for their own self-centered reasons."

McGuire has maintained that his contract allowed him to coach until he reached retirement age of 70. An informed source indicated McGuire would be paid for the remaining four years of his contract.

The only man to win 100 games at three schools, McGuire appeared resentful Thursday that his career at South Carolina will end after 16 years.

Asked if he were bitter, McGuire said, "I don't have to answer that."

And to a question about the settlement, he said, "I'm not mentioning anything, just that I'm satisfied."

Reports that McGuire had turned down an offer of a $75,000-a-year public relations post as an assistant to Holderman were confirmed.

But McGuire said he would still like to help select a new coach, which he said would encourage team members to stay on after he leaves.

"I can help this program much, much better than any of these neophytes, these Johnny come-latelies," he said.

In a moment of levity, McGuire said he would advise the next coach to "keep his bags packed," but added, "the right coach, without interference from these outside people, should do a great job."

It was "outside people" who apparently pushed the hardest to terminate McGuire's coaching role. Several influential state politicians reportedly wanted McGuire out.

"My life is basketball, not politics," McGuire responded to a question about allegations of politicians' meddling with university policies. "But after being here 16 years, I qualify as a politician."

The board of trustees voted at a meeting Sept. 4 not to renew McGuire's contract after the 1979-80 season, reportedly because they felt he was getting too old for the job.

Patriots End Conley Hopes

MOREHEAD CITY — West Carteret High School rallied from behind in the third game of the best-of-three match to gain a 2-1 victory over D.H. Conley last night in the second round of the State Volleyball Playoffs.

Conley, for the second year champions of the Eastern Carolina Conference, had received a bye in the first round of the playoffs.

In the first game, West Carteret rolled up a 15-3 victory, while Conley came back to take a 15-3 win in the second. The Patriots rallied for a 15-8 win in the decisive third game.

"This is the second year we've been in the playoffs, so we shouldn't have been nervous," Coach Norma Respass said, "but we were. That's why we did so bad in the first game."

"In the second, we played beautiful ball but they were real strong in the third game. We had them 8-6, and when we changed courts, we just seemed to lose our momentum, allowing them to come back."

Respass pointed to the strong service of Mary Burnham of West Carteret, who hit nine in a row in the first game, and added five more in the second. "They also had very strong net play," Respass commented.

Conley finished the year with a 13-2 record, and had four girls selected to the All-Conference team, Pam Manning, Tilda Garis, Glenda Green and Lexanne Keeter.

against Aycock, but this week, they come up against a well-rested Greene Central team. The Rams have too much, rested or not, for the Panthers.

Southern Nash visits Ayden-Grifton after losing to Farmville Central. That probably cost the Firebirds the title, and one would expect them to be down. But, we believe, they will still top the Chargers.

Conley, after its first winning season, travels to C.B. Aycock. The Falcons are struggling to get out of a share of the cellar, while the Vikings are striving to be the most improved in the league. Conley should win.

Finally, Farmville Central visits Havelock in a game that could be a preview of State Playoff action. It has all the promise of a rip-roaring contest, and for the first time in a long time, we're picking against the Jaguars. Hope we're wrong, but Havelock is our choice.

Elsewhere, it'll be Tarboro over Roanoke, Jamesville over Scotland Neck, and Edenton over Williamston.

Turning to the one high school game on our poll, we find Rose at Wilson Fike. The Golden Demons may try to get some revenge for Rose's licking of fellow Wilson County school Beddingfield a couple of weeks ago. This could be a dangerous game for the Rampants, but our panel gives Rose a 6-1 nod. Only Dick Jones favors Fike.

The Pirates of East Carolina travel to Chapel Hill for a big one. The Bucs can do some face-saving with a win, while the Tar Heels need to keep on winning to retain their bowl hopes. Again, we find a 6-1 ballot, this one favoring the Tar Heels. Again, Jones is the only dissenter.

Hope he's wrong in the former, right in the latter.

Our other concensus picks: Maryland over Duke; Arkansas over Houston; Georgia over Kentucky; Syracuse over Miami, Florida; Clemson over N.C. State; Georgia Tech and Tulane, a toss-up; Auburn over Wake Forest; Furman and VMI, a toss-up; Mississippi State over Southern Mississippi; and Washington over UCLA.

The bidding:

3 ♦	Pass	4 ♦	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♦.

Here's a chance to test whether your play is up to championship calibre. When Sweden's Sven-Olov Flodqvist held this hand in the recent European Championships, he spent little time in rattling off ten tricks. Cover the East West hands with your thumbs and see how you would fare in four hearts after the defenders start with three rounds of clubs.

The auction was straightforward. Despite the fact that there was no club stopper, two no trump was the most descriptive opening bid available to South. North checked for a major fit, and East doubled to show a club suit. South bid his hearts and North went on to game. Note that a five club sacrifice by East-West would have been a cheap save.

If you are one of those optimists who imagine that everything will break well, you ruffed the club and drew two rounds of trumps, hoping to draw trumps and then run diamonds. East's discard on the second round of trumps would have left you with no way to recover once diamonds also failed to break.

To Flodqvist the hand presented no problem. He did not even consider drawing trumps. After ruffing the third club in dummy, he ducked a spade! This simple maneuver spiked the defenders' guns.

West shifted to a diamond which was won with the king. Declarer cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade with the ten of trumps. Now he could draw trumps and gather in ten tricks safely—the ace of spades and a ruff, three diamonds, a club ruff and four trump tricks.

Nothing brilliant, just sound technique to counter possible bad breaks.

Lerner Hits Are Seized

NEW YORK (AP) — A little bit of Alan Jay Lerner's Broadway hits belong to the lyricist's fourth wife, a New York judge has ruled.

Lerner's personal property was placed in receivership Thursday by a judge who said the writer has failed to make a number of alimony payments to his fourth wife, Micheline.

"This is the ninth occasion that (she) has had to resort to enforcement proceedings in order to obtain support payments due her under a Nevada divorce decree," Justice Hor-tense Gabel ruled in Manhattan Supreme Court.

Mrs. Lerner, who was named as receiver of all Lerner's personal property in New York State, was seeking $12,499.98 in back alimony from July 1 to September 1.

Her attorney, Raoul Felder, said the ruling would allow Mrs. Lerner to collect Lerner's royalties from such hit shows as "My Fair Lady," "Camelot" and "Brigadoon."

Lerner, 60, also faces contempt charges for not paying $50,000 in back alimony under an earlier court order.

Plan Halloween Carnival Monday

The Wahl-Coates PTA will sponsor a Halloween Carnival Monday, Oct. 29, from 6-9 p.m. at the school.

A haunted house, fortune telling tent, top-the-teacher booth, fishing, basketball, and dart games will be featured. Awards will be given for costumes, and jump rope contests and cake walks will also be held.

Clown Alley will be on hand to make up clown faces, and hot dogs and drinks will be sold in the cafeteria. Bingo for the adults will also be held in the cafeteria. The public is invited to attend.

PRESENTING PAGEANT

Susanna Chapter 161 Order Eastern Star will present the 50 States Pageant at Hayes Chapel Church Sunday at 4 p.m. Rosa Weaver is sponsor, and Caldonia Morris is Worthy Matron.

Shirley's Back In Family Show, Product Of Silverman's Urging

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tonight, America can sample the fruit of Fred Silverman's sponsor-as-supplier idea, a notion he's been pushing since he took over the game at NBC last year.

In the course of his many speeches outlining the Silverman view of things, NBC's president has often invited major TV advertisers to get involved in the supplying end of the business, as was once the rule. He asked and asked, but so far, only Procter and Gamble (TV's biggest advertiser) has jumped in. The result is "Shirley," an hour of sweetness and light with a laugh track.

For its little project, P&G said it wanted Shirley Jones in a family show, and I imagine the rest sort of took care of itself. Sweet Shirley Jones plays sweet Shirley Miller, New York widow who follows her late husband wish for a simpler life by moving her family (two teenagers and two younger darlings) to Lake Tahoe, Nevada.

Not surprisingly, some problems arise when the happy group arrives West. Shirley's new house is kind of run down, and needs fumigating. So, Mom and the kids have to pitch a tent on the lakefront (this family can afford a five-bedroom, two-story Victorian house on expensive Lake Tahoe but can't afford a motel for three days).

Anyway, a crusty old guy (who, we learn, is really sweet on the inside, thereby qualifying himself for this show), claims they've camped on his lot and demands $50 a day rent. His better nature surfaces, though, and that problem is solved.

There are others. Shirley learns that a full-time teaching job she was promised is not available, so she has to settle for a part-time substitute gig. The moving van loaded with their furniture breaks down in Texas, and when it finally arrives, it's carrying the wrong furniture.

Everything is about to fly apart, when Shirley thinks of a sweet way to save the day.

"Shirley" is rather shallow going, and that is a disappointment. Silverman says he's got this nifty idea about advertisers supplying programs, and out comes a cross between "The Partridge Family" and "Eight is Enough."

But there is something to be said for a family show that doesn't give Mom a weekly sleepmate and relies not at all on the standard prime-time sleaze. Better a saccharine overdose with "Shirley" than a toilet joke marathon with "The Ropers."

In order to qualify for the award, an applicant must be a resident of the environs of the Greenville Branch of the English-Speaking Union and must plan to continue residing in the area. The area includes Pitt, Greene, Lenoir, Wayne, Craven and adjacent counties.

Scholarship applicants must submit a letter of application, a detailed curriculum vita, a recent photograph and three letters of character and academic reference to the E-SU Scholarship Committee.

The application and supporting documents, or inquiries about the scholarship and study programs, should be addressed to Elizabeth Webb, Department of English, East Carolina University. Deadline for submitting an application is Dec. 21, 1979.

Reorganizing Lee's Dept.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An internal reorganization of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development will shift day-to-day administration of the state's environmental program from Secretary Howard N. Lee to his subordinates.

Lee said Thursday the environmental enforcement division would be renamed the Office of Legal Affairs, working under Neil S. Grigg, assistant secretary for natural resources.

He said a new Office of Regulatory Relations will be created Nov. 1 to coordinate the environmental permit process, evaluate environmental programs and conduct economic studies of regulation programs and activities. The office will be under E. Walton Jones, a deputy secretary.

Lee said the reorganization would remove him from the day-to-day operation of the programs, which he said he had closely involved.

"Although I will be ultimately responsible, hopefully some of these decisions can be made prior to their coming to me," Lee said.

Several environmental management employees resigned last summer, charging that Lee was not concerned with environmental matters. He said Thursday that, "I don't see those problems."

"I'm just as proud as I can be of our program. I'm not ashamed of it one bit," he said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — South Africa, which has one-fifth of the world's known uranium, may have exploded its first atomic device. U.S. intelligence officials say.

If confirmed, that could leave the segregationist nation steps away from becoming only the seventh country on Earth known to be capable of producing atomic weapons.

American intelligence sources said Thursday night such an explosion most likely would have involved a test device rather than a finished weapon.

But even a test could aggravate tensions on the African continent where South Africa practices apartheid, separation of the races.

An American satellite picked up indications that a low-yield atmospheric nuclear explosion may have occurred Sept. 22 in the area of the Indian and South Atlantic oceans, intelligence officials said.

But the officials, who asked not to be named, said the satellite's data was not conclusive enough to rule out a natural phenomenon. The officials did not spell out what sort of natural occurrence — radiation or otherwise — might duplicate the signs of an explosion.

The United States is seeking confirmation of the explosion from other sources, including various detectors and European allies.

In Johannesburg, South African Foreign Minister Roelof Botha said: "I know absolutely nothing about this matter whatsoever."

South African officials have repeatedly said they possess the know-how to make an atomic bomb but have chosen not to do so.

The State Department released a statement Thursday night saying:

"The United States government has an indication suggesting the possibility that a low-yield nuclear explosion occurred on Sept. 22 in an area of the Indian Ocean and South Atlantic, including portions of the Antarctic continent and the southern part of Africa.

"No corroborating evidence has been received to date. We are continuing to assess whether such an event took place."

Meanwhile, Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House subcommittee on Africa, called the reports "extremely serious and deeply disturbing."

"Our subcommittee will be holding a hearing on this matter early next week in order to bring before the Congress and the country the full facts of what actually happened off the coast of South Africa," he said in a statement.

South Africa, resting on the southern tip of the African continent, has 20 percent of the world's known uranium, a key staple in production of nuclear weapons. It is the West's No. 3 producer of raw uranium, behind the United States and Canada. It is building a nuclear power plant near Cape Town that is to begin operating in 1983.

Last year, the United States and the Soviet Union independently picked up signs that a nuclear test structure may have been built in South Africa's Kalahari Desert, the intelligence sources said. Moscow contacted the United States about the information.

If South Africa is moving toward nuclear weaponry, efforts by the West and the Soviet Union to limit proliferation of nuclear weapons will be further complicated.

Enough Gas In Carolinas

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Motor Club says a survey of gasoline stations indicates supplies are ample in North Carolina and South Carolina this month, despite earlier predictions of shortages.

In a statement Thursday, the Charlotte-based affiliate of the American Automobile Association said a check of 188 stations in the two states reported supplies about the same as in September.

The club also reported a decrease in the average gasoline price in South Carolina by .3 cent a gallon and a moderate 1.3 cent-a-gallon increase in North Carolina. The decrease in South Carolina was the first this year, the club said.

Full-service premium fuel in North Carolina averages $103.5 a gallon, unleaded $102.4 and regular $98.1 cents, the club said.

In South Carolina, a gallon of premium is $103.8, unleaded $102.2 and regular $98.1 cents.

Nation-wide, full-service prices for October are $106.4 a gallon for premium, $105.2 for unleaded and $101.1 for regular, the club said.

Some dealers contacted said they were concerned about stretching October allotments through the end of the month and about possible lower consignments for November and December.
