Judge Is Chosen For Sec. Of Education

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is bringing the first woman ever appointed to the federal appeals bench into his Cabinet as the nation's first secretary of education.

The president was set to nominate Shirley M. Hufstedler, a liberal-to-moderate California Democrat, to oversee the new Department of Education, according to a senatorial aide. The new agency will have a $14 billion budget and about 17,000 employees.

An administration source, who asked not to be identified, confirmed that Mrs. Hufstedler, 54, had been offered the job and had accepted. A formal announcement was expected today.

Roy F. Greenaway, administrative assistant to Sen. Alan D. Cranston, D-Calif., said Monday night that White House officials have advised the senator Mrs. Hufstedler, a Democrat, had been picked. Greenaway said she met with the president Monday.

"I have devoted a great deal of my life to education and have a commitment to education," Mrs. Hufstedler was quoted as saying in today's editions of the Los Angeles Times.

"I have intense concern about the quality of education for all Americans, particularly those in primary and secondary schools," she told the newspaper after her meeting with Carter. "But I don't have any specific ideas right now about the Department of Education because I simply don't know enough about the entire program."

Mrs. Hufstedler lives in Pasadena, Calif., with her husband, Seth M. Hufstedler, a prominent California attorney. She has one son, Steven.

Observers of the federal judiciary consider her liberal to moderate in her judicial philosophy; she had been mentioned as a prime candidate to be the first woman on the U.S. Supreme Court.

In 1969, President Lyndon B. Johnson appointed her to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, making her only the second woman to be named to a circuit court post and the first to the appellate level.

Mrs. Hufstedler was born in Denver and graduated from the University of New Mexico in 1945 and the Stanford Law School in 1949, where she served on the

SHIRLEY HUFSTEDLER

Stanford Law Review. She began practicing law in 1950 and was appointed a Los Angeles County Superior Court judge in 1961.

In 1966, she was appointed to the California State Court of Appeals.

She serves as a trustee of the California Institute of Technology, Occidental College and the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies.

The legislation creating the Cabinet-level Education Department was signed into law by Carter on Oct. 17, setting in motion the bureaucratic machinery that will establish the department.

This will be the second Cabinet department established by Carter. His administration set up the Energy Department in 1977.

The department will consolidate 152 education programs from five departments, with the largest segment coming from the education division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW will become the Department of Health and Human Services when the new education agency begins operations.

She has not been active in partisan politics, but is a supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, calling allegations that the ERA would destroy the family "preposterous."

Confrontation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government, having shifted away from its conciliatory posture, is moving toward a confrontation with the Chicago school board over segregation and overcrowding in the city schools.

Drew Days III, the assistant attorney general who heads the Justice Department's civil rights division, said Monday he would study the case for up to 90 days before deciding whether to follow a recommendation to sue the school board.

Chicago schools are about 60 percent black and 20 percent Hispanic.

Since it has proven more difficult to end segregation in large urban areas that it did in the South, civil rights advocates have looked on the Chicago case as a potential precedent setter.

Strength In 'Indicators'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government index designed to forecast economic trends showed surprising strength in September, rising by the largest amount since April 1978, the Commerce Department reported today.

The Composite Index of Leading Indicators rose 0.8 percent in September, compared with a 0.1 percent rise in August and a 0.3 percent decline in July. The rise was 0.9 percent in April 1978.

The strong showing, however, reflects the economy before the Federal Reserve Board took sweeping action on Oct. 6 to boost interest rates and tighten the money supply to battle rising inflation.

But it also comes at a time when most economists are predicting a recession that could increase the unemployment rate to above 8 percent.

"The economy was a lot stronger in September than generally expected," said Michael Evans, a private economic consultant.

"But now that the Federal Reserve Board has taken action, many banks are not making any mortgage or consumer loans and this will slow up the economy substantially, particularly in sharply reduced retail sales and housing production," he said.

The Commerce Department attributed the surprising strength of last month's 10-point index to an significant decline in the layoff rate.

In addition, new orders for plant and equipment as well as consumer goods were up, as were stock prices, total liquid assets and building permits, the department said.

Four of the 10 indicators, however, declined in September. They were the average work week, sensitive prices, the money supply and vendor performance.

Vendor performance was the main cause of the decline, the Commerce Department said. This means that the number of companies reporting delivery delays declined, a signal that their suppliers are not extremely busy and are having no problem filling orders, even though they were increasing.

The overall index last month stood at 141.3, which means that it was 141.3 percent ahead of its 1967 base-year level.

In August, the index was 140.2 and in July it stood at 140.1.

The index fell 1.9 percent during this year's second quarter and rose 0.3 percent in the third quarter, which ended Sept. 30.

Winter Makes Preview Sweep In Plains States

By The Associated Press

Winter made a preview sweep through the southern Plains states today, dumping heavy snow and unleashing howling winds that triggered a tornado in Texas and sent the wind chill factor to 20 below zero in Denver.

Gale-force winds pounded the town of Graham, about 60 miles south of Wichita Falls, uprooting trees, downing power lines and damaging homes and businesses. A trailer was overturned, and seven members of one family were taken to a hospital in undetermined condition.

A small tornado struck earlier in Bangs, 110 miles to the southwest, causing minor damage and no injuries.

The storm, which began developing Monday and gained strength today, left up to 8 inches of snow in Nebraska, where the snow was blamed for at least one traffic death.

In Kansas, up to 7 inches of rain fell overnight in the south-central part of the state, forcing the closing of streets and highways in a two-county area. The weather bureau warned of a possible blizzard and heavy snow.

A blanket of snow was laid on Colorado east of the Continental Divide, with up to a half-foot forecast for later in the day. More snow was also predicted for the Texas Panhandle and Kansas.

"It's a dangerous storm," said Ellis Burton, meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Denver. "We definitely advise motorists to travel only as necessary."

"With the 25 degree temperature and the 30 knot wind, it makes a wind chill of 15 to 20 below," Burton said late Monday night.

The wind chill factor is the combined effect of cold temperatures and high winds that makes it seem much colder than it really is.

"The strong winds are what makes this storm dangerous because of the blowing and drifting snow and wind chill effects," he added.

Winds gusting to 64 miles per hour were reported at Pueblo Memorial Airport.

In Nebraska, downed power lines caused major power outages in Alliance and Scottsbluff, in the Panhandle, and workers were still trying to restore service in some areas early today. Road crews were sent out today to try to free cars and trucks stranded by drifting and blowing snow.

Much of western and central Nebraska braced for a blizzard, expected later in the day.

Carl Stewart Formally Bids For Lt. Gov.

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — State House Speaker Carl Stewart, D-Gastonia, made his candidacy for lieutenant governor official this morning.

Stewart told about 300 people who gathered as he stood on the steps of the Gaston County Courthouse that he will seek the Democratic nomination for the lieutenant governor's job in 1980.

Stewart told his supporters the campaign would be a difficult one, particularly considering the difference in funds available to himself and his "tough and tenacious opponent" whom he did not name.

Stewart said part of his opponent's campaign would be financed by the state Republican Party and predicted the opposition's warchest would "triple that of any other lieutenant governor in the history of the state."

While incumbent Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, also a Democrat, has not made an official announcement that he will seek re-election, he has already begun fundraising for a campaign.

Green has hired two paid staff members with connections to the GOP. Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Charlotte, Senate majority leader and a close Green ally, said the Green campaign has not solicited money or help from the organization of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., or the N.C.Congressional Club, Helms' political organization.

But Lawing added, "We'll take money anywhere we can get it. And people in the Congressional Club are more likely to help Jimmy than Carl."

Most of the political officeholders in Gaston County were present this morning as Stewart promised to address himself to the problems of inflation, jobs, energy, ufd the growth of the state during the next 20 years. Stewart also said he would see what can be done to improve the office of lieutenant governor.

Stewart, 43, in in his seventh term in the House and his second as speaker.

Stewart was expected expected to make a similar announcement at the Raleigh Civic Center at noon today. The Democratic primary takes place May 6.

REORGANIZATION

I ordered a $25 trailer hitch from J. C. Whitney& Company in Chicago, Ill. June 1. I recently was going through my bank statements and realized I'd never got the merchandise, so I wrote the company. They answered that they had "reorganized under Chapter XI in Federal Court" recently and could not give me a refund. I feel this is unfair and I want to warn anyone else doing business with this company. R. P.

Hotline contacted the company and learned that, as you said, the company had "because of unavoidable financial difficulties" filed for reorganization. A spokesman said that this court order, which makes it unlawful to make past due refund payments or to adjust accounts on past purchases, applies only to those claims for refunds and account adjustments arising before June 25, 1979.

Whitney is an automotive parts and accessories mail order firm. Its spokesman said it is continuing to operate as "debtor in possession."

Heavy Shooting In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftists holed up in two government buildings released 276 hostages they had held for five days after police and soldiers fired into a leftist street demonstration.

The Red Cross said at least 24 persons were killed, and dozens more were wounded Monday in the new government's first employment of force against leftists demanding an end to military dominance of El Salvador, Central America's smallest and most densely populated nation.

About 1,000 members of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc were still holding three cabinet members, eight other officials and a Chilean official of the Organization of American States in the Labor and Economy Ministry buildings, which they took over last Wednesday.

The army surrounded the two government buildings and several downtown churches the leftists were occupying, but there was no apparent attempt to dislodge those inside.

Rallying Behind Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP)— Presidential candidate Edward M. Kennedy today gained the endorsement of a 70,000-member federal employees union and the campaign services of a former senator who quit the administration to join in the challenge to President Carter.

And in Chicago, Mayor Jane Byrne formally announced what she already had disclosed: that she is supporting the senator from Massachusetts for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

Former Sen. Dick Clark of Iowa announced that he is resigning as U.S. coordinator for refugee programs to join Kennedy's presidential campaign committee. Clark quit the administration effective on Thursday, after less than a year in the State Department post.

The independent National Treasury Employees Union declared its support for Kennedy, and said it will be giving $5,000, the maximum allowed by law, to the campaign.

Grant For ECU Study Of Hypertension Drug

The East Carolina University School of Medicine has received a $57,000 grant from a private pharmaceutical company to develop a new drug that reduces high blood pressure.

Dr. John P. DaVanzo, professor of pharmacology, says it is the first time an academic institution has been involved in the direct development of a commercial product.

"To my knowledge, the project is unique because of the cooperation between a private pharmaceutical company and a university," said DaVanzo. "It's a new concept in academia, and it shows the trust and confidence the company has in East Carolina University."

The project is funded by a one-year, renewable grant from USV Pharmaceutical Corporation.

DaVanzo will head a team of four investigators who will conduct extensive studies on a drug that has proved effective in lowering high blood pressure in animals. How the drug works and the mechanisms involved are not clear.

Hypertension is a serious condition affecting millions of Americans. Medications that lower blood pressure are available, but DaVanzo noted that newer and better drugs are needed.

"We hope ECU can play a major role in filling this need," he said. "The team will actually be developing the whole drug, not just a portion of it."

The study is a collaborative project for the medical school's physiology and pharmacology departments. Also participating in the research are Drs. Samuel Iams, Alphonse Ingenito and John Yeager.

Reminds Basic Safety Rules For Halloween

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon today urged that parents see that their children observe basic safety rules on their trick-or-treat outings on Halloween.

The chief said youngsters should wear light colored clothing so that they may be more easily seen by drivers, and warned that children should not be in the street and be especially cautious while crossing streets.

Pointing out that with the return of Eastern Standard Time, darkness comes an hour earlier now, Cannon urged that trick-or-treaters make their rounds as early as possible...preferably before darkness falls.

Cannon also suggested that home owners turn on their outside lights in an effort to make it easier for little ghosts and goblins to see while making their rounds, and as a deterrent to any possible vandalism.

The chief also suggested that youngsters go to only homes where they know the residents in their search for treats, and not go into anyone's home, but rather wait outside.

He urged motorists to be especially watchful for youngsters that might dart into the street while making their trick-or-treat rounds.

READY FOR THE BIG NIGHT — This black cat appears to be anxiously awaiting the arrival of Halloween night. Black cats and jack-o-lanterns are sure to be seen — as well as other assorted ghosts, goblins and ghouls — on Halloween. (AP Laserphoto)

Four Ships Bring Food To Cambodia

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Four ships are reported unloading food and other relief supplies at Kompong Som, Cambodia's chief seaport, and a fifth vessel is on the way.

A spokesman for UNICEF said a ship chartered by it was unloading 300 tons a day at the south coast port 160 miles southwest of Phnom Penh; three Soviet ships were unloading food and other supplies, and a barge chartered by the British relief organization Oxfam left Singapore Monday for Kompong Som.

The spokesman said the UNICEF ship and the Oxfam barge each were loaded with 2,000 tons of supplies and the UNICEF cargo also included three trucks.

The Oxfam barge is the third relief shipment sent by the British organization to Cambodia.

UNICEF and the International Red Cross are also flying 15 tons of relief supplies daiily to Phnom Penh. But the Vietnamese-backed government there rejected an American plan to ship 1,000 tons a day overland by truck convoys from Thailand because part of those supplies would have gone to areas controlled by former Premier Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge forces.

Kompong Som was built in the late 1950s by the French to handle more than 80,000 tons of cargo a month. But years of silting, the destruction of warfare and lack of repairs has drastically reduced its capacity.

A group of Americans from the Church World Service who visited Cambodia recently said there was also a shortage of trained personnel and the Vietnamese had to bring in 20 men from the northern Vietnamese port of Haiphong to help.

"It is questionable whether the port can handle more than 15,000 to 20,000 tons per month," the Americans reported.

The Mekong River, which flows across Cambodia and southern Vietnam to the South China Sea, provides another water route to Phnom Penh. The Cambodian government reported last week that Soviet ships had delivered 200,000 tons of food that way. But an Oxfam representative in Singapore said officials in Phnom Penh informed his organization the Mekong River was not navigable because of "wrecks" in it.

Drilling Beneath the Sea

The Georges Bank region of the Atlantic Ocean, off the shores of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, is one of the richest fishing grounds on the East Coast. But geologists believe the area may also be rich in other valuable resources: gas and oil. And that means the fish may soon be sharing their ocean space with machines. The drilling rights to more than 660,000 acres of the Georges Bank are scheduled to go on sale today. Offshore oil rigs can drill thousands of feet below the ocean floor. Offshore wells are already in operation in the Baltimore Canyon area off the coasts of New Jersey and Delaware, and in the Gulf of Mexico off the coasts of Texas and Louisiana.

DO YOU KNOW — In what body of water did the world's worst offshore oil spill recently occur?

Carter Pushes Energy Program In Congress

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is back lobbying Congress for his energy plan, accusing the Senate Finance Committee of decimating his windfall profits tax and urging the House to join him in fighting for a stronger tax.

Carter also told a group of congressmen he will sign the recently passed standby gasoline rationing bill — even though he doesn't think it gives him enough flexibility.

The president reportedly said he was unhappy with the requirement that a gas shortage be at least 20 percent before rationing could be used, but would sign the bill as the best compromise he could get from Congress.

And in a move almost certain to alienate environmentalists, Carter announced his preference for the stronger of two versions of his proposed energy mobilization board now before the House.

With the House beginning debate on the legislation today, Carter reportedly expressed a clear preference for a bill by the House Commerce Committee over a rival version that originated in the House Interior Committee.

The board would oversee major energy projects and cut through government red tape to see that they're built.

Carter made the remarks at an unusual "working dinner" Monday night at the White House, at which Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and Treasury Secretary G. William Miller also spoke.

The dinner was attended by a bipartisan group of about 100 congressmen, most of them members of committees dealing with energy or tax legislation.

According to many of those who attended, the president made a forceful pitch for his proposed windfall profits tax and scored the Senate Finance Committee for adding weakening amendments.

He urged the House members to stand firm behind the strong version of the tax the House had passed last July. In fact, according to those present, Carter pressed for enactment of an even stronger tax.

Carter, according to those at the dinner, said the recent posting of soaring profits by major oil companies made a strong tax that much more essential.

Commonly called a windfall profits tax, the administration proposal actually would take away a portion of the additional gross revenue oil companies will realize as a result of oil price decontrol.

The president's White House remarks followed his claim before a Providence, R.I., audience earlier Monday that his move to decontrol U.S. crude oil prices could amount to a "trillion-dollar giveaway" to the oil industry if not coupled with a strong windfall tax.

Carter also emphasized the need to move ahead with a strong energy-conservation program, according to those present.

Lt. Gov. Green Flies To Tokyo

TOKYO (AP) — Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green arrived in Tokyo Tuesday as leader of the second North Carolina trade and investment mission to visit Japan.

The lieutenant governor will be joined by other businessmen from North Carolina to form a 35-member mission. They will stay until Nov. 25.

Governor Jim Hunt, accompanied by state Secretary of Commerce D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, flew into Tokyo last Tuesday to discuss ways of selling more North Carolina products to Japan and to invite capital investment in his state.

Dr. Woodworth Named Fellow

Dr. Alfred Woodworth of Greenville has been named a Fellow of the American Academy of Family Physicians.

The degree of Fellowship is attained in one of two ways: successful completion of 600 or more hours of accredited continuing medical study or achievement of diplomate status in the specialty of family practice as a result of passing a certifying examination administered by the American Board of Family Practice.

Dr. Woodworth is associated with the Family Practice Center here.

Getting Tough On Mail Orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is getting tough on businesses that send consumers unordered merchandise and then try to collect for it.

The Federal Trade Commission told mail-order companies Monday they could be liable for civil penalties of up to $10,000 for each law violation. The FTC said it will send warning letters to about 100 companies that have been the subject of consumer complaints. Then FTC staff members will investigate companies they suspect are violating the law and recommend action, the agency said. Attempts to collect for unordered merchandise have been a source of many complaints to the FTC, the Postal Service, Better Business Bureaus and other authorities.

Holding Soul Food Dinner

Thursday, November 1 is the deadline for the purchase of tickets to the soul food dinner, part of the ECU Black Arts Festival. The dinner will be served at 6 p.m. Tuesday, November 6 in the Ledonia Wright Afro-American Cultural Center on campus.

Chitterlings, collards, corn bread and other typical soul food will be on the menu. Tickets are priced at $3.50 and can be purchased from the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center.

Mich. Senate Okays 'Relief'

DETROIT (AP) — The state Senate has given its blessing to a $4.6 million appropriation to debt-plagued Wayne County as the county lays off nearly 5,000 workers.

The Senate on Monday approved the appropriation for the Walter Reuther long-term health care facility, one of several services county officials say is contributing to Wayne's financial woes. The bill now goes back to the House for consideration of minor Senate amendments.

The county has not met payrolls in two weeks and faces a budget deficit of $19.5 million.

Layoff notices to the county's 5,059 employees were hand-delivered Monday. Richard Manning, chairman of the Board of Commissioners, said the county this week will begin determining when and how many of the workers would be called back. The layoffs go into effect Nov. 12.

A special committee will meet Wedesday to draw up a plan to operate only essential services. Manning said the "bottom line" of essential services would demand a workforce of 2,400, "although this may change depending on the auditors' recommendation and the amount of money."

Wayne County was unable to distribute paychecks to 3,350 workers Oct. 19. Those employees were paid Friday after the state released $2.9 million in Medicaid payments owed to the county.

Manning said the youth home, the medical examiner's office and the jail could have all employees recalled. Workers for the prosecutor, treasurer clerk and other elective posts also were expected to be recalled according to plans laid out earlier.

The money for the Reuther home is separate from a proposed state assistance plan that has so far been blocked by Gov. William Milliken, who wants the county to reorganize its government with fewer administrators.

He has vetoed aid for the county this year and said Monday the vetoes would continue until the reorganization is under way.

Seeking Bill To Push Adoptions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House conferees are working out differences in legislation designed to encourage the adoption of about 10,000 hard-to-place children with mental or physical handicaps or emotional disturbances.

The bill approved by the Senate Monday would provide cash aid and full Medicaid assistance to adopted children with special needs. The House earlier had passed a similar bill and the two chambers now will have to iron out differences.

Rickover Raps Cheaper Subs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Hyman G. Rickover says it "is a complete dereliction of duty" to propose that the Navy try to save money by building cheaper submarines.

Rickover, called the father of the nuclear submarine, told a House committee Monday that the Carter administration wants "cheaper, less capable" submarines. He said the cheaper subs couldn't keep up with most Soviet attack submarines, couldn't attack high-speed surface shps and couldn't escort high-speed U.S. surface ships.

"How about this soup tureen?"

"Not for Margo. She doesn't like brown."

"How about this delightful papier mache clown? So festive. For a party."

"Margo wouldn't want a clown. It would remind her of Hubert."

"Her first husband? Well... look at this splendid porcelain turkey. Wouldn't that be good? And so near to Thanksgiving and all."

"No. The turkey would remind Margo of Ollie."

"Her second?"

"Yes. Now, this shiny brass crab would look good in her beach cottage. But she always thought of Marvin as an old crab. I'm afraid..."

"Marvin? He was her third, wasn't he?"

"No. Her fourth. Roscoe was her third. He died of abstemiousness."

"I never heard of that."

"It's not general. Look at these luscious silk flowers. How about we get Ariane or Natalie to make one of their great arrangements. And give it to Margo. To congratulate her on her fiftieth."

"Her fiftieth? Claude? Good heavens! That's not possible."

"Birthday, honey. Birthday. Claude's just her fifth."

"Oh! What a relief! The bouquet sounds a lovely idea."

More Women In Dental Field Says Official

By WALTER PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Until recent years there hasn't been a preponderance of women in the field of dentistry or, for that matter, in any health profession outside nursing.

But all that is changing because of shifting economic circumstances, a larger role for women in the working world, and because of women like Patricia Cormier of the University of Pennsylvania's School of Dental Medicine.

"When I came here four years ago, we had something like four women in a class of about 107, or so," said Mrs. Cormier, who recently took over as associate dean of the dental school.

This year, she said, 25 percent of the graduating class was composed of women.

"The rise has been clearly monumental," she said.

In announcing her appointment in August, Dean Walter B. Cohen said he believed Mrs. Cormier was the first woman non-dentist to hold so high an administrative position.

Mrs. Cormier, who joined the staff in 1973, has a bachelor's degree in dental hygiene and a doctoral degree in developmental psychology from the University of Virginia. She was named assistant professor of periodontology (which deals with supporting structures around the teeth, such as gums) and organized a special program to train people with low IQs to be dental aides.

The Bridgeport, Conn., native who lives with her husband and three children in suburban Haverford, says women are becoming more aware of opportunities available to them in medicine.

At the same time, the humanities, a traditional academic stronghold for women, are not as lucrative and a teaching degree is not a sure bet on the job market, she said.

"For the first time they (women) are realizing that they can combine this kind of professional life with marriage and a family," Mrs. Cormier said.

According to the American Dental Association, women enrollments in dental schools went from less than 1 percent in 1968 to 13.5 percent in 1976, and the trend continues.

"An increasing number of dental hygienists are becoming dentists," Mrs. Cormier said, noting that in Europe women have always been prominent in the field.

"For one thing, there's a different kind of system (in Europe,)" she said. "There is a two-tier level of dentistry."

Under this system, most of the routine tasks such as cleaning, fillings and teeth-pullings are performed by women, she said, while men tend to dominate oral surgery.

Mrs. Cormier believes that many women are, as she was, attracted to dentistry because it provides an opportunity to help people.

"I believe that it's one of the few ravages of humankind that is controllable. It's a disease phenomenon about which you can do something," she said. "With other diseases, the experience of failure is very high."

Loses Weight: Finds Herself

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Seven years ago I wrote you a letter, signed BORN AGAIN. You printed it. I just want you to know that I have stayed within 10 pounds of my ideal weight, which is saying a lot when you consider how much I had to lose.

Perhaps if you ran my letter again it would help others the way it helped me. I enclose a copy in case you can't find the original.

YOUR FRIEND FOR LIFE

DEAR FRIEND: Yours was one of the most rewarding letters I have ever received, and I rerun it with pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: I send this letter out of gratitude for recommending Overeaters Anonymous. It saved my life.

Two years ago I weighed 326 pounds. If high blood pressure or heart trouble didn't kill me, I'd have done it myself.

I was a heroin addict and a 23-year-old divorced mother of three on welfare. I hated myself enough to prostitute my body to get money for dope. I suffered humiliation after humilation. (A 300-pound prostitute gets all the sadists and perverts no other hooker will take.) I had no self-respect, no hope, no God—no nothing.

I wrote to you, never expecting an answer. Your letter was the first word of encouragement I had had in years. I took your advice and went to an OA meeting 18 months ago. I believed none of it. "These people are crazy," I thought, "I'm a fat, ugly junkie, and they're telling me I can get thin and regain my self-respect if I want to!"

"No way," I told them. Nobody threw me out. A beautiful, middle-aged man put his arm around my shoulder and said, "Come back and listen. Try us for 30 days. What can you lose?"

I didn't believe him, but I went back and back and back.

Today I've lost 121 pounds and I'm still losing. I'm drug-free, and I'm learning to like myself. I have a good job, a belief in a power greater than myself, and the love and respect of my children and people who believed in me when I didn't believe in myself.

There is no scale in OA. They don't shame you if you backslide. They are a group of loving, caring, supportive people who are there to help you because they have been helped themselves.

After sinking so low, OA gave me a chance to be what I've always wanted to be—a lady.

How can I thank you for sending me there?

BORN AGAIN

DEAR BORN AGAIN: Don't thank me. I merely threw you a lifeline. You caught it.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is almost perfect in every way, but he has one habit that drives me up the wall.

He uses too much cologne! It is embarrassing when we go to public places because it is noticed immediately.

How can I let him know how offensive this is without hurting his feelings?

GASSED OUT

DEAR GASSED: Tell him! And if he doesn't do something about it, keep telling him. Some people are so sensitive to fragrances that they become physically ill. Their right to breathe without discomfort is more important than your husband's feelings.

Her Hobby Is Making Figures Out Of Fruit

By HELEN C. MYERS
Albany, Ore.
Democrat-Herald

LEBANON, Ore. (AP) — Gladys Powell does more with apples than eat them.

She makes miniature models of figures from real life or out of the past with materials such as fruit, petrified wood and rocks.

Her most recent creations depict people from the Bible. She has designed and made miniatures featuring Mary and Joseph and Moses.

To make the Biblical figures, "I used fresh apples, peeled them, carved each feature, then dried them," she explained.

The miniature of Moses has a supporting rock from Arizona and the scroll he holds is of petrified wood found nearby.

Each of the miniature bodies she designs is made of wire, wrapped in nylon or art foam, then dressed in period costumes.

Mrs. Powell has worked at this hobby for 15 years and has made more than 100 figures, which decorate her home. Among the secular figures she has created are Abraham Lincoln and Oregon's late Sen. Wayne Morse.

Mrs. Powell has received a blue ribbon at the Oregon State Fair for her figurines.

Couple Honored On Anniversary

GRIMESLAND — Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Elks were honored on their silver wedding anniversary last week at a reception held in the fellowship hall of Proctor Memorial Christian Church.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Roger Cates, Carl Elks, their children, Mrs. Lyda Cherry, Miss Edna Cherry and Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Alligood and family.

The social hall was decorated with candles, ivy and ferns. A pink and white flower arrangement in a silver bowl flanked by candles centered the refreshment table, which was covered with a white lace trimmed cloth.

Gifts were displayed on a gift table. Approximately 65 guests attended the event.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I never approach Halloween that I don't remember my first brush with discrimination. I've never told you this before, but I was the first "no-talent" mother to integrate a neighborhood of mothers who were art school graduates. When I looked at the house the realtor tried to warn me. He said, "See that mailbox next door to you? The one with the flowers and butterflies hand painted? Mrs. Walters did that free hand."

A bit farther down the street he pointed to another house and said, "Isn't that a clever play area with the Peter Pan motif? Mrs. Tierney did that. She's very handy with tools. In fact, all the women in this neighborhood can make anything out of nothing."

I was undaunted. You can't keep a person out of a neighborhood just because they don't have imagination. When they knew me, they'd learn to love me and to accept me for what I am. I was wrong.

Their cakes at the bake sale made mine look like sliced bread. Their garbage cans were hand painted with cartoons and cute sayings. Their hedges were clipped and shaped to look like farm animals. Their hand smocked yokes for their daughters' dresses were everywhere and macrame hung from every porch.

They turned old discards into museum pieces, decoupaged until they fainted and looked the other way the Christmas I bent a coat hanger, twisted nose tissue over it and called it a wreath.

But it was Halloween that did me in . . . that single day when your children turn to you for imagination and creativity . . . the one day of the year when you must transcend phantasy.

There was something about the hand-carved pumpkin in the window across the street I couldn't put my fingers on. Then I realized it had capped teeth.

The porch on the other side of us had a replica of Ray Bolger right out of the Wizard of Oz. When the doorbell rang I was greeted by a parade of monsters, pirates, queens, animals, ballerinas and space ships right out of the wax museum. My daughter came home in tears when everyone wanted to know what she was doing running around the street with a grocery bag on her head.

I learned a lesson that night. You may exist in a clever neighborhood, but you can't be happy there. They'd have to bus me in to get me back.

(Author's Note: I wish to apologize to the Planned Parenthood Associations throughout the country. They did not ask for an apology but they deserve it. In my ignorance of a reality in today's world, I made reference in my Sept. 27 column to "registered terrorists for Planned Parenthood," never dreaming terrorism had been directed toward that agency. It has and I'm sorry.

Switching Supplier Not Easy

It is official now that Greenville Utilities is negotiating with Carolina Power & Light concerning the purchase of electricity.

GUC currently purchases power from Virginia Electric & Power Co. The municipally owned utilities could realize a considerably better rate if it can switch to CP&L, however.

The switch could come with GUC going directly to CP&L or it could be brought about through the N. C. Municipal Power Agency No. 2. The power agency, composed of municipalities, is considering joint ownership of generating facilities with CP&L.

Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne said . . . "it is the commission's continuing goal to provide an adequate supply of electric power at the lowest cost possible and we have every intention of doing just that."

Switching power suppliers is not an easy move. It will require some investment on the part of GUC, which should be offset by the lower rates. It would also be 1981 before a switch could be made.

Greenville Utilities, however, seems to be on the right course. Its administrators should do whatever possible to bring about an abatement in the ever rising cost of electricity.

Atomic Club Needs No New Members

If American intelligence is correct and South Africa has tested an atomic bomb, it is not a happy time for the world.

The last thing the world needs is another member of the atomic club. And yet it is a sure thing that smaller nations will gradually learn the secrets of building the weapon.

The use of atomic bombs in any situation now is clearly unthinkable, and somehow the world powers will have to convince the small nations of this.

Career Education Effort

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The foundation is being built for a renewal effort by the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction to construct a total career education program in the state's public schools.

Such an innovative approach to the future world of work has long been a pet project of Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction.

Phillips has been often frustrated by never fully dissuaded in his efforts. A colleague once commented that the subject means so much for Phillips that whenever he opened the refrigerator and the light blinked on, he would deliver a speech on career education.

A public school program would involved, essentially, opportunities for exposure to various professions and career opportunities in the early grades with developing exploration of the details growing toward "hand-on" experimentation designed to help students make intelligent job choices for the future, discover the benefits and attractions as well as the potential pitfalls, and begin to prepare to move in a chosen direction upon graduation from high school.

Opposition

But the mere mention of career education has for a number of years been waving a red flag before the noses of several leaders on the State Board of Education who could be counted on to embark upon lengthy discourses on Plato, Shakespeare, the relevance of history, or the importance of music and art to the factory employee.

The makeup of the State Board has changed in the past couple of years, and Phillips and his colleagues have quietly paved the way for career education to become a reality in the state's schools.

A central argument for the apprach has been that entirely too much emphasis in the public schools goes toward college preparation when, actually, a sizable proportion of students enter the labor force (or technical training) upon graduation.

The figures show about 35 percent of the students go on to higher education on the college campuses. Another 21 percent go to community colleges or technical institutes, where a majority of those take specialized courses for a short time then get a job.

More than 27 percent go straight to work (and another 5.7 percent enter the military), and none of the figures above reflect the thousands of dropouts who leave school for jobs.

Several changing conditions are giving a strong push to the renewed effort: state efforts to recruit high-technology industry, increased demand for technical skills compared to general college degrees and a tilt in pay scales for skilled workers, the pending split of community colleges from the State Board of Education, and the school dropout among them.

BILL NOBLITT

Action

Plans for moving strongly in the direction of career education are being pushed on several fronts, including legislative. Clues to the fact that efforts are coming together strongly, now are abundant in the annual report of the State Advisory Council on Education delivered to the State Board of Education this month.

That document describes the State Board of Education as also the State Board of Vocational Education, worries what will happen to adult education when the community college split occurs, criticizes public school guidance efforts, details leadership failure to recognize the increasing need for expanded vocational and technical programs, and pushes the notion that "vocational education is a state function and that as a vital state function it is to be fully financed and operated as an integral part of our educational system."

The report, titled "A Time to Develop", was prepared by E. Michael Latta, executive director, and Joseph W. Perry-Hill, Jr., consultant, for the State advisory Council on Education.

INSIDE REPORT

Will Soviet Kill SALT?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While President Carter warns Senate fencesitters that they dare not vote against SALT II for fear of Soviet reactions, the Kremlin is risking the treaty's death in order to secure Soviet military dominance over all of Europe.

The secret dread of Carter's SALT-sellers is that Soviet actions may kill Senate ratification of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II). Far from turning down the decibel level of its harsh attack against modernized nuclear weapons for NATO, the Kremlin shows every intention of increasing the volume.

Turning up the juice on its latest propaganda barrage — so similar to the successful Soviet attack against the neutron warhead a year ago — would incite predictable reactions in the U.S. Senate and quite likely tip the balance against the treaty. That might be characteristic Russian clumsiness, but the suspicion here is that the Kremlin consciously puts European supremacy ahead of the SALT process.

Carter is getting into this predicament: While his agents fan out across the Senate to argue with the rhetoric of near-desperation that fence-sitters must support SALT II, he is wholly unable to control Moscow's bullying assault against modernizing NATO's nuclear weapons.

The president's problem is one of dates. NATO is due to consider, and surely approve, nuclear weapons modernization at a Brussels meeting on Dec. 13 to give the Western alliance equality with Warsaw Pact nuclear weapons. According to the optimistic SALT timetable of Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, the Senate then will be nearing a final vote on the treaty.

The escalating Soviet attack on nuclear modernization could not come at a worse time from SALT's standpoint. Led by President Leonid Brezhnev himself, the Soviet campaign reached a new peak Oct. 25 when Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov accused the U.S. — not NATO — of "whipping up an atmosphere of fear, putting the arms race into a higher gear and openly conducting military preparations."

Such intemperate language is really directed not at the U.S. but at NATO's vulnerable European members. Yet, its unavoidable side effect is to incite anti-Soviet anger in the U.S. Senate, tipping into opposition senators sitting on the SALT fence.

Against the Soviet campaign, Carter's SALT-sellers are hard put to find an offsetting political argument, although they are trying desperately hard to win new recruits to the treaty.

On the evening of Oct. 22, Sen. Edward Zorinsky, a maverick Democrat from Nebraska who is the most junior member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was telephoned at home by Majority Leader Byrd. Ostensibly, Byrd was asking when the committee might finish up with SALT; actually he called to gently pressure Zorinsky to get off the fence on the right side.

For Zorinsky, that was just more of the same. In three successive days, he was visited by elder statesman Averell Harriman; telephoned by Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser; and importuned in yet another telephone call by

BREAKING THE VICIOUS CIRCLE

In a world in which hatred and violence escalate ever upward into mindless terrorism, someone has to be willing to make the sacrifice which will break the vicious circle. Just as Telemachus the Monk rushed between two gladiators in the Roman amphitheater and called upon them in the name of Christ to cease their strife, so the Christian must put himself boldly into situations of hate and contention and summon men to desist from evil practices which lead to ruin.

Telemachus suffered violent death, but gladiatorial contests ceased as a result of his courageous rebuke. He counted his life as nothing that he might break the vicious circle which enmity and violence had created.

Our heavenly Father broke this vicious circle of evil when He gave His only begotten son that whosoever believed in him would not perish but have everlasting life.

If we are true sons of the Father, we should follow His example.

Return To Real World

In terms of our national defense, the Senate, the White House and most of the top brass are keeping their eyes glued on the pending treaty for strategic arms limitation. They are looking the wrong way. They ought to look at the state of the United States Navy instead.

The SALT II treaty is a bore. It is almost irrelevant to the real world. Treaty or no treaty, the Soviet Union possesses enough missiles to blow us to smithereens; we possess enough missiles to blow the Soviets to smithereens. Standoff. Barring the ascension of utter madmen to power in the Kremlin, there won't be any atomic war. The ultimate question has nothing to do with numbers of missiles and bombers; the ultimate question lies in our will to use them.

We ought to shake away from the nuclear nightmare. Back in the real world, real wars are being fought with real weapons. The overwhelming probability is that our next commitment to arms will not involve intercontinental ballistic robots; it will involve soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. We ought to be concentrating upon their skills, their morale, their motivation. It is a witless obsession that rivets senators' attention to numbers of missile launchers. They are as myopic as medieval theologians counting angels on a pin. They ought to count ships in our Navy instead.

Look at our Navy. As recently as 1964 we had 917 ships on active duty and 85 ships in reserve. As of Sept. 30, we had 455 active, 59 in reserve. In 15 years we have cut our Navy in half. Year after year such good men as John Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, have cried out against this sad disintegration. A Congress bent on butter has let the guns go by the boards.

Meanwhile the Soviet Union has been steadily expanding and modernizing its blue-water fleet. A couple of weeks ago Britain's foremost naval authority, Fleet Lord Hill-Norton, warned that the time is close at hand when the Soviets could dangerously threaten the sea lanes on which the West depends. Other top strategists have expressed the same alarm.

In a recent report, the Senate Armed Services Committee reiterated its deep concern. Unless ship programs are promptly and significantly expanded, "the United States may well lose naval superiority after the mid-1980s." In the 1960s, Congress funded 336 new ships; in the 1970s, Congress funded 155 new ships. But current projections for the coming decade envision 134 new ships only.

"Current naval forces are the minimum required to meet military wartime needs," the committee said.

Slow Progress

(Greensboro Daily News)

A T-shirt currently popular with many women is emblazoned with this slogan: "I haven't come a long way, and I'm not a baby." In other words, the progress of the women's movement — to the bearers of these tidings, at least — is more imagined than real.

Nevertheless, there is no denying that women have taken steps toward gaining rights and respect in the last century. They have not always been giant steps, but they have been steps in the right direction. If this progress is too slow to produce rejoicing, it is cause for hope.

Grete Waitz comes to mind as the latest example of a woman who has, on behalf of her sex, taken another small but significant step (or steps, as will be made plain shortly) for women's rights.

In the years to come, her name may be eclipsed by a sequence of numbers — 2:27:33 — which translates "two hours, 17 minutes and 33 seconds", the time it took Ms. Waitz to run the New York Marathon last Sunday.

That's progress. Not in the world of foot-races exactly: Ms. Waitz has a ways to huff and puff before she can eclipse the likes of Bill Rodgers, this year's New York Marathon winner again with a time of 2:11:42. But in the realm of women's running, it's something else again. With her running time, Ms. Waitz improved the record for women by one hour over what it was 15 years ago.

Indeed, her time beat those of all the men in the 1970 New York Marathon and those of half the men who have won in Olympic marathons.

But speaking of the Olympics, Ms. Waitz and other female runners will continue to compete with Olympic stars only on paper: The longest Olympic race for women covers one metric mile. Grete Waitz's achievement handily underscores the silliness of that prohibition, one which, we might add, will still be enforced at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

No matter how far they've come, and no matter how fast they run, it is sadly true that women still have a long way to go.

Equal Rights Fight

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small town businessman Paul J. Wengler and John Reid, a self-described "country lawyer," would seem to be unlikely soldiers in the crusade for sexual equality.

But the Supreme Court soon will use an appeal filed by Reid on behalf of Wengler to judge the validity of still another law challenged for treating men and women differently.

The justices said Monday they will decide whether states may automatically pay workers' compensation death benefits to widows while requiring most widowers to prove they were dependent on their wife's income.

Wengler, through Reid, argues that such a law represents unconstitutional sex discrimination.

Wengler, owner of a Fredericktown, Mo., liquor store, went to Reid for help after he was ruled ineligible to receive state benefits based on the income of his wife Ruth, who was killed in a work-related accident.

His wife's employer and its insurer adhered to the Missouri compensation law in deciding that Wengler was not eligible because he had not proved dependency or physical or mental incapacity.

The Missouri Supreme Court ruled that the law's different treatment of surviving husbands and surviving wives is valid. "In our opinion, the substantive difference in the economic standing of working men and women justifies the advantage that (the law) administratively gives to a widow," the state court said.

The nation's highest court twice within the last two years has struck down similar advantages for women built into the Social Security system.

Last March 5, the justices voted 6 to 3 in striking down state laws that provide alimony payments only for women.

"We just don't think the (Missouri) law is fair," Reid said after learning he will have a chance to argue before the Supreme Court for the first time early next year. "Paul and I are no crusaders but I felt the law was out of step with recent court rulings."

It was only after Wengler's compensation claim was rejected that Reid learned similar laws in New York, New Jersey and California have been struck down by courts in those states.

Reid said if the Missouri law is toppled, Wengler could collect up to $40,000.

Feminist lawyers already have contacted Reid to offer their support and tell him they plan to file briefs supporting his arguments.

The court's eventual decision is expected to be announced sometime before the end of its current term in late June.

In other matters Monday, the court:

—Agreed to decide whether new life forms may be patented. The case gives the justices their first opportunity to probe the rapidly growing and controversial field of "genetic engineering."

—Agreed to decide in an Ohio case whether the military time of returning veterans must be honored by firms offering laid-off workers supplemental unemployment benefits based on seniority.

Nickled, Dimed Into Poverty

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices climbed 1.1 percent again last month, which means that despite wage increases the buying power of workers dropped seven-tenths of 1 percent, or to a one-year total loss of 4.4 percent.

That really isn't telling the worker much at all except the specific figure; the news in general already was well known, the information having been communicated by the wafer thinness of the wallet.

But a mystery lingers. Workers know the big wads of bills are going for increases in the prices of gasoline (3.5 percent last month), heating oil (5.6) and shelter. But there's more to it than that.

Could it be that the worker is being nickled, dimed and quartered to poverty? Is he or she the victim of slot machine inflation?

The terms are apt. In the local self-service laundromat, for example, the owner is forced to raise his 50-cent charge for washing. What is the minimum hike technology permits him? Ten percent.

That is, it wouldn't pay him to put in coin slots that accepted pennies, even if they were available. In fact, he reasons, why raise my price a nickel, just to have to raise it again in a few months?

And so he raises his price by 25 cents, which amounts to a 50 percent increase. He rationalizes it by saying that a mere quarter isn't, after all, going to break anyone. Besides, inflation will catch up anyway.

He isn't the only one reasoning in that manner. Operators of cigarette machines, milk dispensers, newspaper racks and other coin-operated devices theorize similarly. Pennies are out; they are nuisance coins.

Something of the same prevails even when machines aren't involved. Magazines jump a quarter, not a dime. Candy bars, haircuts, shoeshines, movies, books, ties, cosmetics rise proportionately.

The percentages seldom are limited to the range of general inflation —about 13 percent a year as measured by the consumer price index and 8.5 percent when measured by the gross national product deflator.

Instead, the increases often exceed 20 percent, and even approach 100 percent. Still, because they usually involve mere "change," or because items are purchased infreqently, the increases are tolerated.

The situation is one in which people striving to keep big expenditures within their budgets are finding an army of little ones tripping and tangling them as if they were Gulliver in Lilliput.

Inevitably, it will force some families to view an old British adage in reverse.

As the saying goes, some people are penny wise and pound foolish, losing sight of big savings while eyeing the little ones, and so to their dismay find themselves with depleted pocketbooks.

Today it could be that concern with the big bills, the pounds, causes people to overlook the pennies, and thus end up with pocketbooks just as empty.

Dear Charlie:

From my last letter you might have gotten the impression that nothing went well at Deauville. Quite the contrary—my French teammates and I succeeded in winning both team events.

In the finals of the exhibition teams, we defeated a young Dutch squad trained by one of my favorite partners, Benito Garozzo. This hand contributed significantly to our victory. If the auction surprises you, it can be attributed to the fact that I judged that we needed to pick up some points so I chose an aggressive course. When my partner showed a good two no trump opening with excellent heart support, I really should have quietly bid four hearts. But I elected to show my diamond values, and I really can't blame my partner, Paul Chemla, for going to slam.

West led the ten of clubs, and I was not enchanted with my prospects. Not only was I faced with two potential trump losers, I also had to find parking spots for my third spade and fourth diamond. The simplest approach was to play the hand as a dummy reversal, hoping to find hearts 3-2 with the king onside, and clubs 4-3, or one of the defenders with the doubleton king of clubs. This was not a percentage slam, but . . .

I won the ace of clubs and ruffed a club. When that fetched the king, prospects improved considerably. I led a heart to the queen, which held. Now I cashed the ace of hearts, and when both defenders followed, I was home.

I left the king of hearts outstanding and ruffed a club. The king of spades was an entry to ruff dummy's remaining low club, and after that, there was nothing but winners. I simply cashed the king and queen of diamonds and continued to run my side suit tricks. West could ruff whenever he desired, but his king of trumps was the only trick for the defenders.

As ever,
Omar

CBS Entertainment Chairman Predicted A Catch-Up Necessity

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

"When the season comes to an end this year, I think you're going to see ABC No. 1, CBS No. 2, and NBC's going to be No. 3." — Robert Daly, President, CBS Entertainment, Hollywood.

Gee, that kind of takes the fun out of the TV season. Five weeks in, and CBS is conceding the year to ABC. Rockne wouldn't like this.

On the other hand, Daly is probably right. He was right last summer when he told his bosses at CBS that their network would finish third in the early going, which it did. The network that figured to give ABC a strong run this year didn't finish second in the weekly ratings until the fifth week of the season (Oct. 15-21), and is still last in the season averages.

Daly says he knew things would turn out this way, as soon as he saw that NBC was "frontloading," stacking a lot of its best movies and special series episodes at the beginning of the season to attract early ratings. NBC's plan worked, putting NBC in second place behind ABC and hurting CBS.

Daly's analysis of this new season, where it's been and why CBS is having to play catchup:

"We put our schedule together back in April based on how things were at that point. A lot of things happen over the summer, and you try to take them into account. You work to improve your pilots and you review your schedule to see if you want to make any changes before the season starts. These things are in your control.

"But you also have two other very competitive networks, over which you have no control. And right before the season starts, they start making shifts. Take the case of NBC this year. Probably because of the very poor performance they had over the summer, they elected to take some of their big movies (such as 'Coming Home' and 'Semi-Tough') and put them in the first week of the season.

"And one of the things we didn't know, although (NBC President) Fred Silverman has now come out and said it, was that they hyped up their (regular) shows in order to get sampling. He's now come out and said he's done it.

"Well, there's no way of predicting that. You evaluate your competition, say, a show like (NBC's) 'Kate Columbo.' All of a sudden the show comes on, and it's about a hooker by day, a housewife by night (the storyline of this season's first 'Kate Columbo' episode). I mean, that's very promotable. It's really exploitable.

"I mean, in the sense of being commercial, NBC did a very good job in hyping their series, on a pure ratings standpoint. They put in a tremendous amount of hype at the beginning of the season. ... When we saw that happen, we knew we were going to finish third, and we told everybody that, our management at CBS and then our securities analysts."

Minority Job Assures Grant

CLINTWOOD, Va. (AP) — After a three-year fight for a federal grant, the town of Clintwood hopes it has finally qualified — by hiring a black woman from a neighboring county.

To be eligible for a $256,000 grant being sought from the Environmental Protection Agency for a sewer project, Clintwood needed at least one black employee on its payroll of six. But local officials said they couldn't find one because nearly all the 1,500 residents of this southwest Virginia community were white.

Pat Talford learned from her sister-in-law that the town was looking for a qualified black employee. Now, she is driving nearly an hour to work each morning from her home at Castlewood.

She said in a recent interview that her new duties include typing, filing "and all kinds of stuff."

"Oh, I love it. When I was in Lebanon, I did outside work," said the former recreation worker. "Now I'm doing inside work, the kind I went to school for."

Mrs. Talford has been married for four months to Thomas Talford, one of hundreds of miners employed by Clinchfield Coal Co. laid off because of the weak market for metallurgical coal. Town Councilman Ayers Shortt, a former mayor, said Mrs. Talford is doing a good job.

Under EPA's rating system for grants, Clintwood had 490 points. It needed 500. The hiring of Mrs. Talford gave it 518, making the town eligible for the grant.

Funding for the sewer project still has not been approved.

Pupils Told Of Health Center

Members of the seventh grade health class of Wellcome Middle School heard Eunice Clemons, coordinator of the Pitt County Teen Health Information Center, tell about the center's services.

Ms. Clemons was assisted by Mrs. Delores Long, nurse's assistant, and Sylvia Kruger, nurse practitioner. The students viewed the information booth, the films, the blood pressure center, and the pamphlets. According to Mickey Wynne, a group leader, the T. H. I. C. program is concerned with not only physical health, but mental and social health as well. He said referral to services needed is part of the program.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance ("Please, Ed, we need you").

The message is the same for every fence-sitting senator: Vote for SALT to prevent Senate Republican leader Howard Baker from getting an advantage over Carter in his presidential campaign; vote for SALT so that our NATO allies will not feel the U.S. has deserted the road of detente; vote for SALT or "the Russians won't understand us."

Such appeals may well have their persuasive side. But Byrd confides to intimates he is not close to the 67 Senate votes needed for treaty approval, and he may benefit more from guns than soft soap. Signals are coming from the White House of imminent concessions to Sen. Sam Nunn and others who demand higher defense spending in return for supporting SALT.

The White House scare tactic of warning senators that defeat of SALT could spell the doom of NATO has backfired and is winding down under orders from the top. The president has been told that if SALT is not ratified, the warning could turn into a self-fulfilling prophecy — leaving this country not only without an arms treaty but without a NATO alliance.

But substituting defense spending for scare talk will not help if the administration is correct in this private prediction: The Kremlin feels that forcing NATO to scrap nuclear weapons modernization is more important to Soviet ends than inducing the Senate to approve SALT. Seemingly, Moscow puts much more faith in weapons than in treaties.

An error in transmission of a recent column attributed President Carter's lack of support in Philadelphia to three years of "inflation"; it should have read "inattention."

Kilpatrick Col. ...

"In addition, the present size is barely enough to meet present peacetime commitments; deployments are overly long, and ship turnaround times are too short. Operational flexibility is at a minimum since any new requirement, such as the recent Indian Ocean deployment, cannot be accomplished without drawdown of carriers and ships from other peacetime commitments."

Sen. Stennis is not happy about the Navy's budget for the 1980 fiscal year, but it's "definitely a step in the right direction." In its final form, the procurement bill is expected to include a new Nimitz-class nuclear carrier, two nuclear attack submarines, one Trident submarine, six guided-missile frigates and three vessels for anti-submarine surveillance. Rebuilding of the destroyer fleet continues; over a period of two or three years, we will have added 35 new destroyers, including the four ordered by Iran and later canceled.

In the chairman's view, rebuilding the Navy comes first. Strategic weapons are not a dominant concern. But unless Mr. Stennis's old-fashioned views prevail, we will yet squander $30 billion on an insane scheme of "racetrack" switching of missiles out West. Does this make sense? Tell it to the Navy, or tell it to the Marines.

INDUSTRY-HUNTING

SHIZUOKO, Japan (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt of North Carolina met with executives of Susuki Motor Co. and Kawai Musical Instrument Manufacturing Co. Monday and asked about possibilities of their building plants in his state.

Officially A Lab, The Students Call It A Jail

WINDSOR, N.C. (AP) — It's officially called a lab. State educators say it's an ingenious way to help problem students. The students call it a jail.

The item in question is the Alternate Adjustment Lab at Bertie Junior High School. It's a place where those caught cutting class or smoking once too often go to spend their school days instead of being suspended.

Sentences are a minimum of three days in the small Army surplus hut with thick-screened windows that sits behind the school.

Former home economics teacher Betty Jenkins leads the misbehaving there, and it's said that sometimes their fellow classmates jeer, "Hey jailbirds."

Mrs. Perkins doesn't mind being called a jailer, and school officials love the fact that students equate the lab with being behind bars.

"Characterizing it as a jail certainly has had a phychological effect," said Larry Ivey, Bertie school superintendent. "There is no objection from us when we find students looking at it that way because we don't want it to be seen as any type of reward system.

"Their seeing it as a jailhouse has been quite helpful, in fact."

Besides a brief lunch break in an otherwise empty lunchroom and perhaps a chaperoned trip to the bathroom the "jailed" students remained confined to their quarters from 8:30 a.m. until school ends at 3 p.m.

As soon as the last student is ushered into the hut, the door is closed. The group gets no break between classes, and there is no time for chatting with friends or no recess.

Assigments sent in from their teachers daily must be completed. Points that lead to release can be earned by good conduct and participation in group projects.

"I've been called a jailer," said Mrs. Jenkins. "But it doesn't bother me. No, I don't think it does. I'm more concerned about my students."

The program was designed two years ago as an alternative to suspending students. Suspensions were reduced by 40 percent, school officials said, at the end of the first year.

"We've found it an ingenious way to help problem students," said Dr. Jerome Melton, deputy assistant superintendent for the state Department of Public Instruction. "We give it top recommendations."

N.C. Principal Of Year Is Announced

The wife of a Greenville native has been named state Principal of the Year for 1979 by the Principals Division of the North Carolina Association of Educators.

Mrs. Ruth Smith, principal of Alamance Primary School and wife of Prince Earl Smith from Greenville, received the award at the recent fall conference of the NCAE Principals Division in Raleigh.

Mrs. Smith, who serves in the Guilford County school system, received a plaque which cited her "challenging and innovative practices, dynamic public relations, inspiring adminstrative vision, cooperative program planning, professional leadership qualities, unselfish service to others and constant concern for youth."

Last April, Mrs. Smith was named Guilford County Principal of the Year by the county principals association.

The award winner, who has served as principal of Alamance Primary since it opened in 1975, previously held the post of assistant principal at Alamance Elementary School.

She earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education and a master's degree in administration from North Carolina A & T State University. Mrs. Smith resides with her husband and two daughters in Sedalia.

Two Arrested After Break-In

Two Farmville men were arrested early this morning on charges of possession of stolen property following investigation of a break-in at a Dickinson Avenue service station last night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Muril Anderson, operator of the West End Citgo Service Station at 2116 Dickinson Ave. reported to police at 11:55 p.m. that he had seen a man running from his station, and that the fleeing man was picked up by a truck he had seen parked across the street.

Anderson also said he had sent his sons to try to stop the vehicle.

Investigators later arrested Herbert Earl Ross, 32 and Bobby Lee Jones, 23, both of Farmville on charges of possession of stolen property and recovered $517 in cash allegedly taken from the service station.

Jones was also arrested on charges of escape from a North Carolina Department of Corrections detention unit.

Cannon said entrance to the station was gained through a window, and the cash allegedly taken from a storage room after a lock on the door was pried off.

Both Jones and Ross were placed under $2,000 bond each in connection with the theft.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices posted a modest gain today, trying again to break out of their slump of the past three weeks.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.15 to 811.77 in the first two hours.

Gainers outnumbered losers by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the upswing stemmed more from technical forces within the market than from any special news developments.

The government reported this morning that the index of leading economic indicators rose 0.8 percent in September.

But that was seen by analysts only as further evidence of the economy's resistance to the Federal Reserve's effort to curb inflation by restraining monetary growth.

Reliance Electric rose 1/2 to 69 in active trading. Exxon reached agreement with the company Monday to buy for $72 a share the Reliance Electric stock it has not yet received through a tender offer.

Massey-Ferguson topped the active list, off 3/8 at 8 1/2. A 287,700-share block traded at that price.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index picked up .28 to 57.33. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped .97 to 201.49.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 12.12 million shares at noontime, up from 9.68 million at the same point Monday.

New S. Korea CIA Director Named

By TERRY A. ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Acting President Choi Kyu-hah named a new director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency today in what was seen as the first major step to consolidate the government's position following the killing of President Park Chung-hee by the KCIA's former head.

The government also announced relaxation of the curfew and other martial law restrictions, as the fourth day since Park's death passed with no disturbances.

Choi appointed the vice army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Lee Hui-sung, as acting KCIA chief to replace Kim Jae-kyu, under arrest for the assassination of Park Friday night.

Sources said Choi's first appointment was an important move by Choi and the military leaders cooperating with him to take over the now-disorganized secret police organization, a mainstay of support for Park in suppressing dissent and political opposition during the late president's 18 years of autocratic rule.

The sources also said Choi and two other former prime ministers are leading contenders to succeed Park.

They said Choi, a veteran bureaucrat who was prime minister when Park was assassinated, and top military commanders are firmly in charge at the moment. Meanwhile, the political leadership of Park's Democratic Republican Party is in disarray and is being ignored by Choi and the generals, the sources reported.

The leading candidates for the presidency appear to be two former military men who were among those closest to Park and served him as prime minister: Kim Jong-pil and Chung Il-kwon. Kim was the chief organizer of the 1961 coup that put Park in power and the founder and first head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, while Chung has held a number of top army and political posts.

"However, both have been tested as prime minister and their positions are well known," said one source. "Both have some opponents inside and outside the party. Therefore Choi Kyu-hah may emerge as a compromise candidate to take power, with some understanding among the opposing political forces that political reforms will be made within a certain period."

Another source said: "Choi does not have strong connections with the military or the party. That's his weakest point, but in this situation it's also his strongest point."

Most sources agreed that the new government would have to relax the tight restrictions on dissent and opposition to the government because of the unrest that has been growing recently.

Key cabinet members and military officials, including the martial law commander, Gen. Chung Seung-hwa, and the chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Kim Chong-hwan, met Monday night and again today. A spokesman said they confirmed that relations with the United States and other allies had not been affected by the murder of Park by the chief of the Korean CIA.

The flagship of the U.S. 7th Fleet, the command ship Blue Ridge, arrived today at the southern port of Pusan from Japan, and a U.S. military spokesman said the U.S. aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk would arrive there Nov. 4 with an escort of three guided missile cruisers and four destroyers.

The spokesman said the Blue Ridge was making a routine port call scheduled some time ago, but that the Kitty Hawk's presence was ordered by Defense Secretary Harold Brown as a show of force to warn North Korea against military action following Park's assassination.

After first reporting that Park was killed accidentally last Friday night by the head of the Korean CIA, Kim Jae-kyu, the government announced Sunday that Kim assassinated the president and his chief bodyguard and confidant, Cha Chichul because Kim was out of favor with Park and feared he was going to be fired.

The killing occurred during dinner at a KCIA building, and the government said five of Kim's men killed four other presidential bodyguards in an adjoining room. Investigators were reported seeking to determine if others knew of the alleged assassination plan or might have been involved.

Urging More For Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — The television industry has failed to meet its obligations to children and should be required to set aside minimum amounts of programming for them, the staff of the Federal Communications Commission said today.

The staff, in a report to the commission, said the industry has not complied with voluntary FCC guidelines in effect since 1974 and "is unlikely without further government action to increase voluntarily the amount of educational programming for children."

The report recommended that commercial stations be required to offer at least 2 1/2 hours of programming directed at school-age children and 5 hours aimed at preschoolers a week. All would be on weekdays under the staff proposal.

The staff report saw little hope for improved children's programming on commercial television beyond meeting any mandatory minimum time requirement, however, and urged the commission to encourage alternative program sources such as pay and cable television.

The report also called on public broadcasters to increase children's programming.

The report, compiled by a staff task force, said the industry has by and large complied with the commission's 1974 advertising guidelines.

Better Job Outlook In Southeast Is Predicted

ATLANTA (AP) — Part-time jobs are going to be harder to find next year but will be more available in the Southeast than elsewhere in the nation, according to a Federal Reserve Board economist.

"I suspect that part-time voluntary employment will be more available in the Southeast because of the retail and wholesale factor," says Charlie Carter, a business economist with the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

Voluntary part-time workers — students, homemakers and others who do not want full-time jobs — usually are employed in such service-related businesses as restaurants and department stores, Carter said.

And such business is more vigorous in the Southeast because the region has experienced a greater increase in demand for commodities than elsewhere, he explained.

Carter cautioned, however, that the Southeast's healthy voluntary employment picture does not necessarily mean the region will suffer less from unemployment than other parts of the nation.

The Federal Reserve Bank economist said statistics on "discouraged workers" indicate that joblessness throughout the nation will rise more dramatically next year than had been anticipated.

"Discouraged workers" are no longer seeking employment because they have given up hope of finding a job, Carter explained.

The number of such workers rose sharply during the second quarter of this year, even though the overall employment rate remained roughly stable, Carter said, adding that such a "rise in discouragement" usually precedes economic contractions.

Another signal of an impending upswing in unemployment is a lowering of the ratio of voluntary part-time workers to involuntary part-time workers — those who work part-time because they cannot find full-time work, he said.

And, he noted, the ratio of voluntary to involuntary part-time workers fell about 9 percent from December 1978 to June of this year, compared with the 7 percent drop recorded prior to the 1974-75 recession.

Holding Man In Shooting Case

FARMVILLE — Farmville Police are investigating a shooting which injured a Farmville man Sunday night.

Investigating officer, Sgt. John Ellis, said Julius Vines, 19, of Farmville is being treated for the gunshot injury in Pitt County Memorial Hospital and is said to be in serious condition. He allegedly was shot about 7:30 p.m. Sunday at a residence at 504 S. Barrett Street here. David Bullock, 33, also of Farmville, is in the Pitt County Jail, charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill, Sgt. Ellis said.

First Evidence Of Birth Risk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say they have the first solid evidence that birth defects in children of alcoholic mothers are caused by direct action of alcohol on developing fetal cells.

Experiments with rat embryos grown outside the mothers' bodies in alcohol solutions show alcohol itself can be responsible for some symptoms of fetal alcohol syndrome, according to a study by scientists at the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences and Georgetown University. The levels of alcohol in the rat cultures were similar to the blood concentrations found in humans after heavy drinking, said the study, which was reported in Science magazine.

Networks Face Political Plaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's campaign committee is complaining that the three major television networks have wrongfully refused to sell him air time for a political speech.

The committee filed a complaint Monday with the Federal Communications Commission, saying the time was sought for a half-hour television show to accompany Carter's planned announcement Dec. 4 of his candidacy for re-election. The complaint names ABC, CBS and NBC. NBC officials in New York said they did not believe the complaint has merit, adding that presidential candidates have never purchased national network time so early. There was no immediate comment from officials at ABC or CBS.

Kings Mountain Bank Robbed

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Independence National Bank on East King Street was robbed of an undetermined amount of money Monday afternoon.

A spokesman for the FBI said that Max Donald Brooks, 38, of Kings Mountain, was arrested about 30 minutes after the robbery by Kings Mountain police. He will be taken before federal magistrate Barbara H. Delaney in Charlotte today and charged on a federal warrant with bank robbery. Bond has been set at $100,000.

If convicted, Brooks could receive a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison, a $5,000 fine or both.

Kings Mountain Police Chief Jackie Barrett said Brooks was acting alone. He would not say if Brooks was armed and refused to release any other details on the robbery.

Traffic Control Couldn't Help

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Investigators say the pilot of a Mexican plane lost in heavy fog radioed for help before crashing on the U.S. side of the border, but air traffic controllers couldn't understand his Spanish.

The pilot sought instructions from the San Diego Approach Control Facility, but there were no Spanish-speaking controllers on duty, an investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board said Monday.

The twin-engine Mexican government plane was flying to the Mexican border city of Tijuana when it hit a utility pole a half-mile north of the U.S. border early Sunday and crashed, killing all 10 persons aboard.

Evacuated From Capitol Bldg.

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Several hundred state workers were evacuated from Pennsylvania's Capitol building for about 20 minutes after an overheated motor on an elevator began smoking.

Officials said the evacuation Monday of state workers and others in the building was orderly.

The Legislature meets in the Capitol and the governor's office and much of his staff are located there.

Bowden Likes FSU's Ranking

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Bowden is historically aware of Florida State's lofty status this week in The Associated Press football rankings. And he's sky-high about it.

"We were once ranked No. 9 last year, but we dropped out the next week," the Florida State football coach said. "So this is very exciting."

Bowden's euphoria stems from Florida State's highest ranking in history as the nation's No. 6 team today. The Seminoles moved up from No. 8 in this week's poll after defeating a strong Louisiana State squad 24-19 in Baton Rouge's so-called "Death Valley" last Saturday.

"That stadium is as tough as any in the country for a visiting team," Bowden said. "The fans are close to the field and they're screaming all the time. I've been in lots of tough places, Oklahoma among them, but none worse."

Also obviously instrumental in Florida State's rise in the rankings was the television exposure. Bowden has those numbers, too.

"I think we were seen by 84 per cent of the nation," Bowden said, vitally aware of such a public relations factor.

Now that the Seminoles have made a name for themselves, Bowden believes they have every right to be ranked with the Alabamas and Nebraskas of the college football world.

"This is definitely the strongest team we've had so far," said the onetime West Virginia coach now in his fourth year at Florida State. "Our defense has been the difference."

Undefeated in seven games thus far, Florida State is on a course toward Bowden's finest record in Tallahassee. The last two years the Seminoles compiled records of 10-2 and 8-3 and made a visit to the Tangerine Bowl in 1977.

Meanwhile, the Alabamas and Nebraskas remained in their accustomed places — the Crimson Tide holding onto No. 1 and Nebraska No. 2 after impressive victories.

Alabama received 46 firstplace votes and 1,235 of a possible 1,260 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters after a 31-7 victory over Virginia Tech. Nebraska received seven firstplace votes and 1,176 points for No. 2 after a 38-10 rout of Colorado.

Southern Cal remained No. 3, collecting four first-place ballots and 1,083 points after defeating California 24-14. Houston edged Ohio State for fourth place, 1,058 to 1,052 after a 1310 triumph over Arkansas. Ohio State routed Michigan State 420.

After Florida State, the remainder of the Top Ten were No. 7 Oklahoma, No. 8 Texas, No. 9 Arkansas and No. 10 Michigan.

Brigham Young and Pittsburgh were 11th and 12th for the second week in a row, followed in the Second Ten by Notre Dame, Wake Forest, Purdue, Washington, Tennessee, North Carolina, Penn State and Auburn.

Seahawks Survive Scare, 31-28

ATLANTA (AP) — The daring Seattle Seahawks tossed the standard National Football League playbook out the window for their Monday night television debut, then sat back and sweated out a last-minute rally by the Atlanta Falcons, whose miracles apparently ran out a year ago.

The Seahawks, conceived through expansion four years ago, used three fourth-down gambles in trimming the Falcons 31-28, but not before Atlanta had the hometown crowd of 52,566 screaming. The Falcons scored with 51 seconds left, then recovered an onside kick and marched to the Seattle 13 before Steve Bartkowski was intercepted in the end zone by Dave Brown with only 35 seconds left.

"The turning point wasn't the gambles, though," said Seattle Coach Jack Patera, whose youngsters are now 4-5. "The turning point was Dave Brown's interception."

Bartkowski called the pass his most disappointing in his five years with the Falcons.

"I can't remember a pass that was any more disappointing than that one," said the dejected former No. 1 draft choice. "I thought we had a chance to win it."

Jim Zorn, the scrambling Seattle quarterback, who accounted for two touchdowns and set up another with a 20-yard pass to place-kicker Efren Herrera, also thought the Falcons had a great chance to win in the final moments. The Seahawks had apparently wrapped it up on a 26-yard touchdown run by Dan Doornink with 1:51 left to play for a 31-21 lead. Doornink had converted a fourth-down play only moments earlier to keep the drive going.

"My thoughts were it's either overtime or we're behind. But if they had scored, there's nothing we could have done," said Zorn.

"Bartkowski did a super job coming back the way he did. But Dave Brown and the rest of the guys hung in there and got the key play. That's what really won it for us," he said.

Seattle stunned the Falcons with fourth-down gambles four times during the game which was played in an intermittent drizzle, converting three and barely missing on the other.

Zorn scored Seattle's first touchdown on a 34-yard run on a fourth and five situation and tossed a 4-yard pass to Sherman Smith for another score in the second quarter for a 14-14 tie.

Doornink scored on an 8-yard run to give the Seahawks a 21-14 halftime edge. The TD was set up when Seattle faked a 55-yard field goal attempt by Herrera, who broke through the middle and caught the fourth-down pass from Zorn at the Atlanta 17.

The gamble that failed came on a fourth-and-12 at the Seattle 32 when punter Herman Weaver passed 9 yards to Jesse Green. The Falcons failed to capitalize, however, when Tim Mazzetti missed a 25-yard field goal.

The Falcons scored on a 35-yard run by Lynn Cain and a 30-yard fumble recovery by Rick Byas in the opening half and Bartkowski hit Ryckman with touchdown tosses of 17 and 20 yards.

As for the gambling Seattle offense, Zorn said he didn't consider the fourth-down plays gambles. "Unusual maybe," he said.

"You don't see it every day but we don't call them gambles. It's fun. We work on it seriously. We don't laugh about it, but everybody enjoys it. We just let it all out tonight."

Patera also pointed out that the Seahawks work on the plays in practice.

"Some work and some don't. We do them in practice," he said. "I felt comfortable with the fake field goal. Fourth and five with the quarterback running is touchy ... not a sure thing, but there is something about the nature of our team that makes it worth gambling.

"We have people who can do these things. Herrera is a good kicker and a good receiver," said Patera, who admitted his placekicker had never caught a pass in a regular game, "but he catches the ball well in practice."

It was a disappointing loss for the Falcons, who fell to 3-6 after a 2-0 start. They made the playoffs a year ago for the first time in their 13-year history with a 9-7 record that included five victories within the last two minutes.

This year, however, Mazzetti, who booted game-winners in the closing seconds twice a year ago, missed field goals earlier in the season that would have given the Falcons victories over Denver and Detroit and had missed four of five extra point attempts in his last two games.

On his 25-yard attempt in the third period, Mazzetti said his "foot slipped. I'm not giving that as an excuse, it just happened. I'm surprised it wasn't blocked."

Bennett said the Falcons played well enough to win "at times, but our kicking game let us down."

"On the last play, Bartkowski thought he could get it to Russ Mikeska, but it just didn't work out. We felt like that pass pattern was the best we had."

Instead, it turned out best for Brown, the five-year veteran from Michigan who also had a first half interception.

"I'm just happy it came in a situation that helped win a game for us. We were in a man-to-man coverage and I saw Bartkowski wasn't throwing to my man. I just reacted and jumped to get the ball," he said.

Kickers Bow To Charlotte

East Carolina's soccer team fell prey to UNC-Charlotte's 49ers yesterday, dropping a 4-0 decision.

"It was a lot easier than I had anticipated," UNCC Coach Ike Gardner said. "I think we just caught them on a bad day. The Carolina game (Saturday) must have had a tremendous effect on their play today."

Sophomore Fernando Sosa scored his 25th and 26th goals of the season in leading the 49ers to victory.

All of the goals came within an 18-minute span in the first half, and that lapse proved fatal to the Pirates as they saw their record drop to 4-10-2.

"The defense was just standing a lot today," Pirate Coach Brad Smith said. "I believe it was due to the mental and mostly physical effects of the draining North Carolina game, although we had our opportunities."

It was UNC-Charlotte's last game of the season, and they went out in style with an impressive record of 14-6-1.

"This was a sweet final victory but the score did not reflect the way the game was played. It was closer than the score indicated," Gardner said.

The Pirates next game is away against the University of Richmond on Friday at 3 p.m.

Invitational Opens Play

The Ninth Annual Brook Valley Women's Invitational Golf Tournament got underway this morning with 104 participants.

Favored for the title this year are Lucille Pinner of the Cavalier Club in Virginia Beach, Va., carrying a four handicap; Martha Simerly of Camp Lejeune, Ann Brethtelbauer of Pinehurst, both with a five handicap, and defending champion Harriette White of Greenville, with a nine handicap.

The two day medal play will wind up tomorrow.

In yesterday's Better Ball of Pair event to warm up for the tournament, the team of Virginia Bento and Faye Curtis of Robersonville finished first with a net 62.

Tieing for second place were the teams of Barbara Walker and Mae Haverty of Brook Valley; Ellen Fleming of Brook Valley and Joy Scott of New Bern; Glo Clark and Celeste Wilkerson of Brook Valley; and Carolyn Brink and Vera Bernard of Smithfield. All four teams had 63.

Ellen Fleming recently wrapped up the Brook Valley Women's Handicap Tournament. She beat Dorothy Wooles in the finals of the match play tournament.

The consolation title went to Jane Sauve, who defeated Sue Hallow in the finals.

Contest Winners

Steve Auten of 107-B Belk Dorm, at East Carolina University, is the winner of last week's "Daily Reflector" football contest.

Auten correctly picked the winners in 24 of the 32 listed games.

Second place resulted in a tie between Steve Dickens of 103-H Eastbrook Apartments, Greenville, and Donna Myers of Box 5086, Greenville.

Both correctly picked 23 of the 32 games, and tied on their point guess with a total of 75. The actual total was 91, scored in Mississippi's 63-28 victory over Vanderbilt.

Two other people also had 23 correct picks, but were further off on the point total.

The two tie games were counted wrong, since it is allowable to pick a tie.

Venuto Is Top Player

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For the second time this season, Wake Forest quarterback Jay Venuto has been named the Atlantic Coast Conference's offensive back of the week.

Venuto set four school records in leading the Demon Deacons to a 42-38 comeback victory over nationally-ranked Auburn Saturday.

The selection was made by a committee of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association, which also picked North Carolina guard Ron Wooten as the offensive lineman of the week.

Even though Wake Forest still has three regular season games remaining, three of the records Venuto set were single season marks.

Mackovic Has The Answers: Stop Venuto

By DICK BRINSTER
Associated Press Writer

The rags-to-riches tale of 14th-ranked Wake Forest University's football team has become the story of the year in college football, and what the Demon Deacons do from this point forward will bear microscopic examination.

With that in the mind the sporting press is beginning to ask Coach John Mackovic every question imaginable. And coming up with the right answers is becoming more difficult for the second-year boss of the Deacons than devising a game plan to disect another tough opponent's defense.

How, Mackovic was asked Monday, would he go about stopping the vaunted Wake Forest offense?

"Well, I would stop (Jay) Venuto's passing to (Mike) Mullen and (Wayne) Baumgardner and (Kenny) Duckett and (Albert) Kirby and (James) Mc Dougald and then I would stop McDougald's running and Kirby's running," said Mackovic as a group of writers laughed.

But his point was well taken. Simply put, the Wake Forest offense is a multi-faceted attack vulnerable only to outstanding defensive play and its own mistakes. To date it has produced seven victories in eight tries.

"That's the thing about it," said Mackovic. "You can't say, 'If we stop the pass we'll win,' because it's not that easy. You also can't figure to win if you stop only the rush."

This, he said, is not only the case at Wake Forest, but at many other institutions of higher learning where the game of football is taken seriously. And that old adage about a passing team not being able to win also has been disproven.

"Coaches do a lot of studying and they know a lot more about the passing game," Mackovic explained. "Even most teams that don't throw that much have the ability to do it when they need to."

The difference, said the man whose team averages nearly 300 yards a week through the air, is execution of the passing game. It no longer is drop and throw, drop and throw.

"When I played (he was a quarterback at Wake Forest) you called a curl pass and it was a curl pass," said Mackovic. "If some guy ran over and intercepted it you said 'where did he come from?' and you couldn't figure it out.

"Today you have to read the defense and understand what they're doing," he explained.

Tourney Is Set

The Second Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival Golf Tournament will offer a challenge to local golfers and golfers of the agricultural industry.

Scheduled for Sunday, November 11 with starting times from 8 to 12 noon, the tournament will be held at the Ayden Country Club, Brook Valley Country Club, Farmville Country Club and the Grifton Country Club.

Prizes will be presented at each course for— longest drive, most accurate drive, closest to hole, par 3 and hole in one. Winners from each club will compete at the end of the tournament at a designated club.

Trophies will be presented at each course for first, second and third low gross and first, second and third low net.

Entry fee for the tournament is $20 plus green fees and cart fees. For further information contact the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival at 752-4101.

Spikers Split Two

DURHAM — The East Carolina women's volleyball team boosted its record to 16-20 on the season as they defeated Duke 15-9, 15-5 and lost to Wake Forest 9-15, 15-11, 15-1, in a tri-meet here last night.

The Pirates were forced to go into the first game against Wake Forest cold, as they arrived last and had only five minutes to warm up.

"We lacked consistancy in the first game," Coach Alita Dillon said. "We just seemed to go up and down."

However, the Pirates got on track in their second match as they downed Duke for the second time in three meetings this season.

The Blue Devils were not at full strength as three of their players were seriously injuried in an auto accident last week.

"Of course that hurt their team," Dillon said. "All three were starters."

The Pirates will be back on the road Thursday night as they travel to UNC-Greensboro for a tri-meet with the Spartans and Appalachian State. With only four more regular season matches to go, the Pirates hope to hit the .500 mark before entering the NCAIAW state tournament November 9.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Shot Clock Observes Its 25th Anniversary

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

If you like pro basketball — what it is, was, and may yet become — then pause a moment today and say thank you to Danny Biasone.

It was 25 years ago today that Biasone introduced a gizmo that accelerated the pace of the pro game and paved the way for the National Basketball Association to become truly national in scope.

Danny Biasone invented the 24-second shot clock.

"Pro basketball would not have survived without a clock," said Biasone, who owned the Syracuse Nationals in the NBA's pioneer years.

"The game had become a stalling game. ... In 1952 we played a game in which neither team took a shot in the last eight minutes. It was a parade between foul lines and, boy, was it dull!"

In an effort to reduce fouling, the NBA began awarding two shots for backcourt fouls in the 1953-54 season. But that was not enough.

"Coaches will take advantage of anything to win. If they can win a game 3-2, that's OK with them ... But if you're a promoter, that won't do. You've got to have offense. Offense excites people."

And so, before the start of the 1954 season, Biasone convinced his fellow owners to try out his invention.

The clock made its debut on Oct. 30, 1954, the hometown Rochester Royals beating the Boston Celtics 98-95 in what would have been the seventh highest scoring game of the previous year. During the first season with the 24-second clock, NBA teams averaged 93.1 points per game, an increase of 13.6 over the year before. The tempo has been picking up ever since.

"The whole purpose of the 24-second rule — to make the game fast and furious, with plenty of action — was accomplished," said Eddie Gottlieb, who owned and coached the Philadelphia Warriors when the rule went into effect and is now a consultant to the league.

Al Attles, coach and general manager of the Golden State Warriors, was more direct: "What it did was save the game."

Biasone, an Italian immigrant who arrived at New York's Ellis Island on Christmas Day, 1919, owned the Syracuse franchise from 1946 to 1963. "I miss it, I wish I was still in it, but it just got too rich for my pocket," he said. He now runs a bowling alley-cocktail lounge-coffee shop in Syracuse, a business he's had for 30 years.

How did he arrive at 24 seconds for his time limit?

"By taking the average number of shots two teams would take during a game, which was about 120, and dividing that into the length of a game, which was 48 minutes or 2,880 seconds, you come up with 24," explained Biasone.

The Olympics and other international amateur competitions use a 30-second shot clock, as did the old American Basketball Association. Some have argued that the NBA has become too offense-minded and ought to push the shot clock up to 30 seconds and legalize the zone defense.

But while Biasone feels the concept of a shot clock is more important than the number of seconds, he thinks 24 has worked out remarkably well over the past quarter-century.

"People complain it's a run-and-shoot game, but the only real problem is that the players are so good. And I don't think that's a problem. ... I'm one fella who loves offense."

Swim Club Results

The Greenville Swim Club held its first intra-club meet this past weekend.

The Salamanders downed the Crystaceans, 187-153.

First place winners included: Gretchen Brannon, Flossi Crisp, Johnny Carstarphen, Chris Fuqua, Lisa Wallace, Betsy Barnhill, Sellers Crisp, Jimmy Gillahn, Robert Williams, Maria Kelly, LuAnne Wallace, Carl Wille, Kelly Barnhill, Les Turner, Laura Scharf, Suzanne Wille, Kelly Gordon, Mark Schmidt, Will Moore, Kurt Hendrix, Liz Hookway, Kevin Richards, Mark Schmidt and Roger Clemmons.

The team will participate in the "B" Invitational at Wilmington on November 10.

Pigeon Results

Rayford Kennedy of Winterville, took first and second place in the Golden Leaf Racing Pigeon Club race during the weekend.

The pigeons raced from Agusta, Georgia in the clubsponsored event.

Kennedy was also the Golden Leaf Racing club winner in a race sponsored by the Dixie racing association during the weekend.

When Bob Feller of Cleveland pitched a no-hitter against the New York Yankees in 1946, his center fielder was Bob Lemon, who years later pitched a no-hitter himself.

Michael Set For GM For Yanks

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps the most surprising part of Dick Howser's appointment as manager of the New York Yankees is the fact that he got the job and Gene Michael didn't.

The reason is that the Yankees have other plans for Michael, who is expected to be named the team's general manager Thursday when Howser is officially introduced at a news conference.

Howser replaced Billy Martin after a brawl involving Martin in a Bloomington, Minn., hotel left marshmallow salesman Joseph Cooper of Lincolnshire, Ill. with a cut lip requiring 15 to 20 stitches.

Martin's public explanation was that the man had fallen and cut himself. But privately, the manager got word to Yankees owner George Steinbrenner that he had hit the man, a source told The Associated Press. That disclosure convinced Steinbrenner to make the change.

Martin was reported distraught and unavailable for comment Monday.

Michael had been considered a prime candidate for the job after winning the International League pennant in his first season with Columbus. He is a favorite of Steinbrenner, who has used him in a variety of organizational capacities including coach and administrative assistant.

Now Michael is expected to fill a front office post that has been more or less vacant with the Yankees. Cedric Tallis, a club vice president, has operated as GM without portfolio.

Yankee-watchers will recall that Bob Lemon was supposed to get the GM job. That was part of the grand plan Steinbrenner pieced together following Martin's tearful resignation July 24, 1978 and his triumphant return on Old Timers Day at Yankee Stadium five days later.

The scenario had Lemon remaining as manager through 1979 and then yielding that post to Martin who would return for 1980. But when the Yankees struggled early last season, Steinbrenner speeded up the timetable and returned Martin to the manager's post in June.

Lemon then drifted into an undefined front office limbo, operating as something less than GM. Meanwhile, Martin, seeming almost serene, was unable to move the Yankees up in the standings but was set as manager until the Bloomington affair.

Howser, the Yankees third base coach for 10 years, had left the club after the 1978 season to become baseball coach at Florida State University in Tallahassee, Fla. His team posted a 43-16 record in his first year there and he seemed set, too, until Steinbrenner called him in the dugout Saturday during a game against Indian River Junior College. The two men met Sunday and the change was made.

The news stunned most Yankees players.

"I'm surprised he was named," said outfielder Roy White, who has declared for this week's free agent draft. "I thought Gene Michael was the more likely choice. He'd been mentioned a lot as the successor to the Yankee manager's job."

White called Howser a good friend whose sense of humor kept the Yankees loose.

"I thought he was very happy with his position at Florida State and that he had no intention of coming back to the major league level," White said.

Shortstop Bucky Dent, who signed a new Yankees contract Monday instead of trying the free agent draft, called Martin a good manager.

"I felt very sad that Billy was fired," Dent said. "He didn't bother me and I didn't bother him. I guess that's a pretty good relationship. I think I had a good chemistry with Billy. I think will have a very good relationship with Dick Howser. He will be a good manager. I think he'll be an authoritative, calm manager."

First baseman Jim Spencer, who also signed a new contract Monday, called Howser "a mild-mannered, easy-going guy. He'll expect 100 percent and in his quiet way, he'll make sure you give it."

Rural Vandalism Stirred County To Do Something

By LEE MITGANG
AP Urban Affairs Writer

MONTMORENCI, Ind. (AP) — Two years ago, the Vorst family moved about 10 miles — from Lafayette, Ind., population 43,000, to this corn-growing hamlet of 200 — searching for a place where they could leave their doors unlocked.

They felt they had replaced urban fear with country security.

But last October when JoAnne Vorst walked up to her elegant, $100,000 home, the frantic barking of her dog told her something was wrong.

The house was a shambles.

Tire-tread scars on the lawn still show where vandals pulled their van up to the back door. Walls and doors were smashed. A bureau was in pieces. Jewelry and guns were missing. Eggs had been tossed against the walls. The odor of wine hung in the air.

"Were we bad, Mommy? Is God punishing us?" her young son asked as Mrs. Vorst surveyed $10,000 in damage.

Mrs. Vorst called a neighbor, Jacky Kerker, and together they decided it was time Montmorenci did something about the burglars and vandals who had preyed on their town for more than five years.

Somehow, the system that was supposed to prevent crime and punish wrongdoers simply wasn't working in Tippecanoe County, Ind.

The Kerker home had been broken into six times. Down the road a bit, Bob and Paula Kerkhove had lost a portable TV, several high-powered rifles and a valued collection of old silver dollars to thieves. It seemed that almost everyone in town had similar stories.

But it took the case of Jim and JoAnne Vorst to stir Montmorenci. Their ordeal had a profound impact on the town.

Some of the houses now have the hefty deadbolt locks favored by city dwellers.

After the break-in, the Vorsts installed a $2,000 alarm system with a siren that can be heard a mile away. If the alarm is tripped, phone calls automatically go out to the state police, the sheriff and a nearby neighbor.

A month ago, the Kerkers bought a menacing Doberman named Zeke, so fierce it allows no one but the family near the house.

Townspeople are now religiously jotting down license plate numbers of any cars or trucks they don't recognize.

The change hasn't been easy for people who never used to give crime a second thought.

Kerkhove says he finds locking and unlocking his front door "mighty unhandy" and he still refuses to put a lock on his gas pump, although neighbors have had gasoline stolen.

The community turned to a strategy to fight crime much like that being used by many urban neighborhoods — organize to defend itself.

The first step was a meeting of about 40 people in Mrs. Vorst's living room. She calls that first gathering the "vigilante meeting" because some of her more incensed neighbors urged people to buy guns and take matters into their own hands.

More meetings were held. At one gathering last June, more than 100 people from neighboring towns attended, as well as Tippecanoe County Prosecutor John Meyers and state police Detective Jim Kesterson.

Meyers now admits, "I wasn't aware that they were that concerned."

The meetings revealed that people thought the state police cared too little about their crime problems and dealt with them too slowly. Townspeople complained to the county prosecutor that, as Mrs. Kerkhove puts it, "laws protect the criminal more than the victim."

In turn, Kesterson told the people of Montmorenci what they could do to prevent crime: buy locks, note strange persons or vehicles, buy dogs, list all possessions and stop mail deliveries when on vacation.

One major accomplishment of those meetings was that neighbors got to know newcomers to Montmorenci, drawn by jobs in nearby light industry or, like the Vorsts, moving out of cities looking for a more peaceful life.

It dawned on Mrs. Kerker that "we don't know all our neighbors," and that knowing one another had always been rural America's first line of defense against crime.

Some of Montmorenci's problems are more difficult. Kesterson says the kids he arrests for vandalism or break-ins are often drunk or high on drugs. He says the problems that trouble city kids are just as common among country kids now, with the big consolidated county schools serving as breeding grounds for mischief, crime and drugs.

It's too soon to tell if Montmorenci's community crime prevention program will actually lower the crime rate, says Meyers. But there are some results already:

—Other towns in the county, like Tecumseh and Hanna Park, are considering forming similar community anti-crime groups.

—County judges are getting the message, and Meyers is demanding stiffer sentences. He says there hasn't been a single suspended sentence for serious crime this year in Tippecanoe County.

—Neighbors now call each other day or night if they spot unfamiliar people or cars.

—Finally, the two men — both county residents — who vandalized the Vorst home were caught with the help of a neighbor who recalled their license plate. One man was sentenced to six years in prison. The second pleaded guilty and is awaiting sentence next month.

Still, says Mrs. Vorst, the vandalization of her home scarred her and her family.

"I never thought it would happen to us. We always felt it was a lot safer in the country. We don't feel that way now."

Milk Price Complaints By Farmers, Consumers

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — As the price of milk continues to rise in North Carolina, both the consumer and the farmer continue complain about it.

Retail milk prices have topped $2 a gallon and are expected to reach $2.27 per gallon by December. Thus, the consumers' complaint.

Despite the increases, dairy farmers say they don't get paid enough for their milk.

"It's not because dairy farmers are driving the prices up so we can get rich and retire early," said Arnold Souther, an Iredell County dairy farmer.

"We plow hundreds of thousands of dollars into our operations every year, and the return is none too great," he said. " ... Most of us end up borrowing money every year just to stay in business."

The North Carolina Milk Commission sets the price farmers are paid for their milk. The agency is made up of producers, economists and lay people who decide the price using a formula.

The agency does not set the retail price of milk but regulates farmers prices to keep supplies in line with demand.

Five increases have been approved for the wholesale price of milk since June. By December dairy farmers will get $1.43 for every gallon of milk they sell to processors.

Geoff Benson, a dairy economist at N.C. State University, said the formula that sets the wholesale price is too rigid. He said it has "allowed the farm price to increase only half as fast as changes in consumer prices."

And he says milk producers are dropping out of the business.

"The dairy industry isn't in danger of going bankrupt, but the prices show it's unattractive generally."

North Carolina's wholesale milk prices remain lower than those paid to farmers in South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Illinois and Wisconsin, according to Kenneth Vaughn, Iredell County agricultural extension agent.

CWA Votes On Pact Thursday

TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — A vote is scheduled for Thursday by members of the striking Communications Workers of America on a proposed two-year contract with Carolina Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The workers, who have been striking the company for four weeks, must decide on a new contract that includes a 10-percent wage increase the first year and a 9-percent wage hike the second.

However, the contract point that led to the walkout — an automatic cost-of-living adjustment — is not included in the new proposal.

The clause would have linked future wage increases to the cost-of-living index. From 50 to 75 percent of the company's 3,100 workers walked off the job Oct. 1 when negotiations broke down over the cost-of-living clause.

The new proposal was finished Saturday when negotiating teams resumed bargaining for the first time since Oct. 1.

Delbert Gordon, chief negotiator for the union, said meetings would be held throughout the company's 44-county service area to explain the procedure for Thursday's voting.

If the contract is not ratified, negotiations will be resumed.

Fringe benefits included in the new package are double time pay for work over 50 hours, an increase in the company's contribution to the workers' health insurance program and an increase in the company's contribution to the workers' dental insurance program from 60 percent to 70 percent.

Company officials have not said what will happen to the non-union replacement employees hired two weeks ago when the contract dispute is settled.

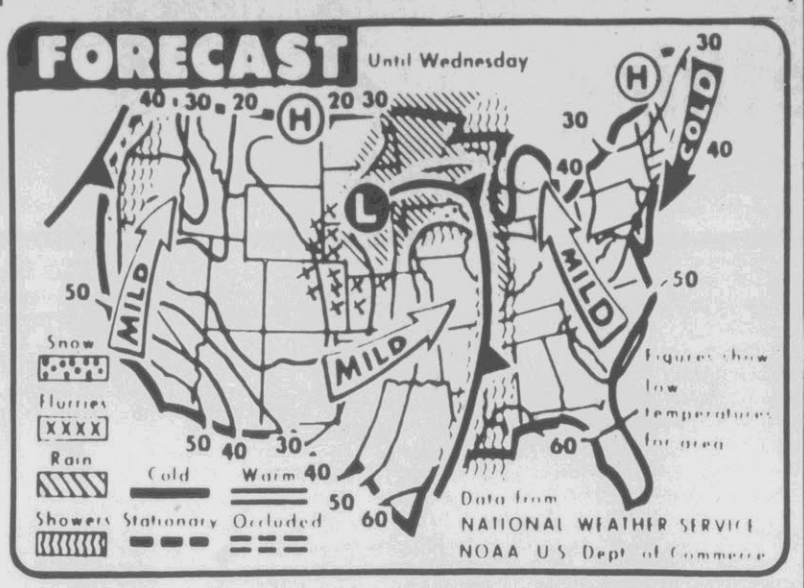
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — A mixture of snow flurries and rain is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning from the central Plains to the upper Great Lakes. Showers are forecast from the central Gulf to the Midwest. Showers are also due for the Pacific Northwest. Skies over most of the nation are expected to be sunny and mild weather across most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The weak cold front which eased through the Tar Heel state Monday brought clouds and some scattered light rain mainly over the mountains and foothills through the southern piedmont. An upper level disturbance helped trigger the unsettled weather late Monday and early this morning. This is all moving away from North Carolina and stable air will take over later today into Wednesday.

Rainfall over the past 24 hours ending at 1 a.m. this morning has been mostly light with some spotty moderate showers over some western counties. Asheville reported just under one half-inch, while Hickory had one-third inch. Charlotte picked up about one-tenth, while only traces fell over widely scattered areas of the Piedmont. The mountains had amounts under one-tenth of an inch in general.

Temperatures were mild and pleasant Monday with 60s and 70s the rule. The afternoon maximum was 79 degrees at New Bern while Cape Hatteras had 67 degrees. Mountains were cooler with 50s and 60s there. Grandfather Mountain only reached 47 degrees for a chilly afternoon.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina still looks good for the next few days with fair weather expected tonight and Wednesday. A small craft advisory may be necessary later today for the sound and coastal waters as the northeast winds pick up speed.

The highs today will range in the 60s for the most part while the cool 40s will be evident at night. Little if any rainfall is expected by tonight and Wednesday. A few brief showers are possible over the south ern counties this morning.

The Kerr Lake level was 306.5 feet as of Monday.

Judge Rules State To Blame In Child Neglect

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ruling that a 14-year-old girl was being neglected by the State of North Carolina rather than Wake County or Dorothea Dix Hospital as charged, Wake District Court Judge George F. Bason Monday ordered the suicidal teen-ager returned to her home.

Bason's ruling came in a hearing on a petition alleging that Dix and the Wake Department of Social Services were neglecting the girl by not providing the psychological, psychiatric and remedial services she needed.

He ruled that the county and Dorothea Dix had done all they could to help the Wake County teenager who was committed against her will to Dix hospital in September.

The teenager, whose name was not released, has made repeated threats and at least one attempt to take her own life. She was diagnosed by a hospital physician as being mentally ill and in need of two years of psychiatric treatment.

However, she was released from the Raleigh hospital last week.

"The child is being neglected by the state of North Carolina," Bason said during the hearing Monday.

He ordered that she be returned to her mother rather than stay at the Wake County Detention Home.

"Maybe when this child overdoses again, maybe that will get the attention of the Legislature," Bason said.

Bason said there is no place in the state to provide the teenager and other adolescents with problems as severe as hers with the long-term care needed. Therefore, he ruled there was no neglect on the part of the county and the hospital.

He has previously criticized the state for failing to provide treatment facilities for seriously disturbed adolescents.

The teenager has a history of running away from home and from an adolescent facility where she was housed for some time, according to court testimony.

Physicians at Dix found that she was chronically depressed and a suicidal risk. A hospital report recommended she stay another month. Her physician said she needed one to two years in an around-the-clock treatment program.

Set Discussion Of 5-Year-Plan

The new Five-Year Plan of the Eastern Area Health Education Center will be the main topic of discussion during the yearly meeting of the Board of Directors of Eastern AHEC to be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in Dining Room IV of the Holiday Inn here.

Executive Committee members for 1979-80 will be elected and the audit of the 1979-80 operating and capital budgets will be reported. Reports of program activities for the past and the coming year will be given. New directors will be introduced, according to Dr. F. H. Simmons Patterson, executive director of Eastern AHEC, headquartered here.

Eastern AHEC provides continuing education, technical assistance and consultative services to health care professionals in the 23 counties of Eastern North Carolina and also offers clinical education support for health care students and residents.

Attending the meeting from Pitt and Martin Counties will be Dr. William Fore, Jack W. Richardson, Dr. William E. Laupus, Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, Evelyn Perry, Dr. Ronald L. Thiele, and Dr. Jack Wilkerson, all of Greenville; Moses W. Moye of Farmville; and Dorcas Oakley of Williamston.

$114,000 Grant To Psychic Research

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Two Duke University researchers trying to correlate psychic events with measurable changes in the brain and body through computers have received a $114,000 grant to continue their work.

The award from McDonnell Foundation of St. Louis was made to Drs. John Artley, a professor of electrical engineering, and Edward Kelly, who holds a doctorate in linguistic psychology from Harvard University. They are working in the university's Experimental Learning Laboratory at the School of Engineering.

Their work involves using a computer system to process information from anelectroencephalograph, which records brain waves, and other physiological monitors.

Better statistical and experimental control of psi phenomena could be gained from the information, Kelly said.

And clear correlation of psi events with brain and central nervous system events would constitute the "most persuasive possible evidence" of the reality of psi, Artley said.

The two say they are beginning serious studies of 'psi," a term used to describe paranormal events that includle clairvoyance, telepathy and precognition, as well as psychokinesis — mind over matter.

One test used by the researchers involves isolating a subject in a soundproof room, recording his impressions of transactions between a flashing strobe and a computer.

Analysis of the data allows the researchers to study whether the subject consciously discriminated the state of the strobe and whether the different states were accompanied by different patterns of electrical activity in the subject's brain.

Indict Pilot For Perjury

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — An Eastern Airlines pilot who was acquitted in July on charges of conspiring to smuggle cocaine into North Carolina Monday was indicted on five counts of perjury.

William D. Johnson of Hialeah, Fla., also known as Douglas Michie Johnson, was named in an indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Winston-Salem.

Johnson, 40, was tried in U.S. Middle District Court in July on charges that he and his cousin, Kenneth Edgar Johnson, 31, of Durham, conspired to smuggle nearly 130 pounds of cocaine from Columbia, South America, to Durham.

William Johnson was acquitted after a week-long trial in which his cousin testified as a government witness against him.

Johnson is charged in the perjury indictment with lying five times during the trial in connection with his use of cocaine and the alleged cocaine conspiracy.

Kenneth Johnson, a Durham real estate broker, was sentenced last month to eight years in prison for his part in the alleged conspiracy.

The Johnsons were arrested by federal drug agents in late May at an airstrip near Brunswick, Ga., where the cocaine was supposed to be delivered, according to drug enforcement agents.

N.C. Oyster Catch 'Probably' Down

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — State officials say it's a case of good news for North Carolina shrimpers but bad news for the state's oystermen.

Connel Purvis, director of the state Marine Fisheries Division of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said North Carolina oyster catch probably would be down this year. Reasons include poor law enforcement, lack of proper management, pollution of waters and coastal development.

On the other hand, the forecast is good for shrimpers. A heavy second shrimp crop was expected to be ready to begin harvesting in about a week.

Purvis said the late crop should last until Christmas, provided water temperatures and saline levels remain favorable.

The estimated 5,000 shrimpers in the four-county southern fishing region of New Hanover, Brunswick, Pender and Onslow counties have already enjoyed a better year than the oystermen. And the good year comes despite stiff competition and the fact that some of the best shrimping waters have been closed.

State and marine officials are also blaming the poor oyster catch on an increase in clam production. Fishermen say clam digging disturbs the oyster beds, burying small oysters and killing them.

But it's not a case of permanent bad news for oystermen, although some oldtimers say the days of good oystering are over. Purvis pointed to state efforts to re-seed oyster beds and relocate the oysters from polluted to clear water, plus a new state three-inch minimum size for commercial oysters.

State records indicate that 83,249 bushels of oysters were reported by shellfishermen last year, with a total value of $547,000.

The reported poundage was the largest in four years, but reflected only half the amount taken in 1965.

Hampshire Hog Event Planned

Nearly 300 Hampshire boars and gilts will compete for top honors at the National Southeastern Hampshire Meat Hog Conference on November 16 and 17 at the Wayne County Fairgrounds, Goldsboro.

Leading off conference events will be the type discussion and judging contest, at noon on Friday, November 16. The open gilt show begins at 2 p.m., followed immediately by the boar show.

A commercial pork producer educational seminar leads off activities at 8 a.m. on Saturday, November 17. The sale of boars and open gilts begins at noon on Saturday, and concludes conference activities.
