Threaten Hostages If Rescue Attempted

By The Associated Press
Iranian demonstrators today threatened to execute about 60 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran if the U.S. government tried to rescue them. Meanwhile, Iranian Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan resigned and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told his Revolutionary Council to take over the government.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said at mid-morning that the administration still did not intend to use military force to free the embassy hostages.

Powell would say only that President Carter held an unscheduled meeting on the crisis with his senior foreign policy advisers at the White House beginning at 8 a.m. EST.

Asked about the death threat, State Department officials had no official comment. "You're dealing with a mob. It's not surprising that some of them would say that," one official said. "Any military or non-military attempt by the U.S. or its agents in Iran to free the American spies held as hostages in their embassy will cause their immediate execution," the demonstrators said in a broadcast message.

A West German radio broadcast from Tehran also said other Americans, employed by private U.S. firms in Iran, were being rounded up by armed Iranians and taken to the U.S. Embassy grounds.

The U.S. government had ruled out any military intervention, fearing this would endanger the hostages.

America's chief representative in Iran, Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen had been negotiating with Bazargan's government at the Foreign Ministry since Sunday when the demonstrators seized the embassy and demanded the extradition of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now hospitalized in New York. The U.S. government refused to meet the demand.

The demonstrators at the embassy also threatened Laingen today, telling him to come out "from your hiding place" and surrender as soon as possible "because your secret wireless contacts with Washington will be of no help."

Hassan Tabatabai, an official of the premier's office in Tehran said Bazargan, who has headed the government since the successful conclusion of the Iranian revolution last February, resigned because of Khomeini's escalating anti-American campaign. He cited "developments over the past few days as well as Bazargan's physical tiredness."

Tehran Radio quoted Bazargan's letter to Khomeini as saying: "With the greatest of respect this is humbly to state that in pursuance of frequent explanations offered in the past and (because of) interference, instances of obstacles being created, of opposition and of differences of views (making) it impossible for me and my colleagues to carry out their duties and continue to shoulder responsibility, and since in these crucial and historic conditions the salvation of the country and bringing the revolution to fruition cannot be achieved without unity of expression and of management, I hereby tender my resignation so that all affairs may be brought under the command of the leadership in any manner deemed appropriate or so that volunteers, who enjoy coordination, may be assigned to form a government."

BAZARGAN RESIGNS — Iranian Premier Mehdi Bazargan, right, appears with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini at a news conference in February, during which Khomeini announced Bazargan was his choice for the top government spot. Non-Programmed Costs Require A Shift Of Funds

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Longevity pay for professionals and non-professionals in the city school system, as well as a one-shot $200 bonus, both directed by the North Carolina Legislature, has required shifting of funds to provide approximately $20,000 for these non-programmed costs.

In a report to the Greenville City School Board at its informational meeting for November held Monday night, Superintendent Glenn Cox explained that the longevity pay is applicable to supervisors and administrators after the completion of ten years employment, with a percentage increase based on succeeding five year increments; and that for teachers, the longevity increases begin after the completion of 15 years employment, with a similar five-year period increment of percentage increases. The longevity pay is part of the regular salary.

Cox also reported that for the first time this year the longevity scale applies to non-professionals — persons employed as secretaries, janitors, maids, etc. This translates to about $3,500 in payments to the non-professionals.

Also this year, Cox reported, the legislature voted an across the board bonus of $200 to both professional and non-professional employees on the payroll as of November 1 who had been on the payroll on November 1, 1978. Payment of this bonus to personnel amounted to more than $16,000 for eligible personnel.

This sum, Cox noted, had not been counted on at budget preparation time last year, with the result that it had been necessary to shift funds in a budget amendment.

In reply to a query from member Dr. Jon Tingelstad, Cox said that the longevity pay was cumulative for any employee who had worked previously in a state employment position of any nature here or at another location.

— Capital Outlay Budget — In another report, Cox mentioned that preliminary planning for the 1980-81 capital outlay budget is already underway. Items to be budgeted in this budget fall into three major categories — acquisition of property and large construction or renovation; items of equipment for the schools, with indications of whether requested items will be new equipment or replacement for old equipment; and motor vehicles, to include school buses, activity buses and other vehicles.

Cox said that in the preliminary planning, people involved in school operations were being contacted so that input could represent all levels, not just the top planning staff.

— Graduation Requirements — Due to legislative action, the graduation "paper" given seniors this year will be of two types — one to reflect completion of all state and local requirements plus passing of the state competency test; and another type to be tendered graduates who passed all requirements, but did not successfully pass the competency test.

The difference in the two types of graduation "paper" will be that the word "Diploma" will be used for students who have passed the competency test, and the word "Certificate" will appear on the "paper" for students who did not pass the competency test.

Also this year for the first time, each graduate is to be provided a copy of his or her student transcript which will show subjects taken, grades achieved, and days absent during high school years.

— SAT Scores — A recently compiled report on achievement of seniors at Rose High School who took the SAT test reveals that both male and female students scored higher on the two part (verbal and math tests) than North Carolina and the South.

About half of the 397 seniors took the test, a standard one taken by students planning to go on to college.

In the verbal portion, the 193 students tested scored an average of 423. This compares with 393 for North Carolina, 410 for the South, and 427 for the national average.

In math, the same 193 students achieved an average score of 472, higher than state, southern and national averages. The average score for North Carolina is 426, for the South, 444, and the national average is 467.

The compilation also reveals that since the 1976-77 school year, the number of seniors at Rose taking the SAT tests has gradually decreased — with 224 taking it in 1976-77; 210 for 1977-78;

COMPLICATIONS — A cancerous lymph gland tumor in the neck of the deposed Shah of Iran has enlarged since his recent surgery and another stone has been found in a bile duct, says a spokesman for a New York hospital. His complicated medical condition would make it very difficult for him to get adequate treatment outside the United States. The Carter Administration rejected new Iranian demands to expel the Shah who may have to spend another four to five weeks in the hospital and may require further surgery. (AP Laserphoto)

Hunting Another Suspect

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

— The U.S. Justice Department, acting under orders from President Carter, is expanding its investigation of Saturday's slaughter at an anti-Klan rally as organizers of the demonstration prepare to mourn their dead.

Police continued to search for at least one more suspect and a white Ford compact, which was seen in a video tape of the shooting.

Meanwhile, 14 men charged in the shootings were ordered held without bond after a judge termed them "imminently dangerous to others in the community." A probable cause hearing was set for Nov. 20.

The men sang "Onward Christian Soldiers" and "God Bless America" outside the courtroom of Guilford County Chief District Judge Robert Cecil. They were led into court handcuffed together in pairs.

Twelve of the defendants face an additional murder count, police said, following the death Monday of another shooting victim, Dr. Michael Nathan of Durham.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said Carter had directed the attorney general to cooperate in the investigation, and the Justice Department had established a special unit to investigate the violence, dispatching two dozen FBI agents to the scene.

Ordinances Voted By City Council

By JOYCE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council held a public hearing on subdivision regulations, adopted several ordinances, and awarded contracts for several construction projects during a special call meeting Monday at 8 p.m.

Articles IV and V of the proposed Subdivision Regulations Ordinance were discussed, and Bobby Roberson, city planning director, noted a request from Greenville Utilities that they would like to be responsible for designing street lights, instead of getting an engineer. The utilities asked that they be responsible for the location of fire hydrants.

The new "Manual of Standard Designs and Details" is almost completed, and will be adopted then. The manual will be a guide that all engineering firms and developers in town can use. Connally Branch, president of Greenville Homebuilders Association, recommended that Articles IV and V not be adopted until further study. No resolution was made considering this ordinance.

"An attempt to find one standard for the builder to use as a guideline is the purpose of the ordinance, and not an attempt to place hardship on any builder," said Mayor Percy Cox.

A public hearing was conducted on the proposed amendments to the Zoning Ordinance relative to outdoor advertising. The changes made in the ordinance were read, and a discussion followed. Discussions and questions relating to the changes were aired by the planning staff and members of the city council. City Manager Ed Wyatt led the discussion.

John Baggett, president of Naegele Outdoor Advertising, addressed the council, pointing out how the changes in the ordinance would affect his company. "I feel setbacks are very unreasonable. If our signs are set back to the building structure, we'll be in direct competition and our signs will not be seen," Baggett said.

Councilman John Howard led the discussion relating to the requests of Baggett. Howard gave an illustration relating to spacing outdoor advertising signs (1,000 feet spacing on either side of the street). The positive and negative arguments were heard and considered by the council.

Mickey Herrin, attorney representing Russell Oliver Outdoor Advertising, addressed the council about the effects the proposed ordinance would have on his company. He asked what city the ordinance was modeled after, and it was learned that the ordinance was modeled after the one in Raleigh. The

Predict Food Prices Will Rise, Profits Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Profits for the food industry should decline next year even though consumers will probably be paying at least 8 percent more for food, the Agriculture Department predicted today.

The forecasts were made public at the department's annual farm-economy outlook conference and were more detailed than those released Monday.

In its forecast, the Agriculture Department said consumer food prices probably would climb another 8 percent next year but could hit nearly 11 percent if the winter were harsh or there were problems with crops.

At the same time, food industry profits should decline after retailers enjoyed two of the best years of the 1970s, officials said.

"Profits in the food industry are expected to decline slightly in 1980, especially if there is a slowdown in economic activity. Food manufacturers' profits are likely to decline most, while increased competition from discount and volume food stores is expected to have a negative impact on food retailers," department economist

Kenneth R. Farrell said.

Food prices this year are expected to run about 11 percent higher than those in 1978.

Almost 75 percent of the added cost to shoppers in 1980 would be due to higher labor, fuel and other expenses for the firms that process, transport and market the raw food farmers produce, the forecast said.

Most of that would come from expected 10 percent increases each in employee wages and benefits, packaging costs and freight rates, it said.

A breakdown of the projected 8 percent rise shows the food industry accounting for 6 percent, higher farm prices for 0.4 percent and higher prices for fish and imported foods for 1.6 percent, the department said.

The Agriculture Department said most of the 1980 food-price surge would come after June when pork and poultry producers reduced supplies to recover losses. Record production of those meats is holding down both food and farm prices now, Farrell said.

The 8 percent forecast assumes an inflation rate next year of 10 percent, Farrell said.

Weather Favors New Housing Development

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Favorable weather continues to aid the construction progress on the new mid-rise housing development for the elderly, located on a site between E. Third and E. Fourth Streets.

Joe Laney, executive director of the Greenville Housing Authority, reported Monday night that the construction contractor is "still on schedule" and Laney noted that "if the weather holds, he should remain on schedule." The director pointed out that the first floor concrete on the west end of the facility was poured slightly ahead of schedule and the contractor should be moving the flyway forms from under the first floor soon.

According to Laney, the plumbing, electrical and heating work for the new complex is being "roughed" in now. Overall progress becomes more evident as the project leaves the ground level phase and "out of the mud," the official added.

The Authority is hopeful that the June of 1980 construction timetable will be met for the five-story complex, Laney said.

In other business on a brief agenda, Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs for the Authority, reported that three temporary vacancies existed among the 642 units operated by the agency during October. It was explained that the vacancies do not reflect a month-long period without occupancy but only exist during a change-over and maintenance period from one tenant to another.

The Authority has 100 percent occupancy monthly, with a waiting list of over 400 persons who are seeking admission to public housing.

Average rents in the six housing areas, according to Mrs. Streeter, included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $77.65; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $90.29; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $88.87; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $82.45; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $58.72; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $78. Overall rent average for October was $81.15, the tenant affairs director said.

During the month, the staff purged the waiting list of applicants who are interested in living in public housing, she said.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast for today into early Wednesday over portions of California, Oregon and Nevada. Seasonable temperatures will prevail elsewhere. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
True autumn weather with dry, cool air should continue across the Tar Heel state today before a cold front moves in late tonight.
A high pressure centered in New England and covering the East Coast continues to bring the fair weather.

But a cold front in the mid-west should move rapidly east and cross the state tonight. The front should spread a few more clouds but showers are not expected.

The lows tonight should range from the upper 20s in the north-west mountains to around 50 on the outer banks.

Wednesday, another large high pressure system behind the front will bring another blast of cool, dry air and north-westerly winds. Clear, cool weather should continue into the latter part of the week.

Highs Wednesday should be mostly in the 50s inland to the 60s along the coast.

Highs Monday ranged from 58 at Raleigh-Durham and Asheville to 67 at Wilmington.

Overnight, clear skies and light winds allowed temperatures to plunge to near freezing in parts of the Piedmont and probably into the 20s in the mountains.

Refuse Rehear Mandel Case

BALTIMORE (AP) — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals announced today it would not rehear the mail fraud and racketeering convictions of former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel and his codefendants, the U.S. Attorney's office confirmed.

That means the convictions will stand, pending a possible appeal by the defendants to the U.S. Supreme Court.

City Council...

proposed ordinance for Greenville is the most stringent one, according to the two sign company spokesmen. Raleigh's ordinance stipulates 500 feet spacing on both sides of the street.

"A thousand feet is tough as far as the businessman is concerned," said Herrin.

The mayor pointed out that his concern and the council's responsibility is to do what's best for Greenville, yet he did not want to make matters difficult for the businessman.

Oliver said his main concern is with the spacing of the signs. The council reached a workable agreement regarding the 1,000 feet, and both companies agreed to live with it.

Setbacks were another problem for the council and the sign company owners. A proposal was made to amend the ordinance so the company could go before the Board of Adjustment to seek relief concerning setbacks if needed. The board could make proper adjustments to meet special needs of the sign company involved.

"A compromise is needed to prevent working a hardship on the sign company and to protect the owners of the adjoining property," said Howard.

Susan Nobles of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, addressed the council stating that setbacks concerning on-premise signs can block out off-premise signs.

She asked the council to consider the possibility of a new business locating on that same property where an on premise sign is located. That would create another problem for the sign company, and the company would have to find another space to lease.

The ordinance was amended; and after the city attorney Louis Singleton read the amendment with the changes, it was adopted. The ordinance was adopted as rewritten, and a move was made to refer it to the Planning and Zoning staff to study whether it wanted to add additional zones in which outdoor advertising could be placed.

The council proceeded to adopt an ordinance to annex Red Oak, Oakdale and adjacent properties and to grant bids to the companies for construction projects.

Hastings Ford was low bidder on seven Police patrol vehicles. The bid on pipe for the Chestnut Street Community Development Project was given to N.C. Products.

Contracts for traffic signal equipment for 14th, Fleming and Tyson Streets were granted to Traffic Engineer Supply Company, and on landscaping project for the Fifth Street and Evans Street parking lot, was awarded to Farmville Fountain Nursery.

An amendment to the 1979-80 Greenville Utilities Commission budget was adopted and the application by Burroughs Wellcome for renewal of a mobile home permit was approved.

The council granted a request to the Optimist Club for waiver of the privilege license requirements in order to sell Christmas trees.

A public hearing is scheduled for Nov. 20 to consider Articles VI-IX of the proposed Subdivision Regulations Ordinance.

The council granted Carolina Country Day (formerly Pace Academy) a waiver of the privilege license requirements to operate a resale shop at 915 Dickinson Avenue.

Blue Mold Loss High

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Blue mold has resulted in the loss of about 4 percent of the total value of the North Carolina flue-cured tobacco crop this year, according to state agriculture officials.

That translates to about $38.4 million in losses to farmers as a result of the fungus that this year attacked thousands of flue-cured and burley tobacco fields from Florida to Canada.

The season's losses due to blue mold are about $4 million greater than those from all other diseases combined.

"All diseases combined reduced the value of the crop an estimated 7.62 percent and cost growers $72.9 million," said Furney A. Todd, extension plant pathologist at N.C. State University.

Blue mold, which normally attacks tobacco seedlings, first appeared in North Carolina in 1931. It has reappeared each spring except in 1978 when no outbreaks were reported.

Todd said the cool, wet spring this year provided favorable conditions for movement of the wind-blown spores believed to be responsible for the epidemic.

"This kind of weather also provided conditions favorable for disease buildup and damage in most states and areas. In general, control methods for field attacks were not available to growers for the 1979 crop year," Todd said.

A national blue mold symposium for tobacco scientists, extension specialists and industry people is scheduled for Dec. 4 in Raleigh. It will be hosted by N.C. State's Department of Plant Pathology.

Shutdown For Nuclear Plant

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — A unit of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick nuclear plant automatically shut down Monday, the company reported.

Unit One shut down about 7:30 a.m. when technicians were performing routine maintenance. Company spokesman Mac Harris later said the reason was a malfunction in the feed water control system.

The unit is the same one that shut down Oct. 19 when an increase in radioactivity was recorded in the unit's steam lines. It was restarted Oct. 23.

Found Guilty On Tax Counts

NEW BERN — A U.S. District Court jury yesterday found Mary Best Atkins of 1804 Battle Dr., Greenville, guilty of preparing false and fraudulent income tax returns for others for the years 1973 and 1974.

A spokesman for the U. S. Internal Revenue Service said the jury found Ms. Atkins guilty on four counts of a 10 count indictment. She was found not guilty on the other counts.

Ms. Atkins is employed by the Pitt County Board of Education as a third grade teacher at the Chicod Elementary School. Federal Judge F. T. Dupree Jr. delayed sentencing until December 3, in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

The maximum penalty on each of the felony counts is three years imprisonment, a $5,000 fine, or both.

During the trial, seven witnesses testified that Ms. Atkins listed deductions and exemptions on their income tax returns which were totally false and did so without their knowledge.

The effect of this, the IRS spokesman said, was to inflate their refunds.

Subsequent audits of the returns resulted in additional taxes ranging from $130 to over $400, plus interest.

Investigation of the cases was conducted by the Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS.

FOCUS

Value Added Tax

Rep. Al Ullman of Oregon, has a plan that could add another tax to those Americans now pay. He has proposed that a value added tax be applied to most of the goods consumers buy. A value added tax is a kind of sales tax based on the increasing value of goods while they are being manufactured. Ullman believes a value added tax would more fairly distribute the tax burden. The tax would increase the cost of most goods by about 10 percent. To allow for this, Ullman has proposed a $130 billion cut in other taxes such as income and social security. Hearings on Ullman's tax plan are scheduled to begin in Washington tomorrow.

DO YOU KNOW — What important House committee does Ullman head?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Cardinal John Cody is the archbishop of Chicago.

ANNIVERSARY COUPLE. . . L. B. "Brack" and Minnie Kinlaw are pictured at home in Ayden.

Kinlaw Marriage Success Of 70 Years Is 'Learning To Put Up With Each Other'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN

AYDEN — L. B. and Minnie Eure Kinlaw have been married 70 years. Their success formula or recipe is — "By learning how to put up with each other and happiness with my husband and children," she said. "I married a mighty good girl," he said.

Kinlaw, at age 94, walks several blocks every day "because it's good for me, since I can't jog. I've been hilly and hearty all my life. Good health has been an outstanding asset." Sometimes he walks downtown to shop and pay bills. He also stops in at his former insurance office, which he owned about 45 years. The business is now operated by his son, Warren, and a daughter, Mrs. Neva Edwards, works there.

Mrs. Kinlaw celebrated her 90th birthday Oct. 14 and a big family dinner celebrated the event. "We had 31 here for the dinner." She still prepares breakfast and supper, doing a minimum of cooking. "Of course, Brack helps. He washes dishes and I boss." "I think it's best to let her be boss," Kinlaw added. Kinlaw was from a family of nine children. His baby sister, Lola Powers, 84, lives in Lumberton. Mrs. Kinlaw is from a family of four children and her youngest brother, J. B. Eure, 85, is still practicing law in Whiteville.

The couple met at church, which was pastored by her father, a Methodist minister. "We did our courting by horse and buggy if we went to ride. We also courted at the mill pond dam. Brack and my sister would go out on the pond and row around in a small boat while I watched from the dam. Before we were married, I waited for Brack to go to school at Trinity Prep School," said Mrs. Kinlaw. He also attended business school in Raleigh.

L. B. "Brack" Kinlaw and Minnie Eure were married in 1909 in Columbus County, eight miles from Whiteville. Her uncle, Hilliard M. Eure, also a Methodist minister, performed the ceremony at his parsonage home in Evergreen. "I didn't have a wedding dress, I had a wedding outfit — a navy blue coat-dress with a matching hat. I will never forget it — the coat was almost down to my knees. Brack told me to wear a long dress because he didn't want people to think he was marrying a child," she recalled.

Mrs. Edwards asked her mother why she chose to wear navy blue for her wedding. "Because they say navy blue was good luck and I liked it," said Mrs. Kinlaw.

The newly married couple left the parsonage and went to the train depot to travel to Lumberton to spend the night with the Kinlaw family. The next day, they traveled to Selma by train and spent the night there, leaving the next day for New Bern and then on to Cash Corner in Pamlico County, where Kinlaw was working — clerking and keeping books in a general store, J. C. Muse and Company.

"We lived there the next year and then came home at Christmas," continued Mrs. Kinlaw. After visiting their families for a while, the couple moved to Wilson. They moved to Ayden in November, 1917.

The Kinlaws have five children living out of nine, including Mavis Byrd of Erwin, and Joyce Hudson, Shirley Dennis, Neva Edwards and Warren Kinlaw, all of Ayden. They have 17 grandchildren and nine great grandchildren.

"I don't recall anything unusual happening in our lives," said Mrs. Byrd, "our family was happy and close-knit."

Brack and Minnie Kinlaw celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary this past Sunday, Nov. 4.

Until recently, chlorophyll was thought to be the only thing capable of photosynthesis. However, Dr. Walter Soekenius of the University of California, San Francisco, found in the Dead Sea a salt-loving micro-organism called Halobacterium halobium. It yields a purple pigment that is the only other known biological substance that can turn sunlight directly into energy, according to National Geographic.

Dear Abby

Can't Defrost Her Icy Heart

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When I was 6, my mother, a widow, died. The state put me in an orphanage and found a family to legally adopt my two little sisters. They were 3 and 4 at the time.

I want to establish contact with my sisters, but so far I've had no success, even though I was able to contact their adoptive mother. My sisters are 19 and 20 now, and they live with their adoptive parents in another state.

First, I wrote to their mother, explaining who I was, and asking her permission to write to my sisters. My letter was never answered, so I called and asked if she ever received my letter. She said, "Yes, I got it, and why don't you mind your own business and quit trying to mess up my daughters' lives?"

I told her politely that I didn't want to mess up their lives. I just thought that since we were blood sisters they might want to know me because I remember them and still love them very much.

She said, "Please leave them alone and find somebody else to love!" Then she hung up on me.

Abby, I am a respectable married woman. My husband advised me to forget about trying to see my sisters, but he agreed to abide by your decision.

DEPRESSED

DEAR DEPRESSED: Your sisters should be allowed to decide whether they want to be contacted by you. The agency that arranged their adoption can contact them. Seek their assistance.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from a patient who was left undressed on a hard examination table for an hour reminded me of how I once taught a fancy Park Avenue gynecologist a lesson.

He left me on the examination table, in a chilly room, for what seemed an eternity. I was naked except for a short hospital gown slit up the back.

I finally got off the table and wandered out to his waiting room (which was filled with patients) "looking for the doctor."

What a picture I must have been: half naked, barefoot, with this short gown, open in the back, flying in the breeze! Well, a nurse grabbed me and escorted me back to the examination room, and you can bet the doctor was there in less than a minute.

STILL LAUGHING

DEAR STILL LAUGHING: I'm laughing, too. But I don't recommend that method of getting the doctor's attention.

DEAR ABBY: I was particularly interested in the letter from the man who loved his parents, but it tore him up to visit their graves, so he never went. His sisters and brothers went often, which made him feel guilty, so he asked you if he should go for "appearances' sake." Thanks for saying, "The poorest reason to do anything is for 'appearances' sake." I agree.

My sister and I fell out over an argument we had about how much to spend on our mother's casket.

When we were shown a $6,000 coffin (with an innerspring mattress!) I burst out laughing, even though I was sad and heartsick at the time.

My sister was all for putting our whole family into debt to give Mama an expensive funeral just so people wouldn't think we were cheap. We had some bitter words about it. We finally settled on a nice coffin for $1,500, which was plenty.

I've left instructions with my family to spend the absolute minimum on my funeral. When a poor family goes into debt for a fancy funeral, it's usually because they feel guilty about the way they treated their loved one while he was living, and are trying to make it up to him after he's dead.

The Carnage Settled Nothing

All North Carolina is repelled and horrified over the shooting in Greensboro during the weekend which left five dead and nine more injured.

The tragedy involved an attack by a group of Ku Klux Klansmen at a rally of the Workers Viewpoint Organization, which had issued taunting statements aimed at the Klan.

The mayor of Greensboro, Jim Melvin called it an "isolated, senseless, barbaric act of violence and it will be dealt with as such."

It was all of that.

Gov. Hunt said, "I express my deepest regret over this incident and I have pledged my strong support to local officials in bringing about a peaceful and just solution."

Indeed everything should be done to see that justice is done in this terrible tragedy.

It may be cliché to say that this confrontation does not in any way represent the great majority of North Carolinians. In this case, however, it should be said.

The Workers Viewpoint Organization involves only a tiny segment of our society. The Ku Klux Klan is no force at all in our state today, except when remnants of it surface in occurrences such as the one of the weekend.

Hate groups must have a common enemy to hold their cause together. The Workers Viewpoint Organization and the Ku Klux Klan had each other, and a terrible tragedy was the horrifying result.

The carnage was revolting to virtually all the citizens of our state. If we can get anything out of such a senseless confrontation, it should be the reaffirmation of the principle that nothing is ever really settled by violence.

Opportunity For New Day In S. Korea

South Korea, following the assassination of President Park Chung-hee, now finds itself seeking new leadership.

Few will deny that President Park's administration has been repressive, but at the same time the country has made remarkable economic progress.

Prosperity has no great value without personal freedom, however. Hopefully the future leaders will be more concerned with human rights.

THIS AFTERNOON

No. 2 Race Eyes Future

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Rather than issues for the future of the state, the developing race for lieutenant governor appears to be most directly concerned with leadership for the future of the state.

North Carolina tradition has developed that the number two office-holder will make a bid for the Governor's Mansion. Given the high salaried and well-staffed fulltime nature of the post in recent years, which allow plenty of time for building an election campaign, and the high visibility factor of presiding over the State Senate and over numerous ribbon cuttings and other political and civic events, the occupant of the lieutenant governor's office obviously has the edge in the battle to move up.

As the two main contenders prepare to slug it out between now and the May 6 Democratic Primary, the over-riding consideration is that the winner will most likely be the leading contender for the governor's office in 1984.

Governor

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green has already made it plain that his interests lie in that direction. He seriously considered running for governor in 1980, challenging Gov. Jim Hunt in his bid to win a second term. Discouraged by Hunt's well financed and organized leadership of the Democratic Party machinery, Green even considered changing to the Republican Party to make his bid. Those around him know that his ultimate goal is to become governor. They also see 1984 as his last chance.

House Speaker Carl Stewart candidly admits that his future hopes also center around the governor's office.

"It is not unreasonable to assume that if I am elected lieutenant governor, and if I am pleased with my service in that post, then I would be interested in running for governor in 1984. The people already know this, and I am not going to patronize them by obscuring this fact, or trying to deny it while keeping the door open as they say.

"That's one of the trouble with politicians these days they all too often talk under the heads of the people rather than to them or over them", Stewart says.

Along the same candid line of thinking, Stewart concedes that it may well be possible that choosing a lieutenant governor in 1980 is choosing a governor to replace Jim Hunt whose national political ambitions could conceivably take him out of North Carolina before a second four-year term is finished. Either way, Stewart says, "You are choosing leadership for the future."

Endorsement

Does Stewart expect a Hunt endorsement, then, tantamount to running the two as a team? While welcoming the friendship and closeness which exists between the two politically and philosophically, Stewart still wants to maintain his distance. One reason is that the lieutenant governor presides over the Senate and should be separate from the executive; and another is that Stewart wants to avoid the potential image of a Hunt-Stewart versus Scott-Green contest.

BILL NOBLITT

There is also the danger of being "smothered" by the governor's race, which, along with Presidential politicking during the same period, will no doubt distract voter attention to the number two contest.

Besides the leadership element, the campaign will center around differences in personality, style and philosophy. "This race doesn't engender a lot of emotion or political passion. It has not in the past been characterized by discussion of the issues," Stewart says.

HOW TO ENJOY THE POLITICAL GAME!

End Of The Cold War

Cant phrases have a way of creeping unnoticed into common usage — before you know it, you will find otherwise intelligent men saying something on the order of "a wall must separate church and state," and suddenly little children aren't permitted to sing Christmas carols. It has been so with the End of the Cold War, have you noticed? So thoroughly entrenched is the End of the Cold War, that it has generated an off-spring, which is called Bringing Back the Cold War. So that those who, e.g., find the SALT II treaty deficient are Folk Who Want to Bring Back the Cold War. To be charged with wanting to bring back the Cold War is something on the order of being charged with wanting to bring back cancer. In fact we never licked cancer, and the Cold War goes on, notwithstanding America's new posture in that war. We are: the punching bag. It is the objective of current diplomacy that we should swing happily from the beam, absorbing everything the challenger, who trains rigorously and never misses a session, can dish out to us.

"Anti-communist rhetoric," Walter Lippmann sighed 10 years ago, "has become vulgar." For men of high sensitivity, the repetition of almost anything can become tedious. Take the noblest couplet Shakespeare ever wrote, say it out loud 10 times per day, and on the 10th day you will go berserk if you hear it. By the time the Second World War was over, sensitive men would clamp their hands over their ears, rather than hear again the opening theme of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, which had been played throughout the war as the Victory Symphony ("Ta-ta-ta-taaaa. Ta-ta-ta-taaaa...")

So it is with anti-communist rhetoric. Are we expected every day to dwell on communist-sanctioned cruelty? I mean, isn't it too much? Suppose we had been asked to reflect on the last moments of every single one of the six million Jews annihilated by Hitler: Could the human sensibilities sustain such an ordeal?

Yet something on just that order, with the obvious limitations imposed by space and knowledge, was attempted by Alexander Solzhenitsyn, and he came out with a masterpiece, "The Gulag Archipelago." The library of tragedy could live for centuries on the collection he has accumulated there, but the vital point is the Gulag is an unfinished story. Gulag exists this very moment. Nothing Solzhenitsyn describes under Stalin is any worse than what millions of Cambodians are subjected to under Pol Pot, and are now being subjected to under the Vietnamese, who are using the useful instrument of hunger as a categorical substitute for individual torture.

And in Havana, there are other men — RIGHT NOW — who are living in such conditions as Huber Matos lived in for 20 years. Huber Matos's story got one-day treatment in the press. So — one more victim! Another victim of a sadism so extraordinary as,

Panic Factor Fades

By STEPHANIE S. COOKE

Associated Press Writer
Drugs and booze. They've been a headache to educators ever since they crept into schoolyards during the "permissive" days of the 1960s.

But these days the disciplinarians say they've got better remedies, and they're not panicky or afraid to use them.

"The panic that used to surround it (drugs and drinking) is not there any more," says Robert DeJulio, chairman of the counseling department at Newton North High School in Newton, Mass.

"It's one of the many developmental problems facing children. It's just one more problem we have to deal with," DeJulio says.

Newton police say marijuana use at the suburban Boston high school is as "big or bigger" than ever, but school authorities are less nervous because they have found ways to deal with "toking" teens — ways that weren't always available in the '60s.

The remedies range from counseling programs to police surveillance and frequent suspensions, and teachers and administrators say they're not opposed to taking a hard line.

"One thing we're finding is there are more severe suspensions that are drug-related," says Massachusetts Education Commissioner Gregory Anrig.

"I think we're in a period where there is more emphasis on discipline. Educators are saying to students: 'We're putting a halt on the '60s.'"

Although federal officials report increased use of marijuana among teen-agers, alcohol is still the No. 1 problem. Statistics compiled by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare show that among the 12-to 17-year-old age group, 28 percent have tried marijuana at least once, compared with 53 percent who have used alcohol.

Most school authorities don't like to emphasize the discipline they employ. Instead, they point to "preventive" education courses and in-school counseling.

To deal with the marijuana problem, some New England school authorities have called on police to stake out schoolyards and to film students between or after class. After the camera catches students believed to be selling, buying or smoking dope, the students' parents are called in to view the film.

Police say they're interested only in arresting the heavy pushers and frequent users. The idea of the film is to stress the seriousness of the situation, however, and not to make arrests.

Most authorities agree a film would not hold up as evidence in a courtroom because it would be hard to prove the substance being used was marijuana.

In Warwick, R.I., a city of about 90,000, police also occasionally pose as students — "mostly to get to the people who sell it (drugs)," says Police Capt. Buzz Nelson.

Camera surveillance was also tried last year in Portland, Maine, in the small western Massachusetts town of Lenox, and in Marshfield, Mass., on Boston's South Shore.

The movie method is controversial because some say it is an invasion of privacy. Advo-

To the editor:

After having attended an educators' conference in Boston last week, I must admit to being comforted and happy to return home to Greenville. With so many educational, cultural and personal opportunities available in Boston, what a shame the people have resorted to rioting, etc. as a means of expressing their concerns. Rev. Jesse Jackson so aptly summed up the protest as due to an overemphasis on the B's of education — browns, blacks, busses, biases, and (back to the) basics — without first emphasizing the A's — attention, attendance, atmosphere, attitude, and achievement rewards. As a parent and educator from Greenville, I feel that we are supporting the A's, and that we have undertaken the alphabet in sequential order.

Greenville is ahead of Boston in many ways. Here a gradual change in dress, hairstyles, standards, and support for elders by the young people has been evident. No longer is being ugly (without the option of being beautiful) a sign of individuality. At Back to School night, student interest, incentive and increased academic achievement were noted by many teachers at Aycock as a sign of the changing times. A "new breed" of student was recognized.

Self respect and ambition are surely to be results for students who are taking advantage of their educational opportunities. Personal rewards and even better teaching will come from teachers who feel their efforts are appreciated. Our educational program is successful, and our students even learn how to drive!

I am proud to be a resident of Greenville.

A Recession's Absent Factor

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Because of your failure to cooperate, the recession has been delayed. But it will come, and with a vengeance. Your penalty for obstinacy is a deeper downturn than was originally expected.

That sums up the attitude of many economists who are a bit chagrined at having forecast a recession for right now. Some even went further, saying the recession had come, and now they cannot erase the verdict.

What actually has happened to the economy this year is a mixed bag of advance and retreat, expansion and contraction. Consistency has been the absent factor in the economy and, you might say, in forecasts too.

In a report to top corporate customers two months ago, the Chase Manhattan Economics Group commented: "It is now clear that the U.S. economy finally turned down some time in the first half of 1979."

Leif Olsen, chief Citibank economist, went on record in May with the opinion he wouldn't be surprised if a recession hadn't already begun. Albert Cox, president of Merrill Lynch Economics, said in August that "a recession began to unfold right after last Christmas."

Most embarrassed of all is the Carter administration, which in July forecast both double-digit inflation and a recession for the year and then, in August, revised and deepened its gloomy recession outlook.

Those who have made such forecasts aren't defenseless. Just what is a recession isn't clear and probably never will be, and so it is entirely possible for somebody to maintain and defend his or her own definition.

In fact, if there is such a thing as a one-quarter recession their correctness might be conceded, because total output of goods and services shrank by eight-tenths of a percent in the second quarter.

Whatever, those forecasts or estimates were made suspect by figures showing a decided expansion in the third quarter. In September alone the index of leading economic indicators rose almost a full point.

Shortly after the third-quarter numbers were announced, the National Bureau of Economic Research, arbiter of when a downturn is or is not a recession, cancelled a November 7 meeting with the media.

"We feel that the meeting would be more useful for you and for us if it were held after additional data on the state of the economy become available," said Donna Zerwitz, the bureau's press officer.

Since the National Bureau is the Emily Post of such matters, there seems to be no "official" recession so far this year, no matter what the forecasters, including the administration, have said.

Regardless, everyone seems to agree that they and their neighbors and business and the federal, state and local governments are in a sort of economic bind that for lack of another word they call recession.

It might not accurately describe economic conditions, but it most certainly does suggest their economic concerns. Recession means worry, and people are worrying their heads off.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Connally's Dixie Ambush

By ROWLAND EVANS

and ROBERT NOVAK

COLUMBIA, S.C. — John B. Connally's southern ambush of Ronald Reagan's presidential bandwagon is being planned not for the highly publicized March 11 Florida primary but three days earlier in a South Carolina election that has been overlooked nationally.

Working quietly, Connally is planning a media extravaganza costing nearly $400,000 (out of the $600,000 spending limit for the primary election). The goal: to exploit a potentially grievous Reagan blunder in permitting South Carolina's Republican delegates to be picked by primary instead of convention.

For Connally, what happens in this state's first Republican presidential primary could prove to be his making — or breaking. If front-runner Reagan heads south after winning opening rounds in the Iowa caucuses and the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primary elections, Connally must hurt him in Dixie. If he fails to do that, Connally will be finished and Reagan all but nominated.

Tackling Reagan in Florida never did look all that promising. Nor do primary elections, also March 11, in Alabama and Georgia offer anything like the same impact as South Carolina on March 8. This home state of Sen. Strom Thurmond has the Deep South's strongest Republican party.

Thus, when the South Carolina party decided in August to hold a presidential primary and tacked on a $1,500 entrance fee to keep out adventurers, Connally was handed a perfect setting to ambush Reagan.

With no competing Democratic primary and no party registration so that every voter can vote, the turnout could be as high as 100,000 (compared to 35,000 in the 1974 Republican governor's primary). Connally could draw well from conservative Democrats — better than Reagan. Yet, ironically Reagan helped set the primary stage himself.

Reagan's reasoning was based on fear of the immense party influence of Thurmond and former Gov. James B. Edwards. Reagan operatives worried that in precinct and district caucuses followed by a party convention, Thurmond and Edwards might swing delegates to Connally. Their party power would then undercut Reagan's dedicated precinct workers.

With both Thurmond and Edwards refusing to make early endorsements of Reagan, the simple way to short-circuit their influence would be a primary election. That exactly coincided with the hopes of South Carolina party officials. They figured that the expected stream of Democrats into the Republican primary could generate major political dividends.

Reagan's operatives failed to foresee that Connally would seize on the new winner-take-all primary. Reagan has wound up risking a dramatic statewide loss to Connally with major national overtones merely to protect himself against a no-win, no-

Strength For Today

OUR PARISH

A retired businessman once remarked, "after being a church member for fifty years I have come to the conclusion that every Christian believer is a preacher and has his own parish."

This is a very valid observation. If our religion does not shine through our daily acts and make our homes, neighborhoods, and communities better places in which to live, then all devotion in the sanctuary on Sunday is in vain. The church at large has extensive mission fields to which it sends its workers, and we should support this enterprise. But every one of us stands at the center of a parish. We are the priests therein, bringing light not only, or chiefly, by our words, but by our actions.

St. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, said, "Ye are our epistle, written in our hearts, known and read of all men; being made manifest that ye are an epistle of Christ." So every Christian is a gospel, and a church, and a preacher.

White House officials had no immediate comment on Strauss' move or on the impending nomination of Linowitz.

Neither Strauss nor Linowitz was immediately available for comment.

Strauss served as chairman of the Democratic National Committee from 1972 to 1976. He was Carter's special counselor on inflation and later the president's special trade representative. He took the Mideast post last April.

Strauss will be replaced in the Middle East by Sol M. Linowitz, the source said. Linowitz has formerly served as a negotiator for the Panama Canal treaties, as ambassador to the Organization of American States and as chairman of the Xerox Corp.

On Carter's campaign committee, Strauss would join Tim Kraft, who will retain the title of campaign manager, and Evan Dobelle, who will continue as campaign chairman, the source said.

The source said Strauss, 61, a Dallas lawyer, would play a major role in fund-raising for the 1980 campaign.

Nine Refiners Are Accused

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department charged today that nine large refining companies may have violated oil price-control regulations by amounts totaling nearly $1.5 billion.

The department's special counsel, Paul Bloom, announced the issuance of "notices of probable violation," which allege the violations but are not conclusive findings. The companies will have an opportunity to respond to the charges, which stemmed from intensive auditing over the past 22 months.

Audits of other companies are due for completion by the end of this year and Bloom said more enforcement actions are expected.

The notices alleged that the nine companies tried to recover costs not eligible to be collected from consumers under federal regulations or which were not substantiated in eligible categories.

The largest allegation was charged against Mobil Oil, which the department said tried to collect $274,672,000 it was not entitled to.

Violations totaling $211,600,172 were alleged against Shell Oil. The other companies and the amounts of the charges against them were: Amerasia Hess, $88 million; Atlantic Richfield Co. (ARCO), $58 million; Chevron USA, $117.2 million; Conoco, $46,051,205; Gulf, $80,090,000; Standard Oil of Ohio, $179 million, and Sun Oil Co., $129,707,850.

U.S. Helpless In Iran Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration appears all but helpless as it works to protect the lives of an estimated 60 American officials held hostage by a mob of Iranian students in Tehran.

Administration officials are talking with the government of Iran, with other governments and with themselves in an effort to find a way to get the Americans out of the embassy safely.

But as long as the United States' overriding objective remains the safety of the hostages, the officials have few options.

Military strikes are impossible. "Since we don't have the Shadow or Superman, even to discuss the military option is a sure way to get their throats cut," one official, who asked not to be named, said of the hostages.

Diplomatic means are not promising. The government in Iran, which is subordinate to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his followers, is supporting the students' demands for the return of the ousted Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

The Iranians have offered only one solution: Return the shah to Iran, where his wealth can be confiscated and he can be put on trial for his alleged crimes against the people of Iran during his 37-year reign.

The administration has rejected that proposal, sticking to its position that the shah can stay in the United States while he needs medical treatment, but will have to leave when that treatment ends.

Administration spokesmen vehemently denied reports Monday that they had offered to discuss the shah's future with Iran in return for the release of the hostages.

Strauss To Switch Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. Strauss reportedly is ready to join President Carter's re-election campaign after serving six months as the president's special Middle East negotiator.

"He is coming over to the campaign to run the whole show," a campaign source who asked not to be identified said Monday night.

Strauss will be replaced in the Middle East by Sol M. Linowitz, the source said. Linowitz has formerly served as a negotiator for the Panama Canal treaties, as ambassador to the Organization of American States and as chairman of the Xerox Corp.

Field Goals, Turnovers Cost Miami

MIAMI AP — The Houston Oilers coaches were yelling angrily in the post game locker room, but the Miami Dolphins' locker room was quiet — an angry quiet.

Three field goals by Toni Fritsch and some costly Dolphin turnovers enabled the Oilers to escape the Orange Bowl with a 9-6 victory Monday night.

"We played good when we had to," Coach Bum Phillips said after the game. Suddenly, one-by-one, Phillips' assistants began shouting as they discovered their lockers had been stripped of watches, wallets and rings during the game.

"I've heard of poor losers but that beats everything," Phillips said.

The victory marked the fourth time this season a Fritsch field goal provided Houston's winning margin. He led the game with a 46-yarder to open the second quarter, broke the tie with a 48-yarder with 5:05 left in the third quarter, then opened a 9-3 lead with a 39-yarder just before the quarter ended.

"Toni, I think, is the best kicker in the league," Phillips said of the 34-year-old Austrian who has hit 15 of 17 field goals this season.

Rookie Uwe von Schamann belted field goals of 32 and 51 yards and was warming up for a potential game-tyer with two minutes left and the Dolphins at the Houston 20. But on second-and-7, linebacker Gregg Bingham picked off a Bob Griese pass at the 15 and returned it 54 yards to clinch the game.

Griese, under fire through most of what's been one of the worst slumps of his 13-year career, said: "Of course, that's the worst thing in the world that could have happened in that situation. I didn't plan it that way. Bingham just made a great play."

Houston quarterback Dan Pastorini, no stranger to criticism, agreed.

"It was one of those things: he had the guy open and made the throw. But Bingham gambled and made the interception. Knowing Bob Griese, he could make the same throw 100 times and it would not happen again," Pastorini said.

Griese's teammates weren't as quick to defend.

"We just choked up. We didn't challenge them with our play calling. We played a contender and we choked up. We played conservative instead of taking the challenge to them," said wide receiver Duriel Harris.

Harris set club records the previous week with 10 receptions for 180 yards but didn't catch a pass Monday while fellow wide receiver Nat Moore had just two receptions.

"I only got the ball thrown to me twice all night," Harris said. "I know what I can do to help this team, but if I don't get the ball I can't help. It's frustrating to work hard all week in practice for this."

"We took what they gave us — the short stuff to the backs.

They were double covering the wide receivers," an annoyed Griese said. "I'm getting tired of hearing grumbling from my own team."

Gary Davis, in the starting lineup while halfback Delvin Williams recovers from two broken ribs, fumbled twice: at the Houston 15 in the second quarter and at the Houston 48 in the final quarter.

"There's no excuse for the way I played. It really bothers me that I didn't do the job when I had a chance to," Davis said.

Ironically, Davis was the training camp roommate this year of fullback Leroy Harris until Harris was traded to Philadelphia. Harris fumbled twice in the Dolphins' 17-9 loss to Houston in a wild-card playoff game here last season.

Formidable Earl Campbell, slowed to 41 yards the previous two weeks as he recovered from a thigh bruise, gained 121 yards on 32 carries to become the first running back to break 100 yards against the Dolphins this season.

But overall, Miami's defense was solid, holding Pastorini to 25 yards passing and three times stopping the Oilers without a first down in the thrilling fourth quarter.

"Our defense played their game behind Pittsburgh in the AFC Central. The Dolphins, 6-4, fell a game behind New England in the AFC East.

Miami has yet to beat a team with a winning record.

"To get to where we want to go at the end of the season, we have to start beating some winning teams. Tonight was a good time to start," Shula said.

Alabama Widens Lead; Clemson Takes 18th, Deacons Are 20th

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Alabama widened its lead over runnerup Nebraska today in The Associated Press college football poll while Ohio State jumped past Southern Cal and Houston into third place and Baylor, Clemson and South Carolina cracked the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

The Crimson Tide of Alabama, winners of eight in a row this season and 17 straight overall after defeating Mississippi State 24-7, received 46 of 66 first-place votes and 1,290 of a possible 1,320 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Nebraska, which edged Missouri 23-20 on a field goal in the final 3½ minutes, received four first-place votes and 1,190 points. Last week, Alabama led the Cornhuskers 46-7 in first-place ballots and 1,235-1,176 in points with 63 voters participating.

Ohio State, fifth a week ago, surged into third place by trouncing Illinois 44-7. The Buckeyes, who have outscored their last four opponents 192-13, received eight first-place votes and 1,154 points. That was enough to push them past Southern Cal, which dropped from third to fourth with seven first-place votes and 1,151 points despite a 34-7 triumph over Arizona.

Houston, a 21-10 winner over Texas Christian, nevertheless slipped from fourth to fifth. The Cougars received the other first-place vote and 1,093 points.

Oklahoma moved up from seventh to sixth with 911 points following a 38-7 victory over Oklahoma State. Meanwhile, Florida State skidded from sixth to seventh with 897 points after needing three touchdowns in the final period to pull out a 26-21 triumph over unheralded Cincinnati.

Rounding out the Top Ten, in the same positions as last week, are Texas, Arkansas and Michigan. Texas defeated Texas Tech 14-6 and received 857 points, Arkansas totaled 818 points for a 34-7 drubbing of Rice and Michigan polled 748 points after a 54-0 rout of Wisconsin.

The Second Ten consists of Brigham Young, Pittsburgh, Notre Dame, Purdue, Washington, Auburn, Baylor, Clemson, South Carolina and Wake Forest.

Last week, it was BYU, Pitt, Notre Dame, Wake Forest, Purdue, Washington, Tennessee, North Carolina, Penn State and Auburn.

Baylor, idle last weekend, made the Top Twenty with a 6-2 record while Clemson crushed Wake Forest 31-0 — dropping the Demon Deacons from 14th to 20th — and South Carolina edged North Carolina State 30-28.

Tennessee fell out by losing to Rutgers 13-7 while North Carolina was beaten by Maryland 17-14 and Penn State bowed to Miami of Florida 26-10.

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Clemson linebacker Jeff Davis and Maryland lineman Greg Vanderhout have been named defensive players of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference, it was announced today.

Davis, a 6-0, 223-pound sophomore from Greensboro, returned an intercepted pass 17 yards for a touchdown only 16 seconds after Obed Ariri had kicked a 47-yard field goal to give the Tigers a 3-0 lead in the first quarter. Clemson went on to a 31-0 victory.

Davis also broke up two other passes and caused a fumble as the Tigers were the first team this season to hold the Deacs to under 14 points.

Vanderhout, a 6-0, 240-pound offensive tackle in Maryland's wide tackle-six formation, was credited with 20 tackles in the Terrapins' 17-14 win over North Carolina.

The Wilmington, Del., sophomore recorded 10 hits and 10 assists, including a quarterback sack for a loss of seven yards. Carolina's 14 points were also the lowest total they had amassed during the season.

Earlier, the panel of Atlantic Coast Sports Writers had named Virginia quarterback Todd Kirtley and Clemson lineman Chris Dolce as offensive players of the week.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

A's Again Appear Headed To Denver

NEW YORK (AP) — The sale of the Oakland A's to oil mogul Marvin Davis — a transaction that would bring major league baseball to Denver for the 1980 season — is in the works. The Associated Press has learned.

In 1978, A's owner Charles Finley attempted to sell the club to Davis, but a number of obstacles arose and the deal fell through. A knowledgeable baseball source said Monday those obstacles had been eased and the sale is virtually certain to be completed this time.

Indications were that Davis has begun assembling a management team for the club and that Al Rosen, former president of the New York Yankees, would leave his current post with an Atlantic City casino hotel to head the operation.

"I am flattered that anyone would consider me for an executive job in baseball," said Rosen.

A published report said Cedric Tallis, former general manager of the Yankees, would join Rosen in management of the Denver club.

The source said negotiations should be wrapped up some time this month, allowing the deal to be presented to the American League in December during the annual baseball meetings in Toronto.

Davis was reported in California and unavailable for comment.

Finley was asked twice for reaction to the prospective sale Monday.

The first time, he said: "No comment. The club is for sale. That's all I can say."

Later, he said: "I wish I could tell you it (the reported sale) was true, but there's no truth to the rumor whatsoever. There's nothing to that. I don't know where it originated."

"All I can tell you is, yes, I talked to Marvin Davis and his representatives some time ago and the entire situation depends on the possibility of working something out with the Oakland Coliseum with regard to the eight years remaining on the (A's) lease."

Jack Maltester, a member of the Coliseum board, said he hadn't heard anything about a sale.

In 1978 baseball apparently had reached a $3.25 million settlement with Oakland Coliseum management, freeing the A's for sale to Davis and movement to Denver. Part of the arrangement called for the neighboring San Francisco Giants to play a portion of their home schedule — as many as 40 of the 81 home games — in Oakland.

The agreement fell through when Finley refused to accept certain clauses which baseball insisted be included in the settlement, including a waiver of his right to sue the commissioner.

All of Finley's law suits have since been settled or dismissed.

The A's, however, have continued to falter at the gate. While baseball was attracting a record attendance of 43 million last season, the Oakland club drew just 306,763.

FSU Gives New Pact To Bowden

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Putting to rest rumors he was about to switch jobs, Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden has signed a five-year contract worth over $500,000 to stay on as head of the Seminole football program.

Bowden and Florida State President Bernie Sliger announced the agreement Monday. Bowden is to receive an annual salary of $52,000, a guaranteed annual profit from his weekly television show of $55,000 and an annual personal expense account of $10,000.

The total — the largest ever for an FSU football coach — is guaranteed to be at least $117,000 yearly and can exceed that if the television profits are higher than $55,000.

"I wanted something that would fortify me in the bad years because you're not always going to have good years," Bowden said. "This is it."

Bowden's salary is now $46,640 with an annual television guarantee of $30,000.

Bowden, who will turn 50 this week, agreed that if he takes a position with another school either he or his new employer will buy out the remainder of the contract.

"We look forward to a long happy relationship with the Bowden family," Sliger said. "I know of no better way to publicize your university than a successful athletic program. I think this adds to the university."

Bowden, a native of Birmingham, Ala., came to FSU in 1976. The Seminole program still was licking its wounds from the 1973 season when it finished with an 0-11 mark and the longest losing streak in the nation.

Things changed in a hurry. Bowden's first team went 5-6 and in 1977 Florida State burst back into the limelight with a 10-2 record and a win over Texas Tech in the Tangerine Bowl.

This season his squad is ranked among the top ten teams in the nation, sporting an 8-0 mark with aspirations of going to a major bowl game. Bowden had been mentioned as a coaching candidate at several other schools, including Louisiana State.

Bowden and university athletic officials said announcing the new contract should enhance recruiting.

"I just felt like I had to cut those rumors out," Bowden said. "Some of the high school kids didn't want to visit and we needed to do something."

A former West Virginia head coach, he had his 104th coaching victory with a 26-21 win over underdog Cincinnati Saturday, after FSU trailed 21-7 at halftime.

Asked whether he made up his mind before or after last week's game, Bowden said, "About halfway I knew I wanted it (the contract)."

Bowden earlier signed an insurance annuity with the FSU athletic association, redeemable at the end of 10 years for $100,000. He also said he and the boosters group had an "understanding" about stadium and other athletic improvements not mentioned in the contract.

Sloan Unhappy As Tech Foe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Georgia Tech's first basketball game as a member of the Atlantic Coast Conference is less than two months away, and it's Norman Sloan who's bemoaning the fact.

Never mind that Dwayne Morrison will have goose bumps and butterflies when Dec. 29 rolls around.

GLAD IT'S OVER — Chief Warrant Officer Donald K. Robinson and wife, Margaret, leave Coast Guard's Reserve Training Building 56 after court-martial jury of seven officers handed Robinson the minimum sentence — a written reprimand and loss of 200 seniority points — for actions taken when the cutter Cuyahoga collided with the freighter Santa Cruz II. The sentence came for conviction Saturday of dereliction of duty. (AP Laserphoto)

Cancer Society Has Memorial Gifts Plan

"When cancer takes the life of someone close to us, a relative, a fellow-worker, or a friend, the loss is painful. In the sorrow that follows such a loss, there is the wish to honor the departed. There is also the deep need to strike back at this disease — to do something so that others may live," says Belinda Lee, the Greenville chairperson of the Memorial Gifts Committee of the American Cancer Society.

The Pitt County Unit for the American Cancer Society is finding that memorial gifts received are becoming increasingly important as more families and individuals realize that they can contribute in the name of a loved one toward research in hopes that a cure will be found.

By contributing to the American Cancer Society, groups and individuals can acknowledge a remembrance in memory of those who died of cancer. These gifts support cancer research in hospitals, laboratories, and clinics; provide fellowships for doctors and scientists; and help train the individuals needed to carry out this research. Contributions aid in supporting public education's role in year-round programs that alert men and women to cancer's early symptoms. Those now stricken with cancer will also receive help from these contributions.

The American Cancer Society is deeply grateful to families, groups and individuals who are using this means of assisting the Society in expanding the counter-attack on cancer, according to Mrs. Lee.

Those desiring to make a tax deductible contribution should contact a member of the Memorial Gifts Committee. The Committee members are: Mrs. James Bennett, Pinecrest Drive, Farmville, N.C. 27828; Mrs. Sylvia Brown, 401 Highland Avenue, Greenville; Mrs. Thomas Craft, 400 Oakdale Drive, Ayden, 28513; Mrs. Belinda Lee, 107 Syme Circle, Greenville; and Mrs. Robert S. Weeks, Main Street, Bethel, 27812. Contributions should be accompanied by the full name of the deceased, the name and address of the family member to whom the memorial card should be sent, and the donor's own full name and address. Those desiring additional information should contact the Pitt County Unit of the American Cancer Society, P.O. Box 377, Greenville. Phone 756-9510.

when he was 17 years old.

But despite his age and relative inexperience, Shumaker has found that voters and his opponent in this city of some 7,800 residents have taken him seriously.

$210 Million For Cambodia

By JOHN BAUSMAN
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States and other U.N. members have pledged $210 million in emergency aid to Cambodians threatened by starvation and disease inside their war-torn country and in refugee camps in Thailand.

The United States reaffirmed its $69 million donation at a day-long conference Monday, but U.N. officials declined to give a breakdown for other countries, saying they were made in various forms and covered different time spans.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said of the $210 million pledged, about $160 million would go to Cambodia, where some 2 million persons face starvation and epidemics. He said most of the remainder would go to Cambodian refugees in Thailand.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told the conference the U.S. contribution included $30 million pledged by President Carter, $9 million in aid for refugees in Thailand and $30 million in additional aid now going through Congress.

"Some issues transcend politics," Vance said. "This is one of them."

"Clearly there are differences among governments on the political situation in Kampuchea (Cambodia). But all of us must put those differences aside as we ask all the authorities involved in Kampuchea to turn away from calculations of political and military advantage and turn to the overwhelming human issue that is before us."

Outside the U.N. headquarters, more than 100 demonstrators from all over the United States also called on the United Nations to take urgent steps to prevent the Cambodian refugees from starving.

Tanker Rocked; New Explosions

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Another series of explosions rocked a burning oil tanker in the Gulf of Mexico overnight as oil seeping from its compartments continued to drift toward shore.

The Burmah Agate has been afire since Thursday, when it collided with the freighter Mimosa near the entrance to the Galveston Ship Channel.

Two more bodies of crewmen washed ashore at Galveston today, bringing the confirmed death count from the crash to 13. Another 19 sailors are missing and presumed dead.

Periodic explosions have hampered efforts to control the continuing fire on the Burmah Agate. Fireboats have maintained a round-the-clock water barrage.

The latest round of explosions again caused the fireboats to scatter, but no injuries were reported.

On Monday, Coast Guard Chief Petty Officer Richard Griggs said Navy equipment would be put in place at Galveston "in the event we have to deal with a lot of oil. There is a lot of oil still on board that tanker."

The Navy equipment is the same that was used against oil seeping from a blown-out Mexican well in the Bay of Campeche. That well continues to leak oil into the Gulf, and several South Texas beaches have been stained by it.

Oil from the Burmah Agate, which carried 400,000 barrels of light crude oil, stretched 100 miles on the surface of the Gulf of Mexico and washed ashore in four places on the Texas coast during the day, including one four-mile stretch at West Beach. Officials said the stubborn fire aboard the ship prevents them from boarding her and stopping the oil flow.

The bidding:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass
Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Sometimes just watching the cards the opponents play will enable declarer to ferret out even the most subtle booby trap planted by an ingenious defender.

The bidding was quite orthodox. South's response of one heart was an attempt to locate a 4-4 major suit fit. Despite the fact that he held only three hearts, North correctly raised to two hearts because of his ruffing value and good trumps. Now South's jump to three no trump described his hand perfectly—game-going values, a balanced hand and only four hearts. If North held four-card support, he would obviously have corrected to four hearts.

West made his normal opening lead of the jack of spades, dummy played low and East won the king. The spade return knocked out declarer's only entry to the long club suit in dummy. He came to his hand with the ace of diamonds and ran the ten of clubs, West following with the seven. East could see no way to defeat the contract if he took the queen, so he ducked smoothly. If declarer could be induced to repeat the finesse, the club suit might be shut out.

Declarer continued with the four of clubs and West contributed the eight. Just as he was about to insert the jack of clubs from dummy, declarer paused to consider the situation. From the fall of the cards it became evident that West had a club higher than the eight. Therefore, repeating the finesse would be necessary only if West had started with the Q-9-8-7 of clubs. But had that been his original holding in the suit, he would also surely have covered the ten to insure a trick in the suit.

So reasoning, declarer rose with the king of clubs and cashed the ace. He was rewarded for his perspicacity when East's queen fell under the ace and the contract rolled home. East's boldness ended up costing him a trick, but against a declarer of lesser analytical talent he would have had a glorious story to tell the boys in the back room.

Cartoonist Al Capp Succumbs

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Al Capp, the cartoonist who brought to life for millions of readers the world of Dogpatch, U.S.A., while earning a special place in American folk culture, is dead at the age of 70.

His comic strip "Li'l Abner," which Capp used to lampoon hypocrisy and political hot air with hillbilly bluntness, was laid to rest two years ago, after 43 years in the world's newspapers.

Capp, who died Monday, created the dim-witted and big-footed Li'l Abner; blonde, busty Daisy Mae; scrappy, pipe-smoking Mammy Yokum and the all-giving Shmoos.

He made American institutions of the bumbling detective Fearless Fosdick, Kickapoo Joy Juice, Lower Slobbovia and Sadie Hawkins Day — the day the maidens of Dogpatch chased after the town's bachelors.

Capp, who suffered from emphysema, died in Mount Auburn Hospital near his Cambridge home, his attorney, Alvin Hochberg said. Capp's death came almost two years to the day after his retirement.

"A humorist has one duty — to be funny," he said on his retirement. "Some are funny about kids, some about dogs, some about mothers. I chose fraud. Whatever was fraudulent, I attacked."

Started in 1934 in the Depression, "Li'l Abner" became an immediate success, spreading to more than 900 newspapers around the world. The strip became the basis for a hit Broadway musical in 1956. Capp earned $500,000 a year at his peak of fame.

"In his prime, he was one of the two or three greatest cartoonists this country has ever produced," said David Manning White, a Virginia Commonwealth University professor and specialist in the comics.

"When conservatives were fraudulent, I attacked them," Capp said. "The liberals loved me. The conservatives maintained an icy silence. Then liberalism became too suffocatingly smug. I attacked them."

"The conservatives continued to maintain an icy silence. But the liberals didn't. They rose from one end of the country to the other and denounced me."

"It was a shock to realize that graduates of Smith and clergymen knew language like that."

With the changing times, newspapers began dropping the strip. Capp retired "Li'l Abner" on Nov. 13, 1977.

Born Alfred Gerald Caplin in New Haven, Conn., on Sept. 28, 1909, Capp fell from an ice truck when he was nine and was run over by a streetcar. He had to have his left leg amputated and was outfitted with a wooden leg.

He landed his first full-time art job with The Associated Press in New York. He stayed six months before becoming an assistant to Ham Fisher, creator of the popular boxing strip, "Joe Palooka."

Capp is survived by his wife, Catherine, his daughter, Julie Ann Cairrol of Cambridge, his son, Colin Cameron Capp of Little Rock, Ark., and eight grandchildren.

Funeral services will be private.

but something happened the other day that set me back.

My old pal Jake had stopped by, as he usually does on Sundays, to eat dinner and watch a Sherlock Holmes movie. Basil Rathbone solved the mystery of the Scarlet Claw, and, while the Jambalaya simmered, we talked.

"How's real estate?" I asked. "Makin' more money than the law allows," replied Jake, as he always does, even when he's a month behind on rent.

"How's TV?" he asked. "There ought to be some good stuff on. It's sweeps month, isn't it?"

"Sweeps month?" I asked, astonished. "How do you know that?"

"Heard it on TV," he replied. I changed the subject. I didn't want to hear about counterprogramming.

Jake was right, though, this is sweeps month, when the two biggest TV ratings services measure local audiences. The Arbitron and A.C. Nielsen reports are used by local stations to set their advertising rates for the entire business quarter.

Naturally, these ratings sweeps are very important to network affiliates, and, of course, networks like to keep their affiliates happy. So sweeps periods are usually crammed with big, expensive, attractive television aimed at boosting ratings.

There are two general attitudes toward the quarterly sweeps. One is that TV viewers are the losers in these intense competitions, forced to choose one hotshot program over another.

The opposite view is that viewers gain by the choice, that, at least there is a choice between good shows. And, according to this argument, the program passed on now will be viewed as a repeat.

As evidence, both sides usually point to last February's sweep period, which was the classic sweeps. On one evening in the midst of the intense competition, viewers had a choice between "Gone With the Wind" on CBS, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" on NBC and "Elvis" on ABC.

(Jake solved the problem by borrowing a set and watching "Gone With the Wind" and "Cuckoo's Nest" at the same time, explaining, "Elvis" was made for TV.)

No such luck (good or bad) this time, though. There will be a lot of "special" programs on this month, but, unless you paid attention to it, you might not notice that this November was anything different from any other month.

Fresh country sausage.
From our family to yours.

No matter how great our sausage seems to us, only freshness will prove it to you. And the Neese family would like you to know how to get proof of that freshness everytime.

Because we've got nothing to hide, we put our plump sausage in a thin parchment wrapper. That way, you can see whether the meat is pink and rosy.

And while you're looking through our wrapper, we hope you'll also read it. You'll find that we make "whole hog sausage", using all the hams, bacon, shoulders and loin. And absolutely no preservatives. We also want you to know that we use no citric acid—a chemical that makes meat look fresh even when it isn't.

All you get is good, fresh country sausage, made from a family recipe more than fifty years old. And you get it soon after we make it, because we only ship to nearby towns and country stores.

Neese. We've got nothing to hide. And in this day and time, that's something we can all feel a little better about.

Carmakers Report Sales Decline For Last Month

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp., dealt another financial setback in October when its sales fell almost 40 percent. It again will offer rebates to encourage motorists to buy cars.

Other U.S. carmakers reported Monday that sales were off percent from a year ago during the month when the big U.S. automakers introduced their 1980 models.

Chrysler revealed a new rebate program of $300 a car just before it announced its sales results.

The rebates, retroactive to Nov. 1, apply to the first 100,000 buyers of 1980 and 1979 models to stock and cover all domestic truck and car lines, except the subcompact Plymouth Horizon and Dodge Omni.

In an earlier effort to reduce inventories, Chrysler offered $400 cash rebates from Aug. 18 to Sept. 30. The program cut inventories from about 80,000 to less than 25,000, but cost more than $100 million, Chrysler said.

Chrysler's sales were down 39.3 percent for October — and 56 percent in the last 10 days of the month, according to company reports, while the five producers, which are pushing their 1980 models, together dropped 21 percent below their October levels of a year ago.

The only good news came from American Motors Corp. where sales rose 36.6 percent from 12,425 to 17,632 and from Volkswagen of America, which was up 293 percent from 4,634 to 18,935.

General Motors Corp. was off 22 percent, from 528,096 to 430,195; Ford Motor Co. dropped 19 percent, from 231,444 to 193,719; and Chrysler fell from 107,327 to 67,689. For the month as a whole, sales were 728,170 against 883,926.

For the last 10 days of October GM fell 22 percent and Ford fell 16 percent from the same period a year earlier.

Importers sold an estimated 171,000 cars during October, down from 172,000 in October 1978, to bring total industry sales to 899,170, a 19 percent drop from 1,030,582 in the same month last year.

The imports took 19 percent of the market in October, reflecting the usual shrinkage in market share as the new U.S. models came out, but well above the 14 percent share of October last year.

Chrysler, the nation's No. 3 carmaker, announced late last month that its third quarter losses were $460.6 million, the largest deficit ever for a U.S. corporation. The company has lost $721 million so far this year, and expects a 1979 deficit of $1 billion.

The Carter administration has urged Congress to approve up to $1.5 billion in loan guarantees to Chrysler, which would be required to raise an equal amount in private financing.

In an important move in that direction, the carmaker said Monday it had secured a $930 million line of credit in a one-year agreement through 195 banks for its financing unit, the Chrysler Financing Corporation.

United Auto Workers union members are ratifying a contract that would give $403 million worth of concessions, including delayed wage increases, to help keep Chrysler afloat.

Honor Five for Service

ECU News Bureau

Five students in East Carolina University's parks, recreation and conservation program were honored recently for their aid in constructing a recreational facility for the Walter B. Jones Alcohol Rehabilitation Center.

The students, Sam Bland of Atlantic Beach, Cathie Choate of Hillsboro, N.Y., David Diehl of Greenville, Greg Grimes of Siler City and Bernice McWhorter of Lenoir, were recognized at the center's 10th annual Patient-Care Reunion and open house for their creation of a "Serenity Trail" on the Center grounds.

The students designed and laid out the half-mile-long trail, which features a picnic area, two small bridges, a gateway, a boardwalk across a marshy area and signs to identify plants and trees along the route.

The project was coordinated by Dr. Raymond Busbee, director of parks, recreation and conservation at ECU.

Approximately 250 persons attended the reunion and open house, at which the featured address was given by Dr. Clinton Brewett, professor of psychology and assistant to the chancellor at ECU.

ECU faculty pianist Rosemary Fischer performed on the program, and special recognition was extended ECU's music therapy department, which has maintained a cooperative arrangement with the Walter B. Jones Center.

Local Business Is Leased For Vocational Use

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center has leased the Beacon Piano Company facilities for the purpose of beginning a training program for the legally blind and handicapped in piano tuning, repair and refinishing.

Harold Taunton, formerly of Beacon Piano, will serve as instructor and customer tuner.

The tuning service, just as the welding class for handicapped individuals at the Vocational Center, is made possible through the cooperation of Vocational Rehabilitation and special CETA funds.

In addition to the two new programs, individuals are now being trained as truck drivers, fork lift operators, industrial housekeepers and packaging and assembly persons at the Center. Along with the training program for piano tuning, the Center will offer new and rebuilt pianos, picture frames and refinished furniture for sale at 1503 Hooker Road.

Gary Alford, job developer for the Center, will work with local industries in placing Center trainees.

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtednesses, without property repossession or creditor harassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

Election Day For Many Of Big Cities

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

Voters in more than one-fourth of the nation's big cities elect mayors today while Kentucky and Mississippi pick governors in elections expected to be felt in 1980's presidential and congressional contests.

At stake is control of political machinery that could play a prominent role in the outcome of next year's races.

The Democrats were expected to keep their edge in the city halls, which are the base of their grassroots strength and one of the key reasons they are the country's largest party.

In the two statehouse races, Democrats also were favored although the GOP has mounted strong challenges to regain Kentucky and to give Mississippi its first Republican governor since Reconstruction.

New Jersey and Virginia, traditional bellwethers, are electing state legislatures in other tests of the Republican Party's efforts at rebuilding through emphasizing state and local races.

Kentucky and Mississippi, along with Louisiana, which will elect a governor in a Dec. 8 runoff, all were keys to the "Solid South" base of President Carter's 1976 victory. If Republicans were running these states next year, there could be trouble for any Democratic presidential nominee.

The national Republican Party signaled the importance it places on the Mississippi race with its $150,000 contribution to GOP nominee Gill Carmichael's campaign. Presidential contenders Ronald Reagan and John Connally have campaigned for him.

However, his opponent, Bill Winter, has a formidable political base. He is a former lieutenant governor, state legislator, state tax collector and state treasurer.

In Kentucky, former Republican Gov. Louis Nunn is running against Democratic nominee John Y. Brown, a millionaire businessman who is married to Phyllis George, the TV personality and former Miss America.

Nunn was elected governor in 1967, when the Republican ascendancy in Kentucky was at its peak. Kentucky now has a Democratic governor and two Democratic senators. Nunn says he is stronger politically now than he was in his first race, but the polls favor Brown.

The incumbent Democratic governors in Kentucky, Mississippi and Louisiana are all barred by law from seeking new terms.

Mayors are being elected in 49 of the 169 cities with populations of more than 100,000. Most of the 49 have Democratic mayors, and the party is expected to retain its edge, although the GOP's prospects are good in several instances.

However, the Democrats are favored to retain control in Philadelphia, the nation's fourth largest city and the biggest electing a mayor today. Mayor Frank Rizzo, after losing a fight to change the city charter to allow him to run for a third term, is heading for retirement.

Democratic nominee William

Green has promised "new leadership and new direction."

Republican David Marston, the former U.S. attorney who fought his removal by the Carter administration in the midst of his investigation of Democratic congressmen, has a strong following. But two-thirds of Philadelphia's 1 million voters are Democrats.

Rizzo has derided the election as offering voters "an awful choice."

In San Francisco, Democrat Dianne Feinstein, appointed mayor last year after George Moscone was killed in a city hall shooting, is seeking the mayor's job for the third time. She ran unsuccessfully in 1971 and 1975.

There are a host of other candidates on the non-partisan San Francisco ballot, and a Dec. 11 runoff is likely.

Cleveland's combative Mayor Dennis Kucinich is seeking reelection after narrowly surviving a recall last year. Republican Lt. Gov. George V. Voinovich led Kucinich by 11,000 votes in the non-partisan primary Oct. 2.

In Boston, Kevin White is seeking an unprecedented fourth term. Both White and State Sen. Joseph Timilty, his opponent after the non-partisan primary, are Democrats.

Former congressman Donald Fraser, who gave up a safe House seat last year after 16 years in Congress, lost the Democratic primary for the Senate, and is trying now for a comeback as mayor of Minneapolis.

How Fraser fares against former three-time Republican Mayor Charles Stenvig could indicate a lot about the future of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party, which suffered disastrous losses in 1978 after the death of founder Hubert H. Humphrey.

In Houston, Mayor Jim McConn is favored for reelection over a crowded field, but a Nov. 20 runoff is expected. The big interest in Houston is in city government changes that should give that city's minorities their first seats on the council.

Other cities electing mayors today include Baltimore; Indianapolis; Phoenix, Ariz.; Columbus and Toledo, Ohio; and Miami.

Morgan Admits He's Concerned

WASHINGTON (AP) — John East, who has decided to run for the U.S. Senate next year, is virtually unknown to North Carolina voters. But the fact that he has the endorsement of Republican Sen. Jesse Helms has incumbent Sen. Robert Morgan worried.

East, a Republican science professor at East Carolina University since 1964, plans to challenge Democrat Morgan next year. So far no other Republicans are opposing him for the nomination.

Morgan's taking him seriously because of Republican Helms endorsement, which means financial backing. During his 1978 campaign, Helms raised $7 million, nearly 10 times as much as Morgan raised during his 1974 election.

Morgan said the money he expects East to get from the Helms organization could be a factor in the race.

"They'll pour a lot of dollars in there," said Sally Swift, a campaign worker for Morgan. "When you've got the money, you can be put before the public."

East, 48, who apparently shares Helms' conservative convictions, says he will take issue with such Morgan stands as the Panama Canal treaty and Soul City.

Observers say he may also try to identify Morgan with the Carter administration on such issues as its anti-smoking program and efforts to further desegregate the state 16-campus university system.

Morgan says he disapproves of both programs, but East said he shares the blame because he has "embraced Carter."

East, is a native of Springfield, Ill. He has been confined to a wheelchair since he contracted polio while serving at Camp Lejeune with the Marines in 1955.

In 1966 he ran unsuccessfully for Congress against Walter Jones and in 1968 he drew 48 percent of the vote in his unsuccessful bid to unseat Secretary of State Thad Eure.
