By The Associated Press
Iran, striking a new blow in an economic war with the United States, decided today to withdraw billions in Iranian government money deposited in American banks. But President Carter immediately ordered a freeze on those funds.

hostages at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran will remain captive until Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is deported. Bani Sadr reportedly said, however, that some might be freed by the weekend if found "innocent." Bani Sadr reportedly said, however, that the 36 non-American hostages — believed to be mostly Indian and Pakistani — embassy employees — might be freed by the weekend. In another development, northeastern Iran was rocked by a powerful earthquake today, and rescue workers said at least 500 persons were killed. Bani Sadr announced at a Tehran news conference that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime had decided to withdraw all of its funds from U.S. banks and re-deposit them in banks of nations "friendly" to Iran. He said the funds amounted to $12 billion, but reporters in Washington were told it was closer to $5 billion. Bani Sadr declared the withdrawal would seriously erode the already shrinking value of the dollar on world markets. After an emergency meeting of U.S. Treasury officials, White House press secretary Jody Powell announced that Carter had acted to "block" official Iranian assets — including deposits of the government of Iran, Central Bank and "other controlled entities" in U.S. banks and their foreign branches and subsidiaries.

Utilities Workers Voted Pay Boost

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Greenville Utilities Commission last night, as expected, voted to give workers a 5 percent cost-of-living pay increase beginning in January, and modified the employee benefits offered to utility workers to bring them in line with benefits offered to employees of the City of Greenville.

Under the plan, a seventh step is to be added to the pay scale to insure that employees will receive the same amount of money per year as they would have under the old longevity program which provided for a maximum seven percent longevity payment. Other changes in the benefit package approved last night bring the life insurance and hospitalization programs offered to commission employees in line with city plans.

increase in participation by the commission so that commission employees having family coverage will pay the same rate as city employees with family coverage. At present, city employees with family coverage pay $22 per month for hospitalization insurance, while commission employees pay $42 per month.

Powell's statement said the exact amount of money being blocked is not known, "but there is no reason for disturbance in the foreign exchange or other markets." Bani Sadr, asked today whether his letter to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim asking for a Security Council session on the crisis represented a softening of the Iranian position, told Tehran Radio: "No, our position remains unchanged."

Commission members, just as the city council has done, voted to give employees the percent cost-of-living increase, rather than use the funds for merit pay hikes.

In the life insurance area, the commission will pay the full cost of life insurance for utility workers, just as the city does for its employees, where in the past, the commission has paid only one-half the life insurance costs.

In other business last night, the commission first approved, then rescinded the approval of an installment pay plan for water and sewer main and acreage fees, deciding to give more study to the proposal and possibly take action on the plan at the December meeting.

Under the proposal considered last night, the applicable water and/or sewer tap fees and water and/or sewer main fees, plus the sewer acreage fee, must be paid at the time of application, unless the total fees are in excess of $500, and the customer elects to pay the fees on an installment plan.

As part of the change in the employee benefit package, commission members voted to adopt a 4.5 percent maximum longevity pay plan similar to the City's plan, with the reduced longevity payments beginning on December 1, 1980 and salary adjustments for "no-loss" to begin on December 5, 1979.

Changes in the hospitalization insurance benefits include a move from the present $50 deductible policy to a $25 deductible plan — just as the city's plan — and an in-

If the customer elects to pay on an installment basis, the total fees may be spread over a 12-month period, provided the customer signs a note and deed of trust. Under the proposal, interest at the rate of one percent per month would be charged against the unpaid balance. Commissioners approved a 10,000 foot long easement from the Seaboard Coast Line Railroad Co. — from Greenville Boulevard to the Winterville substation — at a one-time cost of $16,735. A transmission line to the Winterville substation will be located along the easement.

Reagan Kicks Off His Presidential Campaign

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan is kicking off his presidential campaign by advocating statehood for Puerto Rico and calling for the transfer of many federal functions to state and local governments. Reagan made the proposals, part of what he called his "new agenda" for the 1980s, in a speech Tuesday night formally declaring his candidacy for the 1980 Republican nomination.

Reagan's entry brings to 10 the number of Republicans seeking the job. The one-time film star is following up his formal declaration with a five-day, 12-city campaign swing through most of the early primary states after a news conference today in Washington. A videotape of Reagan's speech was seen in most parts of the nation and the candidate delivered a live version to a packed hotel ballroom. Both Reagan's call for granting Puerto Rico statehood and for transferring certain functions of the federal government to states and communities echo proposals voiced in 1976. President Gerald R. Ford, the last Republican in the White House, proposed statehood for Puerto Rico shortly before leaving office. Reagan now says: "I favor statehood for Puerto Rico, and if the people of Puerto Rico vote for statehood in their coming referendum, I would, as president, initiate the enabling legislation to make this a reality." Puerto Rico's Feb. 12 primary election will be the first in the nation.

Reagan also advocated closer ties with Canada and Mexico, including establishment of a North American accord, and permitting officials of these neighboring governments to sit in on high-level U.S. policy sessions. Reagan's call for a shift in federal programs away from Washington reiterated the basic thrust of a controversial proposal he made in the early stages of his unsuccessful 1976 effort to unseat Ford.

Reagan, who is making his third bid for the presidency, also called for an across-the-board tax cut, increases in defense spending, removal of remaining price controls on energy, increased use of nuclear power "within strict safety rules," and rejection or delay of President Carter's proposed "windfall-profits" tax on the oil companies. Carter wants the tax to accompany his program for gradually lifting price controls on domestically produced oil. The levy would be on the extra revenue, not profits, flowing to the oil companies from decontrol over the next decade.

Afterwards, he brought members of his family onto the stage with him to a standing ovation and then mingled with some 1,000 supporters. The show, co-sponsored by "The Flue-Cured Tobacco Farmer" in cooperation with "The Peanut Farmer" magazines, aims to help farmers select the proper equipment and procedures for their particular needs.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

HOTLINE APPEALS

EMERGENCY FUND YARD-BAKE SALE

Members of the Pitt County Department of Social Services staff are conducting a yard-bake sale to raise funds for the Department's Emergency Fund. They ask that the general public donate items for the sale. These may be left at the Department prior to Saturday or brought early Saturday morning.

The sale will be held Saturday beginning at 9 a. m. in the parking lot of the Social Services Department, located at 305 Plaza Drive, Greenville. The public is urged to support this project, said Margaret Moore of the DSS.

WANTS TO ORGANIZE CAP

Col. Ed Casey, USAFR, has asked Hotline to appeal to persons who may be interested in helping organize a Civil Air Patrol (CAP) unit for the Greenville-Pitt County area.

"CAP offers too many programs to detail in this space," he said. "Two of the more important ones are Emergency Services and the Cadet Program. Emergency Services (Search and Rescue) in 1978 logged 24,800 flying hours, located 469 search objectives, and was credited with saving 91 lives while participating in 892 Air Force-authorized search and rescue missions. The CAP program is designed to develop and motivate young people to leadership and responsible citizens — ages 13 through 17."

Air Force liaison personnel from the North Carolina CAP Wing will be in Greenville later this month to brief interested persons, Col. Casey said. He said persons of all ages, male and female, and of all professions are needed and will be welcomed. He suggested that those wishing further information call Pauline Stancil, 752-0655.

Ski Goggles Are A Must

Now that the temperature has approached or dropped past the freezing mark in most parts of the state, the ski season can't be far behind.

Ski goggles are a must on the slopes as a shield against bright sunlight and inclement weather, according to NCSU agricultural extension specialists.

They come in various shades for various situations, such as gray for bright sun for yellow for haze. They may also be ventilated to prevent fogging.

If goggles do become cloudy, however, there is an economical way to stop the fog buildup: rub a film of soap on the inside and outside and then polish with a clean, lintless cloth or paper toweling. Or, you can purchase anti-fog sprays.

ELLEN PECKHAM'S TOMATO SALAD

A friend of mine began making this after living in Spain. 1-3rd cup loosely packed oil-cured olives (about 18)
Olive oil
Sliced tomatoes
Fresh lemon halves or quarters, seeded
Coarse (kosher or pickling) salt

Cut olives away from pits and turn into a 1-cup container — you can use a wide-mouth 8-ounce preserving jar. Add enough oil to fill jar. Refrigerate for at least overnight or store as long as you like. Several hours before serving, remove jar from refrigerator; as soon as oil liquefies, arrange tomato slices, slightly overlapping, on a serving plate. Spoon a generous amount of the oil over them. Squeeze lemon juice — as much as you like — over tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt to taste. Let stand at room temperature (preferably in the sun if tomatoes are firm) until serving time. Garnish with some of the olives (sliced) from the oil.

Note: Oil-cured, dry-pack olives are available in 6 1/4-ounce jars (1 and 1-3rd cups loosely packed) at supermarkets.

Buy-A-Bride: $25,000 Down

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 24-year-old woman with an important decision to make. I met a very wealthy man who wants to marry me. He bet me $25,000 to $1 that I would NOT marry him before Christmas Day 1979! (That means if I marry him, he has to give me $25,000.)

I fly with a big airline and met him three months ago while flying. He's a perfect gentleman, great company, and knows how to treat a woman. He refuses to tell me how old he is, but he looks about 75.

He says he can give me everything I want but sex, and if I marry him he wouldn't mind if I got myself a boyfriend as long as I was home every day by 6 p.m.

He's been married five times and has three grown children and seven grandchildren. He says all I have to do is sign an agreement stating that if he dies while we're married, I am entitled to only $1 million. His family gets the rest. Also, if HE wants out of the marriage, HE will pay me $10,000 for every month I've lived with him. But if I want out, I get nothing. In the meantime, he agrees to provide me with a car of my choice, all the clothes I want, and $1,000 a month pocket money.

How does this deal sound to you?

IN THE CLOUDS

DEAR IN THE CLOUDS: It sounds like a business deal. I suggest you retain your own lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: Many people write to you complaining because they sent a gift "six months ago," and never received a thank-you for it.

Why don't these people telephone (or write) to the person they sent it to and ask if the gift was ever received? (If it was, and they neglected to acknowledge it, they deserve to be embarrassed.)

There is always a chance that the gift was NOT received.

I work in the department of the post office where packages are undeliverable because the address a) has "fallen off or b) has become smudged and cannot be read or c) is incomplete, wrong or illegible. And, worse yet, there is no return address on the package.

Also, when a package is returned to the store because it cannot be delivered, the card may read, "From Uncle Ted and Aunt Mary," and they have no way of knowing WHO bought it!

Abby, with the holidays coming up, tell your readers to PLEASE include their full names and addresses INSIDE and well as OUTSIDE of every package. And don't sit around for six months wondering if the gift ever got there. HELPFUL

DEAR HELPFUL: Thank you for a valuable reminder.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to GOLFING GRANDPA whose wife requires sex to "relax" her the night before she plays golf:

My husband is a golfer, and he claims there are three rules to follow to assure him of a good score: no drinking, no sex, and plenty of sleep the night before.

I would like to ask GOLFING GRANDPA how HIS game is the day after he accommodates his wife to improve HER game.

Wedding Dress Sales Are Up

Top manufacturers of wedding dresses say their sales this year will be up 10-20 percent. One industry spokesman says that not only are total marriages on the rise, but there is a trend back to formal weddings.

The overall wedding industry has $12 billion in annual sales, say NCSU agricultural extension specialists. On an individual basis, this translates to an average of about $310 spent by the bride on her wedding gown, including veil.

Rush Dinner Held Recently

The Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha recently held a rush dinner at the home of Mildred Hecker. Guests were greeted and presented a miniature corsage by Barbara Woods and Mrs. Hecker, co-chairmen of the event.

President Linda Peele welcomed Frances Faust, Marge Mizer, Cheryl Adams and Pat Litteken. She gave a brief history of Epsilon Sigma Alpha and explained the international and state projects.

Chapter members explained local projects and duties of chapter committees. After a question and answer period, guests were invited to attend a model meeting to be held later this month at the home of Barbara Zicherman.

Until two years ago, the president also had power to seize foreign assets, but now that can be done only during war under the Trading With the Enemy Act, or with specific approval from Congress.

The AFL-CIO is scheduled to elect a president tomorrow, and for the first time in the labor organization's 24-year history, the person elected will not be George Meany. Meany, 85, began work as an apprentice plumber in 1910. He went on to become the country's most powerful and widely recognized labor leader, representing the 14 million members of the AFL-CIO. When a Cabinet officer once asked him what an economic issue had to do with the workers, Meany replied, "everything that happens has to do with workers." National Book Week Marked American Education Week and National Book Week are both being observed this week — November 12-16.

Schools in the city are having students, and in some instances, parents as well, involved in a variety of activities focused on these two themes.

At Aycock Junior High School, the week's theme has been "More Books in the Home." Also on Tuesday, Mrs. Nan Shearin, science teacher, discussed the science fiction works of Isaac Asimov. On Friday, Mrs. Lee Hadden, Youth Services Librarian of Edgecombe County Memorial Library, will conduct a story telling hour. To observe Education Week, emphasis is on the topic "teach all the children." At Eastern Elementary Schools, events include the Thursday appearance of Dr. Norman Pendered of ECU, an author of books about Blackbeard. On Friday, Billy Stinson, art teacher at Rose High School, will entertain the children in a program combining the telling of folktales with music.

At Elmhurst Elementary School, the national theme for Book Week — "More Books in the Home," is also being carried out. On Tuesday, Mrs. Nell Eutsler of the ECU English Dept. spoke about Chinese literature for children. She has just returned from China and showed slides of her trip. On Friday, Nov. 16, Charles

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Wednesday, November 14, 1979—3 Ross, Director of Instruction in the Greenville City Schools and Mrs. Hadden of Tarboro will be conducting story telling sessions at Elmhurst.

Another project at Elmhurst is that of having students write, illustrate and publish their own books. These books will be on display in the library for several weeks.

South Greenville is involving parents in observance of book week activities. Within the school, students in the fifth and sixth grades are reading to children in kindergarten through grades four. The highlight of the week comes on Friday, when four assemblies will be held with students putting on skits. Mrs. Betty Sue Forrest, principal, is urging parents to attend the sessions.

Gets A Diploma 62 Years Later

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Keith B. Merrill got his diploma this week from Iowa State University — 62 years after he completed college.

Merrill, 90, had enlisted in the air service a few days before he was scheduled to receive his diploma in 1917.

He returned home from World War I in 1918, got married on Christmas Day, and went on to become a draftsman for an engineering firm, a field engineer for a cement company and the owner of a surety business.

But the diploma never arrived. The notation that he had completed the graduation requirements was on the back of his records instead of the front.

Iowa State officials caught the error a year ago and on Monday, they gathered at Merrill's apartment for a surprise presentation.

Demonstrating U.S. Resolve

President Carter has played it very cautiously in dealing with the Iranian situation where Americans are being held captive in the U. S. Embassy by fanatical students with the blessing of what authority there is in that nation.

Monday, however, the president took a firm action in the matter by cutting off purchases of oil from Iran.

This, of course, won't harm the Iranians in the slightest, since in an oil-short world that nation can peddle its oil somewhere else. It also may pinch in our own country since we are using all the oil we can produce and import.

Still the move was highly popular in the United States. The move means that Iran cannot use oil as a weapon in its current blackmail of the United States. It also means that if strong military action is required eventually the United States won't be dependent on Iranian oil fields.

Loss of the Iranian oil is a very small price for the American public to pay in demonstrating to the world our resolve to stand by our countrymen who have been so cruelly detained.

Time To Put Pitt Drive Over The Top

Last week, the United Way drive, aided by a $64,000 Procter & Gamble contribution, moved to $184,000, approximately 55 percent of the $351,477.08 goal.

The campaign is obviously moving along quite well. It is, however, time to put the United Way drive over the top.

Hopefully pledges will be made and reported quickly so that this worthwhile giving campaign can reach a successful conclusion.

Becoming Trial By Ordeal

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A trial by ordeal in which the television an handful of major newspapers annoint a future occupant of the White House is now underway, a Duke University political science specialist feels.

Dr. James David Barber will publish next spring a book called "The Rhythm of Presidential Elections in the 20th Century".

Formerly a researcher at the University of Chicago and teacher at Stetson at Stetson and Yale, Barber is now chairman of the political science department at Duke.

Researching through 222 tape recorded interviews with politicians and journalists, 100 hours of videotaped extracts from television news programs, and 15 file-cabinet drawers full of newspaper clippings, Barber says he found that "journalism has really taken over from the political parties as the important nominators of presidents."

Default
This has happened not because the news media sought power or engaged in an ugly, sinister takeover, but from a host of causes including the decline in political party solidarity and loyalty, emergence of special interest or single interest group politics, proliferation of selection primaries to replace backroom bargaining and power politics, restrictions on fund raising .... in sum, largely by default.

So the system which once sifted presidential contenders has faded, but the people still need information and advice on how to vote. Enter the news media, Barber said in a recent interview published in "We the People of North Carolina", a magazine produced by the Citizens Association of chief business leaders in the state.

"You have perhaps 50 candidates who think of themselves as being serious candidates .... The media cannot cover that many candidates, so ... the media must make a decision: Who's worth our print space or our television time?" Barber says the list is cut to a dozen or so as media leaders decide who to cover and who to ignore.

Image becomes the all-important thing as the media plays up or down the so-called winners in various primary activities, and the candidates court the media stars to win their attention and blessing.

"What's most troubling about the situation, I think, is that we have made the campaign such an ordeal for the candidates that a presidential campaign now lasts several years. We've turned it into a saga .... a candidate who isn't much interested in that sort of thing is likely to take himself out of the running," Barber says.

Stress Test

We have invented what Barber terms "the campaign stress test for candidates that bears very little relationship to the qualities needed for a president."

The president doesn't skip from state to state making the same speech over and over shake hands at airports and shopping centers; hire expensive experts and spend a lot of time worrying about getting on television or the newspapers.

"So we have this kind of obstacle course, or ordeal, and we test the candidates out there to see if they crack. It's very different from what one needs to be president, and the media plays a large role in that because the candidates have recognized that they can have far more influence by getting media attention than by persuading an immediate audience that is right there in front of them."

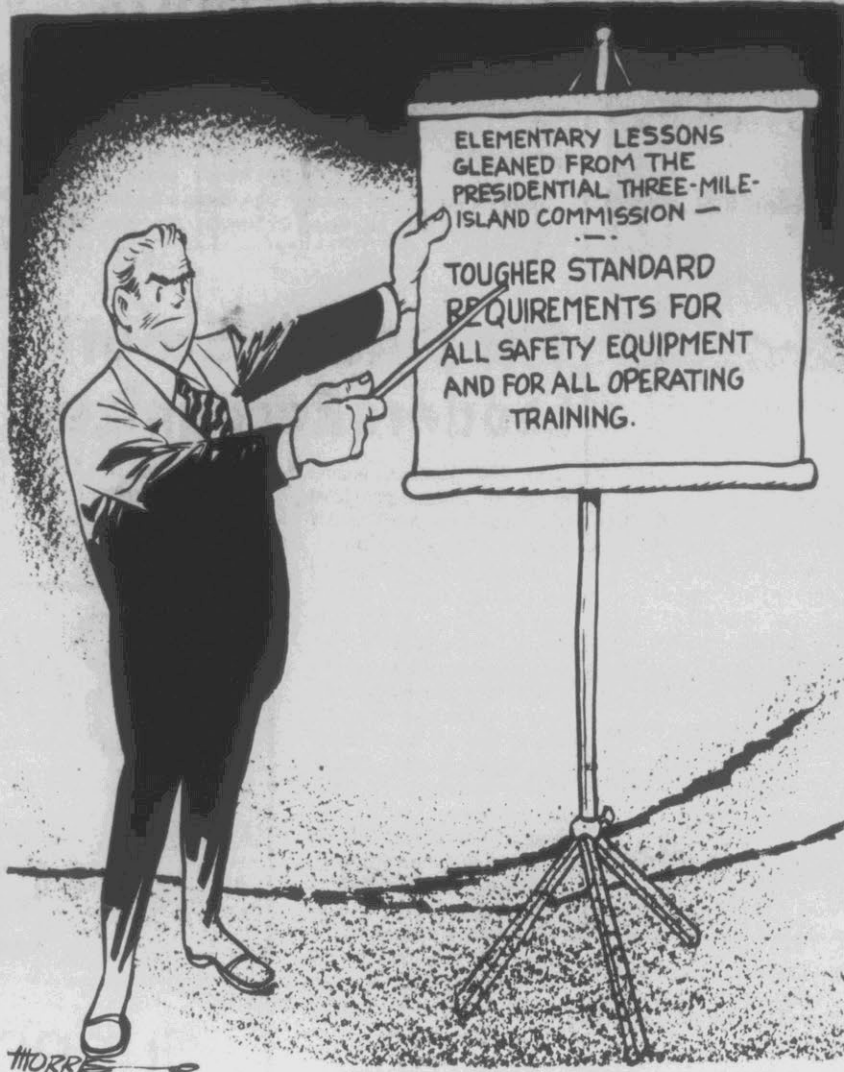

BILL NOBLITT

In fact, Barber sees a lot of truth in the notion that while once unknown reporters covered famous politicians at the nominating conventions, the process now involves unknown politicians and famous reporters.

Maybe it no longer matters which candidate is best, but whether Walter Cronkite is more believable than John Chancellor.

HARD TO ARGUE WITH THAT!

By ART BUCHWALD

Chomp, Chomp, Chomp

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed last week to decide whether you can patent a new life form created by man in a laboratory. It goes under the name of genetic engineering. One of the cases has to do with a scientist at General Electric who made a bacterium in the lab and called it Pseudomonas. The bacterium is capable of eating oil spills by breaking down the molecular structure of petroleum as it floats on the ocean.

I am not concerned whether you can patent Pseudomonas or not. What worries me is that the bacterium exists at all.

As with so many things scientists come up with, it sounds great in a test tube. Everyone hates oil spills, and if you can have hungry organisms feasting on the stuff it solves that problem.

But what happens after the bacterium eats up all the oil that is spilled? In a few days the Pseudomonas will start getting hungry again and going after oil that is being drilled up from the ocean floor. It will start chomping away at any fuel it can get its teeth in, and it's not inconceivable that as billions of them work their way through an oil field there will be nothing left to pump up but salt water.

ART BUCHWALD

Chomp, chomp, chomp — and there go all the reserves in the North Sea. Chomp, chomp, chomp — and it's goodbye to the oil in the Gulf of Mexico. Chomp, chomp, chomp — and you can kiss the petroleum off the coast of California goodbye.

The Pseudomonas can't tell the difference between oil spilled from a tanker and oil on the ocean floor. All it knows is that if it wants to survive, it has to eat. And one lousy tanker spill will not feed a family of bacteria very long.

If this isn't enough to make you nervous, what happens when the bacteria start clinging to the shoes of someone working on an oil rig? There is a big turnover in men who work on oil rigs. After a while they long to drill on land. Suppose the rigger moves to Texas and wears the same shoes in the Panhandle. The bacteria immediately start going down the well and chomp, chomp, chomp — it's ar-rivederci to Texas oil.

I know that someone will argue that the Pseudomonas won't eat oil unless it's mixed with salt water. But bacteria are very adaptable organisms, and if they can't will their petroleum with salt water they'll take it straight.

Once the Pseudomonas gets into our domestic oil it's a short step for it to the refinery and then into your

Plan A Prompt Airlift

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is preparing an immediate airlift of food to starving refugees in Thailand while private relief agencies try to raise $100 million in contributions to help ease the crisis in Indochina.

"Two and a half million people face starvation in the next few months unless food reaches them," said Matthew Nimitz, acting U.S. coordinator for refugees.

Rosalynn Carter, who visited Cambodian refugee camps in Thailand last week, announced Tuesday that President Carter had ordered deliveries by air of vegetable oils, special food for infants and youngsters, and other supplies.

The shipment is mainly to help young children, many of whom suffer from malnutrition. Their physical and mental development will be impaired without adequate food.

Officials said the airlift would begin as soon as the supplies could be located and assembled for shipping, but they gave no precise timetable.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the State Department said an air shipment of 45 metric tons of infant formula arrived in Bangkok on Monday.

Mrs. Carter announced the presidential actions at a White House meeting of executives from about 30 relief agencies who held a day-long conference to decide how to improve their efforts to help the refugees.

Afterward, the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, said he believed the groups should raise $100 million in private contributions. About $30 million has been donated so far.

"Somehow, using every means possible, we think we can save this second holocaust from taking place," he told reporters later. "We are committed to every possible, conceivable effort that will get to these people before they die."

Most of the aid to Thailand and Cambodia goes through relief agencies, such as UNICEF, CARE and the Red Cross.

Hesburgh said the voluntary groups were using rivers, railroads, trucks and airlifts to get food to the famine-struck Indochinese people.

Carter, acting at his wife's behest, also ordered an immediate $2 million grant to UNICEF to buy rice for the refugees, whose food supply was said to be for less than 30 days.

Mrs. Carter said her husband also was increasing the number of refugees from Thailand to be resettled in the United States. So most of the U.S. monthly quota of 14,000 refugees will be filled by persons from Thai camps rather than by boat people now in Malaysia and Hong Kong.

Mrs. Carter said that, at her urging, the president also was providing $4 million for the care and maintenance of refugee camps and had ordered a review of the refugee resettlement process, which was said to take too long.

"We cannot lose time," the first lady told the representatives from voluntary agencies. "The situation is urgent."

CAPITOL LETTER

All Using The Same Cliche

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Take it from the candidates: The United States is a sleeping giant, the ship of state needs a new helmsman, the times cry out for new answers to old questions, and there must be a renaissance of the American spirit.

With those cliches, and dozens more, two Democrats and 10 Republicans have announced that they are running for president in 1980.

Their speechwriters toiled through draft after draft, each trying to find just the right words to launch his man toward the White House. But when, in turn, the candidates stood up to say them, they all sounded a lot alike. They could have saved time and effort by pooling wordsmiths and issuing a blanket announcement.

That all-purpose announcement wouldn't work for President Carter. He'll be announcing Dec. 4 that he wants a second term, and will have to defend the first-term performance all the other candidates find wanting.

Carter's Democratic challengers have been at least as hard on him as the Republicans. Among them, the rival candidates have produced a chorus of generalized criticism that could serve any politician challenging an incumbent president in almost any election year.

"The sense is pervasive that something is wrong, that our nation is divided when it should be decisive and acting with clear purpose," said

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., as he declared himself a candidate.

"We have learned that good intentions are not enough in a president," said Republican George Bush. "We should know, too, that rhetoric is not enough to provide the kind of leadership our country needs and deserves."

"The leadership we so desperately need has not evolved from this administration and it is growing increasingly clear that it never will," declared John B. Connally, as he entered the Republican competition.

"The presidency has become shrouded in the

To the editor:

In the November 8 issue of the Daily Reflector, I read the letter from Walter Whitehurst Jr. informing all citizens of the coming movie, "Life of Brian." I was shocked to learn this piece of trash is scheduled for our city.

I join him in opposing its showing in our town. Certainly, you cannot legislate morals or Christianity. Even so, I feel it the obligation of all Christians and civic-minded citizens to call your theaters and object to this public outrage against Christ. By remaining quiet, it is silent approval of the degenerative route our entertainment medium is continuing to follow.

I urge all to follow Walter's request to call and ask that this movie not be exposed in our city.

Strength For Today

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In investing, it's the future that counts. And that's why some stock market seers are peering beyond a minefield of financial woes to what they say will be a more stable decade of the '80s.

It may be wishful thinking, but they say that stocks will be in vogue, that interest rates will stabilize, that gold will lose luster, that inflation will return to single digits, that savings will grow again. These forecasts aren't oddities; in Wall Street, which has had such tough competition for the individual's dollar, they are commonplace. As commonplace as forecasts of a collapse in gold and housing prices.

So common that you suspect them. Gold and housing, you realize, rose on the Wall Street's hit list because they attracted so much of the available investment money during the 1970s. The Street felt cheated.

Investors Look To The Future

NEW YORK (AP) — In investing, it's the future that counts. And that's why some stock market seers are peering beyond a minefield of financial woes to what they say will be a more stable decade of the '80s.

It may be wishful thinking, but they say that stocks will be in vogue, that interest rates will stabilize, that gold will lose luster, that inflation will return to single digits, that savings will grow again. These forecasts aren't oddities; in Wall Street, which has had such tough competition for the individual's dollar, they are commonplace. As commonplace as forecasts of a collapse in gold and housing prices.

So common that you suspect them. Gold and housing, you realize, rose on the Wall Street's hit list because they attracted so much of the available investment money during the 1970s. The Street felt cheated.

It remembers that its glory days were in the early 1960s, when prices were relatively stable, gold was "un-American," houses appreciated at 5 percent or less, and the prime rate was a third what it is today.

Atop that there was a new generation of stockbuyers — hopeful, without adverse experience, able to save beyond immediate needs, and convinced that a world of inexpensive energy and growth was their right.

There is a widespread feeling among stock analysts, a feeling repeated every week if not every day, that stocks paid the price in the 1970s. A dozen things went wrong, including a collapse of the system itself.

What exists now, they say is a revamped market, one that isn't likely to be buried under a blizzard of paperwork, one in which investors are better protected financially, one far more national in scope.

And, as many Wall Streeters see it, the economy is falling into line with its hopes. They say a new, more responsible economic attitude is gaining adherents, with people wary of big government deficits.

So many assumptions are included in this assessment that critics claim it is a testament to faith rather than to analysis. But the attitude exists, and many brokers can be expected to promote and disseminate it.

Report Former Shah Has Large Tumor In His Neck

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former Shah of Iran is suffering from a baseball-sized tumor on his neck and his doctors plan to operate as soon as the ousted monarch feels well enough, administration officials say.

"His condition is getting worse and worse," said one official, who asked not to be identified. He added that there is a consensus among the shah's doctors that he should remain at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, where he has been confined since Oct. 22.

In New York, a spokeswoman for the shah, Chris Godek, said there was "no basis" for reports the shah needs additional surgery.

"The tumor is being treated with radiation therapy and in the latest doctor's report there's not any indication of further surgery," she said. A source at the hospital, who asked not to be identified, also said there is no present indication more surgery is needed.

Meanwhile, the State Department was remaining silent about signs Iranian government authorities may be softening their conditions for releasing some 60 Americans being held hostage in Tehran.

The acting head of the Iranian Foreign Ministry, Abolhasan Bani-Sadr, listed Iran's demands for the hostages' release in a letter to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim. Contents of the letter were broadcast Tuesday by Tehran radio.

Bani-Sadr did not allude to the prior demand that the shah be returned to Iran for trial. Instead, he proposed that the United States support an international investigation into alleged crimes committed by the shah during his reign, and that the shah's fortune be turned over to Iran. Sources close to the shah estimated his assets at between $60 million and $90 million.

One U.S. official said the shah, using false names, has deposited much of his wealth in European banks.

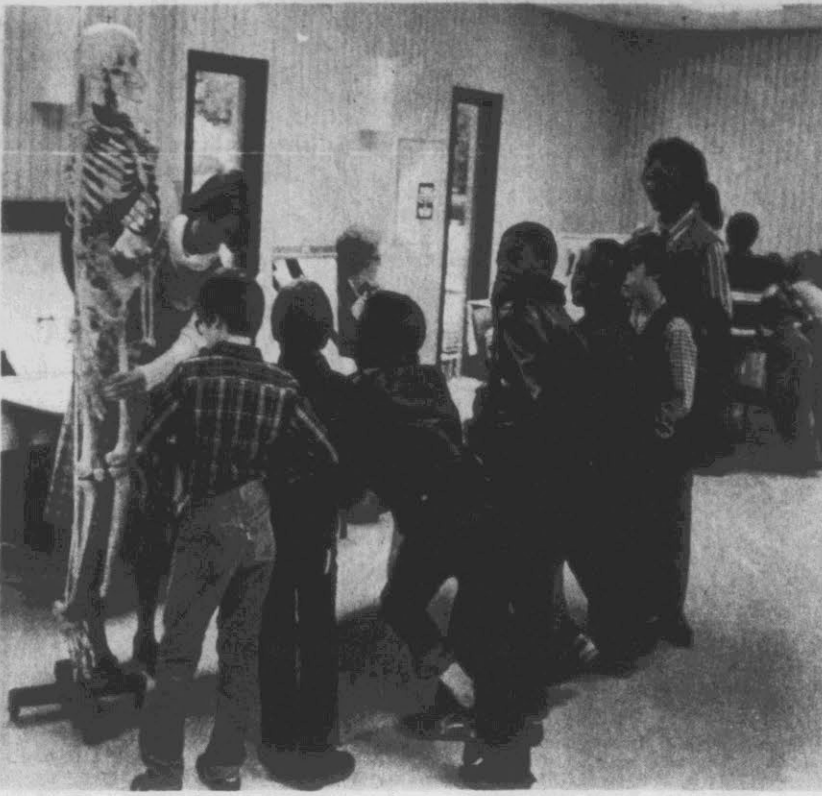

State Department spokesman Jack Tuohy said the administration is giving Bani-Sadr's proposals a "hard look. Any movement upward is welcome."

It was not clear, however, whether Bani-Sadr was speaking for the captors, whose seizure of the embassy compound entered its 11th day today.

Tehran radio reported Tuesday that the captors rejected any "conciliatory proposal" to the United States.

home heating tank. Chomp, chomp, chomp — and half the oil that cost you 90 cents a gallon will be digested by bacteria before it gets to your furnace.

I may be unfair to the Pseudomonas, or the man who created it. For all I know the bacterium may get its fill of oil spills and then die. But genetic engineering is a dangerous game, and when you start creating bacteria in a test tube you have no idea what they're going to feast on.

Today it may just chomp on tar balls off Cape Cod, but tomorrow it might decide that sweet oil tasted better. When it does it's shalom to Saudi Arabia.

politics of confusion and indecision," added Rep. John B. Anderson, another Republican.

"For many months we have been sinking into crisis," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. "Yet, we hear no clear summons from the center of power. . . . Fear spreads that our leaders have resigned themselves to retreat. This country is not prepared to sound retreat."

So there seems to be a candidate consensus on what's wrong. The challengers agree that it's Carter's fault. Their speechwriters could trade paragraphs on the subject.

Take out the names and any one of them could have uttered the whole business. Candidates sound alike at the starting gate.

Auto Inventory Rate Said High

TOP HONOR — The Tau Chapter of Phi Sigma Pi, honor fraternity at East Carolina University, received the Joseph Torche Award recently as the top national chapter at the organization's annual convention in Arlington, Va. Ten local chapter members were on hand for the award presentation, which marked the 14th

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp., faced with crowded car lots and reluctant buyers, is offering dealers incentives of $100 to $400 to push sales. A trade journal says auto inventories are at "recessionary" levels.

GM said Tuesday it was offering the incentives to dealers who met sales quotas on certain left-over 1979 models. Never before has the nation's No. 1 carmaker done that a month into the new model year.

The announcement was an omen of another disappointing sales report today, Chrysler Corp. announced its current $300-a-car retail rebates just before last month's report, which showed that U.S. car sales were at their lowest this year. The carmakers reported a 20 percent drop in sales in October, when they introduced their 1980 lines.

During the summer, the major manufacturers offered similar incentives to move stocks bloated by a sales collapse after the first cutoff of Iranian oil.

Inventories stood at a 66-day supply on Oct. 31, Ward's Automotive Reports, a trade publication, said Tuesday. That is two days more than the companies and dealers had in the previous record end-of-October supply, in 1974 when a recession was starting. Ward's called the supply this time "recessionary."

GM's Robert D. Burger, vice president in charge of the marketing staff, said dealers could pass on the new incentives to retail customers as a means of increasing showroom traffic, which would "help generate a vigorous sales rate to both 1979 and 1980 models."

Spokesman Edward S. Lechtzin said GM now had about 240,000 cars and 90,000 light trucks and vans to which the rebates would apply, almost all the 1978 carryover, and about four-fifths of the company's inventory. Ward's put GM's stock of 1979 models at 341,000 cars on Oct. 31, twice what it was for the Sept. 30 figures. After last year's brisk October, the industry had only 48 days' worth of cars in stock.

N.C. Planners Confer Friday

Planning To Aid Air Conditioning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, working on legislation to help people pay their heating bills, has come up with a plan to assist the poor and elderly with their summer air conditioning costs.

The Senate approved an amendment Tuesday that would allow some poor and elderly persons to use emergency fuel aid for the cooling bills if high temperatures could cause health problems. The overall legislation would provide $8.6 billion for a fixed program of aid to persons unable to pay skyrocketing fuel and utility bills over the next three years.

Planners and planning officials from across North Carolina will gather Friday in Asheboro for a series of conferences aimed at gearing up for local public planning in the state for the 1980's.

The N.C. Chapter of the American Planning Association has set a theme of "Planning for Public Facilities in the Face of Population Change and Inflation" for the conference.

Representatives of local planning agencies will hear panel discussions on the changing economy and the impact of these changes on planning and financing public facilities.

Wes Hankins, a member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, will attend the conferences.

School Fees Question Is Before High Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The question is whether the framers of the constitution intended for parents to participate in the cost of educating their children or whether the constitutional guarantee of free public education means absolutely free.

The North Carolina Supreme Court began hearing arguments Tuesday on whether schools may collect fees from students or must provide necessary items without cost. At stake is the $15 million to $20 million school officials estimate will be lost to public schools in North Carolina each year if the Supreme Court affirms a lower court ruling banning collection of fees.

Attorneys for the Greensboro school board say the founding fathers intended for parents to participate in the cost of educating their children.

But lawyers for a group of parents counter that the constitutional guarantee of free public education essentially eliminates additional costs to students for anything that can be considered a necessary element of a particular course.

Collection of school fees was ruled unconstitutional last year by Superior Court Judge Charles Kivett in response to a lawsuit filed by the Greensboro Legal Aid Society for three city families.

Report 'Breakthrough' In Crib Death Research

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sudden infant death syndrome, the mysterious crib killer responsible for as many as 10,000 infant deaths each year in the United States, can be diagnosed and perhaps prevented, researchers say.

Doctors say the syndrome may now be diagnosed and treated through a technique that reveals abnormalities in the brainstem, which is responsible for breathing and some other automatic functions.

er infants have been studied since the report was released. "To almost a perfect degree, the 24 'near miss' infants have shown abnormal results" on the BAEP test, the doctor said.

SID syndrome, also known as "crib death," is characterized by the sudden, unexpected death of seemingly healthy infant deaths each year in the United States, can be diagnosed and perhaps prevented, researchers say. The study presented 10 case results, and Orloski said 14 other

He said results of the clinic's research have been confirmed at other institutions. "We're really getting quite excited about it."

'Steelwheels' Won Opener

The Greenville Steelwheels began their 1979-80 season by hosting the Virginia Beach Sunwheelers to a basketball double header on Saturday, November 10.

The Cleveland Clinic doctors said the testing resulted from a theory that many infants who suffer episodes of severe breathing stoppages during sleep subsequently become crib death victims.

Orloski said it was hoped that by screening normal infants, "We may be able to predict potential SIDS victims."

The Steelwheels won both games — by a score of 42-37 for the first game, and by 40-30 for the second game.

Studies have shown that many "near miss" babies, those revived by vigorous stimulation or mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, had certain abnormalities in their brainstems, doctors said.

The cause of SIDS and brainstem abnormalities is not yet clear, but Orloski theorized that it might be traced to an immature brainstem.

High scorers were Steelwheels player Tim Harris with 14 points, and Jim Taylor of the Sunwheelers with 10 points in the first game; and for the second game Tony Briley led the Sunwheelers with 15 points, with Tim Harris and Maurice Brown, both of the Greenville Steelwheels, scoring 10 points each.

The BAEP test is to the brainstem what the EKG is to the heart and the EEG is to the rest of the brain," said Dr. James P. Orloski, assistant director of pediatric and surgical intensive care. "It looks at how the electrical activity in the brainstem reacts to a clicking stimulus."

"Perhaps this is why the incidents of SIDS disappear after one year of age. The brainstem may have matured by that time," he said.

The next home game for the Steelwheels will be December 8, when the team plays Raleigh Capital City Hustlers at 2 p.m. at Elm Street Gym. Admission to the game is free.

Church Marking Anniversary

AVOID AREBUFF LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government skirted a parliamentary rebuff by deciding not to cut $5.6 million from the BBC's overseas broadcasting branch.

FARMVILLE — Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church will observe its anniversary Sunday. The Rev. Kenneth Hammond, pastor of Cedar Grove Church, Greenville, accompanied by his choir and congregation, will be guest speaker at a 3 p.m. service. Dinner will be served at 2 p.m. The public is invited.

There was no indication Tuesday when a decision would be made by the Supreme Court. One court official said it probably would not be before January.

The Greensboro school system was prohibited from charging instructional fees and fees for elective courses, such as physical education, that are required for graduation. Kivett also ruled that the system could not penalize a student who, prior to the order, had failed to pay the fees.

The system calls for the participation of parents of students in meeting the financial obligation," he said.

Tuesday, Caffrey argued before the high court that the constitution had always provided for free public education but that did not mean the state

But attorneys Richard Greene and Jacqueline Foreman, arguing for the plaintiffs, said the General Assembly had provided the financial means through taxation or local bonds for schools to provide an entirely free education.

They also argued that if an item is necessary for a course, then it is the responsibility of the school to provide it.

Two Pitt Seniors Are Scholarship Nominees

Two Pitt County seniors, Eleanor Avery of D. H. Conley High School, and Mark Grossnickle of J. H. Rose High School, have been selected as nominees for the annual Morehead Scholarships.

The two were selected on November 13 from a field of 13 nominees from Pitt County high schools. The Pitt County Morehead Scholarship Committee is chaired by W. W. Speight, and has as members Dr. W. S. Bost, Jr. of Greenville, Mrs. Bert B. Warren of Farmville, and Robert Michaels, Jr. of Bethel. Mrs. Warren and Michaels are new to the committee.

Counselors in the schools and principals also share in the selection process to determine the choice of nominees from the names of student candidates submitted.

H. Conley High School; and Mark Earl Grossnickle, Gregory Bernard Whitener, Eric Sheldon Downes, Carlton David Johnson, Kevin Amos Clark, and Frederick Melvin Parham, all Rose High School.

— Eleanor Avery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Avery of Route 2, Greenville, hopes to have a career in chemistry, biology, or medicine. She is president of her senior class and of the National Honor Society, and is a member of the Student Council Association and the Catholic Youth Organization.

Ms. Avery attended Governor's School, is a National Merit Semi-finalist, and served as a marshal.

At a later date, the two nominees will compete with other nominees on a regional basis, and then on a state basis at which time nominees are named for a Morehead Scholarship.

The Morehead Scholarships are the most prestigious in North Carolina and are awarded based on academic achievement, leadership, physical activities, and other criteria.

Would Tie-In Office Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is being asked to approve a House-passed bill that would link the term of the Federal Reserve Board chairman to the term of the president who appoints him.

The chairman currently serves a four-year term that begins when a vacancy in the office is filled. Depending on when a chairman is appointed, his term could expire either early or late in a president's term. The bill approved Tuesday by the House would end a Federal Reserve chairman's term one year and 10 days after the appointing president leaves the White House.

Connally 'Humiliated' By Recent Events In Iran

By AL LANIER
Associated Press Writer
NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Republican presidential candidate John Connally said today he is "humiliated" by events in Iran, but "will not make a campaign issue of them while Americans are held hostage in Tehran. "I am embarrassed and angered," he said. "But I don't think I ought to say too much because I don't know all the details and maneuvering that is going on to release the hostages. "Once they are free, then I'm going to have a lot to say about it," Connally said. The former Texas governor addressed about 300 Charleston County Republican leaders and members of the public at an 8 a.m. gathering in the North Charleston City Hall. He also responded to questions from the audience. Connally said if he is elected, he will seek to reverse what he said has become the nation's policy of "appeasement." He said the United States should build up its military arsenal with both nuclear and conventional weapons. "We're going to have to start looking after the interests of our own people, whatever the cost," Connally declared. The Republican candidate was introduced by North Charleston Mayor John Bourne and former Gov. James B. Edwards, both Republicans. Edwards again declined to choose between Connally and Ronald Reagan as his choice for the GOP presidential nomination and said he would be "very comfortable" with either in the White House. "I would like to see him (Connally) in the White House right now, because he would get this Iranian situation straightened out in a hurry," Edwards said. Connally left Charleston for Dayton, Ohio. He will campaign in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh before flying south again to address a dinner meeting in Orlando, Fla. Connally's remarks were centered on national defense, the economy and crime. He said 1980 will be one of the most crucial election years in this century because "this country is in trouble." Connally said the United States is suffering from international economic and military problems that demand new leadership to solve.

ernment" as he has. "I don't believe in balancing a ticket with either a more conservative or a more liberal running mate," Connally said. Sources say Connally plans at least five more trips to the state before the South Carolina GOP primary on March 8.

AFTERNOON WRECK — Greenville Police reported that two persons were injured yesterday afternoon in an accident on Dickinson Avenue. Investigators reported that a car driven by Alfred John Habit, of 113 Belk Dorm, was attempting to pull from a drive way when it was struck by a car driven by Leslie Earl Haddock, of 1623 E. Wright Rd. The Haddock vehicle after impact with the Habit car, swerved and struck a parked auto owned by C.&J. Used Cars. Both drivers were reported injured and the Haddock and Habit vehicles were listed as a total loss. Damage to the parked car was listed as $500. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Announces Candidacy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Charles J. Carstens, a retired state employee from Avery County, said today he would run for governor as a Republican next year. Carstens' entry into the race would force the only other declared GOP candidate and the choice of Republican leadership — state Sen. I. Beverly Lake Jr. of Raleigh — into a primary race in May.

Carstens, 67, said he would formally announce his candidacy Friday at noon on the steps of the state Capitol. "I think we need a grassroots candidate that's responsible only to the people, not to a bunch of pressure groups," Carstens said. "I don't have any money and I'm not going to have big money backing me. "The people up in my area don't want a Democratic candidate who has switched over," he added, referring to Lake, who was a Democrat until changing his registration to run for governor.

Carstens said he was an environmental engineer for the state Department of Human Resources before retiring.

Union Complain To NLRB Board

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — The Upholsterers' International Union of North America, has filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board against the Lear Sigler Inc. wire springs factory.

The AFL-CIO affiliated local charges the company with refusing to bargain in good faith since Oct. 10 on piece work rates and other issues.

The complaint was filed Friday with the NLRB's Winston-Salem office.

Defeat Sweeter Than Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Chess is a consuming passion for millions, but midway through the "World Chocolate Chess Championship," both players lost their appetite for the game.

Rules required the players to eat each chocolate chess piece they captured. "I've eaten enough chocolate to last me quite a while," said the loser, 11-year-old Jay Schneider of Atlanta.

Schneider, one of the top 10 U.S. players under 13 years old, played former Georgia state chess champ Mike Decker, 29, Tuesday as part of a promotion by the Paper Palace gift store, which is selling $75 chocolate chess sets for Christmas.

"I took a pawn when I shouldn't have," Schneider said. "It wasn't that I wanted to eat it, it was just a mistake."

A local television station tried to film the match, "but they showed up late and had a little trouble convincing Jay to eat another piece," Decker said.

Baptists Loosen Ties To Wake Forest

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — The Baptist State Convention late Tuesday approved a proposal that will loosen its ties with Wake Forest University after turning back moves that would have severed the relationship completely.

But the delegates approved a more conservative compromise that will allow the university to remain a member of the convention's general board.

Convention delegates voted a two-thirds majority to approve a plan that will allow the university to name 12 of the members of its board of trustees. The 12 may be out-of-state residents and non-Baptists long as they are members of "Evangelical Christian denomination."

The university trustees will nominate individuals for vacancies on the board, and those individuals will be elected or re-elected by the convention. The determination of which Christian denominations are Evangelical will be up to the convention in individual cases, according to the Rev. C. Mark Corts of Winston-Salem, outgoing convention president.

Now the convention picks all 36 of the university's trustees and requires that they be North Carolina Baptists.

In exchange for gaining the trustee selection, the university will accept a reduction in financial support from convention churches.

Now the university automatically receives 6.04 percent of each church's contribution to the Baptist Cooperative Program. In 1980 that allocation will total $1.06 million. Under the new relationship, individual churches will be allowed to designate any funds for the school, but the contribution will not be automatic.

The new relationship becomes official in 1981.

The original compromise put before the delegates would have dropped Wake Forest from regular convention funding after 1980, while giving the university the right to have the 12 trustees come from outside North Carolina and outside the Baptist faith.

Acceptance of the amended plan came after 14 months of meetings and compromises between the two. In recent years, the convention and the university have fought over a number of issues, including trustee selection, use of federal grant money and the appearance of Hustler Magazine publisher Larry Flynt on campus.

Because of the conflict, some Baptists have called for the convention to cut its ties completely with the university. Such a move was made Tuesday.

The delegates tabled the motion by the Rev. Malbert Smith Jr. of Durham calling for immediate severance of ties. It also turned down a move to take Smith's motion from the table for further discussion.

Also turned down were motions to continue giving Wake Forest about $1 million a year and a motion to drop all Baptist support for the university.

In other business, delegates elected the Rev. Cecil Sherman of Asheville as the convention's new president and the Rev. Frank R. Campbell of Statesville as first vice president. Henderson Belk of Charlotte was elected second vice president.

District Census Office In City

Congressman Walter B. Jones announced yesterday the establishment of a District Census Office to be located in Greenville.

"The location of this office is not known at this time, but negotiations are underway to locate adequate space to accommodate the staff who will administer the 1980 population census in northeastern North Carolina, Jones said.

Recruiting efforts will soon be underway to fill the several staff positions in the district office, he indicated. "The district census lines have been drawn and finalized by the U. S. Census Bureau in Washington, D. C. and are not consistent with Congressional district lines," he said. "The counties of Greene, Lenoir, Jones, Craven and Carteret have been assigned to the Wilmington District Office and I will exercise no authority in the selection of personnel for these counties, even though they are a part of the First Congressional District."

All positions involved in the 1980 decennial census will be of short duration involving from three to nine months. These positions will consist primarily of two categories, including district office staffing and census enumerators, and will be selected on the basis of qualification, Jones said.

Anatomy Of The Idaho PCB Scare

By MARK SHENEFELT
BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — When a truck bumped an electrical transformer at a Montana meat-packing plant sometime last June, the driver probably didn't think much of it.

But the incident had far-reaching effects as 200 gallons of a cancer-causing chemical, PCB, leaked out of the transformer and into animal feed, eventually contaminating several hundred thousand pounds of eggs, chickens, pork, beef and processed foods in at least 17 states, from the West Coast to New Jersey.

Among the businesses most directly affected was the Ritewood Egg Co., the only major industry in tiny Franklin, Idaho, which was ordered by the federal government to destroy its entire inventory of hundreds of thousands of chickens and millions of eggs.

And one-third of Franklin's 400 residents underwent tests to determine whether the PCB level in their bodies was above federal standards. Fortunately, it wasn't.

The contamination did not come to public light until Sept. 11, more than two months after a sample of contaminated chicken from Ritewood was taken and three months after the original PCB spill.

PCB, or polychlorinated biphenyl, is used as a coolant for electrical equipment. It has been linked to skin disease, liver cancer, miscarriages and birth defects in tests on laboratory animals.

The Environmental Protection Agency outlawed the production of PCB in 1976, but the chemical still is found in millions of electrical transformers.

PCB accumulates in animal and human tissue, but scientists don't know how much PCB must be ingested to affect a person.

Idaho's chief health officer, Ed Gallagher of Boise, said a person would have to eat three or four dozen of the Ritewood eggs for 45 days before the PCB would have any effect.

"I think (the incident) was extremely overplayed," said Louis Mendoza, of Franklin, who said he continued to eat eggs from Ritewood Egg Co. even after they heard the eggs contained PCB.

"I just never felt overly alarmed about it," Mendoza said. "I don't think too many people around here did."

After the truck backed into the transformer at the Pierce Packing Co. in Billings, Mont., the PCB leaked into the plant's waste water system. Pierce dredges the waste water for byproducts for use in meat meal, an animal feed ingredient.

Farms all over the West and Midwest bought the PCB-tainted Pierce feed. Ritewood received its batch June 25.

A routine tissue sample from a Ritewood chicken was taken at a U.S. Department of Agriculture laboratory at Provo, Utah, on July 6. By the time the tests confirmed the PCB contamination and the USDA had notified the EPA and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration of the contaminated sample, it was Aug. 15.

The owners of the Ritewood farm were asked to halt sale of their chickens and eggs on Aug. 16 until the initial indication of PCB contamination could be confirmed.

By Sept. 3, further tests showed chicken tissue samples contained 20 to as many as 67 parts per million of PCB, far exceeding the federal limit of 3 parts per million. Egg samples also showed excessive levels, so the FDA condemned all 550,000 chickens and millions of eggs at the farm.

It was estimated that 18 million PCB-tainted eggs already had been sold in Idaho and other western states.

The FDA linked the Ritewood feed with the Billings packing plant on Sept. 14. Then shipments of PCB-carrying meat were traced to a Campbell Soup Co. facility in Worthington, Minn.; Swift & Co. in Clinton, Iowa, and many other food distribution outlets.

The Idaho Health and Welfare Department learned of the PCB incident Sept. 4. The public found out about it a week later through the press after Ritewood began burying its condemned chickens at the county landfill.

An FDA official in Seattle said the contamination was not announced immediately because the FDA "didn't want to cause a panic."

Blood and breast milk tests on about one-third of Franklin's 400 residents showed levels of PCB below the federal limit. They were tested because they used Ritewood products exclusively, and therefore they were more likely than anyone to have ingested the chemical.

Paul Woodward, part-owner of the Ritewood farm, blamed the federal agencies involved for "overreaction and slowness." He said the chickens and eggs which were destroyed could have been saved if the USDA had detected the PCB soon after the first tissue sample was taken.

And, noting that he and his partners were thinking of suing the government, Woodward also said the federal restrictions were too stringent.

"I can't believe they thought this was so bad," Woodward said. "I don't see them getting all that excited about cancer-causing cigarettes."

The federal government's handling of the incident brought criticism of two kinds from Idaho politicians.

Gov. John V. Evans, a

Democrat, blasted the USDA and FDA for not immediately notifying state officials about the Franklin contamination. He said it was "absolutely inexcusable."

Idaho Senate President Pro Tem Reed Budge, a Republican whose district includes Franklin and who said he was sure he had eaten several dozen of the contaminated Ritewood eggs, said the United States is becoming "too sophisticated."

"We might be nearing a sterile society. We're just getting regulations to the point where it's becoming counter-productive to society. This whole PCB thing has been far overplayed."

Carol Foreman, assistant secretary of agriculture, had another view.

"In light of this incident, it is clear that the department must give special attention to environmental contaminants in the food supply," she said, adding that the detection of PCB at the Idaho farm was a chance occurrence.

"We should have far more sensitivity to the potential gravity of this type of situation," she said.

David Fors, manager of Fors Farms, Pullayup, Wash., called himself "an innocent victim." He said the destruction of his chickens amounted to a loss of around $500,000.

The owners of the Ritewood farm estimated their loss was more than $1 million.

Other food producers and retailers fared little better, some losing money even though their products were not found to be contaminated by PCB.

Neal Ambrose, owner of Ambrose Farms of Wendell, Idaho, said he had "hundreds" of hogs no one would buy because tests for PCB poisoning at his farm were publicized. A shipment of hog feed had been traced to Ambrose Farms, but it didn't contain PCB.

Independent Meat Co. of Twin Falls, Idaho, which markets Falls Brand meats, was found not to have contaminated meat. But stores in three states stopped selling the products while tests were conducted.

Senility Feared By Most People

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fear of aging keeps people from living 120 years, says a Stanford University professor.

An insurance industry newsletter quotes Dr. Walter Bortz as saying people fear "attenuated senility more than death. They foresee life in a nursing home, crippled and abandoned, and they don't want it."

"While people used to die of infectious diseases, today they are dying of degenerative diseases such as heart disease and cancer. We don't come close to our natural life expectancy."

Bortz says the key to longevity is looking forward to growing old.

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Way up on top of Bleeker mountain in the southwest corner of Adirondack state park in New York, I am trying to build a log cabin.

What's that got to do with photography?

Well, a visit to the local U.S. Department of Agriculture office brought me into contact with a young lady who had a photographic problem.

It involved the use of one of the new thyristor flash units — the kind that read the amount of light on your subject and then automatically turn off the capacitor which feeds power to the light when the light has reached the right peak for proper exposure.

You see, I was waiting at the information desk to get some information while the young lady who apparently handles that desk was involved with a co-worker in trying to determine why her flash unit wasn't working properly.

After a few minutes of waiting and listening, just as they were about to get out the instruction book to try to find out what the problem was, I called over and asked if I could be of help. "I do that for a living," I explained.

She brought me over the flash unit and a box of slides of a wedding she had photographed. Among the slides were a number that she thought were underexposed. Those usually showed one person in the foreground, or a post or other object, at the right or left edge of the picture, properly exposed while other subjects in the background were underexposed.

It's not unusual. I've seen it many times, especially when the units first came out.

These units read the light on the closest object in front of the camera and then shut down the power source when the light on that object reaches the proper peak for the proper exposure. Objects further away take more light so this early shut-down leaves them underexposed.

There are a couple of ways to beat this situation, depending upon the type of unit you have. One way is to bounce the light, provided that you have the type of unit on which the electric eye that reads the light remains on the camera pointed at the subject while the light source is tilted up.

If you have this type of unit, tilt the light up about 45 degrees and bounce it off the ceiling which will disperse it evenly over the area.

A word of caution here, though. You cannot use this technique if the ceiling is very high or dark colored. If you are shooting color, don't do this if the ceiling is any other color than white. If you had a green ceiling, for example, light reflecting off it would be green and you'd wind up with green people!

A better way of solving the problem is to forget the automatic feature entirely. Turn it off and switch to manual use. You'll find instructions on how to do this in the booklet that came with the unit.

Using this system you first determine how far away your subject is from you and then set the f-stop accordingly. Most units have a scale or computer wheel which shows you what this will be.

The setback here is that you will be using the full charge from the unit's capacitor so that it will take longer to recycle between flashes. The few seconds involved shouldn't hurt you.

It does hurt news photographers who frequently must shoot quickly and get as many frames as possible into the shortest possible time. They may only have a few seconds to get their shot.

FLASH PROBLEM: When in the automatic mode your flash unit can be fooled into turning off the light too soon if something gets between you and the subject. That happened when this spectator moved into the picture at left as Princess Margaret was touring a new auto factory in California recently. The intruder is properly exposed while the princess was underexposed.

News photographers prefer to use the automatic setting primarily because the unit does recycle faster between flashes. When on automatic, the capacitor which stores the electronic charge that sets off the flash is only drained in proportion to the distance the subject is from the camera. When it is not fully drained, it recycles faster. It's like trying to fill an empty glass of water as opposed to filling one from which only a small drink has been taken.

But these same photographers have also learned that there are times when they must go into the manual mode. Shooting through a chain-link fence, for example, will give you great exposures of the subject beyond the fence.

Or, more frequently, a security guard or spectator will get into the side of the picture, as happened with the illustration here, causing the power to shut down so that the background is underexposed.

So, read your instruction book. Learn to determine when you can use the automatic features of the strobe and when

Mellon Grant To Michigan Univ.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A $450,000 grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation will allow biological and behavioral scientists at the University of Michigan to pursue "collaborative research in fertility and reproduction."

The university says the three-year grant was made jointly by the Population Studies Center and the Reproductive Endocrinology Program.

It says the grant "will enable each of the units to add several outstanding Mellon Young Scientists to their staffs during the funding period, thus expanding research within the two fields."

Farmville Central, Jamesville Head For Playoffs

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

With the regular season but a memory, Farmville Central and Jamesville begin their second season beginning Friday night as the state high school football playoffs get under way across North Carolina.

The Jaguars, 10-0, play host to Ahoskie, 9-1, Friday night in the opening round of the 3-A playoffs. Jamesville, 8-1, meanwhile, travels to Princeton, 8-2, in the first round of the 1-A playoffs.

The Jaguars, ranked No. 1 in the state by the AP, won the Eastern Carolina Conference with a perfect 8-0 slate. Ahoskie, champions of the Northeastern Conference, lost only to Bertie, 16-15, the second week of the season.

Jamesville, second to Manteo in the Tobacco Belt Conference, lost only to the Braves, 25-6, four weeks ago. Princeton won the Carolina Conference, falling to only North Johnson, 30-0, the second of the season.

Farmville Central

Having been to the state high school playoffs the last three years, Farmville Central coach Gene Brewer has come to learn that once there every Friday night is a big night. "You have to take the first one as it comes. When you're in the playoffs they're all big games. The first night it's not a big one you don't have to worry about it because you won't be there any more," Brewer said.

"All of the teams are good. There are no weak teams in the playoffs," said Brewer, whose Jaguars face a stiff test Friday night when they play host to Northeastern Conference champ Ahoskie in the first round of the 3-A playoffs.

"I know more about them than I want to," Brewer said. "They're a big football team, especially in the backfield. They have two running backs who are 6'2". One weighs 200 pounds and the other 195."

The Jaguars will counter with 1,000-yard rusher Donald Reid (6'0", 200), David Dunn (5'11", 183) and Roger Joyner (5'9", 159).

"They're basically a power team even though they run from a wishbone, Brewer said they'll try to run straight at you. They're big and strong as I've said and we haven't faced this kind of size and skill this year."

Neither have the Jaguars faced the kind of offense the Cougars play, a defense in which nearly every player — including the interior lineman — stand up.

"Their defense is hard to explain, exactly," Brewer said. "They run a four or six front, but it won't be anything standard. And most of the time they're standing up, even if they are interior lineman.

"They use their hands to fend off the blocks. They pursue well and they're aggressive. I think 'aggressive' would be a good word to describe their whole team," said Brewer, who has been known to have an aggressive team or two himself in his years at Farmville.

In fact, defensively, the '79 Jaguars are as aggressive as they come. Led by a linebacking crew of Donald and Ronald Reid and David Dunn, Farmville has had only 41 points scored against them. No team has scored more than two touchdowns against them and the Jaguars have shut out five teams.

Ahoskie, in blanking four teams this season, has given up 64 points, 22 in their first game of the season, when they defeated Murfreesboro, 55-22.

Only a week ago the Jaguars held Southwest Edgecombe to minus 72 yards rushing and minus 46 yards total offense in routing the Cougars, 41-0.

Still, Brewer wasn't entirely happy with the effort. "We didn't play very well against them, although our defense did a good job for the most part.

"Offensively, we did nothing the first quarter and started playing a little better after that," he said.

Was the win over the Cougars, a team whose offense is similar to that of Ahoskie, a good tune-up for the playoffs?

"That's a hard question to answer right now," Brewer said. "Ask me again about 11 o'clock Friday night and then I'll be able to tell you."

play at home, but the players like the road, and they're the ones who have to get out there and play."

And come Friday when they get a chance to play, they'll see a sight that is usually seen only in old highlight films: the single-wing offense.

"They're one of the last teams to use the single-wing and they're surprising a lot of teams with it," Godley said. "They've got a big 200-pound fullback and a good, quick tailback.

"They do, however, have a tendency to fumble. Last week, I think they fumbled five or six times. So, they are susceptible to the fumble."

Princeton uses the single-wing in a variety of ways, according to Godley. "They can use it to run reverses off of, quick traps and pulling guards, all of which worry us because they can disguise a lot of things out of that offense.

"But when I saw them, they were more of a power offense, something like a wishbone. They didn't pass very well, but that doesn't mean they can't," Godley said.

Going into the game, the Bullets may be without star quarterback-punter-defensive back Trent Ange, who reportedly has mononucleosis. Godley said a decision will be reached later in the week on whether Ange would play.

"We're hoping and praying he can play, but if not, I think I've coached our players well enough to take up the slack."

If Ange cannot go, senior Keith Modlin will replace him at quarterback. "Keith has been working with the offense all week long and he's doing an excellent job. The whole offense is, really.

"The main thing is they're really all uplifted by being in the playoffs. Nobody really thought we'd make it.

"I think the whole town is shocked that we're in the playoffs," Godley said.

Stargell, Hernandez Co-MVPS In NL

NEW YORK (AP) — Both Willie Stargell, the 38-year-old wonder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and young Keith Hernandez of the St. Louis Cardinals said they were satisfied with sharing the National League's Most Valuable Player Award for the 1979 season.

But did either one really deserve it outright or not at all?

According to the 24-man voting committee — two from each of the NL's 12 cities — of the Baseball Writers Association of America, there was no separating the two players in total points. In the balloting, announced Tuesday, each received 216 points.

However, the breakdown in the voting was quite curious.

Stargell received 10 first-place votes, three seconds, four thirds, one fourth and two sixths. But what is difficult to comprehend is that four writers completely ignored him, meaning they did not think he was even among the 10 most valuable players in the league.

Hernandez, on the other hand, was the only player named on all 24 ballots, collecting only four firsts, but eight seconds, seven thirds, two fourths and three fifths.

A first-place vote was worth 14 points, with nine for second, eight for third, etc.

Statistically, the 26-year-old Hernandez far outshone Stargell, except in home runs.

The Cardinals' first baseman played in all but one of his team's 162 games, led the NL in batting with a .344 average, in doubles with 48 and in runs scored with 116, was second in hits with 210, tied for third in game-winning hits with 16 and fifth in runs batted in with 105. He also hit 11 triples and 11 home runs in 610 at-bats.

Stargell, used judiciously by Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner, appeared in 126 games, had 424 at-bats, 60 runs scored,

Sports Analysis

119 hits, 19 doubles, no triples, 32 homers, 82 RBI and batted 281.

But the Pirates won the NL East Division championship, and Stargell, affectionately nicknamed "Pops," was their inspirational leader and their key man down the stretch when they held off the Montreal Expos. St. Louis finished third, 12 games behind Pittsburgh.

Not coincidentally, the four writers who failed to recognize Stargell on their ballots — Mike Littwin of the Los Angeles Times, Tim Tucker of the Atlanta Journal, Kenny Hand of the Houston Post and Harry Shattuck of the Houston Chronicle — all covered Western Division teams and did not see the Pirates' slugger play after Aug. 29.

Littwin, Tucker and Hand all thought the Pirates had a more valuable player than Stargell. Littwin's choice was relief ace Kent Tekulve. Tucker's selection was center fielder Omar Moreno, and Hand preferred right fielder Dave Parker. Shattuck was not available for comment.

"I took great care in writing my ballot and decided that Stargell driving in 82 runs while batting fourth for that team would not put him in the top 10," said Littwin. "I thought Kent Tekulve was the most valuable player on the Pirates because they came around when he came around."

"I think without Moreno, the Pirates never would have won their division," explained Tucker. "And if you think Moreno is the most valuable player, then you can't vote for Stargell for most valuable player."

"In my opinion, Dave Parker was the Pirates' most valuable player," said Hand, who said that he was visibly miffed that his name was publicly revealed. "He had better stats (statistics than Stargell)."

Hand admitted, however, that statistics can be misleading. "If you went by stats, Joe Niekro (the Houston Astros' right-hander) should have been the Cy Young winner." Instead, Chicago's Bruce Sutter, a six-game winner with 37 saves, edged Niekro, a 21-game winner, for the Cy Young Award as the league's outstanding pitcher.

With the vote so divided — eight players received at least one first-place vote and a total of 28 players were nominated — many questions arise, including: Should there be voting for only first place instead of spreading the balloting out to the top 10? How much weight should be applied to statistics and how much to other factors? Should there be a most

Panthers, Vikings End Football Season

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
For Farmville Central and Jamesville, the football season continues this Friday, but for the remainder of the area high school football teams the season ended last Friday night.

Jamesville, which had an off-date last week, travels to Princeton in the first round of the 1-A high school playoffs. In action last week, North Pitt ended its season defeating D.H. Conley, 21-20, while Greene Central whipped North Lenoir, 35-6, for its sixth straight win. Ayden-Grifton ended its season two weeks ago, losing to Farmville Central, 41-6. Also last week, Williamston beat Roanoke, 34-9.

North Pitt
For North Pitt, the season ended the way it began — with a victory. In between, however, the Panthers stumbled, winning but once in route to a disappointing 3-6-1 record.

"We weren't real satisfied," Panther coach Pat Smith said.

"I mean, in terms of our record, in terms of what we thought we could do, it's disappointing. We ended up 2-6 in the conference. We've never had a winning season in the conference. We've got to get better," Smith said.

During the preseason, Smith oozed confidence and enthusiasm about his squad. The Panthers, coming off their first winning season in the school's history, appeared to be a team on the rise.

That rise, however, was abruptly brought to a halt when, first, players began to miss practice late in preseason and, second, when 11 players were suspended the third week of the season for breaking training rules.

"That was our biggest problem this year, the suspensions and the fact that we had to discipline them," Smith said. The suspensions occurred in the midst of a five-game losing streak, from which the Panthers finally emerged when they beat Charles B. Aycock in overtime, 28-21.

"That was the turning point in our season," Smith said. "We were behind and we managed to come back and win it in overtime. If we had lost that one, I think a lot of our guys would have just gone through the motions the rest of the year."

As it was, the Panthers won two of their last four, including a 21-20 come-from-behind win over arch-rival D.H. Conley the final game of the season.

"We had a good team this year," Smith said. "We felt we should have been better. But looking back, I don't think we had the type of guy who was willing to get to practice all the time and give his all every day."

"We had some players like that, but not a lot."

D.H. Conley
Earlier this week, D.H. Conley coach Jimbo Walker was still trying to recover from his squad's 21-20 loss Friday night to county-rival North Pitt.

The Vikings, who led 20-6 midway through the third period, saw their third straight try for a winning season fail as the Panthers stormed back to win.

"I still don't have any feeling," Walker said. "I felt we had the better team out there, the team that was the most fired up. If the coaches hadn't been around, the kids probably would have won."

"I just wish we (the coaches) hadn't been on the field. We just made too many mistakes," he said.

Three weeks ago, Walker, in his first year at D.H. Conley, appeared to have the Vikings headed for their first winning season ever.

Following Conley's first win over Ayden-Grifton at Littlefield, 27-12, and a 19-6 win over Southwest Edgecombe, the Vikings were 4-2-1 heading into their last three games.

The Vikings had only to win one game out of three to insure themselves of their first winning season in the school's history. The win never came, as Conley was stunned by Charles B. Aycock, 27-15, and lost to Greene Central, 17-0, before last Friday's game with the Panthers.

"I didn't have a dream that bad," Walker said of the three straight losses. "It's terrible. I'm really disappointed about not having a winning season. At times this year we played well, but overall we didn't play very consistently. We were not a well-coached team. We gave some football games away that we should have won," he said. "I think it's going to take this year to get adjusted, to learn the teams you play in the conference and what it takes to win in the conference."

Jaguars Still No. 1

By The Associated Press
Kannapolis, which ended a 10-0 season last Friday by beating Cabarrus County rival Concord 31-6, has been voted No. 1 in the final weekly football poll by an Associated Press statewide panel of sportswriters.

Kannapolis opens postseason playoff action Friday night, facing visiting Chapel Hill in a first-round game.

The Wonders had seven first-place votes and 113 points this week. Points are assigned on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, then 9, 8, 7, etc.

Hickory was second in 4A with three first-place votes and 106 points. Filling the third slot was Jacksonville with three No. 1 ballots and 102 points. Each of the teams also had 10-0 seasons.

Farmville Central in 3A and Maiden in 2A-1A took the other two top spots in the high school football poll.

In the 3A poll, Farmville received eight first-place ballots and 117 points. That was 14 ahead of runner-up Belmont South Point, which had two first-place votes. Finishing third was West Columbus, which was voted No. 1 by three writers and garnered 92 points.

With five No. 1 ballots, Maiden edged 2A-1A runner-up Jordan-Matthews by one point, 117-116. Jordan-Matthews had seven first-place votes.

Swain County was third in 2A-1A, with a first-place vote and 85 points. Each of those teams finished 10-0 in the regular season.

With the exception of Scotland County (ninth in 4A), Burlington Williams (seventh in 3A) and West Montgomery (fifth in 2A-1A), all ranked teams will compete in state playoffs.

valuable player for the East Division and another for the West in each league?

Also, since this was the first time in the 49-year history of the prestigious award that the voting ended in a tie for first, how do you split up the honor?

"What are we going to do, break it in half?" asked the happy Stargell, who had finished a close second in the voting to both Joe Torre in 1971 and to Pete Rose in 1973.

Kidding aside, the two-time bridesmaid, the hero of the Pirates' NL playoff and World Series triumphs, said he did not think he would be named MVP this time in the balloting based on regular-season performances.

"I thought it would go to the guys who played every day," confessed Stargell, the captain of the Pirates and considered a sentimental choice by some observers this year. "I'm happy for myself and I am happy for Hernandez. I know what kind of a player he is."

Asked about the four writers who overlooked him, Stargell said politely, "I don't want to get into the negative side of it."

"I'm glad we could share it," said the slick-fielding Hernandez. "I figured the sentiment was with Willie and he's deserving. I thought I'd finish second or third. I felt the year I had was deserving of an MVP, but Willie had a great year too, and he's the leader of that ballclub."

"The fact that it's a tie makes it all the better, because Willie's a great man and it's an honor just for me to have my name next to his."

Outfielder Dave Winfield of the San Diego Padres finished third with 155 points, followed by third basemen Larry Parrish of the Montreal Expos (128) and Ray Knight of the Cincinnati Reds (82). Parker, last year's MVP, was 10th this time.

Bowls All Want Bryant And Crimson Tide

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Every bowl wants Alabama...and every bowl could be disappointed. In all the guessing over which bowl Alabama will go to, no one seems to realize it's possible for the crimson Tide to be shut out of bowl.

A lot of things are possible in the wild and crazy bowl picture, much of which should fall to place Saturday if Georgia, four-time loser, beats Auburn and becomes the Southeastern conference's representative in the Sugar Bowl.

That would free the Orange and Cotton Bowls to invite 10-1-ranked Alabama. The crimson Tide probably would favor Miami over Dallas since the Big Eight, whose champion hosts the Orange Bowl, currently has a higher ranked team than the Southwest Conference, which sends its champ to the Cotton Bowl.

More about that later. What if Auburn beats Georgia? The Sugar Bowl would then have to wait for the Alabama-Auburn game Dec. 1. If Alabama wins or ties that one, the Tide goes to New Orleans. But should Auburn — which is on probation and can't go to a bowl — win that one, too, Georgia would back into the Sugar Bowl and Alabama would back into Tuscaloosa. All the other bowls would be filled by that late date and Alabama would have to stay at home.

Now, let's say that Georgia beats Auburn. Would you believe the following conversation come Saturday evening?

"Coach Bryant, how about coming to the Orange Bowl to face the Nebraska-Oklahoma winner?"

"Aww, hay-ull, we ain't worth a damn jes' 'cause we edged Miami 35-0. That ol' Howard Schnellenger out-coached me every way known to man. But if y'all really want us, tell ya what ah'll do. Ah'll poll my seniors Sunday mornin' and see if they want to play in Miami."

"Sorry, Coach, we've got to know now or we'll invite Florida State."

Decisions, decisions.

"I wouldn't mind asking them to wait a day, or even a week," Bear Bryant said Tuesday, "but I don't think they'd do it."

As usual, bowls, schools and conferences have been breaking the no-contact-before-Nov. 17 rule left and right and some teams are signed, sealed and delivered. But many of the commitments are contingent on victories, not only this weekend but also down the line.

The Rose Bowl is the only game not holding its breath. Southern California will be the host team for the 10th time in 14 years and either Ohio State or Michigan will be the Big Ten's representative for the 12th year in a row. Ohio State will go if it beats or ties Michigan on Saturday...or if Purdue beats Indiana. Don't ask why; just believe it.

IF...IF...IF. That's what it all comes down to.

If Alabama and Ohio State and Nebraska and Southern California and Texas and Arkansas...and Georgia...keep winning, the four major bowls probably will look like this:

Orange — Alabama vs. Nebraska. Rose — Ohio State vs. Southern Cal. Cotton — Arkansas vs. Oklahoma. Sugar — Georgia vs. Texas.

But don't be surprised to see some changes, depending on the results of the next few weeks. All bowls have alternatives.

The word is that the Sugar and Cotton Bowls have agreed to split Texas and Arkansas. But IF Texas loses one of its last three games — don't forget the Longhorns must face Baylor and Texas A&M — and the SWC ends in a Houston-Arkansas tie, the Cotton Bowl could get Houston...and Arkansas could get shut out of a major-major bowl with a 10-1 record.

So could Ohio State IF the Buckeyes lose to Michigan AND Indiana beats Purdue, although that would make the Buckeyes awfully attractive to the Cotton Bowl.

And what does the Cotton do if Texas makes it to Dallas and Nebraska beats Oklahoma? A Texas-Oklahoma Cotton Bowl is out of the question because it would be a rematch of their October war.

Houston will wind up somewhere, but, says one bowl source, "Nobody wants them; they've got the old Arizona State syndrome."

Some other items:

—The Gator Bowl will grab Florida State if the Seminoles don't get the Orange Bowl.

—The Fiesta Bowl would like to match the Big Eight and Big Ten runners-up — a SWC team also is a possibility — but Michigan would prefer not to play on Christmas Day. Ohio State doesn't care.

—Clemson would like another trip to the Gator Bowl but the Gator people might not want the Tigers three years in a row. Notre Dame is not out of the question for Jacksonville, although the Fighting Irish might stay home this year.

—The Liberty Bowl is said to be leaning toward Pitt...and vice versa...and might invite Clemson, if it beats Notre Dame, although there are other candidates. The Hall of Fame Bowl would like Clemson, which has a huge following.

—Washington is said to be Sun Bowl-bound.

—The Holiday Bowl would love to match Brigham Young's Marc Wilson against Purdue's Mark Herrmann — "On your mark! Get set! Throw!" — but Purdue is rumored to be Bluebonnet Bowl-bound, perhaps against Baylor, while BYU has games against Utah and San Diego State and could miss out as the Western Athletic Conference's Holiday Bowl rep.

—If the Bluebonnet gets Purdue, the Holiday Bowl might try to sell Indiana fans on a two-sport trip because the Hoosiers' basketball team plays in the Cabrillo Classic Dec. 28-29.

—The Garden State Bowl would like Saturday's Temple-Penn State winner as its host but Penn State might not look on it as a true bowl trip. Could Joe Paterno, Eastern football's biggest booster, turn down a bowl designed to feature an Eastern team?

—And how about this one: if Georgia doesn't clinch a Sugar Bowl berth this weekend, the Gator Bowl is thinking about waiting until Dec. 1, hoping Auburn beats Alabama and the Crimson Tide will be available.

"It's worse than ever," says one source. "The New Year's Day bowls can't line things up, and if they don't, no one else can. I guess by Saturday night there'll be three or four things that will make you say, 'Oh, my God! I can't believe it.' It always happens that way."

In a 1971 NFL playoff game, Miami defeated Kansas City, 27-24, in double overtime, the game consuming one hour, 22 minutes and 40 seconds of playing time.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION — The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

Dawkins Shatters Backboard, But Kings Win Behind Ford's 34

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

It was a night, and a sight, to remember.

"I think this is Darryl's life-long dream — to shatter a backboard," said Philadelphia guard Doug Collins.

That's exactly what Darryl Dawkins, the muscular, 6-foot-11, 258-pound, 22-year-old who plays center for the 76ers, did in Kansas City Tuesday night. And he did it in typical Dawkins fashion — spectacular. It came straight from the Gus Johnson school of backboard-breaking.

It happened early in the third quarter with Kansas City leading 49-45. Dawkins took a lob pass from Maurice Cheeks and turned to the basket, having beaten his man, Kings center Sam Lacey. The only other Kansas City player nearby, forward Bill Robinzine, decided to duck for safety.

It was a good idea.

Dawkins went up for one of those high-percentage shots he refers to as "Go-Rilla Dunks." If you have to ask why he calls them that, you've never seen him throw it down.

But even Dawkins had never seen what happened next. As he dunked the ball, his hands made contact with the iron rim of the basket. Suddenly the fiberglass backboard shattered into hundreds of tiny pieces and the whole thing crashed to the hardwood floor.

"His arms were inside the rim. The backboard first exploded, then it just dropped," said referee Bill Oakes. "It was a little scary. This is the first time I've ever seen anything like it in 25 years of playing and officiating."

The shattered glass showered both Dawkins and Robinzine. Dawkins was unhurt while Robinzine was cut on the hand.

Dawkins' massive dunk bent the support pole that holds up the basket and backboard, and the pole broke while workers tried to attach a new backboard. The game was delayed one hour, 13 minutes while a whole new support apparatus was installed.

Despite Dawkins' colossal basket, the Kansas City Kings won the game 110-103, snapping a six-game losing streak. Phil Ford led the way with 34 points and reserve guard Marlon Redmond scored 19 as the Kings built a 16-point first-half lead and then held on to win.

Spurs 131, Warriors 127
George Gervin, the NBA scoring champion the last two years, scored 47 points for the Spurs, including six in overtime. His runningmate at guard, James Silas, added 21 points and made two key plays at the end of the five-minute extra period.

Silas put San Antonio ahead for good with a 15-foot turnaround jumper with 38 seconds remaining, then fed Billy Paultz for an easy layup with nine seconds remaining to ice the game.

Rockets 128, Bulls 127
Moses Malone capped a brilliant 45-point, 22-rebound effort by sinking two free throws with no time remaining to carry Houston over Chicago.

Malone, the NBA's leading rebounder last season, grabbed a missed shot by Chicago rookie David Greenwood with 11 seconds left. Greenwood then fouled Malone as the Houston center drove for the basket and Malone made both free throws for the victory.

Lakers 137, Clippers 91
Rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson scored 22 points and was one of eight Los Angeles players to score in double figures as the Lakers hit 67.4 percent of their field goal attempts. All five Laker starters sat out the final period of the rout, in which Los Angeles out-rebounded San Diego 53-38.

Bucks 101, Blazers 92
Milwaukee raised its record to 13-3, best in the NBA, by beating the Blazers at Portland behind Marques Johnson's 34 points. The Bucks led 56-32 at intermission and were never in danger.

Bullets 111, Knicks 107
Phil Chenier, struggling to recover from a back injury which has limited his playing time since the 1976-77 season, scored 22 points to lead the Bullets to their first road win following five losses.

Nuggets 116, Cavaliers 110
George McGinnis, held to just two points in his previous start, scored 18 points including two big baskets midway through the fourth quarter for Denver, which has won its last five home games.

Nets 101, Hawks 82
Rookie Calvin Natl scored a career-high 33 points as New Jersey brought an end to Atlanta's six-game winning streak. The Nets held the Hawks to just 16 points in the final period and pulled away to win easily.

Crum Has Answer To UNC Downturn

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dick Crum says he has a simple answer for the downturn in his team's football fortunes.

After racing out to impressive victories in their first four outings, lean times have set in for the Tar Heels, now 5-3-1 overall and 1-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"I think because we are Carolina, people want to find something," Crum said. "I'm telling you there is nothing there."

"Our kids have had a super attitude, they have played like crazy."

Another point brought up when looking for problems is dissent. That's what was said to be wrong last year when the Tar Heels ended the season with a dismal 5-6 record.

Crum firmly denies his players are dickering again. "That's just totally ignorant. The team gets along very well. Every week they have come back very well," he said.

Crum pointed to some other problem areas when talking with reporters at his weekly news conference Tuesday.

"Our passing game has slowed down some over the last three weeks. While we're still completing a pretty good percentage of our passes, in the critical situations we are not hitting them like we did earlier in the year," Crum said.

"In the last three games we've given the ball away 10 times and we've gotten one," he said. "Last Saturday out there (against Clemson), it's 12-3, and those 12 points are all because of turnovers."

Bear Grass Wins, 50-49

EDENTON — Bear Grass High School captured its second straight win, but had to rally in the final period to gain a 50-49 win over Chowan.

The Lady Bears, however, fell before Chowan, 38-27.

In the girls' contest, the host team slipped out into a 7-6 lead in the first period and extended that to 17-12 at the half. Both teams pushed through 11 points in the third period, leaving Chowan with the same margin, 28-23. Then, in the final quarter, Chowan pulled away, 10-4, to win handsily.

Denise Jordan led the Chowan scoring with 18 points, while Joette Rodgers paced Bear Grass with 17.

Chowan also managed a one-point lead at the horn of the first period, 14-13. They were not able to put much light between themselves and the Bears, however, as the hosts held on by a 32-30 margin at intermission.

Chowan continued to pull away in the third period, building its lead to 42-35. But the Bears put together a rally in the final quarter, outscoring the Chowan squad, 15-7, to take a 50-49 final second win.

Victor Freeman led Chowan with 14, while Melvin Boyce had 10. Watson Rogers led the Bears with 12, while Wilbert Williams added 10.

The Bears travel to Cape Hatteras on Friday.

L.A.'s People-Mover Plan Has Futuristic Image

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Downtown People Mover, a nearly 3-mile long automated transit system to serve part of the city's core area, would be the first major central city transportation system of its kind.

Electrically-powered cars would move automatically, several to a train, along elevated guideways. The cars would be designed to carry from 20 to 100 passengers each. Terminals, adjacent to or within stores or other buildings, would be reached by elevators, escalators or stairs.

Clean, silent and efficient, it has futuristic attraction and unarguable virtues. It has been the dream of some urban planners for years. It would ride above downtown traffic, produce no pollution and replace some of the street traffic.

Its detractors have another version.

"It's a regional obstruction. It gets in the way of solving broader regional needs," an urban planning professor said.

"It has a Disneyland quality about it," an attorney said. "It's silly. In 10 years it will be a dinosaur. Who's going to take it down?"

Similar People Movers are in operation in about 17 communities, but operate at shopping centers or airports and at West Virginia University in Morgantown.

Currently they all have a captive public. The real test, a public transportation People Mover where alternatives are present, will most likely be Los Angeles in the 1980s.

It's needed, according to Daniel Townsend, the project manager for the city's Community Redevelopment Agency. "It evolved from a 1969 realization that two things were happening: The city was dying and if it lived, we're going to have more traffic problems."

Some concept was needed to eliminate the number of autos entering the downtown area, he said.

"If we just built the number of parking facilities downtown, we wouldn't have a way of getting the cars to them. We have to have a way of leaving the cars outside.

"People Mover was picked up in about 1973 and adopted by the City Council," he said.

"We wouldn't have the drivers involved, the pollution, the labor and all the other good things a democracy programs."

The federal government, through the Urban Mass Transit Administration, allocated the money in 1976. Four priority cities were designated. The other three, Cleveland, Ohio; Houston, Texas, and St. Paul, Minn., backed down.

Only Los Angeles remained in the running. The money, amounting to about $176 million, cannot be allocated for other needs. If Los Angeles drops its project, it won't go for housing, or for streets and highways, or anything else, Townsend says.

It will go to another city more willing to experiment with the project.

Several cities have expressed the wish to build People Movers, including Detroit and Miami. But the Administration will spend only $220 million for such systems over the next five years and Los Angeles has more than half of it.

The cost in Los Angeles will be high, about $44 million per mile in 1979 dollars, with another $43 million for the parking garages.

One of the ideas behind the People Mover is that it will reduce downtown traffic and at the same time, expect to carry 75,000 persons per day along its 2.9-mile route, north to south through the city's core area of civic center, banks and shopping.

In order for those 75,000 persons to arrive at one or another of the People Mover terminals, they will have to reach a terminal by freeway. But the parking facilities will be designed for 2,000 cars at one end and 1,700 at the other.

There is some optimism involved that crosses the fairly well established psychology of Southern California's car culture.

"We are looking for van pool and car pool people," Townsend says. "People will have to pool. That's part of the concept."

Talking, or attempting to coerce, Angelenos out of their private autos has been a dream warped by futile efforts of a generation of politicians and planners.

Previous efforts have run into lawsuits, organized protests and plain stubbornness. A recent effort by the California Transportation Department to reserve one freeway lane for buses and cars with three or more persons riding was wiped out in court.

Current efforts by private industry, mandated by state law, to close factory and industry parking lots to all but car poolers on days of extremely heavy pollution have the effect of cramming side streets with parked cars.

Professor Sherman Griselle, who teaches Urban Planning at Cal Poly, Pomona, says the People Mover gets in the way of solving broader regional needs.

"We have to bring people in buses and cars to the downtown in order to make it a success. They should have planned an overall system first and only use the People Mover as a fill in."

"They have everything backwards, as usual. It's a luxury, it's superfluous." He said the People Mover will serve basically the west side of the downtown area — banks, merchants and Bunker Hill, a multi-million dollar living and commercial complex.

Downtown businesses will pay 25 percent of the operating cost, with individual amounts based on the distance from the 13 terminals.

"We didn't twist any arms," Townsend said, "but we had some long negotiations. Now the business people in the area have become our biggest supporters."

Grisselle feels the businesses will be the only ones to benefit and should pay all the operating costs. He said he was exploring the possibility of legal action to halt the project.

Similar action was contemplated by John R. Phillips, of the Center for Law in the Public Interest. But he said the center has recently decided not to sue.

He said the People Mover will serve the more wealthy financial business interests, rather than the people who most desperately need transportation in the downtown area.

"The People Mover has a Disneyland quality about it," he said. "It will attract curious visitors to the city to ride it and look at it. And it will attract them to the downtown area, which is good."

"Given a choice of not having it at all, it's a close call. I finally came down on the side that it's better off having it because it will contribute to the revitalization of the area."

But Phillips said he still feels the system will preclude other, more efficient, transportation systems.

"It's essentially foreclosing future choices."

Hero's Son Remembers When Men All 'Vanished'

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer
CHERRY, Ill. (AP) — Lincoln Bundy, the hero's son, is an old man now. Seventy years have passed since the day the men all vanished. Not much is left here: a few storefronts, a bank, the Cherry Pit saloon, a rust-red slag pile where the mine used to be. There's also a miners' graveyard, a rectangle of green set aside for 259 men swallowed up by a fire inside the earth on Nov. 13, 1909. Lincoln Bundy no longer visits the graveyard, but in the crystal rosary of his memory, he has never forgotten. Even after 70 years, his eyes still well with emotion at the thought of the day time stopped forever in Cherry.

"I was just 11 years old but I can still remember that day as clear as if it were yesterday," he said.

Bundy's father, John, was manager of the Cherry mine, whose coal fed the locomotives of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. It was a chain. The miners dug the coal, which fed the railroads, which opened the prairie. They were immigrants building America.

But on Nov. 9, 1909, there was a terrible disaster. A bale of hay caught fire underground. Within moments, the narrow inky shafts were a raging inferno. John Bundy was among the 259 men who perished in what remains among the worst mining accidents in U.S. history.

Bundy was the son of an Englishman who farmed a mean and rocky patch of land in Herefordshire. As a young man, he went to Wales, where he worked in the mines and met his wife, Sarah. They came to America soon afterwards.

Of eight Bundy children born before the turn of the century, only Lincoln and a sister, Ethel Bundy Shay, are still alive.

"I remember the day Mister Cherry came to Streator to ask my father if he wanted the job," said Ethel, a tiny woman with a neat bundle of gray curls on her head.

The fledgling town of Cherry "was out in a corn field, really," she said. "There were no schools, no churches. The streets were mud. Our first Christmas, all the children got rubber boots."

At its height, Cherry was a bustling company town. Nearly 2,000 people lived there. There were 400 houses, seven stores, a bank and 17 saloons.

Overlooking everything, rising off the prairie like the skeleton of some huge dinosaur, was the steel tippie of the Cherry mine.

"Our home was a warm place," said Ethel. "It was a place where people met. It wasn't luxurious, but it was adequate and clean and you always liked to be there. My father organized quartets and the men would sing in the parlor." As she spoke, Lincoln sat silent and motionless on a Victorian couch in the living room, his white hair combed straight back. It was full morning in Streator and a slant of clear, cold light fell on the street outside.

"We lived only a block from the mine and I went down to the fire," said Lincoln. "There were spectators all around. You'd hear a shout of joy when a loved one would come out — fathers, brothers, sons."

He spoke of the terror underground — the stink of a gas they called black damp, the smoke and fire, the clash of languages, all screaming for help.

Six times John Bundy went down in an iron cage to rescue trapped miners. He emerged six times, black and sweating, lifting survivors into the sun. But on the seventh trip, Bundy and 11 volunteers were burned alive. When the cage was hoisted, it held a charred and flaming pile of bodies.

The cage has haunted Lincoln for 70 years. "I think about it all the time," he said almost in a whisper. "He was a good father and he provided a good home."

His eyes, which earlier had shone like blue steel, grew soft. Tears gathered in the cracks of his face. "Something like this, you don't get over," he said, reaching for a handkerchief. "It still chokes me up."

After the disaster, Sarah and her eight children moved back to Streator, 40 miles away. The coal company settled with the families of the victims, but it wasn't much, and the Bundys survived on a small pension from the Carnegie Hero Fund.

Ethel married a lawyer and raised a family. Lincoln began as a messenger boy at the Streator bank and, eventually, became its president.

The hero's son married and had a family. He survived the Depression, made thousands of loans to help keep farmers going and fought in a war. He helped the church and served on too many boards and committees to remember.

Still, after all this time, the disaster is like yesterday.

The United Mine Workers of America erected a monument in the miners' graveyard. The tombstones, some tilting and broken now, are inscribed in a dozen different languages. But the date is always the same:

"Michael Bauer, Gest 13 Nov. 1909, In Der Cherry Gruben Katastrofe."

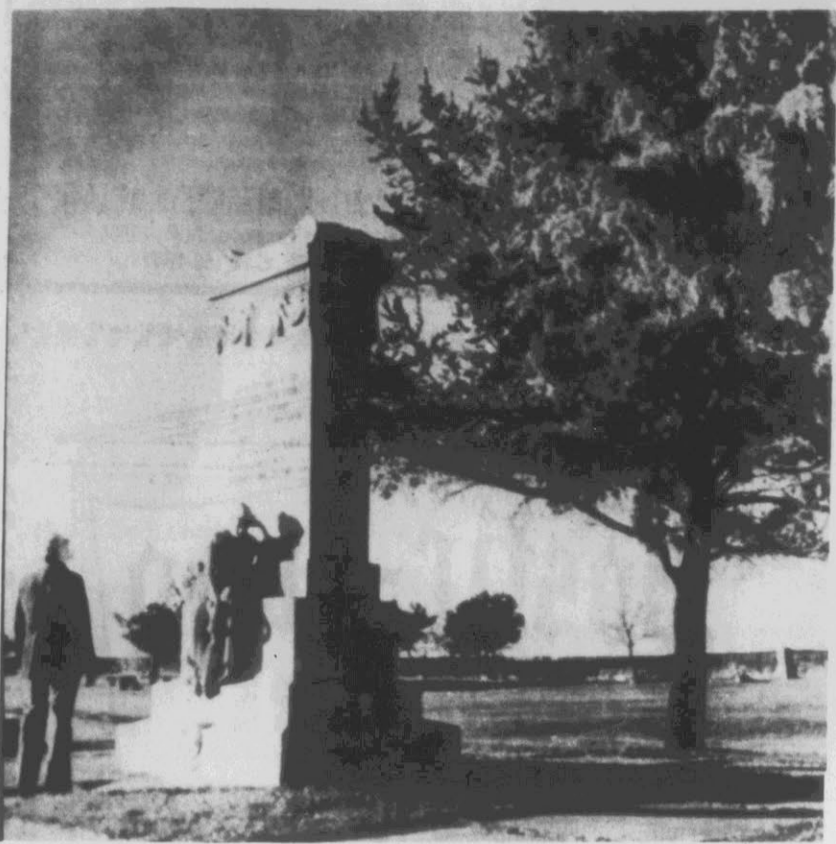

"Giovanni Gardetti, Marto Nel Disastro, Di Cherry, 13 Nov. 1909."

"John Liptak, Zomrel V. Nestacaney, Cherry Mine, Nov. 13, 1909."

"Josef Cebubar, Umro U Cherry Mini Uvatri, Studena 13, 1909."

When disaster struck, everybody vowed never to forget. But 70 years have passed. The mine is gone. Families have died. The descendants have moved away. Few remember.

"I remember," said Lincoln Bundy. "Life is not bits and pieces, but a single thing, a rosary of memory. It is November 1979. I remember everything."

One Can Move One-Ton Block

WASHINGTON (UPI) — How many men does it take to move a one-ton stone block by hand? The National Geographic Society's book "Ancient Egypt" reports that a French investigator sought an answer to that question in his efforts to solve how Egyptians managed to construct the huge pyramids before the days of labor-saving machines. He found that a one-ton block of limestone resting on a track made of moist mud from the Nile could easily be moved by ropes pulled by — one man.

Patience Required In The Detectives' Boring Job

By JEFF COHEN
High Point Enterprise
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Two men stagger out of the house and enter a late-model car parked nearby.
 "I don't know who they are but I'm going to find out where they are going," said a determined Charles Toliver from the hill overlooking the yellow, two-story house. The High Point private investigator roars down the road in pursuit.
 Toliver is patient. He knows that this real-life case will be much more tedious and far less glamorous than the cases portrayed by Hollywood.
 "I hate domestics work," he said. "It is so boring. So much of it is sit and wait, sit and wait."

 Toliver has been retained by a woman to spy on her husband, who is supposedly having an affair with a younger woman. The younger woman, Toliver believes, lives in the house below the hill.
 The two men have a good head start. Their car is nowhere to be seen when Toliver reaches the intersection at the bottom of the steep incline running parallel to the house. They could have gone in one of three directions.
 "I bet they went this way," Toliver said, speeding down the road to the right. A stoplight about a half-mile down the road provides a good opportunity to survey the road ahead, and the car is not in sight.

 Cruising through the neighborhood, Toliver passes a sign on a side street. The bold black letters jump out from the white rectangular background. "Dead End," the sign reads.
 Returning to his perch on the hill, Toliver notices that the man's car is still not parked in front of the woman's house. Nonetheless, Toliver thinks he might be inside.
 Toliver decided to cruise the neighborhood, searching for good hiding places for the man's vehicle. When this fails to produce the car, Toliver drives to the man's place of employment, figuring that the woman picked him up at work. This, too, proves fruitless.

 "Never get impatient," he says. "Nothing ever goes like you plan."
 He has been on the stakeout for several hours and the temperature has dropped considerably. Toliver begins to run the motor for temporary warmth.
 Suddenly a light appears in the rear of the house. Then the entire house goes pitch black.
 Toliver knows what that means. The man and woman have not been there this evening. He has been watching the woman's mother, and two male guests.
 After a doughnut and a cup of coffee, he checks by the house one last time. There is no change. Toliver heads for home in the wee hours of the morning. He will check out other leads and try again.
 Checking with various contacts, Toliver has located the man and woman. The man has rented an apartment, he explains, where the two hold their covert encounters.
 All the long hours will soon pay off as Toliver prepares to take his camera, binoculars and van to the apartment for what he anticipates will be one last stakeout.
 But a phone call from his client, the man's wife, ends the case. The man has returned home.
 Private investigator. The name conjures up images of a hard-nosed, gritty sleuth, be-decked in a trenchcoat, with a ruthless stare that can bend steel.
 But Toliver has the appearance of a real estate salesman. The trim, angular Toliver can often be seen about town sporting a leisure suit which enhances his dark, even tan.
 The suntan is easy enough to explain. "I usually end up spending about three months out of the year in Myrtle Beach," he said. "We call it Sin City. Many of our domestic cases end up there."

 While Toliver loathes the idea of spying on someone's spouse, he explains that when he takes a domestic case, his primary concern is to salvage the marriage if possible. But, as Toliver says, the first step is "to get the goods" on the person under surveillance.
 "We find that many domestic cases involve men in their late 40s or early 50s who enter their second childhood. They usually have an affair with a younger woman who is looking for a financially secure older man," Toliver explained.
 Added Richard Cox, another High Point private eye, "Domestic cases are all the same. Old, young, black, white, I can tell you what they (clients) will say before they sit down. There is no originality in excuses. The client generally knows who, but not where."
 Toliver said in a case where infidelity is suspected, it is necessary to show time and opportunity — to show that the spouse in question was in a position to commit adultery.
 "The best thing is to prove it more than once," he explained. "Then you can prove it by continuing circumstantial evidence."

Bonds Set In Rally Hearings

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Bond in amounts ranging from $4,000 to $50,000 was set Tuesday for 13 of 14 men charged in the shooting deaths of five leftist radicals during a demonstration Nov. 3.
 By late night, none of the 13 had posted bond. The 14th defendant did not request it. Twelve have been jailed without bond since their arrest after the rally. The other two have remained in custody since their arrest several days later.
 In hearings that continued late Tuesday evening, Guilford District Court Judge Robert Cecil set the bonds based on whether the defendant had a weapon during the incident in which five members of the Communist Workers Party were shot to death during an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally.
 Cecil dismissed defense arguments that demonstrators had provoked the shootings. Attorneys argued evidence of provocation could be found in the title of the march — "Death to the Klan" — and in threats in the handbill the radicals distributed at the shooting scene.
 Cecil said arguments about the provocations of the demonstrators had merit. "But," he added, "there would have been no problem if they (the defendants) had stayed where they came from (Winston-Salem, Hickory, Gastonia and Lincoln)."
 Twelve of the 14 are charged with five counts of first-degree murder and five counts of conspiracy to commit murder. The other two face the conspiracy charge only.
 The lowest bond, $4,000, was set for 16-year-old Claude M. McBride Jr. of Winston-Salem. He is one of the two charged with conspiracy to commit murder.
 Bond for his stepfather, Raymond M. Caudle, also of Winston-Salem, was set at $10,000. He is the second defendant facing only the conspiracy charge.
 For the other defendants, bond ranged from $25,000 to $50,000.
 They are charged with firing into a crowd of leftist radical demonstrators gathering in a predominantly black housing project for an anti-Klan rally.
 The barrage of bullets and shotgun pellets resulted in the death of four white men and one black woman. Three of the men and the woman died at the scene. The fourth white man died two days later.
 One defendant, Harold Dean Flowers of Lincolnton, suffered minor gunshot wounds.
 Assistant District Attorney Jim Coman presented little new evidence against the 14 during the hearing.
 The defendants claim the demonstrators opened fire first and attacked them with sticks. They said they came to the rally to throw eggs, heckle and disrupt activities, and fired in self defense.
 Defense lawyers claimed their clients had been subjected to "selective prosecution." They asked why none of the demonstrators have been charged with assault with intent to kill for firing weapons at the defendants, beating the defendants' vehicles with sticks or why no one has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill Flowers.
 Police said the shooting of Flowers is under investigation.
 Defense attorneys also argued the demonstrators could be charged with conspiracy because of evidence they held meetings prior to the rally and mad plans to kill Klan members.
 Under $50,000 bonds were Roy Clinton Toney of Gastonia, Roland Wood of Winston-Salem, David Wayne Matthews of Newton, Coleman Blair Pridmore of Lincolnton and Lisford Carl P. Nappier Sr. of Hickory.
 Under $37,500 bonds were Lawrence Gene Morgan of Lincolnton and Terry Wayne Hartsoe of Hickory.
 Receiving $25,000 bonds were Michael Eugene Clinton, Flowers, Billy Joe Franklin and Lee Joseph McLain, all from Lincolnton.
 Bond was not requested for Jerry Paul Smith of Maiden.

Farmers Ponder Impact Of Trend To Bigger Farms

By CHARLES J. ABBOTT
 McCALLSBURG, Iowa (UPI) — When Bob Lounsberry walks past the empty feedlots and silos on his Story County grain farm, he's looking at more than the condition of his corn crop.

Lounsberry, the Iowa secretary of agriculture, is looking at modern agriculture — farming that relies on large budgets, sprawling fields, huge machinery and specialized operations.

His farm, like thousands of others in the Midwest, no longer produces a mix of grain and livestock.

Critics say 30 years of mechanization have brought unequalled prosperity to some farmers, but have exacted a higher price in soil erosion, displacement of millions of farm families, and the decay of small towns.

To some, the changes mean the death of the family farm.

A range of observers — Lounsberry, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland, Catholic Bishop Maurice Dingman of Des Moines, Iowa Farm Bureau President Dean Kleckner and two Iowa State University investigators — question whether some of the changes are beneficial.

However, they say the forces molding agriculture are too powerful, complex and subtle to be described simply as the end of the family farm. Kleckner, for instance, believes the family farm — defined as a one where a family supplies the labor — is going to remain the backbone of U.S. agriculture.

"There's going to be fewer farmsteads ... There also will be fewer and fewer farms. I don't see either trend stopping," Kleckner said. "I wish it wasn't happening."

Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland in March called for a "national dialogue" on the family farm.

"I, for one, do not want to see an America where a handful of giant operators own, manage and control the entire food production system," Bergland said.

"My belief is that there's a size in farming that is optimum and you get above that size and you lose efficiency. It's my belief we should find that size and gear all our policies toward that as a national goal."

The Iowa Crop and Livestock Reporting Service recently reported 121,000 farms in Iowa, a drop of 2,000 in one year. The average farm now is 281 acres, up 5 acres from last year. Dozens of studies document the facts that encourage larger farms. Simply put, farmers know they can make more money by spreading their costs over larger operations. It costs little more to combine 400 acres than to reap 40 acres.

"If you get a $60,000 grain harvesting outfit, you've got to spread that over a lot of acres to keep the cost low," said Dr. Earl Heady, director of the Center for Agricultural and Rural Development at ISU. "We're headed for bigger for now ... I don't see anything to stop this." The push for bigger farms has produced some startling changes. The Iowa hog farmer, a hallmark of the state producing 25 percent of all the swine in the United States, actually is a minority. Production has remained high because of massive hog-feeding operations. A third of Iowa's hogs come from herds of more than 1,000 head.

The cost of operating a farm is staggering. Kleckner estimated a beginning farmer would start out $500,000 in debt if he was conservative and bought a small farm — say 160 acres — used equipment and fed some livestock to make up for his lack of land.

"You'd pretty near need some off-farm income to get by," he said.

Lounsberry agreed with those figures, but he said it's always been rough getting started.

While the price of farming alarms some observers, others say Americans should pay attention to the effects the changes have had on small towns. "From 1949 through 1979, 3.7 million farms have disappeared," Bishop Dingman said in a recent speech opening a conference on land preservation.

"We have seen as a result of the urban migration of these families, that some 617,000 rural businesses have disappeared, that schools have closed down, that churches have been emptied and even that whole towns have disappeared or been reduced to empty buildings housing vagrants." A 1974 study by ISU supplies the statistics suggested in the bishop's speech. Spending in rural communities declines as farm size increases, according to the study by Heady and Steven Sonka.

Off-farm income — the economy of small towns and agriculture-related industries — would drop 16 percent if farmers switch to operations of 520 acres or more. If small farms — 232 acres or less — were dominant, off-farm income would be 15 percent higher. Empty houses and stores in small communities across the Midwest illustrate the pains of declining rural population, the ISU study said. The number of high school graduates in Iowa will drop 30 percent in five years, one ISU rural sociologist said in August.

Although small farms might be appealing, the study said farm income would be highest under a system of large farms while consumer prices would be slightly lower. There also are financial drawbacks to small farms.

"It would impose a greater burden on the families operating these small farms and their incomes would be levels now characterizing poverty unless special means were used to involve them in part-time off-farm work," the study said.

"We're headed for bigger and bigger for now ... and there's nothing to stop this," Heady said. "It has to be some kind of policy that gives some advantages to smaller farms, which we haven't had."

Deodorant And Cologne United

RAMSEY, N.J. (UPI) — Combined deodorant-colognes, which first became popular in Europe, South America and South Africa, are being introduced in the United States by a Ramsey company. They are designed to be sprayed over the entire body, says Tony Veti, marketing manager for the perfume, which also supplies such products abroad. They are combinations of deodorants and splash colognes, Veti says, and "go by such names as deo cologne, perfumed deodorant and perfumed body spray. He said their fragrances vary by brand, and include fresh florals, woody, spice florals and rose floral bouquets.

Simple Solution To Phenomenon

CHICAGO (UPI) — Doctors have found a simple solution to on-the-spot treatment of "Raynaud's Phenomenon", according to an article in the Journal of the American Medical Association, with just one small drawback.

The phenomenon is a medical condition characterized by inadequate blood circulation in the hands brought on by exposure to cold. In addition to discomfort, it sometimes causes disability, according to Dr. Donald R. McIntyre, who has been treated with drugs.

Dr. McIntyre says the simple thing for a sufferer to do is to wave his arms vigorously in the fashion of a softball pitcher, which forces blood to the fingers. The drawback? "A degree of embarrassment that befalls one in public while waving the arms about."

 NEW YORK (UPI) — A grocery trade magazine predicts beer, wine and liquor consumption in the United States will grow 20 pct., 115 pct. and 30 pct. respectively during the 1980s.

The Storyteller Was Entertainer And Teacher

TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer
MADISON, Wis., (AP) — Once upon a time, people told stories. Some of them taught lessons on how people should get along together, like Bible stories before there was a Bible. They helped explain things like thunder and lightning, or life and death. All stories were entertaining, but some were especially fun. These were the stories about princess and princesses, witches, trolls, dragons, giants, flying carpets, evil spells and enchanted kingdoms. For these, you see, were the days of the old magic. But over the years, there came to be a new kind of magic — the magic of books and newspapers and radio and television. People did not need the old storytellers to come around telling the old stories. Oh, some people still liked stories, especially children. But there were only a few storytellers left to tell them. Then a few years ago, young mothers and fathers began telling their children stories they had read or heard when they were young. The children liked the stories, and some of the parents found that they liked telling stories at night more than watching TV. Some parents liked it so much that they began telling them to each other. They began forming groups to tell and listen to stories. In New York City, these young storytellers are people like Laura Simms, who performs before live audiences. Or Robert Rodriguez, who is blind, like the ancient Greek poet Homer. He tells stories over the radio, as Homer probably would if he were alive today. There are also new storytellers like Nancy Shimmel, who roams the country in her white van, "Moby Jane," telling tales of uppity women in folklore. The few old storytellers like Jane Farwell of Ridgeway, Wis., are very happy about all the new young storytellers. "So many young people are enthused about reviving storytelling as a lost art," says Ms. Farwell, who has taught folklore for 35 years. Two of these young storytellers, Reid Miller, 29, and

Mark Wagler, 35, work mostly around Madison, telling stories at schools, libraries, hospitals, nursing homes and about everywhere they can. "I'll tell a story whenever I'm asked, whether I'm paid or not," says Miller, raised on a steady diet of Pecos Bill in Oklahoma and later on voodoo swamp stories when his family moved to Louisiana. Wagler, who has a Wisconsin Humanities Council grant to travel the state collecting folklore for a planned anthology, also has worked at seminars to help teachers develop storytelling techniques. Paid by the city to tell stories, Miller showed up at a playground wearing overalls, a funny hat and carrying a dulcimer and a flute. "Hi, my name is Reid and I tell stories," he told the 20urchins scrambling for a spot near his knee. He used the instruments a couple times, and had the children help his stories with sound effects. It was a warm, sunny day, but there were shudders and goosebumps when he told a ghost story. Miller says there is great satisfaction in telling children stories. "It's one vehicle for socializing youngsters," he explains. "Kids are unabashed. They are seeking information. Stories can show kids the way the world works, and our place in it." After telling stories to children all day, what does a storyteller do for fun at night? Tell stories to adults, naturally. For Miller and Wagler, that often means the Madison Storytellers Guild. It is one of a number of loose groups of parents who gather regularly for an evening of wine and cheese and stories. "It's happening everywhere," says Lynn Berman, who helped found the Storytelling Center of Oneonta, N.Y., last year. A speech pathologist who uses storytelling in her work, Ms. Berman said the Oneonta center's half-dozen storytellers put on 160 school and community storytelling programs in its first 18 months. Prof. Spencer Shaw of the University of Washington in Seattle has traveled all over the world telling stories and teaching storytelling. He says the first duty of a story is to entertain. "It's getting back to the simple, the beautiful type of entertainment that reigned supreme for so many centuries," he says. The entertainment, he says, often enhances the lessons to be learned. "Your folk tales are about human aspirations, human trials, human failures and human successes," he says. "Once in a while, we should let children know that not everything turns out happily ever after."

At a recent gathering, storytellers wondered aloud about drawbacks. Wagler says his son was a late reader, perhaps because of all the stories when he was young. And Madison anesthesiologist Dave Fleming says story characters may have colored his adult relationships. "Maybe one of the reasons I think good people are good and bad people are bad and probably won't ever change is that I've always listened to too many stories," he says. They agreed, however, that stories do more good than harm. "Everybody tells stories," Wagler says. "Some people can talk only through storytelling. But we have a long way to go in establishing that storytelling is a very important art form."

If storytelling continues its revival, that may happen. And Wagler, Miller and other young storytellers will live happily ever after.

PARAMUS, N.J. (UPI) — Vest pocket calculators designed to hang from a watch fob and chain are new from a Japanese manufacturer. The gold metal finish model operates on a 12-hour cycle with am-pm display, or a 24-hour cycle. It shows the hour, minute, second, date and day of the week and has an alarm. The silver metal finish model lacks watch functions but has an independently accessible 3-key memory and built-in function that automatically shuts the power off when the calculator is not used for several minutes.

Relationships Are Influenced

NEW YORK (UPI) — The women's movement has definitely influenced teen-ager relationships, according to a magazine survey. High on the lists of girls' gripes are boys who ask them to mend or iron clothing. Boys indicated intolerance for girls who leave all the decision-making to them about movies or restaurants. Girls also indicated they were turned off by boys whose conversation openers were such lines as, "Can I go where you're going?" and "Wanna party?" They also object to "Baby" and "Schweethaat" as nicknames, and to obscene language. The study was done by CO-ED Magazine.

Funny Girl Straining Hard To Attain Recognition

By FRED FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Meet Nancy Parker, funny girl. Okay, Nancy, be funny. "What do you call a conversation with a friend? A Sara wrap." "I'm not sure, but I'll blame them." The author of the book "I'm not sure, but I'll blame them," says Nancy Parker, 26, is a blonde, obviously, are not. Her thing is "The Wizard of Oz." She does a one woman version of it from wicked witch to munchkins. She's really good at munchkins. "Somewhere, over the rainbow," sings Nancy. Now she's getting personal. Stardom is there over the rainbow. It's been there for more than 8 years now. She sometimes wonders if it ever will come. "I'm not sure, but I'll blame them." The author of the book "I'm not sure, but I'll blame them," says Nancy Parker, 26, is a blonde, obviously, are not. Her thing is "The Wizard of Oz." She does a one woman version of it from wicked witch to munchkins. She's really good at munchkins. "Somewhere, over the rainbow," sings Nancy. Now she's getting personal. Stardom is

She does Lizbeth Scott — "her story deserves to be told," Bette Davis and Joan Crawford in "Baby Jane", Amelia Earhart in flight, Luciana Avedon in face cream but Lava instead of Camay, Julia Child in kitchen, Dina Shore in full gush. She does the nuns at the Roman Catholic high school she attended, here, "Sister Mary Gestapo" among them. That's for starters. She can do a full 45 minutes but will settle for 20, 10 or 2. It's that two that's tough for her kind of act. She gets some big dates. She's gone from $25 a night a year ago to $1,000 — on occasion. She's signed with NBC for a prospective series. It's a year off. She has TV guest spots lined up this fall, is talking some record deals. Nancy's ready. Boy, is she ready.

She's making her pitch. Now is her time. She has a manager. She has agents — for records, tv, film, overseas, nightclubs. The whole schmear. She's in it for the gold ring. But she doesn't do one liners much. At least when she can avoid it, she doesn't. She creates a mood, a feeling. Often a reflection to the time we were young. And people laugh. They've been laughing ever since she got suspended from kindergarten at age 5 for mimicking Ethel Merman singing, "Doing What Comes Naturally." But for many of those TV guest spots, they want one liners. Meet Connie DeNave Management, Inc. This is where she comes in. She's red-haired, buxom, Broadway brassy, ex-showgirl. Kind of latter day Ethel Merman. She talks a lot about Nancy's "game plan." "Nowadays, you gotta have a game plan, dear. "This is a unique artist with a lotta courage," says Connie in her mile-a-minute pitch over coffee at the Green Kitchen, a late night Greek coffee shop where would-be comics ham-and-egg it after "showcasing" acts at little cabarets — "Catch a Rising Star," "The Comic Strip," "Improvisation."

"But sometimes the artist doesn't have anything to do with making it. It's these damn game plans," says Connie. "An artist can be lost because of it. So we've got a game plan. "TV is necessary for a comic's future. Nancy, she's unique. She creates moods. She's no standup comic. No eight jokes a minute. When the talent people saw us, they wanted her to become a standup like everyone else. So we've stayed off TV shows hoping a creative man will be coming through who'll say, 'Wow! You're unique. We want you to do your own thing.' "Me, I'm frightened of making the kid compromise to make a buck." "We got offered a holding deal with Universal. We walked four days on the beach in San Diego trying to decide. We wanted it so bad. We decided to gamble, to give it up on a chance of a future bid for a series with a network. So now we're hoping the gamble paid off." That's the sum of the game plan. And some producers haven't forced a compromise. "They didn't say, 'Kid, change it around and wear a hat.'" She's signed that NBC deal. She's been on the Donny Kirshner show, has had some Las Vegas dates and appeared with Henry Mancini, Johnny Mathis and Sergio Mendez. She has a date on the Merv Griffin show, has tentative dates on the Tonight Show. "We have offers now," Connie says.

There are maybe a dozen truly successful female comics — Carol Burnett, Anne Meara, Joan Rivers, Elaine May, Phyllis Diller, Lily Tomlin, a few more. Anne Meara, of Stiller and —, has given Nancy and other rising comedienne her encouragement. There are more women comedienne now than in the past, she says. She names Nancy, Zella Rasmusen, Marilyn Sokol, a few more. "The ones I mention are probably only the tip of the iceberg." Anne describes herself as a comic actress, which is what Nancy says she also is. She says she never was a standup comic — "I always worked with Jerry." She followed much the same route as Nancy is following — some summer stock, the comic showcase clubs, the TV guest spots.

The woman comic's role is changing "only in the sense the times are changing," she says. "There've always been woman comics working the clubs. Some were famous for doing party records — blue humor. Like in the '50s. But they never had national acclaim." Now, almost anything goes in nightclubs — "there are no taboos left" — but the acts must be cleaned up for television. Of their acts, she says,

"You'll always find comics start with their own memories — the audience out there can identify with the horrors of school, first dates." Nancy says she grew up watching "The Wizard of Oz" as a member of the "TV generation." "I still watch it every year it shows up on television." Her act grew from her mimicry of Oz characters for high school talent shows and in impromptu shows put on for friends after school. She had determined on her funny girl career by the time she graduated. For $2 a week, she attended "the College of Comedy," a course conducted in the back of a Manhattan bar. She learned more in a $5-a-week class which met in a woman's home. She began playing small nightclubs. Developing her act, she says, has been "an every night thing for me." Much of her time is spent developing her own material. "Singers can do other people's songs," she says. "Comedians have to do their own thing."

MEET NANCY PARKER, her thing is monologue mimicry. At 26, chasing stardom, she has a suitcase full of material of her own. (UPI Photo)

Hospital Serves Its Own Wine

MADISON, Ind. (UPI) — Wine from its own vineyard is served selected elderly patients at Madison State Hospital in this south central Indiana town. By prescription only, geriatric patients receive wine with their evening meal. Hospital superintendent Dr. Otto McAtee conceived the program a few years ago as a way of stimulating patients' poor appetites and helping them relax. The wine is made by Villa Medeo Winery from concord grapes grown on hospital land.

That Great Water War Of Today Is All For Cash

By FRED FERGUSON
NEW YORK (UPI) — Three years ago, you could take a drink of water and not have to get into a big discussion about it.

No more. Drink a glass of H<sub>2</sub>O and you have to explain how you expect to survive on tap water, discourse on the attributes of your bottled brand or listen to someone else rant about his brand.

Drenched in water ads and commercials in which basic fact gets spiked with hype and hoopla, almost everyone has acquired a viewpoint.

It's all Bruce Nevins' fault. He got Perrier to ante up $2 million for a little 1977 advertising campaign. He pitched that sophisticates could get status by ordering water in the poshest places. No 2 cents plain, though — $2 sparkling.

The health-and-exercise fad was cranking up. It was okay to swear off alcohol, sugar and saccharin so long as you did it gracefully. Guzzling water was a spiffy way — what watermen like to call a "socially acceptable alternative."

One guess is there are in the United States 700 peddlers of H<sub>2</sub>O bottled one way or another. One innovator got into a Manhattan department store with $2.50 bottles advertised as pure New York City tap water.

Some of the watermen have been around a few years. Poland Spring has been bottling and selling the stuff in Maine since 1793; Saratoga in New York since 1872; Mountain Valley in Hot Springs, Ark., 1873.

Watermen — they prefer to be called purveyors of mineral water, sparkling or otherwise — catch on quick. They saw Perrier go from less than $1 million in U.S. sales in 1976 to $30 million in '78, with '79 expected to peg in at $120 million. Nevins' ad budget, incidentally, also is up — to $7 million this year.

That's gold in that thar water, you might say. John Scott, head of Mountain Valley, figures all bottled water sales in the U.S. will climb $50 million to hit $290 million this year, $500 million by 1983.

Scott claims his spring water — not sparkling — is the only one with full national distribution. But the sparklers are getting there fast, Perrier in particular.

So you can't turn on a radio or TV without getting a water pitch. Some might call it the great water war. The biggest fight is over sparkle.

Talk to Bill White, 40, a Colorado man who, by way of Yale and the Bank of Aspen, got control of Great Western United Corp. for a time, tried his hand at politics, then bought out Saratoga Vichy, renaming it Saratoga Natural Sparkling Mineral Water.

"Don't call it Saratoga Vichy. When I got it, they were mixing in salt and bicarbonate and couldn't figure why their market was declining. Someone said it tasted like ocean water with Alka Seltzer in it.

"Now, ours is a truly natural sparkling water," he said.

"When we say natural carbonation, we mean a product in which all the water and all the carbon dioxide are issued from the same source. Every mineral water company around is making a whole bunch of claims.

"Poland buys bubbles from a well in Colorado, tank trucks it to Maine and injects it there.

"Perrier says its water is natural and they're selling the world 120 million cases of it. They must have hit one of the world's largest wells."

About the same time White took over Saratoga in 1977, Paul den Haene, a Las Vegas soft drink (7-Up, Canada Dry) distributor, bought Poland Spring and hired Mike Schott, Diet Pepsi's marketing manager, to push his product. They are not the only soft drink men who've hopped on the water wagon, incidentally.

"Natural is natural," says Schott. "Sure we bring our CO<sub>2</sub> from Colorado. We disclose we are adding it. Perrier, when pressed on the issue, does state that they add natural carbonation, too."

Not for a minute does Perrier, represented here by Great Waters of France, Inc., want to get into this.

Adding 25 new U.S. markets to the 26 already entered, coming close to garnering a whole 1 percent of the national soft drink market, Perrier's spokeswoman says, "We do not want to be involved at this time with any competitive stories."

But about Perrier's naturalness, Jennifer Walker does say, "As we claim, Perrier is 100 percent naturally carbonated. It is carbonated when it comes out of the ground. But by French law, we must maintain a certain level of carbonation. Some carbonation is dispersed at the surface and before the surface. So we tap the carbonation in the well below ground and augment it with its own carbonation at the surface."

She says the law is intended to maintain the quality of the water decreed by Napoleon III in 1863 "for the good of France."

"We," says Miss Walker, "are maintaining the integrity of history."

So much for sparkle.

There's the endorsement contest.

Perrier got it going with Orson Welles doing commercials in melodious tones. It also cites Jacqueline Onassis and Sen. George McGovern among its aficionados.

Now Poland Spring has Mae West, whose memory goes back a way.

"I remember that years ago Calvin Coolidge served it in the White House and FDR introduced Winston Churchill to it,"

she says in a commercial. "And Howard Hughes couldn't get enough of it."

Jimmy Breslin and Richard Burton are said to favor France's Badoit.

Saratoga recalls how George Washington, Diamond Jim Brady, Lillian Russell, Victor Herbert and FDR visited Saratoga Springs and drank the elixir.

Fluggi of Italy got praise from Michaelangelo.

Evian of France notes its Lake Geneva spa was frequented by Vanderbilts, Rothschilds, Rockefellerers, the Aga Khan, King Farouk, a czar — they don't say which — Chaplain and Garbo.

Mountain Valley gets its approval from more recent drinkers including Frank Sinatra, Yono Oke, Farrah Fawcett Majors, Muhammed Ali, Arnold Palmer and, oh yes, Secretariat and Kelso.

The watermen have one main pitch on which they generally agree — that bottled water is good for you.

They are careful about the medicinal attributes of their products but note European medical opinions that bottled natural spring mineral water has therapeutic value for many ailments.

Evian has Dr. Samuel Kunin, a Southern California urologist, as a consultant and Mountain Valley has consulted Dr. Arthur G. Schoch of the Southwestern Medical Foundation in Dallas.

Perrier says, as do others, it has "no chemical additives, no preservatives."

Schott of Poland Springs sums up some more obvious advantages cited by all. Bottled water, he says, "is a socially acceptable alternative to other pleasure beverages that contain alcohol, caffeine, saccharin, sugar or calories."

NEW YORK, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1890

AN OLD STORY — The mineral water drinking pavilion at the Saratoga Springs Co. is depicted on the cover of an issue of Harper's Weekly in 1890. It is estimated that bottled water sales in this country will hit $290 million this year. (UPI Photo)

Save 10¢ on Cool Whip.® And make Thanksgiving dessert taste like a million.

Thanksgiving isn't complete without pumpkin pie. It's traditional. But no matter what your Thanksgiving dessert is, it won't be complete without Cool Whip® Non-Dairy Whipped Topping. ## Holiday Flour Arrangement

We've arranged to give you 20¢ off on a 5lb. or larger bag of Martha White Flour

One of my favorite holiday treats is a big bowl of Danish Pudding and Orange sauce, made with Martha White Self-Rising Flour. Goodness gracious, it's good! You can trust Martha White for better baking.

- DANISH PUDDING
1 cup shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
3 eggs, beaten
1 cup milk
3 cups sifted Martha White Self-Rising Flour
8 ounce package chopped dates
1 cup chopped pecans
Heat oven to 350°. Grease and flour bottom of a 10-inch stem pan. Take out 1/4 cup sifted flour, and flour dates and nuts. Cream together shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Fold in eggs. Lightly stir in flour alternately with milk. Fold in floured dates and nuts. Turn into pan. Bake 1 hour. Immediately after removing from oven, spoon Orange Sauce over the top. Note: If using Martha White Plain Flour add 4 1/2 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt to flour.
- ORANGE SAUCE
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons grated orange rind
1 cup orange juice
Combine above ingredients in small saucepan and bring to boil. Remove from heat and cool slightly. Let pudding cool in pan. Top individual servings with whipped cream.

20¢ MARTHA WHITE FLOUR 20¢ OFF 5LB. OR LARGER OFF

Tabloid Is Big Voice In Energy Issues

By LEE CATTERALL
Associated Press Writer
LANDER, Wyo. (AP) — High Country News, a tiny environmental newspaper with a powerful following, has outlasted adversity to become a respected and heeded voice in the ongoing debate over development of the staggering energy resources in the American West.

A biweekly tabloid produced above a dress shop in this central Wyoming town, the newspaper is a fixture in offices of decision-makers in state capitals in the Rocky Mountain region and in Washington.

Surrounded by Wyoming's beauty and vast mineral riches, a staff working for subsistence wages has thrust the paper prominently into the debate over industrial and energy development in the West.

Its central theme, for more than a decade, has been the threat of development that could trample the area and bring hordes of people into the rugged but fragile high plains and basins of the West.

"I think open space is at a premium these days," says Joan Nice, the paper's managing editor. "Some people come out here in search of that and they end up destroying it."

Every state in the Union is represented in the High Country News' 3,500-card subscription file, and more than a third of the subscribers live outside the Rocky Mountain area. "It doesn't reach many people, but it seems to reach the right ones," says publisher Tom Bell, who sells the paper to its staffers.

Kathryn Fletcher, formerly with the Environmental Defense Fund in Denver and now a Washington resident and one of President Carter's environmental advisors, is one regular reader.

"It reminds me of home," she says. "It's very accurate and it rings true. I find that it often has more complete reporting of Western issues than the other things I pick up to read."

High Country News staff members look with pride on a long list of early warnings sounded in their paper.

Eight years ago, they raised alarm about the implications of large-scale coal development in the West unless more stringent reclamation laws were passed. Five years before synthetic fuels became a serious consideration, they reported in depth on possibilities — and environmental dangers — of oil shale conversion and coal conversion to natural gas.

High Country News warned in June of troubles for Yellowstone National Park — "Could Old Faithful Falter?" — through geothermal development, then suggested by exploration of the hot underground lava surrounding the park.

High Country News nearly folded only two months after its launching as Camping News Weekly in 1969. The founder, country newsman Ray Savage, distributed thousands of copies in Yellowstone National Park campgrounds as subscription bait, but the tourists did not bite.

Bell, an environmentalist who had tried newspapering, then took over the paper. He began writing more about preserving the environment than camping in it, and changed the name to High Country News.

"I didn't see any other paper in Wyoming covering issues as I thought they should be covered," says Bell. "Nobody was questioning the possibility that Wyoming could be overrun."

Bell poured $30,000 into the paper, selling his ranch near Lander in the process. But in 1973, High Country News was so deep in the red, it announced its imminent demise.

The readers came through with letters, encouragement, and more than $7,000 in contributions. Bell paid the paper's debts, agreed to keep publishing and even began to pay salaries — now $500 a month.

Robert Redford, actor, environmentalist and Utah resident, is one of the paper's strongest supporters. He became a $1,000-a-year contributor and came forward with an equal sum for a medical fund when four of the paper's eight staffers were involved in an auto accident.

Justus Bavarskis, the paper's 36-year-old news editor, was killed in the crash. Contributing editor Dan Whipple suffered back injuries. Associate editor Marjane Ambler and office manager Jazmyne McDonald suffered broken collar bones.

Lynn Dickey, then Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler's conservation director, drove from Cheyenne to help. Writers throughout the West began donating articles to fill the paper.

Luxurious Estates Are 'Recycled'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — In its heyday, Whitemarsh Hall, enshrined on a hill overlooking Whitemarsh Valley, was truly the ultimate of country estates. Labeled the "Versailles of America" by French statesman Georges Clemenceau, the $2 million dream house was constructed over a five-year period beginning in 1916 by investment banker Edward Stotesbury for his second wife, Eva. Built of Indiana white limestone and decorated with columns and statues, the six-story, Italian Renaissance-style mansion had 147 rooms, 12 bathrooms with gold-plated fixtures, three elevators, a ballroom, a movie theater, indoor tennis and squash courts, a Roman bath and a gymnasium. Whitemarsh Hall now lies in shambles. Its interior has been stripped and demolished, scarred by fire, defaced by graffiti and buried in rubble. It will soon be razed, and 183 townhouses will be built on the site. Like Whitemarsh Hall, many of the grand old palaces that gave the Philadelphia suburbs their reputation for residential splendor are passing into oblivion. Sweeping lawns and formal gardens have been carved into geometric subdivisions and plastered with ranchers and split-levels, often more modest than the carriage houses where servants once lived. Other majestic estates, homes of Philadelphia's merchant bankers and railroad barons, are being recycled as school buildings, libraries, museums and even entire parks. The old estates began vanishing about 50 years ago, and the process continues, propelled by factors such as the personal income tax, division of family fortunes and, lately, soaring land values, property taxes and utility and maintenance costs.

"Every year or so, we lose another one or two old estates," said Joseph Newby, a Lower Merion Township planning technician. "Most of them are breaking up because lifestyles have changed. People don't want to spend the time or the money on them any more. And the way land values are around here, it's much to their benefit to break them up."

For example, two years ago an 11-acre parcel, part of the old Foerderer estate in Gladwyne, was sold for $38,000 an acre. After roads and water and sewer lines had been installed, a vacant one-acre lot was recently resold for $72,000. But some developers who are buying and building on the old estates are trying to salvage the mansions and are plotting new houses in a way that complements existing landscapes. "Years ago, the attitude was, 'Let's level the old mansions and start over,'" said Raymond Freyberger Jr., a planner with First Valley Forge Corp., which plans to build 180 homes on the old Ellis and Strawbridge estates in Radnor and Haverford townships. "Today there's more appreciation for the environment and the esthetic value of these old homes. The idea now is to work with the old mansions rather than against them." In subdividing the estates and reducing the land around the mansions, developers have made some of them affordable again as private homes. In other cases, municipalities and school districts have purchased old estates and are using them for anything from seminars to wedding receptions. An example is the Willows in Radnor Township. Built in 1910 by John Sinnott, son of a successful distiller, and once called "The Jewel of the Darby Creek Valley," it is now leased for bar mitzvahs and wedding receptions. The 23-room mansion, with Spanish-style, red-tiled roof and balconies with wrought-iron railings, sits atop a grassy hill that tumbles down to a stream and a 2.5-acre lake bordered by weeping willows and populated by honking geese. In 1973, the township bought the 48-acre estate for $1.1 million from a developer who had planned to build 60 single-family homes on the property. In 1976, the township began leasing it to the public. By the end of this year, about 200 activities will have taken place at the estate. "It's proven to be a tremendous asset to the community," said James Dittmar, the township's director of parks and recreation. "We make enough money to pay for the upkeep of the property, and we're also providing a place for local residents to hold business and social functions."

Holidays Bring A Flood Of Books Worth Giving

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — It's been said "a good book is the best of friends," so those wondering what gift to give a friend this coming holiday season might take a look at books.

As usual, there's a lot to look at. The publishing industry again has produced a flood of titles to browse through. The books come in all shapes and sizes. Many are nicely illustrated. Their contents cover just about every topic one could want to read about, ranging from art to photography, from travel to nature, and from war to entertainment. Some of the many, many titles available are mentioned below.

"Degas" by Ian Dunlop is one of a number of handsome art books available. It's a large volume, containing 45 color plates and some 160 black-and-white pictures of works by the noted French artist and is published by Harper & Row.

Abrams again has published a number of attractive art books. They include: "Byzantine Art," by Alice Bank; "Treasures of American Folk Art," by Robert Bishop; "The Life and Works of Winslow Homer," by Gordon Hendricks, and "Alex Katz," by Irving Sandler.

Other art items to pick from include:

"Legacy," (Crowell) by Eric Sloan; "Ladder of Angels: Scenes From The Bible Illustrated by Children of the World," (Seabury) by Madeleine L'Engle; "A Picture History of Art," (Phaidon) by Christopher Lloyd; "The Magnificent Heritage of Ancient Greece," (Newsweek Books) by Lucia C. Raghianti; "Henri Rousseau," (Crown) by Dora Vallier; "A Sketchbook of Birds," (Holt, Rinehart & Winston) by Charles Tunnicliffe; "Sylvia Pankhurst: Artist & Crusader," (Paddington Press) by Richard Pankhurst; "100 Masterpieces of Art," (Putnam) by Marina Vaizey; "The Democratic Art," (Godine) by Peter Marzio; "Edward Hopper as Illustrator," (Norton) by Gail Levin, and "Dali," (Morrow) by Ramon Gomez de la Serna.

Photography fans ought to enjoy "Yosemite and the Range of Light," (New York Graphic Society) by Ansel Adams, which contains 116 photos.

Among the other books dealing with photography are: "Album of a Nation: The Many Faces of Britain," (Paddington Press) by The Press Association, which contains nearly 300 pictures that span over a century of British life; "Atget's Gardens," (Doubleday) by William H. Adams; "Recollections: 10 Women of Photography," (Viking) by Margaretta K. Mitchell; "Mountbatten: 80 Years in Pictures," (Viking) foreword by Lord Mountbatten; "The Good Life: Between Two World Wars With a Candid Camera," (Morrow) by V.C. Buckley; "One of a Kind: Recent Polaroid Color Photography," (Go-dine) edited by Belinda Rathbone, and "The Last Africans," (Rizzoli) by Gert Chesti.

Many people are interested in distant lands and cultures but can't always travel to them and see things at first hand. So, for the armchair traveler, books are available. Among them: "The Land of Ireland," (Abrams) by Brian De Breffny; "The Discoverers: An Encyclopedia of Explorers & Exploration," (McGraw-Hill) edited by Helen Delpar; "The Old Patagonian Express: By Train Through the Americas," (Houghton Mifflin) by Paul Theroux; "Chinese Encounters," (Farrar, Strauss & Giroux) by Inge Morath and Arthur Miller, and "Behind the Great Wall: A Photographic Essay on China," (Atheneum) by Mary and Theodore Cross.

Readers interested in biography, autobiography and memoirs have a wide selection of books to pick and choose from. They include:

"William Pitt the Younger," (Putnam) by Robin Reilly; "Cissy: The Extraordinary Life of Eleanor Medill Patterson," (Simon & Schuster) by Ralph G. Martin; "Diaghilev," (Atheneum) by Richard Buckle; "Freud, Biologist of the Mind: Beyond the Psychoanalytic Legend," (Basic Books) by Frank J. ## Irish Entering Cookware Mart

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Irish have entered the American cookware market with a line of enameled cast-iron oven-to-table ware in solid colors, chocolate brown and white.

All have rustproof, ground cast-iron bottoms. The saucepan and frypans have steel-reinforced hardwood handles with eyes for handling. The casseroles and lids stack for storage and the lids double as shallow pans for range-top cooking and baking.

The cookware is available individually or in a three-piece starter set: a baking dish, the 1½-quart saucepan and a 10-inch frypan.

New Techniques In Sunglasses

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — New sunglasses from a Rochester manufacturer combine two techniques — changing colors and a mirror finish. The mirror coating and automatic adjustment of color depth provide protection for all types of glare conditions, the manufacturer says. The lenses, amber colored on overcast days, turn brown on warm, sunny days and gray for peak protection on cold, brilliant days.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Nov. 1 through Nov. 7.

HOUSE

WELFARE BILL — The House passed, 222 for and 184 against, a bill making major changes in the federal-state welfare system, including the establishment of what amounts to a guaranteed minimum income for recipients of Aid for Families with Dependent children (AFDC). The bill (HR 4904), estimated to cost the Treasury at least $3 billion annually, was sent to the Senate.

The minimum income would be achieved by setting a floor under what states can pay to AFDC recipients. Beginning in 1981, no state could pay less than 65 per cent of the federal poverty level (today, 65 per cent of the level is $4,700 for a family of four). Thirteen states, all in the South and Southwest, now have AFDC payments of less than 65 per cent of the federal poverty level.

Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., a supporter, said of those members opposed to the bill: "It is discouraging that members of this body who enjoy the munificence of a large federal salary — and many of them do very little work themselves, I might add — would criticize" the setting of minimum state welfare payments.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., an opponent, said: "This legislation is what the liberals of this country want, but I know it is not what the taxpayers of this country want."

Members voting "yea" favored the bill.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Rep. Walter Jones, D-1, did not vote.

NO WORK, NO WELFARE — The House voted, 200 for and 205 against, to reject a Republican substitute for the welfare bill (HR 4904; see previous vote). The GOP proposal would have allowed a work requirement for welfare recipients and provided states with block grants with which they could fashion their own welfare systems subject to certain federal controls. Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., a supporter, said the GOP plan "would keep the focus of the welfare program on the states (and) reward them for a tight, well-run program."

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., an opponent, said the block-grant approach would perpetuate the system in which some states pay less in welfare benefits than do other states.

Members voting "yea" favored the work-requirement and block-grant approach.

Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay." Jones did not vote.

FRONT-DOOR GI BILL — The House adopted, 236 for and 115 against, an amendment to use the student loan program to attract better-educated volunteers to the military. By entering certain fields of active or reserve duty, holders of student loans would have up to $1,000 (or 20 per cent, whichever is higher) of their loan forgiven by the government. The amendment was attached to a bill (HR 5192) extending the Higher Education Act of 1965, passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y., a supporter, said: "Our military weapons are becoming more and more sophisticated and it is essential to our national defense to have the best educated service person."

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., an opponent, said as chairman of the Education and Labor Committee, "I do not really want to go out across the country and try to explain (the program) to people who are already complaining that we do not do a good enough job in collecting back the money the federal government advances for education."

Members voting "yea" favored the use of student-loan forgiveness as an incentive to military service.

Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Fountain voted "nay." Jones and Martin did not vote.

SENATE
AIRCRAFT CARRIER — The Senate rejected, 20 for and 72 against, an amendment to kill a $2.1 billion appropriation to build what will be the 5th nuclear-powered aircraft carrier in the U.S. fleet. This vote killed an amendment to delete funding for the Nimitz-class carrier. It came during debate on a defense appropriations bill (HR 5359) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wisc., who favored killing the appropriation, said: "We are paying billions for a custom-made Cadillac when a small Chevy will do just as good a job for us ... For the $10 billion construction cost of the carrier and its planes and its much greater operations costs ... we could build and operate a far more useful flotilla."

Sen. John Warner, R-Va., an advocate of the carrier, said: "We are an island nation heavily dependent on the sea for our economic and military security ... The aircraft carrier is an essential part of the U.S. naval fleet and is the key to our continued maritime superiority." Senators voting "nay" wanted to build another nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay." "SYNFUEL" — The Senate rejected, 37 for and 57 against,

Pigs Brought In By Columbus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pigs are not native to the Western Hemisphere, according to National Geographic magazine.

The first pigs in the New World reportedly were brought from Europe by Christopher Columbus, who left eight of them on the island of Haiti. From that original stock, the animals were transplanted throughout the West Indies.

an amendment to scale down a proposed synthetic fuels program. The vote left intact a plan to set up an Energy Security Corp. that would spend $20 billion to create a synthetic fuel industry through price supports, government purchase agreements, direct loans, loan guarantees, joint ventures with private firms, and government ownership of production plants.

The amendment, offered to a bill (S 932) headed for final passage, would have substituted a less-ambitious $3 billion plan administered by the Department of Energy and without direct loans, joint ventures, or government-owned plants.

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a supporter of the amendment, said the larger program "threatens to turn synfuels facilities into gold-plated Edsels."

Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., an opponent, said the choice was between "a puny bill — really a research and development bill — or a significant bill."

Senators voting "yea" favored a less extensive synfuel program.

Helms voted "yea." Morgan voted "nay."

NOW ACCOUNTS — By a vote of 37 for and 51 against, the Senate rejected an amendment preventing banks and savings and loans from paying interest on checking accounts without the approval of the states in which they operate. The amendment, proposed to a bill (HR 4986) permitting "NOW accounts" at federally-chartered financial institutions, would have limited such accounts to states where state-chartered institutions could offer competitive services. Its effect would have been to slow the spread of interest-bearing checking accounts. The bill was passed and sent to conference with the House.

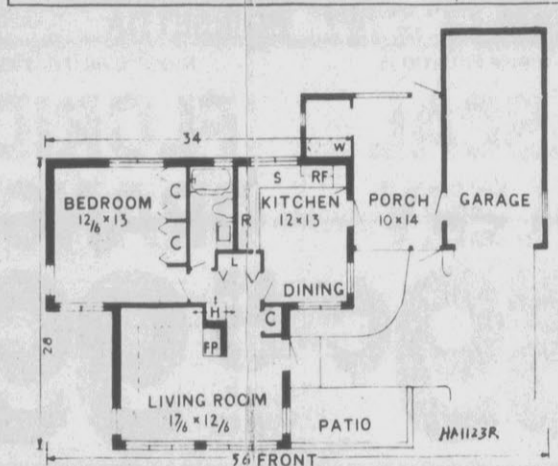

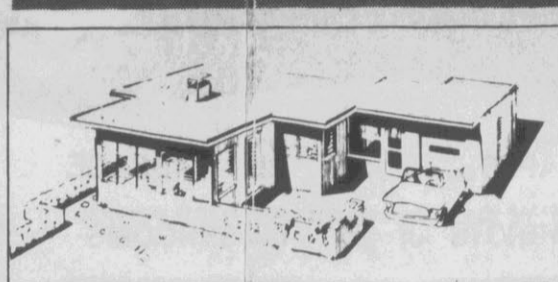

Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., the sponsor, said that under his amendment "if the state does not want NOW accounts, they do not have to have them."

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., an opponent, said the amendment "has the potential for fragmenting our national banking system."

Most senators voting "nay" favored the nationwide spread of NOW accounts.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

Used Car Often Primary Vehicle

NEW YORK (UPI) — About three out of four buyers of secondhand cars purchase them as the household's first or primary vehicle, according to a new, nationwide survey by a car rental company. William Welty, the company's vice president of used car operations, says almost one used car buyer in four has never owned a new model.

Cost is their main reason for buying used vehicles, Welty says. The poll found the typical used car bought in the United States is a recent-model, one-owner, standard-sized sedan, loaded with options and driven less than 30,000 miles.

Former U.S. Treasurer In Tamales

By STEPHEN FOX Associated Press Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — Her signature appears on millions of $1 bills, but today Romana Acosta Banuelos is back to making money the way she did for years before becoming U.S. Treasurer — making tortillas, tamales and other Mexican food specialties.

Mrs. Banuelos was the highest-ranking Mexican-American appointee of the Nixon administration. Now she runs Ramona's Mexican Food Products Inc., which she began 30 years ago in suburban Gardena. She also is active in banking and community affairs and glances occasionally at the 3rd Supervisorial District of East Los Angeles.

Mrs. Banuelos seemed the ideal political appointment when President Nixon chose her for treasurer in 1971. But the nomination ran into immediate controversy culminating in televised Senate hearings after immigration officials found illegal aliens working in her plant.

Mrs. Banuelos, who believes political enemies were behind the immigration raid, satisfied the Senate that she was unaware of the illegal workers and was confirmed unanimously. Raymond Farrell, then head of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, later termed the raid "a put-up job."

But she shows no bitterness over the controversy and says she enjoyed her three years in Washington.

Her company, which this year will gross more than $12 million, had its beginnings in a small shed in front of the house where she was raising two sons who are now vice presidents of Ramona's.

Mrs. Banuelos' second husband, Alejandro, invented some of the food processing machinery used at the plant.

Ramona's — the company got that name because everyone kept mispronouncing Romana — now has more than 400 employees. But Mrs. Banuelos, 53, still watches over the making of the tamales, burritos, chile rellenos and other products that are sold in markets and on trucks throughout Southern California and in several other states.

She resigned as U.S. Treasurer in 1974 because "there was nothing for me to do," Mrs. Banuelos says. "I'm a very energetic and active person with a lot of plans, so there was no reason for me to stay there. Also, the company suffered while I was gone, quite a bit."

Mrs. Banuelos became a Republican after working for former California Gov. Edmund "Pat" Brown's first election as a Democrat.

"We felt we had participated in his election," she recalls. "Then Brown was asked at a banquet in East Los Angeles if he intended to make any Mexican-American appointments. His response was 'Yes, if there are any who are qualified.' It was the same story we had heard before. If we were qualified to vote for him, there should have been someone who could be appointed."

Nixon, says Mrs. Banuelos, made more Mexican-American appointments than any other president, including Carter.

Mrs. Banuelos' choice for president is John Connally, who was treasury secretary when she was treasurer. She doesn't plan to become active in national politics, but says she'd like to be supervisor of the largely Mexican-American 3rd District of Los Angeles.
