To Release Minorities Among U.S. Hostages

By SAJID RIZVI

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini Saturday directed Moslem militants to free black and women hostages in the U.S. Embassy but ordered all white American men — whom he called "skilled spies" — kept captive until the shah is returned to Iran.

In explaining the move, Khomeini said the women would be freed because of their "special rights" under Moslem law and the blacks because they had "probably been forced" to come to Iran because of American "tyranny."

President Carter welcomed the announcement, which the White House said would free "about a dozen" people, and called on Iran to free immediately the rest of the hostages.

The State Department declined to say how the freed hostages would leave Iran or their destination but sources in West Germany said preparations to debrief and, if necessary, hospitalize the hostages were being made in Frankfurt.

At the request of acting Foreign Minister Abol Hassan Bani-Sadr, Khomeini's son, Syed Ahmad, arrived Saturday night at the compound to ensure safe conduct for the hostages from the embassy to the Foreign Ministry about a mile away.

No international flights were scheduled to leattave Iran before 7:30 a.m. (11 p.m. EST). But airport sources did not rule out a special evacuation flight for the hostages. A Foreign Affairs Ministry spokesman said the hostages could leave Iran as early as this morning.

Moslem students announced their acceptance of Khomeini's order over loudspeakers from the graffiti-covered U.S. Embassy walls and hailed his decision to keep all white men in captivity until the shah was returned to iran.

Outside the compound, several hundred demonstrators left over from an afternoon antiU.S. march by policemen and armed forces awaited release of the hostages, along with about as many Western journalists.

Khomeini issued his order, replete with anti-American denunciations, 14 days and 90 minutes after some 400 students swept into the embassy carrying knives and clubs and seized about 70 hostages, including 62 Americans, on Nov. 4.

"Dear students," Khomeini said, "hand over to the Foreign Affairs Ministry those blacks and women whose spying is not proved so that (the ministry) expels them immediately from Iran."

From his order it was evident the students, led by Ayatollah Mooshavi Khoyeni, were to determine the hostages' guilt or innocence.

"The Iranian nation is determined not to allow these dens of spying to continue their shameful activities and, until the extradition of Mohammed Reza Pahlavi for trial and return of whatever he has plundered, this den of spying and the skilled spies will remain in their present position," Khomeini said.

Khomeini told the students women were accorded "special rights" under Islam and that the blacks should also go free because they "have lived under the pressure and tyranny of

Former Governor Bob Scott Enters Gubernatorial Race

By CRAIG WEBB

HAW RIVER, N.C. (UPI) — Former Gov. Robert W. Scott Saturday entered the race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, promising a "government of compassion instead of computers."

Scott served notice that he will challenge incumbent Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. in next year's primary during a barbecue for about 1,500 people at his Haw River Farm, next door to where his father, former Gov. Kerr Scott, had his political outings.

The fourth generation politician enters the race without the support of the state's Democratic machine and without many of the supporters who helped get him elected lieutenant governor in 1964 and governor in 1968.

Scott admitted to reporters it will be tough to defeat Hunt, yet asserted there is enough unhappiness with the current administration to get himself elected.

"My support will not be found among the traditional political power structure," Scott said. "These people come from all walks of life and you don't see their names in the papers. They're just plain folks."

He said those people deserve a choice next May's Democratic primary.

He said his campaign will be based on reorienting state government resources from other programs to those for the elderly, infirm and the mentally handicapped.

"I want to provide for you a government of compassion instead of computers," he said. "I want to bring back the human element into the decision making of government."

Scott aimed many of his comments at state government workers and teachers, who are known to be displeased with Hunt because he would not support the pay increase they sought. Scott told reporters before his announcement he considered those groups "fertile ground" for votes.

He also called for better government rather than a bigger government.

"Our people do not want and they do not need a lot of new governmental programs," he said. "They don't want a growing bureaucracy, more paper work, more people on the payroll and more buildings to put them in. We just need to do a better job with what we've already got."

Among other issues Scott stressed:

— More work on roads.

— An effort to hire North Carolinians first before considering people from outside the state for government jobs.

— A re-emphasis on teaching in the classroom.

— A more wary attitude towards accepting federal grants that may have hidden strings attached.

— A change in the top leadership in the state.

Straw Votes

Ronald Reagan Victor

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
United Press International

Ronald Reagan easily defeated former Governor John Connally in the non-binding Florida Republican straw vote Saturday with former U.N. Ambassador George Bush a surprisingly strong third.

Reagan got 36.4 percent of the 1,326 votes — almost exactly 10 percent better than Connally who had predicted he would finish within 5 percent of the former California governor.

The vote at the Republican state convention in Orlando was a blow to Connally who spent an unprecedented $300,000 to defeat the Republican frontrunner in their first head to head clash.

The results were also a blow to Rep. Philip Crane who finished fourth with 13.8 percent. The straw vote ballot was originally desiged by Crane's supporters to lift his candidacy off the ground.

But Crane salvaged some by finishing first when the delegates were asked who their second choice was for president. In that contest Crane got 34.7 percent; Bush 24.5 percent and Connally and Reagan each just over 10 percent.

"I am delighted," Reagan said. "I am also humbled."

Bush's showing was significant because he is a moderate campaigning in a relatively conservative state and because he has won two straw polls in Iowa and one in Maine.

The official results were Reagan 483 votes or 36.4 percent; Connally 354 votes or 26.6 percent; Bush 280 votes or 21.1 percent and Crane 183 votes or 13.8 percent.

Senators Howard Baker and Robert Dole each got nine votes; Sen. Larry Pressler 6 votes and former Treasury Secretary William Simon and former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen one vote each.

First Lady Pinch-Hitting

By ARONOLD SWAISLAK

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — First Lady Rosalynn Carter, pinch-hitting for the president, told cheering Florida Democrats Saturday "those in authority in Iran must understand that the American people hold them accountable for the safety of our fellow citizens."

Mrs. Carter, loudly applauded by several thousand delegates to the Florida Democratic Convention, called the capture of the U.S. embassy in Tehran and the holding of hostages "an outrage totally outside the bounds of international law."

"We of course welcome the announcement that some of the hostages will be released," Mrs. Carter said. "But we cannot forget that other hostages are still being held. Our goal must be the safe release of every single one of them."

She called the Iranian situation "the most trying period of his presidency" and paid tribute to her husband's reaction "with calmness, with courage and with measured action."

She also paid tribute to the Florida Democrats, who were the Higher Oil Prices Could Mean Major Recession

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — High-ranking Carter administration officials say that if oil-exporting nations decide on another big increase in prices, they could push the U.S. economy into a major recession.

"Another big oil price rise would be extremely difficult for us and the Western world generally to swallow," said one such official, who asked not to be named. He said it would make an already difficult economic situation much worse.

Officials agree that some increase is likely. But they disagree on whether the Iranian crisis has darkened the price outlook. Some feel it has; others say it should make no significant difference. None wants to be quoted by name.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries already have increased prices 60-70 percent this year, and they will meet in Caracas Dec. 17 to decide whether to raise them further in 1980.

One U.S. official said there is reason to believe OPEC may increase the price by a dollar or two over the current OPEC ceiling price of $23.50 a barrel, a hike that would not be disastrous.

A few OPEC nations, Nigeria, Libya and Algeria, already have broken the ceiling, with Nigeria's oil priced at $26.27 a barrel. Industry analysts have forecast a per-barrel increase of $2 to $4 at Caracas.

"Although we assume there will be some increase, oil prices are already so high at this point that it doesn't really make much difference whether they go up, or down, a dollar or two," a U.S. official said.

But he qualified this by adding that it depends on OPEC continuing production at its current level of nearly 32 million barrels a day.

The big question for most officials is supply.

Although the United States is not currently buying oil from Iran, and Iran is not selling to this country, most officials agree that this will not alone drive up oil prices. If Iran continues its production, the world supply will remain the same, they say.

However, at least one official believes Iran may be unable to maintain its current production because of domestic turmoil. There have been reports production already has slipped below the recent average of 3.5 million to 4 million barrels a day.

"There is obviously much greater uncertainty now over the will and ability of Iran to maintain production at current levels," said one official. "It may not affect the Dec. 17 decision, but it would affect the ability of OPEC countries to make the price stick to the extent that Iranian production is cut back."

Another worry is that other OPEC countries would have difficulty increasing production to offset a cutback in Iranian output. Saudi Arabia already is producing at near the 9.5-million-barrel daily limit that some analysts believe is the maximum it can sustain.

Prefers Pleasures Rather Than Visiting The Dentist

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It seems that Americans would rather spend their money on a variety of pleasures instead of using it to visit the dentist.

At least that's what Dr. R. Jack Shankle, president of the North Carolina Dental Soceity, thinks.

"The pleasures of television, alcohol or tobacco take precedent over dental health care in many instances," Shankle told about 80 persons attending an oral health care forum sponsored by the state society and the American Dental Association.

The forum was for the education of the public, government health agency representatives and professional organizations. It was to stress the importance of good health care.

About 1.5 percent of the typical American family's annual income is spent for dental care, said Shankle, a professor at the University of North Carolina School of Denistry. Per-person expenditure for all professional health services in 1977 was $646, he said, and the cost for those who visit a dentist annually is $99.

Shankle said that in 1955, the average family spent one-half of 1 percent of its personal income for dental care. Twenty years later, the percentage was six-tenths of 1 percent, he said.

"Compare the one-tenth of 1 percent increase spent on dental health care in 20 years to the increased cost of televisions, modern automobiles or clothing," he said.

"In these inflationary times, denistry has held the line on fee escalation better than any other health care provider," he said.

Shankle said that in the last 10 years, the cost of providing dental care service has increased 150 percent while fees have risen 98 percent.

Cancel March Plans

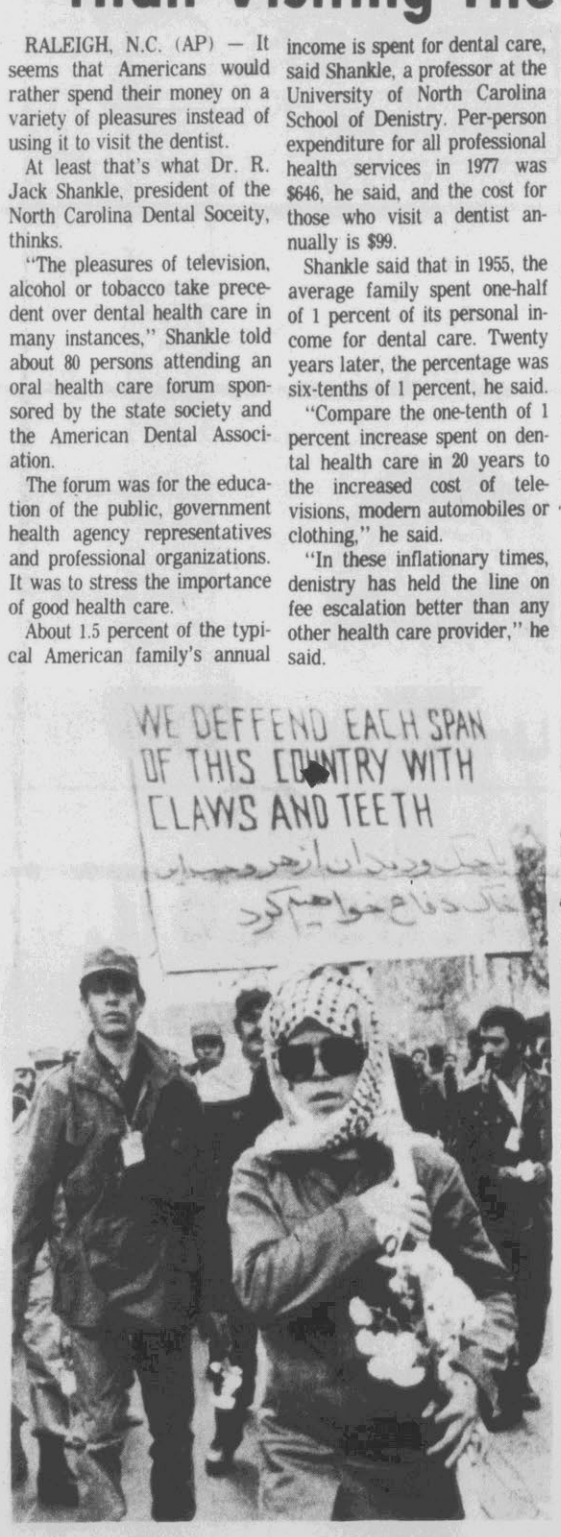

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A group of Iranian students who had planned to march through Charlotte Tuesday to protest the Shah of Iran's presence in the U.S. have canceled their plans because they fear media exploitation.

Mostafa Kalantri, who applied for the parade permit Nov. 5, said the news media "try to make American people emotional against Iranians."

About 150 people were scheduled to take part in the parade, according to the permit.

Charlotte's Parade Permit Committee, which had planned a special meeting Monday on the matter, earlier had denied a request by the Iranian students for a parade permit. The denial had been on grounds that allowing such a march could result in violence.

The One And Only
"Little Richard"

It has been said that the Greatest Sermon is a SERMON THAT'S LIVED. The Kinston District Jr. Academy presents in Goldsboro, Kinston, and Greenville, N.C., one of the Outstanding Sermons that's Alive today. This Sermon is found in the Greatest Rock 'N Roll Singer that has ever lived. A Singer who once popularized such hits as "Good Golly Miss Molly", "Long Tall Sally", "Laudy Mrs. Claudy", but NOW sings "AMAZING GRACE", and "THE OLD RUGGED CROSS". You will want to hear Little Richard tell how fun, dope, men and women dragged him through a living hell, but you'll thrill in your seats to hear how God delivered him. Hear Richard Preach, Pray, and Sing to the Glory of God.

Little Richard will appear in Goldsboro Friday night, November 16th, 7:30 at the Branch Memorial Tabernacle, 500 Gulley Street.
Kinston, Saturday night, November 17th, 7:30 at the Lenoir Community College Gymnasium, Hwy. 70.

Little Richard will appear in Greenville, Sunday afternoon, November 18th, 4:00 at Rose High School.

A large capacity crowd is expected to see and hear Little Richard in Greenville. All local churches will have special envelopes which will serve as admission fees. Every family should plan to attend and see what true conversion is all about. Call these numbers for more information: 752-9484, 752-5084, or 756-5415.

Refugee Coordinator Grateful

By PAUL VOGLE

SA KAEO, Thailand (UPI) — "Granny," the 99-year-old senior refugee from all of Indochina, is still alive. For that small gift of life, Mark Brown is grateful.

Brown, the youthful chief coordinator of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in Thailand, is also thankful that "only six people" died Friday at Sa Kaeo. Two weeks ago, two dozen died daily.

Granny had walked at least 300 miles across Cambodia to reach the border with her 12-year-old grandson as her guide. The child died within an hour of safety. Granny survived.

The best thing is that the refugees are out of range of artillery guns and cross-border skirmishes 30 miles away. They fled to escape all that.

But there are still dozens of people at Sa Kaeo who have suffered from lack of nourishment for so long that after six weeks in Thailand, they still have to be fed intravenously.

In a ward — actually a layer of grass mats spread under a blue-and-white awning — more than 500 orphans await an unknown future. A sign at the "ward" says it is for "unaccompanied minors."

Klek, 10, lies as he did a month ago, turned on his side, coughing from efforts to swallow a thimble full of rice at a time from a plastic bag.

He looks pudgy, but the soft flab on his arms covers a total physical and emotional apathy. He has spoken to nobody. All that is known about him is that he showed up at the border, shuffling along with hordes of his compatriots and then collapsed.

So many have needed emergency medical treatment that the volunteer doctors from four continents and their some 200 volunteer aides have not even tried to keep records of who died of what. But the doctors agree that all suffer from a combination of malnutrition and four years of terror under the ousted regime of former Premier Pol Pot.

A West German Red Cross doctor regarded the camp with a sweep of his arm and said: "They are all on the brink of death."

Ban Laem, 160 miles to the southeast, is a study in healthy contrast. Last Monday, 10,000 men, women and children strode across the border to Ban Laem, in one of lush Thailand's most exquisite food baskets, gushing with fruit, wild game and fish from its streams and its coast.

Hardy looking families shouldered military field packs loaded with personal belongings, including bedding, clothes, cooking utensils, soap and towels.

Few of those at Sa Kaeo had even a chage of shirt with them.

Of the smoky-skinned people at Ban Laem only 200 required hospitalization, and all but 2,000 have gone back to the Pol Pot strongholds they claimed to have fled.

"They didn't flee," insists one Thai marine major at Ban Laem. "They walked over here to get some rest and good solid food for a new round of fighting against the Vietnamese troops of Heng Samrin."

Heng Samrin is the president of the administration the Vietnamese put in power in Phnom Penh when they overthrew Pol Pot last January.

The scarecrows at Sa Kaeo, people many observers call "real refugees," will sit and discuss their families and their hard times over more than four years of "liberation" since the communist victory in Indochina in 1975.

At Ban Laem, interviewers are met with stony stares. The sick will tell the doctors what ails them. That's all.

Dr. Robert Adams of Gaston, Ala., shook his head. He said he didn't "know whether they are Khmer Rouge or not, but some day we're going to have to answer that question."

The question has arisen seriously since the monthlong parade of American celebrities from Joan Baez to Rosalynn Carter found the suffering of the refugees "overwhelming" and "indescribable."

More Tar Heels Get Food Stamps

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The number of people receiving food stamps in North Carolina has increased by more than one-third during the past year, due largely to changes in federal eligibility requirements.

The state Department of Human Resources said Friday that more than 510,000 persons — about one out of every 11 North Carolina citizens — received food stamp aid during July. That is compared with 375,000 persons a year earlier.

John Kerr, state food assistance official, said that number still represents only about half the persons eligible for food stamps in the state.

Not Ready For Women In Combat

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is clear from a week of hearings that neither Congress or the Carter administration is ready to put American women into combat.

But both are considering more combat-support jobs for women to give them more career advancement opportunities.

Testimony before the House military personnel subcommittee was capped Friday by a plea from a former prisoner of war that women never be subjected to the kind of torture and filth he suffered in Hanoi.

Retired Adm. Jeremiah Denton, whose book "When Hell Was In Session" became a television movie, told the committee, "I would hate to see a woman in that situation."

Tough Job For Bolivian Woman

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Bolivia's first woman president begins the tough task of governing a bankrupt nation Saturday following a night of spontaneous street revelry by citizens celebrating the downfall of a military dictator.

Lidia Gueiler, a trim, 51-year-old divorcee, grandmother, avid tennis player, car racing fan and accountant by trade, says her most difficult job is "getting the country out of its difficult economic problems that have created political instability.

"We have fought during these last few days for democracy, and we regained it. Again we are all united," said Mrs. Gueiler, who is a veteran of more than 20 years in congress and president of the legislature during the current session.

Arrested

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Greensboro lawyer has been ordered arrested and held on $100,000 bond on a charge that he wrote a worthless check for $4,374 and failed to appear in court as scheduled Friday.

The order was issued against Major S. High, 50, who is a staff attorney for Soul City and a former member of the Guilford County Board of Elections. The order was issued by county District Judge Frank Campbell.

America and have probably been forced to come to Iran."

"The Iranian nation does not permit the release of the remaining (hostages) and they will remain under detention till the United States government acts upon the nation's demand," the 79-year-old Islamic leader said from his headquarters in Qom.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Carter was awaked early this morning with the news, which marked the first break in the hostage drama.

"We welcome this announcement that some of the Americans held in the embassy in Tehran will be released," Carter said. "We are thankful the ordeal may be over for them and that they may be soon reunited with their families.

"We strongly urge that the authorities in Iran now move to secure the safe release of all those still being held. Their ordeal is not over. The United Sates will continue to work in every channel open to it to achieve that end."

Khomeini's intervention came barely 24 hours after the students threatened "harsher measures" against the hostages if deposed shah, under cancer treatment in New York, was moved to any country but Iran.

Khomeini's order made no mention of American Charge d'affaires Bruce Laingen, who was reported being held as a virtual prisoner somewhere in the Foreign Ministry complex.

Khomeini directive to Khoyeni and "the respected student brothers and sisters resident in the espionage center" also said:

"The center of plotting and spying, called the American Embassy, and the persons who have plotted there against our Islamic movement do not enjoy international diplomatic respect.

"The large-scale American government threats and propaganda does not have the slightest meaning for the Iranian nation. Neither is its (American) military threat wise nor is its economic boycott deserving any attention.

"(President) Carter is in error if he thinks that all nations behave blindly and put their services at his disposal. And this great mistake will become clear to him shortly, as the symptoms are self-evident."

Khomeini's order Saturday appeared to be the first break in the standoff, which began with the seizure of the embassy Nov. 4 and has defied solution by a variety of diplomatic efforts, including a special envoy sent by Carter, a team sent by the Palestine Liberation Organization, and a papal diplomat sent by Pope John Paul II.

The impasse provoked large demonstrations and led to the United States banning oil imports from Iran, freezing Iranian assets in the United States and ordering the deportation of Iranian students who are not legally in the country.

first in 1975 to endorse Carter's darkhorse candidacy. "You're the reason Jimmy Carter is the president today," she said.

She made no reference to the straw vote victory the Carter campaign expects at the closing session of the convention today nor to the challenge by Sen. Edward Kennedy and Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California.

But in what may have been a response to Kennedy's repeated attacks on Carter's leadership, she praised the administration's "solid record of accomplishment on issue after issue" and said the president "has provided leadership ... and has been able, working with Congress, to pass more than 80 percent of the legislation he has put forward and worked for."

Earlier, supporters of both Kennedy and Carter urged Democrats to avoid the kind of party division that gave Republicans victory in both 1968 and 1972.

New Cultural Arts Center

At Manteo plans are underway for an 800-seat cultural arts center, which is expected to be ready for use by 1984, the 400th anniversary of the founding of the "Lost Colony."

The famed "Lost Colony" pageant would use the facility as would other performing groups. Included in the complex would be meeting and dressing rooms and rehearsal halls.

It is anticipated that the Roanoke Island Historical Association would use the facility during the summer for the "Lost Colony" production. The facilities would be available for use of the local area during other months.

The center is an ambitious undertaking, to cost between $3 and $6 million to construct, but officials say there is a commitment to its construction.

We can think of nothing more fitting than the construction of this facility. Manteo history stretches back to the very beginnings of European involvement in the western world.

The drama of the English colony on the island has been told for many years in the famed drama the "Lost Colony."

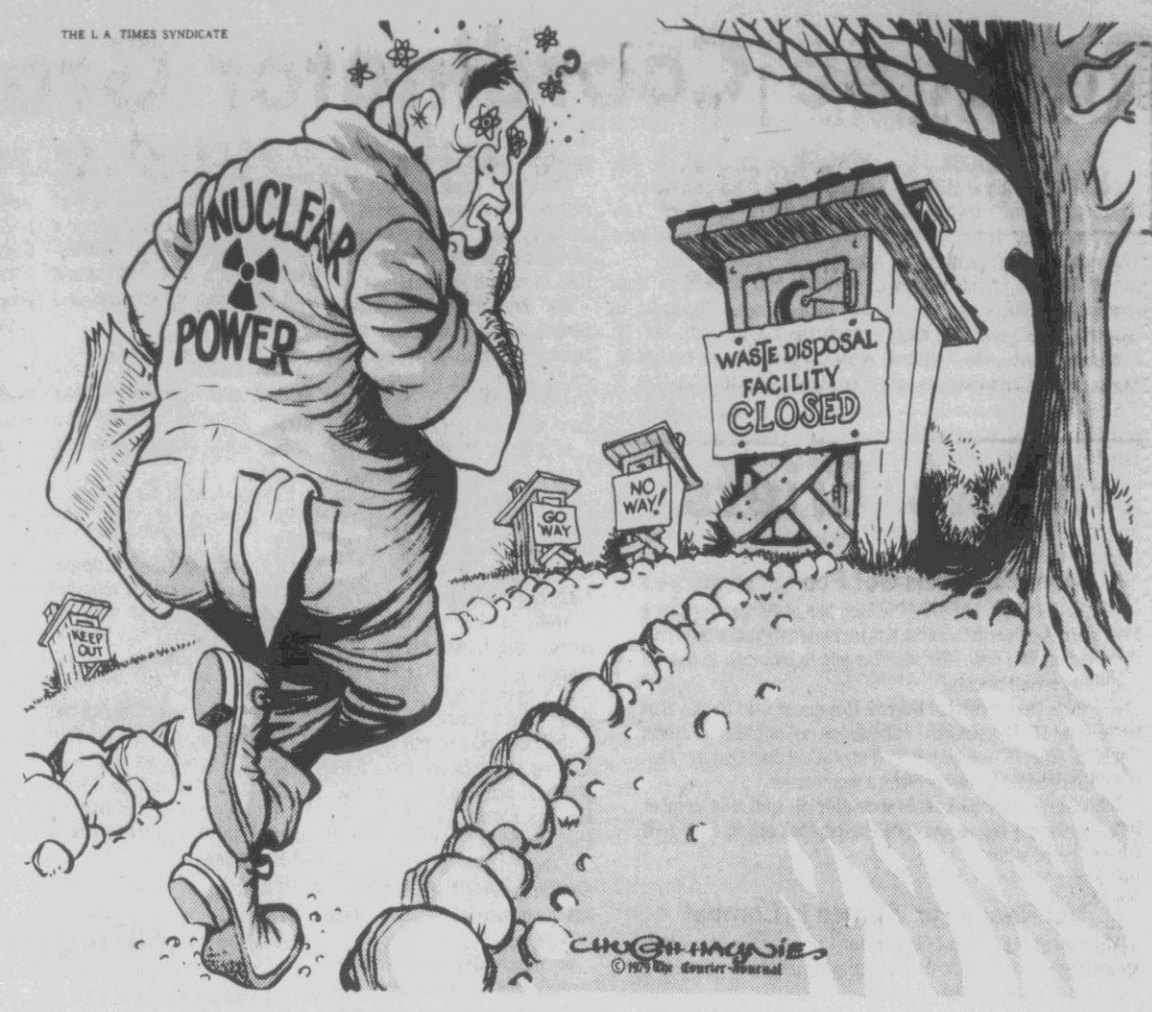

A cultural arts center would be a great asset to Manteo and to Eastern North Carolina as a whole.

Highly Successful Festival And Show

Saturday's parade and ECU football game concluded the activities of the second Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and the Tobacco Farmer Show.

The events were highly successful. The festival activities drew many participants and thousands crowded the exhibit floor for the farm equipment show.

It took much planning and hard work to put on the festival and show. A lot of credit is due those who made the events such outstanding successes.

THIS AFTERNOON

No School-Age Changes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — There crops up from time to time the notion that high schools would be better learning places if those who don't want to be there were allowed to leave.

The state's law requiring school attendance until age 16 is sometimes mentioned as one of the problems. In 1974, a special task force of students, teachers, administrators, and laypeople did a study of the high schools and among its recommendations was a look at the attendance law.

It was suggested that a limited number of local schools be allowed to experiment with lowering the compulsory attendance age to 14, and the results studied to see if the idea has merit.

That suggestion died aborning. No such action even on an experimental, limited scale was ever undertaken. School officials now agree that lowering the age limit is not a desireable alternative.

"The better alternative is to continue the development of flexible and optional programs for students," the State Board of Education was told recently in a status report.

"With increased opportunities for dual enrollment in post-secondary institutions, apprenticeships, and flexible scheduling, our ability to provide meaningful learning experiences should improve our holding power."

The board agreed that experimentation with a lower age should be dropped.

Shoot Again

National Geographic Magazine staff are back in North Carolina taking another stab at getting an upcoming report on the state ready for March publication.

This time, photographers are making an effort to get better pictures in the Piedmont section, including furniture and textiles activities. The first layout was heavy on mountain scenery around Burnsville and the Great Smokes National Park, and Down East farming and tobacco activities.

Sources in the governor's office said Geographic Editor Gilbert M. Grosvenor looked at the spread and responded that the staff could do a lot better job of portraying the diversity going on in North Carolina.

Redone, the report is expected to contain scenes in Charlotte, High Point, Burlington, Chapel Hill, Research Triangle and Raleigh as well as the rural western and eastern sections.

Who Drives?

Married men who are well educated and in higher income brackets drive more miles than most others in North Carolina.

That is one of the conclusions from research data gathered by the Governor's Highway Safety Program. The survey of drivers' attitudes, behavior and opinions was conducted by a team from N.C. State University.

More men drive more often, too. In sum, there are a number of factors which affect how many miles and how often people drive. Thirty-seven percent of the men drive more than 15,000 miles a year while only eight percent of the women do. Fully a third of the women drive less than 5,000 miles a year. There is a steady increase in miles driven as income increases, and also an increase based on educational level.

Widows drive least, followed by those separated or divorced, followed by single people, and with married men driving the most miles yearly.

Sunday Morning Notes

Large numbers of deliveries are made to "The Daily Reflector" plant by truckers from all over.

The big rigs pull in at all hours and during the weekends, even when nobody is around to open up for them.

Naturally the truckers want to unload and get under way, so they look for anybody who can let them in.

Your columnist pulled into the parking lot one Saturday afternoon.

"I've got a load of comics," a driver said. "Do you work here?"

"I'm just parking here," I answered without telling an outright lie. Then I was off to do some business on the downtown mall.

Eventually I returned, unlocked the front door and entered the news department. I had completely forgotten the truck driver and his delivery. I glanced up from a teletype and there he stood, looking as if he had been deceived.

Someone had unlocked the back door and the driver came in.

Your embarrassed columnist went to the back of the building, opened the door to the loading dock and helped the driver get the load of Sunday comics in the building.

When you are caught in a deception, it's the least you can do.

Someone called to say he was in line behind a man who wanted to cash a check.

"Do you have two identifications?" the clerk asked.

The man showed his drivers license. Next he fished out his North Carolina Bar Association identification card.

The clerk looked at it and asked, "Do you have something else?"

The caller said he got a chuckle out of it.

Well, you ought to try to get a check cashed with a North Carolina Press Association identification card. They just laugh.

The Tobacco Farmer Show had to be impressive to anyone who viewed it, whether engaged in farming or not.

Millions of dollars in equipment on display was an indication that farming has become big business.

There were the huge farm tractors and combines with glassed in, air-conditioned cabs, executive chairs and other comforts.

There were even two truck tractors on display, one of them reportedly costing over $80,000.

One awed visitor viewed the monstrous piece of equipment, complete with its chromed exhaust stacks. "Wow," he said. "Anybody driving that would have to be king of the road."

Certainly most of us would get out of his way.

Reason To Give Thanks

There may be more to be thankful for this Thanksgiving than many people are aware of.

A blessing, after all, doesn't have to be a net gain. Just having managed to cut losses is better than nothing. Just consider: things might have been worse.

Skylab might not have dispersed over the Indian Ocean and the Australian Outback. It might instead have landed on the Three Mile Island reactor or a gas line in California or Reggie Jackson.

No Way To Sell SALT II

BY ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Senate troubles for SALT II persist thanks to President Carter's failure to link the treaty's ratification with survival of the Western alliance, an ill-conceived effort that collapsed at last month's NATO political assembly in Ottawa.

Headlines proclaimed that assembled members of the alliance's parliaments had called for early Senate ratification of the arms control treaty (SALT II). But behind the scenes, there were bitter recriminations among U.S. delegates, and attempts by embarrassed Europeans to tone down the unrestrained language drafted for them by the Americans.

Those efforts belied the Carter administration's claim of Western Europe pleading for salvation through SALT. Rather, it was American SALT-sellers in Ottawa unwittingly buttressing the Soviet campaign against nuclear modernization in order to label Senate rejection of the treaty as subversive to NATO's future.

This NATO gambit bears family resemblance to Carter's successful strategy for the Panama Canal Treaty. Instead of arguing the merits of giving away the canal, the president's men warned that rejection by the Senate would reap havoc throughout the Western Hemisphere and lined up Latin American statesmen to agree. Lloyd Cutler, Carter's chief SALT-seller, pursued the same strategy in tying an umbilical cord between SALT II and NATO.

But European political leaders proved less malleable than the Latin Americans. NATO parliamentarians visiting Washington resented being manipulated into a Senate debate. Members of the British and West German governments (including British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher) publicly declared that, of course, NATO would survive the death of SALT II.

At this point, SALT supporters sought to revive the NATO gambit at the Ottawa meeting of the North Atlantic assembly. With European parliamentarians on hand in Canada, their U.S. congressional counterparts remained in Washington for late votes. They were preceded, however, by a Senate Foreign Relations Committee staffer named John Ritch, renowned on Capitol Hill as a passionate arms controller.

Ritch brought to Ottawa a draft resolution urging "early ratification" of SALT and bearing the names of two pro-SALT senators: Republican Jacob Javits of New York and Democrat Joseph Biden of Delaware. It is widely believed, though denied by the White House, that inspiration came from the administration.

Peter Coterier, a Social Democratic member of the West German Bundestag and supporter of SALT, was asked to introduce the resolution. After some hesitation, Coterier agreed. His initial caution might have stemmed from its extraordinary language. Besides contending that U.S. failure to ratify would be "seriously disruptive" to NATO, it specified that would be true "particularly with regard to the forthcoming decision on the modernization of NATO's theater nuclear forces." Europeans were amazed at U.S. officials seeming to buttress the Soviet campaign against NATO's nuclear modernization.

With the U.S. delegation still in Washington, the assembly's military committee toned down the American language. The warning against undercutting nuclear force modernization was stricken. So was a clause contending that linkage of "the current situation in Cuba to SALT ratification would unnecessarily jeopardize alliance security interests." The committee also added what the Javits-Biden resolu-

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

The letter of Mr. W. Whitehurst (8 November 1979) is paradigmatic of the superstitious attitudes against which men of intelligence and reason have contended since the absurdity of religion was foisted upon humankind.

It was to provide both freedom of religion and freedom from it that the First Amendment was adopted. The attitudes of the superstitious must be barred from interference in the rights of others not so persuaded — else we live in a Hitlerian Germany. The bookburning mentality nascent in the letter to which I have alluded must never be allowed to hold sway in a democracy. The defense of the rights of the minority is incumbent upon the majority, no matter how repellent and no matter how seductive the majority's belief.

I do not care that Mr. Whitehurst worships the "gaseous vertebrate," the Hare Krishnas worship Vishnu, or that some undiscovered cult worships the Cosmic English Muffin. It is my right, and the right of Mr. Python, to satirise, ridicule or witticise ANYTHING. It is my responsibility to defend Whitehurst's privilege of churchiness, but it is also his responsibility to defend my privilege of irreverence. Otherwise, neither of us are Americans.

It is also the right of the theater manager to turn a buck, if he can. I hope that those who object to the film in question on religious grounds will see an overruling responsibility not to interfere with either of us.

Tokyo — Japan today rejected all major contentions of the United States' note of October 6 protesting against "unwarranted interference" with American rights in China and declared that "ideas and principles of the past" no longer apply to the Chinese situation.

Responsible Japanese spokesmen have indicated a determination that such pacts as the 1922 nine power treaty, by which Japan, the United States and seven other nations pledged themselves to respect China's territorial integrity and independence should no longer bind the Japanese Empire.

Strength For Today

A VISION OF CHRIST

Some years ago an artist of fair ability was asked to produce a series of posters to be used in a religious campaign. As he got on with his work, his technique improved, and even more important, his whole outlook on life changed. He was particularly influenced by a figure of Jesus which he painted on a poster.

Speaking to a friend some time later the artist said, "From the day I painted that picture of Jesus I have seen art in a new light. I feel more alive and creative. A new spirit has dominated my life and has turned my energy into new channels.

This experience happens again and again in the life of many diverse types of people. They get a vision of Christ, and their lives are never quite the same again. Not only are they more effective at whatever their tasks in life may be, but they are happier and feel a new sense of purpose. Such a vision may come to anyone, if that person will pray and wait with eager expectation.

Re-Raising An American Fear

BY JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — An government official was explaining why President Carter's freeze of Iranian government assets could boomerang on the United States, especially if it frightens off foreign investment.

"The oil producing countries dig up and send us a finite asset that took millions of years to produce. We burn it up, and in return we send them pieces of green paper that we can manufacture in huge quantities.

"They accept the paper, but then they leave it with us. They invest it in the United States, and the money then is lent out to Americans to build homes and factories and create jobs. They help finance us.

"And now, in effect, we tell them 'watch out, you can't do that; you can't take your money back.' I ask you, who was getting the better part of the deal? We were. And now we may be cutting our own throats."

Carter's freeze of assets applies only to Iran, and then only to government rather than private holdings. But some officials, private and governmental, fear it could unnerve other foreign investors.

Oil producing nations, for example, have joined Japan and Europe in viewing the United States as a sanctuary both for liquid assets, such as stocks, bonds and savings, and as a place for direct investments.

Will they continue to express this faith if they fear their national assets might be frozen, or that a freeze could spread to private liquid assets and then to direct investments, such as manufacturing plants?

The Iranian situation also resurrects an American fear: Do foreigners, particularly oil-producing nations, own enough of the United States to seriously disrupt the domestic economy should they decide to do so?

The General Accounting Office answers no to the latter question, concluding that the entire OPEC portfolio of stocks, bonds, Treasury bills and the like could be absorbed by U.S. markets in two or three days, albeit with serious price changes.

Still, one Commerce Department official estimated that price declines would not even be as bad as those created in October when the Federal Reserve raised the U.S. discount rate by one percentage point.

Portfolio investments such as these are one aspect of foreign investment. Direct investment, such as in factories, businesses and real estate, is another.

Commerce Department figures show that direct foreign investment through 1978 totaled $40.83 billion, but this amount minimizes the true value of the assets controlled, which was last estimated in 1974.

At that time, the foreign direct investment position was about $25 billion, but the value of assets was seven times that, or $175 billion. Using the same ratio, current assets might be more than $280 billion.

Observations From Editorial Columns

How Much More Will We Take?

The American people paid more in taxes last year than they spent for food, clothing and housing combined.

That information is contained in an issue of Industry Week Magazine quoted by Senator Jesse Helms in a recent report.

Specifically, the artical says, Americans spent $575 billion to provide the necessities of life for themselves and their families. But they paid $624 billion in taxes.

That figure is equal to 57 percent of all wages and salaries earned in the country in 1978, Helms said. Yet, despite that enormous tax-gouging of the American people, our nation continues to go heavily in debt.

On Oct. 10, according to Helms, the federal debt was $818.5 billion. That was $49.5 billion greater than the federal debt one year earlier.

What is government trying to do about it?

During July of this year alone the federal government hired 14,241 additional employees. Helms notes that if one projects that level of hiring over a year the total number of new people going on the federal payroll is equivalent to the entire population of Raleigh.

Not counting military personnel, there were 2.9 million people on the federal payroll as of August 1. Despite all the rhetoric about getting a handle on expanding government and turning it around, we continue to be plagued by a runaway bureaucracy.

How much more can and will the workers and the businesses in the private sector endure before revolting? — (Goldsboro News-Argus)

Blake Facing Lengthy Wait

President Larry Blake, the new head of the State Department of Community Colleges, will attract some applause for moving to cut 50 people from his agency. The 25 percent reduction will confirm suspicions that this and other state bureaucracies are badly bloated anyway.

Whether or not that view is fair, Blake's wholesale housecleaning suggests additional action.

The legislative commission that is arranging for transition of Blake's department from the state Board of Education to an independent policy board ought to consider moving up the changeover date.

Currently the switch is set for July of 1981, more than a year and a half from now.

During the interval there is bound to be a good deal of wheel-spinning by the remaining staff, and only perfunctory accountability by Blake to the state Board of Education.

The impression could grow that Blake is a one-man show without anything urgent on his agenda. — (The Hickory Daily Record)

As I Recall It

Lengthy, Hardfought Open Meetings Fight

By NOEL YANCEY

(Noel Yancey retired last year after 39 years of covering North Carolina news for the Associated Press. In this column, he retells some of the big stories he recalls.)

One day back in March 1953, the "News and Observer" of Raleigh carried on its front page a picture of a closed door. The door was the one leading to the meeting room of the legislature's Joint Appropriations Committee. The caption of the picture read, "Closed to the Public."

The Raleigh newspaper went on to recount how the door had been slammed shut by overwhelming action of the legislature as the climax to a shutdown with newspaper reporters over secrecy.

A few days before the action was taken, the legislature's Joint Appropriations Subcommittee had agreed by a close vote to throw open the door as it deliberated over controversial items in the state's budget. The action appeared to herald a sharp break with the past when newsmen were permitted to sit in on the subcommittee's deliberations only with the understanding that they would only report actions taken and would not report the debate and reports leading up to those actions.

The subcommittee's decision to relax its restrictions did not last long, however. As the reporters began to work under the new rule, some of the legislators changed their minds, and the subcommittee voted to go into executive session. Some of the lawmakers cited as a reason for their change of heart the refusal of a reporter to let the state budget officer go off the record in giving the subcommittee some technical information. Others said it was because a senator became upset when remarks he made about a state institution were reported.

In calling for the closed session, Rep. John B. Reagan, D-Robeson, said he had concluded that open meetings were "slowing down the work of the committee." He said the action would not have been necessary if the press had cooperated.

After the committee voted to go into executive session, six newspapermen refused to leave the meeting room. Some of the newsmen said that if they left it would only be because they were removed by force. To back up their refusal the reporters cited the state's Executive Budget Act which says that the House and Senate Appropriations Committees and their subcommittees "shall sit jointly in open sessions while considering the budget."

Faced by the adamant stand of the newsmen, the subcommittee adjourned its session without beginning its deliberations, and scheduled another tion omitted: "respecting...the sovereign right" of the U.S. to decide on SALT and noting requirements for "credible deterrence, stable nuclear balance and future arms control negotiations."

When the U.S. delegation finally arrived in Ottawa, anti-SALT senators were outraged to discover the existence of a resolution demanding Senate ratification ready for passage by the assembly. A "caucus" of Americans followed, in which pent-up bipartisan passions were unleased.

Two anti-SALT Democrats, Sens. Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina, assailed Biden for not consulting them. Jackson accused Biden of conspiring with White House counsel Cutler, contending "This whole thing" is "a Cutler operation which has backfired." While taking full responsibility himself, Biden apologized for lack of consultation.

Apology or not, Biden and Javits refused to change the resolution so that only an early "decision" — not "ratification" — would be urged. After much rancorous debate, it was finally decided that all U.S. senators would abstain from the voting. Added to the French delegation plus conservatives from Britain and West Germany, that made 38 abstentions against 71 in favor — less than a certain trumpet.

The Ottawa meeting deepened SALT divisions among senators and intensified concern by British, French and German parliamentarians over what the Americans are doing. Thus, the NATO gambit won over no new senators for SALT but raised questions about the president's devotion to the Western Alliance among our puzzled European allies.

There's really no lack of things to be grateful for. Hollywood has yet to inflict upon us Amityville II, Jaws III, Godfather IV, Andy Hardy Freaks Out, or Airport, 1984.

Just having managed to avoid any asbestos hair dryers and factory recalls, not to mention Roller Disco and the Boston Marathon ought to be worth a grateful prayer or two.

So we were asked to turn our thermostats up in the summer and down in the winter? At least no one has suggested cardboard fans supplied by local funeral parlors as an alternate energy source.

The summer's shortage of gasoline imposed hardships, but if gasoline was in short supply, there were lots of other things that were not.

Band-aids, for instance, bubblegum, bad news, ball games, Bee Gees, bathing suits and bowl games.

Those people who are struggling to find something to be thankful for this Thanksgiving are not trying hard enough.

Have they forgotten that in 1979 there were no fatalities reported from man-eating gophers and that Amtrak established a record for the number of places it no longer serves?

Not only that, at a time when food shortages abound the world over, we have probably the greatest reserve of sugar-coated cereal and cola-based soft drinks of any country in the world.

That first Thanksgiving, so many hundreds of years ago, was not really so different from today.

Essentially what our Pilgrim fathers gave thanks for was simply having survived another year.

Facing South

Passing A Rainy Day In An Isolated Rural Home

MORRISTOWN, Tn. — The summer I was 13, my parents took me with them on an extended visit to an isolated farm belonging to some friends, near the crossroad known as Howardville, Tennessee.

The old house was opened up for use only during the summer months. It was a one-story, six-room square unpainted structure and had weathered until it was all grey.

The long trip over dusty meandering roads, the chore of opening the house after nine months vacancy, the long process of collecting supplies, the lack of accustomed "conveniences" — all made for unusual, though exciting, vacation prospects in my town-boy eyes.

Then, one day soon after our arrival, we faced the added challenge of passing a rainy day in the country.

It had rained hard all night, and morning brought no change in the weather. Going outside was out of the question, so I began to look about for a comfortable place to read David Copperfield. The main problem was light; this was during the Depression, and electricity had not reached the remote countryside around Howardville. If I turned the lamp up high enough to see, it would start smoking, or the wind would blow and the light would flicker. But after some expert advice, I cleaned the smoky chimney once more, trimmed the wick, and I was in business!

How the rain did pour. When you are sleeping, this kind of noise can be music. When you are trying to absorb long descriptive passages by Dickens, you are likely to be distracted. So I was delighted when my mother came in and said, "How would you like to play some Rook?"

Rook is Parker Brothers' version of contract bridge. In my youth regular playing cards were looked on as sinful, so instead we had a wide variety of table games. First there was Authors, which used a set of cards showing pictures of different writers. It was a guessing game but called for memory work as well; the Mark Twain set, for example, would contain six of his titles. A variation on this scheme was Bible Boys, where Bible characters (David, Jonathan, Absalom, etc.) were used instead of writers. Fan Tan was a popular table game in our circle, until a friend advised our mother that this was a favorite gambling game in the Far East. Mah Jong and Fiddle Sticks had their day as well, but when Monopoly arrived in the middle 30s it swept all before it.

We played Rook for a good part of that afternoon, but the rain continued unabated, and conversation gradually replaced the cards. My mother seized this opportunity to recite one of her favorite corny old poems. It is still with me, though the author is mercifully forgotten:

And how was your crop when you dug your grass?
Did the weevils hurt the peas?
Did the canker worms destroy
Your young cucumber trees?
I love kind sir, the country air,
From the town I fain would flee
And wrap myself in rural bliss
'Neath the shade of a potato tree.
I'd pluck the pineapple from the pine,
Through parsnip meadows push,
And when I grew faint at the noonday hour,
From my duties stern and rush,
I'd mix the milkweed's luscious milk
With the mushroom's luscious mush.

This gem surfaced as we were all sitting around the fire, which the damp cool weather made welcome even on this summer day. It provided light, warmth and a new center of attention. We popped corn, toasted marshmallows, and even roasted some chestnuts and chink-a-pins. With all these snacks, a real supper would have gone begging, so we entertained ourselves throughout the evening with the food, the old pump organ and as many old songs as we could remember. Before I knew it, it was time to go to bed. A whole rainy day had passed, not in boredom but in pleasure.

Can't Link Intelligence To Manual Dexterity

One of my favorite sections of the Sunday paper is the weekly magazine's true-false quiz. Each week the reader must guess the answers to five questions in a format which is somewhat similar to that below:

(1) People with green thumbs are talented horticulturists.

(2) Stress makes us tense.

(3) The quality of social interaction between the sexes is directly related to physical attractiveness.

(4) Artists are more talented than the general populace.

(5) Bachelors have more fun.

Answers: (1) False. According to a group of respected physicians at the Nova University School of Medicine, green thumbs are not evidence of a human's close physical relationship to his plant life. Rather, green extremities of any kind indicate severe internal disease.

(2) True. Researchers at the Parson's School of Design found that stress does make us nervous. Two men were confined to separate rooms for four hours in the Parson's study. The first subject experienced only dim lights and silence. The second subject sat in a brightly-lit room with piped-in music. At regularly spaced intervals, he was told that: (a) the lights in his car were on, (b) his boss had ordered a personnel shake-up, and (c) someone in his neighborhood had called in a four-alarm fire but there was no word yet on which house it was. The first man fell asleep. The second man had a nervous breakdown.

(3) True. A group of independent behavioral scientists found that beauty is often skin-deep. A group of fraternity brothers was asked to abstain from bathing for a week and to eat only beer and pizza. A second fraternity was used as a control group. The scientists found that sorority sisters invited to a party at the end of the 7 day period were significantly more reluctant to dance with the first group of fraternity members than with the second.

(4) False. According to a group of artists still protesting Andrew Wyeth's fame, talent no longer has anything to do with art. Novelty is the sole acceptable criterion for judging modern art. Researchers at the Darwin Institute were able to confirm this when they furnished two groups of chimps with canvas and paints and gave them 30 days within which to work. During this period the first group was unable to produce one reasonable facsimile of a Rembrandt, but the second group produced an entire exhibit for the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art.

(5) False. Researchers at Hamhocker College for Young Women found that bachelors suffer from a variety of ailments rarely encountered by married men. Among these ailments are dishpan hands, iron burns, and a rare fungus contracted from bathtub scum. More often than not these ailments lead to severe depression. Independent researchers confirmed these findings but added that men who could afford to hire maids were substantially healthier. In contrast to single men, single women were found to be almost uncontrollably happy.

I used to set great store by these research findings, but I have to protest one of the latest findings, that manual dexterity is related to intelligence.

This came as a great blow to my ego. I have a history of manual ineptitude. I was the only second-grader in my Brownie Scout troop who failed to win a medal for napkin fringing. None of the squares I knitted for my junior high's "Afghans for Poor People" project had less than five sides. What's more, the only subject I flunked in high school was typing.

My adult years have been no better. Jelly glasses crash to the floor when I walk by them. Phillip hasn't allowed a needle in the house since I sewed a button to my middle finger. And my typing is still illegible.

But, on the average, I get 98 percent of the answers on those true-false quizzes right. If that isn't intelligence, what is?

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Nov. 18, the 322nd day of 1979. There are 43 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date one year ago, the "Jonestown Massacre" occurred in Guyana. U.S. Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and four others were killed as they tried to leave the People's Temple camp — and almost 900 cult members committed suicide.

On this date:

in 1626, St. Peter's Basilica in Rome was consecrated by Pope Urban VIII.

In 1852, more than 1 million persons lined the streets of London to see the funeral procession of the Duke of Wellington.

In 1883, the United States adopted the standard time system.

In 1936, Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy recognized General Francisco Franco's government in Spain.

Kentucky Court Held For Religious Freedom

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — It caused no splash in the national press — the opinions of state supreme courts seldom do — but an opinion last month from the Supreme Court of Kentucky merits a round of rousing applause. The court struck a fine blow for religious freedom.

In the process, the court delivered a well-deserved comeuppance to the autocrats of public education whose purpose is to impose an effective monopoly upon the teaching of children. What the court held is that the Kentucky State Board of Education cannot compel a religious school to obey its decrees. And I, for one, cry hallelujah.

The Kentucky case paralleled similar cases in recent years in Wisconsin, Ohio, Vermont and North Carolina. In each instance, parents have chosen to send their children to fundamentalist, Christian schools; the schools have refused slavishly to abide by regulations of the several states; and state authorities, exasperated by such impudence, have brought criminal charges against the parents under the truancy laws.

So it was in Kentucky. Faced with a serious threat of criminal prosecution, a group of parents of children enrolled in private church schools brought suit for a declaratory judgment. The state's regulations demanded that all teachers in church schools must be state certified, that certain courses must be taught and that only state-approved textbooks could be used. On Oct. 9, in an opinion by Justice Robert O. Lukowsky, the court unanimously found the regulations invalid.

It is regrettable in one sense, but encouraging in another, that the court did not base its opinion upon the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. A precedent of national usefulness might have been established. Instead, the court relied entirely upon a clause in the Kentucky state constitution which says flatly that no man may be compelled "to send his child to any school to which he may be conscientiously opposed." The clause was written into the state's supreme law in 1890 to apply specifically to parents who were conscientiously opposed to sending their children to public schools. It's pleasant to see a state court interpret its own state constitution.

The underlying purpose of education — at least in terms of a state's interest in education — is to prepare children intelligently to exercise as adults their right of suffrage. Toward that legitimate end, a state may validly impose some form of compulsory education. But what form?

The state took the view that its own standards must prevail as to teachers, courses and textbooks. The court refused to accept that proposition. "It cannot be said as an absolute that a teacher in a non-public school who is not certified under state law will be unable to instruct children to become intelligent citizens." A bachelor's degree is not a sine qua non.

Neither can the state decree particular textbooks. "The textual materials used in the public schools are at the very heart of the conscientious opposition to these schools. To say that one may not be compelled to send a child to a public school but that the state may determine the basic texts to be used in the private or parochial schools is but to require that the same hay be fed in the field as is fed in the barn."

The Kentucky court did not nullify state regulations altogether. The church schools must comply with requirements affecting health and safety (they had made no objection on this score), and the state may require pupils in private schools to take the same standardized achievement tests administered in the public schools. Otherwise the church schools are free to go their own way.

The court's opinion provoked some lugubrious predictions from the educational establishment. Fly-by-night schools would spring up; charlatans, false prophets and illiterate messiahs would dragoon little children into their clutches. The public schools would lose customers.

Maybe so. But occasional abuses are part of the price we willingly pay for freedom of religion, freedom of thought, freedom of the mind to seek truth and happiness in individual ways. The benefits of diversity far exceed the supposed advantages of uniformity. The Kentuckians who rewrote their constitution in 1890 did a better piece of work than they may have realized at the time.

ALUMNI CENTER . . . This house, at 901 E. Fifth Street, has been purchased for use as an Alumni Center for East Carolina University.

Alumni Center Site Purchase Announced

The purchase of an Alumni Center for East Carolina University has been announced by Donald L. Lemish, Vice Chancellor for Institutional Advancement and Planning.

"Backed with pledges from two ECU alumni, the Alumni Association is purchasing the home at 901 E. Fifth Street to be used as the Alumni Center," Lemish said. "This facility, which has more than 3,600 square feet of usable space, will include a beautifully furnished alumni lounge and alumni conference room. Alumni groups can gather at this facility, have specially catered meals and alumni meetings. This center will be the focal point on campus for visiting alumni."

The facility also will include the offices of Alumni Relations, Resource Development and Vice Chancellor Lemish.

"This is one of the most outstanding things that has ever happened for ECU alumni programs," Lemish said. "We are especially pleased to have two major pledges from Mr. Luther Taylor and Mr. Marvin Slaughter which made the purchase of this Alumni Center a reality."

The location of the Center is in an area adjacent to the University, near the main entrance to the campus on Fifth Street.

"It is in the most desirable place possible in all of Greenville for such a facility," Lemish said. "This facility will enrich our alumni program tremendously. It has been needed for many years."

The major donors pledging gifts for the purchase are Luther M. (Luke) Taylor, a 1957 graduate, now a North Palm Beach, Fla., attorney, and E. Marvin Slaughter of Virginia Beach, Va., president and treasurer of Southern Tile Distributors Inc., and subsidiaries in Norfolk and Richmond, Va. A native of Dunn, Slaughter is a 1950 graduate of East Carolina. He received the ECU Alumni Association's Outstanding Alumni award earlier this year.

Taylor's mother, Mrs. Wilma Taylor, is a 1929 graduate of East Carolina and one of his sons, Daniel, is an ECU student.

Lemish added that additional annual gift support will be needed from the general alumni body to fund continuing costs of the Alumni Center and that this will be included in the annual alumni fund raising program.

As I Recall It

meeting that night. It also adjourned this session without getting down to business when twice as many newsmen appeared, still refusing to leave.

During a recess, a legislator had made two suggestions for resolving the dispute. One proposal was that the reporters be permitted to sit in on the meetings with the understanding that "off the record" remarks would not be published unless the committee gave its permission. The other suggestion was that the reporters attend the meetings with the understanding that they would clear with the committee's co-chairmen what they would be permitted to print. One reporter pointed out that this amounted to censorship by the co-chairmen.

"I sincerely regret," said Rep. Edward O'Herron, D-Mecklenburg, "that members of the press have so little respect for this subcommittee that they defy it." The possibility of the legislature holding the reporters in contempt was mentioned by another lawmaker.

The following day, the subcommittee attempted to elude the reporters by holding a secret session in a private dining room of a Raleigh hotel. However, the newsmen found out about it and flocked to the hotel. While the reporters thronged in the lobby, the legislators slipped into their meeting room by going through the kitchen.

Becoming weary of the stand-off, legislative leaders resolved to end it by changing the law. On March 26, 1953, the House and Senate by overwhelming margins voted to amend the Executive Budget Act to legalize secret sessions of the Joint Appropriations Committee and its subcommittees.

"They (subcommittee members) are entitled to privacy and secrecy," one senator said during consideration of the measure.

It is "a question of whether the legislatures is going to be its own boss or whether it is going to be dictated to by the press of North Carolina," said another.

The question of whether the joint subcommittee could make budget decisions in secret session was settled for that session. However, by the time the 1955 legislative session rolled around, the lawmakers had experienced a change of heart. One of their first acts was to repeal the 1953 law. An intensive campaign by the press had been successful.

This left the language of the Executive Budget Act as it was originally. Nowadays, all sessions of the Joint Appropriations Committee and its subcommittees are open to the public. But one cynic commented that this does not prevent key legislators from gathering informally behind closed doors to make key budget decisions.

Post Office To Mark Holiday

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station will close in observance of Thanksgiving Day Thursday.

No deliveries will be made by rural nor city carriers. No window service will be provided. Mail will be delivered to post office boxes. Special delivery mail will be delivered within the city. A special 3 p. m. holiday collection will be made from all collection boxes that have any specified time indicated on the side of the box. This collection of mail will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m. The self-service postal unit located in the lobby of the Main Post Office will supply customers with most postal supplies and also permit them to mail parcels, H. Lloyd Mills, Postmaster, said.

News Briefs

Dollars Not Acceptable

PARIS (AP) — Iranian Foreign Affairs Supervisor Abolhassan Bani Sadr has confirmed Iran no longer will take dollars in payment for its oil, today's edition of the French newspaper Le Monde reported from Tehran.

Asked about a comment on Friday by Oil Minister Ali Akhbar Moinfar that he (Moinfar) had not ordered such a move, Bani Sadr was quoted as saying: "Given my responsibility for economy and finance, I decide, and not Mr. Moinfar."

Unique Effect

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Officials at Methodist College say the conflict in Iran has had a unique effect on that campus.

Instead of creating tension and hostility between Iranian students and their American counterparts, the conflict has drawn them closer together.

Vanya Nick, the college's adviser to foreign students, said the reaction on campus to the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by military students and the holding of Americans as hostages "has been unique and contrary to what is happening on other campuses.

"People have come and offered their suupport and offered to help the Iranian students financially."

Iranians In Marriage Rush

MIAMI (AP) — Ever since the takeover of the U.S. embassy in Iran, there's been a sudden rush to marriage license bureaus in Florida by Iranian students wanting to marry American women.

And officials say at least one county in Alabama has experienced the same increase since the recent crackdown on illegal Iranian aliens announced by President Carter.

Officials did not directly say the increase was due to talk of deportation by federal officials.

But Joe McFadden, officer in charge of the Tampa Immigration and Naturalization Service office, says authorities are suspicious of the motives of the Iranians because many don't seem to know much about their "fiancees."

Plea Bargaining For Cleaver

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Former Black Panther leader Eldrige Cleaver has pleaded guilty to assaulting Oakland police officers 11 years ago and, in exchange, murder charges against him will be dismissed.

The plea bargain, made public Friday by the Alameda County district attorney's office, will likely mean probation rather than a jail sentence for Cleaver, who fled to Algeria instead of facing trial on the charges stemming from a 1968 shootout.

Superior Court Judge Winton McKibben, who tentatively approved the deal reached Thursday, said Cleaver would be put on probation unless the probation department gives him an unfavorable report. McKibben set sentencing for Dec. 21, when the probation report is completed.

Walrus Up For Adoption

CHICAGO (AP) — Olga, a one-ton walrus, has become an orphan at Brookfield Zoo — priced out of the "zoo parents" market when her food bill this year spiraled to $13,000.

Brookfield began the zoo parent program several years ago, putting various animals up for "adoption" with contributions going to help pay their food bill.

Olga devours 60 pounds of fresh frozen mackerel and herring daily in the winter to build up her blubber for warmth. In the summer her intake is 45 to 50 pounds, said Joyce Gardella, Brookfield director of public relations.

— two half Lab-half Irish setter dogs. Call 756-8413, Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, the Humane Society Adoptions person. She should also be called to place animals for adoption.

Mrs. Fiore also said a not-too-seriously injured cocker spaniel hit by a car on Mumford Road had been picked up and taken to Dr. Joseph Bateman's veterinary office. It may be identified by the owner and picked up there.

AFL-CIO Has Little Enthusiasm For Carter

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite applause given President Carter on his strong stand against Iran, AFL-CIO convention delegates have expressed little enthusiasm for his re-election.

Sen. Edward Kennedy is a different story.

There was no rousing cheer when Carter was introduced by retiring AFL-CIO President George Meany, only polite applause.

Saturday, the Carter-Mondale campaign committee tried to woo delegates by arranging a special tour of the White House, and inviting state federation presidents to have breakfast with Vice President Walter Mondale.

In contrast, many delegates are anxiously awaiting a reception honoring Kennedy Monday night hosted by 16 union presidents and led by Albert Shanker, president of the 525,000-member American Federation of Teachers.

Shanker said the reception is being held because of Kennedy's "longtime involvement in and concern for labor issues and the labor movement." But most observers regard it as an effort to win more political support for Kennedy's presidential bid.

With Shanker playing a major role in the event, it appears the nation's unionized teachers will be split. The leadership of the 1.6 million-member National Education Association, which is not a member of the AFL-CIO, has already announced their support of Carter.

Walter Moore, director of the Labor for Carter-Mondale Committee, said he expects more endorsements for the president after his formal announcement next month, but so far the list is slim, including officers from the United Food and Commercial Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers, the Ladies Garment Workers, the Communication Workers and the Seafarers Union.

Jack Otero, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, is on the Carter-Mondale re-election labor committee, but BRAC President Fred Kroll is one of those sponsoring the Kennedy reception.

But even those who are leading the labor support of Carter are careful to emphasize it is not an anti-Kennedy move.

A major area of support for Kennedy may be building among public employee unions. Firefighters President Howard McClennan is working behind the scenes for Kennedy, and State, County and Municipal Employee President Jerry Wurf says his members are in the Kennedy camp.

Samuel de Champlain led the Hurons against the Iroquois at the Battle of Onondaga in 1615.

Avows No More Major Recruiting Frauds

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Maj. Gen. William L. Mundie, outgoing chief of the U.S. Army recruiting command, says the current nationwide recruiting scandal revealed a serious fraud problem in the Army.

But, Mundie told The Charlotte News recently, it is a problem that will never again reoccur with the same magnitude.

"I'll never be dumb enough to tell you we got it all. We'll never get it all," Mundie said. "But the word is out. Large-scale malpractice is a thing of the past."

Army investigators, Mundie said, discovered that 12,700 recruits have been fraudulently or erroneously enlisted into the Army since October, 1977.

That would fill almost three-fourths of an infantry division. The Army's total military manpower runs about 750,000.

Promises that a recruiting scandal would not happen again were made by the Army in 1973 after a recruiting fraud problem surfaced in Charlotte and again in 1978 after the problem was uncovered in Raleigh.

The current nationwide fraud investigation, which has resulted in 324 Army recruiters being relieved of duty, began in Charlotte last May after a recruiter turned in a bootlegged copy of the enlistee entrance exam and national attention was focused on reported widespread cheating in Charlotte and the Southeast.

Mundie said the $1 million recruiting investigation, which consumed 25 man-years of supervisory effort, covered 53,000 enlistee records and interviews with about 7,300 recruits and recruiters.

Mundie estimated that 100 more recruiters will be relieved of duty by the time the investigation is completed on March 1.

The team's findings so far will be presented Monday at a Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing on recruiting fraud. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., co-chairman of the hearing, has criticized the Army for not reforming its recruiting system.

And, he also concedes, only time will tell if the efforts will pay off.

Howard Lee Was Friday Visitor

Howard Lee, Secretary of North Carolina's Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, reviewed the Youth Conservation Corps (YACC) project in Greenville and toured several of the city's recreation and parks facilities Friday afternoon.

Lee was in Greenville for the purpose of reviewing the work being carried out by the 28 youths assigned to the Greenville YACC project. After visiting the dormitories, Lee spent time in the 343 acre river park north of Tar River, which is the principal site of work being carried out by the young workers

Lee expressed satisfaction on the progress of work in the project which falls under his purview as head of the state's community development sphere.

Later, he toured Green Springs Park, inspected the exercise trail and stations there, and then took time to jog the length of the trail.

The secretary was presented a large watercolor-collage painting done by Faye Strong, a member of the Parks Department in Greenville. The painting depicts various aspects of work in the river project.

Refuses Issue Complaint

BOSTON (AP) — A judge refused to issue a criminal complaint against the Monty Python movie "Life of Brian," saying the parody of the life of Christ did not violate the city's blasphemy statute.

Municipal Court Judge John A. Pino said Friday that "depending on one's attitudes or views, the film may be boring or, as some have claimed, humorous and funny." But, he said, that did not make it blasphemous.

Suffolk Assistant District Attorney Edward Burns filed for the complaint Friday. The blasphemy law has been on the books since around 1690 and now provides a $300 fine and one year in jail for anyone who "willfully blasphemes the holy name of God."

UN Pledges $144 Million

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.N. members have pledged to contribute a total of $144 million for relief efforts by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees during the coming year. Of 48 nations pledging the United States promised the most, $63 million.

Funds pledged at a special session Friday are about three times those promised last year, but commissioner Paol Hartling said refugee aid programs next year will need about $350 million. He said the cost of relief given by his office rose from $88 million dollars estimated at the beginning of 1979 to a total of $177 million.

Other top pledges were: Sweden $26 million; Netherlands $5 million; Denmark $4 million; Australia $4 million; Norway $4 million; West Germany $2 million; and Canada $2 million.

Wants Money Returned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Treasury Department is asking some 400 purchasers of government securities to return more than $5 million that was inadvertently paid out to them.

The overpayment was blamed Friday on a computer error by Treasury Department officials. It occurred in connection with Tuesday's issuance of $3.9 billion in 52-week bills, the officials said. The 400 investors had paid for some $7 million of the issue. Each was due a check of about $1,178 for each $10,000 invested. But as a result of the error, the investors got checks totaling $6 million rather than $825,000, department officials said.

Highest Fines For Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — A half-million dollar fine levied against American Airlines for faulty maintenance is the largest ever imposed by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The FAA said Friday it has fined American $500,000 and Continental Airlines $100,000 for a procedure they used in performing maintenance on DC-10 jetliners.

The agency said neither airline admitted any violation of federal regulations and agreed to the settlement to avoid the expense and trouble of a long legal dispute.

March Plans Cancelled

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A march scheduled for today as a demonstration against the shooting deaths of five persons at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally was postponed Friday.

Leaders of a coalition of civil rights groups who planned the march said it was postponed because there was not enough response from the city's black community.

Art Lecture

William Shinsky, Curator of Exhibitions for the Southern Arts Federation in Atlanta, will lecture at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 20 in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center on the ECU campus.

The slide presentation and talk is free, and is open to the public. He will speak on exhibition design and installation.

Good Eating

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Researchers here say termites are good to eat.

The Philipine News Agency reported Friday the Forest Product Research and Industries Development Commission has found termites are nutritious and can be delectable if served in hamburgers and omlets.

Three In Family Killed By Speeding Police Car

Three members of the same family were killed and a fourth critically injured late Friday when a Charlotte police car traveling in excess of 65 miles an hour slammed into their car, officer said.

Killed in the accident were the driver, George Farrar Parker Jr. 46; his wife, Gilles Brown Parker, 36; and their son, George Farrar Parker III, 13, all of Charlotte.

A daughter, Dana Clyburn Parker, 12, suffered multiple injuries and was reported in critical condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Police officer M. J. Flaherty, driver of the patrol car, suffered multiple abrasions of his face, legs and thighs and was in stable condition at Mercy Hospital.

The accident occurred shortly after 10 p.m. at the intersection of Central Avenue and Morningside Drive in Charlotte.

Police officers said Flaherty was traveling east on Central at a speed between 65 and 70 mph when the patrol car hit the Parker's 1979 BMW automobile. The Parker car, traveling 35 mph, was attempting to cross the intersection on Morningside, a police spokesman said.

Parker had recently joined Smith Gibson Realty Co. after several years at Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.

Witnesses said the police car had its blue lights flashing but that the siren had been turned off shortly before entering the intersection.

Police said Flaherty was responding to a call. It was the second time in just over a month that Charlotte city policemen responding to calls have been involved in wrecks that killed drivers not involved in the investigation.

In February, police officers were ordered to drive no more than 10 mph above the posted speed limit when responding to emergency calls.

Hunt Urges Tar Heels To Save Gasoline

By FRED McNEESE

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., saying it is time for Americans to tell Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini he can take his oil and "go jump in the lake," urged North Carolinians Saturday to conserve fuel by reducing their driving by 10 percent.

"We have never had more compelling evidence of the need to wean ourselves from our dangerous addiction to foreign oil," Hunt said. "Now is the time to act. We cannot give an unstable nation a stranglehold on our economy."

Hunt and other governors were briefed on the Iranian situation by President Jimmy Carter Friday.

The governor said North Carolina does not face an immediate gasoline shortage because of Carter's embargo against Iranian oil, explaining any effects will not be felt for at least 45 days. But he said now is the time for all Americans to reduce their gasoline consumption.

"I believe that the best thing we can do, as citizens, is to prove to ourselves and to the world that the United States cannot be held hostage to foreign oil," Hunt said. "In short, we can tell the Ayatollah Khomeini and Iran that they can take their oil and go jump in the lake."

In addition to the voluntary 10 percent reduction in driving, Hunt urged North Carolinians to drive 55 miles per hour, keep temperatures in homes and buildings no higher than 65 degrees, insulate their homes and substitute another fuel for oil if possible.

He also urged businesses to devise some way to cut oil consumption by 5 to 10 percent.

Hunt said the 10 percent reduction will apply to his own traveling.

Hunt called for gasoline conservation during a rare Saturday news conference, about an hour before former Gov. Robert Scott, expected to be his main opponent in next year's Democratic primary, announced his formal candidacy. Hunt emphatically denied his news conference was scheduled to detract from Scott's announcement.

Hunt said Carter had urged the governors to take immediate steps to reduce use of oil.

Diplomatically, Good Week For The U.S.

By JUAN J. WALTE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — While the world focused attention on the dismal situation in Iran, the State Department said there were encouraging events elsewhere in the world and took pains to point them out.

Spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters that beyond the Iranian crisis, it was a good week for America — diplomatically speaking.

"I would have to note that we have seen in the last couple of days a rather extraordinary set of events which I think are very hopeful in terms of our own foreign policy objectives," he said.

Carter singled out events involving Zimbabwe Rhodesia, Namibia, Bolivia and West Germany.

In West Germany, the government announced it is willing to support the deployment of so-called theater nuclear weapons (TNF) on its territory, weapons such as the American-made cruise missile.

"We obviously welcome this," Carter said. "It is part of the overall thrust of our policy to both modernize the TNF forces in Europe and also to engage concurrently in arms control talks about TNF weapons."

In Bolivia, a 17-day military regime gave way to a civilian government and thus a return to a constitutional democracy supported and encouraged by Washington.

Carter hinted the United States is prepared to resume economic and military aid, which Washington cut to demonstrate its opposition to last month's military coup.

In London, the British government succeeded in getting opposing factions in Zimbabwe Rhodesia to agree on further steps aimed at bringing peace to the country. A cease-fire between the current government and black guerrillas is now being negotiated.

"The skill with which the British have approached this has been extraordinary," Carter said. "The willingness of all the participants to come this far with a compromise solution bodes well for the entire southern African region."

Besides that, he said, the current conference on the future of South West Africa or Namibia, being held in Geneva, "continues to make some progress."

Hunt Confident About Winberry Confirmation

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. said Saturday he is confident Rocky Mount attorney Charles B. Winberry Jr. will be confirmed as a U.S. district judge.

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, one of two members of the Senate Judiciary Committee examining the nomination, said Friday Winberry should withdraw from consideration. He said the nomination of Winberry, who managed the 1974 campaign of Sen. Robert B. Morgan, D-N.C., has "all the earmarks of a pure political appointment."

Hunt said Winberry should not withdraw. The governor, who has repeatedly called for merit selection of state judges, said Winberrry is highly qualified for the federal post.

"I believe Mr. Winberry would have been one of the top nominees of any merit selection committee," Hunt said.

Hunt described Winberry as a "lawyer's lawyer." He said many lawyers preparing cases for the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals come to him for advice.

"He is just seen by lawyers as that good," Hunt said.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Saturday that a Senate Judiciary Committee source said Hatch is particularly concerned with Winnberry's age — 38.

Hatch is said to believe Winberry is too young and inexperienced to be named to a $54,500-a-year lifetime position.

A Treasury Of Catalogs

The Great Book of Catalogs. By Steve and Betsy Pinkerton. Lake Bluff, Illinois. Large format, paper, 176 pages. $8.95 plus $1 postage.

Have you ever been frustrated in attempting to locate a source from which to purchase Araucana chickens that lay colored Easter eggs or a miniature horse the size of a large dog? What about efforts to find spare parts for a Rolls-Royce, or where to get a custom-built birch canoe?

Catalogs are indeed available for such exotic items, as well as for ordinary items more within the reach of the average shopper. "The Great Book of Catalogs" is the convenient key to shopping by mail, a comprehensive listing of up-to-date catalogs on specialized and general mail order firms.

The practical virtues of this exciting guide are many — it's well printed, sensibly divided into major subjects listings from animals through books and gardening to travel. The editors also give useful information on how to order, and what to do about delayed or unsatisfactory service.

The real joy of "The Great Book of Catalogs," however, is that of discovering the wealth of catalogs that can be had for the cost of an envelope and stamp. In rare instances where a catalog costs more than a few cents, these are, as the editors point out, usually well worth the price — i.e., a 200-page color book on cake decorating. The authors comment "The book itself is a great gift." Day dreams of luxury can be fulfilled in the $2 catalog of the famed Texas establishment, Nieman-Marcus.

Many relatively new fields have now entered the great American mail order catalogue circle, such as firms dealing in electronics, charter trips for campers and other rugged outdoor types.

Gardners with interests ranging from wild flower enthusiasts to those who are greenhouse specialists have a large choice of catalogs to select from.

Hobbyists can order catalogs specializing in old phone directories, autographs and butterflies, Moravian cookies or calliopes, military insignia or rubber stamp kits.

All areas of the nation are represented in this listing of over 2,000 mail order catalogs. For the record, the mail order outlet nearest Greenville listed in "The Great Book" is Happy Jack in Snow Hill, with a color catalog slanted "particularly for those who hunt with dogs."

Practical as a convenient, easy to use compilation of current catalogs, "The Great Book of Catalogs" is also an ideal book for casual browsing on cold winter nights.

(This book is available by mail only from: Pinkerton Marketing Service, 139 Oak Terrace, Lake Bluff, Illinois, 60044).

Striders' Show

WILSON — Paintings by Mary Lou Strider and wood designs by Davis (Dave) Strider are being exhibited at the Case Art Gallery on the Atlantic Christian College campus. The exhibit will be up through Nov. 29 but will be closed Nov. 21-25 for Thanksgiving.

Both Striders are graduates of the School of Art, East Carolina University.

Mrs. Striders' paintings include whimsical treatments of animals and people rendered in a surrealistic manner.

Strider is well known for his handcrafted furniture and accessories of fine woods.

Purchase Award

A painting by William Holley, chairman of art education, ECU School of Art, was selected for a North Carolina National Bank Purchase Award at the 14th Semi-Annual Juried Competition of the Watercolor Society of North Carolina.

Dr. Holley's painting, "Prelude to Winter," was one of 36 works chosen from more than 300 entries. These are on view in the Duke Museum of Art, Duke University through the month of November.

Closure Dates

RALEIGH — The N. C. Archives Search Room will be closed for several days for the holiday season and annual inventory. Closure dates are Nov. 22, 23, and 24; Dec. 22, 24, 25, and 26; Jan. 1, 8 and 9. In addition, the Search Room will be closed every Monday.

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtednesses, without property repossession or creditor harrassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

—Coming Events—

Chinese Magic Circus

RALEIGH — "The Chinese Magic Circus" of Taiwan is coming to Raleigh for one performance only on Tuesday, Nov. 27 at 7:30 p.m. This is the second event in the Capital City Series of Stewart Theater, and will take place in Raleigh Memorial Auditorium. Individual tickets, while they last, will be available at the door.

The production will feature acrobatics, feats of balance, Kung Fu, costumed dancing, and magician Chen Liu. Most of the acts were created and have been performed by Chinese for 2,000 years and more.

For ticket information and reservations, call the box office at 737-3105. Due to a grant from the Grassroots Arts Council, discount tickets are available for students, senior citizens, and children under 18.

Doskey To Premiere New Work On Tuesday

GOES OVER SCORE . . . Pianist Henry Doskey, right, goes over the score of "Fantasy Piece 6" with ECU composer-in-residence Alan Leichtling. Doskey will premiere Leichtling's composition in a recital at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 20 in Hendrix Theater on campus. The recital is free and the public is invited. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines)

The premiere performance of Alan Liechtling's composition, "Fantasy Piece 6" will be given in a recital by pianist Henry Doskey at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, November 20. The recital will take place in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center. It is free and open to the public.

Leichtling, composer-in-residence in the School of Music, East Carolina University, has dedicated "Fantasy Piece 6" to Doskey. It is the sixth of Leichtling's series of one-movement solo works, which he says "tend to exploit the 'virtuoso element.' This piece," he adds, "is somewhat different in that its virtuosity derives from the almost unbroken calm of the whole. The work consists of a theme, a series of seven variations and a finale." Among other works to be performed by Doskey are Mozart's "Rondo in A Minor;" Beethoven's "Sonata No. 32 in C minor;" Debussy's "Images," second series; and Liszt's "Apres une Lecture du Dante - Fantasia Quasi Sonata."

Doskey's recent recital appearances have been a Carnegie Hall performance and at the Chicago Symphony Hall. He is a native of New Orleans and is in his fourth year on the ECU keyboard faculty.

In 1815, Austria, Prussia and Russia formed the Holy Alliance.

Boys Choir Annual Vesper Concert Today

The annual Thanksgiving Vesper Service by the Greenville Boys' Choir will be held at 4 p.m. today in Oakmont Baptist Church. Oakmont is located just off N. C. 43 less than a mile beyond Pitt Plaza.

Tom Hawley will direct the approximately 40 boys of ages 9-14 from Greenville, Ayden, Grifton and other Pitt County areas who are members of the choir. Libby Braxton, pianist, and Doug Newell, will be accompanists.

The varied program of music and scripture reading will encompass traditional musical selections, such as "Come, Ye Thankful People Come"' "For the Beauty of the Earth," and "Now Thank We All Our God."

Other music featured will include an instrumental prelude and an introit, Bach's "Let All the Earth Adore Thee," an anthem "Oh Praise the Lord Who Made All Beauty," a solo offertory, "Oh Give Thanks," , and two other anthems, "Allelulia, Praise the Lord," and Ingalls' "The Gift of Song."

Psalms to be read during the service include numbers 23, 67, 100 and 148. Boys to be reading psalms and other scriptures include James Marshall, Richard Hasselrig, Gil Gardner, Chris Marks and Brian Entzminger. Among soloists are Raymond King and Stewart Coulter.

There is no admission charge for the annual Thanksgiving Vesper Service and the public is invited to attend.

CDC Crafts Fair

RALEIGH — The Carolina Designer Craftsmen, a nonprofit craftsmen's guild, will hold its 10th Annual Crafts Fair in the Scott Building on the North Carolina State Fairgrounds on Thanksgiving weekend, November 23-25.

More than 80 craftsmen will display and sell in this juried show, with crafts represented to include batik, ceramics, fabric design, glass, graphics, jewelry, weaving, woodworking and others.

Greenville and area craftsmen who will be exhibiting include Art Haney and Ann Riggs of Greenville; Tim Britton, Kinston; Candace Hargett, Oriental; Brown Holloman, Pinetops; and Carol Fulcher McCauley, Simpson.

Craft fair hours will be from 6 to 10 p.m. on Friday, November 23; from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday, November 24; and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday, November 25.

Admission fee is $1.75 for adults and $1 for senior citizens, handicapped persons and students. Children under 12 will be admitted free when accompanied by an adult.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — The second annual Designer's Showroom is the feature topic on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing from 11:30 a.m. until noon today over WITN-TV, Channel 7.

The Showroom will be open November 25 through December 16 at Pine Hill Farm in Foxcroft, a suburb of Raleigh. Two guests discussing the show are Herb Highsmith, originally from Robersonville, now a Raleigh based decorator, and Janis Fountain, design-liaison person for the N. C. Museum of History Association. The 19-room house will have boutiques and a tearoom.

In the kitchen Angie Latham Crone of the Department of Agriculture will concentrate on the use of N. C. food products that can be used as gift ideas for the coming holiday season.

Playwright Says He's A Conservative

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — British playwright Tom Stoppard is a master of wit and ideas, and by his own confession, a conservative.

In "Night and Day," Stoppard's new play about his love-hate attitude toward the press, Mageeba, the leader of an imaginary African nation, shouts what he thinks freedom of the press ought to be: "Freedom — with responsibility."

It really was Stoppard speaking his own beliefs. Whether it's freedom of the press, or the use of language, or the raising of his four children — he's conservative.

"I'm a traditionalist, a conservative by temperament," Stoppard told UPI. "I'm talking about my taste in literature as well as my taste in politics. Freedom with self-restraint is a conservative idea."

Stoppard had shed the trim, tan suit he wore for a luncheon appearance and was in a sweat suit and jogging shoes, his dark hair tousled, when he was interviewed in a Kennedy Center lounge.

"One has to be careful to keep words for what they mean. I'm also conservative in that respect. I'm very jealous of language. I hate its being exploited."

His desires for his children are simply what most parents desire: "I don't think I hope for any more than it's utterly conventional to hope for."

Stoppard's wife, Miriam, is a physician with her own career in pharmaceuticals. She says there is little difference between the public and the private Stoppard.

"I'm going to write a book entitled, 'The Best Jokes Were in the Kitchen,'" she said. She said he convulses their children and they roll on the floor in laughter. She laughs at him lustily herself.

Stoppard was born in Czechoslovakia. His father, a doctor, , died when Tom was young, and his mother married a businessman in England.

"I think entering journalism became more formative than my family background because you have to hold your own with your colleagues and be interested and interesting," Stoppard said.

"I find that to this day my heart sinks if I find myself having to make conversation with somebody who's in theater. I infinitely prefer finding myself on an airplane next to somebody who's in the laundry business or insurance or whatever."

Stoppard, 42, arrived on the American scene in 1967 with "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead." A short time ago, his "Dogg's Hamlet and Cahout's Macbeth" was playing at the Kennedy Center's Terrace Theater.

That play, too, dealt with words and ideas. In the Hamlet portion, the actors invented their own words for the play. The Macbeth portion grew out of Stoppard's strong feelings about the repression of the Czech playwright Cahout.

In "Night and Day" Stoppard comes home to his first love — journalism. The conservatism still shows through.

"One really relies on a degree of self-restraint so that, for instance, UPI doesn't behave like New York Confidential," he says. "UPI is actually perfectly free to behave like that if it wishes to. The reason it doesn't isn't probably anything more complicated than being aware of its own personality. Its own personality is what it's selling.

"There's a standard of objectivity, a standard of seriousness and comprehensiveness and comprehension. All that becomes part of the personality of a particular newspaper or news agency and it doesn't wish to compromise... There is an automatic self-restraint, which, if you like, is self-interested, and that's really the perfect situation where self-interest coincides with public interest."

Stoppard's ambivalent feelings about the press showed up in "Night and Day."

"People do awful things to each other," the news photographer Guthrie says, finally. "But it's worse in places where everybody is kept in the dark. Information is light. Information, in itself, about anything, is light. That's all you can say, really."

A few moments later, the old pro foreign correspondent Wagner hands Ruth a dispatch on a young colleague killed in battle. It is just a few lines long.

"Is that it?" Ruth asked, her expression showing shock that a news story could so tersely sum up a life.

"That's it," Wagner said.

Bluegrass Festival

MYRTLE BEACH, S. C. — A three day South Carolina Bluegrass Festival will be held November 22, 23 and 24 at the Convention Center in Myrtle Beach.

Festival hours are 3 p.m. til midnight Thursday, and from noon til midnight on Friday and Saturday.

Performing groups to be featured at the festival include The Lewis Family, the Osborne Brothers, Mac Wiseman, Ralph Stanley, Jim and Jesse, Don Reno, Hot Rize, Country Gazette, Shenandoah Cut-Ups, The Pinnacle Boys, Nashville Grass and others.

'The Children's Hour' Opening November 28

Wednesday, November 28 is the opening date of "The Children's Hour," the third play this season staged by the East Carolina Playhouse. The play will be presented at 8:15 p.m. nightly (except Sunday) through Saturday, December 8 in the Studio Theater of the Drama Building on campus.

Tickets are $2.50, and can be reserved by calling the box office, 757-6390 from 10-4 daily except on Nov. 22 and 23.

"The Children's Hour," which launched Lillian Hellman's career as a playwright, appeared in 1934 and became a critical and popular success.

The drama deals vividly with the shattering effect of a lie, told by a frightened and vindictive girl, on the lives of people around her.

Two women, school teachers, are unable to overcome the whispers and innuendos accusing them of being lesbians. The rumors lead to their ruin — and when the young girl's maliciousness is finally uncovered, it is too late for the teachers to salvage their lives and careers.

Travis Lockhart, a newcomer to the faculty of the ECU Dept. of Drama and Speech, directs the play. He comes here from the University of Texas and has acting, directing, and stage managing experience including assignments with Tyrone Guthrie Theater and the Actors Repertory Company.

"The Children's Hour" cast includes a dozen students and three faculty members at ECU. Dr. Helen Starr, of the Drama Dept., returns to the stage after an absence of several years to play Mrs. Amelia Tilford. She appeared in Summer Theater in "My Fair Lady," "Mame," and "Never Too Late."

Anita Brehm, veteran of ECU, Ayden Workshop and local plays, is cast as Agatha, Mr.s Tilford's maid. She appeared in ECU productions of "Fiddler on the Roof," "Bye Bye Birdie," and "The Skin of Our Teeth."

Mrs. Hazel Stapleton of the Dept. of Psychology will appear as Mrs. Lily Mortar, one of the teachers. She has been in Playhouse productions in "Pippin," "Emily," and "The Skin of Our Teeth," among other plays.

Students in the cast are Cindy Carol Williams as Peggy Rogers; Gay Gaskill as Catherine; Cheryl Pierce in the role of Lois Fisher; Lori Mahl as Evenlyn Munn; Anne Daughtridge as Helen Burton; Sally Clodfelter in the role of Rosalie Wells; B. Jane Biddix as Janet; Paige Weaver as Mary Tilford; Debra Zumbach as Karen Wright; Shauna Holmes in the role of Martha Dobie; Donald Wagoner as Dr. Joseph Cardin; and William G. Sumner as the grocery boy.

Scenery for the production is designed by Gregory Buch, costumes are by Peggy Anton, and lighting by David F. Downing. All three are member of the ECU Drama and Speech faculty.

Adorned Temple Is Discovered

TOKYO (AP) — An ancient temple adorned with murals dating back 450 years was discovered recently in Southern Shansi Province in northern China, the Chinese News Agency Xinhua (Hsinhua) has reported.

Paintings in the Ji-Yi Temple depict legendary tales in which more than 400 human figures, gods and demons are represented, Xinhua said in a dispatch from the provincial capital of Taiyuan.

"The eastern, western and southern sides of the temple hall are all decorated with paintings, covering 130 square yards in all," the report said.

Show At St. John's

WILMINGTON — An exhibition of paintings by Jack Berkman is now on view at St. John's Gallery, 114 Orange Street, Wilmington.

The exhibition, entitled "People," as the name implies, encompasses paintings of people. For several years Berkman taught at Guilford College, then returned to Wilmington, which is now his home.

He was educated at the Corcoran School of Art, Washington, D.C., and completed his studies at the University of New Mexico.

Notes On Moore's Nude

"Nude in Architectural Background," lithograph, 12½ by 14¾ inches, by Henry Moore.

Son of a coal miner, Henry Moore (born 1898), who received traditional academic training at London's Royal Academy until 1925, had by 1950 achieved international recognition as an artist and is today considered to be the world's greatest living sculptor.

It is an interesting fact that good sculptors are frequently excellent draughtsmen, probably because they are accustomed to thinking in-the-round and used to reducing natural forms to basic symbols.

During his long, distinguished and productive career Moore, like all sensitive artists of our time, has responded to some of the numerous influences which have been at work in the art world during this tumultous century. Through the years, his work has reflected such influences as mediaeval religious sculpture, the Italian Renaissance, African and Pre-Columbia primitive art, and the abstraction and surrelism of Picasso (whose great Cubist "Head of Fernande Olivier," completed in 1909, may very well have been the catalyst that precipitated Moore's lifelong absorption with the tensions which can exist in a work of art between solid forms and voids).

Like Picasso, Moore has never forsaken the human predicament, has never worked in the idiom of pure abstraction. Always there exists in his works a basic concern with the problems of humanity, expressed in forms which are easily understood as representing human figures.

MOORE'S LITHOGRAPH . . . of a reclining nude is critiqued by Emily Farnham in an analysis of the modern master's work.

The lone figure, which lies prone in a pose symbolic of exhaustion, has been radically abstracted and distorted as a means toward increasing its vitality. Due to the figure's twisting torso, twisting shoulders, and the tensions created between its solid forms and the surrounding voids, the resulting impression is more real than any photographic version could be. In other words, here the unreal or non-illusory has become more real than fidelity to nature would have been — frequently, one of the fascinating results of good art.

A sense of mystery informs the dark voids between the primitive architectural forms, some of which possess curved surfaces which roll forward out of black space. The heavy lintel placed threateningly over the head of the spot-lighted recumbent figure, the weight of the architectural forms in general, and the darkness of the voids between them combine to create an effect of almost unbearable weariness in the figure's pose.

Suddenly, the lone figure becomes a tragic symbol confronted with the burdens of a complex world, a symbol of mankind prostrated by the weight of insurmountable problems.

Emily Farnham

Editor's Note: Dr. Farnham is a professor emeritus of the School of Art, East Carolina University, an author, and a member of the N. C. Art Commission.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MARGARET CLARK

In YOU COULD LOOK IT UP by Maurey Allen, we at last have the definitive biography of the legendary Casey Stengel — ballplayer and manager extraordinary. During his incredible sixty years of baseball, he won an astounding ten pennants and seven World Series. Casey started out in turn-of-the-century Kansas City as a frontier-town hero who played ball in the scrambling minors. He broke into the majors with the old Brooklyn Dodgers before joining the New Work Giants. From the first, he always enjoyed being a clown, but he was also a shrewd player and an even more professional manager. He was the greatest and best-known humorist in American sporting life, and he went down fighting, at eighty-five, alone in his bedroom, arguing back at a radio talk-show host. YOU COULD LOOK IT UP is a treasure of anecdotes from and about the great personalities who crossed Casey's path. It is also a heart-warming tribute to one of America's most enduring folk heroes.

Donald Gropman records the life and career of another baseball great in SAY IT AIN'T SO, JOE!: THE STORY OF SHOELESS JOE JACKSON. Jackson is remembered as the most famous of the Chicago Black Sox of 1919, the eight players banned from baseball for life for having thrown the World Series. He is also recalled as one of the game's great hitters. This biography traces Jackson's rise from a South Carolina mill town through minor league to the majors, where he was a star slugger for Philadelphia, Cleveland, and Chicago. An illiterate, Shoeless Joe was a natural talent, as adept in the field as he was at the plate. Gropman builds a strong case to prove Jackson's innocence in baseball's greatest scandal. Diamond fans, whether they are convinced or not, will enjoy this interesting look at the game of baseball during its formative years.

RED SKELTON by Arthur Marx is an affectionate portrait of the man whose remarkable skill as a pantomimist and gifted ability to evoke tears has marked him as one of the century's greatest comedians. Born the son of a circus clown, Red Skelton's career has spanned over fifty years. He has conquered every entertainment medium from vaudeville to television. However, the clown who has brought laughter to his public life has had a private life plagued by tragedy. Marx gives us a lavish slice of Skelton in a book that is at once moving and funny, warm and heartbreaking.

TIMBERLAKE'S TOOL CHEST . . . features a sculpted tambour-front that rolls into the lid of the chest.

STRIDER'S CHEST . . . has a router-inlaid front and is made of black walnut.

Handcrafted furniture by two local woodworkers is reproduced in a new photographic collection of outstanding work in wood in America today, a book published by The Taunton Press.

Davis (Dave) Strider, a former graduate student of the School of Art, East Carolina University, and Robert Timberlake, currently a student in the School of Art, are the two represented in "Design Book Two," which contains over a thousand photographs of woodwork selected from more than 12,000 entries.

Strider's chest of contemporary design, is 49 inches tall, 35 inches wide and 24 inches deep. It is black walnut wood and features a router-inlaid front.

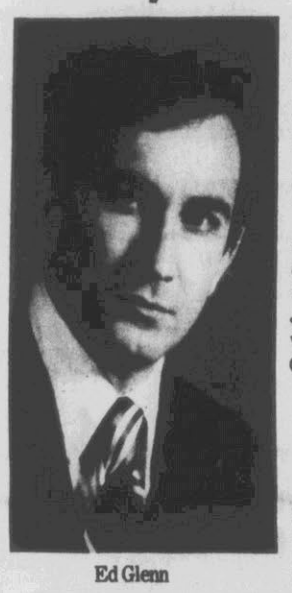

Timberlake is represented by a tool chest of white oak, black walnut, and beech woods. The sculpted tambour-front rolls up into the lid. Timberlake's band-sawn, carved and sculpted tool chest measures 26 by 12 by 16 inches.

"Design Book Two," published by the editors of "Fine Woodworking" magazine, in addition to the photos, contains a directory of woodworkers which allows readers to contact the craftsmen. Intestered persons can order the book directly from: The Taunton Press, 52 Church Hill Road, Box 355, Newtown, Connecticut, 06470. It is priced at $15.95 hardback, and $11.95 paperback. It is also available in most bookstores.

$175,000 Grant

DURHAM — The American Dance Festival, headquartered in Durham, has received a three-year $175,000 Challenge Grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, a federal agency. Each federal dollar must be matched by three dollars in contributions from either new sources or increased funding from previous donors.

Charles Reinhart, president of the Dance Festival, notes "This grant combined with the increased contributions we have received will produce a balanced budget for 1979 and reduce the 1978 debt by 25 percent."

Celebration Set For December 1st

Plans for "An Old Fashioned Holiday Celebration" to be held in Greenville on Saturday, December 1 have been announced.

The event is being co-sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Pitt Community College, Pitt County Home Extension Service, and the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

The purpose of the celebration is to create a community-wide awareness of the many facets of the Christmas and holiday spirit.

At the Greenville Community Center, corner Greene and 4th Streets, exhibits of a large variety of crafts will be shown from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Crafts on hand will include textile crafts as well as Christmas crafts. Craftsmen will be on hand to demonstrate techniques.

The administration building of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department at 2000 Cedar Lane is the site of entertainments to be given in the afternoon. At 1:30, Joe Stines of the Children's Library will tell stories, followed by seasonal music to be sung by the Greenville Boys' Choir. A dance performance will be given at 3 p.m. by members of the East Carolina University Dance Theater, and the Greenville Community Chorus will sing at 3:30 p.m.

All the above events are free and open to the public.

Symphony Grant

RALEIGH — The N.C. Symphony has been announced as one of 120 arts groups in the U.S. to receive a challenge grant this year from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The grant, in the amount of $200,000, is a matching grant requiring a three-for-one match for every dollar from the federal agency.

In addition to the NEA Grant, the Challenge Fund will include a $125,000 three-for-one matching Endowment Grant from the Mellon Foundation.

It has been disclosed that the N. C. Symphony Challenge Fund for the two-year period 1979-1981 has a goal of $2 million to be raised.

Quartet Today

RALEIGH — The Kitchen Quartet will be in performance at 3 p.m. today on the first floor of the N. C. Museum of Art, 107 E. Morgan St., Raleigh. Compositions by Purcell, Frescobaldi, Albi-noni, Vitali and Handel will be played. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Literary Contest Set

NORFOLK, VA. — Rules for the annual Irene Leache Memorial Association Literary Contest of the Norfolk Society of Arts for 1980 have been announced.

Categories of the contest and prizes to be given are:

Print Auction

About two dozen printmakers, faculty, graduate assistants and students of the School of Art, East Carolina University, will be showing and selling prints in the Fourth Annual Print Auction to be held Wednesday, November 28.

The annual auction is a benefit sale, with proceeds going to projects sponsored by the ECU Print Group. This year some of the funds will be applied to a workshop to be conducted by John Ross and Clare Romano. The two are a husband and wife team, instructors at Pratt Graphics Center in New York City.

The auction will be in the auditorium of the Jenkins Fine Arts Center, and will begin at 7 p.m. Prior to the auction, the public can view the prints there from 5 to 7 p.m.

Original prints in all media will be offered. Faculty members represented are Donald Sexauer and Matthew Holynski. Graduate assistants in the group are Laura Jackson, Ed Midgett, and David McDowell.

Students who will be represented include Alan Bowling, Maria McLaughlin, David Norris, Elaine Miller, Dana Smith, Ellen Zazzarino, Susan Edmunds, Gary Freeman, Grant Allen, Michael Loderstedt, Bill Owen, Sandy Willcox, Richard Hair, and Don Mackey.

Did The Queen Know Her Art Curator Was A Spy?

LONDON (AP) — Did she or didn't she know her art curator was a spy for the Kremlin? Only Queen Elizabeth II and her secretary know for sure.

That question and a host of others intrigued Britons today as newspapers splashed the scandalous story of 72-year-old Anthony Blunt and demanded a full-scale government inquiry.

Lawmakers anticipated an emergency debate on the affair in the House of Commons next week.

"Did the Queen know?" said a page one headline in the Sun newspaper.

"After 15 Years Cover-Up...Time for the Truth," said the Daily Mirror.

"Who is Running this Country Anyway? The People Elected to do the Job — or the Faceless Bureaucrats of Whitehall?" thundered the Daily Express.

The controversy revolved around whether or not the queen was informed of Blunt's confession in 1964 to having passed secrets to the Soviet Union as an intelligence officer during World War II. At the time he made the confession, Blunt, an art historian, was serving in the unpaid post of Surveyor of the Queen's Pictures.

Her palace press office first confirmed that the queen's private secretary in 1964, Sir Michael Adeane, had been informed and that he in turn told the queen.

But later the statement was retracted and the office said it had been the personal interpretation by an employee.

The queen's chief press secretary, Michael Shea, said that what the secretary had told the queen would never be known because such exchanges were "confidential."

Politicans in the government of 1964 said they had not been informed of the confession. London papers asked how that could have been possible and why Blunt had not been prosecuted nor removed from the palace job.

Political sources said the British needed to keep Blunt talking about Soviet activities and wanted to avoid gossip which would follow if he were dismissed.

The newspapers also demanded to know Blunt's present whereabouts and why he was tipped off by the government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Blunt, who has been stripped of his knighthood, vanished from his London home.

Blunt was named as the "fourth man" in the spy chain of Guy Burgess, Donald MacLean and Kim Philby, who defected to the Soviet Union in the 1950s and 1960s. All three had worked in Britain's embassy in Washington.

Blunt was a tutor at Cambridge University and along with Burgess and Maclean belonged to an exclusive club elitists known as the Apostles, whose members were professed homosexuals.

Marines Return

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Marine Corps unit sent to Guantanamo Bay last month in a show of military strength ordered by President Carter has returned to the United States.

A Marine spokesman said about 2,000 troops arrived here Friday, in a quiet return that provided a sharp contrast with their departure, a widely publicized expedition that drew international attention.

Peters Concert

CHARLOTTE — Metropolitan Opera singer Roberta Peters will sing with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra in a performance at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28 in Ovens Auditorium. Ticket information and reservations can be made by calling the box office at 704-332-6136.

High Point Play

HIGH POINT — Pedro Sylva is directing the Festival Stage Production of Shakespeare's "She Stoops To Conquer," to be on stage at the High Point Theater on Dec. 1, 2, 4 and 5-8. A matinee performance will also be given on Dec. 2. Ticket information is available by calling 889-1544.

Current Show

FAYETTEVILLE — An exhibition of art entitled "Teachers Are Artists, Too!" is now on view at Arsenal House Gallery, 822 Arsenal Avenue, Fayetteville. The show will remain on view through November 27. Gallery hours are 9-5 on Mondays through Fridays, and 1-5 on Sundays.

Green Sets Total Offense Mark With 285 Yards

Green, Collins, Sutton Pace 49-16 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

North Texas State is the Mean Green.

But Saturday afternoon at Ficklen Stadium, they got a look at the meanest Green...ECU quarterback Leander Green, who guided the Pirates of East Carolina to a 49-16 victory over the Texans, and broke the school's record for total offense in a single game.

Green ran for 90 yards, scoring one touchdown. He hit on eight of 12 passes for another 195, two of them touchdown strikes of Billy Ray Washington. The total of 285 yards broke John Casazza's old mark of 259, set in 1971 against Davidson.

It was a fitting way for the Jacksonville senior to bow out in his final home game.

Behind Green, the Pirates piled up 600 yards in total offense, and easily surpassed the school single season records for rushing and total offense—with still a game to go.

Anthony Collins, who added 91 yards on 16 carries, scored three times, on runs on 1, 1, and 5 yards, while Theodore Sutton ripped of 151 yards in 12 carries, scoring on a 35-yard ramble. Washington's touchdown catches were on passes of 66 and 37 yards.

North Texas, which led twice in the contest, got scoring runs of 3 and 85 yards from Malcolm Jones and a 28-yard field goal from Whit Smith.

The Pirate first team was never stopped by the Texans and in the first period twice killed scoring drives and gave North Texas the opportunity to grab the early lead.

"We were kind of stale in the first half," Coach Pat Dye said. "We haven't had that many turnovers in a long time. We were absolutely, totally flat in the first half on defense. We had one guy on the tackle and were poor there. It's a great tribute to the coaches that we came back the way we did in the second half."

Dye said it was tough to find fault with the offense, except for the fumbles. "It was just another great offensive performance."

On defense, second half adjustments put the Pirates back in control. "The big adjustment was in our thinking," Dye said.

Dye also decried the dwindling chances for a bowl bid for the Pirates. "I think it's a shame. These people deserve a chance to play.

"This is a great offensive football team. And I don't back off what I said earlier in the week about Green (Dye called him the best quarterback in the state, and one of the best in the country.) He is the best. Anthony Collins is the best running back in the state, I think, more explosive than (Wake Forest's James) McDougald."

For a while, it looked like the Texas team was going to be more than the Pirate defense could handle.

East Carolina did get off the first threat, however, driving from its own 26 to the Eagle 32 before fumbling it away.

North Texas took advantage of the opportunity to drive for its first score. It took seven plays to cover the 71 yards. Quarterback Jordan Case passed twice for good yardage along the way, hitting Steve Dieb for 12 yards and David Hagerman for 17 more. Jones also contributed 24 of the yards rushing, including the final three. He took a quick pitch around the left side for the final yards, and Smith's PAT made it 7-0 with 6:57 left.

East Carolina again drove, but again fumbled it away, this time at the North Texas 41.

They got it back at their own 37 and this time took just six plays to get on the scoreboard and tie it up. The Pirate drive started on with an 18-yard pass to Collins from Green, and Sutton and Sam Harrell picked up 13 yards in two carries. Green, behind a springing block by Collins, got 25 more yards, then ran for six to the one. Collins barged into the end zone from there, and Bill Lamm's first of seven PAT kicks, tied it at 7-7 with 1:37 left.

It took only one play for North Texas to regain the lead. Following a kickoff that went through the end zone, North Texas was penalized from the 20 back to the 15. Jones was then given the ball on a quick pitch to the right. He avoided one tackle in the backfield, then broke another as he turned the corner. Then, it was a foot race as he sped 85 yards with the ball for the go-ahead score. The PAT kick was wide, and the Mean Green led, 13-7 with 34 seconds left in the first period.

East Carolina drove back down the field, regaining the lead, and they never gave it up. From their own 22, The Pirates moved in ten plays. Green hit Collins for nine, and then Collins ran twice for 25 yards, ending

Wolfpack Captures ACC Crown, But Finds No Bowl Bid As Prize

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

DURHAM — There was little for Blue Devil followers to cheer about on the field at Wallace Wade Stadium Saturday, so their attention, and their cheers, turned to another game some 800 miles to the north.

As the third quarter ended with the Blue Devils on the march against N.C. State, the final score of the Duke-Kentucky basketball game played in Springfield, Mass., was flashed out on the message board, sending those Blue Devil faithful left screaming "Duke is No. 1."

Meanwhile, down on the field, the Blue Devils were scoring their lone touchdown of the afternoon, but it was to no avail as the Wolfpack whipped Duke, 27-8, before 24,100, to win their first Atlantic Coast Conference Championship since 1973.

"This was the oddest champship game I've ever been involved in," said Wolfpack coach Bo Rein, whose team ends the season with a 7-4 mark overall and a 5-1 ACC record.

"In the first half, except for a few mistakes, we had great intensity," Rein said. "In the second half, except for that 99-yard drive, we were just adequate.

"We knew last week when that field goal went over (giving Penn State a 9-7 win), that we'd be ready to play today," Rein added.

Despite winning the conference title, no bowl bid was immediately forthcoming after the game.

"No, I know nothing of a bowl except that our squad voted they would accept one if one were extended," Rein said.

"You were the experts," said Rein of the sports reporters who during the preseason picked State to win the ACC. "You picked us to win and we did. But remember, I told you it would be tough and with a lot of close games. We were both right."

The Wolfpack looked every bit the league champ in the first half, accumulating nearly 240 yards total offense while holding Duke to 69 yards. In all, State had 423 yards while Duke had 176.

N.C. State scored on its opening possession, moving 73 yards in 10 plays to take the early lead. The drive, spearheaded by Chuck Canady's 48 yards in five carries, was capped by Wayne McLean's six-yard scoring run.

Following a Duke drive that fizzled on the Wolfpack 31, the Wolfpack was again on the move. Sparked by Dwight Sullivan's 49-yard run, N.C. State's longest of the year, the Wolfpack marched 75 yards in six plays, with quarterback Scott Smith going over from the two, for the first of his two TDs. Sullivan led the Wolfpack in rushing with 119 yards on 16 carries.

After Duke tossed two interceptions and State one, the Wolfpack was again thirsting for a score. Regaining possession on their 42, it took the 'Pack just eight plays to up their lead to 21-0, with Smith taking it in from 11 yards out.

Smith's two scores set a new N.C. State record for touchdown responsibility. On the season, Smith ran for 13 scores and threw for five more, eclipsing the old mark of 17 held by Stan Fritz.

Defensive back Eric Williams picked off three passes against the Blue Devils, tying the State record for most interceptions in a game.

"I'm proud of the way Scott played today," Rein said of the senior from Newark, Ohio. "But I can't say enough about the way Eric Williams played. That was by far the most outstanding performace I've seen by a defensive back. He was in the right place every time."

The Blue Devils threatened once more before the half. Recovering a fumble on the Wolfpack 41, Duke moved to the 14 before fumbling away the scoring opportunity.

After a scoreless third period, Duke finally got on the board early in the final quarter. Sparked by a fourth down run from punt formation by Ricky Brummitt for 17 yards and a first down, the Blue Devils marched 78 yards to score.

Quarterback Stanley Driskell hit tight end Joel Patten, who made a leaping catch over N.C. State's Mike Nall, for the score.

State's final tally came late in the game when Ricky Adams capped an 18-play, 99-yard drive with a one-yard plunge, giving the Wolfpack the victory.

"We knew this was going to be the culmination of six league games, winning the conference championship," Rein said afterwards. "Duke has done a good job of getting more turnovers than they gave up but I think today we got more. I think that was the key, along with us being just a little more physical."

Lady Pirates Open With 81-51 Triumph

East Carolina's women's basketball team widened the lead almost throughout the game and cruised to an 81-51 opening game victory over William & Mary in Minges Coliseum Saturday evening.

Rosie Thompson led the scoring parade with 22 points and added 11 rebounds to the Pirate cause, but coach Cathy Andruzzi was quick to point to several newcomers who aided the cause greatly.

"I didn't know what to expect for the opening game with so many new people," Andruzzi said. "We had two players hurting, so we played a zone and the others had to help them out a lot."

"Laurie Sikes was hurt, but she really made things go at the point guard spot. For the first game it was super except maybe for the free throw shooting. On defense, Lydia Rountree, Marcia Girven and Rosie had to take the pressure off Sikes and Kathy Riley, who played hurt, and they really did it well.

"Mary Denkler and Fran Hooks were big surprises tonight. They made some delicate adjustments on defense which helped us greatly. Even though we played a zone it was pretty aggressive. We watched their offense and made some adjustments that helped us through the game."

Denkler led the game's rebounders with 15 in a reserve role while Thompson added 11. Sikes had nine assists to lead that category. Cheryl Yarborough and Lynn Norenburg had 12 points each for the losers, who were led in rebounding by Betty Strock with nine.

The Pirates shot 43.7 per cent from the floor, compared to 33.3 for the Indians.

"I thought Rosie played an exceptional game," Andruzzi continued. "The others got the ball to her well and she shot well." The senior forward hit on 11 of 17 field goals for the night.

"This was my first opening win in four years of coaching," said the second-year Pirate coach, who labored two seasons at Wagner. "It feels good to finally be 1-0."

The next action for the Pirates will be on a trip to New York, Firday at St. John's and Saturday at Manhattan.

Muddled Picture As Invitations Go Out

By The Associated Press

Ohio State won the Big Ten football championship and gained a berth in the Rose Bowl with an 18-15 victory over Michigan as the postseason picture began to take shape Saturday. But there are still numerous holes to fill.

By virtue of its victory over the Wolverines, the Buckeyes will play at Pasadena on New Year's Day against the winner of the Pacific-10 championship, which will be either Southern Cal or Washington.

Despite losing, Michigan still received a bowl bid. The Wolverines agreed to play in the Gator Bowl on Dec. 28 against North Carolina, a 13-7 winner Saturday over Virginia.

Meanwhile, one of the berths was filled in the Orange Bowl when fifth-ranked Florida State was invited to play there Jan. 1 against the winner of the Nebraska-Oklahoma game next Saturday, which will decide the Big Eight title.

The loser of the Nebraska-Oklahoma contest will wind up in the Cotton Bowl on New Year's Day against the winner of the Southwest Conference, which could be any one of four teams. Houston, Texas and Arkansas are still in the running in the SWC race and Baylor has a very slim, mathematical chance.

Either Texas or Arkansas will be invited to the Sugar Bowl, depending on who makes the Cotton Bowl and how they fare in their final games. The Sun Bowl is also interested in Houston, Texas and Arkansas, plus Washington if it doesn't go to the Rose Bowl.

The Southeastern Conference champion, either No. 1 Alabama or Georgia, will host the Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans on Jan. 1. The Crimson Tide continued unbeaten Saturday with a 30-0 decision over Miami, Fla., but could lose out on the Sugar Bowl should they lose Dec. 1 to Auburn.

Elsewhere, Penn State was invited to face 20th-ranked Tulane in the Liberty Bowl in Memphis, Tenn., on Dec. 22. The Nittany Lions defeated No. 18 Temple 22-7 Saturday while Tulane, tied with Baylor for No. 20, was idle.

Temple accepted a bid to play in the Garden State Bowl in East Rutherford, N.J., Dec. 15 against a team to be determined.

Two more Big Ten teams will be going to bowls this season. Purdue, a 37-21 victor over Indiana, accepted a bid to the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston on Dec. 31 against an opponent to be named. Indiana, meanwhile, will go to the Holiday Bowl in San Diego on Dec. 21.

The host team in the Holiday Bowl will be either Brigham Young or San Diego State, who play Saturday for the Western Athletic Conference title. BYU clinched at least a tie for the WAC championship with a 27-0 victory over Utah Saturday.

Should the Cougars lose to San Diego State, the Cougars could wind up in the Bluebonnet or Fiesta Bowl.

Pittsburgh, the nation's No. 11 team, accepted a bid to the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., on Dec. 25 after defeating Army 40-0 Saturday.

South Carolina accepted a bid to play in the Hall of Fame Bowl in Birmingham, Ala., on Dec. 29 after a 35-14 victory over Wake Forest. The Gamecocks' opponent is yet to be determined.

The Deacons, meanwhile, got one of the berths in the Tangerine Bowl in Orlando, Fla., on Dec. 22.

Baylor, which defeated Rice 45-14 Saturday, was invited to play in both the Tangerine and Peach bowls, but accepted the Peach. Clemson also was invited to play in the Peach after a 16-10 victory over Notre Dame.

Playoffs

Rose High School was the lone area winner in the first round of the State High School Playoffs Friday night, downing Raleigh Millbrook, 32-13, in 4-A play.

Farmville Central's top-ranked Jaguars were upset by Ahoskie, 17-14, on a late field goal, in the 3-A ranks, while Jamesville's 1-A Bullets were beaten by Princeton, 28-6.

Details of the games can be found on pages B-4 (Rose), B-5 (Farmville) and B-6 (Jamesville).

Heels Top Virginia, Get Gator Bid

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. AP) — Jeff Hayes' two long ield goals and Matt Kupec's 7th touchdown pass of the sea- on lifted the University of North Carolina to a 13-7 Atlan- ic Coast Conference victory ver Virginia Saturday and arned the Tar Heels a Gator Bowl invitation.

Following the game, the Tar Heels accepted an invitation to meet Michigan in the post-sea- son bowl Dec. 28 in Jackson- ville, Fla. Their last post-sea- son appearance was in 1977, when they lost to Nebraska 21-17 in the Liberty Bowl.

With Tangerine and Gater Bowl representatives looking on, the Tar Heels posted their second victory in five confer- ence starts and pushed their overall record to 6-3-1. Virginia fell to 2-3 in the conference and 6-4 overall.

Hayes' 47-yard field goal en- abled Carolina to emerge from a defense-dominated first half with a 3-0 lead, and the Tar Heels posted their remaining points within a brief span in the third period.

Kupec capped a 52-yard drive with an 8-yard toss to tight end Mike Chatham and 2:04 later, following a pass interception by Calvin Daniel, Hayes booted a 45-yarder.

Virginia, after failing to capi- talize on excellent scoring op- portunities late in the first half and midway through the fourth period, avoided a shutout when Todd Kirtley unloaded a 70-yard bomb to Greg Taylor with 2:57 remaining in the game.

After their touchdown, the Cavaliers recovered an on-side kick, but the officials ruled they had touched the ball be- fore it had traveled the re- quired 10 yards and gave pos- session to North Carolina.

The Tar Heels punted the ball to the Virginia with some 15 seconds showing and the game ended with a desperation Kir- tley pass being intercepted.

The game was more than 14 minutes old before the Tar Heels collected their first first down on a drive that set up Hayes' initial field goal early in the second period.

Until a bizarre exchange of turnovers during the final min- ute of the half, Virginia pene- trated no further than the UNC 47 against the Carolina defense.

Virginia first gave Carolina the ball at its 20 on a pass in- terception, got it back on the next play as Kelvin Anderson picked off a toss and yaced 58 yards to the Carolina 12. Then the Cavaliers gave the ball back to the Tar Heels on a first down fumble.

In the fourth period, the Cav- aliers got to the Carolina 7 on a fumble recover and two penal- ties. But the threat died as Kir- tley's fourth-down pass fell in- complete in the end zone.

With Cavalier Amos Law- rence running for 123 yards on 30 carries, the Tar Heels piled up a 263-228 yard advantage in total offense. Billy Johnson added 49 for the winners.

Kupec's TD toss, his only completion in five attempts, en- abled him to tie the ACC record for most touchdown passes in a season. Catham, the receiver, registered his seventh TD catch of the season, tying a Tar Heel record.

Virginia, which had gone into the game as the ACC's top scoring team, used three quar- terbacks in a vain effort to put together a sustained drive.

Gminski Leads Duke To Opening Cage Win

By DICK BRAUDE

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Big Mike Gminski scored 21 points, five in overtime, as Duke slipped past Kentucky 82-76 Saturday in the Basketball Hall of Fame Tip-Off Classic that marked the start of the college season.

The victory for Duke, ranked No. 3 in The Associated Press preseason poll, avenged the 1978 loss to Kentucky in the NCAA finals — the last time the two teams met.

Kentucky, ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll, got 22 points from skyscraper Sam Bowie, the 7-foot-1 freshman, but Duke outscored the Wildcats 10-4 in the five-minute overtime after Bob Bender's driving layup with three seconds left in regu- lation forced the extra session.

Kyle Macy's two free throws with 27 seconds left had given Kentucky a 72-70 lead as the Wildcats stormed back from a 42-35 halftime deficit.

But in overtime, Vince Taylor dropped in two free throws after LaVon Williams scored twice from the foul line for Kentucky. Gminski then con- verted on a three-point play that broke the deadlock, then scored another basket moments later.

Duke jumped out to leads of 11-2, 19-8 and 26-14 as Ken- tucky's sloppy ball handling and the Blue Devil's man-to- man defense stifled the Wild- cats early in the game.

Bowie's baskets cut the Duke lead to one point late in the first half, and he went on a scoring binge in the second as Kentucky outscored Duke 28-14.

But Eugene Banks, who scored 17 points before fouling out, sparked a comeback and Bender streaked in from the right side to tie the game.

The game to benefit the Bas- ketball Hall of Fame in Springfield drew a packed crowd of 8,939 to the Civic Cen- ter in the city that calls itself the birthplace of basketball. The game counts in both teams' regular season records but not in the maximum num- ber of contests allowed by the NCAA in a regular season.

South Carolina Nails Deacons, Both Nail Down Bowl Invitations

By ED ROWLAND
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina, showing a stal- wart defense to match its pile- driving running attack, won a bowl invitation for the first time in four years with a con- vincing, 35-14 college football victory over Wake Forest Sat- urday.

But the Deacons, who closed their season with an ex- ceptional 8-3 record, were in- vited to a bowl, too.

South Carolina, 7-3 going into its season-ending clash with cross-state rival Clemson next week, will play a to-be-selected opponent in the Hall of Fame Bowl at Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 29.

Wake Forest will go to the Tangerine Bowl Dec. 22 at Or- lando, Fla., against a team to be announced. Bowl officials said Missouri, Syracuse and Baylor were under considera- tion.

It'll be the first post-season appearance for the Deacons in 30 years and only their second ever. Wake Forest fell to Bay- lor, 20-7, in the Dixie Bowl in 1949; it won the inaugural Ga- tor Bowl in 1945 over South Carolina, 26-14.

The Gamecocks haven't been to a bowl since 1975, Coach Jim Carlen's first year in Columbia, when they went to the Tan- gerine Bowl and lost to Miami, Ohio, 20-7. Between the Tan- gerine appearance and the first Gator they played in the Peach and lost to Carlen's West Vir- ginia team, 14-3, in 1969.

Carlen insisted to sportswri- ters Saturday he isn't con- cerned about who the Game- cocks will play in Birmingham. "Clemson is my bowl game. Clemson is one of the top 10 teams in the country," he said.

The Tigers are 8-2 after beat- ing Notre Dame Saturday, 16-10.

Hall of Fame representative Robert W. Fennell called the Gamecocks "a darn good team, as evidenced by their record so far." He complemented their "outstanding players — George Rogers has to come into that category ... the No. 2 rusher in the country is something spe- cial.

"There's every likelihood they'll finish with an 8-3 record and 8-3 is something quite spe- cial," he added.

Deacon Coach John Mackovic was philosophical after the loss. He said, "A football team is measured over a full season. We're just so pleased that the Tangerine Bowl felt we would be a good representative."

He added, "It was a game South Carolina had to win and the Tangerine Bowl invited us despite the fact we lost." Mack- ovic also said he thinks the Deacons have had a good sea- son but "did not have a good game today."

South Carolina's possessive defense picked off three Wake Forest passes and pounced on a fumble in the third period to set up the offensive explosion that buried the Deacons. After the interceptions Rogers scored on a two-yard run, Spencer Clark went in from the 10 and Percy Reeves banged over from the two.

Earlier, Gamecock flanker Zion McKinney caught 12 and 27-yard scoring passes from quarterback Garry Harper. His first touchdown capped an 80-yard drive in the second quar- ter that was South Carolina's longest sustained thrust, while the second was begun after the Wake Forest fumble deep in Gamecock territory.

The Deacons got on the board just before halftime on an 18-yard pass from Jay Venuto to Mike Mullen. Venuto threw two yards to Wayne Baumgardner for a touchdown just before the game ended.

The triumph pushed inde- pendent South CArolina's record to 7-3, while Wake For- est of the Atlantic Coast Con- ference ended its season 8-3.

Representatives from the Peach, Hall of Fame and Tan- gerine bowls watched the game along with an overflow crowd of 56,000.

Clark, normally a substitute in the backfield for Rogers, played more than usual and outgained his teammate by five yards, picking up 109 yards on 17 carries. Rogers had 104 yards on 18 carries.

Venuto was harassed by a sticky South Carolina defense and managed to complete only 15 of 27 passes for 125 yards. Baumgardner was his favorite receiver, catching eight for 122 yards.

Wake Forest's James McDougald gained 122 yards on 20 carries.

The Gamecocks held a one- point lead at intermission but built their margin early in the third quarter after Deacon full- back Albert Kirby fumbled and South Carolina safety Pat Bow- en pounced on the ball at the Gamecock 26. Ten plays and 74 yards later, McKinney had his second touchdown.

Scott Wade intercepted a Ve- nuto throw on the Deacons' first play from scrimmage after that. It took the Game- cocks seven plays to go 23 yards to score, with Rogers go- ing into the end zone.

Robert Perlotte's interception came after Wake Forest had the ball for just five plays on its next possession, and Clark gained the 43 yards it took to score on three straight carries.

Buckeyes Win On Punt Block

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Ohio State's Jim Laughlin and Ben Lee blocked a fourth-quar- ter punt attempt by Michigan's Bryan Virgil and Buckeye Todd Bell scooped it up and ran it in for a touchown to give Ohio State an 18-15 victory and the Big Ten football championship Saturday.

Bell scooped the ball up at the Michigan 20-yard line and scampered untouched into the end zone with 11:21 left in the game.

Michigan, a four-point under- dog against the second-ranked Buckeyes, jumped to a surpris- ing 7-6 halftime lead when quarterback John Wangler con- nected with fleet freshman wide receiver Anthony Carter for a 59-yard touchdown pass play with 1:30 left in the second quarter.

The Buckeyes stayed in the game as Vlade Janakievski booted second-quarter field goals of 23 and 25 yards.

Then, on their first possession of the second half, the Buck- eyes marched 51 yards in 13 plays, capped by an 18-yard touchdown strike from soph- omore quarterback Art Schlich- ter to Chuck Hunter who beat Michigan defensive halfback Mike Jolly in the left corner of the end zone.

Michigan bounced right back, however, taking the ensuing kickoff and marching 80 yards in seven plays — the key being a 66-yard toss from Wangler to Carter. Wolverine fullback Roosevelt Smith concluded the drive by diving across from the 1-yard line, then plunging for the 2-point conversion.

The Buckeyes, who earned a trip to the Rose Bowl game with their championship, fin- ished the season 11-0 and 8-0 in the Big Ten. It marked Ohio State's first unbeaten, untied season since 1975, the last time the Buckeyes went to the Rose Bowl.

Michigan accepted a bid to appear in the Gator Bowl Dec. 28 against North Carolina. The 9 p.m., EST, game will be na- tionally televised from Jackson- ville, Fla., on ABC-TV.

North Carolina finished 6-3-1 overall and 2-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Wolve- rines finished 8-3 overall and 6-2 in the Big Ten.

Gentleman Farmer Perry Works, Waits On News Of His Trade

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — He's 21 victories short of 300, 10 months short of his 42nd birthday and very short on confidence in the front office of the San Diego Padres.

For that reason Gaylord Perry, gentleman farmer and the only man in the history of baseball to win the Cy Young Award in both major leagues, expects to be employed elsewhere soon. Where he knows not, but at this point he's more concerned with his off-season occupation, the presidency of the Gaylord Perry Peanut Co.

"We sold 100,000 pounds last year," Perry said recently as he checked the oil in a tractor on his 400-acre farm in flatlands of Eastern North Carolina.

"Ask him what he uses that tractor for," an employee implored of a writer.

"Well, the cows got out," admitted Perry. "I had to chase them around to get them back."

It's hardly the way a baseball fan pictures a man who has spent the last 18 years working before millions of people and striking out more batters than all but two who have ever called pitching a profession.

Meet Gaylord Perry, laidback country boy, first citizen of Williamston (population 6,600) future hall-of-famer and a baseball legend in his own right.

Perry is one of those fellows frequently accused of throwing the infamous spitball.

"I decoy a lot," he explains, his smile broadening. "But, if they ever legalize I think I'll throw it."

Perry became the most notorious of the spitballers after Don Drysdale retired. Both were subjected to much public scrutiny although Drysdale was paid for some of his.

Drysdale and Perry's favorite manager, Herman Franks, did a television commercial for Vitalis hair tonic several years ago. Franks, recreating his usual dugout prodecure, rushed out and accused Drysdale of using greasy kid stuff of the ball, whereupon the pitcher stormed off the field and returned with his Vitalis.

"Yeah, I had a problem with Vitalis," said Perry, removing his baseball cap to scratch one of three or four hairs remaining on the top of his head.

Perry's product, or so his detractors claim, is Vaseline. And he tried to capitalize on it once.

"I called up Vaseline and the guy who was head of the company got very upset. He told they me made it for babies' fannies and not baseballs. He hung up on me. And I thought it was a pretty good idea."

Perry talks freely about his differences with the Padres, a team he left last September for any number of reasons. He believes the front office has demonstrated an inability to build a winner despite all the money owner Ray Kroc spent on the team.

"Five," he said, holding aloft a massive right hand to indicate the number of positions at which he believes the team is inferior to its competition. "They need five new players."

Perry said he attempted to drive his teammates, to become a leader on the club.

"They told me that's what they wanted me to do and then they wouldn't back me up," Perry said of the front office.

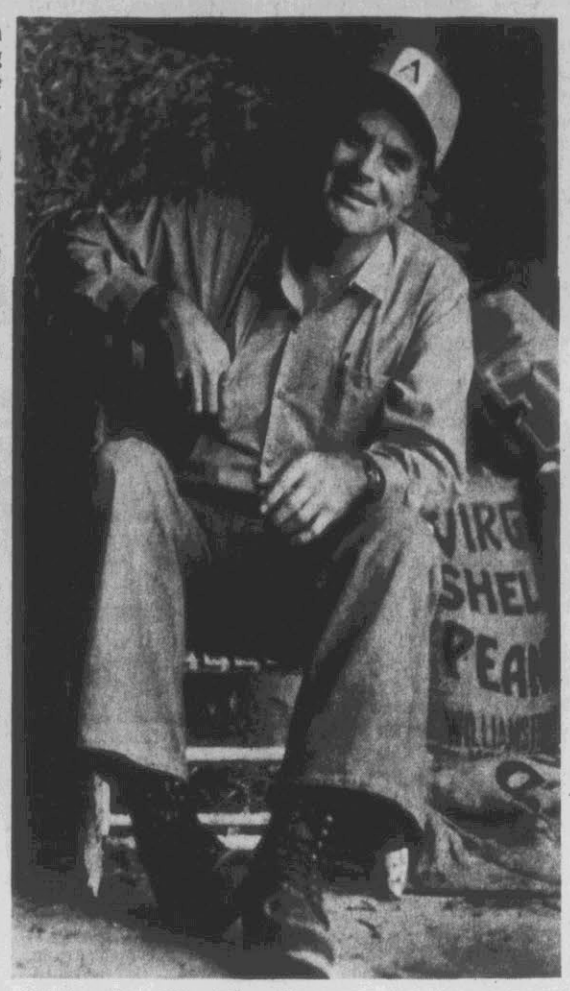

He has discussed his future with club President Ballard Smith and feels certain the differences will result in a trade. Although one year remains on his contract, Perry does not plan to pitch in San Diego next season.

Reports that he has asked to be traded specifically to Texas are not true, he maintains.

"A reporter asked me if I would like to go to Texas (where he once pitched) and I said I would, but I didn't say that was the only place I wanted to go. There are a lot of places.

"I would like to be traded to a place where I could be closer to home, where my family could come up and be with me," said Perry.

While he would not specify a location, Perry said Atlanta, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Texas, Cleveland and Philadelphia would fit nicely into his airline schedule.

Relaxing On The Farm

San Diego Padres' pitcher Gaylord Perry reaches for a toothpick while relaxing in the workshop on his 400-acre farm near Williamston. The only man to win the Cy Young Award in both major leagues, Perry spends the off-season enjoying the country life in Eastern North Carolina. (AP Laserphoto)

When asked specifically about Philadelphia, Perry indicated that the Phillies are badly in need of veteran pitching. But what could they offer the Padres in return?

"Well, what's a 41-year-old pitcher worth?" Perry asked.

Although he has appeared portly on the mound the last few seasons, the 6-foot-4 righthander has his weight down to 225 pounds and could be expected to come in even lighter after he begins a conditioning program.

"I've been working pretty hard around here," he said, looking out at the horses and hogs grazing on his acreage. "That's helped me a lot."

Perry's performance last season was more than adequate when one considers the lack of support he received from the Padre defense. He won 12 games to increase his lifetime total to 279.

Surprisingly, 300 victories will not mean as much to Perry as it has t9 others. He said the 3,141 strikeouts and being named the outstanding pitcher in both leagues means much more.

Clemson Stuns Irish

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Billy Lott's 26-yard touchdown run and three field goals by Obed Ariri enabled 14th-ranked Clemson to come off a 10-point deficit Saturday and roll to a 16-10 intersectional football victory over Notre Dame.

The triumph gave the Tigers, awaiting a bowl bid, an 8-2 record, while the Irish, who finish their season next week against Miami, Fla., in Tokyo, dropped to 6-4, marking the first time in 16 seasons that a Notre Dame team has suffered as many as four losses.

Totally bottled up in the first half as Notre Dame took a 10-0 lead on a 42-yard field goal by Chuck Male and a two-yard touchdown run by Vagas Ferguson, the Tigers took control in the third period as Ariri booted field goals of 20 and 41 yards and Lott scored his touchdown for a 13-10 lead.

Ariri also booted a 37-yard field goal midway in the fourth period before two desperation Irish rallies were short-circuited by a pair of interceptions by safety Terry Kinard.

Two of Clemson's third-quarter scores came after the Tigers recovered Irish fumbles. Ty Dickerson fumbled a punt early in the second half and Chuck Rose recovered. Five plays later, Ariri kicked his 20-yard field goal.

After Ariri cut the lead to 10-6 with his 41-yard field goal, Ferguson fumbled and Jeff Davis recovered on the Irish 40. Six plays later, Lott, getting a key block from tight end Mark Clifford, went around right end for the touchdown which put the Tigers ahead to stay.

Clemson came into the game ranked second nationally in scoring defense and sixth in total defense, but the Irish, led by Ferguson and quarterback Rusty Lisch, piled up 295 yards in the first half, two more than any other team had in an entire game against the Tigers this season.

Lisch completed six passes for 140 yards, including a 16-yarder to Tony Hunter which helped set up Male's field goal and a 3-0 lead at the quarter.

Ferguson's touchdown capped an 80-yard drive and came with 5:35 left in the half. Ferguson had 94 yards in 17 carries in the first half, but finished with 110 in 22 attempts as the Tigers completely shut down the Irish in the second half.

Still, it marked the sixth time this season Ferguson had rushed for 100 or more yards as he posted another record, breaking the Notre Dame mark of five 100-yard games by George Gipp in 1920.

The Irish managed only one first down in the third quarter as Clemson controlled the ball for 11-and-a-half minutes on the running of Lott, Marvin Sims, Lester Brown and Tracy Perry.

Notre Dame did not get another first down until Lisch hit Hunter with a 20-yard pass late in the fourth quarter. The two combined for another first down on a 23-yard pass before Kinard intercepted on the Clemson 3-yard line.

The Irish again gained possession and tried a double-reverse pass by flanker Pete Holohan, only to have Kinard intercept again.

Tech Bombs Help Sink Navy's Bowl Dreams

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech sophomore quarterback Mike Kelley teamed with split end Kris Kentera for three touchdown bombs in passing the Yellow Jackets to a 24-14 college football victory over Navy Saturday, knocking the Midshipmen from bowl consideration.

Kelley, who set three single season school passing records Saturday, connected with Kentera on a pair of 57-yard scoring pass plays and another of 40 yards. Kelley's tosses also set up a 32-yard field goal by Johnny Smith as the Yellow Jackets, 4-5-1, rolled to their third consecutive triumph.

Navy, 6-4, losing for the fourth consecutive time, scored on a 43-yard TD pass from quarterback Bob Powers to Curt Gainer and on a 1-yard run by Ed Meyers. Meyers ran for 183 yards in 26 attempts.

Representatives from the Tangerine, Hall of Fame and Peach Bowls were on hand to tender a possible bid to Navy if the Midshipmen had defeated Tech.

Kelley set season records for pass attempts, completions and yards. He completed 16 of 30 passes for 361 yards Saturday, giving him a season total of 134 completions in 267 attempts for 1,876 yards. Kelley also set a school total offense single game record with 376 yards, shattering the mark of 365 yards set by Eddie McAshan in 1972.

The previous passing records were also held by McAshan, who had 125 completions in 241 attempts for 1,756 yards in the 1972 season.

Kentera also set a school single season receiving yardage record by catching six passes for 203 yards.

Navy scored on its first possession of the game, going 79 yards in nine plays, capped by Powers' TD toss to Gainer. Meyers had 22 yards in four rushes during the drive.

Tech retaliated only 50 seconds later at the 4:51 mark when Kelley connected with Kentera on the first of their three long passes. This one was for 57 yards.

Kelley marched the Yellow Jackets 52 yards to Navy's 28 late in first period, hitting on two passes for 40 yards, but Smith's 45-yard field goal attempt was short.

Kelley's 40-yard touchdown pass to Kentera after only 1:29 of the second period put Tech ahead 14-7, but Navy tied it five minutes later when Meyers plunged over from the 1.

Gobblers Slip Past Keydets

By ESTES THOMPSON

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Steve Casey connected twice on long touchdown passes Saturday to Sidney Snell as he led Virginia Tech's Gobblers to a 27-20 season-ending football victory over Virginia Military's Keydets.

The triumph lifted Tech's record to 5-6. VMI wound up 6-4-1.

VMI sophomore tailback Floyd Allen opened the scoring with 9:38 left in the first quarter on a 59-yard run, but Snell scored on a 91-yard pass play from Casey 3:25 later to tie it.

Casey hit Snell again in the second quarter on a 60-yard pass play, Snell scoring after shaking loose from two defenders.

Allen scored on a 2-yard run early in the third quarter, capping a 10-play, 74-yard push that included a 43-yard pass from quarterback John Bangley to Allen.

Two series later, freshman Cyrus Lawrence scored on an 8-yard run for Tech, which recovered a fumbled VMI snap from center.

Tech freshman kicker Dennis Laury added field goals of 28 and 27 yards, while Craig Jones had 20 and 42-yarders for VMI, pushing his career total to 55, one short of the NCAA record.

Shealy Paces Alabama To Romp Over Miami, 30-0, For 10th Win

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Quarterback Steadman Shealy passed for 187 yards and a touchdown and Alabama's stingy defense intercepted five passes as the top-ranked Tide dominated Miami of Florida 30-0 in a nationally televised football game Saturday.

The victory was Alabama's 10th of the season and 19th in a row, the longest current string in the nation. It was the Tide's fifth shutout of the season, a year in which Bama has average giving up only four points a game.

The five interceptions, all by different backs, gave Alabama 25 for the season, breaking the record of 24 set by the 1952, 1966 and 1968 teams.

If Alabama can defeat Auburn two weeks from now, it will be the host team in the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl for the third straight year. However, a loss to Auburn would put Georgia in that bowl. Auburn defeated Georgia 33-13 Saturday.

Shealy teamed with Tim Travis on a 56-yard scoring pass play on Alabama's second possession, with Travis far behind all Hurricane defenders when the ball reached him.

Shealy's 187 yards came on nine completions in 15 attempts.

Alabama, which now has 48 consecutive victories at Tuscaloosa, got touchdowns on short runs by Major Ogilvie and James Haney and three field goals by Alan McElroy.

Keith Pugh, who missed several games with a shoulder injury, came back in style, catching seven passes for 126 Alabama yards.

Miami's only threat when Jim Joiner returned a kickoff 65 yards to the Alabama 35 in the first period, but Randy Scott's interception at the 26 halted that.

Terps In Rally, 28-7

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Sophomore Charlie Wysocki rushed for a career-high 222 yards and scored the tie-breaking touchdown from one yard out with 11:52 remaining as Maryland defeated Louisville 28-7 Saturday.

It was the third consecutive victory for the Terps, now 6-4, and kept alive their hopes for a seventh consecutive post-season bowl bid.

Wysocki set a Maryland school record with 43 carries and his replacement, Tim Whittie, scored two touchdowns in the last four minutes on runs of 17 and six yards.

Louisville took a 7-0 lead early in the second quarter on a 63-yard pass play from Stu Stram to Mark Wilson. The Terps tied it 7-7 with 1:13 remaining in the second period on a 13-yard pass from Mike Tice to Gary Ellis.

Maryland's Dale Castro, who shares the NCAA record with 16 consecutive field goals, missed three attempts from 49, 41 and 41 yards.

Rose Shocks Millbrook On Early Scores

RALEIGH — Striking with lightning-like quickness, Rose High School put 14 points on the scoreboard before Raleigh's Millbrook High School had time to react Friday night in the first round of the State 4-A Football Playoffs.

The Wildcats, ranked seventh in the final AP high school poll of the year, never regained their poise after that, falling before the fired-up Rampants, 32-13.

Although Millbrook was able to come back after giving up two scores in the first 46 seconds of play to cut the gap to 14-7, they didn't score again until the final second of the game, and by then, it was all over anyway.

Rose's offense, itching to get their hands on the ball didn't get a chance to go on the field until nearly eight minutes of the game had gone by. But thanks to the specialty team and the defense, they were staked to a fine advantage by then.

Mark Shank scored three times for the Rampants, on a game opening 82-yard kickoff return, a two yard plunge and another of one yard. Quarterback Kenny Barnes scored from a yard out, while William Frizzell returned an early fumble 34 yards for the other score.

Millbrook's scores came on a 13-yard run by quarterback Greg Sasser and on a 27-yard aerial from reserve quarterback Duke Emerson to Gary McConnell.

"There is no doubt that those first two scoring plays were the deciding factors," Rose coach Dave Bumgarner said. "They've got a very good offense, but having to overcome those 14 points was too much for them."

Sasser, listed as one of the top quarterbacks in the state, had little success in the first half throwing the ball, hitting just two of eight tries. "Our defense did a real good job in the secondary. It was probably one of our best nights against the pass," Bumgarner added.

Sasser was then injured on the final play of the half, when he was charged with intentional grounding of the ball, and saw no further action. "Not having him in the game hurt Millbrook. Their passing game was gone after that."

Oddly enough, Bumgarner didn't feel that Rose played one of its better games. "We were nervous, and we didn't play as well as we have in the past. I told the kids at the half that we really should have been down 7-6, but I think we played a good enough game. Really, both teams played well. But the second half was all our game," Bumgarner said.

Bumgarner also felt that both teams hit hard. "They hit hard, but I think we hit harder. We didn't lose anyone during the game, and they had several of their starters sidelined because of injuries. That was a big difference in the game, too, since they have so many who go both ways."

The first few minutes of the game were like getting caught in a whirlwind to the Wildcats. They hardly had settled their shoulder pads before they were down 14-0.

Shank gathered in the opening kickoff at his own 18, and cut up the middle of the field. The wedge opened a hole for him, and he shot through, broke a tackle, and was in the clear by the 35-yard line, outracing the rest of the Wildcats on the 82-yard romp. Ted King's kick made it 7-0 after just 13 seconds.

On the first play following the kickoff, Millbrook suffered a penalty for illegal procedure, and on the next, John Riggsbee took a pitchout around the right side.

He was hit by Frizzell, who pulled the ball loose. It bounced on the ground, and Frizzell scooped it up at the 34, racing untouched into the end zone. King again kicked, and only 46 seconds had ticked from the game clock.

Millbrook didn't bow, however, coming right back to march 72 yards for their first touchdown. Led by the running of McConnell and the play of Sasser, they moved across midfield in five plays. They got their first touchdown on a stutter-count, drawing Rose off-sides at the 34, then Sasser hit Richard Miles for 20 yards to the Rose 40. McConnell, carrying for the fourth time on the drive, picked up a first down at the Rose 25, and after a penalty against the 'Cats, Sasser hit Andy McRee on a screen pass for 15 yards and a first down at the 13. After one pass fell incomplete, Sasser rolled out to the left, then cut downfield, going the final yards to the end zone. Miles kicked the PAT to cut it to 14-7 with 6:23 left in the game.

After an exchange of punts, Rose got the ball back at its own 15 late in the period. Todd Tyson ripped off 15 yards, and three more plays got a first down at the 40. Shank took a quick pitch for nine more and Tyson for a first down at the Wildcat 47. After a loss, Shank broke through the middle on third and 11 to race 46 yards to the one. Barnes tried three times to sneak it in, finally making it on the final play. King's PAT try was blocked, and with 8:22 left in the half, Rose led, 20-7.

Rose lost out on another chance late in the period, following an interception, the first of three by Rose at the Millbrook 34. A penalty, followed by a sack of Barnes, took them out of effective field position.

Neither team was able to do anything in the opening minutes of the third period. But near the midpoint, Rose got the ball on an interception by Wallace Brown at its own 46. Calvin Whichard picked up a first down at the Millbrook 39 with a 14-yard run, and after two losses, Millbrook was hit with a personal foul, giving Rose a first down at the 29. Barnes then hit Johnson for 27 yards, down to the two, and Shank went over right tackle on the next play for the score. With 4:21 left, it was 26-7 after King's kick was again partially blocked.

Rose lost another chance on the first series of the final period. Taking over on its own 43, the Rampants got a first down at the 'Cat 38 after a 19-yard pass from Barnes to Tyrone Tucker when they fumbled it away.

But Brown's second interception gave it back to them at the midfield stripe. Two plays, however, resulted in penalties back to the Rose 30, and they were forced into a kicking situation. King was roughed on the boot, however, and the automatic first down gave Rose the ball back at their own 40. Two plays gained to the 44, and Barnes launched a bomb from there to Johnson.

Millbrook's Richard Wilder got position on Johnson, who reached over Wilder's shoulders to also grab the pass. The officials ruled it a simultaneous catch, and awarded the ball to Rose at the six, a 42-yard gain.

Alonza Taylor picked up five yards on first down, and Shank popped through the middle for the final yard, running it to 32-7 with 4:46 left in the game. A two-point try was stopped short.

With the reserve defense in the game, Rose allowed Millbrook to gain to the 36 of the Rampants before a fumble turned it over. But Rose coughed it up a play later, at its own 29.

Three plays later, from the 27, Emerson hit McConnell down the left sidelines for the score, with only one second showing on the clock, making the final score, 32-13.

Rose, now 9-2, will be at home this Friday night, playing host to Terry Sanford, a 21-0 winner over Raleigh Sanderson in the first round. Millbrook, which finished 9-2, oddly enough, beat both Sanford and Sanderson during the regular season.

Arkansas Rolls To Win Over A&M, 22-10

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Arkansas' Kevin Scanlon picked Texas A&M apart with his passing and Darryl Bowles rushed over 100 yards and scored on runs of 22 and 8 yards as the eighth-ranked Hogs defeated the Aggies 22-10 Saturday and then stood by to consider bowl invitations.

The victory boosted the Razorbacks to a 9-1 season record and kept them on pace for a possible trip to the Cotton Bowl as the Southwest Conference representative with a 6-1 record.

Sugar Bowl officials also watched the game and were expected to offer the Razorbacks a conditional bid to their bowl if Arkansas failed to make the Cotton Bowl.

Scanlon, the SWC's leading percentage passer, ripped up the Aggie defense starting in the second quarter when the Hogs took a 10-0 lead on a 45-yard field goal by Ish Ordonez and a 22-yard run by Bowles.

The Aggies, trying to play the role of spoiler in the SWC, struck back in the third quarter for their only scoring drive that ended with David Hardy's 27-yard field goal.

the quarter with the Bucs on the NTS 43.

Sutton took an option toss for 14 yards, and Green added 15 more. From the 14, three plays put it at the two, and Green took it in from there around right end. Lamm's kick made it 14-13 with 12:27 left.

North Texas drove once more, from its own 20 down to the ECU 31 before a fumble turned it over. But East Carolina gave it right back on the next play, at the 16. On fourth and one from the seven, a 24-yard field goal was wide by Smith.

East Carolina then raced 80 yards in two plays for the score that put the iceing on the cake. Sutton, from the 20, burst up the middle for 50 yards to the NTS 30. After a five-yard penalty, Sutton again got the call, on a quick pitch to the right, and he cut back to the left to outrace the defense for the final 35 yards. With 5:01 left in the half, the Pirates had a 21-13 lead.

George Crump came up with a key game-saving play right after the kickoff. Bernard Jackson got a pitch out from the nine-yard line and broke into the clear around the right side. He cut back across the field, and raced all the way to the Pirate four before Crump finally ran him down. The defense firmed up then, forcing Smith to kick a 28-yard field goal. That made it 21-16 with 3:01 left.

Five plays later, the Pirates were in the end zone once more, running the lead to 28-16. From the 37, the Bucs got it all from Collins. He carried for 6, 19, 6, 5 and the final one after Marvin Cobb's 56-yard kickoff return had put the Bucs in excellent field position.

East Carolina then scored its first two possessions of the second half. Their first series was an 87-yard drive that took 13 plays and ran 5:23 off the clock. Chief plays included 11-yard runs by Green and Harrell, a 16-yard Green pass to Washington, and the final five yard run by Collins. Lamm's kick made it 35-16 with 9:37 left.

The Pirates got it back at their own 34, following a punt that nearly was turned over. Harrell muffed the catch, but was ruled down there. On the first play, Green loosed the bomb to Washington, and the 66-yard aerial play found him wide open for the score. That made it 42-16 with 7:53 left in the quarter.

After stopping North Texas on fourth at one at the ECU 46, the Pirates took over one play into the final period. Green passed to Gerald Sykes for a first down at the NTS 41, and Sutton added four more to the 37. On the next play, Green rolled out to pass, was rushed, got away, and lofted the ball on the run to Washington in the end zone with 13:18 to play.

Neither team offered a scoring threat after that.

The offensive performance put on by both teams may have set some sort of ECU record. While the Pirates were piling up their 600 yards, the Mean Green was rolling up 429 of its own, a total of 1,029 yards—quite a show for the 20,000-plus fans gathered.

The victory insured the Pirates of their sixth straight winning season, running their record to 6-3-1. North Texas closed out with a 5-6 record.

Tankers Split With Monarchs

NORFOLK, Va. — East Carolina's swimming teams split a pair of dual meets at Old Dominion Friday with the men winning over the Monarchs, 68-45, and the women's team falling, 72-59, in the openers for the Pirates.

Bill Fehling and Jack Clowar, back in the water for the first time this year after a shoulder injury, were double winners, while Doug Nieman and Scott Ross each came away with two wins for the Pirates.

Kelly Hopkins set a new school record in his swim in the 200-yard breaststroke gaining second place in 2:13.39.

Tammy Putnam swam to three wins for the Pirate women while Beth Reen added two victories. Putnam's wins, in the 100 backstroke, 200 individual medley and 200 breaststroke, all brought new school records and bettered the qualifying standard for the national AIAW Division II meet to be held at season's end.

Ahoskie Field Goal Nips Jaguars

Looking For Room

Ahoskie's James Whitaker (22), behind the block of Rodney Sessoms (65), moves ahead for some tough yardage against the Jaguars. Whitaker scored the Cougar's first touchdown as Ahoskie won, 17-14. FARMVILLE — One football season ended here Friday night in tears; another received at least a week's reprieve amid cheers.

The Ahoskie Cougars came from behind on a 31-yard field goal with less than four minutes left to nip previously unbeaten Farmville Central, 17-14, Friday night in the first round of the state high school football playoffs.

The victory puts Ahoskie, 10-1, in the second round of the playoffs against Havelock, a 38-13 winner over Clinton Friday night.

The Jaguars, ranked No. 1 in the state by the AP nearly all season, end the year with a 10-1 record.

With the score tied 14-14 midway through the final period, the Cougars recovered a Donald Reid fumble on the Jaguar 18 to set up their winning score.

Three plays — one of which was a fumble recovered by Ahoskie — moved the ball to the 14. Enter Greg Watford.

This time, however, Watford drilled the football through the middle of the uprights from 31 yards out and, for the first time in this hard-fought contest, the Cougars led, 17-14, with 3:41 remaining.

The Jaguars took the ensuing kickoff and quickly moved to the Ahoskie 44 on a 16-yard pass from quarterback Eugene Joyner to wide receiver Mike Horne. But two sacks, sandwiched around an incompletion, ended the threat, and left the Jaguars stunned as the clock ticked down to the final gun.

For minutes after the loss many of the Jaguars lay prone on the ground weeping or on one knee looking vacantly in the distance.

"They have a fine football team," Jaguar coach Gene Brewer said after herding some of his tearful players into the team bus. "They're a physical football team. I don't think they hit as hard as we did, but there were some licks thrown out there by both sides.

"They were better than we thought they'd be," Brewer added. "It was hard to get an idea of how physical they were from the films we saw."

Going into the game, the Jaguars' main concern was the Cougars' running attack, featuring Greg Watford and Wayne Ellis. The Jaguar defense held both to under 50 yards, but could not stop the passing of quarterback Louis Britt.

Britt completed 10 of 12 passses for 128 yards.

"I didn't think they'd be able to throw the ball like they did," said Brewer, whose Farmville team was in the playoffs for the fourth straight season. "They completed passes, but they didn't throw them all that well, we just didn't play good pass defense."

Following Ahoskie's initial drive, which ended on with a punt at the Farmville 48, the Jaguars marched 65 yards in five plays to take the lead.

On the Jaguar's first play from scrimmage, Joyner hit Donald Reid swinging out of the backfield. Reid, who rushd for 84-yards on 18 carries, churned out 42 yards, to the Cougar 23. Three plays later, Reid bullied his way up the middle from three yards out to give the Jaguars the lead with 5:07 left in the first quarter.

Midway through the second quarter, the Cougars got off only a 16-yard punt to the Ahoskie 33. Donald Reid burst up the middle for nine, to the 24, and the Jaguars appeared headed for another score. But the Cougars picked off a Joyner pass on the next play, ending the threat with four minutes left in the half.

Taking over from their own 25, the Cougars moved down the field in nine plays to knot the score at 7-7 with just 50 seconds remaining until the break.

James Whitaker's 11-yard dash up the middle capped the drive, spearheaded by Britt, who hit three-of-three for 41 yards.

The Jaguars took the ensuing kickoff and moved to the Ahoskie 36, where, with 20 seconds left, Joyner hit Mike Baker, who slipped a tackler and raced to the Cougar 11.

The completion was called back, however, because of offensive pass interference and the half ended 7-7.

Farmville, which was able to control the ball for only 18 plays in the first half while Ahoskie ran off 34 plays, came out in the second half on fire, despite the near-freezing temperatures.

With Donald Reid and David Dunn leading the way, Farmville drove to the Ahoskie 30. From there, Reid split the middle of the Cougars' defense for 22 yards, but fumbled when lunging for an extra yard.

"That hurt us, but it didn't lose the game for us," Brewer said afterwards.

Moments later, the Jaguars got the ball back when Baker intercepted his first of two passes and returned it 32 yards, to the Ahoskie nine.

Three plays got Farmville into the end zone, with David Dunn going in from the five. The Jaguars led, 14-7, with 5:18 left.

Stung by the sudden score, Ahoskie roared back. From its 29, Ahoskie moved to the Farmville 41, where Bobby Futrell — on his only carry of the night — slid outside and raced 41 yards for the tying tally with 1:50 remaining in the third period.

Interceptions by both teams early in the final period and a punt by Farmville gave the Cougars the ball on their 40 with just over seven minutes left.

Ahoskie moved to the Farmville nine, on an 18-yard pass from Britt to Watford and a 13-yard gain by Whitaker, before being stopped. Watford then came in and attempted his 21-yard field goal, which was wide.

Moments later, however, Watford redeemed himself when he booted what proved to be the winning field goal from 31 yards out.

"Our defense had to play a lot in the second half," Brewer said. "Our offense just wasn't able to control the ball like we would have wanted."

The Jaguars ran 45 offensive plays compared to Ahoskie's 65. Part of the reason for the 20-play difference was Farmville mistakes.

Farmville turned the ball over four times — on two interceptions and two fumbles — and also had a costly 15-yard penalty near the end of the half.

"I don't know what it was," Brewer said when asked about the amount of mistakes made by the Jaguars. "We just made some mistakes that hurt us.

"They got the breaks and we never seemed to be able to get them when we needed them. They must have had four or five fumbles and every one of them bounced right back to their man," he said.

Ahoskie fumbled five times and recovered every one. The Cougars also had two passes intercepted.

Perez Gets His Wish, Moves To Boston Club

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran slugger Tony Perez got his wish to move to the American League. He agreed to terms for a guaranteed three-year contract with the Boston Red Sox.

"I'm very happy, I think they can use me," Perez said Friday in a telephone interview from his home in Puerto Rico.

No information on the amount of the contract was announced, but it is estimated to be worth $1.1 million.

Perez, whose 1975 World Series homer still haunts Boston, said he was not surprised when he was picked by the Red Sox in the free agent re-entry draft two weeks ago.

"When they lost Bob Watson, I knew they needed a right-handed hitting first baseman," said Perez, who has played for the Cincinnati Reds and Montreal Expos. "I've watched the Red Sox a lot on television and hoped to be able to join them.

"I know I'm 37, but I feel I have a lot of baseball left, at least three more years. I feel the same today as I felt five years ago."

Perez discounted a mediocre 1979 season while with the Expos. He was unhappy at frequent rest periods in which Rusty Staub played first for Montreal.

"I like to play every day as much as possible. I think I'll get 600 at-bats and do a lot better with the Red Sox," he said. "Tony Perez can still hit. You can bet on that."

Perez played three years for Montreal. Now he's viewed as a replacement for Watson, a right-handed slugger who signed as a free agent with the New York Yankees.

Perez' agent, Reuven Katz of Cincinnati, represents only two other baseball players: Pete Rose and Johnny Bench. "We only talked dollars with the Red Sox," said Katz. "They were interested in Tony and he liked the idea of going there."

Katz said Perez was drafted by eight teams, but negotiations did not start until the Yankees signed Watson.

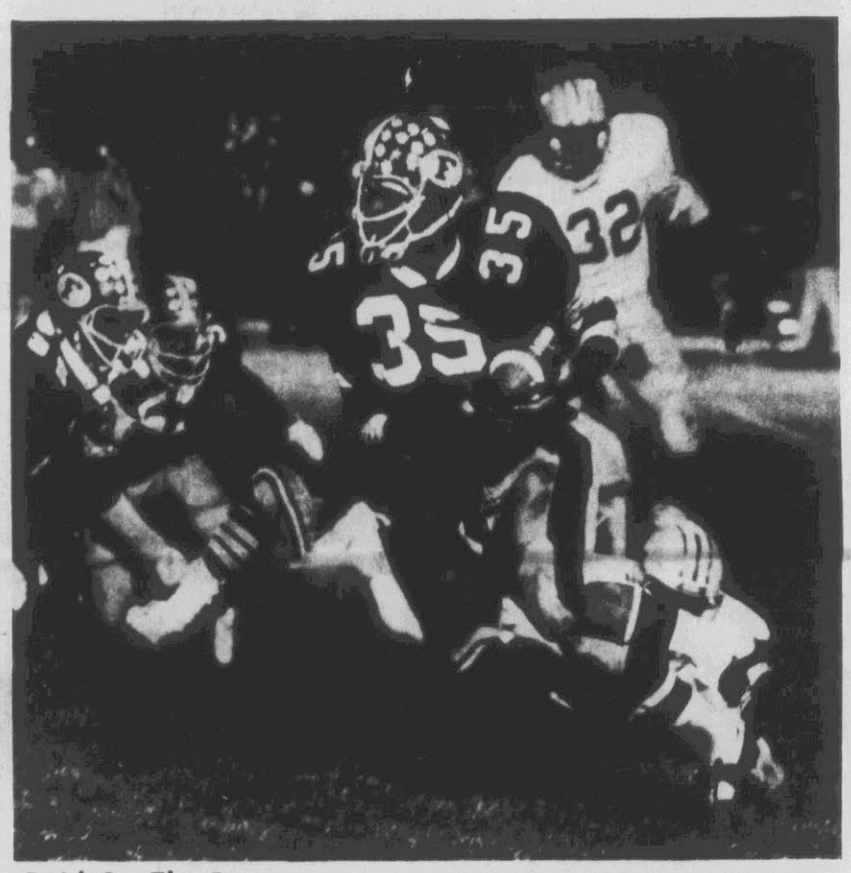

Perez played 12 seasons with the Reds and helped Cincinnati to a seven-game victory over Boston in the 1975 World Series. In the final game, he sparked a comeback by blasting Bill Lee's sixth-inning blooper pitch far into the night.

Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan made the announcement of Perez' signing, then left for New York to meet with free agent right-handed relief pitcher Skip Lockwood and his agent, Dick Moss.

Lockwood, a native of Norwood, Mass., pitched for the New York Mets last season but arm trouble idled him the second half of the season.

Perez' lifetime batting average is .283 with 2,238 hits, 323 home runs and 1,357 RBI. For the Expos last year, he slumped to .270 in 132 games with 13 homers and 73 RBI.

He will be used as both a first baseman and designated hitter, as was Watson, whose departure left the Red Sox only with 40-year-old Carl Yastrzemski as a potential first baseman.

Reid On The Run

Farmville Central's Donald Reid (35) busts loose against Ahoskie in playoff action Friday night. The Jaguars, despite Reid's 84 yards, suffered their first loss of the year, 17-14, to the Cougars. The loss knocked Farmville, 10-19, out of the 3-A high school football playoffs. (Reflector photo by Macon Dail)

Princeton's Atkinson Rips Jamesville

Two On One
San Antonio Spurs' Mike Gale tries to pass the ball as he is double-teamed by Sixers' Julius Erving, left, and Henry Bibby in the first half of Friday night's NBA game in Philadelphia. The Spurs won, 106-105. (AP Laserphoto)

Reflector Sports Writer

PRINCETON—Jamesville head coach Jerry Godley knew exactly who to blame for his team's loss in the first round of the state 1-A playoffs held here Friday night.

After the game, Godley made it a point to shake his hand.

The man single-handedly responsible for ending the visiting Bullets' season was Princeton junior halfback Mike Atkinson, who rushed for 280 yards in 46 carries and scored all four of the Bulldogs' touchdowns as the host unit advanced in the playoffs, 28-6.

"What can I say?" Godley questioned, "He (Atkinson) is one of the best runners in the state. If you can stop him, you can stop Princeton."

Atkinson split up his scoring jaunts, running a pair in from close range and adding a couple more in the second half on dashes of 18 and 65 yards. He also added a conversion run after his first score.

Princeton mentor Harvey Brooks praised Jamesville for keeping the game as close as it was. "They are a good club. They made us get off the ball, being as big as they are. We made some mistakes that hurt us and we still seemed to play in spurts," added Brooks.

Playing without regular quarterback Trent Ange, who was suffering from mononucleosis and was restricted from seeing action by a doctor's order, the red and grey clad Bullets were limited to 132 total yards and a mere 48 on the ground. The crux of the Jamesville offense was a 77-yard-pass-and-score play midway the second quarter, ending Princeton's streak of shutouts at three games.

Tobacco Belt representative Jamesville won the toss and, after picking up a first down on a 19-yard pass from Keith Modlin to Frankie Hardison, turned the ball over on downs at the Princeton 27. From there, Atkinson began his show.

In a 15-play drive, in which Atkinson carried the ball 13 times, the blue and yellow Bulldogs eased across the Jamesville goal line. Running from the old single wing setup, in which the center hikes the ball directly to the back, Atkinson bulled over from the one with 2:42 remaining in the quarter. He added the point after conversion, giving the 'Dogs the 8-0 lead.

Jamesville, who ran only 30 offensive plays the entire game, turned the ball over to the Bulldogs two plays later. Modlin's pass was intercepted by Princeton at the home team's 43.

Handling the ball on seven of the 10 plays, Atkinson scored his second touchdown, this one from five yards out, three minutes into the second period. Barry Rose's PAT run was stopped by Jamesville.

On the Bullets' first possession of the second quarter, quarterback Modlin, frustrated at the lack of success of running plays, dropped back to pass on second down. After scrambling a little, he found Hardison along the left sideline for what looked like enough for the first down. Hardison grabbed the ball among a host of Princeton defenders and broke down the sideline for 77 yards and the Jamesville score. Ange's fake kick and pass for the conversion fell in and out of the hands of his receiver, ending the Jamesville scoring.

The third quarter saw Jamesville run but five offensive plays compared to 18 by Princeton. Neither team mounted a scoring drive in this quarter, but on the first play of the final period, Atkinson again found the time.

Climaxing a 10-play drive, Atkinson cut right, then left for an 18-yard scoring dash, seven seconds, into the fourth quarter. His conversion run failed, giving his team the 20-6 lead

The offensive unit of the visitors were on the field for 10 plays in the fourth period, but could not drive past the Princeton 40-yard line.

With 1:11 remaining in the game, Atkinson ended his act. Gaining control on his own 24 following a pass interception, Atkinson took the ball at his 35 and ran around left end for a 65-yard tallying run. It was touchdown number 38 for the junior. This time Rose made good on his conversion run, ending the score at 28-6.

And it was all Atkinson's fault.

Utah Jazz Latest To See The Change In Boston Celtics' Five

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Tom Nissalke, coach of the Utah Jazz, is the latest to notice the change in the Boston Celtics.

"It's a brand new team," said Nissalke after the Celtics beat his Jazz 113-97 Friday night. He wasn't referring only to Celtics rookie Larry Bird, free agent M.L. Carr and Coach Bill Fitch. He also meant veterans Dave Cowens and Nate "Tiny" Archibald.

"Without having to coach, a job in which he had no experience, Cowens is a different player, going all out," said Nissalke. "And Tiny's different too. He's playing with confidence, something he didn't do last year."

The Celtics raised their record to 12-3 — they were 3-12 at this point last season — before a capacity crowd of 15,320, the Celtics' fifth home sellout. They are 7-0 at Boston Garden.

Boston broke the game open with an 18-6 surge midway through the third period that gave them a 78-64 lead. Cedric Maxwell scored 15 of his 27 points in the decisive third period, in which the Celtics outscored the Jazz 37-19.

In other National Basketball Association games, the Phoenix Suns edged the Portland Trail Blazers 98-97, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Denver Nuggets 135-128 in overtime, the Washington Bullets nipped the New Jersey Nets 92-91, the San Antonio Spurs trimmed the Philadelphia 76ers 106-105, the Houston Rockets defeated the Neww York Knicks 133-130, the Kansas City Kings beat the Chicago Bulls 103-97, the Seattle SuperSonics topped the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-100 and the San Diego Clippers beat the Indiana Pacers 105-97.

Suns 98, Blazers 97

Walter Davis' jumper with 10 seconds to play capped a 34-point performance and provided the winning margin for Phoenix. Portland had gone ahead 97-96 when T.R. Dunn hit an off-balance 15-footer with 19 seconds left.

Dunn missed a 20-footer following Davis' basket, the Trail Blazers were called for a loose-ball foul on the rebound and Phoenix was able to run out the clock.

Lakers 135, Nuggets 128

Norm Nixon and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar each scored six points in the five-minute extra period as Los Angeles posted its second overtime triumph over Denver in eight days. Dan Issel had 37 points for the Nuggets but failed to score in overtime.

Bullets 92, Nets 91

Washington rallied from a 20-point deficit to beat the Nets on Wes Unseld's seven-foot running hook shot with two seconds to play. Roger Phegley led the Bullets with 20 points, 13 of them in the final quarter, when the entire New Jersey team could manage just 12 points.

Spurs 106, 76ers 105

Larry Kenon scored a season-high 33 points and George Gervin added 30, including two free throws with 22 seconds remaining, as the Spurs won their fourth in a row. The 76ers' Bobby Jones, whose foul sent Gervin to the line, sank a jumper at game's end but the officials ruled it came after the buzzer.

Rockets 133, Knicks 130

Moses Malone scored 37 points as the Rockets built a 14-point lead early in the final period, then held off a rally that saw New York pull within two points. Houston won its sixth in a row and New York suffered its fifth straight loss despite 38 points by Ray Williams.

Kings 103, Bulls 97

Scott Wedman sank two baskets in the final 1:49 as Kansas City beat Chicago for the ninth straight time. It was Chicago's fourth consecutive loss and 10th in the last 11 starts. Wedman, Bill Robinzine and Otis Birdsong scored 21 points apiece for the Kings.

Sonics 108, Cavs 100

Guards Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson keyed a fourth-quarter rally that carried Seattle over Cleveland. In the last six minutes, Williams hit five free throws and Johnson added a pair of breakaway baskets and two free throws as Seattle overcame a 92-88 deficit.

Clippers 105, Pacers 97

Freeman Williams, filling in for the injured Lloyd Free, scored 14 of his career-high 35 points in the second quarter as San Diego snapped a three-game losing streak.

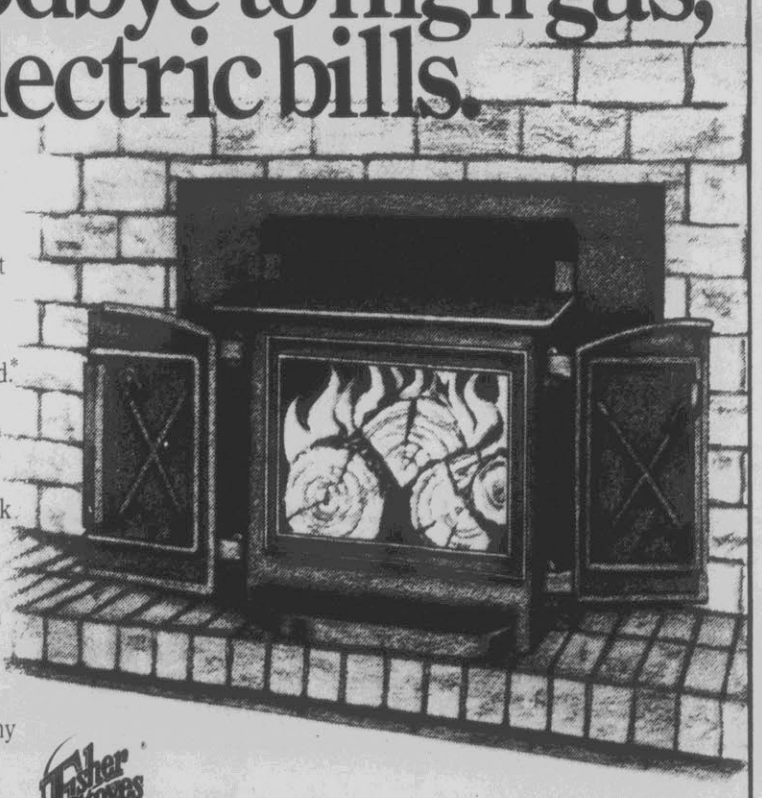

SURPRISING SCORE

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Call it an unexpected dividend: Ted McKnight of the Kansas City Chiefs ran 70 yards for a touchdown against the Baltimore Colts in the opening game of the season. All he was trying to do was make the one yard needed for a first down.

Bears Capture Third Cage Win

CAPE HATTERAS — Bear Grass High School made the long haul out to Cape Hatteras Friday night and made it all worthwhile by coming back with a pair of basketball victories.

The varsity boys downed the Hurricanes, 67-39, for their third straight win. The Lady Bears took a 50-22 win, their second in three starts.

In the girls' game, Bear Grass doubled the Hatteras output, 10-5, and eased out to a 19-13 halftime lead. They increased that with a 16-2 edge in the third period, 35-15, and finished their foes off with a 15-7 final quarter margin.

Joette Rogers led the way with 23 points, while Paula Stokes had 11 and Paula Williams added 10. Patricia Byers led Hatteras with 12.

The Bears built up a 12-9 margin in the first period, then, blitzed the Hurricanes, 25-10, in the second frame. That left the Bears up, 37-19, at intermission.

They came back to stretch that to 53-30, in the third, and finished up with a 14-9 margin in the last period.

Watson Rogers and William Roberson each had 15 points to lead the Bears, while Dail Jennette led Cape Hatteras with 11.

Surprise! NFC Favored In Four

By The Associated Press

Interconference play resumes today in the National Football League and — surprise, surprise! — the National Conference goes into one of the four games as the favorite.

While Denver is picked to pick off San Francisco, the Bills are expected to Buffalo the Green Bay Packers and Seattle is the favorite to nip New Orleans, the NFC's Chicago Bears are rated roughly a field-goal favorite over the American Conference's New York Jets.

Today's other games are Pittsburgh at San Diego, Baltimore at New England, Dallas at Washington, Miami at Cleveland, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Detroit at Minnesota, Cincinnati at Houston and the New York Giants at Tampa Bay. Monday night's game is Atlanta at Los Angeles.

Earlier this season, "stop Walter Payton and you stop Chicago" was the accepted tactic when playing the Bears. With their strong reliance on Payton's ground-gobbling (he leads the league in rushing with 1,154 yards) in a generally conservative offense during the first half of the season, Chicago was only 3-5.

Then Coach Neill Armstrong, who had yanked Mike Phipps from his starting quarterback role early in the season but had been equally unsuccessful with Vince Evans and Bob Avellini, returned to Phipps and told him, "throw."

"We just had to start throwing more on first down, any down, just to change our bad habit of running the ball too much," said Phipps. "You can't take one person and use him extensively as your offense. Even the worst defense can concentrate on stopping you."

"It gets to the point where you say, 'Which one do we stop, Payton or Phipps?'" said Coach Walt Michaels, whose Jets, 5-6, are trying to rebound from last Sunday's dish-eartening 14-12 loss to the Bills. "It would make it a whole lot easier if Phipps doesn't come in with a hot hand. With Phipps they look like a different team."

They are.

Since the season's halfway point, both Payton and the Bears have been unstoppable. Since that last-minute 30-27 loss to Minnesota, when Phipps was reinserted at quarterback just after halftime, the Bears have chalked up victories over San Francisco (28-27), Detroit (35-7) and, last weekend, Los Angeles (27-23), to raise their record to 6-5 and remain entrenched in the playoff picture. They trail first-place Tampa Bay by two games in the NFC Central Division, but they're still strong contenders for a conference wild-card berth.

The Bears' turnaround, Phipps said, could be traced to "some very key things — a change in attitude toward what our offense can do now as opposed to what it was doing. We believe now we're all playing good football...I don't think anybody doubts we can win the next five games."

If the AFC wins any of Sunday's four interconference games, it will clinch the season series against the NFC for the sixth straight season. It takes an 26-10 record into the weekend.

The Broncos are looking for their first victory ever over San Francisco — but their two losses occurred before they became a dominant team, 19-14 in 1970 and 36-34 three years later. Now Denver is trying to shake loose of San Diego (which is an underdog to the Pittsburgh juggernaut) and grab sole possession of first place in the AFC West.

Green Bay is making its first visit ever to Buffalo and will be playing the Bills for only the second time, having beaten them 27-7 five years ago. Seattle and New Orleans are also playing their second game ever. The Saints bombed the Seahawks 51-27 three years ago.

The Steelers venture into San Diego having allowed just 20 points over the past four games — but they're going up against Dan Fouts, who earlier this year strung together four 300-yard passing games. Not that Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw is any slouch. He leads the NFL in TD passes with 21.

Cale On The Poll, Finally

By TOM HARRIGAN
AP Sports Writer

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Cale Yarborough stifled his rebel yell for 40 minutes but finally sounded a long "Yah hoo!" when the other Grand National stock car drivers couldn't beat his average speed of 154.902 miles per hour in qualifying for Sunday's Los Angeles Times 500.

Yarborough said he gave himself a "hairy ride" Friday while other drivers gave the tricky turns of Ontario Motor Speedway more respect. But Yarborough had much more at stake than the $1,000 bonus for winning the pole position.

He needed to be first in qualifying for the last race of the 30-event NASCAR year to gain entry as defending champion in the February $150,000 Busch Pole Clash at Daytona, Fla. He won seven pole positions in 1978 but this was his only one of 1979.

"I gave it my best shot," said Yarborough, of Timmonsville, S.C., "I almost tagged the wall down there on turn one."

Although Friday belonged to Yarborough and his 1977 Oldsmobile, the major share of interest in Sunday's $188,000 race will belong to either Darrell Waltrip and Richard Petty — running wheel to wheel in their 1977 Chevrolets in a duel for the 1979 driving title.

Waltrip, 32, of Franklin, Tenn., has won seven races and has 4,672 NASCAR points in search of his first championship, while six-time driving champion Petty has won five races and is just two points behind with 4,670.

The 42-year-old Petty, from Randleman, N.C., was fifth in qualifying as 18 cars made it into the grid for Sunday's race. That gave him an early advantage over Waltrip, who experienced engine trouble that slowed him to the 10th best speed over Ontario's 2½ mile oval.

The rest of the 36-car field will be completed on the basis of qualifying runs today at Ontario. Two of those safely in Sunday's field, brothers Bobby Allison as third qualifier and Donnie Allison in ninth, also plan to race Saturday in the Warner Hodgdon 200 for Grand American sports cars.

Waltrip had a huge lead in points before a slump in the last eight NASCAR races. He was bitterly disappointed after his run with a sour engine Friday and refused to talk to reporters.

Buddy Parrott, crew chief for Waltrip's car, said the motor apparently got too hot in a Thursday practice run in warm weather. But Parrott said he wasn't worried about his driver starting 10th.

"Every time we've been here (Ontario) we've started back in the pack," said Parrott. "But in eight laps we were up front. Darrell handles the corners with real finesse. He excels at a race track like this where you've got to be a driver."

Also on the front row with Yarborough Sunday will be Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C. Parsons was the last of the top drivers to qualify in his 1977 Chevrolet, and gave Yarborough a scare with a run at 153.759 mph.

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — Qualifiers Friday for Sunday's $180,000 Los Angeles Times 500 NASCAR race at the 2.5-mile Ontario Motor Speedway (remainder of the 36-car field will be filled Saturday):

1. Cale Yarborough, Timmonsville, S.C., 1977 Oldsmobile, 154.902 mph.
2. Benny Parsons, Ellerbe, N.C., 1977 Chevrolet, 153.759 mph.
3. Bobby Allison, Hueytown, Ala., 1979 Ford, 153.709 mph.
4. Buddy Baker, Charlotte, N.C., 1977 Oldsmobile, 153.688 mph.
5. Richard Petty, Randleman, N.C., 1977 Chevrolet, 153.580 mph.
6. Dale Earnhardt, Charlotte, N.C., 1977 Chevrolet, 153.426 mph.
7. Neil Bonnett, Hueytown, Ala., 1976 Mercury, 153.371 mph.
8. Ricky Rudd, Chesapeake, Va., 1976 Mercury, 153.285 mph.
9. Donnie Allison, Hueytown, Ala., 1977 Chevrolet, 151.847.
10. Darrell Waltrip, Franklin, Tenn., 1977 Chevrolet, 151.247 mph.
11. Joe Millikan, Randleman, N.C., 1978 Chevrolet, 150.804 mph.

18. Ronnie Thomas, Christianburg, Va., 1977 Chevrolet, 149.601 mph.

QB-TO-QB PASS

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers think they had a National Football League first in a 38-7 loss to Pittsburgh early in the 1979 season. Their only touchdown came on a pass from their second-string quarterback, Gifford Nielsen, to their third-string signal-caller, Guido Merkens.

Although Merkens is listed as Houston's No. 3 quarterback in the depth chart, he is also a wide receiver and a kick returner

Kush Is Taking The Blame

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Frank Kush, ousted Arizona State football coach, says many people — including himself — must accept responsibility for a scholastic scandal that led to the forfeiture of the university's season victories.

"I feel sorry that the entire incident has happened because it hasn't done anybody any good," Kush said in an interview Friday night with KPNX-TV of Phoenix. "It degrades the entire program, not only from the point of the football progam, but the entire athletic program, as well as the institution."

On Thursday, the university declared eight Sun Devil players academically ineligible for the remainder of the season, and the Pacific 10 Conference ruled the school must forfeit its league victories over Washington, Washington State and Oregon State.

The action stemmed from an extension course offered in Gardena, Calif., last summer by Rocky Mountain College of Billings, Mont. The eight players had claimed credit for the course, but the university said the eight have admitted that they had not met any of the course's requirements.

The forfeits revised Arizona State's league record from 3-3 to 0-6.

On Friday, Dick Mullins, Arizona State's sports information director, said the school was offering to forfeit nonconference victories over Toledo and Utah State.

"For all intents and purposes, we are 0-9," he said.

Asked who he felt was to blame for the scandal, Kush replied: "It's a combination. There is no question that I am responsible for it.

"Then, we have an academic adviser. He's supposed to check on the number of hours and make sure the people are taking an adequate number of hours so that they are eligible.

"Then it goes down to the athletic administration, then on through the university administration and then on back to us, and then we get the certification that they are okay."

Arizona State's academic counselor for athletics said he was under constant orders from Kush to keep players academically eligible or face dismissal.

Dr. Fred Millern Arizona State's athletic director, said he felt the Pac-10 action was fair, and that he expected other institutional penalties from both the conference and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The ineligibility stems from the Pac-10's Progress Rule, which requires every athlete to complete 24 credit hours 12 months prior to participation in a sport. Without the proper credit from Rocky Mountain, all eight players fell three hours short.

The other six players involved are linebackers Ben Apuna and Louis Camptell, defensive lineman Tony Baker, offensive linemen Brad Igou and Kani Kauahi and running back Alvin Moore.

State In Tank Win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State's men's swim team, propelled by an NCAA qualifying performance from its 400-medley relay team of Paul Lohmann, Doug Reinsenfeld, Brian Kelca and Brian McManus, stunned nationally-ranked Alabama, 77-36, Friday night.

The Wolfpack, which at one time led 60-19 in the meet, also received a double win from sophomore All-America Chuck Gaul of Lancaster, Pa., in the 100 and 220-yard freestyle events.

N.C. State's medley relay unit covered the distance in 3:25.55. The NCAA qualifying time is 3:25.70.

Alabama, which defeated the Wolfpack 69-44 in Tuscaloosa last year, received double wins from NCAA champion diver Wayne Chester in the one and three meter diving competition and Arne Borgstrom in the 500 and 1,000-yard freestyle events.

TIME TO QUIT

SARATOGA, N.Y. (AP) — Jerry Fishback, a 31-year-old star among steeplechase jockeys, decided on the spur of the moment to retire after riding New Look to a victory in a "jump race" at Saratoga.

"It seemed like the right time," Fishback said. "I was still in one piece. I have plans for the future. And I was able to retire on a winning note."

Braves, Hrabosky Agree To Contract

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Braves have agreed to contract terms with free agent relief pitcher Al Hrabosky, the "Mad Hungarian" famous for his psyche-up antics behind the mound, the team said Friday.

The contract signing ceremony is set for Tuesday.

Details of the pact were not not released, but The Atlanta Constitution reported in today's editions it is a $5.9 million, five-year package with payments spread over 35 years.

"It's an unbelievable deal and strictly for baseball," Hrabosky said Friday night. "I received an equal offer from California, but I wanted to be in Atlanta with Ted (Turner). The financial structure is fantastic and gives my family the kind of security I wanted."

Hrabosky has worked in both radio and television and said last week that Turner's ownership of Channel 17 in Atlanta gave him an edge over other teams in contract negotiations.

"The contract was strictly baseball, but Ted gave me some verbal promises concerning a television career," said Hrabosky, who is coming off a poor season with Kansas City, where he had a 3.74 earned run average. "Ted is giving me the opportunity to learn every aspect of the business — on the air, sales, marketing, everything. I'll be learning from one of the industry's giants."

He made his comments in an interview with The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution.

"One of the main reasons I decided on the Braves was because every year Ted makes a strong bid for a free agent, but he hasn't been able to sign them," Hrabosky said. "Now maybe one or two other guys will come to Atlanta. I know Atlanta stadium is small, but the dimensions don't worry me. I don't think I have ever given up a home run in Atlanta."

The Braves have some good, young talent and "now they are getting some guys who know how to win," the left-handed reliever said. "I think Gene Garber (the Braves right-handed relief ace) and I are going to have some fun this year."

Hrabosky has spent seven years in the major leagues, with St. Louis, where he was named Fireman of the Year in 1975 when he had a 13-3 record, and the last two seasons in Kansas City.

Furman Is Choice

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Furman has been chosen as the overwhelming favorite to win the Southern Conference basketball title this year by writers and broadcasters covering the league.

Furman polled 28 first place votes from 31 media representatives and 276 total points to outdistance Marshall's 199 points.

Of the remaining three first place votes, Appalachian State got two and East Tennessee one.

Appalachian was chosen third on the overall points, with 180, one more than East Tennessee.

The other teams were ordered this way: The Citadel, 162 points; Davidson, 140; Western Carolina, 119; UT-Chattanooga, 91; and Virginia Military, 49.

This will be the first year East Tennessee is eligible for the basketball championship.

Sisters Make Kill
Polyxena Baker and Tethys Baker display two deer they shot in early November during the Tennessee Juvenile Deer Hunt held in Davidson County. Polyxena, 11, shot a nine-point buck, while her sister Tethys, 13, downed a six-point buck. A third sister, Monica, 15, shot a doe. Under rules of the hunt, a buck or doe may be shot. Monica has been hunting for three years, while her two sisters have been at it for two years.

ODDS TO WIN . . .

Odds vary depending on number of game tickets you obtain. The more tickets you obtain the better your chances of winning.

Odds to obtain all nine (9) Jackpot numbers and qualify for Grand Prize Drawings 1 in 22.5. Odds to win Grand Prize Drawings will depend on the number of Jackpot number combinations.

Instant Vegas Bonus #9015 is being played in 183 participating Big Star Foods and Colonial Stores located in South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, Montreal, Spartanburg and Augusta, Georgia and Ft. Myer in Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

Scheduled termination date of this promotion is December 22, 1979, however Instant Vegas will locally end when all Game 1 tickets are distributed.

The number of tickets and prizes have been determined programmatically such that the odds as to any prize remain substantially identical to the previous series.

Iran Is Not The First Instance Of The U.S. Freezing Foreign Assets

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's decision to freeze Iranian assets in the United States, was not the first time the United States has taken such action against a foreign nation.

But it marked a significant escalation in the political and economic confrontation between the countries since Iranian students took 60 Americans hostage at the U.S. Embassy Nov. 4.

And its use came in a dramatically different context than in the past.

The United States currently has assets of Cambodia, North Vietnam and Cuba frozen. And only recently, the United States and China agreed to settle a dispute dating back to 1949 in which each country laid claim to the other's assets.

But the freeze on billions of dollars Iran holds in the United States, was among the largest ever imposed by the United States. The amount of funds involved is estimated at around $5 billion by the United States officials and about $12 billion by the Iranians.

And it came in response to what currency dealers say was a direct threat to the dollar with potentially broad economic implications for the U.S. economy.

Many of those problems may remain, even after the hostage question is settled. Higher oil prices, for instance, are deemed to be an almost certain spinoff of the U.S.-Iranian confrontation.

Carter took swift but limited action this past week when the Iranians announced plans to withdraw all funds from the United States. While he did not officially break off all trade with Iran, he did block withdrawal of all funds owned by the Iranian government or its agencies unless specifically permitted by the United States government.

Treasury officials described the freeze as a necessary step to ensure that Iran would not walk out of an estimated $2.5 billion in loans from U.S. banks, and that the withdrawal of funds would be "orderly."

But in currency markets, speculation was widespread that Iran's intention was to force a run on the dollar, thus increasing economic pressure on the United States to meet its demands for the return of the deposed shah.

In other business developments this past week:

—Major banks raised their prime lending rates to a record 15¾ percent from 15½ percent, drawing an immediate charge of "profiteering" from House Banking Committee Chairman Henry S. Reuss.

—Auto sales in the first 10 days of November slowed to their slowest pace since the 1974-75 recession, despite promotions and rebates by some automakers.

—Ford Motor Co., the nation's second largest automaker, said it expects to lose more than $1 billion this year and have losses extend into next year from its North American auto and truck operations.

Unenthusiastic About Bailing Out Chrysler

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed $1.5 billion bailout for the ailing Chrysler Corp. is drawing a less than enthusiastic response from congressmen in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"I'm inclined to be against it," said Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C. The proposed loan guarantees for the financially-troubled automaker are now before the Senate Banking Committee of which Morgan is a member.

Morgan voted against a plan to save the Penn Central Railroad. He said he is generally opposed to bailing out failing companins.

But he said he would "take everything into consideration" before casting his vote.

Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., said he plans to vote against the bailout.

"I don't think it's good procedure for the government in our economy to guarantee loans for big businesses," Martin said. "Our system is based on making investments in the hopes of making a profit but with the risk of failure. To do that just for Chrysler discriminates and to do it for everyone would be the end of the free enterprise system."

Martin said he thinks the automaker's financial woes are the fault of the "overzealousness of Congress to impose severe regulations on them."

Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., said he is undecided about his vote on the plan to help Chrysler. He said his office had received phone calls from Chrysler dealers, some of which pointed out that his district sells $8.5 million worth of goods to Chrysler.

Rep. Bill Hefner, D-N.C., says it will take a good argument to convince him to approve the loan guarantees.

"I'm not convinced a bailout is a long-term solution," Hefner said.

South Carolina Sen. Ernest Hollings was leaning more in favor of helping the automaker. He said said he is inclined to help Chrysler with loan guarantees that he said "won't cost the taxpayers a cent."

Outlook 'Good'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The outlook is good for a nutty holiday season.

Record crops of both California walnuts and almonds are expected, with walnut production the largest in history, 220,000 tons. The previous walnut record was 198,000 tons in 1975, says the California Crop Reporting Service.

Pine Straw Makes Thrifty Decorations

Pine straw — along with football and pumpkins — is a sure sign of fall in eastern North Carolina. In most instances, its appearance is followed by the physical exertion required to rake and transport it from the ground to the garden to be used as a mulch.

However, all those mellow brown longleaf pine needles can be turned into something besides yard matter.

With the help of a few free to inexpensive tools, pine needles can be woven into usable and decorative objects ranging from simple coasters and hot pads to lacy baskets, trays and even tables and lamps.

The process of weaving with pine needles was perfected by the American Indian, who made ornamental items, wall hangings and mats, as well as baskets for gathering and holding food. Later, the Indians developed clay pot liners for the baskets. Unfortunately, heat from the pots, which were used in cooking, burned the pine straw, and, as a result, few of the early baskets have survived.

Occasionally, the pine needles were dyed, or were interwoven with other natural fibers such as wire grass.

Today the ancient handicraft is practiced and taught by people who love to weave or who don't want to see the art form die — people like Mary Forlines of Winterville.

Mrs. Forlines, wife of E.O. Forlines, recalls learning to make pine needle baskets as a 10-year-old child in Bible school. When her interest in the craft was rekindled a few years ago, she approached officials at Pitt Community, College about teaching a non-credit course in the craft. To her dismay, she realized that no one knew what she was talking about.

Since that time, however, the local college has offered courses in pine needle weaving when sufficient interest has been shown by prospective students. Such a course is taught during a six-week period for three hours a session.

Basically, Mrs. Forlines instructs would-be weavers how to gather and process the pine needles, and how to weave and shape the bundled needles into the desired product. After learning the fundamentals, the student is equipped to further develop the handicraft on his or her own and to use imagination to create other objects.

The possibilities of items and designs is as limitless as the availability of the pine straw itself.

While pine needles can be gathered at any time, those collected in the fall are cleaner and fresher. Most craftspeople prefer the fall color, too.

One pine tree furnishes all the needles Mrs. Forlines needs for a year's projects.

Green pine needles can also be used in basket making, but these require special curing and are less desirable because the color may not remain constant over a period of years.

The few simple tools necessary for this craft include a drinking straw cut into one-inch lengths (to hold the pine needle bundles uniform); a large-eyed needle; thread, such as tobacco twine or raffia; scissors; and plastic storage bags for the pine straw after it is bundled. If baskets with handles are to be made, lightweight wire and wire cutters should also be on hand.

After that, the main ingredients for pine needle weaving are time, patience, and imagination.

Any of a variety of stitches, such as the chain stitch, feather stitch or wrap stitch can be used to create a design with the thread as the weaver sews the rows of pine needles together. Or, random stitching with no design can be employed.

The time required to complete a project varies from a few hours for a small piece to months for a more complex object.

The finished product may be sprayed or painted with clear varnish, though this is an option Mrs. Forlines regards as unnecessary.

The N.C. Agricultural Extension Service, which includes the Pitt County Home Economics Agent's office, has offered instruction in pine needle basketry in various institutions throughout the state for years.

It is through such agencies and people like Mrs. Forlines that knowledge of an ancient handicraft is preserved and practiced in today's culture.

FALL IS AN IDEAL TIME. . .to gather and process the pine needles used in making all sorts of baskets and decorative items. Mary Forlines of Winterville gathers all her needles from one tree; then she is ready to weave them, a hobby that can be worked on year round.

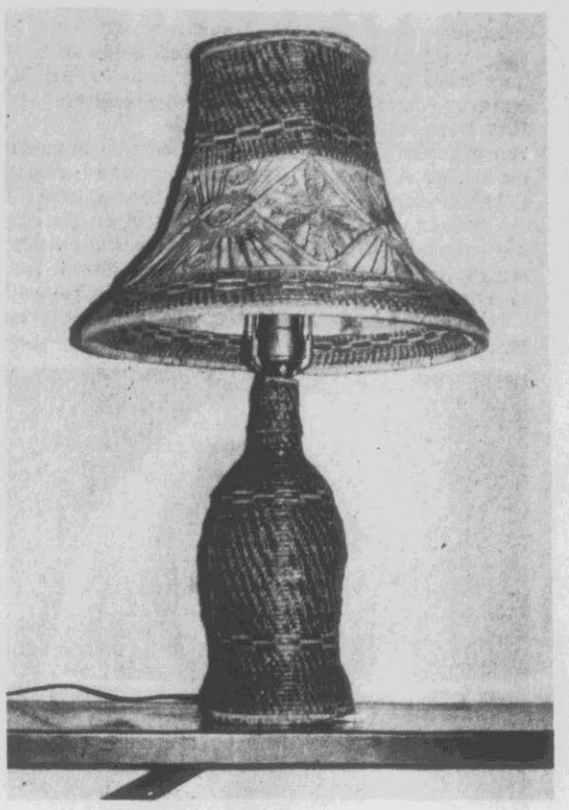

THIS PINE NEEDLE. . .and tobacco twine sewing basket, woven by Mrs. Forlines, illustrates the random stitch. The handle on the lid is fashioned with three acorns.

Special Van Will Aid Survival Of Ill Newborn

By GEORGETTE HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

An ambulance designed specially for the transport of infants will greatly enhance the chance of survival for critically ill newborns in Eastern North Carolina, according to Dr. Arthur E. Kopelman, associate professor of pediatrics at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The Eastern Carolina Regional Newborn Transport ambulance is an extension of the neonatal intensive care unit at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It will act as a mini, self-contained intensive care unit for sick newborns who must be transferred to the regional referral center for specialized care, said Kopelman, unit director.

The vehicle is a modified ambulance specially outfitted with monitors, medications and support equipment necessary for evaluating and treating the unique and often life-and-death problems of sick newborns. A highly skilled team of nurses and respiratory therapists will staff the van.

"Although the van now gives us a big medical advantage in emergencies, it is actually the second best way to transport a sick newborn," Kopelman said. "Transporting the infant is inferior to transporting the mother."

Kopelman explained that mothers identified as having complicated pregnancies — conditions that threaten their lives or the lives of their babies — frequently are referred to the medical school's high-risk obstetrical team and admitted to the hospital in advance of the delivery. This procedure assures the babies of immediate access to the neonatal unit should problems develop.

But often the unexpected happens, and what was supposed to be a normal, healthy delivery turns into a medical emergency for a newborn. Kopelman said when problem cases are identified by local physicians in community hospitals, the van will be dispatched to the facility to pick up the baby, offer support in stabilizing the infant's condition and provide safe transportation to Greenville.

The van is equipped with an elaborate transport incubator, a self-contained unit providing crucial life-support functions. It houses a warmer, a ventilator and monitors for breathing, heart rate, blood pressure and temperature measurements.

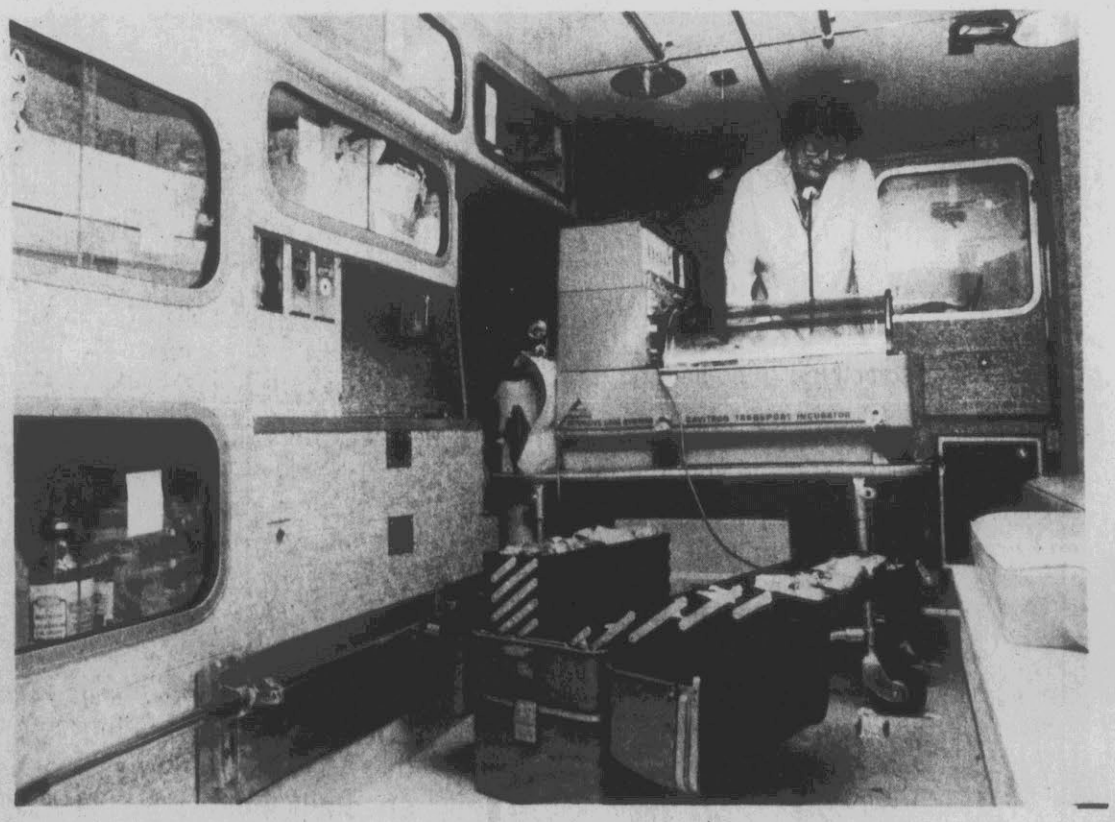

The goal, Kopelman said, is to staff the van with a health care team trained in assessing sick newborns. The team will include a neonatal nurse clinician, respiratory therapist, staff nurse and emergency medical technician, who also will serve as driver. In extremely complicated cases, a neonatologist (specialist in newborns) may accompany the team.

Kopelman noted that before the availability of the van, newborns were transported in ambulances that sometimes did not have the special equipment needed for infants or the skilled staff required to assess their conditions.

"Another benefit of the van is that the driver will not have to rush and break speed limits," he added. "Since complete medical services are carried with the van, it can travel at a safe speed. The team also has the option of stopping along the way to further evaluate the baby's status and modify treatment if there is a marked change in condition."

The neonatal intensive care unit and transport ambulance eventually will serve 29 counties in the region. The services are supported with funds provided by the state perinatal program under the Department of Human Resources.

The 29 counties are: Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Craven, Currituck, Dare, Duplin, Edgecombe, Gates, Greene, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrrell, Washington, Wayne, and Wilson.

Miss Daughtrey Weds Mr. Ledbetter Saturday

Catherine Carol Daughtrey and Russell Hilton Ledbetter were united in a double ring ceremony Saturday at 2 p.m. at Holy Trinity United Methodist Church with Dr. Glen Holm and the Rev. Roy A. Turnage Jr. of Goldsboro officiating.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Joe Goodwin, organist and Mrs. Roy Matthews, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Carroll Daughtrey Jr., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. Gorman Ledbetter and Mrs. Charlie Seamester, Jr., all of Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a candlelight gown of Americana jersey. The gown was designed with an empire waistline, high collar and fitted sleeves. Silkened Venise lace enhanced the bodice and the sheer yoke and high collar were of English net. The sleeves featured a sheer panel of English net and matching lace. Her A-line skirt flowed into a chapel length train. She wore a full length silk illusion mantilla edged with Venise lace and attached to a Camelot cap. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and carnations.

MRS. RUSSELL HILTON LEDBETTER

Sherry Ledbetter of Greenville sister of the bridegroom, served as maid of honor and wore a formal length gown of cinnamon silesta with an open halter neckline, fitted bodice and cascading wrap skirt. The sleeveless gown was enhanced by a matching capelet. She carried a bouquet of white roses, cinnamon and dusty pink carnations.

Bridesmaids were Donna Daughtrey of Richmond, Va. and Debra Slack of Burlington, cousins of the bride, Mary Allen Martin and Cheryl Smith of Greenville. Junior bridesmaid was Jennifer Slack of Jacksonville, cousin of the bride. The bridemaids wore the same attire as the honor attendant and the junior bridemaid wore a formal length gown of truffle pointilla with a high neckline and ruffled collar featuring an empire bodice and a full gathered skirt with an attached capelet. They carried bouquets of white roses, cinnamon and dusty pink carnations.

The bridegroom's father served as best man and ushers were Andy Boggsof Fallston, Greg Lassiter of Kinston, Jeff Smith of Raleigh, and Mark and Scott Daughtrey of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a formal length gown of garnet polyester and the bridegroom's mother wore one of periwinkle blue. They both wore orchid corsages.

Mrs. L. C. Daughtrey of Bowling Green, Va., grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. E. A. West of Washington, the bride's great aunt, wore carnation corsages.

A reception was held at Cherry Oaks Club House following the ceremony hosted by the pride's parents.

An after-rehearsal dinner was held at the Holiday Inn Friday evening for the wedding party and out-of-town guests. Hosts were Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Seamester Jr., Mr. and Mrs. MaxBoggs of Fallston, Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Mintz of Polkville, Mr. and Mrs. Coy Crawford of Greensboro, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lewis ofBethel, the Rev. and Mrs. James Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Darden, both of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside in Washington.

The bride is employed by Beaufort County Schools, and is a graduate of East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended North Carolina State University and is a senior at East Carolina University. He is self-employed.

Durham Is Scene Of Wedding

DURHAM — Church of the Abiding Savior Lutheran here was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday evening at six o'clock of Mary Cecelia Pinson and Kennon Howell Powell.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. Mary Rivers Pinson of Durham and the late Mr. Thomas F. Pinson and Atty. and Mrs. Richard Powell of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by Randolph Lockett, pianist, Mrs. Helen H. Burgess, Yusef Salim, Ms. Claudette Rivers, Ms. Sheila Small, Ms. Lisha Pinson and Jeffery Hester.

For the double ring ceremony, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Thomas F. Pinson II. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Micheal D. Wendt assisted by Father Francis O'Connor.

The bride wore a formal length gown of white silesta over white delustered peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in silk floral Venise lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice of sheer point d'esprit was overlaid in the beaded matching lace. The full bishop sleeves of crepe de chine featured cuffs of point d'esprit trimmed with appliques of matching lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were enhanced by a ruffled flounce of imported Brussels lace topped by a row of miniature scalloped Venise lace.

She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in Brussels attached to a Juliet cap overlaid in matching lace with a blusher of French veiling. She carried a bouquet of mauve and frost rose carnations.

The maids of honor wore formal length gowns of mauve silesta designed with an open neckline edged in piping and featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps with full sleeves worn off the shoulders. From the blouson bodice fell the waltz length wrap styled skirt worn over a floor length skirt. The waistline was encircled with a rolled tie sash with streamers. They each carried two long-stemmed mauve carnations.

Bridesmaids were dressed in identical styled gowns in frost rose silesta and each carried two long-stemmed frost rose carnations.

The flower girls were dressed in formal gowns of pink rose floral qiana print styled with a round neckline, ruffle collar, elasticized high waistline with a velveteen ribbon. They carried frost rose baskets filled with petals.

Maids of honor were Debra Parks of Dalton, Ga., and Lisha Pinson of Sacramento, Calif., sister of the bride. Best men were Larry Daniels of Greensboro and Richard Powell II of Washington, D. C., brother of the bridegroom.

Bernadette Burton, Oxford, Michelle Davis, Havelock, Dr. Valerie Wynne-Hall, Fayetteville, Cathy Lyons, Juana Morales, Verna Pinson, sister of the bride, and Cynthia Thomas, all of Durham, Mrs. Marsha Brown Peele, Robersonville, Sharon Powell, Greensboro, sister of the bridegroom, Arah Venable, Winston-Salem, Beverly Ware, Greenville, and Cerise Wynne, Asheville, were bridesmaids.

Tamara and Tara Nichols, Hillsborough, nieces of the bridegroom, and Emily O'Neal, Dalton, Ga., were flower girls. Ring bearers included Bernard Betton II, Clinton Dillard and Mark Rivers, all of Dalton, Ga.

Ushers included Barry Allen, Jeffery Hester and Clifford Morris, Durham, Randy Dulin, Winston-Salem, Joe Evans, Rocky Mount, Willie Everette and Milas Kelly II, both of Greenville, Charles Gorham,

Elderkin-Evans Vows Solemnized On Saturday

Terry Doris Evans and Donald Lee Elderkin Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. at Immanuel Baptist Church. The Rev. Gene Adams performed the double ring ceremony. A program of music was presented by Anita Bowman, organist and Cherie Lassiter of Raleigh, soloist.

MRS. DONALD LEE ELDERKIN JR.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin L. Evans of Greenville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lee Elderkin Sr. of Raleigh.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length organza gown with a V-neckline accented with scalloped Venise lace and seed pearls, full bishop sleeves with chantilly lace. A full skirt of chantilly lace with empire waist and a wide border of scalloped chantilly lace surrounding the hem and extending into a chapel length train. Her veil was chapel length of white illusion with a Camelot cap covered with chantilly lace, pearls and a wide border of lace circling the hemline. She carried a bouquet of white and yellow roses, white orchids, pixie carnations, variegated pittosporum and baby's breath.

Sandra Woodard of Raleigh, the bride's cousin, served as maid of honor and wore a formal length maize dress of qiana with a V-neckline and a capelet effect across the front and back with bodice forming sleeves. The full skirt wrapped around and fell into three tiers with a fabric rose at the waist. She carried a fireside basket with yellow and white daisies, sweetheart roses, baby's breath and pixie carnations.

Honorary bridesmaids were Debbie and Joan Elderkin of Raleigh, sisters of the bridegroom, Connie Bunn of Goldsboro, cousin of the bride, Tina Fisher of Greenville. They wore long formal dresses of various colors and carried long-stem tropicana roses.

Bridesmaids were Lynn Ball and Kathy Smith, both of Greenville, Lois Warner and Amy Kepner, both of Raleigh. They wore the same attire as the maid of honor with a headpiece of a single flower and baby's breath. They carried fireside baskets of mixed yellow and bronze daisies and yellow button pompons and baby's breath and wheat.

Christy Alexanderof Indiana, cousin of the bride, was flower girl and wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice and short puffed sleeves. Cascading ruffles of chantilly lace formed a full skirt worn over a hoop. She carried a white miniature fireside basket with yellow and white daisies, baby's breath and pixie carnations.

The bridegroom's father served as best man and ushers were Steve Elderkin of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, Ernie Evans of Greenville, brother of the bride, Doug Cornellius and Scott Northrup, both of Raleigh. Michael Hamilton of Goldsboro, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer.

Christopher Fuqua and Kim Gower of Greenville carried baskets passing out scrolls and satin roses filled with rice.

Following the wedding, a reception was hosted by the bride's parents at the church fellowship hall.

The bride's mother and aunt, Mrs. Davis, entertained the bridesmaid and honorary bridesmaids at a a luncheon Sunday at the bride's home. A miscellaneous shower was given by the aunts of the bride.

The bridal couple and members of the wedding party were entertained with an after-rehearsal party Friday evening by the bridegroom's parents at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Evans.

After a wedding trip to the Tennessee mountains, the couple will reside in Raleigh.

The bride received a fashion merchandising diploma at Hardbarger Junior College. She is manager of Wearhouse Fashions. The bridegroom attended ECU and is an assembly specialist for IBM.

Engagement Announced

MISS SHARON GLYNN COGGINS. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Mitchell Coggins of Rt. 3, Greenville, who announce her engagement to Alfred Earl Garris Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Earl Garris of Rt. 9, Greenville. The wedding will take place in December.

Couple Weds Friday Morning

KENSINGTON, Md. — The Washington, D. C., Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints was the setting Friday morning for the marriage of Eva Marie Jorgensen and Dana Noble Kendrick. Elder Robert W. Barker officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Dr. and Mrs. Nephi M. Jorgensen and Dr. and Mrs. L. Lionel Kendrick, all of Greenville.

Immediately following the temple ceremony, a luncheon was given honoring the bridal couple and members of the family by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Barker of Kensington, Md.

On Saturday evening, a wedding reception was given by the bride's parents at Tar River Estates club house. The bride, bridegroom and parents received guests.

The bride wore her wedding dress for the reception. The formal length gown was made of white qiana and featured a gathered bodice, empire waistline, high neckline and long sleeves, all accented with Venise lace. The dress was complemented by a full length veil of lace and chiffon. The gown was the bride's design and creation.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University in home economics education. She is currently employed by United Figure Salon. The bridegroom is a business major at ECU and recently returned from a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Milan, Italy.

Assisting with refreshments and the register at the reception were Amy and Julie Dunyon, Jennifer Jorgensen and Jill Jorgensen, all nieces of the bride, Merri Ellen Kendrick, sister of the bridegroom, Gaylon Hoyle, Mrs. Kim Hodges and Mrs. Anna Cartner, all of Greenville.

Special guests attending the reception were Dr. and Mrs. Larry G. Jorgensen, Major and Mrs. Lynn C. Jorgensen, Dr. Layne W. Jorgensen, Mr. and Mrs. Mark G. Jorgensen, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dunyon and Miss Karen Jorgensen, all relatives of the bride, Hal Kendrick, brother of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Bonnie D. Kendrick and Mrs. W. J. Noble, grandparents of the bridegroom.

Won't Stand For Sitting

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a grandmother since I was 37. I'm 40 now, and my daughter-in-law and I have a big difference of opinion about what a grandmother is supposed to do.

I have told my daughter-in-law and my son that from now on I will not baby-sit for free while they go out and have a good time. I will baby-sit in an emergency, or if my daughter-in-law has a doctor's appointment, but for no other reason will I sit for free. If they have to pay me like they pay any other sitter, they won't just dump the baby on me and run, or phone me up to come over and watch the baby for "a few minutes"—which always seem to run to three or four hours.

Don't get me wrong, Abby. I love my grandchild, but I can't make my daughter-in-law realize that grandmothers are not put on earth to take care of their grandchildren.

I have my son, his wife and the baby over every Sunday for dinner and two or three times during the week, but I don't want the full responsibility of looking after the baby while the parents are out having fun. Am I wrong? How do other grandmothers feel? By the way, Abby, if you're a grandmother, how do you handle the sitting problem?

NO SITTER

DEAR NO SITTER: I'm a grandmother with no sitter problem because my grandchildren live 2,000 miles away. But if I lived in the same city I would have to draw straws with the other grandmother for the privilege of sitting. She loves it. Bless her.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please tell teenagers that they can become pregnant without "going all the way." That is what happened to me.

My boyfriend of two years and I were very close, but we never actually went all the way. Nevertheless, I was seven months pregnant when I got married although I was still a virgin. My doctor even said so.

I love my husband and my son, but I am sorry I became pregnant when I did. It stood in the way of my finishing college.

LEARNED THE HARD WAY

DEAR LEARNED: I have stated that fact in my column many times, but it bears repeating. Perhaps your experience will be more effective than my warning. I hope so.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Durham Wedding...

Greensboro, Clayton Peele, Robersonville, Robert Rivers II, Dalton, Ga., Wayne Smith II, Greensboro, and Raymond Smith II, Washington, D.C.

A reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Music was presented by Yusef Salim and friends with Lisha Pinson as vocalist.

The couple will be living in Wichita, Kan.

Before her marriage, Mrs. Powell worked for Kroger Sav-On, Greenville, as a bookkeeper, and attended ECU. The bridegroom attended ECU and was a member of Omega Psi Phi fraternity. He graduated from the USAF Air Training Command School and is a missile specialist in the USAF, McConnell AFB, Kan.

A party was given honoring the couple Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Harlem Burgess of Durham after the reception. A breakfast was held Saturday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thomas of Durham. A rehearsal dinner was held Friday evening in the fellowship hall given by the parents of the bridegroom.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When dresses went above my knees, my slips were too long.

When dresses dropped below my thighs, my slips were too short.

This year was one of those phenomenal years that occur once in a person's lifetime. The length of the dress and the slip was compatible. Do you have any idea what the odds are of having a dress and slip that come out even? The same odds as having your car washed on a sunny day: 10,000 to one.

Then one night my husband said, "What's that white lump oozing out of the slits in your dress?"

"It's my slip," I said.

"It looks terrible."

The simple truth is every skirt and every dress on the racks this year have slits in varying lengths from the knee to the thigh to My Heavens, don't back into a room!

To date, I have not found a way to solve the problem. I have tried doing the Bette Midler Shuffle, where you take steps so small your feet never leave the floor. This eliminates drafts and movement, but takes you 30 minutes to walk across a small room.

I've tried the Handbag Coverup, where you conveniently place your handbag in front of every opening that is exposed, making you as nervous as a woman with chocolate breath at a Weight Watchers meeting.

The Six-Inch Slip has been invaluable to me. It starts at the waist and ends up just above the hips. However, there are two hazards you must consider. If the dress is sheer, you can never appear in a room where there is light, and if the dress is silk, the static from your pantyhose will make you look like a newly-papered powder room.

There are some people who are naive enough to think you can sew the slits together and eliminate the problem. This nonsense usually comes from women whose pantyhose bag at the knee.

I walked into a room the other night and my husband whispered, "What's that lump around your waist?"

"It's my slip rolled up."

"Then what's that white lump oozing out of the slits of your dress?"

"It's my leg."

He was going to ask another question but thought better of it.

Miss Harrington Marries

MRS. RANDY DALE TAYLOR

Ms. Kathy Lou Harrington and Randy Dale Taylor were united in marriage at 7 p.m. Saturday at the home of the bride. The Rev. A. G. Smith performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by Steven Taylor, brother of the bridegroom, with soloists Sandy Williams and Kim McKinney.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Jasper Harrington of Greenville. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover Taylor Rt. 2, of Stantonsburg are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of ivory silesta. The gown was designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in floral silk Venise lace beaded with pearls that extended over the empire bodice. The long fitted sleeves were accentuated with panels of floral Venise lace edged at the cuffs with miniature lace. The full flared skirt extended to a chapel-length train. The gown was enhanced by a capelet in back, falling from the shoulder and edged in miniature floral lace. The bride wore a fingertip length ivory veil trimmed in scrolls of scalloped silk Venise lace and fractured scattered appliques over the veil. She carried a cascade bouquet of silk flowers and dried eucalyptus in shades of burgundy and ivory accented with ivory picot ribbon.

The mother of the bride wore a corsage of silk flowers in shades of green, with the bridegroom's mother wearing a corsage of blue silk flowers. The grandmother of the bridegroom was remembered with a white silk corsage.

Mrs. Debbie Davis of Greenville served as honor attendant. She wore a formal length gown of frost rose chiffon, featuring an open portrait neckline with a sheer Bertha draped collar that overlapped in front and extended past the empire waist in the back. The full flared chiffon skirt was styled with cascading tiers of matching chiffon. She carried a single long-stemmed silk rose with matching ribbons.

Herbert Hoover Taylor of Stantonsburg, father of the bridegroom, served as best man.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride. The couple will reside in Stantonsburg following the wedding.

On The Young Side

By Elizabeth Ito

During the past few weeks the Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival has sponsored activities in which several Rose students took part.

Jeri Bullock, a senior, was crowned the Tobacco Festival Queen in a contest held Monday at the Moose Lodge. She won a $1,000 scholarship and was chosen from 15 contestants. She will go on to further competition next year.

Eric Downes and Dan Mayo took second and third place, respectively, in an art contest sponsored by the Tobacco Festival.

Last Saturday both the varsity and junior varsity cheerleading squads participated in a competition which was also part of the festivities. Squads from all over the state displayed their skill in performing various cheers, chants and stunts. Rose's varsity took second place in the varsity division winning $35 and a plaque. The junior varsity won first place, $50, and a plaque in the junior varsity and junior high division.

The Anchor Club held a unique fund raiser Friday called "Mr. Irresistible." In homeroom that morning each girl was given a paper football. Once she pinned it on her shirt she could no longer speak to any boy. If she spoke she had to forfeit the football to the one who made her talk. The girl could then buy another football. At the end of the day the winner was announced during a pep rally. Pat Dye with 286 was named winner.

Rhonda Holland, a junior, will be joining the Anchor Club as a new member.

The National Honor Society has selected its new senior inductees, who were inducted in ceremonies Thursday night at St. James United Methodist Church.

Named were Vita Anthony, Allen Best, Karen Brame, Michael Brohawn, Denise Bullock, Robert Capwell, Kimberly Cottle, Mary Beth Ferrell, Holle Frink, Charles Gunther, Christopher Jones, Coleen Lemnah, Susan Peele, Kevin Richards, Blair Smith, William Sneed, Jan Stoughton, Carla Tadlock, Frank Tart and Garrett Young.

Mark Grossnickle has been chosed as a nominee for the Morehead Scholarship to the University of North Carolina. He along with 13 seniors from Pitt County were interviewed as one part of the selection process. Two more levels of competition will be held before the winner of the scholarship is announced next spring.

The Inter-Club Council, a club for class officers and presidents designed for better organization of school clubs, held elections last week. Mary Beth Ferrell is president, Susan Vick, vice president, Martha Ann Ferrell, secretary and Dan Mayo is sergeant-at-arms.

As part of Key Club Week activities, members did yard work for an elderly citizen in the city and other activities included chartering a bus to travel for the football playoffs Friday.

The annual open house for parents was held Wednesday night. A representative from ECU was present to discuss financial aid available for prospective college students. Parents could also follow their child's schedule and meet teachers.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, NOV. 18, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Avoid feeling frustrated or resentful because conditions do not seem to be working out as you wish. Be the objective observer now and you sidestep considerable woe.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Organize your debits and credit better for the weeks, months ahead. Try to understand loved ones better. Stay within your buget.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Others may not agree with your ideas but don't become belligerent, listen to reason. Being extravagant is unwise at this time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Try to do your work by yourself without arguing with others and be efficient. Take care that you don't overwork, overeat.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't overspend for pleasure or you regret it later. Your talents can be expressed well now. Be active.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Being kind with those who live with you is wise since they are apt to need your help. Don't tackle new projects that require new co-workers.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Concentrate on finest precepts and follow them to the best of your ability. Avoid one who could cause you to go off on the deep end.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan how to economize and get all of your affairs running more smoothly. A trusted adviser could be helpful, if you have one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't be demanding with others. Tact and diplomacy are your best bet to gain favors. Not a good day to meet with distant friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You feel frustrated and could make serious mistakes if you don't take yourself in hand early. Avoid criticizing closest tie.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't permit a friend to force you into doing something that does not appeal to you. Not a good day to go after personal wishes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to be above reproach if you are to avoid the day's rather unpleasant aspects. Care is the keynote today and tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to get out to new places and meet interesting persons, but this is not the day for that. Take care of small tasks.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will always be wanting to make changes. Teach early the importance of perseverance and stability, otherwise there will be little chance of success in this lifetime. There could be real ability at music, so give lessons.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOV. 19, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's aspects bring increased activity in your regular routines but be sure not to force your will on others or considerable problems could follow. Be sure to maintain a cheerful manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care you don't use all that excessive energy to stir up trouble with others today. Schedule your activities wisely.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to use tact in all your dealings with associates today if you want them to follow your wishes. Be more objective.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You can complete what you have left unfinished in the past and branch out in new and worthwhile directions. Be happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure to control your emotions at all times today. Delve into pleasures that are not expensive in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Taking steps to make your life more ideal is wise at this time. Use your hunches in handling a difficult situation.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make long-range plans that could give you added abundance in the days ahead. Make sure there are no errors in written material.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Wait until you have completed current monetary affairs before you take on any new ones. Think constructively.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan how to attain personal aims and anticipate possible obtacles you might run up against. Strive for happiness.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Analyze your financial position well and make it more secure by cutting down on expenses. Live a more worthwhile life.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) New friends are stepping into your life while others are stepping out, so be encouraging with the new. Be logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can handle money matters wisely at this time. Find new way to expand in career activities. Express happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Concentrate on how to expand in your line of endeavor and command more respect from allies. Avoid unwise investments.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to find better methods for handling regular routines and make them more profitable. Be sure to give the finest education you can afford. Give ethical and religious training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Overnight Heat Secret

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Waking up to a cold house is one disadvantage of heating with wood.

It doesn't have to be. Among the tips for making a fire last are these from "Heating With Wood," a publication of the New England Regional Commission:

—Set your furnace thermostat at 55-60 degrees F so it can take over automatically when the fire goes out.

—Overheat your house to perhaps 80-85 degrees before bedtime. Even if the temperature drops 15-20 degrees by morning, the house will still be a comfortable 60.

—Slow down the rate at which the wood burns by covering the fire with a layer of 10-15 sheets of glossy magazine paper. The paper contains a lot of filler that does not burn well. It will leave a thick layer of ash that retards the burning.

—Save large, knotty pieces of wood for overnight use. Because of their size, they burn slowly.

"Heating With Wood" and "Burning Wood Safely" were published by the commission with funding from the U.S. Department of Commerce. The commission is a federal-state partnership designed to develop New England's economy.

'Open Door' To Nature's Course

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Euthanasia is "contrary to God's law," but a Christian in good conscience may "let nature take its course," says a report on mercy killing issued by the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod's Commission on Theology and Church relations.

The report says patient, doctor, nearest of kin, and pastor should "normally" be involved in the final decision to "let nature take its course." It allows the use of pain-killing medications "even at the risk of shortening life."

The report defines euthanasia as "the administration of a lethal dose to the patient or the deliberate refusal to use even the ordinary means of sustaining life." The report says the "discontinuance or avoidance of extraordinary means of preserving life when there is no prospect of recovery ... does not, in a proper medical sense, signify euthanasia."

Sees Scriptures As Key Adjunct

NEW YORK (AP) — "Access to the Scriptures and familiarity with their teaching is an important adjunct" to freedom of religion in the United States, President Carter said in a special message for the observance of National Bible Week, November 18-25.

The message was released by Thomas Murphy, national chairman for the 39th year of the annual, non-secretarian observance sponsored by the Laymen's National Bible Committee. Murphy is chairman of General Motors Corporation.

Muslim Prayer Needs In Prison Have An Advocate

By JAMES RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prisoners who practice Islam, once identified with militant Black Muslim inmates, are getting new consideration from prison officials for their social and religious practices.

The Rev. Richard Houlahan, a Catholic chaplain with the Federal Bureau of Prisons, says he has been working to convince prison officials that Muslims deserve the same religious privileges behind bars as inmates who are Jewish or Christian.

In the past, many followers of the religion were identified with Black Muslims, militants who were viewed by prison officials as a disruptive force. For some prison guards, the name conjured up visions of prison riots.

A survey Houlahan conducted this summer and fall indicates that Islam is on the rise among inmates and that federal prison officials are making things easier for followers of Muhammad.

"I would say membership in Islamic groups seems to be on the increase," Houlahan said. "There is renewed interest in historic Islam. American groups are slowly but surely returning to Islamic roots."

In federal prisons, about 1,500 prisoners out of 25,000, or 6 percent, identify themselves as Islamic, Houlahan said. Islamic programs are organized at 24 of the 38 federal prisons, and most followers of Islam take part, the priest added.

His survey, based on questionnaires filled out by prison chaplains, showed that Muslim ministers, called Imams, make paid visits to conduct services at about half the prisons. They visit the other half on a voluntary basis.

Inmates belong to about a dozen Muslim sects. The most prominent groups are the World Community of Al Islam in the West at 35 institutions, the Moorish Science Temple of America at 21 prisons and the Sunni Muslims in 12 prisons.

A staple of the Muslim religion is the Jumah prayer, a weekly ritual on Friday afternoons.

In late August, Muslims concluded their annual 30-day period of fasting, known as the Ramadan. During the fast, it is forbidden to eat or drink during daylight hours.

Houlahan said almost every federal prison tried to accommodate the Muslims to some degree by making meals available either before sunrise or after sunset. It was necessary to pay overtime to the kitchen staff in only two cases, Houlahan said.

According to Houlahan's survey, 1,388 Muslims took part in Ramadan and 1,160 stuck to the fasting schedule throughout the 30 days.

"That's important," he said, because it demonstrates that "the Islamics are well-motivated."

The federal prison system has refused thus far to adopt a special Muslim diet. However, a number of prisons have pork-free diets, which is a tenet of Islam as well as of Orthodox Judaism.

Houlahan said it would take a court order to force the prison system to adopt a special Muslim diet, similar to a court-ordered plan for a kosher diet that has been adopted for Jews in federal prisons.

While there has been greater acceptance of Muslims in prison in recent years, Houlahan said problems still persist.

For example, he said, some guards express annoyance at the Muslim prayer rugs or at the special Islamic head coverings.

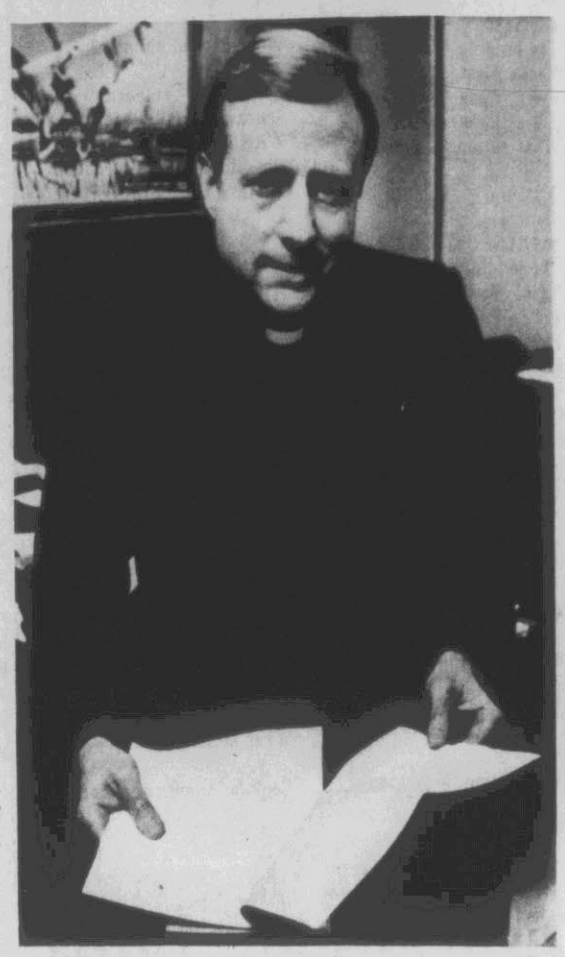

"All of these things are so new that they are viewed with some suspicion," he said. "They still remember the Black Muslims. But the new groups, generally speaking, are peaceful."

Norman Carlson, head of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, said Black Muslims — followers of the late Elijah Muhammad — are no longer considered a threat to prison discipine.

They no longer preach hatred of whites, he said. Like other Muslim groups, the Black Muslims are generally "very quiet, well-disciplined followers of the true Muslim religion," he said.

Actually, he said, the image of the Black Muslims as a source of disruption was blown out of proportion.

"Many of the fears and trepidations were unfounded," he said. "You have got to differentiate individuals from groups. From time to time you get one or two individuals who used the group to perpetuate their power base."

A MATTER OF FAITH — The Rev. Richard Houlahan, a Roman Catholic chaplain with the Federal Bureau of Prisons is working to convince prison officials that Muslims behind bars need as much opportunity to practice their faith as others. (AP Laserphoto)

"It's a nice, big plant," muses Breckon, "but I don't like beans."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: B equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Re-Examining Of Purposes

NEW YORK (AP) — The governing board of the National Council of Churches has started a year-long re-examination of its purpose.

The 266-member board, represents 32 Protestant and Orthodox communities whose members number more than 40 million people.

At its Nov. 8-10 meeting, the board also adopted a new policy statement on criminal justice and approved a fact-finding mission to the Middle East as part of the development of new NCC policy in that area.

The NCC's current Mideast policy affirms both Israel's right to secure borders and the Palestinians' right to self-determination and a national entity.

The policy statement on criminal justice argues that the present system may do more to perpetuate violence and disrespect for the law then to halt it. It calls for minimizing incarceration, and wider use of fines, mandatory community service and restitution to victims.

Robot Plant In The '80s

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Swiss engineer forecasts that the long-heralded "automatic factory" — complete with robots doing the dirty work for humans — will be common within the glass industry by the year 2000.

Technological, social, environmental, regulatory, economic and conservation pressures are combining to accelerate its development, says Michel Cornaz.

He told a recent American Management Association seminar he believes the automatic plant will come first to the glass bottle-making industry because its straight-line production is ideal for automation and process control.

Cornaz described a plant operating at production efficiencies of 95 percent while using up to 50 percent less energy than today. It would also use a substantial amount of recycled glass as raw material. Each production line would be capable of producing 700 bottles per minute, each stronger and lighter than those being produced today.

"The robots will replace worn or defective components according to programmed computer instructions," explained Cornaz, an engineer with Emhart Corp. "Twenty people per production line will keep an eye on things, and they will be doing this in a plant environment free of dust, fumes, waste oil and oppressive heat."

Other robots in the warehouse, Cornaz said, will follow instructions from the computers for the loading and shipment of customers' orders.

Study Teacher Dropout Cause

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Why teachers continue in their careers or quit after the first year was the focus of research toward a doctorate in home economics education at Oklahoma State University.

Rachel A. Anderson, Sulphur Springs, Texas, made a regional study of home economics teachers from Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri.

Among the reasons given for dropping out of teaching were wanting to go into another career, finding no job available, wanting to have a family, frustration, pressure, financial reasons and the amount of time required for teaching.

Dishwashing Turns Into A Sunny Job

COLONIE, N.Y. (AP) — Solar soup isn't on the menu yet, but a restaurant in this Albany suburb may be the only one in the nation to use the sun's rays to wash the dishes.

The radiant energy collected by a 1,000-square-foot solar collector is stored in two 3,000-gallon water tanks inside the restaurant, providing enough hot water to wash the dishes and supplement the heating.

The solar collector is just the newest component of a central energy system, designed to reduce utility costs in the food-science industry.

According to the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), the Sambo's restaurant in Colonie was chosen as its primary field laboratory because of the extreme changes in climate in the Albany area and the company's prior interest in energy conservation. Climates in any part of the United States can be simulated during the course of the year, enabling the DOE to gather information on the efficiency of advanced forms of solar and heat-reclamation equipment.

"The government chose us because we have been experimenting on our own since 1973 with solar equipment in some of Sambo's California restaurants," explained Jack Willingham, the restaurant chain's engineering consultant.

"We built the Colonie restaurant in 1976 as a laboratory for the DOE to test equipment that would eventually be recommended as a good investment for the entire food-service industry."

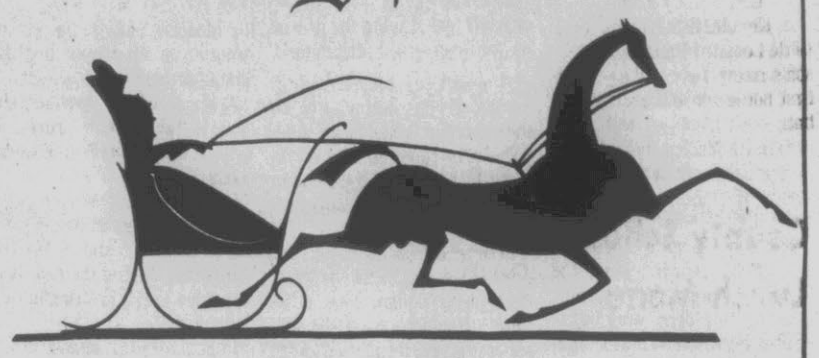

The experiment is tracked by 214 sensors located throughout the restaurant that tell a computer how the system is working.

The results are gathered by two scientists from the Atmospheric Research Center of the State University of New York at Albany and are reported to the DOE and to the science committee of the New York state legislature.

Early Start On Christmans Craft Work

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

In Kentucky, the father of a Little League ballplayer had his son's name and the date of his first home run engraved on his bat.

An Indiana farm wife refinished and restored her father-in-law's springboard wagon seat for her husband's Christmas present.

A 10-year-old gave his big brother, a pickle freak, a gallon of dills tied with a big red bow.

These projects are cited in a new book as examples of thoughtful Christmas giving. Farm Journal's Homespun Christmas, by the editors of that magazine (Doubleday $9.95) has lots of other good ideas, along with simple, clear directions for such things as tree decorations, greeting cards, childproof tabletop wooden decorations, clothespin and cornhusk dolls, a wall clock kit personalized with family photographs and a simple A-frame dollhouse open on both sides so two children can play with it at one time. The book also includes a few recipes for partying, gift giving and holiday meals, plus tips for choosing trees.

Because it's not a minute too early to get started on Christmas projects, here are brief reviews of some recent books on the subject:

In Christmas Angels, Phyllis Meras and Julianna Turkevich (Houghton Mifflin $6.95 paper) provide imaginative designs for simple projects for a wide range of skills. Even small children could manage some of the paper, felt, cookie dough, flour-salt-water clay and potato-stamp figures, alone or with a little adult help. For more experienced crafters, there are angels made from dried corn husks, stained glass, macrame and the ends of juice cans.

Any child old enough to handle knives and scissors safely and who has the manual dexterity to carve designs on art gum and other erasers could have great fun with The Stamp-Pad Printing Book, by Florence H. Pettit (Crowell $7.95). Even adults may enjoy making greeting cards, stationery, posters, labels, wrapping paper, booklets and notebooks, even cloth banners.

In The Great Big Box Book, by Flo Ann Hedley Norvell (Crowell $8.95) tells how to use corrugated cardboard packing boxes from major appliances to make such things as a hobby horse, a tepee, a castle, a playhouse and its furniture, a spaceship and space helmets, even arms and armor for a medieval knight. The author advises not only on sources for the boxes, but also tells how to dismantle them and get them home.

For sheer reading entertainment, J. Alan Williams' The Kids' and Grownups' Toy-Making Book (Morrow $14.95 hardcover, $7.95 paper) is unbeatable. We also subscribe to his dedication, which includes "all the parents who think, as we do, that it's a lot more fun and more important to spend time with their children than to spend money on them."

From a practical viewpoint, Williams's book is less praiseworthy. Many of his directions are too skimpy for all but the most experienced craftspersons, although the designs are wonderfully imaginative — a treasure island with a volcano that throws clouds of talcum powder into the air from a hidden squeeze bottle, for example, and The Great Clipper Ship Race Game. To flatten out the two sides of the board for the game you would have to break the spine of the book.

Williams' easier projects include a toy storage unit made from a refrigerator packing box decorated to resemble a castle. His directions for it are bound to delight any child: "Paint the box a sort of dirty yukky grayish brownish color by mixing up what's left in old paint cans ..." He uses potato printing to make the stonework design.

Lots of rainy day ideas for children are in Paperworks, by Florence Temko (Bobbs-Merrill $7.95 paper) in addition to such holiday crafts as candy canes made from striped wrapping paper, greeting cards and note paper, a folded paper wreath whose inside rim forms a six-pointed star suitable for Hanukkah, even luminarias, the paper bag candle holders traditional for outdoor decorations at Christmas in New Mexico.

Beer-Brewing A Major Industry For Belgium

By ROBERT WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Belgium — which still bans the sale of hard liquor in cafes — has about 100 breweries that produce more than 200 very different kinds of beer.

The involvement of this Maryland-size nation of 10 million in brewing dates back to the 13th century.

And it continues unabated. When Brussels prepared to celebrate its 1,000th anniversary this year, Artois — Belgium's largest brewery — brought out a special millenium beer.

If you order "Carbonades Flamandes" in Belgium, you'll get beef stewed in beer.

From the francophone cafes in the Ardennes hills of southern Belgium to the port pubs of Flemish-speaking Antwerp in the north, Belgians display a Breughelian zest for the suds.

In 1978, the average Belgian drank 125 liters of beer, which compares with almost 150 liters for the average German, the world's leader in beer consumption. The average American downs 85 liters of beer a year.

Beer's popularity in Belgium is helped along by the fact that no license is required to operate a pub, of which the country has no fewer than 50,000. But more than that, Belgian beer comes in dozens of varieties.

They range from the thirst-quenching pilsners to the heavy beers of the Trappist abbeys.

Of the 15 Trappist abbeys in Belgium, only five still make their monastic beer on the premises and have the exclusive right to label their products as "Biere Trappiste" or "Trappistenbier."

The Cistercian Trappists provide Belgian beer lovers with a potent copper-colored or dark beverage, and their own orders with a handy income to support their philanthropic work.

Among Belgium's more unusual, regional beers are the white wheat beers of the Leuven area (milky-colored brews), the reds of the Roeselare area aged for 18 months in oak casks, and the sour-tasting Gueuze beers made in 16 small breweries just south and west of Brussels.

In the Gueuze brewing region, beer drinkers can also get a taste of Kriek beer, which is made from black cherries. In addition, Belgium has a variety of British-style beers, such as Scotch Highlander, that are brewed in this country.

The rising popularity of soft drinks and growing competition with foreign breweries has in recent years caused a slight decline in Belgium's beer production.

The country's 1978 output of 1.3 billion liters was 100 million liters below that of the early 1970s.

But although overall production is down somewhat, Belgium's small beer producers are experiencing a revival of sorts.

Statistics show Belgians are increasingly reaching out for more sophisticated, heavier beers.

Seek Prospective Adoptive Homes

The Edgecombe and Martin County Departments of Social Service and the Children's Home Society are actively seeking permanent adoptive homes for school-age black children.

Meetings for people interested in adopting a school-age child will be held in Kinston, Nov. 26, 7:30 p.m., Emmanuel Hill Memorial F. W. B. Church; in Williamston, Nov. 27, 7:30 p.m., in the Williamston Housing Authority Community Room; and in Rocky Mount, Nov. 29, 7 p.m., in the Recreation Center.

Agency representatives are looking for mature adults who will be committed parents for a school-age child. People interested in adoption may be married or single. There are no set requirements for the amount of income, and the mother may continue to work after the child is placed in the home. A love for children and a commitment to parenthood are the most important qualifications for the adoptive parent.

Unsure On Wood Stove Risks

By JEANNE LESEM

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Are wood-burning devices more dangerous for home heating than gas, oil or electric units?

Some insurance industry reports seem to suggest that they are.

But a Department of Energy official says no one really knows at this point whether wood burners are more hazardous.

In an interview, Kurt Riegel said clear dangers exist, but nationwide statistics on the causes of accidental fires are not yet available. Riegel is director of the consumer products division of the DOE Office of Buildings and Community Systems.

He said local or regional figures on accidental fires from wood burning units are easy to get, largely from Northern Tier states.

One insurance trade association recently reported nearly 15 percent of the 725 accidental fires investigated last year by the New Hampshire fire marshal were caused by improper installation, maintenance or use of wood burning stoves.

The Oregon fire marshal's office said wood heating units were the third most frequent cause of the nearly 1,300 home fires in that state last year, according to the New York City-based group.

Statistics are scarce on injuries and deaths related to wood-burning units and fires caused by them.

Consumer Product Safety Commission figures on hospital emergency room service show a 544 percent increase last year in thermal (skin) burns caused by wood burning stoves. They rose from 283 in 1977 to 1,822 in 1978, said Mrs. Heidi Bowers, a CPSC information officer.

"We think the majority were contact burns — just touching a stove," she added. CPSC records also show 515 emergency room cases last year related to fires caused by wood burning stoves. "We think there were probably more," Mrs. Bowers added.

She also said commission records of emergency room care for burn cases involving free-standing wood-burning fireplaces dropped from an estimated 308 in 1977 to only 72 last year.

Mrs. Bowers said the only fatality figures her agency has on file were 13 deaths in 1977 related to wood-burning stove accidents and 25 last year involving coal-and wood-burning stoves.

Riegel said the DOE plans to have enough information within a year to draw conclusions about the relative safety of wood heating.

He said the National Fire and Safety Administration of the National Bureau of Standards is currently conducting laboratory tests and researching fire incidents.

"We really feel it is possible for industry and government to work together to reduce the fire problem markedly," he said, adding the DOE would like to use reports of wood fire accidents to identify critical mistakes people make and then educate the public.

The department is already distributing free two educational publications of the New England Regional Commission, "Heating With Wood" and "Burning Wood Safely."

(Address requests to John Ryan, Department of Energy, 20 Massachusetts Ave. NW, Technology and Consumer Products Branch, Mail stop 2221-C, Washington 20585.)

Riegel had good news about the rapid proliferation of books and magazines devoted to home heating with wood.

"Normally the safety tips are on target: keep chimneys clean, don't put flammable things on hot surfaces.

"I haven't found any books and magazines that are really bad," he said.

Riegel said Underwriters Laboratories, the Chicago-based testing organization, has adopted four safety standards within the past year for four classes of wood-burning equipment: fireplaces, enclosed stoves and solid fuel supplementary units — wood-and coal-burning central furnaces.

"There's a trend in many cities (including Washington) to require UL certification for wood-burning equipment," he said. "Most large manufacturers have obtained approval already" and their products carry the UL label.

"Some smaller ones and many low-quality, cheap imports don't meet the standards.

"In Washington it is illegal to install (wood heat units) without UL certification. Your insurance can be voided (if you do)."

Riegel himself has switched to wood.

He said his home heating bill dropped from $400 a year to $50 after he installed a wood-burning stove on the first floor of his two-story, seven-room restored townhouse in Washington. He had used natural gas.

"Natural convection seems to carry the heat through the house very nicely," he said.

It wouldn't work well in a sprawling ranch house, he added, unless you installed several stoves or hooked the unit into a central heating system.

If enough homeowners switch to wood heat, another problem could result: pollution from the smoke could be especially bad in crowded areas, Riegel said.

He added that industry can develop equipment that would prevent such pollution, "but no one is working on it in a major way.

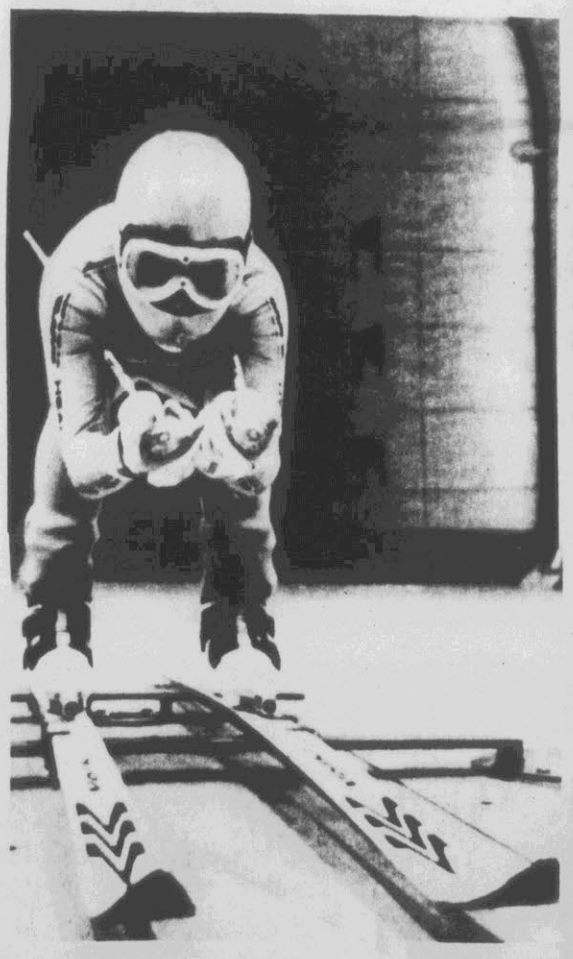

"Wood stove manufacturers are mostly small, and they lack enough funding for research."

Another disadvantage of wood heaters is their need for frequent stoking.

"People like to be able to walk away for as many hours as possible between stokings," Riegel said.

He added that some units have automatic wood feeders that could burn for days, but they're very expensive and usually custom built.

Tradition Kept By Town Crier

By GREGORY JENSEN

CHESTER, England (UPI) — To hear Town Crier Ian T. Clarkson — and with his voice you can hardly help hearing him — it's a wonder Chester survived to celebrate its 1,900th birthday.

"Founded by the Romans," Clarkson bellows beneath Chester's high cross, "conquered by the Saxons, attacked by the Vikings, conquered by the Normans ..."

For this unique city, 185 miles northwest of London, has emerged from civil wars, sieges, fires and other horrors as a captivating place which wears its 1,900 years lightly. Tourists began discovering it in the mid-1970s.

Roman and medieval city walls still encircle the town. Just outside them is nearly the best Roman amphitheater in Britain. The Ye Olde Chester Tan Glove Shoppe established in 1755 is a johnny-come-lately compared to Quellyn Roberts, who sells wine in a crypt built in 1180. St. Peter's church, "once the headquarters of the Roman governor of Chester," became a Christian church in 907.

"Tom" Clarkson, a man-mountain of 40, is the inheritor of another ancient tradition. He has been "giving my shout" in knee breeches and scarlet coat for nearly two years.

England has about 50 town criers and there are others in Boston, Provincetown, Mass., and Cincinnati, Ohio, not to mention Bermuda and Canada and Australia.

But Clarkson claims to be the only one who twice every day — at noon and 3 p.m. — plants his buckled shoes under the high cross, squares his tricorn hat, tolls a handbell and lifts his fiercely mustachioed lip in the traditional crier's cry:

"Oyez! Oyez! Oyez!"

Clarkson, 6 feet, 2 inches, and 240 pounds), won the world crier's championship last year and placed second this autumn. He notes without boasting that he can out-shout a pneumatic drill.

"I'm after the world record," he said. "I'm only about two decibels behind it now. I can do between 108 and 110 decibels, and when you consider Concorde is about 102 ..."

Clarkson's twice-daily "shout" consists mostly of paid advertisments for local establishments. He has great fun with it.

"My lords, ladies and gentlemen," he roared the other day, and added in a conversational tone: "I'll cut this brief; it's startin' to rain."

"Be it known to all manner of persons, (including Americans)," — that last phrase softly — that they can visit a local "heritage center" in order "to marvel at our history (since they have little enough of their own)."

A bus barely missed a shopper as he bellowed that Chester was "once the home of the archers of Crecy, Poitiers and Agincourt," so he instantly added, "and now is populated by half-blind idiots."

That hardly seems just. Chester's 63,000 people can hardly be blind to perhaps the most amazing hodgepodge of buildings in Britain.

The "Rows" are its most famous feature — a unique system of two-level shops, those at street level topped by others fronting on a kind of open-sided tunnel. The Rows are especially pleasant for shopping or strolling when it rains, as it often does in this Welsh border region.

But a walk through Chester is like a university short course in architectural styles. A Romanesque fortress is a bank, a spired Gothic structure a department store, and everywhere are timbered black-and-white buildings the English call "Tudor," though most of these are beautiful Victorian work of the last century.

Chester is all a city should be, plus one thing most aren't — small. Virtually everything huddles within its walls, which are Roman to a height of 17 feet on their most spectacular section, the northeast corner where a deeply cut Victorian canal makes an impressive moat.

The walkway around the walls is a tourist favorite. Locals use the walls routinely for shortcuts, and at twilight daredevil boys make flat stretches into a cycle racetrack.

Chester mostly hides its ruins and does not trumpet its antiquity, except in the recent year-long celebration of its founding in 79 A.D. as the Roman fortress of Deva. But pride is there, however understated.

"From 1092 to 1541," says a notice in the gracious cathedral, "this was the abbey church of a community of Benedictine monks, who built all you see around you." The cathedral holds a rare portrait painted on cobwebs and a rarer church court room, unchanged even in its furniture since 1653.

Its peoples' charm and humor match its architectural mishmash. Says a sign in a butcher's shop: "Animal Farm — you've read the book and seen the movie, now eat the cast." To get acquainted with Chester's people telephone Mrs. Passeu at 43128 or Mrs. Moon at 48832 and they'll arrange an at-home evening without charge — an idea other British cities could copy.

And twice a day Tom Clarkson gives his "shout" at the intersection of streets still labelled with their Roman names. Bachelor Clarkson says the best part of his "lovely job" comes afterward, when he mixes a bit with his gawping audience.

The 727 - Workhorse Of The Jet Age

By MARTIN HEERWALD

SEATTLE (UPI) — In the summer of 1972 King Hassan II of Morocco was flying over the blue Mediterranean in his royal Boeing 727 trijet, homeward bound to Rabat after a pleasant visit in France.

Suddenly the escorting jet fighter planes of the king's air force turned enemy and attacked, riddling the 727 with cannon, machine gun and rocket fire.

Even though the pilots flying the attacking F5 planes knocked out two of the trijet's engines and one fighter smashed against the 727's tail assembly, the king and his entourage landed safely and the attempted assassination and coup were thwarted.

The Boeing Co. knew it had a tough structure in the 727 — which has become by far the most popular commercial airplane ever built — but its technicians were amazed to find the air frame of the king's badly damaged plane to be intact. They repaired the craft and restored it to service.

In another unplanned test of durability, a TWA 727 with 87 persons aboard was cruising along at 39,000 feet one April evening this year on a flight from New York to Minneapolis. Over Michigan, the aircraft began to behave erratically and plunged into a tight, spiraling dive.

In 58 terrifying seconds, the plane plummeted 34,000 feet — almost at the speed of sound — to an altitude of 5,000 feet.

Investigators for the National Transportation Safety Board credited the quick-thinking pilot for lowering the landing gear to put a brake on the descent, regain control and land at Detroit where three passengers were treated for bruises.

TWA and NTSB inspectors theorized that a slat on the leading edge of one wing somehow became extended in flight, causing the plunge. But they were at a loss to explain why it popped out. They say they may never know.

TWA flew the almost 15-year-old plane to its Kansas City maintenance center and all but took it apart, checking for damage.

"We explored all the primary structures and found no cracks at all," said Norman Parmet, TWA's vice president of engineering and quality assurance.

Langhorne Bond, head of the Federal Aviation Administration, called it a "miracle" that the 727 had held together and said, "Obviously, this airframe is as strong as a brick."

Tough as these two incidents show the 727 to be, the Boeing Co. isn't adding aerial combat and acrobatic warranties to its trijet sales pitch.

Henry S. "Sandy" McMurray, chief test pilot after 31 years with the company, said he and others at Boeing are proud but not surprised over the reliability and toughness of the 727 and the company's other commercial jetliners.

"Boeing always has put a lot of metal in its airframes," said McMurray, "and we test them beyond their commercial performance prior to delivery."

The 727 was the first airplane to benefit from a $30 million Boeing test program to insure through brutal fatigue and static air frame testing that no redesign of production airplanes would be necessary.

When the first 727 was certified for commercial service in December 1963, Boeing spokesman John Wheeler said, the company expected to sell abot 300 of them and turn a tidy profit. The estimate was way off the mark.

The most ubiquitous commercial aircraft in the world today, more than 1,500 727s now link nearly 1,900 pairs of cities with nonstop service in 96 nations. The sun never sets on this trijet, dubbed the "workhorse of the jet age." Every 5.6 seconds one takes off or lands, and at any given moment 320 of them are in the air.

Wheeler said the company fully expects 727 sales to top 2,000 in the next decade and the trijet, which is constantly being refined, still will be performing in the 21st century.

The advent of the airbus figured to be a challenge to the 727 for flights of short to medium range, but Wheeler says it didn't turn out that way.

"In the past three years, the 727 has outsold all of the wide-body airbuses combined by a margin of about three to one," he said.

He said a major reason may be the fact an airline can buy two 727s for the price of one airbus with money left over.

Ultimately, the day of the 727 will give way to a new generation of airplanes, such as the Boeing 757 which promises quieter engines and greater fuel efficiency.

But the 727, which is doing for the jet age what the DC3 did for the era of propeller-driven aircraft, won't relinquish its string of "firsts" — including first certified to be quiet enough to use New York's LaGuardia Airport, first commercial jet to meet the more stringent federal standards for noise, first jetliner to prove it could operate with one engine out from airports as high as 13,358 feet at La Paz, Bolivia.

Kettle Drive Kickoff Set

Friday, the day after Thanksgiving, at 9 a. m., the Salvation Army's Christmas Kettle Campaign will officially get underway in a public "kick-off" ceremony to be held on the Downtown Mall in front of Larry's Shoe Store, 431 S. Evans Street.

Mayor Percy Cox will be present to toss the first dollar in the kettle.

Contributions made to the Salvation Army during the Christmas season support a multi-faceted program of relief aimed at making the holiday brighter for the area's needy citizens.

Salvation Army Maj. Arnold Williford noted that kettle donations buy toys and clothing for children, as well as food for needy families and senior citizens. In addition, the Army's year-round programs of assistance are given a welcome boost, he said.

An Ecumenical Thanksgiving

The annual Ecumenical Thanksgiving Eve worship service sponsored by the Greenville Ministerial Association will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. at Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, 1801 S. Elm St.

This year's Thanksgiving offering will be used to help defray hospital expenses for a local family whose daughter died recently of a rare genetic disease. The child had been hospitalized more than 30 times in two years.

Nurses Taking Calls For Duty

Taking calls for the county private duty nurses' registry are as follows: Anne Barlow, 758-2360, Nov. 19-25; Grace Turner, 756-0375, Nov. 26- Dec. 2; Beulah Haddock, 746-3838, Dec. 3-9.

The nurses listed above may be contacted at home or at work.

Begin Classes On Childbirth

The Greenville Childbirth Educators will begin classes Tuesday, Nov. 20 in the Lamaze Method of Childbirth Education. The series of classes also includes infant nutrition, breast feeding, Caesarean birth, and care of the newborn.

For registration and further information, call 752-3071.

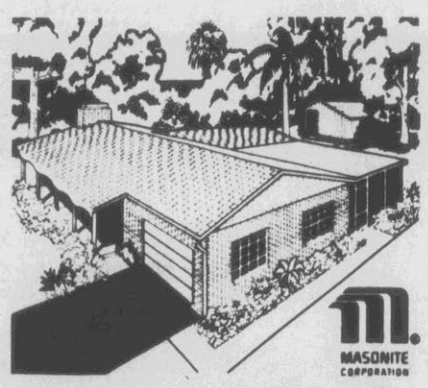

Revival Series Set This Week

GRIMESLAND — Revival services will be held this week at St. Monicao Missionary Baptist Church here with the Rev. Hue Walston of Greenville as the speaker for the week.

Monday night St. Francis Church of Blount's Creek will lead; Tuesday, English Chapel of Greenville; Wednesday, Mount Shiloh of Aurora; Thursday, to be announced; Friday the Rev. Walston's choir; and Sunday morning the regular choir and congregation. The public is invited, says the pastor, the Rev. A. J. White.

PEOPLE DON'T BUY OUR LEAST EXPENSIVE VOLVO BECAUSE IT'S LEAST EXPENSIVE.

If you're looking for a cheap car, finding one is easy. But for a car with the quality, comfort, safety and performance of a Volvo, at the lowest possible price, the only choice is a Volvo 242.
So before you end up getting stuck with a cheaper car, come into our Volvo showroom. It's about the only place left where least can be best. VOLVO VOLVO. AT TODAY'S PRICES, IT'S WORTH A LONG HARD LOOK.
• In addition to the 242, we have a good selection of Volvo 244 and 244SRO models in stock.
• Also - good availability of old-priced 6-cylinder models.

INTRODUCING THE LOWEST PRICED FRONT WHEEL DRIVE.

Corolla Tercel 2-Door Sedan. Lowest in price . . . and Toyota's highest in EPA mileage ratings. And there's plenty of room in this small car – as much front leg room as any other front wheel drive car of any size! Come see for yourself. You'll like the price and the long list of standard features that won't cost you extra.

Corolla Tercel 2-Door Sedan

33 EPA Estimated MPG — 43 EPA Estimated Highway MPG

Remember: Compare this estimate to the EPA Estimated MPG of other vehicles. You may get different mileage depending how fast you drive, weather conditions and trip length. Actual highway mileage will probably be less than the EPA Highway Estimate.

Corolla Tercel Standard features that don't cost you extra:
- Front wheel drive 1.5 liter 4-cylinder SOHC engine
- 4-speed synchromesh transmission
- Power-assisted front disc/rear drum brakes
- Steel-belted radial ply tires
- Side window defoggers
- Reclining hi-back front bucket seats
- Fully transistorized ignition system
- MacPherson strut front suspension
- Welded unitized body construction
- Power-boosted Flo-thru ventilation
- And more . . . and more . . .

N.Y. City Streets A Deadly Playground For Kids

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — This ity's streets are a playground r a fifth of the city's million so school-age kids who don't to school. The games they ay these days are deadly.

A 13-year-old boy with an older youth spot a 17-year-old with a radio. They want it. They take it at gunpoint. The 17-year-old is left, shot dead in the street.

A 15-year-old and a 20-year-old plan to rob an 84-year-old woman's apartment. She is bludgeoned to death, her body burned.

The ugly recital goes on. In nine months in the boroughs of this city, 18 youngsters under 16 were arrested for felony murder, and 36 for attempted murder. The city is shocked at the senselessness, the easy way even 13-year-olds choke off life.

The state passes a law allowing juveniles as young as 13 to be prosecuted in adult courts for violent and capital crimes.

Among the people who have to deal with this sudden epidemic of violence by youngsters is District Attorney Mario Merola of the Bronx.

He points out it's not a New York problem alone. "Kids are committing 50 percent of all the crimes not only in New York City or the Bronx, but throughout the nation."

Merola admits the Bronx is worse than most places. In the last year, the county has had 13 juveniles under 16 who committed 15 homicides. One of the worst involved a 14 and 15-year-old who used fire to light up an attempted burglary. The flames spread after they left and killed seven people.

"When I left the Bronx DA's office in 1964," Merola says, "we had 86 homicides a year. When I came back in 1973, we had 430, a 500 percent increase ... If you look at the statistics, you'll see that younger people are committing adult crimes, much more violent crimes. But so is the entire society."

Not that the actions of society are an excuse for juvenile behavior.

Asst. District Attorney Robert Spadero of Brooklyn, who handles juveniles in the borough quotes a police officer who said "The child of today is not the same that we had around here 15 years ago. They're more violent today."

Merola disagrees that youngsters are different.

"They're the same kids of 15 or 20 years ago. The only difference is that then, if a guy brutalized your girl on Friday or Saturday night, maybe you had a fistfight and maybe you had a black eye or a broken nose. But now what happens is out come the knives and guns and you've got a death."

There are other differences, however. Merola blames the highest divorce rate ever, more working mothers than ever, violence on television and narcotics. And more than any other factor, besides the availability of guns, is the high rate of truancy, he says.

"In New York City they tell me there are something like 200,000 truants a day out of a school population of a million."

Merola recalls that New York used to have a facility called the 600 school for those youngsters who fit neither of the other categories. It was a school for disruptive students.

"You gave them a basketball and you had a physical education teacher who made them play ball all day. If you did all that, you'd reduce crime by half overnight."

Merola also blames the ready availability of guns and other weapons. "They tell me there are something like two million guns in New York City out of eight million people," he says.

New York state's Division of Criminal Justice Services is tabulating the number of youngsters under 16 brought to trial as adults. In a July report, the division reported that "contrary to scare stories" violent 13 to 15-year-olds were just as unlikely to strike out at younger kids as they were to pick on people over the age of 60.

"In fact, they are most likely to pick on kids their own size," the report said, "with 380 of 932 (or almost 41 percent) of the victims between ages 13 and 19."

The various district attorneys are in various stages of discomfort with the new law. It's not easy to bring a 13-year-old to trial.

"Am I in favor of the juvenile law?" Merola repeats. "I don't like the juvenile law. Nobody likes the juvenile law. But what alternatives do you have. There's no alternative. Obviously the way we handled them in the past was totally unsatisfactory.

"So, of course, I end up in favor of it because it is the only thing we have available to us."

Bethel, Alaska, A Throwback To Hospitality Of Old West

By MARY LENZ
Associated Press Writer

BETHEL, Alaska (AP) — With its ramshackle buildings, negligible roads and an eroding waterfront lined by rusting car carcasses, Bethel is one of Alaska's ugly ducklings.

But in terms of people, it may be one of the nation's beauty spots.

Surrounded by miles of featureless tundra, it looks like a western prairie town and shows the same kind of open-handed hospitality.

Rosey Porter, a native of Jersey City, N.J. who edits the local paper, says people are so friendly "they know each other's dog's names and they say hello to the dogs on the street."

"Bethel is like a womb," says city planner Jay Livey of Walnut, Ill. "You don't have the job, career and conformity pressure you have in the Lower 48. You're free to raise a dog team, fish or build a house."

Bethel, population 4,500, is the unofficial capital, transportation center and distribution point for an area the size of Oregon. English is virtually a foreign language, running water scarce, and urban amenities few.

"We qualify as a Third World country, except for the fact that we are part of the United States," says Ms. Porter. "We have a different language — Yupik Eskimo — poverty and Third World health problems."

The delta where the Yukon and Kuskokwim rivers meet the Bering Sea has a greater number of Eskimo villages, about 60, than any other part of the state. City Manager Lyman Hoffman estimates that 85 percent of the region's 24,000 residents are Eskimo. Many speak only Yupik and may not know how to read.

In contrast, the area's white population includes a high proportion of college-educated persons with jobs in state and federal agencies.

Residents joke that Bethel's three main industries are fishing, bootlegging and bureaucracy. The last may be the biggest. Agencies here include the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Federal Aviation Administration, Public Health Service, Fish and Wildlife Service and VISTA. People refer to them by their initials and the habit's so ingrained that youngsters call the ice cream parlor the ICP.

"All the jobs are bureaucratic in one way or another," says Livey, a former VISTA volunteer. "And younger people go further here than they would in the rest of the United States."

In contrast, Earl Chase, an Eskimo employee of the Yukon Kuskokwim Health Center, notes that people need degrees or the ability to speak English to get jobs. Unemployment is rampant in villages, where many residents depend on subsistence hunting for up to 85 percent of their food supply.

For those with jobs, money is good despite high costs. A two bedroom apartment can rent for more than $600 a month. And the price of groceries, flown in from Seattle via Anchorage, is substantial.

Livey says many people make at least $20,000 a year and save most of it because there isn't much to spend it on.

"If you're single and want a car and running water, it would be expensive," Livey says, but adds that many Bethel residents "came fleeing the American dream" and don't mind roughing it.

Roughing it includes ordering your liquor from Anchorage. The town went dry in the early 1970s and has no bars or liquor stores. City officials say 90 percent of the area's crime and violence is alcohol-related. Home brewing is legal, however, and bootlegging amounts to a $3 million business.

But while liquor still flows fairly freely, water doesn't. Most families have water hauled in and sewage out. Difficulties of laying pipe in soggy tundra make the outhouse and the septic tank far more common than the flush toilet.

Bethel has a movie theater and two sit-down restaurants, a popular little discotheque, cross-countryskiing, basketball tournaments, dog-mushing and bingo.

Blanche Jacobs, who works at the Yukon Kuskowim Health Center, has another perspective on Bethel.

"I'm a black person from South Philadelphia," she says. "There was lots of racial tension and you grew up with walls to protect yourself."

But, when she moved to Alaska as a VISTA volunteer, she says, she found acceptance by the Eskimos. She says the Eskimo villagers "have a whole lot of things that are missing from our society. The people work together and share things."

She cites the case of two little girls in a village school who did everything together — from homework to taking tests. When the teacher tried to separate them for an exam, they refused. "Down here," she says, "people help each other."

Says city planner Livey: "It's dawned on me that Bethel seems at times like a colonial society." The bureaucracy, he says, is so visible here because "you don't have the middle level of industry, factories and business that other places have." He enjoys life surrounded by Eskimo culture. "They look at the world completely differently and that's fun," he says. "It makes Bethel a good place."

In Hot Water, And Very Happy

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — The East African country of Kenya is in hot water these days but is very happy about it.

Surveys financed by the United Nations' Development Program have disclosed that a valley near Nairobi contains enough underground steam for the generation of steam on a commercial scale.

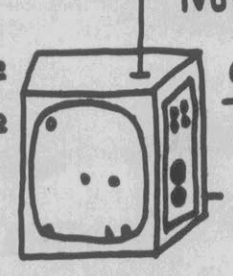

The government is now negotiating with the World Bank for a loan which would permit the construction of two generating units in the region, about 45 miles northwest of the Kenyan capital.

They would be the first geothermal power stations in Africa.

Take the ALL NEW T.V. Eye Test
November 18th - 6:00 P.M. on Ch.9 WNCT-TV

You may think your vision is normal. Or you may suspect an eye problem. But if you haven't had a professional eye exam lately, you can't be sure. Tune to Channel 9 — Sunday November 18th - 6:00 P.M. and take an important step to find out. The T.V. test cannot take the place of a professional eye exam. This is just a screening. But it can tell you if it's important that you do get a complete eye exam.

The eye test has been developed especially for television in California by Stanford University eye doctors, under support from the National Society to Prevent Blindness.

It has been brought to you as a public service by WNCT-TV — Channel 9 and N.C. Society to Prevent Blindness.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem.

While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area.

If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet.

Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form, which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

TOILETRIES FOR MEN

South Boston Still Pretty Much Kennedy Country

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

BOSTON (UPI) — Joe McDonough, 80, John King, 67, and Joe Shannon, 62, stand on the sidewalk by the drug store on the sunny side of Flood Square of a Sunday morning.

It's the quiet hour after services at the Roman Catholic Church of the Gate of Heaven and before the televised football game. This is a time three gentlemen of south Boston, "Southie" as they call it, in the heart of Sen. Ted Kennedy's solid North, can devote to political thought.

The thinking might be more Archie Bunker than Thomas Aquinas but is none the less genuine for all that. Shannon prefers Kennedy for President: "Better to stay with the devil you know than to adopt a new one."

King nods. "I'm hot and cold on Teddy. Hasn't done much for us as senator. That's the cold. The hot part is that he's Irish."

"Being Irish doesn't hurt in Southie," McDonough said.

South Boston is a triangle of two and three-story wooden frame houses, mostly white and decorated with straw-haired children often named Kevin or Katie or Joseph or Mary. Dogs are waist-high and wag their tails in canine giggling.

Streets surfaces are generally smoother than further north, such as just below the Back Bay's Copley Square where fewer residents, thus fewer voters, thus smaller political clout, are making do with some of the bumpiest avenues of autodom.

The Sunday quiet could be deceptive. This is the Southie where blacks are being bused into a high school that is a symbol of this neighborhood's white togetherness.

Like ethnic neighborhoods anywhere, Southie wears its pride. Bumper stickers on the well-washed cars parked at well-cleaned curbs in this well-scrubbed neighborhood proclaim cultural life.

One sticker says "Disc Jockeys For All Occasions." Others boast of "Pope John Tigers," a school team, and "Boston Red Sox" and "Boston Patriots," professional teams in a world of sport in which residents bank the pride their forebears might have given to feudal lords.

Another sticker indicates the issue that has threatened South Boston with the national image of a 1950s Little Rock or a 1960s Selma, Ala. The Southie sticker says, "Save Gas — Stop Forced Busing."

Wilder political emotion shows in Southie streets. Pasted to a wall is a crude announcement that Bernadette Devlin, once a darling of anti-British Irish feeling, was to speak; but a socialist clenched fist in black is on the poster and much of the paper has been ripped off in this neighborhood where Marx is all Groucho.

Tucked under windshield wipers are pamphlets of a more local fringe. Listed are candidates either to have been supported or nixed in Boston's city council and school committee election earlier this month. Sampling: "Elvira 'Pixie' Palladino, strong anti-busing candidate who deserves Southie's vote...Barbara Ware, a black (underlined), no friend of South Boston. Beware (underlined) ... Louise Day Hicks, Southie's First Lady, enough said ... James Brett, former aide to Ted Kennedy, number one enemy of Southie..."

Women, teen-age boys in letter jackets, some men, too, are turning the corner at East Fourth and H Streets, returning from the tan brick and red stone Gate of Heaven Church that towers over the area like a cathedral in a Gothic town.

A boy bounces a tennis ball colored green — Southie streets are all emerald aisles — and it lodges among the anti-pigeon barbs one story up the front of the church. It might not happen at St. Peter's in Vatican City or even St. Patrick's in Manhattan; but this is South Boston and the Gate of Heaven is a neighborhood fact of life, like the Irish-American police who are waved at and wave back, like the naming of "squares" in these ethnic parts.

Flood Square has no trees. It has no park, no grass, no asphalt or cement. It is not an architectural square. It is a streetcorner but is named Flood Square because south Bostonians wanted to honor an Irish-American mayor and insisting on a fountain and garden would have been picky-picky as well as impossible in this tight little island of a neighborhood with no vacant lots.

The crossing of East Fourth and H Streets might be viewed as naught but an intersection with frame houses on three corners and the brick home of the south Boston telephone works on the fourth. But, here, it, too, is officially a square.

One street sign pole is topped with a plate saying the grassless intersection is "Edward M. Sullivan Square." On the corner wall of the telephone works is a bronze plaque showing the face of Marine Pfc. Sullivan and the Vietnam War era life and death dates 11-22-48 and 6-9-68.

It feeds in Southie the sort of band-of-brothers ethnic atmosphere of solidarity sensed on the Catholic side of Belfast's Boyne Bridge, on the Protestant side of the battlefield span, in Los Angeles' Watts neighborhood, in Jerusalem's Hassidic Jewish quarter, in San Francisco's Chinatown.

Michael Campbell — "I'm Scotch but I'm Catholic" — is 16 and tieless and in his Sunday-best sports jacket and coming out of the Gate of Heaven. "Southie is what's best. Everyone sticks together.

"Down the street there was a housefire and even before the firemen came, the neighbors came with shelter, clothing and food. Southie is not just me. It's we."

By the drug store, the three retired gentlemen of Southie talked of dream and reality. "Ay, and the best of life was James Michael Curley. Sure, there might have been some thieving when James Michael was mayor but if there were pickings, it was shared with the people."

"The most beautiful thing in Boston is the waterfront. Curley was next."

Curley was the "Last Hurrah" mayor of Boston, once elected from prison, gaudy product of the Irish-American political explosion from which came the Fitzgeralds and the Kennedys.

McDonough nodded. "Pleasant Bay, the waterfront, ah, there's beauty. And Curley, what wonderful man."

Shannon said, "I asked Ted once, some years ago, when the government is going to give a bonus to World War II veterans like they gave to World War I vets. Kennedy said the bonus would come when times are tough.

"Well, times are tough now."

The trio discussed issues — welfare, foreign spending, energy, medical care, inflation. Their views seemed more Ronald Reagan or even Jimmy Carter than Ted Kennedy. But how would they vote?

King said, "Teddy might not be the best. But he's one of us. God love him.

Found 3 Coins In Man's Leg

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — When Giancarlo Hazoni had his left thigh broken in a 1974 auto accident, the bone healed but he was left with a limp.

When the same thigh was broken again recently, surgeons found three coins imbedded in the flesh of his thigh.

The impact of the first accident had forced the coins through his trouser pocket and pressed them so deeply into the open wound they were hidden from sight when the bone was set.

SUCCESSFUL TAKEOFF

DRACHTEN, Netherlands (AP) — Six young women caught stealing curtains took to their heels, pursued by several angry men. As the women ran, they began stripping, leaving their clothes behind them.

The men were so embarrassed they gave up the chase and let the thieves escape — still clutching the stolen curtains.

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Cherrywood

Bermed Design Conserves Energy

By Jerry Bishop

Designed to save energy summer and winter alike, the Cherrywood, a handsome three bedroom contemporary, is a semi-underground plan that calls for soil bermed up to the cornices on sides and back.

The plan takes advantage of the insulating value of soil and also features an airlock vestibule and a well-windowed facade, with southern exposure to capture plenty of sunlight. Rear and side window wells allow for emergency exits.

With all its energy efficiency, however, the plan primarily stresses livability. A 28-ft. great room merges with the dining area and corridor kitchen for an airy effect, and three large bedrooms share two full baths. The double garage opens into a functional mudroom.

Entry is via a terrace and into the vestibule, closeted and closed off to keep cold air from penetrating the interior. Directly ahead is the corridor kitchen, leading to the mudroom at rear. The layout of the plan allows groceries or parcels to be carried from garage to mudroom or kitchen conveniently and without letting heat escape through open doors. Also included in the mudroom is a utility closet, pantry, storage closet, and space for laundry equipment.

At left of the kitchen, the impressive great room and dining area are warmed by a woodburning fireplace. The entire area is open, spacious, and well-windowed and is definitely set as the focus of family activity.

Bedrooms are behind living areas and include a 13-ft. master bedroom with two closets and private bath.

Wood Furniture Clinging To Traditional Styles

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Home Furnishings Writer

Americans are known for their belief in the future. But it looks as though American manufacturers of wood furniture had the past in mind when they decided on new designs seen at the recent national furniture market in North Carolina.

Traditional furniture introductions were made at the fall session of the twice-yearly market which assembles retailers and manufacturers for a week-long orgy of shopping and shoptalk.

Most of the retailers' choices will be seen by consumers starting in the spring of 1980.

Major wood-furniture producers introduced large, new collections based on Italian, French, English and American styles of the 18th and 19th centuries.

Among design elements observed frequently was the combination of at least two woods of different colors in a single piece. Generally, darker-colored woods banded or trimmed furniture made of lighter-colored wood.

Dressy ornamentation, almost like dressmaker detailing on clothing, was a feature of many new pieces. An effect used often was inlaying of several woods to form a design. The inlaying was real in expensive furniture and pretend, using a variety of methods, in less expensive furniture.

Also quite common were painted decorative motifs, brass trim and combinations of brass and moulding. At least three manufacturers ornamented china cabinets and other pieces with crackled glass.

In prior years, chrome furniture and chrome trim on wood furniture showed up at all price levels and in all styles. This year, the chrome was replaced by brass. Brass accessories and brass accents on furniture were seen in almost every showroom.

Does this mean that chrome is out? Not on your life! The American home-furnishings market, with its tens of thousands of suppliers and retailers, offers an exceptionally wide choice of merchandise. Though some styles may occasionally be hard to find, nothing ever really disappears completely.

If anything was hard to find, it was interesting, new modern designs. There were some. But the larger manufacturers concentrated on traditional furniture at the expense of modern.

Among noteworthy new modern groups, however, is a collection of tables and dining storage pieces by Paul Evans for Selig Mfg. Co. Evans borrowed the traditional craft technique of reverse painting on glass. But he did his reverse painting on plexiglass. And instead of the traditional stylized scene, he spatter-painted the clear acrylic sheets with free-form splashes and dots. The effect is a bit like a Jackson Pollock painting.

The acrylic tables and buffets are available in solid colors too, such as ivory, brown, dark green and red.

At other markets in recent years, furniture that consumers take home in a box and assemble themselves has been increasingly popular, especially in stripped-down, modern styles. This time, there were new examples of self-assembled furniture. But some of the new designs are traditional, not modern.

"Our retailer customers asked us to make ready-to-assemble, traditional furniture," said Bruce Perlo, president of Sugar Hill Furniture. The company did just that.

The demand for traditional, self-assembled furniture indicates the growing acceptability of this type of furniture to American consumers, said Perlo.

Consumers like the furniture because it is less expensive. There is a saving of at least 11 percent, which represents what it costs to deliver furniture to a customer's home, said Perlo. Savings are usually greater, since it costs retailers less to stock, knock-down (or KD in industry terminology) furniture.

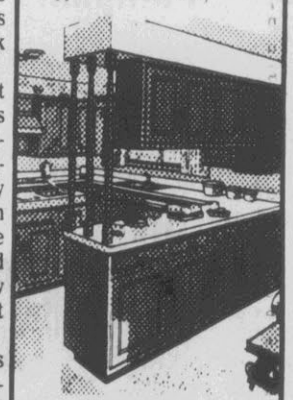

Wall systems and modular furniture are growing in popularity each year. At the recently concluded market, traditional-styled stacking furniture and wall systems were introduced by a number of manufacturers.

Although French, Italian or early American stacking furniture is incongruous in theory, in practice the furniture is attractive. Even more important, its storage capacity and flexibility make stacking furniture highly desirable to consumers, no matter what style furniture they prefer.

A builder in New Hampshire comes up with this interesting opinion — that even if you put 18 feet of insulation in the walls and ceilings, windows and cold-air infiltration will still account for two-thirds of the heat loss in your home.

"Glass has no insulation value," says Rodney Wright, vice president of Continental Homes, "unless it contains dead space between the panes. Triple-glazed or storm windows will help reduce the heat loss through glass, but the remaining one-third of the heat loss is often overlooked and the least expensive to remedy."

Wright suggests that an outlay of between $15 and $20 for caulking is sometimes all that is necessary to seal the areas where cold air infiltrates. In checking to determine where those areas are, he warns not to overlook places where there is utility access, such as electrical wiring, water pipes and even the exhaust vent for dryers.

The latest entry in the field of developing communities that cater to people with special tastes is the one going up around the Wellington Aero Club in West Palm Beach, Fla. This one features homesites and one-family houses adjacent to a private airstrip. It is geared to meet the needs of airplane owners, business executives on the go or just flying buffs who would like the convenience of having their own aircraft parked at the house. Also offered will be service, rentals, charters and primary or advance flight training. Since the homesites are oriented around a 4,000-foot reinforced turf airstrip, it will actually be possible to park a plane next to a house in a kind of garage-hangar.

In his new book, "Attention to Detail," Herbert Wise brings out a point he has observed from his own experience and those of other persons who have had houses built and homes remodeled. He says the "near-universal distrust of building contractors arises less from incompetence and cornercutting than from a basic failure to communicate, to spell everything out."

Wise goes on to say: "Of all the classic responses a contractor will give you when something turns out less than perfect, the most common (and the truest) is that he didn't know you wanted it that way. When you hear that, you are in for a good deal of disappointment, frustration and antipathy and, if you want the job done right, additional expense. To insure that you don't have those problems, be meticulously thorough the first time around."

Wills Do More Than 'Bequeath'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Wills do more than pass on family assets to relatives and friends. They can keep a family business operating, name guardians for minor children or create trusts to care for them until the children are old enough to control family assets themselves.

Careful estate planning with a will can also help minimize legal costs and taxes.

A recent government publication contains tips on how to do all these things, and more. To order the free booklet, write for Providing for Your Heirs — Non-Sale Property Transfers, Consumer Information Center, Dept. 677G, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Take Wrench In Hand

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Many an average American consumer is taking wrench in hand these days to repair home plumbing.

A study by a Cleveland business information and market research firm indicates do-it-yourself plumbers will represent a $3 billion retail market by 1990.

By then, do-it-yourselfers are expected to account for one-fourth of the more than $6 billion in manufacturers' sales of fixtures and fittings — an 18 percent increase from the last year's total.

The study by Predicats, Inc. says two factors are responsible: the scarcity of professional plumbers and their rising labor charges.

Millions Suffer From Insomnia

CHICAGO (UPI) — About 15 to 20 million Americans suffer chronically from insomnia, according to a recent report in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Drs. Thomae J. Coates and Carl E. Thoresen of Stanford University reported that non-prescription medications have little impact on insomnia, except for "placebo" effects, and hypnotic drugs obtained by prescription often lead to dependence, tolerance and escalating doses. They said the inability to sleep stems from an inability to relax physically and mentally at bedtime, and that procedures such as progressive relaxation, self-hypnosis, meditation, and biofeedback can help.

COSTS AND EFFECT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A 25 percent increase in wheat prices would add less to the cost of a loaf of bread than would a 4 percent increase in processing and distribution costs for that loaf, says the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Juliette Low In Hall Of Fame

SENECA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — Juliette Gordon Low, who brought Girl Scouting to the United States from England in 1912, is among the latest additions to the outstanding American women in the Women's Hall of Fame in Seneca Falls.

She organized the first troop in Savannah, Ga., with 18 members. Today there are over 3 million girls and adults in the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.

The Women's Hall of Fame was founded in 1969 "to honor in perpetuity those women, citizens of the United States of America, whose contributions to the arts, athletics, business, education, government, the humanities, philanthropy and science, have been of greatest value for the development of their country."

Jazz A Popular Music Form In Buenos Aires

By RODOLFO A. WINDHAUSEN
Associated Press Writer

If an American tourist visits Buenos Aires, Argentina's exciting capital, he'll want to keep his ears as well as his eyes open.

For in that Paris-like, large South American city, with a population of around 9 million, tango is not the only kind of music to be heard in cabarets, nightclubs and theaters.

Some of the well-reputed Argentine musicians delight visitors with the very familiar sounds of jazz. It's an art form that Argentines have been worshipping for decades. And it's a tradition all by itself.

A glance at local newspapers provides invaluable insight into the wheres and whens of jazz in Buenos Aires. Last year, the city featured more than 40 amateur and professional jazz groups regularly performing in about 50 different "spots" during its hectic March through November musical season.

Buenos Aires' commercial and state-owned radio networks broadcast at least half a dozen regular jazz programs, while television stations periodically schedule jazz shows, mostly late at night, with local performers.

There are several very old fan clubs which keep a long chain of festivals and concerts swinging all over the city.

Cesar Parisi, an auctioneer whose passion for jazz runs back 25 years to his adolescence, currently leads one of these semiprofessional organizations, Club de Jazz.

Founded in the mid-1970s, Club de Jazz features every season a wide spectrum of Argentine jazz artistry, from traditional to avant garde. Its live concerts are held at some of the most fashionable halls in town. Last year, Parisi says, he presented more than 400 concerts, using 100 performers, in Buenos Aires and in the jazz-booming summer resorts of Necochea and Mar del Plata on the Atlantic coast.

This year, Club de Jazz will present a series of concerts to introduce less-known jazzmen from all over the country to the capital's audience.

One competitor is Hot Club Argentino, now on the verge of its 35th anniversary, which has encouraged the development of traditional jazz groups. From their ranks have come many orchestras, like Portena Jazz Band led by cornetist Martin Muller. La Portena, as it is popularly known, has been active playing a repertoire from Fletcher Henderson to Fats Waller for more than a decade, getting standing ovations throughout Latin America and even in a jazz festival in Holland and on Swiss TV.

Another group which has performed outside the country is the New Orleans Jazz Band, which performed for almost 20 years in its native Mendoza, a Californian-looking city which leans on the slopes of the Andes, 550 miles west of Buenos Aires.

A few years ago, the group played before Victor Shapiro, a former mayor of New Orleans, who was amazed at the sounds produced by musicians who had never been in the United States. The band performed in 1977 at the Newport Jazz Festival in New York, receiving critical raves.

FEC Slow In Reaction

By PETER A. BROWN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Election Commission, a new cop on the beat four years ago, is far better prepared to police the 1980 presidential campaign, but it probably still can't stop a crime in progress.

Commissioners and candidates alike agree that the FEC, created to prevent abuses like those committed in Richard Nixon's 1972 campaign (and a number of campaigns before it), is better prepared than four years ago to monitor and regulate the financing of the presidential election.

"It was a whole new experience," says Joan Aikens, an FEC commissioner since 1975. "We're much better prepared. There were a lot of mistakes made and lessons learned in 1976. Basically we are just better organized and we know what we are doing."

"I'm satisfied it will be a difference between night and day between 1976 and 1980," says Vice Chairman Max Friedersdorf, appointed to the FEC earlier this year.

All agree the sheer size and pace of presidential campaigns makes day to day regulation impossible. The best the FEC can do, the commissioners concede, is to provide guidance for candidates trying to follow the law and check for compliance after the elections.

That means the FEC might miss some violations during the relatively short campaign period, but catch up to them during the exhaustive audit and investigtion period after the elections. And the commission concedes that could mean a lawbreaker could win the election and not be called to account until after he has taken office.

But the commissioners say there is a danger of going too far in trying to control a process in which — like love and war — all was fair until three years ago.

"Up until the elections of 1976, before the FEC, you didn't have any restraints at all," Friedersdorf says. "I don't think you can go from a totally unrestrained situation to a fully restrained one. Where do you draw the line?"

"I don't want us to be so restrictive in our regulations that we make people drop out of the process," says Mrs. Aikens.

"Maximum compliance with the least amount of interference with the campaign, I think that's the top priority of the commission," agrees Friedersdorf.

The job is especially difficult because it requires a slow moving bureaucracy — working with a minutely detailed law — to monitor a fast-moving process in which new developments emerge and fade every day.

The law that created the FEC was passed "as a consequence of the Watergate activities (of Nixon's 1972 campaign) which had enormous sums of money, more than it knew what to do with and spent the money for all kinds of improper activities," says Thomas Harris, another original commissioner still on the job.

"That has not been true since. Once the limits on contributions were enacted and limits on what a candidate can spend were in place there is no great danger funds will be diverted," he says. "In a sense I think the law is fighting the last war rather than the next one."

In recent months, two potential loopholes have caused new problems for the FEC, leading Chairman Robert O. Tiernan to agree with Harris' analysis.

But Tiernan, the third original member of the commission still in office, sees no way around it: "When you set out these parameters there is always a novel situation you don't expect. But aside from that I hope everything is pretty much in place."

Mrs. Aikens calls the reporting requirements "overwhelming" and "tedious in parts," while Harris calls them "unrealistic." In 1976 Gerald Ford's campaign spent $800,000 complying with FEC filing requirements.

So even with a larger staff and a campaign under its belt, it is unclear if the FEC can anticipate all the potential problems it may face.

And the larger question remains: What, if anything, could the FEC do to stop an unscrupulous candidate who didn't care if he was caught after winning the presidency.

The FEC was created in 1975 to regulate the financing of all "federal" elections — for Congress and president. It was authorized to dispense matching funds on a one-to-one basis to candidates able to raise $5,000 in individual contributions of $250 or less in 20 states.

The commission has six members, evenly divided between the major parties and appointed by the president. The original law gave a share of the appointment power to party leaders in Congress, but the Supreme Court said that was unconstitutional.

Much of the original staff came from agencies that had played a role in overseeing congressional campaigns, mostly from the Government Accounting Office and House and Senate clerks' offices. In addition the FEC sought out a number of people who had worked on the Watergate investigations.

The FEC began the 1976 campaign in fine style, but the Supreme Court decision temporarily put the FEC out of business and threw the campaign into a tailspin.

Congress passed a new law and the FEC was reconstituted, but by that time candidates' matching funds had been cut off. The FEC had to play "catch-up" the rest of the year.

The agency's budget has grown from $6.2 million in 1976 to a projected $8.6 million for 1980. The staff in those four years has grown from 160 full-time employees to more than 250 workers.

Unlike the millions of federal dollars given to candidates to run their campaigns, the money for the FEC budget comes from general tax dollars.

The money given candidates comes from a fund filled by taxpayers who check off a box on their income tax returns saying they would like $1 of their taxes to go for that purpose.

"They're doing a far better job this time," says Robert Visser, who handled legal matters for President Ford's 1976 re-election team and now has the same job for Republican contender George Bush.

"We now have detailed regulations, clear rules and guidance we did not have last time and a new manual which tells lawyers and accountants what they are expected to do. It's a far simpler process for us this time."

Still, the FEC has been heavily criticized, especially for taking three years to finish auditing the finances of the 1976 presidential candidates.

"Perhaps the fact that on particular issues we sometimes find ourselves criticized by both ends of the political spectrum means we are on the right course," says FEC General Counsel William C. Oldaker.

One of the other major problems, commissioners concede, is having to follow time-consuming guidelines to answer important questions during relatively short campaigns. But they see no way around it.

"A government agency has to proceed with procedural regularity. We have to give notice of hearings, much of this is written in the statutes. There is no real way this can be done in any short period of time and I think the procedure is reasonable," says Harris.

Still the delays make life miserable in some cases for the campaign organizations who more than almost anything else value certainty, says Visser.

"It takes too long to get a formal ruling, there should be a way to expedite the hearing process," says Visser.

He says the FEC "is loath to give you guidance of a binding nature," although some staff members are willing to give informal opinions. And formal rulings, he says, just take too long.

A NEW ELECTRIC CAR — An experimental electric vehicle was unveiled recently in Milwaukee by the Briggs & Stratton Corp. The new car can be driven by either its electric motor or an 18-horsepower gasoline engine or by both together to produce variable gas mileage from 25 to 150 miles per gallon, according to the company. The car sports six wheels; the rear two wheels support the 1,000-pound battery pack. The car was designed to hold two full bags of groceries as well as two adults and two children. (AP Laserphoto)

The Bee Gees At Work And Play

Bee Gees At Work And Play 11-18

There are probably very few people in the world who don't know about the sensational success of The Bee Gees over the past 22 years.

But, outside of the obviously autobiographical nature of their music, the real Barry, Maurice and Robin Gibb are nowhere near as well known and exposed as their public images might be.

And that's what "The Bee Gees Special" is all about. The show, airing Wednesday, Nov. 21 (9:30 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV) delves deeply into their personal lives, as well as their music.

Film clips of the three with their families make the special truly unique. Through these clips, along with interviews with David Frost, viewers will see the relationships of the close-knit family, including their wives and children, their parents, Hugh and Barbara, and a younger brother, Andy.

"I know that our special will be reaching a vast audience, some of which may be new to our music,," says Robin. "But I'm particularly happy that it will be showing my family at home — my wife Molly, daughter Melissa, 5, and my son Spencer, who is 7. We photographed this portion of the program in Surrey, England."

The show — the group's first American TV network headliner — traces The Bee Gees from their truly humble beginning as their eventual worldwide superstardom.

There will also be flashbacks to the group's beginnings, showing them in Australia singing their first big hit, "Spicks and Specks," and in England during the late 1960s singing the now-classic "Massachusetts."

Viewers are also treated to a behind-the-scenes look at the evolution of a song — the worldwide hit, "Tragedy" — from its beginnings as a basic material track through its recording and live performance in concert.

Taped at various locations, the group is seen singing some of their greatest hits in concert at the Oakland (Calif.) Coliseum.

There's also a get together with guest stars Willie Nelson and Glen Campbell for a medley of favorite country songs.

One can't help but wonder — how have The Bee Gees sustained their stardom? "The songwriting is a key," says Robin.

THE BEE GEES ON CAMERA — The internationally popular Bee Gees — Maurice (l), Robin (seated) and Barry — take viewers along on their tour of the United States when they star in "The Bee Gees Special" on NBC-TV Wednesday, Nov. 21 (9:30-11 p.m.).

'Why A Conductor?'

"Why a Conductor?," a New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert, will be broadcast on "The CBS Festival of Lively Arts for Young People" series, Sunday, Nov. 18 (5 to 6 p.m. on CBS-TV).

Beverly Sills is hostess-commentator for the concert, repeating an assignment she held for several seasons. Zubin Mehta, newly appointed music director of the New York Philharmonic, conducts the orchestra. Violinist Isaac Stern makes a special appearance.

"Why a Conductor?" has Sills and maestro Mehta discussing and demonstrating why an orchestra needs a conductor. There was a time when orchestras did not. Then, around the Handel era, orchestras began developing, and the first conductor became prominent. The concerto, a musical form in which the soloist both performed and conducted, is also explored. Stern demonstrates the form with the last movement from the Mozart Concerto in G. Among other elements examined are the art of communication between conductor and musician and how a conductor handles a complicated score. The concert concludes with a bedazzled young member of the audience conducting the Philharmonic orchestra.

Among other works used as illustration are Handel's "Water Music," Johann Strauss Jr.'s "Tritsh-Tratsch Polka," Wagner's "Ride of the Valkyries" and Stravinsky's "The Rite of Spring."

After a stunning career as one of the world's great coloratura sopranos, Beverly Sills became co-director of the New York City Opera this year. She made her Metropolitan debut in 1975, as Pamira in "The Siege of Corinth," the same work in which she scored such a great personal success in her La Scala debut. A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., she joined the New York City Opera in 1955. In 1966, she appeared in that company's production of Handel's "Julius Caesar" and embarked on an international career. After gaining stellar status with the New York City Opera, Sills was heard in nearly all of the world's major opera houses.

ISAAC STERN makes a special appearance on "Why a Conductor?," a New York Philharmonic Young People's Concert, Sunday, Nov. 18 (5-6 p.m.) on CBS.

Swift's Satire Airs

A new animated version of Jonathan Swift's famous satire, "Gulliver's Travels," will be broadcast on CBS-TV's "Famous Classic Tales," Sunday, Nov. 18 (4 to 5 p.m.).

"Gulliver's Travels" is the story of an impoverished sailor whose search for fortune takes him to a fantastic world that in many ways is an exaggerated mirror of his English homeland.

Soon after setting out, Gulliver is shipwrecked on a strange island. He awakens from an exhausted sleep to find himself prisoner of a race of tiny people, the Lilliputians. Mystified and terrified by this 'giant' in their midst, the rival factions among the Lilliputians soon strive to find ways to use him to their own advantage.

Escaping the constant danger of Lilliput, Gulliver finds himself on another island, where his position is reversed. Here, the inhabitants are all giants who find Gulliver an amusing oddity. At first forced to perform for the curious by a brutal.

Special Visit

Charles M. Schulz, creator of the Peanuts comic strip and the Peabody and multi-Emmy Award-winning series of animated Peanuts specials presented on CBS-TV was the guest of President Jimmy Carter at the White House recently. Schulz's visits was in conjunction with his role as National Chairman of the 1979 Christmas Seal Drive.

Following a tour of the White House Garden with President, Mrs. Carter and their daughter, Amy, Schulz previewed a new animated short subject about the drive for them in the White House screening room.

The film, in which Schulz's most famous Peanut character, Charlie Brown, and the rest of the pint-size cartoon characters explain in their own simple, poignant and perceptive fashion the meaning of Christmas.

An Assassination Plot

"The Thirteenth Day: The Story of Esther" airs on ABC-TV Sunday, Nov. 18 (7 to 8 p.m.). The moving biblical drama is about a young queen who must single-handedly defend both herself and her people from annihilation after a revenge-minded advisor to the king convinces him that she must die.

Olivia Hussey, Tony Musant and Harris Yulin star.

Haman (Yulin), the tyrannical prime minister of King Ahaseurus (Musante), sees his plot to assassinate the king thwarted by a Jew. To gain revenge, Haman convinces the king that the Jews are a threat to his reign and that they all must be killed. Unknown to either Haman or the king, Esther (Hussey), the beautiful new queen, is a Jew. As the king's order cannot be reversed, Esther must find a way to prevent the annihilation of her people.

Others in the cast are Nehemiah Persoff as Mordecai, Elizabeth Shepherd as Hagai, Erica Yohn as Sura, Kario Salem as Dalphon, Tom Troupe as Teresh and Ted Wass as Simon.

OLIVIA HUSSEY and Tony Musante are caught in the currents of palace jealousies and intrigues in "The Story of Esther," a Biblical drama airing on ABC, Sunday, Nov. 18 (7-8 p.m.).

Never Too Busy

"There are people in this town who are convinced that Michael Landon has been cloned — that there are at least five copies of him running around."

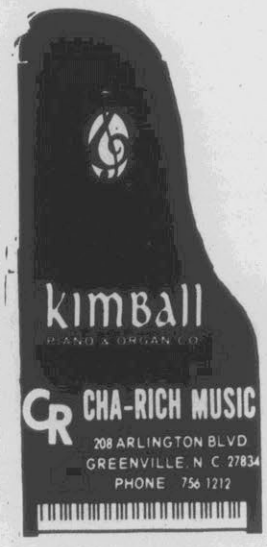

So says Ted Voightlander, the Emmy-Award winning Director of Photography on "Little House on the Prairie." A special three-hour presentation of the series (Sunday, Nov. 18, 7 p.m. on NBC-TV) will present classic scenes from the hit series.

"He's the busiest man I've ever known, probably because he's also the most generous with his time. In addition to being the star and executive producer of the show, he also directs every other segment, and writes a great number of them. And still he finds time to spend hours and hours helping people who want to get ahead in this business."

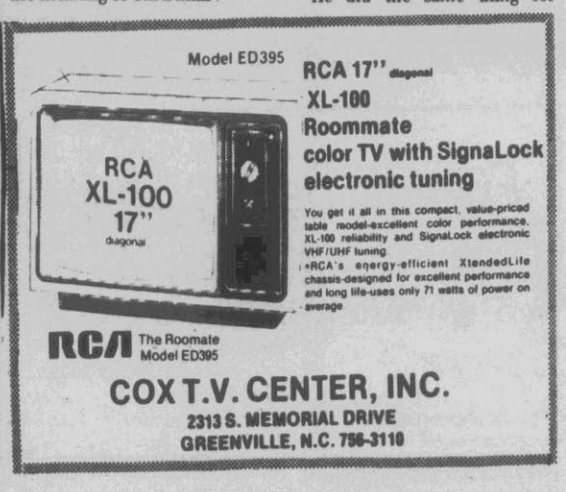

A camera operator who had never written a word in script-form recently mentioned to Landon that he had an idea for a script. Landon spent evenings and weekends working with the man until he had prepared a script that was used on the show.

He did the same thing for Richalene Kelsay, the show's wardrobe woman. He worked with her until she had a shooting script.

"Another crew member who works on the show as a stand-in mentioned to Michael that she was interested in becoming a make-up artist," said Voightlander. "He took every opportunity to show her the do's and don'ts of make-up, got her into make-up school, and showed her reels of film to point out how makeup helped or hurt this actress or actor."

Soul Visits Israel

David Soul has just returned from a week in Israel, where he received a prize as the most popular actor in Israeli TV. The two longest-runing American series in that country are "Starsky & Hutch" and "Hawaii Five-O." The two other popular series shown there — but alternating with each other every week — are "The Muppet Show" and "All In the Family."

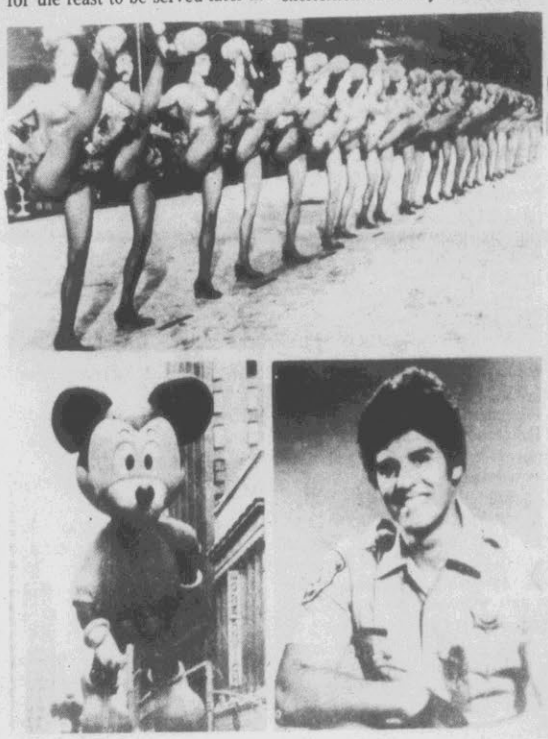

Annual Holiday Treat

Television has had a considerable impact on America's oldest holiday, Thanksgiving. Before the days of the small tube, Thanksgiving meant an enormous feast, a time to visit with relatives and loved ones, and possibly heading for a football game.

Today, thanks to television, the morning of this all-important day means more than just preparing for the feast to be served later in the day. To be sure, the kitchen is still the busiest room in the house. But chances are that there's also a lot of activity around the TV set. That's because of the parades in various cities across the nations.

This year, just as they've done for years, both CBS and NBC will be televising highlights of these parades (9 a.m. to 12-noon).

Ed McMahon will again be sharing with viewers the fun and excitement of Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade when he hosts NBC's coverage of the star-filled festivities. Incidentally, this is the 28th year the network has televised Macy's event.

THE RADIO CITY MUSIC HALL ROCKETTES, the gigantic Mickey Mouse float and Erik Estrada are all set to take part in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, televised by NBC, Thursday, Nov. 22 (9 a.m.-12 noon).

Other well-known personalities who'll be joining McMahon as associate hosts are Sandy Duncan, Erik Estrada, comedian Buddy Hackett, Bob Keeshan and Chuck Woolery.

William Conrad will anchor several parades from New York for CBS, and there'll be an array of the network's stars working with Conrad from each parade site to provide colorful and informative commentary on the events.

Jack Lord will host his hometown parade, the Aloha Floral Parade, in Hawaii, and John Schneider, along with Victoria Principal, will be on hand for Macy's Parade in New York.

In Detroit to point out highlights of the 53rd annual J.L. Hudson Parade will be Gregory Harrison and Judy Norton-Taylor. And Tim Reid and Howard Hesseman are hosting the Eaton's Santa Claus Parade from Toronto.

Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade will feature 11 marching bands, eight six-story balloons, 27 floats (eight new this year) and, undoubtedly, thousands of youngsters lining the route, smiling and awe-struck as the parade captures their imaginations.

A Search For The Truth

For her sixteenth birthday, Annie Armstrong makes a very unusual request of her adoptive mother and father — she wishes to trace her background and find her real parents - in "I Don't Know Who I Am." The new, hour-long "NBC Special Treat" for young people will be presented Tuesday, Nov. 20 (4 p.m.).

In the drama, Annie finds herself researching old records, questioning officials, and following up every possible lead in a hunt that finally brings her some knowledge about the person who gave birth to her. Her search provides her with answers about the real meaning of family.

Annie (Susan Meyers) has been raised in a wonderful family. She works closely with her father (Joe Maross), a doctor, assisting him in his office and learning about the medical profession. Her mother, Kay (Mariclare Costello), is a delightful and lovable woman who thinks nothing of painting nail polish on the toes of a rescued bathtub or picking peaches by moonlight. Annie and her sister, Nancy (Sandra Clark), oblivious to Annie being adopted, always have been close.

The young girl's unexpected request disturbs these close and loving relationships. Her parents wonder if they have failed Annie in some way. Most of all, they fear losing her to a stranger. Nancy, least able to understand Annie's need to know, feels rejected.

Suppressing their anxiety, Annie's parents present her with all of the records of her adoption, a key to a rented car, and their support, however, tentative. Annie begins her search at the place of her birth. After a number of setbacks, she obtains the name of a woman named Julie Jeffries, from an ailing, elderly doctor, who mistakes Annie for her mother.

The Jeffries family no longer lives in the town, but Annie follows their trail systematically.

The Teen Scene

Clark Brandon has been a teen fave ever since "The Fitzpatricks" debuted on CBS a couple of seasons ago.

In fact, his casting on ABC's "Out of the Blue" was looked upon by some as a little insurance for the series in that the network knew he had a certain following that would tune in just to see him.

However, as popular as Clark is, and as much as he enjoys his acting, what he'd really like to be is a cowboy.

"I spent every summer on a working ranch when I was growing up, and there was just something magical about it that got inside me," Clark explained during his lunch break from the series.

"I love what I'm doing now, and I have no intention of leaving it anytime soon. But besides having a goal of being a well-respected actor, I have a goal of buying a ranch. I would be happy working on a ranch, but I'm working in this business with the hope that it'll enable me to own my own ranch someday.

Clark hopes to make a business out of a ranch in the long run. "I don't need a big house in the city to make me happy. Give me a ranch in Colorado or in Wyoming — preferably with a few head of horses and cattle — and I could be very content."

He admits that it would be good to do a couple of films each year, or a TV movie here and there. "But I'd always want to go back to my ranch and actually have that as my primary business."

Typifying Clark's interest in country living is the wardrobe he wears away from the series.

"Jeans, cowboy boots and my cowboy hat is my basic wardrobe," he explained. "And this belt," he added as he grasped the wide buckle of the leather belt.

"You see," he said as he stood up, "it's got my name across the back. It's geniuine leather and I wear it all the time. Not just because my name's on it, but because I got it the last summer I spent on the ranch in Colorado. It's sort of like a reminder of where I'm heading."

How Many Loves?

Why did master storyteller H.E. Bates name his novel about a flapper who bowls over four young men "Love for Lydia"? Why not "Loves of Lydia," when he was clearly writing about one girl and four hopelessly smitten males whose jazz-age experiences are now being seen on PBS Masterpiece Theatre Sundays (9 p.m.).

There's a theory among Bates buffs — of whom there are many — that the author chose what appears to be an imprecise title quite deliberately. He wasn't really writing about four young men at all, they say, but rather about four aspects of the personality of one young man overcome with "Love for Lydia."

If that hypothesis holds water, Lydia's four swains on the series add up to a complex character. There's the impoverished, shy would-be writer, Richardson, who could represent the artistic/intellectual side of the hypothetical whole. Tom Holland, whose metier is dealing with nature on a farm, is the untouched pure innocent, psychological opposite of jaded Alex Sanderson. Alex seems to have been touched by everything and affected by very little. The there's Blackie Johnson, the darkly dangerous, sensual chauffeur who might easily satisfy every young man's fantasy about his effect on women.

GREAT PERFORMANCES presents "Ormandy At Eighty," Wednesday, Nov. 21 at 8 p.m. on PBS, in celebration of Eugene Ormandy's 80th birthday.

Ormandy Recalls

Maestro Eugene Ormandy, a small, sprightly man whose energy on the podium belies his 80 years, fondly recalls the memory of his friend, composer Sergei Rachmaninoff. "We always talked about this Orchestra. 'I want the Philadelphia sound,' he'd say. 'Your sound is in my ears. It's wonderful.'"

It is fitting that on the brink of The Philadelphia Orchestra's eighth decade, its leader for more than half its lifetime turns 80 as well. It is his birthday that is celebrated on Wednesday, Nov. 21 (8-9 p.m.) when Great Performances presents "Ormandy At Eighty" on PBS. Rachmaninoff's Symphony No. 2, a piece long associated with Ormandy and The Philadelphia Orchestra, is performed at the birthday concert taped at Philadelphia's famed Academy of Music. A brief interview with the Maestro precedes the telecast.

Leaving the podium after a morning rehearsal, Ormandy makes his way past the surprisingly young musicians in the Orchestra. "I think there's only one member still in the Orchestra who started the same year I did, in 1936. Then and now: the Orchestra is still marvelous."

Once back in his spare and unpretentious dressing room, the Maestro returns to the question of the Philadelphia Sound. "It is so difficult for me to talk about what they call the Philadelphia Sound because it is hard for me to identify it. Still, something makes the listener say to himself, 'But this sounds different than what I'm used to hearing from other orchestras.'"

"Before I even dreamed about Philadelphia, Leopold Stokowski had his own very individual, very strong, very powerful way of creating a certain sound. But they didn't say 'Stokowski's Sound,' even though he was the conductor, it was Philadelphia's. When I took over, it was my sound, but it, too, was Philadelphia's; different yet the same. You know, Rachmaninoff said to me one day, 'I'm so happy that you replaced Stokowski and not someone else, because you and Stokowski feel music the same way . . . and I do too. We continue where Stokowski left off.'"

Q: Did Kate Jackson get her start as an actress by portraying Victoria Winter in "Dark Shadows"? D. ROMANO, SANFORD, N.C.

A: Kate's first professional acting job was as a running character in "Dark Shadows." But she didn't play Victoria — that was Alexandra Moltke. Kate says she played a ghost on the series for nine months, and was eventually "brought back" to life. She recreated her role in MGM's feature film version of "Shadows."

Q: The actor who plays Doug Campbell on "As the World Turns" reminds me of the man who played Paul Stewart on the show several years ago. Could it be the same person? D. McGILL, UNION, S.C.

A: No. The actor who's cast as Campbell is Dennis Romer. You may remember him from the short-lived daytime series, "For Richer, For Poorer." He played Roy White on that one. Paul Stewart was portrayed by two actors — Dean Santoro and Stephen Miles.

Q: Where do I send a letter to newsman Frank Reynolds? S.C., SANFORD, N.C.

A: Write to Reynolds c/o ABC News, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: What's happened to movie actress Diane Varsi? L. BLANTON, WALLINS CREEK, KY.

A: Diane, now 40 years old, lives in Bennington, Vt., and hasn't made a film since 1971 — "Johnny Got His Gun." She was nominated for an Academy Award as Best Supporting Actress in Peyton Place," a 1957 movie in which she played Allison.

Q: I would like very much to have the address of actress Helen Hayes. H. PICOT, WILMINGTON, N.C.

A: Write to the distinguished actress c/o PBS, 609 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y., 10017. Her last television appearance was in the PBS presentation, "Miles to Go Before I Sleep."

Q: Please tell me something about Patrick Duffy. Also, may I have his address? B. GLOVER, WILSON, N.C.

A: Duffy, who's now starring in the hit series "Dallas," graduated from the University of Washington, where he was trained in all aspects of theater and drama. He's appeared in several TV movies and also starred in the short-lived series, "Man From Atlantis." Duffy, his wife and young son, reside in the San Fernando Valley. Write to him c/o CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Bob Hope On Campus

America's favorite comedian, Bob Hope, becomes B.H.O.C. — Bob Hope on Campus — Monday, Nov. 19 (9 to 11 p.m.). That's when he makes special appearances at six university homecoming galas.

The 76-year-old Hope enjoys tremendous popularity with young Americans, especially students. Earlier this year, he was the surprise winner over John Travolta in a national poll of teen-age girls conducted by Seventeen magazine to determine the Most Admired Male.

"Dad is certainly a well-known figure on college campuses," says his daughter Linda, who has produced the special. "He had several dates booked all in a row — personal appearance dates at these various colleges. So we came up with the idea of 'why not?'"

The campuses featured are Indiana State University, the University of Alabama, the University of Florida, Colgate University (N.Y.), Harvard University and the University of Southern California.

Each campus will have a distinctly different 'look.' The segment from Indiana was filmed in an auditorium, while the festivites at Colgate took place in the school's fieldhouse. Sports idols Bear Bryant and Joe Namath will be on hand to greet Hope at Alabama, and the filming at Florida took place at night on the football field. Hope arrived just in time for an old-fashioned pep rally at USC, and homecoming activites at Harvard emanated from the JFK Center for Government.

There's an impressive list of guest stars who'll be joining Hope on all of the campuses. Among them are The Village People, one of the world's most popular disco singing groups (12 million copies of the single "Y.M.C.A." have been sold). Others in the line-up are popular chanteuse Dionne Warwick, country singing sensation Tanya Tucker, and singing idol Teddy Pendergrass.

Over the years, Bob Hope's specials have consistently ranked among the top programs. But last season, the king of the ratings took a tumble. Even his Christmas special plunged 'way down' in the ratings.

But Linda Hope feels that things will be different this year. "I think people have seen an awful lot of variety shows out of the studio," she points out. "I think that they like to see a sort of diversity. I also think folks like to see how other folks live."

She's opting for a more "contemporary" look from top to bottom, beginning with this homecoming feature.

BOB HOPE'S impressive roster of guest stars for his next NBC-TV special, "Bob Hope on Campus," will include two outstanding ladies of song — pop singing sensation Dionne Warwick (top, l) and popular country singer Tanya Tucker — to be presented Monday, Nov. 19 (9-11p.m.).

Vereen Stars

"Tenspeed and Brown Shoe," a two-hour motion picture starring Ben Vereen and Jeff Goldblum, has started production in Los Angeles and San Francisco. The film will air on ABC during the 1979-80 season.

Robert Webber, Jayne Meadows, Peter Brocco, Robyn Douglass and Simone Griffith are also starring in the suspenseful comedy-drama.

The story concerns con man E.L. Turner (Vereen) and Lione Whitney (Goldblum), a discontented young stockbroker. They are pursued by members of the American Nazi Party and organized crime when Turner steals $1 million from a gangland figure's safe deposit box.

VALERIE BERTINELLI and Timothy Hutton star as teen-agers drawn together in a romance in "Young Love, First Love," on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Nov. 20 (9-11 p.m.).

A Difficult Decision

Valerie Bertinelli and Timothy Hutton star in "Young Love, First Love," airing on The CBS Tuesday Night Movies, Nov. 20 (9 to 11 p.m.). The drama tells the story of two teen-agers who must make choices between the values in his strict traditional upbringing, and pressures from their peers who conform to a more permissive West Coast attitude.

Bertinelli portrays Robin Gibson, a California teen-ager from a lenient family environment. Hutton plays Derek Clayton, a restrained and conservative country boy from Oklahoma.

Arlen Dean Snyder is cast as Howard, the live-in friend of Robin's mother, Audrey, played by Fionnuala Flanagan.

Almost in spite of herself — and to the surprise of her friends — breezy and popular Robin is attracted to Derek, the shy, serious new kid at school. Their friendship deepens but is threatened by the arrangement between Howard and Audrey — with whom Robin and her younger brother, Mark, also live. Also, there's the problem of social pressures from their classmates.

Robin fears that Derek will find the nature of her household shocking and hard to accept — and he does. Derek, in turn, is shaken by Robin's forwardness. Their differences leave both angry and confused and seem to portend doom for their love.

If Valerie Bertinelli had her say, she would have given herself the role of Derek in the new motion picture for television.

"That wouldn't have worked for obvious reasons," she says. "What I mean is that in real life, I'm a Derek. My own family environment is very much like his — stable and traditional.

"I would have a hard time getting in synch with someone like Robin," Valerie points out. "And, like Derek, I wouldn't know what to make of her when I first met her."

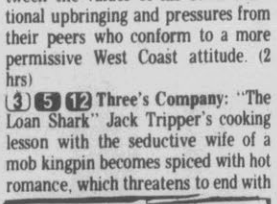

Valerie was born in Delaware, and her family later moved to California. The close-knit clan consists of Valerie, her mother and father, her older brother and two younger brothers.

LESLIE BROWNE portrays a young dancer in love with a Russian dancer (Mikhail Baryshnikov) in "The Turning Point," drama to be broadcast as a CBS movie spectacular, Monday, Nov. 19 (9-11:30 p.m.).

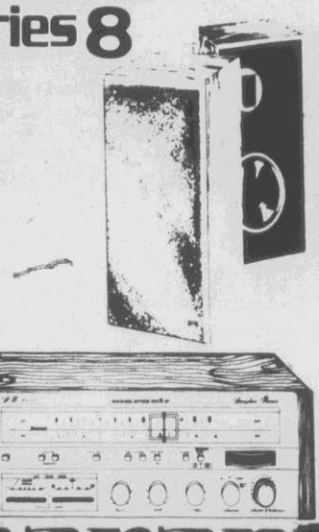

Different Paths

Two onetime rivals and friends, whose lives have taken different paths, emotionally confront themselves and each other with long unanswered questions, in "The Turning Point." The drama, starring Anne Bancroft, Shirley MacLaine and Tom Skerritt, will be broadcast for the first time on television Monday, Nov. 19 (9 to 11:30 p.m.), on CBS. The film, nominated for eleven Academy Awards, was presented theatrically in 1977 by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The movie introduced Mikhail Baryshnikov and Leslie Browne to the screen. Martha Scott, Marshall Thompson and Anthony Zerbe co-star.

Emma (Bancroft) and DeeDee (MacLaine) were both promising young ballerinas when they first became friends, but now their lives are completely different. Emma, who chose to pursue her career, has become a star, now facing the inevitable end of her reign in the spotlight. DeeDee chose marriage and now sees her young daughter Emilia (Browne) about to start out on the career she left behind.

Beneath Emma and DeeDee's friendship lurk remnants of their earlier rivalry and longtime envy over the successes and happinesses the other has experienced.

Faces Evoke Memories

The names fit together like entries on the guest list of the most wonderful party ever, a party made up of one's very best friends — a party that lasted ten years.

John, Paul, George and Ringo. Or the other way around. The order varied according to which fan you talked to. But millions knew who they were, and thought of them as a unit. They somehow thought the new music would never stop, and that the group would never break up. But it did, and they did. Only the memory didn't end.

The memory comes laughing and singing back to life when "Birth of the Beatles" airs as The ABC Friday Night Movie, Nov. 23 (8 to 10 p.m.). But there will be four new faces representing those most famous faces — Stephen Mackenna, Rod Culbertson, John Altman, and Ray Ashcroft. All four have vivid memories of the Beatles and have put these memories to good use in their portrayals.

"There was John — he was the smart one. And funny, too," says Stephen, who's actually played Lennon twice before. "He had the very devil in his smile, which was just a little crooked, and very tight over his teeth." Stephen has been a professional actor for about 10 years, plays a little guitar, and is probably the closest look-alike in the cast.

"Paul, of course, was the cute one," says his counterpart in the film, Rod Culbertson. "Definitely very romantic, the last to get married — and the only one to only get married once. Everybody figured he probably wrote the really pretty love songs, because that's the way he was. You could just tell." Rod's been a Beatle fan since he was 14 and happens to be the only cast member who is married.

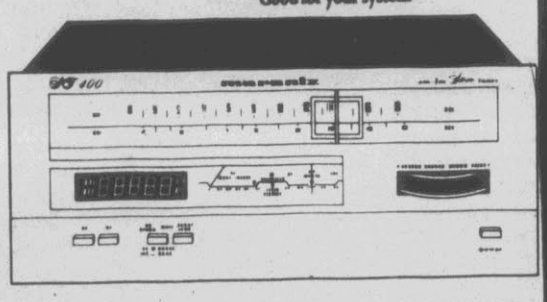

John Altman, who is cast as George Harrison, was also a special fan of his, and managed to gather collector's item records and tapes to study for the role. "He was real mysterious, you know?" John says. "You never could tell exactly what he was thinking."

Larry Switches His Mounts

Larry Wilcox rides motorcycles in his role as Officer Jon Baker in "CHiPs." But he rides horses in the NBC World Premiere movie "The Last Ride of the Dalton Gang," airing Tuesday, Nov. 20 (8 to 11 p.m.).

He admits readily he's more at home on the range, on a horse. "The motorcycle is a way to get rid of frustrations. I need it when I get crazy once in a while," he said.

"If I had to make a choice between acting and the rodeo, it would be the rodeo," said Wilcox, who uses much of the money he earns acting to enter rodeos.

Wilcox plays Emmet Dalton, the only survivor of the notorious Dalton Gang after its raid on Coffeyville. "Since Emmett is the only survivor," said Wilcox, "I get to do all the narration as an old man of 65. I think he's the best character even though I don't have as many lines as some of the other characters. But it's a great challenge," said the "CHiPs" star.

LARRY WILCOX, stars as the survivor in "The Last Ride of the Dalton Gang," on NBC-TV Tuesday, Nov. 20 (8-11 p.m.).

"I think this is one of the finest westerns you'll ever see on TV," continued an enthusiastic Wilcox. "All the actors (Jack Palance, Cliff Potts, Bo Hopkins, Matt Clark, Don Collier, Randy Quaid, Dale Robertson, to name a few) were cooperative. No egos."

Wilcox, you might say, was reared for this role. "My grandmother homesteaded in Wyoming and I was raised in Rawlins, Wyoming," he said. "And she knows all the old stories. I heard about the Daltons from her first. Just before filming, I did some research on the Dalton bunch. For the film, I chose a gun that was a replica of the gun Emmett Dalton used — a military style Colt 44, double action. I knew from my research that Em's wife had 800 replicas made of the gun after the shootout."

Pilgrims' Adventure

"Mayflower: The Pilgrims' Adventure," a dramatic special recounting the ordeals and conflicts faced by the crew and passengers of the Mayflower in their journey to the new world, will be broadcast Wednesday, Nov. 21 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV.

Anthony Hopkins, Richard Crenna, Jenny Agutter, Michael Beck, David Dukes and Trish Van Devere star. Others in the cast are John Heffernan, Paul Sparer and Frank Hamilton.

The drama focuses on the conflict between the two opposing outlooks represented on the Mayflower by the Pilgrims and the ship's crew. Under the leadership of William Brewster (Crenna), the colonists are a group of visionary idealists whose courage stems from their firm religious conviction and optimistic belief in their mission to establish a better society in the wilderness. On the other hand, Captain Christopher Jones (Hopkins) heads a band of earthy, worldly, experienced seafarers with a realistic knowledge of the hazards involved in the undertaking.

These two very different groups regard each other with mutual hostility, but together endure an emotionally torturous and physically devastating experience as they cross the stormy Atlantic. The journey proves too much for their companion ship, which turns back to England. The travelers face sickness and death and witness the birth of a child, as their determination and courage are put to hard test.

Love also blossoms between Priscilla Mullens (Agutter) and stolid John Alden (Beck). Their romance is complicated by the jealousy shown by young Alden toward the dashing Captain Miles Standish (Dukes) and his flirtatious ways, especially after Standish' invalid wife (Van Devere) promotes a tie between Priscilla and her husband.

Before filming began, Richard Crenna researched what is known about the Pilgrims and their leader. "It gave me some insight into Brewster and his band of colonists as human beings," he said.

"Our major objective in this drama is to present the Pilgrims not as objects of religious curiosity, but as human beings," he continued.

"The Pilgrims were not religious fanatics, but people driven by the need for religious and social freedom. They were actually far more liberal than the Puritans who followed them into Massachusetts."

Crenna notes that some dramatic license was taken with the story. "Brewster was not actually a minister but the elder of the congregation. A man named Richardsón was the minister in charge of the ritual. Brewster was the doer. In the drama, the two characters are consolidated."

ANTHONY HOPKINS (l) stars as the captain of the Mayflower and Richard Crenna stars as the leader of the Pilgrims, in "Mayflower: The Pilgrim's Adventure," drama special to air Wednesday, Nov. 21 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Enjoys Success

John Barbour, relaxing between rehearsals for "Real People," gave his reasons why the show is enjoying success with TV viewers.

"I think audiences have had it with celebrities — people who have made it with a nice smile or an attractive body, but not necessarily with talent," he said.

"Also," he continued, "we are making the best use of the medium, we entertain and inform. The source of our material is inexhaustible.

"Another reason I think 'People' has been successful is that we are showing viewers that you can get recognition just by being yourself. That's all it takes."

CO-HOSTS JOHN BARBOUR (r) talks about some of the guests on NBC-TV's "Real People," and ones that will be brought back to appear on the series' Family Reunion, Wednesday, Nov. 21 (8-9:30 p.m.). He is shown here with co-hosts Byron Allen and Sarah Purcell.

Plan Delayed

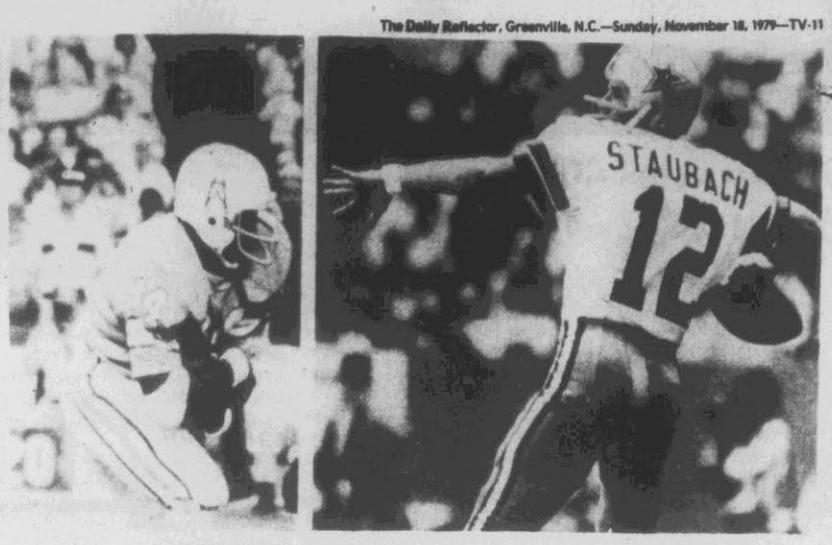

The popular daytime drama, "The Young and the Restless," originally to have expanded to an hour-long form in October, will debut in its new format Feb. 4.

Executive producer John Conboy explained that the delay was caused by a need for more time to gear for the expansion. He has now begun enlarging his staff, is adding a post-production team, and plans to add about 10 members to the cast. He is also taking over two studios at CBS-TV's Television City and will hire another regular director.

Special To Air

Filming has begun and will continue through March on "The Carol Johnston Story," an hour special to air next season on "Disney's Wonderful World."

Sports footage and conversations with Johnston's friends and family will be used in the true story of a collegiate gymnast — with one arm — who becomes a champion in women's gymnastics in floor exercise and balance beam.

THE NFL'S BATTLE of Texas will take place when Earl Campbell (l), the runaway rushing leader in the AFC, leads the Houston Oilers against the Dallas Cowboys, led by QB Roger Staubach, in a nationally televised Thanksgiving Day match-up on NBC, Thursday, Nov. 22 (4-7 p.m.).

Cowboys Battle Oilers

When most people think of a pro football game on Thanksgiving Day, they still think of Detroit. After all, the holiday classic has been played in the motor city for over 25 years. It has featured some of the most outstanding plays and games in the history of the NFL.

But Dallas is becoming just as famous for its games on 'turkey' day. For a number of years, the event has pitted Dallas against division rivals, particularly the Washington Redskins.

But this year, it's the Houston Oilers who are swept up in the battle of Texas bragging rights, and they're the ones who'll clash with the Cowboys Thanksgiving Day (4 p.m. on NBC-TV).

One matchup that should be of particular interest is between the offenses. Both teams are directed by the by the fortunes of talented but basically quiet individuals. But the similarity ends there.

Roger Staubach, of the Cowboys, and Houston's Earl Campbell more or less dictate how their teams will operate, despite the fact that one is a quarterback and the other is a runner.

The 'Artful Dodger,' as they call Staubach in Dallas, has already led the Cowboys to four Super Bowls. They emerged victorious in two of these. He has also broken all team records for passing.

Roger is now operating out of a shotgun position. "It gives me a better view of the defense," he says. "I can spot an open receiver easier."

Campbell also directs his team's fortunes, though in an entirely different way. His punishing style of running earned him record rushing marks in his rookie season, and he received unheard-of accolades for a first-year man by grabbing both Rookie of the Year and Player of the Year honors.

The former University of Texas great is also a tough blocker and an excellent pass-catcher. This makes him even more of a threat to gain big chunks of yardage in a hurry.

But the game may also get down to the two defenses, both of which are outstanding. Both Texas teams also have strong post-season aspirations. In view of this, the game Thanksgiving Day should be a good test to just how well each team will fare after the regular season.

Animated Special

"The Three Musketeers," an animated special based on the Alexandre Dumas novel of swashbuckling adventure, will be broadcast Thursday, Nov. 22 (3:30 to 4:30 p.m.), on CBS-TV's "Famous Classic Tales."

The adventures of the Three Musketeers — Athos, Aramis and Porthos — and their young companion, D'Artagnan, have thrilled millions of readers through the years. The story begins with the arrival of a young countrified Gascon, D'Artagnan, in Paris to seek his fortune at the court of King Louis XIII. He soon falls in with three members of the King's musketeers, at first as a rival, then as a comrade. He then finds himself embroiled in the intrigues and escapades of the royal court.

The voices of James Condon, Barbara Frawley, Neil Fitzpatrick, Ron Haddrick, Jane Harders, John Martin and Richard Meickle are featured.

SPOTLIGHT

Finally He 'Made It'

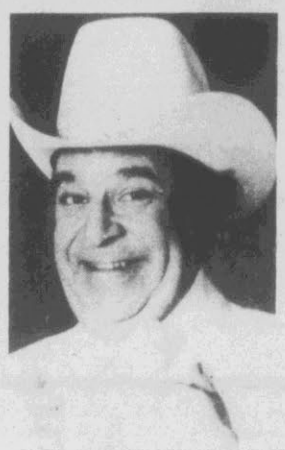

It's taken character actor Sorrell Booke a long time to gain nationwide recognition as an actor, but the road to stardom has been an exciting one.

Sorrell, who's in his mid-fifties, finally 'made it' in his portrayal of Boss Hogg on CBS-TV's hit series, "The Dukes of Hazzard."

It seems that those Duke cousins — Luke, Bo and Daisy — never let up in their campaign to frustrate and outwit the country's corrupt system, headed by Boss Hogg and his pawn, Sheriff Rosco Coltrane.

Sorrell is a native of Buffalo, N.Y., and it was there that he started his acting career on radio when he was just six years old. At 16, he entered Columbia University in New York City, where he studied for a bachelor's degree along with performing in Shakespearean dramas with the drama club.

At 19, he entered Yale School

of Drama as a directing major. He remained for three years, then acted in summer stock in Provincetown, Mass.

Booke then returned to Columbia in 1952 after receiving his master's degree and before joining the armed forces. On his return to civilian life, he got his first Off Broadway play, "The White Devil," and, simultaneously, his first television part, in "Omnibus." He made his Broadway debut in "The Sleeping Prince," and has subsequently appeared in over 100 plays, utilizing his versatility in dialects as well as his acting skill.

A television part in "Route 66" took Sorrell to Hollywood for the first time. He has since acted in over 150 television series — from "Soap" to "What's Happening!" He has also performed in about 20 motion pictures, among them are "What's Up Doc?" and "Freaky Friday."

In the series, you seldom see Boss Hogg without that huge white Stetson hat. But, when Sorrell takes that hat off, there's very little of his brown hair left. But he doesn't mind. Nor does he wear a toupee, which is an oddity around Hollywood, where actors consider any signs of aging as something akin to Bubonic Plague.

Booke lives in California's San Fernando Valley, where he spendshis leisure time working with wood, reading and 'expanding his horizons.'

Possible Spin-Off

CBS-TV has signed a contract with Good Guy Films for the development of "Mr. Blandings Builds His Dream House." The network plans to air it as a Movie of the Week, then possibly work it into a series spin-off based on the original property.

The comedy, produced in 1948, starred Cary Grant, Myrna Loy and Melvin Douglas. This time around, Robin Robinson and Pamela Ann Wagner will star.

The updated version, with a role reversal twist, will be titled "Ms. Blandings' Dream House."

Incredible Kids!

"Birth of the Beatles" — the first movie to tell the dramatic true story of those incredible kids — will premiere Friday, Nov. 23, on ABC-TV (8 p.m.).

The movie, produced by Dick Clark, was filmed in Liverpool, London and Hamburg, Germany. It traces the early years of the Beatles from their bleakest hours as unknown youngsters struggling to escape poverty to their invasion of America as the phenomenal artists who revolutionized the worldwide music scene.

Pete Best, the original drummer with the Beatles — replaced by Ringo Starr just days before the group's first record date — served as technical advisor. Young English actors whose faces are new to American audiences star as the musicians.

The film follows the group's rise in fame. It all started in a "noisy cellar" in Liverpool. From there they went to Penny Lane, then traversed from the delirious neon nights of Hamburg's Reeperbahn to the international acclaim that led to their triumphant appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" in New York.

Little-known details of the Beatles' early days are dramatized for the first time. Included is the touching story of Stu Sutcliffe, the 'fifth Beatle,' John Lennon's best friend who was a reluctant musician but an important part of the group's "all for one" feeling. John Lennon's courtship and early marriage are recreated, along with the sometimes stormy relationship between John and Paul as two explosive artistic temperaments who tried to co-exist.

The production was directed by England's Richard Marquand, who is young enough to have been an early Beatle fan himself. "I should think any director of my generation would give his eye teeth to do this movie. There's so much about the early days of the Beatles that audiences don't know. Their beginning was even more dramatic than Elvis," he said.

BARBARA AIELLO (l) and Kathleen McArdle host a show using puppets that exhibit a disability as a way of preparing nondisabled youngsters to accept disabled classmates, in "The Invisible Children With Barbara Aiello and The Kids on the Block," Saturday, Nov. 24 (1:30-2 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

'The Invisible Children'

Few people realize that Gary Burghoff, best known for his role on the hit series, "M*A*S*H," was born with a disabled left hand. He'll be talking about this disability on "The Invisible Children," airing Saturday, Nov. 24 (1:30 to 2 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Burghoff and a unique group of puppets will show "normal kids" what it's like to be handicapped.

The Kids on the Block are life-sized puppets, some of which exhibit a physical disability. They include wheelchair-bound Mark, who has cerebral palsy and a speech impediment; Mandy, who is deaf and "speaks" with her hands; and Renaldo, who is blind. They are the creations of educator Barbara Aiello, who takes The Kids on The Block all over the country to introduce them to disabled and non-disabled kids alike.

Mark is the puppet who talks with Burghoff about his hand. And through their conversation, we learn how the actor feels about the disability.

In the special, Barbara and her partner, Kathleen McArdle, take The Kids to elementary schools in Alexandria, Va., and Los Angeles, Calif. What happens when the students and puppets talk to each other is a lesson in understanding. For the first time, normal, healthy kids realize the handicapped people are not to be feared. They are human beings, too, with the same hopes and dreams as everyone else.

Burghoff and The Kids on the Block also underscore that disabilities are not something to be ignored. Rather, they are something that can make a person very special and enhance his personality.

According to Aiello, puppets are "non-threatening." The puppets themselves talk to the children, answering questions and explaining how they, too, can to go school, play with their friends, and live a full life. Mark explains how he goes to school on a bus outfitted with a lift for his wheelchair. He then gleefully demonstrates the "wheelies" he executes with his 'cruiser,' and he talks about playing basketball and kickball. Renaldo shows how he can tell time with his Braille watch and how he uses his white cane to get around. Each puppet has his or her own story to tell.

Aiello introduces role-playing to the children, giving them a chance to experience what it's like to be blind, and to see the world from a wheelchair.

Barbara Aiello and The Kids on the Block have appeared before the U.S. Senate. In 1981, they will perform before the United Nations in connection with "The Year of the Disabled."

Movie For NBC

"Friendships, Secrets and Lies," a TV movie for NBC now in production, stars Loretta Swit, Cathryn Damon, Stella Stevens, Shelley Fabares, Paula Prentiss and Tina Louise.

Pike's Peek

BY CHARLIE PIKE

HOLLYWOOD.— "TAXI'S" cabdriver who dreams of being a top-ranked boxer, TONY DANZA, says he's an incurable romantic. "I believe in old-fashioned romance," says Tony, "and I also like to introduce my girlfriends to my mom. My mother is very much a part of everything I do."

To no one's surprise, LONI ANDERSON, the sexy ingenue of "WKRP IN CINCINNATI," is being seriously considered to play the real-life role of another sex symbol, the late JAYNE MANSFIELD in a move adapted from the book, "LADY JANE."

The guitar JOHNNY CASH gave to actor BO HOPKINS has turned out to be an expensive gift. So far, Bo's paid guitarist-teacher ERIC GARCIA $750 for lessons — and he's still trying to learn to play the darn thing!

Folks in NBC-TV's front office are admittedly concerned over the poor ratings their new series, "BUCK ROGERS IN THE 25TH CENTURY" has been getting. It seems the show is following the same route "BATTLESTAR GALACTICA" took last season — straight down the Neilsen drain.

Excitement is running so high over ABC-TV's upcoming special, "JOHN DENVER AND THE MUPPETS, A CHRISTMAS TOGETHER," that requests for tickets for the taping of the show broke an all-time record. One of the show's highlights will be a nativity scene with JIM HENSON's cute little creatures.

"THREE'S COMPANY" star JOHN RITTER and his lovin' wife, NANCY, are expecting their first child in February.

PENNY MARSHALL and CINDY WILLIAMS are hopping mad at ABC for moving "LAVERNE & SHIRLEY" from Tuesday to another night, Thursday. The show's already dropped 'way down' and, warns Penny, "If we don't get back to our original night, the show will die."

PAM DAWBER says she's tired of living in the shadow of her "MORK & MINDY" co-star, ROBIN WILLIAMS. She's now in the process of changing that down-to-earth girl image and opting for a sophisticated look. She must be getting somewhere, because two top magazines will be featuring the 'new' Pam on their covers within the next few months.

"CHARLIE'S ANGELS" went from 'three' to 'two' for a couple of days last week when CHERYL LADD was hospitalized for treatment of a case of viral pneumonia. She's back on the mend now, and should be returning to the set soon.

THE ATLANTA FALCONS earned a playoff spot for the first time in their 13-year existence last season, but they will be hard pressed to repeat. One veteran they will look for in leadership is tight end Jim Mitchell. The Falcons face the Los Angeles Rams in a key NFC West matchup on ABC's Monday Night Football Nov. 19 starting at 9 p.m.

JOHN RIGGINS still considers himself a "wild and crazy guy," but when the Washington Redskin veteran puts on his helmet and pads, he's all business. The Redskins face a rugged test when they challenge their arch-rivals, the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday, Nov. 18 starting at 1 p.m. on CBS.

Weaver-LeDoux Bout On CBS

Mike Weaver and Scott LeDoux, two of the top-ranked World Boxing Council heavyweights, will square off in a 12-round bout to be broadcast, live, on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, Nov. 24 (4:30 to 6 p.m.).

According to the WBC's ratings, Weaver is ranked as the number-three challenger and LeDoux as the number five-challenger to Larry Holmes' WBC heavyweight title.

Weaver's best fight may well be the one he lost to Holmes earlier this year. After being close to knocking out the champion on several occasions, Weaver succumbed in the 12th round that June night in New York City, and surprised Holmes, who took a long vacation after the bout.

A past All-Marine and Inter-Service heavyweight champion, Weaver has a record of 19 victories and nine defeats. Thirteen of those 19 wins were by knockout, and he has been stopped five times, according to Ring Magazine.

LeDoux, who now resides in Bloomington, will have his home crowd behind him at the Metropolitan Center.

In his most recent bout, last August in Bloomington, LeDoux fought to a 10-round draw with Ken Norton, who then retired after the fight. In two previous bouts this year, LeDoux lost a 10-round decision to Ron Lyle in Las Vegas, in May, and scored a knockout victory over Jim Beattie in February.

Weaver's most recent bout, last September, saw him KO Harry Terrell in the fourth round in Los Angeles. Previously this year, he KO'd Oliver Phillips in March in the fourth round. He also KO'd Stan Ward in the ninth round of a fight in January. The last two bouts were both held in Las Vegas.

LeDoux, known as an in-fighter, as opposed to Weaver's slugging style, also holds a draw with former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks.

Riggins Likes Competition

John Riggins is one of the unique characters in the National Football League who's long been known for doing all sorts of crazy things just to get attention.

Several years ago, when the powerful running back was still with the New York Jets, he decided to acquire an outlandish Mohawk haircut for no apparent reason. He showed up on national television with the cut, saying that it made him "feel meaner."

Then, after a particularly disappointing Redskin loss several years ago, Riggins was so upset that he walked out of Robert F. Kennedy Stadium and thumbed a ride home — all the way to Northern Virginia.

Riggins has calmed down a bit after eight hardened seasons as a fullback. But when he steps onto the field, he still gets that "lean and hungry look."

The Redskins face perhaps their most important game of the year when they meet arch-rival Dallas in Washington Sunday, Nov. 18 (1 p.m. on CBS-TV). The Redskins are trying to grab a playoff spot, while the Cowboys need only a couple of wins to secure another NFC East Crown.

Riggins may be a bit wild, but few backs in the league can match his overall playing ability. At 6-2 and 230 pounds, the former University of Kansas star is a punishing blocker and runner, as well as an excellent pass receiver.

"John provides our backfield with a multiple of choices, and that's the kind of offense I like," notes Washington coach Jack Pardee, who likes to shuffle four different backs in and out of the lineup. "He has won many games for us with crucial third-down situations and seems to thrive on competition."

At the University of Kansas, Riggins gave an indication of how good he was after breaking Gayle Sayers' records with 2,706 yards, including 1,131 as a senior. In his illustrious nine-year career in the NFL, he has rushed for over 5,000 yards and chalked up a 1,000 yard season in 1975 with the Jets.

Riggins is one of the few old-time veterans to survive Pardee's massive youth shakeup this season. Only a handful of Redskins remain with more playing time than Riggins.

But his youthful exuberance shows he hasn't gotten any longer in the tooth than he was as a "wild and crazy" rookie in 1971.

"I motivate myself," Riggins says. "When I put on that uniform and see the opposition on the other side of the field, I see blood. I want us to get to the playoffs. We have great bunch of excited young guys this season, and it's making a difference."

Strong Interest

Canada is now lobbying for the 1988 Winter Olympics in spite of the fact that the Canadian Olympic Association (COA) hasn't yet chosen a site. So far, the only towns showing a strong interest in the 1988 winter games are St. Moritz and Davos, both in Switzerland.

Lot More Fun

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer doen't like playing teams coached by old friends. "I don't think it's much fun to see a friend get beat. But I know it's a lot more fun to beat a friend than to get beaten by a friend."

Dan Fouts Has Arrived

MIKE PHIPPS, who has languished in orscurity since his arrival in the NFL 10 seasons ago, has taken over for the injured Vince Evans and has helped to revive the Chicago Bear offense. The Bears take on the Detroit Lions, live from Pontiac Silverdome in Michigan in a traditional contest starting at 12:30 p.m. on CBS.

The San Diego Chargers aren't the patsies of the AFC Western Division anymore. In fact, the youthful team from Southern California is now challenging the oldliners for the division title.

This is due, in no short measure, to the vast improvement of Dan Fouts, a quarterback who doesn't get much ink, but who proves — year in and year out — that he is a quality signal-caller with a rifle arm.

The Chargers get a chance to see just how good they are when they challenge the World Champion Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday, Nov. 18 (4 p.m. on NBC-TV).

Like many quarterbacks, Fouts learned his trade in the league from one of the masters — Bill Walsh. When he arrived from the University of Oregon, chockfull of promise and trophies, he was met by Walsh, who'd been hired by then-head coach Tommy Prothro to teach the youngster how to read defenses.

With the Cincinnati Bengals, Walsh had sired such young stars as Greg Cook, Virgil Carter and Ken Anderson, as well as receivers Isaac Curtis, Chip Myers and Bob Trumpy.

Dan Fouts was familiar with the sights and sounds of the professional football world. As a youngster, he served as waterboy for the San Francisco 49ers, the team for which his dad, Bob, broadcast play-by-play.

DAN FOUTS has been proclaimed a savior for the San Diego Charger offense. In his six seasons, Fouts has had some incredible afternoons passing the pigskin. The Chargers host the Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday, Nov. 18 beginning at 4 p.m. on NBC.

In fact, Dan used to study the moves of his hero, Y.A. Tittle, while the immortal quarterback was with the Bay Area team.

After spending most of three seasons learning his trade, Fouts got his first chance to start in the first home game of the 1976 season. He promptly guided the Chargers to a resounding 43-24 bombing of the St. Louis Cardinals.

All Fouts did in that game was throw for 259 yards by completing 15 of 18 passes. He found newly-acquired Charlie Joyner open again and again, and riddled the Cardinal offense.

He has now thrown for more than 8,000 yards, has completed better than 50 percent of his passes and tossed better than 50 touchdown aerials. Like the San Diego Chargers, Dan Fouts has arrived.

Magic Touch

The Chicago Bears have needed the services of a top-flight quarterback for a long time. After some pretty memorable seasons during the 1960's, the team always seemed to languish on offense.

But the Bears have had two of the finest running backs in the history of the National Football League — Gayle Sayers and Walter Payton.

Payton, of course, is still with the Monsters of the Midway, and it looks like the quarterback situation may have been partially resolved, thanks to Mike Phipps.

In their struggle to win the NFC Central Division, the Bears must defeat divisional rivals like the Detroit Lions. The two teams from the Midwest clash in what has become a real tradition — the Thanksgiving game from Detroit. CBS will televise the game that's being played in Pontiac, Mich. (12:30 p.m.).

The Bears seemed to have solved their signal-calling woes when they acquired talented Vince Evans in the college draft. And started the season off with a bang when Evans led Chicago to victories in three of their first four games. But Evans severely injured his ankle and is now relegated to the bench.

Crucial For Falcons

For 13 miserable years of existence in the rough-and-tumble wars in the NFL, the Atlanta Falcons continually had problems even reaching a .500 season.

Coach after coach was fired and none of the general managers seemed to be able to come up with a winning situation. Nor did draft choices produce the one thing the team desperately needed — a good offense.

But last season, the Falcons finally started rolling. Quarterback Steve Bartowski was healthy after several years of inactivity, due to injuries. There was also someone else who was a stand-out in making the difference — tight end Jim Mitchell.

After two lackluster seasons, the big 11-year player came into his own again and set several milestones.

The Falcons went on to set a milestone by clinching a playoff berth for the first time in their history.

But this season has been a different story, and Atlanta is having problems again. Hopefully, they'll get their act together again by the time they play the Los Angeles Rams Nov. 19. The game will be televised on ABC's "Monday Night Football" (9 p.m.).

After catching only 34 passes in two seasons, Mitchell caught 32 last year and broke the drought in touchdown receptions.

Two of these are particular standouts. His catch of a one-yard pass from Bartowski brought the curtain down on the New Orleans Saints, and his grab of a 19-yard pass was the key to a win over Philadelphia.

In the process, the wiry veteran surpassed the 4,000-yard mark in career receiving yards. He set another mark this season when he went over the 300-catch plateau. Many of his Falcon records won't be touched for years.

But Mitchell's most important tools — strength and durability — may be even more important than his pass-catching. He has missed only three of a possible 144 games in his career and holds the club record for most games played.

7 Ways to Beat Laziness Before It Beats You

A Thanksgiving Feast The Pilgrims Would Have Envied

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

She aids college-bound hopefuls...

FOR MARY ANN MAXIN, financial aid director of the Student Assistance Council of America

I desperately want to go to college, but my parents can't afford to send me. Do you have any advice for me? — Mae Johnson, Chattanooga, Tenn.

● The first thing to do is not give up hope, or trying. More than $100 million of aid has gone unclaimed because parents didn't know where to look, and many just don't believe their children can qualify for it. Scholarship Search, a research arm of the Student Assistance Council, provides research by computer that matches a student's eligibility factors to sources of funds for college which he or she is qualified to receive. The search guarantees to identify specific financial sources of "potential" funds for the subscribing student. (Parents seeking help and additional information should write to Scholarship Search, Suite 629E, FW, 1775 Broadway, N.Y., N.Y. 10019, enclosing $1.00.)

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What did Donna Summer mean when she said her career had reached a crisis? — G.I., La Crosse, Wis.

● It seems she's at the crossroads — doesn't know if she should keep up with her disco-singing (from which she has made a fortune) or quit and resume her stage career. She recently told an interviewer: "All the time I ask myself, why am I doing this when I could settle for getting married?" Donna confesses that quite often it's not the money that keeps propelling her, but "just madness." Also, she wants the public to know there's much more to her than the sex-symbol label that follows her around. One reason she'd like to hand over her title of Queen of the Discos is the grueling routine. ("Every time I come off the road, utterly exhausted, I swear I'll never go back"). Donna, who started out on the legit stage (Godspell, Hair), would love to become a musical-comedy star.

Casablanca

FOR MRS. JANE C. FREEMAN, national president, Girl Scouts of the U.S.A.

Are today's Girl Scouts treated and trained much as their mothers and grandmothers were? What concessions have you made to the space age? — E.M., Gary, Ind.

● Speaking of concessions to the space age, did you know that three of the six women first chosen as astronauts are former Girl Scouts? The first woman on the moon could well be a Girl Scout. While Girl Scouting retains its basic values, it has never stood still and is constantly updated.

FOR DICK CAVETT, talk-show host

Is it true that your job makes you a bundle of nerves and that you calm yourself down by exercising — which is why you're so thin? — R.J., Bowling Green, Ky.

● By this time, every possible mishap has happened to me on the air, and I no longer fear the job I do. Physical activity has a calming effect on my nerves; and since I became a runner, I am seldom nervous. I eat more than most people, but my weight never changes. People who have weight problems will hate me for this. Sorry, but there it is.

FOR GENE F. JANKOWSKI, president, CBS Broadcast Group

Do you think TV should set some sort of moral tone? — G.S., Stockton, Calif.

● I believe that it would be completely wrong for television to set a "moral" tone. That's the role of the church, the school and the family. Television is on the cutting edge of societal change, but it should neither lead nor lag too far behind that change. As a broadcaster, a citizen and as a father, I would object to T.V. having that role.

FOR PHYLLIS DILLER, comedienne

What do you do if you've had a bad day, with everything going wrong, and you have to go out on the stage and make people laugh? — Lisa Jennings, Canton, Ohio

● I consciously do nothing. What happens to me when I face an audience is completely automatic, like a good Rolls-Royce. My act somehow always starts and runs smoothly. I can remember days when I've had simply disastrous calls from my family, yet I managed to walk right out and do my bit.

FOR FRANK GIFFORD, host, Monday Night Football

Shouldn't there be a woman commentator on your show, too? — F.G., Pontiac, Mich.

● I think the day will come. As yet, women have not been given the opportunity to develop to the point where they can fit in with the format. I am in favor of anything that makes football better and more entertaining. The reason women aren't around is that, up till now, they haven't wanted to become involved, and they haven't had a chance to learn about the game. It's not yet their bag.

FOR DAVID COPPERFIELD, illusionist-magician

In what way are you different from past and present masters? — D.G., Martinsville, Va.

● I'm a bit of a dramatist as well as an illusionist. I utilize magic within the framework of vignettes, mostly with romantic overtones. I also dance and sing in those little stories I tell. For instance, in one scene I'm having a drink with a lady, then we dance. When she sits down on a couch, I levitate it. When the couch "lands," I kiss her hand, and she leaves. I know of no other magicians who use romantic plots.

PRO AND CON

Should Congress Have Veto Power Over Federal Trade Commission Regulations?

PRO Rep. Elliott Levitas, (D.-Ga.)

Yes. The unelected commissioners of the FTC issue rules that have the same force as an act of Congress. The question is simple: "Who should make the laws in this country? The elected Congress or the unelected bureaucrats?" The legislative veto is a means that lets the elected Congress review and, if necessary, veto the rules of the unelected FTC. That will make those rules more reasonable and responsive to the public — not merely reflective of the elitist judgments of a few unelected bureaucrats. The broad, far-ranging rule-making powers exercised by the unelected FTC require the check and control of a veto by a Congress that is answerable to the voters.

CON Sen. Wendell H. Ford (D.-Ky.)

The legislative veto is nothing more than a quick-fix cure to the problem of overzealous Federal regulatory agencies. Over the long run, more problems would be created than cured. A better way to guarantee that regulatory agencies are accountable for their actions is through one of the most overlooked and underutilized weapons at our disposal — Congressional oversight. Oversight involves hauling an agency, such as the FTC, in before a House or Senate committee and determining if Congressional intent is being met. If it isn't, then all we need do is to amend and clarify the law. Oversight can and does work. We just need to use it more.

The Hudson River Is Born Again

Like many other American waterways, the Hudson River has had its share of trouble — in the form of oil slicks, raw sewage and hazardous industrial waste. But thanks to the efforts of concerned citizens, legislators and environmental groups, there may be "clear sailing" yet for the mighty Hudson.

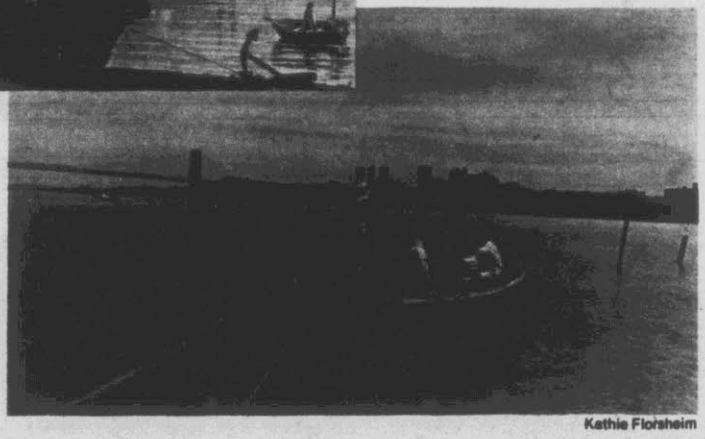

Dominick J. Perone

Courtesy of The New York Historical Society

On the left, the Hudson River as it looked in the early 1800's, while above, folksinger Pete Seeger, who wants to make it that way again, stands aboard the deck of his sloop, the Clearwater. And below, fishermen cast for shad, which along with other fish, are reappearing in the Hudson.

Kathie Florsheim

By Susan Lapinski

Viewed from an airplane, the Hudson River is a lovely silver ribbon that winds its way for 315 miles through the forests and mountains of New York State down to the Atlantic Ocean. At one time it was considered one of the most scenic rivers in the world, but 15 years ago, a Presidential council wrote off the Hudson as no more than an "open sewer."

In those days, the Hudson appeared to deserve its death notices. Like so many rivers in this country, it had become a dumping ground for untreated sewage and industrial waste. Of all our waterways, the Hudson was one of the foulest. Its beaches were closed, and some species of fish were disappearing.

It was an ignominious point in the river's colorful history that included the explorations of Henry Hudson, the inauguration of George Washington on its banks and a school of Hudson River artists who were eager to capture the farms and vineyards, mountains and forests of a lush and lovely region. But as early as the mid-1800's, factories and foundries began to spring up among the oak, chestnut, willow and walnut trees. And soon the railroads came, cutting deep gashes into the shoreline and spilling waste oil into the river.

Today, however, the Hudson River has started to make a comeback. It began in the early 1960's, when both the Federal and state governments, prodded by local environmental groups, awoke from their Rip Van Winkle slumbers and sprang into action. New York State voters approved several environmental bond issues that allocated millions of dollars for a river cleanup. Sewage-treatment plants began to process sewage before returning the waters to the river, and the positive effects showed up quickly.

In two other significant actions, the Hudson River Fishermen's Association revived enforcement of an 1899 law called the Federal Refuse Act, which prohibited industrial dumping in navigable waterways. And in 1965 the Scenic Hudson Preservation Conference won a landmark court case against Con Edison, blocking the building of a power plant which would have cut into Storm King Mountain, one of the most scenic areas in the Hudson Highlands.

A most significant factor in the Hudson's recovery, however, has been a single man: Pete Seeger.

Sitting in his log cabin home overlooking the Hudson River, Seeger seems to typify everything that's lively and hopeful about the river and its region.

"Here in Beacon, black and white, young and old people meet on the waterfront," says Pete, whose career as a folksinger and songwriter has been strongly linked with various causes.

A resident of the Hudson Valley since the 50's, he watched the river become more polluted through industrial abuse and public neglect and less desirable as a scenic and recreational gathering place. Beginning as a crystal-clear trout stream in the Adirondacks, it ends some 315 miles later as sour, brackish water in the Atlantic, past New York City.

"Thirty years ago, I used to watch kids diving for coins in Kingston, and they could see three or four feet down," he recalls. But by the 60's, visibility in the troubled river had sunk to 10 or 12 inches, and Pete began dreaming of a communally owned boat that would bring people together on the river again.

The dream took shape when he saw pictures of the proud, tall-masted cargo sloops that had sailed the Hudson during the last century. Support for the project soon widened from a group of local families to the public at large. After three years of fund-raising through concerts, bake sales and private contributions, the 106-foot sloop Clearwater slid from its Maine shipyard dock into the Damariscotta River for its maiden sail. It was the first Hudson River sloop to be built in a century, and Pete Seeger hoped that it would make people care about their river again.

Ten years later, the Clearwater seems to be doing just that. Each year, thousands of people attend seasonal riverside festivals, featuring the Clearwater's volunteer crew and its cargo of pumpkins or strawberries from upstate farms.

Songs and sloops alone can't save a river, of course. Pete is quick to say that Clearwater's main contribution to a better Hudson River has been the consciousness that something can be done to save it by people who care enough to try.

But this doesn't mean the Hudson's troubles are over. David Seymour of the National Audubon society and the Hudson River Fishermen's Association grants that visibility on the river has improved, "but in terms of real health, we're not that well off. The more sophisticated our testing methods become, the more problems we find." The problems he refers to include the presence in the river of heavy metals, such as cadmium, and fluids used in making electrical capacitors, called polychlorinated biphenyls, or PCB's. With the Government's permission, General Electric had dumped tons of clear, sticky PCB's into the river over a period of years. This was something being done by many industries along U.S. waterways. But when a PCB leak in Japan caused a variety of physical ailments in 1,500 people, New York's environmental commissioner banned most commercial fishing on the Hudson.

Now the PCB problem ranks among the Hudson's worst. In a settlement with the Department of Environmental Conservation, GE paid $4 million toward rectifying the problem. A special advisory committee now estimates that $30 million more in Federal funds is needed to dredge the PCB "hotspots" that continue to threaten the river's health.

Will the Hudson River ever be really clean and healthy again? Committed people are doing more than merely asking themselves that question. The Scenic Hudson Preservation Conference is still fighting the Storm King power plant project, which continues to be reviewed in hearings. The Center for the Hudson River Valley is trying to protect historic Hudson sites and have them registered nationally. And back in Beacon, Pete Seeger and his membership-supported Clearwater group dream of the day when there will be sloop clubs in every American town that is situated on a sailable river, lake or bay.

Meanwhile, out on the Hudson on a recent sunny day, there were many signs of life. People lounged in new waterfront parks. Boats filled marinas. Swans stretched their necks. Oarsmen pulled their shells through the water. And off the river itself, for all its perils and problems, came beautiful brown, blue and golden glints from the sunlight.

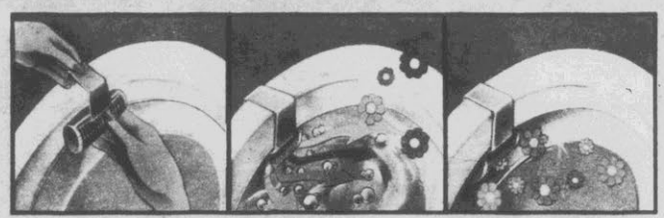

It's not all smooth sailing ahead for the Hudson River and its friends. But as Pete Seeger sings with hope in one of his songs: "Someday, though maybe not this year, my Hudson and my country will run clear." FW

HOW TO PUT A SHOWER IN YOUR BOWL.

Introducing Befresh! Now you can have the advantages of an air freshener and bowl cleaner in one. Befresh! clips right in the toilet bowl, works like a deodorizing shower, releasing a refreshing fragrance with every flush. It even keeps the bowl cleaner by fighting bowl ring build-up between scrubbings. Give your bowl a shower with Sunny Lemon, Rose Garden, or Early Spring. Befresh! makes beautiful scents!

Befresh! snaps in place easily, over the rim and out of sight.

Befresh! has detergents to help fight bowl ring build-up so your bowl stays cleaner and shinier.

Befresh! not only freshens continuously, but releases a shower of fresh scent every time you flush.

Befresh! is safe for use in homes with children and pets. Safe for plumbing, too. Befresh! lasts up to a month in the average home (about 350 flushes), so it's economical as well as convenient!

Blessed Are the Givers: The DeBolts and Their Adopted Family

This Thanksgiving, Dorothy and Bob DeBolt feel they have plenty to be thankful for. So do their 20 children. Six of these kids are the DeBolts' own, 14 are adopted — but they're all one big happy family.

Marvin Lichtner / Lee Gross, Inc.

Some of the DeBolts at dinner: For them, every day is cause for giving thanks.

By John Levin

Karen paused to figure how she was going to make it over the three-quarter-inch-high doorsill and into the foyer where a large "Welcome home Karen!" sign was strung across the wall. She rested her left shoulder against the door jamb and placed her right crutch over the sill. That didn't seem to work, however, so she shifted her position.

"Come on, Karen, you can do it," the other children called encouragingly. Karen looked up at her new brothers and sisters, half of whom sported crutches of their own, and gave a determined push. It was 1972, and Karen had just entered her new home on her own two feet. Artificial feet it is true, but, nevertheless, her own.

Karen DeBolt is one of the most special of this country's "special" children. She is the first congenital quadruple amputee to be adopted in the United States. Her parents are Dorothy and Bob DeBolt, who, besides being parents of six children (Mike, Mimi, Stephanie, Noël and Melanie from Dorothy's previous marriage; Donelle from Bob's other marriage), have adopted 14 others: Some are blind, some crippled and some both.

How did this unique family come to be? Dorothy DeBolt, an attractive blonde, who doesn't look her 50 years, said that she never really set out to adopt any children. Rather, she was presented with a situation in which she felt compelled to act.

In the late 1950's Dorothy, who was then married to Ted Atwood, a successful insurance salesman in Placerville, Calif., was moved by newspaper stories about the orphanages in Korea that were overflowing with Korean-Caucasian children that nobody wanted. She talked to Ted, and together they talked to their four children about sharing their home with a child who needed one. Dorothy and her family ended up adopting two children, Marty and Kim, and not long afterward had Melanie, their fifth child. Then, in 1963 tragedy struck: Ted Atwood died of brain cancer.

John Levin is a freelance writer who recently completed a television screenplay.

Widowed with seven children, Dorothy moved to the San Francisco Bay area where she bought a large, unfurnished home in Piedmont and tried to make ends meet. Soon she became active in Parents Without Partners, and in 1967 was named United States Single Parent of the Year. A year later, Tich and Anh, two 14-year-old Vietnamese boys whose spinal cords had been severed by artillery fire, joined the family. The Committee of Responsibility had asked Dorothy to help find them homes, and when she was unable to, she took them into her own.

So now Dorothy had nine children. "I thought to myself, well, you really blew it," says Dorothy. "You'll never catch a husband now." But that was before her blind date with Bob DeBolt, the handsome president of a construction firm. Shortly thereafter, they were married.

"Being an only child, I always wanted a large family," Bob explains wryly, adding that when he went to pick up his future wife for their first date and saw all the pajama-clad children in the living room, he thought a slumber party was going on. Bob DeBolt soon become part of the biggest permanent slumber party in Piedmont — and it was going to get bigger.

A year after Bob and Dorothy were married, they found themselves with another daughter — Sunee, a 4-year-old Korean-Caucasian girl with shiny black hair and brown, almond-shaped eyes, who was paralyzed from the waist down by polio.

As the DeBolt family has grown, each new member — despite his or her handicaps — has displayed the same willingness to overcome all obstacles, an attitude perhaps best summed up by 13-year old Karen who, when asked what she likes best about herself, replies, "I can do anything."

The DeBolts have a positive, yet realistic, attitude toward their children. "Sometimes it hurts like hell to let a child do something that brings him to the ground crying with frustration," explains Bob DeBolt, "But these things, like climbing the stairs, picking themselves up off the ground when they fall, are things they will have to learn, to survive in this world. The worst thing we can do is keep them dependent upon us for survival." At present, only nine of the DeBolt's 20 children are still living at home.

ABC

An abundance of love: Dorothy DeBolt consoles son J.R.

A cooperative spirit is everywhere apparent in the DeBolt household. The children, normal and "special" alike, all have chores. After breakfast they scrape their own plates and put them in the dishwasher. But with all the rules, regulations and demands, there is one word that permeates all household activity — and that's "love."

The effect of the "special" children on the others has been, according to the DeBolts, nothing but positive. "They are embarrassed to make mountains out of molehills when they see their siblings make molehills out of mountains," Mrs. DeBolt explained to a visitor.

The DeBolts waste no time in integrating their "special children" into the mainstream of society. Sometimes, it causes pain. Like the time Karen came home in tears from a Halloween "trick or treat" outing. Several women had been too upset by Karen's prosthetic hands to give her candy.

Soon after Sunee joined the family, Dat and Trang, two Vietnamese teenagers came to live with the DeBolts and, after them, Karen. About this time, Bob and Dorothy started Aid to Adoption of Special Kids (AASK). AASK is a nonprofit organization in Oakland, Calif., whose primary function is to recruit parents willing to adopt children with special needs. AASK also publicizes the existence of Crippled Children's Services, a national organization that will pay for all medical care related to an adopted child's handicap. The DeBolts frankly acknowledge that without the help of Crippled Children's Services they could never afford their family's medical bills. Bob eventually resigned from his construction firm so that he could devote full time to AASK. He says that knowing there were over 100,000 special children waiting in foster homes and institutions to be adopted gave his work with AASK a sense of urgency.

It was in the spring of 1973 that Dorothy got the first call about Wendy, a blind, battered Korean girl who, if brought to the United States, might regain the sight in one of her eyes with a corneal transplant. The rest of the DeBolt children were overjoyed at the prospect of another sister.

Since adopting Wendy (whose operation was successful), the DeBolts have added six more children to their family: Phong, a Vietnamese child who, at nine, saw his mother and father killed in a bombing raid; J.R., a blind 14-year-old paraplegic; Twé and Lý, two teen-age Vietnamese girls who survived the terrible airplane crash during Operation Babylift; and Reynaldo, 13, who had come from Mexico.

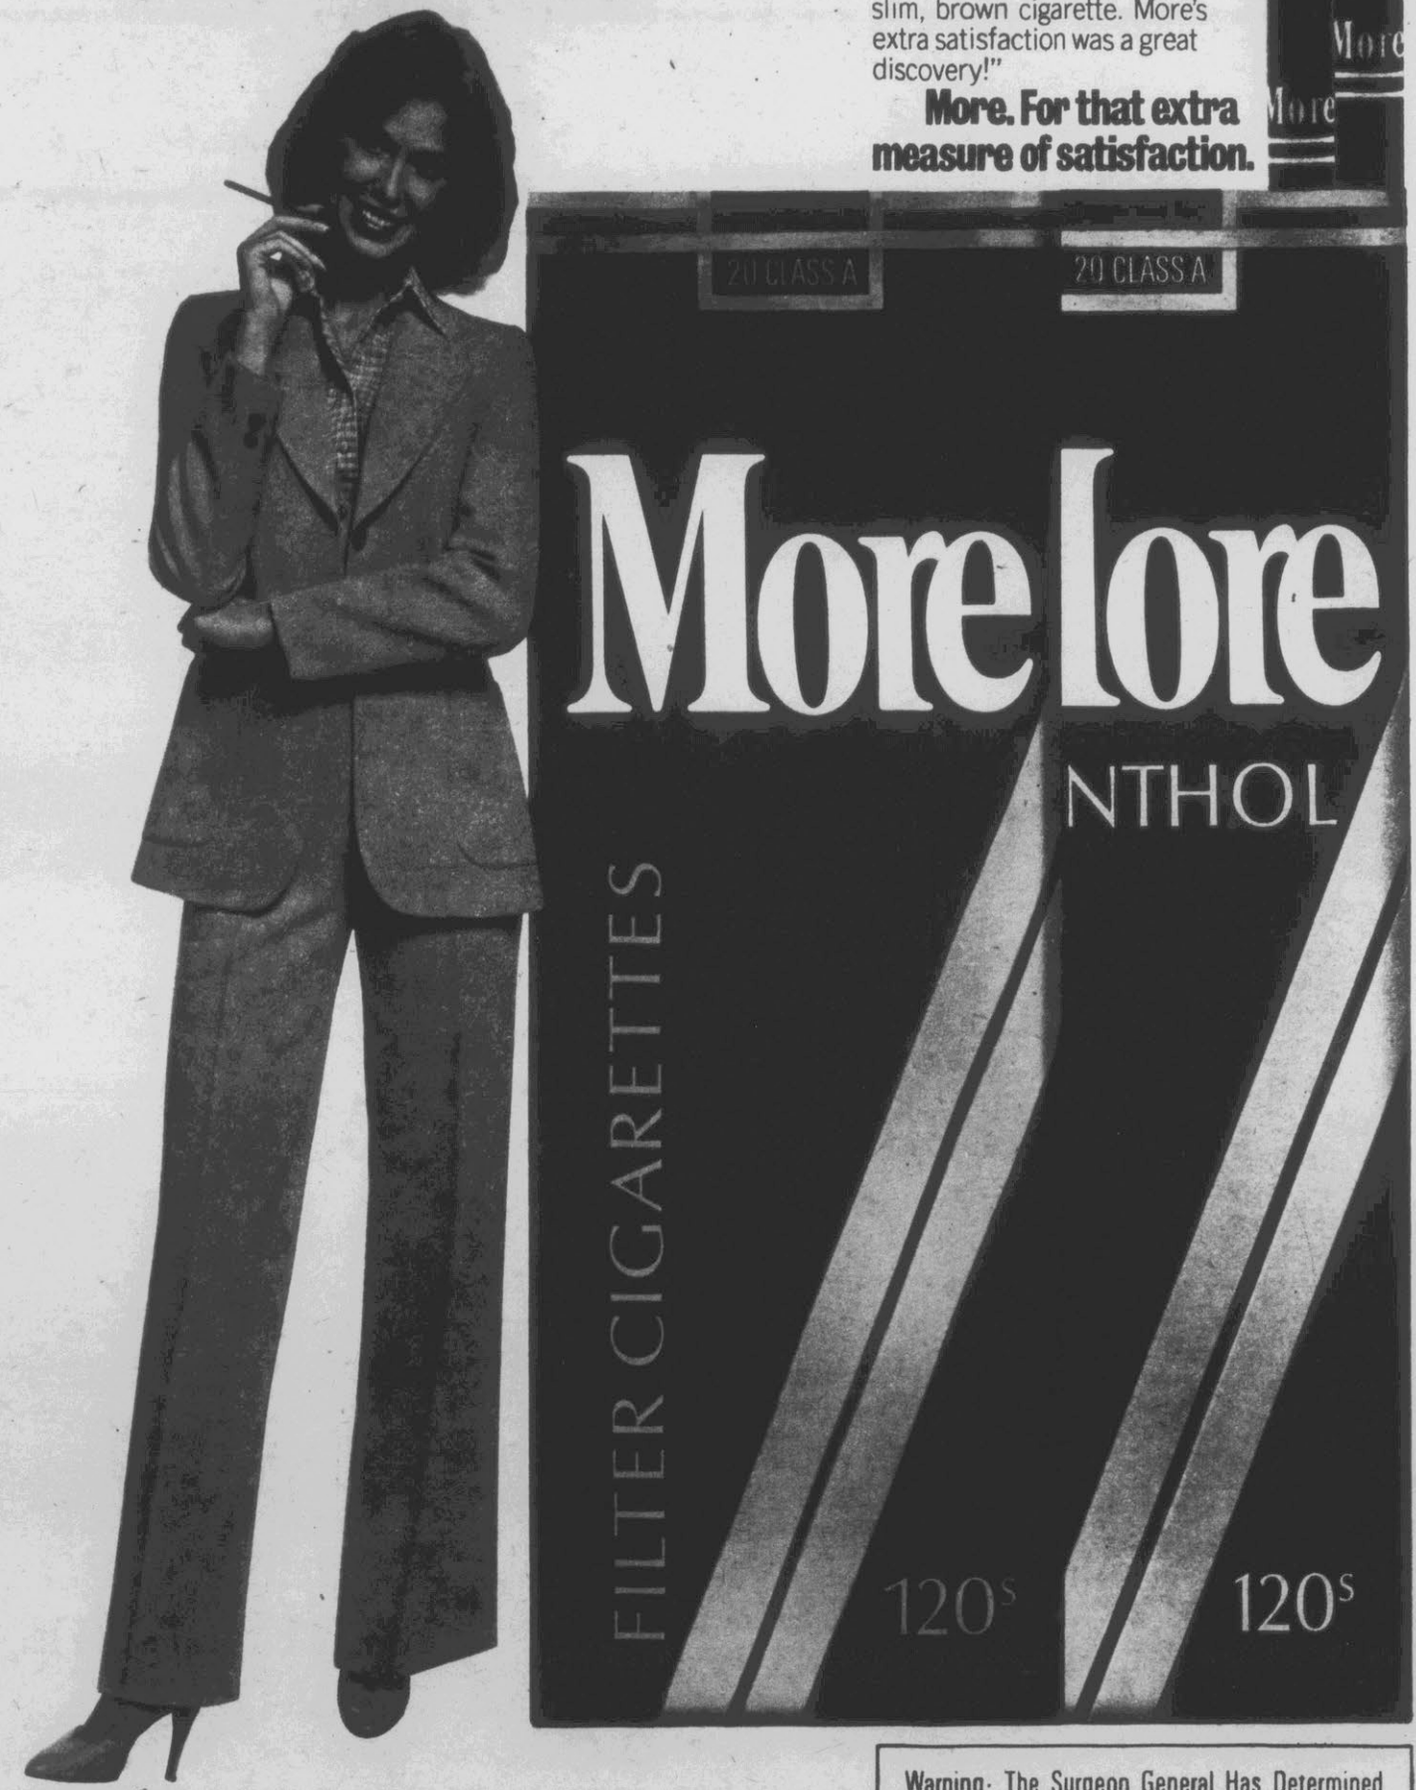

Both Dorothy and Bob assure their friends they plan to stop at 20 children; but no one is counting on it. As Dorothy DeBolt is fond of saying, "There's nothing quite like seeing a child get another chance." FW

"I'm More satisfied."

"I just discovered the great, satisfying taste of More. And because More is 120mm long, I found the great taste lasts longer. That's why I'm extra satisfied.

"More also has the style that could only come from a long, slim, brown cigarette. More's extra satisfaction was a great discovery!"

More. For that extra measure of satisfaction.

For 1980, that figure is a remarkable 40%.

GM
MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Yes, GM's new full-size Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Cadillacs are now even more efficient. As a group, they show an impressive 40% average fuel-economy improvement over 1975 models, based on our projections of their 1980 combined EPA city/highway estimates. And this is even more impressive when you consider that last year's counterparts showed a 31% improvement.

More good news. With this fuel-efficiency improvement, you still get traditional 6-passenger roominess and convenience. Plus there's all kinds of room for carrying things in our new space-efficient models.

So, look. If you need a full-size car but are worried about moving into something less roomy, look into buying or leasing one of the trim 1980 full-size cars at your General Motors dealer's. We've made them more efficient, but kept the room and convenience so many people need.

Take a test-drive and see for yourself.

Thanksgiving In the Plymouth Colony Style

This Thanksgiving, why not celebrate with traditional foods done with a few new and special twists.

HOW TO ROAST A TURKEY

1. Place stuffed and tied turkey, breast-up, on rack in shallow roasting pan. Brush with butter, margarine or cooking oil if desired. If a meat thermometer is used, insert into the thick part of thigh. Thermometer must not touch bone.
2. Roast bird in preheated 325°F. oven for time indicated on chart. When the thermometer registers 180-185°F., and drumstick and thigh move easily, turkey is done.

TIME CHART FOR ROASTING TURKEY IN PREHEATED 325°F. OVEN

Ready-to-Cook Weight	Approximate Cooking Time
6 pounds	3 hours
8 pounds	3½ hours
12 pounds	4½ hours
16 pounds	5½ hours
20 pounds	6¼ hours

Thermometer: All 180-185°F.

Note: Unstuffed turkeys require about a half-hour less roasting time. (Because turkeys vary from one to another due to conformation, variety, etc., cooking times can be only approximate. Thus, it would be wise to allow an extra half-hour of roasting time in case the turkey needs that extra cooking.

HOLIDAY BROCCOLI

1 lb. fresh broccoli, rinsed and trimmed
6 slices bacon, diced
½ cup chopped scallions
¾ cup coarsely chopped walnuts

1. Cook broccoli in 1-inch water, salted and covered, for 12 minutes. Drain and put in serving dish, keep warm.
2. Cook bacon until crisp. Drain on paper towel. Add chopped scallions to bacon drippings in pan and saute. Add walnuts to pan. Sauté 5 minutes, stirring or until golden.
3. Sprinkle bacon, scallions and walnuts over broccoli and serve. Makes 4 servings

CRANBERRY-HERB BREAD STUFFING

1 cup butter or margarine
1 large onion, chopped
1 cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon crumbled poultry seasoning
1 lb. chestnuts, boiled, peeled and chopped coarsely
1½ cups fresh cranberries, rinsed and drained
1 loaf (1 lb.) firm-type white bread, cubed and toasted in oven

1. Melt butter and saute onion and celery until wilted, about 8 minutes. Stir in remaining ingredients.
2. Use mixture to stuff turkey. Sew or skewer opening and roast as usual.

LAYERED CRANBERRY-YOGURT-FRUIT NUT-MOLD

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup sugar
2 cups cranberry juice cocktail
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen strawberries, thawed
1 can (8 ozs.) crushed pineapple
1 can (16 ozs.) whole-berry cranberry sauce
2 medium bananas, mashed
2 cups thick plain yogurt
1 cup broken walnuts

1. Mix gelatin with sugar and 1 cup cranberry juice cocktail over a low heat until gel is dissolved. Add 1 cup juice and set aside.
2. Drain strawberries and pineapple. Reserve fruit. Measure ¾ cup juice. Add juice to gel mixture.
3. Add whole-berry cranberry sauce; stir well. Pour ½ mixture in 9"×13"×2" pan. Chill slightly.
4. Add strawberries and banana. Chill until firm. Spread yogurt and nuts on mixture; let gel thicken slightly.
5. Add pineapple and second banana to gel. Spoon on yogurt; layer and chill.

Makes 8 to 12 servings

STEAMED CRANBERRY BREAD

1 cup unsifted whole wheat flour
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup broken walnut meats
¼ cup honey
½ cup buttermilk or sour cream
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 can (8 ozs.) whole-berry cranberry sauce or 1 cup fresh cranberries, chopped

1. Mix together flour, baking soda and salt. Stir in walnuts.
2. In separate bowl, combine honey, buttermilk or sour cream (if using fresh cranberries use ½ cup buttermilk or sour cream), orange rind and cranberry sauce.
3. With rubber spatula, gently combine the cranberry mixture with flour mixture.

4. Turn into a very well-greased one-pound coffee can. Cover top tightly with a double layer of aluminum foil. Tie the foil on the can with string.
5. Have ready a kettle of boiling water (if using aluminum pot, add cream of tartar to water to keep pot from turning black).
6. To keep can from bouncing around in the kettle, crush a layer of aluminum foil around bottom of can. Place can in kettle. Water should come one-half way up can (add boiling water occasionally, as it boils away).
7. Cover kettle, adjust heat to keep it at a moderate boil. Steam for 1½ hours. Turn bread out of can onto a rack. Flavor improves if stored overnight.

Makes approximately 18 ¼-inch slices

CRANBERRY-PUMPKIN CORNBREAD

1½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons salt
½ cup sugar
1¼ cups yellow cornmeal
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ cup melted butter or margarine
2 eggs
¾ cup canned pumpkin
⅔ cup milk
1 cup fresh cranberries
½ cup chopped walnuts or pecans

1. Mix flour, baking powder, salt, sugar, cornmeal, nutmeg and cinnamon in large bowl.
2. In medium-size bowl, mix butter, eggs, pumpkin and milk until thoroughly mixed. Stir into flour mixture with wooden spoon until well combined.
3. Gently stir in nuts and cranberries. Pour into well-greased 8" × 8" × 2" baking dish. Bake 50 minutes or until tester comes out clean.
4. Cool on wire rack for 10 minutes before removing from pan. Serve warm or cold.

Makes 12 servings

CRANBERRY-APPLE-MINCEMEAT PIE

Crust:
1¾ cups graham cracker crumbs
⅓ cup walnuts (finely chopped)
¼ cup sugar
⅓ cup melted butter or margarine

Filling:
1 can (16 ozs.) whole berry cranberry sauce
¾ cup prepared mincemeat
⅓ cup chopped walnuts
1 cup sliced apples
1 tablespoon sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons melted butter
2 tablespoons brandy

Microwave Method:

1. In small bowl, mix graham cracker crumbs, walnuts, sugar and melted butter. Reserve half of the mixture. Pat half in 10-inch pie plate.
2. In medium-size mixing bowl, combine cranberry sauce, mincemeat, walnuts, apples, sugar, cornstarch, butter and brandy. Fill pie crust with mixture. Pat remaining graham cracker crumbs on top of filling.
3. If your microwave has a probe, insert it so the probe is in the center of the pie. Cover with wax paper. Attach probe at receptacle. Set cooking temperature for 190°F.; microwave on full power until temperature is reached, about 9 or 10 minutes. When oven signals, let pie stand for 19 minutes with wax paper. Then remove wax paper so crumb topping is allowed to become crisp. Serve warm or cold.

NOTE: To flame pie, measure ¼ cup brandy in glass measuring cup on full power for 20 seconds. Remove and spoon brandy on center of pie; light with match.

Conventional Method:

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Bake crust for 8 minutes, then fill with filling and top with remaining crumb mixture. Bake 25 to 30 minutes, until apples are tender.

Makes one 10-inch pie; serves 8 to 12

It's Time to Add The Stuffing

A turkey wouldn't be half as good without the stuffing, and, of course, you want the best stuffing imaginable for your bird. Why don't you try one of our easy variations that takes advantage of the packaged stuffing mixes available in supermarkets.

APRICOT-ALMOND STUFFING

1 cup dried apricots
1 cup water
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup butter or margarine
1 pkg. (8 ozs.) herb-seasoned stuffing
½ cup slivered almonds
¼ teaspoon salt

1. Simmer apricots, water, brown sugar and lemon juice in saucepan for 5 minutes. Drain, reserving the liquid.
2. Add water to make 1 cup. Return to saucepan with butter and heat until butter is melted. Stir in stuffing, almonds and salt.
3. Cut apricots in strips and add to mixture. Stuff and truss turkey and roast according to directions.

Makes enough to stuff 8- to 10-lb. turkey
Recipe may be doubled

OYSTER STUFFING

1 onion, chopped
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup butter or margarine, melted

1 pint small oysters, drained
2 tablespoons snipped parsley
1 package (8 ozs.) herb-seasoned stuffing
½ cup hot water
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ cup light cream

1. Sauté onions and celery in butter until soft. Add oysters and parsley and cook until oysters begin to curl.
2. Add herb-seasoned stuffing, water, salt, pepper and cream. Toss lightly.
3. Rub turkey cavity with butter and salt and stuff turkey. Roast according to directions.

Makes enough to stuff 12- to 14-lb. turkey

CRANBERRY STUFFING

1 lb. whole cranberries
1 cup sugar
1 cup butter or margarine
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
2 pkgs. (7 ozs. each) cube stuffing
1 cup diced apples
1 cup water
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 teaspoon ground mace

1. Heat cranberries with sugar, stirring until sugar dissolves.
2. Continue cooking while mashing berries with a fork, about 5 minutes, or until most berries are crushed; set aside.
3. Melt butter in a large saucepan; sauté onion and garlic lightly. Stir in cranberries and remaining ingredients.
4. Stuff and truss turkey and roast according to directions.

Makes about 12 cups stuffing or enough for a 12- to 16-lb. turkey

APPLE-RAISIN STUFFING

¼ lb. butter or margarine
2 cups hot chicken broth
1 pkg. (16 ozs.) herb-seasoned stuffing
2 cups unpeeled, diced apple
½ cup raisins
¼ cup chopped parsley
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning or thyme leaves

1. Melt butter or margarine in hot chicken broth. Add herb-seasoned stuffing; mix and toss to blend. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Stuff and truss turkey and roast according to directions.

Makes enough for a 12- to 16-lb. turkey

SINGER PRICES ARE DOWN THIS YEAR ALMOST AS DRASTICALLY AS OTHER PRICES ARE UP.

There may never be a better time to buy a Singer* sewing machine. Because we've done something highly irregular to our regular prices.

In a year when the price of almost everything has gone up, and some prices have skyrocketed, Singer has managed to lower prices on six of our machines. As much as $250.

We're going to continue with these low prices as long as possible. We don't know how long that's going to be.

But it's our feeling that, with the cost of clothing as high as it is, more and more people are going to be sewing their own clothes. And saving as much as half or more off the price of ready-made clothes.

TOUCH-TRONIC 2000-2001 MEMORY MACHINES

And there's every reason why they should. In fact, Singer makes sewing so easy that 100 million people already sew with us.

TOUCH-TRONIC* 2001 MEMORY MACHINE	$99 LESS THAN LAST YEAR
TOUCH-TRONIC 2000 MEMORY MACHINE	$250 LESS THAN LAST YEAR
CREATIVE TOUCH FASHION* MACHINE 1030†	$200 LESS THAN LAST YEAR
STYLIST* MACHINE 834†	$55 LESS THAN LAST YEAR
STYLIST MACHINE 533	$40 LESS THAN LAST YEAR
STYLIST MACHINE 543	$30 LESS THAN LAST YEAR

Reductions based on prices in October, 1978, vs. September, 1979, in Singer stores. Comparisons may vary at dealers. †Reductions for 1030 and 831 based on prices for comparable machines.

See for yourself how much sewing machine your money will buy this year.

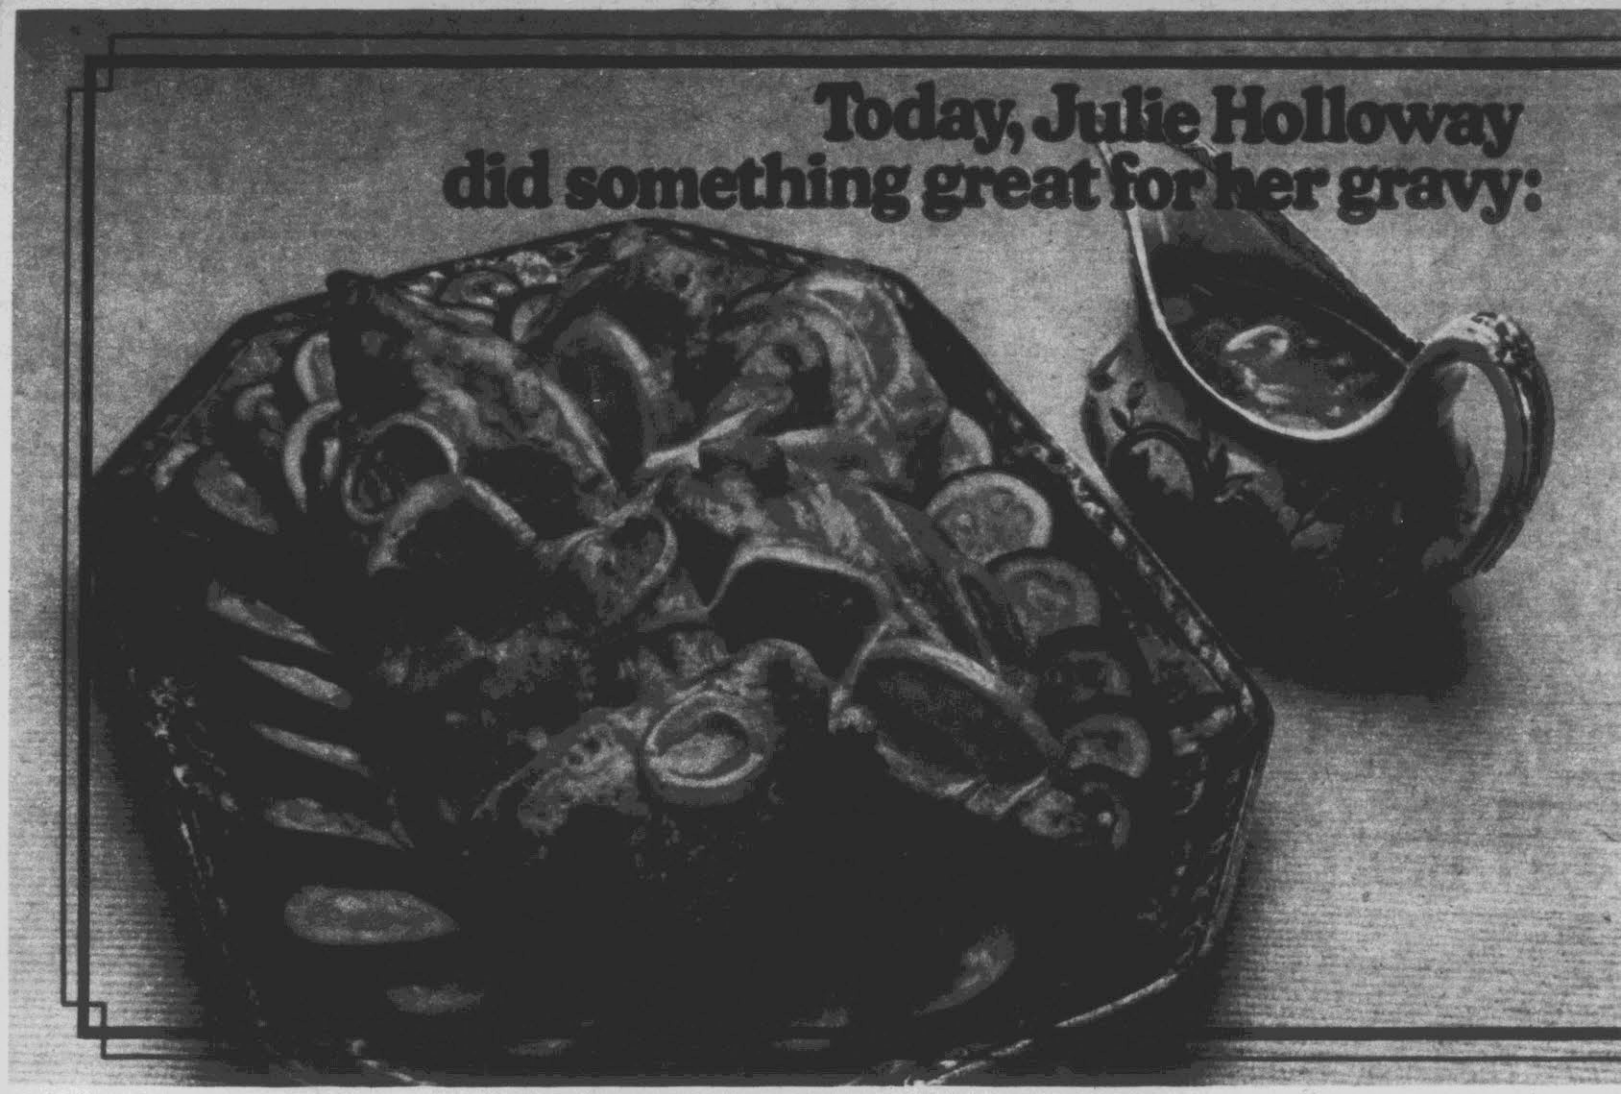

If you've already got a sewing machine, bring it in. We'll give you a trade-in allowance for it that means your new machine costs even less.

You may have thought it was impossible for any company to roll back prices in a year like this one. But it wasn't.

It just took Singer to do it.

From an up-to-the minute reader in Hartsdale, N.Y., comes a recipe using fresh-ground turkey. Barbara Richardson says, "My supermarket had ground turkey for 99¢ a pound. I came up with this tasty recipe for Turkey Loaf that freezes well."

TURKEY LOAF

1 lb. fresh-ground turkey
1 pkg. (8 ozs.) herb-stuffing mix
4 large onions, quartered
2 green peppers, seeded and chunked
2 eggs
¾ teaspoon ground black pepper
1½ teaspoon salt

1. In large bowl, mix ground turkey with herb-stuffing mix.
2. In blender, combine onions, green pepper chunks, eggs, pepper and salt.
3. Pour onion puree mixture over turkey combination; mix well with large spoon.
4. Form mixture into 2 loaves. Place in greased pan, bake at 350°F. for 1 to 1½ hours until crusty. Cut into slices. Loaves may be frozen before baking.

Makes 4 generous servings

Approximate cost: $2.70
Approximate cost per serving: $0.70

From the deep-South kitchen of Lacy L. Gaddy Sr., comes this recipe for "Fish Chowder."

FISH CHOWDER

½ lb. sliced bacon or fat back
¾ cup chopped onions
½ cup chopped green pepper
½ cup chopped celery
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
1 teaspoon salt
1 can (16 ozs.) tomatoes, undrained, or 3 or 4 large peeled fresh tomatoes
2 cups water
2 tablespoons ketchup
1 teaspoon sugar
1½ lbs. boneless cod or haddock, cubed
1 cup long grain rice

1. In Dutch oven, sauté bacon until crisp. Remove bacon, pour off all drippings except 2 tablespoons.
2. Add onions, green pepper, celery, black pepper, Tabasco and salt. Saute, stirring until vegetables are limp, about 8 minutes. Do not burn.
3. Mash tomatoes and add to Dutch oven with water. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 10 to 15 minutes, covered.
4. Add ketchup and sugar. Stir in fish cubes. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 10 to 15 minutes, covered, until fish is cooked.
5. Cook rice separately according to package directions.
6. To serve, place large spoon of rice in soup bowl, top with Fish Chowder and a sprinkle of the crisp bacon. Pass additional Tabasco sauce, if desired.

Makes 4 main-dish servings

Approximate cost: $4.55
Approximate cost per serving: $1.10

she ran out of flour.

There stood Julie, right in the middle of her Chicken with Garden Gravy, with no more flour.

That's when Julie remembered the box of Argo Corn Starch in the pantry. And came up with her best gravy ever!

It was rich and velvet-smooth. With no pasty taste to blur the wholesome goodness of the ingredients. What's more, it took just a couple of minutes to prepare.

We think you'll like Julie Holloway's new Chicken with Garden Gravy. And we think you'll also like the difference Argo makes in sauces, pie fillings, soups, puddings... That's why we've put together two king-size, splatter-proof recipe cards. They're filled with all sorts of wonderful Argo dishes. And they're yours for the asking.

Argo® Corn Starch
The "no lump" gravy-maker

Julie's New Chicken with Garden Gravy

1 c sliced onion
1 c thinly sliced carrots
1 c thinly sliced celery
1 lemon, sliced
1 clove garlic, minced
1½ tsp salt
½ tsp dried thyme leaves
¼ tsp pepper
1 broiler-fryer chicken, cut up
¼ c margarine, melted
1 lb zucchini, thinly sliced
2 Tbsp Argo corn starch
1½ c cool chicken bouillon or water

In shallow roasting pan, mix first 8 ingredients. Place chicken on top—skin side up; brush with margarine. Bake at 375° F 30 min. Add zucchini; bake 30 min. longer until tender. Remove chicken, zucchini and lemon. Mix Argo corn starch and bouillon until smooth; pour into pan. Stirring constantly, bring to boil over medium heat and boil 1 min. Serve with chicken. Serves 4.

In Marilyn's Kitchen

This month, we make good use of that handsome elusive vegetable: the pumpkin. I must confess a few years ago when I first made pumpkin soup from the seemingly impenetrable orange squash, I felt a real sense of accomplishment. The soup has become a favorite of my family and friends. The beauty of the recipe is that it makes a big batch and can be frozen easily in family- or guest-sized containers.

Pumpkin, whether fresh, frozen or canned is an excellent supply of Vitamin A, a good source of Vitamin C and moderately high in natural fiber. It is low in calories also, as a 3¼-ounce serving of plain, mashed pumpkin contains only 83 calories.

PUMPKIN BREAD

Pumpkin Bread is a moist, spicy loaf. This recipe is worth the time to make as it produces 2 large loaves which freeze well. I personally like the version with the candied ginger best. It's simply delicious with cream cheese and a tangy orange marmalade.

4 eggs
1 can (1 lb.) mashed pumpkin
⅔ cup water
1 teaspoon vinegar
½ cup milk
3½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground cloves
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅔ cup coarsely chopped walnuts or pecans
⅔ cup raisins, chopped dates, chopped prunes or chopped candied ginger

1. Heat oven to 350°F. Heavily grease and lightly flour two 9-" × 5-" × 3-" loaf pans or three 8½-" × 4½-" × 2½-" loaf pans.

2. In large bowl, using electric mixer, beat shortening and sugar together until light and fluffy.

3. Add eggs and beat well until combined. Add pumpkin, water and vinegar mixed with milk. Beat at medium speed until combined.

4. Mix flour with soda, salt, baking powder and spices. Gradually add flour mixture, beating at low speed. Stir in walnuts and raisins.

5. Divide batter between the two pans evenly. Bake for about 70 minutes or until bread tests dones with a cake tester.

6. Allow to cool 10 minutes in pans, then invert cake onto racks to cool completely. Slices best day after making. Loaves may be frozen. Makes 2 loaves

PUMPKIN SOUP

1 (3-lb. size) pumpkin, peeled, seeded and diced*
3 cups sliced onion
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 qts. chicken broth
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon ground ginger
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1 qt. milk or 3 cups milk and 1 cup light cream

1. Place pumpkin on damp towel to prevent slipping. With heavy, sharp knife or cleaver, cut open pumpkin and scrape out fibers and seeds; discard.

2. Peel off brittle hard skin. Cut pumpkin into small cubes; you will have about 7 or 8 cups.

3. In large Dutch oven or kettle, saute pumpkin and onions in 6 tablespoons butter, stirring until lightly browned.

4. Add chicken broth. Heat to boiling, cover, reduce heat and simmer 30 to 40 minutes until pumpkin is very tender.

5. Puree pumpkin and onions in electric blender or food processor a little at a time until all is pureed. Reserve chicken broth.

6. In large Dutch oven or kettle, heat ¼ cup butter until melted; blend in the flour, salt, pepper, ginger and nutmeg. Gradually add pureed pumpkin-onion-chicken broth mixture and milk.

7. Heat to boiling, stirring with large wire whisk until soup thickens. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes before serving.

Makes about 5 quarts

Editor's Note: The amount of seasonings you add is up to you. Sometimes I add more, depending on the essential flavor of the pumpkin itself. Also the soup freezes very well.

*If you want to skip the fresh pumpkin, 4 pkgs. 10-oz. size frozen mashed squash may be substituted.

BOOKS AND COOKS: A Monthly Review of What's New In the World of Cookbooks

Here's news! A marvelous, completely revised edition of the famed The Fanny Farmer Cookbook has just been released. The celebrated 1896 work of the grande dame of American cooking has been updated, revitalized and rejuvenated. We owe this labor of love to the four-year project of Marion Cunningham, who, with Jeri Laber, has finished with cooking colors. You will find the original recipes, plus delightful additions.

In conversation with Marion Cunningham, who painstakingly tested all the recipes, she confides, "We have become more cosmopolitan about food since World War II. In Fannie's time we, as a nation, were more influenced by the Puritan ethic: food was bland...now our food is livelier and more sensual."

I also asked Marion, as a result of doing all that prodigious testing, if she knew Fannie Merritt Farmer any better afterward? "Yes," Marion replied, "she was meticulous and careful and extremely well organized, especially compared with other cookbook writers of that era. She had a scientific mind, an artistic palate and was constantly interested in food; she traveled widely; she lectured. Fannie gave to America a book that has lived 80 years. It became an American dowry, a book that mothers gave to their daughters when they married."

And so this new edition, published by Alfred A. Knopf, has arrived. We share a few recipes, printed by permission.

SAUTÉED CHICKEN BREASTS

Buy 3 pounds of unboned chicken breasts if you are boning them yourself. This is equally good made with thin slices of turkey breast.

- ⅓ cup flour
- 1½ lbs. skinned and boned chicken breasts
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 tablespoons oil
- Juice of one lemon
- Salt
- Freshly ground pepper
- 1 tablespoon minced parsley

1. Spread the flour on a piece of wax paper and dredge each chicken breast. Melt the butter and oil in a skillet. When it foams, add the chicken and cook over medium-high heat for about 3 minutes on each side.
2. Remove chicken to a warm platter.
3. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons of fat from the pan and stir in the lemon juice and salt and pepper, to taste. When it is very hot, spoon this sauce over the chicken and sprinkle with parsley.
4. Baked Chicken Breasts. Omit the flour. Season each breast with salt and pepper; place in a shallow pan and dot with 4 tablespoons butter. Cover with foil and place in a preheated 375°F. oven for 20 minutes or until done. Remove the foil, drizzle on the lemon juice and sprinkle with the parsley.

Makes 4 servings

REVOLTILLOS

This is an unusual dish with a strong flavor of bay and the contrasting tastes of raisins and salty olives.

- ¼ cup oil
- 3 green peppers, chopped
- 3 onions, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 lbs. chopped beef
- ¾ cup raisins
- ¾ cup ripe olives
- 5 bay leaves
- 2 cups beef broth
- 1 cup rice

1. Heat the oil in a large skillet with a lid. Stir in the peppers, onions and garlic. Cook, stirring until they are soft.

2. Add the beef and break it up with a fork, cooking until it loses its pink color. Add the raisins, olives and bay leaves; cover and simmer for 30 minutes. Remove the bay leaves.

3. Meanwhile, bring the beef broth to a boil in a saucepan and slowly add the rice. Shake the pan so that the rice will level and cook evenly. Cover and cook 20 minutes. When the liquid is absorbed, toss the rice with a fork, add to the meat mixture and serve. Makes 8 servings

Maurice Moore-Betty is a charming, no-nonsense type of man with a crisp sense of authority and a twinkle in his eye. This efficient manner is certainly due in no little part to the fact that he is a retired British army officer. For many years after World War II, he operated one of London's finest restaurants. In 1964 Maurice founded his celebrated cooking school in New York City.

As a result of all that vast cooking experience, Maurice has just come out with The Maurice Moore-Betty Cookbook, (Bobbs-Merrill). It contains more than 200 recipes, from consommés to soufflés, from aspics to crème brûlées.

There is a sense of history through the pages, both personal and worldwide, and chapters are given an in-depth introduction. The many line drawings add to one's visual enjoyment of the book. A pertinent description prefaces each recipe, which I found helpful and enlightening. Here we present recipes from the cookbook, reprinted by permission.

CARBONNADES FLAMANDES

Prepared mustard—dijon is my preference—and dark beer give this excellent Belgian dish its unique character. It is perfect winter fare and freezes successfully. Double the recipe and freeze half.

1 cup flour
1 tablespoon salt
3 to 4 twists of the pepper mill
½ lb. lean bacon, cubed
4 tablespoons butter
5 or 6 large onions, thinly sliced
4 lbs. boneless chuck, cut in 1½-inch cubes
Pinch of dried thyme or 3 or 4 leaves of fresh thyme
1 bay leaf
2 slices bread
Dijon mustard, enough to spread on one side of each slice of bread
2 bottles of dark beer (12 ozs. each)

1. Heat oven to 320°F.

2. Mix the flour, salt and pepper. Cook the bacon in a heavy skillet until most of the fat has been extracted. Transfer the bacon pieces to the casserole you will be using for the Carbonnade. Pour off all but three to four tablespoons of the fat.

3. Add the butter and heat until hot, but not smoking. Brown the onions, lift them out and set aside. Dredge the meat cubes in the flour; shake off the excess and brown them in the skillet.

4. Transfer the beef to the casserole. Cover with sautéed onions. Sprinkle with thyme and broken-up bay leaf. Spread slices of bread with mustard and lay them over the beef, mustard-side down. Pour the beer over the bread. Bring the casserole to a boil on top of the range, then transfer to the heated oven and bake for 40 minutes.

5. Stir the bread into the beef and continue cooking for one-and-a-half hours, or until tender. After one hour, test from time to time. Correct the seasoning. Serve with boiled potatoes.

Makes 8 servings

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Can You Like Someone but Not His House?

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If you don't like a person's house, the odds are better than even that you'll never like him.

2. The room in which your television set is located provides an interesting clue to your socio-economic status.

3. Living-room styles reveal political attitudes.

4. The kind of furniture and décor which a couple selects to furnish their home tells a lot about their general attitudes.

5. Some people are adversely affected by apartment-living, while others vastly prefer it to living in a house.

6. Living in a mobile home community has an adverse effect on a child's personality and affects his relationships with his peers who dwell in conventional houses.

ANSWERS

1. True. An Illinois Institute of Technology study showed that people pick a particular house style because of specific personality characteristics. The findings indicate that you'll be able to tell a lot more about a person — how much you have in common, how well you're likely to get along with him — after you visit his house. If you don't like his house, it's likely that conflicting personality differences are going to prevent you from becoming "the best of friends."

2. True. A University of Michigan study included in-depth interviews with a probability sample of residents of a metropolitan area. Findings: "The presence of a television set in the living room is associated with relatively low-income households. Higher-income families (are more likely to) put the television set in a room designed for televison viewing."

3. True. From the data provided by the same study "it appears that people who manifest a consistent lifestyle in their living-room décor also express a consistent and, relatively speaking, a more extreme political view (right or left) of the world than those who manifest mixed tastes in décor."

4. True. Studies conducted by sociologists Edward O. Lauman and James S. House conclude that persons whose homes feature traditional furniture and décor "are also likely to hold traditional views about marriage — to feel that husbands and wives should stick to masculine and feminine tasks, as traditionally defined."

5. True. Much depends on an individual's temperament and personality characteristics. Psychological studies conducted at Queen's University (Britain) show that for many highly nervous persons who tend to be lacking in emotional stability, apartment-living — and various stresses associated with it — produces a form of neurosis, while house-dwelling does not.

6. False. In a University of Montana study, a representative cross section of children from both types of homes were given personality tests designed to determine emotional attitudes. Results: No significant differences in emotional adjustment were found between mobile home children and traditional, single-family-dwelling children. FW

7 Ways to Beat Laziness

© 1979 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved.

By Melanie C. Stevens

Laziness is something that happens to all of us from time to time. There are just some moments when, try as you might, you can't get yourself to budge on an everyday task or even an important project.

Sometimes what you may think of as laziness is just a natural need to relax. "It's important to your mental and physical health to take time off," says Dr. Iris Fodor, associate professor of psychology at New York University. Don't feel guilty about sometimes padding around in your robe and slippers.

A lazy or lethargic feeling could also be a sign that you're not getting enough exercise. Regular cardiovascular exercise helps distribute oxygen to all your muscles and leaves you with a feeling of alertness. Eating habits, too, can contribute to a tired feeling. According to Karen Lechowich, registered dietician with the American Dietetic Association, "We're eating the most at the time of day when we're least active." Two easy steps to more energy: Avoid lots of snacking and treat yourself to a good breakfast.

Maybe, like most people, you have plenty of energy for the things you really want to do — it's getting the other stuff done that's the problem. According to Stephanie Winston, author Getting Organized: The Easy Way To Put Your Life In Order (Warner Books), what seems to be laziness is often just a natural reaction to not knowing how to approach a task. "Nobody is ever taught to be organized," she says — and rather than face an overwhelming project you simply avoid it.

If that's the case, the following practical techniques should help. First, break the task down into components and assign yourself a limited task to do each day. Cleaning a closet shelf by shelf may seem odd if you're used to the all-or-nothing method, but it works — and without all that unnecessary hassle.

Second, use your biological rhythms to your advantage. "Most people have the most energy, resilience and concentration in the morning," says Winston. (Night people, by contrast, will start to perk up in the afternoon.) When you allocate stressful jobs to your best time of day, they're easier to handle. Third, learn how and when to delegate. You can pay someone to do some things, swap services with friends — even cross some jobs off your list as just not worth doing.

There are psychological factors, too, that can explain some kinds of laziness. "Once you define a task as something that ought to be done, part of you doesn't really want to do it," says Fodor. "Your defiance is a natural reaction to what you see as a chore." If you can convince yourself that the job is worth doing, chances are you'll do it — easily.

Sometimes laziness gets out of hand. "Laziness is one of the symptoms accompanying depression," explains Fodor. "People who have difficulty getting started every day should seek professional help."

But in any case, laziness is not "bad" — it's simply a way of reacting to a whole range of events. If most of us are lazy from time to time, it seems we have every reason to be. So take it easy on yourself. After all, you're in good company — right, Dagwood? FW

The World's Finest Miniature $20 Gold Piece

SOLID 22 KARAT GOLD - ONLY $20.

An Official Gold Issue of The Columbia Mint, Washington, D.C. in Solid 22 Karat Gold

You have a rare opportunity to possess the world's first miniature $20.00 Gold Piece in solid 22 karat gold. This piece is minted in the same manner and contains the same fineness of pure gold (.900 fine) as the Saint-Gauden's $20.00 Gold Piece struck by the U.S. Mint in 1908. Each Gold Piece in pure .900 fine gold will be minted from hand-engraved dies capturing even the most delicate detail of the original Saint-Gauden's $20.00 Gold Piece. Individually minted to capture the full three-dimensional relief of this the most beautiful of all U.S. coins. Each brilliant pure gold miniature $20.00 Gold Piece is presented in a specially designed collector's case, accompanied by a serially numbered Certificate of Authenticity and a historical account of the Saint-Gauden's gold coinage.

AVAILABLE FOR A LIMITED TIME!

This exquisitely minted solid 22 karat gold (.900 fine) Gold Piece is available exclusively from The Columbia Mint - one of America's private mints - Washington, D.C. The current price for this Gold Piece is $20. Due to the fluctuations in the world market price of gold, this price can be guaranteed only until December 15, 1979. Therefore, you are urged to order yours now while the opportunity is before you.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

If for any reason you are not completely satisfied with your solid 22 karat gold (.900 fine) Gold Piece, you may return it within thirty (30) days for a full refund. There is a strict limit of five miniature $20.00 Gold Pieces per order. However, you are reminded to act promptly to take advantage of the current price of only $20. each as this price can be guaranteed only until December 15, 1979.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Keep That Shining Smile

Healthy teeth are not all that difficult to have, but the rules of good care may be changing. Dr. Marshall Midda, a former chairman of the British Dental Health Foundation, says that "for years we've told people not to eat sweets, and we're still seeing cavities." Dr. Midda feels that plaque, a film that forms on the teeth and provides a growing place for bacteria, is a tooth's worst enemy, not only because it causes dental caries, but also because it encourages gum decay, the major cause of tooth loss.

What are Dr. Midda's guidelines for healthier teeth? He suggests that you remove plaque by brushing with a soft brush and then flossing between each tooth at least once a day. Fortify your teeth with fluoride (available in a number of toothpastes), and eat sugar sensibly. Finally, he notes that "the dentist is only part of a team. Dentists can provide guidance and can help control a problem, but patients should realize that they can do a lot to prevent those problems."

Wagner International Photos Inc.

The Decades That Were

What was Lindbergh's job before he made his historic flight from New York to Paris? On what charges did the police finally arrest Al Capone? Who was John T. Scopes, and why was his trial so famous? The answers are below, but starting this month, Home Box Office's documentary special, Time Was, will fill you in on these and a number of other bits of history. Using rare film-footage, each Time Was episode covers one decade and will be aired nine times a month; the whole series takes a look at the life and times of America and the world from the 1920's up through the 1970's.

The show is hosted by Dick Cavett, and a photographic process called chromakey lets him step back in time to actually "be there" when Lindy takes off and Ford's first cars roll off the assembly line.

Now, for those answers: Lindbergh was a U.S. mail pilot; Capone was finally convicted of income-tax evasion; and John T. Scopes was a Tennessee schoolteacher who was arrested for teaching his students Darwin's theory of evolution rather than the Bible's edict on man's divine creation.

Overcoming Shyness

The holiday season, with all its parties and get-togethers, can be an unhappy time if you're shy. "I've never met a shy person who liked being shy," says Philip Zimbardo, a psychologist at Stanford University and an author of The Shyness Workbook (A & W Library). "And once you're known as shy, other people treat you as fragile. Shy people aren't treated as equals.

Zimbardo, who's conducted a number of shyness workshops, feels that shyness is an excessive preoccupation with oneself. "People who are shy are too concerned with their own thoughts and the way they're being perceived by other people. Shyness is really selfishness in a way," he explains.

In his studies on shyness, Zimbardo has found that "a lot of shy people are unaware that they don't smile or make eye contact. They put up an uncommunicative front that looks hard to get through. The next time you're at a party, single out someone else who looks shy and introduce yourself. Make a point of paying attention to another person and you'll find that you can't dwell on your own problem. And remember: Chances are about half the people at the party are experiencing some degree of shyness."

Fairy Tales Come True

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs is a storybook classic that's delighted children for generations. And 22-year-old Mary Jo Salerno, who plays Snow White in the new Radio City Music Hall stage adaptation of Walt Disney's film, feels that being picked to play Snow White was a fairy tale come true.

"I grew up in a small town north of Chicago," explains Mary Jo, "and then got a degree in music from Drake University in Iowa. I went back to Chicago and was working in a restaurant and taking voice lessons, when I heard through a friend that Radio City was conducting a nationwide search for Snow White. So, I tried out and I made the finals. They flew all the finalists to New York for the last round, and I was chosen."

Right now, Mary Jo is playing Snow White at Radio City in New York, but the show will begin a year-long tour of major American cities on December 1. After next year, Mary Jo wants to return to New York and study opera, but in the meantime, being "the fairest of them all" is wonderful.

Lifestyles

Work. Today's labor force is made up of 81.3 million people, and labor unions represent 26.5 percent of those workers, says a study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor. Workers represented by labor organizations earn an average of $262 a week, $41 more than those who are not.

Communications. Doctors have taken to the air waves: their local TV and radio programs are attracting listeners and viewers in record numbers, reports Medical Economics magazine. The results are astounding. When a San Antonio pediatrician urged TV viewers to take advantage of free blood-pressure screenings, 8,000 people showed up — 2,000 more than had ever appeared before.

Cold Cures. An Israeli physician says that he's come up with a cure for the common cold. He's invented a device that sends 109.4°F. steam into the nostrils, reports Medical World News. This is hot enough to kill cold germs, but not hot enough to damage tissue. In tests at Israel's Weizmann Institute, 85 percent of the patients with colds felt relief from their symptoms after the first treatment. The device is not available in this country, and U.S. experts, while acknowledging that the cure seems possible, are greeting the Israeli claims cautiously.
