President Explains Can't Set Deadline

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Carter says he cannot set a deadline for the release of 49 American hostages by Iran and he's asking the American people to be determined but patient.

"Excessive threats" of military action could cause the death of the hostages, a calm, deliberate Carter said in a nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday night.

The president's position won nearly unanimous congressional backing, despite some sentiment in favor of setting a deadline in the event peaceful means are exhausted.

"It would not be possible or even advisable for me to set a deadline about when or if I would take certain action," Carter said. "I never forget for one moment that I'm awake about the hostages whose lives and safety depend on me."

Carter refused to discuss the military options he is considering. "I'm determined to do the best I can, through diplomatic means and through peaceful means, to insure the safety of our hostages and their release.

"Other actions which I might decide to take would come in the future, after those peaceful means have been exhausted," he said, refusing to elaborate.

Carter said he hoped international pressure still might change the minds of Iran's leaders.

He pledged that the United States would "not submit to blackmail," and lent no encouragement to suggestions that Iran might be appeased by some kind of international tribunal to investigate alleged crimes committed by the ousted shah during his regime.

"I don't know of any international forum within which charges have ever been brought against a deposed leader who has left his country," Carter said.

He said the issue "can be pursued," but "it should be pursued under international law."

The immediate domestic reaction to Carter's news conference was positive, both from Congress and from rival presidential candidates.

"I have supported those steps taken by the president, and I have every intention to support those steps in the future," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"Tonight, as for the last 25 nights, America has but one president," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., a Republican presidential candidate.

The only criticism of Carter's approach revolved around his unwillingness to talk of deadlines.

"I think he should have preserved the option of issuing a time deadline for the release of the hostages," said Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla.

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., is the leader of a group of 53 House members who are proposing a resolution urging the president to set a deadline after peaceful avenues have been exhausted.

Stratton said he did not think the president's posture conflicted with his own. "What he said was he didn't want to consider any military action until all peaceful means were exhausted, and that's exactly our position."

Outside Washington, the reaction was similar.

In Mt. Vernon, Ohio, the 17-year-old daughter of one of the hostages said her family agrees "with everything he says. We support him completely."

"We should continue to try to settle it peacefully. We should support the president thoroughly, not try to start a war prematurely," said Diane Moore, whose father, Bert Moore, is counselor for administration at the embassy.

In Chicago, Cardinal John Cody asked that the bells of Roman Catholic churches in his diocese be rung each day at noon until the hostages are released, in accordance with a White House request.

The White House suggested the bell-ringing, as well as sending letters to the Iranian mission at the United Nations, as ways that Americans could vent their feelings without risking retaliation against the hostages.

Some Americans felt that was not enough. Charles Caldwell, a print-shop owner from Oak Cliff, Texas, said he did not think the present situation can continue much longer.

"I agree the president should try to pursue and develop all avenues of peace, but it seems the longer it goes on, the more dignity and self-respect we lose," Caldwell said.

Annexation Rezoning Items Okayed By Board

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Four annexation items and four matters involving rezoning were recommended to the City Council for approval by the Joint City-County and Greenville Planning and Zoning Commissions.

While the two boards took action on a variety of business last night, several other items were tabled or deferred until later dates pending additional study and review.

Unanimous approval was given to the recommendation that the Council approve the annexation of Section II of Carriage House, Quail Ridge development, the nature park site off Mumford Road, and property in the area of Arlington Boulevard, Red Banks Road and NC 43-New Bern Highway, including the Lewis Evans property and Section II of Courtney Square.

Staff Planner Wade Pitt, who discussed the four areas, noted that an annexation petition had been received by the city from the owners of Carriage House Apartments. Pitt said that city departments indicated no problems in providing local services to the section, located off NC 43 South.

The planner mentioned that five structures, containing 44 units, are involved in the section to be annexed and would result in the addition of approximately 120 persons to the city. The annexation move would also include the highway right-of-way, he said.

A petition has also been received by the city from the developers of Quail Ridge, located across 14th Street Extension from Windy Ridge, it was noted. Pitt explained that the new development is located approximately one-quarter mile from the existing city limits and would be treated as a satellite annexation.

Some 17 acres are involved, he said, and 102 units are planned for development. Pitt reported that at full occupancy, the section would add approximately $3.7 million to the tax valuation of the city.

The criteria for bringing the area into the city under satellite annexation procedures have been met and Pitt said that the city departments indicated no major service problems.

The planner pointed out that the City Council, in effect, petitioned itself to annex the nature park site located off Mumford Road. The city-owned property is located adjacent to the city limits.

No service problems are foreseen with the area of Arlington Boulevard, Red Banks Road and NC 43 regarding annexation, Pitt said. He mentioned that the Planning Department conducted an annexation feasibility study of the area, which is adjacent and contiguous to the present corporate limits.

The joint board voted to recommend that the Council approve the request of Leroy Cherry and Associates for rezoning 6.4 acres on the east side of 14th Street Extension, just beyond its intersection with the Southern Railway line, from R-9 to R-6.

Cherry explained to the board members that the area has presented a major design problem in that a gas pipeline crosses the property. Cherry said that he did not realize the location of the line when he initially sought rezoning but he added that he would be unable to utilize the tract with single family development in view of the line. A street would have to parallel the pipeline or he would have a design disaster, he asserted.

Planning Director Bobby Roberson said that the planning staff had no objections to the matter and he noted that rezoning of the 150-foot deep tract to R-6 would afford the developer an opportunity to have internal traffic rather than individual driveway cuts on 14th Street. Single family development would have necessitated additional driveway access points.

Commissioners expressed concern regarding additional driveway cuts on 14th Street Extension.

Cherry said that with R-6 zoning he would be able to handle parking and traffic in his development through an internal pattern rather than excessive driveway cuts.

Commissioners endorsed a request by Marvin K. Blount Jr. for rezoning 150 acres on the east side of the Tar Road (Evans Street Extension)

Massive Iranian Protest Turn-Out

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Iranians, some chanting "Islam up, Carter down!", marched in Tehran today in response to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's call for massive anti-American protests on this important Moslem holy day of sacrifice and martyrdom.

The demonstrators stayed away from the U.S. Embassy and the 49 Americans held hostage there.

Later in the day, the Iranian news agency Pars reported that explosions damaged two oil pipelines in the southwestern province of Khuzestan, where ethnic Arab groups have been fighting an underground war for greater autonomy from the Khomeini regime. The agency quoted an official source as saying both explosions were sabotage.

Khomeini's Revolutionary Council fired Abolhassan Bani Sadr as Iran's foreign policy spokesman Wednesday and replaced him with Sadeq Ghotbzadeh, a hard-line member of the council, apparently dooming U.N. Security Council efforts to ease the U.S.-Iranian crisis.

The huge crowds in Tehran converged initially around the capital's Revolution Square, some four miles from the U.S. Embassy where pro-Khomeini militants have been holding the hostages since Nov. 4 in a bid to get the U.S. government to extradite the shah.

They then marched to the towering Shahyad monument near the airport, in the opposite direction from the embassy, about 10 miles away. Some in the throng wore white shrouds emblazoned in red letters with the words: "Yankees, We Will Cut Off Your Hands," and "We Are Ready To Die For Islam."

Marshalls wearing lapel buttons controlled the movements of the hundreds of separate marching groups — men at the front of the various processions followed by women clad in chadors, the traditional black veils. Some women carried babies.

Militants with bullhorns set the tone for the marchers. As the crowds chanted praise of Allah and Khomeini, the city thundered with "Allahu Akbar, Khomeini Ragbar!" — "God is Great, Khomeini is the Leader!" and "Islam Up, Carter Down!"

Mixed with the green flags of Islam and religious banners, were banners declaring "U.S. Imperialism Surrender the Shah," "The United Nations — Tool of the U.S.A.," "Death to Carter and His Guest" and "Iran Does Not Recognize the Security Council Vote."

Khomeini has yet to announce whether Ghotbzadeh will go to New York to attend the emergency session of the U.N. Security Council on the U.S.-Iranian crisis. The session was set for Saturday, and Bani Sadr, who wanted to mediate an end to the crisis, had been scheduled to address the U.N. meeting.

Bani Sadr had been trying to arrange a compromise between U.S. and Iranian positions on the 49 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4 by Moslem militants demanding the U.S. government extradite Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran to stand trial as a war criminal.

But Bani Sadr's attempts at seeking some sort of middle way out of the impasse only stiffened the resolve of the embassy occupiers and Khomeini.

On Wednesday, the militants condemned the U.N. Security Council effort to mediate the crisis and Bani Sadr's plans to represent Iran at the scheduled council debate.

Echoing Khomeini's own rejection of U.N. mediation, they condemned the world forum as the "Satanic Council" and "Carter's mouthpiece," and said again they will settle for nothing less than return of the deposed shah in exchange for the hostages.

Tasua and Ashura, the twin days of mourning today and Friday, mark the high point of the Shiite Moslem holy month of Moharram, a period of ritual mourning commemorating the 7th century assassination by Moslem rivals of the Imam Hossein.

Tax Amendment Fought By Oil-State Senators

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oilstate senators, fearing a setback in their efforts to weaken President Carter's "windfall-profits" tax, are trying to block an amendment that would cost the oil industry $22.5 billion over the next decade.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and his allies began a talkathon Wednesday after the Senate, on a 58-39 vote, refused to kill the amendment.

Dole and Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said they expected to break the stalemate sometime today.

The amendment, sponsored by Sens. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and John Chafee, R-R.I., would raise from 60 percent to 75 percent the tax on future price increases of "new" oil, which generally is any oil discovered between 1973 and 1978.

Earlier this week, the Senate approved an amendment that would slash the impact of the tax by $10 billion by exempting the first 1,000 barrels of crude oil pumped daily by an independent operator.

The Senate version of the tax would cost the oil industry some $129 billion from 1980 through 1990. In contrast, the tax passed by the House and favored by Carter would cost $277 billion.

Meanwhile, other senators stepped up demands that Carter reimpose price controls on domestically produced crude oil until Congress approves a tough tax.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Energy Committee, said the watered-down tax being considered in the Senate amounts to little more than an effort to "whitewash" a huge oil industry windfall.

Because of the weakening of the tax, Jackson told colleagues, it is up to Carter to protect consumers. "Anything short of price control reimposition will cheat the American people for the benefit of the oil industry," he said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is challenging Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination, called again on the president to pledge to veto the tax bill unless it takes at least 50 percent of the oil industry's "windfall" over the next 11 years.

JOBS NEEDED

Members of the Project Care Class of Agnes Fulllove Community School are being sought jobs that can be carried out by one or more of them under adult supervision. Jobs such as lawn raking, window caulking and the like would be carefully done and pay could be decided on based on the time and ability involved in doing the work. Minimum wage per-person would not be expected for group projects. The students involved are aged 10 to 15. Persons wishing further information are asked to call Mrs. Kenneth Johnson, 758-0817 days or 752-7356 evenings.

YARD SALE FEEDBACK

Nancy and Gary Nobles have asked Hotline to convey the following message to our readers who responded to a Nov. 15 Hotline item: "We were surprised and overwhelmed by the yard and bake sale held for our son, Chris, at Jarvis Memorial Church, Saturday, Nov. 17. We wish there were a way to thank each of you who gave so generously of your time and of yourself. We are thankful to all our friends and to the many people who have never met us who took part."

Two-year-old Chris is recovering splendidly from cancer surgery and is responding quite well to further therapy, his parents report.

District Census Office Manager Is Announced

William M. Hodges has been named manager of the temporary 1980 Census District office in Greenville. Hodges, who owns and operates the Travel Inn Motel in Washington, will be responsible for counting all persons in 21 counties near Greenville during the 1980 census next spring.

The announcement of Hodges' appointment was made Tuesday by Joseph Harris, regional census manager for the Regional Census Center in Charlotte. The Census Center will supervise the census for a four-state region, including North Carolina and the District of Columbia.

Harris said that Hodges will open the temporary office in January. It will remain open until census operations are completed, expected to be sometime in the summer of 1980.

Location of the Greenville census office has not yet been determined. Leasing negotiations are underway. The office will employ up to 596 people during peak operation. Hiring for most of the jobs will begin early next year.

Hodges, who retired as a major from the Air Force in 1961, worked in North Carolina state government

Check Past Grievances At The Door

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My best friend is getting married soon and I will be her maid of honor. My parents are invited to the wedding.

My Aunt Ingrid and Uncle Hugo have also been invited to the wedding. The problem is, my parents and this aunt and uncle had a falling out a few years ago and aren't on speaking terms.

Should my mother mention to the bride's mother that she would prefer not to be seated at the same table with Aunt Ingrid and Uncle Hugo? Should I say something to the bride? Or should nothing be said at all?

PERPLEXED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR PERPLEXED: Nothing should be said. Weddings are a time for joy and merrymaking. All past grievances should be checked at the door, the guests should sit where the hostess has seated them, and try to behave in an adult and civilized manner.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 14-year-old girl who's in love with a 17-year-old guy. He doesn't love me, or even like me as a friend, but we kissed in his car once before he found out how old I was.

We go to the same church and he sits behind me. Sometimes I catch him looking at me, but when I look back he turns his head the other way.

He told his best friend that he would take me out if I were a little older.

I've tried every way I know to get him to ask me out, but nothing seems to work. I really love him, Abby, and want him to love me, too. Please help me.

LOVESICK IN LOCKPORT

DEAR LOVESICK: Your feelings are normal and natural for a 14-year-old. You won't always be "too young" for him, but if you don't quit chasing him, you might be too pushy for him. Be patient, honey. Time is on your side.

DEAR ABBY: While shopping in a supermarket recently, I observed an elderly, nice-looking, neatly dressed man pushing a shopping cart in which there were a few items. Then I saw him slip a package of frankfurters into his coat pocket!

I went over to him and quietly said, "I wouldn't do that if I were you." He did not respond, so I repeated the statement. He then took the frankfurters from his pocket and placed them in his shopping cart, and said, "Thank you."

Before leaving him, I said, "It wouldn't have been worth it."

When I told my family about this, I received mixed reactions. One said, "You should have reported him to the management."

Another said, "Why try to play policeman? You should have looked the other way and minded your own business. The poor man probably went to bed hungry that night."

Another said, "You took an awful chance. He could have pulled a knife on you!"

One of my children thought I did the right thing, but suggested I should have offered to give the man the money for the frankfurters.

What do you say, Abby?

ANOTHER SENIOR CITIZEN

DEAR ANOTHER: I think you raised a wise and compassionate child.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the poem in your column about the hostess who was tired of uninvited guests flocking to her "nice little house at the beach."

My mother, Sylvia Lewis Kinney, and I are chortling because she wrote that poem! It was published in 1962 in a book of her poetry, titled, "The Valiant Flea."

Mother isn't angry. In fact, she thinks it's marvelous and funny to have found fame 17 years later in the DEAR ABBY column.

Miss Susan Demain Is Bride Of Bobby Wilson

AYDEN — Susan Elizabeth Demain and Bobby Warren Wilson were united in marriage Saturday at 5 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony performed in the Ayden United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Travis Owen. A program of wedding music was presented by Larry Jones of Greenville.

Parents of the couple are Mr. Benjamin B. Demain of Myrtle Beach, S. C., and the late Mrs. Harriet R. Demain, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett W. Wilson of Ayden.

The bride's father gave her in marriage and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Eileen Demain of Lubbock, Tex., was honor attendant. Trudy Tripp of Ayden was maid of honor and bridesmaids included Cathy Russos of Raleigh, Pam Leviner of Grifton, and Joy Black of Greenville.

The cousin of the bridegroom, Stephanie Sox of Burlington, was flower girl and Chris Demain of Lubbock, Tex., was ring bearer.

Ushers included Jeff Demain, brother of the bride of Lubbock, Tex., Jon Justesen of Grifton, Rudy Robinson of Greenville, and Allan Wilson of Ayden, cousin of the bridegroom. The bridegroom's father served as best man.

The bride chose a white formal gown of silk organza over peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline and long fitted sleeves of English net and re-embroidered alencon lace. The bodice was accented with pearls and iridescents. The skirt fell into a chapel length train. She wore a white chapel length veil of imported silk illusion attached to a Camelot cap of matching lace. The chapel length mantilla was bordered with alencon lace. The bride carried a full cascading bouquet of white roses, stephanotis, miniature carnations, baby's breath with eucalyptus.

The attendants wore formal gowns of wine print sileste over peau de soie. They were fashioned with a blouson bodice, split cape sleeves and A sunburst pleated skirt. The shoulders and waistlines were accented with self-fabric bows. They carried mixed nosegays of pink roses and wine pom poms.

The flower girl was dressed

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Talk about your bad timing. Here we are in the middle of an energy crisis when we're getting pressure from all sides to lock our thermostats in at 65 degrees and fashion designers are pushing to bring back the miniskirt.

Is it my imagination or is someone's brain in a holding pattern?

The problem is that many of the leading designers are men who have never known how the human anatomy works. It's relatively easy to explain.

The miniskirt covers at best 1/6 of a woman's lower extremities. When the woman bends her knees to sit down, the tension releases and the skirt in the front goes DOWN. However, because of the angle of the body, the stress in the back becomes more acute as the body bends and the back goes up. By the time the derriere makes contact with a seat/chair/bench, she is exposing a portion of her body covered only by underwear.

If the seat/chair/bench is made of plastic, stone, wood or metal, she could slip right into a coma.

We're going to have to approach the problem carefully as some women actually liked the miniskirt. I talked the other day to my friend, Donna, who has terrific legs. The only reason I keep her around is for a role model.

"Well, I, for one," she said, "am tickled to death about miniskirts. I've hated those old lady skirts that swirl around your ankle and cover up everything."

"That's easy for you to say, Donna, you didn't carry your babies low and get left with flabby knees."

"I don't see why we can't wear what we look terrific in," she pouted.

Then it hit me. "We do it for our country. Heaven knows I've had to sacrifice. I've been buying silk because I can wear it winter and summer and save. I've given up polyester for ultrasuede because polyester is made from petroleum and my country needs the oil. I've bought lush sweaters in natural fibers because they're warmer, and I've given up my entire last year's wardrobe and replaced it with new clothes because they were impractical for the thermostat. How can you indulge yourself in miniskirts when your country needs you?"

Sometimes I question his love for America.

Self-Appointed Inspire Risks

Rep. George Hansen, a U. S. congressman, undertook a personal mission to Iran, and he couldn't have done more to play into the hands of the repressive Khomeini.

As an elected United States official Hansen could leave the impression, in an extremely volatile situation, that he speaks for our government. He doesn't of course. He merely wandered off on his own to create confusion.

The trip was condemned by the White House and by Rep. Hansen's colleagues in Congress.

Jody Powell, White House press secretary, said he didn't think the trip was helpful.

If Hansen, or any other self appointed representative, should give a misimpression of American resolve in this matter, the hostages could be held indefinitely, or even endangered.

Hansen proposed congressional hearings on the matter. This could leave the impression in Iran that perhaps the United States Congress might authorize concessions in the conflict.

In this country, we can debate all we want about the Iranian situation. At the same time it must be clear to the Iranians that we are united in demanding the release of the innocent Americans being held in the embassy. The spokesman for the country in such a trying situation has to be the president.

We hope there won't be any repeats of Rep. Hansen's very foolish move.

Maybe Indicator Boom Was Slowed

A number of large banks this week rolled back their prime lending rates by a quarter point or more.

There was near jubilation in the financial markets, for the move was seen as an indication that upward spiraling interest rates had peaked. If so, there would be some hope that the tremendously high interest rates had done what they were supposed to do — that is slow the business boom enough to reduce the soaring rate of inflation.

Olivine: Big N.C. Item?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — If you never heard of olivine before, that could change in the next year; particularly if you heat your home or business with electricity.

One of the most important results of the first year of operation by the North Carolina Energy Institute is evidence that a mineral called olivine is capable of producing heat storage bricks of high quality.

Currently, heat storage bricks are being imported from Europe. The purpose is simple: heat from the common electric resistance heater is stored in the ceramic bricks as the building is heated. Then, stored heat is continued in use after the electricity is off.

Thousands of homes and commercial buildings in North Carolina use electric resistance heat systems, and when the power companies get a peak-load pricing system into operation, users could enjoy a considerable savings. Meanwhile, use of heat storage systems would help reduce peak demands on the electric system.

Quality
The Energy Institute's first annual report says olivine found in a belt about 175 miles long and 15 miles wide from Watauga to Clay counties is "capable of producing heat storage bricks with a quality equal to or surpassing European imports currently used elsewhere in the U.S."

A team of research scientists at N.C. State University conducted the experiments with olivine. Much of the mineral now produced in North Carolina is used by the steel industry as a flux for blast furnaces.

The study concluded that heat storage units to level power demands will soon become commercially important in many parts of the nation, and that "thousands of electrically-heated storage units can be expected to be sold in North Carolina soon. Such use could result in a reduced electric peak demand, an enhanced market for state minerals, and an expansion of the state's ceramics industry."

The olivine study was one of 32 projects undertaken on grants from the Energy Institute, which is part of the Department of Commerce.

In another project, peat was found to be a useful fuel especially in firing kilns used for making bricks. Peat is found in useable quantities on 1.2 million acres in the state, much of it in Coastal Plains areas. Test production is underway at First Colony Farms at Creswell.

Hydropower
The research work also labeled 20 small dams which are able to generate electricity using water power and are eligible for federal loans to do the work. Several hundred more among the state's 3,400 dams are expected to qualify.

Use of waste products as a source of fuel also came under heavy study, with successful projects underway at furniture and woodworking facilities where wood chips can be used to provide steam for power and heat, and at municipal landfills where waste can also be used.

One disappointing result of the research: producing methane from chicken wastes from broiler houses without pretreatment costs too much and produces too little methane. Study continues on chicken waste from layer houses.

The Poor Man's Reagan

WASHINGTON — Diogenes, it is reported, walked incessantly through ancient Greece, lantern in hand. He was looking in vain for an honest man. The old philosopher would have had a tough time on the American campaign trail, but his search might at last have been crowned with success. Bob Dole is his kind of guy.

The senior senator from Kansas, vice presidential nominee with Gerald Ford three years ago, is running for the Republican nomination. At least he is jogging for it. In most of the polls he ranks two points behind None of the Above. His campaign isn't broke, exactly, but next month it will qualify for food stamps.

At this point does he have any realistic hope of winning? "No," he says. Hey, Diogenes! Bring your lantern over here.

It's much too early to venture certain predictions on which of the candidates will win the most votes. It's not at all difficult to say who will have the most fun. Dole takes politics seriously, but not too damned seriously. If wit and candor alone could win delegates, he could head for Detroit next summer with a bagful.

Dole had breakfast one morning last week with a dozen senior correspondents. It was an altogether happy way to start a day. The senator talked soberly about the situation in Iran; he was disappointed that our allies had not been more supportive. He spoke with an insider's certain knowledge of arms limitation and energy. He reviewed the bill he has sponsored with Danforth of Missouri and Domenici of New Mexico to underwrite insurance against catastrophic illnesses.

Dole is much more than the Bob Hope of the GOP, a master of the one-liner. But he is in fact a genuinely funny man. He took off wryly on the inexperience of Ronald Reagan and John Connally in terms of current issues. "They never make speeches outside on a windy day," he observed. "If they drop their notes, where are they?"

One of the reporters asked Dole if Reagan, at 68, is too old for the race. "The rest of us would never on earth make an issue of it," he said. "Of course, we are planning a big birthday party for him in February. There'll be a cake with 69 candles."

Was there much political hay to be harvested on the SALT II treaty? After all, a reporter remarked, a nationwide poll found that only 36 percent of the people even knew it was a treaty between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. "I thought that was a poll of the Senate," Dole interjected.

Consumer Price Index Flaws

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The consumer price index rose 1 more percent in October, and that, you say, means that your cost of living also rose by 1 percent — or more than 12 percent a year. But it shouldn't have.

It shouldn't have, for example, if you followed elementary economic reasoning and your own common sense. But if you haven't been doing that, you still might find your cost of living hasn't risen nearly as fast as the CPI.

The Commerce Department, which compiles the CPI, also compiles other figures, less well known but maybe more accurate, that strongly suggest the true increases in living costs have been at a rate of less than 10 percent a year.

The CPI's flaws have been known for years, but soaring inflation is accentuating them. Ironically, it is also causing some users to swear by the CPI. Those on cost-of-living escalators, for example.

But for those who want to believe the inflation rate may be lower than it is thought to be there is plenty of evidence.

1. The CPI is a fixed-weight index, meaning the items in the so-called marketbasket of goods and services retain their relative weight no matter what happens to prices.

The items chosen for that basket were what urban consumers were apt to buy in the years 1972-1973. But people tend to buy less of what rises in price.

There is evidence this has occurred. Statistics indicate some shift from red meat to poultry, eggs and a variety of pastas.

Fuel conservation is also catching on. Homeowners are insulating and adapting to lower temperatures.

Motorists are driving smaller cars and, according to preliminary studies, are probably driving less.

2. The CPI distorts increases in housing costs, and these rapidly rising costs account for a sizable amount of recent CPI changes.

Only a percentage of families buy homes in any year. But the rising costs of homebuying, and the big increases in new mortgage costs — especially in the past few months — are applied to all homeowners.

There is a substitute for the CPI in what is called the implicit price deflator for personal consumption expenditures (PCE).

According to Citibank, which studied it, the PCE is more accurate because it is compiled on the basis of the actual consumer spending mix, rather than being based on what consumers used to buy in the past. Secondly, it uses a more accurate treatment of shelter costs.

Why then do we continue using the CPI? It's a familiar measurement, coming out every month. The PCE is issued quarterly. Then there are those cost-of-living clauses.

Finally, as CPI defenders point out, the divergence between CPI and PCE hasn't always been so great. Housing prices and financing costs — 20 percent of CPI, says Schoenfeld — have magnified the spread.

Finally, as CPI defenders point out, the divergence between CPI and PCE hasn't always been so great. Housing prices and financing costs — 20 percent of CPI, says Schoenfeld — have magnified the spread. Schoenfeld is vice president of Irving Trust, a New York bank.

Besides, say some, when inflation gets into double figures, 2 percent or 3 percent shrinks in significance.

Roots Of The Mule

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Of all living things, few have been so maligned as the mule. William Faulkner referred to the animal as "outcast and pariah," and its very name has been turned into adjectives with derogatory connotations, such as mulish and mule-headed.

But at last the mule has an eloquent champion in Thad Stem, the Oxford author whose 16th book gives the animal deserved credit not only as a friend of man, but also as a major contributor to the agricultural progress of the South in generations past.

Noting the popular disparagement of the mule's ancestry — it is an offspring on a jack (male ass) and a mare (female horse) — and its sexuality — it is sterile — Stem writes:

"This shamefully maligned creature enters the world as an Ishmaelite, a bastard who is denied the succor of ancestry and the inspiration of progeny and posterity."

Stem's defense of the mule has been noted outside the state. Tar Heel Charles Blackburn, now editor of the Franklin County News in Georgia, ran excerpts, along with a picture of one of the county's few remaining mules. Stem wrote Blackburn that he suspected the photograph showed the only mule in Franklin County that wasn't on the school board.

The mule was not native to English America, and although a few had been brought into the colonies, it was George Washington who in 1785 received from the Spanish government a jack that he named "Royal Gift" and put to stud. Washington's breeding of mules attracted extensive interest in the animals.

"Royal Gift" earned for the general $678 on a trip through the South, then retired to Mount Vernon where he played host to mares and jennies at 10 to 15 pounds per season, respectively.

While Thomas Jefferson did not follow Washington in breeding mules, he did purchase them for his Virginia farm and extolled their superiority over horses.

Another promoter of mules was John S. Skinner, who as editor of the magazine Ameri-

On a strictly voluntary basis, two new vaccines have been tried out on CCC enrollees, one for pneumonia and one for typhoid. That does not mean the enrollees were used as human guinea pigs. They were the heroic soldiers who helped Dr. Reed stamp out yellow fever.

Pneumonia is not one of the most prevalent diseases, but it has an exceptionally high death rate among its victims.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Who Really 'Lost Iran'?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Shortly after the second seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Nov. 4, Gen. Alexander Haig in private talks with politicians and businessmen accused the Carter administration of assigning his NATO deputy to hasten Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlavi's fall as Iran's ruler a year ago.

That was given by Haig as a major reason for his resignation in July as NATO supreme commander and his retirement from the Army. Never before has undermining the shah been listed as a purpose of the shadowy mission to Tehran early last January by Air Force Maj. Gen. Robert E. Huyser, Haig's deputy.

Haig, who is eyeing a long-shot bid for the Republican presidential nomination, has not gone public with his sensational charge. When asked by Washington newsmen over breakfast Nov. 21 why he had left NATO and the Army, Haig never mentioned the Huyser mission. Nevertheless, his private chats have fired the opening round of a battle with profound political implications: "Who lost Iran?"

Whether or not Haig's interpretation of President Carter's motives is accepted, he is supplying previously unknown information about upper-level Washington intrigue as the shah toppled. Here began the administration's policy of making common cause with revolutionary impulses at the expense of old allies.

The policy took effect with a transatlantic telephone call early last January from Gen. David Jones, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to Haig at NATO headquarters in Mons, Belgium. Haig learned for the first time that the Carter administration planned to dispatch Huyser, who had exceptional contacts with the Iranian military and the royal palace, to Tehran. Huyser's mission, as explained by Jones to Haig, was "to keep the Iranian military united and effective." That meant urging the Iranian generals not to attempt a coup against the shaky new civilian regime of Shahpur Bakhtiar — the description of the mission given the press.

Haig regarded this as a smokescreen. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, in ascendance over national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, wanted the shah quickly removed from power. To Haig, the Huyser mission promoted this plan. He informed Jones on the telephone that night that he did not want himself, his deputy or the U.S. military involved in what he viewed as a specious undertaking.

The next morning, word came to Mons from Washington that Haig would have to live with it, like it or not. Deputy Secretary of Defense Charles Duncan, acting secretary during Harold Brown's temporary absence, overruled Haig. Direct orders were transmitted from Duncan to Haig's deputy; Haig was odd man out.

Those secret orders are described as "ambiguous" by those who have seen them.

The widely respected Huyser is reported by colleagues as being unhappy with his task. But as a good soldier, he did not complain then or now (he is currently on active duty at Scott Air Force Base, Ill.).

Haig's theory that Huyser was an instrument of U.S. pressure to drop the shah is strengthened by this fact: His mission coincided with leaked reports out of Washington that U.S. policy-makers finally had concluded the shah must go. U.S. policy at this time was that Bakhtiar could gain influence over the military and win over the Moslem radicals only if the shah disappeared.

Whether or not because of Huyser carrying out his orders, there was no military coup. That did not save Bakhtiar's short-lived regime from being supplanted by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. Nor did the Carter policy achieve its stated purpose of keeping Iran's officer corps intact. While many officers were executed by Islamic revolutionaries, the chief of staff contacted by Huyser — Gen. Abbas Gherabaghi — is believed to have cooperated with the mullahs running the revolution.

Strength For Today

LIKE A STAINED GLASS WINDOW

We never understand religious truth until we first accept it. Religion deals with the unseen world. We have no possible way of getting in touch with that unseen world except through the exercise of faith. If we cannot accept religious truths on faith, then we have sealed ourselves into the disappointing experience of never being able to understand these truths.

The famous American novelist, Nathaniel Hawthorne, said that Christianity is like a great cathedral with beautiful stained glass windows. Viewed from the outside, these windows are dull and lacking in both beauty and significance. But viewed from within, with the light shining through, the a beautiful forms and radiant colors of the windows are vividly apparent.

We have to get on the inside of Christianity and look out; we have to allow its truths to embrace us before we know their warmth and vitality.

can Farmer recommended them highly as draft animals. Perhaps the term "mule skinner" came from the editor's name.

Thus it was around the end of the 18th Century began to substitute for horses and oxen in farm work, particularly in the South. Not until after 1820, however, did the number of mules in the United States become considerable.

Missouri, Tennessee and Kentucky became the breeding ground for mules, many of the jacks being purchased from Spanish stock in Mexico.

North Carolina was slow to adopt mules extensively. In 1850 the census bureau revealed that there were in the state about 25,000 mules, compared with nearly 10 times that number of horses and oxen. Not until 1879 did mules constitute as many as 25 percent of the work animals in the state.

From that point, however, mules became increasingly popular. By 1900 there were 136,000 mules in North Carolina, about 46 percent of all draft animals. The day of the mule was yet to come, however, for by 1935 Tar Heel farmers were working nearly 300,000 mules, compared with only about 60,000 horses and a few oxen.

Then came a dramatic decline in the use of mules in the state. Chief among the causes were the rapid mechanization of farming and the shift of the population to nonfarming occupations.

The ultimate indignity was heaped upon the mule in 1964 when the federal government stopped counting them in agricultural censuses.

By then, however, the mule had won immortality in the agricultural history of the South — and also in the hearts of thousands of men for whom, as Burt Komegay recently wrote in Mules and Memories, the primary scenery for a considerable portion of every work day was a mule's hind end.

My father loved mules as if they were members of the family. He was a part-time mule-trader — not for the purpose of making money (he didn't) but just to be around them. I'll never forget how delicately his fingers could open a mule's mouth, instantly figuring the age and health of the animal from the condition of its teeth.

Perhaps the oldest mule on record in North Carolina was "Brownie," owned by Mrs. J.J. Matthews of Williamsboro in Vance County. This old family friend died in 1974 at the age of 50.

With mules becoming more scarce each year, it is commendable that the town of Benson continues to hold its annual Mule Day so that the deprived younger generation can still see what one looks like. Many of us will never forget the steady, gentle, short-maned creatures whose labor helped feed, clothe, transport and add color to the language of generations of Americans.

The senator had a further thought about public perception of the presidential race. On the night that CBS correspondent Roger Mudd was dissecting Edward Kennedy, most of the TV audience was tuned to an old movie: "Sixty-three percent of the people were watching 'Jaws,' 12 percent were watching Mudd, and 25 percent couldn't tell the difference."

Dole acknowledged that he was having problems within his own campaign organization. A reporter remarked upon the heavy turnover. "Why," chided Dole, "four key people have left and four others have come in — but I wouldn't call that 'turnover.'" What was the status of a key aide in the Midwest? Dole didn't know. "He quits a lot," he said. Where was the aide at this very moment? Dole couldn't say. "He hasn't written home in some time."

The conversation got back to Reagan, for whom Dole had muted praise. In the 1976 campaign, he recalled, the California governor had been more helpful than the Ford people would admit. "Of course," said Dole, "he kept forgetting the names on our ticket. I was always having to show him our buttons." This time around Reagan is so far out in front that only a major blunder could deny him the nomination. "It's his to lose."

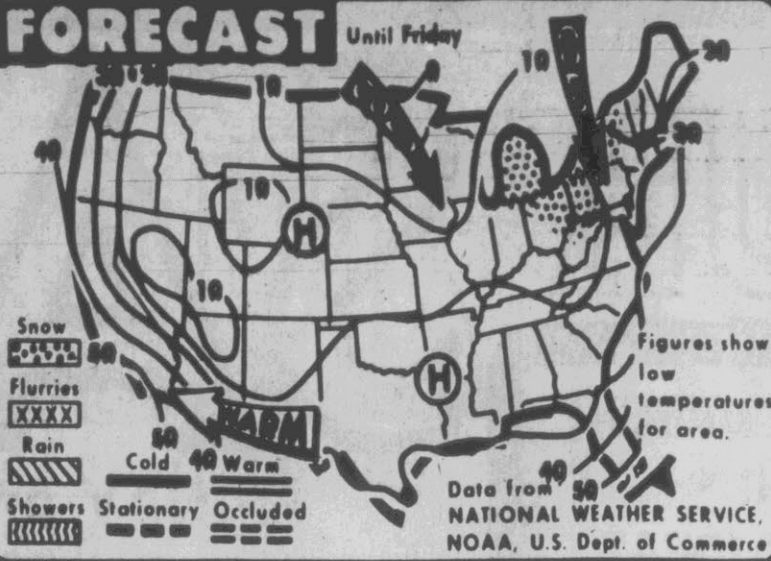

"But," said the cheerful Kansan, "if Republicans decide they want a younger Ronald Reagan, with experience, I'm their man." Congressman Philip Crane, of course, could say the same thing. So could Sen. Howard Baker. But neither could say it with the same grace, and leave us laughing.

Military coup would have brought Iran stability. There are senior U.S. Army officers who believe that, had it not been for the mission imposed on Huyser, the Iran military would have seized power, exiled the shah (perhaps letting him return as a ceremonial monarch) and established a moderate, pro-Western regime. That theory may well understate the volcanic fury of Khomeini's followers.

The point of Haig's revelations is that the administration's plea it could do nothing to save the shah is not the whole truth. As with Anastasio Somoza in Nicaragua, the U.S. contributed to the demise of a repressive authoritarian who had been a longtime ally of this country in hopes of winning favor with his successors. It is that policy, rather than the president's day-to-day conduct of the current crisis, that is most vulnerable to future investigation.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period until Friday from the Great Lakes to the Ohio Valley and western Pennsylvania and New York. Warm weather is forecast for the Southwest, but most of the nation will be colder. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Winter weather finally arrived in the Tar Heel state Wednesday, bringing snow flurries in the northwest mountains. The snow is expected to continue until Friday with no accumulation.

The colder weather is expected to last through the first of next week. Highs today and Friday were predicted to range from the 30s in the mountains to around 50 on the coast. Lows tonight should range from the teens in the western portion to the 30s along the Outer Banks.

A freeze warning is in effect for tonight for the Southern Coastal area. All sections of the state except the Outer Banks are expected to have freezing temperatures.

A lot of cloudiness came with the cold front Wednesday, but there was little rain recorded.

High temperatures Wednesday ranged from 45 at Boone and 51 at Asheville to 76 at Cherry Point. Early this morning temperatures plunged into the 20s over the mountains, the 30s in the Piedmont and the 40s along the coast.

Study Rates On Tobacco

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Agriculture Department is studying whether the federal rates for low-quality domestic tobacco can be lowered, Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland said Wednesday.

The study is in response to increasing demand for low-quality foreign leaf, he said.

Bergland said he was concerned that some foreign tobacco was being imported and sold at rates lower than those charged for similar grades of U.S. leaf.

Bergland's statement came at a news conference at a hearing on the future of the farm structure in the United States. The hearing attracted about 1,000 farmers and representatives of farm groups in North Carolina, Virginia and Georgia.

Bergland said, however, he didn't anticipate any major changes next year in the tobacco program, under which farmers agree to limit production in return for guaranteed prices, called price supports.

The system has resulted in American downstalk, or low-quality leaf, being priced higher than similar grades of foreign imports.

Greenville Foundation Role Explained

FOCUS

Title Shot

Newspapers and magazines have called Sugar Ray Leonard "boxing's new superstar" and "boxing's new hero." Tomorrow night, Leonard has a chance to become boxing's new welterweight champion, when he meets Wilfredo Benitez in a title bout in Las Vegas. As an amateur, Leonard scored 150 victories and won nine world titles, including a gold medal at the 1976 Olympic Games. He has won all 25 of his professional fights, 16 of them by knockout. Boxing writers nicknamed Leonard "Sugar Ray" after Sugar Ray Robinson, the great middleweight champion of the 1950s. "He's not great yet," Robinson says about Leonard. "But I know one thing — he wins."

DO YOU KNOW — What is the weight limit for welterweight boxers?

The Greenville Foundation held a meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Willis building to promote an interest in the organization. Henry Carter Jr., Executive Director of the Winston-Salem Foundation, was the guest speaker.

Carter briefed the group, which was from local organizations, about the possibilities and potentials of the Greenville Foundation. He cited the achievements of the Winston-Salem Foundation telling the group that these accomplishments could be made here.

Carter differentiated between public and private foundations. He said a private one is more rigorously regulated because the control usually rests in the hands of one person. A community foundation is classed as a public organization and is more flexible, less highly regulated, not taxed, and can achieve a number of things. It has more flexibility to respond to the needs of the community than a private one.

Although the public or community foundation reaps these benefits, the law says it must enjoy broad public support, he said. "If you don't support it, you lose the benefits of having a public foundation," said Carter.

He showed slides on the Winston-Salem Foundation to give a view of what has happened there. The foundation was started 60 years ago and is one the community can be proud of,

according to Carter.

The Greenville Foundation was patterned after the one in Winston-Salem and Carter assisted the group in launching the organization here.

Mayor Percy Cox lauded Dr. Herbert Hadley, chairman of the foundation, for his diligence and persistence in getting this project underway. "After years of hard work, we finally got the Greenville Foundation. I want to thank Dr. Hadley for the work he has put into it," said Cox.

The Chamber of Commerce sent flyers to area businesses with background information about the foundation here.

It was founded in 1978 to oversee the distribution of funds placed in trusts for tax-exempt charitable purposes. The governing body is made up of four men appointed on a rotating basis by the City Council, and three other members which are representatives of three area banks with Trust Departments. Attorney W. W. Speight, Dr. Johnny Wooten, Marvin K. Blount Sr., and Dr. Hadley are the four men that make up the governing body. Max Ray Joyner representing Planters Bank, Louis Gaylord, Wachovia Bank, and Fred Webb, NCNB are the other three members.

The function of the governing committee is to oversee the distribution of designated funds, determine community needs, and provide trust advice to those thinking of using the foundation.

The organization is dedicated to using trusts placed under the jurisdiction in tax-exempt charitable causes for the good of the community. It can use unrestricted funds for any project that needs attention for which it has funds. The governing committee wishes to focus, in the beginning, on grants in art and culture, education, such as providing scholarships, geriatric care and social services, such as orphan care.

"The community foundation is an umbrella by which any number of foundations can be created and with small or large donations," said Hadley. A person can set up a trust fund with the bank and designate the interest to be paid to the organization or some other charity. Gifts to the foundations are 100 percent tax deductible, said Hadley.

The organization has provisions for The Book of Memory which will allow family and friends of a loved one to make gifts to the community in the name of a deceased person at the time of bereavement in lieu of flowers or other expressions of sympathy. The person's name will be memorialized by hand script in the Book of Memory, and the book will remain on display at all times in bank lobbies of the three trust banks in the community. The foundation will make use of unrestricted funds so donated for a wide variety of tax-exempt charitable purposes including health and cultural projects, according to Hadley.

ALLEGED ATTACKER — Suzanne Osgood, 38, originally of Nashua, N.H., was arrested Wednesday in connection with an alleged attack at the Washington office of Sen. Edward Kennedy. Quake Again Hits Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A strong earthquake struck north-east Iran for the third time this week, killing at least 12 persons and injuring 24, Tehran Radio reported today.

Sixteen villages near the town of Gonabad, in the Khorasan district, about 500 miles east of Tehran, were almost completely devastated by the latest quake that struck at 1 p.m., the radio added.

The same area was hit by two quakes Monday. The strongest, measuring 6.5 on the Richter scale, left 17 dead, officials said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

An earthquake of 6 on the Richter scale can cause severe damage. A 7 reading is a major earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

GOLD UP, DOLLAR DOWN
LONDON (AP) — Spurred by a $15 jump on Wednesday, gold prices made further gains in Europe this morning (quoted at $413) while the dollar slipped lower.

Meet Monday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the Pitt County Court House.

Included on the agenda is the reorganization of the board — the election of a chairman and vice-chairman — for 1980.

Other business on the agenda includes the approval of bonds for the Register of Deeds, the Sheriff, Tax Collector, Finance Officer, Pitt County Development Commission treasurer, and employees blanket bond; consideration of Edwards Acres, Section I, Foxboro and Stantonburg Estates, Section I subdivisions; and appointments to various commissions and committees; consideration of the Pactolus Fire Department boundaries, and discussion of the completion date for the county office building on West Fifth Street.

DRUG RAID
HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Four persons were arrested and an estimated $50,000 of illegal drugs seized yesterday in a raid on a motel room here.

JOLTED AGAIN
CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago school district, already facing severe financial troubles and a battle with the federal government over desegregation, has been jolted by the surprise resignation of Supt. Jos. P. Hanon.

Aver Cheating Is Recognized

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Enlistment cheating is recognized as part of the system in North Carolina. 21 Army recruiters suspended from duty told staff members of the Senate Armed Services Committee Tuesday.

"The recruiters talked to said that (recruiting) malpractice, in their view, has been virtually universal — about every recruiter they had contact with," said John Stirk, an aide to committee member Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C.

The meeting was closed to the public.

The recruiters who spoke with the committee were from the Charlotte, Raleigh and Columbia, S.C., commands, Stirk said.

John Roberts, general counsel to the armed services committee, and George Travers, a committee staff member, met with the recruiters.

Morgan and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., plan to hold additional hearings into Army recruiting problems. Roberts said the visit was to gather information for those hearings.

In the first hearing on Nov. 19, Army Secretary Clifford Alexander told the committee that 427 recruiters in the nation have been relieved of duties in a six-month Army probe that began in Charlotte.

Alexander estimated that 12,700 soldiers have been enlisted through fraud or other irregular procedures since October 1977.

Roberts, Travers and Stirk met with officials of the Charlotte District Command Monday. Following the Fayetteville meeting, Roberts and Travers flew to Atlanta, Ga., where they were to meet with Southeastern District Command superiors.

Both Roberts and Travers declined comment on the discussion with the recruiters, held in the law offices Mark Waple, who represents a number of Charlotte recruiters who have been relieved of duty.

Suspect Navigation Error In Antarctic Plane Crash

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — The New Zealand airliner that carried 257 persons to their deaths in the Antarctic was on the wrong side of the volcano it hit, and the pilot apparently was to blame, the director of the recovery operation said today.

"It would seem there has been a substantial error in navigation by the pilot," said Roy Thomson, chief of the Antarctic division of New Zealand's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

"The plane was basically on the wrong side of the mountain. It crashed on the northeast side of Mount Erebus. It should have been passing the mountain on the northwest side."

The DC-10 was on a sightseeing trip along the Antarctic Coast when it crashed Wednesday, killing all aboard including 21 Americans. Thomson said he could almost certainly rule out the possibility of structural or mechanical failure.

"In my opinion the plane was certainly in the wrong place to come down so low," Thomson, one of the country's foremost authorities on the Antarctic, told reporters in Auckland before leaving to head up operations to try to recover the bodies.

It was the third fatal DC-10 crash this year and the fourth largest death toll in aviation history.

Treacherous winds, snow and sub-zero temperatures were delaying the recovery of bodies from the crash site. Thirty-knot winds whipped snow and updrafts around the volcano, and the wind chill factor was 35 below.

Three New Zealand mountaineers were lowered to the site today by a U.S. Navy helicopter. They said the plane apparently exploded when it crashed only 1,500 feet up the 12,400-foot volcano, which slopes at a 35-degree angle.

Thomson's Department of Scientific and Industrial Research, which maintains New Zealand's Scott Base near the crash site, said the mountaineers found the tail section of the plane intact but empty.

It said they reported the wreckage was spread over an area measuring 400 yards by 50 yards, on hard permanent ice covered by loosely packed snow but with deep crevasses and fissures.

The mountaineers reported no survivors among the 20 crew and 237 passengers, who included John Greenleaf Houghton, 39, an associate professor at the University of Nevada who specialized in the study of arctic climate. He was on a year's sabbatical at New Zealand's Otago University.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

High cards can be disadvantageous at times, for they might conceal the path to success. Here's an example.

North-South bid well to their small slam. The South hand is worth a reverse despite the poor quality of the spade suit. After North jumped to game in spades, South showed his diamond ace and North happily accepted the slam invitation on the strength of his trump holding.

With any lead other than a diamond, the hand would be a pianola. Unfortunately, the opponents weren't in a generous mood—West attacked with the king of diamonds. Declarer could see nothing better than to play three rounds of hearts, discarding a diamond and hoping that East would have to ruff with the ace of spades. Down one.

Had the queen and jack of hearts been low cards instead of honors, the winning line would have been much easier to spot. Declarer should win the ace of diamonds and lead three rounds of hearts. When West follows to the third heart, declarer must ruff with one of dummy's high trumps!

East cannot overruff, so the first hurdle has been crossed. Declarer now leads the king of clubs from dummy. If East does not cover, declarer simply discards his losing diamond. Therefore, East must cover and declarer ruffs.

Now declarer leads a fourth heart. If West discards or ruffs low, dummy ruffs with the king of trumps. (If West ruffs with the ace, declarer simply discards the losing diamond from the table.) On the queen of clubs declarer discards his losing diamonds, then leads a trump to the jack to force out the ace.

Declarer is in complete control. He can win any return, draw the outstanding trumps and claim the rest of the tricks for his slam.

School Lounge Was Vandalized

GRIFTON — The teacher's lounge at Grifton School was vandalized sometime during Tuesday night, according to Police Chief Linwood Outlaw. According to Chief Outlaw, two drink machines and a candy machine were opened, and some $20 in change taken from them.

Two portable radios and a set of keys were taken from the principal's office. The crime was reported early Wednesday morning when school officials went to work, said Outlaw. The Grifton Police force is continuing the investigation.

Some Parts Of Country Alerted To Cold Winter

THIRTY-DAY WEATHER OUTLOOK — This is the way the nation's weather looked in terms of precipitation and temperatures for the next 30 days, according to the National Weather Service. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Winberry Hurt By Transcript

WASHINGTON (AP) — A transcript released Wednesday shows federal judicial nominee Charles Winberry Jr. said he was perhaps paid $6,250 to plead no contest for another lawyer's client because the judge was a friend.

However, Winberry also said the man could have gotten the same sentence without him.

The transcript was of from a Senate Judiciary Committee closed hearing Nov. 7 on Winberry's nomination for the U.S. District Court seat.

Winberry told the panel that the defendant in the 1976 cigarette mail-fraud case may have "thought I had some magic I could work" on U.S. District Judge John Larkins Jr.

Winberry, 38, of Rocky Mount, was once a law clerk for Larkins, who is now retired. The case raised allegations, never substantiated, that Winberry passed a bribe onto Larkins to get preferential treatment for the client. Both Larkins and Winberry have denied the allegation.

The defendant in the case, David Windham received a suspended sentence and a $1,000 fine after pleading no contest to six counts of cigarette mail fraud, court records show.

The transcript also shows that Winberry was questioned closely about allegations that his political influence allowed him to escape charges in the 1971 automobile accident in which a man was killed.

Winberry's nomination, made by President Carter on the recommendation of Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., has drawn objections from at least two senators on the committee.

Winberry was Morgan's 1974 Senate campaign manager.

Four Arrested In Greene Break-Ins

SNOW HILL — Four persons, including a 15-year-old juvenile, have been arrested by Greene County deputies on charges stemming from the investigation of several recent break-ins.

Sheriff Early Whaley said that deputies charged James Junior Wilkes, 24, of Rt. 1, Hookerton, and the juvenile with breaking, entering and larceny at the Trading Post, owned and operated by Linwood Moore at Scuffleton, and with breaking, entering and larceny at Stock's Grocery, operated by Robert Earl Stocks, adjacent to the Trading Post.

Sheriff Whaley said that Wilkes, Derrick L. Aytch, 22, of Rt. 1, Ayden, and Larry Rouse, Rt. 1, Snow Hill, were charged with break-ins at One-Stop Service Station in Maury, Cornelius Applewhite's Store in Maury, Herbert Dupree's store in Maury, Fred Dupree's store in Maury, and Murphey's Mini-Mart at Lizzie.

Bond for Wilkes on the charges was set at $7,000, the sheriff said, while Aytch was placed under $5,000 bond and Rouse under $2,000 bond.

Hearings will be scheduled for District Court in Snow Hill.

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Midwest, South and southern Great Plains should brace for another onslaught of colder than normal weather this winter, says the National Weather Service.

But the northwest quarter of the country should bask in milder than normal temperatures, along with that portion of New England generally east of the Connecticut River.

And those living in an area stretching from Tucson, Ariz., to the Pacific and then northward to San Francisco also are likely to enjoy a milder season.

Weather service official Donald Gillman said the experts simply have not been able to collect enough information to

Break-In By An Expert Is Legal

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — Jeff Baker jimmied the lock and broke into a storage shed at Moore County Children's Center this week.

But the inmate, convicted of breaking and entering 15 months ago, did the Moore County break-in legally.

Someone had walked off with the key, and the center director asked Baker to open the door.

Baker, 20, of Raleigh, is one of five inmates from the Sandhills Youth Center prison unit who goes to the day-care center for 22 mentally retarded children each morning.

The inmates, all high-school dropouts who earned their diplomas in prison, are assigned as teacher aides at the center.

"It's a special challenge," said Baker. "When I go back over to (the prison), I see people there who had a chance to do good, and they didn't. These children are trying all they can."

"The way I look now, I'm

NEWSPAPER IDLED
KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — Karachi's English daily, the Morning News, ceased publication today on orders of the Sind government pending an inquiry into an article to determine if it was derogatory to the great granddaughter of the Moslem prophet Mohammed.

Danny Hogue, 20, of Shelby, is the artist among the five-man contingent. He designed the center's Christmas card this year.

Working with the children "has changed my life," he said.

"It's shown me I can be just about what I want to be," he said.

Other inmates in the program are William Britt, 19, of Reidsville; Terry Whitehead, 19, of Currituck and Gary Long, 20, of Greensboro.

make a winter forecast for the rest of the East Coast south to South Carolina, southern Florida and much of the northern Great Plains.

In its annual winter prediction, issued Wednesday, the weather service said the Midwest, South and southern Great Plains face 2-1 odds of suffering through a fourth straight nasty winter.

But Gillman said that while those areas should have lower than normal temperatures, they will not necessarily experience the intense cold of the last few winters.

While acknowledging that freakish weather "blew away" his prediction last winter, Gillman said his long-term forecasts generally have been 65 percent accurate or better. He described last winter's unpredicted cold in the eastern states as an "exceptionally rare occurrence."

Milder than normal weather is predicted for much of the Northwest, he said. This includes areas stretching from Denver and Rapid City, S.D., to Northern California and the Pacific Northwest.

Turning to snow and rainfall, Gillman said there is a 55 percent chance of heavier than normal precipitation in the Rio Grande Valley, the Gulf Coast states, along the Appalachian Mountains, the upper Ohio Valley and all of the East Coast except southern Florida.

Likely to remain drier than usual is an area extending from California northeast through the Great Basin to the Northern Rockies and east to the Great Lakes.

If the prediction comes true, Gillman noted, some western ski areas may not have enough snow. But he said the dry winter should not lead to a serious drought unless next winter is also dry.

Gillman said much of the accuracy of the prediction depends on the strength of a ridge of high pressure over western Canada. His forecast anticipates that the high pressure ridge will not be strong this year, and thus warm Pacific air will blow into the Northwest while arctic winds from Canada enter the central part of the nation.

The circulation flowing north level wind to the coast will determine whether the East has a dry or stormy winter, he said.

Feel 'Cheated' On Santa Claus

NEW YORK (AP) — Children today are more disappointed than children were 80 years ago to learn that Santa Claus is not real, psychologists report.

Children in a recent survey said they felt "sorry" or "cheated" more than twice as often — 45 percent versus 22 percent — as children in an identical survey done in 1896, say Ludy Benjamin, Jacqueline Langley and Rosalie Hall.

But the three said modern schoolchildren were less likely than their 1896 counterparts to ascribe to St. Nick supernatural powers.

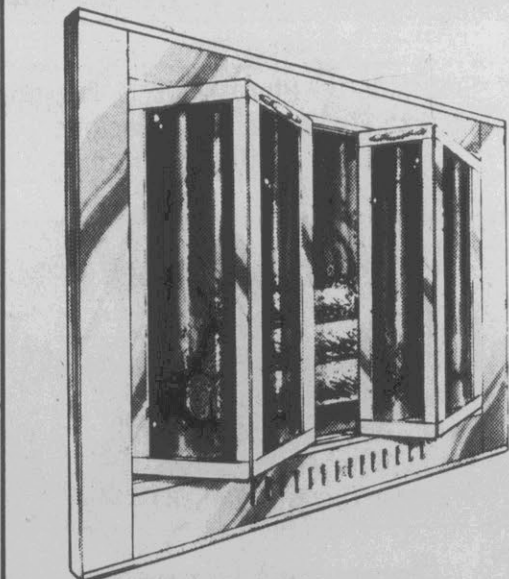

"Perhaps today's children, raised with Wonder Woman, Spiderman, Batman, and the Bionic Woman, find Santa Claus a bit lackluster as a mythic figure," they said. The study was published today in Psychology Today.

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Pope John Paul II of the Roman Catholic Church embraced and kissed Patriarch Demetrius I of the Eastern Orthodox Church today as the leaders of Christianity's two largest branches symbolically launched their dialogue to end more than nine centuries of division.

The Roman Catholic pontiff also embraced and kissed Armenian Patriarch Snork Khadun shortly after arriving at Istanbul's airport from Ankara on the second day of his ecumenical visit to Turkey.

John Paul's plane landed in Istanbul, Christianity's former Eastern capital, under a bright sun breaking through scattered clouds. Turkish and Christian religious officials were on hand to greet the pontiff on the airport tarmac.

Before leaving Ankara, the pontiff told a gathering of Catholics at a church in the Italian Embassy complex that Islam and Christianity must promote solidarity, adding that "this a necessity of our age and an order of God."

The pope said that Islam is a monotheistic religion, recognizes Jesus as a true prophet and venerates the Virgin Mary. The pope paid his respects to the Turkish government's Moslem leaders Wednesday on his first day of his visit.

On Friday, he and Demetrius will formally inaugurate the dialogue to remove some of the obstacles to reunification of their two branches of Christianity, which split 925 years ago and now claim a total of 900 million members.

It was this meeting that brought the pope to the Moslem nation where Christianity was supreme under the Byzantine emperors and where the Orthodox patriarch still has his headquarters, although there are only 100,000 Christians among the country's population of 45 million.

The pope's itinerary today included visits to two museums, one a former harem and the other a former church; calls on Christian church officials, a Mass and a reception for members of the foreign consular corps.

One of the museums is the Hagia Sophia, the masterpiece of Byzantine architecture and one of the largest churches in Christendom until the Turks captured Constantinople (Istanbul) in 1453. They converted it into a mosque, and since 1923 it has been a museum of Byzantine art.

Religious worship in the Hagia Sophia is now banned, and an editorial in Turkey's biggest newspaper, Hurriyet, warned the pope on Sunday to avoid the "mistake" his predecessor Paul VI made there during his 1967 visit to Turkey. The previous pope knelt briefly in silent prayer, triggering angry reactions from militant Moslem groups and embarrassing the Turkish government.

The former harem is the Topkapi Palace, where the priceless jewel collection of the Ottoman rulers is displayed.

Because of the wave of militancy sweeping the Moslem world and political terrorism in Turkey that has caused some extraordinary security screen and 2,300 deaths in the past two years, the government sur- no opportunity was given for rounded the pope with an ex- crowds to see him even if the people wanted to.

Mining Offer

CRESWELL, N.C. (AP) — The state has offered to allow First Colony Farms to mine peat on half the acreage the company had wanted to.

The offer came after the state dropped requirements for an environmental assessment on the proposal.

First Colony plans to harvest peat for use as fuel. It has been offered a mining permit for 15,000 acres. State officials said the permit would provide safeguards for the environment.

Robert Campbell, spokesman for the huge agribusiness, said the company was considering whether to press its original request for a mining permit for 32,000 acres. He said the company wanted to find out why the state wanted to limit the operation.

"They have all the safeguards they need now built into the environmental regulation," he said, continuing that the operation could be shut down whether the operation was "one acre or 100,000 acres."

Campbell said four private companies were discussing the feasibility of building a power plant in the area that would burn peat.

No Bias Found In State Test

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — No evidence of racial or sexual bias was found in the 1978 minimum competency test, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill researcher told the N.C. Competency Test Commission Wednesday.

"There is a difference in the performance of black and white," said Dr. Mark Appelbaum. "But what we're talking about here is bias — differences that are not related to the (performance) differences we measure."

He said his study shows the test measures differences in ability, not in race. The failure rate among blacks taking the first 1978 test was 25 percent in the reading section and 33 percent in the mathematics section. About 10 percent of the white students failed either part.

Dr. James Gallagher, chairman of the commission, said in an interview after Appelbaum's testimony that because one group does better than another doesn't indicate bias. He said the test doesn't measure basic ability, but rather skills learned.

Appelbaum's study is one of four being conducted for the commission at UNC campuses. One will evaluate remedial programs. A public hearing will be held today by the commission on whether handicapped students should be required to take the test.

Possible changes in the test for children who have hearing or visual handicaps as well as children who are classified as educable mentally retarded will be considered. Less than half the handicapped students who took the test last year passed. The commission will also discuss today how it will contract for a feasibility study on adding a writing section to the test.

Such a study will mean determining the best method to score writing performance and the best type of writing exercises. The major issue, though, is whether writing is a minimum-competency skill expected from all high school students.

Beginning this school year, high school seniors must have passed the test in order to receive diplomas.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened higher today, continuing a rally begun in the final few minutes of Wednesday's session.

The Dow Jones industrial average was up 1.54 to 832.00 in the early going.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by a 3-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts ascribed some of the market's strength to reaction to President Carter's Wednesday night press conference, at which he said the United States "will never yield to blackmail," in response to a question about the Iranian crisis.

But experts also said today's rally was a spillover from Wednesday, when rumors — immediately denied — that IBM was close to a settlement in its government antitrust case sent IBM and other stocks soaring.

Among early trades today, IBM was unchanged at 65 1/4. Mobil rose 1/8 to 51. Texaco gained 1/8 to 30 1/2. AT&T went up 1/8 to 53 3/4 and Gulf Oil slipped 1/4 to 35 1/4.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.61 to 830.46.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 5-2 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 39.69 million shares, against 45.14 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 23 to 61.00.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .73 at 227.06.

from 1965 to 1970. He last served as special assistant to the director of the Office of Administrative Courts. He is a Beaufort County native.

Hodges is one of nine census district office managers to be named in North Carolina and one of 409 to be selected throughout the nation.

The 1980 Census will be a count-yourself census. Every household in the country will receive a census questionnaire on March 28 by mail. Residents here will be asked to complete the form and return it in a postage-free envelope on April 1, Census Day.

Residents of Beaufort, Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Dare, Edgecombe, Gates, Halifax, Hertford, Hyde, Martin, Nash, Northampton, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Pitt, Tyrell, Washington and Wilson Counties will return their census forms to the Greenville office.

Census information is kept strictly confidential by law. The U. S. Constitution mandates that the official population count be taken every ten years. The 1980 census will be America's 20th census.

Blackout Got Their Attention

OSCEOLA, Ark. (AP) — There's nothing like a little demonstration to live up to a speech. Ask Rita Baker, who was lecturing on what to do in a blackout when — you guessed it — the lights went out.

The director of Mississippi County's Energy Office was addressing a winter survival workshop Tuesday night when the lights and power in the auditorium and most of Osceola went out.

"Now, the first thing to do in a situation like this is to find a light source," she said, seizing the chance to make her point.

"Does anybody have a flashlight?"

Several cigarette lighters flared, a flashlight was finally found and the lecture continued until the lights were restored — with the audience's undivided attention.

May Resign His Post With Bank

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's budget officer said Wednesday he is considering resigning his seat on a local board of First Union National Bank.

John A. Williams came under fire recently when it was reported that he ordered the transfer of some state funds from North Carolina National Bank to First Union. He's a director of the Raleigh board of directors for First Union.

However, he repeated his denial that the transfer of funds might have constituted conflict of interest because he had not gained financially. Gov. Jim Hunt has also said he didn't see any conflict and Williams said Hunt had not asked him to resign from the board.

Charge Youths With Slaying

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three teenagers were charged Wednesday with killing a rural grocer killed near Apex Monday, Wake County Sheriff John Baker said.

They were charged with murder in the death of Everett Desmond Rhodes, 64, who was shot with a shotgun 13 times in the chest at his store, Rhodes Grocery, near Apex, Baker said.

He identified the three as Gerald Wayne Foye, 16, Bruce Daniel Emory, 17, and Timothy Wayne Coats, 19, all of Wake County.

The three were arrested late Monday night, he said.

Planning Bds....

just south of Grayleigh and Pinewood Forest Subdivisions from RA-20 to Office and Institutional, R-6 and R-9.

All of the property is presently undeveloped land zoned for RA-20 (residential-agricultural) usage, it was pointed out. Under the rezoning, the front segment of the property or some 13.3 acres would be Office and Institutional, 46 acres in the middle section would be R-6, and the rear portion involving 89 acres would be R-9. A 150-foot strip of R-9 would buffer Grayleigh and Pinewood Forest developments.

Commissioners tabled action, pending completion of a corridor zoning study, on a request by J. Bryant Kittrell III, agent for 4.19 acres north of Greenville Boulevard S.W. and west of Shenandoah Subdivision, for rezoning from RA-20 to R-6.

The area proposed for rezoning is part of a section that is proposed for annexation, according to Roberson, who added that the city received a valid petition protesting the rezoning action. He said that the Planning Department has been asked to take a look at the area in conducting a zoning analysis.

Joe Laney, who said that his property is located north of the Manning tract, expressed concern regarding the proposed rezoning and he contended that the property, if rezoned at all, should be in a R-15 classification rather than R-6.

Citing the low density of the residential area, Laney said that to put 68 housing units in to four acres at the expense of the neighboring home owners would not be fair.

He added that the property owners were not fighting development but were advocating well-planned development. Laney urged the board to put the matter aside until a study of the area is complete.

Ellen Flanagan, who owns property adjoining the Manning tract, cited the investments homeowners had in the area. She contended that she would have apartments backing up to her house.

Linwood Stroud, representing the developer, said that the protest petition had not been anticipated and he requested that the matter be tabled so that study could be given to an alternate proposal.

Roberson said that the zoning study would be ready by the January planning board meeting.

The Greenville board voted to recommend that the request of Mrs. W. D. Barbre for rezoning two acres on Dickinson Avenue near West End Circle from Downtown Commercial Fringe to Highway Commercial be approved.

The property, it was explained, is located between the existing Piggly Wiggly food store and Cannon's Warehouse. Roberson said that the property offered a good example of CDF zoning that he felt should be Highway Commercial. He noted that the property is not in the downtown area as indicated by the zoning.

Commissioners also recommended that the request of Colonel Harvey Bradshaw for rezoning 6.5 acres within Fairlane Farms, located on the west side of Hooker Road across from Cambridge Subdivision, from R-15 to R-6, be approved.

Staff Planner Skip Browder said that rezoning the property R-6 would give Bradshaw the opportunity to have an internal street development rather than driveway cuts along Hooker Road for individual lots. Property across the street is zoned R-6 and involves single-family development.

A request by J. T. Manning Jr. for rezoning 1.23 acres on the north side of Belvoir Highway just west of the prison camp, from Unofficial Industry to Neighborhood Commercial, was tabled for 30 days.

Commissioners also tabled action on a request by the City Council for the board to reconsider the recommendation regarding outdoor advertising signs, specifically what zoning classifications would allow outdoor advertising signs.

Roberson said the board is being asked to look at the Downtown Commercial Fringe (CDF) and Shopping Center zones for inclusion as zoning areas where outdoor signs would be permitted uses. Roberson contended that the CDF zoning classification needs to be reworked and he added that he did not believe the zone is being enforced the way it was intended.

The planning director said that hopefully the staff will be able to rework the CDF and CS zoning classifications. A recommendation by the Codes Review Committee should be available by the end of April, he said.

Commissioners took under advisement for consideration until the January meeting a request by the Greenville Energy Program for the board's assistance in the form of a recommendation to the City Council that the GEP, in cooperation with the Planning Department, define energy efficient land use for the city and its extrajurisdictional area.

The question of adding any further work load to the planning staff was mentioned. Roberson said that the city did not have the expertise to evaluate subdivisions as far as energy efficiency was concerned. He added, however, that he felt that the matter involved touching base with the GEP and having it involved when new subdivision requests are made.

Reese Helms, director of the program, said that the GEP would like to work with the planning staff to develop and define energy efficiency information as it relates to land use.

A proposal by the Planning Department to modify the extrajurisdictional jurisdiction boundary of the city in the area west of the Allen Road (State Road 1203) was approved for recommendation to the City Council.

Approval was also given to the final plat of Wildwood Village, located on Beech Street north of Third Street, and to the revised final plat of Carolina East Convenience Center, located just north of Carolina East Mall. The revision of the convenience center plat involved the addition of 20 feet to a lot, it was explained, in order to permit Peoples Bank & Trust Co. to have proper traffic circulation around the new bank facility.

Action on the preliminary plat of A-J-H-N Subdivision, location on NC 11 across from Carolina East Mall, was deferred until the Sedimentation Control Plan and additional drainage information for the tract is presented.

Concern was expressed regarding the present flooding situation in the residential areas near the A-J-H-N tract. City Engineer Ron Sewell explained that the flooding problem involves a point downstream from present ditches in the subdivisions. He said that currently a 48-inch pipe is located at the problem point and the proposal is to replace the one pipe with four 60-inch pipes to handle the water problem.

Rose, Gryphons In Eastern Title Tilt

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The average fan might feel a sense of déjà vu when he regards this Friday night's meeting between Rose and Rocky Mount for the Eastern 4-A championship.

The game, to be played at 8 p.m. in Rocky Mount, will decide who will face the victor in the East Burke-High Point Central for the State 4-A title next weekend.

But, although it is the second meeting between the two, a lot has changed for both since the fifth game of the year when Rocky Mount took a 21-14 win.

Rose High School, according to coach Dave Bumgarner has improved tremendously in both offense and defense. "We haven't made any changes, we are just doing the things that I wanted us to do at the start of the season."

Rocky Mount, meanwhile, has moved tackle Cliff Powell out to tight end, and the big 6-5 speedster has opened up the passing attack of the Gryphons. They used that passing attack up upset previously unbeaten Jacksonville, 28-27, last Friday night.

Rose, meanwhile dumped Fayetteville-Terry Sanford, 13-7, to advance.

"Offensively, we played as well as we could except when we got inside the five yard line," Bumgarner said of the Terry Sanford game. "Given the same opportunity, I would still have gone for the touchdown and not kicked a field goal," he added. The Rampants, on their first threat, faced a fourth and goal at the five and went for it, failing. Bumgarner said following the game that he felt his defense could hold Sanford deep within its own territory and get the ball back in fine field position. Instead, a face-masking call on first down moved them out of the hole.

"You just can't anticipate things like that. You certainly don't coach 15-yard penalties."

"Really, we played well enough to have scored four times, instead of just twice," he added.

Sanford's lone score came in the closing seconds of the game, after the outcome was foregone.

"I was surprised by them. I thought that they'd have more offense. Their defense did do a fine job on our rushing game, however. Our passing game made the difference."

Bumgarner praised quarterback Kenny Barnes for the great improvement he has made during the season. "I'm very impressed with the way he's playing now." Bumgarner also added praise for split ends Tyrone Tucker and Chris McLawhorn, who've been on the receiving end of most of Barnes' passes. "A good passer isn't worth a hoot if someone can't catch the ball," Bumgarner said.

Turning to the Rocky Mount game, Bumgarner said he feels the Gryphons are a whole new team compared to their first meeting.

In that one, the Rampants fell behind early when tailback Victor Thorne broke away on a 52-yard touchdown run, but came back to tie it up at 7-7. Rocky Mount turned another long Thorne run into a score late in the half, and Rose missed a controversial field goal just before the end of the half.

Rocky Mount added a third score on an 85-yard Thorne punt return, then saw Rose drive down to cut the lead to 21-14. Rose then had two drives stalled, one on an unsportsmanlike conduct call inside the Gryphon 25, and the other on a fourth and three call at the 19 that just fell short.

ECU Coach Pat Dye

Dye Talking About Wyoming

Pat Dye, head football coach at East Carolina University, said he would decide sometime today whether he would continue as a candidate for the same position at the University of Wyoming.

Dye talked with Wyoming athletic director George McCarty in Raleigh earlier this week. Wyoming fired Bill Lewis as head coach earlier in the week.

"My position is just about what was quoted earlier today," Dye said when contacted this morning. "I've talked with them, but the talks are preliminary."

"I'm trying to decide what I'm going to do. I'll probably decide sometime today one way or another. I have a lot to consider. I have to think about what's best for me, my family, the staff and East Carolina."

Dye refused to say whether he had been offered the job at Wyoming.

Attempts to contact McCarty were unsuccessful. He has not returned to his home in Laramie, and is believed to be on his way home from interviewing prospective candidates for the job.

Dye's name has also been mentioned for the spot being vacated by LSU's Charlie McClendon, but sources in New Orleans said that Dye's name is believed to be "down the list of about 12 names." Most frequently mentioned names for that job appear to be Bo Rein of N.C. State and George Welsh of Navy. Arkansas coach Lou Holtz is also considered a candidate for the job. Dye's name has also popped up in talk about the State position should Rein leave for another post.

Athletic Director Bill Cain of East Carolina said McCarty had contacted him requesting permission to talk with Dye. "I haven't talked with either of them since they talked," Cain said. "McCarty said he would get back to me later. I don't know how close they might be to deciding on someone."

While Dye said that salary has not been discussed with Wyoming, Lewis received $45,000 under his old contract, but it was believed that the school would go higher to get an experienced, winning head coach.

Former Colorado coach Bill Mallory is also seeking the Wyoming job.

Thorne was the entire offense that night, but Bumgarner doesn't look for a repeat performance. "Their offense is a lot more balanced now than it was then. They have a good passer in (Bill) Merrifield, and with Thorne and (William) Bynum in the backfield running the ball, they really have a triple threat. That gives us three people we have to stop."

Thorne is the leading rusher on the team, having picked up 1184 yards in 214 lugs over the 12 games so far. That's an average of 5.5 yards a trip. Bynum, the fullback, has around 750 yards on the year.

Merrifield has hit 66 of 166 passes for 1,113 yards, including 15 touchdown passes. Of those, Powell has caught over half. He's had eight picked off.

Powell, who switched to the tight end position just before Rocky Mount's ninth game with Bertie, caught five passes for 155 yards against Jacksonville, three of them for touchdowns.

Denry Lawrence, and Kenneth Weaver, both wide receivers, are also prime targets for Merrifield's aerials.

"I think the passing game will be a key factor in the game," Bumgarner said. "We've got to be able to stop their passing and we've got to be able to throw the ball ourselves. The breaks of the game will be a big factor, too."

For the senior members of the Rampant team, the trip to Rocky Mount will be a familiar one. "You know," Bumgarner said, "these kids have never played Rocky Mount on their own home field. When they were in the ninth grade (at E.B. Aycock Junior High), their game was in Rocky Mount. When they were junior varsity players, they played in Rocky Mount, and their junior year, the varsity game was played in Rocky Mount. Because of the addition of the two Wilson schools to the conference and the resulting changes in the schedule, this year's game was also in Rocky Mount.

"It's just a shame that they couldn't have had one shot at them here."

Lady Pirates Blast Wilmington Despite Not Playing To Form

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

The East Carolina women's basketball team brought its act off the road and back home Wednesday night and sent the UNC-Wilmington Seahawks packing with a crunching 86-54 win.

The Pirates, coming off wins over St. John's and Manhattan College this past weekend in New York, shrugged off a sluggish start and spurred to an early 10-point lead and were never threatened in winning their fourth game of the season against no defeats.

Kathy Riley led the Bucs in scoring with 27 points, followed by All-America candidate Rosie Thompson's 22. Lydia Rountree was the only other Buc in double figures, tallying 10.

Darci Wilson was the lone Seahawk in double figures, scoring 12 points.

"We're pleased with the win, of course," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said afterwards. "But this is the most turnovers we've had all year, and probably the most we've had in the last two years."

"I don't really think it was just bad playing, though," she said. "The players were so hyper when they came out, they were so intense, that I think we got too excited," she said. "We wanted to play so well for our home fans that I think we tried too hard."

"This is only the second time we've been home this season and I think a lot of the girls were shooting the ball before they got it tonight," Andruzzi said. "We'd get the ball and just throw it. We wouldn't really shoot it."

After a sluggish start, the Lady Pirates built a 14-point lead midway through the opening half, mainly on the shooting of Riley, Thompson and Rountree, all of whom tallied six points in the early going.

The Pirates extended their advantage to 24-6 when the Seahawks went four minutes without scoring. Then with 1:45 left, ECU managed its biggest lead of the half, 39-16, before coasting to a 41-21 halftime lead.

In the second half, the Seahawks, who shot 16.7 percent in the first half and 29.3 percent for the game, continued to be plagued by their own turnovers and bad shooting. UNC-W had 26 turnovers.

With Riley connecting for 15 points on her long outside jumper and Thompson working inside for 12 more points, the Bucs built a commanding 30-point lead, 60-30, midway through the final half.

From there, ECU, which shot 47.5 percent from the floor for the game, extended its lead to a whopping 35 points, 86-51, with less than a minute to go before winning by 32.

Despite the 32-point spread, Andruzzi said afterwards this was not one of her team's better showings.

"Our man-to-man defense allowed too many back doors tonight," she said. "Defensively, we should have played better."

We'll have to play better defense against Duke (ECU's next opponent) to win.

"Against Manhattan and St. John's we played better defense and we didn't foul as much. We played good fundamental basketball up there," she said.

Paladins Set To Open Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt Community College will attempt to get its basketball program back on its feet again this season, and will open the year Saturday night at Bladen Tech.

The Paladins play their first home game of the year on Wednesday, hosting James Sprunt at 7:30 p.m. at Chicod School.

"We've been having spirited practices," said Coach Herb Dillon. "One difficulty is not having a home floor to work on. We practicing at two different places, and will be playing on several different courts."

"But most of the kids have been giving us good effort so far," he added.

There are 12 out for the team, but Dillon feels that overall depth is weak. "We probably will have to go most of the way with about seven doing most of the playing," he said.

The Paladins have held two scrimmages with other schools, and he was pleased with the outcome of both. "We played pretty respectable although we were going up against established programs."

Dillon expects to have a running team on offense, and a pressure team on defense. "We're quick and small, but we jump well. We're going to have to push the ball up the floor and press our opponents. If we try and get in a muscle game with anyone, we're going to get killed."

Height is also a big problem for the Paladins. "We just don't have any big men. Our tallest player is 6-4. So rebounding is going to be a definite problem. We are just going to have to try and get the best shots we can because we won't get many second ones."

Dillon does feel that the Paladins can be respectable in

Pirates Face VCU In Spider Classic

East Carolina's Pirates get the 1979-80 basketball season off to its official start on Friday night in Richmond, Va., challenging

Virginia Commonwealth in the first round of the Spider Classic. The tournament, sponsored by the University of Richmond, will be held in the Robbins Center on the Richmond campus. The host team will face West Virginia Tech in the opening round, set for 7 p.m., while the Pirates and Rams meet in the second game, at 9 p.m.

The consolation and championships will be held on Saturday night.

East Carolina kicked off the season with an exhibition game on Monday, defeating the Marathon Oilers, 103-92. For Virginia Commonwealth, it will be the opener.

VCU will put a veteran team on the floor, but the Rams have a new head coach in J.D. Barnett, who replaced Dana Kirk, who went to Memphis State. Barnett, who previously coached at High Point and Lenoir Rhyne, came to VCU from Northeastern Louisiana, where he was Southland Conference Coach of the Year last season.

"Talentwise, they are probably the equal of anyone we play this year," Coach Dave Odom said of his opponent. "But it's hard to tell what they will do otherwise because of their tempo. I saw them play an intralub scrimmage and their gait is something like that of a pro club. They seem to go slow for about three quarters, then break loose. So it's hard to say whether they are going to run or walk, be passive or pressure us."

"It's like going into a game blindfolded," he added.

The Rams will put almost the same team on the court that beat the Pirates twice in overtimes last season. Only one member of that team is gone.

Returning is 6-10 Penny Elliott at one of the forward positions, with 6-5 Danny Kottak at the other. Ed Sherrod and Monty Knight will handle the guard positions, while Kenny Jones takes over at center at 6-11.

"They are very impressive in their depth, too," Odom commented. "They have a good swing man in Freddie Bates and Kenny Stancill, at 6-7, is very capable. He started for Elliott when he was injured last year."

Odom said the Pirates cannot allow VCU to set the tempo of the game. "If they run things, it could turn into a long night for us," he said.

"I think we are definitely the underdogs in this game. I'm concerned about their height and their strength. They are one of the few teams that we play who will match us in guard height and that will take away one of the few advantages that we will have."

"What it comes down to is our using our speed and quickness to force the tempo and take away their inside game."

While Odom said that the world won't turn on the outcome of the contest, it's one he would like to win. "It could be a big game for us. It's bigger for us than it is for them. We need to establish some winning tradition, but at this stage, we can't let everything hang on winning."

Vikings Top Kinston Clubs

—D.H. Conley's Vikings picked up their second straight win last night, downing 4-A Kinston, 62-57. The Valkyries also won their second, 65-42.

Conley built up a 19-14 lead in the first period and were never headed after that. They cruised out to a 35-27 halftime margin over their fellow Vikings.

Conley continued to hold the lead in the third period, running the score to 49-40, before allowing a 17-13 comeback by Kinston in the final quarter.

Mitchell Moore and O'hara Parker led Conley with 18 points each. Vincent Lewis had 25 and Derek Miller had 11 for Kinston.

In the girls' game, Conley inched into a 17-15 lead in the first period, then blitzed the Kinston girls, 23-5 in the second frame. That gave the Valkyries a 40-20 lead at intermission.

Conley continued to pull away in the third, making it 54-28 by the horn. They allowed a 14-11 Kinston margin in the final quarter.

Tilda Garris led Conley with 16, while Pam Manning had 12 and Glenda Green had 10. Michele Belcher had 12 and Andy Cuomo had 11 for Kinston.

The Vikes entertain Southern Nash on Tuesday in their first Eastern Carolina Conference encounter.

Wilkinson Fired As Coach Of St. Louis In Second Season

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Given a second chance, ousted St. Louis Cardinals Coach Bud Wilkinson says he would not alter his handling of the National Football League team.

"When I came back, I thought I would take this team to the Super Bowl and take it there with class," an unbowed Wilkinson reflected Wednesday night only hours after he had been fired.

"I'm sorry that I will not have an opportunity to take part in the realization of that dream," Wilkinson added. "I feel that progress has been made. I think we were very close to being a contending team."

The firing of the 63-year-old

Wilkinson was announced at a news conference three games before the collegiate coaching legend was to have completed his second pro season.

"I have determined to take immediate action...in what I consider to be the best interest of the football team," said Cards' owner Bill Bidwill, who named director of pro personnel Larry Wilson an interim replacement.

"This decision was made when it became apparent Coach Wilkinson and I had opposite positions on the subject of our program for the remainder of the season."

Bidwill labeled Wilkinson's refusal to use backup Steve Pisarkiewicz, "our quarterback of the future," as the "catalyst" to the final break.

The two met Monday to confer over the owner's request, said Bidwill. "I suggested that he play Pisarkiewicz, and he indicated he did not intend to."

"He seemed to think that Pisarkiewicz could do the job. He probably had a reason, but I wasn't told it."

Bidwill indicated the two also had other differences in matters of personnel but declined to be specific, noting that "I'd prefer not to at this time."

"I didn't look at it that way," Wilkinson responded when asked if Bidwill's request to use Pisarkiewicz on Sunday against the San Francisco 49ers was an ultimatum.

Pisarkiewicz joined a majority of St. Louis players who declined to discuss their reactions to the firing.

Bears Capture Fourth Victory

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass added two more basketball victories to its totals last night by taking a pair from Columbia High School. The boys took a 69-55 win for their fourth against no losses, while the girls inched to a 39-37 win, their third in four games.

Bear Grass' boys shot away to a 19-8 lead in the first period and were never in serious trouble after that. Columbia made a run at them in the second quarter, closing it to 31-25 by halftime.

But in the third period, the Bears pulled away again, boosting their lead to 50-39. They outthit Columbia, 19-16, in the final frame.

Jesse Bullock led the Bears with 16 points, while Watson Rogers, William Roberson and Wilbert Williams each had 12. Columbia was led by Jeffrey Bowers with 20 and Warrenton Hill with 10.

The girls' game was a different story, going right down to the wire. Columbia held a 4-3 lead after a slow start by both teams, and inched that out to 18-16 at the end of the half.

Columbia ran its lead out to 29-22 during the third period, but the Lady Bears put on a rally in the final period outscoring Columbia, 17-8. Kathy Rawls hit the winning basket with two seconds left in the game.

Joette Rogers led the Bear scoring with 15, while Sharon Spence had 16 for Columbia. The Bears play host to Chowan on Friday.

Gymnastics Meet Set

The Rosettes will be competing against the Cape Hatteras Gymnastics Club in their second meet of the season Saturday.

The meet will be held at Rose's Gymnastics Training Center, in the Carolina Country Day gymnasium. The meet will start at 12:30 p.m.

The Class III compulsory meet will see gymnasts attempting to qualify for state competition in February.

Among those competing are Donna Costner, Karen Downes, Christy Garrison, Nancy Johnson, Susan Lewis, Jennifer Newton, Anne Parker, Karie Seykora and Christa Welborn.

Several Class II gymnasts will also be performing optional routines for exhibition purposes. They are Judy Benson, Tracy Fearrington, Jenny Johnsrude, Kerri Logue, Ginger McLendon and Carmela Weber.

The Rosettes are coached by Darlene Rose, assisted by Louise Anderson, Pat Kinlaw and Jean Smith.

The group will also present a gymnastics show on Friday, December 7 at 7 p.m.

Carolina Nixes Further Big Four Play

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is taking its marbles and going home.

And the decision means the end of the Big Four Tournament, the formal kickoff of Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action.

"We made the decision we would rather not participate in the Big Four Tournament after 1980," said North Carolina athletic director Bill Cobey, who gave the thumbs-down signal to continuing the tournament at a meeting of Big Four-school athletic directors Wednesday. Cobey made the remarks in a telephone interview from Greensboro, where the coaches met.

North Carolina's withdrawal means the tournament won't be staged. As Duke athletic director Tom Butters said, "Obviously, that only takes one vote, so it's not a matter of consensus." The schools — North Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest and North Carolina State — have played in the tournament each year since 1970.

This year's tournament starts Friday at the Greensboro Coliseum, pitting No. 3 Duke against Wake Forest and No. 6 North Carolina against North Carolina State. Saturday, the winners meet in the championship and the losers meet in the consolation game.

Butters stressed that Duke didn't want the tournament to end, despite some earlier comments by Coach Bill Foster that he'd just as soon not have the Blue Devils participate.

"I was very much in favor of continuing and so expressed it," Butters said in a telephone interview. "I am concerned about a public that for a long time has supported it."

Wake Forest athletic director Gene Hooks, who broke the news about the tournament's demise in a release Wednesday night, said, "We're very disappointed that we can't continue this tournament at this time. We are very hopeful that something can be done to replace the event in this time slot."

The main problems, according to Cobey, are saddling one team with two losses early in the season and the potential for playing the same team as many as five times during the year.

"I think two or three times a year is enough to play (one team)," he said, noting that each team meets twice during the regular season and could meet a third time in the ACC tournament and again in the NCAA tournament, in addition to the Big Four meeting.

When the tournament first started, it was scheduled later in the season. But recently, it has been the kickoff and has meant two early losses for one team. Last year, it was North Carolina State, and Coach Norm Sloan made no bones about his displeasure.

N.C. State athletic director Willis Casey was represented at the meeting Wednesday by Frank Weedon, the associate athletic director for the Wolfpack. Weedon wasn't available for comment Wednesday night, but those close to the meeting said he was in favor of continuing.

N.C. State and Wake Forest have each won the tournament three times. North Carolina has won twice, and Duke's only win came last year.

Jaguars Romp In Cage Opener

NEW HOPE — Farmville Central opened its basketball season last night, splitting a pair of games with Eastern Wayne. The Jaguars won the boys' game, 87-54, while the girls were victims of the Lady Warriors, 57-49.

Farmville and Eastern battled on even terms throughout the first period, which ended in a 19-19 deadlock. But Farmville began to assert itself in the second quarter, pulling out to a 41-32 lead by halftime.

The Jaguars continued to pound away at the Warriors in the third period, outnitting them, 25-11. That ran their lead out to 66-43. Farmville finished them off with an 18-14 margin in the final quarter.

Dennis Pitt led the Jaguar scoring with 21 points while Donald Reid and Jeff Tyson each had 16 and Ronald Dixon added 11. Andrew Baker had 12 to pace Eastern.

The girls game saw Eastern inch ahead, 16-14, after one period and up that to 33-28 by

to hold the lead, 42-36, after three frames, and outit Farmville,

15-13, in the last.

Courtney Lancaster and Diana Gordon each had 12 points to lead Farmville, while Diane Robinson had 14, Sharon Smith had 12 and Brenda Mathis had 11 for Eastern.

Farmville opens its Eastern Carolina Conference schedule on Friday, hosting Southern Nash. JV—Eastern Wayne 39, Farmville Central 33.

their play this year. "There are some teams on the schedule however who are out of our league."

Starters for the team will probably be 6-0 Lewis Dail and 5-9 Jeff Moreno at the guards, 6-3 Danny Garris and 6-2 Frankie Dail at forwards and 6-4 Larry Suggs at center.

"Our first sub inside will be Kelvin McNeil (6-2) and at guard, Dennis Batts (6-1)," Dillon said.

"We're not putting a lot of emphasis on wins and losses this year," he added. "We just want to get the program reestablished and be respectable. We want to have local kids, mostly those from Pitt County, playing for us. We want our program to be a service to some of the area kids who wouldn't get to play otherwise."

NO HOME EDGE

BALTIMORE (AP) — When the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 4-1, in the seventh and deciding game of the World Series, it demonstrated once again that the home field is no advantage in a classic that goes the limit.

Of the 27 World Series to go seven games, the visiting team in the final game has won 17 championships and the home club has taken 10 titles. The Pirates, by the way, have been in a seven-game series four times and have won them all.

Foster Children Frequently Victims Of Abuse

By JUDY SERRIN
United Press International
 Because his parents neglected him, Derrick Gresham, 7, was removed from his New York City home two years ago and placed in foster care.
 The court said the move was for his own protection. Derrick joined his older brother, John, in first one foster home, then another.
 Instead of being protected, Derrick was killed.
 On May 26 Derrick was beaten on the buttocks with a belt, allegedly by his foster father, so severely that his blood vessels ruptured. He died of internal bleeding. His brother, also beaten, had to be hospitalized.
 The foster father was indicted for second-degree murder.
 Derrick was one of 18 children to die in foster care in New York

City so far this year — a rate almost twice that for children in the general population. Five and possibly six of these deaths are reported to be the result of maltreatment, either direct abuse — besides Derrick's case, a foster mother is charged with murder in the beating death of a 3-year-old girl — or lack of adequate supervision.
 According to social workers and others connected with foster care, the problem of abuse is a national one, affecting several thousand children annually and, perhaps more importantly, pointing out the serious deficiencies that make foster care one of the saddest of government services.
 "In a sense, you have as a government moved a child from one situation of risk and put that child in another situation of risk," said Carol Bellamy, New York City Council president, launching an investigation into foster care abuse. "...What we should not be doing as a government is making things worse."

 Foster care specialists emphasize that the vast majority of the half a million foster children across the country — 395,000 of them living with families, the rest in group homes or treatment centers — are never abused.
 "Child abuse is a rampant kind of thing in our society, and I think that foster parents aren't all that different from anybody else," said Helen Jones, foster parent curriculum director with the Child Welfare League of America. "It just shows up so strongly among people who in the main are out to protect children."
 Beverly Stubbee, foster care specialist in the U.S. Children's Bureau, stresses that abuse would most certainly be greater if the children stayed with their natural parents, who, according to American Humane Association statistics, commit 86 percent of reported child abuse.
 Two incidents in Rhode Island illustrate Ms. Stubbee's point. Within months last year, two infants involved with foster care died.
 One, Shawn Waite, 18 months old, who had been living with foster parents, was beaten to death on a weekend visit to his natural parents. Soon after, the 15-month-old daughter of mentally retarded parents — a child social workers had recommended be placed in foster care — starved to death.
 The resulting investigation turned up extreme confusion and competition among agencies charged with getting children into foster care, guarding them while in the system, and getting them out again. A massive overhaul resulted, and on Jan. 1, a new cabinet-level department for children and their families will replace the 150 children's programs scattered among five state agencies.
 Besides the New York deaths, the city has documented 82 cases of non-fatal abuse to foster children so far this year and is investigating about 300 more. The system, which handles 23,000 children, is the country's largest. But the evidence is that foster care does not work very well anywhere in the nation.
 In Hennepin County, Minn., for example, a judge ruled in October that it would be too risky to send a 3-year-old girl back to the foster home where she apparently was bruised and battered.
 The girl, who had been abandoned by her mother, was living with her third set of foster parents. The couple wanted to adopt her. But on May 30, the girl arrived at her regular babysitter's with two badly swollen black eyes, body scars and blemishes.
 The babysitter called authorities, who took the child to another foster home. Later, in court, the tearful couple blamed the girl's injuries on accidental falls. They said they loved her and had learned enough about child-rearing to give her a safe home — but the judge refused.

 In Sacramento, Calif., complaints of overcrowding, drug abuse and sexual abuse were brought against the operators of the Dry Creek Home, a foster home for emotionally troubled children. And two counselors at the nearby Holy Acres residential group home, with 40 mentally disturbed children, have been charged with furnishing drugs to juveniles and engaging in sex with a juvenile, a 16-year-old girl who was taken to a motel 16 times.
 In Missouri, Nancy Grant, foster care consultant with the state Division of Family Services in Jefferson City, estimated 1 per cent of the state's 5,500 foster children were abused or neglected annually.
 (If the same percentage were to apply nationally, it would mean 5,000 instances of abuse and neglect a year. The state of Washington, however, estimates its abuse rate at 3.5 cases for every 1,000 foster children, which, if applied nationally, would mean 1,750 abused foster children. The foster care system is so confused that no one knows which figure is more accurate.)
 Ms. Grant called the situation in her state "minimal," but added, "even a little bit is too much in my opinion."

Jane Knitzer, co-director of a foster care study for the Children's Defense Fund, in Washington, D.C., said that in the states investigated — Arizona, California, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio, South Carolina and South Dakota — "We were surprised at the number of instances we learned of that involved abuse in institutions."
 The abuse, Ms. Knitzer said, involved over-seclusion, over-medication and harsh punishment. She said data on abuse in foster families was scarce.
 In theory, of course, abuse should not happen in foster care at all. Foster parents have to be licensed, whereas natural parents do not. In some states, foster parents are trained, whereas natural ones are not. Foster parents are regularly — at least, on paper — subject to visits from the child's caseworkers.
 When abuse is reported, said Ray Helfer, acting chairman of pediatrics at Michigan State University and a child abuse expert, "One might ask how they got to be foster parents.... They (agency officials) should be able to pick that up."
 Unfortunately, Helfer said, agencies placing children in foster homes are often more concerned with the race, religion, age, marital status and availability of foster parents than with those questions that could pick up the potential for abuse: how do the couple get along with each other, do they see a foster child as a solution to their own problems, how often do they use violence to solve conflicts, and, perhaps most significantly, were they abused themselves as children.

 In the cases of foster parent abuse he has worked with, Helfer said, the adults show psychological weaknesses similar to abusive natural parents. The greatest difference, he said, "appears to be the effect of the child on the system.... What we are hearing from foster parents is that the children are very difficult."
 Fran Gautieri, social work supervisor for pediatrics at New York's Bellevue Hospital, agreed.
 "Kids who go into foster care bring with them tremendous adjustment problems," she said, "and foster families, being ordinary people, are going to be provoked a great deal."

If the foster child population is skewed, social workers suggest, so is the group of foster parents. Most are from working-class families, said one New York caseworker, families that are "not very comfortable financially" and often unsophisticated, or untrained, in dealing with troubled children.
 Although all states require foster parents to be licensed, mandatory training is required in only about a dozen states, and most of those programs started recently.
 In Texas, a 1976 law required 15 hours of orientation and 15 hours of training each year thereafter. Georgia started in July 1978 to require new foster parents to complete 12 hours of training.
 San Mateo, Calif., started two years ago to require a foster-parent orientation course, and offered a 5 percent incentive bonus to trained foster parents.
 Still, foster care workers say, licensing laws are often lax and the training offered rarely prepares foster parents for the troubles they may face.

Ms. Stubbee of the Children's Bureau believes, "There are, I'm sure, foster parents who do not meet the requirements. Sometimes there are people who apply to be foster parents with ulterior motives in mind."
 In Missouri, the Division of Family Services seeks to upgrade licensing standards, particularly in the area of corporal punishment. The agency wants to prohibit spanking of foster children unless the child's legal guardian gives permission. The Missouri Foster Care Association, a parents' group, considers the rule too restrictive.

 Most foster care critics, however, are wary of making foster parents the scapegoats for the system. They say reform efforts should more properly focus on the public and private agencies that are responsible for the children and have, in effect, "hired" the foster parents.
 "I do think the supervision of foster families is not generally what it should be," said Bellevue's Ms. Gautieri.
 The 1979 report of the National Commission on Children in Need of Parents similarly charges that foster care staffs are "overburdened, poorly paid and often unprepared professionally."

The people responsible for foster children, the commission found, often lack social work training, or even college degrees. Case loads of 70 to 90 are common, the report said, compared to a recommended national standard of 20 to 30. Face-to-face contact between workers and children over a year is measured in hours, the report said, and often these hours are with several different caseworkers: turnover rates of 50 to 100 percent are common. In such situations, the commission said, it is natural that some things get neglected. In foster care, each "thing" is a child.

"The phenomenon of abuse," said Ms. Knitzer of the Children's Defense Fund, "is only one reflection of a system that is not functioning in many ways."

Cocaine Is Nothing to Be Sniffed At

A patient came to my office yesterday and presented a problem that deserves to be openly discussed with my readers. I had seen her five years ago when she was 24 years old. She had just come to town and was beginning an active career in the theater. I was impressed by her simplicity, charm and gentle manner.
 The other day, she came to the office and complained of inability to breathe through her nose. Examination quickly revealed that she had all the characteristics of destruction of the delicate lining of the nose... due to cocaine.

She admitted that for the past two years her life went down the drain because of her uncontrolled dependence on cocaine. Cocaine was the center of her universe. From the time she awoke until the time she went to bed, there was complete concentration on her need for more and more cocaine, in larger and larger amounts.

The cartilage in the septum, which divides one side of the nose from the other, was completely destroyed. The turbinate bones, so essential for breathing through the nose, were similarly destroyed. Scar tissue replaced normal tissue in the nose. There was no semblance of normal anatomy.

It was heartbreaking to see her despair and to realize that little or nothing could be done surgically to repair the damage inflicted by cocaine.

I tell this story not to moralize, but rather to call attention to the fact that cocaine is a highly dangerous drug. It is not a toy to be played with by "sophisticates" who are looking for a new kind of "high." Anyone tempted to become involved with cocaine must realize that they are playing with dynamite with a short fuse that might, at any time, cause havoc in their lives.

Here's a laugh. My doctor insists that I give up cigarettes completely. And while he's laying down the law he's puffing away at a cigarette near an ashtray full of butts. — Mr. J.E., Mich. Dear Mr. E.:

Your doctor's disregard for his own health must not dissuade you from following his medical advice. Obviously, he is simply not able to kick the habit himself, yet is wise enough to realize that tobacco can be harmful to the lives of many of his patients.

Everyone seeks excuses to avoid the reality that tobacco is not good for them. Using your doctor's human weakness as a reason for continuing to smoke yourself is as foolish as it is dangerous.

In your case, your doctor undoubtedly has very specific reasons for urging you to give up tobacco.

Break-In At Store Probed

SCUFFLETON — The Greene County Sheriff's Department is investigating a break-in Wednesday at the Trading Post store operated by Linwood Moore.

Sheriff Early Whaley said that various merchandise, including three cases of beer, packaged meat and some 100 packs of cigarette paper, was reported taken in the incident.

According to the sheriff, entrance to the store was apparently gained after an air conditioning unit was removed from the side of the building.

The break-in was reported at 12:55 a.m., he said.

Underestimate Fuel Supplies

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Petroleum Institute says a computer error caused it to underestimate supplies of heating oil, gasoline and other petroleum products by several million barrels last week.

The institute — an industry organization representing oil companies in Washington — said Tuesday that data processing errors "tended to understate petroleum product stocks."

The errors were the fourth of their size announced by the institute in four months. An institute official said he could not recall when the organization had previously had such frequent large revisions.

George Dickel Tennessee sippin' whisky. Smooth as moonbeams.

"Tastin' is believin'."

—Merle Beatty, Store Owner, 1871

"I remember we were tryin' to tell this city feller that George Dickel's whisky tastes smooth 'cause it's made with clear, sweet springwater."

"And it's mellowed good and proper 'cause Ol' George gives his sour mash extra time to get into the flavor."

"Well, I could see this city feller wasn't much impressed with our jawin', so I stopped talkin' and started pourin'."

"One sip was all it took. Said he'd never tasted a finer Tennessee Sour Mash. Didn't surprise us none. 'Cause when it comes to George Dickel's whisky, tastin' is believin'."

Georgia Talks Closing Warm Springs Facility

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Time and the Salk vaccine have not been kind to Warm Springs Hospital, and the state of Georgia is considering closing the facility where Franklin Roosevelt sought relief from crippling polio.

The springs themselves are capped, and the three pools where thousands of polio victims once bathed are cracked and empty.

Only 20 percent of the hospital still is in use, draining about $1.5 million a year from the state budget, according to Tom Perdue, executive assistant to Gov. George Busbee.

The hospital and its surrounding 10,000-acre complex in southwest Georgia are the subject of a special state task force study to decide what to do with the property, which was given to the state in 1974 by the Warm Springs Foundation.

Under an agreement signed by then-Gov. Jimmy Carter, the property must be operated as a hospital through 1984.

But the Georgia Office of Planning and Budget recommended to the task force Tuesday that the hospital and its 260 employees be "consolidated" with its companion rehabilitation center. The task force is to make its own recommendations to Busbee on Dec. 15.

Such a consolidation would have to be approved by the Warm Springs Foundation.

Perdue said the rehabilitation center, which operates independently and treats about 700 patients a year, "runs well and serves a defined need." The hospital, he said, treats about 45 patients and needs extensive renovation.

"It would take about $15 million, according to conservative estimates, to bring the hospital back up to the first-class facility it once was," Perdue said Tuesday.

"That would be fine, assuming we had the money, but no one can document that it would be used," he said. "Over the years, it has suffered from a declining patient load because of the Salk vaccine and because it is in competition with modern hospitals in convenient, urban areas."

The National Center for Disease Control reported in October that the use of oral vaccines had virtually eliminated naturally occurring cases of polio.

Gunman Shoots Into A Group At Church Party

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A gunman, shouting that a church had caused his mother's illness, fired a gun into a group of elderly parishioners arriving at a birthday party for a 104-year-old woman, killing her 106-year-old brother and two others.

The shooting Wednesday outside a north Philadelphia church hall killed 106-year-old Moses Beckett, who was arriving for a party for his sister, Ella Palmer. A fourth person was critically wounded, police said.

The gunman shot his victims, coolly stopped to reload, pumped more rounds into their bodies and sped away, police said.

"It went bam, bam, bam, just like someone shooting birds," said Gus Jamison, a friend of one of the victims. When the shooting started he ducked behind the fellowship hall door.

A murder warrant was issued Wednesday night for Alphonso Faulkner, 31, of north Philadelphia, police said.

The suspect's mother, Berdell Faulkner, is a member of the congregation at Haven Memorial United Methodist Church, officials said. She suffered a major stroke three weeks ago during worship service, according to the pastor, the Rev. Roderick Clark.

Mrs. Faulkner has been hospitalized in poor condition since the stroke, officials said.

Besides Beckett, the gunman killed Althea Denmark, 65, and Shade Sherman, 63, authorities said. Edward Durrah, 75, remained in critical condition today with multiple gunshot wounds.

Approximately 75 parishioners were in the church hall when the incident occurred, but Mrs. Palmer had not yet arrived.

Clark said Beckett and Mrs. Palmer were a marvel to the congregation for their longevity. "They lived a good, clean life and they lived very close to the church and were very dedicated," Clark said.

Mrs. Palmer actually turned 104 last Saturday, but the church decided to toast her at a special party Wednesday after a prayer service. At another party in her honor Saturday she told a well-wisher, "Thank the Lord for life."

Three Mishaps Here Yesterday

An estimated $3,900 property damage resulted from a series of three traffic mishaps investigated here yesterday by Greenville police.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 7:46 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Fifth and Tenth Streets, officers said.

Drivers involved in the collision were identified as William Hunter Clark of 1902 South Charles St., charged by investigators with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, and John Ciampa Welch of Washington.

Cars driven by Gail Michele Wilson of 307 Clairmont Cir. and Cathy Sue Burroughs of Route 9, Greenville, collided about 12:13 p.m. at the intersection of Myrtle Avenue and Skinner Street, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Wilson car and $700 damage to the Burroughs vehicle, police reported.

Ms. Burroughs was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign in connection with the incident. Elizabeth Warren Baldree of Tice Trailer Pk. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, following investigation of an 11:54 a.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 25 feet South of the Dickinson Avenue intersection.

Officers reported the Baldree car collided with an auto driven by Lissie Turnage Blount of 203 Paris Ave., resulting in an estimated $400 damage to the Blount car and $200 damage to the Baldree car.

Rent Refund Is Indicated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — About 12,000 North Carolina families who lived in federally subsidized housing projects between 1975 and 1977 may be eligible for rent refunds.

The refunds of up to $500 are part of a $60-million settlement reached between the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Legal Services Corporation.

Of the 5,000 affected projects nationwide, 76 are in North Carolina, said Jim Abbott, public affairs director for Legal Services of North Carolina.

Legal services filed suit against HUD in 1975 when the department refused to pay for increased utility costs in subsidized housing projects. The suit was filed in California on behalf of all subsidized-housing tenants.

In 1977, Congress passed legislation requiring HUD to pay the utility bills from a special reserve fund. Last year, then-HUD secretary Patricia Harris ordered the department to settle the suit.

Persons who think they may be eligible for the refunds should contact the manager of the project in which they live or call the national claims office toll-free at 800-824-7980.

Heirs of deceased residents are also eligible for the refunds, Abbott said.

The housing projects affected were built under Section 236 of the Housing Act of 1968. The section provides subsidies to private developers to build housing for families with incomes too high to qualify for public housing but too little to afford regular private housing.

Electricity Use Reduced

Although Pitt County schools reduced their electrical energy usage by 13 percent in October over the past year, electrical costs rose eight percent, according to figures released by George Laws, Energy Control officer.

Farmville Central decreased its usage by 28.5 percent, for a savings of $839.14. Although North Pitt and D. H. Conley decreased their electrical consumption in October over the same time last year, their electrical cost rose. Ayden-Grifton increased its use by 11.6 percent, for an increase of $1,593.32 over last October.

W. H. Robinson, Ayden Elementary and Pactolus all increased their usage, with the greatest declines shown by Belvoir Ayden Middle and H. B. Sugg, respectively. Robinson, Ayden and Pactolus all showed significant increases over other schools in costs, with the greatest decreases shown by Belvoir, Farmville Middle and Wellcome Middle.

Laws noted that many buildings had added extensions and mobile units, causing increases in usages. He also pointed out that many of the bills covered days and weeks in September.

Joint Meeting Friday Night

St. Paul F.W.B. Church in Greene County will have a joint Quarterly and Board meeting Friday night.

The Saturday night service will be held by Rev. W. H. Joyner and Patrice Chapel F.W.B. Church. Sunday morning services at 11 a.m. will be led by Bishop W.L. Phillips, the St. Paul Choir No. 2, Waterside Senior Choir, and ushers. Sunday dinner will be held at 2 p.m. Rev. C.R. Parker and Cherry Lane will preside at the 3 p.m. service. A union meeting will be held Sunday night at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Sediment Meet Cancelled

The December 3 meeting of the Pitt County Sediment Control Commission has been cancelled.

Officials said the meeting was cancelled because no items were presented by the deadline for preparation of the agenda.

The next Sediment Control Commission meeting has been scheduled for January 7, 1980.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC HEARING RELATIVE TO THE SUBMISSION OF A PRE-APPLICATION BY THE TOWN OF WINTERVILLE FOR FUNDING UNDER THE HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1977

Pursuant to the 24 CFR 570.431(c) (2) of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977, the Town Council of the Town of Winterville, North Carolina will conduct a public hearing on December 10, 1979, at 7:30 P.M. in the Winterville Municipal Building, Winterville, North Carolina. The purpose of the public hearing is to offer interested citizens an opportunity to review the pre-application for funding prior to its submission to the United States Department of Housing & Urban Development on January 7, 1980. It should be noted that the public hearing is being conducted in accordance with a prescribed citizen participation plan, a copy of which is on file and available for public review at the Town of Winterville Town Clerk's Office, Winterville Municipal Building. In addition, on November 12, 1979, the Town of Winterville Town Council conducted its initial public hearing at which time eligible activities were discussed and public proposals received. Those proposals have been evaluated for consistency with federal register guidelines and the initial draft of the pre-application has been prepared in accordance therewith.

All citizens are hereby requested and encouraged to attend the December 10, 1979, public hearing. All interested citizens will be given an opportunity to comment at that public hearing. NOTE: More pre-applications will be submitted to the United States Department of Housing & Urban Development than can be funded. Formal complaints on the pre-application process should be submitted to the Winterville Town Clerk's Office during normal working hours prior to the December 10, 1979, public hearing. Every reasonable effort will be made by the Winterville Town Council to respond to those complaints within fifteen working days.

ANOTHER MYSTERY of the atom may be revealed when the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center soon opens its $78 million Positron-Electron Project. A beam of electrons and a beam of their opposites, known as positrons, will be boosted to a very high energy down the two-mile copper accelerator (center top) and then enter PEP, an underground "storage ring" in opposite directions where they will collide. The PEP "ring" encircles the complex of buildings at bottom of photo. (UPI Photo)

More Secrets Of The Atom May Be Solved By Project

By LLOYD G. CARTER
STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Another layer may be peeled from the atomic onion when the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center soon opens its $78 million Positron-Electron Project known as PEP.

High energy particle physicists often compare the atom to an onion and joke that when one layer of mystery is revealed there is another underneath.

PEP is an ambitious attempt to advance human understanding one more layer into the nature of the fundamental building blocks of the material universe that now carry curious names like quarks, leptons, hadrons and the elusive gluons.

Some time early next year, a beam of electrons and a beam of their opposites, known as positrons, will be boosted to very high energy down the 13-year-old, two-mile copper accelerator and then enter PEP, an underground "storage ring" four-tenths of a mile in diameter, in opposite directions where they will then collide.

Situated along this huge ring will be several buildings containing sophisticated detection equipment for observing the effects of these collisions.

The PEP project was conceived after physicists, working at Stanford and other laboratories around the world, discovered that atoms weren't simply made up of electrons, protons and neutrons but contained numerous other particles that were revealed by smashing the nucleus of atoms apart.

Current theory holds those subnuclear particles, theoretically made up of things called quarks, sometimes exist only a billionth of a second. They are possibly held together by things called gluons.

When highly energized electrons and positrons collide at near the speed of light they annihilate each other, creating a minute, primordial fireball which produces quarks and other substances whose motions can be observed. Another layer off the onion.

But to support the quark theory, greater and greater amounts of energy were needed to smash electrons and positrons apart.

A much smaller version of PEP was built in the early 1970s and in 1976 won a Nobel prize for Stanford's Burton Richter.

Now PEP, four years in the building, will provide yet greater energy and will be able to precisely modulate the amounts of energy so differences can be observed in differing types of impacts.

"As you change the energy of the (PEP) system you 'scan' by changing the energy of the positrons and electrons," says Joseph Ballam, director of the research division at SLAC, the acronym for the Stanford center.

"We then can see what the probability is that these two things are going to annihilate into nuclear particles as you change the energy. We found in the past that at certain energy levels there was a huge increase in the probability that electrons and positrons would annihilate and that was the beginning of the actual experimental verification of this quark theory."

"And now," says Ballam, "it turns out there is a whole flock of quarks which have higher and higher masses as you look at the series, of which we have identified a predicted number but there are still two or three that have not been identified, presumably because the energy isn't high enough to find them. So the PEP machine will make an attempt to find these."

"In addition, there are more complicated structures called gluons. With PEP you can observe the physical manifestation of these gluons by observing the way the particles come out (of the collision between electrons and positrons). Do they come out in jets? Are there two or three jets? Are they fat jets or thin jets? All these things can be interpreted as being due to the lack of gluons or the presence of gluons. So that's another very big piece of the action with respect to PEP."

"I guess, all in all, the PEP machine is a way of experimentally probing the fundamental nature of the particles themselves to see what their constituents are like."

The PEP project, like all research at SLAC, will have an international flavor including contingents of physicists from Europe, the Soviet Union and the People's Republic of China.

Ballam says particle physicists are on the fringe of another major breakthrough in understanding.

"We're almost in a position with respect to these basic building blocks (particles), in understanding them, as we were maybe 50-75 years ago when we were just really beginning to understand how the atom is made up," he says.

Grant Given By Realtors

ECU News Bureau
A grant of $5,300 has been awarded Bruce Wardrop of the East Carolina University School of Business faculty for a study of real estate advertising.

Wardrop's project, "Media Effectiveness of Real Estate Advertising," received funding from the Realtors National Marketing Institute, a division of the National Association of Realtors. The grant to Wardrop was one of five such grants to colleges and universities across the U.S.

Objective of the project is to test the effectiveness of various advertising media on the key market segments of a residential realty firm, Wardrop said.

These key groups include home buyers (local and out-of-town), home sellers (local moves and out-of-town moves), and sales associates. In addition to the results of the study regarding effective advertising, the Wardrop project is expected to produce a workable method for testing a real estate firm's ability to reach its markets.

Wardrop formally accepted the grant at the recent meeting of the National Association of Realtors in New Orleans. He also spoke on "Image Study of Your Own Realty Firm" at the convention.

Two N.C. Inmates Beg To Finish Sex-Change

BUTNER, N.C. (AP) — Ralph "Simone" Scott says he feels caught between two worlds.

"I want to complete my final sex-change operation. I want to be whole ..." he said in a recent letter.

But Scott, 26, is an inmate at the Federal Correctional Institution at Butner. He and another inmate, Tina Moser Drye, were forced to stop taking their female hormone medication when they entered the prison.

Both are believed to be the only transsexuals in the federal prison system, according to Mike Aun, spokesman for the federal Bureau of Prisons.

And the bureau is trying to decide what to do about them.

The two have written to the American Civil Liberties Union for help, saying that they fear for their safety at the all-male prison.

Drye said he was raped at knife-point soon after he entered the prison unit at the beginning of the month to serve a 15-year sentence for kidnapping. He is being held in protective lock-up while the alleged attack is investigated.

George Gardner, director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, said the ACLU is considering court action on behalf of the two. "Their physical security and health are our main concerns," he said.

In a letter to Gardner, Scott said, "I and Tina are basically gregarious persons. We need to have people with whom we can interact and relate ..."

"... We cannot exist in an isolated environment and not see and talk to other people. No person can do this for any length of time," he wrote of the threat of isolation if anything happens to them.

Scott is serving seven years for bank robbery. He was being held in disciplinary segregation this week because of a fight with another prisoner, and prison officials refused to allow an interview. It wasn't known where he is from.

Drye, 25, is six feet tall, has MILTON, Wis. (AP) — Thirty-four Saudi Arabian students came to Milton College after problems with townsfolk at another Wisconsin school. Now they're moving again, this time to Madison — after fights with American students here.

"It seems that the cultural bridge that exists between Middle Easterners and Americans is just a little too great for us to cross," said David Waters, vice president of the 318-student Milton College.

The Saudis, in the United States for a two-year police traffic course, will be sent this week from the small liberal arts school here to Madison, said Barbara Lewis, project director for the company that is training the students.

The Saudi students' departure follows a "beer brawl" at a dance Nov. 15 in which two Saudis were injured and four Americans were told to leave the campus for several days, college spokesman Linda Krupke said. The Saudis were treated for cuts at a local hospital.

In October, a Saudi and a football player got in a fight over the way two Saudis were driving, Waters said. The Saudis were "squealing their tires as kids with cars will do," he said.

Waters said the college and the group of young Saudi men came to a "mutual agreement that things weren't working out the way we both hoped they would."

He said that while the decision was a mutual one, "We (the college) were the instigators."

The Saudis had been at this community of 4,000 persons in southern Wisconsin since late September, when they left the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh after complaining that townspeople there harassed them. The group arrived at Oshkosh last May for the first part of their schooling, paid for by the Saudi government and run by Systems for International Training of Chicago (Systran), Ms. Lewis said.

"The students at Oshkosh were very good. But most of the people closed up to us. They wouldn't sit with us or talk with us," said Saudi student Ariz Hamd, 21, after arriving at Milton.

At both Milton and Oshkosh, the Saudis lived on campus but were not enrolled; Ms. Lewis said. Systran rented classrooms and dormitories and provided its own teachers, she said.

In Madison, home of the University of Wisconsin, the Saudis will continue English classes with Systran teachers, but not on the Wisconsin campus, Ms. Lewis said. They will live in a private apartment complex, and in March will be moved elsewhere for traffic control courses, she said.

Miss Krupke said she did not know what provoked the fights at Milton. "They have not been picked on. To our knowledge there's no animosity because they're Saudi Arabians," she said.

Some of the Saudis have shopped in nearby Janesville and toured the Wisconsin Dells, a resort area. "The people extended themselves to us," said another Saudi student, Ali Sultan.

Takeover To Be Offered

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Greensboro apparel company has announced it will offer to take over Jantzen Inc., a West Coast swimwear and sportswear maker.

Officials of Blue Bell Inc. said the company will offer $28 a share for all shares of Jantzen stock. The total purchase price would be around $47.5 million.

Officials for Jantzen, based in Portland, Ore., had no comment on the offer Wednesday. A spokesman did say the company had no discussions with Blue Bell before the offer was made.

The bid by Blue Bell, maker of Wrangler jeans, is a tender offer, in which the offer to sell is made directly to Jantzen stockholders.

Word of the offer sent Jantzen's stock climbing Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange. The stock shot up 5 1/2% to close at 26 1/2%.

The companies must wait 30 days after filing notice of intention to make a tender offer, according to state and federal takeover laws.

G. Ervin Dixon, Blue Bell vice president, said he does not know how Jantzen management will receive the offer.

First Boston Corp., a New York investment banking firm, is advising the Greensboro company on the takeover.

Blue Bell is second to Levi Strauss & Co. as the nation's largest apparel company.

Vigilante Is Back In Political Role

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Gun-toting vigilante Anthony Imperiale glibly says his personal heroes include actors John Wayne, Humphrey Bogart and James Cagney. But no famous names spring to his lips when asked who should play Anthony Imperiale in a film being planned by Columbia Pictures.

After a long pause, he answered. "That's a tough one — I really don't know. I don't think I'll be in it...but I do want it to tell the whole story."

The whole story will have to wrap up Imperiale the vigilante, the private detective, the 300-pound martial arts expert, the politician. Especially the politician.

Imperiale, a former Independent state assemblyman and state senator who critics had dismissed as washed up in politics, is headed back to the New Jersey statehouse after his Nov. 6 victory.

"I surprised the hell out of them by getting elected. I know that," he said. "But the people who voted for me are those everyday people getting victimized out there by violence and political corruption."

The 30th District Imperiale will represent is a racially mixed enclave of urban slums and blue collar communities.

Imperiale feuded with state Republicans during his campaign, charging they had failed to support his candidacy. But that is behind him, and Imperiale promises to bring a touch of flamboyance to the GOP.

"My intention is to get right into being part of that Republican machine," Imperiale said. "But I will still be Tony Imperiale and that means my vote always goes for justice."

Being Tony Imperiale also means being featured as a law and order community leader on CBS-TV's "60 Minutes" and becoming a consultant for Columbia on the movie about his vigilante adventures.

Standing 5-foot-7 and weighing just under 300 pounds, the 48-year-old Imperiale first gained attention as leader of a white vigilante squad that "protected" Newark's North Ward from racial unrest during the 1960s.

His previous statehouse stint was marked by impassioned calls for law and order, restoration of capital punishment and a crackdown on liberal professors in the state colleges and universities.

In a recent interview conducted while driving through the North Ward, Imperiale said he's the same man as before. Before leaving the office of his private detective agency, he stuffed a .357 Python magnum into his suit pants.

"To my followers, I'm still a leader and not a politician," he said while driving a van owned by North Ward Citizens Committee.

The committee and others from the North Ward Citizens First Aid Squad still make nightly patrols through Newark streets "watching out" for trouble, he said.

Imperiale readily agreed that his "60 Minutes" appearance boosted his national image, brought him a movie contract and generated 5,000 pieces of mail. "They know me in Holland, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Italy..." he said.

At the bar of his wife Kathleen's Italian restaurant, Imperiale said he has never shot anybody, but has had some close calls. He recalled the time in a delicatessen back in 1968 when he was unarmed and found himself looking into a gun barrel.

As Imperiale retold it, the trigger clicked but the gun jammed, and he downed the holdup man with a martial arts kick.

Imperiale said his night patrols are still needed because the police aren't doing their job. "If there was trouble, I could get 25 people here in 10 minutes," he said.

The police, of course, rankle at Imperiale's criticism and regard him as a particularly bothersome thorn in their side, but there is no action they can take against his vigilante activities.

After several scotches and water, Imperiale left the bar and headed for home, a compact, two-story brick fortress surrounded by wire fence. The Imperiales have four sons and a daughter.

In a parking area behind the house are parked three of five police cars he bought at a recent auction.

"The other two are out on patrols," he said.

In his den, Imperiale displayed part of his 300-piece gun collection, which includes 150 rifles lined against the wall.

He spoke with pride of his home's security system, which he devised after reading a book on how German officers protected themselves during World War II.

"Nobody could get in here," he said. "If they do get in, they'd never get out."

If some unsuspecting soul decided to break into the den through a window, tear gas canisters would explode auto-

Finding Champion Trees Is His Hobby

By TIMOTHY KENNY
GOLD HILL, Ore. (UPI) — Frank Sesock never paid much attention to searching for national champion trees, "until I turned in the first one." After that, Sesock was off in hot pursuit of the largest trees he could find.

A seedsman who owns his own firm, the 32-year-old Sesock has located 60 national champion trees in his travels throughout the western United States.

"The American Forestry Association has been at it (noting champion trees) since back in the 1930s or 40s," he said in a telephone interview. "I was unaware of the program until I picked up one of their books."

"That started jogging my memory about parts of the state I had covered and I started a program of my own. I've been looking for seven or eight years now."

In that time, Sesock has cut his own niche as Oregon's foremost champion big tree finder with his five dozen total, 28 of which he located in Oregon. His closest challenger is Salem barber Maynard Drawson, with nine champions registered.

From Finnegan's fir to peach leaf willow to Coulter pine to mountain mahogany, white alder and dozens more, Sesock has stumped the hills and back roads of the West in search of champions. Among his favorites is a Monterey cypress he found along the Oregon coast in a stroke of serendipity.

"I was driving through the Brookings (Ore.) area and I noticed a very impressive Monterey cypress growing right near the highway. I pulled off, broke out the tape and sure enough," at 97 feet tall and 27'9" in circumference, the tree was a champion.

"That's not a native tree here," Sesock added. "It's only native to the Monterey Peninsula in California. It was planted here and has done well."

A native of eastern Oregon, Sesock said he still finds the juniper his favorite, with the Monterey cypress coming in as a close second.

"I grew up in Oregon and I'm self trained," he said. "Oregon picks up a lot of these (national champions) because the cooler climate is more conducive to growth. It takes a lot of traveling and a lot of background into the habitat of certain kinds of species to find national champions."

Spuds First To Receive Label Nuclear Blast Now Doubted

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —

Spuds have become the first fresh vegetable to get nutritional labeling — or point-of-sale materials, as defined by the Food and Drug Administration. Signs and free brochures giving nutritional information are gradually becoming available to consumers in food stores in every region of the United States. The brochures and posters say, among other things, that one 2½ inch diameter potato, weighing about 150 grams or one-third pound, provides 100 calories, 3 grams of protein, 22 grams of carbohydrate, no fat and 35 percent of the U.S. recommended daily allowance of vitamin C.

WASHINGTON (AP) — It looks like the big bang of Sept. 22 over the South Atlantic will turn out to be the bomb that never was.

Carter administration officials said Tuesday it is unlikely a scientific panel formed to report on the incident will be able to say for sure what a flash detected by a satellite Sept. 22 really was. There were early indications it was a low-yield nuclear test, but there has been no evidence to support that view. Scientists at the New Zealand Institute of Nuclear Sciences said Friday that "new measurements ... do not confirm our earlier results" which indicated radioactive fallout that could have come from a late September blast in the South Atlantic.

Sensibly Used, Credit Is A Real Help

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Shop for credit before you shop for gifts this Christmas. HOW you pay affects WHAT you pay for goods and services and you can waste hundreds of dollars if you don't know what to look for.

"Sensibly used, credit is an important financial tool," says the Federal Reserve Bank of New York in a consumer guide. "Misused, it can result in default, bankruptcy and loss of reputation."

There are two major types of credit: closed and open.

A closed-end loan is a one-time arrangement. You borrow a fixed amount for a fixed period of time and repay it in regular installments — usually monthly.

Open-end credit, also called revolving credit, is reusable. You can borrow over and over, up to a pre-set level, without making a new application each time. Bank cards, retailers and overdraft checking programs involve revolving credit.

The federal Truth-in-Lending law requires creditors to tell you how much you have to pay to use their money. There are two important figures: the finance charge and the annual percentage rate.

The finance charge is the dollar amount you pay for the credit. It covers interest charges and any service fees, insurance premiums, etc. Suppose, for example, you borrow $100 for one year and have to pay $7 in interest, plus a $1 service fee. The finance charge is $8.

The annual percentage rate — sometimes listed as the APR — is the relative cost of credit on a yearly basis. Again, suppose you borrow $100 for a one-year period and pay a finance charge of $8. If you can keep the entire $100 for the full year, paying back the whole amount at once, the annual percentage rate is 8 percent.

It is more likely, however, that you will pay back the money in 12 monthly installments of $9 each. You don't get to use the $100 for a full year; you get to use less and less of the money each month. The annual percentage rate is 14.5 percent.

The law also requires lenders who grant open-end credit to tell you how they calculate interest. They may base charges on the adjusted balance, on the average daily balance or on the previous balance.

The adjusted balance method is the simplest and it is also the cheapest for the customer. The creditor takes the unpaid balance, subtracts any payments, then figures out the interest on the difference. Suppose, for example, you have a balance of $400. You pay $300 during the billing period. The creditor charges interest on $100. At 1½ percent a month — the most common basic rate for revolving credit — you would pay $1.50 in interest.

The average daily balance method is more complicated and more costly. It takes into account when you pay as well as how much you pay. The creditor adds up your balances for every day in the billing period, then divides by the number of days to get an average. The interest charge is applied to the average. Take that same $400 balance. Again, you pay $300. The creditor gets your payment on the 15th day of a 30-day billing period. Your total balances for the month will be $7,500 — 15 days at $400 and 15 at $100. Divide by 30 and you get an average daily balance of $250. The interest, at 1½ percent, is $3.75 — more than twice as much as you pay if the creditor uses the adjusted balance method.

The previous balance method is the worst deal of all. You get no credit at all for payments made during a billing period. You pay interest on the full amount outstanding at the end of the last billing period. Under this system, you would pay $6 in interest on the $400 account — no matter how much you paid during the month.

If you have a problem with a credit card or charge account, you may be protected by the Fair Credit Billing Act.

The act sets down rules for creditors and consumers to follow in case of disputes over billing errors. Here's how it works:

If you get a bill that has a mistake, send a written notice to the creditor within 60 days of the time you get the bill. The creditor has to acknowledge your letter within 30 days after he or she gets it unless the error can be cleared up sooner than that. Within 90 days, the creditor must resolve the dispute. If the creditor says there is no error, you can demand copies of documents proving you owe money.

You don't have to pay the disputed amount until the argument is settled. If the original bill turns out to be right, however, you not only have to pay the amount that you questioned, you also have to pay any finance charges that accumulated in the meantime.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?

Mr. Dan Shores, the executive editor of a well-known New York subsidy publishing firm will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication. All subjects will be considered, including fiction and non-fiction, poetry, juveniles, religion, philosophy, etc.

He will be in Greenville in mid-January. If you have completed a book-length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject, and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately and describe your work. State whether you would prefer a morning, afternoon, or evening appointment, and kindly mention your phone number. You will receive a confirmation by mail for a definite time and place.

Authors with completed manuscripts unable to appear may send them directly to us for a free reading and evaluation. We will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress.

IF YOU ARE GOING TO BE A GOOD REPORTER, RESEARCH
BIG PART OF THE JOB.

Whether he is reporting on the Greenville City Council, local planning and zoning commissions, elections or business news, you can be sure Tom Baines has done his homework before he sits down to write the story for THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

A conscientious reporter, Tom was recognized this year by the North Carolina Press Association for his series of articles on the proposed annexation of the industrial area north of Greenville.

Tom's annual year-end review of local news is a study in research. It requires digging through the past year's editions of THE DAILY REFLECTOR as well as an unbiased sense of news judgment.

Election time is always a busy time at any newspaper. Complete coverage of the candidates and the issues is necessary so voters can make an informed decision at the polls. Tom's coverage of local elections is some of the most complete and in-depth reporting available to area voters.

But these stories only happen once or twice a year. Most of the time Tom is making sure the citizens of Greenville and Pitt County stay informed on the things that matters the most to them right here at home.

A Review Chilling Impact In Hellman Play

Forty-five years have passed since Lillian Hellman's "The Children's Hour" made Americans aware that they had a talented woman playwright on the scene. Time has not dimmed the impact of the powerful probe Hellman makes into the devastation of human lives that an evil child can bring about. It is rare that the role of instrument of evil is assigned to a child.

Paige Weaver gives a chilling totally absorbing performance as Mary Tilford, the sheltered, willful young girl who dominates and manipulates the lives of other people. Lie by lie, maneuver by maneuver, she weaves a web of deception that ensnares all those lives she touches as she plants seeds of suspicion that ripen into a formal charge against two adult women — an accusation too evil to be named — that of unnatural love.

Debra Zumbach as Karen Wright, and Shauna Holmes as Martha Dobie, the two proprietors of a girls' school who are the falsely accused women, effectively portray the path of inevitable descent into despair.

At first they fight back in anger. Then, stunned by defeat in a slander suit they bring against the child's grandmother, they sink into the numbness of inaction.

Hellman's play has a number of meaningful ambiguities. The strongest of these occurs near the end of the play when in an emotional outburst Martha tells Karen that she indeed harbors for Karen an unnatural love — so that the child's lies after all bore a germ of truth. She then withdraws and shoots herself.

The grandmother, Mrs. Amelia Tilford, a woman of good intentions who allows herself to become the unwitting ally of her troubled granddaughter, is superbly portrayed by Helen Steer. Ms. Steer makes us feel the transition from a proud, rather self-righteous woman to one whose life is shattered and will remain one of inescapable suffering in the knowledge she has abetted the destruction of innocent people. (One wonders too about her role in the alluded to suicide of her son, Mary's father).

The only male in the cast with a major role, that of Dr. Joseph Cardin, cousin of Mrs. Tilford and Karen's fiancé, is assigned to Donald Wagoner. Despite looking too young for the part, Wagoner is believable as a struggling young doctor who thinks he can summon the courage to weather the human storm swirling about him, but he proves to be all too basically weak and takes the out offered him by Karen.

Hazel Stapleton gives a beautiful performance to her important role of Mrs. Lily Mortar, a talkative, eccentric, self-centered aging woman, a parasite living off the bounty of her niece Martha. She too figures in strongly as an unthinking instrument of those who contribute to the ruin of the two younger women.

Veteran Anita Brehm as Agatha, Mrs. Tilford's maid, and the only other male in the cast, William G. Sumner as the grocery boy, provide sterling support in smaller roles.

One of the most striking achievements in this fine play is the almost uncanny appearance the young ECU women drama students give of really being teen-age girls.

Director Travis Lockhart maintains a tone and mood of impending personal horror that unfolds into a pattern for ultimate tragedy. The production is strongly enhanced by Gregory Buch's stage designs. David Downing's lighting, and Peggy Anton's costumes.

Again, it seems this will be another sell-out Playhouse production. "The Children's Hour" runs through Saturday, then plays again Monday, Dec. 3 through Saturday, Dec. 8. Reservations can be made by calling 757-6390 from 10-4 Monday through Friday.

SINGING A DIFFERENT TUNE — After six years of duets, Kris Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge are singing different tunes. Kristofferson filed for divorce Wednesday in Los Angeles. The couple had separated last Aug. 1, court papers showed. In his Superior Court petition, Kristofferson asked that custody of their only child, a 5-year-old girl, Casey, be awarded jointly to him and his wife. (AP Laserphoto)

A Review Godspell Keeps Dazzling Spirit

The Methodist Student Center's current production of "Godspell," sponsored by the Wesley Foundation, is a joyous celebration of the teachings of Christ as told in the parables of St. Matthew. It is a real winner. Seldom has this reviewer seen a more energetic cast, or a production that generates more audience enthusiasm.

Director Lisa Anderson, in her staging of the lively musical, shows directorial talent, and the choreography by Debbie Phipps is dazzling.

Steve Cooper as Jesus Christ gives a commendable performance, musically, and it is during these musical moments that his characterization of Christ reaches its deepest dimensions. This is particularly true of the moving final number depicting the Last Supper and the crucifixion. At other times, he appears too inexperienced to project the stage presence and power this role requires.

All of the cast is in fine form, with Carolyn German particularly noteworthy as the sexy "blonde bombshell" disciple. Her song, "Turn Back, Oh Man," is a sheer delight.

Others in the cast include Doug Hamilton as John the Baptist and Judas; Greg Brown, Truett McGee, Lillian Norris, Mickey Skidmore, Cameron Stanforth, Diane Starts, Stephanie Tyson, and Eric Van Baas in various Biblical Roles. The outstanding accompanying musicians (Woody Cowan, Mark Ford, Dan Hamilton, and Sandy Hamilton), are under the direction of Bob Miller.

One chief flaw in the overall production is some loss of lines in songs and dialogue due to muffled speeches and overpowering orchestration — but the musical numbers are nonetheless memorable, especially the popular "Day by Day" (which started a bit weak but ended rousing); and also "Prepare Ye the Way of the Lord," "It's All for the Best," and "Take Me With You."

"Godspell," which is being performed at the Methodist Student Center (East Fifth Street) through December 1 at 8 p.m. nightly and for a 2 p.m. matinee Sunday, December 2, faces strong theatrical competition — with the ECU Playhouse and the Ayden Theater Workshop both presenting shows at the same time.

But for music lovers, "Godspell" is an experience that should not be missed. (Tickets are $2 in advance and $2.50 at the door, and are available at the Center or at Mendenhall Student Center).

Story Of Fanaticism In Iran Is Dominating U.S. Television

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Suddenly, wholly, there is a new American experience: The unrelenting image of another people a world away crying a fevered ill will toward the United States.

It is a strange and frightening image, and pervasive. Television viewers are confronted with the image from sign-on until sign off, in regular news programs and in frequent special reports.

The taking of the American Embassy in Tehran and the international crisis it precipitated have created a ravenous hunger for information, and the three major television networks have been obliging. ABC, NBC and CBS have demonstrated (to varying degrees) television news at its best — live and on-the-spot with pictures.

Viewers subject to moments of idle curiosity might have considered the paradoxical matter of American correspondents sending home pictures of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini reminding his nation that America is Iran's foremost enemy.

Strangely, network correspondents are sending their reports to the United States from the state-run Iranian Television facilities. American television reporters have, for the most part, been unhindered in their work in Iran. It's been suggested that Khomeini is seeking to calm American passions by distinguishing between the American government and the American people in his vituperations.

Thus, he granted interviews to ABC, CBS and NBC while refusing to meet with a State Department delegation. Former President Richard Nixon considers such actions masterful media manipulation on the part of Khomeini ("He's crazy like a fox," Nixon said in a TV interview this week).

Ultior motives or no, the relative freedom of movement accorded to American correspondents has made possible an admirable performance by all three networks. And the performance of ABC News, somewhat surprisingly, stands above the rest.

A bit of good luck got ABC off to a good start from the very beginning. ABC News sent radio correspondent Bob Dyk to Tehran from London as soon as the story broke. Dyk made it to Tehran, but soon afterwards, the Iranian government barred Western journalists.

Dyk and ABC were alone in Iran for 3½ days with fresh on-the-spot coverage. Although NBC and CBS made do nicely with footage purchased from European news agencies, ABC had a leg-up in coverage of the story.

"A lot in news is based on luck," said a CBS staffer. "We were literally on the next plane to Iran when they closed down the country to Western journalists. There was no rhyme nor reason as to who got in and who didn't."

By Friday, Nov. 10, CBS and NBC had crews and correspondents in Tehran, and all three networks were regularly feeding full coverage of the story to the United States from Iranian Television. Again, ABC excelled.
