

Iran To Boycott Security Council Meet

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran announced today it will boycott a U.N. Security Council meeting on the American Embassy takeover, further darkening prospects for an early resolution of the dangerous showdown with the United States. A U.N. spokesman said the meeting would go on nevertheless.

Hundreds of thousands of Iranian demonstrators surrounded the embassy today, the 27th day of captivity there for 50 American hostages, but there was no violence. Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, the man newly named by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as acting foreign minister, announced at a news conference, "According to the decision made by the Revolutionary Council, we are not attending the Security Council meeting tomorrow."

He reiterated Khomeini's contention that the Security Council is under the thumb of the United States and said any Council decision "is not binding and we don't accept it."

The United States is seeking a council resolution calling for release of the hostages. But Iran wanted the council to take up its allegations against the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and its demand that the United States surrender him to the Iranians before release of the hostages can be considered. Iran says the shah must be put on trial on charges of mass murder and looting of the country's wealth.

Ghotbzadeh said Iran would "keep our contacts" with the Security Council for possible further discussions.

In New York, Rudolf Stajduhar, spokesman for U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, said the meeting would go on as planned, but it might be rescheduled from Saturday night to Saturday morning or afternoon.

Ghotbzadeh also said he welcomed the decision of the Mexican government Thursday to bar re-entry to the shah, who has been told by his doctors he is able to leave his New York hospital bed. Egypt's President Anwar Sadat today repeated his offer to the shah to establish a permanent residence in Egypt.

America's U.N. ambassador, Donald McHenry, told NBC-TV there was a possibility the Council might adopt sanctions against Iran. "We have to take some kind of effective measures to pressure Iran," he said.

On Thursday, the U.S. government urged the International Court of Justice in the Netherlands to order the release of the hostages.

Legions of demonstrators surrounded the U.S. Embassy today, the holiest and most emotionally charged day of the Shiite Moslem calendar, but dispersed peacefully after six hours of prayers. Thousands more joined another prayer meeting at Tehran University.

The demonstrators at the embassy carried religious and political banners and stood with their backs to the main gates, facing the direction of the Moslem holy city of Mecca, more than 1,000 miles to the southwest in Saudi Arabia.

Many of the demonstrators rallied first at the university campus, where row upon row of women were seated on the ground and dressed in the traditional black head-to-toe veil. Ranks of men, also in black, carried chain whips on their shoulders to signify Islam's fight against evil.

"Everybody's going to the espionage center," said one marcher in his 20s as the procession to the embassy began. He referred to Khomeini's claim that the American mission in Tehran was a "spy nest."

Khomeini, who is orchestrating his country's holy war against Iran, called on Iran's Shiite Moslem majority to use the Ashura holy day, a time of ritual mass mourning for the founder of the Moslem sect, to vent their fury against the United States. Tens of thousands turned up outside the embassy Thursday night, chanting prayers and shouting the Islamic watchword: "Allah Akbar!" — "God is Great!"

The Iranians are threatening to put the embassy hostages on trial as alleged. But at the news conference Ghotbzadeh said three senior American envoys who have been held at the Iranian Foreign Ministry during the crisis, including the U.S. charge d'affaires in Tehran, L. Bruce Laingen, would leave the country.

"If they ever want to leave, they are free to leave," he said. But he quickly qualified the statement, saying he was unsure whether there was adequate security to allow them to

He contended that some of the supposedly lower-level officials of the embassy were actually "much higher" than Laingen "in their relation to the CIA."

New Disorder

KUWAIT (AP) — Security forces used tear gas to disperse several hundred Iranians and Kuwaitis who demonstrated today in front of the U.S. Embassy here.

The demonstrators carried placards denouncing the United States. Many knelt in front of the embassy building to perform the noon-time Moslem sabbath prayers.

The demonstrators dispersed as armored personnel carriers brought troops to the area to guard against possible violence.

An estimated 40,000 Iranians work and live in Kuwait, which is across the Persian Gulf from Iran. This oil-rich emirate also has a minority of Shiite Moslems, the dominant sect in Iran.

Mexico Closes Doors To Return Of Deposed Shah

By GORDON D. MOTT
Associated Press Writer
MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico turned its back on the shah and jared his U.S. host by declaring it will not renew the deposed monarch's tourist visa because his presence "would be contrary to the best interests of the country." There was speculation the shah might seek sanctuary in Egypt or the Caribbean.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat said he ordered his ambassador in Washington to reiterate his invitation for the shah to come to Egypt. Sadat's spokesman announced the move and said Sadat's presidential plane is ready for takeoff at "any moment" to pick up the shah and fly him to Cairo.

There was no indication whether the shah would take up Sadat's offer.

In Washington, the State Department said Mexico's announcement Thursday night would not change the Carter administration's position on the shah's stay in the United States.

"We have said all along that it is up to him to make his decisions about travel, both as to time and destination," said spokesman Walter Ramsay.

Asked if the Mexican decision had come as a surprise, one U.S. official, who insisted on remaining anonymous, replied: "Yes, you're damn right."

Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda announced his government's decision in a statement read to reporters. Saying the situation involving the shah "had changed radically," Castaneda said it would make "no sense for him to return to Mexico." The foreign minister refused to answer questions.

That word came one day after doctors treating Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi at a New York City hospital for cancer and gallstones told their patient he was free to travel. There had been reports the shah planned to return to his rented complex in the Mexican tourist resort of Cuernavaca within 10 days.

Assurance Of No New Windfall Tax Hike Is Sought By Oil States

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Oil-state senators appear willing to accept a $22.5 billion boost in the "windfall-profits" tax if they can win assurance no other increase will be approved.

Some senators who are sponsoring other amendments that would add an additional $60 billion or so to the tax have indicated support for the bargain. But no agreement is in hand yet and, as a result, Senate action on the bill is being blocked for the third day.

Following a day of closed-door negotiations Thursday, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd took the tax bill off this morning's agenda to allow time for more bargaining. He said he is optimistic the stalemate can be broken later in the day.

At the heart of the impasse is an amendment by Sens. John Chafee, R-R.I., and Bill Bradley, D-N.J., that would increase from 60 percent to 75 percent the "windfall" tax rate on "new" oil — that from fields discovered since 1973. Such new oil, which is owned mainly by the major oil companies, represents 60 percent of current U.S. production.

The Senate refused earlier in the week to kill the amendment, and the 58-39 vote indicated it was likely to pass. But Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and other oil-state members began talking against the proposal and blocked a vote on it.

After a round of negotiations, Dole said Thursday that he and his allies might give in and take the Chafee-Bradley amendment if they could be assured other proposals for toughening the tax would be dropped.

Chafee agreed but said he could speak for no other senator on his side.

Byrd was pressing hardest for an end to the stalemate, but he said the Senate would deserve the scorn of Americans if it failed to toughen the "windfall-profits" tax. "I've never been one...to use the oil companies as a whipping boy...but this institution has a duty to raise the revenues in this bill," Byrd said. "The American people expect the Senate to do that."

If the Senate failed, it would become the target of justifiable criticism, Byrd added.

The Carter administration also is urging that the tax be increased and is supporting three pending amendments that would add an estimated $60 billion to the 11-year total.

Those amendments would impose a 20 percent tax on various types of oil that the Senate Finance Committee voted to exempt, subject oil owned by the states to the tax and make a part of the tax permanent.

It is those three amendments Dole and his allies want to see junked before they agree to accept the $22.5 billion increase sponsored by Chafee and Bradley.

Pressure to approve the Chafee-Bradley amendment increased after the Senate voted earlier in the week to cut the tax to help independent operators. Independents are not associated with major oil companies but drill about 90 percent of the nation's exploratory wells.

Require Passing By All

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The state Competency Test Commission will recommend to the State Board of Education that all students, including the handicapped, be required to pass the minimum competency test before receiving diplomas.

The commission's recommendation followed testimony by parents and teachers that handicapped students should not be treated differently. Instead, they said, test adaptations to accommodate the handicapped should continue.

The commission also agreed not to recommend lower passing scores for handicapped children.

Commission members will also recommend that all students who fail the two-part tests be allowed to participate in graduation exercises at their schools, although they will receive only certificates of completion. The State Board of Education already has issued a similar recommendation to local school systems.

Of the 3,000 handicapped students who took the reading and mathematics test in 1978, 1,400 passed. The educable mentally retarded had the most difficulty.

On the issue of adapting the test to specific handicaps, Commission Chairman James Gallagher said there have been no public complaints with the use of extended time, oral presentations, large print, small groups, braille and proctors to help remove barriers for the students.

Favor Chrysler 'Wage Freeze'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Chrysler Corp. would get $1.25 billion in government loan guarantees and its employees would have to chip in $1.32 billion through a wage freeze or other means, under legislation approved by the Senate Banking Committee.

In return for the two-year wage freeze, employees would get $250 million worth of the corporation's common stock, or voting stock. That would give them about 40 percent control of the firm, said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

The Senate Banking Committee, voting 10-4 Thursday, sent the measure to the Senate floor.

The bill differs sharply from the proposal of the Carter administration, endorsed with relatively little change by the House Banking Committee, to grant $1.5 billion in loan guarantees with no suggestion of a wage freeze.

Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., the assistant House majority leader, said the House would probably take up the administration bill in the week beginning Dec. 9.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., had indicated earlier the measure would be taken up next week.

But Brademas said House leaders did not want to consider it that soon because suppliers to Chrysler and Chrysler dealers have just begun lobbying House members in the last two or three days.

The automaker indirectly supports 4,700 dealers and 19,000 materials suppliers.

Chrysler employs about 113,000 nationwide.

NO LICENSE PLATES—WHY?

I've noticed in the past several months that the City of Greenville is using several small utility trailers that have no license plates. I wonder why I can't do the same thing. I'd like not to have to buy a license plate for a trailer. R. T.

Some trailers, depending on construction and use, don't call for license plates. G. L. Beddard, an inspector with the Division of Motor Vehicles said. He said the designations were too involved to explain in a single column. The city is up-to-date on its licensing, however, and with permanent licensing, it's a matter of identification, not revenue, anyway, he indicated. A municipal government pays only $3.50 per vehicle for licensing, regardless of weight or use.

Dean Returning To Classroom

Dr. Douglas R. Jones, dean of the School of Education at East Carolina University, has resigned the post to return to the classroom.

Jones said this morning that he submitted his resignation as dean of the school last week, to become effective at the end of this academic year.

"I'm going back in the classroom," he noted.

Jones, considered by some as a candidate for the chancellor's post at ECU after Dr. Leo Jenkins announced his plans to retire at the end of June 1978, is a native of Farmville.

He came to East Carolina in 1958 as a professor in the Department of Education, after six years as a principal and teacher in the public schools in Virginia and North Carolina, and a period as administrative assistant to the president of George Peabody College, where he received his doctorate degree in educational administration in 1958.

Jones was named chairman of the Department of Education at ECU in 1961, and made dean of the School of Education in 1963.

Urge Conserving

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia Electric & Power Co. customers were urged to conserve power today, as their voltage was reduced because of breakdowns in some of the utility's major generating equipment.

The breakdowns at the Mt. Storm and Yorktown plants, combined with heavy cold-weather demand for electricity, prompted Vepco Thursday night to announce a 5 percent voltage reduction for today.

Maintenance crews were working to repair damage to the generating facilities, said Vepco spokesman Doug Cochran. He said he did not know what the problem was at the generating plants.

Emergency assistance normally available from neighboring utilities was limited because of heavy demands for electricity in those areas, he said.

The Vepco spokesman said the voltage reduction would not seriously affect service to any customer.

WRONG SWITCH

EL CENTRO, Calif. (AP) — Power was cut off to some 200,000 people for about an hour after workers at the Parker Dam hydro-electric generating plant opened a switch by mistake, officials said.

TARBORO — Striking union employees of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. have voted to ratify a new two-year contract with the company and some are expected to return to work as early as next week.

The striking workers walked off the job October 1, after the Communications Workers of America leadership rejected a three-year contract offer.

Agreement was reached at the bargaining table on a two-year contract last week, and voting by striking employees was completed yesterday.

The new agreement does not include a costly living adjustment provision which had been one of the union's primary demands, nor an additional holiday which the company had previously offered.

The new contract provides for a 10 percent wage hike the first year, and 9.7 percent the second year, as well as the addition of a dental insurance plan in the second year, with the company paying 60 percent of the premium costs.

Other benefits include improved health and life insurance, overtime pay, vacations, and mileage rates paid for use of personal cars.

Carolina Telephone officials said all striking employees will be offered reemployment, in order of seniority, within 30 days from the date the contract was ratified.

Carolina Telephone president J. C. Cluen said, "the new contract is fair and reasonable to employees, to our customers, and to our stockholders. We are pleased that the strike is over, and we welcome our employees back to work."

Union membership includes installer-repairmen, construction and equipment maintenance employees and operators.

LEARNING ABOUT MOUNTAIN MUSIC - Members of the Green Grass Cloggers work with a group of Belvoir Elementary School students on a few traditional mountain folk tunes Thursday.

Cloggers Demonstrate Their Talents For Belvoir Pupils

By REBECCA BUFFALO, Reflector Staff Writer

Tracy Pinkston, a student at Belvoir Elementary School, patted her hands on her legs in time to the music Thursday, as the Green Grass Cloggers gave a special presentation to the Belvoir student body. No matter that the little girl wore a shirt with the saying, "Disco Fever," she, and the some 450 students at Belvoir were entranced by the sound of mountain music and tapping heels.

According to Alice Keene and Barry Gaskins of the Pitt County Schools Community Schools Program, the cloggers have performed in ten schools during the past week. Their performances were funded by co-sponsorship from the county schools and a grass roots grant from the North Carolina Arts Council.

"It's really tremendous, the response we've gotten, especially from the elementary schools," said Hunt Mallett, a member of the Cloggers' traveling team. "It's amazing how quickly they pick up the steps. A lot of them aren't aware of this part of their heritage."

A band of ten performers, most of them Cloggers, and a few friends, work with small groups of children, singing such tunes as "The Mole Song," and showing the students a few of the basic clogging steps. The entire Appalachian round dance, New England contra dance, English country dance, as well as several music workshops. The workshops will be held at East Carolina University's Wright Auditorium.

The auditorium will be the scene of a Saturday, 8 p.m. to 12 midnight concert. All day general admission will be $5, with the workshop $2.50 and the concert $3.50. Children and senior citizens will be able to participate in the workshops for $1, and the concert, $2.50.

All in all, the cloggers' performance in the schools and the Saturday workshops and concert point up one thing: the preservation of one of America's first folk arts.

As one clogger told the Belvoir students, "This is what people used to do for entertainment before radio and television." school body is then ushered into the auditorium for a singing and Greenville is one of the 13 cities where the clinics will be held. The one here will be on Thursday, Dec. 6 and will be held at A & B Auto Service, 103 W. Ninth Street. Gene Adams will be host. The clinic begins at 7:30 p.m. and will last for about three hours.

The Cloggers rely heavily on audience participation, and the students eagerly oblige to the commands given by the performers. Such songs as "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" and "Cindy" were big hits with the Belvoir crowd.

Charged In Break-In Of Advisory Bd.

A 16-year-old Pactolus resident has been arrested by Pitt County deputies and charged in connection with the break-in at a rural residence on Nov. 28.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that William Earl Wiggins was charged with breaking and entering the mobile home of David Clark on Rt. 5, Box 313, Greenville and with taking personal property valued at $165.

Sheriff Tyson said that Clark reported that an assortment of tools and clothing, as well as some money, was taken from his home while he was away on Wednesday.

Entrance to the residence was gained after a screen and glass was removed from a rear door, it was noted. Damage to the door was estimated at $50.

A hearing has been set for Wiggins for Dec. 3 in District Court here.

However, when things got a little too hectic, Belvoir teachers and Alston Burke, principal, called for order.

The Cloggers will be celebrating their fourth annual "Cloggers Day" Saturday, Dec. 1, with a workshop from 12 noon to 5 p.m. The workshop will feature instruction in clogging, western square dance, southern

N.C. Allocated $20.9 Million For Housing

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) - North Carolina has received an estimated allocation of nearly $20.9 million the Housing and Urban Development Department for 6,448 federally subsidized housing units in fiscal year 1980, state HUD manager Betsy Stafford said Thursday. The tentative assignment is about $4 million less than the state received last fiscal year and calls for about 1,350 fewer units, Mrs. Stafford said. The federal fiscal year runs from Oct. 1 to Sept. 30.

"This figure is just for housing and does not include the amount we might expect in North Carolina for Community Development programs," Mrs. Stafford said.

HUD made a preliminary assignment last year of nearly $97 million to North Carolina for Community Development programs. Mrs. Stafford said she had no indication of what the figure might be this year but she did not "anticipate it will be appreciably less."

Mrs. Stafford said $9,034 million of the housing funds is earmarked for metropolitan areas and $11.842 million for non-metropolitan sections.

She said under the new allocation, 1,130 units would go for low-income public housing. A federal housing program, designated Section 202, is scheduled to get some 450 units. This is a direct loan program to provide innovative housing for the elderly and handicapped.

The Farmers Home Administration is earmarked for 500 rental units in small communities under the so-called Section 8 program. Section 8 provides rent-subsidy for limited income families in private housing developments.

Ask 100,000 Signatures

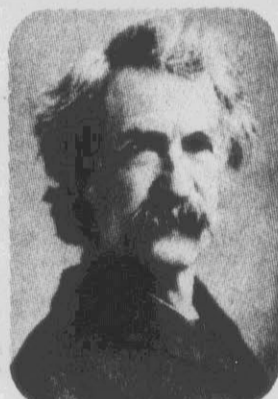

Operation Overcharge officials announced that a campaign to obtain 100,000 signatures of northeastern North Carolina residents on a petition asking the stockholders of Virginia Electric and Power Co. to sell the company's electric distribution system in the region and leave the state will be launched on Saturday, Dec. 1.

Leaders of Operation Overcharge, a group formed by the local chambers of commerce in the northeastern section to combat electric rates charged by Veeco, said that they will coordinate the petition effort with local chambers and other organizations.

J. Larkin Little of Greenville, chairman of Operation Overcharge, commented, "We have spent 14 months trying to encourage Veeco to do something about its high electric rates. All we hear from the company are lame excuses with no action. Therefore, we have no alternative but to attempt to create a climate in which the company will leave North Carolina."

Little said the petition effort will run through March 31.

Dining Manners Are Very Noisy

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: There is this couple with whom my husband and I go to dinner quite often—for business reasons.

The wife chews ice like a teenager with bad manners. She drains her water glass, sucks the ice and then spits it back into the glass. The noise she makes while doing this simply drives me up a wall! Should I say something to her about it? LOUISVILLE, KY.

DEAR LOUISVILLE: Does your husband BUY from her husband? Or does he SELL to him?

DEAR ABBY: I never thought that I, a 45-year-old woman, would ever be writing a Dear Abby letter, but I am so confused and frustrated I don't know where else to turn. My husband is 52. We've been married 24 years and have four children. About three years ago my husband lost all interest in the physical side of our marriage. Thinking it was something he couldn't help, I didn't make an issue of it, although I found it very hard to live with.

Last week he confessed that he is gay! He says he loves me and will never leave me and the children, and he hopes I can put up with a sexless life because he has decided to sacrifice his true nature for the sake of our marriage.

Don't tell me to see my minister. He IS my minister. If I were to discuss this with another minister or my husband's superior, he would lose his job and probably come out of the closet and then leave.

I went to a psychiatrist in a neighboring city. He gave me some tranquilizers and said I needed several sessions to get over my depression, but I can't afford his prices. Please help me.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Your husband is obviously bisexual, which is no crime. (People do not choose their sexuality.) You need counseling and so does your husband. Ask your psychiatrist to refer you to a mental health clinic where treatment is available within your means.

Also, nearly all religious groups now offer special counseling for gay members and clergy as well. Write again and let me know which denomination you belong to, and I'll advise you whom to contact.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a man (he's in the service) who writes his girlfriend (my sister) letters that go into such gross details of their intimate times together that it would make anybody throw up right on the spot?

In case you think I snooped and read the letters without my sister's permission, I didn't. She showed them to me! NEW JERSEY SISTER

DEAR SISTER: The man who wrote those letters credited his girlfriend with more common sense, discretion and maturity than she possesses. Don't you wonder why your sister wanted to share those letters with you? I do.

CONFIDENTIAL TO JACKIE IN JACKSON, MISS.: Don't activate anything you don't intend to finalize.

Good News From Post Office

Who says there is never any good news? The Postal Service reports that it will have a surplus of $169,363,000. That will be the first year that the Postal Service has had a surplus in 34 years.

As a result postal authorities say that mailing rates will not change for at least 18 months.

Postmaster General William F. Bluger was laudatory. "In today's inflationary climate, I think any far-minded observer must agree that that is a noteworthy accomplishment."

He cited reduction of the Postal payroll from 24,000 to 65,000 since 1971, with mail volume rising from 86 billion to 100 billion pieces per year. Being able to handle more mail with fewer employees was attributed to mechanical sorting of the mails.

Well, fair minded or not, we could point to the soaring cost of mailing letters and packages over the past decade and wonder why in the world the Postal Service should be in the black. We could complain about the slowness of mail delivery which is particularly noticeable around holidays. We could suggest that perhaps some of the surplus be used to speed up first class mail delivery which, after all, is supposed to move promptly.

When all is said and done, however, it is a fact that the Postal Service is showing a surplus this year. We are, therefore, in a position to agree that this is a noteworthy accomplishment.

Productivity On U.S. Farms Is Okay

In this nation we are often concerned about productivity of American workers. If there is a productivity problem it hasn't shown up in our farm segment.

The Soviet Union, by contrast, is concerned about its grain production this year — 48 million tons short of its goal.

Where will the Soviets make it up? Probably by buying 25 million tons of corn and wheat from the United States, the maximum it is allowed.

How is that for a comparison between a private enterprise farm economy and the collective approach of the Soviets?

THIS AFTERNOON

More Than A Pipedream

By BILL NOBILIT
 WASHINGTON — Once upon a time, an active business leader and civic booster in Charlotte proposed in all seriousness that a canal be dug from the Piedmont to the coast.

Large inland ports and export goods could thus have the industrial Piedmont with that escape of all forms of transportation — water.

Shoofers were plentiful, and while the engineering and cost problems of a canal appear insurmountable, the idea of an inland port serving the Piedmont is now receiving serious study.

That steel rails will replace the water. The end result, however, would be the same: inland shipping from the Piedmont and western Carolina to the coast.

What has made this project possible is the innovative container cargo shipping technique, originated by a North Carolina businessman and now dominating the world shipping industry. Except for liquids and gases, most of the world's movement of cargo on land and sea is now by cargo container methods.

A consulting firm from Spartanburg, S.C. has recommended to the North Carolina Ports Authority that an inland port facilities be built linking the Piedmont by rail with the Wilmington port.

William J. Coleman, a consultant with Lockheed Greene Engineers, says this would be a "bold aggressive approach" which "could boost North Carolina ports to a competitive position in a five-state area."

Considering the freestate area of North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, and Tennessee, Coleman pointed out that only 50 percent of goods produced for the international market are shipped through North Carolina ports. The share ought to be at least 50 percent, he said.

The trouble with shipping through the North Carolina ports is a combination of factors. One is the absence of interstate highways linking Wilmington to inland sections of the state.

Another is geographic location which puts many inland shippers closer to ports in Virginia or South Carolina. The ports themselves need to improve facilities, expand marketing efforts, and expand services, he consulted said.

Improved work is already underway on those steps, as well as removing the barriers which impede interstate highway linkages.

Coleman said the inland port would further resolve disadvantages of geography, highways, and proximity to plants.

Containers are loaded on highways as the trailer part of a tractor-trailer rig.

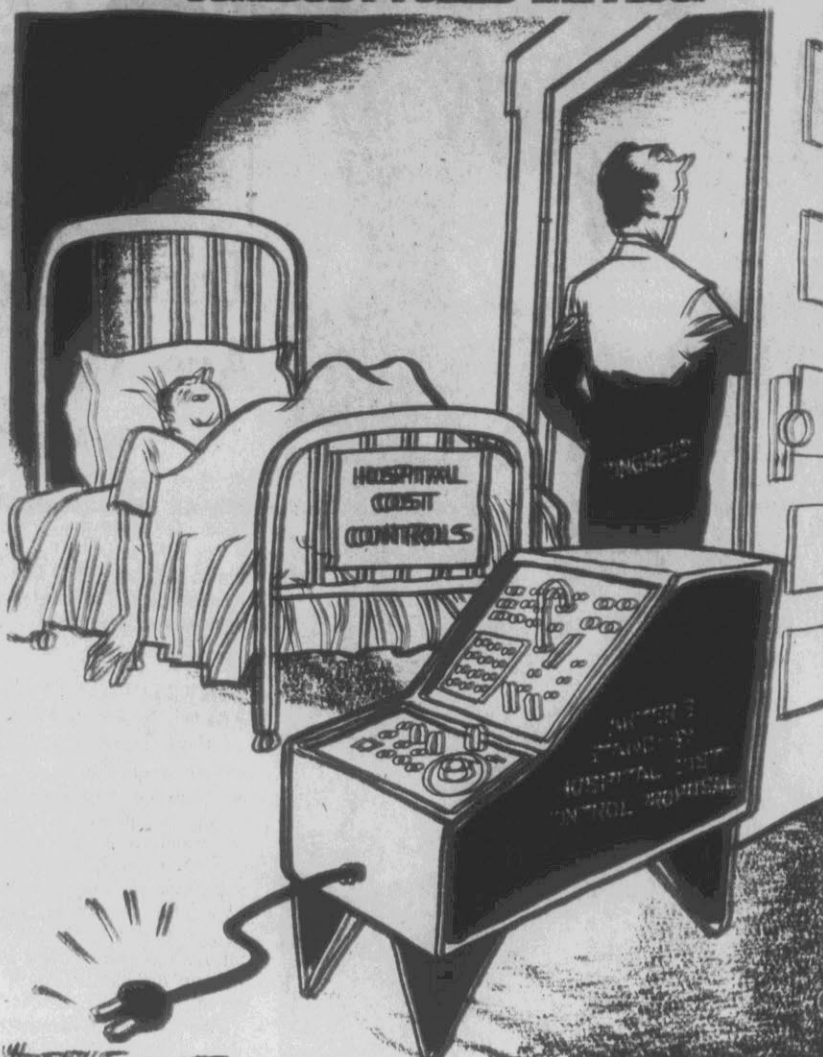

Loaders quickly and easily hoist the containers aboard railway flatbeds for rail transit. Then massive container cranes stack them stern-to-stern aboard ships specially designed to carry them.

An inland port facility, located in the Piedmont near Interstate Highways 85, 40, and 26 would give North Carolina a bigger potential for traffic than Norfolk or Charleston, and would mean the state could capture 50 percent of all container shipping traffic in the state, Coleman believes.

The State Ports Authority will shortly receive more detailed information along with cost estimates and staffing information in order to make a decision.

SOMEBODY PULLED THE PLUG!

Apology Is In Order

By HEUGLIA MULLIGAN
 APT Special Correspondent
 REDDERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Sister Theresa Kline of Everett apologized and must set the record straight (with us).

Sister Theresa Kline has not, repeat not, announced any intention of refusing to attend Mass or assist at services retaining sexist sounding language in the liturgy.

That statement, reported here recently and erroneously attributed to Sister Theresa Kline, was made by Sister Mary Officé after the bishops of the United States at their annual meeting turned down a proposal to remove such words as "for all men" and "brothers in Christ" from the prayers of the faithful.

Sister Theresa Kline, president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, has made no press statements and given no press conferences since her dramatic appeal to Pope John Paul II during his visit to America in October to consider giving women full participation in the mission of the church, especially ordination to the priesthood. She is head of the Sisters of Mercy.

Sister Mary Officé, whose announced intention to boycott services and prayers using the generic term "men" was attributed in error to Sister Theresa Kline, is president of the National Assembly of Religious Women, a Chicago-based organization that works closely with Sister Kline's group that is comprised of women religious of every rank and not limited to superiors of orders and congregations as is the Leadership Conference. She is a Dominican.

So all the angry mail and all the favorable mail on the wording of prayers issue should go to Sister Officé in Chicago, rather than Sister Theresa Kline in the Washington area. So far there has been little, but Sister Kline's friends and sister nuns did protest to this corner that she had made no pronouncement on the prayer question and never proclaimed any intention of not attending Mass or assisting at services where the traditional liturgy was in use.

This column's sole intention in entering this heated religious dispute, was to defend the English language from attack by those who would tamper with accepted usage in the name of sexual equality, but getting the two nuns mixed up did not do anything to cool the situation.

Friends of Sister Theresa Kline are trying to arrange a meeting for her with the pope for further discussion of the role of women in the Roman Church. (Continued on page 5)

Chicago On A Hit List

By ART BULCHWALD
 WASHINGTON — Neil B. Goldschmidt is not a household name. The reason for this is that he is a member of President Carter's Cabinet. Mr. Goldschmidt is Secretary of Transportation. He would have probably remained anonymous for the rest of his term except that last week he told reporters that he would look for opportunities to deny federal funds to Chicago because Nissan's James Byrne had decided to support Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Since Secretary Goldschmidt is now in Washington he can't be blamed for putting Chicago on the President's hit list. He told reporters the decision had been made after consulting with White House officials.

What people didn't know until Goldschmidt's meeting with reporters is that the Department of Transportation has a $2 billion government subsidy fund which is distributed to the cities for their needs at the discretion of the secretary. While it is the taxpayer's money, the Carter people have decided to use it to keep the mayors in line.

It has no vested interest in Chicago, except never to go there in the winter, but as a taxpayer I didn't know that my money would be used to guarantee Carter's nomination in 1980.

Other Editors Say Wrong Type Judge

(Goldblum News Agency)

The Eighth Judicial District, encompassing Wayne, Lincoln and Greene Counties probably delays the full mark of judicial integrity in North Carolina.

We have savings and the bench at the district court level and in the Superior Court here. Judges who are dedicated to the cause of equal justice.

And beyond that, to a person, they combat themselves in court and in their private lives in a manner that protects the judiciary from any appearance of impropriety.

The people of this district should respect and appreciate the effort of the judges who are making to provide here a model judicial system.

The North Carolina Judicial Standards Commission and the State Supreme Court should be equally as determined to protect and enhance the image of our courts. This means they should move promptly and forcefully in the case of District Court Judge William J. Martin of Hickory.

Last year the Judicial Standards Commission recommended Martin's removal from office for willful misconduct in office. The Supreme Court set him, instead, for a re-education.

Did Martin learn his lesson? Obviously not.

When a traffic case against Martin came up in this court, the district attorney recommended that the case be dismissed.

Judge Martin apparently felt the defendant — Martin himself — deserving of such a break and ruled that the dismissal was accepted by the court.

No judge serving on the bench in the three counties of our Eighth Judicial District would have considered sitting in judgment in a case against himself. I doubt that district attorney or assistant district attorney even proposed dismissal under such circumstances he probably would have received a royal dressing down by the judges here.

Throughout the state we care to have a judicial system that can earn and hold the respect of the people, judges like William Martin need to be the object of that respect.

If the powers that be don't have the stomach to do it, perhaps the voters in Mr. Martin's district will.

AUSTIN, TEX. — (Over thirty of American college students believe college newspapers are manned by staffs sufficiently mature to take intelligent editorial stands upon national and international questions. This discovery was made in a poll by Student Opinion Survey.)

—L. Leigh Goddley

It was supposed to be that Secretary Goldschmidt had the authority to give or withhold government money, according to a mayor's ally, but the President had called the Department of Transportation to protest.

"How could you do something like that?" I asked someone in charge.

He replied, "In spite of what you read in the newspapers Secretary Goldschmidt's decision was not qualified law. We're cutting Mayor Byrne off because we feel Chicago would only waste the funds on improving its urban transportation system."

"But isn't that what the Department of Transportation's money is supposed to go for?"

"Up to a point," he said. "But it was not Congress' intent to vote appropriations which would be used by a mayor who would turn her back on the greatest President the United States has."

Rhetoric Won't To Do Job

By PHILIP C. STARR
 All of the federal government has already made a massive energy situation, the AFL-CIO on mass rallies, criticizing the oil industry.

Such an extreme measure should be considered, and the executive board, if it is all monopoly fails to adequately serve the public interest.

Or, as the Washington Star has editorialized, "treating emulsion by amputation."

Whatever... nationalization is the worst possible answer to our energy problems. Or, for that matter, to almost any economic difficulty facing any segment of our private industry. And if you don't believe it, just ask the British who are now turning to their private sector to help bail them out after nearly a generation of socialist bankruptcy.

In reality, most of the most of our current economic difficulties — oil and otherwise — are due to too much government at the expense of private enterprise. The federal government's new Energy Department, for example, is costing taxpayers nearly $11 billion a year, and though it has some 20,000 employees, it has yet to produce a single additional oil well.

If it's hard to understand how total government control would improve matters, it's even more difficult to fathom why Washington doesn't at least give the oil industry a chance to show what it can do. After all, for years it did a superb job of providing all of our energy needs at prices far lower than in most other countries, and even the government's own top experts concede that the industry hardly can be blamed for the current disruption of supplies from Iran and the greediness of OPEC.

It may suit some of our politicians to cry out against the alleged profiteering of the oil industry, after all, it's easier for a motorist to blame shortages and high prices on whoever pumps the gasoline than on faceless bureaucrats or the Ayatollah Khomeini. And the AFL-CIO chestnuts may get some mileage among their union membership by accusing the oil companies, as they did, of "abusing their current monopoly power," and by trumpeting that "the nation cannot afford to be at the mercy of either the sheiks of OPEC or the barons of American oil companies."

But rhetoric won't do the job.

There is of course a definite attraction in all the talk about multi-billion dollar crash programs to develop synthetic fuels — oil produced from coal, shale or sand bars. We have enough coal for hundreds of years and there is more oil locked in the state in our Western states than in all of Saudi Arabia — and even more to be found in the so-called tar sands of Canada.

The trouble is, however, that an all-out effort to produce synthetics in significant quantity would take several years and an immense capital outlay of up to $200 billion over the next decade or more. ARB and Corporation study has concluded that the construction of synthetic plants on such a huge scale could crowd out other investments that might otherwise boost our lagging industrial productivity and help control inflation now. It also would increase the cost of synthetic fuels — oil produced from coal, shale or sand bars. We have enough coal for hundreds of years and there is more oil locked in the state in our Western states than in all of Saudi Arabia — and even more to be found in the so-called tar sands of Canada.

PROVIDENCE — AND OUR IMAGINATIONS
 A young and very successful salesman for a large corporation was compelled to travel against disability. He told friends that he was constantly afraid, every time a plane took off, that it would crash and that he would be in the flaming wreckage. The young man is dead now, but he did not die in an airplane disaster. He contracted a very rare but always fatal blood disease.

There is a legend from the Middle Ages about two brothers, one of whom was a swashbuckling hero and the other a timid and who looked himself in a castle. He was injured. The heroic brother returned from war to find that the timid brother had died a short time before. He had choked on a piece of bread.

Our imaginations call up morbid fantasies, but an Almighty Providence befits our fate. And usually Providence is kinder to us than our imaginations. We seldom need to be afraid of what we morbidly and compulsively fear.

— Blaise Cendrars

Help For The 'Disorganized'

By GAIL WIGGERS
 "Listen to this!", I said to Phillip several days ago. "Here's an advertisement that claims to can help me get a hold on my life!"

"What's the product?" he asked. "Bionic gloves?"

"Very funny. But this is a legitimate product. It says here that through post-hypnotic suggestion, the Hedt Tape Cassette can cure obesity, insomnia, smoking, sexual dysfunction, tension, and can improve your golf and bowling."

"Hey, my great-uncle used to sell that. But I think he called it snake oil."

"Would you be serious? Do you think if I ordered one, it might help me get organized before Christmas?"

He gingerly picked up one of the tapes and said that he had been lying on top of the television for three days and let it fall. "Pareil, Gail, there's just no cure for chronic disorder."

Although I hate to admit it, he's right. I don't know why. Maybe the chronically disorganized have bledkale synapses or an extra chromosome. All I know is that my mind has never approached that internal order that is so indispensable for external order. My organized friends have been more than happy to share their ideas and their methods for saving time. But Werner Von Braun might as well try to teach physics to a dog.

For instance, these friends say that I should overcome my problems by making lists. What they don't realize is that I've made enough lists in my life to write a paper on the outside of the entire N.C. State Archives building.

It's following the lists that's so hard. Once I make them, I usually can't find them. I once spent two weeks looking through my purse for a list headed, "Clean out pocket-book."

And once I find them, there's no guarantee that I'll check the items off immediately. That requires self-discipline. Unfortunately, when I see a list on which I've written, "Scribble the kitchen floor," my normal response is, "But I didn't say when."

It's not that I'm lazy. Rather, like most chronically disorganized people, I'm a dilettante. Dilettantes work all day and never have anything to show for it. They clean house before birthday parties. They vacuum while their husbands are outside making leaves. They get around to cleaning the bathroom ten minutes before their kids are due in from a Boy Scout hike in the swamp.

In my more reflective moments I can accept chronic disorder as an irreversible congenital defect. But around Christmas time I start gumping at straws. Christmas is the one day a year when disorganized people are at an impossible disadvantage. Like last year when I procrastinated on Meg's Christmas order for a stove and refrigerator. She ended up with a toy hot plate and a little Playmate cooker.

I thought I was really reforming myself this year. I started my Christmas shopping this week. But already the merchandise has been pilfered over like turkey that's been in the refrigerator for two weeks.

Even more depressing was my visit to a congenitally organized friend. Not only had she stuffed three Christmas trees and four wreaths, but she had designed and made a tree skirt for her mother. I had to leave before the cake in the oven finished baking. I have of feeling I would have choked on it.

Still, the way I see it, there is one hope left for me this holiday season. I can always order that cassette and go bowling Christmas day.

Computers In Teaching

 Instructional uses to be demonstrated involve mathematics, science, foreign language, music and speech. Participants may also join computer games, view a film and visit ECU's campus Computer Center.

A special feature of the conference will be displays of working computer systems by representatives of computer manufacturers.
 While pre-registration is encouraged, participants may register at 8:15 a.m. in ECU's Memorial Gymnasium on the day of the conference. Fees are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

ever known."

"Then you are playing politics with the taxpayers' money."

"We most certainly are not. We have guidelines before we give federal funds to the cities. The most important question is, does the mayor have the intelligence and executive ability to use the money wisely in improving her transportation system."

The secretary, after consulting with transportation experts at the 'Carter for President' organization, decided that Mayor Byrne failed to meet this test."

"But you decided this only after she came out for Kennedy."

"We decided it long before that, but only announced it after she came out for Kennedy so we wouldn't hurt Mayor Byrne's feelings. We'd much prefer for her to believe it was a political decision rather than tell her the truth, that when it comes to transportation matters she's a very poor mayor."

"Can you assure me that your action against Chicago, and any future actions you take in withholding funds from a city, has absolutely nothing to do with the upcoming election?" I demanded.

"Of course I can," he said. "The secretary has told me many times, 'My only job is to see that America's trains run on time. But I would not be serving the interests of the American people if I gave money to a mayor who doesn't even know which side her bread is buttered on.'"

It was a stupid error, but an honest one, which usually is the worst kind.

Many private energy experts argue that development of synfuels should be left largely to private industry. They believe that the government's most useful contribution would be to stop interfering in the free enterprise system of supply and demand — a system they feel would bring synfuels "on-stream" in a truly efficient and effective manner.

Pope John Paul Joins With Orthodox In Church Service

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer
ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Pope John Paul II took one more step toward unification of the Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox Churches today by becoming the first pontiff in nine centuries to attend a full Orthodox service.

JOINT SERVICE — Pope John Paul II, listens as Patriarch Demetrius I gestures Thursday, as the head of the Roman Catholic Church and the head of the Greek Orthodox Church conduct a joint service at St. George's Church, Istanbul. The congregation of the two churches comprise nearly one billion believers. (AP Laserphoto)

Although the pope did not join in celebrating Mass, he hummed through the liturgy in a low voice and made the sign of the cross from right to left in the Orthodox manner, and not from left to right as Roman Catholics usually do.

The pope wore a white robe and a red mantle topped with a gold-embroidered red sash, and was greeted by Patriarch Demetrius I at the St. George Orthodox Church for their second meeting in two days.

The patriarch wore a black robe and carried an iron staff topped with two iron serpents as he led the pope into the church for the feast of St. Andrew — the patron of the Orthodox church.

The pope apparently was unaware of the bombing of nine bank branches in Istanbul shortly after midnight by a Moslem extremist group protesting his visit to this predominantly Moslem nation.

Police said the blasts caused damage but no injuries. The banks were at least six miles from the residence of the Vatican envoy, where the pope was staying.

The pope told Istanbul's small Catholic community Thursday night at his first public Mass of his three-day Turkish visit, "I dare to hope that the day of unity is near. Personally I hope it is very near."

"I will participate in the celebration of the feast of St. Andrew," the pope continued, referring to the patron of the Orthodox church and senior brother of the Apostle Peter.

"But we will not be able to celebrate. That is the most painful sign of the misfortune introduced in the only church of Christ through division."

The Roman Catholic Church and the Eastern Orthodox Churches split in the Great Schism of 1054, after a long-seething conflict over the authority of the pope. Pope Leo IX and Patriarch Michael Cerularius of Constantinople, the name for Istanbul until 1930, each excommunicated the other. Since then, no pope has ever attended an Orthodox Mass or Eucharistic liturgy.

Rapprochement between the two churches began when Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Athenagoras embraced at a historic meeting in Jerusalem in 1964. Three years later, the two churches lifted their mutual excommunications and exchanged visits.

Now, following in the footsteps of Pope Paul VI, John Paul II prepared the ground for a 60-member joint theological commission to overcome some of the difficulties still separating the two churches.

Turkey has completely blacked out the ecumenical aspect of John Paul's visit, which involves the tiny community of 60,000 Orthodox and 26,000 Catholics in this Moslem nation of 45 million.

The Turkish press, after a cool welcome, warmed to the pope after he kissed the ground upon arrival and delivered a plea for Christians and Moslems to work together to promote "moral values, peace and liberty."

The pope's overture to Islam was applauded by Abu Firas, that the Islamic and Christian worlds unite," said Firas, who met the pope at a reception Wednesday.

Kitten up a tree

Puffy has a problem. She's much better at climbing trees than she is at getting down again. Usually someone has to get a ladder and bring poor Puffy back to earth.
People share Puffy's problem. Their fears are forever driving them to do what they can't undo. They run away from reality only to wish they hadn't. We have even coined the idiom "up a tree" to denote the dilemma of a situation from which we cannot free ourselves.
With people, it takes more than a ladder to solve the problem.
Through the centuries men have found Faith an answer to fear. Our churches cultivate courageous Christians. For with confidence in God comes confidence in ourselves.
The man who knows he's never alone doesn't run away.

Battle Over Tellico Dam Is Ended After 43 Years

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer
LENOIR CITY, Tenn. (AP)—The 43-year battle over the Tellico Dam ended with the Little Tennessee River gurgling a few last bubbles of life as the floodgates dropped to turn it into a 16,000-acre lake.

"I'm glad to see it filled finally," retired Tennessee Valley Authority Chairman Aubrey Wagner said while watching a crane lower the last two gates into place Thursday. "It's potentially the best hydro project TVA ever built."

Wagner, then a young engineer fresh out of college, helped conceive the dam in 1936. Three decades later atop the seven-state federal agency born out of Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal, he convinced Congress to take the $130 million project off the shelf.

The last gate of six seven-ton gates fell into place at 11:23 a.m., ending a fight in which TVA at one time or another beat back attacks of red baiters, farmers, trout fishermen and conservationists in addition to Cherokee Indians and the three-inch snail darter.

The Cherokee, still waging what their own attorneys concede appears to be a futile court effort, reacted with bitterness. Archeologists hired by TVA dug up 185 Cherokee graves in the land to be covered by the lake.

TVA said it will rebury the Indian remains at a site above the high-water mark. The bones have been in a basement storeroom at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville the past two years.

"I cannot find words strong enough to convey my contempt for the lack of honor to be found among TVA and federal officials," John A. Crowe, principal chief of Cherokee's Eastern Band, said Thursday.

"We would not go into your family cemetery and remove the bones of your ancestors and put them in our basement nor would we expect anyone else, least of all a federal agency, to rob the graves of our ancestors," Crowe said in a letter to TVA Chairman S. David Freeman.

Robert Stivers, the tribe's attorney, said the Cherokee still intend to press a suit in the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals to have the lake turned back into a river on the claim that the desecration of Indian burial grounds violates their religious freedom.

The Cincinnati appeals court and two Supreme Court justices earlier this month denied the Indians an injunction forbidding TVA from closing the dam's gates.

Zyg Plater, a Wayne State University law professor who halted the dam for three years with the snail darter, a rare three-inch fish found in the river in 1973, said TVA acted in "obscure haste."

"In later years, many people are going to look back at this moment with great personal shame," Plater said Thursday night. "No one will be able to look back at it with pride."

Will Examine Visas Of N.C. Iranian Students

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The visas held by 129 Iranian students at four universities in the Triangle will be examined next week by U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Services officers.

All Iranian students in the state must prove to immigration officials by Dec. 14 that they are full-time students, as their visas require.

Gulledge Baker, a supervisor at the services' Atlanta office, said the four-member investigative team will be based at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

Meanwhile, Gov. Jim Hunt on Thursday praised President Carter's handling of the Iranian crisis. "I think the president has handled it very, very well," Hunt said. "I think this is one of America's finest hours."

A total of 115 Iranian students are enrolled at N.C. State. Six Iranians are enrolled at North Carolina Central University, five at Duke and three at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Baker said the students from the Triangle schools outside Raleigh will meet with the im-

Vote No On Plant Union

Employees of Vermont American Corp. here rejected a bid by the United Electrical Workers Union to represent them, during an election conducted yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board.

Of the 140 employees who cast ballots in the union election, 90 voted against union representation while 50 workers voted in favor of the UEW. Some 142 workers were eligible to vote.

Vermont American manager Henry Crouse said this morning that company officials, "appreciate the vote of confidence," displayed yesterday.

"We believe that without strong union representation in the Greenville area, it enhances the area's continued growth pattern," Crouse said, explaining, "industries do not seek to relocate in areas that have strong union representation."

Crouse termed the vote, "good for employees of Vermont American as well as for continued growth of the area."

Few Nurses To Be Recruited

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—Barry Brock came to Kansas City hoping to entice experienced nurses from harsh Midwest winters to sunny Florida. He spent more time reading magazines than resumes.

Brock and other recruiters around the country are finding potential employees scarce and competition keen for the few nurses available. The American Nurses' Association estimated recently that 100,000 nursing jobs are going begging.

During the day Brock spent in a downtown hotel room in Kansas City, he didn't interview a single registered nurse, and stops in Springfield, Ill., Wichita, Kan., and St. Louis were only slightly more productive.

"We're trying to get experienced nurses for our psychiatric and critical care units," said Brock, of Pensacola's West Florida Hospital. "To get the experienced nurse, you have to go out and interview. But during one week, one of our recruiters said she read five novels."

"Trying to talk a nurse into pulling up stakes and leaving, well, that's a hard choice," Brock said in a recent interview. "Florida is a natural attraction, but they're still hesitant."

The hesitation to move may stem in part from nurses' increased ability to get what they want at home. In some places, competition has prompted rearranged working hours to accommodate child care arrangements, tuition reimbursements or even bounties for employees who steer new nurses to a hospital.

At Iowa Methodist hospital in Des Moines, nurses who work the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift can choose either the normal extra pay that goes with working those hours or the use of a new leased car.

Hearing Could Lead To Garwood's Court Martial

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps will pursue allegations against Pfc. Robert Garwood that he deserted and collaborated with the enemy in Vietnam with a hearing next week that could lead to a court-martial.

Earlier this year, Camp Lejeune commandant Brig. Gen. David B. Barker signed an order Thursday calling for an Article 32 hearing — roughly equivalent to a civilian grand jury — in Garwood's case. After the hearing, which will begin Tuesday afternoon at Camp Lejeune, Barker will decide whether Garwood should face a court-martial.

If court-martialed and convicted of either desertion or collaboration, the 33-year-old Marine, who spent 13½ years in Vietnam, could be sentenced to death. Barker, who could have decided to drop charges against Garwood, named Maj. T.B. Hamilton Jr., a military judge, as the presiding officer to "thoroughly and impartially" listen to evidence at Garwood's hearing. Hamilton will recommend to Barker whether a court-martial should be held. Capt. John Schmidt, spokesman at Camp Lejeune where Garwood is stationed, said the hearing would be open to the public unless Hamilton orders it closed. Garwood's civilian attorney, Dermot Foley of New York, said he was not surprised by the Marine Corps' decision to proceed with the case. But he said he did not think the military could produce enough evidence to substantiate the allegations.

He labeled the Marine Corp's decision a "knee-jerk retaliation" to a petition that Foley filed in Washington Tuesday asking that charges be dropped against Garwood. "Bobby's first sin was to survive, and his second was to file that petition," Foley said. The investigation by the Naval Investigative Service involved interviews with at least 25 former prisoners of war. Foley said he believed the investigation ended several weeks ago and Marine officials had debated since then whether to hold a hearing. In addition to allegations of desertion and collaboration, the hearing will concern charges against Garwood of soliciting American forces to lay down their weapons and misconduct as a prisoner of war. Garwood has been at Camp Lejeune, working as a mail clerk, since last May. He has denied the allegations against him, contending he was captured in 1965 and held as a prisoner until last March. The Marine Corps said Thursday that some specific allegations against Garwood had been changed, but the severity of the charges against him were not affected.

Garwood was originally accused of deserting on Sept. 22, 1965, when he disappeared while serving as a jeep driver near Danang. Schmidt said Garwood is now accused under military law of deserting in 1967 during a time of war. Schmidt said one charge accusing Garwood of misconduct as a prisoner of war had been dropped but two new charges of misconduct were added. The dropped charge accused Garwood of causing two American prisoners of war to be tortured. The new misconduct charges against Garwood accuse him of hitting Army Pfc. David Harker in the ribs and verbally abusing Army 1st Sgt. Richard F. Williams while the two were prisoners of war.

Old-Fashioned Holiday Celebration Saturday

An Old-Fashioned Holiday Celebration will take place Saturday, December 1 between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. The celebration will be held at two sites, at the Greenville Community Center, corner and Greene and Fourth Streets, and at the Greenville Recreation and Parks Administrative Office Building, Jaycee Park at 2000 Cedar Lane. Sponsors for the six hour long two-part celebration are the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, Pitt County Extension Home Economics Office, and Pitt Community College.

These agencies have combined their efforts in order to bring to the community a special experience in celebrating this holiday season. It is hoped it will create an awareness of the true Christmas and holiday spirit — one to cater to the senses of sight, sound, taste and smell. The programs are planned to appeal to both children and adults.

At the Community Center, exhibits of more than a dozen types of crafts will be displayed, with demonstrations by craftsmen scheduled to take place during the day. The program at Cedar Lane will include storytelling at 1:30 p.m., music by the Greenville Boys' Choir at 2:30 p.m., a performance of dance by members of the ECU Dance Theater at 3 p.m., and seasonal music at 3:30 p.m. by the Greenville Community Chorus. All events are free and the public is invited to attend.

Former POW Ends Career

Col. James E. Hiteshaw, a prisoner of war in North Vietnam for six years, ended a 27-year Air Force career here today with an address at East Carolina University.

Upon his return home, Hiteshaw was assigned as executive officer in the 68th Bomb Wing at Seymour Johnson AFB, Goldsboro, and in 1974 he entered graduate school at ECU, earning his masters degree in education.

During his military tenure, Hiteshaw has received the Silver Star with one Oak Leaf Cluster, seven Air Medals, two Purple Hearts, and two Distinguished Flying Crosses. The colonel is married to the former Billie Corathers of Weston, W. Va. and they have two children.

The Air Force veteran spoke to the future officers in the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps (AFROTC) of ECU and their guests at the Corps' annual Dining Out.

Hiteshaw entered the Air Force in 1952 as an aviation cadet and received his wings and commission as a second lieutenant. He was shot down and captured on his 75th combat mission over North Vietnam in 1967 and he remained a prisoner of war until his release in 1973. Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 8 a.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, involving cars driven by Ellen Smith Fagan of 3101 Ellsworth Dr., Edward Harvey Mann of 209 Harvey St., and Johan Reese of 509 West 14th St.

Applies To Drill For Oil

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Texas geologist is asking for state approval to conduct exploratory drilling for oil and natural gas in the Pamlico Sound near Stumpy Point.

The several thousand acres of submerged land is state-owned, said Stephen Conrad, director of the state Division of Land Resources.

Conrad said he saw no major problems with the proposal, which could reach the Council of State for a decision within 60 days.

The application was filed by Karl Schmidt of San Antonio, Texas, an independent geologist who worked in the area with an oil company several years ago. He could not be reached for comment Thursday.

The proposal seeks rights to several plots north of Cape Hatteras.

Conrad said the area had been explored in the past and Schmidt was encouraged about the prospects for finding petroleum because of geological formations in the area.

He said Cities Services Oil Co. held rights in the area for several years before relinquishing leases in the early 1970s. Some natural gas was discovered, he said, but not enough to warrant further exploration.

Under state policy, a leaseholder must pay a minimum rent for his acreage and work the property within five years. The state would receive one-sixth of the value of any material found and would have the option of taking its share in oil or natural gas.

Study Scoring Of N.C. Test

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Parents and students have complained about the difficulty in understanding the results from the minimum competency test, but the state Competency Test Commission believes a switch to a new scoring method could prove even more complex.

Commission members said Thursday at a public hearing on the tests that the same scoring method will be kept, despite the complaints.

Three different tests have been prepared, and the versions are alternated.

The confusion comes because the minimum passing score is different this year — higher in reading, lower in mathematics — but the test results reflect a conversion to the percentage standard set last year.

Students are required to answer correctly 72 percent of the 120 reading questions and 64 percent of the 120 math questions in order to pass.

The official score, however, isn't the same as the percentage yielded when the raw score is used for figuring, causing the confusion.

State school officials say the raw score should not be totaled and then interpreted as the official score. The breakdown of the number of items answered correctly in each area is for information.

William Brown, director of the division of research, Department of Public Instruction, said, however, that school officials have told him this week it would be easier to explain the changing standards to parents and students.

"Even when the school systems understand (the equation) they don't like it," Brown said. "They would rather say that one test is easier and students would have to get more right to pass it. They say that's easier for the public to understand."

Brown said he feels the biggest problem with the scoring method will be trying to explain it to students who fail the test.

Scorpion Venom Is A Tool In Research

A microbiologist at the East Carolina University School of Medicine is using scorpion venom to study the mechanism of pancreatitis, an inflammation of the pancreas that causes excruciating abdominal pain and is fatal in some cases.

Dr. Paul Fletcher, a specialist in protein chemistry, is conducting research on the venom's effects on guinea pigs to learn more about how it affects the release of digestive enzymes believed to cause the disease.

The three-year project is funded by a $180,000 grant from the National Institute of Health.

Normally, the pancreas secretes a quart of enzymes daily to break down food into forms which can be absorbed by the body. But in pancreatitis, the normal release is blocked, and scientists believe the enzymes attack and digest the pancreas itself, prompting destruction of the organ.

Fletcher says the type of venom under investigation is known to cause the immediate development of pancreatitis. He added that the venom is found only in a particular species of scorpion in Trinidad, Venezuela and Brazil.

The project is a collaborative effort with Dr. Lourival Possani, professor of biochemistry at the University of Mexico. Fletcher and Possani recently returned from a trip to Brazil and Trinidad where they collected the venom needed for the project.

The two investigators hope to discover how the pancreas stores the enzymes and what mechanism triggers the release of the necessary proteins.

Pat Dye Resigns At ECU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

With stunning surprise, Pat Dye offered his resignation yesterday as head football coach at East Carolina University. Dye called a press conference at 4 p.m. in his Scales Fieldhouse office to make the revelation. "I don't have another job at this time," he said, "I just feel that at this point, that it's in the best interests of myself, my family, the staff here and the school."

Less than 24 hours earlier, it had been revealed that Dye was a strong candidate for the job as head coach at the University of Wyoming. Dye talked with Wyoming athletic director George McCarty in Raleigh on Wednesday, but said that he had not been offered the job.

Dye does plan to follow up on the situation in Wyoming, he indicated. "I'll probably go out there some time after the weekend to see what the situation looks like. I know that they were going to interview several other people, too."

There was also speculation that Dye could also become a strong candidate to replace Bo Rein at N.C. State. Rein was to be named this morning as the new head coach at Louisiana State University, where Dye's name had also been on the candidate list.

The coach, who completed six years behind the helm of the Pirate ship, said that he had recommended several members of his present staff for the job, including Frank Orgel and Dick Kupec. "Henry Trevanthen is also very interested in the job and deserves consideration."

Dye said that the decision to leave East Carolina had not been an easy one to make. "I've thought about it for some time. This hasn't been a rapid decision on my part. I talked to Coach (Bear) Bryant a month ago and indicated that I probably would be leaving at the end of the season and told him to keep me in mind if he knew of anything coming open. Wyoming just helped me to come to a decision."

Just prior to his press conference, Dye met with his players, telling them of his decision to leave the university. He had informed his staff only minutes before that meeting.

The coach, his eyes still red with the emotion from meeting with the players, praised East Carolina for the opportunity it had given him as head coach. "This has been an experience that I will never forget," he said. "There are people here that I will be obligated to all my life; people I can never repay. East Carolina has meant a great deal to me, but I feel right now that it is time to move on and let someone else take over here."

"The people of this area, the community, the student body, the faculty, every East Carolina fan has been tremendous. This is something that is not easy to do—leave here. The people here have put me on top of the world."

"But it's come down to the fact that it's time for someone else to take over and do the job," he added.

There had been reports that Dye was unhappy over his inability to get everything he wanted for the program, but he denied this.

"I can't say anything but nice things about this university. There are things that I would like, certainly, but this would be true anywhere. I don't think that there is anything that anyone could do that would change my mind."

"In fact, it's too far gone now. The decision is made."

Dye finished his career at East Carolina with a 48-18-1 record, one of the best among active coaches in the country. At the start of the season, he was ranked among the top 20 active coaches who had five or more years at a major university.

Dye came to East Carolina following a nine-year stint as linebacker coach at the University of Alabama. A Georgia native, he played football and track in high school and was an All-American guard at the University of Georgia, where he played on the 1959 Southeastern Conference championship team that topped Missouri in the Orange Bowl, 14-0.

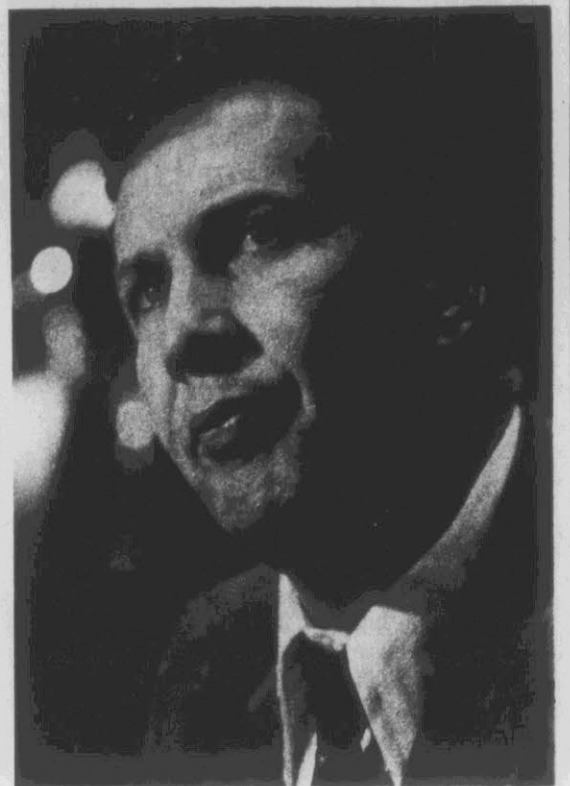

He served two and a half years in the Army, where he played football, and also played two years with the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League.

Dye's first team at East Carolina finished 7-4, and he followed that with an 8-3 season in 1975, then carded a 9-2 year in 1976. He followed those up with 8-3, 9-3 and 7-3-1 seasons. His 1978 team, however, was the only one to get a bowl bid, beating Louisiana Tech in the Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La., 35-13.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, chancellor of the university, issued a statement following Dye's announcement, saying that the university appreciated the progress and efforts made by Dye over the past six years. He indicated that a committee would be formed Friday morning to search for a successor to Dye.

Dye said that he decided to go ahead and resign, despite his uncertain future, to give the university a chance to find a new coach as quickly as possible. "We had kids scheduled to come in here this weekend for a visit. It wouldn't be fair to them to come in here when I knew that there was a good chance I'd be leaving."

"East Carolina has a great future ahead of it. We've barely scratched the surface of what can be done here. There is so much room for growth. But I feel that I have done all I can do. Now it's up to someone else."

Win Over Pats Was Like Old Times For Dolphins

MIAMI (AP) — Griese handing off to Csonka, just like old times — winning times, championship times for the Miami Dolphins.

Bob Griese, regaining the quarterback job he had lost after 13 seasons, and fullback Larry Csonka, continuing his amazing comeback, combined in the second half Thursday night to rally the Miami Dolphins to a 39-24 victory over the New England Patriots.

The 9-5 Dolphins moved closer to their first American Football Conference East title since 1974 — Csonka's last year before joining the World Football League.

"It felt like old times," Griese said. "The linemen opening the holes, Zonk in there, me standing back and giving him the ball. It was very reminiscent of the championship teams."

This Sunday in the National Football League, it's Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, Houston at Cleveland, Atlanta at San Diego, Denver at Buffalo, Chicago at Tampa Bay, Detroit at Philadelphia, Green Bay at Washington, the New York Gi-

Big 4 May Answer Many Questions

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The 10th annual and next-to-last Big Four basketball tournament could answer many questions for the participants and pose several more for Atlantic Coast Conference rivals.

Question: Who deserves the higher national ranking, Duke or North Carolina?

Question: Is this the year Norm Sloan's North Carolina State team emerges from the shadows to capture its first ACC crown since the days of David Thompson?

Question: Can Wake Forest play the game effectively with an injured Frank Johnson contributing little or nothing?

The answers — providing the script has been properly written — should be forthcoming in the next two nights. In the opening round tonight, Duke meets Wake Forest at 7 o'clock, and North Carolina faces N.C. State at 9.

When ACC basketball writers met earlier this month they chose Dean Smith's North Carolina team by a 100-33 margin over Bill Foster's Duke club to win the league title. And then the national poll was released. It had Duke ranked third and North Carolina sixth.

Ironically, those teams tied for the regular-season title last spring, with Smith's Tar Heels capturing the coveted ACC Tournament. Foster's Blue Devils won their first Big Four title a year ago, however, by beating those same Tar Heels.

This season Duke sends to the floor a team led by 6-foot-11 senior center Mike Gminski, who finished second in the conference with an 18.8 points-per-game scoring average a year ago.

And the Blue Devils have a game under their belts, an overtime victory over Kentucky in the Hall of Fame game at Springfield, Mass.

"That should give them an advantage," said Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy. "We've done all we can to prepare for them."

His team, the only loser among ACC clubs last season with a 12-15 record, hopes to prosper despite a broken left foot from which Johnson is recuperating. His status in the tournament is doubtful.

North Carolina's attack will be led by forwards Al Wood and Mike O'Koren. Wood finished fourth in the league in scoring last season with a 17.8 average, while O'Koren tossed in 14.8 for the Tar Heels.

"North Carolina has a very fine team," said Sloan, who feels the Tar Heels will have an advantage because they had a preseason game.

The Tar Heels defeated previously unbeaten Athletics in Action last weekend, but Smith hopes that victory will not create a false sense of security.

"They played Arizona the night before and we were rested," he cautioned.

N.C. State is a talented team despite the fact that it has not won a crown since Thompson's last collegiate campaign in 1974. The Wolfpack won the national title that year with a 30-1 record.

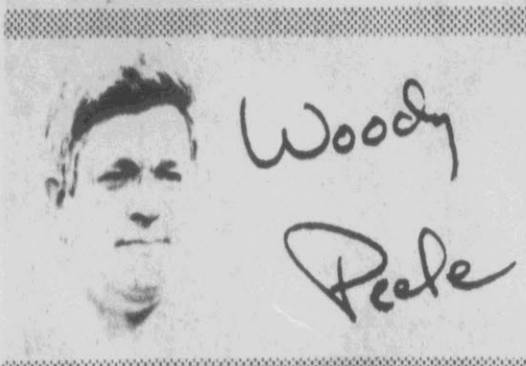

This season Sloan will rely on forward Hawkeye Whitney and guard Clyde Austin. Sloan classifies Whitney as the best physical specimen he has ever coached.

The tournament itself was relegated to lame-duck status when athletic directors of the four participating schools were unable to come up with alternate dates.

Foster summed it all up earlier this week when he said teams that lost in the tournament suffered because it gave them an additional burden to overcome during the remainder of the season.

But he said he did not object to the tournament "because of the interest and economics."

The schools will play in the tournament once more because they must honor a contract with the Greensboro Coliseum that runs through 1980.

While it was not surprising that Pat Dye's name popped up again when various coaching positions around the country came open, it was somewhat of a surprise that he resigned from East Carolina without already having one of those jobs his.

Most of the time, people don't resign unless they have somewhere to go—or unless they are unhappy where they are.

Dye, under questioning yesterday, admitted that there were things that he would like to have seen changed at East Carolina, but he would not go into any specifics. Whatever they were, apparently they were unresolvable.

Dye probably won't be among the unemployed long. He is a top candidate for the job at Wyoming, and plans to visit the campus in Laramie next week.

The resignation of Bo Rein to take the job at L.S.U. this morning, leaves another opening that Dye will probably find interesting. He said yesterday that he had not talked with anyone at State about the job, however.

But, by being no longer employed by East Carolina, it will be much easier for anyone at State to contact him about the position. Going to a sister school inside the UNC university system isn't looked upon favorably, but with Dye no longer having ECU ties, nothing would hold the State people back.

Dye had nothing but praise for the fans, students and faculty at East Carolina, calling it a period of his life that he would always remember.

But, he indicated, he had done all he could under the circumstances. Now, it was up to someone else.

While Dye was unable to get some of the things he wanted for the program, the next man probably will. That is the way things usually go in football.

The pot is almost always sweeter for the next man.

Filling Dye's shoes won't be an easy job for anyone. Dye is not only well-liked by the fans, but by the media too. "A good ole boy," was the usual reference to Dye. He fit in with the down-east mold.

"The best thing that people can do for the East Carolina program is to get behind the new man and give him all they can; help him any way they can," Dye told us.

"East Carolina has only begun to grow, the potential is unlimited. I just feel that I've gone as far as I can here."

Dye never had a losing season at East Carolina. His first year was his worst, 7-4. In the 67 games his teams played, only one foe, South Carolina, failed to fall to him. They met only once. Dye beat everyone else he played at least once.

The job now is to make sure that East Carolina's program does not suffer from the change. A new coach will need to be named quickly, as Dye is hoping, so that recruiting will not suffer.

Next year, the Pirates face another tough schedule.

The year ahead lies strewn with pitfalls, as a new coach, staff and system will be put in, more than likely.

We hope that East Carolina will come out ahead. As Dye said, the football program has come a long way. But the surface has only been scratched. The potential is limited only by the lack of vision of those who cannot see over those hills that lie ahead.

Leonard Faces Benitez Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard and Wilfred Benitez fight for the welterweight championship and a million dollars apiece tonight in the richest non-heavyweight bout in boxing history.

"To make a long story short, you're looking at the new welterweight champion of the world," said the unbeaten Leonard, who is a 31-1 favorite to win the World Boxing Council welter title from the unbeaten Benitez. The World Boxing Association champion is Pipino Cuevas.

"...everybody says he looks tremendous," said Benitez. "But this time he's fighting the champion."

As champion, the 21-year-old Benitez is getting $1.2 million, which is $200,000 more than the purse for the 23-year-old Leonard, who has earned almost $4 million in less than three years of pro fighting.

Inflation aside, Jack Dem-psey's biggest purse was $717,000 for his first bout with Gene Tunney in 1926. Joe Louis' biggest payday was $625,916 for his second fight with Billy Conn in 1946 and Rocky Marciano's top check was $328,374 against Archie Moore.

The Benitez-Leonard gold rush will be part of a championship double-header at Caesars Palace that includes Vito Antuofermo's middleweight title defense against Marvin Hagler. Those fights, plus the World Boxing Association light heavyweight title bout between champion Victor Galindez and Marvin Johnson in the New Orleans Superdome, will be nationally televised.

The telecast by ABC is scheduled for 5 p.m.-8 p.m. PST.

Hagler is even a stronger favorite than Leonard, being 4-1 to beat Antuofermo in the 26-year-old Italian's first defense of the undisputed championship he won by outpointing Hugo Corro last June 30 in Monte Carlo.

Leonard, the 23-year-old former Olympic champion from Palmer Park, Md., has scored 16 knockouts in winning 25 pro fights. "He's a sharp puncher," said Tony Chlaverini, who was stopped by Leonard in four rounds last June 24.

Benitez has scored 23 knockouts in posting a 37-0 record, but four of his five world title fights have gone the distance.

The Puerto Rican won the WBA super lightweight championship from Antonio "Kid Pambele" Cervantes on a decision in 1976 and defended it twice before being stripped of title recognition for failure to defend against Cervantes within a prescribed time. He won the WBC welterweight title by outpointing Carlos Palomino last Jan. 14 and defended it with a decision of Harold West on March 25.

ECU Women Face Duke

East Carolina's women's basketball team, riding the crest of a four-game winning streak, take their game to Durham Saturday afternoon for a 3 p.m. game with Duke University.

It will be the North Carolina Division I opener for the Pirates, who are unbeaten so far this year.

The Lady Pirates come into the game following an 86-54 rout of UNC-Wilmington Wednesday night, their second win on the Minges hardwood. Earlier they had beaten William & Mary in a home game, and downed St. John's and Manhattan on a New York City trip.

"This is a very important game to us," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We only have five Division I games this year, so we know we have to win at least three of them to get a good seeding for the state tournament. We play State and Carolina twice, but only one game with each of the Division I teams count."

Andruzzi felt that Wednesday night's game gave her some idea of what the Pirates need to work on for Duke. "We hurried things a little too much against Wilmington. We were pushing the ball up the floor too quickly, and not working our offense. We took some bad shots and made some bad plays. Then in the second half, we got ourselves together a little more and cut down on our mistakes."

"It was a good win for us, and I think our defense played well."

Andruzzi feels that Duke will be a tough opponent. The Blue Devils come into the game with a 1-1 record, having beaten Wake Forest and lost to Virginia in two Atlantic Coast Conference games.

"Barbara Krause, a 5-11 forward does a real good job for them," Andruzzi said. "They also have a new guard, Patti Thomas, who has played well, and Kim Matthews is a strong forward for them."

"I think we will be well-matched, and I look for it to be a defensive battle," Andruzzi said. "We have to work on taking our time more and setting up the offense to get our best shots, and in getting better offensive movement. We need to take our time and realize what we have to do."

The women return home next Friday to play host to James Madison University.

Win . . .

Strock was knocked out by a tackler, Thursday night. Strock couldn't find his receivers, and at the half, the Dolphins trailed 17-13.

"At halftime, we felt the whole season rode on the second half. I made the decision to give Bob a chance to win the game," Shula said.

"He and No. 39 (Csonka) were fantastic," Shula said.

After the second-half kickoff, Griese moved the Dolphins 78 yards on nine plays, capping the drive with a 38-yard scoring pass to Nat Moore. Then, as he did in the Super Bowl years of the early '70s, Griese used his precise passes sparingly, content to give the ball to Csonka on inexorable, time-consuming drives.

He hit eight of 10 passes for 101 yards, while Csonka ground out 88 yards and three 1-yard touchdown plunges.

"I was just happy to contribute to the victory," Griese said. "The overriding key thing is that we won a very big game that moves us closer to a division championship."

A Patriots' loss to the Jets at New York Dec. 9 or a Dolphins victory here over the Jets Dec. 15 will clinch the title for them.

Griese, as is his style, rarely displayed emotion this season as he was heavily criticized by fans and reporters. But as he walked through the tunnel to the post-game dressing room, and fans who two weeks ago booed him chanted "Gree-see, Gree-see," his face spread into an uncharacteristic ear-to-ear grin.

"We were all glad to see Bob have such a good game," said guard Larry Little, another Super Bowl holdover. "We all stuck together through the bad times, and we stick together in the good times."

Shula was quick to reveal: "Bob will be my starter at Detroit."

"I'd rather play against Strock than Griese any time," New England safety Tim Fox said. "Griese probably doesn't have the physical ability Strock does, but he's got such field awareness. He does a good job reading coverages, and he very rarely throws into coverage. He is just more effective than Strock. I think we had Strock confused."

Csonka's performance lifted his 1979 rushing total to 783 yards, eight yards better than what he managed over the last two full seasons with the Giants.

Martin A Manager Waiting For A Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Removed from limbo by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's decision not to fine or suspend him, Billy Martin emerges today as a manager in waiting, available for a franchise that might need some instant zing.

"I think the availability of Billy Martin will be too much to pass up," said Martin's attorney, Judge Ed Sapir. "No clubs have talked to him because they were waiting for the commissioner to act. But now, things can start cracking. My guess is that he'll be back managing next season."

Martin was fired by the New York Yankees last month after a hotel lobby altercation with a marshmallow salesman in Blooington, Minn. At that time, Kuhn launched an investigation into the affair and could have fined or suspended Martin. He decided to do neither, but warned the manager that any repetition of trouble would bring "stern disciplinary action."

Sapir said he was delighted with Kuhn's decision and said it vindicated Martin.

"George Steinbrenner was wrong and misled the public when he said he was firing Billy to save Billy because if this went to the baseball commissioner, he'd ban Billy from baseball, like he did Willie Mays," the attorney said. "I told George, 'We'll roll the dice and abide by the commissioner's findings,' but George said, 'No dice. Billy's fired.'"

'Defenseless' Spartans Open Season Tonight

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The defending NCAA basketball champions would appear to be somewhat defenseless this year.

"I suppose I should retire now," says Michigan State Coach Jud Heathcote jokingly in what must seem like a half-truth to some observers.

With Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Greg Kessler gone, Heathcote's once-high and mighty team is back down on earth and will be just another one of the boys in the Big Ten.

In fact, Michigan State — which opens its season tonight against Princeton in the Lapchick Tournament in New York — will probably have to take a back seat in perhaps the nation's strongest conference.

"The Big Ten is better than last year," Heathcote says of a league that produced both of the NCAA champion and the NIT winner (Indiana) in 1979. "We have great balance in our league, a number of really good teams, and it seems that two of them are head and shoulders above the rest of us: Indiana and Ohio State."

As for Michigan State specifically, Heathcote feels: "We'll have a decent club. We'll do the best we can with the personnel we have. We're not very big and that's liable to catch up to us in the meat grinder of this talented league. We didn't recruit any superstars, either."

The benefits of winning the NCAA championship, as Heathcote underscores, usually come the second year after a team wins, not the first. That's because by March the players have generally made up their minds where they want to go.

"Look at Kentucky — they won the NCAA title in 1978 and look at the recruiting year they had this season, one of the best ever," said Heathcote in reference to four fine players recruited by Joe Hall: Sam Bowie, Derrick Hord, Charles Hurt and Dirk Minniefield.

Michigan State will engage Princeton in the second game of an opening-night double-header in the Lapchick tourney. Host St. John's, ranked No. 16 in the nation will face Oral Roberts in the opener.

"They play tough defense, and what I call a 'team control offense,'" Heathcote says of Princeton. "They're very seldom out of a game."

In other games tonight involving the ranked teams, No. 2 Kentucky and No. 14 Texas A&M will play in the Great Alaskan Shootout Tournament; No. 3 Duke and No. 6 North Carolina will be in the Big Four Tourney; No. 8 UCLA faces Idaho State; No. 11 Purdue plays Colorado State; No. 13 Virginia takes on Johns Hopkins; No. 15 BYU meets Illinois; No. 17 Oregon State plays Eastern Washington and No. 19 Georgetown faces Bowie State.

In Saturday's games, it's No. 1 Indiana vs. Miami of Ohio; No. 4 Ohio State against Ohio; No. 5 Notre Dame playing Valparaiso; No. 7 LSU vs. Florida; No. 10 Louisville against South Alabama; No. 12 Syracuse vs. Cornell; No. 18 Marquette vs. Eastern Montana and No. 20 Kansas against Nevada-Reno. No. 9 DePaul opens Dec. 5 against Wisconsin.

Kings Beat Pistons Fitzsimmons: K.C. A Contender

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the Kansas City Kings, says he believes his team is ready to become a championship contender in the National Basketball Association.

"We've always been a good team, even when we were losing six straight earlier," Fitzsimmons said following the Kings' 105-95 victory over the Detroit Pistons Thursday night. Against the Pistons, Fitzsimmons said, "Our defense and our defensive rebounding were the deciding factors down the stretch."

"Our guys dived for the ball, played the defense and got the ball to the open man, especially when we had to. You can be assured of one thing: we'll be a factor in the divisional race and the playoffs."

Scott Wedman scored 22 points and Bill Robinson added 20 to lead the Kings. The victory was Kansas City's eighth in the last 10 games.

In the other NBA game Thursday night, the Cleveland Cavaliers trimmed the New York Knicks 117-115.

For the Pistons, languishing in the NBA's Central Division basement, the defeat was the fourth in a row and the eighth in 10 games. Bob McAdoo accounted for 32 points for Detroit and grabbed 14 rebounds.

The Pistons managed a 28-27 lead after the first quarter, in which McAdoo scored 14 points.

The Kings pulled in front 52-43 by halftime and led by as many as 14 points in the third quarter but Detroit — led by McAdoo, Eric Money and John Long — cut the gap to 92-89 with a little more than three minutes left in the game.

But a basket by Robinson and two free throws by Sam Lacey quickly restored the Kings to a seven-point lead. They were not seriously pressed the rest of the way.

Otis Birdsong chipped in with 19 points for the winners while Money and Bob Lanier each had 12 for the losers. Lanier made only one basket in the second half.

Detroit's interim Coach Richie Adubato second-guessed himself on his decision to go with his veteran players when the score reached 92-89.

"The rookies got us back into the game," Adubato said. "Maybe we should have played the kids all the way down to the finish but you feel if you go back to your starters in such a situation... and they're fresh off the bench, maybe they can put the game away for you. But Lanier, McAdoo and the rest were just too exhausted."

Cavaliers 117, Knicks 115
Cleveland squandered a nine-point lead in the closing 5:38 but beat New York when Randy Smith barely beat the final buzzer with a layup.

The Knicks went on a 15-4 spree to take a 115-113 lead with 1:09 left, but Fouts Walker tied it with a pair of free throws. Cleveland got the ball back when Mike Mitchell took the rebound of an off-balance shot by New York's Ray Williams and sent the ball to Smith for the winning points.

Bill Cartwright had 31 points for the Knicks, while Mitchell scored 27 to help the Cavaliers win their fifth game in the last seven.

ECU Track Coach Sees Good Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's indoor track team will open its season next weekend, traveling to Leigh seeking to put itself in the spotlight in at least three events.

Coach Bill Carson, despite having few numbers this year, is looking for what could be a good year, should the team avoid the injuries that have held them back in the past.

"Everyone is healthy now, and we've had a good fall," he said. "I hope we have a good year, but we're going to take it one meet at a time and just see what happens."

The Pirates will be without two performers in the early going, one of which will join the team in January, and the other of whom won't be with the Bucs until the outdoor season.

"Calvin (Alston) isn't eligible indoors this year, but will be outdoors. He's going to be running at Leigh, however, as an entry of the Americas Track Club. Anthony Fields, who won't be eligible to run with us until January, will be entered in the 60-yard dash, also for the Americas Club," Carson said.

The coach looks to have a strong indoor mile relay team, plus good strength in the 600-meters and the quarter mile. "Stan Curry, a junior college all-American, is a good bet for us in the 600, and could get some attention with his time next week."

"Our mile relay team will consist of Shawn Laney, Carlton Bell, Otis Melvin and Curry. We'll be up against some tough competition, but I think we can turn in a time that will get us invited to some other good meets," Carson added.

While the mile relay could be the strongest event, Carson feels that Curry in the 600, he has another strong event, while he has several class people running the quarter.

"Herman McIntyre is back in the triple jump and he could be high up on the list for us, too. Late in the season, Otis and Laney could be strong." The former would see action in the quarter and the latter in the 600.

Daryl McCoy is a top performer in the long jump, and Russell Parker, who went 7-1 last year, returns in the high jump. Danny Scott is another who could do well in the quarter or 600 meter.

Bill Miller will be back in the 1,500 meters, but is currently running road races, and Carson said he would stick with that until the New Year.

"We've got a walk-on who has looked good too in the quarter, Charlie Watkins. Tim Chepas, who did a 9.6 (100) and 21.1 (220) in high school will be a help later on, and I think he'll make a good 200-meter runner. Warren Brookins is another quarter-mile who is looking good, but is just coming off an injury."

It all adds up to another shot at a fine season for the Pirates—if they stay healthy.

LSU Athletic Club Names Rein As Top Choice

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The LSU Athletic Club, a New Orleans booster organization, said today that Bo Rein of North Carolina State had been picked to succeed Louisiana State University football coach Charlie McClendon.

There was no immediate confirmation from LSU, but a spokesman at N.C. State said Rein had submitted his resignation as the Wolfpack's head football coach and was in Baton Rouge.

Members of the LSU Board of Supervisors went into executive session to discuss a recommendation on the school's new football coach. No name was mentioned by Athletic Director Paul Dietzel before the committee retired.

Dietzel, however, said the new coach had been at his home since Wednesday. In Raleigh Ed Seaman, sports information director at N.C. State, said a screening committee would be formed to start hunting for a new Wolfpack coach.

Members of the LSU Athletic Club telephoned New Orleans radio station WSMB while the committee was meeting with Dietzel.

Woffarth men's tennis coach and Mike Cingiser women's tennis coach.

ALBANY STATE—Announced the resignation of Whitney Van Cleave, head football coach.

DUKE UNIVERSITY—Announced the resignation of Dick Kemp, offensive coordinator. Named Cliff Yoshida, defensive coordinator.

Bowl Confusion Will Clear After Saturday

By The Associated Press

The confusion about which teams will get the remaining bowl berths will be cleared Saturday, the final day of a regular college football season that began Sept. 1.

Both spots in the Sugar Bowl hinge on the outcome of the game between top-ranked and undefeated Alabama and Auburn, and two games in the Southwest Conference, Texas at Texas A&M and Houston versus Rice.

Those SWC games also will determine whether Arkansas, which has completed its season, or Houston will be the host team for the Cotton Bowl.

"We think we've got a heck of a chance," said Auburn Coach Doug Barefield as his Tigers prepared for their trip to Birmingham, and an opportunity to spoil Alabama's perfect record, its bid for another Southeastern Conference championship and the trip to the Sugar Bowl.

The Earth Stove

Check these facts before you buy any other stove!

- The Earth Stove burns 1/3 the fuel of many stoves because pre-heating draft mantle promotes efficient and complete combustion like solid fuel power plants. Super-heated air prevents "cooling" of the unburnt manual hole drafts too even large chunks burn slowly and completely—eliminates frequent ash removal.
- Even temperatures—thermostatic draft automatically maintains temperature you select. Levels out uneven cycle of wood combustion (Manual drafts cannot do this). Home temperatures more even than furnace heat.
- Burns 14 hours on one wood load
- Converts to open fire instantly
- Cook top just set thermostat to cooking heat desired—ideal for "Cook Pot" style cookery
- Wood gases not wasted—Secondary drafts introduce oxygen above primary fire zone to burn volatile gases such as methanol, pyrogenous acid, etc.
- Air tight—Prevents heat loss up chimney

The Earth Stove makes use of modern technology to improve the great tradition of Wood Heat.

Poll Shows Majority Ready For U.S. Military Reaction

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans, outraged that fellow citizens are held hostage in Iran, fear the crisis could lead to war, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says. Nevertheless, the public would support military action if the hostages were harmed or put on trial.

The poll, taken Tuesday and Wednesday, found extraordinarily strong public feelings tempered by the awareness of the grave dangers posed by the crisis. Here are some of the survey's major points:

—Four out of five Americans said they are personally angry about the taking of Americans as hostages in Iran.

—The public is frankly fearful of war. The number of Americans who say war is "very likely" has tripled since last year.

—Nevertheless, the poll found that, if the hostages are harmed or put on trial, Americans decisively favor a U.S. military strike against Iran.

—On the other hand, if the hostages are released unharmed, the public overwhelmingly opposes any U.S. military retaliation against the Moslem nation.

—By almost three to one, the public agrees that the U.S. government should not return the deposed Shah to Iran in return for the hostages.

—And more than seven out of 10 say President Carter is doing all he can to get the hostages freed.

The 50 Americans have been held hostage by Iranian militants for 27 days in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The militants have threatened to kill the hostages if the U.S. attempts to rescue them by force. They have also threatened to put the hostages on trial for espionage.

The seizure of the embassy and the Americans there, coupled with the threats against the hostages, have made a deep impression on Americans. Ninety-eight percent of the public said they had heard or read of the hostage situation—a very high level of public awareness.

Seventy-nine percent of those who said they knew about the crisis were "personally angered" by the taking of hostages. Sixteen percent said they were not angry. Three percent of the 1,381 adults interviewed across the country by telephone were not sure.

Talk of U.S. military action against Iran left Americans worried but determined.

Thirty-two percent of those interviewed said they thought a war involving the United States was "very likely" within the next three years.

One year ago, only 10 percent of the public foresaw a war.

German Taught To Police Dogs

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP) — Police dogs Rocky and Caesar are brushing up on their German to help confuse criminals they might confront.

The Florence Police Department's two German shepherds are learning to sitz, foos and blieb — and to attack on a secret command — to enhance their ability to intimidate foes.

"We need every edge we can get," Rocky's handler, Patrolman Dennis Collins, said of the training. "It has a psychological effect on a criminal because chances are they don't know what you're saying."

Sitz means sit, foos is heel and blieb is the command to stay.

But what if the criminal speaks German?
"It wouldn't matter if that person told the dog to do something. They listen to our voice and our commands only," Collins said.

Tanning Booth Hazards Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is worried that people who don't realize the potential dangers of getting a quick tan will burn themselves in commercial tanning booths springing up around the country.

The FDA has warned operators of an estimated 1,000 booths that the government "is prepared to take regulatory action" unless the manufacturers install safeguards, such as handrails and shields around sunlamps. Most of the booths are in free-standing franchise operations, but some are in beauty parlors and barber shops. Customers seeking a year-round tan usually sign up for a series of brief visits costing about $2 each.

By The Associated Press
Cold weather will remain over North Carolina through the weekend.

Winds circulating around a large storm over eastern Canada will maintain the northwest winds. The air is moving from western Canada through the north-central U.S. before it arrives in North Carolina. Temperatures will not change much until next week.

mountains accumulated between one and two inches during the afternoon Thursday. Many highways were reported slick. Although snow flurries will continue most of today in the northwest mountains, little or no accumulation is expected. A few slick spots may remain on the highways.

Afternoon temperatures Thursday ranged from the 30s in the mountains to the 40s in the Piedmont and 50 along the coast. However, at Boone the high was only 23 while Cherry Point did reach 57. Temperatures this morning ranged from the teens in the mountains to the 30s along the beach areas.

Lows tonight and Saturday night will be similar to those of this morning.

Antarctic Wreckage Visited

EDITOR'S NOTE — Paul Cavanagh, a New Zealand journalist, was among a team of officials and crash investigators who reached the site of the Air New Zealand DC-10 which crashed into an Antarctic volcano Wednesday, killing all 257 persons aboard. Here is his pool dispatch.

By PAUL CAVANAGH
MOUNT EREBUS: Antarctica (AP) — Smoke from Antarctica's only active volcano meanders slowly skyward. A few hundred yards away, one of the few recognizable pieces of wreckage from an Air New Zealand DC-10 offers mute testimony to one of aviation history's worst disasters.

This is the scene on the slopes of 12,400-foot Mount Erebus, where the jetliner crashed and exploded Wednesday on a sightseeing trip, killing all 257 persons aboard, including 21 Americans.

Rescue workers, mountaineers and Air New Zealand officials today began the task of recovering and identifying bodies and establishing the cause of the crash.

So searing was the heat of the explosion that surrounding snow has been glazed solid. At the time of the crash the aircraft was estimated to have still had two-thirds of its fuel load unused.

Part of the aircraft's tail, a couple of wheels, a fuselage section containing only four or five windows, part of a wing and an intact hot food container are the only substantial pieces among the blackened remains of the giant aircraft.

At the 2,000-foot mark on the steep snow-swept northern slopes of the mountain, a vertical black stripe marks clearly the spot where the DC-10 came to a fiery end.

Early estimates are that only between 50 and 70 bodies will be recoverable. The fiery blast was so intense that some bodies have been located hundreds of yards away from the main wreckage.

Some of these have clothing intact — an indication that death came from the blast of the explosion rather than from the fire itself.

A team from New Zealand's Scott Base, 25 miles away, has set up a 20-man camp at the crash site. A key to the cause of the crash will be the recovery of the plane's "black box" flight recorder.

The area has been roped, and dangerous crevasses marked. The northern slope of Erebus is pockmarked with crevasses.

According to Scott Base personnel, the three previous DC-10 sightseeing flights to the Scott Base area this season, all came in at varying heights.

The first was not seen from the ground because of low clouds; the second flew past so high that a telephoto lens was required to capture it on film, while the third swept much lower over the New Zealand and American bases.

The fourth flight never got as far as Scott Base. It was due at 1.30 p.m. Wednesday and the alert was raised shortly after 2 p.m. when the aircraft had not been sighted and when radio calls to the plane, which had been acknowledged on its approach to Ross Island, went unanswered.

A Briefing On New Generation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has scheduled a briefing today for 600 state news organizations to explain his controversial "New Generation" program.

Meanwhile, gubernatorial candidate Bob Scott called on the people of the state to reject the program until Hunt provides an adequate explanation.

Hunt's briefing for editors and news directors was scheduled, he said, to counter misinformation about the program, passed by the 1979 General Assembly at Hunt's urging.

He has described it as a commitment to better health care for children. But critics, including some fundamentalist church leaders, contend the measure would shift the primary responsibility for raising children from the family to the state.

Scott, in a speech in Morganton Thursday, said, "Until the governor clarifies what is going on much better than he has and particularly until he clearly establishes the parents as ultimate decision maker on what happens to the child, then his New Generation theory should be rejected."

"For instance, no one has yet said how much it is going to cost the taxpayers. Will property owners in the counties have to pay the costs of the proposed health homes for children through property taxes? Will state tax money be used? ..."

Scott asked.

On parents' participation, Scott said, "Do they have any say about what happens?"

The New Generation program establishes a statewide committee to coordinate health care for young children and encourages county commissioners to coordinate local children's services.

Hunt, at his weekly news conference Thursday, said, "A fairly small number of people have had some information provided to them that was incorrect ... I think in time we'll get a reasonably good consensus on this."

Lights Tell Carl's Story

BLUE CREEK, Ohio (AP) — For Carl Rudd, Christmas in Dayton was always the brightest of holidays. But with 10 children and 25,000 Christmas lights, he needed a bigger place, so he moved to the country.

"This year, the display is going to be the biggest in the world," said Rudd, 50, who manages a campground in Lebanon.

Last November, he bought the huge Christmas display from the city of Loveland to adorn his farm between Portsmouth and West Union.

Last year, an estimated 100,000 people visited Rudd's rural display which, now with 40,000 light bulbs, lights up the country sky.

Rudd covered the hills with shepherd figures. There are four nativity scenes and a replica of Bethlehem. Many of the figures move. Some have sound. There is plenty of music.

"We want to tell the real story of Christ," he said.

There is a collection box, but visitors are not asked to contribute.

"I'll never charge nothin' as long as I'm alive," he said.

CHARGED — Felony charges of child stealing have been filed against John Phillips, a star of the 1960s group, The Mamas and Pappas. Santa Ana, Calif. authorities said the charges were filed after he failed to return his 8-year-old son to the boy's guardian. (AP Laserphoto)

TOMMY FORREST IS ONE OF THOSE LUCKY PERSONS WHO MANAGED TO TAKE A PART-TIME HOBBY AND TURN IT INTO A FULL-TIME CAREER.

It has been said that people who enjoy doing their jobs do them well. Tommy, photographer for THE DAILY REFLECTOR, obviously enjoys his job. He has been involved with photography for eighteen years, fifteen of them with THE DAILY REFLECTOR.

Whether it is taking pictures of a fire, a traffic accident, athletic games or a human interest feature, Tommy puts all he has into his pictures. And that talent has brought him six North Carolina Press Association awards.

Originally from Greenville, Tommy now lives in Winterville where he is frequently called in the middle of the night to take pictures because news happens 24 hours a day. A not-too-pleasant aspect of the job, but one that needs to be done. And you can bet on Tommy Forrest being there to keep you informed on the things that matter the most to you right here at home.

Now that you've met Tommy, why not make it a point to see his pictures regularly in THE DAILY REFLECTOR. Along with all the news, sports, advertised specials and other features that have been a part of your local newspaper for almost a century.

The bidding:

1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ 4 ♠
Pass Pass Dble. Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

Dallas insurance executive Malcolm Brachman, playing in his first world team championship in the Bermuda Bowl tournament held in Rio de Janeiro in October, received a taste of world-class defense rather quickly. This hand is from the first-round match between the United States and the Far East.

East's jump to three hearts was a limit raise and, therefore, not forcing. Brachman, sitting South, now had to make a difficult bid. Since hands with a six-card major and a five-card side suit usually play very well, we are inclined to applaud Brachman's decision to bid four spades, even though this was not the optimum contract.

Unfortunately, he did not get much of a chance to demonstrate his skill at dummy play. West was C.H. Kuo, and he got the defense off to a flying start by under-leading his ace of hearts. When the queen of hearts won the trick, East, Patrick Huang, realized that his partner had underled the ace—East-West were playing five-card major suit opening bids. Since West could have led a lower heart, he presumed that the nine was a suit preference signal, asking for the higher-ranking side suit—diamonds.

Accordingly, Huang shifted to the two of diamonds—again a suit preference signal, showing an entry in clubs. Kuo ruffed and dutifully returned a low club away from his ace to his partner's queen, and a second diamond ruff meant down one.

Despite the deadly defense, the United States gained considerably on the board. In the other room, Billy Eisenberg and Eddie Kantar, for the United States, reached five hearts and were doubled. That contract is off three tricks in the spade suit, but there is no way for the defenders to collect their tricks. After the ace of spades lead and a diamond shift, declarer ruffed, drew trumps and took eleven tricks by discarding two spades from dummy on the good clubs, then ruffing one of the spade losers on the table.

Leaf Growers Vote Dec. 18

WASHINGTON — The 1980 flue-cured tobacco basic national marketing quota will be 1,095 million pounds, the same as for the 1979 crop, said Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Fitzgerald also announced flue-cured tobacco growers will vote Dec. 18 in a referendum conducted by the Department to determine whether acreage-pounds marketing quotas and price support will continue in effect for the next three crops of this tobacco. Quotas and price support will be in effect for the 1980 flue-cured crop if two-thirds or more vote "yes."

Legislation provides for a flue-cured tobacco referendum within 30 days after the quota determinations in the last year of each three-year period for which marketing quotas are in effect. In a referendum held in 1976, 98.6 percent of the 139,982 flue-cured tobacco growers voting favored marketing quotas for the 1977, 1978, and 1979 crops.

The national marketing quota is based on an estimated domestic use and exports of flue-cured tobacco during the marketing year July 1, 1980, through June 30, 1981, with a possible adjustment to maintain supplies, including reserves, at desired levels.

Fitzgerald said that the national acreage allotment will be set at 590,615 acres. Thus, individual farm acreage allotments and pounds quotas will be the same as the 1979 level except for undermarketings or overmarketings of 1979 farm quotas. It is expected that undermarketings will exceed overmarketings by 85 million pounds, making the 1980 effective quota about 1,180 million pounds, 115 million pounds above the 1979 effective quota.

Estimated marketings resulting for the 1980 quota are expected to be 1,120 million pounds, up 143 million from the 1979 crop.

Marines Train In Desert

DESERT TRAINING — Marines from a landing team of the 2nd Marine Division go through a live ammo exercise earlier this week in the Mojave Desert near 29 Palms, California. The area has been used by the marines for desert training since soon after the oil crisis of 1974. Another landing team from the division which trained here last year is with the American naval force in the Indian Ocean, in response to the Iranian crisis. (AP Laserphoto)

BACKING HIS SENTIMENTS — Marine riflemen engage in a live-fire exercise in their Mojave Desert training area. The area has been used to train marines in desert war since immediately following the 1974 oil crisis. Although 32 "wars" have been fought here with the enemy identified as the Soviets, the "Iran 79" in the dust of this marine's flak jacket leaves no doubt as to the potential enemy that occupies their minds. (AP Laserphoto)

WRITING IN THE SKY — A jet fighter streaks through the sky leaving a smoke screen behind over the Mojave Desert as tanks of the 2nd Marine Division landing force take up positions in a live firing exercise concluded this week. Because of its resemblance to Mideast terrain, the area has been used for desert warfare training since 1975. (AP Laserphoto)

TWENTY-NINE PALMS, Calif. (AP) — The Mojave Desert is thousands of miles from the coast of Iran in the Indian Ocean where U.S. Marines are now cruising. But this is where they trained.

Marines first came to this desolate wasteland to learn about fighting in the desert. Since then, 32 "wars" have been waged here. And although this might be the "Middle East," the "enemy" has always been the "Soviets."

Nervous In Emirates

TROUBLE ON THE GULF — Map locates the United Arab Emirates on the Persian Gulf, where the conservative ruling sheiks are becoming increasingly worried that Iran's instability may spill across the gulf. (AP Laserphoto)

By ELIAS ANTAR
Associated Press Writer
ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The ruling sheiks of the United Arab Emirates welcomed Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's rise to power in Iran, but now they are increasingly worried that his revolution will cause them trouble, say political sources here.

The Emirates applauded Khomeini's takeover in February because he was an Islamic leader, in contrast to the shah, who promoted secularism. But now the Emirates' president, Zayed Bin Sultan Al Nahyan, and the other sheiks fear they will become the targets of disorders incited by Iran, the sources said.

Iranian broadcasts in Arabic constantly call on Moslems to rise up against "oppressors of the people." The sheiks believe Khomeini's revolutionary regime is becoming more insecure and therefore prone to stirring up trouble on the Arab side of the Persian Gulf as a means of muting discontent at home, the sources said.

The seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was particularly disturbing to them, said one source close to the center of authority here.

"They totally disapprove of this kind of thing no matter what the excuse," said the source, who declined use of his name.

The United Arab Emirates, occupying a southeastern corner of the Arabian Peninsula, is a loose federation of seven sheikdoms formed in 1971 after Britain withdrew its protection and left the region. The federation supplies the United States with 3.6 per cent of its oil imports.

The federation's native Arab inhabitants are preponderantly Sunni Moslems while Khomeini and most of the Iranians are non-Arab Persians and members of the Shiite branch of Islam. But in the course of the oil boom, the Emirates let in hundreds of thousands of Asians and other Arabs who now make up the majority of the population of 800,000 people.

Such a diversity of loyalties calls for vigilance, one source here said. When an Iranian religious leader arrived in the emirate of Dubai on a private visit some months ago, the federal authorities here in Abu Dhabi detained him for a short period and then deported him.

Western diplomatic sources say the federation and its Arab neighbors are now convinced of the need for more coordination on security matters. The sheiks see the security of the Persian Gulf as primarily the security of their own regimes.

The Emirates closely follow the political and oil policies of neighboring Saudi Arabia and maintain close ties with other Arab gulf states. Their military strength is small, and the sheiks believe the major deterrent against trouble from outside is their longstanding policy of maintaining good relations with as broad a spectrum of countries as possible. The sources said although the Emirates are pro-Western, they do not want a U.S. military presence in the gulf because they fear it would limit their own freedom of action.

"The rulers feel that Saudi Arabia, their own moderate position on most issues, and their money are reliable ramparts against most external threats," said one source.

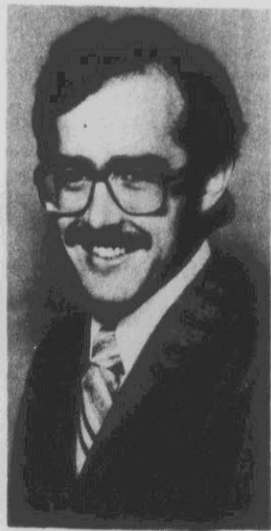

But there are some stirrings in the local population, several sources said. With a younger, more educated generation building up, there have been calls for a more representative form of government.

Executive power now rests in a Supreme Council made up of the seven rulers headed by Zayed. A federal National Assembly whose 40 members are appointed by the rulers can advise but has no legislative power. It is headed by Taryam Omran, who observers here say is one of the leading exponents of change.

"Because of education, because of more communication with the rest of the world, young people are demanding more representation, more changes," said Omran in an interview. "I hope the government satisfies this, because it would be a factor for stability here and therefore in the entire region."

Western diplomatic sources here say such demands are a growing element in local politics and Zayed recognizes this. "But it is not a burning issue as it was in Iran against the shah," one senior source said. "The army has no problem maintaining internal security," said one independent source. "But if ever there were trouble from abroad, the most it could do would be hold the fort for a while until outside help arrived."
