Ed Warren Elected Pitt Commission's Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Board of County Commissioners, in the annual reorganization today, elected Ed N. Warren as chairman for the coming year.

Warren, who served as vice-chairman for the past year, replaced R. L. (Bob) Martin. Bruce Strickland was named vice-chairman to replace Warren.

Following his election, Warren indicated he would call a meeting of the board, "to set our goals and objectives for the coming year," within the next few days.

In addition to the election of officers, the board re-appointed W. W. Speight as county attorney, Reginald Gray as county manager, and Margaret Roberts as county finance officer and clerk to the board, and approved bonds for various county officials and employees.

Commissioners also adopted resolutions of appreciation and commendation for commissioner B. Alton Gardner and Speight for their service to the county.

Gardner has been a member of the board for the past 25 years, and has missed only two commission meetings during that time.

Speight was appointed county attorney in 1950 and has served longer than any county attorney in the state. Commissioners, in other business this morning, voted to exercise an option to extend a lease for office space occupied by the Department of Social Services for 90 days, due to the fact that the new county office building will not be ready for occupancy by January 1.

The social services agency has occupied leased office space for the past year because the county-owned building on Johnston Street in which it was housed was considered unsafe. The agency will occupy space on the first floor and in the basement of the new county office facility when renovation work on the old hospital building is completed.

Contractors for the renovation work on the old hospital facility have indicated work on the building should be completed within 30 to 45 days.

However, Cameron Dudley, architect for the project told the board this morning that, "I would say three months."

According to Dudley, "the general contractor is not performing. What's going to happen...I don't know."

Commissioners agreed to meet with Dudley within a few days to determine what course of action to follow as far as the renovation work is concerned.

Pitt Memorial Hospital director Jack Richardson told commissioners that ground-breaking ceremonies for the new bed tower at the hospital will be held tomorrow.

Richardson noted that at present there are 193 physicians on the hospital's active staff, as compared with 125 a year ago, and 56 physicians on the house staff, as compared with 32 at the same time in 1978. He also noted that the number of registered nurses at Pitt Memorial has increased from 202 a year ago to 259 at the present.

In other business, the board approved final plats for Edwards Acres (Section 1), Foxboro, and Stantonsburg Estates (Section 1) subdivisions.

Board members also welcomed Sen. Willis P. Whichard of Durham, who visited the meeting this morning. Whichard's parents, the late Willis G. Whichard and Beulah Padgett Whichard, were Pitt County natives.

and William Vandenheuvel, deputy U.N. ambassador is at right. At Sunday's session, all 13 speakers condemned the hostage-taking as had 15 speakers at a Saturday night session. Iran continued to boycott the session, saying the United Nations is a tool of the United States. (AP Laserphoto)

Moving Of Shah Inspires More Threats From Iran

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The shah's move to Texas brought new threats to put the American hostages on trial as Iranians voted in a referendum to approve Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's new Islamic constitution.

Tehran Radio announced the Revolutionary Council has set up a center for national mobilization to carry out Khomeini's orders to create a people's army ready for battle against America.

The government radio also said Iran will ask the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to abandon the dollar as the currency for the international oil trade medium of payment and instead use a "basket" of strong currencies.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said the shah's flight Sunday from a New York hospital to an Air Force base outside San Antonio was part of "a plot against our revolution. If the United States decides to continue the crisis...the trial of the spies here will begin."

"If the shah leaves the United States for another country, we will try the hostages," said a spokesman for the students holding the 50 Americans who on Sunday began their fifth week of captivity in the U.S. Embassy.

Another of the militants said the shah's move from New York to Texas was "another trick taken by the CIA to protect the shah. But everyone in the world knows he cannot be protected against the will of God and the will of the people."

The embassy occupiers also said that one of the hostages had confessed to being a CIA spy, and that Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen and two senior aides being held separately at the Foreign Ministry were "proved to be" spies and must be kept and guarded carefully.

Laingen and his aides happened to be at the Foreign Ministry when the students occupied the embassy on Nov. 4 and demanded that the U.S. government return Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial. Ghotbzadeh said last week that the three diplomats could leave the country if they could get to the airport safely, but he reversed this after the students at the embassy complained. The shah arrived in the United States from Mexico Oct. 22. He underwent treatment for cancer and gall stones in New York and is to recuperate for an indefinite period in Texas.

Egypt has offered the shah asylum, and Egyptian officials said they believed the deposed monarch was likely to remain in the United States for several more weeks.

Khomeini's forces overthrew the shah in February, and in a referendum in the spring more than 90 percent of the electorate approved

Khomeini's plan to set up an Islamic republic. Today and Sunday, the voters completed the change from the monarchy by voting on a constitution making Iran a theocratic state with Khomeini as the nation's leader for life.

Although overwhelming approval was expected in the twoday vote, middle-of-the-road and leftist political parties boycotted the referendum because the 78-year-old Khomeini would become supreme political leader without the electoral approval of the people.

Backlash To Iran Seen Gaining Momentum In Many Parts Of U.S.

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer

As Tulsa, Okla., residents pondered Iranian allegations that a former classmate held hostage in Tehran is a CIA agent, a New Jersey congressman urged the United States to use food as a weapon in resolving the four-week-old crisis.

Meanwhile, two Iranian students in Chicago were released on $35 bail after their arrest on disorderly conduct charges following a disturbance at O'Hare International Airport.

Airport police said the Iranians were surrounded by Americans apparently angered at photos and leaflets allegedly displaying victims of the now-deposed shah. The Iranians did not have permits to distribute literature, said Sgt. Karl Mueller.

Hostilities between Americans and Iranians in the United States began Nov. 4 when militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, taking Americans hostage. Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has demanded the return of the shah, who is receiving medical treatment in the United States, and the militants holding the embassy contend two of their hostages have said they are agents of the Central Intelligence Agency.

"I can't really fathom Bill being in the cloak and dagger set," said one former classmate of William J. Daugherty, one of the hostages alleged to be a CIA agent.

"I won't say it's not possible, but it doesn't fit with my recollection of him," said Bruce Paul Dougherty of Tulsa, where Daugherty attended school. Members of the hostage's family have refused to talk to reporters.

In New Jersey, some 125 Cuban-Americans demonstrated in support of the United States while Rep. Robert Roe, D-N.J., urged an embargo on U.S. food shipments to Iran.

"If the Ayatollah thinks he is so tough, let him eat oil," Roe said Sunday. "Our food stocks may be on their way to feeding the very people who are illegally holding American citizens in our own embassy. That is an outrage that must not be tolerated."

In other developments: —About 225 people wearing white armbands marched through Columbia, S.C., Sunday to raise flags for the hostages.

—One person was charged with carrying a concealed weapon as members of the African People's Socialist Party demonstrated in support of Iran in Gainesville, Fla. Police said about 25 party members traded insults with about 250 bystanders, but there were no injuries.

—Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., blamed U.S. officials for ignoring political problems in Iran as long as precious oil flowed. He warned that unless Americans are willing to sacrifice fuel consumption, the United States can expect continued embarrassments in the Middle East.

Retrieved Two Bodies Lacking Heads, Hands

NEW YORK (AP) — Fireman James Rogers carried one of the burned bodies from a Manhattan motel room and was preparing to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when he noticed the body had no head.

"I'm used to seeing charred bodies, but this was the worst experience I've ever had in 12 years of firefighting," Rogers said Sunday after the discovery of the headless, handless corpses of two women, both believed to be in their late teens or early 20s.

Police said the lower portions of the women's torsos were doused with a flammable liquid and set afire before the killer fled, apparently taking the heads and hands with him.

Detective Alvin Cumberbatch said the killer may have taken the heads and hands to prevent identification of the victims.

"Without fingerprints to make the identifications, the last resort is usually dental records, but we don't have those either," he said. He said autopsy reports may reveal scars or other identifying marks, but "it's going to be rough."

According to officials, the hands and heads were severed with surgical skill, perhaps by a scalpel. The exact cause of death was not determined immediately.

Detectives said the $54-a-day room at the Travel Inn motel on the West Side had been rented since Thursday by a man who was "probably using an alias." They would not release the man's name or give a description.

Two sets of fashionable jeans, blouses and platform shoes were found piled neatly in the bathtub of the room and a fur coat was lying on one of the burning beds.

Fire fighters were called when smoke was reported by motel employees. Rogers said he first thought the bodies he carried to the hallway were mannequins.

"I hope I never see anything like it again," Rogers said.

Supreme Court Silent On Appeal Protecting 'Confidential Source'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to free an Albuquerque, N.M., newspaper from giving the names of confidential sources to a man who is suing the paper for libel.

The justices, without comment, turned down an appeal filed by the publishers of the Albuquerque Journal, whose secret news sources were jeopardized by state court orders, and the Albuquerque Tribune.

Both papers were sued for libel in 1975 by William Marchiondo, a prominent Albuquerque lawyer.

Marchiondo's suit, which seeks more than $8 million in damages, alleged that one or both of the newspapers published four libelous items.

—On Nov. 3, 1974, the Journal ran an editorial about the state's gubernatorial election. About one candidate, the editorial said, "...We question his continued association with Charlie Davis and Bill Marchiondo, prominent Democrats adept at maneuvering in the public arena. ...As a criminal lawyer, Marchiondo thrives by having friends in key places."

—On Oct. 27, 1974, the Journal published a paid political advertisement on the state's gubernatorial election submitted by the New Mexico Republican Party. The ad said Democratic candidate "Jerry Apodaca would be the kind of governor who would appoint Billy Marchiondo as chairman of the New Mexico Racing Commission. That's why we say he's the man nobody can afford."

The Tribune published the same ad shortly thereafter.

—On Dec. 26, 1974, the Journal commented on a state court appointment by stating, "The political implications of McBride's appointment bother us, as does his having received financial support in at least one past election from well-known defense attorney, William Marchiondo."

—On March 26, 1977, the Journal carried an article by the Investigative Reporters and Editors group. The headline said "Organized Crime Showing Interest in New Mexico" and a photograph of Marchiondo appeared below it.

Marchiondo's suit, still in the pretrial "discovery" stage, was first filed in 1975 and then amended last year to include charges of libel stemming from the latest item.

Lawyers for Marchiondo won trial court permission to demand all sources of information for any article, even those not alleged to be libelous, ever carried by either paper about Marchiondo.

In addition, the court ordered Journal reporter William Hume to surrender to Marchiondo's lawyers all documents pertaining to Marchiondo which he had obtained in the past five years.

Lawyers for Hume and his newspaper said compliance with that request would result in disclosure of confidential sources' names, but last Jan. 15 the trial judge ordered that the request be met.

Medical Milestone

Twelve years ago today, a team of surgeons in Cape Town, South Africa, astonished the world by performing the first human heart transplant. On December 3, 1967, doctors replaced Louis Washkansky's damaged heart with the healthy heart of Denise Ann Darvall, a young woman who had died after an auto accident. Washkansky lived with his new heart for 18 days, before he died of a lung infection. Other transplants soon followed. One transplant patient, Mrs. Betty Anick of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, lived more than eight years after receiving a new heart in October, 1968.

DO YOU KNOW — What South African surgeon directed the first successful heart transplant operation?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Mark Twain's real name was Samuel Langhorne Clemens.

Energy Tax Credits To Public Still Available

The Energy Tax Act of 1978 provides for federal income tax credit for insulation and other expenditures that reduce energy consumption in the home.

Stephen R. Sutter, extension farm business specialist at North Carolina State University, said that the credit applies to the following:

— Insulation for ceilings, walls, floors, roofs and water heaters.

— Exterior storm doors and windows.

— Weather stripping or caulking of exterior doors and windows.

— A more energy efficient replacement furnace burner.

— Devices for modifying flue openings to increase energy efficiency.

— A mechanical or electrical furnace ignition system to replace a gas pilot light.

— Energy usage display meters.

— An automatic energy-saving setback thermostat.

Certain items do not apply for the credit, Sutter said. These include drapes, carpeting, wood paneling, heat pumps, wood stoves, exterior siding, fireplace, and glass fireplace enclosures.

The original use of the insulation and other energy-saving components must begin with the taxpayer and be expected to have a useful life of at least three years.

The credit is 15 percent of the first $2,000 of qualified expenses not to exceed $300. The credit is available on and after April 20, 1977 with total credit from that date claimed on the 1978 return.

Construction of the residence must have been completed before April 20, 1977. The residential energy credit is available until Jan. 1, 1986, and is claimed on Federal Form 5695.

The Energy Tax Act also provides for a nonrefundable credit for certain solar and wind energy equipment expenditures on the taxpayer's principal residence.

The credit is equal to 30 percent of the first $2,000 and 20 percent of the next $8,000 of qualified expenditures for a $2,200 maximum credit.

The credit is available until 1986, and any credit in excess of income tax liability may be carried over until used up or through taxable years ending before Jan. 1, 1988. The qualifying equipment must have a useful life of at least five years.

The renewable energy equipment credit is also claimed on Federal Form 5695.

Internal Revenue Service Publication 903, "Energy Credits for Individuals," gives additional information.

A North Carolina income tax credit, Sutter said, is allowed for the construction or installation of a solar heating, cooling or hot water system in a building owned by the taxpayer and located in the state. The credit is limited to 25 percent of the cost, but may not exceed $1,000 per building.

Credit in excess of the year's North Carolina income tax liability may be carried forward three years. The energy credit is claimed on N. C. Form D-400 Schedule A.

Soybean growers are enjoying the prospects of one of the best years for soybeans in recent times. Soybeans appear to be in very good shape in both yield and quality. Many growers have an optimistic outlook about this year's harvest since soybean prices have remained very strong through the fall.

The national soybean crop estimate for November was 23 million bushels above last month. This large crop points to a sharp rise in 1980 soybean stocks, despite record demand levels abroad, according to market analysts. Current projections indicate carryover next fall to reach 400 million bushels versus 173 million this year. Larger stocks will add pressure on prices later in the season. However, in the weeks ahead, prices will tend to be higher due to strong world demand and limited old-crop Brazilian supplies. Market economists at North Carolina State University suggest that soybean acreages in the Southern Hemisphere countries is expected to be up about ten percent in 1980-81.

Soybean growers in Pitt County are invited to enter the 1979 Soybean Production Contest. Three acres is the minimum acreage that can be entered and must be measured by a member of the Pitt County Extension office. Growers with good fields of soybeans are urged to enter by contacting the extension office, 758-1196.

Interest in doublecropping soybeans with small grains has expanded in eastern North Carolina since wheat prices have exceeded $4 per bushel. Doublecropping means that wheat or other small grains can be planted in the fall, harvested in the spring of next year, and soybeans planted after the grain harvest. Many growers have been interested in planting small grains with the recent rise in prices. As a result, many growers have had a hard time finding a source for wheat seed.

The business of growing wheat seed for planting rather than food use is detailed and certain regulations must be followed. The Extension office is planning an informal meeting for those interested in growing certified wheat seed. Dr. Larry Sullivan will be on hand at the meeting to talk with interested farmers. For the date and time of the meeting, persons should call the office, 758-1196.

Labor Secretary Says Aliens Are Taking Jobs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall says illegal aliens are taking jobs from millions of Americans and without these imported workers unemployment in the United States could be reduced to less than 4 percent.

Marshall said he does not favor mass deportations, but warned that those who say the undocumented aliens benefit the United States may be "sowing the seeds of a bitter civil rights struggle."

In an interview published Sunday in the Los Angeles Times, the labor secretary conservatively estimated the number of illegal workers in the United States at 4 million. He took issue with arguments that illegal workers are helpful to the economy because they take jobs U.S. citizens or legal aliens will not perform.

"It is false to say American workers cannot be found for all of the jobs filled by undocumented workers," Marshall said. "The truth is that there are millions of American workers in all of these low-paying occupations already."

"The job market in which they (undocumented workers) compete is highly competitive, with a surplus of people vying for a shortage of jobs, no matter how undesirable the jobs may be," Marshall said.

Giving Sickle Cell Program

The Pasco Norfleet Jr. American Legion Auxiliary No. 160 will present a program on sickle cell anemia Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the building next to Thorb's Florist on W. Fifth Street, Greenville.

Speaker for the occasion will be Mrs. Mildred Council, genetic counselor with the N. C. Department of Human Resources. The public is invited.

Delight your favorite Little Red Riding Hood with a cozy, comfortable, cabled cape with attached hood. It's a jiffy-knit, worked with large needles and double strands of knitting worsted weight yarn.

Perfect for the beginning knitter, this cape is worked in one piece from the neck down for sizes 2 through 8.

To obtain directions for making the Little Red Riding Hood Cape, send your request for Leaflet No. 2179 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector", P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-2179 from Pat Trexler at the same address, sending check or money order for $10.75 for sizes 2 and 4 or $12.50 for sizes 6 and 8. Each kit contains Wintuk yarn and the instruction leaflet. Price includes shipping charges. Specify your choice of bright red, royal blue, kelly green, baby pink, light gold or white. Please include full street address.

DEAR PAT: Each year I enjoy trying the quickie Christmas items you feature, so I am happy to return the favor and share with you two patterns I recently found. Both are quick and easy to knit and make delightful tree ornaments or package decorations.

A pipe cleaner, size 5 knitting needles and a few yards each of red and white sports yarn are all you need to make clever candy canes.

With the red yarn, cast on nine stitches. For the first row, decrease at the beginning of the row by knitting two stitches together; knit across to the last stitch and increase one in that stitch. For the second row, purl all stitches.

These two rows are repeated throughout, alternating four rows of red stripes with four rows of white. Work in this manner until you have five red and four white stripes.

Bind off, sew together the long edges to form a tube and insert the pipe cleaner in the tube. Bend the top over to form the curve of the candy cane.

To make a wreath, use green sports weight yarn and size 5 needles. Cast on 10 stitches. For the first row, purl 1, knit 8, purl 1. On row two, knit 1, purl 8, knit 1.

Row three: Purl 1, slip the next four stitches to cable holder and hold in back of work; knit the next four stitches from needle, then knit the four stitches from the cable holder; purl the last stitch.

Rows four, six and eight are a repeat of row two, while the fifth and seventh rows are a repeat of row one. Repeat these eight rows until five cable twists have been made.

Bind off and sew long edges together. Form a circle by sewing the cast-on end to the bound-off end. Trim with a tiny red bow and colored sequins.

Here's hoping that your readers will enjoy making these items. — MARY LOU B., CLARENDON HILLS, ILL.

Many thanks, Mary Lou, for your timely contribution. This is a good way to use leftover yarns. With different weights of yarn, your little ornaments may be a different size, but who is to know the difference?

I might add that the method used for making the candy cane gives you a bias strip. A doubled-over bias strip makes a neat edging for cardigans or coats and is also an excellent piping for any type of needlework pillow.

Have a happy day!

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Stingy Boyfriend Makes Her Wonder

DEAR ABBY: Phil is 28 and I'm 22. We met at church choir about a year ago and have been going together ever since. He's asked me to marry him, but there is something about him that bothers me. Please don't laugh; it's the way he cheats out when it comes to money.

He refuses to give a dime to any charity. (He calls them all "rip-offs.") He won't leave a tip unless the service was exceptional—which rarely happens. (I leave tips out of embarrassment.)

Once when he took me out for dinner I said I wasn't very hungry, so he ordered a big meal for himself and told the waiter I didn't want anything. He ate in front of me and didn't even offer me a cup of coffee! I felt so hurt I nearly cried.

He's always asking me to take my car and never offers to put in any gas. (I always pay for the parking, too.) We both work, and he doesn't have anybody to support but himself, so I can't understand why he's so tight.

I know it's the thought that counts, but every gift he's given me has been so cheap that I'm almost ashamed to show it to anybody.

Other than his tightness with money, we have a good relationship.

How important is a person's attitude about money?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Very. Don't treat it lightly. A person who is stingy, uncharitable and generally tight with his money is usually inconsiderate, ungracious and uncharitable in other areas. You are wise to wonder.

DEAR ABBY: Although I haven't spent much time in school, I have worked hard to improve my English. In recent years one of my best guidelines has been the Dear Abby column. Therefore, I hope you will not be offended if I ask you to quit using the word "Asiatic" when referring to the continent of Asia, or its people. People of Asian descent consider it not only incorrect, but insulting. It means "more than a little insane, or some kind of nut."

Those who have served in the U.S. Navy or Marine Corps will confirm this. Please use "Asian" instead.

JOE E. IN ORLANDO

DEAR JOE: Thanks. I learned something today. Although my dictionary states that "Asian" is preferred to "Asiatic," it gives no hint that the latter is insulting. The put-down was inadvertently Occidental.

Not everyone needs to lose weight for the Holidays.

Century Christmas at Tryon Palace here. The palace Christmas will run Dec. 9-30. Two other buildings in the palace complex, the John Wright Stanly House and the Stevenson House will also be decorated.

Two other restorations, the Jones House and Commission House will feature period decorations on their first floors. Antique toys and a wassail bowl will highlight the Jones House while the Commission House will feature a late 19th century Victorian motif.

Candlelight tours of the five buildings will be held on the evenings of Dec. 9, 11 and 13. During the tours, harpsichord music will be offered in the great stairs hall of the palace and lighted torches and costumed hostesses will guide visitors along paths to the various buildings. Carolers will perform in the palace's inner courtyard and wassail bowls will be in both the Jones House and the Commission House.

Another highlight at the palace complex will be the annual 18th century Christmas outing Sunday, Dec. 16 from 1:30-4:15 p.m. The grounds and gardens of the palace, Jones and Commission houses will be open to the public free of charge. The New Bern High School Choir will perform from the main portico of the palace.

Wait And See Inflation Role

If inflation fight seems confusing, then the forecast of the huge increase in housing costs for November should add to the confusion.

The Commerce Department sees housing costs as rising steeply for October and November, largely because of record-high mortgage rates.

Mortgage loan rates jumped from 11 percent to 14 percent and over in only a few weeks and that increased cost of financing housing is being reflected in higher housing costs. This, in turn, is showing up in the nation's overall inflation rate.

But wasn't the higher interest supposed to slow inflation, not add to it? That is the theory. Supposedly the higher rates will slow down the building, and most other industries, putting a damper on rapid price increases.

Some economist differ with the prevailing opinion that high interest reduces the effects of inflation. The first month's effects on housing costs tend to bear out that skepticism.

For the medium range, however, we will just have to wait and see whether the inflation reducing effects come about.

Vote Will Again Decide Crop's Future

Among upcoming elections is the referendum involving flue-cured tobacco farmers on the continuation of acreage-poundage quotas to be held Dec. 18.

The vote will determine the fate of the program for the next three years.

One hardly has to sing the praises of the tobacco support program in this area. We think its continuation is essential to the tobacco farmer's well being.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Solutions Are Costly

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Sometimes hard-hitting criticism of programs in state government accomplishes the purpose of reform and correction. Occasionally, the after-shock of such exposure lingers for years, causing public skepticism even after reform has taken place.

Such is the situation in the Youth Services Division of the Department of Human Resources which, in its main role, operates the state's Juvenile Training Schools, says William R. Windley, division director.

In 1972, the training schools were in the division of prisons, and both criminal acts and non-criminal status offenses such as truancy, running away, or being generally disobedient were sufficient to cause a youngster to be committed.

The North Carolina Bar Association produced a shocking report called, "As The Twig Is Bent", which showed this state had more youth per capita in training schools than in any other state in the nation; that admissions were more than 2,000 per year; and that inadequate services and programs abounded.

Action followed. The schools were removed from the prisons system and placed in Human Resources; treatment and educational programs were ordered; status offenders were barred from the schools and community treatment alternatives launched.

One result is that the average population of 650 committed by the courts to the training schools for criminal acts is, on the whole, a tougher breed of youngster with tougher problems to be dealt with.

"It is ironic that in 1972, the training schools were criticized for having too many kids, an inadequate staff both in numbers and training; and too few resources, programs and services.

"Despite the vast improvements, we're still being criticized. Now we have too many resources and still too many students, though the numbers have decreased significantly. Is this not a no-win situation?" Windley said.

The Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth has under study a report which strongly indicts the system's current efforts and suggests that the schools simply be abolished. In a recent column in this space, the program's $11-million-plus annual budget and expenditure of $17,000 per child per year were criticized.

"These costs may sound high compared to what an average family spends per year per child. Yet the troubled youngsters committed to the training schools need very special attention. The schools provide psychiatric and psychological services, complete medical services, special and vocation education, recreational services, maintenance and support services, food, clothing, and many others. Thankfully, many of these services are not needed by the average family," Windley explains.

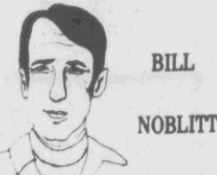

Serious

More than half the youngsters are committed for serious crimes such as assault, robbery, breaking and entering. More than 30 percent are mentally retarded and more than 30 percent are emotionally disturbed. Learning disabilities plague more than 12 percent, and speech impairments afflict 7.2 percent.

These multiple problems coupled with the hard core criminal nature of the population require intensive programs in the hope of stopping the child from a life of adult crime. Windley says. One demonstration of the effect is a reduction in repeat offenders from 37 percent three years ago to 20 percent this year. Another is reduction of the average stay from 14 months to 8.8 months.

Windley points to on-campus psychological and psychiatric services, preparation of individual plans for education and treatment; a team approach using cottage parents, specialists, and educators in devising a plan and monitoring it; certified special education teachers and speech and hearing specialists; new recreational programs including camping experiences; and intensive remedial work in reading and math as key ingredients in the reformed training school approach.

A Friend And The Bank

WASHINGTON — Remember those wonderful advertisements of a few years ago telling you that if you brought a friend into a bank and he opened an account, you would receive anything from a toaster to a 25-inch color television set for steering him their way?

Well, it was a great gimmick and heaven knows how many people were dragged into banks by their friends. While the depositor was over at the teller's window filling out all the forms, the bounty hunter was escorted to the bank's hidden gift shop where he could select a token of the bank's esteem.

I even did it myself. A few years ago I talked my friend Brinkerhoff into putting all his savings into the Second National Trust and Dime Savings Bank of Georgetown and wound up with an electric blanket as my reward.

The other day a vice president of the bank came to see me. He was very angry. "Brinkerhoff has just taken all his funds out of the bank," he told me.

"I'm sorry to hear that," I said. "I guess he figured he could do better somewhere else."

"It's your responsibility to get him back," he said.

"I don't see how you figure that," I said. "All your advertisement asked me to do was bring a friend in. You said nothing about my guaranteeing he would stay with you."

"It should have been obvious when you accepted an electric blanket from us that we expected you to make sure that Brinkerhoff would stay with us. Do you think blankets grow on trees?"

I told him, "Well, if you

Ulster Needs Smiles

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Paul, my Irish nephew, writes that he has lost the baseball he brought home with him just as his playmates in South Armagh were getting the hang of the game.

I wonder what became of that baseball. It must have been a strange sight on an Irish road or sticking out of a trout stream like a rock with red seams.

Perhaps the British army threw a collision mat over it and blew it up in one of those controlled explosions that break windows for miles around. They might have mistaken it for a grenade. Things get pretty tense in his section of Ulster. They call it "The Murder Triangle," because in the past decade Catholics and Protestants have been murdering, maiming and burning each other out and more than 60 British soldiers have died in the vicinity.

Still, Paul rarely spoke of "The Troubles." He had just turned 14 when he came to spend the summer with us, his first trip away from the violence-saturated green countryside around Crossmaglen, except for a school trip to Liverpool.

He loved America from the start, although not unreservedly.

He loved hamburgers, vanilla ice cream, steak barbecued on the charcoal grill, Pepsi-Cola, fig Newtons and French fries, which of course he called "chips," and jokes. He loved the New York Yankees. He couldn't abide pizza, hot dogs, baked macaroni and, thank God, lobster. He had mixed feelings about American football and, watching a pro game on TV, couldn't understand why the Dallas Cowboys wore "steel helmets."

Paul worshipped weekly at the shrine of Mork and Mandy and loved almost everything else on TV from game shows to commercials. With a dozen channels to choose from, instead of only three at home, he could

CAPITOL LETTER

No Big Rival For Morgan

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With barely two months to go before the filing deadline for 1980 candidates, Democratic Sen. Robert Morgan, once thought to be vulnerable, appears to be escaping without a major primary challenge.

Morgan is not likely to be without any opposition in the Democratic primary May 6, however, and perhaps will have several challengers. But while a number of factions within the Democratic Party are distinctly unhappy with Morgan in his first term, no "name" has stepped forward to take him on.

Morgan, who developed a reputation as a consumer advocate in six years as the state's attorney general, has increasingly hurt himself among the party's liberal wing since winning election to the Senate in 1974.

Early, Morgan was faulted for indecision, such as his footdragging on efforts — eventually successful — to halt damming of the New River. Since, he has alienated organized labor, which contributed heavily to his first Senate campaign, by siding with business on labor legislation.

His opposition to a time extension on the Equal Rights Amendment angered still more in the Democratic Party. And Morgan's continuing effort to secure a federal judgeship for his campaign manager Charles Winberry, in the face of mounting opposition and long delays, has made him appear a bit ineffective and highly political.

Yet the sheer weight of incumbency and a knack for not angering the right people within the party have thus far kept most Democratic challengers away.

"North Carolina is a very unique state. It has a tradition of gentleman politicians," one party regular observed recently. "It's considered very impolite in North Carolina to challenge an incumbent. It's just not done. It's okay to challenge someone like (Sen. Jesse) Helms, but not within the party."

Seemingly proving the point is the example of Nick Galifianakis, who unseated Sen. B. Everett Jordan in the Democratic primary of 1972

— then lost to the Republican Helms in November.

The only active Democratic opponent for Morgan to surface so far is William G. Pfefferkorn, a Winston-Salem attorney whose name recognition around the state is mainly confined to liberal Democrats. He has been the lawyer for several Piedmont groups opposed to nuclear power.

State Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gastonia, has said he is considering entering the race, but has thus far not made up his mind and said last week he is leaning toward seeking re-election.

Still another possible candidate is Insurance Commissioner John Ingram. But the unpredictable Ingram, who lost the 1978 race against Helms, is said to be leaning more toward a race for governor or lieutenant governor, though he hasn't said himself just what he'll do.

Other Editors Say Valuable Tips

(The Raleigh Times)

With the price of gasoline going up and up and even the eventual supply in question, motorists need to memorize some of business columnist Sylvia Porter's tips on economy as thoroughly as baseball fans remember batting statistics.

Some of Sylvia's suggestions are pleasantly surprising.

Take air conditioning, for example. How many of us have sweltered on trips during those hot, muggy months of summer rather than turning on the air-conditioning and use precious fuel? No need, says Porter. Wind resistance created by opening windows on long trips results in higher gas usage than air-conditioning.

Some other hints worth remembering:

Take the tire manufacturer's recommendation over your maintenance manual's: inflate your tires at 35 pounds rather than 27.

If you think you're going to wait 30 seconds or more at a stoplight or pick-up point, turn off the ignition. You'll save gas.

There is double economy in driving at 55 mph or less. You save not only gas but the price of a speeding ticket. Best gas economy occurs when you cruise at between 50 and 40.

Plan trips. Porter says the most expensive mileage comes on those 10 miles or less trips made in a car with cold motor.

Following these recommendations may not show up as dramatic overnight savings. But if you're one of the Dept. of Energy "average" drivers, using around 800 gallons of gasoline a year, observing the above tips should save you up to 160 gallons.

Translated into present gas prices, that comes out to $160. A $160 windfall isn't to be sneezed at.

want to know the truth, Brinkerhoff and I aren't talking any more."

"What happened?"

"My wife let it slip about three months later that I got an electric blanket for steering Brinkerhoff into your bank. Since he got nothing for depositing his money there he accused me of being a shill for you and he stomped out of my house in a rage. I haven't heard from him since."

"You handled it very badly. We told you at the time not to mention your gift to anyone."

"There was nothing in your advertisement that said I had to keep my lips sealed."

"Well," he said, "now you see the results of your wife's indiscretion. You lost a friend and we lost an account."

"You bankers must be used to taking risks. What's the big deal?"

"Banks don't take risks. That's why we're banks. I must ask you to return the electric blanket."

"You're crazy. I'm not going to give back a blanket that was given to me for bringing in a friend. Besides,

40 Years Ago Today

December 3, 1939
MOSCOW — The Communist party organ today called upon "American toilers" to defeat the "war plans" of "American imperialism" and declared that the American Communist party is actively preparing fulfillment of its historical task in the new international situation.

The call was made in an article in the monthly magazine, "The Agitator's Companion", an organ providing propaganda material for party lectures and organizers throughout the country.

The article was by far the most severe press attack against the United States yet to appear here. "President Roosevelt, said the article, 'is more and more siding with the incendiaries of war'."

"American toilers are faced with a real task, that of crushing the war plans of a powerful foe — American Imperialism."

Office Space Gets Attention

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The big real estate investment money in 1980 will be going into well-situated, well-designed office buildings whose rents are relatively low and whose leases are ready to expire.

That's the assessment of John R. White, whose views are sought by major domestic investors, by foreign pension funds, and by blue chip corporations thinking of relocating, redesigning or expanding.

The market for office space is tight, and rents are rising. Since 1977 some buildings have added 75 percent to their gross income, and more increases are likely. Thus the desirability of expiring leases.

In addition, White observes, indexing is gradually being worked into leases, assuring some landlords that tenants will share in the added operating expenses, including those resulting from higher fuel costs.

"Owners have to cope more effectively with ongoing inflation," said White, president and chief executive officer of Landaeur Associates, an international firm that advises on all aspects of real estate.

White, whose firm is capable of handling all aspects of site choice, design, contracting and the like, but which purposely avoids taking a brokerage roll, is bullish on real estate.

For 1980, he is telling clients that investments in central city hotels in major metropolitan areas will be "outstanding."

He senses a growing respect for the patina of the past, which often is gracefully displayed by older hotels. More important, they stand to benefit from international tourism, conventions and commercial travel.

Lest his advice be misunderstood, he stresses "major metropolitan areas," which he defines as cities involved in world business, known throughout the world, and possessing important cultural attractions.

"A return to the central city area by the commercial traveller is evident," White observes. "And increased international tourism has brought added revenue to the urban hotels."

The elegant hotels built in the 1910s and 1920s, he believes, have reattracted customers once lost to newer structures because they have

Strength For Today

TWO KINDS OF PRIDE
The medieval church held that pride is the chief of sins, but actually there is a good pride and an evil pride. If our children have grown up to live happy and useful lives, we are proud of them, and should be. If the community in which we live has become a place of friendly relations and charm, we should be proud of that also. And we can be proud of the church that we have built at considerable sacrifice.

But there is also a pharisaic pride — "I thank God that I am not as other men." Intellectual people often have a pride which causes them to look with scorn not only on the ignorant but on everyone who differs with them. Self-satisfied pride has been a cause of every religious persecution in the past, and every wrong-headed attempt to stop the advance of science.

When people know so much that they are satisfied that they have the whole truth, a road block has been thrown across the highway of progress.

Heat Needs Easily Met

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority had no trouble meeting a peak demand of 19.8 million kilowatts for winter heating today as temperatures across the region averaged 18 degrees at 6 a.m.

Spokesman John Schlatter said the peak demand on the seven-state power system was well below the record winter peak of 22 million kw in January 1978 and 2 million kw below the 21.8 million kw the government utility had available today.

TVA has three large generating units out of service. Unit 3 at the three-reactor Browns Ferry Nuclear Plant near Athens, Ala., has been down since Aug. 21 for refueling and maintenance and is not scheduled to begin producing power again until Friday.

Two large coal-fired units, one at the Cumberland plant near Clarksville and the other at the Widows Creek plant near Bridgeport, Ala., also were shut down for maintenance or emergency repairs.

Schlatter said TVA was importing 1.6 million kilowatts Monday from three neighboring utilities, the Southern Co., Mid-South Utilities and the Illinois-Missouri power pool.

Plan Community Sing Dec. 19

GRIFTON — Grifton Junior and Brownie Scouts will sponsor a community sing Wednesday, Dec. 19, 6:30 p.m., at the Town Lot, corner of Queen and Pitt Streets.

The girls will decorate the community Christmas tree with weatherproof decorations.

Anyone who can donate a tree is asked to contact Brownie Scout co-leader Hazel Harris, 524-4171. Help will also be needed to erect the tree and decorate the top branches.

The Scouts are hoping to have the tree in place before the Grifton Christmas parade, Dec. 9, or before the Dec. 19 sing.

Shad Festival Planning Meet

GRIFTON — All persons who have suggestions for events or schedule changes for the Grifton Shad Festival are urged to attend the Tuesday, Dec. 4, planning meeting. The meeting will be held in the Grifton Historical Museum, 7:30 p.m.

Work on the souvenir brochure has begun, and the schedule of events must be finalized soon in order to meet the printing deadline.

Persons who can help contact new advertisers are needed, as well as solicitors for "Shad-O" prizes. A secondary theme is still being sought, and suggestions may be mailed to the Shad Festival, Grifton, N.C. 28530.

Hodges Will Stay Awhile

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Luther H. Hodges Jr., who was passed up recently for the job of secretary of commerce, says he'll stay in the Carter administration at least through next year.

But Hodges says he's not sure what he'll do if Carter is re-elected. "It all depends on what the opportunities are in the second term," Hodges said. He says he has no plans to seek elective office, but he may consider it if the "right opportunity" develops.

Carter named Chicago financier Philip M. Klutznick to the commerce post, which was held once by Hodges' father. The post opened when Jaunita Kreps, of Durham, resigned.

Hodges, now a commerce undersecretary, was chosen deputy secretary of the new Department of Commerce and Trade. He will assume the post Jan. 1, but Hodges says his job will not change.

He said the new title "was just a signal that the management of the Commerce Department wasn't going to change with the advent of a new face." Hodges admits he was disappointed he did not receive the secretary's position.

"I find that appointive politics takes an interesting turn sometimes — like elective politics does. It is not necessarily a rational process," said Hodges.

He lost to Insurance Commissioner John Ingram in the Democratic primary last year for the U.S. Senate.

But, he said, "the president had to make the kind of decision he did and I think under the circumstances he made a good decision."

tend a hearing Thursday, Dec. 13, concerning the budget making process for public education.

The meeting will be held at the Martin County Auditorium, Williamston, 7 p.m. Participants will include educators and citizens from the 17 school districts included in the District One region.

"The State Board of Education wants to find out from all citizens what they think should be the top budget items as we prepare to make requests for programs and needs of the schools to the 1981 General Assembly," said State Superintendent Craig Phillips.

The plan calls for all members of the school family to express their opinions at a 2 p.m. session. This group will be composed of representatives from each school system, including teachers, administrators, support personnel and board members.

Phillips will preside at each hearing and will be assisted by members from the Controllers office, as well as the Department of Public Instruction.

Mark Pastor's Anniversary

Popular Hill F. W. B. Church will observe its pastor's anniversary with services every night this week, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Speakers' choirs and ushers are listed, along with groups in charge: Monday, Eldress Hattie Mae Cobb, choir and ushers from St. Matthew, Greenville, deacon board; Tuesday, the Rev. J. L. Wilson, choir and ushers from Grifton Chapel, mother board; Wednesday, the Rev. James Vance, choir and ushers from St. Mark, Kinston, choir; Thursday, Bishop J. N. Gilbert, choir and ushers from Arthur Chapel, Ball Arthur, trustee; Friday, the Rev. Clifton Gardner, choir and ushers from Selvia Chapel, Greenville, ushers, Sunday, the Rev. Matthew Best, choir and ushers from Best Chapel, junior church. The Rev. Jasper Tyson, pastor, invites the public to attend these services.

Morgan has been preparing for the upcoming campaign by quietly opening a Raleigh headquarters and beginning only modest fundraising efforts. He has yet to pick a campaign manager, but has a couple campaign staff workers.

He is facing the prospect of being opposed by Republican John P. East of Greenville, an East Carolina professor, who is a far-right ally of Helms and will run with financial backing of the Helms' Congressional Club members.

Pfefferkorn, 41, (the P is silent) has been contacting moderate and liberal Democrats about a challenge for months, and has hired Lillian Woo of Raleigh as a consultant to lay the groundwork for his unannounced campaign.

Mrs. Woo sees a coalition of Democratic Party factions angered by Morgan and forming around Pfefferkorn. They include, she says, labor, minority groups alienated by Morgan's opposition to the District of Columbia amendment, women, some moderates in business, and educators. The N.C. Association of Educators, she said, may be fertile ground for an opponent of Morgan.

She is also hoping Morgan's failure to enthusiastically campaign for Ingram in 1978 has generated opposition to Morgan among party regulars.

"He was not as actively involved in the 1978 campaign as he could have been, and he did offend many old-line Democrats by not being on the road constantly campaigning for the whole Democratic ticket," she said in an interview.

Mrs. Woo, who first gained notice as a consumer advocate and later ran for state auditor, says Morgan has failed to follow through on his consumer activism after entering the Senate. And she says the Winberry nomination may yet prove troublesome for Morgan.

"It appears Senator Morgan has hurt himself by putting himself on the line for Winberry. And coming out early for (President) Carter when it is (Sen. Edward) Kennedy's committee that will vote on the Winberry nomination hasn't helped," she said. "If he can still pull it off, it will help him appear more powerful."

But Pfefferkorn, as a virtual unknown running against an incumbent with long-standing party credentials, has a long way to go before establishing himself as a major challenger to Morgan.

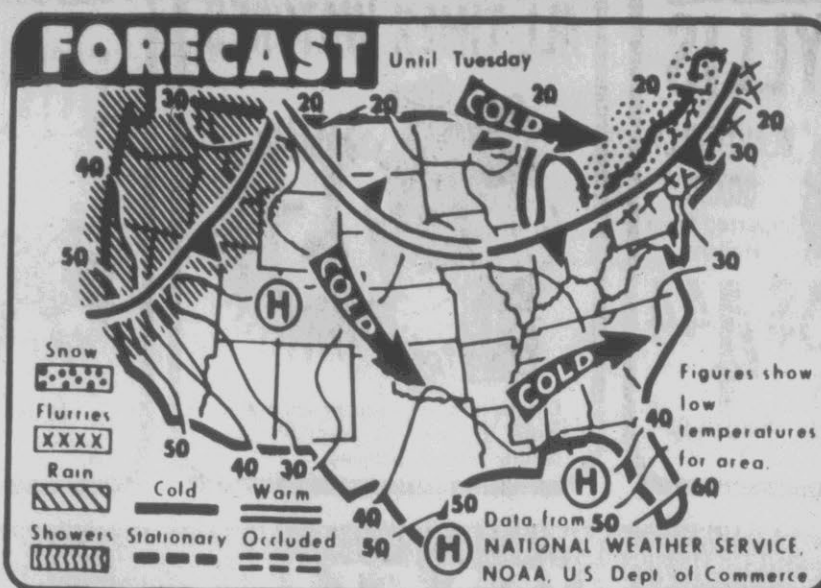

His hoped-for coalition is not made up of the politically powerful in this state—labor is hardly a force, and women and teachers have not been particularly cohesive in past campaigns.

Aside from contacting other disaffected Democrats, Pfefferkorn's candidacy has yet to surface publicly with much of a splash.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of dental experts convened by the National Institutes of Health has come out against routine extraction of wisdom teeth, saying if there are no problems the teeth should be left alone.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Rain is expected in the forecast period (until Tuesday morning) from the north and central Pacific coasts to the central Rockies and northern and western

Plains. Snow and snow flurries are forecast for the St. Lawrence Valley and New England. Most areas of the country will be colder. (AP Laserphoto Map)

North Carolina's weather remained cold today, but southerly winds are expected to bring moderating temperatures on Tuesday.

The high pressure system that has been controlling the state's weather for the past several days was moving toward the coast today. That was expected to bring a shift to southerly winds and a warming trend.

Skies were clear, but temperatures today were expected to reach only the 30s in the northwest mountains to near 50 on the Outer Banks. Lows tonight are expected to drop to the 20s in the west to the 30s along the coast. Highs Tuesday will be mostly in the 50s.

A small craft advisory was in effect today for the area north of Cape Lookout because of northwesterly winds at 15 to 20 knots. A small craft advisory for Cape Lookout south and the sounds was discontinued early today.

Temperatures in the teens and 20s were reported early today across North Carolina.

A dry cold front moved through the state Sunday, producing wind gusts of 30 miles an hour or more in some areas. Skies were clear, with some partly cloudy skies in the northeast. Afternoon readings were mostly in the 40s, although Asheville had 34 degrees and Fayetteville had 52 degrees.

sit for hours, motionless and pop-eyed as one of those stone figures on a medieval Celtic cross.

But after supper he sometimes abandoned the tube to take a walk along the road, something no one ever does after dark in his part of Ireland.

They say that war brutalizes people, but in a decade of covering wars around the world I have rarely found this to be so. Paul was gentle and easy going, like those Israeli families I met living in the kibbutzes under constant attack up on the Golan Heights or the Montagnard tribes in Vietnam's central highlands. He got along fine with the neighborhood kids, who didn't seem to notice his nasal Ulster brogue as much as we did and taught him enough baseball to experience the boyhood panic of breaking a window.

We hope the box of baseballs gets there by Christmas, and the new joke book, Ireland could use a few laughs. And fewer broken windows.

"We can have it repaired. Frankly, we're not interested in the blanket. But we cannot allow people to accept gifts from us for bringing in new customers who keep pulling out their money. We're not Goodwill Industries."

"I'm aware of that," I said, "but my dog loves that blanket and he'll tear my arm off if I give it to you."

"You should have thought of that before you brought Brinkerhoff into the bank."

"Maybe if you had given him an electric blanket as well, Brinkerhoff wouldn't have taken his money out."

"The ad specifically said only friends of prospective clients would receive gifts. Had Brinkerhoff come in without a friend he might have been entitled to choose an appliance. But since you were the one who brought him, the responsibility rests with you. You vouched for him."

"You can't have your blanket back," I said. The vice president said, "We don't want to be unreasonable. We'll give you until Monday to get Brinkerhoff back. If you don't we'll never let you bring a friend into our bank again."

Greensboro Gathering Deplores Rally Deaths

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Politicians and preachers spoke Sunday to a near-capacity gathering to deplore the Nov. 3 shooting at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally that killed five persons.

Policemen in uniform and plain clothes were stationed outside the two-hour worship service that had been postponed once. It was an interfaith and interracial service at Beth-el AME Church.

Several members of the Communists Workers Party attended the service and members of the rival Revolutionary Communists Party passed out leaflets to worshippers.

The CWP sponsored the Nov. 3 rally in Morningside Homes, a predominantly black housing project in Greensboro. Five CWP members were killed and a number of persons, some claiming to be Klansmen or Nazis, were charged with the deaths.

The worship service had been scheduled for Nov. 17, but it was postponed because the ministers did not want it to be connected with another rally planned for the same day.

Speakers Sunday ranged from politicians to preachers to the president of the A&T State University student government association to the president of the Morningside Homes Tenant Association.

Keynote speaker, state Rep.

Henry Frye, spoke of the rise of Klan violence in the South during the last two years. "It seems to me that the Klan has renewed its efforts in the South and violence seems to be one of its goals,"

Frye said the police report of an internal investigation of police actions Nov. 3 does not attempt to address the reason for the violence. He said it "seems appropriate that a citizens group should be appointed to look at the problem (the violence)."

But Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin said, "I don't know if we'll ever know the answer to why such an incident occurred in Greensboro."

But he praised city residents for "using that deplorable and horrible event as a time to begin anew. I have never been prouder of our community. Out of that adversity we became closer and closer together."

Most of the members of the City Council attended the worship service.

Dr. Emmett O. Floyd, pastor of Congregational United Church of Christ, told the crowd, "I don't believe any of us are wise enough to understand all the causes of violence in the human family. But we are brothers and sisters together and there is simply no room for hatred and violence in our city."

Most of the speakers stressed unity.

"What we need is more love, more peace and more unity," said Kelvin Buncum, A&T student body president.

Soldier Lost Life Protecting Women, Children

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — On Nov. 21 Army Warrant Officer Bryan Ellis went to check on several women and children in the U.S. embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan.

The next day, Thanksgiving, his charred body was found in his gutted apartment.

Ellis, 29, might still be alive if he hadn't been protecting women and children, his widow said Sunday.

The former Fort Bragg aviator will be buried today in Swansboro. He and Steven Crowley, a 20-year-old Marine from Port Jefferson, N.Y., were the only two Americans killed in the attack on the embassy.

Plan Thinning Officer Ranks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ranks of the nation's senior military officers would be thinned out over the next decade under legislation the Senate has approved.

The legislation, approved Friday and sent to the House, would reduce by 30 percent the number of colonels and Navy captains, by 25 percent the number of lieutenant colonels and commanders, and by 20 percent the number of majors and lieutenant commanders. A report accompanying the bill said there are now about 6.5 enlisted persons for every officer, compared with 8.6 enlisted persons per officer at the end of World War II. The average grade and pay of officers has gone up since 1958 while the length of experience has dropped, said the report.

mission and was home with the rest of the day off. His wife was working at the international school where the children of various embassy officials are taught. His 6-year-old son, Chris, was among the students there.

Ellis was last seen alive when he went down from his third-floor apartment to check on three women and two babies huddled in the apartment below.

He volunteered to return to his apartment to watch for demonstrators and to report what was happening outside. He manned an open telephone line to an American woman in Rawalpindi, about 15 miles away. She in turn relayed his information to the American ambassador and others until Ellis' phone line was cut.

In the confusion, a number of people were evacuated to various embassies, and Ellis was believed to have been among them. Even when a body was found in his apartment, it was hoped to be one of the demonstrators.

Mrs. Ellis received word her husband was dead while aboard a plane evacuating her to the United States.

Arthur said the attack came shortly after noon when many of the officials were away. He said about 150 demonstrators in two buses threw rocks and broke out windows in a guard shack just inside the embassy compound wall. They drove away but soon returned.

The demonstrators returned in about 15 commercial buses, apparently commandeered. Mrs. Ellis and Arthur said. The crowd grew to about 1,000, with bus loads still arriving.

About 1:30 p.m., a police vehicle arrived on the scene. The two said the crowd turned it over and set it on fire. The crowd snatched the policemen's weapons and opened fire on the embassy.

Mrs. Ellis said that at the international school, she was told she could not go home yet — there was trouble at the embassy. Members of the other embassies picked up their children and the Americans were grouped together in the auditorium to see a movie.

The rioters at the embassy swarmed around the buildings by this time, Arthur said. Any thought of escape was dashed. Doors were locked and the Americans moved to the third floor.

Some were assigned to duty with a command post and others were ordered to destroy papers.

He said the Americans decided that if the mob reached the third floor, defenders would open fire in self protection.

In the embassy, smoke and tear gas choked officials, Arthur said. There was little more than six inches of clear air above the floor. Electrical power and telephones went out.

Some moved into a vault, he said, which had its own ventilation system, its own generator and radio contact with the outside. There the destruction group was rapidly shredding and burning certain paperwork.

At the school, Mrs. Ellis said she was monitoring radio messages and heard a trapped American saying, "Don't worry about us. Help is on the way. We're doing fine. We're all going to have a good Thanksgiving tomorrow."

A band of demonstrators attacked the school building and managed to break in. Pakistani guards assigned to the school fought them off, Mrs. Ellis said.

The Americans at the embassy, Arthur said, managed to escape through a hatch in the roof about 6 p.m. to discover that the demonstrators were no longer there.

Arthur said that throughout the night and until the Americans were evacuated from Pakistan, people from the foreign embassies and Pakistan friends saw to their needs. He said he will return to the embassy in January.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market continued lower today as worries over the Iranian situation pushed the price of gold sharply higher on bullion markets and pulled the dollar's value down on currency exchanges.

At 10:30 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off by 3.75 points at 818.60. The drop followed a 9.39-point decline Friday. Declines outdistanced advances by a 2-1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

In early trading, AT&T was off 1/4 at 53 1/2, Kodak slid 1/4 to 44 1/2 and General Motors was down 1/4 at 50 1/2. Oils were mixed, with Standard Oil of California up 1/4 at 56 1/2.

Asarco, which announced a 12 1/2 percent copper price hike today, was up 1/4 at 28 1/2. Other copper producers' shares also gained ground as the spiraling price of precious metals pulled copper's value higher in a round of price increases.

The price of gold jumped by more than $15 an ounce in Europe today and the dollar fell to a record low against the West German mark.

The moves came as Iran's oil minister was quoted as saying the Iranians will ask the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to price its oil in a "basket" of currencies instead of the dollar.

OPEC's oil ministers are to open their year-end meeting in two weeks in Venezuela.

Friday's declines outnumbered advances by 3-2 on the NYSE as Big Board volume totaled 30.48 million shares, off from 33.55 million shares in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .32 to 60.71; the American Stock Exchange market value index was up .21 at 227.78.

N.C. Traffic Claimed 7

By The Associated Press

The state Highway Patrol reports that seven persons died in traffic accidents on North Carolina roads over the weekend, bringing the year's death toll to 1,352.

Donald Ray Mitchell, 24, of Rocky Mount, died when his car ran off the road, hit a utility pole and overturned at 4:45 a.m., the patrol said. The accident happened about one-half mile west of Rocky Mount on a private road.

Sunday evening, a Lewisburg man died when his car ran off rural paved road 1238 north of Lewisburg. The patrol reported that Clyde Junious Hicks, 29, was pinned in his vehicle, which caught fire after striking a tree.

Charlie Wilbur Gayles, 20, of Clarksville, Va., was killed early Saturday in Granville County when the car he was driving ran off U.S. 15 north of Stovall and struck a tree, according to patrol records.

Officers reported that James Edward Sligh, 42, of Winston-Salem was killed when the car he was driving struck a utility pole in Winston-Salem Saturday morning.

Katherine Lucille Schram, 22, of Saint Clair Shores, Mich., died Saturday in Mitchell County. The patrol said she was killed when the car she was driving ran off N.C. 226 north of Bakersville and struck a culvert.

In Nash County, the patrol reported Edward Brantley, 52, of Zebulon, died when the car he was driving Saturday afternoon ran off Rural Paved Road 1124 south of Middlesex and struck a tree.

Herbert Edward Woodie, 27, of Mooresville, died in an accident on Interstate 40 west of Statesville in Iredell County, according to reports. The car he was driving ran off I-40, down an embankment and onto a rural road. One passenger was injured.

Plan Vigil To Support SALT

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Church and peace groups scheduled a silent vigil in Raleigh today to support the Salt II treaty.

The Rev. W.W. Finlator, a spokesman for the group, said it supported SALT II but also believed a treaty was needed to limit the manufacture of all nuclear weapons.

Sponsors of the vigil were listed as Pax Christi, an international Catholic peace organization; the Episcopal Peace Fellowship; the Quakers and the War Resisters League.

Barfield

The funeral service for James Knight Barfield will be held Wednesday at 2 p. m. in the Phillips Brothers Mortuary Chapel by the Rev. Leroy Adams. Burial will be in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Barfield was born and reared in the Robersonville area, but had lived in the Greenville area for 60 years.

Surviving him are four daughters, Mrs. Sarah Gardner, Mrs. Sylvia Carter and Miss Mary Barfield, all of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mrs. Susie Mayo of Robersonville; two stepdaughters, Mrs. Ruby Filmore and Mrs. Edith Artis, both of Greenville; a stepson, Ray Cannon of Winterville; a sister, Mrs. Earline Hardy of Greenville; nine grandchildren and 12 stepgrandchildren.

The family visitation will be held Tuesday from 8 to 9 p. m. in Phillips Brothers Mortuary.

Bullock

PFC Leonard Joe Bullock, 24, died at Fort Campbell, Ky. Friday. He was a Beargrass native.

The body will be brought to Greenville and funeral arrangements will be announced later by the Wilkerson Funeral home.

Harris

FARMVILLE — Funeral services for Mrs. Mary B. Harris, a native of Farmville, who died Thursday in New York City, will be held Tuesday, 2 p.m., at St. John F. W. B. Church by the Rev. J. S. Lucas. Burial will be in the Sunset Memorial Park.

Mrs. Harris was born and reared in Pitt County, and was a graduate of Farmville High School. She attended a beauty school in New York, N. Y. She was a member of a Free Will Baptist Church.

Survivors: two sisters, Mrs. Lula Graham of Kinston and Mrs. Hilda Phillips of Long Island, N. Y.; five brothers, John Baker of Beletoe, Doc Baker of Wilson, T. James Baker of Goldsboro, Richard Baker of New York City and Carlton (Flip) Baker of Long Island, N. Y.

The body will be on view at Joyner's Mortuary from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday. The family visitation hours will be held Monday from 8-9 p.m. The family will assemble at 13:30 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Ms. Eva B. Gregory, 200 Horton St., for the funeral procession.

Moore

Mr. William N. Moore, 70, retired city clerk and treasurer of Greenville, died in Pitt County Memorial Hospital Sunday.

The funeral service will be conducted Tuesday at 2 p. m. in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Gerry Anders. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Moore, a native of Pitt County, attended the Pitt County Schools and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville. In 1972 he was listed in Who's Who for National City Clerks.

Surviving him are two sons, Thomas Dail Moore of Kansas City, Kan. and J. Edgar Moore of Rocky Mount; a daughter, Mrs. Phillips Wood of Columbia, S. C.; two sisters, Miss Maude Moore of Greenville and Mrs. Richard Forrest of Greenville; a brother, Benjamin D. Moore of Mayodan; nine grandchildren; and one great grandchild.

The family suggests that those desiring to make memorial contributions consider the Presbyterian Church.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home tonight from James M. Patterson of Savannah, Ga.; two sisters, Mrs. Esther McCaffity and Mrs. Polly Lundblad, both of New Bern; two grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Monday.

Eagles Clinch Playoffs

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"It's a humbling experience," said Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil after his Eagles became the first team to clinch a berth in the National Football League playoffs by beating the Detroit Lions 44-7 Sunday.

"But I've said all along the players win games, and I really believe that," added Vermeil. "I told the players I'm just thrilled that they took me along."

In two weeks to go in the regular season the Eagles, 10-4, took the National Conference's A Division by one game over Washington, which beat Green Bay 38-21, and Dallas, which defeated the New York Giants 28-7.

Although the Eagles may still be caught in the divisional race, they have assured themselves of a wild-card playoff berth by virtue of having a better conference record (9-2) than either Tampa Bay or Chicago, who are battling for the Central Division lead and are also involved in the wild-card scramble.

Tampa Bay failed to lock up the division for the second successive Sunday by dropping a 14-0 decision to Chicago. The Bucs, 9-5, now lead the Bears by one game and can clinch their first division title by winning either of their last two games, against San Francisco and Kansas City.

In other NFL games Sunday, the Pittsburgh Steelers beat the Cincinnati Bengals 37-17, the Cleveland Browns topped the Houston Oilers 14-7, the Los Angeles Rams trimmed the Minnesota Vikings 27-21 in overtime, the Denver Broncos defeated the Buffalo Bills 19-16, the Atlanta Falcons upset the San Diego Chargers 28-26, the Kansas City Chiefs outscored the Seattle Seahawks 37-21, the New York Jets beat the Baltimore Colts 30-17 and the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the San Francisco 49ers 13-10.

Miami beat New England 39-24 on Thursday night. Oakland plays at New Orleans tonight. Among the outstanding individual efforts, Franco Harris of Pittsburgh, Tony Dorsett of Dallas and Mike Pruitt of Cleveland surpassed the 1,000-yard rushing mark for the season, rookie Ottis Anderson of St. Louis had his eighth 100-yard running day and Dan Fouts of San Diego passed for more than 300 yards for the sixth time this season.

Redskins 38, Packers 21

Joe Theismann threw four touchdown passes and Washington erased a 21-7 halftime deficit to beat Green Bay.

Cowboys 28, Giants 7

Roger Staubach threw three touchdown passes to Drew Pearson as Dallas snapped a three-game losing streak. Dorsett rushed for 108 yards to join John Brockington as the only runners ever to surpass 1,000 yards in each of their first three pro seasons.

Bears 14, Bucs 0

Chicago turned a blocked punt by Bruce Herron and an interception by Gary Fencik into touchdowns and picked off five passes in beating Tampa Bay.

Steelers 37, Bengals 17

Terry Bradshaw threw two touchdown passes to Lynn Swann and became the first Steeler quarterback to pass for 3,000 yards in one season as Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati. The Steelers, 11-3, can clinch the AFC East title with a victory next Monday night in Houston.

Harris gained 92 yards in 20 carries to give him 1,027 yards for the season, the seventh time he has surpassed 1,000 yards, tying him with Jim Brown for the NFL record. He also moved into fourth place on the all-time NFL rushing list with 8,404 yards, behind Brown, O.J. Simpson and Jim Taylor.

Browns 14, Oilers 7

Mike Pruitt scored both Cleveland touchdowns and gained 111 yards on 25 carries, as the Browns beat the Oilers. He's only the fourth Cleveland runner to post a 1,000-yard season, joining Jim Brown, Leroy Kelly and Greg Pruitt.

Rams 27, Vikings 21

Nolan Cromwell ran 56 yards for a touchdown on a fake field goal midway through overtime as Los Angeles opened a one-half game lead over New Orleans in the NFC West. Ex-Viking Bob Lee, a recent Ram pickup, quarterbacked the winners in the second half and overtime.

Broncos 19, Bills 16

Jim Turner's 32-yard field goal with three seconds left gave Denver its victory and lifted the Broncos into a tie with San Diego for the AFC West lead at 10-4. The kick off-set a brilliant passing show by Buffalo's Joe Ferguson, who completed 27 of 46 for 316 yards.

Falcons 28, Chargers 26

Steve Bartkowski's 6-yard touchdown pass to Wallace Francis with 21 seconds remaining gave the Falcons, 13-2, point underdogs, the win over San Diego.

Chiefs 37, Seahawks 21

Ted McKnight scored two touchdowns as Kansas City bolted to a 24-0 halftime advantage and a 37-7 lead early in the final period before easing up.

Jets 30, Colts 17

Richard Todd, frequently booed by Jets fans this season, completed 12 of 26 passes for 215 yards and two touchdowns and ran for 35 yards as New York snapped a three-game losing streak.

Cards 13, 49ers 10

Ottis Anderson ran for 129 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a 6-yard scamper with 2:53 remaining as St. Louis won its debut under interim Coach Larry Wilson, who replaced Bud Wilkinson, fired last week. Anderson is the first NFL rookie to post eight 100-yard games.

Duke Not Resting On Laurels

By DICK BRINSTER
Associated Press Writer

Bill Foster isn't about to rest on his laurels despite the impressive start of his third-ranked Duke Blue Devils, which includes an overtime victory over second-ranked Kentucky and a surprisingly easy defeat of sixth-ranked North Carolina.

"One game does not a season make for either one of us," Foster said after Duke posted an 86-74 decision over arch-rival North Carolina Saturday night to win the Big Four college basketball tournament.

Then Foster, playing a game of reverse psychology with North Carolina's Dean Smith, praised the Tar Heels.

"This North Carolina team is one heck of a club," Foster told newsmen outside the Duke locker room at the Greensboro Coliseum.

On the other side Smith was telling all who would listen that Duke could win the national title if it continued to play the way it had against his Tar Heels.

"Tonight's was the best Duke team I think I've ever seen, the best team in their history in my estimation," said Smith.

Earlier, North Carolina State defeated Wake Forest, 70-65, to win the consolation game.

In other action, Virginia won the first Atlantic Coast Conference game of the season by beating Georgia Tech, 55-37, and Clemson won the IPTAY Tournament with a 94-61 victory over Middle Tennessee State.

"My first thought of this game is that there is a tendency for someone to jump on the team that loses," said Foster.

"These were just two teams that played outstanding basketball if anyone would like to write about that."

Smith said the Tar Heels were unable to handle themselves under the basket. That was no mystery when one considers the presence of Duke center Mike Gminski, who scored 21 points and won most-valuable-player honors in the tournament.

"We didn't shoot well, but Duke had a lot to do with that," said Smith. "We had eight layups that were blocked or something else happened inside that caused us to miss."

Enter Gminski, who played 39 minutes, pulled down 13 rebounds, blocked three shots and caused considerable unrecorded havoc. And this just 24 hours after he had scored 26 points, gathered in 15 rebounds and blocked nine Wake Forest shots.

"Super, Gminski was super," said Foster. "But Gene Banks played one heck of a game, too, and Kenny Dennard and Bob Bender and Vince Taylor."

Banks, who scored 22 points, joined Gminski, North Carolina's Mike O'Koren, who scored 25, N.C. State's Hawk-eye Whitney and Wake Forest's Jim Johnstone on the all-tournament team.

Duke was able to outlast North Carolina and build up a 16-point lead after leaving the floor at halftime in front, 39-38. Dennard, Bender and Taylor added 13 points apiece to put all five starters in double figures.

ECU Opens Home Schedule

Questions Continue For ECU

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Despite remarks to the contrary, Pat Dye now appears to have left East Carolina because of a conflict between him and the ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer and ECU Athletic Director Bill Cain.

"What it really boiled down to," Dye is quoted as saying in an article in Monday's Raleigh "News and Observer," "was a matter of loyalty. I knew I could no longer be loyal to Bill Cain and Dr. Brewer because I didn't think they were loyal to me."

Brewer, when reached this morning for comment on Dye's statement concerning Brewer's lack of loyalty, said, "I don't know what Coach Dye was thinking. You should ask him."

"I believe what Coach Dye said in the 'Reflector' Sunday, that this should not be handled in the media," Brewer added.

Only two days earlier, when asked if Cain or Brewer had anything to do with his resigning, Dye had said, "Absolutely not."

"It was just time for me to move on," said Dye, who had called "The Daily Reflector" in hopes of clearing up the confusion following his resignation.

The confusion, however, only seems to have increased.

In an interview with Dye in Sunday's paper, Dye told the "Reflector" that his decision to resign was not reached Thursday but had been "growing" since midseason.

However, in the "News and Observer" interview, Dye said, "I could have left any year I was here. But every year I always looked for a good reason to stay."

"This time I didn't even bother. I knew before the season even began I would leave. I knew I couldn't be enthusiastic like I was in the past. I knew I needed a change of scenery, a new challenge."

Neither Cain, who was said to be out of the office, nor Dye, who was reported to be "busy," could be reached for comment this morning.

East Carolina University's basketball Pirates bring their act to Minges Coliseum Tuesday and Wednesday night, officially opening the 1979-80 home season.

Following their third place finish in the Spider Class in Richmond this weekend, the Pirates will be playing host to Lynchburg on Tuesday and to Maine on Wednesday. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. each night.

East Carolina earlier played the Marathon Oilers in an exhibition game, but this will be their first official game in Minges.

The Pirates suffered an opening game defeat on Friday at the hands of Virginia Commonwealth University, 72-71, just missing out on the chance to beat the team that went on to win the tourney. The following night, the Bucs beat West Virginia Tech, 92-79, in the consolation bracket.

In that game, the Bucs got off to a poor start, but when Coach Dave Odom yanked his starters and sent in another group, the Pirates began to click. They came back from an 11-point deficit to take a 10-point lead.

Although they later blew that and fell back by seven, they again regained their composure and streaked to as much as a 14-point lead before the end.

"It was a bad game for us,"

Odom said, "but it was a credit to us the way we came back. I think we learned something from it, and I think we learned as the game progressed."

"With only 27 games in a season, I really can't understand why someone can't be up for all of them. In the pros, where you play 100 or so, I can understand it, but not in college."

Even when the Pirates were playing bad, however, Odom found something that was pleasing to him. "You know, when we took the starters out and put the next group in, those who sat down were involved in pulling hard for the others to do well. That really pleased me."

Since the season is so young, Odom said Sunday that he didn't have a lot of information on the two up-coming opponents. "We hope to get some stuff in on Monday. As far as I know, Lynchburg has only played one game. We could have scouted them, but I felt with the season just starting, that we needed all of our staff to be together on Friday and Saturday. We do have a report on Maine coming in, but getting up there to scout them is about impossible."

Odom said he had talked with the West Virginia Tech coach about Lynchburg, however. "He told me that Lynchburg is a lot like his team, only maybe a little taller. He said that if the two of them played ten times, they'd probably split five-five."

"I'm really more concerned about how we play than I am about our opposition. I want us to play hard," Odom said.

"These two are really important to us. They are our home openers, and we want to make a really good impression on the fans that we can play exciting basketball. I'd like to see us come out with skinned knees and elbows after the games to show people that we're a hustling ball club."

As far as Maine is concerned, Odom said that he expected them to be more of a control-type team. "We're going to have to force the tempo. They don't like to be rushed, and we need to control the pace of the game."

Following the two home dates, the Pirates travel to Durham on Saturday to face Big Four Tournament champion Duke.

PIEDMONT

Spartans, Sycamores— Life After Magic, Bird

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It's a new season in college basketball — and no one knows it better than Jud Heathcote and Bill Hodges.

They learned it the hard way over the weekend, losing games they presumably would have won last season.

Heathcote's defending NCAA champions from Michigan State, playing without the ubiquitous Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Greg Kelsey, now in the National Basketball Association, took an 88-73 drubbing from 16th-ranked St. John's in the finals of the Lapchick Tournament in New York Saturday night.

Hodges' Indiana State team, playing without the great Larry Bird, had a 20-game home winning streak snapped 66-63 by unheralded Armstrong State Friday night before struggling to a 72-65 victory over Colorado State.

With the loss of Bird, now an NBA rookie with the Boston Celtics, the burden of leadership on the Sycamores has shifted to guard Carl Nicks, who scored 37 points in Friday night's loss and 28 in Sunday's victory.

"Saturday's practice was very good," said Hodges, college Coach of the Year with last year's NCAA runner-up Sycamores. "Yet we still have things to work on. Mostly, it's a matter of determination."

Reggie Carter, coming back from a two-game suspension, scored 22 points to lead the St. John's attack as the Redmen won their home-grown tourney for the fifth straight year.

In the third-place game, Oral Roberts defeated Princeton 70-62 as Calvin Garrett scored 18 points.

The opening of the 1978-79 college basketball season also featured pretty much of a lost weekend for 14th-ranked Texas A&M, a participant in last year's NIT and expected to be the strongest team in the Southwest Conference this season.

The Aggies lost two games in a row in the Great Alaska Shootout Tournament, to Iona and Lamar, before finally winning Sunday with an 82-66 victory over the University of Pacific in the seventh-place consolation game. Vernon Smith, playing in his first game of the season for the Aggies, scored 28 points for the Aggies.

Second-ranked Kentucky came from behind to defeat Iona 57-50 for the Great Alaska Shootout championship.

The Wildcats, now 3-1, were led by senior guard Kyle Macy's 15 points, including two crucial baskets in the final four minutes.

Iona's Jeff Ruland finished with 14 to give him a three-game total of 61 points as he was named the tourney's Most Valuable Player.

In the battle for third place, Long Beach State beat host Alaska-Anchorage 67-50.

In the consolation game for fourth place Bradley defeated Lamar 82-75 with the help of four free throws by Hasan Houston in the last two minutes.

Top-ranked Indiana, meanwhile, opened its season with an 80-52 rout of Miami, Ohio, behind a balanced attack led by Mike Woodson's 14 points and Isiah Thomas' 12. Another Big Ten powerhouse, fourth-ranked Ohio State, whipped Ohio 78-51 as Herb Williams scored 17 points.

Kelly Tripucka's 22 points paced No. 5 Notre Dame over Valparaiso 92-66. The Irish scored the first eight points of the game and opened a huge lead of 22 in the first half.

Seventh-ranked Louisiana State routed Southeastern Conference colleague 112-81 as DeWayne Scales and Durand Macklin teamed up for 55 points.

Kiki Vandeweghe's 31 points led eighth-ranked UCLA over Hofstra 90-71. The Bruins didn't dominate until the start of the second half, when Vandeweghe scored 13 straight points.

Darrell Griffith tied the game with a jumper and then sent 10th-ranked Louisville ahead with a free throw as the Cardinals defeated South Alabama 75-73. Red Bruin's 15 points helped No. 12 Syracuse beat Cornell 107-66; Jeff Lamp scored 13 as 13th-ranked Virginia stopped Georgia Tech 53-37. Danny Ainge had 20 as 15th-ranked BYU beat Baylor 100-58; 18th-ranked Marquette trimmed Eastern Montana 75-36 as Robert Byrd scored 20 points and Tony Guy's 28 points led 20th-ranked Kansas over Nevada-Reno 93-75.

Kansas City Whips Celtics

By The Associated Press
Because of Scott Wedman's defense, foul trouble and a poor shooting night, center Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics was merely mortal against the Kansas City Kings.

"He had one of those nights to prove he's human and he's a rookie," said Boston Coach Bill Fitch after Bird was held to four points in the Kings' 94-88 victory Sunday night.

"He was just stinko tonight, but he'll bounce back," said Fitch.

"I didn't want to take bad shots when I was in a shooting slump," said Bird, who took only four shots — making one — in 28 minutes of action as the Celtics saw a six-game winning streak snapped.

Kansas City didn't shoot well, either, making just 37 of its 93 field goal attempts for 39.8 percent accuracy. The shooting by both teams was most evident in the third quarter, when Kansas City outscored Boston 15-14.

In the other National Basketball Association games Sunday night, the Los Angeles Lakers downed the Milwaukee Bucks 116-103, the Seattle SuperSonics bested the Golden State Warriors 111-98 and the Cleveland Cavaliers blasted the Atlanta Hawks 126-108.

Wedman, who led Kansas City scorers with 16 points, suffered a facial cut with 6:34 remaining when knocked to the floor by the swinging elbow of Boston's M.L. Carr.

"I was on the wing and started to cut through. The next thing I knew, I was on the floor," said Wedman. "I saw stars. I hit the ground and stayed there."

"He (Carr) was hand-checking me earlier and I was hitting his hands so I could move, but that's the only thing that preceded that."

Carr was ejected from the game.

Nate Archibald led Boston scorers with 21 points.

Lakers 116, Bucks 103
Norm Nixon had 25 points and nine assists and rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson added 23 points and 13 assists as Los Angeles beat Milwaukee.

Johnson scored eight of his points during an 18-0 Los Angeles spree that boosted its lead to 102-82 in the fourth quarter. The Lakers' Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 19 points and eight blocked shots.

Junior Bridgman collected 30 points for Milwaukee.

SuperSonics 111, Warriors 98
Seattle got 21 points from Gus Williams and double-figure scoring from five others in routing Golden State.

The Warriors, who came closest at 69-60 with 7:17 left in the third period, got 22 points from Robert Parish but still lost their fifth consecutive game and 11th in the last 14.

Cavaliers 126, Hawks 108
Campy Russell got 21 points and Austin Carr 20 as Cleveland crushed Atlanta. The Hawks got 26 points from Charlie Criss and 23 from Tom McMillen, but just four from John Drew, who had two fouls in the first 1½ minutes.

Atlanta also made 30 turnovers — eight by Drew in 16 minutes of play — and missed 15 foul shots. Meanwhile, the Cavaliers' Fouts Walker had 15 points, 10 rebounds, 11 assists and five steals.

Dobler Happy To Play Tough Raiders

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans Saints guard Conrad Dobler said the Oakland Raiders are the kind of football team he likes to play against, and the fact that they meet in a Monday night National Football League game just adds spice to it.

"They've always had the reputation of being a tough, aggressive ball club," Dobler said. "I kind of like that — the old-fashioned type of football."

The Saints haven't been in a Monday night game since 1974, when Pittsburgh clobbered them 28-7. Prior to that, the Saints lost to Kansas City 20-17 in 1972 and to Dallas 40-3 in 1973 — the only other times they played on Mondays.

"I think the Saints have a lot to prove on Monday nights, and that's going to be our edge," Dobler said.

Both teams are 7-6. The Saints need the victory to stay atop the NFC West, and the Raiders need it to keep slim hopes of a playoff shot alive.

"We're playing a team that is fighting for its first divisional championship and its first winning season," said Oakland Coach Tom Flores. "But it's also a big game for us, because we have to win to stay alive."

Oakland has been the NFL's most successful Monday night team, piling up a 12-1-1 record in the special week day television games. Flores said he couldn't explain the phenomenon.

"We still prepare for the game the same way, go at it with the same intensity," he said.

Heisman Winner To Be Named Today

NEW YORK (AP) — The 1979 Heisman Trophy winner may be Billy Sims of Oklahoma, the defender, or it may be Charles White of Southern California, but it seems to be as certain as death and taxes that it will again be either a running back or a quarterback. Since Jay Berwanger, a University of Chicago halfback, won the first Heisman Trophy in 1935, only twice has it been awarded to someone other than an offensive back.

Leon Hart of Notre Dame, the 1936 and 1949 winners, were two-way ends. Even wide receiver Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska, the 1972 winner, lined up in the backfield and ran the ball quite often.

The 1979 Heisman winner was scheduled to be announced at 1 p.m., EST, today with running backs White and Sims rated the top two candidates.

Sims is one of six players to win the Heisman as a junior but the only repeater was Ohio State's Archie Griffin in 1974-75.

Larry Kelley of Yale and Until earlier this month, the Heisman was virtually conceded to White, who finished fourth a year ago behind Sims and quarterbacks Chuck Fusina of Penn State and Rick Leach of Michigan.

The Southern Cal senior, who is the second greatest rusher in college football history, led the nation in rushing with 1,803 yards in 10 games although he missed one entire contest and half of another with a shoulder injury.

Once he got back in action, though, White established a National Collegiate Athletic Association mark by rushing for 1,090 yards in five games — 221 against Stanford, 261 against Notre Dame on national television, 198 against California, 167 against Arizona and 243 against Washington on regional TV.

The Washington game took place on Nov. 10 and since the ballots were due last Friday from the 1,050 Heisman electors — 175 in each of six geographical regions of the country — numerous votes were mailed before Sims' 247-yard performance against Nebraska on Nov. 24.

Coupled with a career-high 282-yard performance against Missouri a week earlier, it gave him a two-game total of 529, nine short of the national two-game record of 538 by Colorado's Charlie Davis in 1971. The 6-0, 205-pound Sims to finish fourth nationally with 1,506 yards in 11 games. He averaged 6.7 yards a carry to White's 6.2 and led the nation in scoring with 22 touchdowns. White had 18.

While White and Sims are expected to wage a two-man race for the Heisman, others who probably will finish high in the voting include quarterbacks Marc Wilson of Brigham Young and Art Schlichter of Ohio State and running back Vagas Ferguson, Notre Dame's career rushing leader.

Wilson was the national total offense king with 3,580 yards. He completed 250 of 427 passes for 3,720 yards — he lost 140 rushing — and 29 touchdowns. Schlichter, a sophomore, led Ohio State to a surprising 11-0 season and a berth in the Rose Bowl. He completed 94 of 179 passes for 1,519 yards and 13 touchdowns. Ferguson finished fifth nationally in rushing with 1,437 yards and scored 17 times.

Friday and Saturday nights in Richmond, Va., media covering East Carolina University were gathered for the opening of basketball season.

But the action of Pat Dye in resigning as football coach at East Carolina on Thursday, overshadowed the debut of Coach Dave Odom's first basketball team.

Other media members, along with interested people who recognized ECU media representatives, wanted to talk about the football program. The focus, unfortunately was taken away from the basketball Pirates.

And over the next few weeks, until a new coach is named, that topic will probably continue to overshadow basketball.

It's a situation Coach Odom probably wishes he didn't have to contend with. He would like all of the focus on basketball, where it should be this time of year.

East Carolina's opening in the Spider Classic had high and low points. The Bucs had their opportunity against Virginia Commonwealth on Friday night, and had the chance to win. Poor free throw shooting, and then the lack of having playing time together probably were the chief factors in the loss. It marked the third time that the Pirates had played the stronger Rams right down to the wire, only to lose. Those three losses are by a total of five points.

Saturday night, the Pirates looked disinterested in playing for the consolation title, despite Odom's efforts to get them up for the game. The starters didn't do the job, but the bench came through with some fine performances. Mark McLaurin, Michael Gibson, David Underwood and several others did a fine job of getting the Pirates back on the right track.

Even so, it was not until the final ten minutes, when senior George Maynor finally came to life that the Pirates put the game away.

Perhaps a lesson was learned: every game must be played as if it is for a championship, not a consolation. No one can be taken for granted.

The Pirates play two home games this week, then travel to Duke on Saturday to meet the Big Four Tournament champs. It will be an interesting week for them.

Turning back to the football question, there are a number of questions that will have to be answered in the coming weeks.

What direction is the athletic program at East Carolina to go? What are those "long-range" plans that the administration has, and how to they affect the future?

For certain, over the next few days, many names are going to be talked about. Even Sonny Randle has already popped up, coming back to where he was once successful.

As for Dye, it would appear he has the Wyoming job for the asking. But it also would appear that he has to be a leading candidate for the N.C. State job. Certainly, he won't be out of coaching long. Talk along press row in Richmond was that Dye would get the position, possibly as early as mid-week. Time will tell.

At any rate, the Dye era at East Carolina is over. It was a successful one.

Unless there is a change in the policies at East Carolina, there is no reason why the next era at East Carolina cannot be just as, or even more successful. The community, university and the fans and alumni must unite behind whomever is chosen for the job and give full support.

Just because Pat Dye is gone doesn't mean that we won't tee it up next September.

Finley Dominates Talks

TORONTO (AP) — Baseball men gathered in this snowdraped Canadian metropolis Monday for the start of their annual convention devoted much of their behind-the-scenes conversations to the man who isn't here — Charles O. Finley.

Questions buzzed: Is Charlie O.'s shaky Oakland franchise ready to be bartered off to Denver oil tycoon Marvin Davis and transferred to the mile-high Colorado city? Or is Finley, the wily maverick, again tweaking the establishment's nose, putting on a big tease and suddenly becoming obstinate on a deal that was believed all but signed, sealed and delivered?

As baseball's hierarchy assembled to explore the state of the game and make whatever adjustments are necessary, including a close look at the impending players agreement, the consensus appeared to be this:

There will be big league baseball in Denver next season.

There Are BIG heating bills and there are LITTLE heating bills. WHITE'S INSULATION makes the difference 758-4881

Shriners Deny Black 'Quota'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina Shrine Bowl game official has denied allegations that Shriners urged the bowl's selection committee not to overload the squad with blacks.

Roy Smith, game treasurer, said, "We wouldn't dare do anything like that."

But one member of this year's coaching staff who also served on the four-member selection committee told the Durham Morning Herald: "They told us, 'Don't let the squad become overloaded with blacks because we are in the business to raise money and we can't raise that money with two black teams on the field.'"

The Shrine Bowl pits high school all-star football players from North Carolina against those from South Carolina. The game has raised more than $13 million since 1937 for the Shriners' crippled Children's Hospital in Greenville, S.C.

The game started with all-white squads but the North Carolina squad was integrated in 1966 after a Charlotte high school pupil sued for not allowing blacks to play. The first blacks were chosen for the South Carolina squad soon after.

This year's North Carolina 35-member squad will include 15 blacks, a record high. The game will be played Saturday in Charlotte.

"I have no personal knowledge of support, other than from the white people," Smith said. "We have some black people who come to the game, but that's about all."

No black coach or manager has ever been selected. This year the first black official will participate.

Pitt C. C. Changes Schedule

Pitt Community College's basketball game with Bladen Tech scheduled for Saturday afternoon was cancelled after Bladen Tech officials decided to discontinue basketball at their school.

Bladen Tech will forfeit all its conference games.

Pitt Community College will resume its schedule Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Chicod School gym when it meets James Sprunt Tech.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦QJ8 ♦AJ ♦952 ♦AQ1093

The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—The key to all accurate auctions is to establish a fit as soon as possible. Despite the fact that you have a good five-card suit of your own and a solid opening bid, the most important feature of your hand is the excellent support for the suit in which partner has made a jump shift. Any bid other than a raise to three spades would be a bridge crime.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AKJ9852 ♦A73 ♦K6 ♦6

What is your opening bid?

A.—By a process of elimination, it is easy to arrive at the right decision. An opening bid of four spades is preemptive, and your hand is far too strong for that. However, a demand bid of two spades promises much more in high cards and playing tricks than you can deliver. Therefore, your only acceptable opening bid is one spade.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦A93 ♦952 ♦83 ♦AK762

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—Had your five-card suit been a major, it would be correct to jump to three in your suit to give partner a choice of contracts. However, it is inappropriate to jump in a minor unless you envision a slam, or have such unbalanced distribution that game in no trump would be in jeopardy. Neither condition exists here, so a raise to three no trump is the only sensible choice.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦Q62 ♦743 ♦AQ5 ♦8752

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?

A.—When you hold 8 balanced points and partner opens one no trump, you would normally invite game by bidding two no trump—after all, partner might have 18 points for his opening. Here, however, your perfectly flat hand is a liability. In addition, you have no intermediate cards to give your hand "body." Since game prospects are quite remote, even opposite a maximum, we would not extend the invitation. Pass.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦K8 ♦AQ6 ♦KJ9832 ♦K9

What is your opening bid?

A.—You could open one diamond, but think of the rebid problem you would face over any response by partner. There is simply no bid you can make at your second turn that is neither an underbid nor an overbid. To avoid that problem, we recommend that you open one no trump despite the fact that you have a six-card suit. After all, if one of your low diamonds had been a black card, this simply wouldn't have been a problem.

♦J5 ♦J105 ♦QJ92 ♦QJ95

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What action do you take?

A.—Once again you have 8 points, and again there is a drawback to the hand—a total lack of aces and kings. Nevertheless, this is a much better hand than the previous example. Those tens and nines in combination with your honors improve the holding considerably. In addition, you have two useful four-card suits. Bid two no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦AQ93 ♦J10952 ♦874 ♦J

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West Pass Pass Pass 1 ♦

1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ 3 ♦

Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—Although we are loathe to remove partner's low-level penalty doubles, all such actions are, to a certain extent, cooperative. Here's a case where we would definitely pull to three spades because all of our defensive strength is in spades, and West is almost certainly short in that suit. In addition, North could not open the bidding, so it's unlikely that he can beat the contract in his own hand.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♦A4 ♦KJ10 ♦AQ854 ♦K63

The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass

1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There is a popular fallacy that any jump to game is a shutout. That is not the case. Here, you have the equivalent of a no trump opening bid, but a jump to two no trump does not show a hand of that strength. You can describe your hand accurately by jumping to three no trump. This does not bar partner from further action. Indeed, it should encourage him to go on if he, too, has extra values.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♦K8 ♦AQ6 ♦KJ9832 ♦K9

What is your opening bid?

A.—You could open one diamond, but think of the rebid problem you would face over any response by partner. There is simply no bid you can make at your second turn that is neither an underbid nor an overbid. To avoid that problem, we recommend that you open one no trump despite the fact that you have a six-card suit. After all, if one of your low diamonds had been a black card, this simply wouldn't have been a problem.

Bethlehem Preparing

BETHLEHEM, Ga. (AP) — Postmaster Lamar Ridgeway is getting ready for the Christmas rush and anticipates hand stamping the postmark Bethlehem on as many as 15,000 pieces of mail.

Ridgeway is proud that "all the postmarks are put on by hand," at the little post office in this tiny Georgia town about 40 miles east of Atlanta.

For the next few weeks, Ridgeway will have help from Mrs. Dru Evans, who is the regular replacement for the postmaster when he is away.

But, Ridgeway says, Christmas mail has been down during the past several years because people aren't sending cards as they did in the past.

"At one time, we canceled as many as 20,000 pieces of mail during the Christmas season," he said.

Many of his regular customers used to bring in 1,200 to 1,500 cards for the Bethlehem postmark. Last year, however, Ridgeway said the largest single mailing was for 700 cards.

He and Mrs. Evans can postmark about 2,000 pieces of mail by hand daily. Other than the Christmas season, however, he said the post office averages between 200 and 300 pieces of mail each day.

Art Carney Making A Career As Older Man

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Art Carney, who has made a movie career of playing older men, has the distinct feeling on his birthdays that he has celebrated them many years earlier.

Even going back to the delightful character of Ed Norton in the old Jackie Gleason show — when Art was a striping in his 30s — he has portrayed men many years his senior. Ageless Norton was presumed to be in his 40s.

Carney's latest venture into dotage is as a retired bartender in his 70s in "Going In Style" with George Burns and Lee Strasberg. While Carney is not playing a kid, there is some comfort in the fact that he is clearly younger than his costars.

Burns is 84, Strasberg 77. "I'm 61," Carney said expansively, "but Burns kept calling me a runny-nosed kid while we were making the picture."

"It's a pretty funny movie. George plays a retired salesman. Strasberg plays a retired cab driver. We all share a Queens apartment in New York and collect our Social Security checks."

"We get the idea to put a little excitement in our lives by robbing a bank. And we pull it off, too. But I'm not telling anybody what happens after that."

Carney's movie career blossomed in 1974 when he won the Academy Award for best actor for his performance as a 70-ish widower who travels across the country on his own seeking a new life.

Since then he has starred in "The Late Show," "The Ravagers," "Steel," "W.W. and the Dixieland Dance Kings," "Sunburn," "Movie, Movie" and "House Calls." In all of them he played doddering characters.

While Carney jokes about his precocious old age, the actor clearly would like to play a man his own age or perhaps younger.

"I can't play juveniles anymore, like I did in 'Charlie's Aunt,'" Carney said, "but I'm getting a little tired of playing guys so much older. I want to get the girl at the end of a picture before I quit."

"Playing old men isn't tough for me. I've got a hearing aid I wear all the time myself and a bum leg so I can limp with the best of them."

Carney, like Burns and Strasberg, has no desire to watch the world go by from a rocking chair. His old man roles notwithstanding, Art is opposed to retirement.

"The great thing about being an actor is you can go on acting as long as you can walk and talk," he said. "The point of this new movie is three old guys fighting boredom. You don't fight boredom when you're busy acting."

"I'd go nuts if I had to retire. Even after a couple of weeks off I begin to get itchy. So I think of Walter Brennan and Lewis Stone. They did all right working until they were well into their 80s."

"Burns has the right idea. He goes from one project to the next. I'm out here in Hollywood to help promote 'Going In Style.' I'm taking advantage of the time to do a guest appearance on the 'Alice' TV series and to do some talk shows."

Art was asked if the years take a toll physically and mentally on actors. Is it as easy to learn lines, hit marks and work 12 hours a day under hot lights as it was in his youth?

"Well, I never was what you'd call a fast study when it came to lines," he said. "I'm still not. But I don't use a tape recorder to memorize my lines like some actors do. I wish I had a photographic memory."

"Burns really surprised me. He has no trouble memorizing lines and by the time we started production he had every one of his speeches down pat. I'm usually the last one to remember lines — somebody has to be last."

"Once a picture is over I completely forget every speech I had. I did 'The Odd Couple' on Broadway for months and at this moment I couldn't recall a single one of my lines from the play."

"Sure, making movies is physically tiring for everybody. But they're not as bad as a television series. You get more time for rehearsals and there's less pressure on the actors."

Meanwhile, backers of President Carter are planning a similarly priced bash for Wednesday.

The production will run for eight days in Moscow before a tour in Leningrad. Members of the audience will be provided with head sets carrying translations of the dialogue.

'The Gin Game' To Soviet Union

NEW YORK (AP) — Vodka's the thing in Moscow, but that isn't holding back the stars of the Broadway Hit, "The Gin Game."

Hume Cronyn and his wife, Jessica Tandy, are taking their Pulitzer Prize-winning production from the Great White Way to the Soviet Union for an opening Thursday. The Soviets have seen American musicals, but this is the first play sponsored by the State Department, which wants to show Americans in a home setting.

The production will run for eight days in Moscow before a tour in Leningrad. Members of the audience will be provided with head sets carrying translations of the dialogue.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 4, 1979.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is good for making long-range plans to have increased security in the days ahead. Some obstacles will require patience and character to work out to your satisfaction.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Put good ideas to work that will improve your relationships with associates. Handle outside affairs early in the day for best results.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are able handle important financial matters very well but be careful of obstacles in the path of your progress.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Envision what you want to accomplish and then follow through with well-formulated plans. Be sure to safeguard your health.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Know what you want to do socially and then follow through. Listen to what one of much experience has to suggest.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Good day to see many of your closest friends and quietly plan for the future. Personal aims are best pursued later in the day.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Show your ability at handling public affairs and others will appreciate your talents. Later you can solve a personal problem.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You can delve right into new aims now and get excellent results, despite some problems that may arise. Handle them quickly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Find a better way of handling agreements you have made and later get others to assist you. Come to a better understanding with mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how to have more accord with associates. Avoid one who is detrimental to your progress. Don't neglect your health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your work well and concentrate on that which will be most profitable to you. Come to a fine agreement with associates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan amusements you like and have a delightful time with congenials. Handle any business matters most intelligently.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Straighten out serious matters at home and have more happiness there. Be sure to handle financial matters wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one with a brilliant mind and therefore should have as fine an education as possible. There is much inventive ability here and the body must keep pace with the mind. Give good religious training to guide the life properly.

Critical Of Shah Regime

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says the 37-year reign of the deposed Shah of Iran was "one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and contends the interests of the United States lie "with the Iranian people."

The Massachusetts Democrat, vying with President Carter for his party's 1980 presidential nomination, did not criticize administration handling of the 4-week-old hostage crisis in an interview Sunday with San Francisco television station KRON-TV.

Instead, Kennedy zeroed in on long-time U.S. foreign policy, saying Americans dealing with that policy "have to get their acts together."

"The shah had the reins of power and ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind — in the form of terrorism and the basic and fundamental violations of human rights, in the most cruel circumstances, to his own people," he said.

With that in mind, Kennedy said, "how do we justify ... on the one hand accepting that individual because he would like to come here and stay here with his unimpeachable billions of dollars that he's stolen from Iran and, at the same time, say to Hispanics who are here legally that they have to wait nine years to bring their wife and their children to this country."

The new Greenville main office of Branch Banking & Trust Co. will open for business on Thursday, Dec. 6 at 9 a.m., the bank announced.

The uniquely shaped structure is located in downtown Greenville at the corner of Greene and Third Streets with one entrance serving both streets. An entrance is also provided from the parking lot, it was noted.

The bank said that the new building's exterior is ribbed, buff color limestone with dark bronze color aluminum windows with bronze insulated glass. The site is landscaped with dogwood, magnolia, maple and weeping cherry trees, it was mentioned.

Two lanes of traffic lead to a covered drive-up window and a remote teller unit for customer convenience.

The interior of the two story structure houses a large lobby with four teller stations, reception and new accounts areas, an officer's platform, two private offices, a board room and employee's lounge.

BB&T's two other Greenville offices are located on Arlington Boulevard and on Memorial Drive. Branch Banking and Trust Co., the state's oldest bank, was established in Wilson in 1872. The bank operates 81 offices in 41 cities and towns from the coast to the Piedmont area of the state.

Total resources of BB&T as of Sept. 30 exceeded $596,000,000. BB&T, the sixth largest bank in the state, reported that it has more capital in relation to deposits than any other major financial institution in North Carolina.

Feel Health Warning Is Undermined By Ads

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission reports that advertisements by the cigarette industry are undermining the effect of health warnings printed on cigarette packages.

An FTC report indicates the agency will ask Congress to launch an anti-cigarette smoking campaign on television and in newspapers to counter the $875 million spent annually by the tobacco industry for advertising.

Part of the report, which was obtained by and published in the Winston-Salem Journal, criticizes the cigarette ads for portraying only the "positive aspects of smoking." The report says the ads "may have the capacity to create misimpressions of the safety and desirability of smoking."

The FTC recommends in the report that Congress strengthen the warning in cigarette advertisements and on packs of cigarettes, possibly warning of specific health hazards such as cancer, heart disease or bronchitis.

According to the report, televised public service announcements about the dangers of smoking have decreased since the 1970 ban on broadcasting cigarette advertisements. And, the report says, the cigarette industry "has found other ways to effectively spend their advertising dollars."

Current advertising by the industry, the report says, tries to "associate smoking with ideas, individuals and activities worth of emulation, and to attempt to allay anxieties about the hazards of smoking."

Those slogans include Newport's "Alive with Pleasure" and Camel advertisements with a man who "does more than just pass through life ... He lives it." The report cited the advertisements and said they seem to "directly contradict the required health warning" that smoking is dangerous to health and perhaps to life itself.

The report contends that public service ads warning of the dangers of smoking do have an impact on the public and that money spent for such ads would be well spent.

Quality Over Body Count

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Lutheran scholar says mainline churches should begin defining success in terms of quality of ministry rather than in quantity of membership numbers and leave the "body count to God."

The Rev. Carl S. Dudley of Chicago's McCormick Theological Seminary told Lutheran Church in America leaders that although the church ultimately cannot survive without memberships, "there's a problem of believing so much in our institutional numerical success that we come to believe God depends on it."

Arrested On Driving Charges

Alton Earl Warren, 50 of 108 Pinecrest Dr., the city's chief building inspector, was arrested about 1:40 a.m. Saturday on charges of careless and reckless driving, driving under the influence, and transporting liquor with the seal broken.

Greenville Police arrested Warren near the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road.

Warren, employed by the city since November 1967, has been chief inspector since 1974.

Trial date on the charges was set for December 19, according to Police Department records.

SUSPECT NUCLEAR TEST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seismic signals, believed to indicate a Soviet underground nuclear explosion, have been detected by the U.S. Atomic Energy Detection System, the Energy Department has announced.

Charge Driver In Car Collision

Bobby Ray Harris of Washington, was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident, following investigation of a 3:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Davis Streets yesterday.

Officers reported the Harris car collided with an auto driven by Jessica Marie Carney of 1601 Lincoln Dr., resulting in an estimated $150 damage to the Carney car and $350 damage to the Harris auto.

Teaches A Reasoning Approach To Time-Use

By PATRICIA WALSH
PHOENIX (UPI) — Some people say time is money, but Stella Cassano Donchak says time is life.

Ms. Donchak, who teaches English at two-year Phoenix College, spends much of her time telling others how to manage theirs. She conducts seminars for the city of Phoenix, for churches and for community groups to help people get control of time and thus their lives.

"First I ask 'What bothers you about time.' People say 'Time passes me by.' 'I always feel pressured' or 'I don't have time enough for what I want to do,' she said.

But her reply is "You've got all the time you need. If there's one area of equality, it's time. We all have the same amount. That's where you figure out who's in charge of the clock."

Once a person confirms belief in free will and choice, Ms. Donchak suggests he or she keep track of all activities and the time they require for a one-week period. Then the list can be studied to see what has been given priority in terms of time.

At this point, a person should ask what he or she really wanted to do, what should have been given more time, what less, and what could have been eliminated. Part of this is admitting what one likes or dislikes, she said.

In the case of a woman who hated housework and found her house always in a clutter, Ms. Donchak advised that she "slip the housework in" among other activities she might enjoy more, such as cleaning out one drawer of a dresser at a time.

A person who doesn't like washing dishes should do it during television commercials, use paper plates or budget their money to eat out, she said.

For those who feel they are controlled by the clock, Ms. Donchak says they should devote some time twice a day to themselves, to reflect, relax and "regain energy."

"It's hard to do because it looks like you're wasting time," she said, but she added that those who take a few minutes out for relaxing find they have more energy and are more productive.

Part of Ms. Donchak's theory is that everyone should consider himself a VIP or very important person, by adjusting their time to the important things in their lives and to future goals.

"I think time is life, and the use we make of time determines everything, the quality of life, energy or lack of it, stress or lack of it, whether we feel free or trapped," she said.

As an illustration of the importance of time, Ms. Donchak says she tells people to close their eyes, imagine they have six months to live and describe what they want to do in their remaining time. This forces people to realize what is really important to them, she said.

For those who say society forces them to use their time a certain way, Ms. Donchak advises these people to either change their lives or accept their unwillingness to fight the system and quit complaining.

Ms. Donchak says the best thing about her approach is that it is never too late.

"In time, nothing stops you from making a fresh start," she said.

Speaking of Your Health... Preventing Attacks of Kidney Stones

I've had two attacks of kidney stones. I'm sure that anyone who has ever had one of these painful attacks will know how terrible it is. It's now eight months since I had my last attack. I dread the thought that it will happen again. Is there any way of preventing it? — Mr. D.S., Mo. Dear Mr. S.:

Many people who have had one or more episodes of kidney stones react as you do. They live in fear that another attack is imminent. The fear of an attack can be just as debilitating as an attack itself.

A kidney stone is composed of one or more chemicals. Calcium, phosphate, uric acid and magnesium are a few of the elements that may be deposited anywhere along the urinary tract. The ureter is a tiny tube which carries urine from the kidney to the bladder. When this is obstructed by a stone, the ureter becomes distended and painful. Since there are so many different causes of kidney stones, a concentrated effort must be made to track down the basic cause in an effort to avoid future attacks.

One of the major reasons for these stones is faulty metabolism (breakdown of food). With people who have gout, the uric acid content of the blood becomes high and uric acid kidney stones may be formed.

Abnormalities of calcium metabolism is another reason for stone deposits. A very small hormone-producing gland, the parathyroid, lies deep in the thyroid gland. This little gland controls the calcium balance in the body.

Many cases of kidney stones have been found in people who take unusually large doses of vitamin D. Infections of the kidneys and the urinary bladder are common causes of kidney stones.

Unfortunately, many sufferers of kidney stones go through a commonly described sequence of events. During the acute attack, very little investigation can be done. When the attack is over, patients are usually so relieved that they tend to become careless and do not immediately proceed, as they should, to explore the initial cause for their condition.

There are now many excellent methods by which the entire urinary tract can be studied. Special dyes and X-rays (intravenous pyelograms), and chemical studies, often reveal the basic reasons for the deposits of kidney stones.

If you actively pursue finding the cause, you will find, happily, that your anxiety level will be altered.

As for those who say society forces them to use their time a certain way, Ms. Donchak advises these people to either change their lives or accept their unwillingness to fight the system and quit complaining.

Ms. Donchak says the best thing about her approach is that it is never too late.

"In time, nothing stops you from making a fresh start," she said.

Deplore Hostile Aura's Growth

NEW YORK (AP) — An agency of the National Council of Churches has deplored "frightening hostility" toward Iranian students in this country and admonished against making them a "target of retaliation" for the holding of U.S. embassy hostages by students in Iran.

Urging educators to "use their leadership and energies to insure that the safety, welfare and dignity of these students is maintained and upheld on their campuses," the interdenominational council's education and ministry division said: "In the name of human justice and Christian charity, the NCC calls upon its member churches and Christians throughout the land to be voices of reason, models of restraint and advocates of justice in situations where these persons may be threatened or in danger of retaliation."

New Awareness Effort Begins

The State of North Carolina Department of Human Resources is originating an awareness campaign in Eastern North Carolina to investigate the large number of children killed in auto accidents each year. The purpose of this campaign is to encourage the use of child seat restraints.

A meeting concerning this issue will be held Wednesday, December 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Allied Health Building auditorium at East Carolina University. The building is located on Charles Boulevard at NC 264 Bypass.

Interested persons may contact Erthel Hines, Chairman of the Eastern Regional Children's Council, at 756-6742.

Staff Escapes As U. S. Embassy In Libya Sacked

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Some 2,000 Libyans sacked the U.S. Embassy in Tripoli and set fire to the four-story building but the embassy staff escaped unhurt.

The State Department filed a strong protest with the Libyan government and implied that it was responsible for the attack.

It was the second attack on an American embassy in a Moslem country in response to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's campaign to end U.S. influence in the Islamic world. On Nov. 21, a mob burned the embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, killing two U.S. Marines and two Pakistani staff members.

Charge d'Affaires William Eagleton's wife said about a dozen staff members were working in the Tripoli embassy at midmorning Sunday when a group of demonstrators arrived "quietly chanting." She said the staff "immediately locked up," and several male officials went to the Green Square, a central plaza several blocks away, where they "saw a large mob. They got back to the embassy and within five minutes the mobs arrived."

Consul Vincent Principe said the Libyans began "banging on the door and made it known to us they wanted to get inside. We just thought it prudent to leave."

The Americans fled through a back door and took refuge in their homes.

Only one Libyan policeman was on duty in front of the embassy at the time, and Libyan officials ignored appeals from the embassy for reinforcements, the State Department said in Washington. The embassy's Marine guard was withdrawn from Tripoli some time ago at the request of the Libyan government, the department said.

The State Department said the mob apparently used two-by-fours to break through the front door while some of the demonstrators climbed up to a second-floor balcony. JANA, the official Libyan news agency, said the mob burned an American flag and effigies of President Carter and the deposed shah of Iran. U.S. officials said there was serious fire damage to the consular section on the first floor and damage also on the second floor.

State Department officials in Washington said the attack on the building set off an automatic tear-gas security system. JANA charged that the embassy staff "fired toxic gases believed to be used only by the military, confirming that the embassy's employees are military personnel." It claimed the gas seriously injured several students.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the U.S. government protested the "inadequate and unresponsive" security protection.

Asked whether the attack had the backing of the Libyan government, he replied: "Libya is not a country in which demonstrations and other public manifestations happen in the same way in which they happen in this country."

JANA said the Libyan government protested the embassy's use of gas.

Mrs. Eagleton said police reinforcements arrived after the mob scattered. "but we have protection now at the embassy and our houses." The State Department said Libyan firemen extinguished the fires.

Col. Moammar Khadafy, the head of the Libyan government, in an interview with Italian journalist Oriana Fallaci published Sunday, expressed strong support for Khomeini in his confrontation with the United States. He said if the United States attacked Iran, "we would not remain neutral. Iranians are our brothers."

However, he said he would try to persuade the Iranians to release the 50 Americans held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Following the attack on the U.S. Embassy in Pakistan, the State Department advised Americans in Libya and 10 other Moslem countries whose presence there was not essential to leave. Twelve of the 26 embassy dependents in Tripoli left last week, and the other 14 were to leave today.

There are 2,500 to 3,000 Americans in Libya, which supplies about 10 per cent of the foreign oil the United States imports. Although Khadafy's relations with the United States are usually stormy and he has nationalized the Libyan holdings of most Western oil companies, he still allows American and other foreign experts to work in the oil industry under Libyan supervision.

Cutbacks Face N.C. Highways

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians can expect to see delays in scheduled improvements on several major highway projects as a result of reduced gasoline tax collections, a highway administrator says.

The funding crisis also may force cutbacks in highway projects during the next two years.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose said he'll present the problem to the State Transportation Board at its Dec. 14 meeting. And he says he expects the board to order delays in the improvements at that time.

"The big thing you're going to notice is that you're going to see no major new projects approved," Rose said. "We're not going to be able to expand the program. It's just going to get worse until the General Assembly faces the issue of financing transportation."

So far this fiscal year the state has recorded a loss of about $5.3 million from gasoline tax collections. The tax collections, the major state source for highway funds, have dropped 4.8 percent so far.

The revenues are projected to fall short at least $25 million in 1979-80 and about $30 million in 1980-81.

To balance expenditures, the board is expected to cut $60 million in right-of-way purchases and construction from the 1979-80 highway budget.

But highway officials haven't disclosed which projects may be delayed. Rose said that, "generally, the higher the cost, the greater the likelihood for a delay."

Such projects include improvements on U.S. 64 in Nash and Edgecombe counties, U.S. 74 in Columbus and Robeson counties, U.S. 421 in Pender, Randolph and Chatham counties, the Marion Bypass, the Charlotte Outer Loop and U.S. 321 between Lincolnton and Hickory.

Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed a commission to study funding for the transportation system for a report to the General Assembly in 1981. The commission may propose a state gasoline tax hike or one or two cents per gallon and shifting funding of such agencies as the Highway Patrol from the highway fund to the general fund.

Inflation Hit Tuition Fees

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tuition and fees at private colleges and universities in North Carolina increased 10.5 percent this year, the largest increase in five years.

But there was no tuition increase at the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, although student fees for health clinics and other services rose on some campuses.

The increase at private schools widened the tuition gap between the private college and the public university.

The average for tuition and fees at a private college is now $2,555. In-state students at UNC campuses pay $520 to $592 per year for tuition and fees.

"The gap could result in some shifts in student enrollment patterns," said James Oliver, vice president of the N.C. Association of Independent Colleges and Universities.

"Clearly there is ample evidence that cost is the key factor in a student's choice in attending a college or a university," he said.

Oliver said private colleges face enrollment declines if tuition continues to increase as it has this year.

When the private colleges suffered enrollment declines in 1971, the Legislature started a program to aid them.

Last spring, the General Assembly voted to increase state aid to the schools from $600 per student to $675 per student this year and $750 per student next year.

The Legislature decided not to increase tuition at the UNC campuses.

"You've got to realize that at some of our (public) campuses we've got 80 percent of our students receiving financial assistance," said William C. Friday, president of the UNC system.

He and the UNC Board of Governors have been against an increase in state aid to private colleges.

"If you're going to make these comparisons, you've got to realize that inflation hits the public schools just as hard as it hits the private schools," he said.

Biofeedback Work Told

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Stroke victims may recover the ability to use their hands and legs as the result of biofeedback — a process that enables a patient to monitor his muscle activity.

Dr. Steven Wolf, associate professor of rehabilitation medicine at Emory University in Atlanta, said biofeedback is a procedure that lets patients learn how to convert tiny bits of motion into something more elaborate.

It allows patients to monitor the release of electrical activity when a muscle is used. The patient can learn to increase the electrical activity or control it by seeing what causes a needle on an electrical-activity monitor to move.

Wolf, coordinator of biofeedback research programs at Emory, described his work last week during a presentation to the North Carolina Academy of Family Physicians.

In a group of 32 stroke patients, he said, "more than 70 percent were able to get complete independent use of lower extremities" through the use of biofeedback.

He said stroke patients in their late 30s or early 40s are the best candidates for such work. And he said the process also can be used on persons with spinal cord injuries if there is any indication that muscles below the spinal break can still function.

Hints Revising Rules For Nuns

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Hinting that he is preparing new rules for dress and deportment of women's religious orders, Pope John Paul II told the annual assembly of the International Union of Superiors General, "It is time to prepare rules for a stable life." He reiterated his view that nuns must give witness to their fidelity to the church by wearing religious habits.
