

Tehran State Radio More Conciliatory

By ALEX EFTY
Associated Press Writer
TEHRAN, Iran (AP) —
The students holding 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy today rejected a Security Council appeal for their immediate release, but Tehran state radio took a more conciliatory tone.

saying the U.N. action "left the way open for negotiations."

It was one more sign of conflict between the hard line adopted by the embassy militants and the approach of Iranian officials toward the month-old crisis.

On Tuesday, Ayatollah

Ruhollah Khomeini's regime made new and stronger threats against the captives.
Meanwhile, the U.S. Navy carrier force south of the Persian Gulf doubled in size.

The Security Council resolution was adopted Tuesday on the fourth consecutive day of a debate in which every speaker called for the release of the hostages. Iran boycotted the meeting, claiming it was rigged in favor of the United States.

The resolution contained no condemnation of the Iranians. Besides the appeal on behalf of the hostages, it called on Iran and the United States to "resolve peacefully the remaining issues between them" and urged them to "exercise the utmost restraint" and refrain from
"the threat or use of force."

A spokesman for the embassy militants said of the appeal for the hostages' release, "Since the Security Council is orchestrated by the United States, it is obvious it would say such things because it is the defender of the superpowers and embarked on its deliberations according to the orders it received."

"As it is also obvious that the United States has great influence on this council, which has nothing to do with the oppressed people of the world, its opinion is worthless as far as we are concerned and will not affect us in any way," he told The Associated Press by telephone.

But Tehran Radio, in the first semi-official commentary on the resolution, seemed to stress its positive aspects — from the Iranian viewpoint — ignoring the call for the hostages' release.

"The Iranian government has not been condemned and the United States has been warned, indirectly, against military intervention, and this has left the way open for negotiations," the radio said.

The radio commentary also contrasted with previous statements by Khomeini rejecting any decision by the Security Council in advance as dictated by the United States.

The Iranians seized the embassy and those inside it on Nov. 4, demanding that the United States surrender deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial.
The Carter administration refused and on Tuesday joined the 14 other Security Council members in unanimous adoption of the resolution urging the release of the captives.

Congleton Leaves Education Board; Served 10 Years

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Board of Education member J. Beverly Congleton Jr. of Stokes relinquished his post Tuesday, after almost ten years of service to the board. He suggested former Pitt County assistant superintendent W.
J. (Jack) Edwards Jr. of Stokes to fill the unexpired term.

Congleton noted that he wanted to spend more time with his family as his reason for resignation. Board members praised Congleton's work with the county school system, and asked him to continue to support them.
Edwards officially began his term Tuesday following approval by the board.

The board approved a bid submitted by Tom Togs Inc. for $110,000 for the sale of school property in Belvoir.
Associate Superintendent
Tom Craft noted that the property had come up for resale
Nov. 9, with Tom Togs as the only bidder. A period of ten days was observed to allow upward bids, with none submitted.

A low bid of $10,990 by E. R.
Lewis Construction Co. was approved for demolition at the old Stokes-Pactolus school site. Board member Congleton questioned whether the remaining building at the site had been securely closed off. Associate Superintendent Craft noted that the work had been done.

Director of Testing and Research John McKnight reported on the results of the October, 1979 competency testing. According to McKnight, overall, Pitt County has reduced the failure rate for juniors taking the test for the first time by two percent.

In reading, juniors taking the test for the first time had a percentage rate of 13 percent, said McKnight. Fifty-four percent of the 76 12th graders taking the retest failed. McKnight noted that a majority of the students taking the retest were exceptional students.

In mathematics, 15 percent of the juniors taking the test for the first time failed. Fifty-three percent of the 84 seniors taking the test failed.

McKnight noted that of the 11th graders who failed, 72 failed both sections of the test. Twenty-nine of the seniors taking the retest failed the October test.

Following statements by Falkland Elementary principal Judy Budacz, Farmville Central assistant principal James McAdams and Director of Transportation Rodney Bullock, the board voted to separate Falkland's K-5 school bus students from the present Falkland-Farmville Middle bus routes.

Under the new concept, four of the six buses presently serving Falkland-Farmville Middle students will now serve only Falkland. The other two buses will be allocated to the five high school buses in the Farmville area, with middle school students now riding the high school buses.

The request was made following a report by Mrs.
Budacz, stating that the new concept would shorten the day for the young students in Falkland, some of whom get on the bus at 7 a.m., and don't get home until past 4:30 p.m.

"As an instructional leader, it's hard to try to establish some planning and coordinating time for my teachers and aides, when the teachers have to begin supervising buses at 3 p.m., and the aides leave soon afterwards," said Mrs. Budacz.

Following Bullock's explanation of the new bus system, McAdams spoke on the behalf of Farmville Central, saying that Sam Bundy and H. B. Sugg teachers encounter the same sort of problem with busing. He also noted that the 50-50 mix of high school students and middle school students could be a dangerous thing.

Associate Superintendent
Tom Craft reminded board members that the board had separated the high school bus students from other routes, and noted that the granting of Falkland's request would be a "departure."

The board voted to use money from the Belvoir property sale to install additional doors at Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central High Schools. The additional doors would allow the high school gymsnasiums to hold 2,400 persons, over the present 1,800 limit. Farmville Central assistant principal McAdams

Ground Broken For New Pitt Hospital Bed Tower

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Spades cut the ground around Pitt County Memorial Hospital again yesterday afternoon as the work on the third bed tower for the hospital officially began.

A 1:30 p.m. ceremony was attended by a small group of citizens and the first shovels were wielded by East Carolina University

Chancellor Thomas Brewer, County Commissioner-Hospital Board Liaison member Charles Gaskins, ECU Medical School Dean
William Laupus, County Commissioners' Chairman
Ed Warren and Hospital Board Vice Chairman Jim Cheatham.

Other spadeful were turned by Hospital Director Jack Richardson, Sen. Vernon
White, Rep. Sam Bundy, Rep.
Horton Rountree, Greenville
Mayor Percy Cox, Greenville
Mayor-elect Don McGlohon,
County Commissioner
Burney Tucker, County Commissioner Bob Martin, County Commissioner Alton Garner and others.

The new three-story bed tower will add 144 beds to the hospital. Work in earnest on the $5.3 million project will begin the middle of this month. Completion is planned for 1982. Also being built is a 22-bed addition to the psychiatric unit.

This, the West Bed Tower, will be a duplication of the two other "snowflake designed" bed towers now in use.
The project is being funded by the East Carolina University School of Medicine, with appropriations made by the N. C. General Assembly.

Additional beds are said to be needed because of the rapid expansion of patient care services provided by the ECU School of Medicine and the hospital. According to Director Richardson, the medical school accounts for 40 percent of admissions and about 40 percent of the hospital's patients come from outside Pitt County. Provisions were made, he reminded, in the original agreement between the ECU School of Medicine and the hospital to construct an additional bed tower to meet the demands of an increasing patient load on the regional referral center.

In 1975 and again in 1976, university and hospital officials voted to delay construction of more bed space until demand necessitated it.
In early 1978 planning began.

Seek State Plan On Consolidation

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City-Pitt County School Systems
Merger Study Committee voted Tuesday to request the Division of School Planning,
State Department of Public Instruction, to present plans for consolidation and merger of the Greenville City-Pitt County Schools, utilizing as little change as possible in district lines, listing the pros and cons of merger, while maintaining the neighborhood school concept.

The merger study group hopes to receive answers on a list of concerns, including questions on district lines, transportation, curricula, board representation, administrative personnel, teachers and support personnel, and facilities.

The list of concerns was drawn up by the committee following discussion concerning feelings around the county concerning the proposed merger.

"Everyone I've talked to in the city and the county has been against the merger," said committee member Bill McLawn. "I feel myself that the time is not good. If we could sell a bill of goods that would save the taxpayers money, it'd be a different

Committee member
William Earl House noted that the county school system had recently undergone both integration and consolidation, making many people in the system resistant to any more change.

County school board members serving on the merger study committee reported that out of the some 69 county citizens serving on local advisory committees, only two were in favor of the merger following a recent canvass by the county board of education.

Committee member

Donovan Phillips remarked that both the committee and the public needed to be educated on the matter before making any decisions on the merger question.

Committee member Jim Black noted the advisory councils represent the feelings of the county, and said that county persons "don't want to compromise very much."

"If we have to compromise very much to merge, it'll be voted down in the county," said Black.

Lengthy discussion was heard on the possible sale of J. H. Rose High School to East Carolina University. According to Greenville City board members serving on the committee, the proposed sale was "a long way down the road," as noted by Phillips.

"I don't think the sale of Rose should be considered at this point," said member Terri Shank. "It was only mentioned once."

Committee members did not set a time limit for the State Department study, and no later meeting was set.

Farmville Board Asked Urge Flying The Flag

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners last night asked new Mayor Linwood Mercer to issue a proclamation requesting that businesses and citizens of the Town of Farmville display their United States Flags daily and that the Town bell be rung each day until our fellow Americans hostage in Iran are free and returned home.

The resolution was the suggestion of new Commissioner Charles Joyner.

Mercer, Joyner, new Commissioner Joe Kue and re-elected incumbent Commissioner John Turner Walston were sworn in yesterday at noon and conducted their first regular board meeting last night.

During the meeting, Commissioner David Stowe was elected by the board as Mayor Pro Tempore. Commissioner Joe Kue spoke in favor of continuing a Farmville Board tradition of naming the commissioner with the highest number of votes as mayor pro tem. This is Stowe, he indicated.

Commissioner LeRoy Redden was elected town representative to the Mid-East Commission.

Mayor Mercer announced standing committee appointments as follows: Stowe, chairman and Joyner, member of the Public Safety Committee; Walston, chairman and Redden, member of the Utilities Committee; Joyner, chairman and Walston, member of the Public Works Committee; Redden, chairman and Kue, member of the Recreation and Human Services Committee; and Kue, chairman and Stowe, member of the Finance and Planning Committee. Mercer urged that the committees meet as soon as

HOTLINE APPEAL GIFTS NEEDED

There are some 20 boarding homes in Pitt County for elderly and disabled persons. Christmas in many of them will be bleak, Beverly Wheeler of the Pitt County Department of Social Services said, if more fortunate Pitt Countians don't bring cheer in. She has asked Hotline to appeal for organizations to "adopt" boarding homes to provide Christmas gifts such as articles of clothing and personal items to each resident. The homes range in population from five to 20 persons. Mrs.
Wheeler said it seems best for whole homes to be adopted at once, rather for individuals within the homes to be, so some don't feel slighted. Interested groups — or individuals if they feel able to provide for a whole home — are asked to call Mrs. Wheeler as soon as possible at 758-2167. If she is not available, one may ask for Beth Clark, also

80th Anniversary Observed

The End of the Century Book Club celebrated its 80th anniversary last night with its annual Christmas meeting held at the home of Mrs. James T. Cheatham III.

Assisting were Mrs. James M. Corcoran, Mrs. Mickey A. Herin, Mrs. James M. Moye Jr. and Mrs. David Womack.

The club was organized in December, 1899, by Mrs. Sallie Southall Cotten. Its name is from the French "fin siecle," or a passing of the old order into a new and more promising era, especially for women.

The club had 18 charter members with the objective of sharing "mental and social culture" according to the club's constitution. Members would share not only books but magazines. Records show that members shared subscriptions to nine magazines even before books were exchanged. The members also formed the first library in Pitt County prior to Sheppard Library.

Dr. William Stephenson, of the ECU English Department, made a study of the club in 1978, and noted that early members shared long-time family connections with eastern Carolina and concern for the region's well-being. They shared high social and economic status; their husbands and fathers were landowners, tobacco merchants, attorneys, physicians, bankers and business men. Mrs. T. J. Jarvis, a charter member, was the wife of a former governor and U.S. Ambassador to Brazil.

There are presently 24 members in the club. Current officers include President, Mrs. Clifton Everett Jr., Vice President, Miss Jane Joyner, Secretary, Mrs. James M. Moye Jr., Treasurer, Mrs. J. T. Little Jr., and Librarian, Mrs. John D. Rose.

A HOLIDAY PARTY... and 80th anniversary of the End of the Century Book Club was held last night. Pictured are Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Mrs. Joseph S. Moye and Mrs. James T. Little Sr.

Jr., and Librarian, Mrs. John D. Rose.

MINOR WOUNDS

Cleanliness is the key to treating minor wounds in order to help prevent infection. According to NCSU agricultural extension specialists, you should avoid touching the wound with anything soiled. Breathing on the wound or covering it with your mouth should also be avoided.

First wash the wound and surrounding skin with soap and warm water, wiping in a direction away from the wound. Press a sterile pad on the wound and apply pressure at a point above the wound, if necessary, to control bleeding. When bleeding stops, apply a fresh, sterile pad and bandage loosely. Change dressing as needed to keep area clean and dry.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A lot of parents go through the phase where their children go to college and two weeks later want to have their parents tested for irregular flow of oxygen to the brain. Adults don't know anything.

Oh, I can take the humiliation of kids asking, "Do you understand what I mean by the term 'bottom line'?"

I can handle the condescending way they spell in front of me. I can even endure their impatience when they ask me something and when I don't hear it they shout, "Never mind!"

What I can't stand is their sanctimonious superiority. They all go through it. We no longer got one child raised who didn't know how we managed to feed ourselves without a working knowledge of statistics than we had to live through an economics expert.

God has now chosen to send us a son who is majoring in "cinema."

Forget the home movies. We stopped showing those two years ago when we asked him to splice together some of our shots of South America. We own the shortest home movie ever recorded in the Guinness Book of Records. As he said, "There was only ten feet of film that had any quality to it whatsoever. I cannot believe you left home without a tripod."

What really gets to me is that I can't enjoy a movie anymore without his Ronacizing it.

Mom: "The Seduction of Joe Tynan and I loved it..."

Son: "Just missed making a statement."

Mom: "... up to a point. Of course the one I really liked was 'Apocalypse Now' which was breathtakingly..."

Son: "Coppola had a concept but it didn't work."

Son: "Beautiful film. Sensitive and real."

Mom: "... ed a million according to the critics and worth every penny of it."

Son: "What about 'Life of Brian'?"

Mom: "I haven't seen it, but the Clawsons saw it and walked out of the theatre..."

Son: "Most brilliant piece of satire to come across the screen since Chaplin."

Mom: "... laughing. My gosh, they couldn't stop."

Son: "I'd be interested in comparing your notes on '10.' Or did you relate at all to the metaphor?"

With luck, maybe I'll outgrow him.

Never boil an egg. To hard-cook, put eggs in a saucepan with enough water to come at least one inch above the eggs. Cover the pan, heat the water to boiling and turn off the heat. Then let the eggs stand in the water for about 15 minutes. Soft-cook eggs the same way — just reduce the standing time to one to four minutes. Shells are easier to remove if eggs are run under cold water immediately after cooking.

Dear Abby

Fed Up With Spoiled Hams

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: In response to ACTRESS, who criticized those in the audience for rushing out of the theater the minute the performance is over instead of sticking around for all the curtain calls:

I go to the ticket window, lay down my hard-earned money hoping to get my money's worth in entertainment. I sit through the performance, then down comes the curtain. End of show. Then I get up and leave.

Why should I either remain in my seat or stand up and keep applauding those egomaniacs and shouting "Bravo!" like a nincompoop? I paid THEM to perform for ME. I should be applauded for buying the ticket. Without me, and others like me, they would be in the unemployment line because those ego-loaded showoffs would rather starve to death than do menial work.

Why should entertainers be treated like gods? Have you ever heard of three curtain calls for a neurosurgeon?

JOE S. IN SALEM, N.Y.

DEAR JOE: No. But it could be "curtains" for the patient of a neurosurgeon who turns in a poor performance!

DEAR ABBY: About six months ago my husband started acting nervous and preoccupied. He also started working late at his office and on weekends — something he rarely did.

We've been married 16 years, have a nice family, and have often said that ours was one of the few really "good" marriages we knew of.

A week ago, I received a phone call in the middle of the afternoon from a woman who refused to identify herself, but said she thought I should know that my husband was having an affair with a young woman who works in his office. Then she mentioned the woman's name. I recalled my husband telling me that he had employed a young, unmarried woman by that name about a year ago. I fell apart.

When my husband came home, I told him about the call and knew from his reaction it was true. I cried. He cried, too, and then confessed that he had had an affair with her, but broke it off two weeks ago, telling her it was a regrettable mistake, and he would get her a job elsewhere. He said she seemed to accept his decision. Then he asked me to listen in on the telephone extension while he called someone. I did. I recognized the voice at once as the woman who had phoned me! She called, hoping I would throw my husband out and give her a clear field!

I've forgiven my husband, but I'm still hurting some. I'm glad I didn't act foolishly in haste. Perhaps some other wife will be wiser for my experience.

If you print this, please don't use my name.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to LONGING FOR MOTHERHOOD was the worst! She wanted a baby but had no husband or boyfriend, so she was considering asking a fellow to do her a favor and father her child. You told her "scrap the idea!" Why?

If a woman wants a baby, why should she have to marry a man she may not love just to have one? If she's longing for motherhood, married or not, that's the time to do something about it.

Today a woman has the right to have an abortion if she wants one, so why shouldn't she have the right to have a baby if that's what she wants?

FREEDOM FOR ALL

DEAR FREEDOM: I'm all for a woman's right to have a baby if she wants one. But I could not in good conscience go along with her idea of "asking a fellow to do her a favor" to achieve motherhood.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married three months and already I have a very serious problem. My husband told me he divorced his first wife of five years because she had affairs with other men. Now I can understand why, because even though he has many fine qualities, he has got to be the world's worst lover.

I have tried to build up his ego in this regard and put on a good act because I know how hurt he was when he found out about his first wife's unfaithfulness. But, Abby, this constant frustration is driving me up a wall!

I have considered seeing some old boyfriends. I really think it could save our marriage, because we get along so well in every other way.

I'm in my mid-30s and I truly love this man, but marriage with no sexual satisfaction is hard to endure. Help!

Miss Fehlner Marries On Saturday Afternoon

GOLDSBORO — The base chapel at Seymour Johnson AFB here was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Linda Lee Fehlner and Lt. Frederick Carroll Jones.

The Rev. Robert T. Holt, rector of St. Anne's Episcopal Church, officiated at the 1:30 p.m. ceremony. Organ music was provided by Cynthia Sexton.

Ushering with Stephen R. Jones, brother of the bridegroom, were Grey Dempsey and Mark Turner of Greenville, Keith Alexander and Jim Lammert of Havelock. The bridegroom, son of Dr. and Mrs. William R. Jones of Jacksonville, chose his father as best man.

Miss Barbara Baker of Charlotte was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Kimi and Carol Fehlner, sisters of the bride. Ginger Hudson of Charleston, S.C., Fran Gray of Greenville, and Cathy Palmer of Waynesville.

They were attired in Carolina blue Grecian gowns designed with cinched waists and accor-dian pleated skirts. They were of chiffon over qiana with capelet sleeves. Each carried a white mum with pink tips.

Eric Clinton, nephew and god-son of the bridegroom of Mc-

Connel, S.C., was ring bearer.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Fehlner of Spring Lake. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of satin with chiffon overlay fashioned with a high lace trimmed neckline, bishop sleeves and train applied with alencon lace. Her veil of illusion fell from a headpiece of seed pearls and alencon lace. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and white carnations.

A reception was held at the Holiday Inn, Goldsboro. Cake was served by Mrs. G. L. Matlocks and Mrs. W. M. Florie. Dr. Walter S. O'Berry poured champagne.

The rehearsal dinner was held at the Holiday Inn given by parents of the bridegroom.

The bridal couple exited under an arch of swords by the ROTC of East Carolina University, where they both graduated. They are both second lieutenants in the USAF. He will be attending school at Chanute Field, Ill., and she will be stationed at Wright-Patterson AFB, Dayton, Ohio.

They are taking a cruise to Freeport and Nassau, Grand Bahama Islands.

MRS. FREDERICK CARROLL JONES

Meeting Is Rescheduled

The general meeting of the Greenville Woman's Club scheduled for Friday, Dec. 7, has been postponed.

The meeting will be held the following Friday, Dec. 14, at 2:30 p.m. and will be combined with the Arts Department.

Cooking leftover fruit that has been thawed makes it keep better in your refrigerator for a few days.

While fresh cauliflower is available during the entire year, supplies are abundant from September through January. If the white, edible portion called the curd is spreading or has many discolored spots, it is a sign of aging or overmaturity.

Awards Made At Annual Doll Tea

Approximately 300 persons viewed The Salvation Army's Doll display sponsored by the auxiliary. Mrs. Linwood James and Mrs. James Little judged the doll tables and awarded ribbons.

The fellowship hall at the Citadel was decorated with red poinsettias, holly, berries and magnolia leaves. The serving table was decorated with a Della Robbia wreath and covered with a green cloth. Various members of the auxiliary, under the direction of Doll Tea Chairman Mrs. W. H. Smith Jr., served during the reception Sunday afternoon.

Winning the first place trophy was a dual display entitled "Winter Wonderland." A ski lodge featured a lighted fireplace, miniature tree and presents, two dolls with broken limbs covered by plaster and other dolls enjoying a time of leisure. Outside dolls ice skated on a turn table as others were shown on a ski lift preparing to join the other skiers. Mrs. Charles Beevers and Mrs. Connie Harris of University Church of Christ were responsible for preparing and setting up the winning display.

Second place went to Oakmont Baptist's "Many Ways to Learn About Jesus" table display prepared by Mrs. Tracy McLaurin and daughter, Donna. Mrs. William H. Brown and Mrs. Allen Churchill took the third place ribbon for Hooker Memorial Christian Church with their "Preparing for Christmas" theme. Mrs. B. B. Sugg and Mrs. Reid Perkins won fourth place with their version of "Winter Wonderland" for First Christian Church.

This year's sleepwear for children is soft, warm and cozy thanks to such fabric combinations as modacrylic and polyester blanket fleeces, brushed nylons, quilted cottons and blends, polyester high-low chenilles and a range of flannels and fleecy knits.

According to agricultural extension specialists at NCSU, styles include jogging suits, character motifs, nightshirts and feminine ruffles and laces—all machine washable and dryable.

Disrupting An Aura Of Unity

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, in his quest for the Democratic presidential nomination, just can't resist the Iranian situation.

During the weekend he described the reign of the Shah as "one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind."

Sen. Kennedy must be indeed desperate for delegate votes if he is willing to risk long term detention for the Americans currently being so cruelly held by mobs in Tehran.

The senator's remarks could easily be interpreted as sympathy for the "cause" among the crazed group which has violated all rules of decency in Iran.

If Sen. Kennedy is so willing to lend comfort to the present regime in Iran, perhaps he can justify the killings ordered by the Ayatollah.

The misdeeds of the Shah are not the current issue. What is at stake is the holding of innocent Americans. If a united America doesn't make it clear we won't condone such jungle law, our countrymen could be detained for a long time.

Sen. Kennedy shouldn't use this uniquely American tragedy as a campaign issue at this point. It is the ultimate in irresponsibility.

Our Government Is Still Of The People

One of the recurring themes in the present anti-America episodes around the world is that those involved love the American people but hate its government.

Perhaps it's time we Americans make it clear that our government is the people.

We may rail at the government, or despair of it, but more than anywhere else on earth it is a part of our people.

We only have to watch the sham of Iranians casting "yes" or "no" ballots on a new constitution under watchful eyes of government agents to recognize how fortunate we are.

THIS AFTERNOON

District Attorneys Eyed

By BILL NOBLITT
(2nd of two parts)

RALEIGH — Two major concerns will preoccupy the work of the North Carolina Courts Commission as it seeks solutions to problems in the state's criminal courtrooms:

1. The unbridled power and decision-making authority of district attorneys in each of the 100 counties;
2. The need for local court administrators to handle daily calendar and records-keeping details, and to serve as public ombudsmen to ease the trauma for victims and witnesses caught up in the criminal justice system.

Gov. Jim Hunt has ordered reactivation of the Courts Commission in his effort to make the courts an effective weapon in the fight against crime.

Adoption by the General Assembly of two major actions proposed by Hunt were designed to produce swift and certain punishment as a deterrent to would-be criminals — the Speedy Trials Act and the Fair Sentencing Act. The first sets specific limits on how long a case can be delayed; the second removes considerable discretion from the courts and sets certain punishment for certain criminal actions.

Fine Tuning

And despite critical objections and the appearance of problems in each of the new laws, Hunt says he stands behind them 100 percent and will push to see that the reforms take place.

At the same time, Hunt says, the situation has brought to light other things which need to be done in the courts. "This has forced us to take a closer look,"

State Rep. Parks Helms of Charlotte is expected to be named chairman of the Courts Commission as it takes that closer look. A decade ago, the state launched a thorough study of the courts and found the disjointed system much in need of reform. The unified system of District and Superior courts resulting wiped out the hodge-podge of magistrate, municipal and county courts; fee systems; and a host of ills running from absence of records to inadequate facilities.

By all accounts, the machinery has been well fixed, and experts both in North Carolina and elsewhere in the nation view the system as a superior one.

But implementation of the interim 120-day time limit for criminal trials at risk of having charges dropped (the limit goes to 90 days next October), and pending implementation of fair sentencing have illustrated a critical weak point say specialists who will staff or advise the Courts Commission.

Gov. Hunt hinted at the weakness recently when he commented that those criminal charges which have been dismissed because the time limit expired could easily have been avoided. "It will work if people approach it with the right attitude."

The DA

According to insiders, the courts commission will have to take a close look at some system for supervising district attorneys, and setting standards for conduct and performance. None exists now in a system which provides the elected district attorney absolute authority in bringing cases to trial, setting priorities, calendaring, scheduling witnesses, etc.

Even judges answer to the chief justice in daily routine, and are subject to discipline by the Judicial Standards Commission.

Appointment of court administrators, possibly hired by the state, is viewed as a way to relieve local political pressures in setting case priorities and calendaring, to assure that daily routine clerical entries are on the record, and to stand between judge and prosecutor when personality clashes threaten the outcome of a case — all of which are elements reportedly involved in some of the dismissals of charges under the Speedy Trials Act.

The most explosive issue likely to come before the courts commission is evidence that, in some isolated instances, district attorneys have used their unbridled power to favor their friends and punish their enemies.

Leisure Can Kill You

WASHINGTON — This country is producing so much leisure equipment for the home that nobody has any leisure time any more to enjoy it. A few months ago I bought a television tape recorder to make copies of programs when I was out of the house.

Last week I recorded the Nebraska-Oklahoma football game. When I came home in the evening, I decided to play it back. But my son wanted to play "Baseball" on the TV screen with his Atari computer. We finished four innings when my wife came in the room and asked me if I would like to listen to the Vienna Opera on my hi-fi stereo set. I told her I was waiting to finish the baseball match so I could watch the football game I had recorded.

She said if I watched the football game for three hours, I would miss "Love Boat." I told her I would record "Love Boat" and we could watch it later in the evening. She protested that "Casablanca" was showing on Channel 5 at 11:30 and she wanted to see it again.

"Don't worry," I assured her, "we can watch 'Love Boat' late Saturday and 'Casablanca' on Sunday morning when we get up."

"But if we watch 'Casablanca' tomorrow morning when can we see the instant Polaroid movies you took of Ben yesterday afternoon?"

"We'll see them after we play backgammon on the new table."

"If we do that," my daughter said, "we won't be able to see the Washington Redskins-New York Giants football game."

"I'll record the Redskins-Giants football game and we'll watch it while '60 Minutes' is on the air. We can see '60 Minutes' at 11 o'clock."

"But," my son said, "you promised to play the pinball machine with me at 11."

"Okay, we'll play pinball at 11 and watch '60 Minutes' at midnight."

My wife said, "Why don't we listen to the Vienna Opera while we're eating and then we can save an hour to play computer golf?"

"That's good thinking," I said. "The only problem is I've rented a TV tape for 'Cleopatra' and that runs for three hours."

"But," my daughter said, "we won't be able to see the Washington Redskins-New York Giants football game."

Other Editors Say A New Generation

(The Durham Sun)

Disagreements are routine, even desirable, when new government program is announced. Only through the resulting discussion can problem areas be identified and avoided.

But for opposing factions to attach sinister motives to well-intentioned new concepts is puzzling and frustrating.

If any one concern typifies the administration of Governor Jim Hunt, it is the concern for the well-being of North Carolina's children.

The New Generation concept endorsed by the governor is an attempt to eliminate duplication of state services working for the mental, physical and emotional well-being of children and to coordinate these efforts for maximum benefit.

The plan does not call for additional spending but rather the wiser use of money already being spent in attempts to bring up a healthier, happier generation of Tar Heel citizens.

Hunt said "We can continue going in the way we're going and try to fix things after they are broken, at a fantastic expense. Or we can be smart and decide we're going to make preventive efforts... We ought to ensure that every child born in this state has the chance for a full, rich life."

Sinister? Some see this as an attempt by the state to take over the rights and responsibilities of parents rather than an attempt to assist parents in this awesome task. Some see it as an attempt by Hunt to garner more power for his office. Since it is a coordination of present efforts rather than the establishment of new agencies or departments, it hardly seems to qualify.

The New Generation program already has become a political football for Hunt's foes and an emotional issue for groups who see it as a morally corrupting device.

The well-being of a new generation deserves better than that.

"You could show it Monday night," she suggested.

"I can't do that. I have to return the tape Monday afternoon or be charged for it another week. I have an idea. I won't go to work Monday morning and we'll watch it then."

"I was hoping to use our Jacuzzi Monday morning," my wife said.

"Okay, then I'll tape 'Cleopatra' and you can see it Monday afternoon."

"I'm using the set Monday afternoon," my son said, "to play digital hockey on the TV screen."

"You can't do that," I said. "I have to watch the 'Today' show in the afternoon if I'm going to watch 'Cleopatra' in the morning."

"Why can't you watch the 'Today' show at dinner-time?" my wife asked.

"Because the Wolfingtons are coming over to hear me play 'Tea for Two' on the electric organ."

INSIDE REPORT

President And Kissinger

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter is so anxious to keep his distance from Henry Kissinger during the Iranian crisis that the White House tried to cover up its invitation for Kissinger to attend a hush-hush meeting about defense spending and the strategic arms treaty (SALT II).

That meeting was called in Sen. Sam Nunn's Capitol Hill office the evening of Nov. 27 to discuss defense spending increases demanded by both Kissinger and Nunn as their price for supporting SALT II. The president's men leaked word that Kissinger was there at Nunn's invitation.

Carter clearly did not want liberal, shah-hating politicians and journalists to know the truth. In fact, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown telephoned Kissinger to invite him to the meeting. Presidential counsel Lloyd Cutler then deferentially asked Kissinger if he minded Cutler being at the meeting.

Oil And Politics

Voting against President Carter in favor of a $30 billion tax exemption for oil "wildcaters" were five Democratic senators usually at odds with the oil industry: Gary Hart of Colorado, Birch Bayh of Indiana, Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, Frank Church of Idaho and — Mr. Liberal himself — George

The quintet of ordinarily anti-oil senators had one common characteristic: All are up for re-election in 1980 and are aware of effective political action by independent oil producers (so-called "wildcaters") against anti-oil senators defeated in 1978. What's more, with the exception of Bumpers, all face potentially formidable Republican challenges.

They can argue that exempting smaller producers from Carter's windfall profits tax does no damage to the liberal creed; indeed, big oil lobbyists behind the scenes were fighting the exemption. However, both Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy strongly opposed the exemption, which carried the Senate by a 53-to-42 vote but faces trouble in the Senate-House conference.

The Iowa Battle

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's come-from-behind effort against Jimmy Carter in next January's Iowa caucuses is based on a strategy wholly different from the president's.

Carter's operatives, enjoying a big organizational head start in Iowa against Kennedy, are working on those 38,000 Iowa Democrats who went to 1976 caucuses (and gave the then-unknown Carter his first boost toward the Democratic presidential nomination). The Carter campaign has telephone numbers for all these 1976 veterans, and plans to call many of them.

Kennedy's managers are working under a different premise: that the Iowa Democrats who come to the 1980 caucuses may be a different breed than those of 1976. Therefore, they are making an exhaustive and expensive effort to contact all Iowa Democratic households — estimated at anywhere from 230,000 to 310,000 — and send letters to most of them.

Strength For Today

ALL POWER

Almost the last words that Jesus spoke to his disciples were these: "All power hath been given unto men in heaven and earth, go ye therefore..."

He did not say that tremendous power or sufficient power had been given to him, but "all power." He has power over the physical world, over the affairs of nations, over the final outcome of events. He has spiritual power so that the sinner looks up from the mire through which he has plodded for years and sees a vision of higher and better things — in fact, of celestial things.

The word, "therefore" is important. Because Jesus has had power conferred upon him, a like power is conferred upon us. If our wills are submitted to His will, then the tremendous power which makes him the ruler of the universe streams into the channels of our lives.

These words should be remembered by sinners fighting their weaknesses. The words come to those who have failed, and promise eventual victory.

Elisha Douglass

Sees Economy Deteriorating

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — J. Peter Grace doesn't waste words when numbers tell the story better. His story is an economic one, about what he feels is a loss of common sense in pursuing goals vital to the United States.

A couple of years ago Grace, chief executive officer of W.R. Grace & Co., produced a chartfilled volume depicting the decline in U.S. productivity, especially in relation to foreign countries.

That report, "The Disincentivization of America," purported to show how the nation somehow had gotten its incentives reversed, so that we aspired to growth but thwarted it, and instead encouraged stagnation.

It never was formally published, at least for popular consumption, but it circulated widely in academic, business and government circles. In its realm, it was the equal of a best seller.

Now comes another, "The Assault on Economic Incentive," unveiled in an address at Harvard Business School. It opens with this quotation borrowed from Jack Kemp, the New York Republican congressman:

"If you tax something, you get less of it. If you subsidize something, you get more of it."

"The problem with the United States today is that we tax work, savings, thrift, productivity, capital, and we subsidize non-work, welfare and consumption."

Energy consumption, for example. With 5.3 percent of the world's population, Grace reports, the U.S. consumes 49.3 percent of the world's total. And yet, U.S. gasoline prices are half those of Europe.

A good deal of this price differential, says Grace, is because the U.S. government artificially holds crude oil prices below the world market price.

"If we handled our gasoline prices the way they are handled in other industrialized nations and taxed this 109 billion gallons a year at the $1.19 per gallon difference...we would raise $130 billion."

This, he points out, is 113 percent of the national defense budget and more than half the U.S. government collection from individual income taxes. But instead of discouraging usage, U.S. policy encourages it.

As a consequence, he states, progress toward energy independence is barred and U.S. dependency on foreign oil is almost guaranteed.

Meanwhile, he points out, the U.S. economy is deteriorating. Growth in productivity has almost ceased, and the unemployment rate is around 6 percent compared with 4.2 in 1968. Inflation has soared; the federal budget is almost continually in deficit.

Carter Also A Victim

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's Iranian flap may have a bit of a nostalgic ring to President Carter. The circumstances are not unlike the problem Carter ran into with the Soviet troops in Cuba.

"The status quo is unacceptable," said Carter after disclosure that a Soviet combat brigade was in Cuba.

With that statement, the president put himself in a rhetorical box. He had difficulty extricating himself when the Soviets refused to cooperate by agreeing to change the status quo.

Now it's Kennedy's turn to run up against his own rhetoric.

"Do the Iranian people have legitimate grievances against the shah?" a reporter asked the Massachusetts senator during a television interview Sunday in Los Angeles.

Kennedy adhered firmly to the standard he had set since the takeover Nov. 4 of the American Embassy in Tehran.

"It's of little value for the United States not to speak with a single voice," said the senator. "I don't think it is useful or wise to consider the condition of human rights in Iran prior to this circumstance."

Then, 12 hours later, in another television interview, this time in San Francisco, Kennedy abruptly violated his own standard.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi "ran one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind," said Kennedy when asked whether the United States owed something to its long-time ally.

The next 24 hours did not go well for the senator.

Repeatedly, he was asked why he had changed his position.

"My position is unchanged," said Kennedy, falling back on the politician's refuge of standing in the ocean and denying his feet are wet.

Kennedy made the point that his statement about the shah wasn't that far from what Carter said during his news conference and what members of the U.N. Security Council said Saturday during the debate on Iran.

40 Years Ago Today

December 5, 1939

The man who directed the movie "Gone With the Wind" almost didn't read the 1037-page novel.

Victor Fleming, who was called to the job when George Cukor left it for another picture, knew the book before he had any idea he would film it. Fleming liked long books. He had heard enough about this one to force him to it.

He had opened it in the middle, read on from there. Then he had gone back, opening it at another page and picked up the threads. Skipping around, he covered it all.

"We've shot the book," Fleming says. "Almost page for page. Anybody who has read the book will find it in the movie... I can't recall how many times we went to the book to settle minor details. If Scarlett O'Hara wore a black dress with a white collar on Page-so-and-so of the book, she wears it in that sequence of the film."

Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II), the White House tried — and failed — to turn munitions makers into SALT-sellers.

Aides from the office of presidential aide Anne Wexler were on the telephone to Washington offices of defense contractors urging them to get their chief executive officers and subordinates to put the heat on their U.S. senators and issue press releases endorsing SALT II. Among the companies contacted were Northrup, Hughes, Vaught, Textron, Boeing, Rockwell, McDonnell-Douglas and TRW.

No White House aide was imprudent enough to suggest that their defense contracts might be at stake, but the pressure was felt anyway. Nevertheless, at this writing, none of the munitions makers have become SALT-sellers.

Haig In N.H.

In an effort to dramatize his late entry into the presidential sweepstakes and give him a better showing in the New Hampshire primary, Gen. Alexander Haig has tentatively decided to open his national campaign headquarters in Manchester, N.H. — the first time a presidential candidate has ever headquartered in New Hampshire.

Haig's long-shot campaign for the Republican nomination had been expected to start with the early Southern primaries in South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and, most importantly, Florida — all following New Hampshire. Now he has decided to make a fight in New Hampshire, intending to make Manchester his national command post until after the Feb. 26 primary there.

"How can I go to work," I yelled, "when I've got so much leisure time on my hands?"

SCROOGE Offers Some Gifting Tips

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — The Society to Curtail Ridiculous, Outrageous and Ostentatious Gift Exchanges, also known as SCROOGE, is saying "Bah, humbug" to extravagant presents at Christmas.

Instead, SCROOGE is supporting the "true spirit" of Christmas past — decorated trees, good cheer with family and friends, Christmas cards with personal notes and visits to the sick and elderly.

"The only thing I'm against is all these asinine gifts that have gotten out of hand," declared Charles G. Langham, SCROOGE's founder and executive director. SCROOGE has about 75 members.

Langham, a 38-year-old Army publications officer from Charlottesville, has been thinking about cutting back on his gift buying since he and his wife ran up about $500 to $600 worth of Christmas credit card bills three years ago.

One of SCROOGE's principles is a reminder for "general self-control in gift exchanges, recognizing that a 'Merry Christmas' can't be bought."

In both instances, it was acknowledged that the Iranian people might have grievances that could be aired after the hostages were released.

As one would expect, President Carter's political allies weren't going to let Kennedy get away with a statement that could be interpreted as upsetting the delicate situation in Tehran, where 50 Americans are held hostage.

Robert Strauss, chairman of the president's campaign committee, said the Kennedy statement "could endanger these people."

Perhaps so, but the same might be said of some of the president's tough statements during the month-long crisis.

What made Kennedy so vulnerable to criticism was that he had set such a firm policy of avoiding criticism of Carter's

AUTO DEATHS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Council of Life Insurance estimates that from 1970 through year-end 1979 more than 513,000 Americans will have been killed in motor-vehicle accidents.

"The imposition of a national 55-miles-per-hour speed limit temporarily lowered the yearly deaths from 55,800 to 46,400," says the council, "but as the decade draws to a close, motor-vehicle deaths have moved up once again to more than 50,000 a year."

'Corseted' Feet Lack Exercise

NEW YORK (UPI) — For most people, oxford shoes have no special advantages over other styles, says Dr. William A. Rossi. Writing in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Podiatry Association, the Massachusetts podiatrist said the corseting provided by oxfords deny feet much of their normal exercise, "and this effect would seem to hamper, rather than enhance the strengthening of the tissues involved in normal foot support."

Marine Pfc. Garwood Is Still Waiting

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — For at least eight months, Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood has wondered whether he will be court-martialed on allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy in Vietnam.

It will be at least another month before he finds out. A hearing for Garwood opened Tuesday, but it will be another two weeks before the first witnesses testify.

The hearing, which will produce a recommendation on whether Garwood should face a court-martial, will likely extend to mid-January or later because of a two-week recess for Garwood's Christmas leave. At the opening session of the military hearing — called an Article 32 investigation and roughly equivalent to a civilian grand jury — both prosecutors and defense attorneys agreed that spreading the hearing sessions across at least one month was unavoidable.

Witnesses must be brought in from various parts of the country, and the holiday season with its travel problems and Garwood's leave had to be considered.

"A month is a long time, but that's life," Garwood's civilian attorney, Dermot Foley of New York, told the court as he suggested scheduling the first testimony in January.

But Maj. T.B. Hamilton Jr., presiding officer at the Article 32 hearing, said Garwood was entitled to speedy court action, and he decided testimony by prosecution witnesses should begin on Dec. 18.

Hamilton will recommend to Camp Lejeune's commanding general whether Garwood should face a court-martial.

During the one-hour session, which consisted mostly of procedural matters, prosecutors revealed that they planned to call about 15 witnesses during the hearing.

Foley said he would listen to the prosecution's case before deciding whether to call defense witnesses or have Garwood testify at the hearing.

Garwood, who spoke during the hearing only to answer Hamilton's questions, was not talking to reporters.

Now 33, Garwood was a 19-year-old jeep driver when he disappeared near Danang in 1965. He contends he was captured and held prisoner until his release last March.

Wearing the standard Marine working uniform of green pants and a kaki shirt which bore the single stripe of his rank, Garwood stared straight ahead as Hamilton read the charges against him.

The allegations are:

—That Garwood deserted in time of war. The allegation originally charged him with deserting in 1965, but the military investigation into his case led the military to change the date to 1967.

—That he was absent without authorization during the nearly 14 years he was in Vietnam.

—That he solicited American troops to throw down their weapons and refuse to fight.

—That he accepted a position with an enemy army, and helped guard and question American prisoners.

—That he tried to cause insubordination and disloyalty among American prisoners with "indoctrination classes."

—That he smuggled one American POW in the ribs without justification.

—That he verbally abused another American prisoner without justification.

If court-martialed and convicted of either desertion or collaboration, Garwood could be sentenced to death.

Hamilton asked Garwood if he understood the charges, and the Marine who has worked as a mail clerk while awaiting a decision on his case replied simply, "Yes, sir, I do."

Hamilton emphasized that the hearing was to listen to evidence and decide whether the case should be continued.

"This is not a trial. I am not here to determine your innocence or guilt," Hamilton told Garwood.

Asked after the hearing if he believed a court-martial was likely, Foley said, "It's going in that direction. But I've still got to see evidence of a crime, and I haven't seen any yet."

Chinook Winds Hit 2 States

By The Associated Press
Chinook winds gusting to 100 mph tore into parts of Colorado and Wyoming, whisked 27 cars of a Union Pacific train from their tracks, scattered large trucks and roofs and blacked out cities.

No injuries were reported.

The eastbound Union Pacific train derailed about 2:30 p.m. Tuesday when the winds gusting to 100 mph blew 27 empty, covered hopper cars from the tracks on Sherman Hill about 28 miles west of Cheyenne, Wyo., railroad spokesman Dick Lohr said.

A Colorado Highway Patrol spokesman said four semi-tractor trailers were blown off the highway near Wheatland and a motor home, a pickup truck and other vehicles flipped over on highways near Cheyenne.

Power was suspended around Sheridan, Wyo., and Boulder, Colo., after transmission lines were toppled. A Sheridan County sheriff's dispatcher said shingles were blown from the tops of numerous houses and her office received a few reports of roofs being blown off homes.

Boulder, situated at the mouth of a mountain canyon, appeared to be the hardest hit, with gusts of 100 mph, according to police spokeswoman Deedee Langer. In Northglenn, gusts to 50 mph were reported, a National Weather Service spokesman said.

Miss Langer said police were swamped by reports of property damage caused by the winds. She said numerous burglar alarms were triggered by wind gusts, and south Boulder experienced a power outage.

"Officers are wearing their helmets to protect their heads from objects flying all over. Headlights on police cars are getting shot out when they come in contact with the objects (stirred up by the winds)," Miss Langer said.

Paul Duval, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service, said the winds were the result of a strong, southeasterly wind flow that swooped through the eastern mountains. The pattern was expected to continue intermittently throughout this week, he said.

The warm winds, which flow along the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, boosted temperatures into the 60s late Tuesday night, compared to readings in the teens and near zero in the central mountains, Duval said.

All Escape In Apartment Fire

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Damages were estimated at $200,000 Tuesday to an eight-unit apartment building that burned Monday night in the Briarwood Arms complex.

All occupants of the building escaped safely.

12,000 To Get Rebates

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An estimated 12,000 North Carolinians who have lived in federally subsidized housing projects may be eligible for up to $500 each in refunds as a result of illegal rent increases.

The rebates are the result of a $60 million lawsuit settlement with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and affect 750,000 tenants across the country.

Any resident of a so-called "Section 236" project who lived in a housing complex between 1975 and 1977 is eligible for the refunds, due to be mailed out by June, officials said.

The suit was a result of a complaint by a Los Angeles woman of high rent increases in a 236 project in 1975. Legal services attorneys in five offices across the country eventually discovered that project managers were forced to increase rent prices because of the increased costs in utilities and property taxes — increases that HUD should have paid for.

A two-year lawsuit against HUD ended in 1977, when Congress ordered HUD to pay back the tenants. An agreement on how much would be paid, however, was just recently reached.

North Carolina Legal Services offices across the state have offered to help any resident who needs assistance.

Special Schedule And Travel Plans For State 4-A Game

A special schedule has been announced for Rose High, and travel plans are being formulated for players, band members, students and parents — all in connection with the state 4-A championship game to be held in High Point Friday night.

Rose principal Howard Hurt has announced that for Friday, classes will be over at Rose High at 11:40 a.m. Lunch will be served until 12:30 for those wanting to eat at school, and buses will take students home at 12:30.

Also, at the beginning of the school day on Friday, a school wide pep rally will be held, and the football team will leave the school on chartered buses at about 9 or 9:15 a.m.

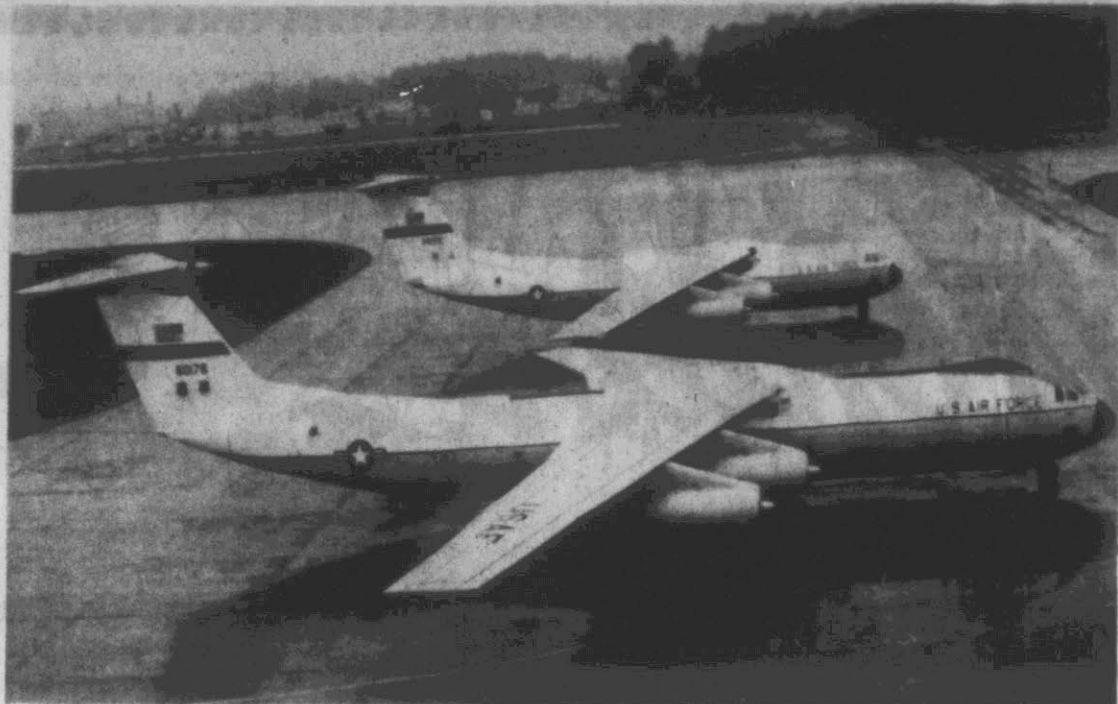

Hurt said members of the school band would leave in three chartered buses between 1 and 2 p.m.

In addition, students who want to attend the game can sign up to make the trip there and back by chartered bus. He indictated that as of 4 p.m. Tuesday, two buses have been reserved, and that another may be if enough students want to sign up. Departure time will be about 2 p.m.

Don McGlohon, one of the coordinators for making arrangements for the game travel, said that arrangements are being made for chartered buses to take interested parents. "At this moment (late Tuesday afternoon) 46 have signed for passage, and I feel we can get another bus if enough people indicate a desire to go," McGlohon said interested adults are to call William H. Cobb at 758-0170.

Both Hurt and McGlohon stated that the arrival hour back in Greenville would be about 3 to 4 a.m. Saturday morning. "The bus with parents of players will perhaps be even a little later," McGlohon said, "since they will perhaps want to be with their sons for a while after the game."

City Counts 4 Accidents

An estimated $5,050 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 3:45 p.m. mishap on Greene Street, 300 feet North of the First Street intersection, involving cars driven by James Earl Spell of 1104 West Third St., Jeffery Lee Wilkins of Route 6, Greenville, and Frank Hooks of Quail Hollow Trailer Ct.

Damage from the mishap was set at $150 to the Spell car, $600 to the Wilkins auto, and $1,500 to the Hooks vehicle.

Cars driven by Rebecca Nixon West of 1603 North Overlook Dr. and David Gambell Clark of 2007 Sherwood Dr. collided about 7:38 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Sherwood Dr., resulting in an estimated $800 damage to the West car and $700 damage to the Clark vehicle.

A collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Trade Street about 3:40 p.m. resulted in an estimated $500 damage to a car driven by Barbara Kay Daughtry of Farmville, and $850 damage to a car driven by Vikki Mobley Perry of Route 2, Williamston.

Police reported an estimated $350 damage resulted to a car driven by Calvin Coolidge Moore of 108 Josie La. when a deer collided with the vehicle about 7:30 p.m. on Memorial Drive, a mile North of the Third Street intersection.

The public is invited to attend the Saturday evening gospel sing.

'Bad Peanut' Awaits Parole

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — President Carter's 33-year-old nephew, convict William Carter Spann, is a pauper and hopes to sell interviews after he is paroled on Christmas Eve, says Spann's wife.

Spann, who has dubbed himself "the bad peanut," is the son of the President's sister, Gloria. He will be freed from the Vacaville Medical Facility after serving three years of an 10 years-to-life sentence for armed robbery.

"Willie and I don't have a penny," said Jan Frey Spann, an insurance broker who married Spann behind bars in April.

Mrs. Spann said some articles written about her and Spann "make it seem like we're loaded. He doesn't have a profession or a job, and he hasn't gotten a cent from the family."

Shunned Husband Wins Trial, Still No Family

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) —

Farmer Robert Bear, acquitted of abducting his wife, says he will continue his crusade against Reformed Mennonites who cast him out of the strict religious sect and made his family sever all ties with him.

"I would say it's a victory of sorts. But I'm still not free, my wife is not free, nor are my children free," Bear said after a Cumberland County jury found him innocent Tuesday of charges of simple assault and false imprisonment.

"I'm losing wars and not winning many battles," he added, his chiseled features showing obvious relief after he wept openly while defending himself in court.

Bear, 50, who was excommunicated seven years ago for criticizing church leaders, insisted he is not giving up hope of winning back his wife, Gale, 41, and six children because giving up is "what causes suicide."

"I consider you very fortunate, Mr. Bear," said Judge Harold Sheely after he read the verdict, which was returned after just over an hour of deliberations. "Had I been hearing this case without a jury, I would have found you guilty of false imprisonment."

Though unsure of his next step, Bear did not rule out abducting his wife again. "I'll need to think about that," he said, adding that he expected to be found guilty.

Bear said he still loves his wife and meant her no harm. "I just pity her more. She and our children are much more victim than I am," he told reporters.

Acting as his own attorney and his only defense witness, Bear admitted snatching his wife at a farmers market in August and intentionally holding her in his truck for about 30 minutes.

But he defended his actions by saying that he wanted to expose the greater evil of shunning — a 400-year-old sanction that bans all members of the ultra-conservative church, including his wife and family, from having any business or social contact with him.

Because of the ban, Bear said the only way he can talk to his wife is in a courtroom. Mrs. Bear was not present in the courtroom Tuesday, but on Monday, the first day of the trial, she testified that she had been sexually assaulted once by her husband and feared him.

Bear's only emotional response to the verdict was shaking hands with Taylor Andrews, a public defender appointed by the court as standby counsel.

But he used a handkerchief and his meaty, farmer's hand to wipe away tears during his testimony and closing arguments.

"No matter what you do, you can't free me. Only death can free me," he sobbed to the jury. "What I tried to remedy was far greater than what I had caused. What I tried to do was reunite the family."

Bear had been married for 14 years before his excommunication in 1972.

More Marines To Puerto Rico

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The Marine Corps has airlifted 60 Marines from Camp Lejeune to Puerto Rico to help protect U.S. property and personnel in the wake of terrorist attacks.

The Marines went to the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station Monday night, a corps spokesman said Tuesday. They will remain there until the current unrest subsides, the spokesman said.

A terrorist attack Monday morning killed two American sailors and left 10 other persons injured.

CAR COLLIDES WITH TRAIN — A car driven by a Greenville man struck the engine of a Seaboard Coastline engine last night off U.S. 13 north of Greenville. According to Trooper Wayne Taylor, the car was driven by Carlton Otis Tripp, Jr., of 102 Chadwick Lane, Greenville, and was headed west on rural paved road 1579 when it struck the engine of the south-bound train. Tripp according to the investigator was not injured, but the car was heavily damaged. The engineer of the train was listed as Russell Wayne Hodges, of Elm City. Investigation into the accident is continuing (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

possible with their corresponding department heads and that meetings with these department heads be held at least quarterly.

After a report by David Dunaway of Mangement Improvement Corporation of America, which has conducted a study of the town's solid waste collection system. Mayor Mercer asked that the Street Committee members and Town Administrator Patrick Thomas visit Morehead City and study its program. Morehead has a system that uses roll-out carts for garbage collection and its citizens are pleased and much money is being saved, Dunaway had indicated.

A public hearing was held on the rezoning of an area on Pitt Street from R-6, which allows multi-family dwellings, to R-8, which does not. After considerable discussion, the board enacted Commissioner Kue's motion that the 3.3 acres on the west side of the 100 block of North Pitt Street, including two lots that face Grimmersburg Street, be rezoned from R-6 to R-8. A petition had been submitted by Sam Hobgood Jr. and John M. Wilkinson requesting this action, apparently out of fear that a landowner in the area might be planning to build apartments.

A public hearing was held on the lining up of extrajurisdictional area boundaries to correspond with locatable natural features and property lines, instead of arbitrary arcs. This line will run roughly one mile from the city limits all around town, as the law provides. Citizen Jack Farrior said he objects to the line if it includes land owned by his family that he believes is more than a mile from town.

A second public hearing was held on the proposed transfer of funds from the clearance, relocation and administrative areas of the budget of the town's Community Development program now underway to allow rehabilitation of several additional houses. Mayor Mercer complimented the administrators on the money saved on administration that could be used for more house rehab. Final approval was given.

Administrator Thomas and Commissioner Kue reported on their attendance at a recent meeting of Pitt County members of the Mid-East Commission. Major board representation changes were proposed during this meeting and, according to Commissioner Kue, it was Thomas's suggestion for the changes in makeup that are being proposed.

The board adopted a form resolution designating Edgecombe Bank and Trust Company as the town depository of funds. Town board action of Oct. 2 effectively awarded this bank the town's business.

Mayor Mercer urged that board members and others Farmville citizens attend a

Several Fires Across County

There were several severely damaging fires in Pitt County yesterday.

The Gene Toler residence in the Pactolus Fire District was a total loss, it was reported. The fire call was answered by the Pactolus Fire Department at 12:45 p. m.

The Ayden Fire Department went to a tobacco barn fire on the Ed Daughtry farm at 1:06 p. m. Damage was estimated at $2,300.

Damage to the John Spell Jr. home, Bethel, was estimated at $6,000. The 1:11 p. m. alarm was answered by the Bethel Fire Department.

Staton House went to a fire at the TRW Corporation building at 5:14 p. m. A piece of equipment was reported on fire, damage as yet undetermined. Staton House also was called to a train-car accident on North Greene Street at 8:47 p. m.

Winterville responded to a dumpster fire on the Old County Home Road at 5:44 p. m.

Serious damage was done to the home of Lois Godley in the Bell Arthur Fire District. The 1:57 p. m. alarm was answered by Bell Arthur Fire Department. All these fires are under investigation, according to County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner.

noted that the Eastern Carolina Basketball Conference has designated the two schools as future playoff tournament sites.

The board gave its approval for negotiations to begin with North Carolina Natural Gas for possible gas conversion at Farmville Central, Farmville Middle, Wellcome Middle and Pactolus Schools. Associate Superintendent Craft noted that over the course of years, the initial outlay money for installation of gas pipes would be recouped in the savings from using gas over oil and electricity.

Approval was given for some of the county's driver education vehicles to be used in Pitt Community College adult driver education courses. The vehicles will only be used by PCC on holidays and weekends, with cost of wear and tear, as well as a pro rata share of insurance costs, to be borne by PCC. A request for a van for the exceptional children's program was placed on the proposed 1980 budget.

The board also gave its approval for a request to the State Board of Education to allow 52 county classrooms to exceed the classroom limits as set by the state facility.

Declare Violations Of Blood Bank Regulations

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says a two-week investigation has turned up evidence of numerous violations of federal regulations at the Community Blood and Plasma Service, including taking blood from alcoholics and people in contact with hepatitis.

The violations were disclosed in a 16-page list of observations by FDA inspectors. The center voluntarily stopped taking donors last week. It could not be determined Tuesday if it planned to reopen.

Community Blood is a division of IPCO Hospital Supply Corp., and buys plasma that eventually is sold to hospitals. The company is not related to the American Red Cross, or any other charitable institution.

The FDA in its report observed that:

—100 donors were "overbled" during one three-day period.

—Entries on donor record cards were frequently scratched out and overwritten with different entries, including answers to donor suitability questions.

—One donor experienced a severe reaction to receiving the wrong red blood cells. The service buys only plasma from donors. Red blood cells are injected into the original donor.

—The company failed to follow up the death of one donor.

BOARD MEETING

The Board of Directors, Pitt County Chapter, American Red Cross, will hold its regular meeting, Thursday, Dec. 6, 7:30 p.m., at the Blood Center, Highway 43. Col. Ed Tadlock, president, will preside.

who died within 48 hours of giving blood. The FDA said the death did not necessarily result from giving blood. —Donors previously permanently rejected because of problems such as alcoholism, drug use and continuing fainting were readmitted for donation. Donors were not adequately informed of the dangers of giving plasma, the FDA said, and they were required to sign release forms not allowed by FDA regulations. The agency also said there was inadequate questioning of donors about their medical history. FDA inspectors said medical history questioning was often done too quickly and that "other times it was done in a joking manner, especially questions dealing with syphilis, drug addiction and alcohol use." Other violations were also noted.

Officials from Community Blood in Winston-Salem and the company headquarters in Columbus, Ga., declined to comment on the FDA findings.

The Ice Prince

When Bjorn Borg was nine years old, his father gave him a tennis racket he had won in a table tennis tournament. Borg has lots of rackets now, and at 23 is widely considered the world's best tennis player. This year he won a record fourth straight Wimbledon championship in Britain. Because of his outwardly cool, unemotional manner on the court, Borg has been called the "Ice Prince." "But inside," Borg says, "I feel it. I feel excited, or nervous, or angry, sure. It's the way I can play best." This week, Borg is scheduled to compete against Jimmy Connors, Ilie Nastase and other top players in the World Championship Tennis Challenge Cup tournament in Montreal, Canada.

meeting on Highway 264 to be held Thursday at 10 a. m. at the East Federal Building in Farmville.

A resolution was made formally authorizing submission of the comprehensive proposal for Community Development block grant funds.

First reading approval was given to a revised franchise ordinance for North Carolina Natural Gas. The franchise period was reduced from 20 to 10 years and the board is requiring that it be notified in writing by the company of any denials of service in Farmville.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the sale at public auction of five to six acres of land at the rear of the old landfill site north of town.

The time for the January board meeting was set at Tuesday, Jan. 8, at 7:30 p. m. The regular meeting time, the first Tuesday of the month, falls on New Year's Day.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

Next to what camera should I buy, the question I'm most often asked is, how do you become a successful photojournalist?

In the old days it was comparatively easy. You went to work for a newspaper as a copy boy, cleaned out the photo lab, mixed chemicals, loaded and processed film, made prints, and helped the staff photographers carry their heavy Graflex cases or Big Berthas. Finally, you got to shoot a picture or two that the old timers didn't want to shoot. Eventually you made the staff and began to get better and better assignments.

Bob Landry, the late ex-LIFE magazine photographer, once told me of his start which illustrates this.

Bob was working as a lab cleanup boy at a newspaper then run by the late William Randolph Hearst. It was back in the '30s and the working press camera at that time was the 4x5 Graflex.

Hearst had just returned from a trip to Europe and brought back with him a 35mm Leica. He sent it down to the photo lab with word that a man named Solomon was making great pictures with it. He wanted his staff to try it out.

The task fell to Bob, then the junior man. The old timers felt it was beneath their dignity to be seen with this "toy," Bob said.

"At first I wasn't sure the thing would work either," Bob explained, "so, for a while, I shot every assignment twice. Once with the Leica and again with the Graflex. I made the print with the 4x5 Graflex negative and sent it upstairs with the 35mm Leica negative attached."

Hearst was enthusiastic about the quality that Bob was getting and Bob got more and better assignments. Eventually he became Hearst's personal photographer.

"By that time I'd learned to use the Leica and didn't have to use the Graflex any more," Bob said.

Bob later became a staffer with LIFE magazine and the 35mm camera has since become the standard in the industry.

But learning to be a photojournalist this way went out with the Speed Graphic, Graflex and Big Bertha. Few newspapers of news organizations any longer maintain a training system for photographers. They now hire the ready-trained man.

The new route starts with an education — one that includes not only photography but writing and editing as well.

The next step is to a newspaper, preferably a small one where you'll be expected to do everything — write, take and process your own pictures, edit and crop them, do the layout and maybe even run an engraving machine.

It is here you'll begin to develop your news and picture sense and maybe learn enough about the economics of the paper to understand why it's not always possible to run as many pictures as you'd like or as large as you'd like.

If you're lucky, you'll work with an editor who knows good pictures — not just illustrative shots that complement a story, but the eye-stopping feature that will stand alone — and will use them.

You will not be an 8 to 5 photographer. You'll love photography so much that you'll even spend your days off looking for those eye-stoppers.

You'll continue to learn, on your own, by studying the magazines, other newspapers and the wire-service picture report. When you see an eye-stopper, you'll try to duplicate it, not for publication but to learn how it was done so that you can then use that technique to create your own shot later.

You'll beg, borrow and sometimes buy new pieces of equipment and learn how to use them. You'll work with different kinds of film, developers and papers and pick the brains of your peers to continually hone your own abilities.

You'll participate in the activities of your press photographer organizations and the activities of your local camera clubs where you'll find many fine photographers who just happen to make their living another way.

Eventually, because you've worked hard and become proficient, you'll be asked to join the staff of a major daily newspaper. Now the work gets harder.

You'll no longer be working an engraving machine or doing layouts and probably not even editing your own film. You will be shooting a lot more, have a lot of new equipment to master

ASSISTANT NEEDED: Gone are the days when one could work his way into photojournalism by helping a staff photographer carry his equipment. Cameras, like this Big Bertha—being manned in 1946 by Associated Press photographer John Rooney, now retired—used to take two men to set up. Now the same job is being done with smaller 35mm equipment and it's a one-man job.

Lighthouse To Draw Tourists

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Officials hope the old red and white Absecon Lighthouse, once a warning to stay away from these shores, will now draw additional tourists to Atlantic City.

The historic lighthouse, which has stood at Absecon Inlet for 122 years, is again open to the curious who want to climb its spiraling 228 steps and examine its long-dark lantern.

A new group, the Atlantic City Coastal Museum, made up of several local civic boosters, has reopened the lighthouse. From November to May, the lighthouse will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday. After that, it will be open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Wednesday.

Admission to a marine environmental museum at the base of the lighthouse is free. Adults pay 50 cents and children pay 25 cents to climb the 167 feet to the observation deck and lightroom.

The state Department of Environmental Protection owns the lighthouse, but the structure has been closed in recent years because of vandalism, lack of interest and maintenance problems.

Elizabeth Marsh, an environmental studies professor at nearby Stockton State College who co-chairs the museum group, said officials hoped to relight its original Fresnel lens each night on the landward side of the city.

The Absecon Lighthouse, originally known as "Abscombe Light on Tucker's Beach," was built at a cost of $52,187 in 1856 and 1857 after several wrecks near Absecon Island, which includes the present Atlantic City.

The nearby wrecks included the sailing ship Mermaid, which went down with 145 people aboard in March 1779, and the Powhatan, which went down with 311 people in April 1854.

The army engineer in charge of the construction was George Gordon Meade, who later was General of the Army of the Potomac during the Civil War.

The lighthouse, which is 26 feet in diameter at its base and 13 feet at its roof, stood not far from the crashing surf when it was completed. Now, because of the shifting sands, it is more than two blocks from the breakers.

The beam from the light was visible on the deck of a ship 20 miles at sea. It took between two and three gallons of kerosene each night to keep its light visible.

The light went out on July 11, 1933, after a tall steel light-tower was erected on the Boardwalk. Mariners had complained that Atlantic City's tall hotels obstructed their view of the lighthouse from several angles at sea.

The lighthouse and its surrounding park were deeded to the city in 1946 and the building was renovated in 1963, and its light relit, for New Jersey's tercentenary celebration in 1964.

The Atlantic City Coastal Museum has five persons on duty at the lighthouse.

Sunday Speaker On Local Radio

Sister Rita Finnen, assistant professor in the ECU School of Nursing, will be guest Sunday at 1:06 p. m. on "Mental Health Matters" on WNCT radio.

Senior-level nursing students periodically meet for their classes in community mental health nursing at the Pitt Co. Mental Health Center. Finnen will talk about mental health training for nurses and how the center personnel shares experience and expertise with her students. She also will talk about recent projects in preventive mental health which her class has completed. Students demonstrate competency in primary prevention by individual proposals, she explained.

Pirates Carry Paintbrushes And Fat Checkbooks

By NORA BOUSTANY
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The pirates of Lebanon fly no Jolly Roger and clench no knives between their teeth. The tools of the modern pirate are paintbrushes and a fat checkbook.

Under paintbrush piracy, old freighters are sold to new owners after leaving for their destination. While the ship is still at sea, a new name is painted on and a new flag is hoisted. Its cargo is resold and unloaded at an illegal port.

Since the devastating 1975-76 Lebanese civil war, more than 50 "lost" freighters have been spotted off the 96-mile coast.

Samir Baroudi, a lawyer for several shipping insurance companies, says he knows of more than $150 million in illegally seized cargo that has been unloaded at illegal ports in Lebanon.

The ports and the piracy sprang up after the civil war because government authority was all but destroyed, leaving private armies to run the country, and because the port of Beirut, once the busiest in the Middle East, was practically paralyzed between Christian militia forces and Syrian peace-keeping troops.

A Beirut banker said legitimate importers cannot compete with the paintbrush pirates — a 26-inch West German color television set costs about $2,300 if purchased legally. A smuggled set costs less than half that.

The tale of the "Betty" is a typical case of paintbrush piracy.

The "Betty," originally owned by Pero Shipping Co. Ltd. of Cyprus, sailed from Yugoslavia on Aug. 16, bound for Jidda, Saudi Arabia. Instead of going to the Suez Canal, the "Betty" stopped at Pilos island in Greece for repairs and fueling.

It stayed at Pilos until the end of August. During that time, Pero sold the "Betty" to another Cyprus-based shipper. It was renamed the "Five Stars" and given a Panamanian flag.

On Sept. 3, the old owners telexed the Italian company that had chartered the ship to say that the "Five Stars" had sailed from Jidda, Saudi Arabia. Saudi authorities were told to expect it around Sept. 14.

But by Sept. 4, the "Five Stars" was well on its way to one of 20-odd illegal ports in Lebanon.

The ports, usually ringed by barbed-wire, consist of a roughly-built pier, a couple of rowboats, a crane and a few trucks. Armed teen-agers usually stand guard.

The "Five Stars" was unloaded in a bay. A Lebanese couple whose apartment overlooks the site said the ship's crane was busy unloading for five consecutive days.

"There was hardly any armed cover, just one or two gunmen could be seen from my balcony," said the husband, who asked that his name not be given. "How can you call this piracy? It seemed like a very smooth operation to me."

Shipping sources said the captain and his crew were bought off for $350,000 and the cargo — cast iron, textiles, ceramic tiles, timber, scrub brushes and locks — was sold for half-price, $3.5 million.

In mid-October, Baroudi asked the Lebanese government to seize the ship, but the "Five Stars" slipped out to sea.

A few days later, a ship named the "Aires" docked at Piraeus, Greece. Inspectors discovered traces of the name

"Betty" on the bow. Closer examination revealed the outlines of other names — "Five Stars," "Black Eagle," "Malaga."

Authorities in Piraeus arrested three Greeks, including the owner of the "Betty" and the owner of the "Five Stars," but Baroudi said the Lebanese involved have little to worry about — Lebanon's courts have been crippled since the war.

"It is almost impossible to penalize businessmen buying stolen goods," said Baroudi, explaining that it would have to be proven the cargo was bought with knowledge it was stolen. "The case would take years and that is in normal times, when courts are functioning properly."

The ports, run by the various private armies that rule post-civil war Lebanon, have put a dent in the Lebanese treasury, which used to get half its revenues from customs duties collected in Beirut.

But the port of Beirut is now closed as often as not. It is the most hotly contested area in the city, straddling the "green line" of separation between Moslem-controlled west Beirut and predominantly Christian east Beirut.

The 22,000 Syrian troops of the Arab Deterrent Force — sent by the Arab League in 1976 to restore order — and Christian Phalangist militiamen trade fire in the area almost daily, which threatens port workers and delays the unloading of ships.

The illegal ports provide a swift and cheap alternative to Beirut.

A housewife in the Christian town of Jounieh just north of Beirut, said she was astonished recently to see a Palestinian friend in town. He had not dared cross the green line since the war.

She said, "He asked whether he could wait here and have a cup of coffee while his shipment was being unloaded at the Aquamarina," a posh resort hotel where, residents say, television sets and other appliances are unloaded nightly.

"He said it only cost him about $90,000 to get his merchandise unloaded there, while it would cost him $250,000 at the Beirut port, provided it was open," she said.

'Perske Collection' Is Being Exhibited Here

The Perske Collection, a series of 20 prints depicting mentally retarded children and adults, is on exhibit in the Minges Building at 301 Evans Street. The exhibit will be on view through Monday, December 10.

This marks the first showing in Greenville of the Perske Collection, and its exhibit here is being sponsored jointly by the Greenville Civitans and the Mental Health Association of Pitt County. The exhibit is being shown in conjunction with the county-wide campaign for Operation Santa Claus.

These prints, which project an inside look at people who live within institutions, are by book illustrator and portrait artist Martha Perske. The artist does not attempt to deny the handicaps of disabled people, but instead emphasizes the beauty to be found in these people.

Connecticut resident Perske has been referred to as an "artist advocate" for persons with disabilities. As a result of her publications and collaborations with her writer husband Robert, three national agencies — the President's Committee on Mental Retardation, the Canadian Association for the Mentally Retarded, and the JFK Institute — requested a series of art prints, and 20 illustrations were elected to form the Perske Collection.

The Greenville exhibit offers the community an opportunity to foster and develop greater awareness of mentally retarded people.

The N. C. Civitans in eastern North Carolina helped fund the purchase of the Perske Collection, which is owned by Caswell Center, the regional state institution in Eastern North Carolina serving the mentally retarded.

The public is invited to view the collection while it is being shown at Minges Building.

Carol Grant, an East Carolina University graduate now living in Goldsboro, has been named to the U. S. Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board by Pres. Jimmy Carter.

Miss Grant is a vocational rehabilitation counselor serving Wayne, Craven and Greene counties. A Meredith College graduate, she received a master's degree in rehabilitation counseling from East Carolina University in 1977.

She was born with phocomeli, a shortening of the arms and legs similar to the disability of the Thalidomide babies. She wears leg braces, but is able to drive her specially equipped station wagon. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marse Grant of Raleigh, she was instrumental in the passage of a North Carolina law that prohibits public display of disabled persons under 28 for profit. She has been state youth chairman for the National Foundation of the March of Dimes and serves on both the N. C. Governor's Study Committee on Architectural Barriers and the Goldsboro Mayor's Committee on the Handicapped.

A PERSKE PRINT . . . from the collection being shown this week (through December 10) at Minges Building on the Mall Downtown. A collection of 20 prints by illustrator Martha Perske depicts portraits of people, young and old, with mental handicaps. The show is open to the public daily.

Study Cincinnati Concert Stampede

By BILL VALE
Associated Press Writer
CINCINNATI (AP) — Candle-carrying concertgoers returned to Riverfront Coliseum to mourn the deaths of 11 young persons crushed in a rock concert stampede as city officials sought to explain why the accident occurred and how to prevent future disasters.

Politicians, city administrators, police, lawyers and coliseum officials set up committees Tuesday to study the crowd problem that led to the deaths and 22 injuries Monday night as thousands surged into the building for a concert by The Who.

And Mayor John Kenneth Blackwell promised laws requiring only reserved seats, use of more doors and better crowd control at future events. Two rock concerts scheduled at the coliseum later this month were postponed indefinitely.

Meanwhile, The Who's performance in Buffalo, N.Y., Tuesday night came off with no problems as doors to the auditorium were swung open an hour earlier than scheduled amid tight security.

The group, which did not know of the deaths while performing Monday night, was reportedly shaken by the tragedy. "This show's for them," singer Roger Daltrey said Tuesday night.

But the mayor of Providence,

R.I., another stop on The Who's multi-city tour, canceled the British rock group's Dec. 17 performance, and Boston officials were studying the issue.

Officials in Pontiac, Mich., said they expected no problems at a concert by The Who on Friday at the Silverdome, but have decided to depart from normal procedures and not allow anyone without a ticket in the parking lots or elsewhere on the stadium grounds.

Cincinnati Safety Director Richard Castellini said police recognized the potential danger at 6:30 p.m. Monday as thousands of persons without reserved seat tickets lined up waiting to get in.

"Police asked the promoter to open up but he said the group was late and that he couldn't open," Castellini said. The promoters, Electric Factory Concerts Inc. of Philadelphia, said they would have no immediate comment on the specific allegation concerning the doors.

According to City Councilman Jerry Springer, two banks of doors — or 16 in all — were opened between 7:15 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Waiting fans heard the band warming up and stormed the building, thinking the concert had begun, Blackwell said.

After clips from The Who's newest film were shown, the band began playing about 8:20 p.m. as scheduled, and many in the crowd did not know what had happened.

"So far the blame for last night's incidents have been placed solely on the concertgoers' shoulders," said Mark Parchman, 19, who led a candlelight "demonstration of concern" of more than two dozen young people Tuesday night. "This allegation is both untrue and absurd," he said. "The real fault lies in the short-sightedness, apathy and complete lack of concern for the well being of the concert patrons."

Lt. Dale Menkhaus, who headed the police detail at the concert, filed a written report saying he had suggested that more doors be opened, but was told the coliseum didn't have enough ticket takers.

"One of the many tragedies of last night is that somebody saw what was happening, had the right remedy, and yet didn't believe he had authority," Springer complained.

The Hamilton County Coroner's office said all the deaths were caused by asphyxiation. Eight persons remained hospitalized Tuesday.

"There was not one gate crasher there," said Greg Roth, 19, another marcher. "You just can't get 18,000 people through two doors in 45 minutes."

Charge Slaying Good Samaritan

LUCAMA, N.C. (AP) — Wilson County authorities filed a murder charge Tuesday against Steve Bryant, 20, in the death of a man who had tried to help Bryant after his car ran out of gasoline.

Bryant was accused of shooting Larry Hinnant of Route 2, Lucama, Monday night. Cynthia Everette, 18, told officers she and Hinnant were taking Bryant to a service station when Bryant started shooting. Hinnant was shot six times in the back.

At Odds Over 'Chute Advice'

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Army officials and a retired chief of a test agency are at odds over the quality of existing Army emergency instructions to paratroopers on what to do if their steerable parachutes entangle.

The Army says it has found its instructions to be good enough, despite a controversial report to the contrary.

However, retired Col. Bruce E. Wallace, former president of the Airborne Board that found the instructions "potentially hazardous" two years ago, says the Army apparently hasn't figured out how to solve a real problem.

The board, a test agency at Fort Bragg, found existing emergency entanglement procedures in Army teaching manuals were defective when used with steerable parachutes. The finding was included in a report on the MCI-1B issued in December 1977.

The guidelines tell paratroopers what to do if two or more persons become entangled in their chutes in descending to the ground. Capt. Conrad Busch, a spokesman for the Army's Training and Doctrine Command, said the U.S. Army Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga., studied the procedures after they were questioned by the board.

"The school determined that basically the same procedures now used are effective and there is no need to substantially change them," Busch said. As the "independent evaluator," the school was under no obligation to follow the board's recommendations, Busch said.

Asked if the school's decision indicated the board had been in error in its findings, Busch said: "I'm not sure I would put it quite that strongly. They found that there was no need to change the procedures."

Wallace does not accept the school's position.

"I was hoping that somebody would take the ball and run with it — conduct some thorough tests to try to find a solution," he said.

"If Fort Benning came back and said they're adequate, they either don't have the means or the will to run the complicated series of tests needed."

Wallace wrote the board report that said procedures were adequate with the use of T-10B, an unsteerable parachute that preceded the MCI-1B as the 82nd Airborne Division's standard chute. However, the report said the same procedures were "potentially hazardous" when applied to the MCI-1B.

Entanglement problems with the MCI-1B were found to be so much more numerous and variable that the instructions needed likely would be "unsuitable by troops in the time span" given, he wrote in the report.

The psychiatric unit addition, to be located at the northwest corner of the hospital adjacent to the present psychiatric unit, is expected to be completed in 18 months.

T. A. Loving Company of Goldsboro was awarded the general contract with a bid of $3,089,000. Southern Piping Company of Wilson, with a bid of $863,000, received the mechanical contract.

The plumbing and heating work will be done by Community Heating and Plumbing of Greensboro, with a bid of $629,800, and Campbell Electric Company of Wilson, with a bid of $653,100.

The new bed tower and psychiatric addition are not the only construction projects on the 100-acre medical center site. The Animal Research Facility will soon open to serve as the central area for animal care and provide research space to ECU clinical faculty with offices in the Meical School Teaching Addition at PCMH. The nearby utility plant houses heating and cooling units and electrical equipment.

The largest construction project on the 40-acre health campus site is the Brody Medical Science Building. Construction is expected to be completed by the fall of 1981. Steel is up on the auditorium, first-floor administrative area and second-floor library.

Reunion With Traveling Cat

MELBOURNE, Fla. (AP) — A wide-eyed Siamese cat that spent 32 days and 225,000 miles in the hold of a Pan American World Airways jetliner has been reunited with her owners.

"We'd given up all hope on her," said Air Force Sgt. Guy Jones as his wife Ginger hugged the thin 2½-year-old cat, Sherry, at an emotional reunion Monday night at Orlando International Airport.

The cat, which had been shipped from Guam, could not be found when the Boeing 747 arrived in San Francisco. But 32 days later, flight personnel at London's Heathrow Airport found Sherry in the same cargo hold, injured and hungry, but alive.

Revolutionary Trio To Prison

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Guilford County judge Tuesday sentenced three Revolutionary Communist Party members to one year in prison after convicting them of trespassing on the University of North Carolina campus here and disrupting a class.

A fourth defendant was convicted only of a trespassing charge and sentenced to six months in prison.

The defendants are not associated with the Communist Workers Party that was involved in a Nov. 3 anti-Klan rally that erupted into violence.

"They got maxed," said defense attorney Allen Mason of Durham. He said each of the misdemeanor charges carries six-month maximum sentences. Mason appealed to Superior Court, and the defendants remained free on bond.

District Court Judge Frank Campbell said the three defendants convicted of two charges would serve their two six-month sentences consecutively. The defendants, all from out of state, were arrested by campus police after several

Fourth Suicide In Boston Cells

BOSTON (AP) — A prisoner who hanged himself in a police station holding cell is the fourth such suicide within two weeks, and investigators are calling for stepped-up surveillance.

William F. Hines, 35, was found hanging by his shoe laces Tuesday. All four victims have hanged themselves from pieces of clothing tied to bars in their cell doors.

Investigators recommended a series of precautions that included covering the bars in the upper cell doors with steel screening, stepping up half-hour cell checks to every 20 minutes and calling in medical teams when prisoners show signs of depression.

Puerto Rico Terrorists Signal Shift In Tactics

By BEATRIZ RUIZ
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — The ambush of a U.S. Navy bus in which two sailors were killed and 10 men and women wounded signaled a dangerous shift in tactics by the Puerto Rican independence movement.

The change resulted from the growing strength of the movement for Puerto Rican statehood.

"The extreme-left groups are feeling suffocated and time is running against them," said one source in the federal government. "If Puerto Rico becomes a state, then it will be too late for them to do anything."

For the past decade, pro-independence terrorism has been mostly a matter of haphazard bombing of U.S. government buildings or property of mainland companies, usually at night when the buildings were empty.

Of some 50 bombs planted in the past year, nearly half were dismantled unexploded, and those that went off did minimal damage. But after the ambush Monday, the three underground independence groups that claimed responsibility warned that they were "not playing at war" and were prepared to carry their struggle to its "ultimate consequences."

In past votes, the Puerto Ricans have overwhelmingly rejected independence and have chosen to continue as a U.S. commonwealth. Now a pro-statehood governor, Carlos Romero Barcelo, is waging a vigorous campaign to make the island the 51st state within the next decade.

The pro-independence forces are working against the deadline of a plebiscite in 1981 in which their cause stands no chance against commonwealth or statehood. Apparently the terrorists have decided that their only hope is to cause enough trouble to force cancellation of the vote.

Puerto Rico's first presidential primaries this winter are putting additional pressure on them. Republican hopefuls have begun to parade their candidacies and are pledging to make the island a state. One advocate of independence expressed the fear that the primaries would be "an irreversible step on the road to statehood."

Eighteen different clandestine groups have claimed responsibility for the bombings of the past year, but an FBI source said the terrorists are a small, cell-like nucleus working under diverse names. They were trained in Cuba and took part in the Angolan civil war as "observers," one official source reported.

In contrast to the amateurism which has characterized many of their earlier attacks, the ambush of the Navy bus was a professional affair that was carried out in less than a minute.

The three groups that claimed responsibility were the Armed Forces of Popular Resistance, the Volunteers for the Puerto Rican Revolution and the Puerto Rican People's Army, also known as the Macheteros.

They joined forces for the first time to set a series of bombs on Oct. 17 in San Juan and in U.S. cities, the latter in coordination with the mainland-based FALN, the Armed Forces of National Liberation.

Until then, the FALN had no known links with any island group.

Pirates Come From Behind To Nip Lynchburg

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's rookie coach Dave Odom wanted a good opening home game for the fans, coupled with a victory over visiting Lynchburg last night.

Well, as it turned out, it wasn't pretty, but it was a win, 65-64.

Kyle Powers sank three of four free throw attempts in the final 30 seconds, and a shot at the buzzer by Lynchburg cut it to the final margin.

"I told our players before the game that I hoped that it would be close but that we would win," Odom said. "I think that it is important that we learn to win the close ones. If there is a silver lining in this one, it's that it's a step in the right direction in learning to win and believing we can win."

The Pirates didn't play nearly as well as they had in their first two outings. They committed 11 turnovers in a sloppy first half, and shot poorly throughout the game. Their final percentage of 41.8 was the first time in the three games so far that the Pirates have shot below 50 percent.

"Lynchburg was an awfully tough team to play. Some of that was probably my fault. We didn't know enough about them. But it's tough to scout when they are playing down in Florida and we're trying to keep folks together to get started," Odom said.

"At times we were playing impatiently. We were so eager to make the quick pass that I think we overdid it."

And after watching the Pirates get off to three poor starts, Odom questioned his own pregame talks. "(Tonight), I'm not going to say a word, except 'Let's go,'" he said. "I must be overdoing it. We appeared to have no life, we were listless and looked poorly coached. I hope it was none of these, but I may be overdoing the psychological part of it."

East Carolina did get away to its third straight poor start, but this time, it began to look like they might not snap back as they had against Virginia Commonwealth and West Virginia Tech. After losing an early 4-2 advantage, the Pirates fell behind by eight points, 18-10 with just over seven minutes gone.

They appeared sluggish, and had trouble holding the ball, as well as difficulty in finding the range. Even usually steady shooting Herb Krusen lost his eye for the night, hitting only three of 12.

The Pirates did force Lynchburg into mistakes, but many times, they were unable to take advantage of it, failing to hit, or throwing it away themselves. Twice in the first half, they pushed ahead by a point, then did it again in the early minutes of the second.

It was only in the final five minutes, however, that the Bucs got their largest lead, four points.

That came after they had pushed ahead, 60-58 with 5:32 left, then grabbed off an errant Hornet shot and gone to a four-cornered offense.

"They were using a half-court zone trap, so we used a system that we hadn't even practiced," Odom said. "We put (David) Underwood, a good foul shooter, in the middle, and just tried to keep the ball off the floor, passing off to the open man as they broke on the trap. It worked well as long as we didn't try to put the ball on the floor."

The strategy worked well, freeing Frank Hobson for a slam dunk with 2:47 left that put the lead at 62-58. Twenty seconds later, Lynchburg scored again, but the Pirates then ran off over two minutes before the Hornets intentionally fouled Powers with 23 seconds left. He hit both shots, and after another Hornet with 13 seconds left, Powers was again fouled with seven seconds showing. He made the first, giving the Pirates a three-point lead and Jeff Huffman made an uncontested buzzer basket to end it.

"We're still searching for the right combination, the right leadership," Odom said. "We have a long way to go, but we will get there. This wasn't the opener that I would have liked for us to have before the home folks, but maybe we pushed that too much."

On the rebounding side of the scale, the Pirates held only a slim one loose ball margin, 41-40. Herb Gray led the Bucs with eight.

George Maynor led the Pirate scoring with 19 points, while Hobson finished with ten. Rick Purcell paced the Hornets with 12, while E.D. Schechterly had 11.

East Carolina, now 2-1, plays host to the University of Maine tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Rampants Hold On To Shock Vikings, 63-60

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer

KINSTON — Center Donald House opened the game with a dunk and ended the game with a dunk and in between the Rose Rampants pounded out a stunning 63-60 win over the Kinston Vikings Tuesday night.

The Rampants, without seven players who are involved in the state 4-A football playoffs, squandered a nine-point advantage with four minutes to go before holding on for their first win at Kinston in nine years.

Leading 55-46, the Rampants, plagued all night by poor ball handling and passing, went cold. Three quick buckets by the Vikings, following two Rose turnovers, a missed layup and a missed free throw opportunity, pulled Kinston to within three, 55-52.

Rose's Calvin Nesbit, who finished the night with 11 points, hit four free throws, sandwiched around a Kinston basket, giving Rose a 59-54 lead with a minute remaining.

Kinston, taking advantage of poor shooting by Rose, continued to battle back, narrowing the margin to one, 59-58, with 33 seconds left, after Rose's Cliff Kilpatrick, who finished with 15 points, missed the front end of a one-and-one.

Kilpatrick, however, came back moments later with a reverse layup to give the Rampants a 61-58 lead with 22 seconds left. Kinston scored quickly and called timeout with 13 seconds to go, but Rose calmly got the ball across midcourt and with three seconds left House who led all Rose scorers with 18 points, drove through the middle for his final dunk of the night.

The win leaves Rose at 2-0 while Kinston drops to 1-2.

"You know, that's what happens when you have a big lead," Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "We jumped out to that big lead and we were too confident."

"But I'm proud of them. It's always great to win, especially when you beat (Kinston's) Paul (Jones). He's one of the best high school coaches in the state," Brewington said.

For most of the first half, it didn't appear Rose would have a chance to win.

After House hit an opening-game dunk to give Rose an early lead, the two teams traded baskets until Kinston broke out on top, 13-8.

Kinston upped its lead to 19-11 in the first two minutes of the second period before Rose fought back to take a two-point lead into the dressing room.

The Rampants, on two quick baskets by Calvin Nesbit, kept close, at 21-17. After trading baskets three consecutive trips down court, the Rampants took a two-point lead, on a Wendell Rogers jumper from the top of the key.

Kinston regained the lead at 28-27 moments later, but Rose's Kilpatrick tied the score on a free throw and then stripped the ball from Kinston's Todd Hallow with 16 seconds left and put in a layup, giving the Rampants a two-point lead at the half.

Throughout most of the third period, Rose maintained a four-point bulge, but near the end the Vikings tied the score twice, at 40 and 42, before the Rampants recaptured the lead, 44-42, at the end of the third quarter.

In the final period, Rose grabbed a 50-44 advantage and moved ahead, 55-46, before going cold and then holding on for the win.

"We've got some young guys playing because we're still without some players," Brewington said. "But they played really good for me. I was upset in the first half because they were dribbling the ball too much. But there in the second half we went to some of our set plays and starting running a little and we did all right."

ECU Chancellor Speaks

East Carolina Chancellor Dr. Thomas Brewer during last Friday's press conference. Brewer, who yesterday in the first part of a two-part article said he is firmly committed to improving ECU's standing in athletics' says today in part two of that interview that ECU's home schedule will improve. He adds that the need of new athletic facilities is now being studied. (Reflector photo by Tommy Forrest)

Brewer: Schedule Will Improve, Athletic Facilities Under Study

Editor's note: This is the second part of an interview with East Carolina Chancellor Thomas Brewer on the future of the school's athletics.

In yesterday's first part, a typographical error caused one of Brewer's statements to read incorrectly. In the 11th paragraph, Brewer's quote should have read: "However, I can assure everyone that our programs are going to continue to improve. We absolutely want to continue to grow toward national prominence in all fields."

One of the chief topics of discussion recently involving the East Carolina University football program has been sched-

ing. Chancellor Tom Brewer is quick to point out that scheduling for East Carolina hasn't been easy—at least when it comes to getting some of the "Big Boys" on the home schedule.

"The main reason our schedule for next year hasn't been announced," he said, "is because we are trying to get the kind of teams that people want. Naturally, we want to continue our relationship with North Carolina State. It's been a good series for both teams. It's a healthy, friendly rivalry. Of course, we would like for them to come down here and I've talked with the State chancellor about it."

"But," Brewer continued, "the athletic directors are the ones who really do the scheduling. It's still in discussion, and we are making every effort to bring them here. We are also still trying to get Duke down here."

Brewer added that in the scheduling matter, he was perhaps most disappointed in Wake Forest. "We originally had an agreement for several more games, to be played both in Winston-Salem and Greenville. But they backed out on us. And I think the reason is that we're too good. Back when the games were scheduled, they probably felt they weren't going to win too many games in the ACC and wanted people they had a chance to beat outside the league."

The chancellor said that the success enjoyed by East Carolina has hurt its scheduling. "It's difficult to get good teams to play us. Right now we are more successful in playing teams like Florida State than someone on our own level."

"Down the line, I hope that we will be successful in getting people here. But in the past, we haven't been in a position to get people to come here, simply because we haven't had a

HOCKEY

TORONTO (AP) — National Hockey League players will have to wear helmets beginning with the 1979-80 season, it was announced Monday.

The only exception will be players who signed pro contracts prior to June 1, 1979, and who sign a special waiver excusing them from the rule.

Panthers Nip Jaguars, 57-54

BETHEL — North Pitt High School split a pair of games with visiting Farmville Central last night. The Panthers won the boys' game, 57-54, while the Farmville girls took a 51-41 decision in their outing.

Farmville, playing without two regulars, one of them involved in the Shrine Bowl in Charlotte, inched into a 12-11 lead after the first eight minutes, only to see the Panthers move ahead by the same margin at the half, 25-24.

North Pitt was able to put a little more breathing room between it and the Jaguars in the third frame, building a 37-32 lead. Farmville rallied in the final period, 22-20, but couldn't outlast the Panthers.

Milton Hardy led North Pitt with 13, while Reginald Knight added 10. Farmville was led by Dennis Pitt with 16, Jeff Tyson with 14 and Ronald Dixon with 12.

Farmville's and North Pitt's girls battled to an 8-8 deadlock in the first period, but the Lady Jaguars broke it open in the second, with a 20-5 advantage. That made it 28-13 at intermission.

North Pitt staged a 15-2 com-back in the third period, cutting the lead to 30-28, but Farmville again pulled away, 21-13, to win it.

Courtney Lancaster led the Farmville five with 14, while Pam Moye added 12, Etta Gorham had 11 and Diana Gordon had 10. Connie Dupree had 13 and Carolyn Best, 10, for the Panthers.

Interviews Continue For Coach

East Carolina University began its search for a new head football coach yesterday, interviewing two prospects for the job.

Officials at the university announced that ECU alumnus Ed Emory, currently an assistant coach at Georgia Tech, was interviewed, along with current East Carolina aide Dick Kupec.

While no interviews are scheduled for today, it is expected that at least one and possibly two more would be interviewed on Thursday. Among those said to be interested in the job are former ECU assistant Carl Reese, now an assistant at Missouri; Auburn aide Alex Gibbs, and Tennessee assistant Joe Mallon.

The selection committee also announced that it has added two representatives from the football team to its ranks. Selected by the team were Matt Muholland and Willie Hollie. The inclusion of the team members came following a suggestion by Chancellor Tom Brewer.

Greenville Christian Loses

Greenville Christian Academy opened the 1979-80 basketball season, suffering a pair of losses to strong Pungo Academy last night. The boys took an 81-66 loss, while the girls were drubbed, 59-16.

The Knights managed a slim 20-19 lead after one period, but Pungo took charge after that, pulling out into a 41-35 halftime lead. Pungo increased its lead to 58-47 during the third period and outslugged the Knights, 23-19, in the final quarter.

Radcliff led Pungo with 27, while Copeland had 17 and Pope and Vrevgdenhil each had 12. Jeff Parnell led all scorers with 34 for the Knights, with Ben Haddock adding 13.

In the girls' game, Pungo shot away to a 12-0 lead in the opening period. They upped that to 30-8 at halftime, and cruised on out to a 46-10 third period margin. They finished off the Lady Knights, 13-6.

Sheila Cayton led Pungo with 11, while Cindy Sawyer had 10. No one hit double figures for GCA.

The Knights play host to Friendship on Friday.

Martin Academy Falls

EVERETTES — Tarboro-Edgecombe Academy took a pair of games from Martin Academy last night. The boys took an 84-52 win, while the girls came away with a 43-29 victory.

In the girls' game, Martin slipped out to a 6-3 lead after the first period, but couldn't hold the lead. TEA came back to tie it up at intermission, 13-13.

In the third period, Tarboro-Edgecombe pulled ahead, building up a 31-23 lead. They finished off Martin, 12-6, in the final period.

Barbara Brake led TEA with 18 while Kathy Johnson had 12. Penny Meeks led Martin with 10.

The Tarboro-Edgecombe boys pulled out into a 19-12 lead in the first period, then held off a Martin rally for a 34-26 halftime lead. They increased their lead to 50-35 in the third frame, then blistered the Panthers, 34-17, in the final quarter.

Mark Pittman dumped in 31 points to lead TEA, while Dean Wells had 14, Greg Clark had 13 and Wayne Cross had 12. Allen Warren led Martin with 14, while Jerry Brannon has 12 and Edwin Johnson had 10.

MUSICAL BROWN

TAMPA BAY, FLA. (AP) — Cedric Brown, who plays free safety for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, has an extensive musical background. He sang in a children's gospel choir in his home town of Columbus, Ohio, and he plays three instruments, trombone, trumpet and bass fiddle.

"I played in the band in junior high school," Brown recalled, "but I also was on the football team. So, the music had to go. I may get back into it some day."

Brewer: Schedule To Improve

stadium big enough to offer the kind of guarantees it takes.

"It takes about $90,000 to $100,000 to get the kind of teams we want to come in here. Now, with the stadium expansion, we can offer guarantees like that to get people to come in here. But we couldn't do that until the stadium was actually a fact. The question now is to work it out and get them to play us."

Brewer said that right now there are two or three open dates on the schedule for 1980. "It would have been easy to fill the schedule with teams the level we've been playing, but we want to get off that level. A lot of schools are shuffling their schedules now. Some teams, who scheduled games some time back, are trying to get out of games for this coming year, and in the next few years. We are working hard to try and pick up some of the teams that are doing this—teams that we feel our people want us to play. And we're trying to get them to come here, too.

"We're looking down the road too, toward future scheduling, and we think we're going to get some good teams. But this is a job in which everyone must participate. Not only does the athletic director have to do all he can to get the games, the chancellors must get together, and the coaches need to use their contacts too. It's not all the athletic director's job, but it takes a total commitment from everyone involved."

Turning to facilities, Brewer admitted that at this point, he could not say what improvements would be made in the next few years. "This goes back to our overall planning for the university. I expect that plans for such things like a weight training room and the like, will be addressed in this study. The study will show us where we want to go in this phase of the program."

While athletic director Bill Cain has come under much criticism, especially in quotes attributed to Pat Dye, Brewer said he didn't want to get involved in a discussion about it at this time. "There are too many emotions because of the situation and the times," he said.

"I will say this. Being athletic director now is no easy job. There are many problems. Not only are their football problems, but Title IX, scheduling, the other sports. In a lot of things, it's damned if you do and damned if you don't. All of them wish they had the money to satisfy everyone."

While the chancellor said he will continue to push for academic excellence in all programs of the university, he said that "special admissions," will continue to be a part of the athletic world at ECU.

"This is nothing new. This school and nearly every other school has a certain number of special admissions, where a student who otherwise doesn't meet all the requirements is allowed to enter. But we didn't use half the number allotted last year in the overall program. Football used less than they did a year earlier. I don't anticipate the number being lowered, but I would hope that the number used will continue to be smaller.

"I think the hiring of an athletic academic counselor was one of the best moves we've made here. These students have four years here and 40 more after that. Very, very, very few of them are going to play pro football, and they will need something for the preparation of the rest of their lives."

Brewer also struck down a rumor that the Health and Physical Education Department would be combined with the Athletic Department. "I don't know what people are talking about here. There is no way this could be done. Physical education programs are run with state funds. Athletic programs, by law, must use non-state funds. So there is no way they could be combined."

All in all, Brewer sees no decline in East Carolina athletics. "I don't know why people would think such a thing. All along I've said that we want to continue to grow in the athletic program. I said so Friday when I announced the search committee, but most people didn't use it (in the media). I think that was a strong statement," Brewer said.

His statement said, in part, "We must have a university in which all of us can take pride, and we must have a football program in which we can take pride."

"My personal commitment to quality athletics is unwavering. It is our intention at East Carolina University to build teams in football that will enable us to play any team."

Brewer, in this present interview added, "Coach Dye did an outstanding job for us. He contributed greatly to the growth of our football program."

"We expect to continue this fine tradition."

Three 3s Give Edge To Celtics

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Red Auerbach was one of the more outspoken opponents of the three-point field goal rule when it was proposed last summer, but the president of the Boston Celtics may be having second thoughts.

A trio of three-pointers, two by M.L. Carr and one by Chris Ford, helped the Celtics edge the Detroit Pistons 118-114 in overtime Tuesday night in the National Basketball Association.

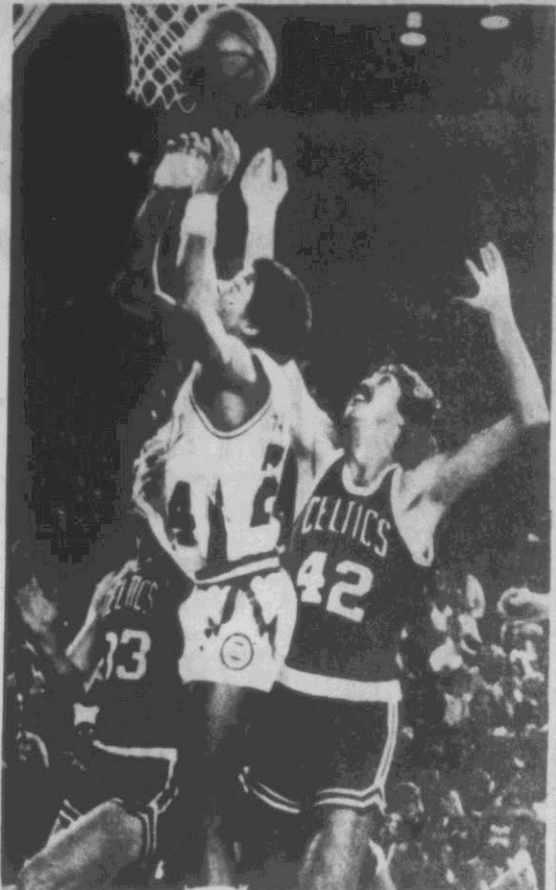

Cleveland led by 15 points at halftime and maintained that margin going into the final period but could not hang on down the stretch. Carr hit from three-point range with 31 seconds left to bring the Celtics close, then connected again from deep in the left corner at the buzzer to tie the score at 104.

"When the last play started, I saw there were eight seconds left on the clock," Carr said. "I just hurried to the three-point line and hit it. How sweet it was."

The Celtics fell behind again in the five-minute overtime until guard Chris Ford connected on a three-point field goal with 18 seconds left, putting Boston ahead to stay 116-114.

Carr led the Celtics with 22 points, while Detroit's John Long took game honors with 32.

Cavs 115, Clippers 112
Mike Mitchell scored half of his 24 points in the fourth quarter, including a jumper with 1:27 to play that put the Cavaliers ahead to stay. Cleveland, playing at home, was 19-for-24 from the foul line compared to 3-for-7 for the Clippers.

Knicks 118, Suns 114
Bill Cartwright, New York's 7-foot-1 rookie center, capitalized on the absence of Phoenix pivotman Alvan Adams due to a bruised foot and scored a career-high 36 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as the Knicks beat the Suns. Guard Michael Ray Richardson added 28 points, also a career high, and had 12 assists, nine rebounds and three steals.

Lakers 127, Spurs 121
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 29 points and Norm Nixon had 27 as Los Angeles beat San Antonio. The Lakers led most of the way but needed three free throws by Nixon and two by Abdul-Jabbar in the final 27 seconds to turn back a Spurs rally.

Rams Nip Chargers For First Victory

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's Rams snapped a three-game losing streak last night, easing past Ayden-Grifton's Chargers, 53-50 in an Eastern Carolina Conference game.

In the girls' contest, Ayden-Grifton slipped to a 43-40 victory.

The Chargers took command in the early minutes of the boys' game, pushing into a 14-9 lead by the first horn. Both teams played match-up in the second period, as neither could gain any advantage. The half ended with A-G leading, 26-21.

The Rams, however, began to reverse things in the third period, outscoring the Chargers, 18-12. That put them into a 39-38 lead, as they erased a deficit of 11 points during the period. In the final quarter, the Rams held off A-G, with Jerome Artis hitting both ends of a one-and-one with about 30 seconds left to provide the Rams with their final margin.

Roderick Lane led Greene Central with 12, while Artis added 10. Timmy Edwards led Ayden-Grifton with 14, with Alan Haseley adding 12.

In the girls' contest, Ayden-Grifton romped out to a 15-6 lead in the first period, only to see the Lady Rams reverse things in the second frame, 16-8, to cut the lead to 23-22.

Greene Central then pulled ahead in the third quarter building up a 34-29 lead. But the Lady Chargers outhit Greene, 14-6, in the final period, to pull it out.

Irene Lewis led the victors with 23 points, while Letha Taylor had 18 and Sharon Suggs had 11 for the Rams.

Greene Central travels to C.B. Aycock and Ayden-Grifton plays host to Farmville Central on Friday.

Ashe In Hospital

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tennis star Arthur Ashe was expected to be released from Memorial Hospital today after undergoing observation for what a hospital spokesman described as "mild chest discomfort."

The 36-year-old Ashe, who suffered a heart attack in July, was admitted through the emergency room Tuesday after consulting with his New York cardiologist by phone, hospital spokesman Charles Butler said.

Speaks At Sports Club

Crum Says Heels Had Three-Part Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Dick Crum, head football coach at the University of North Carolina, said his football team had a three-part season this year, hit out at long range scheduling, the proposed scheduling of a 12th game, and admitted mixed emotions about the NCAA playoffs in a talk to the Greenville Sports Club yesterday.

"Our season this year was divided into three parts. The first four games was one part, followed by the middle five and the last two," he said.

"You always try to figure out why you play like you do. I think a lot is involved in turnovers. We only had four in the first four games and I think that had a lot to do with our four wins there."

Crum admitted surprise when the Tar Heels handled South Carolina as easily as they did. "Pittsburgh came in thinking it had its best team since its national champion, and turnovers helped us win that one. Against Army we didn't know what to expect and again turnovers played a big role. The game wasn't as wide apart as the score (41-3) would indicate because of several late turnovers that gave us easy scores."

The final game of the four, against Cincinnati, saw the Heels play one good half, Crum said.

"Against Wake Forest, we had six turnovers. Also we were getting banged up. Kelvin Bryant was already out for the rest of the season and Amos (Lawrence) got hurt. Against State, the injury to Lawrence not being made public, and using (Doug) Paschal was an advantage to us. Then, we had East Carolina at the worst possible time—right after State. We struggled to get back in that one. "I'll say this. East Carolina's four backs had more skill and speed than any backfield we played all year long," he added.

Rounding out the middle five were the games against Maryland ("We were flat in the first half, and never got back enough) and Clemson (four turnovers inside the 25 yard line).

The final two were against Virginia and Duke. "We knew if we won against Virginia, we'd get the Gator, and they knew if they won, they'd get the Tangerine," Crum said. "It's a credit to our seniors that we played like we did."

Against Duke, Crum said they approached it "just like another game," rather than Duke.

Crum said he expected next year's team to be "interesting." Only five starters graduate. "Those five will be missed, but we have a good nucleus to build on."

Crum, turning to the upcoming schedule, said the Heels would be visiting Texas Tech and Oklahoma next year.

"Our schedule is solid through 1994," he announced. When asked why it was set so far in advance, Crum acknowledged, "I don't know. I think it's a way of keeping up with the Joneses. The athletic directors get one year out of the way, and it just builds. You can't tell if you're really going to have a competitive schedule that far down the line. But I don't think anything will be done to curb it unless the NCAA steps in. And the athletic directors run the NCAA."

As far as the NCAA playoffs are concerned, Crum said he didn't know if he had a firm commitment on them. "The bowls don't want anything tampering with their hold, and with the television networks and the payoffs they offer, I don't think any changes will be made."

Asked about a 12th game, Crum said he's rather go back to ten. "The season is too long with 11, especially if you have an open date or two. Support for the 12th game is largely for financial reasons."

Crum also had praise for Greenville native Doug Paschal, and said he also was impressed with freshman walk-on quarterback Donald Freeman from Farmville.

It is uncertain whether the Sports Club will meet on December 18. An announcement on the possibility of a meeting will come later.

When Don Buse, a skillful guard joined the Phoenix Suns, it was the first time in his basketball career that he had played for any kind of team outside the state of Indiana.

Senate Bid Seen By Bess Myerson

By MARTIN WALD
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When Bess Myerson was crowned Miss America of 1945, a headline described her as "A Very Serious Type." Today she is being taken very seriously indeed, as an all-but-announced candidate for the U.S. Senate.

The path from the Atlantic City runway has led her from a three-room flat in the Bronx to a luxurious East Side apartment overlooking Manhattan's Central Park, through one career in television and another as a self-styled consumer advocate.

Now she is seeking a third career in politics, eyeing the seat held by 75-year-old Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., who has not yet decided whether to seek reelection.

Should she run, her competition promises to be stiff, but she appears undaunted by the probable opponents, among them Rep. Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and her onetime boss, former Mayor John Lindsay.

"I'm quick and I'm smart and I'm able to get things done. My professional life has been one of success," she said in a recent interview.

Left unspoken was mention of her personal life, marked by three divorces — from two husbands — and a bout with ovarian cancer.

Her 5-foot-10 frame is regal looking at age 55. Columnists still refer to her as "Queen Bess." But Miss Myerson, mother of a 31-year-old daughter, Barra, strives to play down her early career.

"That's who I was, not who I am now," she said firmly.

She entered the Miss America contest, she said, as a "lark," and to try to win the $5,000 prize for a music scholarship and a piano. She still has the Steinway baby grand, although marriage and a child kept her from finishing her masters' degree studies in conducting at Columbia University.

Miss Myerson had played Grieg and Gershwin in the talent portion of the contest, and before long she wound up on the vaudeville circuit. But she abandoned that after only a few performances when audiences proved more interested in her figure than her flute playing.

She also abandoned the traditional Miss America personal appearances because, she said, corporate sponsors were uneasy with her being Jewish. Some reportedly suggested she change her name.

"I just didn't want to be demeaned," she said, although she made no public statement alleging anti-Semitism at the time. Years later, she worked as television hostess of the Miss America pageant.

Her two-page official biography mentions none of this — referring to the Miss America competition only as "a national talent contest." It also skips her eight years as the Lady In Mink for CBS's "The Big Pay-off," a giveaway program on which she modeled the prize, and her nine years as a panelist on "I've Got A Secret."

In 1969, then-Mayor Lindsay plucked her out of the TV world and gave her a job as New York City's first commissioner of consumer affairs. She accepted, admitting she knew nothing about consumerism.

But she studied, and by general consensus she did a good job — pushing through a unit pricing law for groceries, cracking down on sleazy installment contracts and short-weight merchants and gaining the fledgling consumer movement the kind of attention that a less well-known commissioner might not have commanded.

After leaving the city post, she hired out as a consultant to such corporations as Bristol-Myers, Citicorp, and Warner Communications. Some say that has tarnished her consumerist image, as when a booklet she edited for Bristol-Myers denied evidence linking dyes used in the company's profitable Clairol products to cancer.

Miss Myerson is reported to earn about $300,000 a year from these and other activities, including a syndicated newspaper column.

"I'm very proud of the money I've made," she said, but she refused to reveal the sources and amount of her income, nor would she pledge to do so should she become a candidate.

"When I left the city and I was alone and very ill I made a decision to make a great deal of money, as much as I could without doing commercials," she said. Friends say she is delaying her official entry into the Senate race to avoid having to give up any of her lucrative positions.

She has been laying the groundwork for a senate race for years, declining pleas from political leaders to run in previous elections.

"It was important to me to get a broader canvas of experience for myself before becoming a candidate," she said. "I wanted to see how the business community worked from the inside ... to learn more about the politics of running."

She campaigned effectively for such successful New York Democrats as Mayor Edward Koch, Sen. Daniel Moynihan and Gov. Hugh Carey. Koch, a close personal friend, and Moynihan have promised to return the favor.

"I think I have the skills and talent to be a senator," she said. "And when my points of view are declared I think the people of New York will see there's a very credible reason for me to run for the Senate and reasons why I should represent the people of New York state."

School String Coach Has 'Team' Over 300 Strong

TEACHING THE STRINGS — Fifth graders in the Shelby school system are learning all about the violin, cello and guitar in a new program headed by teacher Gene Ellis (with guitar). (AP Laserphoto)

By BRENDA CROSBY
The Shelby Daily Star
SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Gene Ellis began his new job this fall with all the enthusiasm of a first-year coach in a new stadium.

His season started with pep rallies. He exhorted his listeners toward teamwork. But Ellis' field is a classroom, and his team is over 300 strong.

In a program believed to be the first of its kind in the nation, Ellis brings string music to children.

An instructor with more than 20 years of experience to his credit, Ellis is currently involved in teaching every fifth grader in the Shelby public school system how to play a stringed instrument.

The program is so innovative that Ellis is writing his own textbook. There now are no written texts or commercial materials for mass instruction in the three instruments — violin, cello and guitar — involved in the program.

Ellis has developed a musical outline for the course, titled "Instrumental Music Exploration," and will insert material as the year progresses.

By the end of the school year, he will have developed a program of student proficiency designed to encourage high string program retention and strengthen a traditionally weak area of the orchestra.

The project is also geared toward increasing appreciation for instrumental music in young students.

the place to begin because it's a point, Ellis says, "where students have a maximum maturity with maximum enthusiasm ... It's also a 'place where nothing particularly new is happening.'"

The final project evolved over a series of "back and forth writing" between Shelby and Raleigh. Hall contributed heavily with program information as did Shelby school administrators Hale Bryson and Jaanita Burns who now serve as co-directors.

Some $45,000 in funding was acquired through the federal Title IV C program by way of the state department's division of development. The local school board, which is responsible for instructional space, furniture equipment and personnel, chipped in $9,000.

There is no expense to the child, a factor which, Ellis hopes, could lead some students toward previously unaffordable instruments and instruction.

The current school year began as a period of planning for Ellis. More accustomed to the study habits of older students, he discussed the project — and the fifth grade — with music and classroom teachers, parents, even the school psychologist. "I made a point to try to understand who I was working with before I started," he said.

With beginning materials assembled and the typical fifth grader explored, Ellis moved into the classroom the first week of November and started with "an enthusiastic approach because I was enthusiastic about it and I knew we couldn't work without it."

He began an orientation to the different instruments, their care and "how to respect their value." More recently, the course has taken a hands-on aspect as students have begun to pick out the different strings and simple chords.

Instruction in the three instruments is simultaneous, and during the school year each student will spend time on each instrument, building on his own and his neighbor's experience.

Each of the four participating schools is equipped with 10 instruments of each kind, and each school has three classes, contributing to a total enrollment of 311.

Guitars and cellos are full-sized, but violins range from half, to three-quarters full because of the varying lengths of young arms.

Ellis rotates among the schools, visiting each twice a week. His Fridays are set aside for planning and evaluation.

The project was established "from a real exploratory point of view, and we will continue to explore as far as the kids are willing," he said.

Performance is not a specified goal, but he adds, "if performance comes out of this, that's fine."

Right now, performing seems a long way off, and it takes a vivid imagination to transfer the plinks, strums and plucks issuing from fifth grade fingers to Ellis' dream of a 21st Century virtuoso.

Some successes, though, are more immediate: "If we can raise one student's value of himself one little bit," Ellis says, "we've done a lot."

Nation's Automakers See Sales At Lowest Level In Five Years

By MICHAEL L. GRACYK
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Auto dealers may be in the giving mood as the holidays approach, but Americans still aren't buying.

Despite rebates and other dealer incentives, sales by the nation's five major automakers dropped 21.3 percent in November from a year ago to the lowest levels in five years, automakers said Tuesday.

New deliveries totaled 606,204, compared with 769,855 a year ago. The daily selling rate of 24,248 was the third-lowest of the decade, eclipsed only by the 20,220 in 1974 and 18,131 in 1970.

For the final 10 days of November, sales plunged 23.9 percent from the same period a year ago to 213,910.

General Motors Corp. sales for November were 369,625, down 21.8 percent; Ford Motor Co. was off 24.3 percent to 150,611; Chrysler Corp. fell 32.6 percent to 53,733.

While the Big Three carmakers showed steep declines for the month and the latest period, American Motors Corp. and Volkswagen of America each posted gains.

AMC was up 36.7 percent for the month to 17,482. And Volkswagen, which a year ago did not have its new Pennsylvania plant producing at full capacity, delivered 14,753 Rabbits in November, a 150.4 percent jump.

GM's response Tuesday to its poor sales report was to announce the indefinite layoff of more than 11,000 workers, bringing to 45,560 the number of GM workers facing indefinite furloughs. Industrywide, the figure tops 110,000.

Industry analysts said the car market mirrored the nation's economy by "going sideways."

"There has been little change in market conditions in the past two months," said Gordon B. Mackenzie, Ford sales vice president. "Many potential buyers apparently are deferring vehicle purchases because of temporary economic and world conditions."

Faced with bloated inventories of some 1980 cars and a stockpile of unsold 1979 models, GM and Ford have been offering dealers incentives which may be passed along to buyers. Chrysler, meanwhile, is giving $300 rebates direct to buyers of most models.

But analysts say the efforts

Wetzel's Move Facing Delay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Convicted murderer Frank Wetzel will have to remain at Central Prison until the state has exhausted its appeal effort to an order directing his transfer to a medium security prison, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

District Judge Franklin Dupree Jr. had ruled earlier that Wetzel should be moved. He amended that order after the state appealed his ruling to the U.S. 4th District Court of Appeals.

Wetzel, the only medium security prisoner at Central, has sought a transfer to another unit so he could be considered for promotion to minimum custody status and possibly parole. Wetzel is serving two consecutive life sentences for the deaths of two Highway Patrolmen in 1957.

Visa Check No Big Deal For Students

By The Associated Press
Federal Immigration and Naturalization officials visited college campuses in Greensboro Tuesday to check the status of Iranian students studying there, but the visit apparently caused little stir among the students.

"For us, coming here today is no big deal," said Dariush Mianja, a 20-year-old industrial engineering student at North Carolina A&T. "As a matter of fact, it's a good chance for us to see each other again."

"I think this verification process is a show by the U.S. government, designed to show the citizens of this country that 'we are doing something to get those hostages out.' As far as I'm concerned, it's no big deal."

Those and other students, in this country studying some form of engineering or attending high school, said that while the United States has some outstanding educational advantages not yet available in their homeland, it is not a question of whether they will return to Iran — only when.

The verification process reportedly ran smoothly for the four INS agents who were in Greensboro for a two-day examination of all Iranian student and non-student visas. Only about a half-dozen students experienced any difficulty with their records, and those were termed "minor," according to Anne Graves, foreign student advisor at A&T.

Meanwhile, North Carolina State vice-chancellor for student affairs, Dr. Banks C. Talley Jr., said in a prepared statement that most students enrolled at N.C. State have either Immigrant or Exchange Visitor visas.

Talley added that in the case of students already in this country, the university has its own screening methods for assurance of proper visa status. He said the university is required by law to notify the Immigration and Naturalization Service when a student fails to register. It is not the school's responsibility to enforce INS regulations, the statement said.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Nov. 26 through Nov. 28.

HOUSE
CURBING THE FTC — By a vote of 321 for and 63 against, the House passed a bill to curtail the authority of the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). The bill (HR 2313) was sent to the Senate. It contains a "legislative veto" provision which, if it becomes law, will enable either house of Congress to prevent by majority vote any FTC action against an entire industry. The FTC was created in 1914 to combat unfair and deceptive business practices.

Rep. Elliott Levitas, D-Ga., a supporter, said: "We are seeing an end to government by bureaucratic fiat. The outrage of the American public against unacceptable government has been heard and heeded."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., an opponent, said the bill would begin "the plucking of...the only agency that we can call a consumer agency in the entire U.S. government."

Members voting "yea" favored the bill limiting FTC powers.

Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "yea."

CONGRESSIONAL VETO — The House adopted, 278 for and 121 against, an amendment permitting congress by concurrent resolution to veto any regulation issued by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) under the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. Such regulations usually concern unsafe pesticides and often are criticized by agribusiness and other sectors of the farming community.

Concurrent resolutions do not require a president's signature to take effect. The amendment was attached to HR 3546, passed and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Calif., a supporter, said that in the EPA "we are dealing with one of the regulatory agencies that epitomizes regulation and bureaucratic interference."

Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., an opponent, said that "precisely what the (amendment) is attempting to do (is) to avoid the presentation provision of the Constitution," which, he said, mandates that any action requiring the concurrence of both houses goes to the president for his possible veto.

Members voting "yea" wanted Congress to be able to cancel certain EPA regulations.

Jones, Rountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Rose did not vote.
GOP BUDGET — By a vote of 187 for and 207 against, the House rejected a Republican motion to cut $7.9 billion out of the 1980 federal budget of $547.6 billion.

The proposal, offered during consideration of a budget resolution (S Con Res 53) later given final approval, would have cut all areas of federal spending except defense and veterans programs.

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, the sponsor, said: "The American people can no longer afford $30 billion budget deficits, 13 per cent inflation, and rising unemployment."

Rep. Robert Giarmo, D-Conn., an opponent, said it was too late in the laborious budget process to propose sweeping cuts. "This great grandstand play of the Republican motion would have the American people think that one can save money by voting for it. Nonsense, nonsense, nonsense."

Members voting "nay" opposed the budget-cut proposal. Fountain, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay." Rose did not vote.

SENATE
WINDFALL EXEMPTION — The Senate voted 53 for and 41 against to exempt most oil pumped by companies involved only in the production aspect of the oil industry from the proposed "windfall" tax on increased oil profits.

The amendment was offered to HR 3919, which was headed for approval and conference with the House. The first 1,000 barrels per day produced by each so-called "independent" would be exempt from the new tax on additional profits resulting from the abolition of price controls.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., sponsor of the amendment, said independent producers need a tax break to finance exploration. "It is not a question of doing anyone a favor," he said.

Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., an opponent, said the amendment would satisfy only "the understandable desire of these active businessmen to increase their already considerable profits."

Senators voting "yea" favored exempting most production by independent producers from the windfall-profits tax.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "nay."

RAILROAD MONEY — By a vote of 54 for and 41 against, the Senate tabled and thus killed an amendment to apply $10 billion of the windfall-profits tax to the revitalization of the nation's passenger and freight railroad systems. The amendment was proposed to the oil taxation bill (HR 3919; see previous vote). The $10 billion was to have come from the $128 billion the windfall profits tax on oil revenues is expected to raise between 1980 and 1990. Already, in an energy-conservation move, the Senate has agreed that up to $15 billion of the tax will go to mass-transit programs.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., a supporter of killing the amendment, said: "It may very well be that the best way to rehabilitate the railroads would be with a loan guarantee program rather than" by earmarking appropriations as proposed in the amendment.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and opponent of tabling, said: "We have developed major air and water thoroughfares. We put men on the moon. We have demonstrated a technical capability that is the envy of the world. But...it is a conservative statement to say that we have got a third-rate rail system."

Senators voting "nay" favored, earmarking part of the windfall-profits tax yield for rail development.

Helms voted "yea." Morgan voted "nay."

New Chairman Of Heart Fund

STAN SAMs

Stanley M. Sams of Greenville has been named fund-raising chairman of the Pitt County Heart Association for 1979-80.

He will have responsibility for the unit's fund-raising program during the next year.

According to Sams, the Pitt County Heart Association would like to emphasize that countywide donations are not simply given to some people far away. This year, he said, support will go to high blood pressure screening programs statewide. Also, financial support will go to a rheumatic fever secondary prevention program that supplies low-cost penicillin to persons whose doctors say they need it to prevent recurrence of this heart-crippling illness.

Sams, an Asheville native and a graduate of East Carolina University and UNC-Chapel Hill School of Law, is an attorney with the firm of Howard, Vincent and Duffus here.

Will Export Polka Music

NAPOLEON, Ohio (AP) — Pretty soon, radio listeners in Europe will hear what their counterparts in northwest Ohio have been listening to — polka music.

Sure, they play lots of polka music in Europe. But these broadcasts will originate at WNDH-FM in Napoleon as part of a "sister-station" exchange aimed at bringing Europeans and Americans closer together.

Dick McBroom, manager of WNDH, said he recently received a telephone call from Guergen Koester of Saarlandischer Rundfunk in Saarbrücken, West Germany. According to McBroom, Koester asked if the Ohio station could record a couple programs of greetings, explaining "a lot of people (in Europe) are angry with America because of the Iranian situation."

"He said he got our number from the American Embassy, but I don't know why they picked us," McBroom said. WNDH is a 3,000-watt station in an area with a "large German ethnic background," McBroom said.

"You don't hear a lot of people speaking German on the street (in Napoleon)," McBroom said, "but there are lots of people who didn't learn English 'till they went to school."

Hogs Living In Her Home

WALHALLA, S.C. (AP) — Mrs. Geneva Riggins says she's just going to wait and see what town officials plan to do about the 38 hogs in her care.

"Whatever they do I'm ready for it," she said, after Mayor Henry Wigington and two town council members tried unsuccessfully to evict the hogs she keeps at her Salem, S.C., home. "I've got a six-ounce (piglet) and an eight-ounce in my family room right now I'm going to raise on the bottle," Mrs. Riggins added.

A complaint by town officials to have the hogs removed from her home in a residential area was dismissed Monday on a technicality by Circuit Judge Sidney Floyd.

Floyd ruled during a pretrial hearing that the town ordinance under which the complaint was brought requires it be filed by either the mayor and the council or the police chief. But Wigington and the two council members brought the action as individuals.

The judge said they lacked status to bring the action and dismissed the complaint without ruling on its merits.

Mrs. Riggins had hired attorney Harold Lowery and said she is ready to fight any renewed legal efforts to remove her hogs.

She said she originally had 18 hogs in the house but the number of swine has swelled to 38.

Wigington said if he were not involved officially, he "might enjoy the matter."

Blood Pressure Tests Saturday

The Pitt County Heart Association will hold a blood pressure screening Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Carolina East Mall.

The Greenville Rescue Squad will also conduct a cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) demonstration at 11 a.m., 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. at the mall.

High blood pressure is a leading cause of disease and death in this country, said county Heart Association President Betty Owens. One in every four adults has some elevation of blood pressure, which can result in stroke, congestive heart failure and kidney failure, she pointed out.

Owens noted that detection is simple and once diagnosed, high blood pressure can be effectively treated.

CRYPTOQUIP 12-5

FMGRULDM GLUM FMUIVLD MC IJV
IGF GRWMW UJVDLRWC

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — VIVID STRAWFLOWERS ADDED FLAVOR TO COLD DECOR.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Rosanne Cash's last name is worth a million bucks in the music field.

She's proud of her name, although she once thought about choosing a new one, and is honored to be Johnny Cash's daughter. But when it comes to her career she'd rather make do without any help from her famous dad.

So, as a young girl, Rosanne set out to prove she was a talented singer and not just another "famous person's kid." "It's a disadvantage being named Cash," she says. "I had no credibility. I hadn't done anything."

She was born of a post office romance that Cash once referred to as a "write-um, fold-um, lick-um, stick-um, letter love." For three years he was separated from her mother, then Vivian Liberto, while Cash was stationed in Europe with the Air Force. When he returned from Europe they married and had Rosanne.

After moving from Memphis at the age of three, Rosanne was raised in Ventura, Calif. by her mother. Her parents divorced when she was 11 but Rosanne maintained a close relationship with her father, and joined him on tour the day after high school graduation.

"The time I spent with my dad was invaluable but I saw that there was no room for me to grow any more in the show so I left for London."

She went to London with the hopes of becoming an actress but when she found that it required lengthy schooling, she accepted a job with her dad's record company and made some appearances to promote country music in the London area.

She returned to Nashville and enrolled at Vanderbilt in drama and creative writing, but moved to Hollywood after a year of self-enforced solitude to study at the prestigious Lee Strasberg acting school.

"I didn't know what I wanted to do," says Rosanne. Before she made up her mind about her studies, a record company heard a demonstration tape she had recorded in Nashville the previous year and produced by a man with whom she had "a school girl crush" — Rodney Crowell. The record company flew her to Munich to cut an album that was never released in the United States.

German album came to the attention of her father's record company, which led to her signing a recording contract. She now has an album out, "Wright Or Wrong," and a husband, Crowell, who is working on his own career and has a hit single with pop singer Bobby Bare called "Don't No Memories Hangin' Round."

"Within three months I got married, got pregnant and my first album. It's not what you'd call perfect timing, guess," she said.

"It was a shock, in fact, had just finished the album and was planning to go on tour. But you can't rock 'n' roll very well around a tummy like this," she says, patting her stomach covered by a tee-shirt with the word "MOM" across the front.

NOTICE TO TELEPHONE CUSTOMERS

We are planning changes that will increase some rates to six countries and introduce a lower international dial rate to ten countries.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company (AT&T) has filed a new schedule of overseas rates with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which accomplishes the introduction of international dialing to 10 additional countries. This brings the total of internationally dialable countries to 74. The scheduled changes include rate decreases for 10 countries and selective rate increases to 6 of those countries for calls billed on the United States mainland to bring the overseas rate structure more closely into line with the domestic structure. In addition, it will now be possible to dial Aruba, which already has rates at the International Dial rate level. These changes are scheduled to become effective on February 17, 1980.

Collect Calls

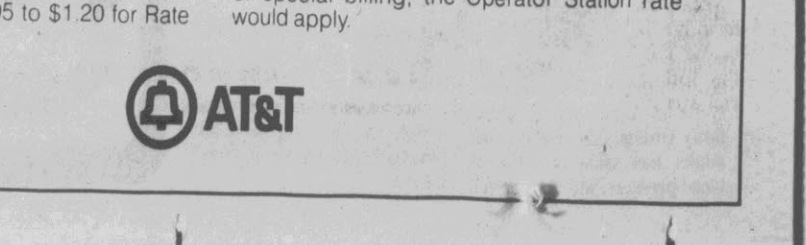

Operator Station collect calls to the French Antilles and Guyana will be eliminated. Person collect calls will continue. These changes are in conformity with the prevailing overseas practice. All collect calls to Bolivia will be eliminated, because Bolivia has suspended collect calls to the United States.

International Dial rate

With the introduction of International Dial rates on February 17, 1980, customers can save approximately 10 to 44 percent as compared to the current lowest three-minute day call. The following table compares the lowest existing rates and the new International Dial rates.

	Operator Station		International Dial
	Initial Period	Additional Minute	Initial Period	Additional Minute
American Samoa	$8.00	$2.35	$6.00	$2.00
Bolivia	8.00	2.35	6.75	2.25
French Antilles
Rate Zone 1	5.00	1.50	3.60	1.20
Rate Zone 2	6.00	1.80	4.35	1.45
Rate Zone 3	8.00	2.35	5.85	1.95
Guyana
Rate Zone 1	6.00	1.80	5.40	1.80
Rate Zone 2	8.00	2.35	6.75	2.25
Liberia	9.00	2.60	6.75	2.25
New Caledonia	9.00	2.60	7.35	2.45
Panama
Rate Zone 1	4.80	1.40	3.00	1.00
Rate Zone 2	5.40	1.55	3.75	1.25
Rate Zone 3	6.00	1.75	4.50	1.50
Romania	9.00	2.60	6.75	2.25
Person
Indonesia	12.00	3.40	7.35	2.45
Paraguay	12.00	3.40	6.75	2.25

It is important to note that customers calling from areas not presently equipped for International Dial will benefit from the lower dial rates even though the call would have to be completed by the operator. However, if the customer requests special operator assistance or special billing, the Operator Station rate would apply.

Food Gifts Are A Popular Item

CHICAGO (AP) — According to a survey conducted by a Chicago business research organization, some 55 percent of the companies polled will be presenting holiday gifts to employees, customers, prospects and others this year, but food gifts to employees have edged out cash.

More than 200 administrative managers responding to the Dartnell Institute of Business Research Target Survey in the United States and Canada report their firms will be distributing more food items such as fruit baskets, cheese, hams and turkeys.

Mexican-American Lawyer Is Pushed By His Ego

By BRUCE NICHOLS
HOUSTON (UPI) — U.S. Attorney Tony Canales pointed a piece of sandwich at his office wall and identified the brown-tint photograph of a fierce-eyed Mexican aristocrat with an arrogant chin.

"Jose Garcia Garcia," Canales chewed proudly. "My grandfather. He raised me."

"What did he give me? He was very proud of the fact that he could stand tall with anybody. He would say to me, 'You're just as smart as those (other boys) coming down the street.'"

"He gave me the theory that I had a responsibility, that all of us in our family had a responsibility, to see that our folk weren't going to be oppressed."

One result of papa's teaching: Canales tends to think he's better than most people — "my ego gets into it" — and, especially since he became a lawyer, he has set about proving it.

At age 35, it is arguable that he has done it. He wonders aloud. "I think I peaked too early."

When the hometown banks and big companies in Corpus Christi declined to hire the St. Mary's Law School honor graduate, he set about making a reputation and fortune defending the poor and the criminal against the establishment.

"I've done everything," Canales said. "I've sued all the railroads, all the insurance companies. I've represented murderers, rapists, thieves, public corruption defendants. I represented some pretty big crooks."

His zealous defense of a drug defendant at one point earned him a federal court contempt citation and an 18-month jail sentence, which was overturned on appeal.

"The judge wanted to find out how much my clients paid me, who were my clients, and I said it was (protected under the law by) attorney-client privilege," Canales said.

"We reversed him on appeal, but all that gives a bad impression. The headlines were 'Canales in Jail in Drug Investigation.' You're subject to rumors. 'How much did that lawyer know and did he know before?'"

"You get a combination fellow (like Canales) who does a lot of criminal work, is active in politics, then you get the philosophy, 'Well, if he represents all those dirty women, these whores, he must be sleeping with them.'"

None of which was true, Canales said, and when political ally Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, recommended him to be the first Mexican-American chief prosecutor for south Texas, the official inquiry into his past cleared him.

The Bentsen connection to some degree reflected Canales' political realism. Bentsen's father was a sort of "patron," a wealthy, aggressive white landowner and businessman in the predominantly Mexican Rio Grande Valley.

"What his father did in 1940, '30s or '20s, putting a land empire together in south Texas, and banking, that's what he did. What Lloyd Bentsen has done as senator is something different ... I can't argue with his appointments."

Canales asked for the U.S. attorney's job because "it was a time when everybody in the Carter campaign was asking for something" and President Carter appointed him in mid-1977.

The bad-boy defense lawyer — who took a "substantial" pay cut to $47,500, put his wife to work teaching and for the first time bought his annual Cadillac on the time-payment plan — brought his distaste for oppression to his new job.

"I always felt I'm gonna try and change something," he said.

He zealously prosecuted police civil rights violations (the most notable case involving a Mexican-American beaten and drowned in Buffalo Bayou), oil broker ripoffs and city hall corruption.

"I don't picture myself as Mr. Wonderful. It's basic fairness, justice. It isn't fair for them oil resellers not to invest a penny in a well and then go out and make millions of dollars (illegally)."

"It isn't fair for poor people to suffer at the hands of police."

And who's gonna do something about it? Who else around here has got the power to do something about it? I'm the guy. I got to take the bull by the horns.

"It upsets me to know that politicians in this state, in this city, accept money from people they (as city officials) do business with. It shocks my conscience."

Canales has stirred hostility. The controversy and his personal sense of propriety, Canales said, has limited his Houston life outside the office to wife Yolanda, three children, his house, his yard and an occasional sporting event — where he sits in the cheap seats.

"I have not a single friend in Houston," Canales said. "I have absolutely no social life ... nothing to do with the legal community in Houston. They've been nice to me. They've invited me places. I just don't think it's right."

He has kept his roots in Corpus Christi, where he grew up on the wrong side of the tracks, not poor (his mother and five of her siblings, products of the ambition of Jose Garcia Garcia, are physicians) but minority-minded.

"We go home about once a month," Canales said. "I've got friends there, friends I've had since I was yay high. They're not friends because I'm U.S. attorney. They're friends because I'm me."

"One guy's a laborer. One owns a shop. One is a legislator. We barbecue. We talk about the ranch (Canales' spread in Duval County). They'll go hunting on my place. We'll go hunting somewhere else. We talk politics a lot."

Canales has had about enough of being a federal prosecutor. He has not chosen a date or filed a written notice of resignation, but he plans to give up the job and return to Corpus Christi — and more defense lawyering — next year.

"I'm not a professional bureaucrat," he said. "I never planned to be up here forever. Just one term and that's it."

Some Death Row Inmates Await Drug Injections

By RON JENKINS
Associated Press Writer
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — At the Oklahoma State Penitentiary in McAlester, some inmates refer to it sardonically as "the ultimate high."

Actually, medical experts say, a prisoner will feel no sensation, other than a little drowsiness, when he is put to death by lethal drug injection — the country's newest form of capital punishment.

Eighty-two murderers, rapists and kidnapers have died in the penitentiary's electric chair since 1915. One man was hanged.

In contrast to electrocution, death by injection will be almost instantaneous. The convict will simply fall asleep.

The law prescribes that death will occur through a continuous intravenous injection of "an ultrashort-acting barbiturate in combination with a chemical paralytic agent."

The official cause of death will be coronary arrest.

Oklahoma and Texas enacted death-by-drug legislation in 1977. Similar laws have been passed since in Idaho and New Mexico and are being considered in several other states.

In the last 30 months, juries in Oklahoma have decreed that 27 persons should die through drug injection; 125 persons face that fate in Texas, along with one each in Idaho and New Mexico.

Among those lodged in Death

Row at McAlester is Roger Dale Stafford, convicted of killing six Oklahoma City steakhouse employees in a meat locker during a robbery attempt in 1978. Stafford also is charged in the murder of three members of a Texas family near Purcell, Okla.

The first drug-injection execution is probably years away because of expected legal appeals.

In Oklahoma, the scene at the prison called "Big Mac" will be strikingly different from executions of the past.

Instead of a "last-mile" walk from Death Row through the basement to the electric chair — over which still hangs a metal sign saying, "Crime Does Not Pay," fashioned in the prison license tag factory — the condemned prisoner will be taken to the third floor of the administration building. About 30 people will witness the execution.

The doomed convict will be carried to the third floor strapped to a stretcher, his head propped up so witnesses, including six journalists and five persons chosen by the prisoner, can watch him throughout the procedure.

The executioner will be one of three volunteer medical technicians, dressed in white rather than in black hoods. None will be identified.

They will stand silently behind a partition, through which a tube will be passed and connected to the condemned man's arm or leg. All three will inject dark fluid into the tube. None will know which of them is injecting the lethal substance.

"Sort of a firing squad approach," Corrections Department spokeswoman Nancy Nunnally said of the use of anonymous technicians.

The procedure will contrast with previous incidents when Oklahoma executioners were well known, especially Rich Owens, who built Big Mac's electric chair in 1915 and pulled the fatal switch 65 times.

Owens received a $100 bonus for each electrocution, except when more than one was scheduled in a day. Then the bonus dropped to $50.

Ms. Nunnally says she doubted the medical technicians, all corrections personnel, will be paid for their role in the execution.

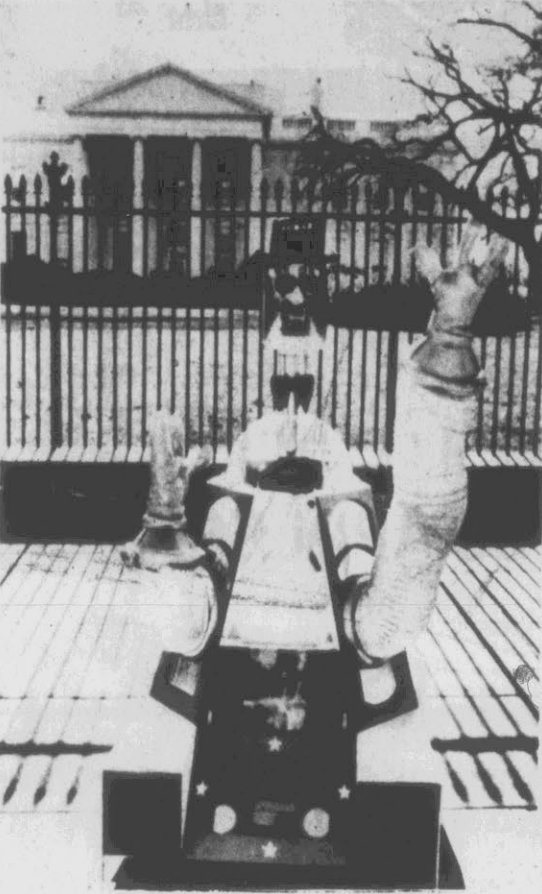

In 1936, at the convict's request, Owens hanged Arthur Gooch, the first kidnapper condemned under the Lindbergh law. The last Oklahoma execution was on Aug. 10, 1966, when James French was electrocuted for strangling a cellmate.

The Oklahoma law was written and co-sponsored by Democratic Rep. Bill Wiseman, who said he wanted to remove some of the theatrical aspects surrounding the electric chair.

But when asked whether passage of the drug injection law had caused the virtual avalanche of death penalty verdicts since, Wiseman said, "That kind of haunts me."

Popular belief is that juries have been less reluctant to go along with drug executions because they perceive them to be more humane than electrocutions or "barbecues" as they were commonly called by prisoners and guards at Big Mac.

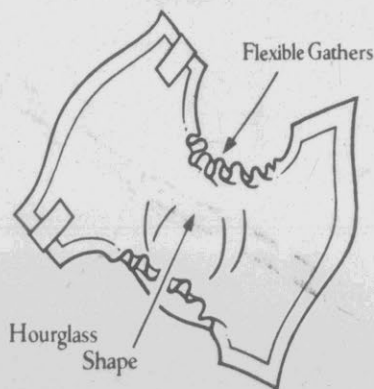

HE'S NUTS ... AND BOLTS — FUBAR, the Futuristic Uranium Bio Atomic Robot, makes a campaign appearance in front of the White House after announcing that he is a candidate for president on the T.G.I.F. (Thank Godness It's FUBAR) ticket. When not on the campaign trail, FUBAR, who resides in Beverly, New Jersey, entertains groups willing to pay him $600 a day. (AP Laserphoto)

Cleopatra Had Imitations

NEW YORK (UPI) — Some of Queen Cleopatra's dazzling jewels probably were imitations, according to some jewelry experts.

The artisans of Alexandria in ancient Egypt were skillful workers in glass gems and their craft was carried over and further developed in the days of the first two centuries of the Roman empire, according to researchers at Trifari jewels.

Adoptees In Search Of Information

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Adoptive children obsessed with the search for their birth parents are looking for information, not revenge.
That's the conclusion of David Peters, director of professional services for Christian Family Services in St. Louis. Peters' interviews with adopted children and adoptive couples have convinced him information surrounding adoptions must be made more accessible, both to children and the mothers who gave up their babies.
Peters says a major obstacle to changing the law is the myth about what the adoptive children really have in mind.
"The prevailing myth is that adoptees are trying to 'get back' at their birth parents in some way, or that they just pop up on the doorstep one day and say, 'Here I am,'" Peters said in an interview. "Usually it doesn't happen that way at all."
"The people we've talked to have done it very carefully, calling their parents beforehand, asking whether they had given up a baby for adoption on such-and-such a date, then saying that they are those children."
After contact is made and identity is confirmed, Peters said, a reunion is almost always arranged. But the meeting normally does not begin a close-knit relationship.
"In most cases they don't want a lasting relationship," he said. "They may just want to see what the parent looks like, who they are."
Peters interviewed 57 adopted children and 18 adoptive couples in his study. Their answers changed his own attitude.
"Before I started this, I was against opening the records. Now I've done an almost 180-degree turn and am for it."
He suggested two ways adoptees and their birth parents could be brought together if both sides are willing. A list of children and mothers searching for each other could be centralized on a computer, with an agency helping reunite those whose information matches.
A better way, Peters said, would be a commission that adopted children could contact upon reaching the age of 21 to find information about their heredity. A child's mother could be notified of the child's interest, and the reunion could be arranged if the mother were willing.
Peters said information about heredity — including a child's nationality, the physical characteristics of the child's birth parents, medical information and any special talents that might be inherited — are routinely given to adoptive parents by many agencies now.
He said women of child-bearing age want such information before deciding whether to have children. And people in general need what he called a "sense of attachment, a sense of where you came from."
Current laws sealing adoption records usually are ineffective, he added.
"People talk of protecting the birth parents and the adoptive parents, but many members of those groups are now saying they don't want that protection. One study revealed that 85 percent of birth parents actually want their children to come back and find them some day."
"The law doesn't work. Adoptees who really want to find their birth parents can do it, if they have enough money or enough power. These people become obsessed with their search, spending large amounts of time and money. There's a lot of buying off going on out there."
Peters added that adoptive parents should not feel threatened if an adopted child begins such a search.
"The more information an adoptee gets as he grows up about his birth parents, the less likely he is to search. It's not a question of a child being dissatisfied with his adoptive parents."
"Children who have found their birth parents almost always say they cannot think of them as real parents. Their adoptive parents are their real parents — they just want a relationship with their birth parents on other grounds."

Nevada's Sagebrush Rebellion

By RUSSELL NIELSEN
RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Twenty years ago, John Sargus came to Nevada from New York City. In New York, he said, a person was "just another number."
"When I drove into Nevada... there was nothing but sagebrush flats between high barren mountains under a clear blue sky," he said.
"I felt free. There was a feeling you were your own man."

That was 20 years ago. Now, the mantle of federal laws is spreading over the vast open spaces.
Kennecott Copper Corp. shut down its huge mine and smelter blaming federal air quality regulations as a major reason. Federal atomic testing grounds and Navy gunnery ranges make much of the state off limits. The controversial MX missile will take away even more land.
One federal law in particular has spawned the "Sagebrush Rebellion," an attempt by Nevadans to win back local control of their land.

The 1979 Nevada Legislature passed a law that attempts to take control of 48 million acres of federal land within the state. More than 87 percent of the land in Nevada is managed by the federal government.

Other western states are virtually in the same position. Ranchers, miners, and outdoorsmen must comply with changing federal regulations in order to use that land. Two of those ranchers authored the bill that became known as the "Sagebrush Rebellion."

The main bone of contention is the 1976 federal "Organic Act." It says the public land, rather than be disposed of, must be kept in perpetual trust for the people under supervision of the federal government. It requires the land be inventoried for possible wilderness use, which would bar access to miners, ranchers and off-road vehicles.

The new Nevada legislation, which has provided a war chest of $250,000 for a court test, contends the land could be managed more productively by the state. It says western states did not get an equal footing with the original states on land allocation from the federal government.

Attorney General Richard Bryan said the early states obtained land through means that were denied to the territories that later joined the Union. He argues the land eventually was intended to be disposed of to the states, but the 1976 Organic Act changed the rules by declaring the land should be held forever under federal trust.

Frank Gregg, director of the Interior Department's Bureau of Land Management, recently told representatives of western states that federal attorneys believe Bryan's case is without merit. Bryan himself says it may have problems, but cites recent court decisions that tend to support it.

Honor Society Initiates 57

ECU News Bureau
Fifty-seven East Carolina University students were initiated into the Eta Chi chapter of Kappa Delta Pi honor society in education in a recent campus ceremony.

Featured speaker at the event was Dr. Robert Maier, ECU's Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs.

Henry Peel of Williamston, a graduate assistant in the ECU Department of Elementary Education, was installed as president for the 1979-80 academic year.

Elizabeth Avery of Greenville, a teacher in ECU's Remedial Education Activity Program, was installed as vice president.

Dee Jackson-Taylor of Stokes, a teacher of autistic children at Lewis Elementary School in Kinston, was installed as secretary.

Purpose of Kappa Delta Pi is to promote the education profession and to reward excellence among educators. Its membership includes students, faculty and practicing teachers.

Names of new members in the ECU Kappa Delta Pi chapter include:

Martin County — Williamston — Wendy Cox Woolard, Route 2, Pitt County — Ayden — Annette Smith Huffman;

Greenville — Elaine Crumpler Cannon, 110 N. Warren St.; Sandra Corbett, 819 Tyler; Nelda Anderson Highsmith, 313 Kirkland Drive; Melanie Hite, 1720 Circle Drive; Alyn Leary, 107 Raleigh Ave.; June Elaine Lord, 2202 Charles St.; Laura Loraine Minges, 2000 Pinecrest Drive; Mary Ruth Spagnolo, 1113 Evans St.; Kathy Sprau, Courtney Square Apartments; Robert John Willie, 311 Circle Drive; and Henrietta Wooten, 2509 East Fifth St.;

Grifton — Marjorie Harris, 314 Charles St.

New Periodical Is Established

ECU News Bureau
A new periodical, the "Carolina Journal of Educational Research", has been established by the ECU School of Education and the ECU chapters of Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi honor societies.

The journal, scheduled for publication three times a year, will begin with its first issue next spring. Included in the journal will be reports of research in various aspects of education, written in the format recommended by the American Psychological Association.

Editor of the journal is Dr. Robert M. Brown, professor of secondary education at ECU. Senior editorial consultant is Dr. James W. Batten, and associate editor is Dr. Vincent Mikkelsen.

The "Journal" will join several other state, national and international professional publications now headquartered at ECU.

Roller Skating Injuries Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's roller-skating fad is causing an increase in injuries related to the sport, according to the Insurance Information Institute, which says hospital emergency rooms report roller skaters are being admitted for treatment "at an alarming rate."

An estimated 74,000 roller skaters were treated during the first seven months of 1979, compared with 93,000 persons treated in all of 1978.

"At any rate, it certainly is a question that should be resolved finally in the courts," he said.

Nevada, under state lands commissioner Jac Shaw, has drawn up a set of land use regulations designed to replace federal land regulations in the state.

"They are designed for multiple use, to get the most out of lands that can be used for agriculture, mining and recreation," he said.

He denies charges that state control would amount to a ripoff, with wholesale disposal of present public lands to private interests. "The land would be used for its best use," he said.

The state now collects millions of dollars in federal funds as reimbursement for taxes that would be collected if it were private land. But Shaw and other Nevada officials believe disposal of land suitable for private development would yield much more.

As an example, they point to the relatively small acreage near the famed Las Vegas Strip that was sold for $28 million.

"There is no good reason the land should be locked up if there is good reason to sell it," he said. "We would manage it better, leaving appropriate areas for off-roads, sportsmen, miners, etc. The best management is that which is closest to the people."

Gregg said the Bureau of Land Management wants to do what is best, but must abide by orders from a Congress that is dominated by easterners. "We must develop a management policy that recognizes the interests of all regions, all people, and all usage demands," he said.

Just when the court confrontation between Nevada and the federal government will occur is uncertain. Bryan says the feds won't make the first move. "It will be up to us. We won't be in a hurry. We'll pick our moment," he said.

Claims Super Tractor Does More, Less Fuel

By A.F. IWEN
HELENA, Mont. (UPI) — Farming is big business nowadays. The "Big Bud" tractor is proof of that.

The Big Bud, manufactured in Havre, a town of 15,000 not far from the Canadian border, is reputed to be the largest tractor in the world.

With eight tires that are each 8 feet high, the Big Bud lives up to its name. It's 17 feet high, 22 feet wide, 28 feet long. Depending on the model, the tractor weighs 45,000 to 60,000 pounds. It carries 550 gallons of diesel fuel.

The success story of the Big Bud, it could be said, is based on the principle that bigger is better.

"Fuel is a major thing we talk about now because you're much more efficient with a big unit (tractor) than you are with several smaller units," says Ron Harmon, 32, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Big Bud Tractors Inc.

Harmon says the result is less fuel consumption per acre. And "you got one driver, you got one engine to worry about" in the field, instead of several drivers and engines that would be necessary when using the smaller tractors to cover roughly the same acreage, Harmon adds.

"We have found them (farmers) wanting to go to a bigger unit to do their land quicker."

Harmon's company plans to manufacture 175 tractors in 1980. That compares to 135 units this year and only 15 per year when Harmon took over the company in 1974.

Production at Big Bud doubled every year thereafter, although it leveled off, expected, in 1979.

About 500 of the giant tractors are scattered around the world. Markets for the Big Bud include Australia, the Middle East, Canada and Mexico.

More Big Bud machines are sold in Hawaii than any other tractor model, Harmon says.

Harmon figures that Big Bud has found a "niche of our own," one that the major tractor manufacturers cannot match because it is costly and takes five to eight years for the majors to "tool up" for model changes.

"We can change much quicker than anyone else, to meet the demand in the field, plus we can afford to build a lot fewer units per model and fill a market for the entrepreneur in farming," says Harmon. "The major manufacturer just can't."

Believing the market for giant farm equipment will continue to grow, Big Bud is selling 760-horsepower models, and a 980-horsepower prototype has been built.

The largest Big Bud five years ago was a 360-horsepower model, which today is still larger than most tractors sold by the major manufacturers.

Corporate farming in recent years, says Harmon, has meant "a lot of new land," and "big equipment fits that bill."

The big tractor from Big Bud goes for a big price: $125,000 and $160,000 for the 400-horsepower and 525-horsepower models; the 760-horsepower model, $350,000.

AIRLINE EARNINGS
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Airline industry earnings in the first nine months of 1979 were down $580 million from the same period last year, despite a 13.5 percent gain in traffic, an Air Transport Association official says.

Dr. George W. James, senior vice president for economics and finance of the ATA, told a forum held here recently that the 50 percent drop in earnings from the $1.15 billion level for the first nine months of 1978 was attributed primarily to the rising costs of jet fuel.

Frank Gregg, director of the Interior Department's Bureau

New President Of Heart Ass'n.

Mrs. Betty Owens of Greenville has been named president of the Pitt County Heart Association, it was announced by Robert E. Thurber, Ph.D., of East Carolina University, president of the N.C. Heart Association.

Mrs. Owens will be the official spokesman for the Pitt County Heart Association and will offer leadership to the group's board of directors, chairmen and volunteer workers.

Mrs. Nancy Warren is treasurer; Miss Leigh Davis is secretary; and Dr. John Yeager is public information chairman.

The goals of the Heart Association this year, according to Mrs. Owens, are to reduce the number of persons in the county with high blood pressure who are not under treatment, to inform the public about the signals of heart attack and stroke, and to encourage people to know how to react in a cardiac emergency.

The run-of-the-mill player should develop a sense of comfort from the performance of experts in tournament bridge. Under the stress of competition, even the best players will often miss a relatively simple line of play. Here is a typical case.

Seven spades was a popular contract, although at some tables North-South were content to play in a small slam. However, the grand slam was made at only one table! There, the bidding proceeded naturally as shown. When North could jump to six spades, South bid the grand slam with complete confidence.

At most tables, declarer won the opening heart lead and drew trumps in two rounds, ending in dummy. So delighted were they with the even trump split that they hurried to set up diamonds by cashing the ace-king. The 5-1 diamond split meant that declarer needed three trumps to set up the suit, but there were only two in dummy.

The successful declarer improved his chances considerably by a very simple tactic. After ending in dummy with the second trump, he ruffed a club in his hand before cashing the high diamonds. Now, when East failed to follow to the second diamond, declarer could fall back on an alternate line—establishing dummy's fifth club.

He crossed to dummy with a diamond ruff, cashed the ace and king of clubs, discarding a card from each red suit in his hand, and then ruffed a club. When that suit divided evenly, the slam was home. Declarer ruffed a diamond in dummy, then discarded his last diamond on the established club.

Isn't it amazing how many capable declarers could have a blind spot in such a relatively straightforward contract?

'Lillies Of The Field' Sequel Readied

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Lillies of the Field," a landmark film of the 1960s, has inspired a sequel in "Christmas Lillies of the Field," an NBC-TV movie directed by Ralph Nelson, the same filmmaker who produced the original.

The 1963 film became a classic of a sort, winning five Academy Award nominations — best picture, best actor, best supporting actress, best screenplay, best cinematography.

Sidney Poitier won the Oscar for his performance as Homer Smith, an itinerant carpenter who builds a church for five immigrant German nuns in the middle of an Arizona desert.

Lilla Skala, who played Mother Maria, was the nominee for best supporting actress.

Incredibly, Nelson failed to be nominated for best director.

Nelson ranks among the best, least heralded of movie-TV directors. He directed the movie and TV versions of "Requiem for a Heavyweight" and such standout films as

"Fate is the Hunter," "Soldier in the Rain" and "Flight of the Doves."

A veteran of 1,000 TV shows, Nelson invests his work with deft, humanitarian touches. He inspires his actors, pushing them to the limits of their talents. Cliff Robertson won the Oscar for best actor in "Charly" under Nelson's direction.

Nelson could win a couple of Emmys for his actors in the TV sequel to "Lillies of the Field" with Billy Dee Williams in the role of Homer and Maria Schell as the mother superior.

According to Nelson, Miss Skala is a devout Christian Scientist reader and could not find the time to do the sequel.

Poitier was not about to repeat his performance as Homer.

"The sequel may be 17 years late in the making," Nelson said the other day, "but on the screen only a month or so will have elapsed. We open with Homer once again inscribing

Nelson produced and directed the movie of "Lillies of the Field" in 14 days for $250,000. The two-hour TV version cost $1.6 million and required 20 days of production.

The director was so dedicated to the original black-and-white film that he accepted responsibility for the completion bond, promising to pay United Artists for any overages out of his own pocket.

Happily he brought it in on time and budget. To date it has earned $8 million. Nelson had a healthy percentage of the profits which helped put his children through college.

Over the years Nelson was asked many times to direct a sequel to "Lillies." He avoided the project until he was able to convince himself he could do as good a job as he did with the original.

William Barrett, author of the original novella, wrote a sequel titled "The Amen Man" in which Homer becomes an evangelist. The nuns were dropped. It did not succeed.

NBC took a three-year option on Nelson's sequel rights and exercised its option on the final day. Nelson, semi-retired for the past two years due to his wife's illness, agreed to give it a whirl.

"At first they wanted a script involving the same characters in a Christmas story," Nelson said. "So writer John McGreevey and I turned out a Christmas script. NBC switched to an Easter theme and then back again to Christmas."

In the sequel Homer and Maria get involved with nine orphans and Homer is stuck with building a kindergarten for them.

"I would like to have filmed the sequel at our original locations. But the church site outside Tucson, Arizona, is now a shopping center. We built a copy of it and a replica of the abandoned farm house near Orem, Utah."

"Both sets were left standing in the event the network decides to make a series out of Homer and the nuns. I hope it doesn't become a series. I've seen some of the projected story lines and they are pure formula stuff."

"If they do go ahead with a series, I'm committed to be executive producer and to direct three episodes a year. Billy Dee and Maria would star in the series, and in honesty I must say their performances certainly measure up to the original cast's."

"An interesting note is that we've reprised the song 'Amen' in the sequel. The scene in which Homer teaches the nuns to sing the simple spiritual was one of the most memorable in the movie.

"Before beginning production on 'Lillies' I talked to Jester Hairston, an authority on Afro-American music. I gave him a copy of the book and asked him to find a simple spiritual that could be learned on screen in a few minutes."

"A week later he brought me a tape of 'Amen' that was absolutely what we needed. The song has since become one of the most popular spirituals around."

"I enjoyed a little deja vu while making the sequel. I hope I'm not being over-enthusiastic when I say this picture does justice to the original."

ABC Again Up
In The Nielsens

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, winner twice in a row in the networks' prime-time ratings competition, listed seven of the 10 most-watched shows in the week ending Dec. 2, but still lost the race.

ABC, scoring with the week's No. 1 show, "Three's Company," as well as the welterweight boxing championship broadcast Friday evening, No. 12 in the ratings, jumped from third place to first and maintained its slim margin over CBS for the season to date.

ABC, in addition, avoided heavy representation at the bottom of the week's program ratings from the A.C. Nielsen Co.

ABC's rating for the week was 21.1, to 20.2 for CBS and 16.9 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 21.1 percent of the homes in the country with television were watching ABC.

"Three's Company" had a rating of 31.4. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, that percentage saw at least part of the show.

The Top 10 was composed entirely of continuing series, an unusual configuration. The highest-rated special was the welterweight championship fight between Sugar Ray Leonard and Wilfredo Benitez.

CBS' top show for the week was "60 Minutes," in second place, followed by "M-A-S-H," also on CBS, and "Taxi" from ABC. NBC listed only "Little House on the Prairie" in the Top 10 — No. 10.

"Prime Time Sunday," the NBC newsmagazine which has struggled since the season began to emerge from the bottom of the ratings list, advanced a bit to 52nd place among the 62 shows ranked.

NBC did, however, have three of the week's five lowest-rated programs, "Shirley" in 58th place, the conclusion of the "Beggarmen, Thief" two-part movie in 61st and "Eisheid" in 62nd. Two ABC shows, "Marie" and "The Ropers," finished 59-60.

The week's 10 highest-rated shows:

"Three's Company," with a rating of 31.4 representing 24 million homes, ABC; "60 Minutes," 30.6 or 23.3 million, and "M-A-S-H," 28.8 or 22 million, both CBS; "Taxi," 27.5 or 21 million, ABC; "One Day at a Time," 27.3 or 20.8 million, CBS; "WKRP in Cincinnati" and "Alice," both 27 or 20.6 million, both CBS; "Archie Bunker's Place," 26.4 or 20.1 million, and "The Jeffersons," 26.2 or 20 million, both CBS, and "Little House on the Prairie," 26 or 19.8 million, NBC.

Liza Minelli
Honeymooning

NEW YORK (AP) — Entertainer Liza Minnelli and her theatrical manager Mark Ger are off on their honeymoon following a brief ceremony at St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church in Manhattan.

They were married Tuesday in a private ceremony attended by a small group of friends that included the actress-singer's father, film director Vincente Minnelli and Elizabeth Taylor.

$10 Million Suit
By Paul Lynde

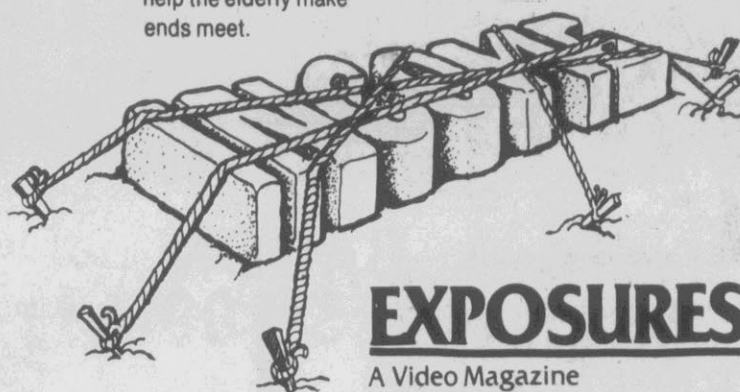

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Paul Lynde, contending he had not been forced off the "The Hollywood Squares" television show, has filed a $10 million lawsuit against The National Enquirer.

Rebutting statements published in a National Enquirer article last month, Lynde said in the suit filed Monday in Superior Court that he left the television show after 12 years because he felt it was time to move on.

Lynde also said the article had falsely claimed that other stars on "The Hollywood Squares" had objected to his alleged "drinking and other nastiness."

Head-Count Old Story In N. Carolina

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Next year the federal government will conduct a census designed to count and categorize every citizen of the country.

It is not a new exercise. In fact, 1980 will mark the 20th decennial census. But in North Carolina, head-counting dates back even farther than the first federal census in 1790.

Throughout the colonial period the royal governors sought to estimate the number of residents of North Carolina, but every attempt to obtain an accurate roll was thwarted by popular resistance.

Even an effort of the Provincial Congress to obtain figures on the eve of the Revolution appears to have failed. County tax lists generally provided the nearest thing to a census of householders.

The apportionment of the Revolutionary War debt among the sttes made more urgent a census, and finally during the period 1784-1787, a state census was conducted.

Only the names of the head of each household were given, and other persons were simply enumerated in separate columns for white males under 16 and those over that age, white females of all ages, and black slaves aged from 12 to 50 and those under 12 and over 50.

The reason for the age breakdowns: free males over 16 and slaves aged 12 to 50 were taxable.

The literacy of some census-takers was questionable. for instance, in Surry County, enumerator Robert Walker listed misspellings such as Ahogay Alifer, Adoniga Harbourt, Ezaghazh Gaymount, Emick Stoun, Houli Hartiga, Basell Riddel and Peter Simiaers.

In nearby Wilkes County, Thomas Owen had the distinction of being the only man in a house with 10 women. The only other man in the state with similar luck was Thomas Williams of Montgomery County.

An accurate census roll became essential when North Carolina ratified the federal constitution, which provided that direct taxes and representation be based upon "federal population" — that is, all white persons plus three-fifths of the slave population.

In 1790, the population of the 13 United States was just under four million. North Carolina's 393,000 persons placed the state ahead of New York and behind only Virginia, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

The largest city in the country that year was Philadelphia, with 42,000 — about the size of Kannapolis today. About 95 percent of all Americans lived in the country. Life expectancy at birth was 35 years for men and 37 years for women.

Based upon nomenclature, a study of the American Historical Association estimated the following percentages of national stocks among North Carolina whites in 1790: English 66, Scotch 14.8, Ulster 5.7, Irish 5.4, German 4.7, French 1.7 and other, 1.7. Blacks numbered 100,000, or nearly 25 percent of the state's population.

Sixty years passed before North Carolina's population doubled, and by the time of the Civil War the population was approaching a million. The two million figure was reached about 1905, four million before 1950 and the state's population at the last census in 1970 was 5,062,059.

The 1980 census will be the first in which the urban population will exceed that of rural areas in the state.

The census, of course, does much more than count heads. It also collects a dizzying array of information ranging from standards of living to social customs. The data will be fed into computers to tell Americans more about themselves than they've ever known before.

It will provide, in a way, a snapshot of Americans in 1980.

Gospel Choir In Sunday Concert

The A and T State University Gospel Choir will be presented in concert Sunday, Dec. 16, at 4 p.m. in the sanctuary of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

The concert is being sponsored by the Pitt County Chapter of the A and T State University Alumni Association.

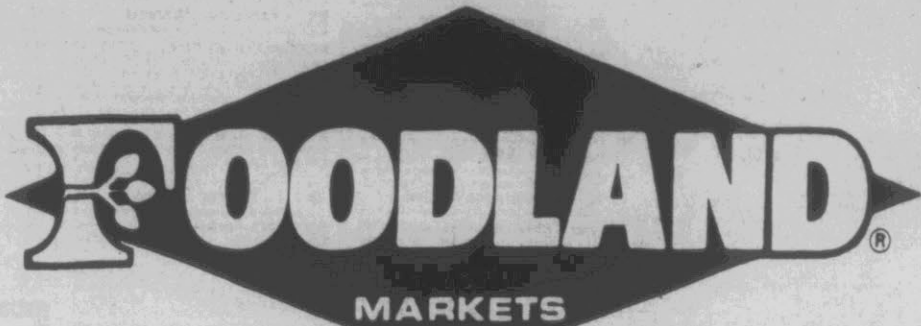

No admission will be charged and the public is invited to attend.

Book By Vince Luciani Lists Contest Oddities

By PETER MATTIAE
Associated Press Writer
GERMANIA, N.J. (AP) — Vince Luciani is a soft-spoken man, a 52-year-old father of three, and a serious engineer involved in developing sophisticated aviation electronic systems at a federal test base near Atlantic City.

But at night, Luciani becomes Contest Man, bent on culling newspapers and travel brochures for the oddest, most interesting and just plain craziest competitions he can find.

"They're something unusual; they're not everyday," Luciani says. "And then it's all Americana."

Luciani's interest lies in such diversions as the annual Chicken Flying Contest in Ohio, the National Hollerin' Contest in North Carolina, the Cow Chip Throwing Contest in Oklahoma and the one-time Bridge Blow-up Contest in West Virginia.

Luciani is so thrilled about the thrill of unusual victory that he has published his own 96-page book, "Guide to Unusual Contests in America," listing 170 such oddities throughout the country.

"I have two favorite contests," Luciani confides. "The Cow Chip Tossing Contest in Beaver, Okla., is the one that turned me on to this whole thing. They even have a division for professional politicians.

"The other one I like is the one bridge-blowing contest in Charleston, W.Va., in which the Charleston Daily Mail had a contest to see who would push the button to blow up the Kanawha City Bridge in 1975," Luciani said.

"Of course, they don't have that every year," he added sadly.

His book also lists such competitions as the Beer Belly Contest in Chicago, the Varmint Calling Contest in Arizona and the Earthworm Cooking Contest in California.

Luciani, now a student of such matters, says unusual contests always celebrate local folklore or a local industry.

He says the oldest contest appears to be the Jumping Frog Jubilee in Calaveras County, Calif., made famous by Mark Twain's short story. Each May, frog jockeys come to the county fair to kick, stomp and yell to make their amphibians jump for the 1966 record of more than 19 feet.

"As a contest, it's nothing extraordinary," Luciani says. "It's more of a tribute to Mark Twain."

When it comes to whacked-out contests, Luciani says California, Louisiana, Texas and Florida take the prizes.

"They have more of them and they are more original, and they have more regular contests, too," Luciani says. "They seem to have an enthusiasm in everything they do."

Like many of the contests he's listed, Luciani's book is strictly home-grown and small-time. He had 1,000 copies printed locally and his friends and family helped put the pages in order.

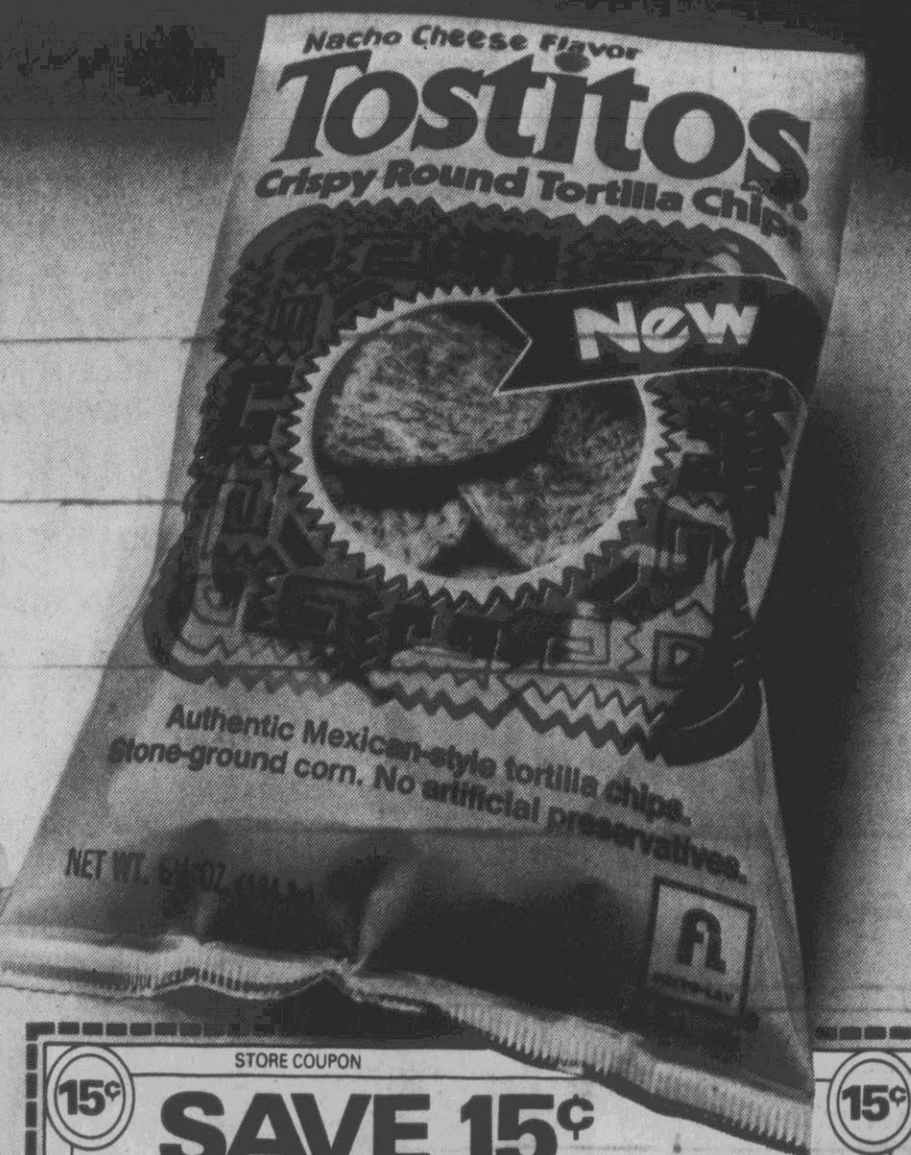

His goal is to put out a second edition next year with more detail, better photographs and twice as many contests. Another goal is to start visiting the contests he has written about.

"I went down to the National Hollerin' Contest last year in Spivey's Corner, N.C.," he said. "People were out there in the pouring rain and just hollerin' like crazy. There's a basic enthusiasm there. It was really something."

Suspects Church Ban Overcome

WASHINGTON (AP) — With most U.S. Roman Catholics now favoring contraception, a noted church historian, Msgr. John Tracy Ellis, says that the church ban on it "has become almost, it seems to me, a non-question." In answering questions after a talk, he added, "I hope I won't shock you when I say this: I think the show's all over."

PHILATELIC FOLLY? — Philatelists are wondering about this giant stamp offered to collectors in Japan last month. It seems the United States government, which wields postal authority over the Marshall Islands Trust territories, was asked by the native government for permission to issue the stamp. The permission was never granted however, and the stamp may not be used to mail anything, on, or off the islands. A more common sized stamp, and a United States quarter-dollar coin are shown at bottom to indicate the scale. (AP Laserphoto)

Adolescent Years Said U.S. Luxury

By JUDITH SERRIN
NEW YORK (UPI) — Adolescence, that renowned transition zone between childhood and adulthood, may be a middle class luxury in America, a Columbia University researcher says.

"It may be that adolescence for some groups in our society is dead," said Francis A.J. Ianni, professor of education at Teachers College-Columbia University. "It may very well be that in some social classes, in some circumstances, kids move directly from childhood to adulthood."

Ianni, an anthropologist, is directing a three-year study of adolescence that seeks to determine when a child becomes an adult.

Describing his early findings in an interview, Ianni said that adolescence appears to be elastic, stretching out for some people but disappearing in a snap for others.

"Our social policy behaves as if everybody has this marvelous period of searching and seeking for their identity," Ianni said. That impression, he said, is not true.

"In lower-class families kids take on adult responsibilities, or irresponsibilities, at a much, much earlier age," he said. "As young as 9 or 10 years of age they're functioning as adults in some areas."

Pregnancies and marriages among teen-agers are one example of this rush to adulthood, Ianni said.

So is crime; in an earlier national study of safe schools, Ianni found the seventh grade the most violent of all.

So is employment, he said.

For example, he pointed out that a 12-year-old who, because of his superior English, is the cashier in the family restaurant in New York's Chinatown is hardly a child.

Ianni said having a job appears the most important distinction — greater even than marriage or babies — in separating the men from the boys, the women from the girls.

He said the job market points out some inconsistencies of measuring adulthood by age.

What with graduate school and dropping-out among the middle and upper classes, "A lot of people are not starting to work until they're 30 — and parents react to them" as children, he said.

On the other hand, he said, among economic classes where adult responsibilities are assumed early, a work-study program that pays young people to stay in school "is trying to re-create a childhood dependency" that has long been passed.

Ianni also found geographical and sex differences in measuring adolescence.

Adolescence passes faster in urban areas, he said, "because the pace of life is faster in the city."

Girls may no longer be speeding towards adulthood several steps ahead of boys. "We used to think that girls ended adolescence earlier than boys," Ianni said. "That's speculative ... Those differences are starting to disappear."

He said the definition of adolescence is important because, "Many social policies, including the ages when a person may be tried in an adult court, purchase alcohol, and marry without parental consent, concern this crucial phase of life."

At this stage, Ianni said, he is inclined to think such social policies should be based on demonstrated ability, not age, but:

"Look, I'm Italian. I started drinking when I was 3 years old ... There are some kids who could probably start driving at age 15 and there are others that shouldn't be driving until age 18.

"I think that rather than basing it (social policy) upon age, it really should be based upon a process in which you set certain standards that have to be met," such as driver education and voter education.

In the first phase of the study, Ianni and his 15 co-workers are focusing on young people in three areas — the lower East Side of New York, a New Jersey suburb and a rural town in upstate New York. Their work is being funded by a $187,200 grant from the Spenser Foundation of Chicago.

Radicalism In America Is Recalled

By DIANNE KEARNS
HARTLAND, Vt. (UPI) — George Seldes decided early in life he would never belong to the silent majority to which Henry David Thoreau referred when he wrote: "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation."
At 89, Seldes is still screaming.
A New York film company visited Seldes at his home here recently to pick his brains about journalist John Reed, a man billed as "the only American buried in the Kremlin."
Warren Beatty is producing and starring in a film on Reed, a correspondent for a radical publication, The Masses, during the Russian Revolution.
Reed also authored the book, "Ten Days that Shook the World," and became a founding member of the Communist Party of America.
Seldes, who met Reed at Harvard, said he ended up giving the visiting filmmakers a lesson in American radicalism.
"They nearly jumped out of their seats," Seldes said. "Apparently, there aren't many people in their 80s and 90s left to tell them these things."
Seldes's recollections of his childhood include visits by anarchists Maxim Gorki and Emma Goldman, and his father's correspondence with Leo Tolstoy and Peter Kropotkin.
He tells tale after tale about his work as a reporter for the Pittsburgh Leader in the early 1900s, and in Europe for the Chicago Tribune from 1919 to 1929.
Seldes said he opened a Rome bureau in 1925 but was expelled from Italy for smuggling out documents that cast an unfavorable light on Mussolini's regime.
"I took a chance and smuggled the stuff out. I sent it by letter to London but, well, I got thrown out," he said.
After leaving the Tribune, Seldes set about writing books on the European press which, he said, were well received by American reviewers.
But, he added, he ended up out-of-favor with those same reviewers after publishing a critique of censorship and the power of political parties in the United States.
"This is when the Americans all became angry with me," Seldes said.
In 1936, Seldes went to Spain to write articles on the Spanish Civil War for the New York Post.
He and his wife cut short their stay after a shell fragment flew through their hotel window and landed in the tub where Mrs. Seldes was taking a bath.
"I said, 'This is no place for you. It's time to leave.' That was the end of our trip to Spain," he said.
Seldes then worked for Ken, a magazine started by Esquire owner David Smart. But after a time, he said, it seemed advertising dictated the types of articles he wrote — so he decided to start a publication of his own.
In 1940, the first issue of In Fact was printed and was dedicated "to the millions who want a free press."
It was in this weekly that Seldes became the first to publicize the link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer and industry's efforts to keep it under wraps.
"He was the first writer to expose the connections between cigarette smoking and lung cancer, and the attempts on the part of tobacco companies to keep the news out of the papers," wrote Hofstra University professor Richard Sobel in an introduction to a volume of In Fact.
After 10 years, the publication folded and Seldes returned to writing books at a time when leftists were being blacklisted.
He was one of many writers, entertainers and public figures called in 1953 to testify before Wisconsin Sen. Joseph McCarthy's committee.
One senator asked Seldes about his party affiliation, to which he replied: "I'm sort of independent and I live in Vermont. I've always voted the Democratic ticket. I do vote for (former U.S. Sen. George) Aiken, a Republican. But generally, I'm a Democrat."

REGISTER TO WIN DURING ECKERD'S 1000&1 STORE CELEBRATION

Register to win by filling out an entry blank available at Eckerd Drugs, or print your name, address and telephone number on a piece of paper 2 1/4" x 4 1/4" and mail to the Eckerd Drug store nearest you. Entries must be received by 6:00 p.m. Saturday, December 15, 1979 to be eligible for drawing. Winners of prizes displayed at each store will be drawn from entry box at 8:00 p.m. on Saturday, December 15, 1979. Winning entries will then be forwarded to the Jack Eckerd Corporation offices in Clearwater, Florida for Grand Prize Drawing at 3:00 p.m. Wednesday, December 19, 1979. Grand Prize winner will select 1001 different items -- no two items alike -- from merchandise in stock and on display at the Eckerd Drug store nearest winner's home, or may accept $20,000.00 cash alternative prize. No purchase is necessary. You need not be present to win. Winners will be notified. All applicable taxes are responsibility of winners. Winners' names will be posted in stores where required by law. All prizes must be claimed by January 15, 1980 or prizes are forfeited. Contestants must be 18 years of age or older to register and win. Employees and IRS dependents of employees of the Jack Eckerd Corporation, its subsidiaries and its advertising agency are ineligible. Void where prohibited by law.
