Carter Plans Tightening Economic Noose On Iran

By GEORGE GEDDA

and BROOKS JACKSON

Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — While not ruling out military force, President Carter is said to be hoping a policy of economic denial — "turning the screws a little tighter" every few days — will induce Iran to free 50 American hostages.

Speaking to a group of about 100 House members Wednesday night at the White House, Carter was reported to have outlined a series of economic measures he is prepared to take to end the crisis, now in its 33rd day.

The administration apparently hopes to enlist the support of several U.S. allies in Europe, all major consumers of Iranian oil.

U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said Wednesday night that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance may travel to four West European capitals next week to try to line up support for new American initiatives.

Vance is due to go to Belgium for a NATO ministerial meeting and sources said the trip may be expanded to include Great Britain, West Germany, France and Italy.

A high-level State and Treasury Department mission was sent to Europe on Wednesday, intending to visit the same four countries, plus Switzerland.

At the White House dinner, Carter indicated that Iran's economy, heavily dominated by imports, may suffer even without any new American initiatives, according to one participant.

The congressman, who asked not to be identified, reported that Carter said U.S. food shipments to Iran effectively have been halted already by the freezing of Iranian assets in the United States.

Carter also was reported to have said the arrival of U.S. warships in waters off Iran had caused Lloyd's of London and other insurers to declare the area a war zone, resulting in a 400 percent increase in ocean shipping insurance rates.

A long list of non-military initiatives is under debate within the administration following Tuesday's United Nations Security Council vote demanding the immediate release of the 50 Americans being held hostage in Iran.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the administration interprets the U.N. vote as a mandate for the United States to take additional measures.

One source said there is some sentiment in the administration favoring a U.S. call for a U.N. economic embargo against Iran, similar to the one that has been in effect against Rhodesia for many years. He said another option is a U.S. proposal for a global boycott of Iran Air flights.

It was not clear whether either of these proposals is receiving high-level consideration.

Officials suggested there are enough diplomatic and economic initiatives available to the United States that weeks may pass before the supply is exhausted.

While stressing the non-military nature of the U.S. initiatives, the Carter administration hopes to keep Iran off balance by continuing to raise the prospect of military force to settle the

See A Choice Of Higher Gasoline Tax, Rationing

By R. GREGORY NOKES

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is a "growing consensus" among President Carter's advisers that he should recommend a big increase in the federal gasoline tax or gasoline rationing to reduce oil consumption, says a high administration official.

"It boils down to choices between rationing or taxes," the official said in an interview Wednesday. He did not want to be identified. He indicated an increase in the gasoline tax is considered the more likely choice because a rationing program would require a larger government bureaucracy to administer and because a tax would fit what the official described as the "free economy concept" of reducing consumption.

He said the amount of a proposed tax could range as high as 50 cents per gallon, although it could be substantially less. The gasoline tax is now 4 cents per gallon.

The official said a decision has not been made among Carter's advisers on whether even to recommend the tax to the president. He said some advisers remain skeptical that either a gasoline tax or gasoline rationing would work to reduce consumption.

He said other options are also still under consideration, including establishment of oil import quotas. But he stressed there is "a growing consensus" in favor of either taxes or rationing.

Congress earlier this year approved legislation that would allow rationing when there was a 20 percent reduction in supplies. The administration would have to go back to Congress to change that legislation if it wanted to impose rationing to encourage conservation.

The administration official said one appealing feature of an increase in the gasoline tax is that tax receipts could be used to offset a possible reduction in Social Security payroll taxes, which are scheduled to rise sharply in 1981. He said they also could be used to provide new investment incentives for business through an accelerated depreciation allowance.

He said a proposal could be ready for the president within a few weeks. Carter has asked his advisers to recommend options for reducing oil consumption that he could include in his January budget message to Congress.

November's Price Index Is Up Again

By GLENN RITT

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food prices jumped by the highest amount in five years last month, helping to push overall wholesale prices up 1.3 percent, the government said today.

November's 2.6 percent increase in food prices at the wholesale level offset the smallest rise in energy costs since February, the Labor Department reported.

The food price boost — the largest since a 4.2 percent rise in November 1974 — came primarily in the meat category, with processed poultry prices shooting up 21.5 percent. Beef, veal and pork prices also increased sharply after declining in October, the department said.

The overall 1.3 percent increase follows a 1 percent rise in October and 1.4 percent jump in September.

So far this year, prices at the wholesale or producer level — one step short of retail store shelves — have accelerated at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 12.8 percent.

That virtually guarantees that 1979 will be the worst year for inflation at the producer level since 1974, a Labor Department economist said.

Wholesale price changes are included in the Producer Price Index, which reports prices at three levels: the wholesale — or finished goods — level, when goods are ready for sale to the final user; the intermediate level, where they have received some processing; and the crude level, where goods have not yet received any processing.

Changes in the Producer Price Index are watched carefully because they often show up at the consumer level in a month or two.

Retail prices are rising at more than 13 percent a year, the fastest rate since 1946 when the government lifted World War II price controls.

The Labor Department said prices for finished energy goods in November increased 2.5 percent, the smallest monthly advance since February.

There was a marked slowdown in the price advance of home heating oil, which rose just 0.1 percent last month after a 4.7 percent jump in October. Gasoline prices went up 3.4 percent last month after jumping 5.1 percent in October, the department said.

Price increases also slowed for passenger cars and mobile homes.

While energy price increases moderated somewhat last month, news for the year is more gloomy. Energy prices were 62.7 percent higher in November than they were one year earlier, the department said.

In addition, food prices at the producer level increased 8.9 percent over the 12-month span.

Prices for all other finished goods rose 9.3 percent during that period and prices of equipment for producing goods went up 8.6 percent.

The Producer Price Index in November stood at 225.9. That means that goods that cost $100 at wholesale in 1967 cost $225.90 last month.

Food prices had edged down 0.1 percent in October, and the 2.6 jump last month came as a surprise, said a Labor Department economist who asked not to be identified.

Honor Goes To Local Educator

Ms. Bedie F. Hester, fifth and sixth grade teacher at Third Street School, was selected "Outstanding Educator" for District 20 during the recent annual convention of the North Carolina Congress of Parents and Teachers in Fayetteville.

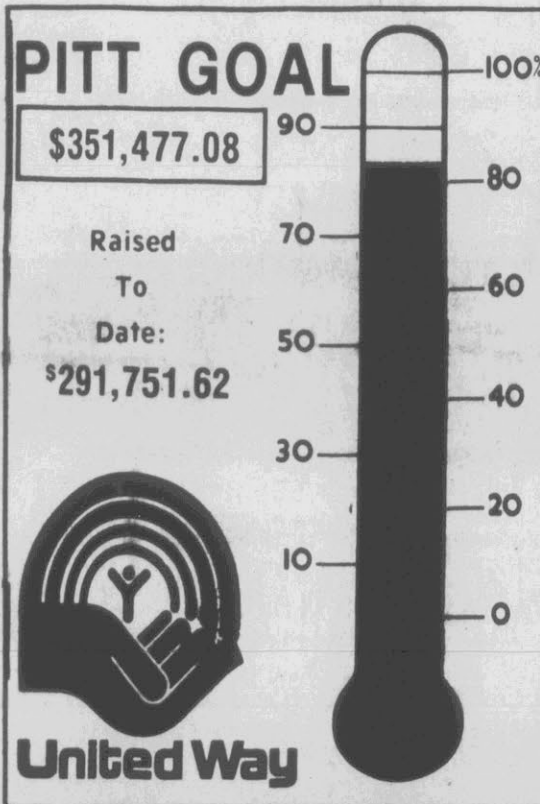

The award is given to an outstanding educator in each of the 20 districts in North Carolina, based on the teacher's accomplishments, both in the classroom and the community.

Ms. Hester was selected last spring by a committee of parents and teachers as "Outstanding Educator" in the Greenville area. Her name was placed in nomination with state PTA officials for the district award.

Ms. Hester has taught for seven years, six of them at Third Street. She served in 1976 on the Governor's Council on Reading. She is a member of the Alpha Delta Kappa honor society for teachers and the Greenville Junior Women's Club.

Ms. Hester holds a bachelor of science degree from East Carolina University, and is currently working toward a master's degree in education from ECU.

Pitt County Personnel Hold Disaster Preparedness Test

Pitt County's emergency preparedness was tested yesterday afternoon by a mock train-bus collision on the Chiquapin Road (State Road 1218) near Farmville.

The prearranged "accident" occurred shortly before 1:22 p. m., the time the first call went in. Farmville, Fountain, Bethel, Greenville, Winterville, Grifton and Falkland rescue squads responded. The Farmville Fire Department put out a mock fire in the bus.

Some 30 members of the Pitt Community College nursing class were the mock victims, 25 of them made up with injuries, five of them distraught family members.

The accident scene was approximately 13 miles from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where all of the "seriously injured" were taken. The first unit arrived at the PCMH Emergency Department at 2:02 p. m.

The Pitt County Sheriff Department, the N. C. Highway Patrol, the State Emergency Medical Services office, and the Farmville

Police Department assisted. According to Pitt County Emergency Management Director Bobby Joyner, the disaster drill went "fairly well." "We found there were some problems," he said, "but that's okay. That's why we hold these drills periodically — to iron out problems when the consequences aren't so important." He said a critique will be held soon with all the units involved.

Super-Sheriff Earned A Ph.D.

By LINDA KUNTZ LOGAN
LEXINGTON, S.C. (UPI) — With his beefy appearance, red face and Southern drawl, Sheriff James R. "Jimmy" Metts fits the stereotype of a redneck sheriff from Dixie.

But appearances are deceiving. In Metts' case, the college diplomas that cover one wall of his decorator-designed office provide a better clue about the personality and abilities of the man who is the only sheriff in the nation to hold a Ph.D.

"The old Southern sheriff used to get into office with political savvy and then he stayed there that way. That's the kind of thing I swore to tear down if I got elected," Metts said.

Metts, 32, who grew up in predominantly rural Lexington County where everybody knew what he called the redneck sheriff, reflects the changes that have come to the county.

The rapid growth of neighboring Columbia spawned many "bedroom communities," where sophisticated suburbanites now live, although the county still includes many small farming communities.

Unlike gun-toting sheriffs of old, Metts wears business suits and ties to work. In his office, amid the electronic equipment that allows him to keep in constant touch with his deputies, sits a fancy stereo system with Richard Pryor albums on the turntable.

A conspicuous four-foot tall, Oriental water pipe — a souvenir from Metts' first big marijuana bust — is stashed in the corner of the office. Metts, who runs the sheriff's department "like a company," said efficiency, logic and intelligence are the best weapons against crime.

Criminals, he thinks, are becoming "more mobile" and better-educated.

"The criminal has surpassed the law enforcement officer in education," he said in a recent interview. "We've got to bring law enforcement up to compete with crime."

Metts obviously practices what he preaches.

His Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina is in education, with an emphasis on curriculum and instruction. He also has a master's degree in criminal justice, an undergraduate degree in psychology, and four associate degrees in fields ranging from chemical engineering to corrections administration.

The National Sheriffs Association in Washington confirmed that Metts is the only sheriff with a doctorate, even though several police chiefs have advanced degrees.

"My degrees give me a look at problems from many directions, not just one narrow view," he noted.

Metts, who says solving crimes can be "a lot of fun" — almost like a game sometimes — uses his schooling on the job.

"You've got to put yourself in the criminal's psychological state, you must learn how these people react and perform," Metts said.

"You try to reconstruct the crime as they would have done it, then try to disprove each hypothesis." Metts also said he gets a lot of ideas on crime-solving from reading novels, such as those about the mythical detective Sherlock Holmes, and watching television.

"A lot of crime is committed because of past experience," he said. "We get ideas from novels and I try to get plots off the TV cop shows."

In fact, Metts said, he solved one crime that way.

"There was a crime that was based on a plot from a 'Barnaby Jones' show, and that's how I solved it," he said. The crime involved a man who pretended he was dead to collect insurance.

Metts has little modesty when it comes to detailing the strides his department has made since he took over.

"When I came into office in 1972, this was probably the worst sheriff's department in the state," he said.

"We had 19 personnel; the deputies didn't even have uniforms. There was no record system at all. The department now boasts 126 fulltime people, a new facility, and a budget of $1.5 million," he said.

"There have been drastic changes, in fact; it's a miracle," he said. "I wonder where we'd be now if I had not had the aggressiveness to get some of these things accomplished."

He is a firm believer in continuing education for law enforcement officers.

"If we are going to solve crimes, law enforcement officers are going to have to become attuned to what is going on in society," he said.

"They need better training, better education, and my role is to make this department and my people as sophisticated as the criminals we deal with."

In a changing society, law enforcement officers can't afford to live in the past.

"I think the voting public has become better educated, and they are voting out the old politician-types," Metts said.

FOCUS

"Star Trek" Goes To The Movies

Captain Kirk, Mr. Spock, Dr. McCoy, and the rest of the "Star Trek" crew first set out "to explore strange new worlds" in space in 1966. As a weekly television series, "Star Trek" never had very high ratings, and was canceled after three seasons. But reruns of the program since then have made it one of the most popular TV shows of all time. Fans formed clubs and even held conventions to celebrate the program and its characters. Today "Star Trek: The Motion Picture" has its world premiere in Washington, D.C. Tomorrow it opens in theaters across the country. Besides the original cast, new "Star Trek" crew members include Stephen Collins and Persis Khambatta, shown here.

DO YOU KNOW — What actor plays Captain Kirk in "Star Trek"?

Bride Doesn't Want His Flower Girl

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in a terrible spot and need your advice. I'm in love with a terrific man I'll call Larry. We plan to be married soon. Larry has a 7-year-old daughter I'll call Linda. Linda lives with her mother, from whom Larry has been divorced for three years, but he has the child every other weekend. She's spoiled, selfish, whiny and obnoxious, but Linda has her father wrapped around her little finger. She hangs on him constantly and if he touches me, she pouts. Naturally this irritates me and I'm not very good at hiding my feelings.

Larry asked me if Linda could be our flower girl, and before I knew what a little stinker she was, I said yes. Now I realize it was a big mistake. This is my first wedding, Abby, and I want it to be MY day, but with Linda hanging all over Larry and pushing me in the background, my wedding will be ruined.

I've asked Larry to tell Linda we're not having the big wedding—we're going away to be married quietly instead. (She'll never know the difference.) Then after we return from our honeymoon we'll take Linda to Disney World to make it up to her.

Larry doesn't think it will work. What do you think?

ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: I don't think it will work either. Be wise and proceed with your original plan. And if you want a lasting marriage, I urge you to seek professional help in learning how to cope with Linda. Her jealousy is understandable. She's a 7-year-old who "lost" her father when she was 4 and is now facing the threat of losing him again.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a woman (in her 80s) who would come to an 83-year-old man (my father) and tell him that she had to rid her conscience (after 50 years) of the fact that years ago my mother had been unfaithful to him? Mother has been in a rest home for the last six years, totally out of touch with reality.

My father, who had always been alert and in good health, has been in a state of shock ever since. He said he never in the world suspected anything like this from my mother. He used to visit her twice a day, but hasn't been to see her since. He even turned her picture to the wall.

USED TO LIVE ON OREGON STREET

DEAR USED TO: The woman who brought your father the news could be mentally disturbed, senile or lying. Explain this to your father in an effort to comfort him.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to REALISTIC IN MASS. What gives her the right to be so critical of couples living together?

Don't get me wrong; I'm 24, single and living alone. But if "Mr. Right" comes along, I sure hope we live together before any final ties are made.

Six years ago I married a man I really thought I knew and understood. Six months later we filed for divorce.

If we had lived together for six months, a lot of pain and unnecessary expense could have been avoided.

I'm not thinking of myself; the "unnecessary expenses" came out of parents' pockets!

REMEMBERING IN PUEBLO

DEAR ABBY: In your reply to CHICKEN IN DETROIT, the woman whose "super-dude" had bad breath, you said, "If a dentist can't help him, he should see a doctor."

Abby, I resent the implication that a dentist is not a doctor. My husband is a DDS, which stands for "doctor of dental surgery," and he has as much right to call himself "doctor" as do physicians.

I think you owe dentists an apology.

WIFE OF A D.D.S.

DEAR WIFE: I apologize. I might need a doctor of dental surgery to get my foot out of my mouth!

One Era Ends, Another Begins

East Carolina University has passed through some turbulent days following the sudden resignation of highly successful football coach Pat Dye.

The resignation came even though Dye did not have a new coaching position lined up for certain at that time.

The speculation was rampant and much was said and written concerning the matter.

We have concerns about the administration's handling of the situation. Winning football coaches have high egos; so do outstanding research people, artists, musicians and deans of schools. The major part of management is to keep these successful people contented while fitting their unique talents into the whole. Possibly that hasn't been achieved in this instance.

We learn, however, and the future development of all the many things East Carolina is involved in is what counts now.

At this point, one thing has to be made clear to fans, the university community and everyone who has an interest in East Carolina University. The Dye era has ended at the institution. It is now Day One of a new phase of football at the university.

East Carolina must move ahead with its athletic program, just as it must move forward in various academic areas.

The university is a growing and exciting institution precisely because of the enthusiastic support it has received from so many thousands of people. This is a rallying around time . . . a time to put what is past behind us and look to future accomplishments.

Security Council Could Not Condone

The United Nations Security Council has voted unanimously to urge Iran to free the Americans held hostage in the Terhan embassy.

To have done anything else would have been unthinkable. Condoning the Iranian acts would mean an end to international diplomatic relations as the civilized world now knows them.

The Security Council action may have little effect on the present crazed Iranian leadership. Nevertheless it is a great reaffirmation of civilization.

Costs Put In Perspective

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Some legislators were shocked and upset the other day when a witness before a committee unveiled understandable figures on the cost of government services.

Members of the General Assembly are accustomed to talking about hundreds of thousands, millions, even billions.

They aren't accustomed to translating such massive amounts into understandable terms. The situation is only human. We can still get upset at paying $5 for a routine restaurant meal. We feel rich given $500 in our pocket. An economy car can still be had for $5,000. Mention $500,000 and most of us are out of the game. Everytime you add another zero after the dollar mark, the amount gets remoter and remoter, till ultimately it means nothing.

"I'm simply amazed at these figures" We had no idea. This could mean we are going to have to take a closer and different approach to looking at the budget," commented State Rep. Louise Brennan, D-Mecklenburg, of the revelation.

The Cost

Here is what some of those million-dollar programs are costing you, the taxpayer, in simple terms.

The most expensive program is in mental health where fulltime psychiatric hospital treatment involves a number of custodial and health services, psychiatric and psychological testing and counseling, medical services, as well as housing, food, etc.

At adolescent wards of Cherry Hospital in Goldsboro and Umstead at Butler, it is costing $145 per day per patient; a total of up to $53,000 annually for each patient.

At community health centers and hospitals where patients receive even more intensive treatment for shorter periods of time, the cost runs up to $55,000 each year per patient.

There are more than 600 youngsters in state mental retardation centers where the level of care is quite high, but less is done in treatment. The cost runs $64 daily per individual; $24,000 per year.

At group homes for the disturbed mentally retarded, the cost is slightly higher: $70 daily, or $26,000 per year.

At juvenile training schools where full living and custodial care as well as education and therapy are provided, cost is running $45 per day or $16,300 each year.

The state's prison system houses, clothes, and feeds inmates but provides little more than essential medical care and rock-bottom therapeutic or rehabilitation programming at a cost of $15 per day per inmate.

All told, between 20,000 and 25,000 individuals are institutionalized in one or another of these programs. Little wonder that total expenditures boggle the mind.

Lifetime

From these figures: it is plain to see that one mentally disturbed individual requiring lifetime care can easily cost the state a million and a half.

BILL NOBLITT

Finding and fixing the physical, emotional, and mental conditions — where possible — early in life can produce a competent individual who can work and earn a living and be a contributing member of society rather than an expensive burden, Hunt has said repeatedly.

Of the high cost of caring for those currently institutionalized, Hunt feels it is a measure of North Carolina's compassion that citizens are willing to pay that much to look after the unfortunate.

Reflections On Reagan

WASHINGTON — William F. Buckley Jr., my brother pundit and political mentor, has taken me to task for dasting to suggest that Ronald Reagan has a problem more serious than the governor's approaching 69th birthday, to wit, the problem of his inexperience in Washington. I advanced this heretical observation in a column a month or so ago, based in part upon the misfortunes of Mr. Carter for the same reason.

Says Mr. Buckley: "Now it is true that President Carter has given not-knowing-anything-about-Washington a bad name. But because Mr. Carter is a poor president, it does not follow that he is a poor president because he didn't know anything about Washington."

My beloved mentor goes on to philosophize that nobody, really, can be adequately prepared for the burdens of the White House. It is immaterial that Mr. Reagan might not know whether a majority whip outranks a minority leader. After all, what did Dwight Eisenhower know about Washington before he became president? And didn't we all like Ike?

OK. Let me return to the theme I was toying with a month ago, and let me repeat a disclaimer. It is entirely possible that I give too much importance to prior Washington experience. Potomac fever can have that effect. But on further reflection, I am minded to stick to my guns.

As the campaign rolls along, Mr. Reagan's most formidable task will be to convince the voters that he has both the wisdom and the knowledge to deal effectively with the Washington machinery. The former California governor has the charm; he has the charisma; he has the serenity that comes with age; his conservative principles are my conservative principles.

But the country has indeed had the experience of Mr. Carter's inexperience. The gentleman from Georgia arrived in our town in January of 1977, as innocent as a Clinton County rube on a Cincinnati midway. In his naivete, Mr. Carter assumed that being president of the U.S. was just like being governor of Georgia, only more so. It took him three painful years to learn the hard way that Washington isn't an overgrown Atlanta. The differences are not of degree, but of kind.

If Mr. Carter had ever served in the House or the Senate,

Added To Red Tape

By BROOKS JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret Service red tape, which frequently delays and puzzles White House reporters who have to deal with it, may be getting worse.

A White House press pass — hundreds of which are issued to reporters who cover the president regularly and who have no record of assault against politicians — has for years entitled the holder to walk into the office of the press secretary, which is perhaps a dozen paces from the door of the president's own Oval Office.

But the same pass will not entitle the holder to get into the cafeteria of the Executive Office Building across the street. In fact, reporters can't get into the EOB at all without an appointment.

President Carter has no office in the EOB. Vice President Walter Mondale has one, but splits his time between there and another office in the White

INSIDE REPORT

Malevolent Soviet Game

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — That Moscow is playing a malevolent hand in the country's Iranian crisis became indisputable three weeks after the American hostages were seized when the CIA's top-secret National Intelligence Daily informed President Carter that Moscow has privately promised to "support" Iran in the event of U.S. military action.

The Russians intentionally left the nature of that "support" ambiguous. As pieced together here by high-level operatives in the Pentagon, State Department and intelligence community, the Soviet objective is clear: Induce Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to hold the hostages long enough to entice President Carter into military action.

If and when that happens, Moscow's intention may well be to offer Iran no more than political and moral support.

But no official here is certain that the Russians would be content (as one prominent authority put it to us) "to harvest the rich anti-American crop" throughout the Moslem world that would bloom with an American attack on Iran. If not content, Moscow could indeed offer military help, using a mechanized division manned by crack Farsi-speaking Soviet soldiers long held in readiness just north of the Iranian-Soviet border.

This malevolent game, clearly the design of Soviet policy at the highest levels, may be understandable as one superpower seeks to exploit the other's vulnerabilities. But amid the shadowy power politics swirling around Iran, there seems more than simple exploitation. This looks like calculation and design.

Some three weeks after the hostages were seized, the state-controlled Iranian radio and television suddenly stopped its harsh, unremitting criticism of the Soviet Union. This propaganda shift contradicted the historic reality that the Russian giant to Iran's north has always been viewed as a potential aggressor, never a friend.

Eric Rouleau, a leading Western journalist on Iran, wrote in the left-leaning Paris daily, Le Monde, Nov. 23: "Even the denunciations of the 'oppressive communist regime' of Afghanistan have stopped, as well as the hostile slogans against the Tudeh (Iran's Communist party) that the masses have been shouting out."

To the editor:

I hope the driver of a car which hit a white shaggy dog Saturday night about 10:15 to 10:30 at the corner of Fourth and Jarvis Streets has a little bit of guilty conscience when he or she reads this. The dog, before her death, was nursing seven healthy puppies. With special extra attention, we hope the puppies will survive.

You could have at least stopped and checked her condition and notified anyone in any house nearby — she was known by all in the neighborhood.

Maybe these comments will cause someone in the future to be considerate of all involved and stop to give aid or notify owners when accidentally injuring an animal.

40 Years Ago Today

December 6, 1939

LONDON — Winston Churchill, first lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons today that five German submarines had been sunk by the French and British navies this week and that the rate of destruction surpassed Germany's capacity to replace her losses.

Churchill said the allied drive against German submarines was destroying from two to four weekly which "rate is superior to what we believe to be the German power of replacing U-boats."

More than 1,000 British merchant ships have been armed for defense and there will be 2,000 soon, he said.

Weeding Out Among Realtors

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — At the end of September some 2,330,845 people were licensed to sell real estate. One month later the number had dropped by 10.43 percent to 2,087,748, or a loss of nearly 8,000 a day.

The departure from the industry of more than 243,000 people is being interpreted as evidence of a weakening marketplace, and in turn as an omen of dark days for the real estate industry.

William Moore disagrees. From the industry point of view, says Moore, the decline represents a healthy weeding out. "In the past few years," he said, "zillions of people came into this business."

In his opinion, many of those who are leaving the business weren't committed to it as a profession, and Bill Moore is.

Head of one of the larger Colorado firms, Moore and Company, Bill Moore is also next year's head of the Realtors National Marketing Institute, educational arm of the National Association of Realtors.

Moore is one of those people openly distressed by the low level of competence so evident in many real estate sales people, but nobody knows the feeling better than the customer who must rely on them.

Uncounted numbers of potential buyers have found to their dismay that some sales people have almost no knowledge about a property and, moreover, have made little effort to familiarize themselves with it.

Simple but vital questions about the type of heat or the size of taxes sometimes can't be answered by the salesperson, whose firm stands to make a commission of 5 percent to 7 percent if the sale goes through.

Moore grimaces when he hears such tales. It's bad, he admits. "It doesn't take much to get licensed," he says. And he confesses that the requirements for becoming a Realtor aren't a great deal more difficult.

He feels the industry is stronger for having lost some of these sales people, and he hopes that those who remain will raise their level of knowledge, particularly through courses his institute offers.

Education, he says, is his thing. Through certificate programs he hopes to make more Realtors specialists in various aspects of their craft, "to give them a Master's Degree," so to speak.

The institute's degrees are the CRS, or Certified Resident Specialist, the CCIM, or Certified Commercial-Investor Member, and the CRB, or Certified Real Estate Brokerage Manager. Each requires the completion of five courses and a final examination.

Attesting to a growing recognition of the desirability of intensive education is a rise to 15,000 from 5,000 in the number of Realtors who have taken the institute's courses in the past year.

Moore views his challenge as that of upgrading the industry, making practitioners "more professional, more knowledgeable, more aware of their responsibilities to the buyer and seller." After a pause, he adds: "It's sorely needed in our industry."

Strength For Today

ON OUR SIDE

As John Wesley lay on his deathbed, he raised his arms to heaven and cried, "But best of all, God is with us."

That noble quotation has been widely quoted in the last two hundred years. John Wesley was born into an English generation which had all but given up any sincere Christianity. The churches were virtually empty and clergymen were treated with contempt. When Wesley died, a very old man, he had the satisfaction of seeing religion restored to its rightful place.

But his words were only one-half of the ultimate truth. God is with us on this side of the grave, and on the other side also. Modern Christianity is often regarded, with considerable justification, as a means of reform and moral improvement — a means of making the world a better place to live in. Therefore God is here, on our side. But He is also on the other side of space and time, and we will meet Him there.

Funds-Shift Is Approved

WILLIAMSTON — A transfer of a little more than $16,000 in Roanoke District surplus money, to be used in the construction of a lighting system for the baseball field at Roanoke High School, was approved at the December meeting of the Martin County Board of Education.

The project, with a total cost of $28,000, had the remaining $12,000 funded previously by the diversion of funds earmarked for a track resurfacing project which will not be undertaken.

Another project for which approval was given is that of $10,500 for the purchase of high school textbooks during the coming semester. These funds are to supplement state funds appropriated at about $8 per pupil for textbooks.

Pass Airplane With Caution

LITTLE FERRY, N.J. (AP) — Motorists understandably did a double take when they saw Bruce Dunham taxiing his airplane down Route 46.

Dunham, who had rebuilt the single-engine plane at the Little Ferry Seaplane Base, said it did not have pontoons so he could not make a water takeoff. That left just one other way to get it to nearby Teterboro Airport — drive it.

Little Ferry Police Sgt. Robert Seuss said the department occasionally receives requests to escort planes. But he said he hadn't seen a pilot drive to the airport "in many, many years."

The only problem resulting from Tuesday's escort was that apparently nobody told the airport.

"I got stuck in the traffic jam behind him," said Airport Coordinator Mike Dineen.

questions that will be asked. The same possibilities obtain in the complex fields of foreign affairs. But I dunno, I dunno.

The example of Eisenhower will not hold water. By the time the general ran for president in 1952, he had established a personal relationship with every leader in the world. He had served in the Pentagon as chief of staff. He had treated with key committees of the House and Senate. He was deeply involved in the process of governing. In the pending campaign, the question will soon be asked: Who has Governor Reagan been governing lately?

non-religious radicals in the Iranian revolution. Ghotbzadeh is the most dangerous to the U.S. He has known Marxist links and is closely associated with radical Arab liberation fronts — including the far-left Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which helped in taking over the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4.

Thus, the ascendancy of Ghotbzadeh clearly gave new leverage to the Soviets in exploiting U.S. vulnerability in the Iranian crisis. The day before Ghotbzadeh ruled out his presence at the Dec. 1 U.N. session, Soviet delegate Oleg Troyanovsky showed the true Soviet colors: While Moscow confirmed the illegality of the embassy takeover, he told council members, the Security Council should let the Iranians speak first at the meeting.

That would establish an immediate anti-American tone for the extraordinary Security Council session. The accused, not the prosecution, would have the run of the courtroom at the outset of the trial.

Nobody knows how far Moscow is willing to risk playing out its malevolent hand, but an example may have been set by the Kremlin's refusal to give Carter an escape hatch in the recent Cuban crisis. The prospect of similarly disdainful treatment in this far more serious Iranian crisis helps explain the anxiety that permeates the administration today.

House itself. The highest-ranking official working full time in the EOB is James McIntyre, who, in case you have missed it, succeeded Bert Lance as head of the Office of Management and Budget.

The other day the president's chief economist, Charles Schultze, and the head of the Environmental Protection Administration, Douglas Costle, scheduled a news conference. But they were left to cool their heels for 20 minutes while the Secret Service took its time about admitting a group of reporters who had been invited to cover the event. The conference was delayed so long that Schultze and Costle read short statements and left before answering questions as planned.

The subject of the news conference: Jimmy Carter's progress in cutting governmental red tape.

The administration public relations man in charge of the event said the delay was caused because new Secret Service regulations had been put into effect without notice. Secret Service spokesman Jack Warner said, however, that he knew of no new regulations and didn't know the reason for the delay.

As for the rule preventing holders of White House press passes from routine access to the EOB, Warner said, "That was a decision made by (White House press secretary Jody) Powell, and we concur with it." He offered no rationale.

Supplementary Funds Adopted

Ussery New Prexy Of Research Association

WILLIAMSTON — Approval of $1,000 in county funds to supplement the costs of a meeting of the N. C. Transportation Board in Williamston in January was approved at the December meeting of the Martin County Board of Commissioners.

The meeting, which will cost about $4,000, has already received fund pledges of $2,000 from area businesses.

Johnny Boykin, executive secretary of the Williamston Chamber of Commerce, told commissioners that having the meeting in Williamston would give area residents a chance to push local projects. It was pointed out that major roads in the county had received no aid for several years.

Commissioners also voted to have John House of Robersonville continue to serve as board chairman, and Paul Barber of Jamesville was reelected vice-chairman. Donnie Pittman was reappointed as clerk of the board.

Another action approved was that of allowing the county to receive $22,800 in additional state and federal funds to be used in the Chore Program — one to help elderly people confined to their homes who do not wish to go to rest or nursing homes. Receipt of these funds will not involve appropriation of local funds.

New Ukranian Prelate Installed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While a handful of demonstrators protested outside, more than 2,000 inside the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception watched as Bishop Myroslav Lubachivsky was installed as head of the nation's Ukrainian Catholics.

The demonstrators Tuesday were protesting alleged encroachments by the Vatican on special rights of the Ukrainian Catholic Church, which has 1.5 million members.

Sewer Outfall Plans Readied

WILLIAMSTON — Engineering plans to improve the Skewarkee Gut sewer outfall line, long a controversial issue in the town of Williamston, have been completed. A report on the status of the plans was presented to the Williamston Town Board at its December meeting.

Town Administrative Assistant John Boykin told commissioners the completed plans are now in the hands of personnel in the Division of Environmental Management in Raleigh. If approved there, the plans will then be sent to Atlanta for final approval.

If no major problems are unearthed, bids for the project can go out within 60 days.

The town board also approved contributing $1,000 in town funds to support the cost of a State Transportation Board meeting to be held January 10 and 11 in Williamston.

A resolution to tentatively award the N. C. 125 sewer line project to So-Par Utilities Company — at a cost of $175,142.85, was carried. Boykin pointed out that this is not binding but is a requirement of the Environmental Protection Agency. The board stated its intention of firmly accepting the bid if the project is approved by funding agencies.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I always wanted to do a funny book about traveling.

But I could never think of anything funny to write about it. Most trips are like a death march with stop-offs at tedium, exhaustion, and a layover at frustration.

If you doubt it, just ask yourself, have you ever seen a traveler anywhere with a smile on his face?

Every time I return home from a trip, I sit for days and ponder on the great mysteries of travel.

Like how come the first suitcase off the plane never belongs to anybody? I have purposely run from the plane to the baggage claim area to make sure I see the first piece to come rolling down the chute. Minutes later (35 or 40 of them to be exact), when I have my luggage, that first piece is still whirling around... unclaimed.

Why is it the window seat on the plane is always occupied by someone who is (a) sick or (b) asleep?

How come when the pilot comes on over the PA and says, "For all of you camera buffs sitting on the right side of the airplane there is an absolutely breathtaking view of Halley's Comet passing over the Statue of Liberty," I am always sitting on the left side which has been enveloped in clouds since we left the airport?

It has always been a mystery to me how the Fates know which gate to send me to. When I am carrying a newspaper and my handbag and have two hours and a half to change planes, I am at gate two.

However, when I am carrying my own luggage, a three-pound novel, hot rollers, an extra coat and live cactus for my hostess, and have 12 minutes to make a connection, my gate is still being built.

There is never a choice on will your luggage get lost or not get lost. The choice is always will it get lost on the way to your vacation or on the trip home. It is invariably the former.

And finally there's the Feast or Famine Law. A dieter will be met on the 7:00 a.m. flight with a glass of champagne and food every 15 minutes throughout the flight and twice over each time zone, while the starving person will be forced to live by macadamia nuts alone.

Maybe traveling was never meant to be a fun experience. Come to think of it, Wilbur and Orville Wright rode bicycles.

Two Accidents Here Yesterday

An estimated $1,925 damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday, in which the cars involved struck city-owned fixed objects.

Investigators said a car driven by Willie B. Jackson of 204 West 14th St., collided with a fire hydrant at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Clark Street about 6:42 p.m., causing an estimated $600 damage to the car and $900 damage to the hydrant.

In a 9:20 a.m. collision at Greene Springs Park near the Beech Street intersection, a car operated by Virginia Culbreth Edwards of 205A Bryton Hill Apts., collided with a wooden fence at the park.

Damage was estimated at $300 to the car and $125 to the fence.

Improved Results On N.C. Competency Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although the percentage of high school juniors passing the state's minimum competency test improved this year, one student in eight still failed the examination on the first attempt, according to state education officials.

Figures released Wednesday by the state Department of Public Instruction showed that of the 78,473 high school juniors who took the examination, 92 percent passed the reading test and 89 percent passed the mathematics test.

The figures showed a 2 percent improvement in the percentage of students who passed the reading test over last year's high school juniors and a 4 percent improvement in those passing the math tests.

The figures were hailed as marks of improved teaching and remedial instruction in the schools by Gov. Jim Hunt and education officials.

"The results destroy the myth that high school students who did not learn the basic skills of reading and math in the first nine years of school cannot or will not learn," said Hunt, who pushed the 1977 legislation that requires passage of both the math and reading competency tests as a prerequisite for high school students to receive their diplomas.

In actual numbers, 6,278 students failed the reading test and 8,628 failed the math test.

James Gallagher, director of the state competency testing commission, estimated that 12 percent to 13 percent of those taking both tests failed at least one of them. That translates to a one in eight failure rate, compared to one in six in 1978.

Results also showed that minority students and students whose parents did not graduate from high school continued to fail the tests at a greater rate than others.

But, the percentage of minority students passing the tests improved this year, with scores for Indian and black children showing greater improvements than those for whites or other ethnic groups.

Among blacks taking the test for the first time this year, 21 percent failed the reading and 21 percent failed the math tests.

Hunt said he and the state Board of Education would devise a new remedial program for those who still need to pass the test to graduate next spring. He said $1 million of a General Assembly appropriation is available for the program. Gallagher said the testing commission also is studying ways to include a writing examination in the competency test program.

Ranks High In N.C. Building

Greenville was one of six cities in North Carolina of more than 10,000 population recording building permit totals during August of over $4 million, N.C. Labor Commissioner John Brooks reported.

Brooks said that Greenville's August total of $4,341,691 in building permits ranked the city in the top six in the state behind Charlotte ($16,895,456); Greensboro ($13,971,090);

Raleigh ($13,846,996); Fayetteville ($7,647,240); and Winston-Salem ($6,296,563).

In the first eight months of 1979, Greenville ranked eighth among the North Carolina cities with a building permit total of $21,312,245. Brooks said that Charlotte led the state with a figure of $90,261,371 for the first eight months.

Permit totals among several neighboring cities for August and for the first eight months of the year included: Elizabeth City, $462,414; $4,831,701; Goldsboro, $2,333,500; $13,052,397;

Jacksonville, $1,055,688; $7,505,489; Kinston, $658,000; $3,731,199; New Bern, $1,956,000; $7,550,113; Roanoke Rapids, $373,500; $6,815,709; Rocky Mount, $1,732,778; $14,477,280; and Wilson, $1,230,655; $8,850,202.

Protests On Hostages Spread

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer
New York City cab drivers promised to shine their headlights and Rhode Island gasoline station owners started handing out white flags as the American hostages in Iran spent their 33rd day in captivity.

Many protesters noted that Friday is the 38th anniversary of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, an event that also united the nation.

Meanwhile, Alger Hiss, one of the most celebrated targets of the 1950s "Red Scare" said the treatment of Iranians in the United States reflected the kind of feeling he hoped had vanished with the era of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

The tensions — which have erupted in fights and demonstrations in cities across the country — began when Iranian militants seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, taking Americans hostage to demand the return of the deposed shah, who is recuperating from gallbladder surgery and cancer treatments at an Air Force base in Texas.

In developments Wednesday: —Historic Trinity Church in Wall Street joined others ringing noon bells for the hostages.

—Howard Fogel, president of New York's Independent Taxi Owners Council, recalled that in 1941 the United States "became united like it never was before" with the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. "Now Americans stand together again," he said. Some 10,000 cabbies were expected to take part in the silent protest Friday, turning their headlights on to show concern for the hostages.

—Mayor Dale Shaffer of Falls City, Iowa, designated Dec. 5-8 as "Free the Hostages Days," recalling Dec. 7, 1941, as "a day of infamy."

—The head of the Ocean State Service Station Retailers Association said about 50 Rhode Island gasoline stations today would distribute white flags so motorists could show support for the hostages.

In Des Moines, Iowa, state Rep. Sonja Egenes said the Iranian government is building the kind of case she needs to get a bill through the Legislature that would force Iranian students from the state. Under her proposal, state money or tuition aid would be withheld from schools that admit Iranian students.

And Hiss, accused of being a communist spy during the McCarthy era, said he was disturbed by the way Iranians students are being treated in the United States.

However, Hiss, who served a prison term for perjury, told a Wichita State University audience that President Carter had handled the crisis with "dignified restraint."

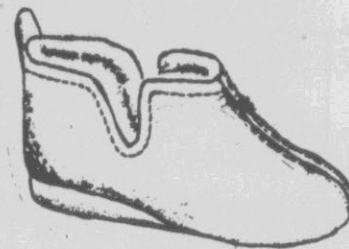

Good,Bad News For 1980 Grads

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — Good news and bad news for the Class of 1980.

The good news — employers anticipate a 13 percent increase in the hiring of college graduates next year, compared to the 1978-79 school year, the College Placement Council said Wednesday.

The bad news — hiring of liberal arts majors will be down 8 percent, the council says. The demand will be for graduates with engineering, technical and business backgrounds.

Millions Of Dollars In School Funds Missing

CHICAGO (AP) — More than $8 million in voluntary employee deductions is missing, says the president of the financially strapped Chicago school system, including $2.4 million from the teachers' pension fund.

Catherine Roher said Wednesday she would meet with the board's attorney to discuss whether any laws were violated in an apparent raiding of voluntary employee deduction funds.

"This is shocking news because we are not somebody they owe — this is money taken from the teachers," said Robert M. Healey, president of the Chicago Teachers Union. "This money should have been transmitted to the union."

Mrs. Roher said division of the pension money represents a violation of "federal law, contractual agreement and it is a violation of trust."

"The voluntary deductions belonged to our employees; it is not our money. It is different from the money owed the vendors, and the board members are extremely concerned," she said.

Mrs. Roher did not say who had diverted the money or for what purposes it was used.

Meanwhile, the Chicago Sun-Times reported today that a proposal to bail the system out of its financial crisis has been hammered out in a cooperative arrangement between bankers, city and state officials.

But the newspaper reported the plan still had not been approved by Gov. James R. Thompson and that parts of it would have to be approved by the Legislature next spring.

Mrs. Roher also said the school board has unpaid bills totaling $36.1 million as of Nov. 30, including millions of dollars in state and federal withholding taxes that were collected but not paid to the respective governments.

The figures used by Mrs. Roher were prepared by Arthur Andersen & Co., the accounting firm hired by the board to examine the school system's financial records.

Mrs. Roher said the missing $8.1 million in voluntary deductions includes $2.4 million from the teachers' pensions, $2.9 million in tax-sheltered annuities, $1.5 million from the employees credit union, $600,000 from the municipal pension fund, $400,000 in savings bonds and $300,000 in union dues.

The news came on the same day that Mayor Jane Byrne accused business and public school leaders of covering up an immense financial school crisis for 10 years.

The school board is in the midst of a financial crisis and is unable to meet a $42 million payroll due Friday. The board's superintendent, former board president, and two other board members have resigned in the past week, and the board's finances are the subject of a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation.

Flight Crew Given Retraining Course

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A three-member Eastern Airlines flight crew that almost landed a 727 jet plane at a small Mecklenburg County airport it mistakenly thought was Charlotte's Douglas Municipal Airport has been retrained and returned to normal flight duty, Eastern officials said Wednesday.

"We seem satisfied this is a crew that knows what it's doing," Eastern spokesman Jim Ashlock said.

The airline and the federal Aviation Administration are continuing their investigations into the episode in which the jet, carrying 101 passengers, came within 600 feet of touching down at the small airport.

The plane apparently made an unscheduled 100-degree turn and headed toward Brookneigh Airport while enroute to Douglas Municipal Airport.

Tower controllers at Douglas saw the improper maneuver on radar and, at about the same time, heard low altitude alerts sounded as a computer projected a crash course for the New York to Charlotte flight.

The 727 needs at least 4,100 feet in which to land safely, airport officials said. Had it landed, the jet's 108-foot wingspan would have overlapped Brookneigh's 2,599-foot runway and possibly cracked the strip that was constructed to support lighter planes.

To test pilot knowledge of the company's safety procedures, Eastern made the captain and two officers fly a simulated four-hour flight from Atlanta to Charlotte to Pittsburgh and back to Atlanta.

The crew also was required to make a regularly scheduled commercial flight with a supervisory pilot on board.

Ashlock said the crew passed the simulator test and actual flight without incident. He said there was no reason indicated to remove the crew from active duty.

Seeking Home Use For Fuel-Cell Batteries

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A fuel cell battery similar to the one in your car may someday provide the electricity for your home, under a research effort being launched by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The government utility's directors will be asked at their meeting next Tuesday to approve building an experimental $24 million fuel cell plant with a capacity of 250 kilowatts.

Several other power systems already have begun work on such plants, although the fuel cell's capabilities for generating electricity have not been proven on a large scale.

Working like a storage battery, the fuel cell converts fuel into electricity through chemical reactions rather than combustion as in conventional power plants.

To become an attractive option for TVA, the pilot plant will have to show that fuel cells can use coal-derived fuels as their power source and at the same time utilize the waste heat generated by the process, officials said.

Because of its small size, the fuel cell can be mass produced for use in cities where land is scarce and power is directly needed, TVA spokeswoman Darlene McDonald said Wednesday.

Ms. McDonald said the fuel cell requires little maintenance and does not have the safety problems associated with nuclear power or the pollution drawbacks of coal-fired steam generation.

The TVA plant will be fueled by a gas derived from medium-quality coal. TVA is now building a coal gasifier at Muscle Shoals, Ala. The fuel cells will use phosphoric acid to chemically convert the gas directly into electricity.

Ms. McDonald said researchers have developed the phosphoric acid fuel cell to the point where it should be widely available by the late 1980s. A similar system using molten carbonate instead of phosphoric acid as the chemical agent will not be ready until the late 1990s, she said.

If the 250-kilowatt plant works, Ms. McDonald said, TVA plans to build a plant 40 times larger in which the waste heat would be used to provide the process steam needed by an industrial plant.

The TVA board also will be asked next Tuesday to approve a $2.8 million program for building 130 experimental modular homes emphasizing passive solar technology to conserve energy.

Ed Taubold, the project's manager, said the homes will be built to take advantage of the sun's energy in the way they are shaped and sited and in the building materials used. They should cost about $30,000 each, he said.

"These homes should be something many people can get into with the money that they have," Taubold said. "Then they should be able to save at least 50 percent on heating and cooling bills."

TVA will work with several modular home manufacturers to develop about 30 designs for the homes, he said. Locations of the experimental homes have not been chosen.

Deficit Means School Vacation

WARWICK, R.I. (AP) — School children here will get an extended holiday vacation due to a projected budget deficit.

The Warwick School Committee voted to close the schools from Jan. 2 to Jan. 25 and lay off most school employees to make up for the projected shortfall of $457,000.

Acts In His Law Course

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Strutting to the front of the class in black net stockings, low-cut red dress and fuzzy wig, Professor Arthur R. Miller instructed Harvard Law School students on the fine points of legal jurisdiction.

Once a year, the bespectacled Miller turns his lecture on the Erie Railroad case into a spoof of movies, his employer, his students and himself.

On ordinary days, the course is called civil procedure, Section 2, but Wednesday was the "Annual Erie Day Extravaganza." And Miller acted out the case by posing as Bette Midler in "The Rose," as Sylvester Stallone in "Rocky" and as a Supreme Court justice presiding over a TV show called "Miller's Court."

In the five years that Miller has been doing this sort of thing, his fame has spread. Wednesday's show overflowed a Harvard amphitheater.

"I've always thought that law school was too formal and serious," said Miller, 45. "I've been a practical joker since I got into teaching 17 years ago."

The Erie decision was a judicial landmark since it gave precedence to a state law over federal law. Next week, Miller gives a more traditional lecture on the case.

Approach Rhodesia Settlement

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Britain's foreign secretary predicts a final Rhodesian settlement will be reached in a few days, concluding the London peace conference successfully, following agreement on principles of a cease-fire.

Lord Carrington, the foreign secretary, on Wednesday told the House of Lords he plans to send a British governor to Zimbabwe Rhodesia in a few days. He will re-establish British control until spring elections in the African colony whose white settlers proclaimed independence in 1965 rather than submit to black-majority rule.

Other officials said the governor would be Lord Soames, son-in-law of the late Sir Winston Churchill and a former cabinet minister. Zimbabwe Rhodesia's black prime minister elected last April, Abel Muzorewa, agreed to step aside in the interests of a lasting settlement.

Carrington said in the next few days military specialists will work out details of the truce to halt seven years of guerrilla warfare in which more than 20,000 persons have been killed. Points to be worked out are the cease-fire date, the location of 15 camps in which the Patriotic Front guerrillas will assemble and organization of a 1,200-man Commonwealth force to monitor compliance with the truce.

Patriotic Front leaders Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo agreed to principles of a cease-fire after 13 weeks of bargaining with Carrington and Muzorewa that first produced agreement on a new constitution curtailing the rights of the white minority and then political arrangements for the transition to a new elected government.

A spokesman for the guerrilla leaders said there were "hazards ahead in the process of implementation." A military source in Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital, commented: "It might be all over bar the shouting in London, but there's no way to suddenly pull the curtain down on this war."

"There are too many guns around for anyone to guarantee there won't be more fighting," said a white officer in the Zimbabwe Rhodesian army. And a guerrilla supporter in Salisbury commented: "Our boys will need a lot of convincing that there's any reason to stop the war."

The London Daily Express gave two cheers for Britain's success at the peace conference but said the third cheer must wait until later.

Carrington said the peace-keeping force will surround the new guerrilla camps, or "assembly points," as they are called, as well as Zimbabwe Rhodesian army and air bases, will disarm all government combat planes and will control bomb and arms depots.

This is to allay the guerrillas' fears that they would be put into concentration camps and systematically exterminated.

Carrington also said all "external forces" will have to leave the country. This was a reference to hundreds of South African troops known to be stationed inside Zimbabwe Rhodesia despite denials from the South African government that it has forces in the country.

Show People 'Passed Plate'

NEW YORK (AP) — Show-folk have raised more than $192,000 for Cambodian refugees by passing the plate among audiences at the end of performances. Broadway, off-Broadway and regional theaters were involved.

Liv Ullmann, last seen on Broadway in the musical "I Remember Mama," Wednesday presented a check for $192,841 to the International Rescue Committee to be used to help Cambodia's homeless.

Actor Michael Moriarty said the committee has "medical teams consisting of 58 doctors, nurses, paramedics and lab assistants... now active along the Thai-Cambodian border."

Miss Ullmann said the group's goal was to raise $200,000 by Saturday.

Nureyev Calmly Pays $350,000

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian ballet dancer Rudolf Nureyev paid $350,000 right after he left an apartment at the famous Dakota, according to females quoted by the New York Daily News.

The News said Nureyev was in Paris when his agent, Barry Weinstein, called Wednesday and told him an apartment at the prestigious address — called back by Lauren Bacall and John Lennon — was available.

The celebrated apartment building on New York's West Side was used in the horror film, "Rosemary's Baby."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose in moderate early trading today as the government announced more bad news on the inflation front.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 2.82 to 831.23 in the first half hour of trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Gainers outnumbered losers by a slim 6-5 margin in the early going.

The Labor Department reported that producer prices rose at an annual rate of 15.6 percent in November, up from 12 percent in October. The increase in producer prices indicates continued high inflation as those are passed along to the consumer level.

Meanwhile, the Ayatollah Khomeini was quoted in Iran as saying the United Nation's Security Council resolution passed earlier this week was "a step forward." Analysts said that might be seen as a hopeful sign for a break in the U.S.-Iranian confrontation.

Several airline stocks were actively traded and up a bit.

Eastern Airlines rose 1/8 to 8; Pan Am gained 1/8 to 5 1/2 and Braniff rose 1/4 to 8.

Among other actively traded issues, Bally rose 1/4 to 34 and American Telephone and Telegraph slipped 1/8 to 53 1/2.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up about 8 points at its mid-day peak, closed with a 3.50 gain at 838.41.

Advances outnumbered declines by close to a 2-1 margin on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 39.30 million shares against 33.51 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 29 to 61.35. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .72 at 230.58.

Debts Remove Needed Funds

DETROIT (AP) — Financially strapped Wayne County has been depending on $5 million in revenue sharing funds from the state — but the state says the money won't be forthcoming because the county owes it that much and more.

County Commission Chairman Richard Mannin said Wednesday the state's decision could mean payless paydays for county employees through the first of the year.

Meanwhile, local treasurers are responding to a county request that they accelerate payment of the county's portion of local tax collections, says county treasurer Raymond Wojtowicz.

Pirates Win Another Squeaker, 67-65

Up For Two

East Carolina's George Maynor goes up for a basket against the defense of Maine's Rick Boucher during last night's action in Minges Coliseum. Maynor's 14 points led the Pirate scoring in a 67-65 overtime victory for the Pirates over the Black Bison. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

More Seen Here; Dye To Wyoming

East Carolina University was to interview three more candidates for the job of head football coach today, while the man who vacated the position appeared headed for the University of Wyoming.

Pat Dye, who resigned a week ago, missed out on the N.C. State job, when Arkansas assistant Monte Kiffin was named to the position last night.

Reportedly, Dye had already been offered the head coaching position at Wyoming, shortly after his resignation here, and left this morning to fly out there with several members of his old ECU staff. One report said that a possible announcement of Dye's appointment as the new Cowboy coach would come on Friday.

Meanwhile, the search committee at East Carolina was to interview three more people today. Georgia Tech assistant Ed Emory and ECU assistant Dick Kupec were interviewed on Tuesday.

Those to be interviewed today include current assistant Frank Orgel; former ECU aide, now at Missouri, Carl Reese, and Auburn assistant Alex Gibbs, who also served on the Ohio State University staff.

A spokesman for the committee said he did not know at this time whether there would be further interviews. A new coach is expected to be named early next week.

Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University won its third straight game last night, pulling out another squeaker, 67-65, in overtime over Maine.

Kyle Powers, seldom noted for heroics on the court during his East Carolina career, was the man of the hour, scoring two key buckets, assisting on another and making a key steal in the final minutes of play.

It was his basket that tied it up with five seconds left at 63-63, forcing the overtime. He then added the go-ahead shot 16 seconds into the overtime, and after Maine had reknotted, he made the pass that led to David Underwood's winning basket with eight seconds left.

With three seconds to go, Powers slapped the ball away from Maine's Rufus Harris, recovered it, then tossed it high into the air as the horn sounded giving the Pirates the victory.

The contest was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way. Maine took the lead on eight occasions, while the Pirates held it nine times. In addition, it was tied on ten occasions.

Both teams built up as much as five point leads, only to lose them as the other fought back.

As it turned out, it was the final minute of play that got the Pirates back into the game after they had trailed by four with a minute and a half left.

Leading 63-59, Maine's Rick Boucher went to the line with 53 seconds left to shoot a one-and-one. He missed, and the Pirates pulled off the rebound. The Bucs pulled within two on a jumper by George Maynor with 24 seconds left, and a collision at mid-court resulted in a charging call against the Black Bear player, turning it back to East Carolina.

Powers then hit with four seconds left to knot it up. Maine coach Skip Chappelle was incensed following the contest, and had few words for the media.

"I can't say anything. I abide by an unwritten code of ethics as a coach. It takes you a year or two to see something like that happen, and that's all I'm going to say," he said, turning and leaving the press room.

Chappelle apparently was referring to the collision, in which he felt blocking should have been called.

East Carolina's Dave Odom was also asked about the officiating and said he wasn't going to get involved in criticism of the officials. "Anyone can see by looking at the stats that we went to the line six times and they went 15, so I don't think anyone can complain."

Odom shook his head and added, "I think our fans are getting their money's worth," referring to the two close home games.

"The only similarity between tonight and last night's games was that they were tight all the way. We showed a lot of staying power. It would have been easy for us to have broken, but we always found the key to staying in there."

The Pirate coach, now 3-1, felt that freshman Bryant Wiggins "gave us a lift in the second half. He has the fiercest that we need on defense. Our defense was nothing to write home about, but it was better than last night."

Odom called it a tremendous victory. "Maine has a good club. They are as good or better than anyone we've played. Their staff did a fine job in preparing for us, especially since they had the advantage of seeing us, and we didn't get a chance to see them."

The coach feels that the Pirates are coming along "a little at a time. We have peaks and we have some little things that are still bothering us."

While some of the Pirates, Herb Krusen in particular, seem to be in shooting slumps, Odom is not worried about it. "Krusen has a green light any time. He'll snap out of it soon." Krusen, who was 3 for 12 Tuesday, was 2 for 9 last night.

"I'm very impressed with Powers. He had Harris in the second half and did a great job on him," Harris, the leading scorer for the Bears, had 18 points in the game, but only six in the second half. "Kyle gave him a lot of problems. He plays with his head."

Maine's use of a very tightly packed zone worried Odom some. "I've never seen people packing it that tightly. Our inside people couldn't move around without bumping into someone. You either have to get the fast break or hit your outside shots to counter that, and we weren't able to do that."

Odom felt the guard play on defense was improved, and said George Maynor especially was improved. Maynor had four steals in the game. "But we played him too much tonight (he went the entire game). We were forced to leave him out there because he was the only one hitting with any consistency from the outside."

For the second straight night, the Pirates had a poor shooting percentage, hitting just 43.2 per cent, including 38.1 in the second half. Maine hit 41.9 per cent. The Bears also out-rebounded the Pirates, 38-35.

Maynor was the lone Pirate in double figures for the game, hitting 14, but Herb Gray added nine, while Powers, Michael Gibson and Frank Hobson all had eight.

In addition to Harris' 18, Rick Carlisle added 12 to Maine's scoring.

The Pirates take to the road again on Saturday, traveling to Durham to face the number two ranked Blue Devils of Duke.

Women To Host James Madison

The East Carolina University women's basketball team, coming off a heart-breaking loss to Duke University, plays host to James Madison Friday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates carried a 3-0 record into their Division I NCAIAW game with the Blue Devils last Saturday, only to be upset 76-65.

Against Madison, the Pirates hold a 3-2 edge, but lost their last outing against them, 73-67, on the Madison home court.

"Madison is going to be a very strong opponent fundamentally, as well as physically," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said.

"The Duke game taught us a lot. We can't survive playing defense the way we did against Duke. Defense is going to be our top priority this week."

The Pirates are led by high-scoring Rosie Thompson, who has a 22.0 point per game average. She is also the leading rebounder, pulling off 9.4 per game.

Kathy Riley is next on the Pirate ladder with a 16.6 average, while Lydia Rountree has a 14.2 mark. The other two starters, Marcia Griven and Laurie Sikes, are averaging 5.6 and 8.2 respectively.

Following the Madison game, the Pirates play host to East Tennessee State on Monday in a 6:30 p.m. game. That game is the first of two games that night, as the men of ECU host South Carolina-Aiken in the nightcap.

Johnston Chosen

Mitchell Johnston, East Carolina offensive guard, has been selected to play in the Blue-Gray Football game, to be played in Mobile, Ala., on Christmas Day.

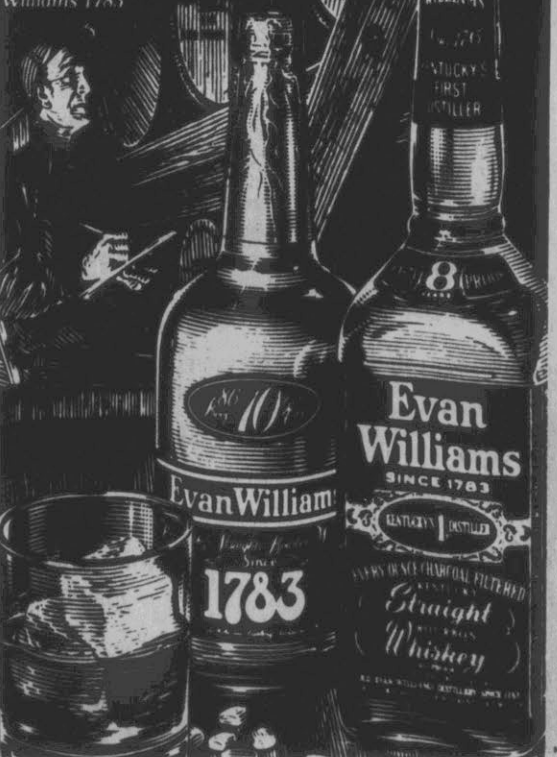

Johnston, a 6-4, 242-pound senior from High Point, will be playing under Bill Dooley, currently at Virginia Tech, who recruited Johnston when the coach was at North Carolina.

Johnston is the fourth East Carolina football player to be chosen for the game. Carl Summerall and Carlester Crumpler both participated in 1973, along with Greg Troupe, while Gerald Hall played in last year's game.

Rose, Bison In Title Clash

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Back at the first of the 1979 football season, Rose High School's Rampants opened the season with a 14-8 loss to Kinston. Rose looked bad in losing the game, committing eight turnovers that led to the defeat.

Ever since then, Coach Dave Bumgarner feels, the Rampants have been trying to live down that loss, one of two handed Rose this season.

Friday night in High Point, Rose feels it has a chance to gain atonement for that opening season embarrassment. At stake is the State 4-A title. Game time against High Point Central is 8 p.m.

"Our kids feel people don't believe in them yet. They are still trying to prove how good they really are," Bumgarner said.

"Actually, as far as they go as a team, I think they are better than the 1975 team. And right now, they have one goal in mind, to win the state championship."

For Rose, it will be the first trip to the state finals since 1975, when the Rampants beat East Mecklenburg, 14-13, for the title.

Bumgarner looks for a game just as exciting as that when Rose meets High Point this year. The Black Bison come into the game with a 10-3 record. They won their opener against Thomasville, 27-0, then dropped successive games to Burlington Williams, 20-12; Kannapolis, 9-7, and R.J. Reynolds, 14-7. After that, they shut out Greensboro Grimsley, 9-0, East Forsyth, 31-0; dented Greensboro Page 21-9, topped North Forsyth, 10-0; beat Greensboro Smith 34-6, and ended the regular season with a 30-0 win over High Point Andrews.

In the playoffs, they shut out previously unbeaten North Mecklenburg, 33-0, topped unbeaten Hickory, 21-14, and polished off East Burke, 35-0, to gain the finals against Rose.

On the Rampants' part, following their loss to Kinston, they won their next three before falling to Rocky Mount, 21-14.

Since that loss, however, the Rampants have run off eight straight, including a 32-13 win over Raleigh Millbrook, a 13-7 win over Fayetteville Sanford, and last week's stunning 36-7 win over Rocky Mount.

"That was a surprise only in the way that we won,"

Bumgarner said. "Our kids felt that they were the best team the first time we met, and this time they proved it."

"The difference in the games was that in the first, Rocky Mount ran at us, and this time, they tried to pass. Our pass rush and coverage was just too good. We never really gave them a chance to throw, and they never really tried to establish a running game."

Bumgarner said he felt that the fact that the Rampants got an early safety, followed that with a field goal and a touchdown completely took the wind out of the Gryphon sails.

"Our kicking game was excellent, and I think that had a lot to do with it. We kicked well, covered well, got a couple of field goals. I think the kicking game is a very important part of the game in the playoffs."

The Black Bison of High Point are known primarily as a passing team. Quarterback Stephen Graham isn't known for his passing, and is rated only adequate. He can throw however, and Charles Smoot, an end, caught two touchdown passes against North Mecklenburg.

Principally, however, it is the running of backs Maurice Hagler and Benson Gray that get the Bison where they want to go. Hagler is the team's leading scorer with 54 points, and has rushed for over 1,100 yards. Gray, with 42 points, is another 100-plus yard a game rusher, but he missed over three games with injuries.

Their offensive pattern, out of the I formation, is to try and go wide with either back, then send Hagler up the middle.

Top players aside from the backfield are listed as linebacker Kenny Angel, nose guard Nathan Alford, tackle Billy Bumgarner, who goes both ways, and Billy Wilson, who is the reserve quarterback, also playing halfback and linebacker. He also occasionally will drop back into the secondary on passing downs. Facing the wishbone of the Rampants won't be a new experience for the Bison either. They have faced at least three other teams using the same formation, winning twice and losing once.

"They are a very good defensive club," Bumgarner pointed out. "They are not as big as some people we play, but they do a real good job. They haven't allowed a lot of points, and they've beaten people who are bigger than they are."

Bumgarner feels that the game will be won on fundamentals. "The team that does its job the best, and that forces the other team into mistakes will be the one that wins," he said.

"I look for the same type of game that we had against East Mecklenburg four years ago, a close, hard-fought game."

"I'd like to think that we could win it like we won against Rocky Mount. That would be good. But I'll take one like East Mecklenburg, 14-13. Either way, we just want to bring that title back to Greenville."

Rose High School will be based at the Howard Johnson Motel, 886-4141, in High Point.

Rick Acoppe

The lights at Simeon Stadium in High Point will burn bright once more tomorrow night when Greenville Rose battles High Point Central for the state 4-A championship.

Late tomorrow evening, when the lights finally die, another high school football season will end for both squads. A long and tough year will have ended: 10 regular season games and, after Friday, four playoff games.

And yet, this long and arduous schedule has produced what it is supposed to: the two best 4-A teams in North Carolina.

"I don't think there's any question about it," High Point Central coach Ron Krall said yesterday. "I think these are the two best football teams in the state, that's why you have the playoffs."

"Once you get there, it doesn't matter what your record is, you made it by beating other good teams."

During the early part of the season, High Point Central would have been a good bet to be anywhere but where they are now. After winning its first game of the season, High Point dropped its next three.

Since then, however, the Bisons have not lost, while moving their record to 10-3. High Point advanced to the finals by beating North Mecklenburg, 33-0, Hickory, 21-14, and, last week in the western finals, East Burke, 35-0.

Rose, 11-2, meanwhile, knocked off Millbrook, 32-13, Terry Sanford, 13-7, before blasting Rocky Mount, 36-7, last Friday in the eastern finals.

"We've looked at Rose on film and it's very difficult to tell about them," Krall said. "They look like they're bigger than we are and I'm worried about their wishbone."

"We've played several wishbone teams, although none in the playoffs, and their type of diversified wishbone — they're not really a pure wishbone offense — could give us problems," Krall said.

"Defensively, they have some real good linebackers and they could give us problems with our running game."

High Point Central runs a power — I which revolves around its tailback(s) — Maurice Hagler and Vincent Gray. Defensively, they run both a five- and six-man front.

"We started out the like everybody else at the beginning of the season, hoping to get where we now are," Krall said. "We've had some trying times this season, but I think that that brought us together as a team."

"So, no, I'm not surprised to be where we are."

But does Krall think his team can run against a Rose defense that last week held Rocky Mount to minus 10 yards rushing?

"You don't ever go into a game knowing what you can do," he answered. "We'll try to run the ball inside, and if we can't do that, we'll try to run the ball outside. If we can't do that, we'll try to throw the ball."

Inman Adds Another Honor: All-America

East Carolina right guard Wayne Inman is a great personification of the American Dream.

The junior from Hope Mills was practically unrecruited out of high school, but has rapidly developed into one of the finest offensive linemen in the country on one of the most potent offensive units around. In fact, the Associated Press named him a third-team All-America this week.

Graded by his coach as a "winner" in 21 straight games, he is a prime reason why the Pirates finished as the number one rushing team in the country and number two in NCAA statistics in total offense and number three in scoring while compiling a 7-3 record.

"The backs we had running the ball were really something special," said Inman. "Blocking for them is exciting. I want to have a good block on every play because you know which one can go all the way and win a game for us. They can break any play for a touchdown."

Pirates backs know the value of a good block and used plenty by Inman and his teammates to average 475 yards a game and score 51 touchdowns last fall.

"The ball carriers really appreciate what we do up front," Inman continued. "And that makes it fun to really take care of them as best we can."

Inman has pampered East Carolina's backs well in two years. For example, Anthony Collins worked behind his blocking for a 72-yard scoring run against Wake Forest, while powerful inside blocks for Theodore Sutton in the Independence Bowl victory last December helped gain that back the MVP trophy on offense.

Chosen to the second team all-Southern Independent team a year ago, Inman felt the need to improve this fall and has responded with a consistently masterful performance. He was rewarded by a first-team selection to the all-Southern team to go with his all-American ranking.

"I'm not as big and not as strong as many of the other linemen around," he said, despite his 6-3, 242-pound frame.

Gymnastics Exhibition

The Rosettes of the Rose's Gymnastic Training Center will present an exhibition of their optional routines on Friday at 7 p.m. at Carolina Country Day gymnasium.

The East Carolina women's gymnastics team will also be featured in the exhibition.

The Rosettes are coming off a 100 to 90.20 victory over the Cape Hatteras Gymnastics Club last weekend, in which several members earned all-around scores that qualified them for the state competition to be held in February. They include Donna Costner, Nancy Johnson, Christy Garrison and Jennifer Newton.

"I have to use good technique. I'm always aware of my line splits, leverage and angles of attack, changing them to my advantage when I can and making use of the strength I have in the best way."

One of several married players on the team, Inman admits that his wife, Jami, is a great help to him. "She takes care of me when I'm hurting and encourages me, too. She knows a lot about football and goes to all the games."

"I'm a family person. We both really enjoy having the family around for the games and going home with them afterwards."

"I like to go fishing and Jami and I play racquetball during the off-season. She's pretty good at it and it keeps me in shape for football."

Inman and his fellow teammates were definitely in shape this past season, where every snap averaged 6.2 yards gained. Thanks to him, the Pirate offensive record book will have to be rewritten during the off-season.

Conley Sees Improved Year For Teams

By RICK SCOPEE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Shelly Marsh is looking to erase the memories of last season, his lone losing season with the Vikings.

And with seven seniors back from last year's 10-15 squad, Marsh's unhappy memories may soon fade away because the Vikings appear a team to be reckoned with in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

"I think we have as good a chance as anybody," Marsh said. "I will say this: the conference championship will be won by a Pitt County team."

"At first, like everybody else, I was picking Aycock to win. They have a lot of talent, probably more than anyone else in the conference," Marsh said. "But then they were beaten by North Pitt last week and now I don't know."

"We're going to need to get consistency on offense and, because of a lack of height, we're going to have to outplay them on defense and outthrust them to challenge," Marsh added.

The Vikings' tallest starter is 6'3½" David Brock. Brock and Sammy Tucker are the Vikings' only starters from last season's team, although four seniors — Mitchell Moore, O'Hara Parker, Curtis Spencer and Carnell Burney — all saw action last season.

These six, and Anthony Burney, have all started for Marsh already this season.

The remainder of the squad includes Ben Daniels, Charlie Speller, Sammy Tyson (a 6'6" sophomore), Stoney Speller and Keith Gatlin.

"We do have some experience with those seven seniors," Marsh said, "but only two of them actually started last year. With this group, we're going to run, as I have done in the past."

"We're small and I think running will help us, but we'd run even if I didn't have to, that's just the way I coach," Marsh said.

The Vikings, 2-1, opened the year with a stunning 75-72 win over Washington, ending the Pam Pack's 56-game winning streak.

The Vikings then whipped Kinston, 62-57, before losing to Southern Nash, 68-66, in their conference opener last night.

"I was pleased we were able to break their (the Pam Pack's) winning streak, especially the fact we did it at their place," Marsh said. "It was a tough ballgame; they took us to task, particularly because they didn't want to have their streak broken at home."

"We stayed right with them, though, and we able to win it in the end."

Girls' Basketball

A year ago at this time, D.H. Conley's girls' basketball team was 0-2. This season, the Vikings are 3-0 and Coach Norma Respass is somewhat surprised by the quick start.

"I was worried about the early season, especially about my guards," Respass said. "They're veterans, but they're not the fastest."

"But my girls are quite improved from last year. This year they're smartly aggressive, they're not making the foolish mistakes," she added.

The Vikings opened the season with a 44-43 win over Washington, followed by a 65-42 stomping of Kinston. Last night, the Vikings opened their conference schedule with an easy 53-33 win over Southern Nash.

Despite the easy win, Respass feels the conference is tougher than a year ago.

"Southwest Edgecombe is undoubtedly one of the most powerful teams in the area. And I also think North Lenoir will be tough and Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central," she said.

"We play most of the top teams before Christmas and that'll give me a good idea of how good we'll be," she said. "We're gonna have to struggle. But I think we'll be one of the top teams."

"My girls seem to feel real confident about each other and that's real important. We're not the biggest team or the fastest but we seem to be ready to play. 'It's just up to my girls. You can say what you want, you can say this or that, but it's up to them."

Starting for the Vikings are Pam Manning and Tammy Streeter at the guards, Brenda Green and Tilda Harris at the forwards and Glenda Green, who had 18 rebounds and 21 points, at center.

The remainder of the Viking lineup includes Cheryl Tyson and Darlene Cannon. Respass' top reserves, Lexanne Keeter, Gwen Nichols, Helena Barnhill, Irish Barnhill and Cheryl Thompson.

Wrestling

D.H. Conley's wrestling team will be one of contrasts this season, a mixture of youth and experience.

The experience comes in the form of eight returning starters from last year's squad, led by two-time state champion Greg Harris. After winning the state title at 98 and 105 pounds, Harris moves up to 119 this season.

Robert Carney, at 138 this year, was the conference, sectional and regional champion last season while Donald Hardy, at 126, won the conference and regional championships.

At 167, Earl Paige captured the conference title last season for the Vikings. Other returning starters are Alexander Crandall, at 132, winner of the Bull Durham Tournament last season, and Shannon Carson and Curtis Bridges, both of whom placed in two tournaments a year ago.

sophomore William Green (98 pounds), the remainder of Coach Milt Sherman's team are freshman — 10 all told.

"Overall, we're a young team," Sherman said. "I think all 19 wrestlers will see action in varsity competition this year."

"We do not have any real weak link on the team. Even our inexperienced wrestlers show good potential for the future," Sherman said.

Last week, the Vikings opened the year with a 38-22 win over Wilson Fike. In that meet, Sherman started seven freshmen.

"We've got some good, solid experience mixed in with our youth and those who wrestled at that meet showed good potential," he said. The Vikings travel to Arlington, Va., this weekend to compete in a tri-meet against Yorktown High School and South Lakes High School.

Dawkins Does It Again As Glass Shatters

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Celtics have lost their first game of the season at home and the Philadelphia 76ers have lost their first backboard. Darryl Dawkins, the 6-foot-11½, 252-pound center who has specialized in awe-inspiring slam dunks throughout his career with the 76ers, pulled the rim off the backboard with a dunk during Philadelphia's 132-120 victory over the San Antonio Spurs Wednesday night. The resulting hole caused the glass to shatter down on top of Dawkins, who also shattered a backboard at Kansas City Nov. 13.

"It's an exciting thing, bringing down the hoop," said Dawkins. "My contract is coming to an end and maybe I'll be able to put more people into the arena — and the more people I bring out, the more money I might get in my contract."

Meanwhile, the Atlanta Hawks handed the Celtics their first National Basketball Association loss in 12 games at home this season as John Drew scored 22 points, all in the second half, and Eddie Johnson added 21 in a 120-92 wipeout.

In other NBA games, the New Jersey Nets whipped the Phoenix Suns 115-100, the New York Knicks outlasted the Washington Bullets 107-104, the Indiana Pacers beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 118-99, the Los Angeles Lakers outscored the Houston Rockets 116-114, the Kansas City Kings topped the Detroit Pistons 109-93, the Denver Nuggets swamped the Milwaukee Bucks 123-107, the Golden State Warriors topped the Chicago Bulls 97-90 and the Seattle SuperSonics tackled the Utah Jazz 115-96.

Dawkins' dunk with 6:42 left in the game was the 13th and 14th points of 20 he scored for the game, which had to be delayed for 1 hour, 14 minutes while workers installed a new backboard.

Coach Billy Cunningham said he would "never tell Darryl not to dunk for two reasons. One, that's a high percentage shot and two, it's intimidating. Players have a tendency to back off."

Julius Erving led Philadelphia scorers with 28 points, while George Gervin had 42 for San Antonio.

Nuggets 123, Bucks 107 Milwaukee had swamped Denver by 57 points in a pair of October victories, but the Nuggets got great inside play from Dan Issel and George Johnson to turn the tables this time.

Issel collected a game-high 36 points and 16 rebounds, while Johnson, subbing for the injured George McGinnis, scored 15 points and also had 16 rebounds.

Lakers 116, Rockets 114 Norm Nixon scored 26 points, including the game-winning

Retired Army Colonel Runs Truckers' School

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — What do you do when you see a car with a "student driver" sign on it? Correct. Give it room.

Well, good buddy, what would you do if you were cruising down the highway and came upon an 18-wheeler rambling along with "student driver" in letters two-feet high spread across it?

You give it room, all right, plenty of room. Curious though, you follow it.

It leads you to a big lot on the edge of town where a whole gang of similar trucks are backing and hissing and growling their way through mazes of tires laid out on the ground.

"Welcome to the Memphis Professional Truck Driver Training Facility," Chuck Hall said.

Hall is a retired army colonel who decided to capitalize on 22 years experience as a motor officer by operating a trucker school, one of only about two dozen in the country.

"The course takes four weeks, eight hours a day," he said. "Don't worry. We don't let them out on the highway until they're well along in their driving skills. Jack Dodds sees to that."

Dodds is chief instructor. He is a patient man with a deep, calming voice. In stature, though, he is not one you would pick out as a truck driver. In the cab, he pulls the seat forward. He is 5-foot-8, weighs about 150.

One who menaces the mailbox every time he backs the family car out of the driveway can only marvel at the way Jack Dodds handles a semi. His precision is surgical.

"There aren't many experiences I haven't had with a truck since I began driving," he said.

That would be since the day he dropped in at a lumber company in Lewiston, Idaho, just after World War II, looking for work. "Can you drive a truck?" he was asked. "Yes," he lied, and spent the next 30 years on the road, coast to coast.

"I don't do any more over-the-road driving," he said. "I'm retired from that. But I can teach how to drive a truck."

"These students are totally green so I try to give them the benefit of my experience, too — like the way you feel crossing Whitebird Pass in Montana with ice on the road and 36 tons behind you, or coming down The Grapevine between Bakersfield and Los Angeles, or Jacob's Ladder in the Massachusetts Berkshires."

Dodds swung up into the cab of a student-driver truck, slid the seat forward, threw the shift into reverse.

"If you're driving in, say, Brooklyn, you don't have much room to maneuver. You only get one shot. The idea is to back up to that loading dock and stick the truck between the black lines. They are eight feet apart, the width of the truck."

The truck rumbled backward in a clean arc and stopped with two hisses of the brakes. The trailer was precisely between the black lines, precisely one inch away from the loading dock.

Dodds swung down. "It's done with the mirrors," he said.

TO RETIRE — Irish Prime Minister Jack Lynch, 62, announced Wednesday he will retire from politics at the end of this year. Leader of the ruling Fianna Fail Party since 1966, Lynch was prime minister from 1966 to 1973. His current term began in July 1977. (AP Laserphoto)

U.S. Finally Planning A Quick Deployment Force

A CAT FOR THE BIRDS — Tiger, a cat owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Rogers of Curtis Drive in Athens, Ga., makes himself at home in a neighbor's bird feeder. It's doubtful this approach will net him any birds since no bird food is being placed in the feeder. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration planners have proposed spending up to $9 billion over the next five years to equip U.S. military forces for quick crisis deployment to the Persian Gulf and other key areas.

Sources said President Carter has not yet approved the huge program, but its prospects appear bright because of growing U.S. concern for safeguarding American interests in the volatile oil-producing Middle East.

Major spending would be devoted to buying about 50 advanced CX jet transports to help overcome a serious shortage in military cargo airlift. These new planes would be designed to haul tanks, other heavy Army equipment and bulk supplies over long distances.

The program also calls for buying 16 special new depot ships, costing over $100 million apiece, which would be anchored in strategically located ports abroad to await Marines flown from the United States in emergencies.

Much of the funding would go to pack these ships with ammunition, tanks, artillery, fuel, food and other vital material.

While there is a shortage in heavy cargo planes, experts anticipate no major problems in mustering enough aircraft to carry troops as passengers with only their personal weapons and equipment. If necessary, the Pentagon can mobilize civilian airliners for this purpose.

So far, Pentagon officials have not given a clear definition of the respective roles to be played by Marine and Army troops in the projected "rapid deployment" scenarios.

Maj. Gen. Paul X. Kelley, a top Marine manager, said Wednesday that Defense Secretary Harold Brown has approved a concept under which Marine air-ground forces totaling about 45,000 men could be flown overseas to operate independently for as long as 30 days with "beans and bullets" drawn from depot ships.

The objective is to achieve such a capability by the mid-1980s, but Kelley said it may be possible to project a more limited force of about 16,500 men in this way by 1983.

Kelley's outline suggested the Marines might form the spearpoint for swift U.S. military action in future crises in remote areas.

However, Pentagon officials said they also are counting on the Army to form a parallel rapid-deployment force of about 110,000 men.

With Brown's blessing, Army planners are moving to shape such a force so it can fight without reinforcement or resupply for up to 60 days in distant theaters such as the Mideast.

The Marine and Army forces would give decision-makers a choice of options in specific crisis circumstances.

Instead of drawing their supplies and equipment from "pre-positioned" depot ships like the Marines, Army troops would use material airlifted from the United States. The heavy cargo would be carried in the proposed CX transports as well as in the current 70 giant Air Force C-5s and 271 smaller C-141s. As part of the airlift expansion effort, all C-141s would be lengthened by mid-1982 to carry more tonnage.

There are still potential political problems that U.S. diplomats and other leaders must resolve before a rapid-deployment force can be assured. A principal problem will be to line up friendly countries strategically located and willing to allow U.S. transport planes put troops down on their airfields, and to permit the U.S. Navy to moor depot ships in their waters.

CONTROL YOUR DEBTS

If your present bills, because of economic pressures, cannot be met by your income, legal relief may be available to you under the provisions of Chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which permits individuals to petition the Court for an arrangement allowing a thirty-six month period to discharge indebtedness, without property repossession or creditor harassment. Attorney's fees, which may be paid in monthly installments, are determined by the Court. There is no fee for an initial conference to discuss your eligibility for a "Wage Earner Plan".

Finance Officer Avers School Sums Well-Used

According to Pitt County Schools Finance Officer Dan Thomas, the county school system is making wise use of its money.

According to information compiled by the Local Government Commission, the county school system's central office is one of seven out of 39 school systems to have all its money invested.

In the individual school funds category, Pitt County is one of six systems in the 39-member group having more money invested than not invested.

According to Thomas, the above information may sound confusing, but really isn't. Following the passage of the School Budget and Fiscal Control Act of 1976, all school systems' finances are managed by school finance officers, who are responsible for investing idle cash in the central office and the individual schools.

Each year, money is budgeted for the schools, and is delivered to school accounts in one lump sum. Thomas, working with a local bank, has arranged for all money to be set in a savings account.

"Each day, we start off with a zero balance in our checking account," explained Thomas. "At the end of the day, the bank calls to clear checks that have come in against our account, and we authorize them to draw the needed money out of the savings account."

Thomas said that individual schools place their money in savings accounts over the summer months in order to build up interest. Some also opt for buying short-term bonds, taking the interest earned to put toward school activities.

Out of the 137 school systems in the Local Government Commission survey, Pitt County was one of 19 schools having all its money invested on the central office level. It was also one of 26 out of the 137 to have more money invested than not invested in the individual school category.

"School units have not been as concerned as they should be about investing idle cash," said Thomas. "I feel that from this report, we stack up really well."

Fleeing Threats In Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Robert Cox, the British editor of the English-language newspaper Buenos Aires Herald, said he and his family are leaving for England next week because of repeated threats against his life.

Cox, 45, said in a brief statement in the paper Tuesday that the life of his 10-year-old son was also threatened in a letter the child received. He and his wife have four other children also.

The editor in his paper expressed constant concern for human rights and regularly denounced both left-wing and right-wing terrorists. Sources close to the Herald said the death threats apparently came from ultra-rightist groups, which have the tacit support of Argentina's military government.

Stunned By Expulsion

STERLING, Va. (AP) — Sonia Johnson, stunned by her expulsion from the Mormon Church, vows to battle the church from state to state in her renewed campaign for ratification of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment.

"I can't wait to get into Missouri and Illinois. I just can't wait," she said after receiving word of her excommunication by registered mail Wednesday. "The Mormons have started an underground fire in those places ... and I've just got to put it out."

Neither state has ratified the amendment, which would prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex. If approved by 38 states, the ERA would become part of the U.S. Constitution.

The Mormon Church, known formally as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, opposes the ERA, saying it could destroy family structures. Church leaders contend they are not against equal rights for women, however.

The church, which initially said it would keep silent, issued a statement saying Mrs. Johnson was excommunicated because she knowingly preached false church doctrine, hurt the church's missionary work, and undermined church leaders by portraying them as woman-haters. Specific statements allegedly made by Mrs. Johnson were not provided.

Arnold Miller Out Of Hospital

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Former United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller, recovering from two heart attacks, has been released from the hospital.

Miller, 56, left Charleston Area Medical Center Wednesday, said hospital spokesman John Brown. Brown said Miller was let go after doctors performed tests that showed "he had good heart reserve or pumping function" and would not require heart surgery.

Miller resigned from the union almost three weeks ago, following the first of the attacks, and was replaced by Vice President Sam Church. He had another mild attack on Nov. 27.

Must Apply For Fuel Aid

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Wednesday that many people with low incomes who are eligible for one type of fuel assistance this winter may also be able to get additional funds.

However, unlike the main federally funded emergency program, recipients will have to apply directly for the money to agencies in their home counties.

The plan announced by Hunt Monday provides for a one-time direct payment by the state of $100 or $200 to those eligible for help under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. It also provides for a direct, one-time payment of $73 to those eligible for help under the Supplemental Security Income Program. Those payments will be sent directly by the state to recipients of those programs.

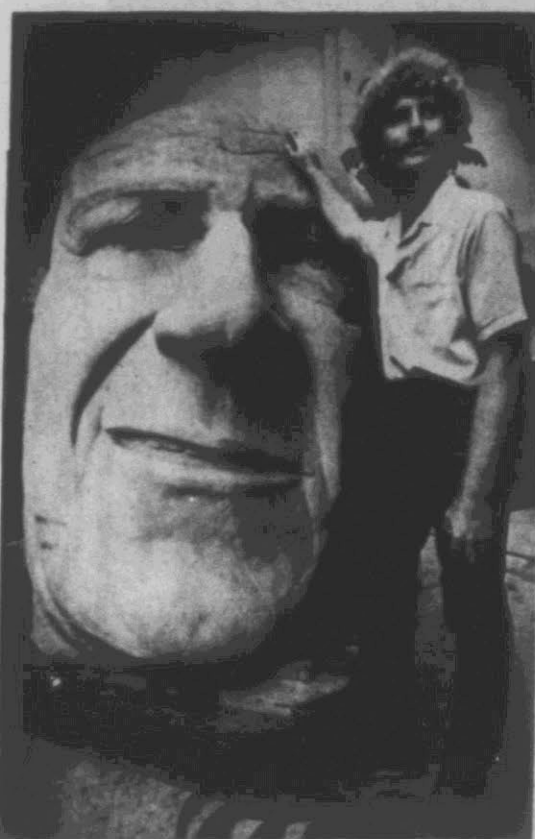

However, if those payments total less than $200, more money may be available, "if they go before the money runs out to the community action agency or the Social Services department in their county and ask for additional help," Hunt said.

"If they get their name in, and they qualify in time, before the money runs out, they can get additional money above the $73, up to $200," Hunt said.

The money is part of more than $29 million allocated to North Carolina for emergency fuel assistance this winter.

New Generation Plan Not Halted

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The fact that five county governments have refused to go along with the administration's New Generation Act will not stop the program from being developed statewide, Gov. Jim Hunt says.

Tuesday, Beaufort County became the fifth county to turn down the measure.

Hunt said Wednesday misinformation led the counties to refuse to establish local New Generation committees.

Hunt proposed the New Generation Act this year, which was enacted by the General Assembly. It calls for a statewide committee and local committees in each of the 100 counties to coordinate health care and other services for young children.

The program has been attacked by conservatives and fundamentalist church leaders who claim it is damaging to family control over children.

"That's not going to stop us from focusing on the needs of children," Hunt said. "As soon as the facts get out to people, I think the great majority of them will join in this...In time, the facts will get out."

But Hunt said his administration would not make a "project" out of convincing local officials to go along with the act by establishing the local committees.

"I think the county commissioners now see the need for it and as soon as they feel they can...they'll act on it," he added.

In recent weeks, Hunt has become concerned about opposition to the program. He held a briefing on the measure last week for editors, reporters and broadcasters from across the state.

Polk County commissioners have rejected the plan, and commissioners in Wilkes, Stokes and Moore counties have postponed the measure indefinitely.

Buncombe County has established a local New Generation committee, the governor said.

Operation Overcharge Files Rate Complaint

WASHINGTON — Operation Overcharge has filed a complaint with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, charging that high electric rates being charged by Virginia Electric and Power Co. in Northeastern North Carolina, are caused by poor management on the part of the company.

The complaint was filed Tuesday, J. Larkin Little, chairman of Operation Overcharge said.

Little said the complaint asks for three specific actions by the FERC.

First, that FERC conduct an impartial investigation of VEP-

CO's management in an effort to determine how much it is responsible for the high level of the company's wholesale rates. Second, that a study of electric rates in the region be made to determine how far VEPCO's rates are out of line with other suppliers, and thirdly, that FERC determine if VEPCO is charging its wholesale customers with costs of operations of plants that are not in operation, while purchasing current from other power companies.

"While we hope to get something done about wholesale electric rates," Little said, "the main objective is to get VEPCO out of North Carolina, because we don't think the company has the management expertise ever to provide parity in electric rates with other power suppliers in North Carolina.

Little also referred to an effort now underway by Operation Overcharge, to obtain 100,000 signatures on a petition asking VEPCO stockholders to cause the company to sell its system in North Carolina to another power supplier and to leave the state.

Post Office Cites Gifts

Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills of Greenville announced release of the U. S. Postal Service's 1979 Commemorative Mint Set and this year's edition of "Stamps and Stories," a Postal Service book on stamp collecting for the new collector and the experienced philatelist.

The 1979 Mint Set album contains all the 30 commemorative and special stamps issued by the U. S. Postal Service during 1979, including the 1979 Christmas stamps and a description.

The new, full-color sixth edition of "Stamps and Stories," is priced at $3.50. The 256-page booklet relates more than 100 collectors into the world of stamps.

Postmaster Mills noted that a number of popular topical stamp collecting kits priced at $2 each are available for beginning collectors. The kits feature such topics as "The World of Sports," and "Flowers," and each includes a 20-page album, mounting hinges, insert sheets, and a 32-page booklet, "The ABC's of Stamp Collecting."

Television Networks Tangled In Web Of Deceit On Air Time

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — The three television networks and the various presidential candidates are tangled in the web of deceit brought about by trying to circumvent section 315 of the federal communications regulations.

Representatives of each network appeared before the House communications subcommittee on Nov. 13, and were asked by chairman Lionel Van Deerlin, D-Calif., if they would like Congress to suspend the equal time provision of section 315 for the 1980 presidential campaign.

The answer was a unanimous yes, and one reason was the situation looming in Iowa in 1980.

Section 315 requires that all candidates for federal office be offered equal time by television stations. The law weighs Republicans, Democrats, Vegetarians and Flat Earth candidates equally.

In 1960 — a presidential election year in which neither major party candidate was an incumbent — Congress voted to suspend 315. That permitted the Nixon-Kennedy debates without which, according to the conventional wisdom, John Kennedy could not have been elected president.

In 1976, instead of trying to suspend 315 — something not accomplished since 1960, a scheme was evolved in which the League of Women Voters sponsored a debate between President Jerry Ford and candidate Jimmy Carter. The networks did not arrange the debate — they covered it as a news event. Networks are not required to give equal time in hard news coverage.

The fiction that the debate was a news event staged for reasons other than television coverage was neatly exposed by the technical failure that cut off the candidates' audio for 27 minutes in the first Carter-Ford debate.

The debate, allegedly being held for the edification of Women Voters and not for television, was halted until the sound problem was solved, while the President of the United States and his election opponent stood on stage and on camera like a couple of extras on a movie set.

This year the problem begins with the primaries, popularity and beauty contests that lead up to the political conventions. The headaches those pose have all three networks more anxious than ever to get rid of 315.

The first headache of 1980 begins with the Iowa caucuses in January. As a warmup, the Des Moines Register & Tribune is sponsoring a pair of debates — among Republican presidential hopefuls on Jan. 5, and Democratic aspirants on Jan. 7. The television networks are trying to work out live coverage, and CBS has been picked to handle pool coverage of both debates.

NBC tentatively has decided to cover both debates live, CBS almost surely will cover the Democrats live but harbors doubts about the Republicans, and ABC is undecided on live coverage.

All three networks want more details on the debates. Additionally, the Republican debate has engendered less interest because GOP front-runner Ronald Reagan so far has refused to appear.

The Democratic debate presents the biggest 315 problem, because it has been set up as a Carter-Kennedy debate, excluding California Gov. Jerry Brown, an avowed candidate with minimum standing in polls to date. Brown now has established an Iowa campaign office and begun to campaign there in his attempt to be included.

"Who's a candidate in the Iowa caucuses? It's hard to divine," said ABC news executive Jeff Gralnick. "It's not the kind of thing where you file or do something with the secretary of state. It's very informal."

The networks have no input into which candidates are allowed to take part in the Iowa debates, but news executives feel a responsibility to give Brown a chance to go on the record, along with President Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy.

"What to do with Jerry Brown" was the question posed by Burton Benjamin, CBS vice president and director of news. "If we go to him for his responses, then the other two candidates can ask for equal time under 315."

He suggested the way to handle the problem of an excluded candidate might be to include coverage of his responses in a regularly scheduled newscast, thus exempt from 315.

Hotly contested primaries will be the rule, not the exception, in 1980 and the League of Women Voters reportedly is considering holding debates in four of them, which would present the networks with similar 315 problems.

Then there's the big debate — between the man the Republicans pick in Detroit in July and the candidate the Democrats nominate in New York in August.

All three networks would cover any debate between the presidential candidates sponsored by the League of Women Voters or other responsible organizations.

But — and it is a big one — a source of the Federal Communications Commission warns that the 1980 FCC is composed of different commissioners than it was in 1976 and it should not be taken for granted, despite precedent, that the FCC again would allow the networks to circumvent 315.

"We'll face that problem when the time comes," said Les Crystal, NBC senior executive producer of politics and special programs.

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

Dear Charlie:

I have come to the conclusion that I make people nervous when I kibitz them!

At Deauville, I was sitting and watching a sweet young thing handle the South cards. She opened the hand one spade and, when her partner responded two clubs, she blithely chose to rebid two no trump, disdaining her diamond suit completely and having full faith that nature would provide a heart stopper. Actually, this did little harm, for the hand clearly should be played in three no trump, which was duly reached by North's next bid. Notice, however, that the no trump game would have been impregnable with North as declarer.

West led the six of hearts, declarer played low and East won the queen. A heart was returned, covered by the nine, ten and ace. Now everything hinged on the spade finesse. When that failed, the whole exercise was written off to bad luck.

In fact, South didn't know how to take advantage of a "lucky" lie of the cards. Unearthing the winning line didn't even need higher math, just simple logic.

If you apply the Rule of Eleven to the opening lead, you find that East started with only one card higher than the six. West would probably have led an honor had his suit been headed by the K-Q-10, so it was logical to assume that East held one of those cards. South claimed that she realized that, but she hoped that the lead was away from the king-queen and that the jack would win the first trick.

The flaw in that argument is obvious. The correct play to trick one is dummy's ace of hearts. If West has a four-card suit, the contract cannot finesse is taken into the safe hand.) Playing low wins only if East has the ten. Thus, going up with the ace will gain in two cases instead of one, so it must be the superior play.

Sincerely,
Omar

Cure For Overspending Proves An Experience

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
MIDDLETON, Wis. (AP) — Last week, when the holiday allure appeared in earnest at the shopping malls, Jeanne Fioretto scissored to shreds two very worn credit cards.

It did not surprise her that her hands shook. She knew all along there would be nothing easy about taking the cure.

"It was a big step," she said, "but only a step. I have yet to say to a persuasive salesperson, 'No, thank you. I just don't want to buy it.' When I can say that, I will figure I have the disease cured. No, not cured, but arrested."

Jeanne Fioretto is the head of an organization she formed by putting a classified ad in the paper: "Overspenders Anonymous. Call 831-8433." That was all it said. It said it all.

"I got lots of calls. Some were from people who just needed help managing a budget. I knew that wasn't my problem, because I had studied myself and knew what my problem was. I was looking for people with my problem, and I found them.

"I'm not dumb. I know you must not spend more than you have, and I know how to add and subtract and figure interest."

"Yet I was always up against it, financially. It turns out that many others have the same problem, the same disease. Our dependency is not satisfied in a saloon, but a shopping center."

"Look at me. I have a walk-in closet that won't hold another coathanger. I can't walk into it anyhow because the floor is covered with shoes. I give away clothes I haven't even worn."

Jeanne Fioretto is a woman in her early 30s, divorced, mother of a 9-year-old, former model (size 8), editor of a professional journal, modestly salaried. She talks a mile a minute and, until lately, spent at about the same rate.

"What I discovered about myself is that when I'm depressed, low, angry, sorry for myself, I solve it by buying something."

"In that state, I'm a push-over. I know I don't need the item, don't even want it, really, but if the clerk pushes the right button, I'm lost. Sometimes all it takes is, 'I'll gift-wrap it,' or, 'I can have it ready by Friday.' Any pitch at all."

"So I formed this group, Overspenders Anonymous. All of us don't have the same problems, but we have the same symptoms."

"We meet once a week. We're just getting started, but we already have helped one another, and we have plans."

"When one of us is in a store, weakening, he can phone a member, just like Alcoholics

Death Halts 'Outings'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Wilderness Institute called Wednesday for a temporary halt to all state-affiliated wilderness outings in the wake of a canoe accident that left a youth dead.

Eric Kelsey, 15, died last week after he spent 40 to 50 minutes in the water at Lake James in Burke County after his canoe capsized. The water temperature was about 50 degrees, officials said.

Kelsey was attending Camp Woodson, a pre-release facility in McDowell County for juvenile offenders. The program is administered by the Department of Human Resources.

The department is investigating the death and initiating a "review of criteria" governing outings in the state-run wilderness programs, said June Milby, department spokesman.

The wilderness institute, in a letter to Gov. Jim Hunt, said Kelsey's death was "completely inexcusable and illustrates the need for the development of professional standards for the safe conduct of therapeutic wilderness outings."

Kelsey died of hypothermia, a condition in which the body temperature falls far below normal.

The institute is a non-profit wilderness school and an environmental research facility. Its headquarters is in Greensboro.

Costs Hurt Carers For Mentally Ill

By BARRY JAMES

GEEL, Belgium (UPI) — For more than 700 years, this small town in northern Belgium has provided a collective home for the mentally ill and retarded.

It was offering humane treatment before psychiatry was even dreamt of and when theologians were debating whether women had souls.

Now Geel's still-unique tradition of civic concern is threatened by lack of money and political interest — just when this kind of "anti-psychiatry" is attracting interest in the United States and elsewhere.

Of the 1,300 mental patients registered in and around Geel, more than 1,000 live in local homes as paying houseguests for indefinite periods, indeed, sometimes for their entire lives.

But the number of patients housed by families is dropping fast.

Before World War II, nearly 4,000 patients lived in Geel, many of them working as cheap labor on the small farms dotting the region. There were so many, in fact, that it used to be said that the whole of Geel was half mad and half was completely mad.

"The importance of Geel lies not only in the fact that patients are lodged in ordinary homes and are allowed to share ordinary lives, but also in the town's totally supportive nature," said Psychiatrist Jean Roosens, a professor at Louvain Catholic University, who has written a book about Geel.

The book, "Mental Patients In Town Life," is to be published in English at the end of 1979.

By "totally supportive," Roosens means that over the centuries, Geel has learned how to deal with mental distress. The ethics of the town forbid poking fun at patients or referring to them as "nutcases" or similar epithets, Roosens said.

This gives patients a sense of security, as they go to shops and cafes, run errands for neighbors, do odd-jobs and take part in local cultural and sports activities.

At the same time, Roosens said, as the patients rub shoulders with "normal" people, they learn what kind of behavior is expected of them — something that would not be the case if they only mingled with other patients in a traditional mental hospital.

The peculiar status of Geel has its roots in the legend of St. Dymphna, the patroness of demoniacs. The legend says Dymphna was an Irish princess, who fled to Geel to escape the attentions of her incestuous father and was beheaded by him here.

In the middle ages, when madness was equated with possession by demons, people flocked to Geel for a cure which started with a novena in the local church. Dymphna has since been scratched off the Catholic calendar of saints. But Geel's system of family care was given legal status in the last century. Brussels closed its own mental asylum and sent more than 100 patients to Geel.

A central psychiatric hospital was built in 1882 and exists, greatly expanded, today. Long-term patients are first assessed at the hospital, then sent to a foster family if it is thought this would help their treatment and presents no danger.

The hospital sends nurses and social workers to keep an eye on the patients, and provides supporting facilities. Patients too ill, old or intractable to be lodged with a family are housed in open or closed sections at the hospital.

Boards who get too restless or who misbehave usually are warned, "be careful, or we'll have you locked up in the hospital," Roosens said. "One thing is quite clear. The patients all want to stay with their foster families."

According to Roosens and other experts, the low level of economic support given the foster families is threatening Geel's unique system. A subsidy of about $3.60 a day is paid for each patient. This has to cover food and board.

Politically, Geel has been given little support by health authorities. Available money instead goes to traditional institutions. Until recently, Geel had only two part-time psychiatrists. Now, a few clinical psychologists have been added to the hospital staff, but they deal only with the in-patients, not the boarders.

Roosens said an economic incentive for families to take in mental patients must be restored.

ERA Dissent Is Hot Issue Inside Mormon Church

By DAVID BRISCOE
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Mormon Church boasts that predominantly Mormon Utah gave women the vote 50 years before the 19th Amendment.

But its stand against another amendment — that proposing equal rights for women — has embroiled the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in controversy, culminating Wednesday with the excommunication of Sonia Johnson, who campaigned for the ERA.

The church opposes the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, saying it would destroy family structure, and for years has used its influence against the ERA across the country.

—The Utah Legislature — 70 percent controlled by Mormons — rejected the ERA in 1975. This year it voted to ban reconsideration forever.

—In 1977, the church was accused of stacking the Utah convention at which delegates were chosen for the National Women's Conference in Houston. Feminists said 2,000 women were expected but 14,000 came, responding to an appeal from the Mormon Women's Relief Society.

Feminists said Mormons tried the same tactics in other states, with varying success. The church said the delegates were free to vote as they pleased.

—In Montana earlier this year, busloads of people led by Patrick Sherrill of Orem, Utah, — dubbed "the Mormon from Orem" — rallied in support of efforts to nullify the state's earlier ERA ratification.

—In Mrs. Johnson's home state of Virginia, an LDS Citizens Coalition was organized against the amendment, claiming 16,000 members.

—Church Apostle Boyd Packer was investigated in 1977 by the Idaho secretary of state's office after women's groups accused him of illegal lobbying against the ERA in a speech. The secretary of state decided Packer was exercising free speech.

—The most open Mormon anti-ERA activity came this year in a document opposing extension of the ratification deadline, submitted to a Congressional committee. The church maintained the extension would divide the nation, harm women's interests, damage the Constitution and be "deeply offensive to any sense of fairness."

Meanwhile, the states of Idaho and Arizona and legislators in Washington state have filed suit opposing the three-year ratification extension granted the ERA this year — and the federal judge hearing the case is the highest Mormon official in Boise, U.S. District Judge Marion Callister has been asked to disqualify himself by the Justice Department. Callister says he sees no conflict of

Faster Results From Primary

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Faster results from New Hampshire's presidential primary next year are expected with a streamlined ballot and a growing number of communities using voting machines.

Secretary of State William Gardner said ballots in the Feb. 26 primary, the first in the nation, will list only the names of the presidential and vice presidential candidates. As many as 270 names appeared on the ballot in the 1976 primary when the state's voters elected national convention delegates.

interest. The women's issue has created more dissent — both within the tight-knit Mormon community and against it — than any issue since polygamy, abandoned by the church in 1890, and the church's now-abandoned denial of priesthood to blacks.

Mildred Jeffrey, chairman of the National Women's Political Caucus, says the church is "one of the leading proponents of sex discrimination in the country."

In uncommon open disagreement with official church position, many Mormons support the amendment, including

Utah Gov. Scott Matheson. Even President Carter has been drawn into the controversy. When Carter came to Utah earlier this year to accept a family award from the church, women's groups attempted unsuccessfully to stop him.

The 4.5 million-member church says it has a "very deep and everlasting commitment to the preservation and strengthening of the family." It views the ERA as a threat to the family and to women.

"We fear it will even stifle many God-given feminine instincts," says the church's ruling First Presidency. "It would strike at the family, humankind's basic institution."

The church says it supports equal rights for women, but believes the amendment is too broad. It has never openly ordered its members to work against the ERA, but it has contacted local church leaders and urged them to organize opposition to the amendment.

In an October 1978 letter to local church leaders, the First Presidency said the issue was moral rather than political.

"Because of our serious concern, we urge our people to join actively with other citizens who share our concern on the basis of its threat to the moral climate of the future," the letter said.

Mrs. Johnson, who is head of Mormons for ERA, learned of her excommunication at her Sterling, Va., home via registered letter from her bishop, Jeff Willis. In the letter, Willis said that her offense was not in supporting the ERA but in how she did it.

"Your testimony and public speeches evidence in spirit that you are not in harmony with church doctrine concerning the nature of God and the manner in which he directs his church on Earth," Willis wrote.

Mrs. Johnson said Wednesday that at her three-hour church trial last Saturday night she had denied two conclusions Willis reached: that she had urged people to keep Mormon missionaries out of their homes and that she had characterized church leaders as women haters, or misogynists.

She said her statements about missionaries were political rather than religious. She said she had urged ERA supporters to demand that Mormon missionaries listen to their feminist beliefs in exchange for listening to their gospel message.

And she said it was not the church, but Western society, which she had labeled "a savage misogyny." She acknowledged one charge, however, that she has taught that the church is dedicated to imposing its moral directives on Americans.

"The church is trying to get every legislature either to rescind or kill the ERA," said Mrs. Johnson, adding that she would continue to campaign for the ERA and would travel to Illinois and Missouri for that purpose.

"My word," she said in a tearful interview from her home, "how can you call yourself a Christian and not believe and not work for equality of all people?"

REACTS TO NEWS — Mrs. Sonia Johnson appears outside her Sterling, Va., home Wednesday afternoon after receiving word of her excommunication from the Mormon Church for what she says are her supportive activities aimed at ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment. (AP Laserphoto)
