

Greenville Native Describes Escape From Besieged Embassy

of about 100 people under siege in an attack on the embassy on November 21, and was in Greenville Wednesday to see his mother, a few friends and relatives before returning to Washington.

By JERRY RAYNOR

"I've been in bad fixes when I was in Vietnam, but never in any situation before with less options open to me." Lt. Colonel J. Ficklen Arthur commented in talking about surviving the November 21 mob attack on the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan. Colonel Arthur is a Greenville native.

A career Army man with 19 and one-half years service, Colonel Arthur was in Greenville for less than a full day Wednesday, "mainly to see my mother and to let her see with her own eyes that I'm all right, and to see friends and relatives for a short time before having to return to Washington."

It was on Thanksgiving eve — November 21, that the first inkling of trouble developed.

"But even before the attack, a limited number of Iranians had been acting up, so that we anticipated some possible type of demonstration," Colonel Arthur explained. "The embassy political officer had reminded the Pakistani Ministry of Foreign Affairs that the security of the U.S. Embassy was a responsibility of the Pakistani government. Pakistani officials said they would increase security, and they did, upping from one to 16 the number of guards."

Then, according to Arthur, on the morning of November 21 "the Pakistani security force was cut to eight. This was done probably because the Pakistani president was making a tour of a bicycle race in the nearby city of Rawalpindi."

First Attack At Noon
"The first attack, at noon," Arthur said, "was by kids who came up in two buses. They shouted and threw rocks."

"Then, at 12:30, Colonel George Woods, the Army Attache, put out the alert notice for possible further demonstrations and attacks."

From that point on, the tempo of attacks and the numbers of demonstrators accelerated. "At 12:45 about 15 to 20 bus loads of people arrived before the embassy, and the demonstrators grew in number from about 500 to a thousand or more in a matter of a few minutes."

Arthur said Pakistani security police began to arrive on the scene. They fired several times over the heads of demonstrators, who retreated. But each time, professional agitators rounded up the crowd together again, and told them the police would not really harm them, that they were only firing over their heads."

Colonel Arthur, who said they could see these developments from the embassy building, reported "it was during this time that demonstrators started setting cars afire outside the compound."

Police Stoned

"By a quarter to two, the crowd broke through the wall, engulfed the embassy grounds. They began breaking out windows, firing up into the third floor, and broke into the embassy's first floor."

"It was during this time that Corporal Crowley (Marine Corporal Steven Crowley, one of two casualties of the Islamabad attacks) was wounded. Crowley was standing guard on the roof in an effort to keep demonstrators from gaining access to the roof.

"A Pakistani police lieutenant led a charge against the mob. But some of his troops didn't follow him, and some of the mob stoned the policeman, took his weapons and used them to fire on the embassy."

Organized For Protection

As demonstrators continued to press into the area and intensified their attacks, the U.S. marines stood their ground against those who had broken into the first floor. "While the marines were holding off attackers with tear gas, all personnel not essential to helping in this defense were assembled and taken to an upstairs hall."

"At 2:30, the embassy's political officer had authorized us to fire weapons to protect our lives."

"We organized into two groups, a command group and a defense group and issued 38's (pistols) and the few shotguns stored in the embassy. The marines were still firing tear gas, holding off attackers who had by this time set fire to the first floor and were firing up into the second and third floors."

"The defense team consisted of myself, an Army captain, two drug enforcement officers and a couple of others. The marines were bushed, just about overcome with smoke and tear gas. We shepherded them and all embassy employees into the third floor vault, and held our position at the head of the third floor stairs while those in the command group destroyed documents."

Final Refuge

"At 2:30 we were still holding, but the bottom two floors were by then on fire, so we knew the time had come for us to join the others in the vault."

The third floor vault of the embassy in Islamabad, Colonel Arthur explained, consists of three large rooms with a hatch area that leads to the roof of the building.

"Altogether, there were about 100 of us, male and female, military and non-military, American and Pakistani employees of the embassy who took refuge in the vault."

Hold Out Hours

Once secured within the strongly built vault, those inside could only wait and see, and wonder how long it would

World Trade Embargo Against Iran Considered

By PYE CHAMBERLAYNE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter is considering seeking a world trade embargo against Iran — including food — and has told Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to discuss the matter with European leaders, it was learned Saturday.

The president thinks Iran already is suffering from a shortage of imported goods in general.

While Carter would not single out food from other goods, he is considering imposition of a general trade embargo against Iran to resolve the 35-day-old crisis and free 50 American being held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Carter's detailed views were learned under White House ground rules forbidding attribution to the source.

Carter has spoken on the phone about the Iranian crisis with major U.S. allies, including British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Canadian Prime Minister Joe Clark and Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira. He feels the allies have done what he has asked of them.

He is sending Vance to Europe today to seek advice, counsel and support. It also was learned:

—The crisis has lengthened the president's workday and interrupted his sleep with middle-of-the-night telephone calls from senior advisers. But he expresses confidence in his ability to deal with it.

—He recognizes the Iranian crisis has helped him politically and thinks it has disproven Sen. Edward Kennedy's charges he lacks ability to lead the nation.

—He is leaving the door open to an international inquiry into Iranian charges against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi, but not until the hostages are freed.

—He does not feel the crisis has eased substantially. In fact, Carter is not even sure how many hostages actually are held, or even if all are alive.

The president believes that by freezing Iranian assets in the United States, he has made it all but impossible for Iran to import American food or other goods. At the same time, Carter thinks shipments of food to Iran from the Soviet Union have been reduced due to Russia's own poor harvest and enormous grain import requirements.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is making stops in London, Paris, Bonn, Rome and Brussels next week and he will discuss the possibility of a general embargo with America's allies. As Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher put it, Vance will discuss "collective action ... of an economic nature."

The president welcomes the fact that Europe and Japan have at least passively supported the American decision to freeze billions of dollars in Iranian assets, it was learned. He feels foreign banks as well as governments have done nothing to circumvent America's economic pressure on Iran and thinks this amounts to cooperation.

As for the future of the shah, Carter is aware of Iranian calls for a special world commission to conduct an inquiry into his years as a ruler, but the president feels any such hearing would be more appropriately done in an established forum, such as the United Nations or the World Court — after the hostages are released.

Carter also appears to have softened his stance on trials of the American hostages on espionage charges. Clearly Carter opposes the idea, but he is careful to distinguish between trials and any physical injury to the hostages.

The president is well aware of the political repercussions of the crisis. He appears pleased that the positive impact of the situation on his political standing occurred so soon after Kennedy announced he was seeking the Democratic presidential nomination.

Day Of Prayer

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has proclaimed today a day of prayer in North Carolina for the American hostages in Iran. Hunt also called on the state's churches to ring their bells at noon each day as a show of support and concern for the hostages. "Let us ask for the safe return of the American hostages to their country and to their families and friends," Hunt said in issuing the proclamation Saturday. "Let us pray for guidance and wisdom for the president to lead the country to a peaceful agreement," he said. (AP Laserphoto)

Union Carbide Pledges $9,000

The Union Carbide Corporation, Greenville Plant, recently completed its United Way campaign, with an increase of 54.2 per cent over last year's contribution.

The plant raised $9,063.10 in the recent campaign, with an average of $22.47 per employee. According to Steve Perry, plant manager, 89 per cent of Union Carbide's employees participated in the fund drive.

New Cabinet

By DONAL O'HIGGINS
DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — Premier-designate Charles Haughey, who made one of the most dramatic comebacks in modern Irish political history, worked Saturday to form a Cabinet likely to be dominated by his opponents.

Haughey was elected leader of the ruling Fianna Fail Party — the Soldiers of Destiny — by a six-vote margin Friday. Ballots showed only one of the present Cabinet ministers chose Haughey against current Vice Premier George Colley.

The bulk of Haughey's support in the 44-38 vote came from bankbench party members, most of them not considered Cabinet material.

Only Foreign Minister Michael O'Kennedy was known to have supported Haughey.

Before An International Panel Iran To Parade "Spies"

By RAYMOND WILKINSON
TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Iran's foreign minister said Saturday "spies" among the 50 American hostages in Tehran would be paraded before an international panel of "anti-imperialists" charged with investigating U.S. espionage.

In a carefully phrased four-point statement, Foreign Minister Sadegh Qotbzadeh said, "The imam (Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini) is determined that the crimes of the American government against our people should be revealed to the world."

He defended the seizure of the U.S. Embassy 35 days ago and said the Islamic government would pursue deposed shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi and members of the royal family "wherever they may be."

"What happened in the American spy nest was not just a simple hostage taking, resulting from the emotions of some youths but it is a revealing, revolutionary and aware action on the international level," Qotbzadeh said.

In Washington President Carter was also leaving the door open to an international inquiry into Iranian charges against the shah — but not until the hostages are freed safely.

Qotbzadeh said the international panel, "with the cooperation of all anti-imperialists and anti-Zionist groups in Iran and the world," would review "the dossier of crimes of the U.S. government in Iran."

Keeping up the pressure against the captives, the foreign minister said the American Embassy spies among the 50 hostages "acting under the guise of diplomats" would be paraded before this panel "in full view of the people of the world."

But he did not say whether the panel would be empowered to pass judgement on the captives, nor when it would be formed.

Diplomatic sources said the government might be seeking a face-saving compromise and could be paving the way for the release of the hostages after they were condemned by the so-called international commission — but before they actually stood trial before Islamic courts.

Brown Accuses Kennedy

By NORMAN D. SANDLER

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) — California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Saturday accused Sen. Edward Kennedy of playing into the hands of Iran's revolutionary Islamic government by criticizing deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Kennedy earlier this week called the 37-year reign of the shah "one of the most violent regimes in the history of mankind" and triggered a wave of criticism from the White House and other presidential candidates upset at his outspoken manner.

At the outset of an important weekend campaign trip that is taking him throughout Democratic strongholds of eastern Iowa, Brown said Kennedy had made "a major political blunder" in discussing the shah's regime while Americans still are being held at the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

"I criticize Sen. Kennedy for the blunder that he made because of his timing — because he has directed attention from our captive Americans in Iran over to the shah," he said.

"That plays into the Iranians' hands. He sides with Khomeini in effect. It makes it appear to them that they ought to hold out longer

Sad Aftermath Of Rock Concert Stampede

senior at Wyoming School, was among the eleven people killed in a stampede at a rock concert Monday night. (AP Laserphoto)

CINCINNATI (AP) — As white flowers, hung from the handle of a broken coliseum door, swayed in the breeze as a memorial to the rock fans who died there, relatives continued the work of burying the 11 young victims.

About 20 family members and friends of James Warmoth, 20, drove 40 miles after his funeral in Franklin on Friday to conduct a service on the plaza of Riverfront Coliseum. Warmoth was one of five victims buried Friday following the accident Monday that occurred when fans trampled each other rushing for the best seats at a concert of the rock group The Who.

One of Warmoth's relatives, Karen DeBrosse, relived for others at the service what happened to Warmoth.

"They all push and push forward, yet there is no place to go, for others are pushing back. Everyone is in such a hurry. Don't they see what's going on or don't they care anymore? Is there something more important than life itself? Evidently, music," she said.

"Thousands of people gathered in the same place where we gather today. I and the other members of my family want to see that this never happens again. We've brought these flowers here, where they, the 11, died, to ask that you don't let this die even if members of our family have died," Miss DeBrosse said.

Services also were held Friday for two young mothers, Connie Sue Burns of West Carroll and Teva Ladd of Cincinnati. Both had two children. Other services were for Walter Adams, 22, of Trotwood and Phillip Snyder, 20, of Franklin. Meanwhile, City Manager Sylvester Murray announced the appointment of a task force to review the accident, which has spawned a $27 million lawsuit.

The appointments included security specialists, a lawyer, a college student, a high school student, the head of a rock radio station, a businessman and a youth services planner.

Murray said the committee would not try to pinpoint responsibility for the incident. He said litigation would likely resolve that.

Mayor J. Kenneth Blackwell said the law committee of City Council will conduct the first of three public hearings on the tragedy Tuesday. The panel is considering laws banning general admission seating at rock concerts and giving police authority to take charge of concerts to avoid crowd problems.

Three City Mishaps

According to the Greenville Police Department, an estimated $1250 amount of property damage resulted from three automobile accidents Friday.

Police reported that a vehicle driven by Charles Douglas Harrison, 1017 Longshore Rd., Snow Hill, collided with a vehicle driven by Kathy Anderson Boseman, 129 Coward St., Ayden, on the service road behind Pitt Memorial Hospital at 11:40 a.m. Estimated damage to the Harrison vehicle was $150 and $200 to the Boseman vehicle.

A vehicle driven by John Piland Anders, 105 Charles St., Havelock, collided with a vehicle driven by Lynne Rollins, 506 E. Horne Ave., Farmville on E. Fourth St. at 12:03 p.m. Estimated damage to the Anders vehicle was $200 and $350 to the Rollins vehicle, police reported.

A vehicle driven by Jesse Lee Grimes, 1232 Farmville Blvd.,

collided with a vehicle driven by James Curtis Corey, 1101 Colonial Ave., on Farmville Blvd., at 5:14 p.m. According to police reports, estimated damage to the Grimes vehicle was $150 and $200 to the Corey vehicle.

Funeral After 18 Years

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The body of Thomas Willard Ray was buried Saturday in a cemetery in his hometown, almost 18 years after his plane was shot down over Cuba during the aborted Bay of Pigs invasion.

Family members wept quietly as a lone bugler played "taps" and the bursts of a 21-gun military salute filled the air. Military honor guards served as pallbearers at the funeral, attended by about 300 people.

Cuban authorities gave their permission last week for Ray's body to be flown home to Birmingham.

The body was frozen in an Havana morgue in 1961 after the pilot's plane was shot down over Cuba as he strafed and bombed Cuban troops. He crash-landed and was killed in a gunbattle with pro-Castro troops on the ground.

Janet Weinger, Ray's daughter, stood beside the American flag-draped coffin and spoke of her father.

She said she asked for a rendition of the song "Never Walk Alone" at the funeral because "he walked that last mile alone after getting out of his crashed airplane."

"I've been running that last mile with him for 18 years," she said, her voice breaking with emotion.

With Mrs. Weinger were her brother, Tom Ray, and their mother, Margaret Hooks of Selma, who remarried several years after Ray died.

Also attending the funeral were former Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace and Rep. John Buchanan, R-Ala.

Ray was buried in a sun-splashed cemetery located next to the Birmingham airport, where Mrs. Weinger said her father often went as a child to watch planes land and take off.

Ray and other members of the Alabama National Guard were recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency to train anti-Castro troops to fly American B-26 bombers. When Cuban pilots died during the invasion, Ray and others began piloting the bombers.

It was on one of those runs that Ray's plane was shot down.

Sidestepping Iran's Oil Cutoff

By ROZ LISTON
United Press International
American oil companies are sidestepping the Iranian oil cutoff by buying Iranian crude from traders in other countries, oil analysts said Saturday.

Analysts said President Carter's decision to halt Iranian oil imports and Iran's embargo on oil sales to all U.S. companies was having only a minimal impact on U.S. petroleum supplies because the international oil industry can simply reroute oil traffic.

"All the oil Iran had agreed to sell to U.S. companies for the fourth quarter of this year has gone to Japanese interests," said Clifton Garvin, Jr., chairman of Exxon Corp. Energy specialists said the United States is purchasing Iranian oil indirectly — primarily from Japanese trading companies that have a crude surplus.

"Americans have not ceased to exist as buyers of Iranian oil," Petroleum Intelligence Weekly said in New York. "Traders from other countries are buying cargoes of Iranian oil that have changed hands many times for U.S. companies."

Some Japanese firms "apparently are reselling recently purchased Iranian oil at below cost," the authoritative oil journal said.

"Once crude is shipped through several ports under different flags, it's lost in the world market and impossible to trace," a New York analyst said.

"The Middle East producers tried to prevent their oil from reaching the United States during the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo and failed," he said. Even a partial loss of the 700,000 barrels a day of crude and refined products the United States had been receiving from Iran — or about 3.5 percent of daily U.S. oil use — won't be fully felt until mid-January when the last direct Iranian shipments are due to arrive. Analysts said severe shortages are unlikely because U.S. crude stocks are near record high levels and domestic energy demand is declining.

"Our oil needs are being met," said Joseph Tovey, a New York investment banker specializing in energy. "We don't have an oil shortage in the United States because the recession has reduced oil consumption."

"As long as Iranian production continues to go into the world market, the oil companies will be able to reshuffle supplies and avoid serious disruptions in U.S. supply patterns," a spokesman for Standard Oil Co. of California said.

Iran still is world's second largest oil exporter after Saudi Arabia despite a drop in current Iranian production to about 3.3 million barrels a day from 6.5 million barrels before the Islamic revolution in late 1978.

Even if Iran should cut production in an effort to stop its oil from seeping into the United States, the biggest losers would be nations other than the United States.

"It would be impossible for the Iranians to focus (any) shortages on the U.S. market

But Heritage estimated the cost of replacing Iranian oil on dependent Heritage Foundation the spot market, where crude in Washington, D.C., said. and refined products are sold to "The Iranian oil weapon is the highest bidder; could push therefore untargetable and the U.S. pump price for would inflict collateral damage gasoline to between $1.25 and in an indiscriminate manner on $1.30 a gallon by mid-February. a broad array of oil-importing Home-heating oil and diesel states that were in effect fuel could jump to "well over innocent bystanders." $1 a gallon," Heritage said.

Acknowledges Request For Soldier's Return

By PAUL SHIN
SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — North Korea Saturday acknowledged a request for the return of an American soldier missing and reported injured in a mine explosion in the communist sector of the demilitarized zone. But an official cable to the United Nations Command from the chief North Korean Armistice Commission delegates gave no indication if and when the soldier would be handed over. And a North Korean radio broadcast monitored in Tokyo condemned the incident as a "grave" violation of the armistice.

"The infiltration of armed U.S. personnel and a military helicopter into our portion of the demilitarized zone is a grave violation of the armistice agreement," the broadcast said.

It said Communist soldiers had fired warning shots at a U.S. military helicopter in the DMZ, normally off limits to aircraft. Three U.S. Army men apparently lost their way in dense fog and crossed to the communist side while on a routine patrol east of the truce village of Panmunjom, about 135 miles north of Seoul.

A spokesman for the United Nations Command said North Korea had "acknowledged" a request to return the soldier, missing after the blast at 2 p.m. Friday (midnight EST Thursday) in the 2½ mile wide demilitarized zone. Two other soldiers injured in the blast were safely evacuated to Seoul by helicopter. None of the three soldiers was identified.

Growing Opposition To Khomeini In Tabriz

TABRIZ, Iran (UPI) — The three-day occupation of Tabriz by Turkish-speaking Moslems picked up new support Saturday, confronting the Islamic regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini with a burgeoning revolt by Iran's ethnic minorities.

The Kurdish Democratic Party announced its backing for tens of thousands of Turkish-speaking Iranians who seized Tabriz — a city of 2 million and capital of Iran's Turkish minority — to press their opposition to the new Islamic constitution.

The Kurdish party also accused government forces of violating a cease-fire in Kurdish areas of the country. In a backlash in the capital of Tehran, revolutionary guards loyal to Khomeini stormed the office of human rights activist Arajhen Moghadam and seized six of his supporters though Moghadam himself escaped. Moghadam is considered an associate of Ayatollah Kazem Shariatmadari, the leader of the Turkish dissidents and champion of most of the country's minorities.

While Turkish demonstrators held Tabriz for a third day Saturday, the Kurdish Party said it supported their demands and accused government forces of violating a cease-fire reached several weeks ago after months of intermittent clashes in the Kurdish reas that resulted in hundreds of deaths.

The Kurds said revolutionary guards had been reinforced in several Kurdish cities and at least one — Sanandaj — had been virtually blockaded.

The question of the minorities and their demands for greater autonomy has been one of the thorniest and most persistent problems facing Khomeini since they overthrew Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's regime last February.

The simmering discord developed into a major crisis Wednesday when gunmen stormed Shariatmadari's home in the holy city of Qom, killing two guards and wounding 13 others in a shoot out.

Within hours tens of thousands of Shariatmadari's supporters seized Tabriz.

Saturday, despite appeals for national unity from Khomeini and creation of a special government trouble-shooting delegation, the dissidents kept a firm grip on the city.

Shariatmadari appealed for calm, but did not ask his supporters to withdraw. He insisted on some form of local government — avoiding the word autonomy — for the Turkish speaking provinces of east and west Azerbaijan.

Task Force To Be Named

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A special task force to be named by the Greensboro Human Relations Commission will conduct "an in-depth, analytical review" of events leading up to and during the Nov. 3 antiKlan rally that left five dead.

Commission director James F. Wright II said the study would probe more than just the Greensboro Police Department's role in the shootings at the "Death to the Klan" rally.

Investigating Assault

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are investigating allegations that members of a fraternity assaulted sorority members from nearby Duke University.

According to a complaint filed with UNC's Office of Student Affairs and its Student Honor Court, 19 members of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority were harassed, had drinks poured on them and were assaulted by members of the Zeta Psi fraternity at UNC at a Christmas party last Sunday.

The women say some fraternity members exposed themselves and pulled at the women's clothing, distributed "disgusting" presents and had put up obscene decorations at the fraternity house.

Security Tight

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Soldiers standing guard at Kelly Air Force Base Saturday carried automatic weapons and stood under newly installed bright lights illuminating barbed wire and sawhorse barriers at base entrances.

The scene was in stark contrast both to the base's usual easy accessibility and to the Christmas bells hanging overhead.

The unusually tight security was implemented Friday because base officials received reports of "possible covert activity that might endanger government lives and property" since the arrival last Sunday of the deposed shah of Iran.

Kelly AFB is about a mile from Lackland AFB. Kelly's huge runway, adjacent to Lackland, was where Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's plane touched down.

Good Boys Club Building Site

The Boys' Club of Pitt County board of directors has announced a new location for its building, and at the same time put the project out for bids.

Announcement of the actions was made Monday by President Buff Chalk.

The board had previously purchased a site on Greenville Boulevard on the eastern side of the city. Some objections were raised, apparently prompting the board to seek a new location.

The site chosen is on Arlington Boulevard adjacent to the Greenville Middle School.

We think the Boys Club board has made a good choice in the new location. It is on a street which will give quick access from all parts of the city, and it is also reasonably central to the city's residential areas.

The building fund solicitations are moving along well and it appears that this worthwhile facility will be assured.

The Boys' Club board of directors has planned carefully for the new building and it has wisely chosen a new and, we hope, better location as conditions changed.

The area can look forward to a new facility for carrying on the outstanding work of the Boys' Club.

Hospital Expansion Should Help Area

Ground was broken for the 144 bed tower addition to Pitt County Memorial Hospital in ceremonies held Wednesday.

The tower is to be financed with state funds through the ECU School of Medicine which shares the hospital, as a teaching facility, with the county.

The county originally built the hospital with two bedtowers; however the affiliation with the medical school quickly created the need for expansion.

Construction of the addition is now officially underway and the facilities should help to provide superior medical services to Eastern North Carolina.

Study Local Bond Votes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Governmental experts who seek to puzzle out the meanings in how citizens vote on local bond issues are spending extra time pondering the record in North Carolina so far this year.

Bond proposals by county governments have generally had a more difficult time than have those proposed by municipalities.

The reasons? Most municipal bond proposals involve water and sewer work. Voters tend to favor those projects. The big municipal losses in 1979 were proposed civic centers or arenas, and governmental buildings.

On the county bond slates, school construction takes a prominent place, and State Treasury experts figure this accounts for the pattern of voter rejections.

A total of 20 counties have held bond elections, seeking $24.6 million. Voters approved $138.4 million (about half) in 10 of the counties holding referenda.

Recent

The most recent round of county votes came November 6 when seven issues carried and six failed in five county elections. Totals sought were $116 million, and all but $28.4 million of that was approved. Orange County led the rejection parade turning down $20.4 million, including $17.8 million for schools. They also turned down health care, public building, and voting machine money.

Catawba rejected $5 million for a civic center, and Guilford said No to $3 million for a county building. Guilford approved $32.5 million in school bonds, another $2.5 million for Guilford Technical Institute and funds for a waste disposal system and a sheltered workshop.

Lee County voters endorsed $7.7 million in school bonds, and Mecklenburg County accepted $15 million in hospital bonds and $28 million in school bonds.

During the year, 40 municipalities held bond votes with 28 passing. Numerous water and sewer issues met general voter approval. The biggest defeat came in Winston-Salem where a $33 million Municipal Arena was rejected.

Land Hunt

North Carolina is hunting land which has been lost over the years, and is willing to pay citizens who help.

State Property Officer J.K. Sherron estimates that thousands of acres of land worth millions of dollars actually belong to the state, but records have been misplaced or lost down through the years. Some musty records discovered in an archives room led to the search for state-owned lands dating back hundreds of years. Some land was never titled to any owner and may be claimed by the state; other property was left untitled due to errors or missing information, and still more belonged to the state outright, but the records have been missing for many years.

Sunday Morning Notes

Dec. 7, 1941 is a date known to virtually all Americans. It is the day that the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor and plunged the world into its most devastating war.

There are other memories of that time.

Atwood Gurganus is a member of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association. He was at a meeting of the Golden K Club last week which centered around the infamous attack of almost 40 years ago.

One of the remembrances Atwood had was a menu from the Black Cat Cafe in Honolulu.

The foods haven't changed much but, oh those prices.

How about hot cakes for ten cents, waffles for 15 cents and oatmeal for 15?

You could get ham, eggs, buttered toast and hash browns for 35 cents, or an oyster omelette for 45 cents.

Are you concerned about the modern day cost of steak?

How about a porterhouse and mushrooms for $1, a t-bone for 60 cents or a rib steak for 40 cents?

A bacon and egg sandwich was 20 cents; a hamburger 15 cents; peanut butter, 10 cents; club house, 50 cents; a hot dog, ten cents and a Black Cat special (whatever that was), 20 cents.

Strawberry shortcake with whipped cream went for 20 cents; pie a la mode, 15 cents; banana split, 25 cents; and ice cream for ten cents.

A glass of milk could be had for ten cents with the second glass for five. Postum and Ovaltine were on the menu at ten cents; milk shakes, 15 cents; malted milk, 20 cents. Soft drinks with meals were five cents.

Coffee? Surprisingly it wasn't listed on the menu, although you can be assured it was just as popular at that time as it is today.

Maybe the coffee was free.

It is a beautifully printed book with fine color illustrations of activities in the Greenville City Schools, but there's a problem — nobody on the school board or in the city school system can read it.

The book, a document of Sony teams which visited schools in Los Angeles, New York, Atlanta and Greenville some time back, is printed entirely in Japanese.

A new holiday? If they have their way, we will eventually have a National Widow's Day in the U. S. Calander of national holidays.

A group of Martin County women is petitioning President Carter to set aside a day each year to honor American women who have lost their husbands.

Charles Weeks hasn't placed any ads yet, but he is poking around scrap yards for buses once given up for dead.

"We're looking for used buses to reconstruct," explains Weeks, executive director of the Capital Area Transit, the local mass transit agency. "There's a possibility of getting one from Pittsburgh."

With the price of new buses running at $130,000 apiece and the waiting line for deliveries stretching to a year and beyond, Weeks figures his shop can begin breathing new life into expired, but still needed buses.

Weeks is not alone in his interest. Transit agencies across the country are taking a second look at the heaps left for scrap on back lots or are gobbling up used buses peddled by other agencies and private sales companies.

INSIDE REPORT

'Losing In Forgery War'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The decision by Iranian militants to show the world an alleged "secret" document which they said had been purloined U.S. Embassy adds an ominous new factor in the battle of American intelligence against Soviet forgeries aimed at discrediting the U.S.

Whether the militants have what they claim to have, or whether the alleged CIA assignments for the two new staffers at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran are bogus, the surfacing of the document compounds the problem of identifying and exposing proliferating Soviet forgeries. These forgeries are now known to have drawn both President Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale into their worldwide operations.

The Soviet forgery game was analyzed early this year in a classified government document called "the forgery offensive" which opened with this flat assertion: The dangerous Soviet game of lying about the U.S. in the struggle between the two superpowers is undergoing "an appreciable upsurge."

"The political purpose of these forgeries, their technical sophistication and intelligence reporting all point to the Soviet Union, its various East European allies and Cuba as being the responsible parties," the document said.

The study containing that charge against Moscow was followed in late summer by a second analysis, limited to "official use only" and published by the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) — a major branch of the U.S. intelligence community. It proclaimed that Moscow has "continually employed forged documents to implement foreign policy, support political objectives and to lend substance, credibility and authenticity to their propaganda claims."

The U.S. has never played the forgeries game against the Russians or any other country. One reason could be that in an open society, forgeries would almost surely be exposed by those opposing the practice — by politicians, for example, who in the past have taken pride in exposing undercover operations by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) regardless of foreign policy objectives.

The Soviets have a closed society and no known scruples against dirty tricks of any kind. But the efforts to put false words in the mouth of the president and vice president of the U.S., described as being "of suspected Soviet origin," touched a new low. The falsification of Jimmy Carter's spoken word came in December 1977, in the form of a bogus press release from the United States Information Agency (USIA) (now the International Communications Agency). It purported to be a verbatim report on a speech Carter gave in the "American perspective series."

Newspapers in Greece — and almost certainly in other countries where the forgery never surfaced — received the phony Carter speech in the mail. Two newspapers in Athens published it. In his "speech" Carter flayed the Greeks for letting down NATO, demanded far higher defense spending by Greece and made demeaning remarks about this major Mediterranean ally.

The forgery involving Mondale came just over a year ago when xeroxed copies of an interview he allegedly gave to a European newspaperman named "Karl Douglas" were mailed to Paris-based correspondents of several newspapers.

In the "interview," the vice president cast aspersions on Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Sadat, according to the bogus "interview" with Mondale, called Sadat not the master of his own house (implying the then-pending treaty with Israel would not be adhered to) and claimed that Begin was suffering from a "terminal illness."

Both these efforts were crude, and neither one did American policy much if any damage. But they illustrated this point: There is no limit to the Soviet effort to "disin-

The North Carolina Motor Vehicles Division is facilitating an effort to increase the number of organ donors and also to identify donors easily by allowing them to sign up as donors when they apply for or renew their drivers' licenses.

Donating an organ or tissue after death can often save a life or, in the case of a kidney or eye transplant, provide a "new" life to the recipient. One of the major drawbacks of the program, which has been in effect for many years, is that doctors often do not know who the donors are until it is too late to save organs for transplants.

Under the plan being implemented by North Carolina, anyone over age 18 who wants to participate in the organ donor program can sign up when time comes to renew licenses, and the license will be marked to show that the holder is a donor.

Using the license to identify donors is a useful and efficient way to increase the success of the program. Most people regularly carry their licenses with them, and in cases of unexpected accidental death, such as traffic or fire deaths, emergency personnel at the scene and the hospital will have a standard way to identify organ donors.

Time is often of the essence in these operations, and using the driver's license to speed the process is sound and practical.

The program is safeguarded by the need for next-of-kin to also approve the donation, so few "mistakes" seem likely to occur.

So often when the government sticks its clumsy hands into a program it can be the kiss of death; but in this instance it appears that using the license as a standard record-keeping form for such a life-saving endeavor is a way the mighty forces of government and its multitudinous records can be put to good use for the citizens of the state.

Strength For Today

HUMBLE SERVICE

Travel in Communist China today is difficult and restricted. But in the early 1800s an adventurous man named Karl Gutzlaff wandered up and down the coast of China on an unusual mission. Dressed as a Chinese sailor, he slipped into every Chinese coastal city where his ship landed and distributed among the inhabitants sections of the Bible which he had translated into Chinese. Between trips he continued the work of translation not only into Chinese, but Siamese also.

All this was preparatory to the work of Christian missionaries who were to go into these countries later. They found that the ground had been prepared for them. Thousand of humble people already knew something about the Bible.

"God works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform." We may be unaware of what is going on, but if we serve faithfully wherever we happen to be, we will have aided Him in His divine projects.

Big Volume Allows Discount

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — At the latest official sighting, the consumer price index was cruising through space at an annual rate of 13.2 percent, and with enough thrust to maintain double-digit speed for another year.

The momentum has been building for years. In 1976 it slowly lifted from the pad at a 4.6 percent rate, accelerated in 1977 to 6.8 percent, and as it roared into the frictionless atmosphere of 1978 it hit 9 percent.

These figures are preamble to a marketplace oddity that might have had you wondering: Against a backdrop of such increases, how can it be, as the advertisements seem to tell you, that this is the year of bargains?

In many instances the bargains are real. The automobile rebates are true discounts from what otherwise you might pay. And the average grocery coupon — billions exist — has a value of about 15 cents.

Fifteen cents might buy only a bit more than would a nickel in the mid-1960s, but they add up.

But the rub is that all those discounts are from high current prices. You might say, in fact, that a small percentage of those high prices is caused by cents-off coupons.

Manufacturers and retailers argue that greater volume pays for this sort of promotional costs, the theory being that with increased business the promoter can afford to take a smaller per-unit profit.

The truth of this can be demonstrated — to a point, and that point is reached when the market becomes saturated. When everyone gives trading stamps, for example, not everyone can benefit from greater volume.

Relatively high prices, and the desire to escape them, is behind many of those other sale prices. High prices provide an opportunity for retailers.

A quick glance through a metropolitan newspaper shows furniture being sold from the warehouse rather than retail shop, clothing being offered "direct from manufacturer," and books being "wholesaled."

Big volume often means a seller can accept a lower per-unit cost. And a manufacturer who cuts out the middleman obviously can offer a lower selling price. But there's often more to a buy than the sale.

What? Well, there's service, for example, and service often means more assurance of quality, a better merchandise-return policy, more attractive packaging and a more accommodating delivery policy.

This year, no matter what bargains are offered, you have to adjust to the fact that prices in general are much higher than before.

It is at times like this, the space age of prices, that the word "bargain" has its greatest appeal.

Lion's Share As I Recall It To Churches The Restaurant Rammed By A Man-Of-War

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Two of every three American families and single adults (69 pct.) contributed to religious organizations in 1978. On the average, Americans gave $239 to religious organizations out of a total average donation of $358 to all charitable organizations.

The largest number of families made donations to religious organizations (69 pct.) and to health organizations other than hospitals and medical centers (66 pct.). However, the average donation made to religious organizations is considerably larger than the average donation made to health organizations: $239 vs. $38.

Roughly equal proportions made a donation to an education group (27 pct.) or a hospital (23 pct.) in 1978, while 49 percent report having given to other charities not specified in the study. The average donations given were $16 (to hospitals), $35 (to educational groups) and $25 (to all other charities).

Sixteen percent report that they made no charitable donations in calendar year 1978. About one-third (34 pct.) of those sampled report that they gave between $1 and $100; 14 percent made donations of $101-$200; 17 percent gave $201-$500; and 19 percent donated more than $500.

All persons in the survey were asked to respond to this question in a confidential self-administered questionnaire:

"Please record your best estimate of the amount that you and your husband/wife gave in charitable donations in calendar year 1978 to each of the five types of organizations below. This should not include donations to political parties, donations for which you received some kind of service or product, or the donation of your own time."

All respondents were asked the amount of charitable donations they gave in 1978 to organizations or institutions in each of five categories:

1. Church and Religious Organizations
2. Educational Groups
3. Hospitals and Medical Centers
4. Other Health Organizations
5. All Other Donations

In 1830 Alexis deTocqueville characterized Americans as people who form committees to solve community problems. More recently, Waldemar Nielson, the head of a philanthropic consulting firm, speculated that this kind of voluntary activity has been instrumental in the most basic social change and reform in America — from the abolition of slavery and child labor to the vote for women. Yet some have expressed concern that changing tax laws might result in a dramatic decline in charitable donations.

Since the 1940s when the standard tax deduction was introduced, there has been a steady decline in the proportion who itemize their tax return. The Gallup survey documented that at every income level, those who itemize their tax return give considerably more in charitable donations than those who do not itemize. For example, among those earning $15,000-$20,000, the average donation of itemizers was $652, compared with an average of $222 among the non-itemizers.

The results to this survey are based on the responses of a nationally-representative sample of 1,392 adults, each representing a family or single-person household. All interviews were conducted between May 18-June 1, 1979, within one month of the April 15 date to file income tax returns.

As I Recall It

By NOEL YANCEY

The Ark restaurant at Wilmington used to boast that it was the only restaurant in history to be rammed by a U.S. man-of-war. Eldridge Fergus, owner of the floating restaurant, proudly displayed a plaque from the officers and men of the U.S. submarine Cubera attesting that fact.

So, in a way, history was only repeating itself on Oct. 2, 1961 when the Ark was hit by the battleship North Carolina. The mishap occurred while the big ship was being edged into its slip at Wilmington where it was put on display as a war memorial.

In a recent interview, Fergus recalled that as 11 tugs were maneuvering the battleship into the slip, its stern brushed the Ark and a starboard gun turret slammed into the restaurant's kitchen.

"I was on my boat just before it happened," Fergus related. "Some fellows on a tug said, 'You'd better get off. You'll be killed.' So, we jumped off."

Fergus explained that when the battleship drew abreast of the Ark and the U.S. Customs House, its bow was swung around to the left so that it could head into the slip that was cut perpendicularly into the bank of the Cape Fear River. The bow went aground at the edge of the slip while the stern was threatening the Ark on the other side of the river.

Workmen attached a line from the ship's bow to a bulldozer, and pulled the vessel away from the Ark.

"That and the tide is what saved my ship," Fergus said. "That thing would have crushed us completely if the tide hadn't turned back and if the man hadn't pulled it off with that bulldozer."

In newspaper accounts of the arrival of the North Carolina at Wilmington, Fergus' Ark virtually stole the show. It was played up as the only restaurant ever hit by a battleship. Reader's Digest recorded that later at the official dedication attended by Navy Admiral Arleigh Burke, Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges and Gov. Terry Sanford, "the restaurant again stole the show. Repaired and repainted, it was draped with a huge Purple Heart."

So, when Fergus' lawyers went to the North Carolina Battleship Commission to demand $10,000 for the damage done to his restaurant, Sanford growled that the Ark had gotten $1 million worth of publicity and that the commission did not owe him anything.

"We went and sued the Battleship Commission, and they (Fergus' lawyers) attached the battleship," Fergus recalled. After the U.S. marshal had served the papers attaching the ship, "the marshal called me up and asked me where to put it. I told him to leave it where it was."

Asked if the case was ever tried, Fergus explained that "we settled out of court, and I collected less than 10 cents on the dollar."

The North Carolina, a 35,000-ton behemoth nicknamed the Showboat, fought in virtually every major battle in the Pacific during World War II.

Once it was hit simultaneously by three torpedoes that ripped a 17-foot gash in her side and killed six sailors. She was forced to reduce speed, but she did not stop. It's still on display at Wilmington and is visited by thousands of persons every year.

Fergus recalled that about six years before the arrival of the North Carolina, four submarines were moored abreast near the Ark. They broke their moorings one night, and when they swung around, they rammed into the floating restaurant, knocking a hole in its concrete hull eight inches above the water line.

"So, actually we've been hit by five warships," Fergus said.

He said that after he lost his waterfront location due to an urban renewal project, The Ark was taken to Tampa, Fla., and "it was in Fort Walton Beach, Fla., the last I heard of it."

Bessie's Songs Found Their Way To Archives

RAMONA, Ca. — Bessie Mercer nee Littrell was the fourth daughter of a sharecropper. Born in 1894, in the dusty, small community of Bug Tussel, Tennessee, Bessie was about as welcome as a case of the shingles. Papa Littrell used to say, "The Devil owed me a spite and paid it in girls."

Everyone in the family of twelve played an instrument. The long summer evenings rang with music around the Littrell cabin.

Play me that song
I used to play when I was a boy
Ti-diddle lum, diddle lum
Ti-diddle lum, diddle lum-a-day...

Trudy, the eldest sister, played the guitar and taught Eudora, Nancy and Bessie. Nancy and Bessie played so much alike, one could finger the notes while the other picked the strings. Songs were picked up from every passing stranger and down at the general store.

Just before she was twenty, Bessie learned a song from a tall fellow who played a good banjo. True to the age-old story of love betrayed, she found herself expecting.

I didn't wish to tell you
But I suppose I must
I had the sad experience
The boys won't do to trust...

The lightning express
From the depot so grand
Just started on its way.
All of the people who were on hand
Seemed to be happy and gay except...

In the Huntsville, Alabama, station a helpful porter directed her to the Salvation Army's Home for Unwed Mothers. Shortly after, her first little girl was born.

Though barely literate, Bessie read an advertisement from a man in California looking for a good Christian woman to be his wife and housekeeper. They corresponded and soon he sent her a ticket. She didn't return South for over forty years.

This first husband died when Bessie's second daughter, Marcia, was nine months old, leaving her with two children to support.

At church she met a widower with a 13-year-old son. They married, but soon her daughter and his son were fighting so much they decided to get a divorce, although Bessie said afterward that she and Charles never had a short word.

Later, working as a housekeeper for three single brothers, Bessie set her cap for the shy one, William Mercer. Shortly after their marriage, Bill lost his job and the Great Depression was on. He never found steady work again, and Bessie had to support him too. This broke his pride and he took to drinking. After his death, Bessie said she had learned her lesson and decided like the girl in the song, "Don't Sing Love Songs," to sleep alone the rest of her life.

Bessie had a full life with her children and her church. Old timers still talk about the way her sad and happy old Southern folksongs entertained them all at Camp Meeting time around the campfire. Throughout the depression years Bessie worked hard, first as a domestic, and later as a professional cook.

Her prowess in culinary art was well known. Once in a fraternity where she worked, she made up a meat-loaf of leftovers and horsemeat for the dog, Brutus. Late-returning frat brothers raided the refrigerator and ate half of it, swearing, when informed, that it still tasted better than the meat-loaf at the local beanery.

In the early fifties a neighbor in Berkeley, California, persuaded Pete Seeger to listen to Bessie's songs. Pete was delighted and said that Bessie was one of the few authentic folk singers around from the Tennessee area. Seeger came twice to interview and tape Bessie's songs for the National Archives record of folk music.

At 85, Bessie's mind is still as sharp as a new tenpenny nail. She says she's getting old and a bit long in tooth, but the alternative to aging isn't too appealing. Her only complaint is, "This old arthritis in my fingers; I can't play the banjo anymore." However her fingers are still nimble enough to crochet an afghan in two weeks, or make a king-sized spread for her daughter's housewarming.

Of all her memories, one of the brightest is the time the young Pete Seeger taped her songs for posterity.

form governments and peoples of the world about the perfidy of the U.S. by exploiting all techniques of forgery and black propaganda. Moreover, other attempts to undermine the U.S. have had conspicuous success.

In 1978, in an altered version of a genuine State Department document known as "Airgram A-8950," dated Dec. 3, 1974, U.S. Embassies in Europe were ordered to collect information "on ways to bribe European officials and to develop other covert means by which to damage or eliminate foreign trade competition" with the U.S. The timing was calculated to cash in on the uproar in the U.S. over bribery accusations against U.S. corporations.

This forgery, American intelligence now believes, was "an eminent Soviet forgery success" despite some sloppy discrepancies such as bad punctuation in the covering letter that came with fuzzy copies of the alleged airgram.

With superpower competition now heating up, partly under the stress of the Iranian crisis, top intelligence officials have ordered the anti-forgery watch put on overtime duty. But for every forgery discovered, there probably are half a dozen that go undiscovered. The whole world is a forgery market and it is inconceivable that the U.S. will not be damaged in the days of heated rivalry that lie ahead with an adversary that plays by only one rule: the rule to win.

dent John Cooper. "We have a lot of deals pending," he says.

Until about four months ago, Cooper cut up the buses he bought from Washington, D.C.'s transit agency and sold them for parts. But he now finds it more profitable to keep them intact and wait for customers.

Transit agencies can save money by finding other transit agencies that are ready to unload old buses, says George Herman, executive director of the Berks Area Reading (Pa.) Transportation Authority.

He said old buses are available for as low as $30, but adds, "You have to get them before the dealers do."

A salesman with Hausman Bus Sales and Parts in Chicago notes that high prices for new buses have helped generate a boom in the used bus market.

"The demand is high and the supply is low," he says, adding that Hausman recently sent brochures to transit agencies around the country advertising completely rebuilt buses for $35,000 to $45,000.

Idealist's Image Of Supreme Court Long Gone

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Reporters Bob Woodward and Scott Armstrong now have published their long-awaited expose of the U.S. Supreme Court; and the only surprising thing about "The Brethren," in one sense, is that any informed person should be surprised by its revelations. So Brennan thinks Burger is a dummy? So what else is new?

Somewhere in this broad land, perhaps, one or two innocents still truly believe in Santa Claus. And somewhere one or two simpletons still cling to the vacuous notion that "ours is a government of law, not of men." But the image of the Supreme Court as a body of nine gods roosting on a marble Olympus, breathing the rarefied air of pure law and pure justice, is an image most Americans abandoned in their cradles.

In the beginning, back in the misty dawn of our Republic, Alexander Hamilton sold the people a bad bill of goods. He saw the federal judiciary as "beyond comparison the weakest of the three departments of power," a body possessed of neither force nor will, but merely judgment. He contended that the Supreme Court would not make law; it would only find law. The court would find the manifest tenor of the Constitution, and having found it, would declare acts contrary to the Constitution to be void. And the justices would never, but never, "substitute their own pleasure to the constitutional intentions of the legislature."

A pretty picture. And a false one. The Supreme Court has seen 101 men on its bench. Perhaps 10 or 12 have been genuinely superior judges, giants of the law. The great bulk of them can be characterized simply as mediocrities. Fifteen or 20 have been absolute losers. William Cushing, Robert Grier and Stephen Field, to mention only three, suffered from senility. James Wilson was a deadbeat who spent his last years dodging his creditors. John Rutledge went crazy. James McReynolds was an anti-Semitic volcano, regularly erupting against Benjamin Cardozo and Louis Brandeis. There never has been a period in the court's history when members were not sniping contemptuously at one justice or another.

These are very mortal men indeed; they put on their pants one leg at a time, precisely as other men do.

In the first rush of reaction to the Woodward-Armstrong book, a few panicky fellows have feared that this wholesale debunking might "destroy the court." I don't believe it for an instant.

The court has survived this kind of thing before, and it will survive again. After Harlan Stone died in 1946, his widow gave his papers to biographer Alpheus T. Mason, who did a more decorous Woodward-Armstrong of his own. Alexander Bickel created some embarrassment when he went public with some of the private thoughts of Louis Brandeis. Nothing that his colleagues have said of Chief Justice Warren Earl Burger is vastly different from what was said of Chief Justice Morrison R. Waite by his brethren of that day. This too will pass.

The two reporters spent two and a half years at their task; they interviewed a couple of hundred sources, but they had only one seminal source — the private diaries and case histories paper plates, their children's teeth will turn green, and their toddlers will keep them together gleefully. "By the way, while you're sitting here, there are a few things I've been meaning to tell you..."

Meg treated my silence like an early Christmas present. No matter what I whispered to her, she pretended that she couldn't hear. It was then I realized what a powerful deterrent my yelling had become.

The stereotype of wives as germ-free superwomen peculiarly resistant to bodily discomfort is so pervasive that when I got laryngitis several weeks ago, even my parents, who were our houseguests that week, refused to believe that I was in distress. My father insisted on driving everywhere we went, and I had to sit in the backseat and whisper directions into one ear while Meg delivered a steady monologue into the other.

Worse than that was Phillip and Meg's reaction to my affliction. They both actively took advantage of it.

"You can't talk?" Phillip said. "And who said that miracles don't happen any more!" He rubbed his hands together gleefully. "By the way, while you're sitting here, there are a few things I've been meaning to tell you..."

Meg stopped as if she had been lassoed around the neck. Then a tear fell down her cheek.

"I didn't mean to scare you," I said.

Hours Of Uncertainty Before Escaping From Embassy...

be before they could leave — or if the worse would happen.

"By 3 o'clock," Colonel Arthur recalled, tear gas and smoke began seeping into the vault under the door. The building's halls served to draw the smoke and gas up, much the same way a chimney does.

"Pretty soon we lost electricity, water and the use of phones, but fortunately the vault area had been designed to include its own emergency generator and its separate ventilation system.

"Even in this situation, we still had communications with the U.S., that is, until 3:30 when demonstrators managed to get onto the roof of the third floor and knocked out antennas. They also started firing down the incinerators."

The only means of communications left them from 3:30 until their escape some two hours later was by walkie-talkie radios with personnel in the British embassy.

Cares For Dying Man

Cpl. Crowley, the seriously wounded marine, had been brought into the vault along with the other embassy personnel. "Special credit is due to Mrs. Dave Fields, a nurse," Arthur said. "She gave all her attention to tending to him. He died in the vault before we got out."

On the roof, demonstrators continued their efforts to break into the third floor vault by forcing an entry through the steel hatch on the roof.

"The roof hatch is flush with the roof," Colonel Arthur explained. "While they were trying to get it open, a helicopter, we later found out it was a Pakistani helicopter, hovered over the roof, although it didn't land. This stopped the efforts of demonstrators to break into the hatch, but later, after the copter left, the demonstrators returned and got through the outer hatch."

First press dispatches saying that those trapped in the burning embassy building were rescued by Pakistani helicopters, Colonel Arthur said, were not accurate. He added that in the confusion of a situation such as this, it is understandable how observers could make an erroneous assumption).

Critical Time

With only the inner steel door left to safeguard those in the vault against the attackers, with the demonstrators beating at that door in an effort to secure entry, and with the level of smoke and gas building up inside the vault, the situation was rapidly becoming more critical.

"The gas and smoke was having its effects," Arthur said. "We knew we were losing our battle against it. Not only was the smoke coming up more strongly, but by five o'clock the floor was getting hot, and beginning to bubble."

"It was at this time that Marine Master Sergeant Lloyd Miller volunteered to go into the third floor hall to see if any way was open for us to get out without having to try escape by the roof. He soon returned, and said the smoke was too thick to attempt that route.

"At 5:30, with the floor bubbling even more, we knew there was no alternative except to attempt an escape through the roof hatch. It was a matter of facing whatever was out there or dying of suffocation."

First attempts to open the inner steel hatch door revealed it was jammed. "This was from the beating and hammering on the door by demonstrators," Arthur said. "Luckily, we had in the vault a number of sturdy tools and were able to cut the door supports and pry the door open."

Colonel Arthur and four others formed the first contingent to go up onto the roof to determine what conditions they would be facing. "We had no idea whether demonstrators with weapons would be there facing us, or what to expect. It was dark, but we could see that only a scattered few people were left in the courtyard. We also saw Pakistani military forces outside the fence."

Last Stages

This was understandably a welcome development for the weary, beleaguered group of 100 who for six hours and more had been subjected to being under siege with no idea if and when help would be forthcoming.

"We quickly formed ourselves into groups of ten and dispersed to different areas of the roof to make us less susceptible in the event gun fire broke out," Colonel Arthur said.

"Some men dropped over the side of the third floor roof to a roof on a lower level and found a ladder. They propped it up to the third floor, and soon we had everyone down to the roof of the first floor auditorium. We felt then we were at home base." The roof held firm, even though the building was fire gutted.

"It was only after all our people got on the ground that the Pakistani military came into the compound," Arthur said. "They took us in trucks to the British Embassy, where the people there really rolled out the red carpet for all of us. We also took the body of Cpl. Crowley along with us."

Evacuation

All the time that Colonel Arthur was under siege in the embassy building, he could only hope that all was going well with his wife and two children.

"I was able to alert my wife (the former Elizabeth Smith of Pennsylvania) at 1:30, that an attack on the embassy was taking place. I told her to lay low and to call the school our children attended, which is about seven miles from the embassy." (The two are 16-year old Douglas and 14-year old Sarah — a third child, Liz, 18, is attending school in Chapel Hill.

"We stayed at the British embassy until midnight, then decided to disperse, as we felt that our being concentrated there might endanger that embassy.

"Soon we received word that we would be evacuated sometime during the night of the twenty-second — that's some way to spend Thanksgiving, isn't it?"

"We were told that each person would be permitted to take two suitcases, then later were told to meet at a designated staging area at 3 a.m. (morning of the 23rd) to await the arrival of a Pan-Am 747 jet.

"By the way, the crew of this plane, which had landed at Delhi (India) earlier, asked for permission to fly to Islamabad to evacuate us. They were tired, but wanted to help, and so volunteered and were accepted for the mission."

Arthur emphasized that during the ordeal "foreign diplomats, attaches, and many other people were most considerate and helpful to us. And I understand too that many of the Pakistani security forces were responsible for helping save lives at other places where Americans worked in Islamabad."

Trip Home

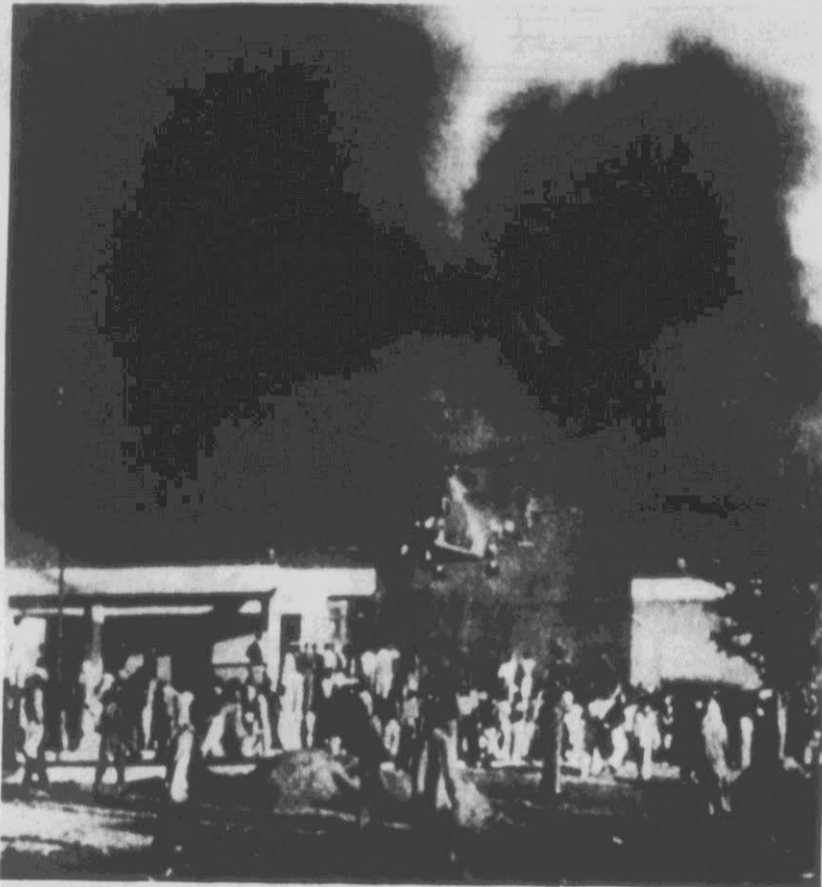

From Islamabad, the 747 flew to the southern Pakistani city of Karachi, where the plane refueled and picked up other Americans being evacuated. The next destination was Frankfurt, West Germany, then on to the United States. "We arrived in Washington on Friday, and since then it has been a hectic round of briefings, meeting the press, and getting our lives reorganized," Arthur commented.

Since Colonel Arthur was initially sent to Pakistan for a two-year tour of duty, he will be returning there soon to complete the tour.

"I'll be going now without my family, and will have to wait and see how things develop later," he said. "Before I left, I made a two months advance payment to our household people, and hope to find everything in good shape when I return."

In his military career, Colonel Arthur has served two tours in Vietnam — in 1966-67 and again in 1969-70 with the 101st Airborne Division in the capacity as an advisor to a Vietnamese infantry battalion. He has also served as a visiting officer with the Australian Army, where he was the company commander of an Australian unit.

NO RESCUE BY HELICOPTER . . . This Associated Press photo, taken on November 21 during the burning of the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, shows a Pakistani helicopter at the site. Lt. Colonel J. Ficklen Arthur, of Greenville, one of about 100 personnel who sought refuge in the embassy's third floor vault, said early press dispatches crediting the Pakistani military with rescuing personnel from the building's rooftop were inaccurate. He did, however, indicate the helicopter's presence was evidently a vital factor in clearing the roof of demonstrators who were attempting to gain entry into the vault area through steel hatches on the third floor roof.

Wants School Bond

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A school bond issue should be placed on the 1980 ballot to finance badly-needed repairs for school buildings across the state, an education official said Friday.

Janet Holem, legislative coordinator for the Congress of Parents and Teachers, or PTA, told the General Assembly's study commission on public school facilities that some facilities "are deplorable and unsafe in addition to very energy inefficient."

Mrs. Holms was one of several education and local government leaders to appear before the commission to support a 1980 bond issue that would finance the repair or replacement of old buildings, eliminate mobile classroom units, remove barriers to the handicapped and make energy-saving improvements.

Legislators on the panel were not definite on the amount of money needed to do the job the group wants.

In addition to PTA group, support for a statewide bond issue has been mounted by the N.C. Association of County Commissioners, the N.C. School Board Association and the N.C. Association of School Administrators.

The legislative committee will make a recommendation to the General Assembly next year on whether the issue should be proposed on the November ballot.

Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, has suggested that the bond issue should be for $600 million, but committee members said they had not been able to determine the extent of school construction needs.

Another survey by the Department of Public Instruction put the need at $1.8 billion. However, one committee member said that figure represented the schools' "Cadillac needs."

Committee members agreed to examine the schools in their home counties to determine whether superintendents had exaggerated their needs in responding to the survey.

2,045 Indonesian Prisoners Freed

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT
JOGYAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Indonesia Saturday released 2,045 prisoners arrested after the abortive 1965 coup and held without charge for 14 years and announced it will free its last 2,150 prisoners before Christmas — with the exception of 61 "hard-core communists."

The Indonesian security agency, Kopkamtib, said Saturday that since 1975 the government has freed 32,989 prisoners accused of involvement in the coup.

Among those still to be released before Christmas is Pramudia Ananda Tur, probably Indonesia's best-known writer. But a spokesman said Pramudia will not be allowed to publish five historical novels he wrote during his 14 years in prison.

Of the 2,045 released Saturday, 669 were set free in a symbolic ceremony in the ancient capital of Jogjakarta.

Those released included 70 women, all of whom appeared well.

Watched by Adm. Sudomo, national security chief, the prisoners chanted an oath of fidelity to Indonesia and pledged to refrain from any subversive activities and "never again to act as criminals."

The prisoners pledged to reject "communism and atheism" and "always be faithful to the constitution of 1945" when Indonesia won its independence from the Netherlands.

Diplomatic representatives from 13 Western embassies attended the ceremony.

British Ambassador Terence O'Brian, who attended the release ceremony, asked Sudomo what kind of restrictions are being placed on the released people.

Sudomo replied that they were "free citizens," able to vote in elections but not allowed to become government employees or members of the armed forces.

Western reporters questioned Sudomo about Nusakambangan Island, often referred as the "prison island" of Indonesia.

Sudomo said the prison island, in the torrid Indonesian South Java Sea "is empty of political prisoners, but is being used for criminals and smugglers."

The ceremony was held in a basketball arena with 2,000 relatives of the detainees packing in the large hall. Sudomo said the released people are free to live anywhere in Indonesia, but must report any change of residence, like other Indonesians.

Islamic Secret Police Reportedly In Paris

By GEORGE SIBERA

PARIS (UPI) — Iranian exiles say the head of Iran's new Islamic secret police — known as SAVAMA — visited Paris with two other revolutionary military leaders shortly before the assassination of the Shah of Iran's nephew.

Informants said Saturday police were trying to verify assertions of Iranian exiles that SAVAMA agents were in France to keep close tabs on the large colony of Iranian exiles here and that many have been harassed on the streets of Paris or have received threatening letters.

Police said they had no firm clue to the identity of the muscular man in his early 30s who fired two bullets from a 9mm pistol into the head of Shahryar Shafik, 34, the younger son of Princess Ashraf, twin sister of deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

Islamic Judge Sheikh Sadeq Khalkhali claimed responsibility for the assassination in Tehran later Friday, asserting that his Moslem gunmen were looking for Princess Ashraf when they ran into her son and shot him. Little is known about the new secret police of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who made dismemberment of the shah's dread secret police, SAVAK, one of the rallying points of his revolution.

Princess Ashraf, 60, once described by the late Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin as "the only male in the Iranian ruling family" was called by opponents "The Black Tigress" and "Black Panther" because of her purported lust for wealth and power.

Iranian exiles claimed that among high-ranking visitors to Paris from Tehran in recent days were Gen. Kaveh, head of the SAVAMA, his deputy, Gen. Farouzi and Gen. Fardousi, described as Khomeini's military advisor.

Iranian exile sources said that contrary to early information, Shafik had recently decided to get involved in politics and join the opposition to Khomeini. He was helping edit in Paris a "Free Iran" news bulletin launched by his sister, Princess Azzadeh, known as "Gardenia Shafik" by friends and family. The slain prince, former commander of Iran's hydrofoil torpedo boats, also was one of the organizers of a shadow "Liberation Army" hoping to be able one day to restore the Pahlavi dynasty to the Peacock throne, informants said.

It was not known yet where and when Shafik would be buried and whether his mother, who was in New York, would come to France for the funeral. Shafik, gunned down by a outside the luxurious residence of his mother and sister, was the first member of the Imperial family to be slain since the Islamic Revolutionaries in Tehran vowed to capture or kill all leading members of the toppled Pahlavi dynasty.

Two Received Awards For State Active Duty Service

Col. Alvin D. MacAthur, commander of the 30th Support Group, presented awards to two members of Detachment One, 213th Military Police Co. in Greenville in recognition for state active duty.

Platoon Sgt. Linwood Earl Peaden of Greenville received the Army Commendation Medal for meritorious service during the period of October of 1973 through October of 1977, while serving as platoon sergeant for the detachment.

S.Sgt. Jasper Randolph Pollard of Greenville received the North Carolina Meritorious Service Award for the period of May 28 of 1973 through Sept. 30 of 1979.

The award noted that Peaden "displayed outstanding leadership, devotion to duty and professional ability by implementing training procedures that kept the unit in a state of readiness capable of accomplishing its assigned mission." He completed two years in the Marines and 25 years in the National Guard.

The award pointed out that while serving as squad leader for the detachment, Pollard "displayed exemplary leadership and outstanding professional ability." Pollard served three years in Germany on active duty and 25 years in the National Guard.

Brewer Spoke To ECU Class

"We're not exactly sure what lies in store for East Carolina University in the 80's," said Dr. Thomas Brewer, Chancellor of East Carolina, at a press conference Thursday afternoon in Ira Baker's journalism class. "But we intend to do it well and will stress excellence and quality."

Dr. Brewer said that planning for the university is a process of trying to find out where we want to go. The planning process includes every constituency of the university, according to Brewer. He flowcharted the overall structure of the university and explained subcommittees, task forces, and their objectives. Brewer discussed the parking situation, improvement of the football program, HEW, and the problem of cooking in the dormitories.

Judging for the poster contest was held Friday by teachers Jeanne Cox, Fran Wilson and Joanne Robertson. Winners were as follows:

FOURTH AND FIFTH GRADES — Michele Cayton, first; Stephanie Cash, second; Lori Conger, third; Jennifer Wing, honorable mention.

SIXTH, SEVENTH AND EIGHTH GRADES — Rhonda Riddick, first; Steven Ferebee, second; Angela Branch, third; Michele Garris, honorable mention.

Cash prizes were awarded to the winners. The posters were graded on the decorative, rather than artistic, ability, according to Ruth Riddle, seventh and eighth grade science teacher at Cox.

Share Yuletide Giving Project

The Pitt-Greenville Boys Club, in conjunction with the Greenville Jaycees, are working toward making Christmas a little brighter for needy families in the area.

Special Christmas trees have been placed in the Greenville, Farmville, Ayden and Grifton branches of First Federal Savings and Loan by the two groups. People in the Pitt County area are invited to bring such items as non-perishable food, new or like-new toys, money or other useful things and place them under the tree. Anyone donating an item will have his or her name placed on a card and the cards will be hung on the individual trees.

NO DEC. MEETING

The monthly meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, normally held on the second Wednesday night of each month, will not be held for the month of December.

The next meeting will take place on the second Wednesday night in January, 1980.

TO SPEAK MONDAY

Tom Gilmore, Deputy Secretary of the Dept. of Human Resources, Raleigh, will be guest speaker at the Greenville Rotary Club on Monday, December 10. The meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Redev. Comm. Meets Monday

The Redevelopment Commission will hold its regular December meeting on Monday at 7:30 p.m. at its 1103 Broad Street central offices.

Commissioners will consider progress reports concerning finance, land acquisition, disposition, demolition and relocation in the various urban renewal and Community Development areas.

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — President John F. Kennedy's secretary of state, Dean Rusk, has decided to endorse President Carter for re-election, rather than support Kennedy's brother, Edward, for the Democratic nomination.

Rusk, who had turned aside earlier questions from reporters about his speech today in Athens, Ga., announced the topic Friday night at a Carter fund-raising dinner after having some of his thunder stolen by a jubilant Vice President Walter Mondale. Before a crowd of about 1,000 Carter supporters from five Southern states, Mondale announced: "I don't want to jump the gun, but tomorrow former Secretary of State Dean Rusk is going to announce solidly for President Carter's re-election, and we're glad to have it."

Rusk refused, in a brief interview later, to comment on reports circulating at the fund-raiser that he planned a blistering attack on Kennedy. "I'm going to endorse President Carter and I'm going to say why," he said. The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, however, quoted Rusk in today's editions as saying Friday night that Kennedy is "not competent" to be president.

The newspaper quoted the former secretary of state as telling his fellow guests at the dinner that "I would not feel comfortable with his (Kennedy's) hand on the nuclear button."

Rusk was the nation's highest ranking cabinet officer under both Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, standing at Kennedy's side during the Bay of Pigs invasion and the Cuban missile crisis. He is now a professor of international law at the University of Georgia. The former secretary was among the Carter supporters and dignitaries who dined on Friday at Friday's Southern fundraiser for the president.

2,000 Could Lose Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As many as 2,000 people stand to lose their public-service jobs by the end of the month because the state's share of federal funds for the program have been slashed. Funds to pay for public-service employment have been cut by more than half, said William W. Calhoun, director of the state division of community employment.

North Carolina received about $65 million under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act to create public-service jobs, also known as CETA jobs, for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

But the state will receive only $30 million for such jobs this fiscal year, Calhoun said the state was told by the U.S. Labor Department.

"It may be as many as a couple of thousand will be laid off" by the first of next year, he said.

If money were shifted to keep those persons on longer, it would mean even larger layoffs later, he said.

About 7,000 persons in the state work in jobs that are paid for by the program, down from about 10,000 last summer. Most are employed by local governments in about 90 counties.

Calhoun said that those who would lose their jobs had not been notified. He said some of them may be hired by the agencies where they now work using other funds.

It was recommended Nov. 26 that the state discontinue using CETA employees in state agencies after Dec. 31, with the exception of 405 reading aides. The reading aides will be kept on until the end of the fiscal year, he said.

"In effect, (Gov. Jim Hunt) has already made the decision that the teacher aides are a high-priority item and we're protecting them," Calhoun said.

The state didn't know until about two weeks ago how much CETA money it would get this fiscal year, preventing some decisions about cutting public-service jobs by Oct. 1.

Helms Blasts HEW Secretary

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., blasted HEW Secretary Patricia Harris Saturday for her conduct during a recent meeting with University of North Carolina officials to discuss a long-standing desegregation dispute.

Helms said he had received reports from those present at the meeting that Mrs. Harris's conduct was "rude and insulting" and that it had been confirmed she "stormed from the room."

In his weekly newspaper column, Helms said when Mrs. Harris wants "other considerations" from the Senate, he "shall not forget her treatment of (UNC President) Bill Friday and the University of North Carolina."

The meeting was held to discuss a deadlock between UNC officials and HEW over a plan for further desegregation of the UNC system. Federal officials have threatened to cut off millions in federal funds that go annually to the university unless the impasse is resolved.

Helms said that prior to Mrs. Harris's recent Senate confirmation, she had assured him it was time to "work something out" on the UNC issue. He said her assurances came after he put a "hold" on her confirmation to discuss the UNC situation along with former HEW Secretary Joseph Califano's "obsessive opposition" to the North Carolina tobacco industry.

"I removed the hold from her nomination, and she was confirmed by the Senate that same afternoon," Helms wrote. "You know the rest of the story," he continued. "The University of North Carolina is still being tormented and misrepresented by the HEW bureaucrats."

"I accepted Mrs. Harris's assurances in good faith when she came to my office. There was no reason to do otherwise," Helms wrote. "But, now, as I assess the sincerity of those assurances, the only logical conclusion is that her sole interest was to be confirmed by the Senate."

"We shall see," he said. "There's an old saying, 'Fool me once, shame on you. Fool me twice, shame on me.'"

State To Buy Copter

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Despite a cutback on state spending and hiring ordered by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., his administration has decided to buy a $1.4 million helicopter some members of the General Assembly argued was a waste of money.

The purchase of the six-seat, all-weather helicopter was approved by the state Department of Commerce this week after Hunt's personal go-ahead. Gubernatorial press secretary Gary Pearce said Hunt felt the aircraft was "an essential tool for economic development."

Earlier this fall, Hunt ordered a freeze on hiring in state government and put out a call for austerity. At that time, he also said the proposed purchase of the helicopter should be carefully reviewed.

The decision to go ahead with the purchase was a victory for state industrial recruiters, who said it would enable them to take executives to any prospective industrial site in any weather. The state already owns two helicopters, but neither is equipped to fly in bad weather.

To Sell Operation

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The president of the British-owned American Leaf Organization said Friday that the American tobacco-buying and processing operation will be sold.

American Leaf is the U.S. arm of the Imperial Tobacco Co. Ltd. of Great Britain.

V.E. Brooks, American president, said negotiations are in progress about the sale. The prospective sale was prompted by Imperial's declining leaf purchases in this country due to increased world competition. A company statement also said the high cost of maintaining its own buying and processing operation in the U.S. compared to the cost of buying leaf through independent dealers figured in the decision.

Purchase Is Explored

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Integon Corp. said last week that other companies may be exploring the possibility of acquiring the insurance holding company, but would not elaborate.

In a short news release, the company said that since the withdrawal Aug. 24 of C.I.T. Financial Corp.'s tentative offer to acquire Integon, "other companies have explored a possible interest in acquiring Integon and the company understands that one or more companies may be continuing to explore such an interest."

Survey Gives Court And Burger Low Ratings

HUNTED — Gerry Sousa of San Diego is shown in a recent photo with the son he bore as a woman before a sex change surgery. A judge issued an arrest warrant Wednesday for Sousa, who left home with Andrew, 10, earlier this week reportedly to avoid kidney transplant for the boy who suffers acute kidney failure. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court, "a legacy of Richard Nixon," is fragmented and straining under the "ineffective leadership" of Chief Justice Warren Burger, according to a survey of law professors by the National Law Journal.

Based on the opinions of 173 constitutional law scholars who responded to the survey, the periodical reported low marks for the court and Burger.

The survey results, to be published Dec. 10, come after newspapers serialized "The Brethren," a book by Washington Post reporter Bob Woodward and Scott Armstrong, which depicts Burger as lacking the respect of some other justices.

According to the Journal, almost 60 percent of the respondents characterized the Burger court, as "confused and divided," while 19 percent called it a "counterbalance to the activism" of the court of previous Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Nineteen percent of the respondents termed the court a "legacy of Richard Nixon," and 6 percent called it "effective."

When rated against other U.S. Supreme Courts in this century, the largest group, 43 percent, rated the present court as "average," while more than 37 percent called it "below average." Eighteen percent found it "above average." No respondent called it the best court of the century, but nearly 2 percent called it "the worst."

Burger received the lowest grades of anyone on the court, according to the Journal's survey. More than 63 percent rated Burger "below average" when compared to other chief justices of the century.

The Journal, a New York-based weekly, warned that the findings "may in part reflect the political leaning of the scholars," since more than two-thirds of the respondents described themselves as liberals and moderates politically, while six tagged themselves as conservative.

Meanwhile, Woodward said Friday that information for his book did not come from a "hemorrhage of leaks" but rather from the justices' decision to allow former clerks to be interviewed.

"This is a door that was opened by the justices themselves with the feeling that we were not looking at any pending cases," Woodward said on the NBC-TV "Today" program. "We were only dealing with the last 10 years."

PROPHET'S MILITARY MAN
Abu Abd Allah Muhammad Ibn Umar Al-Saqidi, better known simply as Al-Waqidi, was an Arab historian who preserved and passed on to posterity the account of the military campaigns of the Prophet Muhammad.

The report of the prophet's campaigns are contained in the well-known work, "Kitab al-Maghazi."

Southport's Mock Drill

SOUTHPORT, N.C. (AP) — More than 400 residents of the area surrounding Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Brunswick Nuclear Station evacuated their homes Saturday afternoon as part of a simulated emergency at the facility.

Originally 7,000 persons were to have participated in the mock exercise, but weather conditions slimmed that figure down to 2,000. Eventually, only 400 or more actually left their homes because wind direction indicated that persons in certain areas would have to leave their homes.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who termed the event "a real success," nonetheless was critical of the state's lack of equipment to adequately monitor radiation levels. He added that the state should not have to rely on CP&L information to get such readings.

Those who did participate went to one of three inland shelters. Several of the evacuees felt the drill was a good experience.

"I thought it would be a good thing to know what to do and I thought the children would enjoy it," said Vicki Spencer of Yaupon Beach. She and neighbor Margaret Rudd gathered their five children and went to the Bolivia Elementary School more than 20 miles to the north.

Mrs. Spencer said she might not have left her home if she had not seen "The China Syndrome," a movie which dealt with a nuclear power plant accident.

Mrs. Rudd said that when her family evacuated their island home during Hurricane David they decided to stay with relatives in Raleigh instead of nearby shelters. She said they would do the same thing in case of a real nuclear accident.

"If this had been the real thing I wouldn't have stopped here, I would have kept on going," Mrs. Rudd said.

Still, others like Danny Yates used excuses for choosing not to participate in the drill.

"It's really rather simple and I'd rather go out and play golf right now," he said.

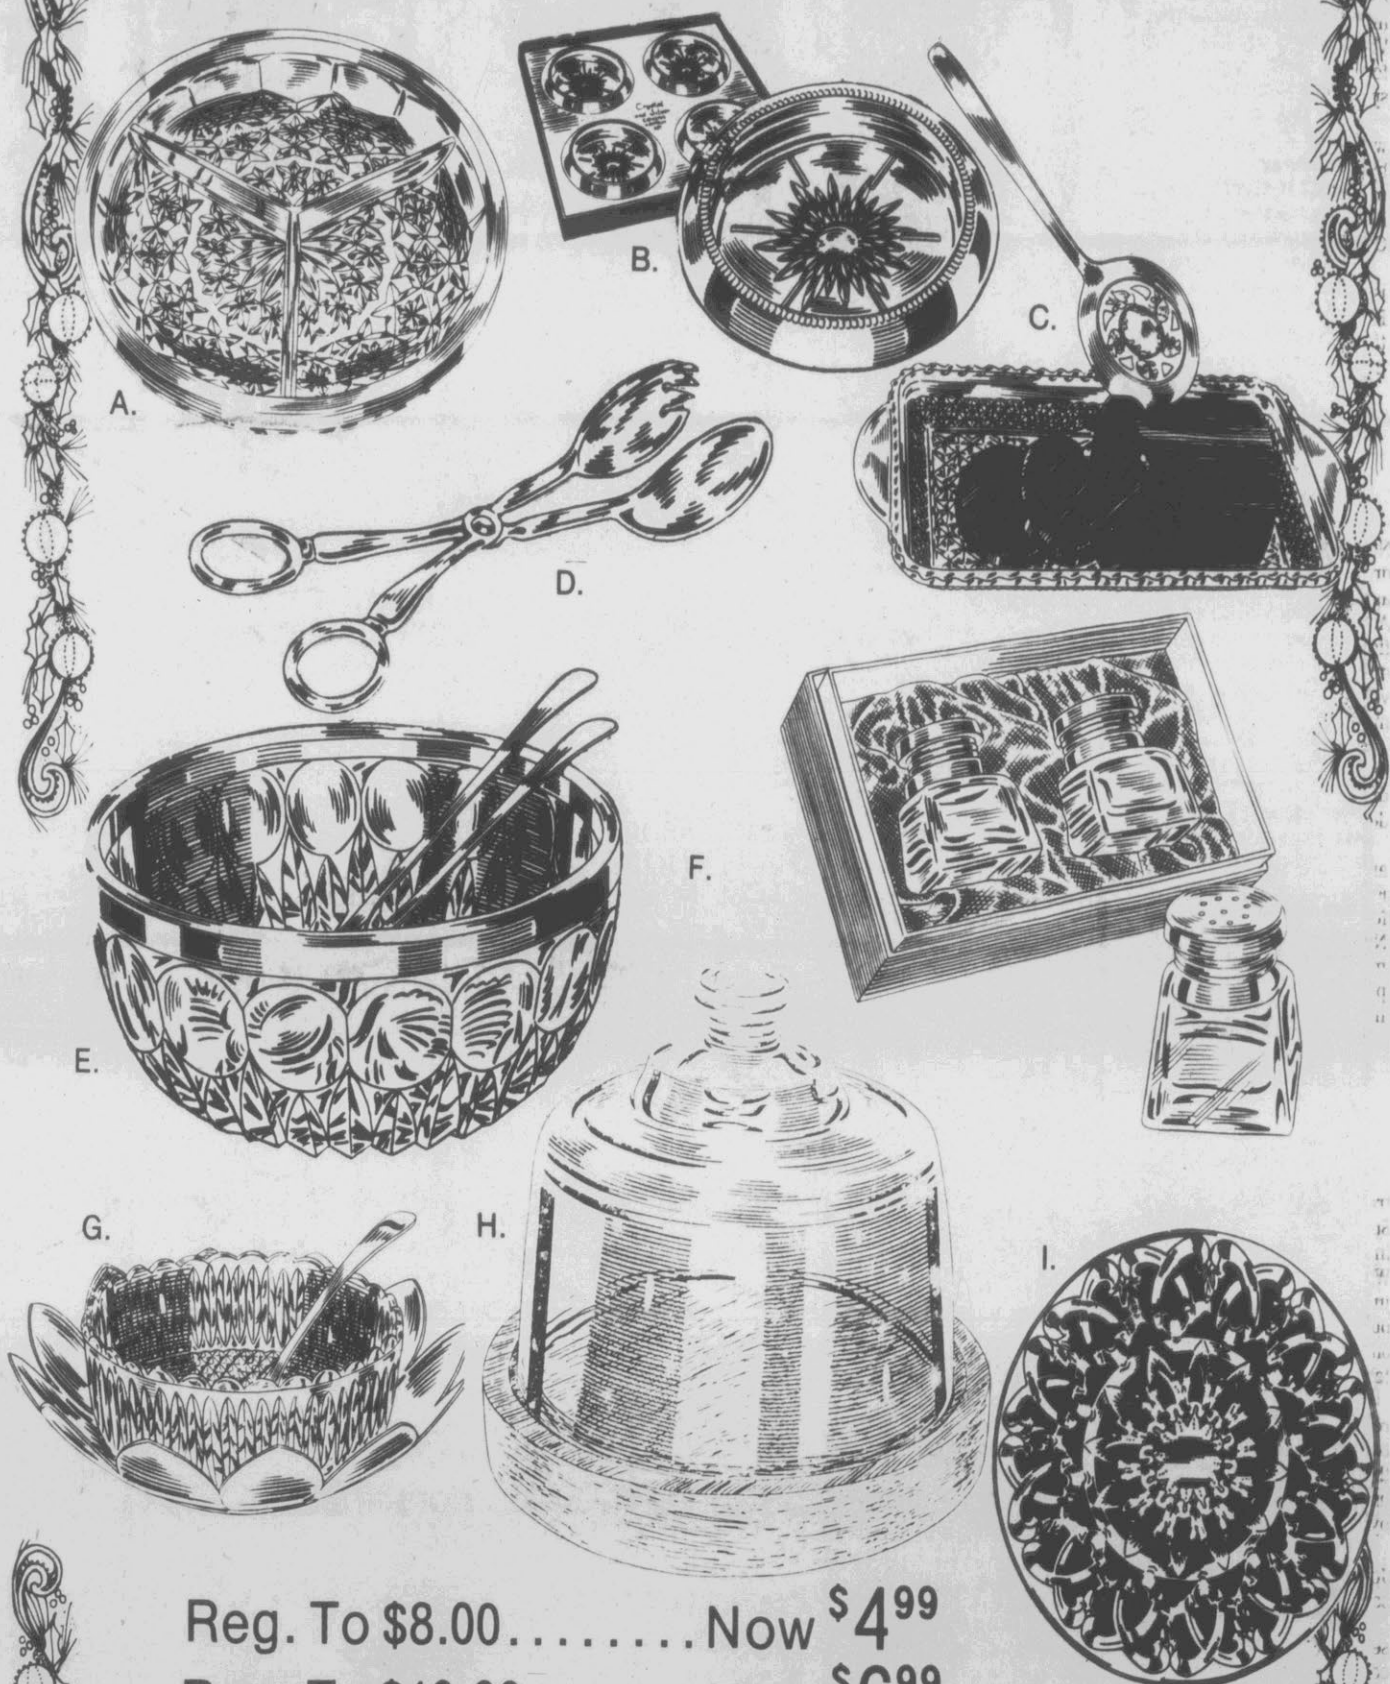

Various groups were critical of the drill for several reasons.

At a press conference in Bolivia, David Ford, commissioner-elect from the Oak Island town of Long Beach said that instead of spending money on this drill the state should provide another means of egress from Oak Island. Presently, only one bridge serves the island and using it requires residents to pass within two miles of the Brunswick plant.

"The evacuation of this area in the face of Hurricane David has already shown that the people of Oak Island are fully capable of efficient and orderly evacuation," Ford commented.

Other groups said that the area being evacuated was so small that it was unrealistic and others questioned if the state would be prepared to evacuate the resort area during the summer months. One group, "Harmony With All Living Things" from Wilmington, raised 200 helium-filled balloons near the nuclear facility.

Taxes On Social Security Would Not Affect Most Beneficiaries

WASHINGTON (AP) — An advisory panel that recommends making half of Social Security benefits taxable says most of the 35 million beneficiaries would not pay taxes on their benefits even if Congress adopted a change.

Only about 40 percent of the people receiving Social Security benefits would feel the tax bite, the Advisory Council on Social Security said Friday.

lies and individuals receiving Social Security would be affected. The rest still would not have enough taxable income to have to pay taxes.

Social Security Administration officials who did the staff work for the independent panel said they did not have a breakdown on how many of those who would be affected are elderly and how many are disabled workers.

Congress does not have to follow any of the panel's recommendations. The proposal to tax half of Social Security is certain to stir controversy and is not likely to be adopted without a long fight.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, said Friday he would do his "utmost to see that this ruinous recommendation is never enacted into law."

The panel's rationale is that Social Security should be treated like private pension plans, which are taxed to the extent that a retiree's benefits exceed his own contributions to the plan.

If that principle were followed to the letter, 83 percent of Social Security benefits would be taxed because workers usually pay no more than 17 percent of the benefits they expect to receive, the panel said.

"Rough justice would be done ... if half the benefit — the part commonly if somewhat inaccurately attributed to the employer contribution — were made taxable," the council said.

The proposed change was attacked by the American Association of Retired Persons, which said it would "make it impossible for many older persons to make ends meet."

The group also criticized the recommendation from a narrow majority of the council that "serious consideration" be given to raising the normal retirement age of 65 after the turn of the century.

The elderly will have no quarrel with one council recommendation: cost-of-living increases twice a year instead of annually when inflation exceeds 6 percent.

All Social Security beneficiaries got a 9.9 percent increase in July, but that was based on inflation in the 12 months ending in March. The Consumer Price Index already has jumped 8 percent since then, but the elderly must wait until July for their next increase.

Lt. Gov. Green To Speak At Luncheon

Lt. Governor Jimmy Green will be guest speaker at a "40 Years Governmental Appreciation Luncheon" to be held Wednesday, Dec. 12 at noon at Ramada Inn.

The luncheon, sponsored by the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, will honor Mayor Percy Cox, and Council members John Howard, Charles Vincent and Mildred McGrath for their combined 40 years of public service.

Special recognition awards will be presented to the officials by Robert Griffin, vice chairman of the Public and Governmental Affairs Council of the Chamber.

Registration for the luncheon is $8 per person. Deadline is Monday, Dec. 10. For reservations, call 752-4101. The public is invited to attend.

LBD Issue Discussed

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — North Carolina's liquor-by-the-drink issue reared its head again Friday as the Christian Action League continued its fight to halt further mixed-drink referendums and to prevent the state from issuing more mixed-beverage permits.

The league is appealing a lower court ruling that denied the temporary restraining order.

Attorneys for both the league and the state argued the issue Friday in a brief hearing before the N.C. Court of Appeals. No major presentations were made and no ruling on the appeal is anticipated before next month.

Second Sentence

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Central Prison inmate Cardell Spaulding was sentenced to life imprisonment Friday when a Wake County Superior Court jury failed to agree on what punishment he should receive on a conviction of stabbing a fellow inmate.

In a highly unusual occurrence, some jurors said during two individual pollings that they did not agree with the unanimous decision announced by the foreman.

Acting under state law, Judge John C. Martin imposed a life sentence.

Spaulding, who already is serving a life sentence, was convicted Thursday in the 1978 stabbing death of Hal Roscoe Simmons, a fellow inmate at Central Prison.

Bomb Blast

NEW YORK (AP) — Two police officers were slightly injured when a bomb blast rocked the Cuban Mission to the United Nations, showering the area with glass, police said.

An anonymous caller to The Associated Press claimed an anti-Castro group was responsible.

Police said witnesses reported seeing two men place the device near a garage door and flee just before it went off about midnight Friday. The blast shattered windows up and down the block.

Bizarre Cult Uprising

By PIETER VAN BENNEKOM from Britain less than two months ago. KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent and the Grenadines (UPI) — Police mopped up pockets of resistance Saturday from a bizarre uprising by members of the black Rastafarian cult on a small tourist hideaway in the Caribbean.

"No, it's not over yet," a police spokesman said of the takeover by the band of "Rastas" on Union Island, a tropical paradise at the southern end of the Grenadines chain. It belongs to St. Vincent, which gained full independence wear their hair in long dreadlocks and smoke marijuana as a sacrament.

Late Friday, police returned to the main island of St. Vincent with four alleged Bomba followers and the body of one man killed in the uprising. He was believed to have been a hotel handyman shot by the rebels for calling the police.

The rebels, whose motives were unclear, were reported still holding Ashton, one of the towns on Union Island which has only about 4 square miles and 4,000 permanent residents.

Police said Bomba and about 25 armed followers took over the three-man police detachment on Union Island Friday and piled rocks on the airport runway to keep the government from landing police or troops.

They also tried to take over nearby Palm Island but were repelled.

Prime Minister Milton Cato of St. Vincent, a conservative who won a resounding reelection victory only last Wednesday, declared a state of emergency and a dusk-to-dawn curfew throughout the state and asked nearby Barbados, as well as the United States and Great Britain, for military help to quell the uprising.

Eggs, Eggs

ANGIER, N.C. (AP) — If he'd had some bacon, Roy Wilkerson would have been set for a lifetime of breakfasts — a truck loaded with 9,000 dozen eggs ran off the road in front of his house, dumping an avalanche of yellow goo across his yard.

It was impossible to tell how many of the 108,000 eggs smashed when the 10-wheel truck swerved to avoid a school bus Friday, but one thing was certain: they were all scrambled.

"You ought to take a picture of this to show what the chickens went through for nothing," cackled one bystander as crews tried to right the truck without breaking more eggs.

News Briefs

Putting More Police On Duty

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista national police force will put 800 additional men on duty around the country in the next few days to try to combat a growing national crime wave.

Officials blamed the problem to a national unemployment rate of 34 percent.

A police executive said the extra men were trained locally by instructors from Panama, Cuba and Nicaragua and will be paid nearly double what policemen were paid under deposed President Anastasio Somoza, who was ousted by Sandinista guerrillas last July. He said the higher salaries were aimed at preventing payoffs and bribes prevalent under the Somoza regime.

Ballots Instead Of Rifles

LONDON (AP) — Lord Soames, Britain's new governor of war-torn Zimbabwe Rhodesia, has appealed to Rhodesians "to turn away from war" and use the ballot box instead of the rifle.

The son-in-law of the late Sir Winston Churchill, Soames was named Friday as governor of the rebel British colony.

He will rule the southern African nation for a critical few months before new black majority-rule are held elections and Britain gives the colony independence.

"If I can play any part in helping Rhodesia, which has suffered so much, to return to normality, to let bygones be bygones, to turn away from war towards politics and free and fair elections, and to come to majority rule through the ballot box without reaching for rifles, then I would have contributed something worth contributing," Soames told a news conference Friday night.

Turkish Professor Killed

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — Unidentified gunmen shot and killed a University of Istanbul sociology professor who served on the executive board of a leftist newspaper.

Police said Professor Orhan Tutengil was ambushed by three or four gunmen as he left his home on the way to work. The gunmen sped away in a car.

The university senate, fearing violent reaction, temporarily closed the school of economics, where Tutengil worked.

Bloody fighting between Turkey's extreme leftists and rightists has claimed 2,500 lives in the past two years. Both groups have assassinated scores of prominent Turks, including professors, judges and journalists.

Roy Tripp III To Sing In Mexico

FOURTH GRADER ROY TRIPP, III... a student at Elmhurst School, is among boys with musical talent from all across the U.S. and Canada who have been invited to sing in the Eleventh International Boy Singers Festival in Saltillo, Mexico. The festival is being held December 28 to January 1.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Elmhurst School fourth grader Roy Tripp III will be leaving Greenville the day after Christmas, headed for a singing engagement in the city of Saltillo, Mexico, south of the Texas border in the state of Coahuila — not far from Mexico's third largest city, Monterrey.

The curly-haired, dark-eyed lad is excited about going and says "I will be able to go swimming too because it will be warm there. But," he added, "I like snow and I hope when I come back to Greenville we will have some snow."

Son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tripp, Jr., young Roy several weeks ago auditioned in Raleigh in national auditions being held to find young boys for roles in forthcoming stage and movie productions of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Although he was not chosen for one of the roles, he was invited to join the U.S.A. delegation to travel to Saltillo for the Eleventh International Boy Singers Festival to be held December 28 to January 1.

"At first my husband was not too keen on this," Mrs. Tripp commented, "but then he decided it would be an exciting experience for Roy. Now he is as excited as our son about the trip."

The senior Roy will be traveling with his son. Their first stop will be in San Antonio, Texas. There they will meet with George Bragg, founder of the Texas Boys' Choir, and then travel on to Mexico.

Highlight of the festival will be the Concert of the Nations, at the Saltillo Auditorium on December 30. The local choir will share a program of choral selections with choirs from Canada, Mexico and the United States, as well as from other countries.

Then, on New Year's Eve the singing delegates will sing in the 18th century Saltillo Cathedral in a special service to be celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Francisco Villalobos, Bishop of the City of Saltillo.

And also on New Year's Eve, all the boys attending the festival will join together in singing traditional songs in both English and Spanish — including "Auld Lang Syne" and "La Golondrina." This program, to take place at the Casa de Lurdes, a large hacienda which serves as festival headquarters, will feature the national anthems of all the countries represented.

Although singing is the principal activity for the boys attending the festival, the boys will have time and opportunity to see the art and choreography of bullfighting and of the corrida, a Mexican-type rodeo. There will be a reception given in their honor by the Governor and First Lady of Coahuila State and by the Lord Mayor and First Lady of the City of Saltillo at the Governor's Palace.

Then, with the new year 1980 with festivities over, young Roy Tripp and his father, along with boys from Canada and the United States, will board planes on January 2 for the return trip home — and back to school, and back to work.

Concert Of Contemporary Music At 3:15 Today

"Instead," a concert of contemporary and avant-garde music, is being presented at 3:15 p.m. today in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus.

Students to be performing in the concert are: Harcourt Burns, Martha Ferguson, Johnice Johnson, Kathy Law, Donna Roman, and Melissa Ussery, all piano; Kevin Bagby and Kathy Smith, clarinet; Susan Jette and Stefan Stuber, percussion; Lynn Beyar, flute; Cynthia Cooley, bassoon; Karen Coupe, viola; Kevin Ferguson, trombone; Judy Fordyce, horn. Also, James Gilliam, keyboards; Kenneth Hubbard, alto saxophone; William Keith, trumpet; Larry Lyles, violin; and Barbara Salter, cello.

For the program today, the ensemble will perform "OM Entrance" by Philip Corner; Edward Diamente's "Mirrors Six" for alto saxophone and piano; John Cage's "Imaginary Landscape No. 4" for 12 radios; and George Caccopio's "Casseopea" for multiple keyboards.

Other selections to be performed are: Aaron Copland's "Vitebsk"; two other John Cage works — "Tossed As It Is Untroubled" a meditation for prepared piano and "Two Pieces for Piano"; and Anton Sebern's "Konzert" opus 24, for flute, clarinet, oboe, horn, trumpet, trombone, violin, viola, and piano.

These compositions range in date from Copland's 1929 piece to Edward Diamente's "Mirrors," composed in 1974.

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Auditions Set For Two Plays

Dinner Theater

Monday, December 10 and Wednesday, December 12, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. on both dates, are the hours of auditions for the forthcoming Mendenhall Dinner Theater production of "6 Rms Riv Vu."

Dr. Helen Starr will direct the production of Bob Randall's comedy. Dr. Steer has currently been appearing in the ECU Playhouse production of "The Children's Hour," and she is a member of the Drama and Speech Dept. faculty.

Production date for "6 Rms Riv Vu" are February 6-9, with rehearsals scheduled to begin January 9.

"6 Rms Riv Vu" was first presented in New York in 1972. The title refers to a Manhattan apartment which is for rent, and the three couples who come to look at it.

Several characters are needed for the play — the lead couple, their respective spouses, a young couple with a new baby, the woman in a neighboring apartment, and the superintendent-janitor.

Dr. Steer encourages community persons interested in acting to come for try-outs. Auditions are open to all who would like to try.

Boy Meets Girl

The East Carolina Playhouse will hold auditions on Monday and Tuesday, December 10 and 11, for the comedy "Boy Meets Girl," which will open in the Studio Theater on February 13 for an eleven-night run.

Director Edgar R. Loessin notes that it is somewhat unusual to hold auditions this far in advance of the production, but said "we wanted to cast the show before students go home for Christmas break, so that we can begin to rehearse just as soon as everyone is back from vacation. Rehearsals will begin around January 11."

Loessin said there are roles in the production for five women and 14 men, and "we especially need a couple of mature men for this one."

Auditions are open to members of the Greenville community at large, as well as to ECU students, faculty, and staff.

Auditions will be held on the two nights from 7:30 until 10:30 p.m. in Room 206 of the ECU Drama Building.

Scripts are on reserve in the Reserve Room of ECU's Joyner Library. Anyone interested in auditioning may read them.

Mothers' Finest Strive To Reach Audiences Of All Ages

DISCUSS SUCCESS... Joyce Kennedy (right), female vocalist, and Glen Murdock, lead and background vocalist, discuss Mother's Finest success during an interview following a concert at Minges Coliseum Saturday, December 1.

By LEIGH COAKLEY
Reflector Staff Writer

When a stockholder and public relations man from Epic Records who frequented the Electric Ballroom in Atlanta suggested someone come down and take a look at a young group called Mother's Finest, he had the right idea in mind. Epic did send someone to Atlanta. On September 14, 1979, Mother's Finest celebrated the group's 10th anniversary together.

At Minges Coliseum last Saturday night, Joyce (Baby Jean) Kennedy, Glen Murdock, Wizzard, Moses Mo, Mike, and BB Queen, the six musicians of Mother's Finest, performed for an hour and a half. It was a performance of high energy for both musicians and the audience. Mother's Finest (MF) entertained a capacity crowd at the coliseum.

Mother's Finest has relied on Eastern North Carolina for support for the past several years. But the performers don't rely solely on us anymore. Group tours are now nationwide and MF has been the world over several times. In April this year, MF drew capacity crowds in Holland.

During an interview after the performance, the group sat Indian style on the floor of the locker room as they ate Chinese food and vegetarian dinners, talking about past events and future hopes.

Epic Records has stood firmly beside MF from the very beginning. According to the musicians, they will remain with Epic "while the going is good." The group has agreed to release two albums per year. This seems to be a lot to expect, but evidently it's comfortable for them. "Albums are motivating because they make people want to see us," said Joyce Kennedy, the female vocalist.

Mother's Finest not only stresses music, but emphasizes performing and dancing as well. Because of this, concerts appear to be choreographed — however, only songs are rehearsed.

This group's image is singular and powerful. MF is stereotyped by that image; which according to the group members, is positive acceptance of what they are doing. "Success has not come overnight," said Kennedy. "It has been a gradual building process that has taken three to four albums to achieve". A new release is planned for the spring.

Pacing their career and taking it slow may be the main reason MF should continue to grow. Kennedy said that many groups dominate the market for a time and then fizzle but. Unlike some groups today, MF doesn't disband every few months.

When asked about the motivating force that has kept them together all these years, all six members agreed that "We like each other and the music we play". Glen Murdock, lead and background vocalist commented, "It's our life, our survival".

Original material and song writing is approached collectively by all members of the group. After being together for ten years, they have come to learn what each person wants to say in a song. This has led to their being a cohesive entity.

Though they claim that some critics have taken their name out of context and implied social stigmas, MF proudly defend themselves.

Moses Mo, guitarist, said the group writes and sings what they feel. "And what we feel is not vulgar or incriminating because we are not vulgar or incriminating people".

Mother's Finest strives to reach out to everyone; the young as well as the old. With the release of their hit "Somebody to Love," they brought the people of the 1960's into their realm.

When asked about the current disco craze and New Wave in music, the group consensus is that "some is good, and some is bad". Moses Mo offered his own opinion. "Some is good, most is bad," he said.

Mother's Finest opened the Saturday concert as a courtesy to Nantucket, which they said expressed recognition of a close knit relationship between Nantucket and Greenville.

Mother's Finest is gaining national attention, and is achieving this without conforming to traditional trends in music. Murdock said, "We play to make people feel good, to help them relax and have a good time".

MF's current winter tour began with Aerosmith on December 8th, and is scheduled to end in February. "Maybe then, we can relax," the six agreed.

Mother's Finest albums are "Another Mother Further," "Mother's Finest," "Mother Factor," (Motherfux From the Region of Smooth) and "Mother's Finest Live". Among the group's hit songs are "Baby Love," "Mickey's Monkey," "Somebody to Love," "Fire," "Niggers Can't Sing No Rock 'n' Roll," "Give You all the Love," "Love Changes," "Watch My Stylin'," and "Don't Wanna Come Back."

Tuesday Concert For ECU Wind Ensemble

The 57-members of the Symphonic Wind Ensemble of East Carolina University will present a free concert at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, December 11 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Herbert L. Carter will conduct in a program that features a pot-pourri of Christmas music.

Compositions to be performed on this special program include Bach's well known "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" arranged by

Leidzen; the "Christmas Greetings March" by Harold Walters; Morton Gould's arrangement of "Jingle Bells"; Percy Grainger's "The Sussex Mummings' Christmas Carol"; the introduction, march and Shepherds' Dance from Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors."

Sheila Brooks, mezzo-soprano, will be soloist in the Yon-Leidzen "Gesu Bambino," and tenor Ira Jacobs will be soloist in the Torem-Cacavas song, "The Christmas Song." Ronnie Wooten, president of the Wind Ensemble, will conduct Alfred Reed's "What Child is This?," and the two final selections will be a couple of Leroy Anderson songs, "A Christmas Festival" and "Sleigh Ride."

The public is invited, and this is a program that will have considerable appeal for young listeners.

Children's Reception

A reception with entertainment and refreshments will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 12 at Gray Gallery on campus to honor school children of Pitt County and Greenville Schools.

For the first time, children in kindergarten through grades six in both city and county schools are having their own Christmas Art Show on the ECU campus.

Competition Winner

Paula Scarangella, a harpist and senior in the School of Music, East Carolina University, has been named winner in the final round of the School of Music Concerto Competition.

The final competition was held November 29 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

As winner of the competition, Ms. Scarangella will be presented with the East Carolina Symphony in the annual Children's Concert to be held Wednesday, February 20, in Wright Auditorium.

Ms. Scarangella is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Scarangella of Norfolk, Virginia.

For the final competition she performed "Dances" by Debussy, and was accompanied on the piano by Susan Gillis.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON — Christmas singing and an interview with a North Carolina author are the two events on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" show, airing from noon until 12:30 p.m. over WTTN-TV, Channel 7, today.

The Choraliers of Camp Lejeune, directed by Pam Metz, present a medley of Christmas music including a "Jingle Bells Travlogue," and "Christmas Is A Time For Loving."

Newspaper columnist Dennis Rogers, author of a recently published collections of his articles in the book, "Home Grown," discusses the book and his subjects, mostly in eastern and central North Carolina.

Tryon Palace Ceremony This Afternoon

NEW BERN — One of the persons expected to be on hand at 4:45 p.m. today for a ribbon cutting ceremony at Tryon Palace is Pierre de Graffenried, first secretary of the Office of the Swiss Observed to the United Nations. de Graffenried is a descendent of Baron Christopher de Graffenried, founder of the town of New Bern in 1710. Senator Jesse Helms is also expected to be in attendance. U.S. Senator Robert Morgan will officially open the Tryon Palace holiday season at the palace entrance in today's ceremony. A host of dignitaries and special guests will lead a grand march to the main entrance of Tryon Palace to open the 18th century Christmas celebration of North Carolina's Colonial capitol. Candlelight tours will be offered the general public following the brief opening ceremony. In addition to the interior of the palace, two other buildings, the John Wright Stanly House and the Stevenson House, will also be elaborately decorated.

The first floor of two other buildings, rarely open to the public, will also be decorated — the Jones House, and the Commission House. Candlelight tours will run from 5 to 8 p.m. today, and again at these hours on Tuesday and Thursday, December 11 and 13. Visitors will hear harpsichord music in the governor's palace; hear carolers perform in the inner palace courtyard; and sample beverages from wassail bowls in the Jones House and the Commission House. The candlelight tours are $2 for adults and $1 for children. The Tryon Palace complex will be open Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9:30 to 4 p.m. and from 1:30 to 4 p.m. on Sundays, and will be closed Mondays, for Christmas on December 24-26 and on New Year's day. Ticket reservations can be made by calling 638-5109.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MEREDITH FOLTZ

British royalty reigns in three new books at Sheppard Library.

Suspected of sorcery by some, Anne Boleyn certainly had charms enough to inspire England's King Henry VIII to defy the Pope and divorce Katherine of Aragon in order to marry Anne in 1533. Only three years later, though, Henry had abandoned Anne to the executioner and was busily preparing to wed for a third time. For her new biography ANNE BOLEYN, author Norah Lofts has drawn on diaries, letters, and other accounts from the Tudor period to reconstruct the life and death of Henry's second queen. Lofts speculates that Henry's early passion for Anne was fired by her tempting unavailability. His ardor cooled, it seems, when he had her as his wife and the challenge of the unobtainable was gone. As Henry's love for Anne turned to hate and she failed to bear a son, the king and his ministers realized that Anne's necessary removal could be accomplished only by her death. Anne was therefore charged with incest and adultery, treasonable crimes for a queen and punishable by death. Anne's history-changing rise to the throne and her ignominious fall from it make a dramatic story all the more extraordinary because it is true.

Before writing KING WITHOUT A CROWN, Daphne Bennett saw Prince Albert, Queen Victoria's husband, as "a dreary and unromantic German." Her research, however, showed the Prince Consort to be a sensitive, energetic, highly intelligent man who was the real genius behind the throne. Married to Victoria in 1840, Albert came to understand that, as the queen's husband, he "should sink his own individual existence in that of his wife," aiming at "no power...for himself," yet acting as her "sole confidential adviser in politics" and "her permanent minister." KING WITHOUT A CROWN reveals that Albert's dedication to his secondary role warred with his deep need to achieve personal distinction. Bennett demonstrates that, despite his inevitable faults, Albert — through Victoria — made valuable contributions to the development of Britain's constitutional monarchy.

THE WINDSOR STORY, by J. Bryan III and Charles Murphy, challenges the popular image of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor — the former Edward VIII and Wallis Simpson — as a mythically romantic couple. Although Bryan and Murphy knew the Duke and Duchess, they have relied for this book on interviews with the closest friends of the couple, Wallis Simpson appears here as a domineering woman, hungry for a title greater than duchess. The king, who in 1936 sacrificed his throne "for the woman I love", seems to have been a slave to that love for the twice-divorced Wallis. THE WINDSOR STORY follows the playboy king and the ambitious American from their separate lives to their fateful meeting and courtship and through the years of marriage embittered by social exile.

Specials On UNC-TV

Three of the specials scheduled for showing over UNC-TV (PBS), Channel 25, Greenville, are ones on the Nile River, the life of Mark Twain, and the photographs of John Albok.

— At 8 p.m. today, the first of a two-part journey along the Nile filmed by Captain Jacques Cousteau and his crew will be shown. The film is a result of ten months spent following the course of the Nile from headwaters in the Rwenzori mountains to the Mediterranean.

— "Mark Twain: Beneath the Laughter," is being broadcast at 9 p.m. on Monday, December 10. Actor Dan O'Herlihy plays the role of Twain. The role of an English earl is portrayed by Lewis Leary, retired UNC-Chapel Hill English professor and noted Mark Twain historian. The film takes a look at the darker, more pessimistic side of Twain's life.

— Tuesday, December 11 at 9 p.m. is the date of the special on the photography of John Albok. Now 85 years old, Albok, a native of Hungary, was a Manhattan tailor who during the depression became deeply concerned with the plight of the poor — and on Sundays recorded the hardships of the destitute in New York. Albok's photographs, and the stories they tell, are part of American history.

Search For Mass Grave

OKTAHA, Okla. (AP) — Archaeologists will search next spring for a mass grave of Confederate soldiers killed in Oklahoma's only major Civil War battle.

About 100 dead soldiers — many of them Cherokee Indians who fought for the South — were buried in a trench after the Union victory at the Battle of Honey Springs in 1863.

The bodies of several Union soldiers buried with the Confederate dead were dug up about 10 years later, but the others were left there, and now the exact site of the grave is not known. The Honey Springs Battlefield Commission is funding the $8,000 search.

Carousel Exhibit At The N.C. History Museum

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — Whirling round and round in time to stirring band music and dazzling lights — who can forget the breathtaking excitement of the carousel?

These nostalgic memories can be relived at the N.C. Museum of History's new major exhibit, "Carousel Fantasy." A parade of horses, lions, ostriches and dragons are in the museum in the exhibit which opened to the public on Dec. 7.

A real operating 16-foot carousel is the highlight of the exhibit, with outstanding examples of carousel animals from a major private collection as well as some from Raleigh's Pullen Park Carousel. The exhibit interprets the carousel's ancient history, America's booming carousel industry at the turn of the century, and also present-day attempts in North Carolina to restore the charm and prestige of some of our old-style wooden carousels.

As Early as 500 AD
Carousels date from as early as 500 AD with variations developing in several countries, ranging from ancient Mexico to India and throughout the Near East. The origin of the term "carousel" derives from an Arabian game of horsemanship played in the 12th century. Riding furiously in a circle, participants tossed containers of perfume back and forth, the object being to "odorize" one's opponent. Spanish and Italian crusaders took this strange game, which they called "little war" back to Europe. Their terms for "little war" — "garosello" and "carosella" — translated into our modern "carousel."

Our present-day versions of the carousel began in 17th century France, where the "little war" game evolved into revolving wooden horses used to train young noblemen for jousting tournaments. To increase their lancing skills, the young men attempted to spear rings as they spun around a centerpole. Soon this seriousness gave way to sheer frivolity, and the French nobility had elaborate carousels built for their pleasure.

English Added Power
The French popularized the carousel, but the English revolutionized it when English inventors introduced steam-powered carousels, a development that replaced earlier horse and man-powered machines. Electric and gasoline-powered carousels soon followed.

With the advent of steam power, the carousel industry expanded rapidly, especially in America. A German immigrant cabinetmaker, Gustav Dentzel, considered by most as the founder of American carousel industry, tentatively began carousel production in the late 1860's, wondering if there were a market in this country.

Public reaction to Dentzel's carousels was so favorable that the name Dentzel quickly became synonymous with perfection in carousel carving. His creations were to be found at many of the finer parks and resorts in America and abroad. Dentzel's work set a standard of quality that inspired rival companies for more than half a century.

Numerous Companies
Numerous carousel companies arose to capitalize on the craze that swept the country in the late 19th and early 20th centuries. These companies prospered for several decades — until 1929 when the industry suffered with the economic crash of 1929 and never fully regained its former glory. The carousel craftsmen employed profound skill in their proud and painstaking work in carving the animals. These wooden horses, lions and tigers are true masterpieces, especially when compared to their more modern descendants that are summarily cast from aluminum and fiber glass. Today, some of these old hand-carved creations are being salvaged, and a few are being restored in North Carolina. Elements of this rise in appreciation is shown in the new exhibit.

The development of carousels in North Carolina followed much the same pattern as elsewhere in the country. It is possible that carousels, in one form or another, accompanied some of the early traveling menageries and amusement troupes that journeyed through the state prior to the Civil War. However, it was not until after the war that carousels or "spinning jennies" became a familiar sight in the state, regularly drawing wide-eyed crowds to the growing country and state fairs.

Town Machines
By the 1890's, a few towns in North Carolina began to have their own machines. In 1891, Raleigh had what is believed to be the earliest non-traveling "city" carousel in the state, located in a vacant lot at the corner of Blount and Hargett Streets.

Electric companies built amusement parks at the ends of their new trolley lines to encourage people to ride the new-fangled electric transportation. North Carolina also had its share of electric company amusement parks, and Carolina Power and Light Company's development of Bloomsbury Park gave Raleigh another carousel, one of the finest money could buy! In the summer of 1912, the company installed an electrically powered Dentzel Carousel at the new trolley park.

The decline of the carousel industry in the late 1920's did not end North Carolina's enthusiasm for the carousel. In the 1930s through the 1950s, old-style wooden carousels were bought second- and third-hand and erected at several parks across the state. Some of these carousels survive; others have either moved on or have been dismantled and scattered. Today only six of the old carousels remain in parks around the state. These are at Burlington City Park; Sunset Park in Rocky Mount; Seashore Amusement Park at Carolina Beach; Carowinds near Charlotte; and one each at Chavis and Pullen parks in Raleigh.

A photo montage of six still existing wooden carousels in North Carolina is a feature of the new exhibit, which will be centered around the two-tiered working model of a carousel. Twenty hand-carved animals from the collection of Charlotte Dinger of Morristown, N.J., prance around the merry-go-round, to the tunes of the Pullen Park Band Organ. Around the walls are outlines of carousel history, as well as examples of some of the efforts to restore the Pullen Park Carousel. The carousel at Pullen has the dual distinction of having resided in North Carolina longer than any of the other existing carousels, and also of being the state's only true, remaining "trolley park" carousel.

The exhibit will continue through May, 1980. The museum at 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, is open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and 1 - 6 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Governor Hunt To Speak At First Flight Ceremony December 17

KITTY HAWK - Governor James B. Hunt Jr. has declared the coming year of 1980 as the time "North Carolina honors the Wright brothers" and he will offer the keynote address during special ceremonies commemorating the 76th anniversary of the Wright brothers' historic first flight at Kitty Hawk. The ceremony will be held Monday, December 17.

Highlights of the day's activities include previewing segments from "The Flight Brothers!", a musical television drama co-produced by the Carolina Regional Theater and the University of North Carolina Television Network. The musical was first premiered several seasons ago by the East Carolina Playhouse at East Carolina University.

The commemorative program, an annual one sponsored by the First Flight Society and the National Park Service, will begin at 9:30 a.m. at the Wright Brothers National Memorial Visitor Center in Kill Devil Hills, the site of the birth of aviation in 1903.

Hunt and other state officials - including Sec. of Transportation Tom Bradshaw and Sec. of Cultural Resources Sara Hodgkins, are scheduled to speak at the morning ceremonial. Tommy Gray, chairman of the Dare County Commissioners, and Lowell Perry, mayor of Kill Devil Hills, will welcome the audience. Lorimer Midgett, past president of the First Flight Society, will serve as master of ceremonies.

The Atlantic Christian College Band, of Wilson, and the Northeastern High School Band from Elizabeth City will provide music to open the ceremony. A military flyover at the monument erected in honor of the Wrights concludes the morning's program.

The annual luncheon meeting of the First Flight Society will be held at 12:30 at the Seafare Restaurant in Nags Head.

Last year, Hunt notes, the nation celebrated the Wright brothers' 75th anniversary with an unprecedented program. "Therefore, this will be the year North Carolina honors the Wright brothers," he announced on accepting an invitation to be the featured speaker at the First Flight Society luncheon.

Senator Melvin R. Daniels, Jr. (D-Elizabeth City), president of the First Flight Society, will be master of ceremonies during the annual luncheon.

Also during the meeting, the six crew members of the NC-4 who made the first flight over the Atlantic Ocean in 1919 will be inducted into the First Flight Shrine, and a portrait honoring them will be unveiled.

The narrative to the award will be given by Paul Garber, Historian Emeritus of the Air and Space Museum at the Smithsonian Institution.

Duke Surges Past ECU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
DURHAM — Duke University's number two ranked Blue Devils came alive in the first few minutes of the second half and pulled away from a stubborn East Carolina team last night, earning a 92-73 victory.

The two teams had been tied, 37-all, at the half, but Duke, sparked by the play of Mike Gminski, Vince Taylor and Eugene Banks, came back strong, got their fast break game going, and pulled away to win it.

Banks, held to just two of ten field goals in the first half, hit five of six in the second, while Gminski, with 13 second half points, helped put the icing on the cake. The two made several flashy dunks that brought the Blue Devils fans to their feet, and got Cameron Indoor Stadium rocking.

For East Carolina Coach Dave Odom, the defeat came in stride. "No offense intended, but coaching didn't win or lose this game tonight," he said.

"I'm extremely proud of our kids. They did everything that we asked of them in terms of tactics and more. I thought that our game plan was a good one."

to allow Kenny Dennard, Vince Taylor and Banks "all they wanted" outside.

"I think the heart of their club is (Bob) Bender and Gminski. Without Bender they are not the same club. They are good still, but not great."

"Of course, Gminski is Gminski. What can I say? We planned to play behind him. We knew if he played in front of him, they'd lob the ball over, and he'd slam it through with a dunk."

"Folks don't want to see the long shot in basketball. The most exciting play is the dunk, and nothing excites the fans more. I could see us fronting him and him dunking all night long. And nothing turns these Duke fans on like a dunk."

It proved true. Duke was able to get their transaction game going in the second half, making a number of steals, and it proved to be the difference.

The game was won—or lost—in the opening minutes of the second half. "I told the kids at halftime that the first three minutes of the second half would decide what kind of game it was going to be. And it did."

Odom pointed out that the Pirates were coached in the game to meet the passes. "At the start of the second half, we didn't do it, and Duke, smartly, stepped in to get the steal and the fast break. They just played smarter and we didn't play as smart in the second half," Odom said.

The coach said the only way to beat Duke is to stop the transaction break and to control the tempo. "I think we did a good job of both in the first half, but we didn't in the second. Still, we could have folded up anytime and lost by 40. I don't like to lose this much, but I think our kids hung in there well."

Duke scored the first six points of the game, and built up an early nine point lead, 11-2. But the Pirates began to pick up a couple of baskets here and there and slowly pulled back into the game. They closed the gap to two at 16-14, but couldn't get off a shot when they had the chance to do it. Again at 22-20, they had the chance and failed, but then tied it up on two free throws by David Underwood at 22-22. Duke went back out by six, but the Pirates got a basket and two free throws by Underwood to tie it up at 26-26, and with 3:16 left, Herb Gray hit off a drive to put the Pirates ahead, 23-26.

The lead was finally stretched to four at 35-31 with 57 seconds left, but Gminski tossed back a missed shot and Chip Engelland scored at the horn off a steal to knot the score at 37-37.

Taylor scored an early jumper and Gminski made two free throws to start off the second-half, putting Duke up, 41-39. East Carolina tied it once more at 41-all, but a three-point play

Tar Heels Nip Bear Cats On Late Scores

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Dean Smith is known throughout the college basketball fraternity as a thinking man's coach, so it came as little surprise Saturday when he used his smaller players at will against quick Cincinnati.

The move paid off handsomely as eighth-ranked North Carolina overcame a second-half deficit of six points to down the Bearcats, 68-63, before 15,000 fans at the Greensboro Coliseum.

"I want to congratulate Cincinnati on a well-conceived game plan," said Smith. "They controlled tempo with their three guards. Their lineup was very hard to play. That's why we went to the smaller lineup — so we could chase better."

Smith said he primarily concerned with Cincinnati's Eddie Lee, who scored 19 points.

"Lee is tough to handle, but I think Jimmy Black did as good a job as anyone could possibly do on him," said Smith.

But Smith said the Tar Heels did not take advantage of several good scoring opportunities.

"We had 11 fast breaks, three-on-one or three-on-two, where we didn't even get a shot. We've got to improve on that. That should be 20 points for us."

Cincinnati's Ed Badger said he was "tired of losing. It's so frustrating to come so close and then be turned away, but I'm really proud of our effort."

"We're going to win a lot of games this season," said Badger. "We've got to keep the intensity up for future games that we had today. I'm really happy for Eddie (Lee). He had a super day. He played up to his potential and a little more."

The Tar Heels, after trailing for more than 10 minutes, took the lead with 1:32 remaining on a layup by Mike O'Koren. They had rallied from an eight-point deficit in the first half on to take a 33-27 lead at the intermission on baskets by Black and Al Wood.

Bearcat forward Bobby Austin, who matched Wood for high-scoring honors with 20 points, came out hot in the second half and Cincinnati took the lead 45-43 with 14:20 remaining.

The next 13 minutes saw the teams trade baskets, with Cincinnati eventually building a six-point lead with eight minutes remaining on a basket by David Duarte.

North Carolina, 3-1, then rallied from behind on the shooting of Wood and the aggressive play under the boards by freshman James Worthy, who stole the ball and later dunked it at the four-minute mark to tie the game at 63-63.

Then Worthy rebounded a missed Bearcat shot, setting up O'Koren's layup with 1:32 remaining. Cincinnati then lost the ball on a turnover and North Carolina went into its four-corner offense, forcing a foul of Worthy by Cincinnati's Dwight Jones.

Bison Rush Past Rampants, 21-9, For 4-A Crown

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

HIGH POINT — Four years ago the roles were reversed. Coach Dave Bumgarner and his Rose Rampants defeated Richmond County and Coach Ron Krall on their way to the 1975 state 4-A championship.

This past Friday — four Decembers later — Krall, at the helm of High Point Central, was the victor, as his Black Bison whipped Rose, 21-9, to win the 1979 state 4-A championship.

For Krall, who brought High Point Central its first championship in the school's 52-year existence, it was the end of a truly remarkable season.

Picked to finish in the middle of its own conference, the Black Bison lost three of their first four games, before righting themselves and reeling off 10 straight wins, including Friday's championship battle at A.J. Simeon Stadium before over 6,000 fans.

For Bumgarner, it was the end of a season many had supposed would end four weeks ago, when the playoffs began.

The Rampants, who finished second to Rocky Mount in Division I, stumbled early, losing to Kinston and later to the Gryphons, but were unbeaten in their next eight games, until losing to the Black Bison.

"We have a darn good football team," Bumgarner said. "If you go back and look at the papers early in the season, no one was picking us to get this far."

"We just weren't picked to be among the top teams," he said, as his troops filed silently and tearfully past toward the team bus. "Then the AP picked us. I think tied for 16th in the state, and I knew we were better than that."

Trailing 14-3 at the half, the Rampants stormed out in the early minutes of the third period, looking, for the first time all night, like the team Bumgarner said they were.

Rose, which generated a mere 31 yards total offense in the first two periods, quickly put together a seven-play drive to narrow the deficit to 14-9.

Mark Shank, who finished the night with 51 hard-earned yards rushing, ran the opening kickoff back 26 yards, giving the Ram to the 40. The march was spearheaded by quarter-

Cowboys Cage Eagles, 24-17

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — "He's been kidding me," Tony Dorsett said of rookie Ron Springs. "He's been telling me, 'Either run for 150 yards or get hurt.'"

So Dorsett got hurt Saturday. And with Springs taking over a major share of Dallas' ground game and helping Roger Staubach to guide the Cowboys to two touchdowns in the second half, they beat Philadelphia 24-17 to move into the National Football League playoffs.

Springs was the driving force in the third period surge to Robert Newhouse's 17-yard tie-breaking TD and to Staubach's 17-yard deflected scoring pass to Butch Johnson in the fourth quarter.

It pulled the Cowboys into a tie for first place in the National Conference East with the Eagles, each at 10-5, and guaranteed at least a wild card and its 13th postseason appearance in the last 14 years.

"It didn't really surprise me at all that he had a great game because Ron is a great athlete," Dorsett said of Springs. "He's big and strong and has speed and quickness and should be commended for stepping in and playing so well as a rookie in his first opportunity for a big game."

It didn't surprise Dallas Coach Tom Landry, either. "Springs is a fine runner," he said. "That's why we left him behind Dorsett. We've got to have a top runner behind him."

Springs, though, brushed aside the sudden attention, deflecting it back toward Dorsett. "Tony's a great back. I'm just glad they called on me to run the ball. This is a great thrill. I hoped to have a great game so they wouldn't miss Tony so badly."

By withstanding a late Philadelphia challenge and holding on for the victory, the Cowboys set up a confrontation with division-rival Washington on the season's final Sunday. As Dallas avenged the Eagles' 31-21 victory four weeks ago, the

Emory Glad To Be Home

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Ed Emory, named yesterday morning as the new head football coach at East Carolina University, is glad to be back home.

"When I saw the parade forming (Greenville's Christmas parade)," he joked to the audience gathered in the Willis Building to welcome him, "I didn't know coming back was so important. I didn't expect that kind of welcome."

The parade might not have been a welcome for the new coach, but his promises of continued improvement for East Carolina University's football program brought rounds of applause from the fans and supporters in the audience.

Emory, a 1960 East Carolina graduate, also said that he didn't intend for the job to be a stepping-stone to some other job. "Heck, I used Wake Forest, Duke, Clemson and Georgia Tech as stepping stones to get back home."

Emory will be replacing Pat Dye in the head coaching job. Dye resigned a week and a half ago, and was named Friday afternoon as the new head coach at the University of Wyoming. (See story on Page B-5.)

The new coach was welcomed by chancellor Tom Brewer, who strongly endorsed the athletic program at East Carolina in his welcome.

"I want to reemphasize our unrelenting determination to continue the development of our football program. We are proud of our past accomplishments, but we are even more ambitious with regard to the future. Our football schedule must be improved, our facilities must be augmented, our support must be intensified, and our commitment must be clearly visible. The chancellor's office pledges to continue to work toward the accomplishment of these goals," Brewer said.

Brewer referred to his predecessor in the office, Dr. Leo Jenkins, and quoted him as saying, "We will play anybody, anywhere, any time."

"My addition to Leo's battle cry is that our new goal is to say that we will whip anybody, any where any time," Brewer added.

The chancellor also read a telegram from Georgia Tech coach Pepper Rogers, stating that a number of his former assistants had gone on to head coaching jobs. "Ed Emory is as qualified to be a head coach," Rogers concluded.

Emory expressed pride in not only being the new ECU coach, but in also being an East Carolina graduate. "The call from Dr. Brewer (informing him that he had the job) was a dream come true."

Emory pledged to "produce the best football team possible for East Carolina."

"We'll play hard, with enthusiasm and with excitement. But we want the young men who represent us on the field to be the type that people can be proud of not only as players but students also," Emory added.

Emory said he was also impressed by the ECU fans. "Clemson had some great fans, but in the last few days I've seen how strong the people care for East Carolina. Any success the school has had is due to the love of these people and I call on every alumnus and fan to help tie it all together."

Referring to the naming of Monte Kiffin at N.C. State, Emory said that he admired the new coach's goal of winning the ACC, the national championship and going to a bowl every year.

"If we're the best team in North Carolina, whip him every year, then maybe we'll be national champions," Emory said.

Survey Says Most Followed Sport Is Football

AP Sports Writer

A poll taken around the time of the 1979 World Series indicates that football is the sport most followed in the United States, with baseball a strong second, basketball a very distant third and the rest of the sports trailing far behind.

And a survey of sports editors taken at the same time shows they are in agreement with their readers on sports interest.

On Oct. 15-16, an Associated Press-NBC telephone survey asked the following question: "Which sport would you say you are the most interested in...that is, which sports do you follow the most closely?"

Football was named by 47 percent of the respondents. Baseball was listed by 33 percent of the national sampling and basketball was chosen by 11 percent.

Four percent of the people surveyed picked tennis, three percent chose golf and two percent selected hockey. Soccer got a two percent response and bowling, wrestling and car racing each logged 1 percent. Eleven percent of those answering said they didn't follow sports.

The AP-NBC survey has a sampling of 1,600 people. A poll of that size has a three percent margin of error in either direction.

The AP asked sports editors across the country to "vote on what you think the relative importance of sports is to your readers." They were asked to rate the sports 1-15 in order of importance.

The results there gave football a greater edge over baseball — 267 to 116. Basketball was listed as most important by 18 editors, hockey by two and horse racing, wrestling and skiing each by one.

Both surveys were intended only to gauge general impressions. It is understood that the timing and wording of any survey can alter the results. Baseball would seem to have an edge in the timing of the polls, since its premier event had center stage, but both the professional and college football seasons had already begun. Football and, to a lesser extent, basketball apparently profited from the interest in various levels of the sports. No attempt was made to differentiate among professional, college or high school levels in those sports because the surveys sought general impressions instead of specific information.

There is no major interest in baseball other than on the major league level.

For example, Bill Hageman, sports editor of the Delaware State News, conducted his own survey in the spring of 1979 and got 75 reader responses ranking their favorite sports. Pro football was first, baseball was second, college football third, high school football fourth and University of Delaware football fifth.

The AP-NBC poll indicated that baseball interest rose as education and income declined, while the converse was true for football.

Forty percent of the respondents making less than $8,000 and 26 percent making more than $35,000 were baseball fans. Baseball ticket prices are significantly cheaper than pro football's. While 45 percent of those with a grade school education are baseball fans, only 17 percent of those with more than a college education are.

In addition, 23 percent of those 18-24 years old followed baseball, while 45 percent of those over 65 were most interested in baseball.

The regional breakdown of the AP-NBC poll reveals that football had strong national appeal, receiving nearly 50 percent of the responses in all eight geographic areas.

Football was most popular in the Mountain States (Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming) with a 60 percent response. This region has only one National Football League team — the Denver Broncos — so it appears that many of the respondents were referring to college football.

The same conclusion could be reached in the Deep South (Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina), where the Atlanta Falcons and New Orleans Saints are the only NFL teams, yet 55 percent picked football as the sport they follow most closely.

Football is also big in the New South (Arkansas, Delaware, Washington D.C., Florida, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and West Virginia), where football outscored baseball by 2-1 (52-26 percent).

Football, with 39 percent, did worst in the New England states (Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont). College football in New England is on a smaller scale and there is only one NFL team, the New England Patriots. Baseball, with 36 percent, has only the Boston Red Sox, but they are probably the most popular team in the area.

Baseball made its best showing in the Pacific states (Alaska, California, Hawaii, Oregon and Washington), trailing football by one point, 41-40.

Baseball also did well in the Mid-Atlantic states (New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania), picking up 38 percent of the respondents to football's 43.

In both the Industrial Midwest (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin) and the Midwest Farm states (Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota), football had an 8 percent edge over baseball.

"There is no question that pro football is the one thing that has a grip over the entire country," said Bill Brill, sports editor of the Roanoke (Va.) Times and World.

"I think my readers are more interested in pro football, but I feel that's traceable mainly to type of scheduling in vogue in both sports," said Charles Karmosky, sports editor of the Daily Press in Newport News, Va.

"Daily baseball requires too much concentration over a long spell," Karmosky said. "The pro football scheduling thus gives it a distinct advantage — concentration again is in a much narrower time span — one day, and after a week of drudgery the average American overwhelmingly is ready to go all-out for the NFL Sunday action."

Basketball had a uniform response — about 10 percent — in all eight regions of the AP-NBC poll and hockey fluctuated from a high of 14 percent in New England to 0 percent in the Deep South.

Blacks appear more interested in basketball, with 27 percent of the blacks surveyed listing it, compared to 9 percent of the whites.

There were no geographical breakdowns in the sports editors' survey since it was not conducted on a regional basis. Neither poll distinguished whether the respondent preferred the sport as a spectator or a participant.

"Millions of people bowl," said Brill. "Few people care to read about bowling."

Dallas...

Cowboys now hope to get even for the Redskins' 34-20 triumph three weeks ago. Philadelphia, meanwhile, closes out the season at Houston.

"We'll be looking for revenge against Washington, 'cause they've not only beat us but rubbed it in last time," said Springs.

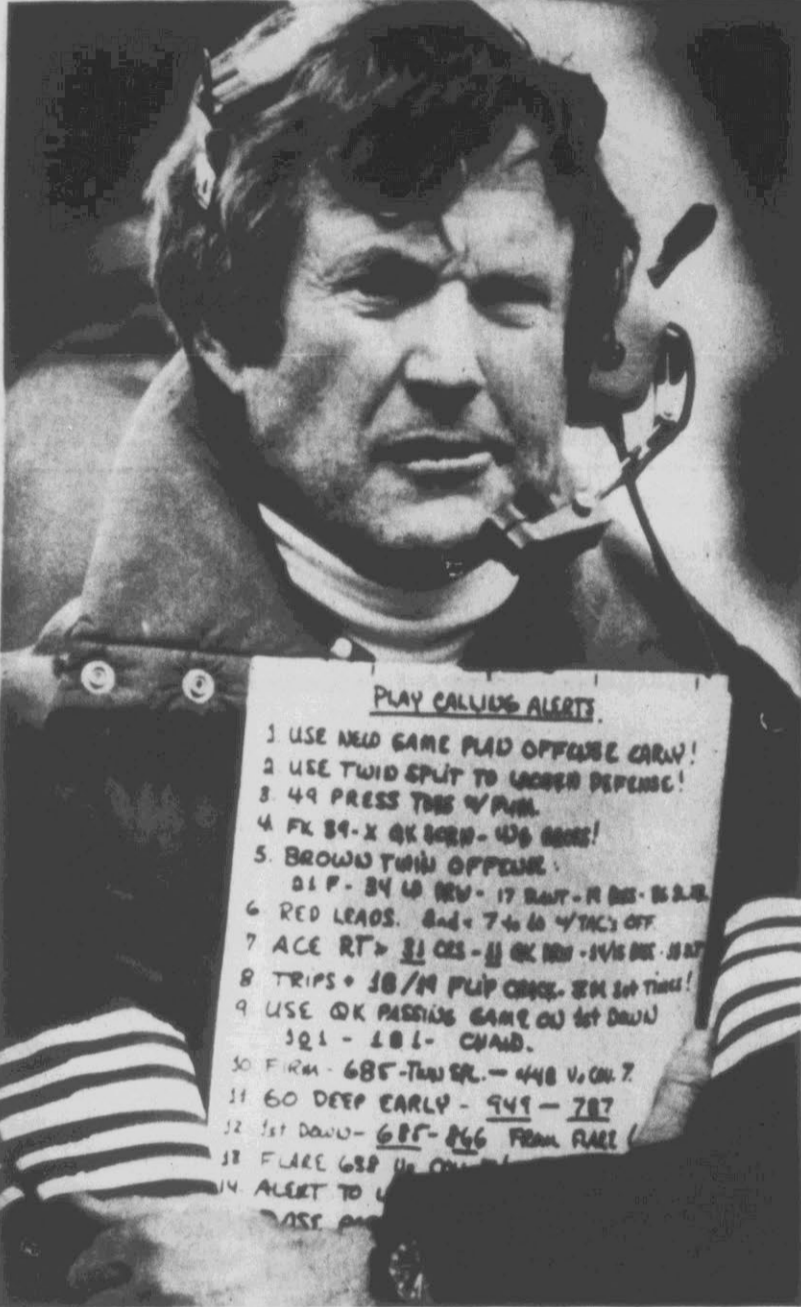

And Staubach added: "Next week's game is just as crucial as this week's was. Next week tells the big tale."

The Eagles, down by a touchdown in the closing minutes, got as close as the Dallas 17-yard line. On a third-and-10, defensive end Harvey Martin sacked Ron Jaworski for 12 yards, then Jaworski tossed an incompleteness under blitzing pressure from the Cowboys' defense.

Springs, out of Ohio State, took over when Dorsett, the Cowboys' 1,000-yard running back, suffered a separated right shoulder in the second period. On the play, Dorsett fumbled, paving the way to the first of Philadelphia's two touchdowns by Wilbert Montgomery.

Springs wound up gaining 62 yards on 12 carries. He rushed three times for 17 yards and Newhouse carried twice for 12 yards before Newhouse swept around right end for the touchdown with 4:54 to go in the third period that capped a 54-yard march and broke a 10-10 halftime tie.

Then, after Dallas stopped the Eagles on their next possession, Staubach masterfully guided the Cowboys 56 yards in 14 plays, chewing up 6:19 on the clock to give them a 24-10 lead with 4:46 gone in the fourth period.

A Man With A Plan

Duke Surges....

by Gminski put Duke back ahead for good.

From the 18:50 point, when ECU tied it, until the 2:43 mark, when Herb Gray hit three free throws, the Pirates failed to put more than two points on the board between Duke scores. The Blue Devils, playing razor-sharp defense, used that lapse to bull their way out into a 25-point lead, 89-64.

Odom praised the play of George Maynor, who led the Pirates with 18 points, and had nine rebounds, all in the first half. "I think he proved that he can play in any league. In fact, I think just about everyone did a good job."

Odom, who was a Wake Forest assistant last year, was asked to compare Duke with last year's edition. "I don't know yet (if they are better than last year). Right now, they may be too good. How much better can they get? Right now, they are making a joke of college basketball. But other teams are going to get better, and I don't know how much better they can get."

Gminski led the Blue Devils scoring with 26 points, while Taylor had 20, 17 of them in the second half. Banks ended up with 19 while Dennard had 11.

Besides Maynor's 18, Gray had 15, and David Underwood and Herb Krusen had 10 each.

Duke, with only a 41.0 percentage from the floor in the first half, came back to shoot 67.6 in the second half. ECU hit 43.8 in the first half and 51.6 in the second.

"With our man to man defense in the first half, we gave their outside people a lot of time to shoot and to think about shooting. I think that hurt them. In the second half, they got their break going and didn't have to worry. Then, we got tired and had to go to a 2-3 zone, and I think that helped them sharpen up their shooting too," Odom said.

The Pirates, now 3-2, return home Monday to face USC-Aiken in an 8:30 p.m. game. It will be the second of a doubleheader. The ECU women face East Tennessee State in the first game at 6:30 p.m.

Wolfpack Rolls Past St. Augustine, 107-69

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Senior forward Hawkeye Whitney scored 21 points to lead North Carolina State to a 107-69 win over crosstown school St. Augustine's College in a basketball game Saturday night.

The Wolfpack dominated the contest, taking a 55-30 halftime lead into the locker room over the Falcons. St. Augustine's failed to match the board strength of the Wolfpack, as N.C. State took a 50-31 advantage in rebounds.

The Falcons, now 3-1, also ran into foul trouble, committing a total of 29.

"I thought we played hard the whole ballgame," said State coach Norm Sloan. "Sometimes when you're fortunate enough to get ahead, you don't play hard. You have to play the situation and not the score."

When asked about the game, he said his team had experienced trouble from the floor in the three previous contests but "I was just glad to see them go in tonight."

Four other players reached double figures for the Wolfpack, now 3-1. Scott Parzych added 19 and Art Jones scored 16. Thurl Bailey had 14 and Clyde Austin finished the night with 11.

For the Falcons, William Cooper scored 17, Dewey Goudy had 12 and Jeff Gorman canned 10.

F. Dickinson 58

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest shot a school-record 74 percent from the floor as the Deacons destroyed outmanned Fairleigh Dickinson in an 87-58 basketball victory Saturday night.

The mark broke the former record of 69 percent set Tuesday night against Penn. Forward Alvis Rogers was the leading scorer for Wake with 15 points. Mike Helms and Jim Johnstone had 14 apiece.

Will Singleton had 11 and Frank Johnson 10.

The Deacons, now 3-2 overall, blew the game open in the last eight minutes of the first half, outscoring the Knights 20-6 en route to a 40-23 halftime lead.

Johnstone and Singleton sparked the first-half effort with eight and six points respectively.

Dickinson's Dan McLaughlin was game-high scorer with 16 points. Paul Jackson with 11 points and Ken Webb with 10 were the other Knights in double figures.

W. Carolina 56

Indiana State 75

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — Carl Nicks scored 21 points and Alex Gilbert added 18 Saturday night as Indiana State blasted Western Carolina 76-56 in college basketball.

The Sycamores led only 12-8 early in the game but held Western Carolina without a field goal for eight minutes. Gilbert had six points in that span, while Nicks added four.

The Catamounts managed only five free throws during the dry spell, but by the time it ended, the Sycamores were ahead 25-13 and coasted the rest of the way.

Indiana State, now 2-1, built a 35-19 halftime lead and stayed in control the second half.

Steve Reed added 12 points and Brad Miley notched a career-high 10 assists to go with nine rebounds for the Sycamores.

Western Carolina, 4-1, was led by Greg Dennis with 20 points and 10 rebounds and Ronny Carr with 16 points.

S. Carolina 70

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Cedrick Hordges scored 10 points in the first five minutes of the second half to lead South Carolina to a 70-60 come-from-behind college basketball victory over Columbia University Saturday afternoon.

It was the first loss in four games for the Ivy League Lions and left the independent Gamecocks with a 3-1 mark.

Hordges had 19 points to lead all scorers and Mike Doyle added 16 for the Gamecocks. Dave Westenburg scored 18 for Columbia and Kevin Best had 12.

South Carolina jumped out to an 11-2 lead as Hordges scored three baskets in the first half, but Westenburg led the Lions to a 36-31 lead at halftime.

Hordges, held to 6 points in the first half, scored two consecutive baskets to give the Gamecocks the lead for good at 43-42 with 15:52 to play.

The Gamecocks built a 7-point lead on a basket by Jim Strickland with 8:55 to play and took their biggest lead of the game with 50 seconds left on two free throws by Kevin Dunleavy at 70-58 with 33 seconds to play.

Baptist 59

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Substitute Chris Dodds led a dozen Clemson scorers with 14 points Saturday afternoon as the unbeaten Tigers coasted to a 95-59 victory over Baptist College for their fourth triumph of the season.

Dodds, a point guard transfer from Davidson, came off the bench to hit seven of eight shots. Also scoring in double figures for Clemson were forward Larry Nance with 13 points and starting point guard Bobby Conrad with 11.

The Tigers, who shot 59 percent, began pulling away from Baptist midway through the first half. A 15-4 scoring burst gave Clemson a 14-point lead at halftime, 42-28.

Clemson added to its lead throughout the second half and head coach Bill Foster substituted freely with all 15 players.

Baptist's Glenn Duncan led the Buccaneers with 14 points followed by Eric Tennille, 13; Larry Neismith, 12; and Eddie Talley, 10. Baptist is now 0-4.

Hopkins Sets Two Records, Qualifies For Olympic Trials

COLUMBIA — East Carolina sophomore Kelly Hopkins set a pair of varsity records and qualified for the Olympic Trials as a result of his performance in the USC Invitational swim meet held here this past weekend.

Hopkins, who Friday shattered the NCAA and Olympic Trial record for his time in the 200-yard breaststroke, continued to dominate that field of competition as he set another varsity and national Olympic qualifying time, this one in the 100-yard breaststroke, of :57.20. Also in the breaststroke field, frosh Joel Knubowitz set a freshmen record in the 100 with a time of 1:00.8.

John Tudor, a post graduate of ECU who is training for the Olympics, turned in an excellent performance as he placed in the top three in the 100-yard butterfly, the 500-yard freestyle and the 400-yard individual medley. In the butterfly, Tudor was clocked at :51.3, while in the freestyle, he finished in 4:36.2. In the medley, which consisted of 100 yards each of the butterfly, the backstroke, the breaststroke and freestyle, Tudor clocked in at 4:07.5.

In the 50-yard freestyle, ECU's Bill Fehling recorded a time of :21.4 to lead the Pirates. Another Pirate representative performed respectively in the medley, as Doug Neimar clocked a 4:12.2.

In the 1650-freestyle, equivalent to a swimmer's mile, Scott Ross topped the Pirate representatives with a 16:28.3 time.

In Friday's competition, Tudor, swimming exhibition for ECU, beat Coan of Tennessee, the American record holder in the 100 and 200 frees, with a 1:39.0 clocking in the 200 free. It was a personal record for the former ECU standout who has already qualified for the Olympic trials.

Hopkins set a new school record in the 200-yard breaststroke with a 2:06.0 clocking, bettering the NCAA and Olympic Trials standards. He has set the record with his 2:13.6

effort last week at Penn State, and benefited from a week of shaved workouts. Frosh Matt McDonald and Joel Knubowitz also bettered the old varsity record with 2:12.8 and 2:12.4 efforts, respectively.

Scott Ross set personal records with his 1:44.4 time in the 200 free and 2:02.6 clocking in the 200 back, as well as his 2:01.65 in the 200 individual medley and 500 free in 4:44.1.

Bill Fehling had a 1:43.5 in the 200 and 47.1 in the 100 free while Hopkins had a personal best in the 200 IM at 1:57.8 and in the 200 fly with a 1:58.3. Perry Newman set a freshman record with his 1:56.7 clocking in the 200 fly.

Fred Lindstrom of the New York Giants, playing against Washington in 1924, was the youngest man ever to take part in a series game. He was 18 years, 11 months.

The new coach said he would probably stick with the wishbone attack. "I've been an option-type coach for 18 of my 20 years in the business," he said. "The man I just worked for (Pepper Rogers) is probably one of the finest wishbone coaches in the country. The only reason we didn't use it this year was that we didn't have the type backs East Carolina has. Also it will make the transition as easy as possible."

Emory also said that he might have to look around at the quarterback situation. With only a one freshman quarterback with any experience, Emory said he would look at several junior college quarterbacks and several high school ones for help.

"Recruiting has got to be our first priority," he said. "I can't coach bad players to be good players. We already have some fine athletes, and I'm going to meet with them today, then start looking for new recruits."

However, the coach admitted that any time there is a coaching change, the school suffers a handicap. "We'll do all we can to overcome that," he said.

Emory also said he wanted to talk with the present staff members who would consider staying on. "I know of some good people in the coaching business, and I'll make getting a new staff together a high priority."

The 41-year-old coach grew up in Lancaster, S.C., and attended Camden (S.C.) Military Academy, where he was captain of the football team for two seasons, and all-Southeastern as a senior.

At East Carolina, he was a three-year starter at guard and played at tackle as a senior. He was all-conference three times and was named the top lineman and top blocker twice each. He was a third team all-America selection as a senior, and was three times selected All-NAIA.

His coaching background includes stops at Kinston, Wadesboro and Brevard, where he compiled an 80-12-4 record.

He also has a 92-10-2 wrestling coaching record, a 72-10 dual track meet record and a 38-6 tennis mark.

He was the 1972 North Carolina Shrine Bowl coach, and has also coached in the Boys' Home and East-West all-star games.

In 1967 and 1968, he coached the running backs at Wake Forest, was the junior varsity coordinator at Clemson in 1973, moving up to backfield coach in 1974 and 1975, coaching the line in 1976. He coached at Duke during the spring of 1977, then went into private business.

He graduated in 1960 with a bachelor's degree in physical education and social studies, receiving his master's here the following year.

"I promise you that my door will always be open for suggestions and help," Emory pledged. "Everyone has got to be on the same team."

"Our future is unlimited."

Seattle Nips Broncos On Late Zorn Strike

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks played the role of spoilers Saturday against the Denver Broncos.

A Denver victory and a loss by Cleveland at Oakland Sunday would have ensured the Broncos of a wild-card playoff spot in the National Football League's American Conference.

Instead, the Seahawks used a 43-yard touchdown strike from Jim Zorn to Steve Largent with 1:40 to go for a 28-23 triumph in their last appearance of the season at the Kingdome.

"I can't show it with our record," Seattle Coach Jack Patra said, "but there's no doubt in my mind that this is a better team (than last season's 9-7 Seahawk club)."

"It's important to finish the season up," stressed Seattle placekicker Efron Herrera.

"For me, this win is second only to our Oakland win last season," said Largent.

"On our last drive, all I was thinking is no interceptions," Zorn said. "It was a key situation and you can't have any mistakes."

"It's ridiculous to lose to them, but we did it," Denver quarterback Craig Morton said. "There's no way they should have beat us."

"We didn't do anything good in the fourth quarter. I made some bad throws, we didn't catch the ball and we didn't block."

"I didn't think they could beat us today," Denver Coach Red Miller said.

The defeat left the Broncos with a 10-5 record in the AFC's Western Division and dropped the Broncos out of a first place tie with San Diego, which is at New Orleans Sunday.

The Seahawks, who were eliminated from playoff contention when they lost at Kansas City last weekend, improved their record to 8-7.

Trailing 23-21, the Seahawks took the ball over with 3:51 remaining after a 27-yard punt by Denver's Luke Prestridge went out of bounds on the Seattle 21.

Aided by a personal foul penalty against John Grant and a pass interference penalty against Steve Foley, the Seahawks marched the ball to the Denver 43 with 1:48 showing on the clock.

Zorn then connected with Largent, his favorite target, on the Broncos' 5-yard line, five yards behind Foley, the nearest Denver defender, and Largent went in with the game-winning touchdown.

Bison Run Past Rampants, 21-9

back Kenny Barnes, who ran for a first down on third and one on the Bison 40, and then moved the Rampants in for the score with two passes.

The first, from the 38, was to Calvin Whichard, who ran it to the 26. Barnes then hit Joe Smith, who slowed down to shield the defender from the ball, for the touchdown. The kick by Ted King was wide left.

The Rampants, appearing to have recaptured some of the offensive spark they had displayed in ripping Rocky Mount last week, sputtered once more.

After an exchange of punts, the Rampants had the ball on their 27 with less than three minutes to go in the period. On second and eight, Shank burst up the middle for 12 yards, but three plays later Whichard fumbled at midfield, a turnover which the Black Bison turned into their victory-sealing tally.

On first down, Rose's Bryant Smith forced Benson Gray, who ripped Rose for 157 yards and two scores, far outside where Donald Johnson tackled him for a nine-yard loss.

The Black Bison were not to be stopped, however, and on the next play Billy Wilson, subbing at quarterback for starter Stephon Graham, hit Charles Smoot with a 44-yard completion, to the Rose 19.

Smoot, who had gotten behind the Rose secondary, was covered by William Frizzell, who appeared to be in position for an interception, but the ball went through his hands.

Five plays later, Maurice Hagler dove over from the one and High Point Central led, 21-9 with 10:06 left in the game and the season.

"We had a couple of good chances to come back," Bumgarner said. "We were down there only 14-9 and then we fumbled on first down and then that long pass that should have been intercepted hurt us too."

"I'm not trying to make excuses, though they just beat us," Rose was forced to punt on its next possession, after having gained a first down on fourth and two from the 46. But High Point's Wilson fumbled the punt at the 11.

Rose could not capitalize on the break, and returned the favor when Wilson intercepted a Barnes pass two plays later, with 5:30 left.

From there, the Black Bison, who end the season at 11-3, as does Rose, ran out the clock. The game ended with High Point Central on the Rampant nine.

"We just faced a darn good football team and I have no qualms about it," Bumgarner said. "They played well. We knew they had a good team."

"We hit 'em hard tonight, but sometimes it was after they had gained five or six yards," Bumgarner said. "I felt they'd run the ball that well. They have a good running attack."

"Defensively, they were very quick, as quick as I thought they'd be," he added. "We weren't getting good blocks on them (because of their quickness) and our option didn't get outside but a couple of times."

For most of the first half not only was the Rampant option not working, but not much else was either.

Rose was held to one-yard total offense in the first quarter and 31 in the first half — all of that on the ground — and did not get a first down until the 2:45 mark of the second period.

Meanwhile, the Black Bison were chewing up the yards on the ground, bullying ahead for 140 yards rushing — 104 of it by Benson.

Part of Rose's problem in the first half was the quick Bison defense. Another part of the problem, however, was the Rampants lack of field position.

Rampant drives started on the 9, 32, 22, 20, 46 (which they promptly fumbled away) and 39. High Point, on the other hand, started its drives from the 25, 48, 45, 50 and the Rose 43 (twice).

"In the first half, we didn't have any field position at all," Bumgarner said. "That limits what you can do, especially when you're starting from the 20 all the time."

Following an exchange of punts early in the game, High Point got its first score of the night. The drive was capped by a 10-yard sprint around left end by Benson, who ran for 37 yards on the march.

Moments later, the Black Bison recovered a Rose fumble on the 43 and two plays later Benson veered outside from the 43 for his second score of the night, giving High Point a 14-0 lead with 3:11 left in the half.

Taking the ensuing kickoff, the Rampants suddenly began to move. Behind the running of Shank (27 yards) and Barnes (15 yards) and a 15-yard penalty, Rose marched to the Black Bison five before being stopped. King came on and booted a 22-yard field goal with nine seconds left and Rose trailed, 14-3.

"That was the big difference in the whole ballgame," Bumgarner said. "If we had got seven, it would have been 14-7 and we would have been right in it."

Krall agreed. "I figured if they had gotten a touchdown it would have been a totally different ballgame. But when they only got three, it didn't give them as much momentum (going into the half) as a touchdown would have."

Krall did, however, admit he was worried after Rose scored early in the second half and got within five, at 14-9.

"I felt like coming out we needed to stop them early," Krall said. "But we didn't. But then we've been down before and when you have been there you're able to pick yourself back up."

"These kids are just great."

S.C. Wins Shrine

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Tight end Ty Rietkovich of Airport High School in Columbia tied a Shrine Bowl record for touchdown receptions with three as the South Carolina All-Stars whipped their counterparts from North Carolina Saturday afternoon, 37-21.

Rietkovich tied the record previously set by players including former University of North Carolina star Charlie "Choo-Choo" Justice and professional star Freddie Solomon.

His first catch staked South Carolina to a 10-0 lead in the first quarter on a 2-yard pass from starting quarterback John Thompson of Greenwood. Earlier in the period, Thompson kicked a 30-yard field goal.

Rietkovich's second scoring catch of the half came on a razzle-dazzle play. Reserve quarterback Jackie Hayes of Dillon lateraled to Seneca's Clarence Kay, who then hit Rietkovich for a 33-yard score.

Sue Gulps At Snow As Pat Goes West

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — New Wyoming football coach Pat Dye says his wife swallowed hard when she saw all the snow in Laramie, and Dye says he's sending home to North Carolina for warmer clothes.

But he also says he's looking forward to making the Wyoming Cowboys a recognized national football power again.

The 40-year-old former East Carolina University coach became Wyoming's 23rd head coach Friday, ending several days of rumors. And while warning reporters not to expect miracles, he pledged to get right to work rebuilding Cowboy football fortunes.

"I'm convinced you want a good football program," Dye said after his selection, "and if you want one, it's up to me to provide the leadership to give you one."

Dye replaces Bill Lewis, who stepped down after a 44 season that left fans disappointed and saw attendance decline drastically.

The stocky former Georgia

All-America lineman and Alabama assistant coach called the Wyoming coaching job a "a tremendous opportunity and challenge" and said he is looking forward to competing for the Western Athletic Conference championship.

"We hope to build a program that the people will be proud to support," Dye said after his appointment. "The people here are hungry for a program, and that attracted me very much."

"I'd like to anticipate the possibility of Wyoming getting in a bowl picture every year," he added.

Dye is no stranger to bowl games. During Dye's nine seasons as linebacker coach under Alabama Coach Bear Bryant, the Crimson Tide won three national championships and appeared in nine bowl games.

At East Carolina, an independent school of 12,000 students at Greenville, N.C., Dye compiled a 48-18-1 record over six seasons as head coach and his Pirates defeated Louisiana Tech, 35-13, in the Independence Bowl last year.

With a 7-1 record this year, East Carolina led the nation in rushing offense. "I was smart enough to hire offensive coaches who are smarter than I am, and we had an excellent offense," Dye said.

Assistant coaches Bobby Wallace, Al Kincaid and Carry Gotte accompanied Dye Friday, and the new coach said he hopes they, other assistants and perhaps some of his players will also come to Wyoming.

But Dye disputed published reports he planned to use the Wyoming job as a "stepping stone." He said in his six seasons at East Carolina he had received job offers every year but turned them all down until this year, when he resigned at the end of the season.

"This is no way a stepping stone for me," he said, but I hope it is for some of our assistant coaches."

UW Athletic Director George McCarty said he interviewed six candidates, including former Colorado Coach Bill Mallory, before choosing Dye, but ironically Dye was not one of the 100 persons who applied for the job.

"You always have in the back of your mind the type of person you're looking for," McCarty said.

Dye will receive a salary of $49,000, plus a house and a car, and has a four-year contract, UW President Edward Jennings said.

Lewis, now an alumni specialist, compiled a 13-21-1 record in three years as head coach and never had a winning season. But last year's Cowboys finished second in the WAC and hopes were high for this year.

But the Cowboys opened with losses to Washington and Northwestern and, despite flashes of brilliance, never quite overcame a tendency to make mistakes.

One bright spot was sophomore star quarterback Phil Davis who set a Cowboy total offense record with his running and passing and could fit into Dye's wishbone-style offense.

"We're going to win running the football — we're going to establish that first," Dye said, but he added his teams usually pass 15 to 20 times a game, too.

Dye also stressed the need for defense and recruiting. "The lifeblood of a program is recruiting," he said.

Recruiting started immediately, and Dye said he would meet with Cowboy players soon to start showing them his system. But he said it could take time. "I wouldn't expect any miracles early in spring practice," he said.

A 1962 Georgia graduate, Dye was an All-American in the classroom as well as on the football field. He has four children aged 9-17 and flew to Laramie with his wife, Sue.

"When she flew in here and saw the snow, she kind of swallowed hard, but she didn't say stop," Dye quipped. Native Southerners, he said he and his wife never made it to the Smoky Mountains to take up skiing, "but I guess we're going to have to learn now."

Of his own playing days, lineman Dye joked he taught former Georgia and Minnesota Viking quarterback Fran Tarkenton how to scramble.

"I threw a lot of 'lookout' blocks, as in 'Look out, Francis,'" he laughed. "I taught him to scramble a long time before he got in professional football."

Dye said he would be honest and truthful with the news media and said he would plug Cowboy football throughout the state.

"We will have fun playing," he said, "and hopefully that will carry over to the fans, too."

Panthers Win In Overtime

PINETOPS — Spurred by the backing of the home crowd, the Cougars of Southwest Edgecombe staged a furious rally to force North Pitt into overtime here Friday, only to lose by a pair at the end of the extra period, 58-56.

Greg Langley, North Pitt's leading scorer in the contest with 19 points, sank a layup with four seconds remaining in the three minute overtime period to give the visiting Panthers the Eastern Carolina Conference win.

In the preceding girls' game, Southwest's Lady Cougars jumped out to a first period 14-point lead and enjoyed a 61-31 romping of the Pant-HERS.

In the nightcap, the Cougars and Panthers battled to a 12-11 first quarter tie, with North Pitt gaining the slim advantage. The second period saw SW suffer through a dismal eight minutes, tallying only six points while the Panthers sank 15 to give them the 27-17 half time lead.

The host Cougars came out in the third frame and cut the ten point lead in half, outscoring the Panthers, 19-14, to head into the final frame with a shot at the lead. Battling back, with the voice of the crowd behind them, the Cougars knotted the score with four seconds remaining when James Daniels, NP's main man with 18 points tied the score at 52 with a soft jumper.

In the overtime period, NP's Juan Atkinson, who finished with 16, drew first blood by hitting both ends of a one-and-one situation. Atkinson came back to put the Panthers on top with a two-pointer before Cougar Staton tied the score at 56. With four ticks of the clock remaining, Langley sank his game-deciding layup to give the Panthers the win.

Two sub-par quarters proved to be the Pant-HERS' downfall as the host Lady Cougars took command of the game from the outset. Led by Alpha Jenkins' 18 points, the home team snatched a 14-point initial frame lead, at 18-4, and never looked back. Southwest tallied 13 in the second frame, compared to NP's 10, and ran off 18 in the third while North Pitt totaled 11. SW doubled NP in the final frame, outdueling the visitors, 12-6, for the final margin of victory.

Alpha Jenkins was joined by teammate Brigitte Jenkins in double figures, as the latter contributed 12 points in the Lady Cougar win. None of the Pant-HERS scored more than six, that total belonging to Jane Brown.

Hens Take Div. II Crown

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Scott Brunner's passing Saturday may not have been "perfect," as his coach called it, but the Delaware quarterback's aerial barrage was more than enough to batter Youngstown State into submission.

The lanky senior passed for 296 yards and three touchdowns to spark Delaware's Blue Hens to a 38-21 come-from-behind victory over Youngstown's Penguins in the nationally televised battle for the NCAA Division II football championship that attracted only about 4,000 fans for the first-ever Zia Bowl.

He rallied his club from a 21-7 deficit by picking apart the Penguins' secondary with his pinpoint passing.

"We were in the same situation before and came back," he said. "It was a matter of correcting our mistakes. We changed our formations a little bit and they just couldn't handle it."

"This is just an absolutely super team," added his coach, Harold Raymond. "They have repeatedly ignored the obvious when they got in trouble."

"They have tremendous poise, confidence in themselves and a great deal of respect for each other as individuals so that when there is a mistake they all pull that much closer together," Raymond said.

Aycock Sweeps Past Pair From Greene Central

PIKEVILLE — Hosting Charles B. Aycock High School swept a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference basketball games from Greene Central Friday night. The Falcons took a 67-57 decision, while the Falconettes were winning, 46-26.

In the girls' game, Aycock jumped into a 9-4 lead in the first period and built that to a 22-13 advantage at halftime. The Falconettes continued to pull away from the Lady Rams, 12-4, in the third period, upping the lead to 34-17. Aycock outthrew the Rams, 12-9 in the final quarter.

Proctor led Aycock with 20 points, while no one hit double figures for the Lady Rams.

Aycock's boys also grabbed an early lead from the Rams, moving ahead 13-5 in the first period. The Rams made a 16-12 comeback in the second quarter, but were still behind by 25-21 at intermission.

Aycock came back out hot and pushed its lead out to 48-32 in the third period, then allowed the Rams another comeback, 25-19, but it was too little.

Best led Aycock with 24, while Thomas had 23. D. Joyner led Greene Central with 25.

Lady Pirates Stop Madison

Forward Kathy Riley pumped in 26 points and Rosie Thompson added 16 and a season-high 23 rebounds as East Carolina drilled the Duchesses of James Madison, 72-48, at Minges Coliseum Friday night.

ECU's Marcia Girven poured in two early field goals to enable Pirates to jump to an 8-2 lead in the opening minutes of the contest and Riley and Thompson piled on 12 points as the Bucs build a 21-point lead with less than 10 minutes expired.

Freshman Mary Denkler added a 15-footer with 10:02 remaining before intermission, but ECU remained silent from the floor until Lydia Rountree layed in a Laurie Sikes assist with 3:20 left in the half.

Meanwhile, Madison's Lori Marsden and Deana Meadows had pulled their team to within striking distance at 29-19 before the Rountree basket.

"I wasn't worried about the dry spell," said ECU's coach Cathy Andruzzi. "After the Duke game last Saturday (1 76-75 loss), we concentrated on defense all week. We didn't even touch offense until Thursday and then on for about 45 minutes."

Anne Sonoga had 13 points for Madison, 10 in the second half, followed by Meadows with 11 and Cathy Hanrahan's 10.

Rountree aided the Pirates' effort with 12 and Girven tallied ten.

"This is probably the best game of the season for us," analyzed Andruzzi, "certainly the best defensively. We knew that we could be a good team on defense. This team is a good offensive team."

"The shooting percentage (38.4) doesn't bother me because we did play well on defense."

"Kathy Riley kept us in the game offensively because Rosie was double-covered most of the night. Rosie and Riley compliment each other on the court."

East Carolina moved to 5-1 with the win and will host East Tennessee State Monday in Whiteville at 6:30 p.m. The ECU men's team also play that night, facing South Carolina-Aiken in the second game at 8:30 p.m.

Williamston Hands Third Loss To Pack

WASHINGTON — Williamston High School handed defending state 3-A champ Washington its third straight loss of the season Friday night, taking a 62-54 win.

Washington's lassies, however, dumped the Tigerettes, 50-48.

In the boys' game, Williamston inched out into a 13-10 lead after one period of play, then padded that lead with three more points to take a 28-22 lead into the dressing rooms at the half.

Williamston continued to inch away from the Pam Pack in the third frame, building the lead to 43-34. They allowed a 20-19 margin by the Pack in the final quarter.

James Woolard led the Tiger attack with 29 points and was Williamston's only scorer in double figures. J. Boston had 22 for Washington.

In the girls' game, Williamston shot out to a 15-4 lead after one period, but was unable to hold it. Washington came back to trim that lead back to 29-21 by the end of the half, then erased it altogether in the third period, moving ahead, 38-37. They outhit the Tigerettes, 12-11, in the final quarter to preserve the victory.

Kim Guilford led Washington with 20 points, while Lynn Hodges had 11 and Brenda Minns had 10. Jan Rogerson led Williamston with 13, while Martin added 13.

Williamston's girls are now 1-2, while the boys are 3-0. They play host to Roanoke Rapids on Tuesday.

Pitt Paladins Rally Against Laurinburg

WHITEVILLE — Pitt Community College grabbed off its second straight victory Friday night, nipping Laurinburg Institute, 88-84, in the first round of the Kiwanis Classic.

The win propelled the Paladins into the finals of the tournament, played Saturday night. They were to meet the winner between Craven Tech and Southeastern Community College, the host team.

The game was close throughout, with Laurinburg holding a slim 41-39 lead at the half. Laurinburg pulled away during the second half and held an eight point lead with three minutes left to play. But the Paladins put on a drive

Lawrence Rolls Past Martin

EVERETTES — Lawrence Academy kept its starting five on the floor most of the way Friday night as it blew Martin Academy away, 76-27.

The Lawrence girls also took a victory, 38-21.

The tactics of Lawrence, which played man-to-man defense the entire ball game, angered Pioneer Coach Henry Roberson. "They left their first string on the floor just about all the way," he said. "I just can't see why they'd have to do things like that."

Lawrence, which used only eight players in the game, streaked out to a 25-7 lead in the first period of the game. The pressure defense of the winners, held the Pioneers scoreless in the second quarter, as the score rose to 36-7. Lawrence kept it up in the third period, running out to a 62-13 lead. Both teams scored 14 points in the final quarter.

Phil Holden led Lawrence with 23 points, while Van Pierce had 13. J. Herald had 11 and Chris Davidson had 10. Allen Warren led Martin with 18.

In the girls' game, Lawrence rolled up a 9-2 lead in the opening period and increased that to 19-7 by halftime. They boosted that lead to 32-11 after three frames, and allowed Martin a 10-6 comeback in the final quarter.

Farmville Sprints Past Ayden-Grifton

By Larry Sullivan
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — The Chargers of Ayden-Grifton couldn't stand the heat in their own kitchen here Friday night, but they couldn't get out either. Instead, coach Bob Murphrey's club watched as the visiting Jaguars from Farmville Central rolled to an easy Eastern Carolina Conference victory, 72-53.

In the girls' opener, the Chargerettes saved face in front of the home crowd and remained undefeated as twin sisters Marie and Irene Lewis accounted for 32 points between them as A-G whipped the Lady Jaguars, 59-37.

"Farmville came ready to play," Charger mentor Murphrey commented after the game. "I don't think we played that bad, it's just that they were prepared," the home coach said.

Farmville coach Mike Terrell said pressure applied by his club from the start of the game keyed the ECC win. "We were able to do things well early in the contest and we kept pressure on them throughout the game," Terrell explained from his squad's locker room. "We shot extremely well and executed well on our full court press, which forced Ayden-Grifton to make costly mistakes."

FC's Jeff Tyson led all scorers in the game with 19 points and was joined in double figures by teammates Dennis Pitt, with 18, Mike Baker and Ronald Dixon, both with 10. The Charger attack was keyed by Tim Edwards, who poured in 16, and John McCotter, who contributed 10.

It was evident from the first period what kind of night Ayden-Grifton would have. Southpaw Edwards poured in four first quarter buckets to keep the Chargers in the game as all five FC starters scratched in the initial frame. Tyson led the Jaguar offense with four baskets while Pitt chipped in three more. Mike Horne and Dixon came through with a pair of two-pointers each and Baker collected a bucket to lead Farmville to a 26-14 first quarter lead.

But it wasn't until the second period that things hit rock bottom for the home team. Edwards again led the Chargers, this time hitting a pair as he gathered half of the total points scored in the period. Clarence Baker and Chris Phillips plucked a goal each in the eight-point A-G quarter. The Jaguars, behind Tyson's and Pitt's four points each, garnered 11 points in the period to take a 37-22 lead at intermission.

The Chargers could muster only nine points in the ensuing quarter, which saw Ayden-Grifton make a stab at the Jaguar lead.

The Chargers came within 12 points of Farmville at 28-40, before a coaching move by Murphrey backfired. Murphrey substituted five new players at the time and this second team committed costly mistakes because of the press applied by JV Game Ayden-Grifton 49 Farmville Central 43

Farmville, and the Jaguars ran off nine straight points for a 49-28 lead.

"It was bad timing on my part," Murphrey was to say after the game, "because I think it killed our momentum. Our second team just couldn't handle their press."

In that third frame, Farmville tallied 12 points to head into the final period with an 18-point advantage, 49-31.

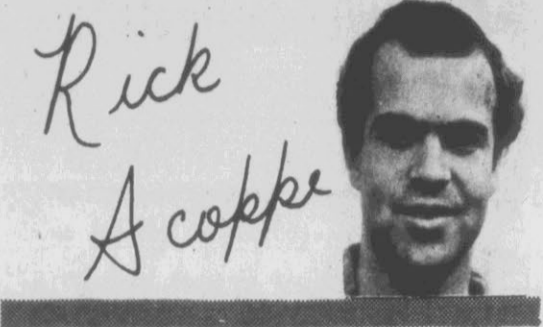

In the final quarter, A-G turned in its most productive eight minutes, scoring 22 points, but FC countered with 23 as seven Jaguars scored. Charger Terry Cannon came off the bench in the last quarter and scored 10 points to highlight an otherwise disappointing Ayden-Grifton performance.

In the opener, the Chargerettes, now 4-0, opened up a seven point lead in the first period as Marie Lewis chipped in 10 of the 13 points. Jaguarette Pam Moye collected a pair of field goals in the six point FC quarter.

Ayden-Grifton outscored the visitors by a point in the second stanza and took a 26-18 lead into the locker room. A field goal

The Wildlife Resources Finance Study Commission recently met to review numerous ideas for financing the State's wildlife program and as a result picked 15 possible funding sources for further research.

These proposals include: the return of interest on the State's Wildlife Fund for use in financing wildlife programs, the exemption of the Wildlife Resources Commission's expenditures from sales tax payments, Legislative reimbursement for statutory-free and low-cost lifetime licenses and reimbursement from the General Fund for Wildlife Commission involvement in work relating to nongame and endangered species.

Other proposals are: a way all wildlife users to contribute to the support of the activities from which they gain benefits, a broadening of requirements for the purchase of fishing licenses, General Fund appropriations for wildlife employees' legislative salary increases and special taxes and tax appropriations for the support of wildlife programs and a "constitutional amendment" or "dedicated tax" to ensure adequate future funding.

A number of other proposals are also being examined. These include: the establishment of interest-earning endowment funds which would be created using receipts from lifetime license and magazine subscription sales, the establishment of a tax-exempt foundation which could receive contributions for wildlife oriented work and the expansion of magazine subscription receipts.

The State legislature created the Wildlife Resources Finance Study Commission to explore such new ways of adequately funding the wildlife program and to report their recommendations back to the 1980 budget session for consideration.

Knights In 94-51 Romp

Despite missing several starters, Greenville Christian Academy romped to a 94-51 over Raleigh's Friendship Academy Friday night, evening their record at 1-1.

"We had a couple of starters out," Coach Dale Thatcher said, "but Ben Haddock came on and did a great job for us."

Haddock tossed in 14 of 16 field goal attempts and was 5-5 at the free throw line for 33 points as he

No Upsets For Indiana

By The Associated Press

Like it says, the "Indiana Classic" belongs strictly to the home team.

In five previous seasons, the Indiana Hoosiers have never lost a basketball game in their home-grown tourney, and don't figure to do so this weekend, either.

The nation's top-ranked team, propelled by one of the nation's top-ranked players in Mike Woodson, routed Xavier of Ohio 92-66 Friday night and coasted into Saturday night's finals against Texas-El Paso, a 69-61 winner over Seton Hall.

"We played a heck of a basketball team tonight," said Xavier Coach Bob Staak. "Indiana forced us into turnovers and we did not handle their pressure real well. Indiana's depth is awesome and there's no doubt it was a big factor in the outcome of the game."

The 6-foot-5 Woodson, leader of this fine Indiana team, scored 33 points to key the Hoosier offense. Ray Tolbert added 18 points for the winners.

"Woodson played as good a game as he ever has this early in the season — great job," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "I think we played well in the first half, although we did have our ups and downs, and Xavier did a good job against us. But I think we just overwhelmed them with players in the second half."

In the night's second game, Julius Wayne scored eight of his 10 points in a six-minute burst at the start of the second half to lead Texas-El Paso past Seton Hall. Terry White was the top scorer for the Miners with 14 points.

In another home-made tourney usually dominated by the host team, the Carrier Classic, 11th-ranked Syracuse crushed LeMoyne College 107-61 as Roosevelt Boule and Louis Orr combined for 28 points. The Orangemen will play in the finals tonight against Illinois State, which defeated Hofstra 71-66 Saturday night as Dave Nussbaumer sank four free throws in the final 18 seconds.

Elsewhere, No. 18 Brigham Young edged Tulsa 73-71 as Devin Durrant sank a 17-foot jump shot at the buzzer. BYU's Danny Ainge led all scorers with 19 points.

Curtis Berry and Ricky Frazier combined for 37 points as Missouri defeated George Washington 89-63 in an opening-round game of the Show-Me Classic. Anthony Miles scored eight of his game-high 26 points in overtime to help Arkansas State defeat Auburn 69-62 in the other first-round game.

Bobby Potts scored 21 points to lead North Carolina-Charlotte past Oklahoma State 72-66 and Davidson defeated Penn 71-62 as Rich Dibenedetto scored 25 in the First Union Tourney.

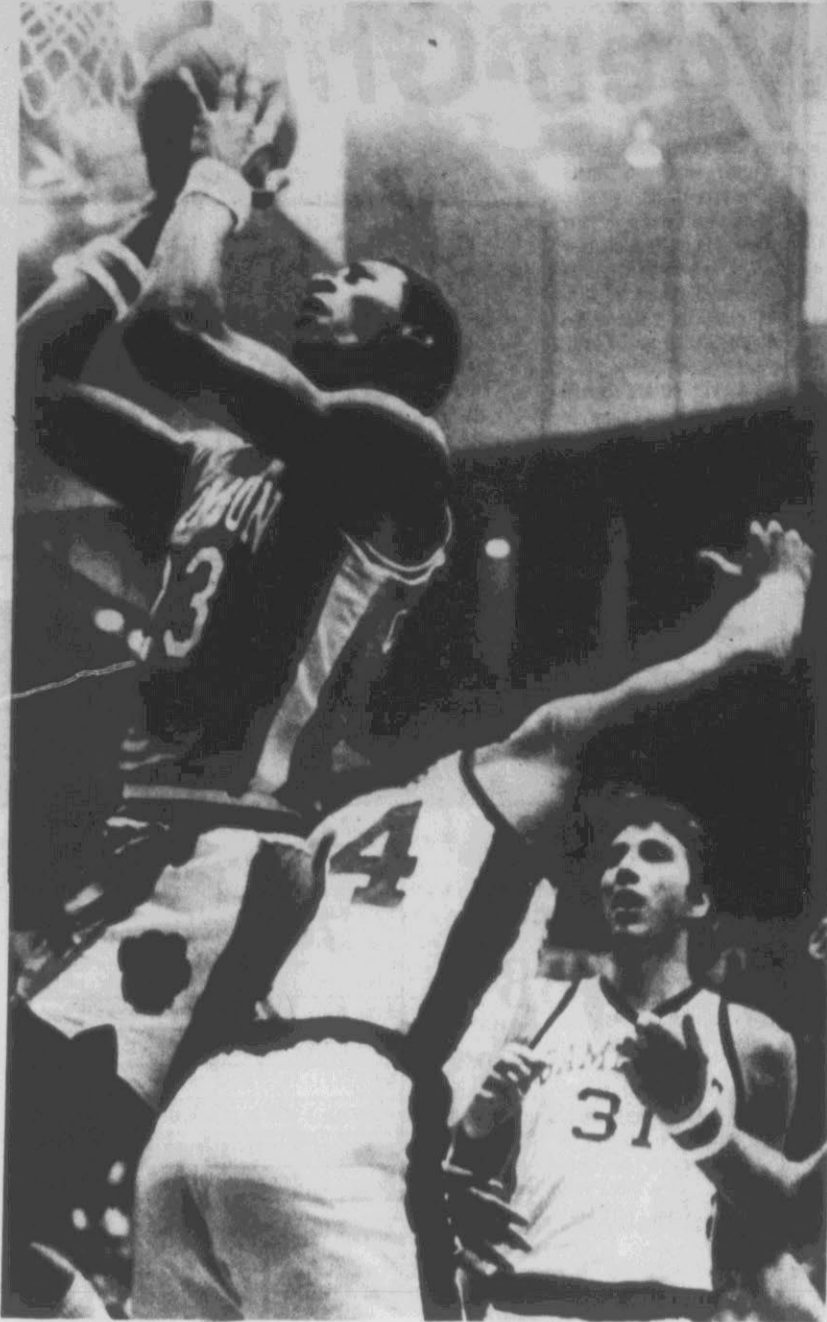

Corny Thompson and John Delagrang combined for 31 points to pace Connecticut to an 81-79 victory over Richmond in an opening-round game of the Utah Classic. Utah won the other game 65-53 over Cal State-Fullerton as Leonard Johnson scored 15 points.

Purvis Miller's field goal with two seconds left lifted Southern Cal to a 67-65 overtime triumph over Seattle in the first game of the Fiesta Classic. Arizona State defeated Southern Illinois 92-74 in the second game behind Sam Williams' 14 points.

Billy Bailey stole a pass with nine seconds left and sank a layup to lead Pan American to a comeback 67-65 decision over Murray State in the Wichita State tourney. Cliff Levingson's 12 points led three players in double figures as Wichita State rolled past San Francisco State 75-43 in the other opening-round game.

Kevin Troy scored a career-high 29 points to pace Rutgers past Manhattan 67-57 and Mark Murphy had 18 as St. Peter's whipped St. Joseph's 58-38 in opening-round games of the Jersey Classic.

Ron Baxter and John Danks combined for 43 points as Texas defeated Vermont 90-71; John Hegwood and Guy Williams paced two scoring spurts that triggered San Francisco over California 67-62.

led the Knights to victory. Greenville romped out to a 24-16 lead in the first period, then poured through 31 in the second quarter to up the lead to 55-26 at halftime. The Knights continued to pull away in the third period, building the margin to 78-35 as the final quarter opened. Both scored 16 points in the last frame.

In addition to Haddock's 33, Jeff Parnell added 21. R. Petty led Friendship with 18, while C. Stanley had 10.

The girls' game was not played because of the late arrival of Friendship.

Chocowinity Skips Past Bear Grass Five

CHOCOWINITY — A three-point lead after three quarters of play enabled Chocowinity to starve off the hungry Bears of Bear Grass in a nail-biter here Friday night, 42-41.

In the opening game of the twin bill, the Chocowinity Squaws opened up a ten point lead in the first period and proceeded to destroy the Lady Bears, 75-36.

It was nip and tuck throughout the nightcap, with Bear Grass taking the first quarter by a point, 11-10, only to see Chocowinity tie the game at the intermission at 16 all.

The Indians opened up the three point advantage in the third stanza by outscoring the visiting Bears, 14-11 to take a 30-27 lead.

In the fourth period, the lead changed hands several times before Chocowinity grabbed the upper hand. Bear Grass was able to out number the host team, 14-12, but could not overcome that game-deciding third point.

Indian Terrence Garham lead all scorers in the contest with 14 points. Roy Daniels joined Garham in double figures as he tallied 10 for the Indians. Bear Grass' Wilbert Williams led the Bear attack with 13 and was accompanied in double digits by team member Watson Rogers.

In the girls' game, Chocowinity's Ginger Jefferson scorched the nets for 26 points in leading her team to a whop-sided home victory. Barbara Green added 20 more for the Squaws and Vivian Myers contributed 15.

The Lady Bears were able to score more than eight points in only one quarter as the host team completely dominated the game.

Chocowinity took the 15-5 first period lead and expanded it to 39-13 with the help of a 24-point outburst in the second period. The third frame saw Bear Grass toss in 15 points, the most of the evening, but the Squaws chucked in 20 to give them a 59-28 lead with one quarter remaining. Chocowinity doubled Bear Grass' output in the finale, outscoring the visitors, 16-8.

Defense Helps San Antonio In Victory Over Milwaukee, 117-105

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
"This year our defense has stunk," says Doug Moe, coach of the San Antonio Spurs. So why did the Spurs beat the Milwaukee Bucks 117-105 Friday night?
"Our defense kept us in it," said Moe.

"We tried to slow it down, figuring maybe it would help our defense," he explained. "It did, but we didn't get it going offensively until late in the third quarter."
"Once we got hot, we kept it going and we gave Milwaukee only a couple of good shots in the whole fourth quarter."

The Spurs outscored the Bucks 40-22 in the fourth quarter, hitting 14 of 21 shots to wipe out an 83-77 deficit. George Gervin, the National Basketball Association scoring champion the last two years, got 16 of his game-high 39 points in the final period.

In other NBA games Friday night, the Boston Celtics beat the Phoenix Suns 100-92, the San Diego Clippers defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 116-108, the Chicago Bulls edged the Portland Trail Blazers 95-93 and the Houston Rockets topped the Detroit Pistons 124-109.
Celtics 100, Suns 92

Boston moved one-half game ahead of Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division as veteran Dave Cowens and rookie Larry Bird led a fourth-quarter surge. Boston, leading 76-74 after three quarters, rolled to its 12th victory in 13 home games as Bird hit four field goals and Cowens three in the final period.

Clippers 116, Lakers 108
Lloyd Free scored 42 points and Swen Nater added season-high totals of 28 points and 27 rebounds as the Clippers overcame a 77-59 deficit early in the third period and beat Los Angeles.

Free scored 26 of his points in the second half, including 12 in a row in one stretch of the final period, as San Diego snapped a three-game Laker winning streak.

Rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 31 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 29 points for Los Angeles.

Bulls 95, Trail Blazers 93
Ricky Sobers drove the length of the floor for a layup with 1:13 left to give the Bulls the victory and send Portland to its seventh straight loss. Sobers scored 16 of his 20 points in the second half and Reggie Theus, the Bulls' other guard, got 19 of his 23 points in the second half.

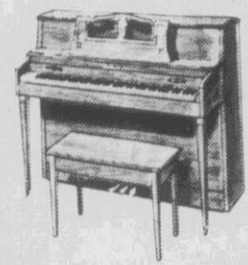

Ron Brewer, who led Portland with 21 points, missed a three-point try with 15 seconds to go for Portland.

Rockets 124, Pistons 109
Houston's Rick Barry scored 20 points, including 12 in the first quarter when the Rockets hit 70 percent of their shots to take the lead to stay. Guard Mike Dunleavy came off the bench to contribute 16 points and a career-high 16 assists for the Rockets, who led by just 89-83 early in the final period before pulling away.

Dawkins Can Dunk: But Only Carefully

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The dunk lives on," says Darryl Dawkins.
But be careful about it, warns Larry O'Brien.
O'Brien, commissioner of the National Basketball Association, announced Friday that any player who causes the breaking or shattering of a basket or backboard will be subject to an automatic fine and suspension.
"A continuance of this activity can have horrendous results," said O'Brien. "We've been fortunate that a serious injury has not yet occurred. We decided — by God, let's act now."
O'Brien's action came following a 90-minute meeting with Dawkins, the strong young center of the Philadelphia 76ers who shattered a backboard with a dunk in Kansas City Nov. 13 and gave a repeat performance in Philadelphia Wednesday night. Also attending the meeting were Billy Cunningham and Pat Williams, the coach and general manager, respectively, of the 76ers.
"Dawkins' position is that both incidents were unintentional. So be it," said O'Brien, who took no punitive action against the 6-foot-11, 252-pound center.

"But I was deeply concerned about taking a responsible action to bring about a close to these incidents before someone gets hurt."
In a memo addressed to NBA owners and general managers, O'Brien said he was "satisfied that the dunk shot can continue to be an exciting part of our game without endangering the safety of players, referees and fans." He then announced a two-step procedure for dealing with future backboard breaking incidents.
"The rule against hanging on the rim, calling for a technical foul and $100 fine, will be applied to any player whose contact with the rim and/or backboard causes the backboard to shatter," O'Brien said.
"Any player who does cause a backboard to shatter in the manner described above will be ejected immediately from the game and, absent the most extenuating circumstances, be automatically suspended without pay for at least the next regularly scheduled game."

Dawkins said he could live with O'Brien's decision.
"The commissioner is the police," said Dawkins. "He makes the rules; I've got to abide by them. After seeing the scratches that the glass (from the shattered backboard) made in the floor, I think I'll cool it for awhile."
Dawkins said O'Brien's guidelines may cause him to modify his game.
"I may have to try and dunk with a little less authority," Dawkins said. "Knowing I've got to lighten up some may make me a little more cautious on the floor."
Dawkins, who called his Kansas City dunk the "Chocolate Thunder Flying, Robinzine Crying, Teeth Shaking, Glass Breaking, Rump Roasting, Bun Toasting, Wham Bam, Glass Breaker I Am Jam," said he had not yet come up with a name for his most recent epic.
"But I'm working on it," he added.
Pitcher John Clarkson won 33 games for the Chicago Cubs in 1885.

Clemson Booster In Title Match

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Nigerian Obed Ariri slammed in two goals in four minutes Saturday to give Clemson a 4-1 soccer victory over Columbia and a chance at the national collegiate championship.
In the first NCAA Division I semifinal Saturday, Dave Hummert scored in the closing minutes to give Southern Illinois-Edwardsville a 2-1 triumph over Penn State.
SIU's American squad will play Clemson in the finals Sunday. Both schools lost in the semifinals last year.
Clemson, Atlantic Coast Conference Championship, taught the Ivy League Lions a lesson in ball control during the first half. The Tigers rolled up a 3-0 halftime lead and let the defense do the work for the rest of the contest.
Clemson got its first goal from freshman Nnamadi Nwoko. Freshman Vincent Chika converted an errant Columbia pass for a surprise goal at 67:10.
Columbia's Steve Charles averted a shutout when he batted a 15-yard shot into the far corner of the net at 78:22.
SIU senior Hummert blasted the ball over the head of Penn State goalie Angelo Nickas from about 30 yards out with 20 minutes left for the victory.

Russian, American Achieved Goals

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Both the Soviet Union's Alexander Ditiatin and America's Kurt Thomas achieved long-sought goals Friday night in the World's Gymnastics Championships.

Now, they are headed for a dream duel at the 1980 Olympics in Moscow where Ditiatin will have the home gymnasium advantage.
The 5-foot-10, 175-pound Ditiatin succeeded in fending off Russian star Nikolai Andrianov, 27, as the king of the world's gymnasts by beating back Thomas' determined challenge before a pro-American crowd of 6,000 fans in Tarrant County Convention Center.

Thomas was far from unhappy with his silver medal, the first ever won by an American in a world championship.
"My all-around goal was third," said Thomas, who graduated from Indiana State. "I finished sixth last year in the all-around and I wanted to improve on that."
Ditiatin said "My dream was to win first — as it happened." American Coach Roger Coun-sil said, "This should turn into a great rivalry because Kurt has now reached the level of the Russians. They are very close in ability. It's clear Andrianov is finally over the hill."

Thomas praised Ditiatin, saying, "There was no doubt that Ditiatin had a great night. He was very consistent."
Ditiatin was asked whether he considered his six routines in the all-around conservative and he answered: "I performed today the way I did the first day."
The victory was televised back to the Soviet Union.

Thursday night the Russian's got a rude shock when Romania won the gold in the women's championships.
The men's team championship was won by the USSR Wednesday night.
Ditiatin, who had 9.95 in the rings, horizontal bar, and the floor exercise, finished third last year in the world championship.
The bronze medal winner Friday night was Russia's Alexander Tkachev.
The totals were Ditiatin 118.250, Thomas 117.975 and Tkachev 117.475.

Vladimir Markelov of the Soviet Union was fourth and Bart Conner of the USA was fifth.
James Hartung of the USA was ninth, marking the first time the U.S. ever had three competitors in the Top 10 in the World Championships.
The women's all-around was scheduled Saturday night without Romania's Nadia Comaneci, who failed to qualify for the final 36 because of an infected hand.

The competition concludes Sunday in the races for individual gold medals.

Lot Of Talk, Little Action

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
TORONTO (AP) — The Montreal Expos and the Atlanta Braves went home happy, but most major league brass left grumbling, if they had any voices left.

Throat lozenges were the order of day. There was plenty of talking but very little action during baseball's annual week-long winter meetings.

Most clubs arrived hoping to swing major trades in an effort to help themselves for the 1980 season. However, only 11 deals involving 30 players, including two of the immortal "to be named later" and one to complete an old trade, were made.

"We might just as well have stayed home," said General Manager Spec Richardson of the San Francisco Giants.

That summed up the feelings of most observers. A great deal of money was wasted. Even with interleague trading, the wheels grinded to a near-halt, with the least productive winter meeting in memory. Phone calls between home offices would have been a lot cheaper.

At least half of the major league clubs packed up and headed home early Friday. Everyone agreed on one thing: intricate contracts with special clauses, many under the agreement with the Players' Association, prevented possible deals. So did the fact that another interleague trading period will run from Feb. 15 to March 15.

Four free agents were signed from the re-entry draft, begun in 1976 and a matter club owners plan to fight to extract drastic changes in negotiations for a new basic agreement before spring training.

Signed as free agents were southpaw pitcher Fred Norman and outfielder Rowland Office by the Expos, shortstop Fred Patek by the California Angels and outfielder Jay Johnstone by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Expos, Braves, Rangers, Cardinals, Indians and even the Philadelphia Phillies led the charge on the final day, even though the Phils came up empty-handed in the last hour.

The Expos engineered a blockbuster with the Detroit Tigers, acquiring racehorse outfielder Ron LeFlore from the Tigers in a swap for the Expos' Dan Schatzeder, a 25-year-old considered one of the top young left-handers in baseball.

Loaded with outfield talent, the Expos still elected to gamble on LeFlore, a solid hitter who stole 78 bases this year. He is eligible to become a free agent next fall.

"We're trying to win next year and can't think beyond that right now," President and General Manager John McHale of the Expos said.

McHale, whose team finished second to eventual World Champion Pittsburgh in the National League East, said LeFlore is expected to start in center field.

Jags Take Mat Win

STANTONSBURG — Farmville Central opened the 1979-80 wrestling season with a 41-21 victory over Wilson Beddingfield High School Friday night.

The Jaguars lost four of the 13 weight classes, and two of those came on forfeits. Of the nine Farmville victories, four came on pins.

The Jaguars entertain Rocky Mount on Tuesday.

Lobo Coach, Recruiter On Hot Seat Dolphins, Pats In Key Matchup

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger and his chief recruiter will be summoned to appear before the university's Athletic Council, says UNM President William E. Davis.

Davis made the announcement after spending three hours Friday in a closed-door regents meeting that was called to review "recent developments in the university athletic program."

Ellenberger and Manny Goldstein were suspended Nov. 30 in the midst of an FBI investigation into possible bribery and mail fraud involving the transcripts of junior college transfers.

Davis said the Athletic Council will make recommendations pertaining to the status of the two at the university, and that the recommendations would be forwarded to his office.

Any action he takes would be subject to appeal to the university's board of regents, he said. Davis said a date for the athletic council hearings will be announced later.

"The purpose of the meeting... was to review the total context of everything that has happened," Davis said. "It wouldn't be proper to relate what they said or their attitudes."

Meanwhile, as the Lobos prepared to meet archrival New Mexico State tonight, Coach Charlie Harrison said the situation may be improving for the four basketball team members who remain eligible.

"I think they're okay. They have to be hurting inside because their friends are not with them," said Harrison, an assistant who took over the head job last week when Ellenberger was suspended. "They have to be confused. We lived for quite a while with uncertainty. At least now they know what is going on."

Athletic Director John Bridgers said Thursday night that five players, including three starters, were ineligible and that another had been suspended temporarily while officials try to determine whether he is eligible to play. A sixth player, Craig Gilbert, was declared ineligible last week.

New Mexico will suit up the remaining team members, two football players and perhaps a trainer for Saturday night's game against New Mexico State.

That leaves Jim Williams, Kenny Page, Everette Jefferson and Michael Johnson as the only players available who started the season with the Lobos.

Harrison says he will make some adjustments in New Mexico's run-and-gun style, but won't go to a real slowdown against the Aggies.

Harrison picked up two football players to augment the roster, 5-foot-11 freshman Keith Magee and 6-3 Derwin Williams.

"And we perhaps have another kid, who has been an athletic trainer," Harrison said. "I can't recall his name, but he's about 6-4 and has been around for two years. He knows what's going on."

"He came in and said that if we needed a body he'd be glad to fill in for a while."

The Miami Dolphins and New England Patriots will be playing for a playoff berth and Super Bowl dreams today. But for the Detroit Lions and New York Jets something even more important is on the line — pride.

The Lions, the next-to-worst team in the National Football League this year with a 2-12 record, will be trying to upset Miami and save the wounds they suffered last Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles clawed them 44-7.

And the Jets will be trying to erase the bitter memories of their worst defeat of the season, a 56-3 thrashing administered by the Patriots in Foxboro, Mass., on the season's second Sunday.

Elsewhere today, it's Chicago at Green Bay, Tampa Bay at San Francisco, Cincinnati at Washington, Los Angeles at Atlanta, the New York Giants at St. Louis, Buffalo at Minnesota, Kansas City at Baltimore, San Diego at New Orleans and Cleveland at Oakland. On Monday night, Pittsburgh visits Houston.

The well-rested Dolphins, 9-5 and one game ahead of the Patriots in the American Conference East, will have Bob Griese back as their starting quarterback against the Lions. Griese has rescued Don Strock the past two games, most recently with an 8-of-10 passing performance in the second half that guided Miami to a come-from-behind 39-24 triumph over the Patriots on Nov. 29.

"I admire Bob Griese probably as much as any football player I've ever been associated with, both as a person and as a player," says Monte Clark, Detroit's head coach and once a Miami assistant. "He's so intelligent. He's a tremendous student of the game. He knows how to prepare. You couldn't have a better guy on the field."

Clark's biggest problem is motivating his own players, for whom the season ended long ago. He says he senses among them a "residue of negative feeling. They're disappointed. They're low...it's been difficult. The joy of winning has been absent."

Rookie quarterback Jeff Komlo, benched in the second period against the Eagles, will start again, primarily because Joe Reed suffered a broken left hand in the game in Philadelphia.

If the Dolphins lose, it won't seriously damage their hopes for a division title. But if the Patriots lose, it's New England's death knell.

The Jets would be happy to oblige and send the Pats packing, especially after what happened to them earlier this year. They feel New England rolled up the score on them, when Steve Grogan threw five touchdown passes.

"This ballgame is going to be a war, and I mean an all-out war," New York running back Clark Gaines promises. "There is no love lost between us...They've created an air of dislike between us and them."

Race May Move On

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The president of the Daytona International Speedway says if he and the county can't settle a tax dispute, he'll move the Firecracker 400 stock car race to Indianapolis.

And if the years-old dispute is settled, Bill France Sr. says Indianapolis "in all probability" will get a National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing race anyway.

"We want Indianapolis on the NASCAR schedule," said France, the 70-year-old NASCAR founder who met in New York this week with Indianapolis Motor Speedway President John Cooper.

On the tax dispute, France has been fighting Volusia County since the early 1970s claiming property taxes assessed on the raceway are illegal.

He lost the battle in the courts, including the Florida Supreme Court, and now says he'll simply move the Fourth of July race if he doesn't get what he wants.

"If we cannot work this thing out, we will move the Firecracker 400 to Indianapolis, possibly as early as 1980," France said after meeting with Cooper on Thursday.

"Mr. Cooper was very receptive to the idea of bringing a NASCAR event to Indianapolis," France said. "He is very excited about the possibility and so are we."

"We have not finalized anything, nor will we until the middle of February," France added, "but it looks very promising."

Dolph Camilli played in the 1941 World Series for the Brooklyn Dodgers against the Yankees and, in 1963, his son, Doug, played for the Los Angeles Dodgers against the Yanks.

Western Teams Claim State Crowns

By The Associated Press
The 1979 high school football season ended Friday night in North Carolina with High Point Central, South Point and Swain County emerging as champions.

High Point Central took the 4A championship by defeating Greenville Rose 21-9 in the contest at High Point. Halfback Benson Gray scored two touchdowns and rushed for 158 yards.

High Point dominated the matchup with 226 yards rushing and 18 first downs. Greenville Rose managed only 106 yards rushing and nine first downs.

The victory saw High Point end the season with 10 straight wins after losing three of its first outings.

In 3A action in Ahoskie, all conference quarterback Jeff Williams rushed for 85 yards, scored one touchdown and threw for two more to lead South Point to a 34-13 victory over Ahoskie.

Williams connected on 10 of 13 aeriels, nine in a row in the first half, for 138 yards.

Following the game, the senior signal caller said: "This was our best game of the season. The ground was a little bit wet but our passing game worked real well."

Ahoskie had a 78-yard final minute scoring drive, but otherwise could only muster 55 yards total offense and two first downs. The Cougars were also hurt by three third-quarter turnovers.

South Point rolled up 281 yards total offense and 17 first downs with one turnover.

Swain County held back previously unbeaten Clayton in the game at Clayton to take the 2A championship, 28-21. Swain's final points came with 10 seconds left as Gregg Welch returned a desperation Clayton pass attempt for a touchdown. Tailback Letus Tubby turned in a 235-yard performance with two touchdown scores. Quarterback Sam Pattillo connected with split receiver Barry Coggins for a two-point conversion to get his team ahead. "That's the way to end the season up, I like that," said Swain County Coach Boyce Deitz.

Many Books Depict Britain's Royal Family

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has China tea for breakfast, with milk but no sugar. Prince Philip prefers coffee.

Porridge and cereal do not appear on the Buckingham Palace breakfast table. Instead, there are boiled or scrambled eggs, sometimes bacon or sausages, sometimes kippers — the smoked herrings peculiar to Britain — followed by toast and marmalade.

The queen makes her own pot of tea, using water from an electric kettle mounted in a swivel stand to make pouring easier. "an idea which originated in the inventive brain of Prince Philip."

These homey details of life at the top are from the latest in a never-ending stream of books about the royal family, for which Britons have an insatiable appetite.

Almost two dozen books about the Windsors and their relations is on sale in the bookshops. There are even books devoted to their dogs, horses, servants, gardens, homes, jewelry, paintings and cars.

"It's the old tribal thing," explained Graham Fisher, who with his wife, Heather, wrote the latest book, "Monarchy and the Royal Family: A Guide for Everyman."

"People everywhere need someone to look up to and in this country it's the royal family," Fisher said.

"The paradox is that the queen is seen as an ordinary person and superhuman, above everyone else. I doubt if any other country has such a symbolic figurehead."

Three books about royalty figure in the current list of booksellers' bestsellers: a biography of Prince Charles, the heir to the throne; a picture book about the queen's cousin, Carl Mountbatten, killed by a bomb in Ireland last August; and a book of Queen Victoria's sketches.

Three biographies of Queen Mother Elizabeth were published this year.

The memoirs of 96-year-old Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone, the last surviving granddaughter of Queen Victoria, were twice reprinted this year. They first came out in 1966 and have been in such demand that second-hand copies were selling at five to seven times the original price.

Royal interest spin-offs include the memoirs of a lady-in-waiting to Queen Victoria; a history of the royal German relations, the Battenbergs; and a coming biography of Queen Victoria's maharajah, Duleep Singh.

Fisher, a former journalist, told The Associated Press in an interview he has written nine books on the royal family over 25 years.

He said he gets his material from published sources, contacts close to the royal circle and "wads of information from the palace press office, although they never give out anything personal."

A book Fisher wrote in collaboration with a former servant of the queen, Ralph White, "made British publishers nervous but was snapped up in the United States 10 years ago," Fisher recalled.

The worry arose because royal employees have to promise not to disclose their experiences.

"White had worked for the queen so long that he never signed the declaration of confidentiality which palace servants have to make nowadays. But there was no legal reason why the book could not be published in America," Fisher said.

Nella Bevan of publishers Robert Hale, who put out the Fishers' book, said initial print runs usually are 5,000 copies, with second runs ordered fairly quickly.

"The market certainly is not saturated, otherwise there would not be this unceasing interest and demand," Miss Bevan said. "Britons are intensely patriotic. Reading about the royal family is not confined to one social bracket or age group."

Bookseller Geoffrey Bailey, who is in charge of mail order at Hatchards bookshop in Piccadilly, said Americans are the biggest overseas buyers of royal family books. "I think it is the tradition they like," he said.

Hatchards opened in 1793 and holds three royal warrants as booksellers to the queen, the queen mother and Prince Philip.

"You ought to talk to our managing director, Mr. Thomas Joy," Bailey added. "But he has gone to Buckingham Palace. The queen is giving him the Victorian Order fourth class, for services to the monarch."

Mr. Joy is 95. The 16,410,030 shares traded at the New York Stock Exchange on Black Tuesday, Oct. 29, 1929, set a volume record that lasted until April 1, 1968.

Invisible Goldfish
PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — If you've seen one goldfish, you've seen them all, right? Not so, say the Pensacola Jaycees, who are selling something called the "Invisibulous Carpus Pisces" — otherwise known as invisible goldfish — for $1 each. "They don't eat much, but we do have No-See-Um fishfood on sale, too," says one Jaycee. "And they come with a guarantee. If you don't find immediate rapport with your fish, you can bring it back and trade it for another." About 280 people have been hooked by the phony fish sale. All proceeds go to the Jaycees' annual Christmas shopping spree for youngsters at a local crippled children's home.

Cross-word puzzles were invented by a New York newspaperman, Arthur Wynn, who called them "word-cross" puzzles. But a printing error made it come out "cross-word" instead of "word-cross" and since it appeared that way in the newspaper the first day, it was decided to let it stand that form. So, one of our most famous expressions exists by accident.

Safety Role Shared At Ski Resorts

By K.C. MASON

DENVER (UPI) — James Sunday may not have known it at the time, but he changed the character of the ski industry when he won $1.5 million in damages as a result of an injury he suffered skiing at Stratton Mountain in Vermont.

The 1977 award scared the National Ski Areas Association into drafting a skier safety act which defines responsibilities for both skiers and ski areas. It has been the basic model for new laws in 17 states and pending laws in 11 others.

In Colorado, the Ski Safety Act of 1979 is a "comparative negligence" law, in which a jury can determine the relative contribution of each party's negligence in an accident and assess damages accordingly.

The skier safety law in New York is unique in that it was attached to a criminal statute. It creates misdemeanor penalties for such things as skiing on a trail above one's ability or failure of a ski area to properly mark trails.

Other states with skier laws in effect, according to a national skiing publication, are Connecticut, Idaho, Maine, Massachusetts, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont and Washington.

Laws are pending in Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

In arguing for the law, lobbyists for Colorado Ski Country U.S.A. said juries had no standards or guidelines against which negligence in ski injury cases could be measured.

Such was the case in Vermont when Sunday sued Stratton Mountain for the paralysis he suffered when he fell over a bush on a ski trail. No legal standards for determining liability existed, and the jury was left to its own feelings about the case.

Ski areas and their insurers panicked when the young skier was awarded $1.5 million. The Vermont case diluted the "assumption of risk" defense which meant the area operator had no liability or responsibility for injuries resulting from the inherent risks of the sport.

The Vermont Supreme Court ruled there was no room for juries or courts to interpret negligence or to evaluate the relative contributions of the skier and ski area.

"As a result of the new act," Ski Country argued, "juries will have not only a body of law clarifying responsibilities, but also specific legal tests which can be used to assess fault."

The Colorado law is typical in that it lists the duties of ski area operators in the operation of lifts, placement of signs and maintenance of trails. It also outlines duties of passengers on lifts and skier responsibilities on the slopes and trails.

Skiers have the responsibility to maintain control of speed and course at all times. They also must know their range of ability to negotiate any ski slope and to ski within the limit of such ability.

Under the Colorado law, a $300 fine can be imposed for such things as skiing on a closed trail, skiing with ability impaired by alcohol or drugs, leaving the scene of a collision with another skier except to receive help, and trespassing on private land adjoining a ski area which has been closed and posted.

Most of the new laws also have a statute of limitations on the amount of time that can pass before a ski area is sued or an accident. In most cases, the limit is three years.

It is too early to tell whether the new laws are working, but the ski industry is hopeful all will benefit. At least the area operators still can get insurance, which was threatened with cancellation after the landmark verdict in Sunday vs. Stratton.

Bloodmobile At School Monday

FARMVILLE — The Bloodmobile will visit Farmville Central High School Monday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. According to James McAdams, Farmville Central assistant principal, emphasis will be placed on having persons from the Farmville community visit the school from 9:30-3 p.m. for blood donations. McAdams noted that the school hopes to give Pitt County a Christmas present by giving blood during the holiday season. The Farmville Central SGA will be in charge of the school blood program.

Where Herbert Hoover Is Celebrated

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI National Reporter

WEST BRANCH, Iowa (UPI) — The voice on the tape recording in the wall is that of Harry Truman and the words are as near to a gush as the late President from Missouri could manage.

Truman lists achievements and asks, "What more can a man do?"

He is talking about Herbert Hoover, a bogyman of Democratic Party doctrine for a generation and the man honored with this hometown museum complete with the 1964 dedication tape recordings carrying Truman's hurrahs and roses. The earpiece on the wall allows one to hear Hoover's reply.

Hoover, whose presidency was seven months old when the Great Depression fell on America and who became a scapegoat for the ensuing misery, remarks that the words of Truman and other dedication speakers are "overstatement." How can he reply to all the praise.

Hoover replies on the 1964 tape. "I think they're all true." That Hoover had a sense of humor might surprise some. That Truman could have praised Hoover so highly might surprise others. Maybe it is fitting.

Iowa has become a main arena in the process of electing presidents. Jimmy Carter's success in the state's 1976 Democratic caucuses started it. And now the seekers of the 1980 White House — Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy, George Bush, Ronald Reagan, John Connally, Howard Baker and the rest — cut back and forth in the corn between Sioux City and Davenport.

None this season has stopped yet at West Branch. It might be instructive for them to do so.

For the Hoover Museum and Library shows what is left of a presidency once the partisan platform corn is gone. On display are tributes from the kings and commissars of a Europe half a century ago, honoring Hoover for organizing — and sometimes funding — relief drives that saved a continent from starving.

Here are the emotional displays of Hoover's attempts.

as president, to undo the Great Depression. He failed, of course. But so did his successor, Franklin Roosevelt. Roosevelt, however, in his oratory and in his style, made the nation feel better. Hoover's tragedy was that he did not inspire his people.

In the Roosevelt years Hoover was almost a curse word. The comeback of Herbert Hoover began when Truman, after succeeding Roosevelt, wrote in longhand a letter inviting Hoover back to the White House.

The display cases show Hoover's letter of gratitude to Truman. Hoover wrote that he had offered his services to Roosevelt in World War II.

"Because of my varied experience during the First World War, I thought my services might be useful, however there was no response," wrote Hoover. Replied Truman, who later wrote of his own experience of being unconsulted by Roosevelt. "...you state the situation much better than I could."

Hoover served Truman and then the late President Dwight Eisenhower as leader of a committee to undo much federal bureaucracy. Perhaps more lasting, however, was the humor in the post-Roosevelt era of good feeling.

In October 1964, hearing that Truman in retirement had injured himself in a fall, Hoover sent his friend a telegram:

"Bathtubs are a menace to ex-presidents for, as you may recall, a bathtub rose up and fractured my vertebrae when I was in Venezuela on your world famine mission in 1946..."

Hoover died six days later. His was not the first presidential library. Truman's and Roosevelt's had come earlier. But in an era of better feeling for Hoover, the late President Lyndon Johnson helped establish the 100-acre-plus park in this eastern Iowa town where Hoover was born 105 years ago.

There were 97,798 visitors in 1965, the first year. Then, as Hoover settled back into history and the site was no longer something new, attendance fell off. But now it is on the rise again, surpassing the 1965 figures.

Thomas T. Thalken, chief of the museum and library, smiled and said children "most often ask how old Hoover was when he died (he was 90) and what he died of."

He said a few older visitors ask "why there is no exhibition of how Hoover 'caused the Great Depression.' It's been only in the past 15 years that historians have begun to take a new look at Hoover's presidency."

"A lot of people are inflicted with the conventional knowledge of Herbert Hoover; that he 'caused the depression'. They know he 'didn't do a thing' to combat it. Fortunately, this picture is changing."

Museum receptionist Pam Hinkhouse, Guard Paul Mohr and greeters of the public also said younger Americans come with more open minds. Mrs. Hinkhouse laughed.

"Sometimes the minds are too open. Sometimes we are asked when Hoover invented the vacuum cleaner (he didn't)," Mohr said. "And sometimes we are asked how he was related to J. Edgar Hoover (he wasn't)."

Mrs. Hinkhouse said, "Occasionally the old beliefs show. We have had senior citizens drive up in a bus and refuse to come in, not wanting to see a museum dedicated to the 'founder' of the Great Depression."

But, said Thalken, most visitors come in the spirit of the day in 1964, at the dedication, when the two ex-presidents, Hoover and Truman, strolled the park grounds.

"The old gentlemen were walking amid the restored pioneer houses and felt the need to relieve themselves. They found the door to the restroom locked. They finally got in and then got into an Alphone and Gaston routine over who would the facility first."

"Mr. Hoover said, 'President Truman, you go first for you are my guest.' said, 'No, Mr. Hoover, you go first. You're older.'"

More Likely To Tell Of Santa

NEW YORK (UPI) — A cross-generational study by three psychologists indicates children today are more likely to want to teach their offspring about Santa Claus than did youngsters in 1896.

The study also showed the 19th century tots were much more likely than contemporary children to attribute superhuman powers to Santa — perhaps, the psychologists theorize, because today's children are raised on stories and television shows about such superhuman characters as Wonder Woman and Batman.

The research was done by Ludy T. Benjamin, Jr., Jacqueline F. Langley and Rosalie J. Hall, and reported in the December issue of Psychology Today magazine. The new study replicated that done in 1896 with 900 7- to 13-year-olds in Lincoln, Neb., public schools.

Pupils Giving Holiday Program

The annual Christmas program by students of Eastern Elementary School will be given in conjunction with the school's PTA meeting scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p. m.

It will be held in the All-Purpose Room of the school. There is to be a Christmas pageant titled, "Three O'clock Rehearsal." Directed by Mrs. Zenora Hopkins, the pageant will feature students from kindergarten through sixth grade in the cast and chorus.

Parents and friends are urged to attend.

Bloodmobile To Visit Plant

The Bloodmobile will visit Union Carbide here Tuesday, Dec. 11, Pitt Blood Committee officials announced.

Officials said the visit is scheduled from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. The public is urged to participate.

DEMAND PROTECTION UNITED NATIONS (AP) — More than 500 U.N. staff members, citing the arrests and disappearance of seven colleagues abroad, have adopted a resolution demanding more protection.

Rodeo Wows Germans, Makes Heroes Of The GIs

By KAREN VIK EUSTIS
 OTTERBERG, West Germany (UPI) — For about 20 weekends between April and October, Alan and Eva Jacob's "Rodeo USA" brings West Germans a glimpse of the American West, complete with wild horses and a bucking Braham bull named Hugo.

"When 'Rodeo USA' comes to a German town, the main street of Cheyenne, Wyo., comes with us," says the 33-year old Jacob.

The cowboys and cowgirls are American servicemen and women with ranching background stationed in West Germany, and the rodeo is usually sponsored by an American military base.

At a typical weekend rodeo in Heilbronn, traditional German sausages and hard rolls made way for army-run concessions offering barbecued chicken, chili, hot dogs, tacos, hamburgers and beer.

Jacob, who grew up on a ranch in John Day, Ore., looks the cowboy he is, from worn boots to grey Stetson. At his 140-acre ranch near Kaiserlautern, Jacob raises quarter horses, or "Western horses" as the Germans call them, and keeps the rodeo stock.

Jacob introduced the quarter horse for pleasure riding in Germany in 1972, a venture which proved "amazingly successful," he said.

A one-time archaeology student who wrote spaghetti western movies and was a stunt rider in Italy before turning to rodeos, Jacob put on his first "Rodeo USA" in 1971 at the American army's German-American festival in West Berlin.

"The rodeo draws the biggest press of anything the army has done since the Berlin airlift in 1948," Jacob said.

"Usually all you hear about American GIs in Germany are the rapes and drug busts — the negative side. The rodeo has changed that." He pointed to a shelf of scrapbooks filled with clippings from the German press.

In addition, the army concessions bring over $750,000 each year into the European command for its youth activities.

The rodeo appears throughout Germany and occasionally in Holland. Soldier-cowboys travel as far as from Berlin to Heilbronn — about 720 miles round trip — to pitch tents behind the arena and pit their courage against a mean-eyed bucking bronc named Lufthansa or the 1,800-pound Hugo.

The European Rodeo Association, which Jacob founded, has about 800 members. Of those, about 200 participate in the rodeo events: bareback riding, saddle bronc riding, bull riding, calf roping, steer wrestling and cowgirls' barrel racing.

The rest enjoy the cameraderie and help run the rodeo. Jacob estimated that 4,000 to 5,000 servicemen and women have passed through the association in the last nine years, including a few Dutch, German and French members.

"The rodeo does wonders for the morale of the GI cowboys," Jacob said. "Suddenly beautiful girls are asking for the autograph of the lowliest private, and he's a young John Wayne, not a serial number like he is the rest of the week."

Thirty percent of the members have extended their duty in Germany because of the rodeo, saving the army thousands of dollars, Jacob said.

Jacobs also tries to redefine Germans' Hollywood view of the Wild West.

"Earlier, when I wore a cowboy hat, Germans would ask, 'Where are your pistols?'" Jacob said. "Now we've changed considerably the bad movie impression of gun-toting wild-haired men. The Germans have come to respect us and rodeo as a sport a lot more."

As Hugo explodes out of the chute and seconds later the cowboy on his back bites the dust, a German in the stands

MERGER COMPLETED

The nine offices of The Bank of Asheville became offices of North Carolina National Bank on Monday when a merger between the two institutions became effective.

The Bank of Asheville, with total deposits of just under $100 million as of Sept. 30, operated branches in Asheville, Black Mountain, Candler, Skyland and Swannanoa.

Under terms of the merger agreement, shareholders of The Bank of Asheville will receive 2.625 shares of NCNB Corp. in exchange for each share of The Bank of Asheville.

Including the Buncombe County offices, NCNB has 171 offices in 58 cities and towns in the state. As of Sept. 30, NCNB had total deposits of $3.9 billion.

TRAINING COURSE

Bernita L. Johnson, a former Bethel resident, recently completed a four-week underwriting training course at the Boston home offices of Liberty Mutual Insurance Co.

A 1979 graduate of Hampton Institute, Ms. Johnson will be assigned to Liberty Mutual's Bala Cynwyd, Penn. office as a business risks underwriter.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Johnson of Bethel.

AWARD PRESENTED

Atlas Wooten, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, received an award from John Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, at the organization's annual meeting in Charlotte.

The award was presented in recognition of outstanding production by Farm Bureau insurance agents in the county in a statewide contest in which agents had an opportunity to win the honor for their county presidents who serve on a voluntary basis.

Agency manager Jack Barnes took part in the award activities at the annual meeting.

ACQUISITION REPORTED

Lee B. Thomas Jr., president of Vermont American Corp., announced the acquisition of Lineberry Inc. of Wilkesboro, and its affiliate McCray Saw and Tool Co. of Lenoir for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Effective Nov. 30, the new operations were combined with Deluxe Saw and Tool Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Vermont American, under the name of DLM Inc., it was noted.

Vermont American, which has a plant here, is a Louisville-based manufacturer of cutting tools, power tool accessories and hand tools for consumer and industry.

ATTENDED SESSION

Don and Lois Braxton, owners of Country Drapery and Fabric Shop, Rt. 3, Greenville, recently attended a two-day seminar at Wrightsville Beach sponsored by Norman's of Salisbury.

Norman's of Salisbury representatives covered various topics during the session, including the installation of hardware, drapery styles and window treatments, among other areas of interest.

NEW POSITIONS

W. R. Roberson Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of North Carolina Television Inc. (WITN-TV), announced two new staff moves at the Washington station.

Roberson said that Hub Burton, who joined WITN-TV last March, has been promoted to assistant sports director. Burton's duties include reporting sports during the 11 p.m. newscasts, hosting the East Carolina University head football coach's show, and co-hosting ECU football highlights.

Roberson reported that John Crumpler has been named promotion coordinator for the station, with responsibilities for the production and coordination of promotional material for both on the air and print media.

SPEECH WINNER

Judy Brock, executive secretary to C. B. Tugwell, president of First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Pitt County, was the first place winner in the North Carolina Speech Contest held recently in Winston-Salem.

Mrs. Brock held previously won the Coastal Plains Chapter 176 contest held in Kinston in October.

Both contests are sponsored by the Institute of Financial Education and are intended to encourage young men and women within the savings industry to a greater interest in the development of their speaking ability. The contest is a feature event of the Institute of Financial Education's annual conference.

Mrs. Brock will be attending the annual conference to be held in Atlanta in March and will represent the state as a contestant in the national contest.

JOINS FIRM
Eastern Business Brokers of Greenville, a firm specializing in the acquisition and sale of businesses, announced the recent affiliation of Ray Masten with the corporation.
The firm, located at 210 W. Fourth Street, is an independently owned member of the Southern Business Brokers.
Les Wall is president of the Greenville firm.

NAME CHANGE
Holland Canvas Products Inc., Highway 264 West in Washington, is now Pamlico Canvas Products Inc., it was announced by William P. Kraus, president and chief operating officer.
Kraus said that Mr. and Mrs. John Holland are no longer associated with the corporation.

BW PROMOTIONS
Burroughs Wellcome Co. here announced three staff promotions.
The company said that the promotions included: Albert J. Lalik to the position of manager of environmental engineering and technical safety, with responsibility for environmental protection, pollution control and implementation of technical safety programs within the company;
Herbert Kallweit to the newly created position of manager of systems engineering, with responsibility for the Systems Analysis Department and Industrial Engineering Department activities; and,
Fred Long to department head of project engineering, with responsibility for the accomplishment of all plant engineering projects, including manufacturing-processing machinery and equipment, automation and instrumentation and controls.

PURCHASE ANNOUNCED
Tom Hancock, president of All Clean Inc., announced the corporation's recent acquisition of the Greenville-Pitt County division of Cleanco, a Jacksonville-based carpet cleaning company.
Cleanco's Greenville operations will now be conducted as part of All Clean Inc., Hancock said.
He reported that the acquisition enables the company, which previously dealt basically with commercial floor maintenance and general janitorial cleaning, to provide a broader line of cleaning services and carpet care.

CHIEF OFFICER
Realtor George P. Shafran of Arlington, Va., president of the Homes for Living Network, a non-franchised membership real estate marketing and referral network, has been elected chief executive officer of the network and its parent company, Realty Programming Corp. of St. Louis, Mo.
Shafran, it was noted, will assume full direction of the network and all of its affiliated companies, replacing Saul Krawll, former board chairman and executive director.
Founded in 1962, the network is comprised of more than 2,200 real estate offices throughout all of the 50 states, Canada and the Caribbean area. Residential sales among members in 1978 were in excess of $14 billion, it was pointed out.

STORE OPENING
The opening of the new Fieldcrest retail store at Smithfield has been set for Dec. 13, according to David M. Tracy, president of the Fieldcrest Mills Marketing Division.
Tracy said that the store will carry Fieldcrest's domestic products and a thrift shop will also be operated specializing in discontinued styles, samples, seconds and other merchandise.
Fieldcrest operates two other retail stores in Eden, N.C. and Columbus, Ga.

TO TEACH COURSES

Fewer Borrowed In October

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers may be deciding they can no longer keep up with higher interest rates.
The Federal Reserve Board reported Friday that consumer borrowing in October increased by the smallest amount in nearly three years, a sign consumers are growing cautious.
Total consumer debt increased by just $2.19 billion, or 0.7 percent, during the month, less than half the record September increase of $4.45 billion. It was the smallest monthly increase since January 1977.

Total outstanding consumer debt in October totaled $305.22 billion, an increase of 18.4 percent from a year earlier. But the annual rate of increase from September to October was a much more moderate 9 percent.
Borrowing for auto purchases suffered the steepest decline in October, down 8.9 percent.
A chief aim of the Federal Reserve Board's action on Oct. 6 to further drive up interest rates was to curtail consumer borrowing, which was unrestrained by earlier hikes in interest rates and had reached levels that were worrying some policy-makers.
The idea was to make loans so expensive it would discourage consumer borrowing, a policy that seemed to have worked in October at least.
Total consumer indebtedness had hit the $300 billion mark for the first time in September, and that didn't count home mortgage debt. Savings declined to 4.3 percent of income in the third quarter of the year, a recent record low.

An Underground Fire Plagues Pennsylvania Town

CENTRALIA, Pa. (AP) — John Coddington's gas station has been snuffed out of business by fire though it has yet to be touched by a single flame. The culprit: a steady, stubborn, white-hot mine fire traveling through underground coal deposits.

The blaze grows in an ever-widening circle, officials say, and has moved about a half-mile toward Centralia and its 1,300 residents in the 17 years it has been burning.

In a matter of a few days, the temperature of one wall of Coddington's normally cool basement rose to 136 degrees because of underground steam moving ahead of the flames. After consulting fire marshals, Coddington on Friday replaced 9,000 gallons of gasoline in his tanks with water.

"I don't know what I'm going to do for a living now," said Coddington, 62, who has operated the service station a block inside the town limits since 1948.

U.S. Bureau of Mines spokesman Daniel Lewis said there is no telling when Centralians might find the flames licking beneath their sidewalks. Several homes near Centralia and an elementary school in the town are monitored for carbon monoxide from the fire, he said.

"I don't think anybody can tell you where the fire is because nobody can get in there except with bore holes," Lewis said. "We don't even know how hot it is because we can only measure it up to 1,000 degrees. We pull our equipment out after that because the lines would melt."

The fire erupted when rubbish dumped in a strip mine less than a mile from the town ignited through spontaneous combustion in 1962. An outcropping of coal in the strip mine caught fire and the blaze has been burning out of control ever since.

Largely due to the underground fire's size and intense heat, no one has tried to extinguish it. A mixture of water and fly ash has been dumped down bore holes in an effort to smother the fire and keep it from spreading, according to the Centralia Fire Department.

"The purpose of containment is to try to seal all the air from coming in and hoping it will burn itself out," Lewis said. "But it's so massive. You have 70 acres burning up there."

Coddington said he first noticed the advance of the mine fire toward his property when he saw steam rising from a crevice in his neighbor's lawn last month.

On Wednesday, steam began seeping through a crack in the ground of his own property, Coddington said, and he started checking the temperature of his gas supplies. Normally 40 to 50 degrees, the gas had reached 64 degrees by Friday.

"The fire is still a couple thousand feet away from us," Coddington said. "But what they claim is like a mine tunnel across the highway here is filled with steam from the fire."

Coddington said he and his family will continue to live in an apartment above the station, but he doesn't think he will ever be able to reopen.

Old-Fashioned Holiday Celebration For City

An early feeling of Christmas festivity abounded around Greenville last Saturday.

The Old-Fashioned Holiday Celebration was designed to create a communitywide awareness of the true Christmas and holiday spirit and to usher in the season in an old-fashioned way, appealing to the senses of sight, sound, taste and smell.

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, Greenville Recreation and Parks, Pitt County Home Extension Office and Pitt Community College combined their resources and imagination to bring to the community the special arts and craft exhibit.

Exhibits of spinning, stitchery, macrame, crochet, knitting, weaving, quilting, oil paints, Christmas crafts, hand toed fringe, silk flowers, rug hooking, carved wood tree ornaments, baskets, lamp shade decoration and chair bottoming exhibits were shown at the Greenville Community Center.

Demonstrations of various craft techniques were held throughout the day. Participating were Margaret Langley, handbags, Mary Robinette, macrame, Ann Correll, Dorothy Wells, Jean Tharp, and Lela Vaughn, oil painting, Kay Clemens and Winana Bakerman, quilting, Jennie Hall, Brownie Russell, Dot Simmons and Blackie Smith, baskets, Rachel Briley, counted cross stitch, Lillie Randolph, Swedish embroidery, Barbara Shell, weaving, Dorothy Smith, chair bottoming and lamp shades, Mrs. E. C. Lewis, string needlepoint.

Ann Holton, Annemarie Lalik, Myra Sexauer, Pamela Burkart, Kay Sutton, Nancy Brame and Mary Furth, weaving. The South Greenville Center was represented by Alice Moore.

The North Carolina Chapter of The Embroiderers' Guild of America assisted in exhibiting stitcheries created by its members.

Junior Girl Scout troops of Pitt County participated on the Downtown Mall and also at the community centers.

Afternoon performances were featured at the Greenville Recreation and Parks Administrative Office Building at Jaycee Park. Here, Joe Stine, children's librarian for Sheppard Memorial Library, told Christmas stories for young children which included simple crafts and multimedia. Seasonal music was presented by the Greenville Boys' Choir and Greenville Community Chorus. A dance performance was given by the East Carolina University Dance Theatre.

The Green Grass Cloggers Day Celebration, sponsored by the Roxy Music Arts and Crafts Center, was held at Wright Auditorium, ECU campus.

Brightly colored lollipops made of plastic circles in needlepoint stitch, miniature white lights, plastic sandwich bags tied with ribbon and red striped ribbon bows decorated the floor to ceiling Christmas tree placed in the entrance hall of the Community Center.

Natural colored German Christmas ornaments made of wood shavings and wheat straw were used to trim a second Christmas tree at the Community Center.

This was the second annual Old-Fashioned Holiday Celebration.

Play May Provide New Treatment For Autism

By LINDA HOWELL
CHAPEL HILL — Doug, tired of being pushed in the wooden wagon, began to walk around and around the recreation room; David followed. Suddenly Doug dodged behind the wagon, ready to push, waiting for David to climb in.

"That's terrific, David," the teacher said. "That's the first time Doug has ever pushed anyone in the wagon."

David beamed; Doug, never raising his head, wordlessly pushed David around the room.

Although pushing a playmate in a wagon may seem like a simple feat for most children, it's a big step for Doug. Doug is an autistic child.

His friend, David, is a third-grader from the Chapel Hill-Carrboro public school system, and their play time together is part of a new study being conducted by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill department of psychiatry's Division TEACCH (Treatment and Education of Autistic and related Communication handicapped Children).

The TEACCH program is considered a national model for the education and training of children with severe communication disorders. Since its beginnings in 1972, five diagnostic and treatment centers and 26 classrooms have been established in North Carolina for children with autism and their family. These children have problems with communication and social behavior. All but the Chapel Hill classroom are in the public schools.

In the new study, six autistic children in the Chapel Hill TEACCH program spend 30 minutes each day playing with second or third-graders from the public schools. Each week, new elementary students are chosen to participate.

"Since peers affect social and cognitive development in 'normal' children, we are hoping it will do the same for autistic children," said Susan McHale, research fellow at Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center. "So far we've had promising results."

McHale said past studies have shown that autistic children rarely play together on their own. They do interact with their teachers, but not at the same rate as they do with the other school children.

Greg Olley, TEACCH director of training, said, "Autistic children have difficulty understanding and handling social situations. That's what makes studies like Susan's so important."

"Getting the autistic child used to social situations early in life could be a big help."

The recreation room is filled with balls, mats, obstacle courses, wagons and other play items. Each autistic child has special items or games they particularly like to play. But, the visiting youngsters happily try to convince the autistic children other tasks are equally enjoyable.

"The reactions and interactions we see between the autistic and school children are simply remarkable," McHale said. "We tell the students that the autistic children don't know how to play and that it is their job to teach them. Then we teach these students a few simple signs (from sign language) and introduce them to the autistic children. We've never had a kid refuse to play with the autistic children; they all really enjoy it."

On one particular day, two third-graders spent the first 15 minutes of play chasing one autistic boy to get him to play on a rocking toy. He rocked for a few seconds and was again off and running. But, during the last 10 minutes of play he eagerly jumped on the rocker himself and spent a few moments rocking.

"These school students are terrific. They never give up. They will literally chase an autistic child until they can catch him to show him a new game," McHale said.

"They have a wonderful combination of energy and patience that allows them to persist."

Exactly what makes the children such wonderful teachers is still unclear, McHale said. But she hopes she'll find an answer in her study.

State President Visits Chapter

State President Mary Thomas Smith was here Thursday evening for the meeting of Beta Alpha Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.

A former Greenville resident and Wahl-Coates teacher, Ms. Smith discussed "Tomorrow's Assignment." After reviewing memorable events of 1979, the 50th anniversary of Delta Kappa Gamma, Ms. Smith expressed concerns about and prospects for the future. She stressed the importance of education's role in tomorrow's world.

She said education needs to design an environment to prepare students for the world in which they will live. She challenged members to fulfill the purposes and goals of the society by becoming architects for the future.

Jessie McDonald introduced the state president. President Nell Everett welcomed members and guests. Rosalie Haritun was recognized as one of the new initiates of the society. Mrs. Everett announced a poinsettia will be sent to Ruth Modlin in the Albemarle Villa Nursing Home, Williamston, and a "Tarheel Magazine" subscription to Eunice McGee in Greenville Villa.

A "make and bake" sale was held before dinner. Co-chairmen Sally Klingenschmitt and Georgia Franklin and committee members, Frances Gwynn, Irma Worthington and Mildred Southwick, organized the annual event. Proceeds will go to the World Fellowship, President's Fund, scholarships and recruitment grants.

Members of the social committee, co-chaired by Edith Worthington and Billie Terrell, with members Sujette Jones, Evelyn Blue and Rely Wanderman, were recognized by the president. Greenville Chapter No. 149 was thanked for the meal.

Music Chairman Ivey Snyder led the group in singing Christmas carols. The meeting was held at the Masonic Temple.

On The Young Side

New members for Quill and Scroll, Rose's literary club, were selected last week. These students are juniors and seniors in the upper third of their class who are participating in some phase of high school journalism.

New senior members are Meg Cain, Chris Browning, Mark Ward, Eric Hause, Beth Bailey, Robert Capwell, Jennifer Davis, Kim Waller, Patricia Bath, Mike Johnson, Robin Jones and Amy Lawler.

Junior members include Billie Ward, Marc Whitehurst, Elizabeth Ito and Ken Lang.

The Minority Affairs Club is sponsoring a minority history test for club members and other interested students. Mrs. Teresa Battle, the club's faculty advisor, will compile a study guide for the test. The club member with the highest score will receive $100 and the person with the overall best score will receive a plaque.

The Spanish Club scheduled their annual Christmas party for Dec. 10. They plan to have a covered-dish dinner.

A new organization at Rose, the Photography Club, has held several planning meetings this year and hope to raise money to buy equipment for a darkroom. Dominio Dirisio is the president. Other officers are Bill Kitrell, vice president, Robert Bright, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Heili Lane, faculty advisor.

The SGA in a meeting Wednesday, discussed upcoming projects, including the annual school candy sale, a faculty-student talent show and a carnation sale and Valentine's Day dance in February.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I knew kids were changing, but I never realized how much until I got a toy catalogue in the mail the other day.

There was a game called "Adventures in Adverbs," ages seven and up. (Wow!)

A group decision and survival game on a non-tearable game field, ages nine and up. (Far out!)

Fun with Math Motivators, ages 8-12. (Neato!)

And Baby's First Calculator... with all the features, including plus percentages, a memory to store subtotals and an eight-digit readout, ages four and up. (Thanks, Dad!)

To a woman who put both legs in one side of her underwear until she was six years old, that's quite a jolt.

Where are the dolls that don't do anything but sit on the bed and look terrific? Where are the logs that multiply under the bed? What happened to books that had pictures instead of being contained on cassettes and played back on stereos?

I don't like to think what would have happened if I had bought my children "Adventures in Pronouns" as a biggie for Christmas. They used to write phone messages on flash cards.

I also don't like to think about what is going to happen to parents on Christmas-morning when their child opens a box and says, "Oh, Mommy! Just what I wanted! Vowel Hopscotch. Play with me. Here's a bean bag. Now, all you do is toss it on a vowel and then use a long or short vowel sound. Then you hopscotch your way across the mat and back. You first, Mommy."

I can see Mommy turning pale and saying, "You play, darling. Mommy is 'into vowels' and it wouldn't be fair."

Maybe I'm mistaken, but I visualize a lot of parents sitting around at Christmas being outflashed by flash cards, outsmarted by math puzzles and outclassed by the fastest calculator ever welded by a three-year-old.

As I leafed through the catalogue, I came across a game for a little friend on my Christmas list. It was a com-

Falkland Has Woman Mayor

FALKLAND — Falkland has a new mayor and even past mayors here will agree that she's the most attractive in quite a while.

Joan Windham Strickland was installed Tuesday and conducted her first Town Council meeting that night. She's lived in this, one of the smallest municipalities in the state, for only a few months, but has operated a business here for several years and has lived most of her life in the area.

"Falkland is a wonderful community to live in," Mrs. Strickland said. "I'm looking forward to doing all I can to serve as its mayor as best I can. I hope to see more citizen participation in its government during my two-year term."

Asked about specific aims, she said, "Well, for one thing, I believe this Council is going to work for better police protection."

Mrs. Strickland is the operator of Joan's Beauty Salon in Falkland and is a substitute rural mail carrier for the U. S. Postal Service. She is the wife of Charlie Strickland, also a native of the area, who works for Brinkley Construction Company, headquartered in New Bern. The couple has two sons, Chipper, 14, and Scott, nine. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Windham, live on Rt. 4, Greenville.

Serving on the three-seat Falkland Town Council and also installed Tuesday are Vernon Best Sr., John Tyer and Woodrow Wooten.

The Council meets the first Tuesday night of each month. Falkland citizens are urged to attend, Mrs. Strickland said.

Chocolate Mousse Coffee

CARROTS PLUS

Apples are surprisingly good in this combination.

1 pound bag carrots, pared and thinly sliced

1/4 cup butter

2 medium onions, cut in thin strips

2 medium apples, pared and thinly sliced

1 teaspoon lemon juice

1/4 teaspoon salt

1/8 teaspoon white pepper

Steam carrots. In a 10-inch skillet melt butter; add onion and over moderate heat cook, covered, until transparent — 10 to 15 minutes. Add apple slices and continue cooking, covered, just until they are tender but still hold their shape — 5 minutes or so, but time will depend on variety of apples. Drain carrots and add to skillet; stir in lemon juice, salt and pepper; reheat. Makes 6 servings.

Have 'Folksy' Party Instead

© 1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem may not be unique, but it's one that's difficult to talk to anyone about. I love to entertain. I'm a gourmet cook, and I serve my dinners on fine china with lovely linen, crystal, etc. My husband and I are well educated and can carry on a decent conversation. We have no problem getting guests to come to our home. They come gladly, and always say they thoroughly enjoy themselves, and we know they do.

The problem is that very few people we have entertained ever invite us back! I keep trying the old friends, hoping they will seek us out. Then I invite new people, hoping they will like us. Nothing changes. What are we doing wrong?

NEEDS PEOPLE

DEAR NEEDS: Perhaps you entertain so elegantly that very few can match your gourmet cooking, fine china, linen, crystal, etc., so they don't try. (A feeble excuse, but it's frequently the case.)

Maybe if you had a do-it-yourself hot-dog, hamburger, corn-on-the-cob party, or something less formal and more folksy, your guests would be more inclined to reciprocate.

DEAR ABBY: I am 60. I lost my wife of 33 years two years ago and would like to marry again. Friends have fixed me up with women in my age group in an effort to get me married again. I am willing, and I have met any number of attractive women — widowed and divorced — and, Abby, give me a divorcee every time!

Every widow I meet wastes no time in telling me what a "beautiful" marriage she had, and what a "wonderful" man her dear departed husband was.

A divorcee, as a rule, is much more honest. She doesn't hesitate to say that her husband was somewhat less than perfect, and their marriage stank!

Since widows are just as entitled to a second chance as divorcees, somebody should tell widows who want to remarry that nothing turns a man off quicker than a lot of talk about what a terrific man she was married to.

sorb the egg white, but drain if necessary; add to sugar mixture and stir to coat. Butter the cooled jelly-roll pan and spread the coated almonds on it. Bake in a preheated 250-degree oven, stirring several times, until crusty — about 1 hour. Cool completely. Store in an airtight container.

ORANGE GELL

Devised by my sister Frances for easy serving.

2 cups orange juice

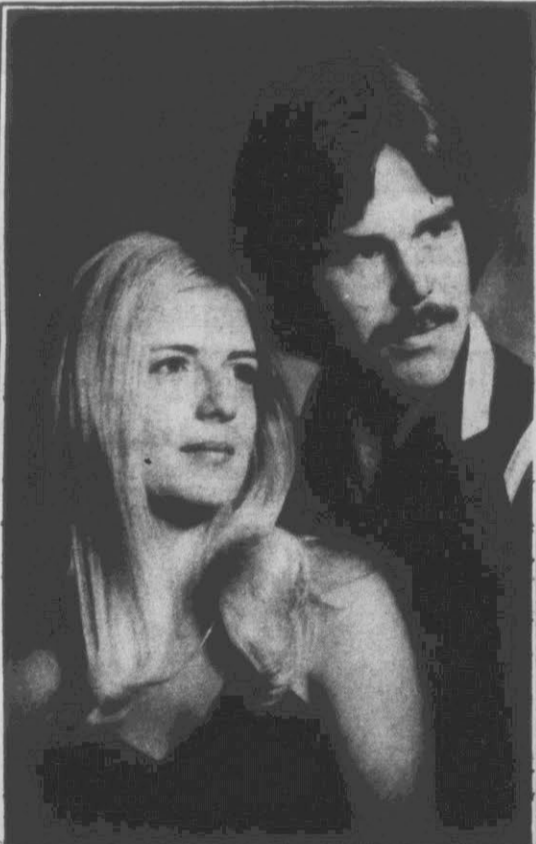

1 envelope unflavored gelatin

1-3rd cup sugar

2 tablespoons lemon juice

Custard Sauce (homemade or from a mix)

In a medium bowl, sprinkle gelatin over 1 cup cold orange juice and let soften — about 5 minutes. Heat remaining juice until it begins to boil; add to gelatin and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add sugar and lemon juice and stir until sugar is dissolved. Pour into 4 capacious dessert bowls; chill to set. At serving time, ladle custard sauce over desserts or pass sauce separately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Mr. & Mrs. W. L. Holloman of Harrelville, N.C. announce the engagement of their daughter, Penelope Helen Rebecca, to Randy L. Joyner. He is the son of Mr. & Mrs. L.M. Joyner of Greenville. A 2:30 P.M. wedding is planned for December 16 in Christian Harbor Baptist Church. (Paid Advertisement)

A guy would have to be crazy to want to take her husband's place.

DICK IN DENVER

DEAR DICK: Yup. Particularly when "his place" is in the cemetery.

DEAR ABBY: I need your help. I'm engaged to a wonderful guy I'll call Burt. He's the best, and I really love him. But I'm also in love with a married man I'll call Jerry. I know it sounds crazy, but I love them both—in totally different ways!

I met Jerry after I became engaged to Burt. Something just drew us together and we couldn't help ourselves. Jerry puts me on a constant high. He's having problems with his marriage and I'm pretty sure he'll be getting a divorce soon, then he'll be free to marry me.

In the meantime, I don't want to give up Burt because I really do love him. I've tried ending my affair with Jerry, but if he doesn't call me, I call him.

When I'm with Jerry, I feel terribly guilty, but the love seems to overcome the guilt. I really love them both.

What shall I do?

IN LOVE WITH TWO MEN

DEAR IN LOVE: If you were able to "fall in love" with another man while being engaged to Burt, it's apparent that the love between you and Burt wasn't the kind of which lasting marriages are made. (It also proved that you aren't ready for marriage yet.)

Break your engagement, and tell Burt why. And I'm betting against Jerry's divorcing his wife and marrying you. But if he does, you will have a husband who while married fooled around with a single girl. Is THAT what you want? Think about it.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Depending on the diet of a chicken, the color of egg yolks may range from pale yellow to orange; the color has no effect on quality.

Combine Shopping With Short Rest Breaks

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Take it easy on your anatomy during the holiday shopping. Don't throw your back out of tilt by carrying packages — too heavy or too clumsy. They should be delivered by truck to your home or handcart to your car.

Dress in layers of clothing. Peel off one or two when in a warm store to avoid getting overheated and then chilled when you go out again.

Frank Chappell, spokesman for the American Medical Association, said a key survival strategy is breaking up shopping into several short trips.

"Don't try to do everything at once," he said.

"And when you get to larger stores, shop for 45 minutes and then find some place to sit down and have a coffee or soft drink or ice water break.

"You'd be surprised how much it helps."

Don't make it a martini break, by the way. Booze and shopping don't mix. You run the obvious risk of less-than-perfect judgment and may buy things way out of your budget range.

You may also hurt yourself as your judgment gets fuzzy, tripping on a step or curb.

"Don't have that martini break until the end of the day," Chappell said.

"Alcohol is a depressant. If you drink it in the middle of your shopping, it will slow you down."

Chappell said rest breaks every 45 minutes relieve the strain on the musculo-skeletal system.

"Standing around is more of a physical strain than just walking," he said. "That's why window shopping is so tiring."

Dr. William F. Munsey, of Worthington, Ohio, said foot fatigue is one of the most annoying and comfort-robbing problems during the holiday shopping season.

The president of the American Podiatry Association said aching feet, common enough throughout the year, get to epidemic proportion among holiday shoppers.

He said foot fatigue is caused by diminished circulation and muscle strain.

"You get the sensation the feet are working under protest — which they are," he said.

"Waiting in line is a major cause of the discomfort and it can be relieved by moving slightly every minute or so and by shifting the body's weight from foot to foot."

Munsey called preparation for comfort a key factor.

"Women should not wear any type of backless shoe for an extended period," he said.

"The continual slapping of that type of shoe against the heel can lead to a buildup of callus-like tissue, which can be painful."

He also advised against shoes with platform or high heels and those with thin soles — which offer little protection in wet or cold weather.

"In snowy areas shoe boots are recommended since they are more comfortable than boots with shoes inside," he said. "Hose or footlets should be worn between boots and feet to prevent chafing and blisters."

Other tips:

—When selecting new footwear it is best to do your shopping late in the day. Feet tend to spread out as the day wears on, so their size is slightly different in the late afternoon than in the morning.

—Socks, knee-highs, and stockings should be as good fitting as shoes. If foot coverings are too short, toes bunch together.

—Make sure your shopping bags are waterproof. There's just nothing like the letdown feeling you get when the bottom of a loaded paper shopping bag gives out after a soaking by rain or snow.

Women Urged To Take Charge Of Own Lives

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Women would be better off if they made work the first priority in their lives, says psychotherapist Penelope Russiano.

Dr. Russiano said many women have been programmed with the notion that if they are "good little girls," some day someone will marry them and take care of them for the rest of their lives.

She said many women have spent their lives looking for a man and feeling that their fulfillment comes in providing services to men. But, she said, considering the high rate of divorce in the United States today, "the rewards of the compliant woman, the woman who is willing to love serving others and spend her life that way, really do not match the promises."

"Meanwhile, men are choosing to marry younger women. There is a slight trend of younger men being interested in older women ... but I don't think it's ever going to swoop over the tendency for men to marry younger women," she said.

But, she added, "I do think that there could really be in womankind a surge of excitement in a whole new world in which they do not rely for their definition on men, either at home or in the workplace."

Dr. Russiano, who is in private practice in New York City, is a fellow of the Institute for Advanced Study of Rational Psychotherapy. She played the role of a psychiatrist in the film, "An Unmarried Woman."

She says many women are terrified of stepping into the working world because they have been programmed to be "helpless."

Many women believe that the true rewards of life come in service to others, Dr. Russiano said, and that if they become self-sufficient and competitive in the work world, they lose their option to be taken care of.

"But," she said, "it is my observation that a woman who is sold on her own excitement about something she's interested in becomes a lot more interesting to men and women and can create for herself a world in which she is her own best friend."

Dr. Russiano says it's important for women to find out if they have any particular interest and then try to find work in that field.

Secondly, she notes, if a woman is involved in a job, it's important that she keep moving strategically into work that interests her and that is not of a service nature.

"I think looking for exciting work and demanding exciting work is the essence in terms of not being worn down into depression by the stress of frustration," Dr. Russiano said.

Dr. Russiano was among a group of panelists at a workshop on "Stress and the Working Woman" at the Ford Foundation recently, co-sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation and the Clair Corporation.

Dr. Russiano told the audience, "I have a feeling there's a whole new world in front of us and women begin to sense that they belong to a very special kind of gender with some qualities that if they were to amplify and look at, I think we really would have an entirely different world."

Hydroponic Plants Soon

Soon shoppers will be able to purchase salad greens, tomatoes, fresh herbs and other vegetables at any time of the year.

These vegetables are hydroponic plants that are grown indoors without soil, but are completely cultivated in nutrient-rich water, say specialists with the N. C. Agricultural Extension Service.

One large manufacturer had already begun marketing a line of hydroponic salad greens. Thus far, bib, leaf and Boston lettuce and spinach have been packaged for the market. The roots of these vegetables are left intact so the consumer can actually harvest the plant just before serving.

Decorative candles will keep their shape and burn longer if they are chilled in the refrigerator before use.

Evyan Perfumes Takes Great Pleasure in Saluting America's Womanhood With Their Collection of Great Ladies, December 10 Through 22

A Collection of Inaugural Ball Gowns Displayed in Miniatures from Evyan

Evyan Perfumes, America's foremost producer of prestigious perfumes, salutes a segment of American women... our First Ladies. For over 200 years, the First Ladies have influenced the customs, manners and styles of American heritage. Displayed are miniatures of First Ladies who have held this respected title from Martha Washington to Rosalynn Carter. The 48-inch dolls are dressed in gown replicas these ladies wore to their inaugural balls. The dresses are stitched from the same satins, brocades and velvets and embroidered, decorated and ribboned with the same care as the originals. These gowns and the First Ladies who wore them show an interesting history of the tastes and styles of our First Ladies.

Concrete Nightmare Supplants Expatriates' Life In Hong Kong

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONG KONG (UPI) — The days of a luxurious, leisurely life for expatriates in the British colony of Hong Kong are gone.

An unprecedented rent spiral, double-digit inflation, impossible overcrowding and the absence of greenery in the concrete jungle all have prompted foreign companies to think twice about locating families in Hong Kong.

But the human strain shows most in the wives of businessmen who call the Community Aid Bureau for help. "I'm a prisoner in my apartment," one expatriate wife complains.

"Where can my children play safely?" implores another. "We had a large yard on a quiet street in California. Now there's only a parking lot and garbage cans."

The Community Aid Bureau is the only service available in one of the world's most densely populated, polluted and expensive cities dedicated to assisting any English speaker, regardless of nationality, who needs help.

"We tell it like it is," said Elise Hoffman, 42, of Danbury, Conn., who helped found the bureau five years ago.

"It's not a particularly pretty picture," she said. "The exorbitant rents and spiraling cost of living have shattered the myth of the overpaid expatriate banking in luxury."

The number of women seeking help has shot up dramatically since the bureau's founding. The number of inquiries totalled 2,144 during the first year of operation in 1975-76 but jumped to almost

Alumni Group's Meeting Set

The Pitt County Chapter of the A & T University Alumni will meet at the home of Addie Gore here Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

Members will be giving financial reports and the final plans for the Christmas concert by the A & T Gospel Chorus Dec. 16 will be discussed.

6,000 in the same period in 1978-79.

The average American pays $2,000 a month for a three bedroom apartment with no utilities. The apartment is squeezed into a crowded housing block completely lacking in recreational facilities. Expatriates who receive little or no housing subsidy from their companies often are caught in financial crunches.

"While we can't stop the rent rise, we can try to make the tensions more bearable," Mrs. Hoffman said.

"Women call up and say they just can't stand it, that they're packing up and taking their children home," she said. "Others can only bear it for six months a year. Truthfully, there's no current indication that any of the serious problems here will improve in the near future. That in itself is severely depressing."

The Community Aid Bureau is staffed by volunteers trained to handle emotional problems. The staffers also hand out reams of information on bus and tram routes, the cheapest stores and even Chinese cooking tips.

Even though a second income is becoming a necessity rather than a choice for many families, most women with children find it difficult to compete with the Hong Kong Chinese for low-paying jobs with long hours.

The Community Aid Bureau recommends that women with little capital but initiative try their hand at interior decorating, wine selling at tasting parties, tutoring or starting badly needed nursery schools for Western children.

The women who have the most difficult time adjusting are those who had good jobs in the United States or Europe but who find they cannot practice their profession in Hong Kong. American lawyers cannot practice because the colony uses British law. Schools tend to hire only British-trained teachers. The government prefers local job applicants to expatriates.

Combined with the feeling of uselessness is isolation. The overpopulation of Hong Kong means, for example, that expatriate families must wait three years or more to join recreational sports clubs, thereby closing off a prime avenue of making friends in a foreign place.

Beaches become so crowded that Chinese families frequently head to them on Friday evening and spend the week-end nights camped on the sand to ensure some space. But the sight of the pollution and crowds in the water and at cement or stone covered picnic spots often prompts expatriates to return to their apartments in disgust.

Satellite TV To Change The Industry

By BILL STRONG
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — When it comes to meeting America's demand for television, the sky is the limit.

Just ask Ted Turner. When the Atlanta businessman and yachtsman was in Newport, R.I., for the America's Cup trials in the summer of 1977, he didn't miss a telecast of the baseball team he owns, the Atlanta Braves.

How did he do it? Turner had one of these saucer-shaped antennas, or earth stations, hauled from Georgia to a house he rented in Newport. He turned it skyward, flipped on the switch, and presto — Braves baseball.

Turner also happens to own WTBS-TV, the Atlanta station that carries the Braves. But others have joined him in the past few months.

A handful of companies have started offering earth stations to individual viewers. One selling for $36,500 is available for that special someone through this year's — Nieman-Marcus catalog.

The direct satellite-to-home television business is off the ground.

"I can see how it would really kick off," says Jeff Lane, owner of Bell Ranch in New Mexico.

Until he bought a satellite receiving station this fall, Lane had been without television for 4½ years. His ranch is too far away from any source of over-the-air television and beyond the reach of the cable. The closest movie house is in Tucumcari, a 2½-hour drive.

Lane now picks up nearly two dozen channels off the satellite.

"There have been some sacrifices in our work," he admits with a laugh.

Since 1975, cable television programs have been bounced off a satellite in orbit more than 22,000 miles above the equator. The shows are beamed back to earth, where they are picked up by large earth stations and relayed to homes through cables strung on telephone poles or run underground.

By putting up your own earth station, it's possible to pick up the entire range of TV programs available by satellite, not just the few offered by any one cable firm.

So, in addition to the network channels, the owner of a home satellite receiver can watch all the programs supplied to cable systems — about two dozen in all.

They include first-run movies, entertainment specials, an all-sports channel, Spanish-language programming, religious shows, children's channels and four "superstations" — conventional broadcast stations such as Turner's that beam their signals off the satellite in order to widen their audience and attract national advertisers.

Direct-to-home satellite TV is a video fantasy come true, especially for sports fans.

"There's nothing anywhere that compares with the sports available by satellite," says Fred Hopengarten, president and founder of Channel One in Newton, Mass., which sells backyard earth stations.

Lloyd Clary of Belton, S.C., and his wife, Frankie, would agree. The couple bought a satellite receiver this summer so they, too, could watch Braves baseball. But with the 15-foot-diameter "dish" anchored beside their house, they also can watch the Mets, the Cubs and the Giants.

"We can choose from 436 games a season," marvels Mrs. Clary.

As nice as all this sounds, there are things to consider. First, the price. It ranges from a minimum of about $15,000 to more than $35,000.

The receiving dish now on the home market is about 15 feet in diameter, which can make your house look like an Air Force tracking station.

Getting any signal at all depends on the location of your home. If there's any interference from trees or buildings, if the antenna can't "see" the satellite as it hovers in the southwestern sky, you're out of luck.

Or, if there's any microwave interference from ground-based communications, the satellite signal may be blocked.

But one potential obstacle to owning a private earth station was removed recently when the Federal Communications Commission announced its decision to drop licensing requirements for satellite receiving stations. That eliminated the need for a process that takes time and money.

The FCC reaffirmed, however, that operators of earth stations still must obtain permission to pick up the signals. Homesat makes sure its customers have that permission, but Hopengarten takes the laissez-faire approach.

"There's no doubt in my mind it's legal to listen to anything in the sky," he insists.

Regulation of the communications industry is based on the 1934 Communications Act, written before the birth of television and while commercial radio was still in infancy. Various attempts to update the law have stalled in Congress.

Hopengarten feels the 45 year-old-law is open to interpretation when it comes to new technology. He contends an individual can watch what he pleases off the satellite, without permission from the programmers who charge cable operators a fee to carry the shows they beam off the satellite.

"The Commission has not addressed that issue or rendered a definitive interpretation," says FCC assistant general counsel Norman Blumenthal.

There's little question, however, that the developing television technologies — direct-to-home satellite TV, pay, cable, video disc, and home video recorders — will compete for viewers with one another and with the commercial networks.

Battle Lines In Beaufort Sea

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer
BARROW, Alaska (AP) — To be a native, one must hunt the bowhead. So says the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission, and it explains the bitter opposition of many Inupiat Eskimos to offshore oil development in the Beaufort Sea.

ments on Dec. 11 will sell oil drilling leases on 514,000 acres. To the state, it promises revenue; to the nation, a supplement to its scarce oil.

But the Inupiat see offshore drilling as a dire threat to the bowhead whale, an already endangered species that is the mainstay of their subsistence culture.

The noise, the manmade structures, and perhaps pollution from oil spills, the Inupiat and their allies fear, could doom the bowhead and with it a way of life rooted in centuries of tradition and custom.

Federal, state and industry officials believe the environmental and ecological safeguards are adequate. Inupiat and some local officials are skeptical.

The U.S. government's environmental impact statement acknowledges, at any rate, the importance of the bowhead to the Inupiat.

"If whaling were to cease among the Inupiat because of outside intervention," the statement says, "the results would be catastrophic. Socio-culturally, the damage would be irreparable."

There's evidence that the North Slope has been inhabited by man for as long as 11,000 years. Today, 85 percent of the households get half their goods, clothing and other needs from whales and other animals like caribou and seal, the government estimates.

The old ways have long been undermined, of course. From the first contact with the non-Inupiat — French and Russian fur traders, British whalers, missionaries — the Inupiat culture has been modified.

And the biggest change has come with the discovery of oil at Prudhoe Bay onshore, federal officials say. Development of the Beaufort Sea, offshore, will merely accelerate the substitution of Western for Inupiat Eskimo values.

"If we don't have the bowhead, we won't have the culture," says Lester Suvlu, director of conservation and environmental protection for the North Slope Borough, the local government.

He speaks feelingly of the fervor and festiveness that grips the community with the twice-yearly whale hunt.

"At first, I looked at it like me going out hunting on a weekend," says Conrad Bagne, a former University of Washington teacher and now the North Slope Borough's attorney. "But there's a whole cultural activity involved. People take off their white masks and become Eskimos again."

Barrow, with about 2,000 people, has satellite television, a senior citizens center, a hospital, daily jet service and even a Mexican restaurant.

"Looking at it from the outside, I suppose you could say the culture is pretty much gone now," says Jacob Adams, who at 32 is one of the youngest activists of the North Slope. He is president of the borough assembly and vice president of the Native Arctic Slope Regional Corp., which even has some investments in oil-related industry.

"But whaling is still an integral part of our culture. You can't express it; you have to grow up with it."

Adams says whaling is vital for food in small villages where the only jobs are with the school and a few government services.

Or, as Emily Wilson, an Inupiat who translates documents and reports on the Beaufort sale in the native language, puts it, "You're drilling on our dinner table."

"I'm one of the few Westernized," says Lloyd Ahvakana, a whaling captain and director of administration and finance for the borough. "I can live both lives, where some can't cope with the change. But even I still need whale and seal as part of my diet."

Development of the Beaufort Sea will be the most expensive ever in this country because of the severe Arctic conditions. These also raise questions about cleanups after any oil spill — and nobody knows what the effect of a spill might be on the whales.

While inhabitants of the outlying North Slope villages would prefer to bar drilling altogether, Barrow residents and officials are willing to compromise. They don't want drilling beyond an area called the Barrier Islands, where ice conditions are most hazardous.

"We're not stingy about our oil; we just want it done right," says Annie Brower, a member of the planning commission.

But Ben Nungasak, 67, insists, "We don't want them to drill the ocean. On the tundra (as at Prudhoe Bay) that's all right with me. But I don't want them to chase the fish, the seals, the whales."

Gov. Jay Hammond says he tried to persuade Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to delete the tracts beyond the Barrier Islands, which constitute most of the federally-owned area in the joint sale. Andrus says that Hammond was a tough negotiator, but cited President Carter's position that the country urgently needs new domestic energy sources brought into production.

"Unless the federal government dropped its tracts, it would be useless for the state to withdraw its lands beyond the Barrier Islands," Hammond says. But he points to a requirement that drilling platforms be in place for at least two years to test their strength against the ice before oil drilling can start. This should mitigate concerns, he says.

Other precautions embodied in the lease will prohibit drilling when the ice season is at its most hazardous.

"It was a hard decision," says Robert LeResche, Alaska's natural resources commissioner, who determined that the sale should go ahead with those protections. "I talked to whalers from Point Hope to Kaktovik, and I share their concerns. But we're never going to know enough about whales or anything else. We know enough to judge the probabilities of what could happen and how to deal with it."

LeResche adds: "I share the Inupiat's concern about the culture, but if anything affects it, it'll be the influx of people, the new jobs, and all the money that'll go up there. The threat to the culture through a biological disaster is very, very small."

LeResche notes that oil drilling stipulations for the scheduled 660,409-acre lease sale at the Georges Banks off the New England coast — an offshore development opposed by fishermen there — covers three-and-a-half pages.

"Our notice of sale goes to 60 pages with the most substantive part about drilling stipulations taking up 30 pages," he says. "Anyone who thinks we're ignoring concerns over the Beaufort should compare what's happening here with some of these other lease sales."

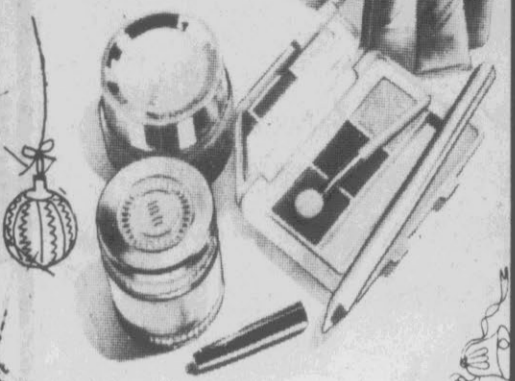

Such arguments fail to soothe Eben Hopson, the North Slope Borough's mayor, or Dr. John Kelley, a scientist who's studying the bowhead whale. Kelley doubts that the drilling platforms can withstand the pressure of moving ice.

"We know very little about the Arctic environment," says Kelley. "One should be very concerned about the effects of any industrial accident or harassment of (marine) life."

Hopson, who hired eminent environmental lawyers and engineers in fighting the lease sale, is also fighting it on non-judicial fronts. One measure imposes certain conservation zones with special drilling instructions which the industry says are impossible to live with.

"I suppose we could put up a wall and stop everything," says Hopson. "But that would have us shooting at each other. Our position is just to make sure that nothing is damaged in the process."

Political Women View 1980 As The Crucial Year

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Newsfeature Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five years ago, a national convention of the National Organization for Women rejected suggestions to get into electoral politics. A majority thought that women's issues were personal and social, not political. These days, like hundreds of other lobbies, NOW has a Political Action Committee to finance political campaigns at all levels. And at the group's convention in October, everyone talked politics.

Major women's groups, NOW foremost among them, consider 1980 a crucial year — the first in which women will be able to exercise political clout worthy of a potential constituency comprising more than half the American population. Eleanor Cutri Smeal, NOW's president, says it's the most important year for women since 1920, when women's suffrage was approved.

The immediate goals are approval of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, a loosening of restrictions on abortion, and a series of economic measures affecting women. Meanwhile, groups like the National Women's Political Caucus are working to elect as many women as possible to national, state and local office and to get them high-powered jobs in government and on presidential campaign staffs.

The main avenue is publicity and pressure on candidates for offices from president down. "When a presidential candidate makes a speech anywhere in this country, we will be there. And we will demand not only lip service but action," Ms. Smeal proclaims.

Veteran politicians are skeptical. Most polls show that women vote for candidates for the same reason men do — a recent poll taken by the Gallup organization for Redbook Magazine said, for example, that "women's issues" are far down the list of priorities for women entering the voting booth.

Nonetheless, feminists are proud of their gains over the past decade. "Women of all ages stop me and say 'the women's movement changed my life,'" says Betty Friedan, one of the founders of NOW. "We've taken tremendous steps in the past 10 years and we're not about to go back to second-class citizenship."

Ms. Smeal ticks off a list of accomplishments — getting the ERA and its extension through Congress, establishing the legality of abortion in the courts, the approval of Title IX to the Education Act, which guarantees that equal funds are allocated for men's and women's activities. But she concludes: "We still have a long way to go."

For those assessing the power of organized womanhood, the political record of the women's movement is checkered with contradictions.

It succeeded in getting the Equal Rights Amendment through Congress, and having the deadline for ratification extended from March 1979 to June 1982 when ERA fell three states short of the required 38. But ERA has been stalled for five years now, and political endorsements from the White House on down have failed to get it any further, in part because the initial surge generated a strong counter movement led by Phyllis Schlafly, a long-time conservative activist.

Increasing numbers of women have been elected or appointed to high elective office in the past decade — there were woman mayors of San Francisco, Chicago, Cincinnati, San Antonio, Phoenix and San Jose, Calif., and woman governors of Connecticut and Washington.

But women still are clearly under-represented. Until recently, 1 percent of the nation's judges were female; only 16 of 435 members of the House of Representatives and one of a hundred U.S. senators are women; and despite gains last year, only about 10 percent of the nation's state legislators.

Professionals — most of them men — doubt that women as a bloc will have much more impact next year than other organized interest groups representing much smaller constituencies. Women, the pros emphasize, are as diverse as the nation itself.

"Other issues will have far greater import than so-called women's issues," says Eddie Mahe, campaign manager for Republican presidential aspirant John Connally. "We're committed, as is every other candidate, to equality and those kinds of things. But inflation, energy, and such will still be the dominant issues in the campaign."

When the leaders of women's groups talk about 1980, they talk about their potential leverage at the presidential nominating conventions. New Democratic Party rules require that half the delegates to the Democratic convention be women. Republican women's groups are working hard to make the slice just as big at the GOP gathering.

"We'll find so many women delegates at those conventions and so many delegates who support our issues that they'll make a real bloc for us," says Ellen Malcolm of the Women's Political Caucus.

"There will be women in the Kennedy camp and women in the Carter camp and the Brown camp and for Connally and Bush and others. But they'll coalesce around the issues. So if there's a battle about ERA when we talk about ERA in the platform, we'll have a pretty formidable force that the candidates will have to contend with."

In an effort to broaden their constituency, feminists are emphasizing the connection between the economy and women's rights. "Women suffer more than men when the economy is bad," says Ms. Smeal.

NOW contends that inflation hurts women more than men because women have lower paying jobs. It wants changes in the Social Security law to allow women who have spent most of their lives as housewives to share benefits with their husbands. And they want new safeguards to insure that men and women receive equal pay for equal work.

Economics Is Popular Study

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — During the heights of social and political upheaval in the 1960s, a religion course was the most popular subject at Princeton University. Now, two economics courses are the top draws.

And Princeton University officials say the shift in subject popularity may reflect the changing values of American youth.

Some courses always make the list of 10 favorite courses because they are required for graduation, officials say. But in 1969, "Religious Ideas in Literature" was the course students were most eager to take. Also making the 1969 list were two sociology courses.

Times have changed and, while the religion course is still offered, the Ivy League school's heaviest enrollment is in Economics 101, or "The Structure and Functioning of the National Economy." Another economics course also made the list, while an accounting course finished 11th.

The university said the report reflected the financial concerns prevalent throughout the country and the rebounding popularity of business as a career.

University spokesman James I. Merritt said economics was now the fourth most popular major at the school. There are currently 154 undergraduates concentrating in economics, compared with 96 in 1969.

University Registrar Bruce Finney said, however, the changing student course selections were probably just a cyclical thing.

"You can get misled if you just take a snapshot," Finney said. "What is up this year is down next year."

"Course enrollment requirements are very important, too," he said. "Right now, business is up and sociology is down. But they're all cycles and it will change again. We're not going to change our curriculum and our faculty because those are long-term commitments."

Finney said current enrollments indicated that, after steady declines, psychology is again on the rise while sociology is still at a low point.

"This may be part of the growing concern with the individual and less concern for society as a whole," he said.

Princeton University students are offered courses ranging from human knowledge to cosmic evolution to Roman law to jazz.

"We strive very hard to maintain our liberal arts orientation," he said. "It's our philosophy and we're not going to base our curriculum on the state of the economy."

For this year's student body, 65 percent of the undergraduates are enrolled in one of the top 10 courses.

In addition to the economics courses, the list includes physics, two literature offerings, two calculus courses, chemistry, psychology and "The Role of Law in American Society, 1607-1977."

Matchmaker Pairs Christian Couples

By VIRGINIA CULVER
Denver Post
Religion Editor

DENVER (AP) — Eugene Snyder is in the business of matchmaking Christian matchmakers, that is, Born-again Christians.

With classified ads which run each Sunday in area newspapers, Snyder helps match persons who prefer to date only Christians.

He's been accused of discriminating against non-Christians and of having an "elitist" organization.

"Sure, some people feel that way," he said in an interview. "It's not that we think there aren't any good people who aren't Christians. But people like Christians need to associate with people who understand their point of view."

Though the business started "agonizingly slow" last June, it has since picked up and about 100 persons have paid the $70 yearly fee (or $40 for six months) to join Christian Matchmakers. So far the introductions haven't resulted in any marriages, but there has been one engagement, Snyder said.

Those who respond to the ad in the personal classified section are asked to fill out a form answering questions about their lifestyle, marriages, background, education, and a ratings list on such areas as punctuality, outgoing qualities, friendliness and interests. They are also asked what qualities they want in another person.

Snyder, 58, then works at matching persons and, when he does, he calls both parties. With their permission, "I give the gentleman the lady's name and phone number, but not the address."

Rose Parade Pace-Setter

ISABELLA COLEMAN

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Every year she built a winner. Sometimes only one, but usually it was more. Many more.

She was so good at her chosen profession and for so long, in fact, that it is still said here that no one will ever come close to smashing her record. One that is likely to remain intact when the 91st Tournament of Roses Parade passes into history on Jan. 1.

Isabella Coleman, 88, who created an average of three winners each year until her retirement in 1969, has won for her clients an unprecedented 250 major trophies since she began decorating and designing Rose Parade floats in 1904.

The Tournament of Roses Association honored her in 1974 with a one-time special float trophy category, the Isabella Coleman Award for Color Harmony.

Although her creations are now limited to design sketches, she is still enthusiastic about the parades.

"I like to visit the float construction sites every now and then," she says. "It brings back such happy memories. I always used the prettiest roses, the most beautiful flowers, the best of everything."

Much of Mrs. Coleman's life has centered around the annual New Year's Day parade. She was born in the Pasadena area just two years after the first Tournament of Roses Parade.

She spent a few of her childhood years in tropical Hawaii, developing there a lifelong passion for flowers. Her family moved back to the mainland and settled in Pasadena in time for Mrs. Coleman to witness the 1898 parade, her very first. Since then she has never missed one.

"I am still very interested in the parades, but I usually only see them on television now," says Mrs. Coleman.

Mrs. Coleman was bitten by the float-building bug in 1904 as a student attending Pasadena High School. At that time she merely helped decorate the floats, which were not much more than horse-drawn buggies.

"I rode aboard the entry from the Maryland Hotel in the 1909 parade and that whetted my appetite for more," she recalls.

The following year, her father suggested she enter her own float in the parade. Mrs. Coleman, then 18, decided to give her float a special look that would set it apart from others and won second-prize honors in the carriage division in the process.

"Back then, flowers were simply tied to the carriages and their wheels with string," she says. "I thought it would look better if the flowers were attached in bunches. After all, flowers don't grow in strings, they grow in bunches."

Mrs. Coleman kept entering her designs year after year and kept on winning prizes for them. Her successes led to her first professional contracts. In 1913, the local realty board engaged her to decorate their float. It won first prize in the commercial division.

In 1915, the City of Los Angeles — expecting a man and shocked when they discovered she was a young woman — reluctantly hired her to work on its entry. She covered it with every flower known to grow in California and it won the Sweepstakes Trophy.

In 1925, evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson contracted with Mrs. Coleman to produce a float for Angelus Temple. From then on, her name was synonymous with float construction.

Her name also is known in parade circles for pioneering many of the contemporary techniques that make the Rose Parade an exciting pageant of animation and color.

The technique of using nutrient vials to preserve stemmed flowers is considered to be her invention, as was the process of cocooning, in which floats are framed with chicken wire before a polyvinyl skin is added.

Mrs. Coleman also is generally credited with leading the change from horse-power to automobile engine-power. She was responsible for many innovations in engine design, chassis construction and mechanical animation wizardry.

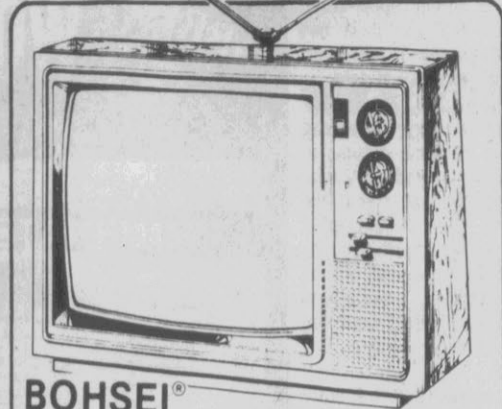

"Animation has always been one of my favorite ingredients in final float products," she says. "I have adorned my creations with smoke generators, bubble machines, moving superstructure characters, acrobatic dancers.

Americans Are Joining In Rush To Buy, Sell Gold

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They sit quietly, a bit nervously, in Jack Brod's reception room, as though waiting for the dentist. He's a good dealer and they've come to sell — bracelets, rings, watches, brooches, cigarette cases, compacts, pens, even teeth. They've raided jewelry boxes and safe deposit vaults because other people, worried that paper money will continue to lose value, are buying gold and running the price up.

"It's all we can do to take care of the customers." Sometimes the crowd overflows into the hallway outside his Empire State Building office.

"People are having to pay capital gains taxes on profits they make selling jewelry," he says. "It's never happened since we started business in 1931."

Whether buyers or sellers, weekend prospectors or big money speculators, Americans have joined the Gold Rush of 1979 with all the fervor of last century's gold stampedes to California and Alaska. They've proved that even with credit cards, checking accounts and a sophisticated, if precarious, international monetary system, the lure of gold is still as strong as it was to the cave dwellers who gathered it 40,000 years ago.

In less than a year, the price of gold more than doubled, soaring at one point this fall to $440 an ounce — and not because a lot of people suddenly decided to have dental work. Inflation and an uncertainty about the economy are the motivation, those who study gold say.

"When things are going well, nobody but an idiot wants gold," says Robert House, a precious metals analyst at Merrill Lynch. "Inflation was going down in 1975. People didn't need to hedge against it."

Since then, as the cost of living rose and the value of the dollar dropped, Americans have learned to look at gold as Europeans, accustomed to wars and other turmoil, always have: the only durable store of value in bad times.

By 1978, Americans were buying up half the 6.1 million south African kruggerands sold worldwide. The kruggerand is a one-ounce gold coin popular among people who want to invest in gold.

"America is taking over as the No. 1 investment market in gold, bar none," says Bill Schweers, marketing research director for the International Gold Corp., which markets South African gold in the United States.

All this puts the buying public against the official U.S. government line: the dollar is no longer backed by gold; gold is just another commodity, like tin.

"You can't demonetize gold, not if the whole world wants it," Sharon says. "Gold is a very objective barometer of confidence. That's why no government can manipulate it over time. Since the International Monetary Fund tried to demonetize it, the price has doubled."

While Americans got into gold in a big way in 1978, buyers in Europe, the Far East and the Middle East have come on strong in 1979, helping to keep the price up. The reason: inflation has picked up in Europe and the Arabs have watched the dollars they receive for oil steadily erode in value.

Nobody knows exactly who buys how much, since big buyers act through agents. But when the U.S. Treasury held a regular auction in August, 720,000 of the 750,000 ounces offered were bought by the Dresner Bank of Germany. There was widespread suspicion that the bank was representing Arab oil interests.

Gold was attractive to ancient peoples because it is shiny and pretty, won't rust or corrode, melts at a relatively low temperature, is malleable. All these qualities still exist but others have grown in importance. Gold is a good reflector of heat and a good conductor of electricity.

Just 0.000006 of an inch on a spacesuit visor is enough to protect the face from the harsh sunlight in space, and a film of gold on building windows on earth acts as an insulator from heat.

It is sought as an investment, however, for other reasons. It is relatively rare and costly to find. It is compact. "You can't put an acre of land in a Swiss bank," Sharon says. It is virtually indestructible, universally recognized, homogeneous and anonymous.

All of which means that the gold that spurred commerce in ancient Sumeria or was buried with pharaohs in Egypt (and almost immediately retrieved by professional grave robbers) may be the same gold going into someone's tooth today.

With the price so high, big mining companies are finding it profitable to reopen old mines. One is even switching to gold mining in an old copper mine. One company says it is now profitable to mine 11 tons of ore just to get an ounce of gold.

And individual prospectors are out in force, splashing around in the same streams in California, Colorado, Alaska and Arizona that were the scenes of 19th century gold strikes. "There certainly has been an increase, and it has been significant," says Ken Phillips, an engineer with the Arizona Mineral Resources Department.

Many amateurs in that state make their first stop at Bob Rose's gold equipment supply house in Phoenix. He sees a lot of greenhorns, who see little gold. "They don't even know what gold looks like," he says. "Usually they bring in iron pyrite (fool's gold) and think it's the real thing."

However, a lone prospector found a 156-ounce nugget in 1977 in the vicinity of Red Mountain of the Mojave Desert (he keeps the exact spot to himself). Since a large nugget is rare and worth about three times the value of the gold content, this hunk is worth about $433,000 with gold selling at $380 an ounce.

Gordon Rutledge came to the gold trading pit at the Commodities Exchange of New York a year ago and spent three months learning to watch the mob of screaming traders and figure out what was going on. He makes regular reports during the day to Merrill Lynch offices around the country.

Exchanges like this are where metals companies protect themselves against sudden price moves and where speculators, often using borrowed money, can gamble on the volatile price of gold. Deals are made orally, that is, by much shouting and waving of the arms.

"It's like a battlefield," Rutledge says. He has seen the price drop $40 in just half an hour.

"In the long term," Sharon says, "the price of gold is extremely rational. It has moved less than one-half of 1 percent over centuries. In the short term, however, it's irrational, because it mirrors greed and fear — irrational things."

people want it.

In the past two years, some long-held attitudes toward gold have changed. From 1933 through 1974, Americans couldn't legally own gold, except for jewelry and collector's coins. It didn't seem to matter, though, since the U.S. dollar was the accepted medium of international trade and was considered "as good as gold."

When gold ownership became legal again in January 1975, everyone expected that Americans would snatch it up. The public response was a big yawn. A U.S. Treasury auction that month attracted buyers for only a third of the two million ounces offered.

"I'm not saying speculators are always right in mass, but collectively they're not always stupid," says Robert House, a precious metals analyst at Merrill Lynch. "Inflation was going down in 1975. People didn't need to hedge against it."

Since then, as the cost of living rose and the value of the dollar dropped, Americans have learned to look at gold as Europeans, accustomed to wars and other turmoil, always have: the only durable store of value in bad times.

Look Beyond The Holidays When Purchasing Toys

By JUDITH SERRIN
 United Press International
 "Don't buy Christmas toys for your children this year — buy February toys."
 If your child still likes and plays with a gift in February, if the toy hasn't broken by then, if you're not still paying for it by then, the gift is a good one.
 Consumer and child experts say the trick of looking beyond the holidays a month or two can keep parents from making some of the common mistakes of toy buying.

"There's nothing to do" is perhaps the most frustrating echo of Christmases past. It can be heard even before February.
 Sometimes this means the toy was only designed to sit there and be watched, not played with.

"A good safe starting point in selecting toys is to ask, 'What can he or she do with it?'" says Florence Kohn, director of the mail order division of a manufacturer who also operates retail stores.

Sometimes the complaint means new toys are already broken. Avoid this by checking for durability. The more parts a toy has, the more likely something will get lost. A dollhouse that has to be put together very carefully, for example, can come apart very easily. A toy that runs on batteries will often need new ones. A doll that can eat will need food.

More often, no toy fits the child's mood at that particular time.

Beth Blossom of the Toy Manufacturers Association urges a balanced toy box, with gifts in four main categories:

- Active physical play — balls, wheel vehicles, sports equipment.
 - Creative, constructive play — blocks, construction, painting and scientific toys.
 - Imitative play — dolls, stuffed toys, trucks, airplanes, costumes.
 - Social play — games, puppets.
- Christmas toys can also be put away after they're unwrapped.

"A child's play with new toys should be staggered throughout the year," says Brian Sutton-Smith, a child development authority. "Rather than overwhelm a child with too many toys, introduce a few new ones ... at various times."

Parents should be aware that toys, like clothes, may not fit a child. Henry Coords, a manufacturing executive, says the most sensitive age distinction is about 1 to 1½ years of age, before and after a child learns to walk. But interests change rapidly later, too.

Toy age labels help, but are general. One toy manufacturer complains that parents like to think their child is brighter than average and therefore buy older toys. One Harvard professor of child development says age labels hopelessly underestimate children's abilities.

The best solution is to carefully consider your child's interests, buy some gifts that fit right now and some that the child can grow into.

Another remedy: buy toys that can be used many ways.

Ms. Kohn is a big fan of blocks for that reason. "Blocks grow with a child," she said. "They can be used with other toys, like cars, trains, and dolls, and schools use them for basic math and social experiences."

Others that span ages are wagons, art supplies — a child can do scribbles or still life — a phonograph, and games of luck, such as Candyland or Sorry.

A gift of anticipation is also good. Depending on the budget, it can be a gift certificate for a fast-food restaurant, a movie theater or a sports event. It can be a reservation for the whole family for a getaway weekend in a local motel or Bermuda. It can be cash for the children to spend themselves.

Another February failure can be heard in "ouch." Check children's toys carefully for safety, keeping in mind both the age of the child the toy is intended for, and the ages of any younger children in the house.

Toy officials say little children should not have playthings with loose parts, small pegs or beads or brittle plastic. Paint must be non-toxic. Beware of thin walls, sharp points, flimsy construction, pinch points and unprotected edges.

Read the warnings on the box. If the label says the toy should only be used with a parent's supervision, consider that the child will try it alone.

One other voice to avoid is "What can we do about these bills?" heard perhaps this year more than others. In making a gift budget for children, remember they are often more concerned with the number of gifts they get than their cost. A stack of coloring books wrapped separately may make a bigger hit than an expensive electronic toy.

Penny-conscious shopping can be a full-time job, but some general rules apply. Any item that has been around since you were a child — Tinker Toys, pull-along dogs, Dr. Seuss books — has established a reputation for value.

A toy that is heavily advertised on television usually has that cost built into its price. Shop around — toy industry sources say the year's big sellers are the ones most likely to be offered as loss leaders by stores.

It sounds like heresy for a toy company official to say so, but Ms. Kohn insists. "The best toys need not come from stores." For example, she says, "Boxes can become blocks, cars, trains and wagons. Freezer cartons can become playhouses. Paper bags become masks ... Scraps of wool and colorful paper are fantastic for collages."

There is no reason parents can't wrap up such items and put them under the tree.

In addition, some items are cheaper if not bought as toys. Dime-store pots and pans can be used for musical instruments or play cooking. Small hardware store hammers and screwdrivers fit children's hands. Calculators with children's designs may be more expensive than adult models, more, and last a shorter time. Toy typewriters may cost more than second-hand adult ones.

Dudley Dudley Real Political Junkie

By ANDREW M. NIBLEY
MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Yes America, there really is a Dudley Dudley.

And although her name repeats itself in a peculiar fashion, over the years her influence has crept through the classrooms of the University of New Hampshire past the oil refinery dreams of Aristotle Onassis and into the spotlight of national politics — a la McCarthy, McGovern, Udall and at long last, Kennedy. "I love it," she says unabashedly.

When Portsmouth attorney Thomas Dudley took a wife, he thought he was marrying a college art major. Now 23 years later, he finds his spouse is a political junkie who champions liberal causes in traditionally conservative New Hampshire.

And as arduous a task as that may seem, for the first time in a long while, Mrs. Dudley appears to have latched onto a potential winner — Sen. Edward Kennedy.

Last January, the 43-year-old member of New Hampshire's Executive Council was sitting around with friends, lamenting what she perceived as the failures of the Carter administration.

"And we started talking about what if ... what if Ted Kennedy were president," Dudley recalled. "And it just started building from there."

What started building was the New Hampshire Democrats for Change — one of the first "draft Kennedy" groups in the nation.

With the New Hampshire primary firmly entrenched as the starting gate in the quadrennial race for the presidential roses, a "draft Kennedy" clan that might have gone largely unnoticed elsewhere became the focus of a national media blitz.

And Dudley — described as a "dazzling blonde" by one national columnist — was there to bask in the glow of journalistic inspection.

She has always had a proclivity for finding her way into the limelight.

When Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis was toying with the idea of putting an oil refinery near her hometown hamlet of Durham, Dudley took on former Gov. Meldrim Thomson and successfully rallied the locals against the Greek, the governor and the project.

When actress-activist Jane Fonda came calling to New Hampshire recently to raise money for anti-nuclear groups, Dudley was caught working behind the scenes to help set up a fundraiser.

But in less than 24 hours, Dudley had turned the tables and denounced Fonda as a callous woman incapable of sympathy for the homeless Vietnamese "boat people."

As her influence and political cunning have grown, so have her aspirations.

"I'm living on the street where I grew up. My parents live across the street. I'm living in the house where my best friend lived. I'm living in the town where I went to school, where my children went to school," Dudley said.

"And it's hard for me. I've always lived in the same place and there's a part of me that says it's time to move on," she added. "It's time to see what else there is around, the rest of the world."

What Dudley is saying, in so many words, is that she has the bug — Potomac Fever.

"Sure, I'd like to go to Washington. Sure, I would," she says.

There are many paths to the national capital and one that appears to catch Dudley's fancy is New Hampshire's 1984 senatorial race.

"I would like to see (conservative Republican Sen. Gordon) Humphrey defeated and that might be something I would do," Dudley said.

But for now, Dudley is committed to doing something for Kennedy that she couldn't do for Eugene McCarthy, George McGovern or Morris Udall — help him win the New Hampshire primary and get elected president.

Now that Kennedy has announced his candidacy for president, Dudley and her New Hampshire Democrats for Change are out of business. But she has been named to the Kennedy for President Committee in New Hampshire.

On the campaign trail recently, Dudley's 19-year-old daughter, Morgan, asked her mother what difference it would make if Kennedy were president.

"I told her I thought Kennedy will make a difference that will be felt in every family in the country," Dudley said.

It's pure idealism — the kind Dudley learned at UNH during the anti-war years and carried with her through three presidential campaigns. And it's the kind of idealism that has made her the second highest elected Democrat in New Hampshire, right behind Gov. Hugh Gallen.

"I don't know if I'm luckier than most or what," she said. "But things always seem to turn out all right for me."

Now, if she can just keep her daughter Morgan from falling in love with a man named Morgan.

Leaves float like sleeping butterflies on dark, still water.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

When Autumn Leaves Have Fallen To Earth

December comes, the fading days of autumn's splendor. Each stir of breeze dislodges countless leaves of gold, bronze, and red, and sends them cascading earthward to rest on forest floors or the surface of dark streams threading the eastern North Carolina landscape.

It is again a time of outdoor wandering through forest areas, alone or with a companionable friend, with no mosquitoes to combat, no lurking snakes to fear.

Vines, heavy or lacy, are revealed in the full intricacy of their interwoven patterns. A new covering of leaves, turning brown, rustle underfoot — and fallen leaves of other years send forth a pleasing fragrance of earth mold.

The flight of birds can be followed as they wing from tree to tree in the forest vault of tall trees silhouetted against the sky.

A leisurely forest stroll is a peaceful interlude, a refreshing renewal away from daily cares and routines.

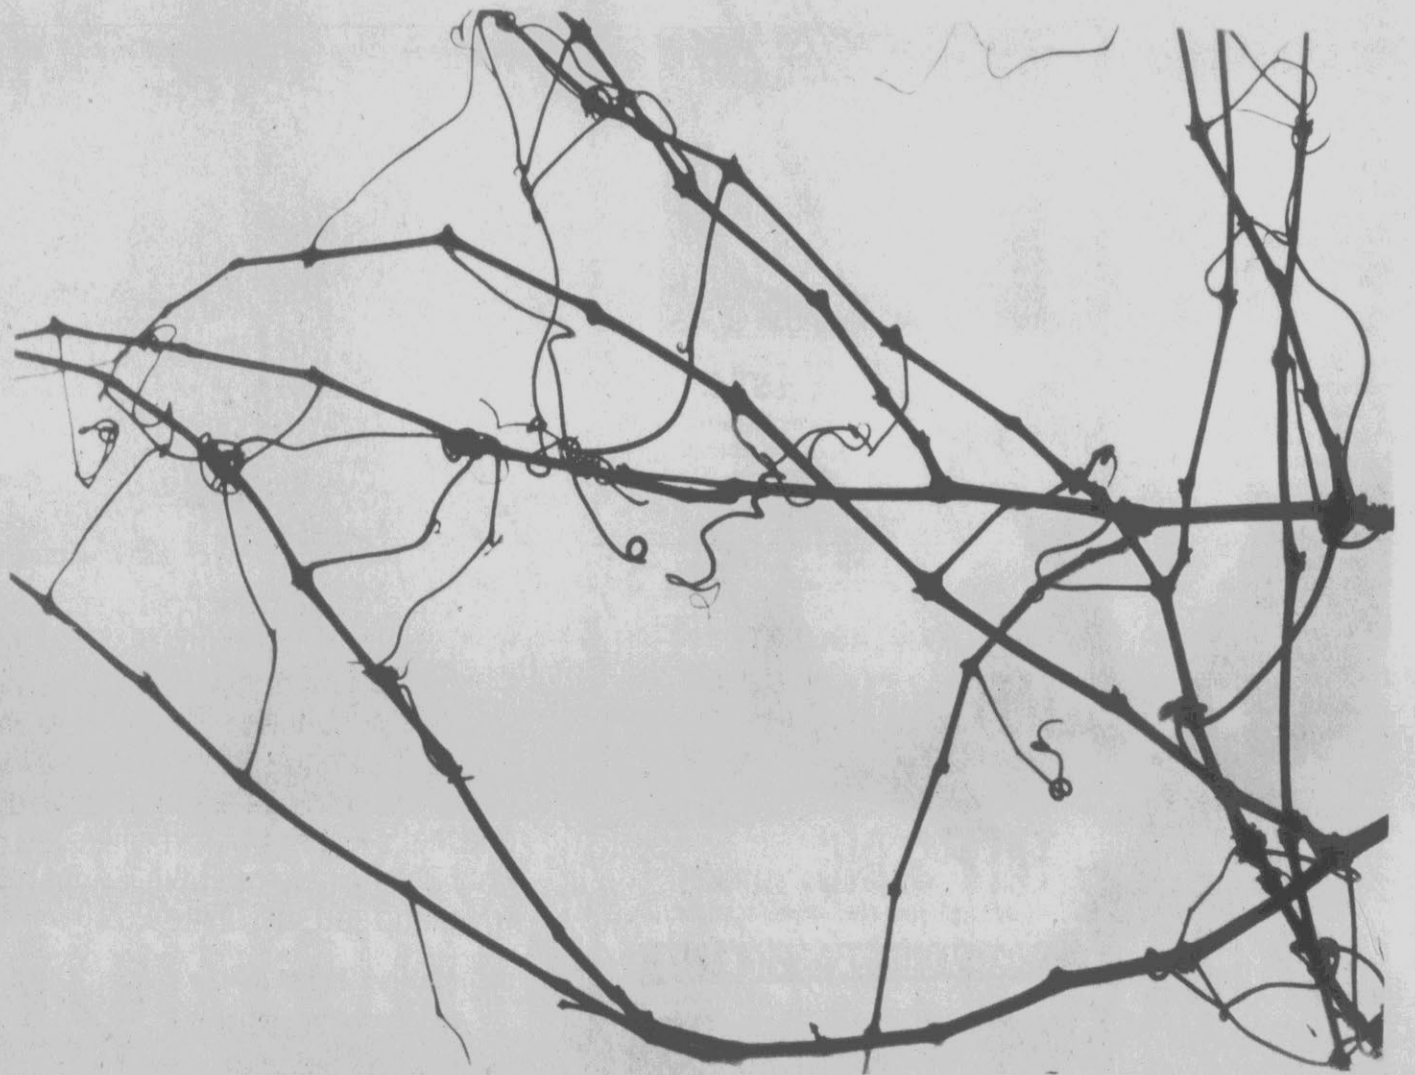

Sturdy rattan vines intertwine, climb into trees.

The scenes on this page were photographed in a cypress forest along a small stream near the village of Bear Grass, in Martin County.

Curiously arched roots of a giant cypress tree.

Void of summer leaves, a grapevine reveals a lacy pattern.

Fred Waring, 79, Still Taking Music On The Road

By SCOTT MACLEOD
HERSHEY, Pa. (UPI) — Fred Waring, as old as the 20th Century, is in chocolate town enjoying two eggs over easy on whole wheat toast, with a bit of peanut butter on the side. That's his breakfast, when he can get it.

This isn't always so simple. At 79, Waring eats in one greasy spoon after another with his "Young Pennsylvanians." They travel 40,000 miles by bus each year, taking familiar tunes to people such as, literally, the little old lady in Dubuque.

"The other day we went to one of those fast-food restaurants and Fred ordered eggs," says his wife, Virginia, who knows very well he could retire to their cottage in Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., and eat Eggs Benedict in bed every morning if he liked.

"Well, we waited and waited. And when they finally came, they were cold. Fred couldn't eat them. But, it's his life."

"A while back he had a heart attack," she recalls, "and doctors said he had to quit, stop going on the road. That was silly. It's like Arthur Fiedler. He couldn't play anymore, and then he was gone. Fred has to be busy."

Audiences are delighted by Waring's enthusiasm — and by the chorus of girls in yellow Sunday school dresses, the clean-cut young men in sequined jackets. They sing their hearts out in tunes like "America the Beautiful."

Waring's road show, to be sure, does more than gush patriotic melody. A program, taped here for national television, even featured a disco beat.

Whatever the program or the stage, Fred Waring is the star. He peers over his mostly over-50 audience like a curmudgeon with a crooked smile. He bedevils them with his corny jokes.

Tree Lights Are Recent

NEW YORK (AP) — The lighting of Christmas trees, first by candles and later by electric bulbs, is a relatively modern embellishment of the pagan custom of decorating the tree, begun by the Romans before the time of Christ.

According to researchers at the National Ornament & Electric Light Association, the use of Christmas trees originated with the Romans and spread to German and Celtic tribesmen as they celebrated the arrival of the winter solstice, which marked the movement of the sun back to northern climates.

Other pagan customs adopted in the 4th century by Christians, in their observance of Christmas, include hanging holly and mistletoe, as well as the burning of Yule logs. Yule, an old name for Christmas which originally meant "winter festival," was celebrated by the pagans with huge log bonfires — a practice which was continued by the people of northern Europe after their conversion to Christianity.

The practice of burning Yule logs continued through the years, and eventually the custom was expanded to include the placement of a coniferous tree within the household. The conifer, or evergreen, tree then became one of the symbols of Christmas — the Christmas tree.

The Christmas tree endured through the years and became the focus of Christmas festivities in homes and public squares throughout Europe and North America. Eventually someone thought of decorating the Christmas tree with candles, and that practice spread worldwide.

It was not until 1882 that the world's first electrically lighted Christmas tree was lit in New York City — in the home of Edward Johnson, an associate of Thomas Edison.

Since that time, the electrically lighted tree has become the focus of Christmas celebrations in homes throughout this nation and numerous others, notes NOEL, an industry group representing manufacturers, importers and distributors of Christmas lights and ornaments.

It estimates that more than 50 million light sets and 500 million ornaments will be sold this year.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?
PARIS (AP) — Police had no trouble arresting a man who robbed a grocer in Paris recently.

The thief's hat fell off during his getaway and inside it was his name and address.

"Don't be frightened, we're here with you," he chides Ralph Isbell, one of the few oldtimers with the troupe, as he gets up to sing a solo. "Don't forget to breathe!"

"We never found a cure for this uncurable ham," he ribs Ray Sax Schroeder, another Vaudevillian with the show.

"We thank you from the bottom of our hearts, er, contracts," he tells the audience at the close.

He joshes even the Waring loyalists, the thousands who attend his shows in civic centers and high school auditoriums across the United States.

"Now we're going to have intermission. I know some of the old folks were counting on it."

Or, to a straggler returning a little tardy from the restroom at intermission: "Inadequate facilities, eh? Where'd they send you, to the Texaco station?"

On stage, the show looks easy. Waring looks tame.

But he has the reputation of a strict disciplinarian. He demands perfection and respect, often to the point that his young singers will do anything for their director.

During rehearsal for the Hershey performance, one of them was having trouble getting out a twist in the lyrics to "Why Do I Love You."

"It's 'How I WOULD love you,'" Waring corrected. "WOULD love. WOULD."

"It's not written that way, sir," said the youth respectfully. "But I'll change it if you like."

Waring, humored, turned away smiling. "No. That's okay. I want it as it's written."

The Life of Fred Waring has been written twice, but never published. A biography by a freelance writer, was "too sloppy," Waring refused to allow its publication.

Waring wrote an autobiography. But it was presumably destroyed when vandals robbed the "Young Pennsylvanians" bus. "Probably threw it in the gutter," Waring says.

The story of his 63-year career would be a fitting memoir of 20th Century entertainment itself.

Waring recorded the first electronic music album, appeared in Hollywood's first talkies, starred in the first musical motion picture, "Syncope," and played the great music halls of America.

Waring associated with the big names of entertainment — Sinatra, Crosby, Carmichael, Berlin and others — and also was a friend and enthusiastic supporter of Ike and Mamie Eisenhower.

And, incidentally, he invented the Waring Blendor and still gets its royalties.

Born in Tyrone, Pa., son of a banker, Waring's first job at age 16 was as a musician. He got paid $3.

Later, with some neighborhood kids including his brother, Tom, he started "Waring's Banjo Orchestra." They played dances and, according to the official history of the "Young Pennsylvanians," rode on milk trains and lived on soda crackers and water.

Things got better. Lots better. With an orchestra and glee club, it was eventually on to Detroit and then Los Angeles for "Waring's Pennsylvanians," which included Poley McClintock, a next-door neighbor from Tyrone, Pa., who is still with the Waring troupe today.

In the late 1940s, Fred Waring became one of the first stars of television, on the General Electric TV show.

The Waring show was taken off television in the 1950s. He has mainly done road shows since, with his multi-state extravaganza tour beginning in 1965.

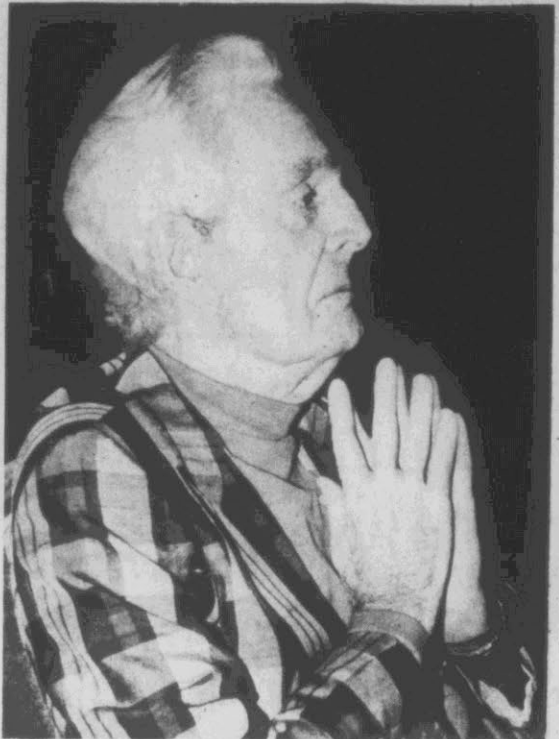

This year, Waring will play in 90 cities in 24 states — places like Pikeville, Ky.; Manhattan, Kan.; Pine Bluff Ark.; and even Punksutawney, Pa.

Performing is only part of Waring's involvement with choral music. He also established a music workshop in East Stroudsburg, Pa.

Once rejected by the Pennsylvania State University glee club, Waring believes music education should be accompanied by on-the-job training.

"This experience is more important than three years of college. How about trying to teach a carpenter to carp without giving him any tools? Schools don't teach how to sing a song. They teach how to sing. Period. So there's absolutely no warmth or personality in the kid's interpretation of the song."

As Waring moves toward his 80th birthday next summer, he's grateful for his followers but somewhat melancholy that his beloved big band music faded out of the American popular music scene.

Strong Views

HERSHEY, Pa. (UPI) — Fred Waring has strong views on many subjects. A few of them:

Television: "A training ground for rowdism. It's become a how-to-for crime, how to misuse our language, how to be rude to one and another, how to murder, how to rape. It could become a good citizen if it lopped off the greed and started contributing to our country."

Rock music: "Good Lord ... it is loud. Unfortunately, it has had a sad influence on human behavior everywhere. The Beatles were first. Had they not looked so unkempt, with their writing of some pretty darn good songs they could have been a wonderfully good influence."

His music: "We still have sell-out audiences. That means plenty of people are hungry for it. Eventually, rock music will hit rock bottom and realize that Porter, Berlin, Rodgers, Carmichael, Whiting and Gershwin who really wrote magnificent songs must be contended with."

Fast Food: "Beyond belief. Sugar could be poison. Frozen vegetables, with preservatives. It's being proven they're not good for you. Why do we accept it, dagonnit? Convenience."

America's small towns: "They're destroying them. Even Tulsa, Oklahoma. They put a mall outside town. And even stores like J.C. Penney's close. Nobody ever goes downtown anymore."

Manners: "I deplore the insolence of kids. I was in an elevator in Sioux Falls and I wanted to get off. Some kids pushed through and I said, 'Do you mind letting me off,' and they said, 'Ride up again, old man.'"

Elected officials: "We have to stop electing people who can't be trusted."

American society: "I am appalled at the indifference and the complacency of people. There's a cultural letdown."

The future: "I think the American will have been bent a little. But I do have faith. I love America."

"He's the big band leader who, along with Paul Whiteman, the original big band leader, has been forgotten," said Waring, speaking about himself.

He is not now on TV because, he said, "Nobody wants us. I think the music alone would be thrilling for listeners. I would like to do a regular concert show. Advertisers want us, but it's the networks that turn us down."

As for his memoirs, he's writing them again. When will it be done? That's anybody's guess because he refuses to retire from the "Young Pennsylvanians."

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Blakelee

Private Garden Adjoins Master Bedroom

By Jerry Bishop

Bedroom, bath, and sitting room join the garden to form a private world for parents in a corner of this expansive home.

Taking in over 2500 sq. ft. of living space, the Blakelee, a one-story traditional, offers well-defined areas for formal and informal living and four large bedrooms, but the plan is clearly dominated by the master bedroom treatment.

The exterior exudes homey charm. Diamond lite windows are used abundantly, even on the garage door, and rich brick siding layers the facade.

Near the entry, a small courtyard is introduced by wrought iron gates, an ornamental touch with the added advantage of enclosing a potential play area for toddlers. Double entry doors open to the foyer, a central point of access to all living areas.

At right, the 24-ft. living room provides plenty of space for formal gatherings of friends, and sliding glass doors admit light and open to the enclosed front porch. The bordering U-shaped kitchen is highly functional and offers access to the basement.

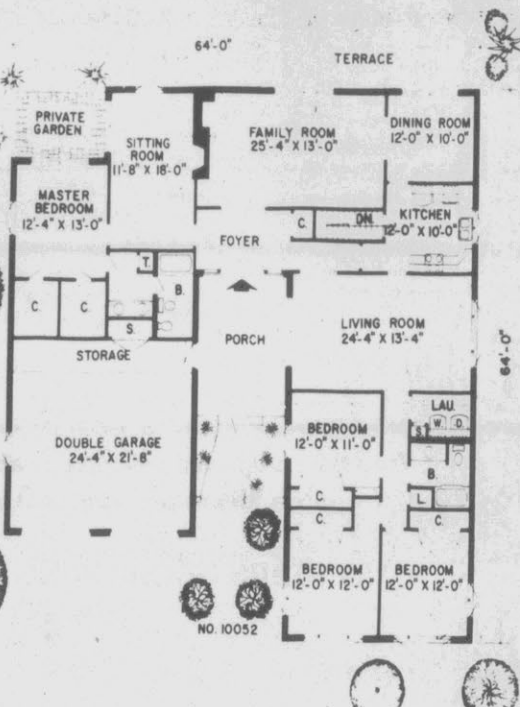

Shifting to the rear of the plan, the foyer leads to a large family room, thoughtfully supplied with wood-burning fireplace. Sliding glass doors link the long terrace with family room and formal dining room.

Set at left of the foyer is the master suite. The bedroom itself is only a small part of the retreat, which features a bath, dressing room, two walk-in closets, and a unique sitting room that extends 18 feet and enjoys a wood-burning fireplace. Sliding glass doors in bedroom and sitting room lead to the enclosed garden, a delightful addition to any master bedroom.

People Are Changing Way They Light Homes

By BARBARA MAYER
 AP Newsfeatures

Technology and theater are combining to change the way we light our homes, according to a number of lighting and decorating experts.

"Consumers are aware that we've gone beyond the table lamp and the ceiling fixture. And they want to get those interesting effects with pools of light and the play of light and shadow. But they don't quite know how to do it without making expensive, architectural changes," said Mary Gilliatt.

Ms. Gilliatt recently co-authored a book on practical methods of achieving the new lighting. She concluded that it's possible to use lamps to create the right effects instead of expensive, custom lighting systems.

"The dimmer and the uplight are the two most important, new discoveries for residential lighting," she said. Both are inexpensive and widely available and produce a big effect for a small outlay.

"For a minimal investment, you can buy or even make an uplight and set it on the floor behind some plants to produce interesting shadows on the wall and ceiling," she said.

An uplight is a simple fixture — a single bulb in a canister — and sits on the floor and throws its light up. A slightly more sophisticated approach is to put the uplight (or any light in the home) on a dimmer switch, which can be bought in a lighting supply outlet for about $10. A dimmer switch makes it possible to regulate the amount of light according to the situation.

Other inexpensive and readily installed lighting fixtures that increase flexibility, include track lights.

"If you don't like the industrial look of track lighting, put it up behind a baffle or a valence. Or put the track in an inconspicuous corner or along the baseboard where it will shine up and bathe a wall in light without being seen," Ms. Gilliatt suggested.

Mini-track lights which go into cabinets or tuck under shelves also are available.

Ms. Gilliatt also suggests investigating the use of low, 12 volt bulbs for inexpensive and dramatic accent lighting inside the home in the book "Lighting Your Home: A Practical Guide."

The low voltage lighting is now used mainly in gardens and requires a transformer when plugged into ordinary household outlets. But it is inexpensive and casts a very attractive, soft light, she said.

The common concern with saving energy is expected to exert a major influence in bringing about the introduction and wider use of energy-saving bulbs and fixtures.

Terry McGowan, a lighting designer with General Electric, predicted at a recent lighting seminar that government regulation and consumer demand will lead to the introduction in about two years of a long-lasting light bulb that combines electronics and energy saving bulb technology known as "high intensity discharge" (HID).

General Electric recently introduced a conversion kit that makes it possible for the consumer to convert fixtures that take incandescent bulbs to fluorescent fixtures. Fluorescent bulbs are more economical to use than incandescent bulbs, since they use only about half as much electricity to produce the same amount of light.

The conversion kit which is beginning to appear in retail electric supply outlets now costs about $15. GE estimates it will take several years for a consumer to pay back the outlay in energy savings.

While technology can produce both energy savings and new ways of lighting, the demand for the new type of lighting in homes is being created as a result of the sophisticated lighting systems which people experience in places such as discos and the theater.

James Nuckolls, a lighting designer in New York, noted that theatrical lighting designers have known for years that lighting controls and directs behavior and emotions.

"Deep shadows are perceived as hostile, threatening; light shadows are friendly, open. And soft shadows are beautiful, serene. By using what we know in theatrical lighting, we can light rooms in which to be comfortable and happy," he said.

For example, if you wanted to light a dining room to the best effect, you would install a dimmer and provide downlights that shine down on the table, not the chairs. Use a warm, pink-toned light that adds sparkle to the silverware and makes the food look good, he said.

The varied and somewhat sophisticated types of aluminum siding now on the market make it difficult to believe that the first aluminum siding panel, introduced in 1947, was a simple, unpainted, untreated lapped style that did not gain much acceptance from builders or consumers.

Improved durability and salability occurred about two years later when a panel with a baked-on Amine Alkyd paint finish was developed.

Within a few years, fading problems arose, leading to the use of such paints as acrylics (the most popular today), poly-esters, polyester melamine, polyester silicones and polyvinyl chlorides.

A retired aluminum executive, Andy Furman, says the mid '50s also saw the introduction of both vertical and insulated sidings, products not as recent as some people think.

"They are simply expanding in their use and appeal," he says, "as people become more aware of decorative applications and the need for conservation."

Colors have changed with the times as well. Shortly after the first white panel was introduced, pastel colors became available. In the past five to six years, the deep earth tones, considered by some to be a fad, were developed.

"While white and neutrals are still our biggest sellers, we see that the darker and earth colors are growing in popularity," says Chris Gussow, a vice president of Hunter Douglas, a Durham, N.C., manufacturer. "It is a fact that people are becoming more home conscious, more aware of design, and less frightened of experimenting with color."

As for insulation, an Aluminum Association executive, Tony Coorlin, estimates that about 50 percent of aluminum siding jobs these days are with insulated aluminum. The most popular insulated siding panels today have a foam, fiberboard, core board or chipboard backing, either glued-on or drop-in (insulated panels can be added as the siding is installed).

One of the most recent insulated siding innovations is an aluminum panel with a sprayed-on polyurethane foam. The product has been tested for an R value of R-3.01 (R value measures a material's resistance to heat or cold).

In our design conscious society, the finishing touches on a home are as important as the siding. These can be achieved with decorative trim and accessories such as gutters, fascia (a cap that covers the board behind the gutter), and soffit (installed beneath overhangs such as a roof), available in coordinated colors.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Q — A few months ago, the mortise lock on our bedroom door began to act balky. I squirted some household oil into both sides of the keyhole. It has worked all right since then, but is beginning to show signs of not working again. Shouldn't the oil treatment have lasted longer than this? Or is there something better to use than oil?

A. — Try blowing some powdered graphite or similar product into the keyhole. Oil sometimes restores a lock to working order but later will cause it to clog again. If your new action does not work, you will have to remove the lock from the door and soak it in paint thinner or mineral spirits for a few hours. Wait until it is thoroughly dry, then use the graphite. Of course, none of this will work if the lock has a mechanical defect.

Q — You recently wrote about water-resistant adhesives, providing me with some facts I never knew before. Now I would like you to help me with the "wind resistant" label when it applies to asphalt roof shingles. How wind resistant are they actually?

A. — Underwriters Laboratories tests shingle performance against high winds. To qualify for the UL "wind resistant" label, shingles must withstand test winds of at least 60 mph continuously for two hours without a single tab lifting. Self-sealing asphalt shingles that bear the UL "wind resistant" label are manufactured with a factory-applied adhesive. After the shingles have been applied to the roof, the sun activates the pre-applied thermoplastic sealant, bonding each shingle to the one below. Although self-sealers were originally developed especially for high-wind areas, they are standard in most parts of the country today. They zoomed into popularity after they demonstrated their effectiveness during Hurricane Camille, which hit the Gulf Coast in 1969 and was the worst hurricane ever recorded in the United States until that time.

Q — I have to put down some resilient floor tiles soon. I know how to find the center of a room with chalk lines, but I don't know how to determine whether the lines are at an exact right angle. I read somewhere about a sure method of finding this out. Can you help me?

A. — After you have put down the chalk lines, start from the point where the lines meet. Measure exactly 4 feet along one line toward a side wall and make a mark. Again starting from the center, measure 4 feet along the line towards the opposite side wall. Make a second mark. Once more, starting from the center, measure 3 feet toward one of the end walls. Using a long ruler or tape, lay it between the first mark and the third mark. The distance should be exactly 5 feet. So should the distance between the second mark and the third mark. If those two measurements are not 3 feet each, you have made a mistake and should find out what it is before you go ahead. By the way, if this method sounds tedious, it isn't. The whole thing takes only a minute or two.

Q. What will get rid of wiregrass permanently?

A. Nothing, unless you are willing to apply a long-term soil sterilizer. The herbicide Roundup will kill wiregrass (Bermudagrass), but the area can be invaded again by seed or runners. Roundup will kill other plants, too, so follow label directions carefully. (Carl Blake, extension agronomist)

Q. What will cause the leaves of an acuba plant to have a blackened appearance, brown spots and holes? (W.D., Southern Pines)

A. Too much sunlight. An acuba plant (acuba japonica) enjoys a shaded environment. Full shade is best. When grown in direct sunlight the leaves will become "sunburned", causing the blackened appearance. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. My ferns and foliage plants are covered with small brown bumps. The plants have also become sticky and dark. What is the problem? (C.C., Fletcher)

A. Hemispherical scale insects, which infest ornamental plants, especially ferns. To control these insects on foliage plants spray with malathion at the rate of two teaspoons per gallon of water. Spray thoroughly and repeat the treatment in 10 days and again in 20 days. Malathion can injure ferns. Therefore, use less malathion — only one teaspoon per gallon — when spraying ferns for hemispherical scale. Add a plant shine or summer oil at the rate of two tablespoons per gallon to the mixture used for spraying ferns. Keep treated plants out of sunlight until they are dry. (J.R. Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. When should apple trees be pruned? (C.B., Buis Creek)

A. Depends on their age. Prune all apple trees after they have become dormant. Old trees will heal faster than young trees, therefore, prune them first. Begin pruning old trees — 25 years and over — after Dec. 15. Start pruning trees that are 10 to 25 years old after Jan. 1. Wait until mid-February or early March to prune young bearing trees or trees that are from 5 to 10 years old. Wait until bud swell before pruning newly-set trees or those under five years old. The above recommendations are for the Piedmont. Dates will need to be adjusted for the Coastal Plain and Mountains. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

When buying a condominium unit, request any and all available informational material. You should have copies of not only the basic documents but anything else that would enhance making a full disclosure of the sales terms. Do not sign a sales contract until receiving a copy of the Declaration, Bylaws, or at least have the contract subject to your approval of the documents. Sales contracts or Subscription Agreements normally contain a clause which states over your signature, that you have received the organizational documents. Also, ask about settlement costs, a budget and a master hazard insurance policy. Finally, do not make a downpayment until you're sure of your mortgage loan and the purchase agreement states that the downpayment will be refunded if mortgage credit is not available to you.

It saves maintenance.

Wood rots, burns, splits and warps. And it needs repainting or staining about every 2 years. That means wood continues to cost you money. Forevers. Sanford brick doesn't.

And energy.

Wood siding is a very poor insulator. Brick is a good insulator. That's why, when you build with Sanford brick, you not only save substantially on the cost of fuel and electricity but you can also temperature control your home with a smaller heating and cooling unit. And, if you build with insulated brick cavity walls, you can reduce your heating bill by 28% and your cooling bill up to 9%.

And pest damage.

Wood invites termites, pine borers, woodpeckers, carpenter ants, etc. Sanford brick is pest-proof. A lot of wood home owners wish they had thought of that.

Here's the beauty part.

Sanford Handcraft brick styles give you all the savings plus a truly beautiful home. They come in a wide range of colors and textures that recreate the mellow warmth and dignity of old landmarks. You'll find one just right for your building project.

And the final payoff.

Brick homes always maintain a higher resale value than wood homes of comparable size. And their values appreciate faster.

If you're thinking of building with wood siding, you should get all the facts first. For more information, call or write your nearest brick expert.

Toastmasters Provide Challenge And Opportunity

By REBECCA BUFFALO
Reflector Staff Writer

As Table Topic Master Ed Morris stepped up to the podium, each person present at the Greenville Toastmasters Club seemed to be collecting his or her thoughts, getting ready for one of the highlights of the meeting—Table Topics.

"We all have our views on capital punishment here in the United States," said Morris. "I'm going to ask our new member, Bill Dawson, to give us his thoughts on the subject."

Though Bill Dawson had attended only four Toastmaster meetings in his life, he stood up and gave a clear, cohesive talk on capital punishment, all within a two minute framework.

After the meeting, several of the members admitted that Table Topics are the hardest part of Toastmasters, where a person is committed to giving a two-minute speech on any subject selected by the Table Topic Master.

However, all agreed that the impromptu speeches are just one more way that Toastmasters, now celebrating its 75th anniversary in nations across the world, trains and prepares its members to use oral communication to its greatest advantage.

TOASTMASTERS' ROLE

Toastmasters International is a non-profit, non-partisan educational organization designed to develop skill in listening, thinking, speaking and leadership. It is not, as many people assume from the name, a group of people toasting each other with a round of drinks.

Greenville Chapter No. 2595 of Toastmasters has been in operation for over five years, with many of its charter members still active in the group. According to Charlotte Flanagan, outgoing administrative vice president, the group is composed of businesspeople, educators—just anyone who is interested in learning the art of communication.

"It's done so much for my self-confidence," said Mrs. Flanagan, a local realtor. "I'd used to be in a group and have an opinion, but was always afraid to voice it."

Mrs. Flanagan pointed out that Toastmasters International founder Ralph Smedley formed the group because of his belief that communication is the most basic and important skill for everyone.

"Even if a person never expects to give a speech, he or she will still benefit from Toastmasters," she said. "They'll be able to speak their thoughts in a clear and concise manner."

Charlotte's husband, Pat, also an active Toastmaster, agrees.

"I went to school to be a chemist, and I never thought I'd have to speak in front of people," said Flanagan, a chemist with the Kinston Dupont facility. "When I went for my Ph.D. orals, I got so tongue-tied, I couldn't speak."

"Being in Toastmasters has really helped," he continued. "When my boss comes up to ask me something, I need to be able to go through the different things filed in my mind, and be able to reply in a coherent manner."

Veteran Toastmaster Mary Murrell, a first grade teacher at Wahl-Coates School, looks forward to every Toastmaster meeting, held each second and fourth Wednesday at the Western Steer Restaurant.

"It's so good to be among my fellow Toastmasters developing my speaking skills," she noted. "After working with children all day, it's refreshing to speak on a varied topics of subjects. My only problem is, I don't have enough time as I'd like to keep up with current readings along with my schoolwork."

As Joe Sherwood, another charter member of the Greenville Chapter said, "The Toastmaster program allows you to talk with your peers."

EVERYTHING IS TIMED

A regular Toastmasters meeting in Greenville begins with dinner at 6:30 p.m., with the regular business session at 7:30 p.m. Each meeting, a member serves as Toastmaster of the evening. The Toastmaster introduces each speaker, and generally conducts the educational sessions.

The business session is comprised of the reading of the minutes, and taking care of old and new business, all headed by present president Pat Flanagan.

The educational portion of the program is given to the Table Topics, followed by a vote on the best table topic speaker. After a five minute break, the Toastmasters have a chance to give prepared speeches. The speakers each have an individual evaluator.

Following the evaluations of the individual speakers, the Toastmaster members award trophies to the best Table Topic speaker, best individual speaker, and the best evaluator.

Speeches are given as prescribed in the Toastmasters International manuals. Each speech focuses on one aspect of speechmaking, such as giving detailed speech or the use of gestures in a talk. The speeches may range from five to seven minutes, and must be completed in that time frame in order to advance to the next level.

When a Toastmaster completes the first manual, he becomes a "Competent Toastmaster." A Toastmaster must then complete three out of five manuals to acquire the "Able Toastmaster" status.

The highest level a Toastmaster may achieve is that of "Distinguished Toastmaster." Part of its requirements is the setting up of a speechcraft, a mini-speech course for non-Toastmasters. The speechcraft serves as a community service, and also helps to bring more persons in the Toastmaster organization.

Probably one of the most unique aspects of the Toastmaster meeting is the report from the grammarian. The grammarian is responsible for listening for the correct use of grammar, and the counting of "ahs."

Each "Ah" costs a member a nickel. As Joe Sherwood, Toastmaster of the evening ruefully put it, "It's nice to be Toastmaster of the evening, but it sure is expensive," as he doled out 50 cents to grammarian Betty Topper.

All the Toastmasters agree that the "ah" idea is a good one, but takes away from their television viewing pleasure.

"It's terrible, the other night I heard a commentator on television, and every third sound he made was 'ah,'" said member Luis Acevez.

PERFECTING HIS ART — Toastmaster Paul Topper gives his seventh speech, "Buying Stocks— Is It A Good Investment or a Gamble?" at a recent meeting of the Greenville Toastmasters Club. The international organization is celebrating its 75th anniversary, still striving to aid interested persons perfect the art of communication. (Reflector Staff Photo by Rebecca Buffalo)

"IT'S A UNIQUE SITUATION"

Charlotte Flanagan noted that Toastmasters is well worth the time, and offered this evaluation:

"I was so frightened when I joined the club," she said. "I was so afraid that people would tell me I was wrong. But the criticism we give is fair, loving and constructive. It's just a situation of mutual friendliness."

Charlotte has served as president of the local chapter, and governor of Area Eight, which includes the Greenville, Washington, New Bern and Outer Banks clubs. This year she serves as northeast district lieutenant governor.

One problem for the Greenville chapter is that many of its members are ambitious, and soon get promoted out of the area. Also, some people stop coming to Toastmasters after achieving a certain goal. Many of the Toastmasters disagree with quitting after reaching a personal goal.

"I know I've got a long way to go," said Mrs. Flanagan. "Speaking is the kind of skill that if you don't use it, you'll lose it."

That philosophy has kept charter members such as Joe

Sherwood, Chris Hay and Mary Murrell coming back for more than five years every second and fourth Wednesday for dinner with friends, and the sharing of the art of communication. As Charlotte Flanagan said, "It's a unique situation in that we all have a purely selfish motive for being here, but we all give to each other."

Former Editor Hunting Laughs

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — One-liners, a goatee, wire-rimmed glasses and a battered felt hat are the tools of Jack Taylor's trade.

They are what Taylor, a traveling humorist, uses to shift into his act as Timothy Hays, mayor of Whoop.

"I don't have a message. I leave that to the motivators, the more serious speakers," Taylor said in an interview. "If I can just make them laugh, I think there's value to that."

The 75-year-old former newspaper editor and University of Missouri alumni magazine editor retired in 1970. He said he had moonlighted on the rumor circuit during most of his 21 years of employment at the university.

To prepare, he dons his goatee, the glasses and hat and launches into his routine — rapid-fire gags in a grassroots, country style.

Here are a few, offered during a recent appearance before a Chattanooga civic club:

Money isn't everything — but it does keep you in touch with your children.

"My wife dresses fit to kill — and she cooks the same way.

"It's tough when you reach your September years and realize you blew July and August."

Taylor, who lives in Columbia, Mo., said he now averaged 100 appearances a year. He says his lines, for the most part, aren't original.

"Not hardly any of them," he said in telephone interview. "You just steal 'em where you can get 'em."

He slipped into doing humor by accident, back in 1947.

He had put aside a journalism career, which included employment by The Associated Press and two newspapers — the Sedalia (Mo.) Capital and Canton (Ill.) Daily Ledger — and became involved in making highway-safety movies showed by the Missouri Highway Patrol. In the movies, he used the name "Timothy Hays."

He was also editing farm publications and, invited to participate in entertainment at several farm-club programs, dubbed himself Timothy Hays, mayor of Whoop, adopting the name of a small town near Columbia, Mo.

Taylor, originally from Hartman, Ark., said he had averaged about 40 appearances a year moonlighting, while employed by the university.

He said his jokes involved middle age "and then some," marriage "and other perils."

Taylor said, "It's corny, but I get a kick out of it."

Argentina Beef Exports Rise

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina's beef exports rose 72 percent in the first half of 1979, totaling $484 million during the period.

Overall meat shipments — including beef, mutton, pork and extracts — produced nearly $600 million in export sales in the first six months.

The largest markets for the beef were the United States, Great Britain and West Germany — accounting for 52 percent of exports.

Louisiana Knows "We Wuz Robbed" Complaint

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "We Wuz Robbed," has become a familiar outcry after a Louisiana election and there are times in this state when that glum bleat is all too true.

Two congressional races in the past four years were found to have been decided by false votes or by votes bought for $5 each. A federal investigation of the bought votes is still going on.

The governor's race in the first all-party open primary election last Oct. 27 wound up a bitter mess which still is having political reverberations.

Last Tuesday the state Supreme Court ordered a new election in a close parish race where the voting machines mysteriously registered more votes than were actually cast.

These cases count only the times when losers, having spent big bucks on campaigns, were so upset they carried their gripe to court. It leaves people wondering how many others there might be.

In the past month, charges of vote fraud popped up like dandelions on a spring lawn. It kept state Attorney General William Guste's relatively small criminal division hopping.

"I don't recall anything like this ever before," said a harassed Assistant Attorney General Walter Smith of Baton Rouge, heading the vote fraud effort. "We don't have enough people to go around. I have five assistant AGs and eight investigators for the whole state."

"We've got a gang of complaints in," he added. "I don't know how many right now. They've stacked up on us. Some have substance, some are just bull."

The attorney general has authority to investigate reports of vote fraud but prosecution would be up to the district attorney — unless he asked the AG to handle it.

So the end is not in sight. But election reform became a popular campaign issue in the election before the voters Saturday.

The situation prompted Rep. David Treen, R-La., a candidate for governor, to announce an all-out drive to watch over every polling place Saturday to keep the election from being "stolen."

Treen said his poll watchers would be equipped with cameras, would test vote every one of the state's 6,400 voting machines to make sure they had not been illegally jiggered, watch while the machine is cleared, closed and sealed, then check the seal and log other data after polls closed Saturday night.

In addition, Republican task forces of lawyers were set up at strategic locations to rush to any trouble point with a display of legal muscle.

Aside from the obvious questions of morality and threat to democracy, one can well understand the anguish of a candidate who thinks he was gulled in an election in which the campaign investment may have run into millions.

Final financial statements are yet to come, but Louisiana's race for governor, which has been going on for a year, cost an estimated $20 million in total campaign expenses.

Originally, there were nine candidates. Seven were eliminated on Oct. 27 in the all-party open primary election, leaving two for the Dec. 8 runoff.

The primary election wound up in court, with Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris contending it was stolen from him, but the suit was dismissed for lack of evidence. Fitzmorris said it was impossible to marshal such evidence within the five days allowed for a challenge.

In Louisiana's two tainted congressional elections, Richard Tony of Chalmette, a New Orleans suburb, won in 1976 but wound up spending just four months in Congress and six months in prison.

Rep. Claude Leach, D-La., still holds his seat, having won a jury acquittal on charges of buying 400 votes in his hometown of Leesville at $5 each. Leach edged Republican Jimmy Wilson of Vivian by a mere 266 votes — 65,583 to 65,317. More than 20 Leesville citizens already have been convicted or pleaded guilty to vote-buying charges. Federal prosecutors are proceeding with additional vote-buying charges against Leach and seven others including a U.S. magistrate, a state judge, a district attorney and a polling commissioner. About those bought votes: Leach testified he never bought one in his life; he thought the money he put up was to pay for having voters hauled to the polls — not illegal.

Tony resigned from Congress on May 4, 1977, to avoid being ousted because his election was won by false votes rung up on the voting machines by his supporters. Resignation didn't end Tony's troubles. He became the first person ever convicted under new federal campaign laws, pleading guilty to violating the ban against promising jobs to campaign contributors, and accepting contributions exceeding $1,000 per individual.

Vote buying, in Gov. Edwin Edwards' view, is likely to be more common in small local races, where a few votes are certain to make a big difference, than in congressional or statewide races.

Like in the St. Landry Parish county school board election of Feb. 21, 1976. Four men pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court Wednesday to bribery of voters.

They admitted buying 120 black votes at $5 each. Bobby Dupre, a white candidate in a predominantly black ward, won. The federal investigation started when the black candidate wrote the Department of Justice charging that the election was bought.

Dupre resigned last week. He and the others were each put on six months probation. A new election in the ward will be held.

Call Right Now If You Want More Information
On Any Of The Following Listings-We'll Be Glad To Talk With You.

$13,300 — LAKE ELLSWORTH. 105x148 wooded lot and ready for construction.

$30,000 — SR 1725. 10.23 acres-possible trailer park, home site, or small farm, community water.

$35,900 — SHERWOOD GREENS. A real "WIFE SAVER"-this cute new listing will please both of you with its practical 3-bedroom floorplan, combined dining and kitchen, large living room, plus a new deck off the kitchen. It's been kept in great shape and owners hate to sell it, but they gotta. Move quick-it won't be on the market long!

$38,500 — COLONIAL HEIGHTS. It's an assumable Va loan at 5¼%! The house itself can boast of low utilities, and 3 comfortable bedrooms plus 1½ baths. Or convert one of the bedrooms into a den or dining room-it's right off your kitchen. Covered patio plus outside storage and a pen for your pooch!

$39,900 — AYDEN. With utilities growing higher and higher, this house COULD be the PERFECT BUY for YOU! 2 fireplaces! Both living room and family room are equipped with fireplaces and you can laugh at Old Man Winter this year. With 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, utility area, ample closet space, plus all drapes and carpets, too. Call Alice Moore and see it today.

$43,900 — GRIFTON. Unusual lot, unusual house! It needs an unusually appreciative family who enjoy all the USUAL pleasures such as 3 bedrooms, gigantic living-dining room, a great kitchen with scads of cabinets, large utility room with half bath, large upstairs bath, plus outside porch on rear of house. Brand-new driveway and parking ramp, plus storage building. Owners say sell it NOW. Call Louise Hodge, Realtor.

$45,000 — COMMERCIAL LOT. Commerce and Clifton Streets. 150x160 feet in size, zoned O/I.

$45,000 — COMMERCIAL LOT. Commerce Street. 150x160 feet, zoned O/I.

$49,900 — SHERWOOD ACRES. Need 3 garages? This home also has 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, two fireplaces (one in living room, one in den), neat kitchen, utility space, and a pretty and nicely landscaped yard.

$49,900 — NEW LISTING-WESTWOOD. VA loan-8½%. If you think that's great, then wait 'til you see the house! It's spotless! (They keep Spot in the garage.) Entry foyer with coat closet, living room with a bow window plus fireplace. And the kitchen-there's a hint of Dutch lifestyle in the Delft-tile vinyl and blue and white gingham checked wallpaper. There's also room for a formal dining suite AND a breakfast set in the kitchen, too, so you know there's a great spot for your family. The utility room opens into the Master bath which is also compartmented for privacy and there are 2 large closets for Mr. and Mrs. to enjoy, 3 bedrooms in all, 2 baths, smoke detector for safety, plus heat pump for utility efficiency. And the yard is HUGE-there's a garden space, too, and golf-course type lawn for easy maintenance.

$56,500 — RED BANKS ROAD. Owner says sell-but if it doesn't sell, soon, RENT IT WITH THE OPTION TO BUY WHEN RATES GO DOWN! Now if that isn't a good deal, then we don't know one when we see it! This house is just too cute to pass up...3 bedrooms, family room with fireplace, large kitchen with dinette space, formal living and dining rooms, plus entry hall. Single carport and nicely landscaped yard. Possible loan assumption, too.

$59,000 — BRENTWOOD. Does your putterer sputter because he doesn't have a workshop? 'Got just the home for you! Small basement workshop for your handyman; 3 bedrooms, a couple of baths, formal living and dining rooms, den with fireplace. Single garage, too, plus a pretty yard to enjoy this summer.

$62,500 — LAKE ELLSWORTH. If you're presently living in a TEAPOT, don't SPOUT. Don't SIMMER. See this lovely 4-bedroom home. POUR yourselves into the family car and allow us to show you all the great features such as 2 split baths, family room with fireplace and built in cabinetry plus desk, as pretty a kitchen as you could want-with dining space and utility area; formal living and dining rooms. You'll BREW UP a lot of happiness in this great buy.

$66,500 — BELVEDERE. If you like country-style farmhouses, but want city living, then combine the 2 with this pretty 4-bedroom house we just listed! Gathering Room with fireplace and built-ins, sunken dining room, country kitchen, and utility room big enough to hold 2 upright freezers. 2 baths, and ample storage plus closets throughout. Decorated in earth colors that you can enjoy living with for years.

$69,900 — So you want a home in the country...so you want acreage. How does a two-acre tract sound? How does over 1,900 square feet in a pretty custom-built brick veneer ranch-style home sound? How do 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, entry foyer, formal living and dining rooms, family room with fireplace, large kitchen, large closets, utility space sound? If you like what you read, you'll love this home when you see it. Owner really needs to sell. Let your family be the lucky family who will own this pretty home.

$77,500 — AYDEN. This lovely French Provincial-styled home is located on a pretty pine-studded lot and is eagerly awaiting its new owners. What lucky people! They'll enjoy 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, beamed-ceilinged family room with fireplace, formal rooms, entry foyer, a double garage.

$83,500 — CLUB PINES. Appearances can be deceiving-this listing really has 4 bedrooms! Great room with fireplace, dining room, breakfast nook, large and well planned kitchen, utility room, 2½ baths, cathedral-ceilinged entrance foyer with a stunningly handsome light fixture, plus a double enclosed garage. Deck on rear to view the lovely wooded lot, too.

$85,000 — TRACT OF LAND, 40.81 acres, wooded. Zoned IU.

$86,500 — COUNTRY CLUB DRIVE. Over 2,600 square feet of comfortable living await the family who makes this pretty home their new residence. With 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, entry hall, formal dining and living room, separate breakfast room, eat-in kitchen, den, fireplace, utility space, you can enjoy a great lifestyle. See it today.

$92,000 — OAKHURST. Under Construction. On one of the prettiest lots anywhere around will be one of the prettiest "Farmhouse"-style homes built in a long time. There will be 3 bedrooms plus a study and 2 baths with washer and dryer upstairs; entry hall, dining, living room, and brick-floored kitchen downstairs-plus a wrap-around porch. See its floorplan now in our office.

Two Windy Ridge Townhouses

$53,000 — WINDY RIDGE. With 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, great room with fireplace, dinette space, handy kitchen with pantry, this could easily be your next home! There's more but we'd rather show you. So call now for appointment.

$54,900 — WINDY RIDGE. Great room with fireplace, 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths, dining room, kitchen, extra parking area, privacy fence around patio. Great for the family who enjoys a busy life with little time to devote to house maintenance.

$94,500 — BROOK VALLEY. The nostalgia of yesteryear surrounds this traditional home but its floorplan is strictly upbeat and for today's needs! 4 bedrooms, 3 baths, Mexican-tile entry foyer floor, formal living-dining room, breakfast nook in kitchen; plus utility area and a double garage. For summer enjoyment, there's a screened-in back porch with a built-in barbecue grill. Extra-Large family room with fireplace and built-in wall, too. Great home for your family.

$99,500 — CLUB PINES. Distinguished Williamsburg exterior, with 4 bedrooms, 3½ baths, family room with river-rock fireplace, Ariane Clark kitchen; custom interior decoration. 2 heat pumps, large garage. It's just about ready for your family, so make your decision to buy this home now. Next week might be too late for there's an assumable builder's loan on this home.

$108,000 — BROOK VALLEY. On a high hill, surrounded by hollies, hickories, pines, oaks, and dogwoods, you'll find this handsome 2-story home. It offers the discriminating family who will soon own it 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths, family room with fireplace, slate-floored entry foyer, formal living and dining rooms, beautiful kitchen with dining space plus pantry and extra storage, and a playroom that will be a delight to your children. On a quiet street, too, so your children can play without fear of traffic.

$111,500 — CLUB PINES. Southern Colonial 4 bedroom home, with 2½ baths, entry foyer, formal living and dining rooms, family room with fireplace, custom interior decoration, kitchen by Ariane Clark, 3-piece crown moulding throughout. Some lucky family will have a home they can be proud of when they buy this lovely home.

Musical Special 'Jack Frost' Airs

"Jack Frost," the newest Rankin/Bass 'Animagic' holiday musical special, will be presented on NBC-TV Thursday, Dec. 13 (8 to 9 p.m.). Comedian Buddy Hackett, speaking as the world's most famous groundhog, Pardon-Me-Pete, sings and tells the story.

Other personalities participating in the show are Robert Morse, Paul Frees, Larry Storch, Dave Garroway and Debra Clinger.

Morse is Frost, the somewhat naive, eternally youthful sprite who carries the work of Father Winter to people and animals. Frees brings to life the character Kubla Kraus, the Kossack King, an outrageous giant. He's also a comic despot who's too dumb to know just how bad he really is. Storch is Dommy, Kubla Kraus' best friend and confidante who always says what Kraus likes to hear — because Kraus does the talking for Dommy.

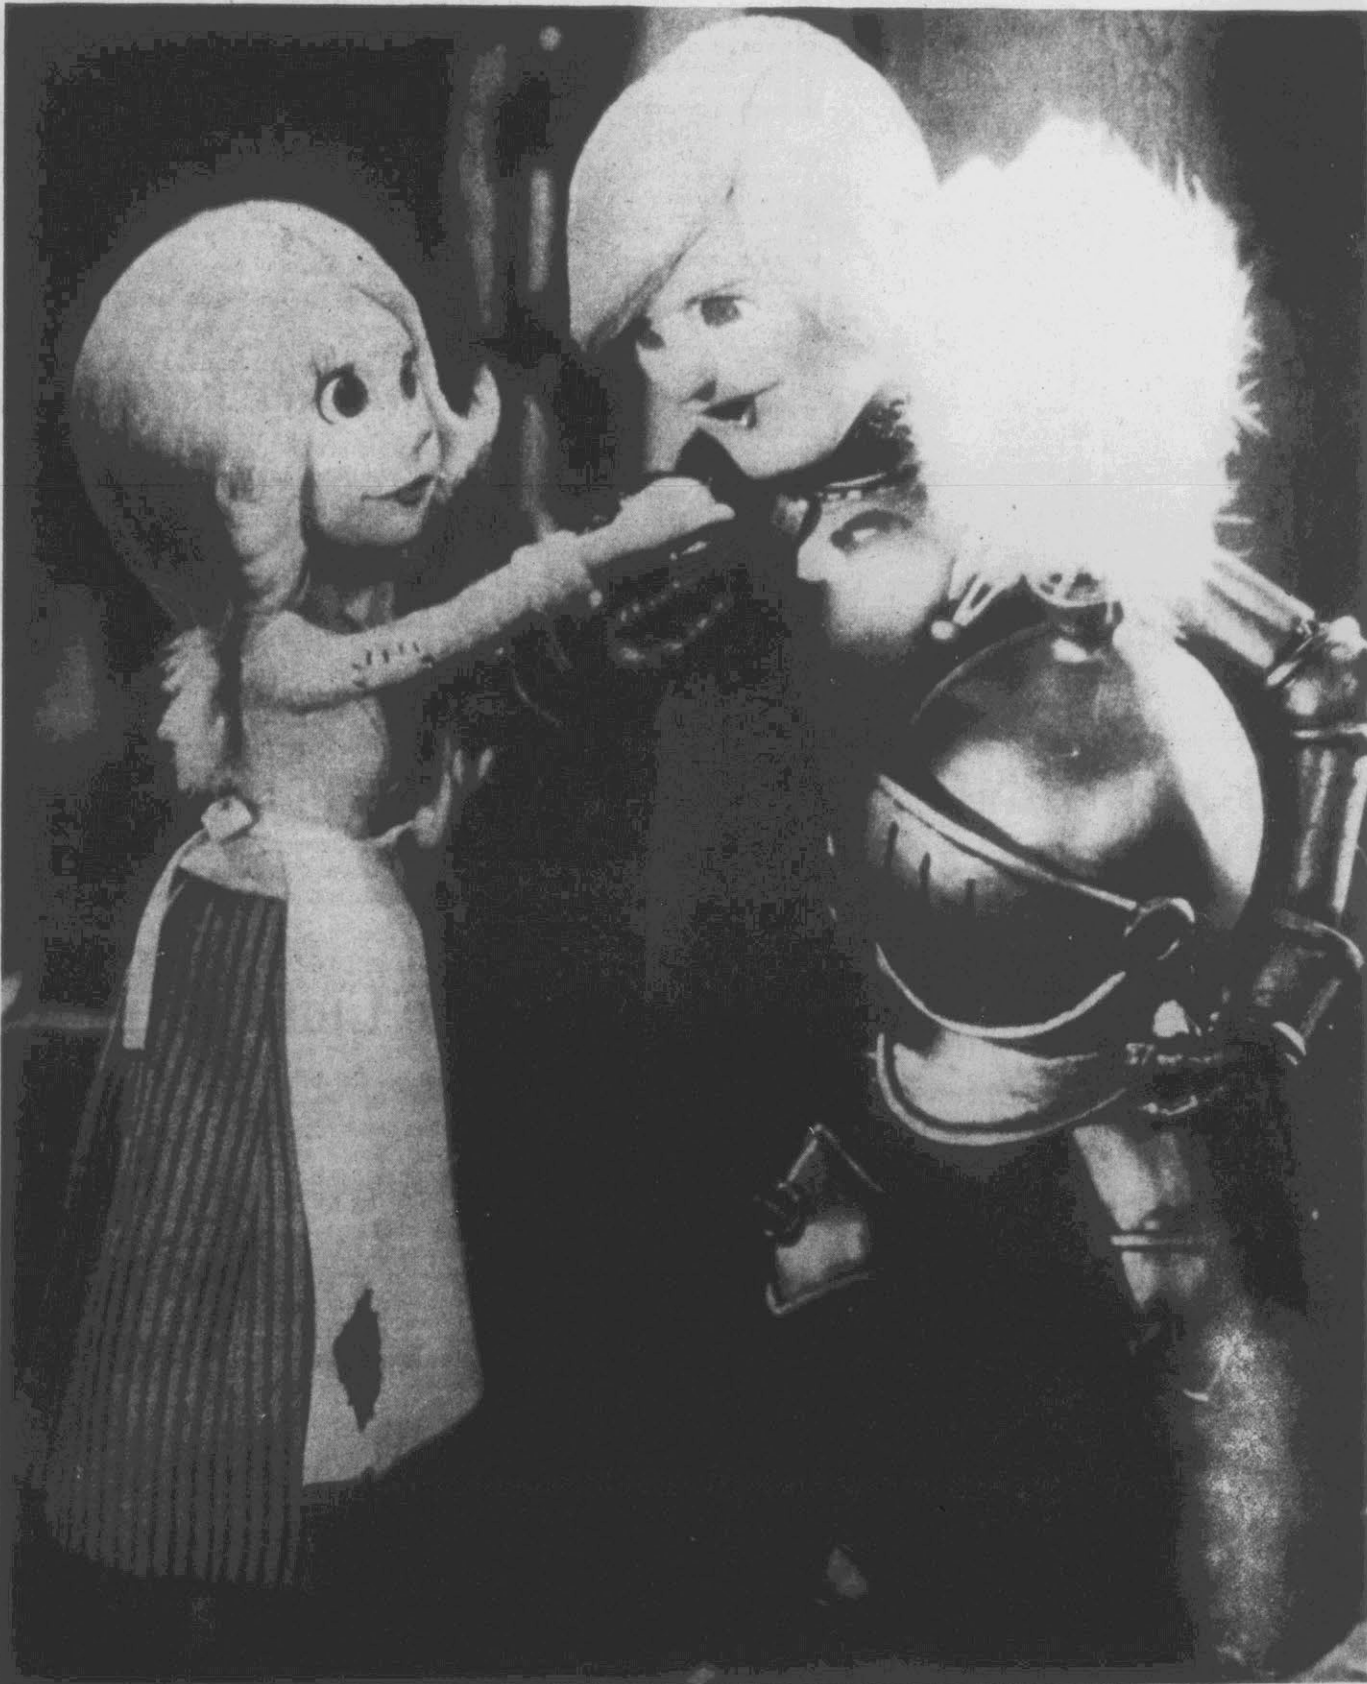

Garroway is a newscaster who opens the special and introduces Pardon-Me-Pete. Clinger provides the voice of Elisa, a lovely, romantic 18-year-old described as having "golden hair and a laugh like music."

The story begins when Pardon-Me-Pete tells about the deal he has with Jack Frost: "Every year, I pop out, see the shadow and pop back in again. Then, he gets six more weeks of winter fun and I get a bit more shut-eye."

But when Jack Frost makes a regular trip to the town of January Junction one year, he falls in love with Elisa. Since he is invisible, Elisa doesn't know Jack Frost from an icy draft. Complications arise as Jack tries to do something about his love for Elisa.

There are nine original songs in the special. They are "Jack Frost"; "When the Frost Is on the Pumpkin"; "Lonely Being One of a Kind"; "Ice Polka"; "That's the Rub"; "She is Beautiful & Therefore..."; "Just What I Always Wanted"; "The Groundhog's Song (I've Only Got a Day Named After Me), and "Wicked Glee." Two standards, "Me and My Shadow" and "The Christmas Song," will also be heard.

"Jack Frost" employs the dimensional stop-motion photography animation process which Arthur Rankin Jr. and Jules Bass developed. With it, three-dimensional specially constructed figures are moved fractionally for each frame of photography to tell the story.

A DREAM COMES TRUE for Elisa when she meets Sir Ravenal, the knight in armor of her dreams, in this scene from "Jack Frost." The Christmas-season special, using the "Animagic" technique, will be presented on NBC-TV.

ABC PRESENTS the animated Yuletide special, "The Year Without A Santa Claus."

Holiday Fantasy Encores

An enchanting animated musical fantasy, "The Year Without a Santa Claus," will encore Sunday, Dec. 9 (7 to 8 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

The special, based on a story by the Pulitzer Prize-winning author, Phyllis McGinley, features the voices of Shirley Booth, Mickey Rooney, Dick Shawn and George S. Irving. It also offers six original songs plus three favorite Christmas tunes - "Here Comes Santa Claus," "Blue Christmas" and "Sleigh Ride."

Santa wakes up one morning, feeling dispirited and suffering from a bad cold. He believes that nobody cares about him or Christmas anymore and decides to take a holiday. Mrs. Claus is distressed about this bit of news. She sends Santa's head elf, Jingle Bells, and his number two elf, Jangle Bells, "down there" to find an example of the Christmas spirit to bring back. Hopefully, this will convince Santa that all is right with the world. They hop aboard the littlest reindeer of Santa's team, Vixen, who will take them on the long journey.

Santa is very upset when he learns where the two elves are headed, because he's worried about them getting into a mess of trouble with Snowmiser and Heatmiser. Snowmiser controls the northern part of the world and attempts to turn everything into icicles. Heatmiser, his nasty brother, tries to keep the south so hot that there are never any snowflakes. Santa, disguised in ordinary civilian clothes, goes after them.

For a little while, things look really grim for Santa and the Elves. But eventually he does run into some people who haven't lost the Christmas spirit. That changes his mind about taking a holiday on Christmas — much to everyone's joy.

No Clothes Again

Not too long ago, Lois Areno was one of New York's highest-paid top fashion models. Then, ironically, she became well known for not having clothes on, as 'the girl in the hot tub' on "The Ropers" series.

Lois was permitted to dress again, however, for her role in the feature film titled "The Electric Horseman."

Then, just as she thought she was back to being fully dressed, she was notified that more than a million 'wet' Lois Areno posters are about to hit the market.

Sevareid Guests

Noted television news commentator Eric Sevareid has been signed for a guest-starring role in an upcoming segment of "Taxi."

O'Neill To Star

Jennifer O'Neill has been signed to star in "Scanners." The motion picture is now filming in Montreal, Canada.

"Mary and Joseph: A Story of Faith" will be presented as NBC-TV's Sunday Night Big Event, Dec. 9 (7 to 10 p.m.). The drama, which culminates with the birth of Christ, focuses on well-known Biblical characters whose lives were directly affected by the arrival of the long-awaited Messiah.

Emmy Award winner Blanche Baker ("Holocaust") and Jeff East star in the title roles. Colleen Dewhurst and Stephen McHattie also star.

The production, with a script by Carmen Culver, was filmed on location in the Holy Land earlier this year after considerable research.

The Rev. Dr. Richard Gilbert, a member of the faculty of Princeton Theological Seminary and consultant to the Center of Continuing Education was among those who helped prepare the script. He has been a consultant on two previous TV projects — "Jesus of Nazareth" and "The Nativity."

"I believe the scholarly base of 'Mary and Joseph' is sound," says Gilbert. "In fact, 10 experts provided advice and 1,500 pages of research went into the script before my consultation."

Pointing out that the Gospel accounts recorded in the New Testament books of Matthew and St. Luke are minimal, Gilbert indicated that certain elements of the story are presented as they might have happened.

"It's a powerful film," he continued, "full of authentic Biblical life and charm, edged with reverence."

Although Joseph does not believe that God is the creator of her unborn child, he again comes to her rescue by falsely admitting the paternity of her child. As a result of his admission, he endures flogging. The beginning of a closer relationship is established, a bond that culminates on the night when Mary goes into labor and the Christ child is born.

In the dramatic special, Mary, a young woman of humble background, meets Joseph, a nobleman who rescues her from assault by a Roman soldier. After the Romans murdered his family and burned their lands, Joseph began a new life as an apprentice to his Uncle Matthew, a carpenter. He was also a follower of Judah, a rebel zealot.

As Mary grieves for her father, Joachim, who was hanged for treason, she hears the voice of Gabriel, who tells her she will bear the Messiah, the Holy Son of God. When she, somewhat fearfully bears her soul to the townspeople of Nazareth, they learn that she is indeed pregnant without a husband. Mary is then judged an adulteress and sentenced to death by stoning.

JEFF EAST and Blanche Baker are stars of the NBC-TV dramatic special, "Mary and Joseph: A Story of Love."

Ounce for ounce, the best gift in the world.

The Krugerrand Collection is more than just beautiful jewelry. It also happens to be the world's best way to own gold.

That's because the Krugerrand is the only coin minted that contains exactly one troy ounce of pure gold—not a fractional amount. Its gold content, therefore, is never in doubt.

So even when it stands alone, the Krugerrand is desirable. But when set in fashionable, 14K gold Wideband frames, it's practically irresistible.

Femia Is A 'Natural'

John Femia, one of the young stars of the NBC Special Treat, "New York City Too Far From Tampa Blues," is a 'natural.' This word has many connotations and may seem vague, at first. But when John bounced into the auditions held by co-producers Phyllis Minoff and Linda Marmelstein, the character of Aurelio suddenly jumped from their scripts as a physical reality. Femia was Aurelio even before he read a line from the teleplay, encoring Tuesday, Dec. 11 (4 to 5 p.m.).

"We were having difficulty finding a young actor to play the part," explained Minoff. "Most of the kids we saw had a difficult time portraying a 12-year-old neighborhood kid, a Brooklyn-born Italian. They didn't have the dialect or the street-wise attitude we were hunting for."

Femia recalls his audition vividly: "My agent, Michael Amato, phoned me and told me that I had this audition, and that they were looking for a tough Italian kid from Brooklyn. When I got to the audition I was very frightened because this was my first national audition. I wore my play clothes in order to fit the character. When I read the part I said to myself, 'Hey, this is really me.' See, I'm a method actor and when I get a script, I try to become the character. I had no problem understanding this part. I was Aurelio."

He went back for another reading. "After I finished, I asked if they wanted me to read again. They said, 'Yes, when we shoot,' and I knew I had the part."

Femia, who's now a regular cast member of "Hello, Larry," has never taken formal acting lessons. But his brother who attended the High School of Performing Arts is acting as his guide. His dream is to be a stand-up comedian like Steve Martin or George Carlin. His wit, warm personality and dramatic talents all fall into the category of being natural. At the moment, John is very pleased — naturally.

"New York City Too Far From Tampa Blues," based on a novel of the same name by T. Ernesto Bethancourt, is the story of Tom Rodrigues, a Puerto Rican youngster from Tampa, Fla. Problems arise when he is forced to move to New York City with his family. Upon arriving, however, he meets a neighborhood kid and discovers that adjusting to the fast-paced life in the city and making new friends isn't as hard as he thought it would be. The two boys find they are interested in music and form a group called the Griffin Brothers.

New Assignment

Esther Rolle, star of the NBC-TV pilot "Momma," was pleasantly surprised to learn who her stand-in would be during production of the project. That stand-in turned out to be her sister, Estelle Evans!

As it turns out, Estelle had been asked to take on the assignment by an agent who was unaware that she was related to Esther.

She Ignores Plea

A mother who devotes all of her time to the problems of others doesn't realize the seriousness of her daughter's compulsive overeating until the teenager makes a shocking plea for help in "Dinky Hocker." The drama is encoring on the "ABC Afterschool Specials" series Wednesday, Dec. 12 (4:30 to 5:30 p.m.).

Dinky (Wendie Jo Sperber) is a teenage girl with a weight problem. But her civic-minded mother, Mrs. Hocker (June Lockhart), is too involved with her causes to notice. Mrs. Hocker's schedule is a daily whirl of meetings that leaves no time for her to relate to her daughter.

Finally, Dinky is able to get support and encouragement from the equally overweight P. John Knight (Gary Springer). Together they begin to diet and stick to it until Mrs. Hocker thoughtlessly in-jests that Dinky break her regimen by eating a piece of cake. When P. John tries to intercede, Mrs. Hocker becomes furious and forbids Dinky to see him.

During a party to honor Mrs. Hocker for her community involvement, a shocking statement painted on the wall of the meeting hall ruins the affair. At home, she confronts her daughter and the truth is told.

Behind The Scenes

Let's have a loud, resounding cheer for ABC News.

Since the beginning of the Iranian crisis, they've given us continuous, concise coverage on their late night special program, airing from 11:30 to 12-midnight.

"It's a remarkable step, isn't it, when a television news operation commits itself to nightly specials on a subject," says Mike Duffy, one of the program's producers. "Of course, it's a remarkable story and that's what merits it."

But the other networks must not agree. In spirit of the extreme gravity of the situation, they continue to feed up pap in the form of 'The Tonight Show' and re-runs of worn-out series and/or old, old movies. Of course, when there is no crisis such as the one in Iran, these shows are enjoyable. ABC must hold viewers in higher regard, however. They opted to air what they felt was wanted. By doing so, they've won the respect and praise of interested Americans across the country.

One reason why ABC News has been on top of the story since it first broke can be attributed to the fact that they moved quicker.

ABC News' John Goodman explains: "About 6:30 on the morning of Nov. 4, when this thing happened, our assignment desk outlined the embassy takeover in Tehran to Stan Opatowsky, our director of news coverage. The decision was made right then to send in a correspondent immediately. By the time NBC and CBS sent their people 24 hours later, they were turned back at the Tehran airport."

Duffy feels that the "real key" to the program's success is the Special Events team responsible for getting it on the air. "This is our only job," he says. "And we're on it from 9:30 in the morning until we wrap the program up each night."

Viewers may think differently. It seems that the real key is a strong, on-going commitment on ABC's part to keep the nation informed.

Following The Nile

The mere mention of the Nile River is enough to evoke visions of exotic African mysteries. But by imposing his technological wizardry on the river, man has seriously altered the balance between the Nile and the millions of people and animals that depend on it for sustenance.

Captain Jacques Cousteau and his crew make an exploratory journey up the legendary river to chart the impact of man's intrusion on life there in a two-part special which opens The Cousteau Odyssey's third season on PBS. Parts 1 and 2 of "The Nile" air Dec. 9 and 10 (8 p.m.). "The Nile" offers viewers a departure from Captain Cousteau's usual aquatic method of travel, as he and his son Philippe follow the river's course by boat, Landrover and specially-fitted PBV Catalina seaplane. For ten months the Cousteaus and their film crew followed the rugged course of the world's longest river on its ascent to the Mediterranean. Beginning at the river's headwaters in the Ruwenzori mountain range, Part 1 of "The Nile" proceeds to Lake Victoria, the main reservoir from which flows the upper White Nile.

'Love for Lydia'

Old women stopped to stare in nostalgic awe. Young girls giggled and whispered, the more daring approaching for an autograph or a glance from the piercing blue eyes.

Young men weighed up their chances, then moved aside. Old men remembered when...

Blackie Johnson strolled the street. Lean, mean — and the walking, talking embodiment of every woman's secret fantasy.

They had seen him on tele-

"As a boy I was very close to the seasons of the land and the animals about us. It was a 100-acre dairy farm and I did my share of the work, milking, hedging, ditching, fetching the feed and dozens of other daily tasks.

"Even now, when I get a period without work I look for an outdoor job to do. I can dig a garden in a day — and enjoy it too. Each day I run — no, not jog, run — nine miles with my two red setters. I'm not a fitness vision as the obsessive love of the young girl from the big house in "Love for Lydia," now being presented on PBS' Masterpiece Theatre Sundays (9 p.m.).

And now here he was, in the flesh, at once both challenging and appealing, provoking reaction but shying from it too.

Ralph Arliss has had to come to terms with the impact of Blackie, the garage-hand/chauffeur whose sexuality was a major factor in Lydia's development from adolescence into womanhood.

"It was a difficult role — but a very rewarding one," says Arliss. "I felt an affinity with Blackie. Like him I'm a volatile character — I don't stand any nonsense and I say what I think — but I'm often also surprised at people's reactions to me because both Blackie and I do have a gentle, softer side to our natures too."

"Love for Lydia" is a series that moves with the seasons and its characters are close to the land, in sympathy with the natural world about them. Ralph (he pronounces it Rafe) could relate to that, for he was raised on a farm in the beautiful Axminster district of Devon in England's West Country.

"Like Blackie, I really relish hard physical work," says Ralph.

freak but I do find a tremendous sense of freedom and peace of mind when my body is working flat out.

"One of the best things to come out of my role in 'Love for Lydia' is that I now have the freedom of choosing the work I want to. I have relative financial security and I'm planning to return to my roots quite soon and buy a farm in Padstow, Cornwall."

Michele Will Tell

Q: Could you please give me some information on Melissa Gilbert who plays on "Little House on the Prairie"? K. PEARSALL, MOUNT OLIVE, N.C.

A: Fifteen year old Melissa has been in show business for most of her young life. This is no surprise if you consider her show business background: her late father, the comedian Paul Gilbert and her mother, former dancer-actress Barbara Crane were instrumental in starting her on a show-biz career. She now lives in the San Fernando Valley with her mother, who, incidentally, acts as her manager. She studies voice, jazz dancing and ballet in addition to her regular academic studies. She loves to relax from a heavy day of filming by cooking and baking.

Q: Could you tell me what ever happened to "How the West Was Won"? E. EDWARDS, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Zeb Macahan (James Arness) and Molly Culhane (Fionnula Flanagan) may have won the West, but they certainly lost the network ratings war. Their program was pulled off the air because of low ratings.

Q: Was Ronald Reagan once a television star? Tell me something about him. How old is he? M. COX, ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C.

A: Ronald Reagan was born February 6, 1912 in Tempico, Illinois. He married his wife, the former Nancy Davis, in 1952. In the early days of television he appeared as the host for "General Electric Theatre." Later on in his career he spent three years as the host of "Death Valley Days." Remember "Twenty Mule Team Borax" and Rosemary De Camp?

Q: I am crazy about the theme song on "Search for Tomorrow"! Can you tell me if it's on a record? A "SFT" FAN IN LAURINBURG, N.C.

A: You're in luck! You "SFT" fans should keep your eyes open and your ears peeled for that show's theme song. It has just been recorded by Sherry Mathis (Liza Kaslo on "Search For Tomorrow") and John Gabriel (Seneca Beaulac on "Ryan's Hope").

ALL THE "PEANUTS" comic strip characters come to television in "A Charlie Brown Christmas," color special to be presented on CBS-TV.

A Look For Spirit

He is awkward at parties. He sometimes stands like a piece of furniture in the corner, laughs before the joke is finished or spills his ice cream. His peers call him hopeless, wishy-washy, blockhead and failure-face. But, without Charlie Brown, the Peanut would lose much of their flavor.

To whom else could they turn for the best of all cures for disillusionment, "a chocolate cream and a friendly pat on the back" — free? Self-appointed Peanut psychiatrist Lucy might advise the cream, but she'd charge seven cents for the idea. And she's not partial to giving pats on the back. Neither she nor any of the other Peanuts — with the exception of Charlie Brown — would make a project figuring out what things are all about — deep, vital, intangible things like the spirit of Christmas.

With help from the blanket-toting, thumb-sucking Peanut philosopher Linus, Charlie Brown discovers the real meaning of Christmas for the other Peanuts in "A Charlie Brown Christmas." The animated special will air Monday, Dec. 10 (8 to 8:30 p.m.).

Linus is as deep a thinker as

Joyce Still Loves Movies

JOYCE DeWITT co-stars in ABC-TV's popular comedy series "Three's Company."

Movie stars the likes of Clark Gable, Cary Grant, Katherine Hepburn and Greer Garson had a profound influence on Joyce DeWitt, who co-stars on ABC-TV's "Three's Company" (Tuesdays, 9 to 9:30 p.m.). When Joyce was only five, she would stay glued to the family television set while other children played outdoors. As she puts it, "Spencer Tracy and Katherine Hepburn played a significant role in my ambition to become an actress."

One of four children, Joyce was born in Wheeling, W. Va., but grew up in Speedway, Ind. Some of her first experiences with acting came at Speedway High School where she worked in the drama department. During her years there, she performed in many productions and won her first acting awards.

Then Joyce enrolled at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., where she received her B.S. degree in Theatre and a teaching certificate — "I promised my father I'd have something to fall back on."

While attending college, she worked with a stand-up comedy group. And in the summer months, she worked in musical comedies and performed major roles in several productions. Recognized for her talents, she was asked to join a traveling show in which she sang classical and popular music throughout the state.

Following graduation, Joyce worked at several dinner theaters in Indianapolis. One of the guest directors was a founder of the UCLA Drama Department. He spoke so highly of the graduate school that Joyce decided to participate in the Master of Fine Arts program in acting at UCLA. Once she arrived in Los Angeles and saw the beach, she decided "it would be much easier to starve on a beach than on a city street."

One of her first acting roles was a small part in "Baretta." Then she was signed for the pilot of "Three's Company."

Since working on the series, Joyce has had little free time. She did, however, star in her first television movie, "With This Ring," which aired earlier this year. Her other acting credits include "The Tony Randall Show," "Most Wanted" and the pilot, "Risiko."

Her career in the legitimate theatre has spanned 15 years in which she has performed in period pieces, Greek and Shakespearean classics, musical comedies, contemporary comedies and dramas.

Inspector Returns

Peter Sellers triumphs in his classic role as the bumbling French sleuth, Inspector Clouseau in "The Return of the Pink Panther." The hilarious comedy encores Dec. 9 as The ABC Sunday Night Movie (8:30 p.m.).

Once again, Inspector Clouseau comes across as the accident-prone detective who can't walk down a street without turning the pavement into a banana peel. And he's still in hot pursuit of the Pink Panther. Once again, the disappearance of this priceless gem sends Clouseau on a madcap chase through France, Switzerland and Morocco.

Action and slapstick comedy abound as Sellers is trapped in revolving doors, steers trucks into swimming pools and wrestles with runaway vacuum cleaners. But that's not all he does as he slowly drives his superior, Chief Inspector Dreyfus (Herbert Lom), to insanity. He also grapples with monkeys and parrots, glues himself to chairs, and topples statues in museums.

Then Clouseau decides to visit the ski resort of Gstaad, Switzerland. When Dreyfus hears this, he declares that Gstaad is "a paradise in the Alps soon to be a wasteland."

Glamour Is Returning

In the world of women's clothes, glamour is back, and so is Academy Award-winning fashion designer Bill Travilla.

"In 1970, we came into a period where jeans and denims were 'in' and dresses weren't important," he said. "I threw in the sponge. It just wasn't my era. I moved to Europe." But things have changed. "We're back to full-time glamour in clothes. That's why I'm back in business. I understand glamour."

In fact, Travilla will introduce his fall line in a most appropriate way — by way of Hollywood, glamour capital of the world.

Twenty-five of his creations are modeled in a fashion show that is one of the dramatic focal points of "She's Dressed to Kill," airing Monday, Dec. 10 (9 p.m. on NBC-TV). The film is set against the stylized world of the fashion industry.

"Glamour," explained Travilla, "is feminine. It isn't unisex. It's silky hair. It's female, with taste."

Travilla, who shared an Oscar (with Leah Rhodes and Marjorie Best) for "Adventures of Don Juan" (1949), has dressed some of Hollywood's most glamorous leading ladies, including Ann Sheridan, Betty Grable, Loretta Young, Lauren Bacall and Marilyn Monroe.

"The brightest fashion-minded woman I ever knew was Loretta Young. She has the fabulous ability of being Mrs. Tom Lewis and then analyzing herself as Loretta Young in the mirror," he explained.

"She would look directly at me and say, 'Bill, I'm not so sure I like Loretta.' Or we would run screen tests of clothes and she would say, 'I'm not so sure Loretta looks her best there. No, I don't think that's our girl,' and then discuss herself as if she were another person. What an ability! She always looked right, and she always was right."

'Letters To CBS'

Television news is often accused of viewing itself through rose-colored glasses. But the CBS 'eye' turns a critical camera on itself, urging viewers to mount the proverbial soapbox and plain speak their minds on "Your Turn: Letters to CBS News."

Anchored by Sharron Lovejoy, each edition of "Your Turn" offers a potpourri of comments from television viewers across the country. They tell the network, and the nation — how they feel about its wide range of subjects.

Whether it's about a segment from a newscast, "60 Minutes," or "Magazine," a documentary or an instant analysis of a Presidential speech, thousands of letters are received each month with praises, and complaints.

These touch on every facet of programming — from content to cinematography.

Producer Phyllis Bosworth and her staff review the mail and select a representative spectrum of articulate and aroused video consumers to serve as that month's TV ombudsmen.

"Your Turn" aims to give the 'little guy' a chance," says Bosworth. "This is a way to talk back and take on the media mogul, the voice of authority that monologues our living rooms and tells us what's happening. On this show, viewers get to tell it from their side, to let us know just what they think of CBS News and television in general. It sure beats throwing shoes at your TV screen."

No Place Like Home

Roy Clark's list of accomplishments reads like alphabet soup. For instance, there's 'A' for Actor, 'B' for Businessman and Boxer, 'C' for Comedian and Composer, 'D' for Dancer. Then there's Master Musician (guitar, 12-string acoustic, banjo, fiddle, plus five others he can "get by" on). Outdoorsman, Pilot, Photographer, Rancher and Horse Ranching Enthusiast, Singer — and the list goes on.

This extraordinary gentleman will appear with members of his family and display several of those talents in "A Country Christmas," airing Wednesday, Dec. 12 (9 to 10 p.m.), CBS-TV. Others who will be featured on the down-home holiday special — taped entirely in Clark's home town of Tulsa, Okla. — are Barbi Benton, George Gobel, Loretta Lynn, Lynne Marta, The Oak Ridge Boys, Minnie Pearl and David Soul.

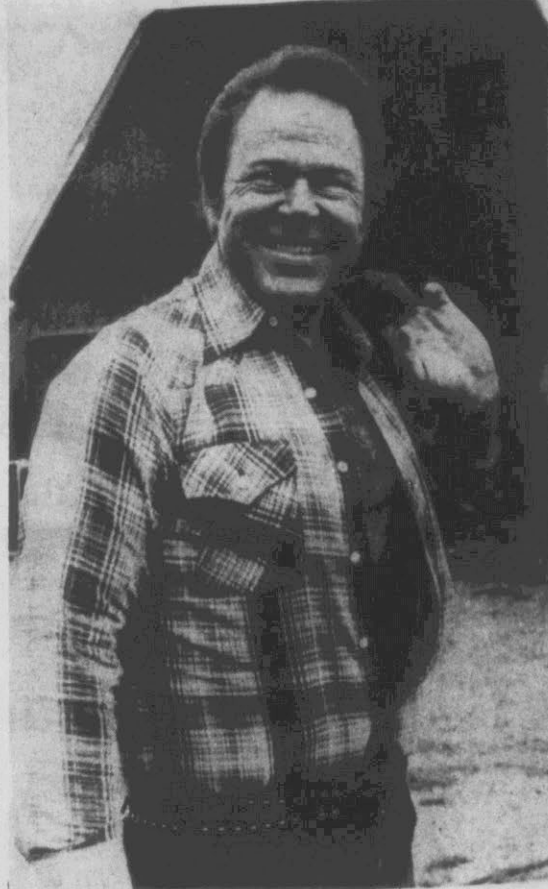

Despite his numerous talents, there is something else that Roy would like to accomplish more than anything.

"I'd like to make a real good dramatic feature film," he says. "I've always been fascinated by things I haven't done, and dramatic acting is one of them. I've done light comedic stuff, and though I don't want to get away from anything that I'm doing now, I sure would like to add to it."

"But, he emphasizes strongly, "I never want to quit playing music."

Clark's wife, Barbara, and his mother and dad are appearing in the special with him. They have all spent the last Christmases together in Clark's original home town of Meherrin, Va., where his parents still reside.

"I was away from my family for only one Christmas since I was old enough to realize there was a Christmas," Clark says. "It was 1960, and I was appearing in Las Vegas. We opened two weeks before Christmas and played through New Year's. I was miserable. But I had just started my career and was in no position to say that I didn't want to work the job."

ROY CLARK is among the country stars who gather with their families to celebrate a down-home holiday celebration on "A Country Christmas," on CBS.

Clark paused for a reflective moment. "That will never happen again," added the multi-talented performer, who no longer has to worry about losing his job(s).

In 'Country Christmas,' the effervescent Minnie Pearl has once again invited the stars and members of their families to join her in some holiday merriment.

Each family participates in a wonderful variety of holiday songs and dances. When Christmas Day arrives, the entire cast joins together to sing a medley of Christmas songs.

Solitary Jogger

Jogging has become a national pastime. But Conrad Bain, star of NBC-TV's "Diff'rent Strokes," was jogging long before it was fashionable.

"I started running 19 years ago," he said. "I used to run in Central Park and people wondered who was chasing me."

"I loved to run as a kid," he continued. "I was born and raised in the prairies of Western Canada. I had to travel several miles to school, so I trotted to make the time pass faster." That was the origin of his running routine, though he was never active in competitive track meets.

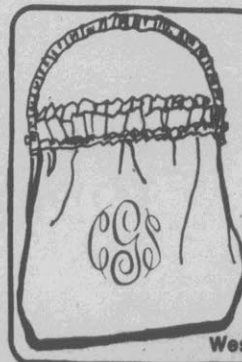

"When I lived in New York, I used to swim three-quarters of a mile three days a week. Then New York went through this severe water shortage and you couldn't add water to swimming pools. So I decided to run instead. I've been running ever since," he says.

Bain usually runs four to six miles every other day up a trail in the Santa Monica Mountains near his home. "The trail is a bit isolated, which I like. And it is elevated with a lot of steep hills, which I understand is bad for the knees. So I also run on the UCLA track sometimes."

He occasionally jogs with friends, but prefers solitude while running. "I just want to set my own pace and keep my own thoughts. Most people are just the opposite. They like some company or they get bored. I guess I'm a solitary runner."

On alternate days, the actor works out in a health club, usually in the evenings after rehearsals of his series. "There are days when I don't have time to run or work out. But the important thing is to make every effort to have daily exercise," he says.

Dean's Season Special

And it all comes from Irving Berlin's perennial holiday favorite: lyrics continued in "White Christmas" — "I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, just like the ones I used to know."

"White Christmas" tells of someone dreaming of a Christmas past," says producer Lee Hale, "one with things like sleighs, snow and ice."

"We thought, why not do a Christmas show from sunny and mild California and show the rest of the country 'our' kind of holiday? The first one we did in 1976 was done from Malibu and the San Fernando Valley. Viewers couldn't believe how mild it was out here. Then we did two shows from the west valley and this year we thought we'd try one from San Diego.

"Dean did 'White Christmas' when he had our weekly series. We would hear from Irving Berlin then and he always enjoyed Dean's singing of his song."

Dean's fourth California Christmas show, "Dean Martin's Christmas in California," will be telecast on NBC Thursday, Dec. 13 (10 to 11 p.m.). His guests are Shirley Jones, Dom DeLuise, Ruth Buzzi and the Goldiggers.

Famous San Diego tourist attractions — Sea World, the zoo and Torrey Pines Country Club — are the backdrops, while music and comedy highlight the festivities.

Dean and the cast open with "It's a Good Day," then Shirley joins her host for the perennial favorite, "Let It Snow."

Next, Dean, Dom, Shirley and Ruth all take part in a "Shamu Goes to College" skit at Sea World, where Dom does a dance routine with penguins.

Everybody takes a monorail ride and Dean walks through the animal part of the park, greeting lions, rhinos and elephants up close. All join in the singing of "Love Makes the World Go Round" on — where else? — a merry-go-round! And Dean rides his Andalusian stud, Legionnario, along the beach by the Pacific Ocean.

The Goldiggers (Linda Kay, Melody Rhue, Marie Halton and Julia Child) ride a boat in the harbor as they perform "Getaway Holiday."

In conclusion, Dean sings "White Christmas" at the Torrey Pines Country Club and Golf Course.

DEAN MARTIN and Shirley Jones join in some Yuletide melodies on "Dean Martin's Christmas in California."

Out To Revenge

A retired lawman straps on his guns to hunt an escaped convict out to revenge his wife's death, in "The Last Hard Man." Charlton Heston and James Coburn star in the western drama coming to network television for the first time Thursday, Dec. 13 (9 to 11 p.m.), on CBS-TV. Barbara Hershey, Jorge Rivero, Michael Parks, Larry ("CHiPs") Wilcox and Christopher Mitchum co-star.

Provo (Coburn), a half-Navaho bank robber and killer, has escaped from the Territorial Prison in Arizona. With a gang of fellow escapees behind him, Provo wants to revenge the accidental murder of his Indian wife in a shoot-out.

Burgade (Heston), the lawman responsible for the death, has since retired but feels that he will be needed in the hunt for Provo and his desperados. The search reaches greater urgency when Provo kidnaps Burgade's young daughter (Hershey) and holds her at an Indian reservation to lure his sworn enemy into a trap he is setting.

The film is based on a novel titled "Gundown" by Brian Garfield.

SPOTLIGHT

He Is In Familiar Territory

John Bennett Perry, star of "240-ROBERT," was in familiar territory recently when he and partner Mark Harmon took their seats on the stage of "Dinah!" But they weren't there to promote their series. They were there with their series production crew to film a segment for it.

Asked between takes on the stage of the popular talk show if the surroundings evoked recent memories, Perry was quick to respond: "Yeah...I started to sweat again."

John won an Emmy nomination not long ago for his job as host of "EveryDay" (cq), a show that ran recently in syndication — similar in format to that of "Dinah!"

But in many respects, John was the reluctant host: "I would not have been a talk show host," he admits. "Initially, we (John, co-host Stephanie Edwards and the other show regulars) were brought into Philadelphia by the producers on two consecutive weekends. Our rehearsals were almost like an encounter group. We did sketches, group discussions, we sang — and Stephanie and I would do a couple of interviews. It was planned that we'd have maybe one or two celebrities a week. But then the concept changed."

As much as "EveryDay" tried to be innovative, it soon fell to pressures to increase its ratings by scheduling more big-name guests. "I had to do three things on the show. I had to act, sing and conduct interviews. Soon they were stressing what I felt was my weakest suit," says John.

"Interviewing was not the thing I'm best at. And television is too tough a medium not to be doing what you're very best at."

John's Emmy nomination is proof that he may have been more successful than he'll admit. But he does confess that he learned from the experience. "I have an understanding of what they (talk show hosts) are going through. And I think I know what they are looking for — being interviewed is so much easier than being the interviewer. The cliché when somebody is good in sports is, 'They make it look easy.' The good and successful talk show hosts do make it look easy."

John has had a long and varied career, but remains a small-town boy at heart. "I live in California (Sherman Oaks) and I should be saying this is home. But when people ask me where I'm from, I say Williamstown, Massachusetts," he explains.

On the set of "240-ROBERT," John's interests include operating a small recording studio, with his brother, Tony, where he produces local radio commercials and promotional material.

Perry Como's Christmas

Celebrating Christmas with Perry Como has become a television tradition. This year, the singer traveled to Santa Fe to film "Perry Como's Christmas in New Mexico." The special will be presented Friday, Dec. 14 (9 to 10 p.m.), on ABC.

Perry will be joined by Joyce DeWitt; pop singer Anne Murray; veteran actress Greer Garson, and native American song stylist Buffy Sainte-Marie.

Also participating in the celebration will be flamenco artist Maria Benitez and her partner, Monolo Rivera. The two perform the colorful shawl dance. Other guests are New Mexico's native sons, Ben Abruzzo, Maxie Anderson and Larry Newman, members of the world's first transatlantic balloon team.

This musical holiday show focuses on the Christmas traditions of three distinct cultures in New Mexico — Hispanic, southwestern Pueblo Indian and American pioneer. Included will be an elaborate sequence taped in historic Sena Plaza, showing Perry and a group of children wandering among some of New Mexico's finest artists and craftsmen. These artisans are famed as they weave, sculpt, paint, create jewelry and make furniture.

Greer Garson, widely acclaimed for her Academy Award-winning portrayal of Mrs. Miniver, is now a resident of New Mexico. Her moving recitation of a poem, "Christmas in Santa Fe," is another highlight of the show.

Boy Foils Scheme

The wild and energetic young boy called Red Chief returns to upset the rain-making scheme of two inept criminals who once kidnapped him, in "The Revenge of Red Chief." The production is being presented as an "ABC Weekend Special" Saturday, Dec. 15 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

The favorable feedback ABC received after "The Ransom of Red Chief" aired prompted the plans to produce this sequel of O. Henry's classic about a mischievous boy who is just a little bit sharper than the unscrupulous adults around him. It's good to be able to see him outsmarting the wise guys once again.

In "The Revenge of Red Chief," down-on-their-luck drifters Bill and Sam persuade the mayor that their vacuum cleaner is a rain-making machine. Their plan to abscond with a $2,000 bonus being paid for saving the drought-stricken town is foiled when they encounter their young nemesis — Red Chief. They also lose the last of their own money as they lose away $12 to distract the irate townspeople as they flee.

Noah Beery stars as Bill, Jack Elam is cast as Sam. Patrick J. Peterson plays Red Chief and Alan Hale is the mayor.

HOLLYWOOD — SHIRLEY JONES and her hubby, MARTY INGELS, are the latest of a growing number of Hollywoodites who don't like what's being written about them in the NATIONAL ENQUIRER. The couple has just filed a $20,000,000 lawsuit citing libel, invasion of privacy and intentional infliction of emotional distress because of a recent article. Other celebs who've also sued the publication in recent months are CAROL BURNETT, RORY CALHOUN and ED McMAHON.

JOHN HOUSEMAN says he's ready, eager and more than willing to do "PAPER CHASE" for PBS. This means that maybe you've not seen the last of that excellent series.

After all these years, BOB HOPE will be entertaining the military again this Christmas. The site of Hope's 1979 Yuletide show will be the Long Beach Veterans Hospital — the same location of his special last year.

TV talk shows continue to survive the ratings war year after year. But this is no surprise to MIKE DOUGLAS, who's celebrating his 18th anniversary as a talk show host this week. "I think I know why the format is so popular," says Mike. "People are lonesome. Loneliness is a big problem, and people identify with this form of show."

RICHARD THOMAS' performance in the recent TV production, "ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT," was so outstanding that he's now been asked to star in a feature film entitled "BATTLE BEYOND THE STARS."

Look for SALLY STRUTHERS to come back to television before too long. Sally's all ready to start filming a new comedy series, "ME? ON THE RADIO?" which will probably debut on CBS in the spring. This will be Sally's first series since "ALL IN THE FAMILY."

In a comedy 'first,' ABC-TV has ordered a homosexual-themed pilot for a series to debut during the 1980-81 season. The show, as yet untitled, will feature two middle-aged guys who've been living together as lovers for some time. Look for the same kind of public furor generated by "SOAP" a few seasons back. And we thought that one was bad!

'Four Eyes'

A boy who signed himself "Four Eyes" was upset because his friends made fun of his glasses. An 11-year-old girl felt she was being snubbed by some of her classmates because she wasn't dating yet. A teenager named Joanne was embarrassed and angry because her mother was reading her diary. A boy who couldn't dance felt awkward and ignored at parties.

These youngsters all sought help with the problems they face — but not from their parents or school counselors. They wrote "Dear Alex & Annie," the live action/animated musical advice column for adolescents which airs weekends on ABC-TV. It may be seen Saturdays (11:55 a.m.) and Sundays, (11:25 a.m.).

The idea for the critically acclaimed program was actually created over lunch in a Manhattan restaurant 2 1/2 years ago.

Lynn Ahrens, who writes the music and lyrics for the on-air segments, was concerned that there was nothing on television at that time for adolescent viewers.

She and ABC-TV's Marilyn Olin, who was then head of her own production company, discussed the concept for a program for adolescents during lunch. And the two came up with what they thought was a very exciting idea.

"It was like Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland sitting down and saying, 'Let's do a show,'" Lynn said. "We arrived at a sort of Dear Abby of the air."

An English and journalism major at Syracuse University, Lynn had been a copywriter and copy supervisor for seven years at a New York advertising agency.

Call your own time-out.

Some of the best moments in any sport take place right where you're sitting. Because where you're sitting can be a great place to cool the action.

Just grab a hold of a sizzling hot dog, spread the mustard thick, and drown your thirst with an ice-cold Pepsi. Nothing makes food taste better and good times last longer than Pepsi-Cola. And Pepsi is just as close to where you're sitting as the refreshment stand.

Go ahead. Right now is a great time to call your own time-out... and call for plenty of great-lasting Pepsi-Cola.

When you're on a team that fields a goodly number of talented running backs, you might have a tendency to get lost in the shuffle. Especially if you only get a chance to star because of a teammate's injury.

That's the fate that has beset William Cullen Bryant, better known by his last two names. The Los Angeles Ram has long been one of the more valuable backs in the entire NFC. But it wasn't until last season that he began to get substantial billing.

The Rams, struggling to get into the playoffs for the seventh consecutive season, face their divisional rivals, the Atlanta Falcons, Sunday, Dec. 9. CBS will televise the game (1 p.m.).

When Cullen Bryant came out of the University of Colorado as an All-American defensive back, it was assumed the 6-foot, 234-pounder would assume a starting role at the same position with the Rams, who drafted him second in 1973.

But during the off-season before he descended into the Los Angeles camp, Bryant weight lifted to the point that he gained 20 pounds and a tremendous amount of strength.

"When he came west from Colorado, Cullen stopped off at every gym on the way to lift weights and work out to keep in condition," quipped Don Klosterman, the Rams' general manager. "When he got to Nevada, he tried to bench-press Hoover Dam."

Suddenly, it was apparent that the suddenly massive rookie was in no condition to play in the defensive backfield. But Los Angeles was loaded with running backs, so where could they use him? He was simply too talented to be left out of the picture completely.

So they decided to make him a punt and kick returner. In six seasons, he moved up to third on the all-time Rams list for return yardage with 1,760 and is now tied with V.T. Smith for most kickoff returns for touchdowns in a career with three.

Just when Cullen thought he had found a home, the Rams came up with an inordinate amount of injuries in the offensive backfield in 1978, and he was pressed into starting duty.

Like a true veteran, he led the club in rushing with 658 yards and scored seven touchdowns. And he always seemed to save his best for the big games.

In the NFC Divisional playoff win over Minnesota, he carried 27 times for 100 yards and a touchdown. He also caught eight passes for 76 yards.

When you think of William Cullen Bryant, don't just think of the poet of the same name. Think about the multi-talented running back who can play any number of positions for the Los Angeles Rams. His value to the team is, as Klosterman puts it, "probably worth three draft choices."

WHEN THE LOS ANGELES RAMS suffered numerous injuries to their talented corps of running backs last season, they turned to multi-talented Cullen Bryant, who responded by leading the team in rushing in 1978. The Rams will have a fight on their hands when they tangle with division rival Atlanta on Sunday, Dec. 9 starting at 1 p.m. on CBS.

Has A Winning Goal

A few years back, in 1974 to be exact, JoAnne Carner did what everyone familiar with the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour knew she would do someday.

The then 36-year-old Carner became the LPGA's Player of the Year and leading money winner. That was the first time in five years someone other than Kathy Whitworth took home the most money.

And it happened to JoAnne Carner because of pride. "Money is secondary for me," says the former amateur golf sensation. "I feel I'm playing for pride. It's an ego trip for me. The thing is to win. If I'm not up there I lose interest in the game."

Now JoAnne is teamed with Lee Trevino, another winner in the JCPenney Mixed Team Classic. The final two rounds will be broadcast by CBS-TV Saturday, Dec. 8 (3:30 to 4:30 p.m.), and Sunday, Dec. 9 (4 to 6 p.m.).

JoAnne was a five-time winner of the U.S. Amateur (1957-60-62-66-68), a four-time member of the Curtis Cup team, and captured the LPGA Burdine's in Miami as an amateur. But husband, Don, noticed something special about her golf game in 1970 and suggested she turn professional. This, JoAnne had not considered very much prior to his comments. Furthermore, she didn't need the money, because Don is a successful business man.

She did need the competition, however.

"I confessed to him that I was getting stale and bored. He thought I was wasting my talents as an amateur and turning pro would revive my interest in golf."

Kiki He Has Potential

Quick! Name a member of this year's UCLA basketball team. Stumped you, didn't it? Well, don't feel alone. Only faithful alumni of West Coast fans could probably name more than two or three of the Bruin players.

In the past, players such as Kareem Jabbar, Bill Walton, Jamaal Wilkes, Sydney Wikes and Curtis Rowe established possibly the greatest collegiate dynasty of all time at the West Los Angeles campus.

Now magician John Wooden — the ultimate Wizard of Westwood — has taken his act into television commentary, leaving the once-unparalleled program on unsteady ground. But a new coach, along with an enthusiastic, talented group of recruits may bring the UCLA team back to prominence.

The UCLA Bruins take on another traditionally strong basketball team — DePaul University — when NBC-TV broadcasts the intra-mural battle Saturday, Dec. 15 (3:30 p.m.).

The Bruins won just about every NCAA team record, including most victories in a row, most championships and the highest winning percentage in the nation for one coach. The unfortunate thing is that replacing a legend like Wooden has been predictably difficult. Almost impossible, you might say.

UCLA fans, who've always had a fickle nature about them, are sure to be rough on new coach Larry Brown, who did something quite unusual when he quit the professional Denver Nuggets to take the Westwood job.

Here's hoping he doesn't have the same difficulties that plagued his two predecessors, Gene Bartow and Gary Cunningham.

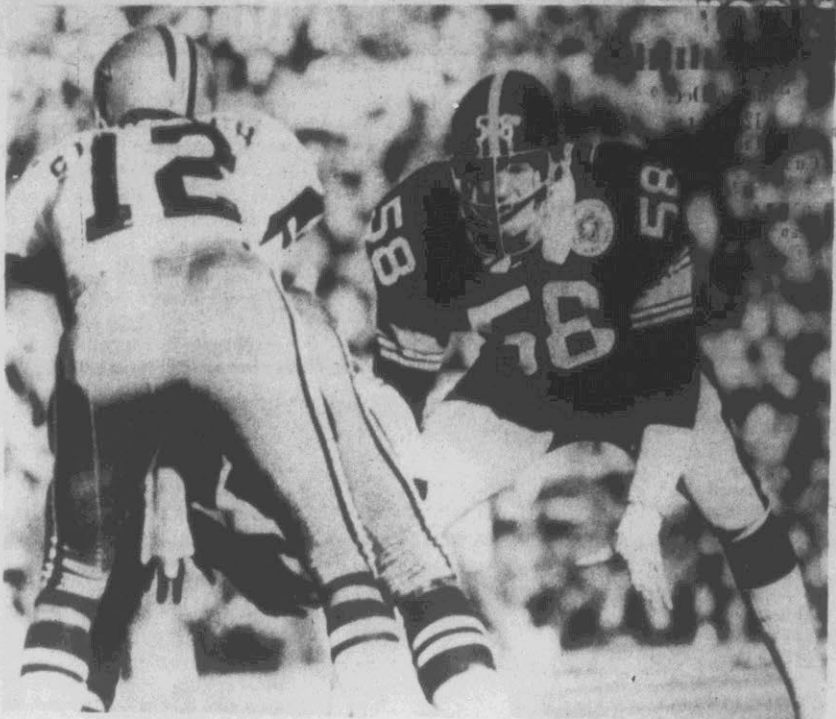

There are no Jabbars or Waltons for Brown to work with. But he does have a good group of quality athletes who could really begin to jell as the season wears on.

One of these potential stars is 6-8 senior forward Kiki Vandeweghe, who averaged better than 14 points and six rebounds per game last season. It's been said that it's difficult to guard Vandeweghe as it is to spell his name.

Also returning are centers Gig Sims and Darrell Alums, as well as sophs Tyren Nauils and 6-6 Mike Sanders.

SEASON OPENER: Kiki Vandeweghe (No. 55), the top returning scorer for PAC-10 power UCLA, will lead the Bruins into action when they clash with inter-sectional rival DePaul in the first of 13 nationally televised 1979-80 regular season games on NBC Saturday, Dec. 15 (3:30-5:30 p.m.).

JACK LAMBERT is the heart and soul of the superb Pittsburgh Steeler defense. At the still-tender age of 28, the Penn State grad may be the finest linebacker in the NFL. The Steelers face the Houston Oilers in a contest that may decide the champion of the AFC West on ABC's Monday Night Football, Dec. 10 at 9 p.m.

'It Worked, Didn't'

The Pittsburgh Steelers chose Jack Lambert with only five seconds remaining of their allotted time in the 1974 collegiate draft. As soon as the Penn State sensation was chosen, he made it clear to the Pittsburgh coaching staff that he wanted to start as a rookie.

Lambert showed his dedication from the beginning of training camp. And defensive coach Jack Widenhofer hasn't forgotten. "He asked a lot of questions, watched a lot of films. It took everybody else only one training camp scrimmage to catch on to the fact that he was something special. He gained everybody's respect with his aggressive hitting and his dedication."

The rest, as the cliché goes, is history.

The Super Bowl champion Steelers face an important game when they tangle with the Houston Oilers on ABC's "Monday Night Football" Dec. 10 (9 p.m.). These teams, possibly the most talented in the entire league, are locked in a rugged battle for the championship in the AFC East.

By now, everybody who hasn't been visiting the moon for the past five years knows that Lambert is one of the most feared hitters in the NFL. His very name conjures up thoughts of broken helmets and injured running backs.

He is definitely the heart of the Steeler defense, which some consider without peer in the history of the National Football League. Lambert has received virtually every honor the pro ranks can bestow; Defensive Rookie of the Year in 1974, All-Pro for the last three seasons, and NFL Defensive Player of the Year in 1976.

He's also led his team in tackles for five consecutive seasons and was in on 12 tackles in last year's Super Bowl victory over the Dallas Cowboys. He also holds the Steeler season record for fumble recoveries with six in 1976 and picked off 11 career passes. Obviously, Lambert has a nose for the ball.

And all of this comes from one of the lightest linebackers in the league at 220 pounds. What he doesn't possess in bulk, he more than makes up for with tremendous upper body strength and great range.

Before last year's Super Bowl, several Cowboys, including the now-departed Thomas Henderson, decided they could intimidate the Steelers with highly inflammable rhetoric. Lambert, for one, wasn't buying.

"Normally, I let my feelings be known only by actions instead of words," he spouted. "Football is a game of contact. It's no place for the weak. I believe players should release their emotions on the field, not through words.

"But I did get us a little stirred up by talking to the team before the Super Bowl," he recalls with a grin. "It worked, didn't it?"

Powerful Drama

"The Gift," a sensitive, powerful adaptation of Pete Hamill's novel of the same name, is being presented by CBS-TV Saturday, Dec. 15 (9 to 11 p.m.). The drama is about a young Brooklyn man in the early 1950's who comes home from the Navy on Christmas leave. Once there, he is confronted by his boyhood world of four-story tenements, neon-light bars, old songs, deep hurts and deeper love.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR FREDERICK R. SCROGGIN, M.D., president, National Wildlife Federation

What strides did your organization make in the last generation, and what are your hopes for the next? — S.G., Albany, N.Y.

● In the last generation, millions of Americans took clean air and water for granted and thought our forests and mineral resources were inexhaustible. We realized the need to conserve those resources for succeeding generations and worked through educational means to awaken the general public to that fact. We initiated an annual National Wildlife Conservation: It's for our heirs.

Week, spoke out for national resources legislation in the U.S. Congress and state legislatures and pursued legal remedies to tough problems. We played a major role in securing the passage of environmental protection laws; now we must make those laws work for the benefit of all.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Ann Miller's book on reincarnation based on personal experiences? — H.L., Great Falls, Mont.

● Ann was bowled over when we checked with her. She's not writing any book right now. The darling of more than 50 movie musicals has just about gotten over all the hard work involved with her last one, the autobiographical Miller's High Life in 1972. All her time and energy are now channeled into her current show, the Broadway hit, Sugar Babies. But she is a staunch believer in reincarnation. She goes as far as saying that prior to this one, she had lived many lives: "I know I was Egyptian once. I have had many visions of living in Egypt. I was also French and Chinese. I sometimes think I am more Oriental than American." Does she think she will have more lives after this one? "Definitely," said Ann. "I'll come back and haunt everyone. No, not everyone. Only those who deserve it!"

Queen of the Nile? Or just old haunts?

FOR TOM LANDRY, head coach, Dallas Cowboys

Do you think that the single wing and short punt formations may ever come back? — Paul Marschalk, Pierre, S. D.

● Of course it's possible to use the short punt formation, but I do not feel that it would be effective. The last team that I recall using the single wing attack was the Pittsburgh Steelers, who gave up the formation in the early 50's. The difficulty that they had was in the number of injuries sustained. There is not much deception in this particular formation, and the backs are subject to a great amount of pressure.

FOR AUDRA LINDLEY, star of ABC-TV's The Ropers

Isn't it unreal for you to play a character who has to beg her husband for attention, in light of today's liberated women? — C.E., Barclay, Muskegon, Mich.

● The show's a comedy and doesn't necessarily mirror all marriages, or, in fact, any marriage. I feel as liberated as any liberated woman. But I am sure that many married women might feel a certain kinship to Helen Roper. Not all women have been liberated, and there are some who enjoy their own particular status quo and don't feel the need to be liberated.

FOR OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN, recording star, actress

Is it true your career was just a lucky accident? — P.B., Eau Claire, Wis.

● No. My dad's record collection was in the thousands — mostly classical, but he used to give me Tennessee Ernie Ford records, which sparked my interest in singing. In Australia, three friends and I formed The Sol Four. Our group didn't last too long because it interfered with our schooling. By then, I'd already decided. I quit school, got a job in a coffee house, which led to more dates.

FOR REP. HENRY S. REUSS (D.-Wis.), chairman, Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs

Would wage and price controls remedy our current inflation? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● Controls may be useful when inflation is due to too much money chasing too few goods. That is not the basic problem now. Today's inflation is caused more by outmoded policies in food, energy, health care, transportation and housing that drive up prices. Our economic structure is where we should be concentrating our efforts.

FOR BEL KAUFMAN, author of Love, etc.

Was the "cast" in your book a figment of your imagination, or were the characters inspired by fact? — W.P., Boise, Idaho

● "I appear on page 230 of your book, but I'm more on the stout side," writes a reader. That's recognition, identification, involvement in the book. When I'm asked if my characters are factual, it's a great compliment, for it means the characters appear to be real, which is exactly my intention. My characters are partly composites, partly invented.

FOR PAUL DOOLEY, star of Breaking Away

How do you feel about fathers who find it hard to express affection (the way you did in the movie); and did you pattern your characterization after your own father? — M.J., Parkersburg, W.Va.

● I feel sorry for such men. There are so many dads (my own included) who find it hard to express their real feelings. They may think it makes them look "soft" or detracts from their authority. If only they realized that it doesn't. I drew a lot of the character from my father. I used many of his expressions.

PRO Senator Ernest F. Hollings (D.-S.C.)

Yes! SALT II capped the U.S. arms race but not the Soviet Union's. Over the past 10 years, we have decreased defense expenditures by 20 percent, but the Soviet Union increased its by 25 percent, outspending us by $100 billion. They have built a stronger navy, air force, army; and today surpass our strategic nuclear forces. Our supposedly mobile army is 60,000 vehicles short. Requiring 600 ships to cover both oceans, our Navy has 398. Many Air Force planes are older than the pilots. We can equip only one of our three Marine amphibious assault divisions. The volunteer army shortfalls our manpower needs, and we have only one-third of the ammunition necessary for an alert. We are caught with our defenses down.

PRO AND CON

Does Our National Defense Require a Major Increase in Spending?

CON Senator George McGovern (D.-S.D.)

I support a strong national defense. In 1979 I voted to increase military spending for NATO. But there is no need for big new increases. First, factories are backlogged; more money won't get the ships and planes out any faster. Second, spending more money, for example, on military pensions, doesn't create more military power. Third, pouring tax funds into outdated military strategy is wasteful — the new $2 billion carrier is a sitting duck in wartime. Fourth, military spending is not a substitute for an effective foreign policy. Setbacks in Iran, Angola and Nicaragua occurred because of policy mistakes, not military weakness. Finally, the military budget is inflationary and tax-consuming. The Pentagon can spend its funds more efficiently without troubling our economy by new spending.

Escaping Depression

The holidays are supposed to be a time for celebration. But if you're depressed at this time of year, the lows seem lower, the blues bluer. You can, however, escape these feelings.

By Gloria Hochman

Though her husband died over a year ago, Jane, 51, is still despondent. She can't sleep at night and doesn't want to get out of bed in the morning. Every decision, even choosing the clothes she will wear, overwhelms her. "I can't wait until work is over each day so I can get into bed and crawl under the covers," Jane admits. Her daughter has asked Jane to visit for the holidays, but she has no desire to see anyone.

Bill, 38, was called a "boy wonder" when he was young. He was graduated from college in the top 5 percent of his class, and within seven years, became president of a company. Six months ago, when the company merged with another firm, Bill was fired. While he still struggles to maintain his traditional "swagger," he is gloomy all of the time and has started taking sleeping pills at night.

Dolores, a 40-year-old Philadelphia woman with three children, was stunned when her husband of 19 years moved out of the house several months ago to live with a younger woman in the neighborhood. Her anger dissolved into despair, and she has been listless and reclusive. She wears no makeup and her dresses are often stained. "I am really a mess," she says. "No wonder Paul left me." She dreads the thought of Christmas without her husband.

Dolores, Jane and Bill are suffering from the country's number-one mental malady — depression. They are only three of an estimated eight million people a year who seek treatment for their melancholy. No one knows how many others suffer silently.

Psychiatrists report that depression can be particularly intense around the Christmas holidays. If you've been feeling spindled, you're suddenly in direct contrast to all the festivity around you. Everything says, "be jolly," but you feel miserable, lonely. The result is an incredible sense of isolation.

Why do so many people suffer from depression? No one knows for sure, but there seems to be increasing agreement among psychiatrists and mental health workers that some people are genetically predisposed to depression, just as others are vulnerable to heart disease and certain forms of cancer. When life stress becomes overwhelming, they succumb to debilitating depression.

Of course all of us feel down from time to time. "It is normal for everyone to experience 'the blues' occasionally or to feel fatigued and unhappy for reasonable periods of time," explains Dr. O. Spurgeon English, a Penn Valley, Pa., psychiatrist. "However, when it becomes persistent and results in the inability to function, it is time to take a serious look."

Signs of serious depression may include: feelings of intense despair accompanied by loss of touch with reality; feelings of hopelessness; thoughts of suicide; loss of appetite; insomnia; inability to make decisions; loss of interest in other people; prolonged carelessness about appearance and general lethargy.

Some experts think that depression is a symptom of our culture and has a lot to do with changing values that are confusing and intimidating. Dr. English blames our rootless society. "We are living in an age where family life has eroded," he explains. "People move frequently or they get involved with their own things. Often, they lose touch with their families, which have always been the most significant and reliable support during times of stress."

More women than men are diagnosed as depressed, and some explanations suggest that women are just more likely to go for help when they are not feeling well. Even the options offered by the women's movement send many females into a tailspin as they wrestle with changes in women's roles.

For both men and women, change figures heavily in precipitating depression. Studies indicate that events such as the death of a loved one, a move to a different city, a new job, departure of a child for college, a divorce or loss of a job are often triggers. And while it is expected that everyone will go through periods of mourning or despondency, prolonged sadness marked by hopelessness and self-disdain is cause for concern.

In the early stages of depression, it's often possible to dig yourself out of the dumps. Psychologists recommend that you force yourself to get up in the morning, get dressed and get moving. Call a friend and do something together that you enjoy. It's important, as well, to raise your level of self-esteem — so do things that you're good at and that will make you feel proud. Physical activity — sports, exercise — can accomplish wonders. But if nothing helps and depression continues, you must seek a doctor's help.

Dr. Aaron T. Beck, who heads the Center for Cognitive Therapy (also known as the Mood Clinic) of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, has devised an "inventory" from which he asks patients to select sentences that describe their feelings during the previous week. Choices include: "I do not feel sad; I feel sad; I am sad all the time and I can't snap out of it; I am so sad that I can't stand it." Answers to his 21 questions help Dr. Beck determine the degree of depression.

There are three basic ways to treat depression: through some form of psychotherapy, through psychotropic therapy (drugs or electroshock treatments) or through nutritional therapy (megavitamins and diet changes). Psychoanalysis has been dismissed by many practitioners because it takes too long to achieve results.

Dr. Beck and his associates at Philadelphia's Mood Clinic believe in "cognitive therapy," a method of encouraging the depressed person to do things which will raise his or her self-esteem and to keep doing them until the depression has lifted. Its goals are to correct a person's distorted ideas and attitudes.

"We believe that it is not events that depress people, but their interpretation of those events," explains Dr. Richard C. Bedrosian, the clinic's clinical and research coordinator. "For instance, one woman, who came to us after her husband left her for another woman, felt that life had no meaning for her, that she would never enjoy herself again, never love again, never be attractive to anyone."

"I didn't take her assertions at face value. We talked about the kind of person her husband was, and she soon acknowledged that he had a number of problems that had always bothered her. After a while, she began to see his leaving as an index of his immaturity rather than hers."

The plan for her included seeing more people and participating in more activities. "The more she did, the better she started to feel about herself," says Dr. Bedrosian. This woman's therapy was completed in four-and-a-half months.

Research conducted by the Mood Clinic staff indicates that cognitive therapy combats depression more effectively than drugs. Yet, many practitioners prefer to give their patients antidepressant medications, such as Elevil, Tofranil and lithium carbonate, which they feel produce results that are quick and reliable. Drugs work by altering brain chemistry. Physicians warn, however, that drug use must be prescribed and carefully monitored by a physician.

A well-known treatment for depression that has become less acceptable in recent years is electroconvulsive therapy — involving the transmission of bolts of electric current to the brain through electrodes that are placed above the person's ears. These "shock treatments" can often clear depression in as few as four brief sessions. Patients, however, often complain of disorientation following treatment, memory loss (which is regained), and there are reports of permanent psychological damage.

Still another approach, which is highly controversial but which is gaining acceptance, is nutritional therapy or orthomolecular medicine. The Brain Bio Center in Princeton, N.J., reports significant benefits to 85 to 90 percent of its patients. Proponents of this treatment believe that depression results from a chemical imbalance in the brain that can be corrected through vitamins and diet changes.

Each treatment method has its devoted enthusiasts. And it is known that some persons are more responsive to one form of therapy than another. But there is agreement that dependable help is available. People who are depressed do not have to stay that way.

RAM TOUGH DODGE TRUCKS

FOR 1980, DODGE PICKUPS GO BEYOND "TOUGH."

Ram Tough means carbon steel frames with 7 crossmembers.

More than Ford or Chevy.

Our frames are tough enough to flex on rough roads and come back for more. We use 7 carbon steel crossmembers. Compare that to Ford's 6 and Chevy's 5.

The Ram Tough Dodge frame: 7 carbon-steel crossmembers. More than Ford or Chevy.

Ram Tough means galvanized steel for critical area rust protection.

More than Ford or Chevy.

Every 8-ft. Sweptline Dodge Pickup has 160 sq. ft. of galvanized steel. And unlike Ford or Chevy, we weld our Sweptline boxes to cross sill brackets. Result? No rust-prone bolt holes.

Ram Tough means bigger maximum payloads.

More than Ford or Chevy.

By design, Dodge Pickups have low curb weight and high Gross Vehicle Weight. That means more useful load-carrying capabilities than Ford or Chevy.

What's more, Dodge 8-foot boxes have more load area than Ford or Chevy, so you can carry bulkier cargo.

The Ram Tough Dodge payload payoff: up to 5575 lbs. maximum payload. More than Ford or Chevy.

Dodge uses rugged double-wall construction in its cabs and in its boxes. And Dodge gives you more cab-box combinations to choose from. You can get 3 cabs—Conventional, Club or Crew—with either a 6½- or 8-foot Sweptline box. That's 6 ways to move passengers and cargo. Ford and Chevy only give you 4 each.

Even with these advantages, Dodge Pickups have competitive gas mileage ratings. The D150, with base 318 CID V-8 and standard manual 4-speed overdrive, gets 15 EPA est. mpg; 22 est. Hwy. mpg.*

If you prefer an automatic transmission, only Dodge can give you a proven 3-speed with lock-up torque converter that's more fuel-efficient at highway speeds than conventional fluid drives.

The 1980 Dodge Pickups. Engineered by Chrysler to go beyond what the others call "tough."

Engineered to be Ram Tough.

*EPA mpg number for comparisons. Your mileage may vary depending on speed, distance and weather. Est. Hwy. mpg probably to less. California estimates lower.

The Ultimate Football Quiz

By Eliot Kaplan

Way back on Oct. 3, 1920, the American Professional Football Association — the forerunner of today's National Football League — had its modest, muddy beginnings when the Dayton Triangles played the Columbus Panhandles, and the Rock Island Independents took on the Muncie Flyers.

In the six decades since, a lot of games have been played, and the ball has taken a lot of crazy bounces. Jim Marshall of the Minnesota Vikings lumbered the wrong way with the ball — all the way into his own end zone for a safety. Steve O'Neal of the Jets kicked a punt that went 98 yards. And during Super Bowl VII, Garo Yepremian, a friendly Cyprian tie-maker and placekicker, gave his Miami Dolphin teammates fits when he impersonated a quarterback.

How much do you know about pro football? Here are some formidable questions to challenge your bravado. But don't worry if you can't handle one or two: you can call for a fair catch and check the answers below.

And by the way, on that long-ago October Sunday, Dayton manhandled the Panhandles, 14-0, and the Rock Island line stymied Muncie, 45-0.

1. In 1969 Southern Cal's O.J. Simpson was the first player selected in the NFL draft (by the Buffalo Bills). The Philadelphia Eagles had the next pick. Whom did they select?

2. On the World Champion 1969 Jets, Broadway Joe Namath had a spectacular season throwing to all-time great receivers Don Maynard and George Sauer. Who played tight end on that team?

3. Who replaced the legendary Vince Lombardi as coach of the Green Bay Packers?

4. This man is one of the greatest quarterbacks of all time. Yet he also holds many NFL punting records, including most seasons leading the league, highest career average and highest season's average — a whopping 50.4 yards per kick. Name this classic triple threat.

5. Name the original eight AFL franchises when the league was founded in 1960. To make it extra tough, name both the cities and the team nicknames.

6. In the 1965 NFL Western Conference playoffs, the Baltimore Colts lost starting quarterback Johnny Unitas and backup Gary Cuozzo to injuries. But a gutsy running back stepped in as quarterback and performed valiantly against the Green Bay Packers, before finally losing, 13-10, in sudden death overtime. Can you name this last-minute replacement? Hint: He still holds the record for longest run from scrimmage in a Super Bowl game — 58 yards.

7. Who was coach of the Dallas Cowboys before Tom Landry?

8. This man played 12 games in right field for the New York Yankees in 1919 — the year before Babe Ruth arrived. He went on to become one of pro football's greatest legends. Name him.

9. George Blanda has scored the most career points in NFL history. Who's the second-most prolific scorer? Hint: He's still an active player.

10. Can you give the real full names of these famous NFL players?

Y.A. Tittle
O.J. Simpson
Johnny Blood
Red Grange
Big Daddy Lipscomb
Babe Parilli

Answers

1. Leroy Keyes, running back and defensive back from Purdue.
2. Pete Lammons, and he caught 32 passes in that championship season.
3. Phil Bengtson.
4. Sammy Baugh, the Washington Redskins hall of famer, who played from 1937 to 1952.
5. Boston Patriots, Buffalo Bills, Dallas Texans, Denver Broncos, Houston Oilers, Los Angeles Chargers, New York Titans and Oakland Raiders.
6. Tom Matte. Reading the plays off a hand around his wrist, he completed five of 12 passes for 40 yards and also ran for another 57 yards.
7. Nobody. Tom Landry has been the Cowboys' head honcho since the team was founded in 1960.
8. George "Papa Bear" Halas.
9. Jim Turner, placekicker for the New York Jets.
10. Yelberton Abraham; Orenthal James; John McNally; Harold Eugene; Vito

Here's How It Works!

The "LIBERACE Deluxe Big Note Song Book" features oversized, easy-to-see notes. In addition, the name of the musical note is boldly printed over the note. For example, an E note is not only larger than on ordinary sheet music, but the letter 'E' appears on the note itself. There's no guesswork. No memorization.

The system works for the Piano, Organ, Guitar, Chord Organ and any instrument tuned to the key of C. The arrangements are full and lush, letting the music lover enjoy the ample richness of sound.

Christmas

Photographed at the Mission San Fernando in San Fernando, Calif. The mission was founded by Padre Fermin Lasuen in 1797, and is well known for The Bells of San Fernando, a 35-bell carillon. The bells ring hourly between 10 A.M. and 6 P.M., offering an ancient melody which was sung by the Indians.

From the gardens and groves of the Golden State, a sumptuous holiday dinner in the California manner:
1. Roast Turkey with Almond Dressing and Lemon-Brandy Glaze;
2. Avocado Sunburst Salad with Orange-Honey Dressing;
3. Walnut Stuffed Date Confections;
4. Chilled Lemon Soufflé;
5. Kiwi Sauce;
6. Mashed Yams in Lemon Boats;
7. Holiday Assorted Vegetable Relishes;
8. Black and Green Olives;
9. Sourdough bread;
10. Cheese and Fruit Tray.

ROAST TURKEY WITH ALMOND DRESSING AND LEMON-BRANDY
GLAZE

- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes, crushed
- 1 cup chopped whole almonds

- ½ cup chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon poultry seasoning
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 8 cups day-old bread cubes (½ whole wheat, ½ raisin or any combination)
- ½ cup orange juice
- ½ cup dry white wine
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 12-to 14 -lb. turkey, thawed if necessary
- Butter or margarine, melted
- Lemon-Brandy Glaze

1. Make dressing: melt butter in large saucepot; saute onions and celery with bouillon cubes. Stir in almonds, parsley, poultry seasoning and pepper. Add bread cubes; toss lightly. Add orange juice, wine and eggs; toss just until mixed.
2. Remove neck and giblets from body cavity. Rinse and drain well.
3. Fill neck cavity with small amount of Almond Dressing; (continued)

fasten skin back with skewers. Fill body cavity loosely with remaining dressing. Tie legs together with string. It is not necessary to close body cavity with skewers or string. Twist wing tips under back.

4. Place turkey, breast-side-up, on rack in roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer deep into inside thigh muscle. Brush turkey well with melted butter.

5. Protect skin of neck cavity, wing tips and leg bones from over-browning by covering with small pieces of foil.

6. Roast, uncovered, at 325°F. As turkey becomes light-golden brown (after about 1½ to 2 hours), cover turkey loosely with "tent" of foil.

7. Continue roasting for a total of 20 to 22 minutes per pound or until 180° to 185°F, on meat thermometer (12-pound turkey approx. 4 to 4½-hour hours; 14-pound approx. 4½ to 5 hours). If a thermometer is not used, the meaty (thickest) part of the drumstick should feel very soft and twist easily at the joint.

8. As turkey roasts, brush occasionally with melted butter (and accumulated drippings).

9. Remove skewers and string. Let cooked turkey stand 20 minutes before carving.

10. To serve turkey as photographed: Place cooked turkey on large serving platter. Garnish platter with endive or parsley and Lemon Boats* filled with whipped yams (use pastry tube, if desired). Serve with Lemon-Brandy Glaze. Makes 8 plus servings.

*To make Lemon Boats: cut large lemons in half lengthwise. Carefully ream out juice; reserve. Scrape shells "clean" with spoon.

Note: Lemon Boats may be made ahead and frozen until ready to use. Reserved lemon juice can be used in favorite recipes or frozen for later use.

LEMON-BRANDY GLAZE

- 1 lemon
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons honey
- ¼ cup brandy (optional)

1. With vegetable parer, remove outer yellow part of lemon peel only; cut into thin slivers. Cut lemon in half; juice.

2. In small saucepan, melt butter. Add lemon peel, juice and honey; simmer 5 minutes. Spoon over cooked turkey.

3. To flambé, if desired, in large ladle or butter warmer, heat brandy; ignite. Slowly pour over turkey. Makes about ½ cup

AVOCADO SUNBURST SALAD WITH ORANGE-HONEY DRESSING

- 1 cup vegetable oil
- 1 tablespoon grated orange peel
- ¾ cup orange juice
- ½ cup honey
- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame seed
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 large head iceberg lettuce, rinsed, cored and chilled
- 3 oranges, peeled, cut into cartwheels
- 1 large avocado, peeled, thinly sliced lengthwise

1. In jar with lid, combine all dressing ingredients: oil, orange peel, orange juice, honey, sesame seed, lemon juice, paprika and salt; chill. Shake well before serving.

Blue Diamond® Almonds make great stocking stuffers!

2. Remove large outer leaves of lettuce to line salad bowl. Tear remaining lettuce; add to bowl.

3. Overlap slices of oranges and avocado in circle on lettuce. Chill. Serve with dressing.

Makes 6 to 8 servings
(2 cups dressing)

CHILLED LEMON SOUFFLE WITH KIWI OR PERSIMMON SAUCE

1½ envelopes unflavored gelatin
½ cup fresh-squeezed lemon juice
1 cup sugar
Grated peel of 2 fresh lemons
8 egg whites
½ cups whipping cream, whipped
California Kiwi or Persimmon Sauce*

1. In small saucepan, soften gelatin in lemon juice. Add ½ cup sugar and lemon peel.
2. Stir over low heat until gelatin and sugar are dissolved.
3. Chill until consistency of unbeaten egg whites (about 10 to 15 minutes).
4. Meanwhile, attach collar to 1-quart soufflé dish with foil or waxed paper. (Lightly oil inside of foil collar.)
5. Beat egg whites until foamy; gradually add remaining ½ cup sugar, beating until soft peaks form.
6. Gently fold gelatin mixture and whipped cream into beaten egg whites. Spoon into prepared dish.
7. Chill 6 hours or overnight. Remove collar before serving.
8. Garnish with lemon cartwheel and kiwi slices, if desired. Serve with California Kiwi or Persimmon Sauce.

Makes 8 servings

CALIFORNIA KIWI OR PERSIMMON SAUCE

3 kiwis peeled, cut in chunks
Grated peel and juice of ½ lemon
1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted
Generous dash ground nutmeg
Sugar or honey to taste

1. In blender, purée kiwis until smooth. In bowl, combine puréed kiwis and remaining ingredients. Sweeten to taste.

Makes about 1¼ cups sauce

Variation: Substitute 3 persimmons, peeled, seeded, for kiwis. Proceed as above. Thin with orange juice, if necessary.

Makes about 1¼ cups sauce

WALNUT-STUFFED DATE CONFECTIONS

- 4 dozen dates
- 2½ cups confectioners' sugar
- ½ cup sweetened condensed milk
- Grated peel of 1 fresh lemon
- ½ cup finely chopped walnuts
- ¼ cup finely chopped dried apricots
- Walnut quarters or halves (optional)

1. To prepare dates for stuffing, cut each along one side; spread apart.

2. In bowl, combine sugar, milk and lemon peel (mixture will be stiff). Stir in chopped walnuts and apricots.
3. Using additional confectioners' sugar to dust hands, shape mixture into small balls (approx. ¾-inch); stuff into prepared dates. Top each with walnut quarter or half.
4. Arrange on serving platter as desired. May also be packed into boxes, attractively wrapped and given as gifts.

Saffron Bread buns, pinch off small pieces of the dough and shape into ½-inch wide strips; about 8 inches long.

9. Put two strips together side by side and curl the ends around, snaillike.

10. Stick a raisin into each curl. Let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk.

11. Brush lightly with beaten egg and water and bake the loaves in preheated 325°F. oven for 15 to 20 minutes.

Makes about 12 rolls

GLOGG

- 1 teaspoon crushed cardamom seeds
- 5 cinnamon sticks
- 20 cloves
- ½ cup vodka
- 1 bottle (4/5 quart) dry red wine

6. Turn dough out onto pastry board and knead well for 8 minutes.

7. Divide dough and shape into rolls, loaves or coffeecakes.

8. To make the special Lucia

½ cup firmly packed brown sugar

1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract

1 peel from orange

1 piece fresh ginger root or

¼ teaspoon ground ginger

Whole unblanched almonds

Raisins

1. Place cardamom, cinnamon and cloves in glass jar. Pour in vodka; cap securely. Leave overnight to allow flavors to permeate.

2. Next day, strain vodka into large pan; add wine.

3. Add sugar, vanilla, orange peel, ginger, almonds and raisins. Heat, but do not bring to a boil.

4. Serve hot with ladle into cups or heatproof glasses. Allow 4 almonds and about 10 raisins per serving.

A Swedish St. Lucia Day Breakfast

This Thursday, December 13, is Lucia Day. The traditional Swedish celebration is in honor of the winter solstice.

Because the night of December 12th-13th is the longest of the year, the original St. Lucia ceremonies were performed to coax the sun back after this night. For centuries, tradition has it that St. Lucia is identified with the return of light.

According to legend, Lucia was condemned to die a martyr's death at the stake about A.D. 300. The flames did not touch her, and she had to be killed by the slash of a sword.

It is the custom in Swedish homes for the eldest daughter to get up at dawn on December 13th, ceremoniously dress in a flowing white robe and place a wreath of lingonberry leaves with four candles in it on her head. The radiant girl will then serve the household breakfast to the others in their beds, starting with her parents.

The traditional St. Lucia breakfast is saffron bread (saffrons brod), the decorative curled buns, and coffee.

This year, Scandinavian Airlines passengers on flights during the day of December 13th will be treated to the St. Lucia specialties. They will be served saffron buns, sometimes called lussekatters or light cakes, gingerbread cookies (pepparkakor), cups of the renowned hot spiced wine punch, glogg, and steamingly fragrant coffee. A warm, festive way to continue a tradition, don't you agree?

SAS Master Chef Gosta Pettersson shares the following Lucia Day recipes with FAMILY WEEKLY. Of course these foods would be good not only on Lucia Day but throughout the holiday and winter season.

SAFFRON BREAD

- 8 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 cups milk
- 1 pkg. (¼ oz.) active dry yeast
- ¼ cup warm water
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon saffron leaves, crumbled
- 1 egg
- 6 cups (approximately 2 lbs.) unenriched all-purpose flour
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 1 tablespoon water

Raisins

1. In medium saucepan, melt butter; remove from heat. Stir in milk.
2. Dissolve yeast in water, stirring to dissolve; add to milk mixture. Add salt, sugar and saffron to yeast combination; pour into a large, warm mixing bowl.
3. Add egg to yeast mixture, beating until well blended.
4. Add flour a little at a time and beat dough hard until smooth and glossy.
5. Cover dough and leave to rise 10 minutes in the mixing bowl.

PICKPOCKETS

How to Guard Against Them

Christmas is a time of giving — but it's a time of taking, too. The Christmas season is no holiday for pickpockets and purse snatchers. This is the time of year when they work harder than ever, counting on the bustle of holiday crowds, the extended store hours, the crammed buses and subways and the tired, package-laden people to help them to help themselves.

In San Francisco, for instance, Police Inspector Michael Truman points out that pick-pocketing and purse-snatching reach a peak at Christmas.

How do you make sure a pickpocket doesn't spoil your holiday? Prevention is the best protection. Before you make out your own shopping list, check this list as well.

Before You Shop

• Remove any unnecessary credit cards from your wallet and carry only those you think you'll need that day. If you have more than $15 or $20 in cash, separate the bills. Place half in your billfold; secure the rest in an inner jacket pocket or a zippered section of your purse. It's a good idea, too, to arrange the bills by denomination: first the 10's, then the 5's and 1's, for quick and sure identification.

• Don't bring along your checkbook. Slip a couple of blank checks into your wallet instead. Then if your purse is stolen, you won't lose all your checks.

While You Shop

• If you use a shoulder bag, walk with one hand resting upon it. The flap closure of the bag should always be worn toward your body.

• If you carry your wallet in your trousers, keep it in a front pocket rather than a hip one. Or safeguard it, instead, in the breast pocket of a jacket or coat. It's wiser, too, to always insert the billfold horizontally, not vertically, as it will fit more securely.

• Never hang your bag on the back of a chair in a restaurant. Keep it in your lap, or, if it's bulky, between your feet.

• A purse left in a grocery cart, even for a moment says, "Take me." Take it with you instead.

• Sad to say, thefts in churches are becoming commonplace. Always keep an eye on your belongings.

• One common scene of purse-snatching is the ladies' room. Watch your bag while you wash your hands. When you're in the stall, hang your bag on the lower and smaller arm of the hook on the door. If possible, put your coat over it. Then people can't reach over the door and help themselves (which is very common). If there's no hook, put your bag on the floor between your feet. The thief who operates in restrooms often uses a cane to sneak under a door or partition and latches onto a handbag before the surprised victim can unlatch the door.

Never leave your purse in a fitting room while you exchange one garment for another. A thief knows to look beneath that pile of clothes or a coat. Ask a salesperson for help, or be sure that your bag goes every place that you do.

• An open bag is an invitation. When paying for a purchase, close your pocketbook as soon as you can. Always keep it directly in front of you and rest one hand on it while signing the charge card. Return your wallet to the bottom of your bag when the transaction's over.

Home Again

• Check what you bought. Is everything there? Did you get what you paid for? Take a look at your wallet, too, and make certain that all charge cards came home with you. If not, notify the issuing store or bank immediately. Credit cards have a toll-free number you may call, usually between 8:30 A.M. and 9:00 P.M. Contact the credit department of an independent store directly.

THROUGH A CHILD'S EYES

I bought my little son a T-shirt with Number 1 written on it. I tried to explain that he was special by saying, "Look, David, you're number one. How do you like being number one?" He thought about this, a puzzled look crossed his face, and he replied plaintively, "It's not a very big number, Dad."

All About Christmas Trees

Beauty unto itself, the Christmas tree becomes personal with your decoration. Because it is — for weeks, anyhow — a part of your home décor, it deserves a reflection of your taste.

While most of us are accustomed to cut trees, why not consider a "living" tree this year — with the root ball still attached and sitting in a tub. It's small, but lovely, and can be planted outdoors later. Your children can watch it grow as they themselves do.

The traditional fir does not do well in a container, but small pine, spruce, cedar and cypress are good substitutes. English holly is sturdy and lends itself to decoration; it is a good tree for cold climates. In the South, a Burford holly does well, so does the Deodar cedar. Some of these trees in a tub can stay in their containers for a few years before transplanting.

If you do decide on a traditional cut tree, arrange it with its best limbs forward. If you still have a space that calls for a limb that isn't there, try some surgery: a cut from the back of the tree tied with florist wire to the limb above. Camouflage with tinsel and hanging baubles.

Whatever you choose, however, there are safety considerations. Here are a few:

Secure the Tree: Its stand should be heavy and broad enough to prevent tipping. You should consider tying the tree to the wall halfway up. If you have children — for whom trees can never be close enough — this is a must.

Lights: You have been cautioned endlessly about checking the wiring of stringed lights for a good reason: Defective wiring is hazardous. Never use candles on a tree, however lovely they are and however secure they seem.

Decoration: There's nothing wrong with variety-store tinsel and balls, and they make a fine background. But you should make your tree a personal credential. Depending upon their ages, your children can make decorations. It's personal and it's creative.

Making angels for the tree seems an excellent way to have your children (all ages) participate. From lightweight cardboard, cut wings — freehand — and cover with foil. Shape a cone of cardboard for the body and cover with foil. Use a Styrofoam ball for the head and tint the cheeks with rouge. Cut the mouth from pink paper and the eyes from blue. Put it all together with white glue. Use a long pencil or a straight wire to put the angel together. Force the pencil or wire through the head and down into the body. Pin wings on the back. Pipe cleaners make perfect arms; just cover them with foil for sleeves. For hair, use angel hair, and for the halo, a pipe cleaner covered in foil. There. You have a sweet little angel who'll enjoy her holiday with you.

Color — vivid color — is the compelling symbol at Christmastide. Reds and greens are the "official" holiday colors, but mix them well. Use red ribbon on green packages; green on red; gold ribbon here and there. Don't be afraid of lots of color throughout your rooms.

If you decide against a large tree and opt for several smaller ones, you'll have a world of inventive ways to decorate: a simple plant with touchup glitter for your dinner table; a poinsettia in the hall; a few balls and tinsel hanging from the ceiling; and over doorways, some mistletoe to invite a kiss.

Mary Martin Flyin' High at 66

By Isobel Silden

Her once close-cropped hair is now longer and snowy white. There are lines around her sparkling, dark brown eyes. Yet she still moves with the grace that made her flights in Peter Pan seem so real. At 66, Mary Martin is energetic, assured and obviously delighted that she had the chance to star in a recently filmed television movie titled Valentine — her first television movie in over two decades.

"They sent me the script for Valentine, and I started reading it at midnight," she says. "I read until 3, slept two hours, got up at 5, and read until I'd finished it." In conversation, her voice has a Texas drawl that disappears when she's on stage or in front of the cameras. "It was the first script I've wanted to do in years. I wanted to play my age and not sing."

The Weatherford, Texas, girl who first sang her way into America's heart with "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" has many memorable singing parts behind her. Who can forget her as Nellie Forbush in South Pacific, Maria, Baroness von Trapp in The Sound of Music, Annie Oakley in Annie Get Your Gun, and of course, the irrepressible Peter Pan?

"I won't say I'll never sing again," she hastens to add, "but I can't belt songs anymore. I had polyp surgery two years ago, and when my voice came back, I sounded as I did when I was 18."

Fortunately, her role in Valentine didn't call for a strong singing voice. Mary played Gracie Schwartz, a 71-year-old woman in the midst of a torrid love affair with a man (played by Jack Albertson) who lives in the same retirement home.

Physical passion at that age? Is this a role that Mary Martin can identify with?

"Not really," she admits, laughing. "I can't visualize having an affair at 71. I thought I didn't know anyone that old who could, and I said so to a friend. She admitted she is in such a situation. But I can't imagine it." She closes the subject gently.

Her long and happy marriage to theatrical producer Richard Halliday ended with his death in 1973, and Mary obviously feels that no one can replace him. It was then that she moved from Brazil, where she and her husband had lived for years, back to the United States. Since her return, she's been involved in numerous theatrical projects, and she's also designed a line of sheets and towels for a large textile company. She frequently leaves her Palm Springs, Calif., home to tour the country, speaking in department stores and offering advice on decorating with sheets and towels. In fact, she has filled her days so full of varied activities that her good friend and confidante, Ben Washer, calls her "Airport Annie."

But of all her roles, Peter Pan is the one that made Mary Martin a household name. "The still photographer on the set of Valentine told me that I owe his folks a lamp and three bottles of Scotch," she remarks with a chuckle. "He'd seen me in Peter Pan, then tried to fly off the couch, and that's what he'd broken. But I made a lasting impression on him; now he's a glider pilot." And she bursts into laughter. Mary Martin seems to be happy most of the time. What is it that makes her happy?

"Everything," she says promptly. "I'm just happy. Happiness is all inside. Sometimes, I do go to the bottom. Then I stay in bed and read a lot — especially Emmett Fox. He says you can take a rose apart and take off each petal carefully. You will have great knowledge, but no rose."

Mary takes this saying to heart, particularly when she's working. "If I analyze what I'm doing, I can't do it. What motivates me are goals. All my life, there was the theater, the show. There was always the deadline of a goal."

One of Mary's many goals is to avoid routine and boredom. "My philosophy has always been change," she says excitedly. "Constant change. Don't get stuck, or into a routine."

"I change my clothes seven times a day, just for the change," she continues. "Only my son Larry (Larry Hagman, who stars in the TV series Dallas) with his collection of hats, changes those more often than I do clothes," she says with a laugh.

During the filming of Valentine, Mary's trailer-dressing room was located in a Venice beach parking lot, adjacent to the California retirement home where most of Valentine's action took place. The experience gave Mary a rare chance to be with senior citizens, and she cites one sentence from the show's script that seems to sum up her philosophy about growing older: "Old people are just young people who have lived long."

Mary takes a similar attitude. "Nobody's old anymore if they don't want to be," she says laughing. "I'm stark mad about Saturday Night Fever — Beethoven's Fifth in disco. I can outdance any of my kids." RW

And you believe her.

It's a Snap to Look Great in Photos

Anybody can look good in pictures. See how relaxed this Teddy bear is. That's very important. And even though his clothes aren't the latest fashion, they're just right for him.

Bettmann Archive

By Linda Konner

Thanks to today's technology, taking pictures couldn't be easier. But for many of us, having our picture taken isn't so easy. Perhaps you're the type who feels awkward and uncomfortable when you're in front of a camera — and it shows in the finished product. The trick is to learn to relax. That's how people who aren't necessarily beautiful often look terrific in pictures. To show you how to do it, here are some tips from professional models and photographers. Follow these suggestions and your next photo session will be a snap:

- "Get into a good mood before you get in front of the camera," says Jane Mo-dean, who has modeled for magazines, print ads and TV commercials. "Think of something funny. Put yourself into a good mood by listening to music, talking to the person next to you, eating some ice cream! Doing something you enjoy beforehand helps release tension."

- "Relax," says George Barkentin, a photographer for many of the big fashion magazines. "If you're feeling too stiff at the time you're being photographed, postpone the session until you feel more comfortable. The experience isn't one that should instill fear in you. You should feel natural and relaxed."

- "Think beautiful," says Christina Ferrare, a top fashion model and cover girl. "When I'm modeling, I have private conversations with the camera. There are certain things you can tell yourself, little fantasy things, to make yourself think you are wonderful. For those few minutes, you believe it all — and it shows in the finished picture."

- "Clothes have a lot to do with the success of your picture," says Michael Metz, a male model who has also acted in TV movies and soap operas. "If a friend tells you he wants a photo of you for his wallet and you feel most comfortable wearing blue jeans and a T-shirt, wear them. During a shooting, if I'm given a choice of wearing one shirt or another, I pick the color I like better because I'll feel better in it. If you feel good in what you're wearing, you're halfway there."

- "Choose the right lighting," says Gordon Munro, another fashion photographer. "If the sun is shining straight down on you in the middle of a field, you may look terrible. You don't need a mirror to tell if the light is unflattering; if it looks bad on the people around you, it won't look good on you, either. During the first two and last two hours of the day — just after sunrise and just before sunset — are the best times to be photographed. These are the times when the light makes everything look nicest — including you."

- "Work with the person photographing you," says Michael Metz. "Talk to whoever is taking the shots; communication is important. Feel free to be creative with him, to make suggestions about which positions you feel most comfortable in."

- "Be animated," says Christina Ferrare. "Don't stand stiff, out in the open. Sitting is more relaxing, or lean against something, like a wall or a tree." She also suggests using a "prop" — a dog to cuddle, a book, a glass — to help relax you and distract you from the camera. But don't try to "act" like you're doing something. "You'd have to be Laurence Olivier to get away with it," warns Munro.

- Smile? "Not necessarily," says Munro. "Many people look better when they don't. Look in the mirror to see if you're one of them."

- "Be photographed often," says Metz. "Ask yourself: why don't I like being photographed? Maybe you feel you're too fat or too unattractive or that you simply can't have a good picture taken. But it's like being thrown from a horse: You should just get up and get back on. Be bold about having your picture taken. Get a roll of film and ask a friend to take a bunch of shots. The more time you spend in front of the camera, the more you'll like it."

Give a Grandparent For Christmas

By Marilyn Murray Willison

Years ago, Margaret Mead advised that the best gift parents could give their children was grandparents. Unfortunately, the facts of life present in today's society make it difficult for the average American family to follow her advice. Factors, such as divorce and remarriage, radical shifts in values and a "mobile society" — in which families move every two to three years — combine to create an atmosphere in which many children's exposure to their grandparents is limited to occasional holiday gatherings or infrequent long-distance phone conversations. The traditional extended family has been replaced by the nuclear family — father, mother, offspring.

The tragedy of this segregated pattern is that it hurts both the young and the old. Psychologists are quick to point out that children who never have an opportunity to know, love and accept old people will find it particularly difficult to deal with their own aging process. The trend of the past — to isolate ourselves from the old, the sick, the poor — is coming under increasing fire from experts.

Realizing this, educators and social workers are beginning to rally round a new program designed to get young and old together. The plan has many names, but the general idea is a volunteer "surrogate grandparent" program — and it has become a smashing success.

From metropolitan areas like Chicago, Pittsburgh and Seattle down to little towns like Montrose, Calif., and Amelia, Ohio, the movement works to add richness to the lives of both young and old participants. One youngster who participates says, "Our 'grandmother' was adopted by our class at school, and we all love her. She's 65 years old, but she remembers all of our names and birthdays just like a real grandma would. I always look forward to her visits on Friday mornings — the whole class does — even the kids who have real grandmas."

Enthusiastic school officials have entered senior-citizens centers to recruit "grandparent" volunteers. Not only do the programs help alleviate the loneliness experienced by senior citizens, but students' grades have been seen to improve when there is a "loving older person" in the classroom. The "grandparents," who do not take the place of teachers' aides or room mothers, perform simple tasks: listening to a child read, helping with a program, boosting faltering self-confidence or occasionally sharing a giggle or two. One 70-year-old grandfather — with eight grandchildren of his own — helps his students understand math symbols. School personnel admit that many elderly persons have the right blend of tolerance and experience that makes them ideal teachers. And whether it is speech therapy or spelling or learning bygone skills like whittling or tating, the old have not only the skills and the ability to teach but also the free time — something today's parents often find in short supply.

While most "surrogate grandparent" programs involve the elderly visiting classrooms, several schools, like Seattle's Alternative Elementary School, have experimented with different formats. Youngsters travel to the adopted grandparent's home on a regular basis, or if that is too cumbersome, a pen-pal arrangement is established. One woman, who had been adopted by a teen-age girls club, said, "All my family lives on the other side of the country, and when people get old they often don't have too many friends. I never expected a group of youngsters to care about me the way these girls do — it's such a good feeling."

As evidence of how far-reaching the elderly's desire to share has become, an entire TV system has been initiated that allows senior citizens to teach skills and share ideas with young people. Grants from businesses, the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities provide split-screen transmission and open telephone lines for debates, folklore programs and lessons on soon-to-be-extinct skills like paperquilling. The tapes can then be purchased and shown to local groups and classrooms. Ninety-one percent of the participants agreed that after they became involved in the project they felt much better about themselves. Both the young people and the old admitted that they changed their first impression about the other group. The students soon grew to look forward to their contact with the senior citizens.

Whether young or old people share their feelings in a classroom, a nursing home or on a TV screen, the results seem to be the same: Contact with a different generation helps teach how to support, care for and respect people who are separated only by birthdays. As one adopted grandmother put it, "I now know that you don't have to fear age. I just can't think of me as 75."

To find out if getting involved with youngsters is the best rejuvenating tonic available, just ask any volunteer grandparent. Or better yet, ask their adopted grandchildren!

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Computerized Future

Computers have changed countless areas of our lives, although few people actually ever come into contact with any that are more advanced than a pocket calculator. However, as technology becomes more precise, computers are getting smaller, and manufacturers estimate that by 1985 several million homes will have at least one personal computer.

"Within 10 or 15 years, some degree of computer efficiency will be necessary in order for people to be employable," explains Joseph Garber, a New York management consultant who specializes in telecommunications and systems assignments. "More and more college students are now required to take some sort of computer-programming course, and by the mid-1980's teachers and students may be doing most of their testing, paper-writing and grading on the computer.

Alan S. Orting

The T.V. of the not-too-distant future.

Home computers, about the size of a briefcase and operated by a keyboard, will allow a highly skilled working woman who has just had a child to keep up with her skills at home. And, with the fuel crunch, if people can stay home and work, they're going to."

Kids' Books

The Kids Only Club is the place to be if you're a youngster who wants some suggestions on subjects like earning money or doing magic tricks. The Kids Only Club is the name of Shari Lewis's new paperback book series (Holt, Rinehart and Winston), and the world-famous ventriloquist says she started the series "because I realized that kids don't have an alternative to T.V. anymore. Most kids get fulfillment from saying, 'I did it myself'; and they can't get that from anything they see on television. I wanted to give kids some workable suggestions on things like how to have the scariest Halloween party on the block."

And if you plan to play some games at

Cold-Weather Dressing

With the thermostats down this winter, dressing for warmth is doubly important. "Most of the problems that are associated with cold temperatures are circulatory problems," says Dr. Richard Gonzalez of the John Pierce Foundation, a research institute that focuses on studying temperature and comfort. "In cold weather, the blood recedes from the extremities and takes heat with it. That's why hands and feet are often the first areas that feel cold."

What can you do to keep your hands and feet warm during the workday? "Office workers often wear tight clothes that restrict the blood flow, and they often remain in one position for too long," says Gonzalez. "Activity helps increase body heat; remember to get up and walk around during the day. And if a person is physically fit to begin with, the cold tends to bother them less." Wearing loose clothing made from primarily natural fibers, and layering those clothes, will help keep your body's warmth where it belongs.

a party, two other recently published books might give you some ideas. Parlor Games (Addison-Wesley) is a delightfully illustrated paperback that's a perfect answer for rainy afternoon, boring trips, blizzards and blackouts. And Family Games (Macmillan) is packed full of ideas for picnic games, backyard games, party games and card games for all ages and every occasion. You'll never have another dull moment.

Shari Lewis and friends.

Altering Nature's Course

They say you can't fool Mother Nature, but West Virginia University agricultural researchers are trying their hardest to do just that. Experimenting with helicopters and wind machines, scientists at the university are attempting to figure out the best way to control frost in fruit orchards.

Frost is created when the earth's cool surface absorbs heat from the atmosphere, creating a layer of cooler air beneath warmer air. Meteorologists call this condition an inversion, and the helicopters and wind machines are being used to mix the layers together so that the air near the trees will be warm.

According to Bud Cottrill, a university graduate student researching the frost problem, wind machines have been used for frost control for more than 40 years, primarily in citrus fruit groves. But the machines can only be used if there is a layer of warm air that can be maneuvered into the orchard. "Without that," Cottrill explains, "the machines would be blowing nothing but cold air into the trees." And who needs more of that?

Lifestyles

Diet. The Federal Government will soon begin publishing a set of recommended dietary guidelines suggesting that Americans reduce the excess calories, fats, cholesterol, salt and sugar that they eat. Menu guides will also be produced, and people who follow them will get less than a third of their total calories from fat. Cholesterol intake will be limited to 300 milligrams a day or less, while refined sugar will make up only 10 percent of the total caloric intake.

Jobs. The areas that many women have traditionally found employment in haven't changed much since the turn of the century. In 1900, 45 percent of the working women were employed in four occupations. By 1969, five occupations — secretary, bookkeeper, elementary school-teacher, waitress and typist — still accounted for 25 percent of the female work force.

Personality. A study conducted at the Institute of Human Development at the University of California at Berkeley has found that teen-agers who are self-controlled and non-rebellious become the healthiest adults. The study, which began in the 1920's, took into account data on childhood illnesses, education, drinking, smoking and occupation. Personality emerged as the strongest indicator of an individual's future health.

Our Story: A PARTY OF NORTHMEN IS SENT TO FORAGE FOR FOOD AND PRINCE ARN IS ORDERED TO GO WITH THEM. ARN TRIES TO WARN THE SUSPICIOUS LITTLE PEOPLE OF THE PRESENCE OF NORTHMEN AND...

... IS RECOGNIZED BY THE ONE WHO HAD TRIED TO STEAL HIS TARPOT: "WE NEED HIS HELP AS MUCH AS HE NEEDS OURS TO ESCAPE THIS ISLAND!"

"STOP GRUMBLING," ROARS THE SMALL CHIEFTAIN. "THIS YOUNG MAN TELLS US THAT KING ARTHUR PLANS TO RID THIS ISLAND OF THE NORTHMEN. THEN WE WILL BE FREE TO RETURN TO IRELAND!"

THEY COME TO THE END OF THE CAVERN, DIMLY LIGHTED FROM A CRACK IN THE CEILING. CRAFTSMEN ARE BUSY CONSTRUCTING A CURRAGH IN WHICH THE LITTLE MEN HOPE TO ESCAPE THE INCREASING NUMBER OF VIKINGS.

PRINCE ARN CALLS A MEETING. "I MUST LEAVE YOU NOW TO FIND SOME WAY TO INFORM KING ARTHUR OF WHAT HIS ARMY MUST FACE TO RID THE IRISH SEA OF THE MARAUDING NORTHMEN!"

TWENTY-FOUR HOURS LATER, ARN EMERGES FROM THE CAVERN INTO A DENSE FOG, AND STUMBLES AROUND FOR HOURS BEFORE THE SMELL OF THEIR CAMPFIRE LEADS HIM TO THE FORAGING PARTY.
