Russians Install Own Man In Afghanistan

By The Associated Press

Die-hard supporters of executed Afghan President Hafizullah Amin were reported still trading rifle fire in Kabul today after Soviet forces installed their own man in power to end a 19-month-old insurrection on Russia's southern border.

Karmal coup in Afghanistan is the direct result of Soviet interference in Afghan internal affairs.

The airport in Kabul, the Afghan capital where thousands of Soviet troops were flown in over the past few days, was believed closed, so there was no immediate way for correspondents to confirm reports of active Russian fighting to take over the presidential palace and radio station Thursday night.

But witnesses said in telephone calls to diplomats in New Delhi, India, the Russians fought Afghan troops guarding Radio Kabul, knocked out two Afghan tanks, captured the complex and took soldiers prisoner in 3 1/2 hours of battles that ended at 11 p.m. with MiG-21 warplanes criss-crossing the skies.

They described Kabul as quiet but tense today with morning traffic resuming unimpeded by Russian soldiers who were seen throughout the mile-high Afghan capital.

"It was the largest Soviet troop movement outside Eastern Europe since World War II," one source said of the influx of Russian troops. "You can see it almost as a Soviet invasion of Afghanistan - taking Kabul and then putting their man in power."

Karmal was immediately declared Afghanistan's president and general secretary of the central committee of the ruling Khalq Party and named his cronies to important positions.

The coup was the third in 20 months in the landlocked, mountainous Central Asian nation that borders Moslem fundamentalist Iran on the west, and for the moment it entrenched Karmal, a former deputy premier variously described by Western diplomats as a Soviet "puppet" or "stooge."

Amin, the man he replaced, also was a pro-Soviet communist who grabbed power in a palace shootout in September that killed his pro-Soviet predecessor, Nur Mohammed Taraki. But Radio Kabul said Amin was executed almost immediately after Thursday's coup on orders of a revolutionary tribunal for "crimes against the people of Afghanistan."

The broadcast also said members of Amin's family were killed and that those "responsible for crimes committed against the people by members of Amin's fascist regime will be brought to justice," indicating bloody, mass purges will take place in the next few days in the Afghan capital.

Although Soviet troops were already in Afghanistan in force, Radio Kabul said after the coup that the Kremlin swiftly agreed to meet an urgent appeal from Karmal's new government for "political, moral, economic and military assistance...to restore normalcy and to repel an external threat."

A recent U.S. intelligence appraisal said although Amin welcomed Soviet help in putting down Afghanistan's Moslem rebels he wanted his nation to remain a truly independent state, and that this led to strained relations between Moscow and Kabul in recent months.

The Soviets are widely believed to have fostered the April 1978 coup that ousted Afghanistan's non-aligned government and brought Taraki to power, and they are reported determined to prevent the Moslem rebels from ousting an atheist Marxist regime on Russia's doorstep.

Moslems are expected to make up a majority of the Soviet population within the next 25 years, and the Russians apparently fear if the Moslems in Afghanistan and Iran have their way there will be a "ripple effect" of unrest among restive Soviet Moslems.

Diplomatic sources describe the man the Russians hand-picked to run the new Kabul regime as soft-spoken and a firm friend of the Kremlin. They said Karmal is in his 50s and is the son of an Afghan army general.

An Asian diplomat familiar with Afghanistan's politics, said Karmal is closer to Soviet leaders than Amin was but probably would be more willing to modify the Marxist economics Amin was forcing on the country.

Karmal was known to diplomats as a Marxist in 1966 when as a member of the Afghanistan parliament he was involved in a fight that landed him in the hospital.

Angry Ghotbzadeh Seeks Spy Trial For Hostages

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS

Associated Press Writer TEHRAN, Iran (AP) - Iran's foreign minister angrily demanded spy trials for the U.S. hostages if America pushes for U.N. sanctions against his country. At least 10 of the captives were reported rebelling against their captors, and there was no sign their jailers would free any of them.

The United States has interpreted every Iranian "good gesture as a sign of weakness." Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told reporters Thursday night. He referred to Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's decision last Friday to allow three American clergymen to have Christmas visits with the hostages and President Carter's announcement that America would seek U.N. sanctions against Iran in a bid to pressure the release of the captives.

Ghotbzadeh remained silent on the Carter announcement until after the three visiting clergymen left Iran Thursday morning, but he was clearly angry when he gave his country's official reaction to the plan.

"All of a sudden we realize their (America's) whole propaganda is absolutely ridiculous," Ghotbzadeh said. "Now they are going to the Security Council just because they know in January the composition of

New City Council Adopts Loan-Grant Plan Change

The newly installed City Council, in its first special call session Thursday, approved an amendment to the city's rehabilitation loan and grant program.

City Manager Ed Wyatt explained that Larry Stanley, Department of Housing and Urban Development representative, visited here recently and took a look at the city's loan and grant program for rehabilitation under the Community Development format.

Wyatt told the Council members that Stanley suggested that the city consider revising various aspects of the loan and grant program.

Wyatt said that Stanley expressed concern that the current maximum grant limit here is too low and that income limits are too low for both the loan and grant programs. The low income levels, it was suggested, could result in a substantial portion of low and moderate income citizens not being eligible for rehabilitation assistance.

The city manager said that the HUD representative pointed out to city officials that Greenville's Small Cities Grant pre-application would probably rate less favorably against applications submitted by other cities unless some upward adjustment was made.

The rehabilitation loan and grant committee, Wyatt said, has recommended increasing the maximum grant amount from the present $5,000 to $8,000. In addition, Wyatt said the committee recommended increasing the maximum income limits on a scale based on family size. Council approval was given to the changes.

The Council, acting on a recommendation by the staff,

TAX DEADLINE

City tax collector Floyd Little reminded Greenville residents that city taxes must be paid on or postmarked no later than Jan. 8, 1980. A two percent interest charge will be required for all payments on Jan. 9, he said.

approved several budget changes to the proposed Small Cities Grant pre-application in light of the loan and grant amendments.

An amendment to the 1979-80 city budget to provide $6,500 in funds for a personnel director's position was approved by Council members.

Wyatt, addressing another matter, said that there had been some concern in the past as to who should make decisions or act when the city manager is out of town for more than one or two days. He said that some continuity was needed in situations where he was away, as in the case of a vacation or attendance at an out-of-town meeting.

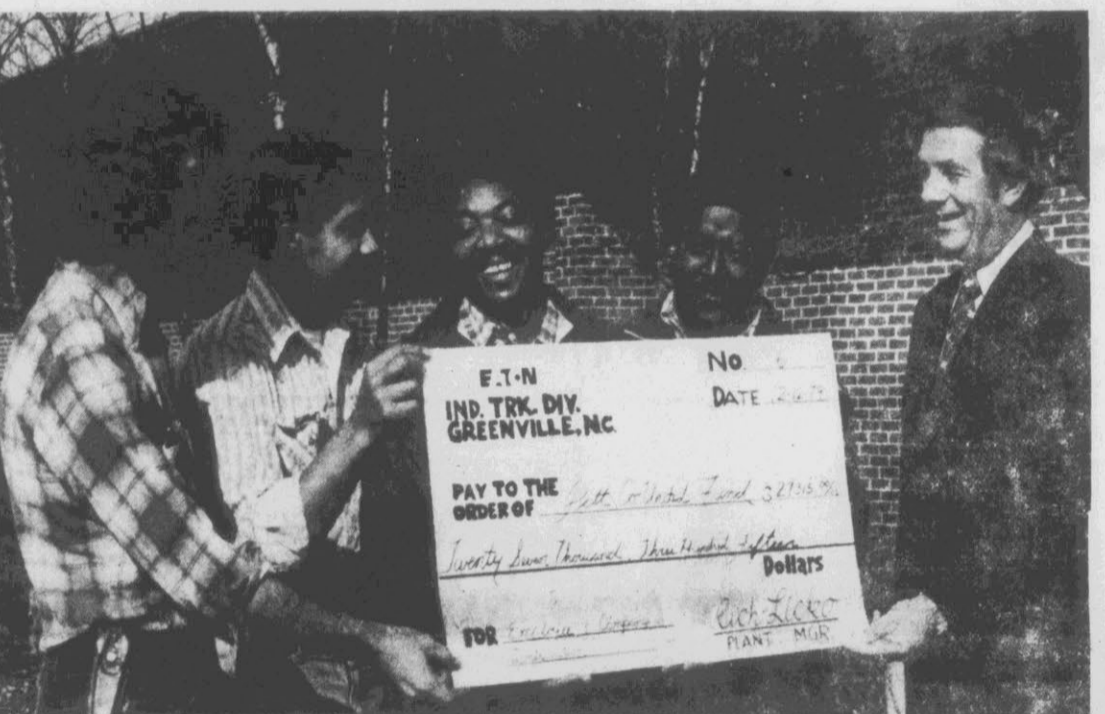

Acting on Wyatt's recommendation, the Council adopted a resolution designating Gail Meeks, who serves as assistant to the city manager, to function as acting city manager in Wyatt's absence or in the case of his disability.

Carter Enters Illinois Primary

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - President Carter has been entered as a candidate in the Illinois Democratic primary election March 18, bringing the number of candidates to four.

Todd Renfrow, head of the state Democratic County Chairmen's Association, added his endorsement of the president as he filed 4,900 petition signatures Thursday with the state Board of Elections.

Lyndon H. LaRouche, 57, former U.S. Labor Party chairman, also filed petitions Thursday. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and V.A. Kelley, a mule skinner from Oswego, filed earlier.

Eaton Employees' Pledge Has Put United Way Over The Top

The Pitt County United Way campaign has gone over the top, with contributions and pledges of $360,018.75.

A pledge by employees of the Greenville plant of Eaton Corporation was the one that enabled the community to surpass its goal, $351,477.08. The Eaton pledge, according to Rich Licko, plant manager for Eaton, is $27,315.

Licko said, "Eaton feels that being a leader in the industrial community means more than just providing good jobs. It also means providing leadership in the community and being supportive of its needs, such as the United Way campaign. Eaton Greenville employees have always responded to a challenge."

Eaton's United Way campaign committee consisted of Bobby Mobley, quality control; J. K. Wetherington, assembly; Julius Wright, fabrication; James Britt, stores; and Don Mills, office. The committee reported that the 1979 contributions represent an 89 percent participation level, with an average gift of $88.97. Overall the 1979 reported results were 18 percent above the 1978 pledge, they said.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, chairman of the 1979 United Way campaign, said, "We are grateful that United Way has exceeded the 1979-80 goal. We have gone over $360,000 and more contributions are expected." "This is the 10th consecutive year that the goal has been surpassed" he said. (Cont'd on Page 10)

FIRE PREVENTION VIOLATIONS?

I've begun noticing lately that many public buildings and businesses around Greenville that have double doors are leaving one of them latched. I'm not sure why. I would think, though, that in event of fire, this would present quite a hazard. L. L.

I was at a Greenville restaurant recently and when my party tried to go out, we found that the door was locked. We asked someone to let us out. Soon a rather large group had gathered trying to get out and all of us waited a good 10 minutes. When we asked why the doors were locked, we were told that the place had become too crowded and the doors were locked to keep more customers away so city fire codes wouldn't be violated. I believe keeping people blocked in probably was violating fire code. I know it didn't give me a safe feeling. A. P.

Hotline presented both these questions to City Fire Marshal Jerry McLawhorn. He said that locking either of a set of double doors in a public place during working hours is a violation of the national fire code adopted by the City of Greenville. "We see this quite often," he said, "but it's hard to check everywhere as often as we need to when there are only three fire inspectors for the whole city."

"Keeping customers locked inside a business place is a serious violation of fire code," he said. "It's the responsibility of the manager to see that not more than the maximum number of people enter a building to be in compliance with the fire code, but this cannot - or should not - be done by locking people in. That's literally playing with fire."

Wood-Burning Car Begins Trip To New York

ALEXANDER CITY, Ala. (AP) - A trio of Alexander City men left for New York Thursday driving a woodburning automobile that will be displayed Monday on ABC's "Good Morning America."

Ben Russell, president of the Energy Conservation Co., and four Alex. City men returned recently from a 2,700-mile coast-to-coast trip in the automobile that burns wood for fuel.

Since that nationwide crossing, the ECAR has received quite a bit of national attention.

Newspapers, television and radio stations from Jacksonville, Fla., to Los Angeles followed the progress of the automobile that was built to prove that wood as fuel, applied to a modern automobile, can be used as an alternative to today's energy problems.

A three-man crew, consisting of Jerry Scott, Jerry Richardson and Tom Crowell, left on the 900-mile trip to New York Thursday and expect to arrive in New York Saturday.

The show will be aired live Monday morning at 7:50 a.m. (CST) from New York, according to Gary Chatham, a spokesman for ECON. Russell will fly to New York later this week for the taping of the show.

But earlier in December, Russell was part of the ECON team that made the coast-to-coast test run.

He had predicted that his woodburning automobile would burn a pound of wood per mile under normal circumstances, but because of the stop-and-go situations he said the car burned 3,700 pounds of wood on the 2,700-mile trip.

ECAR is powered by a reactor which is fired by burning wood - wood blocks or chips usually of a 2 x 2 size. The byproducts from the burned wood are carried through a system of filters and coolers and eventually produce a gaseous fuel which powers the car.

Chatham said the car's engine was disassembled after the trip and the engine was absolutely clean. The only oil in the carburetor).

MR. AND MRS. CLARENCE BARNHILL

Couple Honored On Anniversary

BELVOIR — Friends and family honored Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barnhill of Belvoir on their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday afternoon in the fellowship hall of the Belvoir Free Will Baptist Church.

Visitors were welcomed by their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Sonny Bostic Jr. The receiving line of honored guests included Ledyard Ross, Greenville, Mrs. Lea Mildred Mayo, New Bern, Sarah May, Bailey, Mrs. Theone Hurdle, Virginia Beach, Va., Jim Barnhill, Greenville, Churchwell Stallings, Wilmington, J. W. Dupree, Raleigh, who were in the wedding party.

The honorees, their daughter, grandchildren and honored guests were presented corsages of yellow silk roses with streamers stating their role in the wedding. Mrs. Anna Dupree, Belvoir, sister-in-law, presided at the register.

Opening prayers were said by the Rev. David Hill, of Sweet Gum Grove, the couple's pastor. A program of wedding and Christmas music was played throughout the afternoon by Mrs. Edith Barnhill, Mrs. Isabel Gurganus and Mrs. Marsha Moran. Guests sang favorites including "I Love You Truly," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Bless This House."

The refreshment table was adorned with a draped cloth and yellow ribbons centered with an arrangement of yellow silk roses and a lighted hurricane lamp. The couple was honored with a three tiered wedding cake by their nephew, Dr. and Mrs. Ross, which was served by Mrs. Ross. Punch was poured by Mrs. J. W. Dupree, Raleigh, and Mrs. Lena Barnhill, sisters-in-law, and Mrs. Pearl Ward Overton, Greenville.

The fellowship hall was decorated with greenery, poinsettias, gold arrangements and lighted hurricane lamps. Of special interest was a 50 years ago table which displayed pictures of the couple prior to their marriage, persons in the wedding, original wedding invitation, copy of the wedding write-up and wedding gifts. A jumper was made from the wedding gown for their daughter, then worn by their granddaughters and was worn Sunday by their great granddaughter, Regina Clark, Belvoir, and then displayed on the table.

Dupree Barnhill, Escondido, Calif., and Mrs. Gall Bostic, Belvoir, are Mr. and Mrs. Barnhill's children. They have six grandchildren and two great granddaughters. The honorees were remembered with gifts. Approximately 240 guests were received.

Entertaining Can Be Easy

With meat prices as high as they are today, who can afford to have friends over for a steak?

However, it isn't necessary to serve steaks to entertain guests say NCSU agricultural extension specialists. Less expensive cuts of meat can be made into delicious stews or curries and there are plenty of good protein sources other than meat such as milk, eggs, cheese and legumes.

Pick up a vegetarian cookbook and you'll find countless ideas for tasty, meatless dishes that fit well into a balanced diet.

Many people are surprised to learn that vegetarians eat good tasting and attractive meals with a variety of foods.

Teenagers Can Provide Services

Young people often feel they don't have enough money to buy holiday gifts that really show how much they care. They can cope with their holiday gift list in several inexpensive, creative ways.

Talents and skills they already have can provide valuable service gifts for family and friends. Babysitting, shoveling snow, chauffeuring and running errands are just a few of the many services teenagers can provide for others on their gift list.

Corn bread won't stick to the baking pan if you grease the pan and then sprinkle it well with fine cornmeal.

If you let crepe batter stand in the refrigerator for one or two hours after mixing, your crepes will turn out smoother and more velvety.

Meat Loaf Is Tasty Way Of Cutting Costs

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer
There's no really cheap way to serve meat today, but one of the less expensive and more satisfying ways is a well-seasoned meat loaf.

If baked to the proper degree and served with a tasty sauce, meat loaf can be a gourmet delight. I have always preferred it to most straight meat dishes.

A little imagination helps. Stuffed with hard boiled eggs, or pitted olives or even a layer of shelled nuts, the loaf can be a glamorous dish.

Few of these loaves take more than an hour to cook and they are easy to make. Another dividend lies in the fact that the remains of a spicy meat loaf left in the refrigerator overnight make delicious sandwiches or cold cuts the following day.

Meat loaf can be baked in a ring or fancy mold, but for most types no special equipment is needed. Use a regular loaf pan or, still simpler, mold the loaf yourself and place it on a baking sheet.

Meats for some varieties, like chicken or liver, require a food chopper unless your butcher has time to grind it for you. But the most common meat-loaf ingredients, beef, pork or veal, can be purchased chopped, of course, and all you have to do is mix them and the seasonings by hand or with a heavy-duty electric mixer.

Bread crumbs are usually added to make the meat go farther. Alternative additions are cooked rice, dry, ready-to-eat cereals, cracker crumbs or even crushed potato chips.

Milk is generally used to soften the loaf and to help blend the ingredients, but you can substitute red or white wine, tomato juice or a canned soup like cream of celery or mushroom.

The most popular loaf is made from ground beef, but I prefer the beef mixed with pork and veal at a ratio of 4 to 1, for example 2 pounds of beef plus half a pound each of pork and veal. Here's a recipe I use for such a loaf.

2 pounds lean beef, ground
1/2 pound pork, ground fine
1/2 pound veal, ground fine
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs beaten
1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup milk
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/4 teaspoon allspice
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
4 slices bacon

Mix all ingredients except bacon and pack into lightly greased loaf pan or form into loaf on baking sheet. Top with bacon slices and bake in 325-degree oven for 90 minutes till loaf is crusty, if on sheet, or shrinks from sides of loaf pan. Serve with a beef bouillon and tomato or a beef mushroom sauce. Serves 8-10.

Wife Has Hobby Collects Garbage

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: We need advice desperately. We have a dear young relative (married a year) whose house looks like a disaster area.

Would it be wrong to ask if we could go in and clean it up for her?

You never saw such a mess in all your life!
ABSOLUTELY ANONYMOUS

DEAR ABSOLUTELY: There's a wise old truism, "Give a man a fish and he can eat for a day; teach him how to fish, and he can eat for a lifetime."

Subtly offer your young relative a few tips from an "old veteran" on how to make housekeeping easier. If she reacts with appreciation, dig in and teach her. If she reacts with indignation—back off.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column a woman complained that her husband was not allowed to play tennis on a certain tennis court because he wasn't "properly attired." (He was wearing regular street trousers and shirt. He was told he had to wear white tennis shorts and white shirt.)

The wife asked if you knew the reason for this rule, and you said you didn't know for sure, but it was probably because white looks better and is cooler.

Well, I know the reason. White clothing does not show perspiration they way colored clothing does, and tennis players sweat a lot.

MARTHA POST: LAKELAND, FLA.

DEAR MARTHA: Your explanation sounds reasonable. But read on for a few others:

I believe I read somewhere that the reason all tennis players wear white is because it shows off their sunbans.

TENNIS PRO IN WORCESTER, MASS.

Tennis players are required to wear white on the courts because if the players were permitted to wear colored clothes, you'd have stripes, wild patterns in clashing colors, and a mess of distracting designs. It might distract other players, and would certainly look like the dickens to spectators.

REASONED IT OUT IN YPSILANTI

Why do tennis players have to dress in white? Simple: Because white is cooler. Don't ask me why, but it is a known and proven fact. You'll notice that people who live in the desert are always dressed in white for that reason.

COMMON SENSE FROM ORANGE, TEXAS

Tennis players must dress uniformly because it's the democratic way. When they all wear the same, nobody looks any richer or better dressed than his team players or opponents. And the color is white because most people look better in white.

PETERSBURG, VA.

The official tennis outfit originated in England over 150 years ago. It was all white. Since that time, all tennis clothes are uniformly white to carry on the tradition.

C.W. IN W. PALM BEACH, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 47-year-old widow of 14 months, average build and personality—and a fun-loving Christian. I am making the adjustment to widowhood very well, and am quite content and financially independent.

However, one area of my life continues to cause me pain and depression. My late husband was very affectionate, as I am, and I find I miss, as time passes, the thrill of being held, caressed and kissed.

I've joined some groups and am active in my church. I love a good time, and am not interested in a brief sexual encounter, but I have so much love to give and need the same.

How does a respectable woman go about meeting decent companions?

HUNGRY FOR LOVE

DEAR HUNGRY: You're on the right track. A respectable woman finds decent companions where decent people spend their time: at church-related activities, doing volunteer work, in adult education, sports, hobbies, involvement in the arts, civic affairs, politics, etc.

You say you are financially independent. You're lucky. That enables you to travel—a great way to make new contacts. (Don't focus on men exclusively; women have brothers, cousins and men friends, you know.)

Don't be reluctant to entertain and broaden your circle of friends. When you least expect it, you'll find a man who's as respectable—and hungry for love—as you are. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a minister who stands outside a porno movie theater to see how many people he knows go in?

JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: He's not very bright. Some of the people he knows might see him standing there and think he just came out.

Graham crackers quickly go limp if exposed to air. Store them in an airtight jar. You can also heat them in a 250 degree oven for a few minutes to make them crispier before serving.

Fanned Fires In Middle East

As if there were not trouble enough in the Middle East, the military problems are escalated by Soviet movement of troops into Afghanistan. The airlift brought an immediate protest from the Carter administration. The Soviets are trying to support their puppet communist government in Afghanistan, which has its hands full with rebellious Moslems. The country, of course, is located next to Iran where U.S. hostages are being held by the Khomeini government. In addition to the possible 10,000 military personnel the Soviets have in Afghanistan, there are five divisions in areas adjacent to the Russian-Afghanistan border, enough no doubt to crush the rebels. If the Soviets succeed in taking control of Afghanistan, there is little reason to believe they won't move into adjacent Iran, Pakistan and other middle east countries when the timing is right. Surely the entire Moslem world must see the great danger. The atheistic communism is as alien to Islam as it is to Christianity.

Intriguing Prospect Of An Alien Life

Just when it was pretty well conceded that Earth possessed the only life in our solar system, scientists now believe the Jupiter moon, Europa, may support life. The theory is based on data gathered by Voyager. Apparently the moon has huge amounts of water, which is essential to life.

And what kind of life? We may be a long time in finding out since it is probably buried under five miles of ice which formed as the body cooled. If there was — or is — life in Europa, however, it is proof that life can exist elsewhere in the Universe, perhaps in a higher form than Earth's man. The prospects continue to intrigue.

THIS AFTERNOON

Better Management Goal

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Management has become a key goal for governmental officials, not only in North Carolina, but nationally.

The object is for government to try to do the same thing as private business: get the most mileage out of a dollar. There is nothing really new about this. When Gov. James E. Houshorer faced this dilemma, he opted for an efficiency study commission headed by some of the best business brains in the state. The resulting recommendations produced a number of cost-saving measures.

Even before that, Gov. Bob Scott ramrodded a governmental reorganization designed to cut out duplicating and splinter governmental agencies and produce some semblance of order and system in state government.

Along the way, from the federal level filtering down to the state level, there developed the notion that Management by Objectives (MBO) would solve all the problems.

MBO This complicated and jargon-filled process consisted of devising major, overall goals and defining them elaborately, then drawing up steps (objectives) along the way to achieving the main goal. Evaluation was a key part of that whole exercise, and much time and effort went into devising measurements which supposedly would tell whether the objectives were being achieved and the goal coming closer. Generally, much of this work simply produced volumes of materials and unrealistic numbers to satisfy bureaucratic requirements.

Gov. Jim Hunt took office with the vow to make government more efficient and effective, and named State Senator J.J. (Monk) Harrington to head a commission which has quietly been promoting a variety of techniques to promote the cause of good management in government. One has been experiments with cash bonuses as a reward for workable suggestions which save time and money. Another has been a largely expanded training program for state employees.

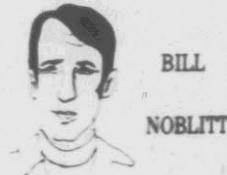

Productivity has become the key goal in current state efforts. Business is wrestling with the same thing, and productivity has been given as the principal reason industries move to the South (the workers produce more), as one of the principal reasons for inflation (the lack of productivity means workers get paid more for doing less and the company makes less so things cost more), as one of the reasons many industries seek foreign locations (foreigners work harder for less money), and as the main reason the Japanese economy is booming so (Japanese workers are loyal and hard working and produce a great deal).

because of the political atmosphere ... but we are trying.

Borrowing from private business, then, is nothing really new for government. Recent trends in private business management have been toward participatory decisionmaking in which employees and supervisors come together to mutually solve problems and plan for the future. Another is use of training seminars and think-tank exercises to tackle problems and design solutions.

Now, the state's Personnel Division of the Dept. of Administration and the Division of Public Administration of the North Carolina State University Dept. of Political Science are moving ahead with one of three Model Personnel Programs in the nation. The federal Office of Personnel Management has awarded the program a $51,000 grant to expand regular courses, evening short courses, internships, fellowships, conferences, and to develop both written and videotaped materials for local, federal and state bureaucrats to learn more about personnel management and human resources administration.

BILL NOBLITT

Save Money Gov. Hunt sums it up this way: "People want government to work well, and deliver services as efficiently as possible. We ought to try to operate state government as efficiently and as effectively as does a private business."

Predictions For 1979

WASHINGTON — I've never pretended to be Jean Dixon, but every January I put a series of predictions for the coming year in a sealed envelope and give them to the accounting firm of Price, Waterhouse to hold for me. At the end of the year I break the seal to see how well I did. I opened the envelope the other day and will now share my 1979 predictions with my readers. Frankly, I didn't do bad for a newspaper columnist.

"Christina Onassis will find happiness in Moscow with her Russian husband, and turn her back on all the material things the capitalist society provided her with."

"Another great year for Idi Amin. While the rest of the world will grumble, the Ugandans will rally around and see that old Fat Stuff stays on his throne."

"U.N. Ambassador Andy Young will be promoted to Secretary of State for solving all our problems in the Middle East."

"Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano will be the only Administration official to survive a shakeup in President Carter's Cabinet."

"Ham Jordan will stick close to the White House in 1979 so he can keep his name out of the press."

"Teddy Kennedy, after consulting with members of his family, will decide NOT to be a candidate in 1980 because he will feel President Carter has been such a good leader that he deserves a second term."

"The OPEC countries will come to their senses and lower the price of crude oil to 1970 levels."

"When this happens Chrysler should have its best year yet and will be unable to meet the demand for its large cars."

"The gold bugs will take a bath when the dollar once again becomes the strongest currency in the world."

"McDonnell Douglas will announce sales of 400 new DC-10s to practically every commercial airline in the world."

"The inflation scare will be a joke by March, 1979, and interest rates will go down to 5.5 percent."

"Despite nervous Nellies at NASA, Skylab will stay up in space for another 10 years, and once again start sending more information back to earth."

"The New York Yankees will win the World Series and Billy Martin, after being voted Manager of the Year, will get a 10-year-no-cut contract from a happy George Steinbrenner."

"Lee Marvin will prove that two can live as cheaply as one without having to get married."

"Investigative reporter Bob Woodward will become Chief Justice Burger's press secretary, and give the Supreme Court a new image."

"President Carter will win the Boston Marathon."

"The China Syndrome movie, starring Jack Lemmon and Jane Fonda, will be a box office flop because no one will buy the ridiculous premise that an accident could happen at a nuclear plant."

"The SALT-II treaty will pass by unanimous consent of the Senate, and the Soviets will scrap their plans to build the Backfire bomber because that would mean taking unfair military advantage of the United States."

"Henry Kissinger will admit on national television that he once made a mistake — thus destroying America's faith in the doctrine of his infallibility."

Basic Tactic In Iowa

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Campaign strategists for President Carter and Sen. Edward Kennedy are playing the expectations game as they prepare for the first political match of 1980 in Iowa.

The rules are simple: try to plant the impression that victory in Iowa is crucial for the other candidate, but not for your man.

The first primary election is in late February, but delegate selection begins in earnest with Jan. 21 caucuses in Iowa, where Carter and Kennedy are scrapping for support.

In verbal jousting, the Carter people are attempting to portray an Iowa victory as a "must" for Kennedy, but not for Carter himself.

"Iowa is looming larger and larger and is shaping up into a real dog fight," said a White House official who asked anonymity. "The Kennedy people are really going to roll the dice big. A loss there would be devastating to them."

Robert Keefe, a political consultant working for the Carter-Mondale Campaign Committee, says Vice President Walter F. Mondale reported after a visit to Iowa that he found "significant" Kennedy strength where he had found none a few weeks earlier.

Kennedy and his staff say just the opposite. Ask Kennedy about Iowa and he says Carter "has to win."

"We're behind in Iowa," says the senator's spokesman, Tom Southwick. "It's catch-up ball as far as we're concerned."

Such comments, on both sides, have to be taken with skepticism; both sides are hoping to damage the loser as much as possible should their man win, while cutting the impact of their own possible loss.

Despite such bad-mouthing, interviews in Washington and with political figures in several states indicate Carter's own confidence, which showed no signs of sagging during his roller-coaster ride in public opinion polls, is now reflected among campaign insiders.

Ever since the Iranian crisis began on Nov. 4, one close Carter aide says, "People are seeing an aspect of this president that has not been seen before." His poll rating has improved, just in time for the Iowa caucuses.

Iowa will also be important to California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. While Kennedy and Carter are out hunting for delegates, Brown hopes to emerge as a serious contender, based on his performance in the debate in Des Moines on Jan. 7.

After Iowa, the next test is in New Hampshire, which all candidates concede is Kennedy country.

After New Hampshire comes Florida, where the state Democratic Party organization, backing Carter, claims the president could win 60 percent of the primary election vote if the balloting were held now.

The first major Carter-Kennedy test will be March 18 in Illinois, a major industrial state where neither candidate has an edge from the start.

From Illinois, the emphasis will shift to a second tier of primary states, including New York and then Pennsylvania.

Those two states, and Illinois, will elect approximately 600 delegates to the convention. The winner will need 1,667 for the nomination.

By the time the votes are counted in Pennsylvania on April 22, "things could tend to tip a little," Keefe said.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Kremlin Worrying Iraqi

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq's revolutionary socialist regime eyes the chaos across the border in Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Iran with bittersweet ambivalence, predicting its ancient enemy's disintegration but fearing that it may bring in the two superpowers to frustrate Iraqi ambitions for dominance in the Arab world.

Sharing Khomeini's common enemy has not warmed official frosty relations between Baghdad and Washington. Rather, two Iraqi officials suggest the Americans might have designed the hostage crisis as a pretext for bringing military force to the Persian Gulf. That, these officials believe, would open the doors to satisfaction of Russia's timeless longing for Iran. Furthermore, Iraqis see post-Khomeini Iranian regimes controlled by Washington or much more likely, Moscow.

Despite Moscow's role as Iraq's ally and arms supplier, Baghdad is worried most by the purposeful men in the Kremlin, not by Jimmy Carter. While U.S.-Iraqi relations cannot warm without unexpected cooling by Washington toward Israel, there is concern here, as in the conservative states of the Arabian peninsula, about the Russian bear's oil hunger in the 1980s.

Iraqi leaders do not hedge in condemning the Iranian seizure of the U.S. Embassy as being against the law of Islam. Nor do they flinch at forecasting Iran's disintegration as a multi-nationality state. Tariq Aziz, a deputy prime minister and President Saddam Hussein's closest adviser, has said bluntly: "The shah didn't solve the problem of national minorities. Khomeini says Islam is the way. But that won't work, either."

Accordingly, he sees Beluchistan, Khuzestan, perhaps Azerbaijan, and certainly Kurdistan splitting from Iran's ruling Persian minority, contending the Kurds of northern Iran now will settle for nothing less than pure independence.

As we reported earlier, following first-hand observation, the supposed Iraqi invasion of Iranian Khuzestan was the invention of Radio Tehran. It is impossible to say whether there is any more truth to Iranian complaints that Baghdad is fomenting Kurdish rebellion. Iraq denies reports, believed authentic by both Western and communist diplomats here, that it supplies arms sent to Iranian Kurds.

Whatever the truth, the dismantling of Iran is not Iraqi policy. In a recent confidential conversation, Hussein (who privately calls Khomeini a madman) declared Iran must not be permitted to fall apart. That explains government declarations disavowing belligerence toward Iran.

One Iraqi general staff officer said recent maneuvers were geared not to Iran, but to foreign forces in the Arabian (Persian) Gulf — presumably both Soviet warships and the U.S.S. Kittyhawk. "I think the Iraqis would have much more sympathy for the Americans in Tehran," one Western diplomat suggested, "if they were absolutely sure you would not intervene militarily." Sure or not, Iraqi leaders would not stop worrying

To the Editor

It has been five years since my family and I have moved to Greenville. I have some thoughts that I want to share with everyone.

It's difficult to compare the five different communities where I have served as Boys' Club Director, but one thing that always "stands out" about Greenville is its people.

Greenville is blessed with many community minded citizens who are willing to donate time and money so that organizations such as ours can exist. I think most of us would agree that the Federal Government cannot and will not be able to solve all the problems that exist in our communities. It's going to take all of us as interested citizens to get involved with local programs which are organized, operated and supported by local citizens.

What can you do? Start the New Year by getting involved in Greenville and Pitt County programs. Gy by and visit some of the organizations working to help others. Your talents and abilities can be used somewhere. There is something for everyone to do. It has been said that a different world cannot be made by indifferent people. I know that your time is valuable, but I believe your personal dividends will be worth the small investment of time which will be required.

Join all your friends in making our community an even better place to live in the 80s.

— A (former) Yankee who is proud to call Greenville his home.

When A Climber Takes A Fall

By GAIL MICHAELS

Nothing about child-rearing has been more traumatic for me than Meg's propensity for climbing. She learned to walk one day, and the next morning I found her waving to me from the top of a seven foot bookcase.

Just watching her has made me believe in evolution. This monkey-child climbed kitchen cabinets and scaled closet doors like a human fly before she was 10 months old. When she was 11 months old she climbed a 20 foot sliding board while I turned to close a playground gate and almost rendered me comatose.

As she grew older, she graduated to telephone poles, stair railings, wrought iron, and trees. And her guiding principle for climbing became, "Always choose the harder way."

Now, if she wants something from the top shelf of a bookcase, she never does anything as unimagineative as climbing the shelves themselves. She puts a chair on another chair and scrambles up that way. I have found her in chairs balanced on tables, on beds, and on rocking chairs. And if she really wants to increase the difficulty of the climb, she turns the chair over before she balances it.

Naturally, I've expected a mishap for some time. So when I heard a thud and a surprised yelp the other afternoon, I braced myself for the worst. Sure enough, Meg came walking into the kitchen carrying her front tooth.

I grabbed her and rushed her to the dentist's, praying that her mouth wasn't wrecked permanently. All I needed was an orthodontist for a four-year-old. "How do you feel?" I kept saying over and over.

She answered by breezing into the dentist's office and stating, "Guess who's coming to see me tonight? The tooth fairy!"

For her pains she got a "blue diamond" ring and the rapt attention of the entire office staff while she performed her imitation of a boa constrictor.

For my pains I got a bill and the assurance that, although she was young, her x-ray showed that her front teeth would have been ready to come out soon anyway.

I finally managed to drag her away from center stage and back into the car. "Well, young lady," I said, "I hope this at least taught you a lesson about climbing."

"Yeah! This was fun. I wonder when I'll lose another tooth."

UNFORGIVABLE SIN?
Jesus once said that there was only one unforgivable sin, and that was a sin against the Holy Spirit. Down through the ages many men have anxiously wondered if they have committed this unpardonable sin.

Of course, no one has committed the unpardonable sin who is concerned about the possibility of having done so. This point can be made clear by reference to the circumstances under which Jesus made his statement. He had been casting out demons, and the scribes and Pharisees insisted that Jesus was able to do so because he was linked in some way to Satan.

These men looked upon good and called it evil. Any one who has ever come to the place where he looks on good and calls it evil, or looks on evil and calls it good, has involved himself in the sin against the Holy Spirit. Until we recognize evil in ourselves there is no possibility of repentance, and without repentance our sins cannot be forgiven.

ONE TOWER FOR TWO CHURCHES — A symbol of ecumenical cooperation between the Roman Catholics and Protestants is the pictured church of the village of Roedgen, near Siegen, West Germany. The church at left and the tower were erected in 1780 by the Protestant parish. When the Catholics planned to erect a new church 100 years later, they asked the Protestants to annex their building to the old tower for saving money. The Protestants agreed, and now the church bells ring for both parishes. (AP Laserphoto)

Women's Effort For Status In Churches May See Push In '80s

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Women's struggle for fuller status in the churches threaded religious life in the 1970s, and it bids well to embroider the decade ahead in Roman Catholicism.

In the past decade, women gained the priesthood in the Episcopal Church, the rabbinate in Judaism, the ministry in Lutheranism and some Southern Baptist pulpits, after earlier winning that role in most of the rest of Protestantism.

But they still met heavy resistance in Roman Catholicism, including that of a vigorous new pope, John Paul II, and there was little concern about it shown in Eastern Orthodoxy, also with an all-male clergy.

Other major religious developments of the closing decade, in tentative rankings prepared for the Religion Newswriters Association by Roy Larson of the Chicago Sun-Times, include:

A seething, emotion-fraught conflict swelled over abortion, legalized by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1973, with more than a million abortions yearly now occurring. Polls showed similar divisions among Roman Catholics and Protestants on the issue.

On the world stage, Islam displayed rising vigor and power, fueled by Middle Eastern oil and social dynamism, clouded as the decade ended by Ayatollah Khomeini's diplomatic defiance in sanctioning the holding of U.S. Embassy hostages in Iran.

Roman Catholicism entered the era of Pope John Paul II. He quickly became a rover, traveling to several countries, including the United States, flying to Istanbul in a personal effort to knit ties with Eastern Orthodoxy.

Americans, especially young ones, tried out "alternate altars" in the decade, flocking into Eastern religions and various cults, but as the decade ended, some of them appeared on the wane, especially after the 1978 mass suicide in Jonestown. Sexual ethics became a major focus in church debate, with church conventions arguing about homosexual ordination, several of them officially ruling it out for practicing homosexuals. A group of Roman Catholic scholars issued a new study, "Human Sexuality," drawing Vatican fire.

Evangelicals gained a high-profile role in American society, moving closer to the Christian mainstream in recognizing work for social justice as part of their mission. The 1976 presidential election of Jimmy Carter, a Southern Baptist, gave evangelicals wider attention.

Religious groups rallied massive relief to refugees on Southeast Asia, including "boat people" from Vietnam and the homeless of Cambodia, where much of the mainly Buddhist population was decimated in oppression and war.

Mainline Protestant churches suffered membership losses through the decade but the decline was slowed. The number of Roman Catholic nuns and seminaries fell precipitously through the period.

The "electronic church" took on a larger role, with the number of religious radio and television stations multiplying rapidly in the latter half of the decade.

FOCUS

First To Resign
 On this day in 1832, John C. Calhoun became the first American vice president to resign from office. Calhoun had served as vice president under two different presidents, John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson. But Calhoun and Jackson quarreled bitterly about the issue of states' rights. Calhoun believed that a state could nullify, or reject, any federal law which the state considered unconstitutional. When Jackson threatened to use troops and warships to enforce a federal tariff law which South Carolina had nullified, Calhoun, who was from South Carolina, resigned. He took over a vacant seat in the U.S. Senate, where he continued to speak out for states' rights.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the only other vice president to resign?

Leash Law To Affect Areas

All areas that will be annexed into the City of Greenville effective Jan. 1, are reminded that there is a 24-hour leash law in Greenville.

Inspections Department official, Alton Warren quoted the law: "Every person owning or having possession, charge, custody or control of any dog shall keep such dog exclusively upon his own premises; provided, however, that such dog may be off such premises if it be under the control of a competent person and restrained by a chain or leash or other means of adequate physical control."

He said this means that dogs must either be restrained by a chain or some other means of restraint at all times or must be in a fenced-in area. They must wear collars bearing both a city tag and a Pitt Co. rabies tag. The city tag must be bought and attached to the collar no later than Jan. 31, 1980.

Failure to abide by the leash law and to have city tags and rabies tags attached to dogs' collars will result in the city's issuance of tickets for violation of the Animal Control Ordinance. The penalty fee is $15 for letting a dog run at large; $5 for his not wearing a city tag and $5 for his not wearing a rabies tag.

For further information, call 752-4137, Ext. 247 or 221.

American Nazi Leader Ousted

CHICAGO (AP) — Frank Collin, the Nazi who touched off a major First Amendment debate when he planned a march through a suburb where many Jews live, has been removed as leader of the National Socialist Party of America, the new leader says.

Harold A. Covington, 26, of Raleigh, N.C., said Thursday that Collin was removed not by a vote "because we don't vote," but "by the will of the overall membership."

He said one of the major reasons for the ouster was that members were "drifting away," but he refused to disclose any figures.

Covington said he previously was unit leader of the party in North Carolina. He said the party has 17 or 18 units in the country, in such cities as Minneapolis, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Cleveland, and Augusta, Maine, and in several parts of California.

Collin had planned a march through the north Chicago suburb of Skokie, where many residents are Jewish and some are survivors of World War II concentration camps run by German Nazis.

Collin's plans cost the American Civil Liberties Union a great deal of support when it went to court in defense of his right to march.

However, after winning the right last year, Collin called off the march and instead held a small rally in Chicago.

"Ever since the Skokie thing, Collin has been burned out," Covington said. "He was exhausted of spiritual reserves and wasn't operating at high levels of competency."

Collin could not be reached immediately, but Covington said he talked to Collin by telephone Thursday. "He's aware of it," said Covington. "He's not too happy about it, but there's nothing he can do about it. He has no support."

Singing in the New Year...

... is what Gramps called it! Every year at five to twelve he and Grandma would strike up a rousing chorus of Auld Lang Syne. Somehow we knew it would be a wonderful year because the family sang it in.

Facing the future as a family is a wonderful idea... not just on New Year's Eve, but every day in every season. Joys mean all the more when we share them with those we love. Disappointments are easier to accept when we stand together.

Every member of the family needs a shared spiritual foundation. The trust of each in God fortifies the faith of all the rest.

That is why our family worships together. And why, as we go forward into this exciting New Year, the song in our hearts is really a Hymn.

An 'Outsider' Researches Harkers Island People

HARKERS ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — Anthropologist Marcus Hepburn has become sort of a fixture on Harkers Island in the last two years, even though he's an outsider.

And Harkers Islanders are not always too keen on outsiders. They sometimes narrow their eyes at a stranger until they find out what he's about.

But they took to Hepburn, a Floridian. And during his sojourn here for North Carolina Sea Grant, they told him enough about themselves, their past and their way of life to formulate a rich history.

Hepburn has been studying how changes wrought by modern times have affected the way of life of the islanders, who were virtually isolated until the 1940s when the island became accessible by car.

Specifically Hepburn and other researchers have been studying the island's fishing industry and its technology since fishing is the way of life here.

To the casual observer, however, it would seem he's just been piddling, getting to know folks, talking over old times and going out with the fishermen for a day's run.

"I've done about anything and everything you can do on the island," Hepburn said in a recent interview on the island. "I've tried to take part in daily activities.

"It was hard at first," he added. "But I think I've become something of a local fixture. I won't say that I'm totally accepted, but I'm not an oddity anymore."

Hepburn, who is with the Department of Anthropology at the University of Florida in Gainesville, is scheduled to leave Harkers Island at the end of this month. His research job for Sea Grant will be finished then.

But after his return to Florida, he will put his findings down on paper along with those of fellow researchers Jim Sabella, also an anthropologist, and sociologists Richard Dixon and Roger Lowery of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington. All participated in various aspects of the island-life study.

The researchers were interested in finding out how tourism, increasing population and government regulations influence lifestyles and ways of thinking in the coastal communities.

To Hepburn it was just as important to find out about the history of the people, too.

Gleaning from various records and recollections of old timers, Hepburn has also come up with an island history punctuated with folklore and weather lore.

He can tell you all about Diamond City, a small fishing village just across the water from Harkers Island that was abandoned at the turn of the century due to the elements. Residents there took down their houses plank by plank and floated them over to Harkers Island where they re-established themselves.

The specialized weather language of the fishermen is not foreign to Hepburn. He knows that sighting a "sun dog," a tiny multi-colored cloud, tells a fisherman there will be bad weather from that direction the next day.

He can relate the genealogy of many of the rugged islanders, individualists who for generations have depended upon the water for their livelihood.

All this is as important to the study as finding out how innovative the islanders are as fishermen.

"It's an extremely hard way of making a living. They can work 15 to 16 hours a day if the fish are running. That's a considerable length of time," he said.

After the initial technical report on the fishing industry, Hepburn said he will put together a paper containing all of this Harkers Island lore.

"I've been collecting the folklore, but there won't be much talk about that in the technical report. Later on, I'll be working on a manuscript for Sea Grant ... a kind of general community study."

about what they fear will follow Khomeini quite soon: possibly a military regime linked to Washington; probably a communist regime linked to Moscow.

Concern here over a communist Iran reflects less than comradely Soviet-Iraqi relations. A Soviet air marshal who just visited Baghdad was not given the treatment accorded Third World luminaries. When he placed flowers on the unknown soldiers' tomb, no senior Iraqi official accompanied him.

The regime regards the suppressed Iraq Communist Party as linked through fraternal Communist parties to Eastern European states — including the Soviet Union. Thus, Iraq blamed the Bulgarian government when an Iraqi student in Bulgaria was killed in turmoil between Iraqi students loyal to Baghdad and exiled Iraqi communists.

While police here kept demonstrators far from the U.S. mission after the Camp David signing authorities permitted protesting throngs to press against the Bulgarian Embassy's gates, after Iraq's ambassador and all its students were brought home from Sofia, Bulgaria sent a deputy prime minister to Baghdad with formal apologies — still not satisfying Iraq. Bulgarian kowtowing was obviously on orders from Moscow, which wants to preserve this Mideast foothold, shaky though it is.

But Soviet satellite kowtowing will not end dismay here over Soviet airborne troops fighting the Moslem insurrection in nearby Afghanistan. "We are concerned by political or military action in the region by any major power," Aziz told us. As for the Russians as a prospective oil importer posing an additional threat, he added: "We in the Baathist Socialist Party believe all big powers are expansionist in nature."

Iraq wants to make its non-alignment more than a catch phrase, mainly through increased American business contacts. Hussein personally noted the exclusion of U.S. exhibits from October's Baghdad International Fair and made it clear there had better be some there next year.

But there is no pressing desire to resume formal diplomatic relations which were broken in 1967. Indeed, U.S. sponsorship of the Camp David accords has enabled Iraq, using oil money and Baathist ideology, to envision political dominion of the Persian Gulf — a bject for our last report from Iraq.

City Counts 2 Collisions

An estimated $3,250 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 1 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Elm and 14th Streets, involving a truck driven by Archibald Lindsay Henry of 1002 East Greenville Boulevard, and Sherrill Deleon Turnage of 406 Ash St.

Police, who charged Turnage with failing to stop for a red light, set damage at $900 to the truck and $1,800 to the Turnage car.

Cars operated by Rosmary Ganzert Ficher of 1622 Longwood Dr. and Marie Lilly Hill of Kinston, collided about 5 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 200 feet East of the Arlington Boulevard intersection.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $200 to the Ficher car and $350 to the Hill auto.

Some will ask how I could see that far ahead. My only answer is that I seem to have a gift for foreseeing the future and, if I understood it myself, it would scare the hell out of me.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market showed a slight loss today, continuing the neutral trend that has prevailed all week. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .77 to 839.33 in the first half hour. Declines slightly outnumbered advances among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The price of gold, which has dominated the attention of traders for the past several days, showed some signs of leveling off at record highs today. In London, gold was fixed at $515 an ounce in the morning and $512 in the afternoon.

Also contributing to the mood of caution were reports of oil price increases by Iraq and Indonesia. Today's early volume leaders included General Public Utilities, up 1/4 at 7 1/2; Chrysler, down 1/4 at 7; and Gulf & Western Industries, up 1/4 at 17 1/2.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average gained 1.96 to 840.10. But declines outnumbered advances by about an 8-7 margin on the NYSE. Big Board volume reached 31.41 million shares, against 24.96 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index rose .08 to 61.90. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.73 at a record high of 244.88.

Wife-Hunter Feels He's Been Ditched

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (AP) - A retired Yadkin County farmer who advertised in newspapers for a wife thinks he may have been ditched by the woman he chose to become his bride. Robert L. Evans, 71, says he hasn't heard from Beulah Hutchins Brewer of King since they kissed good night more than a week ago. The couple had planned to spend Christmas together with Evans' relatives and had talked of a New Year's Day wedding. "I'd take her yet, if she'd promise to behave," says Evans.

Evans is worried that Mrs. Brewer might have had an accident. But he can't call her because her telephone number is unlisted and he doesn't know where she lives because she moved recently. When Evans, known to his friends as "Mr. Bob," advertised for a wife, he specified his preference for "a nice woman, built well, not particular about age, should be able to drive automatic car, be able to tend large garden."

He received about 75 responses to his advertisement before settling on Mrs. Brewer, who visited Evans on a dare. The chief factor in his decision, Mizell said, would be whether a five-month campaign commitment would conflict with his job. He is employed in sales and public relations with Southern Tool Manufacturing Co. of Winston-Salem.

The campaign chairman will be responsible for organizing, promoting and overseeing the North Carolina campaign. No pay would be involved. Mizell said. Meanwhile, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the endorsement of Connally by two prominent South Carolina Republicans won't force him to make an early commitment.

Sen. Strom Thurmond and former South Carolina governor James B. Edwards made their endorsements for Connally Thursday. Helms was an early backer of Ronald Reagan in the 1976 campaign.

In an update of the network's investigation into Presley's death, correspondent Geraldo Rivera reported Thursday night on the ABC-News program "20-20" that Presley's father was told two months after Elvis' death that his son died of drug interaction. According to Rivera, the information came from Dr. Jerry Francisco, Shelby County medical examiner. But two days after his purported conversation with Vernon Presley, Francisco issued a news release which denied drugs played any role in Presley's death, Rivera said.

Elvis Presley died Aug. 16, 1977, at his Graceland mansion and an autopsy was performed the same day at Baptist Hospital. The report has never been made public, although Francisco told reporters the 42-year-old singer died of hypertensive heart disease. ABC investigative reporters James Cole and Charles Thompson III filed suit in Chancery Court in August trying to force Francisco to release the autopsy report. The medical examiner maintains Presley's family requested the autopsy, and the report is not a matter of public record.

No trial date had been set in the case.

the council will be different, and this is not acceptable to us. "If the United States continues to put pressure on us... I don't see any usefulness in having this grand jury. It is better to have the normal trial of the hostages," he said.

Ghotbzadeh has been pushing a proposal to convene an international "grand jury" to hear Iranian grievances against the United States, with the hostages appearing before it as witnesses, but "not as the accused."

He put forward the plan after the Shah of Iran left the United States for sanctuary in Panama, a move he saw as a victory for Iranian determination. The Iranian militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 have demanded the shah be returned for trial or all the captives would be tried as spies.

Before they left Iran, the clergymen, who met with 43 of the hostages, urged conciliation on both sides to end the 55-day-old U.S.-Iranian standoff.

The clergymen arrived in the United States Thursday night and said they would relay messages from the hostages to their families today. They also planned to discuss the situation with American and Iranian officials in Washington.

"We must find subtle enough overtures of good will to be signs of some movement, without suggesting a give away," the Rev. William Howard, a Baptist from Princeton University, told reporters in Tehran.

Howard was joined on the three-day mission by the Revs. William Sloane Coffin and Thomas Gumbleton. But it was Howard who saw the largest number of hostages - 21 - at the occupied embassy compound on Christmas Day.

He told reporters 10 of the captives were "clearly rebellious spirits," who "said sort of snappy things to their guards (and) let it be known their will had not been broken."

"They said things like 'What do these guys (the militants) know?'" Howard said after his rare glimpse behind the guarded embassy walls.

For example, he noted that the militants barred their captives from any political discussion with the visitors, but "one guy said to the guards 'Can I ask a question about the Rose Bowl, or is it too political for you?'"

Howard, who did not name any of the hostages he saw, said five or six of them "might have had teary eyes, some signs of worry."

Gumbleton, the auxiliary Roman Catholic bishop of Detroit, said the two women hostages, Katherine Koob and Elizabeth Ann Swift, apparently were being held in

Mizell May Aid Connally

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell, a former major league baseball pitcher and Republican congressman, says he is considering chairing John Connally's presidential campaign in North Carolina.

Mizell said he would decide early next month whether to accept the proposal made to him by the former Texas governor's state and national representatives. He said he decided 18 months ago to support Connally for the nomination.

The chief factor in his decision, Mizell said, would be whether a five-month campaign commitment would conflict with his job. He is employed in sales and public relations with Southern Tool Manufacturing Co. of Winston-Salem.

The campaign chairman will be responsible for organizing, promoting and overseeing the North Carolina campaign. No pay would be involved. Mizell said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said the endorsement of Connally by two prominent South Carolina Republicans won't force him to make an early commitment.

Sen. Strom Thurmond and former South Carolina governor James B. Edwards made their endorsements for Connally Thursday. Helms was an early backer of Ronald Reagan in the 1976 campaign.

deeply indebted to the citizens and members of the industrial and business community for their heart-warming response to the needs of those who rely on the United Way.

Brewer expressed appreciation to the 28 divisions and county leaders "whose efforts made possible our great success. Each of these outstanding people devoted countless hours to this worthy cause. They deserve the gratitude of all the people of Pitt County."

Brewer paid special tribute to Joe Tripp, executive director of the United Way and to Bob Griffin, executive director of the 1979-80 campaign. He pointed out that, in the 10 years Tripp has served as executive director, the Pitt County campaign has each year surpassed the giving of the previous year. "Joe Tripp's leadership and success have been unprecedented in the history of the Pitt County United Way," Brewer said. "His leadership was largely responsible for the strides of the last decade."

Heels, Michigan Clash In Gator Bowl

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dick Crum says his Tar Heels will do everything in their power to keep Michigan's kicking game in limbo when the two teams clash in the Gator Bowl tonight. Michigan, 8-3, lost to Notre Dame by two points, Purdue by three and Ohio State by three.

Blocked punts or field goals figured in all three defeats. Crum feels the Tar Heels, 7-3-1, have an adequate kicking game. North Carolina place kicker Jeff Hayes kicked a 47-yard field goal with just 13 seconds remaining to tie East Carolina and made good on six of 12 attempts for the season.

Michigan's two kickers, Bryan Virgil and Ali Haji-Sheikh, have hit on only three of 12 attempts this year.

"We spent a lot of time, right down through the season, working on punt blocking," Crum said at a news conference Thursday. Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler, sitting at the Tar Heel coach's elbow, rolled his eyes and smiled.

"Certainly blocking punts is a part of our defensive plan," Crum continued. "We also have a field goal kicker with great range, but because of the rule about bringing the ball back to the point where it was snapped, you have to take those situations as they come up."

Schembechler said the Wolverines have been concentrating on defense during drills both in Ann Arbor and in this north Florida city.

"Our whole defensive plan for this game is to get back our defensive intensity," the Michigan coach said. "That, I think, is going to be the key. Our defense has got to be as intense as it was early in the season."

Schembechler said he felt the fact that the Wolverines lost their last two regular season games, coupled with the fact that Michigan never has won a bowl game in five tries with Schembechler as coach, also would be a factor.

"We weren't happy with our intensity the last two games, so we did some things differently this time," Schembechler said.

"We were a little rougher in our three practices in Ann Arbor and our first two here."

Schembechler still would not say who he would start at quarterback in the 9 p.m. game which will be televised nationally by ABC, but Crum said he didn't care.

"No matter who starts, you've got to play against them," Crum said.

Both Crum and Schembechler got their coaching starts at Miami of Ohio. Not surprisingly, their squads bear striking similarities.

Both teams run from the multiple-I and both play a basic 5-2 defense. And each team, of course, is hoping to go home with no more than three defeats on its record.

The Gator Bowl triggers the last big week of the college football season, which will be highlighted by the traditional New Year's Day bowl games.

Following tonight's North Carolina-Michigan game, South Carolina will face Missouri in the Hall of Fame Game in Birmingham, Ala., Saturday night.

South Carolina is led by George Rogers, who rushed for 1,548 yards this season, second only to Heisman Trophy winner Charles White of Southern Cal. Rogers takes a string of nine straight 100-yard games into the Hall of Fame Game, including 217 against North Carolina State's Atlantic Coast Conference champions.

The independent Gamecocks posted an 8-3 record this season while Missouri of the Big Eight was 6-5.

The Peach Bowl and Bluebonnet Bowl will both be played Monday. Baylor meets Clemson in the Peach in the afternoon while Purdue will take on Tennessee in the Bluebonnet at night.

On New Year's Day, it's Arkansas vs. Alabama in the Sugar Bowl, Nebraska against Houston in the Cotton Bowl and Ohio State vs. Southern Cal in the Rose Bowl. The Orange Bowl will be played that night, matching Oklahoma against Florida State.

Colts Fire Marchibroda; Look For More Wide-Open Attack

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Colts, criticized for being too conservative on offense under Ted Marchibroda, may be looking for someone who favors a more wide-open attack to succeed him as coach.

The Colts' front office was expected to begin screening candidates for the job today. Among those reportedly under consideration were Dan Reeves, offensive coordinator of the Dallas Cowboys; Jerry Rhyme, a record-setting college quarterback and offensive coordinator of the Seattle Seahawks, and Jim Hanifan, assistant head coach of the San Diego Chargers.

Also among the reported candidates were George Perles, assistant coach with the Pittsburgh Steelers; Tom Bass, assistant coach with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers; college coaches Joe Paterno of Penn State, George Welsh of Navy and Wayne Hardin of Temple; fired Arizona State Coach Frank Kush, and former Philadelphia Eagles Coach Mike McCormick.

The Washington Post said today that Paterno, long sought by various pro teams, was the Colts' No. 1 choice.

A longshot possibility was John Unitas, the Colts' one-time great quarterback and a recent Hall of Fame inductee who lives in the area. Unitas is listed by the Colts as a consultant, but he said at a recent public gathering: "They never consult me."

Marchibroda, a former pro quarterback who spent 14 years as a National Football League assistant coach before taking the top job here in 1975, was fired Thursday.

The Colts won AFC East titles in each of Marchibroda's first three seasons. But without injured quarterback Bert Jones the last two years, Baltimore slumped to the division cellar and the fans sang for Marchibroda's dismissal.

The spectators contended Marchibroda was too conservative, with an unimaginative, dull, predictable offense. He was also blamed for recent poor draft picks, and the trading of running back Lydell Mitchell and tight end Raymond Chester.

Home attendance during the past season was the worst in the NFL, an average of fewer than 37,000, about 60 percent of capacity for Memorial Stadium. The turnout for the season finale on Dec. 9 was 25,684, the worst in 25 years.

Owner Robert Irsay, who said he agonized over his decision for two weeks, mentioned the fans in a brief, prepared statement issued through the Colts' office.

"I have a deep, personal affection for Ted," Irsay said, "and gratitude for the three division championships he brought to Baltimore. But there are times in professional sports that the public voice must be heard."

"I hate to have it happen, but it was not totally unexpected," Marchibroda said calmly after being informed by General Manager Dick Szymanski of Irsay's decision. "Everything happens for the best."

Paavo Nurmi, the great Finnish Olympic champion, always ran with a stopwatch in his hand.

Two Are Suspended

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Kentucky Coach Joe Hall says his suspension of two star freshmen and the departure of sophomore starting guard Dwight Anderson could unify his young basketball team.

"Normally, an action like this will bring a team together," Hall said in a news conference called Thursday to announce the suspensions. "They will feel like any existing problems that they have had have been aired and dealt with."

"In occasions like this, we just call on the remaining players to give a little extra effort. If that's not enough, we just can't be helped."

Suspended were Sam Bowie, a 7-foot-1 starting center, and guard Dirk Minniefield, the team's leading assist man. Hall said both will be on the bench Saturday when No. 2 Kentucky takes on No. 3 Notre Dame in Freedom Hall at Louisville.

Hall said the suspensions were "for violation of well-established training rules," but would not elaborate further. He also denied Anderson's leaving was related to the suspensions.

Clemson, UNC-Charlotte Meet In Far West Classic Finals

By BOB BAUM
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Although the schools are only about 100 miles apart, Clemson and North Carolina-Charlotte have never met in a college basketball game.

That will change tonight when the unbeaten Tigers from the Atlantic Coast Conference take on UNCC of the Sun Belt Conference in the semifinals of the Far West Classic tournament.

Eighteenth-ranked Oregon State meets 20th-ranked Brigham Young in the other semifinal matchup. The Beavers and Cougars won opening-round games Wednesday night.

Thursday night, Clemson downed Texas Tech 79-68 while North Carolina-Charlotte edged Oregon 69-64 in first-round games.

In today's consolation semifinals, Idaho meets Penn State and Texas Tech plays Oregon.

"We came a long way across the country to play a school about two hours away from us," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster.

North Carolina-Charlotte's Coach Mike Pratt may consider a chance to play the beefy Tigers a mixed blessing at best.

Clemson, with three 6-foot-10 players in the starting lineup, dominated Texas Tech inside in a game Foster called "probably our best overall effort of the year."

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers said the Tigers belong in the top 20.

"If there are 20 teams better, I'd like to see them," Myers said.

Foster was asked he feels his team deserves a national ranking.

"Probably not," he said. "We've got some potential to be a good club, but we've got some provin' to do."

He said it's hard for an ACC club to get a top 20 ranking because there already are three teams from the conference among the first 12.

"You could stick us in another league and maybe we'd get in there once in awhile," he said.

Regardless of ranking, the Tigers were impressive Thursday night, especially the play of 6-10, 245-pound center John Campbell, who scored 17 points including four intimidating slam dunks.

"According to Dr. J it's the 100 percent shot, and so if it comes I take it," Campbell said.

Texas Tech played Clemson a year ago, and Red Raider Coach Myers said the Tigers are vastly improved.

"Especially Campbell," Myers said. "Last year he was just a big ol' guy in the middle, but this year he's turned into a real player."

Billy Williams scored 19 to lead the Tigers, who outscored Texas Tech 17-7 in the first 11 minutes of the second half to put the game away.

Kent Williams scored 17 and Ralph Brewster added 17 for the Red Raiders, whose record dropped to 6-2.

The less said about the UNCC-Oregon game the better.

There were 58 fouls called in the game, while each team committed 31 turnovers and shot 39 percent from the field.

"That was our worst performance of the year," said UNCC Coach Pratt. "We were awful, just awful."

But the 49ers came up with just enough consistency late in the game to edge the Ducks, who have dropped four of their last five.

Oregon, 44, had a nine-point lead early in the second half but NCC went ahead 52-51 on two free throws by Chad Kinch with 7:15 remaining.

The lead changed hands four times before the 49ers took command for good when Donnie Koonce stole the ball in backcourt and was fouled as he scored seconds later.

Koonce hit the free throw, stole the ball again and hit two more free throws to give North Carolina-Charlotte a 60-55 lead with 4:38 to play.

Oregon pulled within two, 62-60, when Ray Whiting hit one of two free throws with 1:28 remaining, but baskets by Koonce and Greg Johnson put the game away for the 49ers.

Kinch led all scorers with 19, while Phil Scott added 15, including 10 of 10 free throws. Koonce scored 13, all in the second half.

Guard Richard Wright, who started for the first time this season, led Oregon with 15 points. It was only the fourth game of the season for the 5-9 Wright, a transfer from Old Dominion.

Jacksonville Captures Ninth Victory In Winning Gator Crown

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
So far this season, the Jacksonville Dolphins are a school of flying fish.

Off to their best start since the great Art Gilmore team of 1970, the undefeated Dolphins won their ninth game of the year with a 61-55 victory Thursday night over Florida in the finals of the Gator Bowl basketball tournament.

"That's a darn good basketball team," said Florida Coach

John Lotz of Jacksonville.

The Dolphins were led by a familiar figure, James Ray, who scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds. Maurice Rouhac helped the Jacksonville cause with eight second-half points.

"Maurice played his best game tonight," Lotze said. "I had a feeling he would come through tonight and he did."

In an earlier consolation game, Ron Falenschek hit two free throws with one second left to give Iowa State a 56-55 victory over William and Mary.

Elsewhere in college basketball, Chad Kinch and Donnie Koonce ignited a second-half rally and lifted North Carolina-Charlotte to a 69-64 victory over Oregon in the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore. John Campbell scored 17 points, including four slam dunks, as Clemson defeated Texas Tech 79-68 in another first-round game.

Oregon State and Brigham Young won opening-round games in the tournament Wednesday night.

Jerry Shoecraft sank two free throws with three seconds to go in overtime to give Nebraska an 83-82 victory over Wisconsin in the opening of the 16th Rainbow Classic in Honolulu.

Bo Overton scored 16 points to lead Oklahoma past Western Michigan 72-60 in a first-round game of the All-College tourney in Oklahoma City. Anthony Johnson's 12 points led Wyoming past St. Francis, N.Y. 59-52 in the other half of Thursday night's double-header.

George Turner scored 16 points, including four in the final minute, as Texas defeated San Francisco 65-61 and handed the Dons their first loss after nine victories this year; Byron Scott scored 27 points, including four free throws in the final 30 seconds, to lead Arizona State past Arizona 85-78; Carl Nicks' 32 points powered Indiana State past Baltimore 72-50 and Ricardo Brown scored 27 points and Tony Fuller added 26 to give Pepperdine an upset 96-89 triumph over Kansas.

Also, Michael Wiley had 23 points to lead Long Beach State over Colorado 89-72; Ed Odom's 30 points paced Oklahoma State past Arkansas Tech 92-73; Vanderbilt beat Georgia State 65-53 as Mike Rhodes collected 23 points; Seton Hall whipped Florida Southern 84-70 as Dan Callandriello had 23 points and five assists and Pacific turned back Portland 87-75 behind a 25-point, 11-rebound performance by Ron Cornelius.

Craven Holds Off Pitt Rally

NEW BERN — Hosting Craven Community College proved too much for the Pitt Community College Paladins last night in the first night of the Craven Holiday Invitational, downing the Pitt team, 98-82.

The defeat was only the second in five actual starts for the Paladins, who own a 5-2 record, including two forfeits.

In the other game, Albany Junior College downed Lenoir Community College, 87-80.

The Paladins, playing without one regular, point guard Jeff Moreno, were in a hole to start with. "Moreno broke his thumb in the N.C. Wesleyan game," coach Herb Dillon said. "Without him, we were handicapped. Then, too, we didn't get the scoring from some of our players like I thought we would."

While Dillon didn't feel that the Paladins played that badly, he felt that they should have done better against Craven. "We outrebounded them, and were still down by 22 points at one time. But we fought back and closed it to within four, 83-79, with about three minutes left."

At that point, Craven went to the delay, got several layups and added the rest on free throws.

"This was our first game since December 13, and we had only one practice since we broke for the Christmas holidays," Dillon said.

Frankie Dail led Pitt with 29 points, while Dennis Batts had 20 and Larry Suggs had 16. For Craven, Jeff Jones was high with 27, followed by Jeff McDowell with 18, Zeke Simmons with 17, Willie Beatty with 13 and Flovd Murphy with 12.

While the two-day event is not a tournament, it turns out that the winners and losers meet tonight. Pitt faces Lenoir in the 7 p.m. game, while Albany faces Craven at 9 p.m. Albany and Pitt face each other on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at D.H. Conley High School.

Pitt — Dail 11 7-14 29; Batts 8 4-5 20; Suggs 7 2-16; Garris 1 7; McNeil 3 0-6; Stokes 2 0-2; Speight 0 0-0; Totals 34 14-29-82.

A-G Girls In Consolation Win

KINSTON — Ayden-Grifton's girls and North Lenoir's boys won the consolation titles in the Tri-County Basketball Tournament which winds up tonight at Lenoir Community College.

Greene Central's girls meet South Lenoir, while the Greene boys take on South Lenoir for the boys' title tonight.

In last night's action, North Lenoir's boys downed Ayden-Grifton, 66-46, while the Ayden-Grifton girls took a 51-49 win over North Lenoir.

Ayden-Grifton's boys got off to a slow start, scoring only three points in the first period. The Hawks dumped in 12 during the same frame to establish an early lead. North Lenoir improved that margin to 27-16 by the end of the half.

The Hawks continued to pull away in the third period, boosting the lead by seven more points to a 43-25 margin. They outthrew the Chargers to the wire, 23-21.

Isaac Heath led North Lenoir with 19 points, while Michael White had 16 and Kevin Battle had 11. Allen Haseley led Ayden-Grifton with 11, while Timmy Edwards laced on ten.

In the girls' contest, Ayden-Grifton pulled out to a 15-10 lead after the first period of play. North Lenoir cut one off that in the second quarter and trailed, 24-20 at halftime.

Ayden-Grifton pulled away again in the third, upping their lead to 38-27. North Lenoir closed the gap with a 20-13 margin in the final period, but never was able to draw even with the Chargerettes.

Ayden-Grifton returns to action on January 4, traveling to Southwest Edgecombe.

Williamston, Roanoke Gain Martin Finals

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's boys and girls and Roanoke's girls advanced to the championship finals of the Martin Christmas Tournament with victories last night.

Roanoke's girls topped Jamesville, 50-37, while the Bear Grass girls fell to Williamston, 54-44. In the lone boys' game played, Williamston downed Bear Grass, 64-57.

Tonight, at 7 p.m., the girls' consolation game will be held with Bear Grass meeting Jamesville. In the 8:30 p.m. boys' game, Roanoke and Jamesville meet for the right to face Williamston in Saturday's final. On Saturday, three games will be played, with Williamston meeting Roanoke for the girls' title, preceded by the boys' consolation and followed by the boys' championship.

In the opening game, Roanoke jumped off to a 15-5 lead over the Jameville girls in the first quarter. Jamesville cut a pair off that but still trailed at the half, 22-14. Roanoke again pulled away in the third period, building the lead to 42-26. Jamesville was allowed an 11-8 rally in the final quarter.

Carolyn Jones and Sylvia Parker each had 13 to lead Roanoke, while Donna Hardison had 13 and Tammy Williams had 11 for Jamesville.

In the second girls' game, Williamston doubled up on Bear Grass, 16-8, in the opening stanza, then boosted the lead to 29-17 by halftime. They continued to pull away, running the lead to 41-25, in the third period. Bear Grass rallied, 19-13 in the final quarter, but it wasn't enough.

Jan Rogerson led Williamston with 21 points, while Myra Martin added 16. Bear Grass was led by Joette Rogers with 29 points.

Williamston's boys streaked out to a 21-12 lead in the first period of the lone male game of the night. Bear Grass was able to cut two off that in the second frame, but trailed at 33-26 at intermission.

The Bears continued to rally in the third frame, cutting the lead to 45-42, at the horn. But Williamston was able to pull away, 19-15, in the final quarter, to hold on for the win.

James Woolard led Williamston with 25 points, while Edward Williams had 13 and Avery Purvis had 10. Bear Grass was paced by Watson Rogers with 14, while Terrance White had 11 and William Roberson had 10.

Oilers Suffer Another Blow; Carpenter Hurt

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer
The Houston Oilers are still knocking them down left and right, only it's their own team that's being knocked down.

Already hurt by three key injuries, the Oilers suffered another blow Thursday when running back Rob Carpenter tripped over a blocking dummy, sprained his ankle and was reported as "questionable" for Saturday's National Football League playoff game against San Diego.

Carpenter's mishap came on top of injuries to running star Earl Campbell, quarterback Dan Pastorini and receiver Ken Burroughs in last week's 13-7 victory over Denver. All three players are doubtful starters with groin strains.

Carpenter's injury left only three healthy running backs on the Oilers' depth chart: starting fullback Tim Wilson and little-used Ronnie Coleman and Boobie Clark.

By comparison, the Chargers are relatively healthy for the second-round American Conference test at San Diego, one of four NFL playoff games scheduled for this weekend. In a National Conference game Saturday, it's Philadelphia at Tampa Bay.

Two more games will be played on Sunday — Miami at Pittsburgh in the AFC and Los Angeles at Dallas in the NFC.

Both Houston and Philadelphia won wild-card games last week. The winners this weekend advance to the conference championship games scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 6. The Super Bowl, matching the conference winners, will be played in Pasadena, Calif., on Sunday, Jan. 20.

Owing to their recent streak of injuries, the Oilers are seven-point underdogs to the high-powered Chargers, the AFC West champions led by quarterback Dan Fouts. The Chargers' receiving corps is a bit under the weather, with John Jefferson and Charley Joiner both nursing minor injuries. Both are listed as probable starters, though running back Mike Thomas may miss the game because of the flu.

Philadelphia has been installed as a four-point favorite over Tampa Bay. Bucs quarterback Doug Williams sees the game as a tossup.

"We have Ricky Bell, they have Wilbert Montgomery," he said. "They have a good tight end, like we do. They have a good defense, a good three-man front and linebackers who are strong and quick, like ours, plus a strong secondary."

The Philadelphia-Tampa Bay game renews a coaching rivalry between the Eagles' Dick Vermeil and the Bucs' John McKay. They previously met when Vermeil was coaching at UCLA and McKay at Southern Cal.

Pittsburgh is a 9½-point choice over Miami and Dallas is favored by eight over Los Angeles in Sunday's games.

Dallas beat Los Angeles 28-0 in the NFC title game last year. The Cowboys also routed the Rams 37-7 in 1975 and bumped them out of the playoffs with a 27-16 victory in 1973.

Lanier Is Injured

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Bob Lanier, team captain and all-time leading scorer for the NBA Central Division's last-place Detroit Pistons, will be out of action indefinitely because of a fractured left hand.

Lanier was placed on the injured reserve list Thursday, said Dr. Ben Paolucci, the team's physician. The fracture resulted from a collision with another player in the second half of Detroit's 98-97 loss to the Indiana Pacers at the Pontiac Silverdome Wednesday night.

He played the remainder of the game, but missed seven of his last eight shots, as the Pistons fell to 9-28 and deeper the division cellar. They are currently 7½ games behind fourth-place Houston.

Bench Aids In Atlanta's Win

By The Associated Press
The Atlanta Hawks hit you with everything, including the bench.

"They're the type of team that can get a good night out of anybody," said Houston's Rick Barry, "and this is what happened for them tonight."

They called in the reserves Thursday night, and they helped the Hawks to a 112-110 National Basketball Association victory over the Rockets.

"I thought that the unit we had on the floor for the last six minutes of the game did an outstanding job for us," said Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown.

That included Eddie Johnson, who scored 20 points, including the winning jump shot with three seconds left.

"Not only did they bring it back," said Brown, "but they brought it back with execution, good passing, good defense and moved the ball on the break and made some key steals."

In other NBA action, Washington defeated Milwaukee 117-108; Cleveland whipped New York 125-110; Philadelphia beat San Antonio 118-114; Boston routed San Diego 118-97 and Los Angeles turned back Utah 124-116.

Bullets 117, Bucks 108
Greg Ballard scored a career-high 27 points to pace Washington over Milwaukee. Ballard, starting his fourth consecutive NBA game in place of the injured Bobby Dandridge, sank 10 of 17 shots and grabbed 13 rebounds.

Cavaliers 125, Knicks 110
Mike Mitchell poured in 34 points, 12 in a pivotal third-quarter rally, to spark Cleveland over New York. Campy Russell added 24 points and Randy Smith 23 for the Cavaliers, who have won 13 of their last 14 home games. The Knicks were led by Toby Knight with 30 and rookie Bill Cartwright with 26.

76ers 118, Spurs 114
Julius Erving scored 12 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter as Philadelphia beat San Antonio with a late rally. The 76er victory overshadowed a great performance by San Antonio's George Gervin, who scored 46 points.

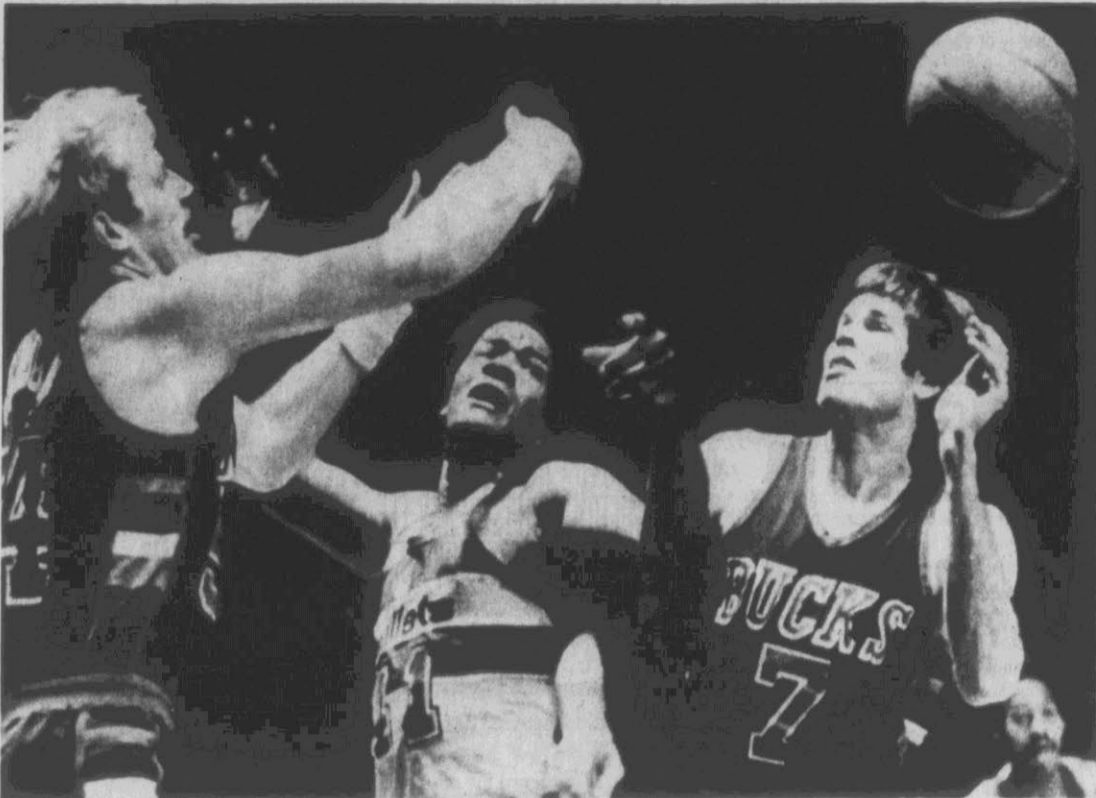

Darryl Dawkins added 28 points and Maurice Cheeks 22 as the 76ers won their fourth straight game.

Celtics 118, Clippers 97
Dave Cowens scored 27 points, Cedric Maxwell had 19 and Larry Bird added 18 in just three quarters as Boston routed San Diego for its eighth victory in nine games.

The victory gave the Celtics, first in the Atlantic Division East with a 28-8 record, a 12-7 mark on the road. Lloyd Free, who like Bird sat out the final quarter, led the Clippers scoring with 28 points.

Lakers 124, Jazz 116
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Norm Nixon combined for 58 points as Los Angeles defeated Utah. Abdul-Jabbar scored 12 of his game-total 31 points in the first quarter.

Utah's Adrian Dantley led all scorers with 37 points.

But For World War II, Bryant Might Have Been Arkansas Coach

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — But for a terrible war between nations and some years later, a much less frightful dispute between a couple of state universities, Bear Bryant might be coaching Arkansas instead of Alabama in the Sugar Bowl next Tuesday.

"At one time, I wanted more than anything to be the coach at Arkansas," says Bryant, a native of Moro Bottom, Ark., which he calls "a little piece of bottom land on the Moro Creek, about seven miles south of Fordyce."

World War II may have changed the course of coaching, as well as world history.

"When I was an assistant at Vanderbilt, I went over and tried to get the Arkansas job," Bryant recalls. "I wasn't ready, but I thought I might get it."

"I called Bill Dickey, the New York Yankees catcher, and was riding with him to Little Rock to see the governor, who was a good friend of Bill's.

When we heard the news about Pearl Harbor on the radio, Bill just threw on the brakes and turned around. I went back to Nashville and went into the Navy."

Bryant got out in time to become head coach at Maryland in 1945. He began an eight-year stint at Kentucky in 1946 and went to Texas A&M in 1954 for four years before Alabama, his alma mater, beckoned. But not before Arkansas was in — and out of — the picture again.

"In 1952, I actually accepted the Arkansas job and made a lot of people mad at both Kentucky and Arkansas," Bryant remembers. "I wanted the job and went over and met with the governor and the president and a lot of people. We talked everything over and the job was mine."

"I didn't know I'd have any trouble getting out of my contract, but when I went back to Kentucky they made it so difficult that I didn't take it. We talked for three days and I begged them to let me go, but they wouldn't. I even had to stop John Barnhill (the Arkansas athletic director) from coming up there."

"Some of my friends in Arkansas got mad at me because they thought I was using them to get more money, but I wasn't. I didn't get a penny, and I wouldn't have under the circumstances. I really wanted the job. I wanted it bad, but I just couldn't take it."

It would have been quite a homecoming but instead Bryant went to Alabama and became one of the winningest coaches in college football history. His overall record in 35 seasons is 295-77-16, including 204-38-8 in 22 years at Bama.

"Playing Arkansas is like playing my own people," Bryant says. "If I have to lose, I'd rather lose to them. I've already had calls for tickets from folks in Arkansas."

Bryant used to get back to Arkansas several times a year until his brother died last year, and says he may get back "home" after the Sugar Bowl.

"Alabama is my home now," he says, "but Arkansas is my home state."

Indiana's Woodson Out For The Season

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Woodson, the Indiana University basketball team's 6-foot-5 senior standout, was operated on to repair a ruptured disc in his back and probably will be out of action the rest of the season.

Woodson, leading scorer and co-captain of the 10th-ranked Hoosiers, was reported in fair condition Thursday at Methodist Hospital here after the operation.

Team officials were unavailable for comment, but the Indianapolis News quoted an unidentified doctor as saying Woodson would be "out at least four months."

Coach Bobby Knight said

Wednesday night, "I don't think in any game this season we have seen Mike at his full effectiveness. I've never felt worse for any player for any reason because I think, more than any person, I know how much he looked forward to his senior season and how much he put into preparing for it."

The forward, the school's second-leading all-time scorer, missed his first game for the Hoosiers last Saturday after playing in 96 consecutive games over four years. Indiana lost, 61-57, to North Carolina, with Woodson sitting on the bench in street clothes.

Woodson reportedly developed back trouble last month, but team publicist Tom Miller said the problem reached a peak Dec. 18, when Indiana beat Toledo 80-56. Woodson scored 19 points in that game.

The Hoosiers, 5-2, already were in San Diego Thursday to compete in the Cabrillo Classic tonight and Saturday.

Woodson averaged 20 points in Indiana's first six games, hitting 49 percent from the field and 84.6 percent from the free throw line.

Woodson, called by Knight as a junior the best player never to make All-America, led the Knight-coached U.S. team to the gold medal in last summer's Pan American Games. He was co-captain and leading scorer on that team, averaging 18.3 points.

gave university President William E. Davis a vote of confidence Monday, saying he had acted ethically and responsibly in dealing with the situation.

The university has been rocked by problems involving the athletic program since the FBI disclosed in November it was investigating possible mail fraud and bribery.

Former Lobo head basketball Coach Norm Ellenberger and assistant Manny Goldstein were suspended after the FBI released a transcript of a wire-tapped telephone conversation in which Ellenberger and Goldstein apparently discussed a method to falsify a player's academic transcript so he would be eligible to play at UNM.

Ellenberger was later fired and Goldstein resigned as a result of the problems.

Belin and five other Lobo basketball players were declared ineligible in early December when the players said they had not enrolled in or attended a course given by Ottawa University of Kansas for which they had been given credit.

Without the credits, the players were not eligible to play basketball.

It later was learned that three UNM football players also received Ottawa University credits without attending class. They also were declared ineligible.

The school forfeited six 1979 football victories and a basketball triumph over West Texas State this season after it was discovered that ineligible players had participated in the games.

Morgan Feeling Comfortable

Looking To A Good New Year

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gary Owens, writer, Emmy-winning star of NBC's old "Laugh-In" show, local radio host and deprived fellow, was preparing his New Year's resolutions when he came across this gem from the Carthaginian theologian, Tertullian:

"Credo quia absurdum."
Translation: "I believe, because it is absurd."

In the spirit of Tertullian, then, I present the Gary Owens 1980 Resolutions:

"I have resolved never to let Jack Klugman guest on my show and perform a surprise autopsy."

"I have resolved to try to help the mafia and the PTA merge, to help cut costs."

"I have resolved not to sneak into hospital recovery rooms and pull sheets over everybody's head."

"I have resolved never to book a hotel room directly below Jose Greco and his flamenco dance troupe."

"These are just a lot of old jokes I've gathered through the years," Owens says, apparently grateful for the opportunity to be shed of them.

"On Valentine's Day 1980, I resolve not to allow Western Union PruneGrams to be sent to my elderly relatives (I've found that offends them)."

"During the summer of 1980, when it really gets hot, I resolve to help get people cooler by tattooing a picture of Admiral Byrd on my sternum. I plan to keep myself cool by packing a friend's nose with ice until he sneezes on me."

"On Thanksgiving 1980, I have resolved not to try to fool my family by filling our canary with helium and telling them that they're having turkey (it never works)."

"At Christmas 1980, I resolve not to run down the Hollywood Freeway with reindeer antlers in my mouth (it created a lot of problems this year)."

"I resolve not to reserve seats on a bus for anyone smuggling in a whoopee cushion, or anyone taking an alligator of the wrong gender across state lines."

"I resolve that when I take I.Q. tests, I will not misspell I.Q."

"I resolve to figure out a way to convert wire coathangers into gasoline."

"I resolve not to attend any more erotic Tupperware parties."

"And, finally, I resolve to find a TV set so perfect it will interfere with my neighbor's electric tools."

May your new year be merry and bright. Or, at least absurd.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After four years on "M-A-S-H," the role of Col. Sherman Potter fits Harry Morgan like an old shoe. Or, in Potter's case, an old saddle.

"I think I'm a lot looser now, less military," said Morgan, who became head of the combat zone hospital when McLean Stevenson left the CBS series in 1976.

"There's much more of a flow between me and the other characters now. It's good. We have so much fun sitting around off-camera that it really doesn't change when we get on-camera. There's a lot of affection flowing around there."

Morgan said he felt a little uncomfortable at first when he joined the show. He was a little worried about replacing a comic like Stevenson and about how he would fit in with the rest of the cast.

"Our relationships just get deeper and deeper the longer I'm with the show. But they were great even from the beginning."

The essential difference between his approach to the role and Stevenson's is that Stevenson's Henry Blake seemed to be a man only temporarily in the Army, waiting to get back to his private practice.

Col. Potter, on the other hand, looks like he was born in the Army. He was in the cavalry once, and ever since has considered the horse as man's best friend.

Since it came on the air in 1972, "M-A-S-H" has undergone as many personnel changes as a real Army unit.

Stevenson and Wayne Rogers, who played Trapper John, were the first to leave. Mike Farrell replaced Rogers, joining Alan Alda in the Swamp as B.J. Hunnicutt. Larry Linville (Maj. Frank Burns) left and was replaced by David Ogden Stiers (Maj. Charles Emerson Winchester).

Gary Burghoff, as Radar O'Reilly, the only actor who was also in the movie, left early this year.

Alda's Hawkeye Pierce remains essentially a cutup, but Loretta Swit has guided Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan through a remarkable transformation.

Joining "M-A-S-H" after it had been on a few years was a new experience for Morgan.

"I've always been with a show from the beginning," he said, "but this was easier than starting some of those shows from the beginning."

"M-A-S-H" is Morgan's eighth starring role in a series, which is believed to be a record. His other shows were "December Bride," "Pete and Gladys," "Kentucky Jones," "The Richard Boone Show," "Dragnet," "The D.A." and "Hec Ramsey."

would ruff, cash the ace of clubs to discover the 4-0 break, then enter dummy with a heart. After discarding a diamond on a high heart, he would take the marked trump finesse for his contract.

Fortunately for the defenders, West looked ahead a trick or two. Since he was void in clubs, he realized that his partner's trump holding might have to be protected from a finesse. The fact that East had played his lowest spade at trick one marked him with three cards in the suit, so it was futile to try to cash a second spade trick.

There was only one way to prevent declarer from taking a trump finesse, and that was to remove his entries to dummy as soon as possible. Therefore, West shifted to a heart, which couldn't do the defense any harm, but which might deny South a valuable option in the play.

Declarer won in dummy and took a diamond discard. When he led a trump to his queen, the bad news was out and there was nothing he could do about it. He had to concede a trump trick for down one.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, DEC. 29, 1979

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Rebellious conditions exist early in the day but this is soon changed to a very constructive attitude by you and others. Think of your basic plans and goals and try to obtain them by organizing your efforts in sensible directions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study your property well and know how to improve it, make it more valuable. Make plans for the future sensibly. Start wheels rolling.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get busy with your creative ideas and make big headway through perseverance. Know what you want and go after it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to plan your time more efficiently if you are to be more successful. Look to an older family friend for the assistance you need.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Being with older and more serious friends can spell greater success for you today. Be careful of your wallet.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A bigwig who has given you backing in the past can be of further help to you now. Contact this person early in the day. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Ideal day to be off to new sites and activities with associates. Persevere with some new arrangement and show that you have guts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Schedule your time and activities well so that you have greater benefits. Plan to make any necessary payments regularly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Talk over with partners how best to operate in the future for greater mutual benefits and harmony. Be tactful and all is fine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find best way to finish all that work in front of you. Talk plan over with co-worker first and gain fine cooperation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Once important duties are taken care of, get into amusements that will relieve tension. Be careful with money and in driving.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to relieve tensions at home and be more comfortable and happy there with kin. Get in touch with persons you like.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Come to an agreement with others since they now understand your views. Good day to make out important reports and statements.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those delightful persons who will have much ability at analyzing, organizing and setting up a firm structure and foundation for long-time projects. Sports are fine for building up the rather frail body.

Mixed Prospects For TV Nets' Season Offerings

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI)—As 1979 draws to a close, there are two ways to look at the television season that opened with great fanfare last September—the final season of the decade.

A critic can deplore the fact that of the 21 new programs on the schedule as it stood on Labor Day, only seven will survive to appear on the winter lineup that becomes operational in the first quarter of 1980.

Or you can be surprised that even that many survived. From the dispassionate view of television history, traditionally only about one-third of any season's new shows have made it to a second full season.

But more than one-third generally stick around past the winter schedule reshuffle that the industry likes to call the "second season".

For the sake of brevity, it is easier to list the survivors than those that went down with the ratings. Still on the winter schedule are "Trapper John," "Paris" and "The Last Resort" on CBS, "Benson" and "Hart to Hart" on ABC and "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" on NBC.

To make things look a little better, ABC has promised to bring back "Lazarus Syndrome" and actually set a Spring date for the return of "The Associates." NBC insists it will eventually fit "From Here to Eternity" into its lineup. CBS makes no rash promises and is highly unlikely to trying again with disasters such as "California Fever" or "Working Stiffs."

On the other hand, in keeping "Paris" and "Last Resort" on the air, CBS is illustrating the triumph of hope over experience—neither has done brilliantly in the ratings but each could catch on.

The network hope is that "Last Resort" will turn out to be another "WKRP in Cincinnati," which responded to some reworking and rescheduling, and has it in a snug berth on Monday night between "WKRP" and "M-A-S-H." If it doesn't, "The Stockard Channing Show" awaits in the wings.

"Paris" has James Earl Jones and a touch of class, but it operates against ABC's well-liked "Hart to Hart" and new programming on NBC. Worse, it follows fading "Hawaii 5-0." If "Paris" doesn't move up fast, it will be replaced by "Hagen" starring Chad Everett.

There was no categorizing the shows that failed. In a season in which almost every new show was reminiscent of a previous hit, some copies made it and some didn't.

Being just plain awful was not enough to insure failure—or success. Take Tuesday nights, when CBS's "California Fever" and NBC's "Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo" battled for the audience left over from

ABC's "Happy Days" and "Angie."

On an intelligence scale of one to 10, neither show could count past two. On the basis of insult to intelligence, call it a draw. But "Lobo" has been a success and "Fever" has expired.

The demise of "240-Robert" proved that copying "CHiPs" could backfire, and the squeal of tires and brakes is not a substitute for scripts.

Robert Conrad still is looking for a series as "A Man Called Sloane" failed to evoke James Bond-ish reveries in viewers. The failure of "Eisched" indicated that audiences aren't clamoring for hard-edged police stories.

Hard core macho appears on the way out, unless relieved with humor. Today's audiences prefer Johnny Fever to Joe Mannix.

The failure of a gaggle of hapless sitcoms only proved that even the long-suffering television audience runs out of patience.

The ratings race took an unexpected turn in the final four months of 1979—early in the new fall season, NBC scored high and left its chief, Fred Silverman, in the peculiar position of denying that his network would remain in first place. His target date remained Christmas 1980.

Silverman's attitude was the triumph of experience over hope, and, sure enough, NBC eventually settled into third place.

CBS, which had dominated the ratings for 20 years until overtaken by ABC in the mid-1970s, had a surprisingly good ratings picture in the new season. While it was recognized that nobody could beat ABC this fall, CBS has narrowed the gap.

CBS actually captured first place in the November "sweeps," in which rating statistics are compiled in 200 local markets. It is from these figures that advertising rates are figured. Sweeps also take place to measure viewing in winter and spring.

Judges OK Deporting U.S. Visa Violators

WASHINGTON (AP)—An appeals court has cleared the way for the deportation of some Iranian students as part of America's retaliation for the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

But a lawyer for three students who challenged President Carter's order singling out Iranians for immigration checks says he will carry the fight to the Supreme Court unless he gets a rehearing.

A three-member panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals on Thursday ruled Carter's Nov. 10 order was constitutional and that it was "a fundamental element of the president's efforts to resolve the Iranian crisis."

Attorney Eric M. Lieberman said he will ask the full, nine-member court, to hear the case because of "this very important issue."

The appeals judges overturned an order by U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green, who had found the order an understandable effort to retaliate against Iran but "one that does not support a legitimate national interest."

The judges chastised Mrs. Green for going "beyond an acceptable judicial role" in attempting to evaluate policy reasons for the order.

"Certainly in a case such as the one presented here, it is not the business of courts to pass judgment on the decisions of the president in the field of foreign policy," the appeals court ruled.

"Judges are not expert in that field and they lack the information necessary for the formation of an opinion," the ruling said. "The president, on the other hand, has the opportunity

10-Year-Old Suit 'Ready'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The oldest civil lawsuit currently pending in federal court in Raleigh is scheduled to go to trial early next month.

The suit was filed 10 years ago against General Electric Co. and Texaco Inc. on behalf of Gerard Harry (Rod) Owens Jr.

Owens died in his bedroom in August 1968 due to an alleged electrocution from a faulty portable radio and AC-DC converter, according to court records.

Lengthy pre-trial preparation, various motions and lawyers' requests for postponements resulted in the delaying the case being brought to trial in U.S. District Court.

Chief state medical examiner Dr. Page Hudson reviewed the case as a private forensic pathological consultant. Hudson concluded Owens died from "electrically induced ventricular fibrillation" of the heart. That meant Owens died when his heartbeat rhythm was halted by an electric current.

Lawyers for GE and Texaco tried to have Hudson's opinion kept out of evidence. They charged it was based on inadmissible hearsay information, but U.S. District Court Judge Franklin T. Dupree Jr. ruled Hudson's opinion about the cause of death can be admitted as evidence.

Dupree, who will preside over the trial, also denied a motion by defense attorneys for judgment in the companies' favor. He said enough facts and issues existed in the case for it to be heard by a jury.

Owens' parents contend his radio had a surface electrical leak that caused him to be electrocuted. He was found lifeless on his back by his mother, who went to his bedroom to call him for lunch, the lawsuit alleges.

of knowing the conditions which prevail in foreign countries."

A statement issued by the White House hailed the ruling and said the president is gratified.

"The decision...confirms the view that the administration has held all along; that the action taken in surveying Iranian students was both constitutional and legal," the statement said.

As of Dec. 24, the Immigration and Naturalization Service had interviewed 54,486 Iranian students and found that 6,444 did not have valid visas. Of the students in this country, 463 have requested asylum, 857 left rather than face deportation, 50 others left voluntarily and 10 have been deported.

The ruling freed the immigration service to resume deportation actions held up since Dec. 11, when Mrs. Green found such actions discriminatory.

Mrs. Green had ruled that Iranian students were due the equal protection of the laws and could not be singled out for visa checks.

Ten Inmates Die In S.C. Jail Fire; 3 Survived

By THOMAS C. COTHMAN
Associated Press Writer
LANCASTER, S.C. (AP) — Ten inmates died when a fire sent smoke billowing through a 156-year-old jail described by a law enforcement official as "a fortress."

Only three prisoners housed on the second floor of the Lancaster County jail, a white, two-story masonry structure built in 1823, survived the fire Thursday night.

Officials said the county was scheduled to move the jail and offices of the sheriff's department in two weeks to a new building on the outskirts of Lancaster.

Two inmates and a fireman remained hospitalized this morning for smoke inhalation, according to a spokeswoman at Elliott White Springs Memorial Hospital. Two firemen and two policemen were treated for smoke inhalation and released, she said.

Capt. J. Leon Gasque, assistant director of the State Law Enforcement Division, said investigators had not determined how the fire started. "We have some suspicions but I'd rather not say more at this point."

He said a SLED arson unit is investigating the fire, which broke out at 6:15 p.m. on the second floor.

Gasque said the jail was quickly engulfed in smoke, but a jailer succeeded in rescuing two inmates.

The cause of death was undetermined "but it looks like smoke inhalation," he said.

"This building was fixing to be done away with," Gasque added. He said it was "one of the old Mills-designed jails, and it's like a fortress."

The jail was one of a number of South Carolina buildings designed by Robert Mills, a Charleston, S.C., architect who designed the Washington Monument and other noted structures.

Gasque said investigators were moving slowly because "there are some hot spots still upstairs." He said the "hot spots" were papers and bedding that authorities did not want to douse with water because it might destroy evidence.

The fire was brought under control about 7:30 by city and county firefighting units, aided by volunteer firemen. "There was minor fire damage to the building with the exception of the smoke damage," Sheriff Nae E. Parks said. SLED spokesman Hugh Munn said Cole had the keys and succeeded in opening one of two doors to the cellblock. But he was unable to open the other door, which may have been blocked by the body of an unconscious inmate, Munn said.

While Cole was trying to unlock the second door he heard the men inside calling for help, Munn said.

The heavy smoke forced Cole and the officers to retreat. The highway patrolman had already telephoned the fire department and firemen wearing gas masks retrieved the bodies a short time later.

Sailing Cargo Ship Is Lost In Atlantic Storm

WESTHAMPTON, N.Y. (AP) — Ned Ackerman watched his twin-masted dream vanishing into the ocean mists as foul winds and heavy seas sought to push the John F. Leavitt, the nation's first sailing cargo ship in 40 years, beneath the waves.

The 97-foot wooden schooner was making its first working voyage Thursday, carrying a load of lumber and tanning chemicals from Quincy, Mass., to Haiti.

It was Ackerman's attempt to recreate the age of sail and beat the energy crunch, but early today it was sinking into the Atlantic Ocean.

Coast Guard officials said the Cutter Chase was dispatched from Boston to the site of the distressed ship about 300 miles east-southeast of New York City. Spokesman Fran Padilla said the cutter would "do what it can to save the vessel."

Ackerman and eight crew members and passengers were rescued from the foundering schooner Thursday afternoon by a helicopter from the Air National Guard's 106th Aerospace Rescue and Recovery Group here.

"This has been my life for the last four years," said Ackerman, 36, of Thomaston, Maine. "I will have to reassess the situation now...It's been a long haul and I'm exhausted...We got caught by the perils of the sea."

Ackerman said he called for help because "it wasn't worth risking everyone on board trying to get the situation under control."

Upon his arrival here, Ackerman said his troubles began when winds shifted from the northeast, to the northwest about 4 p.m. Thursday. He said the ship began rocking between 20-foot waves pushed by 20-knot winds, causing the vessel to take on water.

The Coast Guard said the ship left Quincy about 10 days ago.

The Leavitt, which took nearly four years to build, set sail Nov. 12 from Thomaston, bound for Quincy, and ran aground twice in that trip.

Ackerman, a former medieval scholar and English instructor at Merrimack College in North Andover, Mass., named the vessel after maritime scholar John F. Leavitt, who wrote "In the Wake of the Coasting Schooner."

Modeled after 19th-century prototypes, the red-and-white-hulled Leavitt was powered by wind pressing against 6,440 square feet of canvas sail rigged on 80-foot masts. With no engines, its only fuel requirement was a small amount of diesel oil needed for pumps, generators and hydraulic cargo hoists.

Estimates of the cost of building the vessel started at $300,000, but Ackerman never disclosed an exact figure.

The Leavitt's cargo capacity was 150 tons, the equivalent of five semi-trailer truckloads.

Library-Use Suit Eyed

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A suit will be filed "without doubt" because of a public library's policy on the use of its meeting rooms, a spokesman for the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union said.

The NCCLU has unsuccessfully tried to persuade the city of Hickory to allow the Ku Klux Klan to use the Elbert Ivey Memorial Library's rooms for an exhibit of Klan materials, said executive director George Gardner.

The NCCLU claims the library's new policy of providing the rooms only for library-sponsored or connected activities, programs and classes unconstitutionally denies citizens their rights to use public facilities.

"I expect the next time we'll be in contact will be in court," Gardner said. "I think we did what we could to resolve the issue."

Vernon Logan of Winston-Salem, Imperial wizard of the New Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said he asked library director John Moorman in October for room to hold a public meeting. The request was denied.

The request was made before the library changed its policy on Dec. 19. Elsie Deaton, chairman of the library board, said the board felt in October that political meetings should not be held in the library.

Some Opposing Deposited Pay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some of North Carolina's state workers think there is a definite advantage to the state handing a paycheck to an employee rather than banking it for him.

So they're opposed to the new direct deposit pay system that has been instituted for about 600 employees.

"A lot of people are absolutely opposed to it," said Emmett W. Burden, director of the N.C. State Employees Association. "I've received a lot of phone calls from state employees across the state who feel their paychecks should not be directly deposited against their will."

The system, one in which the state deposits employees' checks directly into its payroll account, is mandatory in some offices of the Department of Administration.

Originally the state planned to expand the practice to the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety. But opposition from the NCSEA stopped it.

The practice "destroys something very valuable between the state and its employees when it is done against the employees' will. They are not looking at the psychological advantage of the state handing a paycheck to its employees on pay-days," Burden says.

State Budget Director John A. Williams Jr. admits there is opposition to the plan. But he claims it is limited. He said all employees in an office must participate in the plan for it to work.

There are some employees who find direct deposit convenient, Burden said. The regulation of it is opposed by others, he said.

"There is a psychological disadvantage to the state to tell a fellow who has just worked a month that he has got to go downtown to get his money.

"If it's voluntary then we support it," he said.

Someone Stole Big Teddy Bear

The Greenville Police Department would like to find a teddy bear.

Chief Glenn Cannon said a six-foot-tall teddy bear, valued at $100, was reported taken from J.A.'s Uniform Shop at 1710 West Sixth St. by thieves who broke a display window to gain access to the big bear.

Employees of the firm discovered the theft about 11 a.m. yesterday, the chief noted.

ACLU Opposes Parental Steps To Curb Juveniles

By RON BARKER
Associated Press Writer
PROVO, Utah (AP) — Thousands of families are convulsed by battles between anguished parents and teen-agers gone somehow wrong, becoming involved in crime or drugs or simply losing their emotional grip.

Some parents conclude they can no longer control their children and pack them off to reform schools.

Just how far distraught parents may legally go in seeking to control their children through reformatories is at the heart of an American Civil Liberties Union suit involving a private reform school, the Provo Canyon School for Boys.

In what is expected to be a highly emotional court fight, probably beginning in January, the ACLU will try to persuade the court to establish the broad principle that children in such cases should receive all the legal and constitutional protections currently afforded adults.

The ACLU objects to two situations:

—That parents may enroll juveniles who are drug abusers, runaways and truants in private behavior modification programs without a hearing.

—That juvenile courts in some states may also commit juveniles to such programs without providing them an attorney.

The ACLU is asking a federal court in Utah to grant all juveniles full court hearings — with appointed attorneys if necessary — before allowing them to be involuntarily committed to private reform schools.

Its class action suit against the Provo Canyon School also asks for a ban on all private reform schools not supervised by state agencies.

"Parents don't always act in the best interests of a child," said ACLU attorney Kathryn Collard, who added that she considers the suit to be the most important juvenile rights case in the country today.

She contended it's the court's job to ensure parents act responsibly and that the juvenile's right to proper treatment is protected.

"Even though fallible, parents are still the best judge," argued Dr. Robert Crist, a psychiatrist and medical director and co-owner of the Provo Canyon School.

Ms. Collard has claimed that the school's treatment program is really a form of mind control. "They're punished for what they think — just for thinking about running away," she said.

Crist termed the accusation absurd, while admitting the school is strict. Many of the school's 95 pupils have juvenile court records and have taken drugs, Crist said. Some have emotional problems and are on medication, he added.

The boys, aged up to 18, are required to follow conservative codes of dress and grooming. They are punished for stealing, swearing, fighting, running away, taking drugs or breaking school regulations. Privileges are granted for behavior that conforms to rules, Crist said.

The school has been rumored — falsely, Crist said — to have drugged children at home and spirited them away to Utah. Crist said an Arizona doctor has been sued by his son for allegedly sedating him and delivering him to the school, but he added that the school had no advance knowledge of the father's alleged plan.

Ms. Collard also contends students are "like zombies" from overmedication, but an inspection of the school by the Utah Division of Family Services found no evidence of that or any other abuse.

The school's educational program has been reviewed by the Utah Board of Education, which found no shortcomings, said Eugene Thorn, a clinical psychologist and a partner in the school.

The school consists of a modern single-story classroom and dormitory complex on a wooded rural lot north of Provo. The school grounds are surrounded by a high chain-link fence.

Some of the students are enrolled by their parents, who pay tuition of $1,500 a month. Tuition for others who have been committed by juvenile courts in several states is covered by federal money.

Ms. Collard maintains the state has the right to impose standards on private rehabilitative schools if they get public funds.

In April, the ACLU obtained a preliminary injunction banning some practices at the school, including using a lie de-tor, censoring mail and assigning disobedient students to a "prescription room," a form of isolation. The "p-room" now can be used only for physically violent students.

Crist defended use of the polygraph and limited mail censorship, saying that since both were discontinued, thefts and drug problems have jumped.

U.S. District Judge Bruce Jenkins, in granting the injunction, said, "This court strongly believes that when children are involuntarily confined in private, run-for-profit institutions...the state must provide appropriate oversight...to insure that children receive adequate therapeutic treatment and that their fundamental interests are protected."

Thorn, the clinical psychologist, says the main question to be decided by the suit is whether parents have the right to choose what they consider appropriate therapy for their children, or whether the courts are going to intercede.

If the ACLU is successful, he said, it would mean "a parent couldn't force a child to have a tooth pulled without fear of a lawsuit."

Costly Error

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state will have to pay $55,000 to $60,000 in mailing costs to correct a printing error on about 500,000 vehicle registration cards, a N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles official says.

Bill Penney, deputy director of the division, says there will be other costs — for overtime pay for employees and for computer time to print the material — but they have not been determined.

The first set of registration cards mailed did not contain vehicle license numbers needed to obtain 1980 validation stickers for motorcycles and trailers. A second card was mailed to motorcycle and trailer owners. Only the second card may be used to purchase validation stickers.

Officials say the error was due to confusion. They say this is the first year trailers will use the stickers.

The additional costs, Penny says, will make a "slight dent" in the division's budget. But he says it should cause no serious problems.

Area Students In Who's Who Book

Five area students are among the 31 students selected at Elizabeth City State University to be listed in the 1979-80 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

They are: Roberta Brown, a senior intermediate education major and the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Brown of Williamston; Garland Daughtry, a senior early childhood education major and the son of Avery Daughtry of Edenton; Gary L. Hathaway, a senior business administration major and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Hathaway Jr.; Mary K. Jones, a senior English major and the daughter of Mrs.

Louise J. Stokes of Bethel; and James Satterfield, a senior business administration major and the son of Mrs. Loretta Satterfield.

ECSU outstanding students were selected based on their academic achievements, service to the University and local community, leadership in extracurricular activities, and their future potential.

'Energy Crisis' Threat Cited

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of energy experts says the energy situation in the United States is at a crisis level and poses a major threat to national security.

Charles Ebinger, director of the Energy and National Security Program at Georgetown University, called Thursday for the United States to promptly cut petroleum consumption. One step he urged to reduce consumption was raising gasoline prices to $2 to $3 a gallon. The U.S. energy situation "is a major national security threat," Ebinger said, "and it is time to stop playing politics with it."

Predict Meat Prices To Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers can look forward to "reasonable" meat prices in 1980, predicts the American Meat Institute.

The industry group said Thursday that beef supplies should decline further next year, but pork and poultry are expected to be in greater supply. That should mean, said the group, that "prices for meat will be reasonable." C. Manly Moipus, institute president, said overall meat consumption in 1980 will probably average about 181 pounds per capita, compared with 181.2 pounds in 1979.

HOLDING SERVICES

The Gospel Chorus of St. Matthew F.W.B. Church will hold services Sunday at 11 a.m. at St. Matthew with Eldress Rumara Knox presiding. The program is for the building fund.

No Formula To Integration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shirley M. Hufstедler, the nation's first education secretary, says there is no "glib formula" for achieving school integration.

Mrs. Hufstедler, who was sworn in Dec. 6 to head the new Education Department, said Thursday busing should not be the first step authorities take in an effort to achieve school integration. "I have been very firmly on the side of racial integration of the public schools..." she said. "But these devices must be examined community by community to find out what...is likely to optimize racial peace, racial integration and a thoughtful consideration of the educational values that are available to each child."

Postal Holiday

There will be no postal service New Years Day, Tuesday, January 1, 1980. Mail will be delivered and placed in post office boxes, New Years Eve, Dec. 31. The window at the main office will be open all New Years Eve, but the 10th Street Station window will close at 12:30 p.m.

The last dispatch of mail on New Years Eve will be 6:30 p.m. There will be no collection or dispatch of mail on New Years Day.
