HAPPY NEW YEAR 1980! — With all the needed party favors and noise makers for a new year's celebration is Tre Teel, five-month old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Teel, of Greenville. Many party goers will start their parties Monday night, but some won't finish until the last play of last football game on New Year's Day. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Iranian Demonstrators March Against Soviet Embassy In Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — As many as 10,000 demonstrators marched on the Soviet Embassy today, tore down and burned the Russians' flag and replaced it with an Islamic banner to protest the communists' invasion of Afghanistan. They also labeled Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev a madman, but were driven away by revolutionary guardsmen who fired automatic rifles over their heads.

Another 5,000 protesters demonstrated and burned a Soviet flag in Mashad, in eastern Iran near the Afghan border, the official Pars news agency reported. It said both the Tehran and Mashad groups were made up of Afghan residents of Iran.

Close to 100 of the Tehran demonstrators, who were led by Moslem clergymen from Afghanistan, stepped inside the embassy gate and read a statement condemning the Soviet for its invasion last week of Afghanistan. The invasion put a new Soviet puppet in power in Kabul then broadened into an attack upon the 20-month-old Moslem revolt against Afghanistan's communist government.

The mob approached from the direction of Tehran University, where it reportedly assembled, and after leaving the walled Soviet compound went to protest in front of the occupied U.S. Embassy.

The marchers chanted, "Down With U.S. and U.S.S.R. Plots!" "Americans and the Soviet Union are the Enemies of our People," "The Hammer and Sickle and the Red Star are No Longer Effective and the Mad Brezhnev Doesn't Know It." One banner read: "Afghanistan is the Vietnam of the Soviet Union."

The Soviet Embassy was well-guarded by revolutionary guardsmen who are the chief security force of the revolutionary regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah

Khomeini. Guardsmen were posted on top of the embassy walls, in the narrow streets outside, and inside the compound, which is about the same size as the 27-acre American Embassy located about 10 blocks away.

The guardsmen forced the demonstrators back outside the gates after they read their statement, but another wave of demonstrators attempted to force its way inside.

The demonstrators then lowered the Soviet flag outside the embassy, burned it, and in its place raised a banner bearing the Islamic slogan, "There is no God but Allah."

Revolutionary guardsmen fired about a dozen rounds from their rifles and the mob moved down the street toward the American Embassy.

The marchers carried hundreds of posters bearing pictures of Khomeini, whose regime has denounced the Soviet invasion of neighboring Afghanistan.

Iran, like Afghanistan, is a Moslem nation, but up to now the anger here has been directed at the U.S. Embassy, where militants seized American hostages Nov. 4 in a bid to get the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi returned to Iran.

RUSSIAN FLAG TORN TO PIECES — Hundreds of protesters storm the Russian embassy in Tehran today as anger mounts throughout Iran over the Soviet military build-up in Afghanistan. Here demonstrators wave the remains of the Russian flag which was torn down and ripped to pieces. (AP Laserphoto)

Tax Listing Begins Tomorrow

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Tax listing for Pitt County property owners will begin tomorrow, and by the end of January, tax officials hope that all the 57,000 abstracts expected to be filed this year, will be listed.

Pitt tax supervisor Jimmie Hardee emphasized that all real and personal property must be listed during the month of January, according to State law.

He noted that there are 15 local listing places throughout the county, which will be open all day during the week and a half-day on Saturdays, during the month.

Hardee added that persons coming to list their property should bring their motor vehicle registration cards and their Social Security number.

The tax supervisor explained that although property is listed during January, taxes are not due until September 1.

According to Hardee, 15,600 individual abstracts, and 3,500 business abstracts were mailed Monday. He explained that abstracts were mailed to each business which listed property in the county last year, while individual abstracts were mailed those persons who requested mail listing last year, to avoid standing in line.

New businesses, Hardee said, must list their real and personal property at the Greenville office. Individuals who wish to list their property by mail, he added, should make that request at the time they list their property this year.

Hardee said exempt organizations that have purchased real estate during the past year should come to the Greenville office to file an application requesting exemption for the property. Property purchased in past years for which an exemption application has already been filed and approved, do not need to file an additional application for the property.

The tax official emphasized that the exemption for the aged and disabled was changed substantially by the General Assembly for 1980.

In order to qualify for this exemption, Hardee said a person must earn or receive, from any source, less than $9,000 — including Social Security, retirement payments, and any monies received by either husband or wife during 1979.

In addition, Hardee noted, the individual must be 65 years old or older on January 1, 1980 or totally and permanently disabled and unable to work.

Disabled persons must supply a signed statement by a licensed physician.

The old age and disability exemption applies only to a residence or in connection with a residence.

Applications for old age or disability exemptions must be made every year during the listing period, or no later than April 15. No applications for exemptions will be accepted after April 15.

Hardee, who said a total of 57,000 abstracts, involving an estimated 25,000 tax payers, are expected to be filed this year, urged property owners to list their property for tax purposes early.

"List early in order to avoid the lines at the last of the month," Hardee emphasized.

The tax supervisor explained that there is a 10 per cent penalty for listing property for tax purposes after January 31.

UN's Waldheim Arrives In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim arrived in Iran today, seeking to defuse the U.S.-Iran crisis.

Iranian officials said in advance that his visit will be purely a fact-finding mission. But the U.N. Security Council hopes he will be able to negotiate the release of American hostages held inside the U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4.

He was met by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, but said he was not sure if he would meet with revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini. "I will look into several matters while I am here, including relations between the United States and Iran, the people held at the embassy and grievances of the Iranian people regarding the previous regime," Waldheim said.

"I hope the way can be paved to settle the immediate crisis" — the freeing of the hostage, he said.

Before he met with reporters, Waldheim spoke privately for 15 minutes with Ghotbzadeh.

Ghotbzadeh said nothing to reporters at the airport, but he told a news briefing earlier in the day the Iranian leaders would welcome Waldheim on a fact-finding mission, but not as a mediator in the U.S.-Iran crisis.

Militants inside the embassy reiterated their refusal to meet with Waldheim on the hostage issue.

MIDWEST LEGIT?

My husband and I are in desperate need of a second income, so I recently sent for information about how I could clip newspaper and magazine ads at home to make money. The answer that I got very promptly asked that I send $10 for more information. Is this legitimate? I can't afford an expensive mistake. Mrs. C. B.

Hotline consulted with the N. C. Attorney General's Office. Nancy Leonard, a staff member, asked that we send all the information we had. We did and she soon called back to say that she's writing to Midwest telling the company, once again, to refrain from advertising in North Carolina. "Work at home" schemes in which a company asks for money for information and makes no provision for direct wages were outlawed in this state, effective July 1, 1979. This "ad clipping" offer is in violation of this law, Ms. Leonard said. She asked that citizens mail to the attorney general any advertising of this type seen in state publications.

Works On Resolution

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP)

The United States started work on a resolution calling for U.N. sanctions against Iran, apparently anticipating that Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's visit to Tehran won't secure the release of the Americans held hostage for 59 days.

U.S. Ambassador Donald F. McHenry met with other Security Council members after the council approved another U.S. resolution Monday threatening the sanctions unless Waldheim obtains the hostages' release by Jan. 7. The vote was 11-0 with the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Bangladesh and Kuwait abstaining.

Waldheim was arriving in Tehran today and was expected to meet with Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh. But Ghotbzadeh already had said the secretary-general was coming to hear Iran's side of the crisis with the United States, not to negotiate for the release of the hostages.

The students who seized the U.S. Embassy and the Americans in it on Nov. 4 also rejected Waldheim as a negotiator, said they would not meet with him unless Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini told them to and declared they would not, "under any circumstances, allow Waldheim to come visit the hostages."

Earlier the students reiterated their stand, from which they have never wavered, that they would only release the hostages when the United States delivered Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial.

Waldheim told reporters as he left New York: "There is enough reason to hope that the new year will bring the release of the hostages." He added that he was "very encouraged" by some reports that he would meet with Khomeini, the leader of the Iranian revolution. But he cautioned: "This mission will not solve the whole problem."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, who cast America's vote at the council session, said he joined "with everybody else in wishing the secretary-general good fortune. We all hope and pray that he will have a fruitful trip." But McHenry began work with other council members on a resolution for the Jan. 7 meeting calling on all U.N. members to stop all exports to Iran except food and medicine. Imports of Iranian oil also would be exempted from the embargo.

The resolution adopted Monday called on Waldheim to intensify his efforts to gain the hostages' release and for the council to meet again Jan. 7 to adopt "effective measures under Articles 39 and 41" of the U.N. Charter if the Americans were not freed.

Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky said his government abstained on the vote because the hostage issue was a bilateral, U.S.-Iranian problem that was not a threat to peace and did not fall under the U.N. Charter's provision for sanctions. He said the council, which first called for the release of the captives on Dec. 4, should seek ways of easing tension between the two countries.

'79 Achievements For Chamber Of Commerce

"Progressive" is the best word to describe the accomplishments of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce during 1979," said retiring Chairman of the Board Jerry W. Powell.

Powell turned his gavel and duties as chairman of the area chamber to Tommy Edwards, President and General Manager of Carolina Dairy Products, Monday.

Reflecting upon the Chamber's accomplishments in 1979 Powell said, "We are completing our toughest year. It was our first year as a pure chamber, working on total community development."

Powell named as highlight accomplishments for the year the following: Accreditation by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Coffee Talks with interesting guest speakers, continued supportive efforts of the completion of Hwy. 264 and Operation Overcharge, sponsoring the Second Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival, initiating the Junior Achievement Program in the area high schools, providing seminars for supervisors and business persons, assisting in industrial development, promoting the Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) program, and supporting beautification efforts throughout the county.

The chamber worked in cooperation with other groups to support the Utilities Bond Referendum, the School Bond Referendum, transportation improvements, and the reduction of high utility rates.

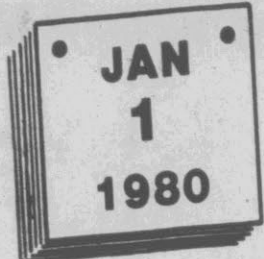

Powell commended the chamber leaders and the more than 1,000 volunteers who worked with the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce in 1979. Looking forward to the future, Powell said, "Current economic situations will provide the chamber with opportunities to serve the business and professional community by offering the services of seminars, SCORE, and business leadership in a growing community."

New Chairman of the Board Edwards said that the chamber will be refining its program of work during 1980 — "Working together for quality rather than a quantity of projects."

Chairman Edwards said that some of the chamber's most important objectives for 1980 include continuing support for Hwy. 264 project, Operation Overcharge, total community development, membership involvement and support for the community, and promoting Pitt County as the most progressive county in Eastern North Carolina.

FOCUS

One Day or Another

According to the calendar used in most parts of the world, today marks the start of another year. But New Year's Day hasn't always been celebrated on January 1. For the ancient Egyptians, the new year started in June, when the Nile River usually overflowed its banks. Other ancient peoples started the new year at the autumn equinox in late September, or the winter solstice in December. The Chinese new year is calculated from the cycles of the moon, and usually falls in late January or early February. Medieval Christians celebrated the new year on March 25. A calendar introduced in 1582 changed the date to January 1.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: If your husband could hardly wait for the hunting season to open, and then took off in the middle of the night for a five-day hunting trip and forgot to take his rifle, what would you think?

WEST TEXAS WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I would think that he did not intend to shoot whatever it was that he set out to hunt!

DEAR ABBY: HURT IN LONG BEACH really struck a raw nerve. She said she spent hours scrubbing the tile shower with a toothbrush only to hear her husband say, "You missed a spot by the door."

Believe me, I could write a book! Our marriage started out the same way. In 18 years, I've never kept the house clean enough, cooked a meal good enough, dressed myself well enough, or corrected the children often enough. I honestly can't recall getting one compliment from him. I held a full-time teaching job all through our marriage, too, but that didn't alter his expectations.

No matter what went wrong, it was always MY fault. When the roof leaked (after 12 years in the same house) it was MY fault because he never wanted to buy that house in the first place. When the children played ball and broke our window, he wanted to know why I "let" them do it.

My husband has always had a very poor self-image. Everything that went wrong he blamed on someone else. I don't believe in divorce. My mother taught me that when you trade husbands, you only trade one set of faults for another, so I stayed with him. On our 18th anniversary HE moved out because I was making HIM unhappy!

I'm not telling HURT what to do, but she's been married only one year to a man who sounds exactly like my husband—all criticism and no compliments. I hope she doesn't wait 18 years to realize she'd be better off without him.

SLOW LEARNER

DEAR SLOW: I told you not to rely on a few lines in my column to communicate your hurt, anger and frustration she felt—to vent her feelings and encourage her to vent his. Too late! You speak up 18 years ago.

Deadly Cargo Lodged On Rocks

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A barge carrying tons of deadly chlorine gas and explosives was lodged precariously on the rocks of San Francisco Bay as Coast Guard salvage experts fought rain, wind and high seas to dislodge it.

The barge, one of two that broke free from a tugboat reportedly pulling them to Hawaii, was in danger of breaking up after running aground early Monday on jutting rocks about three miles northwest of the Golden Gate.

Sale Agreement

ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — Gray Communications Systems Inc. of Albany has reached a conditional agreement to sell WALB-TV in Albany to Atlantic Telecasting Corp. of Wilmington, N.C., for $20.75 million.

The sale is in response to a Federal Communications Commission order that all companies holding a newspaper and television station in the same market divest themselves of one or the other. Gray Communications Systems also owns The Albany Herald.

Afghans Fight Soviets Near Pakistani Border

By The Associated Press
Soviet troops were reported battling rebellious Moslems in eastern Afghanistan near the Pakistani border as the Kremlin's campaign to establish communist control of its turbulent Central Asian neighbor went into its fifth day.

The U.S. war of wits touched off by the Soviet coup in Kabul last Thursday also heated up. President Carter accused Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev of lying to him in his explanation of the Russian action, and one of his officials hinted that the United States and its chief Western allies might curtail their relations with the Soviet Union and Afghanistan.

The Pakistani newspaper Jang said rebel leaders in Chitral, on the historic Northwest Frontier between Pakistan and Afghanistan, reported heavy fighting across the border in the Konar district 130 miles northeast of Kabul.

A Jang correspondent in Chitral said the rebel sources told him:

More than 200 Soviet soldiers and 63 Moslem guerrillas had been killed in the fighting. Soviet warplanes killed a number of civilians and destroyed dozens of homes and a mosque in a bombing and strafing attack on the village of Ashksham. Rebel saboteurs blew up four bridges and the local telephone exchange, but 35 guerrillas were killed in retaliatory Soviet air attacks.

An earlier Jang dispatch said rebel sources reported 400 guerrillas, a Soviet general and large numbers of Soviet and Afghan troops were killed in fighting Saturday in the northern province of Takhar, on the Soviet-Afghan border.

More Soviet casualties were reported by a diplomat in New Delhi. Quoting a reliable informant in Kabul, he said 250 Russians were killed or wounded in the 3½-hour coup last Thursday night that ousted President Hafizullah Amin and replaced him with another communist, Babrak Karmal, who the Russians brought home from exile in Czechoslovakia.

The change in government was believed ordered by the Kremlin because Amin, after ousting President Nur Mohammad Taraki three months ago, failed to put down the rebellion by Moslem fundamentalists which broke out after the communists seized control of the Afghan government 20 months ago.

Western diplomats in Kabul on Sunday estimated that the Soviet force in Afghanistan totaled 45,000 troops. They said Soviet units had been sent to the northern and eastern part of the country to begin trying to put down the rebellion.

The rebels have been estimated to control at least half of the country by day and more than that by night. The Soviet leaders presumably fear that continued rebel successes coupled with the ferment in the Islamic world generated by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Islamic revolutionaries could inflame Moslem minorities in the Soviet Union.

In Washington, U.S. government sources said they had reports of sporadic sniper fire in Kabul. A State Department spokesman said there were reports of large-scale desertions from Afghan army units. Diplomats in Kabul said many Afghan troops had been disarmed since the coup. But Soviet troops and armor were patrolling the capital in force and seemed to have the situation there under control.

President Carter, who protested the Soviet action in a "hot line" message to Moscow, said Brezhnev replied "that he had been invited by the Afghan government to come in and protect Afghanistan from some outside, third-nation threat."

"This was obviously false," Carter continued in an interview with ABC News, "because the person he claimed invited him in, President Amin, was murdered or assassinated after the Soviets pulled their coup."

Carter said it was imperative that world leaders "make it clear to the Soviets that they cannot take such action to violate world peace without severe political consequences." Asked if the response by the United States and its allies would be "more than stiff notes of protest," he replied, "Yes, it will."

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said the United States and its allies would have a "meaningful response." Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher conferred in London with representatives of Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Canada and said he found a "wide measure of support" for these moves.

—Taking the Soviet action before the United Nations "as a flagrant violation of international law."

—Reviewing the allies' bilateral relations with the Soviet Union and their representation in Afghanistan.

—Reviewing "our relationships with countries in the area who retain their independence and whose independence is of great importance to us."

Violent Welcome

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Revelers hurling bottles and other debris halted a nationally televised concert on the steps of the Sydney opera house early today in a violent Australian welcome to the 1980s.

Organizers were forced to call off the concert at 1 a.m. — an hour early — when two members of The Angels, a pop group, were struck and injured by flying missiles.

Bass player Chris Bailey was hit by a champagne bottle and treated for a concussion. Lead singer Doc Neeson was cut on the back of his neck by a piece of wall board thrown by a spectator.

An estimated 100,000 people attended the concert, police said. About 65 were treated for cuts and bruises, and at least 40 missile-launchers were arrested.

Pilot Defects

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A mainland Chinese airline pilot defected to protest the establishment of U.S.-Chinese diplomatic relations, the official Central News Agency reported today, the first anniversary of Washington-Peking ties.

The agency said Chung Shung-hung, 31, defected in Hong Kong Dec. 6 and was brought to Taiwan by The Free China Relief Association, which has a branch in the British colony.

China has a commercial airline service linking Hong Kong and the southern Chinese city of Canton. The agency said Chung left his wife, two children and parents behind on the China mainland.

'Hadley Girls' Give Party

Mrs. Bruce Forbes Hadley of Greenville was honored on 99th birthday by her "Hadley girls."

"The Hadley girls," Mrs. Polly Dail, one of them, explained, "were young women who roomed with Mrs. Hadley at her home on Evans Street across from Sheppard Library (the house has been demolished) and who were treated like her own daughters. There wasn't any television back then and we had time for singing and games and more fun than you can imagine. Most of us were either teaching or working at local business places. Almost all of us married while we were there and, oh, the weddings we had. We were all each others' bridesmaids."

In attendance at the birthday party held Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hadley and her daughter, Rose Fambrough, and her grandson, Morgan, were the following "Hadley girls": Ramona (Mrs. Ralph) Tucker; Mary Alice Howard (Mrs. Francis) Jordan; Margaret Windham (Mrs. Roy) Hardee; Ann Smith Hall, Melba Howard, Mae Gates, Joann (Mrs. Ed N.) Warren; Laura Bell, Evelyn Moye, Blanche (Mrs. Leroy) Taylor, Aileen

(Mrs. Charles) Forbes, Addie Mae Worthington, Mrs. Lee Mills Lewis, Mrs. Polly Dail, and Edna Earl (Mrs. Jake) Hadley. Messages of congratulations and regret at not being able to attend were sent by Barbara Bone (Mrs. Alex) Biggs, Ann Parker (Mrs. Fodie) Hodges, and Miss Agnes Fullilove.

Other friends also dropped by and Mrs. Hadley's children, Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Hadley, Mr. and Mrs. Jake Hadley, and Mrs. Rose Fambrough were in attendance.

Tape recordings were made of conversations between Mrs. Hadley and each of "her girls" and pictures were taken of each with her. Ice cream cake, with each square bearing "99" was served.

Mrs. Hadley played the piano for the group to sing together. A gift of a Norfolk Island pine was given Mrs. Hadley by the group.

Hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Polly Dail and Mrs. Lee Mills Lewis.

Follow Water Heater Tips

Since the heating of water accounts for nearly 15 percent of your total energy bill, you'll save both energy and money by following a few tips when buying a new water heater, say NCSU agricultural extension specialists.

Avoid buying a water heater that's bigger than you really need. Otherwise, energy will be consumed and wasted in keeping unneeded hot water.

Check with a reliable heating and plumbing contractor for help in determining what size water heater is needed for your household.

Remember to look for information on a new unit indicating how efficiently the water heater uses energy. Be sure to buy one with a thickly insulated outer shell.

COMFORT AND STYLE... are combined in this easy-to-make drop shouldered pullover.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Give your knitting a Norwegian flair with this easy-to-make, easy-to-wear, drop-shouldered pullover patterned in three colors. It is designed to be made with knitting worsted weight yarn, and the simplified directions are written for sizes 10 through 16.

To obtain directions for knitting the Norwegian pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. 1230 with $1.00 and a long, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-1230 containing instruction leaflet and Wintuk yarn in three colors from Pat Trexler at the same address. Send check or money order for $11.00 for sizes 10 and 12 or $14.50 for sizes 14 and 16. Please specify your choice of royal blue, scarlet and white; brown, rust and off-white; avocado, gold and off-white. Price includes shipping charges.

If you have never worked with pattern stitches, why not take the plunge and start now? A whole new world of interesting knitting lies ahead for you.

The most important phase of pattern stitchery is keeping all stitches and rows in proper sequence. I have often found it helpful to write, in large letters, the directions for each row on a separate index card.

Clip them together, in proper order, with a paper clip. When one row is completed, the card for that row is placed at the bottom of the stack. Continue rotating cards in this way and you will always know where you are.

Pattern stitches are always worked on a certain multiple of stitches; this means the specified number of stitches needed to complete one repeat of the pattern stitch. If you see a phrase such as "multiple of six plus four," you would cast on any number of stitches evenly divisible by six and then add four additional stitches to this total.

Even though your instructions will tell you exactly how many stitches to cast on, this information on multiple of stitches is frequently given to enable you to make a sample swatch or to aid you if you are making a garment smaller or larger than the sizes listed.

Often you will see certain instructions between a pair of asterisks. You are to repeat the steps listed between the asterisks all across the row, or to within a specified number of stitches from the end of the row.

Let's suppose you are working on 25 stitches and your instructions read: Purl 1, knit 3, purl 2, knit 3 four times, ending purl 1. So you would purl 1, knit 3, repeat the steps between asterisks four times, ending the row with one purl stitch.

Sometimes you will also see certain instructions in parentheses, such as: Knit 3, (purl 1, knit 1, purl 1) three times, knit 1. This means that, for each pattern repeat, you would knit three stitches, repeat the steps within parentheses three times and then knit 1.

If you would try this out, you would see that there are 13 stitches involved in one pattern repeat, so, in this instance, your "multiple of stitches" is 13.

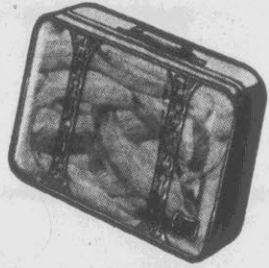

The asterisks and parentheses serve two purposes. First, they conserve space. Knitting and crochet instructions would be much longer if these were not used. More importantly, however, they are actually easier to follow than the more lengthy instructions would be.

In a very involved pattern stitch, I might place markers on the needle before the first stitch described after the asterisks and after the last stitch in this group. This tells me at a glance that when I reach a marker, I am to refer back to the first asterisk.

Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.

Dry Clothes Correctly

Drying clothes right is nearly as important as getting them clean. Clothes need room to tumble say NCSU agricultural extension specialists. They need the space to help them dry more quickly and prevent wrinkles.

Be careful not to overdry fabrics, they warn. The result can be wrinkling, harshness and in some cases, shrinkage. Over-drying also wastes energy. Some items are best removed with a trace of moisture still in them such as corduroys, quilted fabrics or knits.

Always remove garments as soon as the dryer stops, especially permanent press and synthetic items to prevent wrinkling. Turn the pockets of heavy garments inside out for faster drying. Remember to close zippers and fasten hooks and eyes to prevent snagging.

Some things, such as draperies, rugs, pillows, woolens and knits may require special care. Check their labels to be sure they are machine dryable.

Questions In The New Decade

The area enters a new decade today — and it may well be known as the questionable eighties.

Questions of energy costs, and even energy availability hang over the nation, and that has its effect on Eastern North Carolina economy.

There is concern about United States' world influence in the years ahead, and that might affect markets for goods.

Inflation, spurred by rising energy costs, hangs over everything. Each of us worries about our own ability to earn enough to keep up. There are those who tell us that we must settle for a lesser standard of living as general costs rise.

We share all these concerns, but as far as Eastern North Carolina goes we think there is every reason for optimism that we will be leading a better life ten years from now.

That is not to say we will all be driving larger autos and living in bigger homes. The reverse will probably be true; both the cars and the homes will shrink. Nevertheless we don't see lifestyles too much adversely changed.

We base that on the tremendous potential of the east. Industry has already discovered us and we believe that industrial expansion will continue during the 1980s. Our farm sector stands ready to provide the products that the world is going to badly need in the years ahead. Our great forests can produce the lumber and pulp to meet demand.

The medical school, established at East Carolina University, will continue to expand and provide for the unique health care needs of the area.

We now have the ports which can provide North Carolina's gateways to world markets — markets which have the wealth to purchase our products.

There will be changes in the way we live — most of them dictated by the soaring cost of energy and the need to use energy more efficiently.

With that, however, it can be a good, even a great, era for Eastern North Carolina. Our people only have to exert the effort to make it so.

Area Progress Unlikely To Be Halted

Over the next several days we will be taking an editorial look at a number of areas which vitally affect the lives of Eastern North Carolinians, and Pitt County residents in particular.

We have no crystal ball to peer into the decade of the 1980s, but there are trends and developments which may help tell us where we are going. Of course the future may well be affected by unforeseen world events. Nevertheless our area is on the move on many fronts. We don't think that progress is going to be halted.

THIS AFTERNOON

Intervention Fears Grow

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The extent to which society, and that generally means government, should intrude upon the home and family in attempts to "fix" problems is escalating into a debate of major import and significance.

Developing activities for the White House Conference on Families next year point toward the question of family intervention emerging as a major political issue.

Given the clear directions already revealed in numerous child advocacy programs, seminars and publications related to the International Year of the Child, and the growing conviction among specialists that early childhood intervention is the way to forestall later social, mental, emotional, physical and educational problems, it is not unlikely that local and state councils will unveil at the White House Conference proposals and ideas which generate considerable pressure for active family intervention programs.

Widespread

North Carolina is not alone in witnessing the rumblings of early warning signals of the battle which looms: Gov. Jim Hunt's New Generation proposals have become the lightning rods drawing fire from an array of opponents.

The opposition has been widely characterized as emotional and uninformed, and there has been in the attack elements of both. But that is essentially a North Carolina eruption of concern.

There is a larger, national debate underway. The issues have not been much explored, however, in the popular press or television, and as a result have escaped widespread public attention. But publications which circulate in professional circles, and those which circulate in Fundamental Christian circles, have been filled with the issues.

There is strong evidence that Tar Heel Fundamentalists primed with a wealth of information having to do with the potential family intervention suggestions now being formulated for the White House conference see within the New Generation materials in North Carolina the structures, possibly devised innocently or possibly by design, which would carry out governmental intrusion on the family's privacy.

In North Carolina there is a merger of three distinct groups into a loose-knit opposition structure: the Republican Party, the Congressional Club (which has been the organization for GOP Senator Jesse Helms, and is now entering the state's gubernatorial politics with State Senator Bev Leake as its candidate) and the organized Fundamentalist Christians involved in the debate of recent years over state regulation of private schools.

BILL NOBLITT

Fundamentalist Carrying the banner are various groups under the Christian school umbrella, and the political pressures locally across the state have been sufficient to cause at least six boards of county commissioners to decline to establish the New Generation Councils which Gov. Hunt has called for to carry out local planning and coordinating activities in services to children.

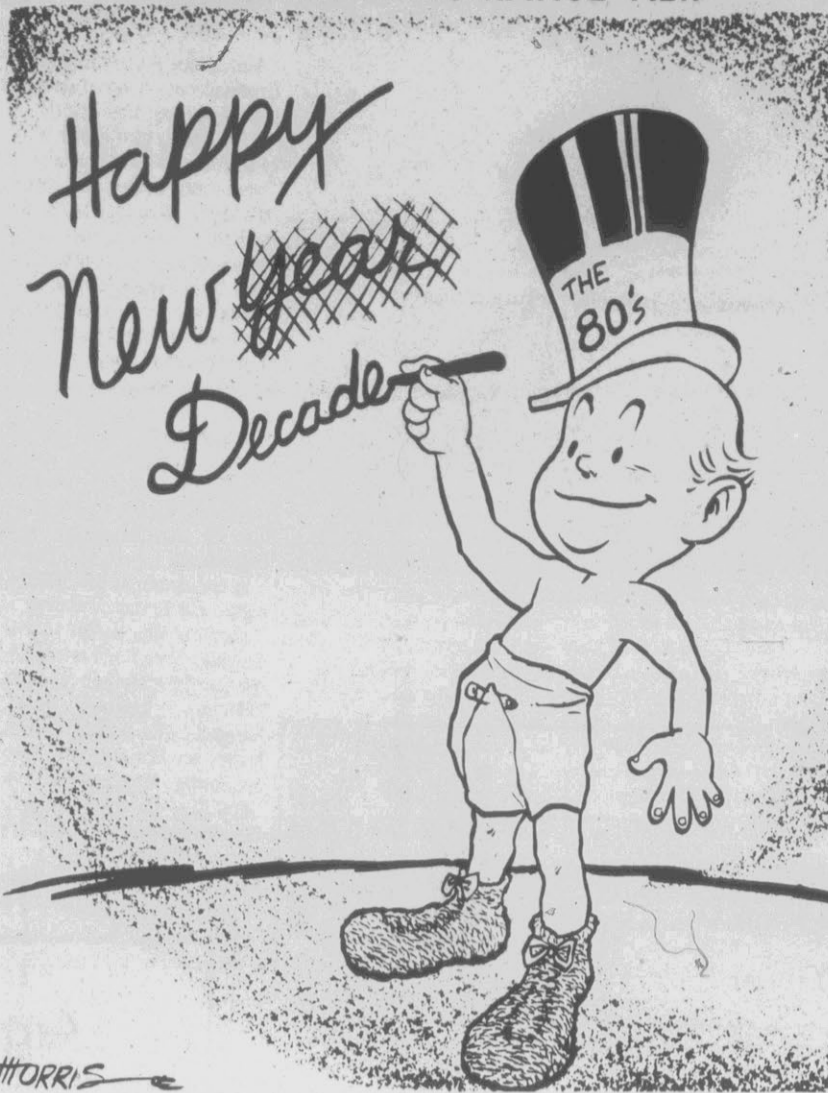

The central theme of the opposition is that the door is being opened for governmental agencies to require parents to have services for their children, to participate in counseling and training programs, and to allow various governmental agencies access to private family business.

Drawn into this objection are opposition to government funds for abortions, and to sex education in the public schools.

Battle lines in the argument are not nearly so cleanly drawn between the factions as a casual examination might suggest.

TAKING THE LONG RANGE VIEW--

There's Always A Ford

By RICHARD H. GROWLD
NEW YORK (UPI) — When all the words are spoken and all the promises promised, the Republican presidential nomination could go to a man who steers clear of the fray — Gerald R. Ford.

The former president simply smiles when asked if he will run, and talks about how nice it is to sit outside the arena and watch.

Choosing his words carefully, Ford discusses two scenarios.

One is that no announced candidate — not Ronald Reagan, not John Connally, not George Bush, not Howard Baker — no one can muster enough convention votes to get the nomination. The party in its hour of need, calls on Ford.

But this, he says, is a "very remote" possibility. And few will argue that.

The second possibility is more likely — that "unforeseen developments" will push him into the race before the July convention in Detroit in his home state of Michigan.

There is no doubt Ford is ready for the "unforeseen developments."

He has dieted away 10 pounds, acknowledging it puts him in better shape to campaign. He has forsaken alcohol and all sweets except his beloved butter pecan ice cream. And his travel schedule keeps him moving around the nation as much as any announced candidate.

Until this fall, Ford never mentioned those "unforeseen developments." And even now he will not say what they may be.

But his supporters will. They reason that if Reagan and his fellow runners jog none too well in New Hampshire and the other early primaries, if it appears that none of the announced is managing to grab a big enough lead to unify the party, then Ford may offer himself.

For a cornerstone of Ford's political life has been the belief that unless the numerically inferior GOP is absolutely unified, it has no chance against the Democrats.

It is not without importance, too, that Ford wants the Republican candidate to be enough in the middle to embrace both independents and Democrats as well.

Ford says in his memoirs he regrets not having chosen his late vice president, Nelson Rockefeller, as his 1976 running mate. Ford found himself more than 30 percentage points behind 1976 Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter in public opinion polls at convention time.

Ford, who chose Sen. Robert Dole to please Reagan's GOP right wing, finished just a point or so behind in November. Perhaps Rockefeller would have made the difference.

Ford supporters see, if Reagan wins the nomination in 1980, an election result similar to 1964 when Sen. Barry Goldwater failed to attract meaningful amounts of Democrats and independents and lost horrendously to Lyndon Johnson.

Ford publicly and privately plays no favorite in preliminary GOP infighting.

In his day, someone asked the late French President Charles de Gaulle if he stood to the right or the left or in the center.

Answered the great Charles:

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

No, To New Tinkering

WASHINGTON — It is getting to be just about impossible to find anyone in high position who doesn't want to halt the practice of recurring federal deficits. I myself have been preaching the virtues of a balanced budget since I first sat at the knee of the late Harry F. Byrd 38 years ago.

But I am very juberous, as my Southern friends say, about trying to accomplish this salutary end by means of a constitutional amendment.

That is what is proposed in Senate Joint Resolution 126, reported out of a Judiciary subcommittee a couple of weeks ago. The proposed amendment is the product of endless writing and rewriting upon the part of well-intentioned men who abhor the reckless business of recurring red ink budgets. They want to put an end to the evil, and they are convinced that only a constitutional amendment will suffice.

This is their amendment:

"1) The Congress shall adopt for each year a budget which shall set forth the total receipts and expenditures of the United States. No budget in which expenditures exceed receipts shall be adopted unless three-fifths of each house of the Congress approve such budget by a roll-call vote directed solely to that subject. The Congress shall not pass, and the President shall not sign, any appropriation bill which would cause the total expenditures for any year to exceed the expenditures in the budget for such year.

"2) The receipts in any year shall not exceed, as a proportion of the national income, that collected in accordance with this section in the prior year, unless a bill directed solely to approving a specific increase in such proportion has been passed by each house of the Congress by roll-call vote and such bill has become law.

"3) The Congress may waive the provisions of Section One with respect to any single year in which a declaration of war is in effect.

"4) Terms used in this article shall be construed in accordance with their meaning on the date on which this article was submitted to the States for ratification.

"5) This article shall take effect on the first day of January of the second calendar year beginning after its ratification."

There is this to be said for the draft, that its provisions are shorter, simpler and more constitutional than most of the balanced-budget resolutions that have been advanced in recent years. But with deference to the sponsors, some serious reservations have to be voiced.

On Jan. 28, Mr. Carter will send to the Congress a budget

Other Editors Say Allergic To Work

(Washington Daily News)

Sometime ago, farmers and representatives of the seafood industry told Governor Jim Hunt what a number of good wage earning citizens have felt for a good while.

They told the governor that they are unable to find labor because so many potential workers find it more profitable to receive public assistance than they do to get out and earn a dollar.

We suppose we have always had deadbeats who will not work in the proverbial "pie factory". We suppose we shall always have these people. But in one sense the fault is ours, too. We who earn our keep just all too often shut our eyes to what is happening. We complain about it but we seldom try to do anything about it.

How often has an employer reported a case to the Employment Security Commission or to the Social Services Department?

The governor is going to see that a study is made in order to determine just how serious is this problem.

We must all agree that there are many people in our state who are in serious need of help and they should receive that help. What we need to do is to try to separate the worthy from the unworthy... the deadbeats from the needy.

When individuals look at the idea of work in terms of receiving government assistance and fear that their wages might mean their loss of public assistance, then the time has come for the solid citizenry to do more than just complain.

If we go back over the years, we had people before the days of real public assistance who would not work. They existed somehow, and how they did so was a mystery in the very neighborhood they lived.

With the ability to get public assistance, if the money so received is an invitation not to work, then the concept for that person is surely wrong. If people are offered suitable work and refuse to accept it because it might upset the amount they are receiving free from our government, then and there our patience is just about exhausted.

Gov. Hunt has said "if that's the situation in this state, that's got to be changed." We do not know just what the governor can do, but surely he ought to be fully aware of any and all situations which work against the fellow who earns his keep.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Iraqi Bid For Leadership

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

BAGHDAD, Iraq — In the Mideast's political realignment forced by the Camp David accord, Iraq's hard-bitten leftist leaders are reaching for domination over the Persian Gulf's conservative oil monarchies — a profound shift in the power balance of this vital strategic region.

Baghdad is no longer a backwater, and Iraq's Baathist socialists are no longer the outlaws of the Arab world. Fortified financially by fabulous oil revenues and ideologically by Baathist dogma of Arab unity, the Iraqis have partially achieved leadership over kings, sultans, emirs and sheiks on the Arabian peninsula. As for the future, Iraq's leaders consider these hereditary regimes rich, soft and unlikely to endure.

The rise of Iraq has been intensified by Iran's disappearance as a coherent political and strategic force. But the heart of Iraq's new eminence is Camp David. Instead of being isolated for rejecting the Israeli-Egyptian accord, Iraq has replaced Egypt as the Arab pacesetter.

That new dominance distresses U.S. officials, who refer to Iraq's leaders as "a band of thugs" and contend their centralized socialist bungling has been redeemed only by bountiful oil money. Yet, it is U.S. sponsorship of Camp David that not only freezes U.S.-Iraqi relations but enables Iraq to expand its influence.

President Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi general who this year added titular to longtime actual power, would like to assume the radical Arab leadership exercised in the 1960s by Egypt's Nasser. He may have an older role model: Saladin, reputedly born in the same town as Saddam Hussein. Just as Saladin expelled European Christian crusaders, so does Iraq's strongman seek to extinguish Western "imperialist" vestiges — especially Israel.

This has enabled Baghdad to supplant Cairo in Arab leadership. But the new collaboration with the gulf states in rejecting Camp David is not viewed as permanent by Iraq. "We now have Arab 'solidarity,'" Tariq Aziz, a deputy prime minister and leading Baathist theoretician told us, "but this is not Arab 'unity.' That will come when all the Arab states have similar political, economic and social systems."

Since Iraq obviously will not copy Saudi Arabia and the gulf emirates, Tariq Aziz wants them to be "similar" to Iraq. How? "By internal forces," he replied, quickly adding that Baathist socialists in these countries will be helped by Baghdad.

Baathist socialism — revolutionary but anti-communist, Islamic but radical — is backed by Iraq's (Continued on page 6)

Strength For Today

IN THIS PLACE One of the most human figures in the Old Testament is Jacob, the shrewd, successful cattle-breeder and pioneer. One night Jacob camped alone in the wilderness in a desolate, uninhabited place without God. And when he awoke, he said, with typical human surprise, "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not."

Jacob's attitude is a familiar one. We sometimes associate God with special places, like churches, and unfortunately forget about Him in connection with other places. This is the attitude of the man who prays sincerely in church on Sundays, and cheats and defrauds the people he comes in contact with on Mondays. Like Jacob, he has forgotten that there are no bounds to God's presence — He is everywhere.

The fact that God is everywhere can be a source of strength and comfort to true believers. For them, no situation is hopeless because, they can say, "Surely the Lord is in this place."

"None of them. De Gaulle stand above."
Such is the stance Ford is adopting.
If in the early primaries in late winter there is no clear-cut favorite, the Ford dark horse may turn a shade lighter.

Evans-Novak ...

300,000-man, Soviet-equipped armed forces, now the area's strongest. Despite Iraq's "solidarity" with Arab neighbors, Baghdad is viewed with concern by the hereditary states. Kuwait, rich and weak, particularly worries about unsettled Iraqi border claims.

Worry they might, considering the historical determinism privately expressed by one influential Iraqi in describing the gulf states, including Saudi Arabia: "These are weak regimes. They live on the surface of life. They are so rich that, really, they are abnormally rich. They cannot survive this way." Iraq, wielding a dynamic ideology, exudes a political self-confidence lacking in the gulf.

Iraqi officials point to differences between using oil revenue to finance private London spending sprees or to subsidize Arab revolution. Thus, while gulf states cut back oil production, Iraq's leaders want no reduction (though technical factors may slightly cut levels here).

Iraq's oil reserves, second only to Saudi Arabia, are a trump card against Egypt's chronically ailing economy. The Baathist slogan here: "While Egypt needs the Arab world, the Arab world does not need Egypt." Iraqi officials chortle that Egyptian immigrants pour into prosperous Iraq, underpopulated at 13 million.

But ideology, money and armed might would not propel Iraq into Arab leadership were it not for Camp David. If Israel returned to 1967 borders and a Palestinian homeland were established, Iraq would still denounce the existence of "the Zionist entity." "If every other Arab state recognizes Israel," one Western diplomat predicted to us, "the Baathists here would still say 'no, never.'" Baghdad, not Cairo, would be in isolation.

The future of the gulf and all its oil, then, is linked irrevocably, along with everything else that matters in the Mideast, to Israel. If Baghdad's revolutionary thrust toward the gulf worries Washington, it is U.S. policy at and after Camp David that has fueled the rise of Iraq.

Kilpatrick Col. ...

for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1981. Like every other budget, it will be a work of hope, hot air and conjecture. The president's estimates of revenue will be — or so we assume — the very best and most realistic estimates that can be prepared by his economists, diviners, prophets and readers of entrails.

The advance word is that Mr. Carter will predict receipts of $600 billion and expenditures of $615 billion, but the receipts will depend heavily upon tax bills not yet passed, and the expenditures could be knocked awry in a hundred different ways.

The proposed amendment says that Congress shall adopt a budget that sets forth "the total receipts and expenditures." But these figures can only be estimates — mere guesses, subject to revision at the stroke of a pen. The provisions of Section One, I submit, are paper barricades, useless against the winds of expedience and impulse.

A similar difficulty attaches to Section Two, which is intended to hold federal outlays at about 20 percent of national income. But constitutionally speaking, what is "national income"? It is a figure drawn by professional cogitators from jackstraws and moonbeams. It can never be truly definitive.

I have the same mistrust of Congress that Jefferson voiced 182 years ago. I am all in favor of binding men down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution. I simply doubt these chains will work.

Book Sales Show Japan Has Readers

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's publishers cranked out more than a billion books last year, a statistic that shows the Japanese aren't letting television or other leisure distractions get in the way of their claim to being the world's most literate nation.

Pointing out that the figure is almost 10 books for every one of Japan's 115 million citizens, the Japan Book Publishers Association also reports that the number of books produced annually has doubled in the last seven years.

"There's a saying in the industry that sales will continue to rise as long as the cities keep growing and the trains keep running," said Ryoichi Kurosaki, a senior employee of central Tokyo's Yaesu Boi Center, possibly the world's largest bookstore under one roof.

However, the commuters who strapang with one hand and hold a book in the other are only a small segment of a public that devours everything from harum-scarum comic books to translations of such heavy imports as economist John Kenneth Galbraith's "Age of Uncertainty."

Priced at the equivalent of $10 — about average for a new book here — Galbraith's effort sold 400,000 copies. That's only middling good in a country where, according to Masaaki Shigehisa, director of the Book Publishers Association, many best sellers easily top the million mark.

And as might befit a nation where the biggest daily newspapers have circulations upwards of 11 and 12 million, Japan has long claimed the world's highest literacy rate, saying that nearly 100 percent of its people can read and write.

Skeptics say the figure may be somewhat inflated, because the official criterion for literacy is the ability to sign one's name.

Moreover, one needn't be especially literate to spend time with the "manga" (comic) books that make up about 20 percent of Japan's published material and have a legion of dedicated fans that span the range of society, from teenagers and housewives to briefcase-toting salary earners.

These 100-page pulp magazines feature serialized stories that are short on text and long on crudely-drawn gore, sex, fantasy and sports. Some run to 7 million copies a week; one baseball "manga" alone sold 25 million copies.

A number of fast-yen publishers also have turned pulp thrillers into runaway best sellers by collaborating with movie producers in highly publicized films based on their books.

Tokyo's Research Institute for Publications, which monitors Japanese reading habits for the Book Publishers Association, reported recently that while 91 percent of the people spent more time reading every day, the average had dropped from 44 minutes in 1976 to 38 minutes last year.

That reported shift coincides with other polls showing that television, sports and other recreational pursuits consume an increasing part of the Japanese person's day.

Refusal to join the trend toward lighter fare was seen in publishing circles as the reason for the bankruptcy last year of Chikuma Shobo, a respected publisher of encyclopedias and other serious books. Publishers Association spokesman Shigehisa said the company had gone broke "because it failed to bend to the public demand for paperbacks and periodicals."

In the face of that, however, many regular booksellers continue to prosper. The 52-year-old Kinokuniya company, a specialist in Western books, saw sales top a million yen ($455,000) a day in its 27 outlets last year, and Yesu Book Center is a whopping success in its first 12 months.

"To suggest that the written word is disappearing is a myth," said Yaesu's Kurosaki. "Buying and owning a book gives people a sense of satisfaction they will never receive from watching television or movies. There will always be a basic human need for reading."

Pope Paul Warns Of Nuclear War Dangers

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, celebrating the Roman Catholic Church's world day of peace, said today that people around the world must be made aware of "the terrible consequences of a nuclear war."

"War is always made to kill, it's against humanity... The people must be told of the terrible nightmare a nuclear war can bring," the 59-year-old pontiff said in his homily during New Year's Mass at St. Peter's Basilica. More than 20,000 faithful, pilgrims and diplomats attended the service.

Quoting from a report presented to him by an unidentified panel of scientists, John Paul said a nuclear war can wipe out, "by direct or delayed action of explosions," 50 to 200 million people and cause "dangerous genetic mutations."

"Nuclear war will cause a drastic reduction in food resources, spreading radioactive residue over areas of arable land and bring about substantial alterations in the atmosphere's ozone layer, exposing man to great unknown perils," the pope said quoting the scientists.

In his strongest criticism yet over recent moves to deploy advanced nuclear missiles in Europe, the pope said the "piling up of many means of destruction has forced the people to look toward the future with anxiety."

"They (means of destruction) could destroy the fruits of this rich civilization... leveling cities and villages to a pile of rubble," John Paul said.

Later, addressing a crowd estimated at 35,000 gathered in St. Peter's Square, the pope said peace can be achieved only through "truth."

MAINTAINING THE COURAGE — A group of about 200 firefighters and their supporters gathered in a Kansas City courtroom Monday afternoon for a hearing on a city request for contempt citations against firemen. A total of 70 firefighters have been charged with contempt of court for violating a temporary restraining order by refusing to work overtime in a union job action. (AP Laserphoto)

Detente Out For Now

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new decade dawned today with President Carter apparently convinced a major political objective of the 1970's — U.S.-Soviet detente — is dead for the time being.

In a New Year's Eve interview with ABC News, Carter said he has informed Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev the Kremlin's military intervention in Afghanistan "would severely and adversely affect" bi-lateral relations now and in the future.

The president said his message to Brezhnev "was the strongest I've ever sent to a foreign leader."

"My opinion of the Russians has changed more drastically the last week than in the previous 2 1/2 years," Carter said. "It is only dawnning upon the world the magnitude of the action the Soviets undertook in invading Afghanistan. This is a circumstance that I think is now causing even former close friends and allies to re-examine their opinion of what the Soviets have in mind."

The president spoke amid intelligence reports that the Soviet troop presence within Afghanistan and along the Russian side of their common border now may exceed the size of the entire Afghan armed forces.

According to intelligence specialists, who asked not to be identified, the Soviet forces inside Afghanistan number about 33,000 men with an additional 26,000 massed in nearby Soviet territory. The Afghan military forces are estimated to number about 50,000.

The same sources said the Soviets have suffered between 200 and 250 dead and wounded since last Thursday when a coup installed a staunchly pro-Moscow president, Babrak Karmal.

Carter refused to say how the United States will respond to the Soviet action but asserted it would entail more than stiff protest notes. "Yes," he replied when asked if some action will be taken.

"This action, on the part of the Soviet Union, has made a more dramatic change in my own opinion of what the Soviets' ultimate goals are than anything they've done in the previous time I've been in office," the president said.

The detente era began in 1972 with the signing of the first strategic arms limitation agreement and U.S.-Soviet pledges to avoid military confrontations, exercise restraint and seek peaceful resolutions of disputes.

Even before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, however, U.S.-Soviet relations had been in decline with many American experts predicting a continuing deterioration regardless of whether the U.S. Senate approves the SALT II treaty in 1980.

Carter said it is imperative that within the next few days world leaders make it clear to the Soviets that they cannot take action such as the Afghanistan intervention "without severe political consequences."

Forecast For N.C. Economy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's economic growth may slow some during the new decade but it should grow faster than that of the nation as a whole, a state projection concludes.

The projection, prepared by gubernatorial economic adviser Kenneth E. Flynt, states that, despite important economic improvements, North Carolina probably will retain its image as a low-wage state.

Summarizing, Flynt said "the energy situation here is going to be severe. But we're not at a relative disadvantage. We're no worse than the rest of the nation in terms of energy supply."

"I think clearly our productivity is going to be better. And we'll have an improved mix of manufacturing."

Above-average growth will occur in the metals, rubber and furniture industries, Flynt said, and "dynamic" growth is expected in chemicals and machinery — both fairly high-wage industries.

As for wages, Flynt projected small growth if any. North Carolina's average manufacturing wage in September was $5 an hour, or about 75 percent of the national average. Flynt said he does not expect it to top 80 percent by 1990.

He noted that the state's population is expected to grow about 1.3 percent a year, just below the 1.4 percent growth annually during the 1970s. Growth of the labor force and employment also will decline as the population grows older, he said.

Fewer people could be expected to enter the job market and, Flynt said, "it'll give us a more productive work force. And because you don't have as rapid an influx of people, you don't have to do as much training."

Flynt predicted that productivity will grow 2.6 percent a year nationally and by 3.1 percent in the state.

Obituaries

 Mr. Paul (Sunny) Speight died Monday in Pitt Memorial hospital here. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Phillip Brothers Mortuary.

Four Collisions Here On Monday

An estimated $1,210 in property damage resulted from four traffic collisions here yesterday, according to Greenville Police investigations.

Heaviest damages occurred about 6:41 p.m. when a vehicle driven by Bobby Wayne Bailey, 3617 North Boulevard, collided with a parked vehicle in the West End Shopping Center Parking lot.

Bailey was charged with driving under the influence and for a hit and run accident. Police set damages at $275 to Bailey's vehicle and $25 to the parked vehicle.

Terry Stockslager Beaver, 1302 Willow St. collided on Eastern Street with a vehicle driven by Durwood Cannon, 408 S. Eastern St. about 6:28 p.m.

Damages were estimated at $350 to the Cannon vehicle and $10 to Beaver's.

About 8:13 p.m., a vehicle driven by Debra Keel Adams, Rt. 6 Box 367 Lot 34, and one driven by Minnie Johnson Evans, 410 Contentnea Ave., collided on Memorial Drive.

Evans reportedly sustained minor injuries and was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

A vehicle driven by Loretta Lancaster Willoughby, Rt. 1 Box 398-7, Winterville collided on Evans Street with a vehicle driven by Edmund A. Jannino, 300 Lynn Shore Dr., Lynn, Mass. Damages were estimated at $250 to Willoughby's vehicle and $100 to the Jannino vehicle.

Seven Dead In Fire

CHAPAIS, Quebec (AP) — A New Year's Eve fire in the Optimists Club in this northern Quebec community killed at least seven and perhaps 20 persons, Canadian broadcasts said today.

A report by CBC Radio said the fire started in fir branches used as Christmas decorations by the Falconbridge Optimists Club. The report said seven bodies were recovered and that nine of the most seriously hurt among up to 30 of those injured were flown to Quebec City hospitals in critical condition.

Reports conflicted on how many people were in the building at the time of the fire. The CBC, quoting Quebec sources, said police expect to recover 12 more bodies.

Chapais is about 310 miles north of Montreal.

MORE VOLUNTEERS
 DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Fifty Iranians have arrived in Syria, swelling the number of Iranian volunteers waiting to join the Palestinian guerrilla war against Israel to over 300, sources said.

Proceedings Begun

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Contempt of court proceedings have begun against some city firefighters while police and National Guardsmen continue to handle the bulk of fire duties in this city of a half million people.

Only 29 of the city's 900 union firefighters reported for duty Monday. Normally there are 190 firemen on each shift, but 13 reported for a 11 p.m. shift, 5 at 3 p.m. and 11 for the 7 a.m. Monday shift.

As the firefighters' work slowdown today entered its 12th day, union attorneys were preparing for a battle on a city-requested contempt of court hearing against firemen refusing overtime.

Seventy firemen, including officers of Local 42 of the International Association of Firefighters, face contempt of court charges stemming from a Dec. 24 court order that they work overtime. About 26 of the 70 appeared in court Monday. Others are scheduled for hearings Wednesday and Thursday.

Bob Scott To File
 RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Campaign officials for Bob Scott say the former North Carolina governor will file next Monday as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

Scott, who officially announced he was a candidate in November, will file at 1 p.m. for the May 6 primary. He will hold a news conference at 2 p.m. in his Raleigh campaign headquarters.

Filing for the primary begins at noon Monday.

Gov. Jim Hunt is expected to file for the nomination in late January.

Purdue Holds Off Vols

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Although trailing 22-21 with 3:42 left in the 21st annual Bluebonnet Bowl, Purdue center Pete Quinn had advance knowledge that the Boilermakers were going to rally to a 27-22 victory over the aroused Tennessee Volunteers.

"When I saw Herm (quarterback Mark Herrmann) walk on the field the only thing I didn't know was how many plays it was going to take," Quinn said. "He is so cool under pressure. I knew we'd go down the field."

Quinn could do well with a crystal ball because that's exactly what the Boilermakers did, with Herrmann drilling home a 17-yard touchdown pass to tight end Dave Young with 1:30 left in the game to cap a thrilling 80-yard drive.

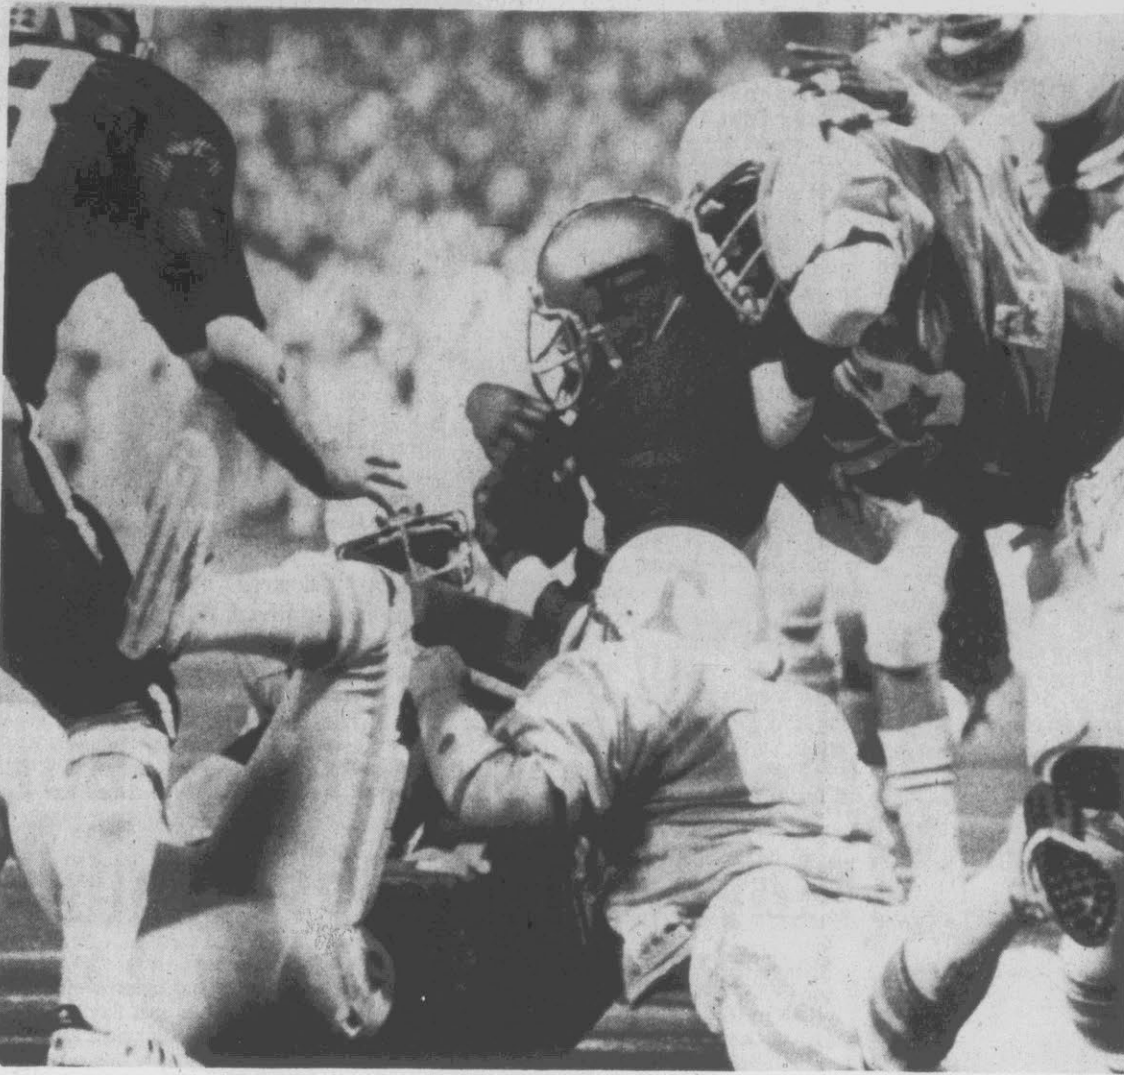

Quinn can be excused for not knowing it would take Purdue 10 plays.

The comeback by Herrmann and the Boilermakers nullified an equally tense rally by the Volunteers, who fell behind 21-0 in the third quarter before taking the lead for the first time with 3:42 left in the game.

Gambling Vol quarterback Jimmy Streater hit Glenn Ford with an eight-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter and engineered a pair of fourth quarter touchdown drives that had the Volunteers on the brink of an upset.

Streater pitched to wingback Phil Ingram who flipped 15 yards to tailback James Berry for one touchdown and Hubert Simpson rammed one yard and tacked on a pair of two-point conversions in the action packed final minutes of a game that had started as a dull scoreless duel.

Purdue, which set four Bluebonnet records, had taken a 14-0 halftime lead on a six-yard

East Carolina Back In Action Vs. State

East Carolina's basketball Pirates come off their holiday break tomorrow night and travel to Raleigh to take on the once-beaten N.C. State Wolfpack. Game time is set for 7:30 p.m. in Reynolds Coliseum.

The Pirates come into the game following their double defeat in the Wolf Pack Classic in Reno, Nevada, prior to the Christmas holidays. In that tournament, the Pirates twice bowed in close games, losing to Northern Arizona and Kent State when comeback attempts failed.

"I'm still not sure what caused us all those problems," Coach Dave Odom said. "However, that's all behind us now. We came back (from the break) in good shape. Anyway, you can't catch water after it's passed under the bridge."

Odom said he was very pleased with the work of the Pirates since they returned from their five-day break after the Reno tournament. "It's like a new season, the way they are practicing," he pointed out.

Odom added that he felt that the Pirates may have played their last four games on emotion. "We played against James Madison and Old Dominion with only about an hour's practice prior to each (due to exams), and we didn't have much more time for practice before we left for Reno. We may have just reached the point where emotion wasn't enough."

It will take more than emotion to go up against the 7-1 Wolfpack, coming off a 66-63 victory over the Davidson Wildcats last night. "They've lost only once, and that was in their first game of the season, against North Carolina in the Big Four Tournament," Odom said.

"They are very much like they've been for the last couple of years. They used the passing game very well and they cause you a lot of problems with their baseline picks. They have good outside shooting, and if we happen to catch (Clyde) Austin (tagged by Odom as a streaky player) on a hot night, we are in trouble."

Odom said the biggest problem the Pirates may have is just in figuring out who to guard. "They run people in and out of there so fast, it's like they had a revolving door on the court. You really have to be heads up to know who to guard."

The coach said that State also presents two different pictures with their pressure defense, depending on which guards are in the game. "One set puts pressure on you but isn't physical. The other set puts pressure on you that is physical, so you have to adjust to which group is in the game." We're going to have to get a lot of help in the backcourt to get the ball up court.

"Then, they go to the boards hard. Hawkeye (Whitney) is the best offensive rebounder in the league. They're all like alley fighters: they play hard, and that's a tribute to their coaching staff."

For the ECU basketball team, it will be another opportunity to win that first game against an Atlantic Coast Conference team.

"Our season is bigger than Duke, State or Maryland, the three ACC teams we play," Odom said. "They are on the schedule and we do want to beat them. East Carolina WILL beat an Atlantic Coast Conference school, and I hope that I'm around when it happens. But who is to say that it won't be Wednesday night."

"It can be done, and I would like to have this group of seniors experience it. But either way, it's not going to be our season. Maybe I don't want the win as bad as some of our fans, but I have to look at the full season."

The game winds up the current Pirate road trip, as they return home on Saturday to face UNC-Asheville at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

State Holds Off Wildcat Rally

By The Associated Press
N.C. State held off a second-half comeback attempt by Davidson to secure a 66-63 victory in a New Year's Eve college basketball game.

Clyde Austin grabbed a 52-51 lead with a jump shot after the Wolfpack and the Wildcats swapped the lead seven times. N.C. State managed to keep a lead of one to seven points after that time.

In another game involving an Atlantic Coast Conference team, sixth-ranked North Carolina defeated Crystal Palace of Britain 84-70 to take third place in the Philips International Basketball Tournament in London.

Craig Watts and Dereck Whittenburg led the Wolfpack to a 31-17 lead over Davidson with 4:11 remaining in the first half. Then Rich DiBenedetto and Todd Haynes took over for the Wildcats to coordinate a rally and cut the lead to 33-27 at the half.

The win improved N.C. State's record to 7-1. Davidson's DiBenedetto took top scorer honors for the night, pumping in 20 points. Haynes picked up 18.

After the game, Davidson Coach Eddie Biedenback said his team played "the best we have played all year. Our guys played as well as they can. We had to keep to a low-scoring game and we executed as well as we can."

In London, Al Wood, Mike O'Koren and James Worthy combined to tally 59 points and a win despite a two-point lead at halftime.

Crystal Palace was led by Pete Jeremiah with 19 points. North Carolina now returns to the United States to play Clemson on Wednesday in its first Atlantic Coast Conference game this season.

Mixed Emotions For L.A. Fans

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Drink a toast to the New Year with football's version of Kentucky's mint julep — a sweet-tooth concoction of orange juice, generously spiked with sugar, a rose stem sticking out of the tumbler and a piece of cotton handy to douse on the eye-wash after almost 12 solid hours of television.

A long sentence to introduce a long drink for a long day in front of the tube — a collegiate appetizer for the pro conference championships and Super Bowl XIV.

This tinselled city of make-believe finds itself in a delirious state after the Rams' dramatic upset of the Dallas Cowboys

Sunday and Southern Cal's bid for the national college crown today against No. 1 Ohio State in the Rose Bowl.

The Rams, perennial bridesmaids of the NFL playoffs, have never made the Super Bowl although they've been constant contenders. Now they can almost taste it.

As for Los Angeles football buffs, they can't lose. If the Rams don't make it, John McKay's rags-to-riches Tampa Bay Buccaneers (LA's opponent for the NFC crown) will, and that's like another homecoming.

McKay, the Silver Fox, wove a rich tradition in his 15 years as Southern Cal coach before stepping up to the pros. His roster is sprinkled with former Trojans, including Ricky Bell, the team's 1,000-yard ballcarrier.

LA fans are torn by mixed emotions, but they're happy ones.

Rumors were rife before Sunday's game that Ray Malavasi, the Rams' second-year coach, would be fired at the end of the season and succeeded by USC's John Robinson. Malavasi and the Rams had been booted out of the Coliseum two weeks earlier when they lost their final regular-season game to New Orleans 29-14.

Malavasi's masterful, tactical defensive plan that stunted "America's Team" and nullified Roger Staubach's two-minute lightning silenced all critics.

A trio of Ohio State Buckeyes set a Rose Bowl gastronomic record by devouring 10 prime ribs in a stomach-stuffing derby at a local eatery last weekend. Final honors went to tight end Ron Barwig (6-foot-8 and 242 pounds), who was three-fourths through his 11th when the whistle blew.

Woody Hayes, who used to take his boys up on a mountain and hide them in a monastery, would have blown a gasket.

"You can't keep the guys in a vacuum for a bowl game," said Hayes' successor, Earle Bruce. "It has to be fun. If you make it work, you're in trouble."

Baylor Shocks Clemson

By TOM SALADINO
AP Sports Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Baylor Coach Grant Teaff had no kicks with his punting game or the Bears' seldom used passing attack, which shocked Clemson for three touchdowns in a 24-18 upset victory Monday over the 18th-ranked Tigers in the nationally-televised Peach Bowl.

The 19th-ranked Bears of the Southwest Conference, who had thrown only six touchdown passes during the regular season while hitting on a mere 34 percent of their passes, raised their record to 8-4, the same as Clemson.

Baylor freshman quarterback Mike Brannan threw for a pair of touchdowns 2:35 apart in the second quarter before being sidelined with a knee injury and was voted the game's outstanding offensive performer. Brannan hit Bo Jackson on a 3-yard scoring pass and a 24-yarder to Robert Holt.

"It was just a Hail Mary deal," Brannan said of the pass to Holt, which came after he had scrambled from one side of the field to the other. "As soon as I threw it I wished I had it back, because I could see interception all the way. I just sort of threw it up in the air."

Senior Mickey Elam then came on and added another on a 7-yard toss to Raymond Cockrell in the third period after setting up a 29-yard field goal by Robert Bledoe with a 63-yard pass to Walter Abercrombie.

In all, the two quarterbacks combined for 172 passing yards with Brannan connecting on four of six for 86 yards and Elam on four of 11 for 86 yards.

Clemson, of the Atlantic Coast Conference, scored on a 1-yard run by Lester Brown and Obed Ariri's 40-yard field goal before a last-second score by Chuck McSwain.

"Our passing game doesn't exactly thrill me," Teaff had said earlier in the week while preparing for the post-season contest. "They (Elam and Brannan) throw the ball like I do — which is rather poorly."

But, he conceded, the Bears had to throw against Clemson, which was ranked No. 7 in the nation in total defense and 10th against the rush.

The kicking game also was a factor as the Bears blocked two punts by Clemson's David Sims, who had only had one blocked previously and was fourth in the nation in punting. Both blocks led the touchdowns.

"We thought that the kicking game would be a key to the outcome, and it was," said Teaff, whose punter Ron Stowe kicked nine times for a 41-yard average.

"There's no way you're going to win a ball game by getting two punts blocked," said Clemson Coach Danny Ford. "If you can't protect for the punter, then things probably aren't going to go your way. I think in the kicking game is where we lost the game."

But the kicking game almost brought Clemson back in the closing seconds.

The Tigers blocked a punt with only 22 seconds remaining, recovering on the Baylor 1-yard line. McSwain went over one play later and Clemson a two-point conversion pass from quarterback Billy Lott to Jeff McCall made it 24-18.

The Tigers then recovered an onside kick and moved to the Baylor 33 before Lott was intercepted by Doak Field on the final play of the game.

Names In Sports Give Way To Young Lions

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
The magnificent Muhammad Ali finally retired in 1979 after winning the heavyweight boxing championship a record three times, and the event seemed to signal the dawn of a new age in sports.

"The Greatest," as he modestly referred to himself, was cut down by the bearded man with the scythe — good-bye to the old, hello to the new.

Golf's "Golden Bear," Jack Nicklaus failed to win a tour tournament for the first time in his career and indicated he would devote greater emphasis to his outside business activities in 1980.

That left the door open for boyish-looking Tom Watson, leading money winner on the golf tour for the third straight year, and for a mushrooming band of hungry "young lions."

Chris Evert, tennis' "Miss Metronome," became a housewife and surrendered her queenship of the court to the 23-year-old Czech defector, Martina Navratilova, winner of Wimbledon, and the pig-tailed teen-ager, Tracy Austin, who shattered Chrissy's four-year reign in the U. S. Open.

Billie Jean King tried another of her many net comebacks and failed.

Explosive Jimmy Connors, No. 1 in U. S. men's tennis rankings, fell upon hard times, failing to reach the finals in either Wimbledon or the U. S. Open, the two blue ribbon events in which he had won a total of five titles and reached the ultimate round nine of 10 times over the last five years.

Twenty-year-old John McEnroe, a fuzzy-haired court killer with a fierce competitive drive, emerged as the new heir apparent and chief threat to Sweden's Bjorn Borg, himself only a youth of 23. The kid scored victories in the Grand Prix Masters, WCT Finals in Dallas and the U. S. Open. Borg won his fourth consecutive Wimbledon.

Similarly, a 23-year-old fighting machine named Sugar Ray Leonard captured the imagination of boxing fans by beating Wilfred Benitez for the World Boxing Council welterweight championship. A showman whose personality matched his limitless skills, he became a top television personality less than four years after winning a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics at Montreal.

They dubbed him "The New Ali."

But Father Time could not sweep the slate completely clean.

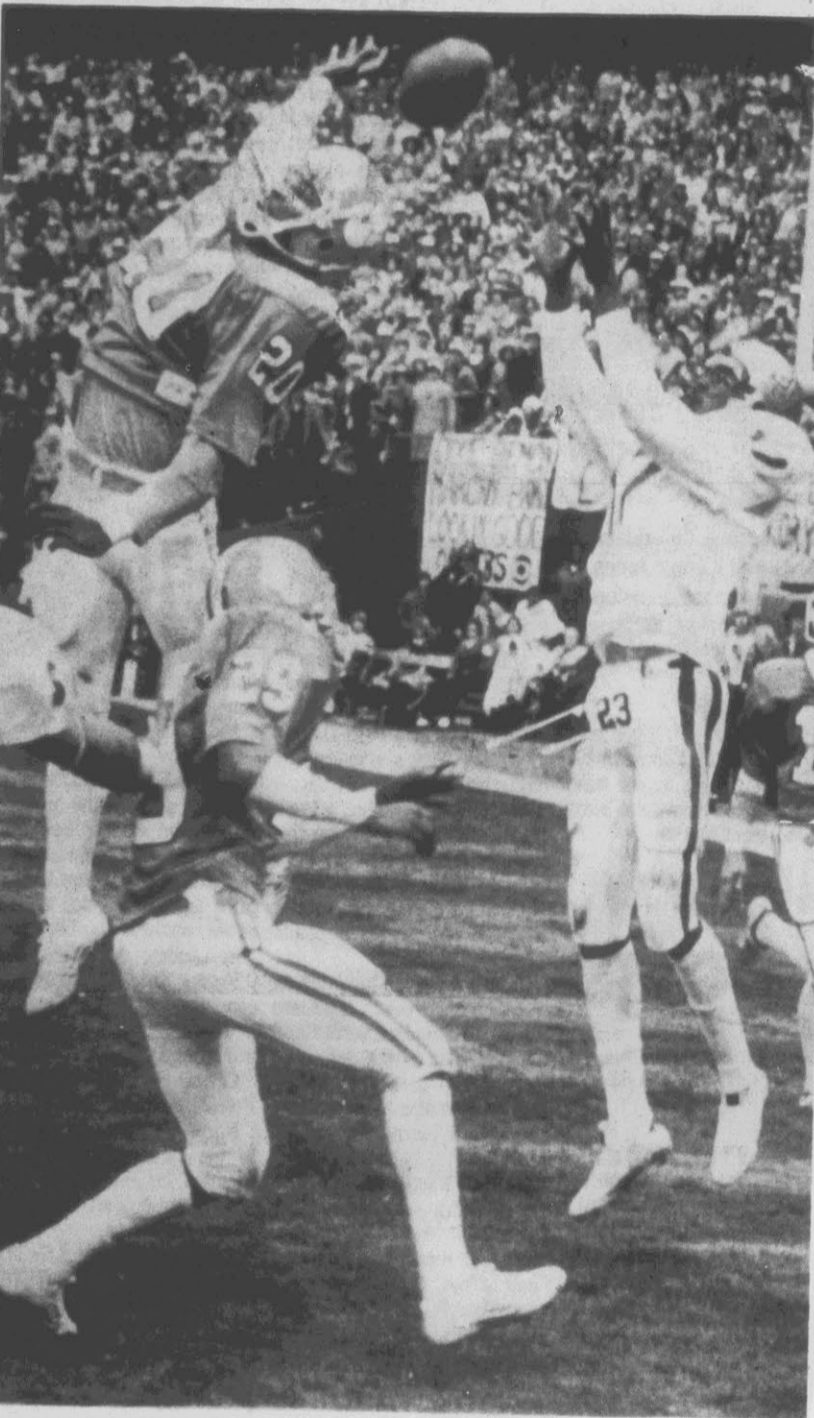

Willie Stargell, a free-spirited 38-year-old relic, discovered a mysterious elixir that enabled him to lead a Pittsburgh Pirate surge in the late weeks to capture the National League pennant and then whip the heavily favored Baltimore Orioles in baseball's World Series.

While Pirate fans sang "We Are Family," Willie rapped out a 400 batting average, hit three home runs, accounted for 25 total bases and struck the knock-out blow to the Orioles with a two-run blast that clinched the seventh and deciding game 4-1. That dubbed Pittsburgh "Title Town U. S. A." Nine months earlier, a balding quarterback veteran of 31, Terry odds-makers have made the Rams three-point favorites. The Bucs were four-point underdogs in Saturday's 24-17 home victory over Philadelphia.

"Underdog, overdog, hot-dog," McKay responded Monday. "Yes, I guess you want to be an underdog — but an underdog with the best team."

"We've got something rolling here now and it's pretty good. I guess no one wants to explain it by saying we've got some good players."

"The relief is in playing at home," McKay said, noting that the Bucs won't have to interrupt their routine to travel this week, and will be playing in front of another loud, friendly crowd.

"I said before I wanted the last two games here. And it's our Christmas present four or five days late."

Bowden Has His Plan All Worked Out

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Bobby Bowden has it all worked out for his Florida State football team to win the national championship: Alabama would have to lose to Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl, his Seminoles would have to beat Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl and "Southern Cal and Ohio State would have to play the dullest 3-3 tie in history" in the Rose Bowl.

However, it would seem more realistic that the national title will be decided somewhere west of Florida, most probably in the Rose Bowl game matching the nation's No. 1 team (Ohio State) against No. 3 (Southern Cal).

Though currently ranked below the Buckeyes in the national poll, the Trojans were 7 1/2-point favorites in today's game at Pasadena, Calif., where the Heisman Trophy winner and two of the nation's top quarterbacks were featured.

Heisman winner Charles White, latest in a long line of great Southern Cal tailbacks, is part of one of the country's most creative offenses, directed by quarterback Paul McDonald. Art Schlichter, quarterback of the Buckeyes, the Big Ten champions who come into this game with an 11-0 record. Southern Cal, winner of the Pac-10, has won 10 games and been tied once.

Meanwhile, second-ranked Alabama of the Southeastern Conference took on No. 6 Arkansas of the Southwest in the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans. The Crimson Tide, the nation's No. 1 team for most of the season until a 'desultory victory over Auburn, have won all 11 of their games under the direction of quarterback Steadman Shealy and a bullish defense. The SEC champions were 9 1/2-point picks over the Razorbacks.

The Cotton Bowl in Dallas matched seventh-ranked Nebraska against eighth-ranked Houston. Both teams had 10-1 records and each lost show-downs for conference titles, Nebraska to Oklahoma in the Big Eight and Houston to Texas in the Southwest.

Florida State, ranked fourth in the country, takes an 11-0 record and extremely slim hopes for the national championship into tonight's game against No. 5 Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl in Miami. The Sooners, 10-1, led by two-time All-American and 1978 Heisman Trophy winner Billy Sims, are one-touchdown favorites over Bowden's team.

In action Monday, 19th-ranked Baylor defeated No. 18 Clemson 24-18 in the Peach Bowl as quarterback Mike Brannan fired two touchdown passes. Mickey Elam, who replaced Brannan when the freshman was injured in the second quarter, sparked Baylor to 10 third-quarter points.

Purdue quarterback Mark Herrmann, who watched a 21-0 lead disappear, hit tight end Dave Young with a 17-yard touchdown pass with 1:30 to play for a 27-22 victory over Tennessee in the 21st Bluebonnet Bowl. Tennessee's gambling Volunteers rallied behind the fourth-quarter heroics of quarterback Jimmy Streater and running back Hubert Simpson to take a 22-21 lead with 3:42 to play. But Herrmann promptly took the Boiler-makers 80 yards in 10 plays for the winning touchdown.

Names Give Way...

Bradshaw pitched and directed the Pittsburgh Steelers to a 35-31 victory over the Dallas Cowboys in the National Football League's Super Bowl.

In an individual battle between the league's top quarterbacks, Bradshaw completed passes for 318 yards and four touchdowns, both Super Bowl records, shading Roger Staubach's three-touchdown production through the air. Bradshaw was named the game's MVP.

And what about the "Wonder Kid," Steve Cauten, who rode mightily Affirmed to a sweep of the horse racing's Triple Crown in 1978? Little Stevie decided to go West, young man — a fatal error. He rode 110 races without a victory at Santa Anita. Discouraged, he picked up his gear and hied off to England and the European circuit.

What young sprite succeeded him? It was Laffit Pincay, a hardened saddlesmith of 37. The Panamanian succeeded Cauten in Affirmed's stirrups and went on to set a record of more than $8 million for the season in winnings and turning Affirmed into Horse of the Year.

Spectacular Bid won both the Kentucky Derby and Preakness but failed to complete the magic triple when he trailed Coastal in the 1 1/2 mile Belmont Stakes. The Belmont loss was blamed by Trainer Buddy Delp as a foot infection caused by a safety pin.

Veterinarians failed to confirm the injury but Spectacular Bid was kept largely cloistered until he was sent against Affirmed in the Jockey Club Gold Cup, losing to the 1978 champion. Spectacular Bid's handlers screamed for a rematch but Affirmed was retired to stud with winnings of $2,393,818.

It was oldsters not youngsters who dominated major league baseball which saw a complete turnover of reigning champions.

Pete Rose, 38 years of whipcord tenacity and 200 pounds of scrap iron, was the center of attention when spring training unfolded — the Cincinnati Red legend who traded for a Philadelphia Phillie uniform and a $3.2 million contract.

Could this replica of the aggressive Ty Cobb survive the pressures of his new challenge with a team that now appeared compelled to win the National League pennant and the World Series?

Rose did, even if his team didn't. He weathered the early jealousy of some of his teammates, a family breakup and a paternity suit by hitting .331 with 270 total bases. His greatest feat, however, was getting more than 200 hits for the 10th time, smashing one of Cobb's proudest marks.

The Phillies, as did the New York Yankees, Los Angeles Dodgers and Kansas City Royals, failed to repeat as division winners, leaving a fresh quartet to battle for post-season honors.

The Pirates beat the Cincinnati

Reds for the National League title while the Orioles, under cagey Earl Weaver, whipped cowboy star Gene Autry's California Angels for the American crown.

The Dodgers, who lost ace pitcher Tommy John to the Yankees, were beset with injuries, the twice-champion Yankees with tragedy and turmoil.

The Yankees got off to a slow start when Rich Gossage, their relief ace, suffered an injured finger in a locker room scuffle. They never got untracked. In mid-season, owner George Steinbrenner created a furore by rehiring Billy Martin to replace Bob Lemon. Later, when Martin was involved in another bar room skirmish, he was fired.

Yankee spirits received another beating when their all-star catcher and captain, Thurmon Munson, died while trying to land his private jet on a Canton, Ohio, runway in August.

Dan Will Be Ready

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini patrolled the sidelines like an expectant father during last Saturday's emotional 17-14 victory over San Diego in the American Football Conference semifinal playoffs.

And when it was over, Pastorini embraced Gifford Nielsen, his replacement, and pronounced, "I'm as proud of him as if he were a son."

Nielsen, with poise beyond his brief experience, guided the Oilers offense to one of the biggest victories in the franchise's history.

But proud or not, Pastorini said Monday the groin injury that kept him out of Saturday's game is healing and he expects to play Sunday in the AFC title game against the Pittsburgh Steelers.

And, he expects a victory. "We'll win this one," said Pastorini, who watched Saturday's game from the sideline recovering from a groin injury suffered a week earlier against Denver.

"Even if we have to find a secret way to hold onto a wet, frozen ball, we won't let the weather be a factor," he said.

A frozen field and icy conditions, not to mention six fumbles, led to the Oilers downfall last year in the AFC title game against Pittsburgh.

Watching from the sidelines also taught Pastorini something about himself.

"I realized I could never coach," he said. "Watching that game made a nervous wreck out of me. I felt useless on the sidelines."

The winner of Sunday's game will advance to the Jan. 20 Super Bowl at Pasadena, Calif., against the winner of Sunday's National Football Conference title game between Los Angeles and Tampa Bay.

The baseball season ended with speedballer Nolan Ryan and wacky Al "Mad Hungarian" Hrabosky signing $1 million-a-year contracts in the free agent market (with Houston and Atlanta, respectively), provoking Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to warn that the current system is "a bomb ticking over our heads."

It was evident that the owners planned to take a rigid stance in renegotiation of the Players Agreement, coming up for renewal after four years. The players appeared disinclined to surrender gains they got from the historic Peter Seitz arbitration ruling, killing the game's reserve clause.

Having regained his WBA heavyweight crown from Leon Spinks, Ali appeared content to assume the role of international ambassador. Yet there was an ugly rift in boxing ranks, two associations, WBA and WBC, recognizing different titlists.

Unbeaten Larry Holmes successfully defended his WBC version by beating Ossie Ocasio, Mike Weaver and Earnie Shavers. Olympian John Tate laid claim to the WBA crown after whipping Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa.

The Alabama Crimson Tide, with the veteran Paul "Bear" Bryant zeroing in on Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time record of victories, won college football's 1978 national title by beating Penn State 14-7 in the Sugar Bowl and led the 1979 Associated Press poll until overtaken by Ohio State the last week of the 1979 season. Other 1979 major bowl winners were Southern California, Rose; Notre Dame, Cotton; and Oklahoma, Orange.

A surprise team, Indiana State, led by talented Larry Bird, dominated the college basketball poll but lost to Michigan State in the NCAA finals. Bird and Michigan State's Magic Johnson signed lucrative contracts in the National Basketball Association.

Seattle turned the tables on the Washington Bullets to capture the NBA crown. Ann Meyers, a leading woman player, got a brief tryout with the Indiana Pacers. Then she moved over to the developing Women's Basketball League.

Tom Watson, with $462,636, and Nancy Lopez, with $197,488, again led their respective golf tours in prize money but neither won a major crown. Hale Irwin won his second U. S. Open, Fuzzy Zoeller the Masters, Dave Graham the PGA and Spain's Severiano Ballesteros the British Open. Jerilyn Britz won the Ladies' Open, Donna Caponi Young the LPGA.

Despite a drivers' rift, most big name auto racers competed at Indianapolis where Rick Mears drove to victory. The Montreal Canadiens won the Stanley Cup, symbol of National Hockey League supremacy, for the fourth straight time. Winnipeg won the last World Hockey Association title before a merger with the NHL.

N.C. Milk Prices Being Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Only two weeks after two public officials promised they would monitor milk prices, Big Star stores have cut their North Carolina milk prices.

The move prompted several other food chains to promise they too will cut milk prices. The Big Star cut, which went into effect Sunday, brings the new maximum price in Eastern and Piedmont North Carolina to $1.99 per gallon.

In Raleigh stores, the cut amounted to 26 cents a gallon. But in Morehead City consumers will pay 34 cents less. In Winston-Salem, prices will remain the same.

The reduction brings milk prices to the level at which they stood one year ago.

Spokesmen for Food Town and Food World chains said they probably will match Big Star's price cut sometime this week. Spokesmen for Winn-Dixie and A&P said they are not sure if they'll reduce prices. Two weeks ago, N.C. Milk Commission member Noel L. Allen told The News and Observer of Raleigh that he will ask the state attorney general to investigate the industry.

H.A. Cole Jr., director of the anti-trust division of the state Justice Department said at the same time he was keeping record of the increases in milk prices and he was considering if there were anti-trust violations.

"I think this price rollback is a victory for consumers," Allen said Monday. "But it also says to me that they could have been charging a price this low all along."

Cole said he believes the possibility of an investigation by the attorney general's office may have prompted the cut. "I have an idea they decided they'd better jump now," he said Monday.

But Giles M. Sheffield, regional grocery merchandising manager for Colonial Stores, said the possibility of an investigation had nothing to do with the cut. Colonial Stores Inc. owns Big Star.

"No, our decision was based on the fact that milk is a necessary commodity for many consumers," Sheffield said. "We've been studying our milk prices and marketing practices since November. By doing some juggling with some of our featured items and changing some of our marketing practices, we found we would be able to do it."

Sheffield said he does not expect the cost of other shelf items to go up to cover the cut in milk prices.

Milk commission members have estimated it costs at least $1.83 to put a gallon of milk on the retail shelf. Industry representatives contend the estimate is too low but they have declined to release other figures.

A Give And Take Matter

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt's cabinet members have been advised to credit Hunt with popular state programs but to accept the blame for other unpopular programs themselves, reports a Raleigh newspaper.

The statement was contained in the minutes of a Nov. 26 meeting of top officials in the state Department of Human Resources, it was reported in the Tuesday edition of The News and Observer.

In the minutes, Thomas O. Gilmore, deputy secretary of human resources, summarized what was said in the cabinet meeting held that same day

The News and Observer reported that the minutes were mailed to Bob Scott, Hunt's opponent in the Democratic primary for governor. Scott's press secretary Bryant Haskins mailed copies of the minutes to three newspapers.

Gilmore, in the minutes, quoted Crime Control Secretary Burley B. Mitchell as saying: "Cabinet members should give the governor credit for popular programs and let the secretaries take the blame for unpopular programs."

Mitchell said Monday he would not deny or confirm the reports. "I'm not going to talk about what is said in a cabinet meeting," Mitchell said.

The cabinet meetings are closed to the public and no official minutes are kept.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary who attends the cabinet meetings, said he was not sure if Mitchell made the comments, "but I think someone might have said it."

"So what? I don't think we have anything to hide," Pearce said.

Gilmore warned that the minutes were based on notes he took during the cabinet meeting and they might not be the exact words used during the session.

"They're just rough minutes and are not for public consumption," he said.

$19 Million Suit

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — A group of Dare County residents have filed a $19 million lawsuit in Dare County Superior Court against the International Paper Co. and Johns-Manville Corp.

The class-action suit was filed by the Colington Harbour Association of Kill Devil Hills on behalf of 575 residents of the private Albemarle Sound development near Kill Devil Hills.

The suit alleges excessive deterioration of concrete seawalls that line the development's canals.

The residents say International Paper and two subsidiaries that developed the subdivision agreed to pay repairs and costs for failures of the seawalls.

But the suit says that in August 1978 the company told the residents that the costs were the responsibility of the makers and sellers of the seawall materials — Johns-Manville and two of its subsidiaries.

The suit further alleges that in December 1978 Johns-Manville blamed seawall deterioration on faulty design and installation by the development's builders.

Officials at International Paper declined to comment on the suit and officials at Johns-Manville could not be reached for comment.

The residents are seeking about $9 million to replace the seawalls and another $9.5 million to cover other alleged damage to property and the environment.

No hearing date has been set.

Screening Program Begins Wednesday

Screening for participation in the Career Development Program for Displaced Homemakers will be held Wednesday through Friday from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. at the Greenville Center, located in the Wilcar Executive Center, 223 W. Tenth Street, Suite 201.

From 20 to 25 persons will be accepted in the six-week program.

The purpose of the program is to provide displaced homemakers in the area with the services they need to become self-sufficient, obtain jobs, and receive additional training. The length of the program is six weeks, with time spent in the classroom at the center and time spent in searching for suitable employment or training.

have been receiving public assistance or who are underemployed and who are experiencing difficulty in obtaining or upgrading employment are also defined as "displaced homemakers."

For additional information, one may write Development Center for Displaced Homemakers, or call the center, 752-0642.

Pays 23¢ A Pound For Recyclable Aluminum

The year 1980 will be the 13th consecutive year that Reynolds Aluminum has been paying cash to aluminum recyclers, and the local center is very active.

Locally, Reynolds recycles at Pitt Plaza, Highway 264, every Friday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Reynolds now pays 23 cents a pound for clean, recyclable aluminum, and began paying cash in 1968 in Los Angeles on an experimental basis. Since that time, Reynolds has recycled over 760 million pounds of aluminum, representing almost 17 billion beverage cans. This amounts to over $121 million paid to recyclers since this program was initiated.

In addition to cans, Reynolds accepts other household aluminum like pie tins, foil, pots and pans, siding, tubing and cast aluminum parts such as the bottom of barbecue grills.

Cans should be kept in a clear plastic bag, while larger pieces should be cut into lengths not exceeding three feet and be tightly bound.

New Church

RALEIGH — Bishop Robert M. Blackburn has announced the appointment of the Rev. K. Smith, Henderson, as pastor of a new church in Rocky Mount.

Smith will resign his present responsibilities as Associate Minister at First United Methodist Church and begin his new duties today.

With the help of the Rocky Mount District Board of Missions and Church Extension, Smith will develop a congregation in north Rocky Mount.

Smith said he anticipates the purchase of property in the near future, although a site has not yet been determined.

A native of Bethel, Smith practiced law for six years in the Rocky Mount area before entering the ministry. He is a graduate of Duke University and the University of North Carolina.

New Director Of ALE Div.

Crime Control and Public Safety Secretary Burley Mitchell recently announced the appointment of Donald M. Murray as the director of the Division of Alcohol Law Enforcement.

In making the announcement, Mitchell said, "We are indeed fortunate to have a man of Don's talent and experience to lead Alcohol Law Enforcement. We are in the process of upgrading the professionalism of ALE and I believe Don to be the right man to lead us in this effort."

Murray, 50, is a 24-year veteran of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He has been head of the Raleigh FBI office since 1965, and he replaces John B. Brooks who has been reassigned to other duties within ALE for health reasons.

Murray has spent 22 of his more than 24 years with the FBI in North Carolina, serving in Fayetteville and Charlotte before coming to Raleigh. While in Charlotte, he was named North Carolina Training Coordinator for the FBI and has held that position ever since. In his capacity as training coordinator, Murray has traveled the state instructing law enforcement agencies in various aspects of law enforcement.

Murray is a graduate of Canisius College and the FBI National Academy. An Army veteran, Murray is married and the father of five children.

'NUKE' Game For Activists

By CAROLE FELDMAN

Associated Press Writer
PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — For the activist-who-has-everything, there's a new board game, called "NUKE: The Race to Nuclear Power." But you might first make sure your activist has a sense of humor.

The Monopoly-type board game, with 36 squares for two to four players, pits one utility against another in the scramble to be the first to build a nuclear power plant. All it takes to win is $1 billion and five federal and local permits.

The inventors, two anti-nuclear political scientists, say the game is meant to be educational and fun, an irreverent satire on the nuclear power industry.

But, say Andrea Asaro and David Morell, who developed the game, it also is designed to teach people about nuclear energy.

"What I wanted to do was a spoof on nuclear power, a real satire," says Ms. Asaro, a first-year law student. "It was a joke initially."

But one utility official, although acknowledging that he had not seen NUKE, says the nuclear industry is nothing to joke about.

"I hardly think the nuclear industry is something to be spoofed," says Sam Laird, a spokesman for Jersey Central Power & Light Co., which operates a nuclear power plant in New Jersey. "Nuclear energy is something too important and too vital to the country to hold up as light as a game."

Ms. Asaro, 29, who received a doctorate in political science at Princeton University, says it took her about two weeks to develop the board game, which sells for $8.95 by mail order.

"I have the sense that this will appeal to anyone who's concerned about the environment and energy," she says. "Games are in, and this is a very topical kind of theme."

"The statement of the game is twofold," says Morell, 40, a research political scientist at Princeton's Center for Energy and Environmental Studies and an anti-nuclear activist.

"For those already committed to an anti-nuclear power stance, it's important that on occasion we be able to maintain a sense of humor," he says. "It also is educational — it may foster more understanding of the nuclear industry from a critical perspective."

NUKE's utilities move around the board at the throw of a die and lose or gain permits and money, depending on the square on which they land.

Morell says the game has several advantages; you can play it in about a half-hour and it's cheaper than most board games. But most important, he says, the game is fun.

Ms. Asaro and Morell are marketing the game themselves because, as she says, "the big game companies wouldn't touch it."

It was returned to them, in some cases, with a form letter and in some cases opened but rejected.

Milton-Bradley's John W. O'Donnell, while noting that the big game company does not even look at unsolicited games, says the subject would have been rejected even if from a known inventor. "Our conservative posture would have told us to pass on that one," he says.

Film Buff Has Vast Collection

By KATHY O'CONNELL

Middletown, Conn. Press
OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — If movie lovers have a vision of heaven, the chances are very good that it bears a strong resemblance to Fred Beebe's basement.

There is a ticket booth in Beebe's basement, and a 1909 player piano, three projectors, a 6-by-8 screen with lights and an electronic curtain, movie posters dating back to 1901, and more than 100 photographs — nearly all of them autographed — of about every famous face to appear on a movie screen after 1930.

Retired from the Southern New England Telephone Co. and the former proprietor of an Old Saybrook electronic shop, Beebe will tell you matter-of-factly that the whole theater, called Cinema 381, owes its existence to a drainage problem back in 1952.

"The cellar was just dirt and stone," he says. "Every spring, it would get flooded. So we had a choice of raising the house or cleaning up the basement."

Seven tons of ashes, dirt and stone came out, and about 185 bags of cement and three tons of forcing rods went in. Beebe did the work himself. How it was transformed into a theater is another story.

"Movies were always exciting to me," he says, standing next to his collection of rare glass slides that were used during the earliest days of silent film.

"When I was a boy, I sold magazines — it was the Literary Digest, I think — to make money to go to the movies. I made 30 cents, and movies cost 15. So someone said to me, why don't you get a job in the theater? So I did, in 1920."

The "theater" was actually the old Town Hall, where films were shown on Saturdays. Twenty-five of the seats from the Town Hall are now in Beebe's basement. Projectors hand-cranked in those days, but Beebe became very proficient at it. The first projector he ever owned was a toy 35mm, which was replaced in 1935 with a real one.

What also helped cultivate Beebe's love of the movies was a fascination with electronics. The whole idea of film, that combination of light and machinery and movement, captivated him.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

One of the facts of life is that before you can make thirteen tricks, you must make twelve. South did not seem to be aware of this basic principle.

The auction was thoughtful and accurate. Once South rebid his hearts, North took the opportunity to cue-bid his club ace to show a maximum jump to two no trump and support for hearts. When North was later able to cue-bid the ace of diamonds as well, South judged that he would have a good play for six hearts.

West led the queen of spades and declarer was off to a good start when he won in his hand with the ace. He crossed to the ace of clubs and ruffed a club. The ace of hearts and a trump to the jack drew the outstanding trumps and left declarer in dummy. A club ruff was followed by a spade to the king and another club ruff. The black suits had now been stripped from both declarer's hand and dummy, and a favorable end position had been reached.

Declarer led a diamond. West produced the ten and dummy's jack held. Declarer now fell from grace by allowing an overtrick to lure him. He cashed the ace of diamonds in an attempt to drop the king. East failed to follow to the trick and declarer was stranded with two diamond losers. Down one.

Once the diamond finesse won, declarer was assured of twelve tricks regardless of how the suit was distributed. He should simply have continued with a low diamond from dummy. If East followed, declarer inserts the queen and, even if that loses to the king, declarer will score the last two diamond tricks.

When East shows out on the second diamond, declarer simply plays low from his hand. West will win the diamond cheaply, but he will find that he is end played. A diamond return will run around to declarer's queen; any other return will allow declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a diamond from the other. Either way, declarer is guaranteed twelve tricks.

Handicapped Need TLC

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Children born with life-threatening handicaps are often separated from their parents and placed in isolation. But this procedure can actually hinder their growth and development, says the director of a pilot program at Syracuse University.

Gail Ensher, associate professor of special education, is coordinating a task force combining pediatricians, nurses, therapists and educators in a federally funded project that will bring parents of high-risk newborns into a specialized program providing "tender, loving care."

Upstate Medical Center of the State University of New York is providing some of the medical forces and the project will be carried out at Crouse-Ingvar Memorial Hospital's neonatal and perinatal departments.

"Infants with handicaps — low birth weight, various birth defects — will have a better chance to learn and progress if they are brought into close physical contact with their families, and the sooner after birth the better," Ms. Ensher says. The program, which also draws on the expertise of social workers and psychologists, is aimed at immediate family involvement.

Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Consider the notion that most people pass through life oblivious to the forces of mass communication, and you've got a fairly good definition of "Media Probes."

"Take Muzak," says Michael Lemle, fine-tuning the definition. "Once you've created an awareness of it, you'll know how it affects your life."

Or, says Kit Laybourne, using an admittedly borrowed image, "You ought to know how the media work, kind of like people who live on the water should know how to swim."

Lemle, 31, and Laybourne, 35, are co-producers of "Media Probes," a new Public Broadcasting Service series that will be previewed the evening of Jan. 14, just before PBS' presentation of "Live from the Met" starring tenor Luciano Pavarotti.

"Media Probes" is scheduled to join the PBS lineup early in 1981.

"I think our over-all objective," says Lemle, "is to raise the awareness of people to the media. It's our contention most people are affected by these tremendous forces without knowing it."

"It's not our intention to take positions, to say this is good and this is bad, but simply to show the media are there."

"Media Probes" is, above all, different in its approach to the subject.

"How we're talking," says Lemle, "is as important as what we're talking about. Almost all of television is geared toward supplying answers to the viewers. Take commercials; the guy wants to date the girl and the answer to his problem is the right mouth-wash.

"It's the same with '60 Minutes,' as good as that program is. Here's the omniscient host who tells you what you're going to see, narrates what you're seeing, and and the end, tells you what you've seen.

"All of this takes away the viewers chance to have first-hand experience with the material."

In the pilot episode, called "Soundaround," the viewer is the second person present — for an interview with the man who runs Muzak, for conversations with programmers for three big-city radio stations, for a sound-mixing session for a record.

"To deal with all sound in a half-hour, we couldn't pretend to tell the whole story," Lemle says. "I think maybe we're being pretentious anyway, doing just what we're doing. "That's why we call it 'Media Probes,' we're just probing the subject to create this awareness, really just raising questions."

Adds Laybourne, "There's no media theory at all."

"But there are issues involve in all of these things," Lemle says. "UNESCO, for example, is looking at whether a person's acoustical space is within his or her rights. And maybe Muzak is within that area, but we're trying to stay away from that. We're looking for the questions."

Faiths Jointly Condemn Iran

NEW YORK (AP) — An organization of all major religions, including Islam, has condemned the retention of American hostages in Iran.

The U. S. section of the World Conference of Religion and Peace, embracing representatives of 10 historic faiths, said in a statement:

"All world religions, including Islam, hold that the dignity of each person must be respected, and that hostages must not be taken and unjustly retained."

The organization said it "joins with other concerned organizations and peoples across the world in condemning the retention of American hostages in Iran."

Just Following Same Course As Special Interest Groups On TV

By JOAN HANAUER
UPI Television Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — When Ayatollah Khomeini and his Iranian followers try to use American television for their own ends, they are following in the footsteps of a long line of American special interest groups.

That's the view shared by the presidents of the three network news departments. And they tend to believe the American viewing public is sufficiently sophisticated to realize this and interpret news reports accordingly.

"Are we being used?" Bill Leonard, president of CBS News, repeating the interviewer's question. "The answer is that people are always trying to use us. People were trying to use us about Vietnam, the civil rights people were trying to use us, the politicians try to use us all the time."

"Being used is part of the business of the journalist, whether it's print, radio or television. It's our job to make sure the American people understand the motivations and special interests of people all over the world and in all kinds of situation."

There have been continuing rumbles from Washington that the Iranians were "using" American television, particularly in the interviews given by Khomeini several weeks ago, and when NBC broadcast an interview with a Marine corporal hostage on Dec. 10 which included a statement by an Iranian revolutionary. ABC and CBS had turned down hostage interview proposals because of conditions imposed that would have restricted their editorial control.

"Everyone tries to use us," said Bill Small, president of NBC News. "The president, politicians, do-gooders, people with a cause. Everyone has a right to try."

"That doesn't mean they'll succeed. Americans are not stupid. They can make judgments for themselves when they know all the circumstances."

On the specific question of the hostage interview, Small defended NBC's decision by saying, "We know a helluva lot more today than we did before the interview about the condition of the hostages."

The friction between government and television probably will worsen in coming years, as foreign interests become increasingly adept in attempts to bypass diplomatic channels by using television as a communications and propaganda platform. That was obvious in the response of Roone Arledge, president of ABC News.

"The government is confusing functions," Arledge said. "It's unfortunate that the State Department has not been able to establish diplomatic contacts with the Iranian authorities, but that doesn't make our responsibility to report the news any less pressing or adverse to the national interest."

"There was criticism of television along this line to some degree during the Vietnam war, and there was concern about the role of television in Mideast diplomacy during the Sadat-Begin meetings. It certainly does seem there is a deeper commitment to try to use the American media on the part of the Iranians than of any previous group I can think of. And they won't be the last."

He believes the network news departments can draw the line between legitimate stories and straight propaganda, and so can the audience.

Arledge has an Iranian protest of his own to lodge with the American government concerning "when the Shah was taken to a U.S. Air Force Base and reporters in the land of freedom were threatened with being physically ejected from the base."

"There are security problems and no one in his right mind thinks we should be allowed to walk into the Shah's bedroom every day. But the way this has been handled, when you get right down to it, we're not even really sure he's there."

CBS's Leonard dismissed the idea that Iranian "use" of television had swayed the American people to the Ayatollah's cause.

"The exposure on television of all these people, their confusion, their hatreds, their attitudes toward the United States — instead of convincing anybody, it has brought the American people together in a way that they haven't been since Pearl Harbor."

As for complaints from Hodding Carter of the State Department that television interviews with Khomeini hardened him in his position to put hostages on trial, Leonard said, "I reject that completely. If he can get inside Khomeini's head, God bless him. I don't even know who's running the place. It seemed to me the interviews with Khomeini were revealing and I don't apologize for that."

NBC's Small contributed some advice that was related to him about an expert on hostages.

"Some years ago in a similar situation," Small said, "the expert was asked what would happen if you blacked out coverage entirely. The answer was that it would create a serious problem. Captors, if they can't get any exposure, start doing even more extreme things to their victims because they are frustrated. We need to keep people talking, even if it's through a reporter in Tehran."

Better Rating Is More Likely

NEW YORK (UPI) — Newspapers are more likely than television to get a positive rating from women on how they portray women in articles and advertisements. Forty-six percent of the working women and 51 percent of the non-working women questioned in a study by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. said they approved of newspaper ads and articles, compared with 36 percent and 23 percent who did not. Comparable figures for TV commercials showed 30 percent of working women and 32 percent of non-working women approved, while 59 and 51 percent did not. The greatest criticism of the way women are presented in advertising came from younger, better educated women from higher income households.

Home Computers Can Be Costly, As A Rule

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Using a home computer is child's play. But who can afford — or wants to spend — $1,150, just for starters, for an electronic toy?

A home computer is more than a toy, says Jim Fallas, marketing program manager for the personal computer division of a Lubbock, Texas manufacturer.

While it will play games — kiddie and adult — it will do lots more, Fallas said, as he put the computer through its paces.

It balances budgets, figures income taxes, teaches arithmetic, grammar and other basic skills.

It records messages, makes printouts and could even provide weather, crop and financial reports, train, plane and bus schedules and recipes, Fallas said in an interview.

First you buy the hardware.

No, not hammer, nails and electrical supplies. Hardware is computer language for the basic unit: a free-standing typewriter-like keyboard and a video display color monitor that looks like a television set with a 13-inch screen.

Next, you shell out $19.95-$69.95 apiece for accessories to make the home computer perform — one for each subject or function.

Texas Instruments' accessories include Command Modules — little black boxes that slide into a keyboard slot the way cartridges fit a stereo. They're preprogrammed with silicone chips to make the hardware work. A silicon chip looks like a square silver sequin without the hole in the middle.

If you want to make your own program, that, too, is possible, Fallas said. A module built into the computer responds to keyboard commands, letting you transfer the program to regular tape cassettes. Even this is not cheap, Fallas said good quality tape is necessary, the kind that costs about $25 per cassette.

Still with me? By pushing buttons on the keyboard, you change the images on the screen and respond to commands that appear in printing or in what the manufacturer calls "human-like voice."

To me the Speech Synthesizer sounded more like a robot.

Among other things, it is used with some of the children's games and educational modules to reinforce learning, Fallas said.

Spooky. The synthesizer, a printout device and a Terminal Emulator won't be in stores until the first quarter of next year.

And what is a Terminal Emulator? My dictionary defines the two words as "final" and "imitator" or "rival."

TI's emulator "can access subscription data services and time shared computer systems," the company says. Translation: it can call up on the screen such information as transportation schedules, weather, crop and financial reports and other information stored in other computers.

"The Terminal Emulator requires two additional peripheral devices — a RS-232 Interface and Telephone Modem," the manufacturer says.

Can you afford them? You'll have to wait until next year to find out. Their prices have not yet been announced — and the Home Financial Decisions Command Module also won't be in stores until early 1980.

JEANNE LESEM tries her hand at a home computer that sells for $1,150. It consists of typewriter-like keyboard and a video display color monitor. Accessories to make it perform — one for each subject or function — cost from $19.95 to $69.95. (UPI Photo)

China Suffers Travel 'Pains'

By JULIE BROSSY

HONG KONG (UPI) — A few years back, just having your passport stamped with a Chinese visa was fuel enough for several letters, not to mention extra mileage on the cocktail circuit.

Travelers returned with tales of how hotel workers called themselves "helpful comrades" and were such paragons of honesty they would rush after your departing bus with an old slipper you had meant to discard.

But nowadays the Chinese are rapidly expanding their tourist industry to earn more hard currency from their "foreign friends." New cities are being opened and rail, air and ferry links are being improved.

The result of the sudden increase in tourists: more complaints.

One recent visitor complained his stay in Peking was shortened because of a lack of hotel rooms. Others tell stories of having to bribe hotel staff to get good treatment, or being charged for having a watermelon cut. One group was even asked to pay an extra night's hotel bill when their Chinese flight was suddenly cancelled.

"It's a rip-off," a member of a recent tour said. "They're charging first class prices for second class service."

For example, "There's a shortage of guides, and it's not easy to find the right people. They have to be politically aware, speak a foreign language, and also know how to serve people."

As a result, he said staff is transferred back and forth between the Foreign Ministry and the Tourism bureau.

"The quality of guides in Canton and Peking is a problem," he said, "because they've seen too many tourists. But not so much in the other cities."

To prevent unhappy surprises, Loo said he warns members of each tour before they leave that accommodations may not be up to Western standards, and that certain expenses, such as a night at the Peking opera, or drinks at meals, are not included in the base price of the tour.

"We tell them they cannot compare Hong Kong or their home area to China. If people are aware of this, it's not a problem," Loo said.

Considering that the number of foreign visitors to China (not including businessmen or overseas Chinese, who are classified differently) more than tripled between 1977 and 1978, from 30,000 to 100,000, it's no wonder that the tourism industry is experiencing a few growing pains.

Group tours from Hong Kong, which can be arranged through either the official China Travel Service, or an appointed travel agent, range in price from $320 for four days in Canton, to $2,400 for a 10- or 12-day tour which includes Peking.

The price includes three meals a day and lodging, which can cost from $33 a night at the famous Peking Hotel, to $10 for an air-conditioned room at the Dung Fang in Canton.

Spending Limit Proponents Have Sighted In On 21 States

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Volunteer inflation fighters, cheered by voters' approval of amendments limiting spending in California and Washington, plan to push harder for limits on both spending and taxing power in a number of states.

"The California voters' use of the initiative and referendum to control their elected officials has shown us how to get Congress to reduce federal spending, taxes and inflation," said Milton Mound of New York, organizer of the National Initiative-Referendum Association.

"The principal cause of inflation is that Congress still believes it is politically expedient — that it helps get votes — to spend more and more money every year without increasing the supply of goods or services anyone would buy," Mound said.

"The remedy," he said, "is to make spending a political blunder and annual reductions political necessity."

Arthur Milton, an insurance and investment counselor who has written two books on inflation, went a bit farther.

What is really needed to halt inflation, Milton said, is for the voters to take so much political power away from the professional politicians and bureaucrats that they actually will begin to fear for their professional tenure and their prospective pensions unless they bring spending and inflation under control.

Richard Headlee, leader of the popular taxpayer movement in Michigan, said the year since the adoption by Michigan voters of a tax-limiting amendment had resulted in an absolute turnaround in the state.

"In the 10 years before the amendment, state and local taxes in Michigan increased twice as fast as the people's ability to pay," Headlee said. In one year the amendment has caused rollbacks of between $40 million and $50 million in local taxes, he said, citing tax cuts in 70 percent of the state's counties, 74 percent of the school districts, 72 percent of the townships and villages and 42 percent of the cities.

California has had large reductions in taxes since the Jarvis amendment, also known as Proposition 13, was passed two years ago limiting the amounts that could be collected. This year the voters passed Proposition 4, which puts limits on spending.

Mound believes similar results can be obtained without constitutional amendments in the 21 states that have provisions for initiative and referendum issues on the ballot.

His association has formulated a tax-limiting initiative called National Proposition One. It is designed to roll up an avalanche of votes to convince politicians that unless they cut expenditures by 1 percent immediately and at a compounded rate of 2 percent annually for four years, it will be an odds-on gamble they will be defeated when they come up for re-election.

Mound's group confidently expects the New Jersey legislature to put National Proposition One on the ballot in the Garden State next year and he hopes to get it on the ballot in the 20 other initiative-referendum states in one to two years.

"Once the voters in the referendum states make themselves heard, it may be assumed," Mound said, "that pressure will mount in the legislatures of the disadvantaged states to follow the lead."

Mound pointed out that Thomas Jefferson "foresaw as the main weakness of our representative democracy that those we elect as our agents to govern, acting in their own self-interest, will do all in their power to retain and increase their power."

Jefferson foresaw, Mound

said, that "the solution is for the electorate to reassert its sovereignty vigorously from time to time."

It is not possible or advisable today to go all the way back to Andrew Jackson's ruthless "turn the rascals out" and fire all government workers with every change of administration.

Arthur Milton said, however, "the politicians must be made to see that the American public is getting fed up with continued high spending and inflation and is beginning to wonder if professional politicians and professional civil servants come remotely near being worth what they cost."

Milton also said he now believes inflation is the biggest reason the crime rate keeps going up in so much of the country. "It makes people feel hopeless. Desperation drives them to chicanery and theft and then to violence," he said.

With inflation running at 13 percent and the interest rate for prime business loans at a record 15½ percent, public debate over the cause and cure of inflation has reached feverish pitch.

While the government usually is cast as the villain, a panel of academic and government experts, meeting recently at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, said the over-cautious psychology of modern business deserves some of the blame.

The panelists, who included Sen. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., chairman of the Senate House committee, and his House counterpart, Rep. George

Brown, Jr., of California, said large mergers and other measures and policies designed to reduce the risk element in business, also stifle innovation and result in an overall drop in productivity and this fuels inflation to a much greater degree than usually is realized.

The protectionist psychology of some segments of business and agriculture also is coming in for criticism on the ground that it aggravates inflation by reducing competition.

The Carter Administration won considerable praise from anti-inflation activists (and others) for turning down the efforts of Florida growers of tomatoes and other vegetables to get price protection against imported Mexican produce. The same consumerists and anti-inflation activists praised the House of Representatives for defeating the domestic sugar growers' efforts to raise support prices.

Even the hospitals have come in for criticism. The hospital industry has vigorously opposed the effort of the House Ways and Means Committee to limit hospital cost increases this year to 11.6 percent, claiming it is too much below the general inflation level.

But backers of President Carter's hospital cost containment bill say hospital charges have gone up four percentage points more than their real costs for maintaining existing services. In an editorial, The New York Times called the hospital cost containment bill "the test of how much Congress really cares about inflation."

Transplant Imports Must Be Certified

RALEIGH — Farmers who intend to import tobacco transplants for the 1980 growing season should understand the real intent of the Tobacco Plant Regulation, said Agriculture Commissioner James A. Graham recently.

Graham explained that the regulation administered by the N. C. Department of Agriculture's pesticide and plant protection division, was designed to insure farmers that plants from other states are free from insects and injurious diseases.

"Under the import system, plants must be certified in the state of origin to meet North Carolina requirements," he stated.

"However, the Tobacco Plant Regulation does not contain standards as to size and color of transplants. It's up to the buyer to determine that plants are the size and color he wants before he purchases them.

"If buyers have questions concerning the correct count on tobacco plants as represented on the crates or invoice," said Graham, "they should call or write the Consumer Standards Division, North Carolina Department of Agriculture, Raleigh, N. C. 27611, (919) 733-3313."

NCDA plant pathologist, Dr. Neil A. Lapp, added that N. C. farmers who are considering plants from Georgia should be aware of their new procedures. "Georgia will require a minimum 10-day period between receiving requests for plant from N. C. farmers and certification of these plants so farmers are advised to submit their orders as soon as possible," Lapp said. "This will allow Georgia to adequately inspect plants to insure that they meet our standards. Second, Georgia plant growers will be charged an inspection fee which might be passed on to farmers buying plants."

Permit applications may be obtained from the pesticide and plant protection division, N. C. Department of Agriculture, Box 27647, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Graham stressed that the best way to protect North Carolina tobacco on conditions such as black shank, Granville wilt, Fusarium wilt, virus diseases, and nematodes is for farmers to grow their own plants or to buy locally.

Even Small Businessmen Have Cash Flow Problems

Your Daily Reflector carrier depends on his collections each month to pay his bill, whether or not he has received payment from his customers. When he doesn't get paid, he has to dip into his pocket to make up the difference.

You can help keep a small businessman from going under if you pay your carrier each month when he calls to collect. Thank You.

Oldtime Guide Reveals Some Strong Opinions

By E.T. McCLANAHAN
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Joe Back, old-time guide, outfitter, former cowboy and hater of cities, is a man of entertaining prejudices. He's 80 now. Because of arthritis, he walks with the help of a crutch. He has a plastic hip and somewhere inside his leg there is a steel pin. Back lives with his wife, Mary, in a wonderfully cluttered cabin on the north bank of the Wind River. I recently dropped in on him. Back's strong opinions leak from him despite his best efforts. The word "dude," for example, escapes when he knows he probably should have said "hunter." Joe Back is one of the last of the old western hunting guides — men who, in the first half of the century, led the eastern gentry through high country timber and meadow in search of trophy elk or deer. What made him different from his contemporaries is that he shared his knowledge in a book which has become the definitive volume on horse packing. "Horses, Hitches and Rocky Trails." The 115-page work, which he began after retiring at 60, has been in print for two decades. It has sold more than 40,000 copies.

And Back is a sculptor. He has sold bronzes for as high as $9,000. He did his own illustrations for "Horses Hitches" and his two fiction works, "Moaching Moose and Mumbling Men" and "Suckers Teeth." Getting him to tell about it was tough. "I'm so damned tired of people asking me this stuff I just say to hell with it," he said at one point, eyeing my tape recorder. "I'm tired of talking." Our interview was peppered with uncomfortable pauses as I searched for questions that would call forth his memories.

But in reading back over it, I discovered it was a good talk despite Joe's reticence. Back has the engaging shyness of a man who has done his work well and prefers to keep it to himself. He finally brightened only because the conversation turned from his own exploits to writing in general. He began asking such questions: "What is a writer?" "What is an author?" When I had no ready answer there was quick laughter, a slap of his palm on the table. "I've had several people who've read my books and said, 'This guy isn't a writer, he's just a talker who puts it down on paper,'" he said. "You can take your choice." "I don't claim to be a writer, but I've written 'Horses Hitches' and 'Suckers Teeth' and 'Moaching Moose' and they pay money for them and I'm delighted they do because I'm willing to have them printed and take their money." "There's a fellow over here and he's 72 or 3 and he's got more degrees than a dog's got fleas, and he's a nice guy and he's never made a living at anything that I know of because his folks have furnished him with money, but he told me that books don't care who writes them. Now I treasure that more than anything I ever heard." Back has had little time in his life for a formal education. He came to Wyoming at age 16 and began work as a cowboy and hunting guide. His books are filled with the loose grammar of the isolated small town. But he forges along in the manner of the unselfconscious storyteller. Despite his use of musty terms such as "palaver" (confer with), "mug" (face) or "cayuse" (roguish horse), there is a natural rhythm to his prose. The message of "Horses Hitches" is brief and basic:

"I'm just writing here what can happen to you if you get too civilized," he says in chapter one. "The lack of two or three cave men tools and a few simple precautions can sometimes bring modern men to disaster and even death." I eyed his bookshelves. He started pulling down volumes. "You ever read this guy?" "No." "Where the hell have you been?" Out came Edward Hoagland's "Notes from the Century Before: A Journal from British Columbia." I leafed through it, asked for a loan, was refused. "It's the only one I've got and I'm not going to loan it out," he said. I can't say I blamed him.

"I've got another Hoagland book around here I'd give you but I can't find it," he said. "It's about Vermont or some damned place. But that guy's a helluva writer. I don't read James Joyce and all that kind of crap because I don't understand it." PORTER LANSCAPES NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibition of 55 dye-transfer photographs made by Eliot Porter, pioneer in the field of color photography, is the first one-man exhibition of color photographs to be presented at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The showing is scheduled to continue through Jan. 20.
