Escape Demonstrators

THE LOOK OF FEAR — Concern and even fear show on faces of U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim and his aides as they escape angry demonstrators at Tehran's cemetery Thursday, leaving by helicopter. It is the second time in two days that Waldheim's schedule has been curtailed by demonstrations as he struggles to find a solution to the Iran-U.S. crisis. (AP Laserphoto)

Pres. Carter Plans Ask UN Condemn Soviet Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Undeterred by the prospect of a Soviet veto, President Carter will seek United Nations Security Council condemnation of the Soviet Union as part of a series of moves to counter Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, according to administration officials.

It was not clear what other steps Carter would take although White House officials said they would go beyond "verbal or symbolic gestures." Military intervention was the only option explicilty ruled out.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said Wednesday that Carter has made up his mind and that "the president's decisions will be made public when appropriate consultations and notifications have taken place."

A formal announcement was expected today or Friday.

One official, who asked not to be identified, said there was a "general revulsion" worldwide to the Soviet-sponsored coup in Afghanistan last week and that the administration hoped this would be reflected in a U.N. debate.

Ideally, another official said, the Soviets would find themselves so isolated as a result of the U.N. debate that they would quickly withdraw the estimated 30,000 to 40,000 troops they have deployed in Afghanistan. He added, however, that this was not a likely prospect.

Britain and Pakistan have been trying to round up support for a U.N. debate on the issue, and diplomatic sources said Wednesday night they have enlisted the backing of Bangladesh, Portugal and Norway. Public debate could get under way this weekend, the sources said.

Several officials said press commentary in the Third World, much of it government controlled, has been generally critical of the Soviets. But most governments have refrained from taking an official stand.

Seven days after the Soviet intervention, Cuba, for example, had not endorsed the Soviet intervention. American officials regarded this as significant, considering that Cuba is one of the Kremlin's most trusted allies.

Cuba's natural inclination is to support the Soviets, the officials said, but a Cuban endorsement could alienate much of the 95-member non-aligned movement, which Cuba now chairs. Cuba was one of the first countries to back the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia 11 years ago.

Initially, the administration favored a U.N. General Assembly debate but, for reasons that are unclear, decided instead to take its case to the Security Council even though the Soviets have veto power in that 15-member forum.

Waldheim Flees Angry Iran Mob

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An angry mob of fist-waving Iranians sent U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim fleeing in his limousine from a cemetery on Tehran's outskirts today just minutes after he arrived to lay a wreath at the graves of revolutionary dead.

In the city, Afghan protesters tried to storm the Soviet Embassy for the second time this week, and tens of thousands of Iranians gathered outside the occupied U.S. Embassy to protest the Waldheim visit in one of the biggest such demonstrations in recent weeks.

About 500 persons, believed to include relatives of those buried at the sprawling Behesht Zahra Cemetery, converged on the car carrying Waldheim to the cemetery from a pad where his helicopter touched down.

Waldheim, in Iran in an effort to defuse the crisis over the U.S. Embassy hostage-holding, was on the ground for only six minutes and never left the car. As the chanting crowd encircled his car, he ordered the driver to return to the helicopter.

"Go! Go!" Waldheim could be seen shouting excitedly to his driver.

Once aboard the helicopter, the craft lifted off immediately, flying Waldheim back to the city, where he met with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh for about three hours. Asked how the talks on the American hostages were going, Waldheim said: "The talks are continuing and it would not be helpful for me to elaborate at this point."

Waldheim later met with several hundred crippled Iranians said to have been brutalized under the regime of the ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. He said he was "shocked" by the encounter.

The visit with the disabled had been canceled Wednesday when anti-Waldheim street demonstrations broke out and the government said it had uncovered an assassination plot against Waldheim. Ghotbzadeh claimed the plot had "foreign backing."

Asked today in an American television interview whether Waldheim might visit Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Ghotbzadeh responded vaguely, "We'll see...."

The foreign minister, speaking on NBC-TV's "Today Show," also played down the angry outburst at the cemetery.

The sudden rush by the cemetery crowd apparently caught police and revolutionary guardsmen off guard. Only about 20 were stationed at the area where Waldheim landed, and they were unable to hold back the crowd.

The angry demonstrators shouted demands that "Waldheim should be thrown out of Iran." They also screamed slogans against the United States and the United Nations.

Waldheim flew to the cemetery south of the capital in response to a demand by the militant students holding some 50 Americans hostage in the U.S. Embassy since Nov. 4. It is the burial place of many who died in the revolution that overthrew Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi last February.

The incident at the cemetery came one day after hostile street demonstrations in Tehran and a report by the Iranian government that it had uncovered a plot to kill him forced curtailment of Waldheim's schedule.

The secretary-general arrived Tuesday under orders from the U.N. Security Council to seek the release of the American hostages whose captivity now is in the 61st day. He met for three hours with Ghotbzadeh Wednesday, but the foreign minister said a meeting with victims of the shah's secret police was canceled because a plot to kill him was uncovered.

Soviet Invaders Crushed Resistance In 2 Cities

By The Associated Press

Soviet invaders were reported to have crushed resistance and occupied Afghanistan's southern provincial capital of Kandahar and the eastern city of Jalalabad today as America and its allies prepared to seek U.N. Security Council condemnation of the Russian sweep into the Central Asian nation.

President Carter also was reported ready to ask the Senate to delay indefinitely its consideration of the SALT II treaty with the Soviet Union.

In Moscow, the official Soviet news agency Tass accused Carter of making "bellicose and wicked" statements and of distorting the "essence and meaning" of the Soviet military intervention.

Sporadic gunfire was heard in Kabul Tuesday, but the city was reported quiet Wednesday and today.

Associated Press correspondent Steven Hurst, reporting from Kabul today, said the Afghan capital was quiet overnight and that the only signs of the Soviet presence he saw in the city were a few helicopters flying overhead and three Russian tanks grinding through the streets before dawn.

Travelers from Kandahar, 270 miles southwest of the Afghan capital of Kabul and 50 miles from the border with Pakistan's Baluchistan province, told the Pakistani newspaper Jasarat the Soviets occupied Kandahar City Wednesday after two days of clashes with Afghan government forces opposed to the Russians.

They said the Soviets poured into Kandahar City Monday after landing in Soviet military aircraft. They said for the next two days the Russians battled rebellious Afghan government troops, and that when they routed them pro-Soviet Afghan forces hung garlands of flowers around the invaders' necks.

The newspaper also said the Soviets took control of Jalalabad City Sunday. However, diplomats in Kabul said Soviet troops were airlifted Monday to Jalalabad, in eastern Afghanistan about 50 miles from the border and Pakistan's Kyhber Pass, to fight Moslem rebels who have been battling the communist Afghan government since the first of three pro-Soviet coups 20 months ago.

The diplomats also said the Soviets used sophisticated attack helicopters and tanks against the Moslem insurgents in rugged Bamian province about 100 miles northwest of the Afghan capital Wednesday, and that casualties were heavy on both sides.

The diplomats said other Soviet troops were flown into Herat, in western Afgahnistan about 60 miles from the Iranian border, the day the Russians launched the Dec. 27 coup that put their latest proxy, Babrak Karmal, in power, and toppled President Hafizullah Amin, who was summarily executed.

Afghan guerrilla leaders quoted by Tehran Radio said the Moslem insurgents were in control of Herat province, and that they attacked the prison in Herat City and freed the inmates Wednesday.

Karmal said in a speech on Afghan television that Amin was a U.S. puppet and CIA agent.

He said "we may have to seek help from other valiant nations like Vietnam, Angola, Ethiopia, the Palestinians and Cuba also."

Sources in Washington said the United States and its allies will ask for a U.N. Security Council meeting shortly to demand the Soviet Union withdraw its 30,000 to 40,000 troops.

Sources at the United Nations said Britain, Pakistan and others will join with the United States in asking the Security Council to debate the Soviet Union's intervention, possibly over the weekend.

Among the steps understood to be under consideration were lifting the U.S. arms embargo against Pakistan, endorsing a boycott of the 1980 summer Olympic Games in Moscow, imposing curbs on wheat sales to the Soviet Union and finding ways to provide Western arms to Afghan insurgents.

TEACHERS VOTING

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's teachers were voting today on a tentative contract agreement that could end an 11-week strike; but the cost of the pay raises could result in extensive cutbacks in the school system, officials say.

CHAIR AND HAIRDRYER NEEDED

Recreation Therapist Debbie Bennett has asked Hotline to appeal for the donation of a beautician's hydraulic chair and a beauty shop hairdryer for the Pitt Co. Memorial Hospital Regional Rehabilitation Center. She said there are good hopes for being able to offer in-patients of the hospital and rehab center beauty shop services if these two pieces of equipment can be obtained. The donation of either would, of course, be tax-deductible.

N.C. Auditor Plans Retire

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Henry L. Bridges, North Carolina state Auditor since 1947, said today he will not be a candidate for re-election this year.

Bridges, 72, announced his intention to retire at a news conference. Bridges' chief deputy, John Buchan, appeared with Bridges and told reporters that he would not be a candidate for state Auditor.

"It is with mixed emotions that I announce that I will not be a caandidate for re-election," Bridges said. "I am grateful to the people of North Carolina for electing me to serve for almost 34 years as state Auditor.

"And, I think, at the risk of appearing immodest, that I have, with the help of my staff, made significant contributions to the financial reputation of this state," Bridges added.

Bridges, born in Franklin County, was a Raleigh lawyer when he was appointed state Auditor Feb. 15, 1947. A Democrat, he was elected to a four-year term in 1948. He was re-elected every four years after that, and did not receive a serious challenge until 1976, when he narrowly defeated Lillian Woo in a Democratic primary runoff.

Bridges' retirement throws open the 1980 race for state Auditor, which is one of the Council of State seats. There is at least one major candidate already announced for the position, state Sen. Ed Renfrow, D-Smithfield.

HAIRSTYLE HISTORY—Both straight and curly hair were "in" fashions during the 1970s, but each changed considerably through the years. As they project their views on the 1980s, Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board members look back on the shifting hairstyles of the past decade. Clockwise, from top left, the early 1970s' Geometric look that carried over from the "mod" '60s; the influence of the Afro was strong for women with every hair texture; by 1977, the curly and straight lines had converged into the Coupe Sauvage, a free-flowing, tousled combination of permed curl with natural lines; the decade is ending with a return to controlled styles, popularized by braids, rolls and chignons.

Decade Of Hairstyles: 'Mod' To 'Retro'

CHICAGO (AP) — Revolution is simply evolution, and that's what has been seen in hair fashions during the 1970s, some of the nation's top stylists agree.

As the members of the Helene Curtis Hairstylists Advisory Board reviewed the past decade of hairstyle trends, two basic lines were evident, say the 12 stylists from all over the country who make up the board.

One could be referred to as straight hair's evolution from the "mod" look of the early '70s to the sleek chic of the past year's braids, twists and bobs.

The second is curly hair, which came into its own during the decade and ran the gamut from tightly curled perms to the wavy retro feeling reminiscent of the '20s and '30s.

The two trends converged briefly about 1977, with a style known as Coupe Sauvage, a "no hairstyle hairstyle" incorporating lightly permed curl with a natural look.

This temporary blending of trends burst apart quickly with the advent of the retro revolution in fashion. Straight hair turned to slicked punk looks, while curly hair took on the waves worn by the movie heroines of half a century ago.

With the approach of the '80s, the board members see once again a variety of fashion looks that will suit everyone.

And, they point out, the latest in hair looks projected for spring 1980 is a return to short geometric haircuts reminiscent of the start of the '70s, and the addition of hairpieces, also popular 10 years ago, for dressy evenings.

CHEDDAR POTATOES

New version of one of our most popular recipes.

- 6 medium baking potatoes (1¾ to 2 pounds), pared and thinly sliced
- ¼ cup butter, melted
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- 4 ounces cheddar cheese, grated medium-fine

In a generously buttered 8 by 8 by 2-inch baking dish (we used one of clear glass) arrange potatoes, overlapping, in rows; make sure top is flat. Pour butter over potatoes and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Bake uncovered in a preheated 500-degree oven until golden brown on bottom and sides of dish and potatoes are tender — 20 to 30 minutes. Sprinkle with cheese; bake just until cheese melts — a matter of minutes. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings. (You may want to pass a bowl of sour cream with this dish.)

Examine Mobile Homes First

Mobile homes come in a variety of styles including Old English, Early American, Mediterranean and Oriental.

Large models may have an entrance foyer leading to a family room and in some multi-sectionals there are master suites with wall-in closets and dressing rooms. Some mobile homes even have sunken tubs or saunas according to specialists with N. C. Agricul tural Extension Service.

They suggest consumers shopping for a mobile home examine everything carefully. Don't be fooled by simulated materials — some exteriors have the look of rough-sawn cedar, stone or clapboard siding, but are actually made of maintenance-free materials colored to resemble natural finishes.

Mother-In-Law Needs To Learn

By Abigail Van Buren

1980 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother-in-law who comes to my house and starts cleaning it up, or changing things around, the minute she gets here. If my clothes are in the dryer, she takes them out and folds them. She's always poking around in my cupboards and rearranging things.

If I had a dirty or messy house, that would be a different story, but my home is spotless, and I am never behind in my laundry.

This really took the cake: She came over and pulled the sheets right off my bed and laundered them! I was never so insulted in all my life. (I change my sheets on Friday, and this was only Sunday!)

I spoke to my husband about her, and he said, "Don't hassle her. She's getting old." (Abby, she's 46.)

Please tell me how to handle her.

HAD IT IN ALLENTOWN

DEAR HAD IT: To handle such a strong and assertive person, you must be even stronger and more assertive. Let her know in no uncertain terms that when she is in your home, she is a guest—and she's not to do a thing. At 46, she's young enough to learn.

DEAR ABBY: At 16 I married a 21-year-old man I thought I loved. We had a son a year later, but the marriage didn't work out, so we were divorced when the boy was 6. I'm now married to wonderful man who adopted my son.

Meanwhile, my ex dropped out of sight for three years. Yesterday, out of the blue, he called saying he had something very important to tell me, and would I meet him downtown—alone.

When I met him, I nearly fainted dead away! He was dressed like a woman. He said he was a transsexual who had been living as a woman for two years and was scheduled for a sex change operation next month! He said his name is "Anita" now, and he's in show business. Abby, I couldn't believe my eyes. He had electrolysis to remove his facial hair, took hormones to develop a female figure, and was wearing a wig, makeup, and stylish clothes. He looked like a beautiful woman! This was a great shock to me because he was all man when we were married. Our sex life was normal, and I never dreamed he had these tendencies.

My problem is how to tell our son. Or should I tell him at all? (He's 9 now.) My ex lives in another state and has promised not to come near our son without my approval. If the boy ever saw his father as "Anita" he would die, and so would I! I am so afraid someone in this little town will find out about this and blab it around. What should I do?

SMALL TOWN MESS

DEAR MESS: A 9-year-old is too young to comprehend what transsexualism is all about, so hold off telling him, but prepare to tell him one day by educating yourself now. Write to The Janus Information Facility, University of Texas Medical Branch, Galveston, Texas 77550 for enlightening, up-to-date literature. They are a legitimate, non-profit facility, dependent on private donations, so send $5 to cover cost of literature and mailing.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter met a smooth-talking fellow nine months ago and really fell for him. She's 22 and he's 21. He isn't working now and he's not even looking. He keeps saying that the jobs he wants don't pay enough. In the meantime he borrows from my daughter, drives her car, eats every meal at my table, and his clothes are washed in my machine! He never mentions marriage, but my daughter looks at him like he's god, and she calls this "love."

Would I be wrong to ask this guy what his intentions are?

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: You can ask him, but I think I can tell you. His intentions are to eat at your table, drive your daughter's car, get his clothes washed in your machine, and freeload off you and your daughter as long as you let him.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

A vegetable steamer is a good energy saver. The small, collapsible metal basket folds or expands to fit most saucepans and little water is needed to steam food.

Overcooked fish will lose much of its natural flavor and tenderness. It should be cooked only until the translucent flesh becomes opaque.

Smoked fish should be handled and stored in the same way as fresh or frozen fish. The smoking process only serves to enhance the flavor and is not sufficient to preserve the flesh.

Serve 'Soft' Crumpets With Butter Or Jam

CRUMPETS—You bake them in muffin rings (bought or improvised) in a skillet or on a griddle.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: Have you ever discovered how to make those grayish, rubbery crumpets with huge holes that used to be sold by a Brooklyn-based bakery chain now out of existence? I long to taste them again. — MUFFIN MAN.

DEAR MUFFIN MAN: I've never found a successful recipe for those wonderfully rubbery crumpets that I first encountered and loved when I came to live in New York City. But here's a recipe for the other kind of crumpet — the deliciously and insidiously soft sort with small holes. I found it in an excellent new cookbook, "Better Than Store-Bought" by Helen Witty and Elizabeth Colchie (Harper & Row). — C.B.

WITTY AND COLCHIE'S CRUMPETS

- ½ cup warm (110 degrees) water
- ½ package (scant 1½ teaspoons) dry yeast
- ¼ teaspoon sugar
- 1 cup milk, heated to 100 degrees
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- ⅛ teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ cup slightly warm (100 degrees) water

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the ½ cup warm water, yeast and sugar until dissolved; add milk and salt; thoroughly beat in flour, ½ cup at a time, until elastic and slightly heavy — the beating makes the crumpets "holey." Cover and let rise in a warm place (80 to 85 degrees) until it is very bubbly and collapses — 2 to 2½ hours or longer. Dissolve baking soda in the ¼ cup slightly warm water and stir into the batter; let rest in the warm place until bubbly — 30 minutes.

Heat an electric griddle or skillet to 400 degrees. Butter insides of muffin rings and set well apart on griddle until just hot to the touch. Ladle about ¼ cup of the batter into each ring; it will rise briskly. Bake until all bubbles have broken and tops no longer look wet — 5 to 8 minutes. With a pancake turner, turn over the crumpets and their rings. Lift off rings and bake crumpets until sides are dry and bottoms are lightly browned — 5 to 6 minutes longer. Remove to a wire rack. Continue baking remaining batter the same way. (If batter rises too vivacicusly, refrigerate between batches.) Crumpets may be stored in tightly closed plastic bags at room temperature for a few days, or in the refrigerator or freezer — appropriately wrapped — for a longer period. Toast before serving with butter or jam. Makes 10 to 12.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

What have your pantyhose done for you today?

Mine have provided me with cool comfort, up-front confidence and natural air flow. They have controlled my tummy, supported my thighs, firmed my hips, reinforced my toe, massaged my legs, and allowed me to be me.

Then how come I feel like if I inhale, my knees will be caught in a vise?

Pantyhose are going into their third decade on the American scene and they are still shrouded in mystery. Has anyone ever figured out whether or not pantyhose are coming or going by holding them up? The feet give you no clue. They look like a toothless pout. All the while you are slipping them over your feet, you look for a telltale heel or toe or dart, but there is nothing. It's only after you have them on for a few hours that they take form — usually with a heel over your ankle and a flap of toe just under your heel.

After 20 years women of America still don't know what letter of the alphabet they are. I have seen some of them become quite light-headed at the pantyhose carousel as it spins around, trying to figure out if they are slight built, average, or a moose.

Some of the best fiction being written today is in the instruction pamphlet that accompanies each pair of pantyhose on how to put them on.

Listen to this, and I'm quoting: "Leave 1½ inches excess of tip of toes when slipping on your hose. (If I had an inch and a half left over, I'd announce it in the New York Times.)

"Stand. (Are they serious?) Pull hose evenly up to midthigh and position the crotch and waistband. Make sure the fabric is stretched to its full length. (Oh, sure, when Redford calls, I'll put him on hold too.)

"If pantyhose feel too tight, please try a larger size." (They're out of them. They sold the last pair to slipcover New Jersey.)

When will they show a woman clutching the waistband resting on her hips while she leaps across the room trying to take up the slack?

I saw a little old lady just the other day who was trying to sit down. Her body was rigid, her knees were barely bent as she slid carefully onto the chair. She shook her head and explained, "I think the memory yarn in my pantyhose is getting senile."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — FINE CHURCH ORGANIST OFFERS INTRICATE FUGUE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: I equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Teaches Flock Of Bible's 'Inerrancy'

By SUSAN WHITE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — When Adrian Rogers talks, he has a flock of 13.2 million Baptists who listen.

The outgoing and philosophically conservative preacher is president of the Southern Baptist Convention — the largest group of protestants in the United States.

Rogers, who has also served as pastor of Bellevue Baptist Church in Memphis since 1972, won the presidency six months ago at a national convention that was called the most politically polarized meeting in the church's recent history.

Then came an investigation showing illegal votes were cast in Rogers' election. It looked as though his two-year term might be a rocky one.

He doesn't talk much about his election, saying he "ran from the office, not for it."

Rogers' win actually resulted from a well-organized effort staged by a conservative coalition that was concerned about the "creeping liberalism" reportedly invading some Baptist churches.

The victory lost some of its gleam when a three-month investigation by church officials determined that it would "never be known" if fraud was used at the convention in Houston because of some illegal votes that were cast.

Rogers said he knew nothing about the balloting and thought he was chosen not just for himself but because of his "stand on the word of God."

Following the election, there was also concern among church liberals about Roger's reputation as a staunch believer in the Bible's "inerrancy" — a term that means every word in the Bible is God-inspired and every detail is infallibile.

But the man — with the voice every evangelist would like to have and a memory for names politicians dream about — weathered the controversy and went on to carry his message to Southern Baptists across the country with little or no disruption.

"I am not a ruler," Rogers explained in an interview. "Baptists are very independent-minded people. My role is leadership."

Part of that leadership includes the president's indirect power over the boards that rule Baptist seminaries, another subject of controversy because of reports about a lack of fundamanetal teaching of the Scriptures.

Rogers said, however, here would be no "witchhunts" to ferret out teachers who do not teach inerrancy at the seminaries.

"I feel we have some problems in some of our seminaries," he said. "But I do not believe the problem is as large as some people believe."

He added, however, he made sure only those "who believe the Scripture" speak to the 11,000 members of his church in Memphis.

Rogers said he wanted to concentrate much of his time on a "bold mission thrust," a vision promoted by his predecessor, the Rev. Jimmy Allen of Texas.

"This really is where my heart belongs — in missionary work and evangelism," Rogers said. "I want to turn up the heat and bring it into focus."

Rogers does not see his firm belief in the infallibility of the Bible as an obstacle to his leadership role.

"I've proven it true in my own life," the minister said. "When looking at the Bible a person must ask, 'First, do I accept this. Second, what does it mean. And third, how do I live it?'"

Rogers said he does not condemn other faiths who do not share the same beliefs.

"Salvation is in Christ, not in a church," Rogers said. "As Christians, we will have honest debates. I would not condemn a person for disagreeing with me. He's my brother."

Rogers said even Baptists have long had differences among themselves.

"To say independent Baptist, is almost redundant," said Rogers, father of four children and a popular figure in Memphis. When he and his wife, Joyce, returned from the convention 150 church members greeted them at the airport with a red carpet, roses and cheers.

Rogers said he does not intend to forget his church.

"This will be two of the best years Bellevue has ever had," he promised.

MET IN BLACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Metropolitan Opera ended the 1978-79 season in the black for the third straight year, showing a surplus of $138,000. Expenses totaled $39.6 million, operating revenues $26.4 million and contributions of $13.3 million.

Seek Accord In Canada

DETROIT (AP) — Leaders of the United Auto Workers union on both sides of the border today turned their attention to whether Canadian workers would go along with more sacrifices to save the financially ailing Chrysler Corp.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser, who said Wednesday, "There ain't no Santa Claus," was meeting in Windsor, Ontario, with leaders of the six Chrysler locals in Canada.

If the question is resolved, new bargaining with Chrysler could begin Friday, Fraser said. The yielding of time off was said to be the first additional concession the UAW would offer.

Unlike their counterparts working for the Canadian subsidiaries of General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., Canadian Chrysler workers come under the same contract as their U.S. counterparts.

As a condition of approving $1.5 billion in loan guarantees, Congress required Chrysler's unions to give up $462.5 million in contract concessions. Of that, the UAW gave up $203 million in the October contract, leaving it with $259.5 million to go.

The Canadian workers have been reluctant to go along, on grounds that U.S. law could not abrogate their bargaining rights.

More Changes In Agriculture

One can hardly look to the future of Pitt County and the area without considering the potential of our farm economy.

Even now with a sizeable industrial base and the burgeoning East Carolina University, a bad crop year has a telling adverse effect on commerce in our area.

During the 1980s we expect farming to be a changing and strong economic force.

Farming methods changed radically during the 1970s, with mechanization going on at an uprecedented rate.

The old type tobacco barn became almost a thing of the past as producers moved to new bulk curing methods to make their operations more efficient.

Farm harvesting equipment became more sophisticated as farm operators invested large sums of money to make their operations more efficient.

In the 1980s all these trends will continue, and the modern businessman-farmer will be keeping his eye on world trends to make certain his farm products meet market needs.

Tobacco will almost certainly be around through the decade, and producers will be striving for better quality to continue U.S. tobacco's superiority in the world market.

Area farming won't be locked in on tobacco, however, as important as it is. Corn, soy beans, hogs, chickens, eggs and other products will be in demand in this country and throughout the world as population grows. Woods products can be expected to be in large demand. There is now the possibility that farm byproducts can be used to produce alcohol which will stretch out the nation's gas supplies.

Farming will have to be versatile and flexible during the 1980s. At times production will have to change as quickly as possible to meet changing demands.

Area farmers have shown they can meet such demands during the 1970s. We have complete faith that they will operate even more efficiently during the 1980s.

Waldheim's Prestige Is On The Line

UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has traveled to Iran hoping to help resolve the U.S-Iranian crisis.

The visit takes on even more important meaning since the Soviet military intervention in neighboring Afghanistan.

The difficult situation in Iran is one in which the United Nations should play a role. Waldheim is putting his own prestige on the line in seeking to negotiate the matter. For that he is to be commended.

SO INDIGNANT---BUT SO TOOTHLESS!

Brief Kabul Visit

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The reporters who arrived in Afghanistan's capital on the first plane from the West after the Soviet coup had a day of freedom in which to work.

Then the new communist government realized what it had admitted to the country and cracked down.

As the nearly empty DC-10 from West Germany landed on Sunday, three days after the coup, we could see a large field full of Soviet tanks, armored personnel carriers and fur-capped troops jogging about to keep warm in the early morning chill.

"Welcome and enjoy your stay," said the immigration official as he stamped my visa, hardly noticing that I had declared myself "writer for The Associated Press."

For much of the day, I and the few other Western reporters on the flight had virtually the run of the city. We rode by cab past government buildings guarded by Soviet troops and watched convoys of troops leave for the countryside to battle the Moslem rebels.

But a visit to the Ministry of Information and Culture was brief.

"We can give no interviews now," said a nervous official.

A deep disgust for the Russians was apparent among people on the street. Men stared coldly and occasionally spat as I walked by. But at the word "America" frowns turned to smiles.

"America should come and help us get rid of them," said one young Afghan nodding toward a Soviet convoy.

A few hours after our flight, another plane arrived from New Delhi, India, bringing 15 photographers, reporters and TV crewmen. By then somebody was having second thoughts, and the new arrivals were not allowed to leave the airport. After nearly eight hours, word was sent to the immigration officials there — no reporters.

Meanwhile, all telephone and telex channels from Kabul were cut and those of us who had been roaming the city were unable to get our dispatches out. So we visited our colleagues at the airport and gave them our stories to be filed when they got back to New Delhi.

I had returned to my hotel and was waiting in the lobby for another taxi when the door opened. The smiling man from immigration was there, this time with two friends carrying AK-47 assault rifles.

But by the time we arrived at the airport, the last flight of the day was taxiing down the runway, preparing to take off.

A snowstorm closed the airport, extending our stay to three days.

The "hospitality" ended Wednesday morning when flights departed for Turkey and India.

Sales Tax To Aid Roads?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A change in the distribution of sales taxes to commit funds collected on all sales related to vehicles to the highway fund could go a long way toward relieving the present financial crunch at the Department of Transportation.

Fiscal research analysts for the General Assembly have studied the sales tax system and conclude that the change would produce between $95 and $100 million each year.

Lt. Gov. James C. Green says he will talk with the study commission now wrestling with the road fund shortfall this month and suggest a close look at the sales tax switch as a possible solution.

"If I go buy a set of tires, then that tax would go for the roads .... and that seems to me where it should go. The same for any sales taxes collected relative to automotive transportation whether it be parts and accessories, repair work, or the initial tax collected on a car sale," Green said.

Lower Tax

A continued slide in the state's highway fund is resulting from lower gasoline sales as more motorists change to more fuel efficient vehicles. Transportation Secretary Tom Bradshaw puts this year's shortfall at $75 million; about $57 million of that as the result of inflation, but about $18 million as a result of lower tax collections.

Gov. Jim Hunt has established a special study group chaired by Supreme Court Justice Dan Moore, a former governor, which is to propose methods for financing the road system in coming years.

The present gasoline tax is nine cents per gallon for the state. Each penny produces about $35 million. Some have suggested that the tax be pegged to the price of gasoline so that as that price rises the tax will also. The most popular suggestion currently being studied, however, is a straight 2-cents per gallon tax hike.

Meanwhile there are strong signs that the federal government will impose a hefty new gas tax, and these increases coupled with the skyrocketing cost of fuel to more than a dollar per gallon now, and expectations it will reach close to two dollars in another year is causing hardship for many motorists.

All the experts agree that for North Carolina, given its population and geographical patterns, will depend upon private cars for a long time. Mass transit in a state dominated by rural and small town populations, simply won't resolve the dilemma.

"The auto is the only way most people have to travel. They can't afford another, more fuel-efficient car, and can hardly afford they one they have," Green said of many low-income people across the state. "I'm not sure many of our people can stand these tasoline tax increases."

BILL NOBLITT

Maintain

An alternative to produce the funds to maintain the present system and to carry out future roadbuilding is essential, and Green thinks "some of the best heads in this state have got to come up with whatever solution will work best. The first priority must be to maintain what we have. We have some good roads, but unless they are maintained they will quickly go to pot."

Green is also concerned that the present state formula for secondary road work is weighted for counties with unpaved road mileage. More urban counties may have paved rural roads and therefore don't qualify for the secondary funds. But those roads may be old, narrow, twisting, and in need of repair or replacement and should be eligible for secondary road money, he believes.

The first priority, however, is a method of producing the necessary money, and that is why Green appears interested in the sales tax distribution change. The state records already exist to allow all taxes on vehicular-related sales to be set aside for the highway fund. The problem is that this would take money away from the state's General Fund, and will likely result in heated debate if such a proposal comes before the General Assembly.

The Textbooks Battle

WASHINGTON — An old battle seems to be heating up anew between the forces once identified by H. L. Mencken as the literati and the philistines. The fight is over textbooks purchased for the public schools, and I am minded to whoop it up for both sides.

A recent issue of Time magazine features an account of Norma and Mel Gabler of Longview, Texas. Over the past 20 years they have made themselves the country's most prominent and most effective critics of textbooks in history, social studies and other fields. They are not alone. More than 200 more-or-less formal organizations of concerned parents also are manning the ramparts in defense of moral values as they perceive them.

Lined up in opposition are some formidable battalions: the National Education Association, the American Association of School Administrators, the National Council for the Social Studies, the American Federation of Teachers, and the International Reading Association. They are leaders of the Academic Freedom Group, dedicated to defending professional ideals as they perceive them.

The Gablers hold no public office whatever. He is a retired dealer in pipeline materials; she is a wife and mother. Back in 1961 they happened to read a high school textbook in history that had been assigned to their son. They blew up. They found the book outrageously biased in favor of a strong national government as opposed to decentralized government. They began to raise cain, and they have been raising it ever since. Last year they filed formal complaints against 28 of 300 textbooks proposed for use in the public schools of Texas; they were instrumental in having 18 of the books turned down for purchase.

Some of the Gablers' fire was directed at the American Heritage Dictionary because it contained definitions for such words as "slut," "hot," "horny," and "bed" as a transitive verb. They objected to a textbook in government in part because it said that "Year after year, the Defense Department takes a very substantial slice of the federal budget." They saw the statement as "subtle bias" in favor of disarmament. Generally speaking, they defend the old values of patriotism, conventional history and middle-class morality.

The literati are as angry as the Gablers. Richard Carroll, president of Allyn and Bacon, is quoted in Time. The Gablers, he complains, "are attempting to impose their political and social and religious and economic

Official Concern

(The Hickory Record)

In the wake of the flap he created with his New Generation rhetoric, Governor Hunt seems unduly ready to throw his administration headlong into the White House Conference On Families, which is scheduled for next June 5-7.

The matter is raised this far in advance because the governor's office recently mailed every North Carolina newspaper a packet of material, requesting that an enclosed quarter-page advertisement be published free as a public service.

The ad is a poll of readers supposedly for a national overview. Mainly it is a list of 70 "items of concern to families," each followed by numbers that readers are asked to circle to indicate whether they feel "No concern," "some concern" or "serious concern" about each.

Strictly speaking, it is highly debatable whether some of the family concerns listed are any of the government's inquiring business, in either Raleigh or Washington. For instance, Item 5 "need for help in parenting"; Item 13, "family life education"; and Item 37, "family adjustment to death and dying".

These involve family values, and government necessarily deals in group values. Other items in the poll are arguably the government's business, but appear more a quest for concensus for a political campaign than for improving on family concerns. Those with a North Carolina overtone are most obvious: For instance, Item 18, "availability of quality education". Item 22, "sales tax"; and Item 62, "need for new industry".

The poll returns, where newspapers publish the ad, will provide the governor with discussion material for the 40 persons he will appoint as a North Carolina task force to the national conference. If other states send a similar group, it's going to be quite a convention.

The only certain effect of the project in this state will be to give an incumbent governor going into an election 40 marginally prestigous appointments to an expenses-paid national gathering.

A possible side effect, however, might be to rile all over again those people upset with the governor's New Generation plans.

Since the whole thing really was started in Washington, the governor could end up spending some of his campaign time explaining how he never intended to interfere with family judgments on these matters, and certainly won't if he is re-elected.

Iran Pressure On Reagan

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan is resisting increasingly hard pressure from some of his advisers to "take the gloves off" and attack President Carter for not doing more to gain the release of the hostages in Iran.

The matter will come to a head at a four-day strategy session starting at the California home of the frontrunning Republican presidential candidate. One Reagan insider who will travel across the continent to take part in the sessions will press Reagan hard to break the informal political truce that has almost completely protected Carter from criticism.

The first crack in the truce came last week when Sen. Bob Dole, a back-running Republican presidential candidate, said after a State Department briefing on the Iranian crisis that Carter "bears a heavy responsibility" for the plight of the hostages. But Reagan is far from convinced that attacking Carter at this time would be smart. His inclination is to stick with his present posture: Say nothing that in any way might be used to blame him if Carter fails to win freedom for the hostages.

More Cubans?

Against the backdrop of full-speed U.S. development of Diego Garcia as an air and naval base in the Indian Ocean, Cuban "advisers" have now been spotted in Seychelles, a newly independent island nation under a left-wing government.

Although hard evidence is lacking here as to how extensive Cuban activities in Seychelles may be, the presence of any Cubans at all has ominous overtones. It clearly undercuts U.S. efforts to safeguard the Persian Gulf and the vital oil waterways down the East African coast. Seychelles is 1,000 miles closer to the coast than Diego Garcia, affording it immense potential value to future Soviet-Cuban operations in the struggle between the superpowers for control of Persian Gulf oil.

The left-wing Seychelles government, which took over from a Western-oriented right-wing group two years ago, is using troops from the

Strength For Today

SISYPHUS

According to Greek mythology, a man in Hades named Sisyphus is spending eternity in a most unpleasant way. With all his might, he pushes a huge round stone up a steep hill. Just as the stone reaches the top and the heartrending task is nearly over, Sisyphus's feet slip, the stone rolls back down the mountain, and be must begin to push it to the top all over again.

The final effort which makes the difference between success and failure is the one which Sisyphus can never make. There are many people like him. They start out with good intentions, work hard for a while, and never quite finish the job.

You can recognize them at work. They are just about ready to be promoted, but that special piece of work to show what they can do isn't finished yet. It wasn't finished last year, either.

The Greeks regarded Sisyphus as a most unhappy man, and the Sisyphuses of today are just as miserable.

What Anti-Inflation Policy?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — With still another red ink, potentially inflationary budget expected by Jan. 28, political critics of the president will be asking what ingredients make up his anti-inflation program.

Existing programs have failed to make much of an impression, judging by an inflation rate that is expected to exceed 13 percent for 1979 and to remain in double digits through most of 1980.

Interest rates too are widely forecast to remain at roughly the rate of inflation, and probably to rise even higher before any sustained correction locks itself into place.

Savings have withered under the heat of inflation, and the official U.S. savings rate is now only 5 percent or so, the lowest for any of the major trading nations. People are burdened with credit payments.

A recession is scheduled, too. And while some economic traditionalists say the pain must be endured before the patient can again enjoy health, workers aren't accepting it. Their take-home pay has been shrinking.

The administration's Pay Advisory Committee has so far failed to agree on a level of pay increase acceptable for 1980.

If no decision is reached the impact might reverberate. It could, for example, add to the feeling that inflation and other economic matters are beyond the administration's ability to cope with.

Dollar-watchers will continue to offer their opinion of the currency by advising people to get out of paper and into gold, silver, diamonds — commodities of limited supply and seemingly unlimited demand.

Republican opponents can be expected to hammer away at the rationale of the so-called windfall profits tax, seeking to convince voters that what it is called a tax on oil companies will be paid for by them.

The OPEC defense, blaming the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Companies for domestic inflation, is challenged by economists every day. In debate, it isn't likely to retain much credibility.

There are plenty of economic issues, many of which involve the wallet.

The Carter people won't be without ammunition, being able to point to a high level of job-creation, low unemployment and prosperity.

The trouble for Carter is that many people haven't perceived his years as good times. While people bought in record amounts, for example, they repeatedly indicated they lacked financial security and confidence.

People have jobs, but the polls suggest that people don't enjoy the security of having jobs. People apparently have had money with which to buy things, but they've been inclined also to emphasize the high price of goods and the depleted condition of their wallets.

At a time of incredible economic extremes, there's no lack of debatable issues.

The debate to date, it seems, is whether there will be a debate.

FRB Not Loosing Its Policy

By EILEEN ALT POWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent declines in some key interest rates should not be viewed as a sign the Federal Reserve Board is loosening its tight credit policy, says board chairman Paul A. Volcker.

"Will the Fed stick with it?" Volcker asked rhetorically of the policy. "My own short and simple answer to that question is 'yes'. And I do not intend to qualify that answer."

He added in a speech Wednesday that the policy is "an absolute prerequisite to dealing with the inflation that has ravaged the dollar, undermined our economic performance and prospects and disturbed our society itself."

But even with steadfast devotion to a tight money policy, Volcker said there will be some fluctuations in interest rates.

A few hours after his remarks, Bankers Trust Co. of New York, the nation's eight-largest bank, lowered its prime interest rate from 15¼ percent to 15 percent. Citibank, the second-largest commercial bank in the country, and ninth-ranked First National Bank of Chicago, lowered their rates to 15 percent Dec. 14.

The prime rate — the interest banks charge their most creditworthy business customers — rose dramatically in the wake of central bank action on Oct. 6 to get tighter control of the nation's money supply. Rapid growth of money and credit are believed to be inflationary.

The prime rate hit a record 15.75 percent in mid-November. Some slowing in the economy in the final quarter of 1979 has helped push it down somewhat since then.

Volcker also told his audience at the National Press Club Wednesday that the Carter administration and Congress need to watch for "the right time" to reduce taxes.

"I hope we resist temptations that could arise simply to pump fresh purchasing power into the economy at the first sign of a recession," Volcker said.

The rare public appearance by Volcker, who took over last August as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, came at a time business conditions seem to be deteriorating.

Many economists are predicting the nation's economy will slide into a recession early this year, with unemployment rising by some 2 million people by election day in November.

The latest evidence came Wednesday in a Commerce Department report which said construction spending fell 1.3 percent in November to an annual $235.3 billion rate.

The drop was the largest since a 4.9 percent decline in January and followed an increase of 2.5 percent in October, Commerce said.

Meanwhile, the price of gold soared to all-time highs in New York and on overseas markets Wednesday as the dollar sagged. Analysts blamed tense relations between the United States and Iran and the Soviet Union for the hot market conditions.

School Officials Will Gather On January 9

Over 125 school board members and school officials will gather at Columbia High School in Columbia Wednesday, Jan. 9, for the Annual District No. Two meeting of the North Carolina School Boards Association (NCSBA).

The meeting will begin with registration and a general session during the afternoon, to be followed by small group discussions and a banquet dinner.

Topics to be discussed include: Proposed State-wide School Bond Issue; Open Meetings Law; Energy Conversation in Schools; Community School Programs.

Planned speakers include: Dr. Lacy Presnell, director of school planning, State Department of Public Instruction (SDPI); Carsie Denning, director, Division of Plant Operation (SDPI); Dr. James Clarke, director of community schools (SDPI).

Eugene Causby, assistant state superintendent, SDPI, will speak at the banquet.

The District Two gathering is the first of 18 such meetings held by NCSBA across the state. It is comprised of the county school administrative units of Beaufort, Hyde, Martin, Pitt, Tyrell, and Washington; and the city school administrative units of Greenville and Washington.

The president of District Two is Wayne Brickhouse, Tyrell County Board of Education; the vice president is Mrs. Terry Shank, Greenville City Board of Education; the secretary is David Davis, Superintendent, Tyrell County Schools.

According to Dr. Raleigh E. Dingman, NCSBA executive director, "These meetings help underscore the association's theme this year, 'Public Education: Strength of the Past, Promise of the Future'.

"They (the meetings) also serve to bring the association to its 'grassroots' level," added Dr. Dingman.

pro-Moscow states of Tanzania and Malagasy to guard against an anti-left coup. Cuban advisers, possibly to help train a police corps, are an additional protection. That reflects the interest of Moscow, which finances all foreign Cuban adventures.

Ford, Again

Despite his publicly declared removal from presidential consideration, Gerald R. Ford is privately hinting that he " might be back in the picture if front-runner Ronald Reagan stumbles even slightly in the New Hampshire primary Feb. 26.

On a recent visit to Washington, the former president gave this appraisal to old congressional cronies:

He views Reagan as a likely but not overwhelming favorite to win. New Hampshire will be his test. If Reagan gets less than 35 percent of the vote there even while finishing first, Ford will immediatley make a reappraisal and decide whether to run within the next 48 hours.

Implicit in this outlook: Ford does not think much of the chances for his friend and former Cabinet member, George Bush, to win the nomination even if Reagan trips.

Thurmond's Endorsement

Sen. Strom Thurmond's decision to back John B. Connally in the important South Carolina Republican presidential primary was a tribute to the influence of his pretty wife, Nancy.

The former Miss South Carolina has been quietly lobbying her husband to endorse Connally for months. Apart from Nancy, Thurmond has had increasing problems with the Reagan candidacy on grounds of Reagan's 68 years. He telephoned Reagan in California to tell him of the decision to endorse Connally.

That puts both former Gov. James Edwards and Thurmond, the state's two most celebrated Republicans, in Connally's camp. Connally is now in a position to give Reagan a run in the March 8 primary — the first in the Southern states and hence vital for Reagan to show that he is holding his formidable Southern base. The polls favor Reagan 2-to-1, a distance that Connally men think can be closed in the next two months.

beliefs on everybody else in the U.S."

And that fatuous comment from Mr. Carroll gets me burned up — for that is exactly what the textbook publishers themselves are trying to do, and their power is infinitely greater than the power of the concerned parents. The publishers have brought their troubles on their own heads-and not only the publishers, but the la-de-da, effete, know-it-all textbook authors whose taste is oh, so much more sophisticated than the taste of the yahoos.

There is merit on both sides of the controversy. If school boards reject a dictionary solely because it defines "to bed" in a sexual sense, shame on the school boards. If an otherwise acceptable text is turned down only because of an accurate assessment of defense spending, something is grossly wrong. Such decisions would amount to a spineless surrender to the wowsers and cannot be defended.

But the arrogance of some school officials is at least equally indefensible. A few years ago in West Virginia, a passel of over-educated doctors of philosophy undertook to impose some ultra-liberal texts upon a largely fundamentalist rural community. The parents rebelled, as they had every right to do. Nothing in the name of "academic freedom" requires that taxpayers forever yield to the supposed superiority of professional educators. These are public schools we are talking about. If freedom of speech means anything, it means that the Gablers are as free to voice their opinions as the president of Allyn and Bacon is free to voice his opinion.

Let 'em tangle! The Gablers are living in a dream world if they suppose their efforts will prevent high school youths from encountering "to bed" as a transitive verb. High school youths now master much lustier verbs every day. But if the parents' efforts succeed in causing textbook producers to elevate their sophisticated sights a little lower, no harm will be done to the youngsters. They're not going to learn about life from a textbook anyhow.

Woodlot Co-Op In N.C. Forms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's first apparent cooperative effort among owners of small woodlots to harvest firewood has been started in western North Carolina with the help of public and private grants.

Approximately 45,000 cords of firewood that probably would not be cut without cooperative management is included in about 5,000 acres of woodland owned by members of the cooperative.

Due to the continuing energy crisis and an initiative by Gov. Jim Hunt to develop alternative sources of energy, cooperative organizers believe their idea is a timely one.

Hunt has endorsed a proposal to establish a non-profit corporation to develop alternatives to oil, including firewood.

Tom Covington, formerly of Raleigh and a member of the Associated Woodland Owners of Western North Carolina, said Wednesday that before the cooperative was formed, "my chances of having timber cut when it was appropriate were somewhere between slim and none."

But Covington said during a recent visit to Raleigh that he is now able to share the cost of selectively logging timber of firewood quality on his 165-acre farm near Asheville.

Members who own land in Buncombe, Henderson, Haywood and Transylvania counties, will also have access to better woodland management than is now possible with the help of state foresters, according to Covington.

Robert Powell Jr., chief of the state Energy Division's technical staff, said eastern North Carolina could be supplied with organized sources of firewood because of a number of large timber operations in the East.

But an advisory task force on small woodlot management warned in 1978 that while small private landowners controlled 80 percent of the state's timber resources, they were managing their woodland holdings at only 40 percent of their potential.

Singer Nurses Wreck Bruise

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Rock singer Ellen Foley has delayed the start of a planned European tour while she nurses a dislocated shoulder she suffered in a New Year's weekend motorcycle crash, a spokesman said.

Miss Foley, best known as the female voice on rock'n'roller Meat Loaf's "Bat Out of Hell" album, was riding with record producer Roy Thomas Baker on Sunday afternoon when she lost control of the bike and took a spill, said Gary Kenton.

The singer was hospitalized for a few days after the accident, he said.

Gov. Hunt Repeats His Proposal Of 'Infiltrating'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt, saying "it is time North Carolina stood up to the Ku Klux Klan, the Nazis and the communists," repeated today his proposal that investigators infiltrate violence-prone groups.

Hunt, in a news conference, said he stands "totally behind" his statement last month in which he first proposed infiltration of extremist groups.

That remark, in response to a question, touched off a furor of comment and criticism which Hunt acknowledged.

The governor mailed letters to county sheriffs, police chiefs and district attorneys around the state outlining his position and asking them to respond with written comments.

In the letter and in a statement accompanying it, Hunt noted that safeguards must be taken to protect the constitutional rights of citizens, and said he was confident those steps could be taken.

"I propose infiltration of groups that have a history of violence and that threaten violence. And we must provide strong, verifiable, safeguards against violating their civil liberties," Hunt said in his letter to sheriffs.

"Under our constitution, we tolerate their right to exist. We do not tolerate criminal violence, and we must protect the lives and property of our peaceful, law-abiding citizens against it," he wrote.

Hunt said his call for infiltration was in response to the Nov. 3 shootings in Greensboro in which five members of the Communist Workers Party were killed at a "Death to the Klan" rally.

Hunt declined to elaborate on what safeguards could be taken to ensure constitutional rights are not violated. Hunt said he had not yet completed a formal proposal.

The governor said he had not yet discussed the proposal with Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, whose office has direct control of the State Bureau of Investigation.

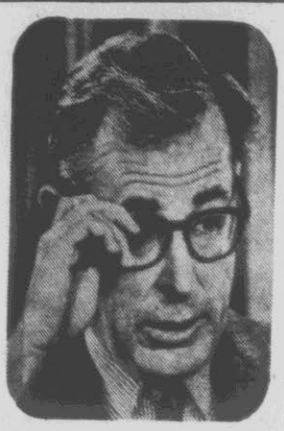
Hunt said his proposal did not necessarily limit infiltration activities to the SBI and perhaps could include such activity by local law enforcement agencies.

He said he did not know if the infiltration activities should also include covert actions and wiretaps.

Hunt dismissed as "absurd" criticism by George Gardner of Greensboro, director of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, who said Hunt's proposal was contemptuous of constitutional rights.

"I think any reasonable person has to be concerned about these kinds of groups," Hunt said. Naming the Klan, Nazis and communists, Hunt said it is time the state "told them that we are not going to tolerate criminal violence in this state."

FOCUS



Trip to China

The United States secretary of defense is scheduled to visit China on Sunday, for talks with some of that country's leaders. The talks could lead to closer defense ties between China and the United States. China shares a long border with the Soviet Union, and relations between those two countries have often been tense. China has also had hostile relations with neighboring Vietnam. Chinese troops invaded parts of Vietnam for a brief time last February and March. Because much of China's defense equipment is obsolete, some observers expect military aid to be an important topic during talks between the defense secretary and Chinese officials.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the U.S. secretary of defense?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — A baseball player must be retired five years to be eligible for the Hall of Fame.

Seek Trio In Gambling Ring

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Law-enforcement officials are seeking three men on charges of operating a gambling operation they say took in about $200,000 per week during the 1978-79 football season.

Fourteen persons were arrested Wednesday on similar charges.

A federal grand jury returned indictments against the 17 on Monday as the result of a year-long investigation and series of raids last month.

FBI agents say the operation covered both North Carolina and South Carolina and involved wagers on college and professional football games.

FBI Special Agent Andrew Pelczar said additional charges probably will be filed before the investigation is over.

Each of the 17 was charged with conducting, financing, managing, supervising, directing and owning "a part of an illegal gambling business involving bookmaking and accepting wagers on sporting events" in violation of both state and federal laws.

Three were also charged with unlawfully using a telephone in interstate commerce to promote gambling between North Carolina and South Carolina. The men are James Coy Lawson and John Joseph Patella, both of King, and William David Wise of Lake City.

Lawson and Patella were arrested Wednesday. The FBI identified the others who were arrested that day as Woodrow Wilson Caudell, George Leonard East, William Robert Setzer, Randall Roger Atkins, Harvey Woodleif King, Kenneth Burton Stewart and Kenneth Watson, all of Winston-Salem; William Clyde Dancy, of Kannapolis; Tommy Folger Hollingsworth and Alvis Aaron Pell, both of Mount Airy; Earl B. Furr, of Reidsville, and Donald G. Lomax, of Charlotte.

Officials are still searching for Wise, Kent Phil Rhodes of North Wilkesboro and Sharon David Voiles of Charlotte.

Atkins was placed under a $20,000 bond while the others were released under personal-recognizance bonds pending trial in U.S. District Court.

If found guilty of gambling, a person may be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison, a $20,000 fine, or both.

Plan Single Association

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C.(AP) — Three savings and loan associations, including one headed by former Gov. James E. Holshouser Jr., have announced plans to merge into one new association.

Shareholders of Sandhills Savings & Loan of Southern Pines, Colonial Savings & Loan of Tarboro and Cary Savings & Loan will vote January 29 on the merger proposal.

If accepted by the shareholders and approved by the state administrator of savings and loan associations, the new financial institution would be called First Colony Savings & Loan, with Holshouser as chairman and W. Edward Greer as president.

Holshouser now heads the Sandhills S&L, while Greer serves as its president.

The new association's board of directors would be made up of three members from each S&L, Greer said.

When the merger and possible future mergers are completed, Greer said, the new association may make its headquarters in Raleigh. In the meantime, First Colony will be based in Southern Pines.

Winterville Says Risky Water Wells Not Used

WINTERVILLE — Town officials reported this morning that two of the town's deep wells have not been used since one of two samples of water taken in November showed a higher-than-normal coliform bacteria count.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles said only one of the town's three wells — equipped with a gas chlorinator — is being used at present. Chlorinator units for the other two wells are on order, he explained, adding that the wells will be placed in service again when the treatment units have been installed.

Nobles said the first sample of water taken in November showed a higher-than-normal bacteria count, while a second sample during the month, and the December sample were acceptable.

The U.S. Environment Protection Agency reported yesterday that Winterville was among three water systems in the county that failed to give proper public notification in November when elevated coliform bacteria counts were discovered.

Public notification is required under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act, the EPA said.

Nobles noted that the EPA wants each individual water customer notified by mail when higher-than-normal bacteria counts occur.

Raced Building Permit Deadline

CURRITUCK, N.C. (AP) — Ninety-four Outer Banks property owners applied for building permits during the last 11 days of December to beat a deadline proposed by a federal agency with designs on the land.

The Currituck County inspections department issued 55 building permits for tracts north of Corolla, and received 39 more requests the department could not process by Dec. 31, Sandy Spach, of the permits department, said Wednesday.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, in a draft environmental impact statement issued Dec. 18, proposes to buy all Currituck Outer Banks land north of Corolla to the Virginia border and turn it into a protected refuge.

The report suggests that landowners who had building permits as of Dec. 31, 1979, be allowed use of their land for up to 25 years.

"There was quite a lot of interest in permits after the federal report came out," Ms. Spach said. "People came in and called in, and there were so many our inspectors could not complete them all by the 31st."

Ms. Spach said the 94 requests between Dec. 20-31 were far greater than the normal number of applications filed during an 11-day period.

Currituck County Manager Webb Fuller said the 39 landowners who applied, but missed the Dec. 31 proposed deadline, will be placed on a list to be presented to the Fish and Wildlife Service during upcoming public hearings on the draft impact statement.

The federal agency plans three hearings, although dates and locations have not been decided, a Service spokesman said.

Fuller said county health department workers must inspect lots for septic tank use before building permits can be issued. "We just didn't have the manpower to complete inspections on all the lots before the end of the year," Fuller said.

Fuel Aid Funds In Pitt 'Spent'

Present funds for the state fuel assistance program have been spent, according to Edward L. Garrison, Director of the Pitt County Department of Social Services.

"There is a possibility that we will receive additional money," he said. "We will be taking names and addresses for a waiting list. Applicants will be notified to come back in, when and if we receive additional funds."

Tanker Truck Burns In Raleigh

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A tanker truck caught fire in downtown Raleigh in mid-morning today. The driver of the truck apparently escaped without injury.

According to reports, the driver apparently jumped from the burning truck and let the vehicle roll to a stop.

The accident occurred on S. Dawson St., several blocks from the center of the business district.

Safe Landing Despite Trouble

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A TWA jetliner with 129 persons aboard made a safe landing at Los Angeles International Airport after experiencing landing gear problems, officials said.

The Boeing 707 returned to Los Angeles shortly after taking off Wednesday afternoon when crew members noticed the right landing gear appeared slightly out of alignment, said airport spokeswoman Virginia Black. However, on its second approach to the runway, the plane's wheels looked sufficiently aligned for a landing attempt, said fire department spokesman Martin Garza.

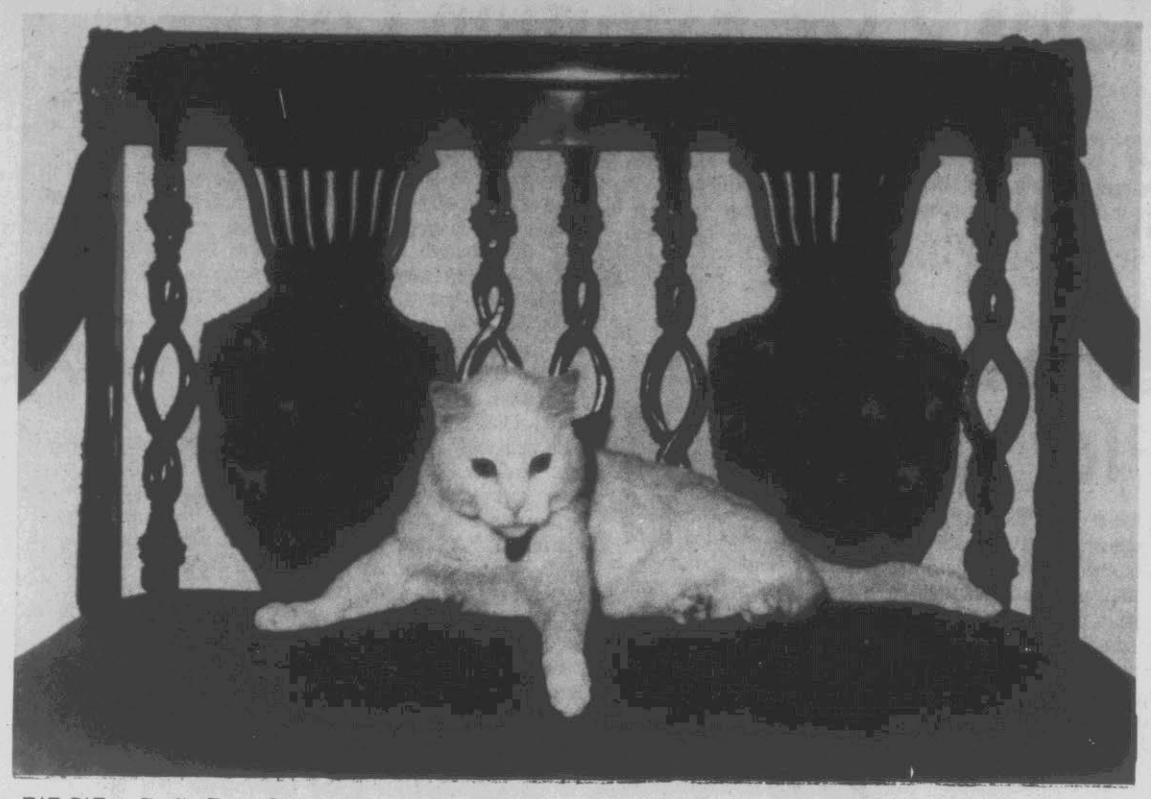
Era Of Fragmentation For U.S. Television In '80s



FAT CAT — Charlie Chan relaxes on an antique settee in the three-bedroom house he inherited when his devoted owner, Grace Alma Patterson Wiggins of Joplin, Mo., died in April 1978. The cat was the sole beneficiary of his owner's estate, which left him $150 a month for food and medical bills. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (UPI) — For American television, the 1980s will be the era of fragmentation.

Just when everyone has settled down to the way things are, technology comes along and boots everybody into a new age of home entertainment.

Who will be watching? Just about everybody. NBC research estimates that in 1988 increased population will have brought the number of television households from the current 76.3 million to 90 million.

It also estimates that Americans will devote 4 billion hours a week to regular television viewing, compared to 3.3 billion hours a week now spent in front of the tube.

Then there's cable. The FCC estimates that a maximum of 48 percent of American homes will have cable by the end of the decade.

With cable comes the superstations, which have the potential of becoming alternate networks. Their force in the marketplace will depend on future FCC and court rulings on what they can pick up free and what they must pay for.

Already on the market are video cassette recorders, which are expected to reach 1 million in sales in 1980. By mid-decade 10 million may begin use in the United States.

Video disc players are an infant industry that will blossom in the 1980s. They will be significantly cheaper than cassettes and cassette players, but they can't be used to record existing television programs.

That's just the tip of the media iceberg.

One really significant technology involves satellite transmission. The first network to use satellite transmission is PBS, but the big three networks can be expected to make the switch from ground lines soon.

What PBS will be doing, thanks to satellite technology, is broadcasting three separate networks — one aimed at the mass audience, one at special interest groups such as foreign language speakers, and the third for material that falls between the other two.

Eventually the big three networks probably will be forced by the competition of the marketplace to do the same — broadcast not one program but multiple choices for various time slots. Each station will be able to select its own programing.

Critics of current television have applauded the coming of diversity — now all that opera, those news documentaries, the experimental theater, whatever, will be available to those who want it, while the mass market watches "Laverne and Shirley" or "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo."

Maybe. But how many local stations will choose the "elite" programs over those that will draw a larger audience? The networks will offer alternatives, but it is the station that must put them on the air.

One enthusiast went so far as to make the comparison with radio. The new technology of television was supposed to kill radio, that argument went, but instead radio was never healthier and major markets have a wide range of stations.

That very argument may backfire, however. Television did not kill radio from the viewpoint of the station owner's profit statement. It did kill network radio. The golden era was over and no longer could the radio audience luxuriate in programs featuring the nation's top comedians, actors and musical performers. From Fred Allen to Lux Radio Theater, it went the way of vaudeville.

What's left is local programing, and the level of radio has been reduced to what will appeal to drive-time audiences — programs that won't distract anybody from what they're doing behind the wheel.

A major problem with diversity is money. Who is going to pay for all this?

The product of networks is not programs. The product of networks is audience. Networks buy audiences from affiliate stations and sell them to companies who want to advertise soap or cereal or denture cleanser. The bigger the audience, the more money the networks collect. With this money, they can buy expensive programing for the mass market.

Fragment that market, and as the number of alternative programs grows, the size of the audience for each diminishes. Less audience, less money. In theory, the networks could afford to cut back on profits, but human nature and corporate greed dictate otherwise.

Or, if local stations continue to support the programs that appeal to the mass audience, Utopia goes down the tube.

Perhaps the 1980s will become a media wonderland, but consider the warning of NBC vice chairman Richard S. Salant:

"Don't be surprised if, 20 years from now, a new generation of critics will be thundering against the mindless, tasteless, corrupting, meretricious people who run pay cable or whatever...And the critics will be looking to some new technologies, now unknown, which will drive them out of the temple."

Governor Is Threatened

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — State police are investigating telephoned death threats against Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. by a man who reportedly warned Brown to stop enforcing weight regulations for coal trucks.

State Police Commissioner Ken Brandenburgh would offer no details on the investigation, but Brown's press secretary, Frank Ashley, said Wednesday that one threat was telephoned to the Lexington Herald.

Ashley said Brown's security chief, state police Lt. Bill Adams, flew to California Friday to increase security for Brown, who was in Pasadena with his wife, Phyllis George Brown, for the Rose Bowl. Mrs. Brown, a former Miss America, was co-host for the parade telecast.

A Herald reporter received a call Friday from a man who said Laurel County truckers and coal operators were angry because "Brown has upped the enforcement of (weight) violations against coal trucks."

The Herald reported that the caller said, "If he doesn't lay off the enforcement, Phyllis is going to be a widow woman."

Don Mills, one of Brown's executive assistants, said other threats had been made, but did not disclose who received the calls.

O.B. Arnold, state vehicle registration commissioner, said he was not aware of any increased effort to enforce truck weight restrictions. "We're just operating normally," he said.

Peak Season

RODANTHE, N.C. (AP) — As cold temperatures send North Carolinians scurrying for their warm homes, there is one coastal attraction which is now beginning to show its beauty for the real nature lovers.

During no other time of the year is the wild beauty of Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge so much in evidence. Thousands of migratory waterfowl, including snow geese, make their home at the refuge on Hatteras Island, along the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

The area is one of the most popular places on the coast for birdwatchers. Even the casual observer can enjoy the experience as N.C. Highway 12 runs through the refuge. For the devoted birdwatchers, there is a 3½-mile nature trail.

Pea Island is one of several refuges located along the Atlantic Flyway and administered by the federal Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.

The refuge was established in 1938 and stretches for 13 miles along the Outer Banks. It consists of 5,915 acres of barrier sand dunes, ocean beaches, salt marshes, low sand ridges, freshwater ponds, tidal creeks and bay, and 25,700 acres of water in Pamlico Sound that are closed to hunting.

Along with the normal species of birds found in the refuge, there have been rare sightings of an American flamingo, a golden eagle and a white-fronted goose.

Fear Power Shortages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delays by utility companies in carrying out safety improvements the government ordered for nuclear power plants could result in power shortages in some parts of the country, according to Energy Deaprtment officials.

Officials said Wednesday about half the country's nuclear power plants have not met the Jan. 1 deadline the staff of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission set after the Three Mile Island accident.

The NRC said it is giving utilities extensions of from several weeks to six months to comply with the orders or face shutdown.

Harold Denton, the NRC's director of nuclear reactor regulation, told a news conference he is determined to see that utilities complete the improvements at all 68 reactors by June 1. The so-called "short term" safety improvements demanded by the government range from implementing new procedures to installing new safety monitoring equipment.

"We've come to the end of the road. ... Nothing (in meeting these requirements) can go beyond June 1. That's the absolute end date," Denton said.

However, Energy Department officials said that as the utilities try to meet the new NRC deadlines for making the changes, some parts of the country could face power problems. Most of the remaining changes require plants to shut down temporarily.

The NRC said operators of 30 reactors have met the Jan. 1 deadline and companies operating an additional 14 reactors have agreed to comply by the end of the month.

Find Visa Violations By One Of Every 6 Iranians

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — One of every six Iranian students in the United States is living here in violation of his visa, according to U.S. immigration officials who have just finished a seven-week nationwide check into the situation.

A spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said Wednesday that of the 55,731 Iranians interviewed, 6,623 were found to be deportable. Of that number, 37 have had hearings which resulted in an order for deportation.

Another group of almost 3,200 Iranian students face deportation unless they can substantiate that they are complying with their visas, the spokesman said. An INS investigator from Atlanta estimated that 800 Iranians in the Carolinas, Georgia and Alabama have entered the country on student visas but have not yet complied with a U.S. Justice Department directive for them to report to immigration authorities.

The order, issued by President Carter in November in response to the takeover of the American embassy in Tehran, required all Iranians in this country on student visas to report within 30 days. Though a federal judge ruled the order unconstitutional, it was later upheld by a three-judge Court of Appeals panel. A deadline of Dec. 31 was established for the students to report.

Those Iranians on student visas who have not reported to immigration officials are in automatic violation of their visas, said Don Owen, an INS investigator in the Atlanta district office.

Owen said of the 2,161 Iranians enrolled in post-secondary institutions and interviewed by his office, 233 were found to be in violation of their visas. In North Carolina, 383 Iranian students were interviewed, with 16 found out of status. Another 11 had minor technical violations of their visas which are currently being investigated by the INS.

The INS estimates that as many as 800 Iranians remain to be identified, and Owen offered no timetable on when his six investigators would be able to track down the missing Iranians.

Two Arrested In Paychecks Theft

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A 20-year old soldier from Fayetteville, N.C., is being held on $100,000 bond and a female member of the Ohio National Guard has also been arrested in connection with this week's theft of 430 paychecks from a safe at Fort Benjamin Harrison, authorities said.

Spec. 4 Frank Clardy, a Fayetteville resident temporarily stationed at Fort Harrison from Fort Bragg, N.C., had checks worth more than $100,000 in his car when he was arrested, said Sally Spriggs, an Army spokeswoman at the base.

Clardy, 20, appeared before federal Magistrate J. Patrick Endsley Wednesday along with Sandra L. Seavolt, of Toledo, Ohio. The U.S. attorney's office here said the 19-year-old woman, who was attending computer school at the base, was charged with failure to report a crime.

A probable cause hearing was scheduled for Jan. 11.

Army investigators said Clardy had been a prime suspect in the theft and was apprehended when he returned to the army base from temporary leave.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John J. Thar said that one of the reasons he asked for the high bond was Clary is already facing military court martial charges in connection with a previous theft of checks here.

Thar also said Clardy had failed to appear on a state warrant issued in Fayetteville, charging him with passing a forged money order.

Thirty of the stolen paychecks are still missing, but an Army spokesman said duplicates of those checks will be made to insure that all personnel would be paid as scheduled.

An affidavit filed with the U.S. magistrate's office said Clardy cashed a payroll check, worth $989, in the name of "Donald T.Finley". It said he later drove to Toledo and told Miss Seavolt, about the crime and that the two then cashed 15 checks in various Toledo locations.

ALWAYS A DODGE MAIN — Vince Landini, a 24-year veteran of "Dodge Main" Chrysler assembly plant in Hamtramck, Mich., will always have a "Dodge Main" in his basement after the plant in Hamtramck shuts down Friday. He has spent more than $1,000 building the miniature plant. (AP Laserphoto)

Model Dodge Assembly Plant Is Costly Basement Hobby Project

WARREN, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp.'s Hamtramck auto assembly plant is shutting down, but there always will be a "Dodge Main" in Vince Landino's basement, complete with little people, little trees, little smokestacks — even little Chrysler trucks.

The Warren man, a 24-year veteran of the plant, has spent hundreds of hours and more than $1,000 building the miniature plant.

It started as a model railroad project in 1977 to keep the 57-year-old Landino busy while he recovered from two cancer operations. But railroad trains weren't enough for him. "I just wanted to be different. It was a challenge," he said.

So he pulled out an old drafting board and started drawing a building to accompany the trains. It was only natural that Dodge Main would be the result, he said.

"I grew up with the plant," explained Landino, who admiringly calls Dodge Main "a city in itself." He peddled newspapers at the plant as a child and his father worked there 33 years. "I figured that's the only thing I really knew."

Landino, who is on medical leave from Chrysler, created the 6-by-16 foot model from memory. It is very detailed, including telephone poles, bridges, streets and a small village with houses that light up.

But it is not done to scale, nor is it an exact replica, Landino said.

"When I made it up, I didn't just want this thing to be blah," he explained, so he added a few personal touches — streets named after his grandchildren and billboards with their photographs.

Landino even threw in some chickens and pigs around the plant because his daughter-in-law likes animals.

It's taken Landino, a production control employee, until now to get the model in shape. He said he ripped it down and rebuilt it four times to get it right.

That may not be the end of it, either. He's thinking of building another Dodge Main — this time to scale — and maybe even building the Detroit Jefferson Assembly plant. Landino goes into the hospital at the end of the week for more surgery and building models is "good therapy," he says.

An avowed Chrysler man, Landino admitted it will be sad to see the real Dodge Main close on Friday because of Chrysler's severe financial difficulties.

The plant may be old — it started production in 1914 — but it could still be used with some modernization, he said.

"I know the building is good for at least another 100 years, it's so well constructed," he said. "I think it could still produce a lot of cars there and I'd hate to see a place just go to waste."

Judge Doubts Kidnapping, But Holds 2 On Extortion Counts

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A U.S. magistrate here has ordered two men held for grand jury action on extortion charges despite his doubts about the alleged kidnapping of a North Carolina man.

"I have my suspicions about the man being kidnapped," U.S. Magistrate Sam Wilson said Wednesday but added there was enough evidence to hold James Edward Chitwood and Allen Dale Vernon for grand jury action.

Chitwood, 51 of Rocky Mount and Vernon, 22, of Collinsville are free on $50,000 bond each.

Victor P. Holdren, an FBI agent from Raleigh, N.C. testified at a preliminary hearing for the pair that a team of agents hiding out near a Ridgeway service station rescued Charles O'Quinn of Durham, N.C. from two gunmen who were holding him for ransom.

O'Quinn told investigators he was held for $37,500 ransom after a drug dealer in Baltimore stole a large amount of marijuana from him, Holdren said. Federal authorities said they believe the men who held O'Quinn for ransom were trying to recover their losses.

Holdren said FBI agents from North Carolina and Virginia hid around the service station where the ransom was to be paid Dec. 5 and waited for the extortionists to arrive with O'Quinn.

FBI agents arrested Chitwood and Vernon when they let O'Quinn out of the car, Holdren said. One of the men was armed with a .38-caliber revolver and the other had a 9-mm automatic pistol and a live hand grenade, the FBI agent testified.

Holdren said the FBI became involved in the case Nov. 30 when O'Quinn telephoned his father, William O'Quinn of Durham, saying he was being forcibly held by men who wanted $37,500. He did not identify the men, but said they wanted the money because a business deal didn't go through, Holdren said.

O'Quinn's family contacted the FBI and agents taped several subsequent telephone calls in which details of the ransom exchange were worked out.

Holdren testified O'Quinn said he had been held at Chitwood's home. He told investigators two other men he could not identify were also involved in the extortion attempt. The FBI said those two have not been arrested.

During Wednesday's hearing, attorneys for Chitwood and Vernon implied in cross-examination of Holdren that O'Quinn may have voluntarily gone along with the ransom effort.

But Holdren said O'Quinn told investigators he was under constant armed guard by either Chitwood or Vernon.

Holdren said O'Quinn told investigators the episode began when he was contacted by a man in Baltimore who wanted marijuana. O'Quinn said he met Chitwood and Vernon in Greensboro, N.C., drove to Virginia, picked up 166 pounds of marijuana and took it to Maryland, where they met two other persons, Holdren said.

One of the two subsequently stole a large amount of marijuana from O'Quinn at a Baltimore motel, O'Quinn told investigators.

Holdren testified that O'Quinn said he returned to Virginia with Chitwood and Vernon and was held captive.

Embezzlement Plot Charged

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A longshoreman who allegedly was paid for working on the Hampton Roads docks while he was in prison and five people accused of helping in the scheme have been indicted on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy.

The indictments, issued Wednesday by a Norfolk Circuit Court grand jury, are the first in what is expected to be a series of criminal charges resulting from a probe into the practice called "ghosting."

The practice involves paying people for dock work they never performed.

Patrick Joseph Kelly of Virginia Beach was in St. Bride's Correctional Facility in Chesapeake while he was recorded as working 700 hours at Norfolk International Terminals as a clerk, prosecutors said.

Indictments also were returned against Kelly's father and uncle and three other members of Local 1624 of the International Longshoremen Association.

Commonwealth's Attorney Joseph Campbell said the alleged scheme involving Kelly occurred between late 1976 and April 1978.

Kelly was in prison for possessing marijuana with intent to distribute it during that period, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said the men conspired to keep Kelly on the payroll for at least 700 hours per year. This would keep him eligible for ILA health benefits, holiday pay and a bonus check.

In some instances, other men worked for Kelly and received Kelly's paycheck. At other times, Kelly was simply recorded as working when no one worked, prosecutors said.

Campbell said the shipping companies lost money even when Kelly's work was actually performed. The companies had to pay more than $9 per hour just for Kelly's fringe benefits.

Indictments also were returned against Frank Martin Kelly, 58, of Norfolk, Patrick Kelly's uncle; Peter Anthony Kelly of Virginia Beach, Patrick's father; Raymond Calvin Gray, James Cameron King, 41, and John Martin, 45, all of Norfolk.

Poster Child Recovering

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — 1980 National Easter Seal poster child Jeanette Alvarado, wounded by gunfire as she watched fireworks New Year's Day, is improving and will continue to represent the society this year, officials say.

Police said Wednesday they have not determined whether the shootings of Jeanette, 8, and her 31-year-old aunt were accidental or deliberate.

Jeanette, whose legs are paralyzed due to a congenital spinal cord disorder, received a superficial gunshot wound to the head just after midnight Monday as she watched fireworks with friends and relatives outside her grandmother's house.

Hospital officials said Wednesday the girl had been moved from the intensive care unit at Bexar County Hospital. Her aunt, Alice Alvarado, suffered a neck wound, but was released Wednesday.

"We really don't have any idea why the child was shot. It's hard to tell if it was deliberate or accidental," said Inspector Marion Talbert.

Police Lt. Robert Katz earlier speculated that the shot might have been randomly fired by a New Year's reveler.

Oil Prices Are Boosted By Texaco And Mexico

NEW YORK (AP) — Texaco Inc. announced rapidly rising crude oil costs had pushed its wholesale home heating oil prices up 6 cents a gallon, as Mexico declared it was raising the price of its crude 30 percent.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, raised its price to an average of 73 cents a gallon effective Jan. 1 and announced the move Wednesday.

The increase was the first since last fall, when Texaco's average wholesale price in its 43-state marketing area was 67 cents a gallon. Texaco spokeswoman Marilyn Povotador said the wholesale price increase probably would be passed on to consumers.

Vincent Sgro, editor of the industry newspaper Oil Buyers Guide, said retailers typically mark up wholesale home heating oil prices by 14 to 15 cents a gallon. But with this increase, Texaco is "just catching up to everyone else" in the industry, he said.

"Several of the leading oil-exporting countries have raised crude oil prices retroactive to Nov. 1," Texaco said, adding, "other increases have been made by various OPEC members either before, during or after" the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' recent meeting in Caracas, Venezuela.

The increases boosted the average price of a 42-gallon barrel of OPEC oil from $22 to $26 and have resulted in recent gasoline price increases by several companies of 1 cent to 6 cents a gallon.

On the spot market, home heating oil sold Wednesday for 80 cents a gallon, down from 85 cents last week and around $1 last fall when worries over Iranian oil supplies sent buyers scurrying for supplies.

Mexico, meanwhile, announced Wednesday night that it was raising the base price for its crude oil price to $32 a barrel, up from $24.60, and said it might raise it again because of the "uncertain situation in the world pertroleum market."

Mexico is not a member of OPEC, but traditionally keeps its prices close to those of OPEC members.

Mexico exports about 440,000 barrels of oil a day to the United States, which imports about 8 million barrels daily from all sources.

Authorizes Sale From Stockpile

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has signed a law authorizing the sale of 35,000 tons of tin from the national defense stockpile of strategic metals.

The legislation signed Wednesday is designed to eliminate a tin surplus from the strategic reserve. The tin must be sold to domestic buyers. The United States imports 90 percent of its tin from Malaysia, Thailand, Bolivia and Indonesia and these countries have complained that the legislation may disrupt the tin market. The new law also provides for the sale of 3 million carats of industrial diamond stones from government reserves and for a $237 million appropriation to buy other metals for the strategic stockpile.

Lynne Fontanne, Lucille Ball and Leonard Nimoy were among the stars on hand Wednesday night to honor Fonda in ceremonies at the new Helen Bonfils Theater Complex in Denver.

Fonda was named a national artist by the American National Theater and Academy after a staging of Moliere's "The Learned Ladies." The performance was held in one of the $113 million dollar complex's two theaters.

Miss Fontanne and her late husband, Alfred Lunt, are past recipients of the award, along with Helen Hayes and Fred Astaire.

Bert Parks Fired By Pageant

By PETER MATTIACE
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Perennial Miss America Pageant host Bert Parks says pageant officials pulled a "shabby trick" by firing him after 25 years of singing "There She Is" to tearful beauty queens.

"You've got to be kidding me. I'm absolutely shocked. I know nothing about this at all," Parks said when told of his dismissal late Wednesday night.

"I think it's their loss. I never thought they'd pull a trick like this," Parks said. "This is a little shabby, isn't it?"

Albert A. Marks Jr., the pageant's chief executive officer, said Wednesday that Parks "has not been invited back to be the emcee next year."

Marks said he told Parks in a letter two weeks ago that he would not be rehired to his traditional one-year contract. Marks would not give a reason for Parks' dismissal.

Parks, 65, reached at home in Greenwich, Conn., said he had not received the letter.

"I am really, honestly, so stunned. I really wish Al Marks had called me personally. I'm very sad. But if it's true, it's true. That's the way life is. I've loved every moment that I've done it."

Parks has been the pageant's television master of ceremonies since 1955, the second year of its nationwide telecast.

Marks said Parks earned $18,500 for his services last year, which included rehearsals and three nights as host of preliminary competition in addition to the two-hour television show.

A pageant source who asked not to be identified said Parks was fired because he was getting too old and "too powerful" for the non-profit pageant organization, led by dozens of Atlantic City area businessmen and civic leaders.

The source said the pageant's television sponsors — Kellogg's, Gillette and Campbell's Soup — supported the dismissal.

"Look, the guy's 65 years old," the source said. "A younger face is needed for that slot."

Marks would not say who would be host of the pageant's 27th national telecast on Sept. 6. The New York Daily News reported that pageant officials were considering singers John Davidson and Mac Davis, talk show host Merv Griffin and actor Gavin MacLeod.

Dorothy Benham of Pittsburgh, Miss America 1977 and co-host of the 1979 pageant, said she had been invited to return as co-host this September.

"It'll be different without him," she said when told of Park's firing. "... He's a great man. He's done a lot for the show. ... The Miss America pageant is a tradition. It's part of America. He is known as a part of that tradition."

Parks, an Atlanta native called "Bertie" by many in Atlantic City, is a former Broadway actor. He was the nation's top game show host in the 1950s when he was chosen for the pageant. Parks was host of such '50s TV shows as "Name That Tune" and "Break the Bank." His last network series was in 1963 when he hosted "Yours for a Song."

Parks took over the job from Bob Russell, a television producer who emceed the first televised pageant.

Jail-Smuggling

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Close inspections of incoming Christmas gifts to the Wake County jail resulted in six arrests within a two-week span on charges of attempting to smuggle marijuana into the jail.

The inspections apparently began with three brothers and a sister who were arrested on Dec. 23 and charged with trying to deliver marijuana to their brother, a federal bank robbery prisoner, authorities said.

Deputies said they found loose marijuana wrapped in a plastic and concealed in a bottle of lotion. In another incident, a woman was charged with trying to deliver a package of marijuana hidden in a jar of petroleum jelly, officials said.

"We have decided to be, perhaps, more diligent in our searching of packages," said jail supervisor Levi Dawson. "We have found items before, but not of this magnitude."

Found No Major 747 Defects

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration says inspections it ordered last week have revealed no major structural defects in Boeing 747 jumbo jets.

"We've found no significant structural faults, only a few minor items like a loose fastener," FAA spokesman Fred Farrar said Wednesday. "We've found nothing comparable to the problem with the London 747." The inspections were ordered last Friday after an engine support cracked on a Pan American World Airways 747 cargo jet shortly after a rough landing at London's Heathrow Airport. Farrar said inspections had been completed on 136 of the 140 Boeing 747s operated by U.S. carriers that required the check.

Park Program Planned Friday

The public is invited to the dedication ceremony of naming the West Greenville Park (formerly the Eppes School site) for Thomas M. Foreman.

The program will begin at 10 a.m. Friday, January 4 at the park site located on West Fifth Sgreet.

Weather permitting, the ceremony will be held outdoors.

Recommending Removal Of Contaminated Soil

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An environmental-impact statement completed recently by the state recommends that all the PCB-contaminated soil taken from along 211 miles of state roads be buried in Warren County.

State officials said in the statement that the soil should be stored on a 142-acre tract of farmland in Warren County, near Afton. The recommendation comes despite earlier indications the soil might be dumped at a number of sites.

The statement does not say if some of the 40,000 cubic yards of soil should be stored in landfills located in the counties where PCB-laced oil was illegally dumped in 1978.

That possibility was discussed by state officials last summer.

William R. Pittman, a spokesman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said Wednesday that the landfills would not be used for storing PCB if the state can use the Warren County site.

The Department of Crime Control and Public Safety is handling the disposal of the tainted soil.

"We still consider burial in Warren County as the best option," Pittman said.

Four counties where the polychlorinated biphenyls were dumped have agreed to store contaminated soil in their landfills if the federal Environmental Protection Agency approves the sites.

Pittman said the state has not sought EPA approval, mainly because he said a costly and time-consuming environmental-impact statement would have to be filed for each landfill. He said that is something the state would prefer to avoid.

The environmental statement outlines the state's plans for disposing of the chemical and possible alternatives. It was filed Friday in response to a lawsuit filed by the Warren County Board of Commissioners in August. The lawsuit was intended to block the location of a PCB dump in the county.

Despite the lawsuit, the state has been allowed to purchase the 142-acre Warren County tract for $162,500. The state has been forbidden from developing the site as a dump.

The Warrren County suit was filed in state court but it is now in U.S. District Court in Raleigh because of the addition of the EPA as a defendant.

The Warren County commissioners contend the site is not safe for PCB storage and that the EPA violated federal regulations in approving the site.

The commissioners originally gave the state permission to use the site because they said they believed that only tainted soil from Warren County would be stored there. The group rescinded the offer when it learned the site would be used to store soil from as many as 14 counties.

Burley Mitchell Jr., the secretary of the crime control and public safety department, is in charge of the PCB cleanup. He was out of town Wednesday and was not available for comment on the report.

Says Public To Foot Bill

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former Gov. Bob Scott says North Carolina taxpayers will be footing the bill for much of Gov. Jim Hunt's re-election campaign if Hunt plans to rent a state-owned airplane for $125 per hour.

Scott responded in a prepared statement to Hunt's plans to reimburse the state at a rate of $125 per hour for trips in the plane to political events.

"Charter companies charge from $350 to $400 per hour for this type of aircraft," Scott said. The twin-engine plane is a Beechcraft King Air E-90.

Scott said the $125 figure "is nowhere near the true cost to the taxpayers of North Carolina" because its minimum operational cost is $175 an hour plus the two pilots' salaries.

"The governor should not use the power of his office to his advantage at the taxpayers' expense. If he wants to use the plane, fine, but he should at least be above board about what he is doing, and he should reimburse the state the true amount for the plane's usage," Scott said.

Hunt's deputy press secretary, Brent Hackney, said Wednesday that Commerce officials set the $125 per hour figure.

"That may be cheaper than the going commercial rate. But if that's the Commerce rate, we'll go with it, I guess," Hackney said.

Hunt used the plane to attend an annual political dinner in Bertie County recently. State Commerce Department officials said they expect to be reimbursed at a rate of $125 per hour.

The RH Factor and Pregnancy

I've never completely understood the meaning of the RH factor in pregnancy. Can you explain it simply? — Mrs. K.J.B., La.

Dear Mrs. B.:

I'll try to make it as simple as possible, although it is a complex problem.

Besides the four major classifications of blood groups, there are numerous subdivisions. One of these is known as "the RH factor."

Every person is classed as either "RH positive" or "RH negative." When both the husband and the wife are RH negative, there is no cause for concern that pregnancy will be affected. Similarly, this is true if both the husband and the wife are RH positive.

When the husband is RH negative and the wife is RH positive, there is still no concern for the destiny of the unborn child.

It is only when the husband is RH positive and the wife is RH negative that there is a possibility that the unborn child may be affected. Now it gets a little more complicated. If the baby within the womb inherits the RH positive factor from the father, special antibodies are developed between the mother and the fetus. This may cause anemia and jaundice when the baby is born.

It is interesting that this rarely occurs in a firstborn child, and remember, if it does, it is only when the father is RH positive and the mother is RH negative.

There are now many techniques that save the lives of "RH babies." The diagnosis can be made before delivery by extracting some of the amniotic fluid that surrounds the fetus. Preparations for certain types of transfusion and immune globulin injections in the mother are some of the remarkable life-saving procedures that are now available.

The new science of genetic counseling and genetic manipulation have opened wide frontiers for the prevention of the complications formerly associated with the RH baby at birth.

I confess I'm a worry wart. Every once in a while my heart jumps a beat and I feel it in my neck. My doctor says it's not important, but I'm still nervous about it. — Mr. R.O., Ill.

Dear Mr. O.:

I'll join your own doctor in assuring you that these skipped beats, or extra "systoles," frequently occur in perfectly normal hearts. Rarely do they have real medical significance.

Fatigue, severe emotional distress, overindulgence in alcohol or tobacco are the common reasons for extra heartbeats. Some drugs, allergies, thyroid and other hormone disturbances can be responsible. Undoubtedly, all of these have been ruled out by your doctor, with the additional support of an electrocardiogram.

There are numerous drugs which can reduce the frequency of these episodes.

Relief Food Not Distributed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department says the United Nations' World Food Program has stopped food shipments to Cambodia because the supplies are not getting to the hungry people they are intended for.

Department officials, who asked not to be identified, confirmed Wednesday that the U.N. agency had decided on a temporary halt until Cambodian authorities make arrangements to distribute food already sent to Cambodia. The officials said some 50,000 tons of relief supplies have been delivered to Cambodia, but only a small percentage of it has been distributed. The department said part of the problem appeared to be that there are not enough Cambodians capable of driving trucks to carry the food into the countryside.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices tumbled in heavy early trading today as gold prices soared well past $600 an ounce and the dollar dropped on currency markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks lost 9.13 to 815.44 in the first half hour of trading.

A tally of all trading on the New York Stock Exchange showed an even broader decline. Losing issues swamped gainers by 5-to-1 in the early going.

Today's early decline followed a 14.17 drop in in the Dow index Wednesday, its largest loss in a single day since mid-October.

Analysts said concern about the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and outbreaks of violence in several countries eroded market confidence. In international markets that helped push gold to record highs and the dollar fell to a record low against the West German mark at the morning fixing.

Among actively traded issues in early trading, Boeing dropped 1⅛ to 48½; Pan Am slipped ⅛ to 5¾; Avco fell 1¾ to 24¼ and Asarco, a silver and copper mining company, gained ⅝ to 37⅜.

On Wednesday, losers outnumbered gainers by about 3-to-1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 40.61 million shares, against 31.53 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost 1.26 to 60.69.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 5.66 to 241.41.

'Hispanic' Not A Race

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A federal judge, saying "Hispanic" is not a racial category, has temporarily barred the city from promoting a policeman of Mexican descent under an anti-discrimination plan.

U.S. District Judge Gerald Weber on Wednesday extended a temporary restraining order against the promotion to sergeant of Edward A. Villalpando, 40, who was to be sworn Dec. 19 with 35 other newly appointed sergeants.

Weber made it clear that only blacks and women are included in his order forcing the city to award preferential promotions to minorities on the police force. He gave attorneys for both sides one week to submit briefs in the case.

Villalpando was certified Hispanic by the Civil Service Commission.

"That's not a race," Weber said. "I don't accept that answer. The whole thing is somewhat comedic and somewhat contemptuous on the part of the city ... there is a difference between 'nationality' and 'race.'"

The judge had ruled on Oct. 12 that the city must adopt a racial and sexual quota system for police promotions.

Villalpando ranked 64th among all officers on the sergeants' list, but as a "non-white" he ranked with five black officers among the top six, according to the Civil Service Commission.

Commission secretary Michelle Cunko had testified that the commission changed the policeman's certification from Caucasian to Hispanic in November.

Drop Charges Of 'Trespass'

CHESTERFIELD, S.C. (AP) — Charges against Raymond Sansbury Jr., the trash truck driver, who was arrested for picking up discarded clothing in a landfill, have been dropped.

Chesterfield County Administrator Clayton Caldwell said Wednesday a decision to prosecute Sansbury on trespassing charges would have been viewed "more as persecution than prosecution."

Sansbury, 34, was arrested for violating a county ordinance that barred anyone from picking up items in landfills. At the time, he said he found several pieces of clothing he planned to use as Christmas presents for his wife and seven children.

Chicago Bankers Agree Keep City Schools Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago bankers and the city and state have agreed to provide millions of dollars to keep the nation's third-largest public school system from closing for lack of money to pay teachers and suppliers, according to reports published today.

Under the agreements, major Chicago banks would lend money to the city, and both the city and state would buy notes from the 475,000-student school system, which has been shut out of money markets since its huge deficits were revealed late last year.

The Chicago Tribune reported a tentative agreement had been reached to enable bankers, the city and the state to advance emergency funds to the school system to enable it to meet Friday's $41.5 million payroll.

The Tribune said the bailout could total as much as $300 million.

Teachers, who went unpaid Dec. 21, voted overwhelmingly Wednesday — 19,154 to 2,358 — to ask the school board to shut down the system if it cannot meet Friday's payroll. A shutdown would enable teachers to collect unemployment.

The president of the Chicago Teachers Union would not say what action would be taken if the board ignored the request.

Gov. James R. Thompson was given the proposal for city and bank participation in a bailout for the system during a meeting on Wednesday, the Chicago Sun-Times said in today's editions.

"I expect the governor to have an announcement Friday," the paper quoted one official as saying.

Thompson has insisted that the city and the banks share with the state any risks involved in getting the school system out of its jam.

According to the published accounts, the emergency funds — loans against state aid expected later — would be advanced to meet Friday's payroll, while the city and state purchases of school board notes would be aimed at getting the system through the next few months.

Gold Soaring

LONDON (AP) — Pandemonium struck the world's gold markets today as buyers frightened by the deepening international political crisis drove the price of the precious metal above $600 an ounce for the first time in history. The dollar fell sharply.

The price of gold rocketed to $649.73 in Hong Kong, then slid back to $613.26. When the London market opened, bullion traded at a record bid-and-asked price spread of $615 to $630.

The median London price of $622.50 was a $55 increase from Wednesday's closing rate of $567.50. That, too, was a record and $43 above Monday's price.

"It's frantic — up, up, up," said one London dealer.

In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion mart, trading resumed after a five-day holiday period and gold opened at a spread of $615-$625.

Stewart Names His Chairman

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Woodrow B. Sugg, retired president of Guilford Technical Institute, has been named campaign chairman for House Speaker Carl J. Stewart Jr.'s bid for lieutenant governor.

Sugg, a former legislative agent for the state Department of Community Colleges, started his new job Wednesday. It will be his first experience in a political campaign.

Sugg, 61, said he would be involved in the day-to-day operation of the campaign. He and Stewart planned to work out specific duties of the job in a meeting today.

Stewart is challenging Lt. Gov. James C. Green, who is seeking re-election.

Burned Child's Chances Slim

NEW YORK (AP) — A 1½-year-old boy remained in critical condition today, his survival chances dim, from an ordeal in which his mother allegedly tried to burn the devil out of him by putting him in a hot oven.

Leon Justin was burned everywhere except on his face and left hand when, according to police, his mother scalded him with water and roasted him in the kitchen oven of their Harlem apartment Tuesday night.

The mother, Patricia Abraham, 25, was arraigned on an assault charge Wedenesday night in Criminal Court, where Judge Martin Erdman ordered that she be given a psychiatric examination and returned for a hearing Jan. 30.

Miss Abraham was found naked when a building security patrol summoned the fire department after smelling smoke and hearing chanting from the five-room apartment. She told authorities that she was trying to save the boy because he was in a fever and possessed of the devil, according to the district attorney's office.

The burned child was rushed first to St. Luke's Hospital, then transferred to the intensive care unit in the burn center of New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, which reported on his condition. A spokesman said survival was rare in cases of children so young with burns so extensive.

U.S. Decline As An Oil Producer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — While crude oil production worldwide was rising to a new record of 2.84 billion barrels in 1979, the United States was losing its position as the world's second-largest oil producer to Saudi Arabia, according to an industry publication.

World production was up 3.7 percent over last year, according to the the Oil and Gas Journal. A sharp increase in Saudi oil flow put them in second place behind the Soviet Union. The Soviets, last year's leader, averaged 11.67 million barrels a day. The Saudis averaged 9.25 million barrels and the U.S. averaged 8.65 million — down from last year's 8.7 million.

The two left for Iran on Dec. 3. Forer returned on Dec. 23, and Dillingham followed soon after. Both men have resumed their class schedules.

Dykes said they face further discipline, but did not elaborate.

New Slant On Cable-TV Idea

CHICAGO (AP) — A new slant on the cable-television idea will be offered to the Federal Communications Commission for approval sometime this year, but the only cables will be found hundreds of miles out in space — inside a communication satellite.

Judith Elnicki, a spokeswoman for Comsat General Corp., said Wednesday the joint venture with Sears, Roebuck and Co., would be submitted for FCC approval "as early in 1980 as we can."

Sears spokesman Ernest Arms said the plan would offer subscribers more than one channel of high-quality programming and would be transmitted through roof antennas, thereby eliminating the need for cable hookups.

Wolfpack Overwhelms East Carolina, 83-68

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RALEIGH — Freshman reserve guard Dereck Whittenburg came off the bench after five minutes had gone and got N.C. State's Wolfpack off its haunches and into action.

After watching Whittenburg hit three field goals around one by Scott Parzych, senior star Hawkeye Whitney got the idea and banged in 15 first half points to spark the Wolfpack into a ten-point halftime lead and they held off two East Carolina rallies in the second half to claim an 83-68 victory over the Pirates.

Both teams had trouble finding the range during the early going which saw the Pirates lead only once, at 7-6 with 16:20 showing on the clock. That came on a driving layup by George Maynor.

But with Herb Gray, the Pirate starting center benched with three fouls after just 4:45, the East Carolina team was hampered, and Whittenburg, off the bench, banged through four baskets, followed by nine straight points by Whitney that helped power the Wolfpack out into a 27-13 lead with 9:43 left in the half.

East Carolina was able to cut the margin back to as little as nine during the rest of the half, but trailed by ten at the half.

The Pirates started hot in the second half, hitting six while State got just two in the first two and a half minutes. That trimmed it to 48-42. But after a State timeout, Whitney again took charge, hitting State's next six points to run the lead back to ten.

State slowly stretched that back out to 15 on a Kenny Matthews jumper with 8:57 left, making it 65-50. With just over seven minutes left, the lead climbed to its maximum, 17 points as Clyde Austin hit a jumper for a 69-52 lead.

East Carolina, paced by Herb Krusen put on another rally, however, cutting the lead to 69-62, and a George Maynor jumper that could have cut it to five, rolled around and off.

After that, N.C. State made ten of 12 free throws down the stretch to pull out to their final 15-point advantage.

Coach Dave Odom of East Carolina termed the contest a "very rough game at both ends of the court.

"I was afraid that if we got into that type of game we'd come out on the worst end of the game. They are a very physical and aggressive team. We hoped to be able to control the tempo, but the pressure their guards put on our guards prevented us from doing this," Odom added.

He did feel that it was to the credit of his team that they didn't fold. "There were several opportunities there for us to roll over. I think we've realized that we can play with anyone. We've made progress. State's depth was definitely a factor, with their ability to keep fresh people in the same at all times."

Odom also felt that State's continual switching of personnel caused the Pirates some confusion. "There were times when we had two people guarding the same man leaving someone open for a layup," he said.

Odom praised Whitney's play as "exceptional."

"At times, he took on the whole team. We tried to be aware of him all the times on offense, but he just got open anyway. He's also a super defensive player. Their man-to-man is the best we've faced. Whitney is the best defensive forward they have, and I told our players to try and work away from him, but they kept going to his side. They don't have five real good defensive players, but their movement and action cover this up well."

Odom was also unhappy about Gray's getting three quick fouls, and his fourth early in the second half. "They massacred us on the boards. It's probably as bad as we've been beaten all year. Gray's fourth foul early was the killer for us. We had to go with (Michael) Gibson, and he's only had one day's practice (due to illness)."

State did hold a one-sided first half rebound margin 22-12, but the Pirates came back to trail only 42-36, by the end of the game.

Craig Watts was the leading State rebounder with 10, while Whitney had eight. Gibson had six to lead East Carolina.

In scoring, Whitney finished with 23, while Whittenburg had 12, and Matthews added 10. Maynor led the Pirates with 23, while Krusen had 12.

The defeat dropped the Pirate record to 5-6, while State climbed to 8-1, having won eight in a row.

East Carolina returns to action Saturday, coming home to Minges Coliseum to face UNC-Asheville in a 7:30 p.m. game.

Rocky Mount Rocks Rampants

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose coach Jim Brewington had a ready explanation for his team's 69-58 loss to Rocky Mount Wednesday night. And why not, the reason had been sitting near by on the bench throughout the long evening.

"We were without one of our starting guards," Brewington explained. "Calvin Whichard hurt his ankle during warmups and didn't tell us until they were over. We didn't have a chance to get anyone else ready before the game started because of that."

Without him, the Rampants were forced to rely heavily on Whichard's starting mate, Wallace Brown. Brown seized the opportunity, scoring 20 points, 12 of which came in the third period when the Rampants took their final lead of the night, at 43-40.

Brown's heroics — along with Anthony Gorham's 11 points — weren't enough, however, as Rose dropped its third game of the season against five wins. Rocky Mount, led by Mitch Braswell's 20 points and Donald Mabry's 15, moves to 6-2.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Rocky Mount rocked Rose, 63-45.

Early on in the boy's game, neither team was able to gain more than a two- or three-point lead. Rocky Mount led 14-12 at the end of the first period before falling behind, 29-26, midway through the second quarter. A late spurt by the Gryphons erased the deficit and sent Rocky Mount into the dressing rooms with a 34-33 advantage.

Coming out in the opening minutes of the third quarter, the Rampants rallied to regain the lead midway through the period.

Brown led the way, canning a medium-range jumper and then, following a shot by Tyrone Tucker, hitting two more jumpers, including a 25-footer over the Gryphon's 2-3 zone.

Moments after Rose took the three-point lead Brown was called for his fourth foul, which forced him to the bench for part of the third period. During that stretch, Rocky Mount outscored Rose, 10-0, to take a 50-43 lead before Brown— who else?— came off the bench to rally the Rampants to within one, 50-49.

Brown took an inbounds pass and went the length of the court for a layup against a Rocky Mount press and then stole an inbounds pass following a Tucker tip-in, for another bucket.

Early in the final quarter neither team was able to build more than a three-point advantage. But with Rocky Mount ahead, 56-54, Rose suddenly went cold, hitting only two goals in the final five minutes while the Gryphons were scoring 11 points to seal the win.

"We're a much better ball club then we showed tonight," Brewington said. "I'm kind of disappointed. We knew we could come in here and win, but without Calvin and by making too many turnovers, we just didn't have a good chance tonight.

"It'll be a little different game when they come over there, though," he added.

Despite a 23-point performance by Sharon Williams, the Rampettes dropped their fourth game in five starts. Led by the outside shooting of Helen Thorp, who collected 23 points, and Kerri Kolehma, who added 18, the Gryphons dominated play throughout.

Rocky Mount, following a sluggish start, spurted from an 8-8 tie to lead 18-11 at the end of the opening quarter. The Gryphons build their advantage to 33-21 at the half and 52-32 at the end of the third period before coasting home with an 18-point victory.

"We were just inconsistent," Rose coach Dennis Gibson said afterward. "We stayed close for a while, but we lost our composure and made a couple of bad mistakes early and just couldn't come back.

"We played good in spurts, but we're being hurt still by our inexperience. We've only got three girls who really have played together. The rest are sophomores," he added.

The Rampettes are now 0-2 in the conference and face a suprising Wilson Beddinfield team Friday night.

"That's going to be a big game for us," Gibson said. "Beddingfield is the Cinderella team in the conference. They've beaten Northern Nash and they're really good."

Campbell Leads Tigers To Rout Over Tar Heels

By The Associated Press

Sixth-ranked North Carolina returned to Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action Wednesday after playing in a London tournament, but the Tar Heels didn't receive much of a welcome home.

Instead, they were wrestled to a 93-76 loss at the hands of Clemson and Tiger standout John "Moose" Campbell.

The 6-foot-10 center scored 28 points, half of them dunks, and hinted that his erratic career may be on the upswing.

In games involving other Atlantic Coast Conference teams, Virginia defeated Wake Forest 64-59 and North Carolina State defeated East Carolina 83-68.

Clemson held a six-point lead over North Carolina at halftime, but the Tigers extended the lead to 25 points with 10 minutes left to play.

Campbell hit 12 of 15 shots from the field for his best game this season, and he added seven rebounds and four assists.

"He's vastly improved," said North Carolina coach Dean Smith of Campbell, who shared most valuable players honors in the Far West Classic tournament last week. "We couldn't keep him off the ball."

All-American Mike O'Koren led the Tar Heels with 16 points.

North Carolina falls to 5-2 overall while Clemson moves to 9-1. It was the conference opener for both teams.

Despite a number of ailing players, Virginia's 13th-ranked Cavaliers managed to lead Wake Forest by as many as 15 points during the first half.

But when a limping Ralph Sampson left the Virginia lineup, the Demon Deacons pulled to 41-32. Sampson sprained his ankle in practice Tuesday but he was able to play 19 minutes and score 8 points before he left the game.

Virginia starter Lee Raker also was absent from the lineup because of a concussion and shoulder separation he suffered in Saturday's game against Old Dominion University.

Both coaches credited the Virginia win to the team's hot shooting, 58.6 per was probablyty good," said Deacon coach Carl Tacey. "Tonight was probably our od," said Deacon coach Carl Tacey. "Tonight was probably our poorest shooting night of the season."

The Deacons fall to 6-4 overall and 0-1 in the conference. Virginia upped its record to 11-1 and its ACC record to 2-0.

East Carolina was unable to stem the tide Wednesday as North Carolina State's Hawkeye Whitney poured in 23 points for a Wolfpack win.

Whitney and Dereck Whittenburg, who contributed 12 points, worked to put the Wolfpack at a 46-36 halftime advantage. With a 23-point effort by George Maynor, the Pirates cut the lead to seven but were unable to stop the Wolfpack.

"I had hoped that we would be able to control the tempo better early," said Pirate coach Dave Odum. "But they massacred us on the boards

Perkins Leaves N.C. State

Former North Pitt High School star Donnie Perkins has left the N.C. State Wolfpack, Coach Norm Sloan revealed last night.

Perkins, who had played in all eight games, but averaged only 4.6 points a game, apparently left the team following Monday night's game with Davidson.

He was not with the team last night against East Carolina, and Sloan said he had been advised by the Bethel junior that he was leaving the team. Sloan said he didn't know what Perkins' reasons were, but felt they were due to lack of playing time.

Alabama No. 1...Again

By The Associated Press

Time marches on, but the Alabama Crimson Tide rolls along in the same place — No.1 in The Associated Press final college football poll for the second year in a row.

Alabama won the national championship following the bowl games last year, beating Southern California in a hotly disputed vote. This year's balloting, also seriously challenged on the West Coast, finished with Alabama No.1 and Southern Cal again in hot pursuit.

Coach Bear Bryant's Crimson Tide received 45 outright first-place votes to 20 for Southern Cal from a nationwide panel of 67 sports writers and broadcasters Wednesday. Two voters split their ballot between Alabama and Southern Cal, giving the Crimson Tide 46 first-place votes to 21 for the Trojans.

Oklahoma finished third for the second straight year, followed by Ohio State and Houston.

Alabama began New Year's Day in second place, 1½ points behind top-ranked Ohio State and 8½ points ahead of No.3 Southern Cal. But the Crimson Tide, the only major college to finish with a perfect 12-0 record, convincingly beat a pesky Arkansas team, 21-9, in the Sugar Bowl.

Then in the Rose Bowl, Southern Cal, which had a tie with Stanford as the only blemish on its record, squeaked by Ohio State 17-16.

In total points, Alabama received 1,317 out of a possible 1,340, while Southern Cal had 1,289. In contrast to the final regular season poll, when eight voters kept Alabama out of the top three, only two board members had the Tide as low as third this time. It was Alabama's fifth national championship — all under Bryant — since The AP poll began in 1936.

The Tide received all 21 first-place ballots from voters in the South, 2½ of the 12 ballots in the West, seven of eight in the Southwest, nine of 16 in the Midwest and 6½ of 10 in the East.

The 66-year-old Bryant, college football's winningest active coach with 296 victories, said he was "highly pleased, but not surprised" at the final rankings "because I thought all along we had a good chance of finishing first. I decided not to worry about it one way or the other."

Robinson, who said after the Rose Bowl that he considered his Trojans No.1, said Wednesday: "Certainly, as you look over this year and last, the two best teams in the country are Alabama and USC. We'd have been happy if someone voted us No.1, but I can't be angry if someone voted Alabama No.1."

Oklahoma, 11-1-0, moved from fifth to third after routing previously unbeaten Florida State 24-7 in the Orange Bowl Tuesday, totalling 1,163 points. "Alabama definitely should be the national champion and Southern Cal No.2," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer.

Ohio State, 11-1-0, finished fourth with 1,160 points, while Houston, 11-1-0, a 17-14 Cotton Bowl winner over Nebraska, jumped from eighth to fifth.

Florida State and Pittsburgh, both 11-1-0, were sixth and seventh, respectively, followed by Arkansas, Nebraska and Tennessee.

The Second Ten had Washington, Texas, Brigham Young, Baylor, North Carolina, Auburn, Temple, Michigan, Indiana and Penn State.

Rams, Oilers Hoping Injuries Heal For Sunday

By The Associated Press

As it turned out, injuries were just what the doctor ordered for the Los Angeles Rams and the Houston Oilers. But neither team wants to go that route again in its conference playoff games on Sunday.

Los Angeles beat the Dallas Cowboys 21-19 last Sunday, in part because the uncertain status of several players in the Rams' secondary forced them to carry nine defensive backs on the roster. But Pat Thomas, Rod Perry and Dave Elmendorf did play and the extra backs were then deployed in a seven-man alignment that plugged up Dallas' shotgun offense.

Without the injuries, the Rams would not have had the flexibility to insert the extra back in the defensive secondary that hampered quarterback Roger Staubach and forced him into four incomplete passes in Dallas' last series.

"Football is a strange game," said Ram defensive coach Bud Carson. "I guess that was the one thing that came out of all those injuries.

"It was a unique situation because we had so many people hurt in the secondary. We kept the ones we acquired because they did a real good job on the special teams and we weren't sure about the status of Perry, Elmendorf and Thomas."

The Rams don't expect to utilize their special anti-pass formation against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the National Football Conference championship in Tampa Sunday. The Bucs, led by running back Ricky Bell, are more run-oriented and do not operate out of the shotgun.

The Rams, however, may have to do a different kind of realignment because of the questionable status of star defensive end Jack Youngblood, who suffered a hairline fracture of his left leg Sunday.

Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi said Wednesday he expected Youngblood to play, but a final decision won't be made until later in the week. If Youngblood can't start or play fulltime, the Rams plan to use second-year pro Reggie Doss.

The Oilers are still badly bandaged. They managed to upset the San Diego Chargers 17-14 last Saturday without Earl Campbell, the NFL's leading rusher, quarterback Dan astorini and receiver Kenny Burrough.

Recognizing that the offense was in a lower gear, the Houston defense played inspirational football. Who knows whether the defense would have played as well if the offense wasn't wounded?

But Houston Coach Bum Phillips knows that undermanned teams don't generally beat the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers, who blasted the Oilers 34-5 in the American Football Conference championship last year.

"When I die I want you to put this on my tombstone," Phillips joked Wednesday. "He would have lived a lot longer if he hadn't played the Pittsburgh Steelers six times in two years."

Campbell, who injured his groin against Denver 13 days ago, returned to workouts Wednesday and said he was ready to run. His condition was listed as questionable, as was Burrough's. Pastorini, who also injured his groin in the Denver game, was listed as doubtful, although he said he expected to work out later in the week before the team leaves for Sunday's AFC championship game in Pittsburgh.

Kentucky Nips Auburn, 67-65

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Auburn lost to a great player. North Carolina lost to an improving one. Missouri fell to a fine road team, Canisius was beaten by a very good team and Louisiana State was taken by a surprising one.

It all added up to two Top Ten teams being upset Wednesday, one Top Tenner barely squeaking by and the other two romping to victory as the nation's major college basketball teams got back into action following the New Year's holiday.

Auburn fell to No.2 Kentucky 67-65 on Kyle Macy's 25-foot shot at the buzzer. Sixth-rated North Carolina was upset 93-76 at Clemson as John "Moose" Campbell had seven dunks, 28 points and seven rebounds. DePaul, No.3, won its second big game on the road this season with a decisive 92-79 whipping of 12th-ranked Missouri. Syracuse stretched its homecourt victory skein to 50 games with a 81-49 pasting of Canisius and No.4 Louisiana State was handed its first loss when Vanderbilt shot 70 percent in the second half for a 77-66 triumph.

After Macy, who led all scorers with 21 points, canned his game-winning bucket, Auburn Coach Sonny Smith was lavish in praising the ace backcourtman.

"It wasn't a mistake that beat us," said Smith, "it was a great player that beat us. We knew what Macy was going to try to do. I think the kid is a super player and he made a great shot."

"Kyle handled the main chores and took charge when he had to," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall. "But we missed eight layups in the first half, shot 31 percent, had no defense, no rebounding. I do not understand such a letdown. It has happened every year."

The 12-1 Wildcats were flat after beating Notre Dame 86-80 Saturday.

North Carolina, 5-2, fell before the wrath of a "Moose."

"He's vastly improved," said Tar Heels' Coach Dean Smith of Campbell, who hit 12 of 15 shots and dominated the backboards. "I thought Campbell was just great inside. He's so strong and holds off so well in there. We couldn't keep him off the ball."

"Campbell shows improvement with each game," added Bill Foster, coach of 9-1 Clemson. "He's playing with intensity this season. You could see it in his face tonight."

DePaul has been at its best on the road, upending UCLA 99-94 at Pauley Pavilion on Dec. 15, then taking Missouri at Kansas City Wednesday night. Mark Aguirre gunned in a season-high 34 points for the Blue Demons, 9-0, who handed Missouri it first loss in 11 games.

Syracuse had little trouble with Canisius' slowdown in improving to 9-0. The Orange shot 70 percent from the field in the second half while Canisius managed just nine percent.

Louis Orr had 15 points and Roosevelt Bouie blocked four shots in the second half. "It's like a four-point play everytime he blocks a shot," said Orange Coach Jim Boeheim.

Vanderbilt, 7-3, also hit for 70 percent in the second half — 17 of 24 — to drop LSU to 8-1. Mike Rhodes had 29 points, 19 in the second half, offsetting 30 points by the Tigers' Rudy Macklin.

Vikings Roll By Rams

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings romped to a 96-66 victory over Greene Central last night as they resumed Eastern Carolina Conference play. The Greene Central girls upset Conley, 61-53, in their game.

Conley ran away to a 22-10 lead after the first period of play, and upped that to 39-21 by the end of the first half. The Vikings continued to pour in on against the Rams, raising their lead to 66-38 during the third period. They finished off Greene Central with a 30-28 final period margin.

Mitchell Moore led Conley with 18, while Keith Gatlin had 17, O'Hara Parker had 12 and Carnell Burney had 11. David Joyner led Greene Central with 24, while Roderick Lane had 20 and Cecil Streeter had 10.

Notes:

Bowl Day — otherwise known as New Years Day — has come and gone and it's time for the number one team in the nation to be announced by the AP and UPI.

The vote here goes to Alabama, with Southern Cal a close second. The Crimson Tide finished the season as the only unbeaten, untied team in the nation and were impressive in their win over Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl.

The Trojans, lead by tailback Charles White, who may be the best running back in the nation this year (yes, even better than Oklahoma's Billy Sims), were unbeaten this season, although they were tied by Stanford earlier in the season.

The only way to find out which team is better would be to have a playoff, something that won't happen this season.

This is the time of year that many awards are given throughout football. Here are a few of our own:

NOMINATION FOR THE MOST USELESS COMMENTS DURING AN NFC PLAYOFF GAME: The winner is George Allen, the former Washington Redskin coach.

Said Allen during the Los Angeles-Dallas battle last Sunday': "You know, Tony Dorsett's longest run from scrimmage against the Redskins is 11 yards."

MOST PERCEPTIVE COMMENT BY A COACH AS HE RUNS OFF THE FIELD AT HALFTIME: The winner is Paul "Bear" Bryant of Alabama.

Said Bryant at halftime of the Sugar Bowl when asked about the play of his offensive line: "They should be playing well, they're all seniors." He then added, with a chuckle, "And I coached them."

THE SUPER BOWL CHAMP: The winner is (or will be as soon as its played) Pittsburgh. The Steelers will dispose of Houston this weekend and then take on Los Angeles, which will beat Tampa Bay.

During the two-week interval between the NFC and AFC title games and the Super Bowl, the Steelers will feel so sorry for the Rams that they will allow both L.A. and Tampa Bay to take the field against them.

It won't matter, however. The Steelers will still win.

PIRATE NOTES...After ECU's loss last night to N.C. State, the Pirates go on a two-game road trip, traveling to Oral Roberts (3-6) and to Baptist (S.C.) before returning home January 5 to meet UNC-Asheville...Guard George Maynor leads ECU in scoring, averaging 14.5 points game... Herb Krusen is averaging 11.1 points a game and is hitting 51.5 percent of his shots while Herb Gray is averaging just over 10 points a contest while also leading the team in rebounding at 8.4 a game... Rosie Thompson leads the ECU women on a three-game road trip beginnning tonight...Thompson is averaging 22.4 points a game as the Pirates take on Marshal tonight followed by West Virginia Friday night and then Virginia Tech Sunday...Kathy Riley is the women Pirates second leading scorer, averaging 16.2 a game...

North Carolina State improved its record to 5-6 for the season.

In other games involving North Carolina teams, Virginia Commonwealth squeezed by North Carolina-Charlotte 75-73, Eastern Kentucky defeated North Carolina-Wilmington 70-60 and Jackson State University downed North Carolina A&T 70-67.

Charlotte's Bobby Potts made a last-ditch effort to tie the game with Virginia at 73-73 during the last five seconds of the game. He hit a jump shot but the shot was disallowed when teammate Phil Ward was caught walking.

Monty Knight led Virginia with a career-high 27 points.

The lead changed hands 17 times during the game but neither team held more than a 5-point lead.

Chad Kinch had 14 points for Charlotte, and Ward added 12.

The Rams improved their record to 7-3 overall while the 49ers fell to 5-6.

Eastern Kentucky took the lead over Wilmington with 3:53 left in the first half. The Colonels never trailed after that and stretched the lead to as many as 15 points.

James Tillman led Eastern Kentucky with 29 points. The team advances to a 4-3 record.

Garry Cooper led Wilmington with 18 points and Danny Davis added 13. The team falls to 5-3 for the season.

Jackson State raised its record to 4-6 while North Carolina A&T dropped to 3-3 Wednesday.

Guard Kenny O'Banner led Jackson State with 26 points. North Carolina was led by Harold Royster with 29 points and James Horace with 16.

Bowls: A Sparkling Climax To Season

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Stop the presses. Call off the dogs. Forget all the sermonizing, pontificating and experting of the past about the necessity of establishing a championship playoff system in college football.

If you'll excuse the reversal, we'd like to take the other tack.

Leave the bowl games alone.

They provide a sparkling climax to the long drudgery of the regular season with their festive air, their pomp and pageantry and the intersectional controversies generated over who is No.1.

Who is No.1, anyhow?

Regardless of the choice of Alabama as No.1 in the post-bowl poll Wednesday — and the polls, incidentally, should remain an institution not to be tampered with — you're not going to convince everybody, or even a fraction of everybody, that one team is better than all the others.

In the Deep South, how could anybody even suggest that Alabama's unbeaten Crimson Tide doesn't deserve to repeat, although it beat one of the secondary teams of the Southwest Conference? You can't do the Bear that way.

But out here on the Pacific Coast, sentiment is just as strong that the real No.1 is massive, talented Southern Cal, which knocked off previously No.1 Ohio State in a battle of unbeaten conference champions. And nobody can tell Southwesterners that mighty Oklahoma, with the hard-running Billy Sims, couldn't beat the lot of them — lined up, one by one.

Let the people argue until they're blue in the face. It's stimulating. It's healthy. And it hurts nobody.

Meanwhile, try to imagine what would happen if the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) attempted, as many of us have argued for years, to install a playoff plan.

First of all, it would be unwieldy. It would add tremendous strain to a program that already has stretched to 11 games and cannot bend further without infringing on the players' academic responsibilites.

More than that, it would be antiseptic. There is no way such a playoff could capture the color and the carnival holiday spirit that has been built up by the tradition of the bowls.

Because of the massiveness of the project, chances are no truer champion could be determined than the one that comes unofficially out of the New Year's Day madness.

One only has to witness one Rose Bowl pageant to realize that its demise — like that of the other bowls — would be a great tragedy.

McGinnis Back, Leads Nuggets By Bullets

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

George McGinnis' return to the Denver Nuggets' lineup wasn't an auspicious one but the Washington Bullets' first visit to Seattle this year certainly was.

McGinnis returned from his three-game suspension by National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence O'Brien for crashing into referee Jess Kersey in a game at Seattle last month with a short performance. The 6-foot-8 forward was thrown out of the Nuggets' 135-116 victory over Detroit Wednesday at 3:44 of the second period by picking up two technical fouls. He disagreed with referee Hue Hollins' call of a rebounding foul on him. At the time, McGinnis had seven points, seven rebounds, five assists and three blocked shots.

While Big George was having a quick night in Denver, the Bullets and SuperSonics worked overtime before Washington won 139-134 in two extra sessions. The last time the Bullets were in the Kingdome, they were in the process of losing the NBA title to the Sonics.

In other NBA games, it was Los Angeles 127, Indiana 120 as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar became the No.5 scorer in league history; San Antonio 118, Phoenix 109; Kansas City 128, Utah 121 in overtime; Boston 111, Houston 103; San Diego 103, New Jersey 97, and Golden State 111, Portland 92.

Bullets 139, SuperSonics 134 2 OT

The Bullets rode Elvin Hayes' 34 points, including nine in the second overtime, past Seattle.

The Sonics got a game-high 36 points from Dennis Johnson but he couldn't help in the final 1:03 of the second OT, when the Bullets scored eight points.

Lakers 127, Pacers 120

Abdul-Jabbar passed Elgin Baylor and now has 23,170 career points. He tallied 32 points against the Pacers for his 184th consecutive game scoring in double figures.

The Pacers got 32 points from Johnny Davis and 31 from James Edwards.

Spurs 118, Suns 109

George Gervin poured in 42 points and combined with James Silas (20) and Mike Evans (16) to score 24 of the Spurs' 32 fourth-quarter points.

Kings 128, Jazz 121, OT

Scott Wedman connected for a career-high 45 points as the Kings moved one-half game ahead of Milwaukee in the Midwest Division. He hit a three-point field goal with five seconds remaining in regulation to force the extra session, then scored nine of the first 11 Kings points in OT.

Celtics 111, Rockets 103

After Rick Barry ignited the Rockets with three three-point shots and 12 straight points, Boston's Cedric Maxwell took charge, hitting for 12 points in the last 5:22 to give him 29 altogether.

Clippers 103, Nets 97

Lloyd Free put in 31 points — 21 in the first half — as San Diego evened its record at 21-21. Mike Newlin had 27 points for the Nets.

Warriors 111, Blazers 92

Golden State broke a three-game losing streak and extended Portland's unhappy skein to 12 straight losses on the road as Sonny Parker and Robert Parish had 25 points.

First Lady Of 20th Century-Fox Vows New Trend

NEW PRODUCTION PREXY — Sherry Lansing, new productions president of 20th Century-Fox, vows to turn out movies with "someone to root for ...." on her first day on the job in Hollywood. (AP Laserphoto)

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In the movie industry, where moguls are always male, 20th Century-Fox kicked off the 1980s with a shocker — naming Sherry Lansing president of production, the first female studio chief in Hollywood history.

In her first day on the job — which reportedly pays $300,000 a year — the 35-year-old Ms. Lansing vowed to turn out movies with "someone to root for, movies that make you laugh and cry."

This philosophy shone through two of her projects at Columbia Pictures — "China Syndrome" and "Kramer vs. Kramer," recent winner of the New York Film Critics best film award.

Her appointment brought a bold "Variety" headline: "20th-Fox Gets a First Lady," but Ms. Lansing was reluctant to focus on her status as a woman.

"I am very excited by the challenges of the job, but I hope as the '80s progress, the appointment of a woman to a major post will not be so newsworthy, that it will become natural for women to have high positions in every industry," she said.

However, in a wide-ranging interview at her new office, Ms. Lansing admitted her story is unique — the tale of a bright, beautiful young woman who taught math in the ghetto, then sought a new career.

Ms. Lansing, daughter of a Chicago furniture dealer, graduated summa cum laude from Northwestern University with majors in math, English and theater. Then she headed for Los Angeles.

"I taught math in Watts for three years and I loved it. I guess part of me wanted to be a social worker," she said. "I stopped when it became repetitive. I was becoming the kind of teacher I hated. I didn't have the passion anymore."

She left teaching and fell back on her most obvious asset — her extraordinary good looks.

"I didn't know what I wanted to do and modeling gave me the maximum amount of time and a lucrative income. I was very lucky as a model. I was under contract to Max Factor and Alberto Culver."

Then came the spark, a minor role in "Rio Lobo" with John Wayne. She "became fascinated with film," taking courses and going to the movies five times a week. "It wasn't work. I loved film," she said.

She landed a job with independent producer Raymond Wagner, reading and synopsizing scripts. She was soon being asked for opinions.

"As I progressed, they let me come to story meetings, but at first I was told to be silent," she said. Eventually, she was allowed to speak and became an associate producer.

Two years later, she moved on to Talent Associates, hunting TV talent on the West Coast. "I left there because it was mainly television oriented. ... I found myself going out to the movies every night rather than sitting home watching TV. I realized I had a passion for movies," she said.

Ms. Lansing joined MGM studios in 1975 as executive story editor and later was promoted to vice president for creative affairs. Two years ago, she left MGM and joined Columbia Pictures as vice president in charge of production.

"At Columbia, my scope was broadened. There were two production vice presidents and we were responsible for cutting, editing, even distribution. And out of that came 'China Syndrome' and 'Kramer vs. Kramer,'" she said proudly.

Ms. Lansing sees a new wave of executives like her — people who love movies more than just about anything.

"Films are a vision of the few and they come out of somebody's passion," she said. "They are my passion. I'm excited about this job because I want to make good movies. It's really that simple."

Her appointment as president of Fox seemed to surprise everyone except Sherry Lansing.

A cordial, energetic woman with a firm handshake, she exudes enthusiasm and confidence that her success will continue uninterrupted. Her secret?

"The only thing I can honestly say about myself is that I've worked hard," Ms. Lansing said. "When I was in college, I got all A's, not because I was smarter than anyone else, but because I worked harder.

"If I had to give anyone advice, I'd say, enjoy the process and don't be obsessed with goals. ... I never even fantasized this job. I loved what I was doing every step of the way."

Ms. Lansing, who is divorced, considered how her new position would affect her personal life. "I don't see why this job should prevent me from loving or even having children. ... I certainly would like to have a relationship with someone I love. It makes life better. ... How can you make movies if you haven't lived?"

Ms. Lansing, who said she believes in "equality for everyone," remarked that her climb to the top of a highly competitive industry is a revolutionary concept to her mother, a housewife.

"My mother wanted me to get married and have children. I got married and divorced, and as I continued my career I knew she worried about me," she said. "It wasn't until about two years ago that I noticed my mother was proud of me and valued what I was doing.

"I called her this weekend to tell her about my new job, and she was thrilled."

There seems to be considerable confusion about lead-directing doubles. It is not at all uncommon to hear something like: "Partner, when I doubled four spades I expected to you lead dummy's suit." Or, "Sorry, partner, I thought when you doubled five clubs I was obliged to lead a heart."

This is all sheer drivel. When a player doubles a suit game, it is because he thinks he can beat the contract, not to request the lead of some strange suit.

However, there are two cases where the double does require the lead of a specific suit. First and foremost is when the opponents have bid a slam. In this instance, a double by the non-leader calls for the lead of the suit first bid by dummy. This will frequently permit third hand to ruff the opening lead, or to collect two fast tricks because he has the ace-queen over dummy's king.

Then there are doubles of no trump contracts. If the defending side has not been in the auction, the double strongly suggests, but does not demand, the lead of dummy's first-bid suit if no better lead is available. If, however, dummy's suit has been rebid, even that is no longer true — the opening leader should simply make his natural lead. But where the defensive side has entered the bidding, the double absolutely demands the lead of the defender's suit, and that doesn't mean maybe!

In today's hand South became declarer at three no trump after West had opened the bidding with one spade. East did not think much of his hand, except for the queen in his partner's suit, but that made it likely that the opponents had contracted for game with only one spade stopper. It was also clear to East that partner's spade holding was such that a lead of that suit might not be appealing. To insure an opening spade lead, he made a very sporting double.

We wish we could report that East's daring tactic met with deserved success. Unfortunately, West paid absolutely no attention to his partner's double. He opened the king of hearts. Declarer won the first trick, drove out the ace of diamonds and claimed nine tricks.

Observe that a spade lead would set up five tricks for the defense before declarer could take nine!

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" FCC Recommends New AM Radio Channels

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — AM radio must be coming back to life. First there was all that commotion about AM stereo, and now the Federal Communications Commission has recommended that new channels be created on the AM dial.

Of course, AM radio was never dead, just dozing for awhile. While AM stood by and watched, FM, with its clear sound and stereo capacity, burgeoned in the music-loving 1970s. Last year, for the first time, an FM station (KMET) topped the radio ratings in the busy Los Angeles radio market.

AM stereo, a technical wonder which I couldn't explain if I wanted to, is a definite advance specifically aimed at enhancing AM's status in the competition with FM. The "expansion" of the AM band to allow more stations doesn't affect the AM-FM competition.

Currently, the AM band is comprised of 107 channels, with a spacing of 10 kilohertz between channels. The FCC recommendation would shrink the space to nine kilohertz, which would create 12 new channels.

Since stations broadcasting in one area must be spaced four channels apart, the biggest possible increase in one city would be three stations. The FCC says that as many as 1,400 new stations could be created nationwide, but the number is likely to be far less because of frequency complications.

The FCC's main reasoning in wanting to "expand" the AM dial is to satisfy at least some of the 5,000 or so broadcasters with pending applications for new stations. Also, the new channels would allow some current broadcasters to upgrade their status, say from second class to first class, thereby gaining frequency protection which allows for more clarity and distance in transmission.

In making its recommendation, the FCC was also considering National Public Radio, which currently has the capacity to reach only two-thirds of the country, and minority broadcasters who may be able to open stations on the new channels.

The proposed change has some time-consuming hurdling to do before it becomes a change in fact. The FCC task force in charge of spacing will present its recommendation to the Region 2 Administrative AM Broadcast Conference next March. That conference will mark the first time all countries in the Western Hemisphere have attempted to standardize technical operations.

It is a two-part conference that doesn't conclude until November 1981. If approved there, the FCC recommendation would face approval of the International Telecommunications Union in Geneva, where it will likely face no problem because Europe already has nine-kilohertz spacing.

CAMERA Angles

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

So you've taken a picture by the light of a match. Big deal! Also ... big grain, high contrast, fuzziness caused by camera movement or subject movement, or your inability to focus in the dim light.

Oh, maybe you were lucky and did get a sharp picture. And, maybe, it was interesting, different, unusual. But why is it that so many people today are taking pictures in very dim light, settling for just getting an image on film when they could, with very little effort, get well exposed pictures?

Why rely on lenses that are less sharp when wide open, or forced development of high-speed films that result in grainy pictures? Are we getting lazier or have we forgotten a few of the tricks of yesteryear?

Not so many years ago press photographers carried a large case containing a Speed Graphic camera, film packs or cut film holders, a battery-powered flash unit with plenty of flash bulbs, extra extension flash units, an extra lens or two and a focusing cloth. A few smart ones also carried with them two or three 250-watt photoflood bulbs. The case, when loaded, could weigh as much as 35 to 40 pounds.

Today's photographer carries two or three 35mm cameras, lenses, a small strobe unit or two and, if he's smart, a few photoflood bulbs. His bag weighs in at around 10 to 15 pounds, a fraction of what his brother-in-arms carried only a couple of decades ago.

Consider that the average amateur photographer carries even less! Then why should another pound of equipment be such a big headache? Or is it that everyone has become so brainwashed with the idea of taking pictures in natural light, no matter how bad, that quality has been kicked out the window?

Why not boost the light level in a room with photofloods? I like the small 250-watt bulbs that look like regular light bulbs.

Try screwing two or three of these into the sockets of table lamps or overhead lights. It can boost the light level by two or three stops.

If you need more light than that there are adapters on the market that screw into a regular lamp socket into which you can plug a small 650-watt quartzlite. That will boost the light level another stop or two.

SEEING THE LIGHT: AP photographer G. Paul Burnett holds a homemade spring clamp, electrical socket, adapter and 650-watt quartzlite. Normal exposure without the light in this room was 1-60th of a second at f 2.8 with Tri X film rated normally. With the lamp on, it jumped to 1-60th of a second of f 11.

Porter's Camera store, P.O. Box 628, Cedar Falls, Iowa, 50613, lists such an adapter in its latest catalogue for $12.50, if you are unable to get one through your local electrical store.

Just in case there are no lamps available in a room, make your own. Make up a light socket attached to a spring clamp that can be attached to something high, such as the top of a door. I don't use reflectors. I like the light to scatter evenly around the room.

Any photoflood or quartzlite will do when shooting black and white film. If you want to shoot color, make sure you're using the right lamp and the right film. Each lamp has a color temperature rating, called kelvin. Type B tungsten color film needs a lamp with a 3200K rating.

A few words of warning: (1) Don't plug too many of these into the same outlet. You may blow a fuse. (2) Make sure that the lamps are positioned normally, that is where existing lights are, or, if you're using an extension, high and in a corner behind you. (3) These lamps get very hot so let them cool off before you touch them.

Now, if you're one of those people with an expensive camera and big lenses, try going the photoflood or quartzlite route, switch to a slower film and see how much sharper your pictures are. Stop playing with matches. You might start a fire.

Quieter Life For Basque Since WWII

WARDEN, Wash. (AP) — After hectic times as a Basque operative in the French Resistance during World War II, Miguel Etulain says he's satisfied with life as a feedlot manager and farmer.

Etulain cherishes a personal letter of commendation from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander, and an article about his World War II adventures which appeared in a national magazine's overseas edition.

He still shows traces of bitterness over the policies imposed in Spain during his boyhood years by the late Generalisimo Francisco Franco, who banned the teaching of the Basque language in school, the showing of the Basque flag and almost any gathering of Basques.

"During the Franco reign, police were brutal," Etulain recalls. "You couldn't have more than four people talking on the street."

He said his family had fled from violence that erupted between Basque nationalists and Franco's Falange, moving to the more liberal French part of the Pyrenees Mountains which his people inhabit.

"I was involved with the French Resistance when I was 12 years old in 1942," he said. "I would guide pilots through our area. I picked them up in St. Jean de Luz and took them to Urrugne."

Etulain's efforts enabled more than 50 Allied pilots whose planes had gone down in Nazi-occupied France to escape to Spain.

"What I did a lot was carry letters and documents through the line on bicycle to a farm in Urrugne," he said. "Then a guide would cross the border."

Such activity came naturally to a people accustomed to widespread smuggling, he said.

Before the war, he recalled, "they would smuggle anything — livestock, coffee, shoes, anything."

His small band during the war, code-named "Comet" by U.S. forces, was the subject of an article, "Comet, the Heroic Life Line," which appeared in the European edition of Reader's Digest in 1969.

Matching Funds For Geo. Bush

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican presidential candidate George Bush has raised enough money through private campaign contributions to qualify him for matching federal funds.

The Federal Election Commission notified the Treasury Department Wednesday that Bush is entitled to $859,091 in federal money. Bush becomes the fourth candidate to be certified for matching funds. The others are President Carter, Lyndon LaRouche, both Democrats, and Republican Sen. Howard Baker. The commission is considering claims for matching funds from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., Democrats, and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and Sen. Robert Dole, Republicans.

More Space Discoveries

By JAMES J. DOYLE

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Twin planetary probes Voyager 1 and Voyager 2, which gave the world a spectacular look at giant Jupiter and its biggest satellites in 1979, are bound for more discoveries in the new year.

Voyager 1 reached Jupiter first last March and radioed back the best pictures yet of Jupiter, banded with pastel hues. It took the first closeup photographs of Jupiter's system of Galilean satellites, as brightly colored as Christmas tree bulbs.

The instrument-packed spacecraft, drawing energy from nuclear generators, swept within 173,000 miles of Jupiter's cloud tops March 5, sailed past volcanic Io, and ice-covered Ganymede and a day later went past heavily cratered Callisto.

Voyager 2 made a similar approach in July, adding more information and pictures on the planet's system of moons. Both of the American space probes were hurled by Jupiter's gravity onward toward Saturn.

More than 32,000 pictures were sent back to Jet Propulsion Laboratory along with volumes of science data for study.

Voyager 1 will rendezvous with Saturn and its 10 moons next November. Among its satellite targets will be Titan, a massive moon with an intriguing hydrocarbon atmosphere.

Voyager 2, nine months behind by then, will make its pass of the yellow, ringed planet in August of 1981.

More than 50,000 photographs will have been sent back to Earth by the time the two spacecraft finish their survey of the Saturnian system and continue on to the outer edge of the solar system.

The information already gathered on the Jovian system is still being compiled and scientists at JPL have said it may take years to absorb it all. But the initial discoveries were startling.

Io, bright orange and closest of the Galilean moons to Jupiter, was found to have active volcanos spewing material more than 100 miles into space. Its surface is scarred by volcanic features.

Europa, the next moon out from Jupiter, was found to be icy with a lacework of trenches. Cream-white and tan in color photos, no feature higher than about 1,500 feet was found by scientists.

Ganymede had two distinct types of terrain, cratered and grooved. Callisto, fourth of the Galilean moons out from the planet, appeared to have the most heavily cratered body in the solar system.

Jupiter was found to have a ring of particles, and pictures taken through the ring showed another body in the background, at first believed to be a distant star. It wasn't until late October that members of the Voyager imaging team confirmed it was a newly-discovered moon, closer than any other body to the gaseous cloud tops of Jupiter, and the fastest-moving body in the solar system.

The moon, the 14th known moon of Jupiter, is only 18 to 25 miles in diameter and orbits the planet at 36,000 miles from the cloud tops at a speed estimated at 67,000 mph. It has the shortest orbital period, only seven hours and eight minutes, of any satellite.

It was named 1979J1 pending a more fitting name to be chosen later by the International Astronomical Union.

Another possible moon, further out from Jupiter, awaits confirmation.

In addition, the Voyagers spotted super lightning bolts on the planet's dark side.

It was already known that Jupiter was larger than everything else put together in the solar system except the sun. But the Voyagers found that the planet's magnetic field was larger than the sun also, stretching millions of miles into space.

Jupiter and Saturn, the two major targets of the Voyagers, are both giant gas balls composed mostly of hydrogen and helium with no apparent solid surfaces. They radiate more energy than they receive from the sun and Jupiter and its satellites form a kind of miniature solar system.

Saturn, nearly 900 million miles from the sun, has 10 known moons and a spectacular ring system which appears to consist of chunks of ice and snow.

Most of its satellites are believed to be icy. But Titan with its atmosphere is different and had been thought to be a possible shelter for life. But the Pioneer 11 spacecraft passed it in September and found that temperatures there are apparently too cold to support life.

Voyager 1 will make its closest approach to Saturn, 126,646 miles, on Nov. 12, 1980. Voyager 2 will fly by at 102,000 miles Aug. 27, 1981, and its current schedule assumes an encounter with distant Uranus in January of 1986.

Voyager 1, as of Jan. 1, 1980, will be 603,161,000 miles from Earth speeding toward Saturn at 48,614 mph relative to the sun. Voyager 2 will be 516,209,000 miles from Earth traveling at 41,642 mph.

A constant stream of information was being sent back to Earth on interplantery incidents and instrument checks. It will take about an hour for signals traveling at the speed of light to traverse the distance from Voyager 1 and 55 minutes from Voyager 2.

See Doubling Of Coal Use

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The energy crisis is expected to benefit the coal industry. A recent study by Predicasts, Inc. says coal consumption is expected to more than double by 1990 because of the dramatic shift in energy prices and supplies in the 1970s. Research analyst Kevin Swift projects a jump in coal demand from 624 million tons last year to 1.3 billion in 1990, when coal will account for 28 percent of total United States energy consumption.

Crackdown On Hans Kung Is Part Of The Picture

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Vatican, with the apparent approval of Pope John Paul II, has begun a major crackdown on liberal and progressive theologians who dissent or challenge the church's traditional teachings.

The harshest step in the crackdown to date was the mid-December announcement that liberal Swiss theologian Hans Kung can no longer be considered a Roman Catholic theologian and should stop teaching theology at West Germany's Tubingen University.

Kung, best known in this country for his best selling book, "On Being Christian," was stripped of his official right to teach for his views on papal infallibility.

But the crackdown on Kung was not an isolated matter.

Instead, it appears to be part of a general move against liberals and progressives as part of John Paul's efforts to maintain the church's traditional theology and religious practices.

Nor is the move aimed only at individual theologians.

In recent weeks John Paul has also sharply criticized the Society of Jesus, better known as the Jesuits, and orderd the Jesuit Superior General Father Pedro Arrupe, to bring the Jesuits more into line with Catholic teaching.

In the United States, that action has already resulted in the silencing of a prominent Jesuit activist and supporter of women's ordination to the priesthood.

Progressives in the U.S. view the action against the Rev. William Callahan, as part of a wider movement than just silencing the outspoken Jesuit and founder of Priests for Equality.

They note that the silencing of Callahan and the disciplining of Kung come at the same time another prominent liberal churchman, Belgian-born theologian Edward Schillebeeckx, has been called to the Vatican to answer charges about his influential but controversial book on Jesus.

In addition, another U.S. theologian, the Rev. Charles Curran of the Catholic University of America, best known for his work in the field of sexual ethics and morality, is also reportedly under investigation by the Vatican's anti-heresy agency, the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

John Paul, in his October trip to the United States, made it clear that he expected the nation's bishops to take a tougher stand in enforcing obedience to church teaching.

He emphasized that it was the bishops' duty to see that "the sacred deposit of Christian doctrine should be more effectively guarded and taught," urging them to be "absolutely faithful" to the teachings of the church.

The Callahan affair, while its origins pre-date John Paul's visit, is being widely interpreted as a first step in the tightening of church discipline.

Callahan, 48, helped found the Center of Concern, a Jesuit think tank, in 1971 and in 1975 aided in establishing the Quixote Center, a justice organization seeking to blend spirituality and social justice concerns.

The Quixote Center has been the hub for a number of social justice involvements by Catholic activists including the women's ordination issue. In the wake of increased agitation among women, Callahan then helped to found the 2,500-member Priests for Equality, an organization devoted to equality for women in all levels of the church, including support for ordination.

In May, during a visit to Rome, Callahan was ordered to remain silent on the issue of women's ordination by Father Arrupe.

In September, just before his visit to the United States, John Paul sharply rebuked the 27,000 member Jesuits, saying that he knew, "The crisis, which in these recent times has troubled and troubles religious life, has not spared your society, causing confusion among the Christian people and anxieties to the church, to the hierarchy, and also personally to the pope."

Meanwhile, the Washington archdiocese, headed by Cardinal William Baum and site of the Quixote Center, decided not to renew Callahan's priestly faculties — permission to celebrate mass and hear confession — in the archdiocese.

The decision to remove Callahan from Quixote Center, however, came after a widely publicized letter in which the Jesuit urged priests not to be availalbe for aiding in the distribution of Holy Communion during the pope's visit to Washington.

The letter cited the Vatican's enforcement of rules prohibiting lay ministers of the eucharist and said the Vatican decision was "being perceived as a powerful symbol that we, the clerical members of the church, continue to reject the ministry of women in our community in any but subservient roles."

During the pope's visit to the United States, Callahan was frequently interviewed and at least one story, which turned up in a Rome newspaper, mistakenly attributed a quote to Callahan that he cited from another source.

Callahan was asked by his provincial, Father Edward Flaherty, to clarify his statements but they were not accepted and on Nov. 5, Flaherty wrote Callahan that "Father General (Arrupe) judges your behavior prior to and during the Holy Father's visit to the United States in October as disobedience to the order he gave you in writing the previous May."

"What is contrary to our role ... is any which is publicly confrontational, stridently challenging or demonstratively polemical," Flaherty wrote Callahan. He said that while such a style may be all right in the political or social arena, "It is completely inappropriate in a Jesuit's dealing with the Holy Father, especially about clear directives which he has given to the church."

It has become clear, especially with the action against Kung, that the effort by John Paul to impose his theology and discipline on the church is just beginning.

The Schillebeeckx decision and the Synod of Dutch Bishops, scheduled to begin in Rome Jan. 14, may well set out the boundaries of how far John Paul is ready to go in tightening his reins on the church's theologians.

If anything, the Dutch Roman Catholic church has been a more extreme pathfinder and certainly more unruly than the U.S. church in such areas as women's ordination, priestly celibacy and ecumenical relations.

It is believed that John Paul's attitude on such issues, expressed strongly during his U.S. visit, will be even more forcefully stated to the Dutch bishops in an effort to bring that church more in line with the Vatican's position. In addition, the pope's attitude toward collegiality — shared decision making between pope and bishops — is also expected to be clarified.

Lab Designed For The Blind

INDIANA, Pa. (AP) — William Waskoski has brought the wonder of biology to the fingertips of students who have never seen a frog — let alone touched and dissected one.

Waskoski, a professor at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, this year converted a stockroom into a self-instructional biology laboratory for the blind.

"It's something I've had on my mind for a long time," Waskoski said in a telephone interview. "I had experiences with blind students many years ago and it was frustrating to incorporate them into a lab designed for the sighted."

The new laboratory holds five stalls. Each contains fresh and preserved biology specimens, brailled drawings and models and a tape recorder.

"It deals with as many tactile materials as I can get into a lab situation," Waskoski said. "They need hands-on experience to gain a concept. If questions arise, I can show them."

In an experiment on blood circulation, a tape recording directs the students to examine with their hands the structures of a dissected sheep's heart.

Plant adaptation is illustrated with 17 examples to be touched, including germinating plants, a coconut seed and wooden models of various leaf shapes.

Other stalls cover animal behavior and taxonomy, the classification of organisms. But the most popular experiment with the six blind students in Waskoski's class is frog dissection.

"One of my students had never experienced scissors, never had a pair in his hand," Waskoski said. "You have a wide range of abilities, but some dissected equal to or better than sighted students."

General biology for the blind also includes the normal lectures and field trips, including one to a nearby creek.

"We put crayfish in their hands because it's difficult for them to wade in the water," Waskoski said. "I use a rope to guide them. I make a knot for each student and one for the instructor. It works. They enjoy it."

Ministers To Speak Sunday

The Rev. David Daniels is sponsoring a program of 12 ministers to be held Sunday at 5 p.m. at St. Matthew FWB Church.

Each of the ministers is speaking on the subject of his choice. Music will be by the Gospel Chorus of St. Matthews and the Barnes Sisters in Christ of Greenville. The service is being held to help carpet the church. The public is invited, says the pastor, Hattie M. Cobb.
