'Tough Measures' Against Soviet Being Mapped

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is getting set to announce a package of get-tough measures toward the Soviet Union, but some of the key items are being held back until U.S. allies give their support.

Specifically, sources here said, the administration is continuing to consider trying to organize a boycott of the Olympic Games this summer in Moscow and to slow down shipments of grain and technology.

After Carter had breakfast this morning with foreign policy advisers, White House press secretary Jody Powell said no decision had been made on when or how to make public the course the president would follow.

Powell also said that no decision had been made on whether to embargo U.S. grain shipments to the Soviet Union. He said Carter also had yet to speak with U.S. Ambassador Thomas Watson, who was recalled from Moscow.

But to be effective, these measures must be coordinated with other western countries.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the United States also is urging its friends to take a flinty view of credits for Soviet purchases from the West.

On the other hand, some of the options aimed at punishing the Soviet Union for taking military action in Afghanistan have been considered within the administration and rejected. These, officials said, included a break in relations with Afghanistan's pro-Soviet government and supplying U.S. weapons directly to insurgents fighting to overthrow it.

Still not ruled out, however, is funneling American arms through other countries, such as Pakistan. Several key congressional leaders have said they will support legislation authorizing renewed arms sales to Pakistan if the president requests it.

There were indications official word on actions to be taken could come by the weekend.

A boycott of the Olympics would be a heavy blow to Soviet prestige. The Moscow games in August will be the center of world attention and the Russians intend to make them a glittering showcase.

Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher discussed the Olympic possibilities with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies in Brussels earlier this week. He went over other measures earlier in London with British, French, West German, Italian and Canadian officials.

Some of the Europeans, and a number of sportsmen, don't like the idea of using the Olympics to make a political point. A West German spokesman, for instance, denied that his government supports such a move.

And yet, the allies are said to be determined to register their opposition to the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Cutting back on trade is one way to get tough with Moscow.

Through October, total U.S. exports to the Soviet Union were $2.8 billion. West Germany's exports through September were valued at nearly $2 billion. France's at $1.3 billion, Britain and Japan's at a little over $1 billion, each.

Of the $2.8 billion in U.S. exports, $2.2 billion were in wheat, corn, barley, soybeans, rice and other agricultural items. The sale of an additional 3.8 million tons of corn and wheat was announced Thursday by the Agriculture Department.

The latest grain sale brings the total for the year to 21.4 million tons and means the Soviets have already bought 86 percent of all the corn and wheat they are eligible to buy for 1979-80 under a previous agreement.

Militants Call For Top U.S. Diplomat

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian militants today demanded America's top diplomat in Iran, L. Bruce Laingen, be turned over to them for questioning, the state radio reported.

Laingen, the U.S. charge d'affaires in Tehran, is one of three U.S. diplomats who have been held at the Foreign Ministry since the militants overran the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4, seizing some 50 American hostages.

The state radio broadcast said the militants demanded Laingen be brought to the occupied embassy "for necessary explanation of espionage documents." The report did not elaborate, but was apparently referring to documents the militants claim they found at the embassy.

The militants' statement was broadcast only hours after Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim left Tehran for New York after Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini refused to see him.

Waldheim described his visit to Iran as "dangerous but useful," referring to the Iranian announcement of a plot against his life as well as his talks with Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and other Iranian officials.

Commenting on the Iranian mob that forced him to flee a Tehran cemetery Thursday, Waldheim said, "This is not the first time such a think has happened to me. But looking around I had an unpleasant feeling and was wondering who would be at my side if something happened."

Waldheim made his comments to reporters in Zurich, Switzerland, where he boarded a New York-bound flight.

He left Iran almost a full day ahead of schedule. Shortly after the secretary-general departed, a spokesman said he was needed in New York to attend the Security Council debate today or Saturday on the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Waldheim arrived Tuesday on orders from the Security Council to seek release of the hostages, who entered their third month in captivity today. His personal spokesman, Francois Guilian, said the secretary-general would report the extent of his progress to the council, which meets Monday to consider limited economic sanctions against Iran unless the hostages are released by then.

Despite the rebuff Thursday from Khomeini, the leader of Iran's revolutionary regime, and Waldheim's failure to secure the release of the hostages, both U.N. and Iranian spokesmen claimed he had made progress in talks with other Iranian leaders.

He spent two hours Thursday in what he said was an "important and constructive" meeting with the ruling Revolutionary Council. But he refused to give details of his talks.

"It was not a matter of making progress, but the fact that we exchanged views," Ghotbzadeh said, reiterating the view of the Khomeini regime that Waldheim was allowed in only to hear Iran's complaints and not to negotiate the release of the hostages.

Waldheim appeared to open one avenue of possible conciliation, promising that the United Nations would investigate charges of human rights violations by the deposed shah's regime. He did not say what form such an investigation would take.

The students who seized the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4 insist they will not release the hostages until deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi returns to Iran to stand trial on charges of mass murder and corruption. The shah, who has already been sentenced to death in absentia, is living in exile in Panama.

Ghotbzadeh has hinted a public airing of Iranian grievances against the shah and against the United States might open the way to negotiations for the release of the hostages. But the students, who say they are answerable only to Khomeini, say they will settle for nothing less than the shah's return.

CBS-News reported from Washington that Ghotbzadeh has been telling foreign visitors Khomeini is "out of touch" with political reality, unaware of the effects of the current crisis on Iran and is not in full control of the students at the American Embassy.

"Increasingly the militants are seen as an independent force, captivated by Khomeini, but not necessarily controlled by him," he was quoted as saying.

Ghotbzadeh was not immediately available for comment on the report.

Price Of Gold Is Falling

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold plummeted by as much as $50 an ounce today in a bout of profit-taking that some dealers called "inevitable." The dollar, meanwhile, began to regain some of its strength.

Bullion's fall started in the Far East, where gold opened in Hong Kong at $631.48 an ounce, then dropped $22 to close at $609.42, off $3.84 from Thursday.

Hong Kong was closing about the same time the Zurich and London markets - the biggest in Europe - were opening, and the pattern was the same there.

Zurich prices, which finished Thursday at $635 an ounce, started at $610, and in less than an hour had plummeted another $25 to $585. By noon the price had risen a bit to $600 per ounce.

In London, where prices had jumped to $630 by the end of trading Thursday, the markets opened today at $615. Later, London's five bullion houses fixed the morning price of gold at $596 an ounce.

Soviets Reported Facing Long Afghanistan Fight

By The Associated Press

Soviet forces were reported facing a long war in Afghanistan's snowy mountains as the Kremlin accused President Carter of "wicked" outrages and the U.N. Security Council prepared to open debate on the Soviet military intervention in its Central Asian neighbor.

Diplomats in Kabul, Afghanistan's capital, said a "people's war" or general uprising was developing in the country's northern and eastern mountains, where the Soviet troops were said to be bogged down by heavy snows, the United News of India reported.

The Indian news agency also said "trouble was brewing" in the Afghan provinces of Kandahar in the southwest, Badakshan in the northeast, and Pakista and Nangarhar, to the south and east of Kabul, and that Moscow sent a team of generals to the battlefields to assess the fighting.

It said the diplomats reported the Moslem guerrillas whose 20-month-old rebellion against communist control prompted the Soviet intervention were regrouping. More fighting was expected even though the Russians "had achieved some successes in certain areas" by surprising the poorly organized guerrillas, the diplomats said.

One of those reported successes was the capture Wednesday of Kandahar, the capital of Kandahar province, and Jalalabad, 50 miles east of Kabul near the Pakistani border.

The diplomats reportedly said the Russians were trying to shore up their footholds and were stockpiling "huge quantities" of arms and ammunition at a large air base in western Afghanistan near the Iranian border.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda conceded in a dispatch from Kabul Thursday it would be "wrong to think that foreign interference has ceased and that counter-revolutionaries have put down their arms." The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia reported "provocative activities" being carried out in Afghanistan.

At U.N. headquarters the United States and 42 other nations asked for a Security Council debate on the Soviet action in Afghanistan. The debate was expected to begin late today or some time Saturday, continue to the middle or end of next week and end with the Soviet veto of a resolution demanding withdrawal of the Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

The Carter administration also got Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd to postpone debate on the SALT II pact with the Soviets, and many senators said there was no chance of getting the treaty ratified in 1980.

Sources in Washington said the U.S. government was also considering trying to organize an international boycott of the Moscow Olympics this summer and a slowdown in shipments of grain and technology to the Soviet Union. Meanwhile, the U.S. Department of Agriculture announced that the Russians had bought 3.8 million more metric tons of corn and wheat from the United States, raising their total purchases for the 1979-80 fiscal year to more than 21.4 million metric tons.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said President Carter was making "bellicose and wicked" statements that distorted the "essence and meaning" of the Soviet action.

More Than $2 Million In Building Permits

Greenville was one of ten cities of more than 10,000 population in North Carolina reporting building permits totaling $2 million or more for September of 1979.

N.C. Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks reported that Greenville issued building permits totaling $2,067,613 during September, with Raleigh leading 38 North Carolina cities with a permit total of $3,309,908.

Brooks noted that Greenville ranked seventh among the 38 cities in permit totals for the first nine months of 1979 with $23,379,858. Charlotte led with $97,242,167, Brooks reported.

Other eastern North Carolina totals for September and first nine months included: Kinston, $3,217,300; $6,948,499; Elizabeth City, $176,019; $5,007,720; Goldsboro, $360,819; $13,413,216;

Jacksonville, $807,279; $8,312,768; New Bern, $324,915; $7,875,023; Roanoke Rapids, $205,590; $7,021,299; Rocky Mount, $1,559,994; $16,037,274; and Wilson, $1,390,886; $10,241,088.

The commissioner said that the September total of $67,806,896 in the 38 reporting cities was down 29.7 percent from the August figure of $96,459,402, but up 17.2 percent over the September of 1978 total of $57,840,726.

Construction activity was up 12.1 percent in the first nine months compared with the same period in 1978, the official reported, as the 38 cities issued permits amounting to $667,320,241 during the period, up from $595,540,329 a year ago.

Serbian Christmas

In most parts of the world, Christmas celebrations are over for another year. But the Serbian people of Yugoslavia still have their Christmas to look forward to. According to the calendar used by the Eastern Orthodox Church, Christmas falls on January 6. Serbs celebrate the holiday by burning a Christmas log called a badnyak. The logs are made of oak, and the Serbs traditionally burn them to ward off bad luck during the coming year. Other Serbian Christmas festivities include a meal featuring roast pig, and a cake containing a silver coin. The coin is supposed to bring good luck to the person who finds it in his piece of cake.

Huddling Over Chicago Schools

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Gov. James R. Thompson and more than 30 top business and education officials huddled behind closed doors as they sought a way to fight the financial woes of Chicago's schools, a pinch that threatened a second payless payday for teachers. No solution was reached Thursday in a seven-hour meeting at the executive mansion of representatives of city and state education boards, Chicago banks and the teacher's union. Most participants declined comment as gubernatorial aides were dispatched to buy toothbrushes, razor blades and underwear for those who would remain overnight. "All I can tell you is that we're making progress and that I'm hopeful," said Catherine Rohter, Chicago Board of Education president. "We're making no statement and we're going to be back in the morning," said Robert Healey, president of the Chicago Teachers Union. David Gilbert, the governor's press secretary, said Thompson presented participants with a proposal to avert a shutdown of the nation's third-largest school system, but declined to give details. He said Thompson told the group the schools need an additional $450 million by May 1 — $150 million of that by the end of next week. The school system's 48,000 employees have voted overwhelmingly to ask the Chicago board to close the schools and send 480,000 students home if paychecks were not sent out today.

Eurocommunist Line 'Tolerant'

PARIS (AP) — Most of Western Europe's Communist parties have taken a tolerant line toward the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, and only the Spanish party has censured it without reservation. The parties that criticize the Russians say the United States and other Western nations have no moral right to condemn the Soviets because of their own past actions. The Spanish party, whose leader Santiago Carrillo is a leader of the Eurocommunist movement seeking independence from Moscow, said revolutionary theory required it to say "no to the intervention of Soviet armed forces in Afghanistan." The comment in the newspaper Mundo Obrero recalled the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. But the article said the United States and other Western nations were not well placed to protest the action. It recalled the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, U.S. support for the Shah of Iran and for Israel and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plans to introduce medium-range nuclear missiles into Western Europe. The Italian party, Western Europe's largest, said in its newspaper L'Unita that the Russians were violating "some of the principles that must govern international co-existence: ... the defense and respect of national independence and sovereignty, the unexportability of revolutions" and the search for peaceful political solutions rather than military. But the Italian Communists said "objectively" they could understand why the Soviets wanted to retain control of Afghanistan after repeated U.S. attempts to oust the communist regime there.

Candy Prizes In Reading Month

December was a month for reading at South Greenville Elementary School. Children in the Primary Resource Room had stockings hung by the chimney to keep track of the number of books they read. Their stockings were returned with the winners' stockings filled with candy. The winners were: second grade: Dionne Williams, Sharon Smith, Shawn Moore, Miguel Sutton, Bershuan Thompson, Ivan Curmon, Davida Best, Michelle Creech, Renee Jarmon, Monte Smith, Bernestine Moore, Shelby Holley, Cornell Jenkins, Robert Jenkins, Tasha Cherry, and Inga Greene. Winners from the third grade were: Marsha Jones, Paulette Barrett, Willie Woolard, Stephanie Washington, Stacey Davis, Chris Brown, Marvin Blount, Jennifer Watson, Sammie Logan, Doug Barrett, Jeffrey House, Adrian McLawhorn, Darrell Tyson, Anthony Jenkins, Jeffrey Moore, and Darryl Fleming.

Local Counselor Named To A State Committee

Mrs. Jean Creech, a counselor at Rose High School, has been appointed a representative on the North Carolina Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools. This is the first time that a classroom teacher has been appointed to the state level committee. In the past, the 11-member committee has consisted of superintendents, principals, college and university personnel and representatives from state departments of education. The appointment of Mrs. Creech was made through the Association's Commission on Secondary Schools. Announcement of the appointment was made by Dr. Lacy Presnell, Chairman of the N.C. Secondary Committee. Mrs. Creech, along with Charles Ross, Mrs. Kay Whitehurst and several elementary teachers, comprised the team representing Greenville elementary schools at the 84th annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools held in Atlanta in December, when Greenville elementary schools were accredited. A native of Pine Level, Mrs. Creech received her A.B. degree from Atlantic Christian College, where she graduated Magna cum laude. She received the M.A. in Guidance from East Carolina University, and taught English and Social Studies for seven years in Wilmington and Rocky Mount before moving to Greenville in 1969. Until three years ago, before becoming a counselor at Rose High, she taught Eastern cultures and World History and served as Social Sciences Department chairman. She is married to Smith Creech, and they are the parents of three children, Barbara, who lives in Raleigh and twins Jerry and Judy, who live in Greenville. Mrs. Creech is active in church, civic, and professional organization activities. "I feel quite challenged by being appointed to this position," Mrs. Creech said. "I hope that the input that I will be able to furnish will justify the addition of a committee person at the classroom teacher level."

No Changes For 'Chennault Suite'

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Angry fans of World War II Flying Tigers hero Claire Chennault have been assured that the Chennault Suite at Lackland Air Force Base will not be renamed for its most celebrated visitor — the Shah of Iran.

After his Dec. 15 departure for Panama, the manager of the Visiting Officers Quarters and a base spokesman said the suite where the shah spent 13 days would be named the Shah Suite in honor of the visit. But dozens of angry phone calls and letters complained that the memory of the famous Air Force general was being slighted. Base officials Thursday said the name would not be changed.

Women Advised To Chart Career Goals

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the most important problems facing working women today, says career counselor Marcia Fox, is the problem of "under-employment."

People who are under-employed are those who feel their talents and their abilities are not being fully utilized in their jobs, Dr. Fox noted.

"Feeling underemployed is one of the sources of deep discontent of the working woman," she said.

Dr. Fox is an assistant dean of career development and job placement at New York University's Graduate School of Public Administration and author of a recent book, "Put Your Degree to Work."

Changing jobs is a very important first step for people who feel they are under-employed, Dr. Fox said.

Cooking Is Fun

One of the cooks in my test kitchen is on a low-sodium diet. Recently, in her own home, she tried baking a loaf of white bread from a recipe in a "no salt" cookbook. She was greatly disappointed because the loaf was too sweet and its texture too coarse. When toasted, the bread became hard rather than crisp.

At her request, I worked out the following recipe for a low-sodium loaf, and we baked it in my test kitchen. It's delicious still faintly warm from the oven, and it's evenly crisp when toasted. Because readers of this column have asked me to include — on occasion — recipes for special diets, I am happy to give this one.

LOW-SODIUM BREAD
1 envelope dry yeast
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 cup warm (105 to 115 degrees) water
2½ cups unbleached flour
¼ cup non-fat dry milk powder
Corn oil

In a pint measure dissolve yeast and sugar in the water. In a food processor, using the steel blade, process together 2 cups of the flour and the dry milk just until blended — a few seconds. Add ½ cup of the yeast mixture and 1 tablespoon oil; in rapid succession, turn machine on and off 4 times. Add remaining yeast mixture and ¼ cup of the flour; in rapid succession, turn machine on and off 4 times. Add remaining ¼ cup flour and process again until the dough forms a ball. Process about 1 minute more to knead. Remove dough to an oiled bowl; turn dough to oil top; cover with saran; let rise in a draft-free 80-degree place until doubled — 1 hour. Turn out on a lightly floured surface and shape into a loaf to fit into an 8 by 4½ by 2½-inch pan; place in the oiled pan; cover and let rise as before until doubled — 1 hour. Brush with corn oil. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until browned and a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 30 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack and cool completely.

Food Editor's Note: Adjust this recipe, if necessary, to fit your particular make of food processor by consulting the manufacturer's directions for bread-making. — C.B.

But, she added, "make sure you know what you're all about and make sure you know what you want and make sure you're twice as smart as everybody else out there looking for the same thing."

She said a lack of career goals was one problem that many people faced.

"A career is something that you have to have some control over, whereas a job or changing jobs ... gives you less control over the path you've been charting," Dr. Fox said.

She stressed that career goals were going to become more and more important to women in the work force in the years ahead.

"To the extent to which we care about career goals — and I predict that we will inevitably be caring more about career goals certainly as the divorce statistics continue to grow and certainly as the economic inflationary pressures are upon us — it's going to matter more and more that women can be responsible for their own survival and can be responsible for their own destiny," Dr. Fox said.

Her suggestions for charting career goals include the following:

—Ask if your career fits you psychologically. Are you in a career where the kind of talents and skills required are basically not the ones that you feel comfortable with or enjoy using?

—Ask if you are in tune with the career you've charted for yourself. And then, are you managing your talents?

—Are you leading from your own strengths — the things that you can do easily and well? Are those strengths in some way being integrated into your career planning activities and are they being used in your daily life?

"If not," Dr. Fox said, "try to think about ways in which you can integrate them because chances are the things you do well or the things you enjoy doing can be a great source of success in your career if you are able to integrate them."

She said one trend that was likely to occur in the workplace in future years was an increase in the number of women who owned their own businesses — particularly among women who were trying to juggle the demands of both a career and a family.

"I think one of the reasons why women entrepreneurs will grow in numbers over the next decade is because this is one of the ways in which a woman can dictate how she wants to spend her life and can accommodate all of her multiple and complicated roles," she said.

Dr. Fox was among a group of panelists at a recent "Stress and the Working Woman" workshop held recently at the Ford Foundation here. The workshop was co-sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation and the Clairiol Corp.

But, she added, "make sure you know what you're all about and make sure you know what you want and make sure you're twice as smart as everybody else out there looking for the same thing."

She said a lack of career goals was one problem that many people faced.

"A career is something that you have to have some control over, whereas a job or changing jobs ... gives you less control over the path you've been charting," Dr. Fox said.

Husband Showed No Consideration

By Abigail Van Buren
1980 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Danny and I have been married for 13 years, and ever since last summer I've had something on my mind that bothers me.

Danny and I went back to his hometown to attend his 10th high school reunion. (It was the first he ever attended.) Basically we have a good marriage. Danny is a steady worker, doesn't drink, smoke or chase. We have three nice children, and he's an honest, good-natured family man but sometimes very inconsiderate.

Well, Danny and I walked into the reunion party together, and that was about all I saw of him for five hours! He ignored me the whole time while he was off laughing and talking with old classmates. I just sat there, all choked up, feeling like a leper.

Abby, I am not a dog, so there's no reason for him to be ashamed of me, but he didn't introduce me to a soul!

On the way home I told him how hurt I was, and he didn't even apologize for ignoring me. He said, "You should have introduced yourself around and made your own good time!" Was I wrong, or was he?

NO DOG IN DETROIT

DEAR NO DOG: HE was. And I hope your letter reminds others who attend class reunions to be especially considerate and attentive to a spouse who knows no one and feels left out and lost amid the merrymaking and excitement.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, you said: "Snakes make wonderful pets for retired people and apartment dwellers. They're odorless, clean, quiet and don't need to be groomed or walked. And another plus—you won't have to worry about anybody stealing them."

Well, Abby, that's where you are wrong. My house was burglarized last month, and what do think was stolen? My stereo and my 8-foot boa constrictor that I'd had since he was little.

DAVE WOODMAN, POLK CITY, FLA.

DEAR DAVE: I find it difficult to believe that anyone would steal an 8-foot boa constrictor. May I put the squeeze on you for some documentation?

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my neighbor. He's divorced, retired and lives across the hall from my husband and me. This pest rings my bell at least 10 times a day asking if I "need" anything. If I tell him I'm busy he asks me stupid questions and engages me in conversation anyway. He loves to visit. What a bore he is!

Last evening, after working 16 hours, my husband came home exhausted. Five minutes later "Mr. Pest" rang our bell, and my husband invited him in yet! I nearly blew my top.

My husband says the man is lonely and he hates to hurt his feelings. What feelings? I have to peek in the hall to see if this pest is around before I go out to empty my trash. If he sees me in the hall, he follows me into my apartment. I told him once to to the Senior Citizen Center and play cards or dance or something, but it didn't sink in.

Abby, besides cleaning, cooking and caring for four cats, I also manage this apartment building and I don't have time to kill with this boring man.

Thanks for listening. I get no sympathy from others I've told this to.

READY TO SCREAM

DEAR READY: "Mr. Pest" sounds as though he could be mentally disturbed. Treat him as you would a nagging child. Give him five or 10 minutes of your undivided attention, then tell him gently but firmly that you have many daily chores to do and have no more time for visiting. That pathetic man needs some friendly understanding.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

The first commencement exercises were held at Harvard University in 1642.

Schools Always Controversial

Where is area education headed in the 1980s? Like the rest of the nation education on the secondary and high school levels is in a state of flux. It wrestles with court orders, Department of Health, Education and Welfare and changing social patterns.

Here in the south we are still adjusting to the vast changes wrought by integration and consolidation of our schools. It has been said that public education is headed somewhere, but no one is certain just where.

No one is totally satisfied with the schools, and yet there seem to be no alternatives. We can hope that we are going through a process of educational evolution which will yield some positive answers in the future.

In Pitt County we undoubtedly will be faced with the same problems that face all school systems: the possibility of declining enrollments brought on by dropping birth rates, where to obtain the money needed for special educational programs and how to cope with wide differences in achievement potential among students.

Pitt County also enters the '80s wrestling with the problem of whether or not to merge the city and county school systems.

The sentiment seems to be against merger at present and opponents can cite potential problems. There are problems in not merging too. There is duplication of administration, artificial school district lines and even disputes over school lines. There is also the potential for buildings in one district being underused while new ones are constructed in the sister district.

The merger question needs to be aired fully and decided in this decade with the interest of the taxpayers in mind.

Schools are close to all of us and they are always controversial. They will continue to be in the 1980s and perhaps that is the way it should be. When we are conscious of our school needs we will do what we can to meet those needs.

Annexation Adds To Our Residents

The city of Greenville grew some this week with the finalization of the annexing of Red Oak, Oakdale and Baker Heights, located along Greenville Boulevard.

The area, totaling 422 acres begins receiving city services such as refuse collection, fire and police protection and street maintenance. And it might be noted that residents will also begin paying city taxes in return for those services.

The annexation adds 754 residents to the city, and they are a welcome addition to Greenville.

Water System Prospect

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A water line spanning much of North Carolina with feeder lines reaching out to almost every area is a vision of the future which Carl Stewart holds dear.

"We were forewarned of the present energy crisis, but we were not prepared for it.

"We are on the threshold of making the same mistake with water," says the speaker of the house of representatives who is chairing a special study committee of the General Assembly currently investigating the possibility of a statewide raw water distribution system.

At its simplest, the system would consist of a main water line which engineers envision as roughly paralleling Interstate 85 through the Piedmont Crescent, then eastward to the Kinston area. Connectors could reach almost every area of the state.

Local water systems would tap onto the lines for raw water in bulk at wholesale prices, and feed it into their local treatment and distribution system.

Plentiful

Numerous expert studies have demonstrated that North Carolina has plenty of water in surface or underground resources, but that careful management is essential to future availability.

Despite the water affluence of the state, periodic droughts have brought about hardship and economic loss in isolated sections of the state, varying from year to year.

Additionally, there are communities in which adequate water supplies and distribution systems have not become realities, and Stewart notes that limited regional efforts in the state have been "well intentioned, but largely failures."

The study commission members acknowledge they are treading politically dangerous territory in their work. The proposal would without doubt lead to a major storm of controversy across the state should it be developed into a firm recommendation and submitted for public debate and General Assembly action.

State Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles has been meeting with the study group, and is urging extreme caution and slow, deliberate study.

"We have experienced several droughts in the past 12 to 15 years. The cities and towns which ran out of water or had to curtail its use would look with approval on the development of a better distribution of the water resources of the state.

"On the other hand, those units of government which now seemingly have an inexhaustible supply of water at their disposal may question anyone's wanting to change the status quo. You can see the possibility of divisive opinion on each side of the question...proceed slowly," Boyles told the committee recently.

Benefits

At the same time, though, Boyles sees enormous future benefit from what he views as something to "serve the citizens of the state in a most advantageous way. It could eventually be compared to our system of highways in the overall development of the state. Highways are needed if an area is to develop. Sufficient potable water is also needed and many areas of our state do not have a sufficient quantity of water. (This) could enable them to at-

Crisis 'Truce' Rifts

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The political truce on President Carter's handling of the Iranian hostage crisis is coming apart. Now the question is whether campaign criticism of the president and his policies will hurt him or help him.

For two months, Carter's challengers have been relatively restrained on an issue that has helped revive the political fortunes of the president.

When Sen. Edward M. Kennedy talked about Iran, it was with a denunciation of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, not with direct criticism of Carter and his policies. Those comments boomeranged, and Kennedy wound up the object of a wave of criticism for a statement the administration said was not helpful in its efforts to gain release of the hostages.

Republican National Chairman Bill Brock now has assailed Carter's policy as one of weakness and deception. He said Republican presidential candidates shouldn't be constrained on anything save the specifics of administration efforts to get the hostages freed.

He also said he was not renegeing on a Nov. 29 pledge of support for Carter's efforts to gain release of the hostages. He and Democratic National Chairman John C. White joined in that pledge as a signal of national unity.

White said Wednesday that Brock had put that unity in question. He said that discipline have been almost universal until Brock broke ranks.

Actually, the truce was coming unraveled before Brock spoke out.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. already had accused Carter of playing politics with the hostage situation. Brown, who had counted heavily on a Jan. 7 debate in Des Moines to bolster his campaign, said Carter's withdrawal from that forum amounted to "exploiting the plight of the hostages to help his own campaign."

Republican campaigners like John B. Connally, Ronald Reagan and Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. have been criticizing administration policies they say are signals of weakness that encouraged the Iranians to think they could seize hostages and get away with it.

Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas said Carter "bears a heavy responsibility" for the continuing captivity of the hostages, and questioned whether Carter really is doing all he can to get them out.

That's as far as any candidate has gone in criticizing Carter on the specific question of gaining release of the hostages. Their comments have, for the most part, been more general.

An Eye On The Ratings

WASHINGTON — "The Secret Revolutionary Council of Iran will come to order. We will now hear a report from our Secret Minister of Information, Mullah Flack."

"I just received the overnight Arbitron ratings from our embassy in Washington. We got a 32 share of the audience on Walter Cronkite, a 30 on NBC and a 30 on ABC."

"That's not too bad. Are our student demonstrations getting a play?"

"No. The American TV audiences are bored with the demonstrations. We're going to have to come up with something different soon or all three networks may cancel us for the new season."

"How is the Ayatollah Khomeini doing?"

"He's sinking in the Nielsen ratings. The networks are complaining that he doesn't do anything but sit on his rug and stare at the ground."

"What else did he say?"

"He's blaming us because his interview with Pakistani Television didn't get on prime time in the United States."

"Did you tell him it was on the ABC wrapup at 11:30 at night?"

"Yes, but he complained bitterly that they put him against Johnny Carson. He said if it happened again he was going to find himself a new Secret Revolutionary Council."

"It looks like our show is in trouble. This week's Variety says it isn't even playing in Peoria."

"How is Foreign Minister Ghotbzadeh doing?"

"Sadegh's overexposed. Every time he sees a TV camera he steps in front of it. Also people are now wise to the fact he doesn't know what's going on."

THE INSIDE REPORT

Will Detentists Learn?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — More than two years after the Soviet campaign to make a satellite out of Afghanistan became clear even to detentists in the State Department, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance at long last has agreed — tentatively — to shore up U.S. ties to other key states lying next on Moscow's bloody path.

Objective No. 1: Terminate the self-defeating ban on economic and military aid invoked against Pakistan as punishment for that traditional American ally's refusal to forswear nuclear weapons.

Objective No. 2: Feed light weapons to the tough, resilient Afghan Moslem guerrillas in their continuing struggle against dominion from Moscow, getting the weapons in through the porous Afghan-Pakistani border.

But the debate churns between Vance's fearful detentists at State and less dovish officials in the Defense Department, CIA and National Security Council staff. As late as Dec. 20, when the handwriting of Moscow's imminent military takeover of Kabul was writ large on the wall, high officials at State were telling White House national security operatives: "Don't worry, it's not all that important."

In the real world, there would be only one outcome of the debate over such a switch of policy: Switch immediately. That means finding a way to equip the Pakistani air force with something better than the venerable F-86, the 1947 plane that still is its backbone; release the $45 million in economic aid frozen last fall in a dispute over nuclear weapons; reestablish Pakistan, now all but naked to Soviet bullying, as a strong ally; remove the tether from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

But Jimmy Carter's foreign policy has been strangely immune to dictates of the real world. In his Oct. 16 annual report to a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on the state of U.S.-Soviet relations, Marshall Shulman, Vance's Soviet adviser, said that "the single most significant development in U.S.-Soviet relations during the past year" was the new Strategic Arms Limitation Agreement (SALT II).

As for ever-widening Soviet control over the government of Afghanistan, Shulman said the Soviet Union "evidently feels committed to defending what it terms the Afghan revolution...We are consulting widely with other countries in the region and have found they share our concern about this situation."

Some officials dispute Shulman's priorities. They think that the "most significant" development of 1979 was not SALT II but the Soviet worldwide offensive far beyond its own com-

To the editor:

The Christmas TV documentary which was produced by the Iranian militants shows the hostage USA Marines not joining in singing Christmas devotions led by the Reverend William Sloane Coffin of Riverside Church of New York.

Is it probable that these Marines recognize Mr. Coffin as being an author of their country's predicament? He was one of the leaders — to many, indeed the leader — in the sorry debacle of our withdrawal from Indo-China. This display of impotence was a disaster to the esteem which Third World Countries had for the USA. It was also a disavowal of faithfulness and trustworthiness which the USA had for those who were fighting for us. With those hostage Marines having this knowledge, is it possible that they could enter wholeheartedly in the Christmas worship when led by Mr. Coffin, designer of their pitiful condition?

As we try to understand the feelings of the hostage Marines, must we not suppose that experiencing the relay of Christmas Spirit from the USA in the person of Mr. Coffin was a most cruel abuse added to the grief and torment of their captivity? Was it not an affront and an insult to the loyalties which all Marines have?

Marshall Helms

"The Ayatollah won't go for it, and neither will the students at the U.S. Embassy. Once the hostages are released the networks will pack up their cameras and go home."

"I'll tell you why we've been slipping. It's all the fault of the Ayatollah Shariatmadari. His people are putting on anti-Khomeini demonstrations in Tabriz and the American audiences are eating it up. They had one show last week where 300,000 people went into the streets screaming 'Down With Khomeini' and we didn't even get on the air."

"That's bad. Before we know it every ayatollah in the country will want to be on American television and we'll have a civil war on our hands."

"We have already. Mullahs, unless we come up

Strength For Today

ENEMIES SOMETIMES PROVE A COMPLIMENT

In the carefree days of our youth when little responsibility rested upon us, we could make friends easily and keep them with a wholesome mixture of sincerity and enthusiasm. But as we approach the forties, we begin to make enemies. We have come to the place where we have decided upon issues, and our decisions sometimes hurt our friends.

As the years go on and as responsibility increases, we often find that we have to choose what is right rather than what is pleasant. Furthermore, in our youth our decisions affected few other people than ourselves. But when we achieve responsible positions, many other people are involved.

So if we are 45 or older and have started to make some enemies — in business or anywhere else — we should not let it weigh too heavily upon us. We are prone to judge young people by their friends, but often we can more accurately judge mature people by their enemies.

'Jackpot' On Visit In Doctor

By GAIL MICHAELS

Since I was a kid, I've logged more hours in the doctor's office than FDR spent in the White House. I attribute this to excessively lazy white blood cells. Phillip attributes it to hypochondria.

I will admit that because of my poor track record I have mild preoccupation with germs. I am the lady you've seen on television who carries a can of Lysol in her pocketbook to spray in public restrooms.

I am also the one who wears a surgical mask to the doctor's office and tells everyone who comes in that the five seats on either side of her are saved.

I start making up my list of symptoms and questions two weeks before my appointment. And I approach the Reader's Digest Medical Dictionary with the zeal of an army recruiter.

But I am not a hypochondriac. Although I may misdiagnose my symptoms once in awhile, when I'm sick, I'm sick.

For instance, when I broke out in itchy red patches, I was prepared for either the heartbreak of psoriasis or leprosy. It turned out to be eczema.

And I once diagnosed extreme internal distress as scarlet fever. My doctor diagnosed it as a sinus infection.

When I traveled abroad, I was certain that I had contracted smallpox. What I had was an allergy to German chocolate.

And when I had convinced myself that I had an allergy to Phillip, the doctor reassured me that it was only chickenpox.

In spite of the evidence,

Phillip still refuses to believe me when I say I'm sick. Several months ago I began to complain of extreme lethargy and nausea.

This was a perfect introduction to his panacea for every ailment from severe depression to the gas crisis. "What you need," he said, "is a little exercise; jogging maybe."

"On the contrary, exercise will only aggravate my symptoms. Just watching joggers makes me sick at my stomach. Besides, I think I have diabetes."

He rolled his eyes. "I'm not kidding! It runs in my immediate family."

"Oh, brother..."

"No, my great great uncle had it."

"Gail, I am positive that this is all in your mind."

"Don't patronize me! I know what's in my mind and munist empire of Eastern Europe. The outright Soviet invasion of Afghanistan followed Shulman's testimony by two months, but authoritative sources in the Carter administration insist that previous Soviet moves there anticipated it.

"When you find an armed, masked man with a large bag and a glass cutter at your back door at midnight you should make the obvious assumption," one such official told us.

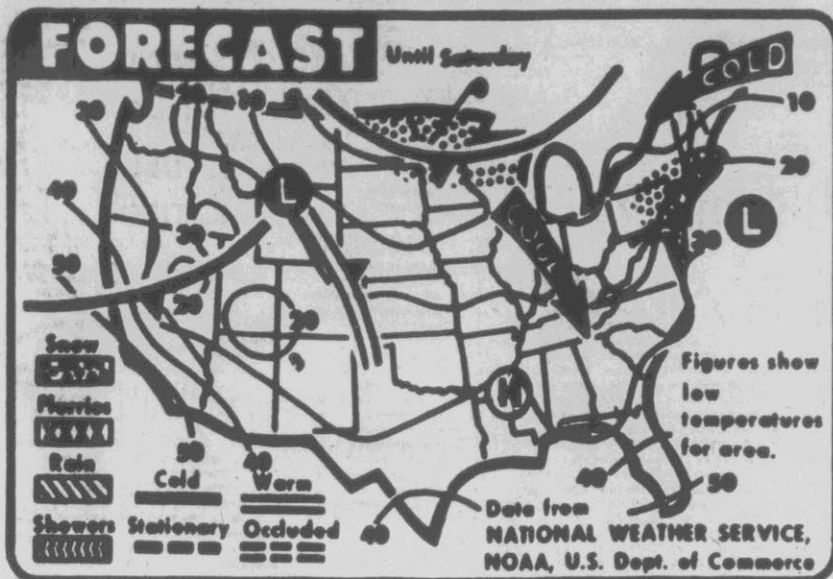

Refusal to make obvious assumptions has marked many steps along the State Department's path in the Afghan tragedy since shortly before Moscow arranged the Marxist takeover in Kabul in April 1978. As we reported a few months later, one of the shrewdest foreign diplomats here warned the administration that its apparent acceptance of Moscow's seizure of the government "can have serious consequences" for Pakistan and Iran.

Yet Pakistan's nuclear sins — though mild compared to Israel's, which has paid no price at all in reduced aid — were used to bar all economic and military aid, despite waiver provisos in the law.

What has now forced Vance and his top policy advisers to change their tune is this Soviet message to the Western World: After 150 years of Afghanistan playing the role of buffer state between czarist (now communist) Russia and the West, Moscow has become confident enough to use its own military power to take it over.

Detentists in the Carter administration led by the president himself and most of the policy-making seventh floor of the State Department put the value of SALT II above Soviet power plays in Angola, Ethiopia, South Yemen and the early stages of Afghanistan. If now there is to be belated change, it will first be seen in Pakistan — the next soft target in Moscow's inexorable bid for world domination.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cooler weather is expected for the forecast period until Saturday morning, for most of the country. Milder weather is expected from southern California to southern Florida. Snow is forecast for the eastern Dakotas and Minnesota and from Maryland to southern New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

The weather forecast predicted precipitation for North Carolina today, but for most areas it was to be rain instead of snow.

Light snow was reported in many of the mountain areas this morning, and "a travelers' advisory remained in effect for the west where a mixture of rain and snow was expected to continue.

Although predictions Thursday night were for snow to cover North Carolina from the Piedmont west, today's forecast called for areas outside the mountains to have rain.

Temperatures were expected to range from 30s in the mountains to 50s along the coast, while readings tonight were expected to range from 20s in the mountains to 30s along the coast.

Snow will taper off in the mountains tonight while the rain continues over the Piedmont and coast. On Saturday partly cloudy skies will dominate the west, while clearing skies will cover the southeast. Rain will be ending in the northeast.

Across the state Thursday skies were sunny with afternoon readings in the 40s and 50s. The warmest area was Wilmington with 54 degrees, followed by Asheville in the mountains with 53 degrees.

Cloudiness moved into the mountains shortly after sunset and quickly spread across the state.

Must Subscribe To Teachings

DALLAS (AP) — Trustees of Dallas Baptist College have laid down a requirement that faculty members and staff must subscribe to newly drawn up "Articles of Faith," affirming that the entire Bible was "verbally inspired by God."

College president W. Marvin Watson says all but about a dozen of the 128 faculty and staff have signed. He did not indicate what would be done about the others, but said he would "visit with them." Several have objected to the new creedal statement.

It represents a stiffened version of the Southern Baptist "Faith and Message" standard, adding "verbally" to the way in which the Bible is said to be inspired, among other things.

2 Escapees State Sen. Ed Renfrow Recaptured Wants Auditor's Post

MARION, Va. (AP) — Two men who escaped from a North Carolina prison camp have been captured in Smyth County after barricading themselves inside a mobile home near Marion.

County Sheriff Jerry Archer and three deputies arrested Jerry Roger Harris, 18, and James Ray Hill, 20, without any shots being fired.

Deputy Joe Kenney said Harris wanted to shoot it out but Hill prevented it by removing the ammunition clip from a .30-caliber carbine Harris was holding.

The two men found the carbine, two 22-caliber rifles and more than 100 rounds of ammunition in the trailer when they broke in, Kenney said.

Kenney said the weapons and ammunition belonged to the owner of the trailer, Richard Taylor, who was not at home when the break-in occurred.

The men surrendered peacefully after deputies talked with them from outside the trailer for about 10 minutes, Kenney said.

Harris and Hill escaped Wednesday from the Watauga County correctional unit at Boone, N.C. A corrections officer there, Sgt. Bruce King, said they ran from a breakfast line about 7 a.m. The camp is for "honor grade" prisoners, or trustees, King said.

He said Hill, who had been transferred from another prison camp near Raleigh the day before the escape, was serving a 5-to 8-year term for burglary and larceny, and Harris had 13 months to serve on a 28-month sentence on several charges of damaging personal property.

Neither of the two was considered dangerous, King said, adding that Harris had been causing trouble at the camp ever since his arrival. The pair reportedly stole a Jeep from a summer home a short distance from the camp.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Henry L. Bridges' announcement Thursday that he will not seek re-election as North Carolina's state auditor has made Sen. Ed Renfrow, D-Smithfield, very happy.

The state senator declared in June that he would seek the job which Bridges has held since 1947.

Bridges, 72, said Thursday he will retire after completing his current term. John W. Buchan, his chief deputy, appeared with Bridges to announce he will not seek the auditor's post.

Renfrow, 39, a three-term state senator, said he has put together a statewide campaign organization. "I feel like now with an incumbent not in the race, this will enhance our chances a great deal. We've got a good start and we're on schedule," he said.

One other Democrat, Maxton

Mayor W.S. "Bill" Chestnut, announced Thursday that he'll run for auditor since Bridges has stepped aside.

But Renfrow said, "I've been campaigning in 75 or 80 counties. If there is another candidate, he's not out there campaigning."

Chestnut disagreed. "He (Renfrow) might be the front-runner with the politicians, but that's not true for the people," he said.

Consumer activist Lillian Woo of Raleigh, who was defeated by Bridges in the last Democratic primary runoff, has not announced if she plans a second bid for the office. She still has a large debt left from the 1976 campaign.

Democratic observers speculated Thursday that another candidate might emerge with Bridges' backing although Bridges has not expressed support for any successor. He said it was his "sincere wish that whoever my successor is that the duties and authority of this office will be carried out in a professional and completely independent manner."

The auditor's office conducts annual audits of all state agencies and other special audits as requested by the governor, the Advisory Budget Commission or the state auditor himself.

Bridges was an attorney in Raleigh when he was appointed state auditor Feb. 15, 1947. He was elected to a four-year term in 1948 and has been re-elected every four years since then.

The greatest challenge to his re-election came in 1976 when Lillian Woo forced him into a Democratic primary runoff.

"It is with mixed emotions that I announce that I will not be a candidate for re-election," he said. "I am grateful to the people of North Carolina for electing me to serve for almost 34 years as state auditor."

"And, I think, at the risk of appearing immodest, that I have, with the help of my staff, made significant contributions to the financial reputation of this state," Bridges said.

Bridges made the announcement after Gov. Jim Hunt's weekly press conference. Hunt praised the auditor for the "tremendous professional development of the auditor's staff."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Love is still keeping them together — and together they're still on the record charts — but Toni Tennille and Daryl Dragon are embarked on an all-out effort to widen their individual careers beyond the narrow confines of the Top 40.

"I just think the record business is too damn fickle," says Miss Tennille — Mrs. Dragon, if you prefer.

"I'm telling you, if you don't pop those hit records out like hotcakes, if you don't have one for six or seven months...."

"Good-bye," interjects the laconic Dragon.

"...nobody knows your name," finishes Miss Tennille.

Such grouching usually comes from people who haven't been enjoying much success, but this is hardly the case with the Captain & Tennille, as the Dragons are known to millions.

Actress Phones Poster Child

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Eight-year-old Jeanette Alvarado has discovered that a hospital somehow isn't so bad when you've got flowers and a phone call from your favorite TV star, actress Suzanne Somers.

The 1980 national Easter Seal poster child, who was wounded in a puzzling shooting during a New Year's celebration, talked for about five minutes Thursday by intercom phone with the actress.

Ms. Somers, the national chairwoman of the Easter Seal campaign this year, had earlier sent flowers and arranged for Jeanette to have a color television in her room, hospital officials said.

Jeanette, wearing a bandage over the bullet wound a half-inch from her right eye, later told reporters that Ms. Somers' ABC comedy series, "Three's Company," was her favorite.

The second-grader, crippled since birth by a spinal cord disorder, was hit by a small-caliber bullet as she sat with her family outside her grandmother's house. Police aren't sure who did the shooting.

TV Enters An Interesting Era

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — January 1980 — television enters a new season, a new year, a new decade. Funny, it doesn't look any different.

The networks are offering five new sitcoms, three dramas, a chase series, two detective shows and a variety show. One of the sitcoms is about a junkman named Sanford, whom you may remember from the middle of last decade; another sitcom (CBS' "Last Resort") you may remember from last fall. One of the dramas (ABC's "The Chisols") was a miniseries last spring, and another (CBS' "Knots Landing") is a spinoff from "Dallas."

NBC's "Facts of Life" features the maid from NBC's "Diff'rent Strokes," and ABC's "Incredible Sundays" is reminiscent of NBC's "Real People."

The networks, it seems, are bent on easing the blows of future shock by giving us more of the same.

Yet, this is the decade in which the telecommunications revolution of the 1970s is likely to come into full manifestation, yielding a radically different system of leisure entertainment.

Olympic TV Is Protected

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, which paid $87 million for broadcast rights to the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, has insurance protection should the Games be canceled or if the United States doesn't send a team.

"The only position we can have is that if the United States sends a team, we'll broadcast the Games," said Alan Baker, vice president of corporate information for NBC, responding to threats of a possible boycott of the Summer Games as a result of Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Industry sources say NBC would not get back from the Soviets any of the $80 million it already paid them. The network owes the Soviets three more $5 million installments — two before the July Games and one after. NBC has already paid the International Olympic Committee its $12 million cut — one-third of the broadcast rights.

But NBC has insurance with Lloyds of London in the event the United States doesn't send a team to Moscow or the Games are canceled. The policy calls for NBC to get 85 percent of its money back.

By the end of the decade, the major networks may be well down the path toward becoming news and sports services; made-for-cable movies will proliferate; your favorite sitcom may arrive by mail, courtesy of Series of the Week Club; every conceivable type of television program, including some you may make yourself, will be available nightly on one of 30 to 40 channels at your disposal. The marketplace is just beginning to catch up with the technological advances of the past decade; the faraway notions of TV possibilities are just beginning to show up in living rooms.

Once video disc systems are made compatible, a likelihood by 1985, the devices could become as common as stereo gear. Relatively inexpensive home satellite receivers are on the horizon, making it possible to receive scores of programming services direct from the source.

Already, millions of families are hooked into satellite TV via cable, choosing their entertainment from as many as two dozen different channels. This year, satellite will deliver all-BBC television, all-news television, all-sports and all-religious television.

Ed McMahon, Johnny Carson's sidekick on NBC's "The Tonight Show," has been named "Best Number Two Man of the Decade" and will receive the Millard Fillmore Medal of Merit for his work.

McMahon's "drinking, mediocrity and ability to survive 17 years of Johnny and one year of Johnny's retirement have been inspirations to us all," said Phil Arkow, vice president of the Colorado Society for the Preservation and Enhancement of the Recognition of Millard Fillmore.

McMahon was not expected for Saturday night's tongue-in-cheek birthday salute to the society's hero, Arkow said.

Showtime, one of the nation's two major cable programmers, discovered last year that cable subscribers are willing to pay for more than one service, thus opening dozens of Home Box Office's markets to Showtime, and vice versa. Some of the big money coming in to the two major cable outfits is being spent on made-for-cable variety, drama and comedy productions. Movies are coming soon.

Playboy will launch a television version of the magazine — including nudity — by next year. RCA plans to launch a new TV satellite, Satcom IV, by next Christmas, further broadening the field of TV programmers.

It figures to be an interesting decade for cathode ray tube — even if it doesn't look that way yet.

Avers Public Disbelieves Utilities' Corporation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Duke Power Co. official charged Thursday that North Carolinians don't believe utilities are sincere in their support for a corporation to develop alternative energy sources.

Donald H. Denton Jr., vice president of marketing at Duke, promised to actively support such a corporation even if it meant a reduced demand for electricity.

He defended Duke's proposal to form a non-profit corporation, the North Carolina Electric Energy Management Corp., with an 11-member board of directors.

Duke has suggested the board be composed of one representative from each of the six utilities and five public-interest members.

The Public Staff of the Utilities Commission has recommended the corporation be called the Alternative Energy Corp. and that it have a 13-member board, with the majority of members coming from the public sector.

Both Carolina Power and Light Co. and Virginia Electric and Power Co. have supported Duke's recommendation.

Denton denied allegations Thursday that the state's utilities had self-serving interests at heart in encouraging that the electricity providers maintain majority control of the corporation.

"Do you mean, Mr. Denton, that Duke (Power Co.) could be involved in and support a project promoting alternatives to electricity, a project that might dampen the demand for electricity?" asked G. Clark Crampton, an attorney for the commission's Public Staff.

"Yes," Denton answered, adding that "the whole problem revolves around public concern that the utilities do not have an earnest intent about this corporation."

"It is the official position of Duke Power Co. that the interests of its stockholders ... and customers will be best served by minimizing the need for new generating plants," Denton said.

The commission developed the idea for the corporation in an October ruling on a Duke Power Co. rate case. The commission ordered Duke to set aside $1 million a year from a $28 million rate increase toward the operation of a non-profit corporation to research and develop new energy sources.

On Thursday, attorneys for public groups argued that if utilities are granted majority representation on the board there will be a conflict of interest that could undermine the corporation's purpose.

The attorneys said the utilities might block projects that would cut electrical demand.

Under Duke's proposal, two-thirds of the board members, or eight of the 11, would be required to authorize funding for any project.

The Public Staff has argued that the six utility votes could veto any program.

Thomas S. Ellemann, CP&L vice president for nuclear safety and research, said the utilities deserve to make up the majority of the board.

"When one considers that the utilities are primarily funding the corporation (through rates) and the utilities and this commission will be held responsible for its success...I think you could propose even stronger involvement by the utilities," he said.

Gov. Jim Hunt and spokesmen for environmental and public groups argued Wednesday for public control of the corporation's board.

Electricities of North Carolina, one of two non-regulated electric providers, filed documents Thursday in which it proposed a 15-member corporation, with six members from the utilities, five from the public sector and four from state agencies most involved in electric energy.

N.C. Electric Membership Corp. did not file advance documents with the commission.

Nantahala Power and Light Co. has reserved the right to pull out of the corporation if it finds that its customers are paying a disproportionate share of costs. The company buys a part of its power from the Tennessee Valley Authority which has a similar alternate energy project under way.

Judge Orders Doctors 'Unplug' Life Support System For Infant

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — A county judge has ordered doctors to disconnect life-support equipment from a comatose infant for three minutes to determine if the alleged child-abuse victim is "brain dead."

Judge Ron Rogg of Sedgewick County District Court on Thursday ordered a series of tests for the infant after a hearing on a suit by his stepfather, who is seeking to keep him on the respirator.

Thomas Saad, 25, has been charged with aggravated battery and could be charged with murder if 3-month-old Michael Saad dies.

The infant was listed in critical condition early today.

Rogg said the test results would be presented when the hearing reconvened today.

Physicians from Wesley Medical Center testified Thursday that Michael's brain was dead. Under Kansas law, a patient is legally and medically dead if there is "an absence of spontaneous brain function" for a sufficient amount of time.

Hospital attorney John Gibson argued that Saad was challenging the doctors' decision

"only to better his own defense."

The baby has been on life-support equipment since he arrived at the hospital on Christmas Eve with massive head injuries. His stepfather was arrested and charged three days later, and is being held in the county jail in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Saad filed suit from his jail cell to keep his stepson's life-support equipment operating, and Rogg issued a temporary restraining order upholding the request.

Saad's court-appointed attorney, Steve Robison, told the judge Thursday that Michael is legally still alive, but Gibson said the hospital's tests are conclusive that "the brain of this child is no longer functioning."

Dr. Richard Gilmartin, a Wesley neurologist and head of the hospital's "brain death" team, testified his team performed all but three of the hospital tests for possible brain death.

Gilmartin said the court order last week prevented him from removing the life-support devices for a few minutes and from performing two other tests. He said the three tests were on the team's checklist, but were not necessary to conclude that the boy's brain was dead.

An EEG performed last Friday showed no signs of brain activity and a brain scan showed no blood flow in the brain, he said.

Gilmartin testified that a hospital panel was unanimous in its conclusion that brain death had occurred. He said he did not think the additional tests were necessary, but wouldn't object to them.

Michael's physician, Katherine Pennington, testified that she agreed with the panel's conclusion and saw no need for the additional tests. She also testified that it would be "a disservice to the child to keep him on the respirator at this point."

The boy's mother, Karen, joined her husband in the suit Thursday, saying she hoped to "find out if there are any more tests that can be done."

She and Saad were married last summer.

Klan Is Staging Fund-Raiser

LINCOLNTON N.C. (AP) — The Ku Klux Klan has scheduled fund-raising rallies at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds Saturday and Sunday to help pay for legal expenses of KKK members charged in the shooting deaths of five communists in Greensboro last Nov. 3.

Most of the 14 persons charged in connection with the shootings have acknowledged membership in the Klan or in the Nazi party. Seven of the defendants are from the Lincoln-ton area.

The rallies each day are scheduled for 2 p.m.

Virgil Griffin, grand dragon of the Invisible Empire of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said three crosses will be burned because "cross lightings draw bigger crowds."

Tabloid Fails To Make Grade

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Madison Press Connection, a morning tabloid started during a newspaper strike in 1977, has suspended publication.

The last issue Thursday carried the headline: "Goodbye Madison." The decision to suspend the six-day-a-week newspaper came after it failed to meet a fund-raising target of $65,000. Shareholders are to meet Jan. 13 to decide the fate of the paper.

The newspaper was born in October 1977, published by unions involved in a labor dispute with the Wisconsin State Journal and The Capital Times, and Madison Newspapers Inc.

Road-Widening Work Is Lagging

SALTER PATH, N.C. (AP) — Work on widening Bogue Banks Road from Salter Path to Atlantic Beach is more than six months behind schedule.

Improvements to the road won't be made in time for this year's tourist season, said Billy Rose, state highway administrator.

He said the improvements to N.C. 58 had been delayed because of a lawsuit that sought a separate environmental impact statement for the Salter Path village section of the road.

A separate impact statement was recently approved, and right-of-way acquisition began.

Ask Delay On Using Water

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The state has asked the town of Kernersville to delay its plan to resume using water from a reservoir contaminated in 1977.

Mayor Robert Swisher said the town probably would not use the water until the state can make additional tests to determine its safety for consumption.

The town's aldermen voted last month to reopen the reservoir, closed in June 1977 after a chemical spill from a nearby waste-disposal plant.

HERMAN STRADER wants Coker 48. Again.

"I wish I had all my crop in Coker 48. It's 95% better than another leading variety in not having blue mold. Next year, I will plant all Coker 48."

HERMAN J. STRADER, Jr., Reidsville, N.C.

So does JOE EARL BROGDEN.

"Coker 48 withstood dry weather very good and had almost no blue mold compared with another brand in the same field. It's well suited for machine harvest, and my first primings cured easier than the variety we had last year."

JOE EARL BROGDEN, Wake Forest, N.C.

HESTER VERNON'S Coker 48 averaged nearly $1.45/lb.!

"Our farm is hot with black shank and Granville wilt, but our 35 acres of Coker 48 showed superior resistance. It had only minor blue mold damage, while my neighbor's variety was severely damaged. We averaged approximately $1.45 per pound with 48."

HESTER VERNON, Milton, N.C.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose sharply in early trading today after steep losses earlier in the week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks gained 6.06 to 826.37 in the first half hour of trading.

Gaining issues outnumbered losers by a 3-2 margin in an early tally on the New York Stock Exchange.

Soaring gold prices which had unsettled the market in the past two sessions fell back on profit taking sales in bullion markets today, offering some encouragement to stock traders.

The Dow Jones index fell 14 points on Wednesday and fell by as much as 11 early Thursday before recovering part of that later in the day.

Among actively traded issues in the early going today, Texaco gained 1/4 to 28; IBM lost 1/4 to 63 3/4; Engelhard Minerals, fell 1/4 to 31 1/4 and Occidental Petroleum rose 3/4 to 26 1/4.

On Thursday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials closed with a loss of 4.26 points at 820.31.

Losers outnumbered gainers by a margin of almost 3-to-1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 50.48 million shares, against 40.61 million in the previous session. It was the biggest volume since Oct. 10 when a record 81.62 million shares were traded.

The NYSE's composite index fell .35 to 60.34. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.75 to 239.66.

ECU Names 2 Coaches; Kupec Hired At State

A former East Carolina football player and a former All-ACC defensive lineman were named Friday to ECU coach Ed Emory's staff.

Jim Grudger, who played for the Pirates in the late 1960s, was named as the offensive line coach while Rod Broadway, a 1977 All-ACC performer for North Carolina, was appointed as a part-time coach. Broadway will coach the defensive line.

With the namings Friday, ECU's staff now has six full-time coaches, one part-time and one graduate assistant.

Meanwhile, former ECU assistant coach Dick Kupec was named offensive coordinator at N.C. State.

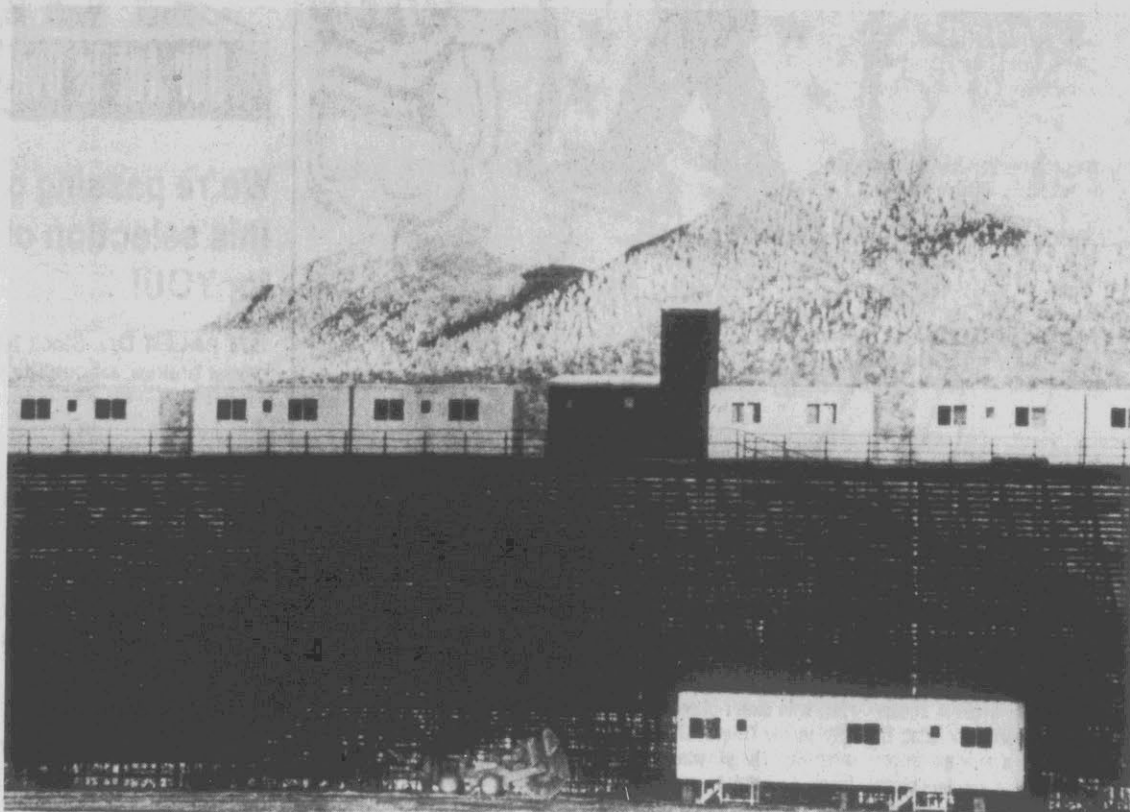

On Thursday, Emory named two other coaches to his staff, Wright Anderson and Henry Trevathan. Anderson, ECU's backfield coach from 1974 to 1976, will serve as the offensive coordinator. Trevathan, 51, a coach at ECU since 1970, will continue to coach the wide receivers.

Anderson, 32, previously was offensive coordinator at Illinois between 1977-1978 and has coached also at Wake Forest and Wichita State. He is a native of Burgaw and received his undergraduate degree in physical education from Elon in 1968.

Gudger, a native of Cullowhee, N.C., is coming from Lenoir-Rhyne, where he coached the offensive line. He has also coached at Delta State, Gardner Webb and Eastern Illinois.

Broadway, 24, is a native of Oakboro, N.C. He is a 1978 graduate of UNC, majoring in Recreational Administration.

Emory had previously appointed Bob Sanders, Jim Holland and Frank Orgel as assistant coaches and Ron West as a graduate assistant.

NC's Cobey Quits As AD

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — William Cobey, the University of North Carolina athletic director, surprised both politicians and athletes Thursday when he resigned to run as a Republican candidate for lieutenant governor.

Cobey, 40, said he had wanted to run in the Second Congressional District but he was discouraged by political figures he declined to name.

He is the first Republican to challenge the Democratic candidates — House Speaker Carl Stewart of Gastonia and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

In a letter to UNC Chancellor N. Ferebee Taylor, Cobey asked the resignation be effective April 30. He said, "Until my resignation is effective, I will keep my normal business hours, give first priority to my responsibilities as director of athletics and devote all the time necessary to discharge those responsibilities."

But after April 30, Cobey said, "I'll have to get fairly active...."

There has not been a Republican lieutenant governor in modern times.

Cobey has never sought political office.

Chancellor Taylor was expected to name a search committee today to find a replacement for Cobey. Likely candidates for the job include associate athletic director Moyer Smith, assistant athletic director John Swofford and UNC-Charlotte athletic director Clyde Walker, a past candidate for the job.

"I've enjoyed being in athletics all my life," Cobey said. "My father was an athletic director and I've always been involved in some way. But as time goes by, you want to do other things."

Cobey worked at North Carolina as academic counselor for the football team 1968 and assistant athletic director until he succeeded Homer Rice as athletic director in 1976.

While working for the Tar Heels, Cobey expanded the women's sports program, established a successful promotional program and developed a physical fitness program. Three times during his stay as athletic director, Carolina won the Carmichael Cup, the Atlantic Coast Conference award for overall excellence in athletics.

Cobey said he sees his most significant contribution to the school as management. "The total program is on solid footing and in good financial shape," he said.

Both Carolina basketball coach Dean Smith and football coach Dick Crum say they don't want the job.

"I think everyone was kind of surprised (by the resignation)," Crum said. "But Bill is the kind of person who is always looking for a new challenge. I think he had something in mind that was more challenging to him."

Chancellor Taylor also praised Cobey saying he "has served the university well in maintaining the great tradition of Carolina athletics."

ECU Women Win Ninth, Whip Marshall, 63-59

HUNTINGTON, W. VA. — After leading by as many as 13 in the first half the Pirates of East Carolina fought off a Marshall second-half rally to claim 63-59 victory.

ECU led 37-25 at intermission, but the tough Marshall defense and repeated turnovers by the Lady Bucs allowed the Green Gals to cut the margin to 60-57 with 1:16 remaining in the contest on three free throws by Deborah Solomon.

ECU freshman Mary Denker was called for a three-second violation with 47 seconds to go, but teammate Laurie Sikes recovered for the Pirates and converted on a three-point play with 32 seconds remaining.

Marshall forward Becky Williams hit on her only field goal of the evening with 23 seconds left to establish the final margin.

Sikes, who had a game-high 10 assists, missed on two free throw attempts in the final 16 seconds, but time ran out on the charging Green Gals of Marshall.

ECU Senior Rosie Thompson led all scorers with 25 points, while Denker added 13 and 12 rebounds.

Marshall center Sandra Fullen led the Green Gals with 17 points and 12 rebounds.

"This is the worst win we have to date," said ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi. "We weren't able to run the ball as well as we wanted to."

"Offensively, we weren't getting the easy shots off. I think we were a little tense."

"The conditions could have been better as well — the floor was really slippery."

East Carolina now stands at 9-3 on the season, while Marshall slips to 8-3.

Forwards Lead Terps To Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Maryland's forwards outclassed the Georgia Tech defense and taught the Yellow Jackets another lesson about basketball in the Atlantic Coast Conference Thursday night.

Ernest Graham and Albert King combined for 41 points as the Terps beat Tech 83-74 to keep their record in the ACC and against Tech 2-0. They beat the Yellow Jackets 70-60 in College Park.

"We couldn't stop their inside game," said Tech Coach Duane Morrison. "Their front line hurt us."

Graham got 23 points, King 18 and guard Greg Manning added 17 points for Maryland.

Tech "looked better, and we looked better than two weeks ago," said Maryland Coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell.

"Buck Williams got into foul trouble — that hurt us. Our defense has been great. That's why we're 9-1. Everybody knows what his job is and does it."

Williams, who was starting only his second game after missing the first seven with a broken ring finger, got three fouls early and Taylor Baldwin played much of the first half. Williams still hauled down seven rebounds, tying Graham for team honors.

Georgia Tech is 3-6 overall but winless in four ACC starts this year, which is the Yellow Jackets' first in the conference.

The Yellow Jackets, playing their methodical passing game, stayed close, or ahead of the Terps until 3:30 to go in first half when Maryland started pulling away. The Terps lead 42-33 at the half.

Finley's Selling Of A's Near?

OAKLAND (AP) — After years of trying, Charles O. Finley may at last be on the verge of successful sale of his riches-to-rags Oakland A's.

The sale of the American League baseball team for around $10 million to Denver oilman Marvin Davis moved a step closer to completion Thursday with the announcement of a $4-million offer to buy out the A's stadium lease. The lease has proved a major obstacle to sale talks in the past.

Under the arrangement, Finley, Davis, the National League San Francisco Giants and the American League would put up $1 million each to spring the A's from their Oakland Coliseum lease, which still has eight years to run.

Davis, for two years a central figure in negotiations with Finley, would move the team to Denver, contingent upon league approval.

Jack Maltester, president-elect of the Coliseum, said he would recommend acceptance of the buyout offer if legal problems did not exist. But in a meeting on Thursday, the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Inc. board of directors took no vote on whether to accept the offer, and Coliseum General Manager Bill Cunningham said, "No one should presuppose the board is leaning one way or another."

"There are a number of unresolved procedural and legal questions" regarding the offer, said Cunningham. One problem could be a multi-million dollar Coliseum lawsuit against Finley alleging he has not fulfilled contractual promises to promote the team.

Cunningham said there will be talks with city and county officials, as well as with attorneys, before the board meets again Wednesday.

According to Cunningham, the $4 million would be more than the Coliseum would make off the A's in eight years at the present rate. Last year the Coliseum made about $150,000 from the team, he said.

Maltester's predecessor, Robert Nanas, had been adamant in the past about refusing such a buyout, and that position had sabotaged several attempts by Finley to move the team.

After bringing the club West from Kansas City in 1968, Finley built the A's into a team which won three consecutive World Series, with players like Reggie Jackson, Catfish Hunter and Rollie Fingers. But in recent seasons most of the players on those teams were sold, traded or left as free agents, and the A's plummeted to last place.

Attendance fell too, and last season they drew just 306,000 fans at home. Last April, the A's drew 653 fans for a game against Seattle.

If the Coliseum approves the buyout and the American League ratifies the move, Denver would become the fourth home of the team established in Philadelphia by Connie Mack in 1901. If the A's leave, the Giants would again become the Bay Area's only major league baseball team.

According to Robert O. Fisher, an aide to American League President Lee MacPhail, the league has delayed the printing of its 1980 schedule, which is due to be announced officially Jan. 27. He said, however, that the A's home dates would be the same in either Oakland or Denver.

Oilers Struck By Pittsburgh Paranoia

By The Associated Press
Facing the Steelers in Pittsburgh is a little like going off to war, so it isn't surprising that the Houston Oilers may be suffering from some preinvasion jitters.

The Oilers and their coach, Bum Phillips, are normally an easy-going group, but two incidents Thursday indicated that they may be coming down with a case of "Pittsburgh Paranoia," a very common ailment in the National Football League. The Steelers, who destroyed Houston 34-5 in last year's American Football Conference Championship game, meet the Oilers Sunday in Pittsburgh for the AFC title.

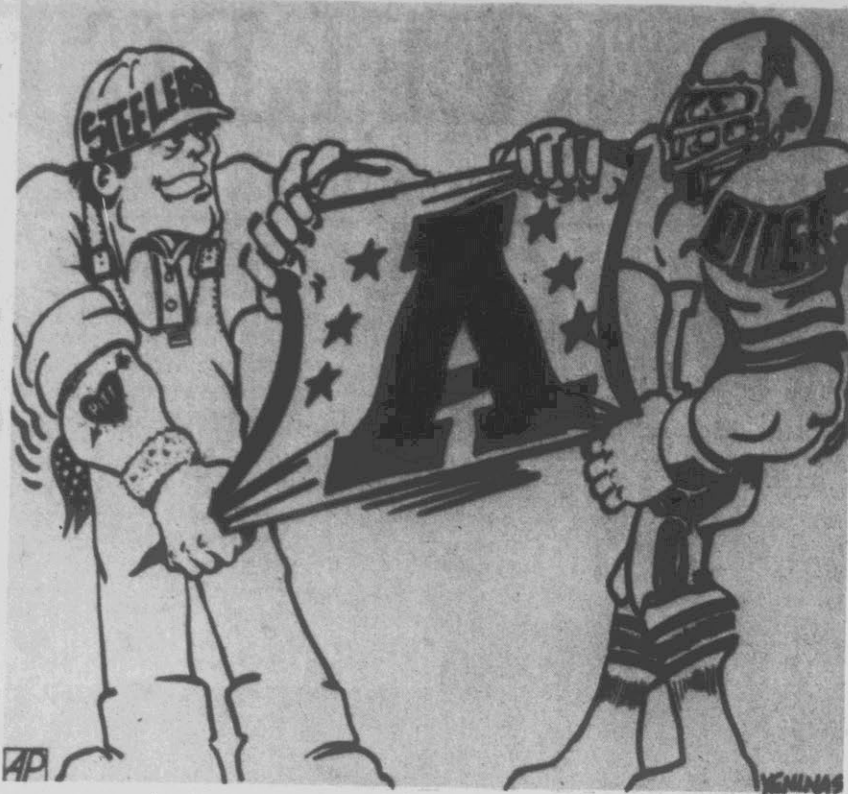

Quarterback Dan Pastorini, recovering from a groin injury that sidelined him last week, shoved a writer through a door and had to be restrained by Phillips. No punches were exchanged but the writer's jacket was torn as the two fell through the door.

—In a rare move, Phillips closed the team's workout from the press. Several Pittsburgh newsmen had been escorted from the Oilers dressing room following Wednesday's practice.

Neither Pastorini nor Dale Robertson, who covers the Oilers for the Houston Post, were injured in the scuffle that the writer said had been simmering for some time. Pastorini has not talked to Robertson for much of the season because the quarterback was annoyed at several stories that had appeared in the Post, Robertson said.

Robertson had quoted Pastorini in Thursday's paper after listening to a local broadcaster's taped comments from the quarterback.

"He told me not to quote him in the paper unless I talked to him," said Robertson. "I told him I couldn't do that if he didn't talk to me. I told him I had a job to do and was trying to do it the best way I could."

Pastorini refused to comment on the fracas.

Phillips put the Oilers through their paces in secret at Rice Stadium. He apparently was seeking to avoid a recurrence of last week's incident, in which film of a sideline interview picked up a special Oilers blocking scheme and was aired on a San Diego sportscast the night before the game.

Apparently what newsmen couldn't see at the practice was good news for the Oilers. Pastorini, who didn't play last Saturday in the Oilers' 17-14 victory over San Diego, was upgraded from doubtful to questionable, which means he has a 50-50 chance of playing.

Before the scuffle with Robertson, Pastorini said, "There are certain things I have to be able to do, but I'm going to make sure I get as much rest as I can. I'd say it's certain I'll be a starter."

Cool Freshmen Lead Buckeyes Past Indiana

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When they want to put it on ice, the Ohio State Buckeyes have the coolest of freshmen to do it.

"I was confident both would fall," said Clark Kellogg after his two free throws with seven seconds left gave the No. 5 Buckeyes a 59-58 college basketball victory over No. 11 Indiana Thursday night. "You didn't see me move from the line, did you? The first just had suspense to it. I just watched that baby drop through the hoop."

His first attempt on a one-and-one bonus situation hit the rim, bounced upward and dropped through the net, tying the score at 58. Kellogg then put his second free throw cleanly.

The 6-foot-8 forward had been fouled on a rebound by Indiana's Glen Grunwald under the Ohio State basket. "He slid in under me," said Kellogg. "That call usually goes the other way. Thank God, it didn't this time."

Just before the buzzer, Grunwald had a chance to be a Hoosier hero. But his 25-foot jumper hit the rim, preserving the Buckeyes' eighth victory in nine games this season.

"We had as good a shot with as good a shooter as we could hope for," said Indiana Coach Bobby Knight. "We wanted to call time out after the free throw, but we didn't get it done."

The game was one of several key Big Ten openers. In others, No. 8 Purdue edged Michigan State 74-73 and No. 10 Iowa nipped No. 20 Illinois 72-71.

Elsewhere, No. 15 Louisville beat Tulsa 78-58; No. 14 Oregon State stopped No. 16 UCLA 76-67; Drake upset No. 18 Georgetown 79-77 in double overtime and No. 19 Brigham Young defeated New Mexico 75-63.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 25 points to lead Purdue over Michigan State. The Spartans had the ball with 27 seconds left, but a last-second shot by Terry Donnelly fell short.

In another close one, Kevin Boyle scored 21 points, including two free throws with 30 seconds left in Iowa's conquest of Illinois.

Ray Blume and Jeff Stoutt ignited a second-half rally to pace Oregon State over UCLA in a big Pacific-10 Conference game. It was Oregon State's first victory over the Bruins in 11 tries.

The Cavaliers led by as many as 13 points in the first half before the Sixers came back behind Julius Erving, who scored 20 of his game-high 35 points after intermission.

Bucks 106, Pacers 96
Dave Meyers scored a season-high 26 points and Junior Bridgman added 23, all but two in the last 18 minutes, as the Bucks broke a three-game losing streak and dealt Indiana its fourth straight loss.

Knicks Clobber Clippers

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"We were awful, just awful," said Gene Shue, coach of the San Diego Clippers. Then he broke into a laugh.

The Clippers had just been clobbered by the New York Knicks 138-101 Thursday night in a game that was decided in the very first quarter. The Knicks broke in front 16-3, built the lead to 30 points after one period and never let the Clippers back into contention.

So why was Shue laughing? "I can laugh because I know it's just one game," he said. "We'll come back tomorrow and play the way we can — I've got to believe that. Tonight? It was just one of those nights when nothing goes right. It was a bad game ... obviously."

The Clippers shot 5-for-26 — a

192 percentage — in the first quarter, when the Knicks ran off streaks of 12, 12 and 10 consecutive points to bust the game wide open at 42-12. New York led by 34 points in the second quarter and by at least 20 throughout the second half, with the gap reaching 40 points in the final minute.

"We put them in a position where they just gave up," said guard Ray Williams, who led nine Knicks scoring in double figures with 23 points. "I sensed at times they didn't want to play."

In other National Basketball Association games Thursday night, the New Jersey Nets upset the Atlanta Hawks 126-119, the Philadelphia 76ers trimmed the Cleveland Cavaliers 109-108 and the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Indiana Pacers 106-96.

Nets 126, Hawks 119
Mike Newlin scored 10 of his 24 points in the final period as the Nets broke Atlanta's seven-game home winning streak.

Three baskets by Atlanta's Charlie Criss cut the deficit to three points at 122-119 before Newlin sealed the verdict with a 15-foot jumper over the Hawks' Eddie Johnson with 15 seconds to play.

76ers 109, Cavs 108
Maurice Cheeks' basket and two free throws in the final 33 seconds rallied the 76ers to their fifth victory in the last six starts.

The Cavaliers led by as many as 13 points in the first half before the Sixers came back behind Julius Erving, who scored 20 of his game-high 35 points after intermission.

Bucks 106, Pacers 96
Dave Meyers scored a season-high 26 points and Junior Bridgman added 23, all but two in the last 18 minutes, as the Bucks broke a three-game losing streak and dealt Indiana its fourth straight loss.

Nets 126, Hawks 119
Mike Newlin scored 10 of his 24 points in the final period as the Nets broke Atlanta's seven-game home winning streak.

Three baskets by Atlanta's Charlie Criss cut the deficit to three points at 122-119 before Newlin sealed the verdict with a 15-foot jumper over the Hawks' Eddie Johnson with 15 seconds to play.

76ers 109, Cavs 108
Maurice Cheeks' basket and two free throws in the final 33 seconds rallied the 76ers to their fifth victory in the last six starts.

District Assembly Meets Wednesday

PANTEGO — The Albemarle District Assembly of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) will convene at Pantego Christian Church on Wednesday.

Rev. James Trader is host minister. Registration begins at 10:15 a.m. and closing time is 2 o'clock. President Marshall Parvin and Vice President Lee Reynolds will preside at the sessions.

'Birthday' For Mission

St. Timothy's Episcopal Church celebrates its second birthday today as a mission congregation of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Greenville.

This milestone will be marked by a special celebration on the Feast of Epiphany, the day the church remembers the coming of the wise men to pay homage to the baby Jesus. At 10 a. m. a special celebration of the Holy Eucharist will be observed at the Seventh Day Adventist Church on E. Tenth Street. The celebrant and preacher will be the Rev. John Randolph Price, vicar.

A birthday party will be held at 3 p. m. in the home of Mrs. Charles White Sr.

During 1979 St. Timothy's acquired nearly six acres of land as a building site on the front of Cherry Oaks Subdivision. The congregation hopes to begin a building program in late 1980, Rev. Price said.

Services Will Honor Musician

An appreciation service and dinner will be held at Rock Spring FWB Church Sunday at 6 p.m. to honor Mrs. Mamie Gardner, musician.

This program is being sponsored by the senior choir, and the pastor, Bishop W. L. Phillips, invites the public to attend.

'Late Vocations' An Increasing Occurrence In U.S. And Canada

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — After years in other careers, people sometimes switch to the full-time Christian ministry. "Late vocations," they're called.

And they've become an increasing occurrence in the United States and Canada. It means starting over, taking the theology and other courses to qualify, and often enduring financial setbacks to do it.

But the call is heeded anyhow.

Two cases are Gladys Spurlil and Don Campbell. Both live in Winnipeg, both are over 50 and both are studying to be priests in the Anglican Church of Canada.

Mrs. Spurlil, a divorced mother of six children, says she would have become a priest when a teen-ager if she had been born male.

She was stopped because the Anglican Church of Canada did not accept women into the priesthood until 1975, a practice also adopted the following year in a sister communion, the Episcopal Church in the U.S.

Most major Protestant denominations earlier had begun accepting women clergy.

Campbell is a former business and accounting instructor at Red River Community College with a wife and three children who says the desire to become a priest "grew over a number of years."

Despite their varying reasons for entering the priesthood, both Campbell and Mrs. Spurlil reflect a growing trend.

The Anglican and United Church of Canada (a merger of Protestant bodies) are noticing an increase in the number of people who decide to enter the ministry late in life, often after a successful secular career.

A parallel trend has been noted in the United States.

Deacon Will Be Honored

The Philippi Church of Christ invites the public to celebrate Deacon L.B. Blount's Day Sunday at 3 p.m. He will be honored for his services to the church for 53 years. Eldress Lucy Jones will be the speaker for the occasion.

Along with Mrs. Lillie Jenkins and Mrs. Gibbs, he started Sunday School and was helpful in bringing two preachers to the church.

He is married to Mrs. Rebecca Blount and has two daughters, Mrs. Ruth Gordon of Newark, N.J. and Mrs. Peggy Rose Stator of Greenville.

Being active in the church, Deacon Blount served on the Trustee Board for many years, supervised weekly prayers services, was Chairman of the Deacon Board and has been an ordained deacon for 25 years. He also is the assistant superintendent of Sunday School and the founder and president of the Progressive Club, which he organized 25 years ago. He was born in Greene County and moved to Pitt County when he was 11. He became a member of Philippi Church of Christ in 1927.

Jewish Leader Invited Speak

NEW YORK (AP) — In the face of recent friction between blacks and Jews, a prominent Jewish leader has been invited to deliver the keynote address at an ecumenical service commemorating the life of the late black civil rights leader, the Rev. Martin Luther King.

His widow, Mrs. Coretta Scott King, invited Rabbi Marc H. Tannenbaum, director of inter-religious affairs of the American Jewish Committee, to be main speaker at the observance Jan. 15 at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

Tannenbaum, accepting the invitation, called it a "major gesture of friendship and reconciliation between responsible leaders of the black and Jewish communities."

Change Ass'n Meeting Place

The Greenville Ministerial Association is changing its meeting place from Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church to Hooker Memorial Christian Church for this year.

The group will meet the first Monday of each month, with coffee at 9:45 a. m., the program at 10 a. m. and the business meeting immediately following the program, according to its new president, Stewart LaNeave, Presbyterian campus minister of East Carolina University.

SATURDAY SINGING

BETHEL — A singing will be held at the Bethel Church of God on Saturday night.

Appearing will be Randy Warren and the Canaanland Express. The public is invited.

MEETING MONDAY

The City Usher's Union will hold its meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Philippi Church of Christ. All members are asked to be present and bring their gifts for the Christmas gathering.

Here's a photograph taken from a kayak. You don't bring a ship this close to an iceberg! For underwater the tentacles of this cruel, cold monster may reach out a mile or more.

Life for some folks is a succession of narrow escapes. But these are adventures we can do without. They don't prove us bold sailors. They simply prove us poor navigators.

Frightened men sometimes turn to religion as a refuge when dangers — moral, spiritual and physical — loom too close for comfort. God does not fail in crisis.

But the every-day function of faith is to pilot men on a true course through the sea of life. The Church cannot sweep away icebergs. It warns us of their whereabouts and helps us give them a wide berth.

OCEAN-BOUND WORKHORSE — As waves from the Atlantic Ocean gently bound rocks near shore at Fort Macon, near Atlantic Beach, a lone "working" ship can be seen heading out to sea.

Perhaps the crew of this ship will long for the safe confines of this harbor as a coastal storm develops off shore today. (AP Laser-photo)

Seeking Views On Surveillance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt mailed letters Thursday to each North Carolina sheriff, police chief and district attorney to seek response on his proposal to infiltrate violence-prone extremist groups.

Hunt also brushed aside criticism of his comments made last month on infiltrating the groups to gather intelligence on potential criminal acts. He said he stands by his proposal because adequate safeguards can be found to prevent the violation of civil liberties.

In his letter, Hunt said "I propose infiltration of groups that have a history of violence and that threaten violence. And we must provide strong, verifiable safeguards against violating their civil liberties."

"Under our Constitution, we tolerate their right to exist. We do not tolerate criminal violence, and we must protect the lives and property of our peaceful, law-abiding citizens against it," he wrote.

Hunt said the proposal was in response to the Nov. 3 shootings at an anti-Ku Klux Klan rally in Greensboro. Five members of the Communist Workers Party were killed at the rally.

Fruehauf Fine Allowed Stand

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — An administrative law judge has let stand a $1,000 fine against Fruehauf Corp. that resulted from a March explosion in which one employee was killed.

The Greensboro-based truck-trailer firm had contested four of the violations. One of the citations made against the firm last April concerned Occupational Safety and Health Act violations.

Alexander B. Denson, an administrative law judge associated with the state Safety and Health Review Board, ordered the company in a Dec. 31 decision to pay the fine and stop violations contested.

The explosion in a tanker that had been used to haul formaldehyde killed Wilbur Durham, a Fruehauf mechanic, and injured another company employee.

Jack Ford Eyes Political Role

ENCINITAS, Calif. (AP) — The way Jack Ford sees it: "A banker's son knows how to bank and a farmer's son knows how to farm." Therefore, the son of former President Gerald Ford says he may run for Congress.

"Maybe a politician's son has some instinctive knowledge of politics as well," he said Wednesday.

The 27-year-old Ford, co-publisher of the weekly Del Mar News and a resident of Encinitas, says he may run for a congressional seat created due to reapportionment in San Diego County in 1982.

Fourteen persons, some claiming to be Nazis and Klansmen, are charged in connection with the deaths.

Meanwhile, former Gov. Bob Scott, who was a vocal critic of Hunt's proposal, admitted he received information on dissident groups from the State Bureau of Investigation when he was governor from 1969 to 1973.

"What they (the SBI agents) were doing, how they were getting the information, how valid the information was, I have no way of knowing," Scott said. "One of them would tell me there was going to be a parade on Hillsborough Street or a march to the Capitol or the (governor's) mansion."

"I think it was just a matter of them sharing information with us when they knew there were going to be demonstrations or marches," Scott added. Hunt said he has not discussed his proposal with state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten but he said he believes Edmisten will not seriously disagree with him. The attorney general has control over the SBI.

Edmisten has refused public comment on the proposal.

Hunt said he will elaborate on possible safeguards to the proposal when he receives responses to his letters. He also said he has not considered whether infiltration should include wiretaps or covert activity to influence groups being investigated.

'Aglow' Group Meets Jan. 12

WILLIAMSTON — The Women's Aglow Fellowship will hold its monthly meeting Saturday, Jan. 12 at 8:45 a.m. at Town & Country Restaurant, Highway 17, Williamston.

Breakfast will be $2.40, and reservations may be made by calling one of the following: Jo Ann McKnight, 792-5032; Lib Butler, Washington 946-2007 or Carolyn Alexander, Plymouth 793-4576.

The featured speaker will be Annette Marie Norman, the daughter of a Southern Baptist minister. Her husband is in the U.S. Navy and she is the mother of two children.

Mrs. Norman taught English for three years in public schools in Palm Beach County, Florida. She has been a newspaper reporter for the Palm Beach Post, a real estate associate and owner, and an operator of a clothing boutique.

Decides Return 3 Iranian Rugs

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A six-week trial notwithstanding, Gov. Hugh Carey has decided to send back three oriental rugs purchased by the state for the governor's mansion because they came from Iran.

A spokesman for Carey said Thursday that the governor had rejected the rugs after trying them out "on the basis of their origin and cost." Instead, Morello said Carey decided "ordinary wall-to-wall carpeting" was good enough for the mansion's breakfast nook and reception hall.

Speaking of Your Health... Helping the 'Coronary Cripple' Recover

My husband had a severe heart attack two years ago. Fortunately, he recovered. Both my children and I hardly recognize him as the same person he once was. From an active, forceful person, he now seems to have given up, even though he is only 56 years old. — Mrs. R.E., Wis.

Dear Mrs. E.: It seems that not a week goes by but that I receive letters like yours, asking for advice about husbands who have recovered from a heart attack, yet continue to function as a "coronary cripple."

A heart attack can be a shattering experience. In a single instant, there is an explosive upheaval that alters the life pattern of the victim and those who surround him. The person who has recovered from a heart attack may have been granted a special blessing. Another opportunity was given to readjust the structure of one's life and to prolong it.

The tireless businessman who could not find a spare moment to relax, suddenly finds himself hospitalized and rigidly restricted during his acute attack. Strict bedrest, no smoking, attention to caloric intake, all add to the frustration.

It is not easy to regain emotional balance after such a traumatic experience. It takes the diligent, unceasing efforts of the doctors and the families of cardiac patients to help re-establish the sense of security they formerly had. Time, patience and emotional support are necessary to convince your husband that he need not live as a coronary invalid. With proper guidance by his doctors, he will learn that he can resume a productive, active life within reasonable limits.

"Once a coronary, always a coronary" is a total misconception.

Does thin blood mean that a person is anemic? — Miss W.L., W. Va.

Dear Miss L.: I don't know what "thin blood" is. I can guess that the thin blood myth was created as a catch phrase to attract the attention of the gullible, without any scientific basis.

Thin blood is not synonymous with anemia. There is only one way that anemia can be determined. A blood sample placed on a slide and examined under a microscope can determine the size, shape, and color of the red blood cells. In addition, hemoglobin and hematocrit studies can pinpoint the presence of anemia if, indeed, it does exist.

The "tired" blood myth, too, serves only to exploit the vulnerable public and extracts from them millions of dollars that might be put to better use in maintaining good health.

Want Refugees To Tell Stories

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Military prosecutors, hoping to fill some gaps in the history of Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood, want Vietnamese refugees to testify at a hearing which will determine whether Garwood should be court-martialed.

Garwood spent nearly 14 years in Vietnam, returning to the United States last March to face allegations of desertion and collaboration with the enemy. A pretrial hearing for Garwood resumes at Camp Lejeune next Tuesday, and camp spokesman Capt. George Conroy said Thursday that Marine Corps prosecutors planned to call one or more Vietnamese refugees as witnesses against Garwood.

Conroy said prosecutor Maj. R.J. Marien would not elaborate on how many refugees might be called or when they might testify.

"(Marien) wouldn't elaborate because he can't force any person or people to come. At any time, they could decide not to come," Conroy said.

Neither prosecutors nor defense attorneys have the power to subpoena civilians to testify at the hearing.

Before the hearing recessed for the holidays, former American prisoners of war testified that they saw Garwood carry guns and guarding other Americans.

They also testified that Garwood claimed he held the rank of lieutenant in the North Vietnamese army.

Garwood's defense attorneys contend that anything Garwood did was done for survival.

When the hearing ends, presiding officer Maj. T.B. Hamilton Jr. will recommend whether Garwood should be court-martialed on any or all of the charges against him.

Reminds Value Of Development

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Economic development should be one of North Carolina's top priorities, Gov. Jim Hunt told many of the state's small-business leaders Thursday.

He said more than 100,000 small businesses in the state employ nearly half the workforce and the jobs they provide are one of the state's top needs.

"It is the best way to improve the opportunities and quality of life for people all over our state," he told the state's delegation to an upcoming White House Conference on Small Businesses.

Mary E. Diener of Cary told the group that roughly four of every five small businesses fail during their first year. She said the failures are caused by overregulation and overtaxation.

Mrs. Diener operates a consulting firm in the Research Triangle Park.

Only A Dozen Passive Solar House Is Warmed By 'Envelope'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite all the hullabaloo about a government crackdown on Iranian students who are in this country illegally, only a dozen have been deported so far.

About 9,000 failed even to respond to orders to report to immigration officers for a check on their student status, a spokesman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service said. They are being sought nationwide.

The visa check did isolate 6,784 Iranians whose papers are not in order and are therefore considered deportable, the spokesman, Vern Jervis, said Thursday. For those Iranians, the next step is a deportation hearing. Five thousand notices for such hearings already have been sent, he said.

By the Dec. 31 deadline, INS officers interviewed 56,580 students in the special check President Carter ordered in November after the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran by Iranian militants.

By KEN FRANKLING
MIDDLETOWN, R.I. (UPI) — Robert and Elizabeth Mastin found the very best way to avoid paying the high cost of heating fuel is simply to not use any.

Even as the New England weather turns blustery and bone-chilling, they live in spring-like comfort — with no furnace, no baseboards, and no woodburning stove.

In front, their new Cape Cod-style home looks like any conventional house. But from the back, a three-level bank of Thermopane windows faces south to collect the sun's rays. That's the first hint that something is different.

Last winter, Mastin built the house, using San Francisco architect Lee Porter Butler's design principle that relies on conserving natural energy.

The so-called Ekose'a house uses the sun, gravity, and evaporation in a thermodynamic process that warms in the winter and cools in the summer.

The key to the system is an air "envelope" surrounding the interior living space. It operates much in the way a thermos bottle does.

The southern side of the house has a two-story solarium or greenhouse which draws the sun's rays. Air warmed by the sun rises to the attic. The air then travels down a one-foot-wide double wall on the cooler north side.

Drawn along by a natural current, it is then pulled through a crawl space beneath the house and leaves some of its heat in an insulated earth mass storage area, before rising again through the solarium.

The process reverses at night or on cloudy days, using heat from the earth mass to keep the solarium warm. In the summer months, cooler air is drawn in through an underground tube as excess heat escapes from attic vents.

"Gravity pulls it all together," Mastin says. "It creates an artificial spring or fall environment. It's warm in the daytime and mild at night."

The former Navy officer admits he was a skeptic when construction began, but a convert before he moved in last March.

In February, when the house wasn't quite finished, Mastin says the interior temperature remained at 57 degrees even when it dropped to 10 below outside. This winter he expects the interior temperature to remain at least at 68 degrees.

The massive solarium, warm even on the chilliest winter days when the sun shines, is the most popular room in the house because of its bright, open atmosphere and view down a gently rolling field to the Atlantic Ocean a mile away.

While Mastin's house has two fireplaces, he says both are primarily for decorative use and don't affect the energy equilibrium.

There is nothing new in the individual principles involved in the energy system, but Mastin credits Butler with "their total integration into an effective and workable design."

The cost of the house — about $80,000 — is the same as for any new, custom-built conventional structure of the same size, Mastin says.

The $3,000 to $4,000 savings by skipping a regular heating system more than makes up for the extra cost of windows and insulation.

Butler's Ekose'a Homes group guarantees that the house will work if plans are followed — and guarantees installation of a free heating system if it doesn't.

But, because the house relies on passive solar energy rather than an active solar system of collectors and heaters, the design isn't eligible for energy conservation tax credits now offered by the U.S. government. "Passive solar seems to be out in the cold as far as tax credits go," Mastin said.

Information on the envelope house system is available from Ekose'a Homes, 573 Mission St., San Francisco, Calif. 94105.

Albemarle Gets HUD Warning

ALBERMARLE, N.C. (AP) — The town of Albemarle must improve housing and employment opportunities for minorities and women or face possible loss of federal grants, according to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

HUD official Ledford Austin urged the town to step up recruitment of minorities and women in professional positions and to remove racial barriers that hamper housing opportunities for minorities.

"There is no evidence that such steps have been taken even though the city received grants in 1976 and 1978," Austin wrote town officials in November.

And Thursday he said, "They haven't taken any positive steps to break down any racial barriers as far as housing is concerned."

Albemarle, which has received $1.3 million in federal community development grants since 1976, is seeking an additional $3 million from HUD for community development projects during the next three years.

But, said Austin, municipalities participating in the grant program must be able to show improvements in housing and employment opportunities for minorities.

Austin said HUD was not "rattling any threats at this point." But, he added, the department could cut funding to the town unless the deficiencies are corrected.

Town officials have denied HUD's charges. City manager Jack Neel said the town was actively seeking minorities for jobs. In addition, he said, there were no barriers to prohibit blacks from moving out of black neighborhoods.

"We have an affirmative action program which we feel is very active ...," Neel said Thursday.

Confirms That Hunt Pays Less

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt will pay $125 an hour to use the state airplane during his re-election campaign — a lower rate than what is charged by most commercial charters for use of the same type of plane, according to state officials.

And a 1978 report by the state auditor says the prevailing rate for the state's twin-engine, six-passenger Beechcraft King Air aircraft is outdated and unrealistic.

According to the report by State Auditor Henry L. Bridges, the $125 hourly rate for the state plane is "not based on any supporting cost information and does not cover the actual cost incurred."

Leo Tilley, fiscal management director for the Commerce Department, called the $125 rate outdated in light of increased aviation fuel and oil costs in the past 12 months.

Hunt's use of a state plane for a flight last month from Raleigh to Asheville for a political event cost his campaign committee about 66 cents per mile, according to data from the state Commerce Department and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Commerce officials said that "Friends of Jim Hunt," the governor's campaign committee, was billed $125 for the 189-mile round-trip flight, or about 66 cents per mile.

Salaries of the pilot and co-pilot were paid from the commerce department budget, along with their trip expenses, officials said.

Private aircraft operators said they would charge two to three times the state rate for use of a Beechcraft King Air.

A spokesman for Atlantic Aero at the Greensboro-High Point-Winston-Salem Airport said the company charged $1.65 per mile for King-Air charters, plus 8 percent federal transportation tax and a fee for pilot waiting time.

Mid-Atlantic Airways East at the Greensboro airport said it charged $1.25 per mile, plus tax and $10 per hour in waiting fees.

Judge Acquits Plane Hijacker

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — A man who admitted hijacking a flight from Denver to Omaha last July has been acquitted of federal charges by a judge who said he doubted the defendant's sanity at the time.

U.S. District Judge Albert Schatz on Thursday declared Ronald Allan Rimerman innocent by reason of insanity on charges of air piracy and interference with a flight crew in the incident aboard a United Airlines flight on July 20. He ordered the case referred to the Douglas County Mental Health Board for further proceedings.

Rimerman allegedly hijacked the aircraft with 125 passengers aboard after telling the crew he had a bomb and wanted to go
